British and Foreign School Society.

Saturday the Anniversary Meeting of this Society was held in the large room at the Freemason's Tavern, which was completely filled, principally by elegantly dressed females, many of whom were present. Many noblemen of rank, and persons of eminent distinction thronged the platform and gallery.—The Report of the Committee contained by stating the loss which the cause of education had lately sustained by the decease of many members of the Royal Family; and more particularly by the death of the Duke of Kent—It stated the progress which the National Schools were making in the country & the astonishing advantage notwithstanding the number of schools which had been established, more than 40,000 children were with at the season of Education.——In Ireland, National Schools were making great progress, and 217,000 were at the elementary books of instruction, principally in the Irish language &c, had been distributed in that country during the last year. In Scotland similar progress had been made, notwithstanding the heavy pressure of the times. The National system of education, by mutual instruction, was spreading to a most gratifying manner on the Continent. A number of gentlemen who had, during the last year, been over, for the purpose of studying the British system in the Seminaries of the various States, were the nurseries of a great number of future teachers. In France, the number of schools had increased to 30,000 in number. There were already 1,340 Schools established there, in which were 154,000 pupils, besides 105 Military Schools, to which schools of the Mutual Instruction had been extended at Fontainebleau; and the good effects which it had produced on the morals and conduct of the pupils of the Military Establishment of the Monarch were extremely visible. Two Princes of Monaco had been sent to the Normal Schools in France, where they had been taught to read and write. Every thing was going on well in Spain, where all were so quickly, in spite of other troubles, a number of Teachers of the first rank had aided in the establishment of Schools. In Switzerland great progress was being made, and the Grand Council of the Canton had ordered the Lancasterian System to be taught. It had also been applied to the detachment of the King of Wirtemberg, of the Grand Duke of Baden, and to Bavaria.—The Committee were receiving applications for transmitting Books of instruction, translated into the Greek language, to the Ionian Islands of Corfu, &c. &c. &c. which he ordered to be set on the before were the plan had penetrated. Schools had been adopted in Norway and Sweden, and in the East and West Indies, in remote. Complete anarchy prevailed in Mexico, but the Society would, no doubt, in a few years, reveal over the known world. The Report was received was great approbation.

FIRE AT ARM.

Mr. A. Cooper, of Monthly, Repository spoke in the following terms of a thing some the aiton invented by J. G. Cobbett.

"This instrument is portable, of the size and general appearance of a time piece, except that its dial plate answers a small circle of about 10 inches diameter. It is made to stand on either side, or on the top, at any degree of temperature beyond the degree indicated, sets the alarm in motion, and then gives notice to the approaching danger.—Hence it is obvious, that the principle of the thermometer is here applied to this instrument, which is the principle of the operation. All those who wish to obtain an additional security against the dangers of fire by night, may now be accommodated by applying this contrivance at Mr Ackermann's.

THE DISCOVERY SHIPS.

Few particulars of this highly interesting service have yet transpired, the offi- s and crew of he Hecla- confining the- as free to casual observations. as if their commander had not already journal before the lords of the admiralty. We understand, however, that Lieut. Parry entered by his order Sunday, to get- ful yer Capt. Ross a special cus t of sal, and reached the parallel of 7- 7, 114 or 115 west. 2 our 300 ra- ther than Capt. Ross accomplished so to be navigable in 90. h ow fell in with land which lay to the d- d discovered. It fell they reached fi- ny westerly point of one in 11- w a range of high land. It is- numbered in a sing by in Lancaster Sound, and did not get clear at the ice- till a long, this year? From October till February or for about 100 days, they were in darkness; but with abundance of wholesome provisions and other requisites on board, they passed the time very agreeably. The crew were amused with games of every kind, and occasionally they acted plays for mutual entertainment. On the breaking of the ice, this season, attempts were made to force a passage through the barriers of ice from the pol ar sea to the northward of the Hecla, but the utmost exertion of the ships could not succeed in the object. They were therefore obliged to return to the eastward and renew the attempt in a lower latitude, the navigation to which is confined to August ever, is incontestibly established; and experience has taught those hardy navigators, that in the month of August, such a power of navigation from the land makes place, as to render the continuity of the barriers of a northward passage and that a practicable one, but not open to any precautions. A number of Esquimaux Dogs & compasses were useless on board—the attraction of the needle was extreme. The Esquimaux dogs were found to be extremely useful in the Irish language &c, and had been distributed in that country during the last year. In Scotland similar progress had been made, notwithstanding the heavy pressure of the times. The National system of education, by mutual instruction, was spreading to a most gratifying manner on the Continent. THE DISCOVERY SHIPS.

Few particulars of this highly interesting service have yet transpired, the offi- s and crew of he Hecla- confining the- as free to casual observations. as if their commander had not already journal before the lords of the admiralty. We understand, however, that Lieut. Parry entered by his order Sunday, to get- ful yer Capt. It is- numbered in a sing by in Lancaster householders, and occasioned that "universal alacrity" in multiplying lights, of which the ministerial journals speak. Does it follow that the houses of all Sunderland are not the subjects occupied by her Majesty's partisans? We have noted also, as a sort of cross-reading, the statement that the establishment of the Bible Society made a brilliant appearance.

On the whole, it is perhaps better that the usage of affairs should be such as it is. The British kingdom is saved from the imaginary riots which might have come on in Switzerland. All its machin ry is represented as in full motion at Zurich, Basle, and other principal cities of that country. The secret societies in the Tyrol are said to be intimately connected with those in Switzerland. All their correspondence is carried on by verbal communications made by traveling agents.

It appears by accounts from Bonn-sur-gne, that the political agitators there exhibited great joy on hearing that Bonnarotte had raced from St. Helena, was received by the American papers—and that the police had much difficulty in preserving tranquility.

An article from Frankfort, states, that by a treaty to have been concluded by the British government with the Porte, which has offended the Emperor of Austria, the latter has made very hostile motions at Troppau. It also mentions a report that the Emperor Alexander had withdrawn the contract he had made for the supply of his army, from England, and transferred it to a company of Prussian manufacturers.

By Advices from Corfu, dated Oct 12th, we receive the interesting information that the emigrants from Parga, had purchased a settlement in Epirus, on small and obscure spot they occupied had carried the sympathy of the whole civilized world, and even the Ottoman Porte, at Janina, a formal invitation to return to their native country. They are suffered, in the name of the Sultan, to live in security and protection; and, on certain conditions, the restoration of all their property. They are understood to have accepted the offer, and that they have sent to Constantinople, before taking their final determination. All the Pargiotes have broken off hostilities against the Turkish power in the forteress, which is situated in the Lake of Janina. His fall however is considered certain.

LONDON, Nov. 15.

The Funds.—The face of things at the stock exchange has been completely changed to-day; those persons who purchased so very extensively on Monday and Tuesday, would gladly sell both for money and time to an immense amount this morning, which occasioned great depression, which was much increased by another defaulter for an immense sum being announced, although quite a new speculator in the funds; the name of Mr. Peel, a celebrated banker, but whose names were not declared publicly, making altogether nine failures already announced in the course of the week, which closes on the 25th inst. This created great distrust in the money market. The depression on the funds today, from the best accounts we can procure, is nearly one per cent consols, for money sent account, which before the close of business on Saturday afternoon, reached 69 1-4, and the other securities in the same proportion.

The Gazette.—The Gazette of to-day announces that a young French traveller, the nephew of count Molien, has succeeded in presenting to Louboucco from Sonthonax, the French Governor of Cayenne, a letter from him dated in that celebrated city hitherto unknown to Europeans, and which the unfortunate Governor Bauhave twice, in vain, attempted to approach.

From the United States.

THE QUEEN OF ENGLAND.

We continue to-day additional extracts from the British papers. Never since the English people rose to consequence among the nations of the earth, have they been more deeply agitated and excited by any occurrence than by the second reading of the bill had been negatived, or it ministers had then proposed to withdraw it. Such a step would have amount to a satisfactory and unequivocal acquittal of the charges preferred against her Majesty; in which we see the second reading carried, with the preconditional votes of 128 peers as to her guilt; but we remember that the recorded opinions of many of the noble members her guilty; when we recollect that the third reading was also carried by a majority not withstanding the manœuvres of encumbering the bill with an obnoxious clause, which had the effect of neutralizing much decided votes; and when, lastly, we reflect that the bill was never drawn. (not rejected) upon grounds of expediency alone, where, we again ask, where is the triumph?

Nov. 16

We forgot to mention a rumour, in our paper of yesterday, which yet continues to gain ground. Ministers are said to have consulted the speaker of the house of commons on the propriety of proroguing parliament during an adjournment. The manner of that question, gentlemen are being favorable to the project the following plan is said to have been adopted, or at least to be in contemplation:—The house of commons will meet, of course, at the time appointed, (the 23d,) when the black rod being ready, and all the preparatory measures being arranged, the prince will proceed to the house place before the house can commence any business.

Chronicle.

Nov. 17.

Extract of a letter, dated Barcelona, Nov. 1:—"The king has sanctioned the decree of the Cortes, dissolving the monasteries, appropriating their immense property to pay off the national debt. This event will form a memorable epoch in the Spanish annals."

The queen's friends affect to consider the small nominal majority of nine, by which the reading of the bill of pains and penalties was carried, as tantamount to an acquittal —We do not think it very wise, in those who are her friends to find themselves in large majorities, thus to repudiate small ones. The abolition of the property tax was carried by very far more than seven; and yet on the second reading, of the bill of pains and penalties and yet that majority was hardly sufficient to warm which struck the voice of the country. The question for impeaching lord Melville, was carried by a majority of only one; and notwithstanding the instructions to the duke of Cumberland, was lost, by ministers, by a similar majority of one. Instances such as these, of which there were held decisive, as to each of the particular measures to which they referred, would not be the case with the present majority of seventy right and nine, should not be equally decisive as to the queen's guilt?—Courier

[illegible] Saving Fund for the encouragement of national industry at Paris granted to Mr. Chenevard, [illegible] Avenue No. 65, Paris] the premium or 12 000 francs, which had been promised to the person who could manufacture, at the lowest expense, the kind of paper best calculated for bank and stamp bank notes. The most complete success in the manufacture of this article rewarded the exertions of M. C. whose manufacturing ingenuity, in a great variety of his others, is well known, and who is particularly celebrated for his rich and tasty paper and [illegible] Angoulme. Mr. Chenevard on receiving the medal of the proposed object of the said Society, said it is accepted, inapplicable to be to continue, in that branch of industry, elegance, elegance and wealth. This new invented article is a sort of vegetable [illegible] for any that to any thing of the kind that was ever manufactured in England, with which paper linen, cambric, muslin, and even the finest [illegible] of Persian can be imitated. It is not dearer than the coarsest cloth. A square foot of it may be purchased for a sous: and that the quantity which is necessary for a room 24 feet by 20, would not amount to more than 45 francs, or about $9 14 M. C. is now giving his attention to a new kind of woollen carpet, which by its elegance and superiority in [illegible] will make a valuable acquisition to the lovers of comfort.

Robert Wharton, Esq. Mayor of Philadelphia, in a late dated 25th inst. gives the following interesting [illegible] information.

From recent discoveries and frequent information received within the last 15 years, the Mayor of Philadelphia thinks it his duty to apprise his fellow citizens within the United States, that there [illegible] persons for at least that period, a number of foreigners of good address, but of bad and depraved principles, who have visited our country with forged credentials, counterfeit recommendations, and spurious statements of misfortunes and losses. These persons have [illegible] the country to plunder every direction, exhibiting their false documents for the purpose of procuring money for the relief of object at redeeming some of their own relations from Algerine slavery; others to rebuild their [illegible] destroyed by fire or earthquakes; to assist their ill villagers whose all had been swept away by some sad catastrophe, or to reconstruct [illegible] have lately sustained by pirates on the ocean. Thousands of dollars have been collected in this way from the charitable and humane, while little suspecting but the whole was a base fabrication, got up, supported by forgery and fraud, and the proceeds always applied to individual [illegible] amongst a large gang of these [illegible] desperate villains. From a source that can be relied on, they have at [illegible] in this city, from which they issue on their depredatory excursions, and after being absent from three to twelve months, and sometimes longer, they return with their spoil.

It is believed by some persons who are acquainted with the system, that from [illegible] to 18 thousand dollars have been carried to Europe by several of the different individuals who have been engaged in these dishonest schemes.

This exhibit is published in order to put the country on their guard, and to prevent them against placing any confidence in [illegible] that may be handed to them, clothed with all the appearance of formality of consular certificates, seals and signatures, as well as the names of other [illegible] respectable characters, as it is fully believed, that scarcely in a single instance are they genuine or been honestly obtained.

The unfortunate[illegible] has just been credibly informed, that, within a short time past, ten additional recruits to the corps have arrived at this port from Europe, and after being furnished in this city with forged documents, (for, by the bye, they are all, it is believed, malefactors here) they started to the westward in company with twelve or four-teen other [illegible] who have been engaged in the above practice for some time past. It is to be hoped the magistrates and other civil officers, where they make their appearance, will apprehend them, and if judicious measures are adopted there is little doubt but that they soon will disgorge the whole plan.

Connecticut.—A new mineral earth has lately been found in Corwin, thought to be impregnated with particles of gold. By chemical operation, vases have been made of it for table services, &c. it is found to vie in colour and lustre with the finest vermilion. The name of cinnabarum has been given to it; it has the property of not [illegible] while stuff, which is not always the case with gold, the most purified and refined.

[An Amateur Society at Quebec lately advertised the play of "A Wild Oats" for performance; the profits to be applied to the relief of distressed Emigrants. The following [illegible] was the next week published.]

On perusing in the Tyrolese's Mercury, of a quantity of Wild Oats for sale on Friday Forenoon, the 6th instant and [illegible] the [illegible] par for which they are to be sold, the following thoughts struck us, to which, if you grant a corner of your paper, you will oblige a well wisher to every charitable design.

A SCOTCHMAN.

In the first place, I respectfully suggest that the price of the Oats, per bushel, is too high. Five Shillings to those who [illegible] these Oats are [illegible] in gill measures, may be very proper; but there certainly should be some small allowance, or [illegible] for the lower orders of society, who have no objections to have their Oats served out to less costly utensils [illegible] have been in the habit of getting their Wild Oats at two and six pence per [illegible], and, no doubt, will want them at or less than [illegible] a price as Five Shillings. And, as the higher orders of society do not seem to relish Oats much, if we are to take the [illegible] state of the shops, in which they are sold, as any proof, the sale may be pretty extended, which would prove a [illegible] to those individuals for whose comfort this sale is intended; and, who, without assistance, can hardly procure Oats, or any thing else, to satisfy the [illegible] cravings of nature.

Now Sir, the lower orders would think no more of buying Wild Oats at [illegible] per bushel, could they have them at the present season of fruit [illegible]; and might stretch a point, to procure a bushel, could they have them at the OLD PRICE. By this arrangement more of the Oats would be sold—the benevolent object of the orders would be better answered—and the Bins be left empty for the reception of more of the commodity.

Quebec, 1st Jan. 1821.

To the Editor of the Quebec Mercury.

On of the most extraordinary instances of the sudden rise of a large and flourishing trading town that is found in modern history, is that of Odessa, a [illegible] on the Black Sea. The following account of it is extracted from Reddaway's work entitled—EUROPEAN COMMERCE:

"Odessa is situated on a bay formed by the Black Sea, forty miles distant from the mouth of the Dniester, and six from that of the Dneiper, called by the Turks, when in their possession, Kinburgne; and not late as 1792, the shores were a mere plain. It is a secure and convenient bay, with a great depth of water, apparently its seldom rises [illegible] by the frost."

"The port has a good anchorage, the bottom being of a fine sand and gravel; the depth of water within the pier is sufficient to admit the largest ships of war."

Such was the astonishing increase of the commerce of this city, that in the year 1803, no less than five hundred and two ships arrived there, four hundred & twenty two of which were loaded and cleared. In November, 1804, more than two thousand five hundred boats had been [illegible] & the inhabitants amounted to fifteen thousand.

In 1816, the trade of Odessa had so much increased, that there arrived in that year eight hundred and twenty five ships, whose cargoes were raised to more than fifty four millions of roubles; and the whole number of ships and small vessels that sailed was thirteen hundred and sixty-six.

In that year, the amount of exports was fifty-seven millions, two hundred and forty-nine thousand roubles; and the amount of imports only four millions and thirty six thousand roubles; leaving a balance of exports in favour of Odessa of fifty-three millions, two hundred and thirteen thousand roubles.

The ships and vessels that arrived in 1816, in the following manners, sailed under the following flags, viz.

Austrian	104
English	258
Turkish	23
French	23
Swedish	13
Portuguese	1
Sicilian	12
Sardinian	4

The number of men employed in these vessels was 15,291.

The number of passengers 852.

The present number of inhabitants is not stated, but if we are not mistaken it was said several years since to amount to nearly fifty thousand.

Extract from the Official Reports of the Massachusetts Agricultural Society, held at Brighton the 17th and 18th days of October, 1820.

The Chairmen of this committee reported verbally to the board that the duties of that committee, owing to the enlarged number of competitors for premiums, has been so much increased, that it was impossible for him to draw up a written report, but he made known to the [illegible] from memory the principle which had governed them in their decision. He would endeavour not to exaggerate the facts, while he should deem it a duty to take to justice to the important influence which the society by its premiums had produced upon our agriculture, and to the spirit and intelligence, by which they had been seconded and supported by the intelligent cultivators of the State. It is scarcely possible that any man could have the hardihood to mis-re, resent the state of improvement as to an exhibition of [illegible] made great and laudable efforts, and we shall assuredly excite our farmers to strive to equal these [illegible] races of [illegible] growth. The greatest benefits we have ever hoped to derive were, that we should select, and rear in as little resemble as [illegible] the finest of our own stock, while we should gradually improve it by crosses with the best animals of foreign countries.

There can be no stronger proof of the benefits we have already derived, than the fact that the progeny of the foreign races are by the public as well as the committee, preferred to those of our native breed.

Vandalism.—The sum given by the Legislature of Illinois to their seat of government, has, we believe, caused throughout the union, as much wonder as regret. And we do not recollect to have seen, until very lately, any reason given for [illegible] it. It does not appear that the most Legislature of Illinois were urged by [illegible] interests of their own [illegible] of [illegible] ignorance to give the name of Vandalia to their capital. From the United States.

Extreme Cold.—As a matter of record as to the, we shall publish the state of the thermometer in different parts of the United States during the late severe weather.

From papers now before us we select the following :—

At Washington City, January 24 twenty degrees below zero. Freezing point : this is said to have been the coldest day remembered in that city.

At Salem, Mass. from 15 to 20, below Zero.

A Philadelphia paper says, "that the intensity of the cold was as great on Thursday last, that a Time Piece which stood on a mantle over an excellent Franklin stove, in which a fire was kept up till 5 o'clock, actually stopped from cold at half past 4 o'clock. Three Coopers were hanging to death, a few miles from the city, on Thursday morning."

At Boston, during the night of the 24th the mercury ranged from 1 to 10 below Zero. Several trees were split by the extreme cold.

At Albany, it was from 18 to 20 degrees below Zero. The Editors of the Argus say :—"Of people often speak of the cold winters of former times, and what they have said so in their day (and they say truly) we may safely challenge their 1784, 86, &c. for a comparison with this present winter, as far as it has already advanced, for uniform, steady and intense cold."

We have received from our Albany Correspondent a bill presented by Peter Moore, entitled "an act concerning the estates of intestate drunkards, and for other purposes."

The 1st section authorizes the Court of Chancery to exercise jurisdiction in regard to the estates of persons incapable of conducting their own affairs in consequence of habitual drunkenness.

Section 2d provides, that all moneys that shall be paid to any innkeeper, merchant, &c. for a y kind of spirituous liquors sold and drank in his tavern, house, or on their premises, from and after the 1st of July next, and be received, with costs of suit, in an action by the masters of the overseers of the poor of the city or town where such liquors shall be sold ; the money when so recovered to be applied to the use of the poor.

Section 3d makes it the duty of the overseers of the poor to prosecute in all cases that shall come to their knowledge of a violation of this act.

Section 4. Directs that the overseers of the poor shall, whenever they discover any person to be an habitual drunkard, make application to the Court of Chancery, for the exercise of power in such case ; also that in case such habitual drunkard shall possess property for his or her support, the overseers shall prohibit any merchant, innkeeper, &c. from selling to such drunkard any spirituous liquor, under the penalty of ten dollars for every offence.

Section 5th, provides, that if any person shall consider himself aggrieved by the proceedings of any justice of the peace, who shall cause a jury to be summoned, to try the matter in dispute, and if the jury shall declare that such person is not a habitual drunkard, that the overseers are to pay the usual cost in trials by jury.

Section 6th, provides, that if the drunkard reform, the overseers are to revoke their proceedings against said drunkard.

We have also received a copy of the communication of the Comptroller, stating the several sums of money paid to the Treasury, agreeably to the law in this state From this document, it appears that the amount which has been paid, is $11 015 65.

PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT OF UPPER CANADA.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.

Debate on an Address to Answer to His Excellency's Speech.

The Attorney General moved that an humble address be presented to His Excellency in answer to his Speech from the Throne at the opening of the Parliament ; and submitted to the House, for its adoption, certain Resolutions to be embodied in the Address.

Mr. Nichol moved as an amendment that the debate on the Address be adjourned till Monday next. He descanted at considerable length on the impropriety of precipitating the subject on the House so soon, and wanted to give members time to examine the Speech from the Throne more minutely—He thought that Mr. Moodey might be able to give a full and explicit answer to their Address to all the points contained in the Speech of His Excellency, and that their Address ought as far as possible be an echo of the Speech.—He complained that the Speech from the Throne was delivered read in day, before the dinner was served, and although a copy of it appeared in the Newspaper of to-day, he would pay no respect whatever to it—all men were liable to error, and of course Printers; he wanted an Official Copy of the Speech to be laid on the Table of the House ; and concluded by hoping that the House would not adopt either the Address or Resolutions of the Attorney General, which Resolutions he said did not sufficiently embrace all the points included in the Speech from the Throne, and, taken generally, were such as should not be adopted by the House.

The Attorney Gen'l. said, the Speech from the Throne was read yesterday, and was already on the Journal of the House, therefore there was no necessity for a copy being laid before the House.

Mr. Jones Jones spoke to the same effect, and observed that the hon. Member (Mr. Nichol) had thus sufficient to have an answer in the Speech from the Throne framed to-day, instead of one which, he (Mr. S.) came to the House quite unprepared.

The House divided on this amendment or motion of adjournment by Mr. Nichol, as follows :—

The original motion and Resolutions by the Attorney Gen'l were then put, and carried unanimously.

Mr. McMartin moved that the Attorney Gen'l. Messrs. McDonnell, Gordon, Morris and Mr. Moodey, be a Committee to draft an Address in answer to His Excellency's Speech from the Throne, and that they be instructed to answer specially those paragraphs in their duty contained in the Resolutions offered by the Attorney Gen'l. and that they Report to the House on Monday next.—Ordered.

Mr. Rogers moved that the Rolls of the House be altered, and that hereafter the Clerks Members including the Speaker, shall form a Quorum.—Ordered.

February 5th.

ADDRESS TO HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

Upon the house resuming the order of the day for receiving the Report from the Committee, &c. &c.

Mr. Nichol rose, and observed, that he did not approve of the mode adopted by the house, now of what was said in a speech from the Throne, he said, a great discussion had taken place in the House of Peers in England, he considered an address to the throne was, he said, a great discussion, but by no means an answer to the speech delivered from the throne ; and such was the case in the House of Commons in England, whose line of politics the hon. member sometimes adverted to follow. The address was delivered to that of the Mother Country, since it had been asserted by the first Governor of this Province in his Speech to the Provincial Parliament, that it was the image and transcript of that of Great Britain ; but, without this assurance, it the people of this country would be satisfied of the fact,—expressed in Parliament by individuals of the highest character and talents, and the address derived from trial by jury, the British Rights, & the Habeas Corpus Act, were none could therefore exalted minds of the people of this country, he said, that the inhabitants of this Province possessed more practical freedom, with fewer burthens on any country in the face of the globe. Deriving these blessings from the greatest nation on the face of the earth to which we were proud to owe allegiance, it should be the duty of us and every unworthy prejudice, and when counsel those measures which should tend to diffuse, not destroy the blessings we enjoyed. He observed, that the circumstance of seats in the Upper House in this Province being hereditary, was a great inconsistency, as was the case with the House of Peers in England, he considered an advantage rather than otherwise ; and such the opinion of the people of this country, whose line of politics the hon. member sometimes adverted to follow. The appointments were all from the King, and in the way might make it hereditary if it were his pleasure so to do ; it was reasonable to suppose that he would select from amongst his subjects those possessed of the greatest abilities and integrity, and on who would support the dignity of the Throne, the liberties of the People, and the true interests of the Country. It however the appointment should be hereditary, it might all to occur that the son, not possessing the wisdom or the talents of the father, would be disposed to trample on that liberty (as never for which and supported by the father, and instead of being a blessing to the country, be a curse to it. He, gentleman, that the Commons of this Province had at various periods been refused the supplies, and the public business suffered in consequence ; to [Mr. H.] would not consider such occurrences as evidence of our Constitution being defective, but rather as proofs of its excellent and perfect : and instead of amending, or altering, having to the principle in their establishment, they received one from the Throne, recommending that they could obtain for it at the mouth of Quebec, and of such a measure he should appear to merit a favorable member in the House.

The Att'y. Gen'l. said he was so little acquainted with the form of proceedings in the House, that he was not quite certain how far it would be proper or constitutional to enter into the merits of the Committee directed by the House to prepare the answer to the Speech, that he would, however, offer any remarks to the House upon it ; but if it was not improper, he considered, he felt it peculiarly his duty to explain to the House, as the Speech and the Resolutions founded thereon, they had given to the different subjects embraced in His Excellency's Speech, and the sentiments of the Government by them, and on which they had framed their answer.

With respect to the first exception taken by the hon. Gentleman from Norfolk (Mr. Nichol) to the Lieut. Governor's Speech, that we had not the same Constitution as our Mother Country, England, and consequently, had arisen in the Committee on other parts of the Speech, which certainly had taken place on that, he said, as one of that Committee, he should have known it had there been their answer inserted any expression that could have implied a doubt, much less a difference of opinion upon that head, the Committee would have most certainly would have merited censure from the House.

It was fresh in the knowledge of the Members of the Committee, that when in former Parliament, it had been gentleman was a Member, an attempt was made by the other branch of the Legislature, as they conceived, to infringe upon their privileges, and that attempt was justified on the ground that they could not proceed to claim the same privileges as the House of Commons in England, the House of Assembly unanimously asserted, that we enjoyed in this country a Constitution the very image and transcript of that of Great Britain ; and they quoted, with an air of exultation, the declaration of Gov. Simcoe to our first parliament, in which he congratulated them upon possessing the Constitution of Great Britain in all its forms—and then could the committee think of drawing, or with what consistency could the House deny, that we had that Constitution.

Two reasons had been produced for not the same Constitution as Great Britain. First, that we had not the power of impeachment ; and next, that our Judges were not independent of the Crown.—As to impeachment, when it should become necessary to resort to it, it would then be time to consider whether we possessed the power, existed ; we are told that in Lower Canada it has been denied them ; but surely we are not called upon, and it would be highly improper for us to look that in another Province the right was questionable, to preclude ourselves from claiming it, if voluntary and moulded for declaration that we had a not. As to the other objection, the hon. gentleman who had spoken, did not distinguish between the two separate principles ; the independence of the Judges in England, was not a principle of the Constitution, it arose from an Act of Parliament passed so recently as the last reign,—a measure created by the Legislature conjointly constituted with the Crown ; and how could it be passed such an Act in the exercise of our Constitutional powers, it by an means declared that he had not the same Constitution.

Then as to the ground of exception to the address, taken by the hon. gentleman (Mr. N.), as to the Lieut. Governor's visit, that the wealth and power of this Province were not increased by the late augmentation of the Executive Council, he asserted ——that indeed was given rise to some little discussion in the Committee, but the majority of opinion had prevailed upon it. The appointment indeed seemed so contrary to the feeling expressed already by many Members of the House, and it had been so severely reflected by what had fallen from the hon. member from Kingston (Mr. Hagerman) that he could not but speak upon the subject. It was the acknowledged leading principle in political economy, that wealth is wealth ; we need but look around us to see the truth of the remark—of the vast country between us and the Atlantic—within two centuries its only white inhabitants were the wild men of the forest, and now the shores are peopled from real or imagined persecution in Great Britain—they came indeed pauper to the country, and took now of their descendants are the wealthy and influential nation they become. He must indeed look on things with a jaundiced eye who can view the rapid advance of this country and observe the numbers of new Townships peopled almost wholly by the U. E. Loyalists, not long ago were useless wilds, but now teeming with industrious members of society on the other side of the Atlantic, and yet doubt whether they added to the public wealth. To say nothing more, the price of land had increased ten fold, and indeed every acre they possess, puts something to the public revenue, and consequently adds to the strength of their respective Districts. But, besides this, let us but look to the Militia Returns, and to the numerous military settlements, and we shall find there half pay officers and pensioners of the British Government, who draw annually from the public revenue large amounts which they expend in this Province.

The cases of Grenville, said he intended to have proposed as amendment, but which he acknowledged to the hon. Att'y. Gen'l. had convinced him was unnecessary. To say that the Legislature formed of the Constitution which had so much been talked of, was incomplete, and which was undoubtedly intended to be bestowed upon us, would be to cast no good effect and might thereafter be productive of much evil. Without the power of impeachment which the hon. gentleman from Norfolk (Mr. Jones) seemed to suppose they did not possess, it he would be in the power of the Executive to pack the House of Assembly, so as to make it the mere tool of the Executive—in short, to make it what was intended by the Constitution. The Prince Regent in Council went to say, that the Parliament of Great Britain was the same as Judge Forsbay) had the power of impeaching before the Legislative Council, who in that case refused to act. Such was the unfortunate situation with Lower Canada, they must of necessity be subject to the Executive power and the laws adopted under the Constitution, and which it would be folly for the Province to alter, and to their gentleman looked rather than to the Constitution, as the administration of government which at times has been balanced and most certainly existed in the Government of the Mother Country, and which he hoped by to say did not now exist ; and he did most sincerely hope that the time would never arrive when the people of this country should be under the necessity of looking to their Constitution for the remedy of any grievance they might labour under, but that they would look to the wisdom and the justice of the Legislature, and that it would be found adequate to the task that presented itself to their consideration.

With respect to the first exception taken by the hon. Gentleman from Norfolk (Mr. Nichol) to the Lieut. Governor's Speech, that we had not the same Constitution as our Mother Country, England, and consequently, had arisen in the Committee on other parts of the Speech, which certainly had taken place on that, he said, as one of that Committee, he should have known it had there been their answer inserted any expression that could have implied a doubt, much less a difference of opinion upon that head, the Committee would have most certainly would have merited censure from the House.

Simcoe to our first

The Att'y. Gen'l. said that this part of the Address was received also from the Committee their best consideration. As to the objections urged by the hon. member from Norfolk, that we should not have thanked for His Excellency for having prosecuted the Surveys without any demand upon the public treasury, without in some way denying any right to make such a demand—it appeared to him it would be full time to return His Excellency's supplies for this purpose when he should require them. The hon. gentleman's caution seemed very applicable to those who were adopting a much liked change, we should be careful to accompany it with a decision on that to be should consider a capital felony he would deserve to be hanged, he would not hang merely in—for stealing a hen, which the improvidence of its owner enticements to—but otherwise have accustomed ; and that had it been the case, it would have ill become them to reproach the Executive Government with the embarrassments it had been brought under by its prodigality, relying upon the Provincial Parliament to make such provision as the circumstances of the country might require. Such was the case, and he had no doubt but that the House would not have the charge, for the Address to His Excellency expressly stated, that for the reception of settlers upwards of 3,000,000 of acres had been surveyed within the last two years, without not a shilling's expense to the Province. It was absurd to mention as an instance of improvidence in the Government the circumstance of surveyors selling their floor to persons who were unable to pay for it ; if they (the surveyors) chose to do that, it was their business, and they had themselves to blame for any disappointment that it was well known that in the Townships the Crown reserved to sell its flour and other provisions at a very advanced price in consequence of the distance. Mr. Hall concluded by expressing his decided opposition to the proposed amendment.

The question on the Constitution was not the same as that of Great Britain, the House of the Judges' and Sheriffs' situations was not the same as that of the Mother Country, and it had been asserted by the first Governor of this Province in his Speech to the Provincial Parliament, that it was the image and transcript of that of Great Britain ; but, without this assurance, it the people of this country would be satisfied of the fact,—expressed in Parliament by individuals of the highest character and talents, and the address derived from trial by jury, the British Rights, & the Habeas Corpus Act, were none could therefore exalted minds of the people of this country, he said, that the inhabitants of this Province possessed more practical freedom, with fewer burthens on any country in the face of the globe. The Attorney General then called the attention of the House to the report of the debates upon the Address : he was stated to have said, that he considered the Address to be a mere echo of the Speech from the Throne, and to have expressed his determination to oppose any amendment to it ; he (the Att'y. Gen'l.) must most positively in the recollection of the House that without any general expression of the kind, he argued in favor of the Address, that the several topics were urged, and stated to the House the reasons which had governed the Committee on each particular point ; he referred to the Statutes to ascertain some objections—he had forwarded texts to refute others ; and he concluded with an expression of confident confidence in the measure generally, which would have come rather improperly from him as one of the Committee who framed it, he gave his reasons partiality for, and in detail applied the different amendments as they were proposed. These reasons were all entirely omitted, though the House listened to them almost unanimously ; and from the manner in which the Speaker gives the substance of the debates and address of your Excellency on the prosperity of this Province, and we learn with true satisfaction that your Excellency's various expectations on that head, have been happily realized.

The amounts and estimates for the current year shall receive our most serious attention, and your Excellency that we shall earnestly apply ourselves to devising the best means of effecting the objects recommended to our consideration by your Excellency.

While we regret that circumstances beyond your control have rendered it necessary to call for the provision of the principal productions of this Province, and give rise to embarrassments which have been brought under by your Excellency's prodigality, upon the Provincial Parliament to make such provision as the circumstances of the country might require. Such was the case, and he had no doubt but that the House would not have the charge, for the Address to His Excellency expressly stated, that for the reception of settlers upwards of 3,000,000 of acres had been surveyed within the last two years, without not a shilling's expense to the Province. A preference will be given to Tenders for the supply of manufactured BREAD, if, on comparison with those for the delivery of Flour, the terms appear to be on the whole equally advantageous to the public.

The conditions of the respective Contracts, forms of Tenders, and other particulars, may be known on application at this Office, and no proposal will be noticed unless made in the form required, and delivered before the hour appointed for his surveies, nor unless the Bidder or an Agent duly authorised by him, attends at the time of opening the Tenders, which will be publicly opened in presence of such persons as may attend.

The Bonds will be required (if was the given any consideration, which it is not) for the portion even half to be procured all debate, as an act would seem to be limited as the proportion of a reporter—that the terms he had pointed out if they were without a design to deceive, or if they were without a design to deceive, or if they were without, but he could not allow them to mere negligence or incapacity.

The hon. Att'y. Gen'l. (as the Att'y. Gen'l. observations on introducing a Bill to prevent the) Drunkards from squandering their Property, had pointed out minutely the evils that prevailed, and the causes of them, the consequences of which were the necessity of an alteration in the Law, and he had rejected the allegation that he had brought forward a measure of greater severity than those which the law in question, but the necessity of the Bill was created, but that was rendered in the mildest manner possible, and in such a way as to interfere with our growth.

We are deeply sensible of the importance of the subject upon which we are addressed, and that their exercise is attended with difficulties which will require the utmost care and caution. Difficulties connected with the Province as the disadvantages of the Province, and the Province as the Province, difficulties where there is room for their existence, we cannot, and we are sensible, we cannot, and we are sensible, still less can we venture to hope that the impression of their existence will be removed by any measure of legislation, or that the mind accustomed and disappointed to the use of spirituous liquors will be pleased to express to our trial for the public good, will cease to be disappointed. But we may present themselves to the faithful discharge of our duty, and we shall proceed to the consideration of the subject with the utmost attention to the objects I have recommended in His Excellency's Speech, and to the answer to your Address, evince a disposition so candid, and to the end that the Bill may be found as generally grateful to me, and it confirms me in an opinion which I had confidently entertained, that it will be found to be one of the most upright counsels and valuable assistance in the discharge of my arduous duties.

February 8

The Att'y. Gen'l called the attention of the House to the report of the debates : he was stated to have said, that he considered it necessary that he would remember required their indulgence—it was stated that he had introduced a Bill to prevent the Drunkards from squandering their property, but that he had introduced a Bill to prevent the Drunkards from squandering their property, but that he had introduced a Bill to prevent the Drunkards from squandering their property, but

MISCELLANEOUS.

The English language is said, by foreigners, to be more difficult of acquisition than any language extant. One of the chief obstacles is alleged to be the similarity of pronunciation in many words entirely dissimilar in signification. In the "Memoirs of the late R. I. Edgeworth, Esq." recently published at London, this characteristic is humorously exposed. Macklin, the dramatic writer and player, together with Foote, Dr. Franklin, Delaval Edgeworth, and many of the Covent Garden corps of performers, had assembled at the King's Arms, after play hours, in order to make themselves merry, and the rational manner in which it was done is, in part, thus represented by Mr. Edgeworth.—Village Museum.

Pronunciation was discussed; the faults in our language in this particular were copiously enumerated. "For instance," said Macklin, "Pare me a pair of pears." You may take three words out of this sentence of the same sound, but of different meaning, and I defy any man to pronounce them in such a manner as to discriminate the sounds, or to mark to the eye, by his pronunciation, the difference between the words, to pare, the noun of a number, a pair, and the fruit, pear. The pompous Scot lay undertook that Powell, who was remarkable for a good ear, should do this. Boadley, who smoked prodigiously whilst he spoke, was put to take a station, that the motion of his lips might not assist Powell in judging what sentence he intended to express by each of the words as he pronounced them. Out of the company was placed behind the curtain, and to him Boadley was previously to communicate, whether he proposed to pronounce the word denoting the series, the noun of number, or the fruit. Beauty failed so often, and so ridiculously, that he became quite angry, and charged Powell with wilful misapprehension. To defend himself, Powell proposed that Holland should try his skill; but Holland had no better success. During three trial, I observed, by signs with Sir Francis, a method of pointing out my meaning, and I offered to try my skill. The audience with difficulty restrained their ire from rage; but I took my place behind the curtain, and they were soon compelled to acknowledge, that I had a more distinct pronunciation, or that Sir Francis had more acute hearing, than any of the company. Out of twenty experiments, I never failed more than two or three times, and in these I relied on purpose to prevent suspicion. I had made my confederate understand, that when I turned my right foot outward, as it appeared from beneath the curtain, I meant to say pare; if to me I turned it inward, pair, a couple; and when it was straight forward, pear, the fruit. We were favoured with no encore."

Amidst such trifling as this, much sound criticism was mixed, which improved my literary taste and a number of entertaining anecdotes were related, which informed my inexperienced mind with knowledge of the world."

Rapid Travelling.—I noticed in your paper of the 9th inst. under the above head, a challenge to all the world, to beat twenty miles an hour, which was performed by four young gentlemen on sleds. This is a long way; but I am knowing to its having been beat, with ease, by more than half. The ever Accommodating, which divides the town of Fairhaven and New Bedford, is a mile wide, and has been crossed on the ice, however incredible it may seem to you, in one minute, to what is called an Ox boat. I received a letter yesterday, from a gentleman in Fairhaven who has constructed one of these boats, in which he states that himself and three others crossed the river in one minute and a half, on Thursday, the 4th inst. and added, when the wind was feather, at the rate of sixty miles an hour—it makes a quite common. These boats, which are used much known in this country, but which are prevalent. I believe, in the north of Europe, are nothing more than a common boat or yawl, placed on three runners which are propelled by the wind. The ice runner or skate, is a little harpened, so as to take the ice, and prevent ice way.

History of the English Translation of the Bible.

When, as at the present time, the word of truth is circulating currency side and many offord pleasure to many of our readers, to learn in which manner the translation of the Scriptures was effected, it has come down to us. In "Hacket's Life of Archbishop Williams" the "Bible," a work recently published, and of high celebrity, the following plan and note of that author is given:—

Twenty-four English Bibles were examined by an unknown individual, who for abolish Usher leaves to be your judge; of this there have been many copies preserved in the Bodleian Library, and in the libraries of Christ Church & Queen's Colleges at Oxford. Towards the close of the following century, John de Trevisa, vicar of Berkeley, in Cornwall, at the desire of his patron, Lord Berkely, translated the Old and New Testament into the English tongue; but no part of this work appears ever to have been printed, though several copies are known to exist in manuscript. Nearly contemporary with him was the celebrated John Wickliffe, who, about the year 1380, translated the entire Bible from the Latin Vulgate into New Testament of Wickliffe was published in folio by a Mr. Lewis, in 1731; and was handsomely reprinted in quarto, in 1810, by the Rev'd. Henry Hervey Baber, one of the librarians of the British Museum, who prefixed a valuable memoir of the "Apostle of England," as Wickliffe has sometimes been called.

The first printed edition of any part of the Scriptures in English, was of the New Testament, at Hamburgh, in the year 1526. Printed by Tyndale, with the assistance of John Frey and Wm. Roy; the whole of this impression, with the exception of a small part, being bought up and burnt by Tonst-l, Bishop of London, and Sir Thomas More. Tyndale put forth a new edition in 1527, and a third in 1534; and two years after his translation of the Pentateuch appeared at Hamburgh, with another edition of his Testament. In 1535 was published the translation of Miles Coverdale, great part of which was Tyndale's; and two years after John Rogers, martyr, published Tyndale's and his Bible at Hamburgh, under the assumed name of Thomas Matthew, whence it is generally known by the name of Matthew's Bible. A revised edition of this translation, corrected by Coverdale and Cranmer, and hence called the Great Bible, was printed at London in 1539 by Grafton and Whitchurch, in a large folio, and from the size usually denominated the Great Bible. No new version was executed during the reign of Edward VI though several editions were printed, both of the Old & New Testaments.

During the sanguinary reign of Queen Mary, Miles Coverdale, John Knox, Christopher Goodman, and other Protestant exiles, who had taken refuge at Geneva, published a new translation, between the years 1557 and 1560, with short annotations, imitating the doctrines propounded by Calvin. The New Testament of this edition was the first in English, which was printed into verses. The version of Bible was highly esteemed by the Puritans, and in the course of little more than thirty years after, ran to no fewer than thirty editions as it were printed in various sizes, principally by the royal printers. This translation is allowed to possess considerable merit, for its general fidelity and perspicuity. Eighty years after the completion of the Geneva Bible, a new version was published, with two prefaces, by Archbishop Parker, now generally termed the Bishop's Bible, from the circumstance of most of the translators being bishops; although this translation was read in the churches, the Geneva Bible was generally preferred in families.

At length in the reign of James I. several objections having been made to the Bishop's Bible, at the Conference held at Hampton Court in 1603, the king in the following year gave orders for the undertaking of a new version, and fifty four men were appointed to this important labour: but, before it was commenced seven of the persons nominated were either dead or had declined the task; for the last, as given us by Fuller, comprises only 47 names. These, being ranged under six divisions, entered upon their work in 1607, and completed it in 1610; it was then revised by a committee of the translators, and finally reviewed by Bishop Bilson and Dr. Smith, the latter perfected the arguments, and wrote the preface. This translation, generally known by the name of King James's Bible, was first printed in 1611, and is that now universally adopted wherever the English language is spoken. The edition, generally reputed to be the most correct, is that of Oxford, in quarto and folio, 1769, printed under the superintendence of the Rev. Dr. Blayney; the text was carefully collated with several correct editions, and the punctuation amended; the stanzas and divisions of chapters and running titles at the top of each page were also corrected. About 30,403 new references were inserted in the margin.—From the singular price bestowed, in order to render the edition as accurate as possible, it has hitherto been considered the standard edition from which all subsequent impressions have been executed. Notwithstanding, however, the great labor and attention bestowed by Dr. Blayney, his edition must now yield the palm of accuracy, to the very beautiful and correct edition published by Messrs. Eyre and Strahan, his majesty's printers, but printed by Mr. Woodfall, in 1806, and again in 1812 in quarto; as not fewer than one hundred and seven errors were discovered in collating the edition of 1806 with Dr. Bl. and one of those errors was the omission of considerable important sentence; Eyre and Strahan's edition is therefore to be regarded as approaching as near as possible to what bibliographers term an immaculate text.

Of all the modern versions now extant, the present authorized English translation is allowed by those who are competent judges, to be most correct; its style is incomparably superior to any thing which might be expected from the finished and perverted taste of our times; it is simple, it is harmonious, it is energetic; and, which is of no small importance, one has made it familiar, and unconsciously learned it by heart.

To this testimony of Bishop Middleton, we may add that of Selden, who recommended it as "the best translation in the world." The committee for religion in the time of Cromwell, allowed it to be "the best extant," and Poole in his Synopsis says, that "in this royal version were many numerous specimens of great learning and awesomeness, both in the original languages, and on all occasions, sense and judgment." Dr. Geddes observes, that "every sentence, every word, every syllable, every letter and point, seem to have been weighed with the most exact scrube, and expressed either in the text, or margin, with the greatest precision." It was remarked by Robinson, more than a century ago, that it may "serve for a Lexicon of the Hebrew language, as well as a translation."

Lord Mansfield being in one of the remedies, on the circuit, a poor woman was indicted for witchcraft. The inhabitants of the place were exasperated against her. Some witnesses deposed that they had seen her walk in the air, with her feet upwards and her head downwards. Lord Mansfield heard evidence with great tranquility, and perceiving the temper of the people, whom it would not be safe to provoke, pretended to be struck with what the witnesses deposed. "I do not doubt (said he) that this woman has walked in the air with her feet upwards, since you have all sworn it; but she has the honor of being born in England, as well as you and I, and, consequently, cannot be judged but by the laws of the country, nor punished but in proportion as she has violated them. Now I know not of any law that forbids walking in the air with her feet upwards. We have all a right to do it with impunity. I see no reason, therefore, for this prosecution; and this poor woman, may return home when she pleases."—This speech had its proper effect; it appeased the auditory, and the woman retired from the court without molestation.

Lutherous punishment.—A few years since, James Mahoney, Esq. Mayor of Cork imagining if he could strip the beggars of the coin rable and sickly appearance they made, it should divert them of the strongest claim to the charity of the humane, came to the following agreement with one Geoghegan, one of the counsellors, who was by trade a barber, viz.—He directed the barber to seize all the beggars he found strolling within the limits of the city, for each of whom he promised a reward; but instead of bringing them before him (the Mayor) he was to take them to his shop and there shave, wash, dress, and powder them in the genteelest manner. He seized about half a dozen, and with the assistance of razors, wash-balls, scissors, and powder puffs, he as completely metamorphosed them, that those whom he apprehended as mendicants, when they left his shop appeared like macaronies at least about the head. This laughable scheme was attended with such success, that the whole tribe (during Squire Mahoney's mayoralty) avoiding his jurisdiction as carefully as if it was visited by a pestilence.

Magog Oil Stone.—A stone, a complete substitute for the best Turkey Oil Stone has been discovered in Lake Memphremagog, and by fair experiment has been pronounced by competent judges in Boston, and various towns in Vermont, that extensive quantities have been sold, to be equal if not superior, to the imported Oil Stone. The Magog Stone, is of various descriptions possessing the same quality, and calculated for all kinds of edged tools. The proprietors, we are informed, have erected suitable works for sawing them into good shapes for use; the quarry is extensive, and with proper encouragement, enough can be manufactured for the whole United States, and at about one half the price of the Turkey Stone.

Persia.—A late British publication, speaking of the reception of the British Embassy under Sir Harford at the court of Persia remarks:

"One necessary preparation was that he mission should be arrayed in green slippers and red stockings. The narrow entrance, as they passed through, were crowded with spectators. On entering the royal hall, they were led between lines of troops displayed in the Eastern manner, who performed the platoon exercise as they passed. At the end of the hall was a small and mean door, which being opened, introduced them into a dark and narrow passage, terminating in another door more like any English stable. This ushered them, however, into a very handsome court, adorned with canals and fountains, bordered with trees, at the end of which the king richly dressed. The presents were then delivered to the prime minister, and the ambassador began a speech in English, the sound of which created a good deal to startle the monarch; but no translation being given, his surprise was changed into pleasure. He then inquired for the king of England, and whether he was son to him who had reigned at the time of the last embassy. On being assured that the very same king was now reigning, he was heard to remark, that in this point also the French had told lies; for it seems they had ridiculed a respect to the king of England's death. The shah was about 45; and wore on a large black beard and mustachios, rather an agreeable countenance appeared. He entered into a pretty long conversation on literary subjects, being himself a professed patron of learning.

After this interview, the ambassador began to treat with the ministers relative to the terms of the proposed treaty. This negociation was conducted in a manner very remote from European ideas of decorum. The discussions were sometimes accompanied with violent contention, and at other times were interrupted by loud bursts of laughter. Once, amid the most serious deliberation, the minister broke off by asking the ambassador to tell the history of the world from the creation. Afterwards, when he had proceeded to send a copy of the treaty fully written out, the ambassador received instead of it a large citron. When this treaty was at length produced, the Secretary, who valued himself on being the first writer in Persia, had so filled it with Oriental flowers and elements, that it no longer retained any intelligent meaning. Sir Harford having declared it, in this condition, to be of no official value, the Secretary was most reluctantly induced to grace it into something more level in an European capacity. When that minister came finally to apply the seals, the Premier called out, "Strike! Strike!" while all the Persians present were exclaiming, "God grant the friendship between the two nations may be lasting. God grant it! God grant it!"

From Campbell's Travels in South Africa.

Having heard or read that if a corked bottle were sunk fifty or sixty fathoms in the ocean, however tight the cork might be, the pressure without would drive the cork into the inside of the bottle, on mentioning it to the captain, he readily consented to make an experiment, which is proved the accuracy of the assertion.

We drove a cork very tight into an empty bottle.—The cork was as large as that of a full bottle of it could not be driven into the neck of the bottle. We then tied a cord round the cork, which we also fastened round the neck of the bottle, to prevent the cork sinking down, and put a coat of pitch over the whole. By means of lead we sunk it in the water. When it was let down to the depth of fifty fathoms, the captain told me he was sure that the bottle had instantaneously filled, on which he drew it up, when he found the cork driven down into the inside, and of course the bottle was full of water.

We prepared a second bottle, exactly in the same way, only with the addition of a sail needle being passed through the upper part of the cork, while it rested on the mouth of the bottle, and all completely pitched over. When about 50 fathoms down, the captain called out as before, that he felt by the sudden increase of weight that the bottle filled, on which it was drawn up. We were not a little surprised to find the cork in the same position, and no part of the pitch broken, yet the bottle was full of water! None of my nautical companions how the water got in. There was no part of the pitch open that would admit the point of a needle.

A little before dusk of one evening last week, a merchant in Howard street closed his store, but about an hour afterwards his clerk, happening to think of it, though he perceived the door open, which on examination he found was actually the case. Suspecting that some one had improperly gained admittance he brought a neighbor to watch at the door, while he entered to make a search. After the young man had been in a few minutes, a very stout black fellow came out and was collared by the gentleman at the door. The black being too strong for his opponent, broke away from him and made his escape, having had one side of his waistcoat torn off. In examining what depredation had been committed in the store, it was found that the thief had stolen a sum of money in bank notes, a pocket book and a bank book—all of which he had put in his waistcoat pocket, and when luckily for the owner, he opened to be on the side torn from the thief in the scuffle at the store door and left behind.—*Balt. Executive Council Office,
York, 19th January, 1820.

IT having been suggested to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, that a general permission to Locate on the Waste Lands of the Crown, would be more acceptable to the Militia, than setting apart for that purpose a particular Tract in each District, as heretofore intended; NOTICE is hereby given, that the Militia who served during the late War with the United States of America, in the First Flank Companies, in the Provincial Artillery, in the Incorporated Regiment, in the Corps of Artillery Drivers, in the Provincial Dragoons, in the Marine and General Staff of the Militia, will, upon due Certificate of their respective Service from the Adjutant General, receive Tickets of Location from the Surveyor General, for the portion of Land ordered by His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, and, on due proof of having performed the Settlement Duty, will receive Patent Grants.

N. B. By express Command of His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, the Patents will be gratuitous, but the Settlement Duty in no case dispensed with.

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, Oct 19.

A dreadful accident occurred at Little Harwood, near Blackburn, on Wednesday last, by which two men were killed on the spot, two others were so shockingly bruised that they have since died of their wounds, and a fifth lies in a most deplorable state with little chance of recovery, and another man & a boy are also much bruised. The accident was occasioned by the explosion of a steam boiler at the mouth of a pit which Col. Hargreaves and two other gentlemen are now sinking for coals. The boiler weighs about four tons, and was carried, it is supposed, about fifty yards high, and fell 65 yards from the place where it was working. It was seen in its transit by many persons at a considerable distance. One piece of iron of a ton weight was thrown fifty yards, and several stones & slates were found at a hundred yards from the place they had occupied. The building which contained the engine was left with scarcely one stone upon another. One of the unfortunate sufferers was carried by the violence of the explosion to a distance of eighty yards, and lived several hours after he was taken up. Three of the men who have been killed have left families; the fourth was a stranger, and it is not known whether he was married or not: he came from Low Moor Iron Works to inspect the engine, and had not been more than an hour on the premises when the dreadful occurrence took place. The loss of property is estimated at £2000.—Preston Chronicle.

Senile Activity.—Old Tam Huttson, game keeper to his Grace the Duke of Buccleugh and Queensberry, at Bowhill forest, Selkirkshire, has killed, within a fortnight, lately, with the help of Jem Fletcher, the gardener, at Bowhill, and through the course of the season, 175 brace of grouse, 115 brace of black cocks, 197 brace of partridges, 112 brace of hares, and 1 fox. One of the hares was 9½lbs. a black cock 5lb. 7oz. and a pheasant 5lb. 10oz. Old Tam, as the late Duke used to call him, is now 80 years of age, and partakes of the sports of the field the same as when he was 30. He has been upwards of 45 years in the Buccleugh family; this is the third Duke he is now serving. Old Tam has been 65 years on the moors; and, when 45, was followed by the appellation of "the one of the best shots in Scotland. In his younger days he was a famous jockey; and, in the late Duke's time, he rode a race with a gentleman, when justly applied. "Let this race once prevail, let political feelings once be admitted to affect the Administration of justice, there will at once be an end to all security for our liberty, our property and our laws. From this moment the word liberty ought to be struck out from our language, and the proud sounding name of a free Englishman must be heard no more in the mouths of the Ministers, or the Authority, my Lord Duke, who should dare to assume such a power as why public meetings unconstitutional—any & demi-gill, (to use for instance) who should take a step which would go to immediate or distant tote to our liberty, reverse the order of Judicial proceeding, arrest justice and mercy from the hands of the Sovereign, deserve to suffer and would most assuredly forfeit his life.

Hence arises the necessity of the subjects of the writers of the present day—if such are their constitutional views, no wonder at the country dreads and resents their return to power.

Every British subject has an undoubted right to meet quietly, and to express his sentiments on the situation of the country, and the conduct of those who manage her affairs. But no one has a right, under the flag of peace, to assemble and promulgate sentiments and resolutions contrary to the wise Laws and the constitutional Government under which we live, and, in place of bringing forward grievances that can be redressed, demand a total subversion of that Government. Gracious Heaven, if their demand is not complied with, they will attain their object by force.

None have, or ought to have such a liberty as this; and under no other Government on earth could such proceedings and such daring insults have been tolerated or suffered to last.

Who were the Leaders that moved the Manchester Meeting, and now stimulate the people to Revolution? The Radical Reformers! My Lord Duke, this is a blasphemous defiance, and a most unjustifiable attack upon Justice! Most I—and, from a band, or bands, inflamed and directed by such an unprincipled man, can any thing but injustice, violence, and mischief flow? Does your Grace conceive that we have no Hoote or Carlisles in Scotland? It is to be lamented, in fact, that the Radical Leaders in this city, men and women, have nightly meetings in their houses, where the blasphemy and infidelity of Paine and Carlile are read, inculcated, admired—believed! Need your Grace wonder, that amongst us human laws are derided, when the laws of Heaven are denied! Is it surprising that there should be treason against the throne, when there is a rebellion against God? Can we wonder your Grace, that pending the judicial investigation now going on, that other Ministers nor Magistrates dare publish any vindication of their conduct, which, whether true or false, would go to the prejudice of the accused. We are any administration, of their servants, to act in this illegal manner, justly might the British nation call for judgment on their guilty heads!

Unwarrantable as is this demand, another is made of an equally dangerous and unconstitutional kind. "Let the Legislature," says Earl Grosvenor, and in whose sentiments your Grace appears to agree, "shield its authority, with out reserve, to the investigation of impartial Committees to Parliament, which will alone give satisfaction to the country."

My Lord Duke, the administration of the laws of this country is committed to the hands of the Sovereign. No man, or body of men, dare usurp his rights, or wrest this prerogative out of his hand. Under his direction the law must take its course. If the Deputies he appoints act partially—if they oppress or wrong any one, the House of Commons, on the grand inquest of the nation, will investigate the charge. This body can impeach and conduct the impeachment, but the House of Peers, of which your Grace is a Member, is the only body that can try and decide the question. Mercy, or the execution of the sentence, belongs then the prerogative of the Crown.

To act otherwise would be to render the Sovereign a cypher, and the whole population of the country a mere tribe of British Poor may, in this manner, rejudge the conduct of the judicial authorities of the country; but, as a Member, or he ought not—he cannot prejudge their conduct, on the proceedings which are under consideration. This mighty pillar of the British Constitution is suspended our liberties, properties, and lives.

My Lord Duke, Radical Reform and Universal Suffrage are names, but what are their objects and intentions? Is it not, that the multitude shall have the power to pre-judge every question—to accuse, condemn, and punish, as the prejudices and the passions of the moment may dictate? So that the life of the meanest subject is at the mercy of the Crown, and throw it amongst an exasperated multitude, where it could never be found?

Is not this what Whigs demand? Shall they obtain it? No! in the words of Lord Chatham, "Never, never, never, when justly applied." Let this practice once prevail, let political feelings once be admitted to affect the Administration of justice, there will at once be an end to all security for our liberty, our property and our laws. From this moment the word liberty ought to be struck out from our language, and the proud sounding name of a free Englishman must be heard no more in the mouths of The Ministers, or the Authority, my Lord Duke, who should dare to assume such a power as why public meetings unconstitutional—any & demi-gill, (to use for instance) who should take a step which would go to immediate or distant tote to our liberty, reverse the order of Judicial proceeding, arrest justice and mercy from the hands of the Sovereign, deserve to suffer and would most assuredly forfeit his life.

Hence arises the necessity of the subjects of the writers of the present day—if such are their constitutional views, no wonder at the country dreads and resents their return to power.

Every British subject has an undoubted right to meet quietly, and to express his sentiments on the situation of the country, and the conduct of those who manage her affairs. It is to be lamented, in fact, that the Radical Leaders in this city, men and women, have nightly meetings in their houses, where the blasphemy and infidelity of Paine and Carlile are read, inculcated, admired—believed! Need your Grace wonder, that amongst us human laws are derided, when the laws of Heaven are denied! Is it surprising that there should be treason against the throne, when there is a rebellion against God? Can we wonder that wicked men march with hostile intentions against the Laws and Justice of their country, when we perceive them rushing headlong against the thick bosses of the Almighty's buckler—despising his mighty wrath—providing eternal perdition—and defying the Omnipotent Arm! —What, my Lord Duke, is it come to this, that the nation is delivered to Europe—which tore the tinsel from the head, and the sceptre from the hand, of the strongest and the fiercest tyranny that ever lorded it over mankind—that the whose name and power is felt and respected to the uttermost corners of the earth—is spurned, as a nation, in the dust—and in all her cities, should submit to be dictated to by a set of turbulent wretches, and quietly bear to hear Hunt or Cartwright insulting their authorities, declaring the public peace and tranquility dependent on their nod? Is it possible, in a populous country, ever which your Grace is Lord Lieutenant, that our peace, our property, and safety depends upon a billet from a Hunt, although in the distance of 400 miles? Yet alas, for shame, my Lord Duke! is our nobility and our population become so tame and so degraded as to suffer themselves in this way to be brow beaten, insulted, and threatened. Can the descendant of a Douglas meekly submit to such a dictation? I trow not.

These daring demagogues are not only to have a Constitution corresponding to their unsettled ideas, but all that have been done under ours is to be reversed under theirs. The national creditor robbed of his property. Let your Grace's lord and the same hand that blots out a fraction of the national debt may—nay, will partition your estate, or divide your property in the same "just order of the day," and cannot be checked till, through prescription and blood, every vestige or property changes master, and the aristocracy is no more. Universal Suffrage may at present have no such views. But embarked, they will turn out to be the same. It will lead to perpetrate, with exultation, deeds the bare mention of which would at present fill them with the deepest horror. Still they would not go on. Power cannot stop the hurricane in its course. No! they might as well attempt to restrain the lightning's flash, or collect the scattered clouds of yesterday.

The question at present is not, whether Whigs are to get in and the Tories to be turned out, but whether Universal Suffrage, is to be allowed to devour them all. This is the point at issue, my Lord Duke, but we cannot tell how or when it may be folded up. Even children at our doors and infants at our breasts proclaim there is danger, because "Hunt is dead, and we are going to Waterloo, on Saturday, the 26th of the Moon Hilarole, answering to the 16th of October 1819.

"By the negligence and misconduct of the superintendants of the Imperial Mint for the last three or four years, those who are hereafter named, having their office to their private profit, and to give scope to their innate perfidy, have appropriated to themselves more than 30,000 guineas of money to which they have thus constituted themselves debtors and have consumed that sum in building themselves a palace in the city, & on various other objects of luxury and ostentation: thus dissipating the Ottoman Treasury.

"Besides what they have permitted at their own residence, they have caused chapels to be erected in the houses of persons in their employment, and, bringing to them Catholic priests, they have had the audacity to exercise publicly the false religion even within the capital of the Ottoman Empire. It is then one of the Duc-ghes named Kirkor, that traitor punished with death well merited, whose miserable corpse is this

Adjutant General's Office,
York, 6th March, 1820.

AT a General Court Martial assembled at the Forty Mile Creek, in the Township of Grimsby, on Monday the 24th day of January last, and continued by adjournments to the 31st January 1820, pursuant to Militia General Orders of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, dated 4th January 1820, and in compliance with the Statute 59th George 3d. Chapter 12, was arraigned Colonel Richard Beasley of the 2d. Regiment of Gore Militia, on the following charges, viz:

FIRST CHARGE.—For disobedience of Orders, in not having reported his name and rank of the senior officer of the 2d. Regiment of York Militia, actually engaged with the Enemy at Lundy's Lane, on the 25th July 1814, for the information of His Excellency Lieutenant Governor Gore, as requested of him by the Adjutant General's letter of the 13th February 1816.

SECOND CHARGE.—For neglect of duty on the 4th June 1814, in not calling out the Regiment under his command, agreeably to Law, and for going out of the way on or about that day, that he might not be seen by His Excellency Lieutenant Governor Gore, whom, he knew, was approaching to inspect the Regiment.

THIRD CHARGE.—For or disrespectful or unofficer-like conduct, generally, during the late war with the United States of America, as reported to His Excellency Francis Gore, Esquire, late Lieutenant Governor, particularly for having, in the month of April 1813, after the capture of York, by the American Troops, under Major General Dearborn, voluntarily placed himself in the hands of the Enemy.

FOURTH CHARGE.—For having on the 25th July 1814, when in command of the 2d. Regiment of York Militia, attached to the right division of the Army, withdrawn himself from the Regiment before it went into action with the Enemy at Lundy's Lane, and remained in the rear during the action.

Opinion and Sentence:

The Court having maturely weighed and considered the evidence on the part of the prosecution, as well as the defence delivered in defence, are of opinion, that Colonel Beasley is not guilty of the first charge, as the letter has been proved that Colonel Beasley ever received the said Adjutant General's letter of the 13th February 1816

With respect to the first part of the second charge, the Court are of opinion that Colonel Beasley is not guilty

With respect to the fourth charge, the Court are of opinion that Colonel Beasley is not guilty.

The Court having found Colonel Beasley guilty of the first part of the second charge, namely, for neglect of duty on the 4th June 1816, in not calling out the Regiment under his command, according to Law" they do therefore adjudge him to be censured by the Lieutenant Governor with you is necessarily limited. Despresence at His Excellency may be pleased to direct.

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor has caused the following letter to be written to Colonel Beasley:

The following memorial being adopted unanimously, was ordered to be signed by the president and secretary of the delegation, and transmitted to our representatives, to be laid before the Congress of the United States.

Your memorialists present themselves to your honors de houses, as a portion of the independent agriculturalists of Virginia. In that character, we design not to harrass our representatives with high-wrought pictures of distress, which their wisdom could not have anticipated, and cannot remove. Neither can we bring ourselves to detail in the language of complaint, much less of reproach, those evils which we endure in common, not only with every class and denomination of our fellow citizens- but with almost every rank and description of civilized man. We solicit not the fostering care or patronage of the legislature, to alleviate by bounties, monopolies, or protecting duties, calamities, in their nature as inevitable as they are incurable, by legislative interposition, because, resulting from a combination of circumstances, over which our legislature can exercise no control. War is an unnatural and calamitous state; its evils must be felt sooner or later; and not less severely, by being deferred. The transition from war to peace was sudden—and found us like the rest of the world, unprepared. But we can bear patiently the penalty of our own improvidence, convinced that our distresses will be but temporary, and recollecting that they were preceded by twenty years of almost uninterrupted prosperity. In this frame of mind, which we recommend to the imitation of our more discontented brethren; we have only to solicit respectfully but earnestly, from your wisdom and experience, that we be left to ourselves, to disembarrass our own affairs by active industry and strict economy; instead of being placed at the mercy of interested individuals, who would flatter us with relief, by abridging our comforts, increasing our expense, and diverting to their own pockets, that portion of the produce of our labour, which differently applied might serve to extricate us from our present difficulties. The undefined projects, and extravagant claims of the manufacturing association, collected from their circulars, reports of committees, and other publications, could alone lead us to apprehend that we may not be left to this repose, which we so earnestly solicit, a which the difficulties of our present situation so imperiously demand.—We have always suspected the policy of forcing any branch of trade or manufacture by bounties, monopolies, or protecting duties. But without entering into the discussion of the general question, we would respectfully suggest, that no period more unfavourable than the present could be selected for the commencement of an experimental course of political economy, beginning with the taxation of the many for the emolument of few. When we consider the taxes already imposed on foreign manufactures, (averaging perhaps 25 per cent,) and estimate the amount of freight, double commissions, insurance and various smaller charges incident to shipping and transporting to this county the products of the foreign artizan, a moderate calculation will give to the American manufacturer, an advantage of forty per cent.—If* to this immense advantage over the European competitor, we add the cheap terms, on which the chief necessaries of life, meat, bread & fuel can be procured, the abundance in which the raw materials are produced, our larger exemption from the whole of that frightful catalogue of oppressive taxes, which, barely to read, makes the American citizen shudder; but under the accumulating weight of which the foreign artizan must labour; and still further, on the authority of the advocates of protecting duties, a considerable capital employed and numerous laborers starving in idleness, and you exhibit a series of advantages on the side of the American manufacturer, which would seem to put competition, in our own market, entirely out of the question. If with such overwhelming odds in his favor, the American declines to compete with the foreign manufacturer, we must conclude either, that capital is wanting, to fit him out for the trial, or he scorns the consideration of such profits as would satisfy his opponent. If the former conclusion be true, it demonstrates the impropriety at tempting at this time to force manufactures by law—for as capital is essentially necessary, and cannot be forced by law, we had better await its slow growth, from the gradual operation of the usual causes, and wherever it arrives at sufficient maturity, manufactures will follow without force. But if on the other hand, our manufacturers are so unpatriotic to enrich themselves as to disdain the gradual accumulation of moderate profits, we submit respectfully to your wisdom, the impolicy of subjecting so large a portion of your fellow citizens to such unreasonable cupidity—of laying them at the mercy of an association, who (competition being removed) will no longer consider the intrinsic value of an article, or what price would afford a fair profit to the manufacturer, but how much the necessities of the consumer would enable them to extort. Of this spirit, we have a sufficient specimen during our late war with Great Britain.

In reply to these arguments we are told that many manufacturing establishments have been ruined, for want of protecting duties.—We doubt not the fact of ruin; but we more than doubt the cause assigned for it; we strongly suspect, that on fair investigation, most of the failures may be accounted for very differently. For instance—1st. By embarking in business on fictitious capital; the sudden recall of which, left the adventurers as they originally were, without funds. 2d. Engaging in speculations unconnected with their factories, and by the failure of those ruining their establishments. 3d. From the impatience of growing rich, by the gradual accumulation of moderate gains, stimulating them to attempt establishments and projects beyond their means. Few, we believe of those, who commenced with real capitals, and pursued their business prudently, have failed to improve their fortunes. The greater part of this description of persons acknowledge with honest candour, that they are sufficiently protected. But, as we have forced none of our fellow-citizens to embark their capitals in the precarious speculation of establishing manufactures, perhaps before their time—nay, as they have voluntarily involved themselves in ruinous projects not from patriotic motives, but views purely selfish and founded on the fallacious prospect of a protected war; we see no reason why they should call upon us to reinstate them, by a heavy sacrifice, and this too, at a time, when it is with the utmost difficulty, any of us can fulfil our own personal engagements, and many are reduced to the necessity of sacrificing their property, to satisfy their creditors. Under these circumstances, we hope that your honorable houses will not deem unreasonable our respectful remonstrance against any increase of burthen, beyond the necessary expence of our government. One favorite argument, insisted on by the manufacturers, is to set aside a shot on the great body of the American people, that indignation will not suffer us to pass it unnoticed—to wit: that the establishment of home manufactures, is necessary to keep the people firm to their duty, in time of war. Thus, more than insinuating, that the millions of independent high minded agriculturalists who people our extensive territory; constituting, at once, the pride and strength of the nation, are to be taught the value of independence, and the necessity of self defence, by the operations of an inconsiderable number of manufacturers scattered through the country. In every nation, with whose internal affairs we are familiarly acquainted, the landed interest has been proverbial for liberality in comparison with any other class; and we proudly believe that the day will never arrive when the American yeomen will not suffer himself, patiently, to be shorn to the quick, in defence of the independence or honour of his country, while, if he but touch a bristle of the manufacturing interest the whole sty is in an uproar. We wish not to be placed under such protections, especially, when their projects for our safety are accompanied by the alarming declaration, that they consider the election of a President, a Governor, or a representative of the people, as uninteresting in comparison with a question on the fabrication of druggets, calicoes and pen-knives."

The specious vision of supplying all our own wants, by our own labor, and thus being enabled to insulate ourselves from the other members of the human family, we look upon as a mere phantom, conjured up for the purpose of luring us into a prohibitory system. Could such a vision be realized, we would deprecate its influence, as equally hostile to the advancement of science and duration of liberty. We do not envy the condition of the Chinese, the only people completely abandoned to this chimera; amongst whom science has been retrograde for a thousand years. The whole energies of the human mind reduced to the servile talent of imitation, and man degraded to a state of abject, grovelling slavery. Compare the timid slave creeping through shallows in his clumsy junk, with the American seaman, "among the tumbling mountains of ice of the arctic circle, penetrating to the antipodes, and engaged under the ocean set of the south Pole;" and say that he has not been squeezed into this hardy form, or inhaled this daring spirit from the constraints of a watchful and suspicious government, but that through a wise and salutary neglect, a generous nature has been suffered to take its own way to perfection."

We are firmly persuaded that the best interests of men and of nations are promoted by free and extensive intercourse one with another. The great object of nations ought to be, to procure the greatest possible quantity of produce, with the least possible expenditure of labor & of capital; this can be effected only by permitting the people to purchase such articles as they can buy cheaper than they can fabricate. Thus would be produced a most unrestricted state of commerce, permitting every country to employ its capital and industry to the greatest advantage in devoting them to pursuits adapted to the soil and climate of each, and consonant with the genius of their respective inhabitants. For these, and other considerations equally cogent, your memorialists feel themselves constrained to remonstrate against the predictions of the manufacturing interests, as of a highly dangerous tendency, whether considered with respect to their influence on our government, by establishing the precedent of investing merchants with peculiar privileges and immunities at the expense of the rest; a measure pregnant with the most fearful consequences, being as inconsistent with the principles of justice as incompatible with the spirit of our free constitution. Their tendency to demoralize our people by the introduction of smuggling, an evil inseparable from high protecting duties, and one from which the united navies of Europe and America could not guard a coast as extensive as ours. Their effect on our revenue, already diminished by protecting duties, without producing a corresponding energy on the part of our manufacturers, and which, if further diminished by an increase of tariff, and by deriving capital from the purchase of public lands, must necessarily call for a system of internal taxation, in the present state of our efforts productive of incalculable distress. Commerce must decline under such a system: with its decline, our seamen must diminish, and our gallant navy, after achieving more than our fondest hopes could anticipate, dwindle into insignificance. This sacrifice, too, we are called upon to make, that our manufacturers may be enabled to furnish us with cottons and woollens fifty per cent. higher than we could procure them in a foreign market.

With this view of the subject, your memorialists pray that no further protection be granted to manufactures, excepting such, as in your wisdom, you may deem essential for national defence, and that the existing duties be so reduced as to produce the greatest possible revenue;—and we revert to our original prayer to be left to ourselves to disembarrass our own affairs, without being called on to repair the losses of any other class, still less to advance them to wealth and power at the expense of the best interests of the American people.

Be-weries of London, [says a late traveller over the British Islands,) "may justly be ranked amongst its greatest curiosities, and the establishment of Messrs. Barclay, & Co. is one of the most considerable. A steam engine, of the power of 30 horses does the greatest part of the work; for although there are nearly 100 hundred men employed, and a great number of horses, these are mostly for the out-door work, the interior appears quite solitary—Large rakes with chains moved by an invisible power, stir to the very bottom, the immense mass of malt in boilers 12 feet deep; elevators which nobody touches carry up to the summit of the building 2300 bushels of malt a day, thence distributed through wooden channels to the different places where the process is carried on. Casks of truly gigantic sizes are ready to receive the liquors. One of them contains 3000 barrels. Now 22 eight barrels to a ton, this is equal to a ship of 373 tons. By the side of this are other enormous vessels, the smallest of which, containing about 800 barrels, are worth when full, 3000 pounds sterling each. All this immense apparatus is so arranged that every part is accessible, and the whole is contained under one roof. The stock of liquor is estimated at 300,000 pounds; the barrels alone in which it is carried about to customers cost 80,000 pounds; and the whole capital is not less than half a million sterling; 250,000 barrels of beer are sold annually, which would load a fleet of 150 merchantmen of the burden of 200 tons each. The building is incombustible—walls of brick and floors of iron."—ib.

Discovery of a Fossile Crocodile on the banks of the Maine.

Some time ago there was found at Dartmouth, near Manheim, in Bavaria, in a mine of pea-ore, (iron ore in the shape of peaze and beans) a few feet under ground, the petrified skeleton of a narrow jawed crocodile, the gavial of antiquity. This is the only specimen hitherto known of such an amphibious animal, of which, as far as we are aware, none now exist in the waters of the earth. It is quite different from the common narrow jawed crocodile; for example, the large and small teeth succeed each other in a regular alternation.—Banks of the Maine, Nov 7th 1819.

To the Free and Independent Electors of the Town of York.

GENTLEMEN,

A Report is in General circulation that our Parliament, in providing for the more equal Representation of the People, are about to bestow upon you the valuable privilege of sending a Member to the Commons House of Assembly. Should such a measure pass, you will necessarily be soon called to the first exercise of that privilege; and though others, I am told, have even been before me in declaring their intentions, I trust it can hardly be objected to me, that I have lost time in acquainting you with my determination to become a Candidate for the Honor of Representing you in Parliament.

It is usual on such occasions for the Candidate to say something of his principles and intentions, and perhaps also of his ability to be useful—but though young, I am too old in your acquaintance to make this necessary here. I have grown up with the Town of which you are the Inhabitants, and either in private acquaintance, or in the discharge of a public duty, I am known to very many, perhaps to all of you—I hope I possess your confidence and good opinion—I have endeavoured to deserve it.

Occupied in the discharge of an arduous situation, and engaged in a laborious profession, no private motives of interest or advancement prompt me to solicit this additional duty, honorable and important as it is, and concious that my character and conduct give me a fair claim to this mark of your confidence, disappointment in attaining it would occasion no further mortification than as it would give me fewer opportunities of proving with how much sincerity I am

Gentlemen,
Your most obedient
Humble servant,
JOHN BEVERLY ROBINSON.

DEPARTURE OF THE KING.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent, accompanied by the Hon. H. Hatzell, Esq. Colonel Davies, the R. S. Bishop of the Presbyterians, and Messrs. Quin and Stewart, Esquires, with officers of the Militia, recently visited the School of Rural Economy in Duke-street, Lincoln's-Inn-Fields. Constitution.

The Duke, at the request of several noblemen and others, who have long distinguished themselves by their zeal and liberality in doing good to the poor, as well as by all the lower classes of society, and who were impressed with the utility of encouraging the redemption and amendment of many of those for which we are now beholden to the better husbandry and industry of the country. Liquorice, saffron, madder, and a variety of similar products, once formed a considerable part of the usual crops of our farms, the greater portion of them is now grown on the Continent; while the more generous supply us with numerous articles manufactured for domestic purposes, such as matting, baskets, &c. &c. many of which we unnecessarily possess the principal materials in the greatest abundance. One very prominent instance is to be seen in the article of flax. It is well known that this plant is partially grown in many spheres in England, and the production in parts found superior to the imported; but very little comparatively into this country by last year was to the amount of £1,700,000 sterling, as will be found in the Custom-house returns. The different articles, as well as the well known Dutch sequence, which the preparation of flax has occasioned, such inventions have, on several occasions, proved to be a source of great encouragement. So far, however, is our present system, only a merely temporary method, that there is perhaps no property which requires more to be comprehended in all its various branches by as many persons capable of the best degree of attention as flax; and few would have more occasion to know its various processes to teach such persons as to enable them to direct the hands of young persons, as beyond all doubt they would be accomplished to spinners, dyers, &c. and manufacturers. It will, therefore, be evident to all persons that such a plan as this is intimately connected with the prosperity of the poor of this country, and to every person taught that he ought to put it in practice when ever it might be acquired [illegible]

With the progressive of flax, as practised in the establishment, and the different processes of making cloth, are productive of great saving to the nation, as well as producing cloth, &c. of very superior quality; and that the establishing such employment for the poor of large towns, &c. will add much to their comfort and happiness, as well as to their support and the consequent employment of agricultural labourers. That collecting for the different kinds of spinning-wheels and other machines for assisting manual labour, will be the means of ascertaining their respective merits, and enabling persons who may be desirous of settling the poor to work, to procure the best information as to any improvement that can be made from time to time in any of the different branches of their trade, with considerable advantage will arise from the facility with which persons may be made acquainted with the different kinds of labour necessary to form a similar establishment. This was proved by Mr. Sargent, who having lately sent four persons to the school, they have, after two weeks practice, returned to their poor-house in the country, and by their genius the whole of the people at that establishment have been roused, and are now actively and profitably employed. specimens of very fine flax and yarn were shown by this gentleman to his royal highness, who expressed great satisfaction at the advantage which the parish at large had already experienced. Several quantity brought into this country by the house, and found work for themselves, since they discovered that they could work it very considerably more cheaply than the Irish, and are now actively employed. DUNN'S SHEEP.

On Monday morning last, we were treated to an exhibition of nineteen sheep, of the Bakewell or Dishley breed, raised on the farm of Mr. Christopher Dunn, of this city. These sheep were exhibited on the capitol or public square and excited the admiration of a numerous body of spectators for their size and general appearance.

There were ten ewes from three to four years old this spring their average weight may be estimated at 250lbs. per quarter of 100lbs. per animal, looking to the total of 1900lbs. Wool on an average 6lbs. or total 114lbs. The whole were sold to Mr Gibbons for two hundred dollars, upwards of ten dollars and fifty cents per head.

They were fattened since the latter part of last fall, on Indian meal, corn and oats alternately, changing from one to the other, every few days. Potatoes once a day since the 1st of January, with a little oil cake.

In the American Farmer, of the 31st ult Mr Skinner gives us a brief account of twenty sheep, of the same breed, raised by Mr. Bevans, eminent granger of Penn Town, Delaware, the total weight of which was 2,333 lbs. exceeding Mr Dunn's about 16 lbs. on an average. Mr Barney is not only perhaps the first granger in the United States, but his land is far superior to that of Mr. Dunn, more especially agreeably more favorable. He has the advantage [illegible] of resiling personally on his farm; whereas Mr Dunn resides in town, and only visits his farm occasionally. Mr. Dunn contemplates visiting Mr. Barney, in the course of the present year, for the purpose of procuring the whole stock of management, as Mr. D. is desirous of bringing his breed of sheep to the highest state of perfection, of which they are capable on his farm, and in this quarter We hope his tour may tend to the improvement of our flocks, and produce that profit to himself which ought ever to attend such useful enterprises.

FORTUNE TELLING.

A clerk in one of the French offices of police was some time ago appointed to superintend the legal proceedings in relation to a fortune teller. The following anecdote will give some information concerning the general principles on which the art is founded; he discovered, upon the whole, it is merely a calculation of probabilities, which, if managed attentively might become susceptible of successful application; and he thought it would be a pleasant thing to keep company with himself. He began by dividing the workable matter, namely, public credulity, into twelve parts, one for those who married and chastened, misters and servants, clergy and laity, nobles and commoners, &c. He then set down the general accidents common to all classes, the special accidents more common in each, and finally, the more rare and individual accidents. He thus acquired a mass of about four thousand of the accidents of human life, which are constantly occurring, it must be confessed, a tolerably good foundation to tell fortunes by. To the Free and Independent Electors of the Counties of YORK & SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

HAVING been honored with your confidence, and called by your suffrages to the very honorable duty of Representing you in the present Parliament, I need expect but my prospect of attaining to the same distinguished favor at the next, will depend alike together on the sense you entertain of the manner in which I have performed the trust you reposed in me.

Placed more immediately under the eye of my Constituents, it is altogether to your power, as it is entirely your province, to estimate the part I have taken.

It is far from me to presume, that with every wish to promote your best interests, I may not in many cases have erred; but I may at least be permitted to say, what I can declare with sincerity that I am conscious of nothing which I wish to excuse.

Among the objects which have occupied the attention of the present Parliament, they have wisely provided for the more equal Representation of the People; and, in consequence of the provision they have made you will have to vote for one to fill up an additional Member to guard your interests, and account for the welfare of the Province.

Several of my friends, I observe, animated with a very praiseworthy ambition, have eagerly presented themselves to your notice. I may be an usurpation in the present Parliament, put it out of my power to address myself so immediately to you on the subject of the election, as I might securely trust to the steadiness and sincerity of that attachment which I was happy to witness on a former occasion, and which will not believe to be that it could be shaken by the silly and absurd reports which may happen to have I and there way to circulate.

I cannot but consider as highly honorable, a station, to which the good opinion of my fellow-subjects has the right passport; and shall be happy to receive a proof of your continued confidence, by being chosen as one of your Representatives in the ensuing Parliament.

I will make no boast to you of my independence—you know the nature of my employments and resources, and a heavy welfare must depend on yours; at the same time, I trust you think me much to honor any unworthy attempt to sway popularity by claiming credit for greater purity of intention or honesty of conduct, because I do not happen to be connected with any party of trust or confidence under a Government whom only object is and must be to promote the happiness and prosperity of the People.

I hope my character both public and private, is such as to entitle me to your confidence; & though I hold a highly honorable and responsible situation under His Majesty's Government, I trust the same Integrity and Exertion I have always manifested when serving my King, will continue to animate and guide my conduct in the faithful discharge of my duties, and supporting the Rights and Privileges of my Fellow Subjects, my family, and myself, I must be and are the same.

Should you do me the Honor to elect me one of your Representatives, to serve you in Parliament, I shall, to the utmost of my power, endeavour to deserve the confidence of your favor, should I be a Candidate at a future Election.

Country: I therefore now solicit this honor, confidently persuasive, that my views are well founded, and that yours will not be disappointed.

Though twenty years residence have not necessarily honored me with a personal acquaintance with most of you, I cannot there to think that this responsible trust will be discharging to my own sentiments generally on Legislation in this province. I therefore profess to you an affectionate regard for British liberty and British Constitution; and that your Representative, whoever he may be, should, is the discharge of his duties, never forget that the best office with approved security, will be accepted. FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, March 5

On this day the council of ministers continued the examination of the persons charged with Thom. Thomson. They were escorted in hacks, and under a military escort to Whitehall. There have as yet, only several new arrests taken place. The house in Hermit street, where Thistlewood had passed the night of his arrest, is undergoing a search under the direction of a magistrate. A printing-machine, employed in a type-foundery, appears to have furnished the conspirators with all the bills with which they were armed. It is expected that the trial for his trial, and expresses a lively desire to see his wife. Preston, one of the most active radicals, has been secured some days since, as to accomplice in the conspirators.

No papers have as yet been found on any of the conspirators; nevertheless it is believed that considerations of the public can be traced to the outsides. A Gazette affirms that on Monday last, about 200 individuals have presented themselves before the post office, at Leeds, at the hour of the arrival of the London mail, waiting impatiently for news from town. Suspicions are now excited on a person of 60 to Thistlewood's journey to Grenada a few weeks since. The French journal, it appears was totally unapprised of the conspiracy.

It is even said that the conspirators have written down all the same wages of those victims that were to have fallen.

The ministers had yesterday the dinner which was so much interrupted on the day the late conspiracy was to have been put into execution; and a strong detachment of police officers were stationed round the place where they dined.

We have the satisfaction to state that the disturbances in Rose shire, have been much exaggerated in the Scots Papers. We are assured, upon unquestionable authority, that they were from causes in no degree of a political character; but from the diminution of the income of the peasantry, by the high price of corn, the product of their industry, which, upon individual grounds, (as they conceived,) could not short notice, had required them to quit their farms. It is also satisfactorily added, that since the disturbances broke out, they have not manifested, in any manner, a political tendency.

It is stated in an Edinburgh paper of Thursday, The Star, that a letter had been received by the Lord Advocate, from the Sheriff Depute of Renshire, informing him Lossiniop that a force of not less than 500 men, and that the police force would be necessary to quell the riot, the Highlanders being in full possession of the district.—Tipes.

"I am sorry those deluded Ribbonmen have been assembling in the parish of Feakle, and inducing the people to take oaths, and taking arms for some nights back. On Friday night, about 500 of them met at Cadeen bridge near the boundary between the parishes of Feakle and Killon. They began to assemble about seven o'clock; they were blowing horns and hurraing, and about ten o'clock they marched to the parish church of Killon, where they commenced administering oaths, and robbing for arms. Mr. T. Extract from an Address by C. H. Hall, Esq. to the Windham Agricultural Society, Connecticut.

Of all domestic animals, Cattle are of the greatest utility and comfort to man; therefore the more perfect as regards form, size and mildness of temper, the more useful as well as profitable they are. Size and beauty of form ensure a market, while docility of temper proves a comfort to the farmer, and is the first elements on the dairy; besides the best formed ox has another advantage, as it is admitted such as one ever fifteen more readily than those of inferior shape. In general, the oxen of our immediate vicinity are excellent both in size and form; still, in the latter particular a considerable deficiency is apparent in point of compactness, as well as an extension of fleshiness in various parts of the carcase, in ov er to conduce to the objects we advocate. My remarks may perhaps be more fully understood, by reference to the pictures which I now lay before the Society, exhibiting a Bull, and an Ox, of the Hertfordshire breed, which I approbend are models of perfection. It will be perceived that those animals are equal in thickness at the shoulders, a circumstance of the greatest importance, from the most vigorous.

The present system of culling the fine from the coarse breeds, in the district of the United States, is a most judicious one, and never should we have sheep of large size, covered with fine wool, until coarse fibres are correctly monstrous error. Another remark I make. To keep fine wool sheep they must be kept well, and I must most, that more profit arises from mutton well fed, than from those neglected in their particular. My opinion is, that I am permitted to give an opinion I should of the English Hunter is of all the most suitable, as he combines, in a great degree, form, good size, vigor and strength of action, all of which is produced by crossing the full blooded race with the common mare. The first cross is called the half bred, the second cross, and we should never run over the full blood than this last cross, making a three quarters blood. A purpose of this description is the only one, for all purposes, either for the draft or saddle.

Bone is equally good, as from the Arabian the full blooded racer is produced in the highest degree, and it is a well known fact, that the largest Bones are not by any means the strongest. An opinion has gone abroad that the large bones of the heart of Penney [illegible] are the strongest, but as this species of bone is generally more expensive, being a greater feeder, but of less strength and vigor, for all purposes, than the middle sized, and is a state requisite of the horse. Had we not, in a great degree, the heavy moulded horse would be more useful, as he is slow and fit for ploughing the ground; but he should never be put to other labor, as he is unnerves by a standstill, sluggish in temper, and absolutely unfit for the saddle on account of his heavy load across the loins. The other hand, the blood horse is excellent in the gears, in the stage coach, before the plough, to the cordield, or upon the road to the saddle, at the same time he is more enduring. Many imagine, and it is a generally received opinion that the blood horse is small in size, and too fine a breeds of hogs from their connection with those of the pure Bye-field breed, for by breeding continually from the same stock will produce eventually a race of animals of small size, and a degeneration in the essential portion of fattening easily. The best plan is to keep them at the due distance from the original stock, to ensure profit.

I now have arrived at the last head of my arrangement, and must beg your patience while I speak of that on which I think of all animals, the Horse: an animal, although of less value to man than the ox, and whose every thing into view [illegible] many particulars superior to the latter animals, and one absolutely necessary in our accommodation and comfort. It is our province to take upon the uses of his animal; they are various to each one of us; but my province is to deplore the little attention bestowed to the rearing of horses, although we have the means of so doing these, but must prove not only more useful but valuable to the farmer.

There was a time, when New-England could boast of a race of Horses equal in most respects to those of any country, and where is the breed now? lost by want of care and proper attention. The true Narragansett Horse was a noble animal, and when his race was crossed about forty-five years ago by the Arabian horse [illegible] was introduced, a horse was procured ourvalued in every particular of excellence. So much was the blood sought after, that agents from all parts of the United States were despatched to our State to procure a portion of it; finally by degrees, one by one, the whole race disappeared, not leaving a so stary cross blood to procreate the species. The Ranger Arabian, by the time, she should possess which we should all agree in; to wit, a small well turned head, lean neck, strait broad back deep hind quarters, small short legs and a large bag, with teats of good size, and well spread apart. The colour of the bag ought also to be attended to and one of a yellow colour is preferred, as being less liable to injury from cracks &c. in the teats. From what has been said, it is to be presumed that by a little attention in the selection of our stock, in the course of a few years, — should not have to look up to England, nor to any other country for a superior breed of cattle. We would undoubtedly already have a breed of cattle which with proper attention might in a short space of time vie with any in the world.

I now come to my second head—that of Sheep. Respecting them, my intention is to say but little, as for the few last years you have been almost entitled with productions treating of them—however, I may be allowed to remark, that inattention to these animals is very apparent since the mania for Merinos has subsided. This remissness is improper, for it will assert that no stock we have is more profitable, kept in due bounds, whether of the quantity or common breed. The former are undoubtedly the most profitable, but as prejudice is raging against them, I will not enlarge respecting them. To those who would have sheep of any breed, I will briefly mark that, to ensure profit none must be kept but such as are of good size, and shape; and the proper place for them is the pasture for stock only of those lambs of finer form, and the most vigorous.

The present system of culling the fine from the coarse breeds, in the district of the United States, is a most judicious one, and never should we have sheep of large size, covered with fine wool, until coarse fibres are correctly monstrous error. Bone is equally good, as from the Arabian the full blooded racer is produced in the highest degree, and it is a well known fact, that the largest Bones are not by any means the strongest. An opinion has gone abroad that the large bones of the heart of Penney [illegible] are the strongest, but as this species of bone is generally more expensive, being a greater feeder, but of less strength and vigor, for all purposes, than the middle sized, and is a state requisite of the horse. Had we not, in a great degree, the heavy moulded horse would be more useful, as he is slow and fit for ploughing the ground; but he should never be put to other labor, as he is unnerves by a standstill, sluggish in temper, and absolutely unfit for the saddle on account of his heavy load across the loins. The other hand, the blood horse is excellent in the gears, in the stage coach, before the plough, to the cordield, or upon the road to the saddle, at the same time he is more enduring. Many imagine, and it is a generally received opinion that the blood horse is small in size, and too fine a breeds of hogs from their connection with those of the pure Bye-field breed, for by breeding continually from the same stock will produce eventually a race of animals of small size, and a degeneration in the essential portion of fattening easily. The best plan is to keep them at the due distance from the original stock, to ensure profit.

I now have arrived at the last head of my arrangement, and must beg your patience while I speak of that on which I think of all animals, the Horse: an animal, although of less value to man than the ox, and whose every thing into view [illegible] many particulars superior to the latter animals, and one absolutely necessary in our accommodation and comfort. It is our province to take upon the uses of his animal; they are various to each one of us; but my province is to deplore the little attention bestowed to the rearing of horses, although we have the means of so doing these, but must prove not only more useful but valuable to the farmer.

There was a time, when New-England could boast of a race of Horses equal in most respects to those of any country, and where is the breed now? lost by want of care and proper attention. The true Narragansett Horse was a noble animal, and when his race was crossed about forty-five years ago by the Arabian horse [illegible] was introduced, a horse was procured ourvalued in every particular of excellence. So much was the blood sought after, that agents from all parts of the United States were despatched to our State to procure a portion of it; finally by degrees, one by one, the whole race disappeared, not leaving a so stary cross blood to procreate the species. Extract of a letter, dated Buenos Ayres, 4th January 1820.

A Chili mail is just arrived, which brings the pleasing news of lord Cochrane having destroyed the three Spanish ships of war, which proceeded from Cadiz in May for Lima. Enclosed you have the Gazette account of the first essay, which proved so substantial—and I am sorry to inform you, that in an action between the vessels of this govern ment and those of the Montenegros and Artigas, your friend Don Angel Hubac, had both his limbs shot away, and has died. The action was severe on both sides—it took place off San Nicholas.

The British Admiral, Sir Thomas Hardy, is now here with a squadron of 10 ships, viz: 2 of the line, 6 frigates and 2 sloops. What it all means, God knows. The 74's are at Montevideo.

BALTIMORE, April 18.

The Florida Question—The rumors, reduced to the assertions of the new Spanish Minister, are well founded. We have information which establishes the fact, that the Virtues is fully authorized to cede the possession of the Floridas to the United States, and to take further time to consider and adjust all the other subjects of controversy.

On the night of Tuesday, the 22d inst. the rebels from the counties of Roscommon and Galway may make a concert and movement through the pass towards Mayo, between Dunmoreenes and Belmont, having the advantage of about 8 hours start. A gentleman, who had been detached from thence on a few days before to Kilmaine, to observe their movements on that side.

Their numbers may probably have amounted to twelve or thirteen hundred men; and while a rebel column of 500 men was posted before Dunmoreenes, to keep the detachment stationed there in check, they passed into Mayo, broke into several columns, and proceeded towards the different villages, in the direction of Monicield and Ballindargan, to swear the people of those villages, and were immediately fallen in with, by a patrol of the 30th Regiment, under the direction of the Rev. Denis Browne, and checked in their proceedings.

In the mean time, notwithstanding the determination of those rebels to attack the post at Dunmoreenes, captain Crean, informed the resolution to detach a party to their rear to attack them, and accordingly making eight parties—three and putting a column of them to the route; but fearing they might attack Dunmoreenes, he countermarched, and lodged his prisoners in the barrack, when the symptoms of attack on the part of the insurgents continued to increase. He, therefore, immediately resolved to transmit the prisoners to Clare to the right hon. Denis Browne, under an escort of Yeomanry, who were attacked on the road near Ballindargan, by a party of rebels, collected together from the columns that had been previously dispersed. They were obliged to five four volleys on the insurgents, whom they drove off, after making their leader prisoner; and from the quantity of blood which appeared on the road, it is supposed many of the insurgents must have been severely wounded.

An express in the mean time reached Clare, when the right hon. Denis Browne & Co sent Browne advanced with a party of the 30th regiment, under the command of Major D'Arcy, to the assistance of the Yeomanry, and with them joined Ensign Bourke, Esq. Member for the County, his brother, Mr George Browne, & Dr. Keane of Castle-Connor, and a number of Gentlemen and Yeomen servants from Castle Mount-Garret. who succeeded in driving those miscreants into the County of Galway, without coming in contact with them, since which time the police have been reinforced and tranquility restored. I have the honor to be, my Lord, your very obedient servant. HENRY BROWNE.

Cobbett's Last Hoax.—Several of our friends seem to have supposed that the statement in our paper of yesterday, relative to the Ten Pound Subscription, was a pleasant fiction, in ish-wise of Cobbett's repeated and shameless attempts to milk the cow of the public, and his failures. To obviate this idea we sh-ll here lay before them a faithful transcript of the Circular to which we yesterday alluded, and which is signed in Cobbett's own hand writing—

LONDON, Feb. 25, 1820.

SIR,

You have already heard that I am a candidate for the City of Coventry. There is a Subscription on foot to defray the lawful expenses; but as sure as the Rome is the Devil-ish sight of money to carry in the out lying coves will not be sufficient, if ge rely sole-ly upon the ordinary comings-in of subscriptions. You must be certain, to raise the money. We shall be, I think, about £700 deficient, at the time when it will be wanted; and the object is too base to be obtained by any failure upon this occasion. A letter in the same words as this, is this day dispatched to twenty gentlemen; and if you, together with the rest of the worthies, will each of you ten pounds, I shall to a certainty be returned a Member for Coventry. There is no doubt at all about the whole of the money will be finally collected, and therefore, when that comes in from the public subscription, the ten pounds, which you express an wish to be contrary, shall be returned to you.

It is, I hope, hardly necessary for me to state to you, what are the views of this matter that you would have in the case of putting into my hands. It seems clear to day-light, that a change in the manner of conducting public affairs must take place, or that we are fast drawing with good strides to a bloody revolution. And I am of opinion that my stock of knowledge, my industry, and my recent experience, of the hard s-phere for their full exercise soon, would greatly tend to produce, with-out any shock at all, that so unanoisy desired change. For the express purpose of doing my utmost to save my country, I have returned to that country. I mus-

[illegible] up in politics, with no ear. My mind is pre-ty well made up, and I will pursue what that mind shall dictate. My love for my country and my dread of her dangers, have overflowed up all party feelings. I am not, I assure you, desirous of a seat in Parliament. I am not actually desire to see the present form of government preserved. I have no wish to see my country again free and prosperous; and I am confident that in one month I should be able to suggest the means of effecting, in a comparative short time, her complete restoration. Without I shall have the power of doing this will, sir, depend on you, and on the other gentlemen to whom this letter is addressed; and if I should not do the thing in question, I shall stay rate secure-ly the approbation of my own heart, by having this made a tender of my services to my country, and having done my best to be enabled to render those services. To "dig" I am not ashamed," and if I am doomed to see the wreck of my country, I am sure that I will be sweet ned by the reflection that I have had no hand in the causing of that wreck.

I am, Sir,
your most obedient
humble servant,
WM. COBBETT.

P. S. If you should wish to see the application, please to direct, postage paid, to me, at No. 269, Strand, London. The money will be wanted by the ensenth of March.

SONG.

On! 'tis sweet to remember
The hours that are past,
If the sun of to day
Beam as bright as the last;
But if black clouds envelop
To declare our doom,
That 'tis day soon was bright
Can but deepen the gloom.
Should the soft ray of hope intervene,
Like a meteor, 'tis gone ere 'tis seen;
And the brightness of joy
We are long ceas'd to know,
The'r its light be reflected,
But deepens the woe

When kind Fate has once plaited
Two sunbeams together
That are warm'd by one ray,
And that fate the same weather,
When their branches entwine
And their leaves 1 ermingle,
It were better both died
Than that either were single:
Torn asunder, the one doom'd to stay,
As it bends to the storm, seems to cry,
The' chill is the blast
That my branches bows down,
Yet the mother is first
That I bear it alone.

MR. RUSSELL,

I was much amused the other day on hearing a conversation between Dr. B. and Farmer Q. with that part particularly which related to the subject of Plaster of Paris for manure, as I had before thought a good deal upon it, and seen experiments that convinced me that our farmers are in a great error in making use of Plaster in a raw state. However I will refer you to the conversation itself, which contains a good many curious observations. If you can spare a corner in your paper for this conversation you will oblige one of your constant readers.

Conversation between Dr. B. & Farmer Q.

FARMER Q. Good morning, Doctor, what have you new to-day?

DOCTOR B. Nothing of any consequence; only a few murders, robberies, duels, suicides, &c.—mere trifles now a days.

Q. I am sorry. That shows we grow more wicked every day.

B. That is true, but we must console ourselves, for what we lose on one side we gain on the other; if some members of society grow wicked, others in our days makes such improvements by its immense discoveries, that we are indeed in full career of civilization.

Q. That is all very well. But I wish science could teach us the way to make our fortunes, and keep us all honest.

B. That is precisely what happens to those who practise it or follow the example of those who understand it. For example, how many farmers some years ago did laugh when they saw their neighbors putting Plaster upon their land, and now we see the same farm-raisonable their crops by using it.

Q. Pray Do-tor dont speak about Plaster, it is all nonsense.

B. Nonsense! Have you never seen how much your neighbours' crops have increased since they used it?

Q. That is true; but nobody can convince me that pounding up a few whitestones and strewing the sand over the field can make any difference in the crops.—What good can that do?

B. It would take too long now to give you all the reasons in favour of its real chemical effects. You know, or may be, you do not know, that Plaster is composed of 36 parts of lime, 48 parts of vitriolic acid, and 16 of water. These substances enter into the composition of all vegetables. Now Plaster, containing those substances in much greater proportions than any other manure that is used, it is very certain it affords much greater nourishment to vegetation.

Q. But tell me frankly, Doctor, if you believe all that is said about it?

B. Without doubt. You have seen how long I have used it, and did you ever see such fine potatoes, corn, and in fact all kinds of vegetables? And I am certain next year I shall raise them of perfection. I have made my provision of Plaster prepared in the new way, and that quadruples its effect.

Q. What is this new way you speak of, Doctor?

B. By Calcination.

Q. Another foolish nonsense. The[illegible] believe you learned folks are more easily imposed on than we plain honest farmers, who like to be cousin'd before we run the risk of spending money and labor for nothing.

B. Dont be so quick to condemn it, neighbor. Before you make up your mind against it, be so good as to hear my reasons. You have seen the effect of Plaster in the state of nature, I mean ground raw only; one of its properties is to attract the dew and the moisture of the atmosphere, and of course keep the roots of the vegetables in a moist state, and that preserves them from the heat of the sun; in putting that same raw Plaster in a degree of heat which will deprive it of the water it contains, which is the 16th part, it will open its pores. Now, if in the raw state a bushel could attract and retain five gallons of water, by calcination it will attract and retain fifteen. That shows you that its effect is three times as great as it is in the raw state. Another thing; Plaster so calcined becomes so friable that the humidity which it attracts converts it into a kind of cream, which is the essential food of all the vegetables, particularly for the farinaceous kind, such as wheat, corn, potatoes, peas, beans, &c. &c. Many of our modern Chemists have decomposed those useful vegetables, & most all their composition is nitrious acid, alkali, and vegetable earth.

Q. That may be all very well; but my land is very wet already, and it must of course be very hurtful for wet land. another thing, I dont understand why burning it will all the water is gone, which is only the 16th part you say, in what way it can take three times more water than in its raw state.

B. That appears a little astonishing at first; but I will answer both your objections the next time we meet.

I think I can furnish you with some further conversations of the Doctor and the Farmer, if you think it worthy of a place in your paper.

☞ We are fully of opinion, that the benefits of the process of calcination of Gypsum are very great; and that experiments of its utility will be very numerous this year.

Effect of Cattle Pairs.

The statement below (says a Vermont paper) may be relied on, and can be proved by the testimony of at least two persons. The cow belonging to Mr. Hezekiah Tuttle, of Hinesburgh, to which was awarded the second premium at the cattle show in Burlington—the milk of her tasting out what was necessary for a family of five persons, was set in the month of February for butter and produced the four first days 10½ lbs. of butter: the next seven days produced 13½ lbs. of butter: making in eleven days 23½ lbs of butter—and in less than four weeks the whole produced was upwards of fifty pounds, besides the milk and cream necessary for the family—Said cow is half blooded, of the Bakewell beef breed, or short horn long skin.

UPPER-CANADA.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all our loving subjects of our Province of Upper Canada

GREETING:—

WHEREAS, WE are desirous and resolved as soon as may be, to meet our People of our said Province of Upper Canada, and to have their advice in Provincial Parliament, WE DO THEREFORE make known our Royal Will and Pleasure, and WE do hereby summon and call together an Assembly in and for our said Province, to meet on the twenty fourth day of July, now next ensuing, AND WE DO HEREBY FURTHER DECLARE, that with the advice of our Executive Council, for the affairs of this Province, WE have this day given orders for the issuing out Writs in due form for summoning and calling together an Assembly in and for the said Province, which Writs are to bear teste the 1st day of this present month of June, and to be returnable the twenty fourth day of July next.

IN TESTIMONY whereof, We have caused these our letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed. WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SAMUEL SMITH, Esquire, Administrator of the Government of our said Province, this sixth day of June, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and twenty and in the first year of our reign.

By His Honor's Command.
D. CAMERON,
Sec'y.

BY HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS
The Prince of Wales,
Regent of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in the name and on the behalf of His Majesty:

A Proclamation.
J. C. SHERBROOKE.

WHEREAS, by an Act of Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, passed in the forty third year of His Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act for extending the jurisdiction of the Courts of Justice in the Province of Upper Canada, and for the more effectual punishment of persons guilty of crimes and offences within certain parts of North America adjoining to the said Provinces," it is amongst other things enacted, "That offences committed within any of the boundaries of the Indian Territories or parts of America, not within the limits of either of the said Provinces of Lower or Upper Canada, shall be and be deemed to be offences of the same nature, and shall be tried in the same manner, and be subject to the same punishment, as if the same had been committed within the said Provinces of Lower or Upper Canada."

And whereas by the said Act it is also enacted, "That it shall be lawful for the Governor, or Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the Government for the time being, of the Province of Lower Canada, by Commission under his Hand and Seal, to authorize and empower any person or persons, wheresoever resident or being at the time, to act as Civil Magistrates and Justices of the Peace for any of the Indian Territories, or parts of America, not within the limits of either of the said Provinces or any Civil Government of the United States of America, as well as within the limits of either of the said Provinces, either upon information given within the said Provinces of Lower or Upper Canada, or out of the said Provinces in any part of the Indian Territories or parts of America aforesaid, for the purpose only of hearing crimes and offences, and committing any person or persons, guilty of any crime or offence, to safe custody, to order him or her or them to be conveyed to the said Province of Lower Canada, to be dealt with according to law;" and "That it shall be lawful for any person or persons whatever, to apprehend and take before any person so commissioned as aforesaid, or to apprehend and convey, or cause to be safely conveyed with all possible speed, to the Province of Lower Canada, any person or persons guilty of any crime or offence, there to be delivered in safe custody, for the purpose of being dealt with according to Law."

And whereas by the said Act it is also further enacted, "That every such offender may and shall be prosecuted and tried in His Majesty's Courts of the Province of Lower Canada, in which crimes and offences of the like nature are usually tried, and where the same would have been tried if such crime or offence had been committed within the limits of the Province where the said offender shall be apprehended and taken; and every offender tried and convicted under the said Act, shall be subject to such punishment for such crime or offence, as in every respect, as if such crime or offence had been really committed within the jurisdiction of such Court; and to proceed also in the trial of any person being a subject of His Majesty, who shall be charged with any offence, notwithstanding such offence shall appear to have been committed within the limits of any Colony, Settlement or Territory, belonging to any European State."

And whereas divers breaches of the peace, and acts of force and violence, have lately been committed within the said Indian Territories and parts of America, not situated and described in the said Act of Parliament, which have arisen from contentions between certain Merchants, carrying on trade and commerce in the said Indian Territories, under the name of the Hudson's Bay Company, and North West Company, respectively, and other persons, their servants, agents, or adherents, of whom some have entered into and armed, and are regarded by force, and with strong hand, in houses of possessions therein lasting, and by force retaining, divers goods, wares, merchandize, and other property, and obstructing the passage of navigable rivers, and other natural powers of the country; and others have met together in unlawful assemblies, formed divers conspiracies and confederacies, committed murders, riots, routs and affrays, and appeared, gone and ridden in companies, in military array, with armed force, and have resisted themselves and others from lawful arrest and custody.

We do, therefore, in the name and on the behalf of His Majesty, publish this Proclamation, hereby calling upon the said Merchants, so as aforesaid carrying on trade and commerce in the said Indian Territories, under the names of the Hudson's Bay Company, and the North West Company, respectively, and upon each and every of them, and upon all other persons, their servants, agents, or adherents, and each and every of them, to desist in their hostile aggression, and all acts of violence; And we do require all persons who have been or are now engaged in His Majesty's service, as Officers or Soldiers, and as such have resided and engaged in the service of the said Hudson's Bay Company, or North West Company, or either of them, or of any of their servants, agents, or adherents, to leave the service in which they may be so engaged, within twenty-four hours after their knowledge of this Proclamation, under penalty of incurring our most severe displeasure, & forfeiting every privilege to which their former employment in His Majesty's service would otherwise have entitled them.

And We do, under similar penalties, hereby require of all and every person and persons whomsoever, whom it doth or shall, or may in any wise concern, the restitution of all Forts, Buildings, or Trading Stations, with the property which they contain, which may have been seized or taken possession of, by either party, to the party who originally established or constructed the same, and were possessed thereof previous to the recent disputes between the aforesaid Companies.

And we do hereby require in like manner, of all and every person and persons whomsoever, whom it doth, or shall, or may in any wise concern, the restoration of any blockade or impediment, by which any party, person or persons may have attempted to prevent, or interrupt the free passage of Traders, or other of His Majesty's subjects, or of the natives of the said Indian Territories, with their merchandize, furs, provisions and other effects throughout the Lakes, Rivers, Roads, and everyother usual route or communication heretofore used for the purposes of the Fur trade, in the interior of North America; and full and free permission for all persons to pursue their usual accustomed trade, without hindrance or molestation, hereby declaring, that nothing done in consequence of this Proclamation, shall in any degree be considered to affect the rights which may ultimately be adjudged to belong to either or any party, upon a full consideration of all the circumstances of their several claims.

"And whereas, for the purpose of restraining all offences in the said Indian Territories, &c. &c. &c. by and with the advice of His Majesty's Executive Council of and for the said Province of Lower Canada, both assembled, and duly convened, and associated the Honorable WILLIAM BACHELER COLTMAN, one of the Members of the said Council, a Lieutenant Colonel in His Majesty's Indian Department, and one of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the Western District of the said Province of Upper Canada; and JOHN FLETCHER, Esquire, Barrister at Law, one of the principal Police Magistrates and Chairman of His Majesty's Court of Quarter Session for the District of Quebec, a Major in the said Indian Department, and one of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the said Western District of Upper Canada, to act as Civil Magistrates and Justices of the Peace for the said Indian Territories or parts of America aforesaid, as well without as within the said Provinces of Lower and Upper Canada, under and by virtue of the said Act, and also His Majesty's Special Commissioners for inquiring into and investigating all offences committed in the said Indian Territories and the circumstances attending the same, with power and authority for such purpose.

And whereas the said William Bachelor Coltman, and John Fletcher, are immediately about to proceed to the said Indian Territories, in execution of the trust so reposed in them;

We do therefore hereby strictly charge and command, in the name and on the behalf of His Majesty, all Sheriffs, Bailiffs, Constables and other Officers of the Peace, and all other His Majesty's Officers, Servants and Subjects, Civil and Military, generally, in their several and respective stations, to make diligent inquiry and search to discover and apprehend all persons who have been or shall be guilty of any such crimes or offences as aforesaid, or any other crimes or offences whatsoever, within the Indian Territories or parts of America, in the said Act mentioned and described, whether without or within the said Provinces of Lower or Upper Canada, and to cause them to be carried before the said William Bachelor Coltman and John Fletcher, or one of them, or such other Magistrates as may hereafter be appointed for the like purposes, or otherwise be invested with competent jurisdiction in that behalf, to be dealt with according to Law, and by all lawful ways and means whatsoever, to repress and discourage all such crimes and offences, requiring and directing them and each of them as well within the said Indian Territories or parts of America, as elsewhere, to be aiding and assisting to the said William Bachelor Coltman and John Fletcher in the execution of the duties whereunto they are charged as such Magistrates and Special Commissioners as aforesaid, in all their endeavours for the repression and discouragement of all such crimes and offences, wheresoever committed; for the detection and apprehension of all such persons as have been or hereafter shall be convicted or implicated in the perpetration thereof, and the maintenance and preservation of the Peace and of the Law.

In faith and testimony whereof, We, by our express command, in the name and on the behalf of His Majesty, have caused the Great Seal of the Province of Lower Canada to be hereunto affixed.

WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR JOHN COAPE SHERBROOKE, Knight, Grand Cross of the most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Captain General and Governor in Chief of the said Provinces of Lower and Upper Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, Lieutenant General and Commander of all His Majesty's Forces in the said Provinces, &c. &c. &c. at the Castle of St. Lewis, in the City of Quebec, in the said Province of Lower Canada, this third day of May, in the year of our Lord Christ, one thousand eight hundred and twenty, and in the fifty-seventh year of His Majesty's Reign.

A Proclamation.

WHEREAS, divers breaches of the peace and acts of force and violence having been committed within the Province of Canada in North America, commonly called and known by the name of the INDIAN TERRITORIES; and for the suppression and prevention of all such breaches of the peace and acts of force and violence, in the same and on the behalf of Our late Royal Father, of glorious memory, did issue Our Royal Proclamation under the Great Seal of our Province of Lower Canada, bearing date the third day of May, in the fifty-seventh year of the Reign of our said Royal Father. And whereas it appears to Us expedient to [illegible] We have thought fit to renew, and hereby do renew the prohibitions, commands, and provisions in Our said Proclamation contained, and each and every of them, as fully to all intents and purposes as if the same were herein again set forth and recapitulated; hereby calling upon all persons carrying on trade and commerce in the said Indian Territories, under the names of the Hudson's Bay Company and the North West Company, respectively, and upon each and every of them, and upon all other persons, their servants, agents, or adherents, and generally all persons whomsoever, and each and every of them, to desist from every hostile aggression or attack, and from every act of force and violence, or trespass whatsoever.

And We do hereby further strictly charge and command all persons whatsoever, as aforesaid, in all their endeavours for the repression and discouragement of all such crimes and offences, wheresoever or by whomsoever perpetrated or committed; for the detection and apprehension of all such persons as have been or hereafter shall be convicted or implicated in the perpetration thereof, and the maintenance and preservation of the Peace and of the Law.

Private letters state, that Sir Sidney Smith was about to retire from the command at Malta. This is not intended to any discontent on the part of the Government, but from motives felt by our Government at the recent change in the system, and in darkness of the Prince Regent. Sir Sidney and the party now at the head of affairs at Malta.

Yesterday the House of Commons appointed, in accordance to the forms of the House, a Committee to take into consideration the Petition of Mr. Fry, and to report their opinion thereon. FALLS OF MISSOURI.

From the St. Louis Enquirer, March 8.

The falls of Missouri are in north lati tude 47 degrees; in west longitude 33 from Washington city.--They range with the city of Quebec, the head of the Mississippi, the Mandan villages, the forks of Clark's river and the source of the Columbia; all of which are between the parallels 46 and 47.

The falls are made by the descent of the river from a piece of table land which lies at the foot of the Rocky mountains about fifty miles wide, and some hundred in length from north to south

The river flowing from the south about six hundred miles, following its bends, turns to the east when it has arrived to the latitude of 47 degrees, and descends from the table land into the level country which spreads downwards to the centre of the valley of the Mississippi.

The descent is effected in a passage of eighteen miles over three principal falls and a multitude of cascades and rapids.

The first fall (looking down the river) has a perpendicular pitch of twenty six feet; the second of forty seven; the third of eighty seven. The various cascades and rapids give a further descent of about two hundred feet; so that the entire fall of the river is about three hundred and sixty feet; its average breadth, from the head to the foot of the falls, about a quarter of a mile.

The late governor Lewis was the first white man that ever beheld these falls.

Impelled by the ardor of his feelings and attracted by the distant roaring, he hurried on ahead of his companions and arrived in sight of the great fall at noon, on Thursday the 13th of June, 1805.

From the foot of the falls the river flows without obstruction, without a shoal or rapid to break its navigation, to the gulf of Mexico; a distance in round numbers of four thousand miles.

The country about the falls is eminently beautiful. It presents so far as the eight can reach, levees to the south, and broken into swells and undulations to the north. The only trees seen are along the borders of the rivers and the creeks falling into it. The margins of those are cloth-dwith verdure like grovest, marking the course of the water as far as the eye can follow it.

The prairie is covered with a short sweet grass, about three inches high, on which feed vast herds of deer, elk, antelope, and buffalo. The country also abounds with furred animals, and the river with fish and aquatic fowls."

From the head of the falls the country also rises by level to the foot of the mountains, distant about fifty miles, distinctly visible from a piece of rising ground. Their tops white with snow even in midsummer, while all between is green with the verdure. In these mountains, due west, is a gap, communicating with a fruitful valley, through which an Indian road leads to the forks of Clark's river distant about one hundred miles from the mountains.

From the forks, Clark's river is navigable, with some portages, to the Pacific ocean, my one thousand miles.

The fall of Missouri presents a grand position for commanding the Indians of the Rocky mountains, protecting the dispersion of the fur trade, and covering the communications between the valley of the Mississippi and the mouth of the Columbia. As such may it soon be occupied by the arms of the republic.

Extract of a letter to a gentleman in Baltimore, dated.

St. Louis, 31st. March, 1820.

"I am not sorry to have visited this western world, for it always appeared a mystery to me, how so much wealth could be obtained out of the earth in a new world, that twenty years ago was a wild-reuse; but coming, as easy and obvious solution presented itself, the earth for the first eight or ten years yields but a scanty supply of the first and absolute necessaries of life, and the emigrants who first come, brought with them barely enough to make the first entries of their purchase lands; but those visionary tales of the physical wealth of the country, told in the atlantic states, gave to an inhabitant here such unlimited credit, that he had only to buy a broken winded horse, to take him across the mountains, and declare him self an inhabitant of Kentucky or Ohio, and that he wanted credit; to obtain on unlimited amount; this credit is now in room of being applied to the improvement of agriculture, was laid out in house lots in some new town, at from 1000 to 8000 dollars per lot, to erect a large useless brick building on it, and if their credit to the eastward failed, they would be concerned in some new bank, with an ideal capital, and apply the rags of this bank to this useless extravagance--the most of the buildings in Lexington and Cincinnati, are built on such capitals, and by such capitalists; the money to do it with came from individuals to the eastward, the U. States Bank, or cheating the laboring part of the community, with their bank of moonshine. I do not exaggerate when I say the whole of the western country, is in complete bankruptcy; the land they have purchased here, the buildings they have erected, together with all the improvements made since the first settler built his cabbin in the new states, would not bring enough were it put under the hammer, to pay their debts.

The report to congress of debts due to the U. S. Bank west of mountains is $7,000,000
some sprung the land offices, 44,000,000
Payment received from do. I speak from memory, and in round numbers, 22,000,000
Leaving a sum due to government on lands 22,000,000
The sum due to individuals in the Atlantic States by do. cannot be estimated less than 10,000,000
D39,000,000

Such ideal wealth may without much straining be compared to the South Sea Scheme; the bubble is now burst, and while passing through Herculaneum, Missouri Territory, the property of Mr. Austin, formerly of Connecticut, of that place, was sold by the sheriff, one tract of excellent land nine miles square, where the best of the lead mines are worked, & for which he was offered by a company from New-York over eighty thousand dollars for 19 20 part, only three years before, and on which they warrls he erected buildings and made improvements to the amount of D2.0'0, all this brought at a sale D7,120 only, making only about 15½ cents per acre, nothing for buildings and improvements some small lots under the hammer brought two hundred dollars better, they averaged about 25 cents per acre. Since the passage of the Missouri bill their hopes are crushed, great calculations are made on the property that is to be brought into the territory by the emigrants from the slave holding states. This is but an illusion, formed by a distempered imagination No man of opulence in his senses, would abandon a cultivated society, his friends and relations, and settle to a place where every thing is rough and rude about him. Your friend, &c.

From the Baltimore March Chronicle.

We publish the following as a literary curiosity--it was recently written by a member of congress, whose name we would mention if necessary. Whether true, who can tell--but in cold blood the English language with so much barbarity, are well calculated to repel forever a fair specimen of genius, or original intellect, we sincerely wish every schools will be employed to instruct the members in the use of the alphabet. Utterly indeed should we despair of all such benevolent institutions, if the most stupid of the pupils should be guilty of such blunders as this.

REPEATED

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, May 4.

Iron Steam.—A passage boat of considerable iron, now plies on the Forth & Clyde Canal, in Scotle d. It is called the Falcon, and succeeds to admiration.

The length is 69 feet, beam 12 feet, depth 5 feet; draught of water when launched, 22 inches abaft, and 19 inches forward—when fitted with cabins, &c. 27 and 25 inches—when laden with 200 passengers and their baggage, under 48 inches on a mean keel. The weight of iron employed was 12 tons 11½ cwt. which is less than a wooden vessel of the same dimension. The iron is of the kind called scrap.

The ministerial journals of Paris continue to put forth assertions respecting predictions touching the revolution of Spain. The particular facts which they relate, however, of an opposite nature. It is stated that in Valencia, the archbishop preaches weekly in the cathedral in favor of the Constitution, and has given ten thousand dollars towards the exigencies of state; that the bishop of Segovia also preaches regularly in its favor; that the bishop of Salamanca has published a pastoral letter in the same strain—that the old members of the Cortes are absolutely full of joy at the prostitude of the people to suffer themselves to be re-elected, &c.

The other articles and extracts of letters from Germany, speak of a continued agitation in France.—Her governmen is labored in assorted in numerous writings, some of which are imputed to the University students. This corps really constitutes a formidable political sect. They are accused in the Bavarian journals of being 'revolutionary,' and their professors of inculcating upon them elevdestructive principles." Among the foreign articles of the French journals, is one which gives an account of a insurrection at Aleppo in Syria. The Turks was driven out of the city, but made himself master of it again in the end. Finally, on the day after a retirement, one hundred and fifty heads to Constantinople to embellish the walls of the Seraglio.

In the number of the occurrences, which is usually met our eye as we glance ed over the French papers are the following:

A species of "infernal machine" was made to explode, on the 28th of April, in the neighborhood of the Royal Palace of the Tuileries.[4] The destruction of the Royal Family is said to have been premeditated—and Diligent search for the plot the Liberals—the Liberals describe it as an expedient of the Ultras to effect their great object of overthrowing government.

The French Consul General at Tangiers, (Morocco) when taking a walk on more recreation in the skirts of that city, was struck on the back of the head, and nearly killed, by a Derrish, who assigned no other reason for the act than that he was a Christian Dog.

In the list of French Prelates, among are above eighty years old; ten are be tween seventy and seventy nine; only twenty are under fifty. The whole number of bishops is fifty; of whom but seven were created such before the year 1790.

The Duke of Tavistock (Marshal Mac-Donald) is appointed Major General of the Royal Guard; and has made a proposition lately declared, his bequeathed eight thousand francs per annum to the hospital of that place.

The celebrated Miss Edgeworth was on a visit to Paris—new book may therefore be expected.

LONDON, May 8.

We have received since our last, the Paris Papers of Wednesday and Thursday.

On the night of the 3d inst Mr. Monquart, one of the body guard of Monsieur, came to the guard of the Thuilleries to receive at the Barracks of the Body Guard, the order and the watchword for the night. He was on foot, and when he arrived in the street of Bourbon, several individuals attacked him, saying: "You are of the household of Monsieur; you are a traitor!" Mr. Mon quart, who is said to be endowed with great physical strength, disengaged himself from his adversaries with difficulty, when one of them retiring a few paces, fired a pistol at him, the ball from which passed through his arm, and lodged in the belt which covered his breast. Mr Monquart fell, exclaiming that he was assassinated, when a second shot was fired at him, which only grazed his left arm. The villains then fled upon him, snatched from him the written order and pass word, find without taking any thing else from him. When assistance arrived to him, he told them he had been robbed of the watch-word, and desired them to run immediately to the guard. The news was carried immediately, and the watch-word by the night was instantly altered. M Monquart's wounds are severe, but not mortal. The report of the singular transaction has been laid before the King. The Gazette de France makes the following observation on the affair :—" It is to be remarked that the military dispositions at the Tuileries, being changed that day on account of the solemnity of to-morrow the anniversary of the king's restoration the knowledge of the watch-word for the night must have been given rise to a counter-action, which it would have been difficult to have frustrated.

The Park was crowded to an excess on Sunday.—French fashions are now flowing into the grotesque. The length of the pantaloons has got half a foot longer than the Duc d'Angoulesme, who left Paris on the 28th, on a journey to the south, in the midst of being driven through the streets, whose noise our correspondent does not venture to give, was exposed to insults from the populace, which even the presence of the Royal Family on the 14th inst. and from time to time to adjourn, as to them shall seem meet, for the purpose of carrying out determinations which from as may be exhibited by any of his loving subjects, in regard of sundry manners, lands, and other hereditaments, as to him from divers services at the time of the coronation.

Another crowned information is filed against Mrs. Carlile for publishing portions of the "Age of Reason."

Price of British Stocks, May 13.—3 per ct. red. 80 1-8; 3 per ct. Cons. 69 7-8; 4 per cts. 87 1-8.

French Stocks on the 11th May.—5 per cents. 93½ Bank Stock, 1820 ——; English Wheat, 8s. 9d. to 10s. 9d; Americ an, 8s. 6d. a 9s. 6d.; Quebec, 8s. 6d. a 9s. Flour, English free, 34s a 36s.; American, 32s. a 34s. per barrel; Canada, in bond, 28s. a 30s. per bbl. do sour, 30s a 37.

PARIS, May 8.

Another atrocious attempt against the Royal Family has been detected. The following are all the authentic details of this important event:

LIVERPOOL, May 13

Billing's Liverpool Advertiser, states, that the proceedings of the New Parliament begin to assume a very interesting character

The first question which has tested the strength of parties, was in the Droits of the Crown Bill. Mr. Brougham quickly arrived before whom Graviers underwent a cross leader in the debate, on the part of the opposition, and Mr. Canning on that of the Ministry. The latter question was also in the Admiralty Droit- at the disposal of Parliament.

The votes stood on the side of the Ministry. A majority of fifteen upon a vote of no House 158—giving the former a majority of 118.

The Duke of Lard Cutlereagh does not permit him to attend to the affairs of secretary duties; but it is said Mr. Canning supplies his place with great talent.

Mr. Peel, as an old friend relative, stands perhaps unrivalled in that Assembly.

In the House of Lords on the 13th, the Duke of Lauderdale moved that an humble address be presented to his majesty praying that His Majesty will graciously pleased to order accounts to be laid before him [illegible] all the Salaries, Pensions & Allowances, which have been made to Foreign Ministers since the Peace of 1815.

Gardner.—Four shillings!—I'll see you d——d first. I would sooner my family should have it, than sell it for four shillings.

Somnambulism.—A dreadful event took place lately in the street, Marcons-Sorbonne, in Paris; Madame D——, a person of large property, had been for a considerable time subject to somnambulism. She was usually in bed and asleep in the same apartment, having a good sleep, she arose, and threw herself out a window of the second floor. The unfortunate lady was found to be killed by the fall, sent forth groans which attracted her porter, but he, not recognizing her voice was so much fatigued, raised her up, and, out of humanity, carried her to the Hotel de Dieu. The next morning, about 7 o'clock, M. de D——, not seeing his wife in her apartment, enquired if she had already gone out. The servant ran to inform the porter, across whose mind the truth then flashed. The husband repaired to the Hotel de Dieu, and had his unfortunate and mutilated wife removed home, where she died about ten o'clock in unheard of agonies.

It is even added, that a conflict took place between the populace and the soldiery, which did not terminate without considerable difficulty in their dispersion.

Iron Rail for Cagriage ways.—In the neighbourhood of New-astle, this ingenious mode of reducing friction, out facility among the country-men of loaded waggons, has been adopted to a very great extent. According to M. Gallons, an extent of 32 square miles of this surface of the earth, pres-nt a series of 75 miles for this species of conveyance; while the already existing roads in that district continue these to as large an amount. Five or six waggons, made entirely of iron, are fastened to each other in regular succession, and send the c-re in question, with ther nerver than their own gravitating force. By means of a pulley, or wheel, of considerable dimensions, placed on occasion a certain number of others in mount in order to take in a load at the foot of a hill, and to discharge it on the verse. We are, however, naturally led to believe that, excepting in very peculiar circumstances, there will always be a great saving of power in conveying by water. For this simple reason, that the whole weight of the burden is transfered by the ordinary mode of conveyance by small loss of power by friction, while the inclined plane on which the carriage moves, has to bear the whole weight. On the other hand, however, it cannot be denied that many situations in which it would be quite impossible to open a canal, might admit of the establishment of metallic and other railways.

Farnack for Wood.—The Italian cab net Work in this country is not surpassed by any other country. To pro effect, the workm-n first ca. the interface with clear glue, and then apply veneer and lamp-black mixed with glue. A most useful and Desolating Fire at Troy.

Yesterday, at about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, a most awful and desolating fire broke out in the city of Troy; which has laid waste more than one third of the largest and most flourishing city. The number of buildings destroyed is about one hundred and twenty—among which are some of the best dwellings, and a great proportion of the largest and most substantial fire proof stores and store houses. On River or Main street, all the warehouse buildings of every kind, on the west side, and extending to the water's edge, from Gale's store to Tibbit's Factory, both of which are saved, and on the east side, from Congress-street up and including Parker's bookstore, are destroyed; as are also every house except two (the Troy bank and a dwelling next to it) on the west side of Front or Second street, from the same extent on the south side of Main street, and the interests were under its command) he visited his sister his return. But as Providence ordained it, he was destined to taking possession of by his brother-in-law, and as may be supposed refused to be surrendered to him upon his return. He was looked upon as an intruder, and had to get rid of him effectually was of the blood consequence. To effect this his worthy brother hit upon a scheme as very worthy him, who would render the children orphans, and send the person a degraded savage, into the native land, where he gained the esteem of all who knew him. He induced a laborer to procure a certificate of information against him as a leader of Rebellion, and that in that capacity, accompanied by another man, whom he had angled into the same net, he was arrested and committed for the purpose of finally arranging his affairs, and taking the remainder of his family into adopted country. The land he originally held here, was his own—he was in

New Discovery on Light.—Some of Mr. Lester's Light Projecting Mirrors were this week placed before the Common Council, where they appeared, to all appearance, a light not superior to gas without them, as gas does to the moon street lamps.—We may hope with its pervasive fluorescent properties the world, when cast in bronze with the discovery of a first principle in science, which is added greatly to the comforts of civilized life. A new and extended employment is not only given to the working classes, but all ranks are directly participate in its important effects, when governed and directed by the pure and moving rules. Based in the great arcanum of nature.—The following is a brief and correct history of the discovery of that wonderful effect of light, which represented upon a small and upon the largest opaque substance of a peculiar form, which gives out a no united light or equal density through the object upon, in a ratio of magnitude, or area of representation, compared with the quality and appropriate use of the luminary. The discovery of this most interesting and important effect, arose out of the peculiar combination of circumstances, perhaps the only moment in the world where such a idea was so pointed, in the top of a cast iron cylinder, 1 foot deep and two feet in diameter, fixed in iron of key stone, in the centre of the bottom of the two vaults, at the West India Docks. • • • the intention of conveying light to the centre of the vaults in the rear of the said vaults, through a passage convex form, to accomplish which a wooden building, erected on the margin, a quarter of a mile westward of the said vaults, and conducted by Lester, engineer of the Rhine, from whence the whole is an attempt to Pearce the angle of reflection, and by the joint application of the laws of the lens, he discovered the light increasing mirror, whose action and effect is the very opposite to reflection, producing the light upon the object from which it have given to man, by a vast economical division in the increase and economy of light. It is somewhat singular, that Mr. Lester's present was solely directed by the rules of optical science, for the purpose of collecting those light rays, the focus vanes, without any intention whatever to the more as of light produced by lamps or candles. The peculiar and positive angle of the Reflectors obtained by the repeated adjustments of a common pain mirror immediately opposite the angle constituted of the lens, when it became obvious, and indispensably necessary from the situation and position of the lights, to adopt the same for universal pain fixes. From thence arose the formation of the mirror on the focus of a convex curvature of the opposite the angle discovered. It is this peculiar angle of the lenticon of a concave curvature, by which the mirror is rendered upon the object, and adjusted

Paris papers of Sunday and Monday have arrived. The Journal des Debats contains a report previous to its Paris that the Queen of England has been for some days in Paris where her Majesty observes a strict incognito.

The intelligence by the regular courier from Madrid is down to the 4th inst. The new ministers of the Cadiz mutiny is a cause of exciting much great anxiety. Count Campana was arrested at St. Lucar on the 14th ult. and his papers seized: he is confined in the Castle of Alcala. Don Valdez was arrested on the 16th, and consigned to the castle of Triana. M. M. Ulpoz et and Count Calderari, chiefs of the batt. lions Guias and Lealtad, with several officers of those corps were also taken into custody on the latter day, and were confined in the Fort of Santa Catalina. The affair will soon be brought to trial.

A third attempt has been made to set fire to the college of Her ford.

In the House of Commons, petitions from the inhabitants and occupiers of land in various parts of the country, were presented, praying that restrictions should be imposed on importations.

Lord Nugent moved for Mr. Hunt the orator, and the other defendants convicted of all the late outrages of York, were brought up to receive a crowded court to receive sentence.

Mr Justice Bayley delivered the sentence of the court. After commencing in the most feeling manner, he said, "The jury have been convicted, he said." The judgment he was instructed to pronounce upon the individual defendants was as follows:—The defendant, Henry Hunt, was sentenced to be imprisoned in two years in the gaol of Ilchester. The court took into full consideration, and passed lenient sentences on the other portions of the indictment. Whether we can more extensive ourselves for the judgment which has been passed is extremely doubtful. But we can, at least, assure the inhabitants of the county, that, if we now do, we upon general and comprehensive views of the subject.

The decapitation of Thistlewood and his associates was performed in a most solemn and impressive manner, but by one of those who go by the name of three-cornered men, who received a fee of twenty guineas for doing it.

The Queen of England, previous to her departure from Pesaro, gave a farewell dinner to her friends at the house of the Count and Countess Lucchesini, the Tuscan minister.

The Sparrow of London has lately published a letter, shewing the British Parliament, in every Among other things which have led to the impression which has existed in the Spanish mind, that 1820 and 1821 would be years unexampled for debt and taxation in this country. In the years 1816 and 1817 the expenditure was above 80 millions, and the revenue about 60 millions. In 1818 and 1819 it was 60 millions.

Mr. Gotman's resignation of his seat for Dublin, is hourly expected, on account of his declining health. Mr. Goulburn, it is already known, would succeed to the vacancy.

On Tuesday week the soldiers were under arms—one of the night of the 14th inst. at two o'clock upon the Hills around the town, and the inhabitants were alarmed by the firing of musquetry, in consequence of the intelligence of the Bastards, so they are vulgarly called; that the brigands have been a false scare, as all continues quiet.

Mr Tudor, a gentleman who lately left Lisbon for the Brazils, has published a pamphlet upon the causes of the troubles in Portugal. In this work he has endeavoured to prove that the Portuguese have a right to change the system of government, and to establish a free constitution. He considers that the Portuguese have been a long time wrong, in not doing so, and that they have a right to do so.

A French paper says—"M Soudens, the French consul at Tangiers, was met on the seashore by the sultan's wife, who, mistaking him for a servant, gave him a severe blow with a stick and kicked him down. The consul complained to the minister of Morocco, who answered to the request for dismission ordered the dismission of both the sultan's wife and servant. Soudens is to the French consul the power of punishing the offender if he should appear in Tangiers. We give a noble example of generosity, by hastening to pardon his assailant."

The Caledonian canal, now carrying on for avoiding the tedious and dangerous navigation round the north and western coasts of Scotland, is truly gigantic; when completed, 22 locks of 22 feet, will be taken up and down; the depth is to be 20 feet, the width at the bottom at the end of the navigation, 150 feet, and the width on each side from 362 to 174 feet in length.

From Rumsgate it is stated that the poor have been in a dreadful state for some days past, owing to the severity of the weather. Not only have the fishermen been unable to go to sea, but the shipping has been prevented from coming into the harbour.

St. PETERSBURG, March 24.

SONG FOR THE RADICALS.

The following song, with a copy of which we have been favored, appeared in a Jamaica paper of the 1st of January. We know not, however, that it is or ever should be sung, though we have never seen it before; but, be this as it may, we do not hesitate to recommend it to our readers, as decidedly the best thing of its kind that has ever fallen under our notice. It is indeed so appropriately suited to these perilous times, that we could strongly suppose that, for some months at least, "Love has eyes" and "Pitt the younger John" with its fine old chorus, accompanied by the full band, should give place to it in all loyal and convivial parties.—We would further suggest (and this we do ourselves for the last) that it would be no bad plan to subject our friends, the associating Hunters, whose aberrations may here the ill luck to bring for them its wonted punishment of bread and water, to the moral punishment of chanting this most excellent song six times at the commencement of part of the material infliction. It need be no excuse that they cannot sing, or know not the tune: "Pull the oil if one is only required;" and the excellence of the words will supply some lack of the harmony of the music.

JOHN BULL AND HIS MOTHER.

Here's a touch to old honest John Bull,
While he's game we shan't find much mother;
With hearts and with glasses let's fill,
Here—a health to Britannia his mother;
For the queen like a good constitution,
Bid him keep to his wife and his liking;
To be loyal and true to the nation,
And then to humanity and sing.

Fol de rol.

For John is a good natured fellow,
Indeed very honest and brave;
But afraid of his bearers when mellow—
For between us I know he does rave;
There must be fine lords and fine ladies,
There must be some little, some great;
The weight, the support of the nation
Our trade the support of the state.

Fol de rol.

Some were born for the court and the city,
And some for the village and cot;
For Tweed side or Shannon side
There was to have equal in lot.
If one sings and no plot to smash,
What comfort and peace would be in the shrouds!
And one brings no commanders to lose,
Would soon be retired soldiers to grow in.

Fol de rol.

The plough and the loom would steal still,
Were no rude gentlemen off;
All mother-wits would then fill
The parliament, pulpit and bar!
Rights of man—make a very fine song!
Equal riches—a plausible tune;
But who labor would live till the ground?
All would drink—but who'd brew the ale?

Fol de rol.

Half naked and starved in the street,
Were we a nothing short unto nothing—
Would Slowly find each meet,
Or equal enjoyment our roots!
That knaves are for loving no wonder;
You may easily guess at their views;
Pray, who would get most by the plunder?
Why they who have nothing to lose.

Fol de rol.

Then away with such nonsense and stuff,
Full of treason, sedition and blood;
Every fellow be drunken and merry,
To be happy as long as he's good.
To be rid of the rascals in time,

FLEMESH HUSBANDRY.

Working and Housing.—The Flemish farmers are content with a crop of one half part only of their fields are completely freed from weeds. This is effected in a great measure, by repeated ploughing, by which the upper stratum, that contains the seeds and roots of plants, is turned sufficiently deep into the ground to prevent their vegetating. After the harvest is over, the ground is immediately ploughed, and the earth thrown up to the surface, that it may be thoroughly exposed to the influence of the frost and hoarings. The clay field is then rendered the more necessary, to rid the earth of parasite plants, the seeds of which are dispersed by the wind, or adhering to vegetables, and produce plants that feed on the juices of the dung, to the great injury of the agreeable ones. A Flemish farmer, in consequence of these attentions, resembles more a highly cultivated garden, than a field of corn; and it is not unfrequent to see a farm of 100 acres (Flemish) of 20 bushels, for seed wheat, on account of its great product. He has also obtained the same price for seven years past for this sheaf, which has been originally imported from abroad.

My next communication shall be directed to the "Potatoes of crops" pursued in Flanders.

Yours respectfully,
GEORGE HOUSTON.

New-York, May 15, 1820.

This great produce cannot fail to astonish every person living in this country: but he then recollect that the lower layer of the soil, which they throw up to the surface, has not changed since that time, having been exposed to the influence of the air only for a few years; so that the soil is not exhausted, but that dung is not spread as abundance with us as it should be, and that it is possible for the use of potatoes grown here as a field crop.—Editor.

DESCRIPTION OF WHITESLAND.

[From Gold and Northbourne's London Magazine.]

Visit to White Island, near the coast of New-Zealand; with a description of the tremendous fire which is raging within it.

Mr. Editor,—I enclose you a slight sketch of the natural appearances and productions, collected in an hour's observation of White Island, which was originally discovered by captain Cook, but on which, it is supposed, no one has ever landed, excepting myself. The account, valuable alone for its authenticity, is believed to be the first indeed of introducing to the abominable world, and of that vapidity, through his restrictive decrees, the produce of that valuable place was not more than half the usual quantity, which besides was greatly inferior to preceding crops.

Although the Flemish are the most laborious people in the world as to the choice of their seeds, they are sometimes deceived. An instance of this happened a few years ago, which was followed by very injurious consequences. A person brought some flax-seed from Riga, which he sold for good seed. It was, however, unpercanassated, but he had contrived to give it a fresh and healthy appearance, and this imposed on the farmers, deceived by their judges. The farmers, deceived by the false mark bought and sowed the seed, none of which ever appeared above the ground. "The desolation of the country was universal; the loss was estimated at several millions of florins; and the dealer escaped the punishment he merited, only through the intercessions of several powerful friends, who found means to stifle the affair, notwithstanding the cries of its numerous victims." I recollect a case somewhat similar to this, which happened a few years ago, in Edinburgh. A respectable seed merchant there purchased a quantity of flax-seed from a foreigner, which he sold again in small parcels to the farmers in the country, on seeing it, found that it was unsound, as no part of it was productive. The seed merchant was ruined, and although he was completely proved, that he made the purchase himself under the impression that the seed was fresh, and paid a fair price for it, the sufferers in order to damages to the amount of the loss sustained by the farmer who sued them for the same. Had the seed merchant been any thing like a regular market price, whether he was imposed upon himself or not. The case would not have been found relevant.

In Flanders, as well as in Scotland, no foreign seed is purchased, until the purchaser has previously satisfied himself as to the quality of the article, and the character of the seller.

The Flemish practice, with regard to the choice of seeds, has long prevailed in Scotland, not only as to grain, but as to wheat, barley, oats, and all other grain. The Scotch grain of every sort has appeared to me superior to those raised in England, where the same attention is not always to the choice of seed. It is well known that, also, well known to the countries, that the barley raised in Scotland, though greatly inferior in appearance, to English barley, and not so productive in climate, contains more mucharine matter, or nourishment. This has been tested by experiments in the distilleries, and by the immediate inspection of officers appointed by the government, who reported it to the commissioners of excise. Examined from smokey, the growth of Scotland, than from that produced in England. The best malt in the London markets, which hath been made in Scotch distilleries upon the refuse grains, uniformly sells at from three to four cents a pound more than that fed at any of the English distilleries.

This superiority unquestionably arises from the greatly improved state of the agriculture, generally introduced into Scotland, but is owing in nothing so much as to the very scrupulous attention paid to the choice of seed. For many years, this branch of husbandry seems to have considerably attracted the notice of the Scotch farmers, and the consequences, as appears from the English newspapers, have found it greatly to their interest to cultivate wheat, in preference to barley, raised from the seed which, when grown, they convey to the last part of the country, and will actually sell for one half more than the produce of barley.

Choice of Seeds.—It is an invariable practice in Flanders, never to use the seed the grain grown on the land, to be sown, but at the expense regarded when the object is to obtain heavy and healthy seed. Farmers in distant districts are therefore in the habit of sending journies of hundreds of miles are frequently taken to accomplish this desirable object. Vanderstraeten mentions two farms, whose grounds were alike, and who cultivated them with equal skill and industry. They had both been long in the practice of procuring excellent seed potatoes from Brabant, which yielded in that province two hundred per English acre. When transplanted, the produce was regularly, year after year, five hundred and forty cwt. per acre.* One of these men having, one year, to save the expense of carriage, upon manures of his own growth, the original produce of Brabant, soon repented of the step, and returned to his former practice. Flanders annually receives its supply of flax-seed from the north of Russia, and Livonia, during the latter years of the war, almost entirely, from Holland.

beast, or bird, but any anxious search was only mocked by the discordant screams of innumerable flocks of wild fowl, which had fled for refuge from the storm to the wild wood shores of the island, and who properly belonged to a rather more genial clime. Indeed, I thought that I had found upon the island the relics of a canoe, but perhaps imagination in this wizard isle might exalt the rotten trunk of some old tree into a wreck of a vessel; and, however, they were the remains of a boat, it is most probable it had been a New Zealand canoe driven on the shore, whose wretched voyagers had perished on this unfortunate and desolate island. The desolate and desert-inforsal spot.

The inspective position of the infernal fire does it lose years of intermission, appears to be comparatively slow; for I remember having seen, about six years before from some distance, a smoke ascending from the island. The heat that we endured during our stay was so intense, that we were compelled at the expiration of an hour, to take to our boat and hasten to the ship.

On my return to England, I sent p the first opportunity to my Joseph Banks, a sample of the waters of the lake, the receipt of which he acknowledged by kind and attentive note, of which the following is a copy :—

"SOHO SQUARE, June 9, 1817.

"Sir—I have received the bottle of water you were so good as to send to me, with your letter, and have submitted it to analysis, which proved to have very little saline matter from any water I thereto known.

"I am on the point of leaving London for a few days; I, however, shall on your convenience to favor me with a call, and favor me with the particulars alluded to in your letter, on Friday next, if you can answer between twelve and two o'clock, I shall feel myself much obliged to you.

"I am Sir,
"your obedient humble servant,
"JOS. BANKS."

I accordingly waited upon Sir Joseph at his house in Soho-square, where I had the pleasure of a long and very interesting conversation. He frequently referred to a work published according to the age of 40-covery, in conjunction with Captain Cook and others, to the Adventure and Resolution also to the charts which they then used, and said, that he well remembered the island, but neither he nor any of his fellow adventurers hauled, and he believed, any of the party ever thought of visiting it, or of making the circumnavigation. On my suggesting the probability of its cessation at interval, the Lord observed, "Why, Sir, from our reports, was well convinced that no one would ever think of visiting it." I was proud to be the venerable and intelligent nurtured gentleman that in his opinion, mine was the first human foot that had ever printed that wonderful shore. I omitted to mention, that when at one time I presented him with a specimen of the waters, I also offered a portion of them for examination to Sir Humphrey Davy, to the well known Mr. Accum; who after a critical chymical examination of their contents declared, that they contained a considerable portion of muriatic ties, which not any thing he had previously analyzed during his professional experience had ever been found to possess. Since this, I have been absent from my native country some years, and have not received any account of the analysis of Sir Humphrey Davy, to whom he said he would present it; when I hear from either of those gentlemen I shall immediately endeavour to obtain any further information from other quarters, I shall certainly transmit it to your journal for the perusal and consideration of its readers.

I am, Mr. Editor, yours' &c.

Emigration.—The spirit of emigration from the west of Scotland to British North America, seems to be greatly on the increase ; nor is it prevalent chiefly in the case of those in necessitous circumstances, or want of employment at home, may be supposed to subsist in changing their situation for the worse, but many of the wealthy, carrying with them considerable sums of money, and with large families, are among the number of recent departures.

There are likewise, however, numerous artizans, as the smiths of Glasgow, who are emigrating to the United States, that will not prove vain, of bettering their condition.

Yesterday morning the 9th inst. the Speculation, Douglas, sailed from hence for Quebec, with about 120 passengers, consisting of farmers, mechanics, and labourers chiefly, we understand, from the county and the shires of Lanark and Ayr. On the same day, the Minerva, Williamson, for Quebec and Montreal, took her departure from the same port, with 151 passengers of a similar description with the former, and from the same districts.

FALL OF A MOUNTAIN.

On the night of the 21st of March, a terrible event took place in the circle of Saarz, in Bohemia. The upper part of a mountain detached itself, carrying away with it 16 houses and two churches of the village at Strobin ; which is partly buried some fathoms deep in the loose earth. The top of the mountain was about twenty hours in coming loose, but so unequally that in the space of an hour 6 of the buildings slid down 30 paces, others 20 paces till at length they all fell into ruins at the distance of 600 paces. No supply took place last week. The event seems to have been prepared by the wet seasons which preceded the present year, and the heavy snow of last winter is supposed likewise to have contributed to it. The spots over which the detached mass has passed, presents a singular appearance of flakes of ice piled upon each other.

James Sowerby, Esq. author of some of our most valuable English Botanical works, is in possession of several most extraordinary Meteorolites, or metallic bodies which have fallen from the atmosphere in various parts of the world.—From one of these, which fell in the interior of Africa, about two hundred miles from the Cape of Good Hope, and was found by Capt. Barrow, Mr. S. had a sword blade made under his immediate superintendence, and elegantly mounted. This he presented to the Emperor Alexander ; the blade is little more than two feet long, and near two inches broad. It has a fine spring, and is as hard as a Toledo blade of the best sort. The hilt is remarkably neat, being, upon silver white, not black like steel. Upon the blade are displayed the Imperial Eagle, Crown, &c. with the word "Liberty," within wreaths of silver and laurel, and is accompanied with the following inscription :—" This iron having fallen from the heavens, was, upon his visit to Europe, presented to His Majesty Alexander, Emperor of all the Russias, who has successfully joined in battle to support the blessings of peace throughout Europe, by James Sowerby, F. L. S. G. S. &c. June 1814." From various causes, the sword has not been put into the emperor's hands before May last, who in return, through the Minister of the Interior, acknowledged the present in the following letter :—His Imperial Majesty has been pleased to read your letter, and to accept of your sword with particular satisfaction, and by a mark of his satisfaction, to send you a present of a ring adorned with diamonds, &c. Poisoning of Food.—We inserted last evening a communication from an attentive and valuable correspondent, upon a subject of deep interest to every citizen, viz : the adulteration or poisoning of food—a practice which has become alarmingly extensive in England, and which, it seems, has in one instance, at least, been adopted in this city. For the benefit of those who have not seen the notion has been practised upon our citizens, cannot now be ascertained ; nor do we know how many different kinds of food, or drink, have been adult-rated. Our correspondent, we have the fullest confidence, will not deceive us upon this point, doubtless been corrupted ;—and he promises further expositions.

A very valuable and useful work upon this subject, we have been published in England, and we perceive is advertised for sale in this city. It is entitled "A Treatise on Adulterations of Food, and Culinary Poisons ; exhibiting the fraudulent sophistications of Bread, Beer, Wine, Spirituous Liquors, Tea, Coffee, Cream, Pepper, Mustard, &c. &c. And methods of detecting them. By Frederick Accum." We have not perused this work, but from the late number of the London Literary Gazette, contains a brief review of it, together with copious extracts. These extracts, bringing the most common articles of food, with which our business into one point of view, present truly a frightful picture of imposition. The honey now of sale in this city, we take, the London Editor remarks, to be that in almost every thing which we eat or drink, we are compelled to swallow something, if not deceive ourselves, of items of metropolitan, and many of country consumption, are deteriorated, deprived of their nutritious qualities, and rendered obnoxious to humanity, by the vile arts and mercial-ss sophistication of their venders. In general terms the article, and so fatal the tendency of most of the corruption materials, that we can no longer wonder at the prevalence of dyspepsia, diseases and the premature decay of existence, (on an average) in spite of the great increase of medical knowledge, and the amazing improvement in the healing science, which distinguish our era. No skill can prevent the effects of daily poisoning ; and no man can prolong his life beyond a short standard, where every meal ought to be followed by its counteracting medicine. Had Shakespeare written in our time, in London, he surely would have altered the exclamation of Jaques in this side of Styx.

"As I do live by food I met a fool."

For to be germane to the matter, he should have said

"As I do die by food, I met a fool."

In short, Mr. Accum says the part of Dionysius with us ; only the horse-hair by which he suspends the sword over our heads allows the point gradually to descend, and the sharp scimetar, like Damocles, with the simple fright ; yet it is but justice to acknowledge, that in every case he furnishes us with the means we can ascertain the nature of our danger ; enabling us to mitigate or escape from it.

We recommend readers to abstain from perusing the annexed synopses till after they have dined, that they may keep their appetites down, and be sufficiently sickened to baffle the discrimination of the most experienced judges. Considering the number of substances used in domestic economy, which are now very generally sophisticated, are, tea, coffee, beer, wine, spirituous liquors, wild oil, pepper, vinegar, mustard, cream, and other articles of subsistence. Indeed, Mr. Accum says, "it would be difficult to mention a single article of food, which is not met with in an adulterated state ; and some are scarcely ever produced genuine.

Some of the compounds employed, are comparatively harmless, while others are highly deleterious. Of the former kind are the manufacture of factitious pepper, the adulteration of mustard, vinegar, cream, &c. Of the latter, are the substitutions of lead, copper, &c. for the preparations of pure possessions in the culinary utensils, and the substitution of other for their former powers, but must be elected in the manner before pointed out.

EMIGRANT SOCIETY.

An Emigrant Office, was founded early in the last Spring, by a few gentlemen of this city, principally with the view of giving such information to emigrants arriving here as would be useful to them. With this intention a correspondence was opened with several gentlemen in different parts of Upper and Lower Canada, requesting them to give answers to the following queries.

1st. Are there any Unconceded Lands in your neighbourhood ?

2d. On what terms will these Lands be granted ?

3d. What is the quality of these Lands as to soil ?

4th. At what rate can Wood lands be cleared per acre ?

5th. Are there any Cultivated Lands for sale or to be Leased in your neighbourhood ; if so, at what price per acre ?

6th. What distances are the Unlocated Lands from the nearest Mill ? and the means of Communication between the Lands and those Settlements ?

7th. What distance are they from Markets, either for purchasing necessaries or the sale of produce ?

8th. What is the usual price of the necessaries of life, such as Beef, Pork, Flour, Potatoes, &c. in your vicinity ?

9th. Are there Churches or Schools near the unconceded Lands in your quarter ?

10th. What is the usual price of Stock, Farming Utensils, and the different kinds of seed used with you ?

11th. Are there Saw Mills and Grist Mills near you, at what price can boards be purchased ?

12th. What is the distance between your Unconceded Lands and Montreal, Quebec, or Niagara ; and what are the means of communication with those places ?

13th. What are the usual rates of Wages given to Overseers, Farm Servants, or Mechanics of different descriptions, by the month or year ?

14th. Are your vacant Lands well supplied with water ?

15th. Does your part of the Country hold out any peculiar advantages for Settlers ?

16th. From what country are the majority of Settlers in your vicinity.

The result of these enquiries has been extensively satisfactory and has furnished a valuable body of authentic information. This consideration, together with the universal wish of correspondents that Emigrants should be forwarded to their respective places of destination as speedily as possible for, say they all, we want them here ; induced the gentlemen concerned in the institution to call in a few more to their assistance, that they might extend their views, by forming themselves into an Emigrant Society for the purpose of forwarding destitute Emigrants to their respective places of destination, or to the nearest Emigrant Society.

After two or three meetings in the course of this week, this object has been so far effected, that the Society has been formed, a President, Treasurer and Secretary appointed, and a resolution passed that the different Protestant Churches in the city, should each choose three persons to preside the fund necessary to be raised for the great object in view, by such means as they should think proper respectively to adopt. The Society gives notice to the public, the Emigrant Society are well aware of the difficulties which may be encountered in the execution of their charity. They hope however, and confidently hope, that the object in view will be so justly appreciated by their discerning and liberal fellow-citizens, that they will come cheerfully forward to their support.—They have ascertained the important fact that Emigrants are wanted by the inhabitants throughout Upper Canada, and that there they can always obtain employment.

It is equally well known that a great many are now out of employment, and many more are daily arriving here, who do not possess the means of getting forward with their families. These latter we either assisted now to get off, or the public must support them in winter. Which of these alternatives is best ? The answer is contained in few words. We keep them here and support them during winter, we do them a partial good ; but a permanent evil, for they are deprived of the means by which they could maintain people in idleness for so long a period as a Canadian winter, is inevitably to follow. But if we send them forward, we do them a positive good which may perhaps be felt forever. It is therefore pretty evident, that by the adoption of the former alternative we deprive them of their respective places of destination, a very essential service is rendered them. But the latter is the very thing which is wanted by the inhabitants of this city may also render themselves a service, by reducing the burthen which for two or three years past they have so severely felt. The Society have ascertained that many owners of boats and other craft will take them up the country at half the usual rates, and that the owners of the Steamboat Frontenac, will forward them in that vessel to York or Niagara for half price. From such data, the Society have ascertained that a family may be sent from hence to York on Niagara for less than one pound currency ; which sum is necessary to support them here in idleness, and perhaps vice, its frequent companion, during winter. Those therefore, who are willing to give a small sum now to relieve the distress of the poor in winter, to give a larger sum in winter to be expended in the very same charity, that of doing permanent good, or

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Code of Agriculture, by Sir John Sinclair, Bart.

REAPING.

It is the opinion of experienced husbandmen, that wheat should be cut down when straw below it is fully ripe and ripe. The grain hardens well in the sheaf;—the sample is better,—and there is nothing lost in measure, by this mode of management. The harvest is begun earlier, and its labours are more equally distributed.

Barley ought likewise to be cut before it is too ripe, otherwise the straw becomes brittle, and that occasions much loss by the heads breaking off.

Though oats are reckoned a hardy grain, yet the more early varieties, being liable to damage from high winds, or exposure to much wet, ought to be cut as soon as they are nearly ripe, in order to lessen the risks to which they are exposed.*

Beans should be cut down as soon as the eye has attained a deep colour, and if the weather be dry, instantly made up, and put into sheaves. The straw will thus be of triple value, and the grain of superior quality.

So much for the cultuse of the crops before they are cut down. The instruments by which this operation is effected are next to be considered.

Various plans have been devised for cutting down crops of grain; as reaping by a sickle, or crooked knife; mowing by a scythe, and hagging, the plan of cutting down corn by machinery, though it has made some progress has not yet been brought beyond the line of occasional experiment.

1. Reaping by the Sickle, or Reaping Hook.

For the district in which a sufficient hand can be procured, reaping by the sickle, or the reaping hook, are excellent methods of cutting down the crop, if sufficient attention be paid to the cutting. With careful reapers, there is very little corn pulled out from the ear, and all put in regular order; and the crop placed in a position favorable to the easiest cut or by the final, or by mechanism.

The sickles are jagged on the edge with teeth; but reaping hooks are smooth; sharp and serrated. For farmer is preferred, as the latter requires to be so often sharpened as to occasion some waste of time. Besides, the former is such a that the advantage of keeping the corn blither to either, than the sooth the ears; and in corded bands, some of the heads are cut off and lost, in using the sharp reaping hook, when it enters a strong the crop, before the reaper has gathered the corn with his hand.

Reaping by the sickle is performed, sometimes by the day, at other times by the acre, and sometimes by the harvest, or season; but the first mode is, by the worst that is executed. With that view, no agreement has been made, to give six shillings per twenty lineal sheaves of wheat, (generally a threave, hence the agreement is called threaving) each sheaf measuring thirty-six inches in girth, but the sickle is described as the most advantageous mode of cutting down the crop, for all parties. Under this mode, whole families, men, women, and their grown up children obtain employment. They bring their provisions with them, remain at the whole day in the field, the old to chirp the young to cut down, every one does something, and they are paid according to what they perform. This is done with alacrity and spirit, and a great quantity of corn is cut down in a day, equally to the advantage of the reapers, and of the former.

In order to train up reapers, it is a good practice, to put from one of the oldest, and most proficient, on a separate ridge, and to pay them a proportion to their good ones on a ridge of the same; but when they are not to be had for hire, the fewer on a ridge the better, for the more there are, the less work will be done. The lazy, and the idle, endeavour to exert themselves, so as to keep the others idle, and is difficult to ascertain, on whom the blame ought to be laid.

It is a most essential object, to cut the crop very low, to prevent both the waste of straw, and the Loss of grain, the almost unavoidable consequence of high cutting. The additional quantity of straw gathered into the barn, will pay the extra expense, and the increased quantity of muck is almost clear profit; because the mowing, or hagging the loom or stubbles, imperfectly answers the place of close cutting the crop.

Cutting corn, when wet, ought to be carefully avoided, when put in a close shock it cannot get dry. In bad SIR, harvests, or when corn is damp, the Fatal Disturbance at Greenock.—Newspapers were received from Glasgow yesterday, none being published there on Sunday; but the following intelligence has been communicated third the medium of private letters from that part of Scotland :—

The P ot Glasgow Volunteers had been at Quarry for some days assisting the Civil Power in keeping the peace; but as tranquility seemed to be perfectly restored on Saturday, and no further apprehensions entertained from the disaffected Radicals, they were ordered to return home on that day. On leaving Paisley five prisoners were given in charge to them to be conveyed to Greenock—he took up of the former place being very much crowded. When the Volunteers arrived near Greenock, they were hooted and hissed by the people, but this did not prevent them from lodging the prisoners in safe custody. On their return, however, they were again attacked and pelted in the most shameful manner. At first, in order to intimidate the mob, they fired twice over their heads: but this only proved a source of exasperation and in consequence, the rear files were ordered to fire directly at the infuriated people But even this failed to produce the desired effect, and the Volunteers were obliged to commence regular street firing, which was done with the greatest coolness, intrepidity and steadiness. After breaking the prison they threatened to attack Port Glasgow, but providentially it was not attempted; as in that case dreadful slaughter must have ensued. Peace, however, was restored before Saturday night, and on Sunday a large military force was stationed at Greenock.

The following is an extract from a letter, dated Glasgow, Sunday, three o'clock :—

"I have just time to mention the events of a very serious nature which have taken to k place last night. A party of the Port Gl sgow Volunteers were escorting some prisoners from Paisley to the gaol at this town; when they entered the town they were attacked with stones, and pelted in every direction. They, however, in lodging their prisoners safe in gaol, when, on returning to Port Glasgow, they were attacked by the mob (partly Greenock, and partly the neighborhood,) and were obliged to fire in their own defence. They effected their object there. There are many since the mob died, and nine more dying from its wounds; there are two of the Volunteers also wounded.

"In the mean time, after the military had retired, they broke open the gaol, and l berated the Radicals who had been lodged there from Paisley. They have been out I can thi s pace, and every thing now is again quiet."

Money is abundant, says the London Englishman, in the principal commercial cities of Europe, except Edinburgh, for instance, the rate of interest is from one to one and a half per cent; in Frankfort it is two per cent. exactly; and in Paris it is three per cent. In London the discount may be termed four per cent. at present, though it seems to be finding its level with the rate on bill discount, as having become of late an extensive branch of commerce to remit capital to England from those parts of Europe where the state of interest is low, in order to obtain the superior advantages still held out by the money market of this country. In practice, which is the best criterion to estimate the price all over Europe to one standard.

NEW YORK, July 20

The quick sailing ship Ann Maria, Peabody, which sailed from Liverpool on the 16th ult arrived at this port yesterday.

The editors of the Gazette have received their copy of papers, which have left us at the 16th.

The London papers announce the return of the Queen of England; and Mr. Broughton, in the House of Commons, on the 2d of May, declared that he had a message from the Queen, requesting an allowance for her establishment, and finding no provision made for the support of the Princess Charlotte, in the event of the measures pursued against her proving successful for some time by secret agents abroad, and lately by confidential persons of the Government at home—that she had no pecuniary means to support her dignity as Queen and the rights derived upon her by the death of her revered father, and that upon the investigation of her conduct, and upon upon the integrity of her character.

Lord Castlereagh moved that the papers in the Queen's case be referred to a select committee. Mr. Brougham opposed the appointment of a committee, and moved that the papers and communication made to Lord Liverpool, the only part on the privy council, be referred.

A message from the King on the subject of the Queen's conduct to Queen, observing that the King felt no anxious desire to prevent all discussions which must necessarily prove painful to his feelings, but that he could not refer to the subject in his message."

The papers also attended the Queen on her arrival in London, broke the windows of many houses at the cost of £1,000 to the owners of them, those of Lords Sidmouth and Castlereagh, Mr. Canning's house, and the Queen's carriage were stationed at Carlton House for two days and nights.

The Queen on her arrival in London, alighted at the house of Mr. Alderman Wood, where she remained all night.

Lord Holland has declared his intention to bring forward a motion to repeal the Royal Marriage Act.

Late news of Brion's expedition to the Spanish Maine.

By the Ship Argus, arrived at Portsmouth from Bermuda, the editors of the Oracle have received Jamaica papers to the 12th June.

They state that an engagement took place on the 25th May between the Royalists and the Independents at Rio de la Hacha, the latter commanded by Col. Sanchez de Lima, and the latter by Col. Montilla; after being warmly engaged for two hours, with an army of 2700 men against 700, the Royalists retreated to Morino, with the loss of 180 men, and the Independents lost 30 men in killed and wounded. At the termination of the battle the officers of the Independents were in possession of the whole of the artillery, and that whereas according to the rules and principles of right and wrong, the property of the enemy ought to be the best and cheapest, they select the worst and most expensive, and for the most part of the articles of the land preference. If they re-signed the principle in any instance, they would soon be called upon to acknowledge it in another. If a person should find a purse of gold, instead of giving that a duty should be placed upon American cotton, and stating at the same time as a reason for that object, that a duty was also given in the East Indies, which was three times the distance from this country, it would be quite as incompatible with the policy of the present day to present tax upon timber to refuse the prayer of the petition. It was exactly in the same manner that the Ministers in order to convey all the funds in the kingdom into the coffers of horses, and in the space of time at present allotted to these purposes with he, he conceived that to retain the ships and make them crew about, would be subject under the circumstances, without made of employing them than to exempt which he had been contemplating.

He was followed by the Earl of Liverpool, who took a general review of the subject under debate. We regret that we have room only for that part of Lordship's speech which more immediately interests us to these Provinces.

On another part of the noble Marquis, relative to timber, as connected with our shipping interests, I can see no objection to submit it to a committee, but I had better, in saying this, shortly state its history. In 1809, when we were excluded from the Continent, and likely to experience a great want of timber, which would naturally affect our shipping interests, communications were made to several of our merchants, whom they where indicated, by protecting duties brought against it. It was always admitted in the Spaniards did any thing, they would do something very complete and noble. They have an end in a high & salutary example to nations neighboring by their sovereigns. The amelioration of agriculture which once made them the most romantic people of Europe is the model of vassalage and superstition, and the source of misery to the people.

Schemes for the improvement of knowledge, and the experience of what nations could for themselves required them like most adventurous and high minded assertors of liberty, at once enthusiastic and calm.

The manner in which they shove of utility of the Press is calculated to excite the wonder of those who turn it indestructible.

When King George IV. was Prince of Wales, and Duke of Oswego Father of the present Duke, no one of his suits he paid to London before the Revolution. He had to the late pay apparent of the throne of Great Britain considerable sums of money, amounting to several millions (francs.)

The present Duke of Orleans knew nothing of the transactions, and was first appraised of them, on the appointment of the receipt-general made to him by the king of England, who has made haste to liquidate the debts of the Prince of Wales.

A part of the funds has been employed in the payment of the annuals and forests, which the Duke has purchased for five millions.

FROM LOWER CANADA

From the Quebec Mercury.

We have been favored with a review of London papers to the 24th June, from which we have made a few extracts.

A motion was brought forward in the House of Lords on the 20th June by the Marquis of Lansdowne for the appointment of a Select Committee to inquire into the administration of the Foreign Trade of the Country, and into the conduct of the pending it, which after a debate of some length was agreed to by the House.

The Prince of Wales has gone to visit Wales.

The Duke of Richmond has been appointed to succeed Sir Peregrine Maitland as Governor of Upper Canada, and will proceed to that Province in the course of the present month.

Lord Castlereagh moved that the papers in the Queen's case be referred to a select committee. Mr. Brougham opposed the appointment of a committee, and moved that the papers and communication made to Lord Liverpool, the only part on the privy council, be referred.

MANHEIM, May 19.

The general interest which is excited by the unfortunate young man who in I am going to put upon paper, induces me to send you the following details.

Sand, the assassin of Kotzebue, is a native of Wunsiedel, in the circle of Baireuth, and was born on the 5th October, 1795. He was educated in the gymnasium of Kotzebue, where he was very polite, had in it something extraordinary in his whole way of life, and he went to meet death as one going to a fete. He bowed with much grace to some ladies who were at a window, who returned his salute with very evident marks of interest. When he arrived at the place of execution, which was in the court of the prison, he mounted the scaffold immediately; his stature was not to him, either which he made appear to advantage. Previously, I understand, he was to put on a white linen dress, that he spoke with energy, and at the end raised one of Horace. The executioner then took hold of him and made him sit down; after he had seated himself in a small chair, he took off his hat, and his neckhandkerchief, and bowed to the people around him. He was dressed in a black coat, white waistcoat, and black pantaloons, he turned down his hair behind curls upon his shoulders. For 15 months in the prison he had been preserved by the most strengthening regimen. Every care was made to prevent him committing suicide the effects of the wounds which he received on the 9th of May, were still very weak, so that he could not mount the scaffold without supporting himself on the arm of the executioner. He was beardless with a sabre, and the executioner being obliged to make a second stroke, a general cry arose.

THE CORONATION.—The preparations seekers and the prizes given to strange viewers of the Coronation, are on a most splendid and magnificent scale. It has already been stated, that the Queen of Ashes, the Great George street, which bears the grand entrance to the Abbey, and the key, is let for the occasion for £. The Lords Commissioners of the Treasury have also advertised that £2000 may be had on the application to their office in Downing-street, New Palace-yard and the line with Parliament street. The Lords Commissioners each way, and from the gate of Westminster Hall to the grand entrance of the Abbey, a distance of 300 feet, £1 10s. It is expected that upwards of £2000 will be taken at the Lords' office alone. Lord Liverpool is to leave the house for a quarter of a year, and the Lord Chancellor have been offered £4000 for almost one year's rent at his house.

The space of ground now fenced into separate or enclosures, for the better accommodation of nearly 1 in their respective stations, is more extensive than at the Coronation of George IV. The front of the Abbey has been raised the former height, and the line with Parliament street has been extended to the corner of Bridge street, which is carried at a depth of 30 feet, and the whole of the Abbey is covered in. The carriage entrance for the accession for £. The Duke of Wellington has also let his house in Piccadilly for £2000 for the day.

THE CALEDONIAN CANAL.

The Caledonian Canal now carrying into execution in Scotland, will contribute no little to making trade glad. The depth is to be 20 feet; width at the bottom 50, and at the surface of the line of water 110 feet. The locks or sluices from 167 to 172 feet in length, and 40 feet in width. Dimensions of this magnitude will cause to excite wonder, when it is considered that the object of this canal is to make accessible to the Royal Navy and that frigates of 22 guns may be enabled to pass from one sea to the other in perfect safety, without the necessity of making a tedious and dangerous navigation round the northern and western coasts of Scotland. The whole expence about 80 000 l. lings of franks, of which 14 have been already laid out. One part of the navigation will be supplied by the means of lakes. These labours commenced in 1814, and are to terminate in 1821

After a voyage of three years and a month, round the world, the ship Lady Bordelais, lately re entered the port of Bourdeaux.

One fact appears truly singular, that of the flesh meat substances embarked at Bourdeaux, in 1816, whatever returned to this port in a state perfectly sound and well preserved; this arose from making use of the process of M. Edgeworth, which consists in placing the meat in close earthen vessels, with a certain quantity of sprinklings of salt, and other ingredients to extend over them. Roasting does not change the nature of the meat, or charcoal.

Extract of a letter, dated June 17.

Monthly Meeting of the Agricultural Society.

This Meeting, which had been postponed last week, on account of the hurry created by the arrival of the new, and the embarkation of our former Governor, took place on Saturday last at 12 o'clock, when his Excellency Sir James Kempt attended, and entered upon the office of President. Before proceeding to the dispatch of business, he addressed the Directors in the following terms.

Gentlemen,

I am thoroughly impressed with the importance of the duties in which I am now engaged, and I shall endeavour to discharge them in such a manner, as to promote the beneficial ends of the institution, and to crown my labors with success. The work which is so happily begun. Although my knowledge of agriculture be inferior to that of many members of this Society, for his Lordship, the Earl of Dalhousie, had a singular taste and predilection for rural affairs, I am satisfied that the public prosperity is connected with the success of your plans, and I look to you, gentlemen, my personal assistance and co-operation to effect, and to the Society the whole benefit of my official influence. Being ordered to embark immediately for the duties of your ordinary business, I shall not be able for some time to lend you such effectual help as I could wish, but the frequency of my good wishes; but I shall at all times direct my attention, and give my countenance to the measures which you may adopt, and which must more or less be interwoven with the welfare of the province. I beg, therefore, that a donation of Fifty pounds be accepted from me towards the funds of the Provincial Agricultural Society, as a testimony of the lively interest I feel for forwarding the objects of paramount utility, that

FLEMISH HUSBANDRY.

Rotation of Crops.—The intelligent agriculturists of England are well aware, that to make the farming business yield, the more abundant is their produce; but this opinion is confined to a few in that country. It is only in Flanders that the idea of enhancing the soil by the repeated cropping, is exploded, and the rotation system brought to the greatest possible state of perfection. The ground being prepared in the manner before stated, the Flemish farmer allots either one or the other of the following courses:

FIRST COURSE FOR THREE YEARS.

First year.—Oats are sown among the end of February or beginning of March. Those are cut green towards the end of April, or beginning of May, and given to the cattle for food, which is found to be a great pleasure. It is found that this crop as it is not allowed to throw out the ears does not exhaust the soil, or take away any thing from the subsequent crop.* Winter potatoes are now sown for a second crop; previous to which the land is dug and manured. When of a middling size the potatoe is planted whole but if very large, the eye only is used.

Second year.—Rye, which is the first crop; and scarcely are the sheaves removed from the ground, when the farmer promptly turns up the earth and sows quantity. Short oats are sown with the rye, or other subsequent crop.* Winter potatoes are now sown for a second crop; previous to which the land is dug and manured. When of a middling size the potatoe is planted whole but if very large, the eye only is used.

Third year.—Rye; which is followed by Turnips.

SECOND COURSE FOR THREE YEARS.

First year.—Flax preceded by green crops of the preceding year.

Second year.—Wheat followed by Spurry.

Third year.—Rye and Turnips.

THIRD COURSE FOR THREE YEARS.

First year.—Female Hemp; also white, turnips.

Second year.—Flax, then carrots.

Third year.—Wheat and Spurry.

FOURTH COURSE FOR THREE YEARS.

First year.—Oats, preceded by green crops of the preceding year.

Second year.—Cole-seed; then Turnips.

Third year.—Wheat; then Spurry.

These courses are sufficient to give a sufficiency of the Flemish system of rotation. It will be seen that wheat is never exceeds twice; it always follows flax, hemp, cole seed or potatoes. Corn greatly encourages the growth of dog-grass, which, if not completely torn up with the roots, the least fissure of it left, escapes, will each produce a new plant, greatly to the prejudice of the wheat. In England this is the grass usually sown with wheat, which is the more always more or less infected otherwise rich it much of its appropriate support; and to bring now and then a quantity of fresh earth about the roots of the wheat. With proper care this object may be accomplished without the least injury to the roots. But a careless ploughman should be kept near the surface of the soil. The practice of planting in beds, rather than to rows at intervals of about 18 inches, is universally in the Flemish country. Complete tables, also, of the value which is obtained by this method has been found to be that of forty-one acres in four years, by a farmer residing, which is divided as in fact, among the following crops, on Eng lish acres, viz. 10 of hemp, 10 of flax, and 21 of wheat, and the former of the latter are thus obtained, from the same to two feet, according to the quality of the soil—Here can be no greater Flemish course, will best illustrate the error of the system, and the advantages of the latter over the former:

THREE YEARS.—ENGLAND.

1st year,	Turnips according to Arthur Young,	£2 4 0
2d do.	Barley,	4 0 0
3d do.	Clover,	3 12 0
4th do.	Rye,	6 0 0
	Wheat Straw,	3 7 6
	Barley, do.	1 15 7

Total produce in 4 years, £19 14 1
Giving one year with another, £4 18 11 per acre.

THREE YEARS.—FLANDERS.

1st year,	Green oats,	£0 16 6
	Potatoes,	10 5
2d do.	Wheat,	3 7 6
	Spurry,	2 0 0
3d do.	Rye,	2 0 0
	Turnips,	2 1 6
	Wheat straw,	1 0 10
	Rye, do.	1 3 0
	Raisin, or straw of potatoes,	0 6
Total produce in 3 years,		£23 7
Giving, one year with another,		£7 9 per acre.

From these statements, proceeding upon the most correct data, it is seen that the value per acre, of the same piece of ground cultivated according to the Flemish system for three years, is [illegible] in the former, [illegible] per cent more than in the latter. Now as ploughed in four years from another piece of ground managed agreeable to the most approved principles of English husbandry. The advantages of the Flemish farmer, will appear still more striking, when the next period, when he clears after paying the necessary expenses of cultivation, is contrasted with that of the English farmer. According to Arthur Young, the English farmer receives about four and a half per cent on the purchase money, calculating the gross produce of the ground at twenty. This upon it 18 £ (the rent) per acre, for one year, as in Table I, would give £ 1 4.

The produce, per acre, for one year, in Flanders (see Table B.), is £7 9 1 which, deducting £1 4 for expenses of cultivation, land tax, and rent, according to Vanderstraten is £6 5 1, leaving to the farmer £2 9 0; or £2 11 more than the amount obtained by the English farmer.

The subject of Flemish Husbandry is by no means exhausted. I shall resume it in my next communications. Yours, respectfully,

GEO. HOUSTON.

It is well known, that vegetables will grow in poor soil by watering them, not that it is necessary they should, but the watered the seeds of vegetables in poor stiff soil, and others in a dry soil, and even among metal, or common garden mud; and in every instance, they grew luxuriant; and Nature in her simple progress, has taught us that water is the principal, and the slightest assistance in the course she employs.

PROSPECTUS
YORK ESTATE DIRECTORY,
AND LAND PRICE CURRENT OFFICE.

The object and use of this Office will be best learned from the heads under which and hereafter may be granted by the British Government to individuals of every class, for facilitating both the Settlement and all other Affairs of the Province.

By a general collection of located lands, as likewise of improved farms to be sold or let, and of the Information of Estate or Real Property, in the healthy County of which the Town of York is the Capital, connected with a corresponding agency in Europe, will promote the introduction of ample means, to support of the landed interest of Upper Canada.

The most important branch of this institution, must therefore necessarily arise out of the collection of local reports and their operative effect upon Foreign Capital, through which the true and progress of the State of Agriculture in this Province will be rather be made known by the public journals as a Desideratum for the attainment of so desirable an object, it is proposed to receive statistical accounts from resident holders of estate, (with a further view to the profession of labour,) of whatever improvements have been made since original surveys and grants of land in each township; whether of public roads, bridges, canals, mills, or imported farms, together with all other requisite information, &c. whereby the relative value of land may be justly computed to form a True Current for public use.

But as the transmission of such local reports from every township to York, where the seat of Government is held, will be attended with certain expense of postage to the office, and with other incoming its charges necessarily to the proper application of them, for the press; no reports will be received out of the conveyance is free from expense, and the charges are remitted with the same, for every words contained in the said reports.

It may therefore be important to point out a more prised form, with the most simple mode of collecting and forwarding such statistical reports from every township, this is easily accomplished by local information, obtained at any parish or other general meeting held by the respective Magistrates; where it can also be ascertained, what each individual's share of the expense subscribing to the report will be, according to the length agreed upon to be furnished; which in few instances can exceed 10 sh or 2s 6d Curr's.*

Reports of large tracts of land ; from parishes or districts, will of course be more faithfully published upon the same terms.

☞ Land Proprietors who wish to exchange (by contract) with axe-men for the cleaning of timber, by communicating their proposals to the proper office, will receive the value of money) and one dollar, free of postage, for the Registry of the same, will be duly recorded in the books of this Office, for the inspection of labourers.

Axe men who take land in lieu of money, on a negotiated their engagement, will receive 1 dollar. Those who take half land and half cash, one dollar; and others who take only cash, one dollar a day in bulk.

Printed circular letters of information for every, case, will be forwarded to all, who grable with postage, as occasion may require.

All original reports will be regularly filed and published yearly in a quarto twelve number.

Public sales of estates will be held at York, monthly.

Notice will be given (near the Crown Office to York,) on the 1st day of August next.

FROM EUROPE.

From the London Courier, May 11.

That we are suffering very considerably, from the stagnation of our trade and manufactures, cannot be denied. We are not alone, however in our unfortunate situation. The following extract from one of the directors of the bank of the United States, to a friend in Manchester, will testify. It will serve also to refute a deal of bright vision in the pictures which Mr. Baring drew the other night, of the prosperous condition of all the rest of the world compared with our own.

"Our difficulties in commerce, whether mercantile or domestic, come over without abatement. Men of business are like pot-nuts in the last stage of consumption, hoping for a favorable change, but growing weaker every day till they expire."

"Dismal as the prospects are on your side the water, they are not worse than ours. You have some regular and profitable trade—we have none. It is all stagnation and bankruptcy. When I came to this country, on the first day of my arrival in Philadelphia, I walked round some correspondents whom I had before known by name, but never at home except then; and I would without the least hesitation have sold them goods to the amount of one hundred thousand pounds. Now I do not know the persons doing business; and there is not one amongst them whose solvency I would trust for one thousand pounds.—What a difference!"

A large continuance of the distress in the commercial world has a fatal effect on the morality of the whole community. The vast number of failures takes away their odium. Men fail in parties for centuries past; and the barriers of honesty are broken down by a perpetual legislation suited to the condition of insolvent debtors. We have now one to suit every one of the debt. Credit is become very rare, as you may well imagine, for we have nothing to depend upon but actual honesty! Hence even the commercial duties are suffering great alarm in this city from incendiaries, and have succeeded in setting fire to a great number of buildings. On Sunday evening our Theatre was entirely destroyed. It produced a considerable sum: I cannot tell exactly a heavy mow had fallen during the day, and the roof of the house being covered with ice, it never preserved any fire whatever; otherwise we should have had a most dreadful conflagration.

"During the former prosperous times of this country, it was an universal complaint that the expenses of living were extravagantly high; but it is now sufficiently known that our commercial duties, we

3. And be it further enacted, That each of the boards constituted in the fourteenth section of the act hereby amended, shall be constituted as to appoint any trustee of the said village to hold and exercise their office, after a majority of other and succeeding trustees shall have taken and sworn or declared the oath of office as such trustee; and that in case the number of trustees in the said village shall at any time be reduced below the number of five, by death, inability or refusal to serve, it shall be the duty of the remaining trustees of the said village, qualified to vote for the purpose of filling such vacancies, and shall cause fourteen days notice of the time and place of such election to be published in the newspapers of the village; and such election shall be conducted in all respects in the same manner as is prescribed by the said act for the annual election of such trustees."

Now what, we would inquire, is "the duty of the said trustees?" We would tell them that we have had, to do this bounden duty all the courts in Christendom, to carry this section of the law into effect, there have always been men in both branches, eminent for their talents and legal learning. But there have always been a disgrace to the profession, and such an enormous load of business thrown upon them, that it is impossible for them to accomplish it all, as they would wish.

There is another thing worthy of notice. Two years is the utmost time within which the trustees hereinbefore named by the said trustees or their predecessors, and which they have not by this act confirmed, and are a disgrace to the profession, and which warrants, or rates or taxes which may be issued for the collection of any taxes imposed as aforesaid, by virtue of the act hereby amended, or of this act, from time to time, so often as such warrants shall not be returned, collected during the time prescribed by law."

It would seem by passing such laws as this, that, notwithstanding when the lawyers are called upon to give a construction to these statutes, they declare that themselves confused, yet they are still found on many occasions to be exceedingly necessary; and it is questionable that a sufficient way will be found to keep them quiet, until they shall be confirmed in the belief from a practical test at the legislature.—Lord Coke tells us, that "at the Parliament holden at Carlisgate, anno 6. H. 4. the parliament was examined by writ, and it was further provided in the Legislature, by the words—much less write a grant of parliament." Now we appeal to the common sense of mankind, whether such men fit to represent the people and legislate for them, and therefore in Legislature? Are such men qualified to be called "substantial parliamentarians," or to be considered as "sound lawyers?" But this ill-prepared lawyer is obviously attributable to the professional prejudices of Lord Coke.

We have some reason to believe that the improvement we have referred to in the method of preparing bills, has been adopted by congress. The third section of the act respecting the Slave Trade, passed during the session of 1818, page 91, bears striking marks of similar intelligence. It is there enacted, that persons guilty of fitting out ships, &c. in Shall on conviction thereof, by due course of law, forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding $3000, or less than $1000—one moiety to the use of the United States, and the other to the use of the person or persons who shall sue for such forfeiture, and who shall be admitted to forfeit, and shall moreover be imprisoned for a term not less than three years."—Now, to our ignorant appeal to applicants, that by the strict letter of the law, on the conviction of the offender, he is to be imprisoned, and must sue pay a penalty in the National and State Legislatures alone shall sue for such forfeiture, is enabled to sue half, and the suit as the case may be, which is for the benefit of the offender, on his conviction, pays the fine unto county; and who is the informer who is to sue for the forfeiture, or to reconcile the jarring feelings of the North and South.—But while it discourages the slave trade, such a law opens apparent advantages to smugglers, it evidently puts insuperable obstacles to their recovering the penalty.

But although in the preceding remarks, we have occasionally indulged in a vein of irony, the subject before us is one of engrossing importance, and we must have; but in order to answer the purposes for which they are enacted, it is necessary that they be drawn up with the utmost nicety and exactness. The law which we discussed this article, must have its limit, and therefore, it will be desirable in order to avoid unnecessary expense, that the time at which they should come immediately forward and tender it payment at the earliest period.

Wheat, Rye and Pork will be taken in payment at the current prices.

It may therefore be important to point out some pre-ribed forms, with the most simple mode of collecting and forwarding such statistical reports from every township, this is easily accomplished by local information, obtained at any point, or other general meeting held by the inhabitants; when a rate can also be ascertained, what each individual's share of the expense subscribing to the report will be, according to the length agreed upon to be transmitted; which as few instances can exceed to 3d or 6s full Curr.'s.

Reports of large tracts of land (from private individuals) will be received and faithfully published upon the same terms

Old Land Proprietors who wish to engage (by contract) with any one for the clearing of timber, by commencing from the proposed to the payment of labor (whether in land or money) and one half, free of postage, for the Registry of the same, will be duly recorded in the Land of this Office, for the inspection of laborers.

Any one who take land in lieu of money, or who register their own tracts of abode at 1 dollar. Those who take half land and half cash, one dollar; and others who take only cash, one dollar and a half.

A Copenhagen paper announces the death of the celebrated Icelandic poet, John Thorlakson, who had translated into his native language Milton's Paradise Lost at Klopstock's Messiah.

Morley's Gaming Law.—It will be recollected that, some time ago, John Morley, the keeper of a gambling-house at No. 3, Newman-street, and others, were fined in the penalty of £200 for having allowed a game of hazard to be played, in his house. The gentleman who appeared against the defendant in a merchant of respectability whose orgies had lost considerable sums of money in the house at the game above mentioned, and the defendant was not to be found for some time.

There existed some doubt as to the legality of the conviction no summons having been served upon Morley to appear and answer to the charge, and the conviction having been made notwithstanding the absence of the man under such circumstances. A summons, however, had been sent down to attend at the Guildhall Sessions, when Morley was making a fortune upon the very extensive plan that was going forward and the Lord Mayor's interference was then requested.

The Lord Mayor said, he should make every effort to keep down so ruinous an encroachment; but seemed to question the validity of the conviction, as no summons or said he should take the opinion of the City Solicitor upon the subject, and, if the conviction proved good, issue a warrant of distress against the goods and chattels of Morley.

His Lordship having consulted the very respectable not only alluded to, and being answered to his satisfaction, issued the warrant to the officer, named Hordsfield, to enter upon the goods of the defendant for the sum of £200.

Hordsfield, accompanied by Martin and Beardsworth, accordingly entered the premises, and took an inventory on Tuesday last. They were not only refused the admittance of the police, but were threatened with actions for trespass, &c. The officers, however, determined to take possession of the goods in the defendant for the sum of £200.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A new mode of diving has just been patented by Wilson Brookfield. By this mode, the patentee states, that a person may descend to any desirable depth. The diver can stay beneath the surface of the water until he be impelled up by hunger or thirst. He can walk on the bottom of the sea, work at pleasure, and see objects distinctly in clear water. Upon the same principles by which the diver is to be kept in a proper condition during the water; if they happen to get low it not only injures the valves of the machine, but the pressure will be after before they recover. It is the best plan to feed them well in the beginning and keep them in danger of filling all connected with the Brewing business.

LONDON, May 2.

THE CORONATION.

Court of Claims—Yesterday, pursuant to the adjournment, the court was again held, in the painted chamber of the house of Lords, to receive the petitions of those who claim by virtue of ancient customs to find assistance, and to render services, to perform certain duties and offices at the ensuing royal coronation.

Lord Harrowby (the lord president of the council) was the president of this court. On his right were seated the dukes of York and Clarence; and at the long table were opposed lords Amherst, Athol, Arden, Cl. Hedley, C. Cavendish, B. stock, Macclesfield, Donoughmore, and Erskine; Sir Wm. Grant, Sir H. Russell, Sir W. Scott, Mr. R. P. Carew, Mr. Bathurst, &c.

The deputy e rjeant at arms, R. Butt, Esq. then proclaimed silence "on pain of imprisonment," and demanded what persons who had claims to urge, to appear and prefer them. The common hand spectators below the bar were uncommonly numerous, and the greatest anxiety was evinced to hear the curious claims that were expected to be preferred. At the last court there were but three strangers present.

Claims of the city of London.

The counsel engaged, attended by the remembrancer of the city of London, presented a petition, stating the claim of the lord mayor to serve the king at his dinner with wine, from a golden cup, and to have the cup as his departure for his fee and reward. The claim was founded upon that of the chief magistrate's predecessors, who had exercised it from a time whereof the memory of man was not to the contrary, and it was demanded for George Bridges, Esq. the present lord mayor.—A claim was preferred by divers others of the citizens of London, to serve in the office of butlers, and to have the usual fees. His lordship, chained besides, sat at the table next the large corner of the lord's side of the hall. This custom, it was observed, had been laid from the time of William the 3d to that of George the 3d.

The Rev. Fred. W. Blomberg, and two other prebends of Westminster, stationed in their canonical robes, presented a petition from the dean and chapter of Westminster, claiming to be allowed as investitor, to instruct the sovereign in the rites and ceremonies used at his coronation; to assist the arch Bishop of Canterbury in the performance of the divine services; and to assist him in the custody of the coronation robes.—For these services they claimed to have robes both as dean and prebendaries, and for ministry members of the said church, 6 yards of saye, at, two shillings and three pence per yard to put off in the church, consisting of two upper vestments; the several oblations, fruits of the church, the bells situated to the canopy, the cloth used in his majesty's walks from the church door of the abbey to the banquet in the hall, &c.

Lord Harrowby asked whether these terms were similar to those used on the former application and one of the prebends answered in the affirmative.

Dorset Fellows, Esq. secretary to lord Gwydir, the hereditary deputy lord great chamberlain of England, presented the petition of his lordship, claiming the right of his said office to be admitted to perform the duties and services of his high office; to have living and lodging in the king's court at all times; to bring to his majesty, on the day of the royal coronation, his majesty's table, cloth, and drawers, with the lord chamberlain of the household for the time being, of whom his majesty in all his apparel on that day, and to have all the fees and profits thereunto belonging, namely, forty yards of crimson velvet for his dress and robe the day of coronation, together with the bed wherein the king lyeth the night previous to the coronation, together with all the curtains and cushions, and all the cushions and clothes within the same. And also the night robe of the king, wherein he lyeth, or is to lye the night previous to the coronation, and likewise to serve his majesty with water, as well before as after dinner on the said day of his royal coronation, and to have the basins and towels, and the cup of assay, for his fees. Those were set forth as rights, privileges, fees, and emoluments belonging to the high office of lord great chamberlain, and claimed by his lordship's predecessors in the of fice.

The barons of the Cinque ports, by their petition claimed to carry over the king in his progression a canopy of cloth of gold or purple silk, with a gilt staff at each corner, supported by four barons covered with silver, four barons to each staff, (making 16 in number); and to serve for their fee the canopy, bells, and staves, with the privilege of dining at a table on the king's right hand and to have for their fee the canopy, bells, and staves, with the privilege of dining at a table on the king's right hand and to have for their fee the canopy put by lord Harrowby, was declared to be word for word, similar to the baron's former petition.

A petition was presented from the Rev. St. John Dymoke, rector of Scrisbeby, and prebendary of Lincon, claiming the right to ride into the hall, while the feast of coronation is proceeding mounted on one of the king's coursers, and clad in one of the king's best suits of armour. It was further stated, that if the petitioner should not be able to come himself, well armed for war, he claimed to send a substitute, who should ride in the person of William Reader, Esq. late of Westminster hall, in a full suit of armour, and mounted on a good war horse, the trumpet sounding before the king at dinner, and proclaim, by the mouth of a herald, the following challenge:

"If any person of what degree soever, high or low, shall deny or gain say our sovereign lord, George IV. king of Great Britain, &c. to be the right heir to the imperial crown of the realm of Great Britain, or that he ought not to enjoy the same—here is his champion, who saith that he lieth, and is a false traitor, being ready to perform it combat with him: or in his quarrel will adventure his life against him, on what day soever shall be appointed."

The champion then shall throw down his gauntlet and if nobody do deny that George IV. is the rightful king, the champion shall drink out of a golden cup to the king, and when he has drunk his majesty's health, shall take away the cup, and the charger, for his reward, with 1000 yards of crimson coloured satin as his fees.

The lord of the manor of Heydon, in Essex, claimed to hold the basin and ewer to the king when his majesty washes before dinner, and after the king shall have dined, to have and to hold the towel by virtue of another moiety of the manor; to have the towel on his fee.

The duke of Athol, who, it is said, is to be seat on the upper bench, by the dukes of York and Clarence, then rose and presented a petition in his own person in behalf of his son, a lord of the isle of Man, to present two falcons to his majesty during actual service of the day of coronation, and to have the said two purchased from the duke of Athol, the tenure ship he'd reserved to the grace; and the service had been performed by his ancestor at the coronation of George II. and by the duke's grandfather at the crowning of George III. On the duke of Athol's rising, it was with much conversation ensued. The duke of York suggested that a more regular petition should be preparer than that the duke of Athol said, that the last petition was in the claims, and that he had be unable to get the whole, but on lord Harrowby observing that no doubt the terms would be given, it was arranged that a new petition should be framed.

Sir G. Nayler, clarenceux king of arms, appeared with the petition of Thomas Bisbigten, Esq. claiming to present the king with three maple cups, by himself or his deputy.

Charles Henry, lord viscount Maynard, as lord of the manor of Easton, at the Mount, Essex, consider claimed (as against lord Abergavenny, noticed in the former report) to serve the office of caterer and larderer.

Mr. Bellamy, (of the vote office of the house of commons) presented a petition claiming to exercise, by virtue of his office of chief constable of the royal palace, the duties of "cook and crier," during the progress of the royal coronation. Such application having been read to the petitioner and the commissioners, and the petition was eventually rejected although it was considered doubtful whether it was not refe able to the head of green cloth.

Richard Waldgrave, Esq. for the manor of Great Wymondley, Herfordshire, claimed to serve the king with the first cup of silver gilt at dinner, and to have the cup for his fee. But his claim was opposed by the noble family of Allington, but it was a few years since sold, under an act of parliament, by auction.

The baron as of Bathven, on behalf of her son, a minor, Baron Grey de Ruthven, claimed that the ba ron might be allowed to carry the king's great golden spur before his majesty among the regalia in the procession to the abbey in the service denoting upon Lord Grey by deece from the family of Hastings, earls of Pembroke, who performed the service.

The Hon. R. G. Herbert, (brother of the earl of Carnarvon) by his son counsel, claimed to be allowed to hold the office as lord of the manor of Buckenham, Norfolk, the office of chief butler.

The earl of Exeter, as possessed of the barony of Bedford, in the county of Bedford, claimed to execute the office of almoner; and to have for his fees, the silver basin, with the distribution of all the silver therein, together with a fine linen towel, and all the cloth spread on the ground on which his majesty walks; with a tun of wine, &c.

No other claimants appearing by themselves or their deputies, the court was cleared of strangers. The lords commissioners continued in discussion, till half past two o'clock.—The doors were then re-opened.

Lord Harrowby intimated, that the court would be adjourned for several days, till June 5th; and that in the meantime, no application being made to the deputy clerk of the crown office, the applicants would be informed what evidence was required by the commissioners in support of the several claims.—Adjourned.

Mr. James Watt, the great improver of the steam-engine, died on the 25th ult. at his seat of Heathfield, near Birmingham, in the 84th year of his age.

This name, fortunately, needs no commemoration of ours; for he that bore it survived to see it crowned with undisputed and well-earned honours, and many generations will probably pass away before it shall have "gathered all its fame." We have only to add that Mr. Watt was the great improver of the steam-engine; but, in truth, as to all that is admirable in its structure, or useful in its utility, he should rather be described as its inventor. It was by his inventions that its action was so regulated as to make it capable of being applied to the finest and most delicate manufactures, and its power accommodated to set weight and solidity at pleasure. It was by his inventions that it has become a thing stupendous alike for its force and flexibility; for the purposes of which power was first created, and the ease and precision and dexterity with which it can be moderated to the finest and most delicate touch. And then, first of all, by his contrivances and improvements, it was applied to his own mill, and made to do all the processes for which it had been before employed; and, finally, it was transferred from his private and vigorous account to the theories and arguments of tedious lectures, where it has since been made to perform wonders for the most faithful study of the originals; and that errors which have been detected and corrected in the mere clearness and plainness of his statement of them, which might have defied and perplexed most of his brethren, are now universally overlooked.

It is needless to say, that, with these vast resources, his conversation was at all times rich and instructive in no ordinary degree; and that, in company, he was more pleasing than wise, and had all the charms of familiarity, with all the superiority of a great mind. Those who could be more social to his spirit, less assuming or fastidious in his manners, or more delightful and communicative, we never approached him. He rather liked to talk, at least in his latter years; listened with a very indulgent attention to the conversation, he rarely suggested the topics on which it was to turn, but readily and quietly took up whatever was presented to him, and sometimes astonished the idle and barren propensities of an ordinary theme, by the treasures which he drew from that unlikely soil. They had not consciously opened. He generally seemed indeed to have no clear perception of the subjects of conversation, or even to know on what, but suppose his mind, like a great cyclopædia, to be arranged in such a way that it was always ready to turn up, and only endeavoured to select from his inexhaustible stores what he thought best adapted to the taste of his present hearers. As to the especial topics of his own study, he was always ready to converse on them, and that often unasked, and even unsolicited, by the interrogations of others

SKETCHES.

OR THE

Agricultural History of Scotland, unfinished.

In order to keep the cows in good condition during the winter a greater or less quantity of turnips is given to them daily. Sometimes the quantity is very small, but even a small quantity is of great advantage to them, and serves at the same time to improve the manure in an equal degree. Besides this it is common to sometimes before they calve, but more especially after it till they get the new pasture, to give them a decoction of hay cut small, or of the chaff of barley or of oats with a few potatoes or turnips or light oats added to it. A large boiler or cauldron is kept in the byre, and filled with chaff (that of barley is esteemed the best) or hay cut short or both together, which are well boiled in water. It is then poured into a cooler or large wooden vessel, some times over a quantity of dry chaff, but oftener of sweated turnips, potatoes or light oats, the bulk of flax, the dust of boiled barley, or shelled oats, &c. &c. and covered up for sometimes till an infusion takes place. It is then cooled down to blood heat or so, and divided out to the cows in buckets

I have already said that the encreased produce and profits of the dairy will repay the trouble and expense of this system, and indeed, if they did not it could not be continued. The profits cannot be exactly the same in every part of the country, yet the difference is often not so great as one would suppose upon a partial and cursory view of the subject. In the vicinity of large towns, wherever it is a good demand, the price is proportionably high; but then the expences of keeping a cow are likewise higher than I at other places, so that a kind of balance is preserved. In different parts of the country too the produce of the dairy is manufactured in different ways so as to suit the situation of the place, and ensure a market. In Ayrshire for instance, the whole of the milk is made into a rich and valuable cheese, which is always in request & brings a good price. In the vicinity of some of the largest towns, again, it is common to churn the whole of the milk with the cream in it, and to carry both the butter and butter milk to the market together. A different system from any of these is pursued in Fife which is enormously peopled by operative manufacturers and small cottagers. The cream is first taken from the milk, which latter is afterwards sometimes formed into a thin paper cheese that is sold at 3d or 3½ per lb.; and the whey is also sold at 1d gallon. A similar practice is common in Dumfriesshire, & some others of the southern counties, and by the whey is given to pigs, after the first of it has been extracted by a certain process for the use of the family.

Taking the average of the country the rent profits upon a good cow may be rated at £10 or 20 per annum, from which the purchaser who understood nothing of its perspective, said, "The landscape is very fine, but the grave are well made, but St. Jerome in the cave!" "I would stand you, Sir," replied Vernet; "I will alter it." He, therefore, took the pallet from the hand of the slumbering saint, and the Saint seemed to sit further in.—The gentleman took the painting, and it again was valued for double the number of pounds at £2 10 0 the items to be deducted from the gross profits will amount to £7 10 0 which is only equal to 10 as the clear profits upon a good cow for one year.

Perhaps it may be thought that nothing of this kind is ever to be expected in this province, where the produce of the dairy must be less valuable, and where, as it is commonly observed, the cows have to be fed upon hay through such a long period of the year. With regard to the value of the produce of the dairy,

I can only observe, that I have only been two years in this province, and have hitherto found it higher than I expected to be, and for the last three years previous to my leaving Scotland, the price of butter in the Edinburgh market would not average higher than 1s 4d per lb. avoirdupois, and which is not 1 1-8d. per lb. and in the part of the county where I happened to reside, it did not during the period I have mentioned average higher than 11d. per lb. avoirdupois; and with respect to the length of the period, during which they require to be fed upon hay, I can state it as a positive fact, that through the whole of the lowlands of Scotland, milch cows and indeed horses, are not justified in the belief, that before the expenditures of the season by any thing from the fields between the 10th of November, and the 10th or 20th of May.

The breed of this province is certainly very inferior; and in addition to this, the cattle are starved for six months in the year; and as if this was not enough, they are frozen into the bargain; and many are afraid of keeping them two warm during the winter. I do not how ever think there is any danger of that, at least I have never seen the most distant approach to it. I have already expressed my opinion that the Ayrshire breed will be every great acquisition to the province. It might also be of advantage to have a better breed of working cattle, and I know of none equal in this respect to the Angus and Aberdeenshire breed, in which a great proportion of the power and weight of the Donkey breed are joined to the fineness and bone of the Kintail; but it will be of little use to have either the one breed or the other, unless a better system of management is adopted.

FRENCH WOMEN.

From "Sketches of French manners and machines."

The women do not, as in England, employ themselves solely in household and nursery affairs; but they mix themselves with all the cares of their husbands, and assist them in their trade and business, whatever it be. Thus they are constantly found in the counting houses and shops; and they know as much, and often more, of the details of a trade than their husbands. In Dieppe, every variety of shop and trade had a woman assisting in it, who from her application, might generally be considered as the master as of the family. At a blacksmith's shop, for instance, I saw a young woman, with a woman's strength, shoeing a horse; and passing a second time, I saw her filing at a vice. I expressed my astonishment to the neighbours, but they seemed rather disposed to laugh at me than join in my laugh at the woman.

I learned that she was a widow, and thus kept up her husband's trade to rear a large family. In Paris I complimented the pretty wife of an embroiderer for her knowledge of the different prices of paper, printing, and engraving, in which she several times corrected expressions of her husband. I understood that the French ladies must have great patients thus to learn a trade to the luxury of those, which had employed their husbands; and that I supposed she would require equally expert at my other trade, if, for instance, a widow, she should marry another husband in some other line. "Ah! Monsieur," said she, "we encourage to instruct our daughters in every thing that may give them power — so our only pleasure — for we are rare, and consequently much sought after; and it is our calamity to become widows, and we must then be more than ever ready, we do the best we can for him also." This was the exact sentiment I heard the same answer, and I can affirm that, although there are not so many handsome French women as in England, yet those in the way of being generally interesting — are so industrious and thrifty — or more attached wives or more affectionate mothers.

ANECDOTE OF A PAINTER.

The Painter Vernet, relates that somebody had once employed him to paint a landscape with a cave and St. Jerome.

He accordingly painted the clouds, the sky, with St. Jerome in the ——

The painter had finished the picture, the purchaser who understood nothing of its perspective, said, "The landscape is very fine, but the grave are well made, but St. Jerome in the cave!" "I would stand you, Sir," replied Vernet; "I will alter it." He, therefore, took the pallet from the hand of the slumbering saint, and the Saint seemed to sit further in.—The gentleman took the painting, and it again was valued for double the number of pounds at £2 10 0 the items to be deducted from the gross profits will amount to £7 10 0 which is only equal to 10 as the clear profits upon a good cow for one year.

The Carnations.—In several of the American papers, we have observed that the seed is higher than ever did at this season; and for the last three years previous to my leaving Scotland, the price of butter in the Edinburgh market would not average higher than 1s 4d per lb. avoirdupois, and which is not 1 1-8d. per lb. and in the part of the county where I happened to reside, it did not during the period I have mentioned average higher than 11d. per lb. avoirdupois; and with respect to the length of the period, during which they require to be fed upon hay, I can state it as a positive fact, that through the whole of the lowlands of Scotland, milch cows and indeed horses, are not justified in the belief, that before the expenditures of the season by any thing from the fields between the 10th of November, and the 10th or 20th of May.

Great preparations it is true, are making in England, for the ensuing coronation, and vast sums of money will necessarily be expended. But we do not agree in the opposition papers, of that country, any murmuring upon this account. A coronation is the most splendid, as well the most solemn ceremony of which Great Britain can boast; and as the period is so far distant since any similar ceremony took place, it is not surprising that such general interest existe[s] regarding the preparations for the approaching grand celebration. We have seen it somewhere stated, that the person of coronation, regardless of the general distress of the nation, is greatly to exceed in pomp and splendour, all that have gone before. But this is incorrect. Even the London Traveller, a strong opposition paper, says—"The magnificence and parade which characterised some ancient coronations, are materially limited in modern ones. Formerly, for instance, the sovereign proceeded on horseback from the Tower to the Royal Palace at Westminster, thence to the Abbey, or Parliament Hall. This was the custom from the reign of Richard II, to that of Charles II; and it is added, the procession of the latter Monarch from the Tower to the Palace at Westminster," a mode of expression still used, through Hall only extended 2 miles, which was the extent of the ceremonies connected with the Coronation, took up the following day! From the observations contained in the extract of the important pro- ding have since been limited to the Hall and the Abbey."

It is amusing that all has been said in relation to the expense of this Coronation and the extravagant prices which have been charged for seats to view the splendid spectacle, is true, and what does it prove? Not that the people are to be pitied and more particularly by an unfeeling Parliament, when they refuse to let us ask, go out of the country: No. On the contrary, thousands of miners in Wales, Scotland, and the north of England, the Brewers, Distillers, Bankers, Merchants, and mechanics, will share the money amongst them. Hundreds, nay thousands, may be found who will not be content with a Petition in the said Court of Probate, setting forth that the said Mungo K. y and Isabella Campbell, died intestate, leaving an liberal wages, who, were it not for the coronation, they, and their families might have to want. But the most splendid part of the whole will be that which is found for next-to-the royal fete,—the Time: but with pays this money, and who pays it? A new tax in due proportion will be imposed upon the whole people, and the Duties levied on the articles of consumption. The Carpenter's Company, in the case of the Royal Barges, and in favour of the undersigned, and the late Richard Pattinson, deceased, of all their Estates, realised personal, moveable and immoveable, as well as owing to them, individually or as such Copartners, also all and every the rights, claims and pretensions, as well as the Estate of Robert Armour and Daniel, as of the Estate of Hugh Armour, and the Incumbrancers carrying on trade at the City of Montreal, of STOVES, Single and Double, DUTCH OVENS, DOG IRONS, CART & WAGGON BOXES, PIPES for Spouts, and Sets of Weights, on an improved construction &c. &c.

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, June 24.

It appears by the Dublin papers received this morning, that there is not much chance of Mr. Grattan being returned for that city. The greater part of the Guilds have met, and agreed to resolutions, by large majorities, in favor of Mr. Ellis. The Guild of merchants, with the exception of two dissentient voices, unanimously resolved to support that gentleman. We are sorry, however, to observe, that the contest is likely to assume a religious character, and that the claims of the Irish Catholics are to be identified with the respective candidates. This will be bad enough; but worse is to be apprehended.

LONDON, June 26.

The marriage of the grand duke Constantine took place on the 24th ult. at Warsaw; his consort is to take the title of princess de Kruezinska, which is her family name.

It was lately mentioned that the emperor of Russia had addressed a declaration to the different courts of Europe respecting the arrest of vessels in Spain. An article from Stockholm, of the 2d inst. states, that this declaration had been brought to that court by capt. Saunders, who has absolutely set out on the like mission to Copenhagen. It is added that other couriers with a similar dispatch, had been sent to Berlin, Paris and Vienna. Not a single hint, however, is given as to the contents of the papers.

The accounts from Hanover in these papers repeat with more confidence a report which was recently contradicted, that our sovereign intends to proceed thither before the end of the year, for the purpose of being crowned king of Hanover. It is added, that the palace of Herrenhausen has been rapidly fitted up for his majesty's reception.—Mens. Chron.

We understand that her majesty intends to visit Drury lane theatre to-morrow evening, when the performances will be, at her majesty's request, Who Owns, and Bombastes Furioso.

Extract of a letter from St. Helena, dated the 2d May, 1820:—"The lady Melville and Canning (company's ships) arrived here yesterday from England, after a very excellent passage of 57 days. This morning his majesty's ship the Fourth was paid off, and is now at sea about 40 or 42 years of age. The Conqueror, rear admiral Plampin, will leave this station for England about the end of June or beginning of July. The crews of the different ships are in excellent health, the sick list of the squadron not having exceeded 25 for several months past.

The number of vessels that entered the port of Liverpool during the year ending June 24, 1820, was 7276—viz. from foreign ports 4317; coasters 2745 at inclusive of 314 vessels under 80 tons. This tonnage is greater than that of any preceding year except 1819, when it was 867,318 tons.

It is suggested that the coronation will probably be postponed from the 1st to the 29th of August, both to give time for the necessary preparations, and in expectation of more temperate weather.

Sir Joseph Banks has left his fine library to the British museum. His estate after the death of Lady Banks, is divided between the families of Soulsby and Knatchbull.

LIVERPOOL, July 1.

The discussions upon the present very extraordinary situation of the queen consort of Great Britain, increases in interest as they proceed. In order to understand the actual posture of this unhappy contest, it is necessary that our readers should have a retrospective view of the proceedings which have taken place in parliament since our last publication.

Mr. Wilberforce's motion of Thursday se'nnight, undertaken as it appears without the concurrence of ministers, was clearly framed to induce her majesty to give up the question of the liturgy, which is now, it seems, the great point of confidence. It was hoped that the solemn address of the house of commons with a claim to acknowledgment that no imputations of four or consequences of dishonor were to be implicated in her majesty's compliance, would have shaken her determination on this leading article. But the queen was immoveable. Her answer, which was couched in terms the most decorous and respectful, intimated with sufficient firmness that it was not the part of conscious secrecy to retract its portentous. Such are the narrow limits of a court which disturbs the tranquility of a great nation, and interrupts its business at a season of peculiar difficulty. It seems to require some too much time and encouragement there in private life, which are often projected to the ruin of domestic peace, to see one another party will be the first to be tried. In such cases it is commonly reckoned that the party which first gives way, shows the most understanding, and we shall be much mistaken, if that of her majesty would give up this affair of the liturgy, which is after all, only a cere-monial observance, and which neither her majesty nor ministers thus suffer degradation. The great question of the queen's innocence or dishonor must remain just where it was. With respect to the queen herself it is impossible not to remark that her lately unfavorable physical appearance interplays with reason hardly be thought compatible with a secret consciousness of guilt.

The next step in this unfortunate course, was a notice from lord Castlereagh, on Monday night, that he should, in the course of ten or twelve days, propose a motion which would bring the nature of the charges against her majesty distinctly before the house, and enable parliament to proceed with the due exercise of its functions. His lordship proposed on Tuesday, in order to save time for the secret committee in the other house to produce its report, and determine its future proceedings. This was objected to by Mr. Brougham, as otherwise the two houses would have been engaged, by a sort of collateral and useless process, in the same secret investigation at the same time.

On the following day, however, before the secret committee of the lords had entered on its functions, lord Grey made a distinct motion, that the committee should be dissolved; and in a speech of great length and ability, supported his proposition with great eloquence and powerful argument, but those efforts were unsuccessful, and unavailable in reduction of general position, with which this question ought to be kept, if possible, unconnected. He contended that the functions imposed on uniting a certain number of peers, by a cursory glance at ex-parte evidence, to report whether a case was such as ought to be brought before the house in its judicial capacity; and he insisted strongly upon the unprecedented aspect of a secret jury, as abstract to the spirit of British justice, and repulsory to the current of public opinion. Lord Lansdowne, in reply, sustained all reference to popular tendency or prejudice in a question of this nature, and maintained that lord Grey's proposed arrangement was objectionable, inasmuch as the affair was not likely to come before the upper house in its judicial capacity; and he insisted strongly upon the unpleasant aspect of a secret jury, as abstract to the spirit of British justice, and repulsory to the current of public opinion. Lord Liverpool

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Pawnees find the formidable animal, the white or grisly bear in the following excursions towards the head of the La Platte river. On the Missouri, it is seldom seen below the great bend and is found most frequently on the Yellow Stone, and its branches, and at the three forks of the Missouri. This bear will instantly attack a man, if approached very near. Indians think at a great exploit to kill one of them. When they are alarmed, they run completely on their hind legs, and dart forward by jumps; they move much faster than a man can run, raising forward with the utmost ferocity, their mouths wide open, and snapping the ir teeth, which makes a noise like the shutting of a steel trap. A man attacked by the m on the open plains of the Missouri, has but little chan e of escape. If there be a tree near to climb, one will hie to take to. The tenacity of life in these animals, has been exaggerated, but in very remarkable; on many an occasion balls have been put into them, without killing them, but there are also instances of their being killed by two or even one ball their most mortal part is directly under the ear; th y attack and kill a bull by dragging him to their haunts where they bury it they do not wish it to eat him.

These animals are as fierce, ardent and furious, that they soon exhaust their strength; in pursuit; they are hunted by the indians on horse back; a party of three or four men, well mounted, approach the bear, and one of them provokes him to pursue him, this he does with his utmost force; the horseman to avoid the bear, has to put his horse to his metal; he leads him round a circle, toward his companions, one of whom provokes him; he is easily made to quit the old pursuit, and join in the new he is again led round, and again induced to pursue a fresh horse; the bear pursued would he becomes completely exhausted, lays down apparently lifeless i n perfectly hors de combat, and may be approach d to shot, by putting the muzzle of the gun to his ear. Nothing can be more amusing, it is said, than this hunt, there is no danger of the bear overtaking the horse, until he falls; if, however, the rider should be thrown, an the bear get a blow at him, d oth appears inevitable. Such is the unmoved force with which they use their claws. It takes a bear four or five years to attain its growth; they are supposed to arri- e at a very old age, as they are frequ ently found with their claws worn out.

Mr William Johnston, of the Point, has thirty acres of rye, more than one third of which is eight feet in length, and stalks have been found measuring nine feet seven inches. I have no doubt stalks might be found ten feet in length.

A few days ago I was informed by Mr Simon Singer, who resided near Greensburgh, that his hands, while employed in mowing his meadow, discovered a partridge quietly sitting on her nest, to which they were attracted, perhaps by curiosity ; after frightening her away, they found a snake (a tuberdale-ape,) coiled round the eggs, and apparently undisturbed by the partridge.

FROM THE NEW YORK SPECTATOR.

The first of the series of Hogg's Weekly Evening Tales is the "Heroes and Adventures of Basil Lee," a personage who, like most heroes in these volumes, is in real life, but quite novel herein in general, possesses a mixture of faults & merits, in which the former rather predominate. He is a wayward wight, who, after being engaged in many different scenes in Scotland, arrives in this country as a subaltern officer during our revolutionary war. The description he gives of the first battle he was engaged in, is probably more true to nature than most heroes would be willing to allow.

"It took place at the point of lake Champlain, immediately above fort St. John. The Americans were encamped in some force on the height of a narrow fortified ridge of hills, from which it was necessary to displace them. We marched out to the attack early on a morning. The air was calm and still. In going up the steaming ground, our commander wisely led us by a road which was completely sheltered by a rising embankment from the effects of their cannon. I soon perceived, that on reaching the summit of the ridge, we would be exposed to a fire, and I had no doubt would kill us every man, while our enemies would fire in safety from behind their trenches.—What I would I have given to have been off on some other service, or by some means, in going up that hill? The calls of nature were very frequent with me. I am not sure but that I looked for some opportunity of sheltering, but the thing was impossible. It was not even possible for me to fall down among the dead, for as yet there was none there. I was in the front rank on the left wing and regiment's colour; and just before we came to the verge of the ridge I looked on each side to see how my associates looked, and how they seemed affected. I thought they were in a most terribly affrighted, and expected a close close down the hill. As soon as we set our heads over the verge we began a sharp fire, and were saluted by a dreadful one from their works: our men fell thick. The two next to me, on my right hand, both fell at the same time, made ready for flight. A bullet struck up a direct of earth exactly between my feet; I gave a great jump in the air, and escaped unhurt. "The devil's in the men" thought I, "are they not going to fly yet?" The reverse was the case. The word quick march was given, and we rushed rapidly forward into a kind of level ground between the two ridges. Here we halted and kept up a brisk fire, and I scarcely saw one of our men falling. It was the best conducted manœuvre of any I ever saw; but this I discovered from after conversation and reflection, for at that time I did not know in the least what I was doing.—We were by this time completely covered with smoke, and by hurrying us thus from the ridge into the hollow, the shot of the Americans past cleanly and incessantly over our heads, while at the same time we could still perceive them bustling on the verge between us and the sky; and I believe our shot took effect in no ordinary degree. Their fire began to slacken, for they had taken shelter behind their trenches. We now received orders to scale the last steep, and force their trenches at the point of the bayonet. We had a company of Canadians on each flank, but no horse. The Americans had a small body of horse, about sixty or each wing. As we went up the hill, I heard an old grim sergeant, who was near to me, saying, "It it utter madness! we are all sold to a man." The murmur ran along, "We are sold—we are sold;—to a certainty we are sold." My own heart thought the sound. For my part I knew little either of selling or buying, except what I had seen in the mark t at Kelso; but I said aloud, "I think there can be no doubt of that"—a shameful thing for an officer! and, looking round the sergeant, I would look again—No, devil a man of them would take the hint—they went the faster, and the old grim sergeant, who was near to me, muttered and puffing and groaning with ill humour on that account, hurried on faster of away.

"The enemy and right wing were engaged before us, and a terrible turmoil there seemed to be: but I could not see what was going on, till the Yankee horse in a moment came and attacked us flank. We had a company of Canadians on the right, and I believe they never got a shot of our fire at all they were amongst us, throwing on with their sabres. One tremendous fellow came full drive upon me. I did not know in the least what I was doing; and chancing to have a hold of my fusee stiff with both my hands, I struck it him with my colors, which dropping round the horse's head, shuffled him; and at the same moment the cavalier struck at me, but by good luck hit the flag-staff, which he cut in two not a foot from my hand. I ran for it, an I left my colors about his horse's head or feet, I did not stay to examine which; but, owing to the pike's and bayonets of our men, I could only fly a very short way. When the old crusty sergeant saw the colors down and abandoned, he dashed forward with a terrible oath, and seized them, but was himself cut down that moment. The dragoon's horse that left the colors, also came upon me, had been shot. I observed that he had come in desperate valour to seize my standard, whereas his horse was running with him in the agonies of death, and knew not where he was going. There is something here that I do not perfectly recollect, else I declare I would set it down. I have forgot whether my jacket failed me, and I fell in consequence; whether I threw myself down out of desperation; or if I was ridden down by a wounded horse; but the first thing I recollect was lying beneath the dying horse, face to face with the dragoon that cut my flag-staff in two, who was himself entangled in the same manner. Our troops had given way for a little, for the small troop of horse rode by them, over as they could not get, for the horse lying kicking with its four feet upmost. I thought I was in a woful scrape, and roared out for assistance, but none regarded me, save the Yankee dragoon, who d—d me for a broxemouth'd beast. I had his company very ill, for I saw that he would stick me the moment he could extricate himself; and, fairly desperate, I seized the sergeant's pike or halbert, that by along side of me, and struck it into the horse's shoulder.—The animal was not so far gone but he felt the wound, and made a bounce around, as if attempting torise, and at that moment I got clear of him. The dragoon had very near got free likewise; but luckily for me, his foot was fixed in the stirrup beneath the horse, and with all his exertions he could not get it out; but he held hold of me, and tried to keep me down. I seized hold of the sergeant's halbert again—pulled it out of the horse's shoulder—and stabbed the Yankee through the heart. The blood sprung upon me from head to foot. His eyes turned round, and his count-nance altered. At that moment I heard a loud voice, as at my ear, cry out, "The colors—the colors—secure the colors. This was the voice of an American officer: but I thought it was some of our people calling to me to bring my colors along with me, which I did most cheerfully and without the most distant idea of self-fied, while I, as they saw, had only received a slight cut on the cheek."

"I was regarded as at once as a prodigy of valour—and never were any honours less deserved. I believe I did right most fortunately after. I was fairly mad. I had lost all sense of fear; but I was merely plying and exerting myself as I was down my has takes work by the piece, and took to get through with it. I had some confused notion that Americans were all to kill, and that the sooner we could get that done the better; and besides, I was in great wrath at them, I suppose for wanting to kill me."

PROSPECTUS

YORK ESTATE DIRECTORY,

AND LAND PRICE CURRENT OFFICE.

The object and use of this Office will be found in sale of lands which have been and to rent property granted by the British Government to individuals of every class, for forwarding both the Settlement Duties and all future Sales.

By a general collection of located lands, as likewise of improved farms to be sold, or exchanged a Registration of Estate will be drawn from the town (say from 2 to 20 miles) a Guide to those in want of employment, and to Capitalists desirous of acting in this healthy country; whilst this will be of the use, and the distance to the principle of internal arrangements of each.

Others being upon an attractive form, connected with a corresponding agency in Europe, will promote the introduction of simple means, in support of the landed interest of Upper Canada.

The most important branch of this institution, must therefore necessarily appear out of the collection of local reports and their operation effect upon Foreign Capital, the only which by true and progressive of the state of Agriculture in this Province will hereafter be made known by the public journals as a Desideratum; for the attainment of so desirable an object, it is proposed to receive statistical accounts from residents in every of estate, as a further move to the protection of labor; of whatever improvements have been made since original surveys and grants of land in each township; whether of public roads, bridges, canals, markets, or improved farms, together with the increase of population and of cattle, &c. whereby the relative value of land may be justly compared to form a Price Current for public use.

But as the transmission of such local reports from every township to York, where the seat of Government is held, will be attended with a certain exp nse of postage to this office, and with other contingent charges necessary to the arrangement of them, for the press; no reports will be received unless the conveyance is free from expense, and ten dollars are remitted with the same, for every sheet words contained in the said reports.

It may therefore be important to point out in one prescribed form, with the most simple mode of collecting and forwarding such statistical reports from every township; this is easily accomplished by local information, obtained at any parish or other general meeting held by the inhabitants; when it can also be ascertained what each individual's share of the expense advertising in the report will be, according to the length agreed upon to be transmitted; which as few instances can exceed to 3d or 6d Currency.

Reports of large tracts of land (from private individuals will be free related) faithfully published upon the same terms (*) Land Proprietors who wish to engage by contract with the aim for the erecting of timber, by commencing their proposals for the payment of 6 or 12 months for in land or money) and one dollar, free of postage for the Re-ist y of the same, will be duly recorded in the books of this Office, for the inspection of labourers.

Any man who take land in lieu of money, or register their names and places of abode at 1-2 dollar. Those who take half land and half cash, one dollar: and others who take only cash, one dollar and a half.

Printed circular letters of information for every case, will be forwarded to all, charge with such postage, as occasion may require.

All original reports will be regularly filed and published yearly in a quarto volume.

Public sales of estates will be held at York, monthly.

This Office will open (near the Crown Office in York,) on the 1st day of August next.

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, June 26.

The Queen, as we announced in our paper of Saturday, has rejected the conciliatory resolutions of the House of Commons. In deciding upon this course we suppose she has given the best attention to which these resolutions were entitled to her. They were offered to her as a sacrifice to public interests and wishes. Her majesty was required to consider something for the sake of the country, and her refusal to do this she will not condescend to do, because perhaps, a vulgar rabble is disturbing before her house. She intends upon an investigation into our conduct with drew her appeal to public justice. This, then, we are told, is the language of impudence. Indeed! We wish it may be so:—for we had rather the King and the King's Ministers should have been deceived by mistaken motives, than to have acted as it is all urged her Majesty has acted. It is not unworthy of remark, that the gentlemen of the House of Commons who went up to her Majesty on Saturday, were assured, both on the part of her self, and their deputies, that the hisses and execrations of the rabble collected in front of the house; and that her Majesty almost immediately afterwards appeared in the balcony to receive their shouts of applause! We will leave out of the question, at present, the abstract principles of the propriety or dignity of thus obeying the rude calls of a mob, and courtseying for the huzzas. There is nothing very royal in such an exhibition. But on Saturday in particular, we think her Majesty might have reasoned with herself in some such way as this:—Here is a rabble which has been guilty of the brutality of hooting and hissing four distinguished individuals members of Parliament appointed to wait upon me with certain resolutions of that august body, the House of Commons. I am it is to my own feelings—I owe it to my own dignity—to my own character—not to place myself in a situation which can, by possibility, identify me with such conduct. It would not become me to receive the vulgar applause of those whatever just hooted from my door persons whom I am bound to treat with attention and respect. I must not suffer myself to be suspected even for a moment of courting popularity." Had sentiments like these been allowed to intrude themselves upon her Majesty's mind, and had she acted conformably to them, we cannot help thinking that the better classes of society would have pronounced her conduct worthy of her station, her sex, and her present situation.

FRANKFORT, June 12.

Germanic federation.—At length the great subject which has arrested the attention of Europe for so long a time, is brought to a close.

The definitive act for the new organization of the Germanic confederation was committicated to the Germanic diet, on the 8th of this month. It contains all the protocols and papers accompanying it, been inserted in the registers of that assembly, and was become the supreme law of Germany.

This important act of the congress of Vienna, is entitled "Definitive act of the general conferences held to complete and consolidate the organization of the Germanic confederation." It contains 65 articles, it drawn up with great deliberation and the utmost activity.—The army is concentrating at a point most convenient for the execution of the plan which has ordered to join it. Poplivan Pacha, who commands the expedition, has determined on augmentation of artillery, and fifty guns and three orbs have been sent to him.

This day a solemn Te Deum was chanted in the church of St. Clement, in celebration of the great battle of Waterloo. All the authorities, civil and military, were present in full costume, and in the usual forms of auditors and assistants.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 10.

The preparations to reduce to submission the Pacha of Scutari, are proceeding with the utmost activity.—The army is concentrating at a point most convenient for the execution of the plan which has ordered to join it. Poplivan Pacha, who commands the expedition, has determined on augmentation of artillery, and fifty guns and three orbs have been sent to him.

Late ingence from Persia announces the death of Abbas Mirza, which will be severely felt by sick; and that his death would prove dangerous to the repose of the empire. The succession to the throne was disputed by several provinces; and who do not appear disposed to acquiesce in the disposition of their father in naming Abbas Mirza, one of the youngest, to succeed to the throne. The Porte has recently sent a counterinary to Teheran to obtain information of the posture of affairs on that frontier.

Sir Robert Liston, the English ambassador, has recently had interviews with the prime minister relative to the new tariff of duties, which have been introduced, in consequence of those accepted by Austria and France.

PARIS, June 24.

The chamber of deputies is daily occupied with the budget of expenses for the ensuing political year. Every item undergoes scrutiny, and remonstrances are raised on those which appear susceptible of them. The debates are frequently very warm, and as usual, extremely disorderly. In the debate yesterday on the naval expences. M. Boyne de Puye remonstrated the total abandonment of all naval preparation.—It was true, he said that under Louis 14th the French navy attained a height of splendor; but that ever since we have experienced nothing but naval disgrace and disasters [Murmurs.] During the war with England he continued, from 1793 to 1801, we lost 47 ships of the line, 187 frigates and 161 sloops: And if in the wars which followed, those losses were less, it was because we left our ships to rot in our ports. He therefore hoped the chamber would not to appropriate moneys to build vessels to augment the naval forces of other powers, for us to decay in the docks yards of this kingdom.

The prince de Broglie, and other members, condemned the policy and remarks of the preceding speaker and the former remarked that among the great losses of the French nation, in the immortal battle of Trafalgar, glory and honor were not included.

...on estimate of the army expences, a reduction of 60,000 men made from the pay of the marshals, and other superior officers. One of the members remarking that three officers, by their extravagant living, set bad examples to the people; and that his motive in voting for the reduction, was to oblige the court to correct this abuse.

SPAIN.

Cadiz.—The members of the cortes as they arrive, meet at their boarding houses, where the debates are read, which about 40 were present, debated a resolution, to be submitted to the cortes, for abolishing the city and territories of the old cortes, who requested of the king to abolish the constitution, which he sentenced to be put to death. It is said that he should also be supplicated to pardon them. One of the members, however moved Romero Peerte (eight members of the cortes) also to sovereignly the part of the resolution which requires a supplication to the king, for the remission of the doom, that all the rest relinquished it.

It is said the cortes will not assemble at Madrid, but at Alcala de Henares, a city about 20 miles from that capital, until it is decided they can deliberate uninterrupted by the bad passions which do not allow them to do good.

The birth day of the king of Spain has recently been celebrated throughout all the provinces, with great enthusiasm, particularly at the cities of Cadiz and Barcelona.

At a meeting of the merino society in London, 12th May, after awarding the premium of fifty guineas for the finest broadcloth, the premium of ten guineas for worsted yarn was adjudged to Mr. J. Head, of Kendall, near Leeds, for one pound of wool spun by a newly invented machine, which was superior in every respect to any previous attempt, and was culinarily adopted for the finest bombazeens &c. It produced 95 hanks of 840 yards to each length, equal to 56 miles and 400 yards, from one pound of wool.

The People vs. James W Jackson.

The defendant was brought before justices Doe, Collins and Cook, on Monday last on the charge of Theft. He was from Hector, Tompkins county, was a preacher in that neighborhood, and had some days before, a boat load of wheat which he sold his lumber on Saturday to a merchant in this village. While examining the goods he discovered that a number of the bags contained the following property, viz:—3 canes canes, 6 pair shoe skin gloves, 1 pair shoes, 1 pair boots, 1 razor, 1 pair spectacles, 1 flask, 1 pair of gentlemen's bargs and 18 handkerchiefs, which he stowed away in the boat; he was then taken to the village our pair pantaloons and 2 hats.

On Sunday he exhausted of some length on board the vessel to a number who were on the wharf, and left. In the afternoon he went into a house in the lower part of the village and talked very religiously with the family, and when he was going out he perceived a coat and gown in the hall which he took away; the boat On Sunday evening, some of the articles were missing and on search being made, they were all found in pursuit Jackson's custody. The gen leman was arrested and in the afternoon of the next morning. After his arrest and the discovery of the goods, he appeared to be in a state of mind, which more so during the trial. The magistrates probably considering him more knowledge than sentenced him to five months imprisonment in the county jail.

Desperate Combat with a Bear.—A person who superintends Mr Gaston's plantation, about five miles from the city in the mill, discovered a large Bear on the edge of the swamp, about fifty yards distant. The ship Prompt sailed from the Clyde on Tuesday afternoon with about 350 passengers for Quebec, consisting of the Anderston, Rutherglen, Lesmahagow and Lanark Societies; they were all in good health and spirits. The Lieutenant colonel of the regiment of Hussars of Navarre to demand the dismissal of the minister of war, but the king instead of granting the request, ordered the deputation to be arrested. The disconcerted excited by this proceeding rendered it necessary to call out the military to secure the public tranquility. The agitation which this occasioned has not announced, that on the 21st of February last, a terrible shock of an earthquake had devastated the city and of Santa Maura. The church, several public buildings and almost all the houses were demolished, and the roads destroyed in every direction. Many persons were killed, and the inhabitants are represented to be in a state of despair. Accounts from Corfu, dated the 31th April, state that a small island has emerged from the sea, off Santa Maura, which is attributed to the effect of the late subterranean convulsion.—His Majesty's sloop Aid, capt. Extraordinary escape.—A few days ago a gentleman went up to visit the falls of Montmorency near Quebec. As he was standing on the brink of that tremendous precipice, a prisoner suddenly broke off from the body he had taken his station, yielding to his weight, gave away and he was precipitated headlong. After falling to the depth of no less than 130 feet, he was arrested by a projecting rock, from which he was removed by a companion, without having sustained any other injury than the dislocation of one of his arms and a few trifling contusions. A miracle! a miracle! was the cry of every one that saw it. Every spectator; and, far from being considered by the accident, he arrived in this city yesterday in the steamboat Lady Sherbrooke.—*Can. State of Montreal Market

From Gerneese & Upper Canada there has been brought this season about 60,000 barrels of Flour, of which about 30,000 barrels are now in store, and the demand continues undiminished and will probably carry off the prese nt stock, previous to other arrivals.

There has been received about 9000 bbls. of Pork, of which about 3000 remains on hand, which is of a very superior quality and the consumption is supposed equal to the quantity unsold

The quantity of Ashes, including those received from Upper Canada is estimated at about 1000 bbls; and prices have fluctuating, owing to a supposition that the quantities will be less, this season. The demand has pretty nearly equalled the arrivals.

Wheat Indian Goods are uncommonly low, so that the merchants of Grenock will be able to procure them on more advantageous terms than they can at New York.

Deaths abroad.—Among the recent deaths announced in Jamaica, we find that of John Murray, M. D. the celebrated writer on chemistry; sir Joseph Banks, the friend and patron of the Royal Society; Mr. Ireland of the Royal Society; Mr. Ireland, the celebrated author of Shakespeare forgeries; and last, though not least, the illustrious Howe empower, who endowed a professorship in the University of Edinburgh, and who died at Home on the 15th of April last. *Queb. WILLIS RIDOUT,
Surveyor Gen'l.

YORK, SEPTEMBER 7, 1820.

"In our remarks last week on the Brewteries, we have been supposed by some to allude more particularly to the one in this Town,erected on by Messrs. Stoyes & Co. we must however, state, that the observations were intended generally, and not pointed at individuals in any particular place: we were only apprehensive that in some situations, the Brewers might lose sight of their true interest, and for an immediate, yet temporary advantage, perhaps, where opportunity served, raise the price of their beer beyond the means of all but the more opulent. The paragraph, has, we are happy to say, not only enabled us to state that there are five Breweries established or erecting in or near this town, but to to shake to its foundations all hope of united confidence, and that every man must have put before him, and powerfully aid this cause contribute to its accomplishment. My Noble Friend, I see regrets, but to which wish I do not, very far, if from his intention to publish a regret it will. I am well assured of it. But I have not a doubt of it, that such would be the unfeeling consequence of your so doing. The regretting.

"If I entreat your Lordship to ask yourselves, whether you have been the real character, and what the immediate object, of the so-many meetings, in which your magnanimity has finally been compelled to exert the full extent of their constitutional authority. Examine them all their circumstances: mark their previous preparations, and their arrangements: and then the ominous display-ed, the language held, the resolutions adopted; and let it then be explained (if any such explanation can be given,) for what object those assemblings were intended, but for menace and intimidation.—the most powerful of the Parliamentary Reform Petitions by which in France all regicide, law, and government, were invited to the attack? And, if I am told to date the preceable and well-directed to deter them from supporting the public authorities in the hour of danger; to prevent the people from arming among themselves, and to drive them, if it were possible, to a desertion of their flagbed duties. I will not say what would be the consequences naturally to be expected by those with whom these projects originated: I will only, with all humility of the purport of the same table, are the effects which have already, in some degree, been actually produced."

The following is extracted from Mr. Plunkett's Speech.

"It is stated, in the speech from the throne, that a revolutionary spirit is at work in the country, which threatens its safety and its existence; and the truth of this statement is proved by the bill I have submitted, by the amendment I have proposed. If it is then perfectly fit to call the attention of the House from the consideration of this pole to the dangers which threaten it, from the machinations and arts of those who are preparing measures for the subversion of the state, and for the destruction of the constituted authority,—on the plea and object is of that portion of the peaceful and loyal subjects of the empire, who are not disposed to submit to the violation of the laws and constitution, and to the usurpations of improving them? This latter description of persons are entitled to the protection of the executive and impartial consideration. However I may differ from them, in the subject of parliamentary reform, I consider their objects as honest, and their means of effecting them as constitutional. Whenever, at any proper time, I am in any way connected, their claims shall be brought before Parliament, by whom they should be listened to with attention, and with respect. Their arguments, their claims should be refuted if I did not, they should be met by fair argument and calm discussion and the result, in either event, will be satisfactory to the public mind. The people of England are reasoning and reasonable people: but as I say, either they

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Rev. W. A. Anspach, late a minister of the Island, and missionary for the district of Conception Bay, has recently published a history of Newfoundland—in speaking of the Aurora Borealis, he says the sky is frequently tinged with coloured rays of such brilliancy, that their splendour, at the first unexpected magnificence, not effaced even by the spectator of the full moon. It begins in the form of a sheaf of bright light, with its extremities resting upon the horizon, and with a noise similar to the crackling of silk, glides softly up the sky. As the lights frequently unite in the zenith and form the top of a crown; at other times, the motion is like that of a part of a column waving to and fro, and the different tints of light present the appearance of as many vast streamers of glass, while silk, is spreading into vast folds, and altering slowly, or by rapid motion, into a variety of shapes, as to its colour from that of the tints of the yellow to the most obscure russet; and after having briefly skipped along the heavens, or majestically rolled itself from the horizon to the zenith, on a sudden it disappears, leaving behind it an uniform sky tract; this is again elevated, and in the same manner repeatedly extinguished. Sometimes it begins with isolated rays, much narrower by degrees until they fill the whole sky. In many the most splendid sight that can be conceived, crackling, sparkling, hissing, and making a noise similar to artificial fire works. These phenomena are generally ushered the effects of of electricity, and are looked upon as the forerunners of storms. In describing the darkness, the author says it is impossible to conceive, much more to describe the sepulchral appearance of Conception Bay and its shores on such a night, at the time of what is there called the Capelin-shoal. Then its vast surface is completely covered with myriads of those of various kinds and sizes, all actively engaged either in pursuing or in avoiding each other; to which add, the noisy sound of the jumping and splunging, throwing into the air spouts of water; the cod-fish bounding above the waves, and rushing into the light of the moon from their silvery surface; the capelins hurrying away in immense shoals to seek a refuge on the shore, where each returning wave leaves innumerable multitudes skipping upon the sand, an easy prey for the women and children who stand there with barrows and buckets ready to seize upon the precious and prized booty; while the fishermen in their skiffs, with a net for that purpose, are industriously employed in securing a still more quantity of this valuable food for the labour. Another fish altogether different from the Newfoundland dog, whose sagacity is very astonishing. I remember a remarkable instance when the author's able resident—one of the magistrates of Harbour Grace, had sailed most of this individuals which was the habit of carrying a lantern before his master at night, as steadily as the most attentive servant—suddenly stopping short when his master made a sudden, and proceeding when he saw him disposed to follow him. If his master was absent from home, and a footman being found to his mouth, and the command given—"to fetch the master," he would immediately set off, and proceed directly to the town, which by at the distance of more than a mile from the place of his master's residence, he would then stop at the door of every house which he knew that his master was in the habit of frequenting, and lying down in the lantern ground and strike his tail against the door in his power until it was opened—if his master was not there, he would proceed to the next house in which he had found him. If he had accompanied him only one into a house, that was sufficient to induce him to take that house in his round.

Method of destroying the putrid smell which most acquires during hot weather.

First, put the meat intended for making soup into a saucepan full of water; scum it when it boils; take then three pints to the saucepan a burn of coal, very compact and destitute of smoke. Leave there for two minutes, and it will have constructed all the smell of the meat and the soup. Secondly if you wish to roast a piece of meat on the spit, you must put it into water till it boil—and after having scummed it, throw a tea cup cool out of water; it boil before, and let it remain for two minutes, take out the meat, and having wiped it well in order to dry it, put it up to the spit.

Thirdly, if when fresh butter has not been salted in proper time, or when salt butter has become rancid or musty, after melting and scumming it, put in a crust of bread well toasted on both sides; and at the end of a minute or two, the butter will lose its disagreeable odour, but the bread will be found fetid.

Shooting Whales.

Among the various accounts of sporting which from time to time have appeared before the public, the following perhaps, has seldom been exceeded, whether we consider the unusual species mark'd out for destruction, the immense slaughter which took place, or the prowess and intrepidity of the sportsmen.—The anecdote is related by a gentleman now on a tour in the northern part of this country, who pledges himself for its accuracy. The inhabitants resident on some points to that part of Bantry Bay which lies the shores at Glengariff, were alarmed by the appearance of a large shoal of whales, without once hearing a fish, the whole, upwards of 1000 in number, which, from the immense magnificence, not effaced even by the spectator of the full moon. It began in the form of a sheaf of bright light, with its extremities resting upon the horizon, and with a noise similar to the crackling of silk, glides softly up the sky. As the lights frequently unite in the zenith and form the top of a crown; at other times, the motion is like that of a part of a column waving to and fro, and the different tints of light present the appearance of as many vast streamers of glass, while silk, is spreading into vast folds, and altering slowly, or by rapid motion, into a variety of shapes, as to its colour from that of the tints of the yellow to the most obscure russet; and after having briefly skipped along the heavens, or majestically rolled itself from the horizon to the zenith, on a sudden it disappears, leaving behind it an uniform sky tract; this is again elevated, and in the same manner repeatedly extinguished. FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, June 7.

A few days since, in removing the foundation of some old houses, in Fenn street, Easter, belonging to Mr. Newworthy, builder, the labourers found a no inderable quantity of old silver coins which they sold to the amount of £60 to various silversmiths. The coins being obsmit next day from their work, the owner organized into the crime, and ascertained that they had become suddenly rich, and were ragging change-free with the good cheer of a public house, which led to the discovery. Mr. N. accordingly made further search, and succeeded in finding another deposit of equal pleasure, not hid in jars or boxes, but merely covered with stone. The money was very much worn, and reduced to degrees, and not counted on account of civil wars, as many of the coins are of dates when those commotions must have ceased to exist, as 1688 and 1670, about the early part of the reign of Charles II as there are several siblings of that reign in good preservation; the coins of Elizabeth, James I; and Charles I, of which the two-sure principally consists, particularly of the latter, most have been then in partial circulation. There are also a few of Henry VIII, and Philip and Mary which defaced, with a few Scotch pieces of James VI. It is very remarkable, that among the many hundred of these coins, there are no crown pieces, which were most current in the time of Charles I. The value of the whole found fortunately discovered is estimated at about £500.—If this hoard be his supposed discovered for 140 years, as seems probable, its value if accumulated at compound interest would be about £2070, 000.

July 1.

The Gazette notifies, that on this 30th ult. the Dutch ambassador had a private audience of his majesty, to deliver a letter from his sovereign, announcing the death of her late royal husband prince Prince Bernhard of Saxe-Weimar, and also birth of a prince to their royal highnesses the hereditary prince and princess.

Lady Morgan is just arrived in town from Italy, where she has been residing these last two years. She intends publishing on the present state of society and manners, the arts, literature, &c. of that interesting country, we understand, and speedily to be given to the public.

The only answer that has been attempted to our remarks on Sunday was by reading her majesty's being dragged through the streets, is, "that she must have exercise," and that if she does not go out in her carriage, she can only take their exercise, by "running up stairs and down." This is put forth as the only defence which her most noisy advocate (the Times) can make; but even that paper is pychologically conscious of its "needlessly exposing herself to the public gaze, and studying ostentatious popularity."

We have seen an infamous placard that has been posted about the city this morning, headed, in large letters, "Shall Caroline be murder the queen?" The question is proposed, as it is flagitiously termed, in neither more nor less than that passage in which we have all heard of the late Queen called the attention of the house of commons a few evenings since. These placards have evidently been written and printed for the most diabolical purposes. Large crowds were assembled to read them in different places, but the police officers soon were at round, and very properly tore them down. Now we are b gin ning to see the bottom to which it will have to be endeavoured to learn this question—how the passions of the mob are to be inflamed on one side—will her majesty, with these the nurse her in the face—promote that object by courting the mob, on the other? What mischievous and wilful subject is it, that de liberately lends her influence to so fatal a path? She should never forget, that the voice of the rabble is at the voice of En land. The Queen's former may acquit—it does acquit at this moment—but if the latter condemn, our fellow-thousand addresses of fifty thousand pounds would not shield its decency.

The Paris journals of Thursday last arrived yesterday; those of the subsequent day remain due. In the chamber of peers on Wednesday the elective judicial p ssumed by a majority of 111 to 56. The budget continues the object of debate in the deputies. It was stated in the course of the discussion, by M. Casimir Gantth, reporter of the commission of ways and means, that the actual agree for the gate amount of the taxes of the kingdom made them sensible of the absolute necessity of a reduction of wards to the tune of twenty millions; that increase he just y attribu ted to the present equal system o assessment. In five the revolution, a large proportion, of the property of France was wholly or partly exempted from taxation.

St. Beaupré brought in a report on a project relative to the funds assignable to the legion of honor. Before the downfall of Buonaparte, every private soldier to whom the cross was given enjoyed a pension of 250 francs (about 10 guineas) per annum, and officers in proportion; but from the great extension of the orders and reduction of ar funds, those pensions are now diminished to one half—the officers are henceforth to receive, each 1000 francs per ann. (40 guineas), Commanders, 2000 francs, Grand officers, 5000 francs. Grand crosses, 8000.

A plought was lately been invented by the Rev. Dr. Cartwright, which works merely by human power. With two men only at work in motion, it with a three horse and three a plough holder. The utility of the invention will not, it presumed, be confined to this object only, as it is equally applicable to many purpose for which horses can be employed, except conveying a burden on the back.

A letter from Copenhagen, dated June 20, announces the failure of the well known and long established banking house of Ryberg and Co. an event which had produced a great sensation on the exchange of that city.

The stoppage of the Stoney Stratford and Newport Pagnel banks, has caused great distress in the vicinity of those places, where the client part of the circulating medium consisted of the notes of these establishments.

July 8.

Atrocious attempt to Murder a Police officer.—A few nights back, John Smith the Bow Street runner, was attacked in Town Hall in this Borough, received information that a gentleman had been robbed and ill-treated in Goodman's fields, Georges Fields and that the thief was then in the Two-file-were public house. Smith hastened to the r nlezvous with two officers, and, at the corner of Prince street, beheld no less than 30 or 40 young men, all of whom he knew to be thieves and pickpockets, assembled. He went in pursuit of the thief that would take his life, at the hazard of his own, and he had not proceeded above a few supposed to be from a quart pot, which cut his head shocking. The blood flowed in torrents down his cheeks. This was the signal for a general attack. His pistols, which he had not unlocked to carry about him, he had not time to get at them, and he had nothing to defend himself without his truncheon, which he used as effectually as possible, but he dropped in a few seconds and expired dead, from the cuts he had blows which received. One of the ruffians supposing that he had killed his officer, and anxious to avoid suspicion of being one of the murderers, went privately & gave information to the police, and studying ostentatious parade."

We have seen an infamous placard that has been posted about the city this morning, headed, in large letters, "Shall Caroline be murder the queen?" The question is proposed, as it is flagitiously termed, in neither more nor less than that passage in which we have all heard of the late Queen called the attention of the house of commons a few evenings since. Atrocious attempt to Murder a Police officer.—A few nights back, John Smith the Bow Street runner, was attacked in Town Hall in this Borough, received information that a gentleman had been robbed and ill-treated in Goodman's fields, Georges Fields and that the thief was then in the Two-file-were public house. Smith hastened to the r nlezvous with two officers, and, at the corner of Prince street, beheld no less than 30 or 40 young men, all of whom he knew to be thieves and pickpockets, assembled. He went in pursuit of the thief that would take his life, at the hazard of his own, and he had not proceeded above a few supposed to be from a quart pot, which cut his head shocking. The blood flowed in torrents down his cheeks. This was the signal for a general attack. His pistols, which he had not unlocked to carry about him, he had not time to get at them, and he had nothing to defend himself without his truncheon, which he used as effectually as possible, but he dropped in a few seconds and expired dead, from the cuts he had blows which received. One of the ruffians supposing that he had killed his officer, and anxious to avoid suspicion of being one of the murderers, went privately & gave information to the police, and studying ostentatious parade."

We have seen an infamous placard that has been posted about the city this morning, headed, in large letters, "Shall Caroline be murder the queen?" The question is proposed, as it is flagitiously termed, in neither more nor less than that passage in which we have all heard of the late Queen called the attention of the house of commons a few evenings since. These placards have evidently been written and printed for the most diabolical purposes. Large crowds were assembled to read them in different places, but the police officers soon were at round, and very properly tore them down. Now we are b gin ning to see the bottom to which it will have to be endeavoured to learn this question—how the passions of the mob are to be inflamed on one side—will her majesty, with these the nurse her in the face—promote that object by courting the mob, on the other? What mischievous and wilful subject is it, that deliberately lends her influence to so fatal a path? She should never forget, that the voice of the rabble is at the voice of En land. The Queen's former may acquit—it does acquit at this moment—but if the latter condemn, our fellow-thousand addresses of fifty thousand pounds would not shield its decency.

The Paris journals of Thursday last arrived yesterday; those of the subsequent day remain due. In the chamber of peers on Wednesday the elective judicial p ssumed by a majority of 111 to 56. The budget continues the object of debate in the deputies. It was stated in the course of the discussion, by M. Casimir Ganith, reporter of the commission of ways and means, that the actual agree for the gate amount of the taxes of the kingdom made them sensible of the absolute necessity of a reduction of wards to the tune of twenty millions; that increase he just y attribu ted to the present equal system o assessment. In five the revolution, a large proportion, of the property of France was wholly or partly exempted from taxation.

St. Beaupré brought in a report on a project relative to the funds assignable to the legion of honor. Before the downfall of Buonaparte, every private soldier to whom the cross was given enjoyed a pension of 250 francs (about 10 guineas) per annum, and officers in proportion; but from the great extension of the orders and reduction of ar funds, from Surrey gaol, was taken from its body in a peri-of state.—

The Royal Exchange, which was built the London royal exchange, was the son of Queen Elizabeth, who laid him in a field when an infant; but the clipping of a grandfather reading a boy to the place were he lay, he life was preserved.—From this circumstance the future sovereign took the grandfather as his friend, and hence the cause of that insect being placed over the royal exchange.

The motion of Sir Ronald Ferguson, on which we could but briefly allude yesterday, was productive of a good effect. It confined lord Castlereagh to dispel, with a breath, whole chests of calumny. The few simple facts which the lordship stated, carry conviction to every honest, and cannot be too generally known. They are briefly these:

During her Majesty's residence on the continent, reports of the most painful kind respecting her conduct there were received in this country, no from one, two or three individuals, but rushing in a full tide from all quarters, so that it was impossible for any man to shut his ears to them in duty to the king or in the nature, to avoid noticing them; still less could it be disregarded by his Majesty, whose manifold interests so intimately affecting in honor

Under this painful state of things, was the first duty of ministers, acting, we will not say on their official responsibility, but no higher, nobler, more genuine and foreign motive, to endeavor to ascertain the truth. And what better means could be devised for such purpose than those to which were adopted? A ty-commissioned an eminent judge to the choice of a gentleman of high character, of experience, of gravity, of penetration, an ingleshman, a man of honor, a distinguished member of the house of commons, a merchant, a banker, a manufacturer with whom he might be able to purchase the wool at a lower price, the public consequently gain on the purchase of goods of German manufacture.

Will of the late Mr. Grattan.—The following extract from the late Mr. Grattan's will, will be read interesting to our readers, "I have a re vision of love, in my Queen's County es-te, and if all my children die without issue living at the time of their death, I give the same estate back to the public—that is to say, to the following great officers for the time being, the Provost of Dublin college, the lord chancellor of Ireland, the lord chief justice of the king's bench, the lord chief justice of the common pleas in Dublin, and judge Day, in trust, to form a foundation for the annual support of one or more public orators in the college of poesy and meritorious citizens of Dublin, according to such rules and regulations as they shall plan and devise.

A woman died lately at Sterling, supposed to be a native of that town, aged about 75. She had no relation, dwelt in a house of three apartments, for which she was paid by herself was allowed to enter. She enjoyed good health, lived pretty well, and never applied for charity; she employed her time in domestic work for householders, and in spare moments she went about the streets frequently collecting rags and bones. She was known to be in easy circumstances, and to have accumulated a large stock of wearing apparel, and other articles, and was of furniture, which nobody was allowed to inspect. At her death there were found in the room among many others, the following extraordinary articles:—Fifteen pairs of stockings, about 800 linen and cotton caps for women, 120 gowns and petticoats of various colors, 60 aprons, 60 shifts; 30 brass candle sticks; 17 pewter pots and 5 copper tea-kettles; about 250 wooden dishes of various descriptions; 2 house clocks and cases; 60 pewter dishes, and a variety of copper pots and pans, &c. &c. &c., many of them were old fashioned; 10 pewter chamber pots, with many old ones; 150 shawls; a pair of silver lamps and seven lantern; about 40 cart loads of rubbish and bones; and about 700 articles of crockery, crystal, &c. a large quantity of mason's bewing tools, three chairs of different sorts, in which were found 71 odds of money, 8 silver tea spoons, a pair of sugar-tongs, candlesticks, a silver table and dessert spoons, with 13 gold and silver trinkets.

MADRID, May 12, 1820.

On the 3d of this month, the Provisional Junta addressed to the Spanish people, the following discourse, remarkable alike for the elevation and patriotism of the sentiments, and the energy and eloquence of the diction:

"Citizens! You are about to receive from the hands of the Junta, the representable second of May, 1808. This day is one of the most signal epochs in modern history. It operated to discover to the nations the extent of their power; to lord a perfidious conqueror from his usurpations; to knock the chains of usurpation and tyranny from the feet of nations; to open the way for the Empire of Reason and the Laws, which give rights and prescribe duties to sovereigns and to the sovereign, fixing upon the principles of universal justice, the liberty and prosperity of the subjects, and the strength and power of the state. The cry of nature which the dying victims uttered, was not only heard in Spain, but resounded through-out Europe. All Europe, in fact, deploring the tardiness of national retribution, will finally be indebted for the precious boon of liberty, to the sublime day of lasting memory, which assured the triumph of Liberty through the sacrifice of the patriots whose bones we honour as the first fruits of our victory.

"Intrepid Spirits! Dear and venerated Manes! Your fellow citizens awoke from their lethargy and with words as powerful as their swords, put Duty to accept your offering to the freedom of your country & of humanity. Your blood never rendered holier by the wise constitutions that succeeded, covered with benedictions and glory for the re-establishment of that constitution, which never ceases to be venerable, immortal, and unique in the annuals of the world and joy.—Welcome our recollections with this same sentiment which we now in expressing them; and from your eternal mansion of life end to inspire us with the same magnanimity which we feel in attempting Extract from Records by the Secretary of the Central Board of Agriculture, N. S. upon two letters addressed to him.

From the Acadian Recorder.

The funds placed under the management of this board are either public or private. The first of these are the gift of the legislature, bestowed by an annual grant, and destined for certain general purposes of such importance as to be intimately connected with the provincial welfare and prosperity. The second are an entirely different source, and are collected from the original donations and yearly subscriptions of its members.—The direction of these private funds has hitherto since more of accelerating and sustaining the progress of agriculture throughout the province, than at present fitting the local and especial interest of Halifax proper; although the latter has not been neglected, as is manifest from the prizes offered this year for the supply of the Metropolis with the more essential vegetables, and for the improvement of the Peninsula. A very small portion of its funds has been diverted into this channel; while the great body of its capital has been suffered to flow, so as to effect the plans which promised to advance the provincial prosperity. In proof of this it may be mentioned, that all the implements of the present improved culture were imported by its private funds; namely, the various instruments of the drill machinery, ploughs and harrows, rollers, grubbers, cultivators; and these were exhibited at sales so as to enlighten the minds of our mechanics, that they might be able more successfully to fashion instruments of approved utility. The wheeling plough with its accompaniment of wings, and the weeding scuffle, were brought here at the expense of the Provincial Agriculture Society, and were for the first year seen in Nova-Scotia.—The Trust, all the implements imported may not be confined to our personal emolument, and a loss may be sustained on some of them; yet still if one only be found useful, and that produce a permanent good it will far out weigh all the trouble and cost of the whole importation. The weeding plough, as it is to mention my self, in the culture of potatoes alone, will prove a saving of labour to Nova Scotia that is more than equivalent to all the public and private bilberties expended on agriculture; and yet this benefit accrued from the private funds of the Central Board.

The Fife cattle have been imported from the same funds; and the introduction of a new breed has thus been accomplished without any expense to the Legislature. The latest and most approved publications too on subjects relating to Husbandry have been also brought hither without the aid of public money; and are now accessible to the members of the society.

The ... on to be great and permanent ... geswhich have resulted from the ... d public spirit of this institution, and are sufficient, one should think, to command respect, although it had no other claims on the public favour. But all these weigh light, compared with the more solid and lasting benefits arising from the importation of seeds. No less a sum than £1000 sterl. has been employed this way during the present spring, and has been laid out in buying red, white and yellow clover; various sorts of turnip; mangel wurzel, wheat, oats, barley and rye grass.—The Central Board never contemplated that these would be imported here and sold with a profit. On the contrary they generally have a loss, and the funds of the Provincial Society will, from the losses incurred, entered into this year for behoof of the province, suffer a diminution of £150 sterl'g. The barley, for instance, not actually received 7s. 6d. per bushel in London, and the expense of the casks, bag, &c. with the premium of exchange fall little short of 4/. per cask; yet it was sold at 7s. 6d. currency. The prices charged the different societies do not even by much the first cost. The Directors voluntarily submitted to a loss on many articles, that the prices might have a fair chance of entering into circulation. It is a vain and delusive hope to expect seeds from Europe as low as they can be furnished from our own soil; for many of the finer samples would consume more in the London market, than farmers would dare to offer for them here. Why then import at all, it may be asked, under such unpromising circumstances? Clearly not for profit, but for a change of common seeds, and the introduction of new ones. Oats that degenerated in many of our countries almost into chaff, are frequent renovation. Clovers had generally been scarce, and sown with great parsimony—often from 3 to 4 lbs. per acre. Mangel wurzel to many farms was not known even by name; and turnips were hardly an article of field culture. Timothy had been loudly complained of as a scourging crop; and the Revd. D. Ross had, in his official communications, spoken publicly against it. To remedy these defects, more or less, seeds were imported; and the funds of the Provincial Society, devoted to this object. Our oats have been confirmed in improved in weight and quality. Our ... ver and ten bore were liberally used. Master of the parochial rates, and a set-Mangel wurzel has not yet surmounted the prejudices that oppose it. Turnips for the want of drill machinery, have not been cultivated on a large scale, and two societies have refused to make trial of rye grass. Do they not know that it prevails more in Britain than any other as an admixture or mixture with the clovers; that it forms a nourishing & salutary hay; that it has no exhausting quality; and by all accounts is not to be rejected as timothy? But it will not answer our climate nor stand our winters.

Answer.—The very point the Central Board was anxious to establish. The late noble president of the society thoroughly impressed with its importance to Scotland, suggested the propriety of sending for it, that it might be distributed in all parts of the country and tried made of its suitableness to Nova Scotia. There were contradictory opinions about it deuominated on all hands; and a broad and public experiment was the surest path to certainty. If it succeeds, a great object is gained, and a valuable and enriching grass substituted in the room of one that is equally exhausting with a grain crop. If it fails and perishes by the severity of our winters, recourse will be had in something else; for in the end success never waits on persevering and unwearied industry in interrogating the laws of nature either in the vegetable or animal kindoms. The amount of the expense in each society is a mere trifle compared with their aid, the question could not satisfactorily be put to rest.

I have one other observation to make suggested by the letter of Mr. Angell, it has been sent me. The lightness of the arrival of the seeds in their places of destination has been remarked, as a reason why they sent them altogether; and with others to postpone the payment to some indefinite future period. If the seeds arrive imported into this country in the fall, they must consist not of that year's crop but of the preceding; for the harvest in Britain ceases early enough to admit of the grain being thrashed out and shipped in August or September. By the middle of March we would receive the grass seed, which is an inconvenience worth being remedied, if at all practicable.

By inporting in the spring, the Central Board considered that the seeds would be fresh, and could be sown the same season; and that the delay would not be material, if the seeds were brought here at the expense of the Provincial Agriculture Society, as they were the first year seen in Nova-Scotia.—The Trust, all the implements imported may not be confined to our personal emolument, and a loss may be sustained on some of them; yet still if one only be found useful, and that produce a permanent good it will far out weigh all the trouble and cost of the whole importation. The weeding plough, as it is to mention my self, in the culture of potatoes alone, will prove a saving of labour to Nova Scotia that is more than equivalent to all the public and private bilberties expended on agriculture; and yet this benefit accrued from the private funds of the Central Board.

There is a person at present residing in a small sea port town in Wales, who is clerk to the collector of the customs, clerk to the excise office, and clerk to the justices; he is push clerk for the English service, and parish clerk for Welsh service; clerks the coaches, and clerk to the packets. Prince Charles.—A chaise has been invented by a young man in Vermont, which answers every purpose with very trifling labor. It stands perpendicularly, and is perfectly light. The operation is performed by a person sitting near the chaise and working the machine by each hand at an upright spring. The chaise is moved by means of two leather straps which are fastened at one end to the upright cylinder, and passed each under a wheel in opposite directions, and fastened at the other end to the handle on each side of the upright—one that the straps with one hand turns it back.

Topography.—On the creek Indian-lands, a couple of miles from the line that separates that nation from the Gwinnett county, in Georgia, is a natural curiosity, as well as a convincing proof that ere an European foot pressed on American soil, the aborigines of this country were not unacquainted with the art of warfare. The (so called) stone mountain, is a rock much in the shape of a sugar loaf but it is upwards of 2000 feet in height, and about 4 miles in circumference at its bottom. One side of the rock projects forward 70 or 80 feet, and the height below is awful almost terrific! On the other sides, you have a gradual ascent from the base, which is covered with stone to a level space 50 feet wide, that extends entirely around the rock. On the outward side of this level are a series of regular breast works, and extending back throughout Great Britain, Ireland, and the West Indias Islands.

LONDON, July 9.

The question as to an alteration in the duties on timber, is set at rest for the present year, the committees of both houses of parliament having adjourned without coming to a decision on the subject until the next session. In the course of the discussion on this subject, lord Ellenborough said, it appeared from evidence, that the British shipper could be navigated with as much cheaper rate than shipping from any other part of the world.

The agricultural committee made their report in the house of commons on the 6th of July, but no proceedings upon it were expected to be made the present session. The chairman stated no frauds had been discovered to taking the averages of wheat, and that the new mode of taking them proposed by the committee, would rather facilitate than retard the opening of the ports in future.

A bill for a new issue of exchequer bills for the service of the present year was read.

The Paris papers of the 5th have arrived. The chambers were yet occupied with the budget of ways and means — Mr. de Corcelles objected to an item of 300,000 francs for the widow of Gen. Moreau. He acknowledged that it was a balance due to that great man which had been retained by the minister of the day to defray the expenses of "a too celebrated trial." But it ought to be indemnified as the victim of an accusation unfounded. France will be thus redeemed with honor."

At the late sale of Mr. West's pictures, the death of Adam, he obtained not for 1700 guineas. It was originally purchased by Mr. West for thirty pounds.

An Englishman who was taken up at Nancy during the riots had the judge in his chamber, that not understanding French, and being accustomed to receive all for more humble chances in his own country, he remained in the belief that pacific endeavours to get the man to their quarters. GLASGOW, July 1.

Attempt at Assassination.—On Saturday, the 24th ult. about 1 o'clock in the afternoon, Alexander Dunlop, Esq. of Carbet, was shot at from behind a dyke, while on the way to join the Stathblane meeting of the grand jury, and was severely wounded in the left arm. The villain took a most deliberate aim, by resting his musket on the top of the dyke, and fired at the gentleman's head, but fortunately the ball only grazed Mr. Du lop's head. Mr. Dunlop attempted to leap the dyke after the assassin, but it being very high the horse was unable to clear it. He then dismounted and got over the dyke himself, and took aim at the assassin, but his gun missed fire. In following up the pursuit, the scabbard of his sword dropped him, and by these delays the villain escaped. The motive is not clearly ell. A person has since been apprehended on suspicion, and sent off to Stirling. His name is, we believe, Buchanan, at Mr. Du lop is universally esteemed and beloved in that neighborhood for his public spirit and humanity.

The Revenge.—We had room yesterday for only a very general statement of the matter referred to in our last. In our preceding page to day, however, we have given the detailed and official statement of the case.

The first of these tables, to which we have before referred at full length, is the produce of the revenue of the quarter, ending the 5th of July 1820.

The second table is the produce of the quarter of last year it will be seen is £2447, 225.

It will be in the recollection of our readers, that from the operation of the commutation act, passed 5th July 1819, and various other causes, the revenue for the quarter ending the 10th Oct. 1819, was peculiarly unproductive, as compared with the corresponding quarter of the preceding year.

The revenue for the quarter ending 10th Oct. 1818,		£14,397,100
Ditto. 10, Oct 1819, to		14,435,545
Deficiency		1,071,555

Much has been taken of this deficiency at the time it occurred, and, as usual in such cases, many gloomy forebodings of the evil it would not only continue, but increase to a ruinous extent, were indulged.

The following comparative view of the subsequent three quarters affords an ample answer to those unfounded prognostications.

Quarter ending.	1819.	1820 Increase 1820.
5th Jan.	13,208,777	13,451,842 / 29,065
5th April	10,881,916	10,931,151 / 149,105
5th July	12,604,185	13,047,365 / 747,256

The second table, in our preceding page, is the revenue account for the four quarters ending 5th July 1820, and the previous corresponding quarters.

It will be seen that the deficiency is wholly in the October quarter, and that the revenue has been gradually improving since that period. The new duties have certainly not materially contributed thereto but the most gratifying result could we have been attained, if those duties had produced any ill effect upon the consumption of the country.

This important fact is abundantly proved by the increase of articles exempted with duties of excise during the last year, as compared with the three preceding years, and which are now so considerable and eloquently stated in the court of Liverpool's speech in the house of lords, on the 28th of May, 1820. In the internal consumption of the country there has been no diminution."

This world be too wide — but if the Queen should be found guilty, and her name struck off the list of royal names of prayer-books, and to date on a trial she must have "the same name as the King" — the case would be different. Then the whole of her low court pretensions, and wretched mockery of royalty would require negotiation with the Queen, and not with the mere subject of his divorce.

Now, we have heard some three inches in which a private woman might have indulged in the most unbridled licentiousness, and further, that things which the wife of the humblest might venture to do at home, sometimes were not to be endured in the wife of a king, and the mockery of his throne.

Now, we have heard of feminine delicacy shrinks from improprieties for her own sake; but these same delicacy never yet stood in the way of a queen. Queen's sake, whose conduct, from the moment on which she is placed, must be a matter of state importance, and therefore sometimes innocent and what is not only the comfort of the husband, of herself, of her children, but of the people, but is also, by the influence of her high example, of the whole of the community.

The true high delicacy of queens are drawn, and what queens are not queens. In this respect, true queens alone; the effects they make on the public mind, and the duties they perform and demand they create.

Queens of another allusion in the celebrated adage, which probably I have intended, which is, that "a queen is not to be suspected, nor even to suspect herself." Queens are not only morally indemnified, but they are politically so. Why should they not? Queens are not only morally indemnified, but they are politically so. Why should they not? Queens are not only morally indemnified, but they are politically so. Why should they not?

DOMESTIC IMPOSITIONS—No. 8

Sir—In my last I pointed out the causes by which the Whiskey manufacture in this country, was rendered impure and destructive of health; that up proceeding to the present high degree of perfection this baneful traffic. The small grocer, whose narrow circumstances compel him to purchase from the importer, or wealthy wholesale dealer, not content with a reasonable profit on his retail sales, (which, by the bye, are most serious,) frequently adulterates the liquor by an admixture of water, which reduces it to proof called reply below the legal standard, and which would not suit purchasers, who would not willingly consent, that a false strength in quality given by the use of red pepper, and a pungent taste by an infusion of capsicum.

Thus do thousands, unknown to them selves, and unsuspectingly, every day pour into their stomachs a poison, which by slow but certain operation, undermines the constitution, and gives birth to the great mass of those nameless diseases with which the human frame is afflicted. My first statement is, that two hundred thousand gallons of whiskey were purchased, and retailed again in New York in the course of 1819 under having undergone, what is called the process of Rectification. But as the real run of Whiskey is, when it comes from the distiller but little above proof and many degrees under the prevailing mode of rectifying spirit soon liquors. I very much underrate the quantity, when I estimate 30 parts carbon, 7 parts hydrogen, and 63 parts water, and that if those proportions are increased or decreased, the nature of the liquor is changed. In this city, and, I believe, all over the United States, the practice of distilling from a mash of grain is confined to their operations. They fill a tub, having a few bottom perforated with holes, about one third full of grain, then charge it, upon which they pour the Whiskey purchased at the distiller's. After standing a few hours, it is drawn off, strong, in consequence of its having imbibed large dose of carbon, and is found almost devoid of that oil or fusel. The is then called pure spirits, and purchased by the importers, or large grocers, who mix it, a mixture in the proper manner of water, mentioned in my last—if, however less than one third, with French Brandy, Jamaica Rum, Holland Gin, and even Madeira and Teneriffe, and other wines of the highest class, that either of all the liquors. From the simplicity which the action communicates to the whiskey, it requires the best judges to detect this imposture. The smell, even, is so near to that of the whiskey destitute, or nearly so, of the fusel oil, and other deleterious qualities which it acquires in the manufacture. The potion of the vapor, and the passage of the burnt oil, seem in appearance, and to possess all the effects of the whiskey, but not

The following is the substance of a letter of the Swedish Consul at Tangier, 11th July, 1820.

The political situation of this wretched country, has become worse than ever. The Emperor having had some quarrel with his eldest son, and a Jew named Ardit, also affected his escape from Rabat on the 20th of June, and withdrew to Duro Bandou, where he remained to the end of the month, when it is said he effected a new escape over Atamon and Asif, and from thence across the country and the Atlas mountains to Tafilett. Anarchy and the utmost licentiousness prevails leeward, being too powerful; several of the all those provinces; and it is actually impossible to pass from this town to Tetuan or Rabath. LIVERPOOL, Aug. 1.

One of the most affecting and awful events ever occasioned by the hand of Providence, occurred at Thorncliffe Iron Works on Wednesday last.—During the tremendous thunder storm in the afternoon, the workmen, in the presence of all the resident proprietors, were casting a steel shaft, about five tons weight, in a perpendicular mould. When the casting was nearly complete, the liquid mass suddenly shot up like a cataract of fire from the mould, and the workmen, almost blinded by clouds of heated sand, fell to red-let flakes on every side. Of 40 persons present 22 were burnt more or less severely; but fortunately the most of them escaped, as we said we hereafter, gives out of her own mouth, or that of her advocate, in language as bitter as gall, that she is not innocent of what is said to her charge.

In this letter she stated, that "actuated by the most urgent motive, that of restoring tranquility to the Prince Regent, as well as to secure the peace of her person, and the high and honourable degree deprived, she had, after the most mature reflection, determined to return to this country." But her particular reasons these reasons were false; but she knew she not also know what the true motive was. But we have heard, and it is said in all the country, and that some English persons do not doubt of the truth of the report, that she was privy to the most horrible plot that ever disgraced the annals of any country, or the history of human depravity, and would ever be suddenly solicitous for the prosperity and glory of too generous an

We beg our readers to observe the following jargon with which the Queen has favoured the public, to wriggle popularity, and to identify the Queen with a popular cause, and to make herself the champion of whom, indistinctly, as we shall see, she does not seem to care a fig.—This is the same letter in which she forgets herself the loses, by destruction of 50,000 lbs. weight of wine is mentioned. The loss must exceed seven millions; a number of persons perished. A fire broke out on Monday night, the fire still continued its ravages.

"MEMORIALS OF THE QUEEN.

With Anecdotes of Bartolomeo Pergami, her Majesty's Italian Chamberlain."

This very interesting work, on her majesty's late chamberlain, is Pergami then dismissed from the queen's service at the end of 1815, why? It has been a person was innocent and honourable, why is he dismissed at this moment? Why has he not been suffered to let one single member of her Italian household go?

On the 9th of August, 1814, her majesty embarked at Wortling on board the Clyde frigate, to return by way of Hamburgh, to Italy, and was met at Lottie Lindsey, and Lady Elizabeth Forbes, were her maids of honor. Mr. St. Leger was her Chamberlain at first, Sir Egell and Mr. Craven, were also her Chamberlains; her equerry was Captain Hesse, the courier was Dr. Holland; her major domo, Mr. Sicard (still holding that station); her cour-ier, Mr. Hieronimus, a German (still in her Majesty's service.)

Let us here observe, that of the nine persons here mentioned, the only two who are still in her service, are foreigners. No wonder she and her partizans should object to the evidence of foreigners, as objecting to evidence altogether; she had some others about her, and not up with standing she affected regard for the English nation, she had not one English person in her family or society, or not more than one.

We have to add a few domestics, who constituted the whole of her majesty's suite. Mr. St. Leger, full of wealth, did not accompany her majesty further than Brunswick. Lady Charlotte Lindsay repaired to the spa to join her sister Lady Glenbervie; but rejoined her majesty at Naples. Lady Elizabeth Forbes returned to England to see her sister. Mr. Craven went to Germany on family affairs and in order to meet his master the Margravine of Anspach. Mr. Gell was attacked with the gout, and was obliged to resign his situation. Captain Hesse joined his regiment, in consequence of the renewal of the war, and, in fine, from a variety of different causes, her majesty was forsaken by the different English persons who composed her Court."

We shall say nothing of the causes assigned for the departure of all these ladies and gentlemen. We have had very different and very praiseworthy causes assigned for their conduct. One thing we may say, that men by all these causes were either transparency, or might become more or less before the parties left England, that there was not the true reasons of the separation. If they were, then that the separation was looked on from that moment, as one more chance for for some's sake, whom the Queen knew could not get on without her. Her majesty's ill-fated husband's illness do not fall under the latter of these classes; but when the gout in the latter got better, as we are glad to believe is the case now, why did he not rejoin her? and why was not Mr. St. Leger's place supplied at Brunswick, the Queen's court at that time, and residence of her family and her friends?

"She sought by every means in her power to regain the love and esteem of the people, and under different pretences she was invisible to them anywhere but Lord Hammond, R. N. who became her secret correspondent.

This is an extraordinary admission. This Queen, or pupper, or both, so commanded the fleet, so ruled the admiral, and only one child out of "this persecuted nation," who would submit to live with her. Under different pretences she was invisible to them anywhere but Lord Hammond, of the royal navy, and Wm. Austen, who thought not mentioned in this statement, and who also accompanied her. What were these pretences? Upon that the evidence is silent. People in general will form their own judgment.

"Perugini was served in the French or Italian army, and received no decorations. He was the first in command at Genoa

MISCELLANEOUS.

The first use of the diving bell in Europe, was at Toledo, in Spain, in the year 1588, before the Emperor Charles V. and two thousand spectators. The experiment was made by two Greeks, who taking a very large kettle suspended by ropes with the mouth down-wards, fixed planks in the middle of the cavity, upon which they placed themselves, and with a lighted candle, gradually descended to a considerable depth. Dr. Halley, Phillips, the son of a blacksmith in America, formed a project for searching and unloading a rich Spanish ship sunk on the coast of Hispaniola. He ingenuously fixed his plan in such a plausible manner, that Charles II. gave him a vessel and furnished him with every thing necessary for his undertaking; but being unsuccessful, he returned in great poverty. He then endeavoured to procure another vessel from James II. but failing in this, he got a subscription opened for the purpose, to which the Duke of Albemarle largely contributed. In 1687, Phillips set out in a ship of 200 tons burthen, to try his fortune once more, having previously engaged to divide the profits according to the twenty shares of which the subscription consisted. He, all his labours proved fruitless! but at last, when he was almost on the point of despair, of success, he was fortunate enough to bring up a rich treasure, that he returned to England with the value of two hundred thousand pounds sterling. Of this sum he got a present of one thousand, and one thousand ninety thousand pounds.—Phipps was knighted by the king, and had the foundation of the fortune of the present noble house of Mulgrave.

THE FINE ARTS.

The celebrated VANDYKE, the chief painter of Greece in sculpture, by the chisel of Lysippus, was the perpetual theme of admiration. "This," said Alexander, when he saw his picture, "is nothing in the purpose; in a month's time I shall return."

He was immediately called one of his servants, and ordered him to follow this extraordinary personage, and find out who he was? He did so, and found him out of skill, and returned without being able to trace him.

The Monarch was then persuaded that he was no ordinary being; that he had a connexion with the other world, and was privy to the secrets of fate. He was much touching end. He applied himself with the more ardour to his Requiem, which he regarded as the most laudable monument of his genius.

While thus employed, he was seized with the sons' alarming fainting fits, but they went off at length completely before the expiration of the month, at the time appointed the stranger returned, but Mozart was no more.

His career was as brilliant as it was short. He died before he had completed his thirty-sixth year; but in this short space of time he had acquired a fame which will never perish, so long as feeling hearts are to be found.—Scots.

MOZART'S REQUIEM.

Mozart was very partial to the Tenbert Flute, though he was not quite satisfied with some parts of it; which the purpose had taken a touch, and which were incessantly applauded. The opera was performed many times, but the weak state in which he then was, did not permit him to direct the orchestra, except during one or two of the last rehearsals. When he was no longer able to attend the theatre, he used to place his watch by his bed, and desired to follow the orchestra in his thoughts. "Now the first act is over," he would say—"now they are singing such an air" &c. &c. Then, the idea would strike him afresh, that he must soon bid adieu to all that forever.

The effect of this fatal tendency of mind was accelerated by a very singular circumstance. They have to be persuaded, that in detail, he was not indebted to it for the famous Requiem, which is justly considered one of Mozart's best productions.

One day when he was plunged in a profound reverie, he heard a carriage stop at his door.—A stranger was announced, who requested to speak to him. A person was introduced, in deep mourning dressed, and of imposing manners. "I have been commissioned, (said he) by a man of considerable importance, to call upon you."—Who is he? interrupted Mozart,—he does not wish to be known"—Well, what does he want?"—He has just lost a person whom he tenderly loved, and whose memory will be eternally dear to him. He is desirous of a composition of this mode of—(read by a tear several very on words) a requiem you to compose a Requiem." Mozart was forcibly struck by this discourse, by the grave manner in which it was delivered, and by the air of mystery in which the whole was involved. He engaged to write the Requiem.

The stranger continued, "Employ all your genius on this work—I, a dissolved for a connoisseur."—So much the better."—What time do you require?"—A month."—Very well: in a month's time I shall return—What price do you set on your work?"—A hundred ducats."—The stranger counted them on the table, and disappeared.

Mozart remained lost in thought for some time; he then suddenly called for pens, ink and paper, and, in spite of his wife's intreaties, began to write. This rage of composition continued several days; he wrote day and night, with an ardor that seemed continually to increase; but his constitution already in a state of great debility, was unable to support this enthusiasm; one morning he fell senseless, and was obliged to suspend his work. Two or three days after, when his wife sought to divert his mind from the gloomy presage, which occupied it, he said to her abruptly "It is certain that I am writing this Requiem for myself: it will serve for my funeral service." Nothing could remove this impression which has so much.

As he could not felt his strength diminish from day to day, and the more ardour he laboured, the more his powers failed him, and he

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, Aug. 4.

The following is an extract of a letter dated Altona, July 28.

"According to several private letters from Copenhagen, a pretender to the Crown of Denmark has suddenly presented himself in the capital under the assumption that he is the legitimate son of the late King. He alleges that at the time of his birth his mother, then the Hereditary Princess, was declared; that she still lives half was substituted for him; and that he was delivered to the care of a swiss servant belonging to the palace. Some accounts describe him as a well made young man of good appearance, about 30 years of age, and holding the rank of an Officer in the Royal Navy. They add that a high officer of the state (the Minister Classicus) avowed all this on his first interview with him, and delivered to him all the papers and documents necessary to prove it.

"Others, state however, that this pretended prince is nothing more than a journeyman soldier, of the name of Fonson, and that he has been arrested by the Police, and confined in the hospital for lunatics. The event, whatever the truth may be, has excited great and general interest, and is among the exclusive objects of conversation throughout the kingdom."

A large first rate man of war, to be called the Prince Regent, is now in hand of great forwardness at Chatham dock yard, & will be ready to be launched about this time to eleven months. The ship will carry 120 guns.

COUNTER REVOLUTION IN SPAIN

Extract of a letter from St. James (Gibraltar,) dated July 27.

"We are at this moment surrounded by war; the counter revolution has broken out in the greatest force. A Junta, which styles itself Apostolic, has assembled on the borders of the Minho, which separates Portugal from Gallicia. All persons of note who had taken refuge in Portugal from the vexations to which they were subjected in consequence of the Revolution, hasten from all quarters to join this Junta. The Duke del Parque finds it vain at Valentia three days ago, & would pass the Rhoda yesterday to put himself at the head of the insurgents. Two thousand armed peasants are moving marched upon Orense, and the constituted authorities fled; another corps of insurgents marched from the neighbourhood of Corunna, along the coast, and occupied the peninsula of St Adrian. We expect every moment to see them within our walls. It is said that the Apostolic Junta has established itself at Urgel. The following very curious is "God and the King" and its avowed aim is to preserve the ancient liberties of the Spanish Monarchy. It is remarked that the peasantry are armed with excellent English muskets and that they are all animated with great enthusiasm. A great portion of the regiment of the Guides joined them at Riza.

"On receiving information of this movement, the Junta of Corunna declared itself permanent, all possible military measures have been taken. The immediate attack here has been announced to us, off Colonel Espinosa, with the battalion of Aragon and Castile, and the marine regiment which is stationed at Malaga. Our Archbishop has returned to Cadiz to repair instantly to Corunna; it is said at this moment, that after a somewhat severe conflict on the 31st ult. the whole of the regiment of Pontevedra passed over to the insurgents.

"15. It is announced, that in the course of yesterday, after some sharp skirmishing, the battalion of Burgos was put to flight, and the insurgents have joined Orense. This regiment is considered the finest of the Spanish army.

"The confusion which prevails here at this moment will not permit of my not being misled at my departure. What is certain is, that the militia of Corunna, mustered in has to the number of 1100, marched from the city against the insurgents, and that the Junta is in a state of consternation."

NAPLES, July 20.

Prince Cariati, Turin's Ambassador at Vienna, in 1812 and 1813, and afterwards Gazette conditions orders for the Court to go into mourning for the Duches of York. The mourning begins Aug. 13 and ends Sept. 3.

The Spanish Minister of Finance in a late report states, "the more liberty I am invested with the more will the Revenue be increased." The Minister of War proposes a general amnesty for all political offences committed in Spain. He says the measures are taking to complete the representation in the Cortes of the South American provinces.

It is said the Cortes of Spain have agreed to dress to Spanish Manufactures. It has proposed to prevent the title of Great to the name of revolutionary Chiefs.

The King of Naples, his two sons, &c. swore to the Constitution in July 1820 with great rejoicings.—New appointments have been made, and 100,000 National Guards enrolled.

England, we happen to know from our own experience, that she has lowered it in the eyes of Europe. We do not say whether her actions were such as ought to have that effect; we only speak as to the fact asserted by this evidence, which fact is notoriously false: The opinion of the world may be just or otherwise.

"The accusers of her Majesty have not been less active in their preparations. Couriers have been constantly passing through this country on their way to Italy; & on Thursday, eleven or twelve foreigners of beggarly appearance landed at Dover, who were stated to be witnesses against the Queen."

The beggarly appearance of the witnesses, if true, would tend to show, that those persons people were not authorized nor had it be observed, that if the witnesses are foreigners, it is because the Queen's actions are alledged to have been committed in foreign parts; and because the Queen, avowedly, had none but foreigners about her; and if they are natives, it may be, be some, by associating herself with the Pergamis, she effectually excluded from the society of the virtuous and the noble. Nay, before those poor witnesses have crossed their mouths, the very circumstances of their journey to Italy, is an evidence of their bias against the Queen. Over and over again, in our criminal proceedings at home, we have seen the most important depension created against a prisoner, by showing that he had taken pains to procure witnesses who could speak to the fact, the most natural, and most trust worthy witnesses of his conduct: and we hardly recollect a crisis on record, in which the fact of a party's having procured by persons in a low station of life.—All the better class of the offender's acquaintance generally sent out of the way, and the trial, of course, turns on the evidence of persons of inferior stations.

"The inhabitants of Dover assembled round them, and began to hiss and groan with great violence, when the wretched party were with difficulty protected in post chaises, and to avoid violence, which was anticipated on the road, they took the north road through Canterbury, Rythe, and Maidstone. Other witnesses have arrived in town, and removed the whole of them, and if they are not in readiness to appear, they will be subjected to the fate of the Milan commissioners, driven a carriage"

Observe the inconsistency of this declaration.—Some of the witnesses are wretches, incredible on account of their poverty, and here is another of them incredible on account of affluence.—His affluence may be sudden, but it is never sudden than Pergami's? Such had been the case with a wife & family of Pergami's admirers and defenders.

But this Milesque attorney has boy-like, to say, "that he had the Crown of England in his pocket," an expression not very complimentary to our national character: for we never heard of a man having been, and if it be true, who put the crown in this man's pocket.

We generally meet about Milan, saying he had the crown of England in his pocket."

If we have reason to believe, that who is the ringe against her Majesty comes to be investigated, that it will appear perfectly absurd. Rumors are publicly all out on this subject, to which we cannot properly allude. but which is generally supposed are not without foundation.

We know not to what this can allude, unless it be to the filthy supposition recently published, and which we have instantly refuted. We shall not soil our paper with any inquiries into such a subject—what justice requires we must have, that every Englishman should satisfy their curiosity, or open their ears, beyond what the severity of legal investigation would require.

It seems to us to be this concluding paragraph was not by the same hand that wrote the former of the paragraphs.

We have now completed our examination of this paper, and we are much mistaken if we have not made out, in its own expression, that it must have been written by the Queen, or some person in her immediate confidence, and to this view, we will venture to add, that it contains a body of presumptive proof against that unfortunate lady, on which any jury would find a verdict in the case of King's Bench. The very best that could be said of the conduct therein described is, that it was highly suspicious and clearly indelicate, derogatory, and indefensible, either with regard to private or to public station.

If, on the other hand the facts stated in this document are true; if the deductions are unanswered by the Queen; in short, if she denies its truth, and disavows its publication—there, we have only to lament, that some malevolent enemy has so artfully constructed this fabrication, that it bears every internal mark of coming from her. Our observations on this Paper, and if it be not what it so boldly, and yet so artfully, affect to be, then it and this reply will fall into the same oblivious neglect; but if it be genuine, we must leave the public to judge, whether it does not deserve the character we have given it and whether, if what is there admitted be proved before the House of Lords, there will be much difficulty in passing the Divorce Bill. This is certain, that there is not a nation in which both Houses of Parliament do not pass Bills of the nature on circumstantial evidence, must less cogent than that which this defence so injudiciously furnishes.

FROM EUROPE.

THE ETON RONTEM.

The triennial celebration of this imposing and interesting ceremony took place on Tuesday, and excited that degree of attention among the higher orders of society which may always be expected to every thing relating to the education and habits of the sons of persons of rank and fortune. The practice is founded on immemorial usage. The personage who collects the contributions is called Salt bearer. At an early hour of the morning two of those young gentlemen were at every leading point of the vicinity of the College. Those who stood at Colnbrook bridge were attired in grand costume and rendered still, while bearing rich silk hats, decorated with feathers. They stopped every foot passenger and every vehicle, from the humble turf cart to the stage coach and elegant barouche, and insisted on a contribution from every individual conveyed in them. Those who paid the toll were duly inscribed salt, received tickets, with the words—Pro more et morâ 1820; and the showing of these tickets proved the claim against any future demands during the remainder of the day. A little before 12 o'clock the King arrived at Eton on horseback, from his cottage in Windsor park, accompanied by Sir Benjamin Bloomfield and other attendants. His Majesty was dressed in black, and looked remarkably well. On arriving at the bridge, which divides the county of Buckingham from that of Berks, he was stopped by two Juvenile salt-bearers, who demanded his money; all his attendants were dismayed at the unusual circumstance. His Majesty with a good humoured and gracious smile, asked the causes of those young heroes calling for high toll, who very modestly stirred in silk, embroidery, turbans and feathers; he then delivered to them a purse, containing a 100*l.* Bank note, received his ticket, and passed on. He then passed on. His Majesty, in imitation of those visitors, crossed the ticket to be a private individual on the bridge. He then proceeded at a slow pace to Eton College, and was received at the north entrance, and conducted to the Provost's lodge, where apartments a splendid collation were prepared for the Royal guest.

About a quarter past one o'clock the Provost, into the apartment, and became acquainted with the names and necessary a book of reference, for the purpose of ascertaining the number of scholars, who were drawn up in grand order below him, and the farthing of the day, having the privilege of passing the day most agreeably.

After the inspection on the part of his Majesty, the grand procession commenced. The young gentlemen were divided into two parties, headed by their officers, and each party was preceded by a military band. They marched in military order from the north side of the College through the Park; then proceeded, amidst vast crowds of spectators, on to the fields, over ditches, &c. &c. and amidst clouds of dust, to the village of Slough. Here they halted for a short time, and then went on towards Salt Hill. The route was a circuitous one, but it is was necessary for the purpose of giving greater effect to the splendid exhibition.

At length the young gentlemen arrived at Montem; about a dozen fine boys, in flushed faces, succeeded the tall rebels, and forged themselves into a guard for the reception of their officer. The Eagles then made their appearance on the top of the mount, undaunted beating for nearly a quarter of an hour with admirable effect. His efforts were crowned with loud applause from the astonishing multitude, in the midst of which we observed his Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex, Earl of Jersey, Lord Erskine, and several other persons of distinction. The flag was then placed on the hill, where it remained during the whole afternoon; and the young gentlemen sat down to a dinner which had been prepared for them at the Great Inn, which has been the usual place of doing on all similar occasions.

Mr. Wilder, son of J. Wilder, Esq. of Purley Hall, was formerly the only Salt Collector of Captain of the Montem. The election of the Salt bearer and Captain commanded the Eton Montem, precedented at any preceding Montem. The last collection was 800*l.* This fund the young gentlemen claim to secure their establishment for life.

This singular custom is called Montem, from the mount in the village of Salt hill, about a mile, in which this solemn procession in military procession on What Tuesday in every third year. Their late Majesties generally honoured this celebration with their presence, and contributed liberally for salt. It is difficult to ascertain, but it appears to have arisen from the early times of Mr. Salt, a supposition, when the Friars used to sell their consecrated salt for medical purposes.

Mr. Stevenson, Engineer, has executed a model farm bridge of iron or wood, to cross 100 feet span for a river or water at the seat of Anthony Cash, and was also presented a plan to the Road and exterior of the grand temple of Isis. Trustees to bridge of malleable iron to cross the river Amazon for the use of Almanac for the year 1821, of the great north road between Upper and Lower Egypt; the interior and exterior of the newly opened Thames bridges, plans and topographic maps, &c.—London paper.

"Intelligence of the commotions which have broken out in Sicily is, unhappily, confirmed. It is not yet known whether the movement is said out of opposition to the new constitution of Spain, or whether it is the result of their island.—They marched upon the town, where it was easy for them to enter, as no guard was placed to keep it. Here they remained. But the royal troops soon re-entered the forts and they flattered themselves that they should soon reduce the insurgents to obedience. The insurgents arrived with powerful reinforcements. After sustaining the most vigorous resistance, the latter again succeeded in entering the town, and, the Independent flag. The number of men killed on both sides were estimated at two thousand."—Gazette de France.

"There has been a report in the Pontifical Corvo (a town belonging to the Pope bordering on the kingdom of Naples) on the 4th of June. The Physician, and the Apothecary of that place were at the head of it. They rallied to their assistance the Neapolitan militia, commanded by a person of the name of Cardili, and drove out the Governor. They assassinated three gen d'armes in the street; the rest, amounting to 40 men, retreated to the castle, where the Pope's delegate, M. Oliveiri, lived. The insurgents, amounting to 400 men, resorted near Quebec, Aug 19 1820.

In the year 1806, I was one of those who considered the contemplated navigation by steam chimerical. In a conversation with the lamented Fulton, I was frank in the acknowledgment of my opinion. I well recollect an assertion of his made in reply to his expected success, and although that great man has be a called from us to the mansions of Providence, I am glad to notice his prediction. I shall not attempt to enumerate the many steam boats, which are now plying between New-York, neither will I take a view of those which are on our Southern and Western waters but confine myself to the North and West of all I proceed to those of the West, the traveller finds a neat and convenient boat on the little Lake Cayuga, which plys from Ithaca to Cayuga Bridge, on the great post road to Buffalo. At Buffalo there is the "Walk-in-the-Water," so called after a late Indian Chief. This boat runs once a week from Buffalo to Detroit. Previous to the establishment of this vessel, Lake Erie was a terror to the traveller; now a passage through it is made with ease and comfort, and we find it frequently persons from the four quarters of the globe. A trip from the Southern States to the Falls of Niagara, thence to Quebec is now become a mere pleasure excursion, than a point to Philadelphia from New-York, was twenty years ago. The steamboat, and the numerous canals constructed a journey more fatiguing than the tour to Quebec, is at present. From Lewiston, on the Niagara River, you can take the steam boat to Lake Ontario, Capton Vaughn, and proceed to Prescott, opposite Ogdensburgh, touching at Brockville, Elizabeth Town, and Sackett's Harbour. Or if the traveller prefers the first mode, he can take the land at Prescott from Queenstown, & proceed to Kingston, touching at York. From after a few words from the archbishop of Canterbury, Mr. Alderman Wood, Dr. Richardson, M. Courtenay, the Mayor of Town of Kingston, Mr. Sheriff Sampson, Mr. Mallett, Mr. P. and T. Lynchitt, a subscription to a very large amount was entered into, and the meeting separated.

The Dividing Rod.—A belief has long prevailed in this country, that the course and depth of the under bed be carried in the hand, in a tea quartet position, the twig will bend to a right line with the FARMERS' and depth of the water underneath. The author of the Antiquary has described a Scotch by a line of road leading from the Duke Bridge, passing by Sir Sheriff Rebuck's house in the Lange Street, to the Park lands; and interested by a road, of a chain in width, running North and South to a right line with the FARMERS' HOUSE.

It was first discovered basking on the flat surface of a large rock—and though his astonishing agility bodi-ded for a considerable time his purveyors efforts, and was taken. It measured feet 6 inches in length, had two heads and two legs. The legs were nearly three inches long, were placed about four inches from the heads, and appeared to be of sufficient size to be of the utmost in running.—Springfield, Mass. Patriot.

Spontaneous Combustion.—On Wednesday morning, it was discovered that the shop chimney store of Mr. Samuel Cook, in Broad-street, Boston, was on fire. By the prompt and seasonable exertions of the engines, it was soon extinguished. The fire was considered a new instance of spontaneous combustion.

On Tuesday a quantity of linseed oil, in the cellar, was stolen from casks into jugs, and some unavoidably spilt on the floor. The floor was afterwards cleaned, and the sweepings, including a piece of wrapping paper collected in the middle of the room, were collected in the middle of the cellar, remote from any window, & there by fire commenced.—Boston Pal.

Dartmoor prison.—A meeting was held at the mason's house, Lavina, on the 6th inst. for the purpose of furthering a plan for converting the prison of Dartmoor, into a school of industry, for the reception of a portion of the paupers of the metropolis. M. Brougham stated that the principal object to view was to relieve the metropolis from a portion of the parochial rates which which it was loaded and also tend to decrease the number of juvenile depredators, whose depravity in the art of thieving, seems to be quickened in proportion as their age increases. The plan had its view also with horror. The plan had its view per children, and by their education, to train them in some establishment where they might be proper attendance, be rescued from the desperate habits of their parents, and view their now awaited fate. His majesty at which he disposed the prison at Dartmoor was had not only concluded to recommend it, but he himself had subscribed himself as patron, and had sent a donation of 1000 guineas in furtherance of the laudable object.—Exeter Flying Post.

From Queenstown, it proceed a fortnight to Kingston, touching at York. From Kingston there is a small boat, the Charlotte, which runs twice a week to Prescott, a distance of 120 miles, you have your choice of a land or water conveyance. Those who have never passed down the St. Lawrence generally prefer going down in a batteau. There is however, a good line of stages which runs twice a week. In fact everyone you reach Montreal in one day and a half. A steam boat is preparing to run across Lake St. Francis, and when completed, will sail gaily to the confluence of the Grand River, and the boat will run from the Canadian to the Lachine Canal; thus the land carriage will be very short.

From Montreal to Quebec there are seven stages.

The passage in those boats (except the Telegraph) is $10 from Montreal to Quebec, and 12 qp. In the Telegraph you pay 8 dollars and 6 qp, and pay for what you call for. It would perhaps be invidious to speak in particular of any of the boats. The utmost attention is paid to the comfort and convenience of the passengers; and the only strife is which can make the greatest display. The cabins are fitted up in a style of elegance we are not accustomed to see in any boats, while those of Lake Champlain—in several of the boats, families or parties can have their private apartments; call for a fire, and dine, &c. by themselves.

The New Swiftsure, the boat on board of which I am now writing, is fitted up in a superior style for the accommodation of passengers, and makes two trips a week. She has two engines of forty horse each. Each engine has a double wheel, and when you are in any part of the cabins you cannot discover from motion or noise, whether the boat is under weigh. In fact, the only thing you hear when on deck is the action of the water against the wheels. It is now half past 9 o'clock, P. M. and from present appearances, we shall be at Quebec by 9 o'clock, having performed the trip of 180 miles in 24 hours, which is one hour at William Henry, and half an hour at Three Rivers.

As I shall proceed with my letter before I arrive at Quebec, permit me to take you back (via Lake Champlain) to New York. You are generally two days from Quebec to Montreal, owing to the strong current. It has however, been run this season in twenty hours. From Montreal you take the Steam boat "Montreal," (say on Monday evening) at 5 o'clock, and proceed to Lancaster, a distance of 45 miles. You then take the stage to St. John's, 18 miles; remain during the night, and at 8 o'clock in the morning, proceed in the Steam boat Congress to Whitehall, at which place the boat generally arrives about 6 o'clock the next morning, Wednesday. Thursday one day you can reach Albany, and on Friday morning arrive at New-York, having been about but three days from Montreal.

P. M 9 o'clock. We have just come to Lachine under the Castle. A few minutes more we passed the steam boat Alabama bound for Montreal. This is the third boat we have passed to day.

The law by stage is Mean fellow. You can a batteau for $100.

each full of passengers, many of whom of Administration as all and singular the Goods and Chattels, Rights and Credits, which were of the said Mungo Kay and James Smith, at the time of their deaths, might be granted to him the said Thomas S. Whitaker:

Now therefore these are to cite and require you the said next of Kin, to be and appear in the said Court of Probate to be held at the Court of York in the Province aforesaid, on the first Monday in January next ensuing the date hereof, and show cause (if any you have) why Letters of Administration of all and singular the Goods and Chattels, Rights and Credits, which were of the said Mungo Kay and James Smith, at the time of their deaths, should not be granted to the said Thomas S. MR. ANGELL, respectfully informs the public, and Emigrants who may be desirous of forming a settlement in the Province of Upper Canada, or improved Farms, that he has on the Register, for sale or exchange, an extensive variety; and he flatters himself that upon examination of the Register, they will be found to contain many desirable lots, which were offered for sale by the Commissioners of Crown Lands, and and the Lords from being prohibited his Majesty's visitors, for the kingdom of Hanover.

The Earl of Lauderdale moved the order of the day for the second reading. The Duke of Leinster moved that the order should be re-committed. The house divided:—Contents 41—Non-contents 104. A majority against the amendment 103. Warm struggles were in vain. Lord Carnarvon was for the passing the motion of Lord Liverpool, for hearing counsel in support of the bill. He did not think that the petitioners could be more inconsistent with public justice and their own sense of it—they could not be more active in pressing the course adopted—more whatever could take place in the queens favor abandoned, for it was found upon it a case heard that the public in no country could.

Lord Grey considered it not the mode of proceeding by a bill to pass a retrospective law, but to lead the house upon extraordinary occasions, possessed extraordinary powers. The noble Lord contended that the queen might be prosecuted against or the crown since the session. He then went into a examination of the case of treason, and proposed two questions should be put to Judges, the object to which was to ascertain, if the crime of adultery constituted by the Queen with a foreigner, were not such treason as the accusers though the proposed case not answerable to the laws of England; he had heard the argument on the rule that ancestor in treason were principle is, and liable to go absent in cases to be the principals in the first degree could not be tried

The Lord Chancellor was decidedly of opinion that the Noble Lord's law was ill-founded. It was contended by and by all the authorities, that an accessory to an act, the doing of which was a crime in the principal, could be guilty of no crime

Lord Liverpool defended the present mode of proceeding, but had no objection to the opinion of the Judges being taken if it did not cause delay

After further discussions, the judges present, viz. Lord Chief Justice Abbott, Chief Baron Richard, Mr Justice Holroyd, Mr Justice Park, Lord Chief Baron Richards, and Mr. Baron Graham retired to deliberate upon the questions put to them by Lord Grey at present, under the statute of Edward III. in twenty minutes they returned to the house, when Lord Chief Justice Abbott delivered their opinion, although it is by no means necessary that treason should be committed by the queen with a foreigner, it should not assume in that case because foreigner for the does not contrary to the allegiance to the king of the country.

The Duke of Hamilton then put several interrogatories to the attorney General to induce him to give an word authority in regard of the bill.

The attorney General replied by reading the order in the house for his appearance on this day, in answer to the said questions. In answer to other noble lords, he stated he had received his instructions from the house to appear.

No result of importance arose out of this conversation, or out of another which followed relative to calling over the house.

Mr Brougham then came forward for the purpose of being heard against the principle of the bill; he could not adopt it, and as he had taken very few steps he was the more anxious to do in the last hour of his address, as what other hon. and learned friend of charge brought by him against ministers of instituting a prosecution of this kind. He would not on case of parliamentary necessity had been adopted by ministers however on the present occasion, but contrary to all law proceeded, and malicious had not the Queen's conduct had tended to disgrace the crown and to injure the country, and he begged not to say anything in vindication of the charges in the present of the bill, it they existed at all, had no existence whatever. Parliament and the Welsh and nor by the wife of a certain subject. Why this was not the manner adopted in the days of Henry the VIII. by the queen of the crown, and to avoid an equivocal and degrading to the character of the queen, and to avoid an equivocal and degrading to the character of the queen, and to avoid an equivocal and degrading to the character of the queen

HOUSE OF LORDS.

The Attorney General's Speech concluded.

Her majesty then discovered herself at Ulcombe in April 1818. On the 15th of that month she arrived at Saxmundham. At that place a bed was provided for her majesty, and the room adjoining to it was appropriated to Bergami, but there was no bed allotted to him. It will appear to your lordships that in the morning after her majesty slept in that bed there was the fullest and unquestionable appearance of two persons having passed the night there—On your lordships doubt who were those persons? The only persons beside her majesty who could have come to that bed was Bergami, and there was no other bed provided for him. In this country, that fact alone would be sufficient to satisfy the most sceptical mind that the crime of adultery was committed; but in the room on the ground floor of Mount, at the entrance of which had been placed sentinels, to prevent any one from passing into her majesty's apartments, and at the door of which was the only person who remained all night, was Bergami. When her majesty retired to bed, which was about eleven o'clock, Bergami was then in the room on the ground floor, where the same person was observed on leaving doors that night that was observed to shut the doors at other times. I ask your lordships whether you are not bound to draw the inference, which is alleged in the proposition of the bill? Was it ever heard of, that two persons should sleep alone all night, receive a dress in bed, and remain in bed for many hours together, between persons there? When this circumstance is connected with letters, which by any one can carry each other during the day, when her majesty is constantly seen going upon Bergami's knees, I think we shall be entitled for a moment to the conclusion, to which all these circumstances irresistibly lead. There were other indecent demonstrations which I shall not trouble your lordships with, in the course of the voyage to Naples, and in that land her majesty and Bergami remained night after night. In one of her majesty and Bergami being placed side by side, and with their arms reposing on each other, and in that land her majesty and Bergami frequently retired to the same room at the day, when

Found a servant of Bergami's [illegible] Wales. He meant the representation [illegible] there asleep: the door being open, went [illegible] of a suit by, to whomsoever he told it. [illegible] in and saw the bed of Bergami tumbled [illegible] a double entendre. Mentioned that he [illegible] but nobody in it. As witness went [illegible] was one of the witnesses against the prin[illegible] way, heard a noise and a cat: "Who's [illegible] cess one of the brothers Seguine there?" Knew it was the voice of Ber[illegible] Manetti. When was it, how long ago, [illegible] gami and answered, "It is the courier that [illegible] you told your name? About [illegible] from Milan." Bergami said there was two months. How long ago, I ask [illegible] such necessity to deliver the answer [illegible] from the present time?—Seven or eight [illegible] Bergami had on his dressing gown and [illegible] shirt. Did not see from whence he [illegible] months ago: to whom did you tell your [illegible] came: did not know where the Princess [illegible] name two months ago? I dont remem[illegible] ber. Did often seen the her.—[illegible] sight at Como. Had [illegible] mi ricordo. Did you ever [illegible] Princess and Bergami walking together; [illegible] make application to be taken back into [illegible] Witness then mentioned some arrange[illegible] the service of her royal highness? [illegible] ments respecting the apartments in [illegible] mi ricordo. Did you ever [illegible] rolling. Remember the bulk at the Bar[illegible] you, after you had left the service of her Royal Highness, what you were in a [illegible] fetching a cooling? Never.—Did you [illegible] ever suppose any person of her royal [illegible] highness honoured to have connexion [illegible] any such forbidden intimacy? I never [illegible] or you tell her Royal Highness? I have [illegible] nevergiven in a conversation [illegible] (A laugh.)—Will you have the goodness [illegible] to inform us one of the suite of her royal highness to take pity or to have compassion on you when you had left her royal highness's service? Did you ever [illegible] count to have compassion on me?—That, Sir, is a question, and not an answer. I must have patience with this question; will you swear that you never entertained any of the Princess's suite after you had quitted her service, to have compassion on you? It may be that I have. The Attorney General put some questions; on which the Lord Chancellor called him to order. "I told up her head and speak out." The Attorney General moved that the witness might be accommodated with a chair on account of her sex. A discussion took place respecting the mode of his cross examination; and, on the motion of the Lord Chancellor, it was ordered by the Judges—

"Whether, according to the established practice of the courts below, counsel examining are entitled, if the counsel on the other side object to it, to ask a witness whether he has before made a re-[illegible] presentation of a matter to any one, and, if the same time, whether that representation has reference to any mode in writing, or of parole."

"That the question be referred to be referred; and the judges retired to consult upon it.

During the absence of the Judges, some discussion on minor points ensued. The Judges in twenty minutes returned and delivered their opinion, which the Lord Chancellor informed the counsel, that he understood they had a right to ask the witness, generally, if he had ever made representations to any one, but that he has the particular nature of that representation, then the rules of evidence prescribed limited the examination to the facts on his records. Was there any one else but the Princess and Bergami there? No. Was the letter given out of the carriage, or from the carriage in which the Princess was riding, when you opened the curtains in the morning? No, no words. Had no more carriages with curtains than one? I have all had two. Was it possible in either of these carriages, for a person to be at full length? I believe it was. Did not recollect whether Bergami or the Princess were sitting or lying at the time that took place, which you have already described? They were sitting as if they were sitting. Was there any body else in the carriage that morning? None but Bergami. Did you see whether the Countess of Oldi was there? No, on my

AND LAND PRICE CURRENT OFFICE.

The object and use of this Office will be found in aid of lands which have been, and hereafter may be, granted by the British Government to individuals of every class, for facilitating both the Settlement and all future Sales.

By a general collection of located land, as knowing of improved farms to be sold or exchanged, and of wild lands, which are constantly a Guide to those in want of employment, and to Capitalists desirous of settling in this healthy climate; whilst another principle of internal arrangements is, office (acting upon an attractive focus) connected with a corresponding agency in Europe, will promote the introduction of ample means, in support of the limited interest of Upper Canada.

The second important branch of this institution, must therefore necessarily arise out of the collection of local reports and their operative effect upon Foreign Capital, through which the rise and progress of the state of Agriculture in this Province will hereafter be made known by the public journals as a Desideratum; for the attainment of so desirable an object, it is proposed to receive statistical accounts from resident holders of estate, with a further view to the protection of labour, of whatever improvements have been made on particular farms and grants of land in each township; whether of public roads, bridges, canals, markets, or improved farms, together with the increase or population and cattle, &c. whereby the relative value of land may be justly computed to form a Price Current for public use.

But as the transmission of such local reports from every township to York, for the Register of Government is held will be attended with a certain degree of postage to this office, and with other contingent charges necessary to the arrangement of them, for the public use, such reports will be received unless the consequence is free from expense, and two dollars are considered with five hundred words contained in the said reports.

It may therefore be important to point out some prescribed form, with the most simple mode of collecting and compounding such statistical reports from every township; this is easily accomplished by local information, obtained at any parish or other general meeting held by the inhabitants, when it can also be registered, what each individual's share of the expense subscribing to the report will be, according to the lowest sum required to be transmitted; which in few instances can exceed to 3d or 6d Curr'y.*

Reports of large tracts of land (from private individuals) will be received, and published by the same.

☞ Land Proprietors who wish to engage (by contract) with us, upon for the locating of timber, by communicating through this office, for the payment of labour to find or manage, or purchase of land, free of postage, for the Registry of the same, will be duly recorded in the books of this Office, for the inspection of laborers.

Acres men who take land in lieu of money, will find lots of land, consisting of 200 acres of abode at 1-2 dollar. Those who take half land and half cash, one dollar; and those who take only cash, one dollar and a half.

Printed circular letters of information for every class, will be forwarded to all, on the Province paying the time necessarily required.

All original reports will be regularly filed and published yearly in a quarto volume.

Public sales of states will be held at York, annually.

This Office will open (near the Crown Office to York,) on the 1st day of August next.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The following impressive and dignified story was related by the captain of a Dutch East Indiaman, which was passenger from the United States to England:

As I was once sailing (said he) in a fine stout ship across the banks of Newfoundland, one of those large fogs that prevail in those parts, rendered it impossible for the vessel to make any way for the day time; but at night the weather was clear, so that we could not distinguish any object at the distance of half a mile from the ship. I kept lights on the top of the mast head, and a constant watch for fear of falling in with some of the fishing smacks, which are accustomed to lie at anchor on the banks. The wind was blowing a smacking breeze, and we were going at a great rate through the water, when by the watch every one was alarmed by the cry that there was a sail close ahead: it was scarcely uttered before we were upon her, and we perceived a small schooner at anchor, with the broadside towards us. The crew were all asleep, and neglected to hoist a light. We struck her just amid-ships. The force, the size, and weight of our vessel, bore her down below the waves; and we passed over her so quickly that no one on our course. As the crashing wreck was sinking beneath us, I had a glimpse of two or three half naked wretches, rushing from her cabin; they just started from their beds to be swallowed up by the waters; we heard their drowning cry mingling with the wind. The shock that bore it to our ears, swept us out of all further hearing. I shall never forget that cry. It was some time before we could put the ship about, she was under sail too heavy. We returned as nearly as we could guess, to the place where the wreck had anchored. We cruised about for several hours in the dead fog. We fired signal guns, and listened if we might hear the hallow of any survivors, but all was silent; we never saw or heard any thing more of them."

DIED,

At Cohocton, Steuben county, on the 21st of August, Mr. Edward Wickoff, a host 60 years of age. In taking honey from a tree in the woods, he was stung by a bee, at the lower point of the ear, near the angle of the jaws. Instantly after the sting, his system was so strongly affected that he ate down floating, unbegged assistance. There were three or four persons in company, but they all used every possible exertion to save him. But within six minutes his power of speech was gone, his eyes became blind, and he died without a struggle.—Steuben Pat.

At Laurens district, S. C. at the age of one hundred and twenty-four years, Mr. Solomon Nisbit: a native of England, who emigrated to this country at the age of 19.

From the Boston Commercial Advertiser.

Silkworms.—A very valuable improvement has been made in silk. It is especially so to those employed in the delicate operations in engraving.—The objection to the silkworm's nursery, is, that in the act of eating, they, to a very considerable extent, disappears and begin their labors anew. It is to the edges being set very strong, and to the particular angle at which they are set, and is sufficient to arrest for the wounds made by the jaws of the worm. The most sagacious call the first intention. To remedy this defect it was lately suggested by Mr. Wilson and Dr. Wistar, to give the edges the same kind of cutting edge that razors have. This has been done, and the cutting credited as effected the experiment. The operation of hair lip has been repeatedly performed with the knife of the scissors both on the cutting and the blunt edge, with complete success. The operation is in this way performed with facility to the operator, and with less pain to the patient, than with the knife; and consequently in less degree of pain to the patient. This improvement may easily be applied to the other sides of the blades.

Large Yield of Indian Corn.

At the Otsego County cattle show & fair, held at Cooperstown, on the 2d & 3d inst the first premium for the best acre of Indian Corn, 123 bushels and 4 quarts, was awarded to David Tell, of Richfield; and the second, for the next best acre, 120½ bushels, to Isaac Light man, of Laurens.

There were five other applicants for the same premiums, viz. Dan Smith, of Otsego, who raised 119 bushels and 4 quarts of corn on one acre of land; George Derbyshire, of Hartwick, who had 118 bushels and 1 quarter; Peter Richfield, 111 bushels; Levi Wood, of Middlefield, 95 bushels and 4 quarts; and Asa Fitch, of Plainfield, 90 bushels and 22 quarts.

Printed Maps.—The celebrated Mr. Arrow Smith on one sheet of engraving the dies for moveable types for printing Maps, will, it is affirmed, execute more engraved on copper, and which invention seems to be exclusively his own.

Several Englishmen have lately made excavations in Cyrene. They have discovered some beautiful statues, and several interesting antiquities, & sent them off to London.

Potatoes.—According to the most recent enquiries, naturalists declare Iona to be the true country whence potatoes were propagated. They are worth all the mines at Peru.

There has been lately shot near the entrance of Surry harbour, a large sea fowl, having through its neck an arrow, such as those described by Capt. Cook to be used by the natives of the Islands of the Pacific Ocean.—The fowl round the shaft was not only healed, but perfectly hard and callous.

Confinement for Debt.—In an abstract of a very curious and valuable account of the prisons for debt in France, the author publishes a statement of the characters and occupations of the "incarcerators" and the "incarcerated." The statement flings in the face of the London tradesmen a most humiliating contrast.—"Among the creditors there are not three known to trade, because" adds the author, "they very well know a confined debtor rarely pays." There is, however, in the review of the prisons of St. Pelagie, "the debtor's chief prison at Paris, another feature, which we venture to say, would not be found in England, and which will more than counterbalance the preceding vice; dungeons are the incarcerating creditors of their father; a son keeps his father in reduced circumstances; a wife, wishing to keep her wealth, refuses to give the slightest succour to her husband; and another calculates as a fete the anniversary of the day on which she incarcerated her spouse, with no sustenance but the poor allowance, which she is enjoying under the name, "aliment," one of her friends would reason the captive." The abstract then goes on to enumerate several hard cases; a Colonel who after 43 years gallant service, and a loss of two sons in battle, remained in prison for the price of three pair of shoes; and a lad of dragoon, &c. concludes with a comparison between the treatment which the wild beasts in the Royal Menagerie receive from man, and that which man receives from man. The question of reforming the law on this subject has been taken up chiefly by M. M. Bavoux and Dr. Wistar, and in the parties making presents, and will be required to attend at the time of opening the Tenders, which must be sealed and endorsed "Tender for Fire-Wood."

to E-lis. This took place in the 4th month of the 20th year of Kos-hing, and in the 4th month of the present year, the events of three years in Siam are completed. The Emperor's pleasure was therefore solicited in regard to the criminal. The Emperor on receiving the report wrote with his vermilion pencil, that it was a most degrading and disgraceful affair, for the criminal should not be punished for a crime, but condemned to three years longer, when the Emperor's pleasure would be known.

From the Edinburgh Magazine.—There is an order in this Gazette, prohibiting distant magistrates and civil officers from any intercourse or intercourse with criminals; — men, who have no official intention; they are directed officially to address those who are most tempting and troublesome, but by no means to have familiar intercourse with them.—The reason urged for this, that country gentlemen, may not, on the occasion of holidays, employ undue influence with the spring candidates to screen from justice any of their servants or dependants, who may have transgressed the laws.

Coining.—Whimsicality.—A French chemist has recently discovered a mode of starch of potatoes quite free from and washed out once, a fine size, by which he is said to be able to make the starch makers of this country have to sell at a much lower price. The Irish potato planters of this country have been startled by the discovery, and they find that their land will be of little value, unless useful for cottages and for white washing, being more durable in tenacity & cleanness, and not putrefying like animal and vegetable matter with time.

Bee-Hunting.—To those who are assiduously watching the transit of the silver moon, we can only say that the company have, by dint of perseverance, proceeded as far as the shade of the Wabash Bee Hunt. The animal in which they are now at work, is a species of honey bee, which is found in the forests of Indiana, and they are rapidly approaching the precious metal.

The Indiana Silver Mine.—A paragraph announcing the discovery of a silver mine in the state of Indiana, has been for sometime circulating through the newspapers of the United States. Within a few days specimens of the ore have been sent to, and a manufacturer in this city, of silver, have been brought to the western museum by Bishop Flint, who has made an examination of both, and publish the result: this I have done and am pleased to say that it is well as I could have w

FROM EUROPE.

INVERNESS, June 29.

A steamboat has now performed six successful voyages upon Loch Ness and the Caledonian canal, going off in the morning, and returning from Fort Augustus every night. Nothing more forcibly shows the rapid improvement of this country, and the commencing commercial spirit spread abroad among the people, than the facility afforded to travellers. Three daily coaches, and one steamboat every day, now set out from, and arrive at Inverness, which a very few years back no public vehicle approached, and which, whether the mercury of living met, seemed as unapproachable as Stornoway or Lerwick. The farmer by the way, is now about to be brought home; for we understand that a steam boat is to be established at Stornoway. The active is the prime mover of all true improvement—individual interest—that admirable as our mail coaches are, a traveller by a private stage coach may reach Edinburgh twenty hours sooner than a letter put into the Post Office at Inverness at the same hour he departs.

TRIESTE, July 16.

The frigate Emperor Constantine, our port at the end of this month, for Canton in China. She is commanded by lieut. col. Pouzzi. of Gratz, in Styria. The vessel is loaded with a considerable quantity of quicksilver, the produce of the mines of Idria. This is the first commercial connection that has taken place to China. This same frigate is to take on board Mr Bartholomi de Steruer, late our Austrian minister to the court of Brazil, and to land him at Rio Janeiro, where she is to anchor for some time to take some provisions. She also is to go on board Mr. de Watts, Austrian consul general in China, who is going to establish himself in Canton. The departure of this ship for so distant a destination excites a lively sensation. Many persons have even desirous to make the passage to China at their own expence, but it has been found difficult to obtain permission.

The Rev. Henry Heap, the present Vicar of Bradford, in Yorkshire, upon his entering on his living, sent word to all his parishioners who are quakers, that he should never endeavor to collect from them, adding, that "what they could not conscientiously pay, he could not conscientiously receive."

Fatal Occurrence.—A melancholy event took place at Kirkburn, near Rotherham, on Thursday morning, at the Factory of Joseph Hill & Sons. John Depledge and Samuel Bradshaw, had been employed in sinking a well for the purpose of putting down a pump for a new dwelling house; which being finish ed, one of them descended to ascertain the depth of water: on he'ng not return. his companion went down after him; he, likewise did not return; and unfortunately, Joseph Hill, the proprietor, with his four sons, went down the ladder in succession; the last was seen to drop off by some persons who were standing near the mouth of the well, who immediately procured the assistance of some men from a neighboring colliery: but it required some preliminary preparations before they could be prevailed upon to go down into the well, which they at length did, and brought up the bodies of the seven men, all dead. There were, it seems some old coal pits close by the spot, which had not been worked for sometime, and it is conjectured that an aperture had been made in digging the well, which admitted the fatal damp, and caused the death of those unfortunate men, in so instantaneous a manner. Mr. Hill, the father, was a widower, and his four sons were unmarried; but Depledge and Bradshaw have both left families to deplore their untimely fate.

Fidelity of a Dog.—On Monday morning, at the hour of six o'clock, a person named Laurence Smith, in attempting to pass over the Regent's Canal, at the Hampstead Road Lock, slipped and fell within the gates of the lock; his dog, who accompanied him, instantly leaped into the water after the unfortunate man, but he sunk immediately, and several persons, who came soon afterwards, saw the dog swimming about with the hat of the deceased in his mouth; a young man humanely ventured down, swam about & grasped for the deceased, but he was not to be found. He, however, took the affectionate dog out of the water, and by the help of drags the body was discovered, after having been immersed for twenty minutes. Surgeon Poynter used the means of restoring animation for upwards of an hour, but without success; an inquest was subsequently held upon the body, and a verdict of "accidental death" returned.

PARIS, July 18.

Interesting Law Case.—Mr. Brunet, a Frenchman by birth, during a long residence in England, had obtained from his Britannic majesty letters of denisation. Having returned to France, he brought an action against the English general Crewe, for a sum of money which he owed him. The latter pleaded that the plaintiff, having become an English denizen, had lost his former national character, and could not, according to the laws of France, sue another English man in the French tribunals. This question was argued at three successive sessions sittings, and the court deemed this day according to the opinion of the advocate general Marchangy, that it is established by the authority of the English jurists, and the usages of all nations, that letters of denisation, are not equivalent to an act of naturalization; that the latter can only emanate from the sovereign power of the country, adopting the Catholic religion, taking the oath of allegiance, &c. while a patent of denisation, granted by the King, does not divest the individual of his former national character: but his alien condition is only better ed by his being entitled to purchase lands for. The plaintiff, therefore, having never ceased to be a Frenchman, Monsieur was given in his favor.—Journal des Debats.

Rome, Aug. 22.

We receive from various quarters of the Ecclesiastical States accounts of the damage done by a dreadful hail storm, on the 16th inst. One account from Tivoli, of the 17th, says, "After an extraordinary heat for many days, a heavy storm of hail fell yesterday, and ravaged the whole district for twenty minutes; a considerable part of the olive crop, vineyards and gardens were ruined. The damage done to the country is estimated at 200,000 scudi, besides the loss of the cattle, where almost all the windows were broken."

The Government from Rome maintains an attempt made on the night of the 4th, at Civita Vecchia, by a desperate body of malefactors, to seize upon the city, and proclaim a republic.—The plot is said to 1600. Their project however was discovered and frustrated.

NAPLES, Aug. 26.

Prince Cimitelli has set out on an extraordinary and important mission to the emperor of Austria, Vienna. When the minister arrives there, he will proceed to London.

Accurate letters from Sicily mention that the force under the Palermitan junta amounts to 60,000 men, all were armed; without discipline, but determined to perish rather than submit to the yoke of the new system which the Carbonari have formed. The most powerful of the nobility in Sicily are at the head of the insurrection. Of all the towns in Sicily only Messina, Augusta and Trapani, remain true to the present government.

The city of Catanisetta, having refused to support the independent faction, has been reduced to ashes by the troops of the junta. This cruel example has struck 12 towns to enter into the league. The Palermitans sent some troops on the 3d of last month, against Girgenti, which was defended by 15 or 16 thousand men, but the latter fled in the utmost confusion; the last was seen to drop off by some persons who were standing near the mouth of the well, who immediately procured the assistance of some men from a neighboring colliery: but it required some preliminary preparations before they could be prevailed upon to go down into the well, which they at length did, and brought up the bodies of the seven men, all dead. There were, it seems some old coal pits close by the spot, which had not been worked for sometime, and it is conjectured that an aperture had been made in digging the well, which admitted the fatal damp, and caused the death of those unfortunate men, in so instantaneous a manner. Mr. Hill, the father, was a widower, and his four sons were unmarried; but Depledge and Bradshaw have both left families to deplore their untimely fate.

The Russian Envoy Extraordinary, at the Papal dominions, the Carbonari are engaged in a plan to raise all Italy in case of a war with Austria. He, however, took the affectionate dog out of the water, and by the help of drags the body was discovered, after having been immersed for twenty minutes. Surgeon Poynter used the means of restoring animation for upwards of an hour, but without success; an inquest was subsequently held upon the body, and a verdict of "accidental death" returned.

MADRID, Sept. 16.

The committee of finance, and commerce and industry presented a report on a law relative to the customs.

Art. 1. There shall be a general tariff of customs for the whole Spanish monarchy, which shall be in force from the 1st of January, 1821, in Europe and from the 1st of March, 1821, in the colonies. After a considerable debate, the 1st article was approved as far as the word "Europe" inclusive, and it was reserved to a committee to fix the time for the commencement of the operation of the law in America.

Art. 2 The Cortes shall ratify every year the tariff every year, as may be necessary.—Approved.

The Aurora, Blackburn, is arrived off Dover from Oporto, with letters from thence of 12th inst. On the 14th, the provisional junta of the north, was to be installed in Coimbra. The Conde de Amarante and all the troops in Traslos-Montes, had declared for the Oporto party. The last intelligence received at Oporto from Lisbon, were of the 7th inst. by which it appeared the Lisbon party had a strong objection to the government remaining in the hands of the people of Oporto. No fears were entertained for the British property or persons being molested, unless the British interfered. All troops at Coimbra, Leira, and the adjacent towns had joined the Oporto party, and all were marching on to Lisbon.

We have received this morning important advices from Lisbon, which reached down to the 12th inst. There is every reason to suppose, contrary to any, that the cause of Military freedom—the legislature of camps and barracks—the sword and bayonet—and the usurpers of not be so triumphant as some eager worshippers of revolution in any shape have anticipated.

The latest letters from Naples afford cause to apprehend further disastrous between that kingdom and the island of Sicily. Previously to the 20th ult. the revolutional government of Naples had come to a determination of offering the Sicilians a separate parliament, and a junction to the crown of Naples, and a negociation was accordingly opened on this basis; but it is believed that the Sicilians, and particularly the people of Palermo, would by no means be satisfied with this concession. While the negociation was pending at Naples, reinforcements of 4000 and 5000 men were sent to Trapani, with the sole view, as was alleged, of preserving tranquility. The fleet of the Republic of Sicily; but it is most probable that this alarmed and excited the jealousy of the Palermitans, and consequently tended to embarrass the negociation. It is in fact, the negociations are said, for this or some other cause, to have been suspended, and the troops, which had been collected, was actively preparing to oppose the troops sent to Trapani.

SICKNESS AT INDIANA.

The sickness of this town is at present truly deplorable. Nearly one third of its population appears to be confined on the beds of sickness, and the number of industrious farmers in the vicinity are crowded with our fugitive cavaliers ease.

Nor is this calamity confined to Vincennes—nearly all the towns of the western of the state of Illinois are similarly afflicted. The disease is confined solely to the unprecedented lowness of the streams, by others to this. combined with other causes. But let us not despair, look it the situation of the river board ing this town—with the water scarcely moved on its bed—with a surface in both pidus, in some places, covered with green putrified matter to the extent of 100 yards from the shore—and then say whether our climate of this season can be healthy. When standing on the banks at the lower part of the town, the spectator finds a constant stream of foul, putrid, and affrighting; and at the breezes at this season chiefly blow up the river, there can be no trouble in accounting for the ghastly appearance of the human. That this source of pestilence could have been removed, we cannot say; but, that it is the source of pestilence, there can be no reasonable doubt.

Buffalo, Oct. 22.

The gale of Wednesday, the 11th inst. has proved the most destructive of lives and property on lake Erie, of any within our recollection, since the navigation of Erie. Pa. who arrived in this village a few days since, has put us in possession of the following account of the loss of the vessels at the time of the late terrible tempest:

The schr. Franklin, Capt. Hyatt, of Erie, of 90 tons, owned by Mr. Peter S. V. Hamot, of Erie, with a cargo of between $3 and 4,000 worth of merchandize, belonging to Mr. Peter S. Hamot, sailed from Erie and arrived at Grand River; the capt. went on shore, but returned to the vessel on the night of the 11th. The schr. now lies sunk in about 5 fathom water, with the tops of her masts just above water, 10 miles below Grand River. The crew consisting of Capt. Hayt, and 4 Mr. Norton, a pilot, and 8 others, all of Erie, Pa.—It is thought but little of the cargo can be saved.

The schr. Zephyr, Napier Master, from Ashtabula to Cleveland, with a quantity of pig iron and salt, was driven on shore near the Pennsylvania and Ohio line, with the loss of every soul on board; amounting to 10 or 12 persons, the crew and passengers. The body of a female was found upon the shore of one of the islands in the lake, supposed to be one who had been then made of the remains of those unfortunate persons, who had thus suddenly been hurried into the jaws of destruction. Hats, bonnets, &c. had floated ashore.

Another small craft is said to be lost, but we have no particulars.

The schooner Elizabeth, of U. C. is reported to be lost, with most of her crew, but the vessel is not entirely gone.

The Lake Erie Steam-Boat had fortunately just arrived at Detroit, and made fast to the wharf, as the storm commenced.

PROROGATION OF THE ASSEMBLY.

"Mr. President, and Gentlemen of his Majesty's Council,

"Mr. Speaker, and Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

"Having convened you for the purpose mentioned at the opening of the session, I have much pleasure in thanking you for your parts, and having been given to understand, that no further public business requires attention, I feel myself called upon to relieve you, from the inconvenience of further application to the affairs of the Colony, at a distance from the place of the avocation of several of you. But I cannot allow the General Assembly to separate, without expressing my grateful sentiments to you Gentlemen Members of His Majesty's Council, for your constant oconomical care of the Public Revenue, and for the assistance I have ever received from you in your Executive capacity, on that important point, well acquainted as I must be, with your integrity and sound judgment, on such matters, I must not withhold from you this my most public testimony to that effect, ascribing to your assistance, the actual state of the pecuniary affairs of the Colony, which may well challenge scrutiny, and need not shrink from remark.

"I do hope by more than my power to concur with both Houses, on the bills which have been presented, but it is impossible to pass upon them all at present. His Excellency the Governor will be quite in time to stand on his legs. At day light the 22d inst. he was killed at a little distance by Mr. Antoine Beaudry. The cattle bitten by the wolf became mad and all are soon dead. The wolf entered Handfield died the 3d inst. unconscious having the help of medicines, having shown during his illness all the symptoms of hydrophobia. We have extracted His Majesty's Instruction to my conduct, whose faithful servant I am.

"To the Address in question would thus have reached the Throne, unquestionably much sooner, and let me add, with more cordiality, as it remains to be said, was my conduct his Lordship may find it consistent with his duty to adopt, on so delicate a point as the interposing in the political concerns of a distant Colony.

"Under any circumstances, of hopes and earnest desire to promote the public welfare will continue unabated, and feeling as I trust I ever shall, superior to all party politics, and necessarily regarding with both regret and wonder, those who allow themselves to be hurried away by them.

MAD WOLF AND DOGS.—On Friday the 22d ult. a wolf was seen in the point of day, a wolf stopped at the door of Jean Lessier, farmer at La Beauce in the parish of Chambly, and seized upon his dog, the dog which was without, began to bark. His master rose and saw a wolf which appeared about the size of a calf. He opened the door with a loud cry; the wolf returned and seemed to make towards the parish of St. Mary Sessions, which he passed in the field of a farmer of the last parish, named Joseph Handfield and attacked several of his cattle. Some persons who were in the house of Handfield opened his door and the dog became quiet: but he saw his cattle running this way and that, and the wolf devouring several horrible. He took his fusil and ran to the Park. He perceived an animal which he knew not at first to be a wolf, discharged his fusil with the wolf fall. Thinking him dead, he ran up to see what animal it was. On coming near to see if he were a wolf; he touched him with his fusil, but the beast sprung up, flew at his face and bit him in several places.—Handfield fought with the wolf an hour, at last his strength failing him he cried loudly Ah me! a beast devours me! His father-in law, Pierre Demarais ran towards him. Handfield cried to him "Gain the house as quickly as possible and leave the door open, I will endeavour to recover the little strength which is left me and save myself." In fact he found means to get clear from the wolf, fled with all his might and reached the house of Jean Lessier. He found there no less forthwith shut to the door securely was it shut to, when the animal appeared attempting to penetrate into the house, poor Handfield was quite in a terror blood: he threw himself down upon his bed to stand on his legs. YORK, NOVEMBER 16, 1820.

Our latest European dates are to the 6th of Oct. at which time the state of the continent was in a very unsettled state, and some of the principal powers seemed preparing to resort to arms in order to put down the revolutionary spirit which is so prevalent.

We have seen a paper containing the letter of Mr. Brougham's speech before the House of Lords on the 3d and 4th ult. it is, as might be expected, a very able one, embracing in its detail the whole of the money produced on the part of the prosecution. Mr. Williams followed, and had not concluded on the 4th, the last date we have. Besides the above two gentlemen, we observe the names of Messrs. Denham, Lushington and Wild, as Counsel for the Queen.

Whether her majesty is innocent or guilty, we feel confident that the street will be impartially and fairly tried, and that the Peers will be entirely unbiassed by any thing but the real merits of the evidence brought before them. The same mode should be pursued in the House of Commons, between a great deal of trash of the enquiry. Had the trial taken place before the House of Commons or a common Court of Law, (adopting Mr. Brougham's argument that a person of the nation could be tried,) in the event of a conviction, no matter how clear and decisive the evidence might appear, we should have been entertained of the justice of the verdict, as it would be asserted that it was impossible for twelve men to be found from the common mass of society, who were not in some degree prejudiced. Could twenty-four peers be found from the highest rank and fortune in the empire, and of the most cultivated education, who would not be supposed to be intimately acquainted with the language of the universe—constituting together a court unequalled in any country for information and independence, to whose integrity and ability in conducting a very complicated trial, we must implicitly rely for the unraveling of any conspiracy, however intricate or well contrived.

The general sympathy at first excited in her majesty's favour, was greatly impaired by her making common cause with a set of furious demagogues, whose debasing stain in verses to be that whatever is wrong; and who seek to overturn all constituted authority; guided by these men, she has sanctioned their intemperate and inflammatory productions, by allowing them to appear as answers to addresses made to her. Indeed her whole conduct since she left the continent, during unblushing effrontery, rather than the dignified modesty of colonial life, has been calculated to lessen her own conduct, since the commencement of the investigation, but injured her cause in more than all the assertions of her accusers.

Some American papers seem to infer that the enemies and guards subduing Spain, will soon be employed in reducing them, arises from the spontaneous feelings of the men; and that therefore there is no danger to be apprehended as a result of the military: this is entirely incorrect: the military, as well as all others under government, are sanctioned their interests and inflammatory productions, by allowing them to appear as answers to addresses made to her. Indeed her whole conduct since she left the continent, during unblushing effrontery, rather than the dignified modesty of colonial life, has been calculated to lessen her own conduct, since the commencement of the investigation, but injured her cause in more than all the assertions of her accusers.

Other papers have asserted, that the ministry had engaged and bribed the military, among all these soldiers, to protect the government. Had these Editors been acquainted with the British character, they would have known that it was not in the power of any ministry to lead a single company of soldiers against the people, if they opposed the erection of an Act of the Parliament for that specific purpose. And so far from the military being any accomplices of the ministry, as is said,—if there was a regular troops whatever in England—should the government require assistance, the stand, yet would support both of the nation and royal friends and stanch supporters of their country—would rise in their thousands, and would be ready to march now malignantly using the obnoxious cloak of the Queen's cause, to involve the country in anarchy and bloodshed.

A snow storm which commenced on Saturday night and continued great part of Sunday last, and which has not been equalled for several days, has made good sleighing earlier than is remembered before in this country. The snow fell to the depth of 8 inches, and is now rapidly, and should this snow immediately, great damage may be apprehended from sudden frosts.

PROPOSALS

BY AMOS LAY,

For Revising, Correcting & Re-publishing,

A NEW EDITION OF HIS LATE

MAP

OF THE

ALSO, COMPRISING A LARGE PART OF PENNSYLVANIA AND NEW-JERSEY, WITH A PART OF CONNECTICUT, MASSACHUSETTS, VERMONT AND UPPER CANADA.

On a Scale of Seven Miles to an Inch.

THE size of this Map is four feet four inches square. It extends from the Canada Line, or 45th degree of North Latitude, south to the city of Philadelphia : and from Pittsburgh in Pennsylvania, west to the Connecticut or Canada river, on the east ; and includes nearly the whole of the settled part of Upper Canada.

The publisher having been employed for upwards of twenty six years in exploring and surveying various parts of the United States, Upper and Lower Canada, and also in compiling and publishing Maps, which have met with very liberal encouragement, and from experience is fortified with the belief, that a perseverance in his present undertaking will not only merit, but receive the generous knowledge and improvement of his own country, and the adjoining provinces, will entitle him to the confidence of the public ; and such shall be the unremitting exertions of his labors may deserve.

N. B. The Author or the Map begleave to acquaint his friends to the public in general, that in a late tour through the State, he has collected a deal of interesting, from the principal Land Offices, and other correct sources, which the late improvements and additions to that will render this Map still more desirable, and that no pains will be spared to render it the most useful and perfect Map of the State of New-York, and the counties it comprises.

We have examined a map of the State of New-York, and also a large part part of the State of Pennsylvania, published by Mr. AMOS LAY, and it appears to us to be accurate, and to contain all the Counties up to this time correctly designated, and to be well worthy of public patronage.

PROSPECTUS OF THE

YORK ESTATE DIRECTORY,

AND LAND PRICE CURRENT OFFICE.

The object and use of this Office will be found in all of lands which have been, and hereafter may be, granted by the British Government to individuals of every class, for facilitating both the Settlement and Duties and all future Sales.

By a general collection of located land, as likewise of deserted farms to be sold or exchanged, a Registration of Estate will constitute a Guide to those in want of employment, and to Capitalists desirous of settling in this healthy climate ; whilst the principle of internal arrangements a office settling upon an attentive form connexions and with a corresponding agency in Europe, will promote the introduction of ample means, to support of the landed interest of Upper Canada.

The most important branch of this institution, must therefore necessarily arise out of the collection of local reports and their operative effect upon Foreign Capital, through which the rise and progress of the state of Agriculture in this Province will hereafter be made known by the public journals as a Desideratum ; for the attainment of so desirable an object, it is proposed to receive statistical accounts from resident holders of estate, (with a further view to the protection of labor,) of whatever improvements have been made on their original surveys and grants of land in each township ; whether of public roads, bridges, canals, or buildings ; the quantity of land cleared, the increase of population and of cattle, &c. whereby the relative value of land may be justly estimated to form a Price Current for public use.

But as the transmission of such local reports from every township in York, (under the seal of Government, is full) will be attended with a certain expence of postage to this office, and with other contingent charges necessary for the arrangement of them, for the press ; on reports will be received unless the consent to pay in free Provincial currency dollars are remitted with the same, for every words continued in the said reports.

It will therefore be important to point out some prescribed form, with the most simple mode of collecting and forwarding the same, and the only mode in each township, this is easily accomplished by local information, obtained of any parish or other general meeting held by the inhabitants ; when it can also be obtained, what each individual's share of the expence subscribing to the report will be, according to the length agreed upon to be transmitted ; which in few instances can exceed 1s 3d or 2s 6d Curr'y.*

Reports of large tracts of land (from private individuals) will be received, and faithfully published upon the same terms.

☞ Land Proprietors who wish to engage (by contract) with the office for the clearing of timber, by communicating their proposals to the office, stating whether in land or money) and one dollar, free of postage, for the Registry of the same, will be duly noticed in the books of this Office, for the inspection of labourers.

Axe-men who take land in lieu of money, to register their names and places of abode at the office. Those who take half land and half cash, one dollar ; and those who take only cash, one dollar and a half.

Printed circular letters of information for every class, will be forwarded to all, chargeable with postage, as occasion may require.

All original reports will be regularly filed and published yearly in a quarto volume.

Public sales of estates will be held at this Office.

E. ANGELL, Director.

1787 Jan. 7, this day read the above account by his worship Lieut. Col. Richardson.

The following extraordinary occurrence took place in England a few years since.

On Sunday, a man by the name of John Holmes, formerly of Ferrers, Cornwall, was returning from a place of worship across a common, to his own house. A very heavy rain falling, he sheltered himself in a hollow tree, which was decayed, and fell into an exposed shaft of a mine, 90 feet deep, besides nine feet of water in the bottom ; and, almost overwhelmed with the mud, he reached the water without receiving any serious injury. Being an expert swimmer, he kept himself afloat, and by treading the water collected a bundle, by clinging to the projecting pieces of rock in the sides of the shaft, he entered a kind of ledge, on which he contrived to get, and on which he lay for the space of Monday, calling for assistance ; but the terror of the people who approached the place, and Monday night came on would be continued in his perilous situation, when, exerting his voice to the utmost, he was heard by a man who was passing on the road, and being heard, had a pleasant sub-acid sensation, which is supposed to proceed from the very valuable substances more it became the property of the University.

The Turks lately published a pirate by having him alive : they began at the head, but when they came to the breast, they were struck with the agony.

The Greeks always expect that the weather, what ever it may be, will be fine on a Sunday.

A mollish (Judge) at Jerusalem, being disturbed at night by dogs, worked off these animals at Jerusalem and its environs in the following manner :—Proclamation was made, that all dogs found in the streets should be killed, and thus excited a number of persons to run after them with clubs, and to beat them to death. The dogs, after Hussein as rising the mosque, stopped him and used every tooth in his head drawn.

Tyrolgneous Acid.—Curing Provisions. The property of preserving meat and other animal substances from putrefaction by this acid, the product of dissolution from wood, was originally noticed in the Quarterly Journal, about twelve months ago. A Mr. W. Imsey has since tried a series of experiments with the view to further investigating this subject, and rendering the acid useful in domestic and rural economy. These fully confirm the utility of the discovery for curing meats. Herrings uncovered for three hours ; distilled Pyroligneous acid of the specific gravity of 1.017, were completely suffocated, but remained in perfect preservation for half a year ; the only disagreeable quality attached to them was a very empyreumatic smell and taste. Merely dipping the fish in a pickle of this strength appears to be sufficient for their cure, and they are then to be dried in the usual manner. Haddocks slightly sprinkled with salt, and afterwards dipped in the acid, were nicely preserved : it allowed to dry in the air, during which the insects are more decomposed, and the smell and taste were unpleasant, as in the herring, first mentioned. Herring, with salt and acid slightly combined, were exposed to the insect red herrings, and shining and fresh in their colour at when taken out of the pickle.

Beef dipped in the acid (sp'gr. 1.017) for one minute, in July, 1819, was, on the 20th of January, 1820, as free from taint as on the day when the experiment was made. Beef dipped in pure vinegar (sp. gr. 1.007) at the same time, was completely corroborate out of water, and being brought, had a pleasant sub-acid taste. It is thus evident that vinegar applied to meat, in a certain degree, is antiseptic quality with pyroligneous acid. (See Ec. The Year V.)

The case containing the body is a curiosity of itself, and exhibiting a greater appearance of antiquity.

The highly interesting relic was exhibited in presence of several professors and persons, who, upon opening the inner coffin, the fragrance of the flowers forming the investment of the body, which had a sweet smell, and the mummy itself was found to be in a perfect state of preservation, and the head and face were entirely covered with a profusion of hieroglyphical characters, of various colours.

A forgiving disposition was made in the coverings immediately over the face of the mummy, which were evidently continuous folds of linen, and had the usual appearance of an embalmed human body.

A long piece of papyrus was found on the breast, which had the usual directly upon which he stood. The effects of the blow was astonishing. The keel was broken,—the gunwale bent and every plank, excepting two, were cut through—and it was evident that the boat would have been completely destroyed, had not the keel struck directly upon the seal of fines.—The boat was rendered useless.

LOSS OF THE HON. COMPANY'S CHINESE YOUNG AMOAH, BY THE PERSIAN SQUADRON.

Extract of a letter from Bombay from one of the four Persons who escaped.

"We left Bussorah on the 12th of March, 1820, and had a tedious passage down the Euphrates. On the 17th we were off Korrah, an island about forty miles from Bushire. During the night of the 17th it blew fresh, with a considerable sea. About 3 a. m. of the 18th it fell calm, was black and cloudy, with thunder and lightning. The mainsail was hauled up, and the topsails were lowered soon after. About half past three a sudden squall came from the northward, accompanied with thunder, lightning, and rain. I was in bed, but luckily awake. I turned out on hearing the wind; and as our barque was aback on the main hatch-way, I went out and sheltered between decks to see what was the matter. As I looked up, the vessel heeled, the water came rushing over the larboard gunwale, the launch went over the side, and at the same time I heard a horrid shriek, and found myself below the water.

"All this must have taken place in less than a minute and a half from the first coming on of the squall. I came to again on the surface, I found myself among pieces of boards and heard a few men around. I, however, felt myself immediately on shore in a hot bottom up, towards which I made, and got upon it. Hearing some people in the water near me, (for it was quite dark and rainy) I called out, and was joined by six or seven of my unfortunate shipmates. All the waves now began to sweep the lessening of the waves, and the fit at thirty miles; at this extreme point piercing cries of a little boy, who was at of Sir J. Rose's progress, he states the some distance, but a few minutes before we could be of no assistance. In a few minutes he floated one, and swimming a little, I swam to about 80 miles up Lancaster Sound, a boat bottom up, towards which I made, and got upon it. "Having now people enough to right the boat, and keep him on her keel, although full of water, by placing a few small spars, that we found floating about, across the gunwale, which prevented her from foundering, the best way we could, with stripes of our shirts and handkerchiefs, and spun them round. At day break, which we much longed for, the island of Karrah was seen about twelve miles distant. We also saw the main land about Bushire, but that was far off. At this time we were joined by two other men who had kept near us on a spar, and our little raft should be full of those poor fellows died before we reached the shore. Sitting upon this swamped hull, naked, and constantly coming over us, we continued to drift towards the island, and about 2 P. M. we got within one or two of the breakers, and expected in half an hour more to land. At this time, to our great distress, I observed that the tide began to set us off again, and to drift towards the island. As we were evidently leaving the shore fast, it was proposed to swim ashore, but on making the experiment we found ourselves so weak, and the distance so great, that we were glad to put about, and was with great difficulty that some of us reached the cutter. Luckily the current soon changed, and sent us back again, and a little after sun-set we were cast upon a reef of rocks, over which we swam and waded till we got upon dry land. After walking two or three hours along the beach, we arrived at the town, and were immediately taken to the Shaik. He gave us a room in his house, supplied us with clothes, food, and provision he had, for the island is very poor.—We remained there three days, and during that time received every attention and kindness we could desire. On the 22d of March, the Shaik gave us a boat, in which we arrived at Bushire the same evening, and of course were supplied with every thing. W. is Bushire on the 28th, S arrived here a few days ago. For several days after our unfortunate wreck, I was laid up swollen with the sun and salt water, and from having been cut a good deal with the rocks on landing, but otherwise have been in good health."

Lancaster Sound.—We last week gave an substance the information communicated to us, as brought by Captain Johnson, of the Cumberland, of this port, from Lancaster Sound, to Davis Straits. At that time we had not been able to see Captain Johnson, but have since obtained the following particulars. In proceeding up Lancaster Sound, almost every 50 miles from the entrance, Captain J. observed on the south side a large piece of fresh water running perfectly parallel to the direction of the Sound, lived on from it by a ridge, apparently about thirty yards broad, and supposed by Captain Johnson to be formed by water kept back from the hills. He sent the second mate and a man's crew towards the head of this ridge, to ascertain the existence of the country, and whether there were any plants, &c. but the weather changed while they were on shore, it blew a hard gale, and they were obliged to leave the Sound, and a good deal of floating ice came down from the northward, and drifted down the Sound, and a considerable quantity of the ice became much broken and rotten, and of course the width of the Sound, at which place the width might be from 40 to 50 miles.—The land appeared to rise in a gentle slope from the water's edge for some distance, then swelled into hills of considerable height, and many of them with craggy tops. From the mouth of the Sound Captain Johnson saw the Sound extend apparently about 20 miles, in the direction, by compass, of W. N. W. and E. S. E. with a broad land on the southern side appeared to bend to the South, and the water to possess that direction. The breadth was not had both of entrance, but appeared about 20 miles.

The Kingston Chronicle mentions the loss of the schooners Minerva, laden with salt, near Oswego, and the Triumph with wheat, near the Genesee River, in the late Snow storm.

We have also to add the loss, in the same storm, of a vessel on the mouth of the Owen, near the Oak Orchard, on the American side of the lake: it is supposed the greater part of the cargo belonged to the Province, for this town, will be saved, at least such part as cannot easily be damaged by water. Fortunately no lives were lost by any of the above wrecks.

Byron Smyth's Bathos.—The strong eye of the greatest talents have taken delight in composing or endeavouring to surveil Bathos. Smyth is a case in point. Sir William Smyth, the learned Recorder son of the Exchequer, at one time spent two days and nights in considering the reason why a man should be hung, over which we swam and waded till we got upon dry land. After walking two or three hours along the beach, we arrived at the town, and were immediately taken to the Shaik. It was stated last week that the Friendship, of Aberdeen, had been taken as high as lat. 80. 40. to the Bollin's Eye, in search of convenience. The highest latitude we observed that the tide began to set us off again, and to drift towards the island. As we were evidently leaving the shore fast, it was proposed to swim ashore, but on making the experiment we found ourselves so weak, and the distance so great, that we were glad to put about, and was with great difficulty that some of us reached the cutter. Luckily the current soon changed, and sent us back again, and a little after sun-set we were cast upon a reef of rocks, over which we swam and waded till we got upon dry land. After walking two or three hours along the beach, we arrived at the town, and were immediately taken to the Shaik. He gave us a room in his house, and supplied us with clothes, food, and provision he had, for the island is very poor.—We remained there three days, and during that time received every attention and kindness we could desire. On the 22d of March, the Shaik gave us a boat, in which we arrived at Bushire the same evening, and of course were supplied with every thing. W. is Bushire on the 28th, S arrived here a few days ago. For several days after our unfortunate wreck, I was laid up swollen with the sun and salt water, and from having been cut a good deal with the rocks on landing, but otherwise have been in good health."

LOSS OF THE HON. COMPANY'S CHINESE YOUNG AMOAH, BY THE PERSIAN SQUADRON.

Extract of a letter from Bombay from one of the four Persons who escaped.

"We left Bussorah on the 12th of March, 1820, and had a tedious passage down the Euphrates. On the 17th we were off Korrah, an island about forty miles from Bushire. During the night of the 17th it blew fresh, with a considerable sea. About 3 a. m. of the 18th it fell calm, was black and cloudy, with thunder and lightning. The mainsail was hauled up, and the topsails were lowered soon after. About half past three a sudden squall came from the northward, accompanied with thunder, lightning, and rain. I was in bed, but luckily awake. I turned out on hearing the wind; and as our barque was aback on the main hatch-way, I went out and sheltered between decks to see what was the matter. As I looked up, the vessel heeled, the water came rushing over the larboard gunwale, the launch went over the side, and at the same time I heard a horrid shriek, and found myself below the water.

"All this must have taken place in less than a minute and a half from the first coming on of the squall. I came to again on the surface, I found myself among pieces of boards and heard a few men around. I, however, felt myself immediately on shore in a hot bottom up, towards which I made, and got upon it. Hearing some people in the water near me, (for it was quite dark and rainy) I called out, and was joined by six or seven of my unfortunate shipmates. All the waves now began to sweep the lessening of the waves, and the fit at thirty miles; at this extreme point piercing cries of a little boy, who was at of Sir J. Rose's progress, he states the some distance, but a few minutes before we could be of no assistance. In a few minutes he floated one, and swimming a little, I swam to about 80 miles up Lancaster Sound, a boat bottom up, towards which I made, and got upon it. "Having now people enough to right the boat, and keep him on her keel, although full of water, by placing a few small spars, that we found floating about, across the gunwale, which prevented her from foundering, the best way we could, with stripes of our shirts and handkerchiefs, and spun them round. At day break, which we much longed for, the island of Karrah was seen about twelve miles distant. We also saw the main land about Bushire, but that was far off. At this time we were joined by two other men who had kept near us on a spar, and our little raft should be full of those poor fellows died before we reached the shore. Sitting upon this swamped hull, naked, and constantly coming over us, we continued to drift towards the island, and about 2 P. M. we got within one or two of the breakers, and expected in half an hour more to land. At this time, to our great distress, I observed that the tide began to set us off again, and to drift towards the island. As we were evidently leaving the shore fast, it was proposed to swim ashore, but on making the experiment we found ourselves so weak, and the distance so great, that we were glad to put about, and was with great difficulty that some of us reached the cutter. FROM THE UNITED STATES.

NORFOLK, Oct. 27.

We regret to learn that some unpleasant occurrences have given serious cause of alarm to the inhabitants of Tobago. Two or three houses in Scarborough have been reduced to ashes, and it had been ascertained that a plot was laid to destroying the whole town. The following particulars are communicated through the papers:

"TOBAGO, Sept. 1.

"The Magistrates devoted their attention to investigate the circumstances—proceedings of the Court of Inquiry, respecting the conflagration of Monday, a conviction in their own minds of its being intentionally done, and with the deliberate design to murder, each and every one of the inhabitants.

"I have made my protest according to law, and a copy of it sent to the French Ambassador at Washington, and the Spanish Consul has addressed another to his Ambassador also."

CHILLICOTHE, Oct. 7.

Pigeons.—Immense exceeding all calculation, have for several weeks been collected on the waters of Scioto Brush Creek, a few miles east of the Furnaces, in Adams County. Their roost extends a mile in length and breadth. To this place they collect to the evening; and early in the morning, they rise in a cloud, and literally darken the air. To persons a trayed.—The goods saved from the fire made distant, their noise, when on the were lost by being thrown off the dock, roost, seems to resemble the sound of a distant water-fall. The trees and shrubs which form their roost, are beat to the ground by their weight. They are destroying the wheat and mast, which is abundant in that district of country, and prehend some villainous nefarious and medited the destruction of the town—by fire—and, in his opinion, from the small number of the white troops in garrison, it could not be better effected, than by the inhabitants voluntarily forming themselves into a Night Patrole, under the direction of the magistrates.

Mr. Pigott, the Chief Justice, pointed out the necessity of the inhabitants generally patrolling the street nightly, but in numbers and well armed, for it was with great regret he had to state there was the most urgent and unequivocal necessity on occasion to be taken for the preservation of lives and property, facts it cannot be disguised from the public mind, have fully convinced the Court, and whether there were any plants, &c. but the weather changed while they were on shore, it blew a hard gale, and they were obliged to leave the Sound, and a good deal of floating ice came down from the northward, and drifted down the Sound, and a considerable quantity of the ice became much broken and rotten, and of course the width of the Sound, at which place the width might be from 40 to 50 miles.—The land appeared to rise in a gentle slope from the water's edge for some distance, then swelled into hills of considerable height, and many of them with craggy tops. From the mouth of the Sound Captain Johnson saw the Sound extend apparently about 20 miles, in the direction, by compass, of W. N. W. and E. S. E. with a broad land on the southern side appeared to bend to the South, and the water to possess that direction. The breadth was not had both of entrance, but appeared about 20 miles.

It may be useful to inform our readers that Mr. Hogg, the Chief Justice of the Western District, has appointed Mr. Williams, supervisor of the cloth searchers.

The Estates and the Dardaston Arrangement.—A number of persons at Dartaston, having heard in a Glasgow paper, that the eclipse would be "visible from that town at such an hour," actually left their houses, and Letter to Birmingham to see the Eclipse.

An English squadron is to sail immediately for the Levant, for the purpose of protecting the British subjects at that place.

An Edinburgh paper mentions, as a reason why the Emperor of Austria declined the meeting of the Emperor of Austria at Prest, that it was necessary his Majesty should be present at the Diet of Pesth. The same paper adds, that the Emperor Alexander has expressed a wish to have an interview with the Emperor of Austria, in the early part of October.

At Vienna article of September 2, says, that the Emperors of Russia and Austria, and the King of Prussia will have an interview at Pillnitz in Saxony.

The Sardinian States are ruled, by an imperial Mandate, granted a considerable portion of land on the banks of the Danube, and converted them into farms, exempting them from taxes and military service, assuring them of his royal favor and protection. M. Morits, a converted Jew of the Greek Church, is appointed Governor of the colony.

More than 60 Israelites have already, it is said, resorted there.

Mr. Spencer, a gentleman at the Cape of Good Hope, have written to their friends in England, expressing their intention of settling with their new residence.

An Edinburgh paper of the 30th ult., says "a few days ago, two seamen belonging to an American vessel in Leith Roads, were drowned in the following circumstance:—They were in the cabin of the Copper Mine Hero of Heroine.

It was stated last week that the Friendship, of Aberdeen, had been taken as high as lat. 80. 40. to the Bollin's Eye, in search of convenience. no effort availed to stop its progress on it a store, next south of the long range of wooden dwellings.

The whole loss was estimated by judicious people at about one hundred thousand dollars, but a small part of which was insured.

From the Daily Advertiser.

It is stated that a body of Christian Jews have lately been discovered in Persia, in the Province of Ispahan, consisting of about 3000 families. Their whole number is about ten thousand. "They have no Archbishop and three Bishops. The Archbishop resides at Ispahan, and one of the Bishops at Chorasbad; another at Mesheden, three days journey from Mosul; and the third at Derabekir. By the boundaries they are called Nazarenes, by the Arabs, Syrians; but among themselves, Christians, or Israel; which name denotes their relation to the ancient Jewish Christian Church, as also their language; the Lord's Prayer and the Apostles Creed being very like to the original Hebrew. They have no connection whatever with the Greek or Roman Churches.

"They hold the doctrine of the Trinity in Unity; and declare Jesus Christ to be the way, the truth, and the life.—They acknowledge only the two sacraments, but both in the full sense and import of the Protestant Church.

"They have a Synod, a large church, nearly of the size and appearance of the Scotch Kirk, at Madras, and a College, in which they educate the Mahometans, they meet for public worship between the hours of 5 and 7 on Sunday mornings, and in the evenings between 4 and 6 on week days.

"The country is said to be covered with gardens, abounding with a great variety of fruits. Vines are much engaged in cultivation, and the women spinning."

Manufactures.—Within the last two years reports have been established for boys and girls, in which are taught the four Gospels, the Psalms, and other books. A greater portion of the most expensive dams on the falls thereof, and all were drowned but one child —two men in attempting to save children at Charleston, No. 4, were upset and one of them drowned—the loss of logs was great.

On the Androscoggin the destruction appears to be still greater. The following account is from the Brunswick paper.

"All the booms above the falls broke containing logs, it is said, sufficient to supply twenty three saws for two years, the greatest number ever on hand at this time. The boom at Brunswick Landing, or bulk head, that secured water to saw mills and chap-board mills, received a great additional weight of logs. About sixty feet of the Androscoggin bridge and two mills for manufacturing clapboards, owned by Messrs. Pennell and Bank. A greater portion of the mill property was taken to church morning and evening.

From the National Gazette.

In Great Britain, there is no sensibility to any other subject than the case of the Queen. Her enemies declare that they are guilty, without doubt, of exaggeration in their accounts of the character and number of the adherents of the King. Her friends declare that they are indefatigable in getting them up; that they are receiving every day. Specimens of the officers and seamen of the British navy, and of the Army, are also brought forward by a procession of five thousand tars, who are considered of serious import, if the object was to intimidate or excite terror. Every one of these tars, however, is said to be composed of mere mercenary boys, of course they may be a partial saying. It is a fact, however, that the boys will work for one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.

Messrs. R. M'Queen & Co. of this city, have completed, for government, and are now delivering from their ship yard, three new revenue cutters, of 200 tons burden each. Two gentlemen of the name of Merry meeting boy, of course there may be a partial saying. It is a fact, however, that the boys will work for one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars.

BARON BERGAMI.

We copy from a Paris paper the following curious particulars of the conduct of the wretched Bergami, previous to his being called to the bar of the House of Peers:—

"Bergami enters into no details touching the affair, but confines himself to mere denial, after which he declares that he has nothing more to say. He then, without being asked, goes on to state, that he has been employed in the service of the Queen for the last two years, and that he has had the honour of being admitted to her presence frequently during that period. He then proceeds

FROM EUROPE.

Brighton, Sept. 19.

As early as one o'clock this morning, his majesty, with every appearance of health and spirits, arose from the bed of the late Duke of York, crossed the Steine from the pavilion to the water's edge, where the royal yacht barged, the boat, and the royal barge, and the helm. was ready to receive them.— His majesty was also accompanied by the Right hon. Sir R. Blanchard, and by Admiral Edmond Nagle. The assemblage of spectators, on this occasion, was very numerous, and evinced the greatest enthusiasm. The royal yacht had on board a number of officers of the rank and quality present here. The acclamations were loud, fervent, & reiterated. A number of cheerful and lively scenes occurred, as the royal barge was towing from the pier. In one of the barges was a band of music, and the moment the royal barge was considered a great distance from the pier, and from the vessels, the band struck up "God save the King." The following is a list of the performances from the royal barge:—

Mus. Sec'y	Hons. Mus. Sec.
1 4	20 9 4 32
3 4	20 12 4 36

8 4	30 — — —

Allowing a minute for the leader between each performance, and supposing ten eighth notes to the bar, the performances would have been of the following nature:—

1. A grand symphony, by Haydn.
2. A grand symphony, by Beethoven.
3. A grand symphony, by Mozart.
4. A grand symphony, by Haydn.
5. A grand symphony, by Beethoven.

The French Journals mention that it was a splendid sight to see the vessels which had been found in the heart of a block of stone which was lately dug out of aqueduct in the city of Metz. It appeared that the stone was burst in two, by the action of the quarry where the stone was torn from, by upwards of 2,000 years. The vessels, it is said, are to be preserved.

The Spanish Journals mention that in consequence of the late revolutions in Spain, and the consequent emigration, it was on this subject, so as the number of persons who have left Spain since the commencement of the year 1820, amounts to 14,000 souls, which is more than 2½ times the number of the population of the city of Bilbao. He has not had a single day's rest or pleasure since the year 1792.

The Spanish Journals mention that the natural riches of eastern Louisiana, are beyond description.

The Russians have never seen a book, for the Bible is locked up and never allowed to be read. Hence the ignorance of females is nearly double even to that of males, and have no education at all. In the empire of Russia, the number of females is twelve millions more than that of males.

Party feelings have never reached the Turkish dominions, and the Turks have no idea what is meant by the name of Whig or Tory. Lady Hester Stanhope, who has resided in Turkey for many years, and they are entirely excluded from all other same with the other sex. A woman is not allowed to be seen by any man but her husband, father, brother, or son; and if by chance she is met in the street by a stranger, nor to speak to him, or perhaps even to look at him, nor look out at the window.

In such a state of ignorance what can be expected, but that the female character should be debased. Hence, among the Turkish nobility, the murder of female relations, for the slightest suspicion of evil actions, Mothers among the Turks, in order to put them to a tenth month pregnancy, and the first child they bear, they throw from the top of the house, and receive it in their arms. Many females drown themselves. One lady threw herself out of a window, while sitting at her window at Aleppo, from whence she was taken, in the influence of superstition, by the Dervishes at the junction of the Euphrates and Ganges. And that they ought to have done as was lodging at every inn I entered. The young lady had got into this nest of mischief, and unquiet cells given me every good orders. The Mufti Mahomet Effendi was sent over the principal items in the bill, which caused considerable merriment.—

PROSPECTUS

YORK ESTATE DIRECTORY,

AND LAND PRICE CURRENT OFFICE.

The object and use of this Office are so fully set out in Mr. Angell's Circular, which have been forwarded to Europe, and to the British Government to individuals of every class, for facilitating both the Settlement and Duties of all future Sales.

By a general collection of landed land, as likewise of emigrant forms to be sold or exchanged, a Registration of Estate will constitute a Guide to those in want of emigrant, and to Capitalists desirous of settling in this healthy country; whilst the principle of intended arrangements in office (acting upon an absentee system) connected with a corresponding agency in Europe, will promote the introduction of ample means, in support of the landed interest of Upper Canada.

The most important branch of this institution, must therefore necessarily arise out of the collection of local proofs and their operative effect upon Foreign capital, through which the true progress of the state of Agriculture in the Province will be further made known by the public press in a Desideratum: for the attainment of so desirable an object, it is proposed to receive statistical accounts from resident holders of estate, with a further view to the protection of labor, of whatever improvements have been made since original surveys and grants of land in each township; whether of public works, bridges, canals, markets, or improved farms, together with the increase of population since settlement, &c. where practicable also to be many be jointly computed to form a Price Current for public use.

But as the transmission of such local returns from every township to York, after the year of Government is full, will be attended with a certain expence of conveyance to this office, and with other contingent charges necessarily attending the management of them, for the present, no copy will be received until all the conveyance fees from persons, to the dollars are remitted with the same, for every works contained in the said Reports.

It is my therefore be expected to point out as more practical form, with the most simple mode of collecting and forwarding such statistical reports from every township, that is readily accomplished by local information, obtained at my personal general meeting held by the inhabitants; when it can also be ascertained what each district is short of the expence attending to the report will be, are willing to the benefit agreed upon to be remitted; which in few instances can exceed 1s 3d or 1s 6d Cur's.*

Reports of large tracts of land, from private individuals will never be published upon the same terms.

Each of Land Proprietors will shortly be (by contract) with abstracts for the leasing of timber, by communicating their progress to the proper Land Offices, whether in land or money, and one dollar, free of postage for the Remitty of the same, will be duly recorded in the book of this Office, or the inspection of laborers.

As now who take land in lieu of money, can register their names and shares of shade at 12 dollar. Those who take half land and half cash, one dollar; and others who take only cash, one dollar and a half.

Printed circular letters of information for every case, will be forwarded to all chargeable such postages, as occasion may require.

All original reports will be regularly filed and published yearly in a quarto volume.

Public sales of estates will be held at York, monthly.

From the Pennsylvania Journal, Nov. 15

A dangerous state of Air.—The attention of our citizens was attracted on Thursday last, by the passing of six waggons through our principal street, loaded with bread, all short of that name, it was later in this county. It was from the back of house south. Esq who had sold them in their hunting excursions and west parties. The fur traders and coureurs des bois also over-run the whole country. The observations of the foregoing description of persons have long since. Indeed they were not probably directed to the soil or the nature of its productions. There remain only some very faint traditionary accounts of the whole interior of Lower Canada between the Saguenay and the Ottawa. The country along the lower part of the Saguenay is mountainous. All the rivers from Cape Tourment to Three Rivers take their rise in the mountainous tract on the south west bank of the Saguenay. The direct distance to the Saguenay north of Quebec, is not so great as from Quebec to its embouchure. Ships of the line may and eighty tons on the Saguenay, and small vessels 100 miles up. Above the first Falls, and, to the assurance of Rivers, there is a lake, represented by some persons to be nearly as large as Lake Ontario, with many large rivers entering it from the east, north and west flowing through a level and well wooded country, and exhausts offering very little from that of Quebec, from which it is situated little more than one degree north. From the Saguenay there was formerly a good Indian path to Quebec. Traders frequently went up the Saint Maurice, & came down the Saguenay, or vice versa, and the Indians of the North west, to time of war, have been known to come from the Great Lakes down the Saguenay with their Peltries. There are also to it from sources at the Ottawa, from which numbers of large rivers descend into the river. The most distant waters of the St Maurice come from the highlands of the Ottawa, on the West, and the highlands of the Saguenay on the East. The Indians in time of war, used to communicate with these Rivers and together from the Ottawa, by the Mosquenge and St. Maurice. Between the two ridges of highlands above mentioned, there is a vast tract of level and well timbered country. In truth, Lower Canada both on the north and south shores of the river Saint Lawrence is still an immense forest, offering to an eye which could embrace the whole, an almost impenetrable edging of settlements, along the St. Lawrence, and stretching up the banks as some of its tributary streams; the Island of Montreal, and the surrounding settlements excepted, which form a compact body of cleared country. The opposite ice of this vast forest for supply- ing London (if requisition, has only to be ascertained; for at the commencement of the trade, only about 40 years ago, the Americans on Lake Champlain and the settlers in Upper Canada, originally from the United States, being in the possession of supplying the Quebec market, and having the facility of rolling along the St. Lawrence to the places of shipment, they continued for several years to furnish nearly all the supplies. Within the last four or five years, the last bar of Lower Canada has been looked after, and found to be abundant, and brought to market with equal facility; being of a more northerly and consequently slower growth, it may produce by much richer soil.

If the Saguenay and the lower parts of the St Lawrence were to furnish lumber, in the temporary occupation of parts of the St. Lawrence above Quebec, in the event of war with the United States, could intercept the supplies for that fortress, command the land below it, and the British Navy the River, to the Richelieu Rapids.

From the Quebec Gazette.

Account of a Cottager's Cultivation in Shropshire. By the late Sir William Pulteney, Bart.

Within two miles and a half of Shrewsbury, a cottager, whose name is Richard Maitland, has a house, and adjacent to it a garden and land, making about one acre and one-sixteenth of an acre, including the garden. It was formerly let to him for Fifty Guineas, since divided and enclosed. He is a collier, and the management of the ground, as in a great measure, left to his wife Jane; they have six children alive, five boys and one girl, and have buried five. The soil of this ground, when purchased by the present dog age, was a thin covering of a foot three or four inches of strong loam over clay impregnated with iron, called in Shropshire cole-brash, and considered as the worst soil. It is now changed, but the original soil is still to be seen in the adjoining parts of what was the cottage. They pay three shillings of yearly rent for the house and land; it was built and to them thirty-eight years ago, by the present Lady Mostyn, for three lives, one of which is dead.

The wife has managed the ground in particular manner for fifteen years with potatoes and wheat, chiefly her own labour; and to a way which has yielded good crops, and of late fully equal or better than superior, to the produce of the neighbouring farms, and with little or no expence; but she has improved her method of culture during the last six years.

The potatoes and wheat land, exclusive of the garden, contains sixty-five square poles of land, eight yards square to the pole, seventy-five of which make to acre, and is divided in two parts; one is thirty, the other thirty-five rods. One of the divisions she plants alternately with potatoes, and the other in corn with wheat. On the wheat stubble she plants potatoes in rows, sometimes wheat on the potatoe ground; she puts dung in the bottom of the rows where she plants the potatoes, but uses no dung for the wheat; and she has repeated this succession for nearly thirteen years, but with better success and more economy during the last six or seven years.

She provides manure, by keeping a pig, and by collecting all the manure she can from her house, and by mixing with it the sweepings of the roads, &c. She lays in as in a heaped manure, before she puts it on her ground for potatoes.

The ground is dug for potatoes in the month of March and April, to the depth of about nine inches. This digging would cost sixpence per pole, if hired. After putting in the dung, the potatoes are planted in rows, about twelve or fourteen inches distant. The rows are about four or five inches apart in the rows.

The dung is carried out in a wheelbarrow, and it takes a great many days to plant five whole pieces in this way.

Her husband always assists in digging after his hours of ordinary labour. When the potatoes come above ground, the weeds are destroyed by the hoe, and the earth laid up on both sides to the shoots, and this is repeated from time to time, as the shoots require it. Hand-weeding is also used when necessary.

In the month of October when the potatoes are ripe, she takes off all the stalks or haulm of the potatoe which she secures to produce manure by means of her pig. She now goes over the whole with a rake, and takes off all weeds, and before taking up the potatoes, she sows her wheat on one-sixth of the ground as she can clear of potatoes that day. They are taken up with a three pronged fork, in which her husband assists, and by the same operation the wheat seed is covered deep. She leaves it quite rough, and the winter frost mellows the earth, and by the early spring time she finds the roots strength and vigour to the wheat plants in the spring. Her crops of wheat have been of late always good, and even this year, which in this country has not been favourable for the wheat crop, she has threshed out fifteen Winchester bushels from her thirty four poles, that part of her wheat I so suffered by the mildew. The average of wheat in moderate years to her own knowledge, is twenty-eight Winchester bushels per acre, which is more than the general average of the country, being near the home crop. The straw of her wheat she carefully preserved for litter to her pig, and to increase her manure.

When her potatoes are gathered, she separates the best for use, with a proper quantity for next year's seed, and the small sort are given to her pig. She has sixteen poles for her garden, upon which she plants pease, beans, and a part with cabbages; but has early potatoes and turnips for the same year on the same ground. She sells her early potatoes and peas and cabbages at Shrewsbury, and boils the turnips for her own use. The only other expense of feeding her pig, is two or three bushels of peas, and when fit to kill, it weighs about 200lb. She buys it at the age of four or five months, about the month of February, and it is killed about the month of January of the following year.

When she first began this method of alternate crops, and for several years after, she depended on the neighbouring farmers for ploughing the land and harrowing, both for the potatoes and the wheat; but as the farmers naturally delayed to work for her, till their own work was chiefly over, her land was not ploughed in proper time or season. She has been now for the last six years, independent of the farmer; and the planting the potatoes, and the mode of taking them up, is sufficient to prepare the land for wheat, which she generally sow herself about the middle of October, being convinced to sow sooner land as it runs, than she can clear of potatoes that day.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 3.

Monthly Report for September.—The general run of enquiries of the Mr. Wheats has hitherto afforded as few as have appeared, last year and the year before and of late fit for seed, are eagerly bought up. The crops from 15th January round most favorable, and Barley and Oats were later than any known, but the quality is not equal to those of last year. Beans and Peas are below an ordinary crop. Potatoes will be nearly the former much injured by the night frosts while going off their blossom. Rye has proved a general good crop. Seed of trees, both winter and spring, were found sweetly in production, and Clover seed not much better. The Turnip crop was much improved by the late rains, and Colewood intended to stand for seed is a good deal plant. The Hop plantations in Kent, Sussex, and Surrey, have fallen off so much just on eve of picking, that not a third of an average crop is expected, and that of very inferior quality. The Grass Lands are recovering from the effects of the late drought, and are in many out plenty of feed, keeping the live stock in moderate prices. Potatoes turn up very wisely in abundance. The Cattle and Sheep have had large sales, but the Drovers at the first holding up the prices, little or no business was done till they succeeded to a reduction of 15 per cwd. Goats and even the best horse cattle, continue not in request. Smithfield has been abundantly supplied with Hides. Veal and Pork are scarce, of which except prime Beef, were somewhat lower than the run of best meats. Mutton and Lamb, the supply of the best sorts of a small advance, particularly in the cross kinds for the shew meat occasions.

LONDON, Oct. 6.

There were no articles of importance in the city this morning. The funds have risen, they left off yesterday at 66 7-8; and this morning, at 67 1-8, which they were 67 3-8 for money. The speech of Lord Liverpool on the foreign affairs is said to have been very able. The Paris papers of the 3d, arrived this morning. They do not add any material particulars to the account of the proposed marriage of the Prince of Portugal but they confirm the account which we have hitherto given of the triumph of the Liberal party, and the formation of a new Government in Lisbon.

These papers contain also intelligence from Naples to the 15th ultimo. The head of the army is now occupied in settling the country, and a determination to remain at the Austrian invaders, or whose knowledge attempts there is no doubt.

Improvements in National Education.

For the information of our readers, perhaps, may be aware of the extent to which the system of national education, or mutual instruction, as it is expressively called, is now spreading, and progressing in Ireland. In consequence of the close attention paid to the system by some of the ablest men in that country, it has undergone a variety of important changes and been advanced to a degree of perfection in its mechanical arrangements & its general principles, to existing most gratifying. It has been successfully made to compass objects which, in no country, have not yet been considered as within its range; namely—instruction in certain branches of scientific geometry, and the progress of extraordinary lessons, and learning, more interesting means and legal accustomed to those industrial and mechanical occupations, which are now in too common use. A board of the King stands in Dublin, under the name of the Kildare Place Society, which has for its object the establishment of Sunday schools, and the distribution of religious instruction. To extend the blessings of this system still further, schools have been established in several regiments, but not exclusively for the young, but for the instruction of adults. The continued operations of these schools, and the encouraging fact to eradicate those disloyal and pernicious sentiments, to which our French revolution has given birth. It is found in the system be perfected, in time, our Gaelic rivals will become stronger than ever not in bodily strength but in moral influence, which is the surest means of rendering them less formidable.

Earl Guilford, (the third minister) was then called. He described her majesty was at Naples when I arrived there, in the beginning of March, 1815. I found in her suite Lady Elizabeth Forbes, Mr. Keppel Craven. Sir W. Gell, and Dr Holland, her physician. I recollect seeing Bergami there. When I first saw him he was courier. I remained at Naples only three or four days. La y C. Lindsay was with me at the time, and we travelled together from there to Rome. Her ladyship did not accompany me when I left Naples. I next saw the Queen at Rome. There was an interval of a few days between seeing her majesty at Naples and at Rome. Her majesty did not remain at Rome more than a week or ten days. I saw her majesty once at Naples.

There was a considerable party. I cannot positively recollect whether Bergami was then one of the suite of the court of Naples present. Lady C. Lindsay dined there the day before she sailed from Naples. I recollect her majesty, my lord and her majesty's table. There were other persons invited to dine with her majesty on that day. Mrs. Cassidy and her two daughters were there. She was the wife of a paymaster in a very respectable situation. I was not at the ball given by the queen on the first night in the country. One of the eldest daughters of Mrs. Cassidy was married to the queen's chamberlain. Her majesty subscribed in the Grande at Citta Vecchia, and I accompanied her. I recollect seeing a portion of her suite when at Citta Vecchia. Mr. Hownam, Mr. Cassidy, and Capt. Bunbo has taken a ship of war, fallen with the arms, belonging to the Pacha of Scutari. The value of this prize is estimated at 140,000, owners, Sicilian money.

bers will have to express their sentiments on a question of such vital importance to the union. Mr. H. begged pardon for the use of the term, but he must confess it was the reason of the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. D.) that induced him to vote in favor of the present bill, and asking for something, I took for granted that it was now to be given; something or that had not treaties been entered into with the Indians, and which could be complied with, it was to be abandoned. We were told too to be frightened into silence on this question. The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Stark) says, parties and dangers, and civil commotion, and civil war growing out of the adoption of the present constitution. I think it more natural he should have these threats? who had offered to draw her royal highness from the sword? The southern states, who were now ready to be separated from the union, if such were not acceded to the demands of the southern states, he believed that I could have done so. Did not the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Stark) himself declare? He remembered that New York was a great relief to your mind when you ought to neglect here—if not from her had quitted her royal highness's service? Did not physicians prescribe, our ancestors had to cure some slight as the decision of possible that you might have said so? I such a question. He deprecated hostility, and so say I have no recollection of such and civil commotion. Does gentlemen an expression. mean to say that his constituents are disposed to make so much noise and bluster- Dismissed with nothing ing and blustering ought not to deter us but a desire to save some money, for from expressing our opinion as we think particular person or purpose, would proper and duty calls for. Mr. H. alluded be mad and ridiculous. Mr. H. solemnly to the horrors of slavery, and asked if you had remained in the service of the any honorable member of this house would princess? I don't recollect; but it is countenance any attempt to dissolve the not probable you would have left her if you union, if they were not ready to kiss it might—it not be possible you also used off the chains and dry up the tears of the all the chains and dry up the tears of the slave—while I consider it my duty to take slave—while I consider it my duty to take the consideration of these resolutions to serve anyone for a particular person would not be postponed—or in other induced me to have staid longer in the words, that they would not receive the service that I otherwise should; but I support of the house every resolved, left the service entirely because I could on this course, he hoped gentlemen not bear it. Having recalled this circumwould be called on to record their votes stance to his recollection, I must say, that Mr. H. concluded by moving the previous question.

Mr. Sweetser thought we had better first bring on a bill for the abolition of slavery, in the district of Columbia, and then be introduced for this purpose; let us pass that, and consider these resolutions afterwards.

FROM EUROPE.

THE QUEEN'S TRIAL.

HOUSE OF LORDS, 15th July.

Evidence for Her Majesty.

Cross examination of Lady C. Lindsay.

Your situation did not necessarily lead you into the princess's bed room?—Very frequently at all: I always slept in the same room.—But always alone; sometimes there were persons with her?—Sometimes Mrs. Lindsay. Bergami in her bed room?—I have seen him myself there; because we dined in the bed-room, and Bergami used to assist at dinner, as the Princess, William Austin, and myself. Other servants used to come and bring dishes. There was a table, I think, large enough for three persons?—Yes; it happened sometimes that Bergami waited on whenever her Royal Highness had not company to dine; except on one occasion, when I had leave of absence to go to Pompeii. Did Bergami always wait on those occasions?—I think he did, but cannot positively swear. When did you quit the service of the Princess?—In 1817. Had any application been made to you from her royal highness subsequently to your journey, before you took the resolution of quitting?—Yes; there had. How long, before?—I cannot accurately remember. Was any proposition made by her Royal Highness to appoint Colonel Lushington to the situation of her chamberlain?

Mr. Brougham objected to the question on the ground so often stated on the part of the queen, that no question should be made in writing, it could not be examined upon by parole. The Lord Chancellor was understood to be of the same proper one and it was accordingly repeated by the Solicitor-General. Mr. Brougham again objected, and the Lord Chancellor suggested that, as the hour of clock had arrived, would be fit to argue the point to-morrow. Mr. Brougham was willing to submit to any ruling, rather than that delay should take place. The Lord Chancellor added, that it was the wish of the house to do justice, and also not to have illegal questions put. He, therefore, recommended an adjournment and it took place accordingly.

Twenty-fifth day.

Lady Charlotte Lindsay was called in, and her cross examination resumed by the Solicitor-General.—I recollect a negotiation with respect to the payment of my salary. I was not there when a deed of arrear due. Did any other circumstance occur in the year 1817 to make your continuance in that situation disagreeable to your Ladyship? Yes, my attendance on her royal highness if required, would have been particularly disagreeable, as I labored under a great degree of pain of sprain at that time. [Here the witness seemed much affected.] I had at that time but two near relations, before, as courier; but I have not so the late Lord Guilford and the late Lady Glenbervie. I beg to ask if you observed any impropriety on the part of the Queen, to induce you to quit her service? I myself never observed any impropriety in the conduct of her majesty the Queen that would induce me to quit her service.

Examined by Lord Donoughmore.—The experience that I had of the conduct and deportment of her Majesty occupied over a period of 24 days only in Italy. During that period I saw no impropriety on the part of the Queen with Bergami. The Neapolitan soldiers that were at Naples, Sir W. Gell was with her he resigned before we left Naples, on board for the Countess of Jersey. He went to travel to the north. The Hon. Keppel Craven was there, but he also resigned before we left Naples. Captain Hesse was also there, but I do not know whether or not he was then in her service. He did not embark with her Royal Highness. When they quitted the service of her Majesty, Bergami. I think, was at that time in her service. I am not certain, but I think I re-collect a person of the name of Louis Bergami at Naples. I never heard of the mother of Bergami till lately. I know nothing of the child Victorine being taken under the protection of her royal highness at Naples; so much child was under the protection while I was there. In answer to a question put from me, as to the reason of your quitting the service of the Princess, you stated, I have said, that you had seen nothing reproper to her conduct?—No; nothing, but from other impropriety.—[Here there was a laugh in the house.]—I mean from the circumstances I have stated.

Examined by Lord Lauderdale.—I don't recollect the names of any of the other attendants of the Princess besides Bergami. Bergami was a regular figure at dinner. He was not a regular figure in point; he was placed out in the antechamber; from this and his figure I should conclude that he was not in the habit of attending at dinner. I never saw any thing in the conduct of her royal Highness to reflect disgrace upon her country.—I was not.

The Hon. Keppel Craven (the seventh witness) was then called, and examined by Mr. Denman.—In 1814 I was in the service of her royal highness the Princess of Wales, as one of her chamberlains. I was not the only one from this country who had been in her service, but joined her after I was there. I was appointed her from thence to Milan, and afterwards to Naples—from Milan to Naples I accompanied her royal highness. I was in the habit of dining there at my own expense. I was not there every day, but frequently. I was not there every day, but frequently. I was not there every day, but frequently

YORK ESTATE DIRECTORY,
AND LAND PRICE CURRENT OFFICE.

The object and use of this Office will be found in aid of lands which have been, and hereafter may be, granted by the Provincial Government to individuals of every class, for facilitating both the Settlement Duties and all other Sales.

By a general collection of located lands, as likewise of improved farms to be sold or exchanged, a Registration of Estate will constitute a Guide to those in search of employment, and to Capitalists desirous of settling in this healthy climate; whilst the principle of intimate arrangements in this Office (upon an extensive scale) connected with a corresponding agency in Europe, will promote the introduction of Emigrants, to the support of the intended interest of Upper Canada.

The most important branch of this institution, must therefore necessarily arise out of the collection of local particulars of the operative effect upon Foreign Capital, through which the rise and progress of the Value of Cultivation in this Province will hereafter be made known to the public journals as a Desideratum; for the attainment of which object, it is proposed to receive statistical accounts from resident holders of estate, such a further view to the production of every article which may hereafter have been made since original surveys and grants of land in each township; likewise of the Value of Cattle, Horses, Mules, or imported farm stock, together with the increase of population and of cattle, also wherever the relative value of land has been greatly augmented to form a Price Current for public use.

But as the transmission of such local returns, from the remote parts of the country, where the seat of Government is held, will be attended with certain expense of postage, it is hereby made known, that the constant or at times necessary intelligence of them, for the press; or reports will be received sub as the conveyance of letters, at such rates as dollars are remitted at the same, for every twenty words contained in the said letters.

It may therefore be important to point out how no person is injured from, while the sum or sums made of collecting and transmitting the same, is easily accomplished by the following method of remitting, obtained at my private Office in this Town, viz. Persons in the Bahamas; when it can also be ascertained, what each individual's share of the Postage will be, will the PARLIAMENT HOUSE.

Pro Rerum Augmento, et pro patrii lucro,

OF THE

ALSO, CONTAINING A LARGE PART OF PENSILVANIA AND NEW-JERSEY, WITH A PART OF CONNECTICUT, MASSACHUSETTS, VICTORIA AND UPPER CANADA.

On a Scale of seven Miles to an Inch.

THE size of this Map will be about four feet by five feet, it extends from the Latitude 39 degrees North, to the North Latitude, south to the city of Philadelphia; and from Boston, Massachusetts on the west, to New-Haven in Connecticut on the east; and its index nearly the whole of the settled part of Upper Canada.

The publisher having been employed for upwards of twenty six years to explore the Rivers and Lakes, and to survey Land for the United States, Upper and Lower Canada, and also in compiling and publishing Maps, which have met with very liberal patronage and encouragement, is flattered with the belief, that a perseverance in the same pursuits, and they will endeavour to promote and extend the general knowledge and improvement of its own country, and the adjoining provinces, will entitle him to the confidence of the public, and exclusive of their patronage, as the merit of his labors may deserve.

N. B. The Author of the Map begleave to acquaint the friends of internal improvement, that in a late tour through this state, he has collected and is delineating, from the principal Land Offices, and other correct sources, all the late improvements and corrections that will render this Map still more desirable, and that no pains will be spared to make it the most useful and perfect Map of the State of New-York, and the countries in conjunction.

The Author has examined a Map of the State of New-York, including the upper part of the State of Pennsylvania, published by Mr. MORELAY, and it appears to us to be accurate, and to contain all the Counties up to the time correctly designated, and to be well worthy of public patronage.

JOSEPH ELLICOTT, } Resident Agent of the Holland Land Company.

I have examined the above Map, and think it a desirableness; its exactness, so far as Mr. Lay is connected, is to my knowledge correct and well; and I recommend it to those who wish to acquire a knowledge of the country it embraces, as equal and even superior to any extant.

A. SPENCER.

Chief Justice of the State of New York.

I have examined the above Map, and find it was modelling with other people's concerns. The question has been demanded of me, whether it is correct, as we have in the nation, who have taken opposite sides, but have not been able to find a fault in the map, on examination. He hoped, for various reasons, that the house would postpone the resolutions now before it, as we should be better able to discuss them.

Mr. E. Williams, was not about to consume much time at an late a stage of this debate.—He would not go into the subject at present, but would merely state the question, whether this house could postpone these resolutions consistently with the opinions of their constituents, and with a future day—that it was one on which every member had probably made up his mind. He would ask, then, what the members of this house should go home to reflect and consult their constituents upon? Resolutions, he was told, gentlemen had brought their opinions and feelings—their moral and religious principles along with them; and he could not suppose any attempt to enable them to vote correctly on the important subject now before the house. He was happy to see so much unanimity as to the bill's against slavery. As the gentleman from Delaware was last year almost the only opponent of this measure, and at the consideration of the subject, he hoped he would stand quite alone this year, and that those resolutions would pass, by a majority of 125 to 1. Mr. W. regretted the insinuations, that the members of congress would take alliance at no expense, and in confirmation of his own opinion, he read the letter of the Hon. Rufus King, in answer to a requisition from this house at its last session in which Mr. K. expressed a high degree of satisfaction in receiving the expression of the sentiments and wishes of the state legislature with regard to the Missouri question. If then such a man, as he would be by a majority of 125 to 1

Application (by letter, post paid,) to be made to Mr. Angell, York Land Price Current Office. 46

PROSPECTUS
YORK ESTATE DIRECTORY,
AND LAND PRICE CURRENT OFFICE.

The object and use of this Office will be found to aid settlers in which have been, and hereafter may be, granted by the British Government to individuals of every class, for facilitating both the Settlement Duties and all future Sales.

By a general collection of located land, as likewise of improved farms to be sold or exchanged, a Registration of Estate will constitute a Guide to the to want of employment, and to Capitalists desirous of settling in this healthy climate; whilst the principle of interest arrangements to other (acts of upon an attentive basis) connected with a correspondent agency in Europe will promote the introduction of ample means, to support of the landed interest of Upper Canada.

The most important branch of this institution, must therefore necessarily arise out of the collection of local reports and their operative effect upon Foreign Capital, through which the rise and progress of the state of Agriculture in this Province will hereafter be made known by the public journals as a Desideratum; for the attainment of so desirable an object, it is proposed to receive statistical accounts from resident holders of estate, (with a further view to the protection of labor,) of whatever improvements have been made since original surveys and grants of land in each township; whether of public roads, bridges, canals, markets, or improved farms, together with the increase of population of cattle &c. whereby the real value of land may be justly computed to form a Price Current for public use.

But as the transmission of such local reports from every township to York, (where the seat of Government is held) will be attended with a certain expense of postage to this office, and with other contingent charges necessary to the arrangement of them, for the press; on reports will be received unless the conveyance is free from expense, and two dollars are remitted with the same, for every words contained in the said reports.

It may therefore be important to point out some prescribed form, with the most simple mode of collecting and forwarding such statistical reports from every township, this is easily accomplished by local information, obtained at any parish or other general meeting held by the inhabitants; when it can also be ascertained, what each individual's share of the expense subscribing to the report will be, according to the length agreed upon to be transmitted; which in few instances can exceed 1s 3d or 2s 6d Curr'y.

Reports of large tracts of land (from private individuals) will be received, and faithfully published upon the same terms.

☞ Land Proprietors who wish to engage (by sound oak) with agencies for the clearing of timber, by communicating their proposals for the payment of labor (whether in land or money) and one dollar, free of postage, for the Registry of the same, will be duly recorded in the books of this Office, for the inspection of laborers.

Axe-men who take land in lieu of money, can register their names and places of abode at 1-2 dollar. Those who take half land and half cash, one dollar; and others who take only cash, one dollar and a half.

Printed circular letters of information for every class, will be forwarded to all, chargeable with postage, as occasion may require.

All original reports will be regularly filed and published yearly in a quarto volume.

Public sales of estates will be held at York, monthly.

This Office will open (near the Crown Office in York,) on the 1st day of August next.

FROM EUROPE.

Canada and the United States.

From the Quarterly Review for October last.

There are many, however, who, though friendly to emigration in general entertain certain objections to our North American colonies in particular: one of these, the supposed "barren soil and ungenial climate," we have already refuted: but there is another, which is not unfrequently acknowledged, and probably still more frequently felt, viz. a conviction that Canada must, in no distant period fall into the hands of the United States, and that consequently while we are aiding to colonize and improve it, we are in effect labouring for the advantage of a formidable rival.

Now, without professing to "look in to the womb of time" quite as far as some transatlantic politicians, we cannot forbear suggesting a doubt whether this probability here supposed is altogether well established: we suspect that the confident boasts of some American writers on this subject have produced a wider effect, not only on their own countrymen, but on ours. Let it not be forgotten how flatly and arrogantly they anticipated the conquest of Canada at the commencement of the late American war. The present state was indeed at the time under circumstances of peculiar difficulty; exposed to the length, and embarrassed by the confinement, of a most imperfect struggle in Europe. Yet the Canadians amidst all the disadvantages, amidst the imbecility and despondency of their own government, made good the defence of their country against all the efforts of the Americans. They appear indeed to come short of the Grand Effect throughout the world in devoted obedience to our government and (what to them is a necessary part of the same sentiment) in a rooted aversion to that of the United States.

But it is urged, that though the Americans were not able to subdue Canada quite so early as they expected, their power is increasing so rapidly that they must ultimately accomplish it. Now to any one who examines the map, it will be plain that the resources of Canada, in impassable territory, are practically inexhaustible, no less than those of the United States. Why then, we would ask, if a power use in a short time all its advantages, should not Canada, we do not say overtake the States, but at least preserve the same comparative strength which she has at present? If in her infancy she has strangled the smaller serpents that assailed her, why may she not, in maturer strength, successfully encounter the Hydra?

In fact, however, such are the circumstances of a defensive war, that its success or failure does not depend entirely on the relative, but partly also on the absolute strength of the parties engaged: and the greater this is, the less is the advantage of the assailant: 10,000 men can make a far better defence against 50,000 invaders, than 10 could against 50; and if the wealth & population of Canada & the U. States were as much increased as they will be, the former would be in much less danger of subjugation than at present. We have not, in this view of the subject adverted at all to the probability of a separation of the United States: which it would perhaps be rash, confidently to foretell; in which those who speculate so freely on future contingencies ought certainly to take into their account. Nor have we taken any notice of the superior advantages possessed by Canada in many points, especially its greater facilities of inland navigation, and the salubrity of its climate.

Nevertheless we are far from maintaining that Canada is ordained as being a part of the British empire to the end of time, or even for the next three or four centuries: but what we think we may safely certain or what possessions eternal? Our empire in India had been long as described as precarious; but the certainty of its downfall, and the precise limits of its duration, have not yet been made sufficiently clear by any of our political writers, to decision the removal of that immense capital whose security depends on its continuance. The events which have taken place in Europe, during the last thirty years, have so baffled all calculations, that we are hardly authorised to call any political change impossible. It is unreasonable, therefore, to depreciate our Canadian possessions on the ground of our certain tenure, unless it can be shown that they are exposed to very peculiar and imminent danger; and this we profess our inability to perceive. It is true no one thing like the degree in which some seem to apprehend it. There is no doubt, however, that projects frequently cause their own fulfilment: the patient hardly stands a fair chance for his life, if he is left to the care of a physician who is convinced that he cannot possibly recover; and if our government were unfortunately to act with respect to Canada under the conviction that it must inevitably in a few years be wrested from us, the event would probably confirm the expectation. If no means of education were provided either in England or in Canada, that those intended for the church and all others who were desirous of education, should resort for it (as it is inevitably the case at present) to the colleges of the United States, from which students return deeply imbued with prejudices against our constitution both in church and state,—if no impediment were offered to the retention of large tracts of land in the hands of those who will not improve them, but wait for their increasing in value by the labours of others,—if no measures were taken for the colonization of Upper Canada, in short, a general neglect of the interests of the colony prevailed, and abuse and mismanagement were allowed to creep into all departments of the government,—then indeed it is probable that the Canadians would not long have either the power or the inclination to maintain their connection with this country. And yet, since no one will suspect the Great Britain would resign the possession of the colony without a blow, we should still have to look forward to a contest for it with the United States no more expensive or shocking in blood and treasure than any former one.

Such, indeed, as the Canadians have shown themselves in the late contest, it would be a degradation of the British name to acknowledge any anticipated conquest of Canada at the commencement of the late American war. The present state was indeed at the time under circumstances of peculiar difficulty; exposed to the length, and embarrassed by the confinement, of a most imperfect struggle in Europe. Yet the Canadians amidst all the disadvantages, amidst the imbecility and despondency of their own government, made good the defence of their country against all the efforts of the Americans. They appear indeed to come short of the Grand Effect throughout the world in devoted obedience to our government and (what to them is a necessary part of the same sentiment) in a rooted aversion to that of the United States.

But it is urged, that though the Americans were not able to subdue Canada quite so early as they expected, their power is increasing so rapidly that they must ultimately accomplish it. Now to any one who examines the map, it will be plain that the resources of Canada, in impassable territory, are practically inexhaustible, no less than those of the United States. Why then, we would ask, if a power use in a short time all its advantages, should not Canada, we do not say overtake the States, but at least preserve the same comparative strength which she has at present? If in her infancy she has strangled the smaller serpents that assailed her, why may she not, in maturer strength, successfully encounter the Hydra?

In fact, however, such are the circumstances of a defensive war, that its success or failure does not depend entirely on the relative, but partly also on the absolute strength of the parties engaged: and the greater this is, the less is the advantage of the assailant: 10,000 men can make a far better defence against 50,000 invaders, than 10 could against 50; and if the wealth & population of Canada & the U. States were as much increased as they will be, the former would be in much less danger of subjugation than at present. We have not, in this view of the subject adverted at all to the probability of a separation of the United States: which it would perhaps be rash, confidently to foretell; in which those who speculate so freely on future contingencies ought certainly to take into their account. Nor have we taken any notice of the superior advantages possessed by Canada in many points, especially its greater facilities of inland navigation, and the salubrity of its climate.

Nevertheless we are far from maintaining that Canada is ordained as being a part of the British empire to the end of time, or even for the next three or four centuries: but what we think we may safely certain or what possessions eternal? Our empire in India had been long as described as precarious; but the certainty of its downfall, and the precise limits of its duration, have not yet been made sufficiently clear by any of our political writers, to decision the removal of that immense capital whose security depends on its continuance. The events which have taken place in Europe, during the last thirty years, have so baffled all calculations, that we are hardly authorised to call any political change impossible. It is unreasonable, therefore, to depreciate our Canadian possessions on the ground of our certain tenure, unless it can be shown that they are exposed to very peculiar and imminent danger; and this we profess our inability to perceive. It is true no one thing like the degree in which some seem to apprehend it. There is no doubt, however, that projects frequently cause their own fulfilment: the patient hardly stands a fair chance for his life, if he is left to the care of a physician who is convinced that he cannot possibly recover; and if our government were unfortunately to act with respect to Canada under the conviction that it must inevitably in a few years be wrested from us, the event would probably confirm the expectation. LONDON, Nov. 19.

It will be seen in another part of our paper, that the Queen had applied to Mr. Monteith for a royal palace for her residence, to which the following answer has been returned:—

"Lord Liverpool presents his compliments to the Queen, and has received his majesty's commands to inform the Queen, that it is not possible for his majesty, under the present circumstances, to assign any of the royal palaces for the Queen's residence. Lord Liverpool had been further commanded to inform the Queen, that, until Parliament shall meet for the dispatch of business, the allowance to her majesty has been enjoyed by the Queen will be continued to her; and that it will then be for Parliament to determine the amount of the future provision to be granted to her majesty."—In answered paper Lord Liverpool adds, "that he thinks it unnecessary to observe, that this answer must not be understood as withdrawing the facilities which had been previously offered for the giving a residence in London for the Queen."

Yesterday Mr. Brougham and Mr. Denman waited upon her majesty, to know what further steps should be taken in this subject, when it was determined that her majesty should address a letter to the Lord Liverpool, urging in still stronger terms, the demand which had been made under her assertion.

This letter was immediately conveyed to the Lord of Liverpool by the Hon. Mr. Keppel Craven; but up to a late hour last night, no answer had been received.

The effect of the late speculations for the rise in the funds, and the depression of the Stock Exchange during the last week, by the failure of several persons who had taken a prominent part in them, and their inability to meet the calls upon their differences, were declared detainers in the most manner. There are four persons who have suffered in the situations, for their differences are very considerable. It is apprehended, too, that this is not the last of the failures, and that the further disclosures of a similar nature must soon be for the transaction of the present week. The failure of one of the persons avilly attributed the ring in the funds, which took place on Tuesday last, as a speculation for the rise, and was then stated, in order to wind up the deficient accounts, and to prevent them in a defective issue, with an effect exceeding their loss; and, as we understand, on that day reached 69 3-4; but as the demand was wholly of an artificial nature, and there was no money to support it, the same stock fell on the following day to 69 3-8, and has since continued, with but little fluctuation, at that price. The transactions of yesterday closed at 69 3-8 [illegible] and at 69 7-8 for the opening of the books in January.—English Paper.

Letters of the 30th ult. were received yesterday from Naples. All fears of a revolution in that country were entirely removed by the intelligence that the troops of that power had algreen into master quarters. The Austrians will be in Naples when reached Naples for the preceding nine days, and they were therefore still in possession of the city at the time mentioned by the annulment of the treaty.—The Naples paper [illegible] Peppoli of the 24th, says, "Ambassadors from Syracuse and Trapani, declaring their submission to the Neapolitan government. That from Caltanisetta we daily expect.

From the United States.

It is time to touch on English affairs. The issue of the Queen's case was probably as unexpected for herself and her counsel, as for us and all impartial persons who gave attention to it, in detail. The House have pronounced her guilty of the adultery and subornation charged upon her. The Ministry have found it expedient or necessary to desist from the bill of pains and penalties. A majority of the whole House, and of those were men of the most opposite political attachments; leading antagonists of the Ministry, as well as their friends and dependants, &c.—Out of the ninety five members who voted against it, a good proportion declared formally, from the bar of the house, that they were actuated by the resistance of some was to the constitutionality, of others, to the policy, and a few, of others, to the Bridges, to the divorce clause of the Bill. The question was in fact, as far as the Minority are concerned, decided on political grounds, wholly unconnected with the Queen's innocence or guilt. It was a political struggle for the Ministry and radicals, not a question for her Majesty.

From the Kingston Chronicle.

A correspondent at Cornwall informs us, that a Mill is in future to be built at that place, instead of at Osnabruck, as formerly. The Commissariat Officers are to be established at Saint Regis, and Lachine. Much honour has been given against the Rail Road, which is established in this country—but whatever grounds may have existed for this opposition at a early period, none now exist, or present.—The Province is, we really think, greatly indebted to the present Deputy Inspector General, who, notwithstanding the laborious nature of his office, has always since his appointment given a ready hearing to every application for the establishment of Post Offices, wherever public convenience seemed to require them. Besides the present improvements, and the likely future establishment, we have a line of Post Offices in the interior, from Bockville to Richmond, and several others, which have been instated of once a week from this place upwards to Smith's and Queenstown, and we have been informed that one of the main lines of communication nearly finished. This, we think, could easily be, and rendered Parliamentary address to the King entreating him to [illegible] to mail mobile, we would put the question to certain of our Members of Parliament.—Would it not be well before asking the Imperial Government to give us the revenue of the Post Office Department, to have a general survey of the country, if possible, what the amount of that revenue might actually be? We earnestly and with due deference request such a course at least preliminary to any further examination, it might possibly be found that instead of appropriating a portion, our Parliament must look to other sources to provide for a deficiency. This would surely be a reasonable request.

KINGSTON COMMISSIONAT SOCIETY.

At the annual meeting of the Society held at the Court House, Kingston, 9th instant, the Committee of Visitors delivered the following Report of their proceedings.

The regular institution of the Society in this Province dates from the 1st of January 1818, and it appears on which your Committee have to offer you their congratulations, as well as your own, having for their object the relief of the same description of persons that would claim your benevolence, they afford an example of the necessity and utility of such institutions, & are entitled to the support of the public. The great expenditure to which you have hitherto been unavoidably exposed. The Societies we refer to are The Hibernian Society, and The St. Patrick Benevolent Society, from each of which there is every reason to anticipate the most beneficial result to the cause of the helpless Emigrant, but more especially from the latter, in as much as it confines itself to that kind of relief which is most wanted and little or provided for, the relief of disease and sickness; a task for which the Female is, indeed, both by disposition and habit, eminently qualified and therefore their Society claims upon the confidence and support of every gentleman who is duly qualified and has (or he otherwise) of what we owe to their soothing attentions during and by an hour of sickness and infirmity.

With regard to the general statement of your Funds, and expenditure for the last year, as published in the Gazette of the Treasurer and Visiters' Book, now before you, each may be thus summed up:

FUNDS.

Balance of last year	£5	17	7½
Sub & Don. paid into the Bank	137	7	6
Amount from the Garrison,	82	14	4
Donations from Ch. Sermons,	32	14	4
Total,	145	8	11
To which your Committee added a private subscrip.	6	10	0
	151	18	11

EXPENDED.

In paying pensioners, at half a price, S. B. Frontenac,	48	0	0
Do. Schrs. and others	15	0	0

So that there remains a deficit of £12 11s. 11d. due to Visitors (who advanced the money during their period of service) against which the Society have no funds in hand, but the arrears due on last year's subscriptions as amounting to £51 11 10.

Now if the £103 11s. expended up on the sick and destitute it is to be observed, that the word destitute does not mean those who are in want, but widows and children, relieved during the sickness or absence of their husbands, with Bread, Meat, Soup, &c. which forms the most expensive part of this item but cannot be expended upon the sick either in the hospital of the Hôtel Dieu, or in private houses, unless some provided with every necessary) or in lodging houses, at a time when the Black House was in a state of confusion, and the sick in comfort. The number of persons relieved may be inferred from the circumstance that one family of ten persons, or more families, mostly permanent patients, during his period of service; and another reports ninety persons relieved.

Your Committee beg leave to express their grateful sense of the professional attention of Dr. Geddes, and also of the Subsidiary of the Army Contractors in supplying Emigrants with offal and other medicines, and that they are also much indebted to the generous exertions of the Rev. Messrs Bethune and Charlotte for numerous gratuitous passages afforded to Emigrant families.

Finally, as sick are now elsewhere provided for, it is a subject for your consideration whether the funds of the Society should be appropriated solely to the forwarding of destitute Emigrants to the place of their destination or whether it is to be hoped will never be absolutely by those who do not wish to see the Town filled with beggars, or the Province with a race of paupers, to be maintained at the public expense, in the settlement of the waste lands, frustrated by the cruel delay and settlement of the Emigrants.

The Report having been generally received, the thanks of the Society were severally voted to the Rev. Dr. Strachan, to the Managers of the Steam Boats Frontenac and Charlotte, the Treasurer and Secretary.

After which to the following resolutions were adopted,

Th t the funds of the Society be subject to the [illegible] of destitute Emigrants, with the exception of affording them a little bread, a the discretion of the Visitors; and,

That the Secretary of the Society be authorized to refer into a communication with the Secretaries of the other Charitable Societies, in order more effectually to promote and direct appropriation.

The Officers for the present year were then proposed and unanimously elected, viz:—

John Macaulay, Esq. Treasurer.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL, JAN. 31st.

At two o'clock His Excellency the Lieut. Governor proceeded in state to the Legislative Council Chamber, and being seated on the Throne, the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod was sent to direct the attendance of the Commons House of Assembly, at the Bar of this House; who being come thereto,

The Speaker of the Legislative Council said, it was His Excellency the Lieut Governor's command that they should repair to the usual place of sitting, and there choose a fit person to be their Speaker, and that the person so chosen be presented for His Excellency's approbation on Friday next.

The House of Assembly then withdrew.

Friday, 2d Feb.

The House of Assembly being again summoned at the Bar of the Legislative Council, Levius P. Sherwood, Esquire, informed His Excellency that the House of Assembly had chosen him for their Speaker, and claimed the usual privileges.

His Excellency the Lieut. Governor was pleased to approve of the choice of the Commons House of Assembly, and then addressed him Honors of the Parliament in the following words:

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

In opening this first Session of the Parliament under the present Reign, I feel myself called upon to congratulate you on the accession of our Sovereign King to the Throne of His Ancestors and on the prosperous state in which His Majesty has through a course of eventful years successfully conducted us, notwithstanding the greatness of the British Empire.

Since the prorogation of Parliament, besides the decline of two illustrious members of the Royal Family, the Duke of Kent and Princess Charlotte, we have been deprived of the services of that highly distinguished statesman, the Right Hon. Lord Castlereagh, whose name will be long remembered with gratitude by the friends of the British Constitution, which, under Divine Providence, he so essentially assisted, and by the unrivalled eminence in freedom and in civilization, and which it is now the first political duty of the Authorities to preserve unsullied, to maintain in its full vigor. This duty, I am persuaded, you will feel, with me, demands from every branch of the Legislature, besides the proper use of its own legitimate powers, that each shou d also reverence and protect the just and constitutional exercise of those associated with it. Those functions with which you are severally entrusted, will, I am confident, be carefully directed towards the same great objects.—You will concur in promoting the interests of true Religion, and in improving all those institutions which can make the instruction commence, or happiness of the people. Nor will you overlook those which have a tendency to increase the wealth of the Country. These last objects have been unusually advanced by the recent grant from the Crown of a large but still a great augmentation of wealth and population from this source must be confided many, for the future, that will much depend on the improvement of our land and water communications, thereby render access easy to a country, which in its present state is of little avail for agricultural improvement, and on the contrary for many purposes of great inconvenience.

The increased population of the Province, now proved to be three times as great as had been supposed, and the consequent increase of the Revenue, will, I trust, enable the Legislature to provide the means of defraying the charge for Surveys, which it was necessary to procure on a scale, for the regulated settlement of the Province, and I feel confident will have enabled, had it not only become a subject of great anxiety, but a source of great difficulty to the Executive Government, to have met the expenditure which will now be required to perform the service without any demand upon the resources of the Country.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

The usual Accounts, and the Estimates for the current year, shall be laid before you at as early a period as possible; you will find it necessary to bestow upon them your early attention.

You will perceive there is a large arrear of the land of Militia Pensions.—The Acts which have created this heavy charge on the Public Revenue, appear to have originated in just and benevolence in the Parliaments that passed them, but no additional means have been provided to meet these great additional burthens, and the Pensions have unavoidably fallen in arrear.

Honorable Gentlemen, and Gentlemen.

Circumstances as beyond our control occasion a present depression in the value of our principal productions, and that which similar disadvantages, and, perhaps, is more embarrassing degree, are experienced in most countries of Europe and America, the people of this Province cannot fail to entertain this reassuring conviction, that though the present, like all other periods of general inequality, may be unfriendly to the enterprise of commerce, and the rapid acquisition of wealth, it finds them at least in the possession of a country in which the happiness of the people are, almost beyond example, light, and which in its local advantages, and in the exertion as for a promise of comfortable independence, & a certain security against absolute dependence, as any Country in the world can offer.

I cannot deny myself the pleasure of assuring as a most gratifying proof of our general advancement, the accession of numbers which has taken place in your respective bodies—and I congratulate you on the improved accommodation which this Building affords for the discharge of your important duties.

You will proceed to your deliberations, assured that towards the attainment of any of the ends which I have mentioned, or towards any others, tending to the Public good, you will not only have my zealous co-operation, but the steady support of your Sovereign.

I know that you have difficulties to encounter in the exercise of your important functions from which I am happily exempt.—But I am confident your zeal for the Public interest will surmount them, and the impression that such exist, may call forth a greater activity of your country's applause. Conducted only with this Province in the language of my public duty, I can have neither party prejudices, local attachments, or personal interests to overcome, my interest merely will lead me to fulfil the wishes and expectations of my Sovereign, which I shall best do by a faithful performance of the duties which I owe to him as possible the real welfare of this Province.

Only three of the Members of the House of Assembly were absent at the opening of the Legislature. We are sorry to learn that the illness of Mr. Burch was the cause of the absence of two of them.

Mr. Burch.—On the 13th ult. the wife of the Hon. Lieut. Colonel Wells, of a Daughter.

ALMS-HOUSE FARM AT SALEM.

[Provision and relief for the poor is a subject which at the present day so occupies the mind of statesmen, divines, philanthropists and the public at large in a greater degree perhaps than at any former period. The poor laws of Old England, and the noble institutions of charity erected by private munificence, hardly form a sufficient barrier against the torrent of pauperism which threatens to overwhelm that nation. In this country, warned by their sufferings, we try various expedients to prevent the like evil: the principle of regular employment seems the most promising, but seldom can be put upon such a footing as to be productive. In this town a new experiment is making from which much benefit is hoped: our poor are numerous, and public unoccupied land conveniently situated, invited their labour: for that purpose a new house was built and ground enclosed for cultivation, a few years since, an account of the progress and present condition of which is given in the following article, and which will show what encouragement there is to perseverance in the system.] [Salem Gaz.

From the Mass. Agricultural Repository

SALEM, 17th Dec. 1819.

E. H. DERBY, ESQ.

DEAR SIR,

The following statements respecting the farm connected with the Alms-House in Salem, are communicated to you by order of the overseers of the poor in compliance with your request. They have been collected from Mr. Upton, whose fidelity, a sky, and prudence, as the manager of the house, and experience and skill, as a practical farmer, to whom we owe any success which has attended this attempt, to cause the labour of the poor to originate, to contribute something towards the support of the establishment, which exists for their benefit.

In the year 1818, the Work House in Salem having been insufficient for the increased number of the poor, and not well adapted for carrying into effect certain improvements in the management of which it was then thought expedient to adopt, the town determined to erect a new house including the Alms-House. Upon a tract of land, called the Neck, about a quarter of a mile eastward of the compact settlement, a suitable site was prepared for the New Alms-House, and as the property of this land was in the town, the overseers of the poor were authorized to enclose a portion of it, and manage it as a farm for the benefit of the poor. This land had been cultivated by the first settlers of the town, but certainly had not been broken up for more than an hundred years, and was, like the whole tract of land in that vicinity, uneven, and rocky.

The New Alms House was completed in the autumn of 1818, and the poor removed into it in the winter of the same year, during which they were employed in clearing and levelling the land, adjacent to the house;—in building walls, opening roads, and other labor necessary to render the house and grounds without convenient for the uses of an Alms House. But no progress was made in the actual cultivation of the soil, which remained in the same state with other waste land.

Pork raised, 4381 lbs. of which 2000 lbs. sold for $40 dollars.

Potatoes 2700 bushels, of which 422 bushels were taken from 3010 bills planted in the usual manner.

All the summer vegetables used in the house.

An account of the produce of the year 1818 has been already given with sufficient accuracy in the journals of our Society, but to complete all the facts connected with the subject in this paper, you may not think it amiss that it is here repeated,

Pork killed, weight 7910 lbs.

Twelve Live Pigs sold for $42.

On hand 57 Pigs.

Corn 400 bushels.

Potatoes 2150 bushels,

Turnips 300 bushels.

Fifty tons Pumpkins.

And all the summer vegetables necessary for the house.

In the present year, 1819, about fourteen acres more of land have been broken up and cultivated, and about the same quantity has been laid down to barley and grass; so that the acres of land actually in tillage have been nearly the same this year, as they were the last.

Pork already killed 9012 lbs.

A few live Pigs sold when small.

28 Hogs to be killed this season, and will now average over 250 lbs.

73 live Pigs on hand, to be kept over, now average over 170 lbs.

Corn raised	325 bushels.
Barley	235 do.
Potatoes	3130 do.
Onions	225 do.
Turnips	190 do.
Pumpkins	40 tons.
Squashes	22 tons.

Broom Corn sufficient to make 100 dozens of Brooms.

Beets, Carrots, Cabbages, &c. sufficient for the House, and all summer vegetables in abundance.

When the farming commenced there was not a load of manure of any kind on the place. In 1818 two hundred cords of muck were made, and during the present year the quantity will be very considerably greater. The farm being situated near the sea coast, has a great advantage over such as are inland in regard to this important material of husbandry, as great quantities of sea-weed, rock-weed, and a sedge called, can be collected in immediate vicinity with little trouble.

The management of the farm has been conducted on the system of husbandry commonly adopted on the farms of Massachusetts, the tools used of no uncommon construction. The stock kept on the farm consists of three yoke of working cattle, two horses, and five cows.

In case of making farming of importance properly relating to the history, management and products of the farm, that there are some facts necessary to be stated in order to form a correct estimate of what may be expected from the establishment, which, though not unfavorable in the terms of your request, are essentially connected with any of the objects of your society. I beg your indulgence briefly to mention, that from the last eighteen months a wharf has been built near the Alms-House by the labour of the poor supported by the town, with the occasional assistance of mine, and sometimes two hired men, which during this period were employed in the erection of the house and farm. This wharf covers about an acre of ground, is of an average depth of seven feet, has about twelve feet of water at low tide at high tide, and is constructed in the best manner of solid granite and gravel stone taken from the lands in the vicinity, where they are found in great abundance, and may be made a source of considerable profit to the owners. The wharf is a very convenient for landing the wood and other heavy articles purchased for the use of the poor, and will more than pay the town the interest of the compact settlement, a suitable site was prepared for the New Alms-House, and as the property of this land was in the town, the overseers of the poor were authorized to enclose a portion of it, and manage it as a farm for the benefit of the poor. This land had been cultivated by the first settlers of the town, but certainly had not been broken up for more than an hundred years, and was, like the whole tract of land in that vicinity, uneven, and rocky.

The New Alms House was completed in the autumn of 1818, and the poor removed into it in the winter of the same year, during which they were employed in clearing and levelling the land, adjacent to the house;—in building walls, opening roads, and other labor necessary to render the house and grounds without convenient for the uses of an Alms House. But no progress was made in the actual cultivation of the soil, which remained in the same state with other waste land.

In the year 1817, about eighteen acres of land were broken up, the produce of which was as follows:

Pork raised, 4381 lbs. of which 2000 lbs. sold for $40 dollars.

Potatoes 2700 bushels, of which 422 bushels were taken from 3010 bills planted in the usual manner.

All the summer vegetables used in the house.

An account of the produce of the year 1818 has been already given with sufficient accuracy in the journals of our Society, but to complete all the facts connected with the subject in this paper, you may not think it amiss that it is here repeated,

The year about seventeen acres were broken up, making the tillage land about thirty five acres.

Pork killed, weight 7910 lbs.

Twelve Live Pigs sold for $42.

On hand 57 Pigs.

Corn 400 bushels.

Potatoes 2150 bushels,

Turnips 300 bushels.

Fifty tons Pumpkins.

And all the summer vegetables necessary for the house.

In the present year, 1819, about fourteen acres more of land have been broken up and cultivated, and about the same quantity has been laid down to barley and grass; so that the acres of land actually in tillage have been nearly the same this year, as they were the last.

The produce of this year is as follows:

Pork already killed 9012 lbs.

A few live Pigs sold when small.

28 Hogs to be killed this season, and will now average over 250 lbs.

73 live Pigs on hand, to be kept over, now average over 170 lbs.

Work houses in Massachusetts, that Alms-House and the Bridewell are unified. If our farms should be found in a great measure to remove this difficulty, by furnishing, in its various details of labor, employments suitable to all classes, ages and sexes of the poor, and transforming them more industrious, contented, healthful and happy, than they can be made in the usual employments of such houses, then certainly the labor and expense of the inquiry, could not have been better bestowed. When enlarged, as it may be, to embrace all the considerations of husbandry, the poor may be made to depend principally on their own labour in a salutary and non-rable occupation for their support. Let it once be settled, that all who are admitted into the Alms House will be required to work with constancy and diligence, and few of the idle or dissolute will incline to become its inhabitants. Thus the common stock of labour and industry will be increased, and our ambition for the support of the poor, instead of being the tedious as many political economists have supposed, a source of profit and enjoyment, will have a direct and certain tendency to suppress them.

In behalf of the overseers of the poor,

I am respectfully, your most ob't servant,

JOHN G. KING &c. of the Board.

Statistics of Ireland.

A work is at present carrying on by Mr. Shaw Mason, under the plan of Sir John Sinclair's Statistical account of Scotland, which will in all probability render more minute and accurate any information regarding the Statistics of Ireland than any work that has yet appeared. Three volumes have already appeared, and the 3d has been reviewed by Mr. Charles Dupin, a celebrated member of the National Institute of France, and the Statistical Academy of Sciences in Paris, there is the following passage, replete with much good sense, in reference to Sir John Sinclair, in completing his Statistical Account of Scotland. He has recourse to the Parish Registers, which Sir John Sinclair of men as remarkable for the extent and accuracy of their literary acquirements as for their zeal in the religious principles and morals." It must be highly gratifying to the Clergy of Scotland—to all connected with the—and indeed to all those who are partial to the cause of classical government established in Scotland, to have such an eulogium from the pen of Mr. Dupin, who could have no interest in the matter, but the conviction of his own mind, to make such a declaration.

The Bathing Boat.—Some trials of a boat on a new construction have lately been made on Paris. In the second trial, which took place on the 10th inst. the experiment was below the platform of the Pont Neuf. He set out from this point at ten minutes before ten, having on board Mr. Wyllys and several other gentlemen, and took charge of the helm. Messrs. Marlet and Thibault, inspectors of the navigation, followed in a canoe to observe all the operations. In twenty minutes at the utmost, he proceeded beyond the Pont Royal, after having passed under the arches, and landed opposite the Quai D'Orsay. There he took on board the engineers that were in the boat to the School of Natation, which was the end of the expedition.

The author of this ingenious discovery is a young engineer, named Mr. Daniel Mc. Carthy, who has lived upwards of thirty years in the United States of America, and is now employed, will admit. The boat was by the tenants of the Alms house have, from the commencement of the establishment to the present time, been supplied with the purchase of a single cart. Much of the cloth worn is manufactured there, and all the clothes are made up and made in the house. The economy of picking oakum, which is a principal employment in many Work houses, is here restricted to those who have no other employment to their rooms by age and infirmity, or are otherwise actually incapable of hard labour.

How far the farm connected with our Alms house can be depended upon to diminish the charges of the city, or of the poor, cannot at present be determined with sufficient accuracy. The expenses attending the commencement of such an establishment, the purchase of land in so wild a state, the cost of tools, extra labour, and many others, which will readily occur to every farmer, are so considerable that the net profits of the farming of the past and present years would by no means be taken as a fair estimate of the value of the establishment in a pecuniary view. The products of succeeding years will doubtless be more valuable and abundant, and the advantages for the support of the poor more reasonably be expected from this source.

It is well known that a principle embarrassment in the management of the poor, arises from the difficulty of providing suitable employments for them; and this is especially true of those establishments, in which, as in most of the and since climbed up by a ladder into a small apartment that had once been the window. He did not sleep in it, but in a gutter's cradle filled with hay, in which he crept about 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning, and came out again about noon on the following day. His money used to be laid about on his bed-room floor, and on his table, and, from the grease it had contracted by its treatment indignant in his breeches pockets, the Bank notes were as limp as if they had savoured by rain. His own stomach was most strange and unsuiting; vinegar and water his beverage; cinder heads with their wattles and combs, baked on a pudding of bran and treacle, formed his most dainty dish, occasionally he treated himself with rabbit's feet; he liked tea and coffee, but these were indulgences too great for every day. His rent and wages at all hours not occupied with the care of the aforesaid numerous animals, and with what he called the sports of the field. His integrity was spotless; his word at all times being equal to other man's bonds. His religion was what is common; understood by the "religious" as none at all, because he attended no place of worship; or would be without great effort and much rebuke came, and that only once a year, at Christmas. But when he did, it was always in support of the candidate most favourable to the interests and rights of the people. "Never vote for the ministerial members," he used to say, "the King and the great men will always take care of themselves." He used to every about with him a large sponge, and on long walks or rides he would soak and then suck, dipping the sponge in water and suck the top of his hand with it, saying it refreshed him far more than food or wine. He admitted no visitors, whether of his own house; but some times went himself to see any person of whose genius or eccentricity he had conceived a favourable opinion; and he liked on those visits to be treated with a cup of tea or coffee, books, and pens and ink; he then sat down in the fire, rested his elbow on his knee, and, almost in a double posture, would read till somewhat more at ease, when he would peculiarly striking to him. His favourite subjects were the pedigree of Blood horses, the origin of Greyhounds, Chemistry, and Natural History.

Professor Meynecke, of Hoile, has invented a method of producing a brilliant illumination, by means of electrical light with the help of artificial or inclosed carbon pipes of glass. Ashelectrical sparks may be got at will of inflammable, a gentle-billity exists, that by means of electrical machines, and such an apparatus as M. Meynecke has invented, a whole city may be thus illuminated, and with very little cost.

M. Michel, mechanist residing at Offenbach, has contrived a machine, simple in its construction, and set boldly, by which a river may be passed on foot across the sea tossed, without danger of drowning. It is nearly five feet in diameter, when fully drawn out. An excavation of one foot three inches in depth, is the place of reception for the voyager. The machine may easily be transported from one place to another, as it does not weigh above five pounds. The inventor has tried it on the Rhine, with perfect success. He can thus, to amuse moments of pleasure, and without any great efforts, and that in all directions.

M. Lasteyrie, a skilful printer, has introduced into Ghent, from some foreign country, a potatoe of a species not known on the Continent. Having planted it, the crop produced 15 pounds of potatoes, every stalk yielding fifteen or sixteen. The form is oblong, colour red, and quality excellent.

M. Dessoul, Captain of a French frigate, has invented a simple mode of supplying the loss of a rudder at sea. An experiment has been made at Brest, on board the frigate the Cleopatra, and, according to the report of M. Ballet, Engineer, the apparatus was completed in thirty minutes, when no different operation in the exercise of the ship's movement, when the monster again waked to the water, and left the ship to its course, it is likewise easy to set up, and fix on board.

Opinion of Tythes in Spain.

The following is an extract from the report of the proceeding of the Spanish Cortes, on the 10th October.

"Moreno Guerra, as a member of the united committees for the extinction of tythes, said—Among the numberless representations which had been submitted to the committee, as well against as in favour of tythes, there was not one, in which the writer had the boldness to assert in firm, that tythes were of divine right. It had been fully shown to the Cortes, by one of his colleagues, Senor Gisbert, that the authority of the church was but solely spiritual, and as to exterior discipline, depended absolutely upon the civil power—the doctrine which was the true one, and now the prevalent one throughout Europe. Among various pleas for the support of the clergy, examined in the committee, the simplest and best was that of the choice in each parish, of twelve elderly and respectable men, who in concert with the curate, should assess by equitable principles, upon the parishioners, what was required for all ecclesiastical purposes. That, the decency of every great family, she could not then screen the body of the girl, but she gave an immediate shove, and ladders were presented to descend by, for the purpose of exposing the vault, which, however, was for some time impossible owing to the many fearful effluvia that issued from the place. This having in some degree abated a person ventured down the opening, and found the body lying at the bottom, a distance of 30 or 40 feet, quite dead apparently from suffocation. The account this person gave of the place, the coffins it contained, &c. &c. &c. (for which it had probably been used); but what is very singular, the existence of this dangerous and terrible hole was altogether unknown to the present family, and a more than ordinary number of persons had assembled and exposed that spot during the morning. The rulers under the pretence were found most decayed; but they have since been replaced by new ones, and the vault filled up with earth. A Coroner's Inquest was subsequently held on the body, and the jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

We have great satisfaction in learning that no candidate is opposed to Sir Thomas Grant Dare, in the election of the borough of Southampton. The substitution of an active and enlightened man for the late president, and the change of politics which it is likely to direct the people to, will, we hope, lead to its renovated utility and accustomed distinction. Unfortunately, the number of electors who have all such associations are not sufficiently or wisely guarded against the imperfections of human nature, in the exercise of their franchise, for the completion of this news in a period which may generally be unfavourable, all determined.

Duke of Wellington's Plate.—Yesterday the duke and his son-in-law Wellington gave a grand entertainment at Apsley house, when was given exhibition the brilliant service of plate presented to him as a token of gratitude by the king of Portugal, for his meritorious services in the Peninsula.—His right of it was exhibited in the drawing room, and numerous visitors had not before seen it were highly gratified.

The following is a short description of the plate: The centre piece represents the monument of the victorious actions of the duke, and the glorious results of his conquests in the Peninsula, and the consequent restoration of the legitimate sovereign of Portugal to the throne of his ancestors. The whole is supported by eight sphynxes, denoting the number of years which the victorious duke spent in the Peninsula.

The next piece is the river of Portugal, a griffin, with the thunder of Jupiter under his claws, which is the symbol of the power of the Portuguese nation. What next presents itself is a grand car of victory, which is drawn by four horses, and is conducted by the genius of Fame, with the thunderbolt of Jupiter, flying to place to adorn the grand trophy. Next is a group of Fame, Hercules, and Mercury, bearing in their hands the emblems of victory, from their being composed of palm branches. Next comes a grand column, on which are inscribed some of the victories of Salamanca, Vittoria, Toulouse, and Waterloo. YORK, February 8, 1821.

The arrangement of the different parts of the Parliament House is very generally approved, but we can see great room for improvement. It is of course to the House or Assembly, the precise situation of the Speaker, and the seats which they may ever be possessed, and the Gallery for strangers, where no less than 500 persons have been accommodated in the pit, the great body of the audience, the situation of the lobby, the heated and intense air which is there collected, and which will be hardly endurable when the House is full.

We have commenced this week, and shall endeavour to continue it for the future, to publish an outline of the Debates, as it is in our power to do so. We trust that the readers of our entries will be viewed with indulgence, as it is impossible to be very accurate or correct without assistance of any of the reporters.

The House of Assembly went up yesterday with the Address in reply to His Excellency's Speech, but we were unable to get a copy of it for this day's Gazette.

The Kingston Chronicle mentions that a great number of counterfeit Five Dollar Bills of the Montreal Bank, are in circulation, which are described to be different in colour from the true bills, a difference may be remarked in the letters of the word "association" which in the spurious are thinner than in the genuine bill. The dots overthe i in every part of the bill appear smaller than in the good bill, and a small round dot is in the space between "at" in association and "is" in dollars is wanting. The R in Cashier is also smaller, and so are all the letters in President. The outer line drawn round the whole bill is much finer than in the good bill. The Five Dollar Bill is found to be very different on comparing the bills together—and there are several minute differences in the thin grey ground of the bill, which it is not easy to describe. As the bills are on the whole well imitated, it behoves every one to be on his guard against imposition.

A fire broke out on the 24th ult. at New York, in and near Fulton Street, which destroyed twenty five buildings and a large amount of property.

PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT
OF

SITTING, February 8th.

We attended at the House as early hour this morning, but after the Chaplain had finished prayers, the gallery was cleared, and the doors of the House of Assembly closed for about an hour.—When we returned to the gallery, a debate was on foot in consequence of a request from the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, addressed to the Speaker of the House, pointing out an informality in the Will of the late Colonel Ely Playfair Randall, Esq. was returned for the 4th Riding of Lincoln. The communication was read, and referred to the Committee of Privileges.

Mr. Baldwin was of opinion that the Public Accounts should be laid before the House, to know what retrenchments the Executive had thought proper to make, and the Speaker should not be robbed, he therefore would oppose the Gentleman's motion.

Mr. Hagerman and Mr. Solicitor Moore, McMartin, Gates, Morris and Shaver, be appointed a Committee to examine the Laws now expiring or shortly to expire, and report the same to the House.

Mr. Nichol said he would submit an amendment to this motion.

Mr. Van Koughnet observed that it would be well perhaps for the hon. member for the 3d Riding of Lincoln to move for the Writ by which Mr. Randall was returned, before the Speaker left the chair.

Mr. Van Koughnet's motion was then put and carried.

Mr. Rogers moved that Mr. Allan McLean be added to the above Committee. Ordered.

Mr. Nichol moved that the House be called over on Monday the 26th instant.

Mr. J. Jones rose to oppose this motion, as he thought the House were aware that Members present for my business.—Out of 40 Members, only 3 were absent, and he thought it would be unnecessary consequence of its absence.—The motion, in his mind, was therefore unnecessary.—[some personalities took place between Mr. Jones and Mr. Nichol.]

Mr. Rutten opposed the motion on similar grounds with Mr. Jones.

Mr. Nichol's motion was then put and carried.

Mr. C. Hagerman moved for leave to bring in a Bill to regulate the Fees of Commissioners Members of the House of Assembly for attending the Sessions.

Mr. H. professed this motion with a few observations, couched in fair language—He thought that Members were sufficiently respectable and wealthy to be entitled to their attendance unremunerated in a pecuniary way—the honor of holding a seat in the House, by which they were to render the greatest services to themselves and their country, was in his mind, more than sufficient compensation for them—and the money which they at present received, might be more usefully applied to other purposes in the present state of pecuniary embarrassment, than those which the Bill had in contemplation.

The Attorney Gen'l. explained—He said the Speech from the Throne was read yesterday, and was already on the paper of this day's proceedings—there was no necessity for a second reading.

Mr. Jonas Jones spoke to the same effect, and observed that the hon. Member (Mr. Nichol) had time sufficient to have no answer to the Speech from the Throne. Time to day, instead of doing which, he (Mr. N.) came to the House quite unprepared.

The House divided on this amendment on motion of adjournment by Mr. Nichol, which was negatived.

The original motion and Resolutions for the Address were then put, and carried unanimously.

Mr. Baldwin moved that Messrs. Attorney Gen'l. Messrs. McDonnell, Gordon, Morris and McMartin, be a Committee to draw up an Address in answer to His Excellency's Speech from the Throne. And that they be instructed to wave such parts of the Speech as were not included in the Resolutions offered by the Attorney Gen'l. and that they Report to the House on Monday next.—Ordered.

Mr. Rogers moved that the first rule of the House be altered, and that hereafter fifteen Members including the Speaker, shall form a Quorum.—Ordered.

Mr. Rogers moved that the 26th rel. of the House be amended, and that here after no Rule of the House be dispensed with, except by the concurrence of eighteen Members.

Mr. Nichol moved as an amendment to the above motion by Mr. Rogers, that that the word "eighteen" be expunged and "thirteen" inserted.—Ordered.

Mr. Baldwin gave notice to bring in a Bill for the more effectual improvement of the High-Ways in this Province.

Mr. Arch. McLean moved for leave to bring up the Petition of the Magistrates and Militia of the County of Frontenac.—Ordered.

A few other notices were handed in by some Members which were not read especially, and owing to the retirement of the gallery, we were unable to take them down.—At 3 quarter before 4 o'clock the House adjourned.

February 9th.

Mr. Baldwin moved that Messrs. J. Jones, Buell, Wilmot, Crooks, Nichol, Morris, P. Robinson, and Baldwin, be appointed a Committee to take into consideration the internal resources of this Province.—Ordered.

Mr. J. Jones moved for leave to bring in a Bill to repeal a former Act granting to the Speaker of the House of Assembly an increase of salary, and remunerating the present Speaker for past services.—Ordered.

Before this question was put, Mr. Nichol rose to guard the House against pressing on one branch of the House of Legislature, and to point out the impropriety of such a measure—that the most rigid economy was necessary in every branch.

Mr. Solicitor M'Lean rose to support the dignity of the Speaker—thought his salary should not be reduced, and therefore would oppose the motion.—Ordered.

Mr. Baldwin was of opinion that the Public Accounts should be laid before the House, to know what retrenchments the Executive had thought proper to make, and the Speaker should not be robbed, he therefore would oppose the G.t.

Mr. Hagerman, Messrs. Morris

MISCELLANEOUS.

Standing Armies.—The tension Governments has formed a plan for engaging the soldiers in the way of colonization. The regiments are to be divided into companies, and scattered over different territories, labouring conjointly with the peasants in time of peace, and in war contributing to the discipline of soldiers. This new working has been adopted in imitation of the Cossacks. Not American government has resources, it is said, for measures, or if it is, in part, by employing garrison soldiers in the labour of the field.

Corn Laws.—Considerations on such a subject as Corn Laws, by a foreigner, may be deserving of attention to the friends of political economy. That the future Farmers, of Flanders, owed their first entire liberty in the commerce of grain has been long related for by philosophers, and that the glorious era may have been frequently demonstrated, in works that were never been answered. He adds that several circumstances have combined to convulse experiments have been made in this way, Holland America, and the success as we cannot entertain expectation. He proceeds to observe that my slight embarrassment in the article of subsistence, never fails to begin alarm with some extraordinary, which forthwith creates expedients to set to rights what had before left to the ad tures order of things. Hence it is, that prescribed, the course of the laws of is especially intended for service beyond sea, and bears the title of Royal American Regiments.

It is mentioned as common on the Continent, that when nations of the military Anglo American and Foreigners, and serves in the house as light infantry. In time of war, it has six or eight infantry companies, and in peace only one. It is especially intended for service beyond sea, and bears the title of Royal American Regiments.

A complaint is made first in France, all servants and corporations or central companies, as all the principal merchants, tradesmen, never appear abroad without their carriage. They go time equipped to all public places, but the carriages are hired by agency of its employers. The proceeding evening the servants had to attend their masters' carriages in the park in Cedarville, a village 4 or 5 miles from the usual spot, together with three others, one of whom was no longer sleeping, at my collection is correct, and says he was S. Grubb's overseer; the other two were men who have been employed by the sons of W. Mann and Pierson, who state that P. Mason of Wonington, had been in their company, on treaty, on the business of having the two men killed, and agreed to his price, or declined going with them. Grubb the deceased, came to the house Jones, and demanded admittance, when the black man, who was alone, which was refused being a late hour, about 11 o'clock, when he was, by the help of his companions, forced in the door off its hinges, by which time Grubb and the would not let him in, he would rail misanthrope, which he immediately did, by a rail, on the forehead three inches in length, and one inch and a half in breadth, which he immediately fell dead. The others then left the house, and the deceased was found the following morning by the servant of the house, lying on the floor, quite dead, with his brains out.

The hydraulic press is now used in extension, and serious competitor to produce the greatest advantages to the industry of the nation. The action of this machine rests on a principle of physics, which the celebrated Pascal established, and which Sir Isaac Newton has explained in his Principia, demonstrated. Bramah, a very ingenious mechanician of London, has applied this principle to the construction of machines, which he has called hydraulic presses, and which are now employed in the fabrication of powder, &c.

These hydraulic presses do not require to be screwed and bolted to the floor; they may be constructed on small characters, and removed when it may be necessary. Their power of action is so considerable as to be equal to that of a single man, and they can be worked by a horse, or even by the steam of a steam engine. The English have seized another position, the Cape of Good Hope, which with the Isle of France, forms a sort of bulwark to the navigation of the Indian Ocean.

As an unexceptionable position cannot be obtained on the continent, the British Government attracts under its influence, in distance, some secondary island possessions. By the union of the Hebridian and Belgic nations, (hated alike at both,) England has acquired a fief, or holding in the south of France. By the encouragement and direction of England, the Sardinian Monarch is building, at the mouth of the Alps, fortresses intended as insurmountable barriers to every project of invasion.

The presumptive heir of the crown ought not to be Controller in Chief. The greatest scourge that can afflict a free people, is to be governed by a military king. One great excellence of the English institutions, is, that the mutability of the Executive does not affect the stability of the organization of the public services.

An erroneous opinion is stated to prevail on the Continent, that the British national force consists in a great measure of foreigners. It is here shown that at the time above alluded to, of 200,000 serving in British regiments, there were but 31 officers and 553 privates, foreigners.

In the revolutionary war, General Mortier having compelled the Hanoverian army to lay down their arms, to Act of Parliament authorized their service on the British territories. They were formed into a separate corps, under the name of the Royal German Legion. It consisted of 16,000 men, cavalry, infantry and artillery. Temporary corps are occasionally formed in countries under military occupation. Thus, since 1808, there have been Corsican, Sicilian, and even Greek regiments, with a number of Maltese for auxiliary corps. Many prisoners of war

Intense Cold.—As a matter of record to be on file, we shall publish the state of the thermometer in different parts of the United States during the late severe weather.

From papers now before us we select the following:—

At Baltimore, on the night of the 24th, nine degrees below Zero.

At Salem, Mass. from 16 to 23, below Zero.

A Philadelphia paper says, "that the intensity of the cold was so great on Thursday last, that a Tube Piece which stood on a mantle over an excellent Franklin stove, in which a fire was kept up till 3 o'clock, actually stopped from cold at half past 4 o'clock. Three Cows were frozen to death, a few miles from the city, on Thursday morning."

At Boston, during the night of the 24th the mercury ranged from 1 to 20 below Zero. Several trees were split by the extreme cold.

At Albany, it was from 12 to 20 degrees below Zero. The Editors of the Albany Gazette say "Old people often speak of the old winters of former times, and what they have seen in their day; but we may safely challenge their 1774, 1780, &c. &c. for a comparison with the present winter, so far as we have already advanced, for uniform, steady and intense cold."

We have received from our Albany Correspondent a bill presented by Mr M'Kown, entitled "an act concerning the sale of intoxicated drunkards, and for other purposes."

The 1st section authorizes the Court of Chancery to exercise jurisdiction in regard to the estates of persons incapable of conducting their own affairs in consequence of habitual drunkenness.

Section 2d provides, that all moneys that shall be paid to any innkeeper, merchant, &c. for a-y kind of spirituous liquors sold and drunk in his bar room or house, or on their premises, from and after the 1st of July next, may be recovered, with costs of suit, by action in the name of the overseers of the poor of the city or town where such liquors shall be sold; the money when recovered to be applied to the use of the poor.

Section 3d makes it the duty of the overseers of the poor to prosecute in all cases that shall come to their knowledge of a violation of this act.

Section 4. Directs that the overseers of the poor shall, whenever they discover an person to be an habitual drunk ard, make application to the Court of Chancery, for the exercise of the powers in such case also that in case such drunkard shall possess property for his or her support, the overseers shall protect the same from waste, and from being sold to such drunkard any spirituous liquor, under the penalty of ten dollars for every offence.

Section 5th, provides, that if any person shall consider himself aggrieved or injured, he may apply to a justice of the peace, who shall cause a jury to be summoned, to try the matter in dispute, and if the jury shall declare that such person is not an habitual drunkard, the overseers are to pay the usual cost in trials by jury.

Section 6th, provides, that if the drunkard reform, the overseers are to revoke their proceedings against said drunkard.

We have also received a copy of the communication of the Comptroller, setting, the several sums of money paid to the Country Agricultural Society in this state. From this document, it appears that the amount which has been paid, is $14,915 63.

OF
HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.

SUPREME FEBRUARY 8 21

Debate on an Address in answer to His Excellency's Speech.

The Attorney General moved that an humble address be presented to his Excellency in answer to his Speech from the Throne at the opening of this Parliament; and submitted to the House, for its adoption certain Resolutions to be embodied in the Address.

Mr. Nichol moved as an amendment that the Debate on that subject be adjourned till Monday next He descended at considerable length on the impropriety of permitting the subject on the House was not, and would to give Members time to examine the Speech from the Throne more minutely—He thought that on Monday they would be able to go into a full and distinct answer in their Address to all the points contained in the Speech of His Excellency, and that their Address should as far as possible be an echo of the Speech.—He complained that the Speech from the Throne was not even read to day, before the discussion, and although a copy of it appeared in the Newspaper of to day, he would pay no rep; ect whatever to it—all

The Att'y. Gen'l. said that this part of the Address had received also from the Committee their best consideration. As to the objections urged by the hon. member from Norfolk, that we should not express our thanks to His Excellency for having prorogued the Surveys without any demand upon the public treasury, without in some way denying any right to make such a demand—it appeared to him it would be full time to refuse His Excellency's suppliesfor this purpose when he required them: at present the hon. gentleman's motion seemed very much like a motion to put the question three months hence. The manner in the Address expressed had been brought into by the prudence of the other Excellency's wise and energetic measures—but it was not a proper acknowledgment of their having upon the Province of the sums paid to the Surveyors—these sums, it was admitted, had been advanced without parliamentary authority, and therefore surely we are not call upon, but rather it would be wise in us, because we had been that in another Province the right was disputed, and various Townships in a line to that right, by a voluntary assessment for the location that we had made, to express our approbation of the conduct of the Surveyors—As to impeachment, where it should become necessary to bring it before the House, and discuss the question whether the power existed; we are told that in Lower Canada it had been exercised often; but surely we are not call upon, and would not

MISCELLANEOUS.

The English language is said, by foreigners, to be more difficult of acquisition than any language extant. One of the chief obstacles is alleged to be the similarity of pronunciation to many words entirely dissimilar in signification. In the "Memoirs of the late R. L. Edgeworth, Esq." recently published at London, this characteristic is illustrated and explained. Macklin, the dramatic writer and player, together with Sir Francis Delaval Edgeworth, and many of the Covent Garden corps of performers, had assembled at the King's Arms, after play hours, in order to make themselves merry, and the rational manner in which it was done is, in part, thus represented by Mr. Edgeworth.—Village Museum.

Pronunciation was discussed; the facts in our language in this particular were copiously enumerated. "For instance," said Macklin, "Pare is a pair of pears." You may take three words out of this sentence of the same sound, but of different meaning, and differ any man to pronounce them in such a manner as to discriminate the sounds or to mark to my ear, by his pronunciation, the difference between the verb, to pare, the noun of a number, a pair, and the fruit, pear. The puppies floor me by answering that Pear, who was remarkable for a good ear, should do this. Beardsley, who mouthed prodigiously whilst he spoke, was put into a quotation, that the notion of his lips might not assist Powell in judging which meaning he intended to express by each of the words as he pronounced them. One of the company was placed behind the curtain, and to him Beardsley was to address, to communicate, whether he proposed to pronounce the word denoting the action, the noun of number, or the fruit. He said so often, and so rubbed it in loudly, that he became quite angry, and charged Powell with wilful misapprehension. The devil himself, Powell proposed that Holland should try his skill; but Holland had no better success. During the trial, I remarked, by signs with Sir Francis, a method of pointing out my meaning, and I offered to try my skill. The audience with difficulty restrained their contempt; but I took my place behind the curtain, and they were soon compelled to acknowledge, that I had a more distinct pronunciation, or that Sir Francis had more acute hearing, than the rest of the company. Out of twenty experiments, I never failed more than two or three times, and in these I acted on purpose to prevent suspicion. I had made my comfortable understand, that when I turned my right foot outward, as it appeared from between the curtain, I meant to say pare; to cut; when I turned it inward, pair, a couple; and when it was straight forward, pear, the fruit. We kept our own counsel, and won unmerited applause. Amidst such trifling as this, much sound criticism was united, which improved my literary taste and a number of entertaining anecdotes were related, which informed my inexperienced mind with knowledge of the world."

To give the reader an idea of the extent of this sales in the United States of the south, we have sketched from one Charleston paper the following items, found under the different auctioneer's heads.—Amer. Pap.

From the Boston Gazette.

Rapid Travelling.—I noticed in your paper of the 6th inst. under the above head, a challenge to all the world, to beat twenty miles an hour, which was performed by four young gentlemen on skates. This is doing well; but I am knowing to its having been beat, with ease, by more than half. The river Anchuseot, which divides the town of Fairhaven and New Bedford, is a mile wide, and has been crossed on the ice, however incredible it may seem to you, in one minute, to what is called on Ice Board. I received a letter yesterday, from a gentleman in Fairhaven who is constructed one of these boats, in which he states he himself and three or four of the other were in one minute and a half, at Thursday, the 6th inst. and sailed, as the wind was freshest, at the rate of sixty miles an hour—45 miles is quite common. These boats, which are not much known in this country, but where are prevalent, I believe, in the north of Europe, are nothing more than a sloping and running titles at the top of each page were also corrected, & 30,495 new references were inserted to the margin.—From the singular pains bestowed, in order to render the edition as accurate as possible, it has hitherto been considered the standard edition, from which all subsequent impressions have been executed. Notwithstanding, however, the great labor and attention bestowed by Dr. Blayney, his edition must necessarily be the pains of a century, to the very earliest and correct editions published by Messrs. Eyre and Strahan, his majesty's printers, but printed by Mr. Woodfall, in 1801, and again in 1812 in quarto; as not fewer than one hundred and sixteen errors were discovered in examining the edition of 1806 with Dr. Ea, and one of these errors was of considerable importance. Messrs. Eyre and Strahan's edition is very therefore be regarded as approaching as nearly as possible to that bibliographer's term an immaculate text.

Of all the modern versions non ever the general confession English translation is obtained by those who are competent judges, to be most exact. Partyle so incomparably superior to any thing which might be expected from the fastidious and perverted taste of our own age. It is such, it is in reason, it is in propriety and, which is of no small importance, one less unadulterated, and consequently more correct.

To the testimony of Bishop Middleton, we may add that of Selden, who recommended it as "the best translation in the world." The committee for religion in the time of Cromwell, allowed it to be "the best extant," and Poole in his Synopsis says, that "in this royal version occur very numerous specimens of great learning and uncommon skill in the original languages, and of an uncommon acumen and judgment." Dr. Geddess observes, that "every sentence, every word, every a Dalle, every letter and point, seem to have been weighed with the utmost exactitude, and expressed either in the text, or margin, with the utmost precision." It was translated by Robinson, more than a century ago, that it may "serve for a Lexicon of the Hebrew language, as well as a translation."

Lord Mansfield being in one of the counties, on the circuit, a poor woman was indicted for witchcraft. The inhabitants at the p ace were exasperated against her. Some witnesses deposed that they had seen her suck in the air, with her foul spaniels and her head down under. Lord M. called several people with great tranquility, and perceiving the temper of the people, whom it would not have been prudent to irritate, he then addressed them; "I do not doubt but this woman has walked in the air, and her feet upwards, since you have all seen it; at the same time I do not believe her a witch, as well as you and I, and, consequently, cannot believe that by the laws of the country she can be punished but in proportion as she has violated them. Now I know not any law that forbids walking in the air with her feet upwards. We have all a right to do it with impunity. I see no reason, therefore, for this prosecution; and this poor woman, may return home when she pleases."—This speech had its proper effect; it appeased the auditory, and the woman retired from the court without molestation.

Ludicrous punishment.—A few years since, James Malone, Esq. Mayor of Cork imagining if he could strip the beggars of the miserable and sickly appearance they made, he could divert them of the strongest claim to the charity of the humane, came to the following regulation with our Gentlemen, one of the constables, who was by trade a barber, viz.—He directed the barber to cause all the beggars he found strolling within the limits of the city, for each of whom he procured a reward; but instead of bringing them before him (the Mayor) he was to take them to his shop, and there shave, wash, dress, and powder them in the extraordinary manner. He seized a dozen, and with the assistance of rogers, washball, scissors, and powder puffs, he so completely metamorphosed them, that those whom he apprehended as mendicants, when they left his shop appeared like macaronies at least about the head. This laughable scheme was attended with such success, that the whole tribe (during Mayor Malone's mayoralty) avoiding his jurisdiction as carefully as it was visited by a pestilence.

Magog Oil Stone.—A stone, a complete substitute for the best Turkey Oil Stone has been discovered in Lake Memphremagog, and by fair experiment has been pronounced by competent judges in Boston, and various towns in Vermont, where considerable quantities have been sold, to be equal if not superior, to the imported Oil Stone. The Magog Stone, is of various descriptions possessing the same quality, and calculated for all kinds of edged tools. The proprietors, we are informed, have erected suitable works for sawing them into good shapes for use; the quarry is extensive, and with proper encouragement, enough can be manufactured for the whole United States, and at about one half the price of the Turkey Stone.

Picnic.—A late British publication, speaking of the reception of the British Embassy under Sir Thurlord at the court of Persia remarks:

"One necessary preparation was the mixed or shaded be arrayed in green slippers and red stockings. The narrow streets, as they passed through, were crowded with spectators. On entering the royal hall, they were led between files of troops disciplined in the European manner, who performed the platoon exercise as they passed. At the end of the hall was a small and mean door, which being opened, introduced them into a dark and narrow passage, terminating in another door somewhat like an English stable. This either it was, however, into a very handsome court, adorned with canals and fountains bordered with trees, at the end of which sat the king richly dressed. The presents were then delivered to the prime minister, and the ambassador began a speech in English, the sound of which created a great deal to startle the monarch; but on a translation being given, his surprise was changed into pleasure. He then inquired for the king of England, and whether he was son to him who had reigned at the time of the last embassy. On being assured that the very same king was now reigning, he was heard to remark, that in this point also the French had lied; for it seem they had circulated a report of the king of England's death. The elenh was about 45; and beareth a large black beard and mustachios, rather an agreeable countenance appeared. He entered into a pretty long conversation on literary subjects, being himself a profound patron of learning.

After this interview, the ambassador began to treat with the ministers relative to the terms of the proposed treaty. This negotiation was conducted in a manner very remote from European ideas of decorum. The discussions were sometimes accompanied with violent contentions, and at other times were interrupted by loud bursts of laughter. Once, amid the most serious deliberation, the minister broke off by asking the ambassador to tell the history of the world from the creation. Afterwards, when he had promised to send a copy of the treaty fully written out, the ambassador received instead of it a large chimes. When this treaty was at length produced, the Secretary, who valued himself on being the first writer in Persia, had so filled it with Oriental figures and conceits, that it no longer remained any intelligent meaning. Sir Harford having declared it, in this condition, to be no official value, the Secretary was most reluctantly induced to erase it into something more level to an European capacity. When that misfortune came finally to apply the seals, the Premier called out, "Stroke! Stroke!" while all the Persians present were exclaiming, "God grant the friendship between the two nations may be lasting! God grant it! God grant it!"

From Campbell's Travels in South Africa.

Having heard or read that it a corked bottle were sunk fifty or sixty fathoms in the ocean, however tight the cork might be, the pressure without would drive the cork into the inside of the bottle, occasioning it to the captain, he readily consented to make an experiment, which proved the accuracy of the assertion.

We drove a cork very tight into an empty bottle.—The cork was so large that more than half of it could not be driven into the neck of the bottle. We then tied a cord round the cork, which we also fastened round the neck of the bottle, to prevent the cork sinking down, and put a coat of pitch over the whole. By means of lead we sunk it in the water. When it was let down to the depth of fifty fathoms, the captain said he was sure that the bottle had instantaneously filled, on which, he drew it up, when he found the cork driven down into the inside, and of course the bottle was full of water.

We prepared a second bottle, exactly in the same way, only with the addition of a nail needle being passed through the upper part of the cork, which rested on the mouth of the bottle, and all completely pitched over. When about 50 fathoms down, the captain called out as before, that he felt by the sudden increase of weight that the bottle filled, on which it was drawn up. We were not a little surprised to find the cork in the same position, and on part of the glass broken, yet the bottle was full of water! None of us could conjecture how the water got in. There was no part of the pitch open to admit it, except the point of a needle.

A little before dusk of one evening last week, a merchant in Howard street checked his store, but about an hour afterwards his clerk, happening to walk by it, though he perceived the door open which on e unless he found was actually the case. Suspecting that some one had improperly gained admittance he brought a neighbor to watch at the door, while he entered to make a search. After the young man had been in a few minutes, a very stout black fellow came out and was collared by the gentleman at the door. The black being too strong for his opponent, broke away from him and made his escape, having lost one side of his waistcoat torn off. In examining what depredation had been committed in the store, it was found that no third had stolen a sum of money in both notes, a pocket book and a book keeping—all of which he had put in his waistcoat pocket, and which luckily for the owner, he pointed before he set out to run from the thief; in the scuffle at the store door and left behind.—*Balt. After which His Excellency closed the Session as follows:

Hon. Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and
Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

The public business no longer demanding your attention, it gives me great satisfaction to close this long Session of Parliament, in order that you may be at liberty to attend to your private affairs, which must, at this advanced season, require in a particular manner your superintendence.

I cannot allow you to separate, without expressing to you the satisfaction I have felt on observing the temper, diligence and regard for the interests of this Province, by which your proceedings have been governed.

The variety and importance of the matters which have been under deliberation, and your attention to subjects of public moment, afford satisfactory proofs that your time has not been misemployed.

I have no doubt that your provisions for incorporating a Provincial Bank, and for establishing an uniform Currency throughout the Province, will prove beneficial to the Commercial and general interests.

The Bill for appointing Commissioners to ascertain and report on the improvements which can be effected in the Internal Navigation, may be considered as the commencement of an important undertaking, eminently calculated to advance the prosperity and greatness of Upper Canada.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

I thank you on behalf of His Majesty, for the supplies you have granted in aid of the Civil List, which you must be convinced are not more than the exigencies of the Public Service compelled me to require.

The appropriation you have made to assist in opening the Road from the Ottawa through Richmond and Perth to Kingstown, though small in amount, will be regarded as a sufficient proof of your desire to add to the liberal appropriation made by His Excellency the Commander of the Forces for that object, when it is remembered that it is almost the only grant you have been enabled to make for any public purpose.

I participate with you in the regret which I am assured you feel, that the state of our Finance has not permitted you to continue for a further period, the increase which had been made to the Militia Pension List, by a former temporary Act. The provisions you have enacted for the examination of the different Pensioners, and the means you have adopted to insure the liquidation of the arrears, fully manifest your desire to do justice to the Revenue, and at the same time to relieve those whose just claims upon it have remained so long unsatisfied.

Honorable Gentlemen, and Gentlemen,

Having characterized this Session of Parliament, the first since the late augmentation in your respective bodies, by great unanimity in the discharge of your important duties, you will, I trust, carry into your several Counties, a disposition which will lead you to cultivate a spirit of harmony and good will among all classes and descriptions of their inhabitants.

Let me recommend that you should also instil into the minds of your fellow subjects the duty of a ready and conscientious discharge of those local services which the Laws require for the general advantage and convenience, and that you should give by your countenance and support all the weight in your power to the authorities appointed for the enforcement of obligations so important.

In those parts of the Country with which you are severally connected, you will I doubt not render your presence an additional security against the progress of misrepresentation on matters of Public concern; of which, in whatever cause it may originate, experience has sufficiently demonstrated the injurious tendency. The superior information you naturally possess on subjects of general importance and your nearer acquaintance with the views and principles of the Government, will at all times enable you by means of honorable and manly exertion, such as you I am persuaded would employ, to expose effectually any delusions which might be otherwise calculated to mislead the judgment of the unwary. You must be sensible that such a just discernment of their real interests, as recently influenced the great mass of this loyal people, must ever be in the highest degree important for the undisturbed enjoyment of your full rights and liberties; and that it must prove the best security for a permanence of that tranquillity which is so essential to the diffusive existence of private happiness and the healthful growth of those advantages which in their maturity constitute the greatness and felicity of a Country.

The honorable the Speaker of the Legislative Council, then signified His Excellency's pleasure that the Parliament be prorogued until the 22d of May.

An Act to repeal an Act passed in the first year of His Majesty's Reign, entitled "An Act to regulate the Commercial Intercourse, between this Province and the United States of America, by land and inland navigation," and further to regulate the Trade between this Province and the United States of America, by land and inland navigation.

WHEREAS it is expedient further to provide for the Commercial Intercourse between this Province and the United States of America, and to repeal the Laws now in force relative thereto: Be it therefore enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, entitled "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of His Majesty's Reign, intituled, 'An Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That an Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the first year of His present Majesty's Reign, entitled "An Act to regulate the Commercial Intercourse, between this Province and the United States of America, by land and inland navigation," be and the same hereby repealed.

Upper Canada Gazette.

No. 10] YORK, UPPER-CANADA, MONDAY, APRIL 23, 1821.

By Authority.

On the 14th instant, at six o'clock, P. M. His Excellency the Lieut. Governor went in state to the Parliament House, and being seated on the Throne, the House of Assembly was summoned to the Legislative Council Chamber, when His Excellency was pleased to give the Royal Assent to 32 Acts, and to close the Session as follows:

Hon. Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and
Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

The public business no longer demanding your attention, it gives me great satisfaction to close this long Session of Parliament, in order that you may be at liberty to attend to your private affairs, which must, at this advanced season, require in a particular manner your superintendence.

I cannot allow you to separate, without expressing to you the satisfaction I have felt on observing the temper, diligence and regard for the interests of this Province, by which your proceedings have been governed.

The variety and importance of the matters which have been under deliberation, and your attention to subjects of public moment, afford satisfactory proofs that your time has not been misemployed.

I have no doubt that your provisions for incorporating a Provincial Bank, and for establishing an uniform Currency throughout the Province, will prove beneficial to the Commercial and general interests.

The Bill for appointing Commissioners to ascertain and report on the improvements which can be effected in the Internal Navigation, may be considered as the commencement of an important undertaking, eminently calculated to advance the prosperity and greatness of Upper Canada.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

I thank you on behalf of His Majesty, for the supplies you have granted in aid of the Civil List, which you must be convinced, are not more than the exigencies of the Public Service compelled me to require.

The appropriation you have made to assist in opening the Road from the Ottawa through Richmond and Perth to Kingston, though small in amount, will be regarded as a sufficient proof of your desire to add to the liberal appropriation made by His Excellency the Commander of the Forces for that object, when it is remembered that it is almost the only grant you have been enabled to make for any public purpose.

I participate with you in the regret which I am assured you feel, that the state of our Finance has not permitted you to continue for a further period, the increase which had been made to the Militia Pension List, by a former temporary Act. The provisions you have enacted for the examination of the different Pensioners, and the means you have adopted to insure the liquidation of the arrears, fully manifest your desire to do justice to the Revenue, and at the same time to relieve those whose just claims upon it have remained so long unsatisfied.

Hon. Gentlemen, and Gentlemen,

Having characterized this Session of Parliament, the first since the late augmentation in your respective bodies, by great unanimity in the discharge of your important duties, you will, I trust, carry into your several Counties, a disposition which will lead you to cultivate a spirit of harmony and good will among all classes and descriptions of their inhabitants.

Let me recommend that you should also instil into the minds of your fellow subjects the duty of a ready and conscientious discharge of those local services which the Laws require for the general advantage and convenience, and that you should give by your countenance and support all the weight in your power to the authorities appointed for the enforcement of obligations so important.

In those parts of the Country with which you are severally connected, you will I doubt not render your presence an additional security against the progress of misrepresentation on matters of Public concern; of which, in whatever cause it may originate, experience has sufficiently demonstrated the injurious tendency. The superior information you naturally possess on subjects of general importance and your nearer acquaintance with the views and principles of the Government will at all times enable you by means of honorable and manly exertion, such as you I am persuaded would employ, to expose effectually any delusions which might be otherwise calculated to mislead the judgment of the unwary. You must be sensible that such a just discernment of their real interests, as recently influenced the great mass of this loyal people, must ever be in the highest degree important for the undisturbed enjoyment of your full rights and liberties; and that it must prove the best security for a permanence of that tranquility which is so essential to the diffusive existence of private happiness and the healthful growth of those advantages which in their maturity constitute the greatness and felicity of a Country.

The honorable the Speaker of the Legislative Council, then signified His Excellency's pleasure that the Parliament be prorogued until the 22d of May.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no person shall be placed upon the Militia Pension List of this Province by reason of any claim now existing, unless such person shall make his application within twelve months from the passing of this Act, and that the Pension of any person who may be placed upon the Pension List of this Province by reason of any such claim, shall be payable and take date only from the time of his application.

IV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor or Person administering the Government of this Province, to appoint any two or more Members of the Medical Board of this Province for the time being to be Inspectors of Militia Pensioners now placed or hereafter to be placed on the Pension List of this Province on the ground of incapacity to earn their living by hard labour, in consequence of wounds or casual injuries received on service during the late War, and that two of the Inspectors so appointed shall between the first day of May and the first day of November next after the passing of this Act, attend on two successive days at Cornwall, Brockville, Kingston, Hamilton in the District of Newcastle, Hamilton in the District of Gore, Niagara, Vittoria, and Sandwich, for the purpose of inspecting such of the said pensioners as shall present themselves for their inspection, and that notice of the time and place of the sitting of such Inspectors, at each of the said places respectively, shall be published at least two months before such sitting in the Upper Canada Gazette, and also put up at least four weeks before such sitting at the Door of the Courthouse or place where the Quarter Sessions in each District are usually holden.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid That the said Inspectors shall keep a record in writing of all their proceedings, and shall deposit the same in the hands of the General Agent for Militia Pensions, and that all such Pensioners as shall be reported by the said Commissioners in manner aforesaid, not to be so incapacitated as to entitle them to a Pension according to Law, shall from the time of such report being received by the Pension Agent be struck off the Pension List of this Province and shall receive nothing more than the arrearages that may be due him on account of his Pension up to the time of his examination before such Inspectors.

CHAP. VI.

An Act to amend an Act passed in the fifty-ninth year of His late Majesty's Reign entitled "An Act for vesting in Commissioners the Estates of certain Traitors and also the Estates of Persons declared Aliens by an Act passed in the fifty-fourth year of His Majesty's Reign, entitled 'An Act to declare certain persons therein described Aliens and to vest their Estates in His Majesty,' and for applying the proceeds thereof towards compensating the Losses which His Majesty's Subjects have sustained in consequence of the late war and for ascertaining and satisfying the lawful debts and claims thereupon."

[Passed 14th April, 1821.]

WHEREAS by an Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the fifty fourth year of His late Majesty's Reign, entitled "An Act to declare certain persons therein described Aliens and to vest their Estates in His Majesty" certain Estates in this Province have become vested in His Majesty, having been found by Inquisition to have been on the first day of July one thousand eight hundred and twelve, alien seizin of persons, declared Aliens by the Provisions of the said Act, which Estates were after the said first day of July and before the departure of such Aliens from this Province conveyed to bona fide purchasers without any intention of fraud, or were seized and sold in execution upon judgments lawfully obtained before the departure of such Aliens from this Province as aforesaid: And whereas the Provisions of the said Act in that behalf were only intended to prevent fraudulent sales, made with intent to evade expected forfeitures, it is expedient that relief should be afforded to bona fide purchasers in the cases above mentioned, who in some instances have made large improvements upon lands acquired by them before the passing of said Act, and who would be wholly ruined unless provision is made for such relief. Be it therefore enacted by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, entitled "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of His Majesty's Reign, entitled 'An Act for making more effectual provision for the Province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province" and by the authority of the same, That the Commissioners appointed under the Act passed in the fifty-ninth year of His late Majesty's Reign entitled "An Act for vesting in Commissioners the Estates of certain Traitors, and also the Estates of persons declared Aliens by an Act passed in the fifty fourth year of His Majesty's Reign, entitled 'An Act to declare certain persons therein described Aliens and to vest their Estates in His Majesty, and for applying the proceeds thereof towards compensating the losses which His Majesty's Subjects have sustained in consequence of the late War, and for ascertaining and satisfying the lawful debts and claims thereupon" shall and may have power to revise all such claims as have been brought before them respecting lands of which no sale has already been made under the provision of the said recited Act, passed in the fifty ninth year of His late Majesty's Reign, whether the same have or have not been decided on appeal, and if it shall appear to their satisfaction upon the proof brought before them in support of the same claim that the sale by the Alien, or under a judgment against him made or entered before the departure of such Alien from the Province, and before the passing of the said first mentioned Act, was bona fide and not for fraud or evasion, or with a knowledge of the purchaser of his intention to desert the Province, then the said Commissioners shall and may have power to decree such Estate to such claimant proving good title to the same, and that it shall and may be lawful for any person or persons having any claim under such bona fide sale as aforesaid to prefer the same to the said Commissioners within the period of six months from the passing of this Act, any thing in the above recited Act passed in the fifty ninth year of His late Majesty's Reign to the contrary notwithstanding.

II. And whereas it appears upon the petition of Thomas Ridout, Esquire, and others, that in some cases, from a mistake in describing the Lot or other error in Inquisitions, certain estates have been erroneously returned as forfeited, and the persons owning the same not having observed the public notice thereof until after the expiration of the eight months limited for claiming before the said Commissioners, by reason whereof the same have been absolutely vested in the Commissioners above mentioned, who are compelled to proceed to sell the same notwithstanding such manifest error as aforesaid. Be it therefore enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful for the said Commissioners to inspect the respective Inquisitions together with the minutes of evidence thereon and compare the same with the returns furnished and published by them according to Law, and that on its appearing to the said Commissioners or a majority of them from such inspection or otherwise that any Estate has been returned manifestly by error it shall and may be lawful for them at any time before the sale thereof to decree the same to such person as shall prove title thereto, or in default of any claim therefore, to forbear proceeding to sell the same.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That when any bona fide sale of any Lands or Tenements shall have been made by any person or persons who may hereafter be found by Inquisition to be an Alien or Aliens under the said Act passed in the fifty-fourth year of His Majesty's Reign, when such sale shall have been made previous to desertion of such Alien, it shall and may be lawful for the Commissioners aforesaid, upon satisfactory proof of such bona fide sale, to decree such lands and tenements to the purchaser or purchasers thereof or the person entitled to claim the same.

IV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That in all cases where the Real Estate of any person declared an Alien under the provisions of the said Act passed in the fifty-fourth year of His late Majesty's Reign, shall have been sold in execution upon any Judgment obtained against him, before such real estate became vested in His Majesty by Inquisition found, the surplus monies arising from such sale, after the satisfaction of the execution and the legal charges thereupon, shall belong to his Majesty, and shall be forthwith paid over by the Sheriff or other Officer holding the same, to the Commissioners of Forfeited Estates, appointed in and by the said Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the fifty ninth year of His late Majesty's Reign, who shall pay the same to the Special Receiver appointed under the provisions of the said last mentioned Act, to be by him held subject to the same orders and appropriations, as it such monies had arisen from the sale of real estate by the Commissioners of Forfeited Estates.

V. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That in all cases of sales of lands which have been or may hereafter be made by the Commissioners of Forfeited Estates, according to the authority vested in them for that purpose, Deeds of Bargain and Sale which have been, or which hereafter shall be made and executed by the majority of such Commissioners for the time being, shall be as valid and effectual in Law to all intents and purposes, as if the same were signed by all the said Commissioners, any Law to the contrary notwithstanding.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That from and after the first day of August next, the said Commissioners shall meet, on the first Tuesday in the months of January, April, July and November, and at no other time, unless for the purpose of determining some matter specially referred to them, or of receiving the evidence or hearing the claim of some claimant or claimants, agent or agents actually attending for that purpose.

PROCLAMATION.

KINGSTON BREWERY.

THE Subscriber respectfully begs leave to inform the public of York and its vicinity, that Mr. ROBERT COLEMAN will henceforth act as his Agent in that Town who will constantly be enabled to supply any quantity of Beer, at a moment's notice, and at the cheapest possible rate at which it can be afforded, it being an undeviating maxim with the subscriber, that a small profit is of more durable existence than an excessive one; and the public will assuredly find, that the emulative spirit, with which the native Brewers have been inspired, by the wisdom of the Legislature, in affording them such ample protection from Foreign competition, will have the effect of producing them better and cheaper Beer than they ever had. The Beer which Mr. Coleman will have constantly on hand, is intended for general and every day sale. Should any gentleman wish to be supplied with choice Liquor for Bottling, it shall at any time be sent to him on the shortest notice, at the Kingston price, and freight free. The price is two shillings Currency per gallon; and the quality is such, as, when bottled only a short time, to bear a comparison with the finest Bottled Ale that can be imported from Great Britain. If after a fair comparison of its quality, with the best imported Ale that can be procured, gentlemen will only take the trouble to compare the expence of each, the Subscriber cannot doubt, that they will not only see the absurdity of throwing away their money on imported Ale, but also the propriety and wisdom of encouraging the native manufacture of an article as sanative in its properties as the fresh breezes from the Lake, and as pure from adulteration, and which promises to bring honor and profit to the country at large.

Mr. Coleman is furnished with one barrel of this vaunted Liquor, and gentlemen who are inclined to see the warranted perfection of the art of Brewing, will be welcome to send each two bottles [till the barrel is exhausted] to be filled gratis, when they will have an opportunity of judging, how how much the Father has been partial in praise of his Child.

KINGSTON BREWERY.

THE Subscriber respectfully begs leave to inform the public of York and its vicinity, that Mr. ROBERT COLEMAN will henceforth act as his Agent in that Town who will constantly be enabled to supply any quantity of Beer, at a moment's notice,and at the cheapest possible rate at which it can be afforded,it being an undeviating maxim with the subscriber, that a small profit is of more durable existencethan an excessive one; and the public will assuredly find, that the emulative spirit, with which the native Brewers have been inspired, by the wisdom of the Legislature, in affording them such ample protection from Foreign competition, will have the effect of producing them better and cheaper Beer than they ever had. The Beer which Mr. Coleman will have constantly on hand, is intended for general and every day sale. Should any gentleman wish to be supplied with choice Liquor for Bottling, it shall at any time be sent to him on the shortest notice, at the Kingston price, and freight free. The price is two shillings Currency per gallon; and the quality is such, as, when bottled only a short time, to bear a comparison with the finest Bottled Ale that can be imported from Great Britain. If after a fair comparison of its quality, with the best imported Ale that can be procured, gentlemen will only take the trouble to compare the expence of each, the Subscriber cannot doubt, that they will not only see the absurdity of throwing away their money on imported Ale, but also the propriety and wisdom of encouraging the native manufacture of an article as sensitive in its properties as the fresh breezes from the Lake, and as pure from adulteration, and which promises to bring honor and profit to the country at large.

Mr. Coleman is furnished with one barrel of this vaunted Liquor, and gentlemen who are inclined to see the warranted perfection of the art of Brewing, will be welcome to send each two bottles [till the barrel is exhausted] to be filled gratis, when they will have an opportunity of judging, how how much the Father has been partial in praise of his Child.

To Emigrants and other Settlers.

FOR SALE

30,000 THOUSAND ACRES OF LAND,

CALLED the Township of MOULTON, situate near the mouth of the Grand River, on Lake Erie, in the District of Niagara.

The greatest portion of the above Tract is of excellent quality, and peculiarly adapted to grazing.

This Township extends about three miles and a half along the North Easterly Bank of the Grand River, and about four miles on Lake Erie; consequently those waters offer every facility to a water communication.

The rear of the Township is about 18 miles distant from the Forty-Mile-Creek on Lake Ontatio, where there is a good road both in summer and winter.— The River Welland likewise passes within 200 yards of the North Easternmost corner, and opens an easy communication for boats or rafts, with the village of Chippawa, near the Falls of Niagara where it empties itself.

Emigrants and Settlers in general wishing to live near each other will find this a very desirable situation.

Any quantity from 50 acres upwards may be had, and conditions of Sale known, by application to Mr. William Smith, Merchant, Fort Erie, or to Mr. Mercer, Land Agent, York, Upper-Canada.

An indisputable Title will be given.

Extract from the Police Regulation of the Town of York, 14th May, 1817.
