10:00 p.m. The Future Is Wild

New World

Two hundred million years in the future, all the continents have fused into one huge landmass, surrounded by a single global ocean. Birds are extinct, replaced by strange flying creatures evolved from fish.

In the ocean microscopic organisms have grown to large sizes and have replaced many fish. Most of the land is a barren desert where few creatures survive, but a tree-dwelling squid shows a glimmer of social intelligence and could form the basis of Earth's next civilization.

11:00 p.m. Globe Trekker

Northern Spain (CC)

In Barcelona Shilpa Mehta discovers the city's rich architecture and flamenco dancing. She witnesses the notorious running of the bulls in Pamplona and samples a tapas dish unique to the region in San Sebastian. Just outside Madrid she visits a school for young bullfighters and checks out a famous female matador in action. She follows the Pilgrim Trail to Santiago and ends her journey the virtually unpopulated expanse of Cabo Finisterre along the Atlantic coast.
