Your Afternoon Briefing For Monday May 29, 2017

The opposition is angry about two different ways the Liberal government is advertising its policies, both over the airwaves and in hydro bills.

Meanwhile, the PC MPP who chaired new federal Conservative Leader Andrew Scheer's Ontario efforts says what you heard on the campaign chair will be what you get from the new Tory-in-chief. That, and more, in your afternoon QP Briefing.

HEADLINES

Expect no 'U-turn' from Andrew Scheer, Ontario campaign chair says

Scheer's win keeps the Ontario PCs and the federal Tories at odds over carbon pricing.

Liberals to table law creating 'safe access zones' around abortion clinics

The new rules would trace the path of "bubble zone" legislation rolled out in British Columbia and Newfoundland and Labrador.

Opposition cries foul on government order to promote hydro plan – again

The Liberals' proposed regulation, made under the Ontario Fair Hydro Plan Act – poised to pass third reading this week – would be in effect from July 1, 2017, until July 1, 2018, expiring three weeks after next year's June 7.

Tories call on chief electoral officer to probe government budget ads

Another watchdog of the legislature, the auditor general, has already said the ad could suggest that the ridings named in it "were targeted" because they belong to the Tories and NDP.
