Here's a revised:

"We will bring forward a plan that will have immediate relief for Ontarians in the near future, and we look forward to that announcement. No decisions have been made at this point in time."

Hey all,

Similarly, here is the current plan for the House.

For the House:

- As I've said before, our government considers all options on the table when it comes to rate relief
- No decisions have been made by our government
- Until they are, I'm not going to comment on hypotheticals
- But let's take a minute to examine [what this government has already done]/[what the Opposition has to say about electricity in this province]/[etc]

Hey Jenn and Issues,

As discussed, I'll shuttle any QP requests over to you in the morning. For any that come from farther afield we've got this statement that we can share, following our messaging from this week. If you're good with this we'll share it with those that come knocking. It would come from the Office/me, by the way:

Reducing electricity bills for Ontarians is a top priority for this government, and we're happy to listen to good ideas from across the province. Every option is on the table, within reason. The Premier has given a deadline of this spring budget, and we'll be announcing a plan before then.
