OK. I agree the numbers aren't going to work here. But attached is what I was evolving and envisioning, numbers aside, so you can see.

Okay. Kill that section in the remarks and kill that NR.

That would suggest to me we not include this at all

That might change the percentage for the remarks.

Thanks, Keley. I'm working on a new draft. But wondering why the figures diverge so much from the chart that was discussed at yesterday's meeting.

The chart indicates that in 2016 typical residential bills were projected at $167 and are now updated to $152.

Your draft has them at $159 and now $155....quit the difference.

Wondering why?

Hi Andrew, Dan,

Attached is a draft of the NR we discussed earlier today. Upon further consideration, we advise against proceeding with the news release. We don't think the timing works, given the current context and it would also raise expectations regarding future rate mitigation. We would advise to sticking to additional content in the Minister's Empire Club speech.

Happy to discuss.
