To all, Happy New Year to all of you.

The issue of "energy poverty" is one that was talked about last spring but since the Fair Hydro Act we haven't heard or seen much about it in the media. It is still an issue and recent findings on the OEB website would indicate it is still a major one.

I have tried to capture some of the things going on (they quietly are keeping under wraps) that reflect energy poverty is still a problem and shows no signs of abating. The cold weather we have experienced will make the problem worse. I have produced two articles on the subject and the first has been posted on my blog here:

The second one will be posted early tomorrow together with some facts.
