Hi Noble

Here is the technical briefing deck from the announcement. The way the reduction will work is that the OEB will be instructed to collect less Global Adjustment from consumers than it otherwise would have. RPP-eligible retail customers will be entitled to a reduced global adjustment charge. This all still has to be worked out through new legislation and regulations, is the only caveat.

Hope that helps.

Matt

Matt- is there a public announcement/document on how the 25% reduction will be rolled out for recent announcement on electricity pricing? Ie: is it just a result of the renegotiated long term pricing or will it be a rebate etc? Im not asking for insider intell...just if there is anything public that you can send it would be appreciated. Low volume consumers with private contracts concerned about impact on their prearranged contracts. Anything you can share would be greatly appreciated.
