Kind of weird thing from budget lock-up yesterday was Patrick Brown railing against Hotel Tax. I get the "No New Taxes" rhetoric but... Hotel Tax is specifically designed to be politically palatable to residents + municipalities love it. Why oppose?

For Brown, it doesn't seem like something worth being on the wrong side of John Tory over.

I expect all parties in the next provincial election to put forward a plan that respects the needs of nearly 3 million Toronto residents.

The most crucial needs of the people of Toronto were not met by #Budget2017.

I will be advocating that the province be required to match historic federal investments in transit and social housing.
