Subject: Re: Question re: RPP

Good morning Cindy, Nadine and Kim. if we understand your question correctly. the answer is that the setting of RPP is not affected by the rates of individual LDCs. In the case of the FHP plan, as we understand it, the use of the THESL ratepayer as a proxy will mean that THESL rates will have some relevance. Let me know if this misses the mark and we can elaborate or try to assist further.

Subject: Question re: RPP

Hi Kim – I had a follow on question to one of the discussions this morning re: RRRP. Michael Reid was speaking to rate filings of the LDCs that were in front of the OEB. The resulting rate orders could have an impact on the fiscal hit of the RRRP program, which I understand.

How does a change in the rates LDC charge for distribution impact the RPP calc, if at all?

Thanks,
