I might be reading it incorrectly- but it seems as though the core business activities are not tied to each strategic goal? I kind of liked the connection between the core business work and each goal, even though in some cases I admit it might be a bit arbitrary.

I was thinking of something along the lines of the attached (see the file "template example")- retains the connection with strategic goals but separates out the strategic plan/core business activities. Consider only for the template- I haven't gone through on the content in this version.

For the M&RD content and the duplication issue- see the other file <v3>- but I figure I'd hold off putting this into the template until we discuss....

I'll bring my laptop to the meeting so we can throw each version up on the screen....

Importance: High

Hi Darryl, Darren:

I did a quick re-work of the business planning summary/alignment document based on the BPWG discussions and our discussions on strategic work aligning with the strategic objectives and "core" work aligning with strategic goals. I also tried to remove the duplication on outcomes and initiatives where possible. If you get a chance to review before our meeting tomorrow afternoon, that would be great - We can have a quick chat about it then. I'm hoping this minimizes some of the confusion on what aligns where while still providing context for the business plan narrative when that time comes.

Hopefully I'm not completely out to lunch. Happy to discuss.

Cheers,
-Tam-
