

Karen Evans

From: Karen Evans
Sent: February 7, 2018 9:20 AM
To: ##Clippings_Distribution_List
Subject: Re: Morning News Summary - Feb. 7, 2018

Good morning,

The Minister of Energy announced yesterday that Ontario Power Generation has issued secured debt in relation to the Fair Hydro Plan. There is also more discussion today about what the next leader of Ontario's Progressive Conservatives will do on the energy file – namely whether they have the leeway to abandon Patrick Brown's promise to implement a carbon tax. CP's coverage of Caroline Mulroney has a reference to her saying she supports cuts in hydro rates. The Toronto Star's editorial board is coming out against Toronto Hydro and city council for not releasing information about the possibility of the utility going private. And like yesterday, there is just one mention of the OEB – a news brief about Festival Hydro launching an electrical safety awareness survey.

Minister of Energy: Statement from Minister of Energy Regarding Ontario's Fair Hydro Plan

- Includes this line: Today's announcement by Ontario Power Generation (OPG) regarding the successful issuance of secured debt in relation to Ontario's Fair Hydro Plan is a positive sign that our plan is working. I would like to thank OPG for providing the expertise and support necessary to implement Ontario's Fair Hydro Plan.

CP via CTV News: Caroline Mulroney touts major change for party in first campaign event

- News story about Mulroney's campaign event Monday evening, where she is reported to have said she supports cuts in hydro rates (no further details)

Troy Media: PC carbon tax reversal still possible in Ontario

- Column arguing that there is nothing binding PC leadership candidates to Patrick Brown's platform promise to implement a carbon tax

Toronto Star: City council should push for end to Toronto Hydro secrecy

- Editorial that criticizes Toronto Hydro and city council for refusing to release information about discussions on possibly privatizing the utility

My Stratford Now: Festival Hydro begins phone survey (One OEB mention)

- News brief about Festival Hydro launching an electrical safety awareness survey (similar to story flagged in yesterday's clippings)
- Says the survey is part of the OEB's mandated bi-yearly survey

Morning News Clippings

powered by: infomart

Date: Wednesday, February 7, 2018

Edited by: Paul Crawford (Paul.Crawford@oeb.ca)

Contact Editor

Clippings Summary

News - 13 Results

Festival Hydro Begins Phone Survey - My Stratford Now

www.mystratfordnow.com - Tue Feb 6 2018

Tone: Neutral

Permalink

Paul Crawford noted on Tuesday, February 6, 2018
OEB is mentioned.

Festival Hydro wants to know if you're keeping electrical safety in mind.

End the secrecy

Toronto Star - Wed Feb 7 2018

Tone: Neutral

Ad Value: $9,958

Reach: 361323 Page: A12

It's bad enough that Toronto Hydro, the city's publicly owned power provider, has been working for two years to suppress information on an abandoned push to privatize the company. The ratepayer-funded ...

Assembly Moves Towards Intervention With Hydro One - KINY

www.kinyradio.com - Tue Feb 6 2018

Tone: Neutral

Permalink

Assembly Members are concerned that if the city doesn't participate in negotiations now, it hurt hurt rate payers in the future.

Ontario loves scandalous Liberals

North Bay Nugget - Wed Feb 7 2018

Tone: Negative

Byline: Larry Comeau

Ad Value: $202

Reach: 11505 Page: A5

To the editor: Although it's nice to see someone finally being found guilty of a serious crime regarding the $1-billion politically motivated gas plant boondoggle, we are left wondering why no politician in the McGuinty/Wynne Liberal ...

Conservative carbon tax reversal still possible in Ontario

troymedia.com - Tue Feb 6 2018

Tone: Neutral

Permalink

When the Ontario Progressive Conservative Party launched its policy platform, the People's Guarantee, the most controversial proposal was implementing a carbon tax.

NORTH BAY
NUGGET

Liberal legacy waste and debt

North Bay Nugget - Wed Feb 7 2018

Tone: Neutral

Byline: Ross Ayotte

Ad Value: $460

Reach: 11505 Page: A5

To the editor: One must remember our now premier has been in cabinet since 2003 and must be held accountable. A look at the Liberal record: They added the HST on just about everything we purchase, including home heating fuel, then they ...

Caroline Mulroney touts major change for party in first campaign event | CTV News

www.ctvnews.ca - Tue Feb 6 2018

Tone: Neutral

Permalink

Mulroney, who is up against former MPP Christine Elliott and former Toronto city councillor Doug Ford, said she would also support cuts in hydro rates and child care rebates if elected as the next premier.

Ego Air

Toronto Sun - Wed Feb 7 2018

Tone: Negative

Byline: Paul McDonald

Ad Value: $368

Reach: 171076 Page: A14

Trudeau is hell-bent on implementing a carbon tax and in the mean time jetting around Canada and the globe on Ego Air, creating a carbon footprint wherever Ego Air lands. Enough is enough - he needs to be shackled to his seat ...

As pipelines create provincial rifts, Trudeau needs to unite Canada

The Globe and Mail - Wed Feb 7 2018

Tone: Negative

Byline: MARTHA HALL FINDLAY

Ad Value: $18,593

Reach: 309154 Page: B4

Martha Hall Findlay is president and CEO of the Canada West Foundation Are we a country? At issue is far more than the Trans Mountain pipeline expansion, or a spat between provinces. A fundamental underpinning of our confederation is at ...

Let the oil flow

National Post - Wed Feb 7 2018

Tone: Negative

Byline: Ed Lacelle,

Ad Value: $2,628

Reach: 159480 Page: A8

Recent articles in the National Post address the current situation regarding the Trans Mountain Pipeline as an economic necessity for all of Canada. As a resident of Quebec, I couldn't agree more. The production and responsible ...

Government needs to stop the charade around energy development – The Oshawa Express

oshawaexpress.ca - Wed Feb 7 2018

Tone: Neutral

Permalink

Paul Crawford noted on Wednesday, February 7, 2018

Energy East is mentioned.

The charade taking place now concerning the Kinder Morgan pipeline should not be fooling anybody who has paid attention to the actual desires of (Alberta Premier Rachel) Notley, (Prime Minister Justin) Trudeau, and (BC Premier John) Horgan.

Do Notley and Trudeau really want a pipeline built — or are they quietly glad BC is blocking it? - The Rebel

www.therebel.media - Wed Feb 7 2018

Tone: Neutral

Permalink

Paul Crawford noted on Wednesday, February 7, 2018

Energy East is mentioned.

As we've told you since her election as Alberta's NDP premier, Rachel Notley has been anti-oil for years.

On Trans Mountain, Trudeau needs to become a leader for all of Canada - The Globe and Mail

www.theglobeandmail.com - Tue Feb 6 2018

Tone: Neutral

Permalink

Paul Crawford noted on Tuesday, February 6, 2018

Energy East is mentioned.

Are we a country? At issue is far more than the Trans Mountain pipeline expansion, or a spat between provinces. A fundamental underpinning of our confederation is at risk and the longer the federal government refuses to fight for it itself, the ...

Clippings Summary

Full Articles

Festival Hydro Begins Phone Survey - My Stratford Now

www.mystratfordnow.com - Tue Feb 6 2018

Tone: Neutral

Festival Hydro wants to know if you're keeping electrical safety in mind.

Back to Top

End the secrecy

Toronto Star - Wed Feb 7 2018

Tone: Neutral

Ad Value: $9,958

Reach: 361323 Page: A12

It's bad enough that Toronto Hydro, the city's publicly owned power provider, has been working for two years to suppress information on an abandoned push to privatize the company. The ratepayer-funded agency should, by default, be open and transparent.

But more troubling still are the repeated failures of our city's political leadership even to encourage the company's board to do the right thing.

Take the unfortunate fate of city Councillor Gord Perks' motion, tabled last week, to force Toronto Hydro finally to release information about a behind-the-scenes privatization push in 2016, the subject of a longstanding Star freedom of information request, and about how much money the company has spent since then to oppose that request.

These are not insignificant details. The arm's-length agency hired lobbyists, at some public expense, in its unsuccessful effort to encourage council to support a privatization plan. At what cost did it pursue this, without any public mandate? And how much has it spent since then on consultants, including blue chip Bay St. law firm Norton Rose Fulbright Canada, in fighting the Star's push for transparency?

These are the questions Perks sought to answer with his motion, yet sadly it never got to a vote. Instead, council approved, 20 to 18, an alternative motion put forward by Councillor Stephen Holyday, who sits on Hydro Toronto's board of directors, and with the active support of Mayor John Tory. That motion calls on the agency merely to consider the request for transparency. It does not even compel a response.

The stated reason for undermining Perks' effort was that Holyday wanted to ensure the city did not compromise the independence of the arm's length agency by big-footing its board into disclosing the information. "I take no position on whether the information should be released," Holyday said. "I'm more interested in governance."

There is some irony in citing good governance as a reason not to fight for transparency, a central tenet of good governance. But in any case, surely councillors could have at least used moral suasion to encourage the board to come clean. Surely they could have made their request harder to ignore.

The mayor, in particular, should tread carefully here, given his interests in this case. The Star revealed last year that some of Tory's senior staff and advisers led the push toward a partial sale of the utility and that Toronto Hydro hired two former senior Tory advisers to lobby council to consider a sell-off.

The mayor's office, invoking the governance issue, called Holyday's motion the "reasonable and sensible option." But Tory must also be aware of the appearance that he may have other reasons not to want this information to come to light.

If he feels it would be wrong, for governance reasons, to force the board to disclose the documents in question, he should at least use his position of moral leadership to explicitly encourage the company to come clean. It is in all of our interests that this information about the use of public funds be released so that we might consider whether they were truly used for the public good.

Back to Top

Assembly Moves Towards Intervention With Hydro One - KINY

www.kinyradio.com - Tue Feb 6 2018

Tone: Neutral

Assembly Members are concerned that if the city doesn't participate in negotiations now, it hurt hurt rate payers in the future.

Back to Top

Ontario loves scandalous Liberals

North Bay Nugget - Wed Feb 7 2018

Tone: Negative

Byline: Larry Comeau

Ad Value: $202

Reach: 11505 Page: A5

To the editor: Although it's nice to see someone finally being found guilty of a serious crime regarding the $1-billion politically motivated gas plant boondoggle, we are left wondering why no politician in the McGuinty/Wynne Liberal government has ever been held accountable for the numerous incidents of fiscal mismanagement that have taken place over the 13 years they have run Ontario.

For sure, moving the two gas plants to save a couple Liberal seats, then erasing any paper trail to destroy any evidence, is one of the most egregious actions by an Ontario government in its history.

Considering Premier Kathleen Wynne is now shelling out tens of billions in hydro rebates to buy back voters, it seems no lesson has been learned. Reckless spending, resulting in Ontario now being a have-not province, buried under an $11-billion annual deficit and $300-billion debt, has been the hallmark of spend-happy Ontario Liberal governments. It seems for many Ontarians they simply cannot get enough of this fiscally irresponsible and scandal-ridden gang.

Larry Comeau

Ottawa

Back to Top

Conservative carbon tax reversal still possible in Ontario

troymedia.com - Tue Feb 6 2018

Tone: Neutral

When the Ontario Progressive Conservative Party launched its policy platform, the People's Guarantee, the most controversial proposal was implementing a carbon tax.

Back to Top

Liberal legacy waste and debt

North Bay Nugget - Wed Feb 7 2018

Tone: Neutral

Byline: Ross Ayotte

Ad Value: $460

Reach: 11505 Page: A5

To the editor: One must remember our now premier has been in cabinet since 2003 and must be held accountable.

A look at the Liberal record: They added the HST on just about everything we purchase, including home heating fuel, then they added a carbon tax on just about everything we buy, including a 4.3 cent a litre carbon tax to home heating oil and gasoline. Then we must pay HST on top of the carbon tax so now we are paying tax on a tax.

When the Liberals took office, our provincial debt was roughly $138 billion. Today our provincial debt is close to $312 billion and is predicted to rise to $370 billion by 2020-21.

The Liberals claim they balanced the budget for the first time in a decade but the auditor general says the books are not balanced, which is backed up by the Financial Accountability Office report of a $4-billion deficit.

Hydro was 4.3 cent a kWh before they took office. Now it is 6.5 cents a kWh on low peak, 9.5 cents on mid peak and 13.2 cents on peak. And this is with the so-called Fair Hydro Plan of a 25 per cent discount to produce $24 billion in temporary hydro relief which will cost a minimum $45 billion over 29 years if the government can balance the budget 29 consecutive years, which will never happen.

Only the Wynne Liberals would spend a minimum of $45 billion to produce $24 billion in temporary hydro relief. This is a very costly election bribe.

Why did hydro rates go up so much? Let's start with the Liberals refusal to buy cheap Quebec hydro for pennies a kWh in 2010 as they wanted to be a world-leader in wind and solar power, which they never achieved, and chose to sign 20-year contracts for solar power up to 80 cents a kWh and up to 40 cents a kWh for wind power on 20-year contracts.

In 2014 and 2015 OPG had diverted or spilled water at our hydroelectric dams to fully supply 350,000 homes each year, but we still paid wind and solar farms not to produce hydro while we exported hydro for free or at little cost, costing taxpayers $1.25 billion annually. What is Premier Wynne's answer to this - purchase more excess hydro for Ontario from Quebec at a cost of $1 billion a year for seven years, meaning we will be exporting more hydro at a loss.

One has to remember our now premier has been in cabinet since 2003 when the Liberals took office, so you decide if she deserves four more years.

Ross Ayotte

Smiths Falls

Back to Top

Caroline Mulroney touts major change for party in first campaign event | CTV News

www.ctvnews.ca - Tue Feb 6 2018

Tone: Neutral

Mulroney, who is up against former MPP Christine Elliott and former Toronto city councillor Doug Ford, said she would also support cuts in hydro rates and child care rebates if elected as the next premier.

Back to Top

Ego Air

Toronto Sun - Wed Feb 7 2018

Tone: Negative

Byline: Paul McDonald

Ad Value: $368

Reach: 171076 Page: A14

Trudeau is hell-bent on implementing a carbon tax and in the mean time jetting around Canada and the globe on Ego Air, creating a carbon footprint wherever Ego Air lands. Enough is enough - he needs to be shackled to his seat in the House to do the job he was elected to do.

PAUL MCDONALD

(Trudeau is more interested in leaving the country than he is accepting responsibility for his government's actions)

Back to Top

As pipelines create provincial rifts, Trudeau needs to unite Canada

The Globe and Mail - Wed Feb 7 2018

Tone: Negative

Byline: MARTHA HALL FINDLAY

Ad Value: $18,593

Reach: 309154 Page: B4

Martha Hall Findlay is president and CEO of the Canada West Foundation

Are we a country?

At issue is far more than the Trans Mountain pipeline expansion, or a spat between provinces. A fundamental underpinning of our confederation is at risk and the longer the federal government refuses to fight for it itself, the more our federation is diminished. The consequences for the country are dire.

Our 150th anniversary year had barely ended when the government of British Columbia decided, by refusing to allow the expansion of Kinder Morgan Canada Corp.'s Trans Mountain pipeline, that our constitution does not apply to it. Constitutionally, the project is a federal undertaking. It is national infrastructure, in the national interest.

The B.C. government's action is not only unacceptable, it is more than a little rich coming from a province that, as a condition of joining confederation, insisted on getting national infrastructure - the railroad.

Extending that national infrastructure through British Columbia to the sea allowed B.C. to be the gateway for the rest of Canada to the Pacific and beyond.

Vancouver would not exist in any way resembling its success today without that connection from the rest of Canada. Grain, wood, fish, minerals, livestock, manufactured products and, yes, oil and gas - without the ability to transport the fruits of our labours across the country and beyond, in multiple directions, neither B.C. nor Canada as a whole would be as successful as we are, collectively, today. The key word is "collectively."

The drafters of our constitution 150 years ago understood the local pressures politicians faced, the temptation to succumb to them, but at the same time, the need to protect the national interest. Section 92 of the constitution sets out all of the provincial powers, but specifically reserves to the federal Parliament key jurisdiction over shipping lines, railways, canals, telegraphs and other works or undertakings (including, today, pipelines) that connect one province with any other, or beyond. They recognized that, as important as local matters can be (and how tempting they can be for political gain), they cannot be allowed to usurp national interests.

Someone needs to remind British Columbia - and all Canadians - of that. And that someone needs to be the federal government. The Prime Minister was recently quoted as saying, "I'm not going to opine on disagreements between the provinces." This is not - and must not be portrayed as - a battle between two provinces. This is about Canada. It is unfair, inappropriate and sets a dangerous precedent to have one province, in this case Alberta, defend what is in the national interest.

This is not just because the whole country benefits economically from our energy industries.

This is because issues of national interest warrant national action.

The consequences, if the federal government fails to take firm action now, will affect far more than any one industry or region.

This project and too many others have run into delay after delay after delay. Some for good reasons, and improvements have been made. That is how the system is supposed to work. But after all of the delays, all of the community-benefit money committed, all of the years of work to ensure economic participation by virtually all of the Indigenous communities involved (and obtaining their support) - it would be completely understandable if Kinder Morgan, as with the proponents of Energy East, simply gave up.

We cannot let that happen.

Not only would losing this particular piece of infrastructure have immediate negative consequences for the country, it would set a devastating precedent. Special-interest groups would feel empowered to ignore the law.

And the message to any potential investor, domestic or foreign, would be that, like the so-called banana republics of the past, Canada cannot be trusted. The certainty so crucial for investment, already questionable, will be gone.

The Prime Minister has also suggested that if British Columbia prevents the pipeline expansion, the federal government will scrap the promised $1.5-billion Ocean Protection Plan. This is a mistake. First, because insisting on building something that is in the national interest should not need such a quid pro quo. But Canada's coastlines need the protection plan, regardless of whether project is completed.

We need both. Neither should be dependent on the other.

The federal government has said it supports the Trans Mountain expansion But words alone are insufficient. It must act - and act now. This is about far more than a pipeline. It is whether we will stand up for some of the most basic elements of being a country. The federal government's job - the Prime Minister's job - is to protect and defend Canada, the prosperity of Canadians and to act in Canada's national interest. The country needs you to do so. Now, before we do our country irreparable harm.

Back to Top

Let the oil flow

National Post - Wed Feb 7 2018

Tone: Negative

Byline: Ed Lacelle,

Ad Value: $2,628

Reach: 159480 Page: A8

Recent articles in the National Post address the current situation regarding the Trans Mountain Pipeline as an economic necessity for all of Canada. As a resident of Quebec, I couldn't agree more.

The production and responsible distribution of oil and gas to all parts of our Country would result in tremendous economic benefits for all Canadians. The previous Harper government made an honest attempt to facilitate these projects but was frustrated at every turn by radical environmentalists, Indigenous activists, self-serving provincial governments and an unsympathetic press. Unfortunately, no more so than in Quebec where they demonized the Energy East Pipeline project even though they experienced a terrible tragedy with oil transported by train. Quebec would rather import oil from Venezuela and the Middle East and have it shipped up the Saint Lawrence by large tankers. An ecological disaster waiting to happen.

The only pipeline that Quebec will tolerate is the one where massive equalization payments flow through from Ottawa courtesy of Western Canada's wealth. So, contrary to Mr. Ivison, Justin Trudeau isn't showing any leadership on this matter by holding a town-hall meeting in B.C. where he couldn't even stand down a few hecklers. I can assure you that if Trudeau tried to use constitutional powers to force Quebec on any pipeline project, he would make his father's infamous National Energy Program look like a mere irritant. Ed Lacelle, Gatineau, Que.

Back to Top

Government needs to stop the charade around energy development – The Oshawa Express

oshawaexpress.ca - Wed Feb 7 2018

Tone: Neutral

The charade taking place now concerning the Kinder Morgan pipeline should not be fooling anybody who has paid attention to the actual desires of (Alberta Premier Rachel) Notley, (Prime Minister Justin) Trudeau, and (BC Premier John) Horgan.

Back to Top

Do Notley and Trudeau really want a pipeline built — or are they quietly glad BC is blocking it? - The Rebel

www.therebel.media - Wed Feb 7 2018

Tone: Neutral

As we've told you since her election as Alberta's NDP premier, Rachel Notley has been anti-oil for years.

Back to Top

On Trans Mountain, Trudeau needs to become a leader for all of Canada - The Globe and Mail

www.theglobeandmail.com - Tue Feb 6 2018

Tone: Neutral

Are we a country?

At issue is far more than the Trans Mountain pipeline expansion, or a spat between provinces. A fundamental underpinning of our confederation is at risk and the longer the federal government refuses to fight for it itself, the more our federation is diminished. The consequences for the country are dire.

Back to Top