Hi Rose.

The delta between submitted and approved + denied can be based on two things:

- approximately 61k applications have been classified as "inactive" meaning they were not complete or had errors and the applicant did not take action to complete or fix the application (they would have received several notifications to do so). While we advise they need to do so within 90 days or they may need to start again, we actually give them 180 days to do so before we make the application inactive. At that time personal information is deleted as per our privacy and retention policies. Many of these we believe to be from the beginning of the program when applicants were submitting multiple applications. This is new data we are mining since the functionality was put in place in March.

- the other 21k are presumed to be in progress or awaiting consumer action. They would be within the 180 days prior to inactive status.

Happy to discuss further.

Donna.

Donna, can you explain delta between submitted and accepted. Even with rejected the delta is close to 75000. Is that a process timing issue?
