Why is the province proceeding with a transit plan that will eradicate vibrant neighbourhoods?

The decision to proceed with an above ground track (6 lanes) will destroy much of Tiverton Avenue, businesses nearby on Queen Street and many houses on Dundas Street East.

It will likely also destroy some properties on First Avenue near the rail line.

Given all of the expenses of COVID-19, how can the province possibly afford this anyway? By raising taxes much higher - including to the people who will possibly lose their homes or have their peace and quiet disturbed?

I would appreciate a reply.
