JOHN GRAVES SIMCOE.

PROCLAMATION

For the suppression of Vice, Profaneness & Immorality.

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

JOHN GRAVES SIMCOE, Esquire,

Lieutenant Governor & Colonel Commanding His Majesty's Forces, in the Province of Upper Canada.

WHEREAS it is the indispensible duty of all People, and more especially of all Christian Nations, to preserve and advance the Honour and Service of Almighty God; and to discourage and suppress all Vice, Profaneness and Immorality, which if not timely prevented may justly draw down the Divine Vengeance upon Us and our Country? And His Majesty having for the promotion of Virtue, and in tenderness to the best interests of His Subjects, given command for causing all Laws made against Blasphemy, Profaneness, Adultery, Fornication, Polygamy, Incest, Profanation of the Lords Day, Swearing and Drunkeness, to be strictly put in Execution in every part of the Province, I do therefore direct, require and command the Peace Officers and Constables of the several Towns and Townships, to make presentment upon Oath, of any of the Vices before mentioned, to the Justices of the Peace in their Session, or to any of the other temporal Courts: And for the more effectual proceeding herein, all Judges, Justices and Magistrates and all other officers concerned for putting the Laws against Crimes and Offences into execution, are directed and commanded to exert themselves, for the due prosecution and punishment of all persons, who shall presume to offend in any of the kinds aforesaid; and also of all persons that, contrary to their duty, shall be remiss or negligent in putting the said Laws in execution. And I do further charge and command, that this Proclamation be publickly read in all Courts of Justice, on the first day of every Session to be held in the course of this present year, and more especially in such of His Majesty's Courts, as have the Cognizance of Crimes and Offences; recommending the same, to all Christian Ministers of every denomination, to cause the same Proclamation to be read four times in the said year, immediately after Divine Service, in all places of Public Worship, and that they do their utmost Endeavour, to incite their respective Auditors to the practice of Piety and Virtue, and the avoiding of every course, contrary to the pure Morality of the Religion of the Holy Gospel of Jesus Christ.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms at the Government House, NAVY HALL, the Eleventh day of April, in the Year of our Lord One thousand seven Hundred and Ninety-three, and in the Thirty-third Year of His Majesty's Reign.

By His Excellency's Command,
WM. JARVIS, Secretary.

THE KING'S SPEECH

TO BOTH HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT.

December 13, 1792.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

HAVING judged it necessary to embody a part of the militia of this Kingdom, I have in pursuance of the provisions of the law, called you together within the time limited for that purpose, it is on every account, a great satisfaction to me to meet you in Parliament at this conjuncture. I should have been happy if I could have announced to you the secure and undisturbed continuance of all the blessings which my subjects have derived from a state of tranquility; but events have recently occurred which require our united vigilance and exertion in order to preserve the advantages which we have hitherto enjoyed.

The seditious practices which have been in a great measure checked by your firm and explicit declaration in the last session, and by the general concurrence of my people in the same sentiments, have of late been more openly renewed, and with increased activity. A spirit of tumult and disorder (the natural consequence of such practices) has shewn itself in acts of riot and insurrection, which required the interposition of a military force in support of the Civil Magistrate. The industry employed to excite discontent on various pretexts and in different parts of the kingdom has appeared to proceed from a design to attempt the destruction of our happy constitution, and the subversion of all order and government; and this design has evidently been pursued in connection, and concert with persons in foreign countries.

I have carefuly observed a strict neutrality in the present war on the continent, and have uniformly abstained from any interference with respect to the internal affairs of France; but it is impossible for me to see, without the most serious uneasiness, the strong and increasing indications which have appeared there of an intention to excite disturbances in other countries, to disregard the rights of neutral nations, and to pursue views of conquest and agrandizement, as well as to adopt towards my allies the States General (who have observed the said neutrality with myself) measures which are neither conformable to the law of nations, nor to the positive stipulations of existing treaties. Under all these circumstances I have felt it my indispensible duty to have recourse to those means of prevention and internal defence with which I am entrusted by law; and I have also thought it right to take steps for making some augmentation of my naval and military force, being persuaded that these exertions are necessary in the present state of affairs, and are best calculated both to maintain internal tranquility, and to render a firm and temperate conduct effectual for preserving the blessings of peace.

Nothing will be neglected on my part that can contribute to that important object, consistently with the security of my kingdoms, and with the faithfull performance of engagements which we are bound equally by interest and honour to fulfil.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons,

I have ordered the eſtimates of the enſuing year to be laid before you; and I have no doubt that you will be ready to make a due proviſion for the ſeveral branches of the public ſervice.

You will certainly join with me in lamenting any neceſſity for extraordinary expences, which may for a time prevent the application of additional ſums beyond thoſe which are already annually appropriated to the reduction of the public debt, or retard the relief which my ſubjects might have derived from a further diminution of taxes; but I am confident you will feel that thoſe great ends will ultimately be beſt promoted by ſuch exertions as are neceſſary for our preſent and future ſafety and tranquility; and it is a great conſolation to me to reflect, that you will find ample reſources for effectually defraying the expence of vigourous preparations, from the exceſs of the actual revenue beyond the ordinary expenditure.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I have great pleaſure in acquainting you, that the brilliant ſucceſſes of the Britiſh arms in India, under the able conduct of the Marquis of Cornwallis, have led to the termination of the war, by an advantageous and honorable peace, the terms of which are peculiarly ſatisfactory to me, from their tendency to ſecure the future tranquility of the Britiſh dominions in that part of the world.

Your intentions will now naturally be directed to ſuch meaſures for the future government of thoſe valuable poſſeſſions, as ſhall appear, from experience and full conſideration, moſt likely to provide for their internal proſperity, and to ſecure the important advantages which may be derived from thence to the commerce and revenue of this country.

I am perſuaded it will be the object of your immediate conſideration, to adopt ſuch meaſures as may be neceſſary under the preſent circumſtances, for enforcing obedience to the laws, and for repreſſing every attempt to diſturb the peace and tranquility of theſe kingdoms.

You will be ſenſible how much depends on the reſult of your deliberations, and your uniform conduct is the beſt pledge, that nothing will be wanting on your part which can contribute to the preſent ſecurity and permanent advantage of the country.

I retain a deep and unalterable ſenſe of the repeated proofs which I have received of your cordial and affectionate attachment to me; and I place an entire reliance on the continuance of thoſe ſentiments, as well as on your firm determination to defend and maintain that conſtitution which has ſo long protected the liberties, and promoted the happineſs of every claſs of my ſubjects.

In endeavouring to preſerve and tranſmit to poſterity the ineſtimable bleſſings which, under the favour of Providence, you have yourſelves experienced, you may be aſſured of my zealous and cordial co-operation; and your joint efforts will, I doubt not, be rendered completely effectual by the decided ſupport of a free and loyal people.

PARLIAMENTARY INTELLIGENCE.

HOUSE OF LORDS.
Friday, December 21.
ALIENS BILL.

Lord Lanſdowne in conformity to the notice which he had given on Thurſday, brought forward two motions which he wiſhed to ſubmit to the conſideration of the houſe, previous to the diſcuſſion of the order of the day on the alien bill. He conceived that what he had to offer would, in a great meaſure, if adopted, tend to make the bill in queſtion unneceſſary, as it went to that principle, which was the firſt principle of his heart—peace. He ſtated that the whole tenor of his political conduct was uniformly conſiſtent whether in or out of adminiſtration, and that he never had the moſt diſtant view of ſacrificing the happineſs, the welfare, and the conſtitutional principles of his country to perſonal aggrandizement, or to political party intereſt. He therefore came forward pure and emaculate in the preſent buſineſs, and with a view of conciliating, if poſſible, thoſe meaſures which now wore ſo hoſtile a proſpect to this empire.

He thought, no doubt, what moſt ſenſible men thought, that the preſent times were big with danger. There were by every account, and from the charitable ſocieties particularly, a proof of 8,000 Frenchmen being in the metropolis, ſupported by public bounty. What was to be the ultimate fate of theſe perſons ſeemed not under conſideration. Were they to be for ever a burthen on the uncommon benevolence of this country? Was no mode to be pointed out by which they might be again returned amicably to their native land, or patriated in ſome other ſoil, where by induſtry they ſhould earn an honeſt livelihood? He wiſhed not to ſtop the current of public benevolence—he deſired not to ſhut the hand of charity—but the ſupport of 8,000 perſons in addition to our own pauper liſt became a burthen indeed. It was his intention therefore to alleviate this burthen, by preventing its increaſe to an annual tax on the natural charity of Great Britain. Thus far his firſt motion meant to extend.

The ſecond, he ſaid, went to a propoſition which might make war unneceſſary—which might relieve LOUIS the XVIth. from his preſent unfortunate ſituation, and which might make this country and France ultimately on a reciprocal footing of mutual intereſt.

He wiſhed it not to be underſtood by what he advanced, that he approved of the meaſures purſued in France; all civilized nations muſt look on their conduct (in ſome reſpect) with horror. The murders committed were unpardonable—Humanity ſhuddered at the idea—Nature revolted at the atrociouſneſs of the facts. To prevent therefore, and not to provoke repetition, ought to be the line of conduct which Great Britain ſhould purſue.

Our allies, it was true, were valuable, but the Dutch did not ſeem prone to diſpute the navigation of the Scheldt—nay it was ſaid they would not arm on that account. If they did not, pray why ſhoula we? But miniſters, he ſuppoſed, were well warranted in their preſent conduct.—They had ſomething more than what he aluded to for the juſtification of the preſent armaments.

Much had been ſaid of the turbulence of the times—and there might perhaps be ſome reaſons for the remark. Some Conſtitutional Societies had perhaps gone too far in their zeal for a reform of abuſes—others were more moderate; but he could never permit ſuch an idea to enter his mind as that the people of England looked to a reformation. For his own part he could ſay, that he was as a loyal ſubject as any in the nation, and that if ever he was committed to the Tower, it muſt be for what he had ſpoken and done in the houſe, and not for what he had ſaid and acted out of doors.

He lamented the fate of Louis XVI. and ſhould wiſh with all his heart to turn aſide that dreadful blow which hung over his head. This country and the voice of its Parliament had great weight in France, and humanity urged us to exert our power. There was a miniſter from the republican government of that country now here, and through him, or by an embaſſy to Paris, the ſentiments of the executive government of Great Britain might be made known. The idea was not a new one, for when Charles I. was on his trial in this Country, the ſtates of Holland interfered. His lordſhip read an extract from the journals to that effect.

The two motions which he meant to ſubmit to the houſe were,

1ſt. That an humble addreſs ſhould be preſented to his Majeſty, praying him to ſend to the National Convention of France, an interceeding deſire in favour of Louis XVI.

2d. That an application ſhould be made to the executive power of France, ſtating the number of emigrants in this country, and propoſing with the conſent and aſſiſtance of that nation, to ſend them to the weſtern part of Canada."

The firſt of theſe motions, of which the above is only the ſubſtance, being put,

Lord Grenville roſe, and in a moſt admirable ſpeech, replied to and confuted every argument and ſuggeſtion uſed by the noble Marquis.

He acknowledged the fact in reſpect to the number of emigrants, but denied the inference drawn from that fact. Numbers it was true, were ſupported by public bounty; but of theſe oppreſſed and harmleſs men there were no evil intentions to be entertained. It was from other emigrants that the danger aroſe; and as it was impoſſible at this conjuncture to diſcriminate with exactneſs the good from the bad, all were put under ſimilar reſtraints by the preſent bill.

He was never more aſtoniſhed in his life than at the language which fell from the noble marquis. What idea would Europe entertain of this country ſending an humble requeſt to a banditti, who had ſworn vengeance againſt all the crowned heads in Europe—who had been guilty in their new ſyſtem, of crimes which froze the warm blood of humanity with horror,—which were reprobated in every civilized part of the globe, and which were looked on with horror by every man who valued honorable life, conſtitutional liberty and juſt property. What! was Great Britain to humble herſelf into the character of a petitioner to the National Convention of France?—was this Empire, whoſe power ſo long awed that ambitious nation—whoſe courage and ſtrength ſo often ſubdued and chaſtiſed her arrogance, to become a ſuppliant and at the time when murder, robbery, and cruelty, in the moſt ſhocking extreme, were then practiſed, he would not ſay the avowed principles of her government?

No—he thanked God, the example of loyalty which had manifeſted itſelf throughout the whole kingdom—the unanimity which reigned in the hearts of all ranks of ſubjects to ſupport the honor and dignity of the crown, give ſuch a contradiction to French Principles, as muſt teach that nation, when their new free government will permit the people to read truth, that the people of England abhor their conduct, and will hold no communication with their preſent political ſyſtem.'

In reſpect to what the noble marquis advanced concerning the navigation of the Scheldt he ſhould apprehend that the information of the Dutch having given up the point was totally without a juſt foundation—for the direct contrary was the fact. Holland would reſiſt, and England muſt ſupport her ally.

As to Great Britain interfering in reſpect to the unfortunate king, he was confident that could have no good effect. It might indeed debaſe the conſequence of this country without alleviating the misfortune of the French Monarch.

He was ſurpriſed that the noble Marquis, in the motions he had made, ſhould ſo word them as to inſinuate an idea, that the Parliament of Great Britain by acceding to them ſhould at once perjure that faith of nations, by which they acknowledged the exiſtence of a French King. This would, indeed, be ſetting an example to our own Country, which might do an eſſential injury to the conſtitution.

In reſpect to what fell from the noble Marquis, as to the harmleſs diſpoſition of the people of this country, he verily believed, as he ſaid before, that they were all united in one common cauſe—but that there had been the moſt inſidious means uſed to detach them from their allegiance due to their ſovereign, was a fact which could not be denied; and what added to the atrocity of this truth was, that they were no mean or vulgar perſons who had made the attempt. But the hearts of Engliſhmen were made of incorruptible materials, and their conſtitutional integrity was an antidote againſt the poiſon of republicaniſm.

He had no apology to make to the houſe, or to the noble Marquis for giving his direct and poſitive negative to the motions now under conſideration. They tended not to conciliate—they were replete with political miſchief.

Was there a man of ſenſe in the kingdom who would ſeriouſly take upon him to ſay that the kind of executive government now in authority in France, would enter into treaty about the preſervation of a King they have doomed to deſtruction? It was idle and ridiculous to ſuppoſe any ſuch matter could have effect, and as to our aſking permiſſion of France (for it could not be conſtrued in any other light) to diſpoſe of their emigrants that was indeed a debaſement to which he hoped he ſhould never ſee this country bend. We were not in that abject ſtate to be dictated to by any country in the univerſe. We were at a ſummit of perfection which was the envy and admiration of ſurrounding empires, and it certainly roſe his indignation to ſuppoſe, that ſo eminently fortified by all that could make a kingdom reſpectable, we ſhould meanly ſolicit a new formed aſſembly, who had dethroned that king whoſe royalty we acknowledged, to grant our petition for the life of that King. Surely the noble Marquis could not be ſerious in ſuch a propoſition; he could not ſuppoſe that the dignity of the ſenate of this country would ſo far debaſe itſelf; and with that ſuppoſition moſt firmly fixed in his mind, he gave his determined negative to the motion.

The Duke of Norfolk wiſhed for conciliating meaſures, and that war ſhould be avoided if poſſible. He was therefore againſt all harſh expreſſions which might tend to irritate; and conſiſtent with the dignity of this country he could have no reaſonable objection to the motion made by the noble Marquis. The manner in which the title of the unfortunate Louis was introduced might be altered. When peace was the object we ſhould not quarrel about words. He wiſhed it however to be underſtood that if war was determined on, the moſt vigourous meaſures ought to be purſued: but ſtill he thought there was great room for negotiation, and that an amicable one might be effected. It was true we had no official notice of the French Government having undergone a change, but the fact ſo loudly ſpoke for itſelf that it would be ridiculous to deny it.

Lord Lanſdowne explained and ſaid no man bore a ſtronger regard to the conſtitution of this country than he did, but as it ſeemed to be the general ſenſe of the houſe that his motion would not meet their approbation, he ſhould withdraw it. But as to the ſecond, he ſhould inſiſt on having it put, that it might ſtand on the journals of Parliament.

Lord Loughborough was clearly and decidedly of opinion in reſpect to the firſt motion of the noble Lord, that the interference of this coutry to ſave the French King would have the ſame effect that the interference of the States of Holland (mentioned by the noble Marquis) had in reſpect to the unhappy Charles. The tempers and diſpoſitions of the uſurped powers, then and now were the ſame. The Dutch interfered on the 29 of January, and on the 30th. the Republicans put their Sovereign to death.

The learned lord was ſorry he could not agree in the arguments adduced by the noble Marquis,—becauſe he had a high reſpect for his abilities—but there was ſo much, which militated againſt the real honour, dignity, and national intereſt of this Country, that he could neither approve the firſt motion nor accede to the ſecond. This was a time of what is called general unanimity, and that unanimity being requiſite to the ſafety and welfare of the ſtate, he muſt oppoſe every meaſure which tended to interrupt it's ſalutary operations.

His lordſhip took a view of the French government as it now ſtands, and in the ſtrongeſt terms reprobated it's proceedings. He ſaid all property was deſtroyed—all juſtice annihilated—inheritance was torn from the ſon, poſſeſſion was wreſted from the father. Whatever could civilize ſociety was blaſphemed—Whatever could tend to the happineſs of mankind was annihilated. Were we then to treat with ſuch a people—Were we to acknowledge their outrages againſt every thing that conduced to the happineſs of mankind; and were we, by acknowledging the authority of ſuch a violation of law and equity to ſet an example for ever turning the conſtitution of this country? The ſenſe of the people without doors were againſt ſuch fanaticiſm—and there exiſted no doubt but the ſenſe of the ſenate would always be the ſenſe of the people.

Marquis Lanſdowne withdrew his firſt motion in form, and ſaid that not withſtanding, it had met the general diſapprobation of the houſe, it gave him an opportunity to declare his ſentiments.

The Duke of Norfolk ſaid, his ſentiments were ever coincident with whatever could tend to the benefit of his country, and that he thought the ſecond motion might be amended to.

Lord Kenyon put the motion and it was negatived without any diviſion.

Lord Grenville then moved, that the bill ſhould be read a ſecond time, and he entered into a very able detail of all its claules, and the neceſſity by which each was warranted.

Lord Lanſdowne replied, and adduced the circumſtances of the American war as a matter of argument why we ſhould negociate, inſtead of preparing for hoſtilities. He complained of the infringement of the conſtitution of this country, which hitherto was an aſylum of liberty to foreigners—and he added that "theſe foreigners might be of dangerous conſequence to this country, having emigrated from their own becauſe they were inimical to the principles of revolution.

Lord Grenville to this give a ſharp and ſevere reply.

The Duke of Portland declared his ſentiments to be, that however he might on other political principles have diſagreed with the members of the preſent adminiſtration, he moſt perfectly approved of their preſent conduct, and particularly in the letter and ſpirit of that bill which was now come under conſideration.

In doing this he wiſhed not to be underſtood, that he had become a political convert to the preſent miniſters. He conſidered their conduct, in a great meaſure, the cauſe of what had happened—but the preſent was not a time to discuss it. His grace gave a decisive negative to the motion of the noble Marquis.

Lord Lauderdale, said, he was acquainted with what passed in France, mentioned a few words in the Habeas Corpus act, and seemed to think that an address should be sent to France.

The Duke of Leeds argued in a forcible manner against the present doctrines of France, and was clearly and decidedly of opinion that the bill ought to pass. He said he had been informed that French troops had been landed on the coasts of Norfolk and Suffolk, as French emigrant soldiers drove by stress of weather there. This was an alarming circumstance, and the vigilance of government cannot be too great. His grace said the bill was a most unexceptionable one.

Lords Hawkesbury and Stormont both supported the bill, and the question being put that it should be read a second time, it was carried, and the bill committed for next day, to which time the house adjourned.

Extract from the QUEBEC GAZETTE of the 14th. February.

On Friday morning last a fire broke out in the dwelling house of Mr. Andrew Cameron, in the Lower Town market place, which notwithstanding every assistance that could be brought, entirely burnt it down. It was first observed by Mr. Cameron's Daughter, who slept in the third story, being awaked about three o'clock in the Morning, by the smoke and noise of the fire, in her bed chamber. She instantly alarmed the rest of the family, and by that means they luckily had time to escape without personal injury from the flames. But, besides the loss of the house, the whole of the furniture, plate, and wearing apparel of the whole family, and also a quantity of merchandize which lay in the front shop, are totally destroyed. The only thing saved is a quantity of goods which Mr. Cameron had consigned to him upon commission, and which with the assistance of Messrs. Ross and Hatfs, he was enabled to throw out before the fire reached them, owing to their being lodged in the back part of the lower story, which the flames penetrated last.

Mr. Cameron thinks it incumbent on him to mention his obligation to Guillaume Tangué, a young man in the service of Mr. Hunt, who was the first to give assistance, and whose aid was of essential service.

Such was the rapidity of the fire, and the alarming progress it had made before effectual relief could be brought, that it was with the utmost difficulty the adjacent buildings could be saved. Two houses on the opposite side of St. Peter's street had catched the flames, and the roof of the Church in the market place was on fire for a considerable time, but fortunately neither of them suffered any material damage,

It is but justice to remark (and in this Mr. Cameron joins with us) that every possible effort was made, on this unfortunate occasion, by the fire society, the Troops, and all classes of Citizens. The thanks of the Public are particularly due to His Royal Highness Prince EDWARD, His Excellency General CLARKE, and the Officers of the Garrison, for the exertion inspired by their example, and the care which was taken of the property of the Citizens, by their order and personal attention.

NIAGARA, 18th. April.

We understand that Commissioners from the United States for the desirable purpose of establishing a permanent peace with the Indians, will come to this place in their way to Sandusky, very early in next June.

We have reason to believe that the Legislative Council and house of Assembly of this Provin will be assembled upon Wednesday the 28th. of next Month.

His Majesty's Sloop the Caldwell sailed the 5th. instant for Fort Ontario and Kingston.

We have had a remarkably mild Winter, the Thermometer in the severest time has not been lower than 9 degrees above O. by Farenheit's Scale. Lake Erie has not been frozen over and there has been very little ice on Lake Ontario.

We understand from extracts from the European News Papers inserted in those of the United States, that the Duke of Brunswick has commenced a Winter Campaign, and apparently with success, that the Hessians had defeated a party of the French, and taken two pieces of Canon, that Franckfort was retaken by the Duke of Brunswick with the French Garrison, and it seems probable that M. Custine who has retired to Metz, would find it difficult to maintain his Post, or to retreat further.

On Monday evening arrived in the River His Majesty's armed Schooner the Onodoga in company with the Lady Dorchester, Merchantman, after an agreeable passage of 36 Hours.——The following Gent. came passengers in J. Small, Esq; Clerk to the Executive Council.—Lieut. M'Can, of the 60th. Regt.—Capt. Thomas Fraser, Mr. J. Denelon.—Mr. Joseph Forsyth, Merchant.—Mr. P. Smith, Merchant.—Mr. La Crawford.—Capt. Arch. M'Donell.— —— Hatheway.

FRANCE.

NATIONAL CONVENTION.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 15.

The final JUDGMENT of LOUIS XVI.

THE nominal call being terminated, M. Vergniaux, the President; rose, and spoke as follows:

"Out of 735 voters, 26 have been absent by leave; 5 by illness, one for causes unknown; 26 have made divers declarations: and 693 have voted for the question in the affirmative—I do declare, in the name of the Convention, "that Louis Capet is guilty of high treason, and of attempts against the general safety of the state."

Here the second question was put,

"Shall the appeal to the people take place?"

A great number of members spoke for and against the appeal; and almost every of them seemed apprehensive of all the complicated horrors of civil war.

When Louvet and Manuel gave their vote respecting this question, they expressed in the strongest language, their indignation at having heard one of the nearest relatives of Louis vote for his death.

Soon after M. Egalite came to vote on the second question, he said—"I only mind my duty, and I do vote that the appeal shall not take place."

Clootz voted against the appeal.

The nominal call was determined at eleven o'clock, and the following was the result:

Members absent	20
Members who did not give their votes	10
Sick Members	3
Absent Members without cause	3
Members for the Appeal	283
Members against the Appeal	424
Majority against the Appeal	280

Here Barrere, the President, rose, and said;—

"The National Convention doth decree, that the sentence which it shall pronounce upon Louis Capet, shall not be referred to the appeal of the people."

January 17. The National Convention, after a sitting of near 34 hours, have voted, that the punishment of DEATH SHALL BE INFLICTED ON LOUIS XVI. This sentence was carried by a majority of rather more than a hundred. Fifty of this number, tho' they voted for death differed in opinion from the rest in respect to the time when it should be inflicted, some thinking it should not be put in execution till the end of the war, and others proposing that it should be postponed till the sense of the people should be taken. Petion and many of the leading members voted for death with these restrictions.—The King is perfectly reconciled to his fate.

Extract of another Albany Paper 4th. April.

On the 14th. of March, arrived at Charleston, S. C. the ship James, from Briſtol, which place ſhe left the 28th of January. The former accounts of the execution of the King of France on the 21ſt. of January, are confirmed by this veſſel. The moſt material particulars by the James are, in brief, as follows:—On Sunday the 20th January the executive council aſſembled early in the morning, with the mayor and other officers, to concert meaſures for the execution of the decree againſt Louis the XVIth. Having concerted the meaſures of execution, at 2 o'clock, P. M. they were ſent to Louis, who was at the ſame time waited upon by the preſident of the executive council. The three extracts of the decree of the national convention were then read by the ſecretary of the executive council. To which Louis anſwered by reading a written paper, ſigned by himſelf, making known his laſt requeſt—which ran thus—" I demand a delay of three days, in order to make the neceſſary preparations to appear in the preſence of GOD! I demand for that purpoſe, to ſend for and ſee freely the perſon whom I ſhall name; the perſon whom I demand is, M. Eſcheauvoux de Foremont; he lodges at 483, Rue de Barq.

" I demand that his perſon be ſecured from all diſturbance, from all apprehenſions on account of the laſt offices of charity which he ſhall render me.

" I demand to be freed from that perpetual inſpection, which the Council general has eſtabliſhed over me for ſome months.

" I demand in this interval, to be able to ſee my family as often as I ſhall requeſt, and without witneſs.

" I would requeſt, that the national convention would immediately proceed to deliberate on the fate of my family, and permit them to retire freely wherever they may think proper.

" I recommend to the nation all the perſons who were attached to me. There are many of them who have expended all their fortu to purchaſe places under the new government, and no, having now loſt their ſole dependence, muſt be in circumſtances of want. Among my penſioners were many aged and indigent perſons, who had no other means of ſupport except the penſion which I gave them. (Signed)

LOU IS."

Done at the Temple, January 20, 1793.

On which one of the members obſerved, " Louis Capet has only made theſe demands, which you have now heard, to the deputation of the executive council, becauſe they did not inform him of the decree paſſed yeſterday on my propoſition, in which the greater part of his requeſts are anticipated. I demand on that ground, that we paſs to the order of the day. The aſſembly paſſed to the order of the day accordingly.

EXECUTION OF LOUIS XVI

Paris, January 22, 1793.

Louis was executed yeſterday, at the Place de Louis XV. at a quarter paſt ten o'clock in the morning. He was conducted thither in the mayor's carriage, accompanied by his confeſſor and two gendermes. Great ſilence was preſerved during the proceſſion, but when he reached the fatal ſpot, the noiſe of drums and trumpets was great. He aſcended the ſcaffold with firmneſs, and made a ſign he had ſome thing to ſay: little however was heard on account of the noiſe, except, " I die innocent! I forgive you all!" The ſentence was immediately executed, and Vive la Nation, reſounded on all ſides.

The whole place, and the avenues, were filled with troops of the line.

There was no mention, of any injury being offered, or intended by the French to the Queen or her children. Neither did the French accounts ſay a word of any intention to bring her to her trial; the probability is that herſelf and royal family will be treated with that reſpect which is due to their preſent unhappy ſituation.

A member of the convention who voted for his death was attacked in a coffee-houſe and killed. This it is feared is but the beginning of a ſcene of bloodſhed, which will not ſoon be terminated.

We collect the following information from a Paper of the United States of the 11th. February laſt.

December 24.

A very numerous meeting of the Whig Club was held on Tueſday at the London Tavern, were the ſociety dined. Mr. Fox was in the chair. When his health was given in the uſual manner, he roſe and profeſſed the ſtrongeſt aſſurances of his warm attachment to the Conſtitution. The Duke of Portland expreſſed the ſame ſentiments; and Mr. Fox having retired, Mr. Grey was called to the chair, who obſerved, that the deſign of the friends of the people, was ſimply to procure a reform in the houſe of Commons, as tending to remove the grievances complained of. The meeting broke up about 10 o'clock.

December 11.

Yeſterday an order was iſſued from the War Office for the whole army of Great Britain to be augmented ten men a company, cavalry as well as infantry.

A new ſtaff was likewiſe appointed by his Majeſty—Major General Harcourt is one of the number.

From all accounts Public as well as private there exiſts no doubt but Great Britain will evince a ſpirit of Loyalty unanimity and attachment to the Conſtitution unexampled in any period of our hiſtory. The number of ſeditious is contemptible indeed, and is daily diminiſhing.

LEEDS, December 22.

On Monday laſt purſuant to public advertiſement, the Gentlemen, Clergy, Merchants, Traders, and other Inhabitants of this Borough, attended at the Moor Hall, in this Town, when by reaſon of the ſmallneſs of the place, R. R. Bramley, Eſq; Mayor, adjourned the meeting to the choir of St. Peter's Church.—A very reſpectable and numerous concourſe of people, of almoſt every denomination aſſembled, and after the Mayor's addreſs the meeting was opened by Mr. Read—who profeſſed himſelf a Diſſenter, and eſteemed himſelf happy in having ſo public an opportunity of declaring his firm attachment to the Conſtitution of this Kingdom, as eſtabliſhed at the glorious Revolution of 1688; and tho' he was not particularly authoriſed by any body of Diſſenters to ſtand up in their name, he was very confident they held the ſame ſentiments, and would on all occaſions, moſt readily avow them. It is unneceſſary further to detail what Mr. Read ſaid, but the whole of his ſpeech was univerſally well received.

Mr. Recorder—then addreſſed the audience in a very able ſpeech of conſiderable length interrupted by frequent burſts of applauſe. After avowing his ſtrong attachment to the Eſtabliſhed Church, he ſaid, I rejoice to hear this Gentleman avow ſuch honorable principles. I have lived in the ſtricteſt intimacy with ſeveral Diſſenters for many years, and never heard a diſaffected word proceed from their mouths in my whole life. In every communion there are always ſome who reflect nothing but diſgrace; yet 'tis very unjuſt that a whole body ſhould be ſtigmatized and cenſured for that unworthy few.—there are two things that impreſs my mind at this juncture, which ſeem to render ſuch a meeting as this indiſpenſably neceſſary: the one is, the inculcation of Republican principles, tending to ſubvert our happy Conſtitution: the other, the unwarrantable and wicked notion imbibed by ſome of the lower claſs of people reſpecting an equalization of Property.

No man in the world is a greater lover, of every practical liberty than myſelf, and I moſt willingly would ſacrifice my deareſt intereſts to a majority of my countrymen. Not a man in the world can deteſt tiranny more than I do; but, at the ſame time feel myſelf bound to oppoſe every impending outrage of lawleſs anarchy. Former ages have recorded the dread commotions of an Engliſh Republic; and experience being the beſt teacher, from their ills may we learn wiſdom.

The preſent form of government has long been tried, and found happily calculated for the valuable purpoſes of protecting our commerce and enriching our Country. I behold with admiration the goodly ſtructure which the wiſdom of our anceſtors raiſed, and every the meaneſt individual of us feels its benign effects, but let us not then wilfully pull it upon our heads, and madly burry ourſelves in the diſmal ruins. Where repairs are wanting, for God's ſake, let them be made. Every human inſtitution from time to time ſtands in need of them. Let them be honourably brought forward; let each ſide reaſon calmy about them when they meet, as they are accuſtomed to do about matters of far more trifling importance; and no doubt but every real grievance will meet with redreſs. I have ſpent the beſt part of my time in peace amongſt you, and ſhould be verry ſorry to have my few remaining days unhappily clouded by the jarrings of faction, tumult and confuſion.

I muſt beg your indulgence (ſaid he) a little longer, while I add a few words on the equalization of property. I beleive this idea is by no means univerſal amongſt the poor of Leeds, 'tis but ſome malignant ſpirits, who have nothing to loſe, who wiſh to diſturb the public tranquility, and avail themſelves of the moment to pillage and plunder. Was property divided, commerce muſt ſtagnate. What farmer would plow or ſow his field if he could not ſell his corn? Such an equality muſt plunge the nation into all the horrors of poverty, famine and diſtreſs, would make the rich unhappy, and the poor wretched. Who muſt be merchant? Where the capital? Who would labour? Who muſt pay wages? Or who would like to have his week's wages divided on a Saturday night amongſt a tribe of lazy fellows, too indolent to work for themſelves? Yet theſe, and ten thouſand more lamentable calamities, would attend the putting in practice ſuch abſurd notions.

I have not a doubt of our being perfectly unanimous in ſupport of the preſent happy Conſtitution, and teſtifying our juſt abhorrence of ſuch deteſted ſchemes of levelling and equality.

Mr. Blayds then urged that he had had an opportunity of ſeeing moſt of the Kingdoms of Europe, and had ſtudied their governments a good deal, which had much endeared him to his native country. After which the declaration was read and unanimouſly agreed to.

DECLARATION

In ſupport of the Conſtitution of Great Britain.

WE, the gentlemen, clergy, merchants, treaders, freeholders, and other inhabitants of the borough of Leeds, whoſe names are hereunto ſubſcribed, perceiving with the deepeſt concern, that attempts are made to circulate opinions contrary to the deareſt intereſt of Britons, and ſubverſive of thoſe principles which have produced and preſerved our moſt invaluable priviledges, feel it a duty we owe to our country, ourſelves and our poſterity, to invite all our fellow ſubjects to join with us in the expreſſion of a ſincere and firm attachment to the conſtitution of theſe kingdoms, formed in remote, and improved in ſucceeding ages, and under which the glorious revolution in 1688 was effected, a conſtitution wiſely framed for the diffuſion of happineſs and true liberty, and which poſſeſſes the diſtinguiſhed merit, that it has on former occaſions been, and we truſt will in future, be found competent to correct its errors, and reforms its abuſes.

Our experience of the improvements in agriculture and manufactures, of the flouriſhing ſtate of navigation and commerce, and of increaſing population, ſtill further impel us to make this public declaration, our determined reſolution to ſupport, by every means in our power, the ancient and moſt excellent conſtitution of Great Britain, and a government by Kings, Lords and Commons, and to exert our beſt endeavours to impreſs on the minds of thoſe connected with us, a reverence for and a due ſubmiſſion to the laws of their country, which have hitherto preſerved the liberty, protected the property, and encreaſed the enjoyments of a free and proſperous people.

The populace then called for " God ſave the King." It was immediately ſung, and called for again, with accompaniment of the organ. The people repaired from the choir to the body of the church and galleries; when the organ and a band of muſic played, aſſiſted by the chorus of a great number of voices, Official Particulars of the recent action at Hockheim, between the French and the combined Pruſſian and Auſtrian armies.

Head Quarters, Hockheim Jan. 7. 1793.

Yeſterday afternoon his Pruſſian Majeſty, accompanied by his Serene Highneſs the Duke of Brunſwick, arrived here, from the action which took place at Hockheim. His Majeſty honoured the Theatre with his preſence, and went afterward to the ball given by his Royal Highneſs the Prince Royal of Pruſſia.

All we know of the action is, that it was very ſmart on both ſides.

The French troops ſtationed at Caſſel, under the command of General Newinger, wanted to force their way to Hockheim, but the Heſſian and Pruſſian troops conteſted this paſſage with that valour which they are ſo renowned for.

Prince Hohenloe whoſe head quarters are at Weiſbaden, arrived likewiſe in the field of battle, and attacked the French in the flank, which forced them to make a precipitate retreat to their entrenchments at Caſſel. On this occaſion the Pruſſian General Wolfrath had his horſe ſhot under him.

When the King of Pruſſia entered Hockheim, twelve Frenchmen, who were concealed in the tower above the town gate, fired down with muſquets and carabines upon his Majeſty, who was then very cloſe but providentially eſcaped without being hurt. A Heſſian detachment immediately ruſhed into the tower, and cut thoſe murderous French banditti in pieces.

The French left 300 men dead and wounded on the field. The Heſſian Chaſſeurs have ſuffered conſiderably.

This afternoon 160 Frenchmen, and 12 pieces of cannon were brought in here, preceded by twelve trumpeters, as trophies of the engagement.

NATIONAL CONVENTION.

Saturday Feb. 15.

Letter from Lieut. Gen. MIRANDA.

"Head Quarters General at Ruremonde, Dec. 11.

"The citadel at Antwerp being taken, and the navigation of the Scheldt open, I marched forward on the fixth current with the army under my command to attack Auſtrian Gueldres,—This march of 38 leagues, for the moſt part over a wild country, was executed with aſtoniſhing order and rapidity. On our arrival at the Meuſe, we found ſeveral poſts of the enemy, which the vanguard eaſily repulſed, having taken ſome of them priſoners. We took poſſeſſion alſo without oppoſition of the towns of Weſem and Wirt, belonging to Auſtrian Gueldres, and of all the territory on this ſide of the Meuſe. We then croſſed that river at the town of Weſem, by means of ſome boats, as the enemy had deſtroyed all their flying bridges. In ſhort, with 3000 infantry, and 300 huſſars, we attacked our enemies, who, to the number of 3000 infantry, and 300 cavalry, had retired to Ruremond. At break of day the head of our army having appeared before Ruremond, found the bridge on the Roer burnt. Our cavalry finding a ford, paſſed the river, and the infantry effected a paſſage, by procuring puntoons. At nine in the morning, our troops entered the capital of Gueldres in triumph, admiſt the acclamations of the inhabitants, who, in their joy, invoked liberty, and bleſſed the French who had brought them that preſent.

"I then found by the beſt information, the enemy, to the number of 3500 regular troops, commanded by General Gentreuil, had retired precipitately at five o'clock in the morning. The Auſtrian council, or government of the Netherlands, who had taken refuge here, did the ſame four or five days before. My van-guard, which I immediately ſent in purſuit of the enemy, will not fail to come up with him in their flight.—Some of the inhabitants of Pruſſian Gueldres have already preſented themſelves before me to offer me their ſervices, and to ſolicit the ſame happineſs which Auſtrian Gueldres muſt enjoy under the Egis of France.

(Signed) MIRANDA.

After the reading of the above, Cambon in the name of the military and Diplomatic committees, ſaid, that the progreſs of Liberty ſhould no longer be checked. "You muſt," ſaid he, "freely declare your revolutionary power in every country which we enter. You muſt overturn eſtabliſhed conſtitutions, and convoke primary aſſemblies. This inſtead of infringing on the ſovereignty of nations is eſtabliſhing it. I now preſent a decree for that purpoſe.

I. The Generals in all thoſe countries, which are, or may be occupied by our armies ſhall immediately proclaim in the name of the republic, the abolition of the ancient contributions, nobility, taxes, feudal rights, real and perſonal ſervitude, the excluſive right of hunting and fiſhing, and all priviledges. They ſhall declare to the people, that they bring them peace, liberty and fraternity.

II. They ſhall declare at the ſame time that the conſtituted authorities are ſuppreſſed. They ſhall proclaim the ſovereignty of the people. They ſhall convoke the primaries aſſemblies to elect Judges and proviſional adminiſtrators, and ſhall poſt up the proclamation of this decree.

III. No one can be admitted into the primary aſſembly, nor be elected as a Judge or adminiſtrator, if he has not taken an oath to be faithful to liberty and equality, and if he has not renounced all the priviledges which he enjoyed. The members of the exiſting adminiſtrators and judicial powers cannot be nominated in the firſt election.

IV. The national convention ſhall appoint commiſſioners choſen from their own body to go and to fraterniſe with the people.

V. The executive council ſhall alſo appoint commiſſioners for the ſame end, and to regulate the ſum due to the republic for the expences it may have incurred.

VI. They ſhall give an account of their proceedings every fifteen days.

VII. The French republic ſhall keep an account of the expences it has been at, and ſhall make arrangements for the payment of theſe expences.

VII. The French nation declares, that it will conſider as enemies thoſe people, who, refuſing liberty, ſhall enter into accomodation or negociation with their tyrant.

IX. The French nation ſwears never to lay down its arms until the countries into which they have entered ſhall be free and their liberties ſecured.

The proclamation referred to in the above was then read. It was in ſubſtance the ſame as the above decree, and was ordered to be ſent to the generals by extraordinary couriers.

Extract of a letter from Rockedebout on the Ottawa River, or Miami of Lake Erie, dated October the 9th. 1792.

"I congratulate you on the agreement of the Council of the confederated tribes to liſten to propoſals of peace from your government; but on the expreſs condition, that you ſhall not only make your fooliſh young men honeſt, but that your government ſhall be ſo, and not aim at depriving the Indians of their lands, as heretofore, or at "ſole and abſolute ſovereignty" over them as claimed at your former treaties. I am fully of opinion, that it will be your own faults if you do not eſtabliſh an advantageous and permanent peace and commerce with all the Indian nations. But to ſecure theſe, you muſt employ and truſt thoſe who know how the buſineſs ought to be conducted; for an error in judgment, may be as fatal to you as your former errors in Indian politics have been. I ſhall commit this letter to the Rainbow, a Seneca Chief, who has promited to forward it to you from Fort Franklin."

On Tueſday laſt at 6 o'clock in the morning, his Majeſty's armed Schooner the Onondago, ſailed for Kingſton, with a light breeze having ſeveral Gentlemen paſſengers on board.

Alſo, the Lady Dorcheſter, Merchantman, for the ſame place, with ſeveral Gentlemen paſſengers.

We have every appearance of a moſt abundant Harveſt, the wheat in the vicinity of this place, promiſes better than for ſome ſeaſons paſt, this probably is in a great meaſure owing, to the favorableneſs of the Spring, having had no froſty nights, nor unuſually hot days.

From a Perſon who lately viſited the wonderfull Falls, in our neighbourhood, which are now aſcertained to be near 150 feet perpendicular, the ice was not diſſolved at the bottom, and formed a conical or pyramidical appearence of ſome extent and height, this added conſiderably to the Majeſtick and marvellous proſpect, that this prodigy of nature, always ſeems to have, the rainbow alſo, which of a fine Sun ſhiny day, is ever conſpicuouſly viſible materially enhances the value of this unparalled view; this Gentleman, who has frequently for ſome years paſt manutely inveſtigated theſe cataracts, further acquaints us that the Table Rock over which the immenſe sheet of water, which comes from the Upper Lakes falls down, is conſiderably excavated, this is unaccountable as one would imagine, ſuch a maſs of water rolling over it, would prevent this, and counteract, the vapour or ſprey below, which is the only reaſon that can be aſſigned for this Phœnomenon.

SAMSON LUTES begs leave to inform all Perſons who propoſe to build Houſes, &c. in the courſe of this Summer, that he hath Laths, Planks and Scantlings of all kinds to ſell on reaſonable terms.—Any Perſon may be ſupplied with any of the above articles on the ſhorteſt notice. Applications to be made to him at his Mill near Mr. Peter Seacord's.

NOTICE is hereby given, that there will be a BREWERY erected here this Summer under the SANCTION of HIS EXCELLENCY the Lieutenant Governor, and encouraged by ſome of the principal Gentlemen in this place, and whoever will ſow Barley and cultivate their Land ſo that it will produce grain of a good quality, they may be certain of a Market in the fall at one DOLLAR a Buſhel on delivery.

For the ſuppreſſion of Vice, Profaneneſs and Immorality.

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

WHEREAS it is the indiſpenſible duty of all People, and more eſpecially of all Chriſtian Nations, to preſerve and advance the Honour and Service of Almighty GOD, and to diſcourage and ſuppreſs all Vice, Profaneneſs and Immorality, which if not timely prevented may juſtly draw down the Divine Vengeance upon Us and our Country: And His Majeſty having for the promotion of Virtue, and in tenderneſs to the beſt intereſts of his Subjects, given command for cauſing all Laws made againſt Blaſphemy, Profaneneſs, Adultery, Fornication, Polygamy, Inceſt, Profanation of the Lord's Day, Swearing and Drunkeneſs, to be ſtrictly put in Execution in every part of the Province, I do therefore direct, require and command the Peace Officers and Conſtables of the ſeveral Towns and Townſhips, to make preſentment upon Oath, of any of the Vices before mentioned, to the Juſtices of the Peace in their Seſſion, or to any of the other temporal Courts: And for the more effectual proceeding herein, all Judges, Juſtices and Magiſtrates and all other officers concerned for putting the Laws againſt Crimes and Offences into execution, are directed and commanded to exert themſelves, for the due proſecution and puniſhment of all perſons, who ſhall preſume to offend in any of the kinds aforeſaid: and alſo of all perſons that, contrary to their duty, ſhall be remiſs or negligent in putting the ſaid Laws in execution. LONDON, December 24.

Extract of a letter from a Gentleman to his friend in France.

"You seem anxious to know our political state, which you say must either be very bad, or has been very much misrepresented. I will give it to you as well and as briefly as I can.

"The direction of seditious machinations in this country, as it ever must under a mild and happy government, has produced an over flow of loyalty. Such a popular conduct is but the natural result of a disposition to counteract those who by involving us in anarchy, would fain deprive us of the blessings we enjoy. But it might be enquired, why, if the British government, or the English constitution rather, is composed of Monarchy, aristocracy, and democracy, as it certainly is, does the voice of the people continually resound, God save the King? Why, but because the example of France against monarchy, has raised a jealousy in Englishmen in favour of their Sovereign, whom not only as a man, they esteem, but as the head of the executive power, they revere? Is any man for monarchy? We have it here? Who is an aristocrate or democrate? and can say, he cannot enjoy his principles here? But some one may object, he is wholly Democrate. Such an one if he be a reasonable man, will consider, that another has as good a right to be wholly an aristocrate or royalist. And why should one man or set of men be gratified more than another? In order to obviate all such objections for each of which there may be advocates in every nation, Great Britain is the only country in the world, whose form of government is adapted to harmonize the discordance of political opinions.

LONDON, JANUARY, 15.

Yesterday morning, letters were received at the Admiralty Office, Charing Cross, from Commodore Murray, who is now at anchor at the Scheldt. They were sent off by the Commodore on Thursday last. The French gun boats which lately entered the Scheldt, it now turns out, proceeded but a little way, they ran aground between high and low water, and the French quitted them in their small boats, intending to return at high water; but before they came back, the Dutch had fairly thrown a bank of earth around them.—The French finding it impossible to move the boats, deserted them. No French vessels of any kind had either entered or quitted the Scheldt, from the time Commodore Murray anchored there till the date of his dispatches.

January, 19.

When sedition was openly talking in every part of the kingdom, domestic traitors, desirous of keeping Englishmen unprepared to repel the meditated attempts against the country, imprudently asserted in their conversations, as well as in their publications, that every fear was merely ideal, and that neither sedition or insurrection existed in any part of the British Empire.—Equally in defiance of all truth, and equally for the traitorous purpose of putting Englishmen off their guard, it is now asserted that government are not vigourous in their preparations for war, and that they are endeavouring to hold out an idea of peace; the direct reverse is notoriously the truth, preparations were never more vigorous—and Lord Grenville's answer to the Would-be Ambassador, is a decisive proof that the administration neither hold out an idea of the probability of, or wish for peace with modern France.

Lord Amherst is appointed Commander in Chief of the British army.

The independant Companies still continue to be given to such officers as make application at the war office and are approved of by the Secretary at war.

The Jacobin Emissaries seem to insinuate that a negociation is begun with the French Ministers. After reading Lord Grenville's excellent answer to M. Chavelin's note it must appear to the most superficial observer, that there is no room for negociation. If the French comply with the terms there prescribed, there probably may be no war: but we have not yet heard that they have begun, or even shewn any disposition to withdraw their forces from the countries which they have invaded. Any other terms, after the manly language of the British Cabinet, we cannot suppose will be listened to.

From another of February, the 15th.

MAYENCE, November 16.

The Deputies Reubel and Rubi have arrived here in the capacity of Commissioners from the National Convention. There are very few here who desire to have the Government democratically modelled, the most respectable inhabitants consider the mixed form as the best, and that a free government ought to have a chief vested with the executive power. M. Dohlberg who is universally esteemed is pointed out for this office.

The Merchants have testified their wishes in this respect to General Custine, in a very long and well written address, of which the following is an extract:

"We knew too well the corruption of our former Government, not to be actuated by wishes for a better; but in rejecting its abuses, we believe that when re-established in its primitive purity, it can then only serve as the basis of a new Constitution, such as will give general satisfaction. In pursuing contrary measures, have we not much to fear that the first enthusiasm for Liberty and Equality, which actuates every one of us, the moment it begins to cool, will become the germ of dissolution to all Members who compose the State, and that civil discord must inevitably ensue. We have also much to apprehend, least the fortuitous conjunction of events may one day subject us to a more cruel despotism, than that from which we are now emerging. Suffer us to avail ourselves of these means of liberty to insure a happier condition. The City of Mayence hopes that it may enjoy a Constitution adapted to the genius of its inhabitants and the small extent of its territory.

"To an experience equally well founded with that of our General, it appertains to us to combine our own satisfaction, our foreign connections, the invincibility of German phelgm, with a constitution which by ameliorating our ancient Government, would preserve our rights, and our resources; taking for our model the Monarchical Constitution adopted by France at the commencement of her Revolution. Let us avail ourselves of all the advantages of which our situation is susceptible. You general presided formerly in the National Assembly you know its dangers, and you are also acquainted with its remedies."

Extract from a Virginia Paper, dated Norfolk, March 2.

Intelligence has lately been received from London, that Great Britain has acceded to the combination formed to arrest the progress of the Jacobin career. The principal motives stated in the British manifesto, are "A firm determination on the part of the contracting powers to support the European Nations in the enjoyment of that right, which ought to be common to all; an entire and unqualified liberty of maintaining whatever political establishments they may think most conducive to their own happiness and security. That it is time enough for one nation to assist another, when such assistance shall have been required by a majority, at least, of the nation which may become dissatisfied with its existing Government. That to succour the distressed, and support other nations, in a generous determination to be free, well becomes the dignity and liberty of a great and enlightened people; to permit themselves to be fascinated into a wanton and violent intrusion upon the political arrangements of others,—however foreign, they may be thought from the favorite standard or imaginary excellence of their own. That the impulse of self preservation, no less than the necessary independence of other nations, demands the immediate and effective interference of the British arms. Nor can the frantic excesses of a power, at once so licentious and destructive, any longer be permitted to outrage the voluntary establishments of neighbouring nations; or by any insulting imposition of pretended benefits, proceed in its designs of successive and unbounded augmentations. That while the operations of that power were directed to such objects as might be fairly esteemed conducive to the support and defence of such arrangements, as might proceed from the free expression of the national will, it would not have been consistent with the dignity or inclination of Great Britain to have interfered. But however unequivocally the traces may appear among some of the neighbouring nations of a decided attachment to the late combination against France, it cannot be reasonably expected, on the part of that power, that the effects even of its just resentment can be permitted to extend to the entire subversion of the political independance of those nations. The rights and relative duties of all nations sufficiently inculcate the propriety of remaining satisfied with a deprivation of the power of an enemy to injure or invade the public security. The principles of self preservation, combined with those of a just magnanimous policy, have wisely forbidden national hostilities to exceed those bounds. With these views, the British nation feels itself constrained to announce to the existing powers of France, and to all Europe, its firm determination to prevent by every means in its power, any accession of territory whatever, to the known and established boundaries of France, as they have been designated by treaties made with other nations; nor can it be expected that the operations of the British arms should cease, until France shall have evinced a disposition on her part, to renounce the ascendency which she may have acquired by violence, over those nations or cities, which may have been subjected by her Power."

LONDON, December 17.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Saturday, Dec. 15.

Correspondence with France.

Mr. Fox said, no one ought to conclude from the motion which he was about to make, that he approved of any thing done in France, or of any of the principles of Government established there. Whatever his opinion might be with respect to these subjects, it had nothing to do with the proposition he should make, for acknowledging the Republic of France. The only principle upon which he would rely was, that it was proper in all cases to treat with the governing power in a country. Had we not a Consul in Algiers? Had we not sent Ambassadors to the Court of the Emperor of Morocco? He hoped our communication with these powers did not imply that we approved of the infamous tyranny that was practised by them. He was unable, from a severe cold, to say any thing farther upon the subject, and would simply move. "That this House do present an humble Address to his Majesty, requesting him to send an Ambassador to the Provisional Executive Council of France, to negociate with them concerning any subject that might be [illegible]."

Mr. Grey seconded the motion.

Lord Sheffield thought it would be the greatest meanness for Britain to be the first Power to sneak and crouch to the present abominable Government of France; they were a gang of cut-throats and murderers, not even able to controul their own business. We did not know how soon they might be called over into this country, or how soon the most respectable characters in it might be dragged into a prison, to be inhumanly butchered, and the most amiable women oblidged, as they had been in France, to lie upon straw in a dungeon, until they should be violated or murdered.

Mr. Stanley particularly reprobated the Right Hon. Gentleman's motion. He did not see any other tendency of his conduct and late extraordinary speeches than to incite insurrections all over the country. He mentioned some of the horrors that had taken place in Paris on the 10th. of August, in his presence.

Mr. Angelo Taylor, in supporting the motion of his Right Honourable Friend, did not think he acted in a manner that his constituents would blame. He would not be afraid to meet them, notwithstanding all the efforts of Administration to injure him in their favour—What advantages could a war with France produce? They had no trade; we had, the sea was covered with our ships; they would send out their men of war and privateers to destroy them—He had heard much talk of mobs and insurrections, and he thought the speeches of a Right Honorable Gentleman were very much calculated to promote them. A loyal mob had lately risen to protect King and Constitution at Manchester by demolishing the houses of such as were obnoxious to them, in the same manner that another, like Loyalists had done in the last year at Birmingham. Proceedings of this kind would soon extend all over the country, if Ministers did not descend to the council of moderation. There would be one good consequence of this motion; it would stand recorded in the journals of the house; and those who made it, might with the same propriety, manage a negociation with France, if we should be in the end obliged to acknowledge the Republic.

Mr. Loveden was against the motion.

[illegible] language of his Right Hon. Friend tended to excite insurrection. It was the speeches from the other side of the house, and the Proclamation, which had that tendency. While such a person as his Right Hon. Friend maintained the propriety of being concerned with France, he was not afraid to assert it also. While between republicans and friends of tyranny the Constitution had been undefended, his Right Hon. Friend stood forth; but he should not stand alone in the gap—he, for one, would never forsake him—he would always support him against those who attempted to overturn the Constitution by their doctrines, and those who betrayed it by their praises. The faith and honour of the nation, in regard to her treaties, should be strenuously supported, but it was much better to effect that purpose by the mode of negociation, than by plunging the country into the calamities of war.

The Honorable Frederick North spoke with great ability against the motion.

Mr. Fox entreated the house not to suppose that he wished for an alliance with France, because he had proposed to hold communication with that country.

Col. Tarleton declared himself an enemy to the republican system. It was the glory of the people of England to be loyal and free. No one can respect the Throne more than he did, though he would always watch over its incroachments. His profession was that of arms; and his hand, his head, and his heart, should never be wanting when his country required their assistance. As the representative of a great commercial Town, a situation into which he had been brought with peculiar honor to himself, he must abhor the idea of a war with France at this time. Suppose we should take all their Colonies in the West Indies, it was to him very doubtful if the power of this country would be increased by that conquest.

Though the French had but little commerce, yet they had a multitude of needy seamen on their coasts, ready for plunder, and who desired nothing more ardently than to have a fair opportunity of attacking our trade. Whatever were the conquests of France, we, in our present situation had nothing to fear, as long as we acted on the defensive. The old reproach against us, "Penitus divisos orbe Britannos" would be now an advantage. In the course of a war, the number of mal-contents might be greatly increased; and perhaps it would be impossible to lend any troops to attack general Dumourier, as their presence would be necessary to keep the people in obedience at home. There was no saying what would be the consequence of a war; he therefore was determined not to vote against any measure which might prevent it.

Mr. Jenkinson was astonished that gentlemen should expatiate so much on the Bourbon war, and the danger of entering into it, when in the year 1787, at the time of the Spanish armament, they had treated the negociations of administration as meanness, and had endeavoured to urge the nation precipitately into a war. There never was a period at which we were so well prepared for war as the present. Our finances were in a more flourishing condition than they had been before and those of our adversaries were nearly ruined. He had authority, from a paper published by Monsr. Cambon, the French Minister of finance, to say, that the expenditure of France had even amounted to 19 millions sterling in the space of three months. If war had been considered advantageous a few years ago, and such it had been admitted by the honorable Gentleman on the other side, it must be infinitely more advantageous now. Our enemies were then allied to Spain and the house of Austria. We had hardly a single power upon which we could have depended. Now we are certain of the assistance of Prussia and Austria, of Spain and Holland. France he had always considered as an enemy of this country, if the Royal Government was established, we had every thing to dread from the ambition of Kings; if the democratic, as at present, we are in danger from the mad ambition of the people. This was worse than the former, for it could not be checked so easily. Louis the XIVth. had openly declared himself for universal monarchy: the National convention had done the same. They had settled upon Savoy, only because it was convenient for them, and that they had an army in the South which had no employment. They had alledged that emigrants had been received at Turin, but that was no more than by every state in Europe. With respect to Genoa, they had acted in the most insulting manner?

when the near approach of General ... obliged the Republic to require ſome troops from ... to defend themſelves, the executive council of France ſaid, that they had broken the neutrality. They demand that the Swiſs troops ſhould be withdrawn and their Envoy practiſed every thing in his power to raiſe an inſurrection in Geneva. It had been unſucceſsful in his attempt. The Swiſs troops however, had been ſent away; and notwithſtanding that the French inſiſted that the Magiſtrates who had called them in, ſhould be puniſhed, the people did not agree to ſo infamous an article, and the French General forbore to inſiſt upon it. That circumſtance has been ſince made a ground of acculation againſt him.

Franckfort had been attacked, becauſe a newſpaper had been publiſhed there in the intereſt of the Emigrants and becauſe ſome bankers and merchants of that city had ſupplied them with money. The principles of the National Convention concerning the right of rivers was falſe. The ſea was common to all, but there was a property in rivers. Thoſe who had the adjacent banks had no propetty of the river. The Danube, for inſtance flowed through the dominion of the Emperor and the Grand Signior poſſeſſed only and ſeverally his reſpective part. If we ſhould ſend a Miniſter to France at this time, it would be imputed to fear; for we had declared to the Napolitan Envoy,——that if any violence were offered to the Royal family, we ſhould deliver up the perpetrators of the crime to juſtice. At that moment, perharps the axe was liſted over the head of Louis XVI. and could we, conſiſtent with our former declaration at that time, ſend to his murderers and Ambaſſador of peace and friendſhip? The queſtion was not how the miniſters had conducted themſelves for that time—it was whether we ſhould now ſend an Ambaſſador to France, taking all circumſtances into conſideration. If we did, we ſhould offend all the powers at war with her. Our national honor would be diſgraced, and he had the pride to think the national honour at leaſt of high conſideration as the national intereſt. The motion was heard for it would be a dangerous precedent of the interference of that Houſe with the Royal prerogative. On the whole he thought a war with France was adviſable. They might probably ruin themſelves by their preſent folly, but that would be no compenſation for the deſtruction they would make of opinions, prejudices, and the moſt ſacred inſtitutions in all the nations around them. A war would have at leaſt this good effect, that it would prevent the correſpondence of the ſeditious perſons in this country who wiſhed to over turn the conſtitution, with the French. All they might hope for, was an unanimity as conſiderable as poſſible. He was particularly happy in agreeing with Mr. Windham, to whom he had many compliments, and he thought that his opinion would be an argument with every Honourable Gentleman to diſapprove of the motion.

General Court-martial.

On Monday the 25th. inſtant, were publiſhed the ſentences of the General Court-Martial on the ſoldiers of the Royal Fuzileers tried for exciting a mutiny in the ſaid Regiment, and knowing an intended mutiny without reveling it; each of which crimes are declared capital by the mutiny Act.

Joſeph Draper, found guilty of the charges exhibited againſt him was ſentenced death by being ſhot.—Wm. Roſe found guilty—ſentenced five hundred laſhes,—James Landrigan for want of ſufficient evidence was acquited.—Timothy Kennedy found guilty, ſentenced ſeven hundred laſhes.—Serjt. Thomas Wigton who had been releaſed, (perhaps from an idea that the evidence then obtained might not be ſufficient to convict him) demanded and inſiſted on a trial, he was found guilty of a knowledge of an intended mutiny, and ſentenced to be reduced to ſerve as a private ſoldier, and to receive four-hundred laſhes. The Court alſo recommended to His Excellency the Commander in Chief, to ſend Roſe, Kennedy and Wigton, to Europe by the firſt convenient ...rtunity, to be diſpoſed of in the ſervice of His Ma...y, as his Majeſty may pleaſe to direct.—Joſeph Draper was ordered for execution on Tueſday the 2d. of April, as near to the place of public execution as the ſtate of the ground may permit—and in preſence of the Garriſon but having made application for a week's reſpite, we hear that his Excellency has been pleaſed to grant it.—In the courſe of the trial it appeared that a plot was formed for breaking out of the Barracks, and confiding in their power of perſuading a very conſiderable number to join them—they propoſed getting the Prince, the General, and as many Officers as they could together in the Chateau, and if they did not conſent to the demands that were then to be made—they were to be put to death, and the mutineers to endeavour to get into the United States by croſſing the River, and forcing the Captains of Militia to give them guides. It is difficult to ſay whether the folly or attrociouſneſs of the plot was greateſt; for the ſmalleſt reflection might have ſatisfied them of the impoſſibility of effecting their eſcape—yet it can hardly be doubted that had they once taken the firſt ſtep, their deſperate ſituation would have led them to the commiſſion of as much miſchief, as in the moment, might have been in their power.

Extract of a letter from an Officer in Gibraltar, dated February 12th. to a Gentlemen at this place.

On the 6th. Inſtant our Governor received an expreſs from Madrid, informing him the King of France was no more. He was executed at the place of Louis the XIVth. in the preſence of a vaſt multitude of his Subjects. He harangued them for ſome time in a very ſenſible, firm and reſigned manner, the people attending to him with great earneſtneſs, which being obſerved by the Duke of Orleans, who commanded the execution he ordered a number of drums to beat, thereby to prevent theſe deluded people, from hearing the laſt words of their unfortunate King. He ſeemed a little diſtreſſed at this prevention, but recollecting himſelf laid his neck upon the block, and his executioners with a large knife cut his head off.—The Queen was thrown into a common Priſon amongſt the moſt abandoned Proſtitutes, and it was not expected ſhe would get the form of a trial.——

Our army is ordered to compleat to ſixty rank and file per company, and fifty independant Companies to be raiſed immediately.

The Spaniards are very buſy arming in all their ports near us, they have ſent their militia to do Duty ...e, and marched all their regular troops to the frontiers, there is not a doubt of their joigning us, in caſe of war.

On Sunday Morning early his Majeſty's Sloop the Caldwell, arrived here from Kingſton, which place ſhe left on Thurſday, but was obliged to anchor off the bar of this River part of Saturday night:—And on Monday alſo arrived from Kingſton the Onondago, in twenty three hours.—

For the ſuppreſſion of Vice, Profaneneſs and Immorality.

J. G. S.

By His Excellency's Command.

WM. JARVIS, Secretary.

The French seem desirous of increasing the number of their enemies, and are infatuated enough to set the whole World at defiance, "sed quem perdere vult Deus prius dementat." They have declared war against England and Holland. We learn from a New-York Paper of the 6th. April, that they have published the following Manifesto of grievances to justify their conduct.—

NATIONAL CONVENTION.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 1.

CONSIDERING that the King of England has ordered his Ambassador to withdraw himself from France, and refused to acknowledge the Provisional Executive Council, created by the Legislative Assembly.

That the Cabinet of St. James's, at the same epoch, discontinued in correspondence with the Ambassador of France at London, on pretext of the suspension of the ci-devant King of the French.

That since the opening of the National Convention, it has refused to answer the accustomed correspondence between the two States, as also to acknowledge the Powers of that Convention.

That it has refused to acknowledge the Ambassador of the French Republic, although holding credentials from it.

That it has endeavoured to obstruct the different purchases of corn, arms, and other merchandize, made either by French Citizens, or by the agents of the French Republic.

That it has laid an embargo upon divers vessels and boats laden with corn for France, whilst, contrary to the Treaty of 1786, the exportation of corn was permitted to other countries.

That in order more effectually to obstruct the commercial operations of the Republic in England, it has, by means of an Act of Parliament, prohibited the circulation of Assignats.

That in violation of the 4th. Article of the Treaty of 1786, it also has caused, in the course of the month of January last, an act to pass, by which all French Citizens, residing in or coming to England, are subjected to the most inquisitorial vexations, and dangerous formalities.

That at the same time, and contrary to the tenor of Article 18. of the Treaty of peace, of 1783, it has granted protection and pecuniary succours to the Emigrants, and even to the chief of those rebels who have borne arms against France; that it keeps up with them; daily correspondence, evidently directed against the French Revolution; and that it also receives the Chiefs of the Rebels of the French West India Colonies.

That in the same hostile spirit, and without provocation, and whilst all the Maritime Powers were at peace with England, the Cabinet of St. James's has given orders for a considerable armament by sea, as well as an augmentation of its land forces.

That, that armament was instituted at the very moment when the English Minister persecuted with inveteracy those who supported in England the principles of the French Revolution, and employed all possible means, both in and out of Parliament, to cover the French Republic with ignominy, and to draw upon it the execration both of England and of all Europe.

That the object of that armament, destined against France, has not even been dissembled in the Parliament of England.

That although the Provisional Executive Council has employed every necessary measure to preserve peace and fraternity with the English nation, and has given no other answer to the calumnies and violations of treaties, than remonstrances founded on principles of Justice, and expressed with the dignity of Freemen, the English Minister has nevertheless persevered in his system of malevolence and hostility, continued his armaments, and sent a squadron into the Scheldt to interrupt the operations of France in the Low Countries.

That on the news of the execution of Louis he has carried his 'outrages' against the French Republic to such a pitch, as to order the Ambassador of France to quit, within eight days, the territory of Great-Britain.

That the King of England at that epoch took an opportunity of appointing different Generals to his land forces, as also to demand of the Parliament of England a considerable addition to both his sea and land forces, and to give orders for the fitting out of gun-boats.

That the intelligence of the King of England with the enemies of France, and particularly with the Emperor and with Prussia, has been confirmed by a treaty concluded on with the former, in the month of January last.

That he, the King of England, has drawn into the same league the Stadtholder of the United Provinces, who has, in the course of the French Revolution, and notwithstanding his professed neutrality, treated with contempt the Agents of France, welcomed the Emigrants, vexatiously treated the French Patriots, interrupted their business; set at liberty, contrary to known custom, and the requisition of the French Ministry, forgers of Assignats; and that lately, to concur with the hostile designs of the Court of London, he has commanded an armament by sea, named an Admiral, ordered the Dutch vessels to join the English squadron, opened a loan to supply the expences of the War, obstructed the exportations for France, whilst he favoured the supply of the Prussian and Austrian magazines; and lastly considering that all these circumstances leave no longer a hope to the French Republic of obtaining, by amicable negociation, a redress for these injuries, and that all the acts of the British Court, and of Holland, are acts of hostility, and equivalent to a declaration of War.

The National Convention decrees as follows;

Art. I. The National Convention declares, in the name of the French Nation, that by reason of the multiplied acts of hostility and aggression above-mentioned, the French Republic is at War with the King of England and the Stadtholder of the United Provinces.

II. The National Convention charges the Provisional Executive Council to employ such forces as it may deem necessary to repulse all attack, and to support the independence, dignity, and interests of the French Republic.

III. The National Convention authorises the Executive Provisional Council to dispose of the naval forces of the French Republic, as the interest of the state shall seem to require, and revokes all preceeding disposal of the same by any former Decree.

LONDON, FEBRUARY 12.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Monday, Feb. 11.

MESSAGE FROM THE KING.

WAR WITH FRANCE.

Mr. Secretary Dundas presented the following Message from his Majesty, which was immediately read by the Speaker:

" GEORGE R.

" His Majesty thinks proper to acquaint the House of Commons, that the Assembly now exercising the powers of Government in France, have without previous notice, directed acts of hostility to be committed against the persons and property of his Majesty's subjects, in breach of the Law of nations, and of the most positive stipulations of Treaty, and have since, on the most groundless pretensions, actually declared war against his Majesty, and the United Provinces. Under the circumstances of this wanton and unprovoked aggression, his Majesty has taken the necessary steps to maintain the honour of his Crown, and to vindicate the rights of his people; and his Majesty relies with confidence on the firm and effectual support of the House of Commons, and on the zealous exertions of a brave and loyal people, in prosecuting a just and necessary war, and endeavouring under the blessing of Providence, to oppose an effectual barrier to the farther progress of a system which strikes at the security and peace of all independant nations, and is pursued in open defiance of every principle of moderation, good faith, humanity, and justice.

" In a cause of such general concern, his Majesty has every reason to hope for the cordial co-operation of those powers, who are united with his Majesty by the ties of alliance, or who feel an interest in preventing the extension of anarchy and confusion, and in contributing to the security and tranquility of Europe.

G. R."

Mr. Secretary Dundas moved, " That this House do to-morrow take into consideration his Majesty's most gracious message."—Ordered.

The following is a Copy of the letter sent to the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor on Saturday last by the Right Hon. Lord Grenville.

WHITEHALL, Feb. 9.

" My Lord, I have the honour to acquaint your Lordship, that it appears by the accounts received this morning from France, that war against Great Britain and Holland was decreed in the National Convention on the 1st. instant.

" I request that your Lordship will take the proper measures to make public this intelligence.

(Signed) " GRENVILLE."

A very strong fleet for the Mediterranean is ordered to be equiped with all possible expedition; another goes to the West Indies with as much haste as possible.

A very large number of cruizers are ordered into channel service directly, to protect trade and our sea coast and subordinate ports from the insults of privateers.

The particular ships which are to compose Lord Hood's squadron for the Mediterranean station are all nearly ready for sea. His Lordship will go out under a special commission, by virtue of which he will be enabled to take the command of any foreign ships of war, to act in conjunction with the British fleet.

Letters of marque and reprisal against the French will be forthwith granted from the Board of Admiralty to such Merchants or others who chuse to apply for them.

The following is a Copy of a letter from the Earl of Chatham to the Lord Mayor in answer to a requisition made by his Lordship on behalf of the Merchants of London:

Admiralty, February 9, 1793.

" My Lord, I have received your Lordship's letter, and beg to assure your Lordship that no time will be lost in taking the most effectual measures (which our force at present will permit) to give notice of the existence of hostilities to our homeward-bound trade; and to direct them, as proposed by your Lordship, to make for the Ports of Falmouth, or Plymouth, and there wait for convoy. I have the honor to be your Lordship's very obedient humble Servant,

(Signed) " CHATHAM."

The Right Hon. the Lord Mayor.

February 7.—Yesterday morning a Spanish Courier arrived in town, express from the Court of Madrid, with dispatches to the Marquis del Campo, the Spanish Ambassador in London. The Messenger came over to Falmouth in the Infanta man of war of 50 guns, after a passage of only two days and a half from the Groyne, which place he left the 1st. instant. The Messenger has made one of the quickest journeys ever known, having performed it in ten days.

He is said to have brought over the news that the Court of Spain has declared War against France. The Courier is to wait the determination of the Court of London, to know in what manner it will be best for the two Courts to co-operate against the common enemy. The Spaniards will very shortly have a sufficient force ready to protect the Mediterranean seas.

The Portuguese have ordered six sail of the line and four frigates to be immediately got ready for sea.

February 12.—It is now pretty exactly ascertained, that there are eighty English vessels in the different ports of France, on board of which it is calculated there are from eight hundred to one thousand seamen. In our ports, the number of French ships is very few indeed; not more than six or eight.

It is a proof of the good understanding which has now taken place between our court and that of Spain, that our Ministry, who had prohibited the exportation of provisions from Ireland to all foreign ports, have now lent permission to the merchants at Cork, and the other Irish ports to ship out 29,000 barrels of beef and pork for the use of the Spanish Government.

Last night a board of Admiralty was held at the Admiralty-Office, which did not break up before 12 o'clock. Several more frigates were put in commission, and several Officers received their commissions.

The Court of Spain has engaged itself to this Court, to assist the confederacy against France with 60 sail of men of war of different rates.

A letter was yesterday received express from Calais addressed to a respectable house in the city, stating that the French mail was detained there until it was known whether that from our post-office would be dispatched.

The New Castle association have collected the sum of 2351. 5. for the purpose of giving additional bounties to seamen entering into the Royal Navy at that port.

The Magistrates, ship owners, and others, of Whitby, have offered an additional bounty of 2l. to able seamen, and 1l. to landmen, entering his Majesty's Navy.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Saturday, Dec. 15.

Correspondence with France, continued from our last.

Mr. Wyndham was ready to acknowledge the integrity of the motives of his Right. Hon. Friend (Mr. Fox) but was compelled from conviction, and from the duty he owed his country, to resist with the utmost of his ability and force, the motion now made, as fatal and ruinous not only to the British Empire, but to all Europe. If the recognition of the Republic of France could ever be made to appear to advance the present interests of Great Britain, he would resist it, for it would be injurious to every other power, which injury would ultimately, and with redoubled force, fall on ourselves. By agreeing to the motion we should injure ourselves in the opinion of every country around us, and make those our enemies whom we might safer trust than those whose alliances we were entreated to solicit. In what a dreadful situation would we place Europe; were we to put the weight of of our national character and consequence in the scale of of France, by recognizing her principles, which went to the setting up of subjects against every Government, and to the exciting of universal revolt?—With respect to the future prospects of the World, the conduct of Great Britain by such a recognition, would be the completion of that fatal event, the retreat of the combined armies. He was hostile to such recognition at present, because a worse time could never happen—and by delay we might escape—we might see a reverse, and ought not, by adopting the motion, to cut off that hope.—Delay could not make the evil greater—he would sooner submit by compulsion, and take that for his justification; than adopt it voluntarily. It was absurd to talk of adopting it with a good grace, for grace there could be none in Great Britain standing the first forward to throw off all regard to moral principles, and all horror for acts of murder and rapine. If the evil should come upon us ultimately, the hand of time may make some change—may wipe away some of the blood, by removing from the stage some of the bloody actors—The immediate action may in some degree be removed; and we who have had the first impressions of their deeds, by the immediate knowledge of them, may give way to others, who may know them but by History. The only reasons he had heard against the war, were the disadvantages we might labour under; but those disadvantages were not made out, and had they been, such reasons would have been dishonourable in the present state of circumstances. The Right Hon. Gentleman then deprecated the interference with the right of the executive power, with whom war and peace was entrusted, and in whose hands it certainly was much safer than in those of the People in Parliament assembled; or in those which some wished, in the hands of the people in Clubs distributed—He concluded by saying, that as the motion had been made by his Right Hon. Friend, he found himself not inclined to state how fatal he felt it to England, to humanity, to the world.

Mr. Whitbread was astonished that Gentlemen, in speaking of the French should descend to such wretched scurrility. They had called them cut-throats, murderers, rascals, and every other term of abuse that they could think of.—What purpose did this answer? There certainly was a government in France with which this country might correspond. The hon. gentleman declared he would support his Hon. Friend with his life and fortune.

Mr. Grant said, England never had, and he hoped never would act in a manner so mean, so pitiful and contemptible, as proposed by the motion before the house. We were desired to supplicate, for negociate we could not. France having declared hostility to all Monarchies. Did the Right Hon. Gentleman wish by his propolition to have Great Britain establish one of the first principles of the French, namely, that all Governments were their enemies and all people their friends? It was the Right Honorable Gentleman who had brought the House into this disagreeable situation, if it was so to be considered, France had taken no notice of the absence of our Ambassador, but had considered the absence of other ministers, a matter of course in consequence of the abolition of her monarchy. It was him and his friends who had started the question of recognizing the Republic of France, and that on a day when the French were embruing their hands in the blood of their King. Was that the fittest day he could choose? Were we to shock all Europe by agreeing with him? He hoped, he trusted not; the house and the Country had too much honour, too much humanity. But there was nothing to negociate about, for if you complain of a breach of treaties, they have a ready anſwer,—they are bound by none—they have renounced them all, and inſiſt upon the law of nature; on that law they have opened the Scheldt.

The queſtion then is, Will you ſend to petition them to ſuffer it to be cloſed? If they were to ſeize your ſhips at ſea by natural right, you may alſo petition them not to continue the practice, and a petion would unqueſtionably be cheaper than a war, which it ſeems ſhould at all events be avoided. But if ſuch petition was certain of ſucceſs, and a war to be avoided, there was no man with a Britiſh heart in his boſom that would ſign it.—No, we are to defend and proteſt ourſelves from oppreſſion by our ſtrength, and not to hold our rights, our conſtitution, and independance, upon the ſufferance or good will of any power on the globe. He gave his negative to the motion, conſidering it to be unreaſonable, nugatory, and diſgraceful.

Mr. Burke never ſaw any thing ſo conſolitary to the country as the general aſpect of the houſe on that day, ſtill more important than the two paſt, for the propoſitions had riſen gradually in their fatal aſpects to that now before them, which he hoped had gained the climax. In the courſe of the debate a learned Gentlemen had declared, that he had from the commencement of the Revolution been ſilent with reſpect to the Laws, to the Government, and to the Conſtitution of France, and in ſo doing the learned Gentlemen, famed for his eloquence, had been moſt eloquent—for ſilence on theſe ſubjects muſt be eloquence—and as every thing in this country and France ſeemed to be directly oppoſite, as in this the King was againſt Paine, and in that, Paine againſt the King—in this loyalty was a characteriſtic—in that treaſon—in this happineſs, in that miſery—in that neither law, Government, nor Conſtitution; the Ambaſſador therefore to be appointed to it ought to poſſeſs thoſe oppoſites! and as the learned Gentleman had a great deal of Law—much government of himſelf—and a good conſtitution, he hoped that, if the motion of his Right Honorable Friend ſhould be adopted, that he might be appointed and ſent to that country—and that his having engaged to defend Paine, who in this country had the King againſt him, but who in that was againſt the King; he would endeavour to remove that bar, and facilitate his departure, by ſoliciting the Attorney General to drop the proſecution. After putting the difference of France and England in every poſſible view, and ſhewing that France had been endeavouring for a long time to ſheath the ſword of civil war in her bowels, he contended for the policy of turning it againſt her boſom, and to ſhew that, ſituate as we were, our honor compelled us to war, and our national ſafety rendered it neceſſary and expedient. He conſidered the three propoſitions offered by the Right Honourable Gent. to have the moſt miſchievous and wicked principles, but did not impute the motives to the mover—they were calculated to deaden the ſpirit of the nation—to make the people averſe to contribute to the expences of the War—to give the appearance to it of being offenſive, inſtead of what it was, defenſive; and on thoſe grounds they appeared to him to be extremely dangerous and pernicious.

Mr. Burke proceeded, and ſaid as they had diſpoſed of a queſtion of order, the occaſion for which he lamented he would now proceed to an Aſſembly without order. He drew a picture of the Revolutions in America, and France, ſhewing that in the whole 7 years of war between England and America, there was not, to the honour of both nations, one wanton, barbarous murder. Negociation with them was therefore eaſy and honourable—with France it could not be otherwiſe than dithonourable.

Mr. Sheridan contended for the motion, and aſſerting that the Dutch Miniſter was negociating at Paris, wiſhed to know why we ſhould keep ourſelves ſo much aloof.

Mr. Secretary Dundas ſaid, he would not trouble the Houſe long, but to anſwer the Honorable Gentlemen who had ſpoke laſt, and who had for want of novelty in his ſpeech advanced one bold aſſertion, which was, that a negociation was now carrying on at Paris by the Dutch Miniſter. Such queſtions, ſtanding as he did, it was difficult to anſwer without a breach of duty; but this he would ſay, that the aſſertion was incompatible with his belief; and as to the Dutch Miniſter, inſtead of being at Paris, he had been, to the beſt of his belief, for upwards of three months paſt, at the Hague; there was, however, a Noble Lord on the other ſide of the Houſe who had lately left the Hague, and who might poſſibly be good enough to ſtate the fact.

Lord R. Spencer confirmed the information of Mr. Dundas.

The Honorable Secretary again roſe, and after recommending more caution to thoſe Gentlemen who had aſſerted the preſence of the Dutch Ambaſſador at Paris, who appeared neither to be there miniſterially or corporeally, argued the impropriety of ſending an Ambaſſador to France at a time when ſhe had been guilty of ſuch aggreſſions as would have induced this Court, had France had a Miniſter here, to have ordered him to quit.

Mr. Fox then roſe, and after ſhortly replying to ſeveral arguments againſt the motion, he ſpoke to the motives, which were not he ſaid, to pay his court to adminiſtration—to his friends who on the affairs of France differed with him—nor to court popularity: but in the conſcientious diſcharge of his duty to the people; and that though the people might abuſe him, and though, excited by the ſpeeches of thoſe who pretended to be ſupporters of the Conſtitution, they might ſerve his houſe as they did Doctor Prieſtley's—he would have the ſatisfaction of having endeavoured to ſerve them, and to gain this good effect, that the country might know the cauſe and not the pretence for the war; and that that cauſe was mere form, which ſooner or later muſt be come to—which may, through ſucceſs—but moſt probably, will come through defeat.

Mr. Drake conſidered the queſtion to be, whether we ſhould prefer a reigning King or a caſhiered Monarch—Conſtitution and Laws or Anarchy—Religion or Atheiſm? Being true to his God, loyal to the King, and faithful to the people, he gave the motion his negative.

The queſtion was then put and negatived without a diviſion.

What follows is extracted from the Woodfall's Register.

LONDON, January 2.

Hanover, Dec. 17.—The Regency of this Electorate have received orders from his Britannick Majesty, our Elector, to dispatch for the army which is to be formed in the Empire the contingency of this Electorate: It will consist of the regiment of body cavalry, that of Van dem Busiche, the Queen's and the Prince of Wales's light dragoons, and two regiments of infantry, consisting of two battalions each. This corps commanded by General Van dem Busiche, is to be ready to march by the 15th of January next, independent of the line, which is to remain on the frontiers of Hesse. The Elector of Saxony has also ordered the troops which are to form his contingency to march. A corps of Saxon troops are also to cover the Frontiers of Thuringan.

Francfort, Dec. 15.—Yesterday morning, about five o'clock, his Prussian Majesty joined the army, with the best part of our garrison, and the different corps cantoned in the neighbouring villages, to proceed against Mentz. A most violent cannonade was heard all the day long, in the environs of Delkenheim and Hoff heim.

This forenoon a great number of the Infantry from Hesse Darmstadt, passed towards Mentz. Konigstein still holds out and has been bombarded yesterday and to day.

We have just now received intelligence, that the combined army has attacked General Custine, at Hockheim, drove the French from that place, as far as Cassel, under the Canon of Mentz, and taken a great number of their cannon.

His Majesty the King of Prussia is said to have passed the night at Hockheim.

January 29.—Baron Eyre attended by order and delivered to the King the Great Seal, which his Majesty was pleased to deliver to the custody of Lord Loughborough who, by this appointment, becomes Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, and Keeper of the Great Seal.

The Prince of Wales has received from his Majesty the Commission of Colonel of the tenth Regiment of Light Dragoons, and kissed hands yesterday. His Royal Highness before he accepted of this commission, wrote a letter to the Duke of Portland, stating the high reasons of state, which made him think, that at this critical time every person ought to concur in supporting his Majesty's government, and expressing the warmest eulogiums on the honour, integrity, and talents, of those illustrious persons who, though they compose the opposition to Ministers, have forgot the animosities of party, in considerations of greater magnitude.

The squadron under the command of Admiral Sir Richard King, now in the Scheldt, whither they failed from the Downs some days since consists of the Assistance of 50 guns, two frigates, a sloop, and two cutters. These command that mouth of the river, between the Isles of Zealand and Zoarse.

Government are making the most rapid preparations for war in every department.

The quantity of ordnance stores preparing is immense, both for land and sea service; and a large body of cavalry-artillery are shortly to be raised, the more effectually to protect the coasts against any attempts of an enemy.

The official accounts from Holland state that the Admiralty of Amsterdam have ordered the immediate equipment, of some ships of war, and have opened the usual correspondencies with the other four admiralties, on the subject of their usual quotas of ships and men.

Lord George Gordon has found sureties for good behaviour for fourteen years, required by sentence of the court of king's bench, and will be at large in the course of the present week. The securities, we understand are two Jews of considerable property in the city. The noble prisoner, we see, gains some thing by his election into the number of the chosen, and finds himself not abandoned by the whole world.

The whole system of the present Government of France is, to rob and plunder all the nations of Europe, and bring them to the same state of anarchy and confusion which their own country experiences; because, in such a scene, the daring and unprincipled adventurers can under the pretence of reforming the abuses of old Governments, get possession of the public purse, and make the resources of a whole nation the prey of their own rapacity and licentiousness. It is supposed the French have no power to fit out any fleet which can be opposed to ours; but that it will be a war of their privateers on our trade. Government are very attentive to this point; and more frigates are prepared and fitting out than usual on such occasions, which will be stationed in all parts to cover the arrival of our merchant ships.

February 7.

Ministry have ordered three 74 gun ships and eight frigates to sail in the Irish Channel, and guard that coast; as it is apprehended that the French may adopt some scheme of sending a body of troops to land in that country, in hopes to find a discontented party who may join them.

If any thing could warrant a kind of Crusade against a people, it would be the present Conduct of France. The tyranny with which the Convention of that Country exercise the power, which the Success of a moment places in their hands, while they pretend to propagate the pure principles of Freedom, is too enormous not to call for the vengeance of all Europe.

The following is an exact Translation from a SPEECH made in the National Convention at Paris, (on the 14th. of December,) in a Debate on a Subject of Establishing Public Schools for the Education of Youth,) by Citizen Dupon, a Member of considerable weight. And as the doctrines contained in it, were received with unanimous applause, except from two or three of the Clergy, it may fairly be considered as an expositi-on of the Creed of that enlightened Assembly.——Translated from LE MONITEUR of Sunday, the 16th. of December, 1792.

WHAT! Thrones are overturned! Sceptres broken! Kings expire! And yet the Altars of GOD remain! (Here there is a murmur from some Members; and the Abbé Ichon demands, that the person speaking may be called to order.) Tyrants, in outrage to Nature, continue to burn an impious incense on those altars! (Some murmurs arise, but they are lost in the applauses from the majority of the Assembly.) The thrones have been reversed, & have left these altars naked, unsupported, and tottering. A single breath of enlightened Reason will now be sufficient to make them disappear.—And if humanity is under obligation to the French Nation for the first of these benefits, the fall of Kings, can it be doubted, but that the French People, now Sovereign, will be wise enough, in like manner, to overthrow those altars and those idols, to which those Kings have hitherto made them subject? Nature and Reason, these ought to be the Gods of men! These are my Gods! (Here the Abbé Audrien cried out, "There is no bearing this;" and rushed out of the Assembly.—A great laugh!) Admire Nature,—cultivate Reason.—And you, Legislators, if you desire that the French people should be happy—make haste to propagate these principles, and to teach them in your primary schools, instead of those fanatical principles which have hitherto been taught. The tyranny of Kings was confined to make their people miserable in this life. But those other tyrants, the Priests, extend their dominions into another, of which they have no other idea than of eternal punishments; a doctrine which some men have hitherto had the good nature to believe.—But the moment of the catastrophe is come—all these prejudices must fall at the same time.—We must destroy them, or they will destroy us.—For myself! I honestly avow to the Convention—I am an Atheist! (Here there is some noise and tumult—but a great number of Members cried out—"What is that to us—You are an honest man.") But I defy a single individual, amongst the Twenty-four Millions of Frenchmen, to make against me any well grounded reproach.—I doubt whether the Christians, or the Catholics, of which the last speaker, and those of his opinion, have been talking to us, can make the same challenge—(Great applauses.) There is another consideration.—Paris has great losses—It has been deprived of the commerce of luxury; of that factious splendour which was found at Courts, and invited strangers hither. Well! we must repair these losses.—Let me then represent to you the times, that are fast approaching, when our Philosophers, whose names are celebrated throughout Europe, PETION, SYEYES, CONDORCET, and others—surrounded in our Pantheon, as the Greek Philosophers were at Athens, with a croud of disciples coming from all parts of Europe, walking like the Peripatetics, and teaching—this Man the system of the universe, and developing the progress of all human knowledge; that in perfectioning the Social System, and shewing in our decree of the 17th of June, 1789, the seeds of the insurrection of the 14th of July, and the 10th of August, and of all those insurrections which are spreading with such rapidity throughout Europe—so that these young strangers, on their return to their respective countries, may spread the same lights, and may operate for the happiness of mankind, similar revolutions throughout the world. (Numberless applauses arose, almost throughout the whole Assembly.

From a New York Paper of the 8th. of April.

LONDON, February 9.

The general Topick of discourse throughout the World, is, the multiplied follies and Crimes of the French Nation:——

Or rather, of that rabble who have seized the reins of Government without being able to hold them. The dangers and calamities of war are overlooked or despised when we contemplate those enormities which urge the nations to just, and in a political view, prudent vengeance. The levity, inconsistency, inhumanity, and injustice of the Jacobin Party of France are unparalled in history; even in that of the tumultuous and highly irritable Republics of Greece. The outline in the picture of the French at this moment is, that they are one day kissing and the next day stabbing one another; at the same time that they decry the principles and the authority of religion, they are at every turn sealing their transitory resolutions with the sanction of an oath: they attempt to lay the foundation of a Republic, the principles of which form of government, is virtue, in an act of horrid injustice, which, if it is to be effectual for the intended purpose, must be followed up with other acts of blood, so long as a branch of the House of Bourbon draws the vital air: they murder their innocent, their excellent King, and at the same instant meditate the utter abolition of capital punishments for ever; they renounce the ambition of conquest, and yet send forth their ferocious plunderers in every direction, and lay the provinces they seize under the severest contributions; they give out that they will maintain the forms with the spirit of freedom; and yet we find them, in the Netherlands, approving or disapproving popular elections, as they suit or are repugnant to their own views of domination! This is a true picture of the French mob at the present moment; but, we may add, that the original from which it is taken cannot be lasting.—A new face of affairs must soon appear, whether the Eighty-three Departments should be left, and even confined by a surrounding military cordon, to bite and devour one another like mad dogs in a kennel, or penetrated and pierced on many sides, by many wounds, by many nations. In speaking of this unhappy people, we are careful to mark a distinction between the party that now rules, at least so far as to prevent the return of order and justice, and such men of honour, wisdom, intelligence and moderation, as formed the first National Assembly; and are now to be found in France, though overpowered, silenced, proscribed, and menaced with many terrors. The Constitution that they planned was such as no friend to liberty could, on moral ground, disapprove; although, for want of a third power in the State, a power between the tumult of Democracy and the prerogative of the Monarch, it was easy to foresee, and was in fact often predicted, that it could not be lasting.

But among the individual objects of universal horror and detestation that now make a figure on the theatre of France, whom guilt and abjection of soul have raised among his peers to a bad eminence, there is a general presentiment in the breasts of all who mention the blasted character of PHILLIP EGALITE, that he cannot go out of the world by a natural exit. On the sober and dispassionate ground of reasoning, from history, and the principles of human nature, it is very probable that, deserted by the mercenary mob that now surrounds him, he will one day fall by a poignard;—or, if he escapes a violent death, like BOTHWELL, the murderer of HENRY DARNLEY, who wore a matrimonial crown in Scotland, he will be driven to madness by remorse and despair, and end his days in a dungeon.

It must be obvious to every thinking man, who has observed the conduct of the Convention, that the Government of this Country have kept their temper with the greatest prudence, and have evinced a desire of avoiding a war with France, had it been possible. If the temper of Administration were less pacific they would not have waited till France declared war. After that Step, 'tis time for the BRITISH LION to rouse, and no one deserves the name of an Englishman who wishes his Terrors to cease, till his dastardly Enemies are prostrate before him.

FEBRUARY, 12.—The British fleet was still at Spithead, consisting of about 70 sail, frigates included.

FEB. 14.—Monday evening the Great Seal was put to the following law arrangements:—Sir James Eyre, Knight, to be Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas; Sir Archibald Macdonald to be Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer; Sir John Scott to be Attorney General; and John Mitford, Esq; to be Sollicitor General.

January 29.——The Court is in Mourning for the melancholy death of his Most Christian Majesty; and short as the notice was the whole House of Commons, some four or five Members excepted, appeared yesterday in black, and the countenances of all present, bore impressions of those sentiments, which might be expected from the wounded & indignant humanity of Englishmen.

LIVERPOOL, January 28.

When the melancholy account of the murder of Louis arrived here on Saturday, universal despondency took place, and a settled gloom of pity occupied the countenance of every one. The flag on the exchange, at the custom house, and at the tide-surveyor's office, was hoisted half up, and the shipping through the different docks exhibited the same sympathetic appearance, which continued throughout the whole of yesterday.

NEW-YORK, February 12.

We are informed by a Gentleman just arrived from the Salt-Works in Kentucky, that, on the 17th of January last the Indians killed three men at the Bear Wallow; on the Road to the Settlements of Cumberland.

KNOXVILLE, January the 22.

On Saturday last arrived in Town, James Carey one of the Interpreters, the standing Turkey, the Warrior's Son, the Big Fellow, George Paris, and George Miller from the beloved Town of Estanaula, and several other Cherokees from Chota, with further confirmation of the Sincerity of the Overtures of Colonel Watts for peace with the united States; and on Tuesday they returned to Chota, under an Escort to the Frontiers.

On the 7th of December, a party of Cavalry in service for the protection of Mero District, about 8 miles from Nashville, were fired at by about 20 Indians, who put them to flight. They killed John Hawkins, shot one Horse; and barbarously mangled Hawkins's Body and scalped it.

On the 29th of the same month, John Haggard was killed and scalped about 6 miles from Nashville——18 Balls were shot into him——His Wife was killed last Summer, and 5 small Children are left in Poverty and wretchedness.

Lately arrived at Will's Town, 9 Shawanese, who had passed on to the Creeks of Choctawas, for the purpose of exciting them to go to war with the United States. They are to return through the Cherokee Towns, with an expectation of meeting that nation in full council at Estanaula. They informed the Cherokees, that the Shawanese were determined to fall on the Chickasaws and cut them off for joining General St. Clair.

It apears from the better information, that Mrs. Crochet, of Georgia was killed by the Cherokees and not by the Creeks.

The Indians who killed Richardson's family, were from Nickajack, one of the lowest Cherokee towns on the Tenessee.

We have extracted the following from a London Paper.

WESTMINSTER HALL, Nov. 19.

Mr. Justice ASHHURST'S charge to the Grand Jury for the County of Middlesex.

" Gentlemen of the Grand Jury,

" I have the honour of meeting you upon the stated return of this solemnity of putting in execution the Criminal Law, and of bringing such offenders to Justice as have been guilty of a breach of the Law, Gentlemen, there is no nation in the world that can boast of a better system of Government than that under which we have the happiness to live. Here no man is so high as to be above the reach of the Law, and no man so low as not to be within the protection of it. The Power of the Crown on the one hand, and the Liberty of the Subject on the other, are both effectually secured, and at the same time kept within their proper limits. Gentlemen, the Law of this Country only lays such restraints on the actions of individuals as are necessary for the safety and good order of the community at large, and such restraints are so far from being infringements on Civil Liberty, that Civil Liberty could not subsist without them. For if every man were left to the free and uncountrouled impulse of his own mind, as in a state of nature, no man could be secure of his person or property, and the weak would become a prey to the strong. But in a state of Civil government each individual grows strong in the strength of the community.

" Gentlemen, it is Civil Liberty that is the parent of Industry, and consequently of Wealth. For in a state of nature there was no security to property, and no man thought of property further than for the momentary supply of his own immediate necessities. But when men have entered into society the conscientiousness that their property is secure induces to habits of industry. Man in that state does not bend his pursuits to the mere supply of his present wants, but looks forward to the future ages. The mutual wants of men produce a mutual supply; this leads to trade and commerce, and extends a man's connections beyond the narrow circle of his own family; and thus mutual wants bring mutual happiness. But, Gentlemen, as a preliminary step to the procuring of these enjoyments, it was necessary that mankind, on entering into Society, should give up into the hands of Government that species of Liberty which resulted from the perfect equality of man, and where no man had a right to impose on another a rule of conduct, but every man, as far as his strength carried him through, followed his own will. But Gentlemen, a state of society cannot subsist without subordination; there must be general rules laid down by the coercive power of the State where ever it resides, as a standard by which the actions of men are to be measured and punished, so as to prevent them from being injurious to the rights and happiness of their fellow citizens. And there must be a coercive power in such hands as the Constitution has thought fit to place it, to enforce such laws and rules of action as the wisdom of the state has prescribed. Happily for us Gentlemen, we are not bound by any laws but such as are ordained by the virtual consent of the whole kingdom, which every man has the means of knowing: and if men judged right, they would be persuaded their happiness entirely depended on a due observance and support of these Laws. There have, however, under the best systems of Government been found men of corrupt principles, who having forsaken honest industry, wish to throw every thing into confusion, and to live by rapine and plunder; when that is the case, it is become necessary for the coercive power of the state to lend its restraining hand, and to punish offences of such a flagrant nature. There is no prospect of reformation till such corrupt Members be cut off, to prevent others being contaminated by their example. But, though crimes must not go unpunished, I may venture to affirm, that there is no nation whatever that is so careful of the natural liberty of the subject, or has made such humane provisions for offenders, as the nation in which we live.

" Gentlemen, the ordaining of this preliminary step—the inquest, such as that on which you now appear, composed of Gentlemen of rank and figure in the country, is a guard and caution unknown in every other country. And after you have given your opinion that the matter is fit for further enquiry, the accused has a right to have his indictment tried by a Jury, which is a most invaluable privilege.

" The Law, Gentlemen, is no less careful in protecting men's civil rights. There is no country where the law is more uprightly or more impartially administered. For this blessing we are indebted to the wise and prudent form of our Constitution, and to that our commerce has been extended beyond the example of former ages. And we all know that this is the case of every manufacturing town in this country. Such is the flourishing state of this Kingdom, and such the happy fruits of liberty and peace, one would suppose there was not a man in the kingdom, who did not feel it, and feel it with a grateful heart; and yet I am sorry to say there are men of dark and gloomy hearts, who would wish to overturn the general fabric of our Constitution, which has been the work of ages, and would give us in return a system of universal anarchy and confusion. There have been publications in which the authors disclaim all idea of subordination, as inconsistent with the natural right and equality of mankind, and recommend the example of a neighbouring nation as a model for our imitation. Alas! humanity is called upon to pity the deplorable situation of that country, but it is a very ill chosen example of imitation, to hold forth to a nation in a most flourishing state of happiness; and it is pretty extraordinary that with our eyes open we should wish to plunge ourselves into the same abyss of misery with that neighbouring nation. One might naturally have expected that doctrines so absurd, so nonsensical, and so pernicious would have been treated with that contempt they deserve, and would have sunk into oblivion. But when one not only finds such tenets held, but societies of men formed, who meet for the express purpose of disseminating such doctrines: and who hold a regular correspondence with other societies in a neighbouring nation, it is time for every sober man who is at all interested in the welfare and safety of his country, as much as in him lies to endeavour to crush such unconstitutional and pernicious doctrines. Gentlemen, his Majesty, who is always anxious and watchful over the safety and prosperity of his people, did some time ago issue his Royal Proclamation, which received the approbation of every good citizen of this kingdom. And, Gentlemen, I am afraid the circumstances which gave rise to that Proclamation are not yet so totally at an end, as to make it unreasonable for me now to recall them to your recollection.—Gentlemen, his Majesty in that Proclamation states—"That divers wicked and seditious Writings, &c." (Here his Lordship recited the substance of the Proclamation.)

" Gentlemen, I cannot help expressing the happiness I feel that his Majesty's Proclamation has been received with every mark of respect through the kingdom; and there are scarcely any parts of the kingdom that have not presented an Address to his Majesty in consequence of it and who have not expressed their hatred and abhorrence of such pernicious doctrines, and shew they are not to be duped out of their happiness by the shallow artifices of such men as have nothing to lose, and who would wish to enrich themselves by the destruction of all Government. His Majesty's Servants and Ministers have paid due attention to the Proclamation, so far as to have instituted proceedings against several libellous and seditious publications. But, Gentlemen, though the Proclamation has tended to produce the desired effect, it has not done it so effectually as to prevent the disseminating of such kind of writings; and all sober men ought to be diligent in supporting the cause of order and Government.

" Gentlemen, I trust your minds will be impressed with these ideas, and that you will be assiduous in supporting our present form of Government. Such of you as are in a private station will endeavour by your example to discountenance such kind of doctrines; and those of you who are clothed with the robes of Magistracy, will be diligent in exerting yourselves to bring to justice all who have been guilty of a breach of the law, by publishing tenets of that pernicious nature.

" I shall not take up more of your time, but recommend it to you to proceed with all due dispatch to the public service, and I have no doubt but you will discharge your duty in a manner honourable to yourselves, and so as to deserve the thanks of your country.

VENLO, March 2.

LETTER from General DE PIRCH to Major General Count DE RANDWIKE.

"SIR,

"I ſend you an account of General de Clairfayt. As it muſt give univerſal pleaſure, I have embraced the earlieſt opportunity of tranſmitting it to you with a requeſt that you will communicate it alſo wherever you may think proper. Our arms perhaps, will have the ſame ſucceſs to morrow; for the advanced poſts will be attacked, and we ſhall then endeavour to get poſſeſſion of Ruremonde. I am, &c.

(Signed) "DE PIRCH."

Official Diſpatch from General CLAIRFAYT.

"This day has been perfectly fortunate for the Imperial troops. Laſt night we croſſed the Roer, and drove the enemy both from the quarter of Duren, and that of Juliers, to the diſtance of one league and a quarter beyond Aldenhoven. The loſs of the enemy, in killed and wounded, including priſoners to the number of 600 amounts on the whole to 2,000 men. Twelve cannon, 13 ammunition waggons, and their military cheſt alſo fell into our hands.

"His Royal Highneſs the Arch-duke Charles attacked in perſon, this afternoon, with the advanced guard, ſome batteries, where there were nine cannon, and took poſſeſſion of them.

"Our loſs amounts only to ten killed and forty wounded. We particularly regret among the former, Col. de Portzheim, and Capt. Meſmachers.

"You will be ſo kind General, as to communicate this account to his Serene Highneſs the Duke of Brunſwick.

(Signed) "CLAIRFAYT."

To Major Gen. Baron de Wencheim.

COLOGNE, March 4.

Yeſterday afternoon 83 waggons with French wounded, and a ſtrong detachment of priſoners arrived here, which were taken by the Imperialiſts in the action on the Roer the day before yeſterday.

This day 24 waggons with wounded Frenchmen among whom are ſeveral officers, entered this place with ſome carts full of ſmall arms, and 11 pieces of cannon.

It is reported that the French, had 6500 men killed and wounded, and loſt 45 pieces of cannon, the Imperialiſts had 350 killed, and 263 wounded.

This evening 20 more waggons of wounded Frenchmen are come in. We have juſt received accounts of a warm action between the Auſtrians under General Beaulieu and the French, to the advantage of the former, who killed a vaſt number of the French, took ſeveral pieces of cannon, and drove the enemy from Stablo and Malmedy.

CLEVES, March 6.

This inſtant two authentic letters arrived here from Ruremonde and Venlo, ſtating that a column of the Auſtrians again defeated the French on the 4th inſtant at Neil, before Ruremonde, whereupon the latter threw themſelves with great haſte into Ruremonde, which they evacuated immediately. The Auſtrians to the number of 1000 men, took poſſeſſion of that place yeſterday the 5th inſtant.

They likewiſe evacuated fort St. Michael, and the Duke will this day paſs the Meuſe at Venlo, with a part of his army. The French retreated from the left bank of the Meuſe, and fled through Neer, towards Brabant. The Imperial army has likewiſe paſſed the Meuſe at Ruremonde.

ROTTERDAM, March 8.

Copy of a Letter from an Aid-de-Camp to his Royal Highneſs the Duke of York, and lately acting with Prince Frederick, Duke of Brunſwick.

"UTRECHT, 7th March, 4 o'clock P. M.

"I have juſt time to tell you, that I left the Duke of Brunſwick's head quarters at Bruggen yeſterday at noon, and you have in all probability heard of the French having evacuated Liege, Mazyk, Ruremonde, and fort St. Michael; and alſo of their having raiſed the ſiege of Maeſtricht.

"The only news that remains for me to tell you, is that General de la Tour paſſed the Meuſe at Ruremonde the day before yeſterday, and is in purſuit of the French General. General Clairfayt is at Tongerin (about ſix hours from Louvain) with 8000 men. The Pruſſians are extending the right flank to cover Grave, for which place ſome people have apprehenſions; but I am apt to think it is without any juſt cauſe. Bridges are thrown over the Meuſe at Ruremonde and Venlo, and a Dutch garriſon is already in Fort St. Michael.

Letter from the Commiſſioners ſent to Belgium.

Liege, March 3, 1793.

"Citizens our Colleagues,

"As you will have laid before you the Letter which we addreſſed to the national convention, we ſhall not here repeat the contents of it. But we muſt add, that every thing is in a moſt alarming ſituation; that the army which retired from Aix-la-Chapelle, and the environs is almoſt entirely diſbanded; that the army will perhaps to morrow, or perhaps this evening, be in Liege—in Liege where all our proviſions are collected, and which contains immenſe treaſures! We give this account from the information of General Valence, at whoſe houſe we now write. He aſſures us, that if Dumourier himſelf does not arrive, he cannot anſwer for the conſequences.

"We are endeavouring to rally the fugitives, and are uſing our utmoſt endeavours with the proviſional adminiſtration and the citizens, that the people of Liege may ſecond us, and ſupply the wants of our army. The dangers reſulting from this want are ſo much the greater, as the enemy are very ſtrong in cavalry while we have ſcarcely any at all.

(Signed)

De la Croix Goujon, and Merlin de Douay.

LIEGE, March 1.

The Auſtrians made themſelves maſters of this place on the evening of the 5th. An arch of the great bridge having been broken down by the French, the Duke of Wirtemberg was not able to make his way thither ſooner.

The Prince of Saxe Cobourge has demanded from this city 600,000 florins by way of preſent to his army and all the towns which were ſo imprudent as to receive the French, will undergo the ſame fate. Remonſtrances have been made to the Prince on this ſubject; but he replied he could not depart from his demand.

The Hulans have ſeized ſeveral waggons loaded with ſilver plate; and 45 ounces of gold plate taken from the Cathedral, have been in part ſeized near St. Tron. The plate of the Chapter of St. Peter, was luckily forgotten.

Laſt Sunday, three French prieſts, ſeven Emigrants, and three citizens were maſſacred here by the Patriots.

LEYDEN, March 11.

The following is ſaid to be a correct ſtatement of the forces of the combined powers now acting againſt France on the banks of the Rhine, viz. under the command of the Prince de Saxe Cobourge and General Clairfayt, 38,400 infantry, and 12,000 cavalry; Prince Hohenlohe, 25,000 troops; Count Colloredo, near Mantheim, 26,000; General Beaulieu, 14,000; General Wurmſer, in the Briſgan, 25,000; beſides 20,000 Croats, now marching through Germany to the ſame deſtination; making in the whole 180,300 troops; which number, with the addition of the Pruſſian armies, and the army of the Empire, make above 300,000 effective men. It is alſo ſaid that Cuſtine's army is reduced to the laſt extremity by ſickneſs and want.

MARGATE, March 27.

By an expreſs arrived this morning from Oſtend, we learn that Oſtend is evacuated,

The maſter of the boat adds, that the Auſtrians were at Bruges, yeſterday, and expected to be at Oſtend this day.

That the French had ſent a number of ſailors from Dunkirk, in order to get out the ſhips from the harbour but they were obliged to make the beſt of their way back again without ſucceſs.

He further ſays, that Dumourier is wounded and a priſoner at Bruſſels; and that there has been a very great ſlaughter among the French, for the Auſtrians gave no quarter.

N. B. The expreſs left Oſtend this morning about 10 o'clock.

On the 2d of March his Imperial Majeſty acknowledged Monſieur, the eldeſt brother of the late Louis XVI. as Regent of France.

The French General Dampiere, who was taken priſoner near Henry-Chapelle, died of his wounds on the 7th of March.

From the New York Daily Advertiſer, May 4.

PARIS, March 18.

The laſt diſpatches from General Dumourier are of the utmoſt importance. A very ſerious action took place on the 13th between Bruſſels and Louvain, the details of which will probably be laid before the convention to morrow. Yeſterday a bill was diſtributed and poſted up in different parts of Paris, ſtating, that the deputies of the national convention and the whole municipality ought to be maſſacred, and that it is abſolutely neceſſary that France ſhould have a king. Intelligence from the interior parts of the country, prove that there is great commotion among the people throughout every part of the republic. The moſt ſerious diſturbances have been at Montargis. The dearneſs of bread, and the law for recruiting, were the pretences for this commotion.—Manuel who reſigned his ſeat in the convention, when ſentence was about to be paſſed on Louis XVI. has unfortunately fallen a victim to it. This was the place where he was born, and he had retired to it diſguſted with the violent proceedings in the convention. The mob wiſhed to oblige him to enrol his name as a volunteer. He refuſed, and pleaded the law which exempts perſons above the age of forty. The miſguided rabble, incenſed at this refuſal, ſtabbed him in a number of places, and he expired amidſt the moſt cruel treatment.—The priſoners of the Temple, ſupport, with the greateſt conſtancy and perfect reſignation, all the evils of their captivity. Notwithſtanding the fog, and a humid atmoſphere, they walked this morning upon the platform of the tower. They ſupported themſelves upon the battlements, and fixed their eyes upon the amazing height of their ſituation, the affecting image of their former grandeur. Maria Antoinette took the Dauphin in her arms, and made him view the precipice quite cloſe to it. The ſon of Egalite has ſet out for the army of the Var, & both he & his father have quarrelled with Dumourier.

LONDON, March 13.

The Syren frigate, which had a ſhare in the glory of the late defeat of the French, arrived yeſterday from Helvoet.

The Engliſh ſailors diſplayed their true ſpirit. They entered on board the gun-boats, hoiſted the Britiſh flag, and by their alacrity and courage animated the Dutch to diſplay the courage of men in defending their country To this may be attributed the favorable turn which the war has already taken in Holland.

Six or ſeven Britiſh ſhips of the line are ordered for the Mediterranean. Theſe are probably to act in conjunction with the Spaniſh fleet.

The Ferret ſloop, Capt. Novell, is arrived in the Downs, from a cruize, and brought in a ſhip laden with corn, from Hambro, bound to Bourdeaux.

The Iris frigate has captured La Communitie, of eight guns, about ten leagues to the Northward of the Texell, and her prize, the Leue Vrow Parocher, from Liſbon to Amſterdam, and carried both into Sheerneſs.

March 23.—We now ſee the French driven from Aix-la-Chapelle, Liege, Thirlemont, Ruremonde, Gertruydenberg, Maeſtricht, Klundert, Williamſtadt, Doevern, Sardinia, &c. Even the ſtrong caſtle of Konigſtein could not withſtand the continued efforts of Pruſſian valour; and the deſperate reſiſtance of the emigrants at Maeſtricht, with the ſteady oppoſition of the Dutch at Williamſtadt, have given a check to the Gallic ardour, which they will ſcarce be able to recover this campaign. For Dumourier, Cuſtine, Miranda and the other heroes of the French army, we ſhall now hear of the Prince of Saxe Cobourg, Clairfayt, prince of Heſſe, the prince of Brunſwick, prince of Orange, &c. To this laſt reverſe in the ſtate of the French affairs, it will not be arrogance to ſay, that the timely arrival of the Britiſh forces has greatly contributed. Their unexpected appearance on the Dutch coaſt gave freſh ſtrength to Batavian valour; and though it cannot be ſaid that they have hitherto been engaged in real action, yet their preſence has not been a little ſerviceable to the Dutch, by inſpiring them with new courage; and by taking the defence of Dort, and other places into their hands, they left the Dutch at leiſure to attend to more diſtant quarters, where the forces of the enemy ſeemed to threaten the firſt attacks. As to our ſeamen, never happier than when in action, the fine tough old fellow, who commanded at Williamſtadt, will acknowledge, the ſervices received from them.—Their activity in the gun-boats gave the firſt repulſe to the French before that town, and by obliging Dumourier to change his poſition, may be ſaid, in a great meaſure, to have ſaved the place. The Hollanders who know this will doubtleſs be ready to reward it, and be no leſs thankful for the countenance given them by our ſoldiery who will be as forward to fight for them, if an opportunity ſhould offer.

March 26.—All the accounts by the Dutch mail of yeſterday, agree in ſtating, that the conflict between the Auſtrians and French, on the 18th, was obſtinate and bloody; and that great bravery and military ſkill were manifeſted by both armies.

By Lord Aukland's diſpatches, it appears that the French on the 8th, attacked the Auſtrians at Nerwind, near Tirelemont. That they were repulſed in the centre and on the right. That they made ſome impreſſion on the left wing in the afternoon, when General Clairfayt brought into action 12,000 horſe, who decided the victory. The French for ſome time made good their retreat, but being at length broke, the Auſtrian cavalry made dreadful havoc amongſt them, and killed between ſix and ſeven thouſand.—They continued the ſlaughter untill the approach of night, when the courier was diſpatched with the above news, who reports that the French loſt 84 pieces of cannon.

The expreſs to Carlton houſe is ſimilar to the above except that the loſs of the French is ſtated at 2000 men, and 32 pieces of cannon.

Letters from Bruſſels ſtate that Dumourier attacked the combined army at 7 o'clock in the morning, between Tirelemont and St. Tron. The battle was fought with various ſucceſs till the afternoon, when the ardour and intrepidity of the French troops ſurmounted every obſtacle.—Valence at their head, they charged the left wing of the enemy ſo furiouſly, that it was ſoon broke, and gave way in every direction. The purſuit was vigorous for ſome time, and great carnage enſued. At that moment when the combined army was threatened with a compleat defeat, General Clairfayt flanked the purſuers with an immenſe body of horſe, and as they had purſued forward beyond the protection of the artillery, they were left expoſed to the ſuperior force of the cavalry. General Valence alternately retreated, and advanced till he was killed by a muſket ball. The conteſt was obſtinately maintained, until it was put an end to by the darkneſs of the night, and both ſides claimed the victory.

Nerwind, near which this action took place, is celebrated for the victory over the Prince of Orange by Marſhal Luxembourg, on the 27th of July, 1693.

It appears by diſpatches Government have received this morning, by way of Flanning, that the victory on the 18th was only a prelude to ſtill greater ſucceſs.

On Friday laſt, the 22d inſt. the Auſtrians in ſpite of every manœuvre of the French to avoid a conflict, forced them to a general action. The battle was bloody, but the ſucceſs of the Auſtrians was deciſive—they gained a complete victory; and to uſe the words of a private letter, the French were totally cut to pieces.

The action took place near Louvain.—According to the Government diſpatches, the French loſt 17,000 men killed, wounded, and priſoners. Among the latter is Gen. Valence. Other accounts ſtate, that Gen. Dumourier only eſcaped the ſame fate by ſtriking off the arm of the Auſtrian ſoldier who laid hold of him.

In conſequence of this intelligence, inſtant orders were given to Admiral M'Bride, to ſail with his ſquadron and co-operate with the Dutch off Oſtend. The only fear entertained of his not being able ſpeedily to execute theſe orders, is on account of the wind, which is rather unfavourable to his paſſing the ſound.

The two following letters, from Dover, mention the intelligence to have been received there from Oſtend.

DOVER, March 25.

I beg leave to acquaint you, that there is an account received here from Oſtend, that the French have been totally defeated by the Auſtrians on the 22d inſt. near Louvain, and that the former are flying in all directions. The particulars have not yet tranſpired, but the number of killed and wounded, it is ſaid, are inconceivable, and among the latter Gen. Dumourier.

DOVER, March 25.

This morning a boat arrived expreſs from Oſtend, which brought an account of a deciſive action having happened between the Auſtrians and the French, near St. Tron, in which the latter have been totally defeated with the loſs of 40,000 men, and 80 or 40 pieces of artillery; that Dumourier was wounded; and that the French are retiring from the Netherlands with the utmoſt precipitation.

All the veſſels at Oſtend are Ordered to proceed to Dunkirk, and our cruiſers are now beating to windward to endeavour to intercept them.

LONDON, March 16.

The Venerable Earl of Mansfield on Sunday cloſed his earthly period of exiſtence; which he had long filled with ſo much and ſuch deſerved honour, having juſt entered into the 86th year of his age, being born March 2, 1708.

His Lordſhip retired in 1788 from the diſtinguiſhed office of Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench, which he had held for upwards of 30 years with a ſplendour and reputation unrivalled and almoſt unqueſtioned. The benevolence of his private life was on a par with the excellence of his public character; and though envy has not been wanting in her attacks, ſhe was not able to deface his virtues, nor to intrude on his happineſs to the lateſt hour. His imagination was lively; and his judgment penetrating to the laſt moment, that he ſat on the Bench, and long after. It would not be eaſy, indeed we know not that it would be poſſible, to point out the ſucceſſor to his mind among the Lawyers of the nobility of the preſent day.

His Lordſhip retained his faculties till within a very ſhort time of his diſſolution, of which he appeared perfectly ſenſible.

He married September 1738, Elizabeth, ſiſter to the late, Aunt to the preſent Earl of Wincheſſea; (who died in 1784, aged 76) by whom he had no iſſue. He was created Baron of Mansfield on November 8, 1756, and Earl, with the ſame diſtinction, on October 19, 1776, with the remainder to the heirs of his father David, fifth Viſcount Stormont.

His Lordſhip's father David, fifth Viſcount Stormont of Scotland, had ſix ſons, of whom his Lordſhip was the fourth.

Lord Mansfield has died worth about 26,000l. a year, in mortgages—all of which, but 100,000l. on a noble Duke, are in Ireland. Lord Stormont, now Earl of Mansfield, inherits almoſt the whole of this vaſt property. Though there are left tenantcies and legacies to the Miſſes Murray, his Nieces, and to Sir Thomas Mills.

FRANCE

NATIONAL CONVENTION.

THURSDAY, March 7.

WAR WITH SPAIN.

Barrere in the name of the committee of general defence, gave in a report on the political ſituation of France with regard to Spain. He read a letter from the Miniſter for foreign affairs on this ſubject, and endeavoured to ſhew that the King of Spain had never remained neuter; that the Republic ought to avenge the inſults which it had received from that monarch; and that one enemy more would only be a preſage of new victories. He therefore propoſed, and the Convention unanimouſly decreed,

Art. I. The National Convention declares in the name of the French Nation, that in conſideration of the multiplied acts of aggreſſion on the part of Spain,

THE FRENCH REPUBLIC IS AT WAR WITH THE KING OF SPAIN.

II. The National Convention charges the Executive Council to call forth all the forces which may appear necessary for repelling the aggression, and for maintaining the independence, dignity and interests of the French Republic. It will therefore pursue such measures that the army of the Pyrennées, be raised to 100,000 men.

III. The Executive Council shall employ all the naval and land forces, as it shall judge necessary for the defence of the republic.

IV. Six Commissioners chosen from the Convention shall repair to the Southern Departments to provide for the want of the army, to accelerate the recruiting, and to animate the zeal of the citizens.

Recapitulation of the losses of the French in their late defeats.

In their attack on Cagliari, 500 killed; the defeat of the French by Clairfayt, 2000 killed, wounded, and prisoners; ditto by Prince de Cobourge, 4000 killed, 1600 prisoners; ditto by Prince of Brunswick, 1300 killed, 700 prisoners. Total 7800 killed, 2300 wounded, independant of the loss of men in the repulse sustained by Dumourier before Williamstadt; of Miranda's army before Maestricht; and by the successful attack made by the Archduke, on the French, in which the latter lost nine cannon.

In the action between the French and Imperialists at Dorenie, wherein 2000 French fell, the whole loss of the Austrians consisted of ten killed, and forty wounded.

Repulse before Williamstadt

The following particulars of the defeat of the French before Williamstadt were communicated in a letter to a respectable merchant in the city, brought by the Messenger which arrived on Saturday from Holland. It is with an honest pride we have to state, that a part of our countrymen were actually engaged in so glorious a business.

Capt. Manley, of the Syren, having previously concerted the business with the Governor of Williamstadt, brought his ship to bear successfully upon the French army.—The French made an attack, in which they were much annoyed by the fire of the English frigate.

This, as it was unexpected, Dumourier was unprepared for. The garrison made a sally, and seven hundred of the French were killed by the fire of the garrison and the Syren together.

The French fell back, but returned again to the attack. At this moment a sluice was opened, which had the desired effect, upwards of 1000 of the enemy were killed by the fire of the Syren, the spirit and vigour of the garrison, and the effect of the inundation. Dumourier found it in vain to persist. He abandoned his works, and retired to the distance of a league, up to the middle in water.

HAGUE, March 13.

It appears, by recent accounts received here, that 48 pieces of cannon were taken at Liege, and very large magazines of hay, corn, and above 40,000 muskets.

March 17. Intelligence is just received here, that the French have raised the siege of Williamstadt, evacuated Klundert, and retreated towards Antwerp, after setting fire to the village of Moerdyk, and to their own batteries, and leaving some cannon behind them.

VIENNA, March 2.

A Courier arrived here yesterday, at four o'clock in the afternoon, from Petersburgh, with the official account, that the Empress of Russia had acceded to the Coalition of the Powers of Europe, and that a fleet of ten ships of the line are soon to quit the ports of her Majesty, in order to join the Spanish Squadron, and to act in concert with the Spaniards against France. Count Rasumousky, Minister from Russia, in a conference yesterday with the Vice Chancellor, Count Cobenzel, officially communicated to him this resolution of the Empress, his Mistress.

BOIS-LE-DUC, March 9.

It is confirmed that the French evacuated the country of Kuyk on the 6th, the day before which the Prince of Hesse Darmstadt, Commandant of Grave, had come out with thirty horse, to drive away some French Hussars, who wanted to make themselves masters of a Sluys, but they retired before the Prince came up to them, he however, took some waggons loaded with oats and hay destined for the French troops.

HAERLEM, March 11.

We learn from Heusden, that the French evacuated the fortress of Doeveren on Tuesday night in so much haste that they threw two pieces of cannon which they found there into the water; that fort was then again taken possession of by our troops, who made a French outpost of 16 men prisoners, who had not timely notice of the retreat of their countrymen. Prince Frederick of Orange entered Heusden with about 2000 Anspach troops which have filled that place with military.

We have received verbal accounts from Bois-le-Duc that the French are assembling in the neighbourhood of Diest. We also learn that they are forming an army on the Hesde, near Breda.

NIAGARA, May 30.

Extract of a letter from Montreal, dated 13 May 1793.

General Custine is besieged in Mentz, by the King of Prussia, who has refused any surrender but—at discretion!

Dumourier was defeated by the allied armies on the 18th of March, who pursued the French till night, the latter lost 32 pieces of cannon and near ten thousand men; and on the 19th the allied armies were in pursuit—The French on their retreat were refused admittance into Dunkirk.—

In Paris and all over France they are stirring, and Placards have been fixed up in Paris—NO REPUBLIC! A KING! AND LIMITED MONARCHY!

The people have obliged the Convention to Pay Seven Millions of Livres, for the flour they are collecting; and one of themselves is obliged by turns to attend at each Bakehouse to distribute equally and prevent tumult.

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, will have a Levee on Tuesday next, the 4th of June, at Eleven o'clock in the Morning at the COUNCIL CHAMBER, in the evening there will be a Ball, it being the Anniversary of His Majesty's BIRTH-DAY.—His Excellency will likewise have a Levee during the sitting of the Legislature, on every Sunday morning at the same hour and place.

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor has been pleased to make the following appointments—JOHN M'GILL, Esq; to be a Master in Chancery.—JOHN SMALL, Esq; Clerk and Register.—JAMES CLARKE, Esq; to be Clerk of the Legislative Council, vice PETER CLARKE, Esq; deceased.

On Saturday last, General LINCOLN arrived at Navy Hall, from Oswego, in his way to Sunduky, to meet the Indians, with the other Commissioners, from the United States, as mentioned in our last week's Paper.

Several vessels arrived here from Kingston, the Speaker and some other Members of the House of Assembly, came passengers in them.

THURSDAY, JUNE 6, 1793.

SPEECH OF HIS EXCELLENCY
JOHN GRAVES SIMCOE, Esq;
Lieutenant Governor, &c. &c. &c,

To both Houses of the LEGISLATURE of this Province, Assembled on Friday the 31st. of May, 1793.

HONORABLE GENTLEMEN of the LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL, and GENTLEMEN of the HOUSE of ASSEMBLY,

THE Persons who at present exercise the Supreme Authority in France, having declared War against His Majesty, I think it proper to recommend to your early attention the new modelling of a Militia Bill, which the more urgent business of the last Session prevented you from accomplishing.

I have the firmest reliance that it will be framed in a manner suitable to the principles of the British Constitution, so as to unite the interest and convenience of individuals, with an establishment necessary to the public protection.

It is with great satisfaction I am able to communicate to you that the insidious attempts of those who envy the prosperity of the British Nation, or are avowedly disaffected to the Principles of it's Constitution, have been completely counteracted and defeated by the Wisdom of His Majesty's Councils, and by the affectionate attachment, and spirited resolves of all Ranks, and descriptions of his Majesty's Subjects; and it is manifest that upon this important occasion, Britons have acted with that Unanimity, and Loyalty which might be expected from men who know how to estimate the vain assumptions of Innovators, and from the Virtue, the Wisdom, the Struggles, and experience of their Ancestors inherit those civil, and religious blessings which are derived under a free Constitution equally abhorent of absolute Monarchy, arbitrary Aristocracy, or tyrannical Democracy.

The Principles on which those who exercise authority over the French Nation support the War which they have so unjustly begun against his Majesty's Allies cannot fail to call to your recollection how often it has been necessary for Great Britain to stand forth as the Protector of the Liberties of Mankind, and we may entertain a pious confidence, that under the guidance of the Almighty Giver of all victory his Majesty's arms directed to the security of his allies will ultimately be crowned with success, and that it will be the felicity of the British Empire to maintain the Independancy of Europe against all modern aggressions upon those equitable principles which our Ancestors so wisely contributed to establish.

I am happy to congratulate you on the Success which has attended his Majesty's arms in the Protection of his Allies in the East Indies; and I am sure you will readily concur in the observation that a War which has been carried on with consummate vigour and ability under the conduct of Marquis Cornwallis so prosperous and decisive in its events should be terminated with such justice and moderation, is a fresh proof to the Universe of that Magnanimity which has so long characterized the British Nation.

HONORABLE GENTLEMEN & GENTLEMEN,

I have to recommend you to proceed in that laudable course of Unanimity with which you have begun your Legislative functions, and to continue all your consultations to advance the interests, and happiness of this Colony, by making those provisions for the due support of public justice, for the encouragement of Morality, and the punishment of Crimes; which are so necessary to the existence of society.

In all these measures that may promote the real welfare of his Majesty's subjects in this country, and which may tend to the most intimate Union with every part of the British Empire, you cannot fail of meeting with his Majesty's paternal, and beneficent approbation; and you may always be assured that my best endeavours will be exerted to forward the public prosperity not only from the duty which I owe to the King, but from the most sincere attachment which I bear to the Inhabitants of this Province.

The following ADDRESS was made on Monday the 3d. of June by the Honorable LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL, in Answer to His EXCELLENCY'S SPEECH:

TO HIS EXCELLENCY
JOHN GRAVES SIMCOE, Esq;
Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Commander in Chief of His Majesty's Forces, within the same, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

WE his Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Legislative Council of the Province of Upper Canada, in Legislature Assembled, beg leave to return our humble thanks for your Excellency's Speech.

Altho' in the course of our deliberations the expediency of new modelling a Militia Bill, suitable to the condition of the Province was manifest; yet your Excellency's recommendation on account of the War, which has been declared against his Majesty by the Persons who at present exercise the Supreme Authority in France, will direct our immediate attention to that object.

It is with peculiar satisfaction we hear of the beneficial effects resulting from the wisdom of His Majesty's Councils, and the spirited resolves of our fellow Subjects, when exerted in defence of our established form of Government; a system which having been tempered by frequent struggles and cleared from the hurtfull extremes of the Powers that compose it, has by long experience been found to confer every Civil advantage that human Policy can bestow; and therefore we trust will be able to withstand the insidious attempts as well as the open attacks of those unsettled Projectors, who having perplexed themselves are desirous of disturbing the Nations of the Earth with their wild and visionary innovations.

When we call to mind how often it has been neceſſary for Great Britain to ſtand forth for the protection of her allies againſt the inroads of ambitious Potentates, we truſt that the ſame aſſiſtance will be equally efficacious when extended to repel the unprovoked aggreſſions of a miſguided people.

We receive with due ſenſibility your Excellency's congratulations on the ſucceſs of his Majeſty's armies in the Protection of his Allies in the Eaſt Indies; and do joyfully concur in the obſervation that a War, which has been ſo proſperouſly conducted by the ability and vigour of the Marquis Cornwallis ſhould be terminated with ſuch juſtice and moderation, is a freſh proof to the univerſe of that magnanimity which has ſo long characterized the Britiſh Nation.

As the tendency of the meaſures of the different branches of the Legiſlature can only be directed towards the attainment of the public good, ſo we hope there will be no great diverſity of opinion on the means to be adopted for procuring that deſirable end. And we are ready to admit as fixed principles thoſe ſalutary Proviſions ſuggeſted by your Excellency for the due ſupport of Public Juſtice, for the encouragement of Morality, and the puniſhment of Crimes.

The duty and allegiance we owe to his Majeſty, and the intereſt we have in the general Proſperity of all Britiſh ſubjects, would induce us to cultivate the moſt intimate union with every part of the Britiſh Empire. But when we recollect the many inſtances we have received of the Royal Bounty, we confeſs that we are engaged by more than common ties to endeavour to merit His Majeſty's paternal approbation. And from the experience we have had of your Excellency's perſonal exertions in a rigorous ſeaſon, unmindful of inconvenience and fatigue, to extend your views and acquire local knowledge of Parts almoſt unexplored, we have manifeſt proof that your Excellency's regard to the public proſperity does not reſt in Profeſſions merely; and from your liberal Patronage of every uſeful inſtitution we have a poſitive pledge of your Excellency's attachment to the particular welfare of this Province.

Signed by order of the Legiſlative Council,
WILLIAM OSGOODE, SPEAKER.

To which His EXCELLENCY was pleaſed to return the following Anſwer:

HONORABLE GENTLEMEN,

YOUR approbation of my endeavours to be of ſervice to the Country, cannot fail to give me the greateſt pleaſure; and you may be certain in all ſituations of my unremitting exertions for the Welfare and Proſperity of the Province.

The following is the Humble ADDRESS of the Houſe of ASSEMBLY, on Monday the 2d. of June, in Anſwer to His EXCELLENCY'S SPEECH:

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

WE, his Majeſty's moſt loyal and dutiful ſubjects, the Members of the Houſe of Aſſembly of the Province of Upper Canada, in Legiſlature aſſembled; beg leave to return to your Excellency our ſincere thanks for your moſt excellent Speech.

We hear, with the trueſt concern, of the great violence and almoſt univerſal anarchy, that have been introduced by the perſons exerciſing the ſupreme power in France, into that once flouriſhing Kingdom. Violence, that even the Sacred Perſon of Majeſty hath not eſcaped!—Anarchy, that threatens the total deſtruction of that Kingdom. Tho' our natural enemies, we deplore their miſeries:—but as good Citizens, and lovers of rule and order we deteſt their principles.

We aſſure your Excellency, that our utmoſt diligence ſhall be uſed, to frame and compleat ſuch a Militia Bill, as will ſhew not only our promptneſs, to fulfill your Excellency's wiſhes,—but our energy in defending that noble Conſtitution which great Britain has given to us. And which by enabling us to repel all inſults, will ſecure to us the invaluable bleſſings that we derive from it.

We hear with unbounded pleaſure, that, thoſe ſecret engines of deſtruction, that have vainly endeavoured to diſturb the laws of our Parent Country have been diſcovered and cruſhed. And that the efforts of our avowed enemies are equally impotent and abortive. And we are anxious, to declare how proud we ſhall be, to exhibit to our fellow Citizens an equal ardor in manifeſting the trueſt loyalty and love towards our King, & genuine Patriotiſm in defence of our Country.

Theſe ſentiments will prove to your Excellency how much we rejoice at the ſucceſs of his Majeſty's arms in India: And we have the firmeſt reliance under Divine Providence, upon the ſame valor, that hath ſo eminently diſplayed itſelf thro'out that country, for perfecting and enſuring peace to his Allies in Europe.

We aſſure your Excellency, that it ſhall be our early and ſteady endeavour, to adopt and purſue ſuch means, as may thro'out this Province enſure to it's inhabitants, a firm ſupport of Public Juſtice, the encouragement of Morality and the puniſhment of Crimes. And we truſt, that, with the able ſupport that we ſhall receive from your Excellency, we ſhall continue to retain that paternal and beneficent approbation which our King hath hitherto ſo eminently ſhewn to us.

We cannot retire from your Excellency's preſence without expreſſing the high ſenſe we entertain of the unremiting care and anxiety that your Excellency ſhews for the proſperity of this encreaſing Province, and more particularly for thoſe arduous endeavours that your Excellency has lately ſhewn to acquire a thorough knowledge of the nature and condition of the Country in it's population and reſources. And we ſincerely hope that your Excellency may long continue with us to witneſs the advantages, that your exertions will undoubtedly procure us.

Signed by order of the Houſe of Aſſembly,
J. M'DONELL, SPEAKER.

To which HIS EXCELLENCY was pleaſed to return the following ANSWER:

GENTLEMEN,

I feel myſelf infinitely obliged by your approbation of my endeavours to be of ſervice to the Province, and you may depend on my unremitting zeal, in every circumſtance, to advance the public proſperity.

We extract the following intereſting intelligence from the New York Daily Advertiſer, of the 11th. of May.

Foreign Intelligence.

FRANCKFORT, March 14.

New trains of artillery arrive here every day on their way to the Netherlands. The contingent of the Savoy troops arrived in this neighbourhood yeſterday.

ANDERNACK, March 16.

Since morning we have heard a heavy cannonade, which appears to have proceeded from the environs of Mentz, all the boatmen who arrive here aſſure us, that a numerous body of Pruſſian troops croſſed the Rhine on the 9th inſt. near St. Goar, to cut off all communication on that ſide between the French and the city of Mentz.

St. GOAR, March 18.

Yeſterday evening the Pruſſian Colonel Secult, arrived here accompanied by ſeveral officers. They were followed this morning at ſeven o'clock, by twelve or thirteen hundred men, infantry and cavalry, and a large train of heavy artillery. Theſe troops united to thoſe who have quitted Coblentz, are deſtined to drive the French from Bergen, Creutenack, and the environs.

HUY, March 11.

The French troops before they quitted this place on the 6th blew up the large arch of our bridge with a dreadful exploſion. After that diſaſtrous operation, which deranged a great number of houſes, they retreated towards Namur.—The inhabitants of this place then tore up the tree of liberty which has produced ſuch bitter fruit. The town was illuminated in the evening all the bells were ſet a ringing, and joy was viſible in every countenance. The French however being informed that none of the Auſtrians, had yet arrived, returned at ſeven in the evening, to the number of from eight to nine hundred, with four pieces of, cannon, to reſume their poſt and replant the tree of liberty; but they were diſlodged on the 9th. in the morning by the troops of his Imperial Majeſty.

After a ſhort cannonade on both ſides, as ſome fragments of the arch of the bridge which the enemy had deſtroyed ſtill remained, the Auſtrians laid planks over it, on which they paſſed, with their cavalry. The French then betook themſelves to flight and with ſo great precipitation, that they abandoned their cannon and baggage. They loſt ſome men and many priſoners. The Auſtrians were received here with acclamations, inſpired by the lieveſteſt and pureſt joy.

ROTTERDAM, March 22.

We have received the agreeable news, that on the 15th 16th. and 17th. inſtant, the French and Auſtrian armies were inceſſantly engaged. On the 16th. the French took poſſeſſion of Tirelemont, but the next day a general action took place, which was fought with great obſtinacy, and great ſlaughter. At one time the Auſtrian line gave way, but the French preſſing forward with their uſual impetuoſity, fell into the utmoſt confuſion, and were trampled down by the cavalry. The havoc was immenſe their loſs was no leſs than 10,000 killed, and 2,000 taken priſoners, with 70 pieces of cannon. The loſs of the Auſtrians did not amount to more than 1,400. The French retired to their entrenched camp at Louvain.

PARIS, February 25.

DECLARATION OF MONSIEUR, &c.

Louis Staniſlaus Xavier, of France, ſon of France, Uncle of the preſent King, and Regent of the Kingdom—To all thoſe who may peruſe theſe preſents, Greeting;

Whereas the moſt criminal of men have, by the perpetration of the moſt atrocious of crimes completed the weight of their iniquities: We ſtruck with horror on receiving the information, have invoked the Almighty to enable us, by his gracious aſſiſtance, to ſuppreſs the emotions of our juſt indignation, cauſed by the ſentiment of the profound grief which had overwhelmed us; to the end that we might the better fulfil thoſe eſſential duties that are in circumſtances ſo weighty, the firſt in order among thoſe obligations, which the unchangeable laws of the French monarchy impoſe upon us.

The fierce uſurpers of the Sovereign Authority in France, having on the 21ſt day of the preſent month of January, laid violent hands on, and barbarouſly murdered, our dearly beloved and highly honoured brother and ſovereign, the King, Lewis the XVIth. by name—We declare, that the Dauphin, Louis Charles, born the 27th day of March, the year of our Lord 1785, is King of France, and Navarre, under the name of Louis XVII.—We furthermore declare, in virtue of our Birth-right, and the fundamental laws of the Kingdom of France, that we are, and will act as regent of France, during the minority of the King, our nephew and ſovereign Lord.

Thus inveſted with the exerciſe of the rights and powers of the ſovereignty of France, and of the ſupreme adminiſtration of royal juſtice throughout the ſaid Kingdom, we in conſequence of our obligations and duties ſo to do, take upon ourſelves the ſaid charge of Regent.

We are therefore determined, with the aſſiſtance of Divine Providence, and that of our good and loyal ſubjects of all ranks and orders, aided by the powerful ſuccours of the allied ſovereigns for the ſame purpoſe, to do our utmoſt endeavours to recover the liberty of our royal nephew King Louis XVII h; of her Majeſty his auguſt mother and guardian; of the Princeſs Royal Maria Thereſa, his ſiſter, and our niece: and of her Royal Highneſs the princeſs Elizabeth, his aunt, and our dear ſiſter; all held in the ſevereſt captivity by the chiefs of faction.

We are likewiſe determined and reſolved to effect the re-eſtabliſhment of the French monarchy on the unalterable baſis of the French conſtitution, with a reform of thoſe abuſes that may have been introduced in the public adminiſtration. We will likewiſe exert ourſelves in the reſtoration of the religion of our forefathers to its original purity, according to the canonical diſcipline of the Church. We will, moreover, re-eſtabliſh the magiſtrature, ſo eſſential to the revival of good order, and the due and regular adminiſtration of juſtice: We alſo promiſe to re-inſtate all and every deſcription of perſons in the full enjoyment of their property, now uſurped; and the free exerciſe of their lawful rights, of which they may have been illegally deprived.—In order to inforce the law, we ſhall puniſh crimes with ſeverity, and in an exemplary manner.

In fine, for the fulfilment of this ſolemn engagement, we have thought proper to aſſume the reigns of government, in conjunction with our deareſt brother Charles Philip of France Count of Artois; to whom are united our deareſt nephews, grandſons of France, their Royal Highneſſes Louis Anthony, Duke of Angouleme, and Charles Ferdinand, Duke of Berry; and our couſins their Royal Highneſſes Louis Henry Joſeph of Bourbon, Duke of Bourbon, and Louis Anthony of Bourbon, Duke of Enguin, Princes of the blood royal—conformably to the declarations we ſolemnly ſigned to the 4th of February 1789, and to the 4th of September 1791, and every other act ſigned by us, to be conſidered as the declarations of our uniform principles and ſentiments, and we invariably perſiſt in thoſe of our ſaid acts, for the purpoſes and ends aforeſaid.

We therefore order and direct all the natives of France ſingly and collectively, to obey the commands they may and will receive from us, on the part of the King. We furthermore enjoin all the loving ſubjects of this kingdom, to ſhew obedience to the orders that may or will be iſſued by our deareſt brother Charles Philip of France Count of Artois, named and conſtituted by us, lieutenant general of the Kingdom, in the name and the part of the King and Regent of France.

In fine, we direct and enjoin all the King's Officers, whether military or majeſterial, to publiſh and notify this declaration to all thoſe to whom it may appertain, authoriſing and empowering them to make it known in France; and when circumſtances permit the ſeveral courts of juſtice to re-aſſume their functions in their reſpective juriſdictions, the ſaid declaration, as ſoon as convenient may be, is to be immediately legaliſed, publiſhed and executed.

Given at Ham, in Weſtphalia, under our ſeals, which we make uſe of in ſigning of ſovereign acts; till the ſeals of the kingdom, deſtroyed by the reigning faction are re-made; to be likewiſe counterſigned by the Marſhals Broglio and Caſtries, as Miniſters of State, the 28th day of January, in the year of Grace 1793, and the 18th of the reign of Louis XVII.

(Signed) Louis Staniſlaus Xavier.

LONDON, March 26.

We have accounts from Jerſey, by the Tiſiphone, as late as Friday which ſtate, that no deſcent on theſe Iſlands had been attempted.

The force the Iſlanders have to oppoſe to an invading enemy, conſiſts of two regiments of foot, independent companies, and invalids, at leaſt equal to a third; a tolerable train of artillery, and a militia, comprehending the whole of the inhabitants able to bear arms.

The force deſtined to act againſt this is ſaid to conſiſt of 30,000 troops of the line and volunteers.

Letters from Warſaw mention, that a Turkiſh Pacha at the head of 1000 men took poſſeſſion of Chockzim on the 28th ult.

This forenoon a fine French brig-rigged privateer was brought into harbour, and is conſigned to the Goſport agents.

The Cleopatra frigate has retaken the Anne Jahanne Avelop, and the Minerva, Hottes, and ſent them for the river.

PHILADELPHIA, May 9.

By Captain Thomas of the Schooner John, arrived yeſterday evening from Barbadoes, we learn,

That on the 12th April, the Truſty of 50 guns, Admiral La Forey, and the La Blanche and Nautalus frigates with tranſports and 1200 troops under the command of General Cuyler, ſailed from Barbadoes for Tobago, on which day, previous to their ſailing an embargo was laid on the veſſels in Barbadoes.—On the 16th April intelligence being received of the iſland of Tobago being captured, the embargo was taken off and Captain Thomas ſailed.

On the 10th, the packet from England, had arrived and brought intelligence, that Admiral Gardener, with eight ſhips of the line, and a conſiderable body of troops had ſailed two days before the packet, for the Weſt Indies, and that it was thought Martinique or St. Lucia was the object of attack; a ſmall French privateer of 8 guns was taken by Admiral La Forey and ſent to Dominique. Three privateers were fitting out at Barbadoes to cruize for ſome French Guinea men, bound to Tobago or whole ſailing from Africa, they had received intelligence.

From a Philadelphia Paper of the 18th of May.

LEYDEN, April 4.

We have at laſt received certain intelligence that the French garriſon of Breda, which is ſaid to have been commanded by general de Fiers, delivered up the place by capitulation to the troops of the United Provinces, on the 2d inſtant. It is thought that that of Gertruydenberg will ſoon do the ſame. General Dumourier having given orders to the remainder of his troops, to evacuate the territory of the republic. They will have free liberty to return to France, becauſe in order to prevent the ruin and pillaging of the towns and Country, it has been agreed that all the French troops in Belgia and the Dutch territory, should return home by way of Mechlin, Dendermonde, Ghent and Tournay, under an escort of an Austrian safe guard, to the French frontier.

BREDA, March 28.

This place is put at present in a proper state of defence and 80 men are yet every day at work on the fortifications. The Liefhask from whence they fetched the pallisades is almost ruined, and the Misthosk is threatened with the same fate.—General de Flers, who commands at present at Breda, has issued orders that the citizens shall provide themselves with provisions for six months, and those who are not able to comply herewith are to leave the city. The Municipality have presented a remonstrance, stating the impossibility of complying with these orders. The garrison consisted at that time of no more than 4000 men.

BOIS-LE-DUC, March 28.

This afternoon we received the unexpected and pleasing intelligence, by a courier from the Austrian Gen. Mylius to the Duke of Brunswick, that the city of Antwerp had surrendered by capitulation on the 26th. inst. between six and seven o'clock in the evening; and that the French commandant, General Marrasse, was to march out, according to the capitulation, with his whole garrison with military honours to the frontiers of France.

The Duke of Brunswick, in consequence thereof, has ordered his troops who were cantoned on the territory of the Republic, to advance towards Hooystraaten. The one part will commence their march to-morrow, and the rest will follow the next day.

LONDON, March 28.

A letter received by a respectable house in the City from a Correspondent at Ostend, states that a counter revolution has been affected at Paris. The particulars are said to be, that the people dissatisfied with the convention, and discouraged by the late ill success of their arms, had released the Royal prisoners, and appointed the Queen Regent of the Kingdom till Monsieur can have time to arrive—The letter adds that upwards of 30,000 people lost their lives upon this occasion.

The report of the French having been entirely defeated by the Austrians on the 22d. is revived; and letters from Ostend are mentioned as the authority.

Some accounts by Holland, have mentioned, that in the affairs of the 18th. General Dumourier very narrowly escaped being made a prisoner; and that General Valence having advanced at the head of 3 squadrons of cavalry to charge the Austrians, was entirely enveloped by them and would have been taken, if he had not been rescued by a regiment of hussars which came up in time. He received 3 wounds of a sabre in the head.

The intelligence that the Austrians were in possession of Brussels on the 24th is not only confirmed, but advices had been received at the Hague on the 29th. that the Imperial troops had also entered Antwerp, which the French had evacuated.

NIAGARA, June 6.

On Tuesday last being the Anniversary of His Majesty's Birth day, his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor had a Levee at Navy Hall,—At one o'clock the troops in garrison and at Queenstown fired three vollies,—the field pieces above Navy Hall, under the direction of the Royal Artillery, and the Guns of the Garrison fired a Royal Salute;—his Majesty's Schooner the Onondago at anchor in the River likewise fired a Royal Salute, in the evening his Excellency gave a Ball and elegant supper at the Council Chamber, which was most numerously attended.

On Wednesday the 29th. of May last, died Catharine wife of JOHN BUTTLER, Esq; first Judge of the Court of Common Pleas in Niagara, Lieutenant Colonel of the old Rangers, and Chief Agent for Indian affairs of Upper Canada, &c. &c.—Few in her station have been more useful, none more humble,—She lived 58 years without provoking envy or resentment, and left the world, as a weary traveller leaves an Inn to go to the land of his nativity.

LONDON, April 6.

YESTERDAY afternoon, Capt. Hawes, of the second Nancy cutter, belonging to Deal arrived in St Margaret's bay, with dispatches from Ostend for Admiral M'Bride. The cutter left Ostend at 11 o'clock on Thursday night and brings most important intelligence. We understand, that Dumourier is arrived at Lisle with his forces, and that he had scarce made his appearance, before M. Bournonville and five Commissioners from the Convention, had come down with orders to bring him a prisoner to Paris. Dumourier did not follow the example of La Fayette; but he resisted the order of the Convention, and having felt the pulse of his army arrested the Commissioners and sent them to the Prince of Cobourge, as hostages for the safety of the Queen and Royal family. He then proclaimed the young Louis King, at the head of the army, and sent a dispatch immediately thither, to support the claim of the Dauphin to the throne of his ancestors as from the conduct of the convention, he saw at length that France could only be saved by a general resistance to their horrid tyranny. Such is the report that has come to our ears of this important dispatch; and which we give litterally as we have received it. It is added, that in consequence of the news of Dumourier's defeat, and of the violent measures taken by the convention, the tumult in Paris has risen to the most extravagant height. The parties had actually come to blows, the barriers were shut, the white flag, with a mourning crape over it, was flung into the streets and numbers of people had mounted the white cockade.

The news from the Provinces were of the same kind. The Royal party had triumphed every where, and now that Dumourier had declared for the same cause, there was no doubt but they would put a speedy end to the confusion, the tyranny, and the calamities of the kingdom.

The same dispatches bring an account, that a body of Austrian troops had at length entered Ostend, and satisfied the inhabitants that they had nothing further to dread from the French troops hovering about the vicinity; and by this supply, the place, so critically opened by the spirited exertions of Admiral M'Bride, was rendered more secure, so that trade will revert into its accustomed channel.

Besides the above particulars, intelligence has been received, that the Merchants and principal inhabitants from Dunkirk are ready to deliver up that place to the Royal party, and have sent a boat to Admiral M'Bride, requesting him to send over two frigates to take possession of the town.

By a passenger on board the paket from Ostend, who had dexterously made his way from Paris to that place, we learn, that affairs at Paris were on the 26th ult. in a state of much concealed disquiet, but without any burst. The Provinces were still pregnant with tumult, and the news of Dumourier's defeat had thrown all Paris into such a consternation that it was impossible to foretell what extravagant horrors might be the result.

The Process of the beautiful and interesting Mad. St. Clair had been concluded; and this charming young woman was condemned to death only because she had, with the fears natural to the sex, flown to avoid massacre; and horrid as the circumstances will be to the feelings of Englishmen, she was executed and her estate confiscated.

April 3. At a late hour last night, we received an express from our correspondent at the Hague, dated March 31st, with the agreable intelligence that Breda and Gertruydenberg have both surrendered. The French soldiers that compose the garrisons of those places have permission to return to France.

By the same express, we are informed of the final retreat of the French army under general Dumourier, into France by Valenciennes & Lisle without further struggle.

Antwerp, Mons, and Namur, have likewise all surrendered.

The above intelligence will no doubt diffuse the most general & heartfelt joy. All Holland and the Netherlands are now purged of French fraternity, of which we presume those places that it reached have a surfeit.

PLYMOUTH-DOCK, March 16.

Yesterday his Majesty's sloop Scourge, 16 guns, Capt. Briffac, brought in the Sans Culottes, a French privateer, of 12 guns and 81 men which she took after a smart action of three hours and a half. The privateer had six men killed and twenty-one wounded; the Scourge had only one killed and seven wounded. The Scourge had taken the Prudence, Willetts, from Cette to Alderney.

The Scourge has also sent in here the Bonne Mere, —, from Marseilles to Havre.

His Majesty's frigates Druid and Circe have also sent as prizes the Vandruel of 300 tons, from Marseilles to St. Maloes, with brandy, wine, &c., and the brig Diana, —, from Cette to Havre.

The Hind Revenue cutter, has sent in here the Creighton, ——, from Barcelona to Dunkirk.

His Majesty's ships Edgar and Bedford have sent into this port La Reine de Golconde, from Marseilles to Havre

Extract of a letter from Amsterdam, to a house in this city dated April 4.

"The French have been driven from our frontiers, and out of Brabant, to their own home. Great disturbances have broke out in different parts of France."

Extract from the Leyden Courant, dated April 3.

"It appears from the latest accounts which have been received, that the French in the several engagements from the 15th to the 22d. of March, have lost from 20 to 43,000 men, and that they have completely evacuated Brabant.

"Louvain was left by them on the 23d, and Brussels on the 24th, where the Arch-duke Charles of Austria was received on the 25th, with emotions of joy.

"Antwerp and it's caſtle were given up to the Auſtrians by capitulation on the 26th in the evening. It is reported that Bruges has alſo been abandoned by the French and that the Auſtrians have taken poſſeſſion of Mons, where they have eſtabliſhed their head quarters. Breda Gertruydenberg being already blocked up, it it expected will under theſe circumſtances not hold out long."

PETERSBURGH, Feb. 4.

Our victorious armies are putting themſelves in motion to go againſt the French regicides. A formidable fleet, commanded by the intrepid admiral Ribas, will immediately paſs through the ſtraits of Dardanelles, and proceed to attack Marſeilles. The celebrated Suwarow will embark on the ſame fleet with a body of troops deſtined to make a deſcent. Prince Imerette is in full march at the head of 20,000 croſſacks and kalmoucs, and 5,000 huſſars, to join the combined army. They will be followed, as we are aſſured, by another body of regular troops.

HAGUE April 1. (By Expreſs.)

Early this morning the important intelligence was confirmed here, that the French garriſons of Gertruydenberg and Breda had both ſurrendered on Saturday laſt to the combined Pruſſians and Dutch, on condition, that the garriſons might march out with the honor of war into France; which after much difficulty, was granted them; that the citadel of Antwerp had alſo ſurrendered to prince Cobourge's army on the ſame terms after the town had been 5 days in poſſeſſion of the Auſtrians; and that the Dutch Commodore, commanding in the Scheldt, had burnt, off that city, the French 20 gun ſloop of war, L'Arien, (taken from the Engliſh laſt war) and three other armed ſhips, with the loſs of only 3 men.

The main body of the French under Dumourier and Miranda have retreated precipitately towards Valenciennes and Liſle. The Prince of Cobourge's army is in and round Bruſſels.

St. JOHN's (Antigua) May 2.

The fleet from England under Admiral Gardiner, arrived at Barbadoes on Friday—the Merchantmen and tranſports did not accompany them.

The following are the ſhips that compoſe admiral Gardiner's Squadron.

Ships.	Guns.	Commanders.
Queen	98	Adm. Gardiner, Capt. Hutt.
Duke	98	Com. Murray, Capt. Duff.
Monarch	74	Capt. Sir J. Wallace.
Orion	74	—— J. T. Duckworth.
Hector	74	—— G. Montague.
Hannibal	74	—— Colpoys.
Culloden	74	—— Sir Thomas Rich.
Iphigenia	32	—— Sinclair.
Heroine	32	—— Allan H. Gardiner.
Rattleſnake	16	—— Alexander Mouat.

Sir John Laforey in the Truſty, was to leave Tobago for Barbadoes on Monday laſt, General Cuyler was to go up with him. The 60th regiment that took Tobago, is to form it's garriſon, and all the efforts of the Engineers are directed to render Fort Chateau formerly, but now Fort George, impregnable. General Cuyler called the Council immediately after the capture, and addreſſed them in a very handſome Speech, which was warmly and gratefully anſwered.

It is generally believed at Dominica, that the French fleet is arrived at Martinique—This is grounded upon the Inhabitants to the eaſtward of the former Iſland hearing repeated firing of cannon on Saturday laſt at the latter. The Admiral's at Barbadoes will have early intimation of it, as the Berbice left Dominica, on Sunday for Barbadoes intending in her way to look into Port Royal.

The Fairy ſloop of war, Capt. Laforey, was diſpatched home with the news of the capture of Tobago.

GRENADA, April 19.

This morning the Schooner Swift, Capt. Ryal, arrived here from Tobago, with the agreable news of the capture of that Iſland. We have been favoured with the following particulars by Col. Baird.

On Sunday the 14th at 2 o'clock, a ſignal was made that an enemy's fleet was off Courland, and in about an hour afterwards the Truſty and the other veſſels in the ſquadron came to anchor in the bay. General Cuyler immediately landed with the troops conſiſting of 350 men, and marched directly to Cinnamon Hill, where he halted and diſpatched a flag of Truce to the Fort, to demand the ſurrender of the Iſland. The Governor returned for anſwer that they would hold out to the laſt extremity. It was then determined to carry the Hill by ſtorm, and the neceſſary preparation being made the troops marched at one o'clock on Monday morning, taking the road through the Town of Port Louis. They were formed in two columns, the one under the immediate command of the General, the other led by Major Gordon of the 60th.

The firing began about two o'clock and continued obſtinately for about three quarters of an hour, when Major Gordon with the Light Infantry entered the fort and made himſelf completely maſter of the Hill.

At day light the Capture was announced by hoiſting the union Flag, and firing the morning gun.

All accounts agree in beſtowing the higheſt encomiums on the cool and determined courage manifeſted by the Britiſh troops on the occaſion; and the conduct of Major Gordon in preventing the ſlaughter that almoſt unavoidably follows a ſtorm reflects equal honor on his own humanity, and the diſcipline of the troops he commanded.

In addition to the above account, we are informed that there were near three hundred men in the Fort at the time of the aſſault; that ſeven of the aſſailants were killed, and a few wounded; among the latter are Gen. Cuyler (ſlightly) and Lieutenant Gayer of the 67th who joined the expedition at Barbadoes as a Volunteer.

NEW-YORK, May 21.

Extract from the Leyden Gazette, of the 5th April.

Extract of a letter from Bruſſels, March 28.

"On the 25th inſtant between 12 and 1 o'clock, his Royal Highneſs the Arch-duke Charles made his entry into this city, accompanied by the field marſhal Prince of Saxe Cobourge, and a numerous retinue of General Officers.—It is difficult to expreſs the ſatisfaction the people have ſhewn at this change of things; almoſt all the inhabitants met him on his paſſage, and the air echoed with redoubled ſhouts. The Archduke repaired to the church of St. Gudule, were the Te Deum was ſung by way of thankſgiving. From thence the Prince paſſed through the principal quarters of the city, and every where received unequivocal marks of the joy of the Brabanteers. At laſt having repaired to the Hotel of the Duke L'Aharrey, the wine of honor was preſented to his Royal Highneſs, and at night there was a grand illumination. Yeſterday a courier arrived here from Vienna, who brought to the Archduke the patent of governor and captain-general of the Netherlands. The ſame day, this young Prince ſet out to take the command of the advanced poſts of the army. The Count de Meternick, who before the French invaſion was inveſted with the poſt of miniſter plenipotentiary, is expected in a few days at Bruſſels. Yeſterday the people of the city brought the ſtatue of Prince Charles de Lorraine, which had been thrown down by the Sans Culottes; and drew it themſelves to the Palace Royale with a numerous band of muſic, while all the bells in the city were rung. A new pedeſtal is now making for it with the greateſt activity.

"A numerous column of the Auſtrian army paſſed through this city on the 25th inſtant followed by a large train of artillery and camp equipage. The French army continues to retreat with celerity, though in good order. The column headed by Dumourier himſelf is already on the heights of Frameries, on the other ſide of Mons. A large body of Auſtrian cavalry follows cloſe at their heels. The town and citadel of Namur are evacuated."

Particulars of the laſt Twenty-four Hours of the Life of Louis XVI. antecedent to his Execution.

The King paſſed two hours with his family; it was for the firſt time ſince his impriſonment that he had been allowed to ſee them, without witneſs. Dreadful indeed was the moment in which he tore himſelf from them, although they hoped to ſee him once more on the following morning. The Queen delirious and convulſed, embraced the King's knees with ſo much violence, that two men were obliged to uſe all their force to tear the King from her arms. Madame Elizabeth and the Dauphin lay extended on the ground at his feet, uttering the moſt dreadful ſcreams: Madame Royal ſenſeleſs on her bed. Such was the ſituation of this Family when his Majeſty took his laſt farewell of them.

The King returned to the apartment without uttering a ſingle word. His face was hid in his hand. On entering it, he flung himſelf directly on his knees, and paſſed almoſt the whole evening in prayers. He undreſſed and went to bed at midnight, and ſlept for ſome hours. When his Valet de Chambre entered his apartment the next morning drowned in tears, the King took him by the hand and ſaid, "You are in the wrong CLERY to be thus affected; thoſe, whoſe kindneſs ſtill induces them to love me, ought rather to rejoice that I am arrived at the end of all my ſufferings."

He then prayed again to God, and at eight o'clock he was informed that all was ready. He walked with a ſteady ſtep through the different Courts, and often turned his eyes towards the Tower which contained his wife and children. He then made a kind of convulſive motion as if to recall his firmneſs, and got into the Carriage of the Mayor, with his confeſſor and two officers of the Gendarmerie Nationale, who had orders to put him to death, if they ſaw the leaſt popular tumult in his favour.

The road from the Temple to the Place of Louis XV. which is near three miles, was lined with troops four deep, and without any intervals. On every countenance was diſmay, and ſome wept: but tears were the only marks of pity they gave of the unparalelled misfortunes of the moſt virtuous among the 66 Kings who have governed France.

The King was two hours in going from the Temple to the place of execution; during this time he talked to his confeſſor, and repeated from a book, the prayers appropriated to thoſe who are at the laſt agony.

When he arrived at the ſcaffold, as his prayers were not ended, he finiſhed them with great tranquility; got out of the carriage with a calm and ſerene countenance; took off his great coat, undid his ſtock, and opened his ſhirt in ſuch a manner, as to leave his bare neck and ſhoulder; and then kneit down to receive the laſt bleſſing of his confeſſor. That over, he got up, and mounted the ſcaffold without any aſſiſtance. It was in that moment of horror, that his Confeſſor, inſpired by the ſublime courage and virtue of the King, flung himſelf on his knees, his hands and eyes elevated towards him, and cried with a loud voice. "Son of St. Louis, aſcend to Heaven.

The three wretches who were to accompliſh the crime then ſeized on their victim, dragged him to the fatal machine, and his head was inſtantly ſeparated from his body.

One of the executioners ſhewed the head to the people, who ſhouted out, "Vive la Nation, Vive la Republique."

The body of the murdered monarch was interred without a coffin, or any covering, in a great hole dug in the Church-yard of the Magdalen, amongſt the Swiſs who were Maſſacred on the 10th of Auguſt, and thoſe who, through fear and precipitation, occaſioned their own deaths at the fire works exhibited to the people, on account of the King's Marriage, in 1770. Quick-lime was ſlung over the corpſe to deſtroy it.

PHILADELPHIA, May 14.

The moſt important intelligence brought by the Morning Star, relates to the battle fought near Tirlemont on the 18th of March. From a letter of Dumourier to the Miniſter of war we extract the following particulars;

Dumourier finding Namur in danger by the march of a body of near 10,000 men againſt it, thought it prudent to riſk a battle. His right wing was commanded by Valence, his centre by Egalité, and his left by Miranda and Champmorin.

The right and centre were ſucceſsful, but the left ſhamefully ran without oppoſing the leaſt reſiſtance, and ſuffered a great loſs of men and ſeveral pieces of cannon. Dumourier under ſome ſerious apprehenſions for the ſituation of Miranda not having heard any thing from him for ſome time, left the victorious part of the army about duſk to ſee in what ſituation he ſtood, and reached Tirlemont without meeting with that part of the army, ſo total was their flight.

Dumourier after this check announced that he will poſt himſelf near Louvain to cover Bruſſels and Malines. He repreſents in his letter affairs as in a diſagreeable ſituation,—want of order and diſcipline among the troops and the Belgians diſaffected to the French owing to pillage and ſeverity.

He ſtates his loſs at 2000 men. Complains of want of officers, eſpecially diſciplinarians. He diſapproves of the mode of electing them, which he concludes by ſaying, neither enſures talent, confidence, or ſubordination.

Dumourier tranſmits a copy of a letter from Gen. Valence to him. In it, he ſtates, that his infantry was repulſed twice; he then led on the cavalry and broke thro' the enemy, receiving three ſabre wounds on his head and a violent blow on his right arm. One of the ſabre wounds he ſays, laid the ſkin of his forehead over his eyes, but he is aſſured, none of his wounds are mortal.

Camus, one of the Commiſſioners from the National Convention to Belgia, related to them in the ſitting of the 22d. ſome details of the battle of the 18th. Valence, he informed them had been carried by the enemy from the cavalry, at the head of which he placed himſelf. Thus ſituated, and ſurrounded by his aids-de-camp, he received the wounds above-mentioned, and then, with one officer, alſo wounded, made his way, his piſtol in one hand and ſword in the other thro' the enemy. His other aids-de-camp had not been ſince heard of.

He informed the convention, that the army had taken an excellent poſition, and that nothing is to be feared. He complained much of indiſcipline, and the cowardice of ſome parts of the army. He repreſented the Belgians as greatly vexed by ſome of the executive agents, but by no means, totally diſaffected. He concluded by giving an account of ſome meaſures he had taken in concert with his colleagues to reſtore diſcipline and preſerve order.

A decree of accuſation has been paſſed againſt Miranda. The Auſtrians are ſtated, to have loſt as many men as the French. Accounts from Belgia complain of alarming deſertions.

LONDON, March 16.

Bournonville has been to the Convention to reſign his place as miniſter at war, and begged to be allowed to return to the army with which he ſays he has fought 170 battles. Tho' Danton oppoſed the acceptation of his reſignation, it was received, but he was ordered to remain at Paris till his accounts were examined.

The Queen and Dauphin were, as far as could be known, alive on Tueſday laſt: however, the term of their being ſo was in ſhocking incertitude. Part of the Provinces, wearied out with the monſtruous wickedneſs of the capital, are known to have a diſinclination to proclaim the young Prince King of a free conſtitution, or moderated monarchy. Lyons leads in this ſentiment.

SPEECH of His EXCELLENCY GENERAL CLARKE, on proroguing the General Aſſembly of Lower Canada the 9th. inſtant.

Gentlemen of the Legiſlative Council,
And Gentlemen of the Houſe of Aſſembly,

AT the firſt meeting of the Legiſlature, I congratulated you upon the flattering proſpects which opened to our view, and upon the flouriſhing and tranquil ſtate of the Britiſh Empire, then at Peace with all the World; ſince that period I am ſorry to find it's tranquility has been diſturbed by the unjuſtifiable and unprecedented conduct of the perſons exerciſing the Supreme Power in France, who after deluging their own Country with blood of their fellow-citizens, and imbruing their hands in that of their Sovereign, have forced his Majeſty and the ſurrounding Nations of Europe into a conteſt, which involves the firſt intereſts of Society. In this ſituation of Public affairs I reflect with peculiar pleaſure upon the Loyalty and faithful attachment of His Majeſty's Subjects of this Province to His Royal Perſon, and to that form of Government we have the happineſs to enjoy.

Mr. Speaker, &
Gentlemen of the Houſe of Aſſembly,

The proviſion you have made for the payment of the Salaries of the Officers, together with the contingent expences of both Houſes of the Legiſlature, claims my beſt thanks, & furniſhes a well founded hope that though the peculiar circumſtances attending this your firſt Seſſion has, for the preſent, excluded the great object of ſupplying more generally the medium of ſupport to the exigencies of a ſufficient and well regulated Government, your next meeting may afford leiſure for the mature conſideration of this important ſubject, and be productive of ſuch grants as will enable the Executive Power to create and maintain ſuch Colonial Eſtabliſhments as may be abſolutely requiſite to the general welfare of the Province.

Gentlemen of the Legiſlative Council,
And Gentlemen of the Houſe of Aſſembly,

The Laws that you have prepared, and to which I have given His Majeſty's Aſſent, will afford relief to ſome of the objects that demanded immediate attention, and I perſuade myſelf that thoſe of a more important nature will receive your private reflection during the receſs, and be the reſult of your mature deliberation at the next Seſſion, particularly that reſpecting the Courts of Judicature which has been ſo ſtrongly recommended to your attention, and ſuch further regulations as may appear neceſſary for the better organizing and more effectually calling forth the Militia for the defence of this extenſive and valuable Country, when War or the evil diſpoſition of our enemies of any deſcription, ſhall make it neceſſary.

After ſo long an attendance on your public duties, it is reaſonable to ſuppoſe that you muſt be anxious to return to your families, and as the advanced ſeaſon of the year requires immediate attention to your private concerns I am induced to give you that receſs which I know you wiſh, but I cannot let you depart without expreſſing my earneſt deſire, that you will individually endeavour to cultivate that ſpirit of induſtry and obedience to the Laws among your Conſtituents and Neighbours, which muſt ever precede and enſure proſperity; at the ſame time that I recommend in the ſtrongeſt terms an attention to the interior quiet and good order of every part of the country where your influence may extend, which is at all times neceſſary to the general ſafety, but more particularly ſo at this very extraordinary and important criſis.

I do in His Majeſty's Name Prorogue this General Aſſembly to Monday the 17th day of June next, and the ſame is hereby prorogued accordingly.

On Wedneſday the 5th. inſtant was Married in this Town, by the Reverend Robert Addiſon, Enſign Lemoine, of the 60th. Regiment, to Miſs Suſan Johnſon, of Kingſton, in this Province.

And Gentlemen of the Houſe of Aſſembly,

The Laws that you have prepared, and to which I have given His Majeſty's Aſſent, will afford relief to ſome of the objects that demanded immediate attention, and I perſuade myſelf that thoſe of a more important nature will receive your private reflection during the receſs, and be the reſult of your mature deliberation at the next Seſſion, particularly that reſpecting the Courts of Judicature which has been ſo ſtrongly recommended to your attention, and ſuch further regulations as may appear neceſſary for the better organizing and more effectually calling forth the Militia for the defence of this extenſive and valuable Country, when War or the evil diſpoſition of our enemies of any deſcription, ſhall make it neceſſary.

After ſo long an attendance on your public duties, it is reaſonable to ſuppoſe that you muſt be anxious to return to your families, and as the advanced ſeaſon of the year requires immediate attention to your private concerns I am induced to give you that receſs which I know you wiſh, but I cannot let you depart without expreſſing my earneſt deſire, that you will individually endeavour to cultivate that ſpirit of induſtry and obedience to the Laws among your Conſtituents and Neighbours, which muſt ever precede and enſure proſperity; at the ſame time that I recommend in the ſtrongeſt terms an attention to the interior quiet and good order of every part of the country where your influence may extend, which is at all times neceſſary to the general ſafety, but more particularly ſo at this very extraordinary and important criſis.

I do in His Majeſty's Name Prorogue this General Aſſembly to Monday the 17th day of June next, and the ſame is hereby prorogued accordingly.

[From an Albany Paper of the 13th of June.]

LONDON, APRIL 12.

HOUSE OF LORDS, April 10.

MESSAGE FROM THE KING.

LORD Grenville brought down a Meſſage from his Majeſty, ſimilar to the meſſage preſented yeſterday to the Houſe of Commons, ſtating, that his Majeſty relied on the ſupport of their Lordſhips towards the vigorous proſecution of the war, and in enabling his Majeſty to provide for the extraordinary expences of the preſent year.

The meſſage being read,

Lord Grenville ſaid, that under the preſent circumſtances, he conceived there could be but one opinion in that houſe, in Parliament, and in the country, with regard to the vigorous proſecution of the war; and he would therefore, without ſaying more, conclude with moving an addreſs to his Majeſty, which he read, and which was, as uſual, an echo of the meſſage.

Lord Stanhope ſaid, that he had been one of thoſe very few, who had uniformly diſapproved of the preſent war. He had done ſo, becauſe he conceived it to have been unneceſſary, and that, by temper and prudent management, it might have been avoided; he could not therefore, give his aſſent to the propoſed addreſs.—His Lordſhip ſaid, he could not tell whether there was any truth in the report which had been lately in circulation, that Dumourier had been forced to make his eſcape, finding that he was not ſupported by his army in the plans which he had formed; nor did he reſt any thing on this, whether true or falſe: but he begged leave to remind their Lordſhips, that ſame Dumourier, in the month of December laſt, had propoſed the invaſion of Holland, and that the Executive Council of France, at that time, rejected his propoſal, from a wiſh to preſerve peace and a good underſtanding with this country, about which they had ſhewn the moſt anxious ſolicitude.

The Earl of Lauderdale ſaid, that although he did not mean to oppoſe the motion, becauſe that this country is actually involved in a war, he agreed it ought to be proſecuted with vigor; yet he thought it neceſſary to explain the grounds upon which alone he could give his concurrence in voting for the addreſs. He hoped and truſted, that his Majeſty's miniſters would not be ſo flattered by any momentary ſucceſs, as to adviſe his Majeſty to enter into the views of the Auſtrians and Pruſſians, or to accede to any combination, for the purpoſe of interfering in the internal policy of France; for if ſo, he would be almoſt led to lament the preſent ſucceſs of his native country, from an apprehenſion of the miſchiefs to which it would lead; did he ſuppoſe that any ſuch views were entertained, he could by no means concur in the addreſs, but he was induced to give it his ſupport, truſting that his Majeſty's miniſters, and the noble Lord for one would continue to act upon the principles upon which they had all along profeſſed to act, and that they did not mean to purſue any other object in the preſent war, than that of checking the encreaſing power and aggrandizement of France.

Lord Grenville could not conceive it to be in any ſhape neceſſary for him to recapitulate to their Lordſhips thoſe circumſtances of perfidy, ambition and injuſtice on the part of France, which had forced this country into the preſent war; and it was ſurely neither neceſſary or proper for him to ſay any thing as to what may be the intentions of his Majeſty's Miniſteraas to the future conduct, of the war, So long indeed, as France had confined herſelf within her own territories, and had behaved with decent reſpect towards this country, he had always thought it clear that it was proper for us to preſerve a ſtrict neutrality, and to avoid any interference with the internal government; how far the cauſe may be now changed, was a ſubject which he would not enter upon. The Noble Lord (Lauderdale) has thought proper to annex a conditton to his giving his aſſent to the addreſs, as to which he would certainly ſay nothing: that noble Lord had formerly withheld his concurrence to the meaſures adopted by the Houſe as to the preſent war; whether or not he would now give his concurrence, he could not tell; but he would content himſelf with ſaying what he thought perfectly ſufficient upon the preſent occaſion, and with which he truſted their Lordſhips would be ſatisfied, viz. that we have been forced into a war with France, from her unjuſt and perfidious conduct towards this country; and that being actually engaged in ſuch a war, it is impoſſible to doubt the propriety and neceſſity of carrying it on with vigor and effect.

This addreſs was then agreed to without a diviſion and ordered to be preſented to his Majeſty by the Lords in white ſtaves.—Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MESSAGE FROM THE KING.

The meſſage from his Majeſty being read, as alſo the order of the day, for taking it into conſideration.

The houſe reſolved itſelf into a committee for that purpoſe.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer moved that one million five hundred thouſand pounds be granted to his Majeſty, to enable him to defray the extraordinary expence of the year 1793 in proſecuting the preſent war with vigor, and in taking ſuch meaſures as the exigence of the caſe may require; ſuch ſum to be charged upon exchequer bills, &c.

The reſolution was put and carried and ordered to be reported to the Houſe.

Lord Fielding ſaid, that an end of this war was deſirable, and he hoped that would ſoon happen. Inſurrections and violent alarms had taken place in ſeveral parts of France, particularly in Britany. His Lordſhip thought that government had but one reaſon for not ſending troops to France, for the purpoſe of aſſiſting in theſe alarms to diſtreſs the enemy, namely; that there were no troops to ſend. He therefore recommended that ſuch of the whole number ſhould be employed in this ſervice; the remainder would be quite ſufficient to preſerve the internal tranquility of our own country. This he propoſed to be done by a bill to enable his Majeſty to add to the eſtabliſhed ſoldiers.

The report of the reſolution juſt entered into was ordered to be received to-morrow.

By a Meſſage from the Lords, the houſe was informed that their Lordſhips had agreed to the bill for paying and cloathing the militia of England, and ſeveral private bills.

APRIL 12.

Monſieur the Regent of France is returned to the Auſtrian Netherlands, whither the Duke De Choiſeul ſet off from hence on Tueſday laſt to meet him.

In a letter from Angers in France, of a very late date, which came by way of Oſtend, it is ſtated that there have been two actions below Saumur in Britany, between the Patriots and the inſurgents. In the firſt action, the inſurgents were defeated; in the ſecond which took place the next day, they had ample revenge of the National Guards of Angers, whoſe cannon they took. This ſucceſs made them maſters of the bridges of Ce, an important paſſage over the Loire, which opens to them the command of the communication between that Province and Poitou. The bridges of Ce are but a ſhort diſtance from Angers.

The Empreſs of Ruſſia has ſent perſons to all the towns through which the Count D'Artois was to paſs, with inſtructions to pay his Royal Highneſs all the Honors due to his rank, and the intereſt which her Imperial Majeſty takes in the cauſe of the French Princes.

APRIL, 15.—The Duke de Choiſeul has departed for Oſtend, to take an active part in the operations of the war.

The Government of the Netherlands, it is ſaid, will undergo a total renovation, in which the various ſuggeſtions of the Patriots will be candidly canvaſſed, and as far as may be conſiſtent with due ſubordination, adopted.

A report has prevailed, that the Executive Council of France have offered to negociate with the oppoſing powers, offering to give up the Queen and the Prince Royal as pledges of their ſincerity. To this it is added, that General Santerre, who has great influence with the Paris military, has declared for the Royal party.

Cuſtine ſtated in a letter from Landau, that being able to make no effectual reſiſtance againſt the enemy, he had ordered back to Alſace all the ammunition and proviſions. Thirty two thouſand of the combined army blockaded Mentz, and 80,000 preſſed on the General, who could ſcarcely muſter a few broken troops to oppoſe 50,000 in the beſt order: He concluded by requeſting a ſucceſſor.

APRIL, 20.—When the Pruſſian troops took poſſeſſion of Dantzick, the populace with a few poliſh ſoldiers, ſeized ſome cannon which were upon the ramparts, and fired upon them. The Pruſſians returned the fire, and a number were killed and wounded on both ſides. It was ſome hours before tranquility was reſtored.

It is alſo confirmed, that Condé has ſurrendered to the Auſtrians. Valenciennes is regularly inveſted.

On the 13th inſt. Maiat was arreſted, in conſequence of a decree of the National Convention, and committed to the priſon of the Abbaye.

The French ſince the capture of Mentz have added conſiderably to it's ſtrength. They have ſpent twenty millions on the fortifications, which are now tripled at the moſt probable approaches; ſo that, were not their affairs in ſo deplorable a ſtate, they might make a reſolute ſtand in that city. Prince Hohenlohe is to be entruſted with the ſiege at the head of 40,000 Auſtrians; while the King of Pruſſia is to advance into the French territories. He is ſaid to be impatient to regain the credit, which his arms ſo unaccountably loſt during the laſt campaign.

Harwich, April 15.—Laſt night, after poſt, the Dolphin Packet, Capt. Flyn, arrived from Helvoetſluys, with the Dutch Mail. An inſurrection has certainly taken place at Paris, which terminated in a general maſſacre: it is ſaid not leſs than 20,000 were victims.

A report prevailed in Holland previous to the ſailing of the Packet, which was generally credited, that the Combined Armies had taken Cuſtine Priſoner.

Foreign Intelligence.

MANHEIM, April 2.

Authentic intelligence has been received, confirming the retreat of the French to Landau. A part of them threw themſelves into the fortreſs, while a part is ranged under the cannon. The Imperial and Pruſſian troops are purſuing and fighting them already on their own territory. The head quarters of the Auſtrians is at Spires, where a great number of wounded and priſoners are daily arriving from the French territory. The French have alſo ſet fire to their magazines at Spires, but the inhabitants got it under before it could do any materaial damage. The Pruſſians head quarters are at Gunterſblum.

A briſk engagement took place in that quarter a few day ago, when the French had a great number of men killed, and between 8 and 1200 made priſoners.

The Landgrave of Heſſe Darmſtadt was here yeſterday while ſeveral thouſands of his troops were ſtationed in the neighborhood, who where to join the Auſtrians beyond the Rhine.

PARIS, APRIL 6.

Decree of the National Convention paſſed on the 6th inſtant reſpecting the Auſtrian officers, detained as hoſtages for the ſafety of the French Commiſſioners.

The National Convention conſidering that every principle of the right of nations is violated, thro' the detention in the army, by the prince de Cobourge, of the four Commiſſioners ſent to the army of the north, and Gen. Bournonville, who in no reſpect can come under the denomination of priſoners of war: and that if the Generals of the Auſtrian army had reſpected thoſe principles which ſtill connect nations, even when they carry on war, they would have reſtored to theſe Citizens, public functionaries, that liberty they have been baſely, and treacherouſly deprived of by a rebellious General.

Conſidering alſo, that the prince of Cobourge can have no pretence of excuſe for ſuch diſguſting conduct, ſince all the priſoners taken from the enemy have been treated with every reſpect humanity requires; and beſides, that reprifals ought never to be made on Citizens who are the repreſentatives of the people, or who are public functionaries and have been given up by the moſt baſe and infamous treachery.

Conſidering laſtly, that Juſtice and humanity require that the National Convention ſhould purſue all the means in it's power to prevent the laſt exceſs to which thoſe may proceed, who now have theſe Commiſſioners in their power; decrees as follows:

I. Francis Xavier Count Averſpeng, Auguſtus Count de Linange, both of the family of Cobourge, and having votes and ſeats in the Diet of Ratiſbonne, now priſoners of war, detained in the town of Rheims; the two brothers Labatre, nephews of general Clairfayt, at preſent detained at Valenciennes; Charles, Oldemoc reigning Count of Linange-Wiſterbourg, Ferdinand Charles, his ſon, hereditary Count, and Frederic Count of Linange, having all three votes and ſeats in the Diet of Ratiſbonne, and now detained at Landau, ſhall be removed to Paris, to ſerve there as hoſtages to the French nation, until liberty be reſtored to the four commiſſioners of the National Convention and to the miniſter Bournonville.

II. All thoſe who, having votes or ſeats in the Diet of Ratiſbone, & may now be in France ſhall be removed to the ſame city, to ſerve alſo as hoſtages; thoſe however being excepted who are at preſent ſerving in the armies of the republic.

III. Theſe hoſtages ſhall be treated in the ſame manner as the commiſſioners of the convention and the Miniſter Bournonville, are treated by the Auſtrians.

IV. The Executive Council is charged to put this decree into immediate execution, as far as it concerns the removal and impriſonment of the hoſtages. It is charged alſo to take care that all the priſoners of war continue to experience that treatment, which is aſſured to them by the laws and capitulations.

The Duke Regent of Sweden has declared to all the foreign Miniſters, that the Swediſh Cabinet is determined to obſerve the moſt rigorous neutrality during the preſent war, between France and her enemies.

Portugal has formally declared war againſt France.—A motion has been made in the Britiſh Parliament for ſending troops to Britany to join the rebels in that quarter in their project for effecting a counter revolution. A peace has been concluded between France and Hamburgh, and the former has releaſed all the Hamburgh ſhips detained in their ports. The Combined powers are now pairing forward, the largeſt armies that perhaps ever appeared in Europe to the invaſion of France, and from preſent appearances, nothing ſhort of unanimity in the councils of the latter can ſave the Republic.

ALBANY, June 10.

The Brig Two Brothers, Capt. Roſe, arrived at Boſton, from St. Peters. The commander informs us that on the 14th inſt. a Britiſh armament of two frigates, two ſloops of War, and a tranſport, arrived off St. Peters, (Newfoundland) and immediately made preparations for landing the marines and troops; who, meeting no reſiſtance took poſſeſſion of the Iſland: That on the landing of the troops, capt. Roſe, cut his cable, and ſlipt to ſea, and that there was one American veſſel there, a ſchooner of Boſton, capt. Barker, and about 20 French fiſhing veſſels. The Britiſh ſquadron was commanded by commodore Affleck—the troops by General Ogilvie.

FRANKFORT, April 8.

This morning about two thouſand French priſoners ſet out from hence for Vezel, under the eſcort of ſeveral parties of Pruſſians, Saxons, and Heſſians.

MONS, April 11,

Since the Auſtrian troops have left this place, our Bourgeois have mounted guard, and have declared open war againſt the Jacobins, ſeveral of whom they have arreſted. On the night of the 8th, they ſeized on the ci-devant Grand penſioner Hamelt, ſuſpected of having aſſiſted the Clubbiſts with his Counſels. He defended himſelf, killed one of the Bourgeois with a piſtol-ſhot and wounded another.

COLOGNE, April 4.

We are this inſtant informed, of Cuſtine having marched from Mentz on the firſt inſtant, to retake Oppenheim, the two wings of the Pruſſian army cut off his retreat, and he was entirely ſurrounded with all his army; it was ſuppoſed that he could not eſcape.

Every thing is ready for the bombardment of Mentz and Caſtel, and if the garriſon do not ſurrender, they will be entirely deſtroyed.

Letter from General Dumourier to General Miaziński.

BATHS of ST. AMAND, April 1.

"I have juſt cauſed to be arreſted, my dear Miaziński, the Miniſter of war Bournonville, and four Commiſſioners of the national convention, ſent here in order to arreſt me, or rather for the purpoſe of having myſelf and the generals aſſaſſinated, as well as the etat-major of the army. Take the field to-morrow at day break: march againſt Liſle; enter it with a part of your troops, and go and find general Duval, to whom you will ſhew this letter, and inform him that it is neceſſary to arreſt the Commiſſioners immediately. ſhould they not have already departed; you will conduct them to Orchies, whither I will ſend you orders concerning what is to be done with them. Tell Duval alſo, that I command him to take poſſeſſion of the treaſure; to enjoin the commiſſaire-ordonnateur Malus to appoint inſtantly a paymaſter and to arreſt citizen Lemonier whom you will bring to Orleans; this Lemonier is comptroller-general of the army. Deſire Duval to ſend Petit Jean to me, becauſe I intend making a movement of the army to-morrow; inform him that the army has decided upon promiſing to the whole nation to reſtore the Conſtitution which we have ſworn in 1789, 90, and 91, and which alone can free us from anarchy, and the infamous tyranny of the Robeſpieres and Marats; you will tell him to announce this to the adminiſtrations. Execute this commiſſion with intelligence and zeal and go immediately from Liſle to Douay, where you will arreſt general Moreton; leave the command of the place to the general officer of artillery reſident there till further orders. Theſe two miſſions accompliſhed, you will go with your troops to Cambray, of which take the command for the preſent and you will ſend forward a good commander, with three or four hundred men, to garriſon Perronne. You will inform my countrymen at Cambray of the plot which has been formed againſt their defender, and will add, that I have not only taken meaſures to avoid aſſaſſination, but for the re-eſtabliſhment of order, and the conſtitution which we ſwore to maintain in 1789, 90 and 91, and which alone can preſerve us from anarchy. I embrace you, my dear, Miaziński, and depend upon you and your troops for the welfare of France.

"DUMOURIER."

ADRESS of the Adjutant General Lorrery, to the Commanders of Towns and Poſts, from Givet to Boulogne.—HEAD QUARTERS at ST. AMAND, April 5.

Watch word—Enfans, ſuivez moi,—(Comrades, follow me.)

Rally—Je réponds de tout.—(I am reſponſible.)

"My friends, my braves aſſociates in arms, the moment is arrived which has been long expected by every true friend to his country. We have beheld with ſincere regret the ſeaſon of anarchy, during which the good citizen had every thing to fear, whilſt robbers and aſſaſſins gave us law. For five years, our unfortunate country has been their prey. A popular repreſentation, the National Convention, inſtead of conſulting your neceſſities and exerted themſelves to procure you ſubſiſtence, and making laws which might ſecure your happineſs, have ſpent their times in intrigues, in forming and combating factions, and in expending the public revenues for the travelling expences of their factious emiſſaries, under the name of Commiſſioners. They came to our army, not to ſuccour it, not to leſſen our neceſſities, but to diſorganize us by calumnies; to ſend to the ſcaffold, by an arbitrary interpretation of the law, your brave brethren in arms, your Generals, whom you have ſo often ſeen at your head, braving dangers of every kind. It is time to put an end to this cruel anarchy; it is time to reſtore peace to your country. It is neceſſary to give her laws; the means are in my hands. If you ſupport me, if you have confidence in me; I will participate in your labours and dangers. Poſterity will ſay of us—'Without 'the brave army of Dumourier, France would have been 'a barren deſert—it has been by them preſerved and re-'generated!!' Let us be children worthy of ſuch glo-'rious Sires.'

"I ſhall to-morrow, on my arrival make known by a printed memorial, my conduct to my country, and that of the National Convention: and let the army determine which of us has had moſt at heart the happineſs of our Country.

HAGUE, April 6.

On Wedneſday the 3d inſt. the States General received from the Hereditary Prince of Orange, commandant general of the troops of the Republic on the frontier,—the following letter;

High and Mighty Lords,

"I have the honor to inform your mightineſſes, that this night I received a courier from the Prince de Saxe Cobourge bearing two letters from General Dumourier, addreſſed to the reſpective commandants of Breda and Gertruydenberg, charging them to ſurrender thoſe forteſſes on the terms of an honorable capitulation. I immediately cauſed the letters to be delivered to the ſaid commandants, and made ſuch uſe of them in ſupport of the negociations commenced, that I have no doubt of being ſoon in poſſeſſion of both of theſe places.

"I have the honour to congratulate your High Mightineſſes on this ſucceſs, ſo deciſive for the ſafety of the republic, not doubting but your High Mightineſſes will learn with ſatisfaction, that the territory of the Republic will ſoon be clear of the enemy. For this we are in a great meaſure indebted to the wiſe directions and efficacious operations of field marſhal the Prince de Cobourge.

"As ſoon as the enemy's troops ſhall have evacuated Breda and Gertruydenberg I ſhall make the neceſſary diſpoſitions for their being conducted without obſtacle to Liſle.

Extract of a letter from Liſle, dated April 4.

"General Miaziński, ſent by Dumourier, entered the day before yeſterday into this town, accompanied by an hundred huſſars of his legion; he was the bearer of a letter, that he ſent Mr. Duval, commandant of the place to demand the entry of 6000 men of the northern army which was refuſed. Miaziński has been arreſted and his followers arreſted.

"The Auſtrians are advancing, by bands of a certain number each, to the ſuburbs of this place, without offering harm to any one. The gates of the city are ſtout our ramparts are well furnished with cannon, and our gunners constantly at their posts. Our situation is at this moment the same as it was 6 months ago, before the bombardment. Lieutenant general Favart, who was sent here by the Executive Power to take the command of the Place, supercedes Duval."

LONDON.

Advices are received from Ostend, dated the 12th April.

It was then strongly reported, that Lisle had been invested (Valenciennes certainly was) by Prince de Saxe Cobourg; and that the command of a division of the army had been entrusted to General Dumourier, who had his whole etat-major with him.

Foreign Intelligence.

Extracted from Albany Papers of June 6—13.

UPPER RHINE, April 1.

THE fine Hungarian regiment of Barco hussars, which distinguished itself so much during the last war against the Turks, filed off on the 30th of last month through Franckfort. The first battalion of Spleny Hungarian infantry, which has been on the march since the 20th of December last, arrived a few days ago at Witzburg and Mozenburg—It is to proceed to Cologne.

FRANKFORT, April 1.

General Neuwinger who has been taken prisoner by the Prussians was brought hither this day with some more Frenchmen, and several pieces of artillery. The General has five wounds, none of which, however are dangerous. He lodged at the Inn of Weindof. The day before yesterday the Prussians were posted near Pledersheim, at the distance of a league and a half from Worms. Custine has collected his troops near that place, towards Kheindurkheim; the French have retired from Oggersheim and Frankenthal, after setting fire to their Magazines. They have carried off almost all the artillery which they had near Hemikof and Friesenheim. The Prussians have since proceeded to Worms, which they have taken. They are now marching against Frankenthal. Yesterday about 3000 of the inhabitants of Mentz, of both sexes, whom the French had driven from that city passed through this place.

This day the garrison of Cassel made a sortie, but were repulsed with loss.

MANHEIM, April 1.

No mails are arrived here except the Post from Frankfurt. This is the result of the invasion of the Prussians on that side, and the Austrians on this of the Rhine.—The former have this day taken possession of Worms; the latter gather in our neighbourhood and are on the point of passing the Rhine. The French deem it in vain to make any stand at all against the formidable forces ready to pour in upon them from all quarters. They have evacuated the whole district of Worms from that city hither. Previous to their retreat, they set fire to their magazines at Neuhausen and Frankenthal. At Worms they destroyed their magazines and threw several pieces of cannon into the Rhine.

Thus the French have lost all their German conquests except Mentz, which on account of the weakness of its garrison, will soon be forced to surrender.

This evening intelligence has been received here that General Wurmser crossed the Rhine at Kettich, with 7000 men, and is already at Spires. The French have vanished every where, and the Prussian patroles make incursions as far as Oggersheim.

His Prussian Majesty is expected to reach Worms, to morrow.

General Kalkreuth is marching through Deux Ponts to cross that river likewise.

The army which now invests Mentz, and which cannot hold out long, is commanded by the Prussian General Kalkstein.

The day before yesterday the Prussians were stationed near Bederiheim, Custine collected his troops about that place, marching towards Rhine-Tukheim.—Those at Oggersheim and Frankenthal are already gone, and took with them their artillery from Hemshoft and Frietensheim. Immediately after the Prussians entered Worms and Frankenthal, by which the communication of the French with Mentz its entirely cut off.

April 4.—Bingen Creutznach, Alazy, Oppenheim and Worms, are all in possession of the Prussians, whose rapid success have left no enemy behind them to oppose their attack on Mentz.

Among the French prisoners made on the memorable 30th ult. the whole of the regiment of foot, ci-devant Nassau,, in the service of the French Republic, was comprehended.

The French as they fled, disputed the ground obstinately, till they approached near Oppenheim, when Prince Louis, the second son of his Prussian majesty, attacked them at the head of three squadrons of the Bareith regiments, and obliged them to the number 1100 including several general officers, to lay down their arms. On this occasion the Prussians possessed themselves of the French Military chest, containing 50,000 florins.

After the action of the Eich, and the same day, the victorious Prussians made a second attack on 10,000 French troops. The latter were completely defeated and driven towards Mentz. General Custine had seized the occasion to retreat, before this last action, towards Landau.

The Imperialists are not less vigilant. One of the advanced posts is on the side of Linten; the other near Wisenau; the head quarters at Laubenheim.

General Wurmser is advanced to Spiers by Neustrandt he is going against Landau.

General Neuwinger is conveyed to Magdebourg; on his way he was insulted by the populace, on account of the severe contributions which he had exacted.

CREUNACH, March 30.

On the first Intelligence of the approach of the Prussian troops the French marched to meet them at the distance of half a league from this place. Generals Custine and Wimpfen had their head quarters at Bretdenheim; General Neuwinger had his at Bingen, and those of General Howard were at this place. For the two last days he had established himself at Heddesheim.

The left wing of the Prussian army first attacked the entrenchments of Waldalgeisheim, from which the French were driven, after making a very obstinate resistance. The Prussian cavalry pursued the fugitives beyond Bingen and cut to pieces a great number with their sabres.

During this time another body of Prussian troops attacked the batteries on the mount of St. Roch, which were also carried, the French left there a great many killed and wounded with all their artillery. The victors took some hundreds of prisoners, among whom is the famous General Neuwinger.

Whilst this was passing on the left wing of the Prussians the right advanced against this place, and met with a great deal of resistance by the way, but the French were at length obliged to fall back, and to save themselves by flying during the night of the 28th. The hussars of Eben pursued them through this town, as far as far as Alzey, where they cut to pieces a part of them, and took a part of them prisoners.

As the Prussians have blocked up on one side all the passages to Mentz, and are on the other in the pursuit of the enemy, the position of the latter is extremely critical. This day a continual cannonade has been heard towards Mentz; one thousand three hundred prisoners have been already conducted to Bingen.

BRUSSELS, April 10.

On Sunday afternoon a large train of artillery from Lorrain, passed thro' this city for Mons; without stopping; they are intended for the sieges of Lille and Valenciennes.

The Generals of the combined armies have had a conference at Antwerp; relative to the affairs of France. The Duke of York is still at Antwerp; and yesterday the Prince d'Aremberg went from hence to visit him. Nine thousand of Hanoverian troops are marched from Weisel to be followed by 5000 more the 13th current, to form together a body of 14,000 fighting men; their rendezvous is at Beintheim, were the Duke of York is to review them, after which he will take the general command of the combined army of English, Dutch, and Hanoverians; the latter are commanded by field marshall de Freytag, having under him the Count de Walmoden for the cavalry, and M. de Bulch for the infantry. We soon expect the Duke of York in this city.

All the Imperial troops have now passed the Rhine to cooperate with the Prussians on this side that river. General Wurmser passed the first instant between Kentch, and Bruhl; and the troops of Hesse Darmstadt, with the Landgrave at their head, passed at the same time about a league from Mentheim: the next day the Prussians entered Worms, and the Austrians took possession of Spires. These cities fell into the hands of the allies in consequence of two engagements between the Prussians and the French, on the 27th and 30th ult. in which the French lost 2000 men—their General Neuwinger, and 30 officers taken prisoners—13 pieces of cannon, and two colours,

NATIONAL CONVENTION OF FRANCE.

TUESDAY, April 9.

A letter from the Executive Council, dated April 8 stated, that the city of Nantes was not yet free from disturbance. The insurgents were still in considerable force on the left bank of the Loire. Being driven from the departments of Lavendee and of Deux Sevres, they had collected at Montecourt their provisions, ammunition, and a formidable train of artillery; but General Labourdonnaye, who was at Nantes, and had concerted his operations with General Berruyer, only waited for a reinforcement of troops to attack them on all sides.

A letter from Saint Brieux stated, that the conspirators Dufillers, Dubuist, and others, after escaping all pursuit, had perished on their way to Jersey.

Petitioners of the from the section of Bon Conseil accused Guadet, Vergniaud, Gensonnet, &c. as accomplices with Dumourier, and requested they might be punished,

A violent tumult ensued, and several Members moved, that the petitioners should be driven from the Hall and sent to the abbaye. Others among whom was Marat, insisted, on the contrary, that they should be admitted to the honors of the sitting which was granted; but they were obliged to sign their denunciation, and the convention passed the order of the day, as law exists for punishing calumniators, should they fail in making out their charge.

A letter from the ci-devant Prince de Conti stated, that as his health was much deranged, he could not be removed from Marseilles without danger; he requested therefore, he might be allowed a place of safety. The convention passed the order of the day.

The Secretary read a letter from Havre, stating, that that city was on the point of becoming a prey to all the horrors of famine. The municipal commune had only provisions to last fifteen days. Referred to the committees of public aid.

A letter from General Lanoue was read; in which he denied that the Captain had communicated to him at Aix la-Chappelle on the 2d of February the facts which he had denounced at the bar of the convention. As a proof of this he stated, that he did not arrive at that place before the 8th of February.

A letter from Madame Bourbon-Orleans was read, requesting, that on account of her health, she might be allowed some time to prepare for her departure to Marseilles. The convention passed the order of the day.

FRIDAY, April 12.—Evening.

On the proposition of Cambon, from the Committee of public safety, the convention decreed, "That proposition to the re-establishment of royalty is another couter-revolutionary crime; and those found guilty of it shall suffer death. 2. That the same punishment shall be inflicted on every individual who shall vary the price of merchandize, because sold in assignats. 3. The exportation of gold or silver from the territory of France, besides the punishment now ordered by law, shall be further punished by a fine not less than 2000 livres. 4. Every person who shall refuse to take assignats in payment shall be forced to it, and be subject to a fine to the amount of double the sum refused.

La Haye read a letter, by which it appeared, that on the 22d of March Egalite passed through Sex under the name of Feksmy, who his one of his stewards. He asked the landlord, at whose house he put up, wheter Egalite was beloved in that canton, and whether the people would like to see him King. From thence Egalite went to Alenson, and a few days after there was a violent insurrection at that place.

The convention decreed that four commissioners should be named. By nominal appeal to go to Sex, and find out the track of Egalite's journey; to take depositions, and bring the guilty before the revolutionary tribunal.

On the other hand it was announced that the rebels were masters at the islands of St. Gillis and Noirmontier, were in great force on the road leading to Nantes; and that a detachment of national infantry, destined to protect a convoy of provisions had insulted in a town, in order to plunder it, when they were taken by the rebels and made prisoners with their convoy.

In the sitting of the 13th, a letter was read in the national convention from general Custine, in which he complains very bitterly of the contradictory orders he has received, and of the want of discipline in the French armies. He tells the convention that nothing can save the Republic, but to place the whole executive power in the hands of one man; that if the convention will entrust him with that power, he will undertake to save the republic; if it will not he desires to have a successor apointed. Differing from Dumourier, he observes, that should a king be proclaimed, he will instantly emigrate from the country.

Letter from Gen. Custine, to the French Minister at War.

Head-Quarters, Worms, March 30.

"Citizen Minister,

"You know my position on the Nave. My first movement was to recover an eminence, not knowing that several battalions had fled. But as I had no more troops, I abandoned my projects.

"There are some occasions on which death is sweet, and I was prevented from putting an end to my own existence, only by reflecting that the army of the republic would have been sacrificed. The enemy had 8000 cavalry I had very few. Had not this been the case, I should, not have abandoned this post.

"I encamped yesterday at Worms, where we have large magazines of forage, which we left there only through the treachery of the committee of purchases, and which I shall perhaps be obliged to destroy. I am going to retire to Landau as slowly as possible, in order to seek for a position where I may dispense with cavalry.

"I have received positive intelligence, that the camp de Voiges has been abandoned by the army of the Moselle, I have neither cavalry nor horses for drawing the artillery, which has obliged me to leave at Mentz the greater part of my field pieces. I have left in that place General Poire, whose talents and patriotism are well known, and at Cassel, General Meunier, who is also distinguished by his abilities, and civism. As for myself I am going to cover the entrance of the departments of the Rhine, and I hope to write you soon, that I have found a position which will render them impregnable. I have requested the commissioners at Mentz to punish with severity, the cowardly battalions of Grenadiers, who by their flight, occasioned this reverse.

(Signed) CUSTINE."

LONDON, April 17.

It was yesterday reported, on what authority we know not, that the three Generals that were under arrest at Paris, had been condemned by the revolutionary tribunal and executed. These Generals were, Miranda, Wimpsen, and Mariensky.

By a Vessel just arrived from Ostend, we learn that the Austrian troops were within a few hours march of Dunkirk when she failed, and that it was reported the French troops had previously evacuated the place——It was of course expected to be taken possession of without the least bloodshed.

By the letter of the Hereditary Prince of Orange, to the States, it appears that Breda and Gertruydenberg were furrendered in consequence of orders from Dumourier, concerted with the Prince de Cobourge; a clear proof that Dumourier had entered into a negociation to betray the convention long before the decree of arrest was issued against him.

It is currently reported (says a letter from Cape Francois) that Admiral Gardner, with an English fleet, has taken all the French islands to the windward, and that it is his intentions to take this place next.

The decree of the Convention for the removal of the Bourbon family, has been carried into execution—except in the case of Madame Bourbon d'Orleans, who being sick has been permitted to remain in her own house.

April 16.—Large bodies of Emigrants are daily embarking for Ostend, to serve in the army of the Prince de Condé, as well as in that of the Prince de Saxe Cobourge. It is expected that Dunkirk will be attacked on the 20th instant. The guards were to march to Nieuport and Furnes this day or to-morrow. It is said there are only 60 regular troops in Dunkirk.

The French are to completely blocked up at Dunkirk by our cruizers, that not a privateer or gun boat has made its appearance in the channel for many days past.

The Municipality of Dunkirk is said to have prohibited all further intercourse between that port and Ostend. In this case it will become difficult to procure the French Gazettes.

A privateer belonging to Guernsey has taken and sent into Falmouth a French ship, laden with indigo, valued at £40,000.

A Liverpool privateer, belonging to Mr. Tarleton of that place, has taken and sent in a French West Indiaman, valued 32,000l.

Marquis Cornwallis was expected to leave Bengal in February last.

The French Gendermerie, who were at Breda, are arrived at Lisle with their artillery, arms and baggage.—The rest of the garrison, with that of Gertruydenberg, took a different route; But whether to join Dumourier or not, it not yet known.

Extract of a letter from Dunkirk, April 13.

"According to all appearance, every moment is big with events, not the most pleasing. The passengers will give the particulars of the unexpected catastrophe of Dumourier's defection, which has caused the almost entire dissolution of the French army.

"The enemy has entered the French territory and the result is wisely hid from us. Two of the most dreadfull calamities that can befal a country, seem to invade the southern Department—Civil war has commenced, and famine threatens them."

Niagara, July 11.

On Friday last his Majesty's Snow Chippawa arrived at Fort Erie, from the Miamies River, near fifty Indian Chiefs came passengers on this vessel as a Deputation from the Confederated American Indians, to the Commissioners of the United States, (three Gentlemen mentioned in our last paper, were detained at Fort Erie by contrary winds,) the Indian Deputation soon afterwards came to Niagara, and on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday last, three several Councils were held in the presence of His Excellency, the Commissioners and the Officers of the Garrison, &c. &c. &c.—the result of which were that the Indian Deputation gave the Commissioners a Belt of Wampum to conduct them to the place of Treaty at lower Sandusky.

On Monday last the Legislative Council and Assembly waited on His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, praying that he would be pleased to transmit the following Addresses to His Majesty:

TO THE KING'S

MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

The Humble Address of the LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL of the Province of Upper Canada.

WE your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects the Legislative Council of your Province of Upper Canada in Legislature assembled most humbly presume to express our unfeigned attachment to your Majesty, in the present situation of public affairs.

It is with astonishment and grief we have marked the progress of that unruly spirit of Innovation and Turbulence which has actuated the conduct of a prevailing party in France.

The introduction of a Reform of Government mutually accepted and sanctioned by the most solemn obligations seems to have been the signal for unfixing established opinions, and bringing forward those delusive projects, which in all ages have been held out to the multitude by their infidious leaders; for affording pretences to a party who having propigated their sentiments by assassination and slaughter and familiarized their nation to scenes of Horror have finally led them to the murder of a mild and benevolent Sovereign.

With scorn and indignation we have heard of attempts to introduce the same levelling spirit and to justify these atrocious measures in Great Britain and Ireland. And we beg leave to assure your Majesty that the prompt and zealous exertions of our Fellow Subjects at Home in resisting these wild encroachments produced Emotions of most grateful sympathy among the loyal Inhabitants of this remote Province.

The impulse of British resentment against such attempts, has we doubt not been communicated to the most distant parts of the British Empire. And from our own feelings we are convinced that all your Majesty's people are influenced by a strong and uniform principle of affection and attachment, to your Majesty's Sacred Person and Government, and of detestation against the perpetrators of those foul deeds which have brought a lasting Disgrace on their Country. Satisfied as we are that by our Free Constitution we enjoy all the benefits that human policy can bestow, our first prayer is that we may long continue to receive them under Your Majesty's Paternal Influence; our next is that the Miseries of Civil Discord in France may give way to the blessings of regular Government, and tranquility be restored to Europe.

Signed by order of the Legislative Council,

WILLIAM OSGOODE, Speaker.

TO THE KING'S

MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

The Humble Address of the House of Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada in Legislature Assembled,

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN,

WE your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects the House of Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, in Legislature assembled; approach your Throne with gratitude and affection:

In this remote, but flourishing part of your Majesty's dominions, where we have found shelter by your Majesty's Paternal care and clemency; the fame of those tumults and disorders that live in Europe, hath but lately arrived. But conceiving, that, at a period so important it is the duty of all good men and faithful subjects, to manifeſt themſelves to their King and Country: We beg leave to lay before you our loyalty and love. And if it ſhould be deemed neceſſary to add to our tried zeal and affection, we aſſure your Majeſty that no exertion on our part ſhall be wanting to convince our fellow ſubjects, that the loweſt rank is our ſtation, amongſt thoſe who ſtand forth for the protection and defence of their King and Country,

We cannot advert to the ſacrilegious murder in France without horror and abhorrence of the men and principles which have effected it. But as a work of evil, ſometimes produces good, we cherish the hope that a conduct ſo baneful to every precept of religion and law, will ſerve to rivet the loyalty and attachment of our fellow ſubjects, as it has ours, to the beſt of King's, and of Conſtitutions the moſt excellent.

By Order of the Aſſembly,
J. M'DONELL, Speaker.

On Tueſday laſt His Excellency went to the Council Chamber and gave his Aſſent to the following Acts:

An Act for the better regulation of the Militia of this Province.

An Act to eſtabliſh a Court of Probate in this Province, and alſo a Surrogate Court in every diſtrict thereof.

An Act to confirm and make valid certain Marriages heretofore contracted in the Country, now comprized within the Province of Upper Canada, and to provide for the future ſolemnization of Marriages within the ſame.

An Act to provide for the appointment of Returning Officers for the ſeveral Counties within this Province.

An Act to encourage the deſtroying of Wooſves and Bears in different parts of this Province.

An Act to regulate the laying out, amending and keeping in repair the public Highways and Roads within this Province.

An Act to authorize and direct the levying and collecting of aſſeſſments and rates in every Diſtrict of this Province and to provide for the Payment of Wages to the Members of the Houſe of Aſſembly.

An Act to eſtabliſh a further fund for the Payment of the Salaries of the Officers of the Legiſlative Council and Aſſembly, and for defraying the Contingent Expences thereof;—

After which his Excellency prorogued the Legiſlature of this Province to the 26th day of next September, and made the following ſpeech:

HONORABLE GENTLEMEN,
and GENTLEMEN,

IT gives me great ſatisfaction that by your unremitting diligence, the public buſineſs of the Seſſion has been ſo far tranſacted, that I am enabled to conſult your perſonal convenience; and to diſmiſs you at an early period to your ſeveral reſidences.

It is with pleaſure I perceive, that agreably to my recommendation you have new modelled a Militia Bill, and provided ſuch ſalutary Laws as are ſuitable to the preſent condition of the Province.

The Act for the gradual Abolition of Slavery in this Colony, which it has been thought expedient to frame in no reſpect meets from me a more chearful concurrence, than in that Proviſion, which repeals the Power heretofore held by the Executive Branch of the Conſtitution, and precludes it, from giving ſanction to the importation of Slaves; and I cannot but anticipate with ſingular pleaſure, that ſuch perſons as may be in that unhappy condition, which ſound Policy and Humanity unite to condemn, added to their own perſonal Protection from all undue ſeverity, by the Law of the Land, may from henceforth look forward with certainty to the emancipation of their Offspring.

HONORABLE GENTLEMEN,
and GENTLEMEN,

Should the neceſſity of any further Reviſion or Amendments of the Ordinances of the late Province of Quebec attract your notice during the receſs, I doubt not but in the next Seſſion, by carrying ſuch improvements into execution, you will exemplify that diſtinguiſhing excellence in the Britiſh Conſtitution, of which we daily experience the benefit, and which has been tranſmitted to us, by our Anceſtors as the firmeſt ſecurity of the public Proſperity.

On Tueſday laſt His Majeſty's Ship the Miſſiſſague arrived here from Kingſton with near three hundred Indians of the ſeven nations of Canada, who are going to attend the Grand Council at lower Sandusky having we are informed received a Belt of Wampum laſt Winter from the General Indian Confederacy.

From the New York daily advertiſer, June 5.

BALTIMORE, May 30.

Yeſterday arrived here the brig Prince William Henry, Capt. James Mitchell, from St. Kitt's, but laſt from St. Euſtatia, which ſhe left the 17th inſtant. By her we learn that the Britiſh fleet, commanded by Admiral Gardner, had cleared the Weſt India ſtation of French men of war and cruiſers; that there were but two French armed veſſels in thoſe ſeas, one of which had been captured by the Thiſby man of war; that the Governor of St. Euſtatia informed him, that the Britiſh troops had landed at Martinico, and that Malvo. the French naval commander had joined the Britiſh fleet.

The ſhip Betſey, Capt. Reddin, and the ſchooner Hope, Capt Childs, from Port au Prince in 17 days, have brought away ſeveral paſſengers, who were forced to quit the iſland in conſequence of the late diſpute between the commiſſary from the French Republic, and thoſe inhabitants at Port au Prince, who had objected to the payment of certain duties demanded on the part of the republic, and which the people alledged ought to be remitted to them, in conſequence of the heavy expences they have lately been ſubjected to in defending themſelves againſt the inſurgents. Theſe perſons alſo alledge that the government is now in fact in the hands of the Mulattoes, and that there is no ſecurity exiſting, for people of property.

The Weſt-Indies is ſwarming with Britiſh privateers. Capt. R. Reading of the ſhip Betſey of New York, between lat. 22 and 24, ſpoke his Britanick Majeſty's ſhips Europa of 50, Penelope 36, Pagaſus 36, Serpent 20, a cutter 16 and a privateer of 10 guns, who imformed him they were bound to the Northward of Bermuda on a cruize.

NEW-YORK, April 2.

Laſt night we received a paper containing the Declaration of Gen. Dumouriet to the French Nation, dated Baths of St. Amand, April 2d, 1793, together with two ſucceeding declarations of the Prince de Saxe Cobourge the firſt dated the 5th of April, and the ſecond the 9th of the ſame month. (both of which we have laid before the Public.)

Gen. Dumourier in his declaration reprobates the proceedings of the Jacobin party, and propoſes to reſtore the Conſtitution framed by the firſt National Aſſembly. "My dear Countrymen," ſays he, "it is expedient that "a true and brave man remove from you the veil which "covers all our crimes and misfortunes.—In 1789 we "made great efforts to obtain Liberty, Equality, and "the Sovereignty of the people. Our principles were "confecrated in the Declaration of the Rights of Man "and there have reſulted, My Dear Countrymen, "from the joint labour of our Legiſlators, 1ſt. The "Declaration which ſays that France is and ſhall remain "Monarchy: 2dly. A conſtitutution to which we ſwore "fealty in 1789, 90, and 91." And after enumerating their miſeries and misfortunes under the preſent ſyſtem, he adds, "Frenchmen! we have a rallying point, which "can ſtifle the monſter of Anarchy; it is the conſtitution "we ſwore to in 1789, 90, and 91; it is the work of a "free people; and we ſhall remain free, and ſhall re-"cover our glory our glory by reſuming our conſtitution."—The Prince of Saxe Cobourge ſays, that General Dumourier had communicated to him the above declaration, and declares upon his honor that he will not enter the territory of France, but purely with a view to promote the object of it, "to reſtore to France, her "Conſtitutional King, and the Conſtitution ſhe has "choſen."

They write from Philadelphia that word had been received there by a Gentleman newly arrived from Port au Prince, that on the 4th of April Mr. Santhonax, the National Civil Commiſſioner arrived there in the America of 74 guns, with two large frigates; that on the the 12th the America commenced a dreadful cannonade againſt Fort St. Clair, at the ſame time that the two frigates began to bombard the Town. The fort returned the fire. Seventy-three of the inhabitants were killed on the ſpot. Towards the evening, about 300 white men and 100 blacks made their eſcape from the town: the Commiſſioners took poſſeſſion. and have ſince been organizing the troops, and impriſoning the diſaffected, 300 of whom are now in jail.

The French fleet which lately failed from Breſt is returned into the harbour, having been much injured in a ſtorm.

In the aſſault of Tobago, which was captured on the 24th. of April, General Cuyler, and General Goyer of the 67th were wounded; and ſeven men killed. There were about 300 men in the fort at the time of the aſſault.

A letter from St. Peters, dated May 20th, ſays, "St. Peters and Miquelon ſurrendered at diſcretion to his Majeſty's forces on the 14th inſtant. They attempted to demand terms of capitulation which were decidedly refuſed. The number of inhabitants is 1502—the fiſhermen and troops are to be carried to Halifax—the others are to remain until his Majeſty's pleaſure be known. As there are a number of ſmall craft which cannot be ſent away, I think it would anſwer exceeding well, (if any were ſo inclined to come here and purchaſe them. There is alſo a great quantity of fiſh and ſalt.

NEW YORK, June 4.—The ſhip Peggy Capt. Henſhaw, is juſt arrived in 41 days from Briſtol. We learn by her that no material news had arrived in England further than what we have given by late arrivals; but they were in daily expectation of hearing important news from the fleets which had ſailed, and from the combined armies; That France was in a wretched ſtate, owing to her internal diviſions; and it was apprehended that France would not be ſo preſumptuous as to hold out againſt her ſurrounding and numerous enemies; that reports prevailed that further maſſacre had been committed in Paris, but no particulars were received.

The brig Minerva, is juſt arrived from aux Cayes, the Capt. of which informs, that he ſpoke a Britiſh tender, who told him that Martinique was taken by the Engliſh.

Capt. Prat, who arrived here in 15 days from St. Marks informs, that on the 25th ult. he ſpoke an Engliſh ſchooner of war at Cape Nicklin, carrying 12 guns and 40 men, with a French ſchooner a prize.

HAVRE DE GRACE, April 3.

Yeſterday a bill was poſted up in Paris, ſtating that the Deputies of the National Convention, and the whole Municipality ought to be maſſacred; and that it is abſolutely neceſſary that France ſhould have a King.

Intelligence from the interior parts of the country prove there is very great commotion among the people throughout every part of the repudlic. A ferment took place at Grnoble on the 4th ult. the pretext was a ſcarcity of proviſion.

At Dunkirk there has been an inſurrection among the laboring people who loudly demanded an increaſe of wages. An hundred and fifty perſons aſſembled on the 5th ult. without the town of Anjouleme, and ſwore that they would not enrol their names as volunteers; that they would murder any man who ſhould break his oath; and that they would in the night-time, ſeize the cannon powder, &c. The general was beat, and forty conſpirators arreſted.

An inſurrection was raiſed at Clermont Ferrand and the members of the commune arreſted twelve perſons. The ſame day a conſiderable mob proceeded to the Commons Houſe at Bourdeaux, forced the doors, and ſhattered the windows to pieces; ſeveral perſons were wounded and one woman was killed.

The accounts from the Department of the Loire inferieure, Nantz and it's vicinity, compute the rebels to be not leſs than 40,000 men. La Bourdonnais is at Rennes taking every meaſure to ſuppreſs this very alarming inſurrection.

The Adminiſtrators of Maine and Loire announced to the Convention, that bands of robbers and deluded men, led on by counter-revolutioniſts, were deſolating the country by fire and pillage; and as banditti ever want chiefs, they loudly call out a King! a King! a King's Brother! &c.

Manuel has been killed in a commotion at Montagis; he was killed for having voted in favor of the late King.

The Convention ordered the Aſſaſſins to be proſecuted by the Committee of general ſafety.

The following is the firſt Speech ever made by LOUIS XVI.

SEATED on the Throne to which it has pleaſed God to raiſe us, we hope his bounty will ſupport our youth, and guide us in the means to make our people happy—this is our firſt deſire. We know this felicity principally depends on a wiſe adminiſtration of our finances, for it is that which has a chief relation between a ſovereign and his ſubjects; and it is towards this point that our firſt care and ſolicitude ſhall be directed.—We have had rendered us an account of our receipts and expences, and have ſeen with pleaſure there were ſufficient funds for the payment of all arrears and intereſts, as well as of a reimburſement of all charges, as we conſider theſe engagements as debts of the ſtate, and as a property in common with all other we are bound to protect, therefore entitled to our firſt care. After having thus provided for the public creditor, and aſſured theſe principles, of juſtice which ſhall form the baſis of our reign, we ſhall occupy ourſelves with releiving our people from the weight of their preſent burthens, We cannot arrive at this deſirable end but by order and economy. The fruits which ſhall reſult from them are not the work of a moment; and we prefer enjoying this eaſe of our ſubjects a little latter, than to dazzle them by a relief the ſtability of which is not yet aſſured.

There are expenſes indiſpenſably neceſſary with the ſafety of our realm. There are others, which depending on our liberality, may be ſucceptible of ſome moderation, but which having acquired certain rights by long poſſeſſion, can be economiſed but gradually. There are, finally, expenſes which hold with our perſons, and with the ſplendor of our court; on theſe we can follow our inclinations more promptly; and we have alleady taken ſteps to reduce them to certain bounds:—"Such ſacrifices as theſe will coſt us nothing, whilſt they can relieve our people; their happineſs inall be our glory: and the good we can do them will be the ſweeteſt recompenſe of our labors.

MAESTRICHT, March 25.

Letters from Namur of the 17th March, inform us, that General Beaulieu, who remained in Luxembourg with his corps from 14 to 15,000 men, has defeated the French troops from the country between the Sambre and the Meuſe, and that he was expected at Namur, the caſtle of which was occupied by a French garriſon.

On the 21ſt inſt. a great part of the noble town hall of Maeſtricht fell in. This is the conſequence of the bombardment, which it ſeems, was deſigned rather to deſtroy the city than take it.

HAGUE, March 23.—Lieut. Weſtern, of his Majeſty's frigate the Syren, who was unfortunately killed on the 21ſt, by a ſhot from the enemy's entrenched battery at Nieuw Poſt, was buried yeſterday in the church of Dordrecht, with military honors, and with every ſolemnity that could mark regard to the memory of a young officer who had ſhewn on all occaſions an active and ſteady courage, and an ardent deſire to diſtinguiſh himſelf. His Royal Highneſs the Duke of York was preſent, with the officers and troops under his command. The funeral was alſo attended by the officers and crews of the Engliſh gun boats.

Accounts are alſo received that Dieſt was taken on the 20th, in an attack by Col. Mylius; that a conſiderable magazine was left by the French at Louvain; and that in the affair of the 22d, the Auſtrians had 1000 men killed and wounded, and the French had 4000 killed.

DOVER, April 1.—Saturday it was given out by his Royal Highneſs the Duke of York, in public orders, that the whole brigade of Guards ſhould hold themſelves in readineſs for embarkation, on Monday, and be inſtantly provided with four days proviſions. The officers tents, &c. were pitched and reviewed. Lieut. General Auſtin joined the Duke, as one of the ſtaff.

Sunday the 31ſt the advanced piquets from the battery on the other ſide Schravendale Ferry and other poſts were called in. The ſchuyts for the reception of the troops arrived in the river oppoſite the town, and diſplayed their colours. A light infantry company was drawn from the whole brigade, and the command of it given to Lieutenant Colonel Perryn of the 1ſt regiment. This body took poſt to the left of the line. Lieut. Col. St. Leger, of the 1ſt was declared in orders to be appointed Deputy Adjutant General of the Britiſh forces ſerving in Holland, &c. The artillery embarked this day under the command of Col. Moncrief.

At four o'clock, this morning, the whole brigade began to embark, in the ſchuyths from the belle vue quay, on the Meuſe; by ſix the whole were completely embarked, with all their tents, baggage, miſſitary ſtores, &c. on which a gun being fired from the Duke's [illegible] as a ſignal for ſailing, the fleet got under weigh, and the royal yacht taking her ſtation in the van, the whole ſteered towards the Moerdyck ſhore, and were ſoon out of ſight.

The deſtination of this fine and gallint body of Britiſh ſoldiery, though not diſcloſed, is no doubt, for Bergen-op Zoom, from whence they may eaſily form a junction with the Hanoverians; which is expected to take place by the 12th inſtant.

STATE PAPER.

General DUMOURIER to the French Nation.

SINCE the commencement of the revolution, I have devoted myſelf to the maintenance of the liberty and Honour of the Nation.

The ſervices I rendered in the year 1792, are the moſt memorable. Miniſter of Foreign affairs during three months, I elevated and ſuſtained the Dignity of the French name throughout all Europe. I was calumniated by an odius cabal, by whom I was charged with having plundered ſix millions of livres deſtined for ſecret ſervices I have proved, that of this ſum I did not expend half a million.

Having quitted the career of Politics towards the cloſe of the month of June, I commanded a ſmall army in the Department of the North. This Department I was ordered to quit with my troops, at the very time the Auſtrians entered in force that part of the Republic. I diſobeyed the order, ſaved the department, and an attempt was made to come on me by ſurprize, for the purpoſe of conveying me to the citadel of Metz, where I was to be condemned by a council of war to ſuffer death.

On the 28th of Auguſt, I took upon me, in Champagne, the command of an army of twenty thouſand men weak, and without either diſcipline or organiſation. I arreſted the progreſs of eighty thouſand Pruſſians and Heſſians, and forced them to retreat after they had ſacrificed the one half of their army. I was then the ſaviour of France; and then if was that the moſt wicked of men, the opprobrium of Frenchmen—in a word, Marat, began to calumniate me without any mercy. With a part of the victorious army of Champagne and ſome other troops, I entered, on the 5th of November the Belgic Provinces where I gained the for-ever-memorable battle of Jemappe and after a ſucceſſion of advantages, entered Liege and Aix la Chapelle, towards the cloſe of that month. From that moment my deſtruction was reſolved on; and I have been accuſed of aſpiring, now to title of Duke of Brabant, now to the Stadholderſhip, and again to the Dictatorſhip. To retard and cruſh my ſucceſſes the Miniſter Pache, ſupported by a criminal faction to whom all is to be aſcribed, ſuffered the victorious army to want every thing, and ſucceeded in diſtanding it by famine and nakedneſs. The conſequence was, that more than fifteen thouſand men were in the hoſpital, more than twenty-five thouſand deſerted through miſery and diſguſt and upwards of ten thouſand hordes dead of hunger!!.

I tranſmitted the national Convention very ſtrenuous remonſtrances, which I followed up by repairing in perſon to Paris, to engage the Legiſlator to apply a remedy to the evil; they did not even condeſcend to read the four memorials I delivered in. During the twenty ſix hours I ſpent at Paris, I heard almoſt every night bands of pretended federates demanded my head: and calumnies of every deſcription, as well as menaces and inſults followed me even into the country houſe, to which I retired.

Having delivered in my reſignation, I was retained in the ſervice of my Country, becauſe it was propoſed to negociate the ſuſpenſion of the war againſt England and Holland which I had conceived indiſpenſable to the ſafety of the Netherlands. Whilſt I negociated, and that ſucceſsfully, the National Convention itſelf haſtened to declare war, without making any preparations, and without either power or means for its ſupport.

I was not even adviſed of this declaration and learned it through the medium of the Gazettes only. I haſtened to form a ſmall army of new troops, who had never fought and with theſe troops, whom confidence rendered invincible. I made myſelf maſter of three ſtrong places, and was ready to penetrate into the middle of Holland when I learned the diſaſter of Aix la-chapelle, the raiſing of the ſiege of Maeſtricht, and the ſad retreat of the army. By this army I was loudly ſummon d—I abandoned conquetts to fly to its ſuccour; and conſidered that we could be extricated from our difficulties by a ſpeedy ſucceſs only, I led my companions in arms to the enemy. On the 20th of March, I had a conſiderable advantage at Tirlemont. On the 18th I brought the enemy to a general action; and the centre and right wing, after having attacked imprudently, fled. On the 19th we retreated honourably with the brave men that were left together, for a part of the army diſbanded itſelf. On the 21ſt and 22d we fought with the ſame courage, and to our firmneſs was owing the preſervation of the remains of an army which breathes ſolely for true liberty; for the reign of the laws, and for the extinction of anarchy.

It was then that the Marats, the Robertſpierres, and the criminal leets of Jacobins of Paris plotted the fall of the Generals and more eſpecially of mine. Theſe villains, bribed by the gold of foreign Powers to complete the diſorganization of the armies, cauſed almoſt all the generals to be arreſted. They kept them in the jails of Paris, to Septembrize them; for thus it is that theſe monſters have coined a word, to hand down to poſterity the remembrance of the horrid maſſacres of the firſt ſix days of September.

Whilſt I was employed re-compoſing the army, in which employment I laboured night and day, on the firſt of April (yeſterday) four commiſſioners reached me with a decree, purporting that I ſhould be brought to the bar of the convention itſelf.— ——The war miniſter, Boumonville (my pupil) was weak enough to accompany them, to ſucceed me in my command. The perſons who were in ſuite of thoſe perfidious emiſſaries, informed me themſelves that different groups of aſſaſſins, either fugitives from, or driven out of my army, were diſperſed on the road to kill me before I could reach Paris. I ſpent ſeveral hours in endeavouring to convince the commiſſioners of the imprudence of this arreſt—nothing could make their pride; and I therefore arreſted the whole of them, to ſerve me as hoſtages againſt the crimes of Paris. I inſtantly arranged with the Imperialifs a fuſpenſion of arms, and marched towards the capital, to extinguiſh, as ſpeedily as poſſible, the lighted embers of civil war.

My dear countrymen! it is expedient that a true and brave man remove from you the veil which covers all our crimes and misfortunes.—In 1789, we made great efforts to obtain liberty, equality, and the ſovereignty of the people. Our principles were conſecrated in the declaration of the Rights of Man; and there have reſulted the labours of our legiſlators, 1ſt, the declaration which ſays that France is and muſt remain a monarchy—2dly, a conſtitution to which we ſware fealty in 1790, on the 31.

This conſtitution might, and indeed muſt have been imperfect, but it ought and might have been believed, that with time and experience, its errors would be rectified, and that the neceſſary ſtrife between the Legiſlative and executive powers would eſtabliſh a wiſe equilibrium, which would prevent either of theſe powers from ſeizing the whole of the authority, and attaining the deſpotiſm. If the deſpotiſm of a ſingle individual is dangerous to liberty, how much more odious muſt be that of 700 men, many of whom are void of principles, without morals, and who have been able to reach that ſupremacy by cabals or crimes alone!

Licentiouſneſs and exceſs ſoon rendered it impoſſible to ſupport the yoke of a Conſtitution that gave laws—The tribunes influenced the aſſembly of repreſentatives, and were themſelves awed by the dangerous club of the Jacobins of Paris.—The ſtrife between the two powers at length became a daily combat. Then was the equilibrium deſtroyed—France ceaſed to have a king; and the victory on the 10th of Auguſt was ſoiled by the atrocious crimes of the firſt day of September.

All the department but more eſpecially the wretched city of Paris, were delivered up to pillage, to denunciations, proſcriptions, and maſſacres. No Frenchman, the aſſaſſins and their accomplices excepted, had either his life or his property in ſecurity! The conſternation of slavery was augmented by the clamorous orgies of Vandals: Bands of pretended federates ran through and laid waſte the departments; and of the ſeven hundred individuals who compoſe this deſpotic and anarchical body four or five hundred groaned and decreed, and decreed & groaned, expoſed to the exterminating ſword of the Marſeilleſe and Robertſpieres. It is thus that the unfortunate Louis the 16th periſhed, without a judicial trial, and without a tribunal; and 'tis thus that the decree of the 10th of November has provoked all nations by holding out to them our aid, provided they will conſent to diſorganize themſelves. 'Tis thus that the unjuſt and impolitic decree of the 15th of December has alienated from us the hearts of the Belgians, has driven us from the Netherlands, and would have brought about the miſcarriage of our whole army by this nation, provoked at our outrages and our crimes, if I had not ſaved that very army by my proclamations. 'Tis thus that a decree eſtabliſhed the bloody tribunal which places the lives of the citizens at the mercy of a ſmall number of inquiſitors judges, without recourſe or appeal to any other Tribunal. 'Tis thus that during the laſt month all the Decrees have been marked by the ſtamp of infallible averſion, by the blindeſt price, and more eſpecially by the deſire of maintaining power, by calling to the moſt important poſts of the ſtate no other than daring incapable and criminal men, by driving away or murdering men enlightened and of a high character, and by ſupporting a phantom of a republic which their errors in adminiſtration and in policy, as well as their crimes, had rendered impracticable. Theſe ſeven hundred individuals oppoſe, deteſt calumniate and revile each other; and have already, and that frequently thought of poignarding the one the other. At this moment their blind ambition has impelled them to coaleſce a team; and bold criminality allies itſelf to feeble virtue, to preſerve a power as unjuſt as it is unſteady. In the mean time, their committees devour every thing, that of the National treaſury abſorbing the public funds, without being able to render any account of the expenditure.

What has this Convention done to maintain the war it has provoked againſt all the powers of Europe?

It has diſorganized the armies, inſtead of reinforcing and recruiting the troops of the line, and the antient battalions of National Volunteers, which would have formed a reſpectable army. Inſtead of recompenſing theſe brave warriors by promotions and penſions, theſe legiſlators have left the battalions incomplete, naked, diſarmed and diſcontented. In the ſame way have they treated the excellent cavalry, and the brave French artillery in the ſame manner exhauſted, abandoned, and in want of every neceſſary. They notwithſtanding, create new corps, compoſed of the ſatellites of the 2d of September and commanded by men who have never ſerved, and who are no other way to be dreaded unleſs by the armies they diſcharge and diſorganize. The Convention ſacrifices every thing to theſe ſatellites of tyranny, to theſe cowardly head loppers. The choice of officers, and that of adminiſtrators, are in every particular the ſame; we ſee throughout the tyranny which flatters the wicked, becauſe the wicked alone can ſupport tyranny:—And in its pride and its ignorance, this convention orders the conqueſt and diſorganization of the whole univerſe: it ſays to one of its Generals, Go and take Rome—and to another, Sally forth and ſubdue Spain—to the end that depoſiting commiſſioners, ſimilar to thoſe horrid Roman Proconſuls againſt whom Cicero declaimed, may be ſent thither. In the worſt ſeaſon of the year, it ſends the only fleet it poſſeſſes into the Mediterranean, to ſplit and ſounder on the rocks of Sardinia; whilſt it expoſes the fleets of Breſt to the fury of the ſtorms, by ſending them in queſt of an Engliſh fleet that has not yet left its port.

In the mean time a civil war ſpreads through all the departments. Some of the inſurgents are excited by fanaticiſm, the neceſſary effect of perſecution; others, by an indignation at the tragical and fruitleſs end of Louis the Sixteenth; and others, finally, by the natural principle of reſiſting perſecution.

Arms are every where taken up; murders every where committed and every where are pecuniary ſupplies and proviſions intercepted. Soon will every one of our ſhips diſappear on the ocean; ſoon will the ſouthern department ceaſe to receive ſupplies of corn from Italy and Africa, and already have thoſe from the North and from America been intercepted by the ſquadrons of the enemies. Famine will annex itſelf to all our other ſcourges and the ferocity of our Cambals will but increaſe with our calamities.

Frenchmen! we have a rallying point which can ſtifle the monſter of anarchy. 'Tis the conſtitution we were to maintain in 1789, 90, and 91: 'tis the work of a free people; and we ſhall remain free, and ſhall recover our glory, by reſuming our conſtitution.

Let us employ our virtues, more eſpecially that of mildneſs; too much blood has already been ſpilled. If the monſters by whom we have been diſorganized chuſe to fly, let us leave them to meet their puniſhment elſewhere; if they do not find it in their own corrupted hearts, but if they wiſh to ſupport anarchy by new crimes, then ſhall the army puniſh them.

In the generoſity of the enemies we have oft grievouſly outraged, I have found the ſecurity of external peace. Not only do they treat humanely and attentively our wounded, ſick, and priſoners who fall into their hands—and all this in deſpite of the calumnies ſpread by our agitators to render us ferocious—but they engage to ſuſpend their march, not to paſs our frontiers, and to leave to our brave army the termination of all our internal diſſentions.

Let the ſacred torch of the love of our country awaken in us our virtue and our courage! at the bare name of Conſtitution, civil war will ceaſe, or can no longer exiſt unleſs againſt certain malevolent men who will no longer be ſupported by foreign powers. Theſe have no hatred to any other among us except our factious criminals, and deſire nothing more fervently than to reſtore their eſteem and Friendſhip to a nation whoſe errors and anarchy diſturb and trouble all Europe.—Peace would be the Fruit of this reſolution, and the troops of the line, as well as the brave national volunteers, who for the ſpace of a year have obtained themſelves as willing ſacrifices to liberty, and who abhor anarchy, will repoſe in the boſom of their families, after having accompliſhed this noble work.

As to myſelf I have already made an oath, and I repeat it before the whole nation, and in the preſence of of all Europe, that immediately after having affected the ſafety of my country by the re-eſtabliſhment of the conſtitution of peace and good order, I ſhall abandon every public function, and ſhall ſeek in ſolitude the enjoyment of the happineſs of my fellow citizens.

The General in chief of the French army,

DUMOURIER.

[From a London Paper entitled the Sun, May 15.

From the LONDON GAZETTE, May 14.

Extract of a letter from Colonel Sir James Murray, Bart. Adjutant-General to the Forces under the command of His Royal Highneſs the Duke of York, to Mr. Secretary Dundas, dated Tournay May 10, 1792.

In conſequence of the movements of the enemy, which gave reaſon to expect an attack upon the Auſtrian and Pruſſian poſts, His Royal Highneſs determined to march in the morning of the 8th to their ſupport. He arrived about ſix o'clock at the camp at Maulde, with the brigade of guards, and a battalion of the 10th Regiment of Hanoverian infantry. The Pruſſian General was by this means enabled to reinforce himſelf at St. Amand and the adjoining wood, with the troops which had occupied that important poſition.

The attack commenced about ſeven o'clock. It was directed againſt the poſts occupied by General Clairfait, which extended from the Scheldt to the Abbaye de Vicogne, & the Pruſſian corps which defended the wood in front of the high road, leading from that place to St. Amand.

To theſe points were directed the whole efforts of the French army, which had been previouſly reinforced by all they could bring together from every quarter. General Knobelſdorff having been under the neceſſity of ſending a conſiderable part of his troops to ſupport the Auſtrians at the Abbaye de Vicogne. His Royal Highneſs, about five o'clock left two battalions at the camp at Maulde, and marched with the coldſtream, the flank battalion, and that of the third regiment, to his ſupport.—When the battalion of the coldſtream, which was upon the left, arrived, the enemy had nearly reached the road they already commanded it, to a great degree, by their fire; The guns attached to the battalion were placed upon it, and by a well directed and well ſupported fire kept the battery which was oppoſed to them in check, and did conſiderable execution.

The battalion advanced into the wood, attacked, and drove the enemy before them; In going forward, they became unfortunately expoſed to the fire of a battery from which they ſuffered ſeverely. They fell back to that poſition at the edge of the wood, which they maintained for the reſt of the day, notwithſtanding a heavy cannonade; the enemy made no attempt to approach them. Nothing can exceed the ſpirit and bravery diſplayed by the men and Officers of the battalion upon this occaſion, nor is leſs praiſe due to the alacrity and intrepidity with which the other battalion advanced into action. They took different poſitions, where they were at times expoſed to a ſevere cannonade, from which, however, they received little injury, the directing of the fire being in general above them. There were ſeen this morning between 40 and 50 of the French lying dead upon the ſpot upon which the fire of the coldſtream and of its Guns had been directed. Major General Like commanded the battalions which went into his action; and His Royal Highneſs declared that he was much indebted to him for his exertions.

The importance of the ſervice rendered by his Majeſty's troops upon this day, has been acknowledged, in the ſtrongeſt and moſt explicit terms, by the Generals of the different armies; and if by their timely co-operation the enemy were prevented from advancing the high road, it cannot be doubted that they contributed, in a very great degree, to ſecure the fortune of the day.

At the Abbaye de Vicogne and the village of Rheims the action continued, with almoſt equal and unremitted violence, till eight o'clock in the evening. General Clairfait was every where ſucceſsful in maintaining his ground; the enemy, however, though baffled and defeated in their purpoſe, remained in the woods within a very ſmall diſtance of his poſts. During the action they ſurrounded the Pruſſian camp near St. Amand.—I am not exactly informed what meaſures they took in order to keep the Prince of Cobourge in check; but it appears that nothing of moment paſſed in that quarter.

Upon the following day the 9th, there was little doing, and it was not known what might be the intention of the enemy. His Royal Highneſs thought it therefore proper to let the troops remain till the evening at St. Amand and Maulde. Every thing being quiet, and intelligence having been received that the troops oppoſed to General Knobelſdorff, were retreating, they began their march to Tournay; but he was ſtopped at the village of Maulde by a Meſſage from General Clairfait, informing him that the enemy had erected batteries all along his front, as well as upon ſome part of General Knobelſdorff's which if they were allowed to compleat & to poſſeſs, it would become extremely difficult for him to maintain his poſition. His Royal Highneſs immediately ſtopped the march of the troops, and went himſelf to St. Amand, where he was met by General Clairfait and General Knobelſdorff. It was agreed that the Auſtrians and Pruſſians ſhould aſſault the whole of the batteries at Day break, whilſt his royal Highneſs retained poſſeſſion of the camp de Maulde.

This was done accordingly, and had the deſired ſucceſs the enemy had withdrawn their cannon in the night but they were entirely driven from the batteries, ſeveral killed, and upwards of one hundred priſoners taken, with a very conſiderable loſs. Thus defeated upon every occaſion, the enemy ſeem to have entirely abandoned their deſign; the body which came from Lille, has fallen back to Orchies. There was firing to-day, at one of General Clairfait's Poſts, but nothing which had the appearance of a ſerious attack. By the accounts of deſerters and priſoners, they loſt 4000 men on the 8th—General Dampiere is ſaid to have received a wound, of which he is ſince dead.

The troops arrived this evening in their former quarter.

The Auſtrians had upwards of 500 killed and wounded, and the Pruſſians three hundred, on the 8th.

From Woodfall's Regiſter May 13.

The Captain of the Rich Spaniſh Galleon, a prize to the Britiſh Fleet, not aware of the rupture between Spain and France, carried the royal ſtandard of his country at the top gallant-maſt head, which the French lowered immediately on boarding her, and their tranſport of joy upon the occaſion is ſpoken of as beyond conception. The galleon was ſo loaded and encumbered with merchandize that it was impoſſible for her to make any effective defence. She had two hundred thouſands crowns worth of pearl on board, beſides abundance of emeralds and other rich jewellery. Her cochineel is not an inconſiderable part of the cargo.

As the re-capture of the rich Spaniſh galleon is the univerſal topic of converſation, it is neceſſary to obſerve that the Spaniards ſent out annually two fleets to Mexico and the other for Peru: the firſt they ſtile the fleet, and the latter they call the Galleons. Some of theſe galleons carry twelve hundred men, others from three hundred and fifty to ſix hundred: they are commiſſioned by the King, and paid by him. Their cargoes conſiſt of all ſorts of the richeſt merchandize; that which goes from Manilla is little leſs in ſize than a firſt rate ſhip of war; her cargo conſiſts of ſuch articles, collected in China and different parts of India, as are intended to ſupply the kingdoms of Peru and Mexico; theſe are ſpices, China ſilks, Indian ſtuffs, &c. beſides a great variety of goldſmith's work manufactured at Manilla by the Chineſe who reſide there, amounting to no leſs than twenty thouſand individuals!

Letters by the Dutch mail delivered out on Saturday mention that advice was received at the Hague that the Spaniards having over-run the whole Province of Rouſſillon, were advancing in force towards Perpignan; they had every where been joined by the peaſantry. The whole force which was collected to oppoſe them did not exceed 1000 men. Arles it was ſuppoſed, would be an object of immediate attack.

Extract of a letter from Portſmouth, May 10.

This day, between ten and eleven o'clock, the treaſure taken out of the Spaniſh Regiſter ſhip was carried in twenty one waggons, provided by Meſſrs Clarke and Badger, for London, from the Gun-wharf, where it was landed.

"The waggons were eſcorted by a party of the Life-guards, and the ſtreets were crowded with people of all deſcriptions as they paſſed.

"They are to go by the route of [Alton,] Farnham, and Bagſhot, and will enter the city of Weſtminſter about Monday noon.

The cheſts containing the treaſure are 663 in number containing full 500,000l. Some ſolid pieces of ſilver weigh from 165 to 167lb.

It has been erroneouſly reported that the Dumourier privateer, which captured this floating mine of gold and ſilver, was taken into the ſervice by rear Admiral Geil. The truth is, the Dumourier, a fine ſhip, mounting 22 ſix pounders, lies ſafe moored in Portſmouth harbour, and is purchased into the service of Government. She is coppered and fails remarkably fast.

Extract of a letter from Harwich, May 10.

"Three regiments of militia are to be encamped the enſuing ſummer on the Clift near this town: a ſpot of ground that was remarkably healthy during the encampments in the years 1781 and 1782, from which you may command a view and extent of upwards of 50 miles.

"The Weſt Kent battalion, commanded by his Grace the Duke of Dorſet, and the Herts, by the Marquis of Salisbury, have received orders to hold themſelves in readineſs to march for this encampment.

"The Dolphin Packet, Capt. Flyn arrived from Holland with the mail and paſſengers.

"Yeſterday the Prince of Wales ſailed by, in conſequence of the Diana's arrival with diſpatches.

MAY 4.

The affair of which an account was given in our laſt ſupplements, was exceedingly bloody. The object of the French forces, who amounted to more than ſixty thouſand men, in attacking all our advanced poſts at the ſame moment of time, ſeems to have been to re-eſtabliſh the communication between Valenciennes and Condé. The battle was long and obſtinate, but the valour of our troops rendered a good cauſe once more triumphant.

We have not yet received any particular detail reſpecting the various operations of our armys. We however know that the Imperial troops, have advanced three leagues farther into the enemy's country; that they occupy, towards Valenciennes, the heights which commanded that town; that they have taken 2 pieces of cannon, and a great number of ammunition waggons; that the enemy loſt between three & four thouſand men, left dead on the field of battle; that our loſs amounts to two or three hundred killed and wounded; that when the courier came away, Count de Clairfait was ſtill in the purſuit of the French; and that the Huſſars of Barco, and Eſterhazy, as well as the Hungarian regiment of infantry of Stary, diſtinguiſhed themſelves very much.

MAY 5.

We are informed by a letter from Tournay, dated the 3d. that a body of French troops, who advanced againſt Raiſmes and Marquin, were completely defeated by the Engliſh at the latter place; and that the Hanoverians poſted at Rheims took from them one ſix pounder, a cartoon filled with cartridges 8 horſes, and all the gunners belonging to the pieces, as well as twelve National Guards.

MAY 6.

His Royal Highneſs the Prince Charles, ſet out yeſterday for Head Quarters, in order to aſſiſt at a Te Deum to be celebrated for the ſucceſs of our arms on the 1ſt inſt. The 15 cannon and the caiſſons taken out that day paſſed through this city yeſterday.

The heroic Serjeant Major of the Coldſtream Regiment.

THE Serjeant Major of the Coldſtream Regiment, by name Darley, was among the wounded in the action of the 8th of May. He performed prodigies of valour. He had his arm broke and ſhattered by a ball, but yet continued to fight with the moſt animated and determined bravery for near two hours. He put to death a French officer, who made an attack upon him, but at length had his leg broke by another cannon ſhot, in conſequence of which he fell into the hands of the French.

The Duke of York highly charmed with the bravery of this excellent ſoldier, and feeling ſincerely for his misfortune, ſent a trumpet on the morning of the 9th, to ſay that the ſurgeon who attended him ſhould be liberally rewarded for his trouble, and to requeſt that no expence ſhould be ſpared in procuring him every comfort that is ſituation would admit of.

The following letter was written by Captain Hewgill of the Coldſtream, and Secretary to his Royal Highneſs, to ſerjeant Major Coleman, of the battalion of the coldſtream here;

"Head Quarters, May 10th.—Tournay.

"Serjeant Major Coleman,

"I write you by deſire of his Royal Highneſs the Duke of York, to acquaint you, for the information of Mrs. Darley, that her huſband is alive, and though in cuſtody of the enemy, has written a few lines to ſay he is well treated and taken care of.

"The Duke feels much for his unfortunate ſituation and has given orders that a Trumpeter ſhall be ſent to-morrow to him, with whatever he wants, and a letter to acquaint the French Surgeon attending him, that he will pay all the expences of the cure.

"He has one arm & his thigh broke, beſides two other wounds; there may therefore be ſome doubt of his recovery, which I think you ſhould take an opportunity of communicating to your daughter. His Royal Highneſs as well as every officer and ſoldier of the Coldſtream, can bear witneſs of his good conduct and gallantry in the action of the 8th.——Brave as a lion he fought with his broken arm, till a ſecond ſhot brought him to the ground; and ſince his confinement he has dictated a letter wherein he explains his money concerns with an incredible degree of accuracy and honeſty.

In ſhort, all our prayers attend this valuable man, and I have authority to ſay from the Commander in Chief, that he will never forget him. "E. HEWGILL."

By the late fire in the Naval Arſenal of Port L'Orient, an entire wing of the ſtore houſe of ſails and ſail-cloths has been conſumed, without a ſingle article being ſaved from the ravages of the flames. Apprehenſions are entertained at Paris for the ſafety of the Naval Magazines at Breſt.

Beſides St. Laurent de Cerda, it appears by a ſtatement of the Commiſſioners of the Upper Alps to the French Convention, that the city of Adge near the eaſtern Pyrenees, is in the poſſeſſion of the Spaniards, who, from the adjacent heights, had ſlain ſeveral hundreds of the French, and whoſe force amounted to 15,000 men.

May 15—We are enabled to ſtate from unqueſtionable authority, that the inhabitants of Boulogne ſur Mer are in a ſtate bordering on a Counter-Revolution. The Royaliſts are even in poſſeſſion of the adminiſtration; and placards are every where poſted praiſing Dumouriez, & imploring the vegeance of heaven againſt the aſſaſſins of the King, whoſe lawful ſucceſſor, Louis the ſeventeenth, they hope to ſee ſhortly placed on the throne.

Since the treaſure of the Spaniſh regiſter ſhip left Portſmouth on Friday morning, no leſs than ſixteen cheſts of rough diamonds have been diſcovered in a private part of the ſhip.

FRANCE.

Particulars of the Spaniſh invaſion of France, at the Eaſtern Pyrenees, as ſtated to the National Deputies of the South Departments, by the Procurator Syndic of Perpignan.

PERPIGNAN, April 18.

"When I ſtated to you, Citizen Commiſſioners, at ten in the morning of yeſterday, that the Department was in every reſpect perfectly tranquil, I was very far from entertaining any ſuſpicions that the Spaniſh troops united to the malevolent inhabitants of St. Laurent de Cerda, were at that moment ſlaying our brethren in arms, and butchering the ſtragglers. I ſhall now enter into the particular details.

"You recollect, that by virtue of a Decree, a very conſiderable force was ſent to St. Laurent, to cruſh the open Rebellion there, and put a ſtop to the exportation of proviſions and other articles into Spain; which by the connivance of the inhabitants, was done with a ſurpriſing facility. Five companies commanded by Colonel Laterade, were to reach St. Laurent yeſterday: and the two companies garriſoned there took ſome meaſures in conſequence to quit the place at ſeven in the morning, when they received a meſſage from the Municipal Officers, intimating that the Spaniards were then deſcending the Mountain. The Commandant beat the general, and had the arms loaded to face the enemy.

"By the Commandant's relation it appears, that not a ſingle inhabitant joined the ſoldiery; that the Municipal Officers diſappeared; and that almoſt inſtantly, a great part of the National Guard of St. Laurent united to the Spaniſh troops, kept up a brisk fire on the Volunteers, of whom a conſiderable number were killed and wounded. The panic ſpread to the other troops, who deſerted their baggage, and threw away their arms, to the end that they might reach Arles the more ſpeedily. All this time the Spaniards kept cloſe to them in their flight and, according to the report of the run-aways, ſtripped and ſlew the ſtragglers. We are aſſured that Lieut. Col. Bourdes exclaimed to his troops, ſauve qui peut, (take to your heels.)

"On the way from St. Laurent to Arles, the runaways met with three companies of Gers repairing to their poft. They warned them of their danger: but the latter, forgetting every conſideration but that of their duty, cautiouſly continued their route. Two companies of Nantz garriſoned at Arles, joined them as ſoon as they were informed of the approach of the enemy, with whom they came up by ten in the morning. The Spaniards and inſurgents had the advantage in point of number, amounting to upwards of a thouſand; and they had alſo the great advantage of their poſition on the ridge of the Mountain, where ſheltered by the rocks, they ſlew our brave volunteers, whoſe diſcharge of Muſquetry, courageouſly kept up, could not reach them.

"Lieut. Col. Literrade made every diſpoſition to turn the enemy; but failing of ſucceſs, and convinced of the impoſſibility of advancing without expoſing his troops to a needleſs maſſacre, ordered the retreat to Arles after ſeveral of his men had been killed, and many wounded. The retreat was made in as good order as the almoſt impraſticable roads would permit.

"I am told that two Spaniſh battalions are garriſoned at St. Laurent. We have formed a military committee, and have made the moſt active diſpoſitions, to throw in ſuccours, having collected 500 men, with two pieces of ordnance, and the requiſite amunition. The national guards in the environs have requeſted permiſſion to unite with them and will march with the regular troops. I truſt that the inhabitants of St. Laurent will pay dear for their treachery.

"We expect an immediate attack on Arles; I ſhall inform you daily of what paſſes, convinced that you ought not to loſe ſight of a Department in a bare and defenceleſs ſtate, to which you have promiſed ſuccours. A camp of from eight to ten thouſand men is indiſpenſable, unleſs we are to have a daily renewal of ſcenes equally calamitous with thoſe I have now deſcribed to you. Cloathing, arms and proviſion, are what we are moſt in need of.

"The Adminiſtrators will neglect nothing to preſerve internal good order, and to concur with all their efforts towards the public ſafety.

"I learn this moment, by ſome French merchants returned from Spain, that five battalions of Spaniſh troops of the line left Figuiera for St. Laurent.

(Signed) "LUCIA."

PARIS, May 6.

Tallien, a National Deputy ſtationed at Tours in the vicinity of the Breton inſurgents, has addreſſed a long letter to his fellow legiſlators, in which he ſtates, that Thouars was on the 5th inveſted by the inſurgents, and that the national General Quetineau, with a very numerous army, conſiſting of the whole force of the Republic in that quarter, was compleately blocked up in that city.

When the inſurgents appeared before Loudun, whilſt the inhabitants were employed in tearing up the tree of liberty, the foldiery, not one of whom offered them the ſmalleſt moleſtation, took from their hats the Tri colour Cocade, the next united with the citizens; and after opening the gates to their friends without paraded though the ſtreets, carrying a white flag.

The ſix thouſand Marſeilloiſ, whoſe preſence in this capital was ſome weeks ago requeſted by the Jacobins, have refuſed to quit their own city, under pretext that their preſence there is neceſſary to awe the anarchiſts. They have ſince however given ſuch unequivocal proofs of their ſentiments being in union with thoſe of the major part of the inhabitants, who are Royaliſts, that the national deputies deeming themſelves no longer ſafe at Marſeilles, have thought proper to ſhift their ground, and that with ſome precipitation. The Mayor is impriſoned by the inhabitants.

NATIONAL CONVENTION.

May 2.

Two Deputies from the city of Nantz appeared at the bar, and drew a moſt diſheartning picture of the rapid progreſs of the Royaliſts. They trembled they ſaid, for their native city; and added that nearly 2000 patriots had been ſlain in the neighbourhood; and at Machecoul alone 550. Without a very powerful armed force, they were convinced that Nantz muſt fall. The inſurrection, which was at firſt but a mere ſpark, as it were, and which promiſed to be inſtantaneous and local only had acquired ſuch ſtrength and conſiſtency, that, unleſs circumſcribed, it was to be dreaded, that by degrees it would become general.

Evening ſitting.]—The adminiſtrators of Rouen ſtated by letter, that there had been and ſtill were, various tumults in that city, on account of the exceſſive price of proviſions. Bread was five ſous per pound. This occaſion had, however, been the pretext of an inſurrection, which had its ſource in the plots of Counter Revolutioniſts. Theſe had led the volunteers and recruits from their allegiance, and a deſperate engagement had enſued between them and the national guard, whoſe adjutant-General, Lamoriere, had been made priſoner. The inſurgents had been diſperſed, but not defeated.

FRANKFORT, May 2.

After ſeveral ſorties, and attempts made by the enemy to force the poſts of Koſtheim and Hocheim, on the right bank of the Rhine, one of which on the night of the 21ſt ult. ſucceeded ſo far that they penetrated to Koſtheim, ſurpriſed the guard, and took an officer and 12 or 14 ſoldiers priſoners, the garriſon at Caſſel, on the night between the 30th of April and 1ſt current, made a general attack on the three camps of the Pruſſians, Heſſians, and Saxons. They firſt directed their fire againſt Koſtheim, which was in part reduced to aſhes. They then advanced againſt Hocheim, having their left flank covered by the fire of the heavy cannon at Caſſel, which they made to play with the utmoſt vivacity. The Germans returned their fire with great vigour, and reinforcements having arrived, a violent fire of muſquetry commenced, ſo that the French were at laſt repulſed and driven even from Koſtheim, where they loſt a great number of men and ſome cannon. They made another attack againſt Blei-Au, but they were alſo repulſed from this poſt, which was defended by the Auſtrians. The whole artillery of Caſſel was employed in this affair, and the cannonade continued till four o'clok in the afternoon. Accounts then received ſtated that 700 French were counted dead in the field, and that the Germans had taken eight pieces of artillery.

Yeſterday a large detachment of French appeared again before Koſtheim, apparently with a deſign to burn it; but they were again repulſed by a briſk cannonade which continued two hours.——The fire of the muſquetry continued during the whole of laſt night, till ſeven oclock this morning.

The accounts from the army of the Upper-Rhine, are hitherto of no great importance. Landau will probably be completely blocked up in a few days. M. de Wurmſer, the Auſtrian General, has ſummoned that fortreſs to ſurrender, but the commander ſignified to him that he would anſwer him by his cannon. Mentz was alſo ſummoned.

The bridge of boats which formed the communication between Mentz and Caſſel has been ſunk by the cannon of the Pruſſians, with a view of preventing the French from making in future ſuch frequent ſorties. Their troops are alſo occupied in deſtroying the mills upon the Rhine, which being done, the French will no longer be able to grind corn for their ſubſiſtence. It is however ſaid, that the commandant of Mentz is firmly reſolved to leave nothing untried, in order to maintain himſelf in his poſt, and to periſh with all his men rather than to ſurrender. Mentz will be bombarded in a few days—ſeveral batteries have already been raiſed againſt that city and heavy artillery arrive from all parts.

Some hundreds of Croats, Chaſſeurs, have paſſed through this place (Cologne.) Theſe troops form the moſt tremendous appearance.

BRUSSELS, April 23.—His Imperial Majeſty, wiſhing to bury in oblivion every thing that tended to the Belgic Revolution, is going to publiſh a general Amneſty which is to extend even to thoſe who were condemned during the troubles; his Majeſty being deſirous to reſtore their honor, and even to indemnify them if poſſible. For this purpoſe all proſecutions commenced have been ſtopped, the amneſty is to extend to deſerters who ſhall return to their corps before the month of October, except it ſhall appear that they have been guilty of other crimes beſides that of deſertion.

The Duke of York arrived on the 20th at Courtray, where he has eſtabliſhed his head quarters.

Extract of a letter from Bruſſels, April 23.

"It ſeems as if the French had changed their plan of campaign; they endeavoured to collect their forces into three armies; one in the entrenched camp at Maubeuge to cover the opening between that place and Givet: another aſſembled at the camp of Famars, betwten Mons and Valenciennes; and a third in the advantageous poſition of Maulde, to cover Liſle and French Flanders; but at preſent they ſeem to prefer fighting from the fortified towns, to a combat in the open field, where they have every thing to fear from the diſcipline and numbers of their enemies.

"The Engliſh are expected at Quivrain the 20th. On the 22d. all the heavy artillery will be arrived, and the the ſieges of Valenciennes will begin. 3000 men of the garriſon of that town attacked the work of the Auſtrians, but were repulſed."

HAGUE, April 17.—The Stadholder is arrived here; the day before yeſterday he aſſiſted in the deliberations of the States General, and the Council of State.

We learn that the Engliſh troops conſiſting of between 3 or 4000 left Antwerp laſt Saturday, with their cannon and equipages, taking the road by Lokeren towards Gand.

The Prince of Furſtenberg detached from the corps under General Wurmſer on the 3d inſtant, attacked the enemy poſted between Herd and Belheim. The combat laſted from ſix in the morning, until three in the the afternoon. The French had three hundred killed and 60 taken priſoners.—The loſs of the Auſtrians was trifling. The corps under General Wurmſer, are in poſſeſſion of the line on the Queich, one league from Landau.

Extract from an Albany Paper of the 1ſt of July.

LONDON, May 7.

The Captain of the Spaniſh regiſter ſhip, brought in here, took the French privateer to be an Algerine, having never ſeen the new national colours, or heard of the war——from the dread of being made ſlaves he ſtood an action of five hours, in which he had 10 men killed and 37 wounded. His upper works were entirely ſhattered and his people having been at ſea from the time he left Lima, could no longer ſupport the fatigue of the action. The mate of the privateer ſtrongly recommanded a run to America with the prize.

The Spaniſh regiſter ſhip is found to be of much greater value than was at firſt eſtimated. She will certainly produce a million ſterling, which is the richeſt veſſel that ever was put to ſea. But ſome go as far as to ſay that the will fall nothing ſhort of 1,300,0001.

The cargo that remained on board the Spaniſh regiſter ſhip on the 14th of April, which was the day the was recaptured, conſiſts of the following articles, viz.

16 cheſts of money, 7 of which are gold, the reſt plate.
72 cwt. of red wood.
2562 quintals of bark. of different weights, from 100 to 300lbs. each.
2330 quintals of cocoa.
488 quintals of copper.
520 quintals of lead.
112 quintals of wool.
162 quintals of ſugar.
224 pounds of medecines.
336 pounds of extracted bark.
75 pounds of graine of cocoa.
150 pounds of baſſam of Peru.
250 prepared hides.
119 ſkins for raſping.
8 dozen of fine leather.
3 barrels of honey.
3 dozen of Peru Wine.
11 caſes of different productions of Peru.

There being no treaty exiſting between this country and Spain, the Crown Lawyers are ſaid to have given it as their opinion that the Spaniſh regiſter is in toto a legal prize to admiral Goodall's ſquadron.

The whole capture of the Spaniſh galleon was on Saturday laſt adjudged to the captors, and the Spaniſh ambaſſador has a ſented to it, after a minute inveſtigation on the ſubject. Lord Hood will be entitled to a ſhare, as commander in chief of the fleet which made the capture; and it is ſaid that his proportion alone will amount to 60,0001 Sterling.

Lord Hood as commander in chief of the Mediterranean fleet, comes in for a 16th of this prize, whatever it may turn out to be, and all other captures made by the ſhips under his orders, which muſt nett his Lordſhip a very capital fortune.

In conſequence of the cargo of the rich recaptured Spaniſh ſhip being allowed to Government as an entire prize, a troop of light horſe was diſpatched from London on Monday laſt to Portſmouth, to eſcort this immenſe wealth directly to town.

April 20—Admiral Coſby has received orders to ſail from Portſmouth this day if the wind will permit, with a ſquadron of ſix or ſeven ſail of the line, and ſeveral frigates.

Admiral Coſby's flag is on board the Windſor Caſtle of 98 guns, and is the third ſquadron, which will have left England, within theſe four weeks.

A letter from Madrid dated March 16, mentions, that there are in readineſs for ſea at Ferrol fourteen ſhips of war appointed to cruize in the Mediterranean, and ſweep away the French corſairs that infeſt thoſe ſhores.

The four troops of the 11th regiment of light dragoons intended for foreign ſervice, will be embarked at Graveſend.

The guards are to make their way to Dunkirk, and all the French ſea ports are to be regularly attacked.

The French have evacuated Flanders, and on the 9th inſtant a body of Imperial troops under the command of Baron Mylius, left Oſtend to take poſſeſſion of Furnes and Nieuport.

The French emigrants, now raiſing for ſervice againſt the Convention, are to be embodied, not in three regiments, as was at firſt propoſed but in one. Their uniform will be ſcarlet, faced with yellow. Their pay does not commence till they are landed on the continent.

All the French emigrants now in London, or its neighbourhood, who have property in St. Domingo, have received orders to go on board certain veſſels prepared for the purpoſe of taking them to the ſeat of their poſſeſſions, which it is ſaid will be made happy as an Engliſh Colony.

May, 2—The combined armies on the Frontier of French Flanders are thus diſpoſed. General Clairfait is at Tournay, threatening the inveſtiture of Liſle. The Prince de Saxe Cobourge at Mons. General Beaulieu at Charlemont, and Prince Hohenlohe is in the vicinity of Sedan.

This diſtribution is obviouſly made to divide and weaken the French forces: the neceſſary defence of ſo wide a range of Frontier muſt prevent any thing like a combined reſiſtance to the allied armies, until the latter ſhall determine to penetrate into the interior part of the French territory.

Parliament is not expected to riſe till a few days before the King's birth day. If they are detained beyond this period, it will be by the laudable reſolution to go through the proceedings relative to Mr. Haſtings, if that their deciſion may be given, immediately upon the next aſſembling.

Three thouſand ſeven hundred perſons, moſt of them of rank, have been ſeized in conſequence of the late decree of the French National Convention. Amongſt them are many women of high rank. Theſe are doomed to fall victims to the ſanguinary diſpoſition of the ruling faction at Paris. We may expect to be ſoon ſhocked by the horrid detail of another maſſacre.

The ſurrender of Condé to the Auſtrian army is now formally confirmed, from correſpondence.

Three Britiſh ſquadrons will be in the Mediterranean this ſummer, where Admiral Coſby's and Lord Hood's will ſhortly be added to that of Admiral Goodall. The Spaniſh and Portugueſe ſquadrons which will occaſionally act with theſe, will probably give the combined powers a fleet of forty ſail of the line in that ſea.

In Lord Howe's Channel fleet, Admiral Bowyer will command the van, and the Duke of Clarence the rear.

Gen. Cuſtine has retired to Weiſſembourg. The hoſtages which, the French were removing from Mayence to Landau, were taken from them by the Pruſſians. The French have evacuated all the Duchy of Deux Ponts.

Authentic letters, received in town, yeſterday from Oſtend, mention that a Lieutenant Colonel and a drummer, who had been ſent from the army of the Auſtrians to the French, with a flag, had been hanged by the latter. With ſuch deſperate cruelty do the French purſue the war, and extinguiſh every hope of a near concluſion of it.

It is ſaid that the Swiſs Cantons are immediately to join the confederacy of Sovereigns, and to put themſelves under the Command of General Dumourier.

COMMUNICATION.

The Church of England (commonly called the Proteſtant Epiſcopal Church) in the United States, continues rapidly to increaſe. The Epiſcopal power is now exerciſed by Gentlemen conſecrated agreable to act of the Britiſh Parliament, by the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury.—More than one hundred Clergy-men have been ordained within eight years, "according to the rites and cere-"monies of the Church of England, omitting the oaths "in the Engliſh office." Many new Pariſhes are organized and new Churches erected in New England.—Vermont contains twenty Epiſcopal Congregations. One third part of the people of the ſtates are computed to be profeſſors of the Church of England, and are under the ſuperintendency of five biſhops, highly venerated for their Piety, Learning and Zeal.

We ſuppoſe the correſpondent who favoured us with the above communication to be well informed, but had not before imagined the proportion of Epiſcopalians in the neighbouring States to be ſo great.

The Hon. Henry Caldwell, Eſquire, we hear ſucceeds to the appointment of Receiver General, in place of Sir Thomas Mills; deceaſed.

The Engliſh papers mention that the Margaret, White, from Barcelona and Falmouth to Quebec, is captured by the French, and carried into Marſeilles.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE,
NAVY-HALL, UPPER CANADA.

GEORGE the THIRD, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and so forth.

WHEREAS, by certain information it appears, that, several persons in the night of the 31st of May last, about Eleven o'clock, passed by the Garrison of Niagara, in a boat or batteau, carrying with them, as it is presum'd Contraband Goods; and upon being hailed by the Centinel, refused to return an answer:—Whereupon Serjeant THOMAS LAWSON, of the 5th Regiment of Foot, and a party of the Privates of the said Regiment, were dispatched to stop the said Boat or Batteau, and detain the persons till further enquiry should be made. And whereas it appears that the persons, or some, or one of them, upon being again challenged by the said Serjeant LAWSON, not only refused to come a shore, but fired upon the said Serjeant and his party, and again in a short time afterwards fired a second time in defiance of the Laws, and in contempt of the Peace of our Lord the King. Now I do hereby give Notice, that if any person or persons will give information, to any of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace, of the said Party, or any of them that were in the said Boat or Batteau, so that they, or any of them, may be brought to Justice; or if any one or more of the said party, will give information to any one of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace, of the person or persons that fired as aforesaid upon the said Serjeant and his Party, so that they may be brot to punishment, he or they, shall receive upon conviction of the Offender or Offenders, the Sum of £50:0:0 Quebec Currency; And if the informer or informers should have been of the said Party in the said Boat or Batteau, other than the person or persons that fired as aforesaid, he or they, shall receive the King's Pardon, upon such information and conviction as aforesaid, besides receiving the above Reward. GIVEN under my Hand and Seal, this 21st of June, 1794.

JOHN GRAVES SIMCOE,
Lieutenant Governor, and Commander in Chief of the said Province.

NEWARK, 7th July, 1794.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant Governor came to the Council Chamber at One o'Clock.—The Clerk of the Legislative Council was sent with a Message to the House of Assembly, to acquaint them that his Excellency was come; and required their attendance: The Members of the House of Assembly attended accordingly:—When his Excellency was pleased to give his Assent to the following Acts, to wit:—

1.—An Act for the better Regulation of the Militia of this Province.
2.—An Act to provide for the accounting for all Fines, Forfeitures and Penalties hitherto reserved to his Majesty, to and for the uses of this Province.
3.—An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act, passed in the Second Session of the Legislature of this Province entitled "an Act to regulate the laying out amending and keeping in repair the Public Highways and Roads within this Province." and to make further provision respecting the same.
4.—An Act to amend certain parts of an Act, passed in the Thirty third of the Reign of His present Majesty, intitled "an Act to authorize and direct the laying and collecting the Assessments and Rates in every district, within this Province, and to provide for the Payment of Wages to the Members of the House of Assembly.
5.—An Act to restrain the custom of permitting Horned cattle, Horses, Sheep and Swine to run at large.
6.—An Act to establish a Superior Court of Civil and Criminal Jurisdiction and to regulate the Court of Appeal.

8.—An Act to establish a Court for the Cognizance of small causes in each and every district of this Province.
9.—An Act for the Regulation of Juries,
10.—An Act to authorize the Governor or Lieutenant Governor to Licence Practitioners in the Law.

12.—An Act to lay and collect a duty upon Stills.

And then his Excellency was pleased to address both Houses in the following SPEECH:

Honorable Gentlemen, and Gentlemen,

YOU having now gone through such public business as you thought necessary for the interests of the Province, and having attended to that object, which it was my duty to recommend to your particular consideration, it is with satisfaction that I consult your private convenience by dismissing you to your several places of Residence.

In the most arduous and most important task of laying the solid foundation for the welfare and happiness of ourselves and of our posterity. I cannot but firmly believe, that the acts of this Session will justly remain most memorable in the annals of Upper Canada,

The measures taken for the inſtitution of the Superior Court of Judicature are wiſely framed after the model of thoſe venerable eſtabliſhments, which have been proved by the experience of many ages to be the beſt ſafe-guard of the Freedom and property of the Subject, and of the Authority of the Crown.

In providing for the more effectual ſervice of the Militia, by enabling the Executive Government, to direct it to the natural protection of this Province upon the Lakes and communications; you have evinced your regard for the Public ſafety, and at the ſame time inculcated a leſſon to Poſterity, which I moſt fervently truſt it will never loſe ſight of, that upon theſe Waters depend the means of their Wealth and of their defence.

Honorable Gentlemen,
and Gentlemen,

There can be no truth more evident than that on the Religion and Morality of the People, the ſtrength of all Governments, muſt ultimately depend. The eminence of your ſtation in the Legiſlature neceſſarily implies a juſt influence, which in this reſpect, I am confident will eſſentially contribute to the public felicity.

Should this Province happily continue to enjoy the bleſſings of Peace, I doubt not but it will rapidly advance that viſible Progreſs of improvement, from which we at preſent derive ſuch peculiar ſatisfaction.

After which the Honorable the Speaker of the Legiſlative Council, by His Excellency's command, declared both Houſes, to be prorogued to Friday the Fifteenth day of Auguſt next.

From London Newſpapers of the 1ſt, 3d, and 4th, March, received by the Belvedere.

BRUSSELS, February 28.

Among the reports of the day it is ſaid, that there are accounts from France, ſtating, that the column of the Republicans which was ſent poſt from Grenville to Breſt, was ſtopped on their way by a party aſſembled in Britanny, and cut to pieces. The ſame letter ſtate Paris, to be in an alarming ferment, that the people tired with the perpetual falſe accounts of the deſtruction of La Vendee, cry Treaſon, and inſult the Members of the Convention in the ſtreets.

PARIS, February 22.

On the 12th inſt. ſeven rebels were guillotined, and 28 ſhot at Lyons. Detpremenil is ſaid to have been arreſted at Havre, and removed to the Priſon of Paris.

Citizen Simon, whom the Engliſh papers ſtate to have arrived in London, has never left Paris; he is in a ſtate of requiſition in the ſection of Marat making ſhoes for the defenders of his country.

A great ſcarcity of proviſions ſtill prevails at Paris. The ſection of Quinze-Vingt has lately denounced to the commonalty, that they had impriſoned a number of butchers, who had, out of 180 ſheep, killed 150 which were with ewe, and defired the culprits might be puniſhed with death. The Council mean to employ the Convention on the ſubject.

Thomas Pain has wrote to the Society of Cordeliers, from his priſon, to requeſt their interference, but the only anſwer he received, was the Speech he made in favour of the king.

Robeſpierre and Couthon are ill. The Jacobin Club have reſolved, that a deputation from that Club ſhall viſit them, and expreſs in its name their wiſhes for their ſpeedy recovery.

Chaudot, the Notary, was executed on the 17th inſt. in the afternoon. Three brothers of the name of Picart have been condemned to death for ſelling ſpecie. Sixty perſons have been arreſted in the Section of Brutus.

The ſittings of the Convention for the laſt Week have been remarkably unintereſting.

A new Preſident was elected in the evening of the 19th, and St. Juſt, out of 138 votes, had 120; he was in conſequence proclamed Preſident.

LONDON, March 1.

Some further diſpatches were received on Saturday from the Mediterranean, Lord Hood with the greater part of the Britiſh fleet having been joined by the convoy from Leghorn, was in one of the harbours of the Iſland of Corſica on the 13th of February, and it was ſaid affairs wore a promiſing appearance.

From Peterſburgh there is intelligence, that the celebrated Count Oſterman, Prime Miniſter of the Empreſs of Ruſſia, has reſigned the helm of State affairs. He will be ſucceeded by the Privy Councellor Markow, but the latter is not to bear the title of Vice Chancellor.

March 3.

The Dutch troops to be employed in the enſuing campaign, amount to fifteen ſquadrons of heavy cavalry, twenty four ſquadrons and one company of light cavalry, fourteen battalions of infantry, without grenadiers, ten battalions of Swiſs infantry with grenadiers, and thirty battalions of provincers, detached from the regiments, which remain in garriſon. Some other detachments will be ſtationed at Huy, Namur, and Maeſtricht.

ALBANY, June, 19.

We learn that the Commiſſioners appointed by the Legiſlature of this ſtate at the laſt ſeſſion, for the purpoſe of erecting fortifications on our weſtern and northern frontiers; have met, the laſt week at Schenectady; when it was determined to commence the buſineſs, for which they were appointed without delay; and accordingly, Major General Baron De Stuben, Colonel Stephen Van Renſſalaer, and Colonel William North, were appointed to proceed to the Weſtward,—and Major Peter Ganſevoort, Capt. John Vernor, and John Taylor Eſq; to the Northern frontier; there to erect ſuch fortifications at different places, as the face of the country on an actual ſurvey, and its population will render neceſſary. Thus our reſtleſs Britiſh neighbours, have by their inſulting and unwarrantable intruſions, induced us to commence defenſive operations, preparatory to more energetic meaſures, which our country unanimouſly holds itſelf in readineſs to commence whenever the government of the Union may think proper to give the word; and by an immediate and irreſiſtable irruption of our Northern hive, into the heart of the Province of Lower Canada, a total conqueſt of that country, and a conſequent reduction of our weſtern poſts, and of the interior poſts of the Upper Province, will effectually prevent any further inroads of either Britiſh or ſavage intruders on our peaceful frontiers.

By an arrival at New-York from Cork, Iriſh papers as late as the 28th April, are received. They contain no important information, except a letter from the Duke of York to Mr. Dundas, giving an account of an attack made on the French forces, in the neighbourhood of Cateau, by the Combined armies, on the 17th of April, in 8 columns—one of which was commanded by the Emperor in perſon and the Prince of Cobourg. After detailing the particulars of the attack and movements of the army, the duke ſays, "the ſignal ſucceſs which has attended theſe extenſive and complicated operations, has determined his Imperial Majeſty to begin immediately the ſiege of Landrecies."—The loſs of the allies he mentions, as quite inconſiderable, while that of the French was "very great." The Britiſh he ſays, "were peculiarly fortunate," for except Captain Carlton (ſon to Lord Dorcheſter) who was killed, not a Britiſh officer was killed or wounded—and only 3 privates killed and 6 wounded. They took 30 pieces of cannon, 9 of which, by the column under the duke's immediate command—but no mention is made of any priſoners—and from the whole face of the letter it appears, that the French conſidering their poſts not tenable, only kept the enemy at bay till they could make good their retreat.

From the Federal Gazette.

Mr. BROWN,

NOTHING can be more diſpleaſing to a lover of truth, than the pains which are taken to impreſs the American public with falſe ideas of the preſent ſituation of France. Of this the repreſentation of French affairs, ſaid to have been brought by Capt. Culver, commander of the advice boat lately arrived from Havre-de-Grace, is an example.

The account really received by Capt. Culver, preſents a ſcene diſhonourable to human nature.

He ſtates, that from the vigilant ſeverity of government, a ſpirit of mutual diſtruſt is predominant among the citizens of Paris. That every man is afraid of his neighbour. That executions are ſo frequent as to have ceaſed to excite curioſity. Not a day paſſing without ſome victims at the guillotine more or leſs. That the place where it ſtands is almoſt continually wet with human

I have therefore thought proper to iſſue this proclamation, hereby ſolemnly warning every perſon not authorized by the laws, againſt enliſting any citizen or citizens of the United States, or levying troops or aſſembling any perſons within the United States for the purpoſes aforeſaid, or proceeding in any manner to the execution thereof, as they will anſwer the ſame at their peril; And I do alſo admonith and require all Citizens to refrain from enliſting, enrolling or aſſembling themſelves for ſuch unlawful purpoſes, and from being in any wiſe concerned, aiding or abetting therein, as they tender to their own welfare, in as much as all lawful means will be ſtrictly put in execution for ſecuring obedience to the laws, and for puniſhing ſuch dangerous and daring violations thereof.

I do moreover charge and require all courts, magiſtrates and other officers, whom it may concern, according to their reſpective duties, to exert the powers in them ſeverally veſted, to prevent and ſuppreſs all ſuch unlawful aſſemblages and proceedings, and to bring to condign puniſhment thoſe who may have been guilty thereof, as they regard the due authority of Government, and the peace and welfare of the United States.

In teſtimony whereof, I have cauſed the ſeal of the United States of America, to be affixed to theſe preſents, and ſigned the ſame with my hand. Done at the City of Philadelphia, the twenty-fourth day of March, one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety-four, and of the Independence of the United States of America, the Eighteenth.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

In Senate, April 16th, 1794.

The following written meſſage was received from the Preſident of the United States by Mr. Dambrige his Secretary:

United States, 16th April, 1794.

Gentlemen of the Senate,

The communications which I have made to you during your preſent ſeſſion, from the diſpatches of our Miniſter, contain a ſerious aſpect of our affairs with Great Britain. But as peace ought to be purſued with unremitted zeal, before the laſt reſource, (which has ſo often been the ſcourge of nations, and cannot fail to check the advanced proſperity of the United States,) is contemplated, I have thought proper to nominate, and do hereby nominate JOHN JAY, as envoy extraordinary of the United States, to his Britannic Majeſty.

My confidence in our Miniſter Plenipotentiary in London continues undiminiſhed. But a miſſion like this, while it correſponds with the ſolemnity of the occaſion, will announce to the world a ſolicitude for a friendly adjuſtment of our complaints, and a reluctance to hoſtility, Going immediately from the United States, ſuch an envoy will carry with him a full knowledge of the exiſting temper and ſenſibility of our country; and will thus be taught to vindicate our rights with firmneſs and to cultivate peace with ſincerity.

GEO. WASHINGTON.

REVOLUTIONARY TRIBUNAL.

PARIS, April 3.

Danton and the other Deputies.

After the reading of the act of accuſation and the report of St. Juſt. Amar the public accuſer, requeſted that General Weſtermann ſhould be brought from the Conciergerie, in order to be tried with the deputies—Their requeſt was complied with.

As ſoon as General Weſtermann arrived, the Revolutionary Tribunal proceeded to the examination of evidence againſt him—Cambon the Deputy was examined. His depoſition related entirely to Fabre d'Eglantine, Delaunay d'Angers, and Chabot—He developped the meaſures adopted by the Committee of five, to ſuppreſs the Finance Companies and to Eſtabliſh the credit of Aſſignats, and he diſcloſed the manner in which the three Deputies elluded the decree paſſed by the Convention, relative to the Eaſt India Company.

As the Tribunal were on the point of adjourning, Danton and Philippaux requeſted leave to communicate freely with their defenders.—This requeſt was acceded to.

April 4.

In purſuance of the Public accuſer; Lullier, Procureur-general of the Department of Paris, in conſequence of his intimate connection with the Baron de Batz, who has made his eſcape, was ordered to be tried with the Deputies. The Revolutionary Tribunal then proceeded to the examination of witneſſes, but Danton and the other Deputies, declared that they would anſwer no queſtion, in the preſence of Robeſpierre, Barrere and St. Juſt.

The preſident of the Revolutionary Tribunal, and the public accuſer, attempted to induce them to depart from this determination. Their attempts, however, were ineffectual. The Tribunal, in conſequence of the event, ſuſpended the trial, and a report was ordered to be preſented to the Convention.

April 5.

The decree, paſſed by the Convention, together with the letter received by the Committee of Public Safety, from the adminiſtrators of the Police, were read to the Deputies. They perſiſted however, in the determination not to anſwer interrogatories, unleſs Robeſpierre, Barrere and St. Juſt were ſummoned to attend. The conduct of Danton was exceedingly turbulent, and he inveighed in very ſtrong terms againſt the judges.

In conſequence of the mode of conduct adopted by the priſoners, the jury found Danton, Camille, Deſmoulins, Lacroix, Philippaux, Herault de Sechelles, and Weſtermann guilty of a conſpiracy againſt the Republic, and Chabot, Bazire, Fabre d'Eglantine, Julien de Thoulouſe, and Delaunay d'Angers, guilty of corrupt practices. D'Eſpagnac, the two Freys, Dietrichen, and Gulman, were alſo found guilty—Lullier was acquitted.

At two o'clock in the afternoon the Revolutionary Tribunal paſſed ſentence of death upon them, to be executed at the expiration of three hours.

Place de la Revolution.—Evening of the 5ſt.

At five o'clock the condemned perſons were conveyed in three carts from the Conciergerie to the Place de la Revolution.—In the firſt cart were Danton, Chabot, Lacroix, Fabre d'Eglantine, and Herault de Sechelles. In the ſecond, Phillippaux, Delaunay d'Angers, Bazire, and Camille Deſmoulins.—In the third, Weſtermann and the reſt. They all behaved with intrepidity, except Lacroix, Danton in particular, who was executed laſt, ſhewed the utmoſt contempt of death.

COUNCIL-CHAMBER, May 24, 1794.

PRESENT

His Excellency JOHN GRAVES SIMCOE, Esq; Lieutenant Governor, &c. &c. &c.—IN COUNCIL.

Read a Representation from the Acting Surveyor General stating that many irregularities have been practised, with regard to the occupation of Lands and setting forth the inconvenience and confusion likely to ensue therefrom, which being taken into consideration His Excellency and the Council

RESOLVE,

THAT, whereas many persons have settled upon Lands in different parts of this Province without having obtained any Authority, Licence or Title so to do, such intrusion is injurious to the Right of the Crown, and abusive of the King's Bounty so liberally held out to all sober and industrious Settlers on making a proper application to his Excellency in Council or to the several Land-Boards: and therefore it is necessary that immediate measures be taken to remove such Trespassers, and to prevent the extending of such lawless practices, for which purpose it is hereby ordered, that Deputy Surveyors, and others employed under the Surveyor General, who shall find in the course of their progress, that any person or persons have taken possession of any pieces of ground or lot in any unsurveyed or unlocated part, whereby there may be good reason to believe, that such occupation has been usurped; that they do immediately report the same, together with the name of the party to the Surveyor General, who in case he shall find that such person has not been located by a competent authority, shall issue a notice to the party or parties, requiring them to remove from the Premises without delay, and if such Warning be not obeyed, he shall report the same to his Excellency in Council in order that the Attorney General may be directed to proceed against such intruders with the utmost rigour of the Law; and further that all persons, who shall wilfully hold out after receiving such Warning from the Surveyor General, shall be disqualified from becoming partakers of the King's bounty in any part of this Province.

And whereas at the first Settlement of the Home District, some few persons who authorized by the Commanding Officer for the time being, to take up, and occupy, certain parcels of Land, in consequence of which, they have been considered as having an equitable claim to the property of such Lands, with a view to prevent the Confusion, Uncertainty and Contention that will hereafter take place unless the boundaries of each persons property be distinctly ascertained, and described, as well as to confirm the Right and Title of those who have been deserving object of his Majesty's Bounty. It is hereby ordered, that all persons claiming such right from an authorized occupation of the Land, do forthwith hereby give in a Memorial thereof containing a statement of the quntity of Land which they respectively claim, to the Surveyor General, who shall report thereon to his Excellency in Council, that proper grants may be made out to those who shall be entitled to the same.

And whereas many persons having obtained a certificate have taken possession of Lands without having received any assignment from the Surveyor General or Deputy Surveyors, by means whereof much confusion has arisen. It is further ordered, that no person shall in any case take possession of any lot or parcel of ground until he shall have received a regular assignment thereof from the Surveyor General or a Deputy Surveyor under the penalty of being compelled to relinquish all improvements to the person who shall obtain a regular assignment of such lot, and therefore be lawfully entitled to take possession of the same.—Inasmuch as all lots must necessarily be considered as vacant untill they are duly assigned and Registered in the Surveyor General's Office.

And further that all persons at present holding Orders or Certificates for Land, which has not been assigned, do make application for that purpose as soon as possible.

And whereas it is desirable to make early provisions for all persons authorized by His Majesty's Proclamation or Instructions to receive their respective allotments of Land, such persons are hereby required to make immediate applications for the same.

COUNCIL-CHAMBER, May 24, 1794.

PRESENT

His Excellency JOHN GRAVES SIMCOE, Eſq; Lieutenant Governor, &c. &c. &c.—IN COUNCIL.

Read a Repreſentation from the Acting Surveyor General ſtating that many irregularities have been practiſed, with regard to the occupation of Lands and ſetting forth the inconvenience and confuſion likely to enſue therefrom, which being taken into conſideration His Excellency and the Council

RESOLVE,

THAT whereas many perſons have ſettled upon Lands in different parts of this Province without having obtained any Authority, Licence or Title ſo to do, ſuch intruſion is injurious to the Rights of the Crown, and abuſive of the King's Bounty ſo liberally held out to all ſober and induſtrious Settlers on making a proper application to his Excellency in Council or to the ſeveral Land-Boards: and therefore it is neceſſary that immediate meaſures be taken to remove ſuch Treſpaſſers, and to prevent the extending of ſuch lawleſs practices, for which purpoſe it is hereby ordered, that the Deputy Surveyors, & others employed under the Surveyor General, who ſhall find in the courſe of their progreſs, that any perſon or perſons have taken poſſeſſion of any pieces of ground or lot in any unſurveyed or unlocated part, whereby there may be good reaſon to believe, that ſuch occupation has been uſurped; that they do immediately report the ſame, together with the name of the party to the Surveyor General, who in caſe he ſhall find that ſuch perſon has not been located by a competent authority, ſhall iſſue a notice to the party or parties, requiring them to remove from the Premiſes without delay, and if ſuch Warning be not obeyed, he ſhall report the ſame to his Excellency in Council in order that the Attorney General may be directed to proceed againſt ſuch intruders with the utmoſt rigour of the Law, and further that all perſons, who ſhall wilfully hold out after receiving ſuch Warning from the Surveyor General, ſhall be diſqualified from becoming undertakers of the King's bounty in any part of this Province.

And whereas at the firſt Settlement of the Home Diſtrict, ſome few perſons were authorized by the Commanding Officer for the time being, to take up, and occupy, certain parcels of Land, in conſequence of which, they have been conſidered as having an equitable claim to the property of ſuch Lands, with a view to prevent the Confuſion, Uncertainty and Contention that will hereafter take place unleſs the boundaries of each perſons property be diſtinctly aſcertained, and deſcribed, as well as to confirm the Right and Title of thoſe who have been deſerving objects of his Majeſty's Bounty. It is hereby ordered, that all perſons claiming ſuch right from an authorized occupation of the Land, do forthwith hereby give in a Memorial thereof, containing a ſtatement of the quantity of Land which they reſpectively claim, to the Surveyor General, who ſhall report thereon to his Excellency in Council, that proper grants may be made out to thoſe who ſhall be entitled to the ſame.

And whereas many perſons having obtained a certificate have taken poſſeſſion of Lands without having received any aſſignment from the Surveyor General or Deputy Surveyors, by means whereof much confuſion has ariſen. It is further ordered, that no perſon ſhall in any caſe take poſſeſſion of any lot or parcel of ground untill he ſhall have received a regular aſſignment thereof from the Surveyor General or a Deputy Surveyor under the penalty of being compelled to relinquiſh all improvements to the perſon who ſhall obtain a regular aſſignment of ſuch lot, and therefore be lawfully entitled to take poſſeſſion of the ſame.—Inaſmuch as all lots muſt neceſſarily be conſidered as vacant untill they are duly aſſigned and Regiſtered in the Surveyor General's Office.

And further that all perſons at preſent holding Orders or Certificates for Land, which has not been aſſigned, do make application for that purpoſe as ſoon as poſſible.

And whereas it is deſirable to make early proviſion for all perſons authorized by His Majeſty's Proclamation or Inſtructions to receive their reſpective allotments of Land, ſuch perſons are hereby required to make immediate applications for the ſame.

COUNCIL-CHAMBER, May 24, 1794.

PRESENT

His Excellency JOHN GRAVES SIMCOE, Esq; Lieutenant Governor, &c. &c. &c.—IN COUNCIL.

Read a Representation from the Acting Surveyor General stating that many irregularities have been practised, with regard to the occupation of Lands and setting forth the inconvenience and confusion likely to ensue therefrom, which being taken into consideration His Excellency and the Council

RESOLVE,

THAT whereas many persons have settled upon Lands in different parts of this Province without having obtained any Authority, Licence or Title so to do, such intrusion is injurious to the Right of the Crown, and abusive of the King's Bounty so liberally held out to all sober and industrious Settlers on making a proper application to his Excellency in Council or to the several Land-Boards: and therefore it is necessary that immediate measures be taken to remove such Trespassers, and to prevent the extending of such lawless practices, for which purpose it is hereby ordered, that Deputy Surveyors, and others employed under the Surveyor General, who shall find in the course of their progress, that any person or persons have taken possession of any pieces of ground or lot in any unsurveyed or unlocated part, whereby there may be good reason to believe, that such occupation has been usurped; that they do immediately report the same, together with the name of the party to the Surveyor General, who in case he shall find that such person has not been located by a competent authority, shall issue a notice to the ~~party~~ or parties, requiring them to remove from the Premises without delay, and if such Warning be not obeyed, he shall report the same to his Excellency in Council in order that the Attorney General may be directed to proceed against such intruders with the utmost rigour of the Law; and further that all persons, who shall wilfully held out after receiving such Warning from the Surveyor General, shall be disqualified from becoming partakers of the King's bounty in any part of this Province.

And whereas at the first Settlement of the Home District, some few persons who authorized by the Commanding Officer for the time being, to take up, and occupy, certain parcels of Land, in consequence of which, they have been considered as having an equitable claim to the property of such Lands, with a view to prevent the Confusion, Uncertainty and Contention that will hereafter take place unless the boundaries of each persons property be distinctly ascertained, and described, as well as to confirm the Right and Title of those who have been deserving object of his Majesty's Bounty. It is hereby ordered, that all persons claiming such right from an authorized occupation of the Land, do forhwith here by give in a Memorial thereof containing a statement of the qantity of Land which they respectively claim, to the Surveyor General, who shall report thereon to his Excellency in Council, that proper grants may be made out to those who shall be entitled to the same.

And whereas many persons having obtained a certificate have taken possession of Lands without having received any assignment from the Surveyor General or Deputy Surveyors, by means whereof much confusion has arisen. It is further ordered, that no person shall in any case take possession of any lot or parcel of ground untill he shall have received a regular assignment thereof from the Surveyor General or a Deputy Surveyor under the penalty of being compelled to relinquish all improvements to the person who shall obtain a regular assignment of such lot, and therefore be lawfully entitled to take possession of the same.—Inasmuch as all lots must necessarily be considered as vacant untill they are duly assigned and Registered in the Surveyor General's Office.

And further that all persons at present holding Orders or Certificates for Land, which has not been assigned, do make application for that purpose as soon as possible.

And whereas it is desirable to make early provisions for all persons authorised by His Majesty's Proclamation or Instructions to receive their respective allotments of Land, such persons are hereby required to make immediate applications for the same.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 11, 1794.

PUBLISHED BY AUTHORITY.

Defeat of the French Fleet.

ADMIRALTY-OFFICE, June 10.

Sir Roger Curtis, firſt Capt. to the Admiral Lord Howe, arrived this Evening with a Diſpatch from His Lordſhip to Mr. Stephens, of which the following is a copy.

Queen Charlotte, at Sea, June 2, 1794.
Uſhant, E. Half N. 140 Leagues.

SIR,

THINKING it may not be neceſſary to make a more particular report of my proceedings with the Fleet, for the preſent information of the Lord Commiſſioners of the Admiralty, I confine my communications chiefly, in this diſpatch, to the occurrences when in preſence of the enemy yeſterday.

Finding on my return off Breſt on the 19th paſt, that the French Fleet had, a few days before put to Sea; and receiving, on the ſame Evening, Advices from Rear Admiral Montagu, I deemed it requiſite to endeavour to form a junction with the Rear Admiral as ſoon as poſſible, and proceeded immediately for the ſtation on which he meant to wait for the return of the Venus.

But having gained very credible intelligence, on the 21ſt of the ſame month, whereby I had reaſon to ſuppoſe the French fleet was then but a few Leagues farther to the weſtward, the courſe before ſteered was altered accordingly.

On the morning of the 28th the Enemy were diſcovered far to the Wind-ward; and partial Actions were engaged with them that evening and the next day.

The Weather Gage having been obtained, in the progreſs of the laſt mentioned day; and the Fleet being in a ſituation for bringing the enemy to cloſe action the 1ſt. inſtant, the Ships bore up together for that purpoſe between ſeven and eight o'clock in the morning.

The French, their force conſiſting of Twenty-ſix ſhips of the Line, oppoſed to his Majeſty's Fleet of Twenty-five (the Audacious having parted Company with the ſternmoſt ſhip of the enemy's Line, captured in the night of the 28th.) waited for the action, and ſuſtained the attack with their cuſtomary reſolution.

In leſs than an hour after the cloſe action commenced in the centre, the French Admiral, engaged by the Queen Charlotte, crowded off, and was followed by moſt of the ſhips of his van in condition to carry ſail after him, leaving with us about Ten or twelve of his crippled or totally diſmaſted ſhips, excluſive of one ſunk in the engagement. The Queen Charlote had then loſt her fore top-maſt, and the main topmaſt fell over the ſide very ſoon after.

The greater number of the other ſhips of the Britiſh Fleet were at this time, ſo much diſabled or widely ſeparated, and under ſuch circumſtances with reſpect to thoſe ſhips of the enemy in a ſtate for action, and with which the firing was ſtill continued, that two or three, even of their diſmantled ſhips, attempting to get away under a ſpritſail ſingly, or ſmaller ſail raiſed on the ſtump of the foremaſt, could not be detained.

Seven remained in our poſſeſſion, one of which, however, ſunk before the adequate aſſiſtance could be given to her crew, but many were ſaved.

The Brunſwick having loſt her mizen maſt in the action and drifted to Leeward of the French retreating ſhips, was obliged to put away large to the Northward from them. Not ſeeing her chaſed by the enemy, in that predicament, I flatter myſelf ſhe may arrive in ſafety at Plymouth. All the other Twenty-four ſhips of his Majeſty's fleet re-aſſembled later in the day: and I am preparing to return with them, as ſoon as the captured ſhips of the enemy are ſecured, for Spithead.

The Material injury to his Majeſty's ſhips, I underſtand is confined principally to their maſts and yards, which I conclude will be ſpeedily replaced.

I have not been yet able to collect regular accounts of the killed and wounded in the different ſhips. Captain Montagu is the only officer of his Rank who fell in the Action. The numbers of both deſcriptions, I hope will prove ſmall, the nature of the ſervice conſidered; but I have the concern of having to add, on the ſame ſubject, that Admiral Graves has received a wound in the arm, and that Rear Admirals Bowyer and Paſley, and Captain Hutt of the Queen, have each had a leg taken off; they are, however, (I have the ſatisfaction to hear) in a favorable ſtate under thoſe misfortunes. In the captured ſhips the numbers of killed and wounded appear to be very conſiderable.

Though I ſhall have, on the ſubject of theſe different actions with the enemy, diſtinguiſhed examples hereafter to report, I preſume the determined bravery of the ſeveral Ranks of Officers and the ſhips companies employed under my authority, will have been already ſufficiently denoted by the effect of their ſpirited exertions; and I truſt I ſhall be excuſed for poſtponing the more detailed narrative of the other tranſactions of the Fleet thereon, for being communicated at a future opportunity; more eſpecially as my firſt Capt. Sir Roger Curtis, who is charged with this diſpatch, will be able to give the farther information the Lords Commiſſioners of the Admiralty may at this time require. It is incumbent on me, nevertheleſs, now to add, that I am greatly indebted to him for his Councils as well as conduct in every branch of my official duties: And I have ſimilar aſſiſtance in the late occurence, to acknowledge of my ſecond Captain, Sir Andrew Douglas.

I am, with great conſideration,
SIR,
Your moſt obedient Servant,
HOWE.

VOLUME II. G. R. NUMBER 2.

UPPER CANADA GAZETTE, OR AMERICAN ORACLE.

NEWARK—Printed by G. TIFFANY. Wednesday, DEC. 10, 1794.

PARIS, July, 30.

On the 28th, at three in the morning, the repreſentatives of the people charged with the commiſſion announced to the Convention, that they were maſters of the hall of the commune and the traitors it contained.

Le Bas killed himſelf. The two Robeſpierres and Couthon had tried to eſcape the vengeance of the people by the ſame means; but they were only wounded, and met the puniſhment reſerved for traitors.

Three perſons being identified before the Revolutionary tribunal, which was all that was neceſſary for their condemnation, as they had been previouſly outlawed, ſentence of death was pronounced upon them.

On the 28th in the evening, their heads fell on the ſcaffold, amid the acclamations of an immenſe concourſe of people, who rent the air with ſhouts of Vive la republique! Vive la Convention! a memorable example for all men, who may ever dream of attempting to uſurp the national ſovereignty! glorious day, which ſaw diſappear in an inſtant all the hopes of the coaleſced Deſpots! they reckoned on having to treat with a Dictator! the French people rather ſhall be a dictator to them! and from the French people they have neither peace nor truce to expect. What a ſublime ſpectacle was the energetic unanimity of the National Convention! how muſt the firm countenance of the people of Paris, and the ſpontaneous rallying of all the citizens around the Convention, terrify the Agitators! this revolution, by giving new force to the National repreſentation, pronounces ſentence of death upon all thoſe who ſhall attempt to divide or degrade it. In vain would the eternal calumniators of the people profit of theſe events to accuſe the people of verſatility. The people are always juſt in their judgments; their wiſh is Liberty, and they love none but thoſe who defend it. The leſs they ſhall idoliſe individuals, the more conſtant will they be in their love for their country. The more precarious the reputations of individuals ſhall appear, the more firmly will public liberty be eſtabliſhed. Whoever renders himſelf powerful enough to attempt to ſet himſelf above the law, ought, in every one of his fellow citizens, to find a Brutus. The overbearing influence of a ſingle man, is the moſt dangerous ſcourge of a republic.

REVOLUTIONARY TRIBUNAL.

In the Sitting of the 25th, 26th, and 27th ult. this Tribunal ſentenced to death 135 individuals. Among theſe the moſt remarkable are the famous Barron Trenck, aged 70 years.

Auguſt 1. On the 28th at night, were guillotined here, the following perſons—Maximilian Robeſpierre, 35 years old, a native of Arras; George Couthon; 38 years old, a native of Liſere; A. Robeſpierre, a younger brother of the above Maximilian; F. Henriot, commander in chief of the armed force at Paris; L. Lavalette, Ex Noble, born at Paris commander of a battalion of national guards, late a Brigadier General in the northern army; R. Dumaſs, 37 years old, born at Luſſy, formerly a lawyer at Lyon le-Saunier, and late preſident of the revolutionary tribunal; J. R. Leſcot Frenriot, 39 years old, Mayor of Paris; C. F. Payan, 27 years of age, a juryman of the revolutionary tribunal and national guard of Paris; N. Vivieras, 50 years old, judge of the criminal tribunal of the department and preſident of the ſociety called Jacobins in the night of the 17th and 18th of July, C. Bernard, 34 years old, an ex-prieſt; Geney, aged 33 years, a vintner; Cobeau, 26 years, old, a ſubſtitute at the criminal tribunal; A. Simon, a ſhoemaker, and governor or preceptor of Louis XVII.; C. Laurent, 33 years of age; J. Foreſtier, 47 years old, a cannon founder; P. Guerin, a rent receiver; Lezard, a hair-dreſſer; Locheſer, an upholſterer; Bangon and Quenet, being all 12 members of the municipality at Paris, out lawed by a decree of the convention, and their perſons being duly recognized, ſurrendered to the executioner to be put to death within 24 hours.

We have never witneſſed a crowd equal to that which attended their execution.—"Women, children, old men the whole town was preſent, ſays a morning print, and it is impoſſible to expreſs the joy which was pictured on every countenance. All the ſtreets through which the conſpirators paſſed reſounded with the following exclamations—"Oh, the ſcoundrels; long live the republic, long live the convention." All eyes were eſpecially fixed on Maximilian, Robeſpierre, Couthon and Henriot, who were covered with blood from the wounds they had given themſelves before they were taken."—"Henriot," ſays another paper, "even after he had been out-lawed by the convention, was ſtill threatning the republic. At length, forſaken by the patriots, he tried to break his head againſt a wall, and then concealed himſelf in a common ſewer out of which he was taken after the moſt deſperate reſiſtance."

The heads of Robeſpierre, Henriot, Dumas, and ſome others were held up and ſhown to the people, who, the whole way from the Palace of Juſtice to the ſcaffold, teſtified their abhorrence and deteſtation.

Yeſterday the convention enacted the following decree:—"All the members, judges, jurymen and other officers of the revolutionary tribunal, are herewith ſuſpended from their funetions." But, Billaud Varns, having obſerved that the revolutionary tribunal were employed in trying the accomplices of Robeſpierre to the number of 71, the execution of the above decree was poſtponed, till the committees ſhould have made their report.

The late execution of Robeſpierre has not made much impreſſion here. All is quiet. The place of Robeſpierre and his adherents in the committee of public welfare, have been ſupplied by Breard, Thuriot, and Lollien, and this committee, as well as that of general ſafety, are henceforth to be one-fourth part newly elected every month.

LONDON, Auguſt 18.

THE fall of Robeſpierre is at length confirmed.—The particulars our readers will find under the Head France. The charge againſt him was that of aſpiring to the tyranny; and, as far as can be collected from the proceedings of the convention, it was not without foundation.

He appears to have filled all the municipal offices of Paris with his own creatures: to have ſecured a great majority in the jacobine club, by what he called the purifying ſcrutiny; to have tampered with the armed force of the capital, particularly the cannoneers; and put an accomplice at the head of the whole. Hence his reſcue after being taken into cuſtody under the decree of accusation, and his being able, for a whole night to brave the Convention. Only two hours before he was retaken, the victory seemed doubtful. The people, however soon declared against him; & with them his attempt to resist was held to be an infallible proof of his guilt

The only members of the Convention who fell with him, were his brother, St. Just, Couthon and Le Bas. Barrere, with his wonted dexterity contrived to be on the side of the victorious party; and seems to retain as much influence as he ever possessed in the committee of public safety.

This contest, as important as any since the commencement of the revolution, was decided without battle or massacre. How far the proscriptions may be extended under colour of law, remains to be seen.

The Convention appear to be placed in a more advantageous situation than they have enjoyed since their convocation. They have obtained a signal proof of the attachment of the people; they have triumphed over the commune of Paris which often arrogated co-ordinate, and sometimes exercised superior powers; and they have reduced the Jacobin club to such a degree of humiliation and debasement, that it can never become formidable again but by their own mismanagement.

August 19. Last night arrived Mr. Luzun, a King's messenger, from the Hague, and also the mail from Holland.

We have received a variety of communications from different parts of the continent; particularly from Holland, where we have now established a similar correspondence to that we had in the Netherlands in the early part of the present campaign.

It appears that the Allied Armies under Prince Cobourgh, on the Meuse, and under Prince Hohenlohe and General Mollendorf on the Rhine, are again moving forward, in consequence of the inactivity which prevailed throughout the French armies for the last fortnight. The commotions in Paris have evidently paralized their movements, and given time to the Allies to take the necessary steps for active operation.

Private Correspondence.

British Head Quarters at Juilerhout, August 14.

"We still retain the same position, and in all likelihood shall not leave it. The enemy have withdrawn a great part of their force on this side of Antwerp. Nothing has happened within these last days, but a few skirmishes between our out-posts and those of the enemy. The night before last a Dutch patrole of 18 horse was surprized and taken by the republicans, between Rysbergen and Selden ffen; but the British have latterly not been engaged any where.

"Our last accounts from the Austrian grand army state, that the Prince of Cobourg has again marched forward, and established his head quarters at Tongers. His advanced posts are at St. Tron. Gen. La Tour still maintains his position near Liege. General Clairfayt has marched from Ruremonde towards Namur, and Gen. Kray occupies his former position near Maestricht.

"The garrison of Breda has been lately reinforced by several regiments of the Dutch troops, and will certainly be defended to the utmost extremity, should it be attacked.

"All the reports which we receive from the enemy's armies in Brabant and Flanders agree in stating, that they have lost, and are still daily losing a vast number of men by epidemical diseases, which are raging in those countries, and that they are constantly allarmed by commotions and insurrections springing up in the different towns, one of which, not yet suppressed at Louvain, has been of a very serious complexion. It is also said that an insurrection has broken out at Brussels."

RUSSIAN FLEET.

From our correspondent at Edinburgh, we yesterday received a letter, acquainting us, that a Russian Fleet of 10 sail of the line and four Frigates had arrived in the mouth of the Frith of Forth on the 14th instant.

An officer was sent on shore, who on Friday landed at Leith, for the purpose of taking in fresh provisions.

The coast of Scotland was the place of their destination. There they were to wait till they received further orders from the court of Petersburgh.

Various speculations have been made on the ultimate object of this fleet: and one of the following objects seems to be the real one—The Empress either is aware of a rupture with the Porte, and intends this Fleet for the Mediterranean, or she thinks it necessary to add strength to her naval force in the Baltic.—On the eve of her last war with Sweden, she found means to bring five line of battle ships into the Baltic, for which the court of Stockholm was very much blamed.

The present fleet consists wholly of new ships, built at Archangel, and, it is supposed, the Danish and Swedish Fleets have been fitted out to oppose their entrance.

If this supposition be well founded, the Empress will be obliged to send her whole strength into the Baltic, to conduct them through the Sound, in defiance of the combined Fleets of Sweden and Denmark.

If they do not enter the Baltic, then it is put beyond a doubt, that the Empress either is aware of a certain rupture with the Turks, or intends at last to come forward with vigour against the French.

OFFICIAL DISPATCH

From his Serene Highness the hereditary Prince of Orange, to the States of Holland.

Head-Quarters at Buerle, July 22.

High and Mighty Lords,

I had already the honor to inform your High Mightinesses in my last, that, owing to the retreat of the Austrian army towards the Maese, I might probably be obliged to quit my position behind the Little Nette, which has taken place accordingly this day, being arrived here this evening with the army of the state, where I encamped near the Village, while the corps under the orders of Major General Geuseau took post betwen Tornhout and Beersel.

The Duke of York has at the same time left the town of Lier, and retreated to Antwerp.

(Signed)
The Hereditary Prince of Orange.

From Milan we learn that the rising in a mass in Piedmont, has produced upwards of 40,000 men. They are to be divided into three columns, to assist the troops of the line in driving the French from their various posts. Their standards are decorated with the words "Vive Jesu, Maria Vergine la Religione Catholica, Patria," but they are furnished with provisions only for a week.

By a letter from Corfica, dated June 10. we learn that General Stuart and General Trigge were both arrived in that Island. General Stuart was gone to the siege of Calvi. This mentions that the French fleet are still blocked up in the Bay of Gourjun. Their first rate man of war, the Sans Culotte of 120 guns, in attempting to avoid the British fleet run a-ground, but was afterwards with some difficulty got off. Had the wind continued to blow but one hour longer Lord Hood would have brought the French fleet to action.

BERGEN-OP-ZOOM, August 12.

"The Carmagnols are now drawing nearer to us. Their advanced posts push already as far as Hoogerheide, occupied by a detachment of our horse. On the 9th inst. our out posts had a skirmish with those of the enemy, who, by their great superiority in numbers, forced our troops to retreat, and made ten of them prisoners of war. On the same day arrived here the hereditary Prince of Orange, but at night left us again, and repaired to Steenbergen. Last Friday and Saturday we received a reinforcement of two battallions of Grenadiers, which, as well as two battalions of Welke, the day before yesterday very unexpectedly received orders to proceed on board several vessels immediately, for Batz.

Our garrison however, remains very strong, and is composed of British and Hessian troops, of some Swiss regiments that of Orange, Gueldres, and several others. All our fortifications are in the most respectable state of defence, and our arsenal and magazines are full of ammunition and provisions, sufficient to stand a long siege."

ROTTERDAM, August 15.

The French are about to raise the siege of Sluys, where they have hitherto made but a very insufficient progress; almost all their batteries have been dismounted by the fire of the befieged, and their troops constantly harrassed by the successful sallies of the garrison. Another reason for abandoning the siege is, on account of the inundation, which surrounds the greatest part of the town, and of the great number of their sick, who are daily conveyed to Bruges on 50 and more waggons. The cannonade has began much to slacken, and only a few cannon shot are now fired in the course of a day.

BALTIMORE, September 29.

Extract of a letter from Union Town, dated the 4th inst.

"This country seems to wear a gloomy aspect at the present juncture; intestine broils threaten the land. Liberty and Whisky is the cry in this place. Between 700 and 1000 men were collecting in town the other day. But I believe they were like the Ephesians, the majority knew not the cause of their coming together. However, we have got a Liberty Pole, and I suppose we may all do as we please."

Extract of a letter from Hager's Town, dated September 23.

"Mr. Long of Redstone Old Fort, who left that place the 20th inst. passed thro' this place this morning, with dispatches to governor Mifflin: he informed me, that a very large majority of the inhabitants in the four western counties of Pentylvania have associated to support government: that they have been obliged to do it in a private manner in Washington county, and that he is satisfied they will be able to support the civil authority in that country without assistance from any other place: I also believe they can, provided the insurgents are satisfied there is an armed force preparing to march against them, but no longer.

"Our insurgents are pretty well settled; we have about one hundred of them in confinement, besides a great number who are recognized to appear at court, and find trial; about 50 of those now in confinement have not been examined yet, for want of time; I suppose most of them will be released, as the greatest offenders have been first examined. Several characters are not admitted to bail."

PHILADELPHIA, October, 1.

An express arrived at the War Office yesterday afternoon, with dispatches from Major General Wayne, which were immediately after forwarded to the President of the United States. The account of the action of the 20th of August, in the General's letters, we hear, are in substance nearly the same as contained under the Lexington head. Captain Campbell and Lieutenant Towles are the only officers of the army killed; and and our loss, in killed and wounded, amount to 115.

NEW-YORK, October 11.

Yesterday came up from Sandy Hook, the British frigate Cleopatra, Capt. Burrisford, with Rear Admiral Murry on board, the rest of the men of war are the Africa,	64	—— Holms.

By the London papers we learn, that a revolution is on foot in Geneva. Stays makes a vigorous resistance against the French; and it is tho't that the attempt to take it will be abandoned.

General Jourdan is arrested, and Gen. Pichegru is recalled, and gone to Paris. On the 12th of August it was reported at Bredy, that 10,000 persons had been massacred at Paris. Similar reports have arrived at Philadelphia; which magnify the number of the slain to 18,000.

The British troops are fortifying their camp at Breda. Cobourgh retains his position near Maestrech, and is determined to defend the Meuse.

On the 21st of July the Revolutionary Tribunal of Paris condemned thirty persons; and on the 22d forty-five suffered the ax of the Guillotine.

Extract of a letter from Montreal dated, September 13.

"Perhaps you have already heard of Gen. Wayne's army having advanced within 4 miles of Fort Miami, now occupied by the British, where they met a body of Indians, and fortunately for Gen. Wayne, it took place on a plain, where his horse had room to act, and by that means repelled the Indians in a short time: they then retreated with the loss of 15 killed, most of them chief and principal warriors; and altho' Gen. Wayne's army sufferd most (having lost 230 killed and, 139 wounded) yet according to Indian computation, their loss was greater, and will be felt by them for some time.

Newark, December 10.

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor left this town the 14th ult. on his way, via York, to the eastern part of this Province, where 'tis expected he will spend the winter.

Copy of a letter from the hon. Captain Paget, of his Majesty's ship Romney to Captain Montgomery, of the Inconstant, dated in Miconi Bay June 18, 1794.

I beg leave to acquaint you, that yesterday morning on my passage between the islands of Tino and Micom (in his Majesty's ship Romney, under my command, and the convoy I had the honor of receiving charge of from you the preceding day) I discovered a frigate under national colours and a broad pendant, at anchor in shore, with three merchantmen. Judging the convoy to be in perfect safety as you was in sight from the masthead, I made the signal for them to make the best of their way towards you, hauled my wind and came to anchor in Miconi road within a little more than a cables length of the French commodore. I immediately sent to him to desire he would strike his colours, and surrender to his Britannic Majesty, or that I should fire into him: He sent me for answer that he was well acquainted with the force of my ship, that he was well prepared for me both with men and ammunition, and that he had made oath never to strike his colours. By this time he had placed his ship between me and the town of Miconi, which obliged me to carry out another anchor, and warp the ship further a-head, in order that my guns might point clear of the town. At one P. M. I got a breast of him, and having secured the ship with springs on the cables I gave him a broad side which he instantly returned. The action lasted without a moments intermission for one hour and ten minutes when I had the satisfaction of seeing the national colours hauled down, and of taking possession of her and the merchantmen. She proved to be the La Sybille, of forty-six guns, and four hundred and thirty men, commanded by Commodore Rondeau. I have sent on board, to take command of her, Mr. Brisbane, first lieutenant of the Romney, an officer of most distinguished merit, whom I beg leave to recommend in the strongest manner, and whose very cool gallant behaviour, and prompt obedience to my orders during the action, as well Lieutenants Field and O'Bryan, Mr. Patterson the master, and all the other officers, with the ship's company, I cannot sufficiently commend.

I am sorry to conclude with informing you, that I had eight seamen killed in the action, and thirty wounded, two of whom are since dead.

La Sybille had fifty-five killed, including the second Lieutenant and Captain of Marines, and one hundred and three wounded, nine of whom are since dead.

With the Incendiary, Comet, and Megara, fireſhips, Penelope cutter, Rattler ſloop, Argus lugger, and Charon hoſpital ſhip.

Before the fleet were out of ſight of land, pleaſing account was conveyed to them of the determination of the Admiralty Court, that the St. Jago Spaniſh Regiſter ſhip was the property of the captors. By this deciſion between 40, and 50,000l. will fall to Lord Hood; 30,000l. to each of the captains; and in proportion to the officers and men of the fleet by whom ſhe was taken.

A navy board was held on Monday, for contracting with private buildings for as many 74 gun ſhips as the commiſſioners may receive propoſals for, to be begun and finiſhed with as much expedition as poſſible; alſo, for a number of frigates and larger veſſels, for the uſe of his majeſty's navy.

Yeſterday a cabinet council was held at the admiralty-office, when ſir Sydney Smith received the command of a ſquadron of frigates, and alſo his inſtruction; his deſtination is not at preſent known.

His Majeſty, it is ſaid, has it in contemplation to follow the generous example of queen Anne, who, to relieve the public in ſome degree from their burdens, during the famous war of the great duke of Marlborough, ſacrificed 100,000l. per annum out of 500,000l. (which was her eſtabliſhment) towards the ſupport of the war. Beſides, it is underſtood that his Majeſty is determined to pay the preſent debts of the heir apparent out of his own private purſe. By ſuch acts as theſe it is that a King proves himſelf to be really the father of his people.

March 6.

Accounts from Hungary mention, that the ſtates of the kingdom have iſſued a circular letter, ſignifying their reſolution to beſtow a gratuitous ſum of 7 millions of ducats on his imperial Majeſty for the ſupport of the war.

March 9.

Lord Grenville has had a conference with the two Dutch commiſſioners, at the concluſion of which the latter ſent off their ſecretary to the Hague to give an account of the anſwer of the Engliſh miniſter. It is ſaid that the anſwer was, "That the Britiſh government would deliver up the veſſels ſeized, and take off the embargo, as ſoon as the Dutch deliver up the Engliſh veſſels taken by the French in the ports of Holland: that was grounded on fair and juſt principles, for the ſtates general either were the ſovereigns of the United States, and could reſtore the ſhips actually in their ports, or they were a conquered people, now making a part of France, and their property was legal ſeizure."

March 12.

We have before ſtated that earl Camden is generally reported as ſucceſſor to the viceroyſhip of Ireland. Mr. Pelham has alſo been mentioned as the new ſecretary. They are both men from whom we may expect the reſtoration of harmony between the two kingdoms.

There are letters in town from Paris of the 4th inſt. We underſtand that Paris papers of the 3d contain the official accounts of the detachment of 6 ſhips of the line and ſeveral frigates on another. The one ſquadron with 6 months proviſions on board, and the other with eight. This appears to be directed to the Weſt and Eaſt-Indies.

The ſame papers give an account of freſh diſturbances, at Marſeilles.

By all the laſt accounts from Ireland we have the ſatisfactory aſſurance that no tendency to tumult had appeared.

IRISH PARLIAMENT.

Houſe of Commons, Tueſday, February 3.

Mr. Grattan roſe to make his promiſed motion for voting a ſum of money for the purpoſe of raiſing ſeamen for manning the fleet. He ſaid the motion which he had to ſubmit to the conſideration of the houſe, went to ſtrengthen at this particular criſis the fleet of Great-Britain: his right hon. friend, (the chancellor of the exchequer) whoſe department it more immediately was, would ſtate to the houſe that 41,000 men were to be provided for, for the defence of the country, beſides a train of artillery. This force, he truſted, would not only be ſufficient to repel any external attack that might be made on this country by the enemy, but likewiſe be ſufficient to preſerve the internal peace of the country. The eſtimates are now made; he admitted they were high, but he truſted to the liberality of parliament, that this country would be put in a complete ſtate of defence, and what was more, he relied on the ſpirit of the country, and that all ranks would unite in demonſtrating their reſpect for the laws, their veneration for the throne, and their attachment to the conſtitution.—He then moved that a ſum not exceeding 200,000l. be granted for the purpose of raising men in this kingdom for manning the fleet.

The chancellor of the exchequer said, that the first estimate was for the expence of 12,000, the old military establishment: this force had been augmented last year to 17,000, and it is now proposed to farther augment it to a regular force consisting of 20,360 men. The militia consists of 17,069 and it was proposed to augment it 4,500 men, so as to make the militia of this kingdom consist of 21,569: this with the regular forces, would amount to 41,000 men for the home defence of the country; the encreased expences would amount to about 386,720l. He stated, that the state of the public income, and the situation of the country was such, that such an expence can be undertaken without any inconvenience. He said that the situation of the country was more favorable now than it was last year, when he had the honor of addressing himself to the house on the subject of finance. He observed, that providing for the home defence should be the first object, and the present motion, which went to the external defence of the country, would also give efficiency to that defence. He said, that on Saturday, in the committee of supply, he should go into a detail of the general branches of the establishments.

[From a London paper, dated May 4.]

LONDON, Feb. 10.

CALCULATION of the FINANCES of FRANCE.

From the calamitous reign of Charles VI. up to the period of the present revolution, France was never in a more distressed situation than in the year 1709. At that epoch, exhausted by a long war, she had still to withstand all the efforts of Europe leagued against her, to recruit her numerous armies after several bloody defeats; and to support them at an enormous expence; and this at a time when the declining faculties of Louis XIV. no longer permitted him to direct the department of finance, and to watch the out-goings of the exchequer, and when one of the severest winters ever experienced, obliged government to make immense sacrifices for supplying the wants of its distressed subjects.

Notwithstanding those unfortunate circumstances, the expence for the year 1709, according to the statement of M. Desmarets, minister of state, did not amount to more than Livres. 221,110,547

And for 547,990 sacks of corn collected by requisition, and paid by abatements of the contributions and taxes 10,526,500

Sum total of the expence of 1709, 231,637,047

If we estimate the value of the corn at that time at the rate of 26 livres the mark, the said expences make 381,000,000 livres of our present money.

Let us compare this annual expence with that of the convention in the year 1794.

There has been one month in that year wherein the extraordinary expenditure amounted to 450 millions, and the ordinary expences of 48 millions; of course the sum total amounts to 498 millions; and consequently the monthly expence, under the republican administration of finances, has exceeded by 17 millions, the annual expenditure under the ancient regimen, in the calamitous year 1709.

But in order to avoid all suspicion of colouring too highly this picture, let us take the whole expence of the year 1794, and state it after the accounts of finance, given into the Convention, and from the report of Cambon. According to those accounts and reports, Livres.

The extraordinary war expence amounts to	2,000,000,000
The ordinary expence fixed by a decree of the convention, at forty one millions per month.	476,000,000
Sum total	2,676,000,000 and, of course, the expenditure of the year 1794 exceeds that of 1709, by the sum of 2,535,374,053 livres—So much for the frugality of republican government!

HAGUE, Feb. 6.

Yesterday evening the ci-devant Pensionary Vander-Spiegel, and the ci-devant Bailly, of the Hague, were put under guard as prisoners of state.

The Sieur Novicof, the Russian charge d'affairs of Baron Bilefeld, the charge d'affairs of Prussia, and Mr. Adams, the minister plenipotentiary of the American States, had each a separate conference with citizens P. Paulus, president of the representatives of the Dutch people.

Feb. 8.

The representatives of the Dutch people assembled yesterday afternoon, at half after two, and continued setting till nine at night, when they adjourned till one o'clock at midnight, and continued setting till eight this morning.

The president of the said assembly caused the assembly of their high mightinesses to be convoked in all haste during the night, who consequently held an extraordinary setting, which lasted till late this morning, when Mr. B. P. Van Leliveld, secretary of the said assembly was put under arrest.

PARIS, Jan. 26.

A letter from Basle, dated February 3, has the following article: "In this city and its environs we begin to experience a scarcity of provisions, and are apprehensive of a famine. Fortunately the news from Paris of this day announced the re-establishment of the peace as near and certain."

Another letter form Basle, dated Feb. 7, says, "The count de Goltz died here last night, and will be interred to morrow with all the honor due to his rank. The report that his excellency had reached Paris, was owing to one of his secretaries having been dispatched to that capital."

WESEL, Feb. 12.

We learn that the French commandant Duval, who is at Doesburgh with 8000 men, has pushed his patroles as far as Emmerick. The Austrians, who occupy Rees, likewise push theirs to the same town, and have taken several Frenchmen. Yesterday, and the day before, a strong cannonade was heard at Rees which seemed to proceed from the side of Yssel.

British Army.

OSNABURGH, Feb. 23.

The cantonments of our regiments are shifted. There is no talk of our quitting Osnaburgh for some time. Some doubts were entertained relative to lord Cathcart and his brigade, but I am happy to announce that he has crossed the Ems, and has taken a favorable position. His head quarters are at Vener; his flank properly secured by inundations.

Our out posts extend from Oldenzeil to Oetmersen, both in the Dutch province of Over Yssel.

The Hanoverians are on their march towards the county of Benthelm. Some of them pass through this place to day, in consequence of the movements in our army.

MAYENCE, Feb. 19.

The desertions from the enemy, daily continue, and according to the report of the deserters, the French army suffers prodigiously from the want of provisions, and by sickness. We are assured, that in several places there are heaps of dead bodies of 5 or 600, which cannot be interred, from the impossibility of opening the ground, the frost having penetrated to a great depth.

WHITEHALL, March 7.

His Majesty commands that all officers of every description belonging to the several regiments of cavalry and infantry on the establishment of the kingdom of Ireland, and that all militia officers of that kingdom do forthwith (notwithstanding the leave of absence they may have obtained) form their respective regiments.

NEW-YORK, April 31.

Extract of a letter from Dr. RUSH, of Philadelphia, to a gentleman in this city, dated March 23d, 1795.

"A disease called the pleurify, has proved fatal to many people in Philadelphia, as well as in several neighboring counties and states during the last winter, and the present month. It appears to be a continuation of the bilious remittent of last autumn, accompanied only with pleuretic symptoms, which symptoms are by no means universal. The stomach, bowels and head are frequently affected in this fever. It requires not only very copious bleeding, but daily purges with calomel, and julap, to subdue it. By means of these remedies, I have, out of upwards of an hundred cases, lost only two patients, and they were in the last stage of the disorder before I saw them. I have, in one case, been forced to take 120 ounces of blood at thirteen bleedings in eight days before the disease yielded; and in another, I have, in consultation with Dr. Physick taken 30 ounces of blood at four bleedings in seventeen hours—The pulse in the last case was so depressed as scarcely to be perceptible—It rose in the most sensible manner after each bleeding—The patient a delicate lady, is now out of danger. From the observations I have long made, and experience has lately fully confirmed, I am satisfied, that where physicians are not almost uniformly successful in curing febrile diseases, they are under the influence of erroneous theories, or if their theories be true, their practice is too feeble to overcome the disease."

Mr. Barham, in the British house of commons, on the subject of the slave trade, said, "He thought himself bound, at this early period, to give his negative to the motion—It revolved the interest of a great and respectable body of men, the West-India traders whose ruin he considered as inseparably connected with the continuance of the African slave trade.

Extract of a letter from a merchant in Cadiz, to his friend in Philadelphia, dated Feb. 23, 1795—by a ship arrived at New-York.

"Muley Soliman who is acknowledged as emperor by the northern provinces of Barbary, has lately fitted out two small xebeques, to cruize in the ocean. A respectable friend in Salee assures us they have orders to intercept American vessels, but they have not yet been able to get out of the Streights, on account of stormy weather. The Algerines do not venture to the northward, it is however to be hoped something will be done to check those pirates.

"Our friend at Salee informs us that Muley Soliman's object is to compel America to send him a consul who shall acknowledge him as the lawful sovereign, which several European powers have already done."

I have this day received a letter from Messrs. NEW-YORK, April 20.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at Cape François, to another in Baltimore, dated March 25.

"On Saturday evening, the 14th ultimo, within a few hours run of Fort Dauphin, we were boarded by a French privateer, who after examining our trunks for all the papers they could find, ordered the captain, myself and all the crew except the cook, on board the privateer; as it was too late that night to examine the cargo, they intended doing it the next morning; but unfortunately, about one or two o'clock the next morning, they fell in with a sail, with which they exchanged about 30 shots, when discovering that she was a sloop of war, then under Spanish colours, took possession of our schooner which was still in sight; after which we never expected to see her again. We could not prevail on the captain to land us that day, he was so much afraid of the frigate, but at night we fell in with a Spanish ship, prize to a French frigate bound to this place, on board of which we were put, otherwise we should have been landed at night on the east end of the island, at least 200 miles from the place where we were taken; where we should most certainly either have starved to death, or been taken up by the Spanish as deserters.

"The Wednesday following arrived here, where we found our schooner and sloop of war with whom we had the engagement which proved to be French. On arriving we were immediately ordered to goal, where we remained two days.

"There have been four American vessels brought in here this month and condemned; one for having a few barrels of tar on board, and another for having a small quantity of canvas on board, and bound to an English port. On what pretence the others were condemned, I do not know. One of them belonging to Mr. Richard Gittings, another to Mr. Messonnier, of Baltimore—one to New-York, and the other, I believe, to Philadelphia.

"Administration here takes our cargoes at their own price, and pay us in coffee, at 30 sous per pound, and even then keep us out of our pay 8 or 9 months.

"The charge which they have brought against us is, seven dozen of cutteau knives, which they call cutlasses; two barrels of porter for powder, &c. and being bound to a Spanish port.

"It is impossible for me to give you a full detail of the villany that it is carried on here; suffice it to say, that it is one of the most infernal holes on the face of the earth. Circumstance will not permit of my giving you a full account of the troubles we have had since we left Baltimore. I will write you again by a vessel that will sail from here in a few days for Baltimore.

"Since writing the above, there have been two American vessels brought in here. One belonging to Philadelphia, bound from Fort Dauphin to the Mole, the captain and crew put in goal—the other from Boston to St. Thomas's."

COMMOTIONS AT TOULON.

On the 26th, the representatives at Lyons write, that they had recorded in the commune the ... ws that a banditti had taken poſſeſſion of the arſenal at Toulon, and that inſtantly the citizens had manifeſted their indignation, and aſked permiſſion to march, if it was neceſſary, to ſuppreſs the revolt.

The next day Doulcet, in the name of the committe of public welfare, informed that convention, the new crime had been committed, that the terroriſts had made themſelves maſters of the arſenal at Toulon, and read a letter from Marſeilles, written by the repreſentative Jambon St. Andre, dated 1ſt Priarial.

'I have juſt,' ſaid he 'learnt the unfortunate events that happened at Toulon, and I haſten to inform you of them. Our worthy colleague, Brunel, has loſt his life after having ſeveral times braved the ſword of his aſſaſſins. Niou landed from the fleet to oppoſe the deſigns of the inſurgents, but in vain. They inſiſted on the liberation of the terroriſts, detained in the fort Lamelle.

'Brunel could not ſurvive the chagrin of having ſigned the order for their releaſe; and Niou, turning his attention to the naval force, went on board to haſten its departure. They were on the point of ſailing, but the brigands ſucceeded in detaining the fleet in the road. They reported, that ſome emigrants had gained admittance, repaired to Souliez, diſarmed the inhabitants, brought eleven of them to Toulon, and puſhing to the arſenal, got poſſeſſion of the poſts, which made no reſiſtance, and of eighty muſkets, with a number of piſtols.

'The rebels ſpread a report, that 400 emigrants had entered; ſoon after it was ſaid to be no more than 11, afterwards ſeven emigrants, whom they bro't along with them, and on whom they declared that they found papers on which were written, 'long live Louis XVII.' It deſerves to be remarked, that they comprehend under the deſcription of the emigrants, all thoſe who have eſcaped the proſcriptions, and who have been recalled by your decrees. The inſurgents took poſſeſſion of the gates of the town, and mounted them with cannon. They talk of marching againſt Marſeilles but I am taking meaſures to repel them. The national guard of this commune is organizing itſelf, and the public ſpirit is of the right kind.

'It is a grievous circumſtance to me to be obliged to tell you that our colleague Charbonier, has joined the inſurgents. He was employed in the arſenal, had a great influence over the workmen, and we are aſſured that he has made the worſt uſe of it. The number of the leaders of the revolt is ſmall. Already the workmen are murmuring; and we are going to get ready a force, and ſhall diſplay both celerity and vigor. The rebels have diſpatched emiſſaries to Ciola, to ſeduce the regiment which is there in garriſon. They want to deliver up the port to the Engliſh.

'Some travellers who have arrived by the diligence from Toulon, announce, that our colleague, Chiappe, is detained as a priſoner; that the fleet has been conducted into the road, that it is in the power of the rebels, and that they occupy the fort Lamelle.

'Another traveller, who followed, informed us, that the inſurgents have choſen, for commandant of the place, one of the priſoners, named Potat; that the garriſon has remained faithful, and the fleet alſo, excepting a few veſſels. We are going to aſſemble the neceſſary force, and ſhall neglect nothing to ſubdue the rebels, whoſe numbers do not exceed 8000. Our colleague, Gicerin, ſets out to night with a battalion.'

Doulcet read another letter, dated the 2d, by Chiappe, which confirmed the details confirmed in the preceding one.

'The firſt object which preſented itſelf to his eyes, on his arrival, was the bleeding body of his colleague, Brunell, who himſelf blew out his brains, but the ſpectacle ſerved only to fire his courage, and to give him cauſe to deplore the fate of a repreſentative of the people, who had determined either to periſh, or to cauſe the laws to be reſpected. He preſented himſelf to the gates of the town to get out of it; the inſurgents oppoſed his departure, he then drew his labre, and ſupported by ſome friends, forced his paſſage.'

The reading of this letter was ſcarcely finiſhed, when Merlin, of Donay, put another into the hands of Doulcet. It was from Jambon St. Andre, and dated Marſeilles, the 2d Priarial.

This repreſentative announced, that the armed force was aſſembled, in order to bring the inſurgents into ſubjection, that the ſquadron was at that moment in the great road; and that from different informations it appeared, that the families of Charbonnier and Eſcudier took a decided part in the rebellion.

The deputies Therion, Panis, Eſcudier, Laignelot, and Record, were ordered to be arreſted; and Priure of la Marne, Bourbotte, and Peyſſard, were ordered to be tried immediately by the military commiſſion.

On the 28th of May the convention ordered Robert Lindet, Jean Bon St. Andre, Vouland, Divid, Lubarron, Bernard of Xaintes Jagot Elie Lacoſte, and Laviconterie to be arreſted.

June 5.

The lateſt reports on the continent were that the Auſtrians, after croſſing the Rhine, had attacked the French near Mentz, and defeated them, having killed 1500 men, and taken as many priſoners, as well as a conſiderable train of artillery.

It is added to this account, that 25000 men were in full march to relieve Luxembourg, the ſiege of which place, in conſequence, it was hoped the French would be obliged immediately to raiſe.

It appears evident, that the emperor is not diſpoſed to make peace with France upon any other terms than thoſe which may be approved by the Britiſh Cabinet.

The lateſt accounts from Ratiſbon even ſtate, that all diſcuſſion reſpecting the negociations for peace with France is ſuſpended for the preſent, a declaration from the emperor to the empire at large upon that ſubject being very ſhortly expected.

The accounts from the interior of Holland, by the way of Hamburgh, come down ſo late as the 24th. A general diſpoſition prevails among the Dutch ſailors, not to ſerve on board the ſhips fitting out for the ſervice of France.

Since the 23d, the convention has been employed in puniſhing the ſuppoſed authors and agents of the conſpiracy, and diſarming all thoſe whom they conſider as ſuſpected, they have not only turned the tide of power but of odium againſt their opponents, ſo that their authority is more firmly eſtabliſhed than ever.

In conſequence of a declaration by Mr. Crawford, the Engliſh charges des affairs at Copenhagen, ſignifying that all Daniſh ſhips, laden with corn for France would be ſeized, and the lading and freightage paid for, the exportation of that article from the Daniſh States has been prohibited till the firſt of September next.

There was a report at Hamburgh, on the 27th ult. that the Auſtrians had paſſed the Rhine; that general Clairayt had defeated the French near Mentz, after a very ſevere engagement; and that the ſiege of Luxembourg had been raiſed. Of this report we have not received any confirmation. We are in poſſeſſion of intelligence from Frankfort, Mentz, and Manheim, which ſo far from making any mention of the Auſtrians having croſſed the Rhine, ſtates, that apprehenſions were entertained that the French would attempt the paſſage of that river. There was a ſkirmiſh near Mentz, on the 10th of May, between a detachment of the garriſon and an advanced guard of the French army. The garriſon carried a redoubt which the French had thrown up near Gouſenheim.

[From a London paper.]

HAGUE, JAN. 24.

Our garriſon has taken the oath, in preſence of the French general Moreau, not to ſerve againſt the French troops till a formal exchange of troops has taken place, or that other arrangements ſhould be made.

The form of prayer is changed: our prayers are no longer againſt the French nation; we only pray for thoſe who are ſet over us, for univerſal tranquillity, and a ſpeedy peace.

ROTTERDAM, JAN. 26.

THE new created ſenate of this town have iſſued two proclamations, at the requeſt of the French commanding general. In one of them it is ordered to give in, at the Town-houſe, within 24 hours an exact ſtatement of all the property belonging to the Engliſh nation; and to the other, a prohibition is made not to ſell to the French troops any wine, brandy, or other ſpirituous liquors.

FRANKFORT, FEB. 3.

THE French are aiming on the other ſide of the Rhine, to practiſe the ſame manœuvre as they ſo ſucceſsfully did on the Waal; their generals have orders, coſt what it will, to force the paſſage over the Rhine, and that for the ſame reaſon as on the Waal, viz. the want of proviſions. The farmers of thoſe diſtricts occupied by the French have already been forced to cover the parts of the river already frozen, with ſtraw.—Should a thaw happen, they would not be able to accompliſh their ends, but at preſent the ice binds hard.

MENTZ, May 19.

The tranquility we have enjoyed ſince the 30th ult. induced us to believe that a truce had taken place; but to-day we are convinced of the reverſe. At midnight, 150 Auſtrians ſupported by other troops from the garriſon, carried a redoubt occupied by the French near Gonſenheim, and which has given great uneaſineſs to the entrenched camp of Hardenburgh. This operation was executed with as much promptitude as bravery.

The French redoubt was entirely demoliſhed, after having diſlodged them, with the loſs of ſeveral killed and wounded, and ten or twelve taken priſoners. We have only 3 killed and 6 wounded. The camp eſtabliſhed by the French in the vicinity of Reinſelz a few weeks ſince, has lately received conſiderable reinforcements. A great quantity of cannon and ammunition has arrived there.

KING OF POLAND.

The meaſure of this unfortunate monarch's ſufferings appear at length complete; lately walking on the terrace before his palace, or rather priſon, at Grodno, whether the effect of accident or deſpondency, he fell from the terrace; the contuſions which he received in conſequence were violent, and have been productive of a dangerous fever, from which he is not expected to recover.

PHILADELPHIA, June 18.

Yeſterday was aſſigned for the execution of Nogel and Mitchel, the two perſons under ſentence for Treaſon, but a reſpite from the ſupreme executive of the United States has ſuſpended the ſentence till November next.

[FROM A QUEBEC PAPER.]

NEW-YORK, June 17.

A letter from Haddington, in Scotland, ſays, that a moſt melancholy and afflicting event has happened in that neighborhood. Major Kinloch, the brother of ſir Francois Kinloch, of Gilmerton, was obſerved for ſome time to be deranged in his ſenſes. His brother, ſir Francois, from affection, would not ſuffer the neceſſary meaſures of conſtraint to be uſed, but truſted that he ſhould be able to calm his phrenzy, and to reſtore him to his reaſon, or at leaſt to keep the domeſtic calamity from becoming the public topic. The Major was extremely violent; he went about the houſe and grounds armed with a blunderbuſs and piſtols, threatened every perſon with death who ſtopped his way.

On Tueſday ſe'nnight, at night, ſir Francois prevailed on him to retire to his apartment, but at three o'clock in the morning, after he thought all the family were in bed, he quitted his room, and came down ſtairs to ſally out of the houſe; he was met by ſir Francois, who endeavoring to perſuade him to return: the Major inſtantly drew his piſtol, and ſhot his brother, who fell, languiſhed till Thurſday afternoon, and then expired.

The miſerable maniac, (now ſir Gordon Kinloch, as he ſucceeds to the title and eſtate) is a priſoner in Haddington gaol, and will be tried for the offence.

Sir Francois ſucceeded his father, ſir David Kinloch, only two months ago: he was univerſally reſpected, and his violent death will be the ſubject of the moſt ſincere regret.

BOSTON, July 11.

SIR FREDERIC EDEN.

The following are ſtated as the leading particulars of ſir Frederic Eden's miſſion to France.

When ſir Frederic arrived in Breſt roads, there was ſome fault found with his flag, and the commander of the French fleet aſked him if it was done to inſult him? to this queſtion a very proper reply was returned by ſir Frederic, who ſtated, that it was impoſſible he could have any intentions to inſult, and that the error in the flag was imputable to the man by whom it was made. He was then directed to proceed to Dieppe where a French commiſſioner would be ſent to confer with him. To Dieppe, accordingly ſir Frederic proceeded, and upon his landing there, was received by a French commiſſioner, who invited him to a conference, at which the object of the miſſion was explained. The commiſſioner afterwards ſet off to Paris, inviting ſir Frederick to accompany him; an invitation which was refuſed by ſir Frederic, who had not received any directions to proceed thither. In due time the commiſſioner returned, and informed the Engliſh ambaſſador, that to an exchange of ſailors the French government could on no account conſent; but that he was ready to treat with him with reſpect to any other ſubject. To this ſir Frederic replied, that the French commiſſioner might have ſpared himſelf the trouble of coming from Paris, and might have conveyed the determination of the French government, by letter.—The French commiſſioner ſaid that he was directed to return to Dieppe, for the purpoſe of doing away the ſuſpicion that had been circulated that the French republic would not treat with a monarchy; and of declaring that the French would treat with any country, whatever was its form of government. At the ſame time, he aſſured ſir Frederic, that though the republic would not conſent to an exchange of ſailors, yet, that any officers ſhould be ſuffered to return to England, if ſir Frederick would make out a liſt of their names; and that the republic ſhould be contented with a promiſe from ſir Frederic, that an equal number of French officers ſhould be permitted to return to France.

Official intimation is ſaid to have been given to the committe for the relief of French emigrants, that no further aſſiſtance will be afforded to ſuch as are capable of bearing arms, and refuſe to enliſt in the corps now forming in Guernſey.

QUEBEC, July 23.

By the ſloop Quebec from Halifax, we learn that the Sandwich Packet arrived there on the 20th ult. in 20 days from Falmouth, and brings papers of the 6th June, by which it appears that great inſurrections had happened at Paris on the 20th and 21ſt of May, in which two members of the convention were aſſaſſinated. About the ſame time there were alſo inſurrections at Breſt and Toulon. Several men of war at Breſt, had been diſmantled and their ſtores ſent to Paris, the ſcarcity being ſo great in that capital. Part of the Toulon fleet, and one of the forts were in poſſeſſion of the Jacobin party.

On the eleventh inſtant arrived in this city on board the ſchooner Suſanna capt. Ruelle, four French loyaliſts, who emigrated from Guadaloupe in October laſt, when the Patriots retook the iſland. They are provided with the moſt honorable recommendations, yet ſuch is their ſituation, that the perſons who have viſited them moſt, think themſelves bound to repreſent them as objects of public commiſeration, and to invite every compaſſionate heart to come immediately to their relief, as they are in want both of money, clothes, and ſubſiſtance. It is therefore propoſed to keep a ſubſcription for them open from this day till the end of the week, at Mr. Pinguet's Notre Dame ſtreet No. 22, and Mr. Lefter's St. Peters ſtreet No. 7, for the Lower Town, and at Mr. Louis Germain's Fabrique ſtreet No. 5, and C. C. Hall & Co. Upper Town.

TO THE PUBLIC.

AT this time when the conduct and wisdom of the parliament of Great Britain, which extends its care to the most distant parts of its vast empire, has granted to us a constitution, whose advantages have not escaped the notice of the most eightened politicians and celebrated writers, and in which both the one and the other have proved to us the union of all kinds of true liberty, an union of which the British subjects have remained long the sole possessors; now that the system of government in this Colony, promises every encouragement in arts and literature, and that the free communication of ideas and sentiments is regarded as the true means to enable the subjects to discharge his duty honorably as a member of society, as well as to form the strickest union among the inhabitants.

The subscriber, late printer in Upper Canada, desirous of rendering his slender abilities useful to the public, gives notice that having purchased a Printing Office, he proposes at the request of several persons of respectability in Montreal, to settle there, with a design, as soon as he shall obtain a sufficient number of subscribers, to publish a periodical Paper, under the title of

The subscriber flatters himself, that, seconded by the favorable disposition of an enlightened public, he shall be able to put his design in execution, by rendering his Gazette as useful as amusing. And the better to answer these ends, he will always receive with pleasure productions of genius, as well as those which shall have the public good for their object, which may tend to the instruction of individuals, or to amuse the one or the other sex, without prejudice to virtue. This is the rule to which he proposes rigidly to adhere.

If this undertaking meets with that encouragement from the public he presumes to expect, the subscriber is resolved to spare neither pains nor expence to render his work as useful and interesting as possible: and as soon as he shall have a sufficient number of subscriptions, which will be received by Mr. Francois Saro, Montréal, Mr. Samuel Sills, Three Rivers, Mr. Louis Aime, Berthier, and at the printing office, Quebec; he will immediately remove to Montréal, with all the materials necessary for the impression, in order to execute the above conditions; and his principal care shall be at all times to prove to the public how much he is their

PARIS, May 21.

Pomme, one of the colonial deputies, has announced to the council of five hundred, that Colot d'Herbois, and Billaud Varennes, who were transported to Cyenne, began to tyranize over that colony, as they had done in France. Colot had caused himself to be proclaimed king. He had eftablished the fyftem of requifition, the maximum revolutionary committees and tribunals. He was alfo preparing to fet up a guillotine.—Pomme, then demanded, if the colonies ought to be thus infefted with thofe wretches whom France was compelled to drive from its territories?

A committee is to be formed for the purpofe of confidering what may in future be the manner and deftination to be fixed upon in cafes of tranfportation.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Sept. 7.

On the firft day of the preſent month of September about 3 o'clock afternoon, the ſky from being clear gradually became hazy, eſpecially between the ſun and the weſtern horizon; when a very bright halo of about fourteen degrees diameter was formed round the ſun, but neither in its ſize or brilliancy was any thing uncommon. On the E. N. E. verge of this halo, and apparently reſting upon it, appeared a reſplendint parphelia, or mock ſun of unuſual configuration: its whole length was rather beyond the limits of the halo, and on its upper part almoſt without curve: here, the colours of the rainbow were exceedingly vivid. Its extremities were of a fleecy whiteneſs, and much bent downwards: but to cloſe the ſingularity of the phenomenon an enormous circle of at leaſt ninety degrees diameter took in almoſt all the upper heaven, embracing the ſun in its verge, and interſecting the halo. It was perfectly white, and in no part exhibited the leaſt tint of the rainbow. When the ſky was blue, the ſhowy circle ſtill was ſeen, and indeed more diſtinctly, than while it was hazy. A ſmaller circle, colourleſs as the firſt, ſeemed at times to be forming within it, but was never compleated. On the two ſucceeding days a copious rain renewed the verdure which a ſevere drought had faded.

LONDON, May 20.

Yeſterday his majeſty went to the houſe of peers and made the following moſt gracious ſpeech.

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN,

THE public buſineſs being now concluded, I think proper to cloſe this ſeſſion, and, at the ſame time, to acquaint you with my intention of giving immediate directions for calling a new parliament.

The objects which have engaged your attention, during the preſent ſeſſion, have been of peculiar importance, and the meaſures which you have adopted have manifeſted your continued regard to the ſafety and welfare of my people.

The happieſt effects have been experienced from the proviſions which you have made for repreſſing ſedition and civil tumult, and for reſtraining the progreſs of principles ſubverſive of all eſtabliſhed government.

The difficulties ariſing to my ſubjects from the high price of corn, have formed a principal object of your deliberation; and your aſſiduity in inveſtigating that object, has ſtrongly proved your anxious deſire to omit nothing which could tend to the relief of my people in a matter of ſuch general concern.

I have the greateſt ſatisfaction in obſerving that the preſſure of thoſe difficulties is now in a great degree removed.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

I muſt in a more particular manner return you my thanks for the liberal ſupplies which you have granted to meet the exigences of the war. While I regret the extent of thoſe demands, which the preſent circumſtances neceſſarily occaſion, it is a great conſolation to me to obſerve the encreaſing reſources by which the country is enabled to ſupport them.

Theſe reſources are particularly manifeſted in the ſtate of the different branches of the revenue, in the continued and progreſſive extention of our navigation and commerce, in the ſteps which have been taken for maintaining and improving the public credit, and in the additional proviſion which has been made for the reduction of the national debt.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I ſhall ever reflect with heart-felt ſatisfaction on the uniform wiſdom, temper and firmneſs, which have appeared in all your proceedings ſince I firſt met you in this place. Called to deliberate on the public affairs of our country, in a period of domeſtic and foreign tranquility, you had the happineſs of contributing to raiſe this kingdom to a ſtate of unexampled proſperity.

You were compelled to relinquiſh the full advantages of this ſituation, in order to repel the unprovoked aggreſſion of an enemy, whoſe hoſtility was directed againſt all civil ſociety, but more particularly againſt the union of order and liberty, as eſtabliſhed in theſe kingdoms.

The nature of the ſyſtem introduced into France, forced to that country, in the midſt of its calamities, the means of exertion beyond experience of any former time. Under the preſſure of the new and unprecedented difficulties ariſing from ſuch a conteſt, you have ſhewn yourſelves worthy of all the bleſſings you inherit. By your conſels and conduct, the conſtitution has been preſerved inviolate againſt foreign and domeſtic enemies; the honor of the Britiſh name has been aſſerted; the rank and ſtation which we have hitherto held in Europe, has been maintained; & the decided ſuperiority of our naval power has been eſtabliſhed in every quarter of the world.

You have omitted no opportunity to prove your ſincere anxiety for the re-eſtabliſhment of general peace on juſt and honorable terms; and the ſame time, rendered it manifeſt to the world, that while our enemies ſhall perſiſt in demands incompatible with that object, neither the reſources of my kingdom, nor the ſpirit of my people, will be wanting to the ſupport of a juſt cauſe, and to the defence of their deareſt intereſts.

A due ſenſe of this conduct is deeply impreſſed on my heart. I truſt that all my ſubjects are animated with the ſame ſentiments; and that their loyalty and public ſpirit will enſure the continuance of that union and mutual confidence between me and my parliament, which beſt promote the true dignity and glory of my crown, and the genuine happineſs of my people.

[His majeſty was then pleaſed to diſſolve the preſent parliament.]

NIAGARA, October 5, 1796.

HIS majeſty's ſhip Active, which carried out his excellency Lord Dorcheſter, was caſt away in a ſevere ſtorm in Auguſt laſt. We have not obtained particulars farther than that his Lordſhip was taken from the wreck by an American veſſel and carried into Halifax.

In the late treaty held at Niagara garriſon, the Americans have purchaſed of the Indians owning the land weſt of the Genneſee, the privilege of cutting, ſtraightening and improving their path from Conawagaſh to this garriſon, into a good waggon road of eight rods four breadth. The work was to commence this week at Conawagaſh, and on the arrival of general Wayne, who is daily expected from Detroit with about 250 men, a detachment will be employed to meet them, and when the road ſhall have been compleated, which will be in a few weeks, a regular poſt is to be maintained communicating with every part of the United States.

At the opening of the preſent ſeſſion of the circuit court in this town, the Muſſaſoga tribe of Indians made complaint of the murder of their late head chief, by one of the rangers at York. One Mr. M'Ewen is brought to town charged with the crime.

Foreign accounts are to the laſt of May. Under Paris of the 21ſt of that month is a long and pompous addreſs of Buonaparte, the French commander in chief of their army in Italy to his ſoldiers, dated Cheſaro, April 26; in which he ſays, "You have in a fortnight gained ſix victories, taken 21 ſtand of colors 71 pieces of cannon, ſeveral ſtrong places, conquered the richeſt part Piedmont; made 15,000 priſoners, and killed or wounded more than 20,000 men." How much the holy French zeal carries the account beyond truth we cannot ſay, having yet ſeen no other ſtatement. That they have been fortunate in ſome degree is ſlightly acknowledged in ſeveral London paragraphs, and one of them goes ſo far as to ſay that the Auſtrian general, Argenteau, ſecond in command, was a priſoner at Mantua, on charge of miſconduct during the campaign in Italy. The 24th of May, peace was ſtrongly talked of in London, and the return of Mr. Netman from Paris unanimouſly expected.

Since preparing the above for the preſs an obliging friend has favored us with papers, by which Paris now is continued to July 6. London paragraphs of a late ſtil do not ſpeak diſmal things.

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS his most gracious majesty has been pleased to grant his royal leave and licence to his excellency major general SIMCOE, lieutenant governor and commander in chief of this province, and to appoint me to administer the government of the said province, that all his majesty's officers within the same should continue in their several offices and employments, I have thought fit by and with the advice of his majesty's council, to issue this proclamation, authorizing the said officers to continue in their said offices and employments, of which all persons concerned are required to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

GIVEN under my hand and seal at arms, at Niagara, this fourth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-six, and of his majesty's reign, the thirty-sixth.

By his honor's command,
WM. JARVIS, sec.

PROCLAMATION.

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

JOHN GRAVES SIMCOE, Esquire, LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, and Major General of his Majesty's Forces, and to forth.

To such as are desirous to settle on the lands of the Crown in the province of Upper-Canada.

WHEREAS by a proclamation bearing date at Quebec, the seventh day of February, 1792, the terms and conditions on which persons should be settled, who were desirous of settling on the lands of the crown in his majesty's province of Upper-Canada, were promulgated and made known; and it was, by the eighth article in particular declared, that the respective patentees were to take the estates granted to them severally, free of quit rent, and of any other expences, than such fees as are or may be allowed to be demanded and received, by the different officers concerned in passing the patent, and recording the same, to be stated in a table authorised and established by the government, and publicly fixed up in the several offices of the clerk of the council, of the surveyor general and of the secretary of the province.

And whereas it appears to be no longer expedient or necessary that any grant or survey of lands should be hereafter run out or marked by his majesty's surveyor or deputy surveyor, at the expence of the crown.—Now know ye, that I have thought fit by and with the advice of the executive council, to revise so much of the eighth article of the said proclamation as declares that, "the respective patentees are to take the estates granted to them severally free of quit rent, and any other expences than such fees as are or may be allowed to be demanded and received by the different officers concerned in passing the patent, and recording the same," and to declare that in addition to the fees established by government on all grants of land, the respective petitioners will, in future, on the receipt of their patents be charged with the expences of survey in proportion to the extent of their patents, which will be fixed by and added to the table of fees, as is so horised and established by the government, and publicly fixed up in the several offices of the clerk of the council, of the surveyor general and of the secretary of the province.

GIVEN under my hand and seal in the town of YORK, the fifth day of July, in the thirty-sixth year of his majesty's reign, and in the year of our Lord, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-six.

By Mr. Quinn, on seeing the body of duke Humphrey in the Abbey church of St. Alban's:

A PLAGUE on Egypt's art, I cry!
Embalm the dead!—On flesh to prey
Rich wines and spices waste!
Like sturgeon, or like brawn, pull'd,
Bound in a precious pickle, lie,
Which I can never taste!

Let me embalm this clay of mine
With turtle soup and bourdeaux wine,
And full in the Epicure's style,
Thro' good old Humphrey happier I,
Embalm'd alive, all Gotham shall die

UNITED STATES.

PROVIDENCE, August 27.

By a gentleman of undoubted veracity from Cape Nichola Mole, we are informed that 117 British officers died there from the 2d to the 17th ult. and that the mortality among the troops had been proportionably great.

A letter from a British officer of dragoons at the Mole, mentions, that of the regiment to which he belongs, only three officers beside himself survive.

NEW-YORK, Sept. 1.

THE rapidity of the conquests, or rather marches of the French armies in Italy, exceed all calculation. On the 25th of June, Buonaparte was at Bologna in the ecclesiastical territory, only 200 miles from Rome. Another division of French troops had passed into Tyrol, and advanced as far as Botzen, within 60 miles of Inspruck, 120 of Munich, and 320 of Vienna.—Moreau's division had crossed the A[illegible] at Strasburg, and advanced to Brisac, and immediately marched by the line of Constance to join the division that had passed through the Tyrol in Bavaria or Austria proper.—Whether this is the intention of Moreau or not, a short time will decide.

The French moreover must have unbounded confidence in themselves and hold the Austrians and Italians in extreme contempt to risk such hazardous enterprizes. Terms alone in the Austrians can enforce the safety of the French army, at such a distance in the enemy's country. The appointment of Wurmser to the command of the Austrian forces, opposed the French in Tyrol, is a proof that vigorous efforts will be made by the emperor to save his hereditary dominions from conquest. One defeat will expose that division of the French to ruin, and nothing but miracles can save them.

The county of Tyrol is mountainous, and impassible except along the river Adige, and a check in some narrow pass may lead to a defeat of that division, and a defeat of one division can hardly fail to expose the whole army of Italy to ruin. It would grieve the torpid and terrified Austrians, dispel their fears, inspire them with courage, were this alone done but the work necessary to expel the French from their territories. The moment disasters befal the French, destruction awaits them in all the countries they have conquered, and opposition will [illegible] in proportion as the French are unable to resist it. The [illegible] have not arms may aid in cutting off supplies of provisions.

Whether French generals have calculated sufficiently all their hazards, time alone can discover. The French are brave, but bravery is not exclusively theirs. The Austrians in some of the late actions, have never been exceeded in courage, and the native German pride, slow to be excited, may ultimately effect a resistance little expected and fatal to the invaders of their country.

PARIS (UNOFFICIAL). JULY 12.

Captain Carter arrived at Boston the 28th ult. [illegible] days passage. [illegible] there was no appearance of the Spaniards making preparations for breaking [illegible] with the English. It was however the general opinion among the [illegible] that they should have war with Spain [illegible] in time.

Admiral Richard [illegible] at Cadiz, where admiral Nelson who was at Leghorn [illegible], formed determined to [illegible] him.

A [illegible] arrived there the day before Capt. Carter [illegible], from England with [illegible] brought [illegible] specie.

LONDON, June [illegible]

[illegible] this morning received [illegible] to the 2d inst. inclusive. From [illegible] letters it appears that the [illegible] Charles [illegible] the right bank of the [illegible] Rhine, and that the [illegible] a French gallery will not give a faithful account of the disasters experienced by his own army; but still there is sufficient in the letter of Jourdan to warrant a conclusion that the defeat which he sustained has been of some magnitude. This indeed is evident from the avowed consequence of the action; Jourdan having been reduced to the necessity of re-crossing the Rhine with precipitation, and Kleber, who had rapidly advanced to the banks of the Vahe, having been compelled to fall back to the Seig.

It should not escape our readers notice, that in a former campaign the Sieg and the Lahn were the places that the republican army met with a severe check.

The retreat of general Wurmser, and the arch-duke, from Hundfruck, it now appears, were skilful manœuvres to enable them to attack the French, on the right bank of the Rhine, with more advantage.

BRISTOL, June 27.

From our London correspondent. Saturday night, June 25, 1796.

"Private advices received this evening represent the Austrian victory and retreat of the French as being the route of the lots of 8000 men to general Jourdan, and the Austrians were every hour expected to re-cross the Rhine and the Sieg, in the pursuit of the republicans.

PARIS, July 1.

The secret committee, formed yesterday by the council of five hundred, has not yet furnished any result. It was resumed and continued to-day. A [illegible] from the Directory was read, declaring, that the anarchists agitated Paris anew; that they had reformed their criminal hopes; that a part of their confidency of Babeuf had already been executed in the [illegible] that women, of notorious dissipated behaviour, had rushed into the market, had there addressed the [illegible] at their pleasure, and had carried them away, pillaged, or, at least, paying with assignats and mandates, to which they gave what value they pleased; but these disorders were the more alarming, that the factious cloaked themselves with the pretext of certain [illegible] to [illegible] certain financial laws which [illegible] on the council, and the execution of which, terror, the erection of scaffolds, and the adoption of all the revolutionary measures could not produce.

The [illegible] was begun last upon the disorders which had taken place in Paris, that upon that which was the cause, that is to say, the law which stimulates the immoderate love of money.

Caminade [illegible] spoke with much force and talent upon the necessity of [illegible] abandoning systems, the insanity of which was acknowledged, which ruined individuals, under pretence of enriching the state, and which, in fact, only enabled some knaves. He remained them that confidence could no be commanded; that it was to be obtained only by a series of measures well combined, and by conduct and plans proper to re assure men of property, so long sacrificed to the enemies of all order and prosperity; that it was the business of government to remove all suspicions, to merit the confidence of the nation, and to shew a loyalty which should serve as an example to all citizens. He declared as his opinion that the surest means to produce a better state of things was to carry on a severe economy into all parts of the administration; to exercise a rigorous police by an union of vigour and moderation; to put knowledge and probity in the place of ignorance and plunder; to give an entire liberty to private bargains and to commerce; and to put the receipts and expenditure upon a footing the least subject to the abuses and excesses of the last ages.

Caminade's colleagues upon these ideas in a manner which made a strong impression upon the council, and added to the idea which had been long entertained of his excellent disposition and his knowledge. He was followed in the tribune by several other orators, who spoke to the same effect, and insisted on the necessity of repealing those laws which good men could not approve, and which only favoured knaves, by enabling them to pay large debts with little money, and to turn the national fortune to their own profit.

All seemed to be satisfied of the utility of a course of enchanter for the mandats, without, however, entirely repealing the laws of the 28 Ventose, upon the fate of national possessions. Camus was almost the only one who seemed to think, that if the government was obliged to make its payments in coin, the mandat would be still more discredited by the large emissions, and that the public treasury would not be able to defray all the expences.—The discussion will continue this day, and still in secret committee.

The alarms expressed yesterday by the directory, in its message upon the state of Paris, were but too well founded. A general pillage had been organized by the terrorists, who hope that the indigent would suffer themselves to be roused by this lure. The fermentation was great; the grouppes were headed by Jacobin blood hounds and revolutionary figures. They were every where in the field, running through the streets seeking to bring over the military to them, by exaggerating their hardships; attributing the dilapidation of the mandats to the directory; assuring the people, that if Babeuf and Drouet had triumphed, they would have been on a par with money; boasting of the reign of Robespierre, and declaring, that they would not be happy till there were neither rich men nor merchants, nor directory, and the patriots (a la Babeuf) should rule every where. In the evening they were obliged to confine themselves to conversations and unavailing protestations, because measures had not been taken. But in the mornings, they had nearly pillaged the markets, and thus expelled Paris to watch, frightening and robbing the country people who were bringing in provisions.

To-day, thanks to the police, calm is re established; and the Jacobins have no had the same success as yesterday, although they have endeavoured to renew the commotions. Some of the infurgents have been arrested, and there have been found among them some of the old valets of the faction of Robespierre and of the committees of Robespierre.—These movements tend to prove to the directory how perilous are those feints which seek to lull them after opposite pretences. Every day proves to them, that there is no safety in Paris, either for them or their property, until the rational rage shall be repressed, and put upon a respectable footing.

NIAGARA, October 12, 1796.

Captain Barney, an American, has been appointed to the command of a French squadron of 8 frigates and 3 corvettes; and titled from Rochelle the 18th June; destination unknown.

A letter was received by a gentleman in this town last Saturday, of a late date from the states, which says, that captain Barney had been recently captured off the Chesapeck.

We hear that a man fell last Monday from the frame of a building at Queenston, which occasioned his instant death.

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS his most gracious majesty has seen fit to grant his royal leave of absence to his excellency major general SIMCOE, lieutenant governor, and commander in chief of this province, and to appoint me to administer the government of the said province: that all his majesty's officers within the same should continue in their several offices and employments, I have thought fit by and with the advice of his majesty's council, to issue this proclamation, authorizing the said officers to continue in their said offices and employments, of which all persons concerned are required to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

Given under my hand and seal at arms, at Niagara, this eleventh day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-six, and of his majesty's reign, the thirty-sixth.

By his honor's command,

PROCLAMATION.

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

JOHN GRAVES SIMCOE, Esquire, LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, and Major General of his Majesty's Forces, and so forth.

To such as are desirous to settle on the lands of the Crown in the province of Upper-Canada.

WHEREAS by a proclamation bearing date at Quebec, the seventh day of February, 1792. the terms and conditions on which persons would be settled who were desirous of settling on the lands of the crown in his majesty's province of Upper-Canada, were promulgated and made known; and it was, by the eighth article in particular, declared, that the reserves therein set apart were to be the estate granted to them forever, free of quit rent, and of any other expences, than such fees as are or may be allowed to be demanded and received, by the different officers concerned in passing the patent, and recording the same, to be stated in a table authorized and established by the government, and publicly fixed up in the several offices of the clerk of the council, of the surveyor general and of the secretary of the province.

And whereas it appears to be no longer expedient or necessary that any grant or survey of lands should be therefter run out or marked by his majesty's surveyor or deputy surveyor, at the expence of the crown.—Now know ye, that I have thought fit by and with the advice of the executive council, to revoke so much of the eighth article of the said proclamation as declares that, "the reserves the patentees are to take the estate granted to them severally free of quit rent, and such other expences than such fees as are or may be allowed to be demanded, and received by the different officers concerned, in passing the patent, and recording the same," and to declare that in addition to the fees established by government on all grants of land, the respective petitioners will be required, on the receipt of their patents be charged with the expences of survey in proportion to the ext nt of their patents, which will be stated in and added to the table of fees, as is no hereby and established by the government, and publicly fixed up in the several offices of the clerk of the council, of the surveyor general and of the secretary of the province.

Given under my hand and seal in the town of York, this 1st day of July, in the thirty sixth year of his majesty's reign, and in the year of our Lord, one thousand seven hundred and ninety six.

LONDON, July 15.

Conditions of the Suspension of arms between the French republic and the Pope.

1. Willing to give proof of that respect which the French Government entertain for his majesty the king of Spain, the commander in chief and the civil commissioners of the army of Italy, grant a suspension of arms to his holiness's counting from this day till five days after the close of the negociation, which shall be opened at Paris, for the conclusion of a definitive peace between the two states.—

2. The pope shall send with all possible expedition to Paris a plenipotentiary, in order to obtain from the executive directory a definitive peace, by offering the necessary reparations for the outrages and insults which the French endured in his states, and particularly for the murder of Basseville, and the recompence due to his family.

3. The individuals detained in the territories of the pope, for their political opinions, shall be immediately set at liberty, and re-enter into the possession of their effects.

4. The ports belonging to the pope's states shall be shut to all vessels belonging to the powers at war with the French republic, and open to French ships.

5. The French army shall remain in possession of the Legations of Bologne and Ferrara and shall occupy that of Ancona.

6. The citadel of Ancona shall in six days be put into the possession of the French troops, with its artillery, stores, and provisions.

7. The city of Ancona shall continue under the civil government of the pope.

8. The pope shall yield to the French republic a hundred pictures, busts, vases, and statues, of the choice of commissioners to be sent to Rome, amongst which are specifically comprised the busts in bronze, of Junius Brutus, and that in marble of Marcus Brutus, both placed in the capitol. The pope shall also deliver up five hundred manuscripts, at the choice of the said commissioners.

9. The pope shall pay to the French republic twenty-one millions of French money; of which fifteen millions five hundred thousand livres shall be in specie or ingots, the remaining five millions five hundred thousand livres in goods, merchandizes, Rotfels, &c.

13. The French troops shall have a free passage through all the territories of the pope.

VIENNA, May 16.

The imperial proclamation relative to the new requisitions in Poland has been published at Vienna on the 11th inst. and runs as follows:

Whereas circumstances have led to a total dismemberment of the kingdom of Poland, and whereas we have in consequence given orders to take formally possession of the districts fallen to our share by virtue of the treaties of partition concluded with the imperial court of Russia, and the royal courts of Prussia. We have therefore appointed the baron de M. gelich our commissioner plenipotentiary and charged him to take the preparatory steps for the organization of all the branches of the administration of those provinces which are incorporated with our monarchy, as part of our kingdoms of Gallicia and Lodomiria, and this, in our opinion, will tend to the advantage of the subjects.

We now ordain to all the subjects and inhabitants of this new acquisition, whatever their rank and occupation may be, to the clergymen, as well as to laymen, to the magistrates of cities, in short to every one without exception, and to recognize the appointed commissary plenipotentiary in that quality and to execute punctually whatever he shall ordain in our name. The time for administering the solemn oath of allegiance will afterwards be fixed; nevertheless, all the inhabitants under our sovereignty and protection are bound to obey and behave as if they had already sworn the oath of fidelity and submission, and therefore the Polish coat of arms ought every where to be taken down, and that of our imperial and royal majesty's substituted. No tribunal ought in future to administer justice, or pronounce judgement under any than our sovereign name. And lastly we ordain also that the public prayers in the churches be made for us and our illustrious house of Austria.—By executing all this faithfully, the inhabitants will render themselves worthy, and partakers of our royal favor, as on the contrary those who against our expectations should oppose the said regulations or any other arrangement, that may in procels of time be taken, must accuse themselves if we should find ourselves obliged against our will to employ rigorous measures, and the severity of justice instead of the lenity with which we are used and inclined to treat all our subjects.

FRANCISCUS, II.

PARIS, June 3.

An official account was published at Petersburgh on the 15th ult. of the capture of the important fortress of Derbenna, upon the Caspian Sea, by the Russian general Subow, on the 10th of May, after a bombardment of ten days. Upwards of 12,000 privates were made prisoners, with the Kahn that commanded them, and several other officers of distinction. Immense magazines, and a great quantity of artillery, were found in the place.

NIAGARA, October 19, 1796.

The foreign paragraphs before us are extremely long; we therefore present our readers a part of them in

ABSTRACT.

The French have imposed on the city of Frankfort, a contribution of 37 millions of livres (about 3 1-2 millions sterling) and that they have also demanded of the Genoese, a sum of like, to shut their ports against all English vessels. The court of Lisbon has laid an embargo on the Dutch ships, and forbid all intercourse with Holland: To this court the Spanish minister has signified the intention of his master of prevailing 70,000 French to pass through his dominions into Portugal, unless the latter immediately shut their ports against the English.

By later and more particular accounts than our last, we find that but one frigate of capt. Barney's squadron was captured. From the different paragraphs, we conclude that an engagement was prudently avoided on account of equality in force.

We are directed to correct an error in our account of the treaty lately held at Niagara garrison; by assuring the public that the Indians did not sell, but freely gave the privilege of the road from Canawaugah.

Upper Canada Gazette; or, American Oracle.

NIAGARA; Printed by G. TIFFANY. ------Wednesday, OCTOBER 26, 1796.

TO the patrons of the GAZETTE.

WITH this paper commences the third volume of the Gazette. The printer remembers with gratitude the support afforded by many of his friends and patrons, at all times, and more particularly for contentment under disappointments in the regular publication always occasioned by his ill state of health. He hopes, as he frequently has done, that a short time more will confirm his health, by forming his constitution to the climate.

To steadily pursue the publication is his aim, notwithstanding, the infancy of the country lays him under many embarrassments, and yields but a bare support to it. On the encreasing population and wealth of the province, and the advancement of useful learning, among its inhabitants, he builds his expectations of reward for many present and past services: only to advance with these and by merit, is all he can pretend to.

The total of his numbers complete but one year, or 52 papers; and it is by the numbers, and not the time, that news papers are computed:—this explanation may serve to ease the minds of those who have conceived it otherwise.

To those who have made payment he is much indebted for the favor, and hopes the gentlemen who are deficient in that respect, will soon lay him under the same obligation.

[FROM THE FARMER'S MUSEUM.]

"There is a LION in the streets."

TRUST me, my readers, that there will be Lions in your houses too, if you listen too credulously to indolence and fear.

Enterprize and action are the sinews of success in business, and greatness in character. The value of a man is not to be estimated by the possession of talents, but by their use. He, who can speak, or write, or labor and is neither an orator, nor an author, nor a bulbirdman, I pity from my soul; and regret, that though he has courage, yet is afraid of the Lion.

Sloth is one of the most timid personages I know; she haunts the pillow, and the invites to the tavern. A young student wakes at five—The morning is frosty, but though duty commands to rise, Sloth whispers "there is a Lion in the streets."

Many sots of my acquaintance would be more sober than my deacon, were they not driven to drams by harsh creditors & scolding wives. Creditors that insist upon present pay, & wives of clamorous tongues, are undoubtedly ugly and growing Lions.

Spleen, or as she is generally called, Hypo, is a lady of most delicate nerves, and trembles at the very name of Lions—Like feeble old women who are afraid that they may be shot, by a gun not loaded, Spleen, ill assured that there was no Lion existing, but in the deserts of Africa—would be positive she heard one growl in the streets.

I know a melancholy man, who turns pale, if only a flock of harmless sheep bleat as they pass his door: his terrified fancy changes them into Lions. He inherits from healthy ancestors a robust constitution, eats roast beef with a relish, and entices his daily decanter; but apprehensions of the gout appoplexy constantly haunt him in the shape of Lions.

Many honest people, who are unreasonably averse to wild beasts, are afraid that the world the inhabit will not continue a week. About a hundred years ago, those, who are "full of notions," declared that the globe would be burnt, by an incendiary comet. They even felt themselves scorched by its tail; and many a white handkerchief was soiled, by wiping sweat from anxious brows, but the globe still rolls merrily round, neither roasted nor broiled by a comet's fire; and we may laughingly declare that the comet gazers saw a Lion in the sky, as well as in the streets.

In the middle of July, tired of composing my sermons, I walked into the meadows, and sent the mower anxiously for shade. I saw a mower with a wooden bottle at his mouth, and but little hay made at his side; his utensils by the hung dangling from the limb of an elm.—He could not mow, for his arms were relaxed by rum, and he saw a Lion in the grass.

I am, or think myself an invalid & have a whim, the offspring of indolence, that some zealous are more favorable in compositions than others. I have taken it into my head that this week was to closely to write, with clearness, and meant, like some ordained parsons, to vamp an old sermon. But I left it unfinished, with her red pencil, at my cheek and became persuaded that there was no Lion in the streets, which led to the office of my printer. I applied gaily to my task; & endeavoured to convince my readers that they may work in any street, without injury from the Lion.

THE LAY PREACHER.

Subjects for the consideration of Ladies.

DELICACY.

DELICACY is a soft name, and fine ladies, who have proper contempt for the vulgar, are very willing to be thought endowed with sense more refined and exquisite than nature ever meant to give them: their nerves are susceptible in the extreme, and they are of constitutions so irritable, that the very face of Heaven must not be allowed to visit their face too roughly. I have studied this female favorite with some attention, and I am not yet able to discover any one of its good qualities; I do not perceive the merit of such exquisite fibres, nor have observed that the slenderest strings are apt to produce the sweetest sounds when applied to instruments of harmony; I presume the female heart would be such an harmonious instrument, when touched by the parent, the friend, the husband; but how can these expect a concert of sweet sounds to be exerted from a thing which is liable to be jarred, and put out of tune by every breath of air! It may be kept in its case, like an old fashioned virginal, which nobody knows or even wishes to know how to touch. It can never be brought to bear its part in a family concert, but must hang by. The wall, or at best to be a solo instrument for the remainder of its days.

BASHFULNESS.

Bashfulness when it is attached to modesty, will be regarded with the eye of candor, and cheered with the smile of encouragement: but bashfulness is a bitter, and sometimes different in the livery of pride, often times in the cast trappings of ostentation: pedantry is very apt to bring it into company, and fly letter, conscientiousness will frequently blush, because it understands.—I do not say I have much to say to its charge, for it is not apt to be troublesome in public societies, nor do I commonly meet it even in the youngest of the female sex.—There is a great deal of blushing I confess in all the circles of fine ladies, but then it is to universal a blush, and withall to permanent, that I am far from imputing it always to bashfulness when the cheeks of the fair are tinged with roses. However, though it is sometimes an imposition, and for that reason may deserve to be disunited, I cannot help having a considerable portion for one that has in past times been the hand maid to beauty; and therefore as merit has taken modesty into her service, I would recommend ignorance to put bashfulness into simplicity and employment.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 14.

The accounts from Lisbon by the Independent, wear a very gloomy aspect; an universal consternation pervaded the court and the people of all ranks, in consequence of the hostile threats of the French and certain notifications from the court of Madrid upon the political connections subsisting between the courts of Lisbon and St. James's.

It was understood at Lisbon, that the Spanish minister had officially signified the intention of his catholic majesty to permit a French army of 70, 00 men to march thro' his dominions into Portugal, unless the latter court without delay shut all her ports against, and forbid the future entry of british vessels.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 22.

By captain Gould, who left Norfolk on Sunday, and arrived here on Saturday evening, we are informed that one of the officers of admiral Murray's fleet had come up there, and informed that their squadron descried 2 frigates, which from not observing the signals that were thrown out, they concluded to be French—that a chase was immediately commenced, when in a little time they came within short gun shot of one, which they took to be the leader, and received her with a broadside, and that another shortly and a frigate went in purſuit of the others; but as it was in the evening, and the night came on very dark, it was thought they would be unable to overhaul them.

The ſituation of the captured ſhip was truly unfortunate, and will remain a reflection on the navy of that nation—She had upwards of 600 men on board, 150 of whom were ſick, 200 drunk and the remainder had mutinied—and when the foremoſt of the Britiſh ſhips came up, the captain begged them to take immediate poſſeſſion, as his life was in the moſt imminent danger.

(The following are tranſlations from French papers; as ſuch we give them without reſponſibility for their truth.)

PARIS, July 10.

Extract of a letter from the commiſſioners of government with the army of Italy.

MILAN, June 23.

"You will learn by the protocol verbal, that we ſhall ſpeedily addreſs to you the objects that we have collected. You will find there the chef d'œuvre of the greateſt maſters of all the ſchools of Italy, and chief of the ſchools of Lombardy. The following are the principal pictures:

"The virgin and St. Jerome by Correggio; the Madonna della Scodella: St. Cecillia by Raphael;—The Martyrdom of St. Agnes, Dominician; the circumciſion by Guercin;—The crowning with thorns, by Titian; St. Sebaſtian by Procaccini.

The objects the moſt important for the ſcience are a great number of books of editions anterior to 1473. The books, the liſt of which is given by the national library. The manuſcripts of Leonardo da Vinci. A manuſcript on Papyrus. The Herbal of Haller, in forty volumes. Three works of the ſame author with corrections and additions by himſelf. And the collection of volcanic ſubſtances by Spalanzini."

July 24.

Extract of a letter from Wilhemſtad, July 15.

Since the French took Frankfort, at leaſt 800 families of the Main, the Rhine and the Neckar, have arrived here and at Hanau, with great numbers of waggons laden with baggage. Terror ſeized every ſoul, and all fled with what they could carry away. The Auſtrian and French troops who are now on this ſmall territory, amount to 200,000 men.

Our buildings are inſufficient to contain the people who flock hither. Many are encamped in the woods and neighboring forests.

All the imperial troops, from the Upper and Lower Rhine, are united between Manheim and Heidleberg, where are their head quarters.

The Saxon troops form the advance guard by which means they ſuffer more than the Auſtrians.

The entrenchments raiſed about Manheim are very formidable—they extend 3 leagues into the environs; 300 men work night and day—they are compoſed by canes and fabres—3000 trees have been leveled in the foreſt of Odenwals.

The number of priſoners taken by general Kleber, at Kaſtheim, when the Auſtrians paſſed the Mein, is very conſiderable.

LONDON, July 15.

The intelligence from Italy is moſt important. The French have completed their conqueſts in Lombardy, by the reduction of the citidal of Mantua. They have, however, been obliged to convert the ſiege of Mantua into a blockade, after ſeveral attempts, particularly on the 5th, 7th, and 8th of June, to take it by ſtorm. In theſe attacks it is alloyed, in the French papers the aſſailers, that they loſt a number of men.

From the London Gazette.

DOWNING-STREET, JULY 23.

THE letters, of which the following are copies, have been received from the honorable William Frederick Wyndham, his majeſty's envoy extraordinary and miniſter plenipotentiary to the grand duke of Tuſcany, by the right honorable lord Grenville his majeſty's principal ſecretary of ſtate for the department of foreign affairs.

Florence, June 22.

"MY LORD,

I have the honor to inform your lordſhip, that on the 18th inſtant the French entered Bologna, to the number of about 15,000 men, having previouſly ſent before them a commiſſary and a troop of cavalry, to demand entrance into the city, with a promiſe of treating it in a friendly manner. In conſequence, being maſters of the town and fortreſs, they made the garriſon priſoners of war, and ſent them under eſcort into the Milaneſe.—The pope's leg tie they immediately ordered to quit the Bologneſe.

On receiving this information I immediately waited on the prime miniſter, Seratti, and the marquis Manfredial, to know whether his royal highneſs had my intelligence of an intent of the French to march into Tuſcany, or to garriſon Leghorn; and I had the moſt poſitive aſſurances from both, that the French had no idea at preſent of entering Leghorn.

I own, my lord, that I do not place much confidence in their promiſes of not coming to Leghorn; I have therefore thought proper to write to the admiral my ſentiments to that effect, requeſting him to ſerve four veſſels at Leghorn, to carry off the merchants and Britiſh ſubjects, with their effects in caſe of a ſudden invaſion. I had likewiſe deſired the conſul to convene the Britiſh factory, and to tell them not to rely too much on French faith.

I have the honor &c.

W. F. WYNDHAM.

Florence, June 25.

MY LORD,

I have the honor to inform your lordſhip, that the ſituation of affairs in this country is materially changed: the neutrality of the grand duke, which, from every promiſe on the part of the directory at Paris and their miniſter here, we had reaſon to expect would be religiouſly reſpected, has been openly violated by the march of a conſiderable body of French troops to Piſtoia, the deſtination of which I have reaſon to believe from a variety of concurring circumſtances, to be for Leghorn: and the republic of Lucca has given intimation to his government that ſuch is, undoubtedly, the project of the French. The violation of the neutrality is ſo palpable, and the meaſures taken by the enemy ſo apparently hoſtile, as to make it probable that the country will not eſcape contributions. I have omitted no means for forwarding information almoſt daily to the conſul and admiral.

I have the honor &c.

W. F. WYNDHAM.

Florence, June 25.

MY LORD,

I was this day informed by the ſecretary of ſtate that a column of French was on its march from Bologna, by the way of Fiſmino and Perugia, of which he did not know the number; that another column conſiſting of between 3 and 5000, were to arrive this day at Piſtoia; that the marquis Manfredini, who was diſpatched by the grand duke to Bologna, on the inſtant with the ſtrongeſt remonſtrances, & ordered to uſe his utmoſt endeavours with Buonaparte & Salicetti, to diſſuade the French from entering Tuſcany, had received for anſwer, that no orders had been given by the directory at Paris to that effect, and conſequently it was in their power to do otherwiſe; and all that they would do, was to paſs through Tuſcany as ſpeedily, friendly, and quietly as poſſible, and by whatever road his royal highneſs ſhould be pleaſed to diſtate; but that the commiſſaries and two generals of the column marching to Piſtoia, being arrived there, have declared to the general Serafindo, (who was ſent by the grand duke to meet them, and to give the neceſſary orders to inſure tranquillity) that they have no orders to receive from the grand duke, and do not know what route they ſhall take—a circumſtance utterly impoſſible, as they precede the army to obtain proviſion.

I have the honor, &c.

W. F. WYNDHAM.

HULL, July 15.

BY EXPRESS.

London, Wedneſday evening half paſt eight, July 13.

This morning government received diſpatches from Gibraltar, ſaid to be of the moſt ſerious importance: they were diſpatched by the Governor in a faſt ſailing tranſport, with orders to the captain to make the firſt Engliſh port, and ſet off expreſs to the war office.

The intelligence brought by the Capt. of the tranſport from Gibraltar, which arrived at the war office this morning, is ſaid to be, that of conſiderable preparations going on at the camp of St. Roch, evidently intended to act offenſively againſt that fortreſs as alſo a large body of forces having arrived at the lines, which for this month paſt have been cantoned in the village ten or twelve miles diſtant from the camp. But from the ſecret manner in which thoſe in official ſituations, in the office, have acted ſince the receipt of the above diſpatches nothing further has tranſpired; though it is evident, from manner and conduct, they are of the moſt momentous nature.

Our correspondent's letter alſo confirms the account given in the preceding poſt of the entire defeat of the Auſtrians with immenſe loſs.

From the COURIER FRANCOISE, July 14.

Copy of a letter from the grand duke of Tuſcany, to general Buonaparte. [Not dated in the Gazette.]

GENERAL,

The general Spannochi, arreſted by your order, has been conveyed hither: from delicacy I retain him under arreſt, until I can learn the reaſons of his arreſt, (which I preſume are juſt) that I may give you, as well as the French republic and all Europe, the higheſt proof of that equity, conformable to the laws of my country, by which I hold it my duty to be governed.

I commit this letter to my ſtewart, the marquis of Monfredini, whom I beg you to inform in what particular, the above mentioned Spannochi has been faulty. You may repoſe entire confidence in him, concerning all the objects which are intereſting to the peace of my ſubjects.

I deſire earneſtly to receive a line from your hand, which, under preſent circumſtances, may afford me complete tranquility, and at the ſame time aſſure quiet to all Tuſcany.

I am with perfect eſteem,

(Signed) FERDINAND.

[We have not the anſwer, but in the letters of Buonaparte to the directory, already publiſhed, the reaſons which induced him to arreſt Spannochi, are aſſigned, viz. his not preventing the Britiſh from taking two French veſſels in the port of Leghorn, and otherwiſe, favoring the Britiſh and hating the French.]

Remark.—From a late paper.

The abject condition of the ſtates of Italy, not only the fiefs of the emperor, but the neutral ſtates, and even the allies of France, under the inſolent conduct of Buonaparte is indeed deplorable. Not only laid under contribution, as uſual by the laws of war, but robbed of thoſe elegant monuments of the fine arts, which are the pride and boaſt of the country. This deſpotic exerciſe of power will go farther than any thing, perhaps, in exciting reſentment in the Italians; as it is taking from them what is peculiarly their own; the fruits of their own genious; and theſe elegant attractions which lead men of taſte from all the world to viſit Italy.

It is ſurpriſing too that the French can with to enrich their own country, by forcing from the people the production of another. There is a kind of meanneſs in attempting to raiſe the reputation of France on the ruins of genius in a neighboring country. What would Buonaparte himſelf ſay, were a ſtranger to viſit the French muſeum, and admire theſe Italian paintings and manuſcripts—but, turning to his comrade, whiſper in his ear, "theſe are maſterly works indeed, but they are not the productions of French genius; they are ſtolen from the Italians!"

To the farmers of Upper-Canada.

GENTLEMEN,

YOU are ſettled in a beautiful and fertile country, rich by nature, and deſigned by her to be reſpectable in population and wealth, ſo ſoon as you ſhall, on your part, do the little that is neceſſary to accompliſh it.

It is lamentable with what carleſsneſs and ſloth you improve ſo one of the beſt climates in the world. Some of you have as large improvements as 50 acres, or more, and the crops you get ſcarcely worth harveſting; the reaſon of theſe poor crops is becauſe you do not half prepare your land for the ſeed; there are too many buſhes and weeds for your graſs and grain. There is no fault in the ſeed nor ſoil; it is in you. Would you ſpend two days more in preparing the ground in many caſes, you would poſſibly get double the crops, at any rate more than would pay you for four days. Why is it that ſome with poorer ſoil, and not more than half the quantity, will get large crops, have plenty for their families, and a large quantity to ſell, while you half ſtarve? I will tell you, friends, it is becauſe they have more the art of huſbandry, and more economy. Perhaps you ſpend as much time as do they; but you do not work it right.

You wonder the price of farms do not riſe: let me tell you, that what you call cultivation, is really no more nor leſs, than dreſſing up land to the greateſt poſſible diſadvantage, as much as if you had a fine horſe to ſell, and before you take him into market ſhould, inſtead of currying his hair pack, curry it forward, and the manner in which you huſband your farms, and the ſtill worſe mode, if worſe can be, of making paſſes to them, diſcourage every man who has ever ſeen a farm, from purchaſing of, or letting by you, but prefer the wilderneſs, where they can really cultivate, and work their farms and roads to a ſhape, ſimilar to thoſe in other parts of the world.

I may with juſtice be ſaid that Upper-Canada can boaſt a ſoil excelled by none: think then gentlemen, on your intereſt, and as you value private and public proſperity, eaſe, elegance, and propriety, manage things better. Mend yourſelf firſt, then your neighbor. Strive to excell in improving in agriculture; the ſtrife is honeſt and honorable.—Go immediately to the work of reformation, while it is to-day.

OBSERVER.

NIAGARA, October 26, 1796.

A report is circulating in town, that the French have invaded our northern coaſt and taken the iſland of St. John's and Newfoundland: not having been furniſhed with any thing authentic, we give it only as the report of the day, and hope it will prove to be founded in fear for the ſafety of the Weſt India fleet.

Preſident Waſhington declines a re-election to that office:—Mr. J. Adams, is talked of as candidate for the chair.

Extract of a letter from an eminent houſe in Liſbon to a merchant in Philadelphia, dated July 23.

"This court has laid an embargo on the Dutch ſhips and forbid all intercourſe with the ſtates of Holland—rupture not in the leaſt expected. Emiſſaries are ſending to London, Madrid and Paris," and a ſevere preſs is making for the army which indicates a rupture with Spain. It is hoped theſe hoſtile movements will ſubſide as ſoon as an explanation takes place, through the intervention of the envoy."

To-day gallop with the wind we ride
Yet in Boy's doubts.

I KNOW the magic of your rich eyes,
I've felt those anxious, fond alarms
Which every faithful swain endures,
Who looks on beauty such as yours.
I've felt the pang, I've felt the dart
Of love in me my veil'on heart,
Yes, Mary what I write is true,
That pang! that dart! they came from you.
But, would you know th' unerring skill
To bind each lover to your will,
To these artful counsels pray attend—
They're written by a faithful friend.
Would you the very tyrant play,
And make the haughtier sex obey,
Let gentle looks adorn your face,
And nature all your manners grace:
To make the youth around you bow,
And breathe the fond eternal vow;
To make the bravest of the brave
Proud to vow himself your slave.
Chide words, soft looks, and tender speeches,
Are better than ten pair of breeches.

By his honor's command,

PROCLAMATION.

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

JOHN GRAVES SIMCOE, Esquire, LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, and Major General of his Majesty's Forces, and to forty.

To such as are desirous to settle on the lands of the Crown in the province of Upper-Canada.

WHEREAS by a proclamation bearing date at Chambly the twenty-seventh day of February, 1792. the terms and conditions on which persons who were desirous of settling on the lands of the Crown in his majesty's province of Upper-Canada, were promulgated and made known; and it was, by the eighth article in particular therein mentioned, that respective patents or warrants for the grants granted to them would be issued, free of quit-rent, and of any other expences, than such fees as are or may be allowed to be demanded and received by the different officers concerned in passing the patent, and recording the same, as stated in a table authorized and established by the government, and publicly fixed up in the several offices of the clerk of the council, of the surveyor general and of the secretary of the province.

And whereas it appears to be an object expedient or necessary that any grant or survey of lands should be hereafter run out or marked by his majesty's surveyor or deputy surveyors, at the expence of the crown—Now know ye, that I have thought fit by and with the advice of the executive council, to revoke so much of the eighth article of the said proclamation as declares, that the respective grantees shall not be charged with the expences of survey in proportion to the extent of their patents, which shall be stated and added to the table of fees, as is also notified and established by the government, and published and fixed up in the several offices of the clerk of the council, of the surveyor general and of the secretary of the province.

Given under my hand and seal in the town of York, the fifth day of July, in the thirty sixth year of his majesty's reign, and in the year of our Lord, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-six.

BY HIS EXCELLENCY'S COMMAND,
JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

J. WHITE, A. G.

"Two are better than one."

THIS is Solomon's theory, and I like it pretty well; though his practice is rather too extensive, for in his luxurious palace seven hundred wives and three hundred concubines were better than one. Whether the women of Jerusalem were of more manageable materials than modern females I am at a loss, for Josephus, whose works I have turned over to gain information on this knotty point, says nothing of the matter. However, I am inclined to think Solomon made his domestic arrangements soon after he "planted vineyards." Had he chosen a soberer moment, he would not have told the most confidential of his eunuchs that seven hundred expensive wives, and three hundred capricious concubines were better than one. Why the revenues of gold pived Jerusalem, or the bagnios of its purlieus could not have furnished robes for the married dames, nor rakes for the free! Men, sage like Solomon, are generally moderate in their arithmetic of pleasures. But this was too bold a sum in multiplication even for a polygamist to work.

In all probability, Solomon, thought all the oriental writers expatiate upon his resources, found his flock too scanty for the many and great claims which "the daughters of Jerusalem" must have made. For I am in life, when the "pitcher" was broken, and the "silver cord" of love loosed, and his "desires failed," we find him gravely composing a sententious proverb in praise of sociability; and, reducing a thousand companions to one. His reasons too, are not drawn as they would have been, when he formed his Seraglio, from passion and pleasure, but from utility. For he supports his opinion by arguing, in his content that "two are better than one," because in unity, or in battle, they mutually assist, or bedded in a trusty, might they keep each other warm.

Although in remarking upon S. Iomon's sentiments, I have been moved from my natural gravity as a preacher, yet let not the wanton reader construe my sermon into a satire upon the sage prince. After animadverting upon the excess of his practice, it is my intention to echo the benevolence and utility of his social principle.

"Two are better than one." Dr. Franklin thought so, when he recommended early marriages. As I am of singular continence myself, I know nothing of the matter, but St. Paul, an apostle of experience, tells bachelor & virgin christians, that it is better to marry than burn. If they feel this heat therefore, let them quench it in legal couples, and choose for the wedding ring posy, "Two are better than one." My physician tells me that in these degenerate days, when incest love is common, early marriage is favorable to health; the philosophers affirm that it is so to morals. The preacher therefore concludes that "two are better than one" applied to matrimony is a precept productive of happiness, and that a young man, who will reject all the concubines and six hundred and ninety-nine of the wives which Solomon thought necessary, may be pronounced wiser as it respects women than that prince.

In the dark ages, as they were justly stiled, devotional men used to think that St. Peter, the porter of Heaven's wicket would not open it, but to one at a time. Accordingly, monks and hermits would wander, or voluntarily be doom'd to dens and caves, and infift that an error had crept into the proverbs, and that Solomon certainly wrote "One is better than two." This was a vile interpretation; and, if they had meditated their duties well, they would have discovered that the founder of their religion was never so happy, as when "one people" surrounded him, and that the apostles chose companions in their travel? The one sat socially at a wedding supper, and the others returned to the temples, the town hall, and the market place.

I grieve to see a melancholy man moping in the chimney corner, refusing to "eat bread," and when the social cup goes round unwilling to pledge a bumper. Trust me thou son of Ipecac, happiness is doubled by participation. Arise therefore, and be, even at this publican, be social, be merry, go to the doors of thy tent, and if thou spell a man of understanding pass by, intreat him with a "turn in hither, I beseech thee."—So shall the "seven spirits" see, as of yore, from the top of the shepherd, and all the cares of thy heart be lulled by the pleasant communion of a friend.

The Lay Preacher.

RATISBONNE, June 20.

The empress of Russia has caused her ambassador to make an oral declaration to the diet of the German empire to the following import.

"Her majesty, the empress of all the Russias, in consequence of the lively interest she was always used to take in the prosperity of the German empire and of all its cities in general, has with great attention observed the course of the war in which it is at present involved. Her majesty could attribute her approbation to the solicitude and zeal which she remarked in several of the states, who, partly, even at the price of very extraordinary sacrifices, joined closely with the chief of the empire in defence of the common cause; as on the other hand, she had been forced to remark with regret that all have not acted with the same accord, and universal the duties of the states of the empire. The closest friendship and the new treaties entered into by her imperial majesty of Russia with his majesty the Roman emperor commanded her to make it a particular object of her solicitude for promoting an honorable peace, to exhort precisingly the members and states of the empire to fulfil faithfully their sacred duties towards his imperial majesty and the empire.

PARIS, May 30.

Merlin de Thionville has purchased the chateau of the ci devant duke of Orleans, at Reinzy.

Gen. Buonaparte has requested a reenforcement of 40,000 men.

The duke of Parma, not being able to pay the first two millions to the French, resolved to sell his plate and diamonds. The inhabitants of Parma immediately advanced the sum. At Modena a contribution of 200,000 sequins is laid on the Jews.

ARMY of the RHINE.

June 1.

The French army being considerably reinforced from the army of the north, marched from Dusseldorff towards the Sieg, and after several sharp skirmishes compelled the prince of Wirtemburgh to quit that river.

June, 3.

The prince being posted at Crobach with his advanced guard at Alkerchen, he was attacked by the French, and the post at Altkerchen, was carried with great loss after an obstinate resistance.

6. The prince of Wertembergh, retired to the Lahn, and posted himself at Limbourg, with a corps on his left at Nassau, and another on his right at Weilburg, and five squadrons at Weitzlar to observe the movements of the French.

7. The prince received a reenforcement with which and the energetic measures of the archduke, the French were effectually checked.

Gen. Jourdan on the success of gen. Kleber against the prince of Wirtemberg, threw bridges across the Rhine at Neuwied, attacked his army on the righ bank of the Lahn but disappointed in his views, on Frankfort fort he laid siege to Ehrenbreitstien.

9. The archduke marching against him arrived at Hocheim, and about the same time gen. Wurmser detaches troops to oppose Moreau on the Rhine.

11, 14. The archduke left Hockeim & completed the necessary arragements for the defence of the Lahn at Graeffein Wisbach. Gen. Werneck arrived on the 14th with considerable reenforcement at Weitzlar.

15. On the same and on the following day by order of the archduke he pushed his advance posts across the Lahn and the Delle at Weitzlar. Gen. le Febre was in march to occupy the same heights, which Werneck had in view. An engagement took place, Wernech yielded and Le Febre took possession of the heights. The archduke perceiving that in this position the French gen. waited the arrival of his other corps resolved to commence an attack the moment that the 31st cavalry arrived. At 4 o'clock they arrived, an engagement took place, continued with various success till night put an end to the conflict. The Austrians appeared to have the advantage with the loss of 500 men.—The French it was supposed lost more.—Gen. Le Febre who commanded in person was said to be wounded.

Gen. Jourdan receiving to cross the Rhine raised the blockade of Ehrenbreitstein. Four of the six divisions which composed his army—marched to Neuwied, the other two to Seigburg, Cologne and Dusseldorf.

16. The archduke marched in pursuit of gen. Le Febre to Grieffenstain where he was joined by gen. Kray who crossed the Lahn and pursued gen. Jourdan by Mount Fabaur and Limerdorf while the Parisians to the right advanced to the Sieg.

Marshal Wurmser's post was attacked on the 14th when the assailants met with a defeat.

Battle of Kirpen.

19. The arch duke's advanced corps under the command of gen. Kray, marched at day break in pursuit of the part of the French army which was retiring to Seigburg, on the Sieg, under orders of gen. Kleber.

Gen. Kleber, to give time for his ammunition & baggage to pass the Seig, was compelled to halt near Kirpen, and, therefore, with 25,000 men chose the advantageous heights near Kirpen on the road to Seigburg. The situation from description was truly eligible. Gen. Kray's corps consisted of about 11,000 cavalry, grenadiers, riflemen, light infantry and fusileers.

The Austrians fell in with a French patrol at the village Weynbuth, & drove them back to Kirpen. Gen. Kleber discovering Kray's for determined to attack him. Both generals discovered uncommon address in their arrangements, attacks and defences.—For some time the contest was severe, & the issue very doubtful. The French at length gave way, and were driven into the village.

Gen. Kray lost between 5 and 600 men. The French had 300 taken prisoners, and several hundreds lay dead on the field.

General Kleber retreated as soon as it was dark across the Sieg at Seigburg, directing his march to Dusseldorf, and general Jourdan recrossed the Rhine with his army at Neuwied.

[This is the substance of the account of the battle and its issue given to the British secretary at war by col. Crawford from Hackenburg, the head quarters of the archduke, June 20.]

LONDON, July 1.

Dispatches have been this day received from col. Graham, dated at the head quarters of general Beaulieu, Cagliaro, near Roverado, June 13 and 14, by which it appears that nothing material has occured in that quarter, since the 31st of May.

July 4.

Mr. Pitt went to the bank on Thursday, where he was elected for two hours with the directors. His business, it is said, was to state to them the urgent necessity of 200,000l. being immediately advanced to discharge a part of the sum [illegible] of the civil list, and it is asserted that he succeeded to the full extent of his application.

July 5.

Mr. WHITBREAD's WILL.

The following are some of the principal heads of Mr. Whitbread's will, and of the who are benefitted by it:

To his son, Samuel Whitbread, esq. he has bequeathed the whole of his freehold estate, together with all his brewery concerns, except a part to his daughter, the wife of Mr. Gray, which was secured to her in her marriage settlement. To his son in-law, James Gordon, esq. to his nephews, Jacob Whitbread, and John Wingate Jennings, esq. he has bequeathed 5000l. each; also to, 000l. being the amount of three bonds given lord St. John, his son in law, to whom he left 1000l, the amount of another bond, also given by him.

To his three head clerks, Mr. Sangster, Mr. Yellowly, and Mr. Green, he has left 500l. each, who are all three trustees for the management of the brewery. To Mr. Harman, his private clerk, 300l. To his butler, 100l. and to every servant throughout his concerns, including clerks, domestics, overmen and every other description, he has left a token of his regard, besides various sums, from 100l. to 10l. in annuities to old servants, and widows of servants. He has also made a clause in his will, which state, that should his clerks, Messrs. Green, Yellowly and Sangster, at any time be desirous of purchasing a share in the brewery concern, his son shall accede to the proposal and give them credit for any sum they may want for that purpose, on their own bonds, not exceeding 100,000l.

To the different hospitals in the metropolis and elsewhere, he has bequeathed upwards of 15,000l. among which are St. Bartholomew's, Bethlehem, Lying in, St. George's, Small Pox, and St. Luke's. To two charity schools, (a boy's and girl's) 500l. each, in the parish of St. Luke's; also to the repairing of the gaol at Bedford 300l. and towards the building of an infirmary at the above place, 4000l. and towards the maintenance of it, 4000l. more. The many legacies left to old acquaintances, friends, rectors curates and tenants, and distant relations, are incredible.

NIAGARA, December 2, 1796.

His honor, the administrator, has been pleased to appoint Thos. Ridout, esq. register for the county of York, in this province.

By persons of information we are enabled to correct the paragraph in our last, of the French having invaded the island of St. Johns and Newfoundland:—With respect to the former, we are assured of its safety, but the latter, is, as stated captured; and St. John's its capital in their possession. Would gentlemen who receive important articles of information, be kind enough timely to favor the printer with them, it would often save misrepresentation, and enable us only to state matters of fact.

The president and council of Middleburgh, on the 8th of June issued their proclamation for a day of fasting. For want of room we are obliged to rest its publication until our next. The style is truly pathetic and its complaints very particular. The New-York Herald has following the proclamation this short and expressive note. "We did not expect so soon to see the Hollanders driven to fasting and prayer, to deliver them from the blessings of French liberty."

Extract of a letter from Buonaparte, dated at Bologna, Italy, June 23, to the executive directory of France.

The twenty pictures with which Parma was to supply us, are sent off. The celebrated picture of St. Jerome is so much esteemed in this country, that they offered us a million for it.

Some pictures from Modena are also sent off. Citizen Barthelemi is at present employed in making a selection of the pictures at Bologna. He intends to take 50 of them, among which is the St. Cecilia, which is said to be the chief d'euvre of Michael Angelo.

Monge, Berthollin, and Thorin, Naturalists are at Pavia, employed in enriching our botanic garden, and our cabinet of natural history. I imagine they will not forget a complete collection of serpents, which alone appeared to me sufficient to compensate for the trouble of the journey. Expect they will be at Bologna the day after to-morrow, were they will also find a plentiful harvest."

jeſty's counſel, to iſſue this proclamation, hereby re quiring the ſaid officers to continue in their ſaid offices and employments, of which all perſons concerned are required to take notice and govern themſelves accordingly.

PROCLAMATION.

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

JOHN GRAVES SIMCOE, Eſquire,
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, and Major General of his Majeſty's Forces, and to forth.

To ſuch as are anxious to ſettle on the lands of the Crown in the province of Upper-Canada.

WHEREAS by a proclamation bearing date at Quebec, the ſeventh day of February, 1792, the terms and conditions on which perſons would be ſet-tled, who were deſirous of ſettling on the lands of the crown in his majeſty's province of Upper-Canada, were promulgated and made known; and it was, by the eighth article in particular thereof declared, that the relief to the patentees were to take the eſtates granted to them ſeverally, free of quit rent, and of any other expen-ces, than ſuch fees as are or may be allowed to be demanded and received, by the different officers concerned in paſſing the patent, and recording the ſame, to be ſtated in a table authoriſed and eſtabliſhed by the governor, and publicly hung up in the ſeveral offices of the clerk of the council, of the ſurveyor general, and of the ſecretary of the province.

And whereas it appears to be no longer expedient or neceſſary that any grant or ſurvey of lands ſhould be hereafter run out or marked by his majeſty's ſurveyor or deputy ſurveyor, at the expence of the crown—
Now know ye, that I have thought fit by and with the advice of the executive council, to revoke ſo much of the eighth article of the ſaid proclamation as declares that, "the reſpective patentees are to take the eſtates granted to them ſeverally free of quit rent, and no other expences than ſuch fees as are or may be allowed to be demanded, and received by the different officers concerned in paſſing the patent, and recording the ſame," and to declare that in addition to the fees eſtabliſhed by government on all grants of land, the reſpective petitioners will, in future, on the receipt of their patents be charged with the expences of ſurvey in proportion to the extent of their patents, which will be ſtated in a table added to the table of fees, as is an horiſed and eſtabliſhed by the government, and publicly hung up in the ſeveral offices of the clerk of the council, the ſurveyor general and of the ſecreta-ry of the province.

Given under my hand and ſeal in the town of YORK, the firſt day of July, in the thirty ſixth year of his ma-

WHEREAS the entering of caveats in the office of the secretary of the province, to prevent the issuing of deeds after they have been duly executed, hath been found inconvenient, and deemed to be otherwise improper;—all persons, therefore, who have, or pretend to have any claim to lands in the possession of others, her majesty's subjects, holden under certificate, or order of council, or other authority, will take notice that they must enter caveats in the secretary's office before the making of the deeds, as none will be received after they are executed.

Such persons, therefore, as are ready to establish their claims, while their caveats in the secretary's office remain undisturbed; and that others may be duly apprized of the deeds now about to be made, a list of the names of persons and of the townships where the lands lie is subjoined, and others will be made known in the several subsequent gazettes.

When, therefore, any persons perceive names annexed to lots or tracts of land of which they conceive themselves entitled to a grant, they must within one month after the present and future publications by the landalle in the Home district, lodge a caveat in the secretary's office, and give immediate notice to the clerk of the council, and the party against whom they set up their claim.

ALBANY, Sept. 2.

On the evening of the 17th inſt. a murder was committed at the houſe of John Wemple, at the Oneida Caſtle; an Indian of that tribe well known by the name of Sandy Nick, is upon good ground ſuppoſed to be the perpetrator. On information of the murder, upon oath, judge White iſſued his warrant for the apprehenſion of the murderer; with inſtructions to the officer to make application to the chiefs of the nation and demand the offender: and we are happy in the information, that the nation very readily delivered over the accuſed to the juſtice of the ſtate. Several of the nation accompanied the officer to the goal. The perſon murdered was a white man, and the information received juſtifies a belief that he was from ſome part of Long-Iſland, on his way to the military to explore a lot of land which he acquired by his ſervices as a ſoldier in the revolution war: his name is ſuppoſed to be Henry Craſts, and he ſuggeſted that he had worked in a paper manufactory for Mr. Onderdonk of Long-Iſland.

The gallant capt. Vaughan of his majeſty's ſloop of war Alarm we are ſorry to learn, has lately loſt his life at ſea by being waſhed overboard in a ſtorm.

A report prevails that his majeſty's ſhip L'Amiable has recently had an engagement off Guadaloupe with a French veſſel of ſuperior force; the engagement, it is ſaid, commenced in the evening, and was renewed again the next morning, when the Engliſh ſloop of war heaving in ſight the enemy ſheered off.

AIX LA CHAPELLE, June 18.

According to a reſolution of the executive directory, all the German provinces conquered between the Rhine and Meuſe, will be divided into two provincial diſtricts; the firſt of which, called the diviſion of the Rhine and Meuſe, will comprehend the duchies of Cleves and Juliers the electorate of Cologne, and the principality of Meurs. The ſecond, called the diviſion of the Rhine and Moſelle, comprehends the upper and lower electorate of Treves, the duchy of Deux-Ponts, and the whole palatine on the left bank of the Rhine. The executive directory will appoint a director general for each diviſion.

COPENHAGEN, June 3.

Laſt year there were exported from Denmark 6000 horſes, 22,000 oxen, and 9000 tons of ſalted meat. Taking the common eſtimate for each horſe at 80, for each ox at 40, and for each ton of meat at 16 rix dollars, thoſe three articles alone produced 15 tons of gold to the country, without reckoning what was exported clandeſtinely.

Yeſterday's mail brought to our chamber of commerce the agreeable news, that our envoy at Naples, Chamberlain Burgh, has at laſt ſucceeded to liberate the Turks detained priſoners at Naples; ſo that the grounds of difference between the Algerines and this country are entirely removed.

POOR HOLLANDERS!

HOLLAND.

MIDDLEBURGH, JUNE 9.

A faſt day to be kept in this place having been reſolved on, a proclamation to that purpoſe was yeſterday iſſued, and is thus ſingularly preſaced:

The preſident and council of Middleburgh, to their fellow citizens.

"Health and brotherhood!

"If we attempt to perſuade you that our city, and our land, was not in a precarious ſituation; that the fundamental doctrines of liberty and equality had already brought us to a pinacle of luſtre, which might fruitleſs be fought for in our annual chronicles; that the difficulties which the citizens have encountered being removed, their proſperity was now become perfect; would you not ſuſpect, that we ſtrove to conceal the actual ſituation of things? Would not the confidence which you have in us, quickly change into ſuſpicion and diſtruſt?

"Although conquered by a powerful neighbor, thro' whoſe generoſity, and the bleſſings of God, we remain a people, is not a review of the preſent circumſtances diſheartening and mournful? The wars into which we have been ſurprized; the internal diſſentions, ſtill worſe than war; the loſs of many valuable poſſeſſions in the Eaſt-Indies; the critical ſituation of thoſe in Weſt; the ſources of ſubſiſtance obſtructed, the inhabitants impoveriſhed by contributions; the decline of commerce; the diminution of the manufactories; all tend to exhibit but too true and melancholy a picture of our fallen country! add the incomputible exactions, the extraordinary exertions beſtowed on the marine, the uncommon addition made to the land forces, the ſolemn ſummoning of all burghers to defend their country; is it not ſo many proofs of danger! ſo many evident ſigns of the chaſtiſing hand of Godlike juſtice?

"But from whence came theſe miſeries? and where muſt we enquire for the ſources? in ourſelves brethren ---They originate in our puniſhable ambition, in fordid intereſt, in deteſtable voluptouſneſs, in deſpiſing all the virtues that contribute to render ſociety happy, in degenerating from religion and morality, and, more than all, to our diſunion and party-rancour, that, like an eating cancer, has unfinewed the body of our ſtate, and brought it to a ſkeleton.

"Should we, then, remain indifferent ſpectators of theſe accumulating evils, & not endeavor to remove them? Always, ſeeing a friend or relation in dangerous circumſtances, do we not in ſpite of our reliance on medicinal aid, direct our eyes and our hearts towards heaven, beſeeching God to communicate the means of recovery? And burghers! ſhall we not then, to preſerve our country, which is the friend of us all, that is our mother, who has the moſt ſacred claim to our love, offer up, unanimouſly, our prayers to the almighty Deliverer, imploring his aid and protection."

NIAGARA, November 9, 1796.

Thomas Barclay, eſq. on the part of England, and David Howell, eſq. on the part of the United States, as commiſſioners, for determining the true St. Croix river, or eaſtern boundary of the ſtates, having convened at Halifax in September, made choice of Egbert Benſon, eſq. of New-York, to be the third commiſſioner, who was notified of the appointment, and immediately proceeded to St. Andrews, in Nova Scotia, where he was to meet the other commiſſioners, and commence the buſineſs of their appointment.

Mr. Cox, the American artiſt, who a few years ſince was called to Ireland, has returned from that country, after having completed three bridges to the entire approbation of the proprietors; and for one of which he was preſented with 1000l. above the contract.—Mr. Whiting, another artiſt, in Connecticut, has lately been ſent to by the empreſs of Ruſſia, to be informed whether he can throw a bridge over a river in her dominions, which requires a ſingle arch of 600 feet. He has ſent her a model for the purpoſe.

The ſettlements weſtward progreſs in an aſtoniſhing degree, and we may look to the time as not far diſtant, when our wilderneſs ſhall have been converted into well cultivated fields; and the lands which now bear ſo ſmall, but riſing prices, will be really enhanced by the extenſive population, which their goodneſs, and the mildneſs of our government, & other advantages are ſo peculiarly calculated to promote. It approaches us with unparralled rapidity; but 80 miles lie waſte, and this territory in a fair way ſoon to be as well peopled as any in its rear. To ſome this would ſeems impoſſible. Recollect twelve years, and what was Whiteſtown, a town below the head of the Mohawk; it then contained more land than is in the ſtate of Connecticut, and only two families, or ten perſons, and compare it with the preſent time, when it can turnout more regiments of men than the city and county of New-York. The Weſtern diſtrict of the ſtate of New-York has but very few inſtent ſettlements, the number of inhabitants now are eſtimated, and pretty exactly, at 100,000. Upper Canada is totally an infant ſettlement; and now but five years ſince it could be of conſequence enough to eſtabliſh a civil government; even here the advancement of civilization, population and wealth, all which are encreaſing in a multiplied ratio, ſtrike with aſtoniſhment the contemplative mind. Well might the great Franklin have a wiſh to return an hundred years hence that he might then ſee how wonderfully have been the improvements in the American world in that period of time.

A letter from London ſays, that the majority in the houſe of commons, is by the late election encreaſe by an addition of five members.

Decree of the crown of Portugal, tranſmitted by a commercial houſe in Liſbon, to their correſpondents in Philadelphia, in a letter dated the 7th of June laſt.

"I AM pleaſed to eſtabliſh Liſbon a free port, from the 1ſt January 1797, for which purpoſe I have appointed the warehouſes and fort of Junqueira with the adjacent grounds to make therein the neceſſary accommodations for the receiving and depoſing all merchandizes and goods whatſoever (except for the preſent ſugar and tobacco) as well from foreign parts as from the national ports on the other ſide of the cape Good Hope, and ſuch goods, having lawful entry may at the will of the proprietors be diſpatched for the conſumption of the kingdom on paying the compleat duties, or may be exported to foreign ports on the other ſide of the cape of Good Hope, on paying in benefit of my royal treaſury, and under the title of protection and depoſit one per cent of their value according to their invoices, figned and sworn by the maſters of veſſels or their conſignees; and theſe ſhall be free liberty for all ſhips to come in and ſail again with their cargoes on obſerving the eſtabliſhed forms: and I hereby ſurpeals all duties, and revoke all diſpoſitions, which oppoſe and confine the liberty and freedom which conſtitute the advantage of the preſent eſtabliſhment.

"In order to animate and promote an abundance and concurrence of grain of the firſt neceſſity, am pleaſed to declare that every quality of proviſions which are free from duties on entry, not only ſhall enjoy the priviledge of exportation, but ſhall be free from the aforeſaid duty, on making the proper entries at the reſpective boards.

"In caſe the crown of Portugal ſhould enter into a war (which God forbid) with any power whoſe ſubjects have property in the ſaid free port, without exception of grain or proviſions, there ſhall not be made on it any arreſt, embargo, ſequeſter or reprizal; on the contrary, it ſhall be as free and ſecure as if it were in their own houſes, and they may diſpoſe of the ſame as they ſhall judge convenient."

The letter incloſing the above, ſays, "it is imagined that the reſtrictions on ſugar and tobacco will be removed."

PETER RUSSELL.

By the honorable PETER RUSSELL, eſquire, adminiſtering the government of his majeſty's province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS his moſt gracious majeſty has been pleaſed to grant his royal leave of abſence to his excellency major general SIMCOE, lieutenant governor, and commander in chief of this province, and to appoint me to adminiſter the government of the ſaid province: And whereas it is neceſſary for the peace and good government of the ſaid province, that all his majeſty's officers within the ſame ſhould continue in their reſpective offices and employments, I have thought fit by and with the advice of his majeſty's council, to iſſue this proclamation, hereby authoriſing the ſaid officers to continue in their ſaid offices and employments, of which all perſons concerned are required to take notice and govern themſelves accordingly.

GIVEN under my hand and ſeal at arms, at Niagara, the eleventh day of September, in the year of our Lord one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety-ſix, and of his majeſty's reign, the thirty firſt.

P. R.

By his honor's command,
WM. JARVIS, ſec.

PROCLAMATION.

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

JOHN GRAVES SIMCOE, Eſquire,
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, and Major General of his Majeſty's Forces;
and ſo forth.

To ſuch as are deſirous to ſettle on the lands of the Crown in the province of Upper-Canada.

WHEREAS by a proclamation bearing date at Quebec, the ſeventh day of February, 1792, the terms and conditions on which perſons would be ſettled, who were deſirous of ſettling on the lands of the crown in his majeſty's province of Upper-Canada, were promulgated and made known; and it was, by the eighth article in particular declared, that the reſpective patentees were to take the eſtates granted to them leverally, free of quit rents, and of any other expences, than ſuch fees as are or may be allowed to be demanded and received by the different officers concerned in paſſing the patent, and recording the ſame, to be ſtated in a table authoriſed and eſtabliſhed by the government, and publicly hung up in the ſeveral offices of the clerk of the council, of the ſurveyor general of the ſecretary of the province.

Now it appearing to be no longer expedient or neceſſary that any grant or ſurvey of lands ſhould be hereafter run out or marked by his majeſty's ſurveyor or deputy ſurveyor, at the expence of the crown: Now know ye, that I have thought fit by and with the advice of the executive council, to revoke ſo much of the eighth article of the ſaid proclamation as declares that, "the reſpective patentees are to take the eſtates granted to them leverally free of quit rent, and any other expences than ſuch fees as are or may be allowed to be demanded, and received by the different officers concerned in paſſing the patent, and recording the ſame," and to declare that in addition to the fees eſtabliſhed by government on all grants of land, the reſpective petitioners will, in future, or the receipt of their patents be charged with the expences of ſurvey in proportion to the ext nt of their patents, which will be ſtated in and added to the table of fees, as is authoriſed and eſtabliſhed by the government, and publicly fixed up in the ſeveral offices of the clerk of the council, of the ſurveyor general and of the ſecretary of the province.

GIVEN under my hand and ſeal in the town of YORK, the firſt day of July, in the thirty ſixth year of his majeſty's reign, and in the year of our Lord, one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety ſix.

BY HIS EXCELLENCY'S COMMAND,

Sir,

THE ill manners and unjuſt equivocation you too frequently uſe farmers, when myſelf being one, when they call on you for payment, are inſufferable: and as you have been threatned with a publication of this kind, without having the deſired effect of reforming you, this modeſt hint is given, that you may have a further more particular explanation. Others are joined with me in willing the preſervation of your private and public honor, by your leaving off thoſe little practices, and when we ſhall be excuſed from our preſſing of our never truſting you again to the moſt trifling amount.

From ITALY, June 3.

Among the reaſons that occaſioned the late inſurrection in the Milaneſe, they mention the taking of the treaſures for the poor by the French, under pretence that the eccleſiaſtical funds were comprized therein.—The peaſants, who roſe thereupon in the environs of Pavia and Lodi, were 30 thouſand in number. A French regiment of chaſſeurs mounted on horſes, were at firſt detached againſt them, but was driven into a ſwamp & cut to pieces. A battalion of infantry and ſome other detachments experienced the ſame fate. General Buonaparte then undertook the we l known expedition againſt the inſurgents, when the peaſants retired into woods and marſhy parts of the country, the French, of courſe, have to apprehend new exploſions as they advance.

The French government having demanded of the arch duke of Tuſcany, to ſend off the abbe Bonnaud, an emigrant, reſiding in Florence, under the protection of the Pruſſian miniſters, it was refuſed.

At Leghorn the Engliſh houſes eſtabliſhed there, were preparing to embark with their effects.

VIENNA, June 12.

The great armament of the Hungarian nation has already been noticed: it ſeems this project will meet with ſome ſerious obſtacles. The Hungarians have indeed offered to raiſe 160,000 men, 50 thouſand of whom ſhould be horſemen; but on what conditions? They demand nothing leſs than a free exportation of all their products, and a free importation of all the manufactures they want. This would not only ruin all the hereditary dominions, but dry up almoſt all the revenues which the emperor now draws from Hungary. It is indeed doubtful whether ſuch an offer ought rather to be conſidered as a proof of patriotiſm, than as a poſitive refuſal to ſupport the country in ſuch a critical ſituation. The court did not expect a better anſwer from the ſtates of Hungary, and took, therefore, ſuch meaſures as will enable it to protect the ſtate without their aſſiſtance. There are yet different other methods to draw troops out of Hungary, and if the ſovereign finds it neceſſary to ordain a levy of 30,000 recruits in Hungary, who ſhall dare to oppoſe his orders?—Beſides the Illyrians and frontier troops in Croatia and Sclavonia, where the ſtates of Hungary have nothing to ſay, are put in requiſition and already on their march to the frontiers.

NEW-YORK, SEPTEMBER 3.

Mr. Mouroe is undoubtedly recalled.—A letter from Paris of June 7, ſtates that "the executive directory of France have not the moſt favorable opinion of the abilities of the American miniſter."

September 5.

By late letters from Jamaica, we are informed, the Iſland is very ſickly—The extreme drought continues, and numbers of cattle die daily; which, from their putrid effluvia, has cauſed a dangerous epidemic, that effects the inhabitants in general, as well as the new comers. The ſouth ſide of the Iſland does not furniſh vegetables or plantains, and Guinia corn is as high as a piſtole per buſhel.

Captain Allen, of the ſchooner Argus, 17 days from Aux-Cayes, informs that previous to his ſailing, it was reported that, the French had made an attack on a Britiſh fort near Jeremie, and were repulſed with the loſs of 500 men.

By a brig which arrived at Boſton on Saturday the 28th ult. in 46 days from Gibraltar, we learn that the emperor of Morocco, has iſſued orders for the capture of all veſſels bound to the ports poſſeſſed by his revolted brother, under the appellation of enemy's ports. Under theſe orders, a Dane, a Swede, a Portugueſe, and an American, have been taken. The latter was the brig Emmeline, Prentiſs, of Boſton—the was bound to Salla. The former was cleared, in conſideration of their ſailing previous to the general promulgation of the orders.—The American conſul at Gibralter, was trying to get the Emmeline releaſed, and it was though would ſucceed.

LONDON, June 29.

WE on Saturday mentioned, that on that morning, two old houſes in Houghton ſtreet Clare market, occupied by ſeveral poor families, fell down, and involved in their ruins the major part of their inhabitants.—About 4 o'clock in the morning, the watchman was alarmed by the falling of ſeveral panes of glaſs from the windows, and, on obſervation diſcovered chaſms in both houſes. He alarmed the tenants of each; but through ſome unaccountable apathy, they could not be prevailed upon to move.—The landlord, a butterman in the market, was applied to, who, in vain warned them of their danger. About half paſt eight both houſes fell; in one there were ſixteen perſons, three in the other; ſeven were in the courſe of the day dug out dead, ſome of them children ſuffocated, and nine alive, but miſerably bruiſed. A woman of the name of Moore, nearly ſeventy years of age, was heard in ſome of the lower parts crying for aſſiſtance; her body was not found till about eight on Saturday night, when life had left it. There are two ſtill among the rubbiſh, which the people are cautious in removing, dreading they ſhall be buried by the fall of the adjoining houſes.

In the evening, while ſome workmen were employed in propping the adjoining houſes, part of the wall fell in, and threw down the ladders upon which they were ſtanding.—The men were ſo much bruiſed by the fall, that they were carried to the hoſpital, in a dangerous ſtate.

HALIFAX, Auguſt 18.

Yeſterday arrived the Shark ſloop of war, in fifteen days from Newfoundland. A ſhip from England left in with a fleet of 55 French frigates cruiſing off the banks; but being provided with a fictitious ſet of papers, had the good fortune to perſuade the Frenchmen ſhe was American property, and thus eſcaped, and arrived a few days after at Newfoundland.

THE VIGIL.

"Tomorrow, & tomorrow, & tomorrow,
SHAKESPEARE.

JUST now fat me down, with my pipe puffing away disquietude, when, as well became me, I began to ruminate on some "grave" subject for a VIGIL. But, as though I had chafed away every fpark of folly from fociety, and all around me appeared innocence and peace; I could find no theme of iniquity, on which to vent either my pity or my fpleen. Yet thinking that perhaps my power of invention might be more than uſually fupine, for energy of intellect depends much on accident, I betook myſelf to the old hacknied refuge "tomorrow."

Tomorrow, faid I, perchance, accident may pop into my mind fome hint, that may be "profitable to direct." As if there had been kind of fatality attending it, in order to prove the above remark, that invention depends on accidental cauſes, this very word "tomorrow" diſcovered to me a large fcope for critical diſquiſition and "grave" remark.

"Tomorrow!" What ruin has this one word occaſioned? Not only ruin of moral character and fame; but the ſtateſman's ſchemes, the ſcholar's talents, and the huſbandman's corn!

Were the months and years, which have been ſquandered away on "tomorrows," without energy or action, to be enumerated the ſum would appear a portion of time ſufficient for preparing, and peopling a world, as large as the one we now inhabit.

What is the reaſon, that ſome men, within the compaſs of an age, effect three times ſo much as others? nothing is plainer—It is becauſe they obſerve the moments as they paſs; and do not calculate their gain by "tomorrow."

Were I an adept in arithmetic, I might prove, by addition and ſubtraction, that by moderate attention to buſineſs one ſixth part of a dollar may be earned clear to day; whereas by ſloth the ſame ſum would be loſt; for men muſt eat, though they do not work, I might calculate this for ten, twenty, or forty years, which would amount to a handſome ſum, perhaps between two and three thouſand dollars: enough to ſecure old age from want, at leaſt, if not in honorable eaſe and plenty.

The merchant, who, on Sunday, ſhuts up ſhop, and rides out of town for pleaſure, but riſing up on Monday morning reaſons thus; "perhaps in all this day not one cuſtomer would call at my ſhop, if I were at home: and if they ſhould, there are other ſhops in town, kept by thoſe who are juſt fit for drudgery, where they may be ſupplied. It can't make much odds, ſeven years hence. I will even ſtay, and keep it up till "tomorrow." That merchant, I ſay, ought to reaſon thus, If no one would call to trade at my ſhop, many will probably ride by and ſee my doors barred, and bolted: and a retailer's ſhop that up looks a little like "want of ſtock," or credit.

Juſt ſo it is with the mechanic. Hammers and awls are good for nothing. They earn no bread, while the workman is drinking gin.

It is ſomewhat different with the farmer, I acknowledge; his crop may grow, while he ſleeps, provided he does not uſe too many "tomorrows" in planting and ſowing. Yet I remember, laſt June to have heard the following dialogue, between my neighbor Loungabout and his wife.

Wife. You know, you, that our garden fence has not been mended this ſummer yet.

Long. Well, wife, I have ſet out my cabbage plants, and planted my beans; I can't do every thing at once.

Wife. But the pigs, you know, in one night may deſtroy every cabbage plant, and beſides, that you have, in all this earthen world.

Long. Well, well, don't fret your gizzard. The world wa'nt made in a miunte; I will mend the fence "tomorrow."

It ſeemed as if neighbor Loungabout's wife knew ſomething of divination; for to cloſe the drama, the pigs did, in fact, deſtroy all the beans that very night. May my neighbor's fauce that very night. May all good farmers, this ſpring take warning from the example of Loungabout.

I remember about ten years ſince, to have ſeen one Simon Spunky, who had been at college, but had returned home to ſpend the winter recels. After the expiration of the recels, Simon was reminded of the neceſſity of a ſpeedy return, leſt haply he might "fall" for lack of knowledge. But Simon, with an inſignificant yawn, ſuch as was becoming him, exclaimed "zounds, tommorrow" is as good as to day. Beſides it is ſoon enough to go and hammer over your d—nd metaphyſical trath! What care I whether the mind always thinks: or whether there are innate ideas." But at the enſuing examination, Simon had like to have demonſtrated that there were nither innate nor acquired ideas. Yet the government did not wait until tomorrow, to recommend Lock and a few ſuch hard founding books, to Simon's peruſal, that he might be able to form an acquaintance with ideas. Above every thing my ſoul abhors the man, who waits until "tomorrow," to be benevolent, honeſt and juſt.

SINGULAR WORDS.

"THERE is a word in the Engliſh language to which if you add a ſyllable it will make it ſhorter." Short is the word required, to which if you add er it will be ſhorter. This is a paradox, for the word, by being made actually longer, becomes really ſhorter. And now vice verſa, to contraſt with the above. Plague is a word of one ſyllable; take away the two firſt letters, and there will be a word of two ſyllables remaining; by which it appears the ague is four fixth of the plague.

There is a word in the Engliſh language of five ſyllables, from which if one be deducted no ſyllable remains—The word is monoſyllable.

Heroine is perhaps as peculiar a word as any in our tongue; the two firſt letters of it are male, the three firſt female, the four firſt a brave man, the whole word a brave woman. It runs thus: he, her, hero, heroine.

We have a term for beggar, which may be divided without the tranſpoſition of a ſingle letter, with only the addition of an apoſtrophe, ſo as to make a complete ſimple ſentence: and ſuch a ſentance as a perſon of this deſcription may generally addreſs himſelf with: The term is mendicant, and the ſentence ariſing from its diviſion—Mend I can't; which moſt of them may too truly aſſert.

LONDON, Sept. 5.

ON Sunday we received the Paris papers to the 30th ult. inclusive. The contents are exceedingly important.—It is uniformly reported in all the papers, though not officially communicated, that the directory have now announced to the council an event which our readers muſt paturally have expected, a treaty offenſive and defenſive with Spain, which in other words is tantamount to a declaration of war on the part of Spain againſt this country, and we have therefore every reaſon to ſuppoſe, that the united French and Spaniſh fleets, which lately failed on a ſecret expedition, ſet out with a view to the commencement of hoſtilities.—It is probable that their efforts in the firſt inſtance will be employed in the Weſt-Indies, and that the object is to ſecure to France the poſſeſſion of the Spaniſh part of St. Domingo, which was ceded by the late treaty of peace between the two countries.

General Bonaparte ſince his brilliant ſucceſs, has in conſequence advanced his head quarters within two leagues of Trent. The Auſtrian army, who are in a ſtate of retreat, have now got beyond Trent.

Some commotions have taken place at Paris. Our readers will find the details under their proper heads. They are apparently of no conſequence; they ſeem rather to be the declining effort of an exhauſted faction, than any ſerious effort of a powerful party. From its poſſeſſion of public opinion, and the brilliant career of foreign ſucceſs, the government at preſent ſeems to be perfectly ſecure from any attempts of internal faction.

NIAGARA, November 23, 1796.

Retro Me Sathanas—A wise time.

We gave in our laſt the report of Jourdan's defeat. That ſuch an event ſhould take place in ſome of their departments has ever been ſpoken of by military men, killed in military art, as not only probable, but certain: the prediction is verified; and by the favor of an obliging friend, we are this day able to give the official communication of Jourdan, and a London paragraph of Sept. 6th. The account of an inſurrection in Paris, 9th Sept. and the proclamation conſequent thereon, from L'Eclair, a Paris paper, and a communication from the directory to the council of five hundred, on the ſituation of the troops and finances, ſhall appear in our next.

RETREAT AND SECOND DEFEAT OF JOURDAN.

ARMY of SAMBRE and MEUSE.

Gen. Jourdan, commander in chief of the army of the Sambre and Meuſe, dated from the Head Quarters at Schewinfurt, to the executive directory, Aug. 31.

"Citizens directors,

"Since my letter of the 24th, it has been impoſſible for me to write you.

"In the night between the 24th & 25th Auguſt—I made my retreat in two columns for the purpoſe of retiring behind Velden, becauſe general Bernadotte, having been forced to evacuate Nuremberg, and to abandon Lauff, the enemy occupied the poſſeſſion of Lauff with the forces ſufficiently ſtrong to prevent the poſſibility of my forcing that paſſage, which was the only high road that would afford a facility for conveying the artillery and baggage. I have conſequently been obliged to croſs the country, and travel along roads which have hitherto been conſidered as impaſſible by any army. The park of artillery and baggage have encountered the greateſt difficulties in the march; it has been impoſſible for me to reach Velden, and I have been obliged to take up a poſition with the army, partly before Velden, and partly at Villech.

Gen. Bernadotte having been obliged to retire to Forchcim, and the enemy having moved in front of Erlangen, my right flank was uncovered, and I even had the enemy behind me. The park and the baggage having filed off during the night, the corps of the army which was encamped in front of Velden, on the 26th Hilpotaſtem & Berzenſtein; general Kleber, who commanded the corps which was encamped at Neſech, could not receive the order for retiring, becauſe a great body of the enemy's cavalry placed between him and me, cut off the communication. But that general felt the neceſſity of making his retreat, and he was met on the 26th at Peguitz, by the adjutant-general Ducheiran, who carried the order to him for retiring to Betzenſtein, where he had not arrive till midnight.

"On the 27 the army retired behind the Wiſſent, the right ſupported by Forchiem, and the left at Ebermanſtadt.

"On the 28th I only made a movement with courage—ſome of the enemy's corps on my right, for the purpoſe of conveying the principal forces of my army, and I formed the deſign of attacking the body of the enemy which was on my right; but it was neceſſary to conſtruct bridges on the Rednitz, and that was impoſſible, and as I was informed a large body of the enemy was at Burg-Eberach, and had paſſed their patroles into Bemberg, where general Ernouf was made priſoner for an inſtant, I thought it my duty to continue my retreat. I marched the 29th, towards Bemberg; a part of the army paſſed to the left bank of the Rednitz, the other remainded on the right bank, and I cauſed bridges to be conſtructed over the Mein. The ſame day the enemy puſhed a very large body of cavalry from Burg-Ebrach on Eltman, and cut off the only road which afforded me a communication. This was the more eaſy for them to accompliſh, as that road, which runs along the right bank of Mein from Bamberg to Schweinfurt, is one continued defile.

"The 30th the army was in motion, and by a forced march, arrived this day at Schweinfurt, after having forced the paſſage of Erman, and part of Laurigen.

"I ſhall remain there until circumſtances force me to fall back, or allow me to advance having no longer behind ſuch horrible defiles as I have paſſed and the power of retreating by Fulde, along the Upper Lahn.

"I am going to examine the movements of the enemy, and you may be aſſured that, if circumſtances permit me I ſhall march againſt them, but not in the country that I have traverſed, at leaſt without your formal order, for I ſhall always think it extremely dangerous to place an army in ſuch defiles, without having a large body in reſerve, which might protect its retreat, and keep the inhabitants of the country in order.

"As I have been ſeven days without being able to communicate with any body, I do not know what I paſſed towards Mayence or elſewhere. I have only this day received a letter from general Moreau, of the 25th, who announces his ſucceſs on the 24th over the enemy.

"General Ernouf, who had received a diſpatch from you for me, was obliged to deſtroy it, that it might not fall into the hands of the enemy. I think the ſucceſs of general Moreau will recall prince Charles to the Danube, and I ſhall profit by it.

"I have the honor to inform you, that notwithſtanding the great difficulties I have ſuſtained in my march, I have not loſt a ſingle piece of artillery. You will alſo learn, no doubt with pleaſure, that although the army has been compelled to fight ſix days together, in front and rere, the troops have not teſtified the ſmalleſt chagrin."

"JOURDAN."

General Jourdan to the executive directory.

Himelburg, Sept. 4.

"I have the honor to inform you, that the enemy paſſed the Mein on the 2nd, and marched againſt Wurtzburg. The garriſon there, being doubtleſs unable to remain in the town, retired to the citadel.

"I reſolved on an attack upon the 3d as well to deliver, if poſſible, the garriſon of Wurtzburg, as to endeavor to compel the enemy to repaſs the Mein.

"The enemy had in like manner formed the deſign to attack me, they wanted to turn me on the left as I did them on the right, that I might ſecure Dettlebach and Kitzengen, their two points of retreat.

"The action began at eight in the morning. The enemy with a numerous cavalry appeared to be ſuperior on my left wing, and threatened to cut it off. I thought it neceſſary to run the hazard of a charge of the cavalry, which might procure us the greateſt advantages.

"The charge was commanded by the general of diviſion Bonnaud, and was executed with ſo much courage, that the enemy's corps were worſted, and ſuffered, but freſh troops advancing, our cavalry were ſurpriſed and retired. General Bonnaud and I rallied them, but it became impoſſible to attempt a ſecond charge, the enemy receiving freſh troops every inſtant.

"I have therefore been obliged to retire. The retreat has been effected happily enough.

"JOURDAN."

DEFEAT OF THE FRENCH.

We ſtop the preſs to ſtate that accounts have juſt been received by government of the defeat of the French army under the command of general Jourdan. It is ſaid, that the two contending armies were engaged for ſeveral days ſucceſſively; that on the 21ſt a moſt obſtinate engagement took place, when the French loſt 5000 men killed, and 2000 taken priſoners. It is ſaid that the French are ſo ſurrounded by the Auſtrian army as to render their retreat totally impracticable.

Baltimore, Oct. 10.

Yeſterday arrived here the ſloop N. S. del Rozario, alias El Martillo, capt. Don Carlos Valois, 32 days from La Guayra. Off cape Hatteras, ſpoke a brig from the Mole, bound to Norfolk, who informed that WAR WAS ACTUALLY DECLARED BY THE SPANIARDS AGAINST ENGLAND—that a frigate had arrived at the Mole, which had taken two large Spaniſh prizes on her paſſage and ſent in there: and that all the Spaniſh veſſels in the harbor had been taken poſſeſſion by the Engliſh.

"When thou ſeeſt a man of underſtanding, get thee hemmed unto him, and let thy feet wear the ſteps of his door."

YES, in a world of weak ones, it is our duty, it will be our pleaſure—and, the ſelfiſh generation, it will be for our intereſt too to yield favors to the wiſe, and bread to men of underſtanding. Our patronage will be but rarely exerciſed, and few will be the loaves for thoſe men to devour, for I looked and lo! they are a ſolitary and ſcanty band unobtrulive, like the hermit of the mountains.

But though the "man of underſtanding" is rarely to be ſeen, and, though it would profit us much under the ſun, to gather the honey of his lips, ſuch is our perverſeneſs, our folly, or our fate, that untrodden by our "feet," we ſuffer the moſs to gather on the "ſteps of his door."

My ſtudy window overlooks the houſe of an eminent phyſician; he underſtands accurately the nice movements of the human machine; he is a botaniſt, ſkilled in the properties of plants, the cedar of Libanus, and the "hyſſop on the wall," he has meditated the ſyſtem of nature, and he has tried many of the proceſſes of arts. I ſee him turning over the volumes which contain the ſecrets of medicine, and I hear him deſcribe ſkilfully the various modes to blunt, or to extract the arrows of diſeaſe. But alas! my careleſs countrymen, "all this availeth him nothing." The blind, the maim and the halt, of our villages, refuſe bread to this "man of underſtanding," and meaſure their wheat in brimming buſhels, to the quack who cannot diſtinguiſh a fever from the gout who applies his nippers to a wart, and thinks he extracts a cancer, who poiſons you with mercurials, curdles your blood with calomel, drenches you with enfeebling teas, and as a wit once expreſſed it, preſcribes draughts to natural they declare neither for the patient nor malady. If the royal preacher, in whoſe writings I find my text, had ſeen whole villages clamorous at the midnight hour, for a foetid quack, and his powders, and "paſſing by on the other ſide," when they ſee the regular practitioner, he would have forgotten, for a moment, all the wiſdom of the eaſt, and, like provoked PETER in the goſpel, would "curſe and ſweat" at ſuch egregious folly.

Thoſe of my readers, who will gladly turn out of the paths of error, when they hear a warning voice behind them, "here is a better path, walk therein," will I hope learn the value of "men of underſtanding."—When their value is once known—the "ſteps of their door" will be hourly attended. They will teach us how to think, to ſpeak, and to act. If divines they will not attempt to perſuade that Heaven cannot be taken but by the violence of Scotch divinity. If lawyers, they will, not demand exhibitant fees to ſupport a rotten cauſe. If phyſicians, you will hear them utter no words more cramp than "Temperance" and "Regimen."—If moraliſts, they will mark the difference between wiſdom and cunning, they will point out the weakneſs as well as wickedneſs of thoſe petty frauds, thoſe iniquitous contracts, thoſe tricking arts of jockeyſhip, ſo frequent and diſgraceful among a rural people, where nought but ſimplicity ſhould be found. To ſuch divines you will chearfully vote a more ample annual ſallary than ſixty pounds, and you will receive in exchange that wiſdom, which we are aſſured in a volume of the higheſt authority, is better than rubies.

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS his moſt gracious majeſty has been pleaſed to grant his royal leave of abſence to his excellency major general SIMCOE, lieutenant governor, and commander in chief of this province, and to appoint me to adminiſter the government of the ſaid province: And whereas it is neceſſary for the peace and good government of the ſaid province, that all his majeſty's officers within the ſame ſhould continue in their ſeveral offices and employments, I have thought fit by and with the advice of his majeſty's council, to iſſue this proclamation, hereby authoriſing the ſaid officers to continue in their ſaid offices and employments, of which all perſons concerned are required to take notice and govern themſelves accordingly.

GIVEN under my hand and ſeal at arms, at Niagara, this eleventh day of September, in the year of our Lord one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety-ſix, and of his majeſty's reign, the thirty-ſixth.

PROCLAMATION.

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

JOHN GRAVES SIMCOE, Eſquire,
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, and Major General of his Majeſty's Forces,
and ſo forth.

To ſuch as are deſirous to ſettle on the lands of the Crown in the province of Upper-Canada.

WHEREAS by a proclamation bearing date at Quebec, the ſeventh day of February, 1792, the terms and conditions on which perſons might be entitled, who were deſirous of ſettling on the lands of the crown in his majeſty's province of Upper Canada, were promulgated and made known; and it was, by the eighth article in particula declared, that the reſpective patentees were to take the eſtates granted to them ſeverally, free of quit rent, and of any other expences, than ſuch fees as are or may be allowed to be demanded and received, by the different officers concerned in paſſing the patents and recording the ſame, to be ſtated in a tabl, authoriſed and eſtabliſhed by the government, and publicly fixed up in the ſeveral offices of the ſecretary of the council, of the ſurveyor general and of the ſecretary of the province.

And whereas it appears to be no longer expedient or neceſſary that any grant or ſurvey of lands ſhall hereafter run out or marked by his majeſty's ſurveyor deputy ſurveyor, at the expence of the crown: Now KNOW YE, that I have thought fit by and with the advice of the executive council, to reviſe ſo much of the eighth article of the ſaid proclamation as declare that, "the reſpective patentees are to take the eſtates granted to them ſeverally free of quit rent, and all other expences than ſuch fees as are or may be allowed to be demanded, and received by the different officers concerned in paſſing the patent, and recording the ſame," and to declare that in addition to the fees eſtabliſhed by government on all grants of land, the reſpective petitioners will, in future, on the receipt of their patents be charged with the expences of ſurvey in proportion to the ext nt of their patents, which will be ſtated in and added to the table of fees, as is au horiſed and eſtabliſhed by the government, and publicly fixed up in the ſeveral offices of the clerk of the council, the ſurveyor general and of the ſecretary of the province.

GIVEN under my hand and ſeal in the town of YORK, the firſt day of July, in the thirty ſixth year of his majeſty's reign, and in the year of our Lord, one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety ſix.

Message from the executive directory to the council of five hundred. Aug. 25.

"Citizens and legislators,

"The directory can no longer conceal from you the afflicting particulars which they receive from all quarters, of the situation of the troops, spread over the interior of the republic.

"For several months past their constancy has been put to the proof by the most painful privations: and while they have deplored their distress, the directory have more than once admired the resignation with which the French soldiers knew how to forget their wants, when those of the country are recalled to their minds.

"So long as the directory could flatter themselves with a prospect of a melioration of the finances which could put an end to a situation so critical, they sustained the courage of the troops by hope, and studiously concealed their alarms; but the evils have become too great to be any longer disguised; however painful this revelation may be, it is no longer possible to withhold it. The present alarming circumstances demand it.

"The pay of the troops, that sacred debt of the republic to the citizens who devote their lives to her service, has not been discharged for several months; notwithstanding the solicitations of the government the treasury could not afford the necessary supply—it had not the means. And contracts are suspended from this inability of the public treasury to fulfil their engagement; the supplies of the provisions are exhausted, and not a hope of recruiting them remains; in almost every part they have been obliged to have recourse to requisitions; but this measure, the employment of which is always fatal, has only supplied very insufficient resources, and it is particularly dangerous in those departments in which civil war has made such ravages as will require a long time to repair.

"In several parts of the republic, the subsistance of the troops has been exposed to failure—the distribution has rarely been made in the proportion determined by the law, and has often been wholly suppressed for several days; the nourishment of the troops, when moving from place to place, which hitherto has only been supported by the advances made by persons in power, is on the point of failing in all the departments—Lastly, and this confession is the most afflicting to the directory to make, in several of the hospitals they have been obliged to refuse the sick soldier the food that was necessary for the re establishment of his health.

"Discouraged by the disorganization of all parts of the service, the agents abandon their posts, to escape the numerous complaints that are preferred, and which they are unable to answer. In many places money destined for other purposes has been taken by force from the public chests to supply the wants of troops, and those illegal proceedings have found their excuse in the imperious law of necessity. Every day couriers arrive to bring to the directory and war minister the news of some new calamity, or the dread of some new danger: The directory conjure you, citizens representatives, to fix your whole attention on the afflicting picture which they now present to you, and to devise some means for supplying the public treasury with the necessary resources for the subsistence of the troops of the interior; the most rigid economy shall be observed in the expenditure of such funds, and the returns which the directory are preparing, will soon demonish the expences and the demands. The armies which are out of France, no sounded by victory, no longer occupy the thoughts of the government, except by the recital of their successes; all their solicitude then must be directed to the troops of the interior, who have claims equally strong on the gratitude of the country and who can only obtain from the country, the relief which she owes to her defenders.

PROCLAMATION

Of the executive directory relative to the events that occurred during the night of Aug. 28 and 29.

29 August.

Let true patriots, let the friends of order rejoice!

It is in vain that anarchy and royalism unite their efforts to shake the firebrands of diffcord, and to dissolve the republican government. Their endeavors shall be fruitless.

Some hundred villains, transported with rage at being prevented from exercising their robbery and their domination, no longer hoping to excite the people to insurrection, but by alarming them for liberty, have last night spread throught the streets badges of aristocracy, and stuck up royalist proclamations. Armed with sabres, guns and pistols, they meanwhile scoured the various parts of this great commune. They attempted to excite alarm by the sound of fire arms.—They every where exclaimed that the royalists had rallied to massacre all the patriots. They invited the people to their assistance. They imagined that in the midst of this disorder, they should save their guilty accomplices who had escaped at this very moment to the place where the legislative body had convoked the high court of justice. They were then to have indulged themselves in all the horrors which they had conceived in deviling the conspiracy of Babeuf.

But the people acquainted with their true interests showed only their attachment to the republic, and the constitution by which it is secured. They destroyed all the badges of despotism which the most perfidious cunning, had disseminated. They bestowed upon the monsters, who again wished to open the career of guilt, all the horror and contempt which they deserved. Confiding in a government with the real and sincere intention of which they are acquainted, all the citizens remained in the most profound tranquility.

Thanks to the wisdom of the people, and to the courage and good conduct of the troops, to the indefatigable zeal of the magistrates appointed to watch over the public security, and that of the brave republican generals, the tranquility of Paris was preserved, and the designs of anarchy suppressed. They all have a right to the public gratitude.

Let the enemies of France at length discover the inutility of their efforts to unlead the mass of the people. Let its friends rally round the constitution which secures at once our repose and our liberty, and let them second the efforts of a government resolved to maintain it with equal firmness against the attempts of all parties.

(Signed)
Revellere Lepaux, president,
By the executive directory,
La Garde, secretary.

Authentic particulars of the conspiracy which broke out at

PARIS

IN THE NIGHT OF THE 26TH OF AUGUST.

THIS time the Jacobins would not take the trouble of putting on the mask. They ranged themselves under arms, and hoisted the standard to convince at last theunbelieving, who with complaisance insisted upon delivering France anew into their hands.

It was not without reason that the most insolent joy manifested itself the whole of yesterday in the countenance of the monstrous crew.

A numerous crowd assembled yesterday in the tippling houses of Vaugirard; several airs were sung there, which the terrorists would wish to disgrace, by appropriating them to themselves. Many southern faces were remarked there. Towards 11 o'clock at night these wandering bands united in different points, and suddenly marched towards the cape of Grenelle, where there are between 2, and 300 troops.

The Jacobin patrols began by killing some of the centinels who approached them, and introduced themselves into the camp, amidst the shouts of vive la republique—Down with the Chouans! They first requested to fraternize, declaring all they demanded was the re-establishment of the constitution of 1793, the overthrow of the new tyrants, and the new third of deputies, to render the soldiers as happy as they were under Robespierre.

In the meantime the number of rebels increased from all sides, and might consist of between 14, and 1500. They were armed with pistols, swords, sticks, some musquets, and provided with powder and ball for the fusils which they expected to seize. The dragoons of the camp were the first awakened. As soon as they saw some of the assailants endeavoring to advance to the stands of arms, and park of artillery, they called out "To arms!" They mounted their horses almost naked, and without taking time to dress themselves. That instant the alarm was spread over the camp. The generale was beaten.

The dragoons, the first, commanded by the brave Malo, fell upon the rebels, who in the beginning oppoled a warm resistance. The latter killed some soldiers, and mortally wounded five; but soon they were surrounded, and purfued from all sides; two of them, at least remained dead on the field of battle, between 90 and 100 were taken prisoners and conducted to L'Ecole Militaire. Among this number are many well known terrorists, inhabitants of the fouth, members of the revolutionary committee, and the commander in chief of the banditti, with two other generals, cashiered for having committed horrors in La Vendee.

The troops perfectly distinguished themselves on this occasion. They rejected with horror the perfidious words of the affailants. The dragoons especially fignalized themselves. This very morning the rebels were ftill purfuing, flying across the fields, and into the forest of Mendon.

Malo commanding the dragoons, displayed the greateft municipality, and the utmoft prefence of mind; furrounded in his tent by eight ruffians, he escaped their daggers, flew to mount his horse, and contributed much to put the rebels to flight. The brave Malo fought at Jemappe and Fleurus. After the 31ft of May, he was out-lawed twenty months, for refifting tyranny.

The public tranquility has not been disturbed even in the interior of Paris. All the efforts of the terrorists were directed against the camp, which they hoped to seduce. It is faid, that a military committee has just been eftablished to judge the great the number of rebels under arreft."

This account, which has been variously reprefented, but the particulars of which we have from the mouth of one of the chiefs of the camp, and highly agitated all minds this morning, but without producing any other emotion at Paris than that of the liveliest indignation against the perpetual enemies of all order who are no sooner discomfited than they begin some new plots. Nothing can equal their fury but the unchangeable fteadinefs of their confederates, and their appologifts.

SEPTEMBER 12.

The 132 ruffians taken, arms in hand, on the 10th September, were conveyed from L'Ecole Militaire to the temple, where they will be detained till they appear before the military committee, which is to judge them. The principals among them are, Lay, ex-adjutant general of the army of the Alps; Firon, ex general, decreed in a ftate of accufation in the affair of Batœuf, and co-operator of Louvet in the Sentinelle; Saunier, editor of the journal of L'Ami du Peuple, who only goes by the fictitious name of Lebois; Simon, prefident of an anarchical club at Verfailles, formerly a dragoon; Vaufier, a painter, refident in the fection Des Amis de la Patrie; Faillieux, of the fame fection, Sans Souci, ex adjutant general of the army of the Weft; Brucher, Bouiton, Lebreton, and Cobert. Members of the revolutionary committee of the Sections Battes des Moulins; Roffinol, brother to the general of that name, who is with Barœuf in the prifons of Vendome, and the ex-members of the convention, Huguet and Javogues, the former confined in the caftle of Ham, and a conftitutional bifhop; the latter one of the ravagers of the unhappy city of Lyons, and a member of the committee of general fafety under Robefpierre, celebrated in the annals of jacobinifm by his demoniacal edition againft Couthon, whom he accufed of moderatifm and weaknefs.

When the news of the attack of the Banditti reached the directory, Rewbell, Carnot and Letourneur, took up arms. It is not faid what Barras did. The minifter of police, in the report he has made that though the majority of thofe wretches cried "Long live the conftitution of 1793!" yet fome of them faid there ought to be a king; that there would be no tranquility without a king. In feveral ftreets they called out, vive Orleans!

NIAGARA, November 30, 1796.

That the French are excellent at bearing misfortune is a fact we cannot controvert; that they are alfo volatile, and thifty in their paffions, is as well eftablifhed; for who but a verfatile genius can frame the defponding meffage of the 25th of Auguft, and fo foon as four days after fhift his feelings to thofe of the proclamation? Thefe two pieces of compofition are perfect traits of their national character, and regifterd, perhaps, on oppofite pages in their book of contrarieties. To have access to thofe curious repofitaries of parliamentary intelligence will, for ages, afford fubjects of difquifition for every genius;—having whatever is of horror, there is an extenfive field for a Butler, a Cervantes, &c. True is it that their meafures have been attended by fuccefs unparaleled in hiftory fince the time of Alexander; but fuccefs is not always inftruc; witnefs the failure of Jourdan in his windmill expedition: now the right conduct of a cauſe to be inferred from its temporary profperity, nor even final iffue, for thefe depend on cafualty. The ways of Providence are myfterious, and that events follow in regular fucceffion, one giving rife to another, we cannot trace their firft nor end. To reafon on incidents is valuable, and delightful; tho' our reafoning be loft in the refearch. The good are left to fevere depreffion, and the unrighteous ride in the current of profperity; the fcene fhifts, and perplexes the enquiry, Why, or wherefore are thefe thus or fo?

The London Star of Sept. 19 ftates, that a courier paffed through Straſburgh Auguſt 30, from Berlin, fuppofed to contain pacific propofitions.

That it was thought at Frankfort Auguſt 30, that prince Charles, fatisfied with having driven Jourdan from the Upper Palatinate, will now direct his army againſt general Moreau.

That a great part of the French troops near Mentz, had marched through Frankfort on the 3d of September to reinforce Jourdan's army.

That all the French troops on the left bank of the Rhine, and the whole of the army of the North, had marched to reinforce Jourdan, on the 4th of September 50,000 of which were to increafe the befieging army before Mentz; and the peafants near that city were in requifition to open trenches.

That Ehrenbrieften was, Sep. 4, on the eve of being attacked in form.

A LESSON FOR THE LADIES.

THE fun aroſe, the morn was gay,
The lark had fung his mattin lay;
And Flora deck'd the opening flower,
In beauteous hue of Eden's bower:
When bending o'er the painted beds,
Where thoufands rare'd their vermil heads,
The lovely Myra, charming fair,
Pluck'd off the beft in each parterre:

"Go fweeteft buds, the prattler cry'd,
Dreft in the robe of variant dye,
Grace Colin's breaft with nature's pride,
Feaft the pleaſd ſenſe, and charm the eye.

Spread to his fight, your richeſt bloom,
Opp all your beauties full to view,
Go waft Arabia's ſweet perfume,
In od'rous ſcent and fragrant hue.

A preſent from his Myra's hand,
Shall live in ſmiles that never die:
The flow'ret, bound by friendſhip's band,
Shall drink the dew of Colin's eye."

But ah! tranſplanted from their beds,
The lilies droop their mowy heads;
The roſe's crimſon inſtant fades,
And all that pleaſd, ſo bright, ſo gay,
Like beauty mid defetted glades,
In one ſhort moment meets decay.

No more the bud in vernal green,
Flings fofthels on the roſeat ſcene;
No more its bloſſom to the eye,
Preſent the turſit of ruby dye;
No more the lily's rich perfume,
With odour fill the vaulted room:
A deadly pale ſucceeds the white,
Nor roſe, nor lily gives delight.

Ye fair, attend the moral ſtrain,
Nor let theſe flow'rets preach in vain;
Not eloquence by faſte refin'd,
In thus inſtruct the ingenuous mind;
Nor all the ſons of wit and art,
Read better leſſtures to the heart.

Fair as the lily's virgin face,
Pure emblem of unſpotted grace;
Where not a ſombre tint is ſeen,
No, not amid the em'rald green:
Bright as the roſe, while morning flush,
Faint emulates i modeſt blush,
Where riſing glory, ſpeaks a day,
Of ſtill encreaſing, brighter ray;
Such is the dawn of every fair,
When opening firſt on life's parterre;
Whilſt ſainted honor watching round,
Secures the yet unfulfilled ground:
Whilſt anxious angels vigil keep,
Nor ſuffer virtue once to ſleep;
Whilſt friendly ſylphs without repoſe,
Now guard the lily, now the roſe.

But ſhould their charge unhappy rove,
Amid the wilds of lawleſs love;
Or if for vice's gilded maze,
They leave fair virtue's peaceful ways;
Or, lur'd away by ſyren ſong,
Break from the right, and chuſe the wrong;
Their lilies fade, their roſes die,
No more they charm th'obſervant eye,
And every friend to virtue's fway,
Seraph and mankind mourn the day.

MORAL SENTIMENTS.

AMONG the vices practiſed by mankind, that of swearing is not the leaſt; it admits of no excuſe, no provocation is ſufficient to juſtify the crime; nothing can extenuate to this abhorrent practice but a ſordid mind, incapable of expreſſing itſelf in terms of manly decency, and for want of genius advert to this dirty ſubterfuge to fill up the emptineſs of wit and underſtanding which the prophane ſwearer eſteems eſſentiſl to his importance. If man did but conſider with what contempt they appear in the eyes of rational minds when belching from their poluted throats thoſe infernal imprecations which are ſuited only to the language of a Demon, I am confident it muſt check the horrid practice; much leſs did they realize the abominable inſult they offer to the ſacred majeſty of God in thus aſſronting his holineſs, they would ſhudder at their awful inſolence—yet, impious and execrable as this cuſtom is, how common, how faſhionable is the vice, the dregs of ſociety combine to ſoften the accurſed deſign, to ſubvert a decent communication of a rational idea in terms of modeſty by ſubſtituting a catalogue of blaſphemous epithets in ſupport of every trifling aſſertion in common converſation!

A WORD TO PARENTS AND MASTERS.

"Train up a child in the way he ſhould go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

TAKE Soloman's advice, and if you deſign your child for blackguards, begin in ſeaſon. Let your children from their infancy hear and learn curſing and ſwearing; ſo that by four or five years of age, they will boldly call father an old devil and mother a b—h. Let them never be croſſed and reſtrained in any way, for fear they ſhould cry: when the little fellow ſteals ſlily into a neighbor's garden or orchard, and rob the trees, ſpeak very gently to them and ſay, don't do ſo; and if they laugh in your face, take it as a proof of wit; ſmile and call them, young dogs. In this way you will make them lads of ſpirit, and by the time they are fifteen years of age, they will be well fitted to perform great feats in the dark ſuch as turning over horſe blocks, rolling carts into the ſtreets, carrying ſign-poſts about town on their backs, and more eſpecially for cutting to pieces the vines of their neighbors' gardens, ſtealing green pears and watermellons, and other wonderful atchievments in which they do themſelves no good, and others much injury. This is the way to make young rogues and old fools—and children never depart from ſuch ways as theſe.

From a late Magazine.

IN our intercourse with each other, the most trifling occurrences often furnish the most useful lessons for our instruction. The cantingence of a moment may unfold to us truths more salutary than the laboured volumes of ages. In converfing the other evening with a number of ladies, the difference of disposition which perevailed, the sprightly sociability of some, and the silent reserve of others led me to a comparative view of the dangers which sometimes arise from extreme loquacity and taciturnity. To determine which is the most dangerous extreme may not be entirely useless, especially to those young circles, where we seldom observe an even medium of cheerfulness. A loquacious disposition we generally imagine indicates either vacancy of mind or incoherency of thought; and indeed there appears to be ground for the supposition; for while the tongue is in continual motion, it is morally certain that the mind can find but little time to reflect, and without reflection it is equally certain that the store of its ideas must be scanty, and wildly disordered. There are other inconveniences befide this, which I think are felt with equal severity. Great talkers are seldom if ever attended to: we either expect they exaggerate or utter palpable falsehoods. Many very interesting observations, consequently pass unnoticed; and a constant humming noise at length looses all effect upon the ear. In the too unguarded indulgence of this very dangerous habit, they will often utter what they cannot recall, and what, though innocently uttered, expofes them to the severest pangs of conscious remorse. In avoiding, however, this train of evils, there is some danger of running into the opposite extreme. And though the dangerous consequences of taciturnity may not be equally numerous, there are some which we should all wish to shun. Social intercourse was certainly the very first design of our existence; the free and innocent exercise of our communicative powers, the principal object of our happiness. A tongue tied drone not only therefore defeats the end of his being, but in fact is a stranger to some of the most refined enjoyments of life. He may glory in his own imaginary wisdom, he may now and then feel a tranfient gleam of joy from his private contemplation, but without an intercourse with others, he his ignorant of the greatest of humin pleasures, that of communicating as well as receiving happiness. To some his taciturnity may carry the appearance of profound wisdom. To the discerning, with no other proof than a specious outside, it will wear the appearance of ignorance, wilfulness or vanity. We may not a while feel afraid of the secret weapons which may lie concealed, but the moment we have discovered them, our fear will give way to contempt, instead of courting an acquaintance, we shall put on the same forum, & reserve ourselves. Neither the very loquacious, or very reserved, meet with general approbation. The one may enjoy a compound of pleasure and pain, while the other, conscious of either, may brood over his own insignificance. A medium in this as in every thing, may be best. Still we should find it less dangerous, if we cannot reach this intermediate point, to err by being too reserved than too loquacious; for as most. Bruyerre very justly observes, "we rarely repent of saying too little—frequently of saying too much."

PHILO.

NIAGARA, December 7, 1796.

About 8 o'clock on Saturday evening last the dwelling house of William Jarvis, esq. of this town, was discovered to be on fire, which had made such progress as to render all attempts to extinguish it almost abortive; notwithstanding which, the assembling of the people was so speedy, and their exertions so well directed that the province records, the most valuable house furniture and the right wing of the buildings are saved.—The conduct of several, of Miss Vanderlieb in particular, in rescuing two of Mr. Jarvis' children, is spoken of with much applause; and credit in general is due. We are authorised to mention with gratitude the friendly exertions of the officers of the United States garrison, and other strangers who rendered essential service.

We hear from Albany that two houses belonging to Mr. John M'Donald, printer & bookseller of that city, formerly the Rev'd J. M'Donald, were lately consumed by fire, with all their contents of books, printing materials, &c. The public much regret the misfortune of a worthy man, and an able and instructive editor and publisher of the Albany Chronicle. We are also informed that considerable damage had been sustained by fire lately at Quebec.

M'EWEN, who stands indicted for the murder of the late acting chief of the Massasaga tribe of Indians, will take his trial at the next court of general goal delivery, which is to be holden in this town, on Tuesday next.

We hear from New-York, that a French fleet lately arrived there, in consequence of which wheat hastily rose from 7s6 to 17s per bushel; but since their departure, we learn that a demand ceasing, and from the plentifulness of that article, the price fell to almost the former.

A CARD,

Mr. Jarvis takes the earliest opportunity of returning in this public manner, his most sincere thanks to the gentlemen and others, who so generously exerted themselves in the preservation of his family and property, at the fire on Saturday evening last. He assures every individual that the uncommon solicitude shown on the occasion, has made the most lasting impressions on his feelings.

He will thank those whose goodness induced them to carry articles to their houses, to inform where to send for them.

Newark, 5th Dec.

Retrospective.

The following, taken from the London gazette, is the most authentic and particular account we can give of the beginning of the late success over the French army in the Upper Palatinate:—

DOWNING-STREET, Aug. 6, 1796.

A dispatch of which the following is a copy, has been received from col. Crauford by the right honorable lord Grenville, his majesty's principal secretary of state for the foreign department, dated head-quarters of his royal highness the archduke Charles of Austria, Feibach; near Stutgard, July 9, 1796.

My lord,

I HAVE the honor to inform your lordship, that the archduke, upon receiving intelligence that the enemy were marching towards Stutgard; with a view to cut off his royal highness's direct communication with general Frolich and the prince of Conde, moved from his camp near Plorzheim, on the 14th inst. to Vahingen, upon the river Entz, where he remained the 15th and 16th. On the 17th, as the enemy continued their march towards Stutgard, his royal highness moved to Senwebertingen, and on the 18th to Ludwigsberg, having detached two small corps to occupy the bridges over the Neckar at Canstadt, Unter Turkenen, and Estingen, in order to cover his left flank, and secure the great road from Stutgard to Ulm, by which lays its communication with his principal magazines.

In the afternoon of the 18th the enemy arrived at Stutgard, and attempted to dislodge the Austrian advanced posts, which were placed in such a manner as to command the roads leading from the city to Ludwigsberg, Canstadt.

The attack commenced about four o'clock, and was directed with much violence against two distinct corps; that on the left posted near Canstadt, under the command of gen. Baillet; and that on the right, between Canstadt and Fayerbach, under prince John of Litchtenstein. On the heights of Canstandt the enemy were repulsed three times, but they succeeded in making themselves masters of the commanding ground on the prince of Litchtenstein's right flank, as he had not troops enough to occupy in sufficient force. However his highness determined to wait till the last moment for the arrival of gen. Devay, who was marching to his support with another division of the troops that formed the advanced posts of the army. In the mean time the enemy gained so much ground, that even their musquetry fire along the front and on the right flank crossed on the prince of Lichtenstein's ranks, and it was with the greatest difficulty he could keep them from falling upon his rear. At this critical moment gen. Devay appeared, and defeated that part of the enemy's troops who where in possession of the heights on the prince of Lichtenstein's right. This gave his highness an opportunity of attacking in front, which he did with a degree of success that fully rewarded the exemplary firmness displayed by himself and his small corps during the whole of the affair; and general Baillet having maintained his ground on the left, notwithstanding the repeated efforts to dislodge him the action terminated, towards nine at night, in favor of the Austrians.

Their loss amounted to 900 men; that of the enemy was certainly much greater.

On the 19th his royal highness crossed the Neckar, and encamped at Feiback, for the purpose of covering more effectually his communication with Ulm.

The contengent troops of the circle of Suabia having quitted the position of Sults, on the Neckar, and retired behind Kochengen, the prince of Conde and gen. Frolich, who had united at Vilingen and were still there on the 17th, will by this time have been obliged most probably to fall back.

Gens Wartensleben withdrew the garrison of Frankfort on the 14th inst. at that place is not capable of defence; and he arraged with gen. Jourdan a partial armistice for two days, to give time for carrying off what still remained there belonging to the Austrians. On the 16th finding that the enemy were detaching round right, through the bishoprick of Fulda, his excellency continued his retreat towards Wurtzburg, in the neighborhood of which place he was with his whole force, when the last accounts were from him; so that Wurtzburgh, on the Mein, Canstadt and Ellingen on the Neckar, and Sigmaringen on the Danube, may be considered at this moment as nearly the principal points of the Austrian position.

I have the honor to be, &c.

C. CRAUFORD.

Whitehall, Aug. 3. The king has been pleased to appoint lieut. col, Charles Green to be lieu. governor of the Island of St. Vincent.

DIED]—In this town, of a contusion in the ribs, which he had received from a fall, ARANT BRADT, esquire, a worthy citizen.

The season of the year is arrived when the frosts have closed the avenues thro' which we receive our foreign political information, and which gives a relish to the enjoyment of a social friend by a warm fire side: to amend the deficiency of the former, and to highten the pleasures of the latter, the gazette is conformed to the circumstances and assumes the dress of a weekly magazine, in which we hope not to be unentertaining to our friends, whose various tastes and humors, our endeavours are to gratify with A DISH OF ALL SORTS, calculated to instruct while it affords pleature to the sense, by always keeping in view the object VIRTUE, tho' we point to it by various modes and thro' different paths. Should we perchance ridicule a favorite vice or foible, it shall not be with gall, nor shall personality bring up to view the man, while we harrow his fault. To make vice and folly ridiculous even to themselves, is the duty we aim to perform, and the unfortunate possessors, if such there be, shall only on their own confession be pronounced guilty; and to keep their own secrets, all that is necessary to them is passing as clearly as many of their less guilty neighbors. We dispise personality; but we have a right to attack folly and immorality in whatever shape they may appear:—they being no appendage of a gentleman, are not intitled to the civility due to the rank of such. And while we chastise it is only with a view and a hope of reforming.

A MORAL THOUGHT.

THROUGH groves sequester'd, dark and still Low vales, and mossy cells among,
In silent paths the careless rill,
Which languid murmurs, steals along.

A while it plays with circling sweep,
And ling'ring leaves its native plain;
Then pours impet'uous down the steep,
And mingles with the boundless main.

O let my years thus devious glide,
Through silent scenes obscurely calm
Nor wealth nor strife polute the tide,
Nor honor's sanguinary palm.

When labor tires, and pleasure palls,
Still let the stream untroubled be,
As down the step of age it falls,
And mingles with eternity.

FORTSCHIFF.

Just as this paper was prepared for the press, we were favored with papers from Albany down to the 18th inst. which has occasioned our delay, in order to lay a sketch of the most important articles before our readers: which are.

That on the 6th of Octr. the new parliament met, his majesty open the session by a speech from the throne, in which he early signifies his having taken measures to bring about a peace; that a commissioner was about to be sent to Paris for that business, and that the prospect of affecting so desirable an end was now flattering.

Bristol, Sep. 24. News from Jourdan's army; via Holland, is as late as the 9th inst. who was then pursued by the archduke, the to Rhine, where he attempted on the 8th to make a stand on its right bank; he received another attack, and experienced a complete defeat, insomuch that his army is supposed to be nearly annihilated. On the 9th he crossed the Rhine with only a small attendance. The Austrians were in possession of Frankfort.

Two different Dutch papers of the same date agree that Moreau had also experienced a complete defeat at Ingolstadt, and that a victory had been gained at the Tyrol over the French under Massena.—Those are also confirmed by Hamburgh papers and letters from Cologne.

Letters from Leghorn affirm the death of Buonaparte.

From New-York we are happy to learn that his excellency lord Dorchester, lady and family had safely arrived at Portsmouth.

PETER PINDAR.

[Merry lovers of PUNCH are requested to read the following picturesque lines, and apply the MORAL.]

TO A FLY TAKEN OUT OF A

PUNCH BOWL.

AH! poor intoxicated little knave,
Now senseless floating on the fragrant wave;
Why not content alone thy cakes to munch?
Dearly thou pay'st for buzzing round the bowl;
Lost to the world, thou busy sweet-lipp'd soul,
Thus death, as well as pleasure, dwells with punch.

Now let me take thee out, and moralize:—
Thus 'tis with mortals as it is with flies,
For ever hank'ring after pleasure's cup;
Though fate, with all his legions, be at hand,
To hasten the draught of Circe can't withstand,
But in gues every nose—they must, will sup.

Mad are the passions as a colt untam'd,
When prudence mounts their backs to them will ride
They sting, they snort, they foam, they rise inflam'd
Insisting on their own sole will to wild.

Gadsbud my buzzing friend! thou art not dead,
The fates, so kind, have not yet snapt'd thy thread:—
By heav'ns thou moy'st a leg, and now its brother,
And kicking, lo, again thou mov'st another!

And now the little drunken eyes unclose;
And now thou feelest for thy little nose,
And, finding it, thou rubbest thy two hands;
Much as to say, "I'm glad I'm here again:"
An well thou may'st rejoice—'tis very plain,
That near wert thou to death's unsocial lands.

And now thou rollest on thy back about,
Happy to find thy self alive, no doubt—
Now turnest, on the table making rings;
Now crawling, forming a wet track,
Now shaking the rich liq'or from thy back,
Now fluttering necter from thy silken wings.

Now standing on thy head, thy strength to find;
And poking out thy small long legs behind,
And now thy pinions dost thou briskly ply,
Preparing now to leave me, farewell fly!
Go, join thy brothers on yon sunny board,
And rapture to thy family afford.
There wilt thou meet a mistress, or a wife,
That saw thee, drunk, drop senseless in the stream;
Who gave perhaps the wide resounding scream
—And now sets groaning for thy precious life.

Yes, go and carry comfort to thy friends,
And wisely tell them thy imprudence ends.
Let buns and sugar for the future charm;
These will delight, and feed, and work no harm:
Whilst punch, the grinning merry imp of sin,
Invites the unwary wanderer to kiss.
Smiles in his face as though he meant him bliss,
Then, like an Alligator, drags him in.

From a late ENGLISH PAPER.

The following was printed at a time when a bill was under consideration, to prevent clandestine marriages. They were intented as salutary clauses to be added to the bill, in order to prevent unhappy marriages; and the penalties to be inflicted on the delinquents were as follow:—

WHEN two young thoughtless fools, having no visible way to maintain themselves, or any thing to begin the world with, yet resolve to marry and be miserable, let it be deemed petit larceny. If a younger brother marry an old woman, purely for a maintenance, let it be called felo desesaundo.—When a rich old fellow marries a young girl in her bloom, I would have it made felony without benefit of clergy. When two old creatures, that can hardly hear one another; but haugh and cough night and day, and can propose not the least comfort to themselves, yet will marry to be more miserable, let them be deemed non compes, and sent to a mad-house. When a lady marries her coachman, and a gentleman his cookmaid (especially if there be children by a former marriage) let them both be transported for 14 years. When a man has had one devil of a wife and has buried her, and will marry a second, let him be brought in felo de se, and buried in the high way accordingly.—When a woman in good circumstances marries a town rake, not worth a groat, if she is betrayed into it, let it be called accidental death; if she knew it, make it simple felony, and singe her in the fist.' When a man, with no children, marries a woman with five or six vice versa, let the delinquent stand thrice on the pillory, lose both ears, and suffer one year's imprisonment. If a man marries a woman of ill fame, knowing her to be so, let him have a pair of horns painted on his door, in perpetuam rei memoream; and if she be a known scold, then a couple of neats tongues, as an additional ornament to the same door. And when a man or woman marries to the disinheriting of their children, let them suffer as in cases of high treason. When a woman marries a man deply in debt, knowing him to be so, let her be sent to the house of correction, and kept to hard labor for three months; but if he deceives her, by not letting her know his circumstances, let her be acquitted, and he deemed to beat hemp all the days of his life.

LONDON, June 10.

We hear much here of the formidable preparations going on in Tyrol; but it is also confidently reported that the states of Tyrol have sent word, that the country would be lost, if an adequate army was not immediately sent to protect it against an invasion.

Government to excite the Tyrolians to take up arms, has offered a reward of 24 kreutzers a day to each rifleman, and 12 kreutzers to common volunteers, besides the usual ration of bread: and a poor Austrian grenadier receives only seven kreutzers a day! The archduchess who resides at Inspruck, has also promised to distribute her whole collection of golden snuff boxes, watches, candlesticks and snuffers amongst the brave Tyrolians who shall distinguish themselves against the French robbers. This has produced some effect, but the Tyrolians are a cunning set of people, and are not much to be depended on. They are remarkable for their plainels of speaking and their propensity for joking, and under the mask of bluntness and innocence they say the bitterest truth to the first lords of the country, and pass the most biting satires on the follies and corruption of the great folks. When their peddlers come to Vienna they joke and offer their coarse tapestries, handkerchiefs, &c. for sale at court, and make no more ceremony with any of the Imperial family than if they were brothers and sisters.

The archduchess of Inspruck lately invited some of the most influential peasants to court, and told them, how the French ravaged Italy, how they took all the horses, oxen, cows, sheep, every thing from the country people, how they plundered every shop, and wrested the last bit of bread from the mouth of poor people. The princess requested them to inform the country people of the terrible fate that awaited them, that every thing she said was strickly true. The Tyrolians answered: they believed it to be true that the princess had said; because they knew the French to be great rogues; and, continued they, if we suffer them to come here, they will not only take away every thing from us, or, what would be still worse, convert us to the devil. One Buchmeyer, whose enterprising spirit and influence over the inhabitants of the mountains of Tyrol renders him a very dangerous character, went with some of his confidential friends through the country of the Grisons, and arrived at Buonapatte's head-quarters; public reports say, he intended to serve the French as a spy; the best informed people fear, that he and his companions were deputed by the mountaineers to treat in their names with the French general.

It cannot be denied that there is a party in Tyrol who wish to overturn the existing government, and what is very strange, is, that not a few of the nobility seem to favor a change, which however can be in no manner favorable to them. The imperial invitation to deliver up the church and other plate has also served as a pretext for discontent, some go even as far as to pretend, that the emperor will abandon the country to the enemy as soon as he has got hold of the treasures.

ONE or TWO BOYS wanted to serve as apprentices to the printing business.

Council-Office, 14th Dec.

NOTICE

IS hereby given to the public, that by an order of council, dated 7th October, 1796, all disputed claims for lands, will be heard by the governor and council during the sitting of the legislature in every year. All Caveats are therefore to be entered in the secretary's office before the DEEDS for the lands in dispute have passed the great seal, as the evils and inconveniences attending the hearing of caveats afterwards are innumerable---but lists are directed to be published from the attorney general's office on the first of every month of such land board certificates and orders of council as may be lying there to be confirmed by fiats, that the public may be early apprised of the lands about to be granted in each township and district, before the patents are issued for them.

PICTURESQUE ODE,

By the Reverend Mr. Logan.

'TIS past! no more the summer blooms
Ascending in the rear;
Behold congenial autumn comes,
The sabbath of the year!
What time thy holy whispers breathe,
The pensive evening shade beneath,
And twilight consecrates the floods,
While nature strips her garments gay,
And wears the vesture of decay,
O let me wander thro' the sounding woods!
Ah! well known streams! ah! wonted groves,
Still pictur'd in my mind!
O! sacred scene of youthful loves,
Whose image lives behind!
While sad I ponder on the past,
The joys that must no longer last;
The wild flower strown on summer's bier,
The dying musick of the grove,
And the last elegies of love,
Dissolve the soul and draw the tender tear!
My steps were innocent and young,
The fairy path pursu'd;
And, wand'ring o'er the wild I sung,
My fancies to the wood:
I mourn'd the linnet lover's fate,
Or turtle, from her murder'd mate,
Condemn'd the widow'd hours to wail:
Or while the mournful vision rose,
I fought to weep for imag'd woes,
Nor real life believ'd a tragic tale,
Relentless power! whose fated stroke
O'er wretched men prevails!
Ha! Love's eternal chain is broke,
And friendship's cov'nant fails!
Upbraiding forms! a moment's ease—
O memory! how shall I appease
The bleeding shade, the unlaid ghost!
What charm can bend the gulfing eye!
What voice console th' incessant sigh,
And everlasting lodgings for the lost?
Yet not unwelcome waves the wood
That hides me in its gloom,
While lost in melancholy mood,
I muse upon the tomb.
Their chequer'd leaves the branches shed,
Whirling in eddies o'er my head,
They sadly sigh that winter's near;
The warning voice I heard behind,
That shakes the wood without a wind,
And solemn sounds the death bell of the year.
Nor will I count Lethean strains,
The sorrowing sense to sleep;
Nor drink oblivian of the themes
On which I love to weep.
Belated oft by fabled rill,
While nightly o'er the hallowed hill,
Aerial musick seems to mourn;
I'll list to autumn's closing strain,
Then woo the walks of youth again,
And pour my sorrows o'er th' untimely urn!

ANECDOTES.

A Minister being possessed of a wench to whom a certain negro man made his addresses: the parson having some objections which he made to the poor black, who, not liking this opposition to his courtship, took the liberty to ask him a question, viz. 'Massar no wat de elebenth commanment be?' The poor parson could not tell. 'Well,' says the negro, 'me tell, wat it be: De elebenth commanment is, BES WAY EBERY ONE MIND HE OWN BISNESS.

HENRY the eighth, and Francis the first of France, were both princes of very warm tempers, and the former having a design of sending a very warm message to the latter, pitched on sir Thomas Moore, his chancellor, for the messenger. Sir Thomas having received his instructions, told Henry, that he fear'd, if he carried such a message to so violent a man as Francis, it might cost him his head. Never fear man, said the king, if Francis were to cut off your head I would make every Frenchman now in my power a head shorter. I am obliged to your majesty, replies the facetious chancellor, but I much doubt if any of their heads would fit my shoulders.

A YOUNG man was arraigned at the bar of a neighboring justice, for the growing evil of committing large depredations on a lady's chastity.—Her honest father rated the damages in the premises at 30l. the young man thought, as it was so common a thing, that he ought to abate of the standard price, and be content with 20 dollars—But the lady feeling her modesty insulted by this low valuation, arose and (and sic. with the SPIRIT of her cause) addressed the judge in an elevated tone of voice, informing him that she should INSIST on 120 dollars, as this was the lowest price her mother and all her sisters, had always SET it at.

40 Mile Creek, Dec. 10,

Mr. Tiffany,

PEOPLE have long complained of the roads in this province; strangers, in particular, who come from places in the world where roads are considered as convenient to intereft and pleasure, have not hesitated to declare them the worst in the world. Now, sir, we the spirited people of this place would not bear those reflections, and determining to be like folks of other countries have prevailed on our great men, (great things can be accomplished only by great men) to lay out a great road thro' our settlement, that should quadrate with private interest in particular, and then as much as may be with public convenience. I express it thus because we of the Forty have adopted a new maxim in things, and it is now established as a rule here; nay a man of impartial justice declares, that a late writer on the duty of a justice of the peace, gives as the primum bonum, that he is first to regard his own interest, and then that of the public. The road has been thus run, without varying a single point of the compass to the main object; to mention one striking instance:—at the Head of the Lake, instead of running straight through Mr. Horning's field, it is carried nearly at right angles round by other lots.

I have singled out this thus publickly, because strangers would not apprehend a road thus turning and twisting any way but the right, and directly out of the course, was designed to lead him forward in his journey, nor that going a mile further in the distance of less than one would be the great road to or from Niagara to the Head of the Lake; a map of which, for the information of persons traveling through there will be laid down and explained in the next edition of THE DUTY OF A JUTICE, to be printed this spring with an addenda of choice maxims, and expressive CUTS.

Further sir, as we have taken upon us the lead of all others in this province, in public spiritedness and road-making, we are determined to petition for the exclusive right of laying out, mending and repairing great PRIVATE roads, according to the newest fashion, taught and drafted in our academy of ART and science.

Taking the road from Niagara to the Head of the Lake, little else than the same can be said of it; and if the windings and turnings thro' wet and dry, thick and thin, aye, any way to keep from straight and dry, represent the various private interests of the people on it, it certainly must be confessed the most masterly chart of the human passions ever attempted; which to see is enough to make us weep for the infirmity of man, and to travel it more than enough to make us curse him and all his works.

TRIM SHARP.

LONDON, October 7.

HOUSE OF LORDS, October 6.

The king being seated on the throne in the usual state, and the commons attending, his majesty delivered the following most gracious speech:

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN,

"It is a peculiar satisfaction to me, in this present conjuncture of affairs, to recur to your advice, after the recent opportunity which has been given for collecting the sense of my people, engaged in a difficult and arduous contest, for the preservation of all that is most dear to us.

"I have omitted no endeavors for setting on foot negociations of peace to Europe, and to secure, for the future, the general tranquility. The steps which I have taken for this purpose, have at lenght opened the way to an immediate and direct negociation, the issue of which must either produce the desirable end of a just, honorable, and solid peace for us, and for our allies; or must prove, beyond dispute, to what cause alone, the prolongation of the calamities of war must be ascribed.

"I shall immediately send a person to Paris with full powers to treat for this object, and it is my anxious wish that this measure may lead to the restoration of general peace; but you must be sensible nothing can so much coutribute to give effect to this desire, as your manifesting that we possess both the determination and the resources to oppose, with increased activity and energy, the further efforts of those with whom we have to contend.

"You will feel this peculiarly necessary at a moment when the enemy has openly manifested their intention of attempting a descent on these kingdoms. It cannot be doubted what would be the issue of such an interprize; but it befits your wisdom to neglect no precautions that may either preclude the attempt, or secure the speediest means of turning it to the ruin and confusion of the enemy.

"In reviewing the events of the year, you will observe, that by the skill and exertions of my navy, our extensive and encreasing commerce has been protected to a degree almost beyond example, and the fleets of the enemy have, for the greatest part of the year been blocked up in their own ports.

"The fortune of war on the continent, has been more various; and the progress of the French armies threatned at one period the utmost danger to all Europe; but from the honorable and dignified perseverance of my ally the emperor, and from the intrepidity, discipline and invincible spirit of the Austrian forces under the auspicious conduct of the arch-duke Charles, such a turn has lately been given to the course of the war as may inspire a well-grounded confidence that the final result of the campaign will prove more disastrous to the enemy, than its commencement and progress, for a time, were favorable to their hopes.

"The apparent hostile disposition, and conduct of the court of Madrid, have led to discussions, of which I am not yet enabled to acquaint you with their result; but I am confident that whatever may be the final issue, I shall have given to Europe further proof of my moderation and forbearance; and I can have no doubt of your determination to defend, against every aggression, the dignity, rights, and interests of the British empire.

"Gentlemen of the house of commons,

"I rely on your zeal and public spirit, for such supplies as you may think necessary for the present year. It is a great satisfaction for me to observe, that notwithstanding the temporary embarassments which have been experienced, the state of the commerce, manufactures and revenue of the country, prove the real extent and solidity of our resources, and furnishe you with such means as must be equal to any exertions which the present crisis may require.

"My lords and gentlemen,

"The distresses which were in the last year experienced from the scarcity of corn are now with the blessing of God, happily removed, an 'abundant harvest affords a pleasing prospect of relief, in that important article, to the laboring classes of the community. Our internal tranquility has continued undisturbed: the general attachment of my people to the British constitution has appeared on every occasion, and the endeavors of those who wish to introduce anarchy and confusion into this country, have been repelled by the energy and wisdom of the laws.

"To defeat all the designs of our enemies, to restore t o my people the blessings of a secure and honorable peace, to maintain inviolate their religion, laws and liberty, and to deliver down, unimpaired, to the latest posterity, the glory and happiness of those kingdoms, is the constant wish of my heart, and the uniform end of all my actions. In every measure that conduce to these objects, I am confident of receiving the firm, zealous, and affectionate support of my parliament.

NIAGARA, December 14, 1796.

With sorrow we annouce the affecting news, that on Saturday morning last, departed this life much lamented, the amiable Mrs. HAMILTON, consort of the honorable ROBERT HAMILTON, esq. of Queenston; and this day her remains were intered by a large concourse of relatives and friends deeply impressed with the solemnity of the occosion.

Mrs. Hamilton possessed those virtues that adorn humanity, rendered her a pattron to her sex, endeared her as a wife, a mother, daughter, sister, friend; and all to whom she was thus related, knew well the affection and diligence with which she discharged their several duties, and now sympathize with each other the irrepairable loss. Well may they say with the poet on a similar occasion—

"SHE's gone—forever gone! Her tender soul,
Freed from its painful tenement of clay,
Now soars aloft, and scorns all earthly things,
Surmounts each barrier to her heavenly flight;
Shakes off mortality; and speeds her way
To where no pain, nor sickness e'er can reach
Happy deliverance! No longer now
Shall Agony with all her tort'ring train
Inhabit thy dear form. Nature at length
Has yielded to the calls, which nature made,
And ev'ry throbbing, flut'ring pulse of life,
Front painful action, finds a sweet cessation.
Then whence these sighs? And why when e'er across
My heaving breast her dear remembrance steals,
Do tears, unbidden, from their sources flow?
Do I regret her exit from this world—
A world, where oft misfortunes and distress
Force its inhabitants to wish for death—
Or mourn that, favor'd more than thousands are,
She bade adieu to this, a life of woe!
T' enjoy a lasting heritage above!
No, not for this, but for myself I grieve—
Parted so soon from what I fondly hop'd
Would longer prove a comfort and delight;
But vain are human prospects. He who rules on high,
Recall'd the blessing he benignly gave,
And from the embraces of her weeping friends,
Transported her to heav'n. There now the reigns—
Nor dare a trembling muse pursue her thither,
Or with weak presumption attempt to sing
Joys undescribable—surpassing far
The stretch of human thought, much more the pinion'd strain.
But, lost, bewilder'd in the wond'rous maze,
She drops her unfledg'd wings and sinks to silent praise."

MARRIED]--In this town on Thursday evening last, ALEXANDER STEWART, Esq. attorney at law, to Miss JEMIMA JOHNSON.

Yesterday his majesty's court of oyer and terminer, and general gaol delivery opened in this town; the grand jury in the case of M'Ewen found no bill, it not having been proven that the chief, with whose murder he was charged, is dead. Several capital offences, we understand, are before them.

Niagara, December 21, 1796.

WHEREAS the entering of caveats in the office of the ſecretary of the province, to prevent the iſſuing of deeds after they have been duly executed, hath been found inconvenient, and deemed to be otherwiſe improper: Such perſons, therefore, who have, or pretend to have any claim to lands in the poſſeſſion of others, but unjuſtly ſo holden under certificate, or order of council, or other authority, will take notice that they muſt enter caveats in the ſecretary's office before the making of the deeds, as none will be received after they are executed.

Such perſons, therefore, as are ready to eſtabliſh their claims, will file their caveats in the ſecretary's office immediately; and that others may be duly apprized of the deeds now about to be made, a liſt of the names of perſons and of the townſhips where the lands lie is ſubjoined, and others will be made known in the Gazette from time to time.

When, therefore, any perſons purſuing the manner directed to lay or tracts of land of which they conceive themſelves entitled to a grant, they muſt within one month after the preſent and future publications of the ſaid liſt in the Upper Canada Gazette, enter caveats in the ſecretary's office, and give immediate notice to the clerk of the council, and the party againſt whom they ſet up their claim.

ALL persons indebted to Mr. LOUIS ROY, for printing, are desired to call on Mr. A. Heron, who is authorized to receive the same.

The importance of Punctuality.

IF faults are to be estimated according to the ill consequences which attend them, we shall find upon examination, that the want of punctuality is a crime of considerable magnitude. A very large share of the disappointments and vexations which we meet with in our intercourse with one another, is derived from this source. In almost all companies, or accidental meetings of neighbors, the ear is pained with complaints against those who have not paid an expected debt, or not performed a necessary job, or not finished a pair of shoes, &c. at the time prefixed. In the country, tradesmen and laborers are apt to fail in punctuality, sometimes thro' mere inattention and carelessness, sometimes through indolence and laziness, sometimes through a grasping disposition, and always from a criminal disregard to truth, honesty and benevolence. Wishing to secure all the custom and business they can, and unwilling that any who apply to them, should be necessitated to apply to others, they engage more than they execute within the time limitted to the great disappointment, vexation, and injury of their employers.

Every person of the least reflection must see that the advantages which would result to individuals, to neighborhoods, and to larger communities, from punctuality are very great:—And that equally great are the disadvantages for the want of it.—A poor man with a house full of children, procures with difficulty a bushel of corn, and a horse to carry it five or six miles to mill. The miller cannot grind it now, but promises to have it ready by the evening of the next day. With still greater difficulty he obtains a horse, and goes at the time prefixed: but is coldly told by the miller, that he forgot it, and ground for others till his water was spent, and that he must come again the next day. A man who is building a house, engages masons, and tenders at a distance to build his chimnies. They come at the appointed time. But the man who had promised to bring his hands the day preceding, and complete the stone work for the foundation of the chimnies, fails; and all are disappointed, to their very great damage. A woman, who had very lately lost her husband, is pitied by her neighbors; and they kindly collect on a single day, and reap down all her grain. She engages a man to secure it. He promises to take up the next day, and carry it into the barn.—He neglects to come: and it being Saturday, the grain is left lying in the field. On Monday it rains. And the weather proving wet and warm for several days, the hopes of the widow and her fatherless are destroyed.

Punctuality is sometimes disregarded by professional gentlemen, to the great loss and disappointment of those for whom they were to transact some business of consequence. The gay world consider exactness regularity, the fulfilment of promises, and the punctual payment of honest debts, as too vulgar for them; and value themselves on no punctuality, but in their debts of honor, their criminal assignations, their parties of pleasure, and their appointed visits. The commercial world in general regard punctuality, because it is the basis of all their credit and interest. And certainly it would be to the interest and credit of mechanicks, labourers, and in short, every class of men. To be punctual in fulfilling their promises and engagements, would have a happy effect upon all the civil and moral intercourses of society. Mutual confidence, esteem, and affection, would be increased; neighbors would live on better terms; and the heart to be more steady tranquil and joyous.

Punctuality, must be an honor to any man, because it denotes stability, fortitude and superiority to temptation. If this has not been ranked by name among the cardinal virtues, it is owing, perhaps, to the difficulty of defining it with precision, or of distinguishing it from others, and not from its unimportance in society. Accurately speaking, punctuality is not a single virtue, but an assemblage of many.—It comprehends, fidelity, veracity, sense of honor, justice and benevolence.

Punctuality is recommended by almost every object and every movement in the natural world, as well as by the exigences and claims of the moral. It is well known, though not sufficiently considered, that all the revolutions of the heavenly bodies are performed with the exactest punctuality.—What should become of all the inhabitants of the earth, as well as of promise breakers, if the sun and the seasons were as fallible, and as little to be depended on, as themselves?—Punctuality then, has the sanction of heaven upon it and the order and analogy of nature to recommend it. Its utility and importance are demonstrated by the interest and reputation of the individual, and by the peace and happiness of society. And the necessity of it is inculcated by the dictates of conscience, and the command of God.

ON AGRICULTURE.

AGRICULTURE is justly thought to be the most ancient art; and it is certainly far the most useful. The subsistance and welfare of mankind depend more on it than any, or all others, and all other arts would soon be useless, were the culture of the surface of the earth neglected. No art therefore ought to be held in higher estimation.—The ancients valued it highly, and no good reason can be given why the moderns should lightly esteem it. The Egyptians, Greeks and Romans, ascribed the invention of this art to their gods; but the Jews and Christians rather trace it up to Noah and Cain, the former of whom planted a vineyard, and the latter, long before him, was a tiller of the ground. Even Adam in Paradise practised one branch of this art: he was put into the garden of Eden to dress it.

The immortal poet Virgil did not think agriculture a subject unworthy of his genius; and his georgicks are esteemed as the most excellent of his works. Agriculture has drawn the attention of some of the greatest men in all nations, many of whom have had their hands as well as their heads employed in it. Cyrus the younger planted and cultivated his garden partly with his own hands: and it is well known that the Romans tooks some of their greatest generals from the plough. Cincinnatus, whose fame is great in America was plowing in his field when the Roman army was besieged in its trenches by the Æqui and Volsci. Being sent for, he went to the army, routed the enemy, entered the city in triumph, and then returned to his plough. Agriculture has been so great an object in Britain, as to employ the pens of a multitude of its genuises: and the English books that have been written upon it are surprisingly numerous. In that country, if I mistake not, husbandry has been brought as near to perfection, as in any part of the world. And it is owing to this that the island supports so great a number of inhabitants: and that the English nation has been so opulent and powerful.

Though other employments are often times more lucrative to individuals than husbandry, none can be so advantageous to the world. If it is a flower way of gaining wealth than some others, it is perhaps the least hazardous of any. The farmer depends not on the wind and waves, like the mariner; nor on the good will of his neighbors and the public, for employment and bread, like the mechanic. The business is highly adapted to promote the health of the body, and the chearfulness and content of the mind. And if it were better understood in this country, and more spiritedly pursued, both the pleasure and the profit attending it would be greater than we have yet experienced. It is an employment which affords a variety of entertaining speculations to an inquisitive mind: and is adapted to lead us into a considerable acquaintance with the works of nature.

"In a philosophical view, (says one) agriculture is great and extensive. In a political view, it is important and perhaps the only firm and stable foundation of greatness. As a profession, it strengthens the mind, without enervating the body. In morals it tends to increase virtue, without introducing vice. In religion, it naturally inspires piety devotion and a dependence on providence, without a tincture of infidelity. It is a rational and agreeable amusement to the man of leisure, and a boundless source of contemplation and activity to the industrious.

ON GAMING.

AMONG the many admonitions which the Monitor has given to the world, I do not remember any on the destructive effects of gambling. That social happiness may, in no wise be diminished by innocent diverfion, even if the instruments are cards, or balls, I am not so much of a cynic as to deny: But when we so far forget our happiness, as to dive into the vortex of chance and risk our fortunes and peace to the turning of a card, or a lucky throw of a die, or hit the ball, (as a late writer obferves) no language is adequate to convey a just idea of the destructive practice. As the most destructive passion of the soul, and from which the greatest train of evil consequences flow, it stands unrivalled, its votaries, in general, are either poor, or extravagant; the intellectual faculties are either elated by success, or depressed by loss, which makes the being not only a pest, but a gloomy blank in society. —It always debases, and frequently eradicates, original virtue. Is there a more melancholy sight, than to see a youth, rising to manhood, surrounded by his friends, displaying a genius which excites the warmest hopes every in breast, devoting his time and attention to gambling? That this is a fatal truth, we need only turn our views to the assemblies and taverns—we there behold many who have no other dependence to carry them thro' life than an unsullied purity of character, round the gambling-table, losing all they possess, involved in debt, and rising with dejected features, to behold the rising of the sun. Ye votaries of gambling, these are but consequences which naturally flow; they but pave the way, to scenes of excess and debauchery, over which let fancy in silence brood.

STANZAS.

Written in the album of a convent in France.

WHOM fickle friends or falser love
May drive to this sequester'd grove,
The moral duties learn:

Forgive, forget each little wrong!
To social scenes your hearts belong,
To social scenes return!

And you, whose tears incessant flow
For worth departed, lost below!
Is nothing left behind?
Your bosoms have been taught to know
The world has something to bestow,
Will you forsake your kind?

And let not aught may here invite,
Howe'er luxurious on the sight,
Prevail your steps to stay:
Nor can devotion's specious plea,
Nor loftier soul'd philosophy,
Excuse a long delay.

At whose command the tempests roll—
Opposing passions tear the soul,
And good from evil bring.
At whose command the rain descends—
The breast of charity distends,
And love and friendship spring.

Tho' love be false and friends deceive,
Tho' death bereave you, do not grieve!
Pursue the Master's plan—
A little while, and care shall cease;
This world was never made for peace,
But man was made for man!

NIAGARA, December 21, [illegible] held, called [illegible]

Tuesday next, being the anniversary of St. JOHN the Evangelist, a sermon on the occasion will be delivered by the Rev. Mr. Dunn at the presbyterian meeting-house in this town.

On Monday last ended the term of his majesty's court of oyer and terminer, and general gaol delivery in this town, before which came the following persons:

George Wilson, and his wife on an indictment of feloniously taking a watch from Nicholas Klengenbroomer; the wife only found guilty, the verdict reversed on error.

The same George Wilson, for feloniously shooting at said Klengenbroomer, verdict not guilty of the felony.

William Havens, for beastality, verdict guilty of the attempt, sentenced to be imprisoned one month, stand in the pillory three times within the month; viz. on Monday next (the 26th inst.) at the goal in this town; on the Monday following (Jan. 2) at Queenston; on the Monday then next following (Jan. 9) as near as possible to the place of committing the crime; pay a fine of £20. to his majesty, and stand committed until paid.

James Lymburner & John Kelly, no prosecutors appearing, were discharged from their recognizances.

From a Correspondent.

Our money is growing daily more scarce; formerly the army, &c. supplied us with more than a sufficiency of circulating cash—these means are now reduced, and the country encreasing in population, as well as scarcity, what mode or modes can be adopted to introduce specie?

The printer being favored with the papers containning the speeches of Mr. Fox and the chancellor of the exchequer; they will be commented in course in our next.

In the loss sustained by Mr. JARVIS, was also a BUFFALO SKIN, which, if returned, with or without the beaver blankets will be thankfully received and no questions asked.

All Caveats are therefore to be entered in the ſecretary's office before the DEEDS for the lands in diſpute have paſſed the great ſeal, as the evils and inconveniences attending the hearing of caveats afterwards are innumerable—but liſts are directed to be publiſhed from the attorney general's office on the firſt of every month of ſuch land board certificates and orders of council as may be lying there to be confirmed by ſtats, that the public may be early appriſed of the lands about to be granted in each townſhip and diſtrict, before the patents are iſſued for them.

MONITOR.—

AS the happineſs of life depends much on domeſtic union and friendſhip, ſo it is incumbent on every one to make himſelf as agreeable as poſſible to thoſe whom nature has made, or he himſelf ſingled out for his companions in life. An uninterrupted interchange of mutual indearments among thoſe of the ſame family, imparts a more ſolid ſatisfaction than the moſt ample poſſeſſions and ſplendid appearances without them. How much better it is to have peace without plenty, than plenty without peace?

Oui love, like the law of attraction, is the ſtrongeſt where the ties of relation are the cloſeſt—and it diminiſhes as the diſtance increaſes. This is a wiſe conſtitution in nature that our benevolence might have particular objects to fix upon and not be loſt among the multiplicity of them. It therefore firſt begins with thoſe with whom on all accounts, we are under the ſtrongeſt obligations to live in harmony. From theſe it extends to our neighbors, till expanding to all mankind.—Domeſtic affronts and animoſities are therefore, of all others, the moſt to be feared and avoided, becauſe like oil, they give the keeneſt edge and always wound in the moſt tender and ſenſible part. To preſerve affection and mutual ſympathy in families it is requiſite that the exerciſe of government be accommodated to the natural diſpoſition of each member, and that an accommodating ſpirit run through the whole.

If perſons of the ſame family always ſtudied to pleaſe at home as much as they do, to ſhew to advantage abroad, there would be very little occaſion for domeſtic ſtrife.—When they are abroad on the great theatre, they aſſume a fair outſide; what ever may be their real character, they chuſe to appear in their moſt advantageous dreſs.—But behind the ſcene they are in an undreſs, and act without diſguiſe. Therefore our domeſtic behaviour is the main teſt of our virtue and good nature—for our good and ill breeding is chiefly ſeen abroad—our good or ill-nature at home.

To ſee a well regulated family acting as if they were one body, informed by one ſoul where, "if one member ſuffered, all the members ſuffered with it." To thoſe who are embarked together in one bottom, whoſe intereſts are inſeparably united, and whoſe hearts ought to be ſo too—to ſee theſe acting in concert, adopting each others cares, uniting their friendly beams, and jointly promoting their common happineſs is the moſt pleaſing picture in human life, and muſt excite either our envy or our emulation.

Behold the pleaſing ſcene, the maſter of a family aſſiſting with ſoft language of conjugal affection the cares of his partner, and by a thouſand tender offices endearing himſelf to his little flock! See his kindneſs, hear his tenderneſs to his ſervants! and behold him ſmiling on all around!—The mild influences of love run down thro' every branch, diffuſe general happineſs. Here dwell peace and harmony! The hoſpitable dome unfolds its doors and bids a hearty welcome to the gentle viſitor, whoſe enlivening converſation adds greatly to the pleaſure of the ſcene—nor does the child of diſtreſs and want ever ſupplicate relief in vain.

Oh! ye celeſtial ſpirits whoſe blendid ſmile,
From heav'n's high azure beams immortal life;
Whoſe guardian care averts the envenom'd guile,
Whoſe ſoothing breath diſarms the rage of ſtrife
Around this peaceful manſion, ſoft diffuſe
The kindleſt bleſſings of etherial love.

SOLON.

LONDON, October 7.

HOUSE OF COMMONS,
Thurſday, October 6.

THE ſpeaker took the chair at two o'clock, and ſeven members took the oaths.

About a quarter before three, the houſe was ſummoned to the houſe of peers, to hear the ſpeech delivered from the throne by his majeſty. The ſpeaker and many of the members proceeded to the houſe of peers accordingly, and returned in about half an hour.

The ſpeaker ſtated, that he had been in the houſe of peers, where his majeſty delivered a gracious ſpeech, of which, to prevent miſtake, he had procured a copy. He then read the ſpeech from the chair.

Lord Mofpeth roſe to move an addreſs to his majeſty.

Mr. Fox roſe, and ſpoke to the following effect:—Sir, I ſhall not take up much of your time in what I have to offer to the houſe on the preſent occaſion; but if I were to give a ſilent vote upon the motion which has juſt been made, I apprehend that my conduct might be ſubject to miſconſtruction. I know that it may undoubtedly be conſidered as preſumptious in an individual to take up any portion of the time of the houſe, merely to obviate the poſſibility of miſinterpretation; yet I feel that I ſhould not do juſtice to my own ſentiments, if I were to ſuffer the queſtion to paſs under a ſilent vote. In the firſt place, then, the ſtriking feature of the ſpeech is—that his majeſty has been at length adviſed to do what it has fallen to my lot to adviſe his majeſty's miniſters to do repeatedly for the laſt three years, namely, to open a negociation; this, which is the leading feature of the ſpeech ought undoubtedly to reconcile me to the addreſs which has been moved, and I ſhould be happy if it contained no other feature of a leſs pleaſing aſpect, and that I could have given my intire approbation to every part of the addreſs. Of that ſtriking feature I moſt cordially and highly approve. I cannot forget how often I have adviſed this meaſure, nor how often, without ſucceſs. I have preſſed it upon miniſters: but however I may lament that the council was not taken before a hundred millions of money was ſpent, and thouſands of lives devoted to the cruel conteſt, yet it muſt draw from me my warm approbation now that it hath been followed.

He who thought that the war was originally unneceſſary, and that every moment ſince its commencement was a proper moment for commencing a negociation for peace, cannot object to the meaſure which his majeſty has announced that he has been adviſed to take in the preſent moment.—I will not ſay one word about the particular and fit time for ſuch a meaſure, all times appearing to me to be equally wiſe and ſalutary for endeavoring to reſtore to the people the bleſſings of peace. Nor will I recollect, much more retaliate, the perſonal invectives that were thrown againſt myſelf; that an attempt to negociate with ſuch a people, was to lay his majeſty's crown at their feet, and that is was a degradation of the honor and dignity of Great-Britain—that to propoſe to open a negociation was in fact to ſue for peace, and that ſuch conduct was neither dignified nor political. Such was the language of the laſt parliament, and ſuch was the animadvertion made on the advice which I then gave. I will content myſelf with repeating what I then ſaid,—that "to propoſe a negociation is not to ſue for peace." It is at every moment dignified and proper to ſtrive to reſtore the bleſſings of peace, and, it is certainly one thing to propoſe a negociation in which terms are to be fairly and manfully diſcuſſed, and another to ſue to your enemy for peace. He who objects to this diſtinction is not animated by that feeling which ought ever to be uppermoſt in the mind of a ſtateſman—an anxious deſire of ſhortening the calamity of war, and paving the way, by every practicable means to that deſirable end. He ought ever, therefore, to make it manifeſt in his conduct, that no career of conqueſt, and no reverſe of fortune, can divert him from that ſingle object—a negociation for peace in preference to any other object. I repeat, therefore, that I moſt perfectly and entirely approve of the preſent meaſure and ſhall not now mix my aſſent to that part of the addreſs with any obſervation on the tardy and protracted manner in which it has been at length reſolved upon. And thus approving of the principal feature of the addreſs, I am extremely unwilling to oppoſe any other part of it, and with that it had been ſo worded as to have engaged the perfect unanimity of the whole houſe. There are ſome expreſſions, however, of which I muſt take notice, and I ſhall do ſo rather with the intention of explaining the vote which I ſhall give, than of moving any thing upon them.

And firſt, in the very opening of the ſpeech there is an expreſſion that his majeſty has uſed every endeavor to open a negociation; now, unleſs by the words every endeavor it is meant to ſay that every endeavor has been uſed ſince the cloſe of the laſt parliament, we ought not to agree to the expreſſion, for undoubtedly miniſters cannot expect that gentlemen who like myſelf, objected ſo frequently to their refuſal to exert any effort at all, ſhould now acquieſce in an aſſertion that they had uſed every endeavor to bring about a negociation. Unleſs, therefore, it is meant to allude to the endeavors which his majeſty has made ſince the cloſe of the laſt parliament, endeavors which I am willing to take upon truſt, I deſire that it my be clearly underſtood, that I am not to be precluded by my vote this night from animadverting upon his majeſty's miniſters for their former want of endeavors to bring about a negociation for peace. There is much that deſerves praiſe in the conſtruction of the preſent ſpeech.—Miniſters have omitted the words to which they have been too bigoted heretofore, of the war having been undertaken for the cauſe of religion, humanity, and ſocial order; words calculated to enflame and exaſperate the two nations againſt each other, and to ſet the probability of peace at a greater diſtance, neither have they aſſerted their conſtant and unfounded phraſe that the war was neceſſary. They have acted wiſely in thus abſtaining from intemperate language, for ſurely at a time when they are about to negociate for a peace, it would have been peculiarly illjudged and unſeaſonable, to have made uſe of language repulſive and bitter to the people with whom you have to treat; nor would it have been wiſe, to introduce words calculated to prevent unanimity in this houſe, upon the courſe which his majeſty has been ſlowly adviſed to purſue; for about the neceſſity of war, and all the jargon of epithets that have been applied to it, there muſt always, continue to be fundamental difference of opinion.

There are other parts of the ſpeech which perhaps demand little explanation and which if we paſs over for the time, it is to be underſtood that we are left at full liberty to enquire and queſtion the aſſertions hereafter; ſuch is the declaration of the flouriſhing ſtate of our manufactures, trade and commerce. I muſt take this upon truſt; I cannot object to a fact, the proof of which I have not before me. We ſhall ſoon have the means of knowing, upon better authority than mere aſſertion, the ſtate of the country; and I truſt it will turn out to be proſperous and flouriſhing. Our agreeing to the aſſertion in the mean time, muſt not be conſtrued to preclude us from enquiry, much leſs to involve our aſſent. When I hear it ſaid, that by the flouriſhing ſtate of our manufactures, trade, and commerce, our reſources are ample and ſufficient for the criſis in which we are involved, I muſt heſitate in giving credit to an aſſertion which is ſo little ſupported by the public appearance of things. I muſt think when I look at the price of the general funds of the country, the ſtate of the transferable ſecurities of government, the monſtrous diſcounts upon the enormous quantity of paper which they have iſſued, together with the daily conference of which we hear for ſchemes to relieve the pecuniary embarraſſments of trade, I muſt be led to think that our reſources are in leſs favorable ſtate than his majeſty's miniſters have choſen to make us believe they are; and when the queſtion comes hereafter fairly before us, then, and not now, will be the proper moment for aſcertaining the truth of this important fact, and of making the proper declarations thereon.

There is one other part of the ſpeech, I believe it is nearly, if not the concluding ſentence, upon which I cannot forbear to make ſome obſervations; it is that part of the addreſs in which we are made to rejoice in the general tranquility of the country, a ſentiment in which I heartily concur, for tranquility at all times is a moſt deſirable thing; but when we proceed further and hear this tranquility aſcribed to the wiſdom and energy of the laws, inſinuating that the laws which were paſſed in the laſt ſeſſion of the laſt parliament, have ſecured to us this tranquility, and triumphed over anarchy and confuſion, I muſt enter my ſolemn proteſt againſt the whole of this aſſertion, and againſt all ſuch aſſertions. I have never been convinced that there were any number of perſons in this country deſirous of anarchy and confuſion worthy of the attention of his majeſty or of this houſe; but I muſt ſolemnly proteſt againſt the inſinuation, that it is to the energy of thoſe laws that we are indebted for the general tranquility that is ſaid to have reigned; general tranquility ariſing out of the obedience which a rational people cheerfully pay to good laws muſt always be a ſubject of real rejoicing; but, if it is meant to be ſaid, that general tranquility has ſprung out of the two laws of the laſt ſeſſion of the laſt parliament, laws which ought to be the object of our [illegible] and abhorrence, and which are calculated to excite theſe feelings, I cannot rejoice in any ſuch tranquility. Should I be aſked, have theſe laws produced tranquility? I anſwer, —No;—it is not in the nature of ſuch laws to produce tranquility—Such laws may produce a forced quiet, which I conſider as a real alarm. Do we rejoice in ſuch a tranquility, where diſcuſſion is to be ſtifled, and men are to brood in ſecret over the grievances which they feel? —No: ſuch a tranquility alarms me more than tumult. It is a tranquility which every man who loves freedom ought to ſee with pain—every man who loves order ought to ſee with terror.—Sir, to the conſtitution no man can feel a ſtronger attachment than myſelf; but I will not ſport with the word conſtitution: I will not uſe the word without explaining it:—my attachment is to the conſtitution under which I was born—under which I was bred—not to that of the laſt parliament, which did more to maim & diſfigure the ancient conſtitution of England than any former parliament that ever ſat within theſe walls.—Let me, then, ſir, be clearly underſtood, that I do not join in this inſinuation of praiſe upon theſe abominable laws, nor aſcribe to them effects which I believe them to be inapplicable. Much as I wiſh for a general approbation of the meaſure of endeavoring to procure peace to this country, yet, ſir, I ſhould think it was purchaſed at too dear a rate, if coupled with the approbation of theſe abhorrent laws; and I have thought it my duty to ſay ſo much, that my vote might not be miſinterpreted into [illegible] of the addreſs.

I am one of thoſe who think that the whole ſyſtem of our foreign politics, on which this war was undertaken, has been faulty; I think alſo, that ſpringing from the ſame ſource, our whole ſyſtem of domeſtic policy has been equally faulty.—They have run on together in a parallel progreſs, and have produced all the varied calamities which the people have been doomed to ſuffer. I think therefore, that whatever may be the reſult of the negociation on which his majeſty has been at length adviſed to open, whether it ſhall produce as I hope it will, the bleſſing of a ſpeedy and permanent peace, or that its object ſhall be fruſtrated, and that we ſhall be doomed to the continuance of war, ſtill it will be the duty of this houſe ſeriouſly to conſider the ſyſtem which has produced theſe evils, and to deviſe the means of preventing ſuch evils in future. Peace I own, to be our great object—the firſt, the chief thing to be purſued, and if poſſible, to be obtained:—But whether peace itſelf, without ſuch a review & ſuch a change of ſyſtem as may protect us in future from ſuch calamities, can reſtore us to our former condition, may be a matter of doubt. Peace would certainly be beneficial even accompanied by the bad ſyſtem that has lately been introduced. Peace might enable the people a little longer to endure the evils with which that ſyſtem is fraught; it might render it a little leſs pernicious on account of the advantages which would flow from the revival of induſtry and trade; and therefore, at all events, let us have peace! Peace at all events! But let it be thoroughly underſtood that in the one caſe it would only be a palliative; in the other it would be a remedy. Peace without reform would enable the people to bear a little longer the burthens under which they groan; but peace with a reform would not only let them free, but keep them ſo. Peace therefore ſhall have my cordial ſupport, and every meaſure, like the preſent, that leads to the deſirable event, or that makes an opening towards it, ought to be received with unanimity by all deſcriptions of men.

The noble lord who moved the addreſs to his majeſty in a manner ſo highly to his credit, & who, I am ſure, will believe me when I ſay, that I ſincerely rejoice in the diſplay of talents which he has made tonight, as he knows that I have many reaſons for rejoicing at his ſucceſs, (and I certainly never heard an addreſs moved with more propriety and taſte) has made uſe of one expreſſion which went a little further, and is a little fuller than the ſpeech itſelf. Speaking of the negociation being opened, he ſaid that "the preſent government of France, poſſeſſing ſtability and power, was a government with which we might ſafely and politically treat." This is a propoſition which I will not now inveſtigate; I who always thought them a government with which we ought to treat, I cordially approve of this expreſſion of the noble lord, and with the ſpeech had been equally explicit; for I am of opinion that whenever you have to negociate with any perſons, it is found policy to treat them with reſpect. The expreſſion of the noble lord is therefore deſerving of approbation: good ſenſe produced in the noble lord what in my opinion ought alſo to have ſtruck his majeſty's miniſters, and what I ſhould have rejoiced to have ſeen in the ſpeech, and in the addreſs, namely, that it was wiſe and ſeaſonable to ſpeak of the government with which we had to treat, in terms of reſpect and civility.

Oct. 9. Yeſterday forenoon, the following official letter from Ld. Grenville was received by the Ld. mayor, & was immediately communicated at Lloyd's coffee-houſe, and on the royal exchange:—

"Downing-ſtreet, half paſt 10 o'clock, Oct. 5.

"I have the honor to inform your lordſhip, that a paſſport has been received this morning from France, for ſuch perſons his majeſty may think proper to ſend for the purpoſe of treating for the re-eſtabliſhment of peace."

"GRENVILLE."

NIAGARA, December 28, 1796.

Should the preſent war not a little longer continue, there can ſcarce be a doubt the United States muſt take an active part. The myſterious recall of the French ambaſſador, which is as myſteriouſly explained, added to the outrageous behavior at Longdon are ſtrong indications of ſuch an event. And if a war between France and the States become the iſſue, we may expect a treaty between us and the States of theſe parts muſt then come on ſpeedily.

For the particulars of the violence at Longdon, we refer to the following account:—

New-York, Nov. 17.

On Saturday laſt arrived in this city, Capt. Luke Cadwiſe, of the brig Glaſgow, belonging to this port. He left Longdon in company with the 6 following maſters of veſſels:—B. Huggins, G. Byrne, J. Snell, J. Boyd, of Philadelphia; Z. Hunt, of Providence, R. I. and J. Marythus, of New-Bern.

Capt. Boyd died ſoon after they left Longdon. They abandoned their veſſels in conſequence of the cruel treatment they received from the French, and made their eſcape on the night of the 28th of Sept. laſt, on board the ſhip Union, Samuel Davis, maſter, in which they arrived at Rhode-Iſland.

Capt. Davis had his cargo taken from him, and regained his veſſel, by giving ſecurity to re-ſhip her if ſhe ſhould be condemned. They gave him 80 dollars to lay in proviſions, &c. but took it from him afterwards for port charges; and alſo obliged him to make good a bad debt they had contracted in the ſale of his cargo.

Capt. Davis is entitled to great applauſe for carrying off from a tedious and irkſome confinement ſo many of his countrymen, at the utmoſt danger of his life—as the French, ſuſpecting he would attempt it, threatened to hang him. Capt. Davis effected his laudable purpoſe in the night.

Capt. King of this port, who was carried into Longdon, made a proteſt before a French notary, who, as ſoon as he received payment for it, took it away again.

A CARD.

Mr. COCKREL takes this method of returning his ſincere thanks to the inhabitants of Newark, and its vicinity, for their polite attention and patronage, during the time he acted as ſchoolmaſter. But having reſigned, he is happy in announcing to the public, that the Rev'd Mr. ARTHUR has been prevailed on to be his ſucceſſor; and from a knowledge of his abilities and conduct, there is not the leaſt doubt of his rendering the greateſt ſatisfaction to thoſe who may think proper to place their children under his care.

Newark, Dec. 28.

THE School lately taught by Mr. Richard Cockrel, will be opened, on Tueſday next, under the direction of the Rev'd Mr. Arthur. The pupils will be inſtructed in reading according to the moſt approved method, and Engliſh grammar, writing and arithmetic, the Latin and Greek languages, geography and the mathematics, to which will be added, if required, an introduction to the other ſciences.

N. B. If any number of boys offer and books can be procured, a Latin claſs will commence immediately.

Newark, Dec. 28, 1796.

N. B. The inclemency of the weather of laſt week, together with other unavoidable cauſes, prevented our attention to cuſtomers ſerved by poſt. Nothing other than neceſſity ever cauſes a delay of the kind.

LONDON, October 7.

HOUSE OF COMMONS,
Thursday, October 6.

After all the difficulties and jealousies which we have had to explore, it would surely have been wise in a speech to be delivered from the throne, that his majesty's ministers should have named the persons at least whom they were to send, and the country with which we are at war. In former times, if they had occasion to send a minister to the Hague, they would have addressed themselves "to the states general of the United Provinces," and on the present occasion the same policy demands that they should have addressed themselves "the executive directory of the French republic." I think I observe a smile upon this remark, but why it is made I profess I know not. Are the French directory in such a state of obscurity as not to be worthy of name? We are about to send a person to this executive directory, and it is certainly not very political to do it in an ungracious manner. Perhaps the omission may be the effect of mere inadvertency, and that I may be more struck with it on account of the confirmation of the noble lord's speech. Perhaps I may be told that I am tenacious of an opinion that I before held with respect to America, having thought that the gratuitous recognition of their independence was a wise and political measure, and would have greatly contributed to shorten the calamity of war: I am still wedded to the opinion, and because I saw advantages in this course which greatly overbalanced those who thought it prudent to make a bargain of our recognition. I still hold the same doctrine with respect to the French republic. I certainly shall have no objection to incur this charge. I do think it wise and political to acknowledge them at once by the title which they gave themselves: I think it agreeable to the practice of common life, and recommended by the prudence of all intercourse in private society. We know that in private communication, in disputes between man and man, there are points which cannot be insisted upon by the persons themselves, which at the same time others will not be disposed to dispute. It is certainly not political to hurt the pride of those with whom we have any point to settle; if we have any business to transact with a person in private life, it would hardly be thought consistent with decency and good manners, much less with policy and good sense, to deny him any title which he may happen to bear, or to which he may think he has a claim.—If the omission was the effect of mere inadvertency, I hope that pains will be taken to prevent all misunderstanding in the outset, and that we shall not have to regret our inattention and disregard of little points of etiquette, when we have so important an object as peace, depending upon the issue of our conduct. I hope, and I trust that this house hopes—I know that the country hopes—that the negociation will be successful. But, sir, if it shall not, much will be gained, if it should be proved to the people of this country, that nothing but the extravagance of terms had frustrated our endeavors to procure the desirable end, much would be gained if it could be proved that no obstacle to peace had been thrown in the way, by our desire of restoring the ancient system of government in France, or by our neglecting to make our dispositions in this respect sufficiently manifest.

The jealousy of the French republic is sufficiently visible. It would have removed all jealousy and stilled every suspicion if the executive directory had been addressed by name, and we had thereby made a decisive public declaration, that whatever might be its form of government, whether a monarchy or a republic, we are desirous of negociating for a peace with France. This, sir, would have reconciled me more cordially to the form of proceeding which his majesty's ministers have now adopted, and would have given me infinitely more confidence in its success. I shall not, however, object to the clause by any amendment, because, if omitted by accident, I will not thwart the prosecution of the main object by my remark; they might refuse my amendment though convinced of their own error, from an unwillingness to be so corrected: and this is not the moment in which I shall endeavor to throw any thing that may be construed into a check upon their conduct: I wish to leave them in possession of full powers—Of as full powers as any ministers ought to be entrusted with, in order that they may carry on the negociation unshackled and unrestrained. For this reason, sir, I repeated it, I shall propose no amendment, though I have thought it necessary to stay my opinion on this part of the speech.

As to the misunderstanding between this country and Spain, I shall say nothing; there is no information on this subject before us. Ministers say that their conduct has been moderate and forbearing. I hope it has been so, I hope that they have learnt by the several lessons of adversity which we have recently been taught, that moderation and forbearance are not only consistent with true interest, but also with true magnanimity. I was sanguine enough to hope that the lesson which we learnt from America, would have been sufficient to convince us of this important truth, and that we should not have had occasion to have gone to the school of adversity again to confirm us in it. His majesty's ministers, however unfortunately for England and for humanity, did not think in the same manner; now however, I hope they have learnt not merely that moderation and forbearance are the most magnanimous, but also the most prudent principles of conduct; and that not merely no perfect security, but no real grandeur, can be maintained without a steadfast adherence to them. Of Spain therefore and of the question at issue with that court I shall say one word; the materials for a perfect judgment are not before us. One thing, however I cannot omit, because it is reasonable and instructive; it ought to convince us how short sighted is human policy. We cannot have forgotten the stress that was laid upon the advantageous crisis, and the favorable circumstances under which we engaged in this war. "With all Europe for your allies, and particularly with Spain and Prussia by your side, you are to encounter France left without a friend." Such was the high and lofty sounding invitation that was held out to engage you to plunge into the war. Now you are told from the throne that you have a misunderstanding with the court of Spain, and as to Prussia, not a word is said of Prussia, but I apprehend that no very sanguine hopes are entertained of assistance from that quarter; so much for the sagacity, that led us into the crusade! Wisdom, they say, cannot be purchased too dear, it will not be denied but that we have paid a tolerable price, but having paid the price, let us at least have the benefit of the wisdom we have bought, and practise the virtues moderation and forbearance of which we have so slowly and so feelingly learnt the value.

As to the terms of peace, the present is not the moment for saying one word upon the subject. I have no difficulty in asserting that there are still greater resources in this country, even in its present state, if the people were fairly and fully convinced that the blessings of peace were refused through the perverseness or the ambition of France. I have no hesitation in saying, that if, after manifesting a disposition of candor, simplicity and openness, in negociating the terms of a peace, it should still appear that they refuse to accede to a just and reasonable peace, we not only should find ample resources in this country for prosecuting the war with vigor, but we should prosecute it with such an unanimity of heart as would draw forth all the energy and all the vigor of the nation. I say thus much in the contemplation of a clear, candid and manly procedure on the part of our ministers, and I have no doubt but I shall be cordially joined by every part of the country in this declaration, that if they do so conduct themselves, they will meet with universal support. But on the other side we ought to negociate in the spirit of great moderation. I have no difficulty in saying, for one, that I should find much less fault if the terms of peace were faulty on the side of moderation, than I should be inclined to do if faulty in the contrary extreme. To ignominious terms of peace I know and believe that this country would never be made to submit. But I wish it clearly to be understood, that, rather than supporting any ministers in extravagant pretensions, arising either from the pride of transient fortune or from natural arrogance, I would be much more disposed to give my allurance to terms, that on a due investigation of our claims might be considered as rather below than above our right. I have no difficulty in saying, in case of such a balance, on which side the scale ought to turn; but I do not think that the present is the fit moment to enter into the discussion of terms at all; for, in my mind, the whole of this ought to be left to ministers, as not our interest only, but also the relative interest of the different powers are to be affected by the negociation.

With regard to the Austrian victories, which make a topic of animated exultation in his majesty's speech, it may certainly be right to rejoice in the gallantry they have displayed, and the laurels they have recently acquired. No man admires their great military exertions more than I do, but let it be recollected that we are called upon to rejoice on their having recovered only a part of what was lost in this campaign, and that it is not because they have reaped successes, calculated to obtain what ministers themselves originally stated the object of the war to be, but because they have saved the house of Austria from the utter destruction with which it was threatened; while we rejoice, I presume we can hardly flatter ourselves that the Austrians are likely to recover all they have lost in the present campaign, much less what they have lost in all the campaigns that are past; and even this, sir, must furnish a new subject for reflection, which the achievements of our navy still farther serve to corroborate; the achievements of that navy have been brilliant and glorious; at no former period have they displayed greater gallantry, and never perhaps, equal skill. No eulogiums can be too high for their merits. Yet after all this, the character of the peace which we are desirous to obtain, and the utmost we can expect, is, that it shall be solid and of permanent duration; this I believe is as high a character as the peace is likely to derive. Then what must be the sort of conduct in which we are engaged, in which after a four years successful exertion of all the skill and all the valor of our navy, in which they have invariably conquered and carried the flag of England triumphant to every quarter of the world, all our efforts cannot procure to us a peace that may be solid and permanent? Must we not own that there is something in the cause in which we are engaged radically defective, that pallies our efforts and disappoints our strength? That there is something which demands from the common sense and from the prudence of Englishmen, a strict and rigorous investigation, that we may discover what this something is, not merely to retrieve the present calamity, but guard our offspring against the error in future?—A day will come for such question; and I give my assent to the present address, without moving any amendment upon the points which I do not cordially approve, because when the day of such a discussion does come, I shall have an opportunity to make the observations that I think it important for the house to entertain upon those points. No great distance of time shall elapse, before I will think it my duty to bring this matter before you, since I think it of the most essential importance to the well being of the country, and to the true support and dignity of his majesty's crown, that an enquiry into all the causes which have brought the nation in to its present condition, and produces the calamities of the present war, would be instituted for the purpose of advising his majesty to make a fundamental change in the system upon which we have lately acted, both with regard to foreign and domestic policy. When this day shall come, and that I shall move this house upon this great and constitutional subject, I should not like to be told that I have precluded myself from the discussion of these topics, and shut myself up from enquiring not merely into the causes, but the conduct of the war, as well as into the nature of our domestic misfortunes, on the assent which I have given to the address of this day. For this reason, sir, I have thought it necessary to say so much, and with this reserve of freedom for a future day of discussion, I do not oppose the address to his majesty upon his speech from the throne.

(Mr. Fox was then followed by the chancellor of the exchequer.—See our next.)

"On the first day of the first month, let no order the things that are to be let in order."

IT has been remarked by ingenuous moralists, that "in the negligence of man kind suffers divisions of time, to pass unregarded away, yet at the close of centuries and years, it is common to pause and compute in what manner they have been employed. To justify the ruin of this observation, most of my practitioners, who have toyed with time, days and months, begin now to grieve that another idle year is gone, and resolve that the next shall be more busy. While all around him are repeating the compliments of the season, with jocund voices, wishing each other "A happy new year," the Lay Preacher, with affectionate zeal, will suggest plans, by which these annual wishes for felicity may be realized.

Most men are criminally idle. I confess with candor, that I loiter and slumber much and while I preach industry to others, am myself a castaway. But the sun, which darts its reproachful rays through the curtain undrawn, at nine o'clock, seems to upbraid my sluggishness, and to wish that I would announce to the lazy of my flock, that they will not, like him, at once arise and be of use, unless like him, they rise feasonably. My readers are therefore vehemently exhorted, early to extinguish their candles, and to use the day lamp, which neither sputters nor flares, whose wick never burns out, and whose oil never fails. All who wish that the year may be happy, must rigorously observe this injunction. No complaints must be heard of the cruelty of winter mornings, or the shortness of summer nights, but as soon as the above LAMP begins to glimmer, let them rise and work. They will soon be convinced that it is so ingeniously contrived, its radiance will not offend the eyes, nor its exhalations taint the lungs, like the vulgar tapers of midnight. If the Lay Preacher himself, should contrary to his own doctrine, be found snoring in his study, while his neighbors are walking in their vocation, he gives them full permission to call a council and dismiss him from his office.

Instead of employing the usual phrase, of "a happy new year," it would perhaps, be an improvement to vary the phrase, and adapt it to the character of the person, who is addressed.

Thus, should I compliment a man of feeble knees, whose eyes are red, and whose purse is impoverished by "tarrying late at the wine," I should wish him a sober year. I should wish that his landlord, when the third bowl or bottle was called for, would refuse to trust, and that the liquor he swallowed, instead of raising, would depress his spirits, and that he might perufe seriously, that chapter of the prophet, which denounces "woe to the drunkards of Ephraim."

If I meant that a sluggard should enjoy a happy year, I should wish him an active and laborious one. I should apply to some noisy teamster, or some importunate client, to bellow at his window, at the dawn of day. I would even advance a dollar from my small salary, to purchase two cocks, to crow him up to exertion. The year of the idler, would then undoubtedly be happy. You would hear from him no complaints of spleen, or nervous disorders. He would have no bill to pay the apothecary for pills, to cure indigestion. He would not only "set his things in order, on the first day of the first month," but habit would cause order to appear throughout his affairs, during the year.

The wish for gamblers must be expressed in a very extraordinary & enigmatical manner. Instead of a happy new year, it would be the duty of their real friends to pray that it might be an unlucky one. An unlucky year would be a year of jubilee to the gamester. Such a year would operate a thorough reformation. Should the friendly wish for ill luck be realized, and the gamester neither hold four knaves by honors, to the odd trick, what a clear saving to his purse! He would soon consider cards as the emblems of misfortune, he would endeavor to grow rich, by surer calculations, he would not only discard the knave from his hand, but from his conduct, and be more anxious to turn the penny, than a trump.

Finally, to use the parison's immemorial adverb, finally, brethern, the Lay Preacher, with the fervent kindness of St. Paul, "sendeth greeting to many," and wishes that this and every future year may prove eminently happy. That this hope may not be defeated, he recommends the adoption of every laudable means, to promote so valuable an end. Due attention to order in the distribution of time, to economy of expense, and prudence of behaviour, will occasion the present to be like the happiest of past years, yea and much more abundant.

Tuesday the 27th ult. being the anniversary of the festival of St. John; Lodges No. 2 and No. 4 of Free and Accepted Masons, and a number of visiting brethren from other lodges, clothed in the respective badges of of their masonic honors, and preceded by a band of music, playing masonic airs, walked in procession to the presbyterian meeting-house of this town, where the Rev. Mr. J. Dun delivered a most excellent and philanthropic discourse, suitable to the occasion, calculated no less to instil the unalterable principles of piety and sound morality, than affection and reverence towards the royal craft: nor is it more than justice to observe that the deep attention paid by a crowded audience marked in the most unequivocal manner the merits of the discourse, and its effect upon the hearers.

October 5, 1796. 60

If ever the day shall come when an examination shall be instituted into the steps which have been adopted to secure the re-establishment of the general tranquility, I am confident that no endeavors for that purpose have been wanting on the part of his majesty's ministers. But gentlemen must be sensible that what may be admitted as an endeavor to restore peace, depends upon a variety of circumstances, and is likely to be differently appreciated by individuals of opposite sentiments. It depends on the relative state of parties, on the number of allies with whom we may be engaged to act, on the degree of attention we pay to their interests, and on the concert we wish to preserve with them.

Taking all these necessary considerations into view, I again pledge myself that it will be found in the result of an enquiry, that ministers have neglected no opportunity which could have been improved for the purpose of accelerating peace. But the honorable gentleman has told us that we are at last come to the period which he had all along pointed out; that we have now consented to adopt that course which he has uniformly recommended since the commencement of the contest—to send a person to Paris—and try the effect of negociation. He takes to himself all the merit of that policy which we have tardily adopted, and so confident did he feel himself in this ground of self-exultation—that he deemed all illustration of his victory, and merely made it the subject of one triumphant observation. His assertion was, "you are now taking those measures, which, if you had listened to my counsels, you might have adopted four years ago."—But does it follow that the measure was right then—because it is right now!—May not a period of four years produce many events to justify a material change of policy, and to render measures wise and expedient—which at a certain time would neither have been prudent nor reasonable? Because you do not chuse to make peace the day after an unprovoked aggression, may you not be justified in holding out pacific overtures after a lapse of four years? The argument of the honorable gentleman amounts to this, that either you must make peace the day after the aggression—or not make it at all. With respect to the relative situation of this country and Spain, it would not be consistent with my duty to go into any detail on that subject at the present moment.

As to the question of our resources, the honorable gentleman admits them to be extensive and flourishing. They furnish indeed, in a moment like the present, a subject of peculiar congratulation and well-grounded confidence. If the revenue, after a four years war, which might have been expected to have injured it so materially in so many branches, and after all the additional burthens which have been imposed, still keeps up the rate of last year, that circonfidance is surely no slight source of satisfaction.

With respect to the state of the commerce I am enabled to speak in a very different strain. Notwithstanding all the embarrasments which it has had to encounter, it has attained and still continues to enjoy a pitch of unexampled prosperity. Those embarrasments have proceeded from various causes; the expence of the war abroad, and the high price of articles of consumption at home; the situation of part of the continent, where the markets have been shut against us, and even the growth of our capital re-acting upon the commerce which occasioned it, to that it was an unequivocal proof, temporary prosperity was itself a cause of temporary distress. Of the continuance of this prosperity we have now the best assurance. The state of our exports during the last six months has been equal to what they have been in the most flourishing years of peace, and our imports have diminished in a very small proportion from what they have been at periods accounted the most prosperous. Under these circumstances, whatever temporary embarrasments may have risen from the quantity of specie sent out of the country—from the want of a sufficient circulating medium, from the state of foreign markets, and from the increase of our capital; and however these difficulties may for a time have obstructed the ordinary operations of finance, the commercial character of the country has lost neither its vigor nor importance. At such has been the state of things at a period when the country has had to contend for every thing dear to it; it, notwithstanding all the obstacles which have clogged the machinery, the spring has retained so much force and energy, we may presume—that if by the obstinacy and ambition of the enemy, we should be called to still greater exertions, that our resources as yet remain untouched, and that we shall be able to call them forth with a degree of concert and effect worthy of the character of the British nation, and of the cause in which they will be employed.' These resources have in them nothing shadowy or delusive. They are the result of an accumulated capital, of gradually increasing commerce, of high and established credit. They are the fruits of fair exertion—of laudable ingenuity—of successful industry; they have been produced under a system of order and of justice, while we, under many disadvantages, have been contending against a country which exhibits in every respect the reverse of the picture.—A proof that the regular operation of those principles must triumph over the unnatural and exhausting efforts of violence and extortion. By these resources we are now qualified to take such steps as may tend to conduct us to a solid and durable peace, or if we do not succeed in that object, to prosecute the contest with a firmness and confidence. The honorable gentleman suggested one remark, that the speech contained no recognition of the government of France. He wasted a good deal of ingenuity in attempting to prove that it ought to have contained an express acknowledgement of the French government. It ought to have occured to him that a passport having been sent for and granted, some communication must have taken place on that occasion and as that executive directory has been established with the form of communication and the mode in which they had been addressed, it could not be necessary for him to state a difficulty where they had found none. I can assure him that no question of etiquette, no difficulty of form, shall be permitted to stand in the way of negociation, or to obstruct the attainment of the great object of peace. As to the other points, the right honorable gentleman has [illegible] lesson we ought to derive from the experience of address.—These lessons may be greatly varied according to the situation of parties and the different points of view in which the subject is considered, but when the right hon. gentlemen tells us that the situation of this country is that of adversity, I can by no means agree to the proposition. How far it deserves to be ranked under that description, let those pronounce who are best acquainted with the state of our resources. It cannot surely be termed a state of adversity from any losses of our trade, the diminution of our capital, or from the reduction of any of our foreign possessions. We have not been greatly impoverished by the events of the war in the East-Indies. We cannot be much weakened in our national strength, by having our navy, in consequence of repeated triumphs over every hostile squadron, raised to a greater degree of glory and of fame than it had ever before attained. Where, then, are we to look for the symptoms of this adversity? Are we to look for them in the losses and disasters of our allies? But, does the honorable gentleman appeal to these as a criterion of adversity, when in the same breath I hear him hold out as a source of complaint that you are not under your present circumstances sure of a triumphant peace. And why can you not command such a peace? because you will not separate your own greatness, and your own commerce, from the interest and from the fate of your allies; because you refuse to purchase peace for yourselves on any other terms than these which will secure the tranquility of Europe, and consider the situation of Great-Briton as chained to that of the continent, by the bands of a liberal and comprehensive policy. If what has been lost on the continent is a subject of regret, it is at least a topic on which we have no reason to reproach ourselves. If even the prospect in that quarter continued as gloomy as it was some time since, and if the extremity had not roused the armies of the emperor to those gallant and spirited exertions which have been crowned with such brilliant and unprecedented success; no share of blame could attach to us.

NIAGARA, January 18, 1797.

On Monday last the court of king's bench opened in this town, when his honor, John Elmsley, esq took his seat as chief-justice of this province.

We were yesterday favored by obliging friends, with Philadelphia papers to the 16 ult. and those of New-York, to the 26th, from which we have made the following extracts for this week:—

"The latest London accounts are to the 14th Oct. at which time lord Malmesbury was departing as ambassador to Paris to negociate a peace. His attendants are Messrs. Swyner, Wiben, Dressens, and Brooks. Secretary to the embassy, Geo. Ellis, esq.—A letter from a respectable house in Liverpoole, speaks discouragingly of obtaining the object.—No accounts of the armies.

In the late election Mr. Adams had 71 votes, and Mr. Jefferson, 5 for president of the United States; Mr. Pinckney 63, and Mr. Burr 23, for vice-president. Mr. Adams and Mr. Pinckney are elected, and to commence in office in March next.

President Washington opened both houses of congress, the 7th of December: in his speech he says—

"It is with much pain and deep regret I mention, that circumstances of a very unwelcome nature, have lately occurred. Our trade to the West-Indies, from the conquests of the French republic; & communications have been received from its minister here, which intimate the danger of a further disturbance of our commerce, by the authority by which are, in other respects, for from agreeable. It has been my constant, & sincere wish, in conformity with that of our nation, to maintain the dial harmony, and a perfect friendship under standing with that republic.—This must remain undated; and I shall persevere in the endeavor to fulfil it, to the utmost extent of what shall be consistent with a just & unimpeachable regard to the rights & honor of our country; nor will I easily cease to cherish the expectation, that a spirit of justice, candor and friendship, on the part of the republic, will eventually ensure success. In pursuing this course, however, I cannot forget what is due to the character of our government and nation; or to a full and entire confidence in the good sense, patriotism, self respect and fortitude of my countrymen. I reserve for a special message, a more particular communication on this important subject.

To which the house replied "We sincerely lament, that whilst the conduct of the United States has been uniformly impressed with the character of equity, moderation, and love of peace, in the maintenance of all their foreign relationships, our trade should be so harrassed by the cruizers and agents of the republic of France, throughout the extensive departments of the West Indies. Whilst we are confident that no cause of complaint exists, that could authorise an interruption of our tranquility, or discharge that republic from the bonds of amity, cemented by the faith of treaties, we cannot but express our deepest regret, that official communications have been made to you, indicating a more serious disturbance of our commerce. Altho' we cherish the expectation, that a spirit of justice, and consideration of our mutual interests, will moderate their councils; we are not unmindful of the situation in which events may place us, nor unprepared to adopt that system of conduct which, comparable with the dignity of a respectable nation, necessity may compel us to pursue."

And to which the representatives also answered—

"We have ever concurred with you in the most sincere and uniform disposition to preserve our mutual relations inviolate, and it is, of course, with anxiety and deep regret we hear that any interruption of our harmony with the French republic has occurred: For we feel with you and with our constituents, the cordial and unabated wish to maintain a perfect, friendly understanding with that nation. Upon endeavors to fulfil that wish, (and by all honorable means to preserve peace and to restore that harmony and affection which have hitherto so happily subsisted between the French republic and the United States) cannot fail therefore, to interest our attention. And while we participate in the full reliance you have expressed in the patriotism, self respect and fortitude of our countrymen, we cherish the pleasing hope, that a mutual spirit of justice and moderation on the part of the republic will ensure the success of your perseverances.

Capt. Myrick in 40 days from Lisbon, arrived at Boston the 18th Nov. confirms the account of a Spanish fleet having proceeded up the Mediterranean, nearly as far as Cortez, fell in with, and captured 6 of admiral Jarvis' squadron, and a number of transports under convoy, (having evacuated Corsica) which had arrived at Alicant; also that the Portuguese are in daily expectation of an invasion from the French; and that Spain had actually declared war against England; this last is also further confirmed by another American vessel which lately spoke a Spanish frigate that was sent express to their American provinces with the declaration.

Jan. 18. 1797.

While the violence of France has been overturning to gross a part of Europe, and every where carrying desolation to its progress, your naval exertions have enabled you to counterbalance their successes by acquisitions in different parts of the globe, and to give this way for the restoration of peace to your allies, on terms which their own strength might have been unable to procure. If you look indeed to the geographical situation of the seat of war, the emperor has not surprised by his recent victories all that he had formerly lost. But do you count for nothing the destruction and ruin of those armies; by whom are the previous successes of the enemy had been achieved? do you count for nothing the glories and immortal testimony that has been exhibited to mankind, that disciplined valor must finally triumph over those principles that the war was undertaken to oppose, and which owed all their extraordinary and unaccountable success to the violence in which they originated, and the success with which they are accompanied. A memorable warning has also been afforded with respect to the true consequences which have resulted to those foreign powers who in opposition to their true interests have courted the alliance of that enemy, and expected to find security in disgraceful tranquility. Recent events have served also to exculpate the characters of those who were calumniated as desirous to embrace their principles, and receive their laws, and in Germany they have left behind them nothing but the memory of their wrongs, and a feeling of eternal resentment. Are such effects to be considered as of small importance, or to be put in competition with the reduction of a fortress, or the possession of a district? Of the virtues to be acquired in the school of adversity, the honorable gentleman only mentions those of moderation and forbearance. Moderation I should consider as that virtue which is best adapted to the dawn of prosperity: there are other virtues of no less importance which are to be acquired under a reverse of fortune, and which are equally becoming in those who are called to suffer: there are the virtues of adversity encountered & adversity surmounted. The recent example of Germany has furnished an illustrious instance of fortitude & perseverance:—and these have had their merited reward. These were lessons which I trust this country has not to learn. England has never shewn itself deficient in firmness and magnanimity: it is unrivalled in resource: it has always been foremost in the career of honorable exertion, and it has only to maintain its accustomed vigor and perseverance to effect the restoration of general tranquility upon terms consistent with the dignity of its own character, and the security and interests of Europe.

Mr. Fox said a few words in explanation, in which he complained that the chancellor of the exchequer had misrepresented his argument respecting the propriety of the time for negociation. He did not argue that because it was right to negociate now, that it was right to negociate at a former period. What he contended was, had he had not altered his opinion from any thing that he had heard, that it was prudent and wife to fend an ambaſſador to Paris, not when the French have carried their arms into the heart of Germany, and are in poſſeſſion of Italy, it would not have been daſtardly and puſillanimous to have adopted that meaſure, when they had not one foot of that territory. He allowed that it might be ſometimes puſillanimous to negociate, but he was convinced that thoſe who had been in the habit of applying this term during the courſe of the war to any propoſition for negociation, had now renounced that opinion. He ſtill retained his opinion reſpecting the new laws, and when he voted for the addreſs, he did not include them in his conſtruction of that part of it in which mention is made of the wiſdom and energy of the laws.

The queſtion upon the addreſs was then put and carried nemine contradicente.

NEW-YORK, Dec. 27.

At a common council, held on Thurſday the 15th day of Dec. inſt. it was reſolved, that this board will pay the ſum of FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS to any perſon who ſhall diſcover and proſecute to conviction any offender or offenders, who ſhall be found attempting to ſet fire to this city.

We have an account, by a veſſel from North Carolina, that a ſerious diſpute has taken place at Wilmington, between the people of that place and the French. The occaſion is ſaid to be the refuſal of ſome merchants to deliver to the French a quantity of ſugar, which had been landed and ſtored from a prize veſſel, for the purpoſe of repairing her, before the French had reimburſed the merchants for the monies they had advanced for the repairs. It is ſaid force was employed; that two ſailors belonging to New-York were killed, and the inhabitants of the town under arms.—We give this as probable, as the report comes from a reſpectable quarter.

Lat. 18, 18, long. 64, capt. Bird, ſpoke ſchooner Sally, capt. Tappins, of Newburyport, who ſailed from Martinique the day before them. Capt. T. informed, that the day before, off Guadaloupe, was boarded by a Spaniſh frigate, direct from Spain, with a Britiſh prize ſhip in company, taken on the paſſage; treated them with the greateſt politeneſs, and informed, that he was ſent expreſs to the Spaniſh American poſſeſſions, with a declaration of war againſt Great-Britain.

While captain Bird lay at St. Pierre's (Martinique.) Nov. 8. he ſaw hand-bills, containing a declaration of war againſt Spain, poſted up at all the corners of the ſtreets; an embargo likewiſe took place the ſame day throughout the iſland, and every Spaniſh veſſel in their ports was ſtripped and their ſails carried aſhore.

Lat. 31, long. 74, ſpoke brig Fame, capt. Tilden, 24 day from Surinam, bound to Boſton. Capt. T. informed, that he had been embargoed at Surinam 7 weeks, and that port had been in a ſtate of blockade during nearly the whole period.

NIAGARA, January 25, 1797.

We have the pleaſure of informing our readers from good authority, that his majeſty's frigate, Carriſford, has taken and carried into Ireland a rich Spaniſh regiſter ſhips. The officers and ſhip's company will ſhare more prize money than ever fell to the lot of any individual before.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at Detroit, to his friend in Queenſton, dated the 19 inſt.

"I take the earlieſt opportunity of informing you of the unfortunate deaths of Samuel Butler, and Doct. Parks, who periſhed on the ice the 22d ult. on their way to this place. Mr. Curtis gave me the following account of the affair:—On Wedneſday the 21ſt, he left the veſſel in Hope's cove, (where they had taken ſhelter after being driven from the mouth of the river by uncommon bodies of ice,) in company with Mr. Butler, Doct. Parks and Mr. Patterſon, and arrived in the evening at an iſland on the lake, about 15 miles from the main land and about half way from the veſſel to the new Canada ſettlement, where they built a fire; but unfortunately they had loſt their proviſions in climbing ſome of the ridges of ice, which were, in ſome places, nearly 20 feet high, and in many places very glare.—The next day they attempted to make the main land, and about 12 miles from thence, Mr. Curtis left the other gentlemen, all in good ſpirits; but from the ſeverity of the weather, their faces were a ſcale of ice; they ſtill following as faſt as they could. About ſun half an hour high, Mr. Curtis reached a houſe, having almoſt loſt his ſight, and ſenſes from the coldneſs of the weather:—he made ſigns that there were others behind; but was not underſtood. As ſoon as he recovered, he begged the people to go and try to ſave his companions, whom, he feared, would periſh; they went accordingly, in a ſleigh, and found Mr. Patterſon about 150 yards from land, lying on the ice almoſt dead; the other two gentlemen could not be found, it being dark, and the ice dangerous. The next day they again went in ſearch of them; it being cold, and Mr. Curtis unable to proceed they went no further. The following day, (the 24th) they went again, when they found Mr. Butler about 4 1-2 miles from land, having fallen on the ice and cut his thigh to the bone, which Mr. Curtis ſuppoſes, and which no doubt, was the cauſe of his death. Dr. Parks was likewiſe found within a few hundred yards of the ſhore."

We are informed that the above unfortunate young gentlemen were, Mr. Butler from the ſtate of New-Jerſey, and Dr. Parks from Newtown, Tioga county, ſtate of New-York, both reſpected in the places from whence they came.

Extract of a letter from a female member of the methodiſt ſociety in Baltimore, to her correſpondent in Philadelphia.

"I ſhall now enform you of our late and awful fire. On Sunday afternoon the 4th inſt. at 3 o'clock, juſt at the concluſion of Mr. W's ſermon, in the upper meeting houſe, the door was ſurrounded with the cry of fire! fire! fire! The hatters-ſhop adjoining our academy, was all in flames, and the academy was almoſt covered with ſmoke I was aſtoniſhed, that the alarm was not ſooner given! it was now impoſſible with all the engines in town to ſave the buildings between the academy and Mr. Hawkins's two houſes: when I ſaw the academy all in flames, I ſtill thought the preaching houſe may be ſpared; but no! 'tis gone, & with it flowed many a tear! I belive many that that almoſt the whole town would be conſumed, for the pumps began to fail before the preaching houſe was half burnt down. The meeting houſe might have been ſaved; but they were obliged to direct all their attention to Bryden's inn, as his cellars were full of rum, and his ſtables full of hay, ſo that had they been burnt, it was ſuſpected the flames would have run to Jone's falls. We are deprived of our meeting houſe, but it has pleaſed God to open the hearts of other denominations towards us, and they have opened the doors of their churches to our miniſters and congregation. M. Allifon the preſbyterian miniſter, has ſent word to our clergy that they were welcome to his chapel every Sunday at 3 o'clock and every evening in the week that they chooſe. The Quakers alſo have kindly offered their houſe, and the veſtry of St. Paul's church have done the ſame. I think this is a leſſon, for us to love one another, let them be of what denomination ſoever."

N. B. The perſon to whom the above letter was written; though feeling ſenſibly for the loſs ſuſtained by the Baltimoreans, yet rejoices at the catholiciſm exiſting among the different religious denominations, ſo as to open their houſes of worſhip to each other. Go and do thou likewiſe.

PARIS, October 7.

It seems that we are about to be involved in a war with Sweden. They write from Stockholm on the 9th Sept. that Mr. Peiochet, charge d'affairs of the French government at this court, and Mirivenux, his secretary of embassy, have received orders to quit Stockholm.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 21.

A letter from St. Bartholomew's, dated 9th November, to a merchant in this city, received by the schooner Experiment, arrived at Baltimore, mentions, that the court there had at length finally determined to deliver up all the French emigrants in that island, and, in consequence of which numbers of them were making their escape.—This island, as the reader will observe, belongs to the Swedes. The letter also mentions that the brig Lark, capt. Burroughs, and the schooner Good Intent Hathaway, both belonging to this port, lay there.

From the Philadelphia Gazette.

Never, perhaps, in a space of time equally short, was so much injury sustained from that destructive element, fire, as we have been witnesses of in the late conflagrations of Baltimore, New-York and Savannah. In this country it is evident nothing so tremendous has before been known. The last mentioned place, from its size, is related to have presented a more complicated object of wretchedness than either of those.

Picture to thyself, gentle reader, the horrid spectacle of whole families, who but now, were blessed with every comfort—every luxury of life, by the ravages of one fatal night, deprived of all they possessed on earth! Imagine the situation of a tender fair, whose feeble limbs have scarce been able to sustain her from the burning mansion, without clothes—without a shelter from the stormy night! Delineate next the wretched group of tender infants, seperated from their friends, bewildered and perishing—wives and maidens, destitute of fortitude, wringing their hands with grief, and weeping for the safety of their male supports—hoary age, without a hope of help, exposed to the inclemency of a wintery blast! Nay paint the mother of a new-born babe, bearing with pious care her helpless offspring from the devouring flame, but whither she herself knows not! Scenes like these and far more horrible are the effects of fire's confuming rage. If human misery has ever yet attained its summit, 'tis there attained:—If wretchedness has any claim on wealth, then is the time. With generous hearts, ye men of oppulence, unfold the comforts ye possess, and share them with the claimants in so just a right.

From a late NEW YORK paper.

IT is with regret we announce the capture of our vessels in the West Indies by the French. The British have, in compliance with the treaty, put an end to the capture and condemnation of our vessels, except when carrying on contraband trade; so that it is a rare thing to hear of their seizing American vessels. A few instances occur, and this can hardly be avoided, as neutrals are always employed more or less in illicit trade; and some lawless privateers are always on the ocean.

At this moment, when we are beginning to realize the benefits of the British treaty, and when we observe a disposition on the part of Great Britain to observe its stipulations, we are menaced with troubles from our old allies, the French.

We have seen a letter from the capt. of an American vessel at Leogane, confirming the account of abusive treatment received from the French at that place. One instance he specifies that deserves particular notice—they hauled down the American flag of a vessel belonging to Baltimore, then trampled it under feet and spit upon it.

NIAGARA, February 1, 1797.

We learn from every settlement the determination of a general innoculation for the small pox. This resolution is highly commended by every person of prudence. This country being young, and growing more exposed to that disorder, a general inoculation every one or two years, will forever render its prevalence in any way of very little concern, or injury to the community, there being then none or but few, except young children to be affected by it. This season of the year is highly favorable to it; to defer it until warm weather, or summer, is highly dangerous; the blood is in a state then easily to become putrid; fevers may set in with it, and beside these and to place it in the most favorable situation, the harvests must sustain infinite injury.—To enact a law to inforce a general inoculation looks arbitrary; but the writer of this who can in no wise be interested by himself nor friends, is of opinion that such a law, in any country, more particularly in a new one, would operate to the greatest possible benefit of the country, and justifiable on the principles of public & private good. But a so benecial law he expects never to see, so long as there remains a blindness in so many to their own safety & welfare; and a delicacy in our rulers to compel a man to throw off old prejudicies, and to do those things that are taught by the simple, and natural laws of self-defence.

Politicians begin to doubt the conclusion of a peace with France, this season; and it is, perhaps, a reasonable conjecture that the present probability of a war between that nation and our neighbors the United States, will procrastinate a conclusion by lord Malmesbury, until it shall have been known whether or not the States be pushed into the general combination; and should they thus take a part, and England have made a peace, she will preclude herself from a share in the Spanish American possessions, which may so easily be subdued by the States, and whole privateers, with a small assistance of our ships of war, would completely cut off all intercourse between Spain and her American colonies, and teach their rich regisier ships and galeons the way to the States, instead of to Madrid. Nor can we presume such an event undesirable to the people of these provinces, who but a few years, since were so ripe for a revolt as to offer subjection to the crown of England.

A letter, from which the following is an extract, was received in New York, dated St. Johns, Newfoundland, Oct. 10.

"I am sorry to inform you that captain Porte has been captured by a squadron of French men of war. They appeard off the harbour on the first ult. and had they then made an attempt on this place, I have no doubt they would have carried it; if they now attack, they would fail therein, we are now in a good state to defend ourselves.

DIED.]—At Presq'-Isle, the honorable ANTHONY WAYNE, esq. major-general and commander in chief of the army of the United States.

☞ To remove any apprehension of danger from the small-pox, the printer assures the public that there is not, and will not be in nor about the family not once any infected person; and the utmost care will be taken that such person do not frequent us, and thereby business be done at the office with all the former safety.

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS the moſt indubitable proofs of the hoſtile intentions of the court of SPAIN againſt Great-Britain, have determined his Majeſty to order his naval forces in every quarter of the world, not to neglect any favorable opportunity that may offer, of attacking the fleets of Spain, either ſingly, or unitedly with thoſe of France, or Holland, or of ſtriking any other blow at the poſſeſſions of the Spaniſh crown; and whereas I am commanded by his majeſty to cauſe his royal determination to be made known in the moſt public manner poſſible, to all his ſubjects within this province; I have therefore thought fit, by and with the advice of the executive council, to publiſh this proclamation, and I do hereby accordingly make known his majeſty's ſaid determination to all his ſubjects within this province; in his majeſty's name ſtrictly forbidding them to hold any correſpondence or communication with the king of Spain, his vaſſals or ſubjects, and requiring them in their ſeveral ſtations to do and execute all acts of hoſtility in their power, againſt the ſaid king of Spain, his vaſſals and ſubjects, and to prepare themſelves to oppoſe their attempts, to diſtreſs and injure them by ſea and land.

WEST-NIAGARA, February 8.

About 6 o'clock in the evening of the 26th ult. the new dwelling houſe of his honor the adminiſtration, lately built at York, and in conſiderable forwardneſs, took fire by ſome accident, and was entirely conſumed.

New York papers as late as the 19 of Jan. are received in town—it is reported they contain articles of importance, not having had it in our power to peruſe them, we ſhall not preſume, in this number, to ſtate particulars, as we hope in our next to lay before our readers their contents—The articles of this day are taken from theſe papers to Dec. 3.

Addreſſes are preſenting to his majeſty from ſeveral cities, thanking him for the diſpoſition he has diſcovered to give peace to the kingdom. This proſpect of the re-appearance of the olive branch in Europe, is in a degree obſcured by the very active exertions which are making in Germany, in recruiting and reinforcing the armies, and in levying contributions to raiſe the means to defray the great expences which ariſe. By the empreſs of Ruſſia ſending troops to aid the Auſtrians in oppoſing the French. By the number of ſeamen the parliament have voted, and the high wages they hold out to them. And by the high terms which it is probable the French will demand as the price of peace, and which the Engliſh will not be diſpoſed to grant. The exiſtence of the Spaniſh war will depend on the iſſue of this negociation.

Jourdan, general of the French army of the Sambre and Meuſe, being in an ill ſtate of health, has reſigned his command, and is ſucceeded by Beurnonville.

Martinique army returns from April 1, to Sept. 1, ſtates, that 5650 have died in that period. A company of artillery of 130, loſt 61 privates and 17 officers, in the month of Auguſt. The ſhip Majeſtick loſt 225 of her officers and men in 6 weeks. At St. Lucia it is ſtill more ſickly; but about 500 men are fit for duty.

Five or ſix Britiſh men of war have left Martinique to ſave their crews from the peſtilence, ſuch ravages there in an alarming degree. Admiral Thomas and Pole ſailed from that port October 3, for England, and admirals Parker and Bligh had a rival there, with 40 tranſports; a ſecret expedition was on foot.

Governor Hamilton, of Dominica, and preſident Eſtaile, of St. Kitts, are dead.

The Spaniſh ſquadron at Trinidad are expected at Guadaloupe.—The Leogane privateers, it is ſaid, have left off cruiſing, as the adminiſtration took the cargoes of the prizes, and pocketed the money.

RESOURCES OF SPAIN.

The annual revenue of this kingdom amounts to 20 millions and a half; its military eſtabliſhment 90 thouſand men, including 20 thouſand militia; and its naval forces, 238 veſſels, of which 71 are of the line.

It is ſaid Spain is to cede to France the very extenſive and beautiful country the province of Louiſiana; but, perhaps England and the United States will never witneſs, nor receive the acknowledgement of ſuch a deed.

The United-States contain 4 1-2 millions of ſouls; admiting then every ſeventh to be capable of bearing arms, their militia ſtrength is 650,000; of theſe, every fifth or thirty fifth ſoul, 130,000, may be ſpared without diſtreſſing the country. They have no large ſhipping, it is true, but it is much in their power to fit out privateers, and ſuddenly diſtreſs and anoy the trade of their enemies of any country.

On the 1ſt of October, at Kingſton, Jamaica, ſuperfine Philadelphia flower was from 5 to 10 dollars per barrel, at auction. The market was glutted with proviſions of every kind.

SIERRA LEONA IN AFRICA.

Free port of Piopongos.

Auguſt 1. This colony is at length eſtabliſhed, and with the beſt proſpects. Coffee thrives remarkably well, and we have ſome cotton.

We have received accounts from the Foulah country, that in a rebellion of his ſubjects the king has been put to death. The troubles in their interior have, in ſome degree, interrupted our traffic with the Foulahs who are the moſt civilized people on his coaſt:—they admit an intercourſe with our people, and profit by it. They have adopted ſome of our methods of agriculture, and other branches of huſbandry, eſpecially ſuch as relate to their live ſtock. We purchaſe from them rice, cotton, ivory, &c. the trade is yet in its infancy, and limited, but much may be made of it.

BOSTON, Dec. 24.

Yeſterday arrived the Snow Pacific Trader, Capt. Barnes, from Liverpool, 51 days.

By this arrival we have received London papers to October 29: But they contain no intelligence of moment. The accounts of military operations are no later than thoſe ſome time ſince from Paris: they are however of a very different caſt—ſo different, that it is impoſſible to reconcile them.—The French army of the 'Lower Rhine,' under Bournonville, remained between the Lieg and Lahon; while that under Gen. Moreau continued in the vicinity of Buchau, in Suabia, tho' ſome accounts ſtate, that his vanguard had arrived at Strasburgh. The archduke Charles, was advancing by the Rhine towards Suabia, and the Auſtrian diviſions in that circle formed a line of poſts from the Lake of Conſtantance, to the vicinity of Fort du Kheil. The capture of gen. Bounaparte is frequently mentioned in theſe papers; but without the leaſt authority. The proſpect of peace does not appear to brighten. Lord Malmſbury had arrived at Paris, but there were no accounts of his reception. The Britiſh Parliament appear to contemplate another campaign, by the votes of credit they paſs; the proviſions they have made for the ſupport of 195,177 men; and the grant of 360,000l. for the recruiting ſervice of 1797. The number of Auſtrians in Mantua, is ſaid to be 30,000, but many of them ſick; and Gen. Buonapatte was drawing thither all the reinforcements he could muſter in Piedmont. The naval equipments in England were not in the leaſt relaxed. The fleet chaled by the Spaniards into Gibralter, it appears was admiral Man's, who loſt ſome tranſports.

A gentleman from Porto Rico informs, that the American ſhip, Mount Vernon, captured by the French privateer, Flying Fiſh, capt. Paris had been condemned and ſold there. The preſences for her condemnation were various, but as being principally obviated, judgment was finally given on inſtructions ſent to the commander of the privateer, by the French miniſter, directing him to make prize of the ſhip. Paris, capt. of the privateers, had been appointed conſul at Porto-Rico, and ſat in judgment upon his own caſe.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman of reſpectability in Paris to his friend in this city, dated 9th Thermidor, 4th year:

Dear friend,

"The likeneſs of Gen. Buonparte being juſt come out, I ſend you two copies, one for yourſelf, and the other for my friend ——, I am ſure it will pleaſe you ſo much the more, as a ſingular diſcovery has lately been made reſpecting the place of his origin. He happens to be a countryman of yours, and even one of your friends, inſtead of being a Corſican, as firſt reported. Buonparte is an aſſumed name; his family name is SHALER, from Middletown in Connecticut. You will, no doubt, be able to judge of the truth directly: and not fail to aſcertain the fact in caſe the people of America may have any doubts about it. I expect they will rejoice at an event which has afforded me pleaſure, and procure me the advantage of receiving from him at this very moment every mark of friendſhip, in conſequence of our former acquaintance in America.

Salut and Fraternity.

Jan. 10. Capt. Barney hoiſted the American flag REVERSED on board his frigate! He is now in Baltimore: and if there is a drop of American blood unpolluted with foreign mixture, in that town, we truſt the captain will have a ſecond deputation to wait upon him—not to make bows and chuſe him for robbing his countrymen, but to demand ſatisfaction for the inſult.

The firſt advances of lord Malmeſbury to the French government for peace, are very cautious and guarded. The only point offered in his communication is a reſtoring of Britiſh conqueſts in the Eaſt & Weſt-Indies, againſt the French conqueſts in Germany.—

It appears to be the meaning, as far as it can be collected. The mode of communication is inexplicit, and as the directory in their anſwer well obſerve, looks like an attempt to delay, or play the hypocrite. Indeed there appears to be but a faint hope of peace.

And yet what can the French do? What have they done the laſt ſummer? Marched 200,000 men into Germany, loſt 50,000 of them; robbed and plundered the Germans, eat up their proviſions, burnt their villages, made themſelves hated, and returned back to the Rhine where they ſtarted. In Italy, they have done more; they have got a number of pictures and ſtatues, and are yet figting to keep their ground. Where is their money for another campaign?—What is their object? Conqueſt and aggrandiſement. Nothing elſe prevents a peace.

War was declared at New-Orleans againſt England, the 17th of November laſt.

VIENNA, Sept. 28.

The following advices, dated the 13th inſt. have been received from Mantua, relative to the proceedings of the army under field marſhal Wurmſer.

On the 11th that army was in full motion to advance to Mantua, by Sanginetto and Caſtellano. The advanced guard, which has begun its march two hours before the main body, was led by the generals Mezaros and Otto; and when it arrived in the vicinity of Cerea, was vigouroufly attacked by a corps of the enemy of about 6000 men, advancing from Verona, under the command of Gen. Buonaparte himſelf; the enemy had likewiſe filled all the houſes of the place with men. Our troops ſupported the attack with the greateſt reſolution, and attacked the village, out of which they drove the enemy with conſiderable loſs; and forced them to retreat precipitately to Verona. The Auſtrian troops, on this occaſion, took 372 priſoners, among which was a lieutenant colonel and 12 other officers, and 7 pieces of cannon. After this ſucceſs, the troops continued their march, notwithſtanding ſome faint attempts made by the enemy to oppoſe them, without further hindrance, to Mantua, where they ſafely arrived, and, in conjunction with the garriſon of that place, will proceed to further operations.

"According to the ſame advices of the 13th from Mantua, the enemy on that day, about ten in the morning, had attacked the Auſtrian army in their camp, under the walls of Mantua, between Formigula and the ſuburb of St. George. Field marſhal Wurmſer immediately haſtened to the place with his accuſtomed activity and reſolution, and the Auſtrian troops received the enemy with ſuch bravery, that they were obliged to retreat in haſte and in diſorder; and when theſe accounts came away, tho' the battle was not ended, the Auſtrian troops were ſtill purſuing; they had already taken, and brot into Mantua, more than 1500 priſoners, moſt of them French grenadiers.

The artillery made great havock among the enemy, who left a conſiderable number of dead on the field of battle. The Auſtrian troops had likewiſe taken ten pieces of cannon and ſeveral ammunition waggons.—As the battle was not over when theſe diſpatches were ſent off, a more circumſtantial official account of this apparently ſucceſsful action is to be expected."

(Another letter, ſame date)

According to accounts from Italy, field marſhal Wurmſer, on the 17th and 19th inſt. made two new attacks on the French near Mantua; no mention is made of them in this day's Court-Gazette. Direct accounts from general Wurmſer cannot indeed, now be received, as he has no free communication either with Klagenfurt, Goritz, or Venice. He is now in and near Mantua, with a very conſiderable body of troops; and the military Council has ſent ſtrong reinforcements to the Generals Quoſdanovich and Davidovich, with orders to make the utmoſt exertions to re eſtabliſh a communication with general Wurmſer."

General Mack, it ſaid, will ſet out for the army in Italy.

The ſupplement to the Court Gazette of the 27th inſt. contains further accouts of the victorious progreſs of archduke Charles, and the ſucceſsful operation of the troops in Swabia employed againſt the army of Moreau.

Gen. Frolich, in an action on the 17th near Kempton, took 230 priſoners, & again defeated the French on the 20th, in a battle near Ifny, in which the loſs of the enemy amounted to at leaſt 1200 men; 16 officers and 500 men were made priſoners, and the reſt of the whole corps killed, wounded or diſperſed. General Latour writes that, in the different actions that have taken place in Bavaria 1500 priſoners have been taken from the enemy, & their war cheſts. The gazette then proceeds:

"After the troops under Gen. La Tour had paſſed the Lech, the peaſants ſhewed every ſigns of hatred to the common enemy; they every where collected in great numbers, rang the alarm bells, armed themſelves with muſkes, pikes and every kind of weapons, and offered to join the Vanguard to purſue the enemy. Major General Count Vaillet, who commanded the Vanguard deſirous to profit by their ardour, put 1200 of them under the direction of Captains Melery and Andraſſy. Their zeal is in fact enthuſiaſm, and ſhews how much they muſt have ſuffered from the enemy.

CARLSRUHE, Sept. 20.

On the 18th inſt. at four in the morning, the Auſtrians attacked the French intrenchments near Kehl, and two batallions of the arch duke Ferdinand regt. ged the enemy with the bayonet; about ſeven o'clock they were maſters of the entrenchments and the fort; they had made 800 of the French priſoners, and killed or wounded 1200: the French general Scherb was among the ſlain. All the baggage, cannon and ammunition of the French fell into the hands of the Auſtrians; but the latter having neglected to deſtroy the bridge near the Rhine, and part of the ſoldiers being employed in dividing the booty, the French, about noon, having received a reinforcement of 3000 men, and being covered by a numerous artillery from the left bank of the Rhine, retook the fort, the poſſeſſion of which is ſo important in a campaign in Suabia.

The Auſtrians loſt about 400 men ſo killed and wounded, and retired to Bitſchofheim, where the head-quarters of general Petraſch now are.

A number of Auſtrian priſoners and wounded have been brought into Straſburg. Six hundred national guards have marched from that city for Landau, the garriſon of which place has taken the field under general Marſeſcot. A number of French troops are alſo on their march from Straſburgh for Subia.

As the Auſtrians have not deſtroyed the Bridge between Kehl and Straſbourgh, the French will always be able eaſily to ſend reinforcements into Subia.

JOSEPH EDWARDS, P. M.

A Salem, (Maſſachuſetts) paper of Dec. 20, mentions that a gentleman of that town had received a letter from his friend at Liverpool (Nova-Scotia) dated November 22d, wherein it is ſaid that a Packet from England had arrived at Halifax, bringing accounts of the differences with Spain having been accomodated, and a happy proſpect of the negociation with France favorably terminated. But as the packet is not named, we are inclined to believe it is the one which arrived at New-York in December, by which the accounts we have laſt publiſhed are received, and from which the report at Liverpool was erroniouſly propagated.—The ſame letter ſays, a diviſion of Richery's fleet deſtroyed on the Labradore ſhore property to the amount of 25,000l. ſterling belonging to one houſe, and burnt a 20 gun ſhip loaded entirely with fiſh. The deſtruction on the whole coaſt by this fleet is very great, and muſt be ſeverely felt by the lower claſs of people; the property deſtroyed conſiſting of proviſions and articles of the firſt neceſſity.

By a gentleman immediately from the ſtates we are informed that a commiſſioner is diſpatched to France, on the ſubject of preſent complaints; and that they entertain ſo ſtrong expectation of his ſucceſs, they feel themſelves relieved from any apprehenſions a war.

Died in this town, on Monday laſt, aged 23, MRS. CHARITY WALLACE, wife of Mr. JAMES WALLACE.

The printer returns his thanks to the gentlemen who have furniſhed him with the returns of the cities and places of holding courts, and of the officers of the Queen's rangers, deſigned for the calendar, and is ſorry to add that theſe are the only aſſiſtance he has received towards proſecuting his deſign, and that the want of time and opportunity to collect all the matters neceſſary to the work, of himſelf, is compleated, notwithſtanding the forwardneſs of the common parts, unwillingly to relinquiſh the valuable deſign, until he ſhall have had time himſelf to collect the materials.—The calendar page of each month will be publiſhed in the gazette.

AT a general meeting of the lieutenancy of the county of Lincoln, the honorable Robert Hamilton, eſq. lieutenant of the county, eſtabliſhed purſuant to an act of the provincial parliament, entitled "An act for the better regulation of the militia in this province," and holden at Newark, this 11th day of January, 1797, and it being decided and enacted by the 8th claule of the ſaid act, "that every male inhabitant from 16 years of age to 50, ſhall be deemed capable of bearing arms, and ſhall enrol, or cauſe to be enrolled his name as a militia man at the firſt meeting for that purpoſe, to be holden for the diviſion in which his place of abode may be, and ſhall at ſuch meeting give his name, his age and place of reſidence &c. &c. And that each and every ſuch inhabitant as aforeſaid, who ſhall not at the firſt meeting for that purpoſe to be holden for the diviſion in which his place of abode may be, either attend in perſon, and give in his name in writing, or cauſe himſelf to be made known in ſome certain way to the lieutenant, deputy lieutenant, or perſon preſiding at ſuch meeting, ſo that his name may be enrolled as a militia man, ſhall, for ſuch neglect, upon conviction thereof, before any one juſtice of the peace, forfeit and pay the ſum of twenty ſhillings, to be raiſed and applied in the manner" ſet forth in the ſaid act.

And whereas no general enrollment of militia hath hitherto duly, and properly taken place, and whereas the ſame is neceſſary and eſſential, without delay: Now be it known; and this is to give public notice, that a meeting for this purpoſe will be holden in and for the ſaid diviſion for the ſaid county, on Saturday the 18th day of February next, at the 4 Mile Pond, as another meeting will be holden, in and for the 4th riding of the ſaid county, on Saturday the 25th day of February next, near Fort Erie garriſon; and another meeting will be held in and for the ſecond riding of the ſaid county, on Saturday the 4th day of March next, in the town of Newark: each meeting at aforeſaid reſpectively to open and begin at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of each of the aforeſaid days.

Of all which, all perſons concerned are cautioned and directed to take notice accordingly.

"GEORGE REX.

George, by the grace of God, king of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, defender of the faith and so forth,

To all to whom these presents shall come, greeting

SEEING that the flame of war has for a long time raged in different parts of the globe, deeply occupied with the project of terminating regularly so many quarrels and diffentions, of reftoring and conſolidating the public tranquility, reſolved for this purpoſe to chooſe a man capable of a negociation of this importance, and inveſt him with full authority to complete ſo great a work, be it known, that the fidelity, talents, genius, perſpicuity and experience of our faithful and dear counſellor, James baron Malmeſbury, knight of the moſt honorable order of the Bath, inſpiring us with full confidence, we have named him, and he is appointed and conſtituted our true, certain, and accredited commiſſary and plenipotentiary, giving and conceding him, in all reſpects, full and entire power, faculty and authority; charging him beſides with our general and ſpecial orders to conſer on our part, and in our name, with the miniſters, commiſſioners, and plenipotentiaries of the French republic, ſufficiently inveſted with equal authority, as well as with the miniſters, commiſſioners, or plenipotentiaries of other princes and ſtates who may take part in the preſent negociation, alſo inveſted with the ſame authority; to treat either ſeparately or together; to conſer upon the means of eſtabliſhing a ſolid & durable peace, amity and ſincere concord; and to adopt all reſolutions and concluſions; to ſign for us, and in our name, all the ſaid conventions or concluſions; to make, in conſequence, every treaty or treaties, and all other acts, as he ſhall judge neceſſary; to deliver and receive mutually, all other objects relative to the fortunate execution of the above mentioned work: to tranſact with the ſame force and the ſame effect as we ſhould be able to do it we aſſiſted in perſon; guaranteeing, and on our royal word promiſing, that all and each of the tranſactions and concluſions which ſhall be made and determined by our ſaid plenipotentiary ſhall be made and agreed upon, ratified, accepted and adopted with the beſt faith; that we ſhall never ſuffer any one, either in whole or in part, to infringe an act contrary to them;—and in order to give every thing more ſecurity and force, we have ſigned the preſent with our royal hand, and affixed to it the great ſeal of Great-Britain.

MEMORIAL

Delivered to the miniſter of the French republic for foreign affairs, by lord Malmſbury:

HIS Britannic majeſty deſiring, as he has already declared, to contribute, as far as depends on himſelf, to the re-eſtabliſhment of of public tranquility, and to enſure by the means of juſt, honorable and ſolid conditions of peace, the future repoſe of Europe, his majeſty is of opinion, that the beſt means of obtaining, with all poſſible expedition, that ſalutary end, will be to agree, at the beginning of the negociaton, on the general principle which ſhall ſerve as a baſis for the definitive arrangements.

The firſt object of the negociation for peace generally relates to the reſtitutions & ceſſions which the reſpective parties have mutually to demand, in conſequence of the war.

Great-Britain, after the uninterrupted ſucceſs of her naval war, finds herſelf in a ſituation to have no reſtitution to demand of France, from which, on the contrary, ſhe has taken eſtabliſhments and colonies of the higheſt importance, and of a value almoſt incalculable.

But on the other hand, France has made, on the continent of Europe, conqueſts to which his majeſty can be the leſs indifferent as the moſt important intereſts of his people and the moſt ſacred engagements of his crown are eſſentially implicated therein.

The magnanity of the king, his inviolable good faith, and his deſire to reſtore repoſe to ſo many nations, lead him, in this ſituation of affairs, to conſider the means of producing terms of peace, juſt and equitable for all the belligerent powers, and calculated to enſure, in future, the general tranquility.

It is on this footing then, that he propoſes to negociate, by offering to compenſate France, by proportionable reſtitutions, for thoſe arrangements to which ſhe ſhall be called upon to conſent, in order to ſatisfy the juſt demands of the king's allies, and to preſerve the political balance of Europe.

Having made this firſt overture, his majeſty will, in the ſequel, explain himſelf in a more extenſive manner, on the application of this principle to the different objects which may be diſcuſſed between the reſpective parties.

It is this application which will conſtitute the ſubjects of thoſe diſcuſſions into which his majeſty has authorized his miniſter to enter, as ſoon as the principle to be adopted as the general baſis of the negociation is known.

But, his majeſty cannot diſpenſe with declaring, that if this generous and equitable offer ſhall not be accepted, or if, unfortunately, the diſcuſſions which may enſue, may fail in the deſired effect, neither this general propoſition, nor thoſe more detailed which may reſult from it, ſhall be regarded, in any caſe, as points agreed upon, or accorded to by his majeſty.

(Signed) MALMESBURY,
Miniſter plenipotentiary from his Britannic majeſty.

Paris, October 24, 1796.

REPORT TO THE DIRECTORY,

By the miniſter for foreign affairs, October 25.

The executive having furniſhed me with all powers to treat for peace with Great-Britain, I had yeſterday my firſt conference with lord Malmeſbury, plenipotentiary commiſſioner of his Britannic majeſty. He preſented to me the original of his powers, ſealed with the ſeal of Great-Britain, and certified the copy, which he preſented to me unſigned, and which I laid before the directory.

We entered into diſcuſſion: Ld. Malmſbury preſented to me the memorial which I laid before the directory. I obſerved to him that, ſpeaking in the name of the allies of Great-Britain, and ſtipulating for their intereſts, he was, doubtleſs, furniſhed with their powers and inſtructions. He anſwered me, that he was not: but that when the directory ſhould have explained itſelf upon the principle laid down in his memorial, he would expedite couriers, to give to the different courts an account of the negociations, and to receive their orders. I demanded of him if he could, at leaſt, ſpecify the principle of conceſſion in what concerned the republic and the government of Great-Britain? He replied, that after the directory ſhould have explained itſelf, he would ſend a courier and demand inſtructions on this point. I then thought it my duty to ſay to lord Malmesbury, that I would lay his memorial before the directory; that I would take its orders, and report to him its anſwer.

(Signed) CHA. DELACROIX.

ANSWER OF THE DIRECTORY.

The executive directory orders the miniſter for foreign affairs to make the following anſwer to lord Malmeſbury:—

"THE executive directory ſee with pain, that at the moment when they had reaſon to hope for the very ſpeedy return of peace between the French republic and his Britannic majeſty, the propoſition of lord Malmſbury offers nothing but dilatory, or very diſtant means of bringing the negociation to a concluſion.

The directory obſerve, that if lord Malmſbury would have treated ſeparately, as he was formally authorized by the tenor of his credentials, the negociations might have been conſiderably abridged; that the neceſſity of balancing with the intereſts of the two powers, thoſe of the allies of Great-Britain, multiplies the combinations, encreaſes the difficulties, tends to the formation of a congreſs, the forms of which, it is known, are always tardy, and requires the acceſſion of powers, which, hitherto, have diſplayed no deſire of accommodation, and have not given to lord Malmeſbury himſelf, according to his own declaration, any power to ſtipulate for them.

Thus without prejudging the intentions of lord Malmeſbury; without drawing any concluſion from the circumſtance of his declaration not appearing to accord with his credentials; without ſuppoſing that he had received any ſecret inſtructions which would deſtroy the effect of his oſtenſible powers; without pretending, in ſhort, to aſſert, that the Britiſh government have had a double object in view, to prevent, by general propoſitions, the partial propoſitions of other powers, and to obtain from the people of England means of continuing the war, by throwing upon the republic the odium of a delay occaſioned by themſelves; the executive directory cannot but perceive, that the propoſition of lord Malmeſbury is nothing more than a renewal, under more amicable forms, of the propoſitions made by Mr. Wickham, and that it preſents but a diſtant hope of peace.

The executive directory further obſerve, with regard to the principle of ceſſion advanced by lord Malmeſbury, that ſuch principle, preſented in a vague and iſolated manner, cannot ſerve as the baſis of negociation; that the firſt points of conſideration are, the common neceſſity of a juſt and ſolid peace, the political equilibrium which abſolute ceſſions might deſtroy, and then the means which the belligerent powers may poſſeſs, the one to retain conqueſts made at a time when it was ſupported by a great number of allies, now detached from the coalition; and the other, to recover them at a time when thoſe who were at firſt its enemies have almoſt all, either become its allies or neuter.

Nevertheleſs the executive directory, animated with an ardent deſire of putting a ſtop to the ſcourge of war, and to prove that they will not reject any means of conciliation, declare, that as ſoon as lord Malmeſbury ſhall exhibit to the miniſter for foreign affairs ſufficient powers from the allies of Great-Britain, for ſtipulating for their reſpective intereſts, accompanied with a projet, on theſe part, to ſubſcribe to whatever ſhall be combined in their names, the executive directory will give a ſpeedy anſwer to the ſpecific propoſitions which ſhall be removed, as far as may be conſiſtent with the ſafety and dignity of the French republic.

BOTTEN, Octo'r 22.

The troops who are in Mantua with field marſhal Wurmſer amount to 25,000 men. The want of proviſions in that fortreſs becomes more alarming to the ſoldiers, among whom contagious fevers have unfortunately made ſhocking havoc. The ſurrounding diſtricts are totally exhauſted. The French are not provided with a ſufficient heavy ordnance. General Alvinzi ſtrains every nerve to collect a force ſufficient to relieve Mantua.

HAGUE, October 29.

The day before yeſterday a letter was read in the convention from Batavia, ſtating that the Engliſh had taken all our ſettlements in the Eaſt-Indies, except Batavia and two ſettlements in Java.

FRIBOURG, October 22.

After a continued fighting for four days, the Auſtrians have driven the enemy from Elzich, and out of Fribourg, into which they yeſterday entered. Theſe advantages coſt them about 2000 men, but the enemy according to the account of French generals themſelves, left between 5 and 6000 men, among whom are two thouſand priſoners. The French general Beaupuis is killed.

BASTADT, Oct. 23

On the 7th marſhal Wurmſer, with the greateſt part of his army attacked the French at Marmirolo. The battle laſted 7 hours & ended in the route of the French, who loſt between 4 & 5000 in killed, wounded & priſoners, ſeveral pieces of cannon, ammuhition waggons, all their magazines, 200 oxen, & their military cheſt. The defeat was compleat, and the Auſtrian cavaly purſued the French quite to Verona. The ſlaughter was dreadful, as the Auſtrians gave no quarter from Mantua to Verona.

LONDON, Nov. 1.

The peaſants of the black foreſt have captured, near Rheinſelden, the whole reſerve artillery of Moreau's army.

On the 24th ult. the directory, in a meſſage to the council of five hundred, notified the evacuation of Corſica by the Engliſh. Deputies from Baſtia and ſeveral of the Communes of Corſica have arrived at Leghorn, to take the oath of fidelity to the republic; and the primary aſſemblies have met for the purpoſe of declaring their acceptance of the French conſtitution. This meſſage from the directory was immediately followed by a motion from Lecointre, that the importation and ſale of Engliſh merchandize in France ſhould be ſtrictly prohibited: a debate enſued upon this motion, and that part of it which related to the propoſal to import Engliſh merchandiſe, was agreed to.

A letter from Vienna ſays, 'The French courier, who lately arrived here, was ſent by the directory to general Buonaparte, and by him to our court. The univerſal belief is that he has brought propoſals for an armiſtice and a negociation. Gen. Buonaparte, in the letter which he ſent to field marſhal Wurmſer to demand a paſs for him, ſtated that the early delivery of his meſſage was of the utmoſt importance. The emperor, as ſoon as he heard the object of his miſſion, gave orders to treat him with the utmoſt reſpect; but no perſon can viſit him without a card of admiſſion from our miniſter for foreign affairs. This application is made at a time when England, on her ſide has ſent propoſals to France for a negociation, a meſſage of which the French government ſeem deſirous to profit.

"The courier is ſtill in Vienna, and is daily ſerved at dinner with eight, and at ſupper with ſix diſhes. He has viſited the theatre and other public places, but not on foot nor without an eſcort. Since his arrival, the emperor has been continually in council with his miniſters.

November 8.

A neutral veſſel from Harwich by one of admiral Duncan's ſquadrons, left Amſterdam on Sunday laſt, has brought advice that the French army of the Sambre and Meuſe had advanced towards the Lahn, and were preparing to attack the Auſtrians ſtationed in the vicinity of Neuwied and Ehrenbreitſtein. Their poſts extended along the Mumelbach, and to Dredorff, in the Weſterwalt. Many ſkirmiſhes had taken place in the Handſtruck, terminating generally to the advantage of the Auſtrians, and who in the palatinate had extended themſelves within a ſhort diſtance of Kayſerſlautern. The advance of a ſtrong column of the republicans, compoſing the garriſon of Landau, and ſeveral battalions of national guards, had obliged general Hotze to retire into the neighborhood of Spires.—The archduke Charles had removed his head-quarters to Baden, and withdrawn his forces from the neighborhood of Kehl, with which Moreau, who's front extended to Offenbourg, had effected a communication.

November 10.

Saturday two meſſengers arrived at lord Grenville's office, from Peterſburgh and Vienna, with diſpatches.

A foreign courier who came over in the ſame packet with the Britiſh meſſenger, alſo arrived at count Stahremberg's, the imperial envoy, in Port an-Eſquiry, from Vienna.

Several of the foreign miniſters, particularly the Pruſſian and Genoeſe, received diſpatches on Saturday by the mails.

Government, it is ſaid, finding a war with Spain inevitable, ſent out orders to Corſica, countermanding thoſe before given, for the evacuation of the iſland, which, however, unfortunately arrived too late.

The following is the amount of the national expenditure the preſent year, as laid before the houſe of commons:—

Navy	£ 6,767,460 2 2
Army	11,977,399 9 10
Ordnance	1,999,839 19 9
The funderies make up the ſum total	24,830,676 10 10 2

We underſtand there will be no counter declaration on the part of our court to the manifeſto of the court of Madrid, nor indeed does it require any; the reaſons alleged in it are too frivolous to need a reply.

By one of the Hamburgh mails was received a private letter from Berlin; it contains the following paſſage;

"The proſpect of general peace approaches: his Pruſſian majeſty, either alarmed at the rapid ſucceſſes and military proweſs of Auſtria, or apprehenſive that Ruſſia, in conjunction with Sweden, will now take part with the ſtrongeſt, or from motives of ſeeing the Stadtholder and his family reinſtrated, has determined to interfere in the impending negociation at Paris. It is publicly ſpoken here (Berlin) that inſtructions are ſent to the Pruſſian miniſter at Paris to notify to the directory, that his majeſty is anxious to ſee peace reſtored to Europe; that the offers of the court of London are equitable; that his majeſty wiſhes Holland ſhould be no obſtacle to the general treaty, as Great-Britain will be ever ready to reſtore the Dutch property, the Cape and other conqueſts, as ſoon as Holland reaſſumes a proper form of government.

"Theſe inſtructions are ſaid to contain a threat, in caſe the directory ſhould refuſe to liſten to proper terms, that other means muſt be taken to put a period to the preſent deſtructive war."

Letters from Holland received yeſterday ſtate that the combined ſquadrons of Spain have appeared off Toulon.

From the total ſilence for ſome days on the ſubject of lord Malmeſbury's negociation, we hope the happieſt concluſion may be drawn, viz. that the things are going on in a train which promiſe fair for a ſpeedy adjuſtment.

Admiral Richery has to ſteer clear of 3 Britiſh ſquadrons—thoſe of admirals Mann, Thompſon, and Curtis. If he gets ſafe in to his own ports, he has what the ſailors call 'the Devil's luck and his own too.'

KINGSTON, (Jamaica) Nov. 26.

We learn from St Domingo, that viſcompte de Beages, with a very conſiderable force, has penetrated ſucceſsfully into the republican territory, that he is encamped at Dondon and la Taneſie, about 12 miles from Cape Francois.

NEW YORK, January 10.

The following facts are from a mercantile correſpondent.

Every American veſſel that arrives at Cape Francois, her cargo is forcibly taken by the adminiſtration, who promiſes payment, apparently without any intention of performing, as cargoes thus forcibly taken remain unpaid, tho many months have elapſed. When remonſtrance is made, nothing but perſecutions reſult from it. From captain Barney's (of the Meduſa frigate) being a native American, the captains of American veſſels had reaſon to ſuppoſe he would rather have wiſhed to alleviate their ſufferings; but to perſecution he added inſult, not only the American captains there, but to this country, by ignominiouſly hoiſting its flag reverſed on board his frigate.

THOMAS ATWOOD, late maſter of the ſchooner Jane, abandoned at the Cape.

WEST-NIAGARA, March 1.

Beſide the foreign accounts we have in this paper copiouſly detailed, we give the following ſketches:

Moreau has requeſted of the directory that Pichegru may be appointed to the command of the army of the Rhine and the Moſelle—That, by German accounts, the French in their retreat thro' Suabia, deſtroyed above 60 villages by fire.—That lord Malmeſbury had made propoſals of an armiſtice between England and France—That the fundamental plan of the Batavian (Dutch) republic, has been agreed upon by the committee who framed it; one only diſſenting. The legiſlative body is divided into two councils; one conſiſting of thirty, and the other of ſixty members: The organization is almoſt ſimilar to that of France.

Buonaparte's head quarters were at Modena, the 17th of October, from whence he dates his official letters reſpecting the evacuation of Corſica. Gentili has the command of the French troops in the iſland of Corſica.

Every northern part of this continent from which we have been able to hear, the accounts agree that they have been viſited with a ſevere winter. At Philadelphia, N. York, and to the eaſtward, veſſels were prevented by the weather from entering for a time. At New York, to the honor of the city, and to the projectors of the plan, a veſſel was fitted out with men, clothes and every neceſſary for the diſtreſſed ſeamen lying off, and by a providence made its way out of the harbor, and was the mean of preſerving many from death.

LONDON, October 10.

Three Hamburgh mails of the 30th ult. and of the 4th and 7th inft. have arrived.

It appears from theſe, that the reinforcement received by the French army of the Sambre and the Meuſe, have obliged the Auſtrians to deſiſt from offenſive operations on the Lower Rhine; the archduke had left a conſiderable corps under gen. Werneck to defend the Lahn and Seig while he leads the remainder of his army to the Upper Rhine, for the purpoſe of cutting off, or harraſſing the retreat of gen. Moreau. This latter general, as might be expected during his retreat, has ſuſtained advantages in ſeveral partial engagements. At Ulm, he loſt a garriſon of 800 men. On the 17th near Kempton, and on the 20th near Iſny, he had engagements with the corps under general Frolich, in which he is ſtated to have loſt 1,200 men. Fifteen hundred priſoners are ſaid to have been taken by gen. Latour, during the retreat of the French from Bavaria; and the rapid advances of the archduke towards the Briſgau, in the centre of which gen. Petraſch is already poſted, muſt make the retreat of general Moreau extremely difficult on that ſide. A part of his army has, however, already croſſed the Rhine, near Shaffhauſen; and he appears to have conſiderable ſtrength towards the frontiers of Switzerland, where he is ſtated, in an article from Conſtance, to have been ſucceſsful in two partial engagements with the Auſtrians.

On the Lower Rhine, the French have 30,000 men between Duſſeldorff and Muhlheim, a town nearly oppoſite to Cologne; they are alſo ſtill in poſſeſſion of Neuwied, with its bridge, which communicates with the left bank between Anneinach and Coblentz. The head-quarters of the archduke Charles were, on the 1ſt inſtant, ſo high up the river as Dourlach, about 3 leagues beyend Manheim.

The Auſtrain accounts from Italy mentioned the commencement of the battle of St George, near Mantua, which is known to have been favorable to them, but do not notice the concluſion, in which Buonaparte obtained poſſeſſion of the ſuburb. A courier has, however, arrived from ſir William Hamilton, at Naples, whoſe advices are dated the 27th ult. and from the report given of theſe it appears, that Wurmſer made ſallies from Mantua, on the 21ſt 22d, 23d ult. It is even ſtated, but with ſome improbability, that Buonaparte has fallen back to Verona in conſequence of theſe ſallies. The truth is, that the auſtrian Gen. Davidovich, having been conſiderably reinforced, is advancing into the Tyroleſe, to make a diverſion in favor of Wurmſer; and Buonparte muſt of courſe detach from before Mantua a part of his army to oppoſe him.

Lord Malmeſbury's embaſſy.

The negociation ſcarcely commenced between lord Malmeſbury and the miniſter for foreign affairs, are already ſuſpended. In the firſt conference it was demanded of the Engliſh negociator, if he was furniſhed with powers and inſtructions from other belligerent powers to ſtipulate in their name? He anſwered, no—but he added, that when the directory ſhall have explained themſelves on the principle laid down in his memorial, he would diſpatch couriers to give an account to the different courts of the ſtate of the negociation, and to receive their orders. It was then aſked the ambaſſador, if he could not at leaſt ſpecify the principle of retroceſſions which concern the French republic and Great Britain? He anſwered, that after the directory ſhall have explained itſelf, he would expedite couriers, and likewiſe requeſt inſtructions on this point.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Annapolis, to his friend in this city, dated December 27.

"Laſt evening, commodore Barney and a French general from St. Domingo, arrived in this city. The commodore's fleet is at Norfolk; the general is on his way to New-York, to go to France in a corvette, to fail from that place as ſoon as it ſhall be officially declared who is the preſident of the United States. Barney ſays ſhould Adams be elected preſident, we muſt certainly be engaged in a war with France in leſs than three months; and he knows not how we could have avoided that in ſtorm, but by electing Mr. Jefferſon our preſident, who ſtands much higher with the French nation than any other man in our country. He ſays he has poſitive inſtructions to take all American veſſels going to, or coming from Britiſh ports; but the veſſels and cargoes are not to be diſpoſed of till further orders."

Extract of a letter from Liſbon, dated Oct. 19.

"On the 7th inſt. War was declared by the Spaniards againſt the Engliſh: the account arrived here on the 13th inſt. from Madrid. On the 27th ult. ſeventeen ſhips of the line, and twelve frigates ſailed from Cadiz, and though I was there at the time, could not learn their deſtination: the conjectures were, that they were bound to Toulon, to join the French. There are 25,000 ſtand of arms, and a great quantity of ammunition received here from England, and every preparation making to defend the country againſt the French and Spaniards. Lord Moira is daily expected here."

NEW-YORK, Dec. 28.

Ship Niagara, capt. Black, 60 days from Hull, Oct. 27, ſaw a fleet of men of war, about 18 ſail, ſuppoſed them to be Engliſh, lying to, about 20 leagues off Breſt. Oct. 20, was boarded by a French frigate, of Richery's ſquadron, the captain of which informed they were 7 ſail, three 74's, one 80, and three frigates, from Newfoundland, bound to Breſt. Capt Black ſuppoſes they muſt have fallen in with the Engliſh.

FRENCH AMITY.

We are informed, ſays the Argus, by captain Cutter of the brig Almy, that off the eaſt end of Jamaica, he was taken by two French privateers, the one of which was the Flying Fifh, built at Baltimore, and owned by John Love, who afterwards ſold her to her preſent owner at the Cape, and then went captain of her. He fired upwards of thirty ſhot at the Almy without hailing her, although laying to for 20 minutes before with American colors flying; he then hailed and ordered the boat on board, which being done, he detained the mate, two ſeamen, the ſhip's regiſter and other papers, and ſent a prize maſter and three others all armed on board. They then hoiſted in the boat and ſtood for Genaives. Next day were retaken by a Britiſh ſloop of war, the Jamaica, capt. Brooking, who took the Frenchmen out, and treated capt. Cutter very handſomely, but carried her to Port-Royal on account of having no regiſter, when ſhe was detained only three days, and then ſuffered to proceed. The privateers proceeded on their cruiſe. Capt. Cutter had great reaſons to think, that the Frenchmen put on board him intended much worſe uſage had he not fallen in with capt. Brooking.

Jan. 9. Sümmary by the way of New-London.

Corſica is evacuated by the Engliſh, this is alſo confirmed by Buonaparte's and other official letters.] Gen. Wurmſer has made many ineffectual ſallies from Mantua; the garriſon luckily and muſt ſoon ſurrender unleſs relieved. The King of Sardinia is dead, he is ſucceeded by the prince of Piedmont. The Sweediſh ambaſſador has left Paris, and arrived in England.

LONDON, Nov. 1.

Extract of a letter from an officer on board his majeſty's ſhip Windſor, of 98 guns, to his father in Leith, dated Gibralter-Bay, October 9.

"I received your letter upon our arrival at this place a few days ago, after a very providential and narrow eſcape from Spaniſh captivity. We have been up the Mediterranean ſince I wrote you laſt, and ſailed about a month ago from Corſica with our ſquadron, conſiſting of ſeven ſail of the line.—We met the Spaniſh fleet ten leagues to the eaſtward of the Cape de Gaſt. Their force conſiſted of twenty-three ſhips of the largeſt veſſels perhaps in Europe That day they captured an Engliſh lugger, and made all poſſible ſail after us with our ſmall ſquadron running to the weſtward, preparing to give them a warm reception if they came up with us. They chaſed us 250 miles, during which time we were 48 hours at quarters. Had they come up great ſlaughter muſt have enſued. Admiral Mann's bravery is well known, and I heard him ſay, that they ſhould purchaſe the ſhips very dear. We loſt two of the tranſports which we had under convoy, and had it not been for the ſuperior ſailing of our ſhips they muſt have taken or ſunk us all. When we got into this bay, their van ſhips were but three or four miles diſtant, and the body of their fleet not far off.

The Britiſh naval force in the Mediterranean conſiſts of twewnty-eight ſail of the line, eight of which are three deckers, twenty-five frigates and eleven ſloops.

The Tuniſian ambaſſador leaves this country immediately, without having ſucceeded in the object of his miſſion. That was to recover a compenſation for a veſſel captured by ſome of our ſhips of war, containing preſents from the French to the bey. Our government offered his excellency a frigate to convey him home, which he declined, and he has hired a neutral veſſel for that purpoſe.

☞ Several requeſts from correſpondents will be attended to without delay: governmental advertiſements this week has delayed the appearance of ſome, particularly Duels, what are they? which ſhall appear in our next.

An Oration in praise of Ignorance.

IT is an obſervation made by wiſdom, and it is alſo the declaration of experience; that "he who encreaſeth knowledge encreaſeth ſorrow;" and yet ſo far are mankind from paying any attention to it, that we find there are ſchools, academies, colleges and univerſities, erected for the purpoſe of encreaſing knowledge: as if our ſorrows could not be ſufficiently numerous without the aſſiſtance of art. My intention is to deſtroy, if poſſible, theſe peſts of ſociety, and to point out the advantages which flow from ignorance. Ignorance! thou balm of life and ſorrow ſoothing power! parent of hope, and enemy of care! on the I call for inſpiration, and invoke thine aid, whilſt I celebrate thy praiſe, diſplay thy power, and attempt to prove that all other ſources of felicity are fleeting and falacious.

Knowledge appears to have originated from envy, and that envy to have been ſeated in the devil's breaſt. "Ye ſhall be as Gods, knowing good and evil," was his artful inſinuation to deprive our firſt parents of their happineſs.—Deceived by him they ate

"Of that forbidden tree whoſe mortal taſte Brought ſin into the world, and all our woes;"

While Adam was ignorant he was a gentleman; but knowledge reduced him to the neceſſity of laboring hard for a ſubſiſtance, and even Paradiſe loſt all its charms. The beauteous mother of mankind, who in ignorance, was happy in the ſmiles of her huſband, and had no care but to regale herſelf with the ſweets of Eden, as ſoon as information entered her breaſt, became a diſconſolate tempſtreſs in the midſt of the wilderneſs.—She was aſhamed of her knowledge, and ſhe bluſhed; ſhe was mortified by its conſequences, and her tongue learned the language of inſincerity that it might deny the feelings of her heart.—This was the origin of knowledge, and theſe were ſome of the firſt attendants upon improvement in ſcience! How much happier had been our lot, had our firſt parents obeyed the inſtates of nature, and remained in ignorance.—I ſay obeyed the diſtates of nature; for the clearly teaches us to ſeek for happineſs in ignorance alone. Need I produce a proof of this? Obſerve your children: are they born ſcholars? No, nor do they wiſh to be ſuch. See, with what ſportive mirth they play around the parlour while indulged in ignorance; but the moment you attempt to teach them, their countenances change, their ſwelling boſoms heave a dreadful ſigh, and the tears which trickle down their cheeks tell you the ſorrows of their hearts. How does an holiday enliven their ſpirits, and what raptures do they diſcover the inſtant their pedagogue diſmiſſes them! In theſe young minds there is no diſguiſe;—theſe children act themſelves; and the plain language of their conduct is, that learning is repugnant to nature, and that we deſtroy their happineſs by adding to their knowledge.

Mamma too will help to vindicate the truth of our aſſertion; for although ſhe feels not the force of the impreſſion, yet ſhe knows its operation on the child. If maſter miſbehaves, ſhe threatens him with being ſent to ſchool;—if he will not go to ſleep, Mr. Birch the tutor, is to be ſent for; what is this but acknowledging that both the inſtitution and the inſtructor are enemies to our happineſs.

Thus, moſt reſpectable auditors, you ſee that nature ſpeaks the ſame language both in young and old; and that in vain do we ſeek for comfort while ſcience is cultivated amongſt us.

The hiſtory of the church will furniſh another proof that knowledge is prejudicial. What ſweet tranquility did ſhe enjoy in the days of ignorance!—How lovingly did chriſtians go to Heaven together! but no ſooner had thoſe incendiaries, Luther and Calvin, inſpired the vulgar with a thirſt for information, than fire, ſword, and perſecution raged with relentleſs fury, ſwept off millions of mankind. Such bitterneſs of ſpirit immediately took place as made each party fix the fate of its oppoſers, and doom them to perdition; nor could the father of the church put an end to the miſeries of his children, though he was armed with all the horrors of an inquiſition. The tranſlation of the ſcriptures into a known language baffled all his attempts to reſtore their former ignorance, and produced ſuch an endleſs variety of ſects and opinions as have ever ſince diſturbed the peace of ſociety.

Our paſſions furniſh a ſtriking hint in favor of ignorance: for why ſhould they ſo ſtrongly impel us to diſpation, if knowledge, to which it is an avowed enemy, were of any uſe? Is not their language the ſame as that of Solomon (who knew a great deal for the day in which he lived) "in much wiſdom is much grief, and he that encreaſeth knowledge encreaſeth ſorrow."
And what, after all, is th s mighty thing called knowledge, to attain which we muſt throw away ſeveral of the beſt years of our lives, and endanger our conſtitutions by expoſing ourſelves to the inclemency of every ſ on? Why, forſooth, the art of uſing uncommon words, to excite the admiration, and perplex the underſtandings of common people, without conveying one uncommon idea. What advantage can be derived from the phyſician's uſing the words maſtication and deglutition inſtead of chewing and ſwallowing; or the lawyer's covering, with the terms replication, rejoinder, demurrer (and others equally inſignificant) the arts by which he conjures your money into his own pocket? Indeed, I muſt confeſs I have heard of one inſtance, in which the uſe what the vulgar call an hard word has been of ſervice. A devine once mentioned Metaphyſicks in his ſermon, and a woman in the congregation was very happy upon hearing it, for ſhe ſuppoſed him to mean that the goſpel was good for both meat and phyſic: But ſo the conſolation this afforded, ſhe was more indebted to her ignorance than to any thing elſe.

Of all kinds of learning philoſophy conceals the beſt fund of ſtupidity under a ſhew of very great knowledge. What does the profeſſor of this ſcience mean by his hydroſtatick, pneumaticks, opticks, aſtronomy, &c. Why, truly, to inform you that water will not run up hill—that the wind blows ſometimes one way, and ſometimes another, and that there are ſtars in the firmament whole diſtance and ſize he knows nothing about.

It will be worth while to attend a little to the purſuits of philoſophers.—See the great ſir Iſaac Newton, gravely ſitting over a tub of water, with a pipe in his mouth, blowing air bubbles; and at other times dropping pebbles from the top of St. Paul's ſteeple, both which a boy of twelve years of old could have done full as well as he;—but, this is philoſophy. I have heard of his being ſo buſily engaged in thinking of ſome of his philoſophical tricks, that he made uſe of a lady's finger inſtead of his tobacco ſtopper; and yet this ſame ſir Iſaac (with all his nonſenſe, and inattention to politeneſs) is ſaid to have been a great ſcholar, and a great philoſopher.—Follow the Virtuoſo; ſee what a dance a butterfly can lead him; and with what care ſaves a moth which all the world beſides himſelf would with ſhould be deſtroyed.—He is a philoſopher.—There is another: a man who thinks of nothing under Heaven but antiquity: he has a large eſtate in ancient coins, and yet can hardly find money enough to go to market; he would give an hundred guineas (if he had them) for the mate tick which was preſerved in Noah's ark, and thrice that ſum for an authentic copy of the deed by which St. Peter conveyed the lands of indfels and heretics to the pope. Such are the ſons of ſcience! Bleſſed ignorance! thy votaries know no ſuch follies, no ſuch toils as theſe.

Men of education are continually harranguing on the advantages of learning; and in many parts of the world, have had much ſucceſs; but it muſt give infinate ſatisfaction to every lover of his country, to ſee that the good ſenſe of America will baffle their attempts amongſt us. Here no man meets with reſpect on account of his knowledge, and the teacher of the ſciences (thoſe of dancing, hair-dreſſing, and millinery excepted) are held in the utmoſt contempt, and ranked with the loweſt of the people.—Should our preſent fondneſs for ignorance continue, America may become the elyſium of the world. We might be encouraged in this expectation, had we time to review the benefits we have already received from our ignorance; but I will not impoſe upon that patience to which I am indebted for ſo indulgent an attention.

Upon the whole, whether we form our judgment from the declarations of the wiſeſts of men, from the dictates of nature, or from our own experience, we may conclude that ignorance is preferable to knowledge; and ſhould any man be ſo unfortunate as to poſſeſs the latter, it will be a mark of prudence in him (as Solomon judiciouſly ſuggeſts) to conceal it,

Since then all knowledge is at beſt but vain,
Since it not leſſens, but encreaſes pain,
It is moſt evident w may conclude,
That in theſe ignorance conſists all good;
That to be happy we need know no more
Than (nor ſo much as) two and two make four.
And therefore, as they care for naught that paſſes,
The happieſt creatures in the world are aſſes.

THE TIMES.

Fifteen American captains and half the crews of fifteen veſſels, dead! Dead?—Where?—In the ports of Hiſpaniola. And how came they to die?—O, as to that, they die becauſe they are detained in a climate that does not ſuit them. By thoſe vile rafcals, the Britiſh, I ſuppoſe—O no; by the French.—By the French? Impoſſible! No ſuch thing—'Tis true fifteen captains and about half the crews of the fifteen veſſels have died in about 4 months, at Aux Cayes and the neighboring ports.

Now, my friend, I will undertake to prove by plain democratic logic, that it is not half ſo bad for French patriots to ſacrifice fifteen maſters of American veſſels, and 200 ſeamen, as it was for a rafcally Britiſh captain to flog capt. Jeſſup. Prove it?—There is no need of proving it. Every body knows that republicans have a right to do as they pleaſe. Republicans are the modern ſaints, and the bible ſays, "ſaints ſhall inherit the earth." Tranſlated into modern language, men who wear a cockade have a right to cut off the heads of men who wear ſtars and ribbons and take poſſeſſion of their eſtates. If this is not logic, I do not know what it is.

Yes, Yes, my friend though your concluſion may be juſt, your premiſes among "patriots," muſt be falſe—as they do not believe in the bible—they have diſcarded that as an impoſition, and Jeſus Chriſt as an impoſtor, and ſubſtituted Tom Paine's "reaſon," together with parſon—what's his name who preaches moral lectures every Sunday at a public houſe in this city.

But this is nothing to the purpoſe—The queſtion is to demonſtrate by undeniable proof, that for French patriots, in a fit of fraternity, to kill or cauſe to periſh fifteen American captains and 200 ſeamen, is not ſo bad as for capt. Pigot to whip one American captain, and impreſs half a dozen ſeamen.

Firſt, The French are republicans and the Britiſh are the ſlaves of a monarch.

Secondly, The French wear a cockade with three colors, and the Britiſh wear a black cockade.

Thirdly, The French ſay, citizens; the Britiſh uſe the ſlaviſh term Mr.

Fourthly, The French begin their ſolemn acts with, "liberty, equality—fraternity;" the Britiſh cloſe theirs with, "God ſave the king."

The conſequence is plain that the French patriots who are "generous to their allies," and feel "ſweet ſentiment" for them, have a right by the laws of "republican fraternity," to take fifty ſail of their allies' veſſels worth a million and one fourth of dollars, and detain them till the veſſels are rotten and the men dead, without being accountable to any perſon.

Quod erat demonſtrandum.

VIENNA, Oct. 10.

We have finally letters from Mantua dated 2d and 6th October, confirming not only the advantages which general Wurmſer has obtained over the French on the 12th 15th and 17th of September, but mentioning alſo of an other attack on them on the 23d September, at the head of 15,000 men in which the French were compelled to retire from ſeveral poſts which they occupied near the fortreſs. Many waggons of proviſions were taken from the enemy. General Wurmſer ordered on the 29th Sept. a diviſion of 3000 men, to attempt a coup de main upon Governolo, occupied by about as many French troops; but theſe troops were repulſed, and returned to Mantua, with the loſs of ſome hundred men.—On the 2d of October general Wurmſer made another ſortie, but was alſo repulſed, and had to return with ſome confuſion into the fortreſs. However theſe misfortunes animated the garriſon more than it did diſcourage them. On the 6th Oct. general Wurmſer went out again and beat the French. One of their columns was purſued by the imperial cuiraſſiers, quite near to Verona. The loſs of the French muſt have been very conſiderable, as thoſe cuiraſſiers have ſabred down (or cut down with their ſwords) every French man that was between Mantua and Verona, where the remnant of the fugitives took ſhelter in favor of a ſmall garriſon which they kept there.

General Buonaparte is undoubtedly ſuperior in numbers to general Wurmſer, but being obliged to detain 10,000 men to keep general Davidovich in reſpect, and to leave 8000 men in the territories of Vicenza, to watch general Quoſdannovich's motions; he cannot entirely prevent the attacks of general Wurmſer. This is the preſent ſituation of Italy, whoſe fate and the iſſue it excite the general curioſity. General Alvinzy, who directs the operations of both the laſt mentioned generals has to begin his operations in favor of Mantua by the 15th inſt. whether he will ſucceed we have to learn yet.

According to letters from Dreſden, the elector has reſolved to ſend his contingency of troops to the imperial army and 14,000 men are on their march from Bohemia, to join the archduke Charles's army.

LONDON, November 10.

It is a very curious circumſtance, that moſt of the troops taken on board the Dutch fleet at the Cape, are deſerters from the Auſtrian army during the campaign of '94.

From the RHINE.

Kehl was ſurrounded on the 26th ult by 15,000 Auſtrians and every thing ready to ſtorm that fort at a moment's notice. The attack was only poſtponed till the archduke arrived.

The particulars of General Kray's attack on the French at Neuwied are not detailed, but the loſs of the republicans is ſtated to exceed that of the imperialiſts. Since that time both armies have been reinforced.

Some of the foreign prints we have peruſed ſpeak of the deſeat of Moreau's army to be compleat—nay, ſome ſtate it to be annihilated—and that it is not in the power of the French govement to re-organize their three great armies.

The imperial army in Italy, as well as on the Rhine, receive reinforcements daily; and unleſs peace is concluded, the imperialiſts will follow up their ſucceſſes by a winter campaign in France.

WEST-NIAGARA, March 15.

By a gentleman directly from the ſtates, we learn that a war with France is ſtrongly expected; but a hope exiſts that the commiſſioner will be fortunate in the adjuſtment of complaints. That their trade is ſo ſtagnated, that ſcarcely a veſſel is fitted out; in conſequence of which caſh is extremely ſcarce. Wheat at Albany is ſelling at 6/. By the ſame informant, more than an hundred families are now on their way to Canada, before river, to take paſſage to this province.—A Genefe, wheat is alſo ſelling at 6/. and is in great plenty; a circumſtance highly favorable to us, and the emigrants to this country who depend on purchaſes of that article.

Enemies to emigrations to theſe provinces have eternally harped on the words cold and frozen, as tho' we never felt a ray of heat from the ſun. The name of Canada was enough to chill the warmeſt conſtitution in July, ſo great is the effect of prejudice. Let ſuch, for ſuch there are inhabiting the milder climates, where in the month of November the ocean is covered with ice, look to our ſo terrific regions and in the midſt of winter ſee a veſſel plying between this town and York, which was the caſe a month ago with capt. Selech; and on Thurſday laſt, he again entered our harbor; but it cannot be ſaid that during that interval of time, the ice was an obſtruction. Inhoſpitable climate indeed! A Lapland of Lapland. The truth is, our climate in particular, is ſubject to a greater degree of avarage heat and leſs of cold than is the country between us and the Atlantic, even conſiderably to the ſouth of us.

* The paragraph reſpecting the death and character of JOHN BURCH, Eſq. was handed too late for this paper.

FROM CORRESPONDENTS.

The propoſed meeting of the agricultural ſociety is near at hand, and it is hoped, they will hold out premiums, to be paid under certain regulations, to the perſons who ſhall produce of their own manufacture, the greateſt quantity of the ſugar of maple made this year; alſo, for the beſt refined, quantity and quality: likewiſe for the perſon who ſhall raiſe the greateſt quantity of wheat; for the greateſt quantity raiſed of one acre of new land, and the ſame of one acre of old land, at the ſame time the perſon to whom the premium ſhall have been adjudged, to render a full and particular account of the nature of the ſoil and proceſs of the buſineſs in which he claims the premium. Theſe hints may be improved to the higheſt advantage of this infant country, and its inhabitants awakened from inactivity to lively enterprize.

I perceived in a former gazette a queſtion propoſed for a plan to remedy the ſcarcity of caſh in this province, and hoped before this to have ſeen it anſwered, by ſome hand capable of treating ſo important a ſubject with juſtice. The queſtion will admit of a moſt valuable, natural and eaſy diſquiſition, either in many or few words, but to my ſorrow has it been neglected.

Men of leiſure ought ever to improve ſuch opportunities to promote private and public good. The ſtaple commodities of this province, with right management of them, are the only ſources by which our complaint is to be remedied; and ſure it is there is no country abounding more with theſe than this province, having a ſoil adapted to the growth and product of every neceſſity, and many ſuperfluities in abundance for home conſumption, and to export for returns in ready caſh. The articles of pot and pearl aſhes and hemp have bounties annexed to them at home, ſufficient to defray a great part of the expences of tranſporting them there; and for the making and raiſing of theſe, no country can boaſt ſuperior advantages to this. True it is we are interior; but computing the bounties, we are placed on equal or better footing than the ſtates lying on the ſeaſhore. It is by theſe articles we can keep money among us, and draw it from Europe. It is the fault of bad huſbandry that wheat, &c. are not in greater plenty; and when a better ſyſtem of huſbandry ſhall have been purſued, theſe articles will be in great plenty, and to ſpare; and their prices will be then more conſiſtant with their value, & more enrich the farmer, than the ſame quantity now will: then will it be the intereſt of emigrants to this country to bring money, and not as now ſuffer a loſs upon it. So long as the carrying of money to a new country is attended with a greater loſs than the carrying of the meaneſt article of merchandize, that country muſt be poor, diſtreſſed and diſcouraging to men of money or enterprize, who are the real wealth of the country.

DUELS

What are they? They are certain teſts a man is put to in order to know his ſpunk, or in other words, to prove his guilt or innocence. This mode of proving facts was conſidered as infalable among men of ſpunk; thus, for inſtance, A charges B with a fact; B denies it; a challenge enſues; no matter who committed the act;—the challenge is accepted—perhaps A. wounds B. in which caſe, B. is guilty, altho' A. C. or D. in reallity, committed the act, and poor B. is guilty, becauſe this unerring rule makes him ſo. If B. wounds A. then A. is guilty, and B. the innocent man, altho' he in fact did the act. Now if they both wound them both are guilty, whether but one, or neither committed the fact; if neither wound, they are both innocent, whether but one or both committed the act; and he who will not accept a challenge, has no ſpunk; is ſet down as wounded or guilty; but in caſe a man gets killed; he is then on the same footing with the one living, that is, not guilty, and by rule, is not to lie under cenfure, and the matter to be no more fpoken of, and kept a fecret: he has proved his innocency as did the unfortunate perfons mentioned in the hiftory of (Salem) New England, in old times, when witchcraft, inftead of duelling, prevailed there; and had I not fome where read that duelling firft took its rife with two menial fervants, before the fettlement of New England, I fhould have fuppofed this way of afcertaining the truth of a matter fprung from the cuftom at Salem; but it is the contrary, and no matter which is the mode, they being very like, and being equally fenfible. I will ftate the mode, and then fay, ye connoiffeurs in dueling, which is the greater foreign diffcloler of truth: at Salem men were charged with fubtracting 2 from 4, or multiplying 4 by 2; hopping on one foot, or fome fuch black-art trick—he is arraigned for trial under the witchcraft act—direct proof of his being able to fubtract, multiply or hop cannot be had: what then? why the culprit is carried to a high rock there is in the harbor, and thrown from thence into the eddy; and if he be really a wizzard he can get out and a fhore, but if not he drowns, conlequently innocent, and his foul goes to heaven; but as in this cafe none were ever found guilty, none were ever hanged after throwing from the rock. Dueling, in one reſpect, I agree is preferable, for a man may live after even wounding, and that to be hanged, and in the other cafe there is no chance for gallows to claim its right. But in countries where duels are pernicious only as they conſume powder, without the loſs of either lead or blood, their conſequences are not ſo fatal, nor their influence the ſame; and tho' a proof of his not fearing to face powder, is not a proof of his being a man of ſpunk, nor a guilty nor an innocent man. This, this is my country, and theſe the duels that will I fight.

PETER PISTOL.

A philoſopher and a wit were at ſea, and a high ſwell riſing, the philoſopher ſeemed under great apprehenſions leſt he ſhould go to the bottom. 'Why,' obſerved the wit, 'that will ſuit your genius to a tittle; as for my part, you know I am only for ſkimming the ſurface of things.

☞ The printer once more calls on thoſe indebted to him to make payment, nor longer calculate that as the ſum from each individual is ſmall, that many ſuch ſums are of no importance to him; but on the contrary, that the whole amount is conſiderable, and ſcattered; and that it is better for them to pay one juſt ſix or twelve ſhillings debt, than for him to looſe one hundred ſuch.--Payment, at any rate, or notes for payment muſt ſpeedily be made him to avoid trouble.

WHEREAS the entering of deeds in the office of the ſecretary of the province, to prevent the ſigning of deeds after they have been duly executed, hath been found inconvenient, and deemed to be otherwiſe improper; all perſons, therefore, who have, or purſued to have any claim to lands in the province by virtue of others, his majeſty's ſubjects, holden under certificate, or order of council, or other authority, will take notice that they muſt enter caveats in the ſecretary's office before the making of the deeds, as none will be received after they are executed.

Such perſons, therefore, as are ready to eſtabliſh their claims, will file their caveats in the ſecretary's office immediately; and that others may be duly apprized of the deeds about to be made, a liſt of the names of perſons and of the townſhips where the lands lie is ſubjoined, and others will be made known in the ſeveral ſubſequent gazettes.

THE SPECULATOR.

TO tread the gay and faſhionable walks of life, and to copy the example of thoſe whom fortune has partially placed above the common level of the world, is frequently, too frequently, the caſe. The errors which ſpring from this ſource are pregnant with almoſt every evil. The poor, by aping the manners and cuſtoms of thoſe who are in affluence, reduce themſelves to wretchedneſs and beggary; and the rich, by encouraging this foolish example, reduce themſelves alſo to poverty.—How often do we ſee the man who has hitherto earned his bread by the ſweat of his brow, and cultured his ſmall patrimony with contentment, at once feel the ſtings of envy at the affluence of a neighbor? His mind, that never ſoared beyond the narrow limits of an hour, ſafely ſuggeſts to him, that he has the ſame right to enjoy eaſe, and the ſame claim to independence, as his neighbor.—From that hour therefore he determines no longer to demean himſelf by labor, nor to appear in the ſimple garb of a farmer. An entire new change therefore takes place; and the hand that formerly held the plough or graſped the axe, you may now ſee decked with a ruffle, and ſcreened from the ſun by a ſilken glove. His family too catch the infection; he good wife, who has long induſtriouſly managed the domeſtic concerns, now begins to feel an imaginary importance; the kitchen grows too dirty, or too cold; and the parlour (which before was never opened, except on holidays, or to entertain company) muſt now be her place of reſidence. The plain gown which her good grandmother bequeathed, is now thrown aſide with an air of diſdain, and at the bar of vanity, ſentenced out of faſhion. The daughters muſt repair to town to rig themſelves in the real taſte of the bon ton; and the plough, the cart and the ſtead, muſt be ſold to purchaſe foreign gewgaws, with which alone light minds can be pleaſed. For a while they all flutter in this ſunſhine, like the tawdry butterfly, and then farm is mortgaged, the ſtock ſold, and the family fall into wretchedneſs and poverty. The poor farmer when it is too late, execrate his fooliſh ambition, and heartily curſes the fikleneſs of faſhion. But even the affluent are not ſecure from falling into poverty; when to tread the faſhionable walks they plunge themſelves into extravagance and folly.—I ſhall not however employ much time in pointing out the pernicious effects; by turning our eyes around the world, they may be ſeen painted in far ſtronger colours than my unpoliſhed pen is able to repreſent. I therefore relate the following inſtance, and no longer tire your patience.

Sophron us was born to affluence and to eaſe. His father dying, left him at an early period of life, ſole maſter of himſelf, and of an immenſe fortune. He was naturally poſſeſſed of a generous diſpoſition—of a heart that ſighed at the tale of woe, and bled at another's miſery. Under his roof the unhappy and the perſecuted ever found protection, and within his doors the good and the worthy, though clothed in the tattered garb of poverty, were ever welcome.—He ſoon choſe a beautiful partner, whoſe heart and mind were in every reſpect formed to make the connubial ſtate agreeable and happy. With theſe proſpects, his life too flatteringly promiſed an elyſium, and he too eagerly embraced the idea.—Riches alone were ſufficient to gain him admittance into the moſt faſhionable circles, and his mental accompliſhments procured him attention and reſpect. He was careſſed by the gay and the faſhionable, and they in return were bid welcome to his houſe.—From thence, therefore, it was the ſeat of mirth; within his walls was continually heard the voice of muſick; buſineſs was entirely laid aſide for pleaſure, and his table ſupported at an enormous expenſe. A few years roſled on in this ſucceſſion of pleaſure, when reflection began to take poſſeſſion of his mind; and upon an impartial examination he perceived that his fortune was ſunk.—The unhappy Sophronius ſtood motionleſs with ſorrow and ſurpriſe; for although he was ſenſible his expenſes were great and his fortune diminiſhed, he had no idea that it was entirely laviſhed. His mind was overwhelmed with deſpair, and inſtead of looking forward to pleaſing ſcenes and flowery proſpects, ſaw nothing before him but gloom and horror. Enervated by luxury, he was unfitted for buſineſs, and of courſe beggary and want enſued. His feelings were ſo harrowed when he reflected his former affluence, and preſent miſery, that he conſidered his laſt reſource to drown ſorrow was the cup. You may now ſee his lovely partner, on whoſe cheek the roſe once bluſhed, emaciated and enfeebled by want; and his infant offſpring enduring every hardſhip and conſuming the ſcanty cruſt moiſtened by the tears of poverty; while the unhappy wretch who his the cauſe of all their ſorrows drags out a miſerable exiſtence, a curſe to himſelf and a burden to mankind.

STATE PAPER.

SPANISH DECLARATION OF WAR.

THE principal motive by which I have been actuated in concluding a peace with the French republic, as ſoon as the government had aſſumed a regular and ſtable form was the conduct which England has obſerved towards me during the whole war, and the well grounded diſtruſt, which experience of her paſt bad faith had excited as to her future contentions. This early diſcovered itſelf at the moſt critical juncture of the firſt campaign in the treatment which admiral Herd obſerved towards my ſquadron at Toulon, where he attended only to the deſtruction of what he could not carry away, and in the conqueſt which he ſhortly after made of Corſica, taking care, however to conceal this expedition with the greateſt ſolicitude from Don Jon de Langara, while they were to enter at Toulon. The English miniſtry diſcovered the ſame want of good faith, in their ſilence, with reſpect to their negociations with other powers, and particularly with reſpect to the treaty made on the 19th November, 1794, with the United States of America, wherein no reſpect or conſideration was had for my rights although they were well known to the miniſtry.—I remarked it alſo in their repugnance to adopt any plan or ſyſtem which might accele rate a ſeparation of the war, and in the value anſwer which was given by lord Grenville to my ambaſſador the marquis del Campo when he ſolicited his cours for continuing it. What confirmed my opinion on this ſubject was the injuſtice with which they appropriated the rich cargo of the Spaniſh ſhip St. James or Achilles which ought to have been reſtored agreeable to a convention between my moſt ſecretary of ſtate the prince of peace, and lord St. Helens, ambaſſador to his Britannic majeſty; equally unjuſt was the detention of certain naval ſtores which were coming for the uſe of my marine on board Dutch veſſels, whereof reſtitution was conſtantly deferred under pretexts and difficulties.—Finally, what left me no room to doubt of the bad faith with which England was conducting herſelf, were the frequent arrivals of Engliſh veſſels on the coaſts of Peru and Chili, to carry on a contraband trade, and to reconnoitre thoſe territories under the preſence of fiſhing for whales a privilege which the claimed under the convention of Nootka ſound.

Such were the proceedings of the Britiſh miniſtry to extort the friendſhip good correſpondence, and intimate confidence, which they had promoted to Spain in all the operations of the war, according to the convention of the 25th of May, 1793.

Since adjuſting a peace with the French republic, I have not only had the ſtrongeſt reaſons to ſuſpect England of intentions to attack my poſſeſſions. A circumſtance I have received ſuch direct injunctions to ſatisfy me, that the miniſtry of that kingdom had reſolved to compel me to adopt a part not only injurious to the cauſe of humanity, already too much diſtreſſed by the bloody war, which annihilates Europe, but directly oppoſed to the ſincere deſire which I have repeatedly manifeſted to put a period to its deviations by a peace, for the acceleration of which I have offered my own mediation. England has manifeſted her views as well by my dominions, by the large expeditions and armaments ſent to the Antilles, deſtined in part againſt St. Domingo, in order to impede its delivery to France, as appears from the proclamations of the Engliſh generals in that iſland—by the eſtabliſhment of commercial companies in South America on the banks of the river Miſſouri, with intention to concentrate that way to the South ſea—and laſtly by the conqueſt which it has lately made, on the continent of South America, of the colony and river of Demarara belonging to the Dutch, whoſe advantageous ſituation facilitates to her the poſſeſſion of other important poſts.

But ſtill more hoſtile and leſs equivocal has been the conduct of Great Britain in their repeated inſults which have been offered to my flag, in the outrages which her frigates have committed in the Mediterranean, by taking, from on board of ſeveral Spaniſh veſſels, recruits for my army which were coming from Genoa to Barcelona—— in the piracies and depredations which the Corſican and Anglo-Corſican privateers proteſted by the Britiſh government of the iſland, commit on the Spaniſh commerce in the Mediterranean, and in the very bays of the coaſt of Catalonia, and in the detention of ſeveral Spaniſh veſſels loaded with Spaniſh property, carried into Britiſh ports upon the moſt frivolous pretexts, particularly in the embargo of the rich cargo of the Spaniſh frigate the Minerva, which was executed with the moſt indecent outrages to the Spaniſh flag. This veſſel has been detained, notwithſtanding the production before a competent tribunal, of the moſt authentic and ſatisfactory documents, that the ſaid cargo was wholly Spaniſh property.

Not leſs grievous was the attack made on the character of my ambaſſador, Don Simon de las Caſas, by one of the courts in London, decreeing his arreſt, grounded upon a demand of a very trifling balance, claimed of him by the owner of a boat.

Finally—it is no longer poſſible to bear the enormous violences committed on the Spaniſh territory, upon the coaſts of Aucaſt and Gallicia, by two brigs of the Engliſh marine, the Cameleon, and the Kingeroo, nor the ſtill more ſcandalous and inſolent occurrences in the iſland of Trinidad, where capt. Vaughan of the frigate Alarm, landed with colors flying and drums beating at the head of his whole crew whom he had armed to attack the French and avenge himſelf for the injuries which he alledged he had ſuffered from them; thus diſturbed by a proceeding highly offenſive to my ſovereignty, the tranquility of that iſland.

By ſuch reiterated and unheard of inſults is that ambitious nation daily exhibiting to the world new proofs that the acknowledges no other law, than the aggrandizement of her commerce, by means of an univerſal deſpotiſm at ſea—he has exhauſted my moderation and forbearance, and obliged me to ſupport the dignity of my crown, and attend to the protection I owe to my ſubjects, by declaring war againſt the king of England, his kingdom and ſubjects—and I do hereby command, that ſuch orders be tranſmitted to every part of my dominions, as may conduce to their defence, and to that of my beloved ſubjects, and to the annoyance of the enemy.

Done at St. Lorenzo, Oct. 5, 1796.

I, THE KING.

COLOGNE, Nov. 1.

Our letters from the Upper Rhine ſtate, that the laſt battle between the archduke and Moreau was extremely bloody and deciſive. We are aſſured that 8 thouſand were left in the field of battle, and that the croſſing of the Rhine by the French was the event of this action.

That which took place on the 27th ult. in the Hundſtruck was not conſequential as to the loſs of men on the part of the imperialiſts: but the poſts which the French recovered on this occaſion are of extreme importance. It would now appear that the Auſtrians mean to abandon Hundſtruck altogether, and to unite themſelves with gen. Hotze's corps to give a greater efficacy to the diverſion in that quarter, and to draw from this ſide all the forces of the French. On another hand, the Auſtrians are collecting conſiderable reinforcements at the Seig, where the republicans look for an immediate attack. With this expectation the letter are reinforcing themſelves by all the depot which they had left in the rear, and by the detachments which reach them from the interior.

COBLENTZ, Nov. 2.

We continue to enjoy the moſt perfect tranquility. Nevertheleſs, gen. Kleber has put our city in a ſtate of ſiege, by a reſolution, dated the 7th Brumaire, Oct. 28, conſiſting of eleven articles.

It appears to be the intention of the archduke to attack the remaining poſitions of the French beyond the Rhine, before he attempts to paſs that famous barrier. Thus Neuwied and Duſſeldorf, Kehl and the bridge at Huningen, muſt fix the place at which he will eſtabliſh his winter quarters.

It alſo appears to be his intention to keep at bay the army of the Sambre and Meuſe on the Lahn, during the attack upon Kehl.

Numerous batteries are conſtructing on the Lahn; thoſe at Leydeſdorff are provided with a numerous artillery. All the Auſtrian magazines are there; and general Kray has 20,000 men under his command, who are encamped from Vallendar to Erlich.

RIOT AT LEGHORN.

ITALY, Oct. 25.

The ſequeſtration put by the French, on the books, money and goods of the different tradeſmen at Leghorn, was noticed ſome time ago.—This meaſure was preceded by an event which gave riſe to ſome diſagreeable ſcenes. The people repaired in a croud, to a miraculous crucifix placed in the church of our lady. This croud alarmed the French commander the more becauſe a falſe report had been ſpread, that the populace were armed with long knives, and that they meant to riſe. In conſequence of this report, on the 22d of September 2200 French ſurrounded the church in which the people had aſſembled. French patroles paraded the ſtreets, forbidding any perſons appearing at the windows, under pain of being ſhot. The French ſoon entered the church, and ſeized the rector, his curates, and the cruciſix, all of whom were conveyed to the citadel. The grand duke's troops had received orders from the French commandant not to interfere in the buſineſs.

M. Vilette, the grand duke's governor of Leghorn, and the Tuſcan general, Straſoldo, were arreſted the ſame day. They are ſtill in priſon. Even ſince this unfortunate affair, in which a ſcore of perſons loſt their lives, the guns of the citadel have been pointed againſt the town, and the Tuſcan garriſon have been confined in the barracks.

The grand duke has been greatly afflicted at this event; and we are aſſured that he has cauſed the ſtrongeſt repreſentations to be made as well to the directory as to French generals on that ſubject.

OF THE NEGOCIATION.

PARIS, NOV. 4.

It is rather remarkable that the ſudden tour has aſſumed a much more moderate and wiſe tone. It appears, by his laſter articles, and indeed it is reported, that the directory will not inſiſt upon the preſervation of Belgium, on one part; and the reſtitution of the Dutch Colonies on the other; for the reſtitution of our own cannot be a doubt.—PERLET.

WEST-INDIA NEWS.

BARBADOES, Dec. 7.

Several veſſels have arrived within the few laſt days from the coaſt of Africa, where the French have again been playing their old republican game of burning and deſtroying the Britiſh factories and ſhips.—The commanders of ſome of the veſſels deſtroyed on the coaſt are arrived here, and give the above diſagreeable account. How long they may continue their depredations cannot now be determined, as the attention of the Britiſh men of war on foreign ſtation ſeem wholly occupied in collecting Spaniſh dollars.

UNITED STATES.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 6.

Within the laſt twelve months, there has been eſtabliſhed in this city, a moſt curious and extenſive uſeful manufactory, in which the ſpinning and weaving of hemp, flax and tow are performed by means of machinery, the whole being carried on by a water wheel, requiring no other manual labor than that of a few boys.—On Tueſday laſt, agreeable to invitation, the preſident of the United States, ſeveral members of congreſs, and other gentlemen, paid a viſit to this manufactory, and ſhewed themſelves in the higheſt degree pleaſed with the ingenuity and novelty of it: the preſident in particular, expreſſed a high opinion of the merit of the patentee, Mr. Davenport, and an earneſt with that a work ſo honorable to the infant manufactures of America might ſoon be introduced into different parts of the Union. We underſtand that it is a part of the plan of the patentee to conſtruct and deliver to order the machinery employed in this manufactory, in any part of the united States.

An accurate obſerver, by means of a ſtop watch, aſcertained the number of feet of thread ſpun by one boy in a day (or ten hours) which was the extraordinary quantity of 192,000 feet, which conſumed from 20 to 40 lbs. of flax or hemp, according to the fineneſs of the thread; a boy can alſo weave from 15 to 20 yards of fail cloth in a day.

Mr. Davenport calls his manufactory "the Globe Mills." It is ſituated at the north termination of Second-Street.—Specimens of the ſpinning and weaving are lodged in Peal's muſeum for public inſpection.

Feb. 8.

By a paſſenger in the Sufannah from Bourdeaux, we learn that the brig Liberty, Ridge, from this port, arrived at Bourdeaux the middle of Nov. and that Mr. Pinckney has landed there in good health, he has proceeded on his route for Paris, and altho' the people in Bourdeaux and other parts of France, appear to have imbibed very ſtrong prejudices againſt the United States and treated American citizens with a ſuſpicious and diſtant diſreſpect, it was ſuppoſed that the American miniſter would be cordially received by the directory.

The directory, though they did not iſſue formal orders for letters of marque, authoriſed the miniſter of the marine to grant adequate powers to private ſhips of war for the capture of ſhips bound for any port of Great-Britain, Ireland or the Britiſh colonies.

The number of privateers fitted out at Bourdeaux, within a ſhort period, before the departure of the Sufannah was 40; no American ſhips had then been brought into that port under the late orders of the directory, but it was generally underſtood by the merchants and ſhip owners at Bourdeaux, that they had powers to bring in all ſhips bound to Engliſh ports.

Mr. Fenwick had not heard from Mr. Pinckney, between the time of his departure from Bourdeaux for Paris, and the failing of the Sufannah, and he entertained no doubt of the reception of the miniſter at Paris, from whence he had but recently returned.—The Sufannah left Bourdeaux the 1ſt December.

Extract of a letter from Martinique, dated the 7th January, 1797, received by the ſchooner Liberty, capt. Crane, arrived at Marcus Hook.

"On the 15th inſtant arrived at fort Royal, ſir R. Abercrombie, general Hope, &c. from England, after a paſſage of 51 days, in the Arethuſa frigate; and we learn that 15000 men may be expected in the courſe of this month, it is ſuppoſed to attack Guadaloupe, although the moſt profound ſecrecy is obſerved at head quarters.

"Tranquility is at length reſtored to the ill fated iſlands of St. Vincent's and Grenada, and the inſurgents of St. Lucia are nearly reduced—The Charibbees all ſurrendered, and are now on the iſland of Biliſon:

The veſſel diſpatched laſt ſummer with the money conſigned by our government to the dey of Algiers, as the price of peace, has been captured by a courſer of the dey of Tunis. The dey of Algiers has ſent to demand reſtitution of the money and the head of the corſair, who committed the hoſtility.

Extract of a letter from Robert Fox, eſq. conſul of the United States, at Falmouth, (England,) dated the 26th of Nov. 1796.

"A veſſel arrived to day from Lisbon, and the paſſenger reports that at Madrid, the populace would not permit lord Bute to depart: and that the Spaniſh and French miniſters at Madrid had been inſulted—I have no other authority than the maſter of the ſhip; who ſays further, that the houſe of the Spaniſh miniſter was burnt; but I can hardly think it true."

BOSTON, Jan. 18.

Since our laſt, capt. Atwood, has arrived here from Cape-Francois, whither he had gone on a trading voyage, in the ſchooner Jane of this port; but where his cargoe, adventure, and every valuable thing, had been ſeized by the adminiſtration of the place, and no compenſation allowed.—The only palliation given for the pillage, was imperious neceſſity, and orders from the executive directory of France. Twelve other American veſſels were in a ſimilar predicament; and all complaints and petitions were treated with contempt. Proper repreſentations of theſe ſpoliations have been made to the preſident, and we have no doubt but an end will ſpeedily be put to them.

Three Ruſſian ſhips of the line and frigates are ordered by the empreſs to join the Engliſh navy—they are to be followed by 16 others.

The London "Star" hints, that Mr. PITT, will reſign, as prime miniſter of Great Britain.

WEST-NIAGARA, March 22.

New York papers of a very recent date were yeſterday received in town; we cannot yet learn their contents further than that the French continue their outrages on American veſſels in the Weſt Indies.

We have this day preſented our readers with the declaration of war by the king of Spain. The moſt we can ſay of it is its length; for ſhould we enter into a critical examination, we ſhall find the chief grounds of complaint to amount to no more than thoſe that England planned and executed an expedition, to aſſiſt her enemies too ſecretly for Don John de Lancara. That ſhe made a treaty with the United States for herſelf without leave from his catholic majeſty, or, in other words, made a better bargain, than did his majeſty.—That the Engliſh appropriated money captured from the Spaniſh, to carry on a war with her enemies.—That Spain forbids, does not know, that the Engliſh have news on her American poſſeſſions.—That England has taken from the Dutch the iſland of Demarara; and finally, that it puts his majeſty quite out of humor, that his ambaſſador Don Simon de las Caſas ſhould be by the laws of England compelled to pay a poor boatman his fare, over a ferry.—Excellent reaſons for going to war!—Perhaps in his catholic majeſty had better expreſſed himſelf in this ſhort declaration, "I the king, am raving mad with the Engliſh, therefore I go to war with them."

On the 9th of December laſt, 18 ſail of Britiſh men of war were cruiſing off cape Francois. It was ſuppoſed by the inhabitants of the cape that the Britiſh had received information of an armament coming out from France, which the people of the cape had no advice of.

The Legiſlature of New-York have reſolved by a large majority that the city of Albany be the ſeat of government in that ſtate.

From a BALTIMORE paper, Jan. 13.

A letter received by a gentleman in this city from Norfolk, makes mention of the arrival in that port of the Harmony, a French ſhip of 50 guns, from cape Francois, her buſineſs is not mentioned. The ſame account ſays, that admiral Murray has diſpatched three frigates from Halifax, to cruiſe off our capes, in order to intercept commodore Barney's ſquadron now lying at Norfolk, ſhould he attempt to go out.

From a Correſpondent.

DIED, at his houſe near the Falls, on the 7th inſt JOHN BURCH, eſq. aged 54 years. Mr. Burch was born in the city of London; but, at an early period of life, came into America. When hoſtilities unhappily commenced between Great-Britain and her American colonies, he took a deciſive part in favor of the former. The conſequence was, his effects in the city of Albany, which were of conſiderable value, were ſeized. Perceiving that his liberty, perhaps his life, was in danger, he fled to a farm he had on the eaſt branch of the Delaware, where he expected that the remoteneſs and obſcurity of his ſituation would have ſheltered him from the unrelenting fury of his enemies. But even in that infant retreat they found him out. Finding that his houſe was ſurrounded, he eſcaped laſt year at one of the windows, and fled the following night in an open boat down the river, where he had the mortification to ſee his houſe, barn and grain all in flames. Mr. Burch then embraced the earlieſt opportunity of eſcaping into this province, where he lived in peace during the remainder of the war. After peace was reſtored he returned to his farm on Chippawa Creek, and was, by major Campbell, the commanding officer, appointed one of the ſuperintendants of the loyaliſts, who had fettled in that quarter, and, for ſome time, had proviſions from his majeſty's ſtores. His affability and impartiality in the diſcharge of the duties of his ſtation ſoon procured him the confidence and eſteem both of the commanding officer and thoſe whom he was appointed to ſuperviſe. Having been ſoon after appointed a magiſtrate he diſcovered, in the whole of his official conduct, ſuch a mixture of juſtice and humanity, as could not fail to endear him to all who had any intercourſe with him. To relieve the needy and diſtreſſed; to encourage and promote every praiſe worthy undertaking civil, religious; to diffuſe univerſal happineſs among his fellow-creatures, ſeemed to have been his delight. If Mr. Burch had foibles and failings, it is left to the man who can plead a total exemption from them, to cenſure them.

ALL perſons concerned will pleaſe to take notice, that the magiſtrates in the ſecond riding of the county of Lincoln, will meet on Friday, 31ſt of this preſent month of March, at THOMPSON'S HOTEL, for the purpoſe of licencing the public houſes; it is therefore expected the applicants will give their attendance.

To wit. }

A General and quarter ſeſſions of the peace of and for this diſtrict, is to be holden and kept at the council chamber in the town of Newark, on Tueſday the eleventh of April next enſuing, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of the ſame day, of which all coroners, gaolers, high and petty conſtables, bailiffs and all others otherwiſe intereſted are deſired to take notice, and that they be then preſent to do and perform thoſe things which to their ſeveral offices in that behalf appertain.

ALEX. M'DONELL, ſheriff.

JAMES and THOMAS WILSON TAKE this method of informing their cuſtomers in the town of Newark, and its vicinity, that they with all perſons who have contracted debts on book, or by notes of hand, ſince the firſt of June laſt, to make payment as ſoon as is convenient, as any unpaid on the firſt of April next, will be put in ſuit to be recovered by law; therefore they hope their friendly cuſtomers will ſo attend to this requeſt as not to occaſion in them the diſagreeable feelings they muſt have in being obliged to create to them a bill of coſt in the recovery of their demands.

TO BE SOLD

A very elegant new highly finiſhed eight day CLOCK. For terms apply to Archibald Cameron, at York, or the price may be known at the printing-office.

‡¶§ The printer once more calls on thoſe indebted to him to make payment, nor longer calculate that as the ſum from each individual is ſmall, that many ſuch ſums are of no importance to him; but on the contrary, that the whole amount is conſiderable, and ſcattered; and that it is better for them to pay one juſt ſix or twelve ſhillings debt, than for him to looſe one hundred ſuch.—Payment, at any rate, or notes for payment muſt ſpeedily be made him to avoid trouble.

THE SOCIAL FIRE.

WHEN beating rains and pinching winds,
At night attack the lab'ring hinds,
And force them to retire—
How sweet they pass their time away,
In sober talk or rustic play,
Beside the focial fire.

There many a plaintive tale is told,
Of thofe, who, ling'ring in the cold,
With cries and groans expire.
The mournful story drives the tear ;
They heave the figh, they drop the tear,
And bleſs their focial fire.

The legendary tale comes next,
With many an artful phrafe perplext,
That well the tongue might tire ;
The wind ows ſhake, the ſhutters crack ;
Each thinks the ghoſt behind his back,
And hitches to the fire.

Or now perhaps ſome homely ſwain,
Who fann'd the lover's flame in vain,
And glow'd with warm deſire,
Relates each ſtratagem he play'd,
To win the coy, diſdainful maid,
And eyes the focial fire.

To theſe ſucceeds the jocund ſong,
From lungs leſs muſical than ſtrong,
And all to mirth aſpire ;
The humble roof returns the ſound,
The ſocial cann moves briſkly round,
And brighter burns the fire.

Oh ! grant me heav'n a ſtate like this,
Where ſimple ignorance is bliſs ;
'Tis all that I require.
Then, then— to ſhare the joyes of life,
I'll ſee a kind, indulgent wife,
And bleſs my focial fire.

ANECDOTE—FROM ANDERSON'S NARRATIVE OF THE BRITISH EMBASSY TO CHINA.

A MERCHANT of the city of Nankin had, with equal induſtry and integrity, acquired a conſiderable fortune, which awakened the rapacious ſpirit of the vice roy of that province. On the pretence, therefore, of its being too rapidly accumulated, he gave ſome intimations of his deſign to make a ſeizure of it. The merchant who had a numerous family ; hoped to baffle the oppreſſive avarice that menaced him, by dividing his poſſeſſions among his children, and depending upon them for ſupport.

But the ſpirit of injuſtice, when ſtrengthened by power, is not eaſily thwarted in his deſigns : the vice roy, therefore ſent the children to the army, ſeized on their property, and left the father to beg his bread.—His tears and humble petitions were fruitleſs ; the tyrannical officer, this vile vicegerent of a beneficient ſovereign, diſdained to beſtow the ſmalleſt relief on the man he had reduced to ruin ; ſo that, exaſperated by the oppreſſion of the miniſter, the merchant, at length, determined to throw himſelf at the feet of his ſovereign to obtain redreſs, or die in his preſence.

With this deſign, he begged his way to Pekin ; and, having ſurmounted all the difficulties of a long and painful journey, he at length arrived at the imperial reſidence ; and having prepared a petition that contained a faithful ſtatement of his injuries, he waited with patience in an outer court till the emperor ſhould paſs to attend the council. But the poverty of his appearance had almoſt fruſtrated his hopes ; and the attendant mandarins were about to chaſtiſe his intruſion, when the attention of the emperor was attracted by the buſtle which the poor man's reſiſtance occaſioned. At this moment he held forth a paper, which his imperial majeſty ordered to be brought to his palanquin ; and, having peruſed its contents, commanded it's petitioner to follow him.

It ſo happened that the vice roy of Nankin was attending his annual duty in the council : the emperor, therefore, charged him with the crime ſtated in the poor man's petition, and commanded him to make his defence : but conſcious of his guilt, and amazed at the unexpected diſcovery, his agitations, his looks, and his ſilence, condemned him. The emperor then addreſſed the aſſembled council on the ſubject of the vice roy's crime, and concluded his harangue with ordering the head of his tyrannical officer to be inſtantly brought him on the point of a ſabre.—The command was obeyed ; and while the poor old man was wondering on his knees at the extraordinary event of the moment, the emperor addreſſed him in the following manner : look, ſaid he, on the awful and bleeding example before you, and as I now appoint you to be his ſucceſſor, and name you vice roy of the province of Nankin, let his fate inſtruct you to fulfil the duties of your high and important office with juſtice and moderation.

Let ſomebody elſe do it.

AND why do not do it yourſelf without ſaying three words about it ? you are equally intereſted—and go and do it immediately—if the preſent time is not always the only time, it is always the beſt ; and depend upon it, ſomebody elſe will not do it ; they have the ſame excuſe that you have—negligence.

If a plank happens to be worn thro' on a bridge "this is a ſcandalous place" ſays every body, juſt as they are paſſing over it ; "it is a ſhame that hole ſhould remain ; the firſt horſe that comes over in the night may put his foot in it, then away goes his leg, or perhaps the rider's neck—Somebody ought to lay down a new plank, or let the ſurveyor know it immediately : I have a great mind to do it myſelf ; but there are other folks live as near as I do, and let ſomebody elſe do it."

There is a deep rut in the road—a carriage or a load of lumber will almoſt turn over every time they paſs—it can't be avoided—five minutes work would repair it ; but 'tis not the uſual time to repair roads in the ſpring. "I won't mend it," ſays one neighbor—"And I won't ſays another, I can get along as well as any body, I'll wait and let ſomebody elſe do it." It remains all ſummer.

A chain unhooks and lets the bucket fall into a town well—" What is that to me—I can get water at another place as eaſy as other people ; it is not more than thirty rods, and the ſnow is not very deep." But hark ye, is it cheaper to hook the chain than to go a week to the ſpring ?" "What then it is not my well any more than it is neighbor Hobſon's, I don't want to mend it for other folks—let ſomebody elſe mend it."

There are ſundry other omiſſions of a like nature that ought to be mentioned in a good natured way, but as I have ſtepped too long, and am in danger of being beated, I had rather let ſomebody elſe do it.

A TRAVELLER.

AGRICULTURAL GAZETTE.

[From our ſcantinels of political intelligence, we have this week dedicated a portion of the gazette to our agricultural friends. To promulgate articles of information tending to promote and improve ſo important an object to this province as is agriculture, is, with thoſe of virtue and morality, the firſt of duties ; and in all countries where this is the neceſſary and principal employment of its inhabitants, as in all the American ſtates and provinces, theſe publications are common to the moſt eminent publishers of papers, as well as of magazines ; and in it are they countenanced by thoſe who know and ſtudy the true intereſt of their country, and from the practice the happieſt conſequences have flowed. A great reaſon for this is, although adapted to the forms of magazine, theſe are not ſo numerous in new countries as in old, but even there give a thing the ſolidity of a newspaper ; and are the more neceſſary alſo in this country, where our soil and climate so materially differ from the European, that the best imported treatises on that subject are applicable but in a very few instances; to demonstrate which we quote the many Europeans who settle in the states, where the soil and climate are similar to ours, who from the prejudice of education practise their old methods till a year or two, when sad rewards in small incomes have induced them to adopt those, the result of experience found to be more consistant with the nature of the soil:—Therefore, with assiduity shall we relate such approved experiments, as are applicable to this province, and with gratitude receive communications, original or selected, on the subject. To correct the errors of the European methods, as they apply to us—as also those of the ancient methods in the states, both of which in their grossest kinds are only practised here, is the wish of every one who has the prosperity of the province in view.

Yearly remarks by a farmer on the culture of any article, the management of the soil, times and manner of preparing both of the soil and seed, the weather, &c. will have a tendency greatly to promote a knowledge of the true and best method, of husbandry in this country, and a collection of those observations might be used to the highest advantage. To make two or three experiments on each kind of grain, or root in a year is by no means beyond the power, or even conveniency of a farmer who cultivates a small or great number of acres.—The sort of grain, likewise, that best suits our soils and climate, is an enquiry not uninteresting.]

Mode of fatting house-lambs, as practised by those who supply the London markets with that article of luxurious delicacy.

AS soon as the lambs are born, they are put into a warm out-house: some white peas and bran are mixed together, and placed near them, as is also some fine hay, and above, a chalkstone for them to lick.—The dams are turned into good grass, and bro't to their lambs regularly four times every day. And here it is observed, to begin with the youngest, and not with the oldest lamb, as the last milk is found by experience to fatten soonest and most. Every lamb is suffered to suck as much as it will—by this process they become extremely delicate.

Means made use of by the inhabitants of Ukraine, for obtaining fine lamb's wool.

ACCORDING to M. Pallas, a sort of sheep, most generally known in the Ukraine, in Podolia, and the neighboring counties, have a coarse but equal wool; the length of their tails, above all, distinguishes them from every other breed: the lambs when dropped are covered with a waved and curled fleece, which forms the beautiful Astracan wool, that is some time obtained from the lambs that die before their birth: in order to render the fleece more beautiful, the lambs, as soon as dropped, are enveloped all over the body with a linen covering sewed under the belly, which linen is every day moistened with tepid water, and care is taken to enlarge the covering in proportion to the growth of the animal; but it must always be done in such a manner as to allow only of its fitting it exactly. The fleece thus compressed for some weeks becomes crisp an' curled and takes a fine lustre.—When they perceive it to have arrived at a state of perfection, they kill the animal to have the skin. It is necessary to remark that this sort of wool is not fine, and that there can be little doubt but, if the same process was followed in every other country, as fine fleeces might be obtained from many lambs killed early, and whose growth would not be impeded by this operation.—It is well worth at least trying the experiment, but comparatively, that is to say, that of two lambs of the same race and same age, one only ought to be enveloped in linen to see if the fleece so managed would be finer than that of the uncovered lamb's.—The lambs of the Spanish breed are naturally a very curling wool and would according to appearances, furnish the finest fleeces of this sort. The ancients covered with skins, prepared for the purpose, their choicest sheep, and those which gave the finest wool; it was what they called oves pelito; by this method the wool is preserved clean, and acquires more fineness. It cannot well be otherwise with wool than with horse hair; and it is universally known, that those horses that are always kept covered have much finer coats than those that are exposed to the air.

Monsieur's method of raising POTATOES from the SHOOTS.

The president of the United States having forwarded to the president of this society, a treatise lately published in Ireland, on an improved method of raising potatoes, and being requested after perusal, it might be returned to him again; Simeon De Witt, esq. was directed to prepare an abstract of the same, and make report thereof to the society; which abstract and report is as follows, viz.

IN compliance with the order of the society I have made an extract from the pamphlet entitled "Letters to the right honorable and honorable the Dublin society on the culture of potatoes from the shoots, by the rev. Wm. Mansfell, L. L. D." Printed in Dublin 1794.

In this pamphlet the most eligible process in cultivating potatoes from their shoots, is not particularly pointed out, but we are left to judge from that great variety of experiments which are minutely described in it, none of which seem to have failed of success, and in some of them every shoot planted has been productive.

By the shoots are meant those fibres or branches which immediately grow from the eyes of the potatoes after they have begun to vegetate without being put into the earth.

The following are the methods which have been generally used in planting them:

1st.—Drills of about six inches deep and two feet apart from each other are made in the ground properly prepared in the usual way. Potatoe shoots are then cut into lengths of about five or six inches each, and planted in the drills six inches asunder with their thickest ends, or those which have been next to the potatoe downwards.—They are then covered with earth about one inch under.

2d.—A furrow is made with a plough some dung spread in it—the furrough is cloted back with the plough, and the shoots planted in it as you would do cabbage with letting flicks.

3d.—The shoots are laid down in any direction in the furrow at proper distances from each other and covered with the ploughs.

Which of these methods of planting is the best of the whole, does not seem to be clearly decided by the experiments.

When the flocks appears above ground, keep earthing them at least eighteen inches high, leaving always two or three inches above ground, for "says the author "the higher you earth them up the greater will be the produce; for the potatoes from the shoots if properly attended to will not spread in the ground, but ascend to the surface as you may see them when dug out growing to the flock as onions tied to a trace."

The superior advantages of raising potatoes from the shoots instead of the potatoes themselves are the following.

1st.—The seed potatoes which in Ireland are reckoned to be one sixth of the whole crop, are a clear saving.

2d.—The same space of ground will produce two or three times the same quantity.

4th.—The labor of cutting the seed potatoes into what are called sets or scullians are also saved.

5th.—It is probable they will not be so apt to degenerate as in the old way of raising them.

To prevent the canker worms destroying APPLE TREES.

AS soon as the snow goes off, and the frost is out round the roots of the trees, take coarse running sand, lay it round the roots of the trees, about ten or twelve inches high, as steep as you can make it lie, and the bugs cannot crawl up, but will roll down, from time to time, untill they are worried out, and will gather in heaps round the sand at the roots of the trees. If your orchard is near the barn, your fowls will be out early in the morning and will pick them up. If there comes a rain, or high wind, you must right the sand again. Attend it well, and there will not be one in an hundred get up. Take a lantern, and go about dusk, and you will be satisfied whether it will answer.

ANECDOTE.

A bishop and a general being in company, the bishop gave the French king for a toast. The general after drinking it expressed his surprise that the bishop should give such a toast.—I did it, said the bishop, in compliment to you; for were it not for the French king, there would be no need of an army. When it came to the general's turn, he gave the devil: the bishop refusing to drink it, the general insisted he should, declaring, that were it not for the devil there would be no occasion for ecclesiasticks.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 28.

A letter has been received from Thomas Muir, dated from Havannah, in which he says that he left Botany Bay, February 1796 and gives the following account of the situation of his fellow convicts: "I left Gerald in the last agonies, Palmer cannot live long, you would not know Skirving, and Margarot is far from being firm.

Capt. Alden in the ship Caroline, has arrived here from Liverpool in 66 days by whom we have received London papers two day later than received by capt. Choate.—The complexion of the London prints have more the cast of continued hostilities than an expectation of approaching peace.

Intelligence to Jan. 15, is received via Salem, (Massachusettes) The idea of an attempt on Guadaloupe is not contemplated; nor were there any intelligence of an expedition against the Spanish squadron at Trinidad.

Victor Hughes has declared, that American vessels having certificates from the French or English consuls at the port of her departure, shall not be molested even if bound to or from an English port. This is considered as a decoy.

Capt. Williams, an American, is said to be made of a privateer out of Guadaloupe.—On his receiving his commission, he declared he would exert himself to the utmost against the open enemies of France, but that it never should be said of him, that he troubled the vessels of neutrals, and above all, of his own country.—On this rule, occurred of his meeting with American vessels bound to British ports, whom he treated well, and furnished them with many necessaries they were in need of. At length captured a British ship with a cargo valued at 40,000l. which he got safely in. Markets were bad.

It is with very great satisfaction we see the news mentioned in our paper of yesterday, of the capture of the Dutch settlements of Amboyna, and Banda, in the East-Indies, confirmed by the gazette of last night. These captures must prove a most severe loss of the Dutch, as all their rich factories of spices are now in our possession except Batavia, against which vice admiral Rainier is supposed to have gone, after having received some further reinforcements from Madrass.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY, JAN. 24TH.

P. A. Debonne, esq. proposed as speaker John Young, esq. member for the Lower-Town of Quebec, in which he was seconded by John Lees, esq.

The question being put upon this motion, by the clerk, it was negatived by a majority of thirteen.

Louis Duniere, esq. then proposed to the house as their speaker, Jean Antonine Panet, esq. in which he was seconded by Joseph Plante, esq.

Upon a division, this motion was carried by a majority of seventeen; accordingly, Mr. Panet was led to the chair with the usual formalities.

The house then adjourned till Thursday, the 26th at noon.

Extract from the speech of the lieut. governor at the opening of the present session of the legislature of this province:

Gentlemen of the legislative council, and gentlemen of the house of assembly,

Soon after the dissolution of the late provincial parliament an order was made by the governor in council for the purpose of giving effectual operation to that part of the treaty of amity, commerce and navigation, between his majesty and the United States of America which concerns this province.

An explanatory article, to be added to, and made part of the treaty, was signed at Philadelphia on the 4th of May last, by the commissioners of his majesty and of the United States, duly authorised for that purpose and has since been ratified by his majesty and the president of the United States. A copy of the order in council, and of this explanatory article, which is immediately connected with the commercial interests of Upper and Lower-Canada, shall be communicated to you.

It must afford you the most sensible satisfaction to observe the wide field which has been thus opened to the industry of the inhabitants of this colony, and of the neighboring states, and I doubt not but we shall mutually derive the most solid advantages from the free and amicable intercourse to which we are hereby encouraged.

Sublime confirmation of sentences.—And FACT.

A complaint has been entered to a magistrate of the Forty-mile creek, against a person at present inhabiting there, for uttering blasphemous, heretical and damnable doctrines: denying the being of a God, the trinity, and truth of the holy scriptures. The expressions which gave rise to this complaint, were some time since uttered, and have ever since been the cause of much speculation with the wiseacres; and who, to relieve conscience from the compunction, guilt or imputation of partaking in the heinous crimes by observing silence, a few days since made the complaint, that justice may be executed on the execrable wretch. The magistrate taking a little time for consideration, entered into a separate and particular examination of the witnesses and offender, and collected these facts, that in conversation he had used the following expressions:—That lightening was a fluied; that it could be extracted from the cloud at any time, and that it could be made by man and by it he could kill a man or creature; and that thunder is no more the voice of God than is any other noise, and is the report of the lightning; (the declaring that he could extract the lightening, is deemed self super-omnipotency) and lastly, that the earth has two motions, one round the sun, and that the sun stands still.

Notwithstanding the magistrate seems to countenance the heretic, and delays process, it is not improbable that it will issue from another quarter; and if so, the county will have exhibited to them a specimen of pious zeal, such as has never been exhibited since the time of Galileo, of Florence, who for advancing that the earth moved round the sun, was condemned and hanged.

Extract from the London abridgment of the state of politics for this week, Nov. 12.

The resignation of general WASHINGTON, is doubtless a great crisis in the new constitution of America; not that it is equivalent in that respect to the death of that great man, whose very existence, and possible return to the head of affairs, will restrain for a time both personal ambition and provincial hatred, and local contention. The paper which he has addressed to the United States is replete with wisdom, and is applicable, in many points of view, to our own circumstances, as well as those of America. Coming from authority so pure and so grave, and so entirely disinterested, his opinion may be respected, and a partiality for France, and for political associations, which has too long disgraced and menaced us, be abandoned, by his perfuasion, as the source of foreign corruption and foreign treasons, and of domestic violence and the tyranny of factions.

We hear from the states by a person directly from thence, that their fears of a war are quite dissipated at the encreasing prospect of a general peace; an event they consider almost realized.

THE MORALIZER.

He that is ſlow to anger is better than the mighty, and he that ruleth his ſpirit than he that taketh a city. SOLOMON.

MILITARY ſkill and proweſs have their honor, as well as uſe, and the laurels, gathered in the field of battle, have been thought to compoſe the faireſt crown that can adorn the head of man. But the author of my motto profeſſes a different opinion, and ſhews us a more excellent way. He places true greatneſs in ſelf command, and points out a road to glory that lies open to all. For tho' it be not in every one's power to aſcend the ſlippery ſteep of honor, and reach the ſummit of a ſtateſman's or a hero's fame; yet all may figure in the leſs ſplendid, but more ſubſtantial virtues of the chriſtian, and the man who cannot rule another's ſpirit, may ſecure the far nobler attainment of the two, I mean, that of ruling his own.

We will firſt examine the ſubject as it ſtands in morality conſidered apart.

It is well known that the force of paſſions decline, in proportion as the principle of reaſon is cultivated and improved; they are indeed in oppoſite ſcales, and have a ſeparate prep nderancy according to their comparative weight. This confirms that reflection of the ſage of antiquity,—that a ſtone is heavy, and land is weighty, but a fool's wrath is heavier than both. The aſcendency of paſſion, is therefore the ſureſt evidence of folly, and invariably leads us aſtray from the path of reaſon. This conſideration might frequently induce us to reflect, how illy it becomes us to act at random, and whilſt poſſeſſed of a power to regulate our paſſions, yet conduct us tho' we had none.

Whoever would correct the intemperance of his paſſions ſhould call in to his aſſiſtance the light of reaſon to his aid. This will teach us in the firſt place, to form a juſt eſtimate of human life, and not to expect a ſcene of perfection and undiſturbed repoſe, from a ſtate, with which the ideas of frailty and infirmity are inſeparably connected.

This will alſo teach us to act upon the ſame wiſe and rational principle with the father of our ſpirits, of whom it is ſaid, that "he will not always chide, neither keepeth he his anger forever, for he knoweth our frame, he remembereth that we are duſt."—Above all it obliges us to attend to the rule of right, and inſpires us with the ſpirit of candor and forbearance towards the feelings of others, by making juſt and frequent reflections upon our own.

Inſtead of giving way to groundleſs jealouſies and ſuſpicions which ſo much diſturb the peace and freedom of ſociety, the man of reaſon will incline to put the moſt favorable conſtruction upon other's conduct: or ſhould a real injury be ſuppoſed, he will not eſtimate the quantity of the offence, by thoſe falſe weigats and meaſures which ſelf love and vanity ſupply, but by the truth and reality of things, and accordingly take in every circumſtance of extermination.

It might be obſerved ſtill further, that as the view of pride is generally obſerved to inflame and ſtregthen the paſſions (for above all men the proud can leaſt bear to be contradicted and oppoſed) ſo by neceſſary conſequences, we cannot take a more effectual method for the reduction of our paſſions, than the reduction of our pride.—It was not without reaſon that the bleſſed authority of our religion, joined the virtues of meekneſs and humility together; for in truth they are filter virtues, and the latter has no inconſiderable ſhare in ſupporting the former.

And furthermore, a juſt exerciſe of reaſon will inſpire us with a juſt regard to the peace and welfare of ſociety. It ſuggeſts what endleſs miſchiefs ariſe from diſturbing that beauteous order, which the author of nature hath eſtabliſhed, by ſeparating the paſſions from that very principle by which they ſhould be regulated and freed. Upon this plan the moſt celebrated performances of the dramatic kind have been formed, I mean, to ſhew the fatal and deſtructive effects of the paſſions when no longer under the conduct of reaſon. But we need not appeal to the poets; the voice of hiſtory, and of daily experience, unite their proofs, that a great part of the ills and calamities of life ariſe from unſubdued paſſions, and conſequently ſhould we get aſide the conſideration of religion, and a future ſtate, ſtill it would be more eligible that reaſon preſide, than paſſion; whether we conſider the good of the private ſyſtem, or that of whole families and communities, that have flouriſhed under the adminiſtration of the one, but were reduced to miſery and ruin by the other.

It therefore this ſingle principle of reaſon, which is the glory of our common nature, be dethroned, we may indeed wear the form of men, but ſhall illy deſerve the name; and that very life and vigor which the paſſions infuſe into action, when conſidered in this diſordered view will appear no better than the Roman ſtate in its degeneracy, that retained all the haughtineſs of a commonwealth, without its virtues, or like a foaming flood that has broken down its branches, and ſo inſtead of diſtributing fertility and plenty, carries with it ruin and devaſtation where it flows.

ON MASONRY.

The following diſcourſe, tranſlated from the original French, was pronounced at Brunſwick, Lower Saxony, where prince Ferdinand was grand maſter, by the count T, at the initiation of his ſon.

"I CONGRATULATE you on your admiſſion into the moſt ancient, and, perhaps, the moſt reſpectable ſociety in the world. To you the myſteries of maſonry are about to be revealed, and ſo bright a ſun never ihed luſtre on your eyes. In this awful moment, when proſtrate at this holy altar, do you not ſhudder at every crime, and have you not confidence in every virtue? May this reflection inſpire you with noble ſentiments; may you be penetrated with a religious abhorrence of every vice that degrades human nature; and may you feel the elevation of ſoul which ſcorns a diſhonorable action, and ever invites to the practice of piety and virtue.

"Theſe are the wiſhes of a father and a brother, conjoined. Of you the greateſt hopes are formed; let not our expectations be deceived.—You are the ſon of a maſon who glories in the profeſſion; and for your filence and good conduct, your father has pledged his honor.

"You are now, as a member of this illuſtrious order, introduced a ſubject of a new country, whoſe extent is boundleſs. Pictures are open to your view wherein true patriotiſm is exempli fied in glaring colours, and a ſeries of tranſactions recorded, which the rude hand of time can never erate. The obligations which influenced the firſt Brutus and Manlius to ſacrifice their children to the love of their country, are not more ſacred than thoſe which bind me to ſupport the honor and reputation of this venerable order.

"This moment, my ſon, you owe me a ſecond birth; ſhould your conduct in life correſpond with the principles of maſonry, my remaining years will paſs away with pleaſure and ſatisfaction. Obſerve the great example of our ancient maſters, peruſe our hiſtory, and our conſtitutions. The beſt the moſt humane, the braveſt and moſt civilized of men have been our patrons.—Though the vulgar are ſtrangers to our works, the greateſt geniuſes have ſprung from our order. The moſt illuſtrious characters on earth have laid the foundation of their moſt amiable qualities in maſonry. The wiſeſt of princes, SOLOMON, planted our INSTITUTION, at raiſing a TEMPLE to the Eternal and Supreme Ruler of the Univerſe.

"Swear, my ſon, that you will be a true and faithful maſon. Know from this moment, that I concentre the affection of a patriot in the name of a brother and a friend. May your heart be fuſceptible of love and eſteem, and may you burn with the ſame zeal your father poſſeſſes.—Convince the world by our new alliance you are deſerving our favor, and never forget the ties which bind you to honor and to juſtice.

"View now with indifference the extenſive connections you have formed, but let univerſal benevolence regulate your conduct. Exert your abilities in the ſervice of your king and country, and deem the knowledge you have this day attained, the happieſt acquiſition of your life.

"Recall to memory the ceremony of your initiation; learn firſt to bridle your tongue and govern your paſſions, and ere long you will have occaſion to ſay "in becoming a maſon I truely became the man; and while I breathe will never diſgrace a jewel that kings may prize."

"If I live, my ſon, to reap the fruits of this day's labor, my happineſs will be complete. I will meet death without terror, cloſe my eyes in peace, and expire without a groan, in the arms of a virtuous and worthy Free Maſon."

Directions for raiſing FLAX. Publiſhed by order of the commiſſioners and truſtees for fiſheries, manufactures, and improvements, in Scotland. And enriched with notes ſuited to the ſoil and climate of Pennſylvania, by a gentleman long in the practice of raiſing flax there.

Choice of ſoil, and preparing the ground for flax.

A SKILFUL flax-raiſer always prefers a free open deep loam, and grounds that produced the preceding year a good crop of turnips, cabbage, potatoes, barley or broad clover; or has been formerly laid down rich, and kept for ſome years in paſture.

A dry ſoil, the ſecond or third crop after being limed§, will anſwer well for flax, as well as ſoils of a lighter quality; provided it be brought to a proper mould, by tilling after harveſt to expoſe it to the winter froſts; and by repeated ploughings in the ſpring, to make the ground fine. A little old ſtable-dung, or that of pigeons, or ſheep, or aſhes, may be ſpread upon the ground immediately before ſowing.

Ground enriched with ſhell or other marls, will anſwer well for flax, if the marl has been mixed with the ſoil ſome time.

In dry ſoils, the broader and more level the ridges are laid, ſo much the better; as by that means, the natural moiſture will be longer retained, and the crop rendered more equal and uniform; which uniformity is of great advantage to crops of flax.

All new grounds, or ſuch as have lain long in graſs or paſture, produce clean crops of ſtrong flax; but ought to be ploughed as ſhallow, and the furrow laid as flat as poſſible†.

Flax feed ought never to be ſown on grounds either too wet or too dry; but on ſuch as retain a natural moiſture: and ſuch grounds, as are inclined to weeds, ought to be avoided, unleſs prepared by a careful ſummer fallow, or by crops of turnips, cabbage, or potatoes.

Before ſowing, the bulky clods ſhould be broken, or carried off the ground; and ſtones, quickens, and every thing that may hinder the growth of the flax, ſhould be removed.

Choice of linſeed.

THE brighter in colour, and heavier the § Penſylvania farmers ſay that land manured with ſtone lime will not produce good flax.

Penſylvania has a light dry ſoil; the lime is poſſibly too drying; but the ſoil of Upper-Canada, eſpecially in many places is moiſt, and clayey, therefore lime manure may hold good with us. The experiment is worth the trying.

† After ploughing, a heavy roller ſhould be uſed to preſs the ſod ſmooth and cloſe to the ground. This will make the graſs rot the ſooner.

ſeed is‡, ſo much the better: that which appears, when bruiſed, of a light or yellow green, and freſh in the heart, oily, and mellis and taſtes ſweet, may be depended upon||.

Dutch ſeed of the preceding year's growth for the moſt part anſwers beſt; but it ſeldom ſucceeds, if kept another year. It ripens ſooner than any other foreign ſeed.—Philadelphia ſeed produces a fine lint and few bolls, and anſwers well in wet cold ſoils.

Of ſowing linſeed.

THE quantity of the linſeed ſown ſhould be proportioned to the condition of the ſoil; for if the ground be in good heart, and the ſeed ſown thick, the crop will be in danger of falling, before it is ready for pulling. Nearly three buſhels Winchester meaſure, of Dutch or Riga ſeed, are generally ſufficient for one Scots acre*; and about two buſhels and a half of Philadelphia ſeed, which, being the ſmalleſt grained, goes the fartheſt.

The time for ſowing linſeed is from the middle of March to the end of April, as the ground and ſeaſon anſwer.

It ought always to be ſown on a dry bed. And if the ſoil be light, it ſhould be rolled after harowing; eſpecially if grais ſeeds are ſown along with it†.

Of weeding flax.

IT ought to be weeded when the crop is about four inches long, if longer deferred, the weeders will ſo much break and crook the ſtalks, that they will never perhaps recover their ſtraitneſs again; and when the flax grows crooked, it is more liable to be hurt in the rippling and ſwingling‡.

Quickens ſhould not be pulled in weeding: for, being ſtrongly rooted, the pulling would lay open, and endanger the roots of the lint.

If there is an appearance of a ſettled drought, it is better to defer the weeding, than by that operation to expoſe the tender roots of the flax to the drought.

As ſoon as the weeds are pulled, they ought to be carried of the field, and not laid in the furrows; where they often take root again, and at any rate obſtruct the growth of the flax in theſe parts.

As young and unkilful perſons frequently pull up and ſpoil the flax, they ought to be mixed with thoſe of more experience.—And all ought to take care not to deſtroy the flax with their ſhoes, or by reſting too much on their elbows, when employed in this buſineſs.

Of pulling flax

IF it is intended to ſave both the flax and the ſeed, the pulling ſhould not begin till the ſtock becomes yellow, almoſt all the leaves fallen, and the bolls turned to ſharp that they will ſtick to the finger when preſſed upon their points; alſo one of the lower bolls, cut across the grain with a penknife, appears full of ſeed, well formed, and firm. But if the ſtalk is ſmall, with few bolls upon it, which is a ſign that the flax is fine, it ought to be pulled when the ſtalk firſt begins to grow yellow, when only the undermoſt leave ſtall, before the bloom is quite over, before the bolls turn ſharp pointed, and when one of the bolls, cut across the ſeed, appears ſoft and watry. It is a rule

‡ The Connecticut ſeed is better than the Penſylvania

It is alſo worthy of note that Connecticut lies conſiderably north and eaſt of Penſylvania. That in connecticut they bring their ſeed from the north ward; and the oftner there of only 24 miles is conſidered as highly beneficial. Quere, will not ſeed brought from Kingſton, &c. ſtill ariſh better here. Experiment may prove the negative.

|| Seed ſhould be repeatedly paſſed through the ſcreen, that there may not be left among it a ſingle wire ſeed, or any light defective ſtarſeed.

* Four Scots acres are equal to five Engliſh.

† If ſown on graſs ground, ploughed, as the author directs, the harrow cannot be uſed, even lengthways, becauſe it will tear up the ſods. A heavy bruſh is beſt.

‡ If the ſeed is pure, and ſowed on graſs ground, all this trouble and expenſe will be ſaved.

with perſons of ſkill to follow this laſt method, when they think that about eight hanks or more may be ſpun from the Engliſh pound.

When flax has fallen, ſuch as lies ought to be immediately pulled, other wiſe it will rot; and that being pulled, the reſt of the crop will receive the more air, and leſs apt to fall.

When parts of the ſame field grow unequally, ſo that ſome parts are ready for pulling before others, what is fit ſhould be pulled, and the reſt ſuffered to ſtand till ready.

The flax raiſer ought to be at great pains to pull, and keep by itſelf, each different kind of lint; what is long and fine, by itſelf; what is both ſhort and coarſe by itſelf; what is both ihort and fine, by itſelf; what is both ſhort and coarſe, by itſelf; and, in like manner, every other kind by itſelf: for if the different kinds are not thus kept ſeparate, the flax will be much damaged in the watering, and the other ſucceeding operations.

While pulling and ſorting the flax, the weeds ought to be picked out; otherwiſe they will hurt the flax in the operations of watering and dreſſing; and what is commonly called under growth may be thrown away as uſeleſs.

Few perſons that have ſeen flax pulled, are ignorant of the method of laying it in handfulls across each other, upon bands compoſed of ſome of the ſtalks. Laying the handfuls in this way, admits ſufficient air, and keeps them ſeparate and ready for the rippler.

Management of the crop after pulling and before rippling.

IF the flax is not of the fineſt kind, the crops handfuls, after laying twenty-four-hours as above deſcribed, ſhould be turned upon the band; and then after laying other twenty-four-hours, ſhould be bound up and in theaves, and ſtacked like corn, but not covered with head theaves. If the weather is dry, in about a fortnight's time the ſeed will be ſufficiently won for rippling, and may then be removed to the barn. But if the flax is fine, in about twelve hours after it is pulled, it ſhould be put into ſtacks; and if the weather continues dry, in two or three days more, it may be rippled.

Keeping the flax unwatered till next ſpring, is attended with many bad conſequences. For when too much dried, by long keeping, it is not ſo eaſily nor ſo ſafely watered; the quality of the flax becomes thereby harſher and coarſer; it is ſubject to danger from vermin, and other accidents, during the winter; the water in ſpring, or beginning of ſummer, is not ſo ſoft and warm as in harveſt; and near a year, by that practice, is loſt, of the uſe of the lint*.

Of rippling flax.

THE ſeed ought by all means to be ſeparated from the flax before watering; for if put into the water along with the flax, it is apt to breed vermin, and diſcolour it: beſides, even the weakeſt ſeeds and the huſks make an excellent feed for horſes and cattle; in particular, they are found to give a fine coat or ſkin to horſes.

When the ſeed is to be won for ſowing, it ſhould be rippled within doors; for rain and damp will diſcolour, and render it unfit for ſowing.

The handfuls for rippling ſhould not be great, as that endangers the lint in going through the comb.

After rippling, the flax-raiſer will perceive, that he is able to aſſort each ſize and quality of the flax more exactly than he could do before.

Of winnowing the ſeed.

THE bolls, after rippling, ſhould be ſifted through a wide riddle, to free them from

* If you wiſh to have very fine flax, pull when the ſtalks begin to turn yellow; and before you put into your pond to rot, chop off all the roots and branches.

the wreck of the flax; and if this riddling be done before the wind, to ſeparate the bolls and ſeed from duſt, ſo much the better. Then the bolls ſhould be carried to the ſhelling mill: but if there is no ſuch mill in the neighborhood, the ſeed muſt be threſhed out with flailes. After this operation, the whole ſhould paſs through tanners and different ſieves, to clean the ſeed as much as poſſible from broken huſks, duſt, weed-ſeed, &c. Being thus cleaned, it ſhould be carried to a free-aired loft, and ſpread thin, and often turned for ſome time to prevent it from heating: and as the ſeed dries, it may be laid up thicker together, and ſeldome turned, till at leaſt it is fit for the market or ſowing.

FLORENCE, Nov. 5.

The king of Naples is ſaid to have informed the pope that he will not ratify the treaty concluded between him and France, before the directory ſhall evince a diſpoſition to conclude likewiſe an equitable peace with his holineſs, by the king's mediation. It is reported, that the French republic has reſolved in conſequence to re-commence the negociation with the pope upon more moderate terms.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 22.

We are favored by a member of congreſs with the following important extract of a letter, dated Danville, (Kentucky) Jan. 30.

"Our peace with the Indians is likely to be of ſhort duration. The Indians and white people have already been killing one another. The diſpute firſt began by the Indians plundering three waggons loaded, paſſing from Knoxville to Cumberland.——Since that time, two men living in Powel's Vale, murdered two Indians who were hunting on the wilderneſs road and plundered their camp. This day we hear the Indians have killed col. Daniel Boone, his ſon, and ſon-in-law, when out viewing lands on Red river. This latter report wants confirmation, tho' it comes pretty direct."

TRRENTON, Feb. 21.

A letter from Philadelphia to a gentleman in this city, of laſt week ſays, "That our executive have received official information, that Mr. Pinckney, our ambaſſador to the French republic, has been cordially received by the executive directory of that nation.

Report further ſays, that the directory expreſſed diſſatisfaction at the conduct of Mr. Adet, their miniſter to the United States; and the order for capturing American veſſels bound to Britiſh ports had been revoked.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.

There is a report in circulation, that Mr. Ellicott, who was appointed on the part of the United States to run the lines agreeable to the Spaniſh treaty, has been killed by a party of the Creek Indians. Other particulars are not yet come to our knowledge, and we ſincerely hope the rumour may be groundleſs.

KNOXVILLE, January 30.

We are ſorry to inform the public, that diſturbances of a very ſerious nature prevail in the Upper-Cherokees, occaſioned by the murder of three Cherokee Indians, viz. the RED BIRD, WELL, a lame man, and another whoſe name we could not learn.—Theſe Indians were hunting on the lands aſſigned to them by the United States, and were fired by four white men. The Red Bird received them in a moſt cordial and friendly manner, offered them a ſhare of his proviſions, and a ſhelter in his camp till they could build one for themſelves, as the whites informed them they were come out for the purpoſe of hunting. In return of this kindneſs, theſe barbarians murdered them in cool blood. Upon the receipt of this news in the nation, the Indians burnt the houſes of their deceaſed brethren and ſwore to arms. Young Watts ſwore he would take inſtant ſatisfaction; but by the interpoſition and influence of capt. Richard Sparks, the commandant of the federal troops in the ſtate, who fortunately happened to be at Tellico when the news arrived, and by the aid of ſome preſents, the Cherokees were pacified, and they declared that they will wait patiently and ſee if the federal government will afford them any relief.

In our next we hope to give a more circumſtancial account of this tranſaction, together with the names of the perpetrators, which is likely once more to involve the frontiers in the horrors of an Indian war—We could not learn the exact time the murder was committed.

SALEM, Feb. 17.

By capt. Derby, in the brig Cadet, 67 days from the Cape of Good Hope, we are informed, that a few days previous to his touching at the Cape, two Britiſh packets had arrived there, one from Calcutta and the other from Bombay. That notwithſtanding a profound ſecrecy was obſerved reſpecting the intelligence they brought, it had tranſpired that Tippoo was making formidable preparations for war, that the Mahrattas were diſaffected, and about to join him.

It was conſequently reported, that 4 or 500 French officers had been ſent over by way of the Mediterranean, to ſerve in Tippoo's army. It was not certain that hoſtilities had actually commenced, but the Britiſh every day expected an attack.—Immediately after the arrival of the packets, four Britiſh regiments were ſent on in the outward bound India fleet, conſiſting of 17 ſail under convoy of one ſhip of war and a frigate.

Gen. Dundas has arrived at the Cape, to ſupercede general Craig in the command of the garriſon at that place. Lord Macartney was expected daily. General Craig had received an appointment in India, and was to go on there immediately after lord Macartney's arrival

The Engliſh are only in poſſeſſion of Cape Town, and Falſe and Saldanha Bay.—The interior of the Cape is not ſubdued, and the country inhabitants refuſe to give up, and are in reſpectable force.

An Engliſh fleet, conſiſting of 8 ſhips, ſailed from the Cape in the month of Auguſt, deſtined for the iſle of France, with an intention of inveſting it—and declaring it in a ſtate of blockade.

GENEVA, March 24.

A bill has paſſed the legiſlature of New-Jerſey, by the caſting vote of the ſpeaker, that all Blacks born after the 4th July next, ſhall be free at the age of 28 years.

By the laſt mail we received a confirmaton of an account of the death of the empreſs of Ruſſia. She aroſe very early in the morning of the 17th of November laſt, all appearance in perfect health; ſhe juſt entered her cabinet, when ſhe was ſurprized with an apoplectic attack, and expired towards evening, in the 67th year her age.

WEST-NIAGARA, April 5.

Thomas Muir, who was mentioned in our laſt, was formerly an advocate at the bar in Scotland, and tranſported to Botany Bay by ſentence of the court of that country. For his ſeditious writings. In February '96 he effected his eſcape from the Bay, to Nootka Sound, from whence he travelled over land through Mexico, and croſſed to the eaſtern ſhore of the gulph, and thence to the Savannah, where he was taken up by the government there and confined as a Britiſh ſubject.

By the account rendered by the treaſurer of the ſtate of New-York, he had paid out in 1796 for the encouragement of ſchools 19,500l. for the colleges, 4,750l. to the agricultural ſociety 400l. to the weſtern inland lock navigation a loan 15,000l. Onondaga road commiſſioners 1,600l. The money expended laſt year to improve the weſtern navigation and roads is 16,600l. Theſe expenditures are highly favorable alſo to this country.

The REAL BACHELOR,

By request.

CURST is the man who spurn'd the place
Where ladies love to meet,
Who fain would walk their pleasing ways,
Yet banish'd from their seat.

Thus in the gloom of single life
Is plac'd a wretched sprightly!
To sigh all day for lack of wife,
And d—n his fate at night.

He like a brute of fordid kind,
Loft to the social tie—
The sport of ridicule and wind,
Lives like a hog in fty.

Or, like a pumpkin, plump and rare,
Pluck'd from maternal vine,
Kick'd by the beaux, hiss'd by the fair—
Is this the state "so fine?"

Nor so the man who has a wife;
What blisful scenes he forms!
Bliss! in each scene which checkers life,
And free from envy's storms.

Can Bachelors presume to stand
Among the married race?
No! they must march with wringing hands,
To a lefs social place!

The ladies know the paths they tread
And laugh they're plea'd so well—
To see them sneak along to bed,
As sinners sneak to h—ll reluctantly.

A NEW CATECHISM.

What is the chief end of man?—

To gather up riches, to cheat all he can;
To flatter the rich, the poor to defpife,
To pamper the fool, to humble the wife.
The rich to affift, to do all in his power
To kick the unfortunate ftill a peg lower;
To cry up for fredom, to defend her with vigor,
Have flaves without number, and ufe them with rigor
To deal fair with all men when riches attend them;
To grind down the poor when there's none to defend them;
To feduce the fair virgin to accept hise mbrace;
To caft on her then all the fhame and difgrace;
To be angel without, and devil witbin,
To pretend to all virtue, and practife all fin—
This is moft men's chief end or their actions bcne them
And if you don't believe it, you may e'en go and try them.

TO be fold, with an indifputable title, 400 acres of land, including a valuable pinery, well fituated on Lyon's creek, in the town of Crowland, 12 miles from the mouth of the Chipawa. Between 60 and 70 acres whereof are under good cultivation, for this country, with a log houfe and barn thereon. The foil is excellent, and the whole needs no other recommendation than may be had by infpection. The terms will be eafy, and known particularly, by applying to Noah Millard in Stamford, one mile from the falls.

KEENE, (N. H.) February 21.

We learn from Templeton, (Mal.) that a Miss Eunice Weston of that place, had been confined by ſickneſs for ten years, four of which ſhe had been quite helpleſs; her ankles had grown crooked, and her left hand was confined to her breaſt. On Sunday morning laſt, ſhe was, without any human aſſiſtance, reſtored to health. She aroſe and walked about the room, and called on all to bleſs God for his goodneſs. She ſtretched forth her withered hand, and it was made whole as the other.

BASSATERRE, Dec. 6.

On the 24th ult. a diſpatch boat arrived from Anguilla, with an account of an attack having been made on that place by a French frigate and a brig, on board of which were a number of troops. At the time of the arrival of the boat, none of his majeſty's ſhips were at this iſland; on the 25th his majeſty's frigate the Lapwing, capt. Barton, arrived and ſailed the ſame evening for Anguilla, taking on board the maſter of the boat as a pilot.—The wind being far to the northward, ſhe did not reach Anguilla till late at night on the 29th—Signals having been made at St. Martins of the Lapwing's approach, the troops were all embarked after having burnt the town, murdered numbers of its inhabitants, and loaded their veſſels with the plunder. At one in the morning of the 27th, the Lapwing run within piſtol ſhot of the frigate and brig, which were endeavoring to make their eſcape at the mouth of the harbor, when an action commenced which continued one hour and 52 minutes. Favored by the darkneſs of the night the French frigate made her eſcape through a narrow channel between a ſmall iſland and Anguilla—the Lapwing having had her pilot killed on the firſt broadſide would not venture through.

At day break both veſſels were ſeen at anchor near St. Martin's, on the Lapwing's approach, the brig in attempting to warp off the frigate, which had her rigging much cut, was fired on ſo heavily by the Lapwing that ſhe was deſtroyed, and moſt of the ſoldiers drowned; the frigate after one broadſide from the Lapwing, ſtruck her colours, and proved to be the Decius of 26 guns.—The brig mounted three 24 pounders.—There were 128 ſoldiers and tailors killed and wounded on board the Decius, and 189 made priſoners. She was ſo much damaged in the action, having nine ſhot hole through the bottom, that after keeping poſſeſſion of her for two days, capt. Barton finding it impoſſible to get her into port from her leaky condition; and 2 French frigates of 44 guns each, being in chace of him about 8 miles to leeward, after taking out all the priſoners, the Decius was blown up, and all the plunder conſigned to the deep. The Lapwing arrived in this road the night after, having no other man killed in the action but the pilot.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 12.

(From the Extraordinary Vienna Court Gazette.)

The reports of field marſhal baron Alvinzi ſtate the following particulars reſpecting the battle of the 6th, near Baſſanno, and Fontenivo, the conſequences are highly important.

The poſition of the army was as follows: twelve battalions were poſted near Fontenivo, and had their advanced poſts on the oppoſite banks of the Brenta; one battalion was encamped near Cordigliano, to cover the communication of the other, and 11 battalions were near Baſſanno.

On the 5th at break of day, accounts reached the field marſhal from all ſides, that Buonaparte had drawn in all his detachments from Legnano, Ferrara, Verona and Montebello, and even a part of his battering train; and had taken a poſition near Vicenza, with three diviſions. Theſe accounts having been found true on reconnoitring the enemy's poſition the neceſſary diſpoſitions were made to meet them, in caſe they ſhould attempt an attack.

On the 6th in the morning, the enemy attacked the van-guard of field marſhal Alvinzi, the whole army was immediately ordered to advance, and two battalions were detached to Menona, and one to Moroſidica, to threaten the enemy's flank and rear, and thus to force them to deſiſt from their attacks on field marſhal Provera. But their troops had ſcarce reached Lenova, when the enemy, far ſuperior in force, attacked with their uſual impetuoſity. Lenova was, with a conſiderable loſs on both ſides, ſeveral times taken and abandoned.

But as our troops had conſiderably ſuffered in this ſevere and conſtantly renewed attack, they were ordered to fall back in their former poſition, which extended from the mountains, of the Sette Communi, by Mottindice, beyound Lenova, as far as the Punty; and even on this poſition the enemy made ſeveral times the moſt furious attacks; but about the fall of night the conflict took a favorable turn, and the enemy were repulſed on all points.

Field marſhal Provera was exactly in the ſame ſituation; and he ſtates, that his loſs on that day amounts to ſome thouſands in killed and wounded, but that very few were taken priſoners, which ſhews that the troops were not thrown into confuſion. The field marſhal eſtimates the enemy's loſs at 4000 men.

The night put a period to the action during which, at 5 o'clock in the afternoon—the field marſhal received the agreeable intelligence, that field marſhal lieut. Davidovich had rendered himſelf maſter of Trent.

The ſituation of our troops having been much improved by this event, the field marſhal reſolved to attack the enemy on the 7th, in order vigorouſly to purſue the object of his expedition, if the enemy, on the account of the levere loſs they ſuſtained on the 6th, ſhould not retreat.

The night after the battle was employed to bring the troops to the different points aſſigned them, and to make the neceſſary diſpoſitions for the following day. At break of day the whole army was under arms, and ready for action. But on the return of the patroles, the field marſhal learnt that the enemy had fallen back. They would have been immediately purſued, but that field marſhall lieut. Provera was obliged to re-eſtabliſh the bridge of pontoons—broke down the enemy, which was accompliſhed about noon.

At one o'clock in the afternoon the army began to move forward both from Baſſano and Fotenino, and at 9 o'clock at night reached the camp near Scalderero; 3 battalions having been left on the right flank near Moroldica, and the different columns ordered to form a junction between St. Pietro di Gumo Golo. But no enemy to be ſeen, except that the van guard of Provera's column overtook the rear of the French, which brought on a trifling ſkirmiſh between our troops and the enemy.

On the 8th, early in the morning the field marſhal reviewed the diviſions of field marſhal lieutenants Provera and Quoſidanovich, and as it appeared to him indiſpenſibly neceſſary cloſely to purſue the enemy ſtedy thrown into confuſion, without allowing them time to rally and gather ſtrength, the army put itſelf in motion at ten o'clock in the morning, and purſued the enemy in three columns, as far as Vicenza. On our approach they drew in their advanced poſts, abandoned Vicenza, and retreated to Montedello.

The field marſhal ordered his van guard under general count Hohenzollern, to take poſt at Altavilla, and the main body of his army to occupy a poſition on the road to Verona, and was determined, in caſe the enemy ſhould not evacuate Montebello in the courſe of the night, to diſlodge them from thence the next morning.

The French general Anuile, who commanded the enemy's horſe and van guard, was ſeverely wounded, taken priſoner, and conducted to Vincenza.

WEST-NIAGARA, April 19.

By the receipt of Philadelphia papers to March 21, we are enabled to give the following important extracts: The want of time prevents a further detail until our next. They contain London accounts to Feb. 3.

TO LORD MALMESBURY.

Paris, 28th Frimaire (Dec. 28th) 5th year.

SIR,

THE executive directory has heard the reading of the official note ſigned by you, and of two confidential memorials without ſignatures, which were annexed to it; and which you gave into me yeſterday, I am charged by the directory to declare to you that it cannot liſten to any confidential note without a ſignature, and to require of you to give in to me, officially, within 24 hours, your ultimatum, ſigned by you,

Accept, Sir, the aſſurance of my high conſideration,

CH: DELACROIX.

Paris, Dec. 29, 1796.

Lord Malmeſbury, in anſwer to the letter which the miniſter for foreign affairs had the goodneſs to tranſmit to him through the hands of the ſecretary general of his department muſt remark, that in ſigning the official note, which he gave in to that miniſter, by order of his court, he thought he had complied with all the formalities, and had given the neceſſary authenticity to the two confidential memorials which accompanied it. Deſirous, to remove all difficulties, as far as lies in his power, he willingly adopts the forms which are pointed out by the reſolution of the executive directory, and haſtens to ſend to the miniſter for foreign affairs, the two memorials ſigned by his hand.

With reſpect to the poſitive demand of an ultimatum, lord Malmeſbury obſerves, that inſiſting on that point in ſo preremptory a manner, before the two powers ſhall have communicated to each other their reſpective pretenſions, and that the articles of the future treaty ſhall have been ſubmitted to the diſcuſſions which the different intereſts which are to be adjuſted neceſſarily demand, is to ſhut the door againſt all negociation. He therefore can add nothing to the aſſurances which he has already given to the miniſter for foreign affairs, as well by word of mouth, as in his official note, and he repeats that he is ready to enter with that miniſter, into every explanation of which the ſtate and progreſs of the negociation may admit, and that he will not fail to enter into the diſcuſſion of the propoſals of his court, or of any counter project which may be delivered to him, on the part of the executive directory, with that candour and that ſpirit of conciliation which correſpond with the juſt and pacific ſentiments of his court.

Lord Malmeſbury requeſts the miniſter for foreign affairs, to accept the aſſurances of his high conſideration.

The underſigned miniſter for foreign affairs is charged by the executive directory, to anſwer to lord Malmeſbury's two notes of the 27th and 29th Frimaire (17th and 19th Dec. O. S.) that the executive directory will liſten to the propoſals contrary to the conſtitution, to the laws, and to the treaties which bind the republic.

And as lord Malmeſbury announces at every communication that he is in want of the advice of his court from which it reſults, that he acts a part merely paſſive in the negociation, which renders his preſence at Paris uſeleſs, the underſigned is further charged to give him notice to quit Paris in eight and forty hours, with all the perſons who have accompanied and followed him, and quit as expeditiouſly as poſſible the territory of the republic. The underſigned declares moreover, in the name of the executive directory, that if the Britiſh cabinet is deſirous of peace, the executive directory is ready to follow the negociations, according to the baſis laid down in the preſent note, by the reciprocal channel of couriers.

Paris, 29 Dec. CH: DELACROIX

Lord Malmeſbury haſtens to acknowledge the receipt of the note of the miniſter for foreign affairs, dated yeſterday. He is preparing to leave Paris tomorrow, and demands, in conſequence, the neceſſary paſſports for himſelf and his ſuite.

He requeſts the miniſter for foreign affairs, to accept the aſſurances of his high conſideration.

Paris, Dec. 30, '96.

London, Dec. 30.

Yeſterday afternoon, at four o'clock, lord Malmeſbury, accompanied by Mr. Ellis, arrived at the ſecretary of ſtate's office in Downing Street and immediately had an audience of lord Grenville who was waiting to receive them. In the evening they had a conference with Mr. Pitt. His lordſhip landed only yeſterday morning about eight o'clock, at Dover; having been detained at Calais ſince Saturday afternoon, by tempeſtuous weather. On his way from Paris, the people every where teſtified the utmoſt regret at his lordſhip's departure, impreciting thoſe baſe ambition and wealth has ſo abruptly broken off the negociation for peace.

Beſide the above we muſt briefly ſtate that in December, a French fleet of 17 ſhips, having on board Gen. Le Hoche with twenty-five thouſand land forces, attempted a deſcent upon Ireland. They anchored in Bantry Bay, whither they had been driven in a ſevere ſtorm, in which they loſt a ſhip of the line, and which continued until the 27th, when a thirty gun frigate ſtove, and the few that ſurvived were made priſoners: the ſtorm continuing, they put to ſea. Their intention was to land in the north of Ireland, and leave the army to its fate; but the ſtorm coming on they put into the Bay. Several of their tranſports were captured, and admiral Gardner was ſtationed off Breſt, to prevent their return into that port. The official account thereof, as alſo his majeſty's manifeſto relative to the proceedings of the directory, we neceſſarily poſtpone.]

Liverpoole, Jan. 2.

From the Morning Poſt and Dublin Courant, Dec. 31ſt.

Friday night, 12 o'clock.

This evening an expreſs arrived at the caſtle from general Dalrymple, dated in the afternoon of the 28th, which ſtates that, about 4 o'clock P. M. on the 27th, the 17 ſail of French ſhips which had anchored off Bantry Bay weighed and went to ſea. The wind was then S. S. E.—It blew a violent ſtorm on the following night, and they have not ſince been deſcried.

Extract of a letter from Cork, Dec. 27. '96.

"It is a melancholy fact that the French fleet, commanded by Richery, with an army on board, under Hoche, is off the coaſt.—Eight ſhip of battle ſhips and ſome other ſmall veſſels, are actually at anchor in Beerhaven. By the laſt accounts they were riding bows under water, and a 32 gun frigate was yeſterday wrecked, and all on board periſhed except ſeveling a French lieutenant and ſeveral men, who are on their way here, and expected in town immediately.

"It has blown a hurricane from the South Weſt, which has proved mutually diſaſtrous to the remainder of the fleet, and we are in great hopes Lord Bridport may come to our aſſiſtance.—The whole body of the people have diſplayed a ſpirit of loyalty unprecedented, but the regular force here to oppoſe the enemy is but ſmall."

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Dublin, Dec. 28, '96.

"We have reaſon to think that the French fleet were either never on our coaſt, or that they have been driven from or quit it, from the ſpirit ſhewn on this occaſion; the loyalty of the country ſtands higher than I expected, and even the lower claſs of people in general did not ſeem to covet ſuch neighbours."

New-York, March 22.

The letters from which the following extracts are taken, were received yeſterday by the Briſtol from Bourdeaux, are from unqeſtionable authority.

Extract of a letter, dated Paris, January 7.

"Without aſſigning any reaſon, but that they have certain grievances to complain of, the directory have refuſed to receive gen. Pinckney, and have done every thing but give him an official order to quit the territories of the republic. This however, he wiſhs to receive in ſome more unequivocal manner, than they have as yet been pleaſed to ſignify it. The miniſter for foreign affairs, Mr. la Croix, refuſes to have any communication, in writing with him, under pretence that it would be an act of acknowledgment of gen. P. as miniſter, and has not anſwered, but verbally, a letter which the latter wrote him ſome time ſince, deſiring to know what was the will of the directory as to his ſtaying, as he had not received the ſecond of reſidence which had been promiſed him, without which he was liable to be arreſted by every "corps de garde."—The miniſter however ſent a verbal meſſage to him, by his ſecretary, that he might conſider himſelf in the light of any common foreigner to whom a card had been refuſed, and muſt agreeably to the laws of the contry quit it without delay. This gen. Pinckney refuſed to do, as they had already poſſeſſed themſelves of the knowledge that he was no common ſtranger, nor arrived in their territories on a private capacity, but as a public character, and as ſuch not ſubject to the local regulations of France, but protected and guarded by the laws of nations, which he claimed in his favor as long as he remained—if, however, it was their will that he ſhould depart, that he would obey them without reluctance, but requeſted ſomething more officially than verbal communication. Several interviews have been had with Mr. De la Croix in the laſt one ſome few days ago, a long converſation took place—he expreſſed great ſurprize at gen. Pinckney's being ſtill here, and it became neceſſary to tell him that here he muſt remain; unleſs he would give him ſome order, under his hand to juſtify himſelf in his own government for quitting a ſpot to which it held ſent him. This he refuſed with ſome warmth. It was given more than as a hint, that the miniſter of the peace ſhould do his duty. However, he ſtill unmoleſted, though not without apprehenſions. It hope that every American will feel how neceſſary it is to convince not only this government, but every foreign power, how great is their miſtake if they calculate upon any influence which they may poſſeſs in our country, to the prejudice of either our intereſt or our honor."

Extract of a letter from Paris, Dec. 26.

"You will no doubt before this hear of Mr. Pinkney's reception being ſuſpended. He waits here until he gets further inſtructions from our government—The recall of Mr. Adet went from here laſt Auguſt. This it is expected will produce an explanation of ſome things that government complain of, and that matters will yet be reconciled. Lord Malmeſbury will certainly leave this without making any negociations, and the war will be continued another year. Every thing is quiet here, and plenty of proviſions, and no appearance of want except in the government. The preſident's ſpeech has been ſome little time ſince received and publiſhed here, and conſidered as it ought to be by every friend of America, a ſincere declaration of his ſentiments heretofore, and a certain evidence of his ability and uprightneſs of his conduct."

MR. PINKNEY'S NEGOCIATION.

On this important ſubject diſpatches from Mr. Pinkney to our executive were received & were expedited to Philadelphia yeſterday afternoon by expreſs; from whence the public will doubtleſs ſoon be releived from their tedious ſuſpence. The neareſt we can come to the truth, from verbal accounts torn from amidſt a cloud of prejudice, is,—That Mr. Delacroix informed Mr. Pinkney that he would not now be received, but that he could tarry, under the principles on which other foreigners tarried, until further information was received from America on the ſubject of their complaints of the American executive. That Mr. Pinkney replied, that he would not carry upon theſe principles, but that he would throw himſelf upon the uſages of nations in theſe caſes—and then if he was ordered to leave the country he would do it.

We underſtand, that he is to tarry till he receives returns to his diſpatches.

Philadelphia, March 24.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in London, who has a ſon in Ruſſia, to his friend in this city, dated Jan. 11.

"You will be pleaſed to hear that the Polith king, Kocziusko has been ſet at liberty by the new emperor of Ruſſia, who has given him a large eſtate, and an annual penſion of 12,000 rubles. He purpoſes to retire to America as ſoon as his health is reſtored; but at preſent his ſtrength is ſo reduced that he cannot enter into his carriage, without the aſſiſtance of his ſervants.

"The emperor has liberated all the Poles, to the number of nearly 14,000, who were from time to time, after the two diviſions of Poland, and has obliged to many of them their eſtates and offices. He has confiſcated his body to be laid in ſtate, and has appointed count Orlaff, who is generally ſuſpected to have been his murderer, to watch over his corpſe, and to conduct the ceremonial of officers to it. The preſſures and fear by which ſome of the moſt barbarous parts of their ſervitude, throughout the whole Ruſſian empire; and the Jews are prohibited from ſeparating huſbands, wives and children, in any future diſpoſition of their wills."

Boſton, March 17.

We learn from Salem, that by the arrival there of a barque from St. Euſtatia information has been received that the new ſhip Eliza, capt. Hodges, owned by Mr. Joſeph White, of and from Salem, bound to Canton, in China, with fair and perfect papers, and laden with a ſmall quantity of timber, and above 40,000 dollars in caſh, has been captured by a French corvette in the lat. of the Cape de Verd iſlands, and ſent for St. Domingo for trial. This is the moſt alarming capture we have heard of.

Charleſton, (S. C.) Feb. 24.

The views of peace had vaniſhed, as lord Malmeſbury had quitted Paris, and Mr. Pinckney, the American ambaſſador, had been refuſed an audience, a decree having paſſed the French government, that all intercourſe with the United States ſhould ſubſiſt, until ſatisfation is obtained for the repeated inſults which have been ſhewn by them to France, the chief of which is alledged to be the treaty with Great Britain.

Spaniſh veſſels lately taken by the Engliſh:—a ſhip valued two hundred thouſand dollars in ſpecie, and ſent into Bermuda; another ſhip having on board ſeventy thouſand dollars, ſent into the ſame port, and a 20 gun frigate, one hundred thouſand dollars on board, ſent into Grenada.

COUNCIL-OFFICE, 11 April, 1797.

NOTICE is hereby given to all perſons claiming lots of land in the township of Townſend, under the recommendation of PAUL AVERILL, as agent to Mr. Andrew Pierce, that they muſt appear before the council, on the Tueſdays and Fridays of every week between this date and the firſt day of June next, to make it appear that they come within the deſcription of ſettlers, whom the ſaid Averill was authoriſed to recommend before they can be confirmed in their lots. They are likewiſe required to bring proofs of their having improved, or commenced an improvement on the lots they were permitted to occupy.

N. B. Thoſe perſons who have already covered their lots by warrants, are not meant to be included in this order, and need not attend.

OFFICIAL PAPERS

Refpecting the negociation for peace, as prefented to both houfes of the Britifh parliament.

The underfigned is charged to tranfmit the minifter for foreign affairs the enclofed memorial, containing the propofals of his court, with refpect to the application of the general principle already eftablifhed as the bafis of the negociation for peace.

He will with the utmoft readinefs, enter with that minifter into every explanation which the ftate and progrefs of the negociation will allow, and he will not fail to determine the difcuffion of thefe propofitions, or of any counter project which may be tranfmitted to him on the part of the executive directory, with that frankneis and that fpirit of conciliation, which correfpond with the juft and pacific intention of his court.

MALMESBURY.

Paris, Dec. 19, '96.

Confidential memorial, on the principle objects of reparation, compenfation, and reciprocal arrangement.

The principle already eftablifhed as the bafis of the negociation, by the confent of the two governments, is founded on reftitutions to be made by his Britannic majefty to France, in compenfation of the arrangements to which that power may confent, in order to fatisfy the juft pretenfions of the allies of the king, and to preferve the political balance of Europe.

In order to accomplifh thefe objects, in the manner moft complete, and to offer a ftrik proof of the fincerity of his wifhes for the re eftablifhment of general tranquillity, the majefty would propofe there fhould be given to this principle, on each fide, all the latitude of which it may be fufceptible.

His majefty demands therefore,

1. The reftitution of his majefty the emperor and king, of all his dominions, on the footing of the ftatus ante bellum.

2. The re eftablifhment of peace between the German empire and France, by a fuitable arrangement, conformable to their refpective intereits, and to the general fafety of Europe. This arrangement to be negociated with his imperial majefty as conftitutional head of the empire, either by the intervention of the king, or immediately, as his imperial majefty fhall prefer.

3. The evacuation of Italy by the French troops, with an engagement not to interfere in the internal affairs of the country; which fhould be re eftablifhed, as far as poffible, upon the footing of the ftatus ante bellum.

In the courfe of the negociation, a more detailed difcuffion may be entered into of the further meafures which may be proper to adopt, refpecting the objects of thefe three articles, in order to the providing more effectually for the future fecurity of the refpective limits and poffeffions, and for the maintenance of general tranquillity.

4. With regard to the other allies of his Britannic majefty, his majefty demands, that there be referred to her majefty the empreffor all the Ruffias, a full and unlimited power of taking part in this negociation, whenever fhe may think fit, or of acceding to the definitive treaty, and thereby returning to a ftate of peace with France.

5. His majefty alfo demands, that her moft faithful majefty may be comprehended in this negociation, and may return to a ftate of peace with France, without any ceffion or burdenfome condition on either fide.

6. On thefe conditions his majefty offers to France the entire and unreferved reftitution of all the conquefts which he has made on that power in the Eaft and Weft-Indies; propofing at the fame time that a mutual underftanding fhould be eftablifhed as the means of fecuring for the future the tranquillity of the two nations, and of conciliating as much as poffible, the advantage of their refpective poffeffions. His majefty offers, in like manner, the reftitution of the iflands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, and of the fifhery of Newfoundland, on the footing of the ftatus ante bellum.

But, if in addition to this, his majefty were to wave the right given to him by the expreis ftipulations of the treaty of Utrecht of oppoling the ceffion of the Spanifh part of St. Domingo to France, his majefty would then demand, in return for this conceffion, a compenfation which might fecure at leaft in fome degree, the maintenance of the balance of the refpective poffeffions in that part of the world.

7. In all cafes of ceffions or reftitutions which may come in queftion in the courfe of this negociation, there fhould be granted on each fide, to all individuals, the moft unlimited right to withdraw with their families and their property, and to fell their moveable poffeffions; and adequate arrangements fhould alfo be made, in the courfe of this negociation, for the removal of all inequalities, and for the fatisfaction of their juft claims, which individuals on either fide may have to make upon the refpective governments.

Confidential memorial on the peace with Spain and Holland.

The allies of France not having hitherto expreffed any defire or difpofition to treat with the king, his majefty might have forborne to enter into any detail on their account in order to avoid any details prejudicial to the great object which the king has in view, and to accelerate the work of a general peace, his majefty will not refufe to explain himfelf to the firft inftance on the points which concern thofe powers.

If, then, the catholic king fhould defire to be comprehended in this negociation, or to be allowed to accede to the definitive treaty, this would meet with no obftacle on the part of his majefty. Nothing having hitherto been conquered by either of the two fovereigns from the other, no other point could, at the prefent moment, come into queftion, but that of the re eftablifhment of peace, fimply, and without any reftitution of compenfation whatever, except fuch as might poffibly refult from the application of the principle declared at the end of the fourth article of the memorial, ap-ready delivered to the minister for foreign affairs.

But if, during the negociation alterations should take place in the state of things in this respect, it will then be proper to agree upon the restitutions and compensations to be made on each side.

With regard to the republic of the United Provinces, his Britannic majesty and his allies find themselves too nearly interested in the political situation of these provinces to be able to consent in their favor to the re-establishment of the statu ante bellum, as with respect to territorial possessions, unless France could on her part reinstate them in all respects in the same political situation in which they stood before the war.

If at least it were possible to re-establish in those provinces, agreeably to what is believed to be the wish of a great majority of the inhabitants, their ancient constitution and form of government, his majesty might then be disposed to relax, in their favor, from a very considerable part of the conditions on which the present state of things obliges him to insist.

But if, on the contrary, it is with the republic of Holland, in its present state, that their Britannic and imperial majesties will have to treat, they will see, themselves obliged to seek in territorial acquisitions, those compensations, and that security, which such a state of things will have rendered indispensable to them.

Restitutions of any kind, in favor of Holland in that case be admitted in, so far only as they should be compensated by arrangements calculated to contribute to the security of the Austrian Netherlands. The means of accomplishing this object will be found in the cessions which France has exacted in her treaty of peace with H land, and the possession of which by that power, would in any case be incompatible with the security of the Austrian Netherlands in the hands of his imperial majesty.

It is on these principles that his Britannic majesty would be ready to treat for the re-establishment of peace with the republic of H land in its present state. The details of such a discussion must necessarily lead to the consideration of what would be due to the interests and the rights of the house of Orange.

(Here follow the papers given last week.)

PARIS, Jan. 16.

The dey of Algiers has declared war against the king of Prussia.

Clarke the Irishman, who is probably gone to Vienna to destroy our hopes of peace in that quarter, as Charles De la Croix has already done at Paris, was a chief adviser of the Brest expedition. When shall we put an end to the extravagant rage with which we are affected, of permitting strangers to meddle in our concerns, and entrusting them with our most important missions?—The choice of a stranger on such occasion, should be considered as an indecent outrage committed by the government against the French nation.

Clarke had expressly promised that all Ireland would rise in our favor, and yet it was merely by the terror of our cannon, that we were enabled to make some fishermen in Bantry Bay come on board our ships.

Do we see the British ministry allow Frenchmen to take part in their designs, or so much as to them the management of their ennuities?

TRENT, Jan. 6.

Field-marshal Wurmser has defended Mantua with a perseverence and success that reflect the greatest honor on his military character. He is as much upon the alert as if he headed an army in the midst of an enemy's country, and has lost no opportunity of harrassing the republican troops that form the blockade of his garrison.

On the night of the 29th ult. he made a very vigorous sortie, in which he killed, wounded, and took prisoners about 3000 of the enemy. In this sortie the English general Graham escaped from Mantua, where he has been shut up for some months, and he arrived here the day before yesterday.

Of the numerous sorties which field-marshal Wurmser has made, the most decisively successful was one towards the end of November, in which, besides taking a vast quantity of provisions and ammunition, the Austrians carried in with them several pieces of cannon.

In the course of two or three days a general attack is to be made upon the French, with a view of completely relieving the garrison of Mantua. This attack is to be commanded by general Alvinzy; and the army, which he will lead to it, will consist of 50,000 troops, in the highest ardor and spirits, and confident of success. The French army which has received some reinforcements, does not exceed 35,000 men, so that great expectations are formed of the event of the Austrian attack. Upon that depends the fate of Mantua, for when general Graham left the garrison on the night of the 29th, their provisions were very low, though they were sufficient to enable them to wait the issue of the attack intended for their relief.

BERLIN, Dec. 20.

The king, being unwell, has kept his room for some time past. The lieutenant general count de Bruhl and capt. de Rotherbourg are gone to Petersburgh to compliment the new emperor. A striking act of justice has been done by the L.A mentioned prince, which is, that he not only granted liberty to the celebrated general Kosciusko, his secretary M. Niemoewiez, and count Potocki, but the first has received, as a compensation, an estate with 1500 peasants; M. Niemoewiez an estate with 2000 peasants; and count Petocki has been restored to all his property.

Extract of a letter from Verona, dated December 25.

"It is asserted that general Wurmser, in a sortie which he lately made from Mantua, has completely destroyed the French works; and that he has taken six boats loaded with recruits and stores which were going from Modena to the besieged army."

LONDON, November 8.

Major-general sir Ralph Abercrombie, K. B. from the 17th dragoon guards, is appointed col. of the 2d regiment of dragoons, vice the earl of Eglintoune, deceased;

Major-general Welbore Ellis Doyle, from the 14th foot, to be col. of the 53d regiment of foot, vice Lake, appointed to the command of the 73d foot.

Major-general Gerard Lake, from the 53d foot, to be col. of the 73d foot, vice Meadows, appointed to the command of the 7th dragoon guards.

Feb. 1. Dispatches from general Graham, who for a long time has been shut up with field-marshal Wormser, in Mantua, were yesterday received at the secretary of state's office. It would appear by a letter from Trent, dated 6th ult. that the Austrians made a sortie from Mantua on the 29th of Dec. In this sortie general Graham made his escape from the place, and arrived at Trent on the 4th of last month.

It appears by the same letter, that the fate of Mantua, which has been so long in suspence, will soon be decided. At the date of the letter the place was in great want of provisions; but on the other hand, general Alvinzi, who was to attempt its relief, had received a considerable reinforcement.

WHITEHALL, Jan. 17.

Extract of a letter from his excellency the lord lieutenant of Ireland, to his grace the duke of Portland, dated Dublin Castle, Jan. 10.

I have the satisfaction to acquaint your grace, that since the information transmitted to Mr. Grenville, that the French had entirely left Bantry-Bay, there had been no re appearance of them upon the coast; so that I trust, from the violence of the tempest and from their ships being ill found, and ill victualled, their expedition is for the present frustrated.

Upon reviewing what has passed during this expedition of the enemy, I have the satisfaction to observe, that the best spirit was manifested by his majesty's regular and militia forces; and I have every reason to believe, that, if a landing had taken place, they would have displayed the utmost fidelity. When the flank companies of the Antrim regiment were formed, the whole regiment turned out to a man, with expressions of the greatest eagerness to march; and the Downshire regiment to a man, declared they would stand and fall by their officers.

At the time the army was ordered to march the weather was extremely severe: I therefore ordered them a proportion of spirits upon their route, and directed an allowance 4d. a day to their wives till their return. On march, the utmost attention was paid them by the inhabitants of the towns and villages through which they passed; so that in many places the meat provided by the commissary was not consumed. The roads, which in parts had been rendered impassable by the snow, were cleared by the peasantry. The poor people often shared their potatoes with them, and dressed their meat without demanding payment: of which there was a very particular instance in the town of Banagher, where no gentleman or principal farmer resides to set them the example. At Carrow a considerable subscription was made for the troops as they passed; and at Limerick and Cork, every exertion was used to facilitate the carriage of artillery and baggage, by premiums to the carmen; and in the town of Galway, which for a short time was left with a very inadequate garrison, the zeal and ardour of the inhabitants, and yeomanry was peculiarly manifested, and in a manner to give me the utmost satisfaction. In short, the general good disposition of the people throughout the South and West was so prevalent, that, had the enemy landed, their hope of assistance from the inhabitants would have been totally disappointed.

From the armed yeomanry, government derived the most honorable assistance. Noblemen and gentlemen of the first property vied in exerting themselves at the head of their corps. Much of the express and escort duty was performed by them. In Cork, Limerick and Galway, they took the duty of the garrison. Lord Shannon informs me, that men of 3 and 4000, were employed in escorting baggage and carrying expresses. Mr. John Latouche, who was a private in his son's corps, rode 25 miles in one of the severest nights, with an express, it being his turn for duty. The merchants of Dublin, many of them of the first eminence, marched 16 Irish miles with a convoy of arms to the North, whither it was conducted by relays of yeomanry. The corps have been formed of the most respectable barristers, attornies, merchants, gentlemen, and citizens, and their number is so considerable, and their zeal in mounting guard so useful, that I was enabled greatly to reduce the garrison, with perfect safety to the town. The numbers of yeomanry fully appointed and disciplined in Dublin, exceed two thousand, above 400 of whom are horse. The whole number of corps approved by government, amount to 440, exclusive of the Dublin corps. The gross number is nearly 25000. There are also 91 offers of service under consideration, and 125 proposals have been declined; and, in reply to a circular letter written to the commandants of the respective corps, their answers almost universally contained a general offer of service in any part of the kingdom.

Many prominent examples of individual loyalty and zeal have appeared. An useful impression was made upon the minds of the lower classes by a judicious address of Dr. Moylan, the titular bishop of Cork. I cannot but take notice of the exertions of lord Kenmare who spared no expence in giving assistance to the commanding officer in his neighbourhood, and who took into his own demesne a great quantity of cattle which had been driven from the coast. Nor could any thing exceed the ardour of the earl of Corronde who, when his regiment of militia was returned as part of the garrison of Dublin, solicited with so much zeal a command in the flank companies, that I thought it a measure due to his majesty's service to encourage his lordship's request.

The following particulars of the expedition collected from the officers of the Ville de L'Orient, have been published in a Cork paper.

"On the 14th Dec. the fleet failed consisting of 18 sail of the line, 14 frigates, 6 large transports, and some small vessels, had 25,000 troops on board with 6 weeks provisions. The tug al having been made for sailing, some went through the passage de Raz, La Fraternite frigate with admiral de Galles and gen Hoche on board, and a few other ships got out, but the greater part of the fleet went through Des Feottes.

"A gale of wind coming on, the divisions could not join, and the admiral had only the Nestor of 74 guns with him; which having lost her mainmast, returned with the admiral. The captain of La Ville de L'Orient believed he was at the rendezvous, but as none of the other ships had joined her since, he think she must be lost or taken. She had on board 15 millions of livres in gold, to pay the troops.

"The fleet made Ireland in three days, but having mistaken the Durleys for Mizen Head, could not make Bantry Bay until the 24th, and then only part had anchored when the gale came on and forced them to cut cables in confusion.

L'Indomptable of 80 guns run foul of La Resolute, and dismasted her, so that she must be lost with admiral Neilly on board. L'Indomptable sprung her bowsprit. The division with which La Ville de L'Orient entered the bay, had not gained an anchorage with the first division, it consisted of four 74 ships, three frigates, two corvettes, and two powder vessels with 3500 troops.

A conseil of war was held; the troops were decidedly for landing, by the advice of some Irishmen with them, but none of them having seen La Fraternite, they resolved to return. On the 4th Jan. from Penfalan, and in search of the squadron when captured.

The fleet was well supplied in every particular, and the transports chosen as fast sailers; 60 more transports were ready to follow with troops when a landing should be made good.

The following is an account of the officers, men and cargo on board the Ville de L'Orient (a 74 gun down and armed en flute) captain, 1 lieut. 5 officers, 64 seamen, 1 lieut. de vaisseau, 1 col. 4 captain 380 half-pikes, 2 ten-inch mortars, 2 eight-pound field pieces, 19 000 flints, 8000 muskets, 10,000 cartridge boxes filled with ball cartridge, 380 barrels of flour, 26 pipes of brandy, 10 bales of cloathing, 600 saddles, 5 boxes shoes, artillery carriages &c.

The Paris paper (L'Eclair) of the 11 Nivose, says, on the 30 Frimaire, 34 ships are hoved in Bantry Bay, in the South of Ireland. The fleet originally consisted, of 42 sail, 17 of which were of the line, 13 flutes. The 36 sail remained in the Bay six days, the frigate on board of which the generals were did not arrive, the wind shifted and blew a hurricane; on the last day a great number of the vessels were driven out of the road, and the principal commanders were wanting, it was impossible to attempt any thing without gen. Hoche, who in all probability was alone provided with the secret orders of government, and as they could not wait for him any longer, resolved in a council agreed by the remnant, fleet of provisions, and wanting several officers, to be returned, and on the 2d Jan admiral Bouvotte anchored in Brest roads; these are amongst the most intelligible of the facts contained in the Paris papers. The Redacteur states, that 18,000 men had been landed in Ireland, as brothers, but other papers contradict this. The particulars of the expedition, however, appear to be, that the fleet was scattered the second day after it had left port, and two divisions were separated from the third; the vessels in which the commanders were had not been heard of; the other division returned to Brest; admiral Bouvotte, immediately on his arrival was to be seized and imprisoned, and is to be tried for not having landed 6000 men in his division, whose officers requested to be put on shore, though he had no boats for the purpose.

DUBLIN, Jan. 10.

A number of the most respectable and independent inhabitants of this city, of the different religious persuasions, last week offered their services to government as a military association; they were however refused by the lord lieutenant, who, it is said, signified to the gentlemen, that a sufficient number of corps was already formed, but recommended to them to enrol in the several divisional corps, whose numbers are yet very far from being complete.

The Dublin independents were also refused; the objection to their corps, it is said, turned on the desire of this corps to retain their original name and uniform, although in every other respect conforming to the yeomanry act.

BRITISH PARLIAMENT, Dec. 27.

Lord Grenville laid before the house of lords the following message from his Majesty:

DECLARATION.

The negotiation, which an anxious desire for the restoration of peace has induced his majesty to open at Paris, having been abruptly terminated by the French government, the king thinks it due to himself and to his people to state, in this public manner, the circumstances which have preceded and attended a transaction of so much importance to the general interests of Europe.

It is well known that early in the present year his majesty, laying aside the consideration of many circumstances of difficulty and discouragement, determined to take such steps as were best calculated to open the way for negotiation, if any corresponding disposition prevailed on the part of his enemies. He directed an overture to be made in his name by his minister in Switzerland, for the purpose of ascertaining the dispositions of the French government with respect to peace. The answer which he received in return was at once haughty and evasive. It affected no question the sincerity of those dispositions of which his majesty's conduct afforded so unequivocal a proof; it raised groundless objections to the mode of negotiation proposed by his majesty (that of a general congress, by which peace has been so often restored to Europe;) but it studiously passed in silence his majesty's desire to learn what other mode would be preferred by France. It at the same time asserted a principle, which was stated as an indispensible preliminary to all negotiation, a principle under which the terms of peace must have been regulated, not by the usual considerations of justice, policy, and reciprocal convenience; but by an implicit submission, on the part of all other powers, to a claim founded on the internal laws and separate constitution of France, as having full authority to supercede the treaties entered into by independent states, to govern their interests, to control their engagements, and to dispose of their dominions.

A pretension in itself so extravagant could in no instance have been admitted, or even listened to for a moment. Its application to the present case led to nothing less than the French should, as a preliminary to all discussion, retain nearly all her conquests, and those particularly in which his majesty was most concerned, both from the ties of interest, and the sacred obligations of treaties: that she should, in like manner, recover back all that had been conquered from her in every part of the world; and that she should be left at liberty to bring forward such further demands, on all other points of negotiation, as such unqualified submission on the part of those with whom she treated could not fail to produce.

On such grounds as these, it was sufficiently evident that no negotiation could be established: neither did the answer of his majesty's enemies afford any opening for continuing the discussion, since the mode of negociation offered by his majesty had been peremptorally rejected by them, and no other had been stated in which they were willing to concur.

His majesty was, however, not discouraged even by this result from still pursuing such measures as appeared to him most conducive to the end of peace; and the wishes of his ally, the emperor, corresponding with those which his majesty had manifested sentiments of a similar tendency were expressed on the part of his imperial majesty at the time of opening the campaign; but the continuance of the same spirit and principles on the part of the enemy rendered this fresh overture equally unsuccessful.

While the government of France thus persisted in obstructing every measure that could even open the way to negotiation, no endeavor was omitted to mislead the public opinion throughout all Europe with respect to the real cause of the prolongation of the war, and to cast a doubt on those dispositions which could have dictated the steps taken by his majesty and his august ally.

In order to deprive his enemies of all possibility of subterfuge or evasion, and in the hope that a just sense of the continued calamities of war, and of the increasing distresses of France herself, might at length have led to more just and pacific dispositions, his majesty renewed in another form, and thro' the intervention of a friendly power, a proposal for opening negotiations for peace.—The manner in which this intervention was received, indicated the most hostile dispositions towards Great Britain, and at the same time offered to all Europe a striking instance of that injurious and offensive conduct which is observed, on the part of the French government towards all other countries.——The repeated overtures made in his majesty's name, were nevertheless, of such a nature, that it was at last found impossible to persist in the absolute rejection of them, without the direct and unmitigated avowal of a determination to refuse to Europe all hopes of the restoration of tranquility. A channel was therefore, at length indicated, thro' which the government of France professed itself willing to carry on a negotiation, and a readiness was expressed (though in terms far remote from any spirit of conciliation) to receive a minister, authorized by his majesty to proceed to Paris for that purpose.

Many circumstances might have been urged as offered powerful motives against adopting the suggestions, until the government of France had given some indication of a spirit better calculated to promote the success of such a mission, and to meet these advances on the part of Great Britain. The king's desire for the restoration of general peace on just and honorable terms, his concern for the interests of his subjects, and his determination to leave to his enemies no pretext for imputing to him the consequences of their own ambition, induced him to overlook every such consideration, and to take a step which these reasons alone could justify.

The repeated endeavors of the French government to defeat this mission in its outset, and to break off the intercourse thus opened, even before the first steps towards negotiation could be taken, the insolent and injurious language employed with a view to irritate, the capricious and frivolous objections raised for the purpose of obstructing the progress of the discussion; all these have luminously appeared from the official papers which passed on both sides, and which are known to all Europe.

But above all, the abrupt termination of the negotiation has offered the most conclusive proof, that at no period of it was any real wish for peace entertained on the part of the French government.

After repeated evasions and delays, that government had at length consented to admit, as the basis of the negotiation, a principle proposed by his majesty, liberal in its own nature, equitable towards his enemies, and calculated to provide for the interests of his allies, and of Europe. It had been agreed that compensation should be made to France by proportionable reſtitutions from his majeſty's conqueſts on that power, for thoſe arrangements to which he ſhould be called upon to conſent, in order to ſatisfy the juſt pretenſions of his allies, and to preſerve the political balance of Europe. At the deſire of the French government itſelf, memorials were preſented by his majeſty's miniſter, which contained the outlines of terms of peace, grounded on the baſis ſo eſtabliſhed, and in which his majeſty propoſed to carry to the utmoſt poſſible extent the application of a principle ſo equitable as with reſpect to France, and ſo liberal on his majeſty's part. The delivery of theſe papers was accompanied by a declaration expreſſly and repeatedly made, both verbally, and in writing, that his majeſty's miniſter was willing and prepared to enter, with a ſpirit of conciliation and firmneſs, into the diſcuſſion of the different points therein contained, or into that of any other propoſal or ſcheme of peace which the French government might wiſh to ſubſtitute in its place.

In reply to this communication he received a demand, in form the moſt offenſive, and in ſubſtance the moſt extravagant, that ever was made in the courſe of any negotiation. It was peremptorily required of him, that in the very outlet of the buſineſs, when no anſwer had been given by the French government to his firſt propoſal, when he had not even learned, in any regular ſhape, the nature or extent of the objections to it, and much leſs received from that government any other offer or plan of peace, he ſhould, in twenty four hours deliver in a ſtatement of the final terms to which his court would in any caſe accede. A demand tending evidently to ſhut the door to all negotiation, to preclude all diſcuſſion, all explanation, all poſſibility of the amicable adjuſtment of points of difference. A demand in its nature prepoſterous, & its execution impracticable, ſince it is plain that no ſuch ultimate reſolution, reſpecting a general plan of peace, ever can be rationally formed much leſs declared, without knowing what points are principally objected to by the enemy, and what facilities he may be willing to offer in return for conceſſion in thoſe reſpects. Having declined compliance with this demand, and explained the reaſons which rendered it inadmiſſible; but having at the ſame time, expreſſly renewed the declaration of his readineſs to enter into the diſcuſſion of the propoſal he had conveyed, or of any other which might be communicated to him, the king's miniſter received no other anſwer than an abrupt command to quit Paris in forty-eight hours. If, in addition to ſuch an inſult, any further proof were neceſſary, of the diſpoſitions of thoſe by whom it was offered, ſuch proof would be abundantly ſupplied from the contents of the note in which this order was conveyed.—The mode of negotiation, on which the French government had in itſelf inſiſted, is there rejected, and no practicable means left open for treating with effect. The baſis of negotiation, ſo recently eſtabliſhed by mutual conſent, is there diſclaimed, and in its room a principle, clearly inadmiſſible, is re-aſſerted, as the only ground on which France can conſent to treat, the very ſame principle which had been brought forward in reply to his majeſty's firſt overtures from Switzerland, which had then been rejected by his majeſty, but which now appears never to have been, in fact, abandoned by the government of France, however inconſiſtent with that on which they had expreſſly agreed to treat.

It is therefore neceſſary that all Europe ſhould underſtand, that the rupture of the negotiation at Paris does not ariſe from the failure of any ſincere attempt, on the part of France, to reconcile, by fair diſcuſſion, the views and intereſts of the contending powers. Such a diſcuſſion has been repeatedly invited, and even ſolicited on the part of his majeſty, but has been, in the firſt inſtance, and abſolutely, precluded by the act of the French government.

By ſtrike excluſively from the determination of that government to reject all means of peace.—A determination which appeared but too ſtrongly in all the preliminary diſcuſſions, which were clearly manifeſted in the demand of an ultimatum made in the very outlet of the negotiation; but which is proved beyond all poſſibility of doubt, by the obſtinate adherence to a claim which never can be admitted—a claim that the conſtruction which the government affects to put (though even in that reſpect unſupported by the fact) on the internal conſtitution of its own country, ſhall be received by all other nations as paramount to every known principle of public law in Europe—as ſuperior to the obligations of treaties, to the ties of common intereſt, to the moſt preſſing and urgent conſiderations of general ſecurity.

On ſuch grounds it is that the French government has abruptly terminated a negotiation, which it commenced with reluctance, and conducted with every indication of a reſolution to prevent its final ſucceſs. On theſe motives it is that the further effuſion of blood, the continued calamities of war, the interruptions of peaceable and friendly intercourſe among mankind, the prolonged diſtreſſes of Europe, and the accumulated miſeries of France itſelf, are by the government of that country to be juſtified to the world.

His majeſty, who had entered into the negotiation with good faith, who has ſuffered no impediment to prevent his proſecuting it with earneſtneſs and ſincerity, has now only to lament its abrupt termination, and to renew, in the face of all Europe, the ſolemn declaration, that, whenever his enemies ſhall be diſpoſed to enter on the work of a general pacification, in a ſpirit of conciliation and equity, nothing ſhall be wanting on his part to contribute to the accompliſhment of that great object, with a view to which he has already offered ſuch conſiderable ſacrifices on his part, and which is now retarded only by the exorbitant pretenſions of his enemies.

LONDON, Dec. 27.

Count Woronzow, the Ruſſian miniſter plenipotentiary at our court, having received his new credentials from the preſent emperor Paul I ordered laſt Sunday a ſolemn funeral ſervice to be performed for the late empreſs Catharine II. at the cloſe of which all perſons belonging to the Ruſſian emabaſſy, and Ruſſian officers at preſent in this country, as well as all foreign officers attached to the Ruſſian ſervice, took the oath of allegiance to his imperial majeſty. Among the latter were two French emigrant general officers, namely the duke of d'Laval and count Montmaur.

The new emperor of Ruſſia appears to have employed his retirement of twenty years in ſober reflection on reforming the abuſes in his government: and we hope it will be for the future happineſs of his people. Immediately on his acceſſion to the throne, he cauſed, as we have already obſerved, the edict for recruiting more troops to be revoked; the tribute of 40 roubles, which each lord had a right of exacting from his vaſſal, was reduced to 5; every perſon (foreign miniſters and travellers excepted) was interdicted from driving more than two horſes in his carriage through the ſtreets of Peterſburg, inſtead of four or ſix as uſual. This has been done to promote agriculture in the country, as well as to prevent ſo many horſes being employed in luxury in the capital. The new emperor, who has been always very popular among the lower claſs of people, has ſhewn himſelf daily about the ſtreets, and been uncommonly well received.

It is a remarkable faſt, that the late empreſs of Ruſſia had ſo great an horror at the idea of death for ſeveral years before her own took place, that thoſe who frequented the court of Peterſburg were prohibited from informing her imperial majeſty of any event of that nature among the nobleman and ladies of the court; nay, ſo far was this precaution carried, that to prevent any object reminding her of what ſhe moſt dreaded, ſtrict orders were given that all funerals ſhould be performed in the night time.—Shades of Iſmael! you had your revenge!

PARIS, January 6.

On the 11th Nivoſe, the criminal tribunal of the department of the Seine were aſſembled and trying a criminal already condemned for another crime but who had made his eſcape.

Citizen Gohier, preſident, interrogated him, and to every queſtion the culprit in his anſwer called the preſident Citizen Colleague. "What do you mean by that?"—ſaid the preſident.

"Citizen colleague, anſwered the perſoner, I mean that thou art a rogue, and I another, therefore we are colleagues—all the rulers of the republic are rogues, as well as you and I—conſequently we are colleagues."

The preſident being rather confounded at this apoſtrophe, the vice-preſident Lambert came to his aſſiſtance, when the audacious raſcal cried out "hold thy tongue Lambert—I know thee—thou art as great a rogue as either of us."

Judgment being paſſed, the Colleague was adviſed that the law allowed him three days to appeal—"don't bother me," replied he, "I— upon the law and you all."

What can we ſay to this? The judges were fully decked out and enrolled, it only for ſome remedy, as a citizen colleague of the council of five hundred was ſaying to-day.

PHILADELPHIA, March 16.

Extract from a well authenticated letter received by one of the moſt reputable mercantile houſes in this city.

"Letters from Port-au-Prince which came by capt. Beebe, lately arrived at New-York, mention that the Britiſh attorney-general of Jamaica had written to the Mole, that all American veſſels, retaken from the French, ſhall be reſtored to the owners, on their paying one eighth ſalvage to the veſſels of war that re-took them."

NEW-YORK, March 22.

The Briſies, capt. Breath, arrived here yeſterday in 66 days from Bourdeaux.

Papers to the 20th Jan. are received, from which, tranſlations to-morrow.

The moſt important intelligence, however, is, that of Mr. Pinckney's ill treatment from the French directory, who do not pay him that reſpect which is due even to an indifferent foreigner—That a ſtrong revolutionary ſpirit ſeems ſtill to exiſt in France—That the directory, in order to awe the people from internal commotion, have drawn men from the armies of the republic to preſerve tranquility—That the Breſt fleet had returned into port—That Kehl, after great ſlaughter on both ſides, had ſurrendered to the Auſtrians: and, that Buonaparte had been unſucceſsful in Italy.

Theſe are the verbal accounts.

March 23.

Yeſterday arrived the brig Hunter, capt. Parker, in 27 days from Cape Francois.

A gentlemen who came paſſenger in the above named veſſel, informs us that the French take all veſſels bound to or coming from a Britiſh port, and condemn them without even the ſhadow of a trial. The condemnation of the ſloop Speedwell, capt. Clark, of Philadelphia, ſtands unparalleled, the pretext, for having been in a Britiſh port about nine months ſince. It was generally believed at the Cape, that the moment official information was received there, of any cooneſs between the United States and the French republic, Santhonax, Victor Hughes, &c. would lay an embargo on, and ſequeſter all American property then in the French Weſt-Indis iſlands, or that ſhould arrive there.

The following appeared in a late Charleſton paper.

UGLY CLUB.

This day the 14th inſtant, being their 13th anniverſary, the members are requeſted to attend at William's Coffee houſe, at two o'clock, to tranſact the buſineſs of the day. Dinner on table at half paſt three.

Henry Grant, preſident.
Wm Prentiſs, vice-preſident.
John M. Davis, ſecretary.

Ugly mortals, hither haſte,
Enjoy our mirth, enjoy our feaſt;
Bring rich red noſes, noſes crooked,
The Shandean noſe and noſes hooked;
But each muſt bring an honeſt heart,
Or hear this ſentence, —hence! depart!

WEST-NIAGARA, May 3.

Several reports of a diſagreeable nature are in circulation reſpecting the public concerns of the United States; but as we have no direct information, we are to judge of them as uncertain; but it ſeems reduced almoſt to a certainty that war is with them inevitable.

The day before yeſterday, a detachment of the United States' troops commenced at the garriſon of Niagara, the cutting and making the road from thence to the Geneſee river. The number employed is ſuch as promiſes a ſpeedy completion of that very deſirable object, and which is alſo of importance to this part of the province. Another detachment marched this day for Fort Slauſer, at which place they are to do garriſon duty.

On Sunday laſt arrived from Kingſton, his majeſty's armed veſſels the Mohawk, and on Monday laſt the Governor Simcoe, being their firſt voyage.

It is ſaid that the 2d battalion of Canadian volunteers are to relive this and the neighboring poſts, and that the Queen's rangers are to be ſtationed at York.

Inſurance on American veſſels, in London, has been to 10 per cent.

A report was brought to Philadelphia, March 7, by a gentleman from St. Thomas', that the Engliſh taking advantage of the defenceleſs ſituation to which Guadaloupe had been reduced, by ſitting out privateers, had diſpatched a conſiderable force againſt it, and had reinſtated themſelves maſters of it without much oppoſition. Altho' this is aſſerted with conſiderable confidence, yet it is doubted by many, as capt. Cotter left Antigua about the ſame time with the gentleman from St. Thomas', and did not hear of the expedition.

Married, yeſterday in this town, capt. Abraham Nellis of Milltown, (Forty-mile creek) to Miſs Caty Ball, daughter of Jacob Ball, eſq.

Died, at Halifax, J. M. Freke Bulkely, eſq. ſecretary of the province of Nova Scotia. He has been ſucceeded in office by the honorable B. Wentworth.

ESSAY on LIFE.

AGE, that leſſens the enjoyment of life, increaſes our deſire of living. Thoſe dangers which, in the vigor of youth, we had learned to deſpiſe aſſume new terrors as we grow old. Our caution increaſing as our years increaſe, fear becomes at laſt the prevailing paſſion of the mind; and the ſmall remainder of life is taken up in uſeleſs efforts to keep off our end, or provide for a continued exiſtence.

Strange contradiction in our nature, and to which even the wiſe are liable! If I ſhould judge of that part of life which lies before me, by that which I have already ſeen, the proſpect is hideous. Experience tells me, that my paſt enjoyments have brought no real felicity; and ſenſation aſſures me, that thoſe I have felt are ſtronger than thoſe which are yet to come. Yet experience & ſenſation in vain perſuade; hope, more powerful than either, dreſſes out the diſtant proſpect in fancied beauty; ſome happineſs, in long perſpective, ſtill beckons me to purſue; and like a looſing gameſter, every new diſappointment increaſes my ardor to continue the game.

Whence then is this increaſed love of life, which grow upon us with our years?—— Whence comes it, that we thus make greater efforts to preſerve our exiſtence, at a period when it becomes ſcarce worth keeping? Is it that nature, attentive to the preſervation of mankind, increaſes our wiſhes to live, while ſhe leſſens our enjoyments; and as ſhe robs the ſenſes of every pleaſure, equips imagination in the ſpoils? Life would be inſupportable to an old man, who, loaded with infirmities, feared death no more than when in the vigor of manhood: The numberleſs calamities of decaying nature—and the conſciouſneſs of ſurviving every pleaſure, would at once induce him with his own hand, to terminate the ſcene of miſery: But, happily the contempt of death for takes him at the time when it could only be prejudicial; and life acquires an imaginary value, in proportion as its real value is no more.

Our attachment to every object around us increaſes, in general from the length of our acquaintance with it. "I would not chooſe," ſays a French philoſopher, "to ſee an old poſt pulled up with which I had been long acquainted"—A mind long habituated to a certain ſet of objects, inſenſibly becomes fond of ſeeing them; viſits them from habit, and parts from them with reluctance: From hence proceeds the avarice of the old in every kind of poſſeſſion: They love the world, and all that it produces; they love life, and all its advantages; not becauſe it gives them pleaſure, but becauſe they have known it long.

Chinvang the chaſte, aſcending the throne of China, commanded that all who were unjuſtly detained in priſon during the preceeding reigns, ſhall be let free. Among the number who came to thank their deliverer on this occaſion, there appeared a majeſtic old man, who, falling at the emperor's feet, addreſſed him as follows, "Great father of China,—behold a wretch,—now eighty years old, who was ſhut up in a dungeon at the age of twenty-two. I was impriſoned, though a ſtranger to my crime, or without being even confronted by my accuſers. I have lived in ſolitude and darkneſs for more than fifty years, and am grown familiar with diſtreſs. As yet dazzled with the ſplendor of that ſun to which you have reſtored me, I have been wandering the ſtreets to find out ſome friend that would aſſiſt, or relieve, or remember me: But my friends, my family, and relations, are all dead, and I am forgotten. Permit me then, O Chinvang, to wear out the wretched remains of my life in my former priſon; the walls of my dungeon are to me more pleaſing than the moſt ſplendid palace: I have not long to live, and ſhall be unhappy except I ſpend the reſt of my days where my youth was paſſed, in that priſon from whence you were pleaſed to releaſe me."

The old man's paſſion for confinement is ſimilar to that we all have for life. We are habituated to the priſon; we look round with diſcontent, are diſpleaſed with the abode, and yet the length of our capacity only increaſes our fondneſs for the cell. The trees we have planted, the houſes we have built, or the poſterity we have begotten, all ſerve to bind us cloſer to the earth, and embitter our parting. Life ſues the young like a new acquaintance: The companion as yet unexhauſted, is at once inſtructive and amuſing; his company pleaſes; yet, for all this, it is little regarded. To us who are declined in years, life appears like an old friend: its jeſts have been anticipated in former converſation: It hath no new ſtory to make us ſmile, no new improvement with which to ſurpriſe; yet ſtill we love it; deſtitute of every enjoyment, ſtill we love it, huſband the waſting treaſure with increaſing frugality, and feel all the poignancy of anguiſh in the fatal ſeparation.

Sir PHILIP MORDAUNT was young, beautiful, ſincere, brave, an Engliſhman. He had a complete fortune of his own, and the love of the king his maſter, which was equivalent to riches. Life opened all her treaſures before him, and promiſed a long ſucceſſion of happineſs. He came, taſted of the entertainment, but was diſguſted even at the beginning. He profeſſed an averſion to living; was tired of walking round the ſame circle; had tried every enjoyment, and found them all grow weaker at every repetition. "If life be, in youth, ſo diſpleaſing," cried he to himſelf "what will it appear when age comes on? If it be at preſent ſo indifferent, ſure then it will be execrable." This thought embittered every reflection; until at laſt, with all the ſincerity of perverted reaſon, he ended the debate with a piſtol! Had this ſelf deluded man been apprized, that exiſtence grows more deſirable to us the longer we exiſt, he would then have faced old age without ſhrinking; he would have boldly dared to live; and ſerved that ſociety by his aſſiduity, which he baſely injured by his deſertion.

The following is from the Albany Regiſter, extra, of April 3. taken from the New-York Daily Gazette of March 20, and was received at New-York the 28th, by the ſhip Factor, in 38 days from London:—

LONDON, Feb. 4.

An expreſs from Dover brought us laſt night the moſt important papers which have arrived for many weeks from Paris.—They bring an account of a brilliant ſeries of victories. We muſt refer to the ſhort account given by Buonaparte himſelf, and the more extended details of gen. Berthier for the particulars of theſe important actions. The ſubſtance of them is, that Buonaparte has deſtroyed the fifth Auſtrian army in Italy!!—Five times has the emperor renewed this devoted army; in the laſt inſtance, every effort of determined magnanimity, and almoſt exhauſted deſpair, was exerted to make a vigorous movement for the deliverance of Mantua. He ſtript all his frontiers, he called forth and animated the chivalrous ſpirit of Hungary; the youth of Vienna were roufed by blandiſhments of the court, as well as their natural loyalty, to enter into volunteer battalions; and to haſten the expeditions, the recruits were mounted in Voitures, and diſpatched by poſt. In ſhort the ſalvation of Mantua, was conſidered as the laſt ſtake of the emperor and king, and for this every thing was to be hazarded; for this the propoſitions of gen. Clarke were rejected; every offer of an armiſtice was refuſed, and we have ſeen from the late German journals that they looked with perfect confidence to the ſucceſs of their mighty preparations. Our readers will not be content with the mere out-line of theſe victories; we ſhall therefore publiſh the official details but the ſhort total of the tranſactions are:—

That gen. Alvinzy with from 40 to 50,000 freſh troops, the flower of Auſtria, attacked in different points the French army in Italy; and battles were fought on 23, 24, 25, 26 and 27 Nivoſe (the 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th and 16th January) in all of which the Auſtrians were routed, and

The French took 23,000 priſoners, among whom were 3 general officers, 5 colonels, 10 majors, and a great number of inferior officers.

They killed and wounded 6000 men.

They took ſixty pieces of cannon, and about 24 ſtand of colours, among which are the ſtandards of the volunteers of Vienna embroidered by the hands of the empreſs.

And the whole of the effort of oxen, grain and other proviſions deſtined for the relief of Mantua, taken within cannon ſhot of its walls.

Such is the account which the generals have given of this moſt memorable victory, and which in our minds, is rendered ſtill more intereſting by the manner in which it has been received in Paris, and by the uſe which the directory have made of it. In the council of ancients, upon reading the meſſage from the directory, the following ſpeech was delivered by citizen Dumas:

Citizens representatives!

Before we are informed of the details of this laft victory ; before we are acquainted with the manner in which the forefight of the valiant Buonaparte contrived to involve the imperial generals in the double fnare which they had prepared for him ; before fame has preſented us with the record of the memorable deeds of arms which diſtinguiſhed this illuſtrious day, and decided the fate of Italy ; let us haſten to publiſh our gratitude to this brave, this invincible army.

Mantua muſt, ſooner or later, fall into our hands after this deciſive battle. The court of Vienna, which appears very recently to have rejected new overtures for negociation, in the hopes, by raiſing the blockade of Mantua, of changing the reſpective ſituations of the contracting powers, and diminiſhing the value of our conqueſts, may flatter itſelf with preſerving for a few days longer this bulwark of the Auſtrian poſſeſſions. It is of little conſequence to us now.

The meſſage of the directory leaves no doubt that the new army, deſtined to ſave Mantua at all hazards, is entirely deſtroyed, and we are able to aſſure the nation, and to congratulate ourſelves,—that at laſt this pledge of peace (the poſſeſſions of the emperor in Italy) is now in our hands. And we have it in our power to prove its value by propoſing the moſt uſeful, the moſt glorious compenſation.

Unable, to the extent of our wiſhes, to diſtribute rewards, let us at leaſt preſent to our defenders that of which they are moſt jealous—the expreſſion of the national gratitude. Let us here thank gen. Buonaparte and the army of Italy, not only becauſe they have vanquiſhed and defeated the Auſtrian army, but alſo becauſe they have ſmoothed the way to a general peace. This is the higheſt triumph which the government, which the nation can prepare for them. Such is the monument which it is our taſk to raiſe to their glory.

Let us prove that we know how to offer to Europe that peace which it expects ; that honorable peace which our ſucceſs ſecures ; that juſt and equitable balance which will be accepted Let us, in fine, tell what compenſation will be ſufficient to ſecure our liberty, ſince we are victorious by it and for it.

I move that the meſſage be printed and diſtributed, ſix copies to each member.

Adopted.

This would be very important of itſelf, though it would ſerve only to ſhew that a part of the aſſembly at leaſt were not infatuated by the triumph, to the forgetfulneſs of the moſt ſacred duty of every rational friend of man ; but that which gives this wiſe, humane, and political ſpeech, real intereſt, is, that we find it adopted by the directory, and publiſhed in the official department of their own journal ; and the rumour is that they have ſent a new envoy, with offers of peace to Vienna.

Feb. 11. The public was amuſed yeſterday with the rumour of accounts having been receiv'd by the admiralty from the Mediterranean, contradicting the official rumour of Buonaparte's victory, and ſtating that the Auſtrians had ſucceeded in relieving Mantua, with the loſs of 3000 men only.

Extract of a letter from Buonaparte to Clarke. Verona, 30th Nivoſe, Jan. 19, 5th year.

Scarcely had I quitted Roverbella, when I was informed that the enemy had appeared at Verona. Maſſena had made his diſpoſitions, which were exceedingly ſucceſsful. We took 600 priſoners, and three pieces of cannon. Gen. Blume had ſeven ſhot through his clothes without receiving the ſlighteſt wound. Such is the advantage of being faſtinate men.

We have had only ten men killed and a hundred wounded.

Extract of a letter from general in chief Buonaparte, to the executive directory.

Head-quarters at Roverbella, 28th Nivoſe Jan. 17.

There have occurred ſince the 23d, operations of ſuch great importance, and which have been accompanied with ſo many actions, that it is impoſſible for me before tomorrow to preſent you with a detail of particulars ; I ſhall hearly now enumerate them.

Upon the 20th Nivoſe, the enemy attacked the diviſion of general Maſſena before Verona, which produced the battle of St. Michael, where they were completely beaten. We took 600 priſoners, and three pieces of cannon. The ſame day they attacked the head of our line at Montebaldo, and produced the battle of Corona, when they were repulſed with the loſs of 110 priſoners.

Upon the 23d at midnight, the diviſion of the enemy's army, which had taken poſt at Bevelaqua ever ſince the 19th, when they compelled the advanced guard of the diviſion of the general Angereau to fall back, haſtily threw a bridge over the Adige, a league from Porto Legnigo, oppoſite Anguiari.

Upon the 24th in the morning the enemy cauſed a very ſtrong column to deſile by Montagena and Caprino, and thus compelled the diviſion of gen. Joubert to evacuate Corona, and concentrate themſelves at Rivoli. I had foreſeen this movement. I repaired thither at night, and the battle of Rivoli enſued, which we gained upon the 25th and 26th after an obſtinate reſiſtance ; at which place we made 13,000 priſoners, took ſevera ſtand of colours and pieces of cannon. Gen. Alvinzi, almoſt alone, with great difficulty eſcaped.

Upon the 25th, general Guyeux attacked the enemy at Anguiari, to attempt to throw them into confuſion before they had entirely effected their paſſage. He did not ſucceed in his object ; but he made 300 priſoners.

Upon the 26th, gen. Angereau attacked the enemy at Anguiari, which produced the ſecond battle of Anguiari. He made 2000 priſoners, took 16 pieces of cannon, and burnt all their bridges over the Adige :—but the enemy taking advantage of the night, fled ſtraight towards Mantua : They had already advanced within cannon ſhot of this place.—They attacked St. George's ſuburb, which we had carefully entrenched, and they were unable to carry it. I arrived in the night, with reinforcements which produced the battle of La Favorite, and I now write to you on the field of battle.—The fruits of this battle are 7000 priſoners, a number of ſtandards, cannon and all the baggage of the army, a regiment of huſſars, and a conſiderable convoy of proviſions and oxen, which the enemy attempted to introduce into Mantua.

Wurmſer tried to make a ſortie to attack the left wing of our army, but he met with the uſual reception, and he was obliged to return.

Behold then in three or four days the fifth army of the emperor entirely deſtroyed!

We have taken 23,000 priſoners, among which are a lieutenant-general, two generals 6000 men killed or wounded, ſixty pieces of cannon, and about 24 ſtand of colours.—All the battalions of the Vienna volunteers have been taken priſoners. Their colours are embroidered by the hands of the empreſs.

The army of gen. Alvinzi was near 50,000 men, a part of which had come poſt from the interior of Auſtria.

The moment I return to head-quarters I will tranſmit you a detailed account to inform you of the military movements which have taken place, as well as to acquaint you with the different corps and individuals who have diſtinguiſhed themſelves.

Signed, BUONAPARTE.

Extract of a letter from Buonaparte, dated Verona, January 18.

BATTLE OF St. GEORGES.

M. general Provera, at the head of 6000 men, arrived upon the 26th, at mid-day, at the ſuburb of St. Georges. He attacked it all day without effect. This ſuburb was defended by gen. of brigade at Miollis.—Samſon, chief of battalion of engineers, had entrenched it with great care. Gen. Miollis, equally active and intrepid, far from being intimidated by the threats of the enemy, anſwered them with his cannon, and thus gained the right of the 26th and 27th, during which I ordered gen. Surrier to occupy la Favorite, with the 57th and 18th demi-brigades of the line, and all the diſpoſable force which could be drawn from the diviſions employed in the blockade ; but before giving an account of the battle of la Favorite, which took place on the 27th, I ought to ſpeak of the two battles of Anguiari.

FIRST BATTLE OF ANGUIARI.

The diviſion of gen. Provera, 10,000 ſtrong, had forced the paſſage of Anguiari. Gen. of diviſion, Guyeux, had immediately collected all the forces he could find—and marched againſt the enemy, but having only 1500 men, he could not ſucceed in forcing the enemy again to croſs the river, although he checked their courſe for part of the day, and made 300 priſoners.

SECOND BATTLE OF ANGUIARI.

Gen. Provera did not loſe a moment, and filed on immediately to Caſtellara. Gen. Angereau fell upon the rear guard of his diviſion, and after a very warm engagement, took 16 pieces of cannon, and made 2000 priſoners. Adjutant-general Dufaix particularly diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his courage on this occaſion. The 9th and 18th regiment of dragoons, and the 25th regiment of chaſſeurs, likewiſe diſtinguiſhed themſelves. The commander of the Hulans preſented himſelf to a ſquadron of the 9th regiment of dragoons, and, with one of thoſe rhodomontades uſually among the Auſtrians, "ſurrender!" cried he to the regiment. Citizen Duvivier made his ſquadron ſtop : "If you are brave come and take me," cried he to the commander of the enemy. The two corps ſtood ſtill, and the two chiefs afforded an example of thoſe conflicts which Taſſo deſcribes ſo charmingly. The commander of the Hulans was wounded by two blows of the ſabre ; the troops then charged and the Hulans made priſoners.

Gen Provera all night continued to file on to St. Georges, as I have had the honor to inform you, and upon the 26th made an attack upon it. Being unable to enter it, he conceived the deſign of forcing la Favorite, of piercing the lines of the blockade, and ſeconded by a ſortie which Wurmſer was to make, of throwing himſelf into Mantua.

BATTLE OF LA FAVORITE.

Upon the 27th, an hour before day, the enemy attacked la Favorite at the moment when Wurmſer made a ſortie, and attacked the lines of the blockade by St. Antoine.—Gen. Victor, at the head of the 56th demi-brigade, overthrew all he met. Wurmſer was obliged to re-enter Mantua, almoſt as ſoon as he had left it, and left the field of battle covered with dead and priſoners.—Gen. Surrurier then made gen. Victor advance with the 57th demi-brigade, in order to hem in Provera in the ſuburb of St. Georges, and thus block him up. Confuſion and diſorder accordingly prevailed in the enemy's ranks. Cavalry, infantry, artillery, were all mingled pell-mell. The terrible 57th demi-brigade yielded to no oppoſition. One ſide it took 3 pieces of cannon. On another it cut to pieces the huſſar regiment of Hedendy. At this moment the reſpectable gen. Provera offered to capitulate. He reckoned upon our generoſity, nor was he deceived. We allowed him to capitulate ;—the articles you will find annexed. 6000 priſoners among which are all the Vienna volunteers, and 20 pieces of cannon, were the fruits of this memorable day.

The army of the republic then has in 4 days gained two pitched battles, and ſix leſſer engagements, mad 23,000 priſoners, among which are a lieutenant general, and two generals, 12 or 15 colonels, &c. taken 20 ſtands of colours, 60 pieces of cannon, and killed and wounded at leaſt ſix thouſand men.

I requeſt of you the rank of general of diviſion for general Victor, that of brigade for the adjutant general Vaux. All the demi-brigades have covered themſelves with glory, eſpecially the 32d, 57th and 18th, of the line, commanded by general Maſſena, and who in three days beat the enemy at St. Michael, at Rivoli and at Roverbella. The Roman legions marched 24 miles a-day.—Ours marched 30, and fought alſo occaſionally.

Citizens Deſſain, chief of the 4th demi-brigade of light infantry ; Marquis, chief of the 29th ; Fournely, chief of the 17th ; have been wounded. Generals of brigade, Vial, Brume, Ben and adjutant gen. Argod particularly diſtinguiſhed themſelves.

The individual inſtances of bravery, are too numerous to be enumerated here.

Signed, BUONAPARTE.

WEST-NIAGARA, May 17.

Our readers will obſerve that the lengthy accounts of this day are totally French repreſentations, and for the truth of them we are not anſwerable. We have been too often entertained with their pompous pralities, to be eaſily duped into a belief of their ſtaying two thouſands, without the loſs of a ſingle man. If we may credit what is well known to themſelves and others, a formida le conſpiracy was on foot at home at the time the battles are ſaid to have been fought, and therefore on very good grounds it is aſſerted that the whole account is a mere fabrication, a ſcare crow for the conſpirators. It is a curious circumſtance that, which Buonaparte and his colleague citizen. Berthier, entered into the laudable combat of which ſhould moſt bombaſt the other to their citizen colleagues at home. Pape s are ſaid to be in to-day containing accounts to a later date than thoſe by the Factor, and very contradictory to them ; we hope to obtain them for the benefit of our readers. It is alſo ſaid they contain the official repreſentation of admiral Jarvis having obtained a ſignal victory over a Spaniſh ſquadron in the Mediterranean.

On the fear of growing OLD.

AMONG the various follies by which we increase the natural and unavoidable miseries of life, is the dread of approaching age. The sight of grey hair has often caused a severer pang than the loss of a child or a husband. After a certain age, every returning birth-day is saluted with silent horrow, and we conceal the number of our years with as much solicitude as the consciousness of an attrocious crime.

The weakness arises, in great measure from a defective education. They who have never been taught to consider any thing valuable, but youth, beauty, and dissipating pleasure will naturally feel themselves reduced to a state of dependency, they behold all, for which life appears worth possessing on the eve of departure. The middle age, at which all the powers of the mind & body are in complete perfection, is loaded as if it were the age of decrepitude. The boundaries of life, by nature sufficiently circumscribed contracted by the empty vanity of fashion, and from three score and ten it shrinks to thirty. It has been currently reported that many fashionable beauties have expressed a devout wish, that they might not survive their thirtieth birth-day. To sink in the horizon of the gay world and to see other suns soaring in all the glorious majesty of youth and beauty, was more than they imagined their delicate natures could possibly sustain.

But as life is sweet, and death not always desirable, they and their many imitators will probably be inclined to live on, even when they are arrived at the formidable age of thirty-ten years. It will then be but common charity to endeavor to convince them that there are methods, which may render the long and dismal period which is to follow, not only comfortable to themselves, but agreeable to others. They will no longer be under the necessity of dressing at sixty in the garb of fifteen, nor of painting and patching a shrivelled skin, not of spending that time at the looking glass which might be much more usefully employed.

For the enjoyment of the space from thirty to three score, it would be necessary to have laid in a stock of good humor. But the temper must be cultivated at an early age, in order to be cultivated with success. The years from eight to eighteen must not be exclusively devoted to external ornaments, and the arts of catching admiration. Many efforts must be made during that period to overcome spite, envy, peevishness, stubbornness, fullenness, and all those bad qualities, which, though they may lie dormant while youth and beauty secure fascination, will afterwards break out in all the fulness of their horrors, when flattery is silent and admiration no more: But good humor will rise to supply the charms of departed beauty; and good sense properly improved, will leave no part of life without the means of pleasing and receiving pleasure.

But there is no method of inspiring good humor and good sense so effectually as that of forming a taste for polite arts at an early age. Whatever pleases habitually, equally, and innocently, cannot fail to sweeten the temper.—Books, besides that they are usually addressed to the taste, and on that account possess a beneficial influence on the temper, abound with maxims and with precepts of sovereign efficacy in the improvement of the heart, temper, and the understanding. Drawing and music seriously and attentively pursued, are peculiarly efficacious in refining, exalting and sweetening the disposition. Every thing, indeed, which addresses itself to the finer faculties of the human constitution, has, in some degree, this valuable effect; and he, who has been early taught to value the beauties of the mind, will find its graces expanded to their highest perfection, at the very age in which the blossoms of personal beauty wither and decay.

If as we grow old, we grow wiser and better, surely we shall have no reason to repine since our real happiness is always proportioned to our wisdom and our goodness; and we can scarcely avoid growing wiser and better by age, if our minds have been early improved with learning, and duly tinctured with virtue and religion. Time and experience naturally lead to improvement; and if our hearts are rightly disposed, we shall find, in the conscious improvement of our minds and morals, one of the truest pleasures of which our nature is capable.

However unreasonable the excessive dread of approaching old age, in either sex, it is certainly more excusable, on many accounts in women than in men. In men it is a mark of weakness, want of principle, and want of sense. Yet how many do we daily see with wrinkled brows and bloodless cheeks, and tottering legs, hoary locks, decorating their walking skeletons with every cosmetic art, and haunting every scene of vice and vanity, with all the wantonness of a stripling of eighteen? There is natural dignity, authority, and beauty, in old age honorably supported, which such men resign to that absurd abbetation of youth, which can only render them wretched and ridiculous.

To consider the advanced period of life as of no value, argues a great defect of religious principle. They constitute the proper season for the pleasures of devotion and of practical piety. They furnish a most desirable opportunity for advancing our nature to all attainable perfection, and fulfilling the purposes of our existence. They enable us to aspire after, and to obtain that beauty which will not pass away, and that youth which shall be immortal.

Niagara, May 2 d 1797.

WHEREAS the entering of caveats in the office of the secretary of the province, to prevent the passing of deeds after they have been duly executed, has been found inconvenient, and deemed to be otherwise improper: Such persons, therefore, who have, or pretend to have any claim to lands in the possession of others, his majesty's subjects, holden under certificate, or order of council, or other authority, will take notice that they must enter caveats in the secretary's office before the making of the deeds, as none will be received after they are executed.

Such persons, therefore, as are ready to establish their claims, will file their caveats in the secretary's office immediately: and that others may be duly apprised of the deeds now about to be made, a list of the names of persons and of the townships where the lands lie is subjoined, and others will be made known in the several subsequent gazettes.

When, therefore, any persons perceive names annexed to lots or tracts of land which they conceive themselves entitled to a grant, they must within one month after the publication of future publications, of the lands lie in the Home district, lodge caveat in the secretary's office, and give immediate notice to the clerk of the council, and the party against whom they set up their claim.

PARIS, Feb. 2.

The commotions which have recently taken place in the different departments, prove that the conſpirators had reaſon to hope for ſupport from the terroriſts. In the ſouth ſeveral inſurrections have taken place ; aſſaſſinations have been committed at Toulouſe and the Jacobins roſe in ſeveral parts of the departments of Aix and Arles, on the night of the 19th ult. defeated the armed force, and exclaimed, " Long live the mountain and the conſtitution of 1793."

The powers of the agents concerned in the conſpiracy were ſigned by Louis XVIII. at Hamburgh.

The time of Barras' preſidency is expired, and Rewbell ſucceeds him by rotation.

Feb. 3. Rameil, commander in chief of the guard of the legiſlative body, ſtates in his report on the late conſpiracy, that Poly, one of the arreſted agents, has pointed out the Spaniſh ambaſſador, marquis del Campo and Talien, as being connected with the committioners of Louis XVIII.

About twenty perſons are laid to be arreſted in this metropolis.

The king of P[illegible] has ordered his miniſter at Vienna, marquis Luchefini, to declare to the imperial court, that his majeſty would conſider all injurious proceedings againſt the princes of the empire who have concluded a ſeparate peace with France, as if the terms offered to his own perſon. He has ordered all his troops to be placed on the war eſtabliſhment to enforce this declaration, and the duke of Brunſwick, as well as Kalkreuth, Moellendorf, and other generals, have received orders to hold their head quarters in readineſs.

FRANKFORT, Jan. 10.

It is pretended that the new emperor of Ruſſia, has formed the grand project of fabricating Europe. Baron Stackelbourgh lately appointed miniſter plenipotentiary from the court of Peterſburgh to the Germanic body, is it is ſaid, charged with inſtructions on that ſubject ; he is to paſs through Berlin and Sturgard, and to viſit the principal courts of Germany to ſound their diſpoſitions.

LEGHORN, Jan. 25.

We hear from Florence, that the marquis Manfredini, in an interview with gen. Buonaparte, has ſigned to convention for the evacuation of Tuſcan. The grand duke is to pay two millions, of which 800,000l. immediately, 1,200,000 when the French evacuate this city, which will not take place while the Engliſh retain poſſeſſion of Porto-Ferrajo.

BASLE, Jan. 6.

At the laſt interview between the French and the Auſtrian generals, concerning the evacuation of the Tete-du-Point of Huningen, the ambaſſador of the republic (Barthelemi) aſſiſted with his ſuit, and a number of Ecnclumen and foreigners ; every point being ſettled, the French marched colors flying, drums beating, and recroſſed the Rhine at the ſound of cannon in about 20 large boats. Nothing could be more intereſting than the cordiality, eſteem and even friendſhip, which reigned between the French and Auſtrian generals, officers and ſoldiers, during the five days of the armiſtice. The prince of Furſtenberg, the generals Wolf, Frolich, Bolba, and prince Charles, who likewiſe was there for ſome time, were continually praiſing, the bravery and abilities of the French when in converſation with the generals Ferrino, Dufour, the old, every one reſpectively, expreſſed their wiſh to ſee an end put to ſuch a murderous and deſolating war. Numbers of Swiſs were intermixed with the French and Auſtrians, and joined them in the ſame ſentiments.

LONDON, February 17.

By the general in chief of the army of Italy,
Head-quarters, Bologna, 19th Pluvoſe.

The French army about entering into the dominions of the Pope will be faithful to the maxims it profeſſes ; it will proteſt the people and religion.

The French ſoldier carries the bayonet (ſure pledge of victory) in one hand, and with the other he offers the different towns and villages, peace, protection and ſafety.—Woe be to thoſe who ſcorn it, or who from lightneſs of heart, or being ſeduced by hypocritical or wicked men, ſhall draw upon themſelves war with all its horrors, or the vengeance of an army which in ſix months has made 100,000 priſoners, taken 400 pieces of cannon, 110 ſtandards, and deſtroyed five armies.

Art. I. Every town and village which at the approach of the French army ſhall ſound the alarm, ſhall be immediately burnt, and the municipal officers ſhot.

II. The commune in which a French ſoldier ſhall be aſſaſſinated, ſhall immediately be declared to be in a ſtate of war, a flying column ſhall be ſent, who will take hoſtages and levy an extraordinary contribution.

III. Every prieſt, monk, or miniſter, under whatever denomination they may be, ſhall be protected and kept in their preſent ſituation, provided they conduct themſelves according to the principles of the goſpel—but if they are the leaſt to tranſgreſs they will be treated in a military manner, and more ſeverely than other citizens.

BUONAPARTE.

By the general in chief of the army of Italy.
Head-Quarters, Bologna, 13 Pluvoſe, 5th year.

Art. I. The pope has formally refuſed to carry into execution the articles 8 and 9 of the armiſtice concluded at Bologna under the mediation of Spain, which was ſolemnly ratified at Rome the 27th June, '96.

II. The court of Rome has not ceaſed to arm and excite, by manifeſtoes, the people to a cruſade : its troops to the number of 10,000 men have approached Bologna, and threatened to invade that place.

III. The court of Rome has begun negociating with the court of Vienna, hoſtile to France, as is proved by the letters of Cardinal Buſca and the miſſion of Prelate Albani to Vienna.

IV. The Pope has conſided the command of his troops to Auſtrian generals and officers, ſent by the court of Vienna.

V. The pope has refuſed to anſwer the official advances made by citizen Caraufi, miniſter of the F. R. to open negociations for peace.

VI. The treaty of amneſty has therefore been violated and infringed by the court of Rome. I conſequently declare that the armiſtice concluded the 2d Meſſidor, between the French republic and the court of Rome is broke. BUONAPARTE.

February 28.

Whitehall, Feb. 26.

My lord,

" I have the ſatisfaction to acquaint your lordſhip, that by a letter I have received from lord Milford, dated Haverfordweſt, the 24th inſt. one P. M. it appears, that the French troops mentioned in my letter of yeſterday's date, as having landed on the coaſt of Pembrokeſhire, and who had ſince occupied the heights above Fiſhguard, were then in the act of furrendering themſelves priſoners. The zeal and ſpirit of the people on this occaſion would not permit them to wait for the arrival of the military corps ; to whom the French troops ſurrendered, and ſeveral of them attacked ſmall parties of the enemy with ſuch weapons as they could procure, ſome of whom were killed on this occaſion, without the loſs of a ſingle man on our part. PORTLAND.

To the right honorable the lord mayor.

On hearing of the enemy's landing, the military and other troops in the vicinity aſſembled with all poſſible diſpatch ; but before they could arrive, 300 of the French were taken priſoners by the peaſantry. In the courſe of the day, the whole of the enemy were made priſoners.

As ſoon as the commanders of the frigates off Fiſhguards ſaw that the banditti, whom they had landed, were made priſoners, they ſet ſail ; but as ſir Edward Pellew failed with his ſquadron on Thurſday from Plymouth in queſt of them, we hope to hear that the whole of the enemy's forces have fallen into our hands.

Advices have been received from Briſſels of ſo recent a date as the 16th inſtant confidently ſtating that great apprehenſions were entertained by the French generals on the Lower Rhine, that the campaign would immediately be opened there by the Auſtrians, whoſe force on the right bank of that river amounted, on the 6th inſt. to upwards of 57,000 men, while the French army of the Sambre and Meuſe, and that of the North, owing to the large draughts made from thence and ſent to Italy, hardly exceed 31,000 men, who were all in a ſtate very unfit for taking the field. A corps of 15,000 Bohemians were expected at Franckfort on the 10th inſt. on whoſe arrival the operations were to be renewed with the utmoſt vigor. Neuwied and Boſſeldorff were to be the firſt objects of attack, gen. Hotze, will be at the head of 30,000 men, was to make an attempt to paſs the Rhine in the environs of Ehrenbreiſtein. In conſequence of this information, the French generals had put all the ſtrong holds from Creuztnach to Maeſtricht and Luxemburgh in the beſt ſtate of defence. The archduke Charles, after the ſurrender of the redoubt of the bridge at Huningen, went to Vienna to ſettle the definitive plan of operations ; which, it is ſaid, will have for its object the paſſage of the Rhine, and the recovery of the Netherlands. The Auſtrian force in the Tyroleſe are to act upon the defenſive until the events in Germany ſhall oblige the French to weaken their force in Italy. The requiſitions in Belgium are ordered out with the greateſt precipitation ; and all thoſe troops, which can be ſpared from the environs of Paris and the interior of France have received orders to repair by forced marches to the Rhine.

A conſiderable number of troops are now embarking at Cowes, report ſays, for the Weſt Indies ; Ireland, more probably,—is the place of deſtination. The 10th and 42d regiments, compriſing 2,200 men, are already on board ; 5000 foreign troops will accompany them.

The ſhip builders in Leith have offered their ſervices to the lord Provoſt and magiſtrates of Edinburgh, in defending the ſouth ſide of the coaſt of the 5th of 4th againſt invaſion, for which purpoſe they expreſs their readineſs, to be trained to the uſe of great guns.

March 2.

Yeſterday morning arrived the Paris papers down to the date of the 10th of Feb. inclufive. The moſt intereſting matter they contain is the form of the capitulation of Mantua.

The terms granted to the brave garriſon are ſuch as do honor to the victors and vanquiſhed. Few inſtances are to be found in military hiſtory of any more liberal.

The French papers confeſs their navy to be in the moſt deplorable ſtate. The officers are without the requiſite clothing, and have not yet more than one quarter of their pay in ſpecie.

General Simcoe arrived at Port-au-Prince previous to the departure of the Niger.

Admiralty Office, March 3, '97.

Robert Calder, eſq. firſt captain to admiral ſir John Jarvis, K. B. arrived this morning with diſpatches from him to Mr. Nepean, of which the following are copies.

Victory in Lagos Bay, Feb. 16, '97.

SIR,

The hopes of falling in with the Spaniſh fleet expreſſed in my letter to you of the 13th inſt. were confirmed that night, by our diſtinctly hearing the report of their ſignal guns, and by intelligence received from capt. Foote, of his majeſty's ſhip the Niger, who had with equal judgment and perſeverance, keept company with them for ſeveral days, on my preſcribed rendezvous, (which from the ſtrong ſouth-eaſt winds, I had never been able to reach) and that they were not more than the diſtance of three or four leagues from us. I anxiouſly awaited the dawn of day, when, being on the ſtarboard tack, Cape St. Vincent bearing eaſt by north eight leagues, I had the ſatisfaction of ſeeing a number of ſhips extending from ſouth weſt to ſouth. At 49 minutes paſt ten, the weather being extremely hazy. La Bonne Citoyenne made the ſignal that the ſhips ſeen were of the line, twenty-five in number. His majeſty's ſquadron under my command, conſiſting of the fifteen ſhips of the line named in the margin,* happily formed in the moſt compact order of ſailing, in two lines. By carrying a preſs of ſail I was fortunate in getting in with the enemy's fleet at half paſt eleven o'clock, before it had time to conneft, and form a regular order of battle. Such a moment was not to be loſt ; and, confident in the ſkill, valor and diſcipline of the officers and men I had the happineſs to command, and judging that the honor of his majeſty's arms and the circumſtance of the war in theſe ſeas required a conſiderable degree of enterprize, I felt myſelf juſtified in departing from the regular ſyſtem ; and paſſing through their fleet, in a line formed with the utmoſt celerity, tacked, and thereby ſeparated one-third from the main body, after a partial cannonade, which prevented their rejunction till the evening ; and by the very great exertion of the ſhips which had the good fortune to arrive up with the enemy on the laboard tack, the ſhips named in the margin‡ were captured, and the action ceaſed about five o'clock in the evening.

I enclofe the moſt correct liſt I have been able to obtain of the Spaniſh ſhips oppoſed to me, amounting to twenty-ſeven ſail of the line, and am concerned to add, that the number killed and wounded in his majeſty's ſhips I have under my command, is ſmall in proportion to thoſe taken from the enemy. At the moment the Lively (almoſt totally diſmaſted) and his majeſty's ſhips the Captain and the Culloden are in a ſtate to put to ſea, I ſhall avail myſelf of the firſt favorable wind to proceed off Cape St. Vincent in my way to Liſbon.

Capt. Calder, whoſe able aſſiſtance I have ſo frequently experienced in the public ſervice during my command, is the bearer of this and will more particularly elucidate to the lords commiſſioners of the admiralty the movements of the ſquadron on the 14th, and the preſent ſtate of it.

I am, &c. J. JARVIS.

* Victory, Britannia, Barfleur, Prince George, Blenheim, Orion, Colloſſus, Egmont, Culloden, Irreſiſtible, and Diadem.

‡ Salvador del Mando, and San Joſef, 112 guns each, San Nicolas, 80 guns, San Iſidro, 74 guns.

General Buonaparte has addreſſed the court of Tuſcany, a requeſt on the part of the republic, to pay with out delay, a ſum of two millions in ſpecie, viz. one million as an indemnity for the expence the French were at in protecting the harbor of Leghorn ; and one million as a loan, which the French republic will pledge itſelf to repay, both principal and intereſt.

Sir G. K. Elphinſtone, it is ſaid, has made 400,000 pounds by the capture of the Cape o Good Hope, and the Dutch ſquadron there.

FROM THE CHESTER COURANT.

Tueſday, February 28.

Expreſſes to lieutenant-general WHITE arrived on Sunday night and yeſterday morning, confirming the account of the French troops, to the number of 1200, who had landed in Pembrokeſhire being taken priſoners. They were attacked by the few troops that could be aſſembled, and ſurrounded by the country people, armed with pitch-forks, &c.

The Cardigan Militia have much diſtinguiſhed themſelves as well as the ſmall military parties who could be collected ; and the univerſal alacrity and ſpirit of the inhabitants were ſuch as to have inſured ſucceſs, had the number of French been ten times as great. The ſhipping who brought theſe troops, immediately on their defeat, ſet ſail with the utmoſt precipitation.

We are happy to learn that the Cardiganſhire Militia, whoſe behavior whilſt reſident in this city was ſo conſpicuouſly decent and orderly, have under their officers, major Lewis and capt. Brooke, ſo eminently confirmed the good opinion that was entertained of their courage and military ſpirit.

The above important intelligence was yeſterday communicated to the firſt diviſion of the ſupplementary Militia, under arms when every loyal and joyful effuſion of manly Britiſh ſpirit was exhibited in ſuch a manner, as nothing but the ſtricteſt attachment to their king and country could produce.

WEST-NIAGARA, May 24.

Mantua ſurrendered.

Mantua, after a moſt glorious defence by the great Wurmſer, capitulated on the 2d Feb. Even the beſiegers were moved to pay the reſpect to bravery, which bravery alone commands, granted that marſhall count Wurmſer, his ſuite, &c. the adjutant-general Aveland Bron Helf ; capt. aid-de-camp count Degonfield ; all the generals, each with his reſpective aids-de-camp ; two hundred cavalry, with their officers and horſes ; five hundred men choſen at pleaſure by the marſhall ; and the ſix guns mentioned in the firſt article, with their gunners, ammunition, and equipage, ſhall not be priſoners of war. The city ſhall be maintained in all its rights & privileges, property and religion. The inhabitants who have performed ſervices to their legitimate ſovereign, ſhall be called to no account whatever for having done ſo. The garriſon had all the honors of war. The articles of capitulation at length will appear in our next.

Letters delivering credit ſtate, ſays a Boſton paper, that M. Pinckney has been told, under the direction of the French directory, that they will not receive a miniſter from America, while the Britiſh treaty is abolished, certain acts of congreſs repealed, and ſentences on the federal courts reverſed."

CAPITULATION OF MANTUA.

Capitulation between his excellency marſhal count de Wurmſer, commander in chief of the army of his majeſty the emperor and king, and the general of diviſion Sherbeer, commander of the French troops before Mantua.

Art. I. The imperial garriſon of Mantua, and the citadel, ſhall evacuate Mantua by the great gate of the [illegible] with the honors of war, drums beating, colours flying, matches lighted, and ſhall carry with them two ſix pounders, [illegible] twelve pounders, and two howitzers, with their carriages and barrels, together with the neceſſary amunition for each piece, and the artillerymen belonging to them. The garriſon ſhall form upon the cauſſee leading from Marmico to Mantua; ſhall not lay down their arms, but ſhall be priſoners of war until exchanged, except thoſe mentioned in the ſecond article, who ſhall not be priſoners of war. Anſwer. Granted, with this exception, that on the outlet of the barriers the arms ſhall be laid down upon the glacis, as well as the colours, ſtandards and every other military article, the garriſon being to remain all priſoners of war.—Granted alſo to every thing relating to the artillery and artilleriſts who ſhall quit the garriſon with 700 men, who are not priſoners of war.

II. Marſhall count de Wurmſer ſhall not be a priſoner of war nor his ſuit, viz. the adjutants general, Aver and Baron Helt, and captain aide de camp count Degenfeld; all the generals, each with his aid de camp; 200 cavalry with their reſpective horſes and their officers; 500 men to be choſen by the marſhall; the ſix pieces of cannon mentioned in the firſt article, with their gunners, ammunition and furniture. Anſwer, Granted, as far as relates to marſhall Wurmſer; to every thing that belongs to him perſonally, to 200 cavalry, comprising their officers, and to five hundred individuals to be choſen by the marſhall, including the artilleriſts mentioned in the firſt article, the general officers, thoſe of the eſtat major, and every other individual whom the marſhall ſhall think proper to comprize in it.

III. The officers ſhall keep their ſwords, their horſes, equipage, and all their property; the ſoldiers their knapſacks; as well as perſons not employed in a military capacity, the civil officers, and all perſons attached to the military ſervice.—Anſwer. The officers ſhall keep their ſwords; the generals and other perſons hereafter mentioned ſhall keep the following number of horſes; the lieutenant-generals 16—major generals 10—colonels 8—lieutenant-colonels and majors 7—captains of cavalry 3—captains of infantry 2—lieutenants of cavalry 2—lieutenants and enſigns of infantry 2. The commiſſioners of war ſhall be treated upon the footing of the military rank to which they are conſidered as equal. All perſons employed, to whom the law allows horſes, ſhall keep one each.

I demand their word of honor from the officers deſtined to execute this capitulation, that no individual of the army ſhall carry away more than what belongs to him. Each ſoldier ſhall keep his ſack, and every cavalier his portmanteau.

IV. The imperial garriſon ſhall be conducted by the ſhortest road to Goufe, in the Friouſ, and ſhall be exchanged by preference for French priſoners of war.—Anſwer. The troops ſhall be conducted to Porto Legnago, Padua, and Treviſo: the exchange ſhall be made as ſoon as poſſible, and the ſeven hundred men carried away by marſhall Wurmſer, ſhall promiſe not to ſerve againſt the French army for three months from hence, dated from the day of this capitulation.

V. The march of the troops ſhall be regulated by French commiſſioners in two columns, and they ſhall not be made to march more than four French leagues a day, on account of the garriſon being weakened by ſickneſs. The French commiſſaries ſhall provide the neceſſary ſubſiſtence for the troops and horſes, and ſhall furniſh the waggons neceſſary to convey thoſe who may fall ill on the road. Anſ. In order not to burden the country too much, and to obtain ſubſiſtence with greater facility, ſeveral days ſhall be occupied in the departure of the columns; each ſhall conſiſt of 1000; and the firſt, which ſhall be particularly compoſed of all the armed troops, ſhall ſet out the day after to-morrow, 4th Feb. Care ſhall be taken to have ſeveral carriages at the head of the columns to convey the ſick. Subſiſtence ſhall be provided for the men and horſes.

VI. The waggons carrying the chancery of the head-quarters and of the troops, as well as the war cheſt, being 47 in number, 23 of which are drawn by two horſes, and the remainder by four horſes, ſhall go out freely, and join the garriſon to proceed to Goufe. Anſwer. Refuſed. A commiſſioner ſhall be charged to inſpect the regiſters or other papers belonging to the chancery; and if they are of no uſe to the army of the French republic, carriages ſhall be furniſhed for carrying them away.

VII. The ſick and wounded ſhall be treated humanely; they ſhall be left in the hoſpitals with the ſurgeons and attendants neceſſary, the number of whom ſhall be fixed; and after their cure they ſhall have the benefit of the articles of capitulation, as well as thoſe whoſe affairs ſhall detain them at Mantua, to whom the neceſſary paſſports ſhall be delivered, as ſoon as their buſineſs ſhall be terminated. Anſ. Granted; and they ſhall experience the ſame lot as the garriſon.

VIII. All the civil officers in the ſervice of his majeſty the emperor ſhall go out freely with their bureaux and chancery and the neceſſary conveyances ſhall be furniſhed them. Anſ. Theſe individuals may go away freely, but the bureaux and chancery ſhall be examined, and remain in the power of the French army, if neceſſary.

IX. The city ſhall be maintained in all its rights, privileges, property and reſiglon; no account shall be taken of the conduct of the citizens who have rendered service to their lawful sovereign. Answer. Granted.

X. Such of the citizens or inhabitants of the city as may wish to retire from Mantua, with their property, into the Hereditary States of his imperial majesty, shall be at one year to sell at their will and freely their possessions, both moveable and immoveable, and the necessary passports shall be granted them. Ans. Granted.

XI. The cannoneers of the city who have served upon the ramparts against the French army, shall not be disturbed for such conduct, having only done their duty, founded upon the constitution of the duchy of Mantua, and they shall return to their own homes. Ans. Granted.

XII. If any doubtful article should be found in the capitulation, which may give rise to disputes, it shall be explained in favor of the garrison. Answer. It shall be discussed and interpreted according to justice.

XIII. Three hours after the signature of the capitulation there shall be surrendered to the French troops an advanced work of the citadel, as far as the first drawbridge and only the French commissioners, and those who may be sent on business by the French commandant of the blockade shall be admitted to enter the place or the citadel. The French army shall not enter the place or the citadel until it shall be evacuated by the imperial garrison. Ans. The citadel shall be wholly given up three hours after the signature of the capitulation; but if it should be too late, it shall be given the next morning at 9 o'clock. All communication shall be prevented between the troops of the respective powers; and the French troops shall occupy the advanced posts of the gates of the city. Only the French commissioners, charged by the general with the operations belonging to them, together with the officers of artillery, and the engineer officers of the plans, charts, &c. which must of necessity be in the city, shall enter the place.

XIV. An officer shall be permitted to proceed to his majesty the emperor, as well as another courier to the general of the Imperial army in the Tyrol, with the capitulation. Ans. Granted—The commissary general shall have a passport to proceed beforehand to the territories of his imperial majesty.

FROM THE GAZ. OF THE UNITED STATES.

Caution to Americans.

IT is currently reported that the French consuls in the United States, in order to arrest famine from the freebooters of St. Domingo, have offered to grant passports to our fellow-citizens to go with provisions to their islands! many of our merchants know by sorrowful experience, that the strongest recommendations given them by the late minister, Mr. Adet, did not save their property, on its arrival at St. Domingo, from the rapacity of the agents of the French republic; who after taking their cargoes without paying for them, informed the supercargoes and masters, that "the powers of the minister were distinct from their's, and that neither he, nor any of the officers of the French republic resident in the United States, had any authority or controul over them, or the measures they might think proper to adopt"—which being told to Mr. Adet, he acknowledged that he had only the power to recommend what he thought most conducive to the interest of the public in those parts.

PHILADELPHIA, April 3.

Yesterday at noon arrived the British frigate Squirrel, of 32 guns, capt. Hardy, in 42 days from Portsmouth, (Eng.) with messrs. M'Donald and Rich, the commissioners appointed on the part of England to consider, adjust and determine the claims of British subjects for debts owing by American citizens previous to the revolution, according to the treaty with Great-Britain. She brings nothing new.

NEW-YORK, April 19

Mr. Williams having presented his commission to the senate of Hamburgh, as Consul of the United States of America, has been formally acknowledged in that capacity.

By an arrival at Boston, from Martinique, we have a confirmation of the late news of the arrival of fresh troops at that island from England, reported to amount to 11,000. It was said that Guadaloupe was to be attacked; but the latest rumor was, of an attempt upon the Spanish island, Porto-Rico.

Apr. 17. A new treaty of commerce is said to have been concluded between Great-Britain and Russia, at Petersburgh, on the 10th Feb. last.

The brig Bayonne, capt. Dongan, arrived here on Friday evening last, from Martinique, capt. D. informs, that at Martinique it was reported and generally believed, that the French have declared war against America.

LONDON, Feb. 11.

Admiral Duncan has received orders to hold himself in readiness to prepare for another cruise in the North Seas: the admiral is to have twelve ships of the line and as many frigates.

On Tuesday last arrived in the river, under the command of lieutenant J. Buthby, the Santa Natolia Spanish merchant ship, captured off Cadiz by the Lively frigate, capt. lord Garlies, commander. She was bound from Omon, in Spanish America, to Cadiz, laden with indigo and dollars, and is said to be the richest prize made during the war, the St. Jago ship only excepted.

The prince of Peace has transmitted a letter to the consul at Cadiz, stating that his majesty has heard with great displeasure by the marine minister, of the scandalous capture of the Spanish merchant frigate, the Vigilant, from Vera Cruz, by an English frigate, within sight of Cadiz, the laden being valued at 300,000 piasters. His majesty expresses himself by no means satisfied with the steps taken by the consul and the marine corps, upon that mortifying occasion, and their neglect to assist the frigate, which was opposed to the English nearly a whole day, within sight of the harbor: his majesty therefore ordered that all the vessels fit for service in that port should be got ready for sea without delay, for the protection of the trade, and that steps should be immediately taken to discover who those persons were that prevented the ships of war from going out to the assistance of the captured vessel, and that their persons be put under arrest till the affair should be properly investigated. But to the proprietor of the captured vessel his majesty grants the extraordinary priviledge of freighting two ships with foreign commodities for Vera Cruz, by way of indemnification, remarking that if the marine had done their duty, he should not have had occasion to depart from the accustomed usages, &c.

February 17.

Authentic intelligence respecting the Austrian army in Italy.

Yesterday morning a messenger arrived at the secretary of states office, from Vienna, with dispatches dated 27th ult.

The official details which had been received by the court of Vienna, relative to the late defeats in Italy, are such as to invalidate still more the accounts of the French generals, in their extent, and to lead us to reflect on our former doubts with some degree of satisfaction.

The losses on both sides had been very great; but that of the Austrians had been diminished, by the return of a great number of troops which had been missing, to their standards.

Much blame had been thrown at Vienna, on general Provera, for the little zeal displayed by him in the conduct of the important operations under his direction.—And when it is considered that he was so near the gates of Mantua, that almost 300 men from the garrison were able to join him, he appears to deserve no small degree of censure.

General Alvingy was to be immediately recalled. This had been determined in the Cabinet of Vienna. His attack on Rivoli miscarried from some of the troops having actually disobeyed his orders and from the treachery of some of his officers, who furnished the French with the plans of the projected attack. Two Austrian officers had been put under arrest, on suspicion of having been guilty of this treatenable act, and their trials were soon expected to take place.

Orders had been given by the emperor—immediately on receiving intelligence of the late misfortunes in Italy, that large reinforcements of troops should march thither; and the arch duke Charles, it was generally believed, was to take upon him the command of the Austrian forces there.

The London Gazette Extraordinary.

Whitehall, February 27.

A letter, of which the following is a copy has been this day received from the right honorable lord Gawdor, by his grace the duke of Portland, his majesty's principal secretary of state for the home department.

Fishguard, Friday, Feb. 24, 1797.

My Lord,

In consequence of having received information on Wednesday night, at 11 o'clock, that three large ships of war and a lugger, had anchored in a small roadsted, upon the coast in the neighborhood of this town, I proceeded immediately, with a detachment of the Cardigan militia, and all the provincial force I could collect, to the place. I soon gained positive intelligence that they had disembarked about 1200 men, but no cannon. Upon the night's sitting in, a French officer, whom I found to be the second in command came in with a letter, a copy of which I have the honor to inclose to your grace, together with my answer; in consequence of which they determined to surrender themselves prisoners of war, and accordingly laid down their arms this day at two o'clock.

I cannot at this moment inform your grace of the exact number of prisoners, but I believe it is to be their whole force:—it is my intention to march them this night to Harverford-west, where I shall make the best distribution in my power. The frigates, corvette, and lugger, got under weigh yesterday evening, and were, this morning entirely out of sight.

The fatigue we have experienced will, I trust, excuse me to your grace for not giving a more particular detail; but my anxiety to do justice to the officers and men I had the honor to command, will induce me to attend your grace, with as little delay as possible, to state their merits, and at the same time, to give you every information upon this subject.

The spirit of loyalty which has pervaded all ranks, throughout this country is infinitely beyond what I can express.

I am, &c. CAWDOR.

Cardigan Bay, 5th of Ventose, 5th year of the republic.

Sir,

The circumstances under which the body of the French troops under my command were landed at this place, rendered it unnecessary to attempt any military operations, as they would tend only to bloodshed and pillage. The officers of the whole corps having therefore intimated their desire of entering into a negociation, upon principles of humanity, for a surrender. If you are influenced by similar confiderations, you may signify the same by the bearer, and, in the mean time, hostilities shall cease

Salut and respect,

TATE, Chief de Brigade.

To the officer commanding his Britannic majesty's troops.

Fishguard, Feb. 23, 1797.

Sir,

The superiority of the force under my command, which is hourly increasing, must prevent my treating upon any terms short of your surrendering the whole force prisoners of war. I am willing unto your with of preventing an unnecessary effusion of blood, which your speedy surrender can alone prevent, and which will entitle you to that confideration it is ever the wish of British troops to shew an enemy, whose numbers are inferior.

My major will deliver you this letter, and I shall expect your determination by 10 o'clock, by your officer, whom I have furnished with an escort, that will conduct him to me without molestation.

CAWDOR.

To the officer commanding the French troops.

On Saturday morning last, failed in the Mohawk, for York, his honor the administrator, and several members of the parliament of this province. On the same day arrived here a deck boat, built and owned by col. John Van Rensselaer of Lansingburgh, on the North River, nine miles above Albany. This enterprizing gentleman, last year built and compleated this and one other of the same bigness (50 barrels burthen,) and conveyed them by high waters to Ofwego, and arrived there without injury, this spring. They are to ply continually between Ofwego and this place and Kingston.

Remarkable death!

Died lately at Hartford in Connecticut, three brothers of the family of Bull; the two elder lived within the city, and the younger about one mile and an half distant; the two former dropped instantly dead within 12 minutes of each other, and the latter in one hour after, and all in apparent health and within their own houses, and neither knowing of the other. Thus in the short space of one hour and a quarter were three brothers and heads of families, in the same order as were their births, removed by sudden and unexpected death!

THE PAPAL TROOPS.

An English gentleman, who lately returned from Rome, was a witness to the army of St. Peter going through their military exercise. They were drawn up rank and file with their arms in their hands, the commanding officer standing in front, and looking with delight at their martial appearance. He drew out his snuff box—one of the men, with much gravity marched out of the ranks, received a pinch—took it—bowed, and fell back in the line. The same ceremony was gone thro' by two others. A German who was present, highly gratified with the easy evolutions, said the late king of Prussia had many enemies—but if any of them wished him to live the greatest punishment that could be inflicted on man, they would pray that he might pass through one of the transmigrations believed by Pythagoras, be turned into a droll serjeant, and exercise the pope's troops for twelve months.

To the Editor of the Upper Canada Gazette.

"Pleasures or recreation of the one kind or other, is absolutely necessary to relieve our minds and our bodies from too constant attention and labor."

SIR,

As the gentlemen in this part of the province are using every exertion to establish annual Horse-Races, and the utility of the institution being doubted by some and fully denied by others, permit me to trouble you with a few observations on the subject.

It must certainly appear very obvious to men of discernment, that annual races will infallibly prove a valuable acquisition to this province—the natural consequences appear to me—an improvement in our breed of horses, which at present is confessedly but very indifferent—a greater circulation of specie, and an intercourse of commerce, friendship and sociality between the people of this province and those in the neighboring parts of the United States.

From the earliest ages of antiquity down to the present period we find that horse racing has been considered as one of the most fashionable amusements, in almost every nation in the world. The ancients, as well as the moderns, know well the benefits which naturally arise from an improved breed of horses—The English had never been renowned for the superlative swiftness and beauty of their race-horses, had they not imported the Arabian breed, together with fame others.

The Americans are now wisely treading in the same foot steps: some of the best horses they possess are transatlantic. In fine, the advantages which will evidently arise from an annual subscription is of such magnitude as ought, and I hope, will excite the attention of every well-wisher to this new province.

I am, &c. AMICUS.

WHEREAS the entering of caveats in the office of the secretary of the province, to prevent the issuing of deeds after they have been duly executed, hath been found inconvenient, and deemed to be otherwise improper—and persons, therefore, who have, or pretend to have any claim to lands in the possession of others, his majesty's subjects, holding under certificate, or order of council, or other authority, will take notice that they must enter caveats in the secretary's office before the making of the deeds, as none will be received after they are executed.

Such persons, therefore, as are ready to establish their claims, will file their caveats in the secretary's office immediately; and that others may be duly apprized of the deeds now about to be made, a list of the names of persons and of the townships where the lands lie is subjoined, and others will be made known in the several subsequent gazettes.

When, therefore, any person perceive names annexed to lots or tracts of land of which they conceive themselves entitled to a grant, they must within one month after the first publication hereof, file their claims in the secretary's office, and give immediate notice to the clerk of the council, and the party against whom they set up their claim.

PRESIDENT's SPEECH

To both houses of Congres, of the United States, at the opening of the extraordinary session the 16th ult.

Gentlemen of the senate and Gentlemen of the house of representives,

THE personal inconveniences to the members of the senate and house of representatives, in leaving their families, and private affairs at this season of the year, are so obvious that I should more regret the extraordinary occasion which has rendered the convention necessary, if it were not indispensable.

It would have afforded me the highest satisfaction to have been able to congratulate you on a restoration of peace to the nations of Europe, whose animosities have endangered our tranquility—But we have still abundant cause of gratitude to the Supreme Dispenser of national blessings, for general health and promising seasons; for domestic and social happiness, for the rapid progress and ample acquisitions of industry, through our extensive territories, and for civil, political and religious liberty; while other states are desolated with foreign war, or convulsed with intestine divisions, the United States present the pleasing prospect of a nation governed by mild and equal laws; generally satisfied with the possession of their rights; neither envying the advantages, nor fearing the power of other nations; solicitous only for the maintenance of good order and justice, and the preservation of liberty; increasing daily in their attachment to a system of government, in proportion to their experience of its utility; yielding a ready and general obedience to laws flowing from the reason, and resting on the only solid foundation, the affections of the people.

It is with extreme regret that I shall be obliged, to turn your thoughts to other circumstances, which admonish us, some of these felicities may not be lasting; but if the tide of our prosperity is full, and a reflux commencing, a vigilant circumspection becomes us, that we may meet our reverses with fortitude, and extricate ourselves from their consequences, with all the skill we possess, and all the efforts in our power.

In giving to congress information of the state of the union, and recommending to their consideration such measures as appear to me to be expedient or necessary, according to my constitutional duty, the causes and the objects of the present extraordinary session will be explained.

After the president of the United States received information, that the French government had expressed serious discontents, at some proceedings of the government of these States, said to effect the interests of France, he thought it expedient to send to that country a new minister, fully instructed to enter on such amicable discussions, as might happily remove the discontents and suspicions of the French government, and vindicate the conduct of the United States. For this purpose he selected from among his fellow-citizens, a character whose integrity, talents, experience, and services, had placed him in the rank of the most esteemed and respected in the nation: The direct object of his mission was expressed in his letter of credence to the French republic, being "to maintain that good understanding, which from the commencement of the alliance had subsisted between the two nations, and to efface unfavorable impressions, banish suspicions, and restore cordiality, which was at once the evidence and pledge of a friendly union." And his instructions were to the same effect, faithfully to represent the disposition of the government, and people of the United States, their dispositions being one, to remove jealousies and obviate complaints by shewing that they were groundless, to restore that mutual confidence which had been so unfortunate, and injuriously impaired, and to explain the relative interests of both countries, and the real sentiments of his own.

A minister thus specially commissioned, it was expected would have proved the instrument of restoring mutual confidence between the two republics, the first step of the French government corresponded with that expectation: a few days before his arrival at Paris, the French minister of foreign relations informed the American minister, then resident at Paris, of the formalities to be observed by himself in taking leave, and by his successor preparitory to his reception. These formalities they observed; and on the 9th of December presented officially to the minister of foreign relations, the one a copy of his letters of recall, the other a copy of his letters of credence. These were laid before the executive directory; two days afterwards the minister of foreign relations informed the recalled American minister, that the executive directory had determined not to receive an other minister plenipotentiary from the United States, until after the redress of the grievances demanded of the American government, and which the French republic had a right to expect from it. The American minister immediately endeavored to ascertain, whether by refusing to receive him, it was intended that he should retire from the territories of the French republic, and verbal answers were given that such were the intentions of the directory. For his own justification, he desired a written answer; but obtained none till towards the last of January when receiving notice in writing to quit the territories of the republic, he proceeded to Amsterdam, where he proposed to wait for instructions from his government. During his residence at Paris, cards of hospitality were refused him, and he was threatened with being subject to the jurisdiction of the minister of police, but with becoming firmness he insisted on the protection of the law of nations, due to him as the known minister of a foreign power. You will derive further information from his dispatches, which will be laid before you.

As it is often necessary that nations should treat, for the mutual advantage of their affairs, and especially to accommodate & terminate differences; and as they can treat only by miniſters, the right of embaſſy is well known and eſtabliſhed, by the law and uſage of nations. The refuſal on the part of France to receive and hear our miniſter, is then the denial of a right: but the refuſal to receive him, until we had acceded to their demands, without diſcuſſion and without inveſtigation, is to treat us neither as allies, nor as friends, nor as a ſovereign ſtate.

With this conduct of the French government it will be proper to take into view the public audience given to the late miniſter of the United States, on his taking leave of the executive directory. The ſpeech of the preſident diſcloſes ſentiments more alarming than the refuſal of a miſtiner, becauſe more dangerous to our independence and union; and at the ſame time ſtudiouſly marked with indignities towards the government of the United States. It evinces a diſpoſition to ſeparate the people of the United States from the government; to perſuade them that they have different affections, principles and intereſts from thoſe of their fellow-citizens, whom they themſelves have choſen to manage their common concerns; and thus to produce diviſions fatal to our peace. Such attempts ought to be repelled, with a deciſion which ſhall convince France and the world, that we are not a degraded people; humiliated under a colonial ſpirit of fear and ſenſe of inferiority; fitted to be the miſerable inſtruments of foreign influence, and regardleſs of national honor, character and intereſt.

I ſhould have been happy to have thrown a veil over theſe tranſactions, if it had been poſſible to conceal them; but they have paſſed on the great theatre of the world in the face of all Europe and America; and with ſuch circumſtances of publicity and ſolemnity that they cannot be diſguiſed and will not ſoon be forgotten: they have inflicted a wound in the American breaſt.

It is my ſincere deſire however that it may be healed. It is my ſincere deſire, and in this I preſume I concur with you and with our conſtituents to preſerve peace and friendſhip with all nations; and believing that neither the honor nor the intereſt of the United States abſolutely forbid the repetition of advances for ſecuring theſe deſirable objects with France. I ſhall inſtitute a freſh attempt at negociation, and ſhall not fail to promote and accelerate an accommodation, on terms compatible with the rights, duties, intereſts and honor of the nation. If we have committed errors, and theſe can be demonſtrated, we ſhall be willing to correct them: if we have done injuries, we ſhall be willing, on conviction to redreſs them. An equal meaſures of juſtice we have a right to expect from France and every other nation.

The diplomatic intercourſe between the United States and France being at preſent ſuſpended the government has no means of obtaining official information from that country; nevertheleſs there is reaſon to believe that the executive directory paſſed a decree on the ſecond of March laſt, contravening in part the treaty of amity and commerce of 1778, injurious to our lawful commerce and endangering the lives of our citizens. A copy of this decree will be laid before you.

Whilſt we are endeavoring to adjuſt all our differences with France, by amicable negociation, the progreſs of the war in Europe, the depredations on our commerce, the perſonal injuries to our citizens and the general complexion of affairs, render it my indiſpenſible duty to recommend to your conſideration effectual meaſures of defence.

The commerce of the United States has become an intereſting object of attention, whether we conſider it in relation to the wealth and finances, or the ſtrength and reſources of the nation. With a ſea-coaſt of nearly two thouſand miles in extent, opening a wide field for fiſheries, navigation and commerce, a great portion of our citizens naturally apply their induſtry and enterprize to theſe objects. Any ſerious and permanent injury to commerce would not fail of producing the moſt embarraſſing diſorders: to prevent it from being undermined and deſtroyed it is eſſential that it receive an adequate protection.

The naval eſtabliſhment muſt occur to every man who conſiders the injuries committed on our commerce, the inſult offered to our citizens and the deſcription of the veſſels by which theſe abuſes have been practiſed. As the ſufferings of our mercantile and ſeafaring citizens, cannot be aſcribed to the omiſſion of duties demandable, conſidering the neutral ſituation of our country, they are to be attributed to the hope of impunity, ariſing from a ſuppoſed inability on our part to afford protection. To reſiſt the conſequences of ſuch impreſſions on the minds of foreign nations, and to guard againſt the degradation and ſervility which they muſt finally ſtamp on the American character, is an important duty of government.

A naval power, next to the militia, is the neutral defence of the United States. The experience of the laſt war, would be ſufficient to ſhow, that a moderate naval force, ſuch as would be eaſily within the preſent abilities of the Union, would have been ſufficient to have baffled many formidable tranſportations of troops from one ſtate to another, which were then practiſed. Our ſea coaſts from their great extent are more eaſily annoyed and more eaſily defended by a naval force than any other. With all the materials our country abounds: in ſkill our naval architects and navigators are equal to any: and commanders and ſeamen will not be wanting.

But, although the eſtabliſhment of a permanent ſyſtem of naval defence, appears to be requiſite, I am ſenſible it cannot be formed ſo ſpeedily and extenſively as the preſent criſis demands. Hitherto, I have thought proper to prevent the failing of armed veſſels, except on voyages to the Eaſt-Indies, where general uſage and the danger from pirates appeared to render the permiſſion proper: Yet the reſtrictions has originated ſolely from a wiſh to prevent colliſions with the powers at war, contravening the act of congreſs of June, one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety-four, and not from any doubt entertained by me of the policy and propriety of permitting our veſſels to employ means of defence, while engaged in a lawful foreign commerce. It remains for congreſs to preſcribe ſuch regulations as will enable our ſeafaring citizens to defend themſelves againſt violations of the law of nations and at the ſame time reſtrain them from committing acts of hoſtilites againſt the powers at war. In addition to this voluntary proviſion for the defence by individual citizens, it appears to me neceſſary, to equip the frigates and provide other veſſels of inferior force to take under convoy ſuch merchant veſſels as ſhall remain unarmed.

The greater part of the cruiſers whoſe depredations have been moſt injurious, have been built, and ſome of them partially equipped in the United States. Although an effectual remedy may be attended with difficulty, yet I have thought it my duty to preſent the ſubject generally to your conſideration. If a mode can be deviſed, by the wiſdom of congreſs to prevent the reſources of the United States from being converted into the means of annoying our trade, a great evil will be prevented. With the ſame view I think it proper to mention that ſome of our citizens reſident abroad have fitted out privateers and others have voluntarily taken the command, or entered on board of them, and committed hoſtilities on the commerce of the United States. Such unnatural and iniquitous practices can be reſtrained only by ſevere puniſhments.

But beſides, a protection of our commerce on the ſeas, I think it highly neceſſary to protect it at home where it is collected in our moſt important ports. The diſtance of the United States from Europe, and the well known promptitude, order and courage of the people in defence of their country, happily diminiſh the probability of invaſion: nevertheleſs to guard againſt ſudden and predatory incurſion, the ſituation of ſome of our principal fraports demands your conſideration. And as our country is vulnerable in other intereſts, beſides thoſe of its commerce, you will ſeriouſly deliberate, whether the means of general defence ought not to be increaſed by an addition to the regular artillery and cavalry, and by arrangements for forming a provisional army.

With the ſame view, and as a meaſure, which even in a time of univerſal peace, ought not to be neglected, I recommend to your conſideration a revision of the laws for regulating, arming and diſciplining the militia, to render that natural and firſt defence of the country efficacious.

Although it is very true that we ought not to involve ourſelves in the political ſyſtem of Europe, but to keep ourſelves always diſtinct and ſeparate from it, if we can; yet to effect this ſeparation early, punctual and cautious information of the current changes of events and of the political projects in contemplation is no leſs neceſſary than if we intended to be concerned in them. However we may conſider ourſelves, in our maritime and commercial powers, the nations of Europe will conſider the United States of America as forming a weight in that balance of power in Europe which never can be forgotten or neglected. It would not only be againſt our intereſt, but it would be doing wrong to one half of Europe, at leaſt if we ſhould voluntarily throw ourſelves into either ſcale. It is a natural policy for a nation that ſtudies to be neutral, to connect with other nations engaged in long wars, alliances and purſuits. At the ſame time that meaſures might be purſued with this view, our treaties with Pruſſia and Sweden, one of which is expired and the other near expiring might be renewed.

Gentlemen of the houſe of repreſentatives,

It is particularly your province to conſider the ſtate of the public finances, and to adopt ſuch meaſures reſpecting them as exigences ſhall be found to require. The preſervation of public credit, the regular extinguiſhment of the public debt, and a proviſion of funds to defray any extraordinary expences, will of courſe claim your ſerious attention. Although the impoſition of new burthens cannot be, in itſelf, agreeable, yet there is no ground to doubt that the American people will expect from you, ſuch meaſures as their actual engagements, their preſent ſecurity, and future intereſts, demand.

Gentlemen of the ſenate and

Gentlemen of the houſe of repreſentatives,

The preſent ſituation of our country, impoſes an obligation on all the departments of government to adopt explicit and decided conduct. In my ſituation an expoſition of the principles by which my adminiſtration will be governed, ought not to be omitted.

It is impoſſible to conceal from ourſelves or the world, what has been before obſerved, that endeavors have been employed to ſever and eſtabliſh a diviſion between the government and the people of the United States. To inveſtigate the cauſes which have encouraged this attempt is not neceſſary. But to reject by decided and united councils, meaſures ſo derogatory to the honor, and oppreſſive in dangerous to the conſtitution, union, and even independence of the nation, is an indiſpenſible duty.

It muſt not be permitted to be doubted, whether the people of the United States, will ſupport the government eſtabliſhed by their voluntary conſent and appointed by their free choice; or whether by ſurrendering their conſtitution to the direction of foreign and domeſtic factions in oppoſition to their own government, they will forfeit the honorable ſtation they have hitherto maintained.

For myſelf, having never been indifferent to what concerned the intereſt of my country, devoted the beſt part of my life to obtain and ſupport its independence and conſtantly witneſſed the patriotiſm, valor and perſeverance of my fellow citizens on the moſt trying occaſions, it is not for me to heſitate or abandon a cauſe in which my heart has been ſo long engaged.

Convinced that the conduct of the government has been juſt and impartial to foreign nations; that their internal regulation which have been eſtabliſhed by law for the preſervation of peace, are in their nature proper, and that they have been fairly executed; nothing will ever be done by me to impair the national engagements; to innovate upon principles which have been ſo deliberately and uprightly eſtabliſhed; or to ſurrender in any manner the rights of the government. To enable me to maintain this declaration, I rely, under God, with entire confidence, on the firm and enlightened ſupport of the National Legiſlature, and upon the virtue and patriotiſm of my fellow citizens.

EDINBURGH, March 7.

To morrow, there is to be an iſſue of Spaniſh dollars, to which will be affixed the Tower mark, & they are worth only 4s. 8d.; but it is thought that this will prevent hoarding, and the Bank engage to take them afterwards for a crown.

The maritime hiſtory of Great Britain does not exhibit ſo glorious a conqueſt as that which the clear, unaffuming, and ſimple narrative in a letter from ſir John Jervis, announces.

This gallant admiral, with only 15 ſhips of the line, purſuing, bringing to action, 27 Spaniſh line of battle ſhips, and capturing four of them!

In the houſe of commons, on Friday, Mr. Dundas moved, "That the thanks of this houſe be given to ſir John Jervis, knight of the bath, for the briliant and deciſive victory obtained on the 14th of February, by the fleet under his command."

Mr. Fox ſeconded the motion. He ſaid, this was the moſt brilliant exploit ever performed by the Britiſh navy.

WEST-NIAGARA, June 14.

York, June 6,

This day at one o'clock, his honor the preſident came down to the legiſlative council, in the uſual ſtate, and being ſeated on the throne was pleaſed to make the following ſpeech to the two houſes of legiſlature:—

Honorable gentlemen of the legiſlative council, and gentlemen of the houſe of aſſembly,

HIS Majeſty having been pleaſed to appoint me to adminiſter this government in the abſence of the lieutenant-governor, who is employed upon a very important ſervice in a diſtant quarter; I have called you together, in obedience to the directions of the act that conſtitutes the province, to deliberate upon ſuch matters as your wiſdom may ſuggeſt to be immediately neceſſary to its welfare.

The late provincial parliament made ſo ample a proviſion for the ſecurity and happineſs of his majeſty's ſubjects, that, perhaps, but few objects (coming ſtrictly within this deſcription) remain for your conſideration, except what may ariſe from local circumſtances: of theſe I am to recommend to your early attention the regulating a commercial intercourſe between Upper-Canada, and the United States of America, which was omitted to be provided for in the laſt ſeſſion of the legiſlature. I ſhall for this purpoſe direct a copy of the treaty of amity, commerce and navigation concluded between his majeſty and the United States of America to be laid before you; together with one of an explanatory article, to be added to, and made part of it, which was ſigned at Philadelphia on the 4th of May, in the laſt year, and has been ſince ratified by his majeſty and the preſident of the United States. To theſe I have thought proper to add a copy of the order of the governor in council of the 7th of July laſt, for regulating the commerce between Lower-Canada and the United States, that you may adopt ſuch parts thereof as you ſhall ſee expedient.

The many reciprocal advantages which the inhabitants of Upper Canada and their neighbors of the United States may derive from this treaty, are too obvious to render it neceſſary for me to recommend ſuch a liberality in your arrangements for carrying it into effect, as may tend to conciliate and preſerve the moſt perfect good underſtanding and harmony between the two countries.

There will likewiſe be ſubmitted to your conſideration the copy of a proviſional agreement concluded by the commiſſioners from this province with thoſe of Lower-Canada, on the 28th of laſt January, for aſcertaining this province's proportion of the revenues collected therein, and regulating an equitable mode of payment.—The principles on which this agreement has been framed will be beſt explained to you by the commiſſioners themſelves, in their report.

Gentlemen of the houſe of aſſembly,

I ſhall give directions for the accounts of the provincial revenue of the crown to be laid before you, by which you will obſerve that the amount of the duties received on tavern, retail liquor and ſtill licenſes, ſo far from keeping pace with the increaſing population of the province, have fallen ſhort of that of thoſe in the preceeding year.—Should the cauſes of the defalcation be removable, I hope you may be able to trace them to their ſources, and apply an efficient remedy.

Honorable gentlemen of the legiſlative council, and gentlemen of the houſe of aſſembly,

I have it incommand from his majeſty to inform you that hoſtilities have taken place between Great-Britain and Spain: that having this notice you may take care on the one hand to prevent any miſchief which you might otherwiſe ſuffer from the Spaniards; and, on the other, you may do your utmoſt in your ſeveral ſtations to diſtreſs and annoy them.—Having every reaſon therefore to be upon your guard againſt the machinations of powerful and reſtleſs enemies, from whoſe miſchievous ſchemes no diſtance can promiſe ſecurity, it becomes my duty to direct your attention to the making ſuch proviſions for the excluſion of alien enemies from theſe parts of his majeſty's dominions as the importance of the ſubject may require: and that the executive government may be able to aſcertain the internal ſtrength of the province, and employ it as emergency may ſuggeſt.—Some amendments to your militia laws may probably be found neceſſary.

(The addreſſes of both houſes, in answer to the above, are unavoidably poſtponed until our next.)

Norfolk, (Vir.) May 1.

Saturday arrived, the ſchooner Friendſhip, capt. Harris 26 days from St. Bartholemews, who informs, that an American ſchr. fitted out at Baltimore, with 12 guns and 50 men, on or about the 25th of March, fell in with a French privateer to the windward of Antigua, called La Mere Patrie of 10 guns and 65 men—The privateer ordered the captain of the American ſchr. to heave too and ſend his boat on board, and the veſſel's papers; this was refuſed: in conſequence of which, the privateer fired two broadſides into her: the American ſailors, enraged at the conduct of the privateer, fired two broadſides in return, which killed the capt. lieut. doctor and 15 men.—The privateer then dropped her ſails and ſtruck her colors, but the Americans refuſed to take poſſeſſion of her; obſerving, however, an American prize brig to windward, ſhe ſtood for her, retook her, and brought her into Antigua—the was from Norfolk bound to Amaigua, with a cargo of corn and flour. The French privateer went into St. Bartholomew's, where ſhe got a new captain, and proceeded again to ſea. She has ſince captured a New Haven brig, from Martinique, bound home, with 100 hogſheads of moloſſes, and ſent her to Guadaloupe.

The prince of Brazil's preſent to Sir J. Jervis's fleet at Liſbon, for a Chriſtmas dinner, conſiſted of 100 oxen, 400 ſheep, 100 hogs, 28 calves, 300 turkeys, 600 fowls and ducks, 56 pipes of wines, half carcavello, 28 cheſts of ſugar, 20 cheſts of tea—14 arrobes of chocolate, and as much vegetables and fruts as they pleaſe to accept.—The above preſent was valued at 7000l.

From the Indian Apollo, —Calcutta, Dec. 25.

"The American ſhip the Paragon, capt. Dean, has ſailed within theſe few days from hence for Europe.

"The Paragon is the laſt of the American ſhips cleared out from India, for Europe. This regulation is founded on an article in the late treaty of amity between England and the United States, which prohibits American ſhips, trading to the Eaſt-Indies, from carrying their cargoes to Europe; a regulation, which it is thought will be beneficial in its effect to both countries. To Great-Britain it will be advantageous, by preventing Indian produce being carried to Europe in American bottoms, from which England will continue to poſſeſs a large proportion of this trade: and at the ſame time the revenue of the United States will be increaſed by the receipt of duties on Indian cargoes, wich formerly found their way immediately to Europe."

The William, Strong, of Portland, being taken by a French privateer, two officers and ſix men were put on board to conduct her into port. The Americans finding a favorable opportunity for the recovery of their property, roſe upon the Frenchmen, and in the enſuing ſtruggle, the two officers were killed. The next day the was again taken by another French privateer, and carried into Porto-Rico. It was ſuppoſed the Americans would be hanged.

The Edenburgh article we have given this week appears in Cobbett's gazette, publiſhed in Philadelphia, cloſed with the following remark of the editor of that paper:—

"Thus then, we ſee the account of ſir John Jervis's victory confirmed, with all its honorable circumſtances, in the fulleſt and moſt indubitable way."

"That the gambling Charles Fox ſhould ſecond the motion of thanks adds no value to it certainly; but as he is one of the oracles of the ſans-culotte papers in this country, I hope his declaring the exploit to be the moſt brilliant ever performed by the Britiſh navy, will at length reconcile them to it. I know well, that the doſe goes againſt their patriotic ſtomachs; but, as it muſt be ſwallowed firſt or laſt, they may gulp it down at once.

PARIS, April 7.

ARMY OF ITALY.

Buonaparte, commander in chief of the army of Italy, to the executive directory.

Head Quarters at Valvasone, March 17.

Since the battle of Rivoli, citizen directors, the army of Italy occupied the banks of the Piave and Lavis: the emperor's army commanded by prince Charles, occupied the other bank of the Piave, had its centre behind the Cordevole, and supported its right on the Adiege, from the side of Salurne.

On the 10th Ventose in the morning, the division of gen. Massena repaired to Falitre; at his approach the enemy evacuated the line of Gordevole, and marched to Belluno.

Gen. Serrurier's division advanced to Asols amidst the most horrible weather: but wind and rain on the eve of a battle, have always been an omen of success to the army of Italy.

On the 12th at day break, the division crossed the Pieve, and facing the village of Vider; notwithstanding the rapidity and depth of the water, we only lost a young drummer. The chief of the squadron Lasalles at the head of the detachment of cavalry, and the adjutant gen. Le Clerc, at the head of the 21st light infantry, worsted the hostile corps which wanted to oppose our passage and advanced rapidity to St. Salvador; but the enemy, at the first news of the passage, were afraid of being surrounded and evacuated their camp of Le Campanu.

Gen. Guieux, at two o'clock in the afternoon, passed the Piave at Aspeladetto, and arrived in the evening at Coueglianor.

Our cavalry, in the course of that day, encountered several times that of the enemy; had always the advantage, and took 80 hussars.

On the 13th gen. Guieux, with his division, arrived at Sacile, fell on the enemy's rear guard, and notwithstanding the darkness of the night, took 100 prisoners from them. A corps of Hulans wanted to capitulate. Citizen Stabeck, chief of the squadron, was killed, and general Dugna, slightly wounded.

At the same time, gen. Massena's division having reached Celiume, pursued the enemy, who had retreated to Cadore, hemmed in their rear-guard, took 700 prisoners, among whom were 100 hussars, a colonel and gen. Lufignan having disgraced himself in his conduct towards our sick at Brescia, I gave orders to conduct him to France, without being exchanged.

On the 16th gen. Guieux's division set out from Pardepone, at five o'clock in the morning, that of gen Serrurier left Pasiano at four, both directing their march to Valvasone.

Gen. Guieux's division passed beyond Valvasone, and arrived on the banks of the Tagliamento at eleven o'clock in the morning. The hostile army was entrenched on the opposite side of the river, of which it pretended to dispute the passage. My aide de camp, the chief of squadron Croisier, went at the head of twenty-five guides to reconnoitre it as far as the entrenchment, and was received with grape shot. Gen. Bernadotte's division arrived at noon. I immediately gave orders to gen Guieux to march to the left, in order to cross the river on the right of the enemy's entrenchments, under the protection of 12 pieces of artillery. General Bernadotte was to cross on the right; both divisions formed their battalion of grenadiers ranged themselves in order of battle, having each half a brigade of light infantry before them, supported by two battalions of grenadiers, and flanked by the cavalry. The light infantry manœuvred as riflemen. gen. Dammertin on the left, and gen. Depinasse on the right, made their artillery advance, and a brisk cannonade was opened. I gave orders for every half-brigade to file off to a close column on the wings of the second, and of their first and third battalions.

Gen. Dupot, at the head of the 29th light infantry, threw himself into the river, and presently gained the oppoite bank. Gen. Bon supported him with the grenadiers of Guieux's division. The whole line put itself in motion, each half-brigade en echelon, with squadrons of cavalry to fill up the empty spaces from behind. The hostile cavalry wanted several times to charge our infantry, but without success: the river was crossed, and the enemy was routed in every direction. They attempted to assail our right with their cavalry, and our left with their infantry. I sent gen. Dugna, and the adjutant-general Killermann, at the head of the cavalry of reserve, assisted by our infantry, commanded by the adjutant-general Mireur; we worried the enemy's cavalry, and took prisoner the gen. commanding them.

Guieux ordered the village of Cradisca to be attacked, and notwithstanding the darkness of the night, he captured it, and completely routed the enemy; prince Charles had just time enough left to save himself.

Gen. Serrurier's division passed the river in proportion as it arrived, and ranged itself in battle array to serve as a corps of reserves. In that day we took from the enemy six pieces of cannon, one gen. several superior officers, and made from 4 to 500 prisoners. The quickness of our display and manœuvre, and the superiority of our artillery, alarmed the enemy to such a degree, that they would not make a stand, and profited by the night to take flight.

The adjutant-gen. Killermann received several cuts with the sabre in charging at the head of the cavalry with his usual courage. I am going to occupy myself in rewarding the officers who distinguished themselves in the different actions.

General Buonaparte to the executive directory.

Head quarters, at Gradisca, 20th March.

" Citizen directors.

" I have given you an account of the paſſage of the Piave, of the battle of Longara, of Sacile and Tagliamento.

The 18th, the diviſion of general Bernadotte departed at 3 o'clock in the morning, marched round Palvano, and took poſition on the torrent of the Torre where the huſſars met him.

The diviſion of gen. Serrurier took poſition on the right, that of gen. Guieux on the left. I ſent citizen Laſelle, with the 24th regiment of chaſſeurs, to Udine.

The enemy at our approach evacuated Palmona, where were found 30,000 rations of bread, &c. It was but 10 days before that prince Charles ſeized that place from the Venetians; he wiſhed to occupy it; but he had not had time to eſtabliſh himſelf there.

Gen. Maſſena arrived at St. Daniel, at Oſopo, at Gemona, and puſhed his advanced guards into the defiles.

The 29th, gen. Bernadotte, advanced and blocked up Gradiſca; gen. Serrurier marched oppoſite St. Pietro, for the purpoſe of paſſing the Iſonzo. The enemy had ſeveral pieces of cannon and ſome battalions on the other ſide, for defending the paſſage.—I ordered different manœuvres to alarm the enemy, and the paſſage was effected without oppoſition,

I cannot forget the trait of courage of citizen Androſſy, chief of brigade of artillery who, ordered to try whether the river was fordable, precipitated himſelf into the water, and paſſed and repaſſed on foot.

Paſſage of l'Iſonzo and capture of Gradiſca.

Gen'l. Serrieur reached Gradiſca, by his march upon the heights which govern this town.

To make a diverſion, and to preclude the enemy from the diſcovery of our manœuvre, Gen. Bernadotte cauſed the riflemen to attack them in their entrenchments; but our ſoldiers, impelled by their natural ardor, advanced with their fixed bayonets to the very walls of Gradiſca. They were there received by a heavy diſcharge of muſquetry & grape ſhot. Gen'l. Bernadotte, obliged to ſupport them, bro't forward 4 pieces of cannon to force the gates, but they were detended by a fleche well entrenched.

Gen. Serrurier, in the mean time, arrived upon the heights which commanded Gradiſca, rendering every means of retreat impoſſible. The enemy, panic ſtruck, ſaw no poſſibility of defence, and deſpaired of making their eſcape. Gen Bernadotte preſented the ſummons ſubjoined, when the enemy capitulated.

Five thouſand priſoners, the flower of prince Charles' army, ten pieces of cannon and 8 ſtandards were the fruits of this manœuvre. We at the ſame time paſſed l'Iſonzo, and took Gradiſca.

The diviſion of gen. Bernadotte conduéted itſelf with that gallantry which guarantees our future ſucceſs. Gen. Bernadotte himſelf, his aid-de-camp and generals braved every difficulty and danger. I ſolicit the rank of general of brigade for adjutant-general Mireur.

Gen. Bernadotte to the Auſtrian commander of Gradiſca.

Head-quarters, Gradiſca, Mar. 19.

" You have defended yourſelf, ſir, like a brave man, and by your conduct you have acquired the eſteem of ſoldiers. But any further obſtinacy would be a crime which I would make fall on you principally; and for the purpoſe of juſtifying myſelf to poſterity, I now ſummon you to ſurrender in ten minutes. If you refuſe, I will put your troops to the ſword. Spare blood! The principles of philanthropy which ought to annuate a chief, impoſe on you this obligation. The ſcales are prepared, and the grenadiers and chaſſeurs demand the aſſault with loud cries.

" I am, with eſteem, the general of diviſion. Bernadotte."

Battle of Caſaſola.

The diviſion of Gen. Maſſena, carrying the firſt of la Chiſa, encountering the enemy, who wiſhed to diſpute the paſſage of the bridge of Caſaſola. The riflemen forced the enemy to fall back, and immediately after the grenadiers of the 32d and 57th demi brigade, in cloſe columns, forced the bridge, beating the enemy, notwithſtanding their entrenchments and chevaux de friſe, purſuing them even to Pontieba, taking ſix hundred priſoners, all belonging to the regiments lately bro't from the Rhine. All the magazines which the enemy poſſeſſed on this ſide became alſo our property. The rangers of the 10th reg't with ſword in hand, ruſhed forward into the enemy's entrenchment, and have conſequently new claims to the eſteem of the army. Buonaparte.

Buonaparte to the executive directory.

Head-quarters, Goritz, March 22.

Citizen directors,

We entered yeſterday into Goritz. The enemy's army have effected their retreat with ſo much precepitation, that it has left in our hands 4 hoſpitals, containing 15,000 ſick, and all the magazines of proviſions and warlike ammunition, of which I will give you an account by the next courier.

The diviſion of gen. Bernadotte went yeſterday to Camiza; his advanced guard and the rear-guard of the enemy have had a rencontre at Carminia. The 19th regiment of chaſſeurs charged the enemy with ſo much impetuoſity, that they made 15 haſſars priſoners with their horſes. General Maſſena purſued the enemy to La Pontieba.

" Head-quarters, Goritz, 4 Germinal, 24 March.

" Citizen Directors,

" You will find ſubjoined an account of articles we have found in Goritz.—I will ſend to you by the next courier, an account of thoſe we have found in Trieſte.

" We are maſters of the celebrated mines of d'Yduia; we have there found ſubſtance prepared for two millions. We are placing it in the waggons, and if this operation ſucceeds without any accident, it will be very uſeful to our finances. Buonaparte."

Buonaparte to the Executive Directory.

" Head quarters, Goritz, March 24

Citizen Directors,

" Gen. Gieux, with his diviſion, went on the 22 to Cividale at Caporetto; he there encountered the enemy entrenched at Puiero, attacked them, and took from them 2 pieces of cannon and 100 priſoners, and purſued them into the defiles of Caporetto in the Auſtrian Chiuſe, and left the field of battle covered with Auſtrians.

" Gen. Maſſena with his diviſion is at Tarvis. I have therefore reaſon to hope that the 2000 men whom general Gieux has puſhed before him, will fall into the diviſion of Meſſena.

" The gen. of Diviſion, Dugna entered Triſtie laſt night. Buonaparte."

Buonaparte, commander in chief of the army of Italy, to the executive directory.

" Head-quarters at Goritz, March 25.

" Citizen Directors.

" I gave you an account by my laſt courier, that a column of the army of prince Charles was hemmed in between gen. Meſſenna, who was at Tarvis and that of general Gulieux, who won arriving at Caporetto, puſhed it into the defiles.

Battle of Tarvis.

General Meſſena being arrived at Tarvis, was attacked by a diviſion of the enemy, which left Clagenfurth, and came to the aſſiſtance of the diviſion that was hemed in. After a conflict extremely obſtinate, he put it to the route, and took a vaſt number of priſoners, among whom are three generals. The emperor's cuiraſſiers, who arrived from the Rhine, have ſuffered moſt ſeverely.

Encagement of La Chiuſe.

" Meanwhile gen. Gulieux drove the column which he had defeated to Puſero, as far as the Auſtrian Chiuſe, a poſt extremely well entrenched, but which was carried by aſſault after a very obſtinate engagement, in which gen. Don Verdier and and the fourth half brigade, as well as the 43d, particularly diſtinguiſhed themſelves. Gen. Kables himſelf defended the Chiuſe with 500 grenadiers. By the laws of war theſe 500 men ought to have been put to the ſword, but this barbarous right has always been diſclaimed, and never exerciſed by the French army.

The hoſtile column ſeeing the Chiuſe taken, precipitated its march, and fell into our hands. I am eager to apprife you of this event, becauſe under the preſent circumſtances it is indiſpenſable that you ſhould be informed of every thing without delay. I reſerve it to give you a more detailed account of all theſe events as ſoon as every moment ſhall be leſs precious.

" The chain of the Alps, which parts France and Switzerland from Italy, ſeparates the Italian part of Tyrol from the German part, Venitian States from the dominions of the Emperor, and Carinthia from the country of Goritz and Gradiſca. The diviſion of Meſſena has croſſed the Italian Alps. Our enemies were ſo aukward as to enthral all their baggage and part of the army by the Noric Alps, who were that moment taken. The engagement of Tarvis was fought above the clouds, on the height which commands Germany, in ſeveral parts to which our line extended, the ſnow lay three feet deep, and the cavalry, charging on the ice, ſuffered accidents, the reſult of which were extremely fatal to the enemy's cavalry. BUONAPARTE.

VIENNA, March 25.

The information received from Italy is by no means favorable. The French have attacked the Auſtrian lines in Venetian Friul, which bro't on a bloody conteſt, in which a number of men were loſt on both ſides.—The Auſtrians were obliged to leave their advantageous poſition after the French had been four times repulſed, but returned with freſh troops which compelled the imperialiſts to retire behind the river Lizonza, the French, then entered Udine, threatened Palma, Nuova, and even Trieſte.—Two Auſtrian generals are made priſoners, and two ſquadrons of huſſars nearly cut in pieces.

Nothing could equal the courage of the Auſtrians in general, except that of the archduke himſelf, who was expoſed to the moſt imminent danger. Two French huſſars were in a few paces of him, who being obſerved by ſome of the archduke Joſeph's huſſars; they flew to his reliſf, and cut down the French huſſars, and thus ſaved the prince; but the moſt unpleaſant circumſtance is, that at preſent the general can no longer receive any reinforcements immediately from the Rhine through the Tyrolian country.

The circumſtance of the archduk's being attacked on the ſame day on which he intended to have attacked the enemy, has given riſe to a number of ſpeculations.

COLOGNE, March 28.

There is no doubt but the campaign will open ſoon, and with unprecedented energy. The army of the Sambre and Meuſe will be augmented to near 100,000 men, 40,000 of whom will be charged to beſiege Mentz and Ehtenbreitſtein.

ITALY, March 8.

On the ſame day, (Feb. 9) on which Buonaparte & the envoys from the pope ſigned the treaty of peace at Tolentino, cardinal Matthia ſent the following letter, by a courier, to M. Buteu, the papal ſecretary of ſtate —

" Peace is ſigned, but the conditions beyond expreſſion rigorous, and reſſemble more the exactions of a beſieged city than a treaty of peace. This conqueror himſelf has more than once confeſſed; and to this moment have I trembled for the holy father, for Rome, and for the ſtate. Rome and our religion are now, however, ſaved by the greateſt ſacrifices that have ever been made."

Accordingly on the 22d, the papal envoys returned, and the next day the peace was ratified by the pope and the college of cardinals, and the ratification ſent to Paris.

March 27. According to various letters from Germany and Italy, the archduke has tranſmitted to the court of Vienna freſh propoſals of peace, and extremely moderate, which the executive directory of the French republic have made thro' the medium of gen. Buonaparte to count Wurmſer. It is even ſaid, that Buonaparte and the archduke, ſupport their propoſals with the whole weight of their authority. They may be aſſured, that by ſuch an act they will deſerve well of humanity.

(Gazette Hiſtorique.)

March 26. We are aſſured that a conference for peace has taken place between general Clarke and the marquis de Luchefini.

Letters from Bayonne mention, that the Engliſh have taken 9 Spaniſh veſſels richly laden, 3 of which were bro't into Gibralter, and 6 into Liſbon. One of the veſſels was from Manilla with a valuable cargo of muſlins.

WEST-NIAGARA, June 28.

It is reported that gen. Simcoe has lately obtained a ſignal victory over the French at St. Domingo, killing and making upwards of 5,000 priſoners.

Authentic advivices are received at Philadelphia, of the blockade of the port of Cadiz, by admiral Jarvis, with a fleet of twelve ſail of the line, and 6 frigates.

Buonaparte, it is ſaid, complained of the partiality which the Venetian republic diſcovered to the Auſtrians, and threatened to attack their territories. To obtain the privilege of being treated as a neutral power, that ſtate has conſented to pay a million chequins, equal to 2,100,000 dollars, to the French.

At Rome, on the 4th March all the gold and ſilver plate that could be ſpared, was to be carried to the mint within the ſpace of three days. Fifty-nine waggons, laden with a millions of Roman crowns, (2,444,444 dollars) and 50 ſaddle horſes had been ſent from thence to Foligno, and delivered to the chief treaſurer of the French army. An inſurrection had taken place in ſome towns of the duchy of Urbino, and the mark of Ancona, having for its object the union of thoſe places with the Ciſpaden republic.—Gen. Buonaparte we are aſſured, is advancing at the head of 60,000 men to attack the Germans on all ſides.

Of the United States.

The papers received furniſh us with no correct details of the proceedings of congreſs. The debates they preſent us are continuances lengthy, animated and firm.

The ſenate, in their addreſs to the preſident, ſtrongly expreſs a wiſh for continued peace, an approbation of meaſures taken by the executive, and flatter themſelves that the proceedings of the preſent congreſs will manifeſt to the world, that although the United States love peace, they will be independent; that they are ſincere in their declarations to the French, and other nations and expect the ſame in return; But if they are ſo unfortunate as to experience injuries from any foreign power, and the ordinary methods of amicably adjuſting differences be rejected, the determination not to ſurrender in any manner, the rights of government being ſo inſeparably connected with the dignity, intereſt and independence of their country, mall, by them, be inviolably ſupported.

In the houſe of repreſentatives, when the addreſs to the preſident (very ſimilar to that of the ſenate) was reported, Mr. Nicholas propoſed an amendment by the addition of paragraphs expreſſive of their ſolicitude to preſerve peace; that the diſmiſſal of their miniſter has excited a warm ſenſibility; yet the houſe apprehends that France only intends thereby to ſuſpend the ordinary diplomatic intercourſe, and to bring into operation thoſe extraordinary agencies which are in common uſe between nations, and which are confined in their intention to the great cauſes of their differences; that they receive with infinite ſatisfaction the information that a freſh attempt at negociation will be inſtituted. The principal cauſe of delate is the concluding clauſe, and we expect with confidence that a mutual ſpirit of conciliation on the part of the United States to place France on the footing of other countries, by removing the inequalities which may have ariſen in the operation of our reſpective treaties with them, will produce an accomodation with the engagements, rights, duties and honor of the United States.

Mr. Smith, (S. C.) very warmly contended againſt the amendment; he objected to every thing that carried with it humiliation on their part, or palliation on the part of the French, and concluded his very lengthy ſpeech, that " while he was diſpoſed to negociate, and to prove that Americans are not a parcel of merchants who will ſuffer themſelves to be kicked and trampled on rather than part with their money; they will ſee that we do not carry an erect countenance with a timid heart; he hopped we would call up all our reſources, lay taxes and prepare for defence, and then when the government of France ſee that they have been deceived by traitors to both countries, and cannot extort conceſſions from us, they will negociate; I hope we ſhall not tell them we are a weak people; we have reſources and France know it; and if called into effect ſuch as would ſeverely cripple her operations; thank God we are ſeparated by the Atlantic—on our ground we can meet them—but there is a length beyond which we cannot bear nor go.

The amendment was rejected 52 to 46.

Francis Dana, eſq. chief juſtice of Maſſachuſetts, Wm. Marſhall, eſq. attorney of the diſtrict of Virginia, and gen. Pinckney are appointed commiſſioners to the French republic, to effect an adjuſtment of exiſting difficulties between the two nations.

The following are the injuries ſuffered by the United States from the French, as ſtated in the report of the ſecretary of ſtate to congreſs:—

1ſt. Spoliations and maltreatment of their veſſels at ſea, by French ſhips of war and privateers.

2d. A diſtreſſing, and long continued embargo laid upon their veſſels at Bourdeaux in the years 1793 and 1794.

3d. The non payment of bills and other evidences of debts due, drawn by the colonial adminiſtration in the Weſt-Indies.

4th. The ſeizure or forced ſales of the cargoes of their veſſels, and appropriating them to public uſe, without paying for them, or paying inadequately, or delaying payment for a length of time.

5th. The non performance of contracts made by the agents for the government ſupplies.

6th. The condemnation of their veſſels and cargoes under ſuch of the marine ordinances of France as are incompatible with the treaties ſubſiſting between the two countries; and

7th. The captures ſanctioned by a decree of the national convention of the 9th of May, 1793, which in violation of the treaty of amity and commerce, declared enemy's goods on board of their veſſels, lawful prizes, and directed the French ſhips of war and privateers to bring into port, neutral veſſels laden with proviſions and bound to an enemy's port.

Decollation of Louis XVI.

The different Paris papers ſpeak as follows of the feaſt of the 21ſt of January, (the anniverſary of the beheading of the king)—The Redacteur (the official gazette of the republic) calls it a painful commemoration; Perlet calls it ſcandalous; Roederer, immoral; the Grandeur, ſavage; L'Eclair, regicide; the Miroir, cannibalic; Dupont de Neimous, impolitic; La Quotidienne, pretends to have ſeen, during the feaſt, the ghoſt of Louis XVI. walking about, holding in one hand a thunderbolt, and in the other the horn of plenty. It is ſaid, that during the feaſt, Cannot had played a melancholy air; Barras beat time; Lareveille ſmiled; Rowbell was very gay; Letourneur was dreaming about a new expedition to Ireland; Benezech made bows to the very ground; Legarde was counting his money. It is further aſſerted, that no one cried either vive la executif! or, vive la republique!

VOLUME III.] G. R. [NUMBER 37.

Upper Canada Gazette; or, American Oracle.

WEST-NIAGARA: Printed by G. TIFFANY. ——Wedneſday, JULY 5, 1797.

The following important Letter is copied from the documents referred to in the preſident's ſpeech to both houſes of the fifth congreſs of the United States, on the 16th May, 1797.

[Publiſhed by order of the houſe of repreſentatives.]

Extract of a letter from general Pinckney to the ſecretary of ſtate, dated Amſterdam, March 8th, 1797.

I have juſt received intelligence from major Mount-florence that the Tribunal civil of the department of Pas de Calais, has confirmed the judgment of the tribunal of commerce, condemning as lawful prize the American veſſel, Royal-captain, John Bryant, maſter and owner, for want of a ſea-letter. I underſtand that it is a capt. Nathan Haley, an American, who commanded the privateer under French colours, which captured and carried into Dieppe the ſeventeenth ultimo the American ſhip Hate, commanded by a name-take and coulin of his bound from England to New-York with a cargo, it is ſaid, of fifty thouſand pounds ſterling.—Mr. Barnet, our conſular agent at Breſt, informs me, that ſeveral citizens of United States who were captured in Britiſh veſſels, on board of whom they had been preſſed, and at preſent confined in the priſons of that place as priſoners of war, and ſuffer much by cloſe confinement and bad proviſions, and that all his ſolicitations in their behalf, ſince the latter end of January, have been in vain. Theſe injurious acts to our countrymen and trade are exceedingly diſtreſſing, nor can it be ſaid when they will ceaſe. It is thought by many, and I believe juſtly, that the election of their third will determine France either to conciliation or avowed hoſtilities; as much as I with for the former, I wiſh the meaſures of our government will be diſpaſſionate and candid, but firm. Mean ſubmiſſions are generally returned with contempt and renewed oppreſſion.

FRANCE.

NAVAL POWERS OF EUROPE.

Citizen Arnould, chief of the Bureau de Commerce at Paris, has juſt publiſhed a work in one volume, entitled, Syſteme Maratime et Politique des European, pendant les 18 ſiecle*, fonde ſur leurs traites de paix, de commerce, et de navigation.

This book abounds with much information relative to the maritime power of every ſtate of Europe.

The following is an abſtract of the author's ſtatement relative to the naval ſtrength of the different powers of Europe:

Spain.—At the commencement of the preſent war between France and Spain, the latter power had 72 ſhips of the line, 41 frigates, and 109 ſmaller veſſels. Mounting in all 10,000 guns, and manned by 50,000 ſeamen.

NOTE.

* The copies before us are, one the 18th, and the other the 19th both which we ſuppoſe are erroneous, and the true number to be the 17th.

Portugal.—The naval force of Portugal, at the commencement of the French revolution, conſiſted of 10 ſhips of the line, 14 frigates, and 20 inferior veſſels. The whole mounted with 2000 guns, and manned by 10,000 ſeamen.

Sardinia.—This kingdom cannot be reckoned among the maritime powers of Europe. The court of Turin, however, maintains a few naval officers; but they are kept merely for parade and form.

Tuſcany.—This ſtate, which, when governed by the Medecis, had a formidable marine, has now only five frigates, two of which belong to the grand duke, the other three are the emperor's.

Naples.—The naval force of Naples may amount to ten ſhips of the line, ten frigates, and ten chebecs, mounting altogether 1000 guns, and manned by 5000 ſeamen.

Genoa.—Which once could ſend to ſea 200 veſſels, manned by 50,000 ſeamen, has now only three gallies and ſome tartans which cruiſe in the Mediterranean.

Sweden.—Nature has done every thing to raiſe this country to the firſt rank of maritime power. Surrounded by ſeas, and interſected by large navigable lakes, it poſſeſſes a number of excellent ports, ſuch as Gottenburgh, Stralſund, Kalmar, and particularly Stockholm. Twenty-ſeven veſſels of the line, twelve frigates, and forty armed gallies, mounting in all 3000 guns and manned by 18,000 ſeamen, compoſe the preſent force of the Sweediſh navy.

Ruſſia.—The efforts of this power are as vaſt as the diſadvantages it has to ſurmount in the career of navigation. The Ruſſian navy conſiſts of 67 ſhips of the line, 36 frigates, and 700 gallies and other ſmaller veſſels. The number of guns with which theſe veſſels are armed is 9000; about 21,000 ſeamen are employed on board the fleet.

Venice.—This republic has preſerved more traces of her ancient ſplendor than Genoa. If neceſſary Venice can put to ſea, 26 or 30 ſail of the line, and 50,000 ſaiſors. The preſent naval force of this ſtate does not exceed 80 armed veſſels large and ſmall.

Turkey.—The maritime force of the Porte conſiſts of 80 ſhips of the line, mounting 8000 guns, and manned by about 50,000 ſeamen.

Batavian republic.—Before the French revolution, the maritime force of Holland conſiſted of 37 ſhips of the line, 43 frigates, and 100 inferior veſſels. They were manned by 15,000 ſeamen and mounted 6300 guns. But the Dutch naval power has been crippled by the alliance of the Engliſh, and by the treachery and ſupineneſs of their own officers.

Auſtria—Does not rank among the naval powers. Every attempt of the imperial government to eſtabliſh an exterior maritime commerce has failed.

Pruſſia—The maratime ſyſtem of Pruſſia proceeds inſenſibly towards amelioration by natural and well combined means. Frederic the 2d created a ſmall marine, and gave ſome reſpectability to his flig by the vigorous execution of the armed neutrality, eſtabliſhed in December 1781.

Denmark—By its poſition, commands the Baltic and the Northern Ocean. The wiſdom of this power is remarkable in carefully avoiding the entering into any warlike confederacies. The Daniſh navy is compoſed of 38 ſhips of the line, 20 frigates & 60 chebecs and cutters. The total number of ſeamen is 12,000; of guns 3000.

Great-Britain—In the month of December laſt, the Britiſh nay conſiſted of 661 veſſels, of which 171 were ſhips of the line, 210 frigates and 256 ſloops.

France—The following was the ſtate of the French navy before the commencement of the revolution, viz. 81 ſhips of the line, 69 frigates, and 141 ſmaller veſſels. The whole amounting to 14,000 guns, and manned by 70,000 ſeamen. The maratime force of France in its preſent reduced ſtate is not given.

BOSTON, May 2.

Some particulars reſpecting the capture of the ſhip William, of Portland.

Captain Jones, arrived on Saturday from Porto Rico, brought home ſeveral of his unfortunate countrymen who had been taken by the French, and robbed of every thing they poſſeſſed. From the collected information of capt. J. and his paſſengers, it appears that the ſhip William, capt. Strong, of Portland, on his homeward bound paſſage from Grenada, was captured by a French privateer, with a Spaniſh crew, and the captain and all the crew taken on board the privateer, excepting the mate, and one ſeaman, returning 2 officers, and 7 Spaniſh ſailors to take charge of the ſhip. Shortly after the privateer had left the ſhip, the Spaniards on board menaced the two Americans, who not fond of brooking the inſult, and irritated by their cowardly behavior, repelled their abuſe by ſevere reproaches.—The affair becoming ſerious, the mate ordered the boy, an American, who belonged to the [illegible]neer, to take the helm, and himſelf and companion armed themſelves as well as they could, the mate with an axe—the two officers then interfered, and the bloody affray began; one of the officers was killed by the mate, with his axe, and the other ſeverly wounded, together with moſt of the Spaniſh ſailors. The affray continued for the ſpace of 4 hours, when the crew agreed to give up the ſhip to the two Americans, provided they would grant them the long boat and proviſions ſufficient to proceed to the neareſt French port: this was agreed to, but before they had got ready to embark, another French privateer hove in ſight, took poſſeſſion of the ſhip, and carried her into Porto-Rico, where the two Americans were impriſoned and put in irons, to be ſent like malefactors to St. Domingo, where, itis ſuppoſed, they will ſuffer death, not for an outrage of the laws of humanity, but for bravely defending themselves against allafins, greatly unequal in point of numbers and weapons.

Capt. Jones would have found means to have refcued thefe unfortunate men, had he been able to have remained a night longer in port; but feveral Britiih fhips of war appearing off the coaft, he was apprenenfive of an embargo being immediately laid, and put to fea.

Laudable Cuftom.

At Padua, in Italy, they have ftone of turpitude fit is placed near the fenate houfe. Hither it is that all fpendthrifts, and fuc as declaim the payment of their debts, are brought; and they are enforced to fit upon this ftone with their hinder parts bare, that by this note of public infamy and difgrace, others may be terrified from all fuch vain expences, or borrowing more than they are able to pay. Great pity it is there is not fuch a ftone in all the countries of the world, or, at leaft, fome other happy invention whereby it might be provided that there fhould be fewer followers of fuch pernicious examples.

BALTIMORE, April 24.

Horrid Murders!!!

At the general court for the Eaftern fhore, now fetting, a negro woman, the property of Mr. Eccleflon, of Kent county, in this ftate, was found guilty of the murder of a child of one of her fellow flaves, which fhe is faid to have deftroyed by means of laudanum. Humanity fhudders at the guilt of this attrocious wretch. She has fince her condemnation acknowledged to have deftroyed, by poifon, three children of Robert Dunn, efq. a moft refpectable and worthy gentleman of Kent. Her motive for this moft horrid act, appears to have been, an expectation of being free, if all the members of a particular family (the Bowers) from whom fhe was poffeffed, were dead. She had been informed, that a clauſe in the will of the late Mr. Bowers, of the fame county, had deftined his flaves to be free if all his family fhould die! Let this ferve as a fo lemn warning to thofe who are difpofed to teftamentary liberation of their flaves! The ftory of this dreadful affair is truly fhocking.

The unhappy parents, returning from the funeral of their firft child, found a fecond dead! And by the time they had paid the laft offices to the fecond, the third expired! What pen—what eloquen e can defcribe the condit on of the unhappy parents!—The children expired in excruciating tortures.

The next attempt was upon the life of her miſtreſs, Mrs. Eccleſton, who after ſuſtaining torments undeſcribible, with great difficulty recovered—But ſhe continues in a ſtate that leaves little hope that ſhe will ever again enjoy the bleſſing of health, ſuch a ſhock has a delicate conſtitution ſuffered.

Four children were actually killed, and the life of a fifth perſon nearly ſacrificed.—Where this horrid buſineſs would have terminated, God only knows, if by this divine interpoſition, the helliſh purpoſe had not been arreſted where it was.

NEW-YORK, June 9.

By a gentleman arrived yeſterday from Philadelphia, we are informed, that a veſſel had arrived there on Saturday morning, in 30 days from Madeira, which bro't accounts of admiral Jarvis having intercepted the Spaniſh ſquadron from the Havannah, conſiſting of 2 ſhips of the line, and 3 frigates, having on board ſix millions of dollars. The intelligence was particularly ſtated, and generally believed in Philadelphia.

The French army in Italy conſiſts of 80,000 men, forming eight diviſions, four proceeds towards Trieſte, under Angereau, Seurrier, Maſſena and Bernadotte. Three remain in Tyrol, under Joubert, Rei and Killemaine. The diviſion of Victor remains in Romagne, until the pope has fulfilled the terms of the treaty.

The Auſtrian army conſiſts of 50,000 men; 20,000 of whom are veterans, the reſt new troops. Reinforcements are coming in, but they arrive ſlowly. This army is commanded by prince Charles, under the direction of gen. Bellegarde.

It is remarked in French papers, that prince Charles and Buonaparte are of the ſame age, and reſemble each other in figure and manners.

Gen Clarke is at Turin, negociating a treaty of alliance on the part of the French republic.

CAUTION.

The public are cautioned to be on their guard againſt falſe reports which are rapidly circulating from one end of the continent to the other, reſpecting our difficulties with France. The authentic news from Boſton, ſaid to be brought by a capt. from Amſterdam, are evidently untrue. Can any thing be more abſurd on the face of it than Mr. Pinckney's bringing an account from Paris that our affairs would ſoon be amicably adjuſted, when his recent diſmiſſion from Paris was of itſelf damning evidence of the contrary?

The truth is, that he was ordered in writing to quit France, the day after the arrival at Paris of Buonapatte's victories; he immediately quitted Paris, and had but juſt arrived at Amſterdam when the veſſel ſailed.—How then is it poſſible that he could have ſaid what this capt. is reported to relate?—Would even a mean ſpirited coward ſay, juſt after he had received a kick on his breech that his affairs with the kicker, were about to be amicably adjuſted? Does then any man in his ſenſes believe that the high-ſpirited & noble minded Pinckney would tell ſuch a degrading tale? but it ſeems a party who are ready to ſubmit to any humiliation, have invented a new vocabulary: if a rafcal is now turned out of office for traiterous practices or fraud and embezzlement, this is called reſigning: if our miniſter is ignominiouſly turned out of France, he is ſaid to have received an invitation from the directory to leave France.—The idea of a man's being invited by a other to walk down ſtairs or out of his houſe is to the full as ridiculous as that of a diſmiſſed officer gravely writing an apology for his reſignation.

It is manifeſtly the deſign of the French party to lull the people into a fatal ſecurity, to deaden the national energy and to defeat in this way, thoſe meaſures of defence which would ſecure to us our independence. With this view, they will fabricate reports of accomodation with France for this end they are conſtantly preaching up the improbability of a war with that nation, and ſome of the baſe traitors have even declared that in the event of war they will join France.

BARON STEUBEN.

Several remarkable particulars are mentioned relative to the late Baron Steuben in his cloſing ſcene. Among other odd items, he ordered in his will that his body ſhould be committed to earth, a few hours after his death, dreſſed in the ſuit of clothes he uſually wore, and wrapped in a large blue cloak that had been his conſtant companion during a conſiderable part of the American war. He likewiſe recommended to his executors to have his body interred privately in an obſcure ſpot, on ſome of his lands in Steuben's patent; all which it is ſaid, was punctually executed, and that there are but two other perſons in the ſecret of the place where the general's bones are depoſited. In this laſt particular he may perhaps, have taken the hint from Pope:

"Thus, unambitious let me live,
Thus unattended let me die,
Steal from the world—and not a ſtone
Tell where I lie."

LONDON, March 3.

We underſtand that a plan has been laid before the board of ordnance, for the conſtruction of a gun to carry a 48 pound ſhot, yet ſo light as to be drawn in any road by a poney not more than 13 hands high. The peculiar excellence of this piece of ordnance is, that it will carry a ſhot with equal velocity, certainty, and diſtance to any now in the ſervice, without pitching at the breech. To prevent accident, it is not charged with gun-powder, but with rarified combuſtable air, collected from time to time from the electric matter floating in the atmoſphere.

Birth extraordinary.

At Chriſtmas laſt, the wife of John Smith a journeyman carpenter and wheel-wright, at Weſtbury, Wilts, was delivered of twins, making 9 children ſhe has had at four births, and all within ſix years: it is, perhaps, ſtill more remarkable, that the firſt five children were born within 13 months. She bro't forth once three at a birth, and at the other times twins: the three were born alive, but did not long ſurvive; the other ſix are now all hearty and well with their prolific mother.

March 9. At 8 o'clock laſt night died at her apartments in the queen's palace, madame Schwellimbergen, keeper of the robes to her majeſty, in whoſe ſervice ſhe has been ever ſince her majeſty's arrival in England. From her opportunity of thrift and her parſimony, ſhe is ſuppoſed to have amaſſed a great fortune. She was in her 66th year.

March 14. A ton of bullion was ſent on Friday ſe'nnight to the mint, conſiſting chiefly of French Louis d'ors. The coiners have ever ſince worked night and day. A ton of bullion makes 1 million of guineas.

His honor then prorogued the legiſlature, and laſt evening himſelf with ſeveral other officers of government arrived here in the Mohawk.

We are authorized to contradict the report in circulation, that official intelligence has been received at the American garriſon that the Spaniards refuſe ſurrending the poſts within the lines of the United States. The late ſtates' papers mention the return of an officer who had been ſent to the Natches, and ſome other poſts, who ſays that he found thoſe places evacuated. Beſide, we do not concieve that Spain, who is, ex officio, the natural heir to, and has for ſo long a time enjoyed, uninterruptedly, the office of pay-maſter-general to England and her allies, wiſhes to introduce any new pay-rolls. But, admitting it to be as it is on the contrary aſſerted, that the Spaniards refuſe ſurrendering but on the principles of being paid for the garriſons, we may conclude the ſtates will ſoon make the payment in a ſummary and ample manner.

It is ſaid congreſs have reſolved to purchaſe three frigates in addition to thoſe nearly completed, and alſo 12 ſloops of war, and to arm all the merchantmen; alſo to raiſe 1 regiment of artillery, 1 do cavalry, and——regiments of infantry. The number of the laſt we do not learn.

At the Hope Furnace, near Provider ce, Rhode-Iſland, 228 cannon, (24 & 32 pounders) have been caſt and proved. They are intended for the frigates and maritime forts of the United States.

By a late actual ſurvey, a natural and convenient ridge is found to commence near to Geneſee river, and to continue through to the garriſon of Niagara, which makes it certain that a dry road may be made thereon, and within ſight of the lake; not more than four bridges will be neceſſary. The diſtance from the garriſon to the river is 67 miles only, and will be there opened this ſeaſon, inſtead of by Tanawanta, which is wetter ground, and thirty miles more in diſtance.

Sunday morning arrived here J. Powell, eſq. and family from N-York, on their way to their new ſettlement at or near Long-point. Mr. Powell had the ſorrow while lying at Oſwego, to have his ſon, a promiſing youth of 13 years, overſet in a boat, and drown. A repetition of this miſfortune nearly befell him here: for while the boat was lying at the wharf, a little daughter fell over-board, when two of our reſpectable citizens (we boaſt the honor) amid many ſpectators, as quickly as poſſible, diveſted themſelves of their looſe clothing and lept after her, and had the happineſs of reaching her while ſhe was ſinking for the laſt time, and bro't her ſafely to ſhore, to the joy of her diſtreſſed mother, and pleaſure of the ſpectators.

Mr Pitt, in the houſe of commons, on the 10th of April, in oppoſition to the motion for a renewal of negociations for peace with the French republic, made the following obſervations:—

"That the diſpoſition of miniſters for peace exceeded any recommendation expreſſed in the motion; that in conſequence of the communication lately received from the court of Vienna, of the propoſals made by France for a ſeparate negociation, and of the rejection of them by the emperor, ſteps had been taken to uſe that opportunity for ſetting on foot a joint negociation; and that his majeſty's miniſters had determined immediatly to ſend a confidential perſon to Vienna, with ſuch inſtructions as they tho't ſuitable to the preſent circumſtances of Europe and to the wiſh of obtaining for it a ſecure and equitable peace."

In anſwer to Mr. Fox's obſervation, Mr. Pitt repeated—"that he could not ſee how far the purpoſe, which was evidently and equally in the view of all parties, was to be accelerated by the preſent motion. He had fully explained, that the purpoſe of Mr. Hammond's miſſion to Vienna was, to adopt the means moſt likely to bring about a pacification, in concert with his majeſty's ally. The object of both parties was the ſame, and the important events which had lately taken place rendered it more neceſſary than ever that they ſhould act in concert. This ſtep was reſolved upon as ſoon as miniſters were informed of the magnanimous reſolution of the emperor not to make peace, but in concert with Great-Britain. This had been contradicted, becauſe the fact had not been uſed in argument when the emperor's loan was debated. It was omitted by him, but not undeſignedly. He choſe to leave the queſtion on its own ground, after he had ſtated that, in every poſſible view of the circumſtances, the emperor was entitled to our aid. The advices which had ſince been received were certainly of an unfortunate tenor; the real extent of the buſineſs was not, however, as yet known. He did not act upon thoſe advices, tho' he ſhould certainly combine them with his other views of the proceeding."

☞ The printer once more calls on all indebted to him to make ſpeedy payment. The circumſtance of his having reſigned the office, makes it neceſſary that a ſpeedy ſettlement of his buſineſs take place. He feels an unwillingneſs that any one ſhould put himſelf to the expence and trouble of being ſued at law, which will be his mode, unreſervedly, with every delinquent. Conſtant attendance will be given at the office for that purpoſe a ſhort time, after which, others will be employed to ſettle the unfiniſhed buſineſs.

PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS by an act of the provincial parliament paſſed in the thirty-ſeventh year of his Majeſty's reign, entitled "An act for making temporary proviſion for the regulation of trade between this province and the United States of America, by land or inland navigation," it was amongſt other things enacted, that from and after the paſſing of the act, it ſhould and might be lawful for the governor, lieutenant-governor or perſon adminiſtering the government of this province, by and with the advice and conſent of his Majeſty's executive council, by order or orders to be from time to time iſſued and publiſhed to ſuſpend the operation of the whole, or any part or parts of any act, or acts, or ordinance, or ordinances that might impede, or might be conſtrued to impede the free intercourſe ſtipulated by the ſaid treaty between his Majeſty's ſubjects, and the citizens of the ſaid States. And whereas it ſeems expedient for the better effectuating the intentions of the ſaid treaty, as well as the purpoſes of the ſaid act to ſuſpend the operation of certain ordinances heretofore made, for the benefit of the land and inland navigation and commerce: Know ye therefore, that I Peter Ruſſell, preſident of the government of Upper-Canada, and adminiſtering the ſame, have thought fit by and with the advice and conſent of his Majeſty's executive of the ſaid province, to ſuſpend the operation of a certain ordinance made in the twenty-eighth year of his Majeſty's reign, entitled "An act, or ordinance further to regulate the inland commerce of this province, and to extend the ſame."—And alſo a certain other ordinance paſſed in the ſaid twenty-eighth year of his Majeſty's reign, entitled "An ordinance for the promoting of the inland navigation." PHILADELPHIA, July 7.

Extract of a letter from Winthrop Sargent efq. Secretary of the government of the North Weftern Territory, to the Secretary of ſtate, dated Cincinnati, June 3, '97.

"The Spaniards are reinforcing their upper poſts on the Miſſiſippi conſiderably. General Howard, an Iriſhman, in the quality of commander in chief, with upwards of 300 men arrived at St. Louis and employed in erecting very formidable works. It likewiſe appears through various channels that they are inviting a great number of Indians of the territory to croſs the Miſſiſippi, and for this expreſs purpoſe Mr. Larrimie, an officer in the pay of the crown, made a tour through all this country laſt fall; ſince which ſeveral Indians have been ſent on the ſame errand—and generally furniſhed with plenty of cain to defray their expences."

"A large party of Delawares paſſed down White river about the 16th of May on their way to the Spaniſh ſide bearing the national flag of Spain, ſent them from St. Louis."

CHARLESTON, (S. C.) July 6.

The following intelligence was received from the Havana, dated June 26.

Yeſterday we had an arrival here in 15 days from New Orleans; the intelligence received, & privately tranſmitted, is of conſequence: It is ſaid that the American troops have been repulſed in an attempt to take the fort at Natches by ſurpriſe, were driven off, but have again pitched their tent on an eminence out of the reach of the Spaniſh battery, and have their flag flying. The correſpondence between Mr Ellicott & Gov. Gayoſo, has been lengthy, and to little purpoſe; the conduct of the former has been firm and open, of the latter, evaſive and diſſembling.

It is not the apprehenſions here of a rupture between the United States and Spain, and it is reduced to a certainty that the Spaniſh do not rely on their own proweſs for defence; they look to the French for protection;—and it is a fact that between 7 and 8000 French, who have at different times, and under different pretences arrived in the U. S. are now travelling into the weſtern country, to rendezvous;—they have fixed there with an intent to defend the Miſſiſippi for the Spaniards.

LEXINGTON, (K.) June 13.

We are credibly informed by a gentleman who returned from New-Orleans laſt Sunday by land, that two veſſels which had arrived there from New York, or ſome one of the eaſtern ports, had been permitted to diſpoſe of their cargoes, during which time an embargo had been laid; however, ſhortly after they were permitted to depart, but before they proceeded any diſtance below Orleans, they were ſeized and prevented from proceeding on their voyage. That two other American veſſels had been brought in there as prizes, one of which was chiefly laden with logwood: after the cargo was landed, the veſſel was ſet up at public ſale, which the governor purchaſed, and had her fitted out with 40 guns, and 230 men, and ſent her off on a cruize.

DIED, in child-bed, on the 30th ult. in Harriſon county, a young woman who was but ten years old the 25th of laſt January!! The foregoing can be atteſted by two doctors and a number of women, who attended her during the time of her labor.

LONDON, May 9.

On Sunday morning lord Bridport made the ſignal to weigh anchor; which order the ſeamen of every ſhip at St. Helen's refuſed to obey. In the courſe of the forenoon they ſent delegates to Spithead, with a view to their holding a meeting on board the London of 98 guns, which carries the flag of vice-admiral Colpoys. This meaſure the admiral whoſe gallantry and conduct have been ever conſpicuous, who reſolved to oppoſe and appriſe the men of his ſhip of ſuch his intention. They evinced a diſpoſition, and even a determination, that the delegates ſhould come on board; upon which the admiral remonſtrated with his men againſt their mutunious conduct. He told them he was reſolved to enforce his orders, and immediately commanded the marines under arms. That corps obeyed the order with alacrity.

The admiral had taken particular pains to gain the marines to his intereſt, in which he had been ably aſſiſted by lieut. Sims, of the marines. The delegates, perſuaded in coming on board, the admiral ordered the marines to level their pieces at the delegates; the marines did ſo, and in this ſituation the admiral again admoniſhed the delegates, but to no purpoſe. At this time ſome ſlight ſcuffle took place, one of the delegates, all of whom were armed with ſmall arms, fired at lieut. Sims and wounded him; the marines were then ordered to fire by the admiral, who at the ſame time deſired them to take good aim, they obeyed, and five ſeamen were killed, two of whom were delegates.

Lord Howe yeſterday ſet off for Portſmouth, not with the intention of reſuming the command of the fleet, but with the idea of uſing his influence as a great naval conqueror, in order to bring Britiſh ſeamen back to that ſtate of diſcipline, and to that ſenſe of duty, which, under his auſpices and conduct, had led them to the moſt brilliant victories over the enemies of their country.

Portſmouth, May 16.

Earl Howe was laſt night chaired on his landing at the ſally port, his horſes taken from the carriage, which the delegates took poſſeſſion of, and were drawn on the out and inſide to the governor's houſe. The delegates were afterwards entertained by ſir W. Pitt's order, at the Half Moon, on the parade.

Yeſterday two delegates arrived here from Sheerneſs, where it ſeems diſcontents have lately made their appearance, but are returned, perfectly ſatisfied with the proviſions made by earl Howe, the father of the Britiſh nay.

May 17. Harmony is completely reſtored in every other ſhip here, and the ſtreets of Portſmouth are as tranquil as in the time of the moſt profound peace.

Admiral earl Howe left Portſmouth today at noon, after having entirely quelled the minds of the men, and reſtored peace and good order on board the fleets of both lord Bridport and ſir Roger Curtis.

The ſtadtholder is expected to leave England in a few days for the continent. The Swan ſloop, Capt. Stapp, is to convoy his ſerene highneſs and the princeſs of Orange to Cuxhaven, from whence they proceed to Germany. The object of this journey is ſaid to relate to the affairs which are about to become a ſubject of diſcuſſion in the congreſs at Berne.

MANHEIM, April 28.

Yeſterday arrived here a courier from the imperial miniſter count Lehrback with the preliminaries of peace between the emperor and France. Theſe, it is ſaid, are as follows:

1. The emperor, on the part of himſelf and his ſucceſſors, cedes the Netherlands on the other ſide the Meuſe to France; but retains the duchy of Luxemburg, and the province of Limburg. The part of the biſhopric of Liege beyond the Meuſe is likewiſe ceded; but the prince biſhop is to receive in return, Stahlo and Malmedy.

2. The ceſſion of the Netherlands ſhall be compenſated to his imperial majeſty by the reſtoration of Lombardy; as alſo by four Venetian provinces, and a part of the papal territory. (A letter, however, from Lugane, dated the 23d of April, ſtates on the contrary, that a courier had arrived there that day with intelligence that one of the articles of the preliminary treaty is, that Lombardy ſhall be free and independent; which has likewiſe been communicated by general Buonaparte to the municipality of Lombardy.)

3. The Status quo ante Bellum ſhall be reſtored in all the ſpiritual and temporal poſſeſſions in Germany.

4. The emperor and the French republic guarantee their mutual poſſeſſions, and the integrity of the conſtitution of the empire, according to the treaty of Weſtphalia, the guarantee of which the republic takes upon herſelf.

5. The navigation of the Rhine from Straſburg to the ſea, as alſo that of the Scheldt, remains to both nations free of toll, and ſhall only be ſubject to ſuch dues as may be neceſſary for the maintenance of the works on the rivers.

6. The Batavian republic is included in this, as alſo in all future negociations.

The elector palatinate of Bavaria receives all his poſſeſſions on the other ſide of the Rhine, and his officers are already gone to take poſſeſſion of their employments.

PARIS, May 2.

The chevalier d'Aranjo, ambaſſador from Portugal, having refuſed to ſign the conditions of peace offered to him, has been obliged to quit Paris: he has juſt ſet off for Liſbon. Theſe conditions, it is ſaid, were, 1ſt. thirty millions;—2d. the ceſſation of part of Braſil to Spain, and—3d. The ſhutting of all ports of Portugal againſt England.

WEST-NIAGARA, September 20.

The ſhortneſs of the time allowed us to prepare this paper for today, and the unexpected flow of advertiſements at a late hour, muſt apologize for our deficiency in news: we take room, however, to congratulate our readers on the proſpect of general peace, & of the return of order among the diſcontented in Ireland and in ſome parts of the navy.

THE EDITOR having been appointed to ſucceed the late printer, moſt reſpectfully preſents the public his firſt number of the GAZETTE, and humbly ſolicits their patronage, to whom his endeavors will be conſtantly directed to pleaſe, and will continue it provided the numbers ſubſcribed for, and regular payments made, be ſufficient to defray the expence.

It will be delivered in town immediately on publication, and to thoſe who live at diſtance ſent in the manner the moſt convenient and ſafe, as may be directed, or by poſt if the encouragement given him will admit.

The GAZETTE has hitherto labored under the greateſt poſſible diſadvantages, from the want of a regular receipt of intelligence; but it is with pleaſure he aſſures the public, that a mail is eſtabliſhed to run to the United States' garriſon of Niagara, and the contracts being compleated for its conveyance, the meaſure is daily expected to be put in to execution, which opens a correſpondence with every part of the United States, and the provinces of Nova-Scotia, New-Brunſwick &c. and which will be a continual ſource of new and intereſting intelligence: To improve the important advantage to the rendering the GAZETTE uſeful, will be his particular attention.

He declines an elaborate eſſay on the utility of ſuch a publication. Man ever, inquiſitive, naturally curious, wholly intitled directed, inſtructive and entertaining; and ſuffice it for him to ſay, as to the mode in which he ſhall conduct it, that he ſhall endeavor to convince the candid patrons that his intention is faultleſs, while his youth and inexperience may command error. From the reſpectability of the character honoring his ſubſcription liſts, he feels a confidence that candor and every friendly aſſiſtance will be afforded him to a degree fully equal to his merits—to thoſe, and to other gentlemen, he need not hint how much he will be obliged in receiving extracts and articles of foreign, and domeſtic intelligence, and well written eſſays on uſeful ſubjects.

He ſincerely returns his thank to thoſe gentlemen who have honored him with their patronage.

Wm. JARVIS, Secretary.

Laws of Upper Canada, paſſed in the firſt ſeſſion of the ſecond parliament. A. D. 1797.

An act to obviate the objections that might ariſe from a clerical error in ſome of his Majeſty's letters patent of grant lately iſſued.

WHEREAS it appears that a clerical error hath crept into a few of the deeds given by our ſovereign lord the King to ſome of his ſubjects, by the inſertion of the word "clergyman" inſtead of the word clergy in that part of the letters patent that reſerves a proportion of one ſeventh of the crown lands, for the lands in each of the deeds granted, which error might lead to conſequences that is neceſſary to obviate. Be it therefore enacted by the King's moſt excellent Majeſty, by and with the advice and conſent of the legiſlative council and aſſembly of the province of Upper-Canada, conſtituted and aſſembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an act paſſed in the parliament of Great-Britain, entitled "An act to repeal certain parts of an act paſſed in the fourteenth year of his Majeſty's reign, entitled "An act for making more effectual proviſion for the government of the province of Quebec in North America, and to make further proviſion for the government of the ſaid province," and by the authority of the ſame, That wherever the word "clergyman" is or may occur in any one of his Majeſties letters patent, the ſame ſhall be read, taken and underſtood to be, mean and ſignify the word "clergy," and ſhall have to all intents and purpoſes the ſame force and effect, tendency and operation towards eſtabliſhing, ſecuring and confirming the rights of the proteſtant clergy of this province, in ſuch a quantity of the lands of the crown as ſhall and may appertain to, and be in the proportion of one ſeventh of the lands in any ſuch deed granted, according to the form and effect of an act paſſed in the parliament of Great-Britain, in the thirty-firſt year of his Majeſty's reign, entitled "An act to repeal certain parts of an act paſſed in the fourteenth year of his Majeſty's reign, entitled "An act for making more effectual proviſion for the government of the province of Quebec in North America, and to make further proviſion for the government of the ſaid province," and that every ſuch deed ſhall be to all intents and purpoſes as valid and effectual in ſecuring to the reſpect the lands thereby granted, and to this day all the rights, conditions, reſervations, limitations and reſtrictions, and to the clergy the rights aforeſaid, as if no ſuch clerical error had crept into it; but as if ſuch deed had been perfected in the word "clergy," where the rights of the church are intended to be ſecured, inſtead of the word "clergyman" wherever it occurs; any act, ordinance or law to the contrary in any wiſe notwithſtanding.

An act to authorize the apprehending of Felons, and others, eſcaping from any of his Majeſty's provinces and governments in North-America, into this province.

WHEREAS it may happen that felons, and other malefactors, having committed crimes in ſome of his Majeſty's provinces and governments in North America, may eſcape into this province, and their offences thereby remain unpuniſhed for want of proviſion by law for apprehending ſuch offenders in this province, and tranſmitting them into the province in which their offences were committed: for remedy thereof, Be it therefore enacted by the king's moſt excellent Majeſty, by and with the advice and conſent of the legiſlative council and aſſembly of the province of Upper-Canada, conſtituted and aſſembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an act paſſed in the parliament of Great-Britain, entitled "An act to repeal certain parts of an act paſſed in the fourteenth year of his Majeſty's reign, entitled "An act for making more effectual proviſion for the government of the province of Quebec in North America, and to make further proviſion for the government of the ſaid province," and by the authority of the ſame, That from and after the paſſing of this act, if any perſon or perſons againſt whom a warrant ſhall be iſſued by the chief juſtice of the King's bench, or any other magiſtrate having competent authority in any of his Majeſty's provinces or governments in North-America, reſpectively, for any felony or other crime of a high nature, ſhall eſcape, come into, reſide or be in any part of this province, it ſhall and may be lawful for any juſtice of the peace of the diſtrict, county, city or place where ſuch perſon or perſons ſhall eſcape, come into, reſide or be, to indorſe his name on the ſaid warrant, (due proof being firſt made of the hand writing of the magiſtrate iſſuing the ſame) which warrant ſo indorſed ſhall be a ſufficient authority to all perſons to whom ſuch warrant was originally directed, and alſo to all conſtables of the diſtrict, county, city, or place where ſuch warrant ſhall be ſo indorſed, to execute the ſame, by apprehending the perſon or perſons againſt whom ſuch warrant is granted, and to convey him, her or them into the province from which ſuch warrant originally was iſſued, to be dealt with according to law.

II. Provided nevertheleſs, and be it further enacted by the authority aforeſaid, That before any ſuch warrant ſhall be ſo indorſed as aforeſaid, the perſon applying for ſuch indorſement ſhall enter into a recognizance with ſufficient ſureties for a ſum not leſs than fifty pounds lawful money of this province, to indemnify this province, and every part thereof, againſt any expence that may ariſe or accrue from the apprehenſion of ſuch offender, and alſo to bring, or cauſe the ſaid offender to be bro't to trial; and the magiſtrate to whom ſuch application ſhall be made is hereby authorized to take ſuch recognizance.

ANECDOTE.

VOLUME III.] G. R. [NUMBER 148.

Upper Canada Gazette; or, American Oracle.

WEST-NIAGARA: Printed by TITUS G. SIMONS. Wednesday, SEPTEMBER [illegible] 1797.

THE EDITOR having been appointed to ſucceed the late printer, moſt reſpectfully preſents the public his firſt number of the GAZETTE, and humbly ſolicits their patronage, to whom his endeavors will be conſtantly directed to pleaſe, and will continue it provided the numbers ſubſcribed for, and regular payments made, be ſufficient to defray the expence.

It will be delivered in town immediately on publication, and to thoſe who live at diſtance ſent in the manner the moſt convenient and ſafe, as may be directed, or by poſt if the encouragement given him will admit.

The GAZETTE has hitherto labored under the greateſt poſſible diſadvantages, from the want of a regular receipt of intelligence; but it is with pleaſure he aſſures the public, that a mail is eſtabliſhed to run to the United States' garriſon of Niagara, and the contracts being compleated for [illegible] the meaſure is daily expected to be put into execution, which opens a correſpondence with every part of the United States, and the provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunſwick &c. and which will be a continual ſource of new and intereſting intelligence: To improve the important advantage to the rendering the GAZETTE uſeful, will be his particular attention.

He declines an elaborate eſſay on the utility of ſuch a publication. Man ever, inquiſitive, has acknowledged it, when, rightly directed, inſtructive and entertaining; and ſuffice it for him to ſay, as to the mode in which he ſhall conduct it, that he ſhall endeavor to convince the candid patrons that his intention is faultleſs, while his youth and inexperience may commit an error. From the reſpectability of the characters honoring his ſubſcription liſt, he feels a confidence that candor and every friendly aſſiſtance will be afforded him to a degree fully equal to his merit;—to thoſe, and to other gentlemen, he need not hint how much he will be obliged in receiving extracts and articles of foreign, and domeſtic intelligence, and well written eſſays on uſeful ſubjects.

He ſincerely returns his thanks to thoſe gentlemen who have honored him with their patronage.

PETER RUSSELL, PRESIDENT.

PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS by an act of the provincial parliament paſſed in the thirty-ſeventh year of his Majeſty's reign, entitled "An act for making temporary proviſion for the regulation of trade between this province and the United States of America, by land or inland navigation," it was amongſt other things enacted, that from and after the paſſing of the act, it ſhould and might be lawful for the governor, lieutenant-governor or perſon adminiſtering the government of this province, by and with the advice and conſent of his Majeſty's executive council, by order or orders to be from time to time iſſued and publiſhed to ſuſpend the operation of the whole, or any part or parts of any act, or acts, or ordinance, or ordinances that might impede, or might be conſtrued to impede the free intercourſe ſtipulated by the ſaid treaty between his Majeſty's ſubjects, and the citizens of the ſaid States. And whereas it ſeems expedient for the better effectuating the intentions of the ſaid treaty, as well as the purpoſes of the ſaid act to ſuſpend the operation of certain ordinances heretofore made, for the benefit of the land and inland navigation and commerce: Know ye therefore, that I Peter Ruſſell, preſident of the government of Upper Canada, and adminiſtering the ſame, have thought fit by and with the advice and conſent of his Majeſty's executive of the ſaid province, to ſuſpend the operation of a certain ordinance made in the twenty eighth year of his Majeſty's reign, entitled "An act, or ordinance further to regulate the inland commerce of this province, and to extend the ſame."—And alſo a certain other ordinance paſſed in the ſaid twenty-eighth year of his Majeſty's reign, entitled "An ordinance for the promoting of the inland navigation." And alſo a certain other ordinance paſſed in the thirtieth year of his ſaid Majeſty's reign, entitled "An act or ordinance in addition to the act, entitled "An act, or ordinance further to regulate the inland commerce of this province, and to extend the ſame as paſſed in the twenty-eight year of his Majeſty's reign. And alſo a certain other ordinance paſſed in the thirty-firſt year of his Majeſty's reign, entitled "An act, or ordinance to explain and amend the act entitled "An act, or ordinance for promoting the inland navigation, and to promote the trade to the Weſtern Country." And alſo a certain other ordinance paſſed in the ſaid thirty firſt year of his preſent Majeſty, entitled "An act to prevent obſtructions to the inland commerce, upon the death of a ſuperintendant," and the ſaid ordinances, are in the whole, hereby ſuſpended accordingly, until further order ſhall be therein made, ſo that the ſaid ſuſpenſion ſhall in nowiſe continue by virtue of this order and proclamation longer that two years, from the time of [illegible] the ſaid act; of which all perſons [illegible] and government themſelves accordingly.

GIVEN under my [illegible]

PETER RUSSELL,

PROCLAMATION.

And it is alfo further declared, that it fhall and may be lawful for the lieutenant-governor, or perfon adminiftering the government of this province on or before the firft day of Auguft, then next, by a proclamation to declare the name of fuch township : Now know ye, that I PETER RUSSELL, prefident of the government of Upper-Canada, and adminiftering the fame, in virtue of the power and authority herein before mentioned have thought fit to name the faid township, and do hereby name the fame, the township of HALLOWELL, of [illegible] take notice accor-

By his Honor's command

WM. JARVIS, fec'y.

PARIS, June 23.

"The negociations with the Engliih miniflers will not take place at Paris but at Lille as we have already announced. The following is the anfwer faid to have been made by the directory to the envoy of Great-Britain, who has arrived at Paris: "That the renewal of negociations will experience no difficulty on the part of the French government who equally defire to put an end to the misfortunes of war; but, that previoufly, the directory exacts, that general principles fhould be eftablifhed, to ferve as a bafis to ulterior negociations. That England being now acquainted with the price at which fhe may obtain peace, it is natural that fhe fhould offer a view of the treaty upon which all the negociations were to turn. That finally the directory would willingly liften to the propofitions of the Britifh government, but that agents chofen by the two powers muft at firft meet at Lille, for the purpofe of entering upon negociations, & that they would not be continued at Paris, except in cafe the two parties fhould agree upon the principles which are to ferve as a bafis to the treaty of peace. We have already made known the three negociators whom the directory had nominated, charged to proceed to Lille to treat upon a peace with the Englifh plenipotentiaries. This choice does not appear to be pleafing to every body, and the following is the opinion entertained of the members of this commiffion :—

"Letourneur, entirely a ftranger in making negociations; Pleville-Pelle, an old marine captain, and an excellent officer, but has never employed his attention in diplomatic affairs; and, finally, Maret, who was plunged into the dungeons of Auftria, when he was proceeding on the embaffy to Naples. This latter choice is a very good one and will be generally applauded. Maret poffeffes intelligence, talents, and addrefs, and has already difcharged with honor, two miffions near the cabinet of London, where he made himfelf efteemed. Colchen, fecretary-general of the commiffion, was commiffary of foreign affairs after the 9th Thermidor. He unites to a great capacity, a prudent, upright and conciliatory difpofition, a firm character, an integrity often proved, and a long habit of affairs on political fubjects.

BOSTON, July 12.

Laft evening arrived brig Katy, capt. Carter of Newbury-port, from jamaica: on his paffage home was taken by a French privateer, that a few days before had had a bruih with an Englifhman, & was obliged to fheer off. The Gallic cruifer took out of the Katy all but the captain and two men, & put on board of her 8 good republicans, one of whom had been wounded in the action above mentioned, and ordered her for a French port: capt. Carter, however, who owns the veffel and cargo, preferring this port of deftination even to the port of fo dear an ally, role on the Frenchmen, and bro't her fafe into this port.

July 15. A letter from Cape-Francois, June 21, corroborates the account of the defeat of the French general Touffaint, before St. Marks, Particulars are not mentioned.

A Jamaica paper of June 5, informs, that "ten days ago general Simcoe, with about 2,500 troops, left Port-au-Prince for l'Arcahaye.—Mitchelbis and Grand-Guave are faid to have offered fubmiffion.

Auguft 12. Capts. Viffil from Dunkirk, and Stone, Knowles and Brown from Bourdeaux, bring our European advices down to the 22d of June.—A change had operated in the French government, fince the admiffion of a new director and third, almoft paramount to a revolution.

The conduct of all confiderable officers is feverely fcrutinized: already the dilapidatory excelles have been detected. Truget, the minifter of marine, Merlin, of juftice, De la Croix, of foreign relations, and Romeil, of the interior, it feems are difmiffed.—The firft is charged with fharing in Sonthonax's plunder, with having furpreffed information of the attrocities of that tyrant of St. Domingo, and with having defrauded the republic in his provifion contracts.—The charges againft the others are not fpecified. The recall of Sonthonax, and his colleagues in power and iniquity at St. Domingo, is produced by the moft perfect conviction of their criminality, and a refolution to purge and reform that important colony. The dark picture of the crimes committed at this ill-fated ifland, and their effect, would be beyond credence, if not accompanied with plenary evidence. Vice-admiral Joyeufe is appointed chief of the new commiffion to be fent out, and judging from a fpeech he delivered on his appointment, we conceive the iflanders, under his humanity, will once more be happy, and citizens of the U. S. by his juftice, freed from thofe horrid perfecutions and robberies which have deftroyed or beggared many, and eflentially affected the whole.

The change in France, we believe will operate greatly in the American favor. We have been abufed extremely under the executive, the new, mean to purfue different meafures: it is not probable they will with to deftroy the remnant of our commerce: ftem which has been called unjuft in France: they muft, they will feek to harmonize once more with us, and treat us equitably.

Thefe pleafing circumftances and confiderations are heightened by the certainty that negociations for peace have commenced.

At the time of the falling of the above mentioned captains from Bourdeaux, it was curtently reported that Mr. Pinckney, our envoy, had been invited to Paris from Rotterdam. This rumor was probably created from the evident change in the difpofition of the French rulers.

LONDON, May 25.

Government has received a difpatch from a mayor of a town in Ireland, in which he gives an alarming account of things in the fouth of Ireland, which he defcribes as equally diffaffected with the north. This magiftrate, who has long been of tranfmitting intelligence to government, whether from the pertubation of his fpirits, occafioned by the unpleafant circumftances which he had to relate, or owing to a natural confufion of intellect, concludes his letter with thefe words:—Such is the dangerous ftate of affairs, that at the moment I am writing, for my own perfonal fafety, I carry a piftol in each hand, and a fword in the other.

QUEBEC, Auguft 23.

Lord Malmefbury, earl Pembroke, lord Morpeth, and lord Grenville Levifon Gower were to fet out on the 26th June laft, for Lille, where it appears a congrefs was about to be held.

Auguft 30. Since the publication of laft gazette, we have been favored with the Sun of the 27th and 28th of June, and the Jerfey Gazette of the 8th and 15th of July, which enable us fo give an abftract of London intelligence to the 8th July, and from Paris to the 5th.

In Ireland the conutry was gradually recovering from the alarm into which it had been thrown, by the report of the fecret committee of the houfe of commons, on papers found in the poffeffion of fome of the fociety of united Irifhmen. In confequence of a proclamation of the lord-lieutenant, offering a free pardon to all thofe who had taken the teft oath of that fociety, on condition of their delivering up their arms, and fwearing allegiance to his majefty. Numbers of the inhabitants of the counties of Antrim & Ulfter, and other counties throughout the kingdom, had delivered their arms to the magiftrates, and taken the oath of allegiance; and from the numbers who had already come in, a hope was indulged of the entire reftoration of tranquility.

Accounts from Lille, in Flanders, mention the arrival there of the marquis del Campo, and mr. Cabarrus, as commiffioners to treat for peace, on the part of Spain, and that two commiffioners had alfo arrived on the part of Holland.

Ld. Malmefbury did not leave Dover till the 3d of July, he was only accompanied by lord Grenville L. Gower and mr. Ellis.

From Paris it is ftated, that notwithftanding the appearance of peace, almoft all the powers of Europe make preparations for war with the greateft celerity. The emperor has made new levies thro' all his dominions, and a body of upwards of 100,000 men are aflemblin on the frontiers of Italy; part of which body conftantly takes poffeffion of the poffs evacuated by the French. The king of Pruffia has put all his forces on the war eftablifhment. All the Dutch troops have been ordered to the frontiers. The king of Naples is arming. The king of Piedmont has joined his forces to the French, and Spain menaces Portugal.

It is alfo ftated from the fame place, that the churches in France are more frequented than ever, and that the fete de Dieu was celebrated in all the churches in Pariswith the greateft fplendor. The legiflature was occupied with regulating the police of religious worfhip.

WEST-NIAGARA, September 27.

The nuptials of the princefs royal with his ferene highnefs, the prince of Wurtemberg, were celebrated at the chapel royal St James's, on the 20th of May, and on the 2d of June, their highneffes fat out from London for Germany.

The fleet which lately arrived at Quebec, brought provifions for his Majefty's forces in thefe provinces. It is faid there is a fufficiency for three years.

We learn from almoft every part of the province, that the crops of the feafon are abundant and well faved.

It is faid that General Simcoe failed for England the 8th July, and that he is fucceeded in command at St Domingo, by Gen. Whyte.

The Kentucky gazette fays—"From reports thro' different channels, there appears a probability that we are on the eve of an Indian war. A large body of Indians, from different tribes northweft of the river Ohio, as well as from the fouthweft, are faid to be collected in the Spanifh territory, oppofite the Illinois, where the Spaniards have affift ed them in erecting a very large councilhoufe.

The reafon faid to be given by the Spaniards for the encouragement given by them to the Indians, to fettle in the territory of Spain, is to enable them to repel an invafion from Canada."

Particulars of the late fire at Albany, collected from the papers of that city.

About half paft 10 o'clock in the evening of the 4th of Auguft, a ftable in the fouth-eaft corner of Steuben and Dock ftreets was difcovered in flames. The wind, after a very ruftry afternoon, S. E. In a few minutes the flakes of fire were carried in a N. W. direction thro' all the fquares between the river and Pearl-ftreet. The utmoft exertions could not arreft its progrefs until it had deftroyed almoft 7 fquares, containing about 96 dwelling houfes, befides upwards of 100 ftores and ftables. From Steuben ftreet, on the S. to Van Tromp-ftreet, on the N. and from the river to Pearl ftreet, a few folitary houfes only remain. The elegant houfes of Gen. Ten Broeck, the mayor, and of Mr. Jauncy, merchant, are among the ruins.—By the perfeverance and well adapted meafures of the parties of men on the [illegible] judge Lanfing, and the late dr. Wendell, a ftop was put to its progrefs further fouth.

Befide thofe already named as great fufferers, are meff. Vanderheyden, Fondey, M'Harg, Chefney, and the widows Wendell, Rofeboom, Fither, Pruyn, and Groefbeck, and ten other perfons. The lofs is eftimated at £100,000, and 250 families driven from their dwellings.

People were much divided at that time in opinion as to the manner of its being fet: and from many circumftances fince added to thofe of that evening, it is now the general belief that it was purpofely fet.

The governor of Vermont difown us the authority of Ira, Allen in purchafing arms, &c. for that ftate, and the cargo of 20,000 ftands, and 20 braft pieces, taken laft winter, will remain a pr ze.

PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS by an act of the provincial parliament paſſed in the thirty-ſeventh year of his Majeſty's reign, entitled "An act for making temporary proviſion for the regulation of trade between this province and the United States of America, by land or inland navigation," it was amongſt other things enacted, that from and after the paſſing of the act, it ſhould and might be lawful for the governor, lieutenant-governor or perſon adminiſtering the government of this province, by and with the advice and conſent of his Majeſty's executive council, by order or orders to be from time to time iſſued and publiſhed to ſuſpend the operation of the whole, or any part or parts of any act, or acts, or ordinance, or ordinances that might impede, or might be conſtrued to impede the free intercourſe ſtipulated by the ſaid treaty between his Majeſty's ſubjects, and the citizens of the ſaid States. FROM THE PRINCETON PACKET.

Differences in opinion are an advantage to ſociety.

IT is the utmoſt perverſion to human nature that people differing in opinion, cannot live peaceably together. Men join in ſociety for mutual aid and ſupport; and they ſubmit to be governed, becauſe government is eſſential to ſociety. But this ſubmiſſion extends not to a man's private thoughts and opinions; theſe he may indulge as his reaſon dictates to him. Nature is full of variety, and the mind of man correſponds to it; being prone to variety and delighting in it. We feel ourſelves as in fetters when long confined to one object. To a well diſpoſed mind it muſt be equally entertaining, to look down as it were from an eminence, upon the various tempers, ſentiments, opinions and purſuits of mankind tending to different ends, ſometimes claſhing and interfering, but upon the whole, conſpiring to the publiſc good.

A modern author when writing on this ſubject, remarks, "That the endleſs differences in temper, in taſte, and in mental faculties, that of reaſoning in particular, procures neceſſarily variety in ſentiment and in opinion." Different features and different expreſſions of countenance in the human race not only diſtinguiſh one perſon from another, but promote ſociety; by adding us to chuſe a friend, an aſſociate, a partner for life. Difference in opinion and ſentiment have ſtill more beneficial effects, they rouſe the attentions, give exercise to the underſtanding, and ſharpens the reaſoning faculty. What comfort would ſociety afford and converſation one of its chief ſupports without variety in humor and ſentiment? language would be uſeleſs, and man would degenerate into a brute. What then ſhall we think of thoſe who in company or ſocieties are rude to every one who differs from them?—Such conduct is nearly as ridiculous as it would be to pull every one by the note whoſe face diſpleases us. Both in private ſocieties and in popular aſſemblies, oppoſition of ſentiment ſtrikes out many amuſing converſations, many beautiful reflections, & many ſhining thoʻts that enligten the mind and cheer the heart. It is certainly true, that if all men had the ſame turn of mind, ſociety could not exiſt. Uniformity would ſoon bring diſguſt. Yet ſuch is the influence of paſſion and prejudice that even in this enlightened age, we find numberleſs inſtances where not only the public, but even the members themſelves, who have compoſed popular aſſemblies, have taken up unfavorable prejudices, which could never be removed, againſt thoſe who happened to differ from them in opinion.

It becomes every man who wiſhes to ſee knowledge and rational principles diffuſed, to do all in his power to ſuppreſs ſuch illiberal ſentiments: And how can this be done more effectually than by promoting & ſupporting literay ſocieties for mutual improvement. It is by ſuch means that reaſon will reſume her ſovereign authority, and ſpeedily banish the remains of bigotry and illiberality of ſentiment from civil ſociety.

But it may be aſked if there are no opinions which are grafted on our nature, and in which all men agree? That there is a Deity to whom we owe gratitude and worſhip; and that there is a right and wrong in actions which ought to regulate the conduct of every man, cannot be denied. Opinions contradictory to theſe propoſitions ought to be held in deteſtation by every good man, but we ought to deteſt the opinions not the perſons who hold them; if any ſuch there are to be found in the ſociety, they are the objects of pity rather than deteſtation.

PHEOPHILANTHROPIC SOCIETY.

A ſociety has been lately formed in Paris, which every friend to morality muſt regard with pleaſure: it is called The ſociety of Philanthropiſts, or, worſhipers of God and friends of man. They regularly obſerve the ſabbath on every ſeventh day, correſponding with Sunday, giving the title of moral and religious feſtivals to their general meetings, which take place on this day, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon. Their exerciſes conſiſt in reading, and ſpeaking, interſperſed with ſinging.—The principles and forms adopted by this inſtitution are ſuch, that it cannot be conſidered as an excluſive religious ſect: Its object is to recall to the practice of religious worſhip, thoſe who are now attached to no particular form; at the ſame time, that its exerciſes may be obſerved as moral practices by the diſciples of all religions. This ſociety does not pretend to eſtabliſh a particular ſect, neither abjuring nor oppoſing the principles of any other. They have no rites nor prieſthood. The deſign is to bring forward no opinion but what may ſuit the moral and religious opinions of every country. It is the eaſier for them to keep within theſe bounds, as their tenets are ſuch as every one muſt agree in; their morality ſuch as can occaſion no ſectarian diſputes, and the name they have aſſumed comprehending the two principal objects of every ſect, their duty to God and their fellow men.

A ſecond ſociety is formed upon the ſame principle, with this difference, that their days of worſhip are celebrated on the decades, or every tenth day, at the ſame place and hour with the former.

WEST-NIAGARA, October 4.

At the late treaty held at Big Tree, the United States have extinguiſhed the Indian title to all the lands in the ſtate of N. York weſt of Genefee river, except 200,000 acres on the annual rents of 6,000 dollars.

Before the contract for the conveyance of the mail to the U. States garriſon of Niagara can be put into operation, it is neceſſary that 150 dollars be raiſed in this province: a ſubſcription for that ſum was a few days ſince ſet on foot, on which we are happy to ſee the names of our reſpectable citizens with ſums annexed that do honor to them, and we expect that that ſum is now nearly or quite made up.

A letter of late date received at the United States garriſon, from Genefee, informs that the writer had ſeen an Albany paper which contained an account of a fire at N. York, which had done great damage, particularly on Broadway. Particulars are not ſtated.

Gerald & Skirving who were baniſhed to Botany, have died at that place; Muir, who made his eſcape from thence, was lately killed by a ſhot from the Britiſh fleet while attempting in an open boat to land at Cadiz.

The death of John Angelo Braſci, the pope, was announced at Paris on the 1ſt of June. He was born in the year 1717, and was declared pope in 1775.

From the New York Minerva.

OLIVE BRANCH—The public remember the capture of this ſhip laſt winter, laden with 2,000 ſtands of arms & equipage complete. She was from France; but her deſtination unknown, and her deſigns myſterious But her original contracts, and ſome recent occurrences, will help to unravel the myſtery.

The contracts for 20,000 ſtands of arms with all their accompaniments complete, 20 pieces of braſs cannon, tents, &c. were made by Ira Allen, of Vermont, with the French miniſter of war, and ſaid to be for the uſe of that ſtate. On enquiry, it appears that the governor of Vermont has never authoriſed any purchaſe of arms; nor is there any law of the ſtate under which Ira Allen could act. It follows that this pretence is only a cover for ſome other deſign.

On examining the contracts it appears, that the price ſtipulated is ſcarcely 1 fourth of the value of the articles, and Allen was to pay for them by inſtallment at different periods, the laſt of which is to be many years hence. This is a genuine ſtate of facts, for which we pledge our paper.

Let us compare theſe facts with the attempts of Adet, by maj. M'Lane and other emiſſaries, to excite the Canadians to revolt; and we ſhall not heſitate a moment to believe the arms and artillery were deſtined for Canada; and it is a fact, that col. Lyon has made and ſent to Canada large quantites of cannon balls, &c. and this by the bye will unfold his motives in oppoſing that part of the bill for prohibiting the exportation of powder, arms and ammunition, at the late ſeſſion of congreſs. Indeed there can be no doubt that all theſe preparations were intended to aid the French in conquering Canada.

But this is not all. The conſpiracy was more deep and extenſive. The deſign was to extend the French conqueſts to the Miſſiſippi and down the gulph of Mexico. To gain a plauſible pretext for attacking the Spaniſh ſettlements as well as Canada, agents were employed to hatch a conſpiracy on the Britiſh, and obtain their countenance to an attack on Louiſiana and Florida. This would have been diſcloſed by the men who formed the ſcheme, at the moment it ſhould have been found neceſſary to begin their operations: and then the Britiſh plot would have been alledged as the juſtification of an attack on Canada, while an army of 5 or 6000 Frenchmen, actually aſſembled at New Orleans, would have aided the Spaniards to repel the Americans who are endeavoring to run the line in that country, and then take poſſeſſion of that country for France.

From a Boſton paper.

That man, ſays a correſpondent, muſt be blind indeed, who does not at once perceive that it is the intention of the French to produce a rupture between this country and Spain. The French are unwilling to declare war againſt us themſelves, for fear of loſing ground even among their preſent advocates; but if Spain ſhould be at war with us, our generous allies the French, having a treaty offenſive and defenſive with Spain, would ſay to us,—don't be angry, friends, for the French nation, ever faithful in the ſtrict obſervance of their treaties, are under the diſagreeable neceſsity of making a common cauſe with Spain.

Extract of a letter from gentlemen in Jerſey, to their correſpondent in Quebec, dated July 11.

"We are yet in a ſtate of uncertainty whether we ſhall have peace, or that war will be continued; appearances, however, give us hopes, that peace is not far diſtant, and we have to tell you that the general politics look as favorable as can be wiſhed under the preſſure of the times. Lord Malmeſbury and his ſuite are arrived at Liſle, where the congreſs is to meet; but although we may reaſonably hope a favorable iſſue to the negociation, the ſtate of parties in France, and the doubt whether the moderates and people, who call for peace, may not once more be overthrown, render it prudent to wait the opening of the congreſs, before peace be conſidered as at hand.

In the mean while, however, it is a great ſatisfaction to ſee the diſcipline of the navy reſtored, the jacobins completely beaten in the city, and the country more unanimous in the ſupport of government than it has been for a length of time paſt, ſo that if unhappily the negociation ſhould fail, you will ſee the country diſplay an energy our enemies did not expect.

POSTSCRIPT to the Gazette.

Juſt as this paper was going to the preſs, an obliging friend favored us with the Geneva paper of the 22d ult. from which we collect the following particulars, and make room for their appearance in abſtract until our next, when they will be inſerted at length:—

By the Severn from Hull, July 8. Lord Malmeſbury has arrived at Liſle, and the three commiſſioners from France to treat for a ſeperate peace, which the Britiſh government had acceded to. That a commercial intercourſe to ſome degree had opened between England and France.

By the Sarratoga, from Rotterdam June 28. Mr. Nieuhoff informed the captain that the French directory had invited him to return to Paris and reſume his functions, and that he was only waiting for freſh inſtructions to comply with the invitation. This ſhip brought diſpatches from Mr. Pickney—American veſſels lately carried to France have been liberated.

An Edinburgh article of June 29 mentions, that an American captain fell in with 2 French privateers, the captains of which informed him that every difference between that country and the U. States were ſettled, and their orders were not to moleſt American veſſels.

It is officially notified to the adminiſtration at London, from St Domingo, that Santhonax hired a number of perſons to ſet fire to the populous towns in the United States. Mr. King was ſerved with the copy of the letter.

In France Reformation is the word of the day—commotions continue to agitate that country; riots frequent. The definitive articles between the emperor and France will be ſettled in the congreſs. Koſciuſko arrived at Philadelphia the 18th of September.

From a late paper.

A curious circumſtance has lately happened in Spain; it is well atteſted by a reſpectable Spaniard, and we do not entertain the leaſt doubt of its authenticity.

Don Ramno de Salas, profeſſor and doctor of the univerſity of Salamancha, had been tried & condemned by the inquiſition to one year's confinement in priſon, and 4 years in a convent, for having made uſe of improper and heretic words. There could not, however, be any proofs brot of the crime alledged againſt him, and the inquiſition formed their judgment like the revolutionary tribunal of France:—"It" ſays it, "Sallas has not made uſe of the words imputed to him, we, however, know him to be capable of it; he is a dangerous ſpirit, and we are well perſuaded he entertains doubts with reſpect to purgatory."

Two lawyers of Caſtile proteſted againſt the ſentence, and declaimed againſt the iniquity of the judges. In order to appeaſe them, they permitted a ſecond trial, but Salas was again unanimouſly condemned:—the lawyers then made an implication to the prince of Peace; an order was immediately iſſued by the king for annulling the ſentence; his highneſs the cardinal archbiſhop of Toledo, Lorenzana, refuſed to obey it. In juſtification of his conduct he produced the fundamental ſtatutes of the inquiſition, over which the temporal authority has no power. A new order was then given by the king, with poſitive injunctions to have it obeyed: upon this the grand inquiſitor went to the queen, by whom he was coolly received, nor was he better treated by the king and the prince of peace. At length the ſentence was annulled, and Salas ſet at liberty.

This is the firſt inſtance that in Spain the temporal authority has annuled a ſentence of the inquiſition; but reaſon is making rapid progreſs there; already has it ſapped the foundations of this monſtrous coloſſus; it totters and is ready to tumble into ruin.—God grant that its fall may not drag after it the miſfortunes which followed the overthrow of religious inſtitutions in France.—Without doubt, fanaticiſm is a monſter which ought to be deſtroyed; but religion viewed in its true point of light, is a wiſe & uſeful inſtitution to all people.

PASIGRAPHY.

Propoſals have been printed at Paris for publiſhing by ſubſcription, a work under the above title; or elements of the Art of writing and printing in one language, ſo as to be underſtood in any other without tranſlation. It is a language that can be written only, not ſpoken. It contains 12 characters, which are totally different from the letters of all languages, and twelve general rules, which are preciſe and applicable without any exception. The author aſſerts that it may be learned in a few hours.—"It will be with Paſigraphy," ſays one of the French Journals, "as with geography, where a certain point of interſection denotes a town or an iſland. Let the town, &c. be called either Conſtantinople or Stamboul, Londre or London, Paris or Parigi, thoſe who can take, at the firſt glance, the longitude and latitude, will immediately name the country, the province, and the place, every one in his own language." Such a language muſt obviouſly prove of great utility and importance.

BOSTON, August 29.

ABROAD—Every thing indicates the reign of tranquility will ſoon commence. Our news is now of late date. Lord Malmeſbury, it appears, was finally induced to accept of the full powers of making peace between England and France. The mutual cordial with for the event is indubitable. Reformation is the "order du jour," in France. The purification of the colonies is ſyſtematiſed. All the vultures which have ſo long preyed upon our honeſt commerce have, at laſt terminated their power, though they may eſcape from deſerved puniſhment. Commotions continue to agitate France. Riots were frequent: two at Bourdeaux about the 25th of July. The object to prevent the refuſcitation of the ſyſtem of terror, which was apprehended. The ſtory of hoſtilities between France and Auſtria, was founded on flight and accidental ſkirmiſhing—the effect of trifling circumſtances, unauthoriſed by any general officer, and which was forgot almoſt as ſoon as known. The preliminaries of peace between the two countries, it is well known, are ſigned. The definitives will be ſettled by the congreſs: but Buonaparte ſays, "negociations continue, which muſt ſignify, that the work of the congreſs is arranged and ſimplifying, of courſe we preſume, when that body meets, it will ſoon conclude the buſineſs.

ALEXANDRIA, (Virg.)
Office of the TIMES, Saturday evening
August 12.

Several veſſels have arrived this morning, among which is the Saratoga, captain Towers, from Rotterdam.

Captain Towers left that place the 8th June. We have converſed with him, and he confirms the pleaſing intelligence, contained in our paper of this morning—that our differences with France, from every appearance, would be amicably ſettled.

American veſſels that had lately been carried into France had been liberated.

This information he received from Mr. Pinckney, himſelf, who was at Rotterdam with Mr. Adams.

PARIS, June 9.

The directory, we underſtand, has returned an anſwer to the late diſpatches from the cabinet of St. James' that it was ready to reſume negociation for peace. but that in order to avoid the ſame difficulties which had cauſed the failure of lord Malmſbury's miſſion, it would be neceſſary to ſettle ſome preliminary articles, previous to the grantiug of paſſports for a new plenipotentiary: and that if the court of London approved of this meaſure, the directory would readily concur in accelerating the concluſion of peace on terms juſt and honorable for both nations. Perlet.

June 12.

Letters from Vienna concur in ſtating, that the 25th of laſt month had been fixed as the time for public rejoicigs on account of the termination of hoſtilities, dut that the emperor has ordered this expreſſion of general ſatisfaction to be poſtponed to "the moment," as he himſelf is ſaid to have declared, "when all Europe ſhall have reaſon to rejoice." This declaration cannot be otherwiſe explained than by its reference to the concluſion of a general peace.

LONDON, June 15.

Every neceſſary arrangement for commencing the negociation between this country and France is now completely formed. Lord Malmeſbury is the perſon appointed to treat in behalf of this country, and we underſtand that Mr Barthelemy is the negociator on the part of the French.

A cabinet counſil was yeſterday held at lord Grenville's office on the ſubject of lord Malmeſbury's credentials, when it was determined that his lordſhip ſhould be inveſted with full powers to negociate and conclude a peace with the French republic. He is expected to ſet out for Paris on Monday next, accompanied by lord Morpeth, ſon to the earl of Carliſle, and two other gentlemen as his ſecretaries.

By his Majeſty's packet Jane, which arrived at New-York, Auguſt 25, in 56 days from Falmouth, London accounts are brought down to the 24th of June.

LONDON, June 20.

This day parliament was prorogued till Thurſday, October 5, and is Majeſty was pleaſed to deliver the following

SPEECH:

My lords and gentlemen,

I cannot put an end to this ſeſſion of parliament, without returning you my moſt ſincere and cordial thanks for the aſſiduity and zeal with which you have applied yourſelves to the important objects which have required your attention, and for the wiſdom and firmneſs which you have manifeſted in the new and difficult emergencies for which you have had to provide.

I muſt particularly expreſs the juſt ſenſe I entertain of the ſalutary and effectual proviſions which you made for ſtrengthening the means of national defence, and the meaſures adopted for obviating the inconveniences which were to be apprehended to credit from the temporary ſuſpenſion of payments in cath by the bank, as well as for the promptitude, vigor, and effect with which you aſſorded me your aſſiſtance and ſupport in ſuppreſſing the daring and treaſonable mutiny which broke out in part of my fleet, and in counteracting ſo dangerous and pernicious an example.

I have the ſatisfaction to acquaint you that ſince the acceſſion of the preſent emperor of Ruſſia, the commercial engagements between the two countries have been renewed in ſuch a manner as will, I doubt not, materially conduce to their mutual intereſts

Gentlemen of the houſe of commons,

I muſt return you my particular thanks for the liberal and extenſive proviſion which you have made for the various exigencies of the public ſervice; and, while I lament the neceſſity which increaſed them to ſo large an amount, it is a conſolation to me to obſerve the attention you employed in diſtributing the heavy burdens which they occaſioned, in ſuch a manner as to render their preſſure as little ſevere as poſſible to my people.

My lords and gentlemen,

The iſſue of the important negociation in which I am engaged, is yet uncertain. But whatever may be the event, nothing will have been wanting, on my part, to bring it to a ſucceſsfull termination on ſuch conditions as may be conſiſtent with the ſecurity, honor, and eſſential intereſts of my dominions. In the mean time, nothing can ſo much tend to forward the attainment of peace, as the continuance of that zeal, exertion and public ſpirit, of which my ſubjects have given ſuch conſpicuous and honorable proofs, and of which the perſeverance and firmneſs of parliament has afforded them ſo ſtriking an example.

Then the lord Chancellor, by his majeſty's command, ſaid—

My lords and gentlemen,

It is his Majeſty's royal will and pleaſure, that this parliament be prorogued to Thurſday, the fifth day of October next, to be then here holden; and this parliament is accordingly prorogued to Thurſday, the 5th day of October next.

June 24. Advices from Vienna of the 7th report, that the cabinets of Vienna and Peterſburgh are occupied in doing an act of juſtice, which muſt be an agreeable ſurpriſe to every honeſt mind. They intend to reſtore to Poland its loſt exiſtence as an independent ſtate, by giving up the provinces which the three diſmembering powers tore from it in the year 1704. Ruſſia and Auſtria are quite diſpoſed to this reſtitution, but a very different diſpoſition ſways the Pruſſian cabinet, which ſtarts many objections and difficulties againſt ſo juſt and laudable a project.

A revolution has taken place at Genoa, to which the ſenate, not being able to make any efficacious reſiſtance, have conſented.—Brulleis papers are received to the 16th inſtant. Theſe bring intelligence that a ſerious miſunderſtanding has taken place between the Swiſs and the French generals in Italy, reſpecting the navigation of the lake of Lugano. Buonaparte inſinuates that they are enemies of France, and threatens to enforce his claims by a column of the French army.

Letters were received in town, and delivered on Friday and Saturday, from the brave veteran gen. O'Hara, at Gibralter.—It appears that the Spaniſh army is daily increaſing on the lines of St. Roche, and the environs, and that the works at thoſe lines go on ſyſtematically. But the works of Gibraltar are ſo powerfully augmented, that he does not apprehend the leaſt danger, he ſays that a mot or a charge of powder ſhall not be waſted, until the Spaniards make lines of approaches, when, he aſſerts, that a very ſhort period will reconcile their raſhneſs.

JULY 22.

Saturday evening, after attending their parliamentary duty, the lord chancellor, duke of Portland, and ſome other peers, and alſo the ſpeaker of the houſe of commons, Mr. Pitt, Mr. Dundas, and ſome other members, ſet off for Beconfield, to attend the funeral of the late E. Burke, elq. which took place that evening.

JULY 25.

Yeſterday morning diſpatches were received at the admiralty from from commodore Sir John Borlaſe Warren, containing the pleaſing intelligence of the ſquadron under his command having intercepted a French convoy, and captured ſeven ſhips, laden with proviſions, on their paſſage from Nantz to Breſt, for the purpoſe of ſupplying the fleet at that port with their cargoes.—The gallant and indefatigable commodore, we are happy to add, has alſo driven a French frigate on the Pennmark rocks, and deſtroyed a corvette of 12 guns, and a large veſſel laden with timber, which he could not bring off. It is but common juſtice to his merits to ſay, that there is no officer in the Britiſh navy to whoſe activity the country owes more than to Sir John Borlaſe Warren,

Extraordinary duel,

An affair of honor of a very extraordinary nature took place a ſhort time ſince in the neighborhood of Waterford, in Ireland: a young phyſician of that place having been groſsly inſulted, as he conceived, by two officers, demanded ſatisfaction, and, in order to make ſhort work of it, determined to fight them both at once;—this challenge was accepted, and all three of them met the next morning, the phyſician ſtanding in a line between his adverſaries, with a piſtol in each hand, pointed to both of them:—all the combatants fell on the firſt fire;—the phyſician was wounded it the breaſt, one of his opponents was ſhot thro' the knee, and the other in his right ſide, but they are all recovered.

WEST-NIAGARA, October 11.

On Wedneſday evening laſt the mail for firſt time arrived at Fort Niagara, and on Friday morning returned. The ſubſcription for that purpoſe mentioned in out laſt, is withdrawn, and the expence wholly borne by the poſt office department of the United States. The line of ſtages has been lately extended from Fort Schuyler to Geneva, in the Geneſee, and large ſums of money are raiſed and raiſing for improving and extending the roads to this place.

☞ The mail being appointed to arrive on Wedneſday, and, during the winter ſeaſon, may be unavoidably delayed until Thurſday, and that we may have proper time to give our readers the lateſt intelligence, we are obliged to alter ourday of publication to Saturday, and on that day next week the gazette will the next time appear.

Speech of DAVID WOOD, while ſtanding in the pillory at Charleſtown, New-Hampſhire, May 27th, '97, for forging a deed.

SYMPATHYZING FRIENDS,

You come here this day to ſee a ſad ſight, a poor old man publicly diſgraced, for attempting to make a penny out of fifty acres of Vermont rocks; and yet I ſee ſome here in gay coats, and mounted on naggith horſes, who have made thouſands out of lands, to which you had no more title, than I to David Dray's rocks. But you are great rogues, and wear ſilver ſpurs, and white beaver hats, and flourith your loaded whips, forget what you once were, drink your Madeira, and talk of your millions of acres, and ſit at your eaſe; while poor I, who have ſpeculated a little, in a fifty acre lot, which would not maintain a woodchuck, muſt ſtand here; for I am a little rogue, and have no pretenſions to be a great ſpeculator.

Let me aſk you, what is the difference, as to ſin, between a man, who forges a deed and ſells lands under it, and a man who ſells lands, to which he has no title? You all know the great ſquire——, he bought lands in Boſton at the time all their great men got caught in the Georgia land-trap. The ſquire came home by the way of Hartford, at the very moment when the Hartford foxes were wailing for the loſs of their tails, in the ſame ſpring trap. The ſquire found he had bought the devil, and was determined to ſell him again on the beſt terms he could. He put his ſpurs to the old mare, rode before the news, and ſold to the widow Lawly and her two ſons, who had juſt come of age, about 5000 acres of land, which laid the Lord knows where, and to which he had no title, and took all their father, the old deacon's farm in mortgage, and threatens to turn the poor widow upon the town, and her two ſons upon the world; but this is the way of the world.—The ſquire is a great ſpeculator, he is of the quorum, can ſit in the ſeſſions, and fine poor girls for natural miſteps; but I am a little rogue who ſpeculated in only fifty acres of rocks, and muſt ſtand here in the pillory.

Then there is the ſtate of Georgai. They ſold millions of acres, which they had no more title than I to David Dray's land. Their great men pocketed the money; and their hon. aſſembly publicly burnt all the records of their conveyance, and are now ſelling the lands again. But Georgia is a great honorable ſtate. They can keep no-gro flaves, race horfes gouge out eyes, fend members to fight duels at congrefs, and cry out for France and the guillotine, and be honored in the land; while poor L—who never murdered any one, who never fought a duel or gouged an eye; and had too much honor to burn my forged deed, when I had once been wicked enough to make it, muft ftand here in the pillory, for I am a little rogue. Take warning by my fad fate; and if you muft fpeculate in lands, let it be in millions of acres; and if you muft be rogues, take warning by my unhappy fate and become great rogues—For as it is faid in a pair of verfes I read when I was a boy.

Little villains muft fubmit to fa .

BOSTON, September 6.

By arrivals from Lifbon, we learn that admiral St. Vincents, after having obliged the Spanifh fleet to take fhelter in Cadiz harbor had inveſted that city. In the proſecution of this plan, he captured Port-St. Mary's, a place about 6 miles from Cadiz, and from whence the city is fupplied with water, vegetables, &c. The Spanifh fleet having retired beyond the part of the ifland on which Cadiz is fituated, St. Vincents proceeded to bombard both the city and the fleet beyond it. By the laſt accounts from Lifbon, the bombardment muſt have commenced about the 4th of July, and had not ceaſed on the 9th or 10th, as appears by meſſrs. Bulkley's letters. Earl St. Vincents' fleet has been ſtrongly reinforced ſince his engagement with the Spanifh; and the Engliſh troops which lately evacuated the iſland of Elba, in the Mediterranean, (4000) are ſaid to have joined him. It is ſaid a great part of the inhabitants have fled, as the Spanifh fleet diſcovered no diſpoſition to meet the Engliſh; which, from its length of time at ſea, and experience of commanders, was in a high ſtate of diſcipline.

Extract of a letter from Lifbon, July 18.

"The laſt poſt informs us that Cadiz is inveſted by Jarvis' fleet. The bombardment has been very ſevere, upwards of 15000 inhabitants have fled from that city, which has been ſet on fire in ſeveral places. The town of St. Mary's on the main, has already been captured."

Extract of a letter from meſſ. Bulkley & Son, dated Lifbon, July 18.

"The blockade and bombardment of Cadiz muſt continue, to the great injury and detriment of their trade."

The poſſeſſion of S. Mary's was neceſſary to the ſupply of the Engliſh fleet with water.

Letters from Lifbon ſuggeſt it as the opinion of many, that admiral Jarvis means to deſtroy as much of the Spanifh fleet as poſſible, and then lay Cadiz under a heavy contribution, a la mode de Francaiſe.

In ſuch contempt does admiral Jarvis hold the Spanifh fleet, that while lying off Cadiz harbor, he by turns unrigged all the veſſels of his fleet in open view; and at one time, we are informed by an American captain who ſaw it, five ſhips had actually their topmaſts on deck at the ſame time; and ſeveral ſhips of the ſquadron ſailed into the harbor, gave the forts a broad ſide, and returned.

Sept. 9. On Wedneſday arrived here the brig Defiance, capt. Joſhua Jenkins, Martinico, 43 days.—In lat. 28, long. 63, captured by a French privateer called the Cruizer, of 60 guns, who took his whole crew, except the cook and himſelf, and put a lieutenant and 5 Frenchmen, part men of color, on board, ordering her for St. Domingo.—On the 21ſt Auguſt, Hiſpaniola bearing s.s. w. 30 miles, capt. Jenkins formed the brave & daring reſolution of again poſſeſſing himſelf of his veſſel and cargo, and the property of his employer; obſerving the helſman to be alone armed, and but one other on the quarter deck, he unhung one of the companion doors, and with a violent exertion knocked down both the men, and ſeized on the loaded piſtols with which the helſman was armed, but could obtain only one of them, the man eſcaping below with the other. The prize maſter then came on deck, followed by his black & white retinue, and taking the piſtol from his vanquiſhed comrade, heroically fired at capt. Jenkins, but fortunately its contents paſſed his right ear without damage: capt. Jenkins then preſented his piſtol at the breaſt of the prize-maſter, and threatning him with inſtant death ordered him forward to the foreca ſtle, and in the ſame manner compelled the men to follow him. Having accomplithed thus much he found it neceſſary to poſſeſs, by ſome means or other, aſſiſtance, which by threats and promiſes he ſucceeded in, in bringing over two of the blacks to his ſide; with this aid he ſeized on the prize-maſter and the remainder of the crew, and confined them until the next day, when he fitted out his boat with proviſions and other neceſſaries, for a ſhort voyage to land, and ſet them adrift.—With the aſſiſtance of theſe blacks, captain Jenkins navigated his veſſel to port; and on entering the harbor, ſaluted his friends with a diſcharge from his ſwivels.

NEW-YORK, Sept. 22.

Yeſterday arrived in this city from Quebec, the hon. lady Johnſon, lady of his excellency Sir John Johnſon, accompanied by her two daughters.

LISLE, June 29.

The miniſter of the interior, Benezeth, has written a letter to the municipality, in which he engages it to juſtify, by its zeal, the confidence with which the directory has honoured that city, in chooſing it for the place of the negociations for peace, about to be opened with England. The municipality has publiſhed the following proclamation:—

The municipal adminiſtration of Liſle, to their fellow citizens.

CITIZENS,

"The plenipotentiaries of the French republic arrive within our walls; they come to plant the olive of peace, and to labor at the great work of the public felicity. The plenipotentiaries of England will join them in the commune, and bring with them all the pacific diſpoſitions, which will reanimate the hope of ſeeing the effuſion of human blood ſtopped, of giving new life to agriculture and commerce, and of eſtabliſhing the happineſs ſo long expected by the French republic and all Europe. Theſe circumſtances, ſo fortunate for the friends of humanity, of order and of public felicity, will exact from our fellow citizens a firm ſacrifice of their time and their labor ſ out the ſacrifice will appear light to them, when they will be the ſure to reap the advantages of them. Without waiting for the requiſitions which circumſtances may render neceſſary, we flatter ourſelves that every one of our fellow citizens will lend his aſſiſtance in paying to the repreſentatives of the two nations all due honor, to thoſe whom two powerful rivals willing to become friends, have choſen for the purpoſe of bringing about the common happineſs. Our fellow-citizens and brethren in arms are informed, that the local national guard of the commune will take up arms on the firſt ſignal given for the arrival of the miniſters of the two nations; that they will be received with a diſcharge of the artillery of the place, that the troops of the line and the national guard will line the road from the gate to the habitation deſtined for the miniſters; and there will be a guard of honor provided for the reſpective preſidents of the two legations. There will be, beſides this, a guard ſtationed every day, which will be regulated according to circumſtances. Given at a ſitting held on the 25th June, 1797."

LONDON, Aug. 2.

Yeſterday morning, the hon. Mr. Weſley ſecretary of embaſſy, arrived. We believe he has brought the anſwer of the executive directory to the laſt propoſitions of our court—but nothing has tranſpired that can be relied on, all letters and papers have been ſtopped at Dover. Let the ſtate of the negociation be at preſent what it may, it muſt be plain to every perſon that the iſſue of it will in a great meaſure depend on the event of the preſent ſtruggle for power in France.

Yeſterday morning arrived a Lifbon mail. The laſt letters from Lifbon are dated the 12th ult. thoſe from Cadiz are dated the 10th, and juſt reached the period when earl St. Vincent recommended the bombardment of Cadiz. This is the firſt regular information we have of that circumſtance. The letters enter into no particulars, but merely ſtate that the Britiſh admiral had demanded a ſum amounting to twelve hundred thouſand pounds as a ranſom for ſparing the town.

The policy of this meaſure is, we know, ſubject to various opinions, many people conſider it would have been better to avoid ſuch a very unpleaſant alternative. We confeſs our regret in common with many others, that the laws of war ſhould authoriſe ſuch a cruel expedient, which muſt drive ſo many innocent people from their habitations, and reduce others to extreme miſery. We underſtand that one of the cauſes of this attack aroſe from the circumſtance of one of the two Spaniſh frigates laden with treaſure, (the Helena and Nympha, which were ſome time ſince captured in the Mediterranean) having been run on ſhore after it had ſtruck its colors to our ſhips of war, and the property has ſince been moſtly recovered by the Spaniards. This was a breach of honor which the court of Madrid ought not to have countenanced. But independant of this and other reaſons which may influence our admiral to bombard Cadiz, we ſee very ſtrong arguments to juſtify ſuch a meaſure in the conduct of the court of Spain towards Portugal. As that court can have no other pretence for threatening to commence hoſtilities againſt Portugal than being under the guidance of the councils of France; and as it is known that this country has been at a conſiderable expence in preparing Portugal againſt an invaſion, we ſee a very plauſible ground for demanding a ranſom from ſuch ports in Spain as are expoſed to an attack, to pay us for the expences we have incurred in the ſupport of our ally.

Extract of a letter from Liſle, dated July 15.

"Thoſe moſt intimately connected with the embaſſy aſſure me, that the principal points, and which are pretended to be inſiſted on, are, the ceſſion on the part of Great-Britain of every poſſeſſion taken from the French, and alſo from their allies—the reſtitution of the ſhips taken at Toulon—an indemnity for the loſs ſuſtained by deſtroying ſhips, &c. when the Engliſh and Spaniards evacuated that port—the recognition of Belgium as a part of the French republic—and the relinquiſhment of any mortgage the Britiſh government may have upon that territory for the payment of any loan which the emperor of Germany may have made in Great-Britain.

FALMOUTH, July 28.

This morning arrived his Majeſty's packet Prince Adolphus, capt John Boulderſon, from Lifbon, with the mail and diſpatches, after a paſſage of 14 days, having met with adverſe winds during the whole paſſage.

The capt. ſtates that on the 17th inſtant admiral lord St. Vincents, having exhauſted his patience by remaining ſo long inactive in the act of blockading Cadiz, gave orders for ſome of the fleet to unmoor, and get in as cloſe to Cadiz as they poſſibly could. He afterwards opened a brisk fire on part of Cadiz, which was ſoon levelled to the ground. The Spaniſh fleet had all previouſly ſlipped or cut their cables, being 37 ſail of the line, beſides frigates, and had all run up for ſhelter under the Carraccas.

HULL, July 21.

By expreſs—London, Wedneſday evening, July 19.

The cabinet council which was held this morning on the laſt diſpatches received from lord Malmeſbury on Sunday laſt, determined by a conſiderable majority, on a proſecution of the war, rather than ſubmit to the unreaſonable demands of the French directory. Mr. Pitt, lord Grenville, and Mr. Dundas were the only advocates for peace.

EDINBURGH, (Scot.) June 29.

THIS day the magiſtrates received the following information from the mayor of Hull, dated the 27th inſt.—That captain Barker of the American ſhip Pallas, on his paſſage from Galway to Hull, fell in with two French privateers—that he went on board one of them, the capt. of which ſaid he was cruiſing for the Greenland ſhips—that they had lately ſailed from Boulogne, but before they left that place, every thing had been ſettled between America and France, and that he had orders not to moleſt any American veſſel.

WEST-NIAGARA, October 21.

The mail arrived on Thurſday laſt, and bringing but few papers, none of which have we yet been able to ſee, we give the following as the contents from information; That nothing ſatisfactory as yet has tranſpired from the negociators for peace; but appearances are, that war muſt continue, as the French ſeem reſolved to their high demands. That the party in favor of peace, in Paris, is ſtrong, but as to contend againſt the directory, who are for war, and have command of the armies, and that of Paris is conſiderably reinforced, the better to govern the moderate, and thoſe for peace. Inſurrection ſeems to gauſe only for the iſſue of the negociation. The Engliſh plenipotentiaries were denied the honors aſſigned them by the proclamation under the Elle head, by the poſitive orders of the French commiſſioner and general. He took care, however to receive the honors himſelf. Conſidering the honor and ſincerity of that nation, whoſe only ſincere diſpoſition is to murder, plunder and rapine, we remain in great uncertainty as to the deſirable event of peace.

A capt. Haley of the richly laden American ſhip Hare, wiſhing to augment his fortune, conceived and executed the plan of running her into France, and having her condemned to him as a prize; a gentleman who was in France at the ſame time the ſhip's cauſe was tried, declares, that when the judge was about pronouncing her condemnation, he addreſſed capt. Haley, who was in court, and told him, that altho his object in bringing her into Dieppe was wholly perſonal, and intended not for the benefit of the republic, but himſelf alone, yet, he would be releaſed, were it not that certain proviſions of their maritime code had been infringed, which obliged him to condemn her, and all the property on board, as a legal prize to the republic. That as to him, it was abvious to the world, that he was an unprincipled ſcoundrel, and deſerved the reward due to every traitor; that no man who had a regard for his character, or the intereſts of his country, could be guilty of ſo atrocious an act—and that he felt very happy at the total diſappointment of his baſe views.

A German periodical writer has calculated that during the laſt two centuries, or ſince the year 1592, the houſe of Auſtria has been at war 136 years.

The governor of South Carolina has iſſued a proclamation, offering a reward of one thouſand dollars to any perſon who may give ſuch information as may lead to the diſcovery of the principals or accomplices in a plan, which he has reaſon to ſuppoſe is carried on, for making ſecret enliſtments for improper and illegal purpoſes.

PETER RUSSELL, PRESIDENT.

PROCLAMATION.

GIVEN under my hand ſeal at arms, this ſixteenth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety-ſeven, and thirty-ſeventh of his Majeſty's reign.

LINES FROM A FATHER TO HIS SON,

Written during a long confinement in Paris.

MY CHILD! and muſt I far from thee
The hateful load of life ſuſtain?
Each day, a lingering age to me,
Augments thy captive father's pain.

Thy ſportive hand, my babe, undrew
Each morn the curtains of my bed;
And every care my boſom knew,
At eve in thy endearments fled.

Now here enchained, my ſoul's delight!
In vain for thee at morn I call;
Unbleſt, my infant, by thy ſight,
The gloomy ſhades of evening fall.

Oft when the cheriſh'd dream of night
His plac'd thee on my yearning breaſt,
The clanking fetters put to flight
The image that my ſoul careſs'd.

I ſaw in beauty's early bloom
Thy tender mother yield her breath;
For thee I liv'd—for thee my doom
I mourn, of exile or of death.

Alas! in exile what deſpair!
Theſe eyes no more my child ſhall ſee!
In death what pang—unleſs I bear
Thy mother one embrace from thee!

From a London paper.

Frailty, thy name is Woman.—A mrs Mills, a newly made widow, aged 55, who had attended the obſequies of a dear huſband, about a month ago, was ſeen on Saturday morning with a tear of tenderneſs in her eye, (for ſhe had but one), over the grave of "her lov'd man," when a friend paſſing by, ſeeing her in a contemplative mood, ſaid, "I am ſorry for you, poor woman, you've had a heavy loſs!"—"Yes, that I have," exclaimed the afflicted widow, her heart ſeeming ready to burſt with anguiſh: At that moment the clerk of the church came up and accoſted her in a half whiſper, with "the parties are now waiting:" "What parties, mrs Mills ſaid her friend: "Don't aſk me," cries the matron, (grief almoſt choaking up her utterance) I am going to be-be-be-married again this morning to mr. Garter."

GENEVA, (Geneſee) October 6.

Extract of a letter dated Preſque-Iſle, Sept. 21ſt, to a gentleman of this town.

"An expreſs arrived here two days ago from Detroit, by which we learn, that the inhabitants within the juriſdiction of the United States at the Natchez, had hoiſted the tri-coloured flag, and had declared themſelves under the protection of the French. There is no doubt of the truth of this, as the commandant at this poſt ſhewed me this day a letter from the commander in chief, ſtating, that he had forwarded a conſiderable detachment for that country, and it is conjectured that he is going there himſelf."

ALBANY, September 22.

The following accounts, relative to the differences which exiſt between the agents of the United States and the Spaniſh government at the Natchez, were received by yeſterday's mail—they are copied from a Pittſburgh paper of the 9th inſt.

Extract of a letter from the Natchez, dated June 4, '97.

"Buſineſs in this quarter, continue to wear a threatening aſpect— all communication between governor Gayoſo and Mr. Ellicott, has ceaſed for this ſome time, and the Spaniards continue to fortify and reinforce their different garriſons.

"This day, a Mr. Powers, who is in the Spaniſh ſervice, ſtarted for Kentucky, and Mr. Ellicott has received poſitive information, that his buſineſs is to endeavor to raiſe an inſurrection there in favor of the Spaniards. He is a man well qualified for an undertaking of this kind."

Extract of a letter from the ſame place, dated 22d Jun'.

"This country is in an uproar—on the 17th inſtant the inhabitants declared themſelves independant, and to be true to the United States. Unleſs a change takes place, war will be the conſequence.

"A few nights ago, five of Mr. Ellicott's men were out patroling, and were fired on by the Spaniards from their fort—they returned the fire, but no damage was done on either ſide."

HAMBURG, July 29.

The negociations at Liſle are likely to be tedious, great differences being created by the French inſiſting upon the Dutch poſſeſſions in the Eaſt Indies being reſtored. We are even aſſured, that the Engliſh would rather give up Gibralter, than the Cape of Good-Hope.

ADMIRALTY OFFICE,

Extract of a letter from the right hon. lord Bridport, K. B. admiral of the white to Evan Nepean, eſq. dated on board his majeſty's ſhip Royal George, at ſea, July 24.

I acquaint you, for their lordſhips information, that I this day joined the ſhips under the orders of Sir John B. Warren, who has tranſmitted to me the incloſed letters and papers, which are copies of originals he ſent to me at Torbay, which did not arrive there till after I had quitted the anchorage.

La Pomone, at ſea, July 18.

MY LORD,

I beg leave to acquaint your lordſhip, that in obedience to your command, I continued off Uſhant with his majeſty's ſquadron under my orders, conſiſting of the following veſſels, (La Pomone, Artois, Anſon, Sylph and Dolly cutter) until the 16th inſt. when hearing the report of many guns to the ſouthward, I ſtood round the Weſt end of the Saints, and at day break in the morning of the 17th, I diſcovered a frigate, with a ſhip corvette and brig, having fourteen ſail of veſſels under convoy, in Hodierne bay, eight of which were captured.

I am ſorry to add that the ſhip, corvette, and brig eſcaped round the Penmarks, and the frigate by cutting away her maſts, and being otherwiſe lightened, ran on ſhore; a brig laden with ordnance and naval ſtores, came to an anchor near her, where it was impoſſible for the Anſon and Sylph to follow. The brig, however, was ſunk, and the frigate, (La Calliope) much damaged in hull by the ſhot of the above mentioned ſhip, whoſe officers and men behaved with the greateſt zeal and activity, which induces me to hope that the enemy will not be able to get her off, as the wind ſoon after changed to the ſouth-weſt, with a great ſwell upon the beach.

I was obliged to burn La Freedom, a large ſhip armed en flute, laden with ſquared timber, as the enemy had run her on ſhore at high water, and the crew with their wounded, got away in their boats.

I have incloſed to your lordſhip a liſt of the veſſels captured and deſtroyed on the 17th inſt. with a return of the wounded on board his majeſty's brig Sylph.

I have the honor to be, &c,

J. WARREN.

[A liſt of eight veſſels of different deſcriptions, (one of which is a tranſport laden with a large anchor, 6000lbs. weight, a purchaſe crane, flour, bread, beef, pork, brandy, ſoldier's cloathing, &c.) taken—of two deſtroyed—and one (La Calliope frigate) run on ſhore, and a return of five ſeamen and a marine belonging to the Sylph, wounded in engaging La Calliope, here follow.]

La Pomone, at ſea, July 24,

MY LORD,

I have the ſatisfaction of acquainting your lordſhip, that I had an opportunity of ſeeing that La Calliope republican frigate, of thirty ſix guns and two hundred and fifty men, that was left on ſhore the 17th by the Anſon and Sylph, is totally deſtroyed, having ſeparated in the midſhip body, and part of her ſunk. The crew are encamped near her to ſave ſuch ſtores as may be driven on ſhore.

I am particularly indebted to capt. White of the Sylph brig, who having anchored with ſprings on his cable, within piſtol ſhot of the ſaid frigate on the above day, for ſome hours kept up an inceſſant and well directed fire, which was at every convenient opportunity returned by her.

I perceived likewiſe the wrecks of la Freedom, armed en flute, laden with timber, and the brig with ordnance, which were driven on ſhore the ſame day and deſtroyed.

I have the honor, &c.

J. WARREN.

The right hon. lord Bridport.

His majeſty's armed cutter Telemachus, commanded by lieutenant Newton, has taken La Hardi French privateer luggar, of four carriage guns and 30 men, and retaken two merchant brigs captured by her, and carried them into Portſmouth.

The Trial cutter, lieut. Garrette, has captured la Courier de la Mer, a French privateer of 12 guns and 20 men, and retaken a brig captured by her, and carried her to Spithead.

The Hind revenue cutter, of Falmouth, has captured and ſent into that port L'Incroyable French privateer, of two carriage guns and 21 men, and alſo retaken a ſloop captured by her.

Auguſt 4.

A letter from Amſterdam, July 11, has the following melancholy picture of Holland.

"This country, once the envy of ſurrounding nations, is now ſunk in an abyſs of miſery. A country which before the revolution, was a Canaan, a country, which under the old government, had acquired ſo much wealth and glory—a country, which above moſt other nations, was rendered happy by juſt and equitable laws—a country, in which by the protection of our late worthy governors and directors, each man enjoyed undiſturbed repoſe under his vine and fig tree. This dear country, lamentable to relate, is now almoſt in the gulph of deſtruction, and driven to this extremity of [illegible] by Frenchmen, who rule over us with a rod of iron.

"As to our church, ſhe is alſo in a deplorable ſtate. Religion by which our country has acquired its former greatneſs, is now deſpiſed, trampled upon, and blaſphemy ſuffered with impunity."

Of the intelligence received by government from lord Malmeſbury, the different papers affect to be variouſly informed; ſome ſtating it to be favorable, and others not ſo. Reſpecting the demands of the directory being high, we have no doubt; as alſo, that the Britiſh government is not diſpoſed to accede to all their terms, we ſhall not diſpute, but what concluſion can be drawn from this? Not any: the information itſelf is nothing. Neither in France or England has a ſyllable on the ſubject of the negociation been ſuffered to tranſpire officially.

The firſt and third of the four Hamburg mails due, arrived in the afternoon, and at 11 o'clock laſt night we received our letters by the fourth mail. The ſecond is alſo ſaid to be landed at Yarmouth.

The news by the above mails has been in a great meaſure anticipated by the regular receipts of the Paris gazettes; but a private letter from Hamburg, dated the 28th ult. contains very intereſting news from Holland reſpecting the negociation at Liſle. It confirms the reports given in this paper and generally believed there, that the negociation is encumbered with many difficulties; & we have reaſon to believe that they principally regard our ceſſion of the Dutch poſſeſſions in the Eaſt Indies, which it was always foreſeen would be a bone of contention. The French are underſtood to have guaranteed the reſtitution of theſe ſettlements to the Batavian republic, becauſe they would in fact be throwing their political importance into the hands of France. The letters from Holland mention the Cape of Good-Hope to be the principal grounds of contention, tho' we are perſuaded that the iſland of Ceylon is conſidered of far greater importance. But we do not think that any correct opinion can be formed from any thing that has yet paſſed on the ſubject. As we have already obſerved, it is the ſyſtem of every negociation for both parties to make the beſt appearance of their own ſtrength and importance; our miniſtry are willing to give up all the conqueſt made from France, in order to procure peace; and it is ſaid that France has, in the firſt inſtance, demanded the reſtitution of every thing taken from herſelf, as well as her preſent allies. We think we will relax in her demands. But after all, ſuch is the importance of events now paſſing on the theatre of republican France, the iſſue of which no human foreſight can determine, that much muſt depend on the chapter of accidents; tho' it is unfortunate there ever was ſuch a chapter in the hiſtory of war.

Auguſt 8.

Yeſterday morning at one o'clock, we received by expreſs, Paris journals to the 31ſt inſt. inclusive. We immediately ſtopped the preſs to communicate the ſubſtance of their contents, which our readers will find fully detailed in our paper of this day.

The contents of theſe papers, which are extremely important, juſtify all the reflections which we have lately had occaſion to make on the internal ſtate of France, and the views of the different parties in that diſtracted country.

It appears from the debates of the councils, that the ſtatement given by the directory of the march of the troops towards the metropolis was totally falſe. Inſtead of nine thouſand men, ſaid to be detached from the army of the Sambre and Meuſe, the detachment amounted to between twenty-ſix and twenty-ſeven thouſand men.—Nor was the force intended, as the directory affirmed, for any naval expedition; but it was ſelected, as we ſuppoſed, for the expreſs purpoſe of overawing, if not diſſolving, the legiſlative body. The ſoldiers, indeed, whoſe minds had been poiſoned by emiſſaries from Paris, and by the jacobin journals, which were the only papers they were permitted to read, openly proclaimed the object of their march, and uttered the groſſeſt calumnies againſt the two councils. And notwithſtanding the order received from the miniſter of war to return to the ſtation which they had left, they continued their march to Paris, in obedience to the commands of their general Hoche, who by this act openly hoiſted the ſtandard of rebellion.

Our readers will recollect, that we ſtated, ſome time ſince, that Hoche and his army, known to be determined jacobins, were the inſtruments on whom the directory chiefly relied for perpetuating their own uſurped power, and for carrying into effect their own unconſtitutional deſigns.

The directory alſo appear to have effectually ſecured the proteſtion of the army of Italy. Addreſſes have been received from two more diviſions of that army, which breathe the rankeſt ſpirit of jacobiniſm; vow implicit obedience, not to the conſtitution, but to the directory, and devote their enemies to inſtant deſtruction.

Buonaparte, on the 14th of July, invited his troops to make a rapid march into France. He was much ſurpriſed, that they took the next day to debate upon this expedition. He writes, that he was not able to prevent them: yet he is a man who in general knows how to make himſelf obeyed and it is poſſible that they more regard his intentions than his orders.

I do therefore hereby revoke the ſaid power of attorney, and requeſt that no perſon will make any contract with the ſaid Thomas O Page, reſpecting my property, as I ſhall not eſteem myſelf bound by any covenant he may attempt to make by virtue of the ſame.

NOVEMBER.

AH me! how fast the summer flies,
And leaves the hapless shore;
While we beneath the low'ring skies,
Her absence must deplore.

See hostile autumn seeth's the land,
And strips the drooping trees;
Lo! how they moulder from her hand,
And fall at every breeze.

Stern hoary winter will prevail,
And drag her fleeces on;
Hark! how the swans the summer wail,
And mourn the season gone.

No more the morn shall blushing rise,
And pearly dews exhale;
No more shall gild the eastern skies,
Or chear the bleeting vale.

But mucky, gloomy, low'ring black,
Reluctant drop along;
Ah! turn departing summer back,
Restore the rural long.

But hence, vain wish, false hope away!
Will the obey the swain?
She flies to hear some noble lay,
Or some more happy plain.

Or wherefore murmur, 'cause she flies,
Or pine at her depart?
Soon the again more bright shall rise,
And chear each rural heart.

From a London paper of July 12.

THE RIGHT HON. EDMUND BURKE.

OF Mr. Burke's talents and acquirements in general, it is necessary to speak. They were long the glory of his country, and the admiration of Europe; they might have been (had it so consisted with the inscrutable counsels of divine Providence) the salvation of both. If not the most accomplished orator, yet the most eloquent man of his age, perhaps second to none in any age, he had still more wisdom than eloquence. He diligently collected it from the wise of all times; but what he had so obtained, he enriched from the vast treasury of his own observation; and his intellects, active, vigorous, comprehensive, trained in the discipline of true philosophy, to whatever subject he applied it, penetrated at once thro' the surface into the essential form of things.

With a fancy singularly vivid, he, least of all men in histimes, indulged in splendid theories. With more ample materials of every kind than any of his cotemporaries, he was the least in his own skill to innovate. A statesman of the most enlarged views.—In all his policy he was strictly practical, and in his practice he always regarded, with holy reverence, the institutions and manners derived from our ancestors. It seemed as if he had been endowed with such transcendant powers, and informed with such extensive knowledge, only to bear the more striking testimony in these days of rash presumption, how much the greatest mind is singly inferor to the accumulated efforts of innumerable minds in the long flow of centuries.

His private conversation had the same tincture with his public eloquence. He sometimes adorned and dignified it with philosophy, but he never lost the charm of natural ease. There was no subject so trivial which he did not transiently illuminate with the brilliancy of his imagination. In writing, in speaking in the senate, or round the table, it was easy to trace the operations of the same genius.

To the protestant religion, as by law established, he was attached from sincere conviction; nor was his a barren belief, without influence on his moral conduct. He was rigid in the systems of duties by which he regulated his own actions; liberal in construing those of all other men; warm, but placable, resenting more the offences committed against those that were dear to him, than against himself; vehement and indignant only where he tho't public justice insulted, compassionate to private distress; lenient even to suffering guilt. As a friend he was perhaps too partial to those whom he esteemed; over-rating every little merit, overlooking all their defects; indefatigable in serving them; straining in their favor whatever influence he possessed; and for their sakes more than for his own, regretting that during so long a political life, he had to seldom borne any share in power, which he considered only as an instrument of more diffused good. In his domestic relations he was worthy (and more than worthy he could not be) of the eminent felicity which for many years he enjoyed; an husband of exemplary tenderness and fidelity; a father fond to excess; the most affectionate of brothers; the kindest master; and on his part he has been often heard to declare, that in the most anxious moments of his public life, every care vanished when he entered his own roof.

One who long and intimately knew him, to divert his own sorrow, has paid this very inadequate tribute to his memory. Nothing which relates to such a man, can be uninteresting or uninstructive to the public, to whom he truly belonged. Few indeed whom the divine goodness has largly gifted, are capable of profiting by the imitation of the genius and learning; but all mankind may grow better by the study of his virtues.

SKETCH OF POLITICS.

It is a curious circumstance which cannot have escaped the observation of those who have traced the French revolution with an attentive eye, that many of those momentous events which have, in a great degree, decided the fate of Europe, have been influenced by a combination of fortunate occurrences; and that the success of many of their principal exertions, which have contributed to the establishment of the French republic, has neither resulted from wisdom in consideration, depth of judgment, nor extent of political foresight. The elements alone gave the French possession of Holland and secured their navy from destruction on the coast of Ireland, while the hand of death, which might justly be termed the tutelar deity of the republic, by snatching the imperial Catherine from the throne of Russia, when on the point of actively co-operating with the allies, enabled them to obtain the advantages that marked the last disastrous campaign. But in no one instance has their good fortune saved them so essentially and decisively as in the seasonable conclusion of peace with the emperor.------ Fourteen hours after the preliminary articles had been signed at Leoben, a courier arrived at Vienna with dispatches from the emperor of Russia who had been just crowned at Moscow, containing the important communication, that an army of 180,000 Russians had received orders to march to the assistance of the imperial armies in Italy and on the Rhine. These troops too were to be paid by the Russian monarch. A reinforcement so decisive must have given an immediate change to the whole face of affairs. The expulsion of the French from Italy would have been certain, and it is highly probable, that ere the conclusion of the campaign, they would have been reduced to the necessity of retiring within their ancient limits. How much then must Europe deplore the superabundant and improvident caution of the emperor Paul, in neglecting to give some private intimations of his intentions to the court of Vienna. This step would have answered every purpose, by inducing Joseph to adopt a defensive system, until the arrival of the Russian army, and by averting, at the same time, those dangers which Paul was fearful of incurring, by an open avowal of his designs before the ceremony of his coronaton had taken place.

JAMAICA, July 15.

Quito, Feb. 6, 1797.

Some account of the dreadful effects of the earthquake at Quito, and its vicinity, on the 4th instant:

"This dreadful calamity began at Quito, at a past 7. A. M. and lasted, from the best calculation, upwards of three minutes. The elegant college of St. Fernando is in ruins. The large edifice of Santo Domingo is considerably damaged:—the grand tower was broken into many pieces, and a number of the cells entirely destroyed:—the students' school is in ruins. The high church of Jek Carmen, one of the most elegant fabricks in the place, is totally demolished.—The tower of La Merced is nearly in the same state: it has been ordered to be pulled down. The church de la Conception has suffered considerable damage; indeed all the best buildings of the place are destroyed.—None of the low buildings have received any damage.

At Facunga the earthquake began some time past 7 o'clock A. M. and the agitation of the earth until two o'clok P. M. leaving the village entirely in ruins, not a building being left standing, except an arch in the great square, and a part of a neighboring house.

The people who have perished are innumerable: the churches of St Augustin, Santo Domingo, and La Merced were crouded with people hearing mass, not one of whom were saved. The whole place opened into gullies— out of which large quantities of water issued. Don Francisco Camacho was swallowed up, and no account has been received of don Antonio Texado, who was with him.

The village of St. Philip, which is near to Facunga, is swallowed up;—in this place there was a school with upwards of 40 children who have suffered the same fate.

There are different reports respecting the village of Ambato; it is said to be likewise in ruins.

The famous estate of the marquis de Mizaflores, on which was a cloth manufactory, all his stories, and an elegant church, are entirely destroyed, and many lives lost.

Calera, an estate joining the marquis', is swallowed up, and scarcely the vestige of a house to be seen.

Alaques, Saguali, Pugili, Fachuchi, and other considerable villages and estates are entirely ruined. Machache, Aloachi, Amaguana, Aiway, and other villages in the neighborhood of Facunga, have suffered great damage. Not a church is left standing in either of these places.

The mountains of Chopaci opened in several parts and issued great quantities of water: a small hill near the city threw up vast heaps of stones.

This earthquake is said to be much severer than that which happened in the year 1755.

To add to the general consternation at Quito, it was rumored the next day that an inhabitant of Guayaquil had brot accounts of 14 English ships having arrived there;—certain it is, that a person who came thence passed on to Quinche, where the president is.

WEST-NIAGARA, November 4.

Yesterday morning his honor the President of this province, and family, sailed in the Mohawk for York:—On his departure he was saluted with a discharge of cannon at Fort-George, which was answered with three cheers from on board.

The mail arrived on Thursday, and brot no news, which very aptly introduces the following observation in a late states' paper, that

NO NEWS IS GOOD NEWS,

Which may at first blush, appear some what paradoxical; but upon the smallest investigation the mystery all vanishes. Most men are rather dissatisfied at reading a newspaper, unless it affords them some very interesting and important intelligence: But let us consider a moment: Does not ninety-nine to an hundred of this kind of intelligence, consist in the calamities of our fellow creatures; and if so, no news is, comparatively good news.

A sleigh driving over the ice loaded with men and women, broke through, and all drowned. A vessel founded at sea, or bulged on the rocks: the men perished, or perhaps one or two saved, but suffered amazing hardships: Men robbed and murdered: A house burnt: A town laid in ashes, destroyed by an earthquake, or a violent inundation: thousands perished, and ruined:—An obstinate engagement between two ships: A battle between two armies, with great effusion of human blood; hundreds, nay, thousands killed, wounded and taken prisoners. What we call important, is most generally calamitous, attended with wounds, bloodshed, misery and death, and when so is bad news: I say therefore, no news is good news.

How beautiful is the order of nature: the planets move in their own orbits; the rivers in their own channels; and every good man in the way which nature and education have allotted him: No man is robbed: no house plundered; no town burnt; no sound of the warrior, and garments rolled in blood; no remarkable disaster befals any one: But then there is a dearth of news, and the people feel uneasy. Newspapers, say they, are now adays hardly worth reading: But let us put a proper construction on all events, and we shall find that no news is good news; because we are then to suppose that harmony and good fortune pervades the world.

When the printer finds none of these canitous matters to fill his paper with, he graces it, if he be a judicious man, with extracts and pieces on politics, husbandry, business, trade, or morality; with now and then a sketch of wit and humour, which serves to exhilerate the spirits, inform the understanding, reform the manners, or mend the heart; which, though it be no news is highly preferable to bad news,

FRIENDSHIP.

LIKE the ſoft gladdening dawn of light,
Succeſſive to the gloom of night,
Is friendſhip's ray ſerene:
When on the ſickly couch I lie,
No more my boſom heaves the ſigh,
Should friendſhip cheer the ſcene.

'Tis friendſhip gives the joy ſincere,
Delights to wipe the falling tear,
To ſoothe the aching breaſt:
Our griefs a ſocial ſolace find,
'Tis friendſhip heals the wounded mind,
It bleſſes, and is bleſt.

On life's deceitful ſtream we ſail,
Whene'er we meet a proſperous gale,
The flattering tribe attend,
Of whom, ſhould adverſe blaſts ariſe,
Or threatning ſtorms portend the ſkies,
'Tis folly to depend.

Let us, Lyſander, ever be Inviolate in amity,
Still let its tranſports glow:
How few, like you, poſſeſs a mind,
Where the ſoft virtues are combin'd
That feel another's woe!

ET CETERA.

Lord chief-juſtice Coke obſerves, that the great Littleton was poſſeſſed of an admirable talent at an et cetera. And ſince his time the etc. has been very much improved in its ſignification.

Sometimes it means the furniture of a houſe, as in the advertiſements of auctioneers "tables, chairs, beds, bed poſts, &c. &c. Now, by being joined to the beds and bed poſts, it ſerves as an inventory to thoſe utenſils which would not be ſo proper for public inſpection.

Sometimes it implies a very droll affair, ſuch as, "Yeſterday Mr Timothy Pulpin, an eminent tanner in this city, was married to Miſs Lambkin, of Crutched Friars, a young lady poſſeſſed of £10,000, &c."—the &c. here means, no doubt, all the qualifications which render the marriage ſtate happy.

At other times &c. means broken attornies, blacklegs and gamblers; as, "Several reſpectable gentlemen were preſent, among whom were Mr. . . . &c. &c. &c. here three &c. are neceſſary to denote number, whereas in the preceding inſtance the lady had only one &c. which was not mentioned.

Sometimes it implies profeſſions of friendſhip, reſpect and eſteem, as "I am yours &c and here it is convenient and ſaves one the trouble of writing words of courſe.

I have known &c. to mean five or ſix hundred people, as "At this meeting were ſix hundred independent electors, among whom were Mr —, and Col. —, &c."—thus two names and an &c. ſerve as a good proof that the whole were preſent. Without this &c. it would have been impoſſible, perhaps, to prove the aſſertion.

Sometimes it means money to bribe at a general election, as "You muſt endeavor to ſecure as many as poſſible, and you may depend on every aſſiſtance, &c. which you may have occaſion for."

Sometimes it ſtands for nothing at all, which, by the by, is the uſual meaning, except in the above caſes; as for example, "Every ſupport to this great cauſe is expected from a man of abilities, intereſt, &c." here the &c. means nothing, for abilities and intereſt were the whole catalogue of the great man's virtues.

Sometimes, not to multiply inſtances, it means downright fornication, as "She is a charming creature, my lord, and as I felt myſelf bold, I gave her a kiſs, &c.—He is an impudent dog who can avow his amours even in ſhort hand.

DIALOGUE

Between a Sword and a Hogſhead of Spirits.

Sword. So, Mr Spirits, I find you have lately uſurped an honor which was conferred originally upon me; that of being the firſt meſſenger of death to the human ſpecies. Pray, ſir, by what arguments do you ſuppoſt your claims? Am I not the moſt ancient, and the moſt univerſal deſtroyer of mankind? Have I not been the inſtrument, in the hands of Alexander and Cæſar, and ten thouſand other military butchers, of filling up vallies, and creating mountains by means of the bodies of dead men? Do I not act in a variety of ways? For whether human life is deſtroyed by the means of a lance, a pike, a hanger, a bullet, a ſhell, a cannon ball or a mine, it is all effected by my means: for the ſword, by an uſual figure in rhetoric, is made to ſignify them all. Beſides producing this mortality am I not the cauſe of all the diſtreſs, poverty, deſolation, and ſlavery, which have appeared in every age, and in every country upon the face of the earth?

Spirits. I ſhall not diſpute about the antiquity of our origin, Mr Sword, although I have ſome reaſon to believe, as I ſhall ſay hereafter, you would gain nothing by a controverſy upon that point. As to the univerſality of your dominion over human life, I deny that it is equal to mine. You deſtroy men only, but I deſtroy men, women and children. Yes, the ladies in every part of the world yield to the ſeduction of ſpiritous. I call it ſeduction, for I generally overcome them by exciting in them a love for bitters before dinner, or for remedies againſt the cholic or low ſpirits. Both of which are generally prepared by infuſions in ſpirits. As for children, I deſtroy them by perſuading their parents that a dram of raw rum or whiſky is neceſſary for them every morning, to keep the fog out of their throats, and thereby prevent their getting the fever and ague. But further, you deſtroy life in one ſeaſon of the year, and in the day time only, but I keep up a deſtructive campain during every month of the year; and ſuch is the attachment of many people to me, that after having ſerved them as a cordial during the day, I perform the office of a pillow, adminiſter to them in the night. As to the monuments you have erected in every part of the world, they do not contain half the number of dead bodies which I have from time to time conveyed, by means of diſeaſes, to the different grave yards in every part of the globe. I admit the various ſhapes by which you have effected the deſtruction of mankind; but in anſwer to this give me leave to mention the different names and forms by which I have ſpread miſery and death over the world. Rum, whiſky, brandy, gin, new rum, bitters, toddy, grog, ſlings and fifty other liquors, all come under the denomination of ſpirits. It is your province to deſtroy life ſuddenly, and only in one way; but I kill gradually, and in an hundred different ways. When I act by means of new rum, or whiſky, ſteln from the ſtill, my patients generally live two or three years, but when I make choice of old Jamaica, or Antigua, as inſtruments of death, they exiſt ſometimes 7 or 8 years. I permit this, by the bye, only to ſpread the ſeeds of death more extenſively; for perſons of ſtender obſervation aſcribe the death of theſe people to other cauſes. I ſaid that I kill in a hundred different ways:—yes half the diſeaſes of the human body are produced by ſpirits. The jaundice and dropſy, ſore eyes and ſore legs, a burning in the ſoles of the feet, fits of various kinds, gout, melancholy and madneſs, want of appetite, digeſtion, & many other complaints, for which I cannot give you the technical names, are all brought on by my influence upon the human body. You boaſt of the diſtreſs, poverty, deſolation and ſlavery you have brought upon mankind; but what are theſe to the evils which follow in my train? Wherever I go, all the calamities you have mentioned, together with the jail, the wheel-barrow, and the gallows crouch before me for cuſtomers. Factions and rebellions originate with me, eſpecially in the United States; for they are both hatched in the ſtill-houſes and low taverns, before they appear in newſpapers and in mobs. I create domeſtic broils and family diſputes;—and laſtly, even war and murder are often the offſpring of ſpiritous liquors.

You began, Mr. Sword, by boaſting of your antiquity. You were invented by Tubal Cain, and firſt uſed by Nimrod; but I claim an origin not only more ancient, but much more honorable: the ſtill, the worm, and the cooling tub were all the invention of a prince more ancient than Adam, and more intelligent than the wiſeſt man that ever lived upon the earth: ſpiritous liquors are the current coin of his kingdom: they bear his image and inſcription: they are the viſible marks of his inviſible power. The prince I allude to, is the Devil.

LONDON, Auguſt 6.

At three o'clock yeſterday morning, an officer of the Circe frigate arrived at the admiralty office with an account that the Dutch fleet had ſailed from the Texel on Sunday laſt. An immediate communication was made to the office of the duke of York from whence diſpatches were ſent at eight o'clock to general Mulgrave, commanding in the neighborhood of New Caſtle, to general Scott, commanding at Beverly, and to the commanders of other places. The ſeveral clerks of the admiralty were in attendance ſoon after three o'clock, and early in the day the following letter was poſted at Lloyd's:—

"Circe, Yarmouth, Auguſt 4.

"On Tueſday we found ourſelves cloſe in with the Texel, and were much ſurpriſed to find that there were not any ſhips of force there.—We ſpoke a fiſhing boat, and were told that the enemy's ſquadron, with a conſiderable number of troops on board, had ſailed on Sunday. Admiral Duncan, on the preceding day had weighed anchor and put to ſea. This is all we could learn."

The ſtrength of the Dutch is not aſcertained: it is only known that the fleet conſiſts of five ſhips of 76 and 74 guns, eight of 66 and 64, & ſix of 54 and 44, beſides frigates.—The laſt accounts from the Hague ſtates, that in addition to the numerous troops embarked on board four hundred tranſports, that each ſeventy four contained 800 ſoldiers, and ſmaller ſhips in proportion; but perhaps, to believe half what we hear would be to believe thrice too much. The fleet under adm'l Duncan conſiſts, if we miſtake not, of 19 ſail of the line, of which 3 are three deckers, and 2 are of 80 guns. A much leſs force, we are ſatisfied, would, in the event of an action, ſupport the glory the nation has acquired; but it neither adds not an increaſe of glory, and we are fond of bloodleſs victories.—The cauſe of the departure of our fleet, without which the Dutch could not have left the Texel, is yet to be explained; tho' if it not a manoeuvre, it doubtleſs was unavoidable.

The Circe having taken under convoy ſeveral victuallers, with 40 oxen and 50 ſheep, &c. for admiral Duncan, could not go to the northward, where, probably, the Britiſh ſquadron has been driven. Should it in working to its ſtation, or in conſequence of advice, fall in with the enemy, we predict the moſt important victory Britain ever knew; becauſe we conceive the exiſtence of Ireland at iſſue! We do not fear an attack on Britain: the enemy might plunder a few hamlets, when the gallant ſpirit of a people, loyal becauſe they are happy, would overwhelm the aſſailants.

WEST-NIAGARA, November 11.

How changeable is man! The Britiſh conſtitution, Britiſh laws and government, once how odious to the Americans! A three penny tea tax, and a ſtamp on judiciary and ſhipping papers, were the pretended cauſes of a war, becauſe impoſed by Britain. Scarcely was the ſeven years war ended, when the plan of an efficient government was conceived, which, in a few years, was adopted, differing immaterially from that they ſo lately affected to deſpiſe, the Britiſh; and this is the cry, "Our government is now the moſt perfect of any in the world, it is the counterpart of the Britiſh; we muſt alſo have a funded debt, a duty on teas, and ſtamps; congreſs will furniſh us with theſe laſt to any occaſion and number, and all occaſions require them, at ten times the price England ever would, and a tenfold duty and ſtamp impoſed by ourſelves are no inconvenience:—a two-penny receipt between two poor men who with to ſettle their ſmall concerns with authenticity, may do it by ſending perhaps 20 or 30 miles for a ſtamp, and paying ſix pence therefor; men in buſineſs muſt always have their pockets full to hit their various cales and value of the tranſactions, for, there is no tranſaction but muſt be ſtamped according to its value."—If we remember right, the ſupporting ſuch doctrines purchaſed many men coats of tar and feathers at the commencement of the war, and coſt their lives in ſome caſes. To whom now belongs the coat? We will forbear to retort; we will let the remembrance of paſt offences riſe only to prompt us to generous and benevolent actions:—have any offended us? him we bid welcome to our fertile country, a province of liberty, peace and plenty.

AMANDA's WISH.

A SMALL neat houſe, a grove of pine,
A ſaloon large enough to dine,
A friend or two, or half a ſcore;
Grant me but theſe, I'll aſk no more.
Nor Tempe's vales, nor Ida's grove,
Nor all the poets fam'd for love—
Nor Roſamond's once gay dreſt bower,
Where monarch's ſigh'd away their power,
Could boaſt ſuch charms, diſcloſe ſuch ſweets,
As the retreat which friendſhip greets:
There, when Sol's ſcorching rays paſs by,
And richly gild the azure ſky—
With glee I to my cot retire,
And think on thoſe I moſt admire.

THE MORALIST.

The intrinſic moral worth of any character is entirely diſtinct from, and independent of, external circumſtances. Every ſituation in human life affords ſufficient opportunities for cultivation of virtuous habits, and the performance of good actions; and as far as man's virtues reſpect himſelf, it is of little conſequence whether they be diſplayed to public view from an exalted ſtation, or concealed from the notice of the world in the humble retreats of poverty.—If the pine, or oak, happen to grow in the valley, the one is not, on that account, in itſelf, the leſs lofty, nor the other the leſs majeſtic.

With reſpect, however, to the impreſſions which the virtues of man make upon the imagination or feeling of another, or the degree of force with which his example will operate, much depends upon the ſituation in which they are exhibited. In the ſtill walks of domeſtic life, and under the lowly roof where honeſt labor dwells, if you will be at the pains to ſearch for them, you will find many amiable and reſpectable characters adorned and enriched with virtues which entitle them to a place among "the excellent of the earth," who, nevertheleſs, live unnoticed and forgotten; without praiſe, perhaps almoſt without ſupport: while others whom fortune had ſurrounded with the glare of earthly grandeur, continually ſet forth their whole ſtock of ſhining qualities before the gazing multitude, and are ſure of obtaining, at leaſt, as much admiration and applauſe as they deſerve.

"Full many a flower is borne to bluſh unſeen,
And waſte its ſweetneſs on the deſart air."

Rules to make a good Tradeſman.

1ſt. Endeavor to be perfect in the calling you are engaged in: and be aſſiduous in every part thereof—induſtry being the natural means of acquiring wealth, honor, and reputation—as idleneſs is of poverty, ſhame, and diſgrace.

2d. Lay a good foundation, with regard to principle. Be ſure not, wilfully to over-reach or deceive your neighbor; but keep always in your eye the golden rule, of doing to others, as you would they ſhould do unto you.

3d. Be ſtrict in diſcharging all legal debts. Do not evade your creditors by any ſhuffling arts, in giving your notes of hand, only to defer the payment. But, if you have it in your power, diſcharge all debts, when they become due. Above all, when you are ſtrained for money, be cautious of taking it up at high intereſt. This has been the ruin of many; therefore endeavor to avoid it.

4th. Endeavor to be as much in your ſhop or warehouſe, or in whatever place your buſineſs properly lies, as poſſibly you can. Leave it not to ſervants to tranſact; for cuſtomers will not regard them, as they would yourſelf; they generally think they will not be ſo well ſerved; beſides, miſtakes may ariſe by the negligence or inexperience of ſervants; and, therefore your preſence will probably prevent the loſs of a good cuſtomer.

5th. Be complaiſant to the meaneſt, as well as to the greateſt; you are as much obliged to uſe good manners, for a farthing, as for a pound; the one demands it from you as well as the other,

6th. Be not too talkative; but ſpeak as much as is neceſſary to recommend your goods, and always keep within the rules of decency. If cuſtomers ſlight your goods and undervalue them, endeavor to convince them of their miſtake, if you can; but do not affront them. Do not be pert in your anſwers; but with patience bear, and with meekneſs anſwer; for if you affront in a ſmall matter, it may probably hinder you from a future good cuſtomer. They may think, you are dear in the articles they want; but by going to another, they may find it is no ſo, and probably may return again: but if you behave rudely, and affront them, there is no hope of their returning, or of their future cuſtom.

7th. Take care to keep your accounts well; enter every thing neceſſary in your books, with neatneſs and exactneſs; often ſtate your accounts, and examine, whether you gain or loſe; and carefully ſurvey your ſtock, and inſpect into every particular of your affairs.

8th. Take care, as much as you can whom you truſt; neither take nor give long credit; but at ſtricteſt, ſettle your accounts annually. Deal at the fountain head, for as many articles as you can; and, if it lies in your power, for ready money; this method you will find to be the moſt profitable in the end. Endeavor to keep a proper aſſortment in you way, but do no overſtock yourſelf. Aim not at making a great figure in your ſhop, in unneceſſary ornaments; but let it be neat and convenient. Too great an appearance may rather prevent, than engage cuſtomers.

9. To all theſe things, and above all, add a ſerious and conſcientious regard to the practice of all the duties of the chriſtian religion. They have a natural tendency to promote your preſent, as well as your future felicity; and beſides, by ſuch a practice, you will infallibly ſecure the bleſſings of providence, which is better than every earthly bleſſing.

NEW-YORK, October 24.

Extract of a letter from a houſe of reſpectability in London, dated July 22, to a merchant in this city.

"Our government has this day paid, in money, the amount awarded by the commiſſioners to the individual claimants in America, for loſſes ſuſtained by illegal captures of your neutral ſhips, and property to a very conſiderable amount, with handſome profits on the cargoes, and intereſt from the time captured up to the firſt of July inſt.—This conduct muſt give very general ſatisfaction with you."

We are informed that the troops under the command of lieutenant Marſchalk, on Ellice's iſland, are under marching orders for Fort Mary, on the Miſſiſippi.

NORFOLK, (Virg.) Oct. 12.

Yeſterday arrived here in diſtreſs, after a paſſage of 20 days from the Havanna, (having ſprung a leak on her paſſage to Rhode-Iſland) the brig Betſey, capt. Gillies. By her we learn that Santhonax arrived at the Havanna the 5th Sept. and went on ſhore the 6th, but was not received by the governor or any of the Spaniſh officers. They were in want of water and proviſions, and pretended that on account of the Engliſh cruiſers the ſhip could not go to France without the proteſtion of a Spaniſh frigate. The inhabitants of the Havanna deprecated the conduct of Santhonax while in adminiſtration; and took the opportunity of a fracas at a fair in the village oppoſite to the town of the Havanna, to arreſt the black officers of Santhonax's retinue, and confine them in priſon.

PITTSBURGH, October 7.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at Detroit to his friend in this place, dated 6th September, '97

"A number of emiſſaries, chiefly Frenchmen, have been among the Indians this ſummer, endeavoring to perſuade them to join the Spaniards and go to war with the United States. Some of the young Indians like their talks very well, but the old men ſeem in general well diſpoſed to remain in peace. I hope this diſpoſition will continue as the officers here are extremely vigilant in detecting and puniſhing thoſe who attempt to diſturb the tranquility of the country.—Theſe ſpies not only addreſs the Indians, but have been perſuading the French inhabitants round this place that they are ill treated by the Americans. We have drumed two or three of them out of town. I hope the military will hang the next raſcal caught at this vile employment."

NEW LONDON, (Con.) Oct. 11.

It is ſaid that a certain reverend gentleman in this city, who was a ſhort time ſince preſented with a fine pair of twins, has in his poſſeſſion a pumkin, raiſed on his ground this ſeaſon, which is eight feet in length. While his vine and fig tree were ſo fruitful, who would deſire an increaſe of ſalary?

LEXINGTON, (Kentucky) Sept. 13.

By a gentleman from Natchez, we are informed, that the inhabitants of that diſtrict are extremely anxious for the running of the boundary line, and delivery of the poſts to the Americans: that there is the utmoſt harmony between Mr Ellicott and the Spaniſh officers, notwithſtanding the attempts made by the inhabitants of that diſtrict to take poſſeſſion of the garriſon, as it was no countenanced by Mr Ellicott; that the Spaniards have moved moſt of their heavy artillery from Natchez to Point-Coupe; but are ſtrengthening the works at Walnut-hills and that captain Guion was at the Chickaſaw Bluff.

WEST-NIAGARA, November 18.

The mail due on Wedneſday arrived yeſterday, the moſt material of the intelligence is contained in the following:—

An action has taken place in the Eaſt-Indies, between the Britiſh troops, and the Rajah of Cotiote, in which major Cameron fell with the additional loſs of 300 men.—The Rajah was afterwards ſubdued and bro't to ſubmiſſion.

London. Auguſt 24.

Diſpatches from lord Malmeſbury were this day received at the ſecretary of ſtate's office, from Liſle, and tranſmitted to lord Grenville at Dropmore. They are ſaid to be of the firſt importance—but nothing particular has yet tranſpired.

Auguſt 25—26.

We received laſt night a regular ſeries of the Paris papers up to Wedneſday laſt.—The moſt material article of intelligence brought by this conveyance, is a letter from the commander in chief of Bernadotte's diviſion, upon the ſubject of the treaty between the emperor and the French republic, which announces the ratification of the conditions of peace by his imperial majeſty on the 30th ult. This letter is dated Udina, the ſeat of negociation, July 31ſt.

Vienna. Auguſt 9.

Though it is well known that the definitive treaty with the French republic is ſigned, our court does not think proper to publiſh the articles; political reaſons are ſaid to accompt for this proceeding. To judge by the hoſtile preparations ſtill carrying on, our court certainly meditate ſome important project; as, inſtead of putting the armies upon the peace eſtabliſhment, their augmentation is continued, that of Italy is to be reinforced to 120,000, and that of the Rhine to 70,000 men.

Paris, Auguſt 23.

The Moror ſtates to have received from a moſt reſpectable quarter the following particulars relative to the ſubject of peace:—

The imperial envoy demanded of the directory a categorical anſwer, and declared by order of his majeſty, that he would find himſelf obliged to recommence hoſtilities, if Mantua was not reſtored to the houſe of Auſtria. This declaration being deliberated upon, Barras declared, that he would have Mantua, that ſhould never cede Mantua. The queſtion was put, and the majority declared, that orders ſhould be given to recommence hoſtilities; but Carnot delivered an impreſſive ſpeech, in which he dwelt with great emphaſis on the incalculable evils and diſaſterous conſequences, which could not but reſult from the determination. He declared, that the proteſt of his colleagues, as well as his own, ſhould be inſerted in the minutes, and that he would immediately proceed to the legiſlative body, inform it of what had paſſed, and make at length known to the nation thoſe members of the directory who wiſhed for peace.

This firm and intrepid conduct intimidated Barras and Rewbel; the reſolution was repealed, and the treaty of peace was ſigned.

By the Kentucky article in this paper, we may conſtitute the difficulties between the Americans and Spaniards, at Natchez, amicably adjuſted; nevertheleſs, there is ſomething of myſtery in the conduct of the latter in giving additional ſtrength to the garriſon at Walnut-hills, which is ſituated further up the river, in the territory of the States; and we conceive it ſo viewed by the States, in their adding to that frontier, their commander in chief, and additional force.

A letter from Bourdeaux, of Auguſt 8, received at Philadelphia, mentions that the miniſter of the interior had ſent to the municipality of Bourdeaux, intelligence of the arrival of two new envoys from America.—That, in the event of their arriving at that port every poſſible honor was to be ſhewn them, and their journey to Paris rendered every way convenient and agreeable. If this information be true, we may calculate upon the diſappointment of the Warhawks in both countries.

The foregoing article reminds us of the orders of the French government as to the reception of the Engliſh commiſſioners, at Liſle, and may be ſuſpected of the ſame inſincerity; for when they make a formal promiſe of a thing, they have never been er known to perform it, and their declarations may be taken in the light of the criminal's who pleaded guily to the indictment, and whom the jury bro't in not-guilty, becauſe he was ſo notorious a liar as never to have been known to ſpeak a truth, and his plea of guilty was a ſtrong teſtimony of his innocence.

A regular progreſſion weſtward has been obſerved of a ſevere winter in Europe for about three years paſt and calculations hereon have been very accurate; when it was in England, &c. it was ſuppoſed to reach America in '97; it did ſo, and the eaſtern ſtates experienced then an extreme winter; we were but little affected, ours being a ſmall degree ſeverer than uſual;—from the preſent ſeverity, may we not ſuppoſe it will reach us this year?

OF FEMALE EDUCATION.

If women are to be esteemed our enemies methinks it is an ignoble cowardise thus to disarm them, and not allow them the same weapons we use ourselves; but, if they desire the title of our friends, it is an inhuman tyranny to debar them the privilege of an ingenious education, which would also render their friendship so much more delightful both to themselves and us. Nature is seldom observed to be niggardly of her choicest gifts to that sex: their senses are generally as quick as ours, their reason as quick as nervous, and their judgment as mature and solid. Add but to these natural perfections the advantage of acquited learning, what polite and charming creatures will they prove, whilst their external beauty does the office of a cryftal to the lamp, not shrouding but disclosing their brighter intellects! Nor need we fear to lose our empire over them by thus improving their native abilities, since where there is most learning, sense and knowledge, there is observed to be the greatest modesty, and rectitude of manners. I see no reason therefore why we should make such bugbears of women as not to trust them with a liberal education as ourselves.

ANECDOTE.

Tasewell having a dispute with mrs Clive and being rather worsted, made a profound reverence, and muttered out—"Madam, I have heard of Tartar: and Brimstone,—by Jove you are the cream of the one, and the flower of the other.

PHILADELPHIA, October 16.

A few days ago doctor Rose received a cane ning from Rush, jun. and in order to prove himself a man of spirit and resentiment, the Dr. challenged young Rush's father, whom he knew was principled against fighting:—

Now for Darby in the Poor Soldier;

To a man a challenge I'll write,
Write sal de dot de dol;
But for I'll be sure he wont fight,
Rol de dol rol de dol de dol.

NEW-YORK, Oct. 27.

In the case of the ship America, capt. Alexander Smith, the British council has decided, that a British subject, though naturalized in the United States, since the peace of 1783, cannot divest himself of his British citizenship, so as to become a citizen of America, competent to navigate vessels to Great-Britain under the laws of navigation. But this being the first case of the kind, it is determined that no advantage should be taken of the forfeiture.

BOSTON, Oct. 7.

Mr. Pinckney, at our last dates, continued in Holland.

A gentleman from London mentions that too much praise cannot be given to Mr. Gore, and the other commissioners on American spoliated property, for their indefatigable zeal and persevering attention to procure indemnification. And such has been the fairness in the decision of the ninety cases settled, that not one appeal has been made.

WASHINGTON, (Kent.) Sept. 7.

A correspondent communicates with great satisfaction a recent instance of the friendly intercourse between the Indians north-west of the Onio, and the citizens of Kentucky. The Indians had lost some horses, and had reason to suppose they were taken by the whites; they came into the settlement of the Three-Islands, and thro' the assistance of maj. Beasly discovered that the horses had been taken into Kentucky, on the waters of Flemming, Mason county. Major Beasly furnished them with a pass, by which they were enabled to find their horses and recover them, and returned perfectly satisfied.—If this mode of doing justice to the Indians was generally pursued, it would be a mean of conciliating those unfortunate people, and save the effusion of blood.

TANGIERS, July 10.

The emperor of Morocco, Muly Solyman, marched for the Rebat, with a body of 63,000 cavalry, and is to be joined by his brother, prince Muley Taib, with another body of 35,000 horse, when they are to proceed together to Morocco, with a view to depose their brother, Bendris. Their fraternal visit is likely to occasion the effusion of much kindred blood.

PARIS, August 21.

Paris has been remarkable quiet to day, nor have the bills posted on the walls been so numerous or so virulent as yesterday and the day before.

The negociations at Lisle go on in the most languid manner. England is obstinate in retaining all the possessions which she has taken from Holland; and France, on her part, pretends that she is bound by the treaty concluded with that republic, to restore to it all that has lost during the war. It is remarkable, that at a moment when peace is most necessary to France, they voluntarily deprive themselves of all its advantages for the interest of two states that are foreign to them.

LONDON, August 12.

A letter from Namur, of 31st ult.—gives an account of the confusion prevailing among the French troops, owing to the orders of the directory. It is said, that while they were passing thro' Verdun, some of them cried vive le roi! and pilliged the jacobins. Bloody battles had taken place between the troops newly arrived and those who were in garrison, on account of the former not wearing the cockade.

August 14. After the cabinet meeting on the late dispatches from Lisle, reports were current, that favorable news had been received from thence.

August 17.—20 Accounts are said to have been received yesterday at the imperial ambassador's, that the emperor will certainly break off the negociation with Buonaparte, unless the idea of dividing Italy into republics is totally given up; but as the cession on the part of the French is not probable, it is likely that another week may bring an account of an appeal to the sword, as this only depended upon an ultimatum from Vienna to the French commander in chief, and on the manner in which it may be received.

Almost the whole of the imperial forces from Manheim to Mentz have left their cantonments, and are gone to occupy the new camps traced out for them. In case of a renewal of hostilities, the archduke Charles will command the army on the Rhine, while the archduke Joseph, assisted by gen. Mack, will conduct the operations in Italy.

From Neurembergh it is remarkable, that it is impossible to divine the object of the Austrian movements, and that they continued to buy up all the hay, &c. that they can meet with.

The French troops under gen. Grenier, have again taken possession of the bridge-head at Neuwied. This is understood as a certain indication of approaching hostilities.

Government were yesterday in possession of accounts from admiral Duncan, dated on Wednesday last, at which time he continued, with his squadron off the Texel. The Dutch fleet retained in its old position, and had not indicated any disposition to leave it.

The last accounts from both St Vincents and Bridport—state the continuance of their fleets in their former stations.

August 21—22. On Saturday arrived the first of the Hamburg mails due, which bro't intelligence of rather an hostile nature, as far as regard the negociation between the emperor and the French republic. The letters from Vienna dated in very positive and unequivocal terms that his imperial majesty had determined to renew hostilities, rather than cede the fortress of Mantua to the Cisalpine republic, which the French have founded in Italy.

Yesterday arrived another Hamburg mail and also the chaplain of sir Morton Eden, who came with dispatches from Vienna.—The advices are much more pacific than those bro't by the preceding mail: and we find, that after numerous difficulties raised by the French negociator, in Italy, in regard to the cession of Mantua to the emperor, the directory at length instructed him to give up the point; and accordingly Mantua is to be restored to his imperial majesty; but all the French ordnance and stores in it are to be previously taken away.

The principal difference being now removed, we may expect to hear the definitive treaty of peace has been signed between the emperor and the French republic; unless, indeed, the former chuses to wait the issue of the negociation at Lisle; for which place Mr. Brooks, the messenger, set off late on Saturday night, with the answer of our court to the last dispatches.—Lord Leveson Gower remains in town.

A R is confidently said, that gen. Simcoe, who a few days since arrived from the West Indies in the swallow armed brig, has come home to represent to government the absolute necessity of sending out to St. Domingo a considerable military force, for the support of the British interests in that quarter; and we learn it is in contemplation of government to complete five or six regiments, by draughts from Ireland and Chatham barracks, which regiments are to be immediately sent to St. Domingo.

WEST-NIAGARA, November 25.

Baltimore, October 18.

A gentleman lately from Natchez, has favored the editors of the Telegraphe with the following information, which may be relied on:—

The inhabitants of that important country, impatient under the delays and deceptions perpetually practised in the way of execution of mr. Ellicott's mission, (the running of the boundary line between the Spanish territory and that of the United States) and extremely exasperated at the conduct of the governor, resolved to use their strength to compel the Spaniards to an honorable conclusion of the business, and proceeded to arm and appoint themselves in the best manner they could. They assembled upwards of 500 men, tolorably armed, and, on deliberation, it was determined to assume all power.

They divided the country into seven districts, each person deputed one person to represent it, and these deputies constituted a committee to manage the interests of the people. As soon as these important events took place, the governor (Gayoso) and the Spanish and French settlers retreated to the fort. The committee proposed certain terms contained in five articles to the governor, to which he assented, that the agreement was ratified by the governor-general, the baron de Carondelet. We regret that we are not in possession of a copy of the treaty. It authorized a delegation of the people, of the same number to which was confided the principal authority, such as it was. But every semblance of subordination is suspended; people obey or reject the legal decisions as they think proper, in so much that neither governor nor committee is much regarded; in fact all is there in confusion. The inhabitants detest the Spaniards, and are extremely anxious to be incorporated as members of the United States. Their conduct is resolute and determined, and their own efforts would in all likelihood be sufficient to establish their wish. The apparent neglect of the government of the United States has occasioned great uneasiness and disappointment. As the interest of the United States, and the wishes of those people so strongly concurred, it was expected that those interests and wishes would be seconded by the spirited interference of the government. Mr. Elicot and the military of the United States were in a state of suspence. On the part of the Spaniards, there appears little sincerity or serious design to fulfil the treaty.

About the 1st of August, governor Gayoso received his appointment as governor-general of Louisiana, in the place of the baron de Carondelet, who was appointed to Quito. The new governor general immediately left the Natchez for New Orleans, & appointed major Stephen Minor to the government of the Natchez, until the arrival of a certain Grandpre, whom the court of Spain had appointed to that post, in the room of Gayoso, and who was on his way there at the time our information left New-Orleans. The inhabitants, however, had determined not to acknowledge col. Grandpre, nor permit him to assume the government. The Spaniards still held out assurances to mr. Ellicott, that the line should be run this fall. Capt. Guion had moved with his detachment from the Chickesaw Bluffs, to join capt. Pope and mr. Ellicott, at the Natchez, but it is said that he would be repelled by force of arms at the Walnut-hills, if he attempted to pass.

The American troops at the Natchez were very healthy on the 12th of August, and their flag flying very near the Spaniards.

The people of Kaskaskias, and not of Natchez raised the French standard, as stated in a former paper.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN.

At the late election in Elizabeth Town (N. J.) the FEMALES asserted the privilege granted them by the laws of that state, and gave in their votes for members to represent them in the state legislature.

Tho' it is a general opinion that females ought not to intermeddle in political affairs, yet the emperor of Java never employs any but women in his embassies, these are generally widows. The court of Java is persuaded, that women are better calculated than men for negociation, they have more address and ascendency, and possess greater resources of a creative fancy, as well as lestility in expedients.

WM. JARVIS, Sec'y.

SOBRIETY and temperance render the ſenſes clear, the body light, underſtanding lively, the ſoul briſk, the memory tenacious, our motions free, and all our actions regular and eaſy. By means of ſobriety, the ſoul, delivered as it were of her earthly burden, experiences a great deal of her natural liberty; the ſpirits circulate gently thro' the arteries; the blood runs freely thro' the veins; the heat of the body kept mild and temperate effects; and laſtly, our faculties being under a perfect regulation, preſerves a pleaſing and agreeable harmony.

A contented temper the greateſt bleſſing, and moſt material requiſite to the diſcharge of our duties.

A CONTENTED temper is one of the greateſt bleſſings that can be enjoyed by man, and one of the moſt material requiſites to the proper diſcharge of the duties of every ſtation. A diſcontented temper, renders one incapable of performing a right any part in life. It is unthankful and impious before God; and to man, provoking and unjuſt. It is a gangrene which preys on the vitals, and infects the whole conſtitution with diſpleaſure and putrefaction. Subdue pride and vanity, and you will take the moſt effectual method of eradicating this diſtemper. You will no longer behold the objects around you with jaundiced eyes.—You will take in good part, the bleſſings which providence is pleaſed to beſtow, and the degree of favor which your fellow-creatures are diſpoſed to grant you. Viewing yourſelves with all your imperfections and failings, in a juſt light, you will rather be ſurpriſed at your enjoying ſo many good things than diſcontented becauſe there are any you want. From an humble and contented temper, will ſpring a cheerful one. This, if not in itſelf a virtue, is at leaſt the garb in which virtue ſhould always be arrayed. Piety and goodneſs ought never to be marked with that dejection which ſometimes takes riſe from ſuperſtition, but which is the proper portion only of guilt. At the ſame time, the cheerfulneſs belonging to virtue, is to be carefully diſtinguiſhed from that light and giddy temper which characteriſes folly, and is ſo often found among the diſſipated and vicious part of mankind. Their gaiety is owing to a total want of reflection, and brings with it the uſual conſequences of an unthinking habit, ſhame, remorſe, and heavineſs of heart in the end. The cheerfulneſs of a well-regulated mind, ſprings from a good conſcience and the favor of heaven, and is bounded by temperance and reaſon. It makes a man happy in himſelf, and promotes the happineſs of all around him. It is the clear and calm ſun-ſhine of a mind illuminated by piety and virtue. It crowns all other good diſpoſitions, and comprehends the general effect which they ought to produce on the heart.

BATAVIAN REPUBLIC.

The Oracle an Engliſh paper of Auguſt, ſtates the following.

A letter from the Hague, Auguſt 19, ſays the primary aſſemblies have expreſſed their deteſtation of citizen Noel and his friends, by every act of publicity. The new conſtitution was rejected on the 8th inſt. and the people are determined to ſanction nothing which gives ſuch unlimited power to the French. It was rejected by a majority of more than 15,000.

AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 30.

That part of the extract of a letter publiſhed in our laſt, under Pittſburgh head, which mentions, that "the inhabitants at the Natchez are in open rebellion and have diſplayed the French colours," is a miſtake. It is the people of Kaſkaſkias, which is within the government of the North Weſtern Territory, and where the laws of the United States have been in force for ſeveral years. Particulars we have not heard, but have no doubt that ſome of citizen Adet's ſpies are among them. It is to be wiſhed, that if any of them ſhould fall into the hands of general Wilkinſon, he will grace a pole with their heads, inſtead of a French liberty cap.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman of character at Kiskiskia, to a gentleman at Detroit, dated June 16.

"An American party to the number, it is ſaid, of 110, have diſplayed the ſtandard of the French republic—have adopted the name of Sans Culottes, and will acknowledge no other laws than the French laws. The juſtices already ſay that they dare not ſet on the bench.—I believe they have reaſon to fear."

Remarks and farther information by the editor of the gazette of the United States.

The ſtory of this rebellion at the Natchez, appears to have originated in information received by general Wilkinſon, that about 100 Gallo-Americans near Kaſkaſkias of Cahokia, had bound themſelves by an oath, to obſerve certain rules and articles of a reaſonable nature. That a candidate for this order was firſt obliged to ſwear to ſecrecy, and an obſervance of theſe rules before being made acquainted with them, or admitted into the ſociety—That one or two of them had declared they were French and not American citizens, and had got a notion which they were circulating—that a French army were on its route, and would be there about the 20th of June.—It was further ſaid—that this conſpiration had raiſed the ſtandard of the French republic, and called themſelves the companies of the Sans Culottes.

The editor does not ſtate this from authority, but he pledges himſelf for the truth of the facts.

This conſpiration of people in the North Weſtern Territory, will evince to the public, the intention of the many viſits made to that part of the United States by French and Spaniſh emiſſaries—ſome under colour of collecting natural curioſities for Mr. Adet—others of making philoſophical obſervations for the central ſchool of fame—and a few of trading with the Indians.

What will our excluſive patriots, our Chronicles, Argules, Time-pieces, and Aurora ſay to this ſecond weſtern exploſion—this new confirmation of the ſyſtem of French rulers fully exhibited by Genet's inſtructions an conduct, and ſtrictly perſevered in by his ſucceſſors in office. And what ought we to think of certain legiſlators, who furniſhed ſome of theſe emiſſaries, who produced this laſt petty inſurrection, with letters of introduction, calculated to obtain for them, from the people of our country, implicit confidence and the moſt friendly reception for the propaganda ſeed they have ſown, the crop of which, as it would ſeem by the Pittſburgh account, will require a part of the army to cut down.

For the Pittsburgh Gazette.

Mr. SCULL,

By publiſhing in your uſeful paper the letter from the ſecretary of ſtate to the Spaniſh miniſter, the people in the weſtern country will ſee what miſerable pretences are ſet up by the officers of the Spaniſh government againſt the honeſt execution of their treaty with the United States, and on the other hand, they will be pleaſed with the candid, manly conduct of colonel Pickering, through the whole of this momentous buſineſs. The Spaniſh miniſter imitating the conduct of Adet, has publiſhed his liſt of grievances and complaints; but unfortunately for himſelf and his nation, they appear deſtitute of foundation, or even plauſibility, mere captious cavils for the purpoſe of delay.

How long are the Spaniards to triſle with us! Do they not know that more than half a million of Americans live on the weſtern water, whoſe dearſt intereſts demand a fulfilment of this treaty, and who, if called upon by our government, would inſtantly open the navigation of the Miſſiſippi by force. Let the weſtern people read and judge for themſelves; they will then have no heſitation as to the juſtice of their claims, the bad faith of the Spaniſh governors and miniſters, or an honorable vindication of the rights of the weſtern country, in any way authoriſed by our national councils.

WEST-NIAGARA, December 2.

Died on his paſſage from St. Domingo, to London lieutenant-colonel EDWARD BAKER LITTLEHALES, formerly ſecretary to his excellency the lieutenant-governor of this province.

Fears for the fate of the Mohawk are entertained by ſeveral perſons. It is ſaid minute guns were diſtinctly heard thro' moſt of Thurſday before laſt: but we hope ſhe has ſuffered no further than being driven back to Kingſton. The Onandaga, which was a ground in Hungry Bay, at our laſt intelligence, was in a fair way of being gotten off.

Notice.

THE Members of St. JOHN'S Lodge of Friendſhip, No. 2, will meet at their new lodge-room, at Queenſton, on Wedneſday the 27th inſt. preciſely at X o'clock in the forenoon, to celebrate the feſtival of St, John, and to do the buſineſs of the day, of which viſiting brethren, and thoſe concerned are deſired to take notice.

THE ROSE BUD,
A FABLE;
Addressed to a FRIEND, on the DEATH of her eldest CHILD.

A ROSE-BUD once, in infant bloom,
Its parents' earliest pride,
Met from the canker-worm its doom;
It faded—droop'd—and died.

The mother lost her vivid green,
Her vernal beauties all;
The pearly dew like tears was seen,
Adown her leaves to fall.

Fond zephyr too, with gentle sighs,
Her sorrows seem'd to share;
With warblings sweet the red-breast tries,
To soothe the mourner's care.

In vain her griefs they seem'd to share,
And south'd her woes in vain;
She hung her head in deep despair,
Nor heard the warbler's strain.

A full blown rose lay withering nigh,
Unheeded in the shade,
Just ere it breath'd the parting sigh,
It rais'd its head and said—

"Forbear mistaken tree, to weep
"Thy infant's early fate;
"Secure from ills in death's soft sleep,
"How peaceful is her state!

"I from my parent branch was torn,
"When in my beauty's bloom;
"A while in Celia's bosom worn,
"I shed a sweet perfume.

"By all admir'd, approv'd, caress'd,
"While pleasing to the eye;
"Then flung with scorn from Celia's breast
"Neglected here to die.

"Cease then to weep her infant charms,
"By death forbid to blow;
"Peaceful she sunk within thy arms,
"Ere she had tasted woe."

BOSTON, October 23.

CAPTAIN Baker, from Cadiz, informs, that the United States' brig, capt. Robertſon, deſtined from our government to the bey of Algiers, with naval ſtores, captured ſometime ſince by the Spaniſh, and ſent into Cadiz, on expreſs demand of the dey, was given up. She was on the eve of ſailing when capt. Baker left Cadiz.

Since the bombardment of Cadiz, capt. Baker informs, that the two fleets have remained quiet, and that no intercourſe was repeatedly had between the admirals by means of flags of truce, but the particulars of the communication were not known.

ALBANY, November 6.

The Aurora of Philadelphia, of Monday laſt, mentions the arrival there of the ſhip Cleopatra, from London, the captain of which ſays, that on the 2d of September, being then off the Lizard, he was informed by four men in a boat from the ſhore, that peace was concluded, & that they had read it in the papers of the day before; that on the ſame day he ſaw a government lugger-board a ſhip of war, then ſtanding for the weſtward; the ſhip immediately after put about and ſtood in for the land. He ſuppoſes the lugger to have been diſpatched for the purpoſe of communicating the above intelligence to the Britiſh cruiſers.

[The above report is, in all probability, a mere repetition of the London fabrication. The concluſion of peace between England and France was announced in a London print of Auguſt 30; the ſame report might have reached Falmouth on the 1ſt of September, but it is not likely that in the vicinity of Falmouth and the Lizard, they ſhould have had more authentic information on that ſubject, on the 1ſt or 2d of September, than at London on the 3d of Auguſt.

WILMINGTON, (N. C.) Oct. 12.

A gentleman who arrived in town on Saturday laſt from New-Providence, via the Havanna, has favored the printer with the following information, on the authenticity of which he places the greateſt confidence:

That on the 20th of Auguſt, the day he left Penſacola, he ſaw an official letter from baron de Carondelet, to a gentleman in office there, acquainting him of his having received by the laſt courier from the Havanna, orders from his court to put into full execution the treaty between Spain and the United-States of America; for which purpoſe he had forwarded diſpatches to the commandants of the forts on the Miſſiſippi, to deliver up the poſts, and evacuate the fortifications, with all convenient diſpatch.

CHARLESTON, (S. C.) Oct. 19.

Barney and Deſchamps, ex-citizens of the United States, are now in their glory;—they have both commenced their career with robbing and plundering our citizens; the latter has already gone ſo far as to attempt to murder one, and the former, there can be no doubt, will likewiſe take advantage of the firſt opportunity to do the ſame. It is ſaid there has been an exceſſive hard gale of wind to the ſouthward on the 26th September: it is moſt devoutly to be wiſhed, that the veſſels of theſe unnatural, unprincipled and unparallaled villains have been wrecked, and that they with all the horrors of the ſtorm are enveloped in the deep, as food for fiſhes. Were they ſimply our enemies, there would be ſomething wickedly cruel in ſuch a wiſh, but they are the enemies of nature.

Citizen commodore, had you at any time after becoming Frenchman, quit piſkaroonary, made good your boaſtings, fought out the enemies of your newly adopted country and fought them, your quondam countrymen, the Americans, and your eternal enemies, the Engliſh, would have done juſtice to your courage: but a conduct like this correſponded neither with your principles nor views; you fled, commodore, from the enemies you vowed vengeance upon, to American proteſtion, and left it only to unmask your vipereus heart, and commence your trade of robbery and plunder, and to rank yourſelf the equal of pirates.

AMSTERDAM, Auguſt 5.

Moſt of the ancient repreſentatives of the Batavian people have been re-elected—It appears, however, that the revolutionary or violent party has enjoyed a deciſive influence in the primary aſſemblies. Deputy Vreede, a clothier of Leyden, is the leader of this party. He is a man of talents, and was the member who on the occaſion of the late note, preſented by citizen Noel, in the convention ſaid, that with reſpect to the acceptance or rejection of the conſtitution, the nation ought to act without any foreign bias, or influence. He has alſo publiſhed a pamphlet tending to prove that the conſtitution ought not to be accepted.

VENICE, Auguſt 2.

According to the diviſion made by gen. Buonaparte, our deparm nts will include Malomocco, Lido, Peleſtrina, Chioggia, Caverze, Criado, Largo, Murano, Forcella, Meſtre and Cambarare; thoſe cities and iſlands will ſend their deputies here, who will aſſiſt at the municipalities.

PARIS, Auguſt 22.

There is a letter in circulation from Buonaparte, in which he artfully praiſes the armies of the Rhine, with the view, no doubt of winning them to the intereſts of himſelf and the directory.

Letters from the Hague mention, that the Texel fleet, very far from ſtirring out, is going to be diſarmed. A part of the troops have already been diſembarked.

Auguſt 24.

The following is an extract of a letter addreſſed to a member of the council of elders by an officer of the army of Italy.

"VERONA, Aug. 8.

"New ſubjects of inquietude daily ariſe; according to report great commotions have taken place at Paris.

"As much hatred manifeſts itſelf here againſt the council of 500, as reſpect for the council of elders. The former of theſe is no longer conſidered in any other light than as a body of furious royaliſts, among which are ſome republicans who would fall victims to the wickedneſs of their colleagues, while you, who conſtitute the council of elders, are conſidered as the guardians of the republic, and as having maintained it againſt the impetuous attacks of emigrants. The directory in order to be aſſiſted, has only to ſpeak.

"We were yeſterday told that the council of five hundred was employed in the proceſs againſt the commander in chief of the army, and this report gains credit. Let them judge us at Paris, but let them come to execute their judgment, and they will ſee who will carry it. By only conſidering who has moſt ſerved the republic."

LONDON, Auguſt 24.

The ſtay of lord Malmeſbury at Liſle is likely to be of longer duration than was at firſt expected; his lordſhip has taken a houſe there for himſelf and his retinue.

The armies ſtill continue to addreſs the directory upon the councils, in language the moſt ſevere and intemperate; to which it is certain, they are encouraged by their commanders. General Hoche has at length thrown off the mantle of diſguiſe, and boldly declared to his troops the intentions of the directory, of whom he is the moſt determined partizan. Thus it is no longer doubtful, that notwithſtanding all the equivocation of the directory upon the ſubject, it is their determination to violate one of the moſt eſſential principles of the conſtitution which they have ſworn to maintain, by marching the armed force into the interior of France, without the ſanction of the legiſlative bodies, ſhould they find ſuch an expedient neceſſary to anſwer their own private views and ambitious purpoſes. By theſe means they may ſecure a temporary triumph; but the victory of force over law can never be deemed honorable, nor is it likely that its effects can be permanent.

Auguſt 25.

A letter from the Hague dated, Aug. 9. inſerted in the laſt Paris papers, ſays—"The preſent ſituation of France has had an influence very unfavorable to the acceptance of the new conſtitution. A number of people with very good intentions, but fearful of pronouncing when the future appeared ſo uncertain, did not appear at all in the primary aſſemblies; ſo that here and in the neighborhood they have been thinly attended. The number of citizens entitled to vote at the Hague muſt amount to near 6000; and there have been only about 500 votes for the conſtitution, and 800 againſt it."

Another account ſays, the rejection of the Dutch conſtitution ariſe from the circumſtance of the conſtitution's not being ſufficiently democratic for the Jacobins, and being of courſe unpleaſant, and therefore oppoſed equally by both.

Auguſt 26.

Yeſterday morning we received the Paris papers of the 22d. and 23d inſt. They are principally filled with the report of Thibaudeau to the council of five hundred, and that of Tronchon du Coudray to the council of elders, on the meſſage of the directory with reſpect to the march of the troops towards Paris, and the revolutionary addreſſes of the army of Italy. The commiſſioners, appointed for both councils for the inveſtigation of this meſſage, coincide in reproaching the directory with imprudence and impropriety of conduct, with having made uſe of a hatſhneſs and ſeverity of language which circumſtances did not juſtify, and with having advanced ſtatements totally unſupported by facts. They conſider the addreſſes of the army as abounding in abſurd prejudices, ridiculous pretenſions, criminal projects, expreſſed in the peculiar language of the factious party, which, ſcribed by foreign powers, has ſucceeded in ſeducing the troops to turn their arms againſt the republic.

The reporters of both councils declare their aſtoniſhment and indignation that the directory has not taken any meaſures, or publiſhed any proclamation, for the purpoſe of cenſuring theſe addreſſes, and preventing the dangers with which the nation is threatened from the daring enterprize of a victorious army, which aſſumes to itſelf the unconſtitutional power of deliberating. They further ſtate, that the objections made by the directory to the proceedings of the legiſlative body, with reſpect to the pretended proteſtion ſhewn in them to the prieſts and emigrants, can only be conſidered as a means calculated to renew the ſyſtem of proſcription en maſſe.

As the directory had indirectly reproached the legiſlative body with having thrown ſome obſtacles in the progreſs of peace, the reports of both commiſſions obſerve, that the councils have for eighteen months paſt, uniformly called, in the moſt preſſing manner, for the reſtoration of peace, and that the events which have lately happened in Italy, particularly certain declarations of war made by the executive power, without the participation of the legiſlature, have impeded the negociation, and ſtill retard the termination of hoſtilities.
