The commiſſion of the council of five hundred, however, declares its readineſs to caſt a veil over the orders, in obedience to which the troops directed their march towards Paris, as well as to excuſe general Richepanſe, and Le Sage, the commiſſary, for having iſſued the orders, on the ground of their moral characters, and of having merely been the paſſive inſtruments of ſuperior powers. The report of this commiſſion concludes with preſenting the projeſt of a decree which enacts, that any deliberation or common with expreſſed by the armed force, except in caſes determined by law, ſhall be a crime againſt the conſtitution; and that the ſending of any addreſſes from one body of troops to another, or to the civil authorities, ſhall be conſidered as an act of ſedition.

Auguſt 29.

This morning arrived Bruſſels papers to the 23d. They ſtill inſiſt that the definitive treaty between the emperor and the French is ſigned; that Mantua and all its dependencies are evacuated by the French troops.

As a ſign that hoſtilities may again take place in the Adriatic, the celebrated col. Williams has been ſent for to Trieſte, to take command of the emperor's veſſels.

Diſpatches were received on Saturday at the office of his royal highneſs the commander in chief, from Scotland, ſtating that ſome diſſatisfaction had been expreſſed at Mr. Dundas' plan for extending the militia to that kingdom, and that in conſequence alarming riots had taken place. Theſe, however, there is reaſon to believe, had been exaggerated, as letters from Edinburg ſtate, the accounts which they had firſt received there, had happily been contradicted, and that they hoped to appeaſe the ſpirit of diſcontent by prudence and reconciliation.

On Friday a cartel arrived with Engliſh priſoners from France; but in conſequence of the reſolution of our government not to exchange any more priſoners till ſir Sidney Smith is releaſed, the cartel was ordered to return empty.

Letters from Madrid, of the 3d inſtant mention the national finances to be in a ſtate of the greateſt embarraſſment. The new miniſter was about to negociate a loan of one hundred millions of rials. The court having prolonged their reſidence in the capital beyond their accuſtomed time, left it the 1ſt for St. Idephoſuſe. The prince of peace has received ſome freſh inſtances of the affection of his ſovereign. The Spaniards ſpeak with much confidence of the ſafety of Cadiz from any future attempts of the Britiſh fleet.

We are aſſured from the beſt authority, that the Chevalier D'Almedia, the Portuguese envoy, in his late interview with the cabinet miniſters, had given the moſt poſitive aſſurance, that the Portugueſe cabinet, in all their negociations, would preſerve inviolate the treaties exiſting with Great-Britain. Mr. Walpole has alſo received from the cabinet of Liſbon unequivocal proofs of entering into no terms derogatory to their connections with this country.

WEST-NIAGARA, December 9.

Since our laſt arrived here the Simcoe from Kingſton, by which we learn that the Mohawk had returned there, after having her bowſprit and a conſiderable part of her ſails carried away in the ſtorm. The Onondaga had gained that port without material injury ſuſtained in Henry's Bay.

Capt. Dorr, who arrived at Boſton on the 21ſt of October, from Canton, informs that the whole Chineſe territory is in a revolutionary inſurrection; and, that in conſequence of the exiſting troubles, the productions of the country were conſiderably advanced.

THE Members of St. JOHN'S Lodge of Friendſhip, No. 2, will meet at their new lodge-room, at Queenſton, on Wedneſday the 27th inſt. preciſely at X o'clock in the forenoon, to celebrate the feſtival of St, John, and to do the buſineſs of the day, of which viſiting brethren, and thoſe concerned are deſired to take notice.

PETER RUSSELL, PRESIDENT.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the Third, by the grace of God of Great Britain, France and Ireland king, defender of the faith, &c. &c.

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS, GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our proclamation bearing date the eleventh day of October we thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council to prorogue our provincial parliament until the thirtieth day of the present month of November at which time in our town of York you were held and constrained to appear; but we taking into our royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council, to relieve you, and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the thirty-first day of December next ensuing, you meet us in our provincial parliament, in our town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our province of Upper-Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary:—Herein fail not. In testimony whereof we have caused the great seal of our said province to be hereunto affixed:—Witness the honorable PETER RUSSELL, president of our government of our said province, this twenty-ninth day of Nov in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-seven, and thirty seventh of our reign. PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS by a proclamation issued under, and by virtue of, an act of the parliament of this province, passed in the thirty-seventh year of his Majesty's reign, entitled An act for making temporary provision for the regulation of trade between this province and the United States of America, by land or inland navigation, it was ordered, that the operation of certain ordinances in the said proclamation specified, should be suspended: And whereas it has been found expedient that the provisions of the said ordinances, except as herein after excepted, should be continued until some further and other arrangements relative to the commercial intercourse between the United States of America and this province can be adjusted: NOW THEREFORE KNOW YE, that I have thought fit by and with the advice of the executive council to revoke and annul, and do hereby revoke and annul the said proclamation, bearing date the twentieth day of September last, except as herein after mentioned; and I do also by and with the advice and consent of his Majesty's executive council, hereby further order and declare, that so much only of the ordinance passed in the twentieth year of his Majesty's reign, as relates to the REGISTER, shall be, and is hereby suspended.

GIVEN under my hand seal at arms, this fifteenth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-seven, and in the thirty-eighth year of his Majesty's reign, at York, in the province of Upper Canada.

FROM THE (BOSTON) GAZETTE.

The following lines were written by Mrs. G. Hawkſbaw, (formerly miſs Adams) and preſented to capt. Hawkſbaw of the ſloop-of-war, her huſband, for whom they were compoſed but a few days previous to his death.

ODE TO CONTENTMENT.

O THOU, whom HEAV'N ſmiles adorn,
Whoſe bloom outvies the vivid morn,
Whoſe preſence gilds the day:
Celeſtial nymph, ſweet lovely theme,
I feel the gentle influence ſtream,
And hail the welcome ray!

What tho' huge mountains round me riſe,
Whoſe noble ſummits pierce the ſkies,
And vex the traveller's way;
Tho' earthquakes quiver, floods deſcend,
Tho' ſtorms the far-ſpread foreſt bend,
And call forth pale diſmay:

Tho' war his dreadful enſign waves,
Not blooming youth nor valor ſaves,
But cold in duſt they lie;
Tho, fell diſeaſe with waſting hand,
Uſurps the uncontroul'd command,
And bids the virtuous die;

Yet ſmoothly down life's haſtening tide,
I feel my tranquil moments glide,
And ſweetly joyous roll;
Fair HOPE each anxious thought beguiles,
And, cheer'd by thee, the defart ſmiles,
Thou ſoother of the ſoul!

But, all my bleſſing to ſecure,
O, may my dearer life endure,
Beyond the date of mine!
That hope ſhall calm affliction's hour,
Diſarm pale death's terrific pow'r,
And make its terror ſhine.

WITHOUT TEMPERANCE, THERE IS NO TRUE HAPPINESS.

IF temperance was not a virtue, which deſerved to be cherriſhed for the ſake of the good which it does to our mind, we ought nevertheleſs to practiſe it with care, for the ſake of the advantages which it procures to the body; it being that which preſerves it in health, and cures it of maladies. How can we be happy, if we ſuffer acute pains; if we are tormented with the gout, if our ſtomach ceaſes to perform its offices, if our legs, ſwelled and weak, refuſe to carry us, if our lungs are ſo inflamed that we cannot breathe without difficulty? But all theſe and many other evils are the certain conſequences of intemperance.

He who purchaſes the pleaſure of the bottle at the expenſe of the moſt acute pains, pays very dear for his wine. If we reaſon conſequentially, the more we love pleaſure, the ſooner we ſhould be of temperance, becauſe it is the latter which makes the former durable. It is ſo far from being an enemy to pleaſures, that it preſerves them, and only checks the exceſſive uſe of them, becauſe it is moſt evidently the very thing that deſtroys them.

Temperance is altogether as neceſſary to the mind as the body. When the latter is ſluggiſh, the former is ſenſible of it, and is as it were oppreſſed by its infirmities. In a perſon who feels any pain or decay, we don't find that gaiety, that briſkneſs, that ſerenity, which adorn the underſtanding, and at the ſame time render him happy.—The intemperate are generally of a gloomy, melancholy temper: as long as they are eating and drinking, the wine and good cheer give them a ſort of mirth; but it goes off with the fumes of the ſpirit that raiſed it. Such perſons are like lamps almoſt extinct, whoſe flame is renewed by pouring in a few drops of oil, but give light no longer after thoſe drops are ſpent by which they are fed.

Intemperance is generally the cauſe of many vexations, from which ſobriety preſerves us. 'Tis often the occaſion of many crimes. It obliges the rich to be at a great expenſe, and the poor to a greater than they can afford. The former are under an apprehenſion that they cannot always hold out ſo live high; they waſte their eſtate, and this makes them mad. They cannot forbear feaſting, and yet grudge the money which it coſts him. As to the others, they frequently have recourſe to rapine, robbery, and even murders, to ſupply the demands of their inſatiable appetites.

The neceſſity of temperance is commonly diſcovered too late; for we don't begin to prize it as we ought, till it is impoſſible to remedy the ill conſequences of debauchery. I have ſeen melancholy inſtances that ought to have been leſſons to thoſe who were witneſſes of them: but few had the wiſdom to take warning by them. The others, ſwayed by their paſſions, paved the way for the ſame evils to come upon them which they dreaded, yet had hopes of avoiding by truſting to the goodneſs of their conſtitutions. At length diſtempers overtook them, their health was diſtroyed, their hopes vaniſhed, and were ſucceeded by vain lamentations.

PARIS, Auguſt 21.

The officers and ſoldiers of the army of the Rhine and the Moſelle, to the executive directory of the French republic.

24th Thermidor—Aug. 11.

"CITIZENS DIRECTORS,

"Profoundly afflicted by the evils heaped upon the republic, and by the progreſs of royaliſm, the army of Italy has preſented addreſſes, ſupplicating you to adopt the proper meaſures for conſolidating the conſtitution, which is now ſhaken to its baſis. Witneſſes, and in a manner, the victims of the aſſaſſinations committed by the murderers of the ſouth, the conquerors of Lodi and Arcola beſeeched you to protect their relations, daily immolated by the diggers of thoſe attrocious ruffians, who are armed by the prieſts and the ſupporters of the ancient tyranny.

"More patient, the army of the Rhine and Moſelle has not hitherto communicated to you the grief which it has felt. But, citizens directors, there is a time for every thing, and the meaſure is now full. We have heard the appeal which the diviſions of Angereau, Joubert, &c. have made to you—we ſuffer like them. If, deeply intereſted by the dangers of their country, they are ready to march into the heart of the republic to ſtop the effuſion of the blood that inundates it, you may be aſſured that we ſhall not remain indolent ſpectators of their labours.

"With the reſpect that is due to the firſt magiſtrates of a free people, we ſupplicate you to do juſtice to our claims, to make them now to the patriotic members of both councils, that in concert with you, they may conſider of ſome remedy which may be inſtantly applied

"Having conquered two-thirds of military Europe, how could it be conceived that our enemies ſhould dare to imagine they had gained their cauſe? They have, however, obtained a great part of what they demanded. In a ſhort time, the monarchy would have been re-eſtabliſhed. What a dreadful proſpect is preſented to us by the proceedings of the preſent legiſlature.

"Citizens directors, notwithſtanding your ſolicitudes, the children of the republic, its ſupporters, are vilified in the interior, and are deſtitute of every thing upon the frontiers which their courage alone has given to their country. The objects which ought chiefly to have fixed the attention of our legiſlators have been put aſide; and far from following the line of conduct which the happineſs of the people preſcribed to them, they have dwelt upon the moſt frivolous topics. Many of them have been excluſively employed in gratifying the moſt odious paſſions. The public good, which ought to be the order of the day, has been replaced by a thirſt of vengeance. All that love of liberty that characteriſed the former aſſemblies of the republic, is extinguiſhed. The conſtitution and the ſacred rights of the people are no longer reſpected.—Who knows but, one of theſe days, they will order us to go to maſs?—they have already made us faſt.

"Our finances, ſo much miſmanaged, were almoſt exhauſted. A civil war was ſcarcely terminated in the weſt, when another recommenced in the ſouth. Foreign agents endeavored every where to miſlead the public mind. What has been done to remedy theſe evils? More than twenty ſittings of the council of five hundred have been employed in hearing reports on prieſts, on bells, and on emigrants!—Emigrants and prieſts! Thoſe who delivered Toulon to the Engliſh, and Alſace to the Imperialiſts—thoſe who have involved us in the war, and all its miſeries, have been recalled by a decree, welcomed and honored.—The bells muſt be re-eſtabliſhed, while no plan of finance is adopted, and though the defenders of the country ſhould want every neceſſary. The pay of all the armies is ſeveral months in arrear, and no clothes are delivered to them.—The hoſpitals are not attended to, and our ſick and wounded brethren die for want of proper ſupport and aſſiſtance. Are the civil hoſpitals better ſupplied?—What are the bells to us?

"The conquerors are naked, and defeat has been profitable only to the vanquiſhed. In ſeveral quarters proviſions have conſtantly failed. If the troops have ſubſiſted, it was only by depriving the inhabitants of the countries in which they were, of ſome of the articles neceſſary to their exiſtence. What would be the thought, then, if we ſhould ſpeak of the milliard, which was promiſed us with ſo much earneſtneſs when our ſervices were wanted?—None of us can any longer rely on the payment of it; and it even appears that the only reward they reſerve for us is ſhame and contempt.

"But private intereſt would ſtill be ſilent were not the honor of the country concerned. How have the defenders of the country been treated in the interior? Worſe even than the ſoldiers of Conde, whom they have beaten. They have been viſited in one place, proſcribed or aſſaſſinated in another, and every where inſulted, when they appeared in the moſt reſpectable of uniforms. No, citizens directors! we have not renounced the honor of being French citizens: we know what is due to us—degradation belongs not to our character.—But even the legiſlative body, in debating five days upon the march of the troops which paſſed within 12 leagues of them, have proved that they viewed us only with terror, we may ſay even with horror? Are we then, foreign troops, or enemies of public liberty, that they treat us with ſo much ſeverity? We founded and we maintained that liberty, and no power in the univerſe ſhall tear it from us. Ought we not to be aſtoniſhed when we are declaimed againſt in the national tribunal by emigrants, the pretended repreſentatives of the people whom they deteſt.

"Royal terror has been ſubſtituted to an anarchical terror, of which we are equal the enemies. Such are its effects, that the tribunals every where acquit aſſaſſins and conſpirators, while they ſtrike without pity all who are ſuſpected of patriotiſm, of being purchaſers of national property or merely of being moderate friends to the conſtitution. In ſupport of what we advance, we refer to the judgment pronounced in favor of the conſpirators, Brottier, Duran, and Lavilleheurnois, the known agents of Louis XVIII. and that in favor of the prieſt, Poule, who attempted the life of the repreſentative of the people Syeyes. The purchaſers of national eſtates are every where plundered, and excluded from offices of truſt; while the emigrants, recalled by new laws, exerciſe almoſt every function.—So great indeed is the effect of this royal terror, that when the law upon political and literary aſſemblies, was preſented to the council of five hundred, it was paſſed without the neceſſary forms being obſerved.—One member only offered to ſpeak againſt that violation of the liberty of the people, but he was not heard! It belongs to the preſent period alone to have produced ſuch examples.

"Ten thouſand officers, who have no reward for their ſervices but the wounds with which they are covered, languiſh in the interior without ſupport and without ſuccor.

"What fate, then, awaits thoſe whoſe zeal has ſo long and ſtill detains them under the ſtandard of liberty? We know already, that ſeveral officers have been replaced by men who are not known in the republican armies; others will ſoon be replaced by thoſe emigrants whom they have combated. Our enemies no longer diſguiſe this plan, which they have begun to carry into effect. In the debate upon the Gendarmerie, did not ſeveral members of the council of five hundred declare, that it was neceſſary to place at the head of that corps all the officers who had ſerved in it before the revolution, whatever might be their opinions! We are then about to ſee the ariſtocrats and royaliſts reſtored to their commands—all thoſe who fled to the different courts of Europe, aſking alms of the enemies of their country; thoſe, in fine, whom we have for ſix years combated. It has been ſaid in the tribune of the council of ancients, that all thoſe who poſſeſſed virtue and talents waited only for the propicious moment in which they might return to the ſervice of their country. What, then, do we poſſeſs?—Wounds! Ah, then, we boaſt no titled anceſtry; if we have neither gold nor affection for kings; is it not for us to enjoy the bleſſings of peace?—Noble ſcoundrels who concealed themſelves during the war, are about to replace us!

"We had reaſon to expect, from the French blood that had been every where ſhed, and the innumerable ſacrifices that we have made to our country, a ſolid and glorious peace: but what enemy will treat with while they ſee us agitated by a powerful faction, which they are convinced will deprive us of all means of continuing the war, which diſgraces us, and would even deliver our frontiers to their cohorts; when henceforth no plan can be formed until the utility of it is diſcuſſed at the tribune? No! under theſe circumſtances we cannot have peace.

"Theſe conſiderations, we doubt not, will that the laſt of us ſhould remain upon the frontiers, and expiate, by his death, the crime of having vanquiſhed the kings, their protectors. O country! O defenders of the country! you are then about to be delivered by thoſe deteſtable beings to the ſatellite of tyranny. The deſpot whom you have ſo often humbled, are about to put their yoke of iron over thoſe brave heads which have been covered with ſo many laurels. Perfidious wretches! they ſpeak of their attachment to the conſtitution, which they undermine—which they tear leaf by leaf, while they continue to invoke it. No, citizens directors, we will not endure this. We require other pledges than hypocritical proteſtations. We are fatigued with vain promiſes."

WEST-NIAGARA, December 10.

Dilatory is the negociation a Lide, ſay thoſe who are impatient for peace. Let ſuch remember that they do not reflect the ſecrets of government, nor the materials for the right forming a judgment on the propriety or impropriety of the delay. The French have but little or none relaxed in their high and unreaſonable demands?—a few months may materially change the face of affairs in that country, which is now more than ever rent with diſcord.—Paris government is inefficient, the adminiſtrators of it diſunited, jealous and oppoſed to the important armies of the Rhine and Moſelle and Italy, and theſe to them, inſomuch that they bid defiance to each other, while the people form a third or fourth party in the buſineſs as they bring in theſe circumſtances, what ſecurity can be warranted by a treaty with them, and if there be ſecurity, can they continue in, or inſiſt on in the leaſt degree above unparalleled demands? The queſtion needs no anſwer; and we alſo think it needs but little of the prophet to foretell the conſequence of the mutinous ſtate of thoſe armies to the allied nations; and taking the matter in any view, it cannot be ſuppoſed that peace, on ſome conditions, is very diſtant.

PARIS, September 14.

The deputies condemned to transportation, including Barthelemy, were sent off on the night of the 9th inst. They were escorted by some troops under General Duteuil, who is empowered to call on the armed force wherever he may deem it necessary. They have taken the route to Orleans, and are to be embarked for Rochelle. It is now said that they are not to be sent to Madagascar, but to a settlement in South-America, which has been ceded to us by the late treaty with Portugal.

LONDON, Sept. 6.

The Bey of Tunis has officially declared he will not observe the arrangements made with the United States in October last. But the Dey of Algiers has interfered; and it is hoped, he will alter his mind.

THE LATE REVOLUTION AT PARIS.

IN the postscript of our last, we communicated to our readers some particulars of the extraordinary event that occurred on Monday last at Paris, and an abstract of the proceedings of the legislative body on the two following days. We have in the present column inserted such other official details as may serve to elucidate this new revolution in the affairs and government of France, which is calculated to excite an uncommon degree of regard. The preceding should be done which, in every view either of gigantic interest in its consequences, or of audacious character in its design, has scarcely a parallel in the records of the revolutionary field, and it is impossible to speak of it in the language which applies to ordinary events. It was asserted that there are occasions in the political as well as the physical combinations of life, when all principles must yield to imperious necessity, and when all the rules of moral conduct are set at defiance. The admission of this axiom in all cases the most odious tyranny demands for the justification of every excess; but it is certain that it is sufficient to take from the most limited society, every assurance that it can make for its own independence. After this short observation, we refer our readers to the principal documents that the Triumvirate has brought forward in justification of the measure it is forced to have carried into execution; that readers will thereby be able to decide whether the circumstances of the republic were such as to create the pretended necessity which supercedes all law, or whether it was merely a cabal of personal interests, in which a struggle for supremacy is exalted into a stroke for the deliverance of the people. The zealous friends of liberty in every country of the world, who see the steady and impartial spectators of this awful nothing scene, and after very posterity, free from all the passions which blind the performers, will pronounce judgment on the act.

The blow was struck between three and four o'clock, on Monday or during the night. Upwards of The persons arrested are the two directors, Carnot and Barthelemy, between fixty and seventy of the members of the two councils and the authors and printers of 32 periodical publications, which had exposed the conduct of the executive directory as unconstitutional.

The accusation preferred against those persons is a conspiracy to restore royalty; and the documents on which the charge is founded are a variety of papers said to be found in the portefeuille of M. Dandenac.

As the authenticity of these papers it is useless for us to attempt to comment.

The most arbitrary and unconstitutional measures have been the immediate result of this violent explosion. The councils, at the instigation of the directory, WITHOUT ANY TRIAL, have pronounced a sentence of banishment on the accused deputies. And the triumvirate make a merit of not putting them to death, as if it would not be necessary to produce some proof against them on their trial; and consequently to submit their document to the investigation of their counsel.

The same councils have annulled all the laws which repealed several atrocious decrees passed during the reign of Robespierre, and evidently repugnant to the principles upon which the constitution is established to be founded. They have moreover given the feeble barriers which that constitution had interposed to the erection of arbitrary power on the part of the directory. They have authorised them to call WHAT PERSONS THEY PLEASE TO PARIS, and to take such measures as to them shall seem expedient for the safety of the country. In short, they have badly surrendered their own rights, and those of their constituents; and have effected a virtual annihilation of the constitution, and the establishment of an absolute or military government.

All the editors and printers of the proscribed journals have been committed to prison, preparatory to their trial, and the press is placed under the superintendance of the police. Therefore all the public intelligence from Paris hereafter will come through the partial channel of the directorial papers.

Carnot, by one of the journals, is said to have effected his escape; and by another to have been killed some distance from Paris. Barthelemy is to be beheaded.

FURTHER PARTICULARS.

THE following particulars respecting the late transactions in Paris, and which we think will be found extremely interesting, are compiled from several private letters:

On the night of the 3d inst. the commission of inspectors with several members of both councils, having assembled in behalf of the five hundred, general Augerau, at the head of a considerable detachment, appeared at the gate of the pontourpal, which leads into the garden of the Thuilleries from the square of the revolution, and demanded admittance, which was refused him by Ramel, commander of the guard of the legislative body. The gen. immediately ordered two pieces of cannon to advance, and the grenadiers at the same time declaring against Ramel, the gate was opened, and was arrested. The gen. then proceeded to the Menage, where he arrested Pichegru, Bourdon de L'Oise, Rovere, Willot, and several others. Pichegru and Willot made some resistance, but were instantly disarmed. During these transactions, Barthelemy was arrested at the directorial palace, but Carnot succeeded in making his escape.

Previous to the striking of this blow, the bridges, the square of the revolution, the avenues leading to the Thuilleries, and the principal parts of the city, had been occupied by strong detachments of troops with cannon.

In the mean time, gen. Angereau having assembled the grenadiers of the legislative body at their quarters, asked them if they would follow him, to which they answered, yes! They then desired to see their former commander Ramel, whom they degraded by stripping him of his epaulets, and marched to offer their services to the directory.

At seven o'clock in the morning, of the 4th, the arrested deputies were conveyed in carriages to the temple. At twelve, in consequence of the advertisement posted on the doors of both councils, the council of five hundred assembled at the Odeon, the ancient French theatre, near the directory, and the elders not far from thence.

The inhabitants of Fauxbourg St. Antoinet came, well armed, and offered their services to the directory, and both councils. They were thanked and invited to return to their respective occupations. On their way home, they drew up in the street des Francis Bourgeois, when general Angereau passed along the line, and was received with the loudest acclamations. They afterwards retired very peaceably.

During the whole day the principal parts of the city were occupied by the detachments which had taken possession of them the night before. The streets, especially those about the directory and councils, were filled with vast numbers of people, but not the least outrage was committed, and the greatest tranquillity prevailed in every quarter of the city.

The barriers were, however, kept shut, while all the avenues from Paris were completely blocked up by 25,000 men, distributed at the distance of five leagues. It is supposed there was in the city, on the morning of the 4th, no less a force than 15,000 men, the greater part of which had been marched into the city in a few hours on the night of the 3d. So minute were the preparations made by the triumvirate, that the prisoners of the ten had been removed the day before for the purpose of receiving the members who were to be arrested.

About twelve o'clock on the 4th, Lafond Ladebat, president of the elders, and Simeon, president of the council of five hundred, followed by some members, appeared at the doors of their respective councils, and demanded admittance, which being refused, they adjourned to a house in the street St. Honore, and drew up a protest. The fear of being arrested soon obliged them to disperse.

The theatres were shut up on the 4th, but opened the next day. On the evening of the 6th, pursuant to an invitation from the directory, the actors of the opera celebrated the victory obtained by the republic, by giving the offcande a la liberte, and the Marseilloise hymn.

The law annulling the election of several departments, and ordering the emigrants to quit Paris and the departments, was promulgated on the 6th, and posted upon the walls. A report was made to the councils that Dumorier and Bouille were at Paris, and that the latter was arrested.

The public inscriptions, which on the 3d were so low as 9 seven, rose on the 4th and 5th to 13; but they fell again on the 6th to ten owing to some apprehensions of a new commotion.

A considerable number of swords and daggers, with hilts half red and half black, several packs of cards signed Rovere, a new dress for the deputies, and a chest containing 40,000 livres, were found in the place where the members of the commission were arrested.

Lyons and Bourdeaux are considered as dangerous to the system of the directory, and are therefore declared in a state of siege.

The prisoners of the temple are allowed to dine together, but are deprived of every communication from without. They appear to be in great spirits, particularly gen. Pichegru. Bourdon de l'Oise, is the only one among them that is dejected.

The ex-deputy Chappe, attempted to get into the temple in order to speak to gen. Pichegru; he was conveyed to Angereau's head-quarters, and thence sent to prison.

On the 5th the constitutional circle held a meeting at the Hotel de Mountmorency.

The barriers were opened on the 6th, and the troops withdrawn from the bridges: places of public resort, such as the palace royal, the champs Elycees, and the gardens of the Thuileries, were immediately as crowded as ever.

A small Paris paper of the 8th inst. is said to be received in town, which however contains no material news. It is mentioned that Jourdan had moved and carried the appointment of a new committee, as the late military committee are for transportation. Several other alterations have ensued. The members appointed to the new military committee, are—Savary, Talot, Potters, Martin, Echasseriaux, Ladot and Jourdan.

We understand the goverment is in possession of a Paris paper of the 9th. The two new directors are said to be Merlin of Douay, who has acted a very prominent part in all the bloody scenes of the revolution, and Francois de Neufchateau.

September 14.

A private letter from Paris, dated the 7th inst. we yesterday received from a very intelligent correspondent, after a cursory view of affairs, which merely confirms the statements already made in the various papers, the writer assures us, "that the directory had some hours before dispatched a special messenger to Lisle, ordering the commissioner or plenipotentiary on the part of France to demand from lord Malmesbury a categorical answer to the last proposition. Should his lordship hesitate to comply with the request, or should his answer be hostile to the views of the directory, an intimation was to be given him, that his speedy departure from France would be satisfactory."

The charge against Pichegru is that he, bribed by the Prince of Conde, was to place Louis XVIII. on the throne, and who, in return, was to be made marshal of France, and governor of Alsace—to have the seigniorship, with its parks—a million of livres in ready money and a pension of 200,000 a year with the estate called the Terry d' Arbois, which were to take his name.

September 21.

Lord Malmesbury and his suite, arrived at his house in Spring Gardens yesterday forenoon.

By the letter sent on Tuesday evening to the Lord-Mayor by Mr. Dundas, which we inserted in yesterday's Courier, it appears that it was in consequence of an intimation from the French Plenipotentiaries that lord Malmesbury had thus quitted Lisle without having accomplished "the object of his mission."

PHILADELPHIA, November 18.

Extract of a letter of a late date, from a respectable mercantile house in London, to their correspondent in this city.

"The conduct of the board of commissioners sitting here for granting compensations to American claimants, for losses and damages, sustained by the capture and detention of their property by British cruisers, has been very generous, as far as they have yet proceeded; and we trust they will continue, and that not a citizen will have cause to complain of British honor.

"Having received compensation for two vessels and their cargoes, seized by British cruisers, in behalf of our friends in America, the one captured and condemned, and the other brought in here, and paid for at prime cost with 10 per cent. profit, prior to its being brought before the commissioners; in both of which they have given the claimants the prices the goods would have sold for had they arrived at the market they were destined for, with interest thereon, from the time they would probably have been paid in cash for them, by a regular sale at that market, and allowed all loss incured in the prosecution of appeals and claims; in one of which cases the claimants were allowed for flour, which cost per invoice average 45/4 sterling per barrel, the price for which it would have sold in Nantz, 113/4 per barrel, declaring freight, &c. leaving a clear profit of 100 per cent. to the claimants, and which we have received, on presenting the commissioners order at the treasury, in bank nots for the claimants."

NEW-YORK, November 6,

The news from Europe, received yesterday, is far from encouraging. The Councils and Directory of France have come to an alarming disagreement and the consequences of the interference of the armies are much to be dreaded. Capital punishments are again expected to be frequent in that country; but the Musket is to be substituted for the Guillotine.

Lord Malmesbury has returned, as before, without the glad tidings of Peace. Most probably England wishes to seize the advantages promised by the present dissentions of France.

Nov. 13. It will be seen by the observation and motion of RIOU, in the Council of Five Hundred, on the 19th of September, and the consequent decree, justifying the capture of American vessels, that no hopes of a change favourable to us can be entertained, while the present men continue in power. On the contrary, it is probable that our trade will be more exposed to embarasment than ever. Our sole reliance is, therefore, on our own measures and resources. Either a general embargo must be imposed, or permission granted to arm for repelling aggression. As the latter might lead to trouble, an embargo appears the only eligible step to avert the utter annihilation of the little commerce we have left.

LEXINGTON, Sept. 23.

The following extract of a letter was received by a gentleman in this town a few days ago from his correspondent in Cincinnati.

"Has been received here, a letter from Gen. Wilkinson, saying, that he received a letter from Governor Gayoso, in which he informed him that it will be unnecessary for him to send any more troops to Natchez, for that the French were in actual possession of Louisiana, giving them in lieu of that part of St. Domingo which they held."

ALBANY, Sept. 20.

Extract of a letter from Philadelphia, dated November 14.

"Lord Malmesbury is returned to England—Barthelemy and Pichegru are sent to Switzerland—The moderates banished France, and the unhappy situation of that country is such as bodes no good omen to us."

WEST-NIAGARA, December 23.

In our last we anticipated more agreeable subject matter than fills our gazette of this week:—To our extreme regret it has become necessary to abandon every hope of peace with France, whose madness and extravagance aim at the destruction of its own and every other nation. War and plunder still urge them on with career to Heaven knows what. We have again to witness the desire of the righteous and humane for peace defeated by the heaven-daring deceit of the directory, in the pretended discovery of a conspiracy among certain members of the council of 500. How long, oh nation of monsters and madmen, shall the world be vexed with thy cruelty and perfidy! Be astonished that the earth does not open to engulph that superlative wretch the monster Dunant, who disguises the real plan with a false confession of a conspiracy in league with Pichegru and others who stood in the way to the continuance of a destructive war; and which served as a pretext for the affair of the morning of the 4th of September, and afterwards for the banishment of the 52 members of the council. Wo, then, is the word!—come with all thy furies, and myriads of anarch Frenchmen to complete thy detestable train;—we are prepared; the justness of our cause leaves nothing to fear.

CHRISTMAS.

—AN ODE—

HAIL, the seraphic day!
Out souls, uniting, say;
For, on its morn,
Ere up the brightening east,
The glowing sun-beam prest'd,
JESUS was born.
At this eventful birth,
High in the joyful earth—
In night, serene,
Forming a glorious choir,
Tuning the SACRED LYRE,
SERAPHS were seen
With spotless robes array'd,
O'er Mary's slumb'ring head,
They, soft, began:
In ravish'd notes, alone—
Swell'd their immortal song,
With "PEACE TO MAN."
Hear each one loud acclaim
"MARY of Bethlehem,
"God's chosen one,"
This ever holy maid,
Low, in a manger laid,
Brought forth her son
Around her glory shone;
As from God's beaming throne,
When CHRIST appear'd;
JOSEPH, the pious, came,
Saw the celestial flame,
And music heard,
Of little cherubs, 'round—
Waking ecstatic sound,
To praise the LAMB;
As down the radiant sky,
Leaving their realms on high,
They, hast'ning came.
Shepherds approach'd from 'far,
"Led by a shining star,"
With offrings great;
On bending knee they fell,
Made the Low MANGER swell—
With praise elate.
Now let us each one join,
Aloud in song divine,
With firm accord;
And with unending zeal,
Up heaven send the peal
CHRIST IS OUR LORD.

STATE PAPER.

DECLARATION OF WAR AGAINST THE EMPEROR.

EXECUTIVE DIRECTORY.

Proclamation of the executive directory to the French nation, to the end that the French armies may be complete and ready to march by the 15th Vendemaire next, Oct. 6.

THE 18th, Fructidor [Sep. 4.] imposed silence on the orators of London who were stationed at Paris. After that very memorable day, the English ambassador, prefsed to explain himself in a positive manner as to the first object of his legation, set off on his return for England. On her side, Austria suffers herself to be directed by the cabinet of St. James' which labors inceffantly to distract Europe and foment troubles on the continent. The emperor thwarts the wish of his states and that of his court: he refists the peace of which his subjects are in need, and confines himself exclusively to preparations for war. His armaments appraize us of what we ourselves have to do. If the generous loyalty which urged us to subscribe to the articles of Leoben is abused; if speaking constantly of peace, nothing is breathed but war, the French nation which merely speaks of war, because it is desirous of peace, muft put itself into a condition to support its dignity; and the valor of its armies muft recover its advantages. It is more especially essential fully to convince the enemy, that there is no longer in France but one and a sole party, but one sentiment, but one interest, that of a sovereign nation, which is sensible of its greatness, and which wishes to preserve its liberty. The executive directory is swayed by no other motives than these. The constitutional law authorises us to provide for the safety of the state. It is pleased to make you the judges of the reasons which determine it to employ this sacred right.

The executive directory hastened to stop the progress of the French armies. It gave itself up with sincerity to the hope of the good understanding which dazzled its sight; and enjoyed, in idea, the means it was about to possess of causing liberty to be beloved, and of procuring for France as great a proportion of happiness in peace, as she had acquired glory in war.—But after having obtained this interruption in the progress of our victories, what did our enemies with it? To gain time, to foment among you inteftine divisions, and to take the advantage of what would result from them, to cause Frenchmen to massacre each other, until they should be able to fall on the remnant of population to divide among themselves the threds of a country thus divided, and to blot out France from the list of nations.—Republican good faith could never have suspected this snare of the policy of courts; you muft however, have seen, citizens, whether this plan was not faithfully followed up; the majority of your public functionaries composed the auxiliry army which fought in the bofom of France for your moft cruel enemies. They had called hither swarms of thofe barbarous emigrants who are bent on tearing in pieces the vitals of their country, and of thofe fanatical priests who are skilled in kindling up every where the murderous zeal of homicidal piety. The national tribune no longer refounded unless with the voices of the deputies of Austria & England, calumniating defenders, insulting your generals, employing themselves in paralising your government, and reducing gradually to that absolute nullity which corresponded so well with the royal instructions, and with the views of their constituents. At length the veil is torn off; the partizans of the foreign courts are no longer the organs of the national will; the helm of the republic is in the hands of the republicans; and the people of France have French representatives.

Citizens, in these circumstances, what curse ought your magistrates to pursue?—Animated by a sincere wish to give to France a peace worthy of her, that is to say, a solid peace, agreeable to her interests, and conformable to her engagements, how are they at this time to repulse the pretentions and elude the frauds of the Cabinet of Vienna, and to free Austria herself from English influence, the only real obstacle to the peace of Europe? There is but one mode. Since your enemies, in feigning to negociate, hold themselves in an hoftile state, their example forces you, again to take up arms, and absolves you by anticipation, from all the calamities which in their territories, are about to be the inevitable result of the rupture of the truce. Ah! if war be a scourge which cannot be too much detested, but the horror of which falls on thofe by whom it was provoked, if humanity revolts against thofe who shed blood, who plunder cities, and lay provinces waste without a necessity: if the author of an iniqui tuos war be responsible for the death of the men who are killed, for the destruction of the cottages which are burned, for the loss of commerce which enfues, for the provisions which are destroyed, for the violences, disorders, and crimes, which are committed with arms in the hand; if thofe who feed on the horrors of war, entered into without pretext, and without reason, are ferocious monsters, unworthy of the name of men, not merely enemies of the countries which they cause to be laid waste, but of the whole human race: You who have for six years been forced to fight for your independence you, on whom certain perfidious men endeavoured to bestow the fatal gift of a civil war; you, who, conquerors and triumphant, laid down your arms to propose and hear the words of peace! you will not have to dread the imprecations, the legitimate anathemas which nature and justice address to your enemies. In returning, against your will, to the bloody contest from which you had drawn yourselves, you may protest in the face of the whole world what your intentions have been, and call on heaven to witness the justice of the cause you are about to defend. Thus then, citizens, again take up your arms, without ceasing to be desirous of peace. Your government perseveres in offering it on the conditions which appeared to it to be meet and compatible. Perhaps the warlike appearance you are about to resume, will suffice to obtain a consent to these conditions; but if they should be refused, you will maintain the honor and the laws of the republic. It is in the name of the nation, it is to fulfil its will, to secure its rights, and to preserve its glory, that the executive power recalls to their standards all the soldiers of the country who have withdrawn from them on any cause whatever. The executive directory accordingly enjoins its commissioners stationed in the departments, to cause to be executed, without delay, and without restriction, the laws of the 4th Frimair and 4th Nivose, of the 4th year, together with the resolution of the 4th Ventose, and the subsequent ones and to cause all the soldiers and requisitions whatever, who are now at their homes, to join by the 15th Vendemair (Oct. 6.)

Frenchmen, it is necessary that at this epoch your armies would be complete, that they should be ready to march, & that their awful and terrible aspect should instantly command that glorious peace, which for six months past ought to have been the fruit of their triumphs. The executive directory resolves, that the above proclamation shall be printed, solemnly published, and fixed up at all the communes of the republic by its commissioners stationed at the central departmental administrations; and that the war minister shall take all the necessary measures for its speedy execution, of which he shall give an account every three days to the directory.

REVELLIER LETAUX, president.
Le Garde, secretary-general.

PARIS, Sept. 15.

The eidevant dutchess of Orleans, the prince of Conti, and madame de Bourbon, set off in the night of the 14th inst. for Spain whither they are to be transported. The first shall receive for herself and her children one hundred thousand livres a year, and the others each fifty thousand.

September 18.

The news from Marseilles of the 22d, says a journalist, is every way unsatisfactory. The national guard was formed the 19th, a la Pichegru. The republicans have not made their appearance; they would have been assassinated. All the Chouans and cut-throats are enrolled. The most famous assassins are officers.

The city is always guarded; viz. Part of the Chouans are encamped without, and have their patrols, like a city befieged; they wait with impatience for the news from Paris, and threaten daily to carry measures to the last excess, even should they hear that their party is vanquished, adding that they have no asylum left if the government should triumph.

September 19.

It is said, that the position of Ci devant Bretagne is extremely alarming. Crime will soon assume there a public character, if the consequences of the 18th Fructidor do not destroy there the effects of the great conspiracy. These are the principle features of the afflicting picture of that country. Landins continue on the coasts; great numbers of emigrants have landed near Equi, arms and ammunication are also landed and collections are making in the country, as far as possible, of thofe articles. The Chouan Generals are all at their posts; the famous Richard commands on the coast and directs every movement.

The country is terrified by the priests and the eidevants; almoft every where the tythe is caused to be paid, the emigrants struck out of the list by Cochon, or sent back by England, overflow the country; they take only the precaution not to remain in the cities they formerly inhabited; they exchange residences with each other. What continues to rife with extraordinary rapidity; and it is the servants or agents of these nobles who buy publicly, exclusively, and at any price.

September 26.

By a report of the minister of police to the directory, by them transmitted to the council of five hundred, the complete execution, without any exception of the law of the 12th Fructidor, relative to the condemned deputies, and to the emigrants and priests in general, is represented as necessary to the repose of the republic.

LONDON, Aug. 26.

AT Summerset assizes, on Wednesday, came on the trial of Wm. Gartfel Gascoyne, esq. for picking the pocket of his acquaintance, Wm. Lewis, esq. at a gambling subscription house, at Bath, of his pocket-book, containing bills to the amount of 3200l.

The prisoner made no defence, and had before confessed having possession of the pocket-book; but his counsel, in a very ingenious manner, set aside the principal charges in the indictment. It was not legally proved, he had used or had possession of the bills (those that were negotiable he had destroyed) and the charge of stealing the pocket-book could only be laid upon him.

Sir G. Colebroke, bart. spoke as to the prisoner's character, having known him many years.

The learned judge (Grose) summomed up the evidence in a very clear and circumstantial manner—and dwelt much upon the possibility that M. Lewis (being in the habit of using a snuff-box) might have pulled out his pocket book with his handkerchief, and that the prisoner might find it on the floor, instead of taking it from the person of the prosecutor, which constituted a capital offence.

The jury having consulted a short time, brought in a verdict, guilty, but not of private stealing, and he was sentenced to seven years imprisonment.

WEST-NIAGARA, December 30.

About 1 o' clock of Saturday morning last, a fire was discovered in the work-shop and stable of mess. Wallace, of this town, which was consumed, together with a very valuable span of horses, and an extensive assortment of carpenters' tools. The stable occupied by Mr. Simons, innkeeper, was also consumed.

By the act of parliament, passed the 19th July last, impending the operation of the navigation act, in regard to foreigners trading to the East Indies, nations in amity with Great-Britain, are permitted to import the produce and export from the British possessions in India, in their own vessels, such goods and commodities as shall be allowed by the directors of the East-India company. A new act is ordered to frame regulations respecting Paris papers to Sept. 28, received at Boston, contain the following interesting facts: BUONAPARTE, in a proclamation to his army, approves of the late change in the government, and expresses the thanks of himself and fellow soldiers to the successful party for their vigilance in detecting, and punishing the traitors—Couriers dispatched by the directory with orders to the armies to attack the enemy at all points—The American ENVOYS EXTRAORDINARY have arrived at Paris—A report circulated in Paris Sept. 28, that Buonaparte had re-commenced HOSTILITIES again the Austrians. The transported deputies sailed from Rochefort the 21st of Sept. The death of general HOCHE officially announced on the 24th of Sept.—The liberation of LA FAYETTE took place, Aug. 27.

Mr. Marshal, envoy extraordinary from the American to the French republic, is said to have arrived in Holland—no news yet of Mr. Gerry.

Some days ago, says a London paper, a veteran of more than seventy years of age led to the Hymenial altar at Doncaster, a blooming damsel of seventeen. Some women, whom curiosity had attracted to the place, saluted the bridegroom with fods and mud.

EXILED DEPUTIES.

Extract of a private letter from Antwoy, dated Sept. 12.

"The transported deputies arrived here yesterday at 11 o'clock in the morning.—The waggons in which they are carried, are lofed by iron bars, and covered entirely with plank painted red—No light is admitted, except before and behind, and the hautern with which they conduct themselves prevents their being seen. The door of entrance is locked and bolted.

"General Dutere, who commands the escort, composed of 190 Hussars, permitted them here, for the first time, to dine out of their carriages. He provided a room, forbidding any thing to be given them without his order, or to communicate with them.—An adjutant general, named Hochereau, had told them that they would go to Orleans that evening. The general had him immediately arrested, and conducted by a gendarme to Paris.

"The prisoners all complain of the inconvenience of their carriages—Three of them are sick, particular Barthelemy. His countenance shews the alteration of his health; he is melancholy and sad. Pichegru, his countenance serene, his deportment firm; he preserves his military sang froid.

After dinner they let off for Orleans, where they will arrive in the evening."

Letters received in town (says a New York paper) by the late arrivals at Boston, appear to contradict, at least, the stated intentions of the British messengers who have crossed the channel since the return of Lord Malmesbury; for they inform that a full cabinet council had been held, in which it was determined to prosecute the war with vigor.

We conceive it our duty faithfully to lay before the public every state paper that does or may effect them:—that which occupies so much of this day cannot be said to claim the usual respect due to declarations of war: the allegations to utterly unfounded, style so vehement, and sentiment anarchical, that it more resembles the harangue of an Arab chief to his plundering banditti, than the solemn assertions of civilized men. Republican!—how wrested is its signification!—once expressive of pure and rational liberty, now a cloak for every iniquity that Satan and the more ingenious French can invent. To comment is unnecessary on a thing so perfectly absurd; yet, absurd as it is, nothing ever more effectually established men in power, or took from the people their civil liberties, than did this and the other proceedings of the directory, who are now absolute in France.

The session of congress was opened on the 23d ult. by a speech from the president.

By yesterday's mail.

Upwards of 30,00 persons have been banished Bourdeaux since the late change of affairs; Lyons, after two days bombardment, surrendered to the directory's army; several rencontres have taken place in the south of France; the Dutch fleet remains blockaded in the Texel by admiral Duncam, whose force is 27 battle ships; and that the emperor of Russia is to march 180,000 men against the French.

Promotion. Brevet major W. Doyle, of the 24th, to be deputy adjutant-general of this province, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel in the army, vice Dalton resigned.

Married, Last evening in this town, by the rev. R. Addison, lieut. James Given of the Queen's Rangers, to miss Angelica Addews.

On Miss Allday.

Your name, fure Miss Allday can never be right,
Could I have my wish I would have you All night.

The Lady's answer.

Your admendment, kind sir, is deserving of praise,
But, alas! your All-night would not last all my days.

ALL persons having claims to the estate of James Latham, deceased, are requested to exhibit them before the first day of April next properly authenticated; and those indebted to said estate, to make payment without delay, to JOHN YOUNG, Adm'r.

THOUGHTS ON GOOD TIMES.

WE always wish and hope for good times. And a great many expect better ones.—Under these agreeable wishes, these comfortable hopes, and these sweet dreams, our years fly away, without having seen the accomplishment of them. But what is the reason, that good times in general (which would bring general satisfaction on mankind) cannot exist? The cause is not to be found in the nature of things; for these are always unchangeable. The disappointment of our wishes must, therefore, be ascribed to quite others reasons. Certain it is, that the cause lies entirely on the ideas, of which we form to ourselves good times, and that we look more on individual ranks of men or persons, than fix our eyes on the whole, in general. It is impossible, that good times, in general, can exist, since contradictory things would come to pass at one and the same time—In general the ideas of good times are unfixed. Each individual forms them according to his own fancy, his own passions, his own rank, his own prepossessions, and they cannot come, when the world should not become a place of confusion. A few examples will clear the doubts of our meaning.

The industrious farmer expects good times, when he will be amply reward for his sweat and hard labour. He attends the place of worship, the parson tells him that if men would live a pious life, times would mend; the truth of it is founded indeed, but a farmer only makes a mistake in the application. First, he makes a mistake when he imagines living a pious life, by copying the outward ceremonies of religion, and secondly, when he forms to himself conceptions of good times, after his own fancy. He thinks good times are these, when his fields produce well, and grain rises in price; when his orchards bring much fruit, and that he can get a high price for it; when butter, cheese, cattle, &c. are at a high rate. These are his good times, though many people will be hurt by it, who have bad times; but he does not consider, that he has nothing but the filling of his own pockets in view.

Citizens think these good times, when all trades have plenty of work, and they make themselves recreations, by frequenting taverns, gaming, riding in chairs, on horseback, &c. Owners of houses wish for good tenants, who pay them high rents, at the fixed times, who don't make much disturbance, keep themselves quiet, without spoiling any thing, and have nothing to mend. The tavern keper expects such customers, who surround his bar in clusters, spend much, and don't make a long stay, to make room for others, and who fill his pockets. The merchant reckons for good times, when he has a good sale of his goods, disposes of them quickly, when his money doubles and trebles it, and he is thereby set in a condition to shew his grandeur by good living and extravagance.

For Lawyers are good times, when people quarrel, scold, assault, strike, and wrong one another, so that they get rich law suits. Practioners of phisic have good harvests and good times, when epidemical diseases and the small-pox prevail. Barbers wait impatiently for the agreeable spring, when people get themselves cupped and blooded, to prevent sicknesses. Yes the heavy taxes, with wich the public are loaded, are good times for tax-gatherers, clerks of the commissioners, treasurers, and the like.

And by taking a review, after this introduction, of all ranks of people, it will be found, that the good times, which each individual forms after his own imagination, will always be accompanied with a great loss for the whole community; where one is a gainer, there are ten losers. Thus on cool reflection, it will be found that there is little appearance for the expectation of good times in general. There will be no alteration in deed: good and evil must change one with another; the world and what is in it, will always be imperfect. The wise man, who is not only an idle spectator on the theatre of the creation, enjoys time as it comes; he prepares himself duly in good times for the bad; in bad times he hopes for better, and in this manner he enjoys a continual satisfaction, which make life sweet to him. Happy is the man, who endeavours to study this wisdom, from his early age, and learns to know the folly of those who grieve themselves with unnecessary wishes, flatter themselves with vain hopes, and thereby become a burthen to themselves.

FRENCH HUMANITY,

EXHIBITED IN THE TANNING OF HUMAN SKINS!

Yes, conquering people! twenty towns, and eighteen hundred villages or hamlets have been burned by you! And your glory and your laurels have cost you three millions of men. These afflicting truths cannot be repeated too often, there are so many persons who do not believe them.

For instance, what people in Europe does not take for a fable, the establishment of a tan-yard at Meudon, for tanning human skins? It cannot, however, be forgotten, that a man came to the bar of the convention to announce the discovery of a new and simple means for procuring leather in abundance; that the committee of public safety, assigned him a convenient place for the execution of his plan, at the castle of Meudon, the gates of which were kept constantly shut; and lastly, that Barrere, Vadieu, and others, were the first who wore boots made of human skins. Robespierre did not slay is people figuratively; and as Paris supplied the army with shoes, it is possible that more than one defender of the country may have worn shoes made of the skin of his friends and relations. This will appear pleasant and incredible to certain miscreants, and particularly to the propagandists.

National convention! a tan-yard was established at Meudon, for tanning human skins, and France was indebted to your existance for a conception so monstrous!

BOSTON, Nov. 17.

SINCE our last there have been many arrivals from Europe. Capt. Collins, from Bourdeaux, who furnished Paris papers to Sept. 28, capt. Bates, from London, with papers to October 2, and capt. Smith from Liverpool, who favored us with the papers of that city to the 5th of October, and from these we have collected most of the proceeding foreign intelligence.

Paris is tranquil, but other parts of France are considerably convulsed; robberies and assassinations were frequent. Those of the denounced members, who did not escape, amounting to about 18, had failed from Rochefort in a corvette for Madagascar.—Numerous addresses are continually presented from the citizens, approving of the measures of September 4. Buonaparte has officially approbated them. The directory insists on examining the clerks in the various public offices. Measures of rigor are still perlevered in. Every preparation is making for hostilities with Germany: some say the have actually commenced: the French do not appear to expect a compromise. A sort of correspondence seems still held between the French and English negociators.

NEW-YORK, December 4.

The dwarf, at Mr. Treadwell's, Courtlandt-street, is one of the most rational objects of curiosity that has been exhibited in this city. A human being of two feet stature, and perfectly well made, endowed with intellectual faculties and active bodily powers, is an object well deserving of observation.

The bashaw of Scutary has sent two deputies to the directory of Cis-Alpina at Milan. It was reported that their mission was to concert a plan of revolutionizing Morea, the territory of ancient Greece. [Scutari is a large city in Albania, near the gulph of Venice on the east, a few miles south east of Ragusa. The inhabitants are disaffected with the Turkish government and in a state of rebellion—The policy of keeping on good terms with the Porte is the only thing probably that will prevent Buonaparte from aiding the rebels.]

The porte is alarmed at the vicinity of democracy to his dominions, and is making military preparations. It is said, also, that he has remonstrated with the emperor for taking possession of Istria and Dalmatia.—But the sultan would doubtless prefer Austrians for his neighbours to French republicans.

The sultan of Persia has been assassinated for making an unpopular treaty with Russia and other neighbours. His name was Mehemet.

PARIS, August 31.

BY the treaty of 1778, the United States were bound to guarantee the French islands. It is clear, that this article included the obligation of not furnishing their enemies with the means of keeping them.—Consequently the Americans were not only not to furnish them with warlike stores, as they have done, & still do, but they ought to have abstained from all commerce with those whose object was to furnish them with provisions, and other articles necessary for their subsistence.

This is perhaps somewhat rigorous; but such is the spirit of the compact. What is meant by guarranteeing a possession? Is it not to prevent its falling into the hands of another power;—and in case it should so fall, is it not to prevent its remaining in their hands? The meaning of the word is without doubt, active; it obliges the nation guaranteeing to act in the execution of the obligation. Consequently, according to the spirit of the article, the United States ought to have openly opposed the preservation of the French possessions by the English.

They have not done this, and as it has not been required, we cannot complain of it; but they have fed the conquerors; they have furnished them horses, iron, small vessels, provisions of all kinds, ammunitions of all kinds; they have placed them in a situation not only of defending, but extending their conquests. For it is notorious, that if the United States had not furnished the English at St. Domingo with provisions and horses, long ago, the whole of that island would have been in possession of the nation to whom they had guaranteed it.

This is one of the chief violations of the treaty of '78, and certainly it would alone justify the orders of the directory.—For the directory have a two-fold motive.

1st. To prevent the furnishing of provisions to the revolted French, by requiring the execution of the treaty of guarantee that is, to prevent alone that its enemies be fed on its own territory.

2d. It has the right of treating the Americans as they suffer the English to treat them.

In vain will politicians appeal to the law of nations. What is the law of nations? Is it not the eternal justice which presides over the execution of all contracts; which does not suffer that one nation shall be injured by the act of another; which requires that every nation shall execute its contracts: and which declares contracts nul if one party has violated an essential article.

This is the law of nations, and not that, of which a certain minister (Pickering) speaks, who puts the fair contracting party at the mercy of the fraudulent one.

September 11.

General Clark is not only recalled, but the directory have given orders to arrest him. He will be called on to give an account how the agents of the pretender got Cumot's plan of the expedition against Ireland, out of the topographical cabinet, which was under his direction. Buonaparte is now alone entrusted with the negociation at Udina. By the last instructions, which the directory sent him, he is charged to insist on the punctual fulfillment of the preliminaries, and on the Emperor's consent, that the left bank of the Rhine shall be the boundary of France; and to recommence hostilities, in case Austria should delay the conclusion of a definitive peace above a fortnight longer.

VIENNA, September 13.

The unexpected return of count Meerfeldt, who has been here since the 17th, has made every hope of peace vanish. They speak of nothing but war, and of a war carried on to the utmost extremity.

The Aulic Council of this Department is in permanence, and the utmost activity pervades the arsenal. The executive directory of France has sent its ultimatum, which our court cannot, or will not, accept. Nothing is said of its contents.—This news has made a terrible sensation amongst the inhabitants of all classes in this capital.

Sept. 20. The intelligence of a new revolution at Paris has caused a great sensation in our cabinet. Immediately after the news of it reached Udina, general Meerfeldt set out for this city, where he has arrived. The dispatches he has brought with him contain the resolutions of the present government at Paris relative to peace. The French appear no longer to shew that compliance we had hoped.

The Austrian army in Italy has advanced on every side.

From the Whitehall Evening Post, of October 7.

ABRIDGMENT OF THE STATE OF POLITICS, FOR THIS WEEK.

WE have not been informed of any thing remarkable, in the course of the present week, in the interior of France. The directory must no doubt, be busily occupied in filling up the vacancies occasioned by their late violent proceedings in the councils. Indeed it must, we are afraid, be a long time before any thing very remarkable do happen in that humbled kingdom; in which as complete a tyranny seems, for the present, to prevail as ever existed, and in which the voice of liberty is not heard. The people wearied of fruitless efforts for the restoration of tranquility, and afraid of the directory, consults every one his own safety. Such are the fruits of Jacobinism. The appearance of flags of truce and frequent messengers from France, with dispatches addressed, not to lord Granville, the minister of this country for foreign affairs, but to lord Malmesbury, has been considered by some as an indication, on the part of the directory, of a disposition to PEACE, and a wish to renew, or rather to continue, the negociation, which they think, has never been entirely broken off. But to this conjecture we oppose the actual breaking up of the conferences at Lisle, and the interest of the present rulers of France to carry on the system of war, and plunder—to go on with pillage and conquest—to make their neighbors pay for the maintenance of armies, by which they keep themselves in power, trample on their own countrymen, and harrass all the nations around them. Nothing new has transpired on the side of nor yet have we been informed of what has taken place at Udina the seat of negociation in ITALY, further than that the greatest military preparations are still on foot on both sides. Two circumstances, relative to the probable designs of Buonaparte, have lately drawn universal attention. He humours, flatters, and courts the and he shews an intention to take under his protection the cause of the Polish nation. This is certainly replacing France in the station she was wont to hold in the chain of political powers; the ally of the Turks and the Poles, united with the Turks in hostility to Austria and Russia.

THE DUTCH SAILORS,

have lately given a proof of their attachment to the stadtholder in refusing to weigh anchor and sail out of the harbor under admiral Winter. The cause of the stadtholder does not by any means appear to us to be desperate; though it is better to give way for a time, and wait, for favorable opportunities, than to attempt any schemes for restoration by force of arms.

BANTRY BAY, Aug. 12.

This morning about two o'clock, as some of our fishing-boats were working out between the heads, they saw a large ship in the Offing, seemingly in great distress. They stood for the ship, and about ten o'clock they boarded her; but there was but one living man on board—She proves to be the Two Sisters, from Rhode-Island, bound for Bristol, and had been out five weeks;—such a wreck surely never was seen before! her mizen-mast was all split to pieces, and her main-mast was a stem, hanging by some of the wreck; her fore-mast was also split to pieces, and her afore top-mast gone by the cap. In her steerage or half deck, there were seven men burnt to a coal, and the mate lying under the windlass dead; and as for the captain, we have no account of him, only the young man found with the wreck says, that the captain and all hands were on deck, when some dreadful thunder and lightning came on; and that there were six men on the main-top-sail yard, when the main-mast went over the side, and that they were all lost. He says; the captain was on the quarter-deck when the mast went, but as he did not see him afterwards, he thinks the wreck hauled him over board.

WEST-NIAGARA, January 13.

By Thursday's mail we have the official account of admiral Duncan's sailing in with the grand Battavian fleet, on the 11th Oct. of which he captured nine ships of the line, and two frigates, and sunk two smaller ones. The victory is most brilliant and highly important. The particulars in our next.

The French faction pretend that an English agent with papers of importance, was intercepted, which gave rise to the affair of Sept. 4, and that since which time a greater discovery has been made, by other papers. said to have drifted to shore from the wreck of an English vessel: this last is tho't to be very miraculous; but others think it more so that such an agent should have been taken, and such a vessel lost, and nobody but themselves know whom, what, and when, yet is it most miraculous that men can be found base enough to commit such impositions and forgeries, and a nation mad enough to credit them.

Captain Saunders who arrived at Norfolk, Virginia, on the 27th of November, in 19 days from Martinique, informs, that a packet had arrived at Martinique with intelligence of the recommencement of hostilities between the French and Austrians;—and that sir John Orde, with 8000 men, had sail for the line, were coming out.

Late accounts from Porte de Paix, state, that the French privateers still take American vessels bound to or from such English ports as have been taken from the French; also, that there had been an embargo for 21 days, on account of the sailing of a squadron of French frigates; and that Barney's frigate had sailed under the command of the first lieutenant, but it was not known whether Barney had resigned, or been recalled.

A merchant in Alexandria, Virginia, has published a list of 21 vessels belonging to that port, taken & condemned by the French estimated at three thousand tons, and valued at 302,000 dollars.

By captain Green, who arrived at New York, December 16, in 60 days from Liverpool, who brings London papers to the 24th of October.

LONDON, October 15.

WHEN our readers were informed that the Dutch fleet had ſailed from the Texel, and that the brave admiral Duncan had gone in ſearch of them, they doubtleſs anticipated a moſt glorious event. That prompt and able officer has atchieved one of the moſt ſplendid victories that our annals have ever recorded. At preſent indeed, the information that has reached town on the ſubject is but ſcanty; yet forcibly proves and prepares us for ſtill greater teſtimonies that ſtill "Britannia rules the waves."

At four o'clock yeſterday morning, lieut. Brodie arrived at the admiralty, with a ſhort letter from admiral Duncan, announcing the event, with which lord Spencer immediately ſet off to the King at Kew. At ten o'clock the Park and Tower guns were fired; and in the afternoon the following brief notice was publiſhed in a London Gazette, Extraordinary.

Admiralty-Office, Oct. 13.

Lieutenant Brodie, of the Roſe cutter, arrived early this morning with a letter from admiral Duncan, commander in chief of his majeſty's ſhips, &c. employed in the North Sea, to Evan Nepean, eſq. of which the following is a copy:

Venerable, off the coaſt of Holland, Oct. 12.

SIR,

I have the pleaſure to acquaint you, for the information of the lords commiſſioners of the admiralty, that at nine o'clock this morning, I got ſight of the Dutch fleet; at half paſt 12 I paſſed thro' their line, and the action commenced, which has been very ſevere. The admiral's ſhip is diſmaſted, and has ſtruck, as have ſeveral others, and one is on fire.

I ſhall ſend captain Fairfax with the particulars the moment I can ſpare time

I am, ſir, your moſt obedient humble ſervant,
ADAM DUNCAN.

Letters from lord Spencer, communicating this important event, have been ſent to the lord mayor, and to Lloyd's.

The following particlars, tho' not official are conſidered as authentic:—On Wedneſday morning early, admiral Duncan fell in with the grand Battavian fleet, cloſe in with the Dutch coaſt, to the leeward of the Texel, returning into port. Seeing there was no poſſibility of eſcape, admiral de Winter, commander in chief of the Dutch forces, made a ſignal for forming the line. The gallant adm'l Duncan gave but two ſignals, one for each ſhip to get cloſe to his opponent, and the other ſignal to break the line. His orders were obeyed in the moſt perfect manner, and the Dutch line was broken in two points; he himself near the center, and by admiral Onslow in the rear, who thereby cut off and took 5 ships and 1 frigate. As soon as adm'l Duncan had passed thro', a severe action took place with the van part of the center of the Dutch fleet, and their commander, admiral de Winter, displayed great gallantry. He maintained a hard fought action for two hours and a half; and tho' he had lost all his masts, and that his ship was utterly unmanageable, he refused to strike until the Venerable came up, when he yielded. Mr Brodie counted 8 ships with their colors struck, one of which had been on fire but the flames were extinguished by the exertions of our people; and a ninth ship he saw lying almost a wreck, and the Ruffel close up with her; so that he has no doubt but 9 ships of the line, including 50's and 1 frigate, were taken: of these, two were flag ships. Admiral Duncan had sent boats to take possession of those ships; and at the same time as the center division of the enemy, which suffered the least, were forming a line to facilitate their escape, and prevent straggliers from being picked up, he had given orders for a general chace; most seasonably for this purpose, the Formidable and 2 other ships joined him, immediately after the action, and there was every reason to hope that the British fleet would be able to destroy, if not to take, all the rest of the Dutch ships.

The battle was fought off Scheveling, and so near to the coast, that thousands of people were on the shore to view it. It is tho't that they were so near to the shallow water that they might lie too all Wednesday night and that by this means their retreat into the Texel, or even into Helvoetsluys, would be prevented.

It appears that admiral Duncan had very good intelligence from captain Trollope on the preceding day, of the situation of the Dutch fleet. Capt, T's letter to the admiral contained the following remarkable words —When you see the Dutch fleet, you will see the Russel—He had never quitted the Dutch fleet from the moment he came in sight of it, on Monday, and his ship led the fleet into action.

Admiral Duncan's letter to the admiralty published in the London Gazette extraordinary, contains no details whatever. It was written in great haste, to give ministers the earliest advice of the result, as he purposed sending home capt. Fairfax with the details of this famous action, which rivals in glory the memorable 1st of June, 1794, and the 14th of February, 1797.

This glorious victory may be considered as incalculable in its beneficial effects: it will appal the Dutch, and excite, or perhaps we might say increase, their disaffection to a system of government which has ruined the political and commercial consequence of the republic; it will spare us the expence of keeping a large naval force in the North Seas for the protection of our trade: it frees us from any apprehension of invasion on these kingdoms, during the ensuing winter: it has encreased the force of our ancient bulwark, the navy; and the last in mention, tho' not the least in importance, it has enabled our gallant tars, the saviors of their country, to redeem their character from the disgrace which temporarily attached to it from the insurrection at the Nore, &c. and to add new lustre to the name of British seamen, which a moment of error had covered with shame. While with great sincerity we offer homage to adm'l Duncan and his men, we recall to mind with exultation, the brilliant victories of lord's Howe, Hood, Bridport, St. Vincent, and the important, tho' less splendid success of lord Keith, forming together a grand aggregate indeed of British naval glory. It may truly be said, that whatever may have been the misfortunes of our armies, or those of our allies by land, there never was a period in which our navy was so universally triumphant, as during the present war. Every battle has been a victory—and if we have not had more victories it is because we could not, even by the most cutting provocations, draw the enemy out of port to measure strength with us.

The French republic has received a fatal wound, from the blow which has struck so deeply into the most tender part of her ally. She relied on the co-operation of the Dutch fleet, in repairing the losses which her own marine had suffered, and to make an attempt on some part of the three kingdoms. Every hope of that nature has entirely vanished. The French fleet at Brest, consisting of 20 sail of the line, is unprovided with seamen, the Spanish fleet is shamefully blocked up in the port of Cadiz; and the navy of Holland will probably be found only in our harbours. England may therefore, now, with more propriety than at any former period, be called the mistress of the sea.

Yesterday, in honor to admiral Duncan's victory, the vessels in the river exhibited their gallant streamers; the bells of the different churches in and about London rang merily through the day: and, late at night most of the principal streets in London were illuminated; but, it is tho't, that when the official details are received, the illumanation will be general throughout the principal towns of the kingdom.

The following is a pretty correct account of the ships of each side:—

The Dutch fleet consisted of

3 ships of 76 guns; 8 do of 64 to 68 guns
4 do of 54 to 58 guns; 1 do of 48 guns.

The English fleet consisted of 8 ships of 74 guns; 8 do of 64 guns; 4 do of 50 guns; 1 do of 38 guns; 1 frigate of 38 guns, the Swan sloop, Tiphone fire ship, brigs, cutters, &c.

OFFICIAL.

Admiralty Office, October 16.

Captain Fairfax, of the venerable, arrived here this morning with dispatches from Adam Duncan, esquire, admiral of the blue, commander in chief of his majesty's ships, &c. employed in the North Sea, to Evan Nepean, esq. secretary of the admiralty, of which the following are copies.

Venerable, at Sea, October 13, off the coast of Holland.

Sir,

Be pleased to acquaint the lords commissioners of the admiralty, that, judging it of consequence their lordships should have as early information as possible of the defeat of the Dutch fleet under the command of admiral de Winter, I dispatched the Rose cutter at three P. M. on the 12th (11th) inst. with a short letter to you immediately after the action was ended.

I have now further to acquaint you, for their lordships information, that in the night of the 10th inst. after I had sent away my letter to you of that date, I placed my squadron in such a situation as to prevent the enemy from returning to the Texel without falling in with them.

At nine o'clock in the morning of the 11th, I got sight of capt. Trollope's squadron, with signals flying for an enemy to leeward; I immediately bore up, and made the signal for a general chace, and got sight of them, forming in a line on the larboard tack to receive us, the wind at N. W. As we approached near, I made the signal for the squadron to shorten sail, in order to connect them; soon after I saw the land between Camperdown and Egmont, about 9 miles to leeward of the enemy, and finding there was no time to be lost in making the attack, I made the signal to bear up, break the enemy's line, and engage them to leeward, each ship her opponet, by which I got between them and the land whither they were fast approaching. My signals were obeyed with great promptitude, and vice-admiral Onslow, in the Monarch, bore down on the enemy's rear in the most gallant manner, his division following his example, and the action commenced about 40 minutes past 12 o'clock.

The Venerable soon got through the enemy's line, and began a close action, with my division on their van, which lasted near two hours and a half, when I observed all the masts of the Dutch admiral's ship to go by the board; she was, however, defended some time in a most gallant manner—but being over-pressed by numbers her colours were struck, and admiral de Winter was soon brought on board the Venerable. On looking around me, I observed the ship bearing the vice-admiral's flag was also dismasted, and had surrendered to vice-admiral Onslow; and that many others had likewise struck. Finding we were in 9 fathoms water, and not further than five miles from land, my attention was so much taken up in getting the heads of the disabled ships off shore, that I was not able to distinguish the number of ships captured: and the wind having been constantly on the land since, we have unavoidably been much dispersed, so that I have not been able to gain an exact account of them, but we have taken possession of 8 or 9; more of them had struck, but taking advantage of the night, and being so near their own coast, they succeeded in getting off, and some of them were seen going into the Texel next morning.

It is with the greatest pleasure and satisfaction I make known to their lordships the very gallant behavior of vice-adm'l Onslow, the captains, officers, seamen, and marines of the squadron, who all appeared actuated with the truly British spirit, at least those that I had an opportunity of seeing.

One of the enemy's ships caught fire in action, and drove very near the Venerable; but I have the pleasure to say it was extinguished, and she is one of the ships in our possession. The squadron has suffered much in their masts, yards and rigging, and many of them has lost a number of men, however, in no proportion to that of the enemy.

The carnage on board the ships that bore the admiral flags has been beyond all description; they have had no less than 250 men killed and wounded on board of each ship: and here I have to lament the loss of captain Burges, of his majesty's ship the Ardent, who bro't that ship into action in the most gallant and masterly manner, but was killed soon after. However, the ship continued the action close until quite disabled. The public have lost a good and gallant officer in captain Burges, and I with others a sincere friend.

Captain Trollope's exertions and active good conduct in keeping sight of the enemy's fleet until I came up, were truly meritorious, and, I trust, will meet a just reward.

I send this by capt. Fairfax, by whole able advise I profited much during the action, and who will give their lordships any further particulars they may wish to know.

As most of the ships of the squadron are much disabled, and several prizes dismasted, I shall make the best of my way with them to the Nore.

I herewith transmit you a list of the killed and wounded on board such of the squadron as I have been able to collect; a list of the enemy's fleet opposed to my squadron, and my line of battle on the day of action.

I am, sir, your most obedient humble servant,

ADAM DUNCAN.

Admiral de Winter came out expressly for the purpose of fighting the English, by order of the convention. They talked of having him tried by a court martial if he did not fail.

The quarter deck of the Dutch admiral's ship was completely cleared of every man, the admiral himself excepted. He escaped without a wound. The day after the action the remnant of the Dutch fleet gained the Texel, the wind having favored them by coming round to the westward.

It is a remarkable instance in the history of admiral Duncan, that he has lived himself to illustrate the truth of a doctrine which he was the first to patronize, and to recommend to the British navy. The great principle of this system is to break the line of the enemy, and to this system we are indebted for all our late most glorious victories, from that of the 12th of April to the present.

It is remarkable, that the three most brilliant naval victories this war have been gained, the one by lord Howe, an Englishman; the other by lord St. Vincent, an Irishman; and the third by admiral Duncan a Scotchman. And what still makes it more remarkable is that these gallant officers have each beaten the enemy to which, relatively, their nations are nearest.—England is nearer France than either Scotland or Ireland; Ireland is nearer Spain than either England or Scotland; and Holland is nearer Scotland than any other of our enemies.

VENERABLE, off Orfordness,
October 15, '97.

Sir,

In addition to my letter of the 13th inst. containing the particulars of the action of the 11th, and which I have not been able to add to until this day, I have to acquaint you, for the information of the lords commissioners of the admiralty, that from the wind continuing to blow on the Dutch coasts, the ships have had great difficulty in keeping off the shore, and that we have unavoidably been separated. On Friday last the wind blew strong from the W. S. W. to the W. N. W. and continued to do so until Saturday morning, it then shifted to the North, when I made a signal to wear, stood to the westward, and fortunately anchored here last evening, the Venerable being so leaky, that with all her pumps going we could but just keep her free. This morning I observed the ships named in the margin * at anchor near us, 3 near the Kentish knock, and 1 near Horsly bay.—The wind is N. W. and much against the disabled ships: I have therefore sent the Lancaster and Beaulieu out to render them assistance.

Sir Thomas Williams in the Endymion, who joined me the day after the action, I also sent in shore to keep by and assist the disabled ships; and I am informed, that in the course of the night he fell in with a Dutch ship of the line off the Texel, and had engaged her, and I have not heard the particulars.

I am, sir,
Your most obedient servant,
ADAM DUNCAN.

Evans Nepean, esq.

* Monarch, Powerful, Lancaster, Beaulieu.

Admiral Duncan yesterday anchored with some of his ships and prizes off Orfordness, and they were expected to reach Horsly bay last night. Several of the ships are not yet arrived, from having the Dutch prizes to tow home.

The killed and wounded, on board the British fleet, as far as it had been ascertained, is—killed 173, wounded 504.

October 17.

Admiral Duncan, who is now 63 years of age, is nearly related to lady Mary Duncan. He is six feet three inches high, his fortune is about 10,000l. half of which he got as prize money at the Havannah, the war before last. We believe he is married to a relation of Mr. Secretary Dundas, by whom he has three or four children.

Admiral de Winter was born in Demarara, when very young he served in the Dutch navy, but changed shortly to their army, which he afterwards quitted for the Russian service, where he remained until 1706 or 1707, during the troubles in Holland, when he returned and sided against the Orange party, on whose success he went to the French, with whom and his old friends he returned when they conquered Holland.

October 18.

The circumstances which gave the first turn to this glorious victory, which will ever be distinguished in the annals of Great-Britain, arose from the Jupiter of 74 guns, with two admirals on board, being dismasted, and almost shattered to pieces before the could bring a gun to bear on the Monarch of 74 guns, which raked her. This was the first ship that struck. Admiral de Winter's ship did not fare much better from the fire of the Venerable. Both ships were so unprepared at the moment, that they could scarcely bring a gun to bear until they had received the fire of our ships repeatedly.

The obstinate bravery of the Dutch in the battle was so great, that when admiral Winter surrendered, he was the only person on the quarter-deck of the Vryheid, and he is said to have been so for half an hour; every other officer having been killed or wounded. Having performed his duty in the most gallant manner, he appears since his capture to be in good spirits, and has passed great part of his time in admiral Duncan's cabin.

The circumstances of two admirals being found on board the vice admiral's ship is owing to the senior, who is infirm, having wished to retire, which the Dutch government opposed, on account of his popularity with the seamen. A junior admiral was, therefore, appointed to assist him in duties of his office.

When admiral Duncan made the signal to breake the enemy's line, the Dutch admiral, immediately perceiving his purpose, made the signal for his fleet to close, which was very alertly obeyed, particularly by the vice-admiral. It was under the stern of his ship that admiral Duncan passed, and immediately ranged up along side. It was seven or eight minutes before a gun was returned on that side; a proof that they were not ready.

Adm'l de Winter's letter to the Batavian convention, corresponds with the account given by admiral Duncan.

The newly invented cannon at Bengal, (lays a London paper) which is said to be so light as to be capable of being transported on men's shoulders, will add much to the terrible effects of war.—We may soon expect to hear a dreadful word of command; shoulder your forty-eight pounders!"

HAGUE, October 13.

At the ſitting of this day the committee of marine communicated a letter addreſſed to them by vice-admiral de Winter, written yeſterday on board the Britiſh admiral Duncan, and received at 10 o'clock this morning by expreſs. Of this affecting letter, the following is a ſummary; it cauſed the livelieſt ſenſations of grief among the members of the aſſembly.

"It is with the deepeſt regret that I addreſs to you the preſent diſpatch. Yeſterday morning at 11 o'clock we diſcovered the Engliſh. We ran ged in order of battle. I made the ſignal for forming the line as compact as poſſible which however was very imperfectly obeyed.

"At 12 o'clock the enemy attacked the extremity of our line. They ſoon afterwards undertook to force it. The action became general, and I found myſelf engaged with three of their ſhips. The Hercules took fire, and driving towards mine, I was under neceſſity of changing my poſition, to avoid her, which obliged me to approach a fourth of the enemy's veſſels, that of the admiral. I very ſoon loſt all my rigging, and it became impoſſible to continue any signals. Meanwhile the enemy took possession of the Wassenaar, Harlem, Frisland, Delft and Jupiter

"The smoke prevented me from distinctly observing the state of our affairs. The action was one of the briskest I have witnessed. After losing a considerable part of my crew, I endeavoured by a vigorous push, to force the five English ships which surrounded me, and to gain the coast, or join the remains of my fleet. At 2 o'clock all three of my masts went by the board. After a ll continued fighting a ll an hour, when my flag was carried away, and the crew, reduced to half its number, ceased to fire. At 3 I was boarded by an English frigate, and conducted on board admiral Duncan. The Equality was not far from me— I observed her to cease firing, having lost all her rigging. Why she, as well as the Prisar, Delft and Harlem struck, I cannot determine. The Hercules was obliged to cut away her masts— she was on fire, but it was soon put out—she, however, drove into the British fleet, and was taken.

"I am perfectly satisfied with my officers and crew, they fought with infinite bravery, as did also the enemy. The loss of men on both sides has been very great.

"The British fleet which had put into Yarmouth, set sail again immediately on receiving news that we were at sea. It was joined by several ships from Portsmouth and the Downs. Their force consisted of 16 ships of the line, principally 74's.

"This is the most unhappy day of my life— all our best manœuvres, and all our courage were fruitless. The enemy always us on account of our vigorous resistance. No action could have been more desperate and bloody.

"I shall do myself the honor of transmitting you a more accurate detail by the next opportunity. I now only avail myself of the permission granted by admiral Duncan, to forward this sketch.

"I cannot give you any precise information respecting the other ships—I am told vice admiral Reinter is slightly wounded, and a prisoner on board vice-admiral Onslow.

"I cannot say how many English ships are damaged, but count only ten in view. I hope to be permitted to repair to Holland.

I am, your unfortunate admiral,

"DE WINTER."

The marine committee has this afternoon received official information that seventeen of our ships have entered the Texel, and Helvoetsluys.

LONDON, Sept. 25.

THE Spaniards are making preparations to besiege Gibraltar, but the garrison is in such an excellent state of defence, that the governor is not in the least fear from their hostile movements.

By the Lisbon mail we received some letters, stating that the principal part of the fleet under the command of admiral Jarvis, is shortly expected to return to England, to refit.

The dey of Tripoli has actually declared war against Sweden, and three of their ships have already been taken [illegible] Mediterranean corsairs, and carried into Tripoli.

October 5.

The imperial army at present encamped in Carniola, Friouli, Carinthia, and Tyrol, consists of 130 battalions, 60 detached companies, and 90 of cavalry. The artillery of reserve forms a park of 137 piece of cannon.

It appears from an extract of a letter from Aldernay, of the date of September 30, that the French have not yet abandoned the wild and chimerical idea of invading this country, or Ireland, and that a new expedition is fitting out at Brest for that purpose. We have little anxiety respecting the result of such an attempt.

October 10.

We this morning resume our extracts from the French papers. The report of Ramel conveys some idea of the state of French finances, when the grant of two hundred millions in paper was reduced, by the depreciation of the credit of government to the value of less than nine millions in specie.

The French plenipotentiaries at Lisle, in sending away lord Malmesbury for the purpose of obtaining new powers to treat definitively on the basis of the total restitution of our conquests, made from France, and her allies, were desirous to appear as if they were not the first to break off the negociation. It now seems, that in order to give some colour to that design, the plenipotentiaries are to remain at Lisle until the 16th inst. in expectation of lord Malmesbury's return to that place with the necessary powers.

In consequence of these proceedings, Vick, the messenger, was dispatched to Lisle soon after lord Malmesbury's return to London, to signify that the basis of the negociation proposed by the directory was such, that it could not lead to an happy termination. But the directory, still persisting in the design of giving a plausible air to its exorbitant pretentions, sent Monde la Clue to our court, with a note containing in fact, demands as imperious as before, but glossed over in terms of great civility. Indeed, the language of it may be remarked as the most polite of any that has yet passed from the French directory. It is as follows:

Lisle, October 3.

"The plenipotentiaries of the French republic charged to negociate peace with England have the honour to inform Lord Malmesbury that having addressed a copy of his last note of Sept. 25, '97, to their government, the executive directory has directed them to declare in its name that it has not ceased to desire peace: that it gave unequivocal proof of the sentiment which animated it, when it ordered the ministers of the republic to demand a categorical explication, with regard to the power vested in its minister plenipotentiary by the English government: that such a proceeding neither had nor could have any other object than to bring the negociation to a speedy and happy issue.

"That the orders given to the ministers plenipotentiaries of the republic to remain at Lisle, after lord Malmesbury's departure, is farther proof that the directory desired, and provided for his return with such power as would not be illusory; and the imitation of which would no longer afford a pretext for retarding the conclusion of peace.

"That such are invariably the intention and hopes of the executive directory, which enjoins the ministers plenipotentiaries of the republic not to quit Lisle, till such time as the prolonged absence of the negociator shall no longer leave room to doubt the intention of his Britannic majesty to break off all negociation.

"That, in consequence the 20th Vendemaire inst. (Oct. 16.) is the period fixed for the recall of the ministers plenipotentiaries of the French republic, in case that the minister plenipotentiary of his Britannic majesty should not return to Lisle by the above epoch.

"The executive directory will experience great regret in case that an accomodation, already twice entered upon, should not be consummated: but its own conscience, and all Europe will render testimony, that it is the English government alone that will inflict the scourge of war on the two nations.

"The ministers plenipotentiaries of the French republic beg the minister plenipotentiary of his Britannic majesty to accept the assurance of their high consideration.

"TREILHARD,
"BONNIER.

"DERCHE, secretary of legation."

The answer returned by our cabinet has, we have no doubt, been as polite, in point of form as the note of the directory; but as to dignity and the interest of the nation unite in refusing our acquiescence to the extraordinary demands of the French government, it is highly improbable that the negociation will be resumed for the present.

The following is the answer of lord Malmesbury to the note of Treilhard and Bonnier:

"I have transmitted your note to the king. My powers were neither illusory nor limited, and nothing has been omitted on my part to accelerate the negociation, which has been retarded only by the delays of the directory, and which is now suspended by their act only. As to what regards the renewal of conferences, I can only refer to my last note, in which I have delignated with frankness and precision the only means which remain for continuing the negotiation, observing that the king could no longer treat in an enemy's country, without an assurance of seeing respected, in the person of his plenipotentiary, the usages established among all civilized nations, regard to public ministers and especially those who are commissioned to labor for the re-establishment of peace."

Oct. 18. Advice was yesterday received of the lois of the Dutch ship, the Delft, of 56 guns, in the Downs: very few of the hands it is said, were saved.

WHITEHALL, Oct. 17.

THE king has been pleased to grant the dignity of viscount of the kingdom of Great-Britain, to Adam Duncan, esq. admiral of the blue squadron of his majesty's fleet, and the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten, by the name, style, and title of Lundie in our shire of Perth.

The king has also been pleased to grant the dignity of a baronet of the kingdom of Great-Britain to Richard Onslow, esq. vice-admiral of the red squadron of his majesty's fleet, and the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

DUBLIN, September 28.

We are told that the military forces, of all denominations, in Ireland, are to be encreased to 100,000 men, a much greater number than ever were known in this kingdom either during the long wars, or in the wars of William III.

Oct. 10. The Prussian government at Warsaw has given orders to the keeper of the royal palace, to remove all the effects of the ci-devant king of P. and, in fourteen day's time. Warsaw, which was so flourishing in 1790, is now like a defolate city: grass is growing in all the streets, and it is now a very rare thing to see a coach in that city, where formerly 300 of the most elegant carriages were driven about, and filling the courts of the palace of the king; the antichambers of the hotels are filled with Prussian uniforms. In general, that city is so neglected, that it would seem as if every one was endeavoring to make people forget it was once the capital of a great kingdom. The population is also greatly diminished.

N. York paper.

KINGSTON, (Jam.) November 1.

Every thing is again quiet at Honduras and all fears of an attack from the Spaniards at an end; a destructive fever having cut off a vast number of their forces, and obliged them to retire from their posts on the frontiers of the English settlements.

By the Guinea ships which called at Barbadoes, we learn that the crew of the ship Thomas, bound from Angola for this islands was overpowered by the negroes near Barbadoes, and that 14 hands, leaving the captain and the rest to maintain a desperate equal combat, betook themselves to the boat, without an hat, provisions, or water. After being out 20 days, the boat drifted to Barbadoes, when only 4 miserable wretches were found alive. It appears that their danger becoming insupportable, they cast lots, in order to ascertain who should die for the subsistence of the remainder, when the lot fell on the doctor's mate, who a ordingly was killed. The remainder fell victims to disease, arising from the extremity of their wants; and of the 4 who reached Barbadoes, one died on the beach, and two were not expected to live. A Barbadoes paper, containing the particulars, was seen by the capt. of the Bridget, but he has not brought it with him.

By the last arrivals from St. Domingo, accounts are received that his majesty's ships, Severn and Magicienne, had sailed from the Mole to endeavour to destroy the vessels of commodore Barney, in Port de Paix, for which purpose they are provided with mortars.

His majesty's ship Crompus, of 54 guns, lately arrived at C. N. Mole from England: on her passage some of the seamen manifested a mutinous spirit. One man who had been a delegate in the mutinous fleet at home, and had been acquitted, finished the capt. on the quarter deck, and was seconded by another of the crew, they were, however, both put in irons were tried at the Mole, and the ci-devant delegate was executed: the other was condemned, but awaits his majesty's pleasure.

WEST-NIAGARA, January 27.

Accounts from London to 10th of October, further advise that his Britannic majesty intended to honor admiral Duncan with a visit, from which many good consequences were expected: Earl Spencer, Mr. Pitt & Mr. Dundas had left London to prepare the fleet for the reception of his majesty, who was to embark at Greenw h on board the Augusta yacht, Capt Rion. The Dutch prize ship Delft, was lost in the Downs, and very few of the crew saved. The Hercules of 90 guns, had arrived Yarmouth: her Captain wounded in the body, and his hand shot off; the vessel torn to pieces. The Alkmaer, of 54 guns, also arrived; her masts all gone, and the vessel shot to pieces; an attempt was made to set fire to her. The Dutch ships are stated to have repeatedly received the fire of the British ships and to have sustained great damage by it, before they returned it. Admiral Duncan is promoted to a peer of England, and all the first lieutenants masters and commanders.

N. York paper.

On the night of the 10th November last, his majesty's frigate, La Tribune, foundered near the harbor of Halifax, and of 240 men on board, all perished, excepting 11 seamen & marines and one petty officer. This melancholy accident was occasioned by her having struck the preceding morning on the shoals of Thrumcap; and after getting off in a leaky condition, was prevented from entering the harbor by a severe gale of wind.

Barney is appointed chief judge of the admiralty at Cape Francois.

An act has passed both houses of congress postponing the operation of the stamp act, until the first of June next.

A late English paper states that the Liverpool infirmary, instituted for the relief of the sick and lame poor, of any country, last year relieved upwards of 17,500 persons. The disbursements for that period amounted to upwards of 3000 sterling, and the contribution in support of that establishment exceeded that sum by some hundred pounds.

It appears from a statement in a late London paper, previous to the 11 of October last, that Great Britain had 126 sail of the line of effective ships acting against the combined naval forces of France, Spain and Holland, exclusive of all others employed as guard-ships, prison-ships, hospital and receiving ships.

The largest man in England says a late paper, is Mr. Cooper, at Epsom. He measures three yards and an ell in the girth, and weighs 33 stone! In the last frost, he fell in crossing the street at night, and being unable to rise in consequence of his unwieldy size, was obliged to creep home on all fours.

Our readers will remember that our last gazette was published at an earlier day than usual; at which time we were unacquainted with the circumstance, to add to our account of the celebration of her majesty's birth, that the colors of the regiment were, for the first time, brought on the parade, and committed to their charge, and on which occasion the reverend Mr. Burke, delivered an excellent address. And we also have to observe with the highest satisfaction, that during the whole of the ceremonies, our friends of the American garrison were heard to play the BRITISH GRENADIER. Those acts of civility, while they secretly draw forth a glow of momentary pleasure, leave behind them that which begets, in generous minds, a substancial friendship between individuals, and which at length pervades and unites even nations as a band of brothers. And here we may not improperly remark, that uncommon unanimity has attended the intercourse of the military on these extensive lines, ever since their establishment, which was totally unexpected by all, and at which the enemies of the treaty of amity are chagrined.

We hear from York that a few days since, one Michael Tenney fell from a frame then raising, and very soon expired.

On Thursday morning last, the dwelling house of Mrs. Tice, of Stamford, with very nearly all its contents, was consumed by fire.

MARRIED,—On the 6 inst. by the Reverend Mr. ADDISON, Mr. JAMES MUIRHEAD, of Chippawa, to Miss ELIZABETH VANDERLIER, of Queenston.

REPEATED

BRITISH PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

November 2.

THE king at two o'clock came to St. James' palace, from whence his majesty went in the usual state to the house of peers, to open the session of parliament by a from the throne.

On his majesty's leaving the house, the speech he had just delivered was read by the lord chancellor, in his place, and afterwards by the clerk.

"My lords and gentlemen,

"It is a matter of great concern to me, that the earnest endeavors which I have continued to employ, since I last met you in parliament, to restore to my subjects the blessings of peace, on secure and honorable terms, have unhappily been rendered ineffectual.

"The declaration which I have caused to be published, and the other papers which I have directed to be laid before you, will I am confident abundantly prove to you, and to the world, that every step has been taken on my part, which could tend to accelerate the conclusion of peace; and that the long delay and final nature of the negociation, are solely to be ascribed to the evasive conduct, the unwarrantable pretentions, and the inordinate ambition of those with whom we have to contend, and, above all, to their inveterate animosity against these kingdoms.

"I have the fullest reliance, under the blessing of providence, on the vigor and wisdom of your counsels, and on the zeal, magnanimity, and courage, of a great and free people, sensible that they are contending for their dearest interest, and determined to show themselves worthy of the blessings which they are struggling to preserve.

"Compelled as we are, by the most evident necessity, to persevere in the defence of all that is dear to us, till a more just and pacific spirit shall prevail on the part of the enemy, we have the satisfaction of knowing that we possess means and resources proportioned to the objects which are at stake.

"During the period of hostilities, and under the unavoidable pressure of accumulated burthens, our revenue has continued highly productive, our national industry has been extended, and our commerce has surpassed its former limits.

"The public spirit of my people has been eminently displayed; my troops of every description, have acquired fresh claims to the esteem and admiration of their country; and the repeated success of my navy over all our different enemies. I have been recently crowned by the signal and decisive victory with which providence has rewarded the exertions of my fleet under the command of admiral lord Duncan.

"No event could be attended with more important and beneficial consequences, or form a more brillant addition to the numerous & heroic exploits which, in the course of the present war, have raised to a pitch, hitherto unequaled, the naval glory of the country.

"Gentlemen of the house of commons,

"I have directed the estimates for the ensuing year to be laid before you. The state of the war, joined to the consequences of our recent success will, I trust, admit of diminution of expence, especially with the vigorous efforts which our situation indispensably requires. In considering what may be the best mode of defraying the heavy expence which will unavoidable, you will, I am persuaded, bear in mind that the present crisis presents every motive to animate you to the most effectual and spirited exertions; that any relief, or any temporary sacrifice which you may find necessary for this purpose, can only be estimated by comparing them with the importance of supporting effectually our public credit, and convincing the enemy that while we retain an ardent desire for the conclusion of peace, on safe and honorable terms, we possess the means as well as the determination to support with vigour this arduous contenst, as long as it may be necessary for maintaining the safety and independence of these kingdoms.

"My lords and gentlemen,

"After the experience I have had of your loyalty and attachment to me, and of your anxious regards for the interests of my subjects, I have only to recommend to you a perseverance in the same principles and conduct,

"The events of every day must more and more impress you with a just sense of the blessings which we derive from our civil and religious establishments, and which have so long distinguished us among all the nations of Europe. These blessings can only be preserved by inculcating and enforcing a due reverence and obedience to the laws, by repressing with promptitude every attempt to disturb our internal tranquility, and by maintaining inviolate that happy constitution which we inherit from our ancestors, on which the security and happiness of every class of my subjects essentially depend."

LONDON, October 17.

THE United armies on the Rhine, which Gen. Angereau is to command, will contain 140 000 men. it is expected they will soon be on the banks of the Danube; and that another republic will be formed in Germany, equal in importance to that in Italy.

October 18.

Last night a Dutch sailor, armed with a sword, planted himself on the side near Deptford, where he attacked every passenger with the most brutal ferocity. He stabbed a young woman in the breast, & wounded several gentlemen, but none mortally. After a desperate resistance he was at last overpowered by numbers, and conveyed to the watch house, where he declared it was his intention to destroy every person he met, in revenge for the defeat of his countrymen.

Admiral de Winter is between 35 and 40 years of age. He is a tall, handsome man, plain in his manners, and joins to the most undaunted courage, an uncommon ardour and activity, as he has evinced on various occasions. He is a major-general in the French service.

October 21.

Yesterday a report prevailed that hostilities had actually recommenced between the Austrians and French. The funds fell a little in consequence; however, the report has no foundation, as we know of.

All the ships of lord Duncan's fleet have arrived in port, except the Isis, of 54 guns; and no fears are apprehended of her safety.

Eight of the Dutch men of war prizes have arrived in port. The Liberty of 74 guns, Admiral Winter's ship, has been sunk at the Nore. The Delft, of 68, sunk at Sheerness. The Monnikendam, of 44 guns, after coming round the Nore, sunk at the mouth of Holland's Hole.

PLEASANT ANECDOTE.

The animosity of the two gallant commanders in chief in the late action ceased with the surrender of the Dutch admiral's ship, the next evening admiral Duncan's & de Winter sat down together to a party at whist, of which game the latter is passionately fond.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 1.

On Saturday arrived in town from Harve de Grace, via New-York. Mr. David Meredith, merchant of this city. Mr. Meredith sailed from Havre the 24th of October, on which day he informs that he saw a letter from the chancellor of the American Consulate at Paris, to a gentleman at Havre, which stated that twelve days previous to the date of that letter, the American ministers plenipotentiary, had delivered their credentials to M. Talleyrand Perigord foreign minister, and at that period they had received no communication from him either personal or official, and that in consequence they found themselves in a most awkward & unpleasant situation imaginable.

[The French will not enter into negociation with our commissioners until they have brought to an issue their pending negociation with Austria An acknowledgement of the modern laws of neutrality, and a mutual stipulation to abide by them, will then be made a sine qua non of accommodation. If our administration hold back upon this ground, so advantageous to this country as well as to France, the execution of our guarantee of the French West Indies will then be required.

The project of Boulay for banishing all the nobles from France was found to be so unpoplar, that the commission withdrew it, and substituted a modification by which the nobles are only distranchised, and, previous to exercising the rights of citizens, are obliged to go thro' the forms prescribed for foreigners. The discussion of this question called up violent passions in the council, the members rushed to the tribune, bawling and striking with their canes, with all the intemperance which distinguished the debates in Danton's time.

Reports circulate, that our envoys had had an audience with the minister of foreign affairs, in which the minister put this quiz on, Are you authorized to treat with England? and on their answering in the negative, the minister replied—"I am instructed by the directory, not to enter into negociation on any other principles."

NEW-YORK, Dec. 14.

From recent European accounts it appears, that unless our envoys to the French republic accomplish the object of their mission, by a treaty stipulating reparation for past injuries, and a more friendly conduct in future, no hope of averting the ruin of our commerce will remain, but what depends on our own measures and resources. From the decree in the council of Five Hundred, disavowing the apparently amicable motives which actuated that body a little before the late violent change, to adopt the report and the motion of Pastoret; and from certain unfriendly decisions by the marine tribunals, we may infer, that unless engagements are entered into, and religiously observed, of treating us with more equity, the same piracies will be exercised on our shipping, which, during the two last years, have so indelibly tarnished the annals of the republic.

That their privateers have been successful in cruising against the American, as well as British commerce, is a know truth: and the industrious preparations to carry it on more extensively than ever, leave little room to hope for the escape of any of our merchantmen, bound to the British European dominions.

If, then, by a denial of national justice, we are to continue exposed to the same, and greater risques, from French cruizers, and from the unprincipled patricides of America resident in France—If no redress, but repelling force by force, remain—if, to submit tamely to the blow aimed by an assassin, be synonimous with deliberate suicide, shall we continue to sit with arms folded, without one attempt, and effort to avert our destruction? No—We do not desire war—we solicitously wish for peace, with its attendant blessings—Our past conduct, is an adequate proof, and our obvious interests are sufficient pledges, of this. But let us put ourselves in a posture of defence. Let us assume a repulsive attitude. Let our vessels be armed. Let them no longer be the prey of ruffians, unprovided themselves, with the means of offensive operation, and formidable only by their numbers and character.

It is not uncommon to find cowardice associated with cruelty. The miserable poltroon who sees a weaker individual in his power, feels no sentiment of humanity, but gives loose to the most boundless excesses. Where he finds himself matched, or his power overbalanced, the contemptible wretch is as abject, as he before shewed himself despotic.

This remark is confirmed by an incident which lately took place in the British channel. An armed American Indiaman (that description are permitted to carry guns) was met by a French privateer full of men, who after firing into him, ordered him, in terms the most domineering, to heave to, and threatened instant destruction in case of non-compliance. The American, calm and unmoved, sent one ball into the picaroon, which so deranged his courage, that he immediately struck—and with the magnanimity of a hero, gave himself up.—Our countrymen, bid him cheer off, and be more careful in future how he medled with Americans.

This with other facts of a similar complexion, shews at how little expence one half the property sacrificed by our forbearence, might have been saved; and how great a part of the disasters incurred by our mercharts, might have been avoided by the single permission to carry a few guns.

The idea of being involved in war, by measures of self-protection, is chimerical and degrading in the extreme. If we may not defend ourselves when attacked, how contemptible is our situation! We may at once renounce independence as the shadow of a shade and acknowledge the U. States to be colonies of what ever power pleases to seize upon them. Let us think like the president, and, with him, declare, that "nothing will contribute so much to the preservation of peace, as the manifestation of that energy and unanimity, of which, on many former occasions, the people of the United States have given such memorable proofs; and the exertion of those resources for national defence, which a beneficent Providence has kindly placed within our power."

December 25.

"Captain Paterson, from Bourdeaux, informs, that our envoys were received at Paris, but it had not transpired whether they had entered upon negociation.

That no accounts had been received of the commencement of hostilities with America, and that it was wished and believed, that peace would prevent it.

That the Dutch defeat had been received.

That he heard of no new order of the directory to capture all American vessels, as reported via St. Thomas's.

That he went on shore at Rouen, in the Bourdeaux river, and that two sailors came there from Brest, who informed, that the fleet, was in no readiness, but, on the contrary, there were but few men, and those unpaid; and that no vessels would go out unpaid; and that no vessels would go out unless some merchant should hire the frigates for private service, which it was expected they would do.

GEORGETOWN, Dec. 5.

A privateer boat, it is said, attempted to bring to an East-Indiaman comming into the Chesapeak bay a few days ago. The ship run down the boat and the pirates perished.

WEST-NIAGARA, February 3.

The city of London have voted thanks to admiral Duncan and all the officers and men composing his fleet, for their conduct in the action with the Dutch: and have presented admiral Duncan with a sword valued at 200 guineas, and admiral Onslow with a sword, valued at 100 guineas. Also directed 500l. to be paid by a subscription opened for the widows and orphans of seamen who fell in the conflict 2000 guineas were subscribed by individuals for the same purpose.

It appears by the last Paris papers, says a New-York paper, that the famous statues of Laocon and the Apollo have arrived in the capital, and are placed upon the terrace of the Thuilleries.

A Mr. Deblois writes from Paris to his friend in Salem, that it is his private opinion war between France and America will probably take place in three months—certainly in six.

A word of consolation to Holland.

Paris, Oct. 26.

The executive directory of France has requested of the republic of HOLLAND, that they promptly repair their late maritime disaster, and equip and put to sea as soon as possible, as many vessels as they have lost.

It is hoped that the differences which exist between the French republic and the United States of America, will terminate amicably, and to the satisfaction as well as the advantage of the two countries.

The order of the directory must be a consolation indeed to Holland; but would it not have been more so, to have been accompanied with money? Besides, we can not find much fault with the order, since the vessels captured are so much shattered, new ones will be more acceptable to us; not need they doubt but we will raise them in the place of the old.

ERRATUM—In our last for Mr. James Muirhead, read Mr. John Muirhead.

AT a meeting held at Hind's hotel, of the subscribers to the BLACK SWAMP, this day, Wm. Jarvis esq. in the chair, it was resolved, that Peter Ball, esq. John Backhouse, esq. Mr. Andrew Heron, Mr. John Young, and Mr. Samuel Thompson, be appointed trustees to oversee and conduct the same, for which purpose there is 200 dollars subscribed towards carrying the same into immediate effect; and it was further resolved that subscription papers be opened at the following places, viz. at Mr. Heron's in Newark, Mr. David Secord's mills, near Queenston, Mr. Clandeneg's mills, at the 12 mile creek, Mr. Robert Nelles' mills, at the 40 mile creek, and at Mr. James Wilson's, in Ancaster, where those gentlemen who are inclined to aid so necessary a work, will have an opportunity of adding their donations.

Newark, 30, Jan. '98.

THE subscriber, as collector for the township of Newark, once more calls on those who have not paid their taxes, and is determined to give them no further indulgence, but will return their names to the magistrates.

ENGLAND.

Manifeſto againſt the French.

HIS Majeſty's moſt benevolent endeavours to reſtore to his people the bleſſings of ſecure and honourable peace, again repeated without ſucceſs, have again demonſtrated, beyond the poſſibility of doubt the, determined and perſerving hoſtility of the government of France, in whoſe unprovoked aggreſſion the war originated, and by whoſe boundleſs and deſtructive ambition it is ſtill prolonged. And while, by the courſe of theſe tranſactions, continual proofs have been afforded to all his majeſty's faithful ſubjects, of his anxious and unremitting ſolicitude for their welfare, they cannot, at the ſame time, have failed to recognize, in the uniform conduct of the enemy, the ſpirit by which the councils of France are ſtill actuated, and the objects to which they are directed.

His majeſty could not but feel how much the means of peace had been obſtructed by the many additional difficulties which his enemies had ſo repeatedly thrown in the way of negociation. Nevertheleſs, on the very firſt appearances of circumſtances in ſome degree favourable to the intereſts of humanity, the ſame ardent deſire for the eaſe and happineſs of his ſubjects induced his majeſty to renew his overtures for terminating the calamities of war—thus availing himſelf of every opening which could in any manner lead to ſecure an honourable peace, and conſulting equally the wiſhes of his own heart and the principles by which his conduct has invariably been guided.

New objects were immediately interpoſed by thoſe who ſtill directed the councils of France, and who amidſt the general deſire for peace which they could not at that time openly diſclaim, still retained the power of frustrating the wishes of their own country, of counteracting his majesty's benevolent intentions, and of obstructing that result which was so necessary for the happiness of both nations. Difficulties of form were studiously created—modes of negotiation were insisted upon, the most inconsistent with their own conduct in every other instance; the same spirit appearing in every step which was taken by them—and while the most unwarranted insinuations were thrown out, and the most unfounded reproaches brought forward, the established customs and usages, which have long prevailed in Europe, were purposely departed from, even in the simplest acts which were to be done on their part for the renewal of the negociations.—All these things his majesty determined to disregard; not as being insensible of their purport and tendency, nor unmindful of the importance of these points in the public intercourse of great and independent nations, but resolving to defeat the object of these artifices, and to suffer no subordinate or inferior consideration to impede, on his part, the discussion of the weighty and extensive interests on which the termination of the war must necessarily depend.

He directed his minister to repair to France, furnished with the most ample powers, and instructed to communicate at once an explicit and detailed proposal and plan of peace, reduced into the shape of a regular treaty, just and moderate in its principles, embracing all the interests concerned, and extending to every subject connected with the restoration of public tranquility. The communication of this paper, delivered in the very first conference, was accompanied with such explanation as fully stated and detailed the utmost extent of his majesty's views, and at the same time gave ample room for the examination of every disputed point, for mutual arrangement and concession, and for reciprocal facilities arising out of the progress of fair discussion.

To this proceeding, open and liberal beyond example, the conduct of his majesty's enemies opposes the most striking contrast. From them no counter-project has ever yet been obtained, no statement of the extent or nature of the conditions on which they would conclude any peace with these kingdoms. Their pretentions have always been brought forward either as detached or as preliminary points, distinct from the main object of negociation, and accompanied in every instance, with an express reserve of further and unexplained demands.

The points which, in pursuance of this system, the plenipotentiaries of the enemy proposed for separate discussion in their first conferences with his majesty's minister, were at once frivolous and offensive—none of them productive of any solid advantages to France, but all calculated to raise new obstacles in the way of peace. And to these demands were soon added another, in its form unprecedented, and in its substance extravagant, and such as could originate only in the most determined and inveterate hostility.—The principle of mutual compensation, before expressly admitted by a common consent, as the just and equitable basis of negociation, was now disclaimed—every idea of moderation or reason, every appearance of justice, was disregarded and a concession was required from his majesty's plenipotentiary, as a preliminary and indispensable condition of negociation, which must at once have superseded all the objects, and precluded all the means of treating. France, after incorporating with her own dominions so large a portion of her conquests, and effecting to have deprived herself by her own internal regulations, of the power of alienating these valuable additions of territory, did not scruple to demand from his majesty the absolute and unconditional surrender of all that the energy of his people, and the valour of his fleets and armies, have conquered in the present war, either from France, or her allies.

She required that the power of Great-Britain should be confined within its former limits, at the very moment when her own dominion was extended to a degree almost unparalleled in history. She insisted, that in proportion to the increase of danger, the means of resistance should be diminished; and that his majesty should give up, without compensation, and into the hands of his enemies, the necessary defences of his possessions, and the future safeguards of his empire. Nor was even this demand brot forward as constituting the terms of peace but the price of negociation; as the condition on which alone his majesty was to be allowed to learn what further unexplained demands were still reserved, and to what greater sacrifices these unprecedented concessions of honour and safety were to lead.

Whatever were the impressions which such a proceeding created, they did not induce the king abruptly to preclude the means of negociation. In rejecting without a moment's hesitation, a demand, which could have been made for no other reason than because it was inadmissible, his majesty, from the fixed resolution to avail himself of every chance of bringing the negociation to a favorable issue, directed that an opening should still be left for treating on honorable and equal grounds, such as might become the dignity of his crown and the rank and station in Europe in which it has pleased the Divine Providence to place the British nation.

This temperate and conciliatory conduct was strongly expressive of the benevolence of his majesty's intentions; and it appeared for some time to have prepared the way for that result which has been the uniform object of all his measures. Two months elapsed ere his majesty had unequivocally and definitively refused to comply with the unreasonable and extravagant preliminary which had been demanded by his enemies. During all that time the negociation was continued open, the conferences were regularly held, and the demand thus explicitly rejected by one party was never once renewed by the other. It was not only abandoned; it was disclaimed; assurances were given in direct contradiction to it.—Promises were continually repeated, that his majesty's explicit and detailed proposals should at length be answered by that which could alone evince a real disposition to negociate with sincerity, by the delivery of a counter-project of a nature tending to facilitate the conclusion of peace; and the long delays of the French government in executing these promises were excused and accounted for by an unequivocal declaration, that France was concerting with her allies for those sacrifices on their part, which might afford the means of proceeding in the negociation. Week after week passed over in the repetition of these solemn engagements on the part of his majesty's enemies. His desire for peace induced him to wait for their completion, with an anxiety proportioned to the importance of the object; nor was it much to expect, that his minister should at length be informed what was the extent and nature of the conditions on which his enemies were disposed to terminate the war.

It was in this stage of the business, that, on the 11th of September, the appointment of new plenipotentiaries was announced on the part of France, under a formal promise that their arrival should facilitate and expedite the work of peace.

To renew, in a shape still more offensive than before, the inadmissible demand so long before brought forward, and so long abandoned, was the first act of these messengers of peace.—And such was now the undisguised impatience of the king's enemies to terminate all treaty, and to exclude all prospect of accommodation, that even the continuance of the king's plenipotentiary at the appointed place of negociation, was made by them to depend on his immediate compliance with a condition which his court had two months before explicitly refused, and concerning which no farther discussion had since occurred. His reply was such as the occasion required; and he immediately received a positive and written order to depart from France.

The subsequent conduct of his majesty's enemies has aggravated even this proceeding, and added fresh insult to this unexampled outrage. The insurmountable obstacles which they threw in the way of peace were accompanied with an ostentatious profession of the most pacific dispositions. In cutting off the means of negociation, they still pretend to retain the strongest desire to negotiate: in ordering the king's minister to quit their country they professed the hope of his immediate return to it; & in rewing their former inadmissible and rejected demands, they declared their confident expectation of a speedy and favorable answer. Yet before any answer could arrive, they published a declaration, announcing to their country the departure of the king's minister, and attempting, as in every former instance, to ascribe to the conduct of Great-Britain the disappointment of the general wish for peace, and the renewal of all the calamities of war. The same attempt has been prolonged in subsequent communications, equally insidious and illusory, by which they have obviously intended to furnish the colour and empty pretence of a wish for peace, while they have studiously and obstinately persisted in evading every step which could lead to the success of any negociation, have continued to insist on the same inadmissible and extravagant preliminary, and have uniformly withheld all explanation, either on the particulars of the proposals of peace so long since delivered by his majesty's minister, or any other terms on which they were themselves ready to conclude: and this in the vain hope, that it could be possible by any artifice to disguise the truth of these transactions, or that any exercise of power, however despotic, could prevent such facts from being known, felt, and understood, even in France itself.

To France, to Europe, and the world, it must be manifest, that the French government (while they persist in their present sentiments) leave his majesty without any alternative, unless he were prepared to surrender and sacrifice to the undisguised ambition of his enemies, the honor of his crown, and the safety of his dominions. It must be manifest, that, instead of showing on their part, any inclination to meet his majesty's pacific overtures on any moderate terms, they never brought themselves to state any terms (however exorbitant) on which they were ready to conclude peace. They have asked as a preliminary (and in the form the most arrogant and offensive) concessions which the comparative situation of the two countries would have rendered extravagant in any stage of negociation; which were directly contrary to their own repeated professions; and which nevertheless, they peremptorily required to be complied with in the very outset; reserving an unlimitted power of afterwards accumulating from time to time, fresh demands, increasing in proportion to every new concession.

On the other hand, the terms proposed by his majesty have been stated in the most clear, open and unequivocal manner. The discussion of all the points to which they relate, or of any others which the enemy might bring forwards as the terms of peace, has been, on his majesty's part, repeatedly called for, as often promised by the French plenipotentiaries, but to this day has never yet been obtained. The rupture of the negociation is not therefore to be ascribed to any pretentions (however inadmissible) urged as the price of peace; nor to any ultimate difference on terms, however exorbitant; but to the evident and fixed determination of the enemy to prolong the contest, and to pursue, at all hazards their hostile designs against the prosperity and safety of these kingdoms.

While this determination continues to prevail, his majesty's earnest wishes and endeavors to restore peace to his subjects, must be fruitless. But his sentiments remain unaltered. He looks with anxious expectation to the moment when the government of France may show a disposition and spirit in any degree corresponding to his own. And he renews, even now, and before all Europe, the solemn declaration, that, in spite of repeated provocation, and at the very moment when his claims have been strengthened and confirmed by that fresh success, which by the blessings of Providence has recently attended his arms, he is yet ready (if the calamities of war can be now closed) to conclude peace on the same moderate and equitable principles and terms which he has before proposed: the rejection of such terms must now, more than ever, demonstrate the implacable animosity and insatiable ambition of those with whom he has to contend, and to them alone must the future consequences of the prolongation of the war be ascribed.

If such unhappily is the spirit by which they are still actuated, his majesty can neither hesitate as to the principles of his own conduct, nor doubt the sentiments and determination of his people. He will not be wanting to them, and he is confident they will not be wanting to themselves. He has an anxious, but a sacred and indispensible duty to fulfil: he will discharge it with resolution, constancy and firmness. Deeply as he must regret the continuance of the war, so destructive in its progress, and so burthensome even in its success, he knows the character of the brave people whose interest and honour are entrusted to him. These it is the first object of his life to maintain; and he is convinced, that neither the resources nor the spirit of his kingdoms will be found inadequate to this arduous contest, or unequal to the importance & value of the objects which are at stake. He trusts, that the favor of providence by which they have always hitherto been supported against all their enemies, will be still extended to them; and that under this protection, his faithful subjects, by a resolute and vigorous application of the means which they possess, will be enabled to vindicate the independence of their country, and glory of their ancestors, and to resist with just indignation the assumed superiority of an enemy, against whom they have fought with courage and success, and who aims at nothing less than to destroy at once whatever has contributed to the prosperity and greatness of the British empire; all the channels of its industry, and all the sources of its power; its security from abroad, its tranquility at home, and above all, that constitution, on which alone depends the undisturbed enjoyment of its religion, laws, and liberties.

FROM AN ENGLISH PAPER OF OCT. 17.

The Endemial Diſeaſes of Europe.

Diſcovered by feeling the pulſe of the Times.

FRANCE.

In a Phrenzy Fever, which it is apprehended will require more bleeding and purging than ever; notwithſtanding ſhe has undergone thoſe operations already, in a violent degree.

SPAIN.

Laboring under a moſt oppreſſive fit of indigeſtion; from having been compelled to ſwallow an olive branch, which ſticks in her ſtomach, ſo that ſhe can neither get it up nor down.

PORTUGAL.

Afflicted in a ſimilar manner, with ſtrong ſymptoms of a Surfeit before, and no phyſician to adviſe with but an old woman, who is ſubject to fits of Non Compos, of which there cannot be a greater proof than her ſtiling herſelf moſt faithful, while ſhe makes no ſcruple to break with her very beſt friends.

GERMANY.

A little touched in the wind with hard puſhing, which the French faculty pronounce to be an Aſthma, & that another bruſh with Buonaparte, will entirely knock her up: be that as it may—the race is not to the ſwift—and whether ſhe gives in for want of ſtrength, ſhe and her rider have proved herſelf bottom.

MEDLEY.

In a galloping conſumption, occaſioned by ſhe wearing the breeches in ſo ſtrong a degree as uſual; being obliged to ſupply the loſs Cabloſtes, by which poor Mynheer has got the pip, and it has flown from his poſſeſſion to the noble parts. This diſorder gains ground daily, and the patient who was remarkable for being fat not long, is now reduced to a mere ſhadow. The true courſe of medicine adminiſtered by admiral Duncan, has been found too powerful, the bolufſes have ſeemed to grate in operation, that it will prove a death ſtroke.

SWITZERLAND.

In a fit of the heart-burn, given ſome four the greateſt which were lately ſerved up to her moſt, to the pride and glory of every country but a little gall of wormwood, has done much towards neutralizing the acid—and the paroxism is not likely to be of any long duration.

SARDINIA,

Sadly troubled with ruptures, which it is said, arose from a violent strain, in wrestling with a French raw lad and his dry bones, who only escaped into Piedmont, crying out fee, faw, fum, and like Cæsar with his veni vidi vici, bore down every thing before him.

NAPLES,

Full of morbid humours, which are increasing at an alarming degree, and it is feared that something less than a political plague will shortly be the consequence of those pestilential symptoms.

TURKEY,

Quite paralytic; from the Divan having been gorged with an undue quantity of opium pill'd, gilded with the aurum Gallicanum;—whereas for some time past they had been subject to political qualms, they were advised by some quacks to swallow, as neutral; being told that nothing tended more effectively to allay fermentation. The diagnostics are highly unfavorable, and unless the patient shakes off the disease in a very short time, he must inevitably sink under it.

VENICE,

Rotting, inch by inch, from an infection communicated by French morsels, commonly called the fraternal hug. The disease gains ground apace, and nothing but a political salivation can save the whole state from falling in to one universal mass of corruption.

PRUSSIA,

Still far world o'f than the spouse of the Adriatic, being at once most grievously smitten, both with the scurvy, and the King's Evil: the former disease having pervaded the whole Prussian army, of which many scurvy proofs are extant, and for which they will cut a most scurvy figure in the eyes of all Europe. Ahd, as for the latter, there never was known a nation, under Heaven, in which the king's evil has proved a scourge so universally on a King, who outwardly and inwardly has so manifested evil in the vilest sense of the word. In short, every thing here is in a state incurable, & may Heaven in mercy to mankind right suddenly remove the evil cause, that those evil effects may shortly be no more.

THE POPE,

Struggling most piteously against the falling sickness, but all to vain. We will not be so rude as to say the woes of Babylon, but the poor old lady, call her by what name you please, is literally upon her last legs, and the staggering blows she has lately had from her own unnatural sons, will, certainly, lay her as flat as a flounder: And then farewel to future bulls, indulgencies, dispensations, benedictions, anathemas, and the holy commodities of the holy see, when the holy sons of the church shall exclaim with holy sorrow, that the title of his holiness is gone forever!

RUSSIA,

In a lethargy—Often dreaming of doing what, waking, was never thought on. Deaf in effect to the call, of humanity, and unfeelingly dead to the groans of mankind! Around supine, unanimated PAUL. Not become like Frederick, the object of detestation. "Shake off this fell sleep, death's counterfeit, and look on death itself." See the carnage which Frenchmen have spread over Europe; spurn this inglorious famouleucy, awake in time to redeem thy dying fame, and do the duty of a man to empire born.

DENMARK AND SWEDEN,

Both seized with the cramp; and rendered incapable of stirring hand or foot. Poor crippled objects, how contemptible in the eyes of the active and the brave. War to them even in the best of causes, was gall and vinegar; a neutralising drought went down quite sweet, and they drank it off to the very dregs. How little did they think when imbibing the potion, that, like Sir Fervor Connor' wile beverage, it would degrade the drinkers to a rank inferior to the pigmies. Yet BIG MOUNTAINS PRODUCE RIDICULOUS MICE. And the metamorphoses of those degenerate Hyperboreans affords food for laughter to the TRUE born SONS of

OLD ENGLAND,

Who, while combating a chronical flux, and a sweating sickness, by which she has been dwindled to a lifeless likeness of her former self, yet still preserves her stamina, sound, firm and uncorroded: and by virtue of a constitution, which neither the power of France can overturn, nor the politics of France undermine, holds her head up secure of her recovery, while still ling hope anticipates the hour, when in her valetudinarian state she shall restore the healing balm of peace to a distempered and distracted world.

LONDON, November 6.

The threats and fulminations of the French directory of an invasion of England, are considered as mere gasconade. The funds are not in the least affected by them; and so much does government place reliance on the wooden walls of Old England, that many corps of the militia have been ordered to be disbanded.

Several of the line of battle ships are to be put out of commission.

Goverment has published the entire correspondence between lord Malmesbury and the French commissioners at Lisle. It contains 53 communications, and demonstrates to the world the sincerity of our court to negociate a peace: and the inveterate disposition of the ruling government of France, to carry on the war.—By this correspondence it appears, that Great-Britain proposed to give up all the possessions she had acquired by the war except the island of Trinidad, the Cape of Good Hope and the island of Ceylon in the East-Indies.—France, on the other hand, contended, that all the conquests made by Great Britain, should be relinquished: and further, that the king of Great-Britain should renounce the title of king of France;—that he should make restitution for the vessels taken or destroyed at Toulon, and relinquish the mortgage on Belgium!

On demands such as the above it is useless to comment.—There is not a Briton who would not sacrifice his life and property before he would consent to such humiliating terms.

Nov. 9. Stocks have been very steady for the last few days; a proof that the people, though alive to a due sense of their national honour, and ready at all times to come forward in defence of their independence and safety, are not to be alarmed by the insolent threats of an arrogant foe.

HOUSE OF LORDS, Nov. 8.

Lord Dorchester took his seat. The vote of thanks was communicated to him by the lord Chancellor; and the admiral made a short reply.

Lord Grenville, after a few spirited observations, moved an address to his majesty, which in substance was,

"That the house allowed his majesty, that they had taken the papers which he has ordered to be laid before them into the most serious consideration, and by so doing, they were convinced of the insidious designs of our inveterate enemy, who evidently appeared to aim at the destruction of the laws, liberties, and constitution of this country; but, trusting to that divine Providence by which he had hitherto been protected, they doubted not but he would be enabled to defeat their designs; they were aware that the exertions would require great energy, yet they pledged themselves to his majesty that they would support his throne, and stand or fall with our religion, and the laws and liberties of our happy constitution."

VENICE, October 17.

The people here are greatly divided in their opinions. The news of the cession of considerable part of the Venetian territory to Austria, has thrown all the friends of democracy into despair, as they thought to make their fortune, and never suspected the negociation would have had such an issue.—The principal part of the Venetians, however, are pleased that they are to be under the dominion of Austria. It is hoped that this change will take place without disturbance. To preserve tranquility in case of any tumult, 6000 French troops have arrived here. The difficulty of finding any compensation for the Austrian territory in Italy, except the Venetian states, has decided our fate.

FRONTIERS OF ITALY, Oct. 27.

The French army is now drawing off from the Austrian Italian frontiers, and marching in different columns into the Milanese. In several places and districts which have been left by the French and taken possession of by the Cisalpine troops, the former have levied all the arrears of the contributions imposed new ones. At Brescia they required 2,000,000 of livres, of which count Veneroli paid 70,000. They have likewise required 2,000,000 of Mantua.

PARIS.

Council of five hundred, October 29.

Some citizens of the commune of Lyons write to the council—"The counter-revolutionary genius of Camille Jordan, escaped from transportation, still hovers about us. His seditious proclamation of the 25th and 26th Fructidor, fixed up in Lyons, has become for the companions of Jesus a signal of revolt. Recovered from the terror which the the day of the 18th Fructidor has caused them, they meditate again new projects of carnage against the republicans."—Some to the directory.

NEW-YORK, January 22.

Extract of a late letter from London.

"For public news, I refer you to the public papers. I cannot form any judgment, whether the late fortunate victory obtained by admiral Duncan over the Dutch fleet, will or will not accelerate a peace—I fear not. It has however, removed to a much greater distance our apprehensions of an invasion; and has, I think, placed the security of our commerce on a better footing. The specie too, of which this country was well nigh drained, has returned, and the commerce of the world is in some degree centered here; so that at no period since the commencement of the war, has England been so well prepared to continue it, as at the present moment.

"Mr. Pitt can raise money now without difficulty; as much, and more than he has occasion for. If the people of this country would be unanimous, this unhappy and distressing war may yet be made to terminate honorably for this country. Not any thing is doing here in American stocks. The nominal value of bank shares, £ 106—six per cent. 79—three per cent. 49—deferred, 65 per cent.—no sales."

WEST-NIAGARA, February 24.

We hear that lieutenant governor Simcoe is appointed governor general of the Canadas, and lieutenant R. Pilkington promoted to a captain in the regiment of Royal Engineers.

We have the pleasure of declaring the account received in December last, of the death of col. Littlehales premature.—Letters have recently been received from him, dated in England.

A London paper of Nov. 17, says, insurance to America is this moment at twelve guineas per £. 100.

Accounts are received, via Batavia, of a late date, that the British have extended their conquests in India, to the Dutch island of Ternate, the most northerly of the Moluccas, formerly celebrated for their clove trees, but which the Dutch, in the reign of K. James I. transplanted principally to the famous island of Amboyna, where their enormities convinced the world that Hollanders could be cruel.

Extract of a letter from Albany, dated the 13th ult. to a gentleman in this town.

"The following is a paragraph in a letter from a young gentleman in the state of Rhode Island, to his father in this city, and received by the last mail;

"Two inward bound American vessels were chased into the harbor at Newport, nearly up to the town, which is five miles from the mouth of the harbor, and there captured by a French privateer. The wind being light, after making the best of their way, they were obliged to come to anchor off the light house. The inhabitants feeling themselves much injured, a number of them stepped on board a brig lying at the wharf, and armed her, and another company went on board a sloop, equipped with small arms, &c. and towed the brig down along side the privateer; after an exchange of a few broad sides, and a brisk fire from the boats into the cabin windows, attended with considerable loss of lives on both sides, the privateer surrendered with her two prizes, and was with them safely moored in the harbor."

An arrival at Norfolk brings Paris accounts to Nov. 12, & London to Nov. 20:—that the directory demand of the American plenipotentiaries satisfaction for the outrage offered to the French government in the speech of the president in May last, and the re-establishment of the position in which the United States stood in 1778, is asserted in a Paris paper of Nov. 10.

By our latest London account Nov. 20) Spain matches troops to prevent the French crossing her territory to invade Portugal—changes her ministry, by which the prince of Peace is dismissed, and slackens her warlike preparations. By a London article of an earlier date, the proposes to England a separate treaty, and at the same time Prussia collects a large army to be subsidized by England!

Extract of a letter from mr. Fenwick, American consul at Bourdeaux, to his correspondent at Charleston, (S. C.) dated November 9.

"In consequence of the hostile appearances with America, the bearer of this has changed his destination, & tells me he will touch at Charleston. I do not think for my own part that there will be a rupture with the U. States, yet the negociation at Paris is likely to be without success and it is said our commissioners are preparing to depart.—There is no change in the conduct towards our commerce."

It is currently reported and believed (says a Philadelphia paper of January 29) that there is a letter in town from Mr. Vans Murray, our resident minister at the Hague, informing he had received a letter from Mr. Marshal, one of our commissioners to the executive directory of France, who had ordered Mr. Murray to do some little business for him, as he expects the commissioners will have to return home shortly without effecting the object of their mission.—We could not learn by what vessel this letter had reached here, nor the date of Mr. Murray's letter, much less that of Mr. Marshal to Mr. Murray; but we have no doubt of the existence of such a letter, as we have been assured of the fact by a gentleman of veracity.

On the proposed invasion of England, an English paper of Nov. 6, remarks as follows:

A paper of opposition observed yesterday, that the project of the Directory for the invasion of this country was extremely likely to meet with success, as the numerous armies which had conquered all the continental powers, might now be employed against Great-Britain.

On this subject we shall only remark, that previous to the termination of the congress at Rastadt, which, from the variety of momentous objects to be settled there, may perhaps rekindle the flames of continental war, and make rage with increased fury, the directory cannot withdraw the republican armies. It would be highly imprudent to weaken the army of Italy before the Cis-Alpine republic is completely organized, and it is from this army that the troops must be drawn which are to form the garisons of the islands which the French have acquired in the Ionian sea, and their new establishments in Albania. Their final projects against such states of Italy as they have not yet subdued, calls rather for an augmentation of their force in that country, than for a diminution.

As to the army of Germany, it is scarce strong enough to complete the directory's plan of invasion against Hanover, Hainburg, &c. and to garrison the new conquests of Belgium. Besides, the comparative condition of our navy, and of that of the enemy, renders the projected invasion a mere farce. The directory may succeed in vomiting a few more of their galley slaves on some defenceless part of our coast, but we have no fear from any formidable preparation they may make.

MARRIED,—In this town, by the reverend Mr. Burk, Capt. MILES M'DONELL, of the R. C. V. to the amiable miss KATY M'DONELL.

EAST INDIES.

From the Asiatic Mirror, Jan. 25. 1797.

Zemaun Shah made his triumphal entry into Lahore, the capital of the Seicks, on the 5th inſtant. He was preparing for his march to Delhi, with an army at leaſt of 100,000 men, accompanied by a Frenchman, late ambaſſador from Conſtantinople.

FUTTY GHUR, Jan. 28.

Zemaun ſhah had formed his army into ſeven diviſions, endeavoring, by different roads, to ſurprize the rear of the Seicks; but, proving unſucceſsful, had again united his forces. A moſt deſperate battle was fought at U-roomber. It commenced at about 8 in the morning, when the ſhah opened his ſhutar zenauls, or wall pieces, mounted on camels, againſt the Seicks, and both parties kept up a heavy fire with matchlocks till 2 o'clock. About this time the Seicks finding they had made no impreſſion on the enemy, gave the ſignal for a general charge; and agreeable to their mode in cloſe combat, flung away their turbans, let looſe their hair, put their beards in their mouths, and daſhed into the midſt of the Abdallah army ſword in hand. The two armies continued thus engaged for 4 hours, when Zemaun's troops gave way, and were purſued to the very entrance of Lahore. Thirty five thouſand men were killed, 20,000 on the part of the ſhah, and 15 thouſand of the Seicks.

PHILADELPHIA, January 27.

Handed for publication by Capt. Williams of ſloop Abby, of this port, lately carried into Guadaloupe and condemned.

The day before capt. Williams ſailed from Baſſaterre, a boat arrived there with ſome Frenchmen, who informed that they belonged to a privateer, which a few days before had captured a brig belonging to Portland. Four of the men belonging to the brig were taken on board the privateer. A few days after the American capt. with the aſſiſtance of ſome of his crew, retook his veſſel after a ſevere conteſt, in which ſeveral of the privateerſmen were compelled to jump overboard. He then hoiſted out his boat, ordered the remaining Frenchmen on board, ſupplied them with bread and water, and ſent them adrift. Shortly after their arrival at Baſſaterre, the privateer to which they belonged, arrived there with the four men above mentioned. The capt. finding that his prize had eſcaped, beat them in the moſt cruel and unmerciful manner, and had them impriſoned immediately, where they remained when capt. Williams left Baſſaterre.

NEW-YORK, January 24.

A very extraordinary application has been recently made to the court of directors of the Britiſh Eaſt India company, for leave to ſend out one hundred and thirty miſſionaries to India, by the ſhips of the next ſeaſon, for the converſion of the Gentoo. The application was made through a clergyman of the diſſenting intereſt, whoſe fortune is ſaid to amount to 100,000l. ſterling, and the company was to be free of any expence.

January 30.

Extract of letter from Norfolk, to a mercantile houſe in Philadelphia, dated Jan. 15.

"Yeſterday a ſhip from Nantz arrived here, which brings French papers as late as 7th Nov. at which time the American commiſſioners had not been received by the French government, nor any proſpect of its taking place.

"This veſſel belongs to Boſton, loaded here laſt year for Nantz, but was taken and there condemned. The capt. purchaſed her and has bro't home ſeveral American captains, who have been lately taken by the French.

"The capt. of this veſſel informs that he ſaw a letter from Mr. Skipwith, our conful at Paris, to the conful at Nantz, received the day before he failed, defiring the latter to inform the American captainsto puſh off as quick as poſſible, as an embargo was expected ſhortly to take place ; that uncommon exertions were making in fitting out a great additional number of privateers, and that every thing bore the appearance of hoſtility on the part of France againſt this country."

FROM GUADALOUPE, Dec. 20.

By an arrival at New London.

" Victor Hughes has ordered by a late arret, the condemnation of all American veſſels taken more than two leagues to the ſouthward of Deſenda, without reſpect to deſtination.

" The Americans are treated with great indignity at Guadaloupe, even the negroes inſult them in the ſtreets."

CHARLESTON, (S.C.) Dec. 20.

Arrived the 18th of Sept. laſt the brig Amſterdam, Capt. Scott, from Amſterdam. About fortnight before her arrival, ſhe ſuddenly ſprung a leak, which was ſo alarming that capt. Scott tho't it neceſſary to keep his boat in readineſs to leave her, ſhould it increaſe, fortunately ſhe got in ſafe. After her cargo was diſcharged, ſhe was ſent to Hobcaw to have the leak ſearched for ; in the firſt ſide that was hove out, every plank was found to be ſound and in excellent condition: but, on examining the other ſide, it was diſcovered, that inſtead of a defect in the veſſel, the leak was owing to a ſtroke ſhe had received from a fiſh, armed with a horn ; 14 and a half inches long, was left in the third plank from the keel ; after penetrating the plank, it paſſed between two timbers which were very cloſe to each other, where it remained like a wedge. The horn is of an oval ſhape ; its largeſt diameter is upwards of two inches ; it is ſolid, and has the appearance of coarſe ivory. It is now in the poſſeſſion of Florian Charles Mey, Eſq. the owner of the brig.

Jan. 4. A letter dated Cape Nichola Mole, Dec. 8, from capt. Hunter, of the ſhip Pallas, which was captured off our bar, on the 18th of Oct. laſt, by a French privateer, informs his owners in this city, that after the capture, the French crew which was put on board of his ſhip, carried her into Port-a Plata, in St. Domingo ; on her arrival there, the Spaniſh government refuſed to condemn her ; they then got her under weigh, and left the port ; on the 22d of Nov. ſhe was chaſed into Monti Chriſto, by the Thames frigate, which on the evening of that day ſent her boats and cut her out ; ſhe was then carried to the Mole.

A fort and three privateers firing on the ſhip while they were cutting her out of an enemy's port, precluded all claim from the owners. All the letters & papers capt. Hunter had on board were taken by the prize-maſter and his crew, who left the ſhip in a boat before the frigate got poſſeſſion of her.

FALMOUTH, January 3.

Friday arrived the ſchr. Friendſhip, Seleck, from New-York, laſt from Port-au-Paix, into which place ſhe was carried by a French privateer of one gun and twenty men, who plundered her of the greater part of her cargo, conſiſting of proviſions and lumber, and condemned the veſſel ; the captain, however, went immediately to Cape-Francois by land and ſtated his cauſe to the black commandant Touiſſaint, who received him very politely, and gave him orders for the reſtoration of his veſſel. She was originally conſigned to John Cunningham, eſq. of Montego Bay. The captain informs, that a number of American veſſels, which had been condemned with their cargoes, by the robber Santhonax, had been ſet at liberty by gen. Touiſſaint, whoſe regard for juſtice and humanity had rendered him popular, and obtained him many friends.

PROVIDENCE, (R.I) Jan. 6.

Mr. William Magee, who arrived from Canton in the ſhip Grand Turk came to town ſince our laſt.

He informs, that, homeward bound, in the ſtraits of Banca, they ſpoke the ſhip Eliza, of this port late commander capt. William Page.—captain Carr (the commander) informed him that on the 17th of April laſt, in the ſtraits of Java, they diſcovered a prow with Malays on board—ſuppoſing her a trading veſſel, the captain diſpatched a boat to her, on which the came along ſide. The linguiſt aſked if they were traders—they anſwered in the affirmative—upon which he, with the captain, Thomas Page, and another ſeaman, went on board.

Capt. Page obſerving ſome weapons, requeſted the Malay chief to give him one, which he did ; on ſeeing others of a more curious workmanſhip, he aſked for one of them, on his ſtooping to examine them a Malay thruſt a knife into his body.—Captain P. on his receiving the wound, ſprang for his own veſſel, but he fell between her and the prow into the water—the mate with conſiderable exertion, got him in at the cabin window—he lived about forty minutes—On the captain's being wounded, the action became general. Thomas Page and the linguiſt were killed, on board the prow the Malay chief and 10 of his crew killed, and in about half an hour they were beat off.

LONDON, Nov. 10.

Mr. Pitt has given notice of his intention of propoſing in the committee of ways and means, on Monday the 26th inſt. the mode of raiſing the ſupplies for the enſuing year. We have taken ſome pains to learn what the plan is to be offered to the public, and we believe our readers may rely upon what we are enabled to ſtate to them upon the ſubject.

It will readily be admitted, that while the 3 per cents are at 49, to make a large loan in the common mode would be attended with the moſt diſadvantageous circumſtances to the country ; it could hardly be ſuppoſed likely to be made on better terms than valuing the three per cents at 46, and if it were made in any other ſtock, the diſadvantages would be at leaſt equally great to the public. It ſeems adviſable, therefore, to have recourſe to ſome new mode of raiſing the ſums neceſſary to defray the current ſervices, which, however, from reductions in our navy and army eſtabliſhments, will be conſiderably leſs than laſt year. The meaſure to be propoſed, we underſtand to be as follows.

The duties on houſes, horſes, carriages, ſervants, watches and dogs, uſually known by the denomination of the aſſeſſed taxes, are to be trebled. This will produce a ſum of above 7,000,000 allowing for deductions, which will ariſe from exceptions which it is ſuppoſed will be made. This levy will, of courſe, be paid by inſtalments, which will render the payment of it as eaſy as poſſible to individuals. The tax is to continue near three years ; the conſequence of which will be, that it will enable the miniſter to pay off within the period the tax is to be levied, whatever loan he may find it neceſſary to make in addition to the ſum of 7,000,000 to be raiſed.

The effect of this exertion will be, that the money to be borrowed being to be paid in ſo ſhort a time, will be procured upon good terms for the public ; and the price of the funds will not depreciate by an addition to the preſent capital.

Other taxes, to the amount of about 1,000,000l. or 2,000,000l. are alſo to be laid, to make good any that may be laſt year now, or that hereafter may become unneceſſary.

This we believe to be the outline of the plan. It muſt be obſerved, that the poorer claſs of ſociety will be totally exempted from the paying of the duty, they not being liable to any of the aſſeſſed taxes. It is true, that it will fall heavy upon all thoſe who are to pay it, but it falls very much in proportion to the means of contributing towards it ; and theſe are times when exertion is become neceſſary : we have no alternative, but to give up a part of what we poſſeſs, or ſacrifice all to the will of an unjuſt and implacable enemy.

This plan avoids what we confeſs we ſhould have ſeen at the preſent moment with great regret, the having recourſe to the uſual modes of loan, and providing only for the intereſt of the ſum borrowed—and it, as we fear, it is impoſſible to obtain a certain portion of the incomes of individuals, from the difficulty, we might ſay the impracticability, of aſcertaining, without the moſt objectionable procedure, the amount of ſuch incomes. It ſeems to us, that the beſt attainable criterion of wealth is expenditure, which is perhaps better aſcertained by the amount of what individuals pay in aſſeſſed taxes, than in any mode. The principle we think fair ; and feeling, as we do moſt ſincerely, more than ever, the neceſſity of heavy burthens, we cannot help ſaying, that the outline of the plan appears to us as little objectionable as any that could be deviſed conſiſtently with the object of procuring the means of reſiſting the extravagant demand, and exorbitant ambition of our enemy, and of preſerving the ſafety and independence of the kingdom.

GREENWICH, Oct. 30.

This morning, at 9 o'clock, agreeably to appointment, his majeſty, in his poſtchaiſe and four, attended by generals Lafcelles and Garth, with earl Spencer, lord Hugh Seymour, admiral Gambier, and Mr. Marſden, of the board of admiralty, and the comptroller of the navy, &c. arrived from Windſor at the government houſe of this hoſpital, previous to his embarkation on board the Royal Charlotte, which, with the Auguſta and Mary yachts, were moored off the hoſpital for their reception. On his Majeſty's entrance at the weſt gate, the officers ranged the college in two lines, ſo that the royal carriage might paſs between them ; and altho' we did not look for martial-like appearance in the maimed and worn out Britiſh ſeamen, ſtill the uniformity and cleanlineſs of their dreſs, and the becoming decency of their whole department, was ſuch as to be highly gratifying to all the ſpectators. After having been politely and hoſpitably entertained by lord and lady Hood with an elegant breakfaſt (of which the princeſs of Wales, who arrived a little before the king, partook) the ſide ſerving a few minutes after when his majeſty proceeded on foot to the north gate, which was lined by the Weſt London regiment of militia, and an immenſerable concourſe of ſpectators, who received him with every demonſtration of heart-felt joy. He there embarked on board the Royal Barge, which, with the ſtandard flying, was fleered by capt. Trollop. No ſooner had it put off, than a general diſcharge of cannon from the three yachts, gun-boats and cutters, and many private veſſels, ſaluted the ſtandard, and repeated huzzas accompanied him to the yacht. On his majeſty's going on board, he was received by the lords of the admiralty, and the royal ſtandard was immediately diſplayed at the main, the lord high admiral's flag at the fore, and, the union-jack at the mizen top-gallant-maſt head of the Royal Charlotte ; and the Auguſta yacht, appropriated for the lords of the admiralty, hoiſted the lord high admiral's flag ; the Mary had capt. Phillips' pendant only. The wind blowing ſtrong againſt them at E. N. E. they found it neceſſary to warp the Royal Charlotte down the river to a conſiderable diſtance, before they could venture to caſt her looſe. The proceſſion was thus arranged :

A King's cutter.

(An armed brig.) The Royal Charlotte. (An armed brig.)

The Princeſs Auguſta..

The Mary.

The captains commanding the yacht were, capt. Trollop, of the Royal Charlotte ; Roin, of the Princeſs Auguſta ; Phillips of the Mary.

His majeſty did not reach Blackwell, owing to contrary winds, until half paſt twelve, where he was again ſaluted by a number of cannon, and the wind being two points to the northward of eaſt, the royal yacht lay down the Reach without making a ſingle tack, and was off Woolwich about half paſt one, where ſimilar honors were paid to his majeſty, and a very general and long cannonade took place. His majeſty never looked better, or appeared in better ſpirits. A profuſion of ſtrong beer was ordered for the penſioners at this place on the occaſion.

WEST-NIAGARA, March 3.

His majeſty is ſaid to have dined with the ſtadtholder the very day on which the intelligence of the defeat of the Dutch fleet arrived. After dinner, his ſerene highneſs, with much gravity, gave the following toaſt :—" Succeſs to your majeſty's navy, and thanks to admiral Duncan for the care which he has taken of my ſhips !

A bill is before the legiſlature of New-York, for opening a lock navigation between lakes Ontario and Erie, by the Niagara falls.

Hartford, (Con.) Jan. 18.

Capt. Horace Church, of this place, in the brig Hope, arrived at New-port, on Saturday laſt, in 28 days from Port-Liberty, formerly called Point Peter, in Guadaloupe, having been taken on his outward bound paſſage and carried into that place, where he was condemned without having a hearing, being himſelf confined on board a priſon ſhip at the time of his trial.

Church had every neceſſary paper, Roll d'equippage, &c. No paper avails any thing with the lawleſs banditti of Guadaloupe.

Twelve American veſſels were condemned on the day that captain Church's veſſel was five of the number belonged to this ſtate.

PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS by a proclamation issued under, and by virtue of, an act of the parliament of this province, passed in the thirty-seventh year of his Majesty's reign, entitled An act for making temporary provision for the regulation of trade between this province and the United States of America, by land or inland navigation, it was ordered, that the operation of certain ordinances in the said proclamation specified, should be suspended: And whereas it has been found expedient that the provisions of the said ordinances, except as herein after excepted, should be continued until some further and other arrangements relative to the commercial intercourse between the United States of America and this province can be adjusted:—NOW THEREFORE KNOW YE, that I have thought fit by and with the advice of the executive council to revoke and annul, and do hereby revoke and annul the said proclamation, bearing date the twentieth day of September last; except as herein after mentioned; and I do also by and with the advice and consent of his Majesty's executive council, hereby further order and declare that so much only of the ordinance passed in the twentieth year of his Majesty's reign, as relates to the REGISTER, shall be, and is hereby suspended.

GIVEN under my hand seal at arms, this sixteenth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-seven, and in the thirty-eighth year of his Majesty's reign, at York, in the province of Upper Canada.

EDUCATION.

Instructions from a Parent to the Tutor of his Son. A SCRAP.

"I VALUE the instilling of a single principle of goodness or honour into the mind of my dear child, beyond all the wealth that the Indias can remit.

"I would not have you, through any zeal or attachment to me, think of pushing my boy into learning of the languages, beyond his own pleasure: neither would I have you oppress or perplex his infant mind with the deep or mysterious parts of our holy religion.

"First, be it your care to instruct him in morality; and let the law precedes the gospel,—for such was the education which God appointed for the world. Give him, by familiar and historical instances, an early impression of the shortness of human life, and of the nature of the world in which he is placed. Let him learn, from this day forward, to distinguish between natural and imaginary wants; and that nothing is estimable, or ought to be desirable, but so far as it is necessary or useful to man. Instruct my darling, daily and hourly, if possible, in a preference of manners and things which bear an intrinsic value, to those which receive their value and currency from the arbitrary and fickle stamp of fashion. Shew him, also, that the same toils and sufferings, the same poverty and pain, from which people now fly as from a plague, were once the desire of heroes and the fashion of nations; and that thousands of patriots, of captains, and philosophers, thro' a love of glory, of applause during life, or distinction after death, have rejected wealth and pleasure, embraced want and hardship, and suffered more from a voluntary mortification and self-denial, than our church seems to require, in these days, for the conquest of a sensual world into which we are fallen, and for entitling us to a crown in the kingdom of eternity."

STATE PAPER.

The following are the most material features of the project delivered by lord Malmsbury to the French plenipotentiaries on the 8th of July, '97. Taken from the documents laid before parliament.

Art. 1. Is the usual stipulation for a perpetual peace.

2. States that the treaties of Nimeguen of 1678 and '98; of Ryswick of 1697, and Utrecht of 1713; that of Baden of 1714; that of the Triple alliance of the Hague of London of 1718; the treaty of peace of Vienna of 1736; that of Aix la Chapelle of 1754; the definitive treaty of Paris of 1763, and that of Versailles of '83 serve as a basis to the present treaty; and are to be observed as not derogated from by the present treaty.

3. Relates to the restoration of prisoners and hostages.

4. Restores to France the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon.

5. Stipulates generally for the Status ante bellum, except as hereafter excepted.

6. Contains a first exception in favor of Britain of which is to remain to them in full sovereignty.

7. No fortresses which are to be delivered up shall be injured before delivery.

8. A stipulation in favor of persons who may find themselves in the possessions delivered up and three years allowed them to remove.

9. The restitutions to take place in Europe within one month, in Africa and America within three, and Asia within six months after the ratification.

10. Reſpects to conteſted private property in the territory to be delivered up.

11. Relates to captures before the declaration of hoſtilities; and to ſuch as may be made after the ratification of the treaty and prior to its effectual promulgation.

12. The allies of the two parties are to be invited by the contracting parties to accede to the peace on the conditions of the three following articles; and the contracting parties are to guarantee their execution to each other reſpectively; and if the allies refuſe to accede, within two months after the exchange of the ratifications, the party refuſing ſhall receive no ſuccour from its ally during the further continuance of the war.

[By this and the following articles it was propoſed to France to ſtipulate for ſome of the territory of her allies, and to agree to abandon them to the mercy of England if they refuſed to ratify ſuch ceſſion.]

13. His Britannic majeſty engages to conclude a definitive peace with his catholic majeſty on the footing of the ſtate of poſſeſſion before the war, with the exception of which ſhall remain in full ſovereignty to his Britanic majeſty.

14. His Britannic majeſty in like manner engages to conclude a definitive peace with the Batavian republic on the ſame footing of the ſtate of poſſeſſion before the war, with the exception of which ſhall remain to his Britannic majeſty in full ſovereignty, and of which ſhall be ceded to his majeſty in exchange for In conſideration of theſe reſtitutions, to be hereby made by his Britannic majeſty, all property belonging to the prince of Orange in the month of December 1794, and which has been ſeized and confiſcated ſince that period, ſhall be reſtored to him or a full equivalent in money given him for the ſame. And the French republic further engages to procure for him, at the general peace, an adequate compenſation for the loſs of his offices and dignities in the United Provinces; and the perſons who have been impriſoned or baniſhed, or whoſe property has been ſequeſtrated or confiſcated in the ſaid republic, on account of their attachment to the intereſts of the houſe of Orange, or to the former government of the United Provinces, ſhall be releaſed, and ſhall be at liberty to return to their country, and to reſide therein, and to enjoy their property there, conforming themſelves to the laws and conſtitution there eſtabliſhed."

[Blanks were left to be filled in this project. What poſſeſſions of the Spaniards and Dutch were to be ceded to Britain remained to be ſettled by negociation with France. But ſomething was to be ceded.

15. Stipulates that the French ſhould make peace with Portugal on the footing of the eſtate of poſſeſſion before the war.

16. Stipulates the ſame regulations reſpecting the poſſeſſions to be reſtored to the allies, as thoſe reſpecting the poſſeſſion of the contracting parties.

17. Makes common to the allies the ſtipulations between the contracting parties, reſpecting treaties exiſting before the war; the reſtoration of priſoners, the ceſſation of hoſtilities, and the deciſions relative to prizes and ſeizures.

18. Sequeſtrations taken off and private engagements complied with. Any complaint to be ſettled by ſworn commiſſioners of both nations; who ſhould have power in caſe of difference to call arbitrators of a different nation.

19. Promiſes to fulfill the treaty and guarantee its ſtipulations mutally.

20. Ratifications to be exchanged in one month at leaſt from the ſigning.

Extract of a letter, dated Cape Nichola Mole, Dec. 24, '97.

"At preſent every thing is tolerably peaceable in the Colony. Since the departure of Santhonax the Brigands have made no attempt upon our poſſeſſions. It is ſaid, however, that St. Marc is threatened; but I doubt whether the Brigands will make any ſerious attempt. They will confine themſelves to petty aggreſſion. What induces me to believe this, is, that Touſſaint continues at the Cape. He is not himſelf without uneaſineſs.—Santhonax has ſtill ſome partizans who murmur at his being ſent away, and Touſſaint dreads the effects of this diſſatisfaction."

"Our commiſſioners have not advanced one ſtep towards negociation.—My hopes and fears are on the alarm."

KNOXVILLE, November 22.

Report of the Cherokees.

"That as ſoon as the chiefs return from hunting, a full national council will be held at Turkey's town, to take into conſideration the inſult offered to the nation by the United States, in confining under a military guard, by the commiſſioners of the United States, one of the commiſſioners appointed by them (the Cherokees) to extend the line between the U. States and the Cherokees." The Cherokees commiſſioner confined by the commiſſioners of the United States, is a man of great perſonal ſpirit and boldneſs, who never received an inſult with impunity, and of much conſequence in his nation. Much is ſaid by the federal officers of the imprudence and cauſe of war offered to the Indians by individual frontier Indians; but can any act be a more juſt cauſe of war than that the commiſſioners of one nation ſhould confine, under a military guard, the commiſſioners of another, their equal in authority in the buſineſs in which they were engaged, and a free man, repreſenting a free, ſovereign and independent nation? Experience has taught us that we need not hope for eternal peace with any nation, even chriſtian nations; and if war ſhould again take place between the United States and the Cherokees, which God forbid, let the officers of the federal government, whoſe duty it is to preſerve peace, keep in remembrance, that they themſelves have given juſt cauſe for ſuch war on the part of the Cherokees; perhaps they may forbear, but they will not forget nor forgive ſo groſs an inſult—Let it be ſuppoſed, for a moment, that when the commiſſioners of the United States arrive at Paris, that the commiſſioners on the part of France, at a conference, confine the whole or any of them under a military guard, [becauſe they have the power] and then aſk what would be the ſenſations of the citizens of the United States, and what the immediate conquet of the government on ſo daring an inſult? Any and every citizen can give the anſwer. The cauſe of confining the Cherokee commiſſioner under a military guard, by the commiſſioners of the United States, is precicely ſimilar. The Cherokees are as much a nation as the French, according to the acknowledgments of the United States, and of courſe entitled to all the national rights that the French or any other nation of the earth is from the United States.

De cember 20.

It is here reported and believed, that on the night preceding that on which the people ſtrid to be ſettled upon Indian lands, in Powell's Valley, were compelled, by military power, to quit houſe, home and property, ſeven women, wives of thoſe diſtreſſed citizens, were delivered of ſo many children. It don't require the ſpirit of prophecy to predict that theſe children, as well as others of Tenneſee, whether born or to be born for years to come, will be taught from the time they can liſp the pleaſing words of pappa and mamma, to execrate the ſourſe and inſtruments of the oppreſſion of their parents. Let it be admitted for a moment, that the authority exiſts in the federal government to remove by military power ſuch people as appear, by the extention of Hawkins' line, to be upon Indian lands; is it not then a violent act of oppreſſion to compel thouſands of men, women and children, at the immediate approach of winter, upon a ſhort notice, to quit houſe and home, and to ſeek ſhelter in a new country, where they could find it—The ſame authority or power which could permit them to remain a month or more after the line was run, could have extended the time of their countinnance in their houſes until the winter was over, if they had ſo pleaſed. The principle that goes to one period goes to another, provided the removal be in any reaſonable time. The Indians themſelves have expreſſed their diſapprobation of this haſty and inhuman removal, conſequently no doubt can be entertained but they would have conſtrued the removal next April or May as within a reaſonable time. By that time theſe unhappy people might have looked out for other places of ſettlement; and not have been expoſed in camps in the woods, upon the ſides of brooks, in the cold, rain, ſnow and froſt of a winter that promiſes to be uncommonly ſevere, deſtitute of the common neceſſaries of life. Let ſuch an act be exerciſed or attempted to be exercited upon an equal number of the inhabitants of any of the large and civilized cities of the United States, would the reſult be paſſive obedience and non-reſiſtance?

"On the 28th November, two companies of the third regiment of federal troops deſcended the Cumberland from fort Blount, for fort Maſſac, upon the Ohio. One of them was commanded by capt. Wade, whole conduct in office, and in the ſociety of the citizens, while in this ſtate, was ſuch as to cauſe his departure from it to be regretted by all who had the pleaſure of his acquaintance. To the duty of his office he was punctiliouſly attentive, and in the ſociety of the citizens he diſcovered no political or other party ſpirit. The highly faſhionable word inſurgents as applied to the citizens of Tenneſee, his good ſenſe and uniform adherence to truth never permitted him to uſe.

LONDON, November 16.

Yeſterday a humble, but ſpirited addreſs was preſented by both houſes of parliament, to his majeſty, on the ſubject of the late negociations at Liſle.—In this addreſs the lords and commons properly eſtimate the deſigns of the French directory, and acknowledge the ardency of the deſire exhibited by his majeſty to put an end to the horrors of war. "No ſacrifice," ſay they, "will content the French, but that of our liberty;—no conceſſion, but that of our envied and happy conſtitution?"—And they conclude thus, "Under ſuch circumſtances, we feel the duty which we owe, in this great criſis, to God and to our country. Animated by the ſame ſentiments which your Majeſty has been pleaſed to declare to your people and to the world; attachment to your majeſty by principle, duty and gratitude, and ſenſible that it is only from courage and ſtimneſs that we can look either for preſent ſafety or permanent peace; we are determined to defend, with unſhaken reſolution, your majeſty's throne, the lives and properties of our fellow-ſubjects, the government and conſtitution of our country, and the honor and independence of the Britiſh empire." We know that great exertions are neceſſary; we are prepared to make them; and placing our firm reliance on that divine protection which has always hitherto been extended to us, we will ſupport your majeſty to the utmoſt, and ſtand and fall with our religion, laws and liberties."

His Majeſty's moſt gracious anſwer.

"My lords and gentlemen,

"Nothing could be more ſatisfactory to me than this unanimous declaration of the ſentiments of my two houſes of parliament. They are ſuch as the conduct and declared intentions of the enemy could not fail to produce. We are engaged in a cauſe which is common to us all; and contending for every intereſt which a free and independent nation can have to maintain. Under the bleſſing of providence I look with confidence to the iſſue of this great conteſt; but in every event my reſolution is taken. It is ſuch as I owe to God, to my country, and to myſelf; and it is confirmed by the ſentiments which you have this day declared to me. I will not be wanting to my people, but will ſtand or fall with them, in the defence of our religion and in the maintenance of the independence, laws, and liberties of theſe kingdoms."

☞ We expect ſoon to be in poſſeſſion of the addreſs of the two houſes of parliament at length, at preſent we poſſeſs only the above.

HOUSE OF LORDS, Nov. 8.

On his Majeſty's ſpeech.

THE earl of Glaſgow eulogized the virtues of his majeſty, deprecated the conduct of the enemy, and countenanced for the continuance of the war—He concluded by moving an humble addreſs to his majeſty.

Ld. Gwydir followed upon the ſame ground. He concluded by ſeconding the motion, and expreſſing a hope that adequate means of finance for carrying on the war might be found; and that what additional burdens might be neceſſary would be cheerfully borne, not doubting that the reſources and ſpirit of the country were fully equal to every emergency of our preſent ſituation, and ſuch as, by a timely and proper direction, were capable of defeating the inſidious projects of our enemies, and leading to a ſafe and honorable peace.

Earl Fitzwilliam agreed perfectly in every thing which had fallen from the two noble lords who had made and ſeconded the motion, as to the importance of the preſent criſis, and danger to the country from the inordinate ambition and inſidious projects of the enemy. France, it was obvious, exerciſed a tyranny that it was difficult to reſiſt; a tyranny that reached not only the fartheſt extremity of its own dominion but actually through the medium of its power and influence, extended over a great part of Europe. At the ſame time, however, tho' he could not too much approve of what had fallen from the two noble lords on this head, yet he felt himſelf compelled to diſapprove of ſome part of the addreſs, which he did with the greater reluctance, as it might affect that unanimity which he could wiſh the other part of the addreſs to poſſeſs. The part of the addreſs to which he thus objected, was that which approved and ſanctioned the various overtures that had been made on the part of his majeſty's miniſters towards peace; theſe he could not but conſider as utterly inconſiſtent with the principles laid down from the throne, & formerly ſanctioned by that houſe; and therefore, tho' he endangered a unanimity on other points, he ſhould be under the neceſſity of moving, by way of amendment, that all expreſſions of that tendency ſhould be ſtruck out. He could not conſent that ſentiments ſo contradictory of their former reſolutions ſhould be carried to the throne, and which, in their direct & inevitable tendency, went to check and weaken that exertion and public energy by which alone we could farmount our preſent difficulties, and baffle the open and undiſguiſed projects of our enemy, now directed to the total overthrow of the power and independence of this kingdom. The principle to which he alluded, ſo often advanced from the throne and recognized by that houſe, was this that no peace could be expected from France till ſhe poſſeſſed a government capable of maintaining the accuſtomed relations of peace and amity. He aſked, was ſuch the preſent ſtate of the government of France, either in its principles or profeſſions, or as proved by their conduct to neutral & friendly powers? Beyond all doubt it was not. If any one tho't otherwiſe, it was incumbent on them to ſhew how and when the government of France became changed ſince that period in which it was reported as being incapable of the relations of peace. If they looked to principles, the government of France was as completely Jacobinical now as at any one period of the revolution: every one who ſwerved from that party, and ſeemed inclined to treat for peace on fair and moderate grounds were, on that account alone, ſeized and tranſported as the vileſt criminals. If they adverted to the profeſſions and acknowledged objects of this party, the same destructive and malignant principles were at work :—If they regarded their conduct to neutral and friendly powers, the same inference followed.—They began to reduce their ambitious and destructive system to practice by Avignon and Geneva : But the late conduct of their generals in Italy and the Rhine, had evinced the same mischievous spirit in all its violence and rancor—neutral and friendly powers had been deprived of their rights by Buonaparte, on no other pretence than that it was for the advantage of the French republic. He would not even condescend to give a color to his encroachments and oppression by unreal, tho' more specious motives. Now, unless some alteration in the disposition and practices of France was pointed out, he saw not how they could, consistently with their former resolutions, and with the declaration of his majesty, say that any thing like a permanent and secure peace could be obtained ; and if not, every attempt at negociation was not only useless, & injurious, but it diminished energy, & engendered distrust. On this principle it was that he had condemned, about two years ago, the first indication in his majesty's speech from the throne, that views of a pacific nature were entertained. He tho't that declaration at the time extremely injudicious ; and he had no doubt, that to that circumstance was to be ascribed the diff. verence of the grand alliance against France that very soon after commenced, and has since continued till we may be said to stand entirely by ourselves in the contest.—This intimation on our part must have spread timidity & distrust ; and to that effect he ascribed every secession that had since taken place in the combination, even the late peace of Udina. He maintained that no peace could possibly be at present entered into with France, that could give a hope of permanence or security. In no one instance with respect to the powers with whom they had made peace, had they shewn themselves inclined or able to maintain the relation annexed to that state. After the preliminaries of peace with the emperor had been signed the Cisalpine republic had been established, & also the Cis-Rhinane republic, in defiance of an express stipulation of the treaty. He then adverted to the effect of any peace concluded at present, which he contended would be to lay this country unconditionally at the feet of France. In the actual situation of this country, there was nothing that could justify so disgraceful and injurious a step. The affluence of the country and individuals was yet great, and, so was the spirit of the people ; great exertions might yet be made, and these resources and this spirit only wanted to be properly called out and directed. He had originally supported the war, to oppose the principles of the French revolution ; and till they were destroyed, or kept within strict bounds, there could be no security for this country, or any part of Europe. The example of Prussia, Spain, or even Austria, did not alter his opinion. He thought those countries in imminent danger of falling sacrifices to their ill-judged timidity. If the power and influence of France remained, those governments, he was fully persuaded, would not long subsist. He had never calculated on the overthrow of France by means of her finances ; though persons of great authority, both in that and the other house, had done so. It was the abandonment of principles injurious to Europe, and the adoption of such principles by France, as could enable her to maintain the relations of peace and amity—neither of these had been obtained, and therefore every object of the war remained. The present government of France could not maintain its own interior relation. Whatever it might be in theory, the directory was a fierce tyranny, the councils were their representatives, not the people's—The ruling party had triumphed over nearly two thirds of the representation. Fifty three departments had been disfranchised ; and that not only as to its representatives, but to the subordinate municipal officers. He saw great and imminent danger to all Europe from the present power and influence of France ; nor could he think that danger less because the emperor had become a jacobin. This he thought unpropitious to the ancient orders of Europe, and a circumstance that called for increased vigilance and precaution on our part. Against this new system he saw no security at present, but in the prosecution of the war, till a regular government was established in France, under some monarchical form, capable of preserving the relations of peace and amity. Such had been the declaration of his majesty, and for the pursuit of this object, he stood pledged by his declaration to the royalists of France, inviting them to re-establish and maintain that form of government. On every principle, therefore, of consistency, promise, and policy, he conceived that we were bound to prosecute the war. Under the present circumstances, no security could be obtained ; and by attempting to negociate, we sacrificed the honor of the country, while we diminished that national vigor on which alone our security depends. He therefore highly disapproved of giving any thing like a legislative countenance to overtures or dispositions to peace in the present situation of the government of France, compared to the power and yet remaining resources of this country. He then concluded by moving, that all such parts of the address, containing expressions to that effect, should be omitted by way of amendment, and supplied by words confirming the former resolutions of the house, and the declarations from the throne, in favor of which he contended.

Lord Grenville professed himself under some difficulty how to reply to the noble earl in support of an amendment to the address. He agreed with the noble earl respecting the ambitious designs of the enemy ; and also, if the disposition of France should render the continuance of the war necessary, that the spirit and resources of the country should be called forth with a determined resolution to overcome every difficulty. The noble earl maintained that all overtures of peace are disgraceful, & every possible peace dangerous ; whereas he thought the character of the peace would depend on the terms :—and, if concluded with justice and moderation, that it might be both safe and honorable ; and such a peace might be obtained, he had no doubt, if France was sincerely disposed towards it. In the present situation of the two countries, and state of the war, he could not but regard the proposed amendment as of an injurious tendency, and therefore felt himself bound to oppose it, though at the same time he joined very sincerely with the noble earl in calling on every person to stand by their king and country in this arduous contest, and by united spirit and resolution, to conduce to the overthrow of that rancourous enmity on the part of France, which threatens the safety, honour and independence of this kingdom.

The humble address of the right honorable the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons in parliament assembled, presented to his majesty, on Wednesday, Nov. 15, '97

WE, your majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons in parliament assembled, have taken into our most serious consideration, the papers which your majesty has been pleased to direct to be laid before us on the subject of the negociation into which your majesty had entered, with a view of restoring to your people a secure and honourable peace. In every stage of that transaction we have recognized your majesty's invariable and unremitted solicitude for our prosperity and welfare ; while we have seen on the other hand the most abundant proofs of the continuance of that spirit of inveterate animosity and desperate ambition on the part of our enemies, in which the present contest first originated. Your majesty's conduct characterized by an unexampled moderation, openness and confidence, has left to the enemy no means of evasion, no subterfuge of disguise or artifice. It can no longer be denied that their conduct is actuated by a fixed determination of excluding all means of peace, and of pursuing, at all hazards, their hostile designs against the happiness and safety of these kingdoms. Even the vain pretences of pacific dispositions is now abandoned, and the real purpose of all their councils, and all their measures is at length openly and publicly avowed. It is to our laws and government that they have declared their irreconcilable hatred. No sacrifice will content them, but that of liberty ; no concession, but that of our envied and happy constitution.

Under such circumstances, we feel the duty which we owe, in this great crisis, to God and to our country. Animated by the same sentiments which your majesty has been pleased to declare to your people and to the world ; attached to your majesty by principle, duty and gratitude, and sensible that it is only from courage, and firmness that we can look, either for present safety or permanent peace ; we are determined to defend with unshaken resolution, your majesty's throne, the lives and properties of our fellow subjects, the government and constitution of our country, and the honor and independence of the British empire. We know that great exertions are necessary ; we are prepared to make them ; and placing our firm reliance on that divine protection which has always hitherto been extended to us, we will support your majesty to the utmost, and stand and fall with our religion, laws and liberties

For his majesty's answer see our last.

NEW-YORK, Feb. 16.

By a gentlemen who arrived at Wilmington, N. C. in the schooner Phebe, Ferry, from Cape Nichola Mole, we learn that on the 25th of December last, 65 launches were fitted out, & manned with 900 soldiers and 200 men from on board the English shipping at the Mole. They proceeded at 9, A. M. to the platform, under the command of captain White, of the ship Carnatic, and that at 4 P. M. commenced an action which compelled the French to retreat. The English then burnt the buildings, together with 500 bbls. flour and other provisions, burst their guns &c. On their return, those boats that were nearest the shore, were fired upon from thence with small arms, by a party of the French who lay in an ambush. One lieutenant and 7 men were killed on board the launches, besides several wounded. The French had 18 killed and wounded.

We are happy in being able to confirm the intelligence we stated on Tuesday respecting the relinquishment of the posts on the Mississipi within the American line, by the Spanish government ; at least so far as relates to the intentions for this purpose : for we were rather premature in stating the business as already accomplished. Thomas Stoughton, esq. his catholic majesty's consul for this city, recieved a letter from his excellency don Gayoso De Lemos, the present governer of New-Orleans, dated the 18th of Jan. stating, particularly, that orders had been received from his majesty for the immediate delivery of the posts, &c. and that preparations had been, and were still making for carrying these orders into effect with every possible expedition.

NORFOLK, (Vir.) Feb. 3.

On Thursday arrived in Hampton roads the snow William, capt. Wells, 43 days from Lisbon bound to Baltimore. From Mr. Brandram (a gentleman who came passenger in the above vessel) we have information that he read in a London paper of the 27th or 28th of November, an account of the arrival in London of one of the American commissioners from Paris, but which of them he does not recollect.

Feb. 6. At a late hour last night capt. Colley of the ship Flora, arrived in town from Hampton roads, where his ship now lies, after a passage of 44 days from Guernsey. Captain Colley politely handed us London papers of the 11th, 15th, and 18th December. He gave a few to some of the officers of the British ships of war lying in the roads. From those we received, we hasten to give the following crude summary of late European news :—

That gens. Buonaparte and Joubert had arrived on the 6th of Dec. at Paris, that a great part of the army of Italy had returned into France—that a new conspiracy had taken place in Paris, and that a number of the conspirators were committed to the temple ; that the pope refuses to acknowledge the independence of the Cisalpine republic, in consequence of which ten thousand republicans were marching towards Rimini, to support the demand of the Cisalpine ambassador. It is also said, at Paris, that the pope had entered into a secret treaty with the emperor of Russia ; that the king of Prussia is dead.

NEW-LONDON, Jan. 31.

Arrived brig Juno, Fairchild, 20 days from Guadaloupe. Mr. Charles Campbell, the mate informs that three days previous to sailing, an insurrection took place at Gadaloupe and Marigalante. Three encampments of negroes & mulattoes, together with some whites (making in number about 1500) were formed in the neighbourhood of Point-Petre. Victor Hughes at a military force against them, who defeated and took 50 of them prisoners ; among whom were three chiefs, who were imprisoned ; the 50 men were ordered to be put to death. Hughes had become extremely unpopular, and it was supposed the insurrection would not easily be suppressed. A defection had taken place among the white soldiers and the utmost vigilance was used to prevent them from deserting ; which they did in considerable numbers.

WEST-NIAGARA, March 17.

Major general White, commander in chief of his Britanic majesty's forces in St. Domingo, has issued a proclamation offering a reward of a thousand dollars for the safe delivery of any of the persons concerned in murdering the officers of the Hermoine frigate, and carrying her into the Spanish port of La Guira.—The general mentions in his proclamation, that the governor of La Guira refused to take advantage of this traitorous act.

WONDERFUL.

IT is ſaid, by ſeveral whoſe veracity is not doubted, that there is now living near Pittſburgh, a lad known by the name of Eli Yarnall, about nine years of age, deſcended of a reſpectable family of that place, formerly of Cheſter county, ſtate of Pennſylvania, aforeſaid who is poſſeſſed of the moſt uncommon faculties. He can foretell events at home and abroad—has a knowledge of things paſt, preſent, and to come, though the objects are ſome hundred miles diſtant.—It is ſaid, upon good authority, that he foretold the inſurrection of the inhabitants of the country where he reſides; and that alſo of the army marching to ſubdue them, and the entire reſult of the buſineſs. He foretold the reſignation of preſident Waſhington, and how it would ſucceed. He foretold the death of Mr. Gallitzin, formerly of Cheſter county, ſtate of Pennſylvania, aforeſaid who is poſſeſſed of the moſt uncommon faculties. He can foretell events at home and abroad—has a knowledge of things paſt, preſent, and to come, though the objects are ſome hundred miles diſtant.—It is ſaid, upon good authority, that he foretold the inſurrection of the inhabitants of the country where he reſides; and that alſo of the army marching to ſubdue them, and the entire reſult of the buſineſs. He foretold the reſignation of preſident Waſhington, and how it would ſucceed. He foretold the death of Mr. Gallitzin, ſitting by the fire-ſide, he ſuddenly burſt out laughing; on being interrogated of the cauſe, he replied, that his father had that moment let his keg of whiſky fall, coming out of a ſtore in Pittſburgh, and was then in full chaſe after it, down a hill; on enquiry next day it was found to be exactly as he ſaid.

This was the firſt time he was diſcovered to poſſeſs ſuperior abilities to other children: when ſhortly after he was applied to for information relative to two ſtray horſes. The lad inſtantly pointed to the quarter where they might be found, but ſaid only one of them would be of uſe. It turned out as he ſaid. The man found his horſes, but one of them was dead.

What is the moſt ſurpriſing is, that he has had no education, and yet will ſpeak of foreign countries as if he were a complete geographiſt. He ſays, there is a lad in Old-England, poſſeſſed of the like gift; and what he cannot see, the other can. He tells those with him, that he can clearly discern the watery element, with the several kinds of fish, and will describe them with precision. He has told many trifling occurrences which excited much amazement. He will describe the size and features of a person he never saw or heard of.

The writer of this, has heretofore put over these reports, as without foundation; but from the unquestionable information he has now received, is inclined to think they are facts. A person, who has just returned from the country, went to see this lad, and asked him several questions relative to himself; and he told him facts, as they stood. He unfolded to him many secrets, and even told him how many children he had; how many were at home, and in what circumstances he had left his wife: which were as he said, about 300 miles distant! He likewise told an Englishman, at the same time, what part of Great-Britain he resided in and described his house; he did not know what his house was covered with, but said it was with a black, hard substance—a slate roof. PREDICTIONS

For the year 1798, calculated for the meridian of Providence, but useful, allowing for the variation, in any of the adjacent states.

SEVERAL mornings this year the sun will rise before certain people discover it, and set before they have done their day's work.

In the course of the spring and summer many alterations will be made in the form and trimmings of the ladies' head-dresses; but I am not able to give an opinion at present whether their appearances will be improved by the alterations.

The French people will try during the whole year to think that they are under a free government, and the rest of the world will know that they are under arbitrary government.

On the fourth of July next many sober people will be drunk before they are aware of it.

The public debt will not be paid this year.

The same will happen with many private debts.

There will be many eclipses of male and female virtue this year, some visible and some invisible.

Many delicate ladies whom one would not suspect will be kissed; and though for my own part I see no harm in it, yet I forbear to publish their names.

Many people will drink more strong liquor than would be sufficient to keep them sober, and take more physic than would be sufficient to keep them in health.

In the summer months the filth and putrefaction of all kinds collected in docks, alleys, cellars, &c. will be removed, the air will be sweet and in the fall the town will be healthy, excepting in a few instances of the common autumnal fever.

Hospitality and generosity will abound; dinners and entertainments will be given to those who have enough at home, and the poor will receive gratis much good advice, medical and legal excepted.

Many young ladies will be married who are not yet courted, and many who are courted must wait another year.

ARCHIMAGO.

ANECDOTE.

MR. COLT, superintendant of the canal at Fort Stanwix, being provoked at an Irishman, gave him a sturdy kick: "By J——s, returned the Hibernian, if you kick so while you are a colt, what will you do when you come to be a horse?

Mr. Simons,

WITH the utmost satisfaction have I perused the report of the trustees, in your last, of the very rapid progress of the causeway thro' the Black-Swamp: well may they say Upper-Canada cannot boast a work of the kind advanced so far in so short a time. It is to be hoped that the spirited exertions of Newark, and its vicinity, will be the means of creating an emulation in the rest of the province, especially in the county of Lincoln, so famed for bad roads; and that it may be the means of uniting the inhabitants together, knowing that nothing can be done without unanimity. May every person overlook his petty selfish ends, and join heartily in the public good, which always ends in the interest of every individual.

Being well acquainted in the country, I can affirm that nothing could have been projected of so general utility to both town and country: it is like the channel of a great navigable river thro' the middle of a country, the roads leading into the same as so many small branches. New roads are already projecting to come into it that never were thought of before.

Great praise is due to the officers of government, and the military gentlemen, for their disinterested goodness in so powerfully patronizing, and so liberally contributing to the same; altho' they have no permanent residence in the place, none have been more forward in the business, none have so powerfully forwarded it:—such disinterested patriotism must warm the heart of every inhabitant of it is place, and induce them to look up with gratitude to their donors. May it be the happy means of uniting us more closely, that by our united endeavors we may not only finish this undertaking, but any other that we may find for the public good; knowing that united we can do almost any thing—divided we can do nothing. PHILANTHROPOS.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 8.

IN consideration of the great utility that would result from the citizens of the United States being able to procure, free from expense, an analysis of any ores or mineral substances.—"The Chemical Society of Philadelphia;" on the 20th of June, '97, passed the following resolution:

"Resolved,"

"That a committee of five members be appointed, whose business it shall be to notify, in the different papers of the United States, and by circular letters, that they will give an analysis of all minerals which may be sent them."

In conformity to the above resolution, we hereby give notice, that we will analize any mineral which may be sent us, provided it may be sent us free of expence, and situation in which it was found.

Translated extract from the New Orleans paper, of January 15.

The governor of this province having received by the last courier the orders of his majesty to evacuate the forts of Walnut Hills and Natchez, immediately took proper measures for their execution, having sent off the necessary advices for Natchez."

The above leaves no doubt of the important fact of the evacuation of our posts by the Spanish.

Extract of a letter, dated New Orleans, January 16, to a person in this city:

"Orders have been received from the court of Spain to deliver up the posts without any further delay, and the garrisons of Walnut Hills and Natchez will evacuate those places on the news reaching them. The orders have come by the September packet, via Havannah and have relieved the governor from the greatest difficulty he ever experienced.

The demarcation of limits will take place, it is supposed, in March. This information has not yet been officially announced here, although an express was sent with the news two days ago to Natchez."

AUGUSTA, (Georgia) Jan. 6.

We learn by mr Hill from the neighbourhood of Curry's ferry, that on Friday the 22d ultimo, a party of white men crossed the Oconee river about 15 miles above fort Fidius, attacked a camp of Indians, killed 1 and wounded 2 of them. He who was killed is reported to be one of the commissioners appointed by the Creeks to attend running the line between that nation and the settled parts of this state. Thus from the wanton barbarity of a few individuals, is the peace of the community disturbed, and the rights of humanity grossly violated.

BOSTON, February 3.

Nearly 90 days have expired since we have heard officially from our extraordinary envoys at Paris; and the public ought to be prepared to hear that they will be returned to us.

The United States at this eventful period, has but a choice of difficulties. Their citizens must either patiently endure the continuation of the depredations on their commerce—suspend their navigation entirely—arm their vessels and assert that the government, which will not protect their lawful trade shall compensate them for all spoliations on the ocean. On Monday next, congress will enter on the great question, to arm or be plundered. The members who compose the councils of the United States, coming as they do from all parts of the union, certainly possess the best information, & will undoubtedly decide on the great question which will be before them; with dignity, firmness and justice.

WEST-NIAGARA, March 24.

Capt. Malcolm arrived at Baltimore from Bremen, whence he sailed the 27th of November, informs that the current report of the day when he left Bremen, was, that two of the American commissioners had been received, and had commenced negociations; and that the third had departed for England.

A letter from Paris, Nov. 9, says,—"Citizen Mangourit is appointed minister plenipotentiary of the French republic to the United States, and only waits the termination of the conferences with the American ministers, to set out for the place of his destination."

From a London paper.

The French have committed a misnomer in calling their army which is to assemble at Brest, the army of England. They should have named it the army of the ocean; for should Bridport, Duncan or St. Vincent, catch one glimpse of them, on the water, they will soon add a new district to the New England primer, of "Proud Gallia's troops

Was swallowed up."

The new superb theatre, in Federal street, Boston, all but the brick walls, was reduced to ashes, on the 2d of Feb. ascertained to be by accident, or carelessness of the fire keepers. The loss is said to be very great; but, fortunately, by great exertions, the fire was prevented from communicating to the adjacent buildings, though of wood.

Of Congress.

The house of representatives have for several weeks been principally employed in the case of Mr. Lyon from Vermont, who was impeached of indecorum in the house, in spitting in the face of Mr. Grifwold of Connecticut, another member. It seems Mr. G. had dropped some hints that Mr. L. had been a disgraced officer, and sentenced to wear a wooden sword; at which Mr. L. committed the fact, and for which the committee reported a resolution of expulsion; after several days had elapsed, and before the debates had ended, Mr. G. in the same place caned Mr. L. The majority, however, was not large enough to expel Mr. L. The enemies of Mr. Lyon, on this occasion, have published the following in the Gazette of the United States:

"Outlines of a project now on foot among certain partizans of indecency, in the council of 100, for instituting a new order of knighthood.

1. This order takes the denomination of, "Knights of the wooden sword."

2. Every member of the order to be girt with a superb dagger of lath, bearing this motto "Cave Hominem."

Every knight on his investure with this weapon, is understood to be endowed with the priviledge of spitting upon any man who shall on any occasion use the expressions "burning shame," "wooden sword," "hickory club," or "tobacco spittle."

3. The seat of honor to be so well guarded with plates of iron, that the toughest foal leather or the most active foot shall make no impression thereon.

4. The armorial bearings of the order are to be a Lion rampant, girt with the wooden sword of the order, in the act of spitting on all around him."—Motto, Nemo me impunatus lacesjit.

PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS by a proclamation issued under, and by virtue of, an act of the parliament of this province, passed in the thirty-seventh year of his Majesty's reign, entitled An act for making temporary provision for the regulation of trade between this province and the United States of America, by land or inland navigation, it was ordered, that the operation of certain ordinances in the said proclamation specified, should be suspended: And whereas it has been found expedient that the provisions of the said ordinances, except as herein after excepted, should be continued until some further and other arrangements relative to the commercial intercourse between the United States of America and this province can be adjusted:—NOW THEREFORE KNOW YE, that I have thought fit by and with the advice of the executive council to revoke and annul, and do hereby revoke and annul the said proclamation, bearing date the twentieth day of September last, except as herein after mentioned; and I do also by and with the advice and consent of his Majesty's executive council, hereby further order and declare that so much only of the ordinance passed in the twentieth year of his Majesty's reign, as relates to the REGISTER, shall be, and is hereby suspended.

GIVEN under my hand seal at arms, this sixteenth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-seven, and in the thirty-eighth year of his Majesty's reign, at York, in the province of Upper Canada.

PETER RUSSELL,
President, &c. &c. &c.

By command of his Honor.

UPPER-CANADA, MIDLAND DISTRICT
SURROGATE COURT.

GEORGE the third by the grace of God of Great-Britain, France and Ireland king, defender of the faith, &c. &c. &c.

To all persons any wise related to TIMOTHY BROWN, late serjeant in the Royal Canadian Volunteers, deceased, intestate:

WHEREAS application has been made to our surrogate court, for the Midland district, by Hazleton Spencer, esq. major in his majesty's Royal Canadian Volunteers, stating that Timothy Brown, late serjeant in the said corps, died intestate, and that there is no person next of kin to the said Timothy Brown, resident within this province, and therefore the said Hazleton Spencer, esq. prays that letters of administration may be granted to him.

Take notice, that unless you, or some of you, appear in our said court, to be holden for the Midland district, on or before eight months after this publication, in order to take out letters of administration, agreeably to an act of assembly of this province, entitled an act to establish a court of probate in this province and also a surrogate court in every district thereof, or to shew cause, if any you have, why letters of administration should not be granted to the said Hazleton Spencer, esq. that the same will be granted to him accordingly. Witness Alexander Fisher, esq. surrogate for the Midland district, this third day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-eight, and in the thirty-eighth of our reign. POOLE ENGLAND, Register.

ALL persons indebted to G. TIFFANY, late printer of this paper, are requested to call at the printing-office to make settlement and save costs.

SILVESTER TIFFANY.

RASTADT, (Germ,) Nov. 12.

ALL the quarters here are taken at a higher price than usual on such occasions, as it was expected that congress would not sit longer than two months; upwards of forty deputies, besides the principal ambassadors, are expected to come to the congress. There are several French already here and have taken their quarters in the taverns. The principal ambassadors are expected to arrive here between the 20th and 24th of this month, and the congress to commence the first of December.

BERLIN, (Prussia) Nov. 16.

The hopes entertained of a recovery of our sovereign, yesterday suddenly vanished, when his majesty's sweetings encreased to an uncommon degree, his end was momently expected and this day two minutes before 9 o'clock, A.M. he expired, (aged 53 years and 5a days) at the new palace in Potsdam. He ascended the throne, Aug. 17, 1786, and reigned 11 years and 3 months.

As soon as the government, the ministers of state, were informed of the king's death, the gates of the city were shut, all the troops in the garrison were ordered to repair on the parade, the several regiments formed the hollow square, with their commanders and all their other officers in the center. After a short address, the commanders of each regiment proclaimed with a loud voice, (the whole militia with an uplifted arm) Long live his majesty our king Frederick Wilhelm the third— and were answered by all the military and surrounding multitude of spectators of all degrees, with three times Long live the king!

PARIS, Dec. 6,

The following persons have been arrested on a charge of being implicated in a royalist conspiracy, discovered by the minister of police: Noel, inspector of the police under Cochon; Moiseu of Calais, already implicated in the affair of Dunan and Brothier, Moreus, Pollent, Dupont Fontaine, Cotilan Pillot, Francois, formerly advocate at Macon, and a female named Poisfiere, with her brothers.

December 8.

New arrests have taken place in consequence of the counter-revolutionary members discovered within these few days past. We are assured that several bankers and some persons of consequence are among these persons. The government has taken on itself the exclusive care of these pursuits, but the details remain unknown.

They write from the frontiers of Holland, that the new king of Prussia is making great preparations, and that the Hessian troops have been put upon the footing of war.

December 10.

Letters from Hamburgh speak of an offensive and defensive alliance as on the point of being concluded between Prussia and Russia.

We are assured that the number of prisoners in the temple amount to 98.

HAGUE, Nov. 21.

Admiral Winter's account of the naval engagement of the 11th ult. is now printed, and the convention have resolved,

1. That the admiral's ship, the Fryheit, was defended to the last.

2. That the English fleet, tho' only equal in the number of the ships of the line to the Batavian fleet, was superior in force.

3. The English covered more sea, and were also better in concert with each other.

4. That the English fleet had the advantage of the attack.

5. That the retreat of six of the Dutch ships was the chief cause of the loss of the battle.

Our two state prisoners, the Pensionary and count Bentick, will be exchanged with England, it is said, for admiral Winter and another of our naval commanders.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 23.

The English have increased, within a few days, their ships of war at the mouth of the Scheldt, and upon our coasts.

If the French cruisers continue to take the Danish, Swedish, Hamburg, and other vessels, as if they were English, the last blow will be given to commerce, and our ports will be in want of the most necessary provisions, for there is much that we can receive only from neutrals, such as materials for building, which come from the north.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.

A letter from Baltimore informs, that two vessels belonging to that city have been seized and condemned at the late Spanish port of St. Domingo, in Hispaniola, for having British manufactured goods on board, and that it is the determination of the French there to condemn all vessels found in their ports or taken on the high seas with British manufactures on board.

BOSTON, Feb. 17.

SPANISH DECREE.

[Received by capt. Hopkins, translated by Mr. Sales.]

Having read to the king the reflections of the board of commerce and having informed him of other precedents, and of what occurred in the former war against Great-Britain, his majesty has been pleased to grant permission, that during the actual war, the commerce of Spain with her possessions in America, should be carried on with neutral flags, and leaving full liberty to the merchants to expedite the vessels of this description, either from the licenced ports in Spain, or from those of foreign nations. But the vessels of this last class, must submit to three conditions:

1. That they must pay in the ports of America, besides the duties established there, those that they would have paid had they sailed from Spain.

2. That they must not carry any of the articles prohibited by the regulation of free commerce.

3. That the returns must be made to the ports of the Peninsula, without being subjected to any in particular.—On these conditions we grant all the solicitations made on the subject.

SAABEDRA.

Further—The king has been pleased to free commerce in general from the necessity of loading determined quantities of foreign goods, that are sent to America; and the department of the treasury in Spain, notifies it to that of America for their information and government, in what concerns them.

St. Lorenzo, Nov. 17th, '97.

GEREL.

JANUARY 28.

The following proceeding is translated from a Paris paper of Jan. 5.

COUNCIL OF FIVE HUNDRED,

January 4.

A message from the directory was read:—"In the detail of grievances which the French government has to make against the British cabinet, the directory recollects the regulation of '94, and proposes by extension, the following measures:

"The flag of a vessel shall no longer cover her cargo—That is to say, every vessel, laden in whole, or in part, with English merchandize, shall be declared good prize, let her belong to whatever nation she may.

"All ports of the republic shall be shut against any vessel, of whatever nation, which, in the course of her voyage, shall have entered a port of England.

"These measures" add the directory, "are perhaps the only ones calculated effectually to affure to the French nation, the benefits it proposes to itself."

Committed.

By the arrivals since our last from France, dispatches for government were received from our extraordinary envoys, at Paris, which have been transmitted to Philadelphia.

Private letters by the same conveyance, from the hon. Mr. Gerry, and others, inform, that our commissioners have not been accredited by the directory, nor was is probable they would be. The public dispatches it is probable will contain nothing more than this fact.

FOREIGN MEMORANDA.

Admiral Story has been tried and acquitted for his conduct in the affair of admiral de Winter. The killed and wounded in the Dutch ships was 1159. The prince of Conde, has found an asylum in the palace of Paul I. at Petersburg, where he arrived the 27th November. The directory have forbidden under severe penalty, the ringing of bells to call people to church.—The monuments of the arts, and precious productions, particularly of Rome, which have passed through Marseilles, for Paris, amount to 228 pictures, 102 articles of sculpture, busts and statues, 1259 antiquities, 2543 volumes, in manuscript, and printed on paper and parchment, and 1051 articles of history

SALEM, Feb. 23.

The following is an extract of a letter received by a gentleman in this town; which will shew, that different persons are differently impressed by the same circumstances. We give it as handed to us, leaving our readers to make their own conclusions. It is dated Bourdeaux, Dec. 10.

"Thanks to God, there is no more talk of war with America. I have had a letter lately from my friend Deblois at Paris who mentions that the American affairs in Paris do not carry such a bad appearance as they did some time back. He says, that messrs. Pinckney and Marshal are little regarded by the directory, but that the other is considered in a more favorable light. Therefore I hope we shall soon have accounts of an amicable termination of all existing differences."

NORFOLK, Feb. 23.

On Sunday arrived at Hampton roads the brig Verand Etang, F. C. Meyer, late master, bound to Baltimore from Hamburgh, out 31 weeks; had lost her anchors and totally destitute of provisions. Three weeks before her arrival the captain died; three were sick in bed, one had been starved to death, one drowned, and one made his escape on board a schr. at sea; they had only the mate, one seaman, and a boy, that were able to stand, and those so weak, they could not let the reefs out of the topsails.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 19.

We are informed, that the ship Newport, Capt. Tew, loaded on account of, and by the United-States, is bound from this port to Algiers, was captured by the Spaniards, and sent into Algeziras, and, after some detention, was cleared: that 2 or three vessels of the same condition, had also been captured and released:—that in consequence of their detention, the dey had demanded 60,000 dols. from the Spanish government, or he would make immediate reprisals. The Newport had passports from all the resident ministers here.

LONDON, Dec. 19.

FROM Madrid it appears, that the council of Castile have been charged by the king to make a report upon the sentiments and temper of the monks and other ecclesiastics. The number of people in the capital is to be ascertained, measures for public safety increased, and every means adopted for reducing the price of provisions.

December 25.

On Saturday the unpleasant news was received at Lloyd's coffee house, that the Ariadne, ser ship from Quebec, valued at 150,000l. was captured & carried into Bourdeaux.

January 1.

A private letter from Berlin, received by the last mail, gives the following account of the new king of Prussia—Frederick William the third promises to be a great king. He is of a most excellent disposition; and a lover of military exercises. He is an economist, and a model for good husbands. His table is frugal, and he lives quite domesticated with his consort, for whom he has the most sincere love. The dutchess of York, his sister, seems to inherit similar virtues.

WEST-NIAGARA, March 31.

Capt. Pain, arrived at New-York from Gibraltar, whence he sailed Jan. 30, informs that 17 sail of the British fleet still blockaded Cadiz, in which port were thirty-six Spanish sail of the line ready for sea.

Capt. Graham, arrived at New-York, from Bourdeaux, whence he sailed the 11th of January, brings nothing new. He says, Americans are treated there with the utmost contempt.

Under head of "Alarming and important," in the (New-York) Commercial Advertiser, we are informed, that several Americans have been arrested and confined in Paris, without any cause being assigned therefor—among them Mr. Jesse Putnam, of Boston, and Mr. J. B. Murray, of N. York. The brother of the minister of police informed the gentlemen confined, that Americans were not under the protection of the laws.

Some remarks appearing in the Argus, tending to shew that it probably was owing to political motives, as insinuated in the Commercial Advertiser, that the above Americans were arrested, produced in a subsequent paper, the following account of Mr. Murray's case, from a correspondent:

"His passport for going to Paris was regular, and which he could not obtain until he had demonstrated, that he had claims for a vessel captured by a French cruiser. He was arrested and thrown into prison by order of the French government, where he remained for four days, when taken out was sent to Calais under an escort of two soldiers. Although he petitioned to have liberty of leaving the republic via Bourdeaux, it was refused, and without being heard in his defence, he was compelled to quit France."

According to late accounts, the Ottoman government begins to treat christian subjects with great mildness: in several places these last have obtained liberty to build churches, and publicly to exercise their religion. The Turkish commandants have received orders to protect them in a special manner.

A Philadelphia paper contains the last part of Mr. Fox's speech, and the reply of the chancellor of the exchequer, on mr. Pitt's new tax bill, in the house of commons, Dec. 14 received this incomplete by the arrival at Norfolk, from Guernsey) with the division of the house on the 2nd reading, viz. for second reading 175, against it 50.

A letter perceived at Philadelphia from Guadaloupe mentions a second insurrection having broke out there, and that in a contest between the whites and negroes, 900 of the latter and 200 of the former were killed.

Latest from Europe.

By the brig Mary, capt. Earl, arrived at Philadelphia, London accounts are received to Jan. 3.—Capt. Earl informs that the American envoys remained at Paris at the date of the latest accounts received in England (Dec. 31) at which time they had not been accepted by the government and every appearance indicate serious and hostile designs against the United States. The following Paris article, given in one of the London papers, is the only information we can find respecting American affairs.

Paris, December 14.

The three commissioners sent by the congress of the United States are here, without having advanced one step in their mission. They are the victims of the just indignation with which the conduct of the present rulers of their country has inspired our government. It looks as if all communication would be interrupted between the two countries. They have not had a place among the members of the diplomatic body at the fete of the tenth of this month; not even the consul gen. of the United States, Mr. Skipwith, was invited to it, altho' that honor has been hitherto paid him on all such occasions. It has been remarked, that Mr. Signeul, the consul gen. of Sweden, has been also forgotten.

A letter from a respectable house in Hamburgh, dated Nov. 21, received at Philadelphia, says—the last accounts from Paris, give reason to apprehend that an open rupture may perhaps take place between France and the United States. Our under-writers therefore refuse to take risks in the American bottoms, unless at 15 per cent. in case that war should not be declared, before the arrival of the ship."

Advice has been received at the Hague, from Petersburgh, that the emperor acknowledges the debt of 72 million which Poland and Russia owe Holland, and will pay the interest.

ANECDOTE.

The late Dean Swift, of eccentric memory, once preaching a charity ſermon at St. Patrick's church, Dublin, the prolixity of it diſguſted many of his auditors; which coming to his knowledge, and it falling to his lot ſoon after to preach another ſermon of the like kind in the ſame place, he took eſpecial care to avoid falling into his former error. His text was—"He that hath pity upon the poor, lendeth unto the Lord, and that which he hath given will he pay him again." The Dean, after repeating his text with a more than common emphatical tone of voice, added—"Now, my dearly beloved brethren, you hear the terms of this loan: if you like the ſecurity, down with your duſt." It is worthy remark, that the quaintneſs and brevity of this ſermon produced a very large contribution.

To all concerned.

—"IT IS ALL A BORE."—

Mr. Printer,

AS the gentlemen of this town appear to be ſo ſingularly attached to the word BORE, as to be continually interlarding their converſation with a repetition of it, I have, with the moſt indefatigable induſtry, made ſuch neceſſary reſearches as to enable me to lay before the public all the different ſpecies of boring, uſing ſuch technicals as are beſt calculated to convey clear and diſtinct ideas of the ſame; and am extremely happy that it has fallen within my province to render ſuch ſignal ſervice to the literati of Newark, at the ſame time to eurich the language with what is beautiful and deſcriptive.

I ſat out with obſerving that, if a gentleman in company tell a ſtraight ſtory, it is called a bore, if a crooked one it is a bore, if a long one, a bore, if a ſhort one, all the ſame, and a round about ſtory is ſure to be denominated a bore. Now, in order to diſcriminate between the one and the other, I have divided the ſubject of BORING into eight different ſpecies, as follow, viz.

A pod, pumper, gouge, auguile,
ſcrew, corkſcrew, and gimblet, taphorer,

to be uſed and diſpoſed of as follow:

1ſt. When a gentleman ſo forgets himſelf as to trouble the company with a long, dull and unintereſting ſtory, it is in future to be called a pod, and derives its name from pod auger.

2d. If any one directly, or indirectly, ſhall open a way, or cauſe another to occupy the company's time with a pod, ſuch a ſpecies ſhall be entitled a gouge.

3d. Provided you make application to your neighbor, in a dunning ſtile, and your inceſſant demands are the opcasion of his testily throwing you down the money, by no means call this a bore, for it is evidently a screw.

4th. Whenever a gentleman happens to be in company, and hobbyhorsically engrosses the time with a crooked story, that is, a story fraught with circumlocutions and perplexities, this is universally to be called a corkscrew.

5th. A dull, insipid, inanimate narrative is called a trimmer.

6th. When a lady's reputation, or any other subject of a delicate texture is bored in a manner not altogether consistent with decency and decorum, it must be called a wimble. N. B. This word is entirely of the feminine gender.

7th. When any one in a high spirited strain of egotism entertain a company, climacterically, with the superiority of his own accomplishments, &c. such conduct is to be called a tap-borer.

8th. A narration once begun and carried on in such a profound, round-about, superexcellent manner that neither the person who is speaking, nor those who hear, know any thing of the subject; then it is to be called a pumper, from pump borer. N. B. This species of boring is much used in Newark.

Thus, mr. printer, I have given you at large the innovation that I mean to struggle for; and I hope that the gentlemen for whose particular purposes I have now taken up my pen, will be particularly careful in discriminating between one species and another, so as to apply them properly, and, in future, assume a more dignified appearance than they have hitherto done in chusing a cognomen for a hobby-horse.

I am, &c. A BORER.

Newark, April 5.

NEW YORK, January 18.

New Goal, (in the fields) Jan. 10, '98.

A true and surprising account of the apparation or ghost of a woman, that has appeared several nights in the New Goal, to the great terror and affright of the prisoners, many of whom are ready to affirm the truth of it on oath.

Capt. Fith declares that for several nights past, the apparition of a woman has haunted the goal from room to room, this and the last week, followed and encircled by a radient light, dressed in a white flowing robe, and turban on her head, seeming of a pleasing but dejected countenance. Capt. Fith declares that about 12 o'clock on Friday night this apparition came to his bedside, and drew the curtains, looking stedfastly on him for some time, which so affrighted him, that he adjured her in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, to tell him who she was, and why she came in "so questionable a shape," when she, casting a look of sorrow, accompanied with most ineffable sweetness gradually disappeared in the sight of several other prisoners who were in the room, and are ready to testify the truth of what is here advanced.

Mr. Miller, another debtor in the same room, going to the upper hall, about one in the morning, was met by the same woman who pulled him by the coat; which so alarmed and frightened him that he stood petrefied as a statue; when he came a little to himself he saw her gradually advance to the window, from which she vanished. He then called to the watchman to ask him if he had seen it, he declared he did, and that he had seen it vanish from the same window several nights successively.

Mr. Miller further declares, that after she was gone, a large globe of fire of the most beautiful and diversified colours rolled up and down the hall for the space of five minutes; and then of a sudden burst with a dreadful explosion, which left him in total darkness, which still affrighted him worse than the first rencounter of the apparition; when making but one step from the top of the stairs to the bottom, he recovered his room in a condition of undescribable terror.

The Friday following Mr. Evens being asleep in his bed, was suddenly awakened by something drawing open the curtains of his bed, when he perceived the figure of a beautiful woman arrayed in white, looking stedfastly on him, which much alarmed him; he communicated his fear to another man who was in the same bed with him, who also saw it with terror and astonishment. It continued a considerable time by the bedside in a contemplative posture, often putting her hand on the left side of her robe, which seemed to be tinged with blood, and then heaving a deep sigh, vanished through the wall.

Mr. Hewit a few evenings after this, in the dead of the night being alarmed in his sleep, suddenly leaped out of bed, & the first thing presented to his view was the apparition of this woman, who with the most placid countenance seemed to claim his pity; but frightened to greatest degree at so uncommon an appearance, he leaped again into bed, covering himself over head and ears, with every particle of the bed furniture that was within his grasp. In a minute after, this apparition disappeared, which was accompanied by a solemn hollow, rumbling noise, leaving him in "The utmost exacerbation of human nature."

The prisoners in general further declare, that almost every night about 10 o'clock there appears a large ball of fire at intervals, which illuminats every room in the goal for a time.

Sequel of the above, from a late paper.

I wonder what it means, has been vociferated by a thousand tongues. The fact is, a young married woman, whose husband was confined for debt, despairing of other means the (creditor being uncharitable and stubborn) conjured up the ghost, and trolling the secret with a confidential printer, the account was printed before it was slipped abroad, and immediately put into the hawkers hands for sale. The project succeeded, business was suspended—the multitude flocked about the goal. And here the hawkers were at their posts, vending their bills of the appearances and performances of the ghost. The debtor's wife having in a short time, raised a sufficient sum to satisfy his creditors, and to gladden his heart with a nourishing repast—miss puss was let out of the bag, and the abashed multitude returned one to his stall and the other to his merchandize.

BOSTON, February 17.

Capt. Cook, from Provincetown, (Cape Cod) informs, that a person who calls himself Gridley, was apprehended, (from a variety of circumstances appearing against him) as being concerned in an attrocious business, of which the following are particulars, as related. A M. Barker and his son, were proceeding into the country for the purpose of purchasing a farm. They had mustered together about 1500 dollars—had got nearly as far as Rochester, when, on stopping at a tavern at the close of day, with intent to pass the night, they remarked three men who behaved in an extraordinary manner. They were alarmed, and urged the landord to compel them to depart; but he replied, that from the nature of his business he was necessitated to entertain such as made application. The farmer and his son then concluded to go to the next public house, which was about 12 miles distant. They had arrived but a few minutes at this second place of accommodation, when the three suspicious men entered. This increased the fears of the unwelcome guests. He made the same request to this unfolder, as to the former one; and had much the same reply, adding however, that he also suspected the men had bad intentions, offered the travellers a room to themselves, and the use of two pistols and a cutlass, which were accepted; and the family soon after retired to rest. The farmer did not sleep. About midnight a knocking was heard at the chamber door. The farmer demanded what was wanted. It was said that a saddle was left in the room, which it was necessary to have immediately. There was no candle in the room and the person at the door were desired entrance. Immediately the door was hastily open, and the three villains appeared at the threshold. The farmer instantly fired and shot one. The remaining two continued to advance, when the second pistol was discharged, and mother of the rascals fell, the son at the same moment struck the other a severe blow upon the forehead—and he retreated with precipitation, and for that time escaped.—On looking into the other rooms of the house, it was discovered that the villains had murdered the landlord, previous to attacking the chamber which held the (pitied countryman and his son. To this effect is the account we have heard.

HARRISBURGH, (Penn.) Feb. 14.

A curious stone mould for running musket & rifle bullets, was found in digging a well, near 30 feet below the surface of the earth, at Cox's town, 4 miles from this borough a few days since. It is remarkable to a reflecting mind, how such a curiosity could have been deposited there, as it lay several feet under a solid rock, thro' which the workmen were obliged to penetrate, to procure water. A spectator observed, that at the time of the flood, as there were no muskets, he thot it probable that it was used to run marbles for the use of Noah's crew.

WEST-NIAGARA, April 6.

At a late hour on Saturday night last, Mr. John M'Ewen with two others put out to go to his sloop lying off at anchor in the river; early on Sunday morning their skiff was taken up, drifted to shore opposite to town. The men are, undoubtedly, drowned.

Mr. Printer,

HAVING observed an advertisement offering a reward of 200 dollars for the apprehension of mr. ALLAN M'NABB, who made his escape from the gaol of this town, on the night of the 18 last. It becomes impossible to do such publicks to the intentions of humanity, & the dictates of truth, as to suppress them on this occasion. The advertisement alluded to is couched in language far from being meaty and ingenuous; in order, therefore, that the public mind may not be prepossessed, necessity demands a brief relation of the facts, which have taken place between mr M'Nabb and mr. J. Edwards, and which have caused mr. M'Nabb to partake the step which he has. It is a saying as just as it is frequent, that one story appears to be true, till the other be heard. The facts then are these—Mr. M'Nabb came into this province (to this place) about four or five years since, with as flattering prospects as most men can in the beginning a family at the time, it of course became necessary to have intercourse with the merchants to procure such things as might be requisite for comfort and convenience; among the rest mr. M'Nabb connected himself with mr. Edwards, who resided for a considerable period of time was the only person to whom he applied to transact his pecuniary concerns, and to supply his family with various articles from his store. Suffice it to say, that in the course of 3 or 4 years, mr. Edwards' account against mr. M'Nabb amounted to two hundred & 30 or 40 pounds, provincial currency. By this time mr. M'Nabb's prospects got ballanced, his hopes disappointed, and his circumstances distressed; to many, so much so, that it was impracticable for him to pay the amount of his debt to mr Edwards immediately. Mr. Edwards grew uneasy, & finally commenced an action against mr. M'Nabb, & obtained a judgment the beginning of the last year for the amount of his debt. Mr. M'Nabb had now nothing to support his family on but his half pay as a lieutenant of dragoons: he willing to satisfy mr. Edwards, but by what means could he do it? mr. E. was determined to be satisfied with nothing short of the money, & such terms as mr. M'N. could not give: he offered mr. Edwards no more than the half of his half pay during his life, till the debt should be liquidated, but no, that would not accede to; he insisted that mr M'N. should secure to him half the amount of this half pay, or a sum equal to it, immediately, or should he live or die. Such terms mr M'N would not, could not agree to; the consequence was an execution against his person, issued in September last; he was taken and his bail have been confined in the gaol of this district.

This short detail of facts incontrovertiable, has never been given the public—it was known that mr. M'N. was arrested and imprisoned at the suit of mr E. but the particulars now made known were not generally heard of. Is every man apply the circumstances of mr. M'N's case to himself, and ask his own heart what other remedy he would have pursued in a like situation. A diligent prosperminded person left to himself, a close imprisonment awaited on the one hand, on the other a family distressed to be supported; no hopes could be there entertained of satisfying the craving demand of a restless creditor. It is to the public the appeal is made, and that public will impartially decide whether the conduct of mr. M'N. has not been such as a man of the strictest probity and honor would have adopted under the pressure of similar misfortune.

JOHN VERMILYAE.

☞ ALL persons indebted to the printer for, or on account of printing, are requested to make payment before the first of May ensuing, that a settlement may be made with mr. S. Tiffany, who is to discontinue his concern on that day.

ANECDOTE.

A Parson, having once made a great preachment about miracles, observed that the prophet Jonah was three days and three nights in the belly of a Quail! he never took the least notice of the blunder, until he came down from the pulpit, and was whispered in the ear, by his clerk, who with becoming modesty and submission, told the learned preacher, that he mistook a Quail for a Whale!—Jatsy you fool, reply'd the shrewd parson, the miracle's the greater!

EAST-INDIES.

Asiatic Mirror, April 12, 1797.

By captain Weatherall, we have accounts of a dreadful earthquake that happened on the west coast of Sumatra, on the 20th of February: the vibratory shocks of this earthquake are stated on competent authority, to have continued for three minutes, and to have returned at intervals, during a space of three hours from its beginning, till the shocks had completely ceased.

At Padang, the houses of the inhabitants are almost totally destroyed; & the public works much damaged. The town Padang, lying at anchor in the river, was thrown, by the sudden rise of the sea, upwards of three miles in shore where the still remains. The number of lives lost at Padang on this melancholy occasion, exceed three hundred. Of these, some were crushed under the ruins of falling houses; some were literally entombed alive by the earth closing upon them, and others were drowned by the sudden eruption of the waters of the ocean.

The effects of this awful convulsion of nature, do not appear to have extended to the northward. Tapanoolly as at that place little or no damage was sustained. It appears to have come from the southward, and is supposed to have extended as far as Bencoolen; but no accounts having been received at Tapanoolly, or Padang, from the southward, between the time of the occurrence of the earthquake, and the sailing of the capt. Weatherall from Padang, the extent of this calamity has not been ascertained.

At Natal, the residence of a subordinate of Bencoolen, very considerable damage was sustained, and several houses thrown down, but no lives were lost. It is however, much to be feared, that when the particulars are collected from the different quarters on the west coast, where the earthquake was felt, that the sum, both of lives and property destroyed, will be much greater than yet apprehended.

DUBLIN, Dec. 29.

On Saturday passports were sent off by the commissioners for French prisoners, for a French agent to come to this country, to superintend and have charge of the provisioning of the French prisoners. It is now agreed upon between the two countries, that the prisoners of each shall be maintained at the costs of their respective countries, the markets of both being open to the agent residing therein. The prisoners in both are likewise to be kept in two or three places of general rendezvous in place of being scattered over the country as heretofore. This country will save near half a million a year by this arrangement.

HOUSE of LORDS, January 11.

Lord Greenville brought down to the house the following message from his majesty:

"G. R.

"His majesty thinks proper to acquaint the house of lords, that his majesty has received various advices of preparations made, and measures taken in France, apparently in pursuance of a design openly and repeatedly professed of attempting the invasion of these kingdoms.

"His majesty is firmly persuaded, that by the zeal, courage and exertions of his subjects, struggling for whatever is most dear to them, such an enterprize, attempted, will terminate in the confusion and ruin of those who may be engaged in it. But his majesty, in his anxious concern for the safety and welfare of his faithful people, feels it incumbent on him to omit no suitable precaution which may contribute to their defence.

"His majesty, therefore, in pursuance of the act passed for providing for the augmention of the militia, has thought it right to make this communication to the house of lords, to the end, that his majesty may cause the said militia or such part thereof, as he shall think necessary, to be drawn out and embodied, and to march as occasion shall require."

The message being read,

Lord Greenville moved that an humble address be presented to his majesty, thanking him for his gracious message, and promising the determination of the house to adopt such efficacious measures as the exigencies of the times require. This motion was put and agreed to, nem. di's.

LONDON, Dec. 25.

Col. Nesbitt is appointed commander in chief of the British troops in St. Domingo. That part of the regiment of Hompesch, in the isle of Wight, as well as that which is at present in Portugal, are to reinforce our troops in that colony.

January 1.

It will be seen by our parliamentary proceedings on Saturday, that the regular military force of the country is about to receive an augmentation from the supplementary militia, of at least 20,000 men.

The present situation of affairs in the French metropolis are said to be such, that immediate and important changes are inevitable; each of the hostile factions around Paris with their partisans, and under pretext of augmenting the levies in the western provinces, draw from the frontiers, towards the capital, such corps as they think affected to their respective interests.—The army in general is devoted to Barras and his colleagues. Reubel and his sanguinary associate have a decided majority in the citizens of Paris, to great, indeed, that Buonaparte, from considerations to his personal safety, was prevented from appearing in the public streets.

In our paper of the 26th ult. we mentioned a plan for the invasion of this country by the French, of which citizen Monge is said to be the projector. Of this plan we give the following as the outline:

"Thirty rafts are to be built; they are to be composed of enormous quantities of timber, connected in the strongest manner; they are to be provided with parapets of timber and hides, cannon proof, with artillery, and furnaces to heat the red hot balls; they are to be navigated with sails, oars and rudders; each is to bring over 10, 000 men, making in the whole 300, 000, with a due proportion of horses and field artillery; they are to proceed from different ports of France, and to attempt a landing in different parts of this island. Their red hot balls are to serve to repel the attack of a fleet of battle ships while their own immersion will render them incombustible. Their small draft of water will enable them to approach the flattest coast; their enormous bulk, covering a great number of waves, will prevent their being much agitated by the motion of the sea; and by means of draw bridges affixed to them, each raft will disgorge its myriad upon the English shore!"

LONDON, Dec. 25.

Jan. 8. The following information was taken from a morning print:

Government, convinced of the dangers which at present hang over us, are taking the necessary steps to guard against the threatened vengeance of the enemy. The most able and skilful officers, both naval and military, are now engaged in forming a plan for the defence of the country, and instructions are preparing for the several commanders of the regular militia, and volunteer corps throughout the kingdom, pointing out the places to which they are to repair and the means they are to adopt, in order to check the progress of the enemy, should they be able to effect a landing. The following are a few of the leading particulars of the plan, which, it is understood, ministers mean to adopt:

The Irish are to be invited to furnish horses and waggons to draw the artillery and ammunition, for which liberal premiums will be given.

"Besides a strong corps of reserve, three armies are to be formed for the defence of the capital—two of fifteen thousand, and one in the centre, for which Colchester is deemed the proper station, of thirty thousand strong.

"The utmost care is taken in the preparation of these instructions to limit their number, so that they may not get into improper hands.

"Four particular landing places, on the Southern Coast, are designated as the most likely to afford the enemy a footing, which of course, are to be provided with the most formidable means of defence."

WEST-NIAGARA, April 14.

THE packet Halifax arrived at New-York the 16th March: she sailed from Falmouth 25th Jan. bringing papers to the 20th. The captain informs that the coasts were well guarded, and that no apprehension was had on the score of an invasion. The papers state that the new assessed triple tax bill is gone into effect; that it will not affect the poor, as its objects are houses, servants, coatches and other luxuries; that there was a prompt obedience to orders; the naval armaments encreased, and the sailors truly loyal; the spirit of the nation high; many offers in cash had been made by individuals, particularly 200, 000l. by his majesty, 20,000l. by the duke of Bedford, 10,000l. by lady Cavendish; and that there had been 228 promotions.

The accounts we have given this day are taken from the mail due on Thursday of last week, which did not arrive until Thursday last, being one week late, owing to the extreme height of the streams and other hindrances common to the season. The post says, that the Genesee flats are overflown, and the water past 3 miles wide!

The American commissioners at Paris have officially gave it as their opinion that the French will not accredit them.

KINGSTON (Jam.) Jan. 6.

By the brig Jupiter, from Cork, last from Lisbon, from whence she sailed the 16th of Nov. we learn, that the Spanish ambassadors had been ordered to quit Paris, and a declaration of war by France against Spain was daily expected. Ld. St Vincent, with 15 sail of the line, was in the Tagus, and the British troops had possession of all the forts and garrisons on the river.

Three large ships, full of troops, entered the harbor of Lisbon on the day captain Jones sailed.

NEW-YORK, March 12.

Yesterday arrived here his majesty's packet Hallifax, capt. Rowe, in 44 days from Falmouth.

A gentleman passenger on board, who left London on the 16th January, informs, that Mr. Pinckney had wrote his friends, requesting them to procure lodgings for him in London, as he intended to leave Paris shortly.

CONGRESS.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Monday, March 5.

The following important message, with the documents accompanying it, were received from the president of the United States:

Gentlemen of the senate, and gentlemen of the house of representatives,

The first dispatches from our envoys extraordinary, since their arrival at Paris were received at a late hour the last evening. They are are all in a character which will require some days to be decyphered, except the last which is dated the 8th of January, 1798. The contents of this letter are of so much importance to be immediately made know to congress, and to the public, especially to the merchantile part of our fellow citizens, that I have tho't it my duty to communicate them to the house without loss of time.

JOHN ADAMS.

United States, March 5th, 1798.

Paris, Jan. 8, 1798.

DEAR SIR,

We embrace an unexpected opportunity to send you the "Redacteur," of the 4th inst. containing the message of the directory to the council of five hundred, urging the necessity of the law to declare as good prize, all neutral ships [illegible] on board merchandizes & commodities, the production of England, or of the English possessions, that the flag, as they term it, may no longer cover the property. And declaring further that the ports of France except in case of distress, shall be shut against all neutral ships which, in the course of their voyage, shall have touched at an English port. A commission has been appointed to report on the message, and it is expected that a decree will be passed in conformity to it.

Nothing new has occurred since our last, in date of the twentyfourth ultimo. We can only repeat that there exists no hope of our being officially received by this government, or that the objects of our mission will be in any way accomplished.

We have the honor to be, with great respect, your most obedient servants,

C. C. PINCKNEY,
J. MARSHALL,
E. GERRY.

Timothy Pickering, esq.

(TRANSLATION.)

Message of the executive directory to the council of five hundred, of the 15th Nivose, 6th year, (Jan. 5, 1798.)

Citizen Representatives,

To day, the 15th Nivose, and at the very hour at which the executive directory addresses this message to you, the municipal administrators, the justices of the peace, the commissaries of the directory, and the supervisors of the customs are proceeding, in all the chief places of the departments, and in all the principal communes of the republic, to seize the English merchandise now in France, or introduced upon its territory in contravention of the law of the 10th Brumair. 5th year, (Oct. 31, '96.)

Such is the first act by which, when peace is given to the continent, the war declared a long time since against England is about to assume its genuine character. The French will not suffer a power who strives to found its prosperity upon the misfortunes of other nations, to raise its commerce upon the ruin of that of other people, and which aspiring to the domination of the seas, wishes to introduce every where articles of its own manufacture, and to receive nothing from foreign industry, any longer to enjoy the fruit of its culpable speculation.

The English government has kept in pay, during the war, the coalesced forces, with the produce of her manufactories. It has violated all the principles of the law of nations, in order to shackle the relations of neutral powers: it has caused to be seized the provisions, grain and commodities which it supposed to be destined for France; it has declared contraband every thing which is tho't useful to the republic: it desired to starve it. All the citizens demand vengeance upon it.

When it had to fear the capture of vessels sailing under its flag, it corrupted foreign captains to induce them to take on board their vessels English merchandize, and thus to introduce it, by cunning, by fraud or otherwise, into foreign states, and especially into the French republic.

The neutral powers should have perceived, by this conduct, their merchants took a part in the war, and that they lent assistance to one of the belligerent powers.

We serve a party as well when we procure for him the means of augmenting his forces, as when we unite ourselves to those which he has. The neutral powers should have perceived that England, by stopping the vessel of others powers, laden in their respective ports, and destined for France, by permitting articles coming from her own manufactories alone to circulate aimed at an extensive commerce, and that it would be necessary to seek reparation for such an attempt.

The ordinance of the marine, and the regulation of 1704, have declared to be good prize, the vessels and their cargoe in which is found English merchandise belonging to enemies. These provisions should be extended. The interest of Europe demands it.

The directory thinks it urgent and necessary to pass a law declaring that the condition of vessels in what concerns their quality of neutral or enemy, shall be determined by their cargo. shall no longer covered by the flag; in consequence, that every vessel found at sea having on board English merchandize and commodities, as her cargo, whole or in part, shall be declared to be good prize, whosoever may be the proprietor of these commodities & merchandise; which shall be reputed contraband, for this cause alone, that the come from England or her possessions.

It would be useful to declare, at the same time, that, except in case of distress, the ports of the republic shall be shut to all foreign vessels, which, in the course of their voyage, shall have entered those of England.

The executive directory requests you citizens representatives, to adopt these measures. No neutral or allied power can mistake their object; nor complain of them, unless it be already delivered up to England. The infallable effect of the measure is to enhance the value of the product of their soil and of their industry, to encrease the prosperity of their commerce, to repeal every thing that comes from England, and essentially to influence the conclusion of the war.

Such are the motives which induce the executive directory to invite you, citizens representatives, to take the object of this message into the most prompt consideration.

P. BARRAS, president,
LAGARDE, sec. gen.

This message was ordered to be printed and committed to a committee of the whole on the state of the union.

The following contains the articles which are to be considered as British manufactures, according to the late decree of the French government.

1. All kinds of cotton velvets; all stuffs and woollen cloths, whether made of cotton or hair, wholly or mixed; all quiltings, dimities, nankeens, and muslinets, spun woollens and cottons, and English carpets.

2. All kinds of hosiery, cotton, wool or mixed.

3. Buttons of all kinds.

4. Every kind of plated ware, hard ware, cutlery, clock work, and other iron, steel, pewter, copper, brass, cast iron, sheet iron, tin and other metals, polished or rough, pure or mixed.

5. Leather, tanned, curried or prepared, worked or not worked; carriages put together or in pieces; harness and every other saddlery article.

6. Ribbons, hats, gauzes, shawls, known to be English.

7. All sorts of skins for gloves, breeches or waistcoats, also those articles when manufactured.

8. All kinds of glass and crystal ware, besides watch glasses, spectacle glasses, &c.

9. All sugar refined both in loaves and in powder.

10. All sorts of earthen wire, known by the name of English ware.

OF ENGLAND.

By a report to the president, by the secretary of state, and published by order of the house, it appears that the case of 57 vessels referred to sir William Scott, the king's advocate-general, and dr. John Nichol, the advocate retained on the part of the United States, had been determined by those gentlemen, advantageously to the claimants. The sums awarded were paid on the 28th of last July, and amount to 33,419 : 1 : 11 sterling. The report further states that of 15 causes, in which on the 29th July last (the date of the latest communication) restitution had been decreed by the board of commissioners, and it had been paid, amounting to 21,944 : 10 : 4—so that the whole amount paid is, in sterling, 55,162 : 12 : 3.

LONDON.

Jan. 11. The intelligence from Radstadt, dated on the 27th ult. Count Metternich had delivered in a note to the French plenipotentiaries, remonstrating on the infraction of the line of neutrality, and on the occupation of Mentz; to which the French had returned no answer.

From the same place we learn, that the king of Prussia had communicated to the northern circle of the empire, an assurance which he had received from the French, that they would attempt no expedition against the northern part of Germany; the French envoys had likewise repeated to the deputies of several states of the empire, that they would undertake no expedition against Hanover.

Tempest in the Dutch convention.

In a discussion in the Dutch convention of the 11th December, on the subject of their navy, there has hapened a shameful fracas without example. "About 30 members rose greatly agitated in the same instant, rushed into the middle of the hall, and were on the point of coming to blows. It was in vain the president thundered out "to order to order." The galleries took an active part in these violent agitations, and it was some time before peace was restored by adjourning the question to next day."

January 13.

The king yesterday consented to the assessed tax-bill; and parliament adjourned to Feb. 13.

There is to be a grand fast throughout Great-Britain next month, to implore the divine protection and success on his majesty's arms.

The proprietors of estates in St. Domingo, resident in London, have voted 400,000l. to the government towards the expences incurred in that island.

WEST-NIAGARA, April 21.

An augmentation of the British army has been made; and the navy daily increases in number and strength. The ships of war, in commission, on the 1st Jan. 1798, amounted to 130 sail of the line, 18 fifty gun ships, 165 frigates and 266 sloops of war. Total, in and out of commission, 746.

A squadron of 17 sail of the line, with frigates, armed brigs cutters, &c. under the command of admirals Gardner and Kingsmill, are allotted for the protection of the coast of Ireland.

A French paper entitled "Defender of Truth," was denounced to the council of 500, as slandering the constituted authorities.

The Redacteur, a famous French paper has been divested of its officiality, by the directory, for publishing a piece ridiculing the people of Great-Britain. The directors declaring that they venerated the people, but only despised the government of that country.

Major-general Gansevoort's, or the western division of New-York militia, consists of the counties of Albany, Otsego, Herkimer, Ontario, Steuben, Schoharie, Montgomery, Saratoga, and Tioga, which contain 25,787 men enrolled; his proportion of the 80,000 required by congress, is 3,248, being nearly one eighth; or, about one tenth of those able to bear arms.

The invasion threatened by France is a business more to be wished than feared, as we cannot entertain a hope of peace with that extravagant foe, much short of their extirpation, the English Channel is, perhaps, as convenient a place for doing the work as any that at present can be named, for here we can kill and bury at the same stroke.

The affairs of the United-States and France seem now to be haftening to an important crisis.

AN ITALIAN SONG.

DEAR is my little native vale,
The ringdove builds and murmurs there;
Close by my cot she tells her tale
To every passing villager.
The squirrel leaps from tree to tree
And shells his nuts at liberty.

In orange-groves and myrtle-bowers,
That breathe a gale of fragrance round;
I charm the fairy-footed hours
With my lov'd lute's romantic sound,
Or crowns of living laurels weave,
For those who win the race at eve.

The shepherd's horn at break of day,
The vallet danc'd in twylight glade,
The canzonet and roundelay
Sung in the silent greenwood shade;
These simple joys which never fail,
Shall bind me to my native vale.

OLD AGE.

OLD AGE is a ſtate, to which, unleſs prevented by death, we are all approaching. It will be wiſdom therefore, to contemplate the diſadvantages that attend it, and make the beſt defence againſt them in our power.

After having paſſed the meridian of life, our ſenſes continually grow more and more obtuſe, and the pleaſures which are conveyed by them, are of conſequence diminiſhed. Extreme old age is almoſt a medium between the vigor of youth and utter inſenſibility. The appetite then grows inſenſible to the delicacies of food; the ear is leſs charmed with the melody of ſound, and the eye with the beautiful landſcape. The purſuits of avarice and ambition are relinquiſhed, and the gay ſcenes of youth are forgotten. Every external object is overſpread with a gloom.—The opening of the ſpring reminds the aged perſon, of what he was once; and the penſive aſpect of autumn warns him of that winter which will ſoon overtake him. He relliſhes no longer the pleaſures of conviviality; the luſtre is departed from the eye, and the cheek is deſerted of its youthful bloom; the blood glides ſlowly through the veins, a languor ſeizes the limbs, and the whole frame preſages ſpeedy diſſolation.

But are there no advantages attending this ſtate, and no remidies againſt the evils of it? Do the pleaſures of the mind vaniſh with thoſe of ſence; and is here no comfort, in anticipating the joys of futurity? If there is not, the aged are of all men moſt miſerable. To the view of him, whoſe enjoyment depends wholly on the objects of this world, old age muſt preſent a dreary waſte, where there is not a ſingle verdant tree, to relief the eye of the traveller.

Let us not conſider what precautions are to be uſed to prevent, or at leaſt, to alleviate the evils here contemplated.

As the mind is expanded, and the ideas multiplied, the leſs will be ſuffered from want of variety. All kinds of uſeful knowledge will be of eſſential ſervice, as they will afford an opportunity of enjoying a larger circle of acquaintance, and of converſing with men of different profeſſions. To old people, this is a matter of conſiderable importance, as they generally find but few aſſociates, and ſuffer much from ſolitude.

Habits of benevolence and cheerfulneſs are eſſential to a happy old age; by theſe, a perſon partakes of the enjoyment of others, and renders himſelf agreeable to all.—He is happy in reflecting, (if he can make the reflection) that his family, educated by his care, and enfluenced by his good example, lead virtuous lives, and are becoming uſeful to ſociety. He is pleaſed at the proſperity of his neighborhood, town, or country in general, or to look back on the inſtances, in which he has been inſtrumental in promoting the knowledge, virtue, or happineſs of others. A peculiar ſatisfaction will ariſe from a conſciouſneſs of having viſited the widow, and fatherleſs, in their affliction, and having been careful, in the maintenance of good works. The eaſtern ſage in his adverſity, found relief from conſidering his paſt religious conduct. "If," ſaid he, "I have withheld the poor from his deſire, or cauſed the eyes of the widow to fail: If I have eaten my morſel myſelf alone, and the fatherleſs have not eaten thereof: If I have ſeen any periſh for want of clothing, or any poor without covering: If his loins have not bleſſed me, and he were not warmed with the fleece of my ſheep: If I have lifted up my hand againſt the fatherleſs, when I ſaw my help in the gate: then let my right arm fall from my ſhoulder blade, and mine arm be broken from the bone."

Like him did the courageous and independent Samuel, a little before his death, make is ſolemn proteſtation of his innocent life—I am old and grey headed: I have walked before you from my youth: behold here I am: witneſs againſt me before the Lord.—Whom have I defrauded? Or whom have I oppreſſed? Or of whoſe hands have I received any bribe to blind mine eyes therewith, and I will reſtore it.

FROM A NEW YORK PAPER.

COMMUNICATION.

IN the late interview between Buonaparte and the French directory the citizen miniſter of foreign affairs, who preſented him, told the general "that a new enemy was calling on him. Let the genius of Buonaparte make him ſoon expiate his hatred and tyranny, and dictate to the tyrants of the ſea, a peace worthy of the glory of the French of republic."

Buonaparte then delivered to the preſident, the emperor's ratification of the treaty, and among other things, ſaid,—"this peace ſecures the liberty the proſperity, and the glory of the republic."

An orater who not long before made a ſpeech before the aſſembled directory tho't differently. He declared no doubt at the deſire of the Directory,—"that the government of Great-Britain and that which prevails in France, were incompatible, and could not both exiſt."

Buonaparte, however, perſiſts in thinking otherwiſe. He adds and his words are remarkable, "When the happineſs of the French people ſhall be firmly ſettled on the baſis of the beſt and wiſeſt laws, all Europe will be free." Not one word does he mention of the propoſed conqueſt—but, conceiving that under the preſent government of France, the laws are not the beſt and wiſeſt—and conſequently that freedom cannot be ſaid to exiſt there as it does in England, where the public felicity and individual ſafety depend on known laws, and not on the variable caprices of men—he wiſhes a change, and hopes, that when peace is once eſtabliſhed, and France freed from the preſent revolutionary tyranny, not only ſhe, but all Europe will be free; that is, freed from the deſpotic, unwarranted interferences of the terrible republic, in the domeſtic affairs of the reſpective nations of Europe.

After having atchieved the conqueſt of Italy, made peace with the Emperor, and guaranteed by ſolemn treaty, the exiſtence of the new Italian republic, he ſeems to think of reſting from his labours—he does not incline to ſtep acroſs the channel and overrun England. The Directory, however, is otherwiſe diſpoſed.

"Citizen general!" ſays Barras the preſident, "crown ſo glorious a career by a conqueſt which the nation owes to its outraged dignity. Go—and by the puniſhment you inflict on the cabinet of London, ſtrike terror into all governments which ſhall dare to doubt the power of a nation of Freemen, of Frenchmen, which are only ſynonimous terms. Go!—puniſh in London crimes which have remained unpuniſhed too long. Numerous votaries of liberty wait your arrival. You will find no enemy but vice and wickedneſs? They alone ſupport that perfidious government. Strike it down!—and let its downfall inform the world, that if the French people are the benefactors of Europe, they are alſo the avengers of the rights of nations!"

A ſtoniſhing nonſenſe!

The citizen general is to find no enemy but vice and wickedneſs, ſupporting the Britiſh government. 300,000 men in arms for the protection of their property from the fraternal embrace—men who have much to loſe, who dread the contributionary ſcenes of Belgium, Bavaria, Italy, &c. and who prefer the liberty they now enjoy to that propoſed for them by a nation of freemen—theſe, with nineteen twentieths of the people, are, according to citizen Barras, a maſs of wickedneſs and vice; and the parricides who, to riſe, into importance, would do any thing, however villainous and atrocious, are of courſe the venerable, eſtimable phalanx of votaries to liberty!

Buonaparte had too much good ſenſe not to ſee the exceſſive folly of all this highflown bombaſtic ſtuff—and was ſilent.

"Let the downfall of the Britiſh government announce to the world that the French people are the benefactors of Europe!"

The downfall of other governments has clearly evinced this—it is unneceſſary perhaps that England ſhould know it by experience. The exceſſive exactions upon Belgium—Holland—parts of Germany—Italy—Portugal—and other countries, can ſufficiently tell what ſort of benefactors this nation of freemen are! They know England is rich, and that Buonaparte is no bad hand at collecting money, ſtatues, and pictures. Hence they want him over there to liberate the people—not ſo much from the tyranny of government as from the gold of which this freeſt but not richeſt nation on earth ſtands ſo much in need.

THE ORACLE.

WEST-NIAGARA, May 5.

The editor has once more an opportunity of laying before his readers, the moderate demand by that daring and perfidious nation, the French republic, to the United States of America, of 50,000*l.* or 222,222 dollars, as a douceur, for a promiſe of an interview! and a loan of 32,000,000 florins, or 12, 800,000 dollars, which if not acceded to, their next ſtep will be to "free that country," as their is no other nation but itſelf that enjoys "true liberty;" but it is the reverſe; they are the moſt contemptible ſlaves exiſting. There is nothing they dare call their own—not even their ſouls—for their tyrants have decreed that they have none; but he finds that the Americans prefer an exchange of the 13,022,222 in talli, as the more ready change.

By Thurſday's Mail,

Philadelphia, April 7.

After conſiderable diſcuſſion, the ſenate yeſterday determined to make public all the communications lately received by congreſs from the preſident of the United States, relative to our diſpute with France (except the inſtructions which were given by the executive to our commiſſioners,) by ordering 500 copies of the diſpatches to be printed, ſo that a few days will develope the ſecret, to be informed of which the public mind has for ſeveral days been very anxious.

To gatify, in ſome degree, that anxiety we give the following, as being what we have reaſon to believe a tolerable correct outline as far as it goes.

When the laſt diſpatches left our miniſters, they had not been, nor were they likely to be, acknowledged by the French directory. They had, however, had ſome conferences with two perſons (whoſe names are omitted by the preſident, and are deſignated by the letters X and Y,) who informed them that they were commiſſioned by Talleyrand Perigord, the miniſter for foreign affairs, to wait on the envoys extraordinary from the United States, to ſtate to them upon what terms an advantageous treaty might be made with the French directory. Theſe terms were, that in the firſt place, a Douceur of fifty thouſand Pounds ſterling ſhould be made to Talleyrand Perigord; and that as the directory were greatly in want of money, the United States muſt engage to purchaſe from them, as a debt of fifteen millions florins, due from the Batavian to the French republic (but pay,) by way of loan to the French X and Y ſtated that theſe were the only conditions upon which the American miniſters could expect a favourable reception from the directory.

X and Y dwelt much on the power and reſources of French republic, and of the conſequence which muſt inevitable enſue to the United States from a war with France, refering to the fate of Venice and other countries, whoſe views had been inimical to the intereſts of France. Adding, that the directory were well informed as to the divided ſtate of opinion in this country; and that the miſunderſtanding between the two republics had been owing to meaſures injurious to France, which had been brought forward and ſupported in the government of this country, by what we call the federal party, but by what they call the Britiſh faction.

That our miniſters had afterwards an interview with M. Perigord himſelf, who informed them, that before any negociation could take place, it was indiſpenſably neceſſary that the terms which had been propoſed to them by X and Y ſhould becomplied with.

It does not appear that our miniſters have held any commerce with any of the members of the Executive directory themſelves.

Our miniſters ſuſpect that Merlin, the miniſter of marine, is peculiarly intereſted in all prizes carried into French ports, and that it is not likely, therefore, that they will diminiſh in number.

FROM THE PHILADELPHIA GAZETTE.

A correſpondent aſſures us that the following may be depended upon as the leading points of the important communications from the preſident.

FIFTY thouſand pounds Sterling to Talleyrand Perigord, as a douceur, for a promiſe of an interview! but he would not engage for any reconciliation.

A loan required for thirty-two millions of florins (inſcriptions of Holland) which was then ſelling at ten ſhillings in the pound. This to be under a ſecret article of treaty, ſo as not to be known to Great-Britain.

When the amount of the French ſpoliations ſhall be known, double the ſum ſhall be lent by the United States to France, which ſhe will repay when convenient.

Queſtion, (by Mr. Marſhall,) How much money do you require?

Anſwer. As much as your people can pay!

Our commiſſioners ſaid, that the people of America had been warmly concerned for the eſtabliſhment of the liberties of France. That all the powers of Europe were againſt France, ſtill America has ſtood her friend—Notwithſtanding, the directory had ordered the ſpoliations to be committed upon us without cauſe, to a conſiderable amount—that the government of America was virtuous—that it had the moſt ardent diſpoſition to reconcile exiſting differences, and that they were willing to ſacrifice every thing not inconſiſtant with national honor and independence, to effect this deſired end—but that they had no orders to pay money.

The anſwer was, that the preſident of the United States had offended the French republic and the directory very much, in his ſpeech, at the opening of the extra-ſeſſion of congreſs, that they could not effect a reconciliation without money—that the government of France was terrible to its enemies, and to prove this, it was only neceſſary to view the ſituation of Venice, Hamburg, Geneva and Genoa.

Our commiſſioners anſwered them, that thoſe governments were ſmall, and near to France; but that the government of the United States was powerful within itſelf, and would not ſubmit its liberty without a ſtruggle.

To which it was replied, that the French had a ſtrong party in America, warmly attached to their cauſe. That it would be impoſſible for the United States, to carry on a war, becauſe the people were divided, and very unwilling to fight the French. That even money could not ſecure the whole number of the directory, becauſe Merlin received his pay better from another ſource.

Our envoys, that they ſuppoſed it was from maſters and owners of privateers to which they noded aſſent.

That X. Y. Z. and a lady, were employed to communicate with our commiſſioners, who ſaid that Talleyrand was powerful—had great influence in France and with the directory—and that he would probably retain his popularity for 6 months;—That it would be a very unfortunate ſituation for the U. S. and France to be engaged in war, when probably a party better diſpoſed to favour the intereſt of America might hereafter be admitted into the adminiſtration of France, and therefore it would be witer for the United States to pay large ſums of money than to make great preparations for war, which otherwiſe might be avoided—for why would you not pay France for a peace when you have already paid large ſums of money to the Indians and Algerines for the ſame purpoſe!

Boſton, March 28.

Capt. Roundy, from Liſbon, which he left about the middle of February, informs that a few days before he ſailed, an expreſs boat informed Earl St. Vincents, that the Spaniſh fleet were under ſail, from Cadiz. His lordſhip immediately made ſail, to join the ſquadron off that harbour, and according to accounts, had formed a conjuction; and that the whole fleet was within eight leagues of the Spaniſh. The latter was ſaid to be 23, and the Britiſh 22 ſail of the line ſtrong.

By new arrangements which have taken place in the government of the United States, one regiment of artillery is to be raiſed, for which the officers are now appointed, the garriſon of Oſwago to be abandoned, and that of Niagara, and the other weſtern poſts to be reinforced againſt the expected invaſion from Louiſiana.

☞ The legiſlature of this province, is to meet at YORK on the 28th inſtant.

☞ His honor the Preſident has been pleaſed to appoint RALFE CLENCH, eſq. regiſter to the ſurrogate court of the Home diſtrict.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the third, by the grace of God of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, king, defender of the faith, &c. &c. &c.

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS,

GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our proclamation bearing date the tenth day of March, we thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council to prorogue our provincial parliament, until the twentieth day of this preſent month of April, at which time in our town of YORK you were held and conſtrained to appear; but we taking into our royal conſideration the eaſe and convenience of our loving ſubjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council, to relieve you, and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforeſaid, hereby convoking, and by theſe preſents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the twenty-eighth day of May next enſuing, you meet us in our provincial parliament, in our town of York, there to take into conſideration the ſtate and welfare of our province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may ſeem neceſſary:—Herein fail not. In teſtimony whereof we have cauſed the great ſeal of our ſaid province to be hereunto affixed:—Witneſs the honorable PETER RUSSELL, preſident of our government of our ſaid province, this firſt day of May in the year of our Lord, one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety-eight, and the thirty-eighth of our reign.

BLANKS to be ſold at this office.

ALEXANDRIA, March 23.

A letter from Baltimore was yeſterday received by a gentleman of this town, which mentioned that our commiſſioners in Paris had detected a correſpondence between two of the members of congreſs of the Virginia repreſentation and the executive directory of France. What authority there is for ſuch an aſſertion, or what is the nature of the correſpondence, we are uncertain: at all events it is prudent to ſuſpend our judgement till the communications from Mr. Pinckney ſhall have been decyphered and laid before congreſs, or till ſomething on the ſubject ſhall be officially laid before the public, by the executive of the United States.

BALTIMORE. March 29.

We mentioned in the intelligencer of the 14th, the report of a war between Algiers and England.—From a converſation with capt. Daſhiel, we have obtained the following information on that ſubject:—About a twelve month ſince, an Engliſh ſhip of war and an Algerine veſſel ran foul of each other in the night; and the former engaged the latter, and killed ſeveral Algerines before they ceaſed firing. The dey, when acquainted with this circumſtance demanded 30,000 dollars per head for the men killed, which induced the Britiſh government to ſend over a commiſſioner to treat with the dey; this commiſſioner failed from Gibraltar in January but not being poſſeſſed with the contribution demanned, the Dey refuſed to receive him. Theſe circumſtances induced the people at Gibralter to hourly expect a declaration of war.

In conſequence of the detention by the Spaniards, of one of the American veſſels, bound with a load of contributory ſtores from the United States to Algiers, the Dey had demanded 80,000 dollars from Spain, for the damages which the cargo, ſuſtained. This the Spaniards refuſed to pay; and a declaration of war from the Dey immediately enſued. Capt. D. ſailed from Algiers in company with five ſail of the Dey's fleet, bound againſt the Spaniards.

The Algerines were very inquiſitive of capt. D. reſpecting the frigate which our government had promiſed them. They appeared to be diſpleaſed that ſhe had not arrived, and were diſſatisfied with many of the articles received from America, particularly the ſcantling. When the Dey was informed that a quantity of the boards were only eight inches wide, he ſent for the American conſul, and aſked him if his preſident thought "that the Dey wanted boards to make bird cages?"

PHILADELPHIA, March 29.

The ſenate yeſterday had before them a bill to authoriſe the executive to procure ſhips for the protection of our trade. The blank was filled up with twelve ſhips of 22 guns each.

The following reſolutions are ſtill before the ſenate of the United States.

Reſolved, that it is expedient to complete the fortifications of the ports and harbours of the United States, and effectually to garriſon the ſame, Reſolved, that it is expedient to raiſe a proviſional army, to be employed when neceſſary for internal ſecurity and defence.

Reſolved, that it is expedient to provide for ſupplying any deficiency exiſting or ariſing in the arms or military ſtores of the United States.

And reſolved, that the foregoing reſolutions be referred to the committee to whom was referred the Preſident's meſſage of the 19th inſt. as inſtructions to the said committee to prepare and report bills corresponding with the said resolutions, and in the same order in which they stand.

Extract of a letter from a merchantile house in London, to their friends in this city, dated London, 5th February, 1798.

"New instructions having been just issued to his majesty's ships and to privateers, which are interesting to you as neutrals, we take leave to subjoin a copy of the heads of them for your information.

"1st. That they shall bring in for lawful adjudication all vessels, with their cargoes that are laden with goods, the produce of any island or settlement belonging to France, Spain, or the United provinces, and coming directly from any port of the said islands or settlements to any port in Europe, not being a port of this kingdom, nor a port of that country, to which such ships, being neutral ships, shall belong.

"2d. That they shall bring in for lawful adjudication all ships, with their cargoes, that are laden with goods, the produce of the said islands or settlements, the property of which goods shall belong to subjects of France, Spain or the United Provinces, to whatsoever ports the same may belong.

"3d. That they shall seize all ships that shall be found attempting to enter any port of the said islands or settlements, that is, or shall be blockaded by the arms of his majesty, and shall send them in with their cargoes for a judication, according to the terms of the second article of the former instructions, bearing date the 8th day of June, 1793.

"4th. That they shall seize all vessels loaden wholly or in part with naval or military stores, bound to any port of the islands or settlements, and shall send them into some convenient port belonging to his majesty, in order that they, together with their cargoes, may be proceeded against according to the rules of the law of nations."

Extract of a letter received by a member of congress, dated Charleston, March 17th.

"The enclosed is from Timothy's paper of to-day. I sent to him to know on what authority it was so positively given—he said Messrs. Gardiner & co. had received letters from Pensacola, saying, that the French flag had been flying there for several days, and desiring them to charter, and send thither vessels to bring away the persons and property of some, who did not wish to remain under the French government."

From a Charleston paper of March 16.

FRENCH COLONIZATION.

It is no new idea that the terrible republic have contemplated the division and colonization of the United States; and we are enabled to announce upon the authority of letters, the credit of which are indubitable, that Louisiana and the Floridas have been ceded by Spain to France, and are now actually in her possession. This is a favourite accession to our allies, and a main step to the effecting of their purpose.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman dated Chickasaw Bluffs, Oct. 23, 1797, to his correspondent in this town.

"We shall in a few days embark for Natchez as the fort at this place, the erection of which detained us, was completed yesterday, and at twelve o'clock the American flag was displayed, accompanied with 15 discharges of cannon, at which time it received its name from capt. Guion—fort Adams—There will be an officer and a detachment of men left.

I dare say you have heard many various reports respecting us and the dons, but mutual peace and harmony has subsisted ever since our arrival at this place, and the same good disposition obtains at the Natchez. Baron de Caraondelet, the commandant there, wrote to capt. Guion, expressing great friendship, and offering houses for the accommodation of the American troops when they shall arrive at that place, but no assurance of a relinquishment of the fort.

"When col. Howard sailed with his gallies from the garrison on the opposite shore, reciprocal salutes were exchanged from the guns in our fort and their galley guns. The day preceding their departure, the colonel and officers gave us an elegant dinner, where nothing but the greatest hilarity and social harmoney prevailed during our stay. The claret which was liberally diffused seemed to absorb all national animosities and to inspire sentiments totally repugnant to political pickerings and malignant aspersions."

BOSTON, March 28.

Accounts from Rome are as late as January 1—at that time all was confusion and confusion. An immediate visit from the French was apprehended. The cardinals, priests and others were flying for safety—the aid of Heaven was invoked by prayers, fastings, and the suspension of public amusements—the emperor, the duke of Tuscany, the king of Spain, were called upon to intercede for the holy father with the "terrible republic."

A proclamation is issued by the president of the United States, recommending to the citizens of the union to observe Wednesday the ninth day of May next, as the day of solemn humiliation, fasting and prayer. The duty we owe to the Supreme Being of acknowledging, as a nation, our dependence upon his protection and blessing; the necessity of endeavouring to avert, by repentance and reformation, his just judgements against prevalent iniquity; and the present alarming crisis, arising from the prospect of a war with the French republic; are among the ostensible reasons of the president for calling upon his fellow citizens for a particular exertion and display of their piety and gratitude towards Heaven.

NEWARK, (N. J.) April 3.

We are authorised to inform the public, that a motion will be made at the annual town-meeting to be held in this town on Monday next, to take into consideration the alarming situation of this country, particularly so far as it relates to arming our merchant ships, and to remonstrate to the government of the union on the subject. We think it our duty to give this notice, that the citizens may be prepared to act on so important an occasion.

We likewise suggest to the inhabitants of the other towns in this state the propriety of their taking the same subject into consideration at the same time. We understand that many of the towns in the eastern states are pursuing this orderly method of expressing, like freemen, their sentiments on a subject on which their happiness so much depends.

ALBANY, April 13.

The Aurora, of Monday last, asserts—"It is a fact, that Mr. king's secretary lately arrived at Philadelphia, with, it is said, important dispatches, and it is also true that Mr. Liston's secretary shortly leaves this, for England, upon an errand also of importance."

A gentleman of Philadelphia, has received a letter from a person of information and respectability, dated St. Augustine, March 9. It makes not the least mention of the story relative to the taking possession of Florida by the French, which has been so prematurely, perhaps not without design, ushered in to the world.

THE ORACLE.

WEST-NIAGARA, May 12.

On the first of May, the volunteer company belonging to the 6 nations of Indians, assembled at the Mohawk village on the Grand River, amounting to 400, when they performed the various evolutions in a manner which met the plaudits of a surrounding multitude; among whom were several veteran officers. The firing was conducted with such exactness as was thought not to be exceeded by the best disciplined troops.

Capt. Dockfteder, lieut. Nellis with other officers, attended with the company of militia raised at the Grand River, composed of white men, who performed their manuel exercise &c. with such orde. as to give credit to themselves, and satisfaction to the spectators.

Capt. Joseph Brant gave a public dinner at his own house—after which many loyal TOASTS were drank, among the number, after the king &c. Capt. B. gave "the colonels of the different militias in this province; together with all those loyalists who were fellow sufferers with the 6 nations, during the late American war." The day was spent with the greatest conviviality, and finished with several Indian dances at the council house.

The Messiagua Indians attended by particular invitation. The day following a council was held by their chiefs, and those of the 6 nations, when belts of wampum were exchanged as a token of lasting friendship. The council lasted 3 hours, and was conducted with the utmost harmony and solemnity.

Reports say, that the Floridas and Louisiana have actually been ceded to the French republic, by Spain; and that the tri-coloured flag is already flying at Pensacola. This inteligence is probably true—such an event has been long expected

The approaching elections (says a Philadelphia paper of Feb. 7) appear to be viewed by the direct[illegible] with anxiety.

A letter received at Philadelphia, dated January 31st, says—"We have just learned, that the French are going against Hanover, Bremen and Hambro.

Jews turning Christians.

It is certain that all the Jews established in the States of the Emperor, have agreed to celebrate their Sabbath in future on Sunday. (Vienna paper.)

The treaty between France and Portugal remains unratified.—Such is the peculiar political situation of Portugal that she fears to act as the judgement of her councils would dictate, lest she might offend Great-Britain or France. The former commands her merchantile towns, and his her natural ally.—The latter threatens to attack her by land, through the Spanish dominions.—From both she has much to fear; and nothing but a general peace can insure her safety.

Extract of a letter from a respectable house in London, to a merchant of Philadelphia, dated January 27.

"The government of Hamburgh, we understand, have submitted to some of the measures imposed on them by the French, but seem determined to resist the one that had for its object the confiscation of British property, and the non-admittance of our shipping into their ports, but the other alarming measures of the French, with respect to neutral vessels, we dare say will be adhered to with the utmost rigour. Premiums of insurance from hence to America are not quite fixed, but it is expected they will be as high as 20 guineas, with proportionate returns for convoy, should any be appointed, but it remains a matter of doubt whether it will be expedient for your shipping to avail themselves of the protection of our flag; it is a very delicate point, and your minister, Mr. King, is no doubt under great embarrassments how to act for the best under such perplexing circumstances."

MARRIED] At the Grand-River about three weeks since, A. JONES, esq. deputy surveyor, to a young lady of that place, daughter to the noted Mohawk warrier TERRIHOGAH.

"At each kind glance may their souls unite,
While love's soft sympathy imparts
The tender transport of delight,
Which beats in undivided hearts."

Elopement!

WHEREAS MARY my wife, has eloped from my bed and board, and notwithstanding my soliciting her in this public manner to return to her duty, she still persists in her elopement;—I therefore forbid all persons harboring or trusting her on my account, as I shall not conceive myself bound to discharge any debts she may contract. LONDON, January 29.

There ſeems to be but one opinion reſpecting the late inſurrection at Rome, the details of which have been conveyed by the official correſpondence of the French miniſter Buonaparte. It appears perfectly clear that the inſurrection was originally inſtigated by French emiſſaries, for the purpoſe of affording a pretext for the renual of hoſtilities againſt the Papal government. Not ſatisfied with the plunder which the French generals have extracted from the territory of the enfeebled father, the directory ſeem to have meditated the complete extinction of his government, and the addition of Rome itſelf to the already overgrown power of the French Republic.

The Papal miniſters offer the French any reparation that they may be required: but from the language held by the French ambaſſador, and by the miniſter for foreign affairs, no reparation will be accepted. The fate of Rome ſeems decided. The firſt meaſures purſued by the directory in conſequence of the ambaſſador's letter, have been to arreſt the Roman ambaſſador at Paris, and to order gen. Berthier to march a corps of republican troops againſt Rome, for the purpoſe of exacting vengeance for the outrage committed againſt the French nation in the perſon of its miniſter; and the tri-coloured flag will probably ſoon appear upon the capitol. For what purpoſes of partition or compenſation the dominions of his holineſs are required, it is impoſſible to conjecture. The bad faith of Venice, (real or pretended) cauſe very importunely to furniſh the ceſſions of Campo Formio, but what treaty of plunder are the ſpoil of Rome diſtined to promote? Time will probably diſcloſe ſome political views which this outrage againſt a power unenvied in its political influence, and perfectly harmleſs with reſpect to its military exertions; may be calculated to anſwer.

Buonaparte's letter to the directory, announcing the liberation of 18 Frenchmen from ſlavery by the dey of Tunis; is a ſevere ſatire upon his own infamous conduct in ſelling the Auſtrian ſoldiers whom he captured in Italy, to the government of Spain, to perpetual ſlavery in the mines in America. Such is the love of liberty, and ſuch the conſiſtency of the gallic champion of freedom.

March 5.

It has ſome time been rumoured that inſtead of waiting the threatened invaſion of the enemy, miniſters were preparing ſome offenſive meaſures againſt the enemy's own coaſts. The meaſure is now announced. A ſmall ſquadron under ſir Richard Strachan now blockades the river Seine, by which means the ports of Havre and Rouen, and even Paris itſelf, are excluded from all communication with the ſea.

We this day received the French journals at a late hour, owing to their having been detained ſome time at the duke of Portland's office. The only important intelligence they contain is a confirmation of the Spaniſh fleet having ſailed from Cadiz on the 17th ultimo. But by the mail arrived from Liſbon this morning, brought to Falmouth in the King George packet, we have certain information that the earl St. Vincent had driven them into Cadiz. This fleet conſiſted of 22 ſhips of the line, had come out of port on 7th ult. with the intenſion of attacking admiral Parker's diviſion, which conſiſted only of 10 ſhips, but the earl coming up with the remainder of our fleet, the enemy retired to port with greater expedition than they had quited it.

At a parochial meeting at Offwell, Somerſetſhire, yeſterday ſe'nnight, for the purpose of ascertaining the number of males between the ages of 15 and 60 capable of bearing arms, the inhabitants unanimously offered to enrol themselves and to march against the foreign or domestic enemies of the constitution.

One hundred and twenty four recruits for the duke of York's regiment of guards were on Saturday brought to town from Birmingham, Manchester, and Wakefield, and 1000 from different parts of the north of England, to recruit the first regiment.

Circular letters have been sent from the duke of York's office to the colonels of the several militia regiments, directing that three serjeants three, corporals, and six privates (who are eligible to the rank of non-commissioned officers) be sent from each, to aid in disciplining the supplementary militia, from which corps they are to receive an equal number of men in return.

The Suffolk, York, and Salop supplementary militia are to be embodied to morrow, the Lancashire and Essex on the 8th, the Dorset on the 10th, Norfolk the 14th, and Cheshire the 15th of the present month, and the other counties in the kingdom within these periods.

One half of the militia are to be balloted from the whole number for immediate service; half of those so chosen are to be permitted to enter into regular regiments, on bounties, and the other part to join the old regiments of militia belonging to their respective counties; the services of both are limited to the duration of the war.

The average price of sugar, computed from the returns made in the week ending the 28th of February 1798, is 67s. 6d. per cwt.

The French look with confidence to a fleet of more than one hundred ships of the line before the month of July next. They say that they obtained sixteen ships of the line at Venice, together with an immense arsenal of naval stores; they have fourteen ships of the line at Toulon, & the Spaniards have ten at Carthagena—There are twenty-five in the port of Cadiz, and thirty at Brest, Rochester, and other French ports of the oceans. They look for sixteen from the Dutch, and thus they number a very formidable fleet on paper.—How to man and equip these ships is the desideratum. A very large body of seamen, both French and Dutch, are now prisoners in England, and ministers will take very good care that no exchange shall take place, by which the armament of the enemy might be forwarded.

Thursday fleut. Bells of the artillery, tried another experiment on the queens battery, Portsmouth, with a piece of orquanco, which fully answered every expectation formed of it, and will be of great public utility. In case a ship is stranded on rocks, &c, some distance from the shore, too far to throw a rope, and the sea running too high for people to get off to their assistance, then they are to have an iron ball with a ring bolt, in which is fastened a line of sufficient length to reach the shore, and being fired from a carronade in an oblique direction, with a quantity of powder proportioned to the distance it is meant to fall; the shot of course buries itself in the earth, leaving an end of the line on board by the help of which the crew, with the smallest raft, can not only save their lives but carry other ropes on shore, or valuable parts of the cargo. As the ball buries itself in an oblique direction, and will be pulled horizontally by the people getting on shore, it will of course bear a very great weight before it can be disengaged from the earth. Besides the principal officers there were a number of people on the ramparts to view so curious an invention.

NAUTICAL INTELLIGENCE.

Dispatches were last night received at the admiralty from sir Edward Pellew, commander of the Indefatigable, of 44 guns.

The north sea squadron is to re-assemble at Yarmouth towards the close of the present month. Most of the vessels which are to compose it are now nearly ready for sea.

The Black Joke lugger, arrived at Yarmouth from a cruize off the Dutch coast, looked into the Texel on Monday last, and could not discern any vessels of war there. She took a fishing boat, and landed the crew, six in number, on the Texel island, close in with which she afterwards captured a brig laden with spirits for Amsterdam.

The four advice boats lately built under the direction of gen. Bentham, are on perfectly naval principle, their keel being like a wedge without any bulge or bearing. Capt. Portlock has got No. 1, which he is fitting up in the best manner. No. 1, allotted a few days since to the isles of St. Marcou, sailed from Southampton-river round the buoys at Spithead to Portsmouth, a distance of 25 miles, in an hour and 25 minutes. She Mounts six 18 pounders carronades, and two long fours, and is said to be an excellent sea boat.

Saturday a new ship of 74 guns, called the Ajax, was launched from Randall's dock yard, at Rotherhithe.

The Princess Charlotte packet will take out the Barbadoes, Martinique, and Jamaica mails of Wednesday next.

EDINBURGH, March 7.

The magistrates and council of Dundee have subscribed 600l.

At Dumfries, upwards, of 700l. were subscribed in a few minutes. The royal Dumfries volunteers (2 corps) 40l.—drummers and fifers, (1 corps) one month's pay.

Sir John Sinclair, the president of the board of agriculture, has subscribed 200l. to be continued annually during the war, together with 6 months of his salary; amounting in the whole to 800l.

The principal inhabitants of Dalkeith have unanimously resolved to subscribe as they think proper.

The ministers of the presbyterry of Haddington have subscribed 80 guineas in support of government in the present critical state of affairs.

Magistrates and council of preebles, 500l.

The Burgh or Newton-upon-Air, has voted 50l. and the subscriptions there are going on with great alacrity.

The fishermen of the small village of Newhaven have cheerfully contributed 22l. 12s.

NEW-YORK, March 27.

It was publickly said yesterday, that a letter from Philadelphia, by the mail of the day, announced, that a TREATY, OFFENSIVE and DEFENSIVE, between Great Britain and America, was absolutely signed by the two parties, viz. Robert Liston and John Adams.

ALBANY, April 9.

National house of representatives.
April 11.

After attending to some private business the house went into a committe of the whole on the bill providing for the further defence of ports and harbours, and after a desultory debate the bill was agreed to, and ordered to be engrossed for a third reading. By this bill, 250,000 dollars are appropriated for this object, in addition to upwards of 90,000 dollars, which remain unexpected of a former appropriation.

Mr. Harper laid a resolution on the table, proposing the appointment in the war department, and subordinate thereto, of an officer for the immediate superintendance and construction of fortifications.

Since yesterday morning the Hudson has swelled beyond its usual boundaries to an extent which the oldest of our citizens do not remember to have ever before witnessed. All the Quays or docks, Dock-street, part of Courtstreet, and all that part of the city including the upper and lower pasture, are now overflown. The cellars within, as well as many beyond, those limits, are filled with water, greatly we fear to the damage of the proprietors. Several chimnies in the south end of the city were last night undermined and feell in.

THE ORACLE.

WEST-NIAGARA, May 19.

By the arrival of the schooner SIMCOE, capt. Murney, from Kingston, we are informed that upwards of a HUNDRED houses in the lower province have been carried away with the ice this spring!

The French citizen who proposed to Buonaparte to transport a number of men in balloons to England, has an excellent opportunity of gratifying the high-flying jacobins, by putting his design in practice. In order to guard against this formidable invasion from above, Mr. Pitt will probably put the game-keepers and the country gentlemen in requisition, as it will be necessary to oppose to our aerial foes, troops which can shoot flying. (London paper.)

MORE PROJECTS.

A French writer named Heurvitz, has recommended placing along the channel, cannon which will throw balls 50 leagues. These, says he, charged with three millions of one hundred powders will batter all the towns of England about their ears!

Thiloria proposes a squadron of diving bells which, by getting under the Island, would enable their crews to scuttle it, and thus send every mother's son of an Englishman to old Davy's locker.

Arthur O'Conner, the proprietor of the Dublin newspaper called the PRESS, with 4 others, have been apprehended at Margate, on a charge of high treason. O'Conner is the nephew of lord Longneville, and heir to his vast estates in Ireland.

Capt. Henry Arkins, arrived at Boston, from Malaga, which place he left Feb. 4, informs that just before he sailed, it was reported and believed, that the French had renewed hostilities against Portugal, and had marched an army of 50 000 men towards Lisbon.—The French capture all neutrals bound to any ports in the mediterranean, and carry them in for adjudication.

At a meeting of the merchants, traders, underwriter &c. of Philadelphia, on the 11th and 12th of April, at the city coffee-house, an address was agreed to be presented to the president of U.S. which has been signed by a large number of the merchants—the purpose of which is, to express their regret at the failure of the late attempt to negociate with the French republic, their approbation of the disposition of the president to effect so desirable a purpose, and their determination to support the measures of their government.

The navigation of the Hudson (says a New-York paper) being no longer impeded by ice, the late north-east gales have brought to our wharves, a large fleet of Albany traders, loaded with produce of various kinds, and building materials; but, alas! the din of war, and scarcity of money, occasions their being but little demand.

Extract of letter from Havre, dated February 30, 1798.

"The law relating to neutrals was no sooner know in England, than the British vessels of war commenced stopping all vessels going to any of the French ports; even the fishermen and pilot-boats are arrested by them."

[Philadelphia paper.]

A ship builder desires us to correct the errors in computation, of which a gentleman has been guilty in our paper of yesterday, when writing on the subject of the French rafts. Each raft of the dimensions proposed, 700 yards by 350, will take no less than 6,615,000 of four inch plank for the floors; and allowing that the timbers on which the floors are to be laid, will equal that quantity of timber necessary for the whole business will be 44,100,000 solid feet, which, at 1s. per foot, would cost 2,205,000l. sterling. When the expense of cordage and other materials, and of labour, are added to this, the whole cannot be estimated at less than 4,000,000l. London paper

Elopement!

WHEREAS MARY my wife, has eloped from my bed and board, and notwithstanding my soliciting her in this public manner to return to her duty, she still persists in her elopement;—I therefore forbid all persons harboring or trusting her on my account, as I shall not conceive myself bound to discharge any debts she may contract. GEORGE the third, by the grace of God of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, king, defender of the faith, &c. &c. &c.

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS,

GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our proclamation bearing date the firſt day of April, we thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council to prorogue our provincial parliament, until the ſeventh day of this preſent month of May at which time in our town of YORK you were held and conſtrained to appear; but we taking into our royal conſideration the eaſe and convenience of our loving ſubjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council, to relieve you, and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforeſaid, hereby convoking, and by theſe preſents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the twenty-eighth day of May next enſuing, you meet us in our provincial parliament, in our town of York, there to take into conſideration the ſtate and welfare of our province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may ſeem neceſſary:—Herein fail not. In teſtimony whereof we have cauſed the great ſeal of our ſaid province to be hereunto affixed:—Witneſs the honorable PETER RUSSELL, preſident of our government of our ſaid province, this firſt day of May in the year of our Lord, one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety-eight, and the thirty-eighth of our reign.

LONDON, Feb. 17.

Voluntary ſubſcriptions.

The total amount of the ſubſcriptions paid at the bank and royal exchange, was yeſterday 730,000l.

Letters from Edinburgh received yeſterday, ſtate the amount of the contribution in that city at 34,000l.

Lord Somerville's ſubſcription at the bank is ſo highly creditable to him that we have tranſcribed it from the books verbatim.

"Lord Somerville gives annually, until the end of the war, the fifth of his clear income, in full confidence that when ſuch a period ſhall arrive the people of England will ſee the good policy of having the fifth of all aſcertained income to the relief of the aſſeſſed and other taxes, partial in their operation, becauſe they touch not the niggard or the diſaffected."

February 19.

Preparations are now making, we underſtand, in this country, for a deſcent, or rather various deſcents, on the French and Dutch coaſts. Thoſe parts where the republicans have collected, and are conſtructing veſſels for the threatened deſcent on England, are it is ſaid, to be the firſt objects of attack.

The command of the ſquadron deſtined for this ſervice, is, we are informed to be given to admiral ſir Horatio Nelſon under whoſe orders a large military force is alſo to act.

February 20.

Yeſterday, in the houſe of lords, the duke of Bedford moved for an humble addreſs to his majeſty, praying him to diſmiſs his preſent miniſters from the ſituation which they hold under the crown—Agreed to: and it was ordered, that the houſe be ſummoned on the 12th March.

The diſpatches received by the Lisbon mail, which arrived on Friday, ſtate that the directory has made a formal demand of the court of Spain for permiſſion to march 50,000 troops through that country for the attack on Portugal, which demand the weak cabinet of Madrid has complied with, although the conſequences are ſo obvious.

The council of Madrid did not agree to grant the paſſage required until after repeated deliberations during four days. One party of the council was of opinion that there was leſs danger in hoſtilities which the directory threatened in caſe of refuſal, than in acceding to the demand of marching republican troops through the country. But the other party having the greateſt preponderance, the meaſure was carried. Time will ſhew its conſequences.

FEBRUARY 21.

Vice-admiral ſir Charles Thompſon ſailed again on Sunday from Torbay with the fleet under his command. He come in merely on account of a very heavy gale of wind at S. W.

We have authority to ſtate in the moſt direct terms, that the Paragraphs which have lately appeared in ſeveral of the morning papers ſtating that a difference of opinion exiſts between the lord lieutenant and chancellor of Ireland, are totally void of foundation.

The gunboats are all ordered to be fited for immediate ſervice, and divided unto three diviſions; thoſe in the Downs to be commanded by captain Bowen, of his majeſty's ſhip Argo; thoſe at Portſmouth, by captain Briſbane: and thoſe at Plymouth, by captain Raber, of the Champion frigate.

The board of admiralty have it in contemplation to propoſe to parliament to erect a ſuperb monument in St Paul's chathedral to the memory of the gallant captain Burges, who fell in the action of the 11th of October, while commanding his Majesty's ship the Ardent.

BASLE, February 5.

War with Bern is inevitable. We just learn, that a body of troops from Bern took the city of Arau, which had declared itself independent, and put all the patriots in chains, without respecting the French guards which were stationed at several places. The French troops march in haste through our canton, and from the Pays de Vaud, &c. to hurl vengeance on Bern.

The French party here are of opinion, that in a short time a national assembly of all Switzerland will be convoked, to introduce a new republican constitution.

The patriots of the Pays de Vaud now march with the French army against Bern.

FRANKFORT, February 10.

The French envoy, citizen Mengaud, after the Berners, notwithstanding his remonstrance, had marched troops to Arau, and arrested the patriots there, issued a lengthy declaration of war against them. It is feared a terrible effusion of blood will take place when the French army, who are much enraged, arrive at Bern.

It is said, that the French have already entered the city of Bern.

ST. IOHN'S, (Antigua) March 1.

By a vessel from Cork, we learn that admiral Kingsmill, before she sailed, had taken 28 sail of French and Dutch privateers which were then lying in the cove; also that 8 sail of Portuguese ships from Brazil had been captured near the Tagus, by the fleet under lord St. Vincent.

BERMUDA, March 31.

By the sch't——, from Martinique, we learn that a few days since there came on such a ground swell off that island, without any wind, that it drove 16 ships a shore, where they were entirely knocked to pieces, but no lives lost.

By the above vessel we have a confirmation of the insurrections in Guadaloupe of the blacks—and find they had several engagements, in which great numbers were killed on both sides.

There have been much disturbances in the island of St. Domingo lately between the different parties of the French whites and blacks, and several bloody engagements have been fought.

NORFOLK, April 19.

Yesterday arrived in Hampton roads the ship Pomona, capt. Waters, from Bourdeaux, which place he left the 25th February. By this vessel we learn that our commissioners were still at Paris, unable to effect their mission, and waiting for further instructions from our government; that Talien had made a proposition in the council of five hundred, that all neutral vessels having cannon on board, be lawful prize, and both vessel and cargo condemned. This proposition was refered to a committee, of which Talien and Santhonax were a part.

Another proposition had also been made, to permit the captains of French privateers to send into their ports, any neutral vessels they may think proper, for investigation of their cargoes, regardless of those papers which have hitherto been thought sufficient to mark their neutrality.

BALTIMORE, April 6.

On board of the sloop Twins, Cape Francois.

We have received the following letter from the subscriber, who requested its publication.

Gentlemen of the United States of America.

You will think strange of this, I suppose, but you must be on the look out. I assure you, there are about 30 French privateers getting ready to cruise around the Capes of Virginia, and the northern parts of your country. I am confined here and cannot get away.—There is a report here that no Americans shall be permitted to go to their native homes until they have further accounts from America. They are taking your vessels as fast as they can.—They are mustering troops to send away to all the islands. They expect you will declare war, and say they are ready for you. They say if you embargo your vessels "by God they no care." You will hardly believe this true, but you may rely on it for fact—I am an American myself, and write you this as friendship to Americans.

BENJAMIN RYLEIGH.

April 19.

Arrived this day, ship Hampton, captain Stafford, from Hamburgh, which she left the 24th of February.

We learn by captain S. that the reports of Hamburgh being invested by a French force and the confiscation of British goods there, are entirely without foundation. A French ambassador had arrived at that port, and wished to fraternize them out of a loan of 6 millions, but his request was not complied with. What the result would be they could not tell, but looked up for protection to Prussia and the northern powers.

The American ministers, it was reported at Hamburgh, had been ordered to quit France; and the general opinion was, that war between the two nations was inevitable. Insurance had consequently risen to 15 guineas; and a few days previous to capt. Stafford's failing no insurance could be had on American vessels at all.

ALBANY, April 30.

The present time is a moment of great expectation, and indicates the existence at no distant period, of important events; and it is the duty of every citizen to become acquainted with the causes by which the operation is carried on; a cool and dispassionate enquiry, and a disposition to know the truth, are necessary. The great enquiry is—shall we have peace or war with the French republic? The citizens of the United States are solicitous to enjoy the blessing of Peace, and whether that blessing shall be continued to them, depends much on the conduct of this administration. What the conduct of this administration has been, and is likely to be, should be carefully ascertained by every citizen. The result will be, either an ample and full support of the administration in all its purposes; or some modification thereof, that will correspond to the feelings, & give permanent security and prosperity to the great interests of the community.

[Argus.]

THE ORACLE.

WEST-NIAGARA, May 26.

ROMAN EMPIRE.

The æra so long looked for, and which has for ages been the subject of the prayers of all protestants, has at last arrived—the destruction of the papal tyranny—an event that will be followed by the fall of all similar usurpations over the consciences of men, wherever they may be found.—The arrival of the French troops at Rome has been signalized by the overthrow of the feeble government of the pope, and the establishment of a republic. Five consuls have been appointed as the executive power, and the other members of the provisional government have been installed in the papal palace.—Perhaps the enthusiasm which the revolution must excite upon the sacred soil of ancient liberty, will distinguish the institutions of the arrived Roman republic with the names and officers which flourished in its better days. Instead of primary assemblies we shall probably hear of the comitia, and consuls instead of an Executive directory. The modern Romans may thus establish eadom magistratum vocabular, but it remains to be seen with what spirit the Roman institutions are supported, and with what dignity the men who have so recently escaped from the ecclesiastical yoke will maintain the liberty they have reclaimed.

The affairs of Switzerland are still undecied. The minister of the French republic has published two notes, with a view of quieting the anxieties of the Swiss, on the subject of the pretensions of the directory. These notes, the one of the 13th and the other of the 18th of Feb. state, that the military measures of the French are hostile only to those who are corrupted by the gold of England—That the French government has no design to invade Switzerland, but merely wishes to substitute in the room of the existing constitution one purely democratic, for the express end that the helvetic government may be more conformable to that of the French and Cisalpine republics. [London paper.]

Extract of a letter from Hamburgh dated the 20th February.

"I see, by the newspapers, you have been in great alarm for our safety, as well as your own; I believe our fears are equally ill founded. We however, for certain, got a demand from the French, for a loan of sixteen millions of livres, and the whole Burgerhott are commoned to meet on thursday to determine whether it will be granted or not. The general opinion is, that it will be refused, as the senate are said to have received strong assurance of protection from the surrounding powers; and this day it is reported, that the British minister has sent in a note, saying that his court will consider a loan to the French as aiding the invasion of Britain."

[This letter is copied from the Glasgow Courier of March 6.]

In the West India seas an engagement has lately happened between an American ship of 20 and a French privateer of 16 guns. The Frenchman finally struck, and was dismissed in a shattered condition.

Gloucester, March 15.

"Capt. Hays has arrived here his day from Rochelly. He confirms former accounts of french politics being much opposed to the American government: or rather they were carrying their system of depredation to the summit. He gives a report that was current in France when he sailed, that the executive directory had promised to the council of five hundred to pass a law making all American vessels good prize, which should have on board papers signed by JOHN ADAMS! as they view him an emissary from Mr. PITT. He adds, that it was the general opinion at Rochelle, that the request of the directory would not be refused."

STAGE.

J. FAIRBANKS & THO's HIND

ACQUAINT their friends, and the public in general, that their STAGE will continue to run between Newark and Chippawa, on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, to start from Newark at 7 o'clock A. M. of each day, and return the same evening, provided four passengers take seats by 4 o'clock in the afternoon; otherwise to start from Chippawa the following morning at 7 o'clock, and return the same evening. Each passenger is allowed 14lb. baggage, and to pay ONE DOLLAR; way passengers to be taken up at six-pence N. Y. C. per mile. Will stop at Queenston each way 20 minutes.

Good horses and careful drivers are provided, and that attention and dispatch which are necessary to the ease, satisfaction and convenience of the passengers, may always be expected.

May 24.

TO BE SOLD,

AT public auction, on Monday the 2d of July next, at JOHN M'DOUGAL'S tavern in the town of YORK, a valuable FARM, situate on YONG STREET, about 12 miles from York, on which are a good LOG HOUSE, and 7 or 8 acres well improved.—The advantages of the above farm, from the richness of its soil, and its being well watered, are not equaled by many farms in the province; and above all, it affords an excellent Salmon-fishery, large enough to support a number of families, which must be conceived a great advantage in this infant country; the terms will be made known on the day of sale. May 24.

Fort-Niagara, May 26.

A NUMBER of stray HORSES are destroying the pasture ground near Fort-Niagara. The owners of them are hereby informed that unless these HORSES be removed within four days from this date, they will be taken and sold to indemnify the U.S. for the damage done by them.

PETER RUSSELL, PRESIDENT.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the third, by the grace of God of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, king, defender of the faith, &c. &c. &c.

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS, GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our proclamation bearing date the firſt day of May we thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council to prorogue our provincial parliament, until the twenty eighth day of this preſent month of May at which time in our town of YORK you were held and conſtrained to appear; but we taking into our royal conſideration the eaſe and convenience of our loving ſubjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council, to relieve you, and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforeſaid, hereby convoking, and by theſe preſents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the FIFTH day of JUNE next enſuing, you meet us in our provincial parliament, in our town of York, there to take into conſideration the ſtate and welfare of our province of Upper-Canada, and therein to do as may ſeem neceſſary:—Herein fail not. In teſtimony whereof we have cauſed the great ſeal of our ſaid province to be hereunto affixed:—Witneſs the honorable PETER RUSSELL, preſident of our government of our ſaid province, this thirtieth day of May in the year of our Lord, one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety-eight, and the thirty-eighth of our reign.

P. R.

WM. JARVIS, Sec'y.

Blanks to be ſold at this office.

TO BE SOLD,

AT public auction, on Monday the 2d of July next, at JOHN M'DOUGAL's tavern in the town of YORK, a valuable FARM, ſituate on YONG STREET, about 12 miles from York, on which are a good LOG HOUSE, and 7 or 8 acres well improved.—The advantages of the above farm, from the richneſs of its ſoil, and its being well watered, are not equaled by many farms in the province; and above all, it affords an excellent Salmon-fiſhery, large enough to ſupport a number of families, which muſt be conceived a great advantage in this infant country; the terms will be made known on the day of ſale. May 24.

Good horſes and careful drivers are provided, and that attention and diſpatch which are neceſſary to the eaſe, ſatisfaction and convenience of the paſſengers, may always be expected.

NEW-YORK, April 20.

IN the preſent criſis, it is preſumed there can be but one mind & one heart in the United States, in regard to the general policy to be purſued. Defence is the rallying point—defence of our ſovereignty and independence, and protection of our commerce. Theſe are the points in which all but traitors muſt agree; and traitors now muſt be ſilent. Honeſt men may differ as to the means by which theſe objects are to be ſecured; but we preſume it to be impoſible for Americans not to agree in the end or general policy.

Could the world enjoy uninterrupted peace, we could not be at a loſs what meaſures to purſue. But all proſpect of ſuch halcyon days is a chimera a phantom. Inſtead of an amelioration of the ſtate of ſociety, and inſtead, of a leſs warlike diſpoſition in mankind, Europe is retrograding from a ſtate of tolerable ſecurity, freedom and civilization, into more than ancient barbariſm. The influence of ſteady laws, and regular, adminiſtration of juſtice, for which the nations of Europe have been ſtruggling three or four centuries, is gradually yielding to the power and the corruption of the modern reformers, who are ſubverting all theſe inſtitutions of religion and policy, by which men have been hitherto held in ſubordination. This unhinging of all the moralities which reſtrain the vicious propenſities of the human heart, is followed by its natural conſequences, ſhameleſs unbluſhing crimes. Perjury, bribery, are not any longer concealed in France from the ſcrutinizing eye of police, of morality, of juſtice: but avowed and openly practiſed by the upſtart rulers of that degenerate country. No longer is the depraved heart obliged to wait for the offer of corruption; no longer, like the unhackneyed novice in villainy, does the proſtituted miniſter of a great nation, delay for the advance to be made; but with aſtoniſhing effrontery, he comes forward and boldly ſolicits the bribe.

No longer do the rulers of France diſguiſe their views, and ſeek to cover their plunder of the ſeas under the ſtale plea of blockaded ports, or contraband of war; but with a candor, that ought never to be ſeparated from integrity, they avow the intention of reviving the cuſtoms of the tenth century, when commerce was univerſal piracy, and the ocean bore none but freebooters roving from country to country in ſearch of plunder. Even the Algerines, the curſe, the ſcourge and the contempt of all nations, are quoted as fit examples for imitation; and the French, who-in '92 were declared by our countryman Mr. Barlow, to be unqueſtionably the moſt mild and polite people on earth, are become the acknowledged imitators of the barbarous and ferocious Moors.

When Europe is thus verging back towards barbariſm, when law is giving place to force, and commerce is to be the object of univerſal plunder; what ſhall we ſay? ſhall we tamely ſubmit? ſhall we yield the freedom of the ſeas; feed the pirates who rob us, and become tributaries to France as well as Algiers? Let the ſpirit of America be conſulted for an anſwer.

By the ſch't. Patrick, in 15 days from Curracoa, we are informed that the captain of a French privateer of 18 guns belonging to Gaudaloupe, was hired in preſence of a number of Americans that he had orders to put to the ſword all neutrals who ſhould make any reſiſtance, and that Victor Hughes ſaid, it was ſtipulated in his commiſſion.

PHILADELPHIA, April 23.

Died on board the Aſſiſtance of 50 guns, in Hampton roads, commodore Mowat, ſecond in command of the Britiſh ſquadron on the American ſtation; his remains were interred on Tueſday laſt at Hamton.

Three Britiſh ſhips of war lay in Hampton roads on Friday laſt. The The Thetis has failed for Halifax, to repair.

Capt. Burke further informs, that a proclamation was iſſued at La Guira, forbidding any Spaniſh veſſel leaving that port for Curracoa, as accounts were received of that place being beſieged by the Britiſh.

The papers received by this day's mail contain accounts of the capture of no leſs than 31 American veſſels by the ſans-culottes of the ſiſter republic.

Laſt night, between the hours of eleven and twelve, a FIRE broke out in a cooper's ſhop, on a warf belonging to Mr. J. Wilcocks' eſtate below South ſtreet, which conſumed the ſhop, and encreaſed to an alarming heighth, deſtroyed a range of ſtores, extending to Water-ſtreet, and doing much damage to ſeveral adjoining houſes on both ſides.

Capt. Stolelbury of the Sloop Sally, from this port, to St. Thomas, informs that he was taken by a French privateer and carried into St. Martin's; he made an application to Victor Hughes, for his acquitance, imforming him that he had all the papers neceſſary in trading from one neutral port to another; that he was going from St. Thomas to France; the anſwer which Victor Hughes gave capt. S. was that all Americans was damned raſcals, he gave him to underſtand, that his cargo and veſſel was a good prize, and that all American veſſels which fell into their hands would be condemned.

LONDON, February 21.

Yeſterday ſeveral merchantile houſes received letters from Liſbon, via Falmouth, by a private ſhip. Thoſe letters ſtate in general terms that the Portugeſe in the capitol are very much alarmed at the march of the French troops through Spain to attack Portugal, in two diviſions. The Portugeſe miniſter is taking the moſt vigorous meaſures to make them repent their raſhneſs. There are now eighty thouſand, as fine troops as any in Europe, and the great body of the people are to raiſe en maſſe to preſerve their property againſt thoſe marauders, who firſt promiſe protection, but finiſh with plunder an deſtruction.

February 28.

The prince of Wales has given a very polite refuſal to the requeſt made by the officers of the Weſt York militia, who had requeſted that he ſhould take upon him the command of that regiment.

DUBLIN, March 2.

Lord's protest.—Earl Moira's motion.

Diſſentient.

Becauſe, that at a moment when government has thought itſelf obliged to exert unuſual rigor, it appears the extreme of impolicy not to proſecute the reluctance with which ſuch ſeverities are enforced, and the with of government to conciliate the minds of the people by a gentler courſe.

[The following is the motion above alluded to:—]

"That an humble addreſs be preſented to his excellency the lord lieutenant, repreſenting, that as parliament hath confided to his excellency's extraordinary powers for ſupporting the laws, and for defeating any traitorous combinations which may exiſt in this kingdom: this houſe feels it at the ſame time a duty to recommend the adoption of ſuch conciliatory meaſures as may allay the apprehenſions and extinguiſh the diſcontents unhappily prevalent in this country." Ayes 9—Nays 44.

THE ORACLE.

A London paper of the 15th Jan. ſays, "The preſent effective military force of G. Britain conſiſts of 16,160 regular cavalry, 13,124 ſencible cavalry 15,120 yeomary cavalry, 15,664 regular infantry, 41,042 ſencible infantry, 45,000 militia, 51,360 volunteers, 60,000 ſupplementary militia; making in the whole, 227,450 effective men, beſides 117 companies of invalid artillery, and 59 independent companies of invalids.

The military force of Ireland is alſo very formidable; the moſt accurate accounts ſtate it at no leſs than 120,000 effective men.—The militia and yeomanry compriſes 90.000 men."

The duke of Wertembergh ſucceeds, by the death of his father, to his hereditary dominions, and to 5238 copies of the holy bible, in different languages.

The London papers ſtate, that preparations are making at Conſtantinople to repel the attacks of the French.

The people of Ireland ſeem to vie with thoſe of Great-Britain in contributing to the aid of government, by voluntary ſubſcription.

Three anonymous letters have lately been directed to the preſident of the United States, (the laſt was received on Tueſday, May 1) threatening to ſet fire to the city on the ninth of May next. CITIZENS! the utmoſt vigilance is neceſſary to proteſt your lives and property from ſuch an infernal deſign. One unguarded hour may lay your city in aſhes. (Phil. paper.)

From Porcupine's Gazette.

ROME.

"Manes of Cato, of Pompey, of Brutus, of Cicero, and of Hortenſius! receive the homage of free Frenchmen, in that capitol where you have ſo often defended the rights of the people, and reflecting a luſtre on the Roman republic! The deſcendants of the Gauls enter this auguſt place, bearing the olive of peace in their hands, to reeſtabliſh the altars of liberty, erected by the firſt of the brutus's. And you, Roman people; who are about to reſume your legitimate right, recollect the blood which runs in your veins—regard the monuments of glory by which you are ſurrounded—reſcue your ancient grandeur, and the virtues of your anceſtors."

[This ſpeech was delivered by the ſans culotte general who took poſſeſſion of the city.—He did very well to tell the poor devils to recollect the blood that runs in their veins; and he might have added, that it could not run there much longer.—As a Philadelphian I would ſay, that it is rather untoward that the pope ſhould be hurled down, juſt at the moment that a preſbyterian has been converted to a papiſt, a miracle that the catholic church never could boaſt of in its brighteſt day.]

FOR SALE—In Iriſh-town, and other parts of the out ſkirts of the city, a quantity of half worn, Tri Coloured Cockades, ſome imported and others of home manufactory.—They compriſe a general and extenſive aſſortment, being of all ſizes from that of a trencher down to that of a ſleeve button.

N. B. The price will be made exceedingly low; but payment muſt be made in caſh, as the ſubſcribers affairs abſolutely require them to leave the country with a fouve qui peut, or the devil take the hindmoſt.

Coupe-Gorge, & Co.

Celebration of Virgil's nativity.

The 15th October, which ancient manuſcripts, preſerved it the library of Mantua, point out as the birth-day of the chief of the Roman poets, has been this year celebrated with great ſolemnity. Gen. Miollis, the French commandant of Mantua, crowned Virgil's buſt, decorated with flowers and wreaths of laurel, to be placed on alters raiſed in the principal ſquares of the city.—All the members of the academy and men of learning of Mantua and its vicinity, aſſembled and walked in proceſſion to the village of Andes, now called Pietole, the place of nativity of Virgil, where a beautiful marble pyramid was lately raiſed in honor of that poet.—The ſtreets and theatres were illuminated in the evening, and the feſtival cloſed, not with dancing, eating & toaſts, but with diſtributing handſome dowries, the produce of voluntary contributions, made by the friends of learning and rural felicity, among fifty poor girls, who were the ſame day married to fifty induſtrious but poor young men. [Hamburgh paper.]

A FACT.

While doctor Fouſhee was addreſſing the people of Richmond and Henrico (Virginia) on the calamities of a French war, he aſked in an emphatic manner, "what we ſhould gain by war?" A planter in the crowd, replied," broken conſtitutions, ragged clothes, poor ſoldiers, and ſpeculating officers."

SENTIMENT.

Mankind, from their affinity to each other, ſhould conſider it as a duty incumbent to relieve the deſtreſſed, as far as their abilities will admit without injury to themſelves or families; but ſuch is the imbecility of human nature, few, while they can paſs on the rugged road of life uninterrupted by fortune's frowns, feel for the calamities of others: immerged in the buſy ſcenes of life, the ſufferings of their fellow creatures are viewed at a diſtance, and the diſtreſſed are permitted to pine away their days in gloomy anguiſh, without a conſoling friend to pour the balm of comfort into their drooping hearts.

THE 8th inſt. a Neapolitan courier brought the advices of diſturbances between the French and the people of Rome, which continued four days, during which time much blood was ſhed; the latter obtained the ſuperiority. Two thouſand of the French loſt their lives: and 500 were confined in the caſtle of St. Angelo. The remainder were encamped without the city, waiting for reinforcements. The diſturbances were owing to the cruelty with which the Republicans exacted the firſt payment of the requiſition of four millions of livres.

BOURDEAUX, March 22.

Intelligence from Madrid announces great changes in the Spaniſh government. A revolution was on the tapis, at the head of which was the King himſelf.—Great reforms were in agitation, the revival of the Cortes and the appointment to miniſtry of men without prejudice. The count of Cabar is to be miniſter of finance—and the prince of Peace to exchange his high poſt, and the unbounded power he has ſo long enjoyed, for the embaſſy to France.

LONDON, March 13.

The Auſtrian government has publiſhed a plan of the new organization of the continental dominions of Venice, by which the ancient laws and regulations are reſtored, and the nobility and other corporations reinſtated in the privileges they enjoyed previous to the invaſion of the French. All the inſtitutions formed by democracy are annulled. The eccleſiaſtical authorities as well as the ancient tribunals are re-eſtabliſhed on their ancient footing. The councils in the provinces, called the noble councils, are to nominate to public places, and a ſpecial commiſſion is to be appointed for the purpoſe of auditing the accounts of the adminiſtration of the ſeveral democratic governments.

March 15.

To the intelligence which we yeſterday received from Plymouth, of the preparations making in France for a ſpeedy deſcent on this country, we muſt add the ſubſtance of information brought by a ſeaman who had been a priſoner in France, and who had arrived at Falmouth on Friday laſt in a cartel. He ſtates the French force in Breſt harbor and Breſt water to conſiſt of twenty-one or twenty-two of the line, about eight of which were nearly equipped, and the greateſt diligence was employed in fitting the remainder for ſea; one of theſe failed on the 6th inſt. into the outer road, in which lay eleven frigates, a corvette, and three armed brigs. The frigates were ready for ſea.

No letters have for theſe three or four weeks been received from capt. Cotes, our agent for priſoners in France, from which it is concluded, that his letters are intercepted by an order from the directory.

Private letters from the Hague mention, that the Batavian government demurs to accede to the propoſitions of the executive directory, for prohibiting the entry of any merchandize or goods from Great Britain. Every perſon converſant with the trade to Holland knows that the Dutch cannot even ſubſiſt without a commercial intercourſe with this country.

By the laſt accounts from ſir R. Strachan, who is now blocking up the port of Havre, it appears that there are nine frigates and corvettes in that port ready to put to ſea.

From Breſt we learn, that there are twenty ſail of the line in that port; of which 18 are ſuppoſed to be fit for ſea, and of thoſe nine were ready to ſail at a moment's warning; from Havre, it appears that there are nine frigates and corvetts in that port ready to put to ſea. There are alſo a very conſiderable number of gun boates, but nothing goes in or comes out ſince ſir Richard's ſquadron has remained off that port.

Yeſterday government iſſued a proclamation, offering a reward of 200l. to any perſon who ſhall diſcover and cauſe to be apprehended Robert Thomas Groſsfield, charged on oath with the high treaſon of being guilty of high treaſon. Groſsfield is the ſame perſon who was in cuſtody ſome time ſince for having cauſed a poiſoned dart to be diſcharged at his majeſty, which it was ſuppoſed was intended to have been thrown at the king when in the theatre.

We have reaſon to believe that our preparations for ſecret expeditions, which are now carrying on, create the greateſt alarm among the French rulers, notwithſtanding their pompous and arrogant threats of invading and ſubjugating this country.—We are confident, that the carrying the projected expeditions into prompt execution will not only tend to rouſe the ſpirit of Engliſhmen, but perplex and appal our inſolent and implacable foe.

April 12.

Yeſterday a cabinet council was held at which all the miniſters in town attended. It is conjectured, that the object of the council's meeting was to conſider of the propriety of recommending a general arming of the people, by forming aſſociations in every diſtrict of the kingdom; the time of exercile to be ſo appointed as to interfere as little as poſſible with the occupations of thoſe who are engaged in buſineſs, but who are ſtill anxious to ſhow their zeal in the defence of the country.

It is perfectly true that his majeſty intends to hoiſt the royal ſtandard in the camp about to be marked out near Windſor, in which neighbourhood vaſt magazines of flour are now forming, ſo as to ſupply the environs of the metropolis in caſe the enemy ſhould effect a landing in either of the adjacent counties lying near the ſea, by which there might be a momentary interruption to the communication with the port of London.

We learn by a letter from Venice, of the 14th ult. that an Auſtrian army is aſſembling in the vicinity of Verona, which is to be joined by a part of the garriſon of Venice.

Diſpatches were yeſterday received at lord Grenville's office from Liſbon, which are underſtood to contain an intimation of a treaty of peace between France and Portugal being in a conſiderable ſtate of forwardneſs, through the mediation of the court of Spain.

In conſequence of a letter ſent on Wedneſday by Mr. Secretary Dundas to the Lord Mayor, to know what volunteer corps, beſides the militia, were at preſent raiſed in the city of London, for the defence of the country, his Lordſhip held a meeting of Aldermen yeſterday at the Manſion houſe. We underſtand that requiſitions are to be immediately iſſued to invite volunteers in every ward to incorporate themſelves in a body for the above purpoſe.

The city of Hamburgh has ſettled her differences with the French Directory, by paying a ranſom of ſix millions of livres [illegible]nois.

The following state of the French and Spanish navies, which, we are informed, is generally correct, shows that our enemies are determined to omit no exertions that may enable them to meet us at sea. There can arise no apprehensions with respect to the republican force at Brest; but the situation of Lord St. Vincent, who, with only 33 ships of the line, will have to contend, as appears from the following statement, with no less a force than 66 line of battle ships, should they succeed in effecting a junction, must be highly interesting. The acknowledged circumspection of Lord Spencer will, no doubt, provide against such an event, by sending a proper reinforcement to the gallant Admiral.

ALEXANDRIA, May 8.

The editor of the Columbian Mirror was, at a late hour last evening, politely favored with three separate files of London papers, viz. the Sun, the Star, and the Times, up to the 16th of March which are latter by three days than any accounts heretofore received. He takes the earliest opportunity of laying a portion of such interesting contents before his patrons.

From a careful perusal of those papers, that the French directory entertained serious apprehensions as to the approaching election, and that the people were very generally disatisfied with their conduct. That there is not the least probability of the French being successful in their intended invasion as the rage for voluntary contribution had extended its influence to all classes, and the cruising squadrons of Great Britain had been particularly successful in taking and destroying some of the convoys collecting for that purpose.

The cabinet council of Great Britain have been occupied in the examination of persons taken up for treasonable practices: and every day's experience teach us, that there are wretches in all countries.

NORFOLK, May 8.

By a gentleman who arrived in town on Sunday from Cape Francois, and who came passenger in the ship John and Jane, Capt. Adams, to Baltimore, we are favoured with the following particulars: that the new governor, Hedouville, arrived at the Cape the 19th April, from St. Domingo; that the administration continued their depredations on every kind of provisions on board of American vessels bound to their ports, giving them in return their administration notes; that Toussaint was hourly expected at the Cape, from his unsuccessful expedition against the British possessions, in which he had lost between 5 and 6000 men; that Burney had received, by the last frigates from France, his promotion to the rank of vice-admiral; that Raymond and Pascal are appointed delegates to represent them in France, and were about to embark in one of the last sailing frigates to go home.

Amsterdam, March 20, 1798.

Mr. Benjamin Russell, Boston.

Sir,

I avail myself of the first opportunity to acquaint you that the ship America, capt. Henshaw, from New-York, lately brought in here by a French cruiser, has been immediately released by the consul of that nation; and I am happy to add, that every thing will be done here to support and protect the intercourse with the United States.

My letters by the last mail from Paris mention that our envoys have lately had several conferences with the Minister of foreign affairs——result not known.

I am your obedient servant.

SYLVANUS BOURNE,

Another letter from the above gentleman, says, that Mr. Gerry had informed him, that the envoys had three conferences with the Minister for foreign affairs, and that the negociation appeared to be in good train.

NEW YORK, May 18.

Guns, the only sure Role d'Equipage.

Among the many happy consequences of arming merchant vessels, we instance with peculiar pleasure the ship Belvidere, Capt. Reynolds, owned by Mr. Arden of this city, which has safely arrived at Philadelphia. In the Gulf Stream, Capt. R. fell in with a French pirate, which gave chace to him, and must unquestionably have made a prize of him, had he not possessed the means and the resolution to defend himself. No sooner had the pirate come within gun shot, than Capt. R. hove too and nobly repulsed the picaroon. Capt. R. generously took under convoy, the ship Warren, Captain Fawn, for Virginia. Capt. Reynolds well deserves, and will doubtless receive the plaudits of his countrymen for preserving from French rapacity a fine ship and valuable cargo.

From good authority we learn, that the ship Ganges, which carries 22 nine pounders, and 120 men, will be ready to sail from Philadelphia in a day or two. The crew are said to be as fine men as ever went on board any ship of war. We hope the may prove a scourge to some of the infernal pirates who seize neutral merchantmen indiscriminately.

THE ORACLE.

WEST-NIAGARA, June 23.

York, June 5, 1798.

This day at one o'clock, his Honor the PRESIDENT came down to the Legislative Council in the usual state, and being seated on the Throne, was pleased to make the following SPEECH to the two Houses of Legislature:

Hon. Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, And Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

I called you together at an early period this year, in the hope that you may be able to finish the business of the Session before the commencement of your approaching harvest.

Agreeable to the powers with which I was vested by an Act of the last Session, Commissioners have been appointed for the purpose of arranging a provisional agreement with Lower Canada; and they will proceed upon the object of their mission as soon as official information arrives of Commissioners having been appointed to meet them on the part of that province. In the exercise of the authority given me at the same time by another act, I did not find it expedient to suspend the operation of other parts of the ordinances relative to a commercial intercourse between the United States and this province, than of such as related to the registering of vessels; you may consequently judge proper to digest such further regulations for carrying that intercourse into proper effect, as may appear to you to be necessary and conducive with the reciprocal interests naturally subsisting between the two provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

I have directed to be laid before you the report sent me by the inspector stationed at the Coteau du Lac, of dutiable articles which have passed that post upwards in the course of the last year. You will also receive at the same time, an account of the Provincial Revenues which have been paid into your Treasurer's hands since your last meeting, with their application.

Honorable Gentlemen, and Gentlemen,

I lament that I have no favorable intelligence to communicate to you respecting the approach of Peace; and that, not having received any late dispatches from the Secretary of State, I am equally unable to announce to you the Royal Pleasure on your Address to his Majesty, and the two unconfirmed Acts of your last Session, which I transmitted home immediately after.

York having been selected for the Capital of the province, it will appear of course to you, to be expedient that it should be made the Capital also of a District; I submit to you therefore, the propriety of dividing the Home into two separate Districts. You may probably at the same time take into your consideration, the expediency of revising and altering the boundaries of some of the other districts.

P. R. PRESIDENT.

ADDRESS

Of the honorable Legislative Council in answer to his honor the PRESIDENT's speech:—

To the honorable PETER RUSSELL, esq President, administering the government of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOR,

We, his Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the members of the legislative council in provincial parliament assembled, return your Honor our thanks for calling the legislature together at that season of the year, when under the present circumstances of the country the attendance on our public duty may be the least prejudicial to our private affairs.

We will chearfully concur in any further regulations respecting a commercial intercourse with the United States, that may be calculated to promote the reciprocal interests of the provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

We join with your Honor in lamenting that there is yet no favorable intelligence respecting the approach of peace; but we have the fullest confidence, that the magnanimous and unparralleled exertions of our parent state, will procure a speedy and honorable termination of our struggles with France.

We shall take into our consideration the propriety of dividing the Home district into two separates districts; and also the expediency of revising and altering the boundaries of some of the other districts.

(Signed) JOHN ELMSLEY, Speaker.

Legislative Council chamber, York, June 7, '98.

ADDRESS

Of the Commons House of Assembly in answer to his honor the PRESIDENT's speech:—

To his honor PETER RUSSELL, esq President administering the government of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOR,

We, his majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Commons House of Assembly of Upper Canada, in parliament met, beg leave to return your Honor the thanks of this house for your Honor's speech.

We acknowledge our obligations to your Honor, for calling us together at this season of the year, certainly the most favorable for our several occupations during the present state of the roads, and other communications, and for providing so suitable a house for our temporary reception.

We trust, that the new commissioners will provide a system for the future arrangements between Upper and Lower Canada, upon a basis which shall be reciprocal to the interests which ought naturally to subsist between the two provinces. We therefore observe with pleasure, that the sister colony has directed the Inspector stationed at the Coteau du Lac, to continue to you his reports of the dutiable articles which have passed that post upwards, in the course of the last year.

We lament with your Honor, there is so little appearance of the approach of peace, and cannot omit (considering the circumstances of other countries) to return thanks to the Great Director of all things, for the tranquillity this infant colony has experienced.

We perceive forcibly, the good which must result to his Majesty's Courts and departments, as well as to all classes of people, by the fixing and making known some certain place for the seat of government.

And we readily see the necessity of the Home district being divided, and of York being made the capital of a new district; we shall therefore endeavor to effect so desireable a purpose: and should we see the necessity of other alterations during our deliberation, we shall take the advantage of them for the public good, and the convenience of his Majesty's subjects.

York, June 6, '98.

By a gentleman from the Forty mile-creek we are informed, that on Thursday last a dead body was seen floating upon the surface of the lake, about 8 miles above that place, supposed to be the body of one of the unfortunate persons that was lost this spring in this river.

MORAL.

MIND your business—govern your passions—pay your debts; keep good temper; send home what you borrow, and be willing to lend. Be industrious in getting, and prudent in spending, and you will grow in riches. Be honest and obliging to your family and neighbours, and you will grow in their esteem. Be no blasphemer or lunatic, but soberly religious, and you will grow in the favor of God and be happy here and hereafter.

MILAN, March 1.

THE following are the details of the diſcomfiture in the garriſon of Mantua. The 23d Pluviose, in the morning, the inhabitants of Mantua remarked an extraordinary movement in the French garriſon. Theſe troops aſſembled ſuddenly at the Place d'Armes, with ſix pieces of cannon, lighted matches, arms and baggage; and there took up a line of march to quit the city, declaring that they intended to return to France to demand their pay, of which they had not received a farthing for 4 months paſt. Gen. Miollis immediately ordered all the gates to be ſhut, and ſent his aid-decamps to quiet the ſoldiers; but it was not until after much remonſtrance, that they conſented to remain, on condition that their pay ſhould be given to them the next day. The adminiſtration, upon a written requiſition of gen. Miollis, immediately ordered a forced loan of four hundred thouſand livres. After emptying all the public cheſts, and applying to the capitaliſts and perſons in affluent circumſtances, they at length raiſed the neceſſary ſum, by the time appointed. They alſo put in requiſition 5000 ſhirts and 5000 pair of ſhoes, of which the French troops were totally deſtitute.

The executive directory of the Ciſalpine republic, has given orders that this loan be reimburſed as ſoon as poſſible, as well as the other articles furniſhed the garriſon.

STRASBURG, March 12.

All the difficulties which have hitherto oppoſed the re-eſtabliſhment of peace in Germany, do not yet ſeem to be done away. It is now certain that Auſtria and Pruſſia are not agreed as to the indemnification which ought to be reciprocally made to them, in the new partition of the empire. Pruſſia will not be contented with an equivalent for the countries which the cedes on the left bank of the Rhine; ſhe deſires conſiderable reunions, in order to be able to maintain the political equilibrium of Germany, and keep head with Auſtria, whoſe power will be conſiderably encreaſed by the poſſeſſion of a part of Bavaria, and the Biſhopricks of Saltſburg and Paſſau. The emperor, on the contrary, beholds with a jealous eye, the projected aggrandizemedt of Pruſſia, and oppoſes it in every way he poſſibly can. We are aſſured that the cabinet of Berlin, irritated at the proceedings of the court of Vienna, has declared to it, that the king of Pruſſia would not ſeek to augment his power at the expence of the ſmaller ſtates of Germany; but that he ſhould expect the ſame on the part of the cabinet of Vienna into conſiderable perplexity. It is not known what anſwer will be given to the king of Pruſſia.

BASLE, March 12.

All the details reſpecting the taking over by the enemies of both governments; conſidering alſo, that on account of this refuſal, the French republic reſumes all its rights over the Ciſalpine territory, it is decreed (among other things) 1ſt. There ſhall be raiſed a contribution for the ſupport of the troops of the French republic in Italy, to the number of 21 including the preſident) who had been appointed members of the Ciſalpine council of Ancients, by the general in chief, ſhall be ſuſpended and their perſons arreſted.

It is thought that the motives which induced the Ciſalpince council of Ancients to reject the treaty are:

1. The article which obliged the Ciſalpines to furniſh, for a time not limited, 18 millions for the ſupport of 25,000 French troops. 2. That which required them to fortify at their own expence, and under the direction of French engineers, certain places to remain always in the hands of garriſons chiefly compoſed of French troops. 3. The article in which it is ſtipulated, that the Ciſalpine army ſhall always be under the command of French officers.

We hear from Geneva, that on the 21ſt Ventoſe the adminiſtrative council aſſembled extraordinarily, and drew up the plan of a law, which will ſhortly be preſented to the ſovereign council, for the purpoſe of authoriſing the nomination of a commiſſioner empowered to treat of the re-union of Geneva to the French republic.

The Emperor is ill: his phyſicians fear he has not ſix months to live. He is ſhortly to go to Piſa for his health. During his abſence, the archduke Charles is to be empowered to tranſact the affairs.

All the details reſpecting the taking of Berne by the French, confirm the account already received, that this conqueſt was the conſequence of a moſt murderous battle, in which the militia, provided with any arms but ſcythes and clubs, came and placed themſelves at the mouths of the cannon, and were torn in pieces by the ſhot—Even when the French ſoldiers, through humanity, wiſhed to ſpare them, and cried out to them to ſurrender, they ruſhed on the cannon, to hinder them from advancing againſt their country. We are aſſured, that 800 women who had joined the troops of Berne were left on the field of battle, and that 6000 lives of French and Swiſs were loſt in different engagements.

PARIS, March 23.

It is ſaid that the council of elders of the Ciſalpine republic has refuſed to ſanction the treaty of alliance and commerce, which her plenipotentiaries had concluded with the French republic.

March 25.

We have before announced that the council of Ancients, of the Ciſalpine republic, has rejected the treaty of alliance which its plenipotentiaries had concluded with the French republic. This news is not only true, but it is ſaid that the French executive directory, enraged at their refuſal to ſanction the treaty concluded between the plenipotentiaries of the two republics, have paſſed a ſevere arret, by which conſidering that all the territory of the Ciſalpine republic has been conquered by French republicans, and that the independence which was granted to it, was on condition of a treaty of alliance, neceſſary for both people, but of which the acceptation has been hindered by the intrigues of certain perſons, bought

NEW-YORK, May 22.

The following letter from Caymittes, (Weſt Indies) dated the 9th of April laſt, was very politely handed to us by a reſpectable merchant of this city.

"I have been here ſince the 20th of Feb. The day on which I arrived alarm guns were fired at every port in this quarter. To the weſt, where we have the ſtrong fort at Irois, the alarm was fired three days before.—There we were attacked by Rigaud and his army of 3500 men, the ſhock was dreadful, 105 of their men were left before the poſt, ſince which we have attacked and caried several of their posts. They have a chain of strong forts communicating one with the other of an extent of 40 miles, and had effectually cut off our land commerce between Irois and L'Ilet with Jeremie.—Gen. Spencer has effectually broken through the whole of them with only a force of 410 British huffars and 722 black colonists; but we have lost 2 British officers and 58 men killed, 2 French officers and 63 colonists killed, 6 British officers and 150 men wounded: 1 French officer and 90 colonists wounded. We however keep them at bay and have plenty of provisions. The enemy are short of provisions. We expect news from thence (Irois) every moment. On this side Rigaud's brother commands—His little army is divided into three columns of about 600 men each; of these they have already lost 300 killed, and twice that number wounded. They attacked and carried Fort Thomas about 8 miles from hence, in three quarters of an hour; we lost 39 officers killed and 31 men, 2 officers wounded and 37 men, all colonists; and they left dead on the field 82 men, their wounded were many; since that they have attacked a post called Lascabes, with a field piece; but were repulsed with very great loss. They have taken, or rather we have evacuated, two posts of 100 men each, on their appearing with two field pieces; but the other frontier posts have cannon from 8 to 3 pounders; in a word, the war in this quarter is very hot, and to me is very unfortunate."

PHILADELPHIA, May 28.

Extract of a letter from Mr. Fenwick, to his friend in this city, dated Bourdeaux, March 21, 1798.

"As to the magnanimity and generosity of the rulers of the great nation towards private persons, while in the great chaos of nation revolutions, and the supplications of states and empires, we fear the just lamentations of individuals will go unheard.—What can a poor trader of Philadelphia, represented by an humble conful, expect, after seeing three extraordinary envoys and plenipotentiaries at the gates of the directorial palace, without admiffion to an audience, and at a time when these plenipotentiaries muft be daily warned of additional fhock wounds of the long injured and oppreffed commerce of their nation? If fuch a melancholy fact could give any relief to the neceffitated individual who is kept out of his funds, it would be fome what lefs afflicting to relate it. Paying debts, hearkening to diftrefs, and juftice, is not the faihion of the times: levying contributions, giving law, and humiliating nations, is the theme of the day. And while proud Albion and the Hanoverian race tremble, while Rome and the children of Fabins are under chaftifement for fupporting the fceptre of Oftavian and the crimes of Nero, can the well born brethren of Mr. Jay, expect to efcape. Pardon me for this digreffion.

"There is nothing new on the fub-chant, capt. Roffeter, failed from New-York on the 6th inft. for Briftol, and after being out only 24 hours was taken ject of our negociations at Paris; the envoys are ftill there without ever having had an audience, and it is generally thought their miffion will be ineffectual. I participate in this opinion, for had taken the Thomas, from Liverpool to Philadelphia, on the fame and unleis the current of French fuc- ceffs, or the politics of America, under- goes fome change, it will be impoffible to fore fee the iffue of the preient dif- ord between the two nations."

[My readers may be affured, that this extract is authentic. It was handed to me by a merchant of this city, whofe veracity is undoubted:] Porcupine.

Lofs of the Brak floop of war.

On Friday afternoon, the Brak, a Britifh floop of war, capt. Drew juft at the entrance of Old Kiln Roads, and within half a mile of the Light-houfe, was unfortunately upfet, by a fudden fquall, and inftantly funk: capt. Drew, all his officers (except the boatfwain and mates)—about 40 of the crew, and 39 Spanifh prifoners were drowned, although every affiftance was immediately afforded by two pilot boats then in fight—The Brak failed from Cork with the fleet for this country, but parted from them off the Weftern Iles in a gale of wind—about 30 days fince fell in with and captured a rich Spanifh fhip, out 80 days from La Plata, bound to Cadiz, with 200 tons of copper, &c. on board, and had juft brought her in fafe to the Delaware when the melancholy accident happened.

ALBANY, June 1.

In Philadelphia and feveral other principal cities of the union volunteer corps are forming for the defence of the country. This is truly patriotic. If men whofe wives, children and property are at ftake, did not difplay alacrity in their country's cauie; can they expect it from thofe who fight for pay only—and who have no fuch inducements to animate their exertions in a trying hour?

"The fpirit of the Times" has given birth to a fubfcription in Newbury-Port (Maffachufetts) for building a twenty gunfhip, to be completed in 90 days, and offered on loan to government.

Extract of a letter from the American agent at Algeziras, to Mr. Izuardi, the American conful at Cadiz, 12th March 1798.

"On the 12th, the copper bottomed fhip Hunter, of New-York, was brought in here. She is loaded with fifh, oil, nankeens, muflins, &c. and bound to Genoa, Marfeilles, and the Eaft-Indies. There is a difpute between the French and Spanifh privateers to know who boarded her firft. The capt. unfortunately fired one of his guns, he fays, with powder, and no lead, but the captors fay he fired in his defence with fhot. I fear he will have much trouble in getting clear, as his cargo is valuable!"

French Fraternity.

A number of French privateers are now on our coaft. Their object appears to be the capture of veffels bound to or from England. The fhip Merchant, capt. Rofeter, failed from New-York on the 6th inft. for Briftol, and after being out only 24 hours was taken and carried into Bourdeaux by one of thofe freebooters and orderly thought their miffion will be inef- fectual. I participate in this opinion, for had taken the Thomas, from Liverpool to Philadelphia, on the fame and unleis the current of French fuc- ceffs, or the politics of America, under- goes fome change, it will be impoffible to fore fee the iffue of the preient dif- ord between the two nations."

Congress of the United States.

On Friday, the 11th May, the houfe of repreientatives of the United States again went into a committee of the whole on the bill for authorifing the preident of the United States to raife a provifional army, when Mr. Dawfon moved to amend the amendment propofed by the felect committee, by ftriking out the following words—"or of imminent danger of fuch invafion, difcovered, in his opinion, to exift." This motion was negatived, 48 to 51. Mr. Sewall then propoied, inftead of the Prefident having the power to raife this army for three years, to infert the following—before the next feffion of congreis which is or fhall be appointed by law. After undergoing feveral variations the propofition was at length agreed to in the following words—before the next feffion of congreis.

Mr. Sitgreaves next moved to ftrike out the following words from the bill, with the intention of inferting nothing in their place, with a view that the army might be immediately raiied—whenever he fhall judge the public fafety requires the meafure. The queftion for ftriking out was carried, but they were fupplied by the words recommended by the felect committee viz. "in the event of a declaration of war againft the United States, or of actual invafion, difcovered, in his opinion, to exift," 68 votes being for it. The next propoiition of the felect committee was to reduce the number of men to be raiied, from 20,000 to 10,000. Mr. Gallatin moved to reduce them to 5000. This motion was negatived, 47 to 41, and that for inferting 10,000 carried, by 54 votes being in its favor. Some diicuffion then took place on the propoiition for giving the prefident power to call out the militia in detachments, not exceeding 20,000 men each, to be trained and difciplined; but fome doubts of a conftitutional nature being fuggefted, the committee roie, reported progreis, and had leave to fit again. On motion of Mr. Harper, who ipoke of fom buiineis which would require the attention of the committee of ways and means on Saturday, the houfe adjourned till Monday.

June 4.

Mr. Fenwick, American conful at Bourdeaux, writes to a reipectable mercantile houfe in Philadelphia, under the date of April 2—"There is no change in the fituation of affairs relative to America. Two of our envoys are about quitting Paris, Mr. Pinckney and Mr. Marihall."

Capt. Brown, who arrived laft week at Philadelphia from Bourdeaux, confirms the above intelligence. He left Bourdeaux the 3d of April, and in a converfation with Mr. Fenwick on the preceding day, was informed by the latter, that our envoys remained at Paris without any proipect of accomplifhing the object of their miffion, and that matters were becoming worfe and worfe.

THE ORACLE.

WEST-NIAGARA, June 30.

Newark, June 27, 1798.

The anniverfary of the feftival of St. John falling on a Sunday, the celebration of the day was deferred to the 25th inft. when the Grand Lodge, and the other Lodges in town, walked up to Wilfon's tavern to meet their Brethren from Queenfton and the Mountain—About one o'clock a procefiion was formed of the following Lodges, viz. The Grand Lodge; the Grand Maiter's Lodge; Lodge No. 2; Lodge No. 4, and Lodge No. 12: They walked to Blinds's hotel, and as ioon as the buiineis of the day was over, they fat down to an elegant dinner. Many loyal and Maionic toafts were drank, and the Brethren parted at eight o'clock in the evening with the greateft harmony!

His majeity has fubfcribed 20,000l iterling to the voluntary contributions upwards carrying on the war, and promiied the like ium annually during it continuance; a very ftriking diiplay of loyal munificence.

It is reported (fays a New-York paper of the 18 of May) that a veffel has arrived at Boiton, in a fhort paiiage from Liverpool, and that by her advices has been received, that the directory had appointed a day to confer with the American miniiters.

A letter from Bourdeaux, of the 25th March, fays, that feveral veffels from Baltimore and Charleiton, bound to Spain and Holland, laden with rice, fugar, coffee, and tobacco, had been captured by French privateers, and fent in to that port; but their fate had not been determined. That no infurance on neutral veffels could be effected at any premium.

The fame letter adds, they had heard that the American envoys had demanded indemnity for the veffels captured but no anfwer had been returned.—Nevertheleis, the Directory had, in the mean time, demanded twenty-five millions of livres from America, previous to entering upon any negociations.

A file of French papers to March 28 are now in our hands, but we have but few minutes allowed us to extract from them.

We find nothing in the French papers reipecting American affairs—and little about the invaiion of England.—They ridicule the idea of any aiiiftance from the Spanifh fleet.—A French Gazette fays, "if the Spaniih come to us, they muft fight—if they fight, they will be beat"—and conclude it beft for them to ftay in the port of Cadiz, in order to render the Britiih force againft them, 21 fail weaker.

The following is from the Gazette Bordelaiie, of the 21ft of March:

The French have found in the Swiis, an enemy worthy their bravery. The ci-devant regiment of Waterville had juft been re-organized—In the late action it was cut to pieces. Seven men only remained—Diidaining to furvive their comrades, they threw themielves into the ranks of the French army, and perifhed.

The following is given in a Philadelphia paper, as the ſubſtance of the diſpatches lately received by the American government from Mr. Murray, their Ambaſſador at the Hague, dated March 12:

The French Directory lately explained in preciſe terms to the court of Madrid, their plans with regard to Spaniſh monarchy.—Theſe were:

That the Catholic King ſhould cede to France, Louiſiana and the Floridas.

That his majeſty ſhould conſent to the French republic's taking poſſeſſion of Brazil.

That the tract of country anciently known under the name of Cantabria, (including the provinces of Biſcay and Guipuſcoa, together with the whole extent of Pyrennes, from the Atlantic to the Mediterranean) ſhould be erected into an independent republic.

In return the Directory offered, that France ſhould guarantee to his Catholic Majeſty, his poſſeſſions in the Weſt Indies, and unite to Spain the kingdom of Portugal, which the republican armies, with the permiſſion and concurrence of the court of Madrid, would conquer in the courſe of this ſummer.

A categorical and immediate anſwer to theſe propoſitions was demanded with the menace that a refuſal or a delay would be conſidered as the ſignal of a rupture, and that the French troops would inſtantly enter Spain.

Perſons well informed in Holland, have expreſſed a decided opinion that the court of Madrid would reject theſe terms. And the accounts received from Liſbon of the diſgrace of the Favorite, leave little or no room to doubt, that a negative anſwer has been given, and that Charles IV. does not mean to loſe his throne and his life without a ſtruggle.

On Tueſday the 22d ult. Mr. Sitgreaves propoſed the following reſolutions in the Houſe of Repreſentatives of the U. S. which were ordered to lie on the table till Wedneſday.

"Reſolved, That the commanders of the private armed veſſels of the United States, be authoriſed, by law, to take or deſtroy any cruizers of the French republic, which ſhall attack them on the high ſeas, for the purpoſe of ſearch or ſeizure.

"Reſolved, That the commanders of the public armed veſſels of the United States be authorized and directed to take or deſtroy any cruizer of the French republic, which may be found attacking any veſſel of the United States, for the purpoſe of ſearch or ſeizure.

"Reſolved, That the commanders of ſloop Druſilla, capt. Keen, from New-York, the public and private armed veſſels of the United States be authorized to retake any veſſel of the United States which may have been captured by the cruizers of the French republic, and to take and deſtroy any cruizer which may have made ſuch capture.

"Reſolved, That the public armed veſſels of the United States be authoriſed and directed to take or deſtroy all armed cruizers of the French republic which may be found on the coaſt of the United States, within leagues of the ſhore.

No Quarters!

On the 7th inſt. a brig from Nova Scotia was taken and burnt, about 10 leagues S. S. E. of Sandy Hook, by a French privateer, the capt. of which informed the captain of the brig, that his orders were, in caſe any American armed veſſel made reſiſtance, to give no quarters!—Our authority for this intelligence is the Commercial Advertiſer; if true, the French have indeed degenerated into Algerines.

Philadelphia, June 5.

Diſpatches in cyphers have been received by government, from the miniſters of the U. S. in France, Spain, and Holland.

We underſtand that thoſe diſpatches are dated the 4th of April, at which period our commiſſioners were not received by the executive directory. We alſo underſtand that Meſſ. Pinckney and Marihall were about to leave Paris, but that Mr. Gerry remained there.

Extract of a letter from an officer on board the Ganges, dated Delaware Cape, May 30th.

We are juſt diſcharging our pilot and are all in perfect health and good ſpirits. We ſhall proceed to ſea as ſoon as poſſible, in purſuit of a French privateer lately ſeen. We have every thing for action, and I hope will ſoon be able to give them a ſpecimen of the force of American metal. The privateer is a ſchooner of 16 guns, and full of men. We have juſt heard of the bill having paſſed both houſes of congreſs for taking French privateers. This intelligence was given us by a pilot who this morning brought freſh inſtructions for capt. Dale. The Revenue cutter is in company with us, we have juſt been examining our men, and proving the guns, which anſwer our moſt ſanguine expectations.

New York, June 5.

Yeſterday being the birth-day of his Britannic Majeſty, the ſeveral Engliſh veſſels in our harbor diſplayed their colours in honor of the ſame. The Conſtitution cutter was ſuperbly ornamented with various foreign colours and flags, among which the American held the moſt honorable and conſpicuous place! Many reſpectable Engliſh gentlemen, we are informed, dined together in commemoration of that day. At one o'clock, the Conſtitution cutter and the armed brig, Earl Moira, fired each a royal ſalute!

Alexandria, June 2. American properly protected by American courage.—Arrived, the ſhip Hunter, capt. Rogers, from Amſterdam, 67 days paſſage. Left there the 3d inſt. the ſhip Mercury, capt. Hall, for Philadelphia, and the ſhip Hope, capt. Hall, for Baltimore. Left Cowes the 28th April, the ſhip Betſey, capt. Hall, for Philadelphia. Left Liverpool the 30th April, the ſhip Hannah, capt. Hall, for Philadelphia. Left Briſtol the 1ſt inſt. the ſhip Briſtol, capt. Hall, for Philadelphia. Left Dublin the 4th inſt. the ſhip Dublin, capt. Hall, for Philadelphia. Left Cork the 5th inſt. the ſhip Cork, capt. Hall, for Philadelphia. Left Briſtol the 1ſt inſt. the ſhip Briſtol, capt. Hall, for Philadelphia. Left Dublin the 4th inſt. the ſhip Dublin, capt. Hall, for Philadelphia. Left Cork the 5th inſt. the ſhip Cork, capt. Hall, for Philadelphia.

Bedford. While capt. Keen lay at New-Bedford, a brig commanded by captain Hathway had arrived there from Turk's Island, was chased by a French privateer schooner; but fortunately fell in with the ship Felicity, capt. Brookes, of this port, then in company with the ship Columbia and brig George. The New-Bedford brig came up to leeward of the Felicity, and was followed by the privateer, who immediately received a broadside from the Felicity—the privateer then run on, and came down to the windward with an intention of boarding; but was prevented by another broad side from the Felicity, which stove in the broad-side of the privateer—and she went away entirely upon a careen.

Philadelphia, June 8. Yesterday morning the frigate United States, John Barry, esq; commander, weighed anchor, and sailed down the river; she reached the fort and came to about noon; there not being sufficient depth of water at ebb tide, to admit of the ship passing the shoal below the island.

The Delaware sloop of war (formerly the Hamburg packet) Stephen Devater, esq; commander, will be ready for sea in a few days: her crew being all engaged, and the carpenter's work completed. The Delaware carries 16 nines below, and 4 sixes on the quarter deck.

Boston, June 4. Yesterday Mr. Wm. Lee, and Mr. Hopkins, arrived in town from Marblehead, where they were landed by a fishing boat, in which they took passage off Cape Sable, from on board an American ship bound from Bourdeaux to Philadelphia. These gentlemen have dispatches from our envoys in France, which are forwarded to government; they dined with the envoys the day before they left Paris (20th March) from whom they learnt that the Directory were still deaf to the voice of reason, and that they expected to leave the republic very shortly.

American Bravery.

Friday arrived the armed ship, Sea Nymph, M'Dougall, of and from Martinico, 23 days. Sailed in company with the Friendship, Norris, of Providence, bound to Charleston; schooner Hero, of Baltimore, and an English schooner, which capt. M'Dougall generously continued with and protected. On the 5th May, a French privateer of 10 guns and 70 men, hove in sight, made several attempts to cut off the unarmed vessels, and continued to follow them for several days; on the 8th, it became entirely calm, the ship then above 6 miles a-head of the defenceless vessels; the privateer seeing the state of the convoy, immediately rowed among them, and but for the magnanimous conduct of a part of the ship Sea Nymph's company, would probably have plundered them of every thing they possessed. The heroic and disinterested action, which rescued from the jaws of repacity three valuable vessels and cargoes, deserves particular mention. Perceiving the object of the privateer, and night coming on, capt. Js. Younger, mate of the ship, proposed taking the boat, and with small arms to beat off the pirate; immediately five others of the crew, viz. John Dixon, Henry Hubert, John Brack, Thos. Nelson, and Wm. Wheeler, offered their services; the boat was armed with muskquetry, and these brave men rowed the distance of 6 miles, when coming with in pistol shot of the privateer, it being dark, they had the advantage of observing the enemy from their lights, without being observed by them; they then began their bold enterprize, and keeping a stern, discharged their small arms with such well directed fires, as to create great confusion and dismay among the crew of the privateer. This assault they continued, till a cannon shot from the enemy carried away a part of the stern of their boat, when the boat leaking very fast, and their ammunition nearly expended, they thought proper to give up the unequal conteſt, and return to their ship, which they effected in safety. In the morning they discovered that their foe had made off without molesting the convoy.—A breeze springing, the vessels came up, and continued their voyage, under the protection of their brave and deserving protectors.

Albany, June 11.

We are informed, there is a letter in town from New York, which mentions that the American ship Ganges, has captured a French privateer of 18 guns, after an hour's engagement, and sent her into Philadelphia.—Thus hostilities on both sides have unequivocally commenced between this infant republic and the most powerful nation in Europe. It is to be lamented that Federal policy has had too great a share in producing this state of things; but since the "Rubicon is passed," we must consider France as our Foe: and that "Hercules in his cradle may prove a match for Hercules with his club," should not only be the wish of every true American, but all such should be ready and willing to exert themselves in their country's cause.

The Government of Ireland, has, for a long time submitted to the violence of its enemies and the reproaches of its friends. It contented itself with adhering to the rules of the constitution, and the forms of the law, in favour of those who preached up one as a mockery, and the other as abomination. It rested in an unaccountable reserve, and looked only to positive statutes and established maxims, while magistrates were murdering—while witnesses were undergoing assassination—while juries were intimidated—while nocturnal house-breaking, pillage, and bloodshed, formed the common subject of correspondence and conversation. It was thus tame, and suffered all who wished it well to suffer in person or in mind until the constitution of king, lords and commons, became the common scoff of the vulgar—until no magistrates could be found to act—until no juries could be found to discharge the obligation of their oath—until country and town were filled with assassinations, many committed at noon-day—and until, as a consequence of this mistaken clemency, the disaffected flocking to a standard to declare against the King, and in favour of the French. Gen. Abercromby is appointed commander in chief of the royal force in that kingdom. It would be indecorous to anticipate the official statements of the able an officer, by reports, however credibly made or respectably authenticated. As yet nothing more has taken place, than deserves the name of skirmishing—but it seems certain that the misguided have dared to appear in force, though they have not ventured to risk the consequences of a general engagement. Whenever his majesty's troops have advanced, after a show of hostility, in an exchange of fire for a few minutes, the disaffected have retreated in confusion and dismay.

We hear the best effects are already felt from the proclamation (which will appear in our next) lately issued by government, in consequence of the disturbances. Confidence has revived—contracts are entered into—the funds have risen, and the public are generally impressed with an idea that the trade of assassination, and the reign of terror are at an end.

TO BE SOLD,

AT public auction, on Monday the 2d of July next, at JOHN M'DONAL'S tavern in the town of YORK, a valuable FARM, situate on YONGE STREET, about 12 miles from York, on which are a good LOG HOUSE, and 7 or 8 acres well improved.—The advantages of the above farm, from the richness of its soil, and its being well watered, are not equaled by many farms in the province; and above all, it affords an excellent Salmon-Fishery, large enough to support a number of families, which must be conceived a great advantage in this infant country; the terms will be made known on the day of sale.

BASLE, March 14.

THE Bernese, we understand, have submitted to the following conditions: "The city of Berne is to maintain 4000 French foot, and 1000 horse; the inhabitants of the city, as well as the country people, are to be disarmed; the arsenal is to be given up to the disposal of the French army: a provisional national assembly is to be substituted instead of the former regency; and the Helvetic constitution, received from Paris, is to be accepted."

LONDON, April 6.

DUTCH CONSTITUTION.

The new Batavian constitution contains 308 articles, 5 other regulations, and ten articles as an appendix. According to it, the Batavian republic is to be divided into 8 departments. The representative body is to consist of 90 members, one for every 20,000 souls, and is to be divided into two chambers, one containing 60, and the other 30 members. The first chamber is to propose and the other finally determine. To give a right to vote, it is necessary that the citizen's name be inscribed in the register of votes; that he be twenty years of age, pay certain contributions to the support of society, and have a fixed habitation in the republic. A foreigner must reside in it 10 years to obtain such a right. One third of the representative body go out every year. The executive directory is to consist of 5 members, one of which is to go out every year, and a new one to be chosen by the representative body.

April 11.

The gigantic plan of aggrandizement which the French have formed in the Eastern part of Europe, and in Asia, which we so long ago announced to our readers, begins to develope itself: a scheme of more extent, both in point of territorial and commercial advantage, was never formed either in the ancient or modern world; and we fear it is as practicable as it is magnificent. It will be found that it forms one of the secret articles of their treaty with Austria, and that the sublime porte, whom they have both terrified and cajoled, will be finally the victim of their inordinate ambition. Their project is clearly to get possession of the Greek Islands, which may serve them as a nursery for seamen, at least for the navigation of the Mediterranean and the Levant, to receive permission to attempt again the ancient plan of opening a canal into the Red Sea, from which they are not to be deterred by the failure of every former enterprize of the kind. The improved state of engineering gives them hopes that they will conquer every obstacle that nature has opposed to this design, and the grandeur of the object will be flattering to the character of the people. If they succeed, they will open to themselves a navigation to the East by a course so much shorter than the present, and will have such a demand for sugar in Egypt, and on the coasts of all the seas of which they will have the monopoly, that their commerce must receive an enormous addition.

The last accounts from France seem to signify that the armament from Toulon is destined to this expedition. A body of 17,000 troops are embarked on board of transports, and which are to be under the convoy of only 4 or 5 ships of the line. It is not likely that such a force can be ordered round to assist in the expedition against Portugal, or to join the fleet at Brest. They have too just a knowledge of the vigilance of lord St. Vincent, to make the experiment. We have no doubt that their rendezvous is the Archipelago: and their first object the revival of the Greek republic.

At the same time it is obvious that the king of the Two Sicilies is destined to fall, and the Toulon armament is sufficient to reduce the unprotected city of Naples to their sway; the next journals from France will disclose their real object. In this quarter of the world we know not that any efforts of the British government can obstruct their views; we have lamentably seen that whenever a country is to be divided, the confederate princes of the continent no longer talk about the principles of religion and social order, but hasten with avidity to the partition of the prey—Accordingly, if the two emperors are to come in for a share of the spoils of the Ottoman porte, the French will be permitted, without molestation, to pursue their course.

The king of Spain has published an edict, ordering all the French emigrants to quit the country. This is one of the first acts of the new administration, and proves the ascendancy of the French government.

The funeral of the king of Poland at Peterſburgh, was very magnificent; 18 battalions were drawn up in three lines, extending from the marble palace to the catholic church. The emperor himself followed the hearse on horse-back to the door of the church.

Some time since some persons found means to open a cash account at the bank. They forged the acceptance of all the bankers in London, imitated the different modes of the various houses, in accepting so well, that the bank, tho' familiarly acquainted with them, never discovered the cheat. These bills were paid into the bank by the knot of swindlers to be discounted, and the bank made no hesitation at giving the cash. The day before they became due some of the gang used to call at the bank, making the pretext going suddenly out of town a reason for their wishing their taking up the bills. In this way the bills were stopped from being presented at the bankers; and the practice was renewed and carried on for a considerable time, and to a considerable extent. The frequency of the expedient at length excited some curiosity in the minds of those persons with whom such bills were depositted; and on proper inquiry being made, the whole plot has been discovered. The bank by this scheme, has been defrauded of 30,000l. A merchant of the name of Adamson is in custody.

The last dispatches from Ireland still continue to furnish melancholy accounts of the disturbances by which that unhappy country is distracted, and of massacres and outrages by which it is disgraced.

On Wednesday last ten carriages filled with prisoners, arrived in Dublin, from various parts of Ireland. Among these is said to be a gentleman from Roscommon of 3000l. a year, and another from Wicklow of great property. In various districts the land holders are reduced to the greatest distress, as the tenants are absolutely unable to pay their rents. A gentleman of 4000l. a year in the King's county, actually could not collect so much as would pay the crown rents.

To judge from the last accounts from Constantinople, the Porte is making immense warlike preparations. Firmans have been sent to all the governors, stating that the Turkish army shall be increased to the number of 600,000 effective men. Large magazines are forming, and all the places in the Morea are put in the most respectable state of defence. It is imagined that these preparations are not merely intended against Paswan Oglon, who, since his late rupture with one of his most powerful partizans, has become far less formidable than he was before. The general opinion is, that in the present critical situation of Europe, the Ottoman Porte intends to be prepared for any event which may happen, if the French should attempt to make conquests, or to excite commotions in the Turkish dominions in Europe.

The propositions of the French plenipotentiaries, that the German princes whose dominions on the left banks of the Rhine have been ceded to France, be indemnified for their loss at the expence of the ecclesiastical states situated on the right side of that river, does not originate from any peculiar interest they take in the fate of the dismembered states, but as it is essentially connected with their own revolutionary system. The directory is perfectly aware that the secularization of the ecclesiastical states will produce important changes in the civil, political, and religious systems of the countries situated on the right banks of the Rhine; and that it is likely to excite discontent and insurrections, which will furnish France with pretexts for interfering in the quarrels of the princes with each other, or with their new subjects. He must be but little acquainted with the spirit of the French government, who does not see that such is the permanent system, and that its only means of consolidating its existence, and restoring some order in the Pandemonium of the Great Nation, is, by fomenting continual quarrels in the neighbouring countries. The four passages over the Rhine, which the French have reserved to themselves at Huningen, Kehl, Cassel, and Coblentz, may be considered as the advanced posts of the plan of disorganization. In possession of these important places, they may at all times inundate Germany with their arms without meeting any obstructions.

The greatest severity of restriction is used in every port of France, to stop all communication with this country; which seems to confirm the belief of the forwardness of the preparations in the French ports for an attack on Ireland.

About three o'clock this morning, just as this paper was going to press, we received Paris Journals to the 5th inst.

The elections proceed with rapidity in the primary assemblies. Dissentions are however apparent; but the influence of the directory is still superior to every opposition. Some conspiracies have been detected, and all goes on as usual.

Letters from Petersburgh announce troubles in that capital.

Letters from Corfu state, that the Greek Islands in the Archipelago are in a state of insurrection to recover their ancient liberty.—The letters announce that 22 ships of war and a number of transports, have sailed for that place in order to effect a landing in Sicily.

April 12.

Our information of yesterday, respecting the order for the immediate sailing of the channel fleet, under the command of lord Bridport, is confirmed by further particulars. We have little or no doubt of the determination of the enemy to hazard the attempt of a descent on our coasts. Men of the greatest sagacity conclude, that their real object is Ireland, notwithstanding they may make a diversion on the English shore, by two or 3 feints, to cover their grand design. Be that as it may, they will meet with a warm reception, all descriptions of men being unanimous in the common cause, which is the cause of freedom and humanity.

April 13.

A formidable list of the combined fleets of the enemy was published in a paper of Saturday; but unfortunately for its impression, it is unintelligible. Several parts of the force are enumerated twice over, while the Dutch fleet is totally omitted. According to report it will be found that the following is nearly the numerical force of the enemy upon paper; they are in a wretched state of equipment, and not one third manned:—

Ships of the line.

The French ships at Brest, Rochefort, & L'Orient,	42
At Toulon, including six Venetian ships equipped,	23
Venetian ships equipped,	12
In the East-Indies,	3
At Guadaloupe,	1
The Spaniards have at Cadiz, Carthagena, & Ferrol,	50
At the Havanna and South-America,	12
The Dutch have, equipped,	15
Ditto——equipping,	11
Grand total,	167

[What is that force, when compared to a navy of 746 ships of war?—not a handful!]

April 16.

We stated in our paper of Friday last that a cabinet council was held the preceding day, which was supposed to be for the purpose of considering of the propriety of a general arming of the people: on Saturday a circular letter from Mr. Dundas was sent to the lord lieutenants of all the maritime counties in the kingdom, recommending them to form associations in every district, and pointing out the measures which appear to be best calculated for carrying this plan into the fullest effect. The letter is highly important, and we have no doubt but all classes of men will see the necessity of strengthening the hands of government by their personal services. In assisting their country, they will also afford the surest protection to their own families and property.

With the circular letter above alluded to, there was also sent a paper, containing proposals for rendering the body of the people instrumental in the general defence, for saving their property, and distressing the enemy, by moving the means of subsistance from threatened parts of the country; as also for insuring the necessary supplies to his majesty's forces, and facilitating their movements in case of an invasion, without making any expensive preparation.

This paper contains, 1st. A plan for driving the live stock off such parts of the country as may be exposed to the inroads of the enemy, as also for saving other descriptions of property as much as possible; and for rendering the body of the people instrumental in the general defence, in case of an invasion.

2dly. A plan for an association of the nobility, gentry and yeomanry, to supply such number of waggons, carts and horses, in aid of the provisions made by the militia act, as may be necessary for carrying on his majesty's service, as also to contribute to the supply of his majesty's forces, with flour, wheat, oats, hay, straw, and fuel, in case of an invasion; and 3dly. A plan for insuring a regular supply of bread to his majesty's forces, in case of an invasion.

PHILADELPHIA, June 9.

NEW-LONDON, May 30.

Extract of a letter from capt. John Callahan, of the brig Union, dated St. Martins, May 6, to Mr. T. Coit.

It would be intruding on your patience to relate all I have suffered this voyage. I have twice been taken by French privateers—the last was wholly manned with negroes and mulattoes, the outcasts of human nature. They held a dagger at my breast, and robbed me of my watch, money &c. If our government sleep much longer, we are a ruined people; a little more lethargy and all the means of maritime defence will be wrested from us.

The French privateers which now infest our coasts, are manned by a set of unprincipled fellows of all nations, whose only object is plunder.

Extract of a letter from Rufus King, esq. minister of the United States in London, to T. Pickering, secretary of state, dated April 6, '98.

"The court of appeals have reversed the decree of the high court of admiralty which condemned the arms claimed by gen. Allen; have decreed that the arms be delivered to the general on bail; and that he give further proof concerning the purchase of them particularly respecting the 100000 livres which the contract states to have been paid by him to the French government."

NEW-YORK, June 2.

SAGG-HARBOR (L. I.) May 28

Yesterday morning arrived at this place, in a ship's yawl, Geo. Kuhn, mate of the ship Delaware, belonging to Philadelphia, and five of the hands belonging to the above vessel. Mr. Kuhn informs, that, in lat. 33, 30, N. long. 70 W. about 7, A. M. May 8th, was boarded by the French privateer brig Independence, capt. John Littlepeter, of and from Guadaloupe, bound on the coast, mounting 12 guns, and 100 men. Capt. Dumphy, master of the Delaware, a boy and the passengers, remained on board the brig, which was manned and sent to Guadaloupe; the Frenchmen saying she was a bon prize. Mr. Kuhn remained on board the privateer till Monday last, the 21st inst. during which time, she took and took the following vessels, viz.

May 14, at 6, A. M. captured the [illegible] Halifax, out eight days, Nantucket shoals bearing S. E. 15 or 20 leagues.

May 11, at 8, A.M. captured the schooner Oliva, Hull, from Antigua, bound to New York, out 18 days, Sandy-Hook bearing N. W. 30 leagues; took out E. Dean, mate, D. Lyon, passenger, and 3 seamen, and sent her for Guadaloupe.

Same time, boarded the brig Chatham, detained her three hours, then permitted her to proceed.

Same day at 4, P. M. captured brig Sarah, Quinton, from Saint John's, N. Brunswick, bound to Philadelphia, laden with plaister of Paris; took the hands out and burnt her.

Same time boarded the ship Townsend, capt. Hilton, from Antigua, bound to Wiscasset; cleared him, on account of taking the prisoners (Americans) on board his vessel.

On Tuesday morning last, Mr. Kuhn, and the four hands, left the Townsend about 15 leagues from Montaux-Point, and yesterday arrived at this place.

ALBANY, June 13.

The account in our last of the Ganges having captured a French privateer, was a false report. We may, however, soon expect to hear of the ocean being crimsoned with the blood of Americans & Frenchmen, since there remains not a gleam of hope that our differences will be settled with France, without an appeal to the God of battles.

THE ORACLE.

WEST-NIAGARA, July 6.

Twelve thousand copies of the following Proclamation (which we promised in our last should appear in this day's Gazette,) have been dispersed throughout Ireland, by order of the commander in chief:

"Whereas his excellency the lord lieutenant in council, has, in consequence of the daring acts and depredations committed in this country, ordered and directed, by his proclamation, bearing date the 30th of March last, and by this particular order thereon, that the military should use the most summary means to repress disturbance, and to recover all arms taken from the yeomanry and well affected, and other concealed arms and ammunition; all the people concerned in taking or concealing these arms, are requested to give them up within ten days of the publication of this notice, which if they do, they may be assured no violence will be done to them or their properties; but if they do not they are informed, that the troops will be quartered in large bodies, to live at free quarters among them, [illegible] will be used to enforce obedience to this notice.

"All those who have knowledge where arms are concealed, are called upon to give information, which they may do in any private manner, to the nearest civil magistrate, or commanding officer of his Majesty's forces, or of the yeomanry corps. Secrecy shall be used with respect to them, and they shall be rewarded when their report is proved to be true.

"Should the deluded and evil disposed among the people in this country, still persevere in robbing and murdering, and committing other acts of violent insubordination to the laws of their country, they are informed that the commander in chief will be obliged to have recourse to those powers with which he has been invested, to bring them to immediate punishment.

"Given at Head Quarters, at Kildare, the 3d of April, 1798.
By order of the commander in chief.
Frederick Maitland, Sec'ry."

Many thousands of the following notice were distributed in all the towns and villages of the Queen's county:

"The commanding officer commanding the district of Queen's county, orders, that a correct list of the names of the persons residing in each house, should be placed on the door, or some conspicuous part of it.

"It is to be made known to the inhabitants, that from the hour of nine o'clock at night till day-break the next morning, they are to remain in their houses, and not to admit any stranger whatever.

"Patroles are to make domiciliary visits at uncertain periods, between the hours of nine o'clock at night and day-break, and after calling over their names, it is found, that any person whose name is not inserted on the list is in the house he is to be made prisoner—or if any person is absent, the rest of the inhabitants are to be accountable for him, and measures are to be taken to discover where he is, and to apprehend him.

"Should the list by any accident be destroyed, or torn down, the owner of the house is, within two hours after, to apply to the magistrate or officer upon the spot, for a new one on pain of punishment.

"It shall be in the power of any magistrate or officer to give a permit to any person who shall assign a good reason for wishing to be absent on any particular night during the period alluded to.

"The magistrates and gentlemen of the Yeomanry are requested to assist in [illegible]

Gentlemen of the Senate and Gentlemen of the House of Representatives,

I now transmit to both houses the communications from our envoys at Paris, received since the laſt, which have been preſented by me to both houſes.

JOHN ADAMS.

United States, June 5, 1798.

The Merchants Daily Adverti-ſer, one of the moſt impartial pa-pers in Philadelphia, gives the fol-lowing abſtract of the diſpatches alluded to in the foregoing meſ-ſage:

"The diſpatches from our en-voys at Paris yeſterday communi-cated, by the preſident of the Uni-ted States, to both houſes of con-greſs, conſiſt of a letter dated on the 15th of March laſt, encloſing minutes of two conferences, ob-tained at the inſtance of the en-voys, on the 2d and 5th (or ſixth*) the ſame month, with the miniſter for foreign affairs. At the firſt conference, general Pinckney in-troducing the converſation by ex-preſſing the anxiety of the Ameri-can government and envoys to re-move ſubſiſting differences be-tween the two countries. He ſaid that many inadmiſſible propoſi-tions for effecting that object, had been received by them through M. Y. and that they had waited upon the miniſter, to know whe-ther other means might be deviſed to obtain ſo deſirable an end. In anſwer M. Talleyrand ſaid that the directory were extremely wounded by the ſpeech of general Waſhington, when about to re-tire from office, and by the firſt and laſt ſpeech of Mr. Adams;—and that explanations were requir-ed of the envoys; and that, previ-ous to treating with the ſaid di-rectory expected ſome proof on the part of the United States of a friendly diſpoſition. Here Mr. Talleyrand alluded very intelligi-bly to a loan; gen. Pinckney having intimated that a loan would exceed their powers, M. Talleyrand drew a diſtinction be-tween acting contrary to inſtructi-ons and acting in a caſe where they were ſilent, and urged that in the latter caſe it was their duty to uſe their diſcretion for the public good. He ſaid the principal ob-jection of the American govern-ment to a loan, muſt be its ten-dency to draw it out of a neutral ſituation, and remarked that there were ſeveral ways of obviating ſuch an effect; ſuch as a reliance on the ſecrecy of France, diſguiſing the loan, making it payable by diſtant inſtalments, and France raiſing pre ſent ſupplies upon the credit of it. To this it was anſwered, that they conceived their inſtructions did not admit of a loan; that the United States had reſolved faith-fully to maintain their neutrality; that they would do nothing in ſe-cret which if known would arrange them among belligerent powers; that as they could not, if leagued with France, furniſh either men or ſhips of war, and money being the only thing that would be aſked of them, to furniſh money, was in fact to make war. The miniſter re-peated the neceſſity there was of proving our friendſhip for the re-public by ſome immediate aid, or by ſomething which might avail them.

In the courſe of the converſation the miniſter complained of the en-voys not having viſited him, and pretended that the original favour-able diſpoſition of the directory had been a good deal altered by the coldneſs and diſtance which the envoys had obſerved, becauſe they had not made private viſits to him, and ſaid he conceived their not having had an audience of the di-rectory ought not to have preven-ted it. Gen. Marſhall told him, that their ſeeing the directory or not, was an object of no ſort of con-cern to them, but that it was their opinion, that until their public character was in ſome degree re-cognized, they could not take up-on themſelves to act as miniſters. The miniſter ſaid that was very true, but that they might ſee him as private individuals, and diſcuſs the objects of difference between the two nations.

At the ſecond conference on the 4th (or 6th) the envoys obſerved that they had previouſly attended to the converſation that they had had with the miniſter; that the propoſitions he had ſuggeſted ap-peared to them to be ſubſtantially the ſame with thoſe made by Meſſ. X. & Y.; and they explicitly de-clared that in addition to thoſe propoſitions if acceded to, amount-ing to a declaration of war againſt Great Britain, their inſtructions were expreſs, not to ſtipulate any aids to France, either directly or indirectly, during the war.

The conference on the part of the miniſter chiefly conſiſted of a repetition of the remarks and pro-poſitions he had made on the 2d of the month. The envoys ſeveral times told the miniſter that if it would be agreeable to the Directo-ry, two of them would return to America to receive the inſtructions of the government on the actual ſitu-ation of things, but they were unable to draw any reply from him. Thus ended the conferences.

* It is uncertain on which of theſe days the laſt conference was held.

THE POLITICAL KORAN.

1 NOW it came to paſs, that as the elders of the people were aſſembled together in the ci-ty of the Philadelphites, they choſe judges to ſet in judgment over William, the ſon of a certain women, who bare alſo Thomas, the ſame which is called the gen-tleman.

2. And there was among them a certain man, who is ſirnamed Ly-on: being a beaſt, and having a mouth ſpeaking blaſphemous things, and alſo an head, but how many horns, no one know-eth.

3. Howbeit he hath the ſhape of a man, though he cometh from the dens of the North—and the ſame Lyon ſaith that he is born of a woman, and that he belong-eth to the tribe of the Iriſhites; and he is alſo called Matthew—

4. Now in fore time he wore a ſword, girt by his ſide, and the ſame was made of coſtly wood, even of the pine of the green mountains; and he was mighty in Battle, for he was ſwift of foot even like un-to Aſahel of old—and Matthew had ran mightily, and the ſame thereof had gone abroad.

5. And it came to paſs, that Matthew ſpake of the elders of the Eaſt; and he raved, as one who had a lying ſpirit within him.

6. Now Roger was of the tribe of the Yankyites—and Roger lift-ed his voice, and ſaid "The wood-en ſword!"

7. Nevertheleſs Matthew heard not—whereupon Roger cried a-gain "the wooden ſword of Lyon, which he bare in Battle, is it yet good to fight."

8. And Lyon was ſorely offend-ed—and his gall began to riſe, and in his wrath he poured it forth upon the face of Roger—whereup-on Roger lifted up his hand in anger to ſmite him.

9. But Roger was one of the elite men of the Eaſt; and he ſaid why ſhould I ſmite thee, thou thing? So he ſmote him not.

10. Howbeit, the gall of Lyon's bitterneſs was waſhed away from the face of Roger; and he died not thereof—but remaineth a-mong the elders of the people to this day.

11. And the elders took council one with another, and they ſaid, ſurely this is a foul beaſt, and ſeareth not the law: howbeit that he eſcheweth not to do evil.

12. And when he heard thoſe things, Matthew was ſorely trou-bled: and he wrote to the chief of the elders greeting, and ſaying, I was ignorant, and I knew not, and I repent me of the evil I have done.

13. But Matthew had been ac-cuſtomed to do evil continually, ſo his epiſtle availed not, and Mat-thew was grievouſly afraid, and he returned to his hired houſe, and when he had gone into the inner door, he turned him towards the wall, and his face upon him be-came black, for his conſcience be-gan to labor upwards.

14. And Matthew prayed unto his ſaint, even unto St. Patrick—but St. Patrick heard him not, for he went unto Nicholas, and Ni-cholas was mighty in tongue, and he ſpoke comfort unto him, and he was comforted.

15. Howbeit Matthew forge-eth not the wooden ſword. Thus endeth the forty and third chapter of the Chronicles of the Elders of the Americanites. Selah.

DULL TIMES.

WITHIN a few years paſt thoſe two words have become more faſhionable, than any other two in the Engliſh language.—They are uſed as a pretext in doing all kinds of buſineſs, and not unfrequently maintained in lazineſs, lazy peo-ple, with a little help, of pleaſe to charge it to me. Poſſibly ſome of the readers of this are unacquaint-ed with the manner in which thoſe two words may be generally appli-ed;—therefore to convince every one of the juſtneſs of my aſſertion, I will draw a ſmall view of the bu-ſineſs.

When we ſee a robuſt, healthy mechanic, loitering about the ſtreets, with his hands in his poc-kets, now and then leaning up a-gainſt a rail fence, or ſome ſtore, whiſtling, whittling and groaning; it is certain that he is lazy, and does not wiſh to work, therefore will uſe us as a blind, that nothing is made by working, it being ſuch remarkable dull times.

When ſeveral lawyers are ſeen idleing about ſtreets, &c. looking ſomething like frightened and deſ-perate men, and who appear ſnap-piſh and ſurly, you may be certain that the people have diſcovered for fact, that "honeſty is the beſt po-licy;" and that the lawyers will be forced to march, becauſe it is ſuch cruel dull times.

When you paſs and repaſs by a merchant's ſtore two or three times in the courſe of a day; and ſee the owner laying on the window ſhut-ter or on the counter, ſcolding and ſwearing, you need not doubt but what this man is one that will ſoon cry out, I muſt "looſe my key," be-cauſe of the dull times.

When a number of rich, wealthy and aged farmers are daily ſeen flocking into town, driving a team, with a quantity of ſcarce produce, ſuch as lilly potatoes & good pumkins, offering them for ſale for ſtore pay, who will deny, but what ſuch peo-ple, begin to think that it is grow-ing dreadful dull times.

SOMEBODY.

POPISH MIRACLE.

IN Naples, there happened in a great ſiege it endured, that the governor made an order, that eve-ry man ſhould be put to death, a-bove ſuch an age, that did not wear a ſword! Not long after, as he was riding through the ſtreets to ſee how well this order was put into execution, he eſpied a gentleman without one, and com-manded him to be brought before him; the order was read, and he condemned to die the death ap-pointed, which was to be hanged on the next ſign-poſt. The gen-tleman, after he had pleaded things in his own behalf which availed nothing, deſired the favor that he might not die ſo ignominiouſ-ly, but that the next gentleman that might run him through with his ſword. The requeſt being rea-ſonable, was granted, and the ex-ecution was delayed upon theſe terms. It happened that a young gallant was coming from a gaming houſe, who having loſt all, even ſo much as the blade of his ſword, which was good merchandize at that time, did not care, in regard to the ſevere order, to go home, until a wooden one was fitted to the handle. This gentleman was ſtopped, and the dying man's caſe laid open; but this ingenious perſon knowing his own inſufficiency, "What," ſaid he, "muſt I be a common executioner? muſt I ſtain my hands in blood without paſſion, and be a reproach to all men?" But this argument would not do—kill him he muſt; then putting off his cloak, he began a prayer to this effect:—"Thou who ſeeſt all our tranſgreſſions here below, judge ye, I pray thee, and vindicate the cauſe of thoſe that ſuffer wrong; in eſpecial manner, grant that if this man here ought not to die, this ſword may be turned into wood." Then drawing it forth, it appeared to be wood; and the dying gentleman was immediately releaſed with abundance of joy. The wooden ſword was carried with great ſolemnity to the cathedral church, as a proper link in the chain of Popiſh miracles.

EAST-INDIES.

In the politics of India there is nothing which has lately occurred of more importance than the death of his highneſs the nabob vizier Aſaph ul Dowlah, not only inaſmuch as he was a prince with whom we were in a peculiar manner connected, with whoſe intereſted, as an ally, the Britiſh intereſts were blended, but more eſpecial from the exiſting poſition of affairs which embrace conſiderations of more political importance.

The event is announced in the Bombay Courier, of Oct. 21, '97.

PARIS, March 17.

THE pretender, on his journey from Blankenbourg to Mietau, paſſed thro' Berlin. The young king was no doubt well informed of it, but he did not appear to pay any attention to it. The court took not the leaſt notice of him: the Ruſſian ambaſſador alone made his court to the abandoned monarch, and they merely collected at a repaſt, ſome emigrants from the vicinity. After this he purſued his journey to Courland.

The conduct of the court of Berlin is a new proof of the union exiſting between that power and the republic.

LONDON, April 14.

On Sunday morning laſt, Mr. Flood, the Magiſtrate, attended by Mr. Reeves, one of the clerks of the Bow-ſtreet office, and Carpmeal and Fawcett, two of the runners, had accompanied by three of his majeſty's meſſengers, ſet off for Manchester, for the purpoſe of apprehending ſome perſons implicated in a charge of treaſonable practices.—They reached Manchester on Tueſday evening, and on Wedneſday morning, thirteen perſons were apprehended amongſt whom are ſaid to be two merchants of reſpectability, two ſons of Cowdry the printer, one Cheetham, a cotton ſpiner, and one Fry, a taylor. The whole arrived laſt night in town, under an eſcort of light-horſe. Five hundred ſtand of arms were likewiſe found. It is ſaid that the information, which occaſioned the apprehenſion of theſe men, was given in conſequence of a quarrel among the party, which has furniſhed a clue to great diſcoveries.

It is expected that the above perſons will undergo an examination before the privy council this day.

We have the pleaſure to ſtate, that ſeventeen Dutch Scnuty, ſix doggers, and three merchantmen, are taken by admiral Onſlow's fleet, of the Texel, and ſent into Yarmouth.

Mr. Huſkiſſon gave notice to the houſe of commons, yeſterday afternoon, of his intention to introduce a bill, empowering his majeſty to place in a ſtate of ſecurity the property of perſons reſident near the coaſt, in caſe the enemy ſhould attempt to put into execution their threats againſt this country. This is a meaſure dictated by the fourdeſt prudence and wiſeſt policy.

The king of Naples has ſeized the papal duchy of Benevento, on the preſence that it is ſituated in his own dominions.

The French have demanded from the king of Naples the payment of all the arrears due to the pope for the horſe, which the holy father ſhould have received annually from that kingdom.

Letters from Vienna of the 26th of February ſtate, that according to advices received in that city from Italy; the new republican government was to be introduced at Rome on the 1ſt March in all its branches. A penſion of four millions of livres per annum, has been aſſigned to the Pope, which, it is preſumed, his old age will not long permit him to enjoy. Four cardinals have been ſeized and ſent priſoners to Avignon & other places in France.

The French, Dutch and Spaniſh ports are ſtill blockaded by Britiſh ſquadrons—Admiral Warren lately captured and deſtroyed a convoy from Bourdeaux to Breſt, and chaſed a large frigate on ſhore at the mouth of the Garrone, which afterwards bilged and was entirely loſt.

Threats of invading England ſtill continue to be held out in France, but no attempt has been made—a party of Engliſh ſeamen belonging to the ſquadron cruzing off the mouth of the Seine, landed on the French coaſt, and after quietly refreſhing themſelves at the expence of the French, re-embarked, without being diſturbed.

ALBANY, June 15.

At the requeſt of the owners & conſignees of the ſhip Adriana, which has put into New York on her paſſage from London to Philadelphia, government has ordered the armed ſhip Ganges to convoy the Adriana to her deſtined port; her cargo is valued at 100,000l. ſterling.

On Saturday laſt the brig Eliza, of Newhaven, arrived at N. York from the Mole. On Friday ſhe was boarded by a French privateer of 8 guns, which, ſays the captain, rooked the paſſengers of caſh to the amount of about 7000 dollars, and plate, &c. of about 3000 dols.

NEW-YORK, June 17.

We are credibly informed, that letters have been received here from the ſecretary of the treaſury, requeſting to be informed whether any veſſels here would anſwer as ſhips of war for government, provided they were to be diſpoſed of.

It is with peculiar pleaſure we learn, that one hundred merchants and gentlemen of the firſt reſpectability in this city, are about to apply to the government for permiſſion to form themſelves into a troop of horſe, with regular commiſſions, to ſerve as volunteers whenever the public ſafety requires their aid.

HALIFAX, May 15.

It muſt afford much pleaſure to the inhabitants of this loyal and highly favored province to learn that the ſubſcriptions which were opened only on Thurſday at the treaſury and court-houſe, for the liberal purpoſe of relieving the exigencies of government, have hitherto anſwered the moſt ſanguine expectations:—The ſubſcriptions in this town alone amount to upwards of four thouſand pounds ſterling laſt evening and we have no doubt a very conſiderable ſum more will be added before the cloſe of the week.

This is an emanation of the TRUE BRITISH SPIRIT which has long bid defiance to the machinations of an inſidious enemy; and which ſprung ſpontaneouſly from the parent country, operates with reſiſtleſs energy to the fartheſt extremes of her extenſive dominions.

QUEBEC, June 12.

By the arrival of the George one of the fleet, we were favored with London papers to the 17th April, and we have to day received by the April mail from England via Halifax our regular files of news-papers down to the 16th, from which we have taken the extracts under our foreign heads.

In the houſe of commons April 3. Mr. Wilberforce moved for leave to bring a bill for the abolition of ſlavery. Ayes 83, Nays 87, majority of 4 againſt the motion.

On the 4th the attorney-general obtained leave to bring in a bill for preventing the miſchief ariſing from the abuſe in printing of news-papers.

The French government iſſued an arrête on the 13th of March, ordering all Engliſh priſoners of war without exception, into cloſe confinement in priſon.

His majeſty's frigate Pallas, of 32 guns, hon. capt. Curzon, was loſt near Portſmouth on the 30 April; crew ſaved.

JUNE 13.

Late arrivals from Liſbon report that lord St. Vincent was at that port preparing to ſail, and that 70,000 French troops were marching through Spain to attack Portugal.

Porcupine's Gazette of the 19th of May mentions that government had received ſpatches from Mr. Murray at the Hague, purporting that the French government had propoſed to the court of Spain to give Louiſiana to the French to conſent to their taking poſſeſſion of the Braziles, and to erect that part of Spain bordering on the Provinces aforeſaid named Cantabria, into an independent republic, for which France would gaurantee to Spain her poſſeſſions in the Weſt-Indies and add Portugal to the Spaniſh dominions; but that there was no appearance that the court of Spain would agree to this propoſal.

THE ORACLE.

WEST-NIAGARA, July 14.

The inhabitants of Charleſton, South Carolina, have raiſed 15,000 dollars by ſubſcription for the defence of their port.

The following important article is copied from Lloyd's Evening Poſt of April 13.

"Among the reports which the non-arrival of any intelligence from France, has, within theſe few days given riſe to, is the following: That the American commiſſioners at Paris have been ordered to depart; and that all American property in France, which is ſuppoſed to amount to near three millions ſterl. is to be confiſcated."

The eaſe with which the French have conquered the Swiſs, is ſurpriſing, when we call to our recolleſtion how often, with ſmall numbers, in that ſtrong country, they have not only baffled, but actually defeated, all the forces ſent againſt them by the Houſe of Auſtria.

Mr. Cox, the very intelligent traveller, mentions a ſignal inſtance in 1388, when the Auſtrians made an eruption into the little canton of Glarus, with a force ſufficient, as they arrogantly thought, totally to ſubdue it. At that time 350 troops of Glarus, aſſiſted by 30 of another canton, reſiſted the whole ſtrength of the Auſtrian army.

The former were poſted advantageouſly upon the mountains, and the latter to the number of 15,000, at a village on the plain. In this ſituation, the Auſtrians began the attack, but were ſoon compelled to retreat with great precipitation, by a ſhower of ſtones poured upon them from the heights. In this moment of confuſion, the inhabitants ruſhed down upon the enemy with ſuch fury that they broke their ranks; and after an immenſe ſlaughter, forced the remainder to retire from the canton.

From a Correſpondent in New York.

WAR! WAR!

This is the muſic that aſſails our ters from every quarter, and since there is no difference in opinion as to our being perfectly united in the moſt ſpirited meaſures of ſelf defence, it is hoped, as our danger increaſes, our efforts will be redoubled in forming ourſelves into diſciplined companies, ſo as to embrace the whole maſs of active citizens. It has been obſerved, that thoſe who have long bellowed out war! war! are (now matters are coming to a criſis) drawing out of the line, and that thoſe who have been unjuſtly denominated diſorganiſers, jacobins, &c. are (as we always predicted they would be) foremoſt in the defence of their country.

We are informed that the legiſlature of this ſtate is to be immediately ſummoned for the purpoſe of co-operating with our ſiſter ſtates and with congreſs, in taking efficient meaſures of defence and offence if requiſite.

His excellency JOHN JAY, eſq. is re-elected governor of this ſtate, by a majory of 2378.

The ſubſcriptions of the merchants and traders of Philadelphia, for building veſſels to be loaned to government, had on Wedneſday laſt produced 50,000 dollars.

A Boſton paper of June 11 ſays —A veſſel is ſaid to have arrived at Marblehead on Saturday in 40 days from Nantz :—The reports by her are, that exertions were making for the invaſion of England; that meſſ. Pinckney and Marſhall the American miniſters, were to return home immediately, one of them had arrived at Nantz; and that Mr. Gerry is to tarry there.

The Wm. Penn, of Philadelphia, was captured by one Savage, an American at Bourdeaux. The worſt of all ſavages, to plunder his own tribe!

Arrived at the fort, brig Molly, Clark, Petit Gauve, 20 days, 22d May was boarded by a French barge, weſt end of Gonaives iſland and plundered of all the ſtores, cloaths, and ſeveral coils of rigging.

Schooner Two Friends, Bowman, from Savannah,—off Tybee light-houſe, was boarded by a French privateer of 2 guns, and ſome ſwivels, fired three ſhots, made him pay 6 dollars, abuſed him, and ſuffered him to proceed.

Yeſterday James M'Henry, eſq. ſecretary of war, arrived in town from Philadelphia. The object of his journey we underſtand, is to take a ſurvey of the port and harbor of New-York. He will be accompanied by the military committee, and ſeveral reſpectable engineers and pilots.

The adminiſtration of finances and contributions of the French republic, in Italy, have come to a reſolution to diſpoſe of many of the curioſities in the Arts & Sciences, of that celebrated repoſitory. The agent charged with this buſineſs has written from Rome to the amateurs in different parts of Europe, propoſing the ſale of the moſt famous ſtatues, paintings, &c. Ready money is required of purchaſers; this ſeems to be the one thing needful with the Directory.

A letter from Bourdeaux of the 10th of April, ſays, "The Directory will not acknowledge the three American commiſſioners—Meſſrs. Pinckney and Marſhall certainly leave Paris, but Mr. Gerry remains. The privateer Rochefort has bro't here a large American ſhip from Savannah, laden with furs, rice and tobacco."

On Friday the 15th ult. arrived here, the brig Sally, capt. Havens, from Morlaix, in France. From the paſſengers, &c. we learn :—

That the invaſion of England was ſtill the ſtalking horſe; but it was the opinion of many, that it would never be attempted; and that the aſſembling of the troops on the occaſion, is merely to have them at hand in caſe the Directory ſhould chooſe to conjure up another conſpiracy :—

That a French 74 gun ſhip, coming round from l'Orient to Breſt, had been captured by the Engliſh.

A report in circulation, that the French miniſter has attempted to tamper with Mr. Gerry :—and that his ſtay is in conſequence of particular invitation. He muſt, however, have received his letters of recall, by the Sophia, ſoon after his colleagues left France.

Extract of a letter from Boſton, dated June 13.

"The merchants of this town, whoſe veſſels and property were convoyed by the St. Albans, have, we learn, voted to preſent captain Pender a piece of plate, not to exceed 100 guineas in value; as a mark of their eſteem.

"Yeſterday Ward Chipman, and Edward Winſlow, eſqrs. of the commiſſion for ſettling the Eaſtern boundary of this commonwealth, agreeable to the Britiſh treaty, arrived in town from St. John's."

Well Mr. ——, have you obſerved who's name is hiſt this week in the imprint to the GAZETTE? and will you be as ready to publiſh that I am Mr. WATERS' maſter, as you were to ſay, when his name was firſt, that he was mine? Poor, pitiful, cowardly tool that [illegible] perſons with that contempt which is due to thoſe of a miſcreant; but it is my with to evince to the public that what you have ſaid upon that ſcore is falſe. If Mr. W. had been veſted with that authority, he is too much the gentleman to aſſume it over one who he knows to be maſter of his profeſſion, or even report any thing of the kind; but that authority was never given him, it is only ſome of your own infamous and deteſtable falſhoods, flattering yourſelf up with an idea that it would injure my character, but it has not anſwered your expectation. Is not Mr. W. much the oldeſt perſon? conſequently his name ought to go firſt as we are mutual in the profits and loſſes accruing to the office, and not because he is my maſter. It is needleſs to diſplay delicacy to one who is inſenſible to its impreſſions, therefore I hope this will awaken you to a ſenſe of ſhame, of which I have ſmall hopes at preſent, and that it may be the means of making you experince a remorſe which every perſon who is poſſeſſed of ſuch conſummate impudence as to endeavor to ſtigmatize the character of one who never offended him ought to be tortured with, is the ſincere wiſh of

BOURDEAUX, April 4.

THE executive directory have ſuppreſſed the journal entitled "Feuille Univerſelle," and directed ſeals to be placed on the preſſes where it is printed.

LONDON, April 21.

From a letter from a gentleman who was at Rome when the French took poſſeſſion of it, it appears the cauſe of the diſcontent of the French army at Rome was their not having received any pay for five months paſt. No money is ever ſent from France: they came to a reſolution therefore, of arreſting moſt of their commiſſaries, to make them render their accounts & furniſh pay to the troops; at the ſame time, they openly expreſſed their diſſatisfaction at the ſyſtem of confiſcation and rapine, which they conceived reflected diſhonor upon them. The ſoldiers ſeemed by no means deſirous of any new expedition; they ſaid, "the directory do not know what to do with us; they keep us to die in Italy, whilſt our brethren in arms are to be drowned on the coaſts of England." The writer of the letter thinks, that the number of troops at Rome did not exceed 10,000 men, tho' to hide the ſmallneſs of the army they forbade all entrance to their camp, which was ſituated on a hill juſt out of the town.

[Theſe ſans-culottes are a good deal above half right. Their maſters moſt certainly do not very well know what to be at with them. If there were a paſſage to the infernal regions, we dare ſay they would ſend them thither, arms, accoutrements, and knapſacks, juſt as they ſtand.]

It is reported that the Emperor and king of Pruſſia, alarmed at the enormous demands and the inſatiable ambition of France, had entered into a new confederacy againſt them. We cannot divine whether [illegible] this news is certain; but if they entertain a juſt ſenſe of their own danger, they cannot fail to declare themſelves againſt the common enemy of every government. The emperor has placed his army in Italy on a war eſtabliſhment.

By accounts from Frankfort, it appears that conſiderable movements are taking place in the neighbourhood of Mayence. About 6000 men have lately paſſed over the right bank of the Rhine, 4000 of whom have eſtabliſhed themſelves in Watteravia; the others in the town and neighbourhood of Hamburg.

April 23.—Thurſday diſpatches were received at the Admiralty from off Breſt. The Triton frigate looked into that port on the 13th inſt. and the force in the outer road conſiſted of 9 ſail of the line, 13 frigates and 2 or 3 corvettes, apparently ready for ſea. The Triton was ſo cloſe in with the above men of war, that ſeveral ſhells were thrown but none ſtruck her.

The duke de Berry has arrived from Edinburgh, charged by Monſieur, brother to Louis XVIII. to tender his majeſty his own ſervices as well as thoſe of all the emigrated French noblemen in this country.

Government have iſſued orders that all the launches & long boats belonging to the merchant ſhips ſhall forthwith be armed to ſerve as gun-boats, at the mouths of rivers, and in the creeks, ports or bays of our coaſt, where a force of this deſcription may become of great uſe.—This plan of arming is now univerſally adopted. Nearly 4000 gun boats now fitted or fitting out, will thus be added to the ſtrength of the country, & furniſh a force of invaluable utility. It is expected that this plan will be adopted in all the ports of Ireland.

Letters by the mails from Dublin ſtate, that the diſcontents unfortunately prevailing in the ſiſter kingdom, have not yet abated. Murders and aſſaſſinations are very frequent in different parts of the country.

Extract of a letter from Dublin.

"The following extraordinary inſtance of bravery occurred in the King's county.—One of the 7th dragoon guards, who was carrying diſpatches to the high ſheriff of the county, was attacked by nine defenders of United Iriſhmen, who demanded his letter, and on refuſal, they pelted ſtones at him, one of which nearly ſtunned him, but as ſoon as he recovered himſelf, he took out one of his piſtols & ſhot one man, then drew his ſword, and cut down another, he got up to a third & killed him; he then purſued the reſt, two of whom he ſecured, and brought them priſoners into the aſſizes town, while the judges were ſitting."

Engliſh Houſe of Lords, April 23.

The Duke of Bedford brought down a meſſage from his majeſty in ſubſtance as follows:

"His majeſty recommends it to the houſe to conſider of the neceſſary meaſures for enabling his majeſty to make ſuch remittances to Ireland, from time to time, as ſhall not exceed the ſum of two millions upon the authority of the parliament of Ireland, on proviſion being made for the intereſt and charges upon a loan to that amount."

Houſe of Commons, April 20.

Mr. Dundas delivered a meſſage from his majeſty relative to the defence of the kingdom, and directing the attention of the houſe to ſuch other meaſures as they might deviſe. The meſſage being read, Mr. Dundas obſerved, that he was perſuaded there could be no difference of opinion as to the propriety of returning thanks to his majeſty, and aſſuring him of the active exertions of the houſe to forward his majeſty's wiſhes, and begged leave to move, "That an humble addreſs be preſented to his majeſty, thanking him for his meſſage, and aſſuring him the houſe would, without delay, proceed to the conſideration of the intereſting ſubject of it, with all that attention which the importance of it required."

The ſpeaker having put the queſtion,

Mr. Sheridan roſe, and in a ſpeech of great brilliancy and energy, pointed out the neceſſity of the houſe ſupporting the government in the preſent emergency.

Mr. Pitt roſe, and expreſſed his ſatisfaction at the eloquent and impreſſive manner in which Mr. S. delivered his ſentiments on the main queſtion. He then went into a vindication of the meaſures that had been adopted in Ireland.

The ſolicitor general brought in a bill to prevent the tranſmitting of money, or other effects in payment of debts due to any perſon in Switzerland.

United States.

From the Boſton Price Current.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman of Virginia, dated June 15, to his friend in this city.

"I hope our Envoys will ſoon be with you from Paris—and that on their arrival, if they bring no more favorable accounts than thoſe already received from them, which cannot be expected, a handſome majority of Congreſs will be ready to declare war againſt the grand republic. This would unite—would bring all to the teſt. The preſent meaſures, tho' ſpirited, are only half way ſteps. War and no war, is the worſt ſituation a people can be in. To ſay nothing of traitors and internal enemies, a decided declaration would fix the Thomaſes, the timid and injudiciouſly cautious. None would dare to plead the cauſe of that perfidious nation."

Extract of a letter from Paris, dated April 10.

"Things will preſently arrive at another criſis in this country. How ſuch an event will affect the United States, I am not able to ſay; but I do not expect for the better. A choice of a new directory will be made immediately:—It is generally underſtood among thoſe who pretend to be in the ſecrets of the cabinet, that Francois de Neufchateau, is to go out, and that Trielhard is to come in his ſtead. He is all energy; and will be an active ſupporter of univerſal dominion.

"You would be aſtoniſhed at the tone aſſumed by this government; and executed with unexampled promptitude and ſucceſs.—Money, money is the cry; & they will have it ſomewhere. The neutral nations are not at all ſpared. There are letters from Copenhagen of the date of the 20th ult. which informed that the French miniſter, Grouvelle, has demanded of the court of Denmark a loan, or rather a contribution of ſix millions of Daniſh marks. He has preſſed hard for it; and it is not expected that it will be denied him; at leaſt half the ſum as a quietus, he is pretty well aſſured of."

[Such is the fate of Denmark, & ſuch will be the fate of Sweden; and, when France has drained them of their money, then ſhe will excite inſurrection and rob them of their independence.]

New York.—A ſubſcription for purchaſing ſhips to be loaned to government for the protection of our commerce and coaſts, was yeſterday opened at the coffee-houſe, on a plan more general than that which was originated and put in circulation a few days ago, and which is now ſuperſeded by this. We are proud in announcing to the public that in the courſe of an hour nearly 40,000 dollars were ſubſcribed, and 100,000 may confidently be expected in the courſe of the current week. Ten or twelve names had annexed to each 1000 dollars.

Baltimore.—"There is now ſubſcribed 65,000 dollars for the ſhips of war; they expect to get 100,000 dollars before the end of the week. Mr. O'Donnell has given 4000 dollars."

June 25. We have news to-day of the firſt importance from Guadaloupe. By captain Houſton, 14 days from thence, via Philadelphia, we learn that a corvette of 20 guns which arrived there and left France about the 28th of April, brought out orders for the promiſcuous capture and condemnation of every neutral veſſel;—that the condemnations began immediately thereafter, and 1 Dane, 1 Swede, four Hamburgers (juſt arrived) and 28 ſail of Americans, were condemned in one day, among the latter of which was his veſſel, the brig Peggy, of this port; and that this tragedy was to be acted every day till the whole iſland was cleared of neutrals. He repreſents the ſituation of American ſeamen as the moſt wretched, the greater part entirely deſtitute of the common neceſſaries of life, and many of them compelled to enter French privateers to keep them from famiſhing. He thinks the government if poſſible, ſhould do ſomething to ameliorate their condition. It is impoſſible for them, without aſſiſtance, to return to their own country, and it is with as much difficulty even the maſters and mates can get away. 13 captains, who had loſt their veſſels came paſſengers on board the Little Sam, to Philadelphia. There was no veſſel at Guadaloupe of greater force than the corvette juſt arrived, but the iſland ſwarms with privateers. Hughes had juſt learnt that one of his free-booters had been ſhattered to pieces by an American merchantman, and ſwore if it was ſo, he would make the Americans feel his vengeance for it.

Newburyport.—It has been mentioned in the public prints, that Moſes Brown, eſq. of Newbury, ſubſcribed 1500 dollars towards building a ſhip of war to be loaned to government. The fact is, that gentleman gave 2500, as did alſo Mr. William Bartlett, of the ſame place, making 5000 dollars for their joint ſubſcription.

Philadelphia. Upwards of 100,000 dollars, for building and equipping the two veſſels, are already ſubſcribed.

The Britiſh have within the laſt three months, convoyed ſafe to the ports of the United States, above one hundred and fifty ſail of American veſſels laden with all the riches of the nether Indies. This fact will countervail a thouſand Jacobinic inſinuations of Britiſh depredations.

BOSTON, June 4.

The rich ſhip belonging to Mr. Lyman and others, of this place, captured on her paſſage from the Eaſt Indies to this port, and carried to England for trial, has been acquited. Her cargo, it is ſaid is valued at 100,000l. The ſhip is upwards of 1200 tons burthen.

June 5.

Accounts from Ireland are as much at variance as truth with falſhood, notwithſtanding all the horrid narratives we ſee in the Engliſh and ſouthern papers of murders, incendiaries and inſurrection; an arrival at this, direct from Belfaſt, which is the revolutionary center of the kingdom, announces an entire tranquility: and that ſhould the French invade the Iſland, they would eath ten Iriſh hugs for one fraternal embrace.

NEW-YORK, June 12.

The military ardor which now exiſts in this city is almoſt beyond credibility.—Within a few days ſeveral volunteer corps have been formed, and will be officered and in complete uniform by the 4th of July. This zeal beſpeaks the noble enthuſiaſm of our youth, who feel the cauſe in which they are embarking!

Yeſterday a number of braſſfield pieces of 12lb. calibar, arrived in this city from Albany.

June 14.

Extract of a letter from a reſpectable banking houſe in London, to a merchantile houſe in this city, received per the ſhip Mary.

"The alarms on the ſubject of Hamburgh; have, for the preſent, ſubſided; but, until the continental powers, and chiefly thoſe in the north, will make their buſineſs to ſtand up againſt the French innovation ſyſtem, there is no knowing how long it may be kept up.

"The French now capture every veſſel that preſents herſelf, whether friend or foe; and whether bound for their own ports, or thoſe of any other country: even to Holland and Flanders. It does not ſurprize us, but it is material that it ſhould be known, as it makes any intercourſe with thoſe countries very dangerous.

"Our fleet is blocking up Rouen; ſo nothing can get in or out.

"We are in expectation of a viſit from the French; but they [illegible] was ſo much ſpirit and unanimity in the country as at preſent—The voluntary ſubſcriptions already amount to one million and a half, and we venter to ſay, they will be double the ſum, independent of the aſſeſſed taxes.

"The interior part of the kingdom is perfectly well prepared to repel any attack the French can make; and we are certain the event will be brilliant to this country.

"If other nations had manfully reſiſted the inroads of the French, the continent of Europe would not have been in its preſent humiliated and dependent ſtate on that rapacious banditti."

[We have ſeen the original from which this is extracted.]

It is in contemplation in this city, we are informed, to arm and equip ſeveral veſſels for the protection of our commerce—and conſiderable ſums have already been ſubſcribed to a paper now in circulation for that purpoſe.

The fortifications on Governor's Iſland were viſited on Tueſday by the ſecretary at war and ſeveral other gentlemen—their deliberations do not tranſpire.

ANNAPOLIS, May 24.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman high in the eſtimation of the United States, to his friend in this city, dated London, February 12, 1798.

"Your conjectures in America about the inſtability of this government, are erroneous. The accounts you receive are from prejudiced ſources, principally oppoſition news-papers. Setting aſide the frightful maſs of debt under which it labors, it never was more proſperous, and certainly never half ſo ſtrong. Its reſources are yet great, and equal to any probable exigency. The people are quiet, apparently attached not only to the conſtitution, but to the meaſures of adminiſtration. Its navy gives it ſecury from without; and the late brilliant ſucceſſes of that navy have gratified the national pride, and raiſed the ſpirits of the country. The threat of invaſion has only ſerved to give new energy to government, by producing general union. France will find in Great-Britain an unqueable enemy. Mr. Pitt has lately trebled and quadrupled the aſſeſſed taxes, for the purpoſe of relieving, or rather ſparing the funding ſyſtem, by raiſing part of the ſupplies within the year; and even this ſtrong meaſure excites no conſiderable diſcontent. In aid of this a voluntary contribution is now going on, for the defence of the kingdom, which will produce a large ſum. It would produce more, but that the [illegible] about a deſcent is not [illegible]. Ireland has long been in a dreadful ſtate, and is, I believe, [illegible] by the military. If a French invaſion is at all projected, Ireland is probably the deſtined point of attack; but it cannot ſucceed, even in that view, while Great-Britain maintains the diſputed empire of the ocean, and has on foot ſo powerful a force in every aſſailed part of the three kingdoms. It is almoſt impoſſible to learn the true ſituation of Ireland (accounts are ſo contradictory) or the cauſes which have led to it. It is extremely certain, however, that England is in perfect tranquillity, and likely ſo to continue. The minority in parliament is unuſually ſmall, and their influence out of doors leſs than you would attribute to them. If they had any ſuch influence, the rupture of lord Malmſbury's negociation, the laſt manifeſtions of French ambition on the continent, the menace of a deſcent, and the declared animoſity of the directory, have much decreaſed it. The partizans of reform are not numerous. If peace were re-eſtabliſhed, it is likely they would become ſo; but moderate men recollect, that this is not the moment for trying experiments on the conſtitution."

PHILADELPHIA, June 8.

Capt. Boggs of the Johanna, which arrived yeſterday, left the Iſle of May on the 19th ult.—The Lydia of New-York had arrived there from Dublin, which place ſhe left on the firſt of May. No invaſion had taken place at that time.

ALBANY, June 15.

The treaty with the Oneidas, mentioned in a late Gazette, has been concluded. Some objections were raiſed by the Indians, on opening the conference, to the ceſſion of lands adjacent to the Geneſee road, made by them laſt winter: and they appeared anxious to abridge the quantity from one mile on each ſide of that road, to half a mile—They did not, however, long perſiſt in their objections, but with cordiality and good will, put their ſignatures to an act ratifying their former engagement. By this act, a tract of land of about 36,000 acres, on account of ſituation and ſoil, ſome of the beſt in Oneida. Reſervation, is granted to this State, at 50 cents per acre—the intereſt whereof is to be paid to the ſaid Indians annually in perpetuity.

The commiſſioners have returned to this city.

JUNE 18.

Official information having arrived on Friday laſt, of the re-election of his excellency John Jay, to the government of this ſtate, by a majority of 2380 votes, it was immediately announced by a federal ſelute, by a detachment of the Independent artillery, from Fort-[illegible]—and on Saturday morning, the worſhip corporation, in a body—the general committee of this city, headed by their chairman—the officers of government, clergy and other reſpectable citizens, waited on his excellency, to pay him their congratulations on the occaſion.

ALEXANDRIA, June 9.

The recruiting buſineſs, for the purpoſe of manning the frigate Conſtellation, now lying at Patuxent, has gone on here with great ſpirit for ſome days. Alexandria can boaſt of ſending fifty of her hardy ſons to protect the commerce of our country, and revenge the inſults offered to our flag.—May their exertions in her defence be always ſucceſsful—and may they never return to the boſom of their country, until crowned with the bright reward of VICTORY.

THE ORACLE.

WEST-NIAGARA, July 21.

The following SPEECH was delivered by his Honor the PRESIDENT, to the MEMBERS of the LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL and HOUSE of ASSEMBLY, on the Prorogation of the ſecond Seſſion of the ſecond Parliament of the Province of Upper Canada:

Hon. Gentlemen of the Legiſlative Council, and Gentlemen of the Houſe of Aſſembly,

The calls of your private concerns are becoming too urgent for me to wiſh to detain you longer from them.

I look forward, therefore, with an anxious hope of ſeeing the roads to the capital in ſuch a ſtate of improvement, as may admit the aſſembling the Legiſlature in winter; when more time might be ſpared to your parliamentary duty, without materially interfering with your other avocations.

At this very critical and eventful period, I cannot too earneſtly impreſs upon your minds the neceſſity of ſtrictly enforcing your Militia Laws, that your active vigilance in your reſpective ſtations, may render it difficult for any perſon to ſcreen himſelf from being enrolled in ſome Militia Corps; ſo that every man capable of bearing arms, may be held in conſtant readineſs to aſſiſt in repelling all hoſtile attempts againſt either province.

I muſt not, at the ſame time, omit to call upon you for your moſt zealous exertions in ſuppreſſing vice, immorality, and profaneneſs among the people; that by the general practice of true piety and virtue, this province may merit the Divine protection and favor; without which, no nation or individual (though ever ſo mighty) can expect to proſper.

PETER RUSSELL, Preſident.

York, July 5, 1798.

Extract of a letter from London, dated April 17th.

"The intelligence which the last letters from the Hague bro't, of great preparations being made in Holland, in order to aſſiſt the French in their expedition againſt this country, is confirmed by all the accounts from that place. By the maſter of a neutral veſſel arrived at Harwich from Holland, we learn, that 6 frigates had ſailed from the Texel; and that every preparation was making there to equip the fleet. Theſe frigates, it appears, have arrived at Flushing. Several French frigates are ſtationed off the rivers, to examine all veſſels that arrive, and to prevent any ſhipping from proceeding to ſea. All veſſels above 15 tons burthen employed in inland navigation, were demanded by the government, and were ordered to Flushing and Oſtend, where they were collecting, and from whence it was ſuppoſed they are all to be conveyed to Dunkirk."

Extract of a letter from an American gentleman in London, to his friend in Boſton.

"LONDON, APRIL 9, '98.

"Our envoys will probably remain at Paris until they hear from Philadelphia—this ſeems to be extraordinary, ſince it is well aſcertained that France will not be diverted from her hoſtile deſigns, long ſince formed againſt the United States, and will accept of no conceſſions ſhort of the independence of our country; every vile artifice has been employed to divide the American envoys, with a view to divide more effectually the American people; and finally a deſign is formed by the directory, to ſend away two of the envoys, and it poſſible, to retain one who may be uſed as the medium of communication of the will and pleaſure of France, reſpecting our country; but the good ſenſe of the envoys will not permit them to be the dupes of theſe villanous intrigues.

"Spain and Portugal it is thought will be ſoon overthrown, and South-America will of courſe become ſubject to the direction of the Pariſian deſpots. If a number of nominal republics, depend on France, ſhould be eſtabliſhed in South-America, it is eaſy to ſee that our tranquillity cannot be long maintained.

"France, if ſhe is to be believed, upon having acceſs to our territory, will eaſily perform an operation at Philadelphia, ſimilar to that which took place in Paris, on the 10th of September. Such it is certain is the opinion of a perſon lately returned form the United States, where he had been truſted with the ſecret buſineſs of the directory.

"I tremble for the fear of our country, when I ſee ſo much indecision & weakneſs, at a moment of ſo much danger. The liberty & independence of the Swiſs was a long time threathened like our own—like us they poſtponed the preparation for defence & finally were overtaken by a ruin, which might have been prevented. It is not poſſible to doubt that France is fully determined to and will revolutionize the U. States, if ſhe is not prevented by force, and it is certain ſhe relies greatly upon the aſſiſtance of her partizins among us, to faſicitate her ſucceſs.

"Notwithſtanding the well known ſuperiority of the Britiſh fleet, the French are making immenſe preparations to invade this iſland. The public opinion ſtill remains perfectly calm, but the nation is in arms, and I firmly believe would in leſs than a week deſtroy any army France could land in England."

Extract of a letter from Baltimore dated June 11.

"To the many inſtances of "efficient federaliſm," excited by the ſpirit of the times, we feel a pleaſure in adding one, of the citizens of Baltimore: ſeveral merchants and ſhipbuilders of this city have entered into an agreement, that in caſe war is declared between this country and France, they will immediately build a twenty gun ſhip for the ſervice of government."

BOURDEAUX, April 4.

THE Rhodonian republic, which was to be created in virtue of a proclamation of gen. Brune, of 26th Ventoſe, will not take exiſtence. A new proclamation of that general, publiſhed at Berne the 2d Germinal, announces, that all Switzerland will be formed into a ſingle republic.

Vienna, April 1. We are aſſured that the ambaſſador, Bernedotte, will ſhortly quit this place, to take the command of the army of England; it is ſaid that he will be replaced by citizen Treilhard, pleni potentiary at Raſtadt.

Frankfort, April 4. The Jews on the left bank of the Rhine, have received aſſurance from the municipality of Mayence, at the fair of Ekfort, that they will be conſidered and treated as other traders.

Augſburg, April 6. It appears without doubt that the Emperor will not remain an idle ſpectator of an attack againſt Naples; and this is the probable motive of the movement of the Auſtrian troops in Italy.

Toulon, April 8. Four frigates under the orders of the chief of diviſion, Perrie, have arrived in this port from Anconia, and have bro't naval ſtores, very valuable, from the arſenal of Venice, conſiſting of braſs cannons, cables, ſails, &c.

Bruſſels, April 9. The head quarters of general Grenier's diviſion are now at Boulogne, thoſe of general Deſaix's diviſion, at Dunkirk; the head quarters of the diviſion of Italy are at Calais: and a fourth diviſion, compoſed of troops from Holland and the interior of France will have their head quarters at St. Omer. In all the above harbors the fitting of gun-boats goes on day & night without interruption.

Gen. Buonaparte has ſent certain officers, in whom he has the greateſt confidence, to each diviſion of the army of England, in order the better to regulate its operations. His orders are directed to them, and they are charged with the execution thereof. It is expected that by theſe means a great uniformity will be eſtabliſhed in the operations.

Straſbourg, April 13. Letters of the moſt recent date from Switzerland, mention that the legiſlative body of the Helvetic republic has been inſtalled the 20th of this month at Aran, and that every day there arrive deputies from the different cantons. It is taken for granted, that the conſtitution will be accepted in a very ſhort time throughout Switzerland. Citizen Ochs is now at Berne, where he confers with Mengaut and Lecalier; it is thought that he will be preſident of the Helvetic directory; he is overwhelmed with buſineſs, becauſe all the Helvetic patriots apply to him. It has been reſolved in the laſt conference of the democratic cantons, aſſembled at Bremen, that the ſafety of thoſe cantons depends on the prompt adoption of the conſtitutional plan.—The greater part of Uterwald, and the canton of Zug, have voted to this effect. Schauffhauſe has been obliged to make a new election, becauſe it had at the firſt election nominated the moſt noted oligarchiſts.

The electoral aſſembly of our department has been very outrageous. Seſſions have taken place in the primary aſſemblies of different communes, principally in the communes of Scheleſtal. After a long and interrupted diſcuſſion, the electoral body have annulled the operations of the majority, becauſe they thought they perceived many irregularities and diſaffection to the laws.

Letters from Cologne, dated 11th Germinal, announce the arrival at that port of three Spaniſh frigates with 3 millions and an half of dollars, one of theſe frigates has bro't back M. Gil, formerly vice-roy of Peru.

The tribunal of Rome at its firſt ſitting, has abolished the Inquiſition, the tribunals, and all eccleſiaſtical juriſdictions.

Paris, April 19. A courier extraordinary arrived from Raſtadt to the directory, has brought the happy news that the deputation of the empire has accepted all the conditions of peace propoſed by the French republic. It is ſaid that our plenipotentiaries will in future act only as mediators to ſettle the indemnities of the claiming princes.

Tranſlated from the Leyden Gazette.

Extract of a letter from Berne, of the 10th of March.

"We have paſſed ten days of diſorder, of agony and confuſion.

The 2d of March in the morning, news was received of the attack of the French upon Soleurs: It might be ſaid to cauſe more joy than conſternation, while we were animated with ardor to repel a foreign invaſion: Nothing but anxiety for the combat appeared; but in the afternoon, on the news of the reduction of Soleure and Fribourg, that firſt effervescence abated. There was entered into a new negociation, which came to nothing, and ſerved only to waſte precious time, to ſow diſtruſt, and to reverſe the arrangements which the firſt orders had eſtabliſhed. In the firſt combat, on the 3d of March, before Arberg, the troops of Berne and thoſe of Zurich had at firſt repulſed the French; but this ſucceſs was of very ſhort duration; harmony no longer exiſted; whilſt ſome of the officers wiſhed to act offenſively, others gave orders to their men to hold themſelves ſimply on the defenſive. Theſe different and contradictory orders of the officers inſpired into the ſoldiers ſuſpicions of treachery and cruelly exaſperated them againſt their officers. On the 4th at 6 o'clock in the morning, the old government abdicated; the proviſory government was appointed and eſtabliſhed. During the day, a great number of troops entered the city, the ſoldiers breathed nothing but vengeance againſt thoſe whom they called traitors; they wiſhed to be led againſt the French; they complained loudly of the council of two hundred, which had ſo ſuddenly checked their activity, and of thoſe of their officers who had appeared to them to be partakers of their conduct.

At the gates of the city, colonel Ryniner, col. Stetley, and captain Weiſs, were killed by their men. Many others ſhared preſently the ſame fate. According to popular report, the general D'Erlach was alſo miſerably maſſacred by his troops, and his chateau threatened with conflagration. In fine, in the afternoon, the provisory government was enabled to get some control over this popular movement, and to diſtract its effects, by ſending a part of the troops to the bridge of Gummenen, and another to Grauhultz. The 5th of March in the morning the alarm beat throughout the whole city; every man haſtened to put himſelf in a ſtate of defence; the army of Italy approached our walls. Our ſituation was cruel; fear, rage, deſpair, uncertainty, diſtruſt; every paſſion reigned in turns; and ſometimes all at once; the tocſin ſounded; and the men, boiling with an ill attempted courage ran through the city, to excite the people to arms. In another quarter the fugitives announced that their corps had been attacked at 6 in the morning; that it had coſt the lives of many men on both ſides; and that the poſt muſt ſoon be ſurrendered. Towards the hour of ten, the cannonade of the poſt of Grauholtz was heard. During this, they were reſolved to keep up their reſiſtance, when all of a ſudden, and whilſt the unhappy peaſants ſtill made reſiſtance, the flying artillery of the French came and preſented itſelf before the town & pointed its cannon. While every thing was terror, wiſe men ſaw that no other courſe remained than to ſurrender; theſe prevailed, and they obtained a capitulation. Inſtantly the white flag was hoiſted, and the drum announced thro' the city the capitulation—At eleven o'clock, all the Bernoiſe forces defiled.—They had nine flags with their cannons. Diſorder reigned until the French troops diſtributed into quarters. The black huſſars entered into the houſes, demanded the money, watches, &c. Without the city, the troops committed numberleſs exceſſes. The 6th, in the morning, all the inhabitants of the city were diſarmed. The counſellor Herbert, one of thoſe who had the moſt obſtinately oppoſed every conceſſion to the demands of France, killed himſelf in deſpair with a piſtol. The 7th, the army of Italy (that of general Brune) took up their encampment to a very great number, in the city. In the night we beheld the conflagration of two houſes: the villages of Kunitz, Bemplitz, Wangen and Gatze, were completely pillaged. The ſame day a part of the army of the Rhine, (that of gen. Schaumbourg) cantoned itſelf in the villages which environ the city. The 9th, in the morning, the army of the Rhine quitted us to go to Soleure and its environs, to wait new orders: to make up for this deliverance, the army of Italy entered the city to the number of ten thouſand men. The ſame day the Tree of Liberty was planted on the place of the Hotel de ville: a great croud of people collected there, men and women, all carrying the green cockade (the ſame colour with that of the Alemannic republic) by order of gen. Brune. The new colours were hoiſted during the ceremony by thoſe juſt releaſed from priſon, where they had been confined for mal-practices. The general Brune, mounted on the tribune, addreſſed a diſcourſe to the people, in which he aſſured them, "that the moment of tempeſt was paſſed; that calm and tranquillity were about to revive; that the natural rights of man, liberty and equality, were eſtabliſhed; that the people were about to be delivered from the oppreſſion of their great men, &c." At the cloſe of this diſcourſe, were heard the cries of Vive la Republic! Vive la general Brune, la Grande Nation! &c. In deſcending from the common hall, the proceſſion made a tour round the tree; general Brune and Mr. Fiſching laid the firſt ſtones of its conſolidation."

The United States brig Sophia, capt. Geddes, with diſpatches for the American envoys, arrived at Bourdeaux on the 5th of May.

A French 74 and two corvettes, loaded with cordage, were captured by the Britiſh previous to the failing of the Fox. One of the convoy lately arrived at Newfoundland, fell in with an Engliſh 74 in poſſeſſion of a French 80 gun ſhip, quite new, captured only three days before.

An article dated Breſt, 7th May, gives an account of a French 74 being burnt in the port of L'Orient.

Articles from Paris, Perpignan, Genoa and Arcona, all ſpeak, but in a very unintelligible and contradictory manner, of a grand expedition going on in the Mediterranean.

The negociation at Raſtadt ſeems to be at a ſtand.

The French ambaſſador who was obliged to quit Vienna, is arrived at Straſburgh. The French papers tell a vaſt number of ſhuffling lies, in order to account for the humble conduct of the directory with reſpect to this buſineſs; but it is eaſy to perceive, that the Emperor does not care about them; and they have no inclination to renew the war with him.

A new coalition is talked of between Auſtria, Pruſſia, Ruſſian and Great Britain. To effect this the French journaliſt mentions the Engliſh laviſh their gold and promiſes. The Auſtrian troops are ſaid to be every where in motion. General Spork, commander of the Imperial army in the Tyrol, had arrived on the 30th of April at Inſpruck, and other generals were expected. By an order from Vienna all the frontier places were put in the beſt ſtate of defence—ſupplied with proviſions and filled with troops.

LONDON, May 7.

Extract of a private letter from Hamburgh, dated April 14.

"The French miniſter Ryneur, went a week ſince ambaſſador to Naples. The French conſul, Ligot, with the concurrence of Leonard Bourdon, has eſtabliſhed three clubs, in two of which all perſons who chuſe to aſſociate are admitted. Above 100 members are initiated, and among them ſeveral confident Engliſhmen. The third is at the conſul's own houſe is devoted to French citizens. Their ſecond monthly fraternal dinner was held about a week ſince.

"Two inſtalments have been remitted to the French of the 230,000l. which Leonard Bourdon moſt wickedly impoſed upon this city; and in order to remunerate the chamber, an additional tonnage upon ſhipping is ſpeedily to take place.

"In conſequence of the arrete of the inſolent directory, to ſeize all Engliſh property on board neutral veſſels, your government acted very wiſely in appointing a ſtrong convoy, two of which have lately arrived; ſo that their wicked intentions to rob the trade of this city, which they have ſo unmercifully fleeced, has, through the good conduct of your rulers, fallen ſhort of their views, and has given the Engliſh ſhipping a manifeſt advantage. It reſults from thence that the neutral veſſels can ſcarcely obtain a freight. If the wiſdom of the Engliſh government would add a good ſloop and a cutter, to give an account of the ſmall privateers, the carrying trade would be altogether in the hands of the Engliſh, which will make them amends for the loſs upon the value of their goods.

"The glut of manufactured Engliſh goods at this market is ſo ſenſibly felt, that it has greatly diminiſhed the prices. Public auctions are daily held, and the goods frequently ſell under prime coſt, particularly cotten and woollen.

"Notwithſtanding the ſuppoſed flouriſhing ſtate of the Hamburghers, bankruptcies are frequent.—Within a ſhort time there have been three great failures, viz.

G. Leſſer, 200,000 do.

J. C. Knauth, 620,000 do.

Amounting altogether to nearly 150,000l. ſterling."

Capt. Hague, from Liſbon, favored us with the following ſtatement:

June 20, lat. 38, 16, long. 61, 31. fell in with the ſchooner Sally of Plymouth, from Demarara bound to Boſton; on coming up along ſide this veſſel, found her to be in a diſtreſsful ſituation, her rigging being in a very ſhattered condition, and having only two people on board, who, through fatigue, ſeemed to bear very viſible marks of diſtreſs. When I aſked them if they had ſeen or heard of any privateers, was immediately anſwered by one of them in the affirmative, who appeared extremely anxious in relating the following ſtory, but the wind blowing freſh, could not underſtand all he ſaid, therefore ſent the boat with the mate and two of my people on board, to render them ſuch aſſiſtance which their ſituation required, and alſo to obtain a particular account of what he ſeemed ſo deſirous to communicate, which is as follows from his own words. (This was the mate of the ſchooner previous to the capture.)

On the 18th May, we ſailed from Demerara in company with a Britiſh convoy, with which we parted on the 25th; on the 28th, lat. 31, long. 65, were captured by a French ſloop of war of 18 guns, with an American brig in company, which ſhe had taken the day before. They immediately took away the captain (Randal) and two ſeamen; alſo the greateſt part of our ſtores, with a conſiderable number of bags of coffee: ſent on board a prize-maſter with ſix people, and then ſhaped a courſe for France, leaving the Maccue ſtanding to the N. W.—May 21, loſt part of the main rigging, and being reduced to a ſcanty allowance of water, the captors determined to make the beſt of their way to St. Martins; on the 10th of June ſeeing they made but little progreſs, and the ſmall quantity of water not likely to ſerve them to St. Martins, I heard the prize maſter and his mate conſulting what they ſhould do, when at laſt they determined to put me and my fellow ſufferer to death, if in caſe the ſtock of water ſhould not be ſufficient to carry them to their port. I immediately communicated this to my partner, and after ſome deliberation, we reſolved to attempt retaking the veſſel the firſt opportunity that appeared favourable.

The prize maſter began to ſuſpect ſomething of this kind, who immediately came to me with a drawn ſword, and threatened to aſſaſſinate me, at which I fell down at his feet, and begged of him for God's ſake to ſpare my life, and endeavoured to perſuade him that I had not any intention of what he ſuſpected. He then relented, and damning me in his own language, ſaid that he would not kill us—we might live as long as we could without water, for not one drop more we ſhould have. On the 12th ult. lat. 30, long. 65, 30, ſaw a ſloop ſtanding to the W. S. W. which ſoon after ſtood towards us when he came up, I was ordered by the prize maſter to tell him that we were from Plymouth bound for St. Martins, after which I aſked him if he wanted any bread, and defired him to ſend his boat on board—the prize maſter not underſtanding Engliſh, aſked me what I was ſaying, I told him that he was going to ſend his boat for a barrel of bread; when the boat came along ſide, two of the people came on deck, whom the prize maſter ordered to take the bread and be gone. I now thought that the people both in the boat and on board the ſloop were by this time acquainted with our ſituation, therefore was reſolved to attempt what I had ſome time been meditating, and ſeeing that the greateſt part of their arms were in the cabin, I immediately ruſhed on the prize maſter, and calling to the people in the boat to come to my aſſiſtance we inſtantly made ourſelves maſters of the ſchooner; the captors expecting (I ſuppoſe) that I ſhould retaliate on them, immediately jumped overboard, all but this one whom you now ſee on board with us.—I rewarded theſe people with a few bags of coffee, and aſked the captain of the ſloop (which was the Friendſhip of Greenwich, John Benthall maſter) if he could ſpare me one of his ſeamen, but he being himſelf very ſick, ſaid he could not conveniently do it. I then took my leave of him and proceeded to the northward, and have ſeen nothing until this day that I have fallen in with you.

After rendering them what aſſiſtance I could, ſent on board one ſeaman, who was a paſſenger with one from Liſbon, we then parted, ſhe ſteering to the N. N. W. and I expect has before this time reached her port.

Norfolk, June 14. On Sunday laſt the St. Tammany was chaſed from 5 o'clock in the morning to five in the evening by a French ſchooner privateer of 14 guns; W. S. W. off Cape Henlopen, and in 15 fathom water, the privateer came up with the St. Tammany, boarded her, and robbed her of all her letters, papers and two bolts of canvaſs. During the time this pirate was plundering the ſhip, a ſchooner hove in ſight, to which he gave chace. The St. Tammany eſcaped by her not being worth keeping, having only ballaſt on board.

A ſchooner from Boſton, arrived yeſterday, informs that a Boſton ſchooner was boarded off Cape Cod, by a French privateer of 14 guns, and plundered of flour.

Alexandria, June 16. The ſhip Eliza, captain Borrowdale, of this port, was taken on her inward bound paſſage, by a French privateer, in ſoundings, juſt off the Capes. The crew were put on board a pilot boat bound to Baltimore. Part of them arrived here yeſterday.

WALPOLE, New-Hamſhire.

Extract of a letter, dated Philadelphia, June 18, '98, from a member of congreſs to the editor.

SIR,

"I have this morning incloſed to you a little pamphlet, "The Cannibal's Progreſs, or a narrative of the atrocities of the French in the diſtrict of Suabia," Perhaps ſome extracts from it, may at this time, be ſerviceable. It will not add to the elegance of your paper, but the facts are of such a nature, that the most simple narrative will produce sufficient effect—We have this morning received advice, that Mr. Marshall, one of our envoys, has returned to New-York, and on this day, we expect to have the satisfaction to see him in this place. All hopes then of accommodation by treaty are done away, and nothing remains, but to prepare for the last resort. The wavering indecision, which has hitherto marked our councils, arising from the possibility of the chance of an amicable adjustment of differences, ought no longer to arrest the most energetic measures. Whether this will be the consequence, events must determine; but it appears to me to be little short of infatuation, or madness, to attempt any longer to put off the day, that will most certainly come upon us. France will, most assuredly, attempt to coerce us to submission, and we must either go to war, or become tributary.—There is no other alternative. Is it not much better then, under such a state of things, bravely to advance, and make the first step, rather than to wait, until the favourable moment shall arrive, when they will wholly throw aside the mask, and the subjugation of the country will be openly avowed?

On this day, it is expected a bill will be reported in the Senate, to declare null and void, our treaty with France, a measure which ought instantly to be adopted. I will forward to you the answer of our envoys to the French minister's memorial, a very excellent performance; pray give it a place, as early as possible.

At this moment, my friend, we should have our lamps trimmed and buring, for we know not the day nor the hour, when the Sans-culottes will come upon us."

PORTLAND, June 25.

Captain Blake, from St. Croix, informs that great numbers of American vessels were continually carried into Port Rico; that the crews were imprisoned, and no letters suffered to be sent from the place—that the French captured all the vessels they met with, and that an embargo was laid in all French ports.

THE ORACLE.

WEST-NIAGARA, July 28.

We are desired by his honor the President, to publish the following copy of a letter, that it may put the people of this province on their guard against taking counterfeit dollars, which there is great reason to think might otherwise get into circulation here.

(COPY.)

Public Office, Worship-street, 14th December, 1797.

SIR,

Having reason to suspect, since the circulation of dollars has been stopped, that those miscreants, both here and in Birmingham, who have been so extensively concerned in fabricating this species of base coin, will, or have found means to convey quantities of counterfeit dollars, without the King's head, both to Canada and Nova Scotia.

This base coin is generally composed of copper, covered with a thin plate of silver, and executed in a very masterly manner.

These false dollars are either discovered by ringing one upon another, or by boring with any sharp-pointed instrument; the latter operation discovers the copper at once, and detects the fraud.

I thought it my duty to give you this information, which I am sure you will think right.

I am, &c.

As the coiners have dies, presses and every kind of apparatus for dollars, I have no doubt of their being busily at work.

O GOD! methinks it were a happy lot
To be no better than a homely swain,
The peaceful tenant of a little cot,
The blithe companion of a village train.

Where cares mistrust, and treason banish sleep,
See on the glittering couch the monarch laid,
While the poor swain, encircled by his sheep,
Securely slumbers in the hawthorn shade.

To tend his flock is all his wordly care;
To rest and sport alternate hours are given,
Save when religion claims the pause of pray'r,
And meditation wafts the soul to Heav'n.

PHILADELPHIA, July 7.

House of Representatives—June 27.

In the course of the sitting, the following message in writing was received from the president of the U. States:

Gentlemen of the senate, and gentlemen of the house of representatives,

"I Have received a letter from his excellency Thomas Mifflin, governor of Pensylvania, inclosing some documents, which I judge it my duty to lay before congress, without loss of time.

"As my opinion coincides entirely with that of his excellency the governor; I recommend the subject to the consideration of both houses of congress, whose authority alone appears to me adequate to the occasion.

JOHN ADAMS."

United States, June 27, 1798.

SIR,

I think it proper to inform your excellency, that on the evacuation of Port-au-Prince by the British troops, a very great number of white men and negroes were put on board of transports and sent to America. Some of the vessels, I understand, made an attempt to land their passengers at Charleston; two have arrived at this port, and it is said that the remainder of the fleet may be daily expected in some of our harbors.

To prevent, as I can, the obvious danger from such an importation at this crisis, I have determined, with the advice of the attorney-general, and other state officers, to prohibit the landing of French negroes arriving at the port of Philadelphia, in vessels under the circumstances which I have stated;—the limited jurisdiction of Penn. the facility with which our regulations may be evaded, by disembarking the negroes in any adjacent state, & perhaps the difficulty of extending the prohibition to white men, induce me to submit the subject to your consideration; and to request such co-operation of the federal authority, as your excellency may deem expedient for the general safety.

I have added to this communication, copies of the documents containing the information I have received.

I have the honor to be, with perfect consideration and respect, sir, your excellency's most obedient servant,

THOMAS MIFFLIN.

Phila. 27th June, '98.

To his excellency John Adams, esq. president of the U. S.

[Here follows the letter and proceedings of the health office.]

David Pickerton a passenger in the Josephus, from Jeremie, in his letter to the board of health, supposes that the number of emigrants, referred to in gov. Mifflin's letter, exceeds 4000 persons, "Many of them (he adds) without any funds—and some with a considerable number of negro slaves, that have all been trained to arms, and have them with them, and attached to their masters interest."

New-York, June 30. The president's message to congress, as published in this day's gazette, on the subject of the emigration from Port au Prince to the United States, is of the highest importance. The facts stated in Mr. Pickerton's letter—and the information of attempts to land the persons alluded to at Charleston, should alarm the public mind, and rouse it to a sense of the danger we incur by indiscriminately admitting hordes of unprincipled foreigners amongst us—It is a fact too well known to be disputed, that the French West-India negroes, and many of their white men, are so familarized to scenes of carnage and conflagration, have been so often the vile instruments of cruelty, rapine and massacre, that to admit crouds of them in the United States, at the present critical conjuncture of our relations with France, would be the summit of imprudence, folly and madness—It would be harbouring our worst enemy—and preposterously furnishing the means of self destruction. It seems these persons are all accustomed to the use of arms—and from what is known they are a hardened bloodthirsty set. Such beings dispersed among the croud of blacks in the southern States, would prepare them for insurrection, and if a critical moment should arrive, they might and would act as subordinate agents in stimulating their ferocity, and directing them to action—This business is now before congress, and it is hoped will be attended to—At any rate, the emigrant negroes and Frenchmen should be sent back as soon as they arrive without being admitted to a landing—and if any have been incautiously suffered to go ashore, they should be seized and also sent away—Selfpreservation loudly demands it.

Mr. Pickerton in his letter, speaking of the emigration from the West-Indies, says, "A great many are gone to the southern States, and fully ripe for any turn we may take with respect to France."—Capital visitors these, truly, in the existing state of our politics!—"Upwards of 4000 have gone to the Southern States." Why there particularly? Because the great number of blacks already there will furnish abundance of inflammable materials to work upon—"Many more were preparing to come with the next fleet.—To poison our country by the admission of these people, would be infinately worse than importing the yellow fever. That is generally limited to the sea ports—and passes away on the approach of winter.—But the other would cause a political disease through the country; and if supported in the manner we have reason to apprehend, and if successful, they would not only aid in destroying our rights and liberties, but our property, our lives and every object near and dear to us—They are dangerous, very dangerous people—and they must be kept at a proper distance.

Extract of a letter from Philadelphia, dated June 28.

"I have just time to inform you that Mr. Sitgreaves has just read in his place, a letter from gen. Toulfard to the Secretary of war, dated Fort Mifflin, June 28, stating, that the resident officer of the hospital of Pennsylvania, had given the lerious alarm, that there exifted a mutiny among the veffels performing quarantine at the fort from the Mole, who have on board the paffengers and their negroes, which left Port-au-Prince, as you will fee by the Prefident's meffage in this day's Gazette. The negroes have got poffeffion of an armed fhip, one of the convoy, and were feen hovering round the fleet. General Touffard, not being able to bring his guns to bear on them, being fo much above the fort, he fent word to capt. Decatur, of the armed fhip the Delaware, who was at anchor juft below the fort, to come up with the tide and bring his guns to beat on the N. E. fide of the convoy, which Decatur has done. Touffard alfo mentions, that he intends to order them below the fort, fo that he may be able to bring his whole battery to bear upon them, the better to watch their motions, and to prevent them from landing in Jerfey. The negroes are all trained to arms and have them with them; and are determined to land, as they care not for laws, and count their lives as of no value. The letter has been referred to the committee for the protection of commerce and defence of the country, on that fubject.

N. B. There are about 250 negroes on board thefe veffels, and are determined to land. The pilots have left the veffels; but I think every thing is fafe, as they are fo placed as to be within reach of the guns of the Delaware and fort Miffin."

COMMUNICATION.

That we have too many Frenchmen among us already is a ferious fact, which has excited alarm, not only among the people at large, but among their repreientatives in congrefs. Some of them are jacobins and the known enemies of our peace and fecurity, whom it is a duty to expel as foon as poffible; others under various names are of more doubtful character, who require watching and fome particular legiflative provifion: but they are all Frenchmen, and as far as they have embraced an opinion which has been induftriufly fpread among them, however falfely, that our government leans to the Britifh intereft they are invariably hoftile. It is for this reafon that they attach themlelves fo generally to the party in oppofition, becaufe they believe it to be moft friendly to their nation: for however they may execrate her prefent tyrants, they ftill rejoice to fee her influence predominate in the United States, as well as in all other countries. It flatters their national pride, which, amidft a load of frivolity, rapacity and cruelty, is ftill the diftinguifhing trait of a Frenchman. But he has a fpecial reafon for intermeddling in the concerns of this country. He confiders our liberty and independence as the gift of France, purchafed by her blood and treafures; and that any refiftance on our part to her dictates and impofitions is an act of ingratitude; that to join her enemies in the prefent conflict, however impelled we may be by her oppreffions, would in his opinion damn us to the loweft hell. If therefore, there fhould ever be a ferious conteft between the parties that now rend this country, we may eafily judge which fide the French would take. It is not uncharitable to fuppofe that they will unite with the oppofers of government; and I am afraid that thefe paricides, in the intereft and pay of France, will long exift to be the fcourge and difgrace of their country. Nothing but a ferious rupture and an inflexible firmnefs againft the admiffion of Frenchmen can give us any fecurity.

We know what we have to expect from others, by reviewing the conduct and opinions of thofe French refugees who have been fome years in the United States. Men who have fled here for protection from the daggers of their countrymen; who have eat of our bread and drank of our cup—fome of thefe even have taken part openly with the agents of the French republic and united in mifrepreferting and abufing the American government.

With this conviction on the mind—and when we are on the eve of an open war with France, it would be the greateft folly, to admit a freth importation of her citizens; for the paffengers at the fort are certainly her citizens in their hearts, as well as in the eye of the law, although they hate her exifting tyrants, and have lived fome time under the Britifh government.—But when thefe exiles come attended by a fmall army of blacks, the moft obnoxious and perhaps the moft dangerous clafs of people in this country, it would be an act of imprudence that borders on infatuation.

It is juftly apprehended that fhould the directory ever fend an army to invade America, and that they will make the attempt in fome part or other we have the greateft reafon to fear, their firft object will be to draw the blacks round their ftandard. They have experienced the ufefulnefs of this people in all their Weft Indian armies and fleets. By them they hold Guadaloupe and St. Domingo, & by them they plunder our trade. Let me alk any man then, who regards the common fafety, whether moft of the blacks of this country both native and imported, would not embrace an army of Frenchmen, compofed one half of their own colour, as their faviours; and whether a country, like this, that has already near one hundred thoufand of this degraded race fit to bear arms in her bofom, would not be guilty of extreme folly to admit a man more.

In cafe of an invafion, thefe internal enemies would require an army to watch them, to prevent an infurrection; and would leffen the force in the fame degree, that could be fpared to face an invading enemy. There is little reafon to fuppofe that thefe blacks from St. Domingo, however faithful they may have been heretofore to their maffers, would not efcape and join the invaders. The lure of liberty, pleafure and plunder would be too ftrong to be refifted; and as they, as well as our own blacks, would fight with halters about their necks, their courage would be defperate.

It is no argument againft their removal, that when thefe people left the ifland, we had no law againft their admiffion—or that they have a large property in money and goods in this country. It may be a difappointment; it may be a hardfhip to them, at which humanity revolts to fend them away—but our own fecurity has a weight fuperior to all other arguments, in the proportion of more than one to a hundred. Shall the eafe and convenience of 3000 aliens, whofe prefence would be dangerous, be balanced againft the fafety of a whole country, containing more than five millions of people?

There is one reafon more, not yet mentioned, which, with myfelf and others has confiderable weight. Befides adding to the ftrength of the faction, oppofed to government, by an increafe of Frenchmen, who in all countries and at all times have uniformly coalefced with the feditious and difcontented, we fhall admit citizens, whofe licentious manners and irriligious principles will haften the general corruption.—If we really believe that morality and religion are the only folid bafis of government, as well as its beft prefervatives, it behoves us by all means to difcourage the emigration of fo fceptical and diffolute a race of men as the modern French, and we ought to oppofe the landing of a fingle paffenger.

An ACT to declare the Treaties heretofore concluded with France, no longer obligatory on the United States.

Whereas the treaties concluded between the United States & France have been repeatedly violated on the part of the French government; and the juft claims of the U. States for reparation of the injuries fo committed have been refufed; and their attempts to negociate an amicable adjuftment of all complaints between the two nations have been repelled with indignity: & whereas, under authority of the French government, there is yet purfued againft the United States, a fyftem of predatory violence, infracting the faid treaties, and hoftile to the rights of a free and independent nation.

Be it enacted by the Senate & Houfe of Repreſentatives of the United States of America, in Congrefs aſſembled, That the United States are of right freed and exonerated from the ftipulations of the treaties, and of the conſular convention, heretofore concluded between the United States and France; and that the fame fhall not henceforth be regarded as legally obligatory on the government or citizens of the United States.

Addreſs of the Cincinnati of New Jerſey, to John Adams, Preſident of the United States.

The members of the Society of Cincinnati of New Jerfey, this day convened at their annual meeting, for the purpofes of perpetuating their friendfhips, and of commemorating together the great events which gave independence to the United States, do now beg leave in common with our fellow citizens, to addrefs our chief magiftrate, for the purpofe of expreffing our entire fatisfaction with his adminiftration of the government, and in particular as it relates to the injuries and infults which have been received from the French republic, as alfo of making aſſurance of our readinefs, again to take the field in vindication of its national honor, and in fupport of that independence for the eſtabliſhment of which we patiently endured the toils, hardfhips and danger of an eight year's war.

Whilft we contemplate another and perhaps more arduous ſtruggle for the independence of our country, we are too fenfible of its coft and value, not to be willing again, and again, to put our lives and all we hold dear on earth, at the hazard, and fhould our country, by reafon of inteſtine divifions (which we truft are vainly counted upon) fail in aſſerting her national rights againſt the aggreſſions of that ambitious and haughty nation, which in purſuit of her objects ſets at defiance all laws human and divine, we ſhall conſider that all our labours and victories paſt, ſhall have been in vain, and that the independence, which we are this day celebrating, will, inſtead of being a bleſſing to us, only ſhew our folly in aſſuming rights we had not the ſpirit to defend.

Under theſe ſolemn impreſſions we pray you, Sir, to place the utmoſt reliance on the ſincerity of our declaration, when we profeſs our readineſs to offer on the altar of our country, whatever ſervices may be derived from that knowledge and experience in military affairs, acquired by us during the revolutionary war, and which yet remains after the deaths of ſo many of our companions in arms; and we truſt, Sir, that new and ſtill more glorious victories are in ſtore for us, when we ſhall have rallied at the voice of our country, under that renowned veteran and beloved chief, who, in times which tried mens ſouls, victorioufly conducted us to peace and ſafety, and whoſe appointment, this day announced, fills our hearts with the moſt enthuſiaſtic joy and tranſport.

By the unanimous order of the Society,
ELIAS DAYTON, Preſident.
Atteſt.
ANDREW HUNTER, Sec'ry.
Trenton, July 4.

To the Members of the Society of the Cincinnati, in the ſtate of New Jerſey.

GENTLEMEN,

I thank you for this addreſs. It was impoſſible for you to aſſemble on the 4th of July, for the purpoſe of perpetuating your friendſhips, and commemorating together the great events, which gave independence to theſe United States, without feeling the deep impreſſion of the preſent ſtate of the nation, and the intereſting proſpect before it.

The entire ſatisfaction of your ſociety with my adminiſtration of the government, and in particular as it relates to the injuries and inſults that have been received from the French republic, is very dear to me; the aſſurance of your readineſs again to take the field, in obedience to the call of your country, in vindication of its national honor, and in ſupport of that ſovereignty, for the eſtabliſhment of which, you patiently endured the toils, hardſhips and dangers of an eight year's war, is very ſatisfactory to me.

The duration and ſeverity of that future ſtruggle you have in contemplation, will depend in ſome meaſure upon the powers of Europe. If a combination ſhould be formed, to arreſt the progreſs of the moſt dangerous and deſtructive power, that ever threatened the liberties of Europe, your exertions may be leſs diſtreſſing; but, if the principal remaining barrier to French tyranny ſhould be broken down, America muſt prepare for a ſeverer trial than ſhe ever experienced. If Americans are capable of inteſtine diviſions, which can aſſiſt ſuch an enemy, in ſuch a cauſe, all our paſt lives and labours have been in vain. I hope and believe better things of my countrymen, and place the utmoſt reliance on the ſincerity of your declaration, when you offer, on the altar of your country, the ſervices which may be derived from that knowledge and experience in military affairs, acquired by you in the laſt war.

May new and ſtill more glorious victories, if neceſſary for the rights of your country and mankind, be ſtill in ſtore for you, under that renowned veteran and beloved chief, whoſe appointment could not fail to fill your hearts with the moſt enthuſiaſtic joy and tranſport.

THE ORACLE.

WEST-NIAGARA, Auguſt 4.

From a Baltimore paper.

The patriotiſm of the American people at this truly eventful criſis, is hardly to be equalled. All ranks, all denominations almoſt are embarking in this beſt of all cauſes.

At an appointed meeting of the methodiſt ſociety, laſt evening, at their meeting houſe in Light-ſtreet, one of the clergy, the Rev. John Chalmers, though exempt from militia ſervice by reaſon of his age, as well as by law, being a miniſter, offered himſelf to head a company; and after much being ſaid by ſeveral miniſters preſent, and chief of their old members, ſhewing that in all probability, it would deprive him of further uſefulneſs in the church, and the impropriety of a miniſter taking ſuch a ſtep, yet he was elected by a majority, in which was a number of patriotic youths, who, with himſelf, were of opinion, the preſent call to military ſervice outweighed every other conſideration. He has therefore exchanged the pulpit for a ſtation in the field, and on this day they are to have a meeting to form a company of Methodiſts.

We copy the following curious advertiſement from a Richmond paper (ſtate of Virginia.)

"My wife, Judath, hath alopted and gone off from me and taken with her 7 peaces of bacon. 3 pu-ter plates, 3 of my shirts, 1 pouncb ball, one new bibell." A peace of white linnen, fore yards and a half in the peace, at tree shillings and nine pence per yard; one new pint bason and a half gallon Gug fool: and a great many more things, too reagus to mention.

MR. G. DOGGETT."

[Mr. G. Doggett certainly has not taken his degrees in the schools, or even meditated the wholesome orthographical truths of Dilworth.]

The Baltimore papers received this day confirm the news respecting a change of conduct in the opposition members of the British Parliament.—Great numbers of members of the seditious societies in England have been seized.—The French faction there seems to have been blown up.

The editor of the Aurora the first inst. was arrested, on a warrant from judge Peters of the federal circuit court, on the charge of libelling the President and the executive government, in a manner tending to excite sedition, and opposition to the laws, by sundry publications and re-publications At the request of his counsel, the proceedings were suspended till Friday next, and the marshall of the district held him upon his parole, then to appear.

The following letter is taken from a Boston pape; of the 27th of June--Every printer ought to give it a place in his paper.

MR. RUSSELL,

In the Chronicle of Monday last, I read with indignation, a paragraph reflecting on the conduct of capt. Pender, of his Britannic Majesty's ship St. Albans, who was appointed to convoy the American vessels which sailed from the Cove of Cork, in March last. In that infamous paragraph, capt. Pender is stigmatized as haughty and tyrannical, and as being insolent to the Americans. A viler lie never was uttered by man. Captain Pender during the whole voyage, did not only his duty as a safeguard to the fleet, but on every occasion where his assistance and advice were wanted, deported himself with kindness, generosity and hospitality.

I am satisfied, that captain Pender possesses too much magnanimity to feel himself injured by the slanderous tale of a wretched scribbler devoted to France; but I deem it my duty, as one of the convoyed, by the declaration of the truth, to rescue the American character from the black charge of ingratitude, which the villainous and ignorant paragraph is calculated to fix upon it.

With respect to the brig Betsy, of Wiscasset, these are the facts; She had been taken by the French; and by them divested of all her papers. In that situation she was re-taken by capt. Pender; who finding her thus destitute, and of course liable to be captured and condemned by any cruizers, of any nation, that might fall in with her, took her in tow—not from any emolument he expected to receive as salvage, for her preservation cost him much more than he could ever expect to receive; but merely to preserve her for her American owners: and as she was bound for Charleston, had he fell in with that latitude, he would have left her there; and trusted to the justice of the federal courts for a reasonable salvage. The convoy falling in to the northward, he could not send her in, but has carried her to Halifax, where justice will undoubtedly be done to all parties. Had not the French deprived her of papers, she never would have been in the least incommoded.

I feel myself bound in justice, to make this statement; I am ready to confess myself under many obligations to captain Pender for his politeness and attention; and in my opinion the tribute of respect which has been paid him by the merchants of Boston, is as honorable to them, to profler, and he is worthy to receive it.

JOHN WILSON,
Master of the ship Delight.
June 26, 1798.

The cause of the execution of Jan Bon St. Andre, the Frenchman, at Algiers, is said to be this; he had a revolution club, composed of a few Frenchmen and some natives. Information of this was carried to the dey of Algiers, who only demanded if the fact was ascertained? and on being told it was—he said—"Let me have no more of that, but bring me his head in two hours."—Well said dey!—The mahometons, as Paddy said, are better christians than I thought them.

There are several articles in the late French papers, besides those inserted in our last, which prove how anxious the directory are to dammnify the insult their embassador has received at Vienna, and to make the world believe, that the emperor is sorry for it. This is in order to hide their want of means to take vengeance. The fact is, they see a storm gathering over them, and they are afraid of the emperor.

Besides the recent captures, mentioned in yesterday's paper, the English have taken, and carried into Yarmouth, 60 Dutch Greenland men. This can be no great loss to poor Mrs Frog whose misfortunes furnish him with blubber enough, without sending to Greenland for it, while the last of France renders the importation of whale-bone totally unnecessary.

Causes and Effects of Pecuniary Want.

VARIOUS are the causes by which a man is destined to feel the effects of poverty; and the consequences produced by it are as various as the causes by which it is at first felt. Some persons are reduced to a state of indigence, who once rolled in their millions, thro' a want of prudence, frugality, and knowledge of the intrinsic value of their property: The coming and going of their estate appears to them like a dream or imaginary fiction. Others become poor by making use of the means of availing themselves of a comfortable subsistence, to the vile purpose of debasing their natures and incapacitating themselves for their business and occupations, by the too liberal use of what may, strictly speaking, be called the curse of mankind. Where poverty [illegible] up the heels of far too great a number of mankind. Where poverty is produced in this way, wretchedness is the state of that man, [illegible]d beyond description, and more especially if he happens to be at the head of a family, for he renders his family miserable, and the sober and confiderate part of society will withhold that share of charity which they would grant to such an object, were his necessities caused by the hard hand of misfortune. A third set struggle with indigence through hard fortune: those who thus come to want, solely by misfortune, are naturally led to see the instability of all earthly possessions, and that, altho' one day they may have been in comfortable circumstances, yet before the next sun has performed his western course, they may meet an unthought of accident, which will make them objects of distress. Many times such a reduction in a man's estate is salutary in its consequences, and causes the person thus reduced to see, that instead of heaping up wealth, which is subject to destruction every hour, he ought to be preparing himself for an estate in the celestial regions, not subject to the shock of capricious fortune. Poverty is said to be the poor man's protection; in many instances it is, but there are but few, and a very few, who would wish to be protected by real poverty. It is true, that many men are protected by a false kind of poverty, which they preach up to pacify their creditors: but this is the work of deceit, and not real poverty. The poor man in many respects is happier than the rich; his cares are not multiplied by riches, for he has but a living by the work of his hands; nor like the rich man does the blandishments of fortune render him unhappy, for he is not possessed of it; he sees not the vexations, nor does he feel the anxieties of the rich. The map of opulence, 'tis true, is surrounded with every apparent comfort and convenience; yet what that man calls happiness, produced by his affluence, is nothing but the intermitting flashes of pleasure, which are short lived and of no duration.

Man's grand object in this world is to be happy, and the most direct method of procuring this object of his pursuit he will naturally take to obtain it.

Extreme poverty is no more to be desired by a person in pursuit of happiness, than the over abundance of wealth; for the former is apt to depress the mind too much, and drags him insensibly into a state of melancholy; the latter so far elevates the greater part of mankind, as to produce consequences by no means conducive to real happiness. Methinks a due medium between poverty and affluence, would be the most likely to produce a contented mind in the virtuous man, which having once obtained, he may emphatically be called a happy man. Contentment is the only requisite to human happiness, and no one without this valuable property, a contented mind, ever enjoyed the sweets of true and genuine felicity.

[FROM A NEW-YORK PAPER.]

THE OBSERVER.

NO ONE need apply, who cannot bring a good character, says the advertisement, which, in one of the city papers, was enquiring for a person to be employed in domeſtic matters. A good character, ſaid I to myſelf. Then a good character, is of ſome value, even in a hired ſervant. Yes, there is a charm in honeſty and virtue, which the profligate rich man cannot but eſteem. And while he indulges his own children in impiety and vice, idleneſs and debauchery, he is anxious to have an honeſt ſervant, to whom he may intruſt his horſes, and other buſineſs of a like inferior kind. There is a dignity in virtue, and the good character will command at leaſt an awkward reſpect from the moſt vicious and abandoned.

From this advertiſement we may obſerve, that men of integrity are the perſons enquired for, whenever buſineſs is to be tranſacted, either of a public or private nature. The character of the lawyer, the phyſician, the apothecary, or the merchant, with whom you trade, is the ſubject of your examination, previous to his employment; for men, even upon a ſelfiſh regard to their own intereſt, muſt eſteem honeſty its relative virtues. A good character carries with itſelf its own reward; and though vice may, by deception and intreague, ſometimes take a ſeeming advantage, yet in the end virtue will be victorious. A vicious man may impoſe upon you by external appearances and artful inſinuations. Honeſty needs none of theſe, it ſpeaks for itſelf, and the perſon who poſſeſſes it, gains your eſteem without deception.

Young perſons ought therefore to pay attention to beginnings.—The firſt ſteps in life are of the moſt conſequence; while the character is uninformed and may be moulded to the practice of the moſt rational principles. Youth are careleſs and inattentive to this important buſineſs of beginning well. They are often too independent, and purſue their own ſchemes without knowing the conſequences, or regarding the opinion of others.

Such is the temper of our nature, that every perſon will find among his acquaintance thoſe who take more pleaſure in ſpeaking ill than well of him, in finding fault than giving praiſe. If his ſtation is above a common citizen, if nothing more than a juſtice of the peace, his conduct by ſome, will be viewed with a jealous and envious eye.

In this turbulent and confuſed ſcene, where our words and actions are often miſunderſtood, and oftener miſrepreſented it is indeed difficult even for innocence and integrity to avoid reproach, abuſe and hatred. Our intereſt may thus be injured, our advancement impeded, our feelings wounded, and the delicate mind afflicted. It is then the part of wiſdom to do every thing in our power to preſerve an irreproachable character, and then to let our happineſs depend chiefly on the approbation of our conſciences, and on the advancement of our intereſt in that world, where liars ſhall not be believed, and where ſlanderers ſhall receive no countenance."—Mark the upright man, he ſhall be loved, and his virtues ſhall be a benefit to ſociety. The rich will employ him and the wicked will eſteem him.

European News.

LONDON, May 21.

It has been rumoured for ſome days, that ſome remarks of cenſure were meditating by the cabinet, on the conduct of Mr. Fox, at the Whig Club, and the report has turned out to be true. On Wedneſday laſt after the levee was over, a board of privy council was held at St. James's. Mr. Falkener, as clerk of the council, laid the book containing the liſt of privy councellors before his majeſty, in obedience to his commands; when the king drew his pen acroſs the name of the rt. hon. Charles James Fox, and returned the book to Mr. Falkener. We believe the laſt inſtance of this kind was in the caſe of the late duke of Devonſhire, when the king, by the advice of the then miniſter, lord Bute, ſtruck his grace's name out of the ſame book of privy councellors: his grace's crime was that of oppoſing lord Bute's meaſures.—The above event has cauſed no inconſiderable buſtle in the circle of Mr. Fox's political friends. Various meetings of thoſe gentlemen were held yeſterday, & the report is, that ſuch members of the Whig Club as are privy councellors, intend to ſend in their reſignation of that honor.

May 14. One of the morning papers ſays—"We underſtand that government have received private advice from the coaſt of France that the ridiculous project of an invaſion of this country has been completely abandoned by the executive directory. The boaſted "army of England," it is ſaid, has been reduced by deſertion to leſs than 60,000 men, 20,000 of whom, including 14 regiments of cavalry have been ordered to proceed immediately to Switzerland and the Upper Rhine, where ſome ſtrong meaſures are about to be enforced.

May 19. An armament has been for ſeveral days preparing in Margate Roads for a ſecret expedition. This armament has already ſailed, the whole of the troops deſtined for the expedition having embarked on board the different veſſels appointed to receive them on Monday evening.

The force to be employed on this occaſion conſiſts, we underſtand, of 5 ſhips of the line, 5 frigates, 8 gun-boats, and a bomb; with upwards of 2000 troops on board. The troop ſhips are moſtly men of war cut down, and mount very heavy metal. Such was the ſecrecy obſerved on the above expedition, that the troops were entirely ignorant of the nature of it when they were embarked.

No official intelligence has been received from the armament which ſailed from Margate Roads ſince its departure. It muſt have arrived on the coaſt of Holland on Wedneſday night; but the ſtrong weſterly winds which have prevailed ever ſince, have prevented the arrival of any veſſel with diſpatches for government.

THE ORACLE.

WEST-NIAGARA, Auguſt 11.

Official account of the affair at Oſtend.

[We have received a hand-bill, dated London, May 24, with an official account of the iſſue of the Engliſh expedition againſt Oſtend.—It is given in ſeveral letters, which of neceſſity, occaſions many repetitions. The following contains every important fact. It may be neceſſary, however, to obſerve, that the Bruges Canal was the grand vein of the inland navigation between Holland, Flanders and France; and its deſtruction was conceived an object of ſuch importance that maj. gen. Coote, who commanded the troops on the expedition, obſerved, that if the ſurf ſhould prevent the retreat of his men, the ſucceſs of the enterprize would be a full compenſation. The whole number of veſſels engaged in the undertaking were 21, large and ſmall, gun boats. Three ſeamen were killed and 16 wounded. The number of ſoldiers made priſoners, private accounts compute at 1300, there is no official ſtatement.]

London Gazette Extraordinary.

Parliament-ſtreet, May 22, 98.

A diſpatch, of which the following is a copy, has been this day received by the rt. hon. H. Dundas, from lieut. col. Warde, of the 1ſt regt. of guards, dated on board the Expedition frigate, 8 o'clock, P. M. May 20, 1798.

SIR,

In conſequence of the Minerva frigate (on board which were the four light infantry companies of the 1ſt regt. of foot guards) having unfortunately loſt the convoy of the ſquadron under the command of capt. Popham, of the royal navy, during the night of the 18th inſt. the command of the remainder of the troops, from that accident, has devolved upon me; and I have the honor to tranſmit you the moſt correct account that I have been able to collect.

Early on the morning of the 9th inſt. the following troops under the command of maj. gen. Coote,

Two companies, light infantry, Coldſtream guards,
Two do. do. 3d guards,
11th regiment of foot,
23d and 49th flank companies, with 6 pieces of ordnance, diſembarked, and effected their landing at three o'clock in the morning, to the eaſtward of Oſtend, and completed the object of the expedition, by burning a number of boats deſtined for the invaſion of England, and by ſo completely deſtroying the locks, and baſon gates of the Bruges canal, that it was this morning without a drop of water; and as I underſtand all the tranſports fitting out at Fluſhing were intended to be brought to Oſtend and Dunkirk by the inland navigation, to avoid our cruizers, that arrangement will be defeated, and it will be a long time before the works can be repaired, as they were five years finiſhing, and were eſteemed the moſt complete works of the kind in Europe. The troops had retreated, and were ready to embark by 12 o'clock, the ſame morning, with the loſs of only one rank and file killed, and one ſeaman wounded; but found it impoſſible from the wind having encreaſed, and the ſurf running ſo high, as entirely to prevent their regaining the boats, upon which they took up a poſition on the Sand hills above the beach, where they lay the whole of that day and night upon their arms. The enemy taking advantage of the length of time and the night, collected in very great force, and ſoon after day-break this morning, attacked them on every ſide, when, after a moſt noble and gallant defence, I am grieved to add, they were under the neceſſity of capitulating, to a very great ſuperiority of numbers.

I herewith incloſe a liſt of the killed and wounded, and I have every reaſon to believe it correct.

Lieut. col. Hely, 11th foot, killed.
Major gen. Coote, wounded.
Col. Campbell, 3d guards, do.
Major Donkin, 44th foot, do.
Capt. Walker, Royal Artillery, do.
And near 60 rank and file killed and wounded.

HENRY WARDE,
Capt. and lieut. col. 1ſt Guards.

Capt. Cole, who arrived the 18th inſt. from Malaga, at Boſton, via Gibraltar, informs, that it was the general opinion at both places, that a ſpecdy [illegible] would take place between Great Britain and Spain. While he was at Gibraltar, admiral Nelſon ſailed into the Streights with a fleet, avowedly to take from the harbour of Malaga, two Spaniſh frigates which were laying there. They were to be demanded, and if not given up, it was deſigned to batter the city. Capt. Cole ſpeaks with confidence of their ſucceſs.

Capt. Boſdet, from the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and who arrived at the above port ſame day, mentions that a Britiſh frigate of 36 guns, had been totally loſt on Cape Breton, a ſhort time before he ſailed. The crew were preſerved. Name of the frigate not recollected.

Capt. Bates from Liverpool, in coming out of harbor, May 26, heard a conſiderable firing of cannon, which he conjectured was the conſequence of the receipt of ſome important intelligence favourable to the Engliſh.

The Lively, Britiſh frigate, is loſt in Cadiz Bay.

A ſmall French convoy from Morlaix for Breſt, has been driven on ſhore by an Engliſh frigate, at paſſage Dehon.

By the following extract of a letter from an unfortunate anglo-Frenchman, it would appear, that the Britiſh were about evacuating Cape Nichola Mole:

Mole, July 3. [The latest date from that quarter.]

"We have at laſt came to the denouement of the farce, which has been playing in this iſland for ſome years. Every one packs up. Some carry away ſomething; others nothing. I am of the latter claſs. I do not even know whether I ſhall ſucceed in realizing ſufficient to pay my paſſage; it will be to the continent you inhabit, to bury myſelf in its woods, and there periſh with miſery."

By a letter from an officer in the Britiſh army, at Jeremie, dated the 4th of July, to his friend in New-York, we are informed that about the 21ſt of June, col. Deſſource, attacked and took a French fort, in the neighbourhood of Jeremie, where he made 50 men priſoners, and deſtroyed 5 pieces of cannon.

Paris papers of May 20, ſtate, that the French in an attempt upon an iſland, ſubject to the Engliſh, called St. Marcou, have been repulſed with great loſs. The invaſion of this inſular mite has long occupied the attention of the French, and much has been ſaid of its feaſibility and conſequences for a long time in their gazettes. The fate of this enterprize probably gave riſe to a rumour, which was current yeſterday afternoon, and ſaid to have ſprung from Salem, that the Armada of France had failed to the coaſt of England, and eſſayed to land the agents of deſtruction; but that they were completely diſcomfited; and many made, not to "bite the duſt" indeed but to "drink the water" —which is the Engliſh mode of ſerving their enemies; and that they retreated in a manner highly indecorous. A confirmation of this news, at the preſent time would be highly gratifying but we apprehend it aroſe from the circumſtance mentioned in the beginning of this paragraph—which is alſo of ſome importance.

It is ſtated in the papers received by the laſt mail, that the Thetis, Britiſh frigate, had engaged with five French privateers, two of 16, two of 14, and one of ten guns. Three of them were captured, one ſunk, and the fifth eſcaped by means of her ſweeps.

A letter from Jeremie informs that the Britiſh have taken Tiberoon, Plimouth and one other poſt, and were in full march for Auxcayes.

It is remarkable that the generals in the ſervice of the French republic, who have moſt celebrity, are not Frenchmen.

Buonaparte, who commands what they call "The army of England," is a Corſican.—Kilmaine, his ſecond in command, is a Baron of the kingdom of Ireland.

Maſſena, ſo much celebrated for his exploits in Italy, was a corporal in the ſervice of the king of Sardinia.

Angereau, who commands "the army of Germany," was a fencing and dancing maſter at Milan, of which place he is a native.

FOR SALE,

THIRTEEN hundred Acres of LAND, in the Townſhip of Walſingham, on Lake Erie, immediately adjoining Long Point; conſiſting of Lots No. 13 in the firſt Range, 300 Acres; 13 and 14 in the ſecond Range, 400 Acres; 13 and 14 in the third Range, 400, and 13 in the fourth Range, 200 Acres.

DARBY AND JOAN.

PART I.

Ne Sutor ultra crepidam.——
Vid. Apoth.

WHEN Darby saw the setting sun,
He swung his scythe and home he run,
Sat down, drank of his pint, and said
My work is done—I'll go to bed,
" My work isdone !"—retorted Joan—
" My work is done !"—your constant tone ;
But hapleſs woman ne'er can say
My work is done till judgment day.
Here Darby hemm'd, and rack'd his head
To anſwer what his Joan had ſaid ;
But all in vain, her clack kept on,
Yes, women's work is never done !
You men can ſleep all night ; but we Muſt toil :—Whoſe fault is that ? quoth he,
I know your meaning, Joan reply'd ;
But, ſir, my tongue ſhall not be ty'd,
I will go on, and let you know
What work poor women have to do.
Firſt, in the morn, tho' we feel
As ſick as drunkards when they reel ;
Yes, feel ſuch pain in back and head
As would confine you men to bed ;
We ply the bruſh, and wield the broom ;
We air the beds and right the room :
The cows muſt next be milk'd, and then
We get the breakfaſt for the men ;
Ere this is o'er, with whimpering cries
And briſtly hair, the children riſe :
Theſe muſt be dreſs'd, and dos'd with rue,
And fed, and all becauſe of you.
We muſt—Here Darby ſcratch'd his head,
And faſt retreated to his bed ;
But grumbled this, as on he run,
Zounds ! womans clack is never done !

PART II.

The Retort ; or, JOAN triumphant.

——Quis talia fando
——Temperet a lachrymis ?

AT early dawn, ere Phœbus roſe,
Old Joan reſum'd her tale of woes ;
When Darby thus—I'll end the ſtrife ;
Be you the man and I the wife :
Take you the ſcythe, and mow, while I
Will all your boaſted cares ſupply.
Content, quoth Joan ; give me my ſhift ;
This Darby did, and out ſhe went.
Old Darby roſe, and ſeiz'd the broom,
And whirl'd the dirt about the room
Which having done, he ſcarce knew how,
He hied to milk the brindled cow :
The brindled cow whirl'd round her tail
In Darby's eye, and kick'd the pail.
The clown, perplex'd with grief and pain,
Swore he'd ne'er try to milk again ;
When, turning round, in ſad amaze,
He ſaw his cottage in a blaze :
For as he chanc'd to bruſh the room
In careleſs haſte, he fir'd the broom.
The fire at laſt ſubdu'd, he ſwore
The broom and he ſhould meet no more.
Preſs'd by misfortune, and perplex'd,
Darby prepared for breakfaſt next :
But what to get he ſcarcely knew—
The bread was ſpent, & butter too.
His hands bedaub'd with paſte and flour,
Old Darby labour'd full an hour :
But, luckleſs wight ! thou could not make
The bread take form of loaf or cake.
As every door wide open ſtood,
In puſh'd the ſow, in queſt of food ;
And, ſtumbling onwards, with her ſnout
O'erſet the churn—the cream ran out.
As Darby turn'd, the ſow to beat,
The ſlipp'ry cream betray'd his feet :
He caught the bread trough in his fall,
And down came Darby, trough and all.
The children, waken'd by the clatter,
Start up and cry, La ! what's the matter ?
Old Jowler bark'd and Tabby mew'd,
And hapleſs Darby bawl'd aloud,
Return, my Joan, as heretofore ;
I'll play the houſewife's part no more ;
Since now, by ſad experience taught
Compar'd to thine, my work is nought ;
Henceforth, as bus'neſs calls, I'll take,
Content, the plough, the ſcythe, the rake,
And never more tranſgreſs the line
Our fates have mark'd, while thou art mine.
Then Joan, return ; as heretofore,
I'll vex thy honeſt ſoul no more :
Let's each our proper taſk attend—
Forgive the paſt, and ſtrive to mend.

AN ODE TO CONTENT.

COME, meek ey'd nymph of aſpect ſweet,
Come calm content, my breaſt poſſeſs,
The dower thou bring'ſt is happineſs.
O lead me to the moſs grown cell,
With thee and virtue there to dwell,
With temperance of gentle mien,
And conſcience ſpotleſs & ſerene,
Let others ſhare the glittering ſtores
Of gorgeous Ind's enfangain'd ſhores ;
Let ſparing minds a luſt inflame,
Of lawleſs power and guilty fame ;
From thee Content, thoſe joys can flow,
Nor wealth, nor power, nor fame beſtow.

European News.

PARIS, April 18.

SIDNEY SMITH, the Engliſh incendiary, whom Pitt conſented to ranſom with 4000 Frenchmen, his talents being no doubt ſo much wanted, and whom the directory puniſhed with a too looſe confinement, has been carried off out of the Temple, and he has probably arrived in England.

On the 24th, a troop of armed men came to the Temple, and preſented a forged arret of the marine miniſter, for conducting Sidney Smith to Melun. Altho' the keeper of the priſon was poſitively enjoined, not to deliver up the priſoner, unleſs he himſelf ſhould receive the order out of the hands of the preſident of the directory, he complied with the requiſition of the Siham eſcort!

Several days had paſſed before any thing tranſpired of that event, the miniſter of police himſelf heard of it only the day before yeſterday. There is a great deal of boldneſs and corruption in this buſineſs.

In fact it now appears, that ſome guineas have arrived from London, but that not all were employed in ſubſidizing anarchy, as it was found expedient to perſuade the directory in the truly veracious reports of the ci-devant agents of Cochon.

As long as the directory, overlooking the machinations diſcovered in the correſpondence of Klinglin, ſhall amuſe themſelves with profecuti ; the phantom of terroriſm, they muſt expect to witneſs many others ; and ere long, perhaps, will the Jura, the South, the Weſt, the incendiary Smith himſelf, furniſh them new proofs of the deſtination of Pitt's guineas.

May 3. It has been publiſhed in the Journals that Jean Bon St. Andre had been beheaded by order of the Dey of Algiers. There ariſes but a trifling difficulty againſt the credibility of t. account, viz. Jean Bon St. Andre is conſul at Smyrna, in Aſi and not at Algiers.

We know from an authentic ſource that the reports of a new coalition againſt France are totally groundleſs. The diſpatches of the laſt couriers arrived from Berlin & Vienna at Raſtadt, are of ſuch a nature, that we may with confidence look for a ſpeedy completion of the negociations of the congreſs.

Letters from Vienna announce, that the differences between the French republic and the court of Naples are adjuſted.

Bayonne, May 8. Agreeably to a new ordinance of the king of Spain all the French emigrants and baniſhed Frenchmen are to be tranſported to the Canary iſlands.

Bourdeaux, May 13. A citizen of this place has received a letter from one of his ſons, an officer in the navy, dated May 1, from which it appears that the Toulon fleet, compoſed of 18 ſhips of the line and a great number of frigates and tranſports, were ready to put to ſea for an expedition, the object of which was concealed from the people on board. The ſame letter ſays that between thirty and forty thouſand land troops are on board the fleet.

May 6. Buonaparte left this the 4th, it is not known whither he is gone. He left Paris on foot, and got into his carriage outſide the barriers of the city.

The King of Naples, ſays a Milan print, has thought fit to reſort to ſeverity for the purpoſe of cruſhing the revolutionary enthuſiaſm that threatens his crown, and has ordered forty of his officers to be ſhot, becauſe they had ſhewn themſelves patriots of liberty.

May 9. Upon the late elections.—The man who meditates upon events, and knows how to fix his attention wholly upon the cauſes that produce them, has deplored the inevitable diviſions in the primary and electoral aſſemblies, and the circumſtances whoſe worſt effect is that they lead to a violation of principles. But his fears muſt have been removed when he reviewed and weighed the choices, the great majority of which, whatever be their origin, offers, as if in battle array, a phalanx of known friends to the republic.

May 10. There is ſome fermentation in Catalonia. A revolution is freely ſpoken of. The government alarmed, expecting to divert from this revolutionary leaning, employs the peaſants in public works and pays them well ; but it is ſeldom in that claſs, but with that of enlightened men, which are it is true, not very numerous in Spain, that revolutions take place.

May 13. We hear from Bruxelles that the army commanded by general Hatry is 60,000 ſtrong, and that ſhortly it will paſs the Nidda, occupy the two banks of the Mein and advance into Franconia in order to oblige the Germanic body to accede to the conditions of peace which the French government agreed to give them.

A Proclamation. By the honorable Thomas Maitland, brigadier-general, commanding in chief his Majeſty's forces in St. Domingo, &c.

Whereas all the enemy's ports in the iſland of St. Domingo, have been for many months in a ſtate of blockade ; and whereas it appears to me neceſſary and expedient, for the good of his Majeſty's ſervice, now to proclaim and declare, that the ſeveral ports in the iſland of St. Domingo, whether French or Spaniſh, in poſſeſſion of the enemy, are in a ſtate of blockade : I hereby accordingly do proclaim and declare, the ſaid ports ſeverally and reſpectively, to be in a ſtate of blockade : and that all veſſels bound to or from the ſaid ports, will be dealt with accordingly.

And whereas doubts and difficulties have ariſen on the ſubject of the articles which may be lawfully imported by the citizens of the United States of America into the Britiſh ports of St. Domingo in American bottoms :

I do hereby further proclaim & declare, that it ſhall and may be lawful for the citizens of the United States of America, to import into the Britiſh ports of St. Domingo, in American bottoms, the following enumerated articles, viz.

Flour, bread, biſcuit, peaſe, beans, potatoes, wheat, rice, oats, barley, grain of all ſorts, tobacco, ſtaves, heading, timber, ſhingles and all ſorts of lumber, horſes, neat cattle, hogs, poultry and live ſtock of every ſort, naval ſtores of every deſcription, claret in hogſheads & caſe, hogs lard, ſweet oil, onions apples and other green fruits, beef, pork, and fiſh.

UNITED STATES.

Philadelphia, July 13. The merchants of this city, who have ſo very liberally ſubſcribed for the purpoſe of aiding our naval armament, have, on the recommendation of the government, changed their plan of building two twenty-gun ſhips, and are determined to build a forty-gun frigate, the work of which was actually begun laſt week, on the ſame ſtocks on which the frigate United States was built.

The architects having purchaſed of government the materials which were left on hand, after finiſhing the United States, it is expected this frigate will very ſpeedily be built. We underſtand ſufficient timber is ready for the whole of the work, except the ſtern poſt and tranſom. Her keel, which is to be 130 feet, will be laid in a few days. She is to carry thirty eight-pounders and fourteen twelves ; and from the known ability of the architects, and the liberal ſpirit of the merchants under whoſe direction the is to be built, doubt not ſhe will be as complete a veſſel as ſails on the ocean.

The ſchooner Leander, from New York for the Havanna, is one of the veſſels taken by Le Croyable.

A ſuicide was committed at Newcaſtle, ſtate of Delaware, the 6th inſt. by a ſtranger, who had arrived there, three days before, from Philadelphia, in one of the packet-boats.—The inſtrument of death which he choſe was a piſtol, which he charged with large ſhot ; this almoſt entirely tore away his chin and noſe, and laid open his head in a ſhocking manner.—No veſtige could be found of his name or place of reſidence.

Extract of a letter from Boſton, July 9.

"I went down in the Conſtitution laſt Monday : She went five miles in 33 minutes, under her top ſails, againſt 1 1-2 hour tide, two anchors under her bow, and two [illegible] and ſeven boats in tow. I believe ſhe is the beſt ſhip that [illegible] board. She mounts thirty 24 pounders and fourteen 18 pounders. I was much pleaſed with the [illegible] and regularity of the officers [illegible]."

Carliſle, July 4. Yeſterday was apprehended on a warrant and brought before William Levis and James M'Cormick, eſqrs. Mr. James Bell, of Stoney Ridge, for treaſonable expreſſions, and bound in a recognizance of 600 dollars for his appearance at court.

New York, July 17. The following ſeems to be the ſource of the report, that Spain had made peace with England and war with France, which, in fact, we do not conceive ought to be believed :—

By captain Lupy, of the brig Neptune, 34 days from Malaga.

Malaga, 22d May, 1798.

Citizen Truguet, miniſter of the French republic at Madrid, required of the Spaniſh miniſter, Mr. Cabodra, liberty to eſtabliſh in Madrid a court of juſtice for the French citizens there, which was conſented to on theſe conditions —that the French republic would likewiſe grant the ſame liberties to the Spaniards, which not ſuiting his republican ſpirit, nothing was decided ; he has ſince been recalled—great preparations making in the north for war. The French take all Daniſh veſſels in for adjudication ; in Carthagena there is 20, in Almeria 16, and in Malaga 18, beſides thoſe already condemned. The Spaniſh veſſels go back and forward to Gibraltar, not freely, but the government winks at this trade. Report by the laſt poſt from Madrid, of a ceſſation of arms between England and Spain —great talk of the Spaniards coming again into the coalition againſt France.

July 18. This morning, between three and four, the work-ſhop of Mr. Brown, hatter, in Water-ſtreet, adjoining the alley leading to Crane wharf, was diſcovered to be on fire. The flames ſoon communicated to the buildings in the rear, and totally conſumed five or ſix, and nearly ruined as many more. The miſfortune of ſeveral induſtrious families who are deprived of their places of reſidence, beſides ſuſtaining other loſſes, deſerves peculiar commiſſeration.

July 21. Yeſterday morning between 3 and 4 o'clock a moſt dreadful circumſtance occurred at a French boarding houſe near the Exchange in this city. Madame Gardie, late of the theatre, was in bed with her ſon about 11 years of age. Monſieur Gardie, who had cohabited with her a number of years, and who lodged in the ſame room, got up, ordered the boy to [illegible], and got into her bed. The boy hearing his mother cry out, [illegible] Gardie deſired him to lie ſtill ; his mother had only fainted.—Soon after, hearing a knocking againſt the partition, he got up and went to the bed, where he found Mr. Gardie in the agonies of death, and his mother lying dead in the bed.

It appears that he ſtabbed her with a new carving knife in the left breaſt, which penetrated immediately to the heart, as ſhe appears to have expired inſtantly.—He was wounded in the breaſt, in two places, with his own hand ; and muſt have died in great agony, as he had fallen from the bed on the floor, and was covered with blood. The Coroner's Inqueſt brought in a verdict, that he was the cauſe of her death, and afterwards committed ſuicide.

The cauſe of this very dreadful cataſtrophe, is attributed to extreme penury, and her refuſing to accompany him to France, whither he was going ſhortly, having taken his paſſage. This refuſal excited his jealouſy, tho' there does not appear any grounds for the ſuſpicion.

On Monday laſt the Congreſs of the United States adjourned, after paſſing eighty-four acts. The ſeſſion has been the moſt intereſting of any ſince the exiſtence of the Federal government ; and the momentous buſineſs in which they were engaged has kept the public mind in continual agitation. The bill from the Senate altering the time of the next meeting was rejected by the Houſe of Repreſentatives—conſequently Congreſs will meet again on the laſt Monday in December.

Portland, July 9. Saturday laſt the Supreme Judicial Court cloſed its annual ſeſſion in this town ; during which time the trial of the unfortunate captain Pote, for the murder of his wife, came on, and occupied the whole of Thurſday, till 11 o'clock in the evening. The evidence was very full and clear that on the 11th of Nov. laſt, at about 8 o'clock in the evening, after many reproaches for her unfaithfulneſs to his bed, for which not the leaſt foundation exiſted, and attempting to ſtrangle her with a handkerchief, he killed her with repeated ſtrokes of a fire ſhovel upon the head and neck. The unfortunate offender was on Saturday ſentenced to death by the Chief Juſtice of the Supreme Judicial Court, in a very pathetic addreſs, amidſt a large concourſe of ſpectators whoſe deep attention and unavailing regret did homage to the umpire of the laws.

Boſton, July 14. The ſhip Diana, captain White, from Bourdeaux, bound to New York, touched at Newport on Tueſday morning laſt. She left France the 22d of May.—[illegible] phia, armed brig had arrived in France, and that in conſequence Mr. Gerry had left Paris : That a fleet of 40 ſail of armed ſhips had ſailed from Toulon, about the 14th May, having gen. Buonaparte on board. The destination of this squadron was not known at Bourdeaux: That preparations for the invasion of England were still going on; and all privateers were engaged, though it was still doubted by many, whether the invasion ever would be seriously undertaken.

July 15. Mr. Samuel Prince, who arrived in town yesterday from Baffaterre, (Gaudaloupe) via Salem, has communicated the following particulars of a transaction which must rouse the indignation, and interest the feelings of every American.

Captain Ebenezer Smith, of the armed ship Hunter, of this place, bound to Martinique, in lat. 14, 38, fell in with a French privateer schooner, of 8 guns, and 80 men, who after hailing capt. Smith, and demanding him to come on board with his papers, was replied to by capt. Smith, that he was willing to see them on board and exhibit his papers; but that he was engaged in a lawful trade, and being armed, would suffer no other interruption.

The privateer then immediately fired, and repeated it both with cannon and musquetry, until she got nearly abreast of the ship, when unfortunately, at the moment capt. S. was giving orders to point the guns and fire into the privateer, which was executed in part with effect, he was wounded in the groin, and fell to the deck; this unhappy circumstance created confusion on board the ship, the helmsman quitted his station, the vessel fell off, and the privateer instantly laid along side and boarded: previous to this, Mr. Stafford, the boatswain was killed, the mate, and Mr. David Bradlee, a passenger, wounded.

Here commenced a scene which would have disgraced savages. Capt. Smith, wounded as he was, lying bleeding in the passage way, was assaulted, and received more than twenty stabs and cuts in his breast, back, sides and arms. Young Bradlee, having discharged a blunderbuss and killed one of the officers on board the privateer, was probably marked out as a victim; those monsters cut him into pieces and threw them overboard. They also cut and wounded Mr. Prince who was a passenger on board. A son of captain Smith's, about 13 years old, being found in one of the state rooms, was dragged out: and while the poor lad had his hands over his head to guard it in some measure from the blows which were aimed to dispatch him, had them cut in a shocking manner.

Prenchmen, we would not exaggerate one iota of this infernal business. Mr. Samuel Prince, and capt. Smith's son, are present, and can be seen.

Capt. Smith is a remarkable benevolent man; has been uncommonly attentive to unfortunate Frenchmen.

THE ORACLE.

WEST-NIAGARA, August 18.

We hear there are accounts received from Europe at Quebec and Montreal, which state, that the French army of England mutinied, that Russia, Prussia and Germany, had joined in a new coalition with England against France, and that England had made a separate peace with the king of Spain, who is also joined in the coalition.

Agreeable to a late publication on the French finances, the expences of that government exceed the revenue by more than a million of livres per day.

Articles of West-India produce consumed at Paris, at the date of the last accounts, were transported by land from Bourdeaux, a distance of 600 miles. All access by the Seine being prevented by the British Fleets.

The late gallant captain Hood.

At twelve o'clock on Tuesday, (says a Dublin paper of May 10) the remains of the late gallant capt. Hood were brought on shore at Plymouth, for the purpose of being conveyed to his place of residence, in Somersetshire, there to be entered. The corpse, on its being landed, was by all the captains and other officers of his majesty's ships at Plymouth, and a field officer's guard of Marines; when a procession was formed in the following order.:

Field officer's guard, composed of Marines; Music, playing the dead march in saul; English colors, under which the Mars fought clergimen and surgeons; two captains of the navy, as chief Mourners; corpse, and six captains as pall-bearers; officers of the Mars; captains of the royal navy; generals, officers of the army of duty; colors of the enemy, trailing on the ground.

The whole proceeded through the principal streets, lined by all the troops in the garrison.

A sincere regret appeared manifest amongst all descriptions of people, who whilst they reflected upon the late heroic firmness of his conduct, sympathized with every feeling heart upon the loss their country had sustained.

This brave officer died shortly after he received his wound, having first brought below! "Why was I not suffered to die at my post!" He stretched out his hand received the sword of his vanquished enemy, and instantly expired!

"To morrow the eldest daughter of the marquis La Fayette is to be married to a younger brother of Mauburge, his fellow prisoner. the ceremony is to be performed at the French consul's."

A Philadelphia paper of 11th July mentions, that the monday preceding the hon. James M'Henry, secretary at war, left that city for Mount Vermon, the seat of George Washington, lieutenant general and commander in chief of the American army—and that it was expected the general would return with the secretary to philadelphia.

He will, as he progresses northward, find the prevalence of a spirit which, at the expence of a twenty year's war would have been a cheap bargain."

The ship Fox, Gardiner, arrived at New-york, on the 8th inst. in 44 days from Bourdeaux, which place she left the 24th May, at which date Mr. Gerry remained in in Paris. Mr Pinckney was at Amsterdam. The United States brig Sophia, Geddes, had not arrived. An embargo was daily expected on all American vessels in the ports of France, and a general embargo had been laid on all privateers for six months, for the purpose of procuring seamen, &c.

SOMETHING IN POINT.

"Money! Money! Money—

[illegible] with an appeal to our miniſtry, from the executive directory; containing a propoſition, that the Britiſh government ſhould put 50,000l. into the private pocket of the directory, which it was inſinuated, might diſpoſe them to turn a favorable ear to our propoſals of peace. The overture was of courſe rejected, with that ſcorn which all virtuous men muſt feel, at the developement of ſuch unexampled baſeneſs and venality.

The laſt Paris papers ſpeak of another change in the French miniſtry. The actual government of France is in fact a magic lantern where the figures paſs by with ſo much rapidity that it is hardly poſſible to obſerve their attitude.

It is reported that the congreſs at Raſtadt is broken up; that the invaſion of England is given up; that great part of the army of England is marched towards Alſace, leſt the emperor ſhould aſſiſt the Swiſs.---It is added, moreover that deſertions have reduced the army to nearly one half of its original compliment of men, they have imbibed the idea that they were intended to be ſacrificed in an attempt which their rulers will knew was not at all likely to ſucceed.

By letters from Vienna, of May 2, we learn, that the reports of a renewal of war had conſiderably increaſed, in conſequence of the indignation which had been manifeſted by the ſubjects of his imperial majeſty at the conduct of Bernadotte. The French conſul at Trieſte had nearly given riſe to another riot, diſplaying a tri-colored flag. The preparations for war were carried on with great activity.

Theſe are therefore to declare, that I do no longer recognize the ſaid citizen Letombe as conſul general or conſul, nor the ſaid citizens Rozier and Arcambal as vice-conſuls, nor the ſaid citizen Mozard as conſul of the French republic, in any part of theſe United States, nor permit them or any other conſular perſons or agents of the French republic, heretofore admitted in the United States to exerciſe their functions as ſuch; and I do hereby wholly revoke the exequaturs heretofore given to them reſpectively; and do declare them abſolutely null and void from this day forward.

To all whom it may concern.

Ten French privateers are ſaid to have been recently carried into the Havannah. The ſeveral manly repulſes by American armed merchantmen, added to the ſingular good ſucceſſes attending Britiſh ſhips of war in capturing thoſe lawleſs pirates we hope will operate as a material check to their rapacity, and be the means of driving them from our coaſt.—Our own ſhips of war will ſoon be enabled to afford conſiderable protection.

THE ORACLE.

WEST-NIAGARA, Auguſt 25.

We are informed that an act has paſſed the congreſs of the United States, for the encouragement of armed private veſſels to take French privateers, by allowing a bounty on them, according to the ſize of the guns.

Republican Fraternity!

A war tax, of 15 millions, has been impoſed upon the Swiſs Cantons, but to believied upon ſuch families only as had any ſhare in the adminiſtration of the ancient government. The proviſion, ammunition &c. found in the arſenal at Berne, was valued at three millions, and on the 14th of June upwards of three hundred weight of crowns was ſent from Berne, in waggons, to France; the currency alone found in that treaſury exceeded twenty-ſix millions.

Accounts, via Charleſton (S. C.) ſtate that ſeveral of the French deputies exiled to Cayenne, among whom were Pichegrue and Barthelemi, had made their eſcape and arrived at Paramaribo, whither they were followed by an expreſs boat from Cayenne with orders to apprehend them; but they had proceeded, it was ſuppoſed, to Berbice, which is under Gentlemen of the ſenate.

Believing, that the letter received this morning, from gen. Waſhington, would give high ſatisfaction to the ſenate, I tranſmit them a copy of it, and congratulate them and the public on this great event, the general's acceptance of his appointment, as lieutenant-general and commander in chief of the army.

JOHN ADAMS.

U. S. July 17, '98.

Copy of a letter from gen. Waſhington to the preſident of the U. S.

Mount Vernon, July 13, '98.

Dear Sir,

I had the honor on the evening of the 11th inſt. to receive from the hand of the ſecretary of war, your favor of the 7th, announcing that you had, with the advice and conſent of the ſenate, appointed me "lieutenant-general of all the armies raiſed or to be raiſed, for the ſervice of the United States."

I cannot expreſs how greatly affected I am at this new proof of public confidence, and the highly flattering manner in which you have been pleaſed to make the communication: at the ſame time, I muſt not conceal from you my earneſt wiſh, that the choice had fallen upon a man leſs declined in years, and better qualified to encounter the uſual viciſſitudes of war.

You know, ſir, what calculation I have made relative to the probable courſe of events, on my retiring from office, and the determination I had conſoled myſelf with, of cloſing the remnant of my days in my preſent peaceful abode; you will therefore be at no loſs to conceive and appreciate the ſenſations I muſt have experienced, to bring my mind to any concluſion that would pledge me, at ſo late a period of life, to leave ſcenes I ſincerely love, to enter upon the boundleſs field of public action, inceſſant trouble, and high reſponſibility.

It was not poſſible for me to remain ignorant of, or indifferent to, recent tranſactions. The conduct of the directory of France towards our country; their inſidious hoſtility to its government; their various practices to withdraw the affections of the people from it the evident tendency of their acts, and thoſe of their agents to countenance and invigorate oppoſition; their diſregard of ſolemn treaties and laws of nations; their war upon our defenceleſs commerce; their [illegible] could not fail to excite [illegible] correſponding ſentiments, with thoſe my countrymen have ſo generally expreſſed in their affectionate addreſſes to you. Believe me, ſir, no one can more cordially approve the wise and prudent measures of your administration. They ought to inspire universal confidence, and will, no doubt, combined with the state of things call from congress such laws and means as will enable you to meet the full force and extent of the crisis.

Satisfied therefore, that you have sincerely wished and endeavored to avert war, and exhausted to the last drop, the cup of reconciliation, we can with pure hearts appeal to Heaven for the justice of our cause; and may confidently trust the final result to that Kind Providence who has heretofore, and so often, signally favored the people of the United States.

Thinking in this manner, feeling how incumbent it is upon every person, of every description, to contribute at all times to his country's welfare, and especially in a moment like the present when every thing we hold dear and sacred is so seriously threatened, I have finally determined to accept the commission of commander in chief of the armies of the United States, with the reserve only, that I shall not be called into the field until the army is in a situation to require my presence, or it becomes indispensable by the urgency of circumstances.

In making this reservation, I beg it to be understood, that I do not mean to withhold any assistance to arrange and organize the army, which you may think I can afford. I take the liberty also to mention, that I must decline having my acceptance considered as drawing after it any immediate charge upon the public; or that I can receive any emoluments annexed to the appointment before entering into a situation to incur expence.

The secretary of war being anxious to return to the seat of government, I have detained him no longer than was necessary to a full communication upon the several points he had in charge.

With very great respect and confidence, I have the honor to be sir, your most obedient humble servant,

GEO. WASHINGTON.

JOHN ADAMS,
President of the United States.

Extract of a letter from a member of the Senate, Phil. July 17.

General Washington has accepted, and the senate have advised [illegible] with the rank of major general.

Charles C. Pinckney, and Henry Knox, major generals.

Henry Lee, and Edward Hand, major generals in the provisional army.

John Brooks, of Massachusetts, William Washington, of S. Carolina, Jonathan Dayton, of New Jersey, brigadier generals.

Ebenezer Huntington, of Connecticut, Anthony W. White, of New Jersey, William R. Davie, of N. Carolina, John Sevier, of Tenessee, brigadier generals in the provisional army.

James Craick, physician gen.

THE POPE.

Answer of his hineſs the pope, to gen. Berthier, when he presented him the national cockade, with the offer of a pension.

"I know no other uniform than that with which I am now decorated, which is that of the church. You may destroy my body if chuse, but you cannot hurt my soul. In the scourge that now chastises and afflicts the sheep and the pastor, I see the divine vengeance of God for the transgressions of the whole flock. I bless his sovereign hand. I want no pension, a staff and a wallet are sufficient for one who ought to end his days in sackcloth and ashes. Go on robbing, plundering and burning as you have hitherto been accustomed.---You will be able to destroy the monuments of religion, but the worship will remain the same in future as it did before your time, and will last to the end of the world."

LONDON, July 4.

HOUSE OF PEERS.

FRIDAY, JUNE 29.

Their lordships met at a very early hour, and proceeded to paſs the new bills which were before them. Between three and four o'clock his majeſty came to the houſe in his robes, attended by the principal officers of ſtate, and having taken his ſeat, the commons were ſent for, and having attended accordingly, the ſpeaker, on preſenting the bill of ſupply, addreſſed his majeſty in a ſpeech, as follows:

"Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

"Your faithful commons humbly attend your majeſty with the bills which cloſe the ſupply for the public ſervice of the year.

"In providing for the effectual proſecution of the conteſt in which this country is engaged, your commons have been actuated by the conviction that no alternative remained; and that it was only from the extraordinary efforts which the criſis demanded, that the means could be derived of maintaining the honor of your majeſty's crown, and the ſecurity and independence of the Britiſh empire. Conſiderations of temporary convenience have accordingly given way to the urgent duty of combining the attention, to peculiarly important at this time, to the the ſupport and ſtability of public credit, with a determination to make an ample proviſion for the ſeveral branches of the public ſervice. To theſe objects the deliberations of your commons have been diligently applied; and they have obſerved, with pride and ſatisfaction, that the unexampled ſacrifice, which the ſtate of public affairs appeared to them indiſpenſibly to require, have been accompanied with ſuch demonſtrations of loyalty and zeal from all claſſes of your ſubjects, by voluntary exertion of every deſcription, to ſuch an extent as to amount and afford the beſt comment on the hope, and the moſt deciſive anſwer to the miſrepreſentations upon which the enemy muſt have founded the vain and preſumptuous project of deſtroying the commercial proſperity, the maritime greatneſs, and liberties of theſe kingdoms.

"Your commons, ſir, are gratified by the perſuaſion that their proceedings have been, in all reſpects, ſtrictly conformable to the intereſts and ſentiments of a free and intelligent people, who conſider no efforts too great which may be neceſſary to fruſtrate the deſigns, and repel the attempts of the enemy; and to preſerve that conſtitution which they know to be the guardian of all that is dear and valuable to themſelves, and the beſt inheritance that can be tranſmitted to their deſcendants.

"The bills which I have in my hand are severally entitled, &c. &c."

His majeſty then delivered the following moſt gracious SPEECH:

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"By the meaſures adopted during the preſent ſeſſion, you have amply fulfilled the ſolemn and unanimous aſſurance which I received from you at its commencement.

"The example of your firmneſs and conſtancy has been applauded and followed, by my ſubjects of every rank and condition in life; a ſpirit of voluntary and ardent exertion diffuſed thro' every part of the kingdom has ſtrengthened and confirmed our internal ſecurity; the ſame ſentiments have continued to animate my troops of every deſcription, and my fleets have met the menaces of invaſion by blocking up our enemies in their principal ports.

"Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

"The extenſive and equitable ſcheme of contribution, by which ſo large a ſhare of our expences will be defrayed within the year, has defeated the expectations of thoſe who had vainly hoped to exhauſt our means, and deſtroy our public credit. You have been able to avail yourſelves of further reſources form a commerce encreaſed in extent and vigor, notwithſtanding the difficulties of war, and have had the ſingular ſatisfaction of deriving, at the ſame moment, large additional aid from individual exertions of unexampled zeal, liberty and patriotiſm. The proviſion made for the redemption of the land tax has alſo eſtabliſhed a ſyſtem which in its progreſſive operation, may produce the happieſt conſequences by the increaſe of the reſources, the diminution of our debt, and the ſupport of public credit.

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"The deſigns of the diſaffected, carried on in concert with our inveterate enemies have been unremittingly purſued, but have been happily and effectually counteracted in this kingdom, by the general zeal and loyalty of my ſubjects.

"In Ireland they have broke out into the moſt criminal acts of open rebellion. Every effort has been employed, on my part, to ſubdue this dangerous ſpirit, which is equally hoſtile to the intereſts and ſafety of every part of the Britiſh empire. I cannot too ſtrongly commend the unſhaken fidelity and valor of my regular, fencible and militia troops in Ireland, and that determined ſpirit with which my yeomanry and volunteer forces of that kingdom have ſtood forward in the defence of the lives and properties of their fellow ſubjects, and in ſupport of the lawful government.

"The ſtriking and honorable proof of alacrity and public ſpirit, which ſo many of my fencible and militia regiments in this kingdom have manifeſted on this occaſion, has already received the fulleſt teſtimony of the approbation of parliament. The conduct, perſonally ſo honorable to the individuals, affords the ſtrongeſt pledge both of the military ardor, which ſo tuates this valuable part of our national defence, and of their affectionate concern for the safety and happiness of Ireland, which are essentially connected with the general interests of the British empire. With the advantage of this support, and after the distinguished and important success which has recently attended the operations of my arms against the principal force of the rebels. I trust the time is fast approaching when those now seduced from allegiance will be brought to a just sense of the guilt they have occurred, and will entitle themselves to forgiveness, and to that protection which it is my constant wish to afford to every class and condition of my subjects, who manifest their desire to pay a due obedience to the laws.

"This temporary interruption of tranquility, and all its attendant calamities, must be attributed to those pernicious principles which have been industriously propagated in that country and which, wherever they have prevailed, have never failed to produce the most disastrous effects. With such warning before us, sensible of the danger which we are called upon to repel, and of the blessings we have to preserve, let us continue firmly united in a determined resistance to the designs of the enemies, and in the defence of that constitution which has been found by experience to insure to us, in so eminent a degree, public liberty, and national strength, and the security and comfort of all classes of the community.

"It is only by perseverance in this line of conduct, that we can hope, under the continuance of the Divine protection which we have so abundantly experienced, to conduct this arduous contest to a happy issue, and maintain undiminished, the security, honor and lasting prosperity of the country."

Then the lord chancellor, by his majesty's command, said,

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"It is his majesty's royal will and pleasure that his parliament be prorogued till Wednesday, the 8th day of August next, to be then here holden; and this parliament is accordingly prorogued till Wednesday the 8th day of August next.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Thursday, October 4.

Accounts from England testify to the good understanding subsisting between that country and the United States; and, of the wishes of the former for the success of the latter against the rapacious aggressions of the French.

Letters from Lisbon, say, that admirals Nelson and Curtis, had joined St. Vincents' fleet (which now consists of 32 sail of the line. He is to go in quest of the Toulon fleet, leaving the Spaniards to be watched by a small squadron.

FROM THE LONDON GAZETTE.

Admiralty-Office, June 29.

Copy of a letter from Sir Thomas Williams, commander of his Majesty's ship Endymion, to Evan Nepean, esq. dated off Wexford, June 22, 1798.

I Beg to acquaint you, for the information of my lords commissioners of the Admiralty, that, when cruising at the entrance of St. George's Channel, with the squadron under my command, I received information on the 19th that the king's troops were to commence the attack on the Rebels at Wexford on the 20th or 21st. I immediately proceeded off that harbour with the following ships, viz. Endymion, Phœnix, Glenmore, Melampus, Unicorn, and five cutters which I had collected. Lieut. Carpenter, senior Lieut. of the Endymion, was immediately dispatched in command of the cutters and ships launches, manned and armed with carronades in their prows to blockade the inward part of the entrance of the harbour, and to prevent the escape of the rebel armed vessels and others, of which they were in possession, to the amount of 40 or 50 sail. On the 21st I was joined by the Chapman and Weasle sloops, which being of light draught of water, anchored much nearer in than the frigates could venture, and therefore gave more effectual protection to the cutters and launches destined to attack the harbour and fort at the entrance of it, which fired on them. On the arrival of capt. Keen of the Chapman, I directed him to conduct the operations of the cutters and launches, and endeavour to possess himself of the harbour and fort, the tides being so low, and the wind blowing out, that neither of the sloops could get in. The launches proceeded to attack the fort, of which they soon possessed themselves; upwards of 200 of the rebels precipitately retreating from it, leaving behind them their colours flying and three six-pounders. The launches then immediately proceeded up the harbour; and upon their arrival at the town, had the happiness to find the king's troops were just marching into it, they having entirely defeated the rebels in two separate attacks on the 20th and 21st, and who are now flying in all directions. Two of their generals, Hay and Roche, are taken prisoners.

As the object of the squadron remaining at anchor here is now fully accomplished, it is my intention to get to sea to-morrow, if possible; and I am happy to be informed since the reduction of Wexford, that the appearance of his majesty's ships and vessels off the harbour, & the measures pursued by them, have been attended with the happiest consequences, and greatly contributed to check the further progress of the horrible massacres that have been committed in the town of Wexford, disgraceful to humanity.

There being a number of boats and small vessels along the coast, belonging to the rebels, which I conceived would be employed in facilitating the escape of the fugitives, I have ordered the boats of the squadron in, and destroyed about 200 of them; in some cases were found concealed.

The public service has greatly benefitted by the judicious arrangement of capt. Keen and lieut. Carpenter, and by the zeal and activity manifested by them and the officers and people in the different ships, boats and launches under their command and otherwise.

End of the LONDON GAZETTE.

The affairs of Ireland have at length arrived at the most alarming and melancholy pitch. After the capture of lord Fitzgerald, and the consequent developement of the plans of the United Irishmen, and other insurgents, (one of them was to possess themselves of the city of Dublin and the castle) government was necessitated to declare the metropolis and other places in a state of rebellion. Hostilities immediately commenced. The rebel village of Lucklan (17 houses) was destroyed. A bloody affair took place even in the centre of Dublin. The parliament has addressed the lord lieutenant in terms of the most unbroken loyalty.

In the course of the war with the French, Spaniards and Dutch, the navies made by them of British ships of war, which they now have in their possession, amount to no more than the following vessels: one of 74 guns, one of 16, three of 14, and one of 10: while Great Britain has now in possession the following vessels taken from her enemies: 14 French ships of the line, 5 Spanish ditto, 16 Dutch ditto—in all 35 sail of the line—80 frigates from 20 guns to 48, 96 sloops, &c. from 10 to 20, from the French, Spanish and Dutch.

Gen. Buonaparte's Expedition.

An express from lord St. Vincents mentions his having advice from the Mediterranean that the Toulon fleet, having gen. Buonaparte on board, had eluded the vigilence of sir Horatio Nelson: and had sailed upon the projected enterprize. In consequence, orders have been issued for fitting for sea, immediately, every ship of war that can be put in commission, and a severe press has taken place in all the maritime towns and on the river.

Several English privateers, which had carried into Malta, a number of valuable prizes have been blockaded by a French squadron. An English squadron afterwards arrived, to the assistance of the privateers; and immediately upon it, a second French force came on. Thus a series of blockading and being blockaded occurred at the same time. One object of sir Horatio Nelson's was to release the English, and capture these French ships.

Paris, June 22.

The second armament at Toulon is nearly completed, and ready for sailing even ever it may be thought proper.

Several letters from Toulon agree in stating, that a British squadron of 18 sail of the line have actually blockaded that port. It is feared that a brig with dispatches from Buonaparte has been captured by the squadron. Should this be the case, the British will probably be better acquainted with the object of this mysterious expedition than ourselves.

It is confidently stated to-day, that we are in possession of the island of Malta. The directory would have received this intelligence at an earlier period had not the advice boat, dispatched by Buonaparte with the news, been captured by the British. It is a fact, that the port of Toulon is now blocked up by a British squadron, which has fortunately arrived too late, and our fleet is on its way, without any obstacle, to the place of its destination.

According to a letter from Genoa of the 6th inst. hostilities have commenced between the king of Sardinia and the Ligurian republic. The Ligurian troops encamped at Nevi, have had several engagements with the Sardinians, the particulars of which are not yet known; and the Ligurian directory has issued a very violent proclamation on the late transaction at Carosio, which may be considered as a declaration of war.

PETER RUSSELL, PRESIDENT.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the third, by the grace of God of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, king, defender of the faith, &c. &c. &c.

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS,

GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our proclamation bearing date the fifteenth day of September, we thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council to prorogue our provincial parliament until the twenty ninth day of this present month of October, at which time in our town of YORK you were held and constrained to appear; but we taking into our royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council, to relieve you, and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the SEVENTH day of DECEMBER next ensuing, you meet us in our provincial parliament, in our town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary:—Herein fail not. In testimony whereof we have caused these our letters to be made patent, and the great seal of our said province to be hereunto affixed:—Witness the honorable PETER RUSSELL, esq. president administering the government of our said province, this nineteenth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-eight, and of our reign the thirty-ninth.

PARIS, June 26.

PASSAWAN Oglou having refused to accept the conditions offered to him, hostilities have re-commenced.—He attacked a body of Ottoman troops with 4000 cavalry, but was defeated with the loss of 1500 men.

June 27. We learn by letters from Bourdeaux of the 18th, that the coasting trade in that quarter is entirely interrupted, and all prizes prevented from entering that port by the vigilance and activity of the British cruisers.

The gun boats of the enemy go where their ships can go. They have burned a brig on the coast of La Plume under the very cannon of the fort.

The port of Havre is still blockaded up by the British cruizers, but the weather has been so tempestuous, that the enemy has had no opportunity to attack vessels in the harbor.

Letters from Amsterdam state, that "The British admiral, Onslow, who is cruising off the Texel, with a strong squadron, blockaded up the mouth of the road so closely, that he took some merchantmen who were endeavoring to enter. The British seem to multiply in the North Seas. Their ships of war cover the ocean. There is no longer any security for our commerce. The mouth of the Meuse is also blocked up by two British ships of the line and four frigates."

July 28.—According to the Courier of Milan, the king of Naples has issued a very strange order. It requires that out of every ten monks in each convent in his kingdom, there shall be one chosen to bear arms for his majesty.

The following intelligence was received on the 7th ult. at Quebec, by the brig Fame, in 11 weeks and 3 days from Liverpool.

IRELAND.

Dublin-castle, June 22, 1798.

Extract of a letter from lieut. gen. Lake, to lord viscount Castlereagh, dated Enniscorthy, June 21, 1798.

MY LORD,

I Have the honor to acquaint your lordship for his excellency the lord lieutenant's information, that the rebel camp upon Vinegar Hill was attacked this morning at 7 o'clock, and carried in about an hour and a half.

The relative importance of this very strong position with our operations against Wexford, made it necessary to combine our attacks so as to ensure success. A column under major generals Johnston and Eustace, was drawn from Rofs, and began the attack upon the town of Enniscorthy, situate upon the right bank of the Slaney, close under Vinegar Hill, upon the right and rather in the rere of it. Lieut. gen. Dundas commanded the center column, supported by a column upon the right, under majors-generals sir James Duff and Lofftus; a fourth column upon the left, was commanded by the hon. major general Needham.—To the determined spirit with which these columns were conducted, and the great gallantry of the troops, we are indebted for the short resistance of the rebels, who maintained their ground obstinately for the time above mentioned; but on perceiving the danger of being surrounded, they fled with great precipitation. Their loss is not yet ascertained, but it must be very considerable. The loss on our part is not great, the particulars of which I shall report as soon as possible.

Copy of a letter from Sir Hugh O'Reily, lieut. col. of the Westmeath regiment of militia, to lieut. gen. sir James Stewart, at Cork, dated Bandon, June 20, 1798.

SIR,

I have the honor to inform you that a party of the Westmeath regiment, consisting of 200 men rank and file, with 2 six pounders under my command, were yesterday attacked on our march from Cloghnakilty to Bandon, near a village called Ballynacorthy, by the rebels, who took up the best position on the whole march.

The attack was made from a height on the left of our column of march, with very great rapidity, and without the least previous notice, by between 300 and 400 men as nearly as I can judge, armed mostly with pikes and very few fire arms. We had hardly time to form, but very soon repulsed them with conſiderable loſs, when they retreated precipitately, but not in great confuſion; and when they regained the heights I could perceive they were joined by a very conſiderable force. I with the greateſt difficulty and riſk to the officers reſtrained the men, halted, and formed the greater part of them, when I ſaw that the enemy were filing off a high back with an intent to take poſſeſſion of our guns. A detachment of 100 men of the Caithneſs legion under the command of major Innes, was on its march to replace us at Cloghnakilty, and hearing our fire, preſſed forward & very critically fired upon them whilſt we were forming, and made them fly in every direction with great precipitation. At the ſame time a very conſiderable force ſhewed itſelf on the heights in our rear. A vaſt number of pikes appeared and ſome with hats upon them, and other ſignals, I ſuppoſe in order to collect their forces. I ordered the guns to be prepared for action, and very fortunately brought them to bear upon the enemy with good effect, as they diſperſed in a ſhort time, and muſt have left a conſiderable number of dead.—Some were killed in attempting to carry away the dead bodies.

Final Suppreſſion of the Rebellion.

This morning, June 25, a king's meſſenger paſſed through Cheſter on his road to London, with diſpatches for government from Lord Cornwallis. He brings accounts that on Saturday laſt the different bodies of rebels in the neighbourhood of Wexford, were defeated and driven into the town. That the town was then attacked on all quarters, on which the rebels endeavoured to eſcape by ſea, and embarked in a great number of boats and ſmall veſſels. They were then attacked by the gunboats and other veſſels ſtationed there to prevent their eſcape, and ſunk as faſt as they came out, ſo that ſcarcely any eſcaped—The whole loſs of the rebels is computed at ſeventeen thouſand men, and this battle is ſuppoſed to have finiſhed the rebellion in Ireland!!!

Extract of a letter from the Cove of Cork, dated June 22, to a merchant in this town. (Liverpool.)

"An expreſs is juſt arrived to admiral Kingſmill, informing him that the Engliſh army had attacked the rebels at Wexford, and obliged them to retreat with much loſs—On their retreat they were attacked by 2,500 freſh troops only juſt landed and were cut to pieces—There are very few left.—The number of the rebels killed is not known, but many thouſands were killed, and the whole rebel army defeated.

The miniſters of the Catholic religion continue to be arreſted in Belgium. A new convoy of them is ſent off for Goines.

Some exceſſes have occured at Middleburgh. When the news of the revolution in Holland arrived at the Hague, two Dutch battalions, who were there in garriſon, being ignorant of the real object of this revolution, began to exclaim, "Long live the Prince of Orange." The French ſoldiers were engaged at this audacity. A conflict took place, in which the latter were ſucceſsful. Two of them were ſlightly wounded. One Dutchman was killed and ſeven wounded.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, October 20.

On Sunday laſt Mr. Cornwall, an inhabitant of this town, unfortunately fell out of a boat into the lake, and before the perſons in the boat could poſſibly aſſiſt him he was drowned; leaving behind him a wife and a number of helpleſs children, who are objects of public commiſeration. We cannot avoid mentioning the benevolence which a number of our gentlemen have exhibited in ſubſcribing ſo liberally to the aſſiſtance of the widow and fatherleſs.

PETER RUSSELL, PRESIDENT.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the third, by the grace of God of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, king, defender of the faith, &c. &c. &c.

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS,

GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our proclamation bearing date the fifteenth day of September, we thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council to prorogue our provincial parliament until the twenty-ninth day of this present month of October, at which time in our town of YORK you were held and constrained to appear: but we taking into our royal consideration the eaſe and convenience of our loving ſubjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council, to relieve you and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforeſaid, hereby convoking, and by theſe preſents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the SEVENTH day of DECEMBER next enſuing, you meet us in our provincial parliament, in our town of York, there to take into conſideration the ſtate and welfare of our province of Upper-Canada, and therein to do as may ſeem neceſſary:—Herein fail not. In teſtimony whereof we have cauſed theſe our letters to be made patent, and the great ſeal of our ſaid province to be hereunto affixed:—Witneſs the honorable PETER RUSSELL, eſq. preſident adminiſtering the government of our ſaid province, this nineteenth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety-eight, and of our reign the thirty-ninth.

P. R.

WM. JARVIS, Sec'y.

LONDON.

THE Emperor of all the Ruſſias is making great preparations for war. He had ordered 100,000 men to be in readineſs to march through Poland to join a Pruſſian army. Two hundred thouſand were directed to encamp in the field to be perfectly prepared for any ſervice. Several tranſports were loading with heavy baggage for Dantzick, in conſequence of Poland, which has ever been a grand depot of proviſions and military ſtores. Fifteen ſhips of the line and ſix frigates were ordered to leave Cronſtadt, May 25, to be joined at Archangel by ſome ſmaller veſſels, and in the North Sea by five new ſhips of the line: and then to proceed to England. Beſides this force 300 galleys were equipping. This large fleet was to be commanded by vice admiral Tate, an American.

Letters from Paris ſay, that citizen Bourgoing will be appointed miniſter of foreign affairs, in the room of Talleyrand, who is choſen a member of the Council of Five Hundred.

Peterſburgh, May 8.

PROCLAMATION.

"Be it hereby known to all whom it may concern, to all Europe and the whole world, that his Imperial majeſty Paul I. has ordered the following proclamation to be iſſued by me, prince Alexander Beſborodko, firſt miniſter and chancellor of his Imperial majeſty.

"In conſequence of the notification of the Executive Directory of the French republic of the 23d of Nivoſe, in the 6th year importing, "That if any ſhip be ſuffered to paſs through the Sound with Engliſh commodities, of whatever nation it may be, it ſhall be conſidered as a formal declaration of war againſt the French nation;"—his Imperial majeſty Paul I. has been graciouſly pleaſed to order 22 ſhips of the line and 250 galleys, under the command of admiral Cruſe, and M. de Litta, knight of Malta, to proceed to the Sound, to protect trade in general againſt the manifeſt oppreſſion of the Directory, as ſuch proceeding is evidently contrary to the rights of all nations. His Ruſſian majeſty gives his Imperial word, to protect the freedom of trade with all his power, both by ſea and land, which he hereby requires the diplomatic corps to make known and proclaim."

The party of the mountain, or the terroriſts have acquired ſo powerful an aſcendancy in France, that the directory have been compelled to admit thoſe recently elected to the council. To counteract however their influence and deſperate machinations, the directory have liberated all thoſe numerous royaliſts who had been confined immediately preceding, and ſubſequent to the elections. All accounts agree in the increaſed proſpect of a political convulſion being on the eve of taking place.

The following battalions are ordered for Ireland:

The firſt battalion of the ſecond regiment from the Tower: the firſt battalion of the third regiment from Portland barracks: and the third battalion of the firſt regiment doing duty at Wincheſter.

The whole conſiſting of 24 companies, 80 men in each company, amounting to 1,820 rank and file.

Gen. Stanwix has the command of the troops on this expedition.

All the men of war at Spithead, ready for ſea, have received orders to fail on the ſhorteſt notice, after the embarkation of theſe troops for Ireland.

Advices have been received at the Admiralty, which ſtate that 15 French frigates, ready for ſea, are now lying in the outward harbour of Breſt, full of troops and warlike ſtores, together with thirty large tranſports, deſtined for Ireland.

By the information of a Dutch paper received yeſterday, and which brings account from Paris of a later date than the French Journal, we learn, that the executive directory of France has publiſhed a declaration of WAR againſt the United States of America!

JULY 4.—From Algiers we learn, that the dey has ordered four frigates, and the ſame number of ſmaller veſſels, to cruiſe againſt all Venetian ſhips under whatever flag they may be found.

We are happy to announce the ſafe arrival, in the Downs, of the Weſt India fleet, conſiſting of upwards of 100 fall, under convoy of his majesty's ship Alfred of 74 guns and other ships of war.

On Friday and Saturday arrived at Liverpool the whole of the Leeward Island fleet for that port (30 in number) after a passage of 5 weeks and 4 days, all well; and seven at Lancaster.

The following British men of war are off the Texel: Monarch, Ganges, Kent, Director, Veteran, America, Agamemnon, Belliqueux, Glatton, Apollo, Sirius, Proserpine, Vestal, Ranger and Echo.

The letters received by the Lisbon mail Rate the very unexpected return there of rear-admiral Nelson, who was supposed to have gone up the Mediterranean. He rejoined the fleet with all the ships that had been placed under his command, after having victualled and well stored them at Gibraltar.

BOSTON, August 28.

On Saturday arrived here the sloop Champherdown, capt. Disborough in six day from St. Johns. We have been favored with a St. Johns paper of Aug. 17. containing the pleasing intelligence of a "British squadron having fallen in with the Dutch fleet in the Texel, consisting of 70 sail of men of war and transports—the whole of which were completely routed and captured."

Capt. Smith who arrived here yesterday from Figuira, (Spain) says a report was in circulation there previous to his sailing, which stated that admiral Nelson's fleet had fallen in with the Toulon fleet, engaged and defeated them.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, October 27.

On Monday last the body of Mr. Cornwall, who was unfortunately drowned the 14th inst. by falling out of a boat into the lake near the garrison, was taken up at Toby Cove. The Coroner's Inquest sat on the body, and brought in their verdict—accidental death.

UPPER-CANADA, Midland District,

SURROGATE COURT.

George the Third, by the grace of God of Great Britain, France and Ireland king, defender of the faith, &c. &c.

To all persons anywise related to Timothy Brown, late serjeant in the Royal Canadian Volunteers, deceased, intestate:

WHereas application has been made to our surrogate court, for the Midland District, by Hazleton Spencer, esq. major in his majesty's Royal Canadian Volunteers, stating that Timothy drown, late serjeant in the said corps, died intestate, and that there is no person next of kin to the said Timothy Brown, resident within this province, and therefore the said Hazleton Spencer, esq. prays that letters of administration may be granted to him.

Take notice, that unless you, or some of you, appear in our said court, to be holden for the Midland district, on or before eight months after this publication, in order to take out letters of administration, agreeably to an act of assembly of this province, entitled an act to establish a court of probate in this province, and also a surrogate court in every district thereof, or to shew cause, if any you have, why letters of administration should not be granted to the said Hazleton Spencer, esq. that the same will be granted to him accordingly. Witness Alexander Fisher, esq. surrogate for the Midland district, this third day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-eight, and in the thirty-eighth of our reign. POOLE ENGLAND, Register.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the third, by the grace of God of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, king, defender of the faith, &c. &c. &c.

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS,

GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our proclamation bearing date the fifteenth day of September, we thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council to prorogue our provincial parliament until the twenty-ninth day of this present month of October, at which time in our town of YORK you were held and constrained to appear; but we taking into our royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council, to relieve you, and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the SEVENTH day of DECEMBER next ensuing, you meet us in our provincial parliament, in our town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our province of Upper-Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary:—Herein fail not. In testimony whereof we have caused these our letters to be made patent, and the great seal of our said province to be hereunto affixed:—Witness the honorable PETER RUSSELL, esq. president administering the government of our said province, this nineteenth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-eight, and of our reign the thirty-ninth.

IRISH AFFAIRS.

FROM THE LONDON GAZETTE.

Whitehall, June 10.

DISPATCHES, of which the following are copies, have been this day received from his excellency the lord lieutenant of Ireland, by his grace the duke of Portland, his majesty's principal secretary of state for the home department.

Dublin Caſle, June 12.

MY LORD,

It is with the utmoſt concern I acquaint your grace, an inſurrection has broke out in the county of Antrim; & in order to give your grace the fulleſt information in my power, I enclose to you an extract of a letter received this jor gen. Nugent. I am in great hopes, from the numbers and ſpirit of the loyal in that part of the country, the inſurgents may be quickly checked. I have the honor to be, &c. Camden.

His grace the duke of Portland.

Belfaſt June 8.

MY LORD,

I have the honor to report to your lordſhip, that in conſequence of information which I received early yeſterday morning, of an intended inſurrection in the county of Antrim, having for its firſt object the ſeizure of the magiſtrates who were to aſſemble that day in the town of Antrim, I apprehended ſeveral perſons in Belfaſt. I did not receive the intelligence early enough to prevent the inſurgents from taking poſſeſſion of Antrim, and I am not therefore acquainted with their firſt proceedings there: But I prevented many magiſtrates from leaving Belfaſt; and many others, being officers of yeomanry on permanent duty, did not attend the meeting. I ordered the 64th regiment and light battalion, and 100 of the 22d light dragoons, under col. Clavering and lieut. col. Lumley, with two 5 1-2 inch howitzers, and two curricle 6 pounders, to proceed with the utmoſt diſpatch thro' Liſburn to Antrim. I alſo ordered from the garriſon 250 of the Monaghan militia, with lieut. col. Ker, and 50 of the 22d dragoons, together with the Belfaſt yeomanry cavalry, with major Smith, to proceed under the command of col. Durham, with two curricle ſix-pounders, thro' Carmoney and Templepatrick, to Antrim, to co-operate with the other detachment. The dragoons under lieut. col. Lumley having made the attack upon the town without waiting for the light battalion, were fired upon from the windows of the houſes, and were conſequently obliged to retreat with the loſs of, I am ſorry to add, three officers of that excellent regiment killed and wounded, and the two curricle 6 pounders. Col. Clavering, on his arrival near Antrim, finding the rebels leaving into that town in great force, very judiciouſly took poſt on the Liſburn ſide, and reported his ſituation to maj. gen. Goldie. In the mean time col. Durham, with his whole detachment, proceeded to within half a mile of Antrim, and after a cannonade of half an hour, drove the inſurgents completely out of the town, and retook the two curricle guns, together with a braſs 6-pounder, very badly mounted, of which it ſeems, the rebels had two, ſuppoſed to have been ſmuggled out of Belfaſt. The col. then proceeded without the loſs of a man, thro' the town (which Shane's Caſtle and Randleſtown, in which direction the principal part of the rebels fled. He remains there ſtill for orders from me. Lord O'Neil, I am ſorry to ſay, is dangerouſly wounded.

Lieut. col. Leſlie, of the Tay Fencibles, reports to me from Carrickfergus, that lieutenant Small, with a detachment of 20 men of that corps, in the barrack at Larne, defended themſelves moſt gallantly againſt the attack of a moſt numerous body, and maintained their poſt, with the loſs of two killed and three wounded, including the lieutenant. I have ordered them into head quarters at Carrickfergus. The Glenarm yeomanry (ſixty ſtrong being alſo threatened by an attack, in the courſe of the day, took poſſeſſion of Glenarm Caſtle, where they will maintain themſelves if poſſible. Brigadier general Knox, having heard of a party of the Toome yeomanry being made priſoners by the inſurgents, ſent to me very early this morning, to offer to march, by Toome bridge, into the county of Antrim; which I have deſired him to do in order to liberate col. Durham's detachment, and enable them to croſs the country on their return to Belfaſt.

Although the inſurrection has been pretty general in the county, I do not find they had much ſucceſs; but I have not received as yet any reports from Ballycaſtle, Ballymena, Ballymoney, Portglenore, and other places in the Northern parts, in which yeomanry are ſtationed.—As my information led to a general riſing in the county of Down, I have been obliged to call in all the ſmall detachments of the York Fencibles to Newtown Ardes. Colonel Stapleton has ever thing in readineſs to move at a mom nt's warning. The yeomanry are all on permanent duty thro'out the counties of Down and Antrim: and I have diſtributed arms to 110 loyal men in Belfaſt, who will be attached to the Monaghan and Fifeſhire regiments, and thereby become very uſeful. Offers of ſervice are very numerous.

I cannot cloſe this letter without expreſſing to your lordſhip my entire approbation of the conduct of the troops of all deſcriptions in this part of the Northern diſtrict; their zeal and attention to their duties cannot be ſurpaſſed: and I truſt, that when occaſion offers, they will act in that concert which is ſo much to be wiſhed for in military ſervice. Lieut. col. Lumley, I am afraid, is badly wounded in the leg; cornet Dunn is killed; and lieut. Murphy ſlightly wounded; all of the 22d dragoons. I underſtand, but not officially, that ſome yeomanry from Lord Hertford's eſtate (I believe the Derriaghy) were with the dragoons when they made the unſucceſsful attack on Antrim; and they retired to Antrim Caſtle, where they were relieved by col. Durham.—Col. Durham deſerves my warmeſt praiſe for his judicious and ſpirited conduct. He ſpeaks in high terms of the detachment under him, and particularly the Monaghan militia.—The rev. Sterle Dickſon was taken up the night before laſt, and ſent priſoner here, where he will be confined in a place of ſafety, as well as many others, whom it is now neceſſary to apprehend. Your lordſhip may depend upon my individual exertions in this unpleaſant conteſt; and as I am ably ſupported, I make no doubt, that we ſhall prevent the rebels from gaining any advantages, and ultimately oblige them to return to their allegiance. I ſhall write again to-morrow, ſhould any material event occur. I have the honor to be, &c.

C. Nugent, major general.

Lord viſcount Caſtlereagh, &c.

Sir Edward Croſbie, bart. was tried at Carlow yeſterday, found guilty, hanged, and his head taken off, and put on the top of the gaol, with a few of his friends.

Dublin Caſtle, June 9.

Extract of a letter from lieutenant general Johnſon, to lieut. gen. La e, dated at Ko[illegible]h June, 1798.

"I ſend you a return of the killed, wounded and miſſing of the troops engaged on the 5th inſt. Their number, you will, I truſt, find not great, when you take into conſideration the numbers they were oppoſed to. This muſt be imputed to their gallantry.

"From the beſt accounts which have been received, the number of the rebels killed is ſtated to be upwards of 2000. The wounded muſt have been very conſiderable, but the number cannot be aſcertained as they were carried off by the rebels.

"The general ſeverely regrets the loſs of that brave officer, lord Mountjoy, who fell early in the conteſt."

Return of the killed, wounded and miſſing, of the troops engaged at Roſs on the 5th of June.

Killed—1 colonel, 1 cornet, 1 quarter maſter, 4 ſerjeants, 3 drummers, 81 rank and file, alſo 54 horſes.

Wounded—1 captain, and 37 rank and file; alſo, 5 horſes.

Miſſing—1 captain, 3 lieutenants, 1 enſign, 2 ſerjeants, 2 drummers, 72 rank and file, and 4 horſes.

Return of Ordnance, Stores, &c. taken from the rebels in the action of the 5th of June.

5 1-2 inch howitzer, on ſhip carriage	1
Iron 4 pounder, on ſhip carriage	1
Swivels	14
Iron 3 pounder	1
Iron 2 pounder	1
Total	18

A letter has alſo been received from major general Nugent at Belfaſt, which ſtates, that the rebels were diſperſed in all directions, except at Toome, whither general Knox and col. Clavering were proceeding, and that many of them had laid down their arms.

Extract from a private letter.

"There have been five engagements in Wicklow, wherein numbers of the rebels have fallen. But Wexford is ſtill in their poſſeſſion, nor can we attempt to reduce it until more troops arrive."

The rebels of Wexford have got ſeveral priſoners of ſome conſequence in their poſſeſſion, through incaution and ſtratagem, among whom are lord Kingſborough, the lady of George Ogle, eſq. and ſome other perſonages of diſtinction.—Theſe, it is ſaid, the rebels have confined in the market-houſe of Wexford.

The generaliſſimo of the rebels now at Wexford, we hear, is a perſon of the name of Ken, who was ſome time in the army, and is a native of that part of the country. We underſtand he has made ſeveral regulations in the town, and among the reſt has had the audacity to order a ſcale to be made out to regulate the price of proviſions.

The chiefs of the rebels are dreſſed in green jackets turned up with white or yellow, white veſt, buck-ſkin breeches, half-boots, hats with white cockneck feathers, and green cockades.

The inſurgents have been in poſſeſſion of Donaghadee for ſome days.

LONDON, May 21.

Diſpatches have been received from ſir Richard Strachan, who has reſumed his ſtation off Havre. This gallant and vigilant officer was, it ſeems, a few nights ago in a ſituation of peril, from which he extricated himſelf by the preſence and firmneſs of mind which he has upon many occaſions ſo ſingularly diſplayed. Standing cloſe in ſhore, to watch the motion of ſome gun boats, the Diamond was, by the ſtrength of the wind and tide operating together, driven up the Seine above Honfleur. Sir Richard was called to ſtrike from the fort. He returned for anſwer, he would batter the town about their ears, if they dared to fire a ſhot at his ſhip. The Frenchmen took the hint, and were ſilent. He was next attacked by 11 gun boats, four of which he ſunk, and upon the change of the tide, he brought his ſhip out without having ſuſtained any material damage.

BOSTON, Auguſt 28.

Capt. Freeman who arrived on Friday from Marſeilles, informs, that upwards of a hundred tranſports, with ſoldiers ſailed from that place to join the Toulon fleet. That officers were much diſſatisfied with being embarked on a tranſmarine expedition, obſerving that they had long fought for their country on land, and wiſhed now to enjoy ſome repoſe, inſtead of which they were to be ſent to ſea and drowned. There being a deficiency of men for the tranſports, many peaſeants from the country were ſeized, bro't in bound, and driven on board. The Toulon fleet ſailed May 18, and conſiſted of 17 ſhips of the line, ſix frigates, and 300 tranſports. Their deſtination altogether conjectural only, it was evidently up the mediterranean. Buonaparte ſailed the next day in a frigate. Capt. Freeman ſailed from Marſeilles May 25, the next day fell in with a frigate belonging to ad. Nelſon's fleet. The capt. examined capt. F's veſſel, and detained ſome French diſpatches addreſſed to the French conſul at Charleſton, May 28, fell in with three ſhips of the line, and three frigates of the ſame fleet, off Minorca. A gale of wind had injured them ſome, 1 ſhip of the line had loſt her foremaſt juſt above deck.

Theſe veſſels were waiting for the main diviſion of Nelſon's fleet, when they were to purſue the French. About the begining of June, capt. F. was in at Carthagena, where a report prevailed, that in a gale of wind the French Armada had loſt three ſhips of the line and ſeveral tranſports.

Extract of a letter from London, dated 6th June, to a gentleman in Boſton.

"It is with real concern I obſerve the appearance of a calamitous war between France and your country. I can aſſure you the people here, to a man, are greatly incenſed at the conduct of the French goverment towards America, as it gives us great reaſon to belive that their only aim is plunder, and not the freedom and happineſs of mankind as they have been dazzling the world with; but our eyes are now opened and we perceive the deluſion; they have made many of their warmeſt friends here their avowed enemies. Altho' the times have been very indifferent with us, I am convinced they would be tenfold worſe if the French could conquer us; but I truſt God will preſerve both you and us from their deſigns. I need not mention to you the diſturbed ſtate of Ireland; there has been ſeveral battles fought, in which the king's troops have been generally ſucceſsful. I am ſorry to ſay too many have loſt their lives on both ſides, but the inſurgents have ſuffered as ten to one. I truſt it is nearly over, as many of theſe deluded people have come in, and given up their arms, ſuch as they had. Many perſons have been lately taken up for treaſon, amongſt them three or four perſons of note in the temple, againſt whom the charges are not yet exhibited. Several others have been tried at Maidſtone, one of whom is to be executed this week. O'Connor is acquitted, but is ſent to Ireland to anſwer another charge.

"Thank God we have a very promiſing ſeaſon for the various productions of the earth; it does not appear that a ſingle article has miſſed; but is early and in great abundance. We had a very fine winter; in ſhort we want nothing but more acknowledgements to Providence for his great goodneſs to this country.

A bill has paſſed the ſenate of New-York to appropriate 200,000 dollars, for the purpoſes of repairing and completing ſuch fortifications as have already been erected and conſtructed in the city and its vicinity, and for conſtructing and erecting ſuch other fortifications, and providing ſuch other means of defence for the ſecurity of the city and port of New-York; and an addition of 150,000 dollars are granted to purchaſe ammunition, to mount cannon, &c. out of that ſum the governor is authoriſed to appropriate to the amount of 10,000 dollars for the purchaſe of 3000 ſtand of arms, and for incidental military expences.

WEST INDIA GENERALS.

Since the arrivel of generals Liberty and Equality, who have been powerfully aſſiſted by generals Rigaud and Toufſaint, their brigadiers, generals Diſtreſs, Diſorder, and Carnage have made immenſe ravages. General Complaint has been very loud in his denunciations againſt them; and general Embargo has often blockaded up the ports in vain. At length general Relentment, (an American by birth) has been exaſperated, and threatens them with puniſhment. His ſecond in command, general Starvation, has al-ſtrong holds of St. Domingo; and as ſtone walls are no obſtruction to him, it is expected he will force general Houdeville to capitulate, and put gen. Inſurrection in requiſition, unleſs the return of gen. Juſtice or gen. Peace, leads the way of generals Amity and Accommodation. In that caſe they may ſpeedily expect gen. Supply.

ANECDOTES.

A WOMAN, very early one morning went into a tavern, called for a gill of New-England rum and drank it.—Upon which the lady who tended the bar expreſſed her wonder that ſhe ſhould drink ſo much rum on an empty ſtomach? Why la, ſays ſhe, my ſtomach is not empty, for I have drank a pint before, this morning!

A Clergyman lately took for his text theſe words—"the fleſh, the world and the devil—and began his ſermon in the following manner:—"I ſhall juſt touch upon the fleſh, paſs lightly over the world, and haſten as faſt as I can to the devil."

GEORGE the third, by the grace of God of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, king, defender of the faith, &c. &c. &c.

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS,

GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our proclamation bearing date the fifteenth day of September, we thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council to prorogue our provincial parliament until the twenty-ninth day of this preſent month of October, at which time in our town of YORK you were held and conſtrained to appear; but we taking into our royal conſideration the eaſe and convenience of our loving ſubjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council, to relieve you, and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforeſaid, hereby convoking, and by theſe preſents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the SEVENTH day of DECEMBER next enſuing, you meet us in our provincial parliament, in our town of York, there to take into conſideration the ſtate and welfare of our province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may ſeem neceſſary:—Herein fail not. In teſtimony whereof we have cauſed theſe our letters to be made patent, and the great ſeal of our ſaid province to be hereunto affixed:—Witneſs the honorable PETER RUSSELL, eſq. preſident adminiſtering the government of our ſaid province, this nineteenth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety-eight, and of our reign the thirty-ninth. NOVA SCOTIA.

Halifax, Oct. 2.

On Thurſday evening one Bembridge, a young man reſiding at Dartmouth, who had for ſome time paſt diſcovered an attachment to Miſs Ruſſel, daughter of Mr. Ruſſel of that place, went to Mr. R's. houſe about 9 o'clock, entered a room where the family was ſitting, and expreſſed a wiſh to ſpeak to Miſs R—. This Mrs. Ruſſel refuſed, and expreſſed her diſpleaſure at his attention to her daughter—this the villain probably expected, for, having provided himſelf with a long butcher's knife, he took an opportunity immediately after, and buried it with the moſt ſavage violence in the bosom of the unfortunate girl, who almoſt inſtantly expired. The wretch then ſtabbed himſelf in two places, but we believe not mortally; affiance was called, he was immediately taken into cuſtody, and will doubtleſs ſuffer the proper vengeance of the law for his diabolical atrocity.

The Princeſs Royal packet, arrived here laſt Saturday in the forenoon, in 39 days from Falmouth.—The Princeſs Royal, on her paſſage, had a ſmart engagement with a French privateer, and the following extract of a letter from a gentleman who was on board, furniſhes a correct ſtate of the action.—"At day light the 22d of Sept. being then off the Weſtern Iſlands, a brig was diſcovered in chace, upon which we immediately cleared for action, barricaded the ſhip with hammocks and ſpare ſails; light winds prevailing, the privateer made uſe of her ſweeps, and gained ſo faſt, that at 7 P. M. we exchanged ſhot, they then laid in their ſweeps, which gave us hopes they intended to leave off the chace, but at 8 P. M. we obſerved ſhe came up with us, upon which we took in our ſteering ſails, and began firing our ſtern gun, but unfortunately the axletree of the 6-pounder broke at the firſt fire, which rendered the gun unſerviceable—At half paſt 3 the privateer got along ſide, when the action became general, and in a few minutes after the axletrees of two of the three-pounders gave way, ſo that three of our guns were diſabled, but by the great exertions of the men the two 4 pounders were continued in action, and theſe exertions were gallantly ſupported by the paſſengers, with ſmall arms, who put themſelves under the orders of brigadier general Murray—the action continued without interruption, until ten minutes paſt five, when the privateer put out ſweeps and hauled off, and no doubt with conſiderable damage—we had three ſhot in the hull, a number through the ſails, one through the croſs jack-yard, one through the boat, and ſome of our rigging cut—two men badly wounded, and the captain ſlightly, from the blowing up of a powder-horn—every officer and man in the ſhip, behaved like Engliſhmen. The privateer fought under National colours, carried, to all appearances, 12 guns, and was well manned."

UNITED STATES.

CHARLESTON, (S. C.) Sept. 22.

Yeſterday arrived the ſchooner Three Friends, capt. Cook, in 52 days from Malaga.

We are indebted to Mr. Joſhua Baker, a paſſenger, and a very intelligent gentleman, for the following information:—Eight days before he left Malaga, a Greek polacre arrived there from Malta, in 9 days paſſage. The polacre was at Malta prior to its ſurrender to the French, and was detained there after they got poſſeſſion of it, until they left it, as was underſtood there for Cagliari in Sicily.

The Greek captain related, that when Buonaparte's fleet appeared off Malta, three of his ſhips were admitted into their harbour on the requeſt of the French Buccaneer, as friends in a neutral port, by permiſſion of the grand maſter, and after they were in, the remainder forced their way. A cannonade commenced, which laſted ſeven hours, when the Malteſe colours were ſtruck, and the French ſubſtituted in their place, by the treachery of their own ſoldiers.

As ſoon as the iſland was in their poſſeſſion, liberty and equality commenced its uſual courſe of pillage and plunder, & without trouble tranſferred the wealth of honeſt labour to its vile invaders.

About the 14th or 15th of July, the French fleet ſailed from Malta for Sicily. Buonaparte having garriſoned there 5000 of his troops, as the ſecurity of his conqueſt, and to enable the traitors of Malta, to determine the weight of the chains of the deva ſtator of Italy.

Five French pirates which were at Malaga came out immediately before the Three Friends, and a number of American veſſels, with intent of making prizes; but the American veſſels kept under the guns of the Triton, captain Holterman, a Daniſh frigate, having under convoy about 30 ſail of Daniſh veſſels, and on the approach of the pirates they received a ſalute that nearly hulled one of them; upon which they run along ſide of the frigate, and promiſed faithfully that they would moleſt none but the Americans, and received as anſwer from the Dane, that he would ſink all thoſe that came among the fleet.

In conſequence of the embargo upon American veſſels in France, the French privateers out of Spain, had increaſed their exertions. The ſchooner Peggy, Tucker, belonging to New York, after having been acquitted at Malaga by the French conſul, was ſtripped and had two additional prize maſters placed on board and will without doubt be condemned.

The French are ſo ſupreme & dreaded in Spain, that no miniſter or governor dare even oppoſe the bare dictum of a French conſul in their own territory. The French declare that peace would be the death blow to their proſpect; and that war—war with all the world is their wiſh and hope.—[May the Supreme Ruler of the Univerſe grant their wiſh and ruin.]

All that is neceſſary in the ports of France and Spain for the condemnation of American property, is to prove it ſo.

PHILADELPHIA, October 12.

Wedneſday arrived at Cheſter, the brig Eliza, capt. Peterſon, from Leghorn. A gentleman who came in the Eliza, politely handed the following information:

The Eliza left Leghorn the 12th Auguſt, where it was currently reported, that a moſt deſperate engagement had taken place between the French fleet, in which Buonaparte had embarked, and the Britiſh fleet commanded by admiral Nelſon, near the iſland of Candia; the reſult was (as was generally believed) that Buonaparte was a priſoner on board the Culloden, commodore Trowbridge, and that Nelſon was dead. One report was that he was killed in the action; another, that his ſhip, a 74, had grappled the L'Orient, the French admiral's ſhip, of 120 guns, that after a moſt tremendous conflict, the L'Orient ſunk, and before Nelſon could clear his grappling irons, he was carried down with her, & all on board periſhed, that the command had devolved on Trowbridge, and that he captured Buonaparte endeavoring to eſcape in a ſmall veſſel, which he had ready for that purpoſe.

From the foregoing, and the accounts which were prevalent in Leghorn, it was generally believed that Buonaparte was a priſoner. The accounts upon this intereſting ſubject were very contradictory and not authentic; but I took every pains to obtain as accurate information as poſſible, and it is my opinion, that Nelſon is dead, & that Buonaparte is a priſoner to Trowbridge.—A veſſel arrived at Leghorn from Alexandria, in 30 or 35 days paſſage, the captain of which reported, that the French fleet had not arrived at Alexandria; and that he ſaw nothing of the fleets, nor heard of any engagement: As he was conſigned to a houſe in the French intereſt, no doubt, they would inſtruct him to ſay ſo.

On the 11th July, off Carthagena, the Lion, capt. Dixon, a Britiſh 64 gun ſhip, fell in with four large Spaniſh frigates returning from Algiers, under the command of commodore O'Neil, who ordered Dixon to ſtrike his colours; Dixon ſaid, he would think of it, and immediately gave O'Neil a broadſide, an action commenced, which laſted two hours, when O'Neil made ſail for Carthagena, with three frigates, leaving under the care of the Lion, the Dorothea, of 44 guns, and 136 men, by whom ſhe was conducted to Naples, where ſhe arrived about the 4th of Auguſt.

The Dorothea had 90 men killed and 45 wounded, who were ſent to an hoſpital at Naples. The Lion had 1 man wounded, ſince dead. The Lion during the engagement, was ſo much encumbered with her cargo, that ſhe could not fire all her lower deck guns.

BOSTON, October 12.

Extract of a letter from Gottenbourg, dated July 25.

"On our paſſage to this place, we ſpoke in the Cattegat, the brig Orlando, capt. Henderſon, who has ſince arrived at Copenhagen.

"Sweden is very quiet; the young king is beloved, and expected ſhortly at Gottenbourg, preparations are making for his reception.

"Some internal and military diſturbances prevail in Ruſſia; no ſtranger is admitted there; a line of troops is ſpread over the limits of that empire. It is reported here that the emperor was killed; but no confirmation of it.

"The mail of this day brings the news of the negociation at Seiltz being broken up; Francois de Meuſchateau ſet off for Paris, and count Cobenzel for Vienna. The congreſs of Raſtadt was to break up alſo, and there is a proſpect of war again between Germany and France. This intelligence is dated Frankfort 9th, and Raſtadt 8th July."

The Danes and Swedes, have eight ſail of men of war out a cruiſing, and are determined to protect their trade againſt the French.

Advices from Madrid, as late as the latter part of Auguſt, ſtate, that ſcarcely a month paſſes without a change in the Spaniſh miniſtry; that within the laſt week there had been a total alteration of the miniſters; two of them, with ten of the principal grandees, had been baniſhed from court and from the chief cities, that the ſucceſſor of the Prince of Peace is extremely ill—that on a conſultation of the beſt phyſicians, it was declared that he and his whole family were poiſoned—the poiſon had operated moſt ſtrongly upon him. The Prince of Peace had been hiſſed and forced to quit the theatre.

Extract of a letter from Liſbon, Sept. 8.

"In public affairs there has not lately happened any thing of conſequence.—The peaceable manner in which the French government has received the ſpirited behaviour of your's, (America) leads many people to hope a rupture may be avoided. It is poſitively aſſerted, that they have given orders to their privateers, particularly thoſe in the W. Indies, to pay the utmoſt reſpect to the American flag and neutrality.

"Cadiz remains blockaded—and proviſions are in demand, tho' not ſo much as might be expected. A ſhip from Baltimore, with a cargo of cocoa has been permitted to enter Cadiz—but a ſhip has juſt arrived here from New York with proviſions, which was refuſed admittance."

Extract of a letter from Spain, Aug. 25.

"By a courier extra from France, accounts have been received that the convention of Raſtadt had broken up; that the French have marched 40,000 men on the other ſide of the Rhine; and that every poſſible preparation is making on the part of Auſtria as well as France. It is generally believed here that hoſtilities have ere this re-commenced between the two countries.

"It is alſo ſaid, that Buonaparte had arrived at the place of his deſtination, which is a port in the Adriatic, and that his intentions were to fall down on the back of the Emperor's troops in Italy; which, if true, ſhows that it is a long premeditated plan of the French to break again with Germany. Nelſon is ſaid to be cloſe on their heels, and will impede their operations very much if not entirely fruſtrate their deſigns."

We learn from capt. Tufton from Halifax, that on the 3d or 4th inſt. two veſſels arrived there from the Streights, which had fell in with the Britiſh frigate Andromache, on the 30th of Auguſt, ſolicited to be convoyed, but was informed, that ſhe was proceeding expreſs from admiral Nelſon's fleet for England, with intelligence of an engagement with the Toulon armada, in which the Britiſh had been victorious. The intelligence was accredited at Halifax—and is ſtated as true in ſeveral letters from the firſt characters in Nova Scotia. The ſilence of our Liſbon accounts on this ſubject, may not be an invalidation of the news.

NEW-YORK, October 12.

Yeſterday arrived here in 33 days from Cork, the ſhip Betſey, Carberry. By this arrival we are informed, that "On the 27th of Auguſt, about 1800 French troops, principally officers landed in Sligo Bay, in the county of Galway, and had entrenched themſelves with nearly 200 pieces of cannon they attacked gen. Lake in peaſant's dreſs, (he thinking they were ſome of the rebels coming to lay down their arms) and took ten pieces of cannon—Cornwallis, the lord lieut. of Ireland, was preparing to attack them on the 30th of Auguſt—no news of an engagement had arrived at Cork on the 8th of September, when the fleet ſailed.

"The French were beating up publicly for men in ſome of the ſmall towns.

"The Betſey ſailed with the Cork fleet in company with about 80 ſail of Americans.

IMPORTANT!

By the arrival of the armed ſhip Nancy, capt. Goodrich, in 33 days from Cork, we have obtained the loan of the New Cork Evening Advertiſer of the 6th September; this paper contains ſeveral important articles, which we haſten to lay before our readers:

LONDON, Auguſt 30.

Monſ. Niou has at length agreed upon a general exchange of priſoners.—If we receive back all that we have loſt, in exchange for an equal number, we ſhall retain, upon the exchange, nearly 15,000 of the enemy.

Letters from Portſmouth ſtate, that the Eaſt-India ſhips which had on board 3500 troops, and were to have ſailed with the firſt fair wind, have diſembarked them, in purſuance of orders from the admiralty. It is ſuppoſed that theſe troops will be immediately ſent to Ireland, ſhould circumſtances make that meaſure neceſſary, as they are all in complete readineſs, and the Dictator of 64 guns, which was about to proceed to Weymouth, to lay as a guard ſhip during the king's reſidence there, has been countermanded, for the purpoſe, it is imagined, of tranſporting ſome of the troops to Ireland.

Aug. 31. A French paper of the 26 inſt. entitled Le Clef du Cabinet, received in town yeſterday, has the following important detail, which we can ſay obtains very general belief in the higheſt and beſt informed circles:

The article is dated from Frankfort and ſtates, that by advices from Trieſte and likewiſe from another port in Italy, an account had been received of an action having taken place between the Engliſh and French fleets in the Mediterranean. The circumſtances which are particularly detailed are as follows:

"On the 17th Meſſidor, July 5, the hoſtile fleets met in the morning. A very cloſe and warm engagement enſued, which laſted the whole day, and ended at night, without victory having declared on either ſide, the two following days, the 6th and 7th of July, and the fleets lay in ſight repairing their damages, on the 8th, the Engliſh fleet being favored by an eaſterly wind, ſucceeded in cutting off eight ſhips of the line, with which a cloſe and deſperate action immediately took place. It ended, however, by victory declaring in favor of the Britiſh, the whole eight ſhips being taken or ſunk.

"The action was extremely bloody on both ſides, the crew of l'Orient

Buonaparte's ship having been repeatedly reinforced by drafts from other ships which were not so closely engaged.—The l'Orient at last sunk as well as Sir H. Nelson's ship, (the Vanguard.)—The British admiral who was badly wounded, was removed on board the Culloden, where he had the satisfaction of receiving Buonaparte and his whole etat-major, about two hours before he (Sir Horatio) died of his wounds.

Such is the detail in le Clef du Cabinet, to which as we have already observed great credit is attached here, and which seems to be too circumstancial to be wholly the fiction of a French editor, for which he would be liable to pay the forfeit of his life. We leave it to our readers however, to form their own opinions and conclusions.

The article likewise states the English force very correctly—twelve 74 gun ships, one 64 and a 50 besides frigates.

We are concerned to find in these journals an official account of the loss of his majesty's frigate l'Aigle, of 38 guns, capt. Tyler, on the isle of Planes in the Mediterranean, as it was on its voyage to join ad. Nelson's squadron. The vessel was burnt by order of the capt. to prevent her falling into the hands of the enemy; and the crew, of whom it does not appear that they were lost, were carried, we do not learn in what manner, into Tunis.

DUBLIN CASTLE, Sept. 2.

"Advices were this day received from the lord lieutenant's head-quarters at Knockhill, dated the 1st inst. His excellency was advancing towards the enemy, and col. Crawford is pushing his patroles to Castlebar. It appears that the number of the enemy have been exaggerated, and that they have been joined by a very inconsiderable number of the inhabitants."

Extract of a letter from Kilkenny, Aug. 3.

"The vast number of countrymen in this county, who came in last week to profit of the proclamation of amnesty, exceeded that of any former week by some thousands. In some parts the magistrates appointed to receive their submission, are entirely employed in that happy duty, we have good authority to state that in this neighborhood of Callin alone, 850 men have brought in their arms and obtained forgiveness and protection.

"The farmers in this neighborhood have begun to get in the harvest, which thank Heaven! was never finer nor more abundant. The number of reapers who attended on Sunday in the market place to be hired for the week's reaping, were as numerous as in any former time of profound tranquility, and the price of labor more than usually moderate—striking proofs of confidence in the wisdom of government, and perfect recovery from their late frenzy."

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, November 10.

WE have once more the satisfaction of announcing to our readers the pleasing intelligence of the defeat of the French fleet, the capture of eight French ships of the line, and the taking of the greatest general that nation could ever boast of, (Buonaparte.) An event which if true, we hope, will have a tendency to humble that vile, detestable and tyranical nation the French republic, who have been guilty of the most attrocious and unparalelled cruelties ever heard of, with impunity;—but we presume the time is fast approaching when they shall be brought to be as servile as the Spaniel, and to a just sense of their guilt; but we are afraid they will never experince their just punishment—the guillotine.

DIED.] In this town, on Friday the 2d inst. Christopher Robinson, esq. of Kingston.—On Monday last Mrs. Anna Smith, concert to the honorable D. W. Smith, esq.

CONJUGAL AFFECTION.

THE emperor Conrad, having in the siege of Wiltsburgh reduced the inhabitants to great extremity, and having taken pity of the women who were innocent, indulged them to depart from the town with what baggage they could carry on their backs. The dutchess took Guelpho, her husband, on her back; and all the other women following her example, issued forth not laden with gold and silver, but with men and children. The emperor pleased with the stratagem, took the duke into favor with all his adherents.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER RUSSELL, esq. President, administering the government of the province of Upper-Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS it appears by letters lately received from his GRACE the DUKE of PORTLAND, one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state, to be his Majesty's royal will and pleasure, that in order to raise a FUND for the PUBLIC SERVICE of the province; all future GRANTS of LAND, those only excepted for which his Majesty's governments were actually pledged previous to the receipt of those letters, be subject to a FEE of SIX PENCE Halifax currency per acre, exclusive of the usual expences of survey:—BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN that all grants of land (except as before excepted) confirming orders of council made subsequent to the TWENTY-SECOND day of DECEMBER last, (being the day on which those letters were read in council) shall be subject to a fee of six pence Halifax currency per acre, exclusive of the charges for survey, which are to be paid as usual to the surveyor general, on presenting to him the warrants of survey for location agreeable to the proportions specified on each grant in the SCHEDULE hereunto annexed.—And his Majesty having been graciously pleased to direct that his royal favor shall continue to be extended to those LOYALISTS who have adhered to the UNITY of the EMPIRE, BE IT FURTHER KNOWN, that in conformity to the above instructions, all grants of land to the extent of two hundred acres each, issued, or to be issued to persons of that description, and to their CHILDREN of the FIRST GENERATION, confirming orders of council subsequent to the sixth instant, shall be subject to only HALF the above fee, (that is three-pence per acre,) and shall not be subject to any charges whatever for the expence of survey,—And that the said fees may be regularly collected and applied to the public services of the province;—BE IT KNOWN, that all persons subject to the payment of full fees or half fees, are upon receiving their respective warrants of survey, to pay to the Receiver-General of the province an advance of half the fee they may be subject to, and they are to pay the remaining half to the secretary of the province upon receiving their respective PATENTS from his office.

GIVEN under my hand and seal, at arms, in Council, in the town of York, this thirty-fifth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-eight, and in the thirty-ninth of his Majesty's reign.

PETER RUSSELL.

By the President's command,

JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

SCHEDULE of the charges for survey, ordered to be taken by the SURVEYOR-GENERAL to enable him to defray the expences of the survey which he shall receive warrants for:—

	£	s	d
For Town Lots, and all other quantities of land not exceeding 100 acres	1	0	0
All quantities exceeding 100 acres and not exceeding 200 acres	1	7	6

And for all other quantities, one pound seven shillings and six-pence on each two hundred acres which the quantity ordered may amount to.—And when the EXCESS on grants above two hundred acres may exceed one hundred acres, and yet does not amount to two hundred acres—for such excess shall be charged TWENTY SHILLINGS.

PETER RUSSELL, PRESIDENT.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the third, by the grace of God of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, king, defender of the faith, &c. &c. &c.

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS, GREETING;

WHEREAS, by our proclamation bearing date the fifteenth day of September, we thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council to prorogue our provincial parliament until the twenty-ninth day of this present month of October, at which time in our town of YORK you were held and constrained to appear; but we taking into our royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council, to relieve you, and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the SEVENTH day of DECEMBER next ensuing, you meet us in our provincial parliament, in our town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our province of Upper-Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary:—Herein fail not. In testimony whereof we have caused these our letters to be made patent, and the great seal of our said province to be hereunto affixed.—Witness the honorable PETER RUSSELL, esq. president administering the government of our said province, this nineteenth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-eight, and of our reign the thirty-ninth. European News.

LONDON, August 6.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at Wexford, (Ireland) dated July 13, to his friend in town.

"WE are completely rejoiced at the important news of this day, namely, the confirmation of Sir Horatio Nelson's defeat of the French fleet, and his capture of the great general of the great nation, Buonaparte. This is a very important thing to this distracted country, and I think, will tend greatly to insure tranquility during the winter, which, otherwise, was not much to be depended on."

Our letters from Dublin continue the proſpect of returning tranquillity in that quarter.

His Majeſty in council has been pleaſed to order, that the parliament, which ſtands prorogued to Wedneſday the 8th day of this inſt. Aug. ſhould be further prorogued to Tueſday the 23d day of October next.

The voluntary contributions at the bank amount to 1,439,262l. 13s. 3d.

According to the returns at the war office, on the 1ſt inſt, the military eſtabliſhment of this country comprises three hundred thouſand effective men.

Overland diſpatches from India arrived on Saturday in town: they brought intelligence from Calcutta to the 7th of March, and left Bombay about the middle of April. Every thing was then tranquil.

Auguſt 18.

The French directory have iſſued a decree, dated July 30, in which they endeavour to lay the blame of the late arbitrary captures of American and other veſſels in the Weſt Indies, on ſtrangers and pirates. They affect to talk of their reſpect for the law of nations, and for the perſons and property of allied and neutral powers. The decree ordains, that more caution ſhall be uſed in the iſſuing of letters of marque. This decree, it is obſervable, is ſigned by Merlin, who ſtands accuſed of ſharing in the plunder made by the French privateers.

Yeſterday a Paris journal of the 8th inſt. was received in town, the only one we believe, which has reached this country. It contains no intelligence whatever reſpecting Buonaparte, his name never being once mentioned in it. A Paris journal of the 7th, received at the ſame time with the above, contains a letter from Talleyrand Perrigord, in reply to Mr. Gerry's laſt letter, in which the French miniſter lowers his tone, and expreſſes his ſincere deſire of the executive directory to avert by every means, the commencement of hoſtilities between France and America.

Auguſt 10.

Yeſterday lieut. Lundin, of the Sea-Hawk, arrived at the Admiralty, with information that ſeven ſail of French frigates were lying in the road to Havre with their ſails bent ready to put to ſea. In conſequence of this information, a meſſenger was ſent to Portſmouth with diſpatches to admiral Parker, port admiral.

Extract of a letter from Portſmouth, Aug. 8.

"The under mentioned frigates ſailed this evening to blockade the port of Havre: The Adamant, of 50 guns; Arethuſa, and the Jaſon, of 36 guns each."

Notwithſtanding nothing occurs in the Paris papers with reſpect to the negociation at Raſtadt, the preparations carrying on by the French on the Rhine are of a very formidable nature, and the emperor appears principally to direct his attention to the reinforcement of his army in Italy.

BUONAPARTE's EXPEDITION.

A letter from Alexandria, which appears in the Echo Paris paper, of the 4th inſt. has the following account of the preparations made there for Buonaparte's expedition: "the magazines which have been forming here are all ready. We are taught to expect the arrival of 40,000 men; they now ſpeak but of 20,000. The other 20,000 are to go by the Iſle of Cyprus to Aleppo, and from thence to paſs by the Euphrates to the Perſian Gulf. The column from this place will go to Svez, by Roſetta and Cairo, thence to embark on the Red Sea, where the French engineers have conſtructed rafts, which cannot be endangered by the ſhallows.—Theſe carry 3, 4, or 500 men each. The ſhips of war which the French have at the Iſles of France and of Bourbon are to meet them at the mouth of the Gulf, and to proteſt their paſſage through the Indian Sea, where the Engliſh have only a few frigates.

The two French commiſſioners who are here inſinuate to the Turks that they are going to fight the enemies of the religion of Mahomet. This produces ſuch an effect, that they may raiſe any number of recruits, if ſo diſpoſed. Two Frenchmen, who have ſerved in the army of Tippo Saib, have been here for ſome days. They wait for the French commander in chief, to confer with him on the future operations in India. The French have plenty of money, and are of courſe well ſerved. The Pachas have received orders from the Porte to furniſh whatever they may require.

In letters from Leghorn, of the 9th ult. we are told, that it was currently reported and generally believed there, that Buonaparte's firſt deſtination, after leaving Malta, was for Canea, and afterwards for Candia, both which iſlands were to be given up to the French in conſequence of a treaty negociated at Conſtantinople by the miniſter of the republic, whereby the French engage to obtain reſtitution of the Crimea, to the Grand Seignor.

Speech of lord Dunſay, in the Iriſh houſe of lords, on Thurſday the 19th of July laſt, when the meſſage from the lord lieutenant was taken into conſideration.

Lord Dunſay.—My lord, the paternal offer of pardon which our mild and beneficent ſovereign has been graciouſly pleaſed to hold out to his deluded ſubjects of this kingdom, commands my approbation, as I am ſure it does every man who feels the excellence of the wiſe and humane policy, which would, if poſſible, repreſs rebellion, yet ſpare the effuſion of human blood, and preſerve the population of the country. I ſhould, however, have contented myſelf on this ſignal occaſion with my entire concurrence with ſo admirable a meaſure, by giving it a ſilent vote, had not the noble lord on the woolſack thought proper to allude to a motion for conciliatory meaſures, heretofore made by a much reſpected peer, now abſent.—Having had the honor of ſupporting that motion, with other noble lords, upon the principles which now make it a duty in me to paſs over in ſilence an alluſion that might render thoſe principles liable to future miſconſtruction, I therefore, moſt ſolemnly proteſt, in the face of this houſe, that if I could have formed the moſt diſtant conception of the ſecret views and machinations of thoſe deluded people, or imagined that they tended in the ſmalleſt degree to rebellion, I ſhould never have appeared an advocate for them: And I will be bold to ſay, that thoſe other noble lords with whom I have had the honor to act upon the occaſion alluded to, feel as I feel, and have expreſſed myſelf. I perfectly agree with the noble earl, that French principles have been the ruin of the peace, proſperity and happineſs of the once induſtrious people of this country. That the magic ſounds of liberty and equality have effected more miſchief in every country, where the French have gained an influence, than their arms could ever have accompliſhed; it is alſo certain that the minds of men have been for many years in a deplorable ſtate of progreſſive preparation for the admiſſion and powerful operation of the moſt accurſed principles.—France, Italy, Germany and Holland, were completely philoſophiſed by a ſet of Deiſts, Atheiſts, and premeditated deſtroyers of all moral and religious principles, under the denomination of the Illumanati; a ſet of philoſophers whoſe ſource of light was the infernal demon of diſcord; by their efforts the way was ſmoothed for the deſtructive revolution that followed in thoſe countries. But that ſuch diabolical principles ſhould have found their way to the peaceful cotages of our iſland, would to me have remained a matter of doubt and aſtoniſhment, had not this unnatural rebellion and developement of facts by the late trials in this capital, proved it beyond a doubt. If then, my lords, liberty and equality have any uſeful and rational influence among men, where are to be found ſo eminently conſpicuous as in Great Britain and Ireland, where integrity, talents and induſtry are infalliable guides, from the loweſt offices in the community to the higheſt honors in the ſtate; and where the juſt equality of our laws protects the meaneſt as well as the higheſt of his majeſty's ſubjects? Is it for anarchy, miſery and the guilotine, that our deluded people would change thoſe bleſſings? God forbid. They have only to take a view of the conduct of the French towards every other nation who were deluded to admit them into their country as friends, to make them recoil from their deſtructive connexion, and ſhudder at the danger they have eſcaped, by the power of Great Britain, preſerving them from the hoſtile and cruel invaſion of every thing that is dear to man. The people of Holland and Flanders welcomed them as friends and deliverers, but having had a fatal trial of French fraternity, by which means they have been deprived, not only of their wealth, but of their commerce alſo, the great ſource of it, now ſigh for their ancient government, but ſigh in vain. In Italy have they not plundered its inhabitants of every thing that was valuable, and turned out of his capital as a wandering beggar, at the age of eighty, a venerated old man, and one for whom the French nation, as well as the majority of the people of this country, had once a very high veneration? How have they treated the Americans, with whom they were in ſtrict alliance? They have, contrary to the faith of nations, detained in their ports, under various frivolous pretences, above two hundred of their ſhips; but above all, has not their conqueſt of Switzerland made them infamous in the eyes of all Europe; being in ſtrict alliance with them, and a republic glorying in liberty and equality; but ſtill more in a faithful adherence to their treaties at all times; have they not, I ſay, been plundered by the French of every thing they poſſeſſed, even that ſecura quies et veſcia fallere vita, which, they fondly hoped, the ſituation of their country, joined to their irreproachable conduct, would have ſecured to them? To this perfidious nation, our wretched and deluded countrymen are taught to look up for aſſiſtance, by their cruel and artful leaders. I ſincerely hope they will now ſee their error, and fly to embrace that mercy which our beloved ſovereign now offers to them. I thought it my duty, my lords, to ſay thus much; and though I feel, my lords, I have ſomewhat treſpaſſed on the indulgence of the houſe, yet I am induced to hope you will forgive it on account of the motives that led to it.

DUBLIN, Auguſt 1.

The rebel banditti which, but a few weeks ſince, were compoſed of a body at Viniger hill, of 15,000 ſtrong; at Lauſinghton hill, of 15,000; at the town of Wexford and its vicinity, near the ſea ſide, of 8,000; and at Enniſcorthy, Carnew, and other parts of the county of Wexford, to about 10,000 more, independent of the numerous borders in the counties of Kildare, Wicklow, Carlow, Meath, the Queen's county, &c. are now reduced to parties of plundering marauders, from 30 to 60 in number; ſome of which have long before this time been cut to pieces and others ſeperating and accepting the terms of pardon already graciouſly proffered. So much for rebellion in its former and preſent ſtate, and thus are its purpoſes entirely bliſted.

Thurſday laſt, a detachment of the Kilkithen cavalry commanded by lieut. Fitzgerald, brought into Limerick from Ennis, and lodged in gaol. Wm. Pilkington, Wm. Walſh, John Allen, Pat. Power, Francis Taylor and John Enrich, all of whom had been tried and convicted of being defenders, and are to be tranſported to the Weſt-Indies.

30 perſons convicted of rebellious practices, were yeſterday put on board one of the tenders.

KILKENNY, Aug. 6.

The detachments from this garriſon which marched on Tueſday evening againſt the deluded inſurgents, who had aſſembled at Nine-mile houſe, returned here on Wedneſday, after an ineffectual but fatiguing purſuit—they having diſperſed upon hearing the approach of the army. With infinite pleaſure we add, that numbers of theſe deluded people have ſince come to a proper ſenſe of their danger and delufion, and have laid down their arms on Thurſday to the commanding officer at Callan, under the proclamation, and obtained protections.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 20.

Arrived, brig Regent, capt. Potts, from Madeira, which he left the 16th of Aug. who has politely furniſhed us with the following articles:

The day he left Madeira, an American brig arrived there from Malaga which bro't the news of gen. Buonaparte, with his fleet and army, being blockaded in the iſland of Malta, and that it was expected he would be obliged to ſurrender to admiral Nelſon, whoſe ſquadron conſiſted of 18 ſail of the line, beſides frigates. The intelligence was received at Malaga by Genoeſe ſhip, which the captain had made oath to be the truth.

Cadiz continues to be blockaded by admiral Jarvis' fleet, conſiſting of about 20 ſail of the line.

Breſt is alſo blockaded by the channel fleet under admiral Bridport.

Sir Sidney Smith is cruizing on the French coaſt with a ſmall ſquadron, and committing great havoc.

BOSTON, Sept. 25.

A braſs cannon foundary is eſtabliſhed at Exeter, by the gov. of New-Hampſhire.

The American conſul at Havannah has received information, that the French are ordered to take, burn, ſink or deſtroy American veſſels.

We are happy to hear that Mr. Liſton, the Britiſh miniſter, near the United States, and admiral Vendepot, the commander on the Halifax ſtation, have evidenced a diſpoſition to make arrangements for furniſhing convoys for the American trade to Europe.—The intention of theſe gentlemen to the welfare of our commerce is deſerving of encomium.

The virus of inſurrection, is at work in Kentucky, and Mr. Fowler, the repreſentative is nominated the victim.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24.

We are happy in being able this day to preſent our readers with intereſting marine intelligence. Among the moſt pleaſing, is the arrival of the frigate United States, on the 20th inſt. at New-Caſtle, in ten days from Porto Rico. The United States captured in the Weſt-Indies a ſchr. of 12 guns and 87 men; both belonging to Guadaloupe.—The Delaware ſloop of war is below with both the prizes.

BOSTON, Oct. 3.

London papers were received by the Sophia, to Aug. 16; two days later than we received on Tueſday. They contain no news. Buonaparte had not been heard of after he left Malta.

Gen. Pinckney we underſtand, was to leave Bourdeaux, about the time Mr. Gerry left Havre.

An embargo on all American veſſels has taken place in France. We do not underſtand that their number is conſiderable.

Three frigates, the Concorde, the Medea, and the Francois, with 1500 troops, have ſailed from Bourdeaux, ſome ſay to Ireland, others for the Weſt Indies.

The embargo on American veſſels in France, is enforced with great ſeverity; and our sailors are imprisoned. Retaliation on Frenchmen in the United States, ought immediately to be adopted.

The voluntary subscription in Barbadoes for carrying on the war against France, amounts to 13,400l. sterling.

The Jacobin paper of Massachusettes, called the "Independent Chronicle," having announced that the French had appointed a new consul, to reside in Boston, the "Columbian Centinel" has made the following pithy remarks on the Chronicle news:

"If instead of consuls, the French republic, "always generous to her friends," should have sent to the United States fifteen seam loads, each as heavy as a load of cyder, of Spanish Mexican dollars, as an installment of her debt to us, they would be more acceptable than as many consuls as would block up the cataract at Niagara. We want no consuls, we want restitution. They must give it, or we must take it, where we can find it."

IMPORTANT.

At length public expectation recives gratification on the interesting subject of European politics. Yesterday by the ship Fanny, in 48 days from Greenock, we have received English papers to the 10th of August. The first thing that strikes us, is what relates to Mr. Gerry. He received passports from the French government, on the 25th of July, on the delivery of which Mr. Talleyrand took occasion to send him another long and insidious letter, in which he throws the whole blame of the failure of the negociation on the insincerity of the American government. Every article of European intelligence breathes war here, and among the continental powers. Ireland is reduced to tranquility, and promises, contrary to predictions, abundant harvests. England remains calm and dignified in the midst of splendid successes. Buonaparte in all probability, is in the hands of the gallant Nelson. The flame of war is lighting up its all devouring fires, and every where we see omens of a general and dreadful conflagration. The Austrians have resolved to refuse assent to the insolent and exorbitant demands of the haughty and venal Directory. Sweden is mustering her forces and brightening her armor. Prussia is no longer pursuing a temporising and short sighted policy. Russia has dispatched to the aid of England one squadron, by the Baltic, and another by the Euxine, very opportunely, to share in the total overthrow of the boasted conquerer of Assia. Naples we fear is swallowed up in the Vesuvian vortex of the French revolution; but we detain the public curiosity from the interesting details of these and other important occurrence.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, November 17.

Last Monday a commission of Oyer and Terminer and general gaol delivery for the Home district, was held in this town, at which the hon. chief justice Elmsley presided, who, after an excellent charge to the grand jury, adjourned the court to next morning at ten o'clock, when the following persons were brought to court and put on their trial, viz. Michael Dun, James M'Lean, William Hawkins, and Joseph M'Carthy, for robbing the camp, or temporary hut of Mr. Elisha Beaman, erected on the beach, oppofite Meffrs. Allen and Wood's ftore, on the 26th of July laft, of ſeveral articles, his property. Witneſſes being examined on both ſides, the jury withdrew, and after deliberating for about half an hour, brought in the following verdict:—Michael Dun and James M'Lean, Not Guilty; William Hawkins, Guilty of petty larceny.—Hawkins received ſentence to be publicly whipped in the town of York, on Monday the 26th inſt.

Joſeph M'Carthy, being indicted for grand larceny, pleaded guilty, and received ſentence to be burned in the hand.

James Williams, who was alſo indicted for being concerned in the above robbery, turned approver, and was pardoned.

LONDON, Auguſt 21.

Landing of Buonaparte at Alexandria.

Star-Office, 5 o'clock P. M.

WE ſtop the preſs to announce that a report is current that the French general, Buonaparte, has made good his landing at Alexandria, with 15,000 men, not having been come up with by admiral Nelſon. This intelligence government received by private letters brought by the Hamburgh mail which arrived laſt night.

Since writing the above article, we have been favored with the following, dated

East-India House, August 21.

By a letter from Mr. Tooke, the East-India company's agent at Conſtantinople, dated July 23, it appeals by the report of the captain of the port of Alexandria, who eſcaped from thence to Cyprus, from whence he has forwarded a diſpatch to conſtantinople, that Buonaparte actually diſembarked at Alexandria, on or about the 8th of July, from 15 to 20,000 men, and that he met with little or no reſiſtance from the Turks. Buonaparte's fleet, ſhips of war and tranſports, is ſtated to be near 500 ſail."

Manſion-Houſe, Auguſt 24.

The following is a copy of a letter received this day by the lord Mayor:

My Lord,

I have the honor to acquaint your lordſhip, by command of the lord lieut. that intelligence is juſt received, that on the evening of the 22d. inſt. a ſmall French ſquadron, conſiſting as is ſtated, of four ſhips, has appeared in the bay of Lillada, and landed part of their men; the amount of this force is not yet aſcertained.

I am at the ſame time to acquaint your lordſhip, that a ſquadron of his Majeſty's ſhips, conſiſting of a line of battle ſhip and five frigates, are cruizing off the N. W. coaſt, and there is good reaſon to hope they will fall in with the enemy. I have the honor to be, &c. CASTLEREAGH.

September 8.

This day two mails arrived from Hamburgh, brought over in the Carteret packet, capt. Hammond, and the Prince of Wales, capt. Heurn. Our commercial readers will rejoice to hear that the balance of trade is ſo much in our favor that hardly a packet arrives without conſiderable remittances in ſpecie.—Theſe two packets have brought over nearly 100,000l.

The Defeat of Buonaparte.

This morning two of the Hamburgh mails that were due, reached town.—They contain from a variety of places, accounts of an action having actually taken place between the Engliſh and French fleets in the Mediterranean.—Articles from Naples of the 31ſt July, from Leghorn of the 3d, Florence of the 5th, from Venice of the 4th Auguſt and from Trieſte of the ſame date, all concur in the ſame account, that on the 5th of July, Sir Horatio Nelſon, with 13 ſhips of the line, came up with the French fleet, conſiſting of 17 ſhips of the line, off Candia, and that a bloody battle enſued. The circumſtances that are related in theſe accounts agree exactly with thoſe in the articles which we have in our Gazette of the 10th inſtant. The article from Venice of the 11th ſays briefly, that the account of the ſea action is confirmed.

Articles from Conſtantinople and Smyrna, however, poſitively aſſert, that Buonaparte landed on the 8th at Alexandria, the very day on which the deciſive action is ſtated to have taken place. This ſeems merely a repetition of the firſt account which we had ſome time ago of this event, and which we are inclined to think not of ſufficient authority to counter-balance the repeated accounts which we have ſubſequently had, of an action having taken place between the two fleets.

The accounts ſtate, that 7 ſhips of the line and 37 tranſports fell into the hands of the Engliſh, and that both admiral ſhips were ſunk.

Private letters from Italy, received this morning, further ſtate, that ſeveral French ſhips had reached Civita Vecchia, at which place they had landed an immenſe number of wounded men.

Letters from Hamburgh of the 28th ult. are likewiſe filled with accounts of the engagement; but theſe are doubtleſs founded upon the details from Italy, which we have noticed above.

To the conſideration and judgment of our readers we commit the contending accounts, expreſſing merely our own confident hope, that the intereſting details from the ports of Italy will very ſpeedily be confirmed by poſitive and official information.

Private letters from Ireland of the 6th inſt. ſay, the landing of the French has cauſed the moſt violent ferment through the country. Notwithſtanding the pains taken to conceal it, the fact is too notorious and public not to be almoſt generally known. In the town of Roſcrea, yeſterday, many Roman Catholics of wealth and eminence were put under arreſt, and a guard fixed on their houſes. In the counties of Roſcommon and Leitrim, the inſurgents have cut down many trees, for the purpoſe of making pikes. In the county of Weſtmeath, the inſurgents had an action on Tueſday laſt with ſeveral yeomanry corps, they have ſeized on a depot of fire arms in a large building, called Wilſon's Hoſpital. The defeat or capture of the French force oppoſed to lord Cornwallis, will, I truſt, effectually cruſh thoſe rebellious movements, the baneful effects of which are felt ſeverely all over the kingdom, particularly in the capital, where ſcarcely any buſineſs unconnected with the war department, is going on.

The death of Mr. Oliver Bond, at 5 o'clock this morning, has furniſhed matter of much exultation (publicly exhibited all day) to the Orange crew of this city. He never was in better health than yeſterday; played ſeveral games at rackets in the priſon yard; ſupped at night with Mr. Nelſon (with whom he ſlept) on cold mutton, and went to bed perfectly temperate. In the morning, between 4 and 5, having occaſion to riſe from his bed, he was in the act of ſtepping out of his room, when he fell back, and inſtantly expired. Thus untimely has fallen the man, to ſave whoſe life principally (and not to ſave their own, as has been unjuſtly ſtated) the leaders of the Iriſh Union entered into the agreement with government. On this ſubject much, too much miſrepreſentation has taken place, ariſing, I will allow, not from any wiſh to miſrepreſent, but from a want of that information, which, in times like the preſent, it is impoſſible to acquire.

From his excellency no deciſive news has yet tranſpired. Ten days has now elapſed ſince the action at Caſtlebar; and if you believe the official accounts, not a ſhot has been ſince fired. From many concurring circumſtances, however, I am led to believe, that ſeveral partial engagements have really taken place. It is evident that the object of the enemy is to avoid an engagement, if poſſible, till they either receive a reinforcement, or ſufficiently drill and diſcipline the rebels who have joined them. By the laſt intelligence received, it appeared they were endeavouring to penetrate into the county of Roſcommon—that in their progreſs they had rendered all the roads impaſſable to the army which might purſue them; but before they can effect their object, they will have to encounter gen. Taylor, who has a large force under him, ſhould they elude the vigilance of lord Cornwallis. At all events, the delay (very unexpectedly indeed) which has taken place in this buſineſs, has ſpread a gloom through the city, and occaſioned the moſt diſagreeable conjectures, which are much heightened by the accounts hourly arriving of the diſturbed ſtate of almoſt every part of the country.

The Galway mail, which arrived this day, brings an account of another engagement in the county of Weſtmeath yeſterday evening with the rebels, near Mullingar, wherein, after a very warm conteſt, they were defeated with conſiderable loſs. They hold a very ſtrong poſition which they occupy at Wilſon's Hoſpital. The town of Newtown Forbes, it is reported, has been attacked by the rebels.

Many letters have been received in town, confirming that the rebels have riſen in conſiderable force in the counties of Weſtmeath and Longford, and that a battle was yeſterday fought at or near Mullingar, between the rebels and a body of yeomanry, &c. the event of which was doubtful when the meſſenger came away.

September 10.

The foreign letters in the Courier of Saturday, left ſcarce any doubt of the falſehood of the accounts circulating all over Europe, of an engagement having taken place in the Mediterranean between the Britiſh and French fleets.—On the ſame evening we publiſhed a ſecond edition, ſtating the arrival of diſpatches to government, which confirm the important intelligence we firſt communicated to the public of the arrival of Buonaparte at Alexandria, and the return of admiral Nelſon to Sicily.

Letters from Sir Morton Eden, at Vienna, and Sir William Hamilton, at Naples, were received on Saturday at Lord Grenville's office. Theſe accounts contain information of Sir Horatio Nelſon's appearing off Salonica on the 19th of July [14 days ſince the ſuppoſed victory,] without having fallen in with the French fleet. They further ſtate that the Britiſh fleet was at Syracuſe on the 22d of July, and that it was to put to ſea on the 27th and proceed once more to the Eaſtward in queſt of the Toulon fleet.

Letters containing the ſame intelligence have alſo been received by lady Nelſon from ſir Horatio, dated Syracuſe, 22d July, and though it is poſitively aſſerted by moſt of the morning papers, that no advices have been received at the Admiralty from the Mediterranean fleet, we think it very improbable that the Britiſh admiral ſhould neglect to ſend an official account of his operations; but perhaps the etiquette of the ſervice requires, that the diſpatches to the Admiralty ſhould be tranſmitted through the medium of lord St. Vincent, which may account for the delay.

The fleet under the command of admiral Nelſon, having been reinforced by the Portugueſe ſquadron, and the Lion of 64 guns, now conſiſts of 19 ſail of the line and ten frigates.

The Hamburgh mail due on Wedneſday laſt, arrived yeſterday, and brought further details reſpecting the arrival in Egypt of the French troops commanded by Buonaparte, though the preciſe time of their landing at Alexandria ſtill admits of ſome doubt.

The Brunn Gazette of the 22d ult. ſtates, that Buonaparte, immediately after taking poſſeſſion of Alexandria, ſent a note to the Turkiſh government, in which he declared that he would conſider any permiſſion that might be granted for a Ruſſian fleet to paſs through the Dardanelles as the ſignal of a declaration of war by the Porte againſt France; that he expected the Porte would reſiſt ſuch a demand with all her force, and that he placed the more reliance on this proof of friendſhip, as he had delivered the Porte from her ancient and inveterate enemies, the Knights of Malta.

September 11.

The Hamburgh mail due on Sunday laſt arrived this morning.

The letters from Leghorn repeat the intelligence, which is now no longer doubted, of the return of admiral Nelſon to Syracuſe (in Sicily) and the ſafe arrival of the French fleet at its deſtination.

September 12.

A letter from Vienna, of a recent date ſtates—The Pruſſian miniſtry are ſaid to require a categorical anſwer from the French miniſter, Sieyes, to this queſtion—"Does the Directory intend to take general Koſciuſko, the chief of the Poliſh revolution, under their protection?"

It appears by the Hamburgh mail, that on the 2d of September, the news of the landing had reached Hamburgh, and doubtleſs by this time the Directory muſt have heard of it.

According to letters from Palermo, in Sicily, a Spaniſh flotilla is arrived there, commanded by the Marquis De Spinola.

Admiral Nelſon has again made his appearance, juſt at the time when nobody thought any thing about him.—The ſeven hundred men in Ireland have engaged all attention, ſo that there was none to ſpare for the Mediterranean.—The means of attacking, ſurrounding, and defeating this immenſe army engroſſes all ſpeculation, and nobody has time to aſk how Nelſon miſſed Buonaparte.

Sunday morning a gentleman in an official ſituation in the office of the ſecretary of ſtate for the war department, was ſent off with letters to Mr. Dundas, who is on a viſit to Scotland. Theſe letters are ſuppoſed to relate to the landing of Buonaparte at Alexandria, and the meaſures to be purſued in conſequence.

September 13.

The following letter has been received from the Poſtmaſter at Hamburgh, by a gentleman in an official ſituation:

Hamburgh, Auguſt 21.

Dear Sir,

Many reports are in circulation here concerning a very bloody engagement which is ſaid to have happened between admiral Nelſon and Buonaparte, near Alexandria.

The Engliſh conſul at Leghorn has announced a capital victory on the ſide of Nelſon over the French; and the French conſul at the ſame time obſerved a profound ſilence.

There is even intelligence by a private letter from a gentleman of conſequence at Florence, in which it is ſaid Buonaparte is entirely defeated, and made priſoner.

I remain, &c.

ALBANY, October 29.

IMPORTANT.

Our Philadelphia papers, by this morning's mail, contain a variety of late intelligence from Europe, received by an arrival at Norfolk, in a ſhort paſſage from England—We ſtop the preſs to inſert the following:

MILAN, Aug. 9.

According to our gazettes, it has been diſcovered that one Cinno was the perſon who at Leghorn, invented and circulated the ſtory of the ſea engagement between the Engliſh and French fleets, in which Buonaparte was made priſoner, and 7 French ſhips of the line were taken. This report, which has cauſed much alarm throughout Italy, is now declared by our gazettes to be totally without foundation. On the contrary, they aſſert that a merchant ſhip, which arrived at Leghorn, brings intelligence that the Toulon convoy had arrived ſafely, part at Alexandria and part at Alexandretta, (Scarderoon, the port of Aleppo.)—Theſe places are about 200 leagues diſtant from each other, and it ſeems ſomewhat improbable that the arrival of the French ſhips at Alexandria, in Syria, ſhould be heard of at Naples, as ſoon as the arrival of the others in Egypt. It is however, confidently aſſerted, that Buonaparte, when off Candia, divided his convoy into two parts, one of which ſailed for Syria, and the other for Egypt. It is alſo ſaid, that the troops landed in Egypt, will, on their arrival at Suez find 200 veſſels completely equipped to carry them, their artillery and ammunition, down the Red Sea, and that by the end of December the whole army of Buonaparte will be in India!

DUBLIN, SEPT. 1.

It will be recollected, that the French admiral Richery was ſtated, ſome months ſince, to have ſailed from one of the channel ports with a ſquadron of three ſhips of the line and fome frigates, bound, as was then fuppofed, and we fear, with fome probability, that this fquadron was deſtined to occupy the mouth of the ſtraits of Babelmandel, by which the Red ſea enters into the Indian ocean, and that Richery has there collected veſſels ſufficient for the tranſport of Buonaparte's army.

SALEM, September 11.

Capt. Samuel Townſend arrived on Sunday from Cape Nicola Mole. We learn that while he lay there, the Brigands from the mountains furiouſly aſſaulted the town, and carried it after a vigorous defence. It was, however, retaken by the Britiſh in a few hours afterwards, with a great loſs on the ſide of the victors. The aſſaults are ſo frequent from the Brigands, that the town is almoſt untenable, and the Britiſh have ſerious thoughts of abandoning it.

Accounts from the Weſt Indies, ſtill continue confirmatory of the aſſertion, that in caſe of a declaration of war between France and the United States, the French iſlands will declare themſelves independent of the mother country.

From the Columbian Centinel of September 15.

The American conſul at the Havantah has purchaſed from the Spaniſh government, on account of the United States, an 18 gun ſhip, with brafs artillery. She is to be commanded by capt. Preble, and manned from the American ſhipping there.

Capt. Johnſon, from Gibraltar, left there the 26th July. At that time no accounts of any action between Nelſon and Buonaparte had been received: nor was it known where the fleets were.—The French frigate captured was conjectured to be worth 2,000,000l. She has been manned with prime ſailors, and ſent to England.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday. November 24.

During the late heavy gales of wind which we have had, a veſſel loaded with ſundry goods was drove on ſhore at the Meſſiſague Point at Newark; and another veſſel belonging to this town, was drove on a place called the Ducks, where ſhe received conſiderable damage.

European News.

STRASBURGH, Auguſt 20.

HOSTILITIES will commence in a few days. Our garriſon, compoſed of 10,000 men, have received orders to prepare for croſſing the Rhine.—The engineers are employed upon the plan of camp at Rehl: 60,000 men are ready on the upper Rhine, under the command of Lefebre; they are going to paſs the Rhine alſo. All the French deputation that was at Raſtadt is upon its return hither: Bonnier and his two ſecretaries are ſtill at Raſtadt. Bonnier has declared to the princes, that thoſe who fought a ſeparate peace ſhall furniſh men, and march againſt the emperor. The deſign is to republicanize all the countries between the Rhine and the Danube. All Europe is in fermentation. The emperor means to attack at the ſame time, Switzerland by the Vateline and the country of the Griſons; France by Kehl and Mentz; and Italy by Mantua. Prince Charles is appointed generaliſſimo of the imperial troops. General Devins has witneſſed the Cordon of Hungary, where he is eſtabliſhing an army to watch the motions of Paſwan Oglou, who is advancing againſt Belgrade, and making an aſtoniſhing progreſs on the Danube, where his ſtrength is continually increaſing, by means of his exact diſcipline and punctual payment of his troops. The king of Pruſſia demanded the neutrality of Germany in the event of a new war between France and Auſtria. But Sieyes anſwered, "the emperor wiſhes for war," he ſhall have it, but the French directory cannot agree to any other neutrality pointed out by the preſent demarcation. Pruſſia perſiſts in demanding from Auſtria an indemnification for the expenſes of the ſiege of Mentz, and the demand is countenanced. We are aſſured the kings of Pruſſia, Sweden and Denmark will preſerve an armed neutrality.—The emperor of Ruſſia and the king of England have emiſſaries at all the courts of Europe for the purpoſe of effecting a coalition againſt France and the other republics.

VIENNA, Aug. 15.

Several Greek commercial houſes here have received letters from Conſtantinople, of the date of the 25th of July, which give a circumſtancial account of the landing of the French at Alexandria, which took place without oppoſition. Buonaparte immediately publiſhed a proclamation to the inhabitants, in which he promiſed them his friendſhip and protection, ſo long as they ſhould attempt nothing againſt the French; but threatened them with the ſevereſt vengeance in caſe of oppoſition.

SMYRNA, July 28.

The ſquadron under the command of gen. Buonaparte arrived on the 6th inſt. at Alexandria in Egypt: when the general landed his troops and took poſſeſſion of the town.

Paris, Aug. 10. Very bad news has been received from the Iſle of France. It is not yet known what is the reſiſtance of it, but it is feared that one party in the iſland were diſpoſed to ſurrender to the Britiſh.

Letters from Peterſburgh, dated July 12, ſtate, that the preparations for war are carrying on in that country with the greateſt activity, both in the ports and the arſenals. Troops in conſiderable numbers are ordered to march towards the Boriſthenes and the Crimea. It is ſaid that a new coalition is to be formed againſt liberty.

Venice, Aug. 17. The Engliſh ſquadron continue to blockade Breſt with a ſtrong ſquadron. It is anchored in the roads of Uſhant. An uninterrupted chain of ſhips is ſtationed from the iſland of Uſhant to Roz, ſo that all attempts on our part to get out are vain.

According to the lateſt diſpatches from the interior of Germany, the Auſtrian army, commanded by gen. Staadet, is about to move from the banks of the Leck, where it is at this moment, towards Franconia, and that its head quarters will be eſtabliſhed at Wurtemburgh. On the other ſide a conſiderable body of Auſtrian troops has entered into Swabia. The ſame account adds, that a body of 15,000 Saxon troops is about to join the army of the Empire, and that 60,000 Ruſſians are on their march for Bohemia.

Vienna, Aug. 25. It is confidently aſſerted here that the court of Ruſſia has concluded an alliance with the Porte, and that a great body of Ruſſian troops is on its march for the Turkiſh frontiers.

BERLIN, Auguſt 14.

Extract of a letter from Conſtantinople, dated the 25th July.

"A circumſtance as unforeſeen as extraordinary, will explain how far the public, the foreign miniſters, and the government may be deceived reſpecting the intelligence of the diſembarkation of the French at Alexandria. This circumſtance is confirmed by a Turk who eſcaped at the moment of the criſis.

"An Imperial veſſel which left Alexandria on the 30th of June, and which anchored yeſterday in our port, brought official letters which announce, that on the 28th June, an Engliſh ſquadron, conſiſting of 7 ſhips of the line and 7 frigates and a brig, appeared in ſight off Alexandria, the inhabitants ſuppoſing them to be French, ſet themſelves immediately to diſarm all the merchant ſhips, and to tranſport the artillery which they contained to the ramparts which defend the two ports. The Engliſh admiral, in ſpite of his flag, had conſiderable difficulty in making the batteries become ſilent, which was only effected by a flag of truce. The object was to learn whether the city of Alexandria was favourably diſpoſed towards the plan of the French in the invaſion of Egypt, and whether it was informed of the French fleet having ſailed from Toulon? To the firſt point it was anſwered, that the people of Alexandria were reſolved to oppoſe every diſembarkation of the French troops; and as to the ſecond, the deputies of the city could give no ſort of intelligence. The Engliſh admiral ſet ſail on the following day, to go in purſuit of the enemy. The journal of the voyage of the Imperial captain, ſtates, that he met the ſame Engliſh ſquadron bearing towards the iſland of Candia."

By this authentic report, it may be ſeen, that the appearance of the Britiſh ſquadron may have been taken for that of an enemy, and may have given riſe to the premature news of a deſcent effected by the French, and that the obſcure and confuſed recital of the Turk who arrived at Cyprus, may be erroneous in the dates. There is, however, as yet, no actual certainty that the French did not take poſſeſſion of Alexandria on the 8th July. A knowledge of the Mediterranean, of the winds which prevail there at this time of the year, and of the courſes which the two ſquadrons held, will eaſily lead us to a concluſion on theſe points. It appears that the Engliſh have conſtantly failed along the coaſts of Barbary in their way from Gibraltar to Egypt. The French, on the contrary, bore, upon quitting Malta, to the N. W. in order to catch the winds in the Adriatic Sea; and, from the heights of the firſt Venetian iſlands, they muſt have tacked about to ſail with the wind in their ſtern for Alexandria. It follows, therefore, the firſt having met with the Eaſterly winds which prevail on the coaſt of Barbary, and the French thoſe of the North which blow from the gulph of Venice and the Archipelago, could never have been leſs than two degrees off one another. The Engliſh having touched at Alexandria the 28th June, it is eaſy to conceive the French ſhips of war, obliged to convoy near 500 ſhips, and expoſed to calms, might not have reached Egypt at that time. It is alſo eaſily to be ſuppoſed that the Engliſh admiral, who, in order to gain Rhodes, could not manœuvre in any other manner than by bearing for Caramania, muſt have avoided the French ſquadron which was approaching Egypt, as he receded from it. So that the non-appearance of the French at Alexandria until the 28th of June, on which day the Imperial veſſel ſailed from that port, by no means deſtroyed the probability of the French having diſembarked on the 8th of July, as the Imperial veſſel being deſtined for Conſtantinople, ſailed on the ſame tack as the Engliſh.

Paris, Aug. 22. The king of Naples, after the example of Paul I. has forbidden all ſtrangers to enter his dominions.

The court of Ruſſia has notified to the Divan that it muſt declare either for or againſt France, as Ruſſia cannot conſent to any neutrality. The report of a Ruſſian ſquadron having paſſed the Dardanelles, is renewed. It is thought that the Ruſſian force in the Black Sea conſiſts of fifteen ſhips of the line, 12 frigates and 3 cutters.

LONDON, September 13.

The French ſpeak of no leſs than 3 naval expeditions which they are now preparing.—We rejoice to hear it, for we know that our fleets are perfectly prepared to meet them.

We lament to have to ſtate the deſtruction of another of the India Company's ſhips by lightning. This melancholy event is thus mentioned in the laſt accounts from Bengal: The Royal Charlotte and Britannia lay at anchor at Culpee, three or four cables length aſunder, each having about 500 barrels of gun-powder on board as part of their cargoes to the Cape. A thunder ſtorm ariſing, the crew of the Britannia were employed in putting wet ſwabs around the foremaſt and pumps, when they were ſtunned by the exploſion of the Royal Charlotte, and covered with the fragments of the wreck. Every ſoul on board, to the number of 140 periſhed. Amongſt the gun-ner were Mr. Stoddard, chief mate; Mr. Bernard, ſecond; Mr. Miſſing, fourth; Mr. Saunders, pilot; Mr. Guthrie, carpenter; Thos. Collins, captain's ſteward; Stephen Collins, a Portugueſe; a cook; 75 laſcars, and about 50 women and children. The ſhock was diſtinctly heard at Calcutta, a diſtance of 50 miles, and the ring of one of her anchors, and a copper bolt, were found about three miles from where the ſhip lay.

At a moment when every eye is fixed on the cabinet of Berlin, and when the ſide it is to take muſt have ſo much influence over the deſtinies of Europe, it cannot be unintereſting to know what is at preſent the military eſtabliſhment of that country. The late review and muſter of the Pruſſian army, make it amount to 345,000 effective men, among which are nearly 40,000 cavalry, and 12,000 artillery-men. They are to be augmented by eight battalions and one of huſſars, to be raiſed in ci-devant Poland.

Tom Paine has found out a new ſcene at Paris for the diſplay of his talents.—He is become an eminent preacher among the Theophilanthropiſts, and lately delivered a ſermon in the Temple of Reaſon that laſted upwards of an hour.

Letters from Paris of the 30th of July, give reaſon to believe, that another revolution is preparing there. The Jacobins have not forgiven the Directory their laſt expulſion from the councils, and they are ſtirring up all their friends to change the face of affairs. They have began to attack the Directory by a motion in the Council of Five Hundred, to deprive them of their power over the Journaliſts. This motion will probably be carried in one of the firſt ſittings.—The Directory, on their ſide, follow their old maxim, and put to death a great number of royaliſts, in order to frighten the Jacobins.

The armies quarrel about the word citizen and monſieur. Some ſoldiers will not give up the monſieur, others will be called citizens. At Evreux, in Normandy, the firſt regiment of dragoons having quarrelled with the municipality, was ordered to depart. They obeyed the ſummons; but when they ſet off a great number of ſoldiers cried, Vive le Roi! God ſave Louis XVIII! They have not been puniſhed. The armies are very much in want of recruits, but nothing can induce the citizens returned to their homes to rejoin. The miniſter at war complains of it very bitterly.

United States.

NEW YORK, October 15.

Capt. Ward, of the ſhip Argus, in 26 days from Bourdeaux, relates the following, on which the moſt implicit reliance may be placed.

That the three frigates, which had landed 1100 men in Ireland, had returned and put into Bourdeaux, on their way to Rochfort, from whence they ſailed—they were under command of Savory. Two other diviſions, one from Dunkirk, and the other from Breſt, had failed on the ſame buſineſs, but it was not known whether they had ſucceeded.

Savory's diviſion, beſides the 1100 men, landed 4000 ſtands of arms, with a number of pieces of cannon, and 4000 complete dreſſes for troops. This news was communicated to captain Ward by the commandant (Savory) who had on board an Engliſh piquet guard, which they had taken by ſurprize, and a number of horſes, &c. a preſent from an Iriſh biſhop, for the ranſom of his ſon, whom they had alſo taken.

BOSTON, October 17.

Laſt night arrived here the ſhip Packet, capt. Trott, in 22 days from Liverpool.—By her we have received papers to the 13th of Sept. From them it will be ſeen that the poor devils of Frenchmen who have landed in Ireland, have met the fate they merited; and that the Iriſh inſurrection is, as it ought to be in the preſent ſituation of the world, ſuppreſſed.

OFFICIAL ACCOUNTS.

Copy of a letter from lieut. gen. Lake, to capt. Taylor, private ſecretary to his excellency the lord lieutenant, dated camp, near Ballinamack, September 8, 1798.

"I have the honor to acquaint you, for the information of his excellency the lord lieutenant, that finding upon my arrival at Ballaghy, that the French army had paſſed that place from Caſtlebar, I immediately followed them to watch their motions. Lieut. col. Crawford, who commanded my advanced corps compoſed of detachments of Hompeſch's and the firſt Fenſible cavalry, by great vigilance and activity hung ſo cloſe upon their rear, that they could not eſcape from me, altho' they drove the country, and carried with them all the horſes.

"After four days and nights moſt ſevere marching, my column, conſiſting of carabineers, detachments of the 23d light dragoons, the 1ſt Fencible light dragoons, and the Roxburgh Fencible dragoons, under the command of col. ſir Thomas Chapman, lieut. col. Maxwell, earl of Roden, and capt. Kerr; the 3d battalion of light infantry, the Armagh, and part of the Kerry militia, the Reay, Northampton, and Prince of Wales's Fencible regiments of infantry, under the command of lieut. col. Innes of the 64th regiment, ld. viſcount Goſford, earl of Glandore, major Roſs, lt. col. Bulkely, and lieut. col. Macartney, arrived at Cloone, about 7 o'clock this morning, where, having received directions to follow the enemy on the ſame line, whilſt his excellency moved by the lower road to intercept them, I advanced, having previouſly detached the Monaghan light company, mounted behind dragoons to harraſs their rear.

"Lieut. col. Crawford, on coming upon the French rear guard, ſummoned them to ſurrender; but as they did not attend to his ſummons, he attacked them, upon which upwards of two hundred French infantry threw down their arms, under the idea that the reſt of the corps would do the ſame thing; capt. Packenham, lieut. gen. Ordnance, and major gen. Cradock, made up to them. The enemy, however, inſtantly commenced a fire of cannon and muſquetry, which wounded gen. Cradock—upon which I ordered up the 3d battalion of light infantry, under lieut. col. Innes, and commenced the attack upon the enemy's poſition. The action laſted upwards of half an hour, when the remainder of the column making its appearance, the French ſurrendered at diſcretion. The rebels, who fled in all directions, ſuffered ſeverely."

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head quarters, near Johnſtown, Sept. 9.

Lord Cornwallis cannot too much applaud the zeal and ſpirit which has been manifeſted by the army, from the commencement of the operations againſt the invading enemy, until the ſurrender of the French forces.

The perſeverance with which the ſoldiers ſupported the extraordinary marches which were neceſſary to ſtop the progreſs of the very active enemy, does them the greateſt credit; and lord Cornwallis heartily congratulates them on the happy iſſue of their meritorious exertions.

The corps of yeomanry, in the whole country through which the army paſſed, have rendered the greateſt ſervices, and are peculiarly entitled to the acknowledgements of the lord lieutenant, from their not having tarniſhed that courage and loyalty which they diſplayed in the cauſe of their king and country, by any act of wanton cruelty towards their deluded fellow-ſubjects.

Ordnance, arms and ammunition taken.

3 light French 4 pounders.

5 do. ammunition waggons, nearly full of made up ammunition.

1 do. tumbril; 700 ſtand of arms, with belts and pouches; with a great number of pikes,

Lieut. Stephens of the Carbineers, wounded.

The audacious French, who, preſuming on the diſaffection of our countrymen, have dared to advance into the country, have given a notable ſpecimen of their cordiality to Iriſhmen.—Near Caſtlebar they ſeized a number of peaſants, for the purpoſe of obliging them to work at ſome trenches which they intended to throw up for temporary ſecurity. The countrymen remonſtrated againſt the labour intended for them, which had not even the colour of promiſed reward, to perſuade them. The French argument was however at laſt prevailing—the peasants were tied up and flogged until they consented to work.

TRIESTE, Aug. 8.

The complete destruction of the French fleet is confirmed by a number of late informations. The 4th of Aug. the English fleet overtook the French fleet in the waters of Candia.—Nelson having previously dispatched some of his vessels, had but 13 sail of the line; while Buonaparte's fleet consisted of 17. Two days the fleets were unable to come to action it being a dead calm. On the 8th the wind blowed fresh from the westward, when the English admiral broke the French line, and cut off 8 vessels, one of which was the admiral's vessel, the l'Orient, of 120 guns, on board of which was gen. Buonaparte. After a terrible battle in which Nelson was mortally wounded, the eight French vessels were taken, and Buonaparte had to deliver up to Nelson his sword, as a prisoner of war. When the English learned the death of their admiral they got enraged and no quarters were given; thus numbers of transport ships were sunk, the other flying French vessels were purfued, and the 11th of July the English effected a great destruction amongst them.

VENICE, Aug. 10.

Six French frigates, who escaped the fate of the Toulon fleet, have arrived at Morea, in a most shattered condition, and totally unfit for action. In other harbors of the Mediterranean, have likewise arrived several damaged French vessels of war. Some French vessels arrived at Candia, and all their crews and officers were immediately killed by the inhabitants.

Immediately after the action, the English took possession of the island of Carigo.

During the action, Buonaparte had 3 reinforcements of men brought on board the l'Orient, from which may be concluded how great the slaughter on board his ship must have been.

Buonaparte expressed himself frequently during the action, such a cannonade I did never hear in my life.—The misfortune of the French fleet may in a great measure, be ascribed to their vessels being manned with a rabble of Maltesians, Venitians, Romans, Cisalpins, &c. who, not knowing or minding their duty, thus contribute to the unsuccessful event.

Captains arrived this day from Zante, confirm the news of Nelson's victory over Buonaparte. This news has caused a revolution at Malta, Corfu, Zephalonia, and Zante.

August 11.

It is reported that the Maltesians have revolted against the French, and killed the greatest part of 7000 French inhabitants.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, December 1.

WE have been favored by a gentleman with several American papers, one as late as November 2d, from which we have taken our accounts respecting general Buonaparte;—One paragraph under the Trieste head, August 8, which confirms a former report contained in our Gazette of the 17th ult. of his being taken; and another, under the Vienna head, August 15th, which carries with it an unfavorable aspect, and says that he is landed in Alexandria, which is also mentioned in a paragraph inserted in our last week's paper, dated London, Sept. 13; three days later than any intelligence yet come to hand.—We have endeavored to give our readers every circumstance which has occurred to us, relative to the first and second reports, and shall leave them to place such a degree of confidence in the different accounts as they may think proper; but we cannot forbear wishing we had it in our power to authenticate the report of his being taken, a circumstance so satisfactory to every lover of humanity; as it would tend, in some measure, to the destruction of those blood-hounds who now sit at the head of affairs in France. And it is certain, that her internal enemies will, in a short time, assassinate them, as they are very little more admired at home than abroad. It is evident that France cannot long resist, for she has weakened herself in the extreme, by spreading her force over a surface too extensive for her to control. She is, even now, wavering, and trembles at her own shadow.

We are happy in being authorised to inform the public, that his Majesty has been graciously pleased to confirm the Marriage Act, which passed the two Houses of Legislature in the first Session of the present Provincial Parliament—and that the Act, with a Proclamation confirming it, will be very soon published.

Last Monday William Hawkins was publicly whipped, and Joseph M'Carthy burned in the hand, at the market place, pursuant to their sentence.

FOREIGN.

FRANKFORT, July 24.

THE Hungarian Gazette contains the following letter from Semlin (Turkey) dated July 9: "We have received from Belgrade the most disastrous accounts relative to the attack made on Widdin, on the 27th June. The captain Pacha, Osman Pacha, and Mustapha Pacha, in consequence of the orders they had received, endeavoured to carry Widdin by assault; they had succeeded in taking the lower city, when they were received by a fire of grape shot so strong and well directed that in a short time the field of battle was covered with dead bodies. Pafwan Oglou (the rebel in arms against the Ottoman government) then made a sally, which increased the confusion of the assailants, and the slaughter became dreadful. The Captain Pacha and Osman Pacha were killed, and Mustapha Pacha saved himself with the greatest difficulty. This first attempt could not have been more unfortunate; we are impatient to know its consequences.

SELIM, Aug. 8.

We are assured that Passwan Oglou makes no secret of his expecting powerful assistance; he has published a proclamation, stating that he expects Buonaparte, with an army of 100,000 men to raise the siege of Widdin.

LONDON, September 6.

THE secrecy with which the naval expedition was prepared, which sailed from the Nore on Sunday, affords another instance of the vigilance and judicious conduct of the admiralty board. It consists of two ships of the line, four frigates, eight bombs and five ships, with sloops, cutters, &c. Its destination was supposed to be the coast of Holland; in which case we have most anxiously to hope that it may not have incurred mischief from the gales which blew from the W. and S. W. in the course of yesterday and the preceding day. These may prevent the admiralty from having any immediate intelligence from the squadron.

The Jews, particularly those of Germany, insist that Buonaparte is Ben Joseph, the forerunner of the Messiah; as there is some reason to believe that the French have promised the Jews to reinstate them in the holy land. Were they really to make such a public declaration, there can be no doubt but that fanatic people would flock thither from all parts. The riches they would take with them would make Heral an excellent ally of the great nation, who would know how to dispose of it.

The Portuguese Jews are very angry with their brethren: they say they would rather have a house in Epping Forest than in Jerusalem, and that the English roast beef is better than the milk and honey of the land of Canaan.

September 9.

Yesterday morning two of the Hamburgh mails that were due reached this town. They contain, from a variety of places, accounts of an action having actually taken place between the English and French fleets in the Mediterranean. Articles from Naples of the 31st july, from Leghorn of the 3d, Florence of the 5th, from Venice of the 11th Aug. and from Trieste of the same date, all concur in the same account, that on the 9th July, sir Horatio Nelson with 13 ships of the line, came up to the French fleet, consisting of 17 ships of the line, off Candia, and that a most bloody battle ensued, which lasted 24 hours, and terminated highly to the advantage of the English, who captured seven ships of the line, and 37 transports. Admiral Nelson's ship was sunk, and himself wounded, and died two hours after being removed to the Culloden, capt. Trowbridge. The l'Orient, Buonaparte's ship, was also sunk, but the admiral and the whole of his staff were taken prisoners.

On the 11th ult. the Engliſh fleet again fell in with the remainder of the enemy, and took a great number more of the tranſports.

Thus far we have faithfully copied the above extracts from the German papers, and we can aſſure our readers that they differ very little in their relation. The Frankfort Journal ſays that Buonaparte was killed. The Florence account condemns the Engliſh for ſavage ferocity, ſaying, that on the 11th, when they again fell in with the ſhattered remains of the enemy, they gave no quarters, but ſunk the French tranſports indiſcriminately; and accounts for it by ſaying, the Engliſh tars were worked up to do ſo, by the loſs of their valliant commander.

Similar accounts appear in the Vienna papers.

Private letters from Italy, received yeſterday morning, further ſtate, that ſeveral French ſhips had reached Civita Vetchia, at which place they had landed an immenſe number of wounded men.

A Swiſs gentleman juſt arrived from Paris, ſtates, that every body in France and even the directory, are of opinion, that there has been a battle in the Mediterranean. They think it was about the 12th of July.

The laſt diſpatches received by the Ottoman miniſter at our court ſtate, that the arrival of Buonaparte in Egypt was no longer believed at Conſtantinople. The only intelligence they contained was, that a French frigate had appeared at Alexandria on the [illegible] of July, and the Engliſh fleet on the 5th.

It is to be noticed, that the laſt mails from Naples, which might contain ſome intelligence, have all been ſeized by the French in the Roman republic.

To the conſideration and judgment of our readers we commit theſe contending accounts, expreſſing merely our own confident hope, that the intereſting details from the ports of Italy, will very ſpeedily be confirmed by poſitive and official information.

The emperor of Germany is ſeriouſly indiſpoſed.

According to private letters, as well as the foreign articles in the Hamburgh mails, which arrived yeſterday, the emperor of Ruſſia ſeems determined to put the pacific profeſſions of the Turks and their diſclaiming any knowledge of Buonaparte's expedition, to a ſpeedy teſt: a Ruſſian fleet of 14 ſhips of the line, 13 frigates and 60 galleys, with land forces on board, have actually ſailed from the ports in the Crimea, for the Mediterranean ſea; and the refuſal or the admiſion of this fleet through the Dardenelles, will inevitably become the ſignal for peace or war with the Porte.

Dutch papers received yeſterday, two days later than the Hamburgh journal, repreſent the higheſt degree of alarm as exiſting among the Hollanders in general, under the immediate apprehenſion of the landing of the Engliſh and the Ruſſians; in conſequence of theſe rumours, Bruſſels was lately left without a ſingle ſoldier in it.

The French directory have been obliged to yield to the united repreſentations of the Daniſh, Pruſſian, Swediſh and Spaniſh miniſters, relative to their former treatment of neutral veſſels, which is to undergo a completé re-modification. All the French privateers in the Mediterranean are called in.

The Poliſh general, Dombrowiky is on his way to Paris to pay a viſit to Koſciuſko. The Italian papers ſay, the French army of Italy is to be augmented to 100,000 men, and that in Switzerland to 50,000. With other meaſures of defence the king of Naples has ordered a monthly payment out of the treaſury to the war miniſter, of one million of ducats.

Accounts of a new rupture between Naples and France, increaſe. In a great council of ſtate lately held at Naples, it was reſolved to reinforce the army, haſten the preparations for war, and give orders to the miniſter of finance to have ready a million of ducats monthly, for the uſe of the miniſter of war.

Accounts from Madrid mention that citizen Guillemardet, has made ſome repreſentations againſt the reception of the POPE in Spain—and further propoſed that in caſe of his demiſe, the head of the church ſhall be transferred to a council to be elected by the conſuls and people of Rome.

The German letters are filled with accounts of the movements of troops; and one of them ſtates a circumſtance, which is nearly equivalent to a declaration of war between France and Auſtria;—that ſeveral diſtricts of the Griſons had claimed the protection of Auſtria againſt the French: that the Auſtrian troops had, in conſequence, entered Coire, and the French reſident quitted it.

United States.

PHIDADELPHIA, October 19.

Sir Richard Strachan, a gallant Scotchman, and celebrated naval officer, with a ſmall ſquadron of two or three frigates, and gun boats, proves extremely troubleſome to the cowardly and ſalconading Sanſculottes at Havre de Grace.

Sir Richard every morning ſerves them up a copious entertainment of hot balls.

During the ſpring tides it was his conſtant practice to run up the Seine, paſt the town, where every thing having been put in readineſs, he began a furious cannonade and bombardment, filling the invincible republicans with the greateſt terror and diſmay.

During the bombardment, a ſhot went through the houſe and room where the Sanſculotte municipality held their ſittings, and diſſipated the infernal knot, who fled in horrible conſternation, from a ſcene which reminded them how ſoon they might be made to atone for the numberleſs enormities of their deteſtable lives.

On one occaſion, ſo miſerable had the gallantry of ſir Richard rendered their ſituation, that they ſent out ſome of their gun boats of which they have in Havre near one hundred, with a view of gaining ſome relief from the calamities with which it had afflicted them.—Sir Richard beſet the republican armada—deſtroyed ſeveral of the boats, and killed many hundreds of their men, driving the reſt back to the inner harbour.

Of this affair the municipality publiſhed a bombaſtic account, in which they ſtate they had no loſs.

The bombs of the ſquadron fall daily in all parts of the town; and it is more than probable that Havre is ere this in ruins.

There are now lying in Havre many fine frigates, the moſt of which are new, among theſe are two of 44 guns, which though they have been launched for 18 months, have never yet been to ſea.

Sir Richard Strachan has challenged them to come out, by a letter to the municipality, pledging his honor to fight them gun for gun. Since their cowardice will not lead them to the canon's mouth, he ſeems determined to carry his ireful engines to them.

There are ſeveral new frigates on the ſtocks at Havre, nearly ready for launching.

BOSTON, October 18.

Seven large frigates and 40 gun veſſels are waiting in the harbour of Havre-de Grace for an opportunity of attempting their intended expedition againſt the iſland of St. Marcou. Sir R. Strachan with nine bomb veſſels has blockaded them for ſome months; and poor Nick Frog is afraid to venture out.

The Ottoman Porte has declared war againſt the terrible long whiſkered republic;—and Ruſſia has leagued with the Turk in his operations. This, we hope, is but a part of the coalition now forming againſt that political Babylon, the foul miſtreſs of all the abominations, which have in different periods polluted modern Europe.

RUTLAND, October 23.

A correſpondent informs us, that in paſſing the town of Newhaven, in this ſtate, (Vermont) on the 14th inſt. he ſaw children picking ſtrawberries, which on examination, he found to be freſh, and equally as good as thoſe gathered in the month of June.

There are now growing twenty-four cabbage heads on one ſtump in a garden in this town.

An apple tree in this town is now bearing apples of a ſecond growth this year. They are of the ſize of a pigeon's egg. A number of the trees in the ſame orchard are now in bloſſom.

Letters from Cadiz annonnce, that the too familiar intercourſe between the Engliſh and Spaniſh fleets, has cauſed ſome rumours, and that the agents of government ſtopped (no doubt merely for form's ſake) ſome ſmall veſſels, loaded with proviſions, deſtined for the Engliſh ſquadron: one, among the reſt, carried to the Engliſh one hundred ſheep.

Paris, Auguſt 27.

The Proteſtant miniſters of Geneva, unanimouſly decreed, to tranſfer the ceremonies of their worſhip to the decadi. The following letter was written by them, to the French reſident, Deſporte:

"The miniſters of the reformed Chriſtian religion, who exerciſe their miniſtry at Geneva, deſirous of giving a proof of their reſpect for the laws, of their gratitude for the protection which the government has granted to their worſhip, and of their regard for you, citizen miniſter, have taken into ſerious conſideration, the requeſt which I made to them in your behalf, to have worſhip on the Decadi; and they have charged me, in expreſſing to you theſe ſentiments to anſwer the ſaid requeſt.

"That in preſerving the integrity of their worſhip, under the ſafeguard of conſtitutional laws, they have decided, to riſe on the days of the decadi, the exerciſes of this worſhip, to make the repoſe of this day, ſerve the public tranquillity.

"In tranſmitting to the heads of the government, our diſpoſitions, deign, citizen commiſſioner, to incline them favourably to us, friends of order and peace, miniſters of a worſhip, which, in its form and in its different acts, tends only to eſtabliſh the pureſt morality, on the moſt ſolid foundations, to cauſe to reign, and to maintain good morals, the ſole ſource of felicity, and of proſperity to the people, which are the end and the glory of all good governments, &c. &c."

[Poor Geneva, how art thou fallen! After having loſt thy political exiſtence, by thy baſe ſubmiſſion to the vile intrigues of Frenchmen—to be obliged at laſt to part with the religion of thy fathers—and to weaken the force of the divine inſtitution of the Chriſtian Sabbath, by baſely ſtooping to celebrate the holy exerciſes of Chriſtianity on the decadi—a day purpoſely appointed by the Infidels of France, to undermine the pure religion of our bleſſed Redeemer. —May this be the fate of every ſtate, which, like Geneva, has invited the deadly embraces of degenerate and corrupt France!—]

October 20.

In looking over the moſt recent London papers, we obſerve that the documents relative to our late negociations with France, ſubmitted by the Preſident to Congreſs, have been republiſhed, and of courſe very generally diſſeminated over Europe.—There can be but one ſentiment on this ſubject, among all who think juſtly in whatever part of the world they may reſide—it is that of deteſtation and abhorrence of the abominable pretenſions and inordinate cupidity of the regents of the ſelf-dubbed Grande Nation.

It is a little ſingular, but not at all ſurpriſing, that the preſent maſters of France toiſt this term of Grande Nation on moſt of their public arts, and in all their treaties with the Fraternifed powers around them.—It ſhews the exiſtence of the ſame vanity and the ſame inordinate pretenſions to ſuperior importance which has marked their character for centuries.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, December 8.

According to a French account, twenty-four thouſand inſurgents have, by death, paid the price of inſurrection, ſince the commencement of the revolutionary movements in Ireland. This ſacrifice, in no inconſiderable, degree muſt be attributed to the manœuvres of the Directory of the Great Nation: no doubt remains of their having inſtigated the rebellion, with a promiſe of ſupporting it—but the fate attendant on their feeble aid, at the eleventh hour, is generally known.

A new ſpecies of Arithmetic is ſaid to have been diſcovered by an inhabitant of Piedmont, by means of which the operator may work any ſum without leaving a reſidum. This is merely giving in theory that which is the practice of the French financiers of the preſent day.

The Society of the Illuminati, which has cauſed ſuch juſt alarm in Germany, originated in 1776, at Ingolſtadt, a city of Bavaria, and was originally compoſed of a few Fellows of colleges and Students, who carried on their machinations againſt the Chriſtian religion and the exiſting order of government, under the diſguiſe of Free Maſonry. Adam Weiſhoups, one of the profeſſors at Ingolſtadt, was the founder of it. The members were inſtructed to diſregard all civil and religious ties. Nature was their God, and the univerſe their Bible.

A Dublin date of the third of September gives the following, as a manifeſto publiſhed in the county of Mayo, in Ireland, by general Kilmaine, an Iriſhman by birth, now a lieutenant general in the ſervice of the five-headed monſter of France; whether genuine or not, it exhibits in part a portrait of thoſe infernal proceedings which have concomitated the progreſs of the French in their career of plunder and ſubjugation.

"Health and Fraternity to the people of Ireland.

"The Great Nation has ſent me to you with a band of heroes, to deliver you from the hands of tyrants—Fly to our ſtandards, and ſhare with us the glory of ſubduing the world. We will teach you the art of war and to deſpiſe the ſlow purſuits of toil and induſtry—You ſhall live on the ſpoils of war and the labours of others. The acquiſition of wealth is the acquiſition of miſery, and the enjoyment of eaſe inglorious; we have made all the nations we have conquered happy, by arreſting their property; by applying it to the common cauſe, and conſecrating it to the champions of liberty!—Property is a common right, belonging to the valour that ſeizes it. We have already deſtroyed the unaſpiring tranquillity of Switzerland! and the wealth and the power, and the bigotry of Italy is no more! If the government of France has thus extended its reforming vengeance to unoffending nations, conſider with ...more regard it will find you if you slight its benignity. Fly to our standard, and we will free you from spiritual as well as temporal subjection: we will free you from the fetters of Religion and the frauds of priestcraft.—Religion is a bondage intolerable to free minds; we have banished it from our own country, and put down the grand impostor, the Pope, whose wealth we have sacrificed on the altar of Reason. Fly to our standards, and we will break your connection with England; we will save you from the mortification of seeing yourselves under an invidious government, and exalt you into the rank of those countries which now enjoy the benefits of French fraternity.—Let not the ties of kindred, the seductions of ease, or any unmanly attachment to the comforts of life, teach you to neglect the friendly call of your countryman and fellow citizen.

"H. KILMAINE, lieut. gen."

FROM A LONDON PAPER.

A circumstance of a very peculiar nature has transpired within these few days. Mr. M——— some time since formed a tender connection with a young lady by whom he had a child. The father of the young gentleman, who is very opulent, declared that he would disinherit him if he did not break off the connexion. The love between the parties was ardent and mutual; the son heard the injunction with grief, and with tears promised to act conformably to the wishes of his father.—But his resolution forsook him; and as he had just finished his school studies, in which the young lady made also great proficiency, he had recourse to the singular stratagem of inducing her to assume a male attire, and enter with him as fellow-commoner in the university of Oxford. The young lady being received as such, went thro' the rigors and discipline of an university education; she applied herself closely to the dead languages, and in greek and latin became a considerable proficient: and the approbation of the university with several premiums, crowned her classical labors. When the parties had finished at Oxford, the gentleman and his fair friend, entered the Middle Temple. In term time she regularly dined in the Hall, and in the vacation, in different coffee-houses with her friend. She had paid great attention to the law, and in legal disquisition is said to be a subtle disputant. At George's coffee-house, her talents more than once have exposed the ignorance of certain stripling barristers.—After such constancy, few minds, we hope, are prepared to imagine the fate of the fair unfortunate; for she is now abandoned by her lover, a prey to grief with acquirements, that, in her sex, are rendered almost useless in her progress thro' life, by the custom of the world. The mother of the gentleman has settled an annuity on her; but the philosophy of the schools do not prevent her from being inconsolable.

ANECDOTES.

A Blacksmith of a village murdered a man, and was condemned to be hanged. The chief peasants of the place joined together, and begged the Alcalde that the blacksmith might not suffer, because he was necessary to the place, which could not do without a blacksmith, to shoe horses, mend wheels, &c. But the Alcalde said, "how then can I fulfil justice?" A laborer answered, "Sir, there are two weavers in the village, and for so small a place, one is enough—hang the other."

PETER RUSSELL, Esq; President, administering the Government of his Majesty's province of Upper Canada.

Whereas it appears by certain information, that a large quantity of HAY, the property of the hon. ROBERT HAMILTON of Queenston, was lately destroyed by FIRE---and that since, on the night of the IXth inst. another considerable stock was, by the same means, also destroyed---and that there is great reason to believe that the same have been wantonly and maliciously set on fire. NOW, for the better detecting of the person or persons who may have been guilty of this most base and felonious act, so that he or they may be brought to justice, I do by these presents, with the advice of his Majesty's Executive Council, offer a reward of

to any person or persons, who will give information of those who have perpetrated either of the above offences, upon conviction of any of them. And I do hereby further offer his Majesty's most gracious PARDON to any of the offenders (other than the principal concerned in the above diabolical transactions) upon the conviction of any person or persons of whom he shall give information.

Given under my hand and seal at arms, this twenty first day of November, in the thirty-ninth year of his Majesty's reign, at York, in the said province.

PETER RUSSELL, President.

BY ORDER OF THE PRESIDENT,
ALEX. LORNS, sec.

PETER RUSSELL, PRESIDENT.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the third, by the grace of God of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, king, defender of the faith, &c. &c. &c.

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS,

GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our proclamation bearing date the nineteenth day of October, we thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council to prorogue our provincial parliament until the seventh day of this present month of December next, at which time in our town of YORK you were held and constrained to appear; but we taking into our royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council, to relieve you, and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the SEVENTH day of JANUARY next ensuing, you meet us in our provincial parliament, in our town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our province of Upper Canada, and thereon to do as may seem necessary:—Herein fail not. In testimony whereof we have caused these our letters to be made patent, and the great seal of our said province to be hereunto affixed:—Witness the honorable PETER RUSSELL, esq. president administering the government of our said province, this thirtieth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-eight, and of our reign the thirty-ninth.

P. R.

WM. JARVIS, Sec'y.

Latest foreign advices, translated from Paris and Bourdeaux papers, received by the ship George, arrived at Philadelphia, Oct. 27, in 34, and the brig Venus, in 27 days from Bourdeaux.

OF BUONAPARTE.

CONSTANTINOPLE, August 10.

THERE now exists not the least doubt of the French Toulon fleet having landed in Egypt. Our government has received information of it through several different channels; but it has not yet received any circumstantial details of the military operations of Buonaparte, and the opposition made by the inhabitants. The letters and reports which continually arrive are too vague and contradictory to be relied upon.—Some announce the taking of the cities of Alexandria and Rosetta with the loss of much blood, and that the Candian merchants, who were there in great numbers, were all put to the sword.—Others assure, that the French are already in possession of Cairo (situated at 150 miles from Alexandria,) whilst our best informed publications affirm that the army of Buonaparte has been obliged to retreat, after a battle fought with the army of the Beys, between Cairo and Rosetta. The disagreement of all these reports is a fresh reason for placing confidence in the official advices, received by the Porte from Damietta, dated July 18, which say, that the French were intrenched in the environs of Rosetta, 30 miles from Alexandria, in view of the army of the Beys, which was only one mile and an half from their camp.

A great fermentation now reigns in this capital, and the police will be forced to redouble its vigilance in order to hinder the people from committing violence upon the French who are now here. However, the government still continues to act with moderation and caution towards them. Every one interprets this conduct according his own wishes or opinion. Some see in it a secret intelligence with the French, others believe it to be only an act of circumſpection, which agrees with the ſecrecy of the military operations that are preparing. If any thing can ſolve this ſpecies of problem, it is the orders iſſued by the Porte to all the provinces of the empire. The preamble is conceived in terms of the moſt marked indignation; the proceeding of the French is there repreſented as the moſt unjuſt act of aggreſſion, and highly contrary to the faith of the treaties. Theſe orders preſcribe meaſures offenſive and hoſtile.

The Engliſh miniſter appears to have much influenced thoſe determinations, and his active zeal neglects nothing that can tend to ſtrengthen the energy of government. The Ruſſian ambaſſador does not appear to ſhew leſs activity in his negociations; but we do not remark a concert in the operations of the two miniſters, and if they tend to the ſame end, the means they purſue are widely different.

Official letters from Canne, in the iſland of Candia, dated July 18, announce the appearance of a ſquadron before that city. The commander after having received information reſpecting the French fleet, determined to ſail direct towards Egypt. A letter from Smyrna, of 1ſt Auguſt, ſays, that this ſame ſquadron was met beyond Rodes, ſailing with a fair wind towards Egypt.

The fidelity of the Greek Patriarch has juſt been put to a ſevere teſt. Some perſons had endeavoured, by a thouſand promiſes and perfidious inſinuations, to draw him into a conſpiracy in favour of liberty. He pretended to agree to the deſigns of the emiſſaries who made him the propoſitions, and endeavoured to procure from them all neceſſary information. No ſooner had he obtained it than he communicated it to the Grand Signior. His highneſs thanked the Patriarch, placed himſelf at the head of ſeveral thouſand Janiſaries, marched to Pela (ſuburb of Conſtantinople) and there cauſed all the accomplices of this conſpiracy to be ſtrangled. Orders to execute ſimilar juſtice have been ſent to every place where the ramifications of this conſpiracy exiſt.

SEMLIN, Auguſt 23.

The army of the Captain Pacha is almoſt entirely deſerted, and he has gone to Conſtantinople. The greateſt part of the Ottoman troops have entered the army of Paſſwan Oglou, or rather ranged themſelves on the ſide of the Janiſaries; for, it is well known, that it was on account of the latter that the war broke out between the Grand Turk and Paſſwan Oglou;—becauſe an attempt was made to ſubject them to the diſcipline of the other military corps. The greateſt part of the Divan ſecretly favour the rebels; and almoſt all the Pachas ſent againſt Paſawan Oglou have joined him, and openly declared themſelves the enemies of the Sublime Porte.

BRUSSELS, September 1.

The moment hoſtilities commence, the ſiege of the fort of Ehrenbrieſten will be puſhed with the greateſt vigour. Moreover, it appears, according to letters received from Germany, that war is there looked upon as inevitable, particularly between France and Auſtria. As to the empire, there yet remains ſome hopes, founded on the mediation of Pruſſia. Troops are continually paſſing to reinforce the army of Mayence.

BERLIN, Sept. 4.

The lateſt letters from Conſtantinople ſtate that the Porte has received official information of a ſignal victory obtained over the troops of general Buonaparte near Cairo, in which ſome thouſands of the French were killed and 2000 made priſoners.

MILAN, Auguſt 28.

It is confirmed that the Engliſh fleet, after having taken in water and freſh proviſions at Syracuſe, in the beginning of the month, ſailed again in queſt of the French fleet. The whole of the Engliſh fleet was not permitted to enter the harbour, but remained in the road. It has been joined by four Engliſh ſail of the line from Cadiz, and the Portugueſe ſquadron, ſo that it now conſiſts of 22 ſhips of the line.

On the departure of Buonaparte from Malta, forty-ſix French knights of the order, moſtly naval officers, embarked with him.

LONDON, Sept. 15.

A Hamburgh mail arrived this day, and brings accounts that have excited no little degree of intereſt in the city. It is confirmed that Buonaparte did not reach Alexandria till ſome days after Admiral Nelſon had left it. The landing of the French has been conſidered by the Porte as an open violation of the peace ſubſiſting between the two powers, and meaſures have been in conſequence adopted by the latter for the maintaining its own dignity. Ruſſia joins with the Porte on the preſent occaſion, and the letters from Vienna ſtate that all the French property in Turkey has been confiſcated.

The moſt important intelligence is contained in a letter from Berlin of the 5th inſt. which ſtates that accounts had reached Conſtantinople of a battle having taken place near Cairo, between a Turkiſh force and the French troops under general Buonaparte, in which the latter was defeated with conſiderable loſs—ſome accounts ſay, 8000 killed and 2000 made priſoners.

This intelligence, if true, is of the greateſt importance to Britain; for there can be little doubt, if the French ſhould ſucceed, with the loſs of even half of the army, in reaching India by the route they have taken, that our poſſeſſions in that quarter would be much endangered.

The accounts that have reached us of this event, do not enable us to ſtate the particulars, to appreciate the degree of credit to which it may be entitled. It is plain, however, that if the paſſage of the iſthmus was undertaken without the conſent of the Turks, they had it in their power to throw innumerable obſtacles in the way of their progreſs in ſuch a country.

The following is a letter upon this ſubject, received by Mr. Freeling at the Poſt-office, from Mr. Halward, the agent for the packet, at Cuxhaven:

"Cuxhaven, Sept. 9.

"I have the ſatisfaction to inform you, from the moſt authentic information, that the army under Gen. Buonaparte, has been attacked by an immenſe number of Arabs, who have killed 8000 men, and taken 2000 priſoners. I have not the good fortune to be able to give further particulars of this important event, but hope that the truth of the whole will amply compenſate for it.

"To Mr. Freeling, Poſt-office."

Mr. Freeling ſent a copy of the above to Lloyd's Coffee-houſe, accompanied with the following note:

"Sept. 15, 1798.

"Mr. Freeling's compliments to Meſſrs. Bennet and Co. ſends them an extract of a letter received this morning by the Hamburgh mail, from the agent of the packet at Cuxhaven, which, with every wiſh for its confirmation, he cannot pledge himſelf for the truth of."

BOSTON, October 30.

FROM FRANCE.

On Saturday arrived here, the brig Cyrus, capt. Tyler, in 41 days from Nantz. Joſeph Woodward, eſq; a paſſenger on board the Cyrus, has given the following for publication:

Extract of a letter of the members of the Marine, and the Colonies, to the principal Commiſſaries, dated the 24th Thermidor, 6th year.

"I remark, citizens, by the correſpondence of the greater part of the adminiſtrators of the forts, that the embargo, recently laid on the American veſſels, has occaſioned the confinement of their crews. The intentions of the government muſt have been badly underſtood, to have occaſioned the adoption of a meaſure that appears to put us in a hoſtile attitude towards the United States, whilſt its acts and care, on the contrary, ſhews that it deſires to maintain good intelligence between the two republics. I recommend to you, therefore, citizens, to ordain as ſoon as you ſhall receive the preſent, the liberation of the Americans, who may have been conſidered as priſoners of war, in conſequence of the embargo laid on their veſſels.

(Signed) "BRUIX."

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.

This day arrived the brig Nancy, captain O'Brien, in 36 days from Cork. By captain O'Brien we are informed, that the French made another attempt to invade Ireland, and had landed a number of men in the North; but hearing the fate of their countrymen, they re-embarked. Their number was ſuppoſed to have been between 1000 and 1500.

Captain Gibſon, of the ſhip George, arrived at Philadelphia in 34 days from Bourdeaux; Sept. 28. lat. 45 25, long. 5 45, fell in with a fleet of ſix ſail of the line, three frigates and a brig, all ſtanding in a direct courſe towards Ireland. The captain ſuppoſes them to have been a French ſquadron.

By captain Wright, from St. Kitts, we are informed that the famous French privateers Buonaparte, Democrat, and L'Amour de la Patrie, belonging to Guadaloupe, have been recently taken by the frigates Concord and Lapwing, and carried into Antigua.

ALEXANDRIA, Oct. 20.

By the captain of the ſchooner American Fabius, who arrived in town yeſterday morning, from Guadaloupe, which iſland he left on the 13th ultimo, (three days later than captain Froſt) intelligence has been received that Victor Hughes's orders for impriſoning American citizens were implicitly obeyed. The American Fabius was carried into Baſſeterre, where the ſchooner and cargo were condemned, without even the form of trial; and the mate and crew carried to priſon. During captain Berry's ſtay in the iſlands, the latter part of which he kept himſelf concealed, though at the ſame time, receiving good intelligence of the public tranſactions, he had not heard any thing of the capture of the ſhip Suffolk, captain Bridgham, of this port. The Britiſh frigate Concord, ſunk a privateer ſloop belonging to Victor, in captain Berry's ſight, and under the guns of two forts, which kept up a briſk fire on the frigate. This is, however, rather a melancholy circumſtance, as the privateer had ſeveral Americans on board; particularly the crew of the ſloop Julia, captain Green, of Eaſt Haddam, N. E. which ſhe had taken a few days before. The Julia's cargo being chiefly live ſtock, was landed by Victor, to whom, as before remarked, the privateer belonged, without even an examination. The Hiſſy Jane, of Portſmouth, N. H. with a valuable cargo from Cadiz, was carried into Baſſeterre, as a prize, the day before captain Berry ſailed. All the crew, not excepting officers, were immediately carried to priſon—and the veſſel and cargo condemned.

Extract of a letter from Jeremie, (Aux Cayes) to a gentleman in this city.

"The whole iſland is, at preſent, in a miſerable condition, being wholly under black government, and proviſions very ſcarce and exceſſive dear—the Britiſh have evacuated Jeremie, and the French have poſſeſſion of it, and it is in a ſtarving condition. A ſmall fowl will fetch four dollars, an egg 25 cents, and every thing elſe in proportion."

Captain John M'Dougal, of the ſhip Two Friends, of Philadelphia, bound to London, writes to his owners, from Margate Roads, Sept. 13, that he had been taken by a French ſhip, and that after having been in their poſſeſſion for twelve days, with eighteen Frenchmen on board, himſelf and three of his hands had "retook the ſhip with very little trouble," and were proceeding to London.

His Britannic Majeſty's ſhip, Adamant, ſays a Boſton paper, has recently taken the following veſſels from the French: the Decade frigate of 44 guns, the Sophia corvette, of 18 guns, La Neptune, of 20 guns, and the La Mercurie, of 20 guns; beſides three Dutch homeward bound Greenland ſhips, with oil.

By the lateſt accounts from Europe, it does not appear that hoſtilities had actually commenced between the Emperor and the French, though every appearance exiſted that they would in a ſhort time.—An article in a Paris paper of the 10th of September, mentions, that a letter from Duſſeldorff ſays, the French army is in full march towards Hanover.

In conſequence of an expectation at Vienna of hoſtilities recommencing, every perſon who had any connection with Bernadotte, from his phyſician to his cook,—have been arreſted. It is ſaid the number impriſoned amounts to ſixty.

An article from Cologne, dated September 4, ſays "An expreſs, which arrived here this day, brings intelligence that the French troops entered Arenſberg, on the Roer, (circle of Weſtphalia) the day before yeſterday. Thus the line of demarcation muſt be either broken or annulled."

The Neapolitan ambaſſador was about to quit Paris. M. De Moruna is arrived at Paris in quality of ambaſſador extraordinary from the court of Portugal.

From the Baltimore Telegraphe.

Mr. Dobbin,

As owners of the ſhip Patapſco, we have great ſatisfaction in ſtating the following inſtance of admiral lord Duncan's polite attention to that veſſel and her cargo.

The ſhip Patapſco, captain Hill, arrived at the port of Bergen, in Norway, on the 5th of July, with the intention of proceeding from thence to a port in Germany—her ſupercargo, alarmed at the report of a war with France, and apprehenſive of being captured, communicated thoſe apprehenſions to our correſpondents in London, who in reply, forwarded to him the letter from lord Duncan, publiſhed herewith—a letter, which although made unneceſſary by the meaſures adopted by the ſupercargo previous to its reception, was nevertheleſs ſuch as merits and receives the warm acknowledgments of ALBANY, November 2.

Extract of a letter from the Mayor of New York, to the Poughkeepſie Committee, dated the 23d ult.

"The deaths in this city from the 1ſt day of Auguſt to the 20th of October inclusive, amount to 1029 men, 528 women, and 346 children—Total 1905, of whom 1310 have died of the fever, since the firſt of September—before that day we have no regular account of deaths by the fever."

Letters from New York by yeſterday's mail ſay, "the deaths by the fever are ſtill 6 and 7 each day, and the new caſes from 10 to 12."

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, December 15.

Extract from a Trenton paper.

"France expected to aſſemble, in the port of Breſt, the navies of Spain and Holland. Theſe, the conquerors of Italy are compelled to ſee blockaded, and harmleſs, in their native ports.—Her important collection of troops on her coaſt, inſtead of carrying French principles and deſolation into England now oppreſſes her own cities, ſpreads deva[illegible] through the country and preys upon the vitals of France. The fleets of England lock up the mouths of her rivers, and impriſon the principal part of the peſtilencial forces which ſhe is waiting, with impatience, to diſgorge from her harbors. All her enormous military apparatus is becoming, every day, leſs formidable to her enemies, and terrible only to an exhauſted treaſury, to the people whom it grinds, and the tyrants who are perpetually turning the wheel of deſpotiſm."

It is ſtated in an Engliſh paper, as a report, that if Buonaparte ſhould land in Egypt, a Ruſſian army will march againſt him. It certainly is ſo far probable, that the views of the French upon Egypt, and their plan, either of revolution or aggrandizement in the eaſt will be oppoſed by Ruſſia. It is impoſſible that the gigantic pretentions of France ſhould be viewed by the Ruſſians with indifference, and the oppoſition of this power would, in caſe of any attempt on Egypt or the Porte, be the greateſt obſtacle to her ſucceſs.

The preſent military force of Ireland ſays a Cork paper, conſiſts of 10 regiments of cavalry, 11 of ſencible cavalry 13 of infantry, 30 of ſencible infantry, 2 of Engliſh militia, and 37 of Iriſh militia, with upwards of 30,000 volunteers.

The following horrid oath has been taken by all the rebels in Ireland, printed copies of which were found upon numbers that were ſlain, particularly at the battle of New-Roſe, and Ballicanew, and is now called "The Bloody Oath:"

"I, A. B. do ſolemnly ſwear by our Lord jeſus Chriſt, who ſuffered for us on the croſs, and by the bleſſed Virgin Mary, that I will burn, deſtroy, and murder all heretics, up to my knees in blood. So help me God."

By a gentleman juſt arrived from the Hague, ſays the Daily Adverteſer of the 23d. October, we are informed that the great maſs of the people of Holland are heartily ſick of their new governors, who have given them nothing in exchange for their former adminiſtration but oppreſſive taxes and a ruined commerce. The convention is principally filled with men of deſperate fortunes, or perſons, through intereſt attached to French principles, the latter therefore are playing in concert with the executive government of France, whilſt the former act for their daily pay. Such is the preſent condition of things. The people murmer, and publickly drink the healths of the Orange family; but can go no further whilſt the bayonet alone upholds the conſtitution.

Proclamation.

PETER RUSSELL, Eſq; Preſident, adminiſtering the Government of Upper Canada.

WHEREAS by Letters received from his Grace the Duke of Portland, one of his Majeſty's principal Secretaries of State, dated the 18th day of October laſt, it appears, that in conſequence of a Repreſentation made by the Executive Government of this Province to his Majeſty's Miniſters, on the exemption of the U. E. LOYALISTS and their CHILDREN from every Expence attending the Grants of Land made, or to be made to them; his Majeſty has been graciouſly pleaſed to ſignify his Royal Pleaſure that the FIRST LOYALISTS, and their SONS and DAUGHTERS, ſhall continue to receive his Majeſty's BOUNTY of TWO HUNDRED ACRES each, as heretofore, free from any Expence whatever. And that it is to be underſtood, that this Mark of the Royal Munificence is expreſſly confined to thoſe LOYALISTS only, who were actually reſident in the Province on or before the TWENTY-EIGHTH of July laſt.

Be it therefore known, that notwithſtanding what has been declared to the contrary, in the Proclamation aforeſaid, all Loyaliſts coming within the above deſcription, whoſe Names have been enrolled upon the U. E. Liſts previous to the date of this Proclamation, and their Sons and Daughters when of age or married, to whom the King's Bounty in Lands has not been already extended, may continue to conſider themſelves entitled to receive from this Government, Two Hundred Acres of Land free from the payment of Fees and alſo her Charges, but that, except to the extent allowed by his Majeſty's Inſtructions, neither U. E. Loyaliſts, nor their Children, can be conſidered as exempted from the STANDING FEES, it having been ordered that they ſhall be annexed to every further Grant of Land, to them as well as to others, be its extent what it may.

Given under my Hand and Seal at Arms, in Council at York, this fifteenth day of December, in the thirty-ninth year of his Majeſty's reign, and in the year of our Lord one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety-eight.

SPEECH of his excellency JONATHAN TRUMBULL, to the legiſlature of Connecticut, at the opening of its preſent ſeſſion.

Gentlemen of the Council, Mr. Speaker, and Gentlemen of the Houſe of Repreſentatives, NOTHING very important has occurred of internal concern, ſince I had the pleaſure of meeting you in general aſſembly. Under the ſmiles of Divine Providence, although in the midſt of apprehenſions, we have hither been permitted to remain in ſecurity.

The executive buſineſs, which at your laſt ſeſſion was directed to be performed, for the immediate ſecurity and defence of the ſtate, has been accompliſhed. The quarter-maſter general has procured the military ſtores which were ordered, and they are lodged in ſecure places of depoſit.

An animated order pervades the militia of this ſtate, determined to defend their ineſtimable rights, and ſupport the united independence of our country. While this ſpirit exiſts and a general harmony of ſentiment previls, we may hope, with the bleſſing of Heaven, to ſtand at defiance all external danger, and ſtand firm and ſecure againſt the arms of every hoſtile power.

A letter from his excellency the governor of the common wealth of Maſſachuſetts, has been received, and will now be communicated, reſpecting a ſubject, which, from its importance, will gain your early attention; and which, I truſt, will obtain ſuch prompt concurrence in your deciſions thereon, as the magnitude of its object appears to merit.

Differences ſtill ſubſiſting between the United States and France, all our vigilance and activity will be required, to guard againſt the arts and the arms of that haughty and intriguing foreign power. Situated as the United States are, the arms of France are not to be dreaded; but their arts of ſeduction, and their intrigues at diviſion and diſunion, fill me with apprehenſion and caution: With theſe arts, they are indefatigable and powerful—in theſe, they boaſt their ſuperior ſkill among the nations, like the intrigues of Philip of Macedon, where political artifices employed againſt the Grecian ſtates, did more towards ruining their liberties and power, than that artful prince, in any other way could have effected.

With this ancient example on our minds, as well as the very recent and melancholy experience of modern European nations before our eyes, let us be taught the neceſſity of guarding ourſelves againſt the fatal effects of foreign intrigues, party ſpirit, and divided opinions. Let us conſtantly bear in mind, that if ever we are reduced by the power of France, or ſubjugated to her will, or that of any other imperious yoke, it muſt be effected by the arts of diſunion and diviſion. A divided and diſunited people cannot be a happy people; nor can they maintain themſelves in an honourable or defenſible ſtate. Let union be our polar ſtar, to guide our conduct, and true national independence our object, and the efforts of the world cannot prove ſucceſsful againſt the power of this happy ſituated country. A thorough conviction of the juſtneſs of this idea, and the awful danger and fatal effects of diſunion and diviſion, will form my apology for dwelling on this ſubject. Among numberleſs other artifices which at this time are brought into operation, two great engines which are made uſe of by our enemies againſt us, are French infidelity and French philoſophy; the one operating to the deſtruction of all religious ſentiments; the other unhinging every ſocial and human tie by which ſocieties are cemented; both together tending to introduce univerſal diſorder and confuſion.—Theſe two horrid engines, the foot-ſteps of which alas! are but too viſibly to be traced in many parts of our country, form the moſt demoralizing and diſorganizing ſyſtem that ever attacked the happineſs and ſocial enjoyment of mankind.

In France, the practice of this ſyſtem has introduced the exiſtence of every vice and calamity; and in that pretended republic, national happineſs; I might almoſt ſay, individual enjoyment is ſcarcely known, certainly not to be realized. The ſituation of France, at this time, preſents ſuch ſcenes of iniquity and violence, from this horrid ſource, as gives an awful and inſtructive leſſon to all ſurrounding nations, who attentively view her conduct. Rather than adopt this fatal ſyſtem, how carefully ſhould we cling to our holy religion; the principles of which form an almoſt infinite contraſt with the falſe glare of this ſpecious and infidel philoſophy; and the practice of which not only affords ſubſtantial happineſs in life, but gives the beſt hopes of futurity.—How admirably ſuperior to all the ingenious pretences of French philoſophy, is that noble precept of our holy religion, which enjoins upon us the doing to others whatever under like circumſtances, we ſhould reaſonably expect from them to us. In a ſtrict adherence to this highly preferable ſyſtem, we may hope to avoid thoſe ſcenes of vice and miſery which France now experiences;—and to eſcape that torrent of national derangement, which threatens to whelm the happineſs of the Old World, and is ſeeking to extend its baneful influence to this happy and diſtant continent. With a view to this idea, as well as on many other accounts, I appreciate the wiſdom and magnanimity of our national government, in diſſolving on our part, thoſe ties of alliance with which we have been too long and too cloſely connected with France; and which, happily for us, had been previouſly broken and outraged by that perfidious nation. An intimate connection with a nation of infidels and atheiſts, with whom there can be no foundation for faith or confidence, is to be avoided as the worſt of evils, a total ſeparation from the policy and power of ſuch a people, is an event devoutly to be wiſhed.

May that God who has been our fathers protector, in their days of trouble, and our deliverer from many dangers, ſtill guard us by his power and guide us by his wiſdom—and while we ſeriouſly truſt in this divine protection, may we truly rejoice that the Lord God omnipotent reigneth among the nations.

BOSTON, October 2.

We were yeſterday favored with French and Hamburgh papers to the 2d of September.---- On the ſubject of the victory of admiral Nelſon, the French papers are profoundly ſilent: the Hamburgh gazettes, however, dilate much on the event, and give confirmatory accounts from Leghorn, Trieste, Venice, Candia and several other places in Italy, Greece, the Adriatic & Archipelago. The particulars are detailed with an accuracy uncommon in fables; but still they are not official.

"The French have thrown a few troops into Ireland, but too late, and in a firm peaceable part of the country. How happens it, that these enthusiastic revolutionizers fancy the whole world in love with them? and so misinformed with regard to that country and our own."

October 22.

BUONAPARTE'S EXPEDITION!

Every arrival brings fresh corroboratives to place the fact beyond the wanderings of conjecture, or the scrutiny of suspicion. The only circumstance that "e'er could hang a doubt on't," was the concomitant intelligence of the French buccanier's arrival at Alexandria; the articles, however, which we have had translated from the last Hamburgh paper, of the 24th Aug. reconciles the two accounts and completely establishes the truth of Buonaparte's defeat. To those of our readers who are acquainted with the map of the Mediterranean, the intrinsic testimony, which the Hamburgh news carries with it, is incontrovertible; and we are most assuredly convinced, that there is not one American, who is worthy of the name, that will not rejoice at the authentication of this important intelligence.---In thus annexing implicit confidence in an unofficial account, we would not wish to mislead the public opinion, but it is impossible to perute the confluent details of the battle from almost every port adjacent to the scene of action, each corroborating and explaining the other, without feeling the mind impressed with irresistable conviction. This one blow struck by the true "HEARTS OF OAK" of Old England, has entirely demolished the navy of France, and paralized the strong arm of the directory. The visionary project of their rapacious ambition must now be relinquished.

Europe and the world are rising with indignation to chastise their insolence; and the day of retribution is coming with all the horrors denouncing on the crimes of the robber, the assassin, and the atheist.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, December 22.

From the language held by the council of five hundred, it would appear, that in various districts of France the Royalists, though so often believed to be extirpated, are still numerous and formidable.

In the council of five hundred, on the 20th July, Goupy, as organ of a special committee, made report on the necessity of establishing a new capital for the department of Pas des Calais; "for," said he, "the administrators in the town where they now assemble, finding themselves in the midst of partizans of the royalists, are exposed to the greatest dangers." [Gaz. U. S.]

A London paper says, a romance is at present in the press, in which there are thirty-six ghosts, two dozen hobgoblins, eighteen witches, a dozen devils, six enchanted castles, and one probability.

Mr. Hare, formerly envoy to Poland, had apartments in the same house with Mr. Fox; and like his friend Charles, had frequent dealings with the monied Israelites. One morning as he was looking out of his window, he observed several of the tribe assemble at the door for admittance. "Pray gentlemen," said he "are you Fox hunting or Hare hunting, this morning."

We hear from good authority that the French government has revived the detestable laws respecting gunning and fishing—which were the most horrid which existed with the king. No citizen now can kill a bird or catch a fish without purchasing a special licence!

The Jews of London have no intention of visiting Jerusalem after it shall have been conquered by the French.—Such a pilgrimage may suit the poor Jews of France, who have been pillaged of their property by much greater Jews than themselves.

The editors of certain papers would certainly lead us to suppose them good Christians, since we must suppose they LOVE THEIR ENEMIES, when we see them every day praising traitors, and open enemies to our king and country.

CHRISTMAS.

—AN ODE.—

HAIL, the seraphic day!
Our souls, uniting, say;
For, on its morn,
Ere up the bright'ning east,
The glowing sun beam prest'd,
JESUS was born.

At this eventful birth,
High to the joyful earth—
In night, serene,
Forming a glorious choir,
Tuning the SACRED LYRE,
SERAPHS were seen

With spotless robes array'd,
O'er Mary's slumb'ring head,
They, soft, began;
In ravish'd notes, along—
Swell'd their immortal song,
With "PEACE TO MAN."

Hear each one loud exclaim
"MARY of Bethlehem,
"God's chosen one."
This ever-holy maid,
Low, in a manger laid,
Brought forth her son.

Around her glory shone,
As from God's beaming throne,
When CHRIST appear'd;
JOSEPH, the pious, came,
Saw the celestial flame,
And music heard.

Of little cherubs, 'round—
Waking exhaustless sound,
To praise the LAMB;
As down the radiant sky,
Leaving their realms on high,
They, hast'ning came.

Shepherds approach'd from far,
"Led by a shining star,"
With offerings great;
On bending knee they fell,
Made the LOW MANSION swell—
With praise elate.

Now let us each one join,
Aloud in song divine,
With firm accord;
And with unending zeal,
Up heaven send the peal
CHRIST is our LORD.

An ACT to extend the Provisions of an Act passed in the second session of the first Provincial Parliament of Upper Canada, intitled, "An Act to confirm and make valid certain Marriages, heretofore contracted in the Country now comprized within the Province of Upper Canada, and to provide for the future Solemnization of Marriage within the same."

WHEREAS it hath been found expedient to extend the provisions of a certain act passed in the thirty-third year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "An act to confirm and make valid certain marriages heretofore contracted in the country now comprized within the province of Upper-Canada, and to provide for the future solemnization of marriage within the same," Be it therefore enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the legislative council and assembly of the province of Upper-Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an act passed in the parliament of Great-Britain, entitled an act to repeal certain parts of an act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "An act for making more effectual provision for the government of the province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said province, and by the authority of the same, That from and after the passing of this act, it shall and may be lawful to, and for the minister, or clergyman of any congregation, or religious community of persons professing to be members of the Church of Scotland, or Lutherans, or Calvinists who shall be authorised in manner hereafter directed, to celebrate the ceremony of matrimony according to the rites of such church or religious community, between any two persons, neither of whom are under any legal disqualification to contract matrimony, and one of whom shall have been a member of such congregation, or religious community, at least six months before the said marriage; any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding.

II. Provided nevertheless, and be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no person shall be taken or deemed to be a minister or clergyman of any such congregation or religious community within the intent and meaning of this act, who shall not have been regularly ordained, constituted or appointed according to the rites and forms of such congregation or religious community, and unless he shall have appeared or come before the justices of the peace, assembled in quarter sessions in the district in which he shall reside, when not less than six magistrates, besides the chairman, shall be present, and shall have then with him at least seven respectable persons, members of the congregation or religious community to which he shall belong, who shall declare him to be their minister or clergyman, and unless he shall produce proofs of his ordination, constitution or appointment to that office, and unless he shall then and there take the oath of allegiance to his Majesty, when, if it shall appear to the majority of the justices, then present, expedient and proper, they are hereby authorised to grant him a certificate under the seal of the court and signed by the chairman and clerk of the peace, (for which the said clerk of the peace shall be entitled to demand and receive the sum of five shillings,) certifying him to be the settled minister or clergyman of such congregation or religious community, which certificate shall be in the following form:—

BE IT REMEMBERED, That at the general quarter sessions of the peace, holden at the town of in the county of in and for the district, on the day of in the year of our Lord, before A. B. (and six others,) esquire, and others, justices of our sovereign lord the King, assigned to keep the peace in the said district, &c. came C. D. of together with E. F. of (and six others whose names and descriptions must be inserted,) members of a congregation or community of at in the county of in the said district. And the said E. F. &c. being duly, examined satisfied the court that the said C. D. is the settled minister, or clergyman of the said congregation or community, and was regularly ordained, constituted and appointed thereto.

G. H. chairman.
I. K. clerk of the peace.

III. Provided nevertheless, That no such certificate shall be given by the said quarter sessions as aforesaid, unless the person applying for the same, shall have given notice in writing to the clerk of the peace at, or before, the general quarter sessions, immediately preceding that on which he shall apply for such certificate, which notice in writing, the said clerk of the peace shall read in open court, and shall also fix up in some conspicuous part of his office, within eight days after the same shall have been so read, for which service, he the said clerk of the peace, shall be entitled to demand and receive the sum of five shillings and no more.

IV. Provided also, and be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no such minister or clergyman shall at any time celebrate the ceremony of matrimony between any two persons, as above described, unless he shall on three several Sundays before he shall celebrate the said ceremony, openly and with a loud voice in the church, chapel, meeting-house or other place of worship of such congregation or religious community, either in some intermediate part of the service, or immediately before it begins, or immediately after it is ended, declare his intention so to do, and shall at each time of making such declaration, also declare the number of times for which he shall have made such declaration respectively, or unless such minister or clergyman shall have been duly authorised by licence under the hand and seal of the

...the province, to celebrate the said ceremony between the two persons therein named.

V. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid. That it shall and may be lawful, to and for the parties thus married or either of them, to demand of the said minister or clergyman, and he is hereby authorised and required to give the same a certificate of such marriage, which may be in the following form: viz.

WHEREAS A. B. of and C. D. of were desirous of intermarrying with each other, and have applied to me for that purpose, their intention so to do having been regularly proclaimed on three leveral Sundays as is directed; or having presented a licence, as the case may be. Now these are to certify, that J. E. F. minister of the community of at have this day married the said A. B. and C. D. together, and they are become legally contracted to each other. As witness my hand at this day of in the year of our Lord

Proclamation.

PETER RUSSELL, Esq; President, administering the Government of his Majesty's Province of Upper Canada.

WHEREAS by an act of the parliament of Great Britain, passed in the thirty-first year of his Majesty's reign, intitled "An act to repeal certain parts of an act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "An act for making more effectual provision for the government of the province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said province;" it is among other things provided, that whenever any bill which has been passed by the Legislative Council and by the House of Assembly, in either of the said provinces respectively, shall be presented for his Majesty's assent to the Governor, or Lieutenant Governor of such province, or to the person administering his Majesty's government therein, such Governor, or Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the government, shall, and he is hereby authorized and required to declare, according to his discretion; but subject nevertheless, to the provision contained in the said act, and to such instructions as may be given in that behalf by his Majesty, his heirs, or successors, that he assents to such bill in his Majesty's name, or that he withholds his Majesty's assent from such bill, or that he reserves such bill for the signification of his Majesty's pleasure thereon.

And whereas a certain act intituled an act to extend the provisions of an act passed in the second session of the first provincial Parliament of Upper Canada, intituled "An act to confirm and make valid certain Marriages heretofore contracted in the country now comprised within the province of Upper Canada, and to provide for the future solemnization of Marriage within the same;" was passed by the Legislative Council and House of Assembly, in the first session of the present Parliament of the said province, and presented to me, PETER RUSSELL, President, administering the government as aforesaid, for his Majesty's assent thereto, and was by me reserved for the signification of his Majesty's pleasure thereon; and transmitted to his Majesty's Secretary of State for the signification of his Majesty's pleasure thereon accordingly.

Now therefore know ye, that the said act having been referred to a Committee of the Lords of his Majesty's most honorable Privy Council, appointed for the consideration of all matters relating to Trade and foreign Plantations, the said Lords of the Committee on the twenty-seventh day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety seven, reported as their opinion to his Majesty, that the said act was proper to be approved—his Majesty was thereupon pleased, with the advice of his Privy Council, to declare his approbation of the said act: And pursuant to his Majesty's Royal Pleasure thereon expressed, the said act is hereby confirmed, finally enacted and ratified accordingly; whereof the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Commander in Chief of this his Majesty's said province of Upper Canada, for the time being, and all other persons whom it may concern, are to take notice, and govern themselves accordingly.

Given under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at York, this twenty-ninth day of November, in the thirty-ninth year of his Majesty's reign.

PETER RUSSELL.

By Command of his Honor,
WM. JARVIS, Sec'y.

Proclamation.

PETER RUSSELL, Esq; President, administering the Government of Upper Canada.

WHEREAS by Letters received from his Grace the Duke of Portland, one of his Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, since the issuing the Proclamation of the thirty-first of October last, it appears, that in consequence of a Representation made by the Executive Government of this Province to his Majesty's Ministers, on the exemption of the U. E. LOYALISTS and their CHILDREN from every Expence attending the Grants of Land made, or to be made to them; his Majesty has been graciously pleased to signify his Royal Pleasure that the FIRST LOYALISTS, and their SONS and DAUGHTERS, shall continue to receive his Majesty's BOUNTY of TWO HUNDRED ACRES each, as heretofore, free from any Expence whatever. And that it is to be understood, that this Mark of the Royal Munificence is expressly confined to those LOYALISTS only, who were actually resident in the Province on or before the TWENTY-EIGHTH of July last.

Be it therefore known, that notwithstanding what has been declared to the contrary, in the Proclamation aforesaid, all Loyalists coming within the above description, whose Names have been enrolled upon the U. E. Lists previous to the date of this Proclamation, and their Sons and Daughters when of age or married, to whom the King's Bounty in Lands has not been already extended, may continue to consider themselves entitled to receive from this Government, Two Hundred Acres of Land free from the payment of Fees and all other Charges, but that, except to the extent allowed by his Majesty's Instructions, neither U. E. Loyalists, nor their Children, can be considered as exempted from the STANDING FEES, it having been ordered that they shall be annexed to every further Grant of Land, to them as well as to others, be its extent what it may.

Given under my Hand and Seal at Arms, in Council at York, this fifteenth day of December, in the thirty-ninth year of his Majesty's reign, and in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-eight.

PETER RUSSELL.

By Command of the President in Council,
JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

Proclamation.

PETER RUSSELL, Esq; President, administering the Government of his Majesty's province of Upper Canada.

Whereas it appears by certain information, that a large quantity of HAY, the property of the hon ROBERT HAMILTON of Queenston, was lately destroyed by FIRE---and that since, on the night of the IXth inst. another considerable stock was, by the same means, also destroyed---and that there is great reason to believe that the same have been wantonly and maliciously set on fire. NOW, for the better detecting of the person or persons who may have been guilty of this most base and felonious act, so that he or they may be brought to justice, I do by these presents, with the advice of his Majesty's Executive Council, offer a reward of

to any person or persons, who will give information of those who have perpetrated either of the above offences, upon conviction of any of them. And I do hereby further offer his Majesty's most gracious PARDON to any of the offenders (other than the principal concerned in the above diabolical transactions) upon the conviction of any person or persons of whom he shall give information.

GIVEN under my hand and seal at arms, this twenty-first day of November, in the thirty-ninth year of his Majesty's reign, at York, in the said province.

ALEX. BURNS, Sec.

PETER RUSSELL, PRESIDENT.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the third, by the grace of God of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, king, defender of the faith, &c. &c. &c.

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS,
GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our proclamation bearing date the nineteenth day of October, we thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council to prorogue our provincial parliament until the seventh day of this present month of December next, at which time in our town of YORK you were held and constrained to appear; but we taking into our royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council, to relieve you and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the SEVENTH day of JANUARY next ensuing, you meet us in our provincial parliament, in our town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary:—Herein fail not. In testimony whereof we have caused these our letters to be made patent, and the great seal of our said province to be hereunto affixed:—Witness the honorable PETER RUSSELL, esq. president administering the government of our said province, this thirtieth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-eight, and of our reign the thirty-ninth. THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, December 29.

We hope our readers will excuse us for the omission of several articles of interesting intelligence this week, on account of the length of the Marriage Act, and the Proclamation confirming it; an early publication of such important articles to the welfare of this province, we thought should not be neglected; however, we cannot omit the following gratifying paragraph, taken from a London paper, called the Sun, of the 20th of September last, with which, and several other articles of like consequence, that shall appear in due time, we have been favoured by a gentleman of this town, for which we are extremely thankful.

Sun Office, half past 1, P. M.

We stop the press to announce, that we learn from undoubted authority, that by the Admiralty Telegraph intelligence has just been conveyed, of a French paper of the 15th having been this forenoon landed at Dover, containing the very gratifying information of an action having taken place between Admiral Nelson and the French fleet, on their return from Alexandria, in which the British was happily victorious.

MARRIED.] Last Monday, Mr. James Pleater, to the agreeable Miss Hannah Miles, daughter to Mr. Abner Miles, of this town.—Last Tuesday, Mr. Thos. Smith, to Miss Brown, both of this town.

An ACT to extend the Provisions of an Act passed in the second Session of the first Provincial Parliament of Upper Canada, intitled, "An Act to confirm and make valid certain Marriages heretofore contracted in the Country now comprized within the Province of Upper Canada, and to provide for the future Solemnization of Marriage within the same."

WHEREAS it hath been found expedient to extend the provisions of a certain act passed in the thirty-third year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "An act to confirm and make valid certain marriages heretofore contracted in the country now comprized within the province of Upper-Canada, and to provide for the future solemnization of marriage within the same," Be it therefore enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the legislative council and assembly of the province of Upper-Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an act passed in the parliament of Great-Britain, entitled an act to repeal certain parts of an act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "An act for making more effectual provision for the government of the province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said province, and by the authority of the same, That from and after the passing of this act, it shall and may be lawful to, and for the minister, or clergyman of any congregation, or religious community of persons professing to be members of the Church of Scotland, or Lutherans, or Calvinists, who shall be authorised in manner hereafter directed, to celebrate the ceremony of matrimony according to the rites of such church or religious community, between any two persons, neither of whom are under any legal disqualification to contract matrimony, and one of whom shall have been a member of such congregation, or religious community, at least six months before the said marriage, any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding.

II. Provided nevertheless, and be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no person shall be taken or deemed to be a minister or clergyman of any such congregation or religious community within the intent and meaning of this act, who shall not have been regularly ordained, constituted or appointed according to the rites and forms of such congregation or religious community, and unless he shall have appeared or come before the justices of the peace, assembled in quarter sessions in the district in which he shall reside, when not less than six magistrates, besides the chairman, shall be present, and shall have then with him at least seven respectable persons, members of the congregation or religious community to which he shall belong, who shall declare him to be their minister or clergyman, and unless he shall produce proofs of his ordination, constitution or appointment to that office, and unless he shall then and there take the oath of allegiance to his Majesty, when, if it shall appear to the majority of the justices, then present, expedient and proper, they are hereby authorised to grant him a certificate under the seal of the court and signed by the chairman and clerk of the peace, (for which the said clerk of the peace shall be entitled to demand and receive the sum of five shillings,) certifying him to be the settled minister or clergyman of such congregation or religious community, which certificate shall be in the following form:—

BE IT REMEMBERED, That at the general quarter sessions of the peace, holden at the town of [illegible] in the county of [illegible] in and for the district of [illegible] on the [illegible] day of [illegible] in the year of our Lord, before A. B. (and six others,) esquires, and others, justices of our sovereign lord the King, assigned to keep the peace in the said district, &c. came C. D. of [illegible] together with E. F. of [illegible] (and six others whose names and descriptions must be inserted,) members of a congregation or community of to wit: [illegible] in the county of [illegible] in the said district. And the said E. F. &c. being duly examined, satisfied the court that the said C. D. is the settled minister, or clergyman of the said congregation or community, and was regularly ordained, constituted and appointed thereto.

G. H. chairman.
I. K. clerk of the peace.

III. Provided nevertheless, That no such certificate shall be given by the said quarter sessions as aforesaid, unless the person applying for the same, shall have given notice in writing to the clerk of the peace at, or before, the general quarter sessions, immediately preceding that on which he shall apply for such certificate, which notice in writing, the said clerk of the peace shall read in open court, and shall also fix up in some conspicuous part of his office, within eight days after the same shall have been so read, for which service, he the said clerk of the peace, shall be entitled to demand and receive the sum of five shillings and no more.

IV. Provided also, and be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no such minister or clergyman shall at any time celebrate the ceremony of matrimony between any two persons, as aforesaid described, unless he shall on three several Sundays before he shall celebrate the said ceremony, openly and with a loud voice in the church, chapel, meeting-house or other place of worship of such congregation or religious community, either in some intermediate part of the service, or immediately before it begins, or immediately after it is ended, declare his intention to do, and that at each time of making such declaration, also declare the number of times for which he shall have made such declaration respectively, or unless such minister or clergyman shall have been duly authorised by licence under the hand and seal of the governor, lieutenant governor or perſon adminiſtering the government of the province, to celebrate the ſaid ceremony between the two perſons therein named.

V. And be it further enacted by the authority aforeſaid. That it ſhall and may be lawful, to and for the parties thus married or either of them, to demand of the ſaid miniſter or clergyman, and he is hereby authoriſed and required to give the ſame a certificate of ſuch marriage, which may be in the following form; viz.

WHEREAS A. B. of and C. D. of were deſirous of intermarrying with each other, and have applied to me for that purpoſe, their intention ſo to do having been regularly proclaimed on three ſeveral Sundays as is directed; or having preſented a licence, as the caſe may be. Now theſe are to certify, that I, E. F. miniſter of the community of it have this day married the ſaid A. B. and C. D. together, and they are become legally contracted to each other. Proclamation.

PETER RUSSELL, Eſq. Preſident, adminiſtering the Government of his Majeſty's Province of Upper Canada.

WHEREAS by an act of the parliament of Great Britain, paſſed in the thirty-firſt year of his Majeſty's reign, intitled "An act to repeal certain parts of an act paſſed in the fourteenth year of his Majeſty's reign, entitled "An act for making more effectual proviſion for the government of the province of Quebec in North America;" and to make further proviſion for the government of the ſaid province;" it is among other things provided, that whenever any bill which ſhall have been paſſed by the Legiſlative Council and by the Houſe of Aſſembly, in either of the ſaid provinces reſpectively, ſhall be preſented for his Majeſty's aſſent to the Governor, or Lieutenant Governor of ſuch province, or to the perſon adminiſtering his Majeſty's government therein, ſuch Governor, or Lieutenant Governor, or perſon adminiſtering the government, ſhall, and he is hereby authorized and required to declare, according to his diſcretion; but ſubject nevertheleſs, to the proviſion contained in the ſaid act, and to ſuch inſtructions as may be given in that behalf by his Majeſty, his heirs, or ſucceſſors, that he aſſents to ſuch bill in his Majeſty's name, or that he withholds his Majeſty's aſſent from ſuch bill, or that he reſerves ſuch bill for the ſignification of his Majeſty's pleaſure thereon.

And whereas a certain act intituled an act to extend the proviſions of an act paſſed in the ſecond ſeſſion of the firſt provincial Parliament of Upper Canada, intituled "An act to confirm and make valid certain Marriages heretofore contracted in the country now comprized within the province of Upper Canada, and to provide for the future ſolemnization of Marriage within the ſame" was paſſed by the Legiſlative Council and Houſe of Aſſembly, in the firſt ſeſſion of the preſent Parliament of the ſaid province, and preſented to me, PETER RUSSELL, Preſident, adminiſtering the government as aforeſaid, for his Majeſty's aſſent thereto, and was by me reſerved for the ſignification of his Majeſty's pleaſure thereon; and tranſmitted to his Majeſty's Secretary of State for the ſignification of his Majeſty's pleaſure thereon accordingly.

Now therefore know ye, that the ſaid act having been referred to a Committee of the Lords of his Majeſty's moſt honorable Privy Council, appointed for the conſideration of all matters relating to Trade and foreign Plantations, the ſaid Lords of the Committee on the twenty-ſeventh day of December, in the year of our Lord one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety ſeven, reported as their opinion to his Majeſty, that the ſaid act was proper to be approved—his Majeſty was thereupon pleaſed, with the advice of his Privy Council, to declare his approbation of the ſaid act: And purſuant to his Majeſty's Royal Pleaſure thereon expreſſed, the ſaid act is hereby confirmed, finally enacted and ratified accordingly; whereof the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Commander in Chief of this his Majeſty's ſaid province of Upper Canada, for the time being, and all other perſons whom it may concern, are to take notice, and govern themſelves accordingly.

Given under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at York, this twenty-ninth day of November, in the thirty-ninth year of his Majeſty's reign.

PETER RUSSELL.

By Command of his Honor,
WM. JARVIS, Sec'y.

Proclamation.

PETER RUSSELL, Eſq. Preſident, adminiſtering the Government of Upper Canada.

WHEREAS by Letters received from his Grace the Duke of Portland, one of his Majeſty's principal Secretaries of State, ſince the iſſuing the Proclamation of the thirty-firſt of October laſt, it appears, that in conſequence of a Repreſentation made by the Executive Government of this Province to his Majeſty's Miniſters, on the exemption of the U. E. LOYALISTS and their CHILDREN from every Expence attending the Grants of Land made, or to be made to them; his Majeſty has been graciouſly pleaſed to ſignify his Royal Pleaſure that the FIRST LOYALISTS, and their SONS and DAUGHTERS, ſhall continue to receive his Majeſty's BOUNTY of TWO HUNDRED ACRES each, as heretofore, free from any Expence whatever. And that it is to be underſtood, that this Mark of the Royal Munificence is expreſſly confined to thoſe LOYALISTS only, who were actually reſident in the Province on or before the TWENTY-EIGHTH of July laſt.

Be it therefore known, that notwithſtanding what has been declared to the contrary, in the Proclamation aforeſaid, all Loyaliſts coming within the above deſcription, whoſe Names have been enrolled upon the U. E. Liſts previous to the date of this Proclamation, and their Sons and Daughters when of age or married, to whom the King's Bounty in Lands has not been already extended, may continue to conſider themſelves entitled to receive from this Government, Two Hundred Acres of Land free from the payment of Fees and all other Charges, but that, except to the extent allowed by his Majeſty's Inſtructions, neither U. E. Loyaliſts, nor their Children, can be conſidered as exempted from the STANDING FEES, it having been ordered that they ſhall be annexed to every further Grant of Land, to them as well as to others, be its extent what it may.

Given under my Hand and Seal at Arms, in Council at York, this fifteenth day of December, in the thirty-ninth year of his Majeſty's reign, and in the year of our Lord one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety eight.

PETER RUSSELL.

By Command of the Preſident in Council,

JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

Proclamation.

PETER RUSSELL, Eſq. Preſident, adminiſtering the Government of his Majeſty's province of Upper Canada.

Whereas it appears by certain information, that a large quantity of HAY, the property of the hon ROBERT HAMILTON of Queenſton, was lately deſtroyed by FIRE---and that ſince, on the night of the IXth inſt. another conſiderable ſtock was, by the ſame means, alſo deſtroyed---and that there is great reaſon to believe that the ſame have been wantonly and maliciouſly ſet on fire. NOW, for the better detecting of the perſon or perſons who may have been guilty of this moſt baſe and felonious act, ſo that he or they may be brought to juſtice, I do by theſe preſents, with the advice of his Majeſty's Executive Council, offer a reward of to any perſon or perſons, who will give information of thoſe who have perpetrated either of the above offences, upon conviction of any of them. And I do hereby further offer his Majeſty's moſt gracious PARDON to any of the offenders (other than the principal concerned in the above diabolical tranſactions) upon the conviction of any perſon or perſons of whom he ſhall give information.

GIVEN under my hand and ſeal at arms, this twenty firſt day of November, in the thirty-ninth year of his Majeſty's reign, at York, in the ſaid province.

PETER RUSSELL, Preſident.

BY ORDER OF THE PRESIDENT,
ALEX. BURNS, ſec.

By Authority.

PETER RUSSELL, PRESIDENT.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the third, by the grace of God of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, king defender of the faith, &c. &c. &c.

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS,
GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our proclamation bearing date the thirtieth day of November, we thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council to prorogue our provincial parliament until the ſeventh day of this preſent month of January, at which time in our town of YORK you were held and conſtrained to appear; but we taking into our royal conſideration the eaſe and convenience of our loving ſubjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council, to relieve you, and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforeſaid, hereby convoking, and by theſe preſents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the FOURTH day of FEBRUARY next enſuing, you meet us in our provincial parliament, in our town of York, there to take into conſideration the ſtate and welfare of our province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may ſeem neceſſary:—Herein fail not. In teſtimony whereof we have cauſed theſe our letters to be made patent, and the great ſeal of our ſaid province to be hereunto affixed:—Witneſs the honorable PETER RUSSELL, eſq. preſident adminiſtering the government of our ſaid province, this twenty-ninth day of December, in the year of our Lord one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety-eight, and of our reign the thirty-ninth.

LATEST FROM ENGLAND.

The ſhip Cumberland, captain Scott, arrived at Portland from Liverpool, via Dublin, has brought the following news.

Further, and the lateſt, unofficial accounts of the Mediterranean fleet.

LONDON, September 21.

WE yeſterday ſtopped the preſs to announce a communication which had been made by the Telegraph to the admiralty, of French papers having been received at Dover, and one of them containing an account of the defeat of the French fleet in the Mediterranean by Sir Horatio Nelſon. This communication of courſe excited a moſt lively intereſt and anxiety. In the evening the French papers reached town, and the articles above alluded to we found in a ſupplement to the Redacteur of the 14th, in the following words:

"Letters from Malta inform, that Buonaparte had landed on the firſt of July, with the whole of his army at Alexandria, that after having entered into a treaty of amity with the chiefs of the Arabs, he directed his march along the Nile to Grand Cairo, which he entered on the 22d of July, at the head of the French army, and that having rendered himſelf maſter of Lower Egypt, he was continuing his march.—The ſame letters inform us, that the ſquadron of admiral Brueys had anchored on the coaſt of Bignieres, and was preparing to return to France, when it was attacked by the Engliſh ſquadron, which was ſuperior to ours both in number and the ſize of the veſſels; that on both ſides the action was maintained with a degree of obſtinacy, of which hiſtory affords no example; that during the action the veſſel of the French admiral was burnt; that two or three French ſhips ſunk; and that ſome others, both Engliſh and French, ran aground, after having loſt all their maſts; and that, finally, ſome other French ſhips, quite diſabled, remained on the ſpot where the battle was fought. We are much alarmed about their fate.

September 20.

Sun Office, half paſt 1, P. M.

We ſtop the preſs to announce, that we learn from undoubted authority, that by the Admiralty Telegraph intelligence has juſt been conveyed, of a French paper of the 15th having been this forenoon landed at Dover, containing the very gratifying information of an action having taken place between Admiral Nelſon and the French fleet, on their return from Alexandria, in which the Britiſh was happily victorious.

September 18, 19, 20.

The various accounts which have been received reſpecting the operations of the French army under Buonaparte, have much contributed to perplex the public opinion.—That of Saturday, by the Hamburgh mail, of the French having ſuſtained a very conſiderable defeat, ſeemed to be contradicted and overthrown by the accounts received by the Eaſt India Company, from their agent at Conſtantinople; while on the other hand the ſtatements by the mail which arrived on Monday, ſeemed to confirm thoſe brought by the former. We have been at great pains to trace theſe various accounts, to compare and to digeſt them; and we think we can ſay with a conſiderable degree of confidence, that the Company's agent muſt have adopted vague and haſty reports, while the intelligence by the mails was founded on more authentic information. By letters from Conſtantinople, of as recent a date as thoſe received by the overland diſpatch, and which amount in fact to official authority, it ſeems certain that Buonaparte had received a very conſiderable defeat near Roſetta, in conſequence of which he was obliged to encamp and to entrench himſelf. In this ſituation he could neither advance nor retreat, while the Arabs were collecting in immenſe numbers with the determination to attack and overwhelm him. From a view of the map, and after a temperate conſideration of all circumſtances, we are ſtrengthened in our opinion that the accounts of Buonaparte having poſſeſſed himſelf of Grand Cairo muſt be unfounded. It is a march of about 120 or 130 miles, through a country preſenting innumerable difficulties to any army, and more particularly when that army muſt be harraſſed and beſet by ſuch ſuperior numbers.

THE ORACLE.

YORK. Saturday, January 5.

We beg leave to return the honorable Peter Ruſſell, eſq; Preſident, our thanks, for enabling us thus early, to lay an official account of the almoſt total deſtruction of the French fleet by admiral Nelſon, before our readers.

Glorious! glorious news!

From the London Gazette.

Admiralty-office, Oct. 2, 1798.

The hon. capt. Capel, of his majeſty's ſloop Mutine, arrived this morning with diſpatches from rear admiral Sir Horatio Nelſon, K. B. to Evan Nepean, eſq; ſecretary to the admiralty, of which the following are copies:

Vanguard, Mouth of the Nile,
Auguſt 7, 1798.

SIR,

Herewith I have the honor to tranſmit you a copy of my letter to the earl of St. Vincent, together with a line of battle of the Engliſh and French ſquadrons, alſo a liſt of killed and wounded. I have the pleaſure to inform you, that eight of our ſhips have already top-gallant yards acroſs, and ready for any ſervice; the others with the prizes, will ſoon be ready for ſea. In an event of this importance, I have thought it beſt to ſend capt. Capel, with a copy of my letter (to the commander in chief) over land, which I hope their lordſhips will approve; and beg leave to refer them to captain Capel, who is a moſt excellent officer, and fully able to give every information; and I beg leave to recommend him to their lordſhips notice.

I have the honor to be, &c.

H. NELSON.

P. S. The iſland I have taken poſſeſſion of, and brought off the two thirteen-inch mortars, all the braſs guns, and deſtroyed the iron ones.

Evan Nepean, eſq.

Vanguard, off the Mouth of the Nile,
Auguſt 3, 1798.

My Lord,

Almighty God has bleſſed his majeſty's arms in the late battle, by a great victory over the fleet of the enemy, whom I attacked at ſun-ſet on the 1ſt of Auguſt off the Mouth of the Nile. The enemy were moored in a ſtrong line of battle for defending the entrance of the bay (of Shoals) ſtarked by numerous gun boats, four frigates, and a battery of guns and mortars on an iſland in their van; but nothing could withſtand the ſquadron your lordſhip did me the honour to place under my command.—Their high ſtate of diſcipline is well known to you, and with the judgment of the captains, together with their valour, and that of the officers and men of every deſcription, it was abſolutely irreſiſtible.

Could any thing from my pen add to the characters of the captains, I would write it with pleaſure, but that is impoſſible.

I have to regret the loſs of capt. Weſtcott of the Majeſtic, who was killed early in the action, but the ſhip continued to be ſo well fought by the firſt lieut. Mr. Cuthbert, that I have given him an order to command her till your lordſhip's pleaſure is known.

The ſhips of the enemy, all but their two rear ſhips, are nearly diſmaſted: and thoſe two, with two frigates, I am ſorry to ſay, made their eſcape; nor was it, I aſſure you, in my power to prevent them. Capt. Hood moſt handſomely endeavoured to do it, but I had no ſhip in a condition to ſupport the Zealous, and I was obliged to call her in.

The ſupport and aſſiſtance I have received from captain Berry, cannot be ſufficiently expreſſed. I was wounded in the head, and obliged to be carried off the deck, but the ſervice ſuffered no loſs by that event. Capt. Berry was fully equal to the important ſervice then going on, and to him I muſt beg leave to refer you for every information relative to his victory. He will preſent you with the flag of the ſecond in command, that of the commander in chief being burnt in the L'Orient.

Herewith I tranſmit you liſts of the killed and wounded, and the lines of battle of ourſelves and the French.

H. NELSON.

To admiral the earl of St. Vincent, commander in chief, &c. off Cadiz.

Number of Engliſh line of battle ſhips 14, and La Mutine brig.

Number of French line of battle ſhips 13, and four frigates, out of which we took two of 80 guns, ſeven of 74, burnt the L'Orient, of 120, and Timoleon of 74, together with a 36 gun frigate, and diſmaſted and ſunk another friga e of 36 guns; two ſhips of the line and two frigates only eſcaped from us of the whole French fleet.

H. NELSON.

Vanguard, off the Mouth of the Nile,
Auguſt 3, 1798.

Return of the killed and wounded on board his majeſty's ſhips, under my command, in the action with the French at anchor, on the 1ſt of Auguſt, 1798, off the Nile.

Proclamation.

PETER RUSSELL, Esq; President, administering the Government of his Majesty's Province of Upper Canada.

WHEREAS by an act of the parliament of Great Britain, passed in the thirty first year of his Majesty's reign, intitled "An act to repeal certain parts of an act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, intitled "An act for making more effectual provision for the government of the province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said province;" it is among other things provided, that whenever any bill which has been passed by the Legislative Council and by the House of Assembly, in either of the said provinces respectively, shall be presented for his Majesty's assent to the Governor, or Lieutenant Governor of such province, or to the person administering his Majesty's government therein, such Governor, or Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the government, shall, and he is hereby authorized and required to declare, according to his discretion; but subject nevertheless, to the provision contained in the said act, and to such instructions as may be given in that behalf by his Majesty, his heirs, or successors, that he assents to such bill in his Majesty's name, or that he withholds his Majesty's assent from such bill, or that he reserves such bill for the signification of his Majesty's pleasure thereon.

And whereas a certain act intituled an act to extend the provisions of an act passed in the second session of the first provincial Parliament of Upper Canada, intituled "An act to confirm and make valid certain Marriages heretofore contracted in the country now comprised within the province of Upper Canada, and to provide for the future solemnization of Marriage within the same;" was passed by the Legislative Council and House of Assembly, in the first session of the present Parliament of the said province, and presented to me, PETER RUSSELL, President, administering the government as aforesaid, for his Majesty's assent thereto, and was by me reserved for the signification of his Majesty's pleasure thereon; and transmitted to his Majesty's Secretary of State for the signification of his Majesty's pleasure thereon accordingly.

Now therefore know ye, that the said act having been referred to a Committee of the Lords of his Majesty's most honorable Privy Council, appointed for the consideration of all matters relating to Trade and foreign Plantations, the said Lords of the Committee on the twenty-seventh day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-seven, reported as their opinion to his Majesty, that the said act was proper to be approved—his Majesty was thereupon pleased, with the advice of his Privy Council, to declare his approbation of his Royal Pleasure thereon expressed, the said act is hereby confirmed, finally enacted and ratified accordingly; whereof the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Commander in Chief of this his Majesty's said province of Upper Canada, for the time being, and all other persons whom it may concern, are to take notice, and govern themselves accordingly.

Given under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at York, this twenty-ninth day of November, in the thirty-ninth year of his Majesty's reign.

PETER RUSSELL.

By Command of his Honor,
WM. JARVIS, Sec'y.

Proclamation.

PETER RUSSELL, Esq; President, administering the Government of Upper Canada.

WHEREAS by Letters received from his Grace the Duke of Portland, one of his Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, since the issuing the Proclamation of the thirty-first of October last, it appears, that in consequence of a Representation made by the Executive Government of this Province to his Majesty's Ministers, on the exemption of the U. E. LOYALISTS and their CHILDREN from every Expence attending the Grants of Land made, or to be made to them; his Majesty has been graciously pleased to signify his Royal Pleasure that the FIRST LOYALISTS, and their SONS and DAUGHTERS, shall continue to receive his Majesty's BOUNTY of TWO HUNDRED ACRES each, as heretofore, free from any Expence whatever. And that it is to be understood, that this Mark of the Royal Munificence is expressly confined to those LOYALISTS only, who were actually resident in the Province on or before the TWENTY-EIGHTH of July last.

Be it therefore known, that notwithstanding what has been declared to the contrary, in the Proclamation aforesaid, all Loyalists coming within the above description, whose Names have been enrolled upon the U. E. Lists previous to the date of this Proclamation, and their Sons and Daughters when of age or married, to whom the King's Bounty in Lands has not been already extended, may continue to consider themselves entitled to receive from this Government, Two Hundred Acres of Land free from the payment of Fees and all other Charges, but that, except to the extent allowed by his Majesty's Instructions, neither U. E. Loyalists, nor their sons and daughters, are to be considered as entitled to any Grant of Land, free from the payment of Fees, or any other Charges.

Given under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at York, this twenty-ninth day of November, in the thirty-ninth year of his Majesty's reign.

PETER RUSSELL.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, January 12.

Voluntary ſubſcription of the Royal Artillery in Fort George, Weſt Niagara, towards carrying on the war; the non commiſſioned officers give one guinea each; and the gunners give, ſome ſix, and ſome twelve days pay.

Some days ago the houſe of Mr. James Willſon, at the Head of the Lake, was unfortunately burnt to the ground.

SCRAPS FROM LONDON PAPERS.

As the French have begun to place buſts of GREAT MEN in the council halls at Paris, it is to be hoped that they will not forget Jack Cade, Wat Tyler, and ſome Engliſh patriots of the preſent day, whoſe heads would do no diſhonor to the revolutionary worthies of that country, but which are wholly unfit for a Britiſh gallery, except a Surgeon's hall.

A Frenchman has lately preſented a buſt of Buonaparte to the directory, for which he was voted a reward. The directory are particularly anxious to encourage the ſculptor of a buſt of Buonaparte, becauſe it is ſomewhat problematical whether they will ever again ſee the ORIGINAL.

The French lament in their journals that they are ſtill inferior to the Romans. The only points however, in which this inferiority according to them conſiſts, is, that at their feaſts they are only able to produce 6 lions and two elephants, whereas the people of Rome in the time of Pompey, had 600 lions, and above 20 elephants.

If the French are inferior to the Romans in the number of BEASTS within their dominions, they are at leaſt greatly ſuperior in the number of SAVAGES.

It was certainly the higheſt ſtretch of republican impudence in citizen Sieyes to ſpeak of the "MORALITY OF HIS CHARACTER," in his addreſs to the king of Pruſſia, after having waded through all the horrors of a revolution that ſeems to have exiſted only for the diſgrace and diſturbance of mankind.

We are told in a jacobin print, that two men more worthy of eſteem cannot be ſelected than Charles Fox and John H. Tooke. The writer of this high panegyric, no doubt, means more worthy OF THE ESTEEM OF EACH OTHER.

According to report, moſt of the Iriſh rebels who have been executed for their crimes, died with "great firmneſs." The proper interpretation of theſe words is HARDENED DEPRAVITY.

It is ſaid, that the French directory, wiſhing to renew the negociations with America, have propoſed to give up the iſland of Guadaloupe to the United States as a ſecurity for the adjuſtment of American claims in conſequence of the depredations committed by the French cruiſers on the American commerce.

Dublin, Sept. 25.

By a ſecond communication made through the admiralty Telegraph at London late on Thurſday evening, the detail of admiral Nelſon's victory has been in a good meaſure notified; it was underſtood, according to our correſpondent's letter, "that Buonaparte had been purpoſely ſuffered to land his men at Alexandria, in order that the Porte ſhould be roufed to a ſenſe of indignation againſt France; that admiral Nelſon had therefore retired from Alexandria, when he diſcovered that he anticipated the French fleet, but that having returned in a ſhort time, he found that fleet ſo fortunately diſpoſed that he attacked it with the happieſt ſucceſs.

FROM THE LONDON GAZETTE.

DOWNING-STREET, Oct. 6.

BY advices received from his majesty's minister at Constantinople, dated Sept. 3d, it appears that WAR has been declared by the grand seignior against the French; that the French minister with his whole legation has been sent to the castle of the Seven Towers, and that some French merchant ships in the harbor had been taken possession of. The Russian auxiliary squadron was in sight off Constantinople on that day.

WHITEHALL, Oct. 6.

The king has been pleased to grant the dignity of a BARON of the kingdom of Great-Britain to sir HORATIO NELSON, K. B. rear admiral of the blue squadron of his majesty's fleet, and the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten, by the name, stile and title of baron Nelson of the Nile, and of Burnham Thorp, in the county of Norfolk.

LONDON, Oct. 5.

The following account has been sent home by sir Horatio Nelson of his splendid victory. He would no doubt, have entered more into the detail, but he considered the business as not yet ended while a single battery or ship remained to be destroyed. After the battle it appears that he proceeded instantly to seize on and dismantle the batteries on shore, by which he had been annoyed; and to employ his whole force in measures for destroying the transports which were left at Alexandria or Rosetta. According to the report made by the honorable Capel, those measures were taken with such skill, and executed with such alacrity, that it was thought very few, if any of them would escape, & the whole armament amounted to 350 vessels. So complete a destruction has not occured in the annals of our maritime glory, since the overthrow of the Spanish Armada; and tho' the battle was fought at so great a distance from our shores, in its consequences it may be little less auspicious to England, since it is manifest that the armament was directed against a vital part of our empire, and the French gen. might have reached his destination. It is in vain to deny that they are formidable by land, however contemptible by sea; and we have reason to thank our glorious marine that we have been able to check the progress of their career on our own element. We consider their career as completely checked, for it will now be impossible for Buonaparte to proceed to India. Ministers yesterday along with a short extract of the news, published the following information:—

"Buonaparte was at Cairo, completely at variance with all his officers, who are discontented with the expedition. The soldiers are all sickly, and poisoned with the water of the country. The Grand Signior is making every effort to cut off supplies. Buonaparte's dispatches are taken."

We understand that these dispatches stated to the Directory, that without reinforcements it would be impossible for him to proceed, or even to maintain his position at Cairo for any length of time, as the inhabitants in general were inimical to his progress.

But to return to the victory: As commodore Trowbridge, in the Culloden, unfortunately got ashore before the action, and tho' he made every exertion, was unable to participate in the glory of the fight, this reduced the two lines of battle to an equality in point of numerical force; but the weight of mettle, number of guns and men, of frigates & gun-boats, and in the material circumstance of batteries on shore, the French had greatly the advantage. The French had three 80 gun ships, and one of 120 guns, whereas we had none of higher rate than 74's. The French had 1190 guns, the English only 1012, & a deduction from that number must be made of the Culloden's 74 guns, as she was unable to take any part in the action. When these things are considered, and it is reflected that the English admiral run close in shore to make the attack on a fleet moored to receive him; that the battle was fought at night, and that but two out of thirteen of the enemy's ships engaged escaped, it is in all its circumstances a most splendid victory.

It was also as remarkable, we understand, for single acts of heroism, as for the general display of gallantry. Capt. Darby, in the Bellerophon, of 74 guns, attacked the l'Orient, of 120 singly, & burnt her; it was in the explosion of this ship that he lost so many of his officers and men.

There were so many prisoners made, that we understand sir Horatio determined to put them ashore as soon as he had completed the destruction of the transports. Of the two frigates that escaped one was afterwards taken at Rhodes. There is no account of the arrival of the 2 line of battle ships which escaped and the other frigate, having arrived at any port in France, and it is therefore probable they may also fall into our hands, and complete the destruction of the whole.

The French admiral's ship, l'Orient, which was blown up, had on board 1010 men.—Admiral Brueys himself, who commanded her, and the capt. on board were both killed before she took fire.—On board this ship was the whole of the treasures taken by the French at Malta, which was very considerable.

The number of men on board le Timoleon, the other French ship which was burnt, is said to be 700; and the crew of l'Alteimife frigate burnt, and le Serecute sunk, amounted to 500. The total loss of the French is estimated at between four and five thousand; that of the British, in killed and wounded, 895. Admiral Nelson received a severe wound in the head from a splinter, but we are happy to add, that in a private letter from the admiral to lady Spencer, he says that he is nearly recovered. Sir James Saumarez is also in a fair way of recovery.

Extract of a letter from on board the Orion, dated Bequier Road, Aug. 9.

"Sir H. Nelson has sent an officer to India, with the account of the victory; lieut. Duval, of the Zealous, is charged with his dispatches, and set off yesterday in a Turkish boat, which was to land him in Syria, on his way to Aleppo: a vessel detained the day before with dispatches and letters from Buonaparte's army at Grand Cairo, will make the admiral's dispatches still more interesting to our settlements in India, as they all tend to represent the French army in the most disastrous situation, as well from the severities they had undergone in their march across the sandy deserts, as from the depredations of the Mamalukes and Arabs, and also from being deprived of wine and spirits, without which the French troops find it next to impossible to resist the excessive heat, or endure fatigue. It appears that Buonaparte meant to proceed to Suez, and demanded transports & craft to meet him on the Nile; but when he hears the defeat of the French fleet, it will throw him into despair, particularly as the squadron sir H. Nelson proposes to keep up here, will effectually cut off for some time all communication with Alexandria.

"The Guerrier being an old ship, sir H. Nelson proposes to destroy her, and send the others to England, under convoy of sir J. Saumarez, with those of our ships which had suffered most in the action; these are the Orion, Bellerophon, Alexander, Majestic, Theseus, Goliah, and Defence.

"Sir James Saumarez was getting well of his wound—he hoped soon to be well as ever.

"Capt. Berry is coming home over land through Italy and Germany, with dispatches from admiral Nelson."

The demonstrations of joy last night were universal, and continued to a late hour. The Admiralty office set the example of an illumination, which immediately became general, and which is expected to take place this night.

We rejoice to learn that ministers are resolved to make our great naval superiority effectual to the renovation of our commerce in the Mediterranean & the Levant: a compact is entered into with the king of Naples, by which the ports of Sicily are to be put into our possession, for the defence of his dominions, and for the purposes of our naval operations in those seas. Gen. St ward is actually gone to take the command, and our troops lately in Portugal are on their way thither. A most critical post will be thus established. The blockade of Malta will be formed and continued without danger to our ships, as they will take shelter in the ports of Melfina and Syracuse, and hopes are even entertained that the island will fall into our hands. The first fruits of this victory may be its surrender, and its possession would greatly facilitate the recovery of the Levant trade.

In this view at least, this great event ought to be considered as one of the most valuable, as it certainly is the most shining conquest we have gained. Every man who has a guinea at stake, is in hopes, by his industry and exertions, to acquire a stake in the country, ought to feel proud of the elevation which our fleets have given to the British name, and the security they have conferred on the British shores.

POSTSCRIPT

To the Mercantile Advertiser.

Capt. Adams, of the brig Commerce, from Gibraltar, brings verbal information that the Algerines have declared War against the Greeks; and that Great Britain had declared War against all the powers in alliance with France.

Capt. Adams has obligingly favored the Editor of the Mercantile Advertiser with a list of the vessels engaged in the late naval contest at Rosetta Bay, which was presented to him in a manuscript by the governor of Gibraltar, and which corresponds with that given in our paper of Saturday last; with this addition, that the loss of the French in killed, wounded and prisoners, was 9000. This statement was not official; but had been verbally communicated by capt. Hawke, who had arrived at Gibraltar. [Captain Hawke, we presume of the British navy.]

The following is a recapitulation of the loss of the English, and a comparative view of the English and French weight of metal employed in the action abovementioned:

	Killed.	Wounded.
English officers,	16	30
Seamen,	136	570
Marines,	56	78
	198	678

LONDON, Oct. 6.

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF THE VICTORY!

COMMON COUNCIL.

Yesterday a court of common council was held at Guildhall, for the purpose of considering of an address to the king on the late naval VICTORY; present, the lord mayor, eight aldermen, and a great number of commoners.

His lordship, on the opening of the court, called the attention of the members to a letter he had received from the victorious admiral lord Nelson, and a sword, which his lordship presented to the court, and the letter was read, as follows:

Vanguard, mouth of the Nile, Aug. 8.

MY LORD,

"Having the honor of being a freeman of the city of London, I take the liberty of sending to your lordship the sword of the commanding French admiral (Brueys. Bruquet) who survived after the battle of the 1st. off the Nile, and request that the city of London will honor me by the acceptance of it, as a remembrance that Britannia still rules the waves; which (that she may forever do, is the fervent prayer of your lordship's most obedient servant,

H. NELSON.

The right hon. the lord mayor of London.

The court, previous to its breaking up, voted 500l. to the subscription at Lloyd's for the widows and orphans of those who fell in the battle off the Nile.

The subscription at Lloyd's for the benefit of the widows and orphans of the brave men who fell in the late glorious action, already amount to upwards of 12,000l. Subscriptions have also been opened in most of the principal towns in England, for the same patriotic and benevolent object.

It is said that the packet intercepted by lord Nelson's fleet, with dispatches from Buonaparte's army and the French fleet, to France, amongst others contained a letter from admiral Brueys to the minister of marine at Paris, in which he describes the position he had taken with his fleet and the dispositions he had made. In the conclusion of this letter, he says, "that he considers his situation impregnable, that if the whole navy of England was to come to the attack, they could make no impression on his line."

An emigrant of distinction, says a London paper, was lately arrested at Paris, but by a desperate exertion, broke from the persons who were conducting him to prison. As he ran, his pursuers cried out, "an emigrant, an emigrant." The people appeared interested in his fate, and by making way for him, fought to aid his escape. On this, the others vociferated, "a thief, a thief;" when he was stopped and seized, rendered before a military tribunal, by whom he was sentenced to be shot. This anecdote is recording in support of the assertions repeatedly made, that with the exception of the purchasers of national and emigrant property, and persons immediately participating in the public administration, the people of France are decidedly inimical to the system by which they are at present governed.

Very correct—and not very extraordinary information.

The sum total of Buonaparte's land operations are said to be contained in the following:

Buonaparte, after leaving the fleet in the Mediterranean, marched over land in an HOUR with his army to the Red Sea, thro' which he and his brave followers SWAM to Asia, and the day after took sir John Anstruther prisoner as he was delivering a charge to the grand jury of Bengal!!!

The great nation is going to finish the Tower of Babel. They argue, that the confusion of tongues can never defeat their object, after what has happened in the national tabernacle when every man spoke at the same time!!!

BALTIMORE, Nov. 20.

By the schooner American, capt. Vibert, 43 days from Cadiz, the following account of the action between the British and French fleets in the mouth of the Nile, is received in manuscript, from on board the Vile de Paris, admiral Jarvis.

MEMORANDUM.

This action took place in Rosetta Bay, at one of the mouths of the Nile, with the enemy at an anchor, when the British fleet ran in (excepting the leading ship, the Culloden, which unfortunately got on shore) and anchored along side the French with head and stern anchors.

Minute of facts stated in the dispatches to lord St. Vincent.

The French transports ran into the Nile, and Buonaparte landed with only a few days provisions on hand; with about thirty eight thousand men, two thousand having been cut to pieces on an attempt to land at Alexandria, where they expected a passive reception. The last dispatches state that the only supplies Buonaparte could get were a little rice and water, brought to him on camels by the Arabs, but that the Turks were taking measures, not only to cut off this succor, but to march against him.

The crew of the Timelon, when the ship took fire, attempted to live themselves on shore, but were all cut to pieces. The l'Orient's people were in part destroyed in the same manner, and blown up, only a few escaped, perhaps into the woods to starve.

The French fleet at the time of the action, had only five days provision on board.

I hasten to inform you of the dreadful situation our unhappy town (Wilmington, N. Carolina) was yesterday Nov. 1, reduced to, by fire; our whole town, except 12 dwelling houses, and some out-houses, is levelled with the earth. The fire began at a stable house; cause unknown.

An ACT to extend the Provisions of an Act passed in the second session of the first Provincial Parliament of Upper Canada, intitled, "An Act to confirm and make valid certain Marriages, heretofore contracted in the Country now comprized within the Province of Upper Canada, and to provide for the future Solemnization of Marriage within the same."

WHEREAS it hath been found expedient to extend the provisions of a certain act passed in the thirty-third year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "An act to confirm and make valid certain marriages heretofore contracted in the country now comprized within the province of Upper-Canada, and to provide for the future solemnization of marriage within the same," Be it therefore enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the legislative council and assembly of the province of Upper-Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an act passed in the parliament of Great-Britain, entitled an act to repeal certain parts of an act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "An act for making more effectual provision for the government of the province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said province, and by the authority of the same, That from and after the passing of this act, it shall and may be lawful to, and for the minister, or clergyman of any congregation, or religious community of persons professing to be members of the Church of Scotland, or Lutherans, or Calvinists who shall be authorized in manner hereafter directed, to celebrate the ceremony of matrimony according to the rites of such church or religious community, between any two persons, neither of whom are under any legal disqualification to contract matrimony, and one of whom shall have been a member of such congregation, or religious community, at least six months before the said marriage; any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding.

II. Provided nevertheless, and be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no person shall be taken or deemed to be a minister or clergyman of any such congregation or religious community within the intent and meaning of this act, who shall not have been regularly ordained, constituted or appointed according to the rites and forms of such congregation or religious community, and unless he shall have appeared or come before the justices of the peace, assembled in quarter sessions in the district in which he shall reside, when not less than six magistrates, besides the chairman, shall be present, and shall have them with him at least seven respectable persons, members of the congregation or religious community to which he shall belong, who shall declare him to be their minister or clergyman, and unless he shall produce proofs of his ordination, constitution or appointment to that office, and unless he shall then and there take the oath of allegiance to his Majesty, when, if it shall appear to the majority of the justices, then present, expedient and proper, they are hereby authorized to grant him a certificate under the seal of the court and signed by the chairman and clerk of the peace, (for which the said clerk of the peace shall be entitled to demand and receive the sum of five shillings,) certifying him to be the settled minister or clergyman of such congregation or religious community, which certificate shall be in the following form:—

BE IT REMEMBERED, That at the general quarter sessions of the peace, holden at the town of in the county of in and for the district, on the day of in the year of our Lord, before A. B. (and six others,) etquire, and others, justices of our sovereign lord the King, assigned to keep the peace in the said district, &c. came C. D. of together with E. F. of (and six others whose names and descriptions must be inserted,) members of a congregation or community of at in the county of in the said district. And the said E. F. &c. being duly examined satisfied the court that the said C. D. is the settled minister, or clergyman of the said congregation or community, and was regularly ordained, constituted and appointed thereto.

G. H. chairman.

I. K. clerk of the peace.

III. Provided nevertheless, That no such certificate shall be given by the said quarter sessions as aforesaid, unless the person applying for the same, shall have given notice in writing to the clerk of the peace at, or before, the general quarter sessions, immediately preceding that on which he shall apply for such certificate, which notice in writing, the said clerk of the peace shall read in open court, and shall also fix up in some conspicuous part of his office, within eight days after the same shall have been so read, for which service, he the said clerk of the peace, shall be entitled to demand and receive the sum of five shillings and no more.

IV. Provided also, and be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no such minister or clergyman shall at any time celebrate the ceremony of matrimony between any two persons, as above described, unless he shall on three several Sundays before he shall celebrate the said ceremony, openly and with a loud voice in the church, chapel, meeting house or other place of worship of such congregation or religious community, either in some intermediate part of the service, or immediately before it begins, or immediately after it is ended, declare his intention so to do, and shall at each time of making such declaration, also declare the number of times for which he shall have made such declaration respectively, or unless such minister or clergyman shall have been duly authorized by license under the hand and seal of the governor, lieutenant governor or perſon adminiſtering the government of the province, to celebrate the ſaid ceremony between the two perſons therein named.

V. And be it further enacted by the authority aforeſaid. That it ſhall and may be lawful, to and for the parties thus married or either of them, to demand of the ſaid miniſter or clergyman, and he is hereby authoriſed and required to give the ſame a certificate of ſuch marriage, which may be in the following form; viz.

WHEREAS A. B. of and C. D. of were deſirous of intermarrying with each other, and have applied to me for that purpoſe, their intention ſo to do having been regularly proclaimed on three ſeveral Sundays as is directed; or having preſented a licence, as the caſe may be. Now theſe are to certify, that I, E. F. miniſter of the community of at have this day married the ſaid A. B. and C. D. together, and they are become legally contracted to each other. Proclamation.

PETER RUSSELL, Eſq; Preſident, adminiſtering the Government of his Majeſty's Province of Upper Canada.

WHEREAS by an act of the parliament of Great Britain, paſſed in the thirty firſt year of his Majeſty's reign, intitled "An act to repeal certain parts of an act paſſed in the fourteenth year of his Majeſty's reign, entitled "An act for making more effectual proviſion for the government of the province of Quebec in North America, and to make further proviſion for the government of the ſaid province;" it is among other things provided, that whenever any bill which has been paſſed by the Legiſlative Council and by the Houſe of Aſſembly, in either of the ſaid provinces reſpectively, ſhall be preſented for his Majeſty's aſſent to the Governor, or Lieutenant Governor of ſuch province, or to the perſon adminiſtering his Majeſty's government there in, ſuch Governor, or Lieutenant Governor, or perſon adminiſtering the government, ſhall, and he is hereby authorized and required to declare, according to his diſcretion; but ſubject nevertheleſs, to the proviſion contained in the ſaid act, and to ſuch inſtructions as may be given in that behalf by his Majeſty, his heirs, or ſucceſſors, that he aſſents to ſuch bill in his Majeſty's name, or that he withholds his Majeſty's aſſent from ſuch bill, or that he reſerves ſuch bill for the ſignification of his Majeſty's pleaſure thereon.

And whereas a certain act intituled an act to extend the proviſions of an act paſſed in the ſecond ſeſſion of the firſt provincial Parliament of Upper Canada, intituled "An act to confirm and make valid certain Marriages heretofore contracted in the country now comprized within the province of Upper Canada, and to provide for the future ſolemnization of Marriage within the ſame;" was paſſed by the Legiſlative Council and Houſe of Aſſembly, in the firſt ſeſſion of the preſent Parliament of the ſaid province, and preſented to me, PETER RUSSELL, Preſident, adminiſtering the government as aforeſaid, for his Majeſty's aſſent thereto, and was by me reſerved for the ſignification of his Majeſty's pleaſure thereon; and tranſmitted to his Majeſty's Secretary of State for the ſignification of his Majeſty's pleaſure thereon accordingly.

Now therefore know ye, that the ſaid act having been referred to a Committee of the Lords of his Majeſty's moſt honorable Privy Council, appointed for the conſideration of all matters relating to Trade and foreign Plantations, the ſaid Lords of the Committee on the twenty ſeventh day of December, in the year of our Lord one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety ſeven, reported as their opinion to his Majeſty, that the ſaid act was proper to be approved—his Majeſty was thereupon pleaſed, with the advice of his Privy Council, to declare his approbation of the ſaid act: And purſuant to his Majeſty's Royal Pleaſure thereon expreſſed, the ſaid act is hereby confirmed, finally enacted and ratified accordingly; whereof the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Commander in Chief of this his Majeſty's ſaid province of Upper Canada, for the time being, and all other perſons whom it may concern, are to take notice, and govern themſelves accordingly.

Given under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at York, this twenty-ninth day of November, in the thirty-ninth year of his Majeſty's reign.

PETER RUSSELL.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, January 19.

A London paper of Sept. 27, states, that the Turkish government had received and communicated to the English minister, an account from the governor of Syria, that two Turkish galliots had after a hot engagement, taken a French frigate of 40 guns, which had anchored on the coast of Syria, with a view of exciting disturbances there. The same paper states, that no account had on the 22d August, been received at Constantinople, of Buonaparte's having reached Grand Cairo. It was believed that he was still in the vicinity of Rosetta, and harrassed by a vast army of Arabs.

WILMINGTON, (N. C.) Nov. 8.

That dreadful calamity whereby three fourths of what remained of the town of Wilmington, after the fire of April last, has been reduced to ashes, happened on Wednesday the 31st ult. At about three o'clock in the morning of said day, flames were discovered issuing thro' the roof of a tavern in Front-street, adjoining Mr. Urquhart's buildings at the corner of Dock-street, occupied by a Mr. Parish. The wind blowing very fresh, the fire was rapidly communicated to the neighbouring houses and stores in every direction, and in a few hours all the buildings from the south side of Market-street to Dock street, including those on the south side of the latter, as far as Mr. Muter's (which escaped) extending eastwardly from the river to Third-street, were consumed, excepting a few houses on the hills.

The conflagration became so extensive before the inhabitants were in a capacity to make any effort to check its fury, that very soon almost all hope of saving any part of the town, was abandoned, and the exertions of individuals were chiefly employed to rescue such of their moveables as time would allow of, from destruction. The court-house being unfortunately situated in the centre of the small square formed by the intersection of Market and Front-streets, upon the preservation of that building (which is exactly calculated to convey the flames to the four quarters of the town) depended, whether any thing of the whole town should remain, but a heap of rubbish. There at length, great efforts were made, and finally that edifice, and that small remnant of this once flourishing place, from the north side of Market-street, was, almost miraculously preserved. The loss sustained by the proprietors of the buildings destroyed, cannot easily be computed. The number of dwellings and ware houses is from one hundred and thirty to one hundred and fifty.

Many of the families who have lost their habitations will be at a loss for accommodation, and probably must find refuge in the country. The poorer class will suffer severely. Much goods were saved, but the loss in that particular is, no doubt, very great.

In short, unless aid is afforded by contributions from the generous and humane in the opulent cities, with which the United States abound, very many years will elapse before Wilmington will recover its former consequence, and many families be consigned to deplorable indigence.

Mr. Parish, in whose house the calamity originated, has published an exculpation of himself, and ascribes the accident to some defect in the chimney thereof. Upon this head we cannot take upon us to give an opinion. We hope, however, that his allegations deserve credit, for certainly there is very little difference in point of criminality betwixt the wilful incendiary and one who by carelessness, becomes the instrument of conveying destruction to his neighbours property, and involving a whole community in distress and ruin.

The corpse of a deceased sailor, and of a poor man who had been on the parish, were consumed in the fire; but happily no lives were lost.

PISA, Sept. 14

SWISS MISFORTUNE.

The inhabitants of the Canton of Underwalden, determined to persist in their refusal to take the constitutional oaths, entrenched themselves in a very advantageous situation near Stantz, where, on the 9th inst. they were attacked by general Schauenberg with a large train of artillery. One body of the French crossed the lake and landed near Stantz, and another marched over the mountains, by which means the insurgents were surrounded. They, however, defended themselves with the most obstinate valor; but at length were obliged to give way, and all their artillery and ammunition fell into the hands of the victors. Their loss is estimated at 4500 besides wounded. The town of Stantz was almost wholly destroyed.

The following is general Schauenberg's letter:

Head quarters, Lucerne, 23d Fructidor, 7th July.

You will learn with pleasure, citizens directors, that victory has remained faithful to the Republicans. We have occupied the district of Stantz, after a battle which has lasted from 5 o'clock this morning until 6 P. M. all that afflicts me is, that this day has cost much blood; but we had to contend with rebels, whom it was necessary to reduce.

Health and consideration,

(Signed,) SCHAUENBERG.

[Poor pettifol wretch, the time is fast approaching, when, you will no more emit, from your polluted throat, another lie to disgrace a declaration.]

The general is now about to enter the canton of Schwitz; he has published that if the inhabitants surrender at discretion, the troops shall preserve good order; but if they make the least resistance they shall be treated as were those of Underwalden.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27.

Extract of a letter from a captain of a vessel to his owner in this city, dated St. Thomas, Nov. 1, 1798.

"It is with pleasure I inform you of my safe arrival here, after a tedious passage of 25 days. Last week a Danish frigate brought in here two French cruizers, which had committed such numerous ravages on the commerce of neutral nations, that the government of this colony considers them as pirates. Three French privateers came in directly after me; there are now seven of them in this port, ready to sail as soon as any American vessel goes out, which they will capture without discrimination."

HAGUE, Fructidor 13.

IT is confidently said that our government is about to interfere, as mediator, to settle the differences which have arisen, between France and the United States. The directory of France it is said, has already accepted this mediation, and our minister at Paris is shortly to make the first arrangement.

PARIS, 21 Fructidor.

The preparations for war are carrying on at Vienna with more activity than ever. The enlistments are made forcibly. Recruting continues in Bohemia—The divisions of reserves have received orders to hold themselves in readiness to march.

22 Fructidor.

All strangers are ordered to leave Rome in twenty-four hours, under pain of being treated as spies, and judged by the military tribunal. They are allowed only 5 days to leave the territory of the republic; after which no stranger shall enter in without a regular passport, executed either by the French or Roman authority.

28 Fructidor.

They write from Dusseldorff, that the French army is in full march for the frontiers of Hanover. There is no doubt but this hereditary country of the king of England will shortly come under the dominion of the republic.

[Stop you nation of ASSASSINS!!! you had better send some assistance to your wandering general, Buonaparte, to aid him out of the difficulties, in which he has involved himself, than to attempt to subjugate Hanover.]

The brothers Arbaud, rich merchants of Toulon, were arrested 30 Thermidor as returned emigrants.

The army commanded by general Joubert, which is entirely concentrated upon the borders of the Nidda and on the other side, wait momently for orders to move, and to march in several columns to the centre of Germany.—In the mean time, the preparations for war are continued with unabated vigor. The troops have moved forward, and the artillery is carried towards Limbourg on the Lahn—The magazines on that river are filled. The pioneers work without intermission in constructing the neceſſary objects for the prompt eſtabliſhment of bridges—In ſhort, every department is in a ſtate of ſingular activity.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1.

FROM CAPE FRANCOIS.

The following intereſting particulars were communicated to us yeſterday.

[EXTRACTS from letters to a reſpectable mercantile houſe in this city.]

CAPE FRANCOIS, Oct. 22.

"Six o'clock A M.—At this inſtant the general is beating, the troops are all under arms at the news of general Touſſaint's marching with an army of 30,000 men, with an intention, as it is ſaid, to embark the agent Hedouville and to declare the independence of the colony.

"Ten o'clock—This is confirmed by an addreſs made by the agent to the people of that place aſſembled, in which he repreſents to them, that his force being totally inadequate to an oppoſition of Touſſaint, he conceives it his duty, to ſave the uſeleſs effuſion of blood, the pillage of the city, and all the horrors of another 20th June, to withdraw himſelf and thoſe who wiſh to accompany him. He is accordingly to embark this evening on board the frigate that brought him out when we may expect the entry of Touſſaint, and the proclamation of the independence of St. Domingo.

"Oct. 23d.—About 2 o'clock the agent embarked, and an hour afterwards gen. Touſſaint entered the city with his cavalry, took poſſeſſion of the arſenal and fort Picolet, which commands the harbor. The priſoners which had been taken at fort Dauphin, had been ſent on board the frigates, he ſatisfied on their releaſe, and that the ſchr. [illegible] tender of the Britiſh ſquadron, cruiſing off Statia a few days ago, ſhould be left to carry his diſpatches to France: theſe two demands were, after ſome conſideration, complied with by the agent.

"Oct. 29.—The frigates blocked up by an Engliſh 74 and a ſloop of war of 26 guns, had no wind for a number of days—at laſt the faſteſt ſailer went out yeſterday before day break. was chaſed by the Engliſh to leeward all day without any effect: and laſt night the other two frigates, one of which had the agent on board, got out.

"Gen. Touſſaint, the day after his arrival, had a proclamation publiſhed, in which he invites the municipality to aſſiſt him in quieting the apprehenſions of the citizens, aſſuring them they have nothing to fear from the army, whoſe diſcipline is ſuch, that no one ſoldier would behave amiſs, calls on the inhabitants to conduct themſelves agreeably to the laws and conſtitution of the French republic, which he ſhould ſupport during the abſence of the agent, and until the orders of the directory ſhould be known. His army have not left the place, and every thing is in perfect tranquillity.—The agent carries with him in the three frigates 2600 perſons, with whom he might have made a defence, had he thought fit."

DECEMBER 3.

On Saturday arrived the brig Liberty, capt. Lillibridge. The Liberty left Bourdeaux the 4th Octobor, and has brought French papers to the 2d of October.

UPON a general view of their contents we find nothing materially important.—They are principally filled with various accounts of Nelſon's victory, and ſpeculations on that ſubject. The affairs of the United States, appear to have excited a lively intereſt; in conſequence of which, we now find in the firſt column of moſt of the papers before us, accounts of our late energetic meaſures. One of the papers contains the following curious paragraphs:

"The Americans are yet republicans, they have had ſome cauſe of complaint, and like republicans they are determined to obtain redreſs—all their meaſures are warlike, and Waſhington approves, and is again ready to enter the field."

"Paſſengers who have lately arrived from Philadelphia, repreſent the American nation, as unanimous in their deteſtation of the conduct of our privateers—A Frenchman dare not now wear the national cockade in the ſtreets of Philadelphia. The emiſſaries of Paſſawan have been ſo active in Macedonia and the Morea, that great events are likely to take place there. The revolted Greeks do not appear to fear the troops which the Porte had ordered againſt them. The laſteſt accounts from Semlin (dated Sept. 1,) ſay that Roumeli Vaſſeli, one of the Pachas who were ordered againſt Paſſawan, had juſt gone over to him with 4000 troops. This and other acceſſions of ſtrength, cauſed much joy among the defenders of Widden, and appears to have made Paſſawan's cauſe very popular, and will, no doubt, render him a ſtill more formidable enemy to the Porte.

The Porte, according to letters from Selim and Vienna, appears to have determined on an open rupture with the French republic; but the Pariſian journaliſts doubt it, becauſe (ſay they) the Ottoman ambaſſador ſtill remains quietly at Paris.

The court of Berlin offers the moſt tranquil aſpect. The king, who appears to hate trouble and political diſputes, lives with all the ſimplicity of a retired individual, with his queen, in the chateau de Charlottenburg. He never appears more happy, than when he can be alone, or ſurrounded by a ſmall circle of his choſen friends. When neceſſitated to give a dinner, at which the miniſters and military officers are preſent, he never remains more than two hours at table, when every one riſes and retires. The royal houſhold affords a ſpectacle of the greateſt harmony, good order, and conjugal affection. Luxury is baniſhed from the court, and this young prince ſhews ſuch an example of ſimplicity in appearance, and amiability of manners as has gained him the love of his people and muſt naturally produce the happieſt effects.

The Roman republic was ſtill in a diſtracted ſtate. The inſurgents were again collecting and threatened to give the French troops a little more buſineſs. The French commiſſaries were doing every thing in their power to remedy the evils with which they were threatened, and at the ſame time making enormous contributions from the oppreſſed inhabitants.

Saavedra, the miniſter of Spain, was exceedingly ill on the 15th Sept. The phyſicians deſpaired of his recovery. The court which had hitherto paid him ſo much deference as not to diſpoſe of his place, was at length ſeriouſly thinking of replacing him.

The troubles of Switzerland were becoming very ſerious on the 15th Sept. and it was expected that the war which had commenced between the ſmall cantons, would produce fatal reſults. The cantons which refuſed to take the civic oath, and accept the new conſtitution, perſiſt in their refuſal.

From our late French papers we find that, a putrid fever which proved exceedingly contagious, appeared in the month of July laſt, at Keil (Lower Saxony) and ſpread even to the environs of Hamburgh. It was ſtill raging on the 7th September. At Keil the deaths were from about 18 to 20 per day. The phyſicians ordered the drinking of red wine, as a preventative againſt the diſeaſe.

The important event which has juſt taken place in St. Domingo, is the moſt intereſting and glorious in its aſpect on the affairs of this country, that has occurred ſince our exiſtence as a nation. From good information we learn, that the nature of the buſineſs is ſuch, that the iſland is to be declared independent under the guarantee of Great Britain, who is to appoint a governor; and that it was to further theſe recent events that the evacuation of Port-au-Prince, Jeremie and the Mole was concluded on.

There can be little doubt that the leading ſtimulus with Touſſaint, in this buſineſs, was, to open a communication with America. But even waving the conſideration of this point, the ſecurity this revolution will afford to our valuable commerce with Jamaica, &c. is of immenſe importance to the mercantile intereſts of America. But it is not to be ſuppoſed, that the American government will be backward, in acknowleging the independence of St. Domingo: for however we may incline to avoid dabbling in revolutionary matters, this is a caſe in which our intereſt is ſo deeply involved, that ſecondary conſiderations ought to be diſregarded.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, 26 January.

WE are informed, that CAPTAIN BRANT has donated to Mr. JAMES WILSON, in conſequence of the loſs which he has lately ſuſtained by FIRE, the ſum of SIX hundred pounds N. Y. C. an inſtance of the greateſt generoſity, and worthy of remark.

We are well aſſured, ſays a New-York paper, that Doctor Perkins of Connecticut, the inventor of the Metallic Tractors, has procured a patent for them from the Britiſh government.

Notwithſtanding peace is ſaid to have been concluded by the congreſs at Raſtadt, ſays a New York paper, we can find nothing in our files that tends to confirm the report: on the contrary, appearances are ſtill hoſtile.

A letter from Hamburgh, received yeſterday, ſays a New-York paper, ſays, the news from the Mediterranean will enable the empire to make peace on its own terms.

GLEANINGS FROM LONDON PAPERS.

The indignities which have called forth the venerable Waſhington in defence of his country, will not, we truſt, be forgotten by the Americans in the new profeſſions of friendſhip made them by the ſwindling government of France. The failure of the attempt made by the Directory, to terrify the United States into a compliance with their exorbitate demands, has been ſucceeded by the moſt ſervile language from the very miniſter who formerly employed the moſt haughty. In October 1797, we find Talleyrand ſaying to the American envoys;

"You muſt explicitly retract the courageous ſpeech of the preſident of the United States, made at the opening of the Congreſs in 1796—you muſt pay down fifty thouſand pounds as the price of an interview—you muſt purchaſe with cath at par, 32 millions of Batavian florins [theſe were then ſelling at 50 per cent. diſcount]—you muſt then advance a loan of fifteen millions of dollars—and, if you wiſh to avoid the dreadful fate which awaits you, take a timely warning, and look at what has been the fate of Genoa, of Holland, of Geneva, of Venice."

In July, 1798, he varied his ſtyle, "I am ignorant," ſays the miniſter, "for what reaſon you think it neceſſary to inform me to ſtrike out of this negociation all preliminary articles reſpecting loans and explanations, to be required reſpecting the ſpeech of the preſident. Give the goodneſs to read over the propoſitions that I tranſmitted to you of the 18th of June—you will not find one word on theſe points—the Directory is ſatisfied that violence has been offered to the commerce and the citizens of the United States—they are employed in remedying them—the moment cannot be too near. The demand of a loan was a miſtake, founded in odious intrigue, which the dignity and purity of the French government will not allow them to enter upon, to mingle their character in this bad action."

If the king of Pruſſia and his miniſter have read Mr. Burke's political tracts on the ſubject of the French Revolution, they will keep a watchful eye on that crafty negociator l'Abbe Sieyes.

Mr. Burke characterised him as a man "who has whole nests of pigeon holes full of constitutions ready made, ticketed, sorted, and numbered, suited to every season and to every fancy, some with the top of the pattern at the bottom, and some with the bottom at the top, &c." The Abbe has most probably one ready made in his bureau for Prussia.

A war is declared at Naples against frocks and round hats, and at Petersburg against half boots and cravats; yet the eighteenth century is called an enlightened age. Were we to judge from these instances, we should adopt the words of an acrimonious writer, who says "that it is illumined only by torch light—at once glaring and offensive."

LONDON, October 5.

Extract of a letter from captain James Spurar, of the ship Ellis, belonging to this port, to his owners, dated Barbadoes, July 3, 1798.

"SINCE our last arrival on the coast, we have constantly been alarmed with the report of a French squadron. On the 19th of May, lying at Bulla, we were informed by a schooner from Sierra Leon, that a French squadron was actually at the Isle of Los. We concluded our best means of escaping was to endeavour to get to the northward of them—fly into Sherbro, and procure farther intelligence from Sierra Leon, with our boats towing out on both sides. A few hours after we failed from Bulla, the Pilgrim in company, about our mark lower we saw the ships the company with two small ones, and prepared to make a signal. We kept under the land to prevent them seeing us, concluding they were the squadron.—Next day came to anchor at Mafurado, in expectation they had sailed to leeward. The night after a crew came from Bulla, told me that 2 two decked ship with 40 guns had taken the Young Ralph and St. Philip off Cornow, and was coming up after us. We immediately got under way, in company with the St. Anne, Pilgrim, and Joshua, and stood out three days, came back to Mafurado again, went from thence to Cape Mount, and on the 30th May, lying at Cape Mount, saw a large ship coming from the southward; made a signal to the St. Anne to get under way immediately. The Pilgrim having a copy of our signals, got under way also.

"As soon as the St. Anne came up, I took my station astern of her, finding it was impossible for her to escape if I left her, thinking better to risk an action, than bear the name of runaway, the Pilgrim being a long way astern, shortened sail for her to come up. The French frigate (as I was afterwards informed by captain Mentor, who was unfortunately captured by her) was called the Convention, captain Rickow, two months from Dunkirk, carried 32 guns and 200 men, had taken four ships. She bore down on the St. Anne and Ellis, and commenced a brisk fire, which we returned with all the strength we were masters of. After a little, finding us rather stronger than she expected, she filled, I suppose, with an intention to take the St. Anne. I immediately filled and shot ahead of the St. Anne to leeward, and met her, being little more than a good musquet shot apart, and received her broadside, being well prepared to pay her for her trouble. She bending our shot heavier than she expected, made sail in a greater hurry than she took it in. My running rigging being very much cut, she got out of reach of my guns, before I could set my top gallant sails, chased her till dark, then wore round, and joined the St. Anne, who was a long way astern."

Prince Adam Poninsky, ci devant treasurer of the Crown, and grand prior of the order of Malta, died at Warsaw on the 14th August. His revenue for near twenty years, was almost half a million. He had resided some time before his death with a poor peasant, a few miles from Warsaw; but exalted to the house of an old servant in the suburbs, who had taken him in out of compassion, and to shield him from the persecution of his creditors.

A naval character, whom we cannot with propriety call Solomon, fell in with a vessel at sea, whose crew did not seem inclined to answer his interrogatories properly. Unwilling to consult his officers, he resolved very wisely to board her himself, and left the following sagacious charge with his first lieutenant:—"When I get on board, if I find she is an enemy, I shall throw my hat overboard as a signal for you to fire."

The following whimsical circumstance lately happened in the representation of the Deserteur on the stage at Bruxelles. The actor who played the part of the Deserter, appeared dressed in a white waistcoat with a red border, such as the French soldiers used to wear in barracks. The president of the municipality (or lord mayor) taking it for an Austrian uniform, ordered the actor off. The latter refused, but was loudly called to continue his part. The good alderman having no other dress at hand, appeared in his shirt, a roar ensued, and the Deserter was in good earnest handcuffed, and sent to prison. In an hours, however, he was released.

The Russian Prince Repnin it is said after a number of propositions to the king of Prussia for a new coalition, told his majesty that the emperor Paul would send 163,000 Russians to the Rhine.—The king replied with great naiveté—"Oh! very well; when they are there, come and ask me what I mean to do!"

United States.

NEW YORK, December 3.

Captain Brown, of the brig American Hero, arrived yesterday in 60 days from Vienna, has favoured us with French papers to the 19th of September, from which we translate the following articles:

NANTES, September 18.

The Republican frigate, La Preciuese, was taken in the road of Ville Cherry, by the Raymond and the Woodcock, vessels belonging to the East India company, who lost at the same time the Amelia, burnt by accident. The loss in these three vessels is estimated at one million two hundred thousand Francs.

They write from Coniance, 7th Fructidor, "the lake from which our city takes its name, has for some days past presented a novel sight. More than 3000 men, collected from different parts of Turgau, have advanced in rafts and batteaux as far as the middle of the lake and there have solemnly sworn allegiance to the Helvetic constitution."

Extract of a letter from Citizen Bruix, chief of the naval division, to the minister of marine in the road of Royan, river of Bourdeaux.

"I hasten to announce to you my return to France, after having disembarked, in the bay of Kilcumen, in Ireland, the troops of the republic, whom I had the charge of transporting.—I bring in return some English prisoners, part of the garrison of the town of Kollah, whom some French grenadiers, under the orders of general Serrasin, captured whilst the landing was taking place.—I cannot describe to you the order and enthusiasm of the soldiers in disembarking. They were so many heroes.—The day following, the 8th, there was a rencontre, in which general Humbert beat the enemy, who had an hundred men killed and considerably more wounded. The 7th was to be a new day of glory for the French.—My brave companions and myself, regret that we were obliged to prepare to sail by the approach of bad weather. We have yet some prisoners to bring over.—At my departure 1500 Irish men had joined us, and were organized; 30,000 waited for us at some distance. Vive la Republique!" (Signed)

SAVARY.

NAPLES, 24th Thermidor.

Since the arrival of a courier from Vienna, the preparations for war are pushed with redoubled activity.—Some days past there has been published an edict of his majesty, in which the leading article is, "the great changes that have taken place for some years in Europe in political affairs, relative to the organization and employment of the military, have engaged us to direct our attention particularly to the re organization of the army and the other forces of the state, in order to provide for the defence of our dominions, and to secure the lives and property of our dear subjects.—With this view we have taken successively such measures to bring the royal troops to as great perfection as they can be brought to—but the necessity to augment and to re-organize the forces of the state is become more pressing, since the governments of Italy bordering on this kingdom, begin to assume a warlike aspect.—The Barbarian powers have likewise redoubled their audacity. More particularly since the last events which have taken place at Malta, which gives birth to serious apprehensions for the tranquillity of the country under our government. In order to oppose a powerful obstacle to the attempts which may be made by one or other of the powers to the prejudice of our states, we have already made the dispositions for augmenting the regular forces in our kingdom, particularly in Sicily, which appears principally menaced; but to raise one insurmountable barrier to every hostile attempt, we have judged it proper to declare by this edict, that all the individuals of our states are born and must be bred soldiers, and are obliged to take up arms for the defence of our holy Catholic religion, of our crown, and of their lives, in case these sacred objects shall be attacked by the Barbarians or by any nation which may be unfriendly.

Upon this principle all our subjects, from the age of 17 to 45 years, are to be enrolled in different corps of the army, and they must, when circumstances require it, present themselves to their corps to do military duty according to the established rules. Ourself, as commander in chief of our royal troops, as well as our august son, are principally comprised in this illustrious role; and we will be the first to sacrifice our lives, for the defence of our religion, our government, and our country."

Another Victory gained over the French!

October 21.

Yesterday lieut. Waterhouse arrived at the admiralty-office with a letter from vice-admiral Kingsmill, inclosing a copy of the dispatches of commodore Warren to him, to wit:

On board the Canada, Lough Swilly, Ireland, Oct. 16.

SIR,

In compliance with your orders, which I received by the Kingaroo brig, I sailed with my ship the Canada, of 74 guns, the Robust of 74, the Foudroyant of 80, and Magnanime of 44, to the heights of Archillhead. On the 10th inst. were joined by the Melpomene of 44, & the Doris of 38. The latter I ordered to cruize between the Isle of Tory and Rosses, in search of the enemy. The same evening were joined by the Amelia of 44, which had parted with theEthalion of 38, Anson of 44, and Sylph of 18, & said that those vessels had been carefully observing the manoeuvres of the French since Sept. 17. On the 11th we fell in with these vessels, and soon after on the N. W. of us, got sight of the enemy's squadron, consisting of one 80 gun ship, 8 frigates, a brig and schr. I made the signal for a general chase, & to form the line of battle as our ships came up with them. Which, however we did not do till the 12th, owing to a heavy sea and our enemy being to windward. Notwithstanding the severity of the weather, we continued the chase all the 11th day and night. At half past 5 on the morning of the 12th, we saw the enemy not far from us. They formed a close line of battle, and advanced on us on our starboard side, but we did not meet till 7 o'clock, as the chase had scattered my vessels. I made the signal for the Robust to lead & engage, which was instantly obeyed; and the other ships formed after her. The action commenced 20 minutes before 8 o'clock the Rosses bearing 15 miles S. S. W. of us. At 11 the Hoche surrendered after a gallant defence. All the frigates at that moment fled. A signal was made for pursuing them; and in five hours after, three of them were captured. The remaining 5 escaped for that time. All these frigates, as well as the ship of the line, were new and full of troops, provisions, ammunition, &c. to forward their designs in Ireland. With pleasure I observe that the behaviour of all my officers and sailors was such, as evinced the warmest affection for their king & country. I left capt. Thornborough with the command of the Magnanime, Embuscade, and Amelia, to take charge of the prizes, and conduct them to port. I expect him here every moment. I have the honor to be, &c.

J. B. WARREN.

P. S. The following ships were in the battle, viz. Canada, Robust, Foudroyant, Magnanime, Ethalion, Melampus, and Amelia. The Anson did not arrive till after the action, as she had in the chase carried away a top gallant-mast. I have ordered my lieut. Turguand, to take charge of the Hoche.

London Gazette, Oct. 23.

Extract of a letter from Sir J. B. Warren, bart. to lord Castlereagh, dated on board the Canada, of 74 guns, in Lough Swilly, Oct. 16.

My Lord,

I have the honor to communicate to you, for the information of the lord lieutenant, that on the 12th inst. I fell in with the enemy's squadron, and after an action which continued through the whole day, four of their ships surrendered, including the Hoche of 80 guns, and 3 frigates, the other frigates fled. A brig with Napper Tandy on board, as I suppose, was in company; but separated at the commencement of the action. The ships taken had many troops on board, ships necessaries and ammunition. A large number of papers were thrown overboard, after they had surrendered. I think the fugitive ships more or less injured in masts and rigging; and a gale which occurred next day, must have put them in a still worse condition for escape. They probably will be captured by our cruizers on the French coast, or by some of ad. Kingsmill's squadron on the Irish. They threw a great many things overboard at their flight, particularly several boxes of small arms. I left our prizes in the charge of the Robust, of 74 guns, Magnanime, of 44. Ethalian, of 38, and Amelia, of 44.

(Signed) J. B. WARREN.

London Gazette, same date.

Capt. Moore, of the Melampus, of 36 guns, on the 13th of October, captured on the Irish coast, the French frigate Resolute, of 40 guns and 500 sailors and soldiers. She was in company with the Immortalite, of 44 guns, with 600 sailors and soldiers. She did not get near enough to engage till the Resolute had struck, after which she steered off.

Two letters are received from Earl St. Vincents, containing dispatches from the Nile to Aug. 25. On that day the boats of the Goliah took the French ship Torride of 2 18-pounders and 70 men, as she lay at anchor under the Castle Bequir. August 22, before Alexandria, the Ascmene, took a packet-boat of 2 guns and 61 men, from Toulon.

End of the LONDON GAZETTES.

LONDON, October 22 and 23.

A letter from capt. Trowbridge to Earl St. Vincents, contains the following:

"The Arabian and Egyptian workmen having deserted the French—and the French not being used to the heat could not open the channels from the Nile, by which the cisterns in Alexandria are supplied with water.—There is therefore, a scarcity of water, as well as of provisions. The provision fleet that sailed from Toulon the beginning of Aug.—and on which the French army in Egypt principally depended—returned, on being informed of Nelson's victory."

Letters from Donnegal, in Ireland, of Oct. 15, say, that Bridport had taken a squadron from Brest, consisting of 14 vessels.

A cartel ship has arrived at Dover, the commander of which says, that the combined English and Russian squadrons in the North Sea, had entered the Texel, and landed troops which attacked the forts, while lord Duncan engaged the Dutch fleet; and that he had succeeded in taking great part of it.

that their latest news from Malta was highly pleasing. The Maltese are perfect masters of the island, though a few Frenchmen yet remain at St. Elmo.—That the Knights there had sent to Trieste, to invite the return of their brethren, who had emigrated since the landing of the French; assuring them of the establishment of the former government.

Paris, Oct. 22. Our government are more disposed for peace than heretofore—and a majority of our legislature are in its favour, since our late loss of the battle with Admiral Nelson, near the Nile, and that with Admiral Warren, on the coast of Ireland, which have reduced our naval force to almost nothing.—We are not now able to protect our own coasts; so that we must sue for a general peace on any terms.

Our whole naval force does not exceed 23 ships of the line, and most of them unfit for service.—Alas! we have gone too far.

Vienna, Oct. 15. Yesterday a courier arrived from the Turkish government to their ministers, and brought dispatches which were soon afterwards communicated to the British and Prussian ministers. They state that on the 9th of Sept. the Beys of Egypt having collected a large army at Cairo, an obstinate battle was fought, which continued the whole day—and that on the following night Buonaparte retreated to Rosetta, to which place he was soon followed, and to reduced was his army as not to consist of more than 8 or 9000 men. Another attack upon him was preparing; when he consented to capitulate; but he was refused any other terms than a surrender to the discretion of the beys as they were all certain of him; it being impossible for him to advance or retreat farther; and in this situation the last correct intelligence left him. The dispatches state, in addition, and from the same authority, that admiral Nelson has succeeded in completely destroying the transports and armed ships in Alexandria harbour. He erected some bomb vessels to sustain the fire of the forts, which the French had erected on shore, while fire ships were sent in among the transports. The transports were moored in a line extending from the reefs of the harbour towards the entrance.—The wind favoured; and soon after the flames took the first vessel, it spread to the remainder. The whole number of transports destroyed was 366, including several Ragusan and Venetian vessels, particularly two Venetian ships of the line. The Mamalukes by agreement, directed the French on shore. The crews escaped.

October 17.

By information from Malta, the rising of the inhabitants against the French is confirmed. They are driven to the Castle of St. Elmo—have asked for terms, but have been refused, and summoned to surrender as prisoners of war. Throughout the whole island the French flag has given place to the Maltese. Buonaparte has 5000 of his troops here, but by desertion and slaughter they have dwindled away to a handful. The Russians, Turks and English were preparing to attack it, previous to these events, with a strong combined force.

The British ship Colossus, off Malta, had captured one of the French ships which escaped from the Nile.

An ACT

For the further Regulation of the MILITIA of this Province.

FOR the further regulation of the Militia of this Province, Be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an act passed in the parliament of Great Britain, entitled "An act to repeal certain parts of an act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "An act for making more effectual provision for the government of the province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said province," and by the authority of the same, That every militia man who shall refuse to obey the lawful orders of his superior officer or officers when employed on militia duty, or who shall quarrel with, or insult by abusive words or otherwise, any officer or non-commissioned officer, being in the execution of his duty, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay a sum of money not exceeding two pounds, nor less than five shillings current money of this province, at the discretion of the justice or justices imposing such fine, and according to the nature of the offence.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That every person who now is enrolled in any regiment, battalion, or independent company of militia, shall within six months after the passing of this act, and every person who shall hereafter be enrolled of any regiment, battalion, or independent company of militia, shall, within six months after such enrollment, provide himself with a good and sufficient musket, fusil, rifle, or gun, with at least six rounds of powder and ball, and shall come provided with the same at each and every time when he shall be called out either for the purpose of review, exercise or actual service; and in case any person so enrolled shall refuse or neglect so to provide himself, or to come so provided as aforesaid, he shall for each offence, be liable to a penalty of twenty shillings, to be levied in manner herein after mentioned. Provided always, That when and so often as any militia man shall make it appear to his captain, or officer commanding the company, that it has not been possible for him to procure such musket, fusee, rifle, or gun, it shall and may be lawful for such captain, or officer commanding such company, to admit of such excuse, and to certify the same in writing accordingly, in which case such militia man shall not be liable to pay the said fine of twenty shillings.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no person enrolled in the militia shall absent or withdraw himself from any place of review or exercise, without having first obtained leave of his commanding officer so to do, under the penalty of forty shillings, if a commissioned officer, and ten shillings if a non-commissioned officer or private.

IV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any serjeant of the militia when thereunto required by his superior and proper officer, shall neglect or refuse to warn the militia men of the company to which he belongs, to appear when required by his captain or next commanding officer, he shall for every such neglect or refusal, forfeit and pay the sum of forty shillings.

V. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That every serjeant of the militia duly appointed, shall be exempted from serving as a constable for and during such time as he shall hold such appointment of serjeant.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That on the fourth day of June, in each and every year, respectively, or in case it shall happen on a Sunday, then on the next day, and thence if thereunto required, there shall be a general meeting and review of the several battalions of militia in each and every district of this province, at which time the captain, or officer commanding each company, shall give to his colonel, or in his absence, to the next senior officer, fair written rolls of their respective companies, which colonels, or other commanding officers, shall transmit the same to the lieutenant, or deputy lieutenant, or in his or their absence, to the lieutenant-governor, or person administering the government, under the penalty of five pounds for each captain, or other officer as aforesaid, who shall neglect or refuse so to do.

VII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no provincial allowance shall be made to the adjutant-general of the militia, any law to the contrary notwithstanding.

VIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person be wounded, and shall be disabled upon any invasion, insurrection, or rebellion, he shall be taken care of, and provided for by the public, during the time of such disability.

IX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the twenty-fourth clause of an act of the legislature of this province, entitled "An act for the better regulation of the militia in this province," be, and the same is hereby repealed.

X. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the fines, forfeitures and penalties by the said act imposed, or by this act imposed, shall be sued for and recovered by, and upon the oath of any one credible witness before any two of his Majesty's justices of the peace, and within two months after such conviction and recovery shall be transmitted by the justices before whom such information shall be laid, to the lieutenant, or in case there be no lieutenant, or that he be absent, to the deputy-lieutenant of the county where the offence has been committed; and the said lieutenants and deputy-lieutenants, respectively, shall, and they are hereby required out of the several sums of money which they shall or may receive for fines, forfeitures, or penalties, or otherwise, by virtue of this act, or of any other act of the legislature of this province which relates to the militia, to provide for the regiments in their respective counties or ridings, drums, fifes, colours, banners, regimental books, and for the discharge of other incidental expences; and in case any overplus of such monies shall remain in the hands of any such lieutenant, or deputy-lieutenant, after providing such articles as aforesaid, such surplus shall be disposed of in premiums to the persons who shall make the best shots at a target or mark, upon days of training, and in such proportions as at a meeting of the lieutenancy or deputy-lieutenancy, shall be directed; and each lieutenant, or deputy-lieutenant, shall render a certified account thereof in detail, to be transmitted to the lieutenant-governor, or person administering the government, as soon after the thirty first day of December, annually, as practicable.

XI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That upon pressing and urgent occasions, in the time of war or insurrection, it shall and may be lawful for the lieutenant-governor, or person administering the government, to march such part of the militia of this province as he shall think proper, to the assistance of the province of Lower Canada.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.

The French prisoners at Newcastle made an attempt to escape from their confinement on Thursday last—but were prevented by the vigilance of their keepers.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Nov. 29.

A few days since, a daughter of Mr. James Mead, of Carmel, being about 5 years of age, was carrying some chips in the skirt of a calico frock, which the had on, to put on the fire, when throwing the chips from her lap, it is supposed the bottom of her frock struck the fire, and was instantly in a flame. As no person was in the house, she ran out at the door, calling to her aunt, who had gone a few rods after a pail of water, who hearing the screaming of the child, and seeing her enveloped in flames, left the pail and ran to her assistance; but before she, with one of her uncles, could disengage her of her cloathes, they were almost entirely consumed, and the child's body so burnt that the skin came off with the clothes.—We understand her life is despaired of.

BOSTON, November 29.

Arrived, ship Adriana, Prior, 56 days from St. Ubes. October 8, lat. 36 N long. 18. W. was spoke by two French frigates, the Volunteer and Invincible, boarded by the latter, the second officer in command, who was ordered on board, plundered the cabin of its stores and furniture, and took away all the poultry—after this transaction, captain Prior was ordered on board the Invincible, when the commander disapproved of the conduct of his officer, and said the articles should be returned; but the weather being bad, and night coming on, capt. Prior was obliged to put up with the loss. Nov. 23, at four o'clock P. M. Cape Ann then supposed to bear N. W. by W. from 15 to 10 leagues distant, fell in with a large number of kegs afloat, five of which were taken on board, and proved to be smoaked herrings.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 6.

Arrived last evening the Bremen brig Pegasus, capt. J. Gresle, in nine weeks from St. Ubes. He informs, that a Danish vessel arrived there, the captain of which made oath, that he had been on board a Turkish ship in company with two others, on the coast of Portugal who declared that they were cruzing for American, Hamburgh, Bremen and Prussian vessels, and had taken one of the latter.

THE captain Pacha has returned to Constantinople, and is preparing to sail with the Ottoman squadron, to proceed, as it is thought, to Egypt, with the troops that are assembling from all points of the Ottoman Empire.

September 20.

Our court continues its warlike preparations with encreasing vigor, since the news of the defeat of the French fleet. The Hungarian grenadiers, and five regiments of horse, have received orders to proceed to Italy, and the Warasdins are in Dalmatia. The Austrian army extends from Zara to Carlstadt, Laibach, Lingenfurth, Brixen, and Verona: it consits of 130,000 foot, and 30,000 horse.

The Russians march in two columns, one of which proceeds from Kuminick and the other from Brodi. Several Russian officers are already arrived at Lemberg, to make the necessary preparations for the march of these columns, one of which is to proceed to Calschau and Hungary, and the others to Teschen, and Moravia.

From a Paris paper of October 20.

Mr. Hamilton has arrived about a month since at London, as envoy extraordinary from the United States.—He is entirely devoted to the party of President Adams, and is charged by him to draw yet closer the bands by which the American government is enchained in a dependence on England.

Mr. Hamilton, from his superiority of talents and knowledge, will render himself a very dangerous enemy to the interests of France.

From a Kingston (Jamaica) paper of October 27.

About the middle of June, a most desperate and bloody battle was fought near the island of Corfica, between two French ships of war and a fleet Algerine rover; the action lasted upwards of 11 glasses with the greatest severity on both sides. At one time the Algerines had much the advantage, and would have certainly beat them both off, but a frigate and a sloop came up, who began such an incessant and well directed fire into the pirate, that in 5 short time carried away all her masts and rigging, which were terribly mauled before. Notwithstanding this fatal disaster, the undaunted Africans continued the fight with the utmost fury and desperation: when at last they found it impossible to escape being taken, they set fire to their ship, and all that were left alive jumped into the sea, and were drowned. The rover was commanded by Aby Aly, a very desperate daring fellow, and one of the best navigators in the Dey's service.

The Jalon frigate, of 38 guns, capt. Sterling, in chasing six vessels into Brest got upon a rock and beat to pieces.—The captain and crew were made pris-to a boat, and after many difficulties got safe to England.

Three of Nelson's prizes sunk, fifteen days after the engagement, from the damage they had sustained. Six had proceeded to England.

Lord St. Vincent's has informed government of the destruction of the French transports at the Nile.

COIRE. (IN THE GRISONS.) Sept. 17. Extract of a letter from Constantinople, Sept. 2.

"At length the event so unexpected to arise out of the most ancient alliances, has come to pass: yesterday the first interpreter of the porte communicated to all the ministers as well as of allied as of neutral powers, the declaration of war of the grand signior against France. This piece is the strongest and the most vigorous which has this long time issued from the Ottoman cabinet: its grievances, its reproaches are not disguised, and its expressions still less so. If there paints the proceedings of the French government with a pencil of the darkest shade: and when we call to mind the ancient amity which has subsisted during so many ages between the Turkish and French empires, the footing of intimacy upon which the two powers have so long been and still were, until within a few years, one cannot help accounting the animosity, which pervades the hard and bittered style of the Ottoman manifesto, among the changes unprovided against in the national reports, which the instability of the political world frequently involves, but which has never been so frequent or so decisive as since the epoch of the French revolution. It deals out with prodigality against the French nation, the epithets of treacherous, perfidious, faithless, infidel: it reproaches her with projects of usurpation and of conquest: it complains of her ambition and of her want of faith in the observation of treaties, &c. In a word, this declaration, conceived in the greatest hatred, has produced the effect which might be expected from it; it has excited the highest degree of popular fury against the French:—They have all been arrested, and if there remained a single individual at large, the suspicions which are entertained against France, of having fomented the revolt of Passwan Oglou, and of having furnished him with the means of making so long a resistance, would cost him his life. The rupture with France is to be accompanied with new efforts against him: he is to be pressed with the greatest energy: all overtures of reconciliation, all negotiations have ceased: Widden is more strengthened than ever; and Passwan Oglou begins to fail in provisions. In virtue of the most express orders from the Porte, measures have been taken to establish order amongst the troops of the Seraskier, who is to act against him. The views which they appear to have had on Wallachia and Moldavia will be frustrated at once."

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, 8th February.

Extract from Abbe Barruel's History of the French Clergy.

"Soon after the first national assembly had decreed, that the Comtat of Avignon belonged to the French nation, an army of assassins, of whom one Jourdan, surnamed the Cut-throat, was commander, took possession of the unfortunate city of Avignon. The churches were immediately pillaged; the sacred vases profaned and carried off; the altars levelled to the ground. The prisons were soon filled, and the unhappy victims were released only to suffer death. A deep pit was dug to receive their dead bodies, six hundred of which were thrown into it, mingled and distorted, before ten o'clock the next day. Among them was Nolhock, a priest, in the eightieth year of his age. He had been thirty years rector of Symphorien, a parish which he preferred to all others, and which he could not be prevailed on to quit for a more lucrative one, because he would not desert the poor. During his rectorship he had been the common father of his parishioners, the refuge of the indigent, and the comforter of the afflicted, and the friend and counsellor of every honest man. When the hour of danger approached, his friends advised him to fly; but no entreaties could prevail upon him to abandon his flock: "No," said the good old man, "I have watched over them in the halcyon days of peace, and shall I now leave them amidst storms and tempests, without a guide, without one to comfort them in their last dreary moments?" Mr. Nolhock, who, till now, had been respected even by the cut-throats, was sent to the prison the evening before the execution. His appearance and his salutation, were those of a consoling angel; "I come, my children, to die with you. We shall soon appear in the presence of that God whom we serve, and who will not desert us in the hour of death." He fortified their drooping courage, administered the last consolatory pledges of his love, and the next day embraced and cheered each individual as he was called forth by the murderers. Two of these stood at the door, each with a bar of iron in his hands, and as the prisoners advanced, knocked them down. The bodies were then delivered over to the other ruffians, who hacked and disfigured them with their sabres, before they threw them into the pit, that they might not afterwards be known by their friends and relations. When the cut-throats were dispersed, every one was anxious to find the body of Mr. Nolhock. It was at last discovered by the crucifix, and the crucifix which he wore on his breast. That breast had been pierced in fifty places, and the skull entirely mashed!

IN such of the Roman Catholic countries, where superstition still has a hold, there is an order of priests called Friars, who cannot by law exercise certain functions belonging to the higher orders of the priesthood—a young lady some years ago called into a monastery at a place called Calneta, in the island of Madeira in order to confess, and finding a Friar (or brother) of that house alone in one of the chapels, she kneeled down by him and told him all her sins—The friar laid nothing—he asked him for absolution—"I am no priest (said the friar) I cannot give you absolution"—no priest! said the lady, very much surprised, and in a passion—No madam, answered the friar, drily—"Well said the lady, I'll go and complain to your superiors, for daring to take my confession"—and I will go (returned the friar) and tell your husband all your blabbings—mum was the word.

MY husband is my uncle, my son is my brother,
His wife is my sister, and I am her mother.
Six children I have had, and look for another;
I am grandma to three that belong to my brother.
I have a sister named Peggy, whose mother I am;
My own brother is my son, his name is John.

The good people of Bridgetown will assure it is true.
What I have now for to request,
Is that an answer may be express'd.

Proclamation.

George the Third, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and so forth. To all our loving and faithful subjects in our Province of Upper Canada, Greeting:

FORASMUCH as it has pleased Almighty God lately to bless our arms with unexampled and most important victories over the Fleets and Forces of the persons who exercise the supreme authority in France: Know ye, that we taking into our most serious consideration the indispensible duty which we and all our subjects owe to Almighty God, for the interposition of his Good Providence in these signal victories over our enemy, and for the manifold and inestimable blessings which our Kingdoms and provinces have received, and daily continue to receive at his hands, have thought fit, by the advice of our Executive Council of and for our said Province, to issue this our Proclamation, hereby appointing and commanding that a GENERAL THANKSGIVING to Almighty God for these, and all other his mercies vouchsafed unto us and to our subjects, be observed throughout our said Province of Upper Canada, on Tuesday the Twelfth Day of March next, and we do strictly charge and command, that the said public day of Thanksgiving be religiously observed by all our loving subjects in our said Province of Upper Canada, as they tender the favor of Almighty God, and upon pain of suffering such punishments as we may justly inflict upon all such as shall contemn or neglect the same.

In testimony whereof, we have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed. Witness our trusty and well beloved the Honorable PETER RUSSELL, President, administering the Government of our said Province, at York, this eleventh day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-nine, and in the thirty-ninth year of our reign.

ANNO TRICESIMO OCTAVO
GEORGII III. REGIS.

AN ACT

To prevent the Exportation of Base Coin to his Majesty's Colonies in the West-Indies and America.

[21st June, '98.]

WHEREAS various Base Copper Coins made to the resemblance and similitude of the Foreign copper coins, called TEMPES and SOUS MARQUES, have been exported from this Kingdom to the Island of Martinique in the West Indies, under the denomination of Wrought Copper: And whereas Base Coin made to the similitude and resemblance of the Foreign gold and silver coins, called JOHANNES and DOLLARS, have been circulated in his Majesty's Islands in the West Indies, and in other his Majesty's Colonies in America, to the great Injury of the Inhabitants of the said Islands and Colonies: For preventing the like and similar evils in future, be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, That all copper coin whatsoever, not being the legal Copper Coin of this Kingdom, and all counterfeit gold or silver coin made to the similitude or resemblance, or intented to resemble, any gold or silver coin, either of this Kingdom or of any other Country, which shall, under any pretence, name, or description whatsoever, be exported, shipped, or laden or put on board any ship, vessel, or boat, for the purpose of being exported from this Kingdom to the said Island of Mer Colonies in the West Indies or America, shall be forfeited, and the same shall and may be seized, sued for, prosecuted, and recovered in such courts, and by such and the like ways, means, and methods, and the produce thereof disposed of and applied in such and the like manner, and to such and the like uses and purposes, as any forfeiture incurred by any law respecting the revenue of the customs, may now be seized, sued for, prosecuted, or recovered, disposed of, and applied, either in this Kingdom, or in any of his Majesty's Islands in the West-Indies respectively as the case may happen to be.

II. And be it further enacted, That every person who shall so export, or shall so ship, lay, or put on board any ship, vessel, or boat, in order to be so exported, or shall cause or procure to be so exported, shipped, or put on board any ship, vessel, or boat, or shall have in his or her custody, in order to be so exported, any such coins as aforesaid, shall for every such offence, forfeit the sum of two hundred pounds, and double the value of such coin, to be recovered by bill, suit, action, or information, in any of his Majesty's courts of record at WESTMINSTER.

An ACT

For the further Regulation of the MILITIA of this Province.

FOR the further regulation of the Militia of this Province, Be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an act passed in the parliament of Great Britain, entitled "An act to repeal certain parts of an act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "An act for making more effectual provision for the government of the province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said province," and by the authority of the same, That every militia man who shall refuse to obey the lawful orders of his superior officer or officers when employed on militia duty, or who shall quarrel with, or insult by abusive words or otherwise, any officer or non commissioned officer, being in the execution of his duty, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay a sum of money not exceeding two pounds, nor less than five shillings current money of this province, at the discretion of the justice or justices imposing such fine, and according to the nature of the offence.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That every person who now is enrolled in any regiment, battalion, or independent company of militia, shall within six months after the passing of this act, and every person who shall hereafter be enrolled of any regiment, battalion, or independent company of militia, shall, within six months after such enrollment, provide himself with a good and sufficient musket, fusil, rifle, or gun, with at least six rounds of powder and ball, and shall come provided with the same at each and every time when he shall be called out either for the purpose of review exercise or actual service; and in case any person so enrolled shall refuse or neglect so to provide himself, or to come so provided as aforesaid, he shall for each offence, be liable to a penalty of twenty shillings, to be levied in manner herein after mentioned. Provided always, That when and so often as any militia man shall make it appear to his captain, or officer commanding the company, that it has not been possible for him to procure such musket, fusee rifle, or gun, it shall and may be lawful for such captain, or officer commanding such company, to admit of such excuse, and to certify the same in writing accordingly, in which case such militia man shall not be liable to pay the said fine of twenty shillings.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no person enrolled in the militia shall absent or withdraw himself from any place of review or exercise, without having first obtained leave of his commanding officer so to do, under the penalty of forty shillings, if a commissioned officer and ten shillings if a non-commissioned officer or private.

IV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any serjeant of the militia when thereunto required by his superior and proper officer, shall neglect or refuse to warn the militia men of the company to which he belongs, to appear when required by his captain or next commanding officer, he shall for every such neglect or refusal, forfeit and pay the sum of forty shillings.

V. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That every serjeant of the militia duly appointed, shall be exempted from serving as a constable for and during such time as he shall hold such appointment of serjeant.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That on the fourth day of June, in each and every year, respectively, or in case it shall happen on a Sunday, then on the next day, and oftener if thereunto required, there shall be a general meeting and review of the several battalions of militia in each and every district of this province, at which time the captain, or officer commanding each company, shall give to his colonel, or in his absence, to the next senior officer, fair written rolls of their respective companies, which colonels, or other commanding officers, shall transmit the same to the lieutenant, or deputy lieutenant, or in his or their absence, to the lieutenant-governor, or person administering the government, under the penalty of five pounds for each captain, or other officer as aforesaid, who shall neglect or refuse so to do.

VII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no provincial allowance shall be made to the adjutant-general of the militia, any law to the contrary notwithstanding.

VIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person be wounded, and shall be disabled upon any invasion, insurrection, or rebellion, he shall be taken care of, and provided for by the public, during the time of such disability.

IX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the twenty-fourth clause of an act of the legislature of this province, entitled "An act for the better regulation of the militia in this province," be, and the same is hereby repealed.

X. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the fines, forfeitures and penalties by the said act imposed, or by this act imposed, shall be sued for and recovered by, and upon the oath of any one credible witness before any two of his Majesty's justices of the peace, and within two months after such conviction and recovery shall be transmitted by the justices before whom such information shall be laid, to the lieutenant, or in case there be no lieutenant, or that he be absent, to the deputy-lieutenant of the county where the offence has been committed; and the said lieutenants and deputy-lieutenants, respectively, shall and they are hereby required out of the several sums of money which they shall or may receive for fines, forfeitures, or penalties, or otherwise, by virtue of this act, or of any other act of the legislature of this province which relates to the militia, to provide for the regiments in their respective counties or ridings, drums fifes, colours, banners regimental books, and for the discharge of other incidental expences: and in case any overplus of such monies shall remain in the hands of any such lieutenant, or deputy-lieutenant, after providing such articles as aforesaid, such surplus shall be disposed of in premiums to the persons who shall make the best shots at a target or mark, upon days of exercising, and in such proportions as at a meeting of the Lieutenancy or deputy-lieutenancy, shall be directed; and each lieutenant, or deputy-lieutenant, shall render a certified account thereof in detail, to be transmitted to the lieutenant governor, or person administering the government, as soon after the thirty first day of December, annually, as practicable.

XI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That upon pressing and urgent occasions, in the time of war or insurrection, it shall and may be lawful for the lieutenant-governor, or person administering the government, to march such part of the militia of this province as he shall think proper, to the assistance of the province of Lower Canada.

Sheriffs-Office, York,

HOME DISTRICT, } To wit.

NOTICE is hereby given, that a court of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery will be holden for this district at the Court House in the town of Newark, on Monday the FOURTH day of MARCH now next ensuing, at 11 o'clock of the forenoon of the same day, of which all justices of the peace, coroners, gaolers, constables, bailiffs, and all those otherwise interested, are desired to take notice, and that they respectively be then, and there present, with their rolls, records, indictments, and all other remembrances, to do those things which to their several offices in that behalf appertain.

ALEX: M'DONELL, sheriff.

It having been suggested to the Board that notwithstanding the care taken to suppress the Publication of the Gazette of the 12th inst. in which the Secretary had, without authority, inserted a List of Persons, whose Names were ordered to be struck off the U. E. List; some Copies of that Gazette had got into circulation.

Recommended, That the following Advertisement be immediately inserted in the Gazette:

Council Office, 31st Jan. 1799.

AN Advertisement from the Secretary's Office, having lately appeared in the Gazette, without authority, and is a mutilated copy of an undigested Plan, which, when finished, will be communicated to the Public.

In the mean time, the U. E. Loyalists may be assured, that nothing will ever proceed from this Government that can, in the slightest degree, affect their interests, or detract from the very honorable distinction attached to their Names and Families.

By Order of the Board,

JOHN SMALL,
C. E. C.

TO BE SOLD,

PARIS, OCT. 22.

OFF Toulon on the 11th Oct. were seen eleven ships of the line, which at first were supposed to be the Russians, but afterwards found to be the English.

For four day the Redefleur and all our papers have been filled with the official letters from Buonaparte and Berthier, with the proclamations the commander issued in Egypt.

By his letters the army was not discouraged by the account of the loss of the fleet, but rather enlivened to encounter all danger with their officers. [It does not appear misterious to us, why the French soldiers were not discouraged at the news of the distruction of their fleet, for they were in hopes it would tend to terminate a war which they were heartily tired of.]

The general head quarters were at Cairo. Of prisoners we had only a few; but the camels and horses he had taken, were reserved for an expedition which was a secret. [We pray that it may be as fruitless as his last secret expedition.] He embraces every opportunity to work upon the people. [Poor wretch, what a pity it is that he can-

II. And be it further enacted, That every person who shall so export, or shall so ship, lay, or put on board any ship, vessel, or boat, in order to be so exported, or shall cause or procure to be so exported, shipped, or put on board any ship, vessel, or boat, or shall have in his or her custody, in order to be so exported, any such coins as aforesaid, shall for every such offence, forfeit the sum of two hundred pounds, and double the value of such coin, to be recovered by bill, suit, action, or information, in any of his Majesty's courts of record at WESTMINSTER.

FOR the further regulation of the Militia of this Province, Be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an act passed in the parliament of Great Britain, entitled "An act to repeal certain parts of an act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "An act for making more effectual provision for the government of the province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said province," and by the authority of the same, That every militia man who shall refuse to obey the lawful orders of his superior officer or officers when employed on militia duty, or who shall quarrel with, or insult by abusive words or otherwise, any officer or non commissioned officer, being in the execution of his duty, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay a sum of money not exceeding two pounds, nor less than five shillings current money of this province, at the discretion of the justice or justices imposing such fine, and according to the nature of the offence.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That every person who now is enrolled in any regiment, battalion, or independent company of militia, shall within six months after the passing of this act, and every person who shall hereafter be enrolled of any regiment, battalion, or independent company of militia, shall, within six months after such enrollment, provide himself with a good and sufficient musket, fusil, rifle, or gun, with at least six rounds of powder and ball, and shall come provided with the same at each and every time when he shall be called out either for the purpose of review exercise or actual service; and in case any person so enrolled shall refuse or neglect so to provide himself, or to come so provided as aforesaid, he shall for each offence, be liable to a penalty of twenty shillings, to be levied in manner herein after mentioned. Provided always, That when and so often as any militia man shall make it appear to his captain, or officer commanding the company, that it has not been possible for him to procure such musket, fusee rifle, or gun, it shall and may be lawful for such captain, or officer commanding such company, to admit of such excuse, and to certify the same in writing accordingly, in which case such militia man shall not be liable to pay the said fine of twenty shillings.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no person enrolled in the militia shall absent or withdraw himself from any place of review or exercise, without having first obtained leave of his commanding officer so to do, under the penalty of forty shillings, if a commissioned officer and ten shillings if a non-commissioned officer or private.

IV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any serjeant of the militia when thereunto required by his superior and proper officer, shall neglect or refuse to warn the militia men of the company to which he belongs, to appear when required by his captain or next commanding officer, he shall for every such neglect or refusal, forfeit and pay the sum of forty shillings.

V. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That every serjeant of the militia duly appointed, shall be exempted from serving as a constable for and during such time as he shall hold such appointment of serjeant.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That on the fourth day of June, in each and every year, respectively, or in case it shall happen on a Sunday, then on the next day, and oftener if thereunto required, there shall be a general meeting and review of the several battalions of militia in each and every district of this province, at which time the captain, or officer commanding each company, shall give to his colonel, or in his absence, to the next senior officer, fair written rolls of their respective companies, which colonels, or other commanding officers, shall transmit the same to the lieutenant, or deputy lieutenant, or in his or their absence, to the lieutenant-governor, or person administering the government, under the penalty of five pounds for each captain, or other officer as aforesaid, who shall neglect or refuse so to do.

VII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no provincial allowance shall be made to the adjutant-general of the militia, any law to the contrary notwithstanding.

VIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person be wounded, and shall be disabled upon any invasion, insurrection, or rebellion, he shall be taken care of, and provided for by the public, during the time of such disability.

IX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the twenty-fourth clause of an act of the legislature of this province, entitled "An act for the better regulation of the militia in this province," be, and the same is hereby repealed.

X. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the fines, forfeitures and penalties by the said act imposed, or by this act imposed, shall be sued for and recovered by, and upon the oath of any one credible witness before any two of his Majesty's justices of the peace, and within two months after such conviction and recovery shall be transmitted by the justices before whom such information shall be laid, to the lieutenant, or in case there be no lieutenant, or that he be absent, to the deputy-lieutenant of the county where the offence has been committed; and the said lieutenants and deputy-lieutenants, respectively, shall and they are hereby required out of the several sums of money which they shall or may receive for fines, forfeitures, or penalties, or otherwise, by virtue of this act, or of any other act of the legislature of this province which relates to the militia, to provide for the regiments in their respective counties or ridings, drums fifes, colours, banners regimental books, and for the discharge of other incidental expences: and in case any overplus of such monies shall remain in the hands of any such lieutenant, or deputy-lieutenant, after providing such articles as aforesaid, such surplus shall be disposed of in premiums to the persons who shall make the best shots at a target or mark, upon days of exercising, and in such proportions as at a meeting of the Lieutenancy or deputy-lieutenancy, shall be directed; and each lieutenant, or deputy-lieutenant, shall render a certified account thereof in detail, to be transmitted to the lieutenant governor, or person administering the government, as soon after the thirty first day of December, annually, as practicable.

XI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That upon pressing and urgent occasions, in the time of war or insurrection, it shall and may be lawful for the lieutenant-governor, or person administering the government, to march such part of the militia of this province as he shall think proper, to the assistance of the province of Lower Canada.

HOME DISTRICT, } To wit.

NOTICE is hereby given, that a court of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery will be holden for this district at the Court House in the town of Newark, on Monday the FOURTH day of MARCH now next ensuing, at 11 o'clock of the forenoon of the same day, of which all justices of the peace, coroners, gaolers, constables, bailiffs, and all those otherwise interested, are desired to take notice, and that they respectively be then, and there present, with their rolls, records, indictments, and all other remembrances, to do those things which to their several offices in that behalf appertain.

ALEX: M'DONELL, sheriff.

It having been suggested to the Board that notwithstanding the care taken to suppress the Publication of the Gazette of the 12th inst. in which the Secretary had, without authority, inserted a List of Persons, whose Names were ordered to be struck off the U. E. List; some Copies of that Gazette had got into circulation.

Recommended, That the following Advertisement be immediately inserted in the Gazette:

Council Office, 31st Jan. 1799.

AN Advertisement from the Secretary's Office, having lately appeared in the Gazette, without authority, and is a mutilated copy of an undigested Plan, which, when finished, will be communicated to the Public.

In the mean time, the U. E. Loyalists may be assured, that nothing will ever proceed from this Government that can, in the slightest degree, affect their interests, or detract from the very honorable distinction attached to their Names and Families.

By Order of the Board,

JOHN SMALL,

European News.

PARIS, OCT. 22.

OFF Toulon on the 11th Oct. were seen eleven ships of the line, which at first were supposed to be the Russians, but afterwards found to be the English.

For four day the Redefleur and all our papers have been filled with the official letters from Buonaparte and Berthier, with the proclamations the commander issued in Egypt.

By his letters the army was not discouraged by the account of the loss of the fleet, but rather enlivened to encounter all danger with their officers. [It does not appear misterious to us, why the French soldiers were not discouraged at the news of the distruction of their fleet, for they were in hopes it would tend to terminate a war which they were heartily tired of.]

The general head quarters were at Cairo. Of prisoners we had only a few; but the camels and horses he had taken, were reserved for an expedition which was a secret. [We pray that it may be as fruitless as his last secret expedition.] He embraces every opportunity to work upon the people. [Poor wretch, what a pity it is that he cannot obtain his wishes.] An air balloon which he sent up at Cairo was above the understanding of these ignorant mortals. They thought him a messenger from Mahumet. [We presume the major part of them were Frenchmen!!] His horse artillery had created great consternation.

A messenger to one of the chiefs bringing an account of a defeat, was asked, "how large is the French army?" he took up a handful of sand which he threw in the air, saying, "there, count them."

[An excellent French tale!]

The general's soldiers divide the booty which they took from the Mamelukes; on some they have found from 3 to 500 louis d'ors, or the value in gold.

Buonaparte pictures the Arabians as the worst of beings. In large hordes they swarmed like clouds round his army and harrassed his rear guards.—Plundered and murdered every one who fell in their hands. They have not kept their treaty which he had concluded on the 5th of July with 13 of their beys. In which it was stipulated that they should give him as many men as were necessary to oppose the Mamelukes. And on the other hand the general had promised to give them back, after he had conquered Egypt, all the lands which had belonged to them. Buonaparte, with these 13 cheiks, set round a table, where it was further agreed and determined, that he who did not fulfil his promise, should incur hell's flames. Probably the cheiks could not answer for what the hordes did.

On the 12th July, Mourat Bey, had a large body of horse troops and batteries on the Nile, and exchanged more than 1500 cannon shot. The Turks had already taken 3 of our gun boats; but two of them were taken and the third burnt. After this the army was not interrupted on their march.

Buonaparte to the people of Cairo.

"People! You have done well not to declare against me. I am come to destroy the Mamalukes. To protect commerce and the inhabitants. Every one who is in fear ought to remain quiet; and they who have fled may return to their houses, I shall establish a Divan of persons."

A third proclamation to the Pacha of the Grand Seignor, declares, he may remain in his place, and have his effects le ured to him.

Ibrahim Bey had fled with his family and effects to Salchich, where Buonaparte purfued him; but before the general entered this city the Bey had left it being the last where fresh water was to be had. The Mamalukes have defended themselves bravely. They are well drilled and equipped.

On the 13th Aug. when he left this place, he received the unfortunate account of the loss of the fleet, having on the 6th July advised admiral Brueys to come to anchor in the harbour of Alexandria, within 24 hours, if not, to take the artillery and the effects belonging to the army. As it was the opinion of our engineers, that the road of Abuckir was not safe for the fleet.—But to his great astonishment he was apprized, on the 27th July, that the fleet remained there at anchor. He dispatched his adjutant to prevail on the admiral to sail, but unfortunately this messenger came too late.

The general says, under his own hand, "It seems to me admiral Brueys would not sail for Corfu before he was sure he could not enter the harbour of Alexandria, or till the army was in such a situation that no retreat might be necessary. If he has done amiss he has expiated it by his glorious death. Fate, which has in so many instances proved our superiority on land—has, in this, favored our rivals on the water. But as great as this misfortune is, it cannot be attributed to the unsteadiness of luck. It will not leave us! When I arrived at Alexandria I was informed that the English had been there with a much stronger force than ours. I ventured to land in a gale, and was almost shipwrecked in this attempt. When I reached the shore, I threw myself on the ground (signal was just then given for an armed ship, which however, proved to be La Justice) I cried out "Fortune! should'st thou leave me! No! attend me only a few days longer! I snatched the whole night, and attacked by the break of day Alexandria, with 3000 men, without cannon, or even cartridges to our guns. And in 5 days I was master of Rosetta and Demenhur, which declared me already established in Egypt!

In these 5 days our fleet ought to be in safety from the English. Let their force against us be what it would. But far from it! They remained the whole Messidor, ending July 18, exposed. They received on the first Thermidor (19th July) from Rosetta, a supply of rice for two months. The English shewed themselves in ten days with a superior force in these waters; and on the 29th July, our fleet received information of my conquering and entering Cairo; but when fortune saw her favors were not regarded, she left our fleet to its own fate.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, 16th February.

IMPORTANT!

THE day so long looked for, and which has for some time been the object and prayer of every humane heart, has at last arrived: our ferocious enemies the French, finding themselves defeated on every side, their resources exhausted, their FLEET and ARMY destroyed, and above all, their great general, Buonaparte, who is now in a distant country, destitute of every means of subsistance, is left to the mercy of a relentless enemy, and the young men of France, more wise than the tyrants who govern them, tired of witnessing the most horrid cruelties which human eye never beheld until since the French revolution, have laid down their arms, and the sans-culotte nation has SUED for PEACE; but it is to be hoped, that Great Britain will not forget the exorbitant demands of that nation at a former period. The sans-culotte ministers for foreign affairs, has also solicited passports of our minister for foreign affairs, for commissioners he may appoint to treat for peace.

Should a peace be concluded, which there is no doubt of, it will have a tendency to stop the hostile preparations which are said to be making to the Southward; but whether or not, we have little to fear from an enemy in that quarter.

We hear from very good authority, that the preliminary articles of a treaty OFFENSIVE and DEFENSIVE, are concluded between Great-Britain and the United States of America!

The new French minister at war has but one leg; the minister of marine is in the same case, and the minister for foreign affairs is a cripple.—Surely, never was the administration of any country in so tottering a state!

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS,

GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our proclamation bearing date the twenty ninth day of December, we thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council to prorogue our provincial parliament until the fourteenth day of this present month of February, at which time in our town of YORK you were held and constrained to appear; but we taking into our royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council, to relieve you, and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the Fourteenth day of MARCH next ensuing, you meet us in our provincial parliament, in our town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary:—Herein fail not. In testimony whereof we have caused these our letters to be made patent, and the great seal of our said province to be hereunto affixed:—Witness the honorable PETER RUSSELL, esq. president administering the government of our said province, this EIGHTH day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-nine, and of our reign the thirty-ninth. Proclamation.

George the Third, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and so forth. To all our loving and faithful subjects in our Province of Upper Canada, Greeting.

FORASMUCH as it has pleased Almighty God lately to bless our arms with unexampled and most important Victories over the Fleets and Forces of the persons who exercise the supreme authority in France: Know ye, that we taking into our most serious consideration the indispensible duty which we and all our subjects owe to Almighty God, for the interposition of his Good Providence in these signal Victories over our enemy, and for the manifold and inestimable blessings which our kingdoms and provinces have received, and daily continue to receive at his hands, have thought fit, by the advice of our Executive Council of and for our said Province, to issue this our Proclamation, hereby appointing and commanding that a GENERAL THANKSGIVING to Almighty God for these, and all other his mercies vouchsafed unto us and to our subjects, be observed throughout our said Province of Upper Canada, on Tuesday the Twelfth Day of March next, and we do strictly charge and command, that the said public day of Thanksgiving be religiously observed by all our loving subjects in our said Province of Upper Canada, as they tender the favor of Almighty God, and upon pain of suffering such punishments as we may justly inflict upon all such as shall contemn or neglect the same.

In testimony whereof, we have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed. Witness our trusty and well beloved the Honorable PETER RUSSELL, President, administering the Government of our said Province, at York, this eleventh day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-nine, and in the thirty-ninth year of our reign. ANNO TRICESIMO OCTAVO
GEORGII III. REGIS.

AN ACT

To prevent the Exportation of Base Coin to his Majesty's Colonies in the West-Indies and America.

[21st June, '98.]

WHEREAS various Base Copper Coins made to the resemblance and similitude of the Foreign copper coins, called TEMPES and SOUS MARQUES, have been exported from this kingdom to the Island of Martinique in the West-Indies, under the denomination of Wrought Copper: And whereas Base Coin made to the similitude and resemblance of the Foreign gold and silver coins, called JOHANNES and DOLLARS, have been circulated in his Majesty's Islands in the West-Indies, and in other his Majesty's Colonies in America, to the great Injury of the Inhabitants of the said Islands and Colonies: For preventing the like and similar evils in future, be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, That all copper coin whatsoever, not being the legal Copper Coin of this Kingdom, and all counterfeit gold or silver coin made to the similitude or resemblance, or intented to resemble, any gold or silver coin, either of this Kingdom or of any other Country, which shall, under any pretence, name, or description whatsoever, be exported, shipped, or laden or put on board any ship, vessel, or boat, for the purpose of being exported from this kingdom to the said Island of Martinique, or any of his Majesty's Islands

...Colonies in the West Indies or America, shall be forfeited, and the same shall and may be seized, sued for, prosecuted, and recovered in such courts, and by such and the like ways, means and methods, and the produce thereof disposed of and applied in such and the like manner, and to such and the like uses and purposes, as any forfeiture incurred by any law respecting the revenue of the customs, may now be seized, sued for, prosecuted, or recovered, disposed of, and applied, either in this Kingdom, or in any of his Majesty's Islands in the West Indies respectively as the case may happen to be.

II. And be it further enacted, That every person who shall so export, or shall so ship, lay, or put on board any ship, vessel, or boat, in order to be so exported, or shall cause or procure to be so exported, shipped, or put on board any ship, vessel, or boat, or shall have in his or her custody, in order to be so exported, any such coin as aforesaid, shall for every such offence, forfeit the sum of two hundred pounds, and double the value of such coin, to be recovered by bill, suit, action, or information, in any of his Majesty's courts of record at Westminster.

An ACT

For the further Regulation of the MILITIA of this Province.

FOR the further regulation of the Militia of this Province, Be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an act passed in the parliament of Great Britain, entitled "An act to repeal certain parts of an act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "An act for making more effectual provision for the government of the province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said province," and by the authority of the same, That every militia man who shall refuse to obey the lawful orders of his superior officer or officers, when employed on militia duty, or who shall quarrel with, or insult by abusive words or otherwise, any officer or non-commissioned officer, being in the execution of his duty, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay a fine of money not exceeding two pounds, nor less than five shillings current money of this province, at the discretion of the justice or justices imposing such fine, and according to the nature of the offence.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That every person who now is enrolled in any regiment, battalion, or independent company of militia, shall, within six months after the passing of this act, and every person who shall hereafter be enrolled of any regiment, battalion, or independent company of militia, shall, within six months after such enrollment, provide himself with a good and sufficient musket, fusil, rifle, or gun, with at least six rounds of powder and ball, and shall come provided with the same at each and every time when he shall be called out either for the purpose of review, exercise or actual service; and in case any person so enrolled shall refuse or neglect so to provide himself, or to come so provided as aforesaid, he shall for each offence, be liable to a penalty of twenty shillings, to be levied in manner herein after mentioned. Provided always, That when and so often as any militia man shall make it appear to his captain, or officer commanding the company, that it has not been possible for him to procure such musket, fusee, rifle, or gun, it shall and may be lawful for such captain, or officer commanding such company, to admit of such excuse, and to certify the same in writing accordingly, in which case such militia man shall not be liable to pay the said fine of twenty shillings.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no person enrolled in the militia shall absent or withdraw himself from any place of review or exercise, without having first obtained leave of his commanding officer so to do, under the penalty of forty shillings, if a commissioned officer, and ten shillings if a non-commissioned officer or private.

IV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any serjeant of the militia when thereunto required by his superior and proper officer, shall neglect or refuse to warn the militia men of the company to which he belongs, to appear when required by his captain or next commanding officer, he shall for every such neglect or refusal forfeit and pay the sum of forty shillings.

V. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That every serjeant of the militia duly appointed, shall be exempted from serving as a constable for and during such time as he shall hold such appointment of serjeant.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That on the fourth day of June, in each and every year, respectively, or in case it shall happen on a Sunday, then on the next day, and oftener if thereunto required, there shall be a general meeting and review of the several battalions of militia in each and every district of this province, at which time the captain, or officer commanding each company, shall give to his colonel, or in his absence, to the next senior officer, his written rolls of their respective companies, which colonels, or other commanding officers, shall transmit the same to the lieutenant, or deputy lieutenant, or in his or their absence, to the lieutenant-governor, or person administering the government, under the penalty of five pounds for each captain, or other officer as aforesaid, who shall neglect or refuse so to do.

VII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no provincial allowance shall be made to the adjutant-general of the militia, any law to the contrary notwithstanding.

VIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person be wounded, and shall be disabled upon any invasion, insurrection, or rebellion, he shall be taken care of, and provided for by the public, during the time of such disability.

IX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the twenty-fourth clause of an act of the legislature of this province, entitled "An act for the better regulation of the militia in this province," be, and the same is hereby repealed.

X. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the fines, forfeitures and penalties by the said act imposed, or by this act imposed, shall be sued for and recovered by, and upon the oath of any one credible witness before any two of his Majesty's justices of the peace, and within two months after such conviction and recovery shall be transmitted by the justices before whom such information shall be laid, to the lieutenant, or in case there be no lieutenant, or that he be absent, to the deputy-lieutenant of the county where the offence has been committed; and the said lieutenants and deputy lieutenants, respectively, shall, and they are hereby required out of the several sums of money which they shall or may receive for fines, forfeitures, or penalties, or otherwise, by virtue of, this act, or of any other act of the legislature of this province which relates to the militia, to provide for the regiments in their respective counties or ridings, drums, fifes, colours, banners, regimental books, and for the discharge of other incidental expences; and in case any overplus of such monies shall remain in the hands of any such lieutenant, or deputy-lieutenant, after providing such articles as aforesaid, such surplus shall be disposed of in premiums to the persons who shall make the best shots at a target or mark, upon days of training, and in such proportions as at a meeting of the lieutenancy or deputy-lieutenancy, shall be directed; and each lieutenant, or deputy-lieutenant, shall render a certified account thereof in detail, to be transmitted to the lieutenant governor, or person administering the government, as soon after the thirty first day of December, annually, as practicable.

XI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That upon pressing and urgent occasions, in the time of war or insurrection, it shall and may be lawful for the lieutenant-governor, or person administering the government, to march such part of the militia of this province as he shall think proper to the assistance of the province of Lower Canada.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, 22d February.

☞ THE fo utions to the enigma contained in our gazette of the 9th inft. figned G. and W. are not the proper ones, which will appear by the following, which was handed to us by — T*, efq :

Meffrs. PRINTERS,

IF the following is the true explanation of the ENIGMA, inferted in your gazette of the 9th inftant, you will oblige one of your fubfcribers by giving it a place in your next :

Feb. 18.

MY mother and I, though you may think it ftrange,
Did marry two brothers, odd matters to change !
My brother being willing to join in the claſs,
Did marry his niece ! fo became an aſs.
In order to fhew, that all this can be true :
My husband a wife had, before I him knew ;
And fhe had a daughter that wed brother John,
Her name it is Peggy whofe mother I am ;
Thofe children I brag of, as grandma to be,
Did fpring from this Peggy, as plainly you fee.
So, if I have anfwered your paradox right,
Pray in your next paper let it come to light ?

[FROM A NEW YORK PAPER.]

ORIGINAL ANECDOTE.

A Frenchman was traveling in one of the lower countries, not long fince. He met one of our men with a mufket and furniture going to attend muſter —" Pray young man," fays monſieur, " be you one ARISTOCRAT or one DEMOCRAT ?" " why," replied the youth, " I am no feparator to either, I am an AMERICAN."

We think the following extraordinary marriage, worthy of notice ; for we doubt, whether, ever a fimilar inſtance has occurred in this country, for her youths generally improve the opportunity at one fourth of that age which the following juvenile couple had arrived to.

Married on Monday, the 30th July, at Farnham, Surrey, (England) after a courtſhip of forty years, Hugh Welch, to miſs Ann Hill. The ages of this couple, together with the bridemen and bridemaid, were as follows : bridegroom 82—bride 86—bridemaid, miſs Betty Grinaway, of Farnham, 63—brideman, mr. Culver, of ditto, 62—Total 345 ! ! !

" Muſſelman" Buonaparte's laurels, ſays the Columbian Centinel, are fading as faſt as they ripened. He once recognized the chriſtian pope as his " holy father"—he now declares that " God has no ſon"—and having curſed his father and mother, and turned Turk, the once intrepid hero of Italy is degenerated into an incendiary of Egyptian villages. [This is alluding to the air balloon which he aſcended in at Cairo.]

Take Notice.

THE ſubſcriber intending to leave off his preſent buſineſs, requeſts all thoſe to whom he is indebted to bring forward their accounts in order to have a ſettlement ; and thoſe who are in arrear to him, to liquidate their ſeveral accounts, or they will without diſcrimination, be put into the hands of an attorney immediately.

Proclamation.

George the Third, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and ſo forth. To all our loving and faithful ſubjects in our Province of Upper Canada, Greeting.

FORASMUCH as it has pleaſed Almighty God lately to bleſs our arms with unexampled and moſt important Victories over the Fleets and Forces of the perſons who exerciſe the ſupreme authority in France ; Know ye, that we taking into our moſt ſerious conſideration the indiſpenſible duty which we and all our ſubjects owe to Almighty God, for the interpoſition of his Good Providence in theſe ſignal Victories over our enemy, and for the manifold and ineſtimable bleſſings which our kingdoms and provinces have received, and daily continue to receive at his hands ; have thought fit, by the advice of our Executive Council of and for our ſaid Province, to iſſue this our Proclamation, hereby appointing and commanding that a GENERAL THANKSGIVING to Almighty God for theſe, and all other his mercies vouchſafed unto us and to our ſubjects, be obſerved throughout our ſaid Province of Upper Canada, on Tueſday the Twelfth Day of March next, and we do ſtrictly charge and command, that the ſaid public day of Thankſgiving be religiouſly obſerved by all our loving ſubjects in our ſaid Province of Upper Canada, as they tender the favor of Almighty God, and upon pain of ſuffering ſuch puniſhments as we may juſtly inflict upon all ſuch as ſhall contemn or neglect the ſame.

In teſtimony whereof, we have cauſed theſe our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our ſaid Province to be hereunto affixed. Witneſs our truſty and well beloved the Honorable PETER RUSSELL, Preſident, adminiſtering the Government of our ſaid Province, at York, this eleventh day of February, in the year of our Lord one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety-nine, and in the thirty-ninth year of our reign.

ANNO TRICESIMO OCTAVO GEORGII III. REGIS.

AN ACT

To prevent the Exportation of Baſe Coin to his Majeſty's Colonies in the Weſt-Indies and America.

[21ſt June, '98.]

WHEREAS various Baſe Copper Coins made to the reſemblance and ſimilitude of the Foreign copper coins, called TWOPENCE and SOUS MARQUES, have been exported from this Kingdom to the Iſland of Martinique in the Weſt-Indies, under the denomination of Wrought Copper : And whereas Baſe Coin made to the ſimilitude and reſemblance of the Foreign gold and ſilver coins, called JOHANNES and DOLLARS, have been circulated in his Majeſty's Iſlands in the Weſt-Indies, and in other his Majeſty's Colonies in America, to the great Injury of the Inhabitants of the ſaid Iſlands and Colonies : For preventing the like and ſimilar evils in future, be it enacted by the King's moſt excellent Majeſty, by and with the advice and conſent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this preſent parliament aſſembled, and by the authority of the ſame, That all copper coin whatſoever, not being the legal Copper Coin of this Kingdom, and all counterfeit gold or ſilver coin made to the ſimilitude or reſemblance, or intented to reſemble, any gold or ſilver coin, either of this Kingdom or of any other Country, which ſhall, under any pretence, name, or deſcription whatſoever, be exported, ſhipped, or laden or put on board any ſhip, veſſel, or boat, for the purpoſe of being exported from this Kingdom to the ſaid Iſland of Martinique, or any of his Majeſty's or Colonies in the West Indies or America, shall be forfeited, and the same shall and may be seized, sued for, prosecured, and recovered in such courts, and by such and the like ways, means, and methods, and the produce thereof disposed of and applied in such and the like manner, and to such and the like uses and purposes, as any forfeiture incurred by any law respecting the revenue of the customs, may now be seized, sued for, prosecuted, or recovered, disposed of, and applied, either in this Kingdom, or in any of his Majesty's Islands in the West-Indies respectively, as the case may happen to be.

II. And be it further enacted, That every person who shall so export, or shall so ship, lay, or put on board any ship, vessel, or boat, in order to be so exported, or shall cause or procure to be so exported, shipped, or put on board any ship, vessel, or boat, or shall have in his or her custody, in order to be so exported, any such coins as aforesaid, shall for every such offence, forfeit the sum of two hundred pounds, and double the value of such coin, to be recovered by bill, suit, action, or information, in any of his Majesty's courts of record at WESTMINSTER.

An ACT

For the further Regulation of the MILITIA of this Province.

FOR the further regulation of the Militia of this Province, Be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an act passed in the parliament of Great Britain, entitled "An act to repeal certain parts of an act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "An act for making more effectual provision for the government of the province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said province," and by the authority of the same, That every militia man who shall refuse to obey the lawful orders of his superior officer or officers, when employed on militia duty, or who shall quarrel with, or insult by abusive words or otherwise, any officer or non-commissioned officer, being in the execution of his duty, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay a sum of money not exceeding two pounds, nor less than five shillings current money within this province, at the discretion of the justice or justices imposing such fine, and according to the nature of the offence.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That every person who now is enrolled in any regiment, battalion, or independent company of militia, shall within six months after the passing of this act, and every person who shall hereafter be enrolled of any regiment, battalion, or independent company of militia, shall, within six months after such enrollment, provide himself with a good and sufficient musket, fusil, rifle, or gun, with at least six rounds of powder and ball, and shall come provided with the same at each and every time when he shall be called out either for the purpose of review exercise or actual service; and in case any person so enrolled shall refuse or neglect so to provide himself, or to come so provided as aforesaid, he shall for each offence, be liable to a penalty of twenty shillings, to be levied in manner herein after mentioned. Provided always, That when and so often as any militia man shall make it appear to his captain, or officer commanding the company, that it has not been possible for him to procure such musket, fusee, rifle, or gun, it shall and may be lawful for such captain, or officer commanding such company, to admit of such excuse, and to certify the same in writing accordingly, in which case such militia man shall not be liable to pay the said fine of twenty shillings.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no person enrolled in the militia shall absent or withdraw himself from any place of review or exercise, without having first obtained leave of his commanding officer so to do, under the penalty of forty shillings, if a commissioned officer and ten shillings if a non-commissioned officer or private.

IV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any serjeant of the militia when thereunto required by his superior and proper officer, shall neglect or refuse to warn the militia men of the company to which he belongs, to appear when required by his captain or next commanding officer, he shall for every such neglect or refusal, forfeit and pay the sum of forty shillings.

V. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That every serjeant of the militia duly appointed, shall be exempted from serving as a constable for and during such time as he shall hold such appointment of serjeant.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That on the fourth day of June, in each and every year, respectively, or in case it shall happen on a Sunday, then on the next day, and oftener if thereunto required, there shall be a general meeting and review of the several battalions of militia in each and every district of this province, at which time the captain, or officer commanding each company, shall give to his colonel, or in his absence, to the next senior officer, fair written rolls of their respective companies, which colonels, or other commanding officers, shall transmit the same to the lieutenant, or deputy lieutenant, or in his or their absence, to the lieutenant-governor, or person administering the government, under the penalty of five pounds for each captain, or other officer as aforesaid, who shall neglect or refuse so to do.

VII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no provincial allowance shall be made to the adjutant-general of the militia, any law to the contrary notwithstanding.

VIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person be wounded, and shall be disabled upon any invasion, infurrection, or rebellion, he shall be taken care of, and provided for by the public, during the time of such disability.

IX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the twenty-fourth clause of an act of the legislature of this province, entitled "An act for the better regulation of the militia in this province," be, and the same is hereby repealed.

X. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the fines, forfeitures and penalties by the said act imposed, or by this act imposed, shall be sued for and recovered by, and upon the oath of any one credible witness before any two of his Majesty's justices of the peace, and within two months after such conviction and recovery shall be transmitted by the justices before whom such information shall be laid, to the lieutenant, or in case there be no lieutenant, or that he be absent, to the deputy-lieutenant of the county where the offence has been committed; and the said lieutenants and deputy-lieutenants, respectively, shall, and they are hereby required out of the several sums of money which they shall or may receive for fines, forfeitures, or penalties, or otherwise, by virtue of this act, or of any other act of the legislature of this province which relates to the militia, to provide for the regiments in their respective counties or ridings, drums, fifes, colours, banners, regimental books, and for the discharge of other incidental expences; and in case any overplus of such monies shall remain in the hands of any such lieutenant, or deputy-lieutenant, after providing such articles as aforesaid, such surplus shall be disposed of in premiums to the persons who shall make the best shots at a target or mark, upon days of training, and in such proportions as at a meeting of the lieutenancy or deputy-lieutenancy, shall be directed; and each lieutenant, or deputy-lieutenant, shall render a certified account thereof in detail, to be transmitted to the lieutenant governor, or person administering the government, as soon after the thirty first day of December, annually, as practicable.

XI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That upon pressing and urgent occasions, in the time of war or insurrection, it shall and may be lawful for the lieutenant-governor, or person administering the government, to march such part of the militia of this province as he shall think proper, to the assistance of the province of Lower Canada.

Sheriff's-Office, York,

FEBRUARY 5, 99.

HOME DISTRICT, } To wit. }

NOTICE is hereby given, that a court of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery will be holden for this district, at the Court House in the town of Newark, on Monday the FOURTH day of MARCH now next ensuing, at 11 o'clock of the forenoon of the same day, of which all justices of the peace, coroners, gaolers, constables, bailiffs, and all those otherwise interested, are desired to take notice, and that they respectively be then, and there present, with their rolls, records, indictments, and all other remembrances, to do those things which to their several offices in that behalf appertain.

Proclamation.

George the Third, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and ſo forth. To all our loving and faithful ſubjects in our Province of Upper Canada, Greeting.

FORASMUCH as it has pleaſed Almighty God lately to bleſs our arms with unexampled and moſt important Victories over the Fleets and Forces of the perſons who exerciſe the ſupreme authority in France; Know ye, that we taking into our moſt ſerious conſideration the indiſpenſible duty which we and all our ſubjects owe to Almighty God, for the interpoſition of his Good Providence in theſe ſignal Victories over our enemy and for the manifold and inceſſimable bleſſings which our kingdoms and provinces have received, and daily continue to receive at his hands, have thought fit, by the advice of our Executive Council of and for our ſaid Province, to iſſue this our Proclamation, hereby appointing and commanding that a GENERAL THANKSGIVING to Almighty God for theſe, and all other his mercies vouchſafed unto us and to our ſubjects, be obſerved throughout our ſaid Province of Upper Canada, on Tueſday the Twelfth Day of March next, and we do ſtrictly charge and command, that the ſaid public day of Thankſgiving be religiouſly obſerved by all our loving ſubjects in our ſaid Province of Upper Canada, as they tender the favor of Almighty God, and upon pain of ſuffering ſuch puniſhments as we may juſtly inflict upon all ſuch as ſhall contemn or neglect the ſame.

In teſtimony whereof, we have cauſed theſe our letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our ſaid Province to be hereunto affixed. Witneſs our truſty and well beloved the Honorable PETER RUSSELL, Preſident, adminiſtering the Government of our ſaid Province, at York, this eleventh day of February, in the year of our Lord one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety-nine, and in the thirty-ninth year of our reign.

Paris, November 2.

The Redacteur gives the following account of Bompard's expedition:

"FORTUNE has frustrated the hopes of government, and the effort of the brave Bompard, [They should have said, brave, untried, for the resistance which he made was but faint.] who commanded the expedition that failed from Brest in order to succour the United Irishmen: One of these mishaps, which it is not in the power of prudence [of a French man it ought to say,] to foresee or controul, threw that division, during the night, into the midst of an English fleet. The dawn of day discovered at the same time both the land they were in search of, and the enemy's force far superior to ours. An action immediately commenced, but courage was obliged to yield to numbers. [We presume a better reason can be assigned: is it to be supposed that a fleet manned and commanded by those who have been, from their infancy, fed upon ROAST BEEF, able to contend with the OAK of Great-Britain and her brave TARS, who have been nourished up with good ROAST BEEF and PLUMB-PUDDING? No, common sense dictates to the contrary.] This unfortunate event was moreover preceded by circumstances which renders it still more deplorable. More than three fourths of the troops destined for the expedition of Ireland, were to sail from Brest, the remainder from Rochefort. Every thing was so settled and combined, that the same wind enabled Savary, who commanded the Rochefort division, and Bompard, who commanded that of Brest, to set sail at the same time. The troops were embarked; every thing belonging to them, together with the necessary warlike stores and ammunition, were on board; every thing was ready, and the money required by generals Hardy and Humbert, was drawn for on the bank in cash, and the necessary orders and advices were given at the treasury.

"On the 28th July, two couriers extraordinary were dispatched from Paris, one to Brest, the other to Rochefort, each bearing orders to set sail on the first breath of a favorable wind. General Humbert touched the cash. [And we presume it stuck to his fingers.] that was designed for him, paid the troops under his command, and the division commanded by Savary, which conducted him to Ireland, put to sea on the 4th Aug.

"At Brest, on the contrary, gen. Hardy neither finds wherewith to pay the troops, nor the other funds that had been promised him. on the 15th Thermidor, he sent back the extraordinary courier, to announce that nothing but the absolute want of pecuniary means prevented him from sailing.

[Poor Hardy gives obvious reasons for his not sailing at the time appointed, but we doubt whether it was altogether the want of cash, but a little courage that prevented; for he was truly sensible, that if, perchance, some of the brave British tars should come athwart him, they would quickly dispatch him to Davy's locker!]

"Mean time, the chief of division, Savary, reached Kallala on the 5th, where he disembarked his troops — Had the chief of division, Bompard, sailed at the same time, he would have sailed the same course, and landed at the same point. The enemy had not then any fleet on the Irish coast, nor had he taken any of the measures which he has since adopted, and which he had permitted in regarding as superfluous.— The force under Humbert, supported by troops not less courageous, and three more numerous, would not have surrendered; Ireland would have been completely detached from England, or at least the French would have doubtless supported themselves in the country in the imposing posture, of victory and success.

[What a puff of French idiotism, to suppose that a handful of men, and they French, would be able to detach Ireland from Great Britain.— The famous author of the preceding paragraph, has made as great a mistake, with respect to the situation of Ireland, as poor Buonaparte did of that of Egypt.]

"But fate ordained it otherwise, and now painful must it be to reflect, that the whole of these disasters are occasioned from the non payment of the sum ordered by the directory, and which should have been transmitted in time, when circumstances were of such urgency and importance."

[And in our turn, we say "how painful must it be to reflect that these disasters," have not totally destroyed the efforts of that nation who is endeavoring to infect all Europe with French faction, and it is to be regretted, that ever, any of the nations of Europe experienced its pernicious effects.]

LONDON, Oct. 23.

Lord Nelson will be so oppressed with honors, that it will hardly be in his power "to bear them all about him." His uniform as admiral, his robes as a peer, his Turkish chaleogk, with his fur pelice; will at least keep him warm during the winter.

Mr. Burke observes, that "a man at forty is all that he ever will be." This truth is most happily illustrated in the instance of lord Nelson, who has atchieved the acts for which he has so deservedly obtained his title before that age. His lordship completed his fortieth year on Michaelmas day last.

The five monarchs of France in reality assume more state than any of the former legitimate kings, but they affect to say that all their ceremonious dignity is for the honor of the republic. It is for the honor of the republic, too, that no man in the state is secure of a thilling, or is not in hourly fear of being dragged away for military plunder and massacre!

The Danish trade increases every hour. The Dutch can hardly put a ship of their own to sea, and the French employ all neutral bottoms.

Admiral Keith has gone out as second in command to lord St. Vincent on the Lisbon station.

A Savannah paper of the 14th Jan. contains the following report from Grenada: That the United States frigate, commodore Barry, had captured seven sail of French vessels, five merchantmen and two privateers.

November 1.

The account received last week of the destruction of the French transports in the harbour of Alexandria, is confirmed. This grand work was effected by bomb vessels, which setting fire to some of the ships that were closely moored, the conflagration soon became so formidable, as to defy every attempt to extinguish it. All that could be done, and that with difficulty, was to save the lives of the crews. The whole number of transports destroyed was 366; as also two Venetian ships of war, and several Dutch and English vessels, which had been detained by the enemy.

While this attack was made from sea, a body of Mamelukes and Arabs created a powerful diversion on the land side by a brisk cannonade of the forts of Alexandria, but it is not said with that success.

One letter says, that the French assisted to hasten the destruction of the shipping, apprehensive that the ships might otherwise fall into the hands of the English.

It is said that the flag of truce from Calais which brought dispatches to Mr. Niou, had announced the design of the Directory to send commissioners to England to treat for peace, and they actually inclosed a letter to Lord Grenville, applying for passports.

Hull, Nov. 3. The Syrus frigate, of 26 guns, captain King, arrived in the Humber yesterday, with the Fury Dutch frigate of 36 guns in tow. Capt. King fell in with this frigate, and another of 26 guns, off the Texel: the latter he took without exchanging a shot, and immediately sent her for Yarmouth Roads: he then followed the Fury, and after a long chase and running fight of 40 minutes, obliged her to strike to the superior gallantry of British seamen.— She had 500 men on board, including soldiers, and a large quantity of stores, soldiers arms, baggage, &c. It is reported the Sirus had one man killed and one wounded; the Dutch frigate ten killed, and several wounded; the officers and troops are all Frenchmen, and are intended to be landed here. A pilot is appointed by the Trinity house to take the above prize into Yarmouth Roads.

Four sailors have been executed at Plymouth on board the Thisbe frigate, for attempting to excite a mutiny on board the Glory, of 98 guns.

Four others were executed on board the Captain, of 74 guns at Cawsand Bay—They were implicated in the same crime.

BRITISH PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

Tuesday, Nov. 20.

HIS majesty went with his usual state to the house of lords, and being seated on the throne, summoned the house of commons to attend the royal presence. As soon as they were arrived, his majesty opened the parliament with the following most GRACIOUS SPEECH from the throne:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

THE events which have taken place in the course of the present year, & the signal success which, by the blessings of Providence, has attended my arms, have been productive of the happiest consequences, and have essentially promoted the prosperity and glory of our country.

The unexampled series of our naval triumphs has received fresh splendour from the memorable and decisive action in which a detachment of my fleet under the command of rear admiral lord Nelson, attacked and almost totally destroyed a superior force of the enemy, strengthened by every advantage of situation. By this great and brilliant victory, an enterprize, of which the injustice perfidy, and extravagance had fixed the attention of the world, and which was peculiarly directed against some of the most valuable interests of the British Empire, has in the first instance been turned to the confusion of its authors; and the blow thus given to the power and influence of France has afforded an opening, which, if improved by suitable exertions on the part of other powers, may lead to the general deliverance of Europe.

The wisdom and magnanimity displayed at this conjuncture by the emperor of Russia, and the decision and vigor of the Ottoman Porte, have shewn that those powers are impressed with a just sense of the present crisis; and their example, to the disposition manifested almost universally in the different countries struggling under the yoke of France, must be a powerful encouragement to other states, to adopt that vigorous line of conduct which experience has proved to be alone consistent with security or honor.

The extent of our preparations at home, and the demonstrations of zeal and spirit among all ranks of my subjects, have deterred the enemy from attempting to execute their vain threat of invading the coasts of this kingdom.

In Ireland, the rebellion which they had instigated, has been curbed and repressed—the troops which they landed for its support, have been compelled to surrender; and the armaments since destined for the same purpose, have, by the vigilance and activity of my squadrons, been captured or dispersed. The views and principles of those, who, in concert with our inveterate enemy, have long planned the subversion of our constitution, have been fully detected and exposed, and their treasons made manifest to the world. Those whom they had misled or seduced, must now be awakened to their duty: and a just sense of the miseries and horrors which these traitorous designs have produced, must impress on the minds of all my faithful subjects, the necessity of continuing to repel with firmness every attack on the laws and established government of their country.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons,

Under the unavoidable pressure of protracted war, it is a great satisfaction to me, to observe, that the produce of the public revenue has proved adequate to the increase of our permanent expenditure; that the national credit has been maintained and improved; and that the commerce and industry of my subjects have continued to flourish in a degree hitherto unknown.

The situation in which we are placed, unhappily renders the continuance of heavy expences indispensible to the public safety; but the state of our resources, and the good sense and public spirit which prevail through every part of my kingdom, will I trust enable you to provide the necessary supplies without any essential inconvenience to my people, and with as little addition as possible to the permanent burdens of the state. The progress made towards such a system, by the measures adopted in the last session, and the aid given to public credit by the plan for the redemption of the land tax, have been attended with the most beneficial effects, which you will, I am persuaded omit no opportunity to confirm and improve

My Lords and Gentlemen

I rely with confidence on the continuance of your exertions, to enable me ultimately to conduct the great contest in which we are engaged, to a safe and honorable conclusion.

We have surmounted many and great difficulties—our perseverance in a just cause has been rewarded with distinguished success, and our present situation, compared with that of other countries, sufficiently prove how much in a period of general danger and calamity, the security and happiness of the British nation have depended (under the blessing of Providence) on its own constancy, its energy, and its virtue.

The question on the address, after a warm debate, was put and carried nem. dis.

The conſtables are to take notice, that although for their own eaſe, they are ſelected from particular diſtricts ; they are liable to ſerve proceſs generally in the county.

THE ſpeech of our moſt gracious ſovereign, on the opening of parliament, is couched in ſublime, independent, and unſhaken language, and it is to be hoped that it will excite and animate his ſubjects to noble and benevolent deeds, and prove to be a terror to his enemies : how juſtly he is ſtyled "The father of his people," and how much ſo he executes the important duties of his crown ! May the tyrants who hold the reins of government in France, thudder when they read his diction, may it awaken them to a juſt ſenſe of their deplorable ſituation and of the horrors and miſeries, which, through their infamous conduct, many innocent perſons have ſuffered. Poor degenerated France ! if you was bleſſed with ſuch a ſovereign, inſtead of an inſidious directory, to allay your inteſtine commotions, to ſhake off the heavy yoke which your citizens and allies are ſtruggling under, and to adminiſter juſtice and liberty to an enſlaved people, you might, once more retrieve your former grandeur ; but on the contrary, your perfidious directory is aiming at nothing but the deſtruction of your citizens, and to eraſe you from the map of Europe !

WE hear, that the N. W. Company, has given TWELVE THOUSAND POUNDS towards making YONGE-STREET a good road, and that the N. W. commerce will be communicated through this place. An event which muſt, inevitably, benefit this country materially ; as it will not only tend to augment the population, but will alſo enhance the preſent value of landed property.

The government forces of Ireland, including the yeomanry, it is ſaid amount to about 250,000.

SUICIDE.]—The pleaſanteſt way of making a quietus was the ſubject of diſpute lately between a marine and a ſailor. The firſt warmly contended in favour of a fuzee, which he ſaid would in a moment diſcharge the weary traveller from the load of life. Well, ſaid honeſt Jack, " give me the happineſs to be made faſt to the ſweet lips of an eighteen-pounder, from which I might be blown into Heaven, before the Old One would think I was dead."

ANNO TRICESIMO OCTAVO
GEORGII III. REGIS.

AN ACT

To prevent the Exportation of Baſe Coin to his Majeſty's Colonies in the Weſt-Indies and America.

[21ſt June, '98.]

WHEREAS various Baſe Copper Coins made to the reſemblance and ſimilitude of the Foreign copper coins, called TEMPES and SOUS MARQUS, have been exported from this Kingdom to the Iſland of Martinique in the Weſt-Indies, under the denomination of Wrought Copper: And whereas Baſe Coin made to the ſimilitude and reſemblance of the Foreign gold and ſilver coins, called JOHANNES and DOLLARS, have been circulated in his Majeſty's Iſlands in the Weſt-Indies, and in other his Majeſty's Colonies in America, to the great Injury of the Inhabitants of the ſaid Iſlands and Colonies: For preventing the like and ſimilar evils in future, be it enacted by the King's moſt excellent Majeſty, by and with the advice and conſent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this preſent parliament aſſembled, and by the authority of the ſame, That all copper coin whatſoever, not being the legal Copper Coin of this Kingdom, and all counterfeit gold or ſilver coin made to the ſimilitude or reſemblance, or intented to reſemble, any gold or ſilver coin, either of this Kingdom or of any other Country, which ſhall, under any pretence, name, or deſcription whatſoever, be exported, ſhipped, or laden or put on board any ſhip, veſſel, or boat, for the purpoſe of being exported from this Kingdom to the ſaid Iſland of Martinique, or any of his Majeſty's Iſlands or Colonies in the Weſt-Indies or America, ſhall be forfeited, and the ſame ſhall and may be ſeized, ſued for, proſecuted, and recovered in ſuch courts, and by ſuch and the like ways, means, and methods, and the produce thereof diſpoſed of and applied in ſuch and the like manner, and to ſuch and the like uſes and purpoſes, as any forfeiture incurred by any law reſpecting the revenue of the cuſtoms, may now be ſeized, ſued for, proſecuted, or recovered, diſpoſed of, and applied, either in this Kingdom, or in any of his Majeſty's Iſlands in the Weſt-Indies reſpectively, as the caſe may happen to be.

II. And be it further enacted, That every perſon who ſhall ſo export, or ſhall ſo ſhip, lay, or put on board any ſhip, veſſel, or boat, in order to be ſo exported, or ſhall cauſe or procure to be ſo exported, ſhipped, or put on board any ſhip, veſſel, or boat, or ſhall have in his or her cuſtody, in order to be ſo exported, any ſuch coins as aforeſaid, ſhall for every ſuch offence, forfeit the ſum of two hundred pounds, and double the value of ſuch coin, to be recovered by bill, ſuit, action, or information, in any of his Majeſty's courts of record at WESTMINSTER.

From the LONDON GAZETTE.

Downing-ſtreet, Nov. 20.

A Decree having been publiſhed by the French Directory, declaring, that all perſons natives of, or originally belonging to neutral countries, or countries in alliance with France, who may form a part of the crews of any of the King's ſhips of war, or any other Britiſh veſſels, ſhall be conſidered and treated as pirates; his Majeſty has directed it to be ſignified to the commiſſary for the French priſoners in Great Britain, that if this decree ſhall in any inſtance be carried into effect againſt any ſuch perſons taken in any veſſel the property of his Majeſty, or of his Majeſty's ſubjects, and navigated under the Britiſh flag, it is his Majeſty's determination to exerciſe the moſt rigorous retaliation againſt the ſubjects of the French republic, whom the chance of war has now placed, or may hereafter place, at the King's diſpoſal.

LONDON, November 21.

It is underſtood that Mr. Foſter, ſpeaker of the houſe of commons of Ireland, has prevailed on miniſters to give up, at leaſt for the preſent, their deſign of incorporating the two kingdoms by an union.

December 1.

Yeſterday an expreſs over-land from India, was received at the India houſe, by which the directors are informed that the Earl of Mornington is arrived at Bengal. That every thing is quiet in all parts of our extenſive poſſeſſions of the Eaſt, and that there are no appearances of any extraordinary preparation on the part of Tippo Saib.

A verboſe, ambiguous and elaborately confuſed apology has been publiſhed by the French miniſter, Talleyrand Perigord, which ſeems to fit the charge of corruption more ſtrongly on himſelf and his maſters, than even the teſtimony of the American miniſters. It was eaſy to conjecture, that the only ſubterfuge of which he could avail himſelf, was a diſavowal of his anonymous agents. Yet even this, he has not directly, plainly, and poſitively done. In the whole courſe of his involved and tedious defence, and with the impunity of which he was aſſured for every falſehood he could utter, he has not once ventured in plain, unequivocal language, to deny that thoſe perſons who made corrupt propoſals to the American miniſters, were his confidential agents. In the midſt of all his whining, bullying and ſnuffling, there is not one ſimple downright denial of guilt. The affair of Dutch inſcriptions is avowed. All his compliments have produced nothing from Mr. Gerry, but a declaration that none of the agents in the infamous tranſaction were employed in the foreign office. Mr. Talleyrand ſeems to be no ſuch novice in corruption as to employ his avowed and immediate dependants in ſuch a buſineſs. Some men may believe, and no man dare contradict his tale at Paris, but no man of common ſenſe and common honeſty, who is without the reach of his power, can peruſe his apology without any other impreſſion than that it is a clumſy defence, and an implied confeſſion of the meaneſt and moſt atrocious guilt.

The Abbe Gregorie, we are told, eſtimates the number of jews ſcattered over the face of the earth at ſix millions, not including thoſe who act upon the Chriſtian principle!

House of Commons

Tuesday, November 26.

LORD G. L. Gower rose to move the address. He drew an animated picture of the present happy state of public affairs. He commenced on the importance of the victory of lord Nelson; on the suppression of the rebellion in Ireland; the high state of our finances; and the spirit which our recent successes had excited amongst all the powers on the continent; and concluded with reading the address, which was, as usual, an echo of the speech.

Sir H. P. St. John Mildmay seconded the address, by similar arguments. Speaking of the redemption of the land tax, he said he was happy to state from his own knowledge that the scheme bid fair to produce the most happy effects.

Sir John Sinclair thought the scheme of the redemption of the land tax a material injury to the country, and expressed his disapprobation of a tax on general property.

Sir Francis Burdet delivered sentiments similar to those of lord Lansdowne in the upper house, and said that if any other member had any amendment to propose, he would second it.

The address, was then put, and carried unanimously.

Mr. Pitt gave notice, that, on Monday se'nnight, he would make a motion on matters of finance.

WEDNESDAY, Nov. 27.

On Motion of Mr. Dundas, the thanks of the house were voted nem. con. to lord Nelson and sir J. B. Warren, their officers, and men, in the same manner as the house of peers; an address to his majesty was also voted requesting him to give directions that a monument should be erected in veneration of the memory of captain C. Westcott, who fell in the action at the mouth of the Nile.

November 28.

Yesterday Mr. Cole went into the Stock Exchange with a paper in his hand which he had received at the bank, and which he desired might be read for the information of the house. It stated, "That the chancellor of the exchequer would be ready to receive offers for a loan, for the service of the year 1799, in the course of next week." Mr. Cole being known to be the broker of a considerable director of the bank, the information was received with credit, and it made an immediate and material impression on the funds.—They fell to 54 1 2 for money, and the impression would have been greater if the effect of this notice had not been counteracted in some degree by the vigor of the Bulls, whose business it was to but, for the settling day. This day they have experienced a farther depression, as our readers will see by our prices of stocks.

In the intimation made by Mr. Cole no sum was mentioned, but in the plan of the subscription, it is for a loan of 17 or 18,000,000l. with the usual proviso of augmentation or decrease as it shall go beyond or come short of that sum.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, March 16.

THERE happened, not long since, a conjunction between two great planets, the one Mercury, and the other one of the daughters, Venus: singular as it may appear, the conjunction could not be seen only through a hole in the hearth of Mr. ——'s house in the western part of King's Street; what may be the issue of this conjunction, time only can determine; however, as report says, the Indians are coming to disturb our peace and we shall, undoubtedly, stand in need of soldiers; now, had it been Mars, instead of Mercury, we might have expected a young VOLUNTEER!

Last Tuesday being the day appointed for a general Thanksgiving to Almighty God throughout this province, for the late unexampled and most important victories obtained by his Majesty's arms over the fleets and forces of the enemy, the same was observed in this town with great solemnity and devotion by all ranks of people.

A Journal in Paris, says a New York paper, ventured to publish lately, the London gazette extraordinary; containing the detail of lord Nelson's victory. The consequence was, that his paper was prohibited, and his presses broken up, by order of the directory!!

[Our readers will observe that this is a decree of that perfidious directory, who are endeavoring to evince to the world, that their constituents, enjoy "True Liberty," so they do, if abject slavery deserves the name. In what consists the great liberty of the press, which they so much boast of? is it in destroying it for publishing the detail of an action, in which, the enemy proved victorious? Yes, that is the great liberty which that nation enjoys under those tyrants who govern them; in short, they are the most contemptible slaves existing; there is nothing they dare call their own, not even their souls, for their tyrants have decreed that they have none!!!]

"HOW COLD IT IS!!!"

NOW the bluff'ring Boreas blows;
See, all the waters round are frose!
The trees that skirt the dreary plain,
All day a murmuring cry retain;
The trembling forest hears the moan,
And sadly mingles groan with groan.
How dismal all, from east to west!
Heaven defend the poor distress'd.
Such is the tale,
Thro' hill and vale—
Each trav'ler may behold it is;
While low and high
Are heard to cry,
Bless my heart, HOW COLD IT IS!!
Humanity, delightful tale,
While we feel the winter gale!
May the high peer, in ermine coat,
Incline the ear to sorrow's note;
And where, with mis'ry's load oppress,
Some fellow-creature lies distress,
Full amply let his bounty flow,
To sooth the bosom chill'd with woe:
In town or vale,
Where'er the tale
Of real grief unfolded is,
O may he give,
The means to live
To those who know HOW COLD IT IS!
Perchance some warrior, blind and lam'd;
Some dauntless tar, for England maim'd
Consider these—for thee they bore
The loss of limbs, and suffered more:
O pass them not, for, if you do,
They'll sigh to think they fought for you!!!
Go pity all; but, 'bove the rest,
The soldier or the tar distress'd:
Thro' winter's rain
Relieve their pain,
For what they've done sure bold it is,
Their wants supply,
When e'er they cry,
Bless my heart, HOW COLD IT IS!!
And now ye sluggards, drones and beaus,
Who dread the breath the winter blows
Pursue the counsel of a friend,
Who never found it yet offend
While winter deals its frost around,
Go face the air, and beat the ground;
With cheerful spirits exercise,
'Tis here health's balmy blessing lies:
On hill or dale,
Tho' hard the gale,
And frozen you behold it is,
The blood shall glow
And swiftly flow,
And you'll ne'er cry, HOW COLD IT IS!

PETER RUSSELL, PRESIDENT.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the third, by the grace of God of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, king, defender of the faith, &c. &c. &c.

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS,

GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our proclamation bearing date the Eighth day of January, we thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council to prorogue our provincial parliament until the fourteenth day of this present month of MARCH, at which time in our town of YORK you were held and constrained to appear; but we taking into our royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council, to relieve you, and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the twenty-third day of April next, ensuing, you meet us in our provincial parliament, in our town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary:—Herein fail not. In testimony whereof we have caused these our letters to be made patent, and the great seal of our said province to be hereunto affixed:—Witness the honorable PETER RUSSELL, esq. president administering the government of our said province, this ELEVENTH day of MARCH in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-nine, and of our reign the thirty-ninth.

Four lifts are forming for the loan, viz. Robarts, Curtis, and co.; meffrs. Thellurffon; meffrs. Goldfmids, and mr. E. P. Salomons. mr. Gills, and the fame party of gentlemen who bid with him laft year—Twenty bankers—and the gentlemen of the Stock Exchange.

The gazette of laft night contains a notice to mariners, dated Copenhagen, Aug. 30: that a new lantern light has been erected on the point of the Naze of Skuddanees, which will begin to burn on the 1ft of January next, and continue on the fame regulation as the reft of the lights, viz. during the fummer, from Eafter to Michaelmas, when it will be at one hour after the fun; and during the winter, from Michaelmas till Eafter, it then being lit half an hour after the fetting of the fun, and continuing to burn till day-light.

DUBLIN, Nov. 15.

COURT-MARTIAL,

On Theobald Wolfe Tone.

General Loftus, Prefident.

Col. Daly	Col. Vanfittart,
Maj. Carter	Capt. Wodte,
Maj. Price	Capt. Corkey.

The court fat about 11 o'clock, when Mr. Tone was introduced by Major Sandys, fplendidly dreffed in the French uniform—a blue coat, highly ornamented with gold, a blue and white waiftcoat, blue pantaloons, and fhort boots bound with gold and gold taffels. At firft entrance he appeared a good deal agitated, and afked for a glafs of water, which was immediately procured for him: he afterwards appeared perfectly collected.

The charge was then read to him in the ufual form by the prefident—of adhering to the king's enemies, attempting to levy war within the kingdom, &c. When afked whether he pleaded "guilty or not guilty?" he feemed to hefitate at the term, but at length pleaded guilty, and immediately after, producing a paper, he fpoke nearly to the following effect:

"If any expreffion which may eventually wound the feelings of this court, fhould find its way into this paper, I entreat them to drop me, and I will erafe them; but I imagine there are few material facts which have not been proved before the houfes of parliament. The court fhall have no trouble in fubftantiating the charges that are alledged. I admit them all, and in their fulleft extent; and am aware of the confequences. When I embarked in the caufe, I foreſaw the danger, and I truft I fhall meet it with becoming fortitude. I think it, however, incumbent on me to offer a few reafons for my conduct; for never will I difavow the principles by which I have been invariably actuated. I have reviewed, and with all the precifion of a man who is foon to die, every action of my life, & there is not one which does not at this moment convey to me fatisfaction and triumph, for they have all with unvarying ſolicitude tended to the emancipation of my native country.

"The influence and the connection of Great Britain, I have ever conſidered the bane of the profperity and happineſs of Ireland. Thefe it has been the firft wifh of my heart to deſtroy, and the moment I found the proper reſources of the country inadequate to the conflict, I applied to a nation who had the will and the power to aſſiſt her.—That generous nation honored me with its eſteem and confidence—I acknowledge it with pride—I acknowledge it with gratitude. Born to an humble, but honorable poverty, I had not only to ſtruggle with penury, but with temptation; but it now gratifies my heart, and conſoles me under what otherwiſe would be a deep affliction, that I have refuſed offers certainly dangerous to the virtue of a man in my obſcure ſituation. The good of my country was the firſt object of my life—for this I became an exile—for this I ſubmitted to poverty—for this I left the boſom of my family—my wife! my children! all that made life valuable!—to procure the aid I thought eſſential to the welfare of Ireland, I braved the danger of the deep, the fire of the enemy—with my brave, my faithful comrades, I embarked for my native country, in the fulleſt hope of raiſing from abject ſlavery three millions of my fellow men!

[Here the court interfered. He was told that he was criminating himſelf, and deſired to reflect how much ſuch expreſſions would neceſſarily injure him.] He continued—

"But in life ſucceſs is omnipotent. I have made an attempt in which Waſhington ſucceeded—and Kolciuſko failed—the deliverance of my country.

"I thank the court for the attention with which they have honored me. I ſhall not trouble them much longer. No individual deplores more than I do, the enormities that have been perpetrated. My object was fair and honorable in itſelf, and I am ſhocked to find the conteſt has degenerated into murder, pillage and aſſaſſination. I ſhall make but few comments on my treatment ſince I was made priſoner. I was loaded with irons, but this I conſider diſgraceful only to him who iſſued the orders. To my maſters, the Roman Catholics of my country, I offer my hearty thanks; and I truſt that you, Mr. preſident, and the other members of this honorable court, will accept my grateful acknowledgments for the indulgence I have experienced. You muſt do your duty; I truſt I ſhall fulfil mine."

[Here he produced three commiſſions—1ſt, as chief de brigade; 2d, as adjutant-general of the army of Ireland, and 3d, as commiſſary of the army of England, and the order to join, iſſued by the miniſter of the marine. He added, that he was in the army of England when commanded firſt by Buonaparte, and lately by general Kmaine.]

Queſtion by one of the court. Why do theſe commiſſions all run in the name of Smith?

Anſwer. I aſſumed the name of Smith in America, and continued it in France. It is uſual to aſſume a Nom de Courre, and I was better known in the army by the name of Smith, than by my own.

I shew these commissions to prove to you beyond a doubt, that I stand here as a French soldier, and must consider myself; and trust I shall be so considered by you, precisely in the situation of a French Emigre in France. That nation has the noble mindedness to vouchsafe Sombreuil and Charette the death of a soldier.

I hold my commissions by a title as valid as any of the members of this court. My situation, gentlemen, is a military one. I request, and I expect a military execution. (After a pause, he added) The court must be sensible I have given no unnecessary trouble, or impeded their proceedings with chicane or subterfuge; in return, it is my wish that the sentence may, if possible, be executed within an hour."

[Here the court explained the necessity of the lord lieutenant's ratification, &c. and then broke up.]

Mr. Tone is about two and thirty, and has left an amiable wife (sister in-law to Ir. Reynolds) and has three children, in Paris.

United States.

ALEXANDRIA, (Vir.) Jan. 24.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman of respectability in Richmond, to his friend in this town, dated Jan. 20.

"The legislature are about passing an appeal to the people in the shape of an address, fraught with the most direful sentiments to the government of the United States. Times are alarming, civil dissentions, if not actual civil war, may be expected. Nobody can mistake the meaning of Taylor of Caroline. He is the prime mover, and is surrounded by those who move pretty much as he directs. One week more, and all their projects will be out. A bill is ordered to be brought into the house, arraying the State's Judges against those of the United States, in cases that may occur under the sedition act, the avowed object of which is to set at liberty any person who shall be prosecuted under that act.

"Taylor's resolutions, which you have seen—Nicholas substituted in place of those proposed by George K. Taylor—the appeal or address to the people—and the bill ordered to be brought in, will fill up the measures of hostility on the part of this state against the United States.—The government of the United States must protect itself or yield to the force of Virginia. Such open hostility cannot and must not be passed over in silence. Another project is before the house, for arming en masse all the militia of the commonwealth—this is also the scheme of Taylor and his party—and who can doubt the project? It is not to prepare to defend the nation against a foreign foe, for this party boldly assert that there is no such danger to be apprehended. What then is the object? The resolutions mentioned, acts contemplated, and the manifesto to the people, are the best elucidations."

NEW YORK, February 10.

Extract of a letter from Benjamin Hawkins, esq; superintendant of Indian affairs, south of the Ohio, to a public officer in Savannah, dated Coweta, Tallaunassee, 23d Dec. 1798.

"I have lately returned by the Upper Creeks, from a visit thro' the Cherokees, to the state of Tennessee. I find the Cherokees are making considerable progress in agriculture and manufactures. They are settling out of their towns, fencing their fields, and attending to the raising of stock, particularly cattle and hogs: they have confidence in the justice of government, and are worthy of its continued attention.

"I have at length brought the Creeks to reflect seriously on their situation, and on the measures necessary to their prosperity. They begin to be alarmed at the poverty and nakedness of their land. They have made repeated efforts to induce me to obtain presents for them as heretofore, but without effect. Their annuity is paid them regularly, and no more. I have application for a hundred ploughs for the ensuing season. I have the wheel & loom in operation, and have obtained a promise that this spring they will begin to fence their fields. Those who have settled in villages, have been fencing for some time past.

"I have sent all the hunters into the woods, well disposed towards their neighbours, and have taken the precaution to have suitable persons appointed to accompany them, and watch over their conduct.

"Mr. Panton writes me of the 15th, that the line of division comes on, and the commissioners are expected to be at Tombigby, by the middle of next month at farthest.

UTICA, February 11.

The 29th ult. the following resolutions were adopted by the House of Representatives of the U. States:

1. Resolved, That two docks be established in the United States, and that 50,000 dollars be appropriated therefor.

2. That 100,000 dollars be appropriated for the purchase of timber, to be used or preserved for the building ships or vessels of war of the United States.

3. That the navy of the United States be augmented by a number, not exceeding six, of ships of war, to carry not less than 74 guns, to be built within the United States, and a number not exceeding six, of sloops of war, carrying not less than 18 guns, to be built or purchased within the United States, and that a sum not exceeding one million of dollars be appropriated therefor.

4. That the president of the United States be authorized by law, to augment the number of guns on board any ship now in service, or building, above the number it may be rated at, and that 35,000 dollars be appropriated for that purpose.

5. That the president of the United States shall be authorized to take on the navy establishment, such of the revenue cutters now in service, as may be in his opinion, fit for service abroad.

YORK, Saturday, March 23.

A paragraph having crept into our Gazette of Saturday last through means of too hasty a perusal, and which, it seems, has not been pleasing to some of our readers; we therefore beg leave to inform them that we had not, by publishing said paragraph, the smallest idea of hurting the feelings, or giving offence to any individual—for our plan has been, and we mean strictly to adhere to it, that of making the Gazette a vehicle of useful and entertaining information only; not calculated to hurt the morals of the people, or disturb the peace or happiness of individuals.

Any article of information, which may tend to the improvement of the country or the good of the community, shall meet with a ready conveyance to the public, through the Gazette; but nothing hurtful or scandalous, shall make its appearance therein.

There are accounts in town which mention the death of Buonaparte—he was assassinated as he sat in council with some of the Beys of Egypt.

A French prisoner died on board the Hero hulk, at Chatham, in England, in whose chest were found cash and notes to the amount of 7 mod. sterling.

The American government (says a London paper of Nov. 20) having made application to our ministers, that such American Seamen as are on board the English fleet be discharged and sent home to man the ships of their nation, the lords of the admiralty gave orders to that purpose.

European News.

LONDON, December 6.

A Letter from Vienna has been received in town, written by a nobleman of the firſt rank and very high in office, but who had oppoſed the ſyſtem of war from the beginning. It ſtates, "that it is no longer poſſible to be at peace with the French republic, and that war, now become of abſolute neceſſity, is dicided upon."

According to private advices from Italy, we learn that the Neapolitan troops have entered the Roman territories. Nearly at the ſame time that the Griſons entered the Valteline country, the king of Naples marched his troops to the frontiers of the Roman republic, and took poſſeſſion of ſeveral Roman villages, in which ovens have been eſtabliſhed for the Neapolitan army.

If, it is reported, the Emperor has retaken the Valteline from the Ciſalpine republic (to whom it had been given by Buonaparte, tho' he had not the leaſt right to beſtow it) he may pour his troops whenever he pleaſes into the very heart of the Ciſalpine territories, give his aid to the king of Sardinia, and attack the rear of the French army of Italy, while his forces in the Venetian ſtates attack them in front. It is the fineſt poſition imaginable.

Gen. Pichegru is gone to the continent, where he is to watch the progreſs of events; and, if war ſhould recommence, is to take an active part in it.—He has declared moſt explicitly his wiſh of being independent, and his deſire to act in concert with foreign powers, but not under their direction.

A letter from the vicinity of Antwerp dated the 7th of Nov. and written by one of the inſurgents, was received in town by the laſt mail. The writer is a young man, who addreſſes his father, a reſident in London. He ſtates that there are in thoſe parts of the low country, about 8000 men, a great number of whom have guns. When they took Antwerp they found vaſt quantities of arms and ammunition there. He ſays, that they are now entrenched in woods in a moſt formidable manner, and expected that the Dutch would join them.

The ſums which are ſubſcribed in the ſeveral liſts which have been made out in the city, for the new loan, are ſtated to amount to 80,000,000l. ſterling.

Gen. Koehler and the other Britiſh officers appointed to ſerve in the Turkiſh army, left town on Monday morning for Yarmouth, where they are immediately to embark for Hamburg, and to proceed from thence to Conſtantinople by land.

In caſe of the recapture of Malta from the French, it is ſaid to be intended to give that iſland to the king of Naples, who has indeed very ample pretenſions to the poſſeſſion of it. Corfu and the other iſlands formerly belonging to Venice, will probably be given to the Emperor of Germany, in caſe he ſhould once more engage in the war.

The French are ſaid to have demanded from the Dutch a ſum equal to 1,800,000l. ſterling to enable them to defray the expences incurred by the rebellion in Belgium.

The earl of Eglin is appointed to go our ambaſſador to Conſtantinople with a magnificent ſuite.

Capt. Ryder, of the Weymouth man of war, who arrived a few days ago in England from the Mediterranean, ſtates, that he ſpoke the Powerful man of war, capt. O'Brien Drury, in Gibraltar bay, who informed him that advices had been received at Gibraltar from Tetuan, on the coaſt of Barbary, with the important information, that the captain Pacha, having under his command a large body of Turks, had attacked the French army in their entrenched camp near Cairo, and that a moſt bloody conflict enſued, which laſted three days, during which time a great ſlaughter was made. It was reported that the French were driven from their encampment, but that the Turks loſt 16,000 men.—We give the above news as it was reported at Gibraltar, without vouching for its accuracy. Similar reports have alſo come by the laſt Liſbon mail.

The deſtruction of the French tranſports in the harbour of Alexandria, and the retreat of Buonaparte to that place, were mentioned in many letters received by the Coloſſus and the Liſbon mail, and particularly we underſtand, in ſeveral letters from Lord Nelſon to perſons here, tho' no official account had reached his lordſhip of the fact. We are happy in being able to ſay that the account is very generally credited. The ſame accounts add, that Buonaparte had in an action with the Mamelukes near Cairo, ſuffered a loſs of 5000 men.

Diſpatches were received on Saturday from Gibraltar, where all remains well. The Spaniards at Algeziras continue to bombard the ſhipping, and ſome few of their ſhot had fallen within their garriſon, tho' without doing any damage. Admiral Earl St. Vincent has taken up his reſidence at Mr. Maxwell, the naval ſtorekeeper's houſe, for a few weeks, to recruit his health, which has been ſomewhat impaired by the conſtant fatigue of ſervice. The expedition under gen. Stewart had ſailed; ſeveral men of war are employed, in particular the Leviathan and Centaur of 74 guns, Ulyſſes, 44, Aurora and other frigates, having beſides a complete corps of artillery, four regiments of foot, viz. the 28th, 42d, 58th and 70th, carrying an immenſe quantity of ſtores, field pieces, ammunition, ſhells, entrenching tools, &c. of every kind, but the particular place not mentioned. Admiral Lord Nelſon's prizes, ſix in number, remained there, ſome of which, in particular Le Souverain Peuple, of 74, had landed her guns to prevent her ſinking; Le Franklyn, another fine 74, had received upwards of 400 ſhot holes in her ſtarboard ſide, and otherwiſe much damaged; one misfortune occurs, that they are too large to be hove down at Gibraltar. Earl St. Vincent has his flag on board L'Aurora, priſon ſhip; and as the communication from before Cadiz is only a few hours, they have accounts from the fleets almoſt daily.

The following important communication was received in a letter by the laſt Hamburgh mail:

Extract of a letter from the frontiers of Switzerland and Milan.

"Lougano, Sept. 22.

"We live here in a ſtate of great uneaſineſs, but have reaſon to hope that it will ſoon be at an end. To all appearance hoſtilities will commence ere long. The Auſtrians, in conjunction with the Griſons, have entered the Valteline country, which was immediately evacuated by the ſmall number of French and Ciſalpine troops who had taken poſt there. Several gentlemen have been commiſſioned by his imperial majeſty, to collect proviſions in our neighbourhood."

The Valteline country is ſubject to the confederacy of the Griſons. About 18 months ſince gen. Buonaparte took poſſeſſion of it, by the moſt ſcandalous abuſe of the right of an umpire, which had been conferred upon him to accommodate ſome matters in diſpute between that country and the Griſons; and it was afterwards incorporated with the Ciſalpine republic. It borders upon the territory of this new republic throughout its whole northern extent, from Tyrol to the lake of Commo, and is of the utmoſt importance in the preſent war, as it takes in the paſſes of the whole of the French troops, from Mantua to Milan.

The French, invited by ſome malcontents, took poſſeſſion of it without any ſort of ceremony; and the Griſons it would ſeem, have re occupied it in the ſame manner. It will be eaſy for them to keep poſſeſſion of it with the aid of the inhabitants of the country, who, from the exceſſes committed by their new aſſociates, roſe upon them in the courſe of laſt ſummer.

This bold ſtroke may be conſidered as a formal declaration of war on the part of the Griſons againſt the Ciſalpine republic.—Theſe two ſtates can only be conſidered in this quarrel, as the heralds who carry and receive the challenge of the two great powers that direct their movements.

PHILADELPHIA, February 12.

Extract of a letter from the conſul of the U. States at Gibraltar, dated Nov. 19, 1798.

"We learn that ſeveral French privateers have been laid up at Malaga; as four have been lately captured by the Algerines. We have not heard of any formal declaration from the Regency; but as the Grand Seignor has declared war againſt France, I ſuppoſe they look upon it to be ſufficient for them to capture."

"The expedition that ſailed from hence, has taken poſſeſſion of the iſland of Minorca, without oppoſition, except Citadela (the capital) which it was expected would alſo ſoon capitulate."

Extract of a letter from Liſbon, Dec. 4.

"A cutter arrived here laſt night from Gibraltar with the important intelligence of the ſurrender of Malta, where the Engliſh have taken the Guillaume Tell, Dianne, and Juſtice, which had eſcaped admiral Nelſon off the Nile. Buonaparte's army is ſaid to be reduced to 5000 men by diſeaſe; and the port of Alexandria is blocked up by the Ruſſian and Turkiſh fleets. The king of Naples is ſaid to have marched one hundred thouſand men into the Roman republic."

NEW YORK, February 13.

We learn that Victor Hugues, that chief of robbers, has ſet ſail for France, honorably clad in irons. Notwithſtanding his pre eminent claim to the guillotine, conſidering the chaſte love of the Directory for Parſeat, we fear a diſtribution of American property will be a means of preſerving the head and body of the infamous pirate together.

This day arrived the ſhip Liberty, capt. Fitzpatrick, 57 days from Teneriffe, who informs us a declaration of war by Spain againſt France, was daily expected—that a few days before he ſailed, a Spaniſh frigate arrived there from Old Spain, with intelligence that they were making great preparations for war, and had raiſed in addition to their ſtanding army, upwards of 20,000 men. The day capt. F. ſailed a French privateer got under way, but was bro't to again by the forts.

February 26.

From the Mercantile Adverſiſer, one of the moſt authentic and impartial papers in New York.

A gentleman arrived on Sunday laſt in the ſchooner Zenith from Vera Cruz, via Havanna, informs, that ſix days before he left Vera Cruz, a frigate had arrived at Acapulco from Manilla, with an official diſpatch to the viceroy of Mexico, from the governor of Manilla, the purport of which was, that the Engliſh had attacked Manilla with a ſtrong force, but were obliged to abandon the enterpriſe—that Tippoo Saib, taking advantage of this circumſtance, had attacked the Engliſh ſettlements, and had maſſacred the inhabitants of 3 towns; and that (as our informant believes) he was then beſieging Madras. The above took place about the beginning of November to the beſt of his recollection.

LONDON, December 18.

Extract of a letter from Scilly, Dec. 15.

"It is with much concern I acquaint you with the loſs of the Coloſſus man of war, of 74 guns, capt. G. Murray, on the night of Monday the 10th inſt. in St. Mary's Road, Scilly.

"On Friday the 7th inſt. the above ſhip came in with a direct contrary wind, having under her convoy 8 veſſels from Liſbon, that arrived at the ſame time, the reſt of the fleet having parted two days before for Ireland and the northern ports; in the evening, the wind having increaſed to a gale, her cable parted, & all attempts to ſave the ſhip with others, failing, ſhe drifted on a ledge of rocks, called Southern Wells, near the iſland of Sampſon, from 18 to 24 feet under water, all the convoy riding in ſafety then, and ſince, notwithſtanding the wind had ariſen to a perfect tempeſt, moſt fortunately not a life was loſt ſave quartermaſter Richard King, who dropped overboard in the act of ſounding.

The iſlanders, at very great riſk, exerted themſelves to the utmoſt, in cutters and open boats, and by Tueſday evening every perſon was taken out, and ſafely landed, the ſick and wounded firſt whereof many were from the battle of the Nile, the moſt worthy capt. and moſt to be commiſerated, remaining to the very laſt. The following night the ſhip fell on her ſtarboard beam ends, and ſo violent was the perſevering gale, that no craft could attempt to approach the ſhip, and at preſent little proſpect of ſers of any of the ſtores, property, or even the officers baggage being ſaved, or hereafter recovered to any extent.

The ſhip is ſaid to have been diſtreſſed, in order to ſupply other veſſels of his Majeſty's fleet, and alſo to have been in a bad ſtate before, and worſe ſince the left Liſbon. The main-maſt and bowſprit are already gone over the ſide.

Paſſengers, capt. Peyton, of the Defence, at the battle of the Nile, with capt. Draper, and two officers from other ſhips; alſo a Mr. Harcourt and ſervants, with the remains of the late admiral lord Shuldham, intended to have been depoſited under Britiſh turf.

The evening of this accident, came into a bad anchorage a French privateer brig, prize, apparently of 14 guns, in the night ſhe drove out to ſea, with a pilot on board; ſtruck on going out, and ſunk in deep water, and all hands periſhed.

On the 9th arrived the King George packet, from Liſbon, in three days to Scilly.

We are ſorry to ſtate the loſs of an Engliſh ſloop of war, captured by three Spaniſh frigates up the Mediterranean; ſhe was ſent with diſpatches by general Stuart to earl St. Vincent.

Yeſterday detachments from the 7th, 28th, 15th and 16th light dragoons, embarked at Mr. Perry's dock, Blackwall, on a ſecret expedition. They were in all about 600 men. Each detachment had a greater number of horſes than men. They are to rendezvous at Sheerneſs, and there wait for ſome tranſports with heavy cavalry which are coming round from the North.

The reports of a ſpeedy peace, whether true or falſe, had the effect to raiſe the ſtocks yeſterday; they were at one time as high as 69, but left off rather worſe.—This morning, however, they opened again at 69.

The conflict of Ballycanew, in the co. of Wexford (Ireland) as ſtated in a former paper, has been ſince corroborated by concurring accounts, which add that 14 houſes in that village were burnt on the occaſion. [Freeman's Journal.

Yeſterday morning the noted deſperado who called himſelf general O'Neil, and was at the head of the plundering gang who lately robbed the mail coaches in the counties of Kildare and Wicklow, was apprehended in bed in Drury-lane, in the loft embraces of a dulcinea.

The doughty general was conveyed to a ſecure lodging in the Caſtle-yard, where he ſtill remains. Ibid.

LONDON, Dec. 14.

IMPORTANT.

MURDER OF BUONAPARTE AND HIS OFFICERS.

Although the advices, which reached us on Thursday led us to expect some very favorable news from Egypt, yet our most sanguine hopes could not have anticipated the glorious news received yesterday, and which will form a very pleasant addition to lord Nelson's victory.

Yesterday morning early Mr. Fawkener, the king's messenger, arrived at the secretary of state's office, with dispatches from sir Morton Eden, his majesty's minister at Vienna, dated the 3d instant. He landed at Herwich the preceding night from a bye-boat hired at Cuxhaven, as he was directed to make every possible expedition to England. The advices brought by him are as follows:

On the 2d instant an extraordinary courier arrived at Vienna with letters to Baron Thugut, from Baron Herbert, the imperial internuncio at Constantinople, dated the 17th November.—These letters state, that gen. Buonaparte having been made acquainted with the intentions of the Arab chief, Mourid Bey, who was marching towards Cairo with very considerable forces to attack him, summoned a council of war, to which some of the leading men among the natives, who professed friendship to his views, as well as all the superior officers of his own army, were invited to attend, in order to consider of the best means of defending the country, and of levying new impositions on the inhabitants to pay the troops.

Buonaparte having opened the business of the meeting, a gentleman from Tripoli, who was present, drew a pistol and shot Buonaparte dead on the spot. The native officers followed the example of the Tripolitan gentleman, by falling on the other officers, all of whom were put to death. As Mourad Bey was fast advancing, it was expected that very few of them would escape to tell their own tale of what had happened!

Such are the accounts received from sir Morton Eden. Independent of the official manner in which they came to government, they are rendered highly probable by every information hither to received from Egypt. This event was evidently the result of a bold conspiracy formed to get Buonaparte and his superior officers together: and having dispatched them, to cause a general rising on the French troops who were dispersed over the immense city of Cairo. The many intercepted letters from the French officers in Egypt, are the best testimony of the aversion of the natives of the country to their barbarous invaders: and they now seem to have ample revenge for the horrid barbarities committed by Buonaparte and his officers who delivered up the town of Alexandria to pillage and fury two hours.*

But the above is not the only news contained in sir Morton Eden's dispatches. The pacha of Rhodes having landed at Aboukir 8000 barbary troops, who are the flower of the Mahomatan militia, attacked the town of Alexandria, which was retaken without much resistance. The particulars of this capture are not known; but it is probable, that all the French garrison remaining there has been put to the sword. The destruction or capture of the French shipping in that port will now become a matter of course.

We also learn that the famous jacobin Jean Bon St. Andre whom our readers will recollect as having been the commissioner of Robespiere on board the fleet which engaged lord Howe on the glorious 1st of June, and who on his return to Paris, congratulated the committee of public safety on the triumph of that day, has at length met the fate which he has long since merited. He was council at Smyrna, and at the breaking out of the war with the Porte, was thrown into confinement along with the other French residents in Turkey. Having behaved with great violence in his captivity, the Turkish government ordered him to receive the bastinado, and has sent him to keep company with the gally slaves. May he long live to practice the favorite virtue of French republicans-equality among those people!

There is no reason whatever to doubt the truth of the above intelligence, as it was confirmed by several vessels which arrived at Constantinople from different parts on the day preceding the date of these dispatches.

* In a letter from adjutant-general Boyer to his parents in France, dated Grand Cairo, July 28, speaking of the entry of the French into Alexandria, he says—"repulsed on every side, they betook themselves to God and their prophet, and filled their mosques—men, women, and children at the breast ALL were massacred." Can any one then be surprised at what has happened at Cairo?

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.

We are this morning informed from authority which we deem unquestionable, that the nomination of M. Murray as convoy to France, has been negatived by the American Senate.—We understand further, that they have drawn up a paper setting forth their reasons for this dissent.

Letters from Antigua mention the death of Lieutenant Henry Clinton Rivington, of his Britannic Majesty's 38th regiment, now on service in the Windward islands. He was carried off by a violent fever, in the 20th year of his age, much regretted by his brother officers, and inexpressibly lamented by his relations in this city; of which he was a native.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, March 30.

THE paragraph under our London head of December 14, places the account of the death of Buonaparte, beyound the waverings of conjecture.—He was shot by one of the Beys while sitting in council, who ought to have exclaimed, "Down, down to h—ll! and say I sent you thither!" for every humane heart must glow with satisfaction that the earth is once more disembarrassed of that monster of France, Buonaparte; his death closes a scene of murder, pillage and assassination, which has for a few years past infested Europe, and, which it is to be hoped, will never more make its appearance. Say you "FIVE HEADED MONSTER" of France, how did your stomach digest the intelligence of your wandering general's death? not very easy we presume, for you must be well aware that it will tend to shorten your reign.

DIED,] On Thursday last Benj. HALLOWELL, esq; in the 75th year of his age.—The funeral will be on Tuesday next, and will proceed from the house of the Chief Justice to the Garrison burying-ground, at one o'clock precisely. The attendance of his friends is requested.

Newark, March 22, 99.

THE subscriber respectfully informs the inhabitants of YORK, that he will attend there, be ready to receive proposals for, and commence bricklaying, lathing and plastering, in the first part of April. Those who may contract with him, will find their work faithfully and timely executed.

LONDON, December 19.

THIS day no lefs than fix mails arrived from Dublin. The only bufinefs that feems to occupy the public mind in that city, is the projected Union—a meafure which will certainly meet with much oppofition from many conliderable bodies in Ireland. The Irifh Bar held a meeting on the bufinefs on Sunday the 9th inftant, which was numerouffy attended. After fome animated fpeeches the proceedings were concluded with the following refolution:

Ambrofe Smith, efq; Father, in the chair.

Refolved, "That the meafure of a legiflative Union of this kingdom and Great Britain, is an innovation which it would be highly dangerous and improper to propofe, at the preient juncture, to this country."

The Lord Mayor of Dublin has complied with a requifition to call a meeting of the bankers and merchants of that city.

The meeting was appointed for yefterday, "to take into conlideration a meafure of the utmoft importance to the kingdom." The Union no doubt, is intended by the expreffion ufed.

The following is a lift of the commiffioners for arranging the articles of the Union between Great Britain and Ireland. As it is fuppofed they will be chofen as foon after the meeting of the Irifh parliament as the addrefs to his Majefty can be framed and laid before the Engliih parliament.

FOR ENGLAND:

Sir John Scott, attorney general.
Sir John Mitford, folicitor general.
Henry Addington, fpeaker of the commons.
Lord Loughborough, chancellor.
William Pitt, chancellor of the exchequer.
Henry Dundas, fecretary of ftate.
Earl Spencer, firft lord of the admiralty.
Lord Grenville, fecretary of ftate.
Sir William Scott, king's advocate.
A member for Liverpool.
Sir A. Macdonald, lord chief baron.
Duke of Portland, fecretary of ftate.
Earl of Liverpool.
Lord Mayor of London.
George Chalmers, fecretary of commiffion.

FOR IRELAND.

Mr. Stewart, attorney general.
Mr. Toler, folicitor general.
James Fitzgerald, prime ferjeant.
John Foiter, fpeaker of the commons.
Sir John Parnell, chancellor of the exchequer.
John Beresford, commiffioner of cuftoms.
Earl of Clare, chancellor.
Lord Yelverton, chief juftice of the common pleas.
Lord Kilwarten, chief juftice of the king's bench.
John Claudius Beresford, M. P. for Dublin city.
Lord Boyle, M. P. for Cork city.
Edward Cooke, efq; fecretary to the commiffion.

We do not pledge ourfelves that the above lift is fo correct that there fhall neither be a name altered, added, nor diminifhed; at the fame time we believe that it will prove pretty accurate.

Extract of a letter from Plymouth, dated Dec. 16.

"Came in the brig Succefs, captain Fawkner, from Lifbon, for this port, with fruit; fhe is laft from Scilly, where fhe experienced much diftrefs in the late gales of wind, and brings an account that his Majefty's fhip Coloffus, of 74 guns, capt. Murray, was laft week driven from her anchors, and totally wrecked on one of the Scilly iflands: providentially all her crew, except one man, were faved. The Coloffus failed from Lifbon with the homeward bound fleet under her convoy; and during the voyage, they experienced tremendous gales of wind."

Falmouth, December 16.

Arrived, the King George packet, captain Bell, with the mail from Lisbon after fourteen days paffage: the fortunately put into Scilly one day before the late heavy gale of wind came on.—We are forry to learn by her the lofs of his Majefty's fhip Coloffus, of 74 guns, captain P. Murray, which fhip alfo put into Scilly, but unfortunately parted her cables and got afhore. There was juft fufficient time for the crew to fave themfelves when fhe went to pieces. She came as convoy with the fleet from Lifbon, which were feparated in the late gales. The King George brought four paffengers from Lisbon; and lord Harcourt from Scilly, who came (with the body of his father-in-law, lord Shuldham, embalmed) in the Coloffus. Lady Shuldham is expected in the Prince of Wales packet.

United States.

PITTSBURG, February 23.

Tom the Tinker, of immortal memory, has juft rifen from the dead, and made his appearance again on the top of a Whifkey Pole, in Greenfburgh.

A few nights ago, a Whifkey Pole was erected in the town of Greenfburgh, in this county, near the houfe of Mr. Wells, the excife officer; and on the top thereof was found the following lines, written in the German language, which has been correctly tranflated by a capable hand, as follows:

"Tom the Tinker, author of no Liberty and no excife and no ftamp act. Mr. Wells you are a cheating fon of a bitch—Huzza for liberty and no excife and no ftamp act. This liberty pole is erected by Tom the Tinker, and whoever cuts it down or demolifhes it, fhall have his houfe torn down and demolifhed and his head in his hand for a play-thing. The Father is gone to the Grand Father, and will come again and bring with him feventy thoufand men. In the year 1799."

PHILADELPHIA, March 1.

We are creditably informed, that on clofing the books on Thurfday, the fubfcription to the new loan of five millions was between fourteen and fifteen millions of dollars, fix millions of which have been fubfcribed by citizens of Philadelphia. Sales of the Scrip have already taken place at conliderable advance.

It muft afford real pleafure to the friends of good order and independence to learn, that very conliderable fums were fubfcribed to the loan yefterday by the farmers of thofe counties faid to be unfriendly to government—a proof that they will not only fupport the independence of their country with their lives, but with their fortunes, and that they will give "Millions for defence, tho' not a cent for tribute."

Bags of gold and filver were carried to the Bank of the United States, which appeared to have been hid in darknefs ever fince the revolution. The Germans and Old Irifh were noticed to be numerous at this time of "trying mens fouls" by their purfes; fuch patriotifm deferves the reward which awaits it—freedom to their country and benefit to the individuals. The fcrip of 12 1-2 dols. on each fhare of 100, is already felling at 13 3-4 dols. and is expected to be 25 dollars in a few days, fo many have been disappointed who must now purchase at a premium; indeed, if bought at 37 1-2 dollars, which is 200 per cent. advance upon the sum paid at subscribing, it will still give the stock holder more than 6 per cent. interest for his money.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.

We are indebted to capt. Waddle, of the brig Apollo, from Cadiz, which place he left the 31st of December last, for the following sketch.

Lord St. Vincent's fleet had disappeared off Cadiz some time previous to her sailing, in consequence of which seven sail of Spanish ships of war, with several regiments of troops, and a French frigate, which had been laying two years in that port, availed themselves of the opportunity and proceeded to sea. It was said they were bound to Surinam.

The English fleet were seen from the Spanish towers to enter the Streights. They were supposed from the badness of the weather to be going to Gibraltar to rendezvous, from whence, in a short time, they would return to their former station.

There were several small French privateer boats in the harbour of Cadiz. The fear of being taken by the English cruizers prevented their molesting the outward bound American vessels, from that port, but they still continue their depredations from the neighbouring Spanish ports, Algesiras, Ceuta, &c.

From Bradford's Philadelphia Daily Advertiser of the 19th inst.

Our readers will perceive in the proceedings of the House of Representatives yesterday, an assertion by Mr. Parker, that he was informed by a member of the Senate, that the president had nominated a new minister to France. We took some pains to learn the truth of this, and are happy to have it in our power to state that the president yesterday sent a message to the Senate, in which he informed that body, that it had been and still was his determination to adhere to his former declaration of not sending another minister to France, unless he had assurances of his being received as became the representative of a great, free, powerful and independent nation; but that as he had now received those assurances from the French minister, through Mr. Vans Murray, our minister at the Hague, he had nominated that gentleman on the part of the United States. The president further mentioned in his message, that his instructions to Mr. Murray should be, not to leave Holland until he received unequivocal assurances that he would be properly received, and that a minister equal in dignity was appointed on the part of the Directory to settle the existing differences and conclude a treaty.

Appointments by Authority.

Rufus King, esq; minister plenipotentiary for the special purpose of negociating a treaty of amity and commerce with the Emperor of all the Russias.

William Smith, esq; minister plenipotentiary for negociating a treaty of amity and commerce with the Sublime Ottoman Porte.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, April 6.

Extract.

It is singular, that Voltaire, whose memory was idolized by his countrymen, at the commencement of the new order of things in France, should have condemned by anticipation the extravagant theories and wild excesses of the revolutionists, with more truth and severity than any other writer. Speaking of the abuses which had taken place in the time of Lewis XV. he says —"Minds have been found deranged enough to sap all the foundations of society, under the pretence of reform. There have been persons mad enough to maintain that tuum and meum are crimes—and that we should not enjoy the fruits of our labour—and that all men are equal."

The East India tea sale which is now going on, says a London paper, has been one of the most lively ever known, for though it consisted of 6,800,000 lb. of teas of different qualities, yet such has been the influx of orders from the country at large, and from Ireland in particular, that the oldest brokers scarcely remember an instance of such shipping directions as have been received within the last fortnight.

CHARACTER OF THE FRENCH.

[From "Vaurien; or Sketches of the Times," from the brilliant pen of Mr. D'Israeli.]

We cannot acquire the volatilised delicacy, the lighter graces, and the susceptible and feminine imagination of the French.

Redoubtable they are in politics, for they execute rapidly what they project instantly; insidious in their professions, subtle in their hypocrisy, and sanguinary in their power. In France they feel to inexpressible delicacy, or to inconceivable horror; their individual murders have ever been characterised by peculiar and complex barbarity; impetuous feelings are fugitive and take an opposite direction: they commit murder, and then inscribe it "ici l'on danse." Women in all things, they are women in vengeance. Impatient of restraint, in war, a siege discourages and repels them; in peace, an orderly constitution could neither excite their love nor their reverence. Terrible in assault, contemptible in flight; vast in their projects, imbecile in their pursuits; capable of imagining all things, incapable of performing any. They triumph for a moment, and despair through a century. Of all nations, they alone have felt that adventure of political imagination, which has aspired to an universal monarchy or an universal republic; but they have never known that British vigour of judgment, which could form for Englishmen the most perfect constitution human nature can suffer. When the French were slaves, as they reverenced; when free, as they imitated; now licentious, they envy and they hate us. Europe they may afflict with continued revolutions; yet may their designs be frustrated; one revolution was sufficient for the English. Dangerous rivals, for they address themselves to the imaginations; they seduce the eye and inflame the heart; they mingle prominent virtues, which conceal their radical vicissitudes; incapable of perseverance, but they will perish in their cause if destruction comes rapidly; they will declaim on freedom, when they exercise tyranny; revere the humanity of peace, while their hand is armed with death; they will reform prejudices, while they introduce prejudices still more calamitous; they term themselves citizens of the world while they fly from place to place, and only leave in their career the memory of their desolations. They come to destroy or be destroyed; to fraternize with them were to embrace and perish.

The following persons were convicted at the late Supreme Court holden at Albany.

John Hollenbeck, for forgery, to be imprisoned in the state prison for life, and kept to hard labour.

Francis Duffic, for assault and battery with intent to murder, imprisonment for 15 months at hard labour.

William Y. Tuttle, for grand larceny, imprisoned 18 months at do.

Henry Samplon, for perjury, imprisonment in the prison of the city and county of Albany, for 6 months, and to pay a fine of 25 dollars, and to stand committed until the fine be paid.

WM. JARVIS, ſec'y.

Newark, March 22, 99.

THE ſubſcriber reſpectfully informs the inhabitants of YORK, that he will attend there, be ready to receive apoſtals for, and commence bracking, fanning and planſtering, in the laſt part of April. Thoſe who may contract with him, will find their work carefully and timely executed.

ELIPHALET HALE.

A Piece of Land to be ſold in the Township of York, lying on the eaſt ſide of the Humber, being lot No. 4, and all of No. 5; on which is about 30 acres of interval, and a moſt beautiful cedar ſwamp, ſufficient to furniſh fencing for ſaid land. Any perſon wiſhing to purchaſe, may know the conditions by applying to John Wilſon, eſquire, on Yonge-ſtreet, or Mr. Samuel Heron, merchant, at York. March 9.

BOSTON Feb. 9.

From France—DIRECT.

THERE are ſeveral letters in town direct from Paris, in which the ſubject of the exiſting difficulties between the two countries is freely diſcuſſed.—All we have ſeen concur in applauding the manly and dignified oppoſition made in the United States to French hoſtility; and that the ſpirited and patriotic meaſures adopted by congreſs and ſeconded by the people's voice and offerings, have had the moſt penetrating effect in Europe. That they had inſpired the neutral nations with confidence; and that the language of complaint, which before had been heard only in whiſpers, had aſſumed the ſtyle of injured virtue. At the ſame time, that it had effected and an entire change in the language of the French directors. Inſtead of that contumely and HAUTEUR, which have unceaſingly been exhibited for years, nothing was to be heard from the directorial agents but the accents of peace, mildneſs and friendſhip.

As if waking from a trance, the directory appeared to be convinced that its rigorous conduct to neutrals had not only been hurtful to France, but has been beneficial to its enemies; and that it ought to be renounced, even at the expence of its pride, provided a ſimilar diſpoſition ſhould be manifeſted by its opponents; that in conſequence, it apparently meditated to repeal all the acts of France, authoriſing the capture of neutral property againſt the law of nations, as impolitic and unjuſt: that the directory is aware its apparent mildneſs will be aſcribed to fear; but it ſeems willing to have it appear as a return to juſtice: that it knows America to be united to reſiſt the depredations from any power whatever; and that the writers think the preſent the moſt favorable period for the reconciliation that could have happened; provided the United States do not in the leaſt degree relax the efficient meaſures which have produced the change.

The above are the opinions of well informed men. It, however, the directory of France, is ſincere, in its friendly and mild deſire to do juſtice, and effect a reconciliation; let it give an evidence in deeds; let it repeal its laws; reſtore the plundered American property; call in its privateers, and releaſe the American veſſels, in its ports, from durance. Let it do theſe, and the preſident of the United States, has declared the door of reconciliation to be open, and until it doth theſe, the United States will not relax a ſtare in her preparations for war.

THE ORACLE.

YORK Saturday April 13.

WE anticipated more intereſting matter than is contained in our ſheet of this week; but in conſequence of the non-arrivals, by water, from New York, and the irregularity of the conveyance by land, nothing important has come to hand. The Gazette laboris, at preſent, under the greateſt poſſible diſadvantage for want of a regular conveyance between this place and Newark; but we look forward with an anxious hope to a period not far hence, when ſome means more direct than the preſent, will be eſtabliſhed.

[From the Whiteſtown Gazette.]

HAPPY SOCIETY.

IF every member of ſociety could impreſs upon his mind, the following ſuccinct but lively image of a happy ſociety, drawn by Mr. BELKNAP in his hiſtory of New-Hamſhire, it ſhould think it impoſſible, that they could remain without glowing ſparks of emulation. But alas! the age is faſt creeping upon us, when deſcriptions like theſe will be conſidered as the production of an exuberant fancy; and not a ſketch of ſocial happineſs and rural order, which ever did, or ever can approach to reality.

"Where I to form a picture of happy ſociety, it would be a town conſiſting of a due mixture of hills, valleys and ſtreams of water: The land well fenced and cultivated; the roads and bridges in good repair; a decent inn for the refreſhment of travellers, and for public entertainment:"

To make a juſt comment upon this, it would require a much abler pen than mine. But I cannot but expreſs my aſtoniſhment, that ideas ſo intimical to rural happineſs, and degrading to human kind, ſhould have crept into the breaſt of man, or, that the fields of nature were formed only to produce feed for the animal creation; and not, that the hills, valies & ſtreams, were formed as a never ceaſing feaſt to the eye of mental contemplation. How few there are capable of enjoying this beautiful variety of nature! Plodding on thro' life, the ſtrait like inhabitant carries his views very little further than to his implements of huſbandry or domeſtic animals; while all nature is ſpreading before him, beauties, fit for the moſt luxurant fancy. And in a ſocial view, how much the ſcene is heightened, when the eye glances over well fenced and well cultivated fields, the delight of farmers, and ſtable ſupport of mankind—how much the intercourſe of ſociety is ſmoothed and facilitated by good roads and ſafe bridges—what joy to the traveller!—But nothing ſo enlivens the toils of diſtant intercourſe, as the well regulated inn, fitted for ſtrangers; nothing ſo grateful to the wayfarer. Surrounded with an obliging hoſt, a pleaſant and no leſs obliging huſtels and attendants, the ſtranger feels a reſpite from his toils. Here the pleaſure of deſcription ends. One ſtep further leads us into the receptacle of filthy exceſs and debauchery. Our country inns in general, to the great diſgrace of its inhabitants, are of the latter ſort.

[We hope the preceding judicious ſimile of a happy ſociety will tend to rouſe, in the inhabitants of the Home diſtrict, a ſpirit of emulation. We beg leave to recommend a peruſal of it to our inn keepers.]

"The inhabitants moſtly huſbandmen; their wives and daughters domeſtic manufacturers."

"Soft ſcenes of contentment and eaſe." Scenes indeed ſoft—intervals of ruſtic labor, how pleaſant ye are! and contentment—where art though, if not with the huſbandman? But I fear, my dear countrymen, that unreaſonable fiends has crept into your dwellings.—How is it elſe, that we find your intereſts at home neglected; your fences in ruin; and in fact, your whole domeſtic affairs nodding with deſtruction? When we view you at tipling houſes, do we believe that you are content at home? [this queſtion may, with much propriety, be put to ſome of the inhabitants of York, who too frequently reſort thoſe receptacles of idleneſs for the benefit of their intereſts!] Your feelings muſt be ſtrangely depraved, when ſcenes of debauchery are preferred, the peaceful abode of your innocent family, when the hard-grating diſcourſe of an officer, is ſuffered to take place of the innocent prattles of your children, and ſweet converſe of your friends. This country is but new—Yet how many muſt feel the force of theſe reflections. "If theſe things be done in the green tree, what ſhall be done in the dry?"

My fair readers, (if I may flatter myſelf with any) are you not ſenſible of the honor paid you in the text? Or you has our author placed the moſt graceful of ourthens, that of ornamenting your lovers and huſbands, and of adding, by your induſtry, to the happineſs and grandeur of your country. How ſweet the reward! ſmiles and protection. Do I miſtake? I believe by your bluſhes that I have ſome reaſon to deſpair. But theſe very bluſhes give me ſome hopes, that all is not yet loſt. If you are ſenſible of your error; make eſcape quickly for your diſtaffs, hid in cupboards, or in your garrets. Amuſements are not forbidden; dont think it my fair ones; I even deem them neceſſary as a cordial to ordinary employments, but this conſtant itching for a continued round of enchanting revels, which give no ſolid enjoyment, is what I would have you avoid as a poiſon.—

instead of securing happiness, you grasp a phantom. Your situation in life calls for serious reflection and elevated feeling—You form what we may justly call the soul of domestic happiness: And when you please—the most poignant source of domestic misery. "Your virtues open fairest in the shade."

At the Theatre at Weymouth (England) upon Lord Nile's victory announced to the Royal Family.

As soon as the curtain was drawn up Mr. FISHER came forward and spoke the following occasional Address on Admiral Nelson's Victory, October 1798:

Another conquest swells Britannia's fame!
Let grateful memory wait on Nelson's name:
In distant seas the conquering hero shews
How vain the projects of our Gallic foes.
When the glad tidings reach'd the public ear,
From beauty's eye distill'd the joyous tear,
Down manhood's cheek the tide of rapture flow'd,
And every breast with kindling transports glow'd.
Nelson, thy praise from shore to shore shall ring,
Joy to the nation! joy to England's King!
Such prowess every tribute justly craves,
Let e'en Arabs shout "Britannia rules the waves."
With well-earn'd laurels grace the victor's brow,
Record the deeds of Vincent, Duncan, Howe!
Illustrious names! to every Briton dear,
Here then, the altar of our thanks we'll rear;
Fleets led to battle by such men as these,
Shall fix in Brunswick's hand the trident of the seas.

The address was received with the most rapturous applause. "God save the King" was then sung, and the whole house joined in full chorus. After the play was over, the manager, Hugill's displayed a beautiful transparency of the figure of Britannia treading Anarchy and Rebellion under her feet, which had a very striking effect. The audience again called loudly for "God save the King," the band of the Berkshire militia marched on the front of the stage, and performed in the chorus; after which they played "Rule Britannia" amidst reiterated plaudits from the audience. The royal family, the nobility and all the comedians, were decorated with oak and laurels. Her Majesty and the Princesses wore large bouquets of the fame. A general illumination took place throughout the town: fir H. B. Neale illuminated the St. Florenzo with variegated lamps. Rockets were also let off from the other ships, and every heart seemed elevated with joy at the tidings of the important victory.—Long life, and perfect health and happiness to the brave and gallant Nelson!

The following was sung extempore, by one of the actors at the theatre, it met with the greatest applause.

Tune, "The President's March."

Hail brave Nelson's glorious band!
O'er British tars, near Egypt's land,
Who conquer'd the stout fleet of France—
The fleet of all-aspiring France.
Hail great George I our glorious King,
May every day fresh victory bring,
Our fleets triumphant, may they ride,
And crush the Sans culotish pride:
May ne'er a ship of France remain
To plunder, rob, upon the main.
Let Briton's sons united be,
In crushing their curst enemy.
We'll flog and drub them if we meet,
And hurl the tyrants from their seat.

The three following paragraphs are extracted from the address of the majority of the legislature of Virginia, (consisting of 58 members.) to their constituents:

OF NAVAL DEFENCE.

"When the most powerful nation in Europe, by whose insidious policy and numerous armies, populous, warlike, and wealthy states have been overturned, whose lust of dominion is insatiable, and whose only rule of conduct is her will, has demanded tribute at our hands, and menaced us with the fate of nations conquered and debased, what means could have been adopted more convenient or more likely to secure our defence? The equipment of a fleet, guards the remains of our commerce from their privateers; enables us to incommode any offensive attempts which their enmity might dictate, and facilitate our exertions for self defence, by facilitating the conveyance of the requisite supplies or military operation in our extensive country. Important already have been the beneficial consequences to our commerce, flowing from this wise measure, and every benefit to trade, in an increased ratio, enlivens and vigorates agriculture: more important will be its effects in securing our protection, should we be forced to the last appeal in defence of our liberty and property.

OF THE PROVISIONAL ARMY, &c.

"Upon so solemn an occasion, what curses would be adequate to the supineness of our government, if militia were the only resort for safety, against the invasion of a veteran army, flushed with repeated victories, strong in the skill of its officers, and led by distinguished commanders? Should not the American citizen be prepared to meet the eventual combat by those acquirements which place him on an equal footing in the day of battle?

"Continuing to confide in our government; continuing to regard union as the rock of our political salvation, and the constitution as the means of its preservation; continuing to prefer a state of peace without dishonor, we will not turn from the perils of war with a degraded name, but like our fathers will be ready to re que life or fortune; expecting from the timely exertions of our government, to be enabled to meet any and every enemy on equal terms."

IT is with the greatest satisfaction we communicate to our readers and the public, that the contracts for opening the road between this place and the Bay of Quinty, are entered into: the road will be 33 feet wide, creeks will be bridged, swamps, &c. will be causewayed; the whole to be completed by July 1800. A circumstance highly beneficial to this town, and which ought to draw from its inhabitants the warmest expressions of thanks to the government, as the expence is paid by it.

EPIGRAM.

On the uncertainty of LAW.

TWO lawyers, when a knotty case was o'er,
Shook hands, altho' they'd wrangled hard before;
"Zounds!" said the client who was cast, "pray how "Can you be friends, who were such foes just now?"
"You fool," says one, "we lawyers tho' so keen,
"Like sheers, ne'er cut ourselves—but what's between."

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the third, by the Grace of God of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, &c. &c. &c.

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS,

GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our proclamation bearing date the Eleventh day of MARCH, we thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council to prorogue our provincial parliament until the twenty-third day of this present month of April, at which time in our town of YORK you were held and constrained to appear; but we taking into our royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council, to relieve you, and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the FIRST day of JUNE next, ensuing, you meet us in our provincial parliament, in our town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our province of Upper-Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary:—Herein fail not. In testimony whereof we have caused these our letters to be made patent, and the great seal of our said province to be hereunto affixed:—Witness the honourable PETER RUSSELL, esq. president administering the government of our said province, this Fourteenth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-nine, and of our reign the thirty-ninth.

An extraordinary and true story of the COUGHNOTAIN SECOUIMA.

ONE of the latest European travellers into the interior parts of South America, as he pursued his journey along the famous river Orellana, in the country of Amazonia, came up with an old man who was employed in catching tortoises. He put many questions to him, and found him very communicative and full of information. Among other anecdotes, he obtained from him the following: In the centre of the mountains of Guiana, lived a nation of Coughnotain Secouima (women without husbands) who had separated themselves entirely from men, and went about in armed troops. Though they admitted the males among them once a year, yet they abstained from forming any attachments; and it was one of their most sacred and inviolable laws, that new connexions should be made at every fresh intercourse with ourfex. The offspring, if male, was sent to the father, to be educated by him; if female, it was brought up by the mother. The favourite ornament of these female warriors was a green gem, which they found in great abundance on the other side of a river called the Black river—and hither the young women of quality used to repair every month in armed bodies, in search of this decoration of their ears and wrists.

It happened on a certain day, as some of the flower of the Amazonian maidens were out on this errand, they fell in with a troop of Indian youths, who were going on an embassy to a neighbouring tribe. The young men were so struck with the beauty of these adventurers, that they immediately laid at their feet a part of the presents with which they were loaded for the purposes of their commission. The desire of pleasing each other soon became mutual, and grew so rapidly, that the next day they joined in building little temporary cottages on the spot. Every month they met together at the same place, where the strictest decorum was preserved. The women slept always in separate lodgings; their heads reposing on their backsders, and their feet covered with the fleeces of the lama, the presents of their lovers. The youths also assisted them in gathering the green gems, and were delighted with the occupation of decorating their persons and their arms with the costliest they could find.—At every fresh meeting they brought with them the plumage of green parrots for their helmets, and chains of lions teeth for their necks and wrists: not forgetting to load themselves with presents of fish and venison, and fruits of the fairest kinds, such as gauvas, bananas, pomegranates, and pine apples. By these assiduities, they obtained a promise from the female warriors to choose them for their temporary husbands, when the time should arrive which was appointed by the laws of the Amazonian state for the intercourse of the sexes.

The moment at length came, and their tender engagements were faithfully performed. The short interval allowed them was passed in the fondest endearments;—but at the end of the fourth day the terrible order for separation was issued, and proclaimed by the rattling of their spears against their corslets, and such funeral shouts as it was their custom to raise in sorrow for departed friends. They took a final leave of each other, never to meet again but in the land of souls. The male pledges of their loves were sent back to the fathers; and the females were brought up by the mothers, for the supply of the commonwealth.

It so happened, that, in the course of some ten years, a war broke out between the very tribe to which these Indians belonged, and the nation of the Amazons.—After many desperate encounters, and a great deal of bloodshed, the men proved an overmatch for the women, burned and laid waste their country, and advanced towards their last town, with minds prepared to revenge their fallen associates. The little devoted capital was thrown into terrible consternation: the air was filled with the shrieks of helpless virgins, miserably murdered by their own mothers, to save them from the bloody hands of an exasperated enemy.

In the midst of this cruel disorder, one of those very women who had been made mothers in the amorous adventure with the Indian youths, was inspired by her guardian spirit with a thought that saved the remnant of her countrywomen. Gathering together all the could muster of her comrades, who had shared in the expedition after the green gems, she made a short harrangue, full of the most touching remonstrances, on the necessity of laying aside all measures of resistance; and befought them vehemently to try what the force of nature might do for them, and the tender pleadings of their bosom recollections which their presence must awaken in the minds of their former lovers.—Scarcely had she finished, when, actuated by a common spirit, with a shout that ran along the mountains in ominous echoes, they all threw away their targets of canes, their ball moulders, and rushed out with naked breasts to meet the enemy. The novelty of the sight arrested for some moments the march of the Indians. A solemn silence prevailed; taking advantage of which, the forlorn females raised their voices, and called upon their temporary husbands, and the sons of their alliance and their vows, repeating their names, and reminding them of the crowns of parrots feathers, and all the pledges of their former loves.

As these Indians were originally a Peruvian colony, they had inherited a portion of that softness and humanity of character, which distinguished that tranquil race.—When they beheld the offspring of that tender rencounter, and those breasts which they had pressed so often with fond delight, their heads fell upon their bosoms, and their axes dropped from their hands; they rushed forwards, and embraced with enthusiasm their wives and their mothers, and spared for their sakes, the remains of the Amazonian nation. Admonished by this event, these warrior women relinquished their bows and their spears, and resolved in future to trust more to their weakness than their strength, to their tears than their arrows, to their extended arms than to their half moon bucklers, to their soft bosoms than their adamantine corslets; and, whatever imposing travellers may relate, there are no more such people to be found in the mountains of Guiana.

A cunning contrivance to save a malefactor on his trial.

A Highwayman who some years past robbed three gentlemen who were travelling together in a stage coach, was soon after, upon strong circumstances, apprehended as the person who had committed the robbery, and sent to gaol; where, dreading his approaching fate, he grew very pensive. He had not been many days in prison, before a fellow prisoner, who had marked his extreme dejection of spirits, addressed him in the following terms: "How now, fellow prisoner! Why do you continually wear that cloud upon your brow?" To which the poor fellow, in a melancholy tone of voice, replied, that he thought the expectation of the gallows, which always seemed before his eyes since he had been wicked enough to commit the crime which brought him to that horrid place, and for which he was fully perfuaded he should be hanged, was cause sufficient to make any man look sorrowful. "Pho, (quoth the other reprobate) if that is all, cheer up man: if you will come down handsomely I will engage to get you off this bout." "I thank you, friend, (replied the other) but I believe that to be impossible; the proof is too strong against me; nor do I think that I can have impudence enough to deny the fact," for he was not an hardened villain, this being the first robbery he had committed.)

"Nay (replied the other with an oath) if you have not the courage to deny it, I have nothing more to say to you." The other then intreated to know by what means he could give him hopes of saving his life. "No, no, (returned he) my fecret I will not divulge; but no cure no pay. If you will agree to reward me, I will engage to bring you off this bout; and if my scheme should miscarry, you can but be hanged at last you know." "Well, (said the robber) I have two hundred pounds; one of which, if you save my life, shall be yours." "Agreed, (said the other) and now all you have to do is to tell me every particular word, &c. that passed at the time you committed the robbery; and when you are brought to the bar, to plead not guilty, and leave the reft to me." Though the highwayman received but little hopes from this scheme, he related every word and circumstance that he could recollect had passed between the gentlemen and himself, of which this arch-blade made no small advantage.

At the affizes, when the highwayman was brought to the bar to take his trial, and the usual question was put to him, guilty or not guilty, he pleaded not guilty. Juft at this time there was heard a great buftle among the prifoners; which being loud enough to difturb the court, the gaol keeper was called upon to explain the reafon of the difturbance; who replied, that one of the prifoners faid he had fomewhat of the utmoft importance to fay to the judge, who immediately ordered him to the bar, and afked him what was his reafon for difturbing the court with his clamour? He then affuming a pitcous countenance, told his lordfhip, that though he had been a wicked fellow, his conficience would not permit him to let an innocent man fuffer for a crime that he himfelf had committed.—Upon which the gentlemen who were profecutors feem'd greatly difconcerted. He then addreffed himfelf to them, and repeated every word that had paffed between them at the time he had robbed them, and had the impudence to exhort them to take care for the future how they fwore an innocent man's life away. The gentlemen ftood reproved on this avowal of his crime, the real culprit was acquitted, and the other commanded back to prifon till a bill of indictment was found againft him. The real criminal was punctual to his promife to his preferver, and when made off as faft as he could.

When the fuppofed culprit's trial came on, and he was put to the bar, to the aftonifhment of the whole court he pleaded not guilty; for which he was feverely reproved by the judge, who afked him how he durft to have the effrontery to prefume to deny a fact to which he had pleaded guilty at that bar. To which he, with great compofure, replied, that he not only denied the fact, but could immediately prove his innocence, not only to the fatisfaction of his lordfhip, but to the whole court; adding, that he would prove an alibi at the time the robbery was committed. "How will you prove this?" faid the judge. "Your gaoler fhall prove it for me: if your lordfhip will be pleafed to order him to look over his lift of prifoners, he will find that I was in prifon at the time the robbery was committed."—On the gaoler's examining his books, he found, to his no fmall mortification, that this fellow was brought into prifon the day before the robbery was committed. For his neglect, in not examining his books, he was very near lofing his employment.

Converfation.

THE firft ingredient in converfation is truth; the next good fenfe; the third, good humour; the laft, wit.

The beft method to fucceed in converfation, is to admire little, to hear much, to feem diftruftful of your own reafon, but to fee that of others in the fulleft light.

The great error in converfation is, to be fonder of fpeaking than of hearing. Few fhew more complaifance than to pretend to hearken, intent all the while upon what they themfelves have to fay; not confidering that to feek one's own pleafure fo paffionately is not the way to pleafe others. To make another's wit appear more than your own is a wholefome rule. Let others take notice of your wit, never yourfelf. Ridicule is contemptible in perfons who poffefs no other talent.

All the world are plagued with cold jeffers: we tread every where upon fuch infects. A good jeffer is uncommon; and he finds it a hard talk to maintain his character long; for he that makes others laugh, feldom procures eftcem to himfelf.

ANECDOTE.

A Fat parfon, who had long dofed over fermons in his pulpit, and ftrong beer in his parlour, happened one Sunday, after a plentiful crop of tithes, to exert himfelf mightily. His text was, The patience of Job. Deeply impreffed with his own difcourfe, he, for the firft time, acknowledged to his fpoufe at fupper, that he was fomewhat choleric, but that hereafter he was refolved to practice himfelf what he had preached to others. But pox my jewel, fays he, let us refrefh ourfelves with a fip of the beft. Remember the favourite barrel, may not this be a proper time to give it vent? The obedient wife, ravifhed with his good humour, flew to the cellar. But, alas, the barrel was drived and quite empty. What fhould the dear Dame was no hiding. My dear, faid fhe, with defpair in her eyes, what a fad accident has happened! I am forry replied the parfon gravely, if any one has met with a misfortune; for my part, if it relates to me, I am refolved to bear it with Chriftian patience. But where is the beer all this while? "Alack a day, that is the very thing. How it has happened, I cannot underftand, but it is all fwimming on the ground." What do pious refolutions avail when the hour of temptation comes? The parfon fell into a violent paffion, raved, exclaimed. My life, fays he, do but reflect upon your fermon, think of the patience of Job. Job, faid he, don't talk of Job's patience; Job never had a barrel of fuch beer.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, April 20.

There are accounts in town from London fo late as the 25th of Dec. by thefe we learn, that official advice had been received at the Admiralty of the re-capture of Malta, together with all the fhips of war lying there. The French garrifon furrendered prifoners of war to Lord Nelfon, who commanded the combined fleets.—Capt. Gifford, aid de camp to gen. Stuart, had arrived with the account of the furrender of the ifland of Minorca to the Britifh troops, which the lofs of a man on our part. The troops under the command of gen. Stuart were only 3000, while the Spanifh troops who were made prifoners, amounted to 4000. The Port and Tower guns were fired on receipt of the above intelligence.—The congrefs at Raftadt has broken up, after concluding and ratifying a peace between the French republic and the German empire. A demand has been made by France and acceded to, for permiffion to march 100,000 men thro' Spain to attack Portugal, and that number of men had received orders to march from the Rhine for that purpofe.—There has been a confpiracy difcovered at Gibraltar, to blow up the New Mole, and give the place up to the Spaniards; feveral of the inhabitants, principally Jews were feized and hanged.—The French Directory has publifhed a declaration of war againft the kings of Naples and Sardinia.

York, 9th March, 1799. tf.

United States.

From the Norfolk Herald of Feb. 21.

YESTERDAY arrived the fchooner Adventur capt. Devereux, from London, laft from Lifbon, in 40 days. An intelligent gentleman, who came paffenger, informs that the congrefs at Raftadt had broken up, after concluding and ratifying a peace between the French republic and the German empire. A demand has been made by France and acceded to, for permiffion to march 100,000 men through Spain to attack Portugal, and that numbers of men had received orders to march from the Rhine for that purpofe. Ten regiments were momently expected at Lifbon from England, to replace thofe deftined for Gibraltar. The accounts of Buonaparte's death were generally difcredited at Lifbon. There had been a confpiracy difcovered at Gibraltar, to blow up the New Mole, and give the place up to the Spaniards; feveral of the inhabitants, principally Jews, were feized and hanged. Lord St. Vincent had, in confequence, brought part of his fleet from Cadiz to Gibraltar.

On the 17th inft. arrived the Daniſh fhip Sifters, in 50 days from Guernfey, and fchooner Adventure, in 40 days from Lifbon, bringing London papers to the 25th December.

LONDON, December 23.

Yefterday arrived another mail from Lifbon, brought to Falmouth by the Prince Adolphus Packet, in 7 days.

By this packet the Admiralty has received official advice of the recapture of Malta, together with all the fhips of war lying there. The French garrifon furrendered prifoners of war to Lord Nelfon, who commanded the combined fleets of England and Portugal, who blockaded the harbour. The Guillaume Tell of 80 guns, and the Siane and juftice frigates are made prizes. The Admiral Nelfon cutter, had brought this intelligence to Lord St. Vincent, but the public difpatches from Lord Nelfon are on board the Latona frigate, which is not arrived. This advice was alfo confirmed by the conful at Malaga, who fent the news to the miniſter at the court of Portugal, from whom it was tranſmitted to the Chevalier d'Almedia refident in London.

[Thus then, in the fhort fpace of three months, we have feen an entire fleet of 13 fail of the line and four frigates, manned with the beſt feamen in the French ſervice, captured or deſtroyed; and the iſlands of Cerigo, Zime, St. Maure, Cephalonia, the port and town of Corfu, and the iſlands of Minorca and Malta, taken poſſeſſion of by the Allies. The two laſt iſlands would, in other times, have been conſidered an ample recompence for a whole naval campaign. For nine years paſt the French have been trying every means of corruption to get poſſeſſion of Malta, which is the key of the Levant, and the only intermediate port which the French had open to them between Egypt and the coaſt of Italy and France. No period of any war ever offered to the Allies ſuch a career of naval triumphs as we have had the pleaſure to witneſs ſince the firſt of Auguſt laſt, and we have reaſon to know that they made their due impreſſion throughout Europe.

But an event ſtill more intereſting, or at leaſt more deciſive, is the declaration of war which the Directory has publiſhed againſt the kings of Naples and Sardinia. This meaſure will probably break up the congreſs at Raſtadt, and bring into action 120,000 Auſtrian troops, who are aſſembled in the Tyrol and Upper Italy. The Mother Republic is on the point of ſending aſſiſtance to her daughter, the new republic of Rome, who has been ſeriouſly alarmed at the violent advances of the king of Naples.]

The French papers admit that an engagement took place on the 23d of November, between the advanced poſts of the Neapolitan and the French and Roman armies, when the latter were forced to retire with loſs. This is a very different account to what has been reported that the Neapolitan troops were completely defeated. The Directory in propoſing that war ſhould be declared againſt the king of Naples, attributes the cauſe of it to the attack made by general Mack on the Roman troops.

The Directory have ordered the Neapolitan and Sardinian miniſters at Paris to be confined to their houſes under a guard.

The French papers are ſilent as to the Sultan Ali Buonaparte and his Vizier Berthier, though this news is confirmed from Lifbon and other quarters.

The Barbary ſtates have landed 8000 men at Aboukar and retaken Alexandria.

Admiral Nelſon has declared all the ports of the Ligurian republic to be in a ſtate of blockade: and that all Ligurian veſſels taken by the ſhips of the confederated powers, ſhall be deemed good and lawful prizes.

December 24.

Surrender of the iſland of Minorca.

Captain Gifford, aid de camp to general Stuart, arrived in town yeſterday with the account of the ſurrender of the iſland of Minorca to the Britiſh troops, without the loſs of a man on our part.

The troops deſtined for the expedition diſembarked at Adava Bay, on the 12th of laſt month; they were oppoſed, upon their landing, by a conſiderable body of the force upon the iſland, but who retreated after a ſhort cannonade from the Britiſh troops. The force was then arrived; one part under the command of general Stuart, marching towards Fort Mahon; and the other under the command of Sir Clair Erſkine, towards Citadella, at the other extremity of the iſland. Both theſe forts capitulated on the 14th, and the Spaniſh and Swiſs troops were made priſoners of war. The inhabitants congratulated general Stuart on his ſucceſs, and ſeemed to be very glad to be again under their old maſters.

The troops commanded by general Stuart amounted to about 7000 men; the Spaniſh troops who were made priſoners to 4000. This event gives us the harbour of Mahon, one of the beſt in the Mediterranean.

The Peterell ſloop, which was firſt diſpatched with the intelligence, and which was taken by the Spaniards, was retaken by one of the frigates under commodore Duckworth before ſhe reached the Spaniſh coaſt.

The Park and Tower guns were fired in the afternoon of yeſterday, on the receipt of the above intelligence, and a Gazette Extraordinary will be publiſhed this day.

CHARLESTON, February 22.

Singular Detection!

His excellency governor Rutledge, and the collector of this port, about five weeks ago received a letter from colonel Pickering, secretary of state of the United States, to the following effect:

That government had obtained intelligence that four perſons were to embark from Hamburgh for this port, as agents to the French Directory, with diſpatches of a hoſtile nature to the peace and welfare of the United States.

The ſecretary of ſtate then gave the names of the perſons and their deſcription; alſo of the veſſel and the paſſports which it was expected they would have: and informed further, that the diſpatches and papers of conſequence would be ſecreted in two falſe bottomed tubs, and requeſted that the neceſſary ſteps ſhould be taken to ſecure the ſuſpected perſons and their papers, as ſoon as they arrived here.

Captain Thompſon, the boarding officer of the port, was accordingly inſtructed to notice particularly, and report without delay, all paſſengers from Europe.

Yeſterday he had the happineſs and good fortune to board the brig Minerva, captain Cramp, in 119 days from Hamburgh, and reported her arrival, and that there were four or five paſſengers on board. This brig was the expected veſſel: and the collector, major Simmons, attended by Mr. William Crafts, agent of the United States for the naval and war departments, went immediately on board with proper aſſiſtance, to examine and ſecure the ſuſpected perſons and their papers.

As ſoon as they got on board, they enquired for perſons by the names they had received, and were anſwered affirmatively: theſe were directly ſearched and given into cuſtody, and the ſearch continued for the tubs, which were fortunately diſcovered in the cabin; the tubs were broken open, and the papers taken out; the horrors of guilt were depicted ſtrongly on the countenances of the guilty wretches, and their bodies ſhook with fear and trembling. There was a deſign to have thrown them overboard from the cabin window, but it was prevented by the expedition of the gentlemen who undertook the buſineſs. Three of the fellows are mulattoes, and one of them a white perſon; a woman was alſo taken up, who was evidently concerned in the conſpiracy, and endeavoured to take care of the tubs under her arm.

The four men and their female accomplice are now confined at Fort Pinckney; their trunks and baggage are taken to the cuſtom houſe, and the important Tales of the Tubs are under the examination of major gen. Pinckney, to whom they were immediately conveyed.

PHILADELPHIA, March 7

Extract of a letter from an officer of the Gauges, dated Norfolk, Feb. 22.

"An officer of the Surpriſe, an Engliſh frigate of 44 guns, boarded us off Cape Nicholas Mole, and demanded all the Engliſhmen on board, alſo to examine the protections of the American ſeamen. Captain Tingey's anſwer was manly and noble. "A public ſhip carries no protection but her flag, I do not expect to ſucceed in a conteſt with you; but I will die at my quarters before a man ſhall be taken from the ſhip." The crew gave him three cheers, ran to quarters, and called for Yankee Doodle. The Surpriſe upon hearing our determination choſe rather to leave us, than fight for dead men!"

March 8.

The Retaliation, we learn, has been rendered up to the French officer who came here in her.

The French priſoners at Lancaſter, it is ſaid, are to be ſent out to the Weſt Indies in the Retaliation.

NEW YORK, March 11.

Capt. Smith of the ſloop Nancy, arrived yeſterday in 8 days from Charleſton, informs that thoſe infamous incendiaries, who were ſent on the buſineſs of exciting a revolt among the negroes in the Southern States, and who by the vigilance of our executive, were happily detected, are ſtill confined in the fort, with additional ſecurity of being in irons. A guard was conſtantly kept on board the veſſel. We may therefore place confidence in the ſtatement copied from the Charleſton paper.

Captain Wyeth, of the barque Pallas ſailed from the Cove of Cork, on the 1ſt of Jan. and brings a farther confirmation of the entire tranquillity of Ireland. He brought out 74 paſſengers, all of whom are from Belfaſt, but one.

Another French claim to gratitude.

A gentleman of the ſtricteſt veracity, aſſures us, that a letter has been received in town from Philadelphia, from a perſon in office, unfolding a new item in the catalogue of French villainy, the ſubſtance of which is as follows:

That at the very time Citoyen Talleyrand was playing off his villainous hypocriſy, in his correſpondence with Mr. Gerry, orders were abſolutely diſpatched to St. Domingo, requiring Hedouville to prepare a body of armed troops for an attack on the Southern States, and to embrace the firſt favourable moment for effecting his infernal purpoſes. It is added, that the vigilance of the Britiſh cruizers alone deterred this fiend from putting his diabolical plan into execution.

The ſame letter makes mention of the Tale of the Tubs, ſtating, that immediately on the receipt of the news, an expreſs was ſent to Charleſton by order of government, requiring thoſe ſons of darkneſs, thoſe tools of the great and incomprehenſible beaſt, to repair to Philadelphia, in order that they might receive the juſt reward of their works.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, April 27.

La Fayette, ſays a London paper, ſtill continues to lead a retired life in the country of Holſtein, near Ploen, on an eſtate which belongs to one of his wife's relations. He is ſaid to have abandoned the idea of going to America, in conſequence of the political diſagreement between that country and France. Dumourier lives very near him; but there ſubſiſts no intimacy between them, though Dumourier made overtures for that purpoſe.

ANECDOTE.

ONE aſking a Lazy young fellow, what made him lie in bed ſo long? Says he, in hearing counſel every morning, Induſtry adviſes me to get up, Sloth to lie ſtill; and ſo they give me two only reaſons PRO and CON. It is my part to hear what is ſaid on both ſides; and by the time the cauſe is over, dinner is ready.

SONNET

TO APRIL MORNING.

HAIL pleaſing morn! with thy enliv'ning breath,
Haſte to diffuſe thy vernal influence round:
Wake the pale glebe from a cold tranſient death,
And ſtrew with verdure the diſmantled ground.
Call the fair plant that's in embryo laid
From the dark boſom of the teeming earth:
Urge its ſpontanious growth, and gently aid
The riſing flowret to an earthly birth.
With roſy ſteps bring on the beautious day,
Which opes MAY's caſket of delightful hues,
When Sol ſhines forth with more reſplendent ray,
And Nature cheer'd with ſoft refreſhing dews.
With gentle ſhowers revive the fertile ground,
Then ſhall May bloom, and Summer's ſmiles abound.

European News.

From the Sun (a London paper) of December 19.

Intercepted Correſpondence, from the Army of general Buonaparte in Egypt.

THIS correſpondence, of which ſo much has been ſaid, is now about to be publiſhed. It is not only intereſting on account of the confeſſion of the perſons employed on the expedition, reſpecting the miſerable condition of the army, and the univerſal diſguſt which prevails in being ſent to ſuch an inhoſpitable country; but the introduction contains ſome very pertinent obſervations on the motives which induced the Directory to ſet it on foot.

The correſpondence was intercepted at different periods, by the Turkiſh and Engliſh ſhips of war. It conſiſts of official and private letters, whoſe contents would have remained a ſecret to all but government, had not the French, by holding out, firſt, a falſe account of the motive of this famous expedition, and then, by ſpreading the moſt abſurd and exaggerated accounts of its ſucceſs, rendered it neceſſary to undeceive Europe, by proving by their own ſtatements, that what began in wickedneſs & fraud, was likely to terminate in wretchedneſs and deſpair.

The introduction then proceeds to ſtate, that as the Egyptian expedition has awakened curioſity, and been the theme of much wonder and applauſe, and error, and miſrepreſentation, it will not be thought an unacceptable ſervice to the reader to enlarge a little on the ſubject.

The French have long turned their eyes towards Egypt. The ſanguine diſpoſition of their conſuls in the Levant, had miniſtered with admirable effect, to the credulity and avarice, and ambition of this reſtleſs nation, by aſſuring them that Egypt was the Paradiſe of the Eaſt, the key of the treaſures of the Indies; eaſy to be ſeized, and ſtill more eaſy to be kept! There was not a Frenchman under the old regimen, who was not fully perſuaded of the truth of all this; and certainly they have loſt nothing of their ambition, their avarice, and their credulity, under the new.

Egypt, however, though ſaid and believed to be a rich country, promiſed no immediate ſupplies of plunder; and the projećt for ſeizing it would ſtill have remained in the port folio of citizen Talleyrand, had not a circumſtance happened that made its ſpeedy adoption a meaſure of neceſſity.

Every one knows that the Directory long ſince engaged to make a free gift to the army, of a thouſand millions of livres, at the concluſion of a general peace. This engagement, like many others, it ſeemed to have forgotten; till the neceſſity of attaching the troops to their intereſts, and thus enabling them to perfect the revolution of the 18th Fructidor, made it neceſſary for the Triumvirate to renew their promiſe, and to revive the languid expectations of the army. None contributed more to the ſucceſs of this fatal day than the army of Italy, which, to the eternal diſgrace of Buonaparte, was permitted to overawe the councils, and to aſſume to itſelf the whole power of the ſtate. Such a ſervice could not be overlooked: their claim to a portion of the milliard became doubly valid, and as the war in Italy was now ſuppoſed to be at an end, thouſands of them returned to France to claim it.

Here began the difficulties of the Directory. They had no money to give; but it was not expedient to confeſs it; and the expedition to Egypt was therefore brought forward, as an excellent expedient for quieting the preſent clamor, and providing for 40,000 veteran troops, inured to plunder, and impatient of controul, who were too ſenſible of their merits to be quietly laid aſide; and too urgent in their demands to be cajoled with empty promiſes.

Hence aroſe the expedition to Egypt which was to eclipſe, in immediate advantages, the boaſted conqueſts of Cortes and Pizarro.

This expedition might with more juſtice be called a tragedy than a farce. It is, we are perſuaded, (but here we beg leave to be underſtood as ſpeaking only our private and individual opinion) a deep-laid plan, of which the only actors in the ſecret are the Directory and Buonaparte, and perhaps Berthier. The main plot was to get rid of the Italian army: the ſubordinate one to conquer and plunder what they could: if Egypt fell—ſo much the better: if it did not—ſo much the better. The denouncement was ſkilfully effected either way; and the government equally relieved!

It appears from ſome of Buonaparte's letters, that he had not the ſlighteſt idea of wintering in Egypt. "I ſhall paſs (ſays he) the cold months in Burgundy, where I wiſh you would look out ſome little place for me." Buonaparte was to leave his devoted followers to moulder away in the undiſturbed poſſeſſion of Egypt, and under ſome plauſible pretence to return to Europe with his ableſt officers, and with, perhaps, a handful of the moſt ductile and tractable of his troops.

This plan, and no other, accounts for his keeping the fleet on the coaſt, in ſpite of the remonſtrances of Bruys, and the evident danger to which it was expoſed—it was to carry back the "Conqueror of Egypt," in triumph to France, and the admiral, who was wholly unacquainted with his deſign, fell a ſacrifice at laſt to a perfidy which he could not comprehend.

The firſt of Auguſt ruined all theſe fineſpun ſchemes; and Buonaparte fell into the toils he was ſpreading for others! All return is now impoſſible, except as a fugitive or a priſoner. He may enter into the chambers of the pyramids, and hold converſations on the tomb of Cheops with Imuns, and with Muftis; he may organize and conquer, and plant botanic gardens, and eſtabliſh menageries; he may paſs from the Delta to the Thebald, and from the Thebald to the Delta, with his train of tricolouren Cheiks, and be hailed as the Ali Buonaparte of the country—all is ſtill but folly: his final deſtruction can neither be averted nor delayed; and his unſeaſonable mummeries will but ſerve to take away all dignity from the cataſtrophe of the drama, and render his fall at once terrible and ridiculous.

Before our readers accuſe us of being too ſanguine in our expectations, or too precipitate in our judgment, let them carefully peruſe the following correſpondence in the army diſſatisfied with his ſituation, and impatient to return to France; execrating the climate and the country, and lamenting the folly that led him to embark in ſo wild, and abſurd, and hopeleſs an expedition. They will find the whole army without tents, baggage or ammunition, without medicines, or wine, or brandy, with few of the neceſſaries, and none of the comforts of life. That far from harboring a thought of ſitting down in Egypt, not an individual in the army (ſo far at leaſt, as has come to our knowledge) but turns with fond anxiety towards home, and thinks with horror and deſpair of a reſidence in this "terreſtrial paradiſe," even for a few weeks!

Extract of a letter from Buonaparte to General Kleber.

"Head quarters, Cairo, July 27.

"There is here a very excellent mint. We ſhall again have occaſion for all the ingots* which we left with the merchants of Alexandria in exchange for the ſpecie of the country; I requeſt you, therefore, to call together all the merchants with whom the ſaid ingots were exchanged, and to re-demand them, I will give them in lieu of the bullion, wheat and rice, of which we have immenſe quantities.

"We have undergone more hardſhips than many among us had courage to ſupport: at preſent we are recovering ourſelves at Cairo, which is not deficient in ſupplies. All our troops have joined.

"The officers of the ſtaff will have acquainted you with the military tranſaction which preceded our entry into this place. It was tolerably brilliant. Two thouſand of the beſt mounted Mamelukes were driven into the Nile.

"The army is in the greateſt want of its baggage.

"Send us our Arabic and French printing preſſes. See that they embark all the wine, brandy, tents, ſhoes, &c.† Send round all theſe articles by ſea to Roſetta; and as the Nile is now upon its increaſe, they will find no difficulty in paſſing up that river to Cairo.

Health. "BUONAPARTE."

* Theſe ingots were formed from the gold and ſilver previouſly ſtolen by this rapacious freebooter, from the church of St. John, where the Malteſe kept their public treaſure.

† None of theſe articles can reach Cairo. The port of Alexandria is hermetically ſealed, and however urgent the wants of the army may be, they muſt learn to bear them.

General Kleber.

"Boulac, near Cairo, July 27.

"We are arrived, at length, my friend, at the ſpot ſo much and ſo eagerly deſired! How different is it from what the moſt cool and temperate imagination had figured it to be! This execrable dog hole of a city is inhabited by a ſet of lazy wretches, who ſquat all day before their filthy huts, ſmoaking and taking coffee, or eating pumpions and drinking water.

"It is eaſy enough to loſe ones-ſelf for a whole day in the ſtinking and narrow ſtreets of this illuſtrious capital. The quarter of the Mamelukes is the only one which is habitable; the commander in chief reſides there, in a tolerable handſome houſe, which belonged to one of the Beys.

"Thou haſt not an idea of the fatiguing marches we made to get to Cairo, never halting till three or four o'clock in the afternoon, after broiling in the ſun all day, the greateſt part of the time without food; obliged to glean what the diviſions which preceded us had left in theſe deteſtable villages, which they had frequently pillaged; and harraſſed during the whole march by thoſe hordes of robbers called Bedouins, who killed not only our men, but our officers at 25 paces from the main body. The aid de camp of general Dugna, called Geroret, was ſhot in this manner as he was carrying an order to a file of grenadiers, not a muſket ſhot from the camp. It is a more deſtructive war on my ſoul, than that of La Vendee.

"We had an engagement the day we arrived in the neighbourhood of Cairo.—The Mamelukes, who had the good ſenſe to place themſelves on the left bank of the Nile, offered us battle, and got a good beating. We call it the battle of the Pyramids; they loſt (to ſpeak without exaggeration) of theſe a great portion periſhed in attempting to ſwim acroſs the Nile, five thouſand.

"There is a general relaxation in the ſervice; I do all I can to preſerve unity among the different parties; but all goes very ill. The troops are neither paid nor fed; and thou mayeſt eaſily gueſs what murmurs this occaſions; they are loudeſt perhaps amongſt the officers. We are cajoled with promiſes that in a week's time the adminiſtration will be ſufficiently organized to enable them to make their diſtributions regularly; but a week is ſtill too long.

"If thou comeſt ſoon, which I moſt ardently wiſh, take care to be eſcorted, even on board by a party of fuſileers, capable of ſecuring thee from the attacks make their appearance on the banks of the Nile, and endeavour to deſtroy thee in thy barque.

"DAMAS."

In a letter from Tallien to his wife, dated from Roſetta, on the 4th of Auguſt, he ſays he is about to ſet out for Cairo, to inform Buonaparte of the dreadful diſaſter of the French fleet:

"I aſſure thee, my dear girl, that if I ever have the happineſs of placing my foot once more on the ſoil of my native land, nothing ſhall induce me to quit it again. Of the 40,000 are here, there are not four whole determination on the ſame head is not the ſame as my own.

Nothing can be more melancholy than the life we have here; we are in want of every thing. It is now five days ſince I cloſed my eyes. I lie on the bare floor; flies, bugs, ants, gnats, muſquetoes, inſects of every kind devour us alive.

"Adieu, my beſt Thereſa,‡ my paper is drenched with my tears. The delightful remembrance of thy goodneſs and thy love, the hope of meeting thee again ſtill amiable, ſtill faithful, and embracing my dear daughter, are the ſole ſupport and ſtay of the unfortunate "TALLIEN."

In another letter from the ſame, dated Roſetta, Aug. 4, to citizen Barras, member of the Executive Directory of France, at Paris, ſpeaking of the deſtruction of the fleet, he ſays:—

"Conſternation has overwhelmed us all. I ſet out to-morrow for Cairo, to carry the news to Buonaparte. It will ſhock him ſo much the more, as he had not the leaſt idea of its happening. He will doubtleſs find reſources in himſelf—if not to repair a loſs of ſuch magnitude, yet at leaſt to prevent the diſaſter from becoming fatal to the army which he commands.

the Mediterranean sea, lying fifty miles to the north west of the island of Majorca, being the least of the Baleares.—It is about thirty miles in length, and twelve in breadth, and chiefly valued for its excellent harbour. It is a mountainous country, with some fruitful vallies, where there are some excellent mules. Cindadella is the capital, besides which there are Port Mahon, Labor and Mercadel. It was taken by the English in 1708, and confirmed to them by the treaty at Utrecht. The French took it in 1756, after 2 months siege of St. Philip's Castle, but it was restored to the English by the peace of 1763. It was retaken by the Spaniards during the American war, and confirmed to them by the peace of 1783.

The declaration of war by the French against the king of Sardinia, seems to come after the business of war is done. They have been in the possession of his capital for many months, and now they determine to keep it.

The public will feel much concern in learning the serious indisposition of lord viscount Duncan, who has gone by easy stages to Scotland, under the melancholy apprehension, as he himself states, of never seeing England again.

The magistracy of Hamburgh have prohibited the Philanthropic and Theophilanthropic Societies, which met twice every week. This is said to have arisen from the interference of the ministers and principal envoys of Germany.

UNION OF IRELAND.

On Tuesday last a very numerous and respectable assemblage of the bankers and merchants of Dublin met on the subject of an union, when the right hon. the lord mayor being called to the chair, the following resolutions, moved by the right hon. D. Latouche, and seconded by Mr. John Claudius Beresford, were unanimously agreed to:

"Resolved, That since the renunciation of the power of Great Britain, in the year 1782, to legislate for Ireland, the commerce and prosperity of this kingdom have eminently increased.

"Resolved, That we attribute these blessings, under Providence, and the gracious favour of our beloved sovereign, to the wisdom of the Irish parliament.

"Resolved, That we look with abhorrence on any attempt to deprive the people of Ireland of their parliament, and thereby of their constitutional rights and immediate power to legislate for themselves.

"Resolved, That impressed with e- and affectionate attachment to British connection, we conceive, that to agitate in the parliament a question of the legislative union between this kingdom and Great Britain, would be highly dangerous and impolitic."

The corporation of smiths held a meeting at their hall on Thursday last, to take into consideration the measure of an union, when resolutions, highly disapproving of the measure, were agreed to without a dissenting voice.

At a meeting of the corporation of carpenters, held last week, similar resolutions were agreed to.

SIR,

I have the honor to return you and the gentlemen employed on shore under your command, my sincere thanks for your activity, zeal and assistance, in forwarding the light artillery of the army, neither can too much praise be given to the seamen for their friendly and cheerful exertions under every hard labour; exertions which were accompanied with a propriety of behaviour which I greatly attribute to your management, and which will ever merit my acknowledgements, and affords me the satisfaction of assuring you, that I am with sincere regard, your's, &c. DUBLIN, December 8.

THE right hon. John Beresford ſailed for England on Monday.

Yeſterday evening the right hon. the ſpeaker ſailed for England. It would ſeem that the affairs of this country deeply intereſt the cabinet of St. James, ſince moſt of the leading political characters of Ireland have within a very ſhort time, been called to London upon important buſineſs. From the varied and extenſive knowledge which he poſſeſſes of the circumſtances and reſources of this country, his ſagacity as a politician, and his integrity as a man, we have every reaſon to expect, in conſequence of the ſpeaker's journey, the higheſt advantages to the happineſs and ſecurity of Ireland.

Meeting of the Irish Bar.

A numerous meeting of the members of the Irish Bar took place on the 9th inſt. at the Expedition Houſe in Dublin, to conſider the queſtion of the propoſed incorporated Union between Great Britain and Ireland.

The Bar, being called to the chair, Mr. Saurin, captain of the Lawyers corps, opened the diſcuſſion by ſtating, that it was the duty of the Bar to declare their ſenſe on a ſubject which went to deſtroy and annul forever the conſtitution and legiſlative independence of Ireland. It was not until the month of October laſt, that the people of the country were told, that their intereſts, their morals, their diſpoſitions, and their habits, were more likely to be promoted and improved, by the care of a Britiſh legiſlature, than by a parliament of their own, reſident among them. Was it not obvious to every man, that if, in caſe of a legiſlative union, Ireland ſhould be ſuffered to ſend an hundred members to the United Parliament, yet the parliament thus conſtituted, with 500 Britiſh members and 100 Iriſh, muſt be influenced by every tie of inclination, and, he would add, of duty too, to prefer the intereſts of Great Britain to thoſe of Ireland, when they ſhould be found to claſh? Muſt it not be acknowledged, that if the legiſlatures of the two countries ſhould be united, their firſt care would be to diſtribute the burthen of public debt and public expence equally or proportionably over every member of the empire, and muſt it not follow, that the burdens of Ireland would thereby be increaſed to the utmoſt limit of her capacity to bear? At all events it was not at the termination of a moſt alarming and ſavage rebellion, that a queſtion of ſuch magnitude ought to be diſcuſſed. It was not when a foreign army of 40,000 men were in the country, and military law ſcarcely ſuſpended, that the people were to be aſked on the moment whether they would give up their conſtitution, and transfer their legiſlative power to another country. He then moved the following reſolution:

Reſolved, That the meaſure of a legiſlative union of this kingdom & Great Britain, is an innovation which it would be highly dangerous and improper to propoſe at the preſent juncture to this country.

Mr. Spencer ſeconded the motion.

Mr. Jameſon oppoſed the reſolution as premature, and forcing a diſcuſſion, for which the meeting had no certain and authentic grounds of information, and propoſed that the conſideration of the reſolution ſhould be deferred to that day month.

Mr. Daily ſupported the adjournment, and contended that an union was the only means of ſaving Ireland from the fatal effects of revolutionary principles, which had already produced ſome wretchedneſs.

The adjournment was oppoſed by Mr. Burnes, who maintained that England had nothing to give Ireland, which could be conſidered as a compenſation for the ſurrender of her independence. He ridiculed the idea of a melioration of morals and manners, in conſequence of the meaſure, and declared he would pay no obedience in Ireland, to the legiſlature of any other country.

Mr. P. Burrowes reprobated the idea of an union, which was calculated, in his mind, ultimately to produce a ſeparation. The United Iriſhmen, he ſaid, were keeping Jubilee, ſince the idea was gone abroad. He divided the people of the country into four claſſes—the one the populace, who were, and always would be, the mere machines in the hands of the higher order, as the muſkets on their ſhoulders. Among the other three claſſes, the rebels, the yeomanry, and parliamentary reformiſts, the political mind of this country was divided. This meaſure would give the rebels new vigor, it would leſſen the zeal of the yeomen, and by cutting off from the foremoſt the hope of ever ſeeing his favorite object obtained, would render him totally indifferent to the connection of the countries, and to the conſtitution.

Mr. T. Grady ſupported the meaſures of an union, as calculated to deſtroy parliamentary corruption and upſtart ariſtocracy, and an Orange faction, and ſtated that the catholics of the ſouth were friendly to it.

Mr. Lloyd vindicated the Catholics from the ſtatement made by the laſt ſpeaker;—and Mr. J. Beresford deprecated the conſideration of Mr. Saurin's reſolution as premature.

Meſſrs. Gold, O'Driſcoll, Plunket, Leader and Orr, ſpoke in favor of the reſolution. Mr. Gold, in particular, made uſe of very ſtrong expreſſions againſt the union—"God and Nature (he obſerved) deſigned that Ireland ſhould be independent of Great Britain, and by God ſhe ſhall be ſo."

It was remarked by Mr. Plunket, tho' a profeſſed enemy to the meaſure, that fear, animoſity, want of time, and forty thouſand Britiſh troops in Ireland, would carry it into effect. The motion of adjournment was warmly ſupported by Meſſrs. Geraghty, M'Cleland and Weber.

The queſtion on the motion for adjournment being negatived by a majority of 168 to 32, the original reſolution paſſed without a diviſion.

We are creditably informed, that on the night of the 7th inſt. the town of Roſſgray, in the Queen's county, was nearly deſtroyed by fire; and that moſt of the Proteſtants who reſided there were moſt cruelly butchered during the conflagration.

IMPORTANT LETTER.

From a thorough knowledge of the character of the gentleman who writes this letter, of his caution in communicating political intelligence, and his practice of noticing no report in his letters, which has not been perfectly well authenticated, as well as from a review of the uniform correctneſs of all former information from the ſame ſource, I am enabled to aſſert, that the following may be relied on as minutely true.

Extract of a letter from Liſbon, to a reſpectable mercantile houſe in this city, dated 5th January laſt.

"The French lately met a ſevere check in Italy. The king of Naples at the head of his army, has taken poſſeſſion of the Pope's dominions, and every where beat the French army moſt ſeverely. On the Neapolitans entering the city of Rome, general Mack, the commander in chief, ſummoned the caſtle of St. Angelo, which was ſtill in poſſeſſion of the French, to ſurrender, which they refuſed—he then ſent them a meſſage declaring, that if they fired on the city, that for every gun he would deliver a Frenchman to the populace—this did not intimidate the French—they fired ſeveral guns; and gen. Mack, as good as his word, delivered as many Frenchmen to the mob, who murdered them in the moſt cruel manner—he then ſent them another meſſage, relating what he had done, and what had happened to the poor Frenchmen who had fallen victims to their folly, on which they ceaſed firing, and delivered up the caſtle. A few days after that, a ſevere engagement took place between 25,000 French and about 35,000 Neapolitans, in which the latter were victorious—they took about 4000 priſoners, and killed in battle about 5000.

"The loſs of the Neapolitans was very trivial compared with that of the French. The ſon of the king of Naples was arrived with a diviſion of the army of Civiti Vica, and had taken poſſeſſion of that city and port. The Romans were every where flocking in great numbers to enter into the Neapolitan army. I have no doubt but the French will be more rapidly driven out of Italy than they entered it. Buonaparte, all accounts agree, was ſhot at a council of war, by an Egyptian ſoldier, and his whole army by this time deſtroyed—ſo much for that Egyptian.

"Malta is alſo taken, and the Neapolitan flag hoiſted on the fortifications. Minorca is alſo taken by the Engliſh, which is of great conſequence to their Mediterranean fleet, as Port Mahon is very convenient and commodious for repairing their men of war and cruiſers in thoſe ſeas.

"This year will, in my opinion, be a year of the greateſt events that has ever happened in Europe; and if the talked of coalition takes place, (which no doubt muſt for its own internal defence of the combined nations) I would not be ſurprized to ſee a king on the throne of France, again, or Europe become one barbarous banditti."

March 27.

From Porcupine's Gazette.

Yeſterday arrived at this port, the ſhip George, Barclay, from Bengal, 4 months out.—The news brought by this veſſel is of great importance. It appears that all was peace in India, and that Tippoo Saib had (in conſequence of ſuſpicions entertained reſpecting his intention) actually given up Mangalore to the Britiſh, as a guarantee for his neutrality.—It appears further, that the Nezuar, a very powerful prince of India, had made a treaty with Ld. Mornington, by which all the Frenchmen in his ſervice were to be given up to the governor of Bengal as priſoners of war.—He had alſo ſtipulated, to receive ten thouſand of the Company's troops into his ſervice.

This news is of a very pleaſing nature, as it clearly proves, that the monſtrous republic has little or no influence in India.

March 30.

A letter was yeſterday morning received from Northampton, ſtating, that on Monday laſt, Mr. Balliot, one of the collectors of the revenue, was attacked on his return from Bethlehem and ſeverely beaten, ſo as to make it neceſſary to ſend to Bethlehem for a phyſician. The letter does not give particulars, but it was ſuppoſed that this outrage was committed by ſome of the inſurgents.

We alſo learn, that a company of light infantry met at Lower Socken on Monday laſt, but the object of the meeting was not known to our informant.

A meeting of another body of men was to be held at Milford, but for what purpoſe we could not learn.

From the beſt information we can obtain on the ſubject, it is probable the march of the troops from this city for Northampton, will take place about Wedneſday next—Various detachments of regular troops are already on their march thither; theſe it is ſuppoſed, will form a body of 500 men.

April 3.

His Britannic majeſty's ſhip of war, the Camilla, of 20 guns, is arrived in the Delaware, and came up laſt night as far as Cheſter.

On board of this veſſel is come general Maitland, who, it is ſuppoſed, will ſoon proceed to the iſland of St. Domingo. It is by no means improbable that the general may have touched here in his way, in order to make ſome arrangements reſpecting the trade between the United States and that extenſive and fruitful iſland.

The news brought by this arrival, is, we underſtand, of ſo late a date as the ſixth of February.

The projected union with Ireland had met with great oppoſition in the Iriſh parliament. It was touched upon in the ſpeech of the lord lieutenant, was approved of in the addreſs of the lords, but was not approved of in that of the commons, where there appears to have been a majority of 15 againſt it.

The miniſter, however, with that firmneſs, that unconquerable perſeverance, which has ever characterized his conduct, ſeems to have reſolved, not only that the project ſhall not be abandoned, but that it ſhall ſucceed. This his reſolution he has clearly expreſſed in a ſpeech made in the houſe of commons ſince the addreſs of the Iriſh parliament; and we hope, for the happineſs of both Britain and Ireland, that it will be adhered to.

It was believed in England that the Emperor had concluded a peace with France; but there were no certain accounts of it.

It was alſo believed, that the king of Naples had met with a ſevere check from the French, and that his troops were once more driven out of Rome by the ſans culottes.—One good thing is, the ſavages will this time find no pillage.

A deep plan is laid for the extirpation of Chriſtianity in poor Pennſylvania.—I ſhould not wonder if, in leſs than four years, the French calender were introduced, and eſtabliſhed.—The foe is advanced ſo far, that the grand aſſault muſt very ſoon take place, or the ſiege muſt be abandoned, which latter, I am pretty ſure, will not take place. The garriſon, at this time, are in perfect repoſe. Like a parcel of Heſſians round a guard houſe fire, ſome are telling ſtories, others laughing, others ſmoaking their pipes, others posals in Writing, and sealed up, before the first day of October next, on which day, if an acceptable offer be made, the [illegible] will be declared, and a Deposit immediately required of two shillings and six-pence in the pound on the purchase money. A Deed will issue under the Great Seal without delay. One-third of the remaining purchase-money must be paid on the 1st day of October 1800, one-third on the 1st day of October 1801, and the remaining third on the 1st day of October 1802; and good Security given for making these payments at the above-mentioned periods.

SALEM, March 5.

A Sea Fight, gallantly and victoriously maintained by the ship Perseverance, capt. Richard Wheatland, of this port, against one of the vessels of war of the French republic. The French rascals, contrary to the laws of war and of honor, fought under false colours, whilst the Eagle, true to his charge, spread his wings on the American flag.—The following is captain Wheatland's Letter to his owners:

Ship Perseverance, Old Straits of Bahama, Jan. 1, 1799.

GENTLEMEN,

Conceiving we may possibly meet an opportunity of forwarding this immediately on our arrival at the Havanna, or perhaps before, induces me to give an account of our voyage thus far.

Until 26th Dec. met with nothing very material, except heavy disagreeable weather, off the coast; and having the wind so far to the westward as to preclude the possibility of making our passage round the Bank, were compelled, contrary to our wishes, to go through the Old Straits of Bahama.—On the afternoon of the 27th, were boarded by the British frigate Romilia, capt. Rolles, our papers examined, and we treated with great politeness. They purchased (at our own prices) a number of articles from the cargo and of the people. Three days before, they had captured a French privateer sloop of ten guns and 60 men, and retook an American brig, her prize. After two hours detention, we were permitted to proceed, which we did, without meeting any interruption, till Monday, 31st of [illegible]—for particulars of that day, we give an extract from a journal kept on board.

"Dec. 31st, Key Romain in sight, bearing south, distance 4 or 5 leagues —A schooner has been in chase of us since 8 o'clock, and has every appearance of a privateer. At 1 o'clock, P. M. finding the schooner come up with us, very fast, took in steering sails, fore and aft, and royals; at half past 1, about ship and stood for her; she immediately tacked and made sail from us; we fired a gun to leeward, and hoisted the American ensign to mizen peak; she hoisted a Spanish jack at main topmast head, and continued to run from us. Finding she outsailed us greatly, and wishing to get through the narrows in the Old Straits, at 2 o'clock P. M. we again about ship and kept on our course. The schooner immediately wore, fired a gun, to leeward, and kept after, under a great press of sail. At half past two she again fired a gun to leeward; but perceiving ourselves in the narrows above mentioned, we kept on, to get through them if possible before she came up with us, which we effected. At 3 o'clock, finding ourselves fairly clear of Sugar Key and Key Labous, we took in steering sails, wore ship, hauled up our courses, piped all hands to quarters, and prepared for action. The schooner immediately took in sail, struck the Spanish jack, hoisted an English union flag, and passed under our lee at considerable distance. We wore ship, she did the same, and passed each other within half musket shot. A fellow hailed us in broken English, and ordered the boat out, and the captain to come on board with his papers, which we refused; he again ordered the boat out, and enforced his orders with a menace, that in case of refusal he would sink us!—using at the same time the vilest and most infamous language it is possible to conceive of. By this time he had fallen considerably astern of us: he wore and came up on our starboard quarter, giving us a broadside as he passed our stern, but fired so excessively wild that he did us very little injury, while our stern chasers gave him a noble dole of round shot and langrage. We hauled the ship to wind, and as he passed us poured a whole broadside into him with great success. Sailing faster than we, he ranged considerably a head, tacked and again passed, giving us a broadside and a furious discharge of musquetry, which they kept up incessantly till the latter part of the engagement: his musket balls reached us in every direction; but his large shot either fell short or went considerably over us: while our guns, loaded with round shot or square bars of iron six inches long, were plied so briskly and directed with so good judgment, that before he got out of our reach we had cut his mainsail and foretopsail all to rags, and cleared his decks to effectually, that when he bore away from us there were scarcely 10 men to be seen. He then struck his English and hoisted the French flag, and made off with all the sail she could carry, much disappointed no doubt at not being able to give us a fraternal embrace. The wind being light, and knowing he would outsail us, added to a solicitude to complete our voyage, prevented our pursuing him: Indeed we had sufficient to gratify our revenge for his temerity; for there was scarcely a single fire from our guns but what spread entirely over his hull.—The action, which lasted an hour and twenty minutes, we conceive ended well: for, exclusive of preserving the property entrusted to our care, we feel a confidence we have rid the world of some infamous pests of society.—We were within musket shot the whole time of the engagement, and were so fortunate as to receive but very trifling injury; not a person on board met the slightest harm. Our sails were a little torn, and one of the quarter deck guns dismounted. The privateer was a schooner of 80 or 90 tuns, copper bottom, and fought five or six guns on a side.

We are now within 48 hours sail of Havanna, where we expect to arrive in safety: indeed we have no fear of any privateer's preventing us, unless greatly superior in force.—The four quarter-deck guns will require new carriages; one of them was entirely dismounted.

I remain, with esteem,
Gentlemen,
your humble servant,
RICHARD WHEATLAND.

NEW YORK, March 10.

The brig Two Brothers, of Altona, captain Schow, from Lisbon, which place he left on the 11th of November, on her passage, in lat. 37. long. 59. met with a severe gale of wind, which carried away both masts, the rudder, two men, and every thing upon deck. The crew were then unable to guide the vessel, and she drifted at the mercy of the waves into the latitude of the West Indies. On the 25th of January, one of the people died with hunger, and it was agreed by the remainder of the crew on board, to cut him into pieces and eat him; but whilst in the act of cutting and sharing the dead body among them, fortunately, on the 26th, fell in with the schooner Aurora, capt. Gowis, of Boston, bound to Charleston, from Demerara, which supplied them with some provisions and necessaries, and took the vessel in tow to the edge of the Gulph, where the cable broke in the night, and the vessel drifted again, until she fell in with a coaster bound from Charleston to Georgetown, commanded by captain Harrison, who supplied the people on board with water, and piloted the vessel into Bulls's Bay. The crew were without water seven days, and used frequently entreat each other for a little urine; for six days they eat only of a cat, and a few rats.

PHILADELPHIA, March 23.

It gives us pleasure to lay before the public the following letter, and answer to it, respecting the ship Sally, belonging to this port, which, with her crew and cargo, were lately saved, by the extraordinary exertions of the crew of his Britannic Majesty's ship Hind, assisted by captain Larcom her commander, in person, during a heavy gale of wind, at a considerable distance from his ship, then in Hampton roads.

Philadelphia, 16th Feb. 1799.

SIR,

The President and Directors of the Insurance Company of N. America, having been informed of the extraordinary exertions made by the crew of the ship under your command, to effect the preservation of the ship Sally, captain Gelston, and her crew, when in imminent danger of being lost, have requested me to present their sincere acknowledgements and thanks for the generous, humane, and disinterested conduct, displayed on that occasion, which I now do, with much pleasure and satisfaction.

From the well known character of the seamen of your nation, for benevolence, generosity and bravery, in their general conduct, but more especially when engaged in the calls of humanity, they may consider their exertions only as a duty that a brother seaman owes to a brother; yet we cannot forego the pleasure of expressing the sense we entertain of their merits on this occasion.

You will permit me, Sir, to request the favor of your acceptance of one thousand dollars, to be distributed in such manner as you shall think proper, amongst the crew of your ship. It is not meant in nature of a compensation for the services rendered, but as a mark of our respect for the generous feelings which dictated the exertions made on the above occasion.

I have the honor to be, with due respect, Sir,
your most obedient servant,
(Signed) JOSEPH BALL, President.
To Joseph Larcom, Esquire, commander of his Britannic Majesty's ship of war, Hind.

THE ANSWER.

His Majesty's ship Hind, Hampton Roads, March 3, 1799.

SIR,

I was yesterday honored with your letter of the 16th ult. conveying the thanks of the President and Directors of the Insurance Company of North America, for the small piece of service my ship's company were so happy as to render to the ship Sally, captain Gelston, when on shore in this river.

Your very liberal present of a thousand dollars to my ship's crew, as a mark, as you are pleased to express it, of your respect for the generous feelings which dictated the exertions on that occasion, call for my warmest acknowledgements. I cannot fail assuring you, that the very handsome and polite manner in which you have conveyed to me, the sentiments of the Directors, flattered my feelings exceedingly, and I must beg you to accept of my sincerest thanks on the occasion, being with great respect,
Sir,
your most obedient servant,
(Signed) JOSEPH LARCUM.

President, &c.

Extract of a letter from captain Thomas Truxton, to the Secretary of the Navy, dated 14th February.

"On the 13th, after the greatest exertions having been made, we gained these roads with both ships, and anchored them safe about noon. It is impossible for me to state to you the joy demonstrated by the inhabitants on this occasion: the ship was filled with gentlemen of the first dignities in the island, and a salute requested, in order that it might be returned, which was complied with on my part, particularly as it came from a member of the king's council, Mr. Tyton, an old friend of mine of many years standing.

I have just received a polite letter of congratulation from the commander in chief, who offers me every service in his power; and I have directed all the wounded from on board the Insurgente to be immediately landed and sent to the hospital.

The following is an accurate return made me this morning by Lieut. Rodgers, commanding the prize, taken from the examining officers, of the killed and wounded on board the Insurgente, viz.

Killed,	29
Badly wounded,	22
Wounded more slightly,	19
Total killed and wounded,	70

We had, as I wrote to you, only one man killed, and two badly wounded, one of which is since dead, the other is a midshipman, Mr. M'Donough, who lost his foot; an ordinary seaman was afterwards discovered to be slightly wounded: this is the whole number lost and injured on board the Constellation.

I shall proceed to repair the damages sustained to both ships as speedily as possible, and until the pleasure of the President of the United States is known, I intend to give lieutenant John Rodgers an order to command the Insurgente. He was one of the first lieutenants appointed, has a claim to being among the first promotions, but a very strong one, for behaving well, and being the first lieutenant of the Constellation, at the capture of the first governmental ship of any consequence, ever made by the arms of the United States at sea, since our being known as a nation; the other officers I shall appoint in the same way.

My gun deck is divided into three divisions, the first of five guns and opposite superintended by the first lieutenant, Mr. Rodgers. The second of five guns and opposite by the second lieutenant, Mr. Cowpse. The third of four guns, and opposite, by the third lieutenant, Mr. Sterett. The zeal of these three officers in performing their duty, and complying strictly with my orders, cannot be surpassed; but I must not, in praise of them, be silent as to the good conduct of Mr. Shirly, the master, and Mr. Archer the fourth lieutenant, who acted their part near my person on the quarter deck, and who are also deserving of notice; but for the honor of our nation, I must declare that it is impossible for officers and men in any service, to have behaved better than my people did generally on this occasion: it must therefore not be understood, because I have mentioned the names of a few of the principle gentlemen, that those of an inferior grade in their stations are less deserving; on the contrary, to the latter I always feel myself most indebted for their exertions in the hour of battle, as they have generally much less at stake, than those in higher stations, and consequently less inducement to display their valour."

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, May 18.

As the wind blows more frequently from the East at this time of the year, and thereby swarms of insects are drove from the adjoining swamp, or marsh, we would recommend to those who have gardens in the town, to set fire to small heaps of horses litter, damp shavings, or any thing that will cause a sharp smoake therein, as the best means of keeping them off, and saving their young vegetables, of which we are in great want.

ELEGANT EXTRACT.

The celebrated Mr. Burke's opinion of the people of New England, in one of his Speeches delivered in the British Parliament, in the year 1775.

"As to the wealth which the colonies have drawn from the sea by their fisheries you had all that matter fully opened at your bar. You surely thought those acquisitions, of value, for they seemed even to excite your envy; and yet the spirit with which that enterprising employment has been exercised, ought rather, in my opinion, to have raised your esteem and admiration. Pass by the parts, and look to the manner in which the people of New England have of late carried on the whale fishery.—Whilst we follow them among the rumbling mountains of ice, and behold them penetrating into the deep frozen recesses of Hudson's Bay and Davis's Streights; whilst we are looking for them beneath the artic circle, we hear that they have pierced into the opposite regions, so polar cold that they are at the antipodes, and engaged under the frozen serpent of south Fairland Islands, which seemed too remote and romantic an object for the grasp of national ambition, is but a stage and resting place in the progress of their victorious industry. Nor is the equinoctial heat more discouraging to them, than the accumulated winter of both the poles. We know that whilst some of them draw the line and strike the harpoon on the coast of Africa, others run the longitude and pursue the gigantic game along the coast of Brazil. No sea but what is vexed by their fisheries; no climate that is not witness to their toils. Neither the perseverance of Holland, nor the activity of France, nor the dextrous and firm sagacity of English enterprise, ever carried this most perilous mode of hardy industry to the extent to which it has been pushed by this recent people; a people who are still as it were, but in the gristle, and not hardened in the bone of manhood.

"When I contemplate these things; when I know that the colonies in general owe little or nothing to any care of ours, and that they are not squeezed into this happy form by the constraints of watchful and suspicious governments, but that through a wise and a salutary neglect, a generous nature has been suffered to take her own way to perfection; when I see how profitable they have been to us, I feel all the pride of power sink, and all presumption in the wisdom of human contrivances melt and die away within me."

[The following elegant extract is taken from the Gazette of the United States.]

WHEN we reflect on the glorious & successful stand that Great-Britain has made singly against the ferocious and desolating tyranny of France, it is impossible for us, if our feelings are not completely Frenchified, not to contemplate with increased attachment & reverence, and pride, the great nation, from which we derive our natural and political existence, in all the fortunes of which we must share in the present contest, and with which we must either stand or fall. Around her all is terror and dismay, and despondency; all, abject compromise, or timid submission to the power that all execrate, and all abhor. She alone keeps the station she originally assumed in the face of God and man.

"On the eternal basis of justice and equity, and right, she has kept her stand, and has singly braved the storm that has laid low so many of the most distinguished powers of the earth. The whole fabric of social order has been shaken; the work of ages has fallen in a heap of ruins around her; she alone has remained firm and unmoved; like her native oak she has gathered strength from the storm. What a glorious distinction to be descended from such a nation? And what a proud pre-eminence would it be to be leagued with her in such a cause. While she exhibits such a spectacle to the moral eye, how mean, base, and execrable are the ravings and invectives of the infidel & anarchist; how low and contemptible that policy that would hug itself in a short sighted selfish neutrality? If there is any morality in the science of politics, it is the duty of all nations to unite in crushing such a profligate race as the present despots of France; as much, if not more than, it is of every member of the federal union, to subdue an insurrection in any one state.—The French revolution is an insurrection against all nations, a war against all the laws of society, and vastly more dangerous to the peace and happiness of the world, than a partial revolt of a few counties in the United States of America.

Messrs. WATERS and SIMONS,

By inserting the following lines on the late much regretted, COLONEL ALEXANDER M'KEE, you will very much oblige one of your readers :—

LET civil nations look at Savage deeds,
Or look at Indian friendship's breast that bleeds;
For one that now is, forever gone,
And left us one, but one true British son!

True to his trust, in every action just,
From envy, hatred, and from malice hush't:
He died lamented by the savage throngs;
Of husbands, wives, their daughters and their sons.

His son the darling of his aged care,
Who drop'd affection's and affliction's tear;
For the great parent of his former days,
The tomb inhabits and forgets our praise!

No secret schemes nor interested views,
Could sway his mind, strict honesty he chose:
From earliest youth, until his fall he met,
Still the straight path of honor always kept.

May civil British warriors still retain,
True sense of honor to his noble son;
Who promises fair at what his father done;
The aid and succour of the Indian throng.

Each day I hope much happiness will produce,
With honor and domestic peace conduce,
To cheer all round him whilst he here remains
A British Chief of our new Sandwich plains.

European News.

Summary
Down the 6th of February.

Buonaparte.

THE latest news, coming thro' a credible channel, concerning this murderous monster, is contained in a Vienna article of the 9th of December, which states, in substance, what we have before heard of the punishment of Buonaparte and his gang, and adds, that the dispatches from the Turkish general expressed his full confidence of very soon annihilating the remainder of the infidels. The Paris news printers, who are almost as vile slaves as those of Boston, have trumped up a story in contradiction to this. They say they have their intelligence from an eye witness, but they take care not to mention his name; and we know well, that it is next to impossible that a man should escape from Egypt to France.

King of Naples.

THIS prince, who was, by the late advices, in a fair way of driving the French from some part, at least, of their conquests, has been obliged to fly from his continental dominions to the island of Sicily. This news cannot be doubted, as it is stated in the London papers, to have been received from admiral lord Nelson. According to the dispatches received from his lordship, it appears that, after a series of continued disasters, which general Mac attributes to the cowardice and treachery of the Neapolitan troops, many of the officers of which are suspected to have been bribed by the enemy, he despaired of being able to protect the capital. The Neapolitan army was still at Capua; but the French were under its walls, and the result of another engagement, if the Neapolitans stood one, was expected to be that they would be dispersed, altho' in point of numbers, they were still superior to the enemy. Under these discouraging circumstances, their Neapolitan majesties, the royal family, and about six hundred persons, of the highest rank, were induced to seek for shelter on board our ships of war lying in the bay of Naples. The king and queen embarked on board the Vanguard, of 74 guns, commanded by lord Nelson, who proposed to convey them to Palermo in Sicily. It is not known what could collect to accompany him to Sicily; but if they are no better than thoſe he has left behind, the French would be maſters of Naples. It ſeems probable that every thing of value had been carried off from Naples on board the fleet. In conſequence of this ſtate of things the Engliſh had burnt all the ſhips in the harbor of Naples, and had received orders for bombarding the city, whenever it ſhould be in poſſeſſion of the French—In giving theſe orders, the king was perfectly right. As I would deſtroy myſelf ſooner than ſubmit to their ſway, ſo would I, on the ſame principles, deſtroy my dominions.

This is a reverſe of fortune, but it is what every one expected, if the king of Naples was not joined, and that ſpeedily too, by the emperor of Germany. What the politics of this prince are, it is very hard to ſay: whether he be under the influence of avarice, of fear, or of jacobiniſm; but this we may reſt aſſured of, that, unleſs he determines to act, with all his might, againſt France, he will fall. He is now the firſt upon the liſt. There is ſome talk about a junction of the Auſtrian and Ruſſian troops; and there is alſo ſome talk about the preparations of Pruſſia; but, there ſeems to be nothing that amounts to any thing like action.—Theſe three powers are, in fact, jealous of each other. Ruſſia has, indeed, nothing to fear; but between the emperor and the king of Pruſſia, the only diſpute, in reality, is, which ſhall be devoured laſt. If they do not unite, and that cordially, all Germany as well as Italy muſt and will be revolutionized.

France.

This bloody nation is at once the moſt malignant and the moſt miſerable that ever exiſted. Some one has compared her to a guilty perſon afflicted with the plague, who feels particular delight in communicating the infection to others, and who finally expires under the conſoling reflection of having companions in h—ll. The power of France will not be encreaſed by the progreſs of her hordes; on the contrary, it will be diminiſhed. Thoſe hordes will periſh by little and little. She cannot hold her conqueſts; and the profits of plunder are at an end.—It ſignifies not what injury ſhe may do to others; ſhe can, thereby, do herſelf no good.

Great-Britain.

While this nation ſtands firm, and that ſhe ever will, France never can be the arbitreſs of the world, nor even of the continent of Europe for any time. She may for a few years keep up her marauding ſyſtem in Italy and Germany; but ſhe is hemmed up there.—There is no part of the ſea that ſhe dares appear in, and while this is the caſe, ſhe never will find ſafety, nor reſt from her labors. Still the buſineſs of exhauſting goes on with her; all expence and no income. She is expending the capital of her population as well as of her property. Great-Britain alone is able, by a ſteady and vigorous proſecution of the war for only four years longer, to exhauſt, to annihilate France, without the leaſt injury or inconvenience to herſelf.

PACKET-OFFICE, 4 o'clock.

WE ſtop the preſs to ſtate, that an expreſs has juſt been received at lord Grenville's office, which, we are aſſured brings the pleaſant intelligence, that the Proſerpine frigate is ſafe, with all her crew; and that Mr. Grenville and his ſuit landed on the continent early in the month.

Some irregular ſets of French papers, to the 18th inſt. reached town yeſterday by way of Holland; and likewiſe ſome Leyden papers were received by the ſame conveyance.

Theſe gazettes tend to confirm the report, concerning the order iſſued by the French directory, for the requiſition of new levies of men. A ſimilar order has been iſſued by the Batavian republic, ordaining, "That all citizens, without exception, are enjoined to ſerve in perſon in the armies. No one is to be exempted from this duty, nor allowed to find ſubſtitutes. Old age, corporal infirmities, and adminiſtrative employments are the only exceptions. All citizens, from the age of 20 to 30, are to ſerve in the firſt conſcript for the preſent year."

The execution of theſe regulations is to be haſtened as much as poſſible.

Letters from Luxembourg ſtate, that orders have been ſent thither, for tranſporting from the arſenal of that fortreſs all the heavy artillery fit for ſervice, which is to be ſent acroſs the Rhine.

The Moniteur of the 17th inſt. mentions a decree of the directory, ordering all commanding officers, without the territories of the republic, to ſend away from every cantonment and camp all women who are uſeleſs to the armies. Such women are deemed uſeleſs who are not employed in waſhing, or in ſelling proviſions and liquor.

Letters from Milan, of the 3d inſt. mention that the Ruſſians have been repulſed in repeated attacks made on the principal fort in the Iſland of Corfu, which is ſaid to rival Toulon in ſtrength. The French are making great exertions to ſave that iſland.

On the 16th the directory ſent a meſſage to the two councils as follows:

"The Ottoman Porte, informed that the expedition to Egypt was only directed againſt its real enemies, had begun to look upon it with a favorable eye; but it was ſoon led aſtray by the inſinuations of Britain and the coaleſced powers. The war which it has declared againſt its antient and faithful allies, has been the fruit of this error, and will lead to its total ruin. It has drawn the Barbary powers into a war with France.

[What aſtoniſhing effrontery that baſe directory of France is poſſeſſed of, to dare, publiſh to the world one of its decrees, in which, Great-Britain is accuſed of falſe inſinuations; but when we reflect how vile, and much diveſted the directory is of honor, we cannot wonder at it. perfidious language.]

"The French government has adopted meaſures of reprifal, and it gives you notice of having done ſo."

It is reported that the king of Pruſſia has conſented to allow the Ruſſian troops a free paſſage through his dominions.

Ships that have come in from ſea repreſent the weather during the early part of laſt week to have been more than uſually tempeſtous. The following is an extract of a letter from on board the Cambrian frigate:

"On Wedneſday laſt, the 20th, we encountered a moſt tremendous gale in the channel, with thunder and lightning. A fire ball fell upon the forecaſtle, which unfortunately killed two men and wounded 17. Two are ſtruck blind, one of them is raving mad.—The ſcene was ſo awful that we all expected immediate deſtruction.

Thirteen Hamburgh mails are now due.

We are happy, however, to learn, that diſpatches have been received at lord Grenville's office, containing an account of the ſafe arrival of Mr. Grenville in the Proſerpine frigate, on the continent early in February.

French and Dutch papers have been received by a neutral veſſel arrived from Holland. The directory are making great preparations for war, and have iſſued orders for new levies of men by the ſyſtem of requiſition. Similar orders have been iſſued by the Batavian republic, where all citizens from 20 to 30 years of age are to ſerve in the firſt levy. It is rumoured that count Belgrade has been ſent by the emperor to Paris to negociate a definitive peace. The Turks and Ruſſians are ſaid to have been defeated in their attack upon the iſland of Corfu.

LEGHORN, January 4.

ON the 2d. we learned, that the French had relaxed the expedition of the march; that in the evening they had agreed to evacuate Tuſcany whenever the Neapolitans evacuated Leghorn, and the blockade of the port ſhould ceaſe. Yeſteaday there was in circulation a copy of the miniſterial note communicated to all the deplomatic agents, couched nearly in the following remarkable words: "Peace between the emperor, and the empire, and the French republic, being concluded, the neutrality of Tuſcany is gauranted by the contracting parties:" You may judge of the ſenſation produced by this intelligence in a country which from the brink of the precipice on which it ſtood, feels itſelf reſtored to a ſtate of ſafety and proſperity.

MR. FENNO,

I take the liberty of ſending you the following extract of a letter from the prize maſter of the ſhip Cicero, retaken from the French by the American frigate United States, capt. Barry, dated St. Pierre, Martinique, March 9:—not doubting that you will take the earlieſt opportunity of inſerting it in your gazette.

"I have been here in this ſhip (Cicero) about ten days prize-maſter; ſhe belongs to Liverpool, was captured by the French privateer ſchooner Democrat, and re-captured by the United States, and ſent in here; her cargo conſiſts principally of live ſtock; ſhe will bring about 30,000 dollars; is a fine ſhip of 430 tons, mounts 20 nine-pounders, and carries 50 men (ſay 35 men & 15 boys.) The privateer mounts twelve nine pounders and had 100 men; they fought her two hours and an half, and after the French boarded, fought three quarters of an hour on the deck. Out of the 50 hands on board, the captain and three men were killed, and twenty-ſix wounded. Could I but give you a deſcription of the ſcene this ſhip preſented when we firſt took poſſeſſion of her, it would make your very ſoul ſhudder within you. Never were men more inhumanly mangled than they are: and much of it done after they gave up.—A little boy, leſs than our brother William, [a child about nine years of age] who was a favourite of the captain's, was ordered by the Frenchmen to go aloft and haul down the colours; he cried and ſaid he could not, which was the fact. A Frenchman immediately up with his cutlaſs and cut his arm almoſt off, and wounded him in ſeveral places. The Engliſhmen, there can be no doubt, fought like men; every thing on board proves it. The French had poſſeſſion about 36 hours before we recaptured her; during which time not one of the poor fellows who had been wounded, had been dreſſed, nor a ſingle bucket of water thrown on the deck; they were in a perfect gore of blood. I declare when the ſhip rolled with the heave of the ſea, the blood in the cabbin would run from ſide to ſide in a perfect current.

"You no doubt have heard of Truxton's ſucceſs and glory in the capture of the Inſurgente; ſhe was the laſt French frigate left out here; the reſt are all gone to France. We have now no other hope but to capture the privateers of which there are ſtill numbers out of Guadaloupe—and to whom our ſhip is as well known as the is to you, and is as much dreaded as they are by our merchantmen.

"The capture of the ſhip Cicero ought to be a ſerious leſſon to our merchants how they fit out their ſhips; they put on board ten or twelve guns, with twice the number of men at the utmoſt, and then think ſhe is able to defend herſelf againſt any thing they can poſſibly meet with.—'Tis a great miſtake—it is incredible how thoſe Frenchmen fight when drove to it by deſperation. To ſee this ſhip you'd think it impoſſible they could have had the courage to have engaged her, much leſs have carried her. The fact is they have nothing to loſe and every thing to gain, and whenever they ſee any thing that looks like plunder, nothing will deter them from attempting it.

"Yeſterday (9th March) a gentleman informed me of war having been declared againſt America by Guadaloupe, 'Statia and St. Martins. He has learnt it by a letter from St. Thomas'. If this be the caſe there can be no doubt but their reſpective governors have their orders from France, as they could not dare to go ſo far without ſuch orders; of courſe the declaration of war will be general."

We have been favoured with London papers to Jan. 21, and Cork, to Jan. 26. The ſtate of our paper when we received them, compels us to notice their contents in a brief and deſultory manner.

Three Americans were arreſted at Paris on the ſecond of Jan. and ſent to the Temple.

The French papers ſay, two Engliſh frigates, with ſeveral tranſports, having on board three thouſand Neapolitan troops, got aground, and were taken near Naples.

The French miniſter at Hamburgh, has ceaſed his functions, in conſequence of the refuſal to liberate Tandy, &c.

The French deputies at Raſtadt have demanded of the German plenipotentiaries that the Emperor cauſe the Ruſſian troops to retreat from his territory, otherways they ſhould conſider it a violation of neutrality, and all parties, as returning to the ſame ſituation as before the ſigning of the preliminaries of peace.

It is ſaid lord Nelſon took ſeventy Genoeſe veſſels at Leghorn.

BALTIMORE, April 12.

Arrived laſt evening at North Point, the ſhip Active, capt. John Garde, 58 days from Liſbon.—Capt. Garde informs, that the Spaniards have poſitively refuſed to ſuffer the French troops to paſs through their dominions into Portugal. The fate of Buonaparte, at the time he left Liſbon, was ſaid to be very uncertain. Five ſail of the line, prizes to the Britiſh, were lying then at Liſbon.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, May 25.

Letters from Madrid, of the 8th inſt. ſays a London paper, ſtate, that, according to the general opinion of the beſt informed people, the expedition of the French againſt Portugal will not take place.

The court of Madrid has not refuſed the paſſage of the republican army as is ſtated by ſome of the papers: but certain arrangements have been made between that and the cabinet of Luxemburg, which will have the ſame effect. The letters of which we ſpeak ſay, that the court of Madrid has bought off that paſſage ſo dangerous to Spain, by a ſum of money to be given to the French government, and to which the court of Liſbon is to contribute its proportion.

Several perſons from the Weſt-Indies, ſays a New-York paper, concur in the information, that a Dutch ſquadron has arrived at Surrinam, with a "particular agent" of the Batavian directory, to ſupercede the old governor of that colony, who was ſuſpected of being friendly to the ſtadtholder.—In conſequence of this arrival, the Britiſh admiral, Harvey, had called in all the Britiſh privateers cruizing near that part of the maine; and had ordered large ſhips on that ſtation.

A London paper of the 2d of March, ſays, "A draft of forty horſes from all the cavalry regiments now in Great Britain is immediately to be made for the ſervice of Portugal. They are to embark by the 9th inſt. if the tranſports are ready for them."

☞ Notice is hereby given, that Propoſals will be received at this Office for the purchaſe of the Mill-Seat at the Humber, with the Saw-Mill now ſtanding thereon, with about ſeven hundred Acres of Land, including the Meadow on the Weſt ſide of the River, above the Spring. There will be a condition in the Deed, reſtraining the purchaſer, on pain of forfeiture, from obſtructing in any manner, direct or indirect, the free paſſage of the Fiſh up and down the ſaid River; and another condition, obliging the Leaſee to take all other neceſſary meaſures for preventing the Fiſh being deſtroyed in the Mill-race by the mill-wheel or otherwiſe, by erecting and maintaining in good repair proper Racks for that purpoſe. Perſons deſirous of purchaſing the ſaid Mill-ſeat and Lands, muſt give in their Propoſals in Writing, and ſealed up, before the firſt day of October next, on which day, if an acceptable offer be made, the purchaſer will be declared, and a Depoſit immediately required of two ſhillings and ſix-pence in the pound on the purchaſe money. A Deed will iſſue under the Great Seal without delay. One-third of the remaining purchaſe-money muſt be paid on the 1ſt day of October 1800, one-third on the 1ſt day of October 1801, and the remaining third on the 1ſt day of October 1802; and good Security given for making theſe payments at the above-mentioned periods.

PARIS, January 6.

Extract of a letter, dated Nov. 5, written by Touſſaint Louverture to citizens Pinchinat, Brotheir, Raignier, and others, repreſentatives of the people.

"WOULD you expect to hear, that when the nomination of general Hedouville to the government of St. Domingo announced that happineſs which his great reputation promiſed to this unfortunate country, he ſhould expoſe them to the moſt eminent dangers, from which I have juſt had the good fortune to preſerve them?

"The copy which I ſend to you, of my addreſs to the directory, will ſhew you how much this agent, having the beſt means of doing good, if he wiſhed it, has diſappointed the hopes of the true friends of liberty, in diſguſting a whole people by his impolite meaſures, and the arbitrary acts he exerciſed in the name of the laws, which were themſelves the palladium of which he took the advantage to light up the torch of diſcord, and bring on a civil war, which was on the point of breaking out.

"Nothwithſtanding this, in order to excuſe his having ſhamefully abandoned his poſt, he writes to you, citizens repreſentatives, as he has had the impudence to proclaim here, that I had ſeparated the colony from France, that I had introduced the emigrants, and that, with the troops, in the pay of England, I had executed the project of independence which I had long had in view.

"But I truſt in the impartiality of the two councils, and in the juſtice of the directory. [It is evident that Touiſſant is a Frenchman, for no one, but a Frenchman would truſt to the juſtice of that inſidious directory who is endeavoring to deceive the world by its artifice.] The ſtorm which thunders over my head does not affright me.

Invariable in my principles, ſincerely attached to France, and to liberty, I will continue to ſacrifice every moment of my life to aſſure the proſperity of St. Domingo.

Sainte en la Republique Franciſe!
T. LOUVERTURE."

January 13.

The Propagateur contains the following notice relative to St. Domingo, which has been ſent by the miniſter of the marine to the commiſſioners of the directory at the different ports of France:

"The executive directory having judged it proper to re eſtabliſh thoſe relations with the iſland of St. Domingo, which have been temporalily ſuſpended, you will take care to inform the merchants of your port, and the maritime diſtrict to which your adminiſtration extends, that they may proceed to fit out veſſels for that colony.—You may even aſſure them, that it will give pleaſure to the government to ſee ſuch operations undertaken, and that I ſhall facilitate them by all the means in my power."

Extract of a letter from citizen Hillarion point, general of brigade.

Aquila, 28th Frimaire, (Dec. 18.)

"THE provinces of Abruzzo are in our poſſeſſion; and yeſterday at 9 o'clock at night, we entered Aquila, the capital of this province, driving before us the Neapolitan levy, en maſſe; that is to ſay, the ſelf named volunteers put in requiſition in theſe provinces. Lemoine, general of diviſion, ſent a flag of truce to the commander of the Neapolitan troops, with a declaration, that he ſhould conſider himſelf reſponſible for all the evils that ſhould befal this city. But his anſwer not being received at the appointed hour, the troops advanced, foced open the gates, and we entered the city.

"All the poſts are taken poſſeſſion of, the inhabitants were forbidden to appear at the windows, and the majority of them were ſurpriſed on the next morning, to find that we were maſters of the place. The fort ſurrender this morning at diſcretion; we have found a great quantity of ammunition there and have placed a ſtrong garriſon in it.

"The king of Naples did not expect this viſit ſo ſoon; the high and rugged mountains which encircle Abruzzo, ſerve as a natural barrier to the country. To reach Aquila, we marched thirty-ſix miles through very difficult paſſes and defiles, and croſſed the higheſt of the Appenine mountains.—The volunteers of theſe provinces, however occupied the heights, and harraſſed us on our march. We detached in purſuit of them, ſome companies of ſharp ſhooters, who climbed the heights and diſlodged them, and thus we arrived at Aquila. We are now on the great road to Naples, where we ſhall doubtleſs very ſoon arrive.

"We found poſted up in the city of Aquila a proclamation of the king of Naples, particularly addreſſed to the inhabitants of the provinces of Abruzzo, and dated five or ſix days before from the head quarters at Rome. It commands them in the name of their king, their holy religion, and their wives and daughters, to take up arms and ruſh upon the French, who, it ſays, in twice twenty-four hours will no longer exiſt. Among other flattering exortations, "brave Samnites, warlike race of heroes, imitate your anceſtors; you amount to ſeven hundred thouſand inhabitants—march and the buſineſs is finiſhed. I am maſter of Rome, from which I have driven thoſe miſerable Frenchmen who dare not to make any reſiſtance, being convinced to do with a numerous and brave army, that cowards only would ſuffer themſelves to be beaten, and that we had only to march againſt them."

"Had they been as courageous as they were numerous, they might have given us a great deal of trouble; but this en maſſe did not long continue to reſiſts us.

"We have enlarged ſeveral patriots who were confined in the citadel of this place on account of their democratic opinions, among whom was one Jourdan, who has been four years in priſon, on account of having preſided at a certain club at Naples. He is a young man of talents, and a great mathematicion.

Extract of a letter from an officer in the army of Rome, addreſſed 3d Niveſe, (Dec. 23) to one of his friends in Paris.

"General Kellerman being ſent by the general in chief of the army of Rome againſt Viterbo, to puniſh the vile inhabitants for the cruelties exerciſed by them on our ſick, found his march ſtopped by the Neapolitan gen. Dawas, who with a great body of troops compoſed of runaways, fortuitouſly rallied, was making his retreat ſlowly and in good order. Kellerman overtook him at Montalto, and attacked him.—Dawas, formerly a colonel in the French ſervice, he is the braveſt officer in the Neapolitan army; he has diſplayed, among the enemies of his country, to whom he has ſold himſelf, the French courage. His defence was fine, and covered with glory: his conqueror, Killerman, who tired of the extraordinary reſiſtance, threw himſelf at the head of his ſoldiers, into the ranks of the enemy, where he ſpread death and terror, and made a whole battalion priſoners, took all the artillery which remained in the hands of the fugitives, and drove them in diſorder to Orbitello, from whence Dawas fled, leaving part of his jaws behind him, which had been carried away by a ſhot.

"Kellerman, triumphant, then returned to Viterbo; he found the walls covered with the rebels in arms, and "briſtling" with cannon. They refuſed to ſurrender at the firſt ſummons: the following was addreſſed to them by the general in chief Championet, "Viterbo will open its gates, or Viterbo will be only a heap of aſhes." It is thought this vile rebel too criminal to hope for pardon, has liſtened to no other counſel than his deſpair, and has braved the terrible manace which has been put into execution. I ſhall have certain intelligence to-morrow, which I will ſend you.

"Championet, notwithſtanding the force remained before Viterbo, has continued the rapid courſe of his ſucceſs; and his arms contradict the ſtupid falſehoods with which the ſoporific pen of the Frankfort journaliſt daily fills his paper, amuſing the republicans and exciting the contempt of thoſe of his readers whoſe reaſon has not been deſtroyed by a fooliſh ariſtocracy.

"Championet advances and puts to flight the Neapolitans from all the poſts in which they were intrenched in order to take breath. Terracino, reduced, recognizes the laws of the great nation, and the republican flags, flying on the borders of the ſtangliano, carrying terror even to Naples, from whence their colours may be perceived."

AFFAIRS OF ITALY.

From the Redacteur.

PARIS, january 3.

A letter from Rome, dated Dec. 16, ſays, "The French army after having ſeveral partial actions with the Neapolitan army conſiſting of 80,000 men has driven them entirely out of the territory of the Roman republic. The Neapolitan troops were beaten at Ponto-Fermo, Terni, Civita, Caſtellana, Monter, Oſſi, Otticolli, Culvi, Rietti, Civitadel, Ironi, Conta, Lupo, and Scorta, and had retreated in diſorder to the kingdom of Naples. General Championet advanced, on the 22 Frimaire (Dec. 12) to give battle to the Neapolitans, but the king, and captain general Mack, preferred abandoning their army, and flying with precipitation to Naples, where the agitation of the public minds is ſo great that a general inſurrection is dreaded. The retreat, rather the flight of the captain Mack, was ſo precipitate, that he forgot to give orders to a corps of 400 men, poſted in the environs of Civita Caſtellana, to retire. The corps in attempting to paſs the Tiber, at Rome, was attacked by the French troops, who took all the cannon, and 1800 priſoners, and killed and ſurpriſed the remainder."

HALIFAX, March 25.

To counteract the reports which have been induſtriouſly ſpread in this ſtate, of 20 or 30 millions of dollars having been awarded to Britiſh creditors, under the 6th article of the Britiſh treaty, we are happy in having it in our power to lay before our readers the following letter from one of the American commiſſioners:

Dear Sir,

I am ſorry to ſee by governor Davis's letters to you, that ſo much alarm has been created in your country, on the ſubject of Britiſh claims; but it is only part of a ſyſtem long purſued by the enemies of the government to render it unpopular. In the preſent caſe, the report is entirely unfounded, as not one award has yet been made in favour of any Britiſh creditor. The claims made are certainly large, but they will undergo a thorough inveſtigation, and my hope is, that none will be allowed but ſuch as are juſtly due, and theſe I truſt, no American would wiſh to ſet aſide.

The time which has elapſed ſince the treaty of peace, renders it neceſſary for the United States to make ſtrict enquiry in every ſtate wherein legal impediments exiſted—it would be an eſſential ſervice to the public, if gentlemen would give information to their agents on points that affect their intereſt.

With great reſpect, I am, Sir,
moſt humble ſervant,
THOMAS FITZSIMONS.

William B. Grove, eſq.

PITTSBURGH, March 30.

On Monday laſt the United States galley Senator Roſs, was launched at this place: ſhe carries a 24 pounder in her bow, and ſwivels on her quarter deck; her timbers are ſound and well ſeaſoned; and the workmanſhip ſubſtantial and elegant. When afloat in the Allegany ſhe fired a ſalute, which was immediately returned from Fort Fayette. The launch was effected handſomely, and without difficulty or accident.

PHILADELPHIA, April 19.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman, an officer in the army in Old England, to his brother in Virginia, dated in the barracks at Windſor, November 15, 1798.

"By the bleſſing of the Almighty, the aſtoniſhing late ſucceſſes of our different fleets, will, I truſt, at leaſt bring our inveterate foes to their ſenſes, and e'er long, produce a peace. The French fleet is almoſt annihilated; lord Nelſon and ſir J. B. Warren have trimmed them to ſuch a degree, that it is generally ſuppoſed they cannot get men raſh enough to adventure any more on the ocean, where, at every point of the compaſs, Britannia fails and rides triumphant. The Great Natio n, as they have the impudence to ſtyle themſelves will, at length bring all the powers of Europe on them, and their fall, I believe, will be as rapid as their riſe: all good men muſt pray for this event, and French infamy may be a warning to future nations, of innovation and anarchy. On Tueſday next parliament meet our good and worthy old king, whom I ſaw half an hour or ſo ſince; he is in high ſpirits, and will meet both houſes under the moſt happy auſpicies: never ſince his acceſſion to the throne will he be more loyally and favourably heard than on that day, when he will inform this truly aſtoniſhing nation, of ſucceſſes that no other monarch could ever boaſt of. It is true that to ſupport ſuch a navy and army, the expence muſt be beyond meaſure great, but were you here, you would ſee them paid amidſt tranquillity, loyalty and plenty. The force in pay now, by ſea and land, amount to more than 600,000 men, and yet every 24th of each month the whole army are paid, and the navy, whenever called for; theſe are facts and not aſſertions: is there any other country can ſay the ſame? It is impoſſible for any perſon to be more fond of any thing than his majeſty is of his Stafford, as he calls our regiment; his condeſcenſion in ſpeaking to every officer, whenever we ſee him, is wonderful; almoſt the whole family are here, and their affability can be exceeded by nothing but their virtue and goodneſs. You would be ſurpriſed to ſee the exerciſe the king three times a week, with the flag hounds and terriers. I have a fine mare, and generally hunt with the terriers—the flag hounds are too fleet for me."

By the arrivals from the Havannah we learn, that accounts had been received there from Spain, which ſtated, that an attack was to be made on Cuba by the Britiſh; in conſequence of which every exertion was making to put the harbour of the Havanna in a ſtate of defence; that the duty of 21 per cent. on rice had been taken off, and that that article had riſen from three to five dollars per hundred.

SALEM, March 29.

IMPORTANT FACT.

The preſident of the United States has recently come to a determination to raiſe the 24 additional regiments, which a late law of Congreſs proviſionally authorized him to do, and the officers will be immediately appointed. It ſeems that an apprehenſion of imminent danger has operated upon the preſident's mind, and determined him to this meaſure.

We are told there is reaſon to believe that the French have determined on an invaſion of ſome of our Southern ſtates. It is not to be ſuppoſed that their deſigns are to be effected by any great armament from France, but by the more ſure and fatal operation of ſecret emiſſaries, who will combine the ſlaves with the enemies of our government in Virginia, Kentucky, &c. and thus employ the force of the country in its own deſtruction.

From Mr. Fenno's paper.

LATE FROM EUROPE.

We have been favoured with the following extract of a letter, dated February 2, 1799, from the Continent of Europe, to a gentleman in Philadelphia. The public may rely on its authenticity.

"Our veſſels ſail above the European ſeas with little or no protection, and great numbers are captured and condemned. Not being in a ſtate of war, our merchants and captains vainly flatter themſelves that muſter rolls and regiſters will protect them, and notwithſtanding the examples before their eyes the deluſion continues; they catch at every ſilly ſtory, or paragraph in a news paper, and are perpetually cajoled by the deluſive promiſes of French agents.

"The elections in the ſouthern ſtates afford much conſolation for ſome diſgraceful events. I ſee you are likely to have ſome trouble with Kentucky and Virginia, which the agents of the directory wiſh to convert into an American La Vendee, and when their ſchemes are ripe, to make the medium of their attack on our liberties. In this mode they began with Switzerland exciting rebellion in the Valais, and then marching troops to aſſiſt the friends of liberty. Though I do not doubt their deſigns, I do not fear the reſult. You have wiſdom and foreſight in the government and ſpirit of independence in the people which will fruſtrate their nefarious ſchemes.

"The agents of France, finding the love of country is no longer the order of the day in the United States, change their conduct. Preſerving their ambition, though cloaked under exterior profeſſions of friendſhip, they will excite ſedition and rebellion under pretence of oppreſſion in Ireland, and when they have inſpired a portion of the people with a hatred of their own government, then they will kindly offer their aid. I hope theſe views are now well underſtood in America. There will be no fear of an invaſion unleſs the above plan ſucceeds. Should the diſcontents ſpread, without doubt an attack will be made.

"At a late entertainment given at Madrid by the French ambaſſador, col. Humphreys was not invited, but claſſed with the Sardinian and Neapolitan miniſters.

"I ſee by the late French papers that the miniſter of war complains ſadly of deſertion—he ſays that the conſcripts march faſt enough when called out, but that they deſert immediately after.—The miniſter of finance on his ſide complains of the emptineſs of the treaſury—more plunder muſt be ſought—they have already ranſacked Piedmot—they will probably ſoon have Naples, and then they will try their hands at Spain and Portugal. In the mean time, my dear ſir, let our own country go on in ſtrengthening its army and navy, or our own time will come next."

THE ORACLE.

PREDICTIONS for 1799.

Several mornings in this year the ſun will riſe before certain people will diſcover it, and ſet before they have done their day's work.

In the courſe of this ſpring and ſummer, many alterations will be made in the form and trimings of the ladies head dreſſes; but I am not able to give an opinion at preſent, whether their appearance will be improved by theſe alterations.

On the 4th inſtant many ſober people will be drunk before they are aware of it.

The national debt of England will not be paid this year.

The ſame will happen with many private debts in this town.

There will be many eclipſes of male and female virtue this year, ſome viſible and ſome inviſible.

Many delicate ladies whom one would not ſuſpect will be kiſſed; and tho' for my own part I ſee no harm in it, yet I forbear to publiſh their names.

Many people will drink more ſtrong liquor than will be ſufficient to keep them ſober, and take more phyſic than would be ſufficient to keep them in health.

Hoſpitality and generoſity will abound, dinners and entertainments will be given to thoſe who have enough at home, and the poor will receive gratis much good advice, medical and legal excepted.

Many young ladies will be married who are not yet courted, and many who are courted muſt wait another year.

IRELAND.

Dublin, January 22.

THE following are copies of the addreſs of the corporation and citizens of Dublin, to the ſpeaker of the houſe of commons, and the anſwer of that gentleman:

To the right hon. John Foſter, ſpeaker of the houſe of commons of Ireland.

The addreſs of the right hon. the lord mayor, ſheriffs, commons, and the citizens of the city of Dublin, in common council aſſembled.

"SIR,

"Amidſt the terrors which the threatened invaſion of our liberties, our fortunes, and our commerce, have ſpread around, the hearts of Iriſhmen, though ſickened with diſguſt, and inflamed with indignation, are yet ſtrangers to deſpair. From thoſe talents and that virtue, in which ſhe has often found relief, your country again demands protection; ſuffer not a nation to which you have heretofore been a ſhield, to expire without an effort to ſave her: come forward with all that animated zeal for the welfare of the empire, with that affectionate attachment to Britiſh connection, with that ardent love for Ireland, and that parental care of her commercial and conſtitutional rights, by which you have ever been diſtinguiſhed: bring with you that penetrating judgment and capacious wiſdom, that commanding eloquence and bold integrity, with which you have hitherto ſupported thoſe dear and valued intereſts: demonſtrate to the world that the aſſertions of our enemies are not motives, but pretexts; that their arguments are idle and deluſive, ...t, while they affect to promote the agriculture and trade of Ireland, to ſecure our alliance with Britain, and to invigorate the energies of the empire, they are proceeding wickedly and wantonly to undermine them all.

"In teſtimony whereof, the common ſeal of ſaid city is hereunto affixed, the day and year aforeſaid."

The right hon. the lord mayor, recorder and corporation at large, having waited on the right hon. the ſpeaker, with the addreſs, he was pleaſed to return the following anſwer:

"My lord and gentlemen,

"To be ſo honored by the city of Dublin, which has ever been eminently conſpicuous for its loyalty, its attachment to our conſtitution, and its watchful vigilance over all our rights and intereſts, fills me with ſentiments of gratitude and honeſt pride, which you can more readily conceive than I can expreſs. Accept my moſt grateful and cordial thanks, and be aſſured of my zealous perſeverance in the conduct you approve.

"You have very juſtly joined a zeal for the empire, and attachment for Britiſh connection, with an ardent love for Ireland.—No man can be a ſound friend to Ireland, who does not feel that zeal and that attachment; nor can he ever be an efficient friend, if he does not in every public meaſure hold them in his view, and make them the rule of his conduct.

"Since the conſtitution of this kingdom was ſettled, by its right to a ſole, ſeparate, and excluſive legiſlature being unequivocally confirmed, we have ſeen its proſperity riſing rapidly, yet ſteadily; its reſources increaſing for the ſupport of the empire, and thoſe reſources liberally and effectually applied. We have ſeen and ſtill ſee mutual acts of kindneſs between the two kingdoms, ſtrengthening their connection, and any commercial jealouſies that ever exiſted happily ſubſiding. Inſeparably united under the ſame executive power which is equally a branch of the legiſlature of each kingdom, our union is complete to every beneficial purpoſe, and the project in contemplation deſerves not the name of union.—In my ſoul, I think it is fraught with poſſible conſequences, certainly not foreſeen by thoſe who bring it forward, that will tend, if not to actual ſeparation, to attempts attempts, at leaſt to ſeparate us from Great Britain, to our utter ruin, and to the ſubverſion of the Britiſh empire, now the moſt happy and glorious on the face of the earth.

"I am, my lord and gentlemen, with the utmoſt reſpect, gratitude, and veneration, your very obliged and obedient ſervant, "JOHN FOSTER"

Extract af a letter from an officer at Galway, dated 23d Feb.

"I am ſorry to tell you that the ſtate of this country is as bad as poſſible, notwithſtanding what was ſaid the other night in the houſe, by ſome well informed gentlemen. The loſs in this county alone by houghing is computed to have amounted in the laſt three weeks, to upwards of 60,000l. We have at preſent upwards of 80 priſoners in gaol for that crime, and a court martial will commence to-morrow for their trial, and all thoſe found guilty immediately hanged. As much as poſſible of the beef and mutton deſtroyed in this way, is, beyond doubt, carried off, and ſalted up for the rebel army when it ſhall riſe, and by threatening letters many perſons have been obliged to depoſite in different places, conſiderable ſums in guineas for carrying on the war. In ſhort, I think we ſhall ſoon have another bruſh."

A private letter, dated Feb. 26.

By this time we truſt in Almighty God that the mad project of depriving Ireland of a reſident legiſlature is abandoned by his Majeſty's miniſters. The ſpeech of Mr. Pitt has been received by all claſſes and deſcriptions with deteſtation, and as the determined aſpect of the parliament and people of Ireland has made it indiſpenſably neceſſary for lord Caſtlereagh to adjourn the parliament, and ſet off abruptly to London, I con-of peace and tranquillity, to give a patient and unbiaſſed attention to this very ſhort and ſincere ſtatement of the affairs of Ireland.—The queſtion of Union in all its parts, political and commercial, has been diſcuſſed, within and without the walls of parliament, & there is one ſentiment pervades the whole iſland—I mean that part of the population of the iſland that will rally round the conſtitution—to ſtand and fall with Gt. Britain, but to be exterminated rather than ſurrender the reſident legiſlature of the country to the controul of a body of men who know as little of the phyſical reſources, the ſtate of mind, the ignorance or mental improvement of the Iriſh nation, as they do of the Calmuck Tartars, or the Indians on the Ohio. With the exception of about 150 people in Cork, the members of a cloſe corporation, there is not a ſingle addreſs, reſolution or inſtruction to a member of parliament in favour of a Union, and I ſtake my exiſtence on the truth of the aſſertion, that in Cork the inhabitants of it are 5 to 1 againſt a Union. Is the Britiſh cabinet prepared to commence a deſolating, dreadful and deadly conteſt with its immediate friends and warmeſt ſupporters in Ireland?

I have juſt left the houſe of commons—the popular party is firm—lord Ely has declared againſt a Union, as I underſtand; and Mr. Buthe's coming into parliament again is conſidered a certain preſage of lord Callan's ſupport to the oppoſition. The oppoſition to the Union is totally unconnected with any thing factious. They have pledged themſelves to ſupport the reſident legiſlature with their lives; but they requeſted the King's miniſters to proceed with the national buſineſs, and fear no factious or party oppoſition.

The name of Mr. Grattan is mentioned with the tendereſt emotion within and without the walls of Parliament—in public and in private.—A pamphlet has juſt appeared which preſents the commercial ſyſtem of Ireland in a luminous manner to the public, and in which the queſtion of Union is urged in a very able manner on the principles of political economy. It takes up

1. The commercial ſituation of Ireland before 1799.

2. The commercial ſituation of Ireland in 1785.

3. The commercial ſituation of Ireland in 1799.

After unfolding every thing and ſhewing the country has nothing to get, it then takes up the queſtion on three great principles:—

...mediate tendency to diminiſh capital.

2. That it will occaſion a change of capital from one part of the country to another; or from one kind of trade to another, which is nearly as bad as a diminution.

3. That it will be a perpetual impediment to the increaſe of capital to the extent to which it would otherwiſe accumulate.

After ranging through this field, it quotes Mr. Pitt in 1785 againſt Mr. Pitt in '99, as to tranſportation of capital, emigration from England, fewer taxes, ſuperior ſituation, and cheapneſs of labour, and meets all Adam Smith's arguments in favour of a Union. After a logical and ingenious argument, the pamphlet concludes with theſe words—"I have argued this great queſtion without the falſe glare of eloquence—with temper, with ſimplicity, but with firmneſs; and on the preſumption of a Union, when once effected, being permanent. But my opinion is, that it will, if carried, ſeparate the two nations, now bound together by the cords of intereſt and affection—not perhaps this year, nor poſſibly the next, but that it will ſeparate the two nations; I read ſeparation in the feelings of the public mind—in the unſmothered ſentiment of injury in this country—in the accumulating diſtreſſes of both—in the depreſſion of our commercial exertions—in the total annihilation of ſelf legiſlation—and in the reflecting mirror of the European world—conſider what has been ſaid; and may God of his infinite mercy give you ſenſe, honeſty and ſpirit to make ſuch conſtitutional exertions, as ſhall prevent the ſcenes of the two laſt centuries being repeated in the next—as will prevent rebellions which will diſtract the peace of your country—cruel permutations of property which will impede its proſperity; and of a revolution which poſſibly may throw your country and your children into the arms of France, but which will certainly ſeparate us from Great Britain for ever!"

Monday, at one o'clock, purſuant to an order of the houſe of commons, three publications of an Engliſh newſpaper, called the Sun, viz. of the 28th, 29th, and 30th ult. containing libelous reflections on the Iriſh parliament, were burnt in College-green, by the hands of the common executioner. The ſheriffs of the city and a military guard attended. The concourſe of ſpectators aſſembled on the occaſion was immenſe. At the burning of each paper, which was ſeparately done, the croud gave three huzzas. On the ſame day a wag wrote on the front door of the houſe of commons—"The New Sun Fire-office, by O'Donnel & Co."—[O'Donnel was the name of the member who moved to have the papers burnt.]

In conſequence of numerous late outrages in the county of Galway, it has been proclaimed in a ſtate of rebellion.

A letter from Cork ſays, "notwithſtanding the corporation of this city addreſſed government in favour of an Union, the bells were rung, and innumerable bonfires lit up, the moment the news arrived here of the rejection of the meaſure in our commons houſe of parliament."

SEMLIN, (Turkey) Jan. 1.

It appears to be certain that Paſſiwan Oglou is at length in poſſeſſion of Wallachia, and he is making preparations to attack Belgrade.

The Ruſſian miniſter has received intelligence that two Ruſſian frigates have been wrecked in the Black Sea, near one of the mouths of the Danube. Rear-admiral Aſzing has periſhed, and of both crews only eight have eſcaped.

BERLIN, (Pruſſia) Jan. 5.

The public papers have exaggerated the warlike preparations in the Pruſſian ſtates, and the march of the troops.—The garriſon of Weſel, has been reinforced with a battalion, and ſo of Him with two; but after erecting three batteries in the front of the iſle of Buderich, the works which were carrying on there ceaſed. No movement is made by the army of demarcation; and tho' ſome diſpoſitions have been ordered, which ſeemed to announce the march of 60,000 men, their execution has been ſo ſlow, and the inclination of this cabinet towards peace ſo marked, that every thing indicates it will not change its ſyſtem.

LONDON, March 4.

The 1ſt Weſt York regiment have volunteered their ſervices for Ireland.

The Pembrokeſhire and Glamorganſhire regiments of militia, have volunteered their ſervices in Ireland.

The Fifeſhire ſencible cavalry are ſhortly to embark for Portugal.

His Majeſty has accepted the tender of ſervice made by the Cambridgeſhire militia, and they are under orders for Ireland, to relieve the Buckinghamſhire regiment.

The veſſel with troops, which in our laſt we mentioned to have been loſt near Almwich in Wales, proves to be the Friendſhip tranſport from Liverpool, bound for Newry in Ireland, with part of the Lancaſhire ſencible cavalry. All on board periſhed.

The Dublin mail of the 26th ult. arrived yeſterday. It mentions ſome freſh diſturbances to have broken out in the county of Antrim; and that the county of Wicklow continues to be harraſſed by a band of ruffians under the command of a fellow named Dwyer. On the Saturday preceding, a party of them was attacked near Rathville by the Glenary ſencibles; a very ſevere conteſt enſued, but ended in the diſcomfiture of the rebels, ſix of whom were killed, and 16 taken, with 11 muſkets, ſeveral piſtols, ſwords and bayonets, and have been conveyed to Baltinglaſs. Of the military, a corporal and 4 men were killed, and three dangerouſly wounded.

The various accounts that the French had effected a landing on the north weſt coaſt of Ireland, prove to have been entirely unfounded. A letter received by the laſt mail from an officer in the Dorſetſhire militia, quartered at Carrick on Suir, repreſents the counties of Tipperary, Kilkenny, and Waterford, in a ſtate of extreme agitation, in conſequence of the Union having been propoſed, and expreſſes much apprehenſion that the flame which appeared to have almoſt totally ſubſided, would again break out with redoubled vigour, by the attempt which it was ſtated would be made to carry the obnoxious meaſure. Inflammatory ſongs were diſperſed through every part of the country, and the known, or ſuppoſed ſupporters of the Union, treated in the moſt indecorous manner.

Whatever ultimately may reſult from the propoſition of a legiſlative union with Ireland, its hitherto effects in that country have been to unite intereſts till then violently hoſtile. We have reaſon to believe that government will not preſs the meaſure during the preſent ſeſſion of the Iriſh parliament. It is poſſible its preſent opponents may view it in a different light by the meeting of the next. But we would not ſo far libel the wiſdom of the miniſter as to give a momentary credence to the report, that he purpoſed, in the event of the failure of negociation, to reſort to other meaſures; the inevitable conſequence of which, if it were poſſible to admit the firſt poſition, we ſhould not heſitate to pronounce, would be—univerſal, effective, and eventful reſiſtance.

A conſiderable number of perſons, apprehended in Ireland, on ſuſpicion of treaſon, have lately arrived at Chatham, for the purpoſe of being diſperſed among the regiments for foreign ſervice. Many of them wore the rebel uniform; and thoſe ſo habited, were ſome days ſince ſtripped on the parade, and their dreſs burnt.

Thomas Muir, the celebrated Scotch advocate, tranſported to Botany Bay for ſedition, but who eſcaped from thence, died at Paris the 3d of Feb.

A meſſage ſent to the Council of Five Hundred on the 2d ult. ſtates, "that the expences of the public ſervice are conſiderably beyond the receipts of the revenue; that there has been a deficit of 43,778,262 livres in the receipts of the firſt quarter; that the beginning of the ſecond quarter (the preſent one) is equally alarming, and that inſtead of receiving 14,072,222 livres every decade, the commiſſioners of the national treaſury could not even obtain 10,000,000. The meſſage concludes in the following manner: "The ſubſiſtence of the armies is no longer certain; the navy has very few proviſions, or is entirely without them; the ſalaries of the ſervants of the public are four months in arrear; the hoſpitals are in a ſtate of the greateſt diſtreſs for want of relief; the moſt urgent payments are ſuſpended; the public credit is every day diminiſhing, and the public ſervice expoſed to a fatal and approaching cataſtrophe."

A fleet, conſiſting of 200 ſail of tranſports, with 15,000 troops, failed from Spithead the 3d inſt. for Portugal, to aſſiſt that power in repelling the threatened invaſion by the French.

According to private advices from Ireland, it appears, that on the chancellor Clare's opening his court in Dublin, the counſel requeſted that Mr. Fitzgerald, late prime ſeageant ſhould have his uſual precedence of rank.—The chancellor replied, that it was impoſſible, as he no longer held that office. Upon which the counſel refuſed to plead. The lord chancellor then ſaid, as they had no buſineſs to bring before him, it was unneceſſary he ſhould remain on his ſeat, and accordingly walked out of the court.

M. De las Caſas, late Spaniſh ambaſſador in London, died a few weeks ſince at the warm baths in Italy.

Yeſterday a promotion of flag officers took place. It being the 14th of February, the anniverſary of earl St. Vincent's victory over the Spaniſh fleet, the promotion was announced in compliment to that glorious event. The vice admirals of the white, down to ſir Alan Gardner incluſive, are made vice admirals of the red. The rear-admirals, down to lord Hugh Seymour inclusive, are made vice-admirals.

The poſt captains, with a few exceptions, down to ſir J. Borlaſe Warren, incluſive in all thirty five in number, are promoted to flags.

By this promotion the three Colonelcies of marines became vacant, which have been filled by the following officers:—Sir George Fairfax, ſir James Saumarez, and capt. Thornborough.

By this large and liberal promotion, fifteen poſt ſhips become vacant, which will be filled with poſt captains now employed, or promotions from the inferior ranks.

The treaſure and jewels which the king of Naples carried away with him from Naples are to a very large amount. For five nights before the departure of the royal family, confidential ſervants were employed in removing it from the palace to the houſe of ſir William Hamilton, from whence it was embarked in the boats, belonging to the Britiſh ſquadron. The royal family likewiſe embarked from the arſenal, in the boats belonging to the Vanguard.

Count Zenobio is now in a Portugueſe priſon, and is experiencing the truth of what he has ſo often aſſerted, that the ſearch after theoretical freedom is by no means favorable to real liberty. The count's purſuit after imaginary freedom, is likely to end only in a diſcovery of the different degrees of convenience in the gaols of different countries.

Sunday morning arrived at Dover a cartel from Gravelines, with priſoners but no French papers were ſuffered to be put on board. The cartel returned again in the evening for France.

By the priſoners who came over in the cartel, ſome of whom are officers, who had read the Paris papers in France, we learn that it was generally underſtood that a renewal of the war with the emperor was decided.

In conſequence, the directory had ordered a new military conſcription of three hundred thouſand men to be levied for attacking Germany, and it is ſaid that every man of the age between 20 and 30 is to be ſent to the armies, except thoſe whoſe ſituations affords them particular protection. This new levy was partly intended to reinforce the army of the Rhine, while a reinforcement was alſo intended to be ſent in the frontiers, and a large body of troops to Breſt.

Such is the news brought over by the paſſengers in the cartel. There is undoubtedly ſome inaccuracy in ſtating the number of the new requiſition.—For the preceding military conſcription of 200,000 men went to effect in its operation perſons upwards of 20 years old, and it is undeniable that the meaſures was not carried into effect in a great number of departments; while on every occaſion the detachment of new conſcripts were conſiderably decreased by desertions on their way to join the armies.

It can hardly be supposed that the directory would under such circumstances, have recourse to the expedient of raising 300,000 men more, on a plan similar to that which had both failed & excited a great degree of discontent in different parts of France. We are therefore inclined to think that the original number of 200,000 which was to have been raised by the 1st military conscription, has been merely extended to that of 300,000.

It is also reported that the directory has laid a very heavy tax upon personal property, to be paid by early instalments.

A mail from Lisbon arrived on Monday, brought to Falmouth by the Prince of Wales Packet, after a passage of four days. The communication is of a very uninteresting nature.

Letters from Madrid state, that according to the general opinion of the best informed people, the expedition of the French against Portugal will not take place.

The court of Madrid has not refused the passage of the republican army, as stated by some of the papers; but certain arragements have been made between that and the cabinet of Luxemburgh, which will have the same effect. The letters state, that the court of Madrid has bought off that passage, so dangerous to Spain, by a sum of money to be given to the French government, and to which the court of Lisbon is to contribute its proportion.

The strong fortress of Ehrenbreistein has been starved into a surrender to the French, after a siege of 21 months.

THE ORACLE.

YORK. Saturday, June 8.

Last Tuesday being the anniversary of his Majesty's birth day, the same was observed here with demonstrations of joy; the militia of this town assembled on the beach, the officers and men of which made a fine appearance; the Queen's Rangers, doing duty in the garrison, fired three vollies with such exactness, as would do credit to the most experienced troops, and reflects the greatest honor on the officers of that corps, for bringing it to its present high state of discipline; after which, a Royal Salute (21 cannon) was fired by the Royal Artillery. At night the Government Buildings were superbly illuminated, at which place, his Honor the President, gave a splendid ball and supper on the above occasion.

PARIS. January 12.

Extract from the report sent to the minister at war, by Bonnamy, general of brigade, and chief of the staff of the army of Rome.

Head Quarters, at Tera, 15th Nivose, Jan. 4.

Citizen Minister,

THE general in chief sends to the Directory an account of the difficulties he has had to surmount in taking possession of Pescara and Gatea, and finally in conducting the right wing of the army before Capua.

General Mack, dismayed by our victories, and wishing to gain time to receive the reinforcements which admiral Nelson had promised him, solicited an armistice, which was refused. I send you copies of his letter and gen. Championet's answer.

Capua is occupied by a strong garrison, and is supported by general Mack's entrenched camp at Caserta.—Here this general fancies he can defend Naples; it would have been better, however, that he had not abandoned the excellent positions on the Garigliano without fighting.

I proceed, citizen minister, to the report which I have to make of the marches, of the successes, and of the position which the army now occupies.

In my report dated from Frescati, I informed you that general Rey was advancing with the 7th and 25th horse chasseurs, the Polish legion, and some pieces of light artillery, to Fondi. Having reached this position, he received orders to take possession of the batteries which defended the defiles of St. Andro, seduce Gatea, and to pass the Garigliano. While the movements made by general Rey demonstrated his intention of reaching that point, the first division marching in two columns successively occupied the camp of Fayols, before Frescati, and those of Vellatri, Cisterna, and Valmontona.

General Lamoine having taken Aquilla, received orders to march to Sulmona, the central parts of all the roads of both the Abruzzoes. This movement was decisive; it had the double effect of harrassing the left flank of the enemy, while gen. Duhem hung upon their other quarter, and of cutting off their retreat, by bringing about a junction of our two divisions.

Gen. Duhem was on his part to march to Prescara, & to take possession of it.

Gen. Lemoine, in his march to Sulmona, was flanked by a column which took the route of Tivoli, Vicovaro, Sercurcola, &c. and defended the left flank of the first division, while it opened a passage to the right of gen. Lemoine.

Meanwhile, the first division having reached Paperno, Ferentino, and Frosinina, continued its march in two columns—that of the right, commanded by gen. Matthieu, composed of the 50th and 97th of the line, and some squadrons of the 16th dragoons & 19th chasseurs, took possession of Ceprano, & of its bridge over the Garigliano; the left, after having advanced beyond Fora, passed through Allatri, Veroli, Casmara, carried the entrenchments at Castellania, and crossed the Garigliano at Ifota, took a more advanced position; the 11th being on the road to Capun, and the 12th occupying Fora & Arpinau.

This division, during its difficult march, took 80 pieces of cannon, which the enemy did not venture to dispute with it.

Such was our position at Fondi, at Sora, when gen. Kellerman at last announced the reduction of Viterbo. He immediately received orders to proceed in three marches, from Rome to Paperno, where he arrived on the 30th Dec. The gen. in chief then detached his cavalry to the first division, and ordered general Rey to join him at Fendi, with the remainder of his troops, where he arrived on the 10th in the evening.

The reinforcement which gen. Kellerman brought to the right of the army enabled the general in chief to pursue the enemy. He therefore took a position on the Malfa with the first division; from the Malfa he advanced to Tora, where the road branches to Capua, Fenafro, and Saint Germano, and finally at Calvi.

The Neapolitans, with the exception of some few posts before Capua, occupy the whole of that city, the left of Volturno, and the Campella Carzerra.

Notwithstanding this bold march the possession of Calvi was not perfectly tranquil with respect to the fate of his wings. He had received no news of gen. Rey, and no intelligence had reached him from the divisions of gen. Lemoine and Duhem, because the officers who carried the dispatches were long in arriving in consequence of their having to travel round about three-fourths of a circle of the immense positions which the army occupied. At last on the 3d of Jan. we were informed of the surrender of Pescara, and the reduction of Gatea.

The general in chief waits with impatience 'till the different divisions of the army be united. Another battle, and this monarchy, which has insulted the French republic, shall disappear.

COUNCIL OF FIVE HUNDRED.

Sitting of the 19th Pluvoise (Feb. 7.)

The following message, addressed to the council by the executive directory, was read by one of the secretaries:

The army of Rome, now the army of Naples, was attacked the 2d Pluvoise, by an innumerable multitude, composed of the remnants of the Neapolitan army, the Lazzaroni and the peasants, all well armed, well conducted, and inflamed by the torch of the most delitious fanaticilm.

The soldiers of liberty, [of devilry] surrounded on all sides, routed the assailants in every point; and after three days signalized by prodigies of valour, which the preceding victories of the republicans alone render credible, all the obstacles were surmounted, and the army established itself in Naples. The energy of the Neapolitan patriots, so long restrained, was reanimated with their voice was heard and united with the clemency of the conquerors, it converted into a holy enthuſiaſm for liberty, the fanaticiſm with which the hearts of a deluded multitude had been inflamed. The Neapolitan republic was proclaimed, and a proviſional government organized.

The reading of this meſſage was followed by the warmeſt acclamations, and the hall reſounded with ſhouts of 'Long live the republic!' Several patriotic airs were played by the council's band of muſic, and ſimilar ſhouts were again reiterated.

Leſage Senault—"The unexampled ſucceſſes of our armies are every day more and more entitled to the gratitude of the nation. I move that the council do declare that the army of Rome, at preſent the army of Naples, continues to deſerve well of its country."

The motion was agreed to, and the meſſage ordered to be printed.

Duriquet.—"I do not addreſs you for the purpoſe of adding to the admiration which has been excited in you, by the reading of the directory's meſſage. I will not diſhonor this aſſembly by repreſenting to you the ſhame of a king who had not the courage to ſtand or fall with his ſubjects, nor that of his ſwaggering general, who after ſo many boaſts has been indebted for his ſafety to the generoſity of the victorious general. I ſhall confent myſelf with ſtating to you, that notwithſtanding the difference of numbers, that city, which contains a population of four hundred thouſand ſouls, was taken by eight thouſand Frenchmen.

"At length the rights of man are proclaimed upon the fineſt ſoil which the ſun enlightens, and we behold one tyrant leſs, and one republic more."

SUABIA, (Germany) March 8.

When the Auſtrian army and the army of the Empire paſſed the Lech, on the 4th inſt. very remarkable general orders were iſſued by the Archduke Charles, in which he takes a ſuccinct view of the various occurrences which have led to the preſent poſture of affairs, ſtating that the French have taken the moſt improper advantages of the retreat of the Auſtrian troops, violently obtained poſſeſſion of Ehrenbreitſtein, oppreſſed the right bank of the Rhine, and carried their demands at Raſtadt to a height that muſt diſgrace the German name, and not deigned to return an anſwer to any remonſtrances.

It is added, that they are now prepared to over-run Germany with a numerous army, extend the republic of Switzerland to the Danube and the Lech, & thus continually add encroachment to encroachment.

MANHEIM, March 2.

This city is now in poſſeſſion of the French. In conſequence of a capitulation concluded between the French gen. of brigade, citizen Ney, and the Palatine gen. Mann, 300 French troops, infantry and cavalry, entered the town about nine this morning, and will ſoon be followed by many more.

RASTADT, March 7,

On the 3d every thing was ſtill in a quiet ſtate at the Auſtrian head quarters at Friedberg, but on the 4th a conſiderable train of artillery paſſed by Augſburgh, on its way to Ulm.

The contents of the convention of the 1ſt of Dec. 1797, and the ſecret articles of the treaty of Campo Formio, have now been made public. This convention is to the following purport:—

"For the execution of the treaty of Campo Formio, and the annexed convention, the plenipotentiaries of his Majeſty the Emperor, King of Bohemia and Hungary, and plenipotentiaries of the French republic, with the French general appointed to carry the proviſions of the ſame into execution, have agreed to, and reciprocally guaranteed the following articles:

1. The troops of the Emperor, and King of Bohemia and Hungary, and the troops of the empire in his pay, ſhall evacuate the territory of the Empire by the 25th of Dec. and withdraw into the hereditary ſtates of his Majeſty, and beyond the river Inn.

2. The contingent of the Emperor ſhall retire over the river Lech, and not be employed in the fortreſſes of the empire.

3. The troops of the garriſon of Mentz ſhall not amount, on the 25th of Dec. to more than 15,000 men.

4. On the ſame day the French army ſhall evacuate the Venetian territory, of which the emperor ſhall take poſſeſſion.

5. Fifteen thouſand French troops ſhall remain in the ſaid Venetian territory, as well to garriſon the different fortreſſes as to maintain order.

6. On the 20th of Dec. the troops of the Emperor ſhall evacuate Manheim, Philipſburgh, Ehrenbreitſtein, Ulm, Ingoldſtadt, and Wurtſburgh, and reſtore them to the ſovereign to whom they appertain. The artillery, ammunition, and proviſions belonging to the Emperor in theſe places, ſhall at the ſame time be removed.

7. The troops of the Emperor, and the artillery, ammunition, and proviſions, appertaining to his Imperial majeſty, ſhall be removed to Mentz in ſuch a manner that this operation ſhall be terminated by the 30th of December.

8. On the 10th of Dec. the French troops ſhall blockade Mentz, but leave the communication open to the Auſtrian troops.

9. Before the 8th of Dec. the plenipotentiaries of the Emperor ſhall declare to the empire that it is the intention of their ſovereign to evacuate the territory and the fortreſſes of the empire.

10. The plenipotentiaries of the emperor ſhall take care to procure the ſurrender of Mentz to the French troops on the part of the elector of Mentz and the empire during the negociations, ſo that the French troops may be in the city on the 30th of Dec. and ſhould the elector of Mentz or the empire refuſe their conſent, the French republic ſhall compel them to it by force.

11. The French generals in the vicinity of Ehrenbreitſtein, ſhall afford to the Auſtrian troops, which evacuate that place every aſſiſtance on their march; and furniſh the Auſtrian generals with horſes, carriages, and every thing neceſſary for the conveyance of artillery, ammunition, or proviſions.

12. The French and Ciſalpine troops ſhall by the 30th of Dec. evacuate Parma-Nuova, Oſoppo, Porto, Legugo, Verona, and the two caſtles, and Venice and Venetian territory to the line of demarcation.

13. The commander in chief of the troops of the Emperor in Italy, and the commander in chief of the French troops ſhall take all the neceſſary meaſures to ſecure the execution of the 6th article of the treaty of Campo Formio. Theſe two generals ſhall alſo provide for the removal of all obſtacles which may obſtruct the taking poſſeſſion, by the imperial troops, on the ſtipulated 30th of Dec. of the territories and fortreſſes, of which poſſeſſion is to be given them according to the ſaid article, and the 5th article of the annexed ſecret convention.

14. Should magazines of warlike ſtores & proviſions appertaining to the French republic, remain in theſe territories and fortreſſes at the time they are taken poſſeſſion of by the troops of his Imperial majeſty, all neceſſary protection and aſſiſtance ſhall be granted for the removal of ſuch magazines.

Given and ſigned at Raſtadt, the 1ſt of Dec. 1797, (11th Frimaire, 6th year of the French republic.)

STRASBURGH, March 5.

The Helvetic directory has been inveſted with greater powers by the two councils, in order to be able to act with more energy in caſe of war.

March 6.

The diſcuſſion of the Diet of Ratiſbon is impatiently expected, but that town is too near Auſtria, and too much ſurrounded with the military to expect an iſſue unfavourable to the court of Vienna. The caſe is very different at Raſtadt, where the conduct of Auſtria is conſidered as inimical to the empire. It is believed that the greater part of the ſecular princes will ſeparate themſelves from that ambitious power, ſhould it ſucceed in plunging Germany into a new war.

Frontiers of ITALY, Feb. 26.

The French have begun their hoſtile movements againſt the Auſtrians, and only wait for orders from Paris to commence their operations with vigour.

Mantua is proviſioned for three years and the garriſon reinforced to 19,000 men. The Auſtrians are likewiſe making great preparations for war—troops and ammunition are daily arriving—the batteries of Trieſte are furniſhed with additional artillery; and ſome entrenchments thrown up on the frontiers.

GENOA, Feb. 14.

According to the lateſt accounts received here from Alexandria, Buonaparte is indefatigably employed in the organization of Egypt, & his army is 30,000 ſtrong; beſides which, he has organized another army of 50,000 men, conſiſting of Copts, Druſes, &c. which is much devoted to him. He only waits for the ſinking of the Nile, to proceed on his expedition.

LONDON, March 17.

Advice was yeſterday received at the Admiralty, that a conſiderable convoy, with naval and other ſtores, and having on board a large body of troops, had arrived at Breſt from Bourdeaux. Seven frigates and ſeventy gun-veſſels at Havre, have been diſmantled, and the crews conveyed to Breſt. The numerous privateers of Cherbourg have experienced the like fate, and the fiſhermen along the entire of the coaſts of Britany and Normandy have been put in requiſition. The Breſt fleet thus recruited, and now in every reſpect ready for ſea, conſiſts in the outward road of ſix ſhips of 110 guns, and nine two-deckers; and in the inner road there are twelve ſhips of the line nearly equipt for ſervice. In conſequence of this intelligence, orders were iſſued from the Admiralty for reinforcing the ſquadron of Adm. Kingſmill, and to expedite as much as poſſible the equipment of the ſeveral ſhips preparing at Portſmouth, &c. for ſea.

The Dutch marine, by uncommon exertions, has not only repaired the loſſes which it ſuſtained in the action of the 11th of October, but attained a more formidable appointment than it has known pending the war. The fleet in the Texel is in readineſs for ſea.

It appears that the main body of the French army began to croſs the Rhine in the afternoon of the 1ſt inſt. The advanced guard under the command of generals Lefebvre, Vandame, and Klein, having paſſed early in the morning.

The Rhine was alſo paſſed on the ſame day at Huninguen, by the right wing of the French army, and at Germeiheim by the left wing. A corps from the left wing was deſtined to inveſt Philipſburg, which it was thought would ſoon ſurrender.

The letters from Straſbourg ſtate, that the French army is not to halt for five days, and it ſeems probable that general Jourdan is determined to advance by forced marches to Ulm, where the main body of the Auſtrian army, under the command of the Arch Duke Charles is ſtationed.

On the 2d inſt. the executive directory paſſed an arrette, appointing citizen Jourdan commander in chief of the armies of the Danube, of Helvetia, and of the army of obſervation; citizen Barnedotte commander of the army of obſervation, under the orders of citizen Jourdan; and citizen Maſſena commander of the French army in Helvetia, under the direction of the commander in chief of the ſame army.

The main body of the army under Jourdan is ſaid to have received large reinforcements; under theſe circumſtances we may every day expect intelligence of an action between the French army and that of the Archduke.

Thurſday ſe'nnight a court martial was held on board the Gladiator, at Portſmouth, on James Hailv, a ſeaman, belonging to the Achilles, for ſtriking a midſhipman, in the execution of his duty. The charge being fully proved, he was ſentenced to be hanged.

Tueſday morning an account was received at Lloyd's of the capture of his majeſty's ſhips Orpheus, of 32 guns, and the Fox of do. by a French ſquadron in the Eaſt Indies; but no official account is yet received at the admiralty of theſe loſſes.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, June 15.

Last Wednesday at one o'clock, his Honor the PRESIDENT, came down to the Legislative Council in the usual state, and being seated on the Throne, was pleased to make the following SPEECH to the two Houses of Legislature:

Hon. Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, And Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

I have the honor of meeting you again in Parliament, to co-operate with you in whatever may tend to promote the true interests, or establish the prosperity of this Province. Nothing, however, occurs to me at present, which appears to press for immediate consideration, except the renewal of such necessary laws as may be near expiring; and that, in the course of your deliberations, it may possibly strike you, as it has me, that the increasing population of the towns (particularly of this capital) begins to call for a Police adapted to their varying wants, and the more orderly government of their respective inhabitants.

I have it in command to inform you, Gentlemen, "that your very loyal and "dutiful joint Address to his Majesty, "towards the close of your last session, "was received by the King in the most "gracious manner; and that his Ma"jesty was pleased to express his pecu"liar satisfaction at the attention paid "by the Legislature to the future hap"piness of his faithful subjects in Up"per Canada, by the means they are "taking to lay the foundation of sound "learning and religious education for "the benefit of the rising generation."

I have likewise received from the Secretary of State, an Order of Council, confirming the reserved Act, passed in the first session of the present Provincial Parliament, for extending the provisions of the Marriage Act that was passed in the second session of the last Parliament.

The articles of a Provisional Agreement, made and entered into at Montreal, on the eleventh day of last February, by the Commissioners from this Province and from that of Lower Canada, will be submitted to your consideration; together with the Inspector's Reports of articles (on which duties on importation have been imposed by the Legislature of Lower Canada) which passed the Coteau du Lac upwards, between the first of January and the thirty-first of December last,

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

I have directed the accounts of the Provincial Revenues received and paid by the Provincial Treasurer since the Recess, to be laid before you, for your information and examination.

Hon. Gentlemen and Gentlemen,

I am happy to inform you, that the intelligence communicated to me in the beginning of the winter, respecting a combined attack of this province, said to have been in preparation, from the side of the Mississippi, turns out to have little or no foundation. It has, however, had the pleasing effect of evincing our internal strength to repel any hostile attempt from that quarter. For I cannot sufficiently applaud the very animated exertions of the Lieutenants of Counties, and the loyal spirit and zeal exhibited by the Militia of the several districts on this occasion—whereby two thousand select Volunteers from the respective corps thereof, were immediately put into a state of readiness to march with their arms at a moment, to wherever they might be ordered; and I am persuaded, that the rest would have soon followed with equal alacrity, if their services had been wanted.

PETER RUSSELL, President, &c. &c.

York, 12th June, 1799.

A report prevailed in Ireland, as appears by the Dublin papers of the 18th of February last, that several French ships of war had been seen off the coast; but there is no certain account of the enemy having made any attempt to land.

In the county of Clare, it appears an engagement had taken place between the insurgents and the military; for the Dublin Journal says, "By the latest accounts from Ennis, we learn that troops have marched from Limerick against the insurgents in that neighbourhood; a short conflict took place, in which the rebels were totally routed and dispersed; several of their leaders have been taken, among others the infamous Burke, who was expelled the college of Dublin for blasphemy; and O'Gorman, who, at the instigation of the editor of The Press, engaged last March in the plan to assassinate Mr. Macartney, and was for that and other crimes expelled the college. Burke has been hanged at Ennis; O'Gorman is in Limerick goal. The country is nearly quieted by this timely interference of the military power."

Defeat of the French.

LONDON, March 24.

Observer Office, Sunday evening 2 o'clock.

THE Hamburg mail due this day, arrived at twelve o'clock, and brought the gratifying and important intelligence of the defeat and retreat of the French army in the country of the Grisons, communicated through various channels; but particularly by a letter from Lindau, on the Lake of Constance, dated on the evening of the 8th instant to the following effect:

The French army, under the orders of general Massena, on the night of the 5th, passed the Rhine near Sargans, between Chur and Feldkirk, and on the following morning, advanced with rapidity on general Auffenburg's corps, which it drove back, and cut off its communication with the main body of the Imperial army. General Hotze, however, being apprized of these movements, early on the morning of the 7th advanced from Feldkirk; an action, dreadfully sanguinary, ensued, and was maintained during the greater part of the day; but in the event, the French were defeated, and compelled to cross the Rhine with very considerable loss.

The loss of the Austrians was considerable; the regiment of Stern had 40 men killed, and several wounded.

Small corps of the republicans on the 7th attempted to cross the Rhine at four several points on the skirts of the Grison country and Vorarlberg, namely, at Haldenstein, Ragatz, Werdenberg, and Saletz, but were each repulsed by the Austrians.

General Hotze profiting by his victory, immediately penetrated from Chur into the canton of Glarus, where thousands of Swiss malcontents were crowding to join him.

Lindau on the 7th, was occupied by four companies of the regiment of Bender, and a considerable train of artillery followed them.

The news of these movements reached Ulm on the 9th, and was communicated to the army.

The accounts from Ulm are to the 11th inst. At that period the Arch Duke Charles had his head quarters at Mindenheim, and his army had advanced as far As Memmingen. Gen. Jourdan had, on the 9th, halted at Villengen, and general St. Cyr at Rothweil. Their patroles had been pushed as far as Rothenburg, Tubingen, Rentlingen and Nagold; but the part of the main body of the republican army, which was advancing against Ulm by Stockade and Reidlengen, had no advice of the disaster sustained by that column under Massena, fled with great precipitancy towards Schafhansen and Constance for his support.

But for this unexpected occurrence, Jourdan had reached Ulm on the 10th inst. The advanced corps would have previously met at Mindenheim & Mosskirch. His army had been reinforced by some columns from Switzerland.

The French general Souhane has occupied Fribourg, and the whole of the Brisgaw.

The imperial army in Bavaria comprise 115,000 men; of these 80,000 had on the 8th inst. crossed the Lech. They are represented by accounts from Ulm, Frankfort, &c. as full of animation and confidence. Many of the regiments of infantry had two and three hundred supernumeraries;—and were complete, and better appointed than at any former period. One hundred and twenty pieces of ordnance had been collected at Ulm on the 6th, and the Archduke Charles had impressed 5000 waggons, and all the horses of the adjacent country, to hasten the conveyance of troops, cannon, &c. to the theatre of war, and all the staff officers at Vienna have been ordered to the army.

Hostilities had not commenced in Italy, but the armies were all in motion.

In Switzerland 20,000 militia had been ordered to the frontiers.

The cabinet of Vienna has appointed an ambassador extraordinary to the court of Berlin, and on the 9th inst. he was on the eve of his departure.

Field Marshall Suwarrow left Petersburgh on the 27th ult. to join the Austrian army in Italy.

The Archduke Charles, in an address to the generals and armies of the emperor and the empire, dated Augsburg, March 4, respecting the commencement of hostilities by France, observes, that the forces of the emperor and empire had scarce retired under the faith of the solemn treaty concluded a year since with France, than that power subjugated the Swiss for the purpose of obtaining an establishment on the flank of Germany; "refused to let provisions enter into the fortress of Ehrenbeitstein in opposition to the most precise agreement," and ultimately forced the starved, but gallant garrison to evacuate the place.—His royal highness proceeds to recapitulate the aggressions of France, which, instead of making atonement, demanded if the Germans "were disposed to prepare any resistance to future operations of that kind."—To our answer, "If hostilities were put an end to by the French—if Ehrenbreitstein was evacuated—if the French army was retreating from the Right Bank—if the French troops in Switzerland, which threatened Germany, were withdrawn—and if a reasonable peace was concluded at Rastadt, founded on the rights, not the slavery of the empire," no other reply was made on the part of France, than that it was hoped the Diet would agree to such a resolution as France might wish."

The deputies at Rastadt prepared to depart from thence the instant they were informed that the French had required Philipsburgh to surrender.

A very strong British squadron now blocks up the port of Naples; the confequence of which was, a great icarcity of proviſions was felt there.

Intelligence was laſt night received in town, that the Dutch fleet, in conſiderable force, and with a large body of troops on board, had ſailed from the Texel. The public have been ſome time apprifed of the extraordinary preparations for the equipment of this fleet, and were, by our laſt number, informed that they were ready. It is therefore highly probable that, profiting by the abſence of our ſhips, they have put to ſea. In the much wiſhed for event of our falling in with them, there is every reaſon to look for an additional wreath to that ſtupendous laurel which, we truſt, will bloom for ever.

A perſon arrived in town laſt night from Flanders, aſſures us, that the Belgic rebellion, as the French are pleaſed to ſtyle the exertions of that gallant people for their liberty, ſo far from ſuppreſſion, has acquired conſiderable ſtrength by the accounts from Germany, and that the want of proper leaders, arms, and ammunition alone, prevents the aſſemblage of ſuch an army as would inſure the retreat, or extermination of their oppreſſors.

In the Council of Five Hundred, on the 9th, it was propoſed, that women and foreigners ſhould be precluded wearing the national cockade, and that any Frenchman who ſhould diſgrace it, ſhould be confined four years in irons.

Letters from Conſtantinople of the 23th ult. ſpeak with confidence as to the reſult of the preparations making for the Egyptian expedition; they mention a report being prevalent, that Buonaparte had cauſed himſelf to be proclaimed Sultan of Egypt. A diviſion of the Ruſſian and Turkiſh troops which which had been deſtined againſt Paſwan Oglou, had proceeded to join the Pacha of Acre, who aſſures the Porte that Buonaparte, notwithſtanding the ſtrong fortifications which he has conſtructed for his defence, would be ſhortly in his power.

The Hamburgh Gazette of the 19th inſtant ſtates, that on the departure of the mail from Vienna, a report was general there, that two Engliſh regiments, under the orders of general Doyle, aided by a ſtrong corps of Ruſſians and Turks, had landed at Salerno, and in connection with the Lazzaroni, had attacked and retaken Naples from the French.

THE DEFEAT CONFIRMED.

March 26.

Yeſterday morning a cartel arrived at Dover from Gravelines, with ſixty-one maſters and mates of merchantmen.—Theſe perſons bring a confirmation of the defeat of the French by the Auſtrians in the Griſons country. Their account adds, that the French had experienced a very ſevere defeat indeed.

Yeſterday two perſons of the names of Pierrepoint and Mitchell, who repreſent themſelves to be American merchants, were arreſted at their apartments in Surry ſtreet, Strand, by Sayers and Townſend two of the Bow-ſtreet officers, under authority of a warrant from the ſecretary of ſtate, on ſuſpicion of being concerned in treaſonable practices.

Mr. Mitchell's ſervant, a Frenchman, was alſo taken into cuſtody and committed to the houſe of correction, Cold Bath Fields. Mr. Pierrepoint and Mr. Mitchell were committed to the care of different meſſengers.

A large quantity of papers, &c. were ſeized and brought away by the officers.

BREMEN, MARCH 19.

The Archduke paſſed the Lech on the 4th, at Auſburg, and after having thrown ſix battalions into Ulm, he advanced rapidly againſt the enemy, and will loſe no time in meeting with them, while the enemy on their part have penetrated rapidly in Suabia.

It was reported at Raſtadt on the 9th that a little ſkirmiſh of poſts had taken place on the frontiers of the Griſons, and the French miniſters aſſerted that it terminated favourably for Meſſena. It is not, however, in this quarter that the great blow will be ſtruck; and it is about three or four marches from the Lake of Conſtance that I expect to hear of the great engagement between the Archduke and Jourdan. The plan of the French is to cut this prince off from the Tyrol, in order to take the country in flank, and thus to penetrate more eaſily into the hereditary dominions.

The letters from Upper Germany inform us, that the archduke Charles has joined a great part of his forces at Meiningen, on the heights of Luc. Preparations are making in Italy, on both ſides, with great alacrity; but we do not yet know that hoſtilities have taken place, and we are alſo ignorant whether admiral Nelſon has diſembarked the Ruſſian and Turkiſh troops in the kingdom of Naples. The ſituation of the republicans is, however, at all events, very precarious there, and it is with difficulty they are able to maintain their poſitions. Cevita Vecchia, ſo far from having ſurrendered, maintains a very vigorous reſiſtance to the French.

Philipſburg ſtill holds out. Its garriſon conſiſts of 2000 troops of the empire; but they are choſen troops, and diſtinguiſhed themſelves at the end of the campaign of 1795, and in that of 1796. There is little doubt, but that city will defend itſelf vigorouſly. The land landgrave of Heſſe Caſſel is employed in raiſing 12,000 men.

Wurtzburg is in the poſſeſſion of the Auſtrians. The Hans towns, and particularly Hamburg, appear to be under great apprehenſions, though I know nothing that the armament in the Texel, which conſiſts only of 6000 men, is intended to go againſt them.

According to the report of a perſon of my acquaintance, who had arrived yeſterday from Rotterdam, the Belgic inſurgents had advanced as far as the foreſt of Solguez, and one of their ſmall corps, has advanced about two leagues from Bruſſels; they have alſo been able to excite new commotions in the ci-devant Flanders, and are ſtill with the major part of their forces in the Cam.

A circumſtance of a very extraordinary nature occurred on Saturday laſt, of which the following are the authentic particulars:

On Saturday morning early, the right hon. lord Camelford arrived at Dover in one of the night coaches from London, and went to the city of London Inn. After taking his breakfaſt, he walked about the pier, enquiring for a boat to convey him to Deal. One Adams, a boatman, offered to take his lordſhip for one guinea. Lord Camelford called him aſide, and after ſome converſation, told him, that he thought he ſhould have occaſion to go to the other ſide of the water, and that he wiſhed to be landed at Calais, as he had ſome watches and muſlins which he wiſhed to diſpoſe of in France. He then bargained for what he ſhould pay to go to Calais; the boatman aſked fifteen guineas—lord Camelford ſaid he could only give ten, as his goods would not allow a large ſum. At length it was agreed he ſhould pay twelve guineas, and go off in the evening.

Adams in the interval, conſulted with his brother, who had a ſhare in the boat, and they agreed to acquaint Mr. Newport, the collector, of the converſation that had paſſed. Mr. Newport accordingly planned that the perſon ſhould be ſuffered to go into the boat, and be there ſeized. At ſix o'clock Adams called at the city of London Inn, and lord Camelford and he went to the water ſide.

He recommended his lordſhip to put on one of his great coats, as he would be cold, which he did—Lord Camelford got into the boat, where there were four men, and having ſeated himſelf, Mr. Newport ſeized him, and ſaid—"You are my priſoner." Lord Camelford ſurrendered without oppoſition, and was immediately taken to the cuſtom houſe. There was found upon him a brace of piſtols, and a ſhort dagger two edged, about eight inches long, and rather curved, there was alſo in his pocket a letter in French, addreſſed to ſome perſon in Paris. He cut a moſt ſtrange and dirty appearance, being cloſely cropped, wore an old round hat, blue coat, white waiſtcoat, faſtian breeches, and boots ſplaſhed all over.

At 11 o'clock on Saturday night his lordſhip was put into a poſt chaiſe, and brought to the Duke of Portland's office yeſterday morning about half paſt 11, under the care of Mr. Newport and the boatmen.—About 6 a privy council met, conſiſting of the lord chancellor, Mr. Pitt, Mr. Windham, the duke of Portland, the ſolicitor general, Mr. Wickham, and one or two gentlemen, who ſat an hour, examining Mr. Newport, the collector, &c.—Lord C. is committed to the cuſtody of Johnſon, a king's meſſenger.

His lordſhip is ſuppoſed to have been actuated by ſome mad project, but preſumed in no ſhape hoſtile to the intereſt of his country.—He told the boatman at Dover when negociating with him, that Turnbull, who robbed the mint, was a fool, and knew not how to ſet about getting to France. On their queſtioning his lordſhip what his name was, he ſaid Camelford: but they did not dream of having in their cuſtody a peer of the realm, worth 30,000l. a year, and related to ſome of the firſt families in the kingdom, and were not undeceived until they arrived at the ſecretary of ſtate's office.

Next day this nobleman (lord Camelford) was again brought up to the duke of Portland's office, but was not examined. The lord chancellor and ſome other lords of the privy council met there for a ſhort time. Lord Camelford was remanded into the cuſtody of Mr. Johnſon the meſſenger.

Mr. Pitt and lord Grenville declined attending, leaving this extraordinary affair to the deciſion of the other members of his Majeſty's council. Lord Chatham, it is ſaid, was alſo abſent on the occaſion. The ſituation of theſe perſonages is very diſtreſſing on account of their family alliance with this diſtinguiſhed object of ſtate ſuſpicion; and nothing could be more pure and honorable than their conduct in withdrawing from a deliberation which their preſence might be ſuppoſed in any degree to influence.

The lateſt news from Kingſton, Jamaica, per The ſchooner Rhoda, capt. Brown.

KINGSTON, (Jam.) March 12.

HIS majeſty's ſhip Aquilon, with a Spaniſh ſchooner, & the Daniſh ſchooner Eliza, from Cape Francois, bound to St. Thomas's, with cotton, arrived on Sunday evening.

A paſſenger on board the Eliza informs that the frigate lately arrived at Cape Francois from France, mounts 44 guns, ſhe brought out 40,000 dollars, but was not permitted to enter the harbour; ſhe lies in a place about ten miles to leward of its Her crew are reported to be in a ſtate of mutiny.

It is mentioned that general Touiſſant's commiſſary has publiſhed a proclamation, ſignifying that in ſpite of the mother country, and the enemies of the iſland, the colony ſhall be free and independent.

Yeſterday morning his majeſty's packet-boat Adelphia, captain Rattray, ſailed from Port-Royal, with the mail for Great Britain.

His majeſty's ſhips Acaſta, capt. Forſter; and Legere, capt. Quinton, alſo ſailed yeſterday morning. The former on a cruize, and the latter as convoy to the packet to a certain latitude.

Two foreign ſchooners ſailed for the main yeſterday.

The brig Britannia, Spotſwood, one of the homeward bound fleet, put back yeſterday, having been run foul of by a ſhip off the Mole the 28th ult.

The lord Duncan is of the Cork fleet.—They ſailed on the 4th Jan. under convoy of the Southampton and another frigate, and ſhe parted with the fleet on the 8th. We had not learnt any news by her conveyance.

March 9.

His majeſty's ſhip Solebay, captain Points, arrived yeſterday at Port Royal with the veſſels from Europe under her convoy, ſhe had then in charge from Martinique only. The ſhips from London, ſailed from Portſmith on the 3d of January, under convoy of the Hydra and Penelope frigates, and Echo ſloop of war; the Penelope only accompanied them to the latitude of Madeira. Near Madeira they fell in with 27 ſail of the Cork fleet, which ſtaid by them, and at Barbadoes were joined by the remainder; we do not learn of the capture of any veſſels belonging to either fleet. The Echo ſloop of war, has gone to Northſide, with the veſſels in the fleet deſtined for the ports there; the Generous Planter, Johnſon, has gone into Port Morant; and the Bellona, ——; Foſter Batham, Spencer; Union, Meyrick; Vulcan, Honeywell; and Euphrates, ——; are gone to Black river.

General Trygg came out to Martinique in the Hydra, Yeſterday arrived three foreign veſſels with mules and horſes. The ſchooner Adventure, from Jacmel, bound to St. Thomas's with coffee, ſent in by his Majeſty's ſhip Squirrel, arrived yeſterday.

March 4.

Saturday arrived at Port Royal, the Daniſh ſchooner, Experiment, captain M'Intoſh, a cartel from Santa Cruz, in ſeven days with diſpatches.

It appears certain that Prince Frederick of Orange is dead of a malignant fever, he caught in viſiting the military hoſpitals. He died on the 6th of Feb. and not on the 26th of Dec. as reported in the French papers.

The ſpirit of hoſtility to the union, daily increaſes in Ireland, and ſhews itſelf in greater force. On the 7th inſt. the county of Cavan came to reſolutions againſt it, of which the two following are the principal:

Reſolved unanimouſly, That no terms can be offered by Great Britain, ſufficient to compenſate to this kingdom for the loſs of its legiſlature, and be they what they will, they muſt ever be precarious, as they will depend on the will of the Britiſh parliament.

Reſolved unanimouſly, That the repreſentatives of the people were, upon their elections, inveſted with a temporary power of acting for their conſtituents, & we ſhall conſider it as a moſt flagrant breach of the ſacred truſt repoſed in them, if by any act of theirs, they ſhould extinguiſh that power by which they were created.

A veſſel has juſt arrived here from Briſtol in 44 days; it is aſſerted that the conqueſt of Portugal has been effected by the French army in ſeven days, that the queen embarked for Loudon—that the Breſt fleet reached Ireland, where it landed a conſiderable number of troops and where the ſpirit of oppoſition to government is ſtronger and more general than ever. A letter from Demarara to a gentleman in this city, dated March 2, mentions, that four large frigates full of troops, had arrived at Surinam on the 13th of February. It was not known whether they were French or Dutch.

ADDRESS

Of the Honorable the LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL to his Honor the PRESIDENT's SPEECH.

To the Hon. PETER RUSSELL, Prefident, adminiftering the Government of the Province of UPPER CANADA, &c. &c. &c.

May it pleafe your Honor,

WE, his Majefty's moft dutiful and loyal fubjects, the Legiflative Council in Provincial Parliament aflembled, return your Honor our thanks for your moft gracious Speech; and will be ever ready to co-operate with your Honor in whatever may tend to promote the true intereffs, or eftablifh the profperity of this province.

We fhall take into immediate confideration the renewal of fuch neceffary laws as may be on the point of expiring; and alfo the expediency of eftablifhing a police for the more orderly government of the feveral towns within the province.

It affords us the moft fincere pleafure, that the meafures we joined in recommending, in order to lay the foundation of found learning and religious education for the benefit of the rifing generation, have been approved of by his Majefty; and we fhall pay proper attention to the fubject of the provifional agreement with Lower Canada.

While we rejoice that the intelligence refpecting a combined attack upon this province from the fide of the Miffiffippi, turns out to have had little or no foundation—we are pleafed that it has been a means of evincing our internal ftrength, and manifefting the zeal and alacrity of the militia to repel every hoftile attempt: and we are perfuaded, that they will be highly gratified, by the flattering terms in which your Honor has been pleafed to fpeak of their conduct. J. ELMSLEY,

ADDRESS

Of the COMMONS HOUSE of ASSEMBLY to his Honor the PRESIDENT's SPEECH.

To his Honor PETER RUSSELL, Efq; Prefident, adminiftering the Government of the Province of UPPER CANADA, &c. &c. &c.

May it pleafe your Honor,

WE, his Majefty's moft loyal and moft dutiful fubjects, the Commons Houfe of Aflembly of the province of Upper Canada, in Parliament met, beg leave to return to your Honor our thanks for your Honor's Speech.

We fhall be ready to give our aid in the renewal of fuch expiring laws as may be found neceffary; and our deliberations fhall be turned to the conffideration of a police bill.

We are moft happy to find our addrefs of thanks has been fo graciouffly received by his Majefty; and we are extremely thankful, that the Royal approbation has been given to the act for extending the Provifions of the Marriage Act.

We fhall take into our ferious conffideration the articles of provifional agreement, as modified by the late commiffioners, as well as the accounts which your Honor has been pleafed to order fhould be laid before us. And we have only to add, that it affords us the higheft fatisfaction to learn, that the inhabitants of this province have been fo unanimouffly determined to oppofe any attempt which might have been contemplated to diffturb its flourifhing improvements; not doubting, that fimilar energy will be fhewn by all claffes of the people, to prevent the introduction of French principles, and preferve uncontaminated the conffitution which the mother country has given us.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 22.

SIR Sidney Smith, brother to the Britiſh ambaſſador at this court, who has been ſo long expected, arrived here towards the end of laſt month in the Tyger of 84 guns. The wind being contrary, the Tyger could not ſail paſt the Seraglio, and was therefore obliged to come to anchor behind the Caſtle of Seven Towers. Sir Sidney, with his ſtaff, marine guards, and a number of ſoldiers, and ſome French emigrants, repaired, by deſire of the Porte, to the beautiful palace of Baylos, formerly occupied by the Venetian ambaſſador.—The above emigrants are ſaid to be thoſe who aſſiſted Sir Sidney to eſcape from the Temple at Paris.

Yeſterday Sir Sidney aſſumed the character of accredited naval miniſter of the King of Great Britain at the Porte, a diplomatic character very proper at the preſent criſis, and of which hitherto there has been no inſtance. Captain Smith, it is ſuppoſed, will direct the operations of the Turkiſh navy during the preſent war. He will not long remain here, as he will ſail towards the end of the month, when ſeveral Turkiſh ſhips, now fitting out in great haſte, ſhall have joined his ſquadron.

The Pacha of Acre, who is now marching againſt the French in Egypt, has demanded 10,000 purſes, or about four millions of florins, to defray the expences of the war, to pay his troops, &c. which has been complied with.

A Ruſſian ſhip arrived here, brings intelligence that the port of Alexandria has been bombarded by the allies.

The French government, through the intervention of the Spaniſh, Swediſh, and Batavian ambaſſadors, has expreſſed its wiſh to re-eſtabliſh its ancient friendſhip and alliance with the Porte, with offers to cede all the iſlands in the Adriatic ſea, and other poſſeſſions on the coaſt of Dalmatia and Greece, viz. the iſlands which formerly belonged to the Venetians, viz. Corfu, Cerigo, Cephalonia, &c. [of ſome which, however, the French are no longer in poſſeſſion] as alſo to withdraw immediately after the treaty is ſigned, all their troops from Egypt.

To theſe offers the Porte has replied, that the French having broken one treaty of peace and amity without cauſe, and made a hoſtile attack on Egypt, the Porte had been compelled to enter into an offenſive and defenſive alliance with Ruſſia and England, which it was determined faithfully to fulfil.

As we are ſo much in want of intelligence from Egypt, tellegraphs are to be erected by the advice and inſpection of ſir Sidney Smith.

A French tartan that had eſcaped from Alexandria, has been taken by a Turkiſh corſair and carried into Chio. The French on board, 25 in number, ſay that an epidemic ſickneſs has broken out in the army of Buonaparte.

From all parts of the Crimea & from Ozakow, Ruſſian troops are on their march to the harbour of Sebaſtopolis, to be embarked there for Conſtantinople, where they will be joined by a Turkiſh armament, intended to effect a landing in Italy. Magazines are already formed for the uſe of theſe troops at Conſtantinople, and in Zante.

The Ruſſian envoy, gen. Tamara, has been preſented by the Grand Seignior with a ſnuff box worth 50,000 piaſtres.

European News.

VIENNA, February 22.

The archduke Joſeph was received on the frontiers of Ruſſia with great ſolemnity, and conducted on his way to Peterſburgh with the utmoſt pomp. The Ruſſian troops in Upper Auſtria are to be conſiderably reinforced; 20,000 Ruſſians are on their march to Agram in Croatia, and when united they are to be employed in Italy. The emperor Paul has declared his determination to reinſtate the king of Naples in his dominions.

BREMEN, March 5.

According to our laſt advices from Raſtadt, which are of the 22d ult. every thing wears a warlike aſpect. The French would, it was then expected, enter Suabia in a very few days, and would in the firſt place take poſſeſſion of the Briſgau and the duchy of Wertemburgh. The archduke Charles, who is watching all their motions, appears to wiſh that the odium of commencing hoſtilities ſhould lie on them, and will not make any hoſtile motions until he ſhall learn that they have entered Suabia and the Briſgau. The conduct of this prince leads us to ſuppoſe that the court of Vienna will return no anſwer reſpecting the Ruſſian troops, but that it will quietly await the courſe of events without provoking war, though in a ſtate of defence, from the goodneſs and number of his troops. Ulm and Conſtance are two points to which a number of troops are defiling; the archduke Charles ſtill remains poſted behind the Lech, with the main body of the army, increaſed by the greater part of the troops who were in Bohemia, ſo that the whole cannot be eſtimated at leſs than 50,000 effective men.

With reſpect to Italy, though but in poſſeſſion of very imperfect accounts of what has happened ſince the capture of Naples, we yet know for certain that more than half of the army of Championet was deſtroyed by the Lazzaronis, and that the neceſſity of putting a ſtrong garriſon in that place, renders the French army unable to compleat the conqueſt of that unhappy kingdom. If, as I have before ſaid, a number of Ruſſian and Turkiſh troops ſhould be diſembarked on the coaſt of the Adriatic, as well as at Civita Vecchia, it will be eaſy to regain the territory which has been loſt, and even to tranſfer the theatre of war to the gate of Bologna.

NUREMBURG, February 28.

The Auſtrian troops on the frontiers of Bavaria, reckoned 40,000 men, are to receive conſiderable reinforcements from Bohemia. Magazines have been eſtabliſhed at Weden and Amberg.

LONDON, March 19.

Laſt night Paris Journals, from the 12th to the 14th inſtant inclusive, were received in town. They contain more important intelligence than has lately come from that quarter. On the 12th and 13th inſt. the directory ſent meſſages to the two councils, containing a formal requiſition that a declaration of war againſt the Emperor and the Grand Duke, might be decreed by the French nation. None of the journals that have arrived, contain full copies of theſe important documents; but the following extract from the Patriote Francois, of the 14th, will enable our readers to form tolerably correct ideas reſpecting them.

" Council of Five Hundred, 23 Ventoſe, March 13.

" Delbrel, the ſecretary, read ſeveral meſſages from the council of elders, containing the reſolutions of that council on the ſubject of the meſſage of the directory, ſtating that the French republic is at war with the emperor, king of Hungary and Bohemia, and with the grand duke of Tuſcany.

" The directory has explained at length in its meſſage the complaints of the republic againſt thoſe two powers. It declares, with reſpect to the emperor, that the treaty of Campo Formio was miſunderſtood in its principle, and not carried into effect in one of its principal articles; and that the conduct of the Auſtrian cabinet has been always in oppoſition to peace. It adverts to the cold reception of our ambaſſador Bernadotte, at Vienna; to the affront offered to him there; to hypocriſy of that court in the negociations of Selta, which was the more evident, becauſe baron de Degelman did not repair to Paris; to the ſending of the count Collentzel to Berlin and Ruſſia; and to the difficulties raiſed at Vienna to receive the Cisalpine ambaſſador. It finally demonſtrates the hoſtile diſpoſition of the emperor, with reſpect to the march of the Ruſſians across Moravia and Auſtria, which are on the confines of Bavaria, already occupied by an army of 100,000 Auſtrians.

" The directory in the ſame meſſage accuſes the grand duke of Tuſcany of perfidy towards the republic, and of connivance with the enemies of France. It expoſes his ſecret negociations with the cabinet of St. James's, particularly by the poſſeſſion of Leghorn by Engliſh againſt which he merely oppoſed ill diſguiſed efforts.

" The meſſage concludes with a formal propoſition of declaring war againſt the emperor and the grand duke.

" It was ordered to be printed, and was received with ſhouts of " Long live the republic !"

Already have the French begun their operations. The Patriote of the 13th gives the following account of their firſt ſucceſſes:

" We joyfully announce a happy prelude of ſucceſs on the part of our armies. A courier juſt arrived from Switzerland brings intelligence that the troops under the command of Maſſena and another general, have taken 4600 Auſtrians, together with the commandant of Coire (Chur) the capital of the Griſon country, and all the ſtaff of that army."

No further particulars are mentioned nor has any official communication been made on the ſubject.—The Auſtrian general, count Bellegrade, was according to the laſt advices, at Coire; but had an officer of his rank been made priſoner, the Paris papers would not have failed to notice it.

It was only the 2d inſt. that general Maſſena entered the country of the Griſons. His army loſt no time, we ſee, in proceeding to hoſtilities; and it is probable, therefore, that before this the armies that have croſſed the Rhine have regularly opened the campaign; for the notes and proclamations received by the laſt mail may now be conſidered as mere blinds to lull the Germans into an idea that they meant only to induce the emperor to order the Ruſſian troops.

The following appear to be the different poſitions of the French armies that have croſſed the Rhine, according to the moſt recent advices:

The French column under general Bernadotte, which paſſed the Rhine near Manheim, of which it took poſſeſſion, continued its route with the utmoſt rapidity by Hubelberg and Heilbron. It is ſaid that the general made this haſte for the purpoſe of being before hand with the Auſtrians, and to form a line from Philingen and Heibron, along the Necker, on both ſides of which river are high mountains and advantageous poſitions.

General Bernadotte, after croſſing the Rhine, ſummoned the Fort of Philipſburgh to ſurrender, which the governor refuſed. The army under general Jourdan marched direct into the interior of Suabia, leaving a garriſon in Offenburg. His principal head quarters were, on the 5th inſt. at Villingen, in the Black Foreſt.

General St. Cyr, who commands the left wing of the French army, has entered the Duchy of Wirtemburg by the Kniebis mountains, and has taken poſſeſſion of Stutgard. The duke, who has for ſome time paſt been at open war with the Provincial Diet, had repaired to Louiſbourg. The Paris papers report that he and the ducheſs will come to England.

The next papers may be expected to contain very important facts. The Patriote Francois of the 13th, ſtates, that the Auſtrians had paſſed the Lech, had advanced beyond Ulm, and that in a few days the two armies would be in ſight of each other.

PARIS, March 12.

Accounts from Italy ſtate, that the ſecond Ruſſian ſquadron has ſailed thro' the Dardanelles, and has been joined by a Turkiſh detachment. They have both on board land forces, which are to be put on ſhore at Palermo, and they are under the command of admiral Nelſon, to attempt a deſcent upon Calabria.

Louis Buonaparte, who arrived yeſterday from Egypt, waited upon the directory, and communicated ſatisfactory news from that quarter.

We learn from Ancona, that the Turks are throwing up fortifications on the coaſts of Albania, ſince they have heard of the progreſs of the French in the kingdom of Naples.

The majority of the Piedmontele have declared themſelves in favour of an union with France.

LONDON, March 16.

It will be ſeen, that if we can credit the details which the republican Journals have at length ventured to give on the Neapolitan war, that kingdom has fallen in a manner as extraordinary as fatal, and which is without example in ancient or modern hiſtory. We ſee the Neapolitan army, led by its king and directed by an able general, after ſucceſſes due to the diſpoſitions made by the latter, loſe by treaſon and cowardice theſe firſt advantages, are repulſed to the gates of the capital—We ſee it afterwards conduct itſelf in a manner ſo oppoſite to military duty and ſentiments of patriotiſm, as to force its prince to deſpair of his country, and its general to ſeek for ſafety amongſt his enemies—We ſee the people at once diſcontented with the conduct of the army and of the government, take up arms and turn them with a blind fury againſt the ſervants of their ſovereign, againſt the chiefs of the army, againſt the better order of citizens, and at laſt againſt the French, and combat theſe with a degree of courage worthy of a better fate. Thus Naples preſents to us the ſingular example of an army abandoning its ſovereign, of a ſovereign forced, in ſome meaſure, to abandon his army, and of a people who, without imitating the firſt, or obeying the delegated authority of the ſecond, wiſhed at the ſame time themſelves to take place of both. By not ſtanding forward before the French approached ſo near the capital, and by then attacking them with fury and obſtinacy, the Lazaroni diſplayed all the want of foreſight, and the inſtinctive courage of a ſtill barbarous people. How much have we not to regret, that it was not poſſible to give union and regularity to the different means of defence and preſervation which the Neapolitan government poſſeſſed? How much above all have we not to deplore the torrents of blood which have been ſhed in vain, and the deva ſtating fury to which the conquerors gave themſelves up? According to their cuſtom, they have offered to the vanquiſhed, by way of conſolation, the government of the French republic!

March 21.

As this paper was going to preſs, we learnt that French papers had reached town of the 15th and 16th. They confirm the account of the French having beat the Auſtrians at Coire, the capital of the Griſons, after a bloody engagement, which place they have taken.

An account has been received by the Hamburgh mails, of a proclamation by the archduke Charles, in which he declares his intention of immediately marching to the attack of the French, in conſequence of their having croſſed the Rhine.

At Milan it was reported, that a letter had been received from general Lamus, ſtating, that the Pacha of Syria, at the head of an army of 60,000 men, had been defeated in a general engagement by Buonaparte, who had in conſequence penetrated into Syria, leaving general Kleber in command of the forces in Egypt.

The hiſtory of the French march againſt Naples, is a complete hiſtory of Jacobiniſm. General Mack was ſurrounded by treaſon on all ſides. Both officers and men were ſold to the French.

Vice admiral ſir W. Parker is appointed to the Newfoundland ſtation, vice Waldegrave, who retires—Sir C. Curtis, to the Cape, vice Chriſtian, deceaſed—Sir C. Cotton, Halifax, vice Vandeput, who retires.

The Sun of laſt night, March 23, ſays, " the report of the ſecret committee of the houſe of commons will prove the moſt important and intereſting that ever engaged the attention of the Britiſh nation." It will (if the Sun is not miſinformed) appear that a plan was very near execution for maſſacreing the members of both houſes of parliament, and afterwards attacking the king's palace!

The precautions obſerved in France by the agents of the directory are carried to an exceſs which is alone ſufficient to convey an idea of the ferocity of the French government. We learn from an Engliſh gentleman recently arrived from France, that the moſt minute ſcrutiny is ſet on foot to prevent the Paris journals from being brought directly to London, and that the paſſengers are ſtripped of their ſhirts and carefully examined, leſt they ſhould conceal any papers about them. The journals themſelves muſt be allowed to contain very incomplete information, and that of the moſt partial kind, and are in almoſt every reſpect calculated to promote the views of the directory.—The inſertion of any article which tends to make known the repeated acts of deſpotiſm and cruelty committed by the executive government, is alſo lately prohibited under the penalty of death or tranſportation. We are informed from the ſame quarter, of the death of 15 emigrants, who were ſhot early one morning at Paris, without any mention having been made of their names, and after a notice given to the printers not to relate any circumſtance of the tranſaction, on pain of death!

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, June 29.

The public are much indebted to Mr. John Mc. Dougal, who was appointed one of the path-maſters at the laſt town meeting, for his great aſſiduity and care in geting the ſtreets cleared of the many and dangerous, (eſpecially at night) obſtructions therein; and we hope, by the ſame good conduct in his ſucceſſors in the like office, to ſee the ſtreets of this infant town vie with thoſe of a maturer age, in cleanlineſs and ſafety.

Monday laſt being the anniverſary of the feſtival of St. John, a proceſſion, in conſequence, was formed at the Garriſon of Lodge No. 3; which walked down to Miles' tavern, where they met their Brethern of No. 8, Harmony Lodge: from thence they walked down to the Legiſlative Council room, where an eloquent ſermon was delivered on the occaſion, by the Rev'd. Robert Addiſon; after which they returned to their reſpective lodges.

[We think the following highly applicable to the preſent period.]

" Battered and bankrupt fortunes mended here." COWPER.

NOTHING is more frequently heard at this day than the cry of " hard times! hard times! and no money!" The complaint is ſo frequently made that no one can diſcredit the exiſtence of the evils; but theſe, like moſt others, are eaſily eradicated, if the proper means are made uſe of. And it will ever prove true, that moſt evils of this nature, are cured by a contrary practice to that which produces them. From an inquiry into the characters of thoſe who make the complaint, and the cauſes which give riſe to it, I doubt not but means may be deviſed to prevent a continuance of it. I have heard the complaint ſo frequently made of late, that I was induced to pay ſome attention to the characters of thoſe who made it. And I find them to be compoſed of two claſſes—UNFORTUNATE & the LAZY. Thoſe of the firſt claſs will always be found ſo long as ſickneſs and accidents are entailed to the human race; and as it is not generally owing to any folly of their own, they have a juſt claim upon the compaſſion and charity of their fellow creatures; the number is commonly ſmall, and to the honor of humanity, they are moſt generally kindly relieved. Of the latter many are to be found—They are ſeen walking the ſtreets, and aſſembling at public places from morning until night generally deſtitute of employment, and conſequently of property; yet affect an air of importance, and have an unconquerable itch for being thought gentlemen—deſpiſe the ſober and induſtrious perſon; get truſted to pay to-morrow; borrow money, for a few days, which days often grow into months, and ſometime years before the payment is made; a credit they think is half pay, and pay the other half in promiſes which they know they are unable to fulfil. Now to make times eaſy with this claſs of people & to bring money into their purſes, I would attend to the following rules—Never get truſted for any thing unleſs you have a certain proſpect of paying for it at the appointed time. Wear the old coat as long as it will laſt with turning and mending, unleſs you can purchaſe a new one with property, being deſtitute of which, will be of no injury to yourſelf, your family, or your creditors. Attend ſteadily to ſome honeſt and induſtrious employment. Never ſpend as much in the courſe of the day as you earn; but always lay up at night ſome of the earnings of the day. Always let your dress correspond with your business & circumstances. Never be seen spending in a tavern or grog-shop, what your families are suffering for at home; for remember that a bitter every morning thro' a year, amounts, at the year's end, to twenty-two dollars and a half—and a fling once a-day amounts to forty-five dollars and a half—which, employed in some honest business, would in a few years make money plenty in your purses. Retrench every unnecessary expence, and avoid going into company where you must spend without advantage, what your honest creditors ought long ago to have had. Never let your note run long upon interest, but save every farthing that you can earn to take it up.—Let industry & œconomy be your most intimate companions, for no honest employment can so much disgrace a man, as idleness and extravagance. Be governed by your purse and not by fashion, and you will find the times to meliorate & money to grow plenty. TRUTH.

From a late London paper.

Among the many instances of the instability of all human things, great names, we find, are peculiarly liable to sad reverses;—it is not long since William Shakespeare was sent to Botany Bay for a burglary; and on Wednesday, John Milton was convicted at the Old Bailey of stealing bees wax!

York, June 22, 1799.

Council-Office,

27th April, 1799.

☞ Notice is hereby given, that Proposals will be received at this Office for the purchase of the Mill-Seat at the Humber, with the Saw-Mill now standing thereon, with about eight hundred and fifty Acres of Land, including the Meadow on the West side of the River, above the Spring. There will be a condition in the Deed, restraining the purchaser, on pain of forfeiture, from obstructiug in any manner, direct or indirect, the free passage of the Fish up and down the said River; and another condition, obliging the Lessee to take all other necessary measures for preventing the Fish being destroyed in the Mill-race by the Mill-wheel or otherwise, by erecting and maintaining in good Repair proper Racks for that purpose. Persons desirous of purchasing the said Mill-seat and Lands, must give in their Proposals in Writing, and sealed up, before the first day of October next, on which day, if an acceptable offer be made, the purchaser will be declared, and a Deposit immediately required of two shillings and six-pence in the pound on the purchase money. A Deed will issue under the Great Seal without delay. One third of the remaining Purchase-money must be paid on the first day of October, 1800; one-third on the first day of October, 1801; and the remaining third on the first day of October, 1802; and good Security given for making these Payments at the above-mentioned periods.

Downing-ſtreet.

The following letter from Mr. Conſul Foreſti, has been received at the principal ſecretary of ſtate's office, for the foreign department:

Port of Corfu, March 3, &c.

MY LORD,

I Have the honor to inform your lordſhip, that on the 1ſt inſt. an attack was made by the united Turkiſh & Ruſſian forces on the iſland ſituated in this port, called La Scoglio de Vido, and by the French, L'Iſle de la Paix. After a very briſk fire of about two hours and a half from the ſhips of war, the troops were landed, and the ſaid iſland was captured. An attack was made at the ſame time on the out-works of the town, and fort St. Salvador was taken by the Ruſſian and Turkiſh troops, and the French themſelves evacuated another out-work, called Il Monte di Abram.

On the morning of the 2d, a flag of truce was ſent off by the French commander of the garriſon of the town of Corfu, to the Ruſſian vice-admiral, for the purpoſe of informing him of the wiſh of the garriſon to capitulate; a Ruſſian officer was therefore ſent to the town with the propoſitions of the Ruſſian and Turkiſh commanders, and they were accepted with little variation.

The French ſurrendered priſoners of war, not to ſerve for 18 months againſt Turkey, Ruſſia, Great Britain, Sicily, or the allies.

The capitulation of the garriſon, of which I have the honor to encloſe a copy, was ſigned this afternoon, on board the Ruſſian vice-admiral's ſhip.

I have the honor to be, &c.

SPREDION FORESTI.

End of the London Gazette.

LONDON, April 9.

Yeſterday afternoon we received Paris papers to the 3d inſt. which were ſent to Dover in a neutral veſſel from Calais.

On the 26th ult. gen. Jourdan wrote from his head quarters near Dutlingen, as follows:

Jourdan, general in chief, to Chateauneuf Randon, general of diviſion.

"Head quarters at Weiler, near Dutlengen, 26th March, 7th year.

"Since the 19th I have had ſeveral ſharp actions with prince Charles. In the laſt of them, which took place on the 25th, and continued for 13 hours, I remained maſter of the field of battle, and made 4000 priſoners. But the enemy's army, amounting to 60,000 men, and receiving daily reinforcements, I found myſelf under the neceſſity, tho' victorious, of falling back. I ſhall cover the defiles of the Black Mountains, ſo that the department of the Lower Rhine ſhall have nothing to fear; and I ſhall proceed forward as ſoon as I have received the reinforcements which are promiſed to me. (Signed) Jourdan."

We have here, gen. Jourdan's own confeſſion that his forces are not competent to face the archduke's army; and accordingly he has retreated back a conſiderable ſpace of territory over which he had advanced, under expectations of attacking his royal highneſs before he was prepared to meet him. Jourdan's retreat is now directed, not towards Switzerland, but towards the Briſgau. Having ſo many proofs of his royal highneſs's activity and good generalſhip, we may reaſonably conclude that he will not allow the enemy breathing, but that he will purſue him to the utmoſt point that prudence will permit. If Jourdan is ſuffered to entrench himſelf, and to concentrate the reinforcements which are ſending to him from all quarters, the archduke may in the event loſe all the advantages he has evidently gained.

SUABIA, March 24.

In the action of the 21ſt gen. Jourdan had a horſe ſhot under him. The French gen. Malitor was killed. Private accounts ſtate the loſs of the French to be about 3000 men. They fought bravely, but were overpowered by the ſuperiority of the Auſtrian cavalry. Yeſterday, the head quarters of the archduke were at Hockengheim. Jourdon has his head quarters between Stockach and Engen, ſix leagues from Schaffhuſen.

STRASBURGH, March 26.

We have this day received ſome details of the battle which was fought on the 21ſt and 22d of this month, between the army of the Danube and that of prince Charles. The conteſt was maintained with great perſeverance on both ſides, and the loſs is very great. Our army, which was much inferior to that of the Auſtrians, has loſt ſome ground. It retreated from Sulgau and Aulendorff to Peſulendorff and Meſkiruh; and on the 22d the head quarters were transferred to Stockack, and afterwards to Engen. The centre of the army took a new poſition between that town and Stockack and encamped in the environs of Auch. The left wing, which has equally loſt ground, was poſted between Sigmaringen and Turlingen. The body commanded by gen. Vandame, which was to advance to the left bank of the Danube, drew near to that river on the 22d, and effected a junction with the diviſion of general St. Cyr.

Prince Charles advanced as far as Hohen Thengen, but was attacked on the 22d by troops under the command of gen. St. Cyr. The cavalry, commanded by gen. Hautpoult, diſtinguiſhed itſelf in a very brilliant manner in this engagement, and ſucceeded, after a very ſharp action, in repulſing the Auſtrians, and enabling the army again to march forward. It is even added, that the head quarters were on the 24th to be again transferred to Stockack, and that the military adminiſtrations eſtabliſhed at Fribourg in Briſgau, received orders to follow the army.

General Perino, on his part, engaged the left wing of the Auſtrians on the 21ſt and 22d, on the Lake of Conſtance, between Uberlingen and Moerſpoury, and completely routed it. He advanced with his diviſion and that of general Souham, which form the right wing of the army of the Danube, as far as Bregentz. The communication between Jourdan and Maſſena has not been intercepted.

LONDON, April 10.

We very much fear that the affairs of the Auſtrians in the Valteline are rather deſperate. The following is the letter addreſſed by general Maſſena to the Executive Directory:

Maſſena, commander in Chief of the French army in Helvetia, to the Executive Directory.

" Head Quarters at Rheinek, March 28.

" Citizens Directors,

"I had ordered gen. Lacourbe to attack Finſterminſter; and alſo the diviſion of the army of Italy, in the Valteline, under my command, to attack Glurentz. That general performed his operations in his uſual manner, and his diſpoſitions were made with ſo much judgment, that the enemy was completely defeated. The reſult of the victory is ſeven thouſand priſoners and twenty five pieces of cannon. The troops which compoſe the two diviſions and the gallant generals at their head, are entitled to the higheſt praiſe. General Lacourſe mentions the conduct of the conſcript ſoldiers in terms of the warmeſt panegyric.—According to his information, Finſterminſter, Nanders, and Glurentz, are in the poſſeſſion of our troops. I ſhall have the honor, citizens directors, to lay before you more in detail the circumſtances of this brilliant ſucceſs which happened on the 26th of March. Health and reſpect, (Signed) MASSENA.

The general in chief of the armies of Italy and Naples, to the executive directory.

Head quarters at Caſtel Nuove,
26 March, year 7—at night.

" At break of day I attacked the enemy in his poſition between he lake of Garda and the Adige, with three diviſions. Two other diviſions proceed to attack Verona, while the ſixth covered Legnano.

" The three diviſions on the left carried, ſword in hand, 22 redoubts or ſmall forts which the enemy has planted round their poſition. The ſlaughter was dreadful. After a moſt ſanguinary combat of four hours, generals Dalmas and Grenier drove the enemy from all his poſitions, purſued them without intermiſſion and got poſſeſſion of the two bridges on the Adige.

" The diviſion of Serrurier, on his part, ſeconded by our flotilla, carried all before it along the lake of Garda.

" The two diviſions which proceeded againſt Verona, have powerfully contributed to the ſucceſs of the main attack. They fought with the greateſt bravery from day break until dark, againſt a very numerous body of the enemy.

" Our recruits of the conſcription, rivalled the courage of our moſt veteran grenadiers. Poles, Helvetians, Piedmonteſe, Ciſalpins—all have done their duty, and proved themſelves worthy of fighting by the ſide of Frenchmen.

" The reſult of this battle which does honor to the army of Italy, even compared with its former victories, has put in our poſſeſſion two bridges on the Adige, 12 pieces of cannon, two pair of colours, and about 4000 priſoners among whom are a number of officers. The enemy has, beſides, left on the field above 3000 killed, and a great number wounded.

" General Dalmas has received a ball in his leg, but he ſtill continues to fight notwithſtanding his wound.—General Delaſine received a wound in the thigh, which obliged him to retire from the field. (Signed) SCHERER."

The Paris papers to the 5th inſtant, we received at a late hour laſt night.—The intelligence which they bring is conſiderably of a later date than that of the laſt Hamburgh mail, and is in every point of view of the utmoſt importance.

We find in the Redeſteur, of the 3d and 4th inſt. an account of the two great actions, the one in the Valteline and the other in the Italian territory. In each we are ſorry to ſay, the French appear to have been deciſively victorious.

General Scherer, late French miniſter at war, and now commander in chief of the army of Italy, ſtates, that on the 25th of March he attacked the Auſtrian army, which was ſtrongly entrenched on the banks of the Adige, carried all their redoubts, and had taken poſſeſſion of the two bridges on that river. The loſs of the Auſtrians is rated at 4000 men taken priſoners, 12 pieces of cannon, and two ſtandards; they are ſaid to have left 3000 men dead on the field of battle!

The letter from Maſſena, the French commander of the army of Helvetia, or Switzerland, and which is alſo official, gives an account of an attack on Glurentz Naudes, and ſome other places in the Valteline. Theſe poſts were all carried by the French. The Auſtrians in theſe engagements, which took place on the 25th ult. are ſaid to have loſt no leſs than 7000 men taken priſoners, and 25 pieces of cannon.

The French papers of the 1ſt and 2d inſt. admitted that Jourdan had received a conſiderable check, as ſtated in the accounts by way of Germany. This admiſſion is repeated in ſome of the later gazettes; but there is no further account of the proceedings of the armies the vicinity of the Danube.

LONDON, April 11.

Between the 20th ult. and the 25th the armies of the archduke and Jourdan were engaged in four battles, all of which, and particularly thoſe which were fought on the 21ſt and 25th, terminated in favor of the Auſtrians.—The battle that took place on the latter of theſe days was, we may be confident, fatal to the republican army, and that in a very great degree, as it was in conſequence forced to abandon a large extent of valuable territory, which it was much its intereſt to have preſerved. The French papers are ſilent as to what became of general Ferino after the battle of the 25th. His ſituation on the banks of the lake of Conſtance muſt have been from that time very critical, as his communication with the centre of the French army neceſſarily became extremely precarious, and being placed between the archduke and general Hotze he could not eaſily have faced both of them. We may expect to receive none but good intelligence from that quarter; the Auſtrians have a manifeſt ſuperiority, which the junction of general Zaſtaray will have conſiderably increaſed.

If ſuch ſucceſs as we could wiſh had not hitherto attended the Auſtrian arms in the Tyrol and in Italy we are not leſs inclined to flatter ourſelves that affairs will before long take a more favorable change in thoſe parts. The Imperialiſts will not begin the campaign offenſively until the arrival of the Ruſſian and Hungarian reinforcements. The Auſtrian troops who were beaten on the 26th ult. on the Adige were, beſides, far from being ſo numerous as they are at this moment. Part of the army was then on the Piave, and our private letters inform us that the corps de reſerve which was in cantonements in Friuli and in Carniola did not receive the order for marching until the 12th, and did not carry it into execution before the 16th.

The army of Jourdan, altho' the ſtrongeſt, is not deſtined to take the moſt active part in the campaign. It is from the lake of Conſtance to the Adige that the French will endeavor to make progreſs, and it is there too that it is of the moſt conſequence to the Auſtrians to ſtop them. This conſideration leads us to ſuppoſe that the archduke will ſend reinforcements into the Tyrol, or that it will afford ſtill more efficacious means.

MILAN, March 12.

A report is circulated here, that Buonaparte, with a corps of 18,000 French and a much ſtronger army of the Arabs which has joined him, has entered Jeruſalem, and planted the tree of liberty there.

Letters from Conſtantinople of the 3d of Feb. ſtate, that Buonaparte and ſeveral of his officers and ſoldiers wear the turban; that he has eſtabliſhed the French calendar in Egypt, and ſent a courier to Tippo Saib.

A letter from Conſtantinople of the 5th ſays, a Tartar courier arrived here yeſterday. He comes from Acre, and brings diſpatches from Guzzan Achmed Pacha, general iſſimo of the troops of Syria and Egypt, of which the following is an extract:

" Buonapare, whom God confound, has written me a letter, in which he adviſes me, that he had learned I was making great preparations for war, and that he deſired to know if they were intended againſt him; if ſo, that he would come to ſearch for me in my own country, and treat me as I deſerved. I anſwered him as became me, that theſe preparations were entirely deſtined againſt the miſcreants; that he might, without giving himſelf the trouble, wait for me at Cairo, where I hoped to be ſhortly, and where God would decide between him and the grand ſeignoir, the edge of whoſe ſword, with the help of the Almighty, will ſmite off the heads of his enemies. All the letters and ordinances of the French in that country are dated " the firſt year of Egyptian liberty."—The Arabs did not ſucceed in their late attack againſt Buonaparte.

" The French who have been ſet at liberty, will be conveyed to France in Auſtrian veſſels."

The Reis Effendi is ſtated to have notified to the foreign miniſters at Conſtantinople, that the Engliſh fleet, which blockades Alexandria, has captured two French ſhips of the line, three frigates and four ſmaller veſſels of war. This is probably the French ſquadron lately fitted out at Ancona, and ſaid to be deſtined for the relief of Corfu, but which was by ſome of the foreign journals conjectured to be intended for Egypt.

Lord Bridport ſailed from Spithead on Sunday, in conſequence of government having received intimation that the Breſt fleet is actually in the outer road, having been completely ſtored and victualled by a convoy of tranſports from Bourdeaux, the crews of which were immediately turned over to the men of war. Admiral Berkley's diviſion of the fleet ſailed from Plymouth on Saturday.

The Britiſh ſhip Centaur, entered the Spaniſh harbor of Cumbellas in the Mediterranean, deſtroyed a fort, and burned or took ten veſſels.

LONDON, April 21.

On the 3d of this month an old man, who lived by aſking alms, was found in Bigland Common, near Cartmel, in Lancaſhire, nearly ſtarved to death.—He declared he had nothing to ſubſiſt upon, and was therefore carried to the overſeer of the poor. He ſaid his name was William Farrer. Lodgings were procured for him at the expence of the pariſh, and he lingered till the 9th inſt. and then died. To the great aſtoniſhment of ſeveral people preſent, when he was undreſſed, there were found in his breeches pockets, one hundred and eighty-five guineas and an half in gold, and three ſhilling and ſix-pence in ſilver. He would not allow them to take his breeches off whilſt living, but abſolutely ſlept in them till he died.

Extract of a letter from Liſbon, April 8.

" The French have been defeated—archduke Charles has defeated Jourdan. The latter wounded and gone to Paris. 10,000 men taken priſoners, and about 9000 killed and wounded.

" In Italy the loſs of the French has been ſtill greater; ſeveral Ciſalpine and Sardinian regiments which had joined the French, during the action joined the Auſtrians. Italy, heartily tired of the fraternal hug, is riſing in inſurrection every where."

The French have abandoned the blockade of Philipſburg and have repaſſed the Rhine.

An official letter from col. Williams confirms the defeat of the French at Stockach and Feldkirch. At the laſt they loſt 4000 men; and are recroſſing the Rhine at Bregantz.

United States.

By a late arrival at Portland, London papers are received to the 29th of April, which give detached accounts and confirmations of the defeats and diſaſters of the French in various parts. It ſeems confirmed beyond a doubt, that in Italy there has been three ſeveral engagements, in which the French have been defeated with very conſiderable loſſes. In the firſt, called the battle of Legnego, and Verona on the 26th of March, the French admit that they loſt 2,000 men, amongſt which were generals Vignolles killed and Dalmas wounded.—The Auſtrians took 8 pieces of cannon, 3 howetzers, 32 ammunition waggons and 1100 priſoners. It ſeems that the French attempted to take the city, Verona, by ſurprize, in order to compenſate the army. The battle laſted 18 hours. The Auſtrians loſt 11 officers and 900 men killed—42 officers and 2765 men wounded. The French at St. Lucia, took a 1000 men, but during the action loſt from 8 to 10,000 men.

The ſecond battle was occaſioned by the ſame attempt upon Verona the 30th of March, in which the French loſt 1000 men, together with 1112 priſoners.—On the 2d of April the Auſtrians took 29 officers and 800 privates, priſoners, at Villa Franca, with 2 pieces of cannon, &c.

After the check of the 30th of March, field marſhal La Kray gives an account, that he attacked the French on their attempting to repaſs the Adige, which cauſed a general action; in which, after an obſtinate engagement, the Auſtrians were victorious. When the courier departed they had taken 11 pieces of cannon, 30 ammunition waggons, 7 ſtandards and about 2000 priſoners. The loſs of the Auſtrians was eſtimated at 2000 men: that of the enemy muſt have been far more conſiderable, as the former troops performed prodigies of valor.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, July 6.

Mr. PRESIDENT RUSSELL's SPEECH at the cloſe of the third ſeſſion of the ſecond Provincial Parliament of Upper Canada.

York, 29th June, 1799.

Gentlemen of the Legiſlative Council, and Gentlemen of the Houſe of Aſſembly,

I Am happy that the expedition with which you have gone through the buſineſs of the preſent ſeſſion, enables me to cloſe it ſo ſoon, and to releaſe you from your attendance before the hay harveſt may require your preſence at your reſpective homes.

Although the ſequeſtered ſituation of this province has, through the favor of Providence, hitherto exempted it from ſharing in the calamities of the cruel war which ſtill ravages Europe; I cannot too earneſtly exhort you to recommend it ſtrongly to your conſtituents, not to relax in their attentions to militia duties, and to keep that portion of each battalion (which has been ſelected by my deſire for immediate ſervice) in a conſtant ſtate of readineſs to act when wanted.

I likewiſe recommend it to you, to loſe no opportunity of employing the ability of your reſpective diſtricts, in opening and repairing the great roads of communication through them. For nothing contributes more speedily to the flourishing state of a country, than the facility with which its produce can be carried to market, and its laws, for the due administration of justice, enforced.

I have long lamented, that the difficulty of a land communication with the capital, has prevented my calling you together in winter. Arrangements have therefore been lately made to obviate that difficulty, by opening a road, at the expence of government, to the Eastern settlements. And I have every reason to hope, that the Provincial Parliament may, in consequence, be assembled here in the winter after the next at latest.

Honorable Gentlemen, and Gentlemen,

As it is probable that I may soon return to a private station, I gladly avail myself of this occasion to offer you my most hearty thanks, for the able and cheerful assistance you have constantly given to my administration; and to assure you, that I shall not cease to derive the greatest satisfaction from every advance towards perfection which may be made in the organization of the government; as I sincerely wish for, and shall ever most ardently rejoice in the prosperity of the inhabitants of this province.

PETER RUSSELL,
President, &c. &c. &c.

WE are happy in being informed that no person will be countenanced, or permitted, by the government, to teach school in any part of this province, unless he shall have passed an examination before one of our missioners, and receive a certificate from under his hand specifying, that he is adequate to the important task of a tutor. We conceive this piece of intelligence highly worthy of remark, as it will, in a great measure, prevent the imposition which the inhabitants of this country have hitherto experienced from itinerant characters, who preferred that, to a more laborious way of getting thro' life. And on the other hand, the rising generation will reap infinite benefit from it, as it will tend to stimulate and encourage men of literary characters to make permanent residence among us.

MR. WILLIAM COOPER, teacher of the mathematics in this town, has, not long since, passed an examination before the rev'd JOHN STUART, and received a licence to teach school in this town, and it is to be hoped that all ranks of people will patronize so laudable an institution.

York Council-Office,
July 3, 1799.

☞ Notice is hereby given, that the Townships of DEREHAM and NORWICH in the Western District of this Province, will be sold in blocks of Four Thousand Acres each, on the first of November next.—Further particulars will, in due time, be published in this Gazette.

JOHN SMALL,
C. E. C.

Council-Office,
27th April, 1799.

☞ Notice is hereby given, that Proposals will be received at this Office for the purchase of the Mill-Seat at the Humber, with the Saw-Mill now standing thereon, with about eight hundred and fifty Acres of Land, including the Meadow on the West side of the River, above the Spring. There will be a condition in the Deed, restraining the purchaser, on pain of forfeiture, from obstructiug in any manner, direct or indirect, the free passage of the Fish up and down the said River; and another condition, obliging the Leasee to take all other necessary measures for preventing the Fish being destroyed in the Mill-race by the Mill-wheel or otherwise, by erecting and maintaining in good Repair proper Racks for that purpose. Persons desirous of purchasing the said Mill-seat and Lands, must give in their Proposals in Writing, and sealed up, before the first day of October next, on which day, if an acceptable offer be made, the purchaser will be declared, and a Deposit immediately required of two shillings and six-pence in the pound on the purchase money. A Deed will issue under the Great Seal without delay. One third of the remaining Purchase-money must be paid on the first day of October, 1800; one-third on the first day of October, 1801; and the remaining third on the first day of October, 1802; and good Security given for making these Payments at the above-mentioned periods.

PARIS, April 1.

ON the 11th ult. a convoy of 200 sail, which came from Nantz, Bourdeaux, &c. accompanied by six frigates, under the command of capt. Lebozee, had the good fortune to get safe into Brest.

KONINGSBURGH, March 18.

Letters from Mittau say, that Field Marshal Suwarrow had arrived there from St. Petersburg in five days, and had set off again for the army of Italy, which he commands, and which is to consist of 100,000 Austrians, and 40,000 Russians.

STUTGARD, March 13.

Accounts have been brought here by strangers, who arrived from the neighbourhood of Memmingen, that general Hotz, after having received a reinforcement of 10,000 men, repulsed the French, in his turn, on the 8th and 9th and that he had already advanced as far as Viduz. We are assured that the action of the 10th was decisive.

FRANKFORT, March 19.

It is now reported that a disagreement prevails between Bernadotte and Jourdan. It was expected that Bernadotte would have advanced sooner to act against one of the wings of the archduke and give it employment, while Jourdan attacked the main body of the Austrians. It is said that the head quarters of Bernadotte will, in a few days, be removed to Schwetzingen, and those of general Neid, to Heidelberg. We have a report, though it requires confirmation, that general Bernadotte has applied to the directory for dismission.

March 26.

On the 20th and 21st engagements were fought near Saulgau, and in the neighbourhood of Pfullendorf, between the advanced troops of the Imperial and republican armies, which terminated to the advantage of the former. In the affair of the 21st near Pfullendorf, the two commanders in chief were personally engaged, and the contest, which was sanguinary, lasted upwards of six hours. In the event, Jourdan fell back near 6 leagues towards Switzerland.

KEMPTON, March 23.

Jourdan since the 21st has retreated to leagues nearer Switzerland; his right is still at Constance. A considerable number of French wounded soldiers have arrived here, and a still greater number are sent to Tutlengen, &c. The loss of the enemy in killed, wounded and prisoners, is estimated at 10,000 men.

RASTADT, March 17.

Received at Berlin March 23.

Great part of the army is marching in haste towards Switzerland. The magazines are removed from Offenburg to Fribourg. A number of wounded are arrived at Kehl; and there is a great alarm at Strasburgh. Jourdan is stated to have arrived at Basle, and Massena to have been beat. The peasants massacre the French in the Valteline and the Grisons. It is believed that the archduke has broke through the centre of Jourdan's army, near Stockarch, so that the latter is retreating towards Switzerland, to join Massena if possible.

St. Cyr, who commanded the left wing, has retired towards Heidelbourg, in order to reach Necherthal.

It further appears that the centre and right wing of the French army has been wholly routed. The left wing on the northern bank of the Danube was not engaged, but had, in consequence of the defeat of the other divisions of the army, been compelled to make an hasty retreat, closely pressed by an Imperial column under the orders of general Nauendorff. Some reports state that general St. Cyr, being unable to reach Kniebis, has proceeded to Freudenstadt, which he was endeavouring, by new works, to render tenable: others that he had been brought to an action, and defeated. The whole line from Sigmaringen by Maskerch, Pfullendorf, Nellenburg, Stockach, and towards Shaffhausen, was engaged: the principal action was, however, between Stockach and Aach.

In these battles 7000 French are stated to have been made prisoners.

The particulars of Massena's defeat was not given.

INSPRUCK, March 16.

Gov. Count Bissengen has published the following notice:—

"According to accounts this day received, the Austrian troops posted at Martinsbruck (over the Grisons) under the command of colonel Knesewick, were attacked by the enemy on the 12th inst. with 5000 men. The battle lasted till night, when the enemy notwithstanding all their exertions, were obliged to retire to the heights of Schelim, with considerable loss. On the 15th, the same colonel was again repeatedly attacked, but of these attacks we as yet know not the issue.

[Another letter, same date.]

"The enemy, after the conquest of the Grisons, advanced in great force towards Upper and Lower Ingradien. Our troops have been obliged to retreat from Geinez and Sultz, towards St. Maria; they were too weak to oppose the enemy pressing them on every side.

"At Martinsbruck, however, the extreme pass towards the Tyrol, there was an action on the 14th, in which the Austrians were engaged eight hours; and notwithstanding the French were 5000 strong, and we had only one battalion, they were obliged to retreat.—The levy of the peasants is conducted by general Laudon. News of a battle in this quarter is hourly expected."

Official account from Tyrol.

The Vienna Court Gazette of the 23d ult. contains the following official bulletin:

According to the accounts of the 15th of March, gen. Laudon then occupied the post near Bormin, by which the communication was kept up with the valley of Engadin. The brave militia in Tyrol is every where in motion, shews the best disposition, and supports every where the Imperial royal army, so gallantly fighting for their country.

On the 16th, according to later accounts, gen. Laudon was attacked on the said post of Bormio; and though the attack was several times beat off, and always renewed with more violence, yet the French could not carry that post on that day; but when they advanced again on the 17th with superior numbers, they succeeded in repulsing our people from it. The force of the French who penetrated into the valley of Engadin, is estimated at two whole divisions. This circumstance induced field marshal lieutenant general Bellegarde to let part of the corps of reserve of his army enter the district of Wintschtau, to be prepared at all events.

Official Bulletin from Inspruck, March 19.

"According to official reports received this afternoon, the French division of general Lacombe which enter Engadin, as far as Martinsbruck, has been taken in flank and rear, in consequence of an attack skilfully contrived and executed on the 15th by brigadier general Laudon, by which means the French general Mamoni, several staff and superior officers, and some hundred prisoners fell into his hands. This attack caused the enemy's attempting to break through in great force near Martinsbruck, and supported by some armed Engadins, they wanted to turn gen. Kuefowichi, who commanded the defile of Novellasteig.

"The peculiar bravery of the Imperial royal troops, and the defenders of Tyrol, who hastened to the spot, animated with the same courage, frustrated the plan of the enemy. The enemy on the 17th, at half past five in the morning, attacked general count Alcainly in his position at Martinsbruck, with impetuosity, and superior number from all sides, and repeated their attacks till 11 o'clock with the utmost obstinacy; but they were every where repulsed with great loss, and one captain, two lieutenants, and eighteen privates made prisoners. The enemy also detached a column of 600 men, at the same time, down Novellastic, between Finstermunz and Nauders, with the design of taking the position of Martinsbruck in the rear; but they were kept off by a division of the regiment of the grand duke of Tuscany, and completely routed, and immediately pursued by a company of Tyrolian marksmen. On the enemy's retreat to Spitsberg, a picquet of Warasdines took 347 prisoners. The Imperial troops have done prodigies of valour in the engagements which hitherto took place; and the Tyrolese defenders have also laudably co-operated. The retreat of the above mentioned 600 French troops was so precipitately effected, that, throwing away their musquetry, they took flight over the mountain of Spitsberg, and left the prisoners already mentioned, in the hands of the Imperialists.

LONDON, March 25.

The Hamburgh mail which became due yesterday, arrived in course and brought with it intelligence of the most satisfactory nature, which our readers, as well as ourselves, will feel to be a contradiction of the bad fortune said to have befallen the Austrians, and an account of a victory instead of a defeat.—On comparing the various accounts, the opinion which it seems most reasonable to form is, that the French, sensible of how much importance it was to them to drive the Austrians from their posts in the country of the Grisons, passed the Rhine by marching through the valley of the Mayenfield, with the hope of cutting off the Austrian corps which was at Coire, and maintained only a very precarious communication with the main body of the Austrian army, on account of the nature of the ground, and on account of the season. They succeeded, on the 5th inst. in passing the Rhine, and cutting off the corps of general Auffenberg from the main army, commanded by general Hotze, & which was posted on the frontiers of the Tyrol and of the country of the Grisons. This general, however, as well aware as the French of the importance of the latter country, gave them no opportunity of strengthening themselves there, and of enjoying the advantage which they had obtained. He attacked them on the morning of the 7th, in the Reinthal, and after an engagement, which appears to have been warmly disputed, he defeated them, and forced them to recross the Rhine, with great loss. He did not, however, confine himself to merely counteracting the first success of the French; and not content with having conquered he hastened to improve his victory. He therefore crossed the Rhine himself, and entered the canton of Glaris. It would exceed our limits were we to enlarge on the great advantages of this advance, more important than a victory. Should general Hotze be able to maintain himself for any length of time in the cantons of Glaris, the discontented state of the brave inhabitants of this little canton, and the desire of revenge which animates them, can supply him, and indeed appears already to have furnished him with valuable assistance. The talents of general Hotze, and the esteem in which all his country men hold him, render him more likely than any other officer to succeed in the most desirable of all objects in this war of revolution, that of uniting all the people of the country which is the theatre of war, in opposition to the enemy. If this general should attain his object, and gratify our hopes in this point, it will be in his power to render this very campaign fatal to the republicans, and to force them to dedicate to the defence of their own territories those troops which they had destined for the aggression of other countries. The advantage gained by general Hotze has already had this effect; and we see that the corps of general Ferino, which had advanced by the Villes Foresticres, has hastily retreated, and that Jourdan himself, although less affected by the circumstance, has continued his march with great caution. It is from Switzerland that the Austrians can most effectually protect Germany, and it is on the banks of the Aar that they can defend those of the Danube. These considerations will, we have no doubt, render the war in the Grisons and in Switzerland more obstinate than in any other part.

Our readers will perceive that the archduke Charles has neglected nothing that could tend to stop the progress of Jourdan, and that he has the means of making him some day pay dearly for having entered Germany. If we may give credit to an article from Hamburg, a combined corps of Russians, English and Turks, have disembarked in the kingdom of Naples; and assisted by some of the populace, had driven the French from that capital. The credit which we give to this article is by no means equal to the with which we entertain for its truth; but we cannot help observing, that the small force which the French have in the kingdom of Naples, would render such an expedition by no means difficult in the execution.

LONDON, April 21.

AN INSURRECTION IN HOLLAND,

Has broken out in the absence of part of the French troops. The remaining troops have been massacred.

[The preceding paragraph, we dare to say, is entitled to some degree of credit, as a similar event in that quarter, has long been anticipated.]

April 28.

Gen. Jourdan has resigned, and returned to Paris.

Massena is appointed commander of the French army at Helvetia and Germany, with plenary powers.

Government has received dispatches from commodore Trowbridge, off the Nile, dated Feb. 17th stating the plague to have broken out in Egypt, and that the French, literally, were dying by hundreds. Trowbridge was waiting the the arrival of sir Sy. Smith, to attack Alexandria.

Kehl (on the Rhine) is besieged by the Austrians. The French are 12,000 strong but ill supplied with artillery, 80 pieces of which, going to Kehl, were taken at Frieburg.

April 29.

We have just received Paris papers to Thursday last. The French evacuated Schaffhausen the 15th of Feb. Gen. Scherer has resigned the command of the army of Italy.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, July 13.

THE day of retribution has at last arrived: the defeat of the French by the Austrians comes, via Quebec, in some degree authenticated. The loss of the French was great; but to complete the defeat, their own soldiers turned upon their officers—murdered and robbed them. Thus ere long, will end the reign of that impious crew, the directory.

On the 22d April, says a Philadelphia paragraph, it was confidently reported at Lisbon, that the army under gen. Jourdan had been defeated and himself severely wounded, in an engagement with the Austrians under archduke Charles.

A London paper of April 3, observes, "If any circumstance could make the chance of war between France and America more certain, it would be the number of captures of American ships written down in Lloyd's book of yesterday, and which were noticed in our Plymouth letter yesterday."

The same paper says, "A further armament is coming down the Baltic from Petersburgh, to aid the general operations of the campaign against the enemy."

A letter from cape Francois, dated May 11, received by a gentleman in Philadelphia, concludes with the following important and pleasing article;

"Just as I am closing this letter a vessel has arrived from Hamburgh, in a short passage, bringing accounts of the French gen. Jourdan having been totally defeated by the army under archduke Charles."

Extraordinary Instance of Justice.

THE following Anecdote is asserted to be an absolute fact, and is given upon the authority of a gentleman of distinction, who lately resided a short time at Constantinople. A young Cadi, or Turkish Judge, of great abilities, presided during the trial of a cause, the merits of which were as follows:

A poor man claimed a house which a rich man had usurped. The former held his deeds and documents to prove his right, but the latter had provided a number of witnesses to invalidate them; and to support their evidence the more effectually, he presented the Cadi with a bag, containing five hundred ducats; the Cadi received it. When it came to hearing, the poor man told his story, produced his writings, but wanted that most essential and only valid proof, witnesses.

The other, provided with witnesses, laid his whole stress on them, and on his adversary's defect in law, who could produce none; he urged the Cadi therefore to give sentence in his favour.

After the most pressing solicitations, the judge calmly drew from under the sofa, the bag of five hundred ducats, which the rich man had given him as a bribe; saying to him very gravely, "you have been much mistaken in the suit: For if the poor man could bring no witnesses, in confirmation of his right, I myself can produce at least five hundred." He then threw the bag with reproach and indignation, and decreed the house to the poor plaintiff.

Such instances are very uncommon, and deserve to be transmitted to posterity.

ANECDOTE.

WHEN Talleyrand was in the United States, and on a visit to Philadelphia, he was introduced by Col. B——r of New York, to Mr. Stewart, the portrait painter, and after some trifling conversation, the bishop took his leave, and while he was hobbling down stairs, Col. B——r asked Mr. Stewart what he thought of his friend, he replied, "I think if that man is not a d——d scoundrel, God Almighty does not write a legible hand."

GENTLEMEN,

By giving publicity to the following essay through the medium of your useful paper, you will oblige one who feels for the promotion of literature in this country.

"'Tis education forms the common mind,
"Just as the twig is bent, the tree's inclin'd." POPE.

HOWEVER ignorant we are of the materials of which the human mind is composed, this truth is clear, that in its infant and tender state impressions are made with the greatest ease; and those impressions which are then made, are generally of a very durable nature. It is with the greatest difficulty they are ever eradicated in any future period.—They are often the leading traits in a person's character through life. The certainty of a person's imbibing principles in youth by which his future conduct and character will be shaped, is much greater than that of any other period.

"Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." This being the case, the importance of an early formation of the young and tender minds of youth, cannot be too often, nor too forcibly inculcated: It is a matter of the greatest moment, and he who has the superintendance of the education of a family of children, should consider it an employment of the greatest importance that could devolve upon him.—He is not only acting for himself, but for the community at large, and probably for many generations yet to come. He is forming them for action on the great theatre of the world, where they will undoubtedly act in conformity to the precepts and examples received in their infancy. If a parent then would wish to see his children possessing the respect, honor and esteem of their fellow creatures, he must in their early infancy, instil into their mind principles of virtue; for virtue is the foundation of every action which renders a man a valuable member of society: but if these principles are not implanted while the mind is yet young and tender, it is with difficulty their beauty can afterwards be discovered. When the mind has become inured to vice, the practice of it becomes pleasing and agreeable, and the beauties of virtue have not a captivating power. And I am bold to assert, that it is chiefly owing to the neglect, and misconduct of parents, and those whose duty it is to form and fashion the tender minds of youth, that prisons are so crowded with criminals, and courts of justice have the sulprit so often arraigned before them. Wherever I see a person receiving a punishment, inflicted upon him for a crime committed against the community, I consider him less guilty than those who had the superintending of his education; for had they, when the plants of vice were yet young and tender suppressed their growth—had they represented vice with all its horrors and fatal consequences, it is impossible but it must have taken effect, and made it ever after appear in its true and odious light; who might otherwise have made characters of the first respectability, are dragged in chains to a dungeon, there to spend a miserable and infamous life! What then must be the feelings of a parent, seeing his child in this situation, when he considers himself the primary cause of the infamy and disgrace? And what better prospect than this can those parents have, with whole children our streets are thronged, who no sooner than they are able to lisp a sentence, have their mouths filled with the bitterest curses, the profanest oaths and execrations? It is truly a subject which requires their most serious attention. Most of our children now, as soon as their age will admit of their passing the threshold of the doors, and they are able to articulate a word, learn the most impious language, and to practise every impiety which we should expect to find in the most abandoned character of mature age. Whatever the parent may think of this, with however little attention he may regard it, however trifling it may appear to him, he may rest assured, it is a bold begining towards destruction: It is a sure prelude of the child's rapid progress to infamy. Wherefore, parents, if you wish to save your children, if you wish to make them respectable members of society, if you wish in your old age to receive consolation in their honor, stop their vicious projects and teach them virtue.

GERMANY.

RASTADT, March 31.

THE Auſtrian army never diſtinguiſhed itſelf for gallantry more than in the late battles. The archduke expoſed himſelf to the fury of the enemy's fire. He cauſed general Baron Stauder to be arreſted and conveyed to Vienna, and two of the officers to be ſhot at the head of the army, for cowardice.

It is ſaid the cauſe of arreſting general Stauder was that officer's keeping in his pocket for three days an order of the prince, which directed him to ſend ten thouſand men to the aſſiſtance of general Hotze.

April 4.

The French have repaſſed the Rhine this afternoon in the greateſt confuſion at Ketil. It is ſaid that the archduke is now marching by Schaffhouſen into Switzerland, and only leaves in this quarter a corps of obſervation under the command of general Starry. On the 30th and 31ſt ſome affairs of poſts took place to the advantage of the Auſtrians, but we do not know what are the details of it. What follows has been ſent from Baſle, under date of the 3d.

"Very ſerious diſturbances have taken place at Moſnang and Flawyl, in the canton of Appenzel. The Helvetic directory is in the moſt ſerious alarm on the ſubject, although Maſſena, ſtationed along the Rhine, and having deſtroyed all the bridges ſituate along this river from Conſtance as far as Baſle, promiſes to do impoſſibilities for their ſupport, and aſſures them of the ſupport of the Great Nation. The Auſtrians are expected and deſired with great anxiety. At Auguſt, in the canton of Baſle, adjoining the Teickthal and Villes Foreſtiers, five hundred Swiſs, who were ordered to march to Rhenfeld, have refuſed to go, and returned into Baſle. The legiſlative body have in conſequence of this decreed the pain of death againſt ſuch Swiſs of the regiment appointed as ſhall make a ſimilar refuſal, and have ordered that all unmarried Swiſs without diſtinction, from the age of 20 to 45 years, as well as all married men under 30, ſhall immediately repair to the frontiers.

Baſle has been put into a ſtate of ſiege."

VIENNA, April 3.

Field marſhall Suwarrow leaves this city in a few days, for the army of the archduke, in order to concert the operations of the campaign with that prince and reckons to arrive on the banks of the Adige about the 25 of this month. The Ruſſian troops will have arrived there before him. He would not allow them to proceed upon their march according to the arrangements made by the council of war, as preſcribed by the Auſtrian troops, and obſerved that they were accuſtomed to march faſter, and that they ought not to be ſpoiled. This prohibition has cauſed ſo material an alteration, that the firſt Ruſſian column will arrive in Italy about the 10th, and the others within three days of each other. The emperor has appointed count Suwarrow field marſhal of the Auſtrian troops in Italy, and preſented him with his portrait, decorated with brilliants.

ENGLAND.

LONDON, April 26.

THE Hamburgh mail which arrived yeſterday, brought us further, late and ſtory intelligence from the different theatres of the war. The Auſtrians have, ſince the latter end of the preſent month, been every where victorious.—The battle which was fought on the 5th inſt. between Verona and Mantua, of which we have hitherto only received unofficial accounts, terminated in the complete defeat of the French, who loſt 4000 taken priſoners, ſeven pieces of cannon, and an enormous number in killed and wounded. The Auſtrians, it is ſaid ſtormed the French camp. This battle had been preceded by ſeveral actions, the concluſion of all of which was to the advantage of the Auſtrians; the moſt important of theſe actions began on the 30th, but was not finiſhed till 31; it coſt the French more than 2500 priſoners, beſides a great number of killed and wounded. This ill fortune obliged the republicans to evacuate the port of Buſſolengoon the 1ſt inſt. and all thoſe poſitions which they held between the Adige and the lake of Garda. One private letters from the Auſtrian army in Italy, which bring us the account of theſe events, inform us too, that ſuch is the depreſſion felt in the French army, that they no longer keep their ground even againſt a much inferior force. On the 2d a ſerjeant and 17 men made 100 ſoldiers and 23 officers lay down their arms and took them priſoners, near Villa Franca; Similar inſtances have occurred in other places. In the affair of the 26th near Legnago, the French loſt nearly 3000 killed and wounded, as the French gave no quarter to the Poles of the legion of Dombrowſki, who were engaged in that battle. The Auſtrian army, were on the 3d inſtant 60,000 ſtrong; and thoſe troops full of enthuſiaſm, are very confident of ſucceſs; that 23,000 Ruſſians were expected to join them in a very few days. A great number of deſerters, chiefly Piedmonteſe and Swiſs, were every day flocking to them from the French army. Part of Piedmont and the whole of the States of the church, were at open war with the French. Thirty thouſand perſons of the Breſciencſe had, it was ſaid, taken up arms, and riſen againſt the French.

The republican cauſe was conſidered in Italy as deſperate. General Bellegarde had compelled the French to evacuate the whole of the Tyrol, and was purſuing them into the Griſon country, whence we may expect, before long, to ſee them driven. The Auſtrians had on the 4th entered the Engadine, where they took 300 French priſoners, and three pieces of cannon.—The cruelty and ravages which the republicans had exerciſed in the Tyrol, had been evenged by the peaſantry on all the French parties which they met. The inhabitants of Italy, of the Tyrol, of the Griſons, and of Switzerland, are filled with ſuch hatred againſt the republicans, that they will prove both zealous and uſeful auxiliaries to the allies. It does not appear that general Hotze had as yet attempted any important enterprize againſt the French.—On the 12th it was ſuppoſed at Hamburgh, that this general was at Rhinebeck, but the fact was not certain: he will, no doubt, act in concert with the archduke, whoſe head-quarters were on the 10th ſtill Enghein: but he was making every preparation to paſs the Rhine and to enter Switzerland. As the French could not entertain any doubt that he had this intention, they have ſent a great part of the army of the Danube into that country. It may be ſuppoſed that the French Directory will do all that their power and deſpotiſm will enable them, to render the defence of Switzerland as obſtinate as poſſible; but the diſguſt which the generals have conceived and the depreſſion of the ſpirit of the troops, appears to make it certain that the Auſtrians, tho' they may not have to contend with a feeble enemy, will at leaſt find one capable of leſs exertions than themſelves.

The accounts from Berlin are as late as the 18th. Private letters ſtate there does not appear to be any proſpect of the king of Pruſſia taking an active part in the campaign.

The Batavian directory have decreed that even ſeamen belonging to the merchants ſhipping in that republic, ſhall be placed in a ſtate of requiſition.

The right hon. Rackville earl Thanet, Robert Ferguſon, eſq. Dennis O'Brien, eſq. Thomas Thompſon, eſq. and Thomas Gunter Brown, eſq. were tried before the court of King's Bench on the 25th inſt. for miſdemeanor, in having aſſiſted Arthur O'Conner, eſq. in his attempting to eſcape from the court houſe in Maidſtone, before he was diſcharged by due courſe of law; he having been tried for high treaſon, and acquitted, before a ſpecial commiſſion, held on the 21ſt May laſt, but ordered to remain upon another warrait of high treaſon. Brown, Thompſon, and O'Brien were acquitted; and Rackville earl Thanet and Robert Ferguſon found guilty.

LONDON, April 25.

Twenty thouſand French troops, it is ſaid, are to be entruſted with the defence of Kehl, which is to be attacked by 30 thouſand Auſtrians, while the Archduke penetrates into Switzerland, with the main body of his army. The Auſtrian troops are already in poſſeſſion of almoſt the neighbouring Cantons; but they have not yet been able to croſs the Rhine, as the French have removed all the bridges. It is to this quarter we have now to look for very important military operations. The firſt battle that takes place on the Swiſs territory cannot fail to be followed by conſequences of the greateſt magnitude.

The Ruſſian troops are advancing by haſty marches into Italy, where 100,000 of them, it is ſaid will ſoon be aſſembled; one column of Ruſſians was expected at Verona on the 7th.

Lord William Bentinck is going out Envoy to the Ruſſian army in Italy, whither his brother, lord Frederick, will accompany him.

Orders are iſſued for the immediate recall of the Britiſh troops now in Portugal, the ſecurity of that kingdom being no longer endangered by the machinations of the French Directory; general Tarleton and his military ſuit, are expected home early in the next month.

The 13th of March was a melancholy day for Conſtantinople; almoſt two-thirds of the ſuburb of Pera being laid in aſhes by a dreadful fire. The hotels of the Engliſh ambaſſador, Mr. S. Smith, the Auſtrian internuncio, baron Herbert, and ſeveral other magnificent edifices, were entirely conſumed. The number of houſes conſumed, is eſtimated at 1300.

NAPLES, March 23.

The commander in chief of the army of Naples has ordered a camp to be eſtabliſhed at Acra, a ſmall town about five miles from Naples, in order to prevent the ſoldiers from being corrupted by the effeminate and voluptuous life which they lead in this city, and which they are enabled to do by means of the riches they have acquired by plunder. Calabria ſtill continues to be the theatre of inſurrection, and a column principally compoſed of Neapolitan patriots, left this place a few days ago in order to attack the inſurgents. The communication between Rome and Naples is once more intercepted, and the French couriers have not been able to paſs theſe four days. The peaſants of Campania have again made an irruption from their mountains and attacked the French poſts on the high way.

March 26.

The inſurgents, who ſtill infeſt the high roads, between Capua and Fondi, attacked a poſt defended by ſixty Poles, and put them all to the ſword. The troops ordered to act againſt them are to carry on war of extermination. The fanatic peaſants of Campania exerciſe the moſt horrid cruelties on their victims, and every Frenchman who falls into their hands is uſed in the moſt barbarous manner. Nothing can exceed ſuch exceſſes, but they ſeem to be juſtified by the rapacity of ſome ſcoundrels in our army. Some Frenchmen have been roaſted and devoured, and others have been tied alive to trees, and given as a prey to famiſhed dogs. The peaſants have certainly been robbed of their all, and they have taken almoſt pitileſs revenge. The repacity of the conquerors ſhewed them an example, and they have had recourſe to terrible reprifals. It is ſincerely to be hoped, that the directory will put an end to the ſyſtem of plunder which has ravaged the country, and which muſt be ſtopped one way or the other. This is not the only cauſe of inſurrection, for the gold of Sicily has alſo a great effect. The proviſional government is on the point of publiſhing the Neapolitan conſtitution, which it has been engaged in forming ſince its eſtabliſhment.

P. S. We learn, this inſtant, that the rebels have taken Fondi, and that the French have burnt Traeto, which ſecretly co-operated with the inſurgents. Traera is a ſmall tract on the road from Capua to Fondi.

We underſtand that miniſters yeſterday received accounts by the Hamburg mail that the emperor of Ruſſia has iſſued orders to his cruizers to ſtop all neutral veſſels bound to France, whereever they may fall in with them.

The laſt accounts from India repreſent the Indian powers as perfectly tranquil.

A PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE R.

Whereas we have reaſon to apprehend that divers perſons engaged in the treaſonable conſpiracy againſt us in our kingdom of Ireland, which lately manifeſted itſelf in open acts of rebellion and war againſt us in our ſaid kingdom, have not abandoned their treaſonable deſigns againſt us, and acting in concert with our foreign enemies, are preparing to aſſiſt our ſaid enemies in an invaſion of our kingdoms, and for that purpoſe are endeavouring to excite and ſtir up rebellion and war againſt us in this kingdom; we have therefore thought it neceſſary, for the ſafety of our kingdoms, to prevent all perſons engaged in ſuch treaſonable deſigns from paſſing from our ſaid kingdom of Ireland into this kingdom; and we do, for that purpoſe, by and with the advice of our privy council, order, and do hereby ſtrictly charge and command, that, from and after the twentieth day of March inſt. no perſon whatſoever be permitted to paſs from our ſaid kingdom of Ireland into this kingdom, except ſuch perſons as ſhall be in our ſervice, and actually ſo employed, and ſuch perſons as ſhall obtain a paſſport for that purpoſe from our lord lieutenant of our ſaid kingdom of Ireland, his chief or under ſecretaries, the mayor, or other chief magiſtrate, of ſome city or town in Ireland, or one of general officers, commanding our forces within the ſeveral diſtricts in our ſaid kingdom; and by and with the advice aforeſaid, we do further order, and hereby ſtrictly charge and command, that no perſon whatſoever (except as aforeſaid) coming from our ſaid kingdom of Ireland, be permitted to land in this kingdom without our licence for that purpoſe firſt obtained; and that all ſuch perſons (except as aforeſaid) who ſhall land or attempt to land in this kingdom, without ſuch licence as aforeſaid, ſhall be forthwith taken into cuſtody, and detained in cuſtody until our pleaſure ſhall be further known; and we do further order and require, that all perſons, having ſuch paſſports as aforeſaid, ſhall produce the ſame to ſome officer of our cuſtoms at the port or place to which ſuch perſon ſhall come, before ſuch perſons ſhall be permitted to land at ſuch port or place; and we do hereby, by and with the advice aforeſaid, ſtrictly enjoin, require, and command all and ſingular juſtices of the peace, mayors, ſheriffs, bailiffs, conſtables, and all other our officers and ſubjects, to uſe their utmoſt endeavors for the due execution of theſe our commands.

Given at our Court at St. James's, the fifteenth day of March, one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety-nine, in the thirty-ninth year of our reign.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

Philadelphia, June 15.

A letter received in this city from London, dated April 26, informs, that the archduke Charles, after meeting with ſuch ſignal advantages over the French, had croſſed the Rhine and penetrated into Switzerland, as far as Baſle, where he had his head quarters, to which the Swiſs in great numbers were rallying.

We cannot vouch for the authenticity of this account. It is, however, mentioned with the fulleſt confidence, and has for its authority, one of the moſt reſpectable houſes in London.

NORFOLK, June 11.

RICH PRIZE.

Extract from the log book of the ſhip Ann, Daniel Cook, maſter, arrived here on Thurſday, in 14 days from New Providence.

"May 27, in lat. 28, 8, long. 75, 48 brought to by his Majeſty's ſhip Greyhound, captain Crawly, who informed me the ſchooner then in company, was a Spaniſh prize from La Vera Cruiz, bound to the Havanna, with 39 boxes, containing eleven hundred and fifty thouſand dollars.

NEW YORK, June 18.

We have here to obſerve, that the Nancy is the firſt American veſſel that ever made a voyage to the Iſland of Deſolation; and but one Engliſh ſhip had been there.

His Britannic Majeſty's frigate Boſton, capt. Douglas, arrived at the Watering Place yeſterday afternoon, having ſeen the remainder of the American veſſels to the latitude of ſafety. She is to take in ſome proviſions, and proceed to Halifax.

ALBANY, June 25.

A letter from London, dated the 4th of April, ſays, "1600l. has been voted by the merchants at Lloyd's, excluſive of the 500 guineas before ſubſcribed, to purchaſe a ſide-board of plate, as a preſent to captain Truxton, for his gallant conduct in the engagement with the Inſurgent.

A member of the Chemical Society of Philadelphia, has diſcovered that the ſhells of green peas, which are at preſent thrown away as uſeleſs, make excellent beer and good ſpirit.

On Friday laſt arrived in this city, his excellency ſir Robert Liſton, ambaſſador miniſter plenipotentiary, from his Britannic Majeſty to the United States, and lady.

A gentleman who arrived at New York in the George informs, that on the 21ſt of April, an account of the defeat of Jourdan by the archduke Charles, was received at Cork, from Dover, immediately publiſhed in a hand bill, and ſtuck up in the public places, one of which he ſaw poſted up at the Cork Poſt-office.

As they had previouſly received the account of the former defeat of Jourdan the preſumption is, that the archduke did not ſuffer the republican general to remain long on the ground to which he had retreated; and that he has again "thought proper to fall back."

The oppoſition to the Union was pretty general in Ireland, and a renewal of diſturbances expected, in caſe the meaſure ſhould be perſiſted in.

NEW-YORK, June 10.

Extract of a letter from captain David Treviſt, of the ſhip Matilda, dated St. Sabaſtains, April 24 to a gentleman in this city.

"I am informed by a gentleman from Bourdeaux, that the French army on the Rhine, has loſt 30,000 men—and that their general has quit the army."

Extract of a letter from Rotterdam, to a reſpectable gentleman here, dated April 28.

"The French have been ſeverely beaten in Italy as well as in Germany. The emperor of Ruſſia has laid an embargo upon all the veſſels of Hamburgh in his dominions, and has made a demand on that city of 60 millions of marks banco; which if not paid, he threatens to ſend an army to Lubeck, and take the city. This is conſidered a political manouvre, which will compel the king of Pruſſia to declare on one ſide or the other."

A DEATH STROKE TO IMPERIOUS FRANCE!

Rotterdam papers have been received here as late as April 23, authenticating the great events, related in the London prints. Under the head of Inſpruck, April 9, it is ſtated, that General Kray fought and totally defeated the republican army, tho' with conſiderable loſs. That the French loſt 2500 killed, and 200 horſes, 2000 wounded, 5550 priſoners, including 160 officers, a large park of artillery, 30 ammunition waggons, and 21 ſtandards. General Kray afterwards fixed his head quarters at Villa Franca.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, July 20.

THE inhabitants of the weſt end of this town, return their moſt cordial thanks to Mr. CLARK, path-maſter, for his uncommon exertions and aſſiduity, in removing out of their ſtreet its many obſtacles, ſo highly dangerous to the weary traveller.

TO BE SOLD BY AUCTION,

Council-Office,

27th April, 1799.

☞ Notice is hereby given, that Proposals will be received at this Office for the purchase of the Mill-Seat at the Humber, with the Saw-Mill now standing thereon, with about eight hundred and fifty Acres of Land, including the Meadow on the West side of the River, above the Spring. There will be a condition in the Deed, restraining the purchaser, on pain of forfeiture, from obstructing in any manner, direct or indirect, the free passage of the Fish up and down the said River; and another condition, obliging the Lessee to take all other necessary measures for preventing the Fish being destroyed in the Mill-race by the Mill-wheel or otherwise, by erecting and maintaining in good Repair proper Racks for that purpose. Persons desirous of purchasing the said Mill-seat and Lands, must give in their Proposals in Writing, and sealed up, before the first day of October next, on which day, if an acceptable offer be made, the purchaser will be declared, and a Deposit immediately required of two shillings and six-pence in the pound on the purchase money. A Deed will issue under the Great Seal without delay. One third of the remaining Purchase-money must be paid on the first day of October, 1800; one-third on the first day of October, 1801; and the remaining third on the first day of October, 1802; and good Security given for making these Payments at the above-mentioned periods.

GERMANY.

ROVEREDO, April 2.

AFTER the French on the 30 ult. had made the fourth fruitless attack on the Austrians in Italy, under the command of general Kray, they on the 31st at tempted a fifth, and general Sherer appeared determined to defeat the Austrians and to take Legnano and Verona before the Russians should arrive.—With this view he continually brought up fresh troops, and reinforced himself with the garrisons of Mantua and Peschiera, but all his endeavors failed, and on the 31st he was entirely defeated with great loss. The Austrians cut off the retreat of the French at Rivoli; and they lost in killed, wounded and prisoners, not less than 8000 men.

(Another letter, same date.)

"THE magistracy of the city have received the following official account, dated Verona, head quarters of general Kray, 1st April.

"In the night between the 30th and 31st, a French column passed the Adige over a bridge of boats near Rivoli, to attack in flank by the mountains, the right wing of the Imperial army. The generals Kray, and Kaim had recourse to the following stratagem: They caused their infantry to retreat almost to Verona, in order to amuse the French, while a corps of cavalry, having with them 20 or 25 pontoons, went by the bye roads and destroyed the bridge.—The retreat of the French column being thus cut off, 2000 were killed and wounded, and the remaining 6000 laid down their arms. They had with them 11 pieces of cannon, and a great number of ammunition waggons."

ENGLAND.

LONDON, April 23.

Extract of a letter from col. Williams, dated March 7.

"I HAVE just time to tell you, that a second battle took place on the 26th, at Stockach, in which the French have been severely beaten; as they have also been by general Hotze, near Faldkirch. In this latter action the French have lost 4000 men. On the morning of the 26th, 150 waggons of their wounded, each containing seven or eight men, arrived at Lindau. The loss has, however, been considerable on both sides, though the number of French is greater than ours. The French, in consequence of the victory of general Hotze, are crossing the Rhine with great precipitation at Bregentz. I have not time to say any more.

A Newcastle paper of Saturday last contains the following paragraphs:

"We have just learnt that a master of a neutral vessel who arrived at Sunderland on Thursday from Amsterdam, has brought intelligence that the French directory having withdrawn a great number of their troops from Holland to reinforce their beaten armies on the Rhine, the inhabitants of that distressed country had risen on the remainder, whom they entirely MASSACRED! and at length rescued themselves from the fangs of their unprincipled oppressors."

"General Hotze is marching into the Grison country, and a division of the archduke's army is proceeding into Switzerland, by which means the French are likely to between two fires.

"It is reported that general Starry has been beforehand with general St. Cyr, having got to Offenburgh before him, by which manoeuvre he cut off that general's retreat to Kehl on the right bank of the Rhine."

Received by the Hamburgh mail.

The French have been beaten in every quarter: the whole of their plans have been so completely deranged, that the remains of their defeated armies, retreating in almost every direction, will now endeavor to cover if possible, their own frontiers, and act upon the defensive for the rest of the campaign.

(Star.)

HAMBURGH, April 16.

Accounts have been received from the Tyrol that the French force which had penetrated into that country had been obliged to evacuate it completely; and that general Jourdan's army, as well as a great part of Bernadotte's, had repassed the Rhine, having left a garrison in Manheim and in the works of Kehl, but had abandoned the blockade of Philipsburgh. The Austrians have advanced to Friburg and Offenburg, and have summoned Kehl to surrender. Advices from Rastadt to the 8th of April mention that general Zsay had gained a very considerable advantage over the French general St. Cyr, as the latter was retreating from Freudenstadt to Offenburgh, on his way to Kehl; and that the French had lost a considerable park of artillery.

Extract of a letter from Paris April 9.

"Yesterday evening we learnt gen. Jourdan had arrived in this capital, returned from this campaign on the Danube. We learn besides, not only that he had been recalled from his command, but that the most sinister reports were circulated respecting the motives of his recall, the loss of the army, and its retreat to Gengenback and Offenburgh, or even to Strasburgh. Advantage was likewise taken, to increase the anxious curiosity of the public, of an order of the minister of war, published yesterday in Paris, which enjoins every conscrip, requisitionary, and other military men, absent from his corps, "to depart within 24 hours for his post, under pain of being arrested and punished as a deserter! Although this order be only the consequence of the existing laws, and a means of carrying them into execution, malevolence will not let this opportunity escape, of circulating the report, that a new requision is about to be raised, on account of the dangers of the commonwealth. We are anxious to destroy this false report, by observing, that the government confines itself to pressing the departure of those for the army who ought, long ago to have been there, and have no legal exemptions. At the same time, in order to convey an exact idea of the state of affairs, government has published, officially, the following intelligence from the army of the Danube, now returning towards the Rhine:

"The commander in chief Jourdan, having been compelled by sickness, set off for Strasburgh, on the same day (3d of April) on which the attack was to be made on the enemy. He had before requested permission to come to Paris, and had proposed generals St. Cyr, or Ferino, to command in his adsence.—The executive directory have appointed general Massena, to take, ad interim, the command of the armies; but previously to his arrival, general Jourdan had, on setting off, entrusted the command to general Ernouf who, having been attacked in his advanced posts, ordered the retreat across the Rhine."

United States.

NEW-YORK, May 28.

Yesterday's southern breeze enriched our port with a number of valuably laden ships.

The arrival of the ship Ocean, capt. Kemp, was of the number—the hearts of hundreds lept for joy, on the salutation from this ship, whose crew, but very lately was believed to have been massacred by French pirates.

A gentleman passenger on board the Nancy informs us that lord Mornington, governor general of the British possessions in India, had gone from Bengal to Madras, where he had arrived, in order to settle disputes with Tippoo Saib; and it is said his embassy had terminated favorable, as he found Tippoo pacifically disposed towards the English. It was expected that Tippoo would allow the English to hold the garrison of Bangalore, which commanded the only seaport he had on the Malabar coast.

June 17.

Yesterday arrived the brig Lydia, Calahan, from Limerick, whence she sailed on the 7th of May. By this brig we have a confirmation of the sailing of the Brest fleet, consisting of 18 sail of the line and 4 frigates—their professed destination was Ireland. There is however, a probability, that they have ere this met with a serious interruption by lord Bridport's squadron consisting of 16 sail of the line as information had been received, that he passed the French fleet in a fog.

The whole tonnage of the United States, says a Boston paper, in 1792, fell short of 200,000 tons—it now falls but little short of 900,000. The exports of these States reported the beginning of that year, amounted to 20,000,000 of dolls. They now amount to 60,000,000.

Several French prizes are now in our river. Besides these, ten or twelve important captues have been made during the last six months by our national ships of war. Millions have already been rescued from inevitable seizure & condemnation, by the vigilance and promptness of our infant fleet. The "true American character" has blazed forth, not less in the integrity of its views than in the vigor of its necessary operations.

If there were men who could not reason on the productiveness of our marine defence when it was first contemplated, there surely can be none so obstinate & perverse in their prejudices as to resist the strong arguments of our cannon, in support of our naval establishment—Judging a tree by its fruit, we are surely justified in appreciating the value, and extending the growth of these scions.

BOSTON, June 12.

FROM France, may be daily expected. Yesterday the schooner Phoenix, capt. Gale, arrived here, in 45 days from Portsmouth, in Great-Britain.—Capt. G. informs, that on the sixth day after he sailed from Portsmouth, an express cutter spoke the Topaze frigate the convoying ship, and informed the commander, that he had fallen in with the French fleet from Brest; and was bound direct to England to give the intelligence; and that on the receipt of the news, the Topaze directed the whole convoy to shift its course from nothward to southward, and to shew no lights.

Capt. G. brought no papers; but confirms the accounts of the defeat of the French.

ALBANY, June 18.

An arrival from Ireland at New-York with accounts to the 28th of April, states, that the insurrection in Switzerland threatens the destruction of that despotism lately imposed by the French upon the Swiss Cantons, under the name of liberty. The glorious victories lately gained by the Austrians will, it is hoped, rouse all the energies of the real patriots of Switzerland into action, and light an exterminating fire which shall consume to ashes the bloody oppressors of that once happy country.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, July 27.

THERE is no doubt but that the French fleet, which was lying at Brest, has sailed, and their destination is suspected to be Ireland; but there is not much danger of their arriving there, as lord Bridport was closely pursuing them; and we presume, ere now, that his vigilance and bravery has added one more to the number, of important victories, which our fleets have gained over those pirates of the sea. Should the combined powers succeed in extirpating that nation from the earth, our fleets will, no doubt, from off the sea, and by that means, Europe may, once more, be disembarrased of that nation of infidels and atheists who are endeavoring to subvert all good order and just government! And it is to be hoped that the reign of those monsters, is drawing near to its sequel.

In our gazette of last week, our readers will recollect, we inserted a paragraph which said, that excellent beer might be made out of the shells of green peas; at that time we were not in possession of the process, it having since come to hand, we therefore submit it to our readers:

The process is to pour six gallons of water on one bushel of the shells of peas, and boil the whole until the shells are infipid to the taste. Pour off the water, which will be very sweet, into a clean tub or keg, and add to it a pint of yeast, and two ounces of ginger in powder. In a short time fermentation will take place, and when it is complete the beer will be fit for use.

Beer obtained in this manner is very clear, has a fine amber colour, is a pungent to the taste, when poured into a tumbler bears a fine head; is superior to molasses beer, and is not inferior to mead.

One bushel of the shells of peas, will make several dozen bottles of beer.—The beer should be put into strong bottles, kept into a cool cellar, and the corks should be secured with wire. If the cellar is not cool, the bottles will burst with an explosion, as the author of this communication has experienced.

The beer distilled yields spirit, of the taste and colour of whiskey.

[Phil. Gaz.]

The following is said to be the estimate of the Austrian force:

One hundred thousand infantry, and 14 regiments of cavalry to be employed in Italy; on the Lech, 100,000 infantry, and 23 regiments of cavalry; in the Tyrol, 36 battalions; and on the frontiers of the heriditary States, 24 battalions of infantry.

The following well-written paragraph are taken from a London paper, dated April 26.

Jourdan, it is said, after the defeat of the 26th of March, signified to the archduke, that if he was not too much pressed in his retreat he would set fire to every village on his way. The archduke is said to have observed, that if the French commander executed his threats, he hoped to be able to arrive in time to extinguish every fire.

[We believe that the sans-culotte general, when retreating, was too closely pursued, and his time sufficiently employed in making good his escape, without devoting it to the execution of his anticipated plan, of burning the villages.]

One of the French accounts of a late action between Jourdan and the archduke says, "We slept upon the field of battle."—We know not how to explain this most impudent gasconade, after all the defeats which the French have suffered, except, according to their republican philosophy, that, "Death is an Eternal Sleep;" and upon this principle, we believe that most of these heroic sleepers on the field of battle will never wake again.

Jourdan's victories are of so curious a natue, that it is difficult to apply an epithet to his name descriptive of his character. According to the French accounts he is always a victor before he retreats. Upon this principle, therefore, he may expect to be the conqueror of Austria as soon as he has arrived in Paris.

A considerable portion of the plunder of Piedmont has been sent to Paris—The French say that they are "precious monuments found at Piedmont."—This sort of finding is like that of a highwayman, who finds upon the traveller a purse whom he threatens to shoot if he does not deliver.

[From the ALBANY CENTINEL.]

A NEW IMPOSTOR.

The following proclamation is said to have been issued by Buonaparte on the 21st of Dec. 1798, to the inhabitants of Cairo.

Perverse men had succeeded in misleading a party amongst you. They have perished. God has ordered me to be merciful to the people; and I have been clement and merciful towards you. I have been incensed against you because of your revolt. I have deprived you for three months of your Divan—but this day I restore it to you. Your good conduct has effaced the stain of your rebellion. Scheriffe Viemas, Orators of the Mosques, cause the people well to understand that those who, thro' any levity, shall become my enemies, shall find no refuge, either in this world or the next. Shall there be a man so blind as not to see that all my operations are conducted by destiny? Can there be a man so incredulous as to doubt that every thing in this vast universe is subject to the empire of destiny? Instruct the people, that since the world has existed, it was written that, after having destroyed the enemies of Instalism (Mahometanism) and destroyed the Cross, I should come from the farthest part of the west to fulfil the task that was imposed upon me. Make the people see, that in the sacred book of the Koran, in more than twenty passages, that which has happened was foreseen, and that which shall take place has also been explained. Let those then whom the fear of our arms alone prevents from pronouncing imprecations upon us now change their dispositions; for in offering prayers to hearers against us, they solicit their own condemnation. Let the True Believers then offer prayers to heaven for the success of our arms. I could call to account each individual amongst you for the most secret sentiments of his heart; for I know every thing—even that which you never communicated to any person. But the day will come when all the world shall see it proved that I am commanded by orders from above, and that all human efforts are of no avail against me. Happy those who in good faith shall be the first to attach themselves to me!

BUONAPARTE.

IN perusing the foreign articles of information, we see imperious France, that has rode for successive years, on the "full tide of fortune," is obliged, "to retrograde, with its swift ebb, dashed in her backward course on all the rocks and shoals of hard adversity." The words liberty and equality, have lost their magic charm. The gallic bait of specious promises, and treacherous intrigue has lost its allurements, and the hardy sons of Europe begin to spurn the hook, and turn their vengeance on these "fiends of men." Thus may it fare with every nation, that would aggrendize themselves on the ruin of others, substitute anarchy, for order, and atheism, for religion and virtue.

[Bos. pa.]

ANECDOTES.

A FRENCHMAN very politely observed to an Englishman, that the French were the first inventors of that beautiful ornament, the Ruffle; which the Englishman readily acknowledged, mean time observed that the English had made some little improvement by adding a shirt.

ONE of the fag end of the profession of the law, being asked what punishment could be inflicted on a felo de se, (self murderer) answered, imprisonment for life.

Council-Office,

27th April, 1799.

☞ Notice is hereby given, that Propoſals will be received at this Office for the purchaſe of the Mill-Seat at the Humber, with the Saw-Mill now ſtanding thereon, with about eight hundred and fifty Acres of Land, including the Meadow on the Weſt ſide of the River, above the Spring. There will be a condition in the Deed, reſtraining the purchaſer, on pain of forfeiture, from obſtructiug in any manner, direct or indirect, the free paſſage of the Fiſh up and down the ſaid River; and another condition, obliging the Lealee to take all other neceſſary meaſures for preventing the Fiſh being deſtroyed in the Mill-race by the Mill-wheel or otherwiſe, by erecting and maintaining in good Repair proper Racks for that purpoſe. Perſons deſirous of purchaſing the ſaid Mill-ſeat and Lands, muſt give in their Propoſals in Writing, and ſealed up, before the firſt day of October next, on which day, if an acceptable offer be made, the purchaſer will be declared, and a Depoſit immediately required of two ſhillings and ſix-pence in the pound on the purchaſe money. A Deed will iſſue under the Great Seal without delay. One third of the remaining Purchaſe-money muſt be paid on the firſt day of October, 1800; one-third on the firſt day of October, 1801; and the remaining third on the firſt day of October, 1802; and good Security given for making theſe Payments at the above-mentioned periods.

TURKEY.

SALONICA, Feb, 2.

THE Divan is ſeriouſly employed in the means of driving the French out of Egypt; in conſequence of which the grand ſeignior has iſſued a firman, by which he orders, that all the tranſport ſhips which can be procured ſhould be aſſembled at Smyrna, for the embarkation of our troops. For this purpoſe Cara Oſman Oglou, our Pacha, has been ordered to ſelect the choiceſt troops of Natolia for that expedition. The Pacha of Acri has received a carte blanche, and all the other Pachas of Syria have been enjoined to pay obedience to his commands. Buonaparte, in expectation of being attacked on that ſide, is fortifying Damietta with the greateſt activity, and has placed in it a very numerous garriſon. It is, however, ſuppoſed, that the Pacha of Acri will not act ſeriouſly, until the armament preparing at Smyrna ſhall have arrived before Alexandria, in order to make a combined attack on the two oppoſite points.

A Greek veſſel containing ſome Frenchmen in diſguiſe, and amongſt them the ſecretary of Buonaparte, was captured by a Turkiſh ſhip, and the priſoners ſent to Conſtantinople.—There was found upon them, in ſequins and piaſtres, about a million and a half livres tournois—The republican general does not allow the exportation from Egypt of coffee or rice, both articles of great importance in the Levant, and the ſcarcity of which is much felt at Conſtantinople.

ELECTIONS IN FRANCE.

PARIS, April 2.

THE proceedings of the primary aſſemblies muſt prove very formidable to the views of the directory, as the elections have in moſt places, fallen upon perſons diſtinguiſhed for their ſtrenuous oppoſition to the meaſures of the executive government. The partizans of the directory have been defeated in the departments of the Doube, the Pas de Calais, the Somme and the North. The public mind appears to be greatly irritated againſt the government, and the letter of the miniſter of the interior to the electors of Aix, was openly treated as the production of an incendiary. The oppoſitioniſts enjoyed a ſignal triumph in the primary aſſemblies of the city of Tours, as the electors returned by them are all perſons who had been diſmiſſed from their places by the directory.

LONDON, April 13.

As the late elections in France are expected to have a very important influence on the politics of that country, perhaps the names of ſome of the perſons who have been appointed electors will not be conſidered as an unintereſting piece of intelligence at the preſent moment.

Among the electors choſen for the department of the Seine, which includes Paris, are, Citizens Gueroult, formerly an eminent profeſſor in the Univerſity, and now chief miniſter of the police; Bernadin de St. Pierre, author of the Studies of Nature; Deſmuniers, formerly member of the conſtituent aſſembly; Petit, late miniſter of war; Perregaux, the banker; Dupin, the commiſſioner of the directory to the central adminiſtration of the Seine; Leblond, lately a municipal adminiſtrator; Arnaud, formerly preſident of the criminal tribunal of the Seine, and the ſubſtitute of the commiſſioner of the directory to the court of appeal; Terraſſe, the archiveſte of the tribunals; Michel, a landed proprietor and a lawyer; Oge, a judge in the civil court; Lemair, formerly a profeſſor in the univerſity, and afterwards a judge in one of the courts of Paris; Audelle and Mamemard, formerly notaries; Regnult de St. Jean d'Angley, a member of the late conſtituent aſſembly; Brard, verifier of contributions; Bonnecarere, late director general in the office of the miniſter for foreign affairs; Anſou, formerly a member of the conſtituent aſſembly and adminiſtrator general of poſts; Ginguene, late ambaſſador to the court of Sardinia; Perignon, official defender; Nepoux, juſtice of peace; Pont Carr, a member of the old parliament; Martincour, a ſtock broker; Lefebvre de Corbinierre, judge of the civil tribunal, and adminiſtrator of the Prytanee; Bergerot, director general of the liquidation of the debts of emigrants; Guffrent, a lawyer; Jennel, municipal officer of the 7th Arrondiſſement; Simon, teacher of the Oriental languages; Lavoiſier, paper maker; Fuillet, ſub-librarian to the national inſtitute; Bayard, preſident of the court of appeal; Boorgoing, formerly ambaſſador to Spain, and the author of ſeveral works; Treilhard, the brother of the director of the ſame name; Pommeruel, general of diviſion; Lebrun, the painter; Letourneur (de la Manche,) the late director; Charles Lecroix, late miniſter for foreign affairs.

Antonelle, a celebrated leader of the jacobin party, has been choſen an elector in one of the ſouthern departments.

Suwarrow, the celebrated Ruſſian general, is to command in Italy. His army will conſiſt of 100,000 Auſtrians and 40,000 Ruſſians. On taking leave of his majeſty—receiving particular marks of royal favour, he exclaimed, "God ſave the emperor." "It is for you to ſave him, (ſaid the emperor) by ſaving Europe!"

A miniſterial paper of this morning ſays—Paul I. has written the following letter to marſhal Suwarrow, announcing his nomination to the chief command of the army of Italy:

"The Emperor of the Romans requires you to command the army of Italy. I add my prayers to his solicitation. Set off; you will have under your command one hundred thousand Auſtrians, and forty thouſand Ruſſians."

THE ORACLE.

— YORK. Saturday. Auguſt 3.

WE have received, ſince our laſt, further and more pleaſing intelligence reſpecting lord Bridport's fleet, and that of the French. On the 29th of April he fell in with them, but unfortunately a fog came on, which impeded his lordſhip, from once more evincing to the world, that the Britiſh OAK was invulnerable to the mettle of infidels; but we are bold to ſay, becauſe it is congenial to our moſt ſincere wiſh, that the period is not far hence, if not already arrived, when thoſe pirates of the ſea will ſurrender to Britiſh valor and to Britiſh ſkill; for our lateſt information leaves the valiant Bridport only twelve leagues diſtance from them; ſhould fortune prove propitious in his overtaking them, he will not only poſſeſs ſuperior valor, but a ſuperior force. His fleet, as our information ſays, conſiſts of ſixteen ſail of the line, the Venerable, of 74 guns, captain Fairfax, ſailed to join before the news of the ſailing of the enemy arrived. Since which, nine ſail of the line having ſailed from Plymouth, and four from Spithead; amounting in all to twenty nine ſail of the line: NINE out of which are three deckers. The French fleet is ſaid to conſiſt of twenty-five ſail of the line and eleven frigates. It is apprehended that they are endeavoring to form a junction with the Spaniſh and Toulon fleets, and that they are not deſtined for Ireland.

Variegated Selection.

On the 8th of April his Majeſty ordered that the 5th, or Royal Iriſh regiment of dragoons, ſhould be diſbanded. The officers are to receive full pay till the 24th of December next, then to be placed on half pay.

Lyons is in general inſurrection.—Three hundred fiſhermen were ſent from Havre to Breſt, to man the fleet; they were marched two a breaſt, chained, under an eſcort of ſoldiers.

The 3d of April the French were at Naples. The iſle of Elbe has ſubmitted to the French. The Engliſh, Ruſſian, and Imperial conſuls, are confined to their houſes at Leghorn. The Engliſh merchants are at liberty.

It is ſaid that Pichegru is going to command the army of the grand ſeignior againſt ſultan Buonaparte in Egypt.

The diſturbances in Ireland have ceaſed to be formidable to government. The whipping ſyſtem, inflicted to extort confeſſions, is now diſcountenanced.—Mr. Fitzgerald, high ſheriff of the co. of Tipperary, was fined 500l. for inflicting the above puniſhment on a teacher of the French language, at the laſt aſſizes of Clonmell.

The Swiſs peaſants are all up in arms againſt the French. Gen. Bellegrade has marched a column to ſuppoſt them.

The French on the Lower Rhine have retreated to Wetzlar. They are about evacuating the environs of Manheim. On the 19th of April they were to attack gen. Hotze, in the Bergentze country.

An army of obſervation is forming in Poland by the Emperor of Ruſſia, to conſiſt of 80,000 men, to watch the motions of Pruſſia.

On the 14th of Feb. the plague raged in Egypt with uncommon mortality; and the pacha of Syria has pledged his head to the porte, that he will ſend him that of Buonaparte.

The black flag was flying at Paris the 10th of May, the ſignal for bad news.

On the 8th of May, the Spaniſh fleet, conſiſting of 22 ſail of the line beſides frigates, ſailed from Cadiz, ſuppoſed with a view to form a junction with the French fleet, which had gone up the Streights.

A ſlave trade limitation bill has paſſed in a committee of the whole of the Britiſh houſe of commons; and the blank for the time has been filled with Jan. 1, 1801. The Iriſh militia have tendered their ſervices to defend the kingdom of Great Britain, or any part of his Majeſty's dominions in caſe of invaſion or inſurrection—and have received his Majeſty's thanks—been accepted and enrolled accordingly, and proviſion made by parliament for their expences in caſe of being called upon.

The Iriſh parliament have voted a ſum for the relief of the loyaliſts who have ſuffered in their property.—And proviſion has been made for compenſating the Britiſh regulars and militia who have ſerved in Ireland.

The Engliſh Eaſt India Company have ſent an extraordinary number of cadets to India this year—and have directed that no more ladies ſhould be received as paſſengers the preſent ſeaſon.

A general embargo was ordered in France, April 4, in order to prevent the ſailors eſcaping from the impreſſment which was making to man the navy.

The Dutch fleet was in the Texel the 9th April—No troops on board, nor in the vicinity to be ſhipped. The Texel is blocked up by a Britiſh ſquadron.

Gen. Stuart is gone from Minorca to act againſt Malta.

Seven hundred Laſcars brought from India in a late fleet have ſet out on their return.

H. Duane has been executed in Ireland for treaſon.

One Cohen, an American by birth, charged with an improper correſpondence with the French, was taken up in England; but was diſcharged on promiſing to keep out of the country during the war.

A ſurgeon and a maſter of a man of war, have been ſentenced to death in England, as the principal and ſecond in a duel in which a perſon was killed. The quarrel reſpected Engliſh and American politics. The ſurgeon is an American. The deceaſed an Engliſhman, and gave the challenge. The parties are reſpited till the King's pleaſure be known.

Capt. Hood in the Mediterranean, with a Britiſh ſquadron, has captured 2 ſhips of the line and two frigates, which attempted to eſcape from Alexandria. The French had previouſly taken theſe ſhips of the line from the Venetians.

French papers ſay, the Britiſh have failed in a bombardment of Alexandria; that a body of Ruſſians and Turks landed at Aboukir, had been defeated; that Buonaparte had conquered Syria; deſtroyed Mourat Bey; ſtrengthened himſelf in Egypt, &c.

The French conceive the Griſon country quite ſecured, and have iſſued precepts for the people to chooſe repreſentatives to the Helvetic legiſlature. This is a doſe of treacle to ſweeten their ſlavery.

Berne (in Switzerland) was illuminated on account of ſome recent French ſucceſſes—but many of the windows in which the lights were placed, were broken.

French papers lament, that the patriots are cruelly perſecuted at the iſle of France. Robaud is gone with 600 ſoldiers to join Tippo.

Pichegru is at Brunſwick.

Championet is to be tried at Milan.

Admiral Nelſon remains at Palermo, with the Neapolitan royal family.

The Ethalion Britiſh frigate has captured the Indefatigable French privateer ſhip, of 18 guns and 120 men. Out only one day from Nantz, victualled for four months. A fine copper bottomed veſſel.

From the 10th June, 1798, to the 10th Feb. laſt, the Engliſh cruizers from the Leeward Weſt India iſlands, captured 13 French privateers, carrying 72 guns and 318 men—and alſo 120 merchantmen.

Jourdan's army is almoſt annihilated, he is not able to make a ſtand in any place before the archduke; the whole of the republican army is diſſatisfied; a general deſertion prevails, and all the principal officers are reſigning—thus, ere long, we may expect to ſee that proud and haughty nation become one of the loweſt and pooreſt on the face of God's earth.

The Britiſh ſhip Argo, in the Mediterranean, has captured a Spaniſh frigate, called the Santo Tereſa, Don Pablo Perez, maſter, mounting 42 guns, beſides ſwivels and cohorns; having on board 280 ſeamen and 250 ſoldiers. She was victualled for four months, and had juſt gone to ſea.

The Britiſh brig L'Eſpoir, in the Mediterranean, has taken a Spaniſh exbec, called the Africa, of 14 guns and 75 men, after an action of an hour and an half, in which the Spaniards had 9 men killed and 28 wounded and the Engliſh 2 killed and 2 wounded. An 18 gun Spaniſh brig ran away at the commencement of the engagement.

The Campo Formio, French frigate of 28 guns is caſt away, crew ſaid to be ſaved.

The numerous aſſaſſinations in France have been ſo greatly increaſed, that the legiſlature has been ſeveral days debating on new meaſures for preventing them.

The Spaniſh ambaſſador has been ordered from Conſtantinople.

An American in London has invented a perpetual log, which being attached to the rudder, is to communicate to perſons on deck the progreſs of the veſſel.

The theatre of Odeon has been burned at Paris, with all its appurtenances, and three perſons who were endeavouring to preſerve ſome valuable articles.

Sieyes is talked of as the new director. Lepaux, it is ſaid, will go out, be appointed miniſter of the interior, and Neaulchateau, removed to ſome other important ſituation.

Overtures of a pacific nature, it is ſaid, have been propoſed by the directory of France to the different powers with whom they are now at war. France means to give up all the conqueſts ſhe has made ſince the year 1792, and withdraw into her own territories, provided ſhe is reinſtated in all the dominions ſhe poſſeſſed at that period.—"O! how are the mighty fallen!"

A violent inſurrection has broken out in the Swiſs cantons—"fomented (ſay the French papers) by Auſtria and the prieſts."

A citizeneſs Mozard has been thrown into priſon at Paris, accuſed of emigration.

On the 4th of May the Britiſh houſe of lords, agreed to a further poſtponement of the conſideration of the Union of England and Ireland.—On this motion of poſtponement, the debate was warm.—The mover ſaid it was a ſubject which, the more it was conſidered, the more it would be approved.

Many convicted Iriſh rebels have been removed to Fort George in Great Britain, where they are confined.

The French directory have decreed, that all the conſcription men, who do not join the army in five days ſhall be conſidered deſerters.

The French papers ſay that the emperor of Ruſſia has demanded, agreeably to an exiſting treaty, 10,000 effective men of the king of Denmark. The Danes have tried to evade furniſhing theſe men and have offered money, &c. but the emperor is peremptory with reſpect to the troops. Therefore Denmark may be calculated upon as one of the coalition, though from neceſſity.

The French army of obſervation is ſuppreſſed, and Bernadotte, has a more active command than Jourdan.

The French directory has ordered the commune of Nice to be put in a ſtate of ſiege.

Eighty Frenchmen arrived at Naples, on the 6th of March, from Egypt. The greater part of them perfectly blind—among theſe commiſſioner Sucy; who was aſſaſſinated after landing.

General Macdonald, commands at Naples, vice Championet.

The Pope is ordered to Tuſcany, but is prevented from proceeding thither by indiſpoſition.

A Portugueſe ſquadron off Naples, burned the Neapolitan ſhips of the line to prevent their falling into the hands of the French.

It was reported at Raſtadt, that Roberjot, deputy to the congreſs, would be the new director.

A law is in conſideration, in the Britiſh parliament, for withholding bail from perſons arreſted for ſedition.

A bill was brought into the Iriſh parliament, for depriving United Iriſhmen of their elective franchiſe; but was loſt.

A duty of nine pence is propoſed in the Iriſh parliament to be laid on each goat ſkin, tanned to imitate Morocco leather, on exportation.

The Britiſh ſhip Centaur, entered the Spaniſh harbour of Cambrelles in the Mediterranean, deſtroyed a fort, and burned or took ten veſſels.

A ſpirited Engliſh writer, with much neatneſs of antithesis, mentions theſe as the contradictory principles of the French—to eſtabliſh revolutionary governments—to murder with the hand of juſtice—pillage legally—force loans—compel a man to be free—evince the ſovereignty of the people by baſtiles in every province—conciliate the conquered by rapine—regenerate by deſtroying—juſtify means, however fatal, by the end, however remote—ſtrengthen ſociety by debauching its principles—and annihilate the Being of the Author of all Beings by vote! Singular Cuſtom.

The ſouthern part of Devonſhire in England, is remarkable for its cyder.—In order to celebrate a good fruit harveſt, the following cuſtom is generally kept up in that quarter. On the eve of the Epiphany, the farmer, attended by his workmen, with a large pitcher of cyder, goes to the orchard, and then encircling one of the beſt bearing trees, they drink the following toaſts ſeveral times.

Here's to thee, Old Apple Tree;
Whence thou may'ſt bud, and whence thou may'ſt blow!
And whence thou may'ſt bear apples enow!
Hats full! caps full!
Buſhel!—buſhel ſacks full!
And my pockets full too!
Huzza! huzza! huzza!

This done, they return to the houſe, the doors of which they are ſure to find bolted by the females, who, be the weather what it may, are inexorable to all intreaties to open them, till ſome one among them has gueſſed what is on the ſpit, which is generally ſome nice little thing difficult to be hit on, and is the reward of him who firſt names it. The doors are then thrown open and the lucky clodpole receives the bit as his recompence. Some are ſo ſuperſtitious as to think that if this is neglected, the trees will bear no apples that year.

CUTHBURGA, an Anglo Saxon Tale.

OSRED the youthful monarch of Northumberland, in purſuing the chaſe with uncommon ardour, was one day bewildered in the mazes of a vaſt foreſt, with only one attendant, the faithful Edwin, whoſe ſtrong attachment to his royal maſter prompted him to be ever at his ſide, and whether the monarch took the field for the enjoyment of ſilvan ſports, or to meet the foes of Northumberland in fight, Edwin was ſtill at hand to ſhare his toils. After they had wandered for a conſiderable time, endeavoring vainly to extricate themſelves from the labyrinth into which they had fallen, Oſred quite fatigued, and overcome with heat and thirſt, threw himſelf beneath the branches of an ancient oak, and yielded to a temporary deſpair, while his more patient companion, having firſt ſoothed him into a quietor ſtate of mind, left him, and went to ſeek a cooling ſpring, when fortunately diſcovering the liquid chryſtal burſting from the flinty boſom of a rock, and winding its limpid courſe amongſt the trees, he haſtened to lead the weary prince to the ſpot which afforded ſo deſirable a refreſhment. Oſred having quenched his thurſt, ſtretched his weary limbs on the ſoft moſſy turf, beſide the bubbling ſtream, and, lulled by its murmurs, was ſinking to repoſe, when a voice heavenly ſweet, roufed his attention, and baniſhed all thoughts of ſleep: it ſung in plaintive ſtrains, the pangs of abſence from a beloved object, and concluded with an invocation to the paſſing moments to ſpeed the hour, which was to re-unite a fond and conſtant pair, who lived but for each other. "Sure" exclaimed Oſred, half riſing and reſting on his arm, "ſure this muſt be enchanted ground, for never did ſuch harmony greet my raviſhed ear, and unleſs my ſenſes fail, it iſſues from the rock."—"Too ſure it does," replied Edwin, "and better is it for us to fly while we have power, than ſtay to be entangled in its witcheries, for well I know it is no human voice." "And wouldſt thou fly, faint-hearted wight?" returned the prince with a ſmile, "wouldſt thou, who haſt faced the direſt charge of battle, and undauntedly ruſhed upon the pointed ſpears of Mercia, to grapple with the foe; now turn thy back upon uncertain dangers, leſt thou encounter ſorcery?" Edwin was diſconcerted, and for a moment dared not lift his eyes to Oſred's face, but bent them abaſhed upon the earth, when, laying his hand upon his breaſt, he cried, "my honored liege well knows, I am not wont to ſhrink from danger, and oft has ſeen me level to the duſt my country's enemies, but ſuch an enemy as this may prove, I know not how to encounter, ſince neither valour, nor the force of arms, can avail aught againſt immortal beings." Oſred ſtarting up (with that impetuoſity which marked his character, and which he had often cauſe to lament) and ſeizing the ſpear which lay beſide him, exclaimed, "behold him, who fears not any kind of danger, but is equally prepared to riſk the combat with man, or fiend. Come then, gallant Edwin, we will ſeek this formidable being who has taught thee what it is to fear; and truſt me, ſhould it prove hoſtile, thou and I can over-match its force." The prince ruſhed forward, and on diſcovering at a ſmall diſtance from the ſpot where he had reſted, a wide chaſm in the rock, undauntedly entered, in oppoſition to the moſt earneſt entreaties of Edwin, who, unable to withhold him from the enterpriſe, reſolved to ſhare it; and graſping his well tried ſpear, followed the wayward prince. The opening, by which they entered, terminated in a ſmall area of a form almoſt circular, where Oſred made a pauſe, and his friend again beſought him to deſiſt from the dangerous enquiry, and return while yet there was no viſible obſtruction ; but he ſpoke in vain, and the prince proceeded to explore a dark and narrow paſſage which opened on the right of the firſt entrance. He had not proceeded many paces when a ſudden winding brought him beneath ſome ſmall openings, which admitted a ſufficient degree of light to diſcover the extent of the paſſage, which ended in a high, but rudely formed arch, from which depended innumerable ſpars of petrified water, which, from the partial light thrown on them from the crevices in the paſſage, ſhewn like gems. Struck with the beauty of the objects before him, the prince proceeded with a quicker pace, and was within a few yards of the arch, when he heard the ſame ſweet voice that firſt attracted him exclaim, "Hark, I hear the ſound of haſty ſteps," and inſtantly a female form, lovely as imagination could picture, appeared advancing from the arch ; but no ſooner beheld him than uttering a loud ſhriek, ſhe vaniſhed from his ſight, and another female but of a different aſpect appeared, and in a peremptory tone forbid him, as he valued his life, to proceed another ſtep. "Wherefore is my entrance oppoſed," cried Oſred, "in a place open to the reſearches of all, whoſe curioſity may lead them to explore it?" "Becauſe," replied the woman, "yon receſs," pointing to the arched entrance "at preſent conceals a lady unuſed to the intruſions of rudeneſs, and whom thou haſt already much alarmed, therefore be gone, nor further encroach upon the privacy ſhe wiſhes to enjoy ; when ſhe has departed thou mayeſt return, and explore at pleaſure theſe ſecret apartments." "If I have alarmed the lady," returned Oſred, "it was without deſign, yet I do hold it juſt to crave forgiveneſs for my involuntary crime, & therefore pray you, to let me paſs into her preſence." "Content thee friend," replied the woman "and depart, for thou mayeſt not ſee her." Oſred was not of a diſpoſition to bear a repulſe ; with one of his own ſex, he would not have ſubmitted to a moment's parley ; to a woman he paid more deference, and ſtood aloof while he intreated her ; but finding her obſtinate in her refuſal to let him paſs, he loſt all patience, and darting on her an intimidating glance, puſhed her aſide, and entered a very ſpacious apartment, lighted from a chaſm above, thro' which a luxuriant branch of woodbine in full flower had crept, and hung within the reach, ſerving at once to perfume and ornament this delightful receſs ; but the beauties of the ſcene around him, engaged not for a moment the attention of the prince ; an object more highly intereſting met his eye in the lovely female, who ſeeming to collect all the dignity of the moſt virtuous of her ſex, no longer ſhrunk from obſervation, but in a ſteady voice thus addreſſed him. "Stranger, whatever thy intentions are, know that danger attends on their performance, for tho' at preſent thou mayeſt triumph over female helpleſneſs, yet there are thoſe of high diſtinguiſhed rank, who will avenge the inſult. In me behold the daughter of the valiant Eldred, the friend and favourite of Marcia's mighty king : think not therefore that thou canſt eſcape unpuniſhed if (daring as thou art) thou offereſt to offend Cuthburga." "And think not thou fair daughter of the valiant Eldred," replied the prince "to intimidate with the names of thy ſovereign and thy ſire, him whom thou beholdeſt ; for know, that beneath this unadorned hunter's garb exiſts a ſpirit as far above the reach of fear, as is this perſon ſet by rank, above the reach of Ethelred's controul ; but let not this alarm thee, for that ſubmiſſion which the haughtieſt threats could not enforce, thy beauty, and thy innocence command ; ſubmiſſion I never owned to mortal man." "Make good thy words, if they are indeed ſincere," returned Cuthburga, "by inſtantly departing." "Firſt," ſaid Oſred, "let me account for my appearance here, for truſt me, fair one, it was not with an ill intent I broke on thy retirement ; the harmony of thy voice met my ear, while I reclined me at a neighbouring ſpring, and marvelling whence it came, curioſity alone conducted my ſteps to this cavern, directed by the pleaſing ſound, which now I know to have iſſued from the breach above our heads ; but let me not attribute that to chance, which was ſurely deſtined by ſome ruling power, to make me bleſſed or wretched ; for never 'till this moment, have I ſeen beauty that could fix my roving fancy, or teach this inſenſible heart to love." The maiden bluſhed, and Oſred taking her gently by the hand, continued, "for thee it was reſerved, divine Cuthburga, to awaken in my breaſt emotions wholly new, ardent, yet chaſte deſires, a love ſudden, but deeply ſtricken, and pure as thy ſpotleſs ſoul." While yet he ſpoke, a hoary headed ſage in flowing robes, & with a long white beard, entered the cavern, followed by Edwin, and the female attendant of Cuthburga. The old man who was advancing with a quick pace, on caſting a glance at the youthful pair, ſtopped ſhort, exclaiming, "is it thus Cuthburga requites the boldneſs of intruſive ſtrangers, by holding familiar converſe, and yielding her virgin hand to indecent freedom." Oſred turned fiercely round to anſwer him, but on beholding the venerable figure, checked his riſing indignation, and thus replied : "'Tis well, old man, thy years proteſt thee, elſe thou ſhouldſt feel the penalty of having uſed indecent freedom." "Vain boaſter," replied the ſage, "I ſcorn thy threats, and lowly as I ſeem, may find a way to humble thy haughty port." "Oh heaven!', Sighed out Cuthburga, and would ha've fallen to the earth, if the ſuſtaining arm of Oſred had not been ready to prevent her ; a deadly paleneſs overſpread her beauteous face, and ſhe ſunk into a deep ſwoon. While ſhe remained inſenſible, the old man endeavoured to take her from the arms of the enamoured Oſred, but he obſtinately, and angrily refuſed to yield his lovely burden, and ſuch wrath was kindled between them, that Edwin was obliged to interpoſe, and remind his royal maſter both of Cuthburga's ſituation, and diſparity between him and the object of his anger. The prince, thus called to recollection, endeavoured to calm his unruly paſſions, and put the ſenſeleſs virgin into the arms of her woman ; ſtill however hanging fondly over her, 'till returning life animated her beauteous form. She opened her eyes —the firſt object they met was Oſred, when lifting up her head, in a weak voice broken by ſobs which ſhe vainly endeavoured to ſuppreſs, ſhe beſought him to leave her. "Let me but ſee thee well," cried he, "and I'll intrude no longer." "I can never be well while thou art here," ſhe faintly anſwered.— "Then I will fly thy preſence," replied the prince, and lifting her hand to his lips, followed by Edwin, haſtily retired, ſilent and ſorrowful. Oſred purſued the path which his companion had diſcovered to be that which would conduct them out of the foreſt ; and when joined by his attendants who had anxiouſly ſought for him, ſcarcely replied to their enquiries. On reaching his palace, he refuſed to partake of the ſumptuous repaſt which was prepared for him, and retiring to his chamber, ſhut himſelf up alone. To Edwin only was known the malady of his ſovereign, and while diſquiet and conjecture filled the court of Northumberland, Edwin took council with his thoughts how to adminiſter to the peace of Oſred ; but before he could fix on any likely means of effecting the wiſhed for purpoſe, he was ordered to the preſence of the king. "My deareſt Edwin," cried the prince, "thou only knoweſt the ſource of my diſquiet, yet is its full extent unknown to thee ; Cuthburga who has robbed my ſoul of peace, is the daughter of Eldrid, my mortal foe ; that haughty and invincible Mercian, who ſo oft has ſtained his ſpear with Northumbrian blood, and whoſe proweſs alone has preſerved the crown to Ethelred. Twice I met him in the embattled field, and but for thee, the laſt time would have plunged my ſword into his boſom, but thou didſt call my ſlitting honor back, and badeſt me remember that to kill a vanquiſhed foe was cowardly ; I gave him life, but to thee he paid his thanks, and when his ſovereign ranſomed him, he bade me pray to heaven that we might meet no more. Ah ! little did I think how amply he would have it in his power to be avenged on me ; to ſeek from him the hand of fair Cuthburga, would be to inſure my diſappointment ; what then, my friend, remains for thy unhappy Oſred ? How ſhall he obtain this lovely maid, who has captivated his ſoul ?" "Alas ! my ſovereign," replied Edwin, after a pauſe of conſiderable length, "thy happineſs I fear is in the utmoſt danger, if it depends on the poſſeſſion of Cuthburga ; 'twere well couldſt thou forget her." "Impoſſible," replied the impaſſioned prince, with a vehemence of tone and geſture, which convinced his friend that oppoſition would but inflame his wiſhes ; he therefore prudently added, "ſince that is indeed the caſe, liſten to what I ſhall propoſe, and alter, or wholly reject it, as thy better underſtanding ſhall deviſe ; the female who attends Cuthburga, informed me that her miſtreſs dwells adjacent to that foreſt, where it was thy hap to meet with her ; her ſire immerſed in ſtate affairs, but ſeldom viſits her, and thus is the moſt commonly alone, ſave when the holy ſage whom we beheld, and whom lord Eldred wills to ſtore her mind with wiſdom, ſojourns at her caſtle ; further ſhe would have told me, if the appearance of the venerable Sebba had not checked her tongue, who ſharply upbraided her for being out of the preſence of her miſtreſs, and engaged in converſe with a man—the woman whom he called Edilda, trembling, ſaid, that two huntſers had intruded on the retirement of her miſtreſs, one of whom ſtood before him, pointing to me, and the other (having cauſed her much alarm) was craving pardon from Cuthburga. Seeming not only to forget, but to have ſhaken off his load of years, Sebba ruſhed forward, and thou knoweſt what followed.' "And what has all this to do," cried Oſred impatiently "with my love for the maid, or the means of obtaining her in marriage?" "This was what I was about to add," returned Edwin. "Cuthburga and her handmaid ſeem in awe of Sebba ; it is moſt likely therefore that both would be well pleaſed to eſcape from his controul. As he reſides not at the caſtle, it will be eaſy for me to gain admittance in his abſence to Edilda ; from her I may learn further particulars concerning Cuthburga, and if thou mayeſt be introduced to her preſence, and obtain her love, the reſentment of her ſire need not deter thee from making her thy wife, and ſecretly conveying her hither, for then what would avail his anger ?" "By all the ſaints," exclaimed the tranſported Oſred, ſpringing from the couch on which he was reclining, "thou haſt recalled me from the depths of deſpair to life and hope. My worthy Edwin it ſhall be as thou ſayeſt ; haſte thee to the caſtle of Cuthburga, and bring me happy tidings ; let me but gain admittance to her preſence, and love will do the reſt."

CONSIDERED AS A VEGETABLE.

FOLLY is an evergreen that ſprouts, buds, and bears fruit all the year round ; it ſhoots up in any ſoil, and requires little or no cultivation ; has been found to flouriſh in cities, and great towns as well as in the country ; and ſometimes it has been remarkably luxuriant within the verge of a court. It is frequently exotic, and tranſplanted from other climates, in which caſe it ſoon withers and decays, unleſs it is engrafted with the natural and wild produce of the country. It may be ranked in the vegetable kingdom among the fungi, or muſhrooms, ſince like them, it ſprings up on a ſudden, like them it is quickly propagated, and it quickly diſappears, without even being able to diſcover its ſeed or account for its preſervation.

SUICIDE!

How powerful, and how irreſiſtible is the influence of love! when it reigns predominant it is too frequently productive, in many inſtances, of fatal conſequences to the unhappy one, whom it has made ſubſervient to its extremes! which was the caſe a few days ſince on Yonge ſtreet : One of the French emigrants, it is ſaid, ſhot himſelf becauſe a young lady, whom he admired in the extreme, diſcarded him.

According to a late philological calculation, the proportion of vowels to conſonants in the Engliſh language is at 61 to 100, while in Welſh the number of vowels and conſonants is equal ; and in French the proportion of the former to the latter is at 77 to 100. [Lon. pap.]

It appears from a recent calculation, as accurate as it could be made from the various circumſtances of the French revolution, that France has loſt, by war or domeſtic crimes and diſtraction, no leſs than 2,500,000 men, ſince the year 1782 to the preſent moment.

It was once ſtated by Dumas in the legiſlative body, that the national guards throughout the republic had been renewed three times within the ſpace of ſeven years. [Lon. pap.

THE tranſactions of the preſent ſummer comprehend on one great theatre, the greateſt part of Europe, and no ſmall part of Aſia and Africa. The ſtage is extended, as the plot thickens and the actors in the drama are multiplied.

It is evident that Buonaparte has ſubdued oppoſition in Egypt, and probably in Syria. The Breſt fleet may be intended to enter the Mediterrean, through ſuccors into Malta, and carry ſupplies to Buonaparte, particularly ammunition, which he probably cannot find in the countries which he has invaded. Should the French firmly eſtabliſh themſelves in Syria, it may be possible for them to penetrate into India, by the Euphrates, and the Perſian Gulph. Perhaps the object is to attack the porte on the eaſt, and by this diverſion favor the rebellion of Paſſawan Oglou—thus preparing the way for the final deſtruction of the Turkiſh power. In the execution of this project, however, the whole force of Ruſſia muſt be encountered, and the ultimate event will be doubtful. At any rate, Aſia as well as Europe muſt be involved in the conteſt. HOLLAND.

Miſerable Holland, drained by French friendſhip of every poſſeſſion ſhe enjoyed, is at laſt delivered up to the fury of the mercileſs element ſhe emerged from. Deprived by French rapacity of the means, and by her diſorganizing principles, of the method and ſubordination by which alone ſhe ſubſiſted, her dykes are broken down, and the ſea is ruſhing in to revenge the brutal madneſs and infatuation under the influence of which ſhe yielded to the empire of her execrable tyrants.

From a London paper.

IN a low field, adjoining to the river Hull, very near its eaſtern bank, and immediately oppoſite to Grovehill (where ſhips are now built) while ſome laborers were lately employed in paring burning, one of them accidentally ſtruck his ſpade into a cavity, & turned up ſeveral coins. On farther ſearch, he diſcovered a number more, chiefly of copper, with ſome of ſilver; they had been placed with great regularity (as money told in ſums) each piece on another, to a certain amount. The outward piles, were copper without, and ſupported by them thoſe of ſilver.—Many had ſuffered by the turf heap, which had been burned over them.—The cavity, it was probable, had been formed by a caſket or box of periſhable materials, that encloſed the coins, whereof no veſtige remained. The following pieces are in good preſervation:

Five Veſpaſians, 4 Trajans, 4 Adrians, 7 Cæſars, beſides 17 others, conſiderably damaged. Four exceeding ſingular and non-deſcript ſpecies of fibula, of fine ſilver, and excellent workmanſhip, in high preſervation were alſo diſcovered near this cavity; appertaining to which are four ſilver complicated chains, with pipes of the ſame metal, through which the chains were paſſed to ſerve as loops, all of curious mechaniſm. They are all depoſited in the muſeum of Mr. Wallis, the Antiquarian collector at Hull.

DIED, in this town, on Saturday the 3d inſtant, Mr. THOMAS BARRY, merchant, after a long and painful illneſs which he bore with chriſtian fortitude and reſignation to the Divine diſpenſation! his remains were eſcorted from hence to the Head of the Lake, (Ancaſter,) by a number of his friends from this town; where they were intered the Monday following at 4 o'clock P. M. His extenſive acquaintance and numerous friends formed, perhaps, the moſt reſpectable concourſe which a ſimilar occaſion, in that part of the country, could boaſt of.—Mr. Barry was an affectionate huſband, a tender father, a benevolent and humane neighbor; he was not only eſteemed as a perſon adhering to the ſtricteſt principles of probity, but as a pious and induſtrious man.

Foreign News.

LONDON, May 22.

THIS morning a meſſenger arrived from ſir Morton Eden, at Vienna, bringing diſpatches dated on the 7th, which ſtate, that an action had taken place previous to the taking of Milan, in which gen. Suwarrow, after croſſing the Adda, had completely defeated the French, and had killed 6000 and taken 5000 priſoners, and 80 pieces of cannon. Gen. Sarrier, and his whole corps laid down their arms, after being ſurrounded by the Auſtrians and Ruſſians.

The French had retreated into Switzerland, where there were ſeveral inſurrections againſt them among the Swiſs.

May 23.

The commander of Philipſburg, on the Rhine, has publiſhed an account of the blockade of that fortreſs. In his official report to the archduke Charles, he ſtates that he had arreſted 3 Frenchmen, who had entered the place for the purpoſe of ſeducing the officers of the garriſon. They had appointed a meeting with one of the officers, who informed the governor of it. They declared that they would give 200,000 livres, if neceſſary.

The account of the death of the French miniſters, ſigned by all the deputies at Raſtadt, and tranſmitted to their reſpective courts, was drawn up by the Pruſſian envoy.

It is expected at Stralburg, that the directory will ſend two new plenipotentiaries to that place, and that the negociation will be continued there with the ſeveral ſtates of the empire. One of the miniſters of the elector of Bavaria and an envoy of Heſſe Darmſtadt, are at preſent there, and have had conferences with Jean Debry.

POSTSCRIPT EXTRAORDINARY.

SUN OFFICE, 1 o'clock P. M.

Diſpatches have this day been received from Vienna of the 12th, by which it appears that Peſchiera had ſurrendered to the Auſtrians and Ruſſians. Novara was alſo in their poſſeſſion, and Ferrara was blockaded. The inhabitants had riſen in ſeveral places, joined the Auſtrians, attacked the French with great fury, and made great ſlaughter in ſeveral ſkirmiſhes. The booty taken from the French in the different actions has been immenſe.

General Suwarrow's head quarters were at Pavia. Mantua was cloſely blockaded and Pizzighitone had not ſurrendered, but it was expected to fall very ſhortly.

The greateſt part of the French army had retreated to the garriſons of Tortona, Coni and Alexandria, and in the neighbourhood of thoſe places.

Extract of a letter from Liſbon, May 11.

"Various expreſſes announce the important intelligence that a large enemy's ſquadron is at ſea, and it is ſaid they have been ſeen off Porto. Report goes ſo far as to ſay, 19 ſail of the line, 16 ſail of which left Breſt on the 28th ult. and 3 Spaniſh from Ferrol joined the 1ſt inſt.—Letters by yeſterday's poſt from Madrid mention that the Ferrol ſquadron was at anchor, and had 4000 troops on board, a great deal of camp equipage and three months proviſions. A frigate is gone to Gibraltar to apprize earl St. Vincent of all this, and we are anxiouſly waiting the reſult of ſo intereſting an expedition."

TURKEY, April 14.

From the Vienna Court Gazette.

According to letters from Conſtantinople, of the 10th of April, the advices from Syria give a very different turn to the ſucceſs of gen. Buonaparte's expedition againſt that province.

He certainly advanced ſome time ago with 8000 Frenchmen, and as many Arabs and Copts, whom he had brought from Egypt into Paleſtine. The badly defended poſts of Gaza and Jaffa could not ſtop his progreſs. He came down the coaſt, to St. John d'Acre, the ancient Ptolemais, and detached a ſmall column againſt the paſſes about Nablouſe (Sichem) to watch the movements of Dſchezir Oglu, governor of Jeruſalem, who could have fallen upon his rear, St. John d'Acre is ſo weak a place that no reſiſtance was expected. But how great was the aſtoniſhment of the French to hear their ſummons anſwered by the play of a well directed artillery, and ſtill greater muſt have been their conſternation, when they were informed that it was their own ordnance; for 13 tranſports of theirs, that were to bring the heavy artillery, military ſtores & troops from Damietta to Paleſtine, were partly captured, partly ſunk, partly diſperſed by the fleet of commodore ſir S. Smith, and this naval commander had reached St. John d'Acre juſt in good time. Here the French ſuffered no inconſiderable loſs, and were forced to retreat. Meanwhile Dſchezar Oglu had actually occupied the paſſes in their rear, and gained ſome advantages near Nablouſe. This deprived them of the hope of capturing the Caravella, going from Damaſcus to Mecca, and they had to ſtruggle with a variety of embarraſſments, reſpecting their own ſituation. Seventeen Turkiſh ſail are now going with troops, and many military ſtores, to reinforce Dſchezir Pacha. Two Engliſh men of war guard the mouth of the Arabian gulph. In general, Buonaparte is in the moſt critical ſituation with his army. The grand vizier, Juſſuf Pacha, is preparing with all the forces of the Turkiſh empire, which will join him every where, on his march from Conſtantinople to Aſia, to fruſtrate completely Buonaparte's enterprizes by a deciſive blow, unleſs it be ſtruck even before his arrival.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 19.

The intelligence ſent under date of the 16th inſt. reſpecting gen. Buonaparte's defeat by Dſchezir Pacha near St. John d'Acre is fully confirmed. The French gen. is now retreating with the reſt of his army towards Cairo. The news has cauſed great joy in the Seraglio, and the ſultan orders a ſolemn thankſgiving for that purpoſe. An Engliſh officer, ſent by ſir S. Smith to the Engliſh ambaſſador here, has brot this news.

Great changes have been made in the Turkiſh miniſtry. The Reis Effendi, heretofore miniſter for foreign affairs, has been depoſed, and Alip Effendi, a favourite of the grand vizier, appointed in his room.

Yeſterday three horſetails were hoiſted as the ſignals for the grand vizier's departure.

A great inſurrection is ſaid to have broken out in the iſland of Cyprus, and the pacha demands ſpeedy ſuccors. The Ruſſian expreſs has brot the news of the taking of Corfu, received of the grand ſignior a ſuperb for and 1000 piaſtres.

The Auſtrian internuncio having lately had many conferences with the captain pacha, the treaty of alliance and ſubſidy between the porte and the houſe of Auſtria is ſuppoſed to be on the eve of concluſion.

CORFU, April 15.

Yeſterday the combined Ruſſian and Turkiſh fleet, conſiſting of 40 ſhips of war and 46 tranſports, with troops on board, ſet ſail for Italy.

TALEMO, April 16.

Two great armies are organized in this kingdom, which hold themſelves in readineſs to embark on an expedition to the main land of Italy. All the ſhips in the harbors of Sicily are ready to ſail, and the Engliſh force, by land and ſea, which will ſupport this expedition, is very great. In the revolutionized kingdom of Naples, the diſcontent of the people daily increaſes; and in Calabria and Abtuzzo, all are under arms who are capable of bearing them, with a firm reſolution of defending the regal conſtitution at the expence of their lives.

TRENT, May 3.

Col. Strauch has advanced with his column by Tanale to Edolo, and forced the French to retreat into the Valtelin. He immediately took poſſeſſion of the paſſes of Aprica and Mortirolo, & took 16 priſoners. At the latter place the French attacked him with a reinforcement; but the Auſtrians uſing only the bayonet, forced them to retreat, notwithſtanding the deep ſnow, with a loſs of 700 killed and wounded. The Auſtrians loſt 200 men and 3 officers. The French in the Valteline are 6000 ſtrong.

LONDON, May 15.

We have juſt received our private letters by the mail. By theſe we have an account of the taking Breſcia by the Auſtrians, and 1000 Frenchmen priſoners. The ſiege of Peſchiera was going on with every proſpect of ſucceſs.

Copy of a letter addreſſed to citizen Noblet, repreſentative of the people in the Council of Elders, to citizen Belin, ſecretary to citizen Jean Debray, ambaſſador of the French republic at the congreſs at Raſtadt:

"Citizen repreſentative,

"On the 28th of April the law of nations was horribly violated. The French miniſters were aſſaſſinated by 400 Auſtrian huzzars, who were eſcorting them as far as the French advanced poſts. Roberjot and Boonier are no more; the former was aſſaſſinated in the arms of his wife. The life of Jean Debray is preſerved for the republic: he received 40 coups de ſabre, and is wounded in thirteen places, but not one of his wounds is mortal. We arrived almoſt dead at one o'clock after midnight. He made his eſcape while the banditti were engaged in purſuing the perſons in the other carriages. It was at 30 paces from Raſtadt that this horrible action was committed. Thoſe who were to have eſcorted them became their aſſaſſins.

"Jean Debray is not in a feveriſh ſtate: his little children are about to write to you: unhappy ones! They were on the point of witneſſing the aſſaſſination of their father!

(Signed) BELIN."

"P. S. You will not believe all we have to relate to you. We have beheld the murders; we have heard the Auſtrian cries of fury: The monſters!

"Certified as a true copy.

NOBLET."

OFFICIAL BULLETIN.

Of the taking of Breſcia, and of further operations in Italy.

VIENNA, April 29.

Lieut. Gugenios, of the regiment of Nadaſty, arrived here this day with the news that the town and fortreſs of Breſcia were taken on the 20th inſt. in the following manner: field marſhal lieut. Kray, charged with this enterprize, detached for the purpoſe field marſhal lieut. Otto with his diviſions, who had already marched on the 17th from his poſition at Monte Chiro, by Caſtle Nedolo, to reconnoitre the town.

The 26th at midnight, field marſhal Otto quitted his camp with his diviſion in two columns. The battalion of Nodaſty, poſted in the Rezzo, upon the high road by Euphemia, as far as the entrance of the ſuburbs of Breſcia.

Col. Biteſkuti advanced on the high road leading from Caſtle Nedolo to Breſcia, with a battalion of the Anthony Eſterhazy, which he commanded; and two battalions of Nadaſty, commanded by col. Abſaltem, with the neceſſary artillery. The battalion of Eſterhazy was poſted on the left of the high road near the town, to cover the bomb batteries; and the battalion of Nadaſty poſted on the right to keep up the communication with the battalion ſtationed near St. Euphemia. The third battalion of Nadaſty remained in reſerve near St. Polo.

Theſe battalions directed their attacks againſt the gate of Torto Longo. One battalion of Eſterhazy, commanded by major gen. Kraus, which was at Chedi, marched on the high road of Cremona by St. Zeno, againſt the gate of St. Alexander. This column was augmented by a corps of horſe artillery, and all the reſt of the cavalry, commanded by col. Sommativa, puſhed forward as far as the high road to Crema, to cover the left wing.

This enterprize was ſupported by 500 Coſſacs—1000 foot chaſſeurs, and 500 grenadiers, under the orders of the two Ruſſian generals, the princes Corthecop and Bagration, the diviſion of field marſhal lieut. Zoph was kept in reſerve in caſe of neceſſity.

After theſe diſpoſitions, field marſhal lieut. Otto ſent a ſecond ſummons to the French commander, and having received his refuſal, the town began to be bombarded at 6 o'clock in the morning, and in the ſpace of an hour and an half ſeveral cannon were diſmounted. This circumſtance, together with the approach of the battalion of Nadaſty at the gate of Peſchiera, cauſed the enemy to give way, and to retire with precipitation into the citadel.

Our pioneers immediately forced the gate, and by the exertions of field marſhal lieut. Kray the inhabitants aſſembled upon the ramparts lowered the drawbridge. The battalion of Nadaſty then entered the town, drums beating and colours flying.
