FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, May 27.

In some private letters from Paris, it is said that the king's health is considerably improved of late, and that the coronation will certainly take place on the 25th of August. The exiles whom it was lately proposed to recal from banishment, are, Marshal Soult, Gen. Grouchy, Gen. Pire, M. Real, and Colonel Millinet. The language in which their petitions were drawn up, was highly injudicious. They proceeded upon such grounds as were calculated rather to offend than conciliate his Majesty, who refused to comply with the prayer of the petitioners, though some of them were zealously supported by the duke d'Angoulême, and had the suffrage of ministers also.

We lament to state, that another great failure took place on Saturday. The house has been long established as German merchants, and was considered one of the most respectable in the city of London: it is reported to have stopt for a very considerable sum. Accounts have been received that the house of Theodorui and G. F. Gulcher and Co. of Amsterdam, has also stopped payment for a very considerable amount.

MAY, 28.

Letters have been received in the city this morning, dated Cape of Good Hope, March 20. All the troops, which could be mustered, amounting to near 3000 men, were embarking for the corn districts, which are about 600 miles distant from Cape town. The want of cavalry was severely felt.

The foreign mails of yesterday bring little news. Our prince Leopold has had an audience of the king of France, accompanied by the British Ambassador. M. Lafitte has circulated a paper among the chamber of deputies, defending himself from a charge which had been made upon him, of sharing in the foreign loan, which he afterwards attacked in his place as deputy, for its injurious effects upon the public interests of France.

A fact, well worthy the most serious attention of the public, was stated by Sir Thomas Tyrwhitt the other day at the meeting at the London tavern, in support of the Plymouth and Dartmoor railway, that in the course of last year, £1,800,000 were paid to Russia for 18,760 tons of dressed flax; and that £37,484 were paid to the United States of America for flaxseed, chiefly for Ireland; and that he was authorised to state, by those who presided over the linen board in that country, that even should all the forest of Dartmoor be turned to the culture of flax, Ireland was ready to take every grain of its seed.

It is with much pleasure we are enabled to state, upon the authority of private letters from Liverpool, that trade is once more reviving in that great commercial town. Cotton is on the advance, though the quantity imported is immense. It is supposed that our East India supply will ruin American market, although the raw material is not so good as that of the United States: it is, however, sufficiently good for the prices which the manufactured articles now fetch.

A debate of some length took place in the house of lords, May 21, on the subject of bank restriction. Before coming to the order of the day, the earl of Lauderdale moved for a paper which he said he understood has been presented to the earl of Liverpool by the governor & deputy governor of the bank. After some remarks from the latter, the paper was produced and read by the clerk, as follows:

At a court of directors at the bank, on Thursday, the 20th May, 1819.

The directors of the bank of England, having taken into their most serious consideration the reports of the several committees of the two houses of Parliament, appointed to inquire into the state of the bank of England, with reference to the expediency of the resumption of cash payments at the period now fixed, have thought it their duty to lay before his majesty's ministers, as early as possible, their sentiments with regard to the measures suggested by those committees, for the approbation of Parliament.

In the first place it appears, that in the view of the committees, the measure of the bank recommencing cash-payments on the 5th July next, the time prescribed by the existing law, is utterly impracticable, and "would be entirely insufficient, if not ruinous." Secondly, it appears, that the two committees have come to their conclusion at a period when the outstanding notes of the bank of England do not much exceed £25,000,000, when the price of gold is about £4 1s. per ounce, and when there is great distress from the stagnation of commerce, and the fall of prices of imported articles.

It must be obvious to his majesty's ministers, that as long as such a state of things shall last, or one in any degree similar, without either considerable improvement on one side, or growing worse on the other, the bank, acting as it does at present, and keeping its issues nearly at the present level, could not venture to return to cash payments with any probability of benefit to the public, or safety to the establishment.

The two committees of parliament, apparently actuated by this consideration, have advised that the bank shall not open payments in coin for the period of four years, but shall be obliged from 1st May, 1821, to discharge their notes in standard gold bullion at mint price, when demanded in sums not amounting to less than 30oz. And as it appeared to the committees expedient that this return to payments, at mint price, should be made gradually, they propose that on the 1st day of February next, the bank should pay their notes in bullion, if demanded, in sums not less than 60 oz. at the rate of £4 1s per oz; and from the 1st of October, 1820, to the 1st of May following, at £3 19s. 6d. per oz.

If the directors of the bank have a true comprehension of the views of the committees, in submitting this scheme to parliament, they are obliged to infer, that the object of the committees is to secure at every hazard, and under every possible variation of circumstances, the return of payment in gold, at mint price, for bank notes, at the expiration of two years; and that this measure is so to be managed, that the mint price denominations shall ever afterwards be preserved, leaving the market or exchange price of gold to be controlled by the bank, solely by the amount of their issue of notes.

It further appears to the directors, with regard to the final execution of this plan, and the payment of the bank notes in gold at mint price, that discretionary power is to be taken away from the bank, and that it is merely to regulate its issues, and make purchases of gold, so as to be enabled to answer all possible demands, whenever its treasury shall be again opened for the payment of its notes.

Under these impressions, the directors of the bank think it right to observe to his majesty's ministers, that being engaged to pay on demand, their notes in statutable coin, at the mint price of £3 17s. 10 1-2d. per ounce, they ought to be the last persons who should object to any measure calculated to effect that end; but as it is their duty to consider the effect of any measure adopted, as operating on the general issue of their notes, by which all the private banks are regulated, and of which the whole currency (exclusive of notes of private bankers) is composed, they feel themselves obliged by the new situation in which they have been placed by the restriction act of 1797, to bear in mind not less their duties to the establishment over which they preside, than their duties to the community at large, whose interests in a pecuniary and commercial relation have in a great degree been confided to their discretion.

The directors, being thus obliged to extend their views and embrace the interests of the whole community in their consideration of this measure, cannot but feel a repugnance, however involuntary, to pledge themselves in approbation of a system which in their opinion, in all its great tendencies & operations, concerns the country in general more than the immediate interests of the bank.

If is not certainly a part of the regular duty of the bank, under its original institution, to enter into the general views of policy by which this great empire is to be governed in all its commercial and pecuniary transactions, which exclusively belong to the administration, to parliament, and to the community at large; nor is it the province of the bank to expound the principles by which these views ought to be regulated—by a proper and appropriate duty in the management of the concerns of the banking establishment, of the interest of the national debt, the ludgments consigned to the care, and the ordinary advances it has been accustomed to make to government. But when the directors are now to be called upon, in the new situation in which they are placed by the restriction act, to procure a fund for supporting the whole national currency, either in bullion or in coin; and when it is proposed that they should effect this measure within a given period, by regulating the market price of gold, by a limitation of the amount of the issue of bank notes, with whatever distress such limitation may be attended to individuals, or the community at large, they feel it their bounden and imperious duty, to state their sentiments thus explicitly, in the first instance, to his majesty's ministers on this subject, that a tacit consent and concurrence in this measure may not at a future period be construed into previous implied sanction, on their part, of a system which they cannot but consider fraught with very great uncertainty and risk.

It is impossible for them to decide before hand what shall be the course of events for the next two years; they have no right to hazard a flattering conjecture for which they have not real grounds, in which they may be disappointed, and for which they may be considered responsible. They cannot venture to advise unrelenting continuance of pecuniary pressures upon the commercial world, of which it is impossible for them either to foresee or estimate the consequences.

The directors have already submitted to the house of lords the expediency of the bank's paying its notes in bullion at the market price of the day, with a view of seeing how far favourable commercial balances may operate in restoring the former order of things of which they might take advantage; and with a similar view they have proposed that the government should repay the bank a considerable part of the sums that have been advanced upon exchequer bills. These two measures would allow time for a correct judgment to be formed upon the state of the bullion market, and upon the real result of those changes which the late war may have produced in all its consequences of increased public debt, increased taxes, increased prices, and altered relations as to interest, capital, and commercial dealings with the continent; and how far the alterations thus produced are temporary or permanent, and to what extent, and in what degree they operate.

It was the design of the directors, in pursuance of the before mentioned two measures, to take advantage of every circumstance which could enable the bank to extend its purchases of bullion as far as a legitimate consideration of the ordinary wants of the nation for a sufficient currency could possibly warrant. Beyond this point they do not consider themselves justified in going, upon any opinion, conjecture, or speculation merely their own; and when a system is recommended it seems to take away from the bank any thing like a discretionary consideration of the necessities and the distresses of the commercial world. If the directors withheld their previous consent, it is not from a want of deference to his majesty's government, or to the opinions of the committees of the two houses of parliament, but solely from a serious feeling that they have no right whatever to invest themselves with their own accord, with the responsibility of countenancing a measure, in which the whole community is deeply involved, and possibly to compromise the universal interests of the empire, in all the relations of agriculture, manufactures, commerce, and revenue, by a seeming acquiescence or declared approbation on the part of the directors of the bank of England.

The consideration of these great questions, and the degree in which all those leading and connecting interests may be affected by the measure proposed, rests with the legislature; and this for them, after solemn deliberation, and not for the bank, to determine and decide upon the course to be adopted.

Whatever reflections may have from time to time been cast upon the bank; whatever invidious representations of its conduct may have been made, the cautious conduct it adopted in so measuring the amount of currency as to make it adequate to the wants both of the nation and of the government, at the same time keeping it within reasonable bounds, when compared with what existed before the war, as is shown in the lords' report, page 10, 11, 12, and 13; the recent effort to return to a system of cash payments which commenced with the fairest prospects, (but which was afterwards frustrated by events that could not be foreseen nor controlled by the bank,) are of themselves a sufficient refutation of all the obloquy which has so undeservedly been heaped upon the establishment.

The directors of the bank of England, in submitting these considerations to his majesty's ministers, request that they may be allowed to assure them, that it is always their anxious desire, as far as it depends upon them, to aid, by every consistent means, the measures of the legislature for furthering the prosperity of the empire.

ROBERT BEST, Sec'y.

Order of the day, on the report of the secret committee and Earl Harcourt's resolution was then taken up, and after some remarks, the Earl of Lauderdale moved to amend them by striking out the whole after the two first words, and substituting seven other resolutions, which he read. After a debate in which the Earls of Liverpool and Lauderdale spoke at great length, the proposed amendment was negatived without a division, and the original resolutions were carried with only two or three dissentient voices.

LONDON, May 29.

The Committee of Merchants, who have undertaken to oppose the Bill now passing through the House of Commons, to prohibit Foreign enlistment, have put forth a sort of Manifesto upon the subject. They urge in this State document, that we ought not to prevent Buenos Ayres from warring against Spain, because, at a former period, when Spain was hostile to us, we had encouraged the insubordination of the colonists, and because, by the proposed measure, we may cripple the growing commercial relations between this country and South America. This is the whole scope of their arguments, though expanded over a wider space of words.

An attempt on the Duke of York.—On Tuesday last, a man of the name of Decey was examined at Bow street, he had been found in the Duke of York's house, near his bed chamber, after his royal highness had retired to rest. He was discovered by the page as he also was going to bed, and had he entered only a minute later, he would have got uninterrupted to the duke's chamber: he had entered over the garden wall from the Green Park, by means of a large stone tied to a rope, which he threw over the wall. His plea was that, he had written in vain to the duke, informing him of his distress, and having been denied admittance by the porter at the front door, he had recourse to the expedient described, in order to have an interview with his royal highness: he was committed to Bridewell as vagrant. The unfortunate man attempted some time since to drown himself in the canal in St. James' Park.

The loss occasioned by the fire which broke out in the timber yards of Christiana, is estimated at above £250,000 sterling.

Pedestrian Feat.—J. Bigmore, a lad, whose exertions in running by the side of stage-coaches has excited notice in Suffolk and Norfolk, accomplished an extraordinary feat on the 26th ult. He started from Sudbury with a coach at half past 12 at noon, and ran eleven miles in the first hour. On stopping at the different stages he took no rest, but assisted in putting in the horses, and again set off with alacrity. In this manner he kept up with the coach the whole way to Norwich, a distance of nearly 60 miles, where he arrived five minutes before seven; nor did he seem at all distressed, but walked about to view the city. He has a very sickly and emaciated appearance, is about 15 years of age, and of rather a short stature. In order to breath freely, he placed a piece of cane between his teeth, so as to keep his lips partly open. The only recompence he obtains for his labor, is the voluntary contribution of accidental admirers of his feats.

Law Promotions.—The following arrangement, it is confidently stated at Edinburgh, is about to take place in the Supreme Courts of Scotland.—It is the most extensive promotion that has occurred there for many years.

The Hon. Baron Norton, to be Chief Baron of the Exchequer, in the room of the Right Hon. Robert Dundas, who retires on a pension.

The Lord Chief Commissioner Adams, resigns his gown as a Baron of the Exchequer, and his salary is to be raised to a sum equal to the Chiefs of the other Courts, viz. £4,000 a year.

Sir Patrick Murray to be the new Baron of the Exchequer.

The Lord Advocate Macmoschy succeeds the late Lord Ilerton as one of the Judges of the Court of Session, and also as a Lord of Justiciary.

Sir William Rae, the present Sheriff of the County of Edinburgh, is to fill the important office of Lord Advocate.

Mr. Wedderburn, the Solicitor General, promoted to the Bench, in the room of Lord Balmatyne, who retires on the pension.

Mr. Home Drummond to be the new Solicitor General.

Mr. Borthwick to be Remembrancer of the Exchequer, vice Sir Peter Murray; and Mr. Allan Dall to be Sheriff of Edinburgh, in the room of Sir William Rae.

VELOCIPEDIMANIA.

The invasion of this ingenious and fashionable machine promises to give rise to an endless variety of pleasing and useful progressions. Before we saw the performance of Mr. Johnson, who exhibits at the manège hall, although we were well aware of the advantages of the velocipede when ridden under circumstances favorable to the progress of the machine, we had no conception of the graceful movements of which it is capable in skilful hands. Skating has always been considered as the most elegant recreation, but velocipeding (or whatever it may be called) is in our opinion, more pleasant, as performed by the gentleman we have mentioned.

We subjoin a few straggling paragraphs on the subject of the velocipede, which, promises in be as much the rage as the kaleidescope was of late. This we ventured to predict in the Mercury, of the 12th Feb. page 262, when we first gave a detailed description of the invention with an engraved illustration.

"Mr. Birch, the coachmaker, has constructed a vehicle, called the Velocimanipede, or Phaton in miniature, calculated to carry three persons. The centre, or body of the carriage, is supposed to be for a female; the fro "ls for a gentleman to sit on a narrow ridle, to guide it. At the back is a small Dicky to work the mind wheels by machinery; it goes over a distance of ground of one mile in three minutes, and can be kept up with ease at 8 miles an hour. It weighs only 100 pounds."

"Amongst other pieces of mechanical ingenuity, a pedestrian chariot has been invented which is calculated for the conveyance of ladies. The wheels are upwards of six feet in diameter, and run parallel to each other. The seat is below the centre of gravity, which prevents the rider from being thrown, or easily losing the equilibrium. It is called the Gymnasiodromist."

A substitute for walking has been already seen in this country. It has been entirely surpassed by an Italian, who has made a kind of Pegasus of the hobby horse, if we may believe the foreign papers, one of which says, "A Mr. Brisance, of Milan, has invented a new travelling machine, which is said to be far superior to that of Baron Drais, and with which the traveller may go backwards. In the front of this vehicle, the Milan papers say, there is a winged horse, by the wings of which the carriage is put in motion."

On Tuesday evening, while a gentleman was exercising on one of the Velocipedes of the assembly room in Conduit-street, he was thrown with such force from his seat that he had three of his teeth knocked out by the fall.—It is added that notwithstanding this unpleasant accident, the gentleman means to persevere "in spite of his teeth."

IRISH DIAMOND.—A circumstance of a singular nature, and likely to attract the notice of mineralogists, especially in Ireland, is at present the subject of conversation among the literati of Dublin. An exceedingly fine specimen of diamond crystallized has been found in the sand of a small stream in the north of Ireland. It is of the species called by lapidaries, the yellow diamond, of extreme beauty, and remarkable size. A discovery of this kind, should it lead to further similar results, will be enough to change the distinguishing title of The Emerald Isle.

The use of a dead Wife.—A German journal contains the following paragraph: "The wife of a labouring man, in the neighbourhood of Stockholm, died some time ago, and the husband made the necessary preparations for her interment; he, however, deposited a block of wood in the coffin, instead of the corpse, which he conveyed, during the night, into a forest, that it might serve as a bait for wild beasts. By this horrible expedient he succeeded in catching a wolf and two foxes. On the circumstance being made known, the man was arrested and carried before a Court of Justice; but far from being intimidated, he claimed the reward offered for destroying mischievous animals.

M. Valabregue, the husband of Madame Catalani, has arrived in Paris, for the purpose of engaging a residence for his Lady. Madame Catalani intends not only to retire from the stage, but never to sing in public, even at a concert.

To the Editor of the London Monthly Magazine.

SIR,—As many persons are prevented from using opera glasses by thinking it expensive, I beg to recommend, the following method as recommended from experience:—

Make the bed quite flat, five feet wide of goat's hair,—without any down, long or short; sow it with onions. There are two ways sown, (least one should fail,) about one inch deep, near each other, twelve inches each way sow two rows, and if the spring is cold and dry, let the weeds grow until rain comes. In October, cover the bed with manure, or rotten hot bed. The next spring remove the weakest of the two plants, and keep the bed free from weeds. Samples have been sent to the Horticultural Society, cut in third year, and very large.

To raise seed, select the thickest stems; after blossoming sufficiently, take off the tops, to make the seed strong. This is also the best way to raise double ten weeks and Brompton stocks. Six pods are sufficiently for any strong plant, setting them to flower near double ones is of no use. The exercise I have always found in cultivation & transplanting into rich soil; wild flowers are seldom double. Keep all small seeds in the pod until you sow them.

J. STAFFORD,

57, Wood-street.

In Russia, a general system of improvement has been introduced, with the most decided success, into all the scientific and military establishments; and the mind of the nation expands more and more under the wise and judicious direction of the ministers of public education. Doubtless, nothing contributed more immediately to this object, or has a more direct influence on the civilization of the lower classes than the public and gratuitous schools. Within these few years, upwards of two thousand of these schools have been established, several of which are governed by young Russians who have been sent to England in order to be instructed in the Lancasterian method.

The liberality of the Emperor and of the Dowager Empress towards these establishments, and, in general towards every thing that regards education, is almost unbounded; and their example is imitated by a great many rich individuals

SWEDEN.—We hear from Stockholm that the prince royal, in his quality of Chancellor of the University of Upsal, with the approbation of the king his father, has just installed sixty six doctors in theology, named at the time of the coronation.

The Academy of Sciences of Stockholm had granted to Professor Nilson, a sum of money for the purpose of undertaking a tour in Norway, the principal object of which was ornithology. Mr. Nilson has just made known to the Academy the result of his tour. This interesting narrative abounds with new observation and important discoveries.

Other sums have been assigned by the same academy for making in Sweden re-

DENMARK.—The learned Brocastedt, professor of the University of Copenhagen, particularly known by his Travels in Greece, has just undertaken a tour to Italy. He has repaired to Rome, in quality of agent from the court of the king of Denmark.

GERMANY.—The three Bavarian Universities of Wurtzburg, Erlangen, and Landshut, have just obtained great advantages from the munificence of the government. The first has received a new organization, the number of its professors has been increased, and its library has been considerably enriched.

PRUSSIA.—The king has recently purchased the herbal and the library of the late professor Wildenow, in order to present them to the University of Berlin. M. Wildenow was one of the most celebrated botanists of the present period, and the author of several estimable works concerning that science.

AUSTRIA AND HUNGARY.—The Literary Journal of Vienna, which, after four year's duration, ceased to appear at the commencement of the year 1817, is continued, since 1818, under the title of Literary Annals, and enjoys the particular protection of the government. It is published quarterly.

CADIZ, May 3.

Every one here had supposed that all the ships intended for the expedition would have sailed together, for the subjugation of the revolted Colonies; this now does not appear to be the case, as orders have just reached this place from Madrid, directing the immediate departure of the following ships with troops for Lima:—The San Telmo and Alexandro men of war, carrying 70 guns each, and the Proeya frigate, of 50 guns. These, they say, will get away, if possible, by the 8th or 10th of this month. With regard to the other vessels, it is impossible to tell what is their destination, or when they will sail.

An account from Curacoa states that the Danes have consented to receive into their ports the vessels of war belonging to the Independents, and have permitted them to sell their cargoes there.

A letter has been addressed to the Secretary at Lloyds, by A. Andrade, Esq. the Vice Consul at Portugal, Brazil and Algarves, stating that a truce for two years having been signed, on the 12th April last, between the kingdom of Portugal and Regency of Tunis, hostilities between the two States had ceased, and their former relations were established for the above mentioned period.

A gentleman at Cottingham has in his garden an apricot tree, from which 320 apricots have been plucked this spring, but which retains, in a most promising state, three times that number.

A little volcano has recently made its appearance on a mountain near Morbio, at a village in the Swiss canton of Tessin. The explosion was preceded by an earthquake.——The flames ascended to a considerable height above the summit of the mountain, and masses of stones were hurled to a great distance. On the following day a large opening was observed in the mountain, from which the flames still issued with a strong smell of sulphur.—Great damage was sustained by some houses in the neighborhood, but no lives were lost. The date of this event corresponds with that of the late disasters in Sicily.

The electricity of the human body.—Dr. Hartman, of Frankfort on the Oder, has published in a German Medical Journal, a statement, according to which he is able to produce at pleasure an efflux of electrical matter from his body towards other persons.—You hear the crackling, see the sparks, and feel the electric shock. He has now acquired this faculty to so high a degree, that it depends solely on his own pleasure to make an electric spark issue from his fingers, or draw it from any other part of his body. Thus, in this electrical man, the will has an influence on the development of the electricity, which had not hither been observed, except in the electrical eel.

A boy of seven years of age, in the town of Weser, in Germany, playing one day with his sister of 4 years old, was alarmed by the cry of some men who were in pursuit of a mad dog. The child suddenly looking round him, saw the dog running towards him; but instead of making his escape, he took off his coat and wrapping it round his arm, he boldly faced the dog, and the animal attacked it, and worried the coat till the men came up, who being armed with clubs killed the dog. The men reproachfully asked the boy why he did not run and avoid the dog, which he could so easily have done. Yes, said the little hero, I could have run from the dog, but if I had he would have attacked my sister. To protect her, therefore, I thought of offering him my coat, which he might tear till you should come up and kill him. The men, as well they might, first admired his courage in facing the dog; but they were the more astonished at the prudence and firmness of mind discovered by this phenomenon. The conduct of this wonderful child furnishes a useful hint to persons of more mature age, in protecting themselves from the attacks of a mad dog.

Wallace's Monument.—There have of late been several proposals for erecting a monument in the neighborhood of Glasgow, to the memory of Sir William Wallace. A correspondent in the "Glasgow Chronicle," proposes that this monument shall be a colossal statue of the Scottish hero. The statue to be of cast iron, one hundred and twenty feet in height; the whole containing a surface of nine thousand square feet; weighing one hundred and twenty-five tons; and the expense, including stairs, ballustrades, branches, screw bolts, and cement, necessary to join the pieces together, being estimated at £3000. As the legs would be nearly five feet in diameter inside, a spiral stair might be fixed in one of them, to lead to suites of tea, or other rooms, in the body, thighs, and arms of the figure. In some of these, the keeper and his family might reside, and his emoluments would perhaps amount to five or six thousand pounds a-year. There might also be flats let out either as dwelling houses or summer quarters. The other foot to contain a reservoir of water, or serve as stabling for visitors:—The head lighted with gas might be an observatory, a small rotunda theatre, or concert and assembly room. A clock might be placed in a spare corner of the figure; the hands on the warrior's target. His sword might serve as a thunder rod. Visitors might walk round his bonnet, as they do round the top of the monument in London.—This statue, if well painted and put together, and founded on a rock, might bid defiance to time, and outlive even the pyramids.

LONDON, June 2.

The foreign exchange improved yesterday; on Hamburgh above par; on Paris, 4 to 5 per cent below par. Gold finds no purchasers at 80s per oz.

Lord Liverpool has given notice that the new loan will be for only 12 millions—the plan and condition of the loan have produced a very good effect in the city. Three per cent stocks have risen this day to 70¾.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

CHARLESTON, June 15.

Juries enlightened by Starvation.

In a civil suit now pending in this city the Jury retired to make up their verdict on Saturday evening, at 7 o'clock.—They are still confined, having remained already a period of near seventy hours. The problem is about to be solved, what connexion subsists between a man's stomach and his opinions. This process is certainly calculated to make the body lean, if not the understanding. We expect to see some of these gentlemen reduced to the circumference of Shakespear's Apothecary. Their diet is that of the Hermit in Goldsmith, so far as regulates to the "water from the spring," but without "the herbs and fruits." We cannot but admire such praise worthy abstemiousness. It reminds us of the fortitude and perseverance of the famous Capt. Riley, who saw himself gradually diminish from two hundred and fifty, to sixty pounds—and yet kept up his spirits until the sixty pounds grew up again to two hundred and fifty.

But, joking apart—should any of these Jurors die of famine, produced by an absurd requisition of the common law, what cognizance should be taken of this judicial murder? A sheriff would be hung who should starve even a felon!—But a poor juryman, it seems, if he is not killed may be starved to death at pleasure. Judges frequently hesitate in the formation of their opinions even for months after trial, but who ever heard of the proposal to imprison or starve a Judge until he decided a cause? Judges too are allowed to differ, and the majority governs with them. But jury-men are neither permitted to differ nor to hesitate. It is a mean, contemptible appeal to a man, to address his mind and his conscience through the medium of his stomach—it is one of the barbarous relics of antiquity and should be scouted from our jurisprudence. Which of us could be compelled through fear of starvation, to do even an indifferent act? And is it believed that independence of opinion and feelings on important subjects are to be thus sacrificed? What is the value of an opinion extorted from the fainting and exhausted energies of nature!—Times.)

HERCULANEUM MSS.

Sir Humphry Davy has recently discovered, that chemistry, among its other practical application, may be employed, to great advantage, in separating the MSS. of Herculaneum. His first experiment were made upon some broken pieces of manuscript, which had been presented to him; and, finding that his process would effectually separate the laminæ, without impairing the character, he communicated his success to the Prince Regent, and was enabled to proceed to Naples for the prosecution of that work. He has drawn up a report of his proceedings, which is inserted in the last Number of the Quarterly Journal; and he appears to have returned with a full conviction, that he has supplied the great desideratum for separating the leaves of these MSS. without mutilating their texture, or destroying their contents. What his process is, he thinks it prudent to conceal, lest the prospect of its advantages might be ruined, by the abortive attempts of unskilful operators.

The present mode of separating the leaves is this:—Pieces of gold-beaters skin are attached to the upper leaf, by an isinglass paste; small cords attach these pieces of skin to wooden screws above; and then, by turning the screws the upper leaf is gradually drawn from the mass. This is a slow operation; & consequently mutilates or destroys three fourths of the leaves.

The number of MSS. found, is 1696. Of these, 88 have been unrolled, and are legible; 316 have been operated upon, but are illegible: and the remaining 1265 are fragments, mutilated or crushed.—The greater part of the 88 are the works of the Greek philosophers and sophists; & consist chiefly of treatises upon natural and moral philosophy, medicine, criticism, the arts, manners, and life. There are 9 works of Epicurus; 32 of Philodemeus; 8 of Demetrius; 4 of Colotes; 1 of Polystratus; 1 of Carneades; and 1 of Chrysippus.

STATUTES OF UPPER CANADA.

[BY AUTHORITY.]

(Assessment Act concluded.)

XI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Collector may deduct at the rate of five pounds for every hundred pounds, and no more, as a full compensation for his service in collecting, any Law to the contrary notwithstanding, and that the Treasurer shall give a receipt for all money paid to him by any Collector, which receipt shall be to such Collector a sufficient acquittance.

XII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That His Majesty's Surveyor General of this Province, for the time being shall on or before the first day of July, which shall be in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty, transmit the Treasurer of each and every District thereof, with a list or schedule of the Lots in every Town, Township or reputed Township of his respective District, as the same are designated by numbers and concessions, or otherwise, upon the original plan thereof, in which list it shall be specified, in columns opposite to each lot respectively, to wit: in the said list, or any and which part thereof, his been described as granted by His Majesty, and whether the same, or any and what part thereof, be yet ungranted, and also what lots are reserved as Crown or Clergy Reserves, or for other public purposes, and to whom such reserves, or any and what part thereof have been leased by His Majesty, and shall on or before the first day of July in every year thereafter, transmit to the Treasurer of such District respectively, a schedule of all such lots or parcels of land, specifying the number of Acres or other less quantity of land in each, as have been granted or set to lease by His Majesty, since the last schedule by him furnished, as before directed.

XIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That all Lands described in the said schedule as having been granted or let to lease by His Majesty, shall from the time they are returned in the said schedule, be assessed and charged to the payment of the rates or taxes imposed by this Act, in the respective Districts in which they are situated, and not elsewhere, whether the same be occupied at the time of Assessment or not, and the Treasurer of each and every District of this Province, is hereby authorised and empowered to receive from any person or persons paying the same, the rates or taxes for and in respect of all such lands as are not returned on the Assessment Roll of any Township or place, and that in case any lands charged to the said rates or taxes, shall be unoccupied and no distress can be found on the same at the time such rates or taxes shall be payable, it shall and may be lawful for the Collector for the time being for the Township or place in which such lands are situated, at any time thereafter, to enter upon the said lands, when there shall be any distress thereupon to be found, and having obtained a warrant for that purpose from any of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace, to levy from the occupier of such tract or parcel of land, the amount of all rates and taxes in arrear, by distress and sale, as they might have done upon the same lands if in the occupation of such persons, at the time the rates and taxes became due, and after deducting the legal charges of distress and sale, as well as the amount of such taxes in arrear, such Collector shall pay the overplus, if any there be, to the person or persons occupying the premises on which such distress was made.

XIV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Treasurer of each and every District of this Province, shall keep an account for every Parish, Town, Township, reputed Township or place within his District, according to the list or schedule furnished by the Surveyor General, as before mentioned, in which account he shall particularly enumerate every lot or parcel of land in the said Parish, Township or place, describing the same as in the said schedule, and shall charge the same with, or credit it for the amount of the taxes and rates payable or paid in respect thereof, for each and every year, and that the said books or accounts shall be produced by the said Treasurer, for the inspection of the Justices at the Court of General Quarter Sessions held in his District respectively, in each and every year, and shall be kept open for the inspection of all persons desiring to see the same, between the hours of ten and three, on every first and third Monday in each month, and the Treasurer is hereby authorised to demand for every such search and inspection, one shilling and three pence, and no more.

XV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That when the Rates and Assessments upon any lot, piece or parcel of land, shall be suffered to remain in arrear and unpaid for the space of three years, the Rates and Assessments so in arrear, shall be increased in the proportion of one third, and if suffered to remain five years in arrear, the whole shall be increased in the proportion of one half, and if suffered to remain eight years in arrear, the amount of such arrears shall be doubled, and the said Rates and Assessments shall be charged thence forward in double the amount that would grow due according to the existing Rate of Assessment, and such Rates so increased respectively, shall be charged against the lands in the accounts of the Treasurer herein directed to be kept, and shall be levied in the manner herein before provided.

XVI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That persons residing in Townships or places not authorised to hold Town meetings, shall be considered, for the purposes of this Act, as subscribers of the Township adjacent thereto in which shall contain the smallest number of inhabitants, and shall be Assessed accordingly.

XVII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Clerk of the Peace in each and every District in the Province, shall and is hereby required to transmit before the end of the month of January in each and every year, to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the Government, an account of the said Assessment, in order that the same may be laid before the Legislative Council and House of Assembly, which shall contain a true and full statement of every species of property in respect of which such Assessment was made, and the Clerks of the Peace respectively, are hereby authorised to demand, and the Treasurer of each District is hereby respectively required to pay each of the said Clerks of the Peace, for their trouble in making up such aggregate account, the sum of thirty shillings.

XVIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful for the said Justices at their respective General Quarter Sessions assembled, or the greater part of them then and there assembled, to nominate and appoint a proper person, being resident within the District, to be Treasurer of the said District, which Treasurer shall give sufficient security in such sum as shall be approved of by the said Justices at their respective general Quarter Sessions then and there assembled, to be accountable for the several sums of money which shall be respectively paid to him in pursuance of this Act, and to pay such sum or sums of money as shall be ordered to be paid by the Justices in their General Quarter Sessions, and also for the true and faith ful execution of the trust reposed in him, and all and every such sum or sums of money as shall be paid into his hands, by virtue of and in pursuance of this Act, shall be deemed and taken to be a public stock of the District, and the said treasurer shall and is hereby required to pay so much of the money in his hands, to such person or persons as the said Justices at their respective General Quarter Sessions, or the greater part of them, then and there assembled, shall by their order direct and appoint, for the purposes therein recited, and for any other uses and purposes to which the public stock of the said District is or shall be applicable by Law, reserving at all and every time or times, to and for his own use, as a reward for his labour and expence, the sum of four pounds for every hundred pounds that shall or may be paid into his hands, under the authority of this Act, for the purposes aforesaid.

XIX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the said Treasurer shall and is hereby required to keep books of entries of the several sums respectively received and paid by him, in pursuance of this or any other Act now or hereafter in force in this Province, and also to deliver in a true and exact account, upon oath, which oath any one of the Justices at their respective General Quarter Sessions, is hereby authorised to administer, of all and every sum or sums of money respectively received and paid by him, distinguishing the particular uses to which such sum or sums of money have been applied, to the Justices at every General Quarter Sessions to be holden for the District, and shall lay before the Justices of such Sessions the proper vouchers for the same, and also to transmit once in each and every year, a certified copy thereof, on oath, to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor or person administering the Government, in order that the same may be laid before the Legislative Council and House of Assembly, and the Auditors of the said Justices of the Peace or the greater part of them, by their orders made at their General Quarter Sessions, to such Treasurer, shall be taken and allowed as a good and sufficient acquittance to them of the said amount thereof.

XX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful for the said Justices of the Peace at their General Quarter Sessions, or the greater part of them, from time to time, to continue such Treasurer in his office, so long as they shall see convenient, and to remove him at their pleasure and appoint any other proper person in his place.

XXI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the following fees, and no more, shall be taken for every distress levied under this Act,—for every warrant of distress, two shillings and six pence; for every sale—relling to execute the same four pence; and for every selling and making returns, two shillings.

XXII And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That for every schedule for each Township, furnished by the Surveyor General of this Province, according to the provisions of this Act, on or before the first day of July, one thousand eight hundred and twenty, he shall be entitled to receive from and out of the Rates and duties now or hereafter to be raised, levied and collected, to and for the uses of this Province, the sum of twenty shillings for each and every such schedule, and for every supplementary schedule thereafter, furnished as directed by this Act, the sum of two shillings and six pence, to be paid by the Receiver General of this Province, in discharge of such warrant or warrants, as the Governor Lieutenant Governor or person administering the Government of this Province shall issue, and shall be accounted for to the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury, for the time being, in such manner and form as it shall please His Majesty to direct.

XXIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That this Act shall be and remain in force for the space of eight years, and from thence to the end of the then next ensuing session of Parliament.

Scarborough Springs FARM.

For Sale, on liberal terms,

AN extensive and very valuable Farm, situate in the fourth Concession of the Township of Scarboro', within fifteen miles of the Seat of Government, and containing about three hundred acres of the very best timbered Land.

There are about forty acres of the premises in a high state of cultivation, fenced, and abundantly supplied with water. And the Farm, from its being contiguous to an important Salmon Fishery, and containing an extensive Maple Bush, must prove a most desirable purchase to any one wishing to settle in the vicinity of York.

The eligibility of the situation for a Farmer, within a few miles of a good and sure market, connected with the fertility of the soil, and various other local advantages are of themselves fully sufficient to recommend the above to the public; but the subscriber has it in his power further to state, that it is the seat of the much celebrated Scarborough Springs, the efficacy of whose waters in the cure of a variety of maladies is too notorious to need recapitulation: suffice it therefore to say, that if a commodious house were erected for the accommodation of strangers, and conducted by an attentive and enterprising person, the continual resort of the infirm and sickly to these Springs, to enjoy the salubrity of their waters, could not fail to secure most ample remuneration for any exertions which might be bestowed for their ease and comfort.

From the foregoing it may be inferred, and the proprietor is bold to say, that there is not a situation in the Province better adapted for the establishment and speedy growth of a Village, and that to any intelligent and industrious individual he offers a most tempting and lucrative speculation.

For Sale also—The unexpired term of a Lease of the Clergy Reserve adjoining the said Lands of which Lease three years only have expired. There are ten acres of improvement, well enclosed, thereon, with a fine stream of water passing through it, as well as the Springs Farm.

An indisputable Title with immediate possession will be given, and a liberal credit allowed for part of the purchase money, on approved security.

For further particulars application to be made to the proprietor.

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, June 12.

The latter part of April there were several bloody contests at Constantinople between the Janisaries and other troops in that capital—and tranquility was not perfectly restored at the last dates. Pacha Ogiou's head has been placed on one of the gate posts of the palace. A part of Scutary has been destroyed by fire.

The present Pacha of Egypt is incessant in his efforts to increase the prosperity of that inn country. A Bank and Insurance Company is established at Alexandria—the Great Canal is to be restored—and much encouragement is offered to Agriculture.

The Pope has erected Canada into an Archbishopric.

A Cadiz paper mentions the capture of the Spanish vessel the Tiger by the revolutionary corsair Constitution.

A letter from Irun, in Spain, dated the 14th May says, that a peasant has found in a field near Vittoria, a very valuable diamond.—There is every reason to believe that it belonged to Joseph Bonaparte, who lost all the riches and valuable effects which he was carrying away, in consequence of the total defeat of the French army, near that city. The value of the diamond is stated to be about 400,000 reals (100,000 franc.)

Letters from Lyons, of May 20, speak of the extraordinary success, in that town, of M. Fabre d'Olivel, who, by a peculiar method of his own, had developed the faculty of hearing in many deaf and dumb, of both sexes and different ages. The experiments made to prove the fact of hearing, were in the apartment of M. Mattel Degerated president of the Chamber of Commerce, in presence of more than 200 persons—among whom were baron Rambaud, the Mayor, the members of the municipal council, and many ecclesiastics and physicians.

A Paris paper of the 2d of June, states that counterfeits of Russian Bank Bills, to the amount of 1,400,000 rouble, had been discovered in London.

The importations of Grain into England, during the year 1818, amounted, in value, to the enormous sum of 13,271,029 pounds sterling; whilst those of 1815, were only, 2,192,685—difference 11,056,044 pounds sterling.

By a Royal Order issued the 13th May, all Wheat imported into Lisbon, is to pay a duty of 80 reis per alqueire, and Indian Corn, 100 reis, instead of 20 reis; to take place from the date of the edict.

The increase of population at Marseilles in three years, is stated in a Paris paper to be 40,000 souls, since the restoration of Louis the XVIII.

BEES.—The produce of bees is more profitable than the generality of persons may be inclined to imagine, and the time bestowed upon them is seldom useiessly employed.

A French Bishop being about to make his annual visitation, sent word to a certain curate whose ecclesiastical benefice was extremely trifling, that he meant to dine with him; at the same time requesting that he would not put himself to any extraordinary expence.——The curate promised to attend to the bishop's suggestion, but he did not keep his word for he provided a most sumptuous entertainment. His lordship was much surprised and could not help censuring the conduct of the curate, observing that it was highly ridiculous in a man whose circumstances were so narrow to launch out into such expense, nay, almost to dissipate his entire income in one single day.— Do not be uneasy on that score, my lord,' replied the curate, 'for I assure you that what you now see is not the produce of my curacy, which I bestow exclusively upon the poor.' 'Then you have a patrimony sir! said the bishop. 'No sir. 'You speak in riddles: how do you then do?' My lord, I have a convent!—I did not know that there was one in this neighborhood. This is all very strange, very unaccountable Mr. Curate, "You are jocular my lord.'—' But come sir, I entreat that you would solve the enigma: I would fain see the convent.' So you shall, my lord, after dinner; and I promise you that your lordship shall be satisfied with my conduct.

Accordingly when dinner was over, the curate conducted the prelate to a large enclosure, entirely occupied by bee-hives, and pointing to the latter, observed, 'this my lord, is the convent which gave us our dinner, it brings me in about 1,300 livres per annum, upon which I live very comfortably, and with which I contrive to entertain my guests genteelly.' The surprise and satisfaction of the bishop at this discovery may easily be conceived. The sequel of the story informs us that afterwards when a curate made application to his lordship for an improved living he would only reply, keep bees—keep bees.'

Extraordinary Theft.—On the first day of March a most extraordinary theft was committed in the conventual church of St. Francis d'Assisse, after the celebration of a solemn funeral service for the late Queen of Spain, Isabella de Braganza. The decorations of this occasion are estimated to have cost two millions of Real Teilon (about 100,000 dollars.) The concourse of people present was immense.—When the officiating bishop concluded the service, his pontifical robe and ornaments, according to the established custom of Spain, were laid on a massy platean of silver, and the whole placed on the table called credentiel by one of the prelate's pages. Immediately a person advanced and made a most profound reverence towards the altar, took the plateau, the rich ornaments of gold and embroidery, the mitre, ornamented with precious stones, and the black cope which had been expressly made for this occasion, and carried the whole off! Through the church, and for a considerable distance outside, he had to proceed through a double line of soldiers, who permitted him to pass without interruption, thanking him to be employed in carrying the episcopal robes, &c. to the bishop's house. The prelate's servants, not finding in the sacristy either the plateau or the ornaments, also believed that the man who took them off the table was a servitor of the convent, and that he had carried them to the bishop's. The illusion soon ceased; and nothing can equal people's astonishment at the cool, audacious, calculating habits of this sacrilegious thief, who completely escaped with his prize, and has not since been heard of.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

From the Baltimore American Farmer.

A method of taking the honey, without destroying the bees.

The common practice of killing the bees, in order to obtain the honey, few can witness without some little compunction; and as there is a very simple method of effecting the object, without any injury to this most interesting little animal, which, on the score of interest, as well as humanity, claims regard, I beg leave to communicate it through your paper, should you deem it worthy a place in it

In the evening, when the bees have retired, take the hive from its stand, spread a table cloth on the ground, set the hive on it, placing something under to raise it three or four inches—then draw up the corners of the cloth and fasten them tight around the middle of the hive, leaving it loose below, that the bees will have sufficient room to remain between it and the hive—then raise the lid of the hive a little and blow in the smoke from a segar, a few puffs of which, as it is very disagreeable, will drive them down; continue raising the lid, gradually blowing in the smoke all round, and in a few minutes you will find that they have all gone out of the hive. You may then take off the lid and cut away as much honey as you may think proper. If the operation be performed in the beginning of July, you may take nearly all, as there will be time enough to provide a sufficiency for their support during the winter. As soon as you have taken the honey, put on the lid, loosen the cloth and spread it out, and in an hour or two the bees will have returned into the hive. It may then be replaced on the stand and on the following day they will be found at work as usual.

This method is very simple, and preferable to that sometimes practiced of driving the bees into another hive, as you get all the honey, and moreover the new comb which is still empty, and the young bees, not yet out of the cells are preserved—there is also danger in driving, of their not liking their new habitation, and in that case sallying out and making war upon their neighbors. The above method has frequently been practised by myself and others, and have always found it to do well.

A fine kind of Mackerel.—On Tuesday morning, June 15th the crew of the schr. Sally, 7 in number, caught 3935 mackerel, after 2 o'clock—and the night before, from 9 o'clock P. M. until daylight 26 barrels round mackerel. The schr. belongs to Mr. John Perley and others, of Salem.—Salem Reg.

Cedar roaches.—The root of the spotted dock will, it is said, effectually extirpate these vermin. Being laid over night in the places where they frequent, they eat of it voraciously, and are thereby destroyed.

As an evidence that patriotism is not wholly extinct even in England, we find the marquis of Camden has relinquished to government the income of his offices, from which he would have realised about 280,000 dollars; and has received the unanimous thanks of parliament for his disinteresedness.

The Hon. Geo. Tibbits, Esq.

I lately saw a communication to you as president of the agricultural society of the county of Rensselaer, recommending the use of meat or fish brine to destroy the Canada thistle.

I have no doubt, if a sufficient quantity of it were put on them, it would not only kill the thistle, but also every kind of vegetation so effectually that nothing would grow on the same ground for several years.

The Legislature of Vermont passed an act, about twenty-five years ago, obliging all owners & occupants of land which contained the thistle to mow them when in blossom.—this had the effect to destroy a part only; and the reason was no then known why a part only was killed. The project was generally given up as not being sure to answer the purpose. But it is now fully known, that if they are cut down just before, or in a rain, when they are in blossom, so that the hollow of each stock becomes filled with water, they will generally die; and many persons have profited by the discovery, and entirely cleared their farms of this very destructive nuisance.

Extreme heating of the Weather.—A Correspondent at Poughkeepsie, under date of Friday evening last says—"The heat of the weather here to-day, is extreme. The Thermometer, placed in an entry which is generally considered as very cool, is now (half past 5 o'clock, P. M.) standing at 89 degrees."

The weather in this city, for the last three or four days, has been unusually warm. At 3 o'clock on Friday, the Thermometer, in the large room of the Coffee House, stood at 92; on Saturday at the same hour, at 93; and on Sunday at two o'clock, at 95. A Correspondent in the Gazette, states that an excellent Thermometer, (placed in a piazza on the North side of a house in the upper part of the city,) stood on Saturday at 99; and on Sunday rose to 101.—N. N. Spect.

Extract of a Speech, delivered by Ld. Castlereagh in the British House of Commons on the 7th June, in answer to the remarks of Mr. Tierney in relation to the financial state of the kingdom.

"There would be a period (said Lord Castlereagh) when parliament must look at the interests of all parties, and perhaps put a stop to the accumulation of the Sinking Fund for the national benefit and security. His Lordship therefore protested against the misrepresentions which the right hon. gentleman [Mr. Tierney] had attempted, and from which his own better knowledge ought to have repelled him—(Hear)—the first question which the country ought to look at in a fearless and a manly way, was whether it ought not to be made to enable it to meet the burdens of a new war, should such a calamity unfortunately visit it; This was a subject of immense magnitude—a subject independent of all parties, and of all party interests; and "I conjure you (said his lordship with great warmth) not to suffer any fear, or any of respect for the government, if such exists, to divert you from the strict discharge of your duty. If you do so not in your conscience believe that the existing government can be trusted—if you think them incompetent in talent, or in prudence, or in honesty, you owe it to your own character, to the best interests of the state, to the great nation whose representatives you are, not to hesitate a moment in carrying that opinion to the foot of the throne, and to call for the dismissal of those individuals you hold unworthy of their stations.—(Loud cheers.)—I should hold that the government was indeed degraded; that it was indeed unworthy of the confidence of the prince who has so trusted it, of the people who has so long relied upon it, if, after the expression of such an opinion, it were base enough for a moment to continue in office; if the house refused ministers its support, if it denied them the means of conducting the affairs of the kingdom, they ought instantly to retire to make way for others, in whose favor the wishes and hopes of the country were united. (Hear.) I conjure you, gentlemen, not to trifle or tamper with this question; let them put government wholly out of their view, and let them decide upon the broad and substantial merits, not upon any consideration of who may or who may not be in power; the question is not between ministers and their antagonists, it is between parliament and the country—between the representatives and their constituents; and it would be disgraceful to the house, if at such a time as this it could at all contemplate party interests and political motives. I say, and I say it with all humility that as servants of the crown we should be unworthy of our stations, if while parliament withheld the means, we still persisted in the retaining the reins of government; we claim to be armed with weapons to meet the difficulties and dangers of the state, and if we are not to be intrusted with them, we are willing to resign to more favored, perhaps more able, but not more zealous champions."

SALEM, July 16.

Wonderful preservation!—A Black man, by the name of Peter Jackson, arrived here a few days since in the ship Malabar, from Bombay, after having long supposed to have been buried in the depths of the ocean, and administration taken out in consequence upon his estate and his worldly accounts settled in due and legal form. His story is this: Peter was cook on board the brig Ceres, of this port, Joseph Strout, jun. master, on her voyage to Calcutta. In coming down Calcutta River, when near the Sandheads, at the mouth of the river, the Ceres was overtaken by a violent storm of wind, accompanied with thunder and lightning, which threw the brig on her beam-ends, and at the same time she struck aground on the sand-bar; and after heading over into deep water, she righted and proceeded on her voyage. At the time when the Ceres was knocked down Peter fell overboard, and all exertions to recover him proved unavailing; he side was running rapidly out of the river, and Peter, having got hold of a steering-sail boom which was thrown to him among other things, was floated down the river about seven miles below the place where he fell overboard.—When the tide turned, he was carried by the river again, still supported by his little spar; and it having become dark he passed the vessel without seeing it or being seen by those on board.

After being in the water about 12 hours, exposed to the sharks and alligators, which are very numerous in that river, he was providentially cast on shore at Calpee, having drifted upwards of thirty miles. From Calpee, he took passage on board a country ship which was carrying soldiers to the Isle of France, and thence to Bombay; where, after waiting several months, he accidentally heard of a Salem ship being in port, on board of which he was received and brought home a few days since. Although the first person he met, after his landing, was one of his old shipmates, who shrunk from his proffered hand as from the ghost of one whom he had long since seen for the last time in the grasp of death; but he was at length coaxed to believe that he was not a mere shadow, but the real substantial Peter, risen again from his watery grave!

ROBBERY.

On the night of the 29th, or the morning of the 30th June last, at Walker's Hotel, in Kingston, U. C. was stolen, from the trunk of George Ridout, Esq. a parcel directed to William Allan Esq. containing 16,000 five dollar notes of the Montreal Bank; for the detection of which £50 reward offered.—

Yesterday at the Union Hotel, of this city, was taken into custody, on suspicion, Dr. C———e, of Kingston, having in his possession from £750 to £1000, in five dollar bills of the Montreal Bank, of the numbers of those stolen from Mr. Ridout. He has given no account how he came by them. He is in consequence committed. It is supposed that the whole sum will be recovered.

With the Doctor was taken an American gentleman, who was found in his company. Nothing however, appearing against the latter, he was this morning discharged.

The Newcastle frigate sailed on Thursday last for Halifax.

H. M. S. Mersey intends to leave here on Monday, with His Excellency the Earl of Dalhousie, finally and suit.

On Friday the Quebec Bank declared a dividend of six per cent. for the last six months.

MONTREAL, July 12.

At a general meeting held on the 20th ult. at the Court House of Quebec, many resolutions were adopted, the object of which is to afford employment, information, and assistance to destitute Settlers in that city and its neighborhood. Our limits not permitting the insertion of the resolutions, we must content ourselves with mentioning that they were framed with much wisdom, and that the following officers have been nominated, and appointed, subject to their own consent—His Grace the Duke of Richmond &c. &c. &c. President—Rt. Rev. Lord Bishop of Quebec and the Hon. the Chief Justice. Vice-Presidents—Noah Freer Esq. Treasurer—and Chev. Robt. D'Estimauville, Secretary.

Two companies of the Royal Staff Corps arrived in this City on Monday evening last, from Quebec, in the steamboat Malsham, and the following morning marched for the Ottawa to relieve the party of the same corps employed there. They landed in Quebec from England on Friday last. The following is a list of their officers. Captains, Duvenette and Dumeresque; Lieutenants, Pierce, Longmore, Boyd and Pardy; Ensigns, Scott and Geddis. The party whom they are destined to relieve, are soon to return to Great Britain, being chiefly composed of seven-years-men, whose time of service is nearly expired, and who therefore go home to be discharged.

Melancholy Accident.—Last Monday evening, Mr. John Richardson, second son of the Honorable John Richardson, was unfortunately drowned in the Port of this City. He, with some other young gentlemen, went over to the small Island nearly opposite to Old Market to bathe. Unable to swim, he incautiously plunged into a part of the river beyond his depth, and was swept away by the rapidity of the current. A gallant but ineffectual attempt to save him was made by young Mr. Gerrard and a sailor, which nearly proved fatal to the latter. The deceased was about 17 years of age, and is the more to be regretted from the excellence promised by his character. After great diligence of search, the body was found, not far from the spot where he had sunk, at about 2 o'clock yesterday. This event has excited universal sympathy, and created in the public bosom a regret exceeded only by the grief of his disconsolate family.

AGRICULTURAL REPORT.

District of Quebec.

The weather from the 22d June till middle of this Month, was rainy, principally heavy showers and thunder; the temperature of the air frequently very warm. The last ten days have been dry and warm, the Thermometer frequently at 90.

Up to the middle of the month, vegetation was very rapid and luxuriant, and the barley, wheat and rye shooting out into full ear. Some wheat and oats were cuts in low rich grounds, however unhurted by the wet, and although they have revived during the last ten days, they will not probably produce a crop equal to the same grain, on high and light soils.

Spring Wheat, generally throughout the District, is in blossom; the early sorts beginning to change colour, and the whole promises a most abundant crop. They will, however, be late in all the parishes below St. Roch. The same is to be met with in the Island of Orleans, frequently visited by products from the Labrador. Wherever they are sown, they have however, resisted the last most unfavorable winter, and the early are now larger than those of Spring Wheat. It is now nearly ripe.

Barley, promises to be an abunding crop, and some fields will be ready to cut by the end of this month.

Oats, excepting in low grounds look well, and are generally short, the extent also greater than usual.

Rye, Since the misfortune by frost in August 1816, great quantities of this grain have been sown in the lower parishes. It begins to change colour, and promises an abundant crop.

Peas, are unusually luxuriant; the early sorts, many of which have been disseminated by the Agricultural Society, are now fit for the table.

Potatoes, This root, which was only introduced into Canada after the conquest in 1760, is now extensively cultivated on every farm. Since 1816, the quantity planted yearly has quadrupled, it having proved nearly the sole resource in that unfortunate year. The horse hoe begins now to be very generally used in this culture, but the drills are still not sufficiently apart, being frequently only eighteen inches, whereas they ought at least to be twenty eight or thirty, and the potatoes are set in the drills, at three or four inches instead of eight or twelve.

Buck Wheat, is also more extensively cultivated than usual, and has been found very useful for fattening poultry & hogs. The strength of its stalks, would permit its being advantageously cultivated as a drill or fallow crop.

Horse Beans, have been lately introduced, but have not had a fair trial. Their excellence, given in small quantities as food for work horses, is well known in Britain, and as they thrive on low rich lands and answer best in drills, their cultivation in such lands serves instead of a summer fallow.

Turnips, cultivated in drills as a fallow crop are hardly yet known in this district. Some patches of them are however occasionally met with and they look well, being of the second sowing, the first having generally been destroyed by the fly. In time we have no doubt their great value as a food for cattle, and a drill crop, will be fully appreciated; sufficient experiments have now been made to shew that they thrive well and can be preserved in this climate.

Hay, will be but a middling crop, it having suffered by the drought after the melting of the snow and the frost of the preceding winter. Till the lands are cleared of weeds by summer fallow or fallow crops with manure, and sown with grass seeds, Hay will be always scarce and Agriculture languish.

Flax, Great quantities of this article is now cultivated in this district and the produce is wrought up into coarse linen, for home wear. The farmer now finds himself compelled both to increase his stock of sheep and this article, in order to clothe himself during the present low prices of Agricultural produce of Great Britain. The crop this year is excellent.

Garden stuffs have recovered during the late rains, and still promise to furnish an ordinary supply.

Fruit, in this district will be abundant, considering the miserable state of the orchards, the trees of which are set too close, unpruned and suffered to be overrun with moss and devoured by caterpillars and lice.

Upon the whole the present year promises to be one of the most abundant in this District; but the season of accidents is not yet passed.——28th July, 1819.

It is well known that the Red Indians, an aboriginal race of men, were found along the coasts of Labrador at the time of its discovery by the Europeans, but from the ill usage they received at the hands, they have long been driven into the interior, and are now to be met with on the face of every part of the island, as their certain and most dreaded enemies—In the north of the Island they frequently visited by predatory bands of Esquimaux from the Labrador, who have rendered wherever they appear in the south, they are hunted like wild deer by the Micmacs, from the neighbouring provinces, and also by the whites in which they are clothed. They now form a probable estimate of the number they have been used to exist in, before our own people upon the coast, and in the face, that they fly the approach of with the utmost precipitation, and the knowledge does not appear to be, by, it was first generally known that this Island, to be a punishment to the Indian.

In consequence of this horrible extinction and cruelty, which has formed a person in this island, not exaggerated in the relation, but but believe that the Red Indians are the most ferocious and intractable savage tribe—impelled by the fear of those of hunger and hostility, they have with no less astonishment and regret that we find, in the young woman who has been brought among us, a docile being, sensibly alive to every impression and delicate propriety of act.

Extract from the report of the Agricultural Society, St. A

The meeting of St. Ma Beauce was attended by upwards of two thousand persons. The Horses and Cows was superior; the latter consisted of between two and three hundred persons, and was the best breed of Horses. The meeting consisted of about one hundred persons. The Cows were the show. The breed of Horses is the Canadian downwards, is of a large size, unusual in the country, but possessing fine proportion, symmetry and activity, which distinguishes the true Canadian breed. At River Ouelle about 300 persons present were at River du Loup about 300 persons present cattle exhibited at the latter was of a superior quality. Plowing matches were only held at La Beauce and River Ouelle, for a sufficient number of competitors in other places the work was done with two horses, or two oxen with two boys, instead of being each conducted by the horse. In some parts of the Canadian wheel plough was used, but more generally the swing plough is used in the country, of a light construction. Mr. Taschereau, of La Beauce, and one at River Ouelle drove their own horses. The latter, though inferior; the furrows tolerably straight and regular, but too broad and too much laid flat, leaving little shoulder to the bed, with large useless wedges at each ridge. The establishment of the furrow in Beauce is about two thirds of the breadth. The ploughs was too heavy for the proper furrow, and without a mould board ing lowered the purpose, unnecessarily increasing the resistance of the ploughs forwarded by the horses, soon got out of order, and the furrow was not all adapted to the narrow ridges in this country, on all sorts of soil. The present routine of cultivation requires the grass on the fallow to be broke, it being the sole dependance for pasture, the ensuing year. The introduction of grass seeds with grain, is however commenced, and is the first step to the extirpation of the present ill judged and improved tillage with its attendants.

worth recording, however difficult it may be found of belief by our English bre tercourse, that there should be, at this day, a race of men, less known in Great Britain than any other people upon the surface of the discovered globe. To what cause this extraordinary want of in formation is to be attributed, we shall not stop to enquire, but hasten to the more useful task of calling the attention of the public to the interesting subject which has thus unexpectedly presented itself.

It is well known that the Red Indians are an aboriginal race of men, who were found along the coasts of the Island, at the time of its discovery by Europeans; but from the ill usage they received on all sides, they have long been compelled to retire into the interior, and to fly from the face of every animal in human form, as their certain and most deadly enemy.
—In the north of the Island, they are fre quently visited by predatory parties of Esquimeaux from the Labrador, and mur dered wherever they are met; in the south, they are literally hunted like wild deer by the Micmacs, from the neigh bouring provinces, and slain for the skins in which they are clothed; and we may form a probable estimate of the treatment they have been used to experience from our own people upon the sea shores, from the fact, that they fly their approach with the utmost precipitation and horror, and the knowledge that until very late ly, it was not generally understood in this Island, to be a punishable offence to shoot an Indian.
In consequence of this habitual perse cution and cruelty, which every well in formed person in this island knows are not exaggerated in the relation, we could not but believe that the Red Indians were the most ferocious and intractable of the savage tribe—impelled by no motives but those of hunger and hostility. And it is with no less astonishment than pleasure, that we find, in the young woman which has been brought amongst us, a gentle being, sensibly alive to every mild im pression and delicate propriety of her sex.

breed. At River Ouelle there were a bout 500 persons present at the meeting; at River du Loup about 300; the neat cattle exhibited at the latter place, was of a superior quality. Ploughing match es were only held at La Beauce, St. Va lier and River Ouelle, for want of a suffi cient number of competitors. At all the places the work was done with only two horses, or two oxen with yokes or col lars, instead of being tackled as former ly by the horns. In some instances the Canadian wheel plough was used, but more generally the swing plough made in the country, of a light but imperfect con struction. Mr. Taschereau's ploughman at La Beauce, and one at River Ouelle, drove their own horses. The work was inferior; the furrows tolerably straight and regular, but too broad for the depth, laid flat, leaving little shoulder and seed bed, with large useless spaces between each ridge. The established proportion of the furrow in Britain is a depth two thirds of the breadth. The stock of all the ploughs was too broad to make a proper furrow, and with the coulter and mould board imperfectly an swered the purpose, unnecessarily in creasing the resistance or draught. The ploughs forwarded by the Society were found out of order, and the harrows not at all adapted to the narrow ridges usual in this country, on all sorts of land; or to the present routine of cultivation, which requires the grass on the sod not to be broke, it being the sole dependance for pasture, the ensuing year. The sowing of grass seeds with grain, after potatoes, is however commenced, and will be the first step to the extirpation of weeds and an improved tillage with better imple ments.

QUICK TRAVELLING.

SAINT JOHN, (N. B.) July 14.

There is a report generally circulat ing in town this morning, that Colonel the Honorable Sir Robert le Pore Trench is to administer the Government of the Province in the expected absence of His Excellency the Lieutenant-governor, to England.—We cannot vouch for the cor rectness of this report—it may possibly be true.—N. B. Royal Gazette, 5th inst.

Cumberland, Fort Lawrence, 3d July 1819.

I have lived on a farm in this Town ship for 38 years, and never had any wheat blasted except in one instance and that accidentally. Allow me to give you a receipt for preventing smut in wheat which after a long experience has never failed me. It is as follows: Take a cask and to the first bushel of seed put two quarts of unslacked lime and a sufficiency of water to cover it—stir it well, then take it out and spread it upon the plat form. To the next and every other bu shel add more water and one quart of lime. Keep it in a heap and the grain will soon dry up the water as well as a little of the lime water to be thrown over it every day or two. In this state let it remain eight or ten days, by which time it will have sprouted. In the mean while the land is warming and the wheat will appear above ground in four or five days after sowing. On this plan I prepared one spring four bushels and on the same day for the sake of experiment sowed one bushel prepared in the common way.
The result was that the one bushel was struck with rust and never filled at all—
—in the north of the Island, they are fre quently visited by predatory parties of Esquimeaux from the Labrador, and mur dered wherever they are met; in the while the four bushels ripened well and bright.

[BY AUTHORITY.]

An Act to repeal part of and amend the Laws now in force for laying out, amending and keeping in repair the Public Highways & Roads in this Province.

WHEREAS, it is expedient to amend the Laws now in force, for providing for the laying out, amending and keeping in repair the Public Highways & Roads within this Province. Be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain entitled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of His Majesty's reign, entitled, "An Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province" and by the authority of the same, that from and after the first Monday in the month of March, which will be in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and twenty, the thirtieth clause of an Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the fifteenth year of His Majesty's Reign, entitled, "An Act to provide for the laying out, amending and keeping in repair the public Highways and Roads within this Province, and to repeal the Laws now in force for that purpose," and so much of an Act passed in the fifty sixth year of His Majesty's reign, entitled, "An Act to repeal and amend part of an Act passed in the fifteenth year of His Majesty's Reign, entitled, "An Act to provide for the laying out, amending and keeping in repair the Public Highways and Roads within this Province, and to repeal the laws now in force for that purpose," as enacts "that any person liable to perform the duty imposed by the before recited Act, may compound for such duty, if he or she may think fit, by paying to the Overseers the sum of ten shillings, for each cart, waggon, team and driver for each day, and every person liable to perform such labor, may compound for the same, if he or she shall think fit, by paying to the Overseers the sum of five shillings, for and in lieu of such day's duty or labor respectively, for the time and in the manner directed by the aforesaid Act, shall be and the same are hereby repealed.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That from and after the said first Monday in March, which will be in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and twenty, every person included or inserted in or upon the Assessment Roll of any Township, reputed township or place, shall, in proportion to the estimate of his real and personal property stated on the said Roll, be held liable to work on the Highways and Roads in each and every year as follows, (that is to say,) if his property be not rated at more than twenty five pounds, then his proportion of Statute labor on the Highways, shall be two days; if at more than twenty five pounds, and not more than fifty pounds, three days; if at more than fifty pounds and not more than seventy-five pounds, four days; if at more than seventy-five pounds, and not more than one hundred pounds, five days; if at more than one hundred pounds, and not more than one hundred and fifty pounds, six days; if at more than one hundred and fifty pounds and not more than two hundred pounds, seven days; if at more than two hundred pounds and not more than two hundred and fifty pounds, eight days; if at more than two hundred and fifty pounds and not more than three hundred pounds, nine days; if at more than three hundred pounds and not more than three hundred and fifty pounds, ten days; if at more than three hundred and fifty pounds and not more than four hundred pounds, eleven days; if at more than four hundred pounds and not more than five hundred pounds, twelve days; and for every hundred pounds above the sum of five hundred pounds, till it amount to one thousand pounds, one day; and for every two hundred pounds above the sum of one thousand pounds, till it amount to two thousand pounds, one day; and for every three hundred pounds above the sum of two thousand pounds, till it amounts to three thousand five hundred pounds, one day; & for every five hundred pounds above the sum of three thousand five hundred pounds, one day. Provided always, that every person possessed of a waggon, cart or team of horses, oxen or beasts of burthen or draft used to draw the same, shall be liable to work on the Highways not less than three days, any thing herein contained to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That from and after the first Monday in the month of March, which will be in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and twenty, every lot or parcel of land in this Province, subject to be Rated and Assessed, but which by reason of its remaining unoccupied or for other cause, may not be included in the Assessment Roll of the Township, reputed Township or place wherein the same is situated, shall nevertheless be Rated and Assessed at one eighth of a penny per acre annually towards defraying the expence of laying out amending and keeping in repair the public Highways & Roads in such Township, reputed township or place, to be levied by distress and sale in case of non payment as the same manner by the Collectors in the different Districts respectively, as the other Rates & Assessments shall and may be levied and collected by virtue of the Laws then in force for that purpose.

IV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Treasurer of each and every District in this Province, is hereby authorised and impowered to receive from any person or persons paying the same, the Rates or Taxes by this Act imposed for or in respect of all such lands as are not returned on the Assessment Roll of any Township or place, and that in case any lands charged with such Rates and Taxes, shall be unoccupied and no distress can be found thereon, at the time such Rates and Taxes shall be payable, it shall and may be lawful for the Collector for the time being of the Township or place in which such lands are situated, at any time thereafter, to enter upon the said lands, when there shall be any distress thereupon to be found in the actual possession of the owner or occupier thereof, and having obtained a warrant for that purpose from a ny of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace, to levy the amount of such Rates & Taxes in arrear by distress and sale as they might have done upon the same lands if in the occupation of such persons at the time the Rates & Taxes became due, and after deducting the legal charges of distress and sale, as well as the amount of such rates and taxes in arrear, such Collector shall pay the overplus if any there be to the person or persons occupying the premises on which such distress was made.

V. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That when the Rates and Assessments chargeable upon any lot, piece or parcel of land by virtue of this Act, shall be in arrear and unpaid for the space of three years, the said Rates and Assessments so in arrear shall be increased in the proportion of one third, and if suffered to remain five years in arrear the whole shall be increased in the proportion of one half, and if suffered to remain eight years in arrear, the amount of such arrears shall be doubled, and the said Rates and Assessments shall be charged thenceforwards in double the amount that would grow due according to the existing Rate and Assessment, and such Rates so increased respectively, shall be charged against the lands in the accounts of the Treasurer herein directed to be kept and shall be levied in the manner herein before provided.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That any person liable to perform the duty imposed by this or any other Law now in force, may compound for such duty, if he or she may think fit, by paying to the Overseer the sum of seven shillings and six pence for each cart, waggon, team and driver for each day, and every person liable to perform such labor may compound for the same, by paying to the Overseer the sum of three shillings and nine pence for and lieu of such days duty or labor respectively, at the time and in the manner directed by Law.

VII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Treasurer of each and every District of this Province in the account which he is required to keep, for every Parish Town, Township, reputed Township or place, according to the provisions of a certain Act passed in the present Session of the Parliament of this Province, entitled "An Act to repeal the several Laws now in force relative to raising, levying and collecting Rates and Assessments in this Province, and further to provide for the more equal and general Assessment of lands and other rateable property throughout this Province," shall charge each lot or parcel of land with or credit it for the amount of the Taxes & Rates hereby imposed as well as of those accruing under the last mentioned Act, and that the said books or accounts shall be produced to the Justices, and shall be subject to public inspection in the same manner as is provided by the said Act, except that no more than one fee for search shall be exacted by the Treasurer for inspection of both heads of Rates or Assessments at the same time.

VIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Collectors throughout this Province, shall pay over the monies by them received or levied at any time under this Act to the Treasurers of their respective Districts, in the manner provided by an Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the fifty third year of His Majesty's Reign, entitled, "An Act to alter and amend an Act passed in the forty eighth year of His Majesty's reign entitled "An Act for the better regulation of Parish and Town Officers throughout this Province," and shall be entitled to deduct at the rate of five pounds for every hundred pounds, and no more, as a compensation for their services in collecting and paying over, and the Treasurer shall give a receipt for all money paid to him by any Collector.

IX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That for every distress levied under this Act, the following fees and no more shall be taken: for the warrant of distress, two shillings and six pence; for every mile travelling to ——— the same, four pence; and for every selling and making return, two shillings.

X. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Treasurer of each and every District in this Province, shall be entitled to deduct the sum of four pounds for every hundred pounds paid into his hands, under the provisions of this Act, and shall on the first day of June in every year pay over the remainder to the Overseer of the Highways for the division in which the lands are situated, in respect of which the Rates and Taxes in his hands, shall have been received, who shall apply the same to the use of the Highways within the year of his appointment, and the receipt of such Overseer, shall be a sufficient acquittance to the Treasurer.

XI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Overseers of Highways shall in the accounts which they are required by the 3rd Act, passed in the fifteenth year of His Majesty's reign, entitled, "An Act for laying out, amending and keeping in repair the public Highways and Roads in this Province, and to repeal the Laws now in force for that purpose," to keep, produce and verify, on oath, account for all sums of money received and expended by them under this Act, and shall be liable to be punished for misapplying or refusing or neglecting to apply or account for such monies in the same manner as is provided by the last mentioned Act, with respect to the monies therein appointed to be received and accounted for by the said Overseers, and that any Rates or Taxes paid to the said Overseers, and not applied by them during their year, shall be paid over by the Justices receiving the same to the Overseers for the next ensuing year to be by them applied in like manner as herein before directed.

XII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any Overseer in verifying his accounts shall swear falsely, he shall upon conviction thereof suffer all the pains and penalties to which persons convicted of wilful and corrupt perjury are liable, And whereas, it is provided by a certain Act passed in the fifty sixth year of His Majesty's Reign, entitled, "An Act to repeal and amend part of an Act passed in the fifteenth year of His Majesty's reign, entitled, "An Act to provide for the laying out amending and keeping in repair the public Highways and Roads within this Province, and to repeal the Laws now in force for that purpose," that every male inhabitant from the age of twenty one years to fifty, not rated on the Assessment for any Town, Township or place within this Province, shall be compelled to work on the Highways three days in every year within the Township, Town or place he may reside in, under the same penalty as is imposed by any Act on persons rated on the Assessment list, and whereas, in some instances the operation of the said provision may be found too severe, Be it therefore enacted by the authority aforesaid, that from and after the passing of this Act, persons gaining their livelihood by the wages of daily labour, and possessing no ratable property, or not being assessed at more than twenty five pounds, who by reason of age, sickness or numerous family or misfortune, may be in poor and indigent circumstances, and also persons emigrating to this Province with intent to become permanent Settlers and land holders therein, and not having resided six months in the Province, may apply to the Justices at any Special or Petty Sessions held for the District, wherein such person shall reside, and the said Justices having first given notice to the Overseer to appear on the part of the Township or place to which such person may belong, shall examine and enquire into the situation & circumstances of the person making such application and if it shall appear to the satisfaction of such Justices or the majority of them there assembled, that such person is really poor and indigent and a deserving object of such relief, or that he has emigrated to this Province with intent to become a permanent Settler and land holder therein, and has not resided six months in this Province, the said Justices may in their discretion exempt such person respectively from the performance of such Statute duty upon the Highways and from all composition money in lieu thereof.

XIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That nothing in this Act contained, shall be construed to vary, repeal or annul any clause, matter, or thing in the said Acts contained, further than is hereby expressly, declared and enacted.

XIV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That this Act shall continue and be in force for eight years, and from thence to the end of the then next ensuing Session of Parliament, & no longer.

Scarborough Springs FARM.

For Sale, on liberal terms,

AN extensive and very valuable Farm, situate in the fourth Concession of the Township of Scarboro' within fifteen miles of the Seat of Government, and containing about three hundred acres of the very best timbered Land.

There are about forty acres of the premises in a high state of cultivation, fenced, and abundantly supplied with water. And the Farm, from its being contiguous to an important Salmon Fishery, and containing an extensive Maple Bush, must prove a most desirable purchase to any one wishing to settle in the vicinity of York.

The eligibility of the situation for a Farmer, within a few miles of a good and sure market, connected with the fertility of the soil, and various other local advantages are of themselves fully sufficient to recommend the above to the public; but the subscriber has it in his power further to state, that it is the seat of the much celebrated Scarborough Springs, the efficacy of whose waters in the cure of a variety of maladies is too notorious to need recapitulation; suffice it therefore to say, that if a commodious house were erected for the accommodation of strangers, and conducted by an attentive and enterprising person, the continual resort of the infirm and sickly to these Springs, to enjoy the salubrity of their waters, could not fail to secure most ample remuneration for any exertions which might be bestowed for their ease and comfort.

From the foregoing it may be inferred, and the proprietor is bold to say, that there is not a situation in the Province better adapted for the establishment and speedy growth of a Village, and that to any intelligent and industrious individual he offers a most tempting and lucrative speculation.

For Sale also—The unexpired term of a Lease of the Clergy Reserve adjoining the said Lands, of which Lease three years only have expired. There are ten acres of improvement, well enclosed, thereon, with a fine stream of water passing through it, as well as the Springs Farm.

An indisputable Title with immediate possession will be given, and a liberal credit allowed for part of the purchase money, on approved security.

For further particulars application to be made to the proprietor.

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, June 15.

In the House of Commons on Monday the cash payment bill was read a third time and passed, almost without a word being said upon its general tendency Mr. Ellice proposed a clause, which was adopted; giving to the bank the option of paying their notes either in bullion or gold coin, after the first of May 1821, instead of being restricted, as it otherwise would have been, from making any payments in specie till 1823. Mr. Manning, also proposed an additional clause to the bill, specifying the precise period and the amount of the instalments to be paid to the bank, in liquidation of the debt due by the government; but it was subsequently withdrawn upon the assurance of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, that all the objects which it aimed to secure, would be more regularly provided for in a clause of the appropriation act.

The average price of wheat from the returns received in the week ended 5th June, is 63s per quarter.

Mr. Bagot and suite landed at Portsmouth on Thursday from the Forth Frigate, under appropriate salutes, & immediately set off for London. The commissioners for settling the boundary line, are going on in the most satisfactory manner, and expected to end their labours in October. In almost all cases of difference, the points in dispute are conceded in favour of this country. The conduct of the Americans, of all ranks, at Washington and Annapolis, to the officers and crew of the Forth, while she lay in the Chesapeake, discovered the most amicable and friendly disposition. It seemed to our officers as though a radical change had been effected in the feelings and views of the Americans. An interchange of civilities daily passed between the officers of the Essex and the Ontario, laying there, and the Forth.

MADRID, May 24.

The Minister of marine is still at Cadiz, to direct in person the grand armament, which in all appearance will be ready to sail by the end of July. A fine frigate of 36 guns fitted out at Corunna, lately arrived at Cadiz with 15 transports under its convoy. In their passage they met many insurgent privateers, who did not attempt to attack the convoy. They also expect at Cadiz a division from Carthagena, consisting of two frigates and several transports, and several more from Barcelona. 100,000 piastres have just been sent from this city to Cadiz, to accelerate the preparations which are carrying on with double activity, because the government feels the necessity of striking a great blow this year, the insurgents being more resolved than ever to defend their cause. All hopes of an arrangement with Buenos Ayres, and of its submission to the mother country, have vanished; nothing remains but to try the force of arms. All the accounts from South America give reason to presume that the struggle will be bloody & desperate.

Ludicrous effect of the appearance of a Comet, in 1712.

In the year 1712, Mr. Whiston having calculated the return of a comet, which was to make its appearance on Wednesday the 14th of October, at five minutes after five in the morning, gave notice to the public accordingly, with this terrifying addition that a total dissolution of the world by fire was to take place on the Friday following. The reputation Mr. W. had long maintained in England, both as a divine and a philosopher, left little or no doubt with the populace of the truth of his prediction. Several ludicrous events now took place. A number of persons in and about London seized all the barges and boats they could lay their hands on in the Thames, very rationaly concluding, that when the conflagration took place, there would be the most safety on water. A gentleman who had neglected family prayer for better than five years, informed his wife that it was his determination to resume that laudable practice the same evening; but his wife having engaged a ball at her house, persuaded her husband to put it off till they saw whether the comet appeared or not. The South Sea stock immediately fell to five per cent, and the India to 11; and the captain of a Dutch ship threw all his powder into the river, that the ship might not be endangered.

The next morning however, the comet appeared, according to the prediction, and before noon the belief was universal, that the day of judgement was at hand. About this time, one hundred and twenty three clergymen were ferried over to Lambeth, it was said, to petition that a short prayer might be penned and ordered, there being none in the church service on that occasion. Three maids of honor burnt their collection of novels and plays, and sent to the bookseller's, to buy each of them a bible, and Bishop Taylor's Holy Living and Dying. The run upon the bank was so prodigious, that night in handing out specie. On Thursday considerably more than seven thousand kept mistresses were legally married, in the face of several congregations. And to crown the whole farce, Sir Gilbert Heathcote, at that time the head director of the bank, issued orders to all the fire offices in London, requiring them "to keep a good look out, and have a particular eye on the Bank of England." London Paper.]

IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.

PYROLIGNEOUS ACID.

Extract of a letter from M. C. G. at Paris.

A discovery of the greatest importance engages at this moment the attention of the physicians, the chemists and the government. A person of the name of Mange has discovered that the pyroligneous acid, obtained by the distillation of wood, has the property of preventing the decomposition & putrefaction of animal substances. It is sufficient to plunge meat for a few moments into the acid, even slightly empyreumatic to preserve this meat as long as you may desire.—Cutlets, kidneys, liver, rabbits, which were prepared as far back as the month of July last, are now as fresh as if they had been just procured from the market. I have seen carcases washed three weeks ago with pyroligneous acid, in which there is yet no sign of decomposition. Putrefaction not only stops, but it even retrogrades. Jakes exhaling infection, cease to do so, as soon as you pour into them the purifying acid. You may judge how many important applications may be made of this process. Navigation, medicine, unwholesome manufactories, will derive incalculable advantage from it. This explains why meat, merely dried in a stove, does not keep, while that which is smoaked becomes unalterable. We have here an explanation of the theory of hams, of the beef of Hamburg, of smoked tongues, sausages, red herrings, of wood smoked to preserve it from worms, &c.

In one of the ships belonging to the Hudsons bay Company which recently left the river for their settlements, Lieut. Franklin, late commander of the Trent in the expedition to reach the North Pole has taken his passage for the purpose of exploring that part of America to the northward of Hudson's bay. The route this officer is to take will be nearly the same as that pursued by Mr. Hearne in 1770, who stated that he reached the sea at the entrance of copper mine river.—Lieutenant Franklin will be accompanied by about five Europeans, one of whom is a surgeon; and on their arrival at the Copper Mine river are to pursue such further course as may appear proper.

During the voyage of discovery last year to Baffin's bay, a bottle was thrown into the sea from the Alexander, Lieut. Parry, on the 24th of May, when that ship was off Cape Farewell. It contained the latitude and longitude the ship was then in. About two months since the bottle was found on the island of Bartragh, in Killala-bay and an account of it forwarded to the Admiralty. It is supposed it must have floated at about the rate of eight miles per day across the Atlantic.

PRAGUE, May 25.

Some foreign students recently arrived here with the intention of proceeding to Vienna; but not having passports for that capital, they resolved to remain in this town and continue their studies.—They obtained permission to this effect, under condition that they would conform to the regulations of the University and the police laws. It was soon remarked, that several of these students carried black canes, and others of them in addition, wore a black ribband under their waistcoats. These canes were secretly examined, and it was found that they contained stilettos, on the blade of which were engraved several mysterious words. Their meetings, moreover, were very turbulent, and songs were sung of a nature to inflame the passions. At one of these meetings, the whole were taken in custody, when six of them were detained and examined. The remainder were restored to liberty on their promise of appearing when summoned, and that in future they would not hold any meeting whatever. Amongst the persons who are in custody are three foreigners, said to be those who challenged M. de Stourza to fight a duel.

The fourth number of the Belgic Medical Journal contains an account of a chemical discovery, the result of which is that hydro sulphat of iron, (hydro sulfure de fer) made from iron, sulphur and water, take internally, will instantly cause salivation to cease; and when applied externally will cure the most inveterate itch.

The emperor of Russia is adding much to the interior splendor of the Royal Palace of St. Peterburgh. One of the state-rooms is now completely covering with highly polished Tortoise-shell, tastefully fixed on the walls with silver headed studs, and bordered with ornaments of solid silver moulding.

It is stated in the Continental Journals, that in Magdeburg more than three hundred families have entered into a reciprocal engagement, as their word of honor, not to take off their hats in saluting, but merely to imitate the military mode of raising the right hand to the head.—Another association in the same city, has invited, by a circular address, the whole world, and particularly the ladies, to renounce in future all articles of fashion & luxury.

Casts of the Elgin marbles, lately sent from this country, have reached St. Petersburg, where they excite great admiration.

Growth of Tea in France.—The Moniteur has the following:—"This precious shrub, first introduced into France by a Russian, in 1814, promises to become naturalised among us.—There are already three hundred stalks, which it is easy to multiply. This tea has received the approbation of the king's physicians, and the first naturalists of France. The plants are to be sold by subscription."

The third report of the Select Committee of the London and Holyhead Road, has been printed.—The committee adopt and strong recommend, Mr. Telford's plan of an iron hanging bridge across the Menai Strait. Each of the two principal piers is intended to be 60 by 40 feet at high water mark, having a foundation of rock. Upon the summit of each of these a pyramid of cast metal is to be erected for the purpose of raising the cables from which the bridge is to be suspended. The bridge which is to hang between these two points, will be 522 feet long and 30 feet wide; the entire length of the bridge is to be 500 feet. The expense is estimated at £70,000.—Lon. Pap.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

TO HOUSE KEEPERS.

A writer in the American Farmer asserts from his personal knowledge, that the juice of the Elder will destroy skippers in meat, as well as prevent them from geting in. Take the leaves of elder and bruise them in a mortar; rub the leaves thus bruised over the meat (hams, smoked beef, &c.) and if there are any holes in the meat into which the skippers have found their way pour in a little of the juice, and they will roll out in a short time. The application of the elder juice does not communicate any bad taste to the meat.

From the Providence (R. I.) American.

From Africa.—Captain Hallowell, of brig Richard, recently arrived at this port, from the coast of Africa, informs, that he witnessed, while at Sierra Leone, one of those tornadoes to which the African Coast is exposed, for nearly six months in the year. Their violence and the frequency of their occurrence are determined by the state of the atmosphere Ten or twelve of them are generally experienced at Sierra Leone, in the course of a year.—The precursors and characteristics of these tornadoes are worthy of philosophic investigation. The sky is clear—a perfect calm has prevailed for several hours—and the air becomes oppressive; when suddenly in the most elevated region of the atmosphere appears as the indication of a tornado, a little round, white cloud—not exceeding 5 or 6 feet in diameter, and seems to be perfectly motionless. The air becomes gradually agitated and acquires a circular motion. The leaves and plants, with which the land is always covered, raised by the force of the air several feet from their bed, keep incessantly revolving around the same spot, to the infinite diversion of the natives, who amuse themselves with this rotatory motion. The little cloud, which portended the approach of the tornado, having increased in size, insensibly descends to the lower region of the visible horison. The whirlwind now increases in violence—and soon becomes terrifick. Vessels are obliged to double their moorings, they often port their cable, and are driven foul of each other. Many negro huts are swept away, trees are torn up by the roots, and wherever these whirlwinds exert their full force, they leave deplorable traces of their progress. These terrible agents of desolation happily continue for only 20 or 30 minutes, and terminate in a heavy rain.

MONTPELIER, (Vt.) July 14.

Severe Storm.—On the 30th June, a most severe storm of wind and rain, was experienced in the easterly part of this town. So strong was the wind that many barns were unroofed, and removed to a considerable distance. About 20 apple trees, in the orchards of Mr. Freeman Spoon and Timothy Davis, were turned up by the roots and broken down. A new school house partly finished, was blown down, and broken to pieces. A dwelling house the property of Mr. Freeman Tabor, a st[illegible]ame and well finished outside, wa[illegible]nearly demolished; and what must be attributed to the merciful interposition of Providence, a family, consisting of a woman and three children, were in the house, and preserved amid the surrounding destruction. The woman saw at a small distance the wind approaching and alarmed her children—one little boy ran out of the house—the woman took her youngest child in her arms, and made for the door; but has no further recollection till all was still, when she found herself, with her child in her arms, under the ruins She soon extricated herself though considerably bruised. Her oldest daughter was missing, but after repeatedly calling, the anxious mother discovered her daughter unhurt, under the mouth of the oven, literally surrounded with piles of brick and broken timber. Shingles were scattered in numbers for more than two miles, and bricks carried a distance of 15 rods.

Separation of Maine.—The votes from 66 towns in the District of Maine, on the question of separation, stand as follows:

Yeas	Nays
9,000	3,306

"It appears certain," says the Boston Centinel of Saturday, "that a majority far exceeding the 1500 required by law, in favor of that measure, has been obtained; and that the separation is inevitable. Though we regret the result, we most heartily bid the citizens of Maine, God speed."

Chamber of Representatives.

4. The Chamber of Representatives will be composed of Deputies, elected, one by every 25,000 inhabitants, or by a fraction of that number equal to 15,000.

5. No one can be elected a Representative, unless he has been a citizen seven years before his nomination, is 26 years of age, and has an estate of D.4000 at least, or else an useful profession.—He must be a plebeian, and independent of the Executive as to income.

6. This representation may last four years, but must be renewed at the expiration of half of the above term. To this intent; the first representatives, as soon as they re-assemble, shall cast out those who are to leave their body at the first biennial term; their places being filled by their constituents with new representatives.

Tobacco.—We have seen a specimen of some fine tobacco plants, raised within two miles of this town, which proves the soil of Upper Canada is adapted to the growth of that article. The gentleman from whom this specimen was obtained, has, we understand, several acres of luxuriant plants, which he purposes manufacturing. As tobacco, in this country, appears to be an indispensable article of luxury, for which a large sum of money is annually expended, it would be well if some attention was paid to its culture; although the entire disuse of it might perhaps be attended with more beneficial consequences. If our farmers and others must have tobacco, let them encourage the attempt made to produce it within the province, and not pay their money to a foreign market, when there is no necessity for doing so.—*U. Last week, Commodore Bainbridge, accompanied by several officers of the navy and army of the United States, visited Kingston, in the Lady of the Lake; and during the visit, they dined with the commissioner of the navy and the officers of the 70th regiment. It affords pleasure to every liberal mind to see the naval and military officers of the two nations, in time of peace, interchanging civilities, and setting their fellow subjects, on both sides, an example of polite and friendly intercourse, while their governments maintain the relations of amity and commerce.—Id.

To His Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

May it, please Your Excellency,

We, His Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the undersigned, Inhabitants of Sandwich and its vicinity, with mingled feelings of affection and respect approach Your Excellency to congratulate you on your safe arrival at this place. Sensible of the motives that have induced Your Excellency to undertake the present journey, we cannot too highly estimate and respect them.

We have seen with unfeigned satisfaction the impartial and liberal policy which Your Excellency has pursued in the administration confided to your care, and, judging from what we have experienced, We have the strongest grounds to believe that so just a system will produce the most happy results, and eradicate from every upright mind the least tendency to discontent.

We observe with pleasure that the Province is rapidly increasing in an industrious population, whose principles on government are congenial with our own.

We are penetrated with a deep sense of the obligations we are under to His Majesty's Government for the protection which, at the expense of so much blood and treasure, it has constantly afforded us and for the innumerable advantages which it has freely bestowed on us; and we trust that we shall always evince, by our loyalty, obedience to the Laws, and peaceable conduct, the gratitude we feel.

We firmly believe that the measures of His Majesty's Government towards this Colony have no other object in view than its general welfare and prosperity and we have every reason to be fully satisfied that it is the sincere desire of Your Excellency amply to carry into effect the intention of His Majesty's Government.

To every human institution we are aware that some imperfections will be found, and the infant state and local situation of this Province, may be and no doubt are productive of some disadvantages, which time and an improved state of society will in many respects obviate but we are also convinced that in few parts of the World, can there be found a portion of its inhabitants who have fewer real causes of complaint than the cherished and happy inhabitants of this Province.

Impressed with the highest respect for the public & private virtues which your Excellency has displayed, and for the invaluable example of piety and morality which you have set to all classes of His Majesty's subjects, we humbly implore the Great Dispenser of all good that he may long preserve you in the situation in which his providence has placed you, and that you may long continue "a terror to evil doers and a praise to them that do well."

To the Inhabitants of Sandwich and its vicinity.

Gentlemen,

The gratification I have experienced on observing the great natural advantages which this fine country exhibits, and the industry which is progressively spreading over it, an air of comfort and prosperity, has been much increased by this expression of your loyal and kind sentiments, which I thankfully accept, and I regret that many unexpected delays on my Journey have necessarily rendered my visit to you on the present occasion of such short duration.

May it please Your Excellency,

WE, dutiful and loyal subjects of His His Majesty, residing in the Western District, congratulate ourselves on your Excellency's arrival in this distant part of the Province; and with gratitude behold in this evidence of your active superintendence, a happy presage of future benefit and watchful care.

We are happy to avail ourselves of the opportunity now afforded us, of assuring your Excellency, that we are truly sensible of the important advantages already derived from your upright and disinterested system of Government, and our prayer is, that the spirit of wisdom may, in all things, be merciful vouchsafed to guide and direct you for the good of those committed to your charge.

We will only add, that we are deeply impressed with sentiments of loyalty and attachment to His Majesty's sacred person and government; and beg to express our unbounded gratitude for the inestimable blessings we enjoy under the same.

With best wishes and fervent prayers for your Excellency's prosperity and happiness, and that of your family, and with sentiments of great respect,

To the Inhabitants of the Western District.

Gentlemen,

I thankfully accept your loyal address, and I assure you, this kind expression of your sentiments has added much to the gratification I have experienced on remarking how the hand of industry is gradually combining the comfort and cheerfulness of civilization with the great natural resources of this magnificent country.

I regret that I am compelled by the delay which many unexpected accidents have occasioned on my journey to make my visit to you of such short duration.

His Grace the Governor in Chief, on his tour of observation, having visited the Talbot country, was waited upon by the Inhabitants at Port-Talbot, on Wednesday the 11th August, with the following Address.

To the Most Noble and Puissant Prince, Charles Duke of Richmond, Lenox, Aubigny, Earl of March and Darnley, Knight of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, General of His Majesty's Forces, Governor in Chief of the British North American Provinces, &c. &c. &c.

May it please Your Grace,

We His Majesty's loyal subjects, the Inhabitants of the Talbot Country, in the Province of Upper Canada, acknowledge with gratitude the notice which your Grace has been pleased to bestow on this infant but flourishing establishment.

Favoured by nature with a fertile soil, strengthened by an increasing population, supported by the wise and salutary regulations adopted by Colonel Talbot, the founder of this Settlement; we reflect with pleasure on the advantages which we have already experienced, and anticipate the comforts which may be yet awaiting us, and which industry never fails to produce amongst a loyal & virtuous people. Thus animated by past success, and encouraged by the protection of your Grace, we entertain the flattering hope, even in our own times, of rendering that part of this Province which we now inhabit, a valuable portion of the British Empire.

Truly sensible that the blessings which under Providence we enjoy, are ultimately to be derived from the Constitution under which we live, it shall be our ambition to support that Constitution, and by every means in our power transmit it unimpaired to the latest posterity.

Port-Talbot, 11th August 1819.

To which His Grace was pleased to make the following reply.

Gentlemen,

It is with great satisfaction that I have been enabled personally to witness the comfort and happiness of this rising settlement.

The loyal & patriotic sentiments contained in your address prove you deserving of those blessings which the Constitution under which we live is so well calculated to bestow.—I have no doubt that by perseverance, in the wise and judicious regulations established by my esteemed friend Colonel Talbot, you will continue rapidly to advance in importance and prosperity, and you may be assured that I shall ever feel anxious to second your wishes by every means in my power.

[BY AUTHORITY.]

An Act to repeal part of and to amend the Laws now inforce for establishing Public Schools in the several Districts of this Province, and to extend the provisions of the same.

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN,

WHEREAS, it hath been found expedient to repeal part of and to amend an Act passed in the forty seventh year of His Majesty's Reign, entitled, "An Act to establish Public Schools, in each & every District of this Province," and to extend the provisions of the same, Be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain entitled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of His Majesty's reign, entitled, an Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provison for the Government of the said Province" and by the authority of the same, That provision be made Law for the establishing a Public School, in the District of Gore.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That from and out of the Rates and Duties raised, levied and collected or hereafter to be raised levied & collected, to and for the Public uses of this Province, and unappropriated, there be granted annually to His Majesty, His Heirs and Successors, the sum of one hundred pounds, which sum of one hundred pounds shall be appropriated and applied and disposed of in paying the salary of the Teacher of the said School, which said sum of one hundred pounds shall be paid by the Receiver General of this Province, in discharge of such warrant or warrants as shall for that purpose be issued by the Governor, Lieutenant Governor or person administering the Government of this Province, and shall be accounted for to His Majesty, His Heirs and Successors, through the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury for the time being, in such manner and form as his Majesty, His Heirs and Successors, shall be pleased to direct.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful to and for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the Government of this Province, to appoint Trustees and a Teacher in the said District of Gore, under the like provisions as are contained in the said Act of the forty seventh year of His Majesty's Reign, entitled, "An Act to establish Public Schools in each and every District of this Province."

IV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Trustees of each and every District School within this Province, shall direct a public examination of their respective Schools to be held previous to the usual annual vacation at which they or a majority of them, shall assist, and it is hereby required, that such public examination shall be holden every year at the time aforesaid.

V. And be it further enact by the authority aforesaid, That the Trustees of the respective District Schools as aforesaid, in each and every District in this Province, shall and they are hereby required once in every year after the Public examination as aforesaid, to report to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the Government of this Province, the state of the said Schools, the number of Scholars, the state of education, with the different branches taught in the said School, the number of Scholars who have completed their education, together with all other matters and things, that may tend to cherish the prosperity of the said Schools, or that may in any wise benefit the same, that the said report may be laid before the Legislature at its first meeting for their inspection.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That in order to extend the benefit of a liberal education to promising children of the poorer inhabitants, the Trustees of each and every School have the power of sending Scholars not exceeding ten in number, to be taught gratis at the respective District Schools.

VII. Provided always, and be it further enacted by thauthority aforesaid, That the said Scholars, so to be taught as aforesaid, shall once in every four years, be drawn by lot, in manner following viz: the Trustees for the common Schools now or hereafter to be established by virtue of any Act of the Parliament of this Province, shall and they are hereby authorised to return the name or names of one or more, not exceeding four from each common School of the most promising scholars as aforesaid, of their respective Schools, to the Trustees of the District School, for the District in which they shall respectively reside, which Trustees shall and they are here by required at a special meeting to be openly held for that purpose, inscribe each and every name so returned to them on a separate distinct slip of paper, being all as nearly as possible of the same size, which slip of paper shall be put into a box or glass to be provided for that purpose, and at such meeting as aforesaid, the same shall in the presence of the said Trustees, be openly drawn by some disinterested person, and each and every Scholar so chosen as aforesaid, shall be entitled to receive his education gratuitously at the said District School, and the Teacher thereof, shall and he is hereby required to educate such Scholar as aforesaid.

VIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That in case any vacancy shall ensue in consequence of the refusal or decease, or from any other cause whatever of any scholar or scholars drafted as aforesaid, to be taught in the District School, it shall and may be lawful for the Trustees of the common school from which such scholar or scholars shall have been drafted to make a second ballot to fill up the vacancy.

IX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That so much of the third clause of the said Act, entitled, "An Act to establish Public Schools, in each and every District in this Province as relates to the Public Schools in the Districts of London, and Johnstown, be and the same is hereby repealed,

X. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the public School for the District of London, shall be opened and kept in the Town of Vittoria, in the Township of Charlotteville, and the Public School for the District of Johnstown, shall be opened and kept in the village of Brockville, in the Township of Elizabeth Town; that the Public School for the District of Gore, shall be opened and kept at the Town of Hamilton, in the District of Gore.

XI. Provided always, and be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That to every Teacher hereafter to be appointed, there shall be only fifty pounds paid unless the average number of scholars shall exceed ten.

XII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the certificate required from the Trustees by the twelfth clause of the said Act, passed in the forty seventh year of His Majesty's Reign, shall declare that, "at a public meeting of the Trustees of the District School, upon due notice given for that purpose, a majority of the Trustees being present. we certify, &c.

An Act to repeal part of and amend an Act passed in the fifty ninth year of His Majesty's reign, entitled "An Act to repeal an Act passed in the fifty fifth year of His Majesty's reign" entitled "An Act to Licence Practitioners in Physic and Surgery throughout this Province, and to make further provision for Licencing such Practitioners."

WHEREAS by the fifth clause of an Act of the Parliament of this Province passed in the fifty ninth year of His Majesty's reign, entitled "An Act to repeal an Act passed in the fifty fifth year of His Majesty's reign" entitled "An Act to Licence Practitioners in Physic and Surgery throughout this Province, and to make further provision for Licencing such Practitioners" the Board constituted and appointed by virtue of and under the authority thereof, is required to be held at York on the first Monday in January and July in each year, And whereas much delay and inconvenience may arise from a limitation of the sittings of the said Board to those periods, And whereas it is expedient to make further provision for the constitution and organization of the said Board, Be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the consent of the Legislative Council & Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada; constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain entitled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of His Majesty's reign, entitled, "An Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province" and by the authority of the same, that the fifth clause of the said recited Act of the fifty ninth year of His Majesty's reign, be and the same is hereby repealed.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful for the said Board or the majority of the members composing the same, to appoint from time to time a fit and proper person to be Secretary of the said Board, which Secretary shall attend the meetings of the said Board, and keep a Record of the proceedings of the same in a book or books to be by him provided for that purpose, together with all such matters and things as to the said Board shall appertain.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That from and after the passing of this Act the said Board shall be kept and held in the Town of York, in the Home District, four times in each year, viz: on the first Monday in January, April, July and October respectively, and may be continued by adjournment from day to day, until the business before the Board is finished, Provided, that no one quarterly sitting shall be so continued by adjournment, beyond the Saturday of the week, in which such sitting shall commence.

IV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That every person desirous of being examined by the said Board, touching his qualifications for the Practice of Physic, Surgery and Midwifery or either of them, shall and he is hereby required to give due notice thereof to the Secretary aforesaid in writing, setting forth the branch or branches of Medical practice, that he wishes to be examined in, and shall pay to the Secretary aforesaid the sum of ten shillings, as his fee for receiving and entering the same, and a further sum of ten shillings as his fee upon his receiving the certificate of the Board.

THO'S. MOSLEY.
York, 29 July, 1819. 3w31.

Scarborough Springs FARM.

For Sale, on liberal terms,

AN extensive and very valuable Farm, situate in the fourth Concession of the Township of Scarboro', within fifteen miles of the Seat of Government, and containing about three hundred acres of the very best timbered Land.

There are about forty acres of the premises in a high state of cultivation, fenced, and abundantly supplied with water. And the Farm, from its being contiguous to an important Salmon Fishery, and containing an extensive Maple Bush, must prove a most desirable purchase to any one wishing to settle in the vicinity of York.

The eligibility of the situation for a Farmer, within a few miles of a good and sure market, connected with the fertility of the soil, and various other local advantages are of themselves sufficient to recommend the above to the public; but the subscriber has it in his power further to state, that it is the seat of the much celebrated Scarborough Springs, the efficacy of whose waters in the cure of a variety of maladies is too notorious to need recapitulation; suffice it therefore to say, that if a commodious house were erected for the accommodation of strangers, and conducted by an attentive and enterprising person, the continual resort of the infirm and sickly to these Springs, to enjoy the salubrity of their waters, could not fail to secure most ample remuneration for any exertions which might be bestowed for their ease and comfort.

From the foregoing it may be inferred, and the proprietor is bold to say, that there is not a situation in the Province better adapted for the establishment and speedy growth of a Village, and that to any intelligent and industrious individual he offers a most tempting and lucrative speculation.

For Sale also—The unexpired term of a Lease of the Clergy Reserve adjoining the said Lands, of which Lease three years only have expired. There are ten acres of improvement, well enclosed, thereon, with a fine stream of water passing through it, as well as the Springs Farm.

An indisputable Title with immediate possession will be given, and a liberal credit allowed for part of the purchase money, on approved security.

For further particulars application to be made to the proprietor.

GEO. HAMILTON.
York, 26th July, 1819. tf31

THE Subscriber still continues to act as agent for Applicants for Grants of Land from the Crown, as well as drawing Petitions, and also Conveyances of every description, on the most reasonable terms, from the hours of six o'clock in the morning until one, and from four o'clock in the afternoon until eight, during the summer, and from nine o'clock in the morning until four in the afternoon, in winter.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the THIRD, by the Grace of GOD of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Counsellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to our Provincial Parliament, at our Town of York, on the twentieth day of August inst. to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you

GREETING:

WHEREAS, on the twelfth day of July last, WE thought fit to prorogue our Provincial Parliament, to the twentieth day of August instant, at which time at our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear, NOW KNOW YE that WE taking into our Royal consideration, the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid; hereby convoking and by these presents enjoining you and each of you, that on Tuesday the twenty eighth day of September next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary, and herein fail not.

IN TESTIMONY whereof, WE have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed, WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this sixteenth day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, and in the fifty-ninth year of our reign.

The National debt.—Although the facts contained in the following statement have been given over and over again in another and much more enlarged detail, we think they cannot be impressed too often on the public mind :—If in one pound bank of England notes, the national debt, taken at the round sum of £500,000,000, will be found to amount to the enormous weight of 619 tons, 2 qrs. and 9 lb. Allowing 2 cwt. 2 qrs. to each man, it requires upwards of 5500 able bodied porters to carry it away. Two hundred waggons, with four horses to each, would scarcely be sufficient for that purpose. This calculation is made at the rate of 512 bank of England notes to the pound."

LONDON, June 18.

The Regent's drawing room, in celebration of His Royal Highness's birth-day.

In consequence of the lamented death of the Queen, the Prince Regent, guided by the precedent of George II. who, after the death of Queen Caroline, held drawing rooms for the reception of Ladies, judiciously resolved, for the encouragement of trade and manufactures, to hold a similar court yesterday, on the occasion of the celebration of the natal day of his Royal Highness; and the Queen's house was prepared for the purpose in an appropriate style. The morning was ushered in with ringing of the bells, the Park and Tower guns were fired at one o'clock; and all the usual state forms and military display took place, to the infinite gratification of the most numerous concourse of spectators we ever beheld on a similar occasion. The Prince Regent proceeded from Carlton House to the Queen's house about one o'clock, escorted by a party of life guards, amidst the ardent plaudits and loud huzzas of the populace. His royal highness was soon followed by the Duchess of York, Duke and Duchess of Glocester, the Duke of Kent, the Princess Sophia of Glocester, and Prince Leopold, all in state—the Duke of York went in private. The company began to arrive soon after twelve, and were so unprecedentedly numerous, that the whole had not sat until near five, though many got out of their carriages and walked from a considerable distance to the palace.

The Regent having received the congratulations of those entitled to the entre, proceeded to the grand saloon, and took his station in front of the throne.—The Princess Augusta took her station on the Regent's left. The Duchess of Gloucester, Princess Sophia of Glocester, the Duke of Glocester, the Dukes of York & Kent, principally remained opposite the Regent.

It was one of the most brilliant and numerously attended Courts ever witnessed. Besides the members of the royal family, the ministers and officers of state, the speaker of the house of commons, the judges and crown lawyers, an unprecedented crowd of nobility and gentry, were present.

The king of the Netherlands has interdicted all the Popish processions except two—the one to take place on the Sunday after Corpus Christi Day, and the other to be left to the choice of the Bishops. He also has interdicted all fantastical dresses, &c. on those occasions, as productive of scandal to religion, and disorder to the public peace.

From the Cork Mercantile Chronicle, June 17.

The Quotidienne asserts that all the English officers now at Paris have received orders to return to England. Different reasons are given for this order—some attribute it to the necessity of sending out troops to the Cape of Good Hope —others to the necessity of completing the regiments in Canada, owing to serious disturbances which have arisen between the Colonists of St. James' and Washington.—Among other rumours of trouble, probably quite as well founded, it is said that a marked coldness has arisen between the Cabinets of Berlin and St. Petersburgh, which promises to end in the formation of a close alliance between Austria, Prussia and England.

Several parts of France have been devastated by tremendous storms. In one place 85 house have been destroyed by lightning. On the 21st ult. a tempest, accompanied with hail, thunder and lightning, ravaged upwards of 50 communes. Yet still more dreadful scourges threatened to destroy the harvest of the whole department of Aries, which held forth the greatest promise. Hosts of locusts appeared on a sudden, and covered the land.—The inhabitants went out immediately to protect their fields, but though they collected as much as 57 quintals of these devourers every day, the number did not seem decreased. They were as yet small, but their devastations were most alarming, and it was apprehended the heat would enlarge both their size and numbers. They had only attacked the grass, but the corn was expected to fall next a prey to their rapacity.

Since our last we have few changes to advise in merchandize. Business of every description dull, and, as we before stated, an improvement must first take place in England, before we can expect a revival here. NATIONAL MEDALS.

A very fine Medal, illustrative of the glorious services of Admiral Earl St. VINCENT, has just been struck for the Grand Series of National Medals now executing under the superintendance of Mr. MUDIE, to commemorate the brilliant events of the late war, and the portraits of the illustrious men by whom these events were achieved. This Medal bears, on the "obverse," a fine profile of Earl St. VINCENT ; it is executed by MILLS, in a bold and spirited manner. The expressive countenance of the venerable Admiral gave the Artist an opportunity of portraying spirit and intelligence without departing from the fidelity of the original ; even where this Artist has not such an advantage in his model, he never violates truth in the Medals we have seen, but left the character and valour of his heroes to be preserved by a more permanent record than the fanciful theory of physiognomy was calculated to convey.—This series of Medals will, we believe, furnish to future times the only faithful record, as a whole, of the distinguished characters who have figured in our late history.

ROYAL HUMANE SOCIETY.

On Wednesday se'night, the 45th Anniversary of this useful Institution was celebrated at the City of London Tavern J. BLACKBURN, Esq. in the Chair, in the absence of the Duke of SUSSEX, who was prevented from attending in consequence of the cold with which his Royal Highness was afflicted for several days.

The Meeting, which was tolerably numerous, was addressed in several eloquent speeches, and the objects of the Society strenuously recommended. From the statement made by the Chairman, it appears, that in the course of 45 years, no less than 4729 persons have been restored from apparent death by the use of the means recommended by this Institution ; during the last year, the cases of restoration amounted to 258, among which were 29 cases of attempted suicide : the kind attention of the Members of the Committee, aided by the care of the Chaplains, and the presentation of proper religious books, have been instrumental in restoring them to their friends, their country, and their God. All classes of persons are interested in the success of an Institution of this kind ; & we were gratified to learn that the subscriptions were of a considerable amount.

LITERARY REVIEW.

A voyage up the Persian Gulph, and a Journey over-land from India to England, in 1817 ; containing an account of Arabia Felix, Arabia Deserta, Persia, Mesopotamia, the Garden of Eden, Babylon, Bagdad, Koordistan, Armenia, Asia Minor, &c. &c. By Lieut. Wm. Heude, of the Madras Military Establishment.

The work before us comes forward at a very seasonable period, as we have now a Persian Ambassador in this country, and have entered into amicable connexions with his government. It is full of interesting information, and is apparently written with candor, liberality, and a strict regard to truth. But we shall at once proceed to notice its contents.—Of the pirates of the Persian Gulph, Captain Heude gives the following account.

"Their history reaches back to a very remote antiquity, as the Empire of the pirate King, seizing (as described in the Koran of Ebu Hankal,) on every valuable ship, is said to have been known prior to the deliverance from Egypt of the Children of Israel. The Wahabees, in particular, first mentioned by Nicbuhr, are also noticed as springing from the province of Nedsjed, where Mosellima, the great contemporary adversary of Mahomed, first propagated the doctrines of his faith.—These are probably the same with the Mobeyridites, or the sufid Jamehghians (as they are called by the Persians,) who were anciently followers of Aakem Ebu Hashem, sometimes called Al Mokanna, and Al Boksi (or the veiled) by the Arabs.—Of this sect it is related, that in the reign of Calif al Mohdi, of the race of Abbas, Hakem Ebu Hasem, their Prophet, gained a number of proselytes in Nakhshab and Kash, giving out that the divinity resided in his person, and had descended to him from Adam, though the Prophet had appeared. He acquired great power, but being at last besieged by the Calif's forces, he poisoned, and burnt his wives, children and concubines, and threw himself into the flames, in the 163d year of the Hezira, promising his followers he would again appear." It is from the history of this impostor our author informs us, Mr. Moore has taken the ground work of the part of his celebrated poem, which he styles "The veiled Propiet." His remarks on our Trade up the Gulph, which cannot be entered into at length, contain many useful hints, which our Free Traders, who go out almost freightless, might avail themselves of to advantage. The overland part of the journey commences from the author's departure from Bussora. Being now for three weeks amongst the Bedouins ; and writing from their camp, he says : " Shaik Hamood is the Chief of the Montifies, a principal tribe amongst the Bedouins of the Desert ; I had, therefore, a favorable opportunity of observing their manners, if the expression may be used, at the Court itself. Nothing can exceed the simplicity of living that may be observed in the tents of these eastern patriarchs. The pen cannot describe the unassuming courtesy, the open, generous hospitality of these lawless robbers of the Desert, to the confiding traveller who throws himself on the honor of their tribes.

" During the temporary absence of his father, the eldest son of Shaik Mahsmoud (a handsome youth of 16) was presiding in his stead. He was sitting on a carpet, in a large open tent, with a numerous retinue of venerable bearded Chiefs, sitting or standing (according to their rank and occupations) on either side. The furniture of the tent consisted of the carpets only, which they were reposing upon ; whilst their more favourite coursers were picketted in the vicinity ; and a few tents and large droves of camels filled up the surrounding scene. On our introduction, the youth gracefully rose, and kindly beckoned me with intuitive politeness, to his side. Secretaries were reading dispatches, messengers were receiving their orders whilst the pipe and coffee filled up the intervening time, until the expected arrival of their Chief ; the patient, hardy warriors of the desert, watching attentively, but not meanly obsequious, each nod or smile of their favourite hope, and offering their opinions and councils with perfect freedom whenever the occasion required.—At last a general buzz announced the long expected approach of the great personage ; the Council rose (the youth himself setting the example,) and went to meet the group that was advancing towards the tent."—He concludes this part with a curious description of his reception, and of a public entertainment in the Arab Camp.)

After entering at some length on the later History of the Montific Bedouins he introduces the reader at once to a remarkable tribe whom he became unexpectedly acquainted with. The meeting is truly characteristic of the incidents of an overland journey.—" Our course now lay through a perfect desert, Shatra being the northern boundary of the little cultivation that can be distinguished above the junction of the rivers. We proceeded for two hours in a melancholy silence. Suddenly, in a flat dreary tract, overgrown with furze and brush wood, we came to the bank of a River, that bears the name (amongst the Arabs) of the town we had left behind. We had scarcely descended the steep declivity that leads to this hidden stream by a narrow rugged path, before the hideous battle shout of the Bedouins assailed our ears ; and we found ourselves surrounded in a moment, by the most uncouth, savage, ruffian race we had yet encountered ; and who seemed to rise from the parent earth, with their bristling spears, and pointed guns, a dreadful, ruthless savage progeny. Our Sayid certainly behaved with the greatest coolness and intrepidity on this trying occasion. Urging his able courser forward, without the slightest hesitation, he sprang off it back in the midst of them, and trowing himself on the ground, in the prostrate attitude of devotion, placed a small brass amulet, inscribed with sentences from the Koran, under his head, beginning with the recital of his Creed in a loud, monotonous, yet impressive tone.—On the instant, every voice was hushed, the dreadful yell that had spread far and wide around us, subsided in the solemn sound ; and as the prayer was continued, the arm was unnerved that had raised the sword to strike ; the hand was withdrawn that had reached the fatal key of destruction, and all was peace ; their spears dropping on the ground, as they joined, with fervent zeal, in the sacred devotions of our holy guide. Not a man arose from the supplicating posture they had all gradually assumed, until the Sayid himself had set them the example : when exchanging compliments of gratulation with our late dreaded enemies, we joined in the extensive circle, and endeavored to improve the friendly understanding which the presiding spirit of religion had inspired, by presenting them with our pipes, and repeatedly with our Chubouks."

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

(Constitution of the United Provinces of South America, Concluded.)

7. All questions on matters of contributions, taxes, and imposts, belong exclusively to the Chamber of Representatives, leaving to the Senate the power of admitting, altering, or refusing them.

The Chamber of Representatives has the privative right, officially, or, at the suggestion of any citizen whatever ; the Ministers of State, the Envoys to foreign Courts, Archbishops and Bishops, Generals of the army, Governors and Superior Judges of the Province, and other Officers not inferior to those already named, for the crimes of treason, misdemeanor ; mal-appropriation of the public funds, infraction of the Constitution, and all other crimes which fall under the penalty of death or infamy according to the law.

9. The Representatives shall be compensated for their services by a provision, which the Legislature shall designate, making its distribution the exclusive right of the said Chamber.

II. Senate.

10. The Senate shall be formed by the Senators from the Provinces. Their number must be equ to that of the provinces ; also three Military Senators, whose grade is above that of a Colonel Major ; a Bishop and three Ecclesiastics ; a Senator from each University ; and the Director of the State, when the term of his office has expired.

11. No one can be nominated a Senator who is not thirty years old ; nine years a citizen before his election, with anestate of eight thousand dollars, or an equivalent income, or a respectable profession.

12. His charge shall last for 12 years, to be renewed every four years ; it shall be decided by lot who are to have their charge at the end of four and eight years.

13. The Ex-Director shall remain in the Senate until his successor in the Directorship be ready to succeed him in the Senate.

14. The Senators for the Provinces shall be elected in the following manner ; Each municipality shall nominate a capitalist, or proprietor, with an estate of at least ten thousand dollars, for electors. These shall assemble at some point in the centre of the Province designated by the Executive power, and, elect three persons from the civil class, of which at least one shall be a plebian of the Province. These returns shall pass to the Senate, (but firstly to the Congress) and testify to the act of election. The Senate, after the returns are received and printed, shall scrutinize them ; and those which contain the greatest number of suffrages in each Province, shall constitute the Senators. If a majority does not result, firstly Congress, and secondly the Senate, shall select from the proposed those whom they shall decide upon.

15. The Military Senators shal be nominated by the Director of State.

16. The Bishop of the Diocese where the Legislative body resides shall be a Senator for the first term. Thence forwards the Bishop shall be elected Senator by the Bishops of the Territory.—Their votes being committed to the Senate, printed and examined, which ever unites the greatest number of votes, shall constitute the Senator ; if a majority does not result, the Senate shall decide the election.

17. The Ecclesiastical Cabildoes being assembled, with the Diocesan Prelate, Rectors of the Cathedrals, and Rectors of the Colleges, (when these are Ecclesastics,) shall proceed to elect three individuals from the above class, of which one at least must be of another Diocese. The returns being remitted, and published, the three which unite the greatest number of suffrages, computed by the churches, will be Senators—in case of equal division, the Congress or Senate shall decide the election.

18. It belongs to the senate to judge by a public judgement, those accused by the House of Representatives.

19. The agreement of two thirds of the suffrages, shall pass sentence on the accused, as far as relates to depriving him of his office, or deciding his incapable of holding another.

20. After the sentence of the Congress, the accused is still liable to accusation, judgement and punishment by the law.

KINGSTON, (Jamaica,) June 5.

A report reached us last night just as we were going to press of an attack having been made by a band of Buccaniers under the command of the redoubted Hero of Porto Bello, upon the Town of Trinidad de Cuba. It is stated be advsiced to that place with eight hundred men, and as may be well imagined, (town not being capable of any great defence,) had carried off about half a million of dollars. That such may have been the fact is not impossible, but as to the amount of the force we believe it is much over rated. At all events whatever doubt we may entertain upon the subject, the thing is quite in character with the principles of Buccaniers.

From the Mercury Advertiser.

The Balloon.—We have the following particulars from Mr. GURNEY of his ascent on Monday.

He commenced inflating the balloon at 12 o'clock, the weather then appearing fine, and promising to be favorable. At about 4 o'clock the atmosphere became clouded, indicating a violent storm, the wind blowing fresh from S. S. W. in which direction it continued till near the moment of his ascending, the weather all the time threatening to frustrate his enterprise, and render it the more hazardous. At 6 o'clock the balloon was filled, and the Parachute attached. Mr. G. entered the car, determined to fulfil his promise, notwithstanding the terrific appearance of the horizon, filled with black clouds and whirlwinds of dust. He resolutely gave the order to let go the rope which held the balloon, when it instantly rose with astonishing rapidity. At the moment the wind changed North, West, and blew a gale, taking the balloon across the trees in the Garden, and entangling the car in the branches, some of which were carried off. The Balloon then ascended with astonishing rapidity to the height of 1500 fathoms, with inexpressible grandeur, and amid the shouts of the populace.

At this time it was necessary that Mr. G. should have perfect command of himself, and of the ropes by which his vehicle was attached to the balloon ; the branches of the trees had got amongst them, and caused some confusion. To get at them, and clear the ropes " became necessary to throw over the flags, which was performed when at about half the height he ascended. Every thing being then right, he continued his journey upwards till a new difficulty presented itself. The greatest interest of the scene was in separating the Parachute from the balloon ; as he ascended higher, the thick clouds he was about to encounter, he was apprehensive would hide him from view. Under these considerations he was induced to detach the Parachute rather sooner than originally intended.

On cutting the ropes, the Parachute fell rapidly about 300 feet before it expanded. This was the most trying moment to Mr. G. as well as to the spectators. But the cord then acting according to his intentions, the umbrella opened, and the car descended gradually, the wind taking it across the East River to the spot where he finally alighted.

So little confidence existed as to the success of the experiment, we are sorry to state, that Mr. G. has made a great sacrince in order to demonstrate its practicability, very few having contributed to the expense. But all are now pleased and satisfied, and it is believed that on a second performance, he will have no reason to complain of the want of liberality in the citizens of New York.

SOMETHING NEW.

" A considerable quantity of wheat has recently been imported at the eastward, from the Mediterranean—it is to be sure, not first quality, but will probably make fine flour—there are upwards of 5000 bushels in one parcel, a part of which has been sent here and sold at 50 cents. That wheat should be brought from Europe to this country is certainly surprising, and speaks a language that cannot be misunderstood."—Alb. Gaz.

New invented improvement in the use of Steam.

Dr. Jenks, of Colebrook in this state, has invented, and actually put in operation, a steamboat which is propelled without wheel, oar or paddle, or internal machinery. The boat used for experiment is on a small scale, calculated to demonstrate the principle only upon which it is propelled : it has been several times exhibited, and examined in operation by gentlemen of science and respectability, who have given their certificates to the above fact. This operation is performed by the reaction of the steam. The inventor has likewise, upon the same principle of reaction, put in operation a machine, by which a rotatory motion is produced direct from the boiler, at a trifling expense compared with that of producing it from the common engine.

upon land, it is certain, that propelling a boat upon the water, without any kind of machinery, must be more so. When the enormous expense of the engine and other necessary machinery—its weight in loading the boat, and the loss of power by friction, are taken into consideration together with many other disadvantages attending complicated machinery, the utility of this discovery, it is thought, will place it among the most useful improvements of the present day.—Arrangements we understand, are making for putting this principle into operation immediately, upon a larger scale.—Hartford Mercury.

CANAL TO THE PACIFIC OCEAN.

MR. EDITOR—Seeing in your paper of yesterday some observations on the project of a passage to the Pacific ocean by means of a canal across the Isthmus of Darien, brings to the mind a proposition made to the king of Spain, by Sr. Don. Salvador, St. Martin, the bishop of Chiapa, who resides in Ciudad Real, which is the capital of the province.—West of this city, the river Goazacealcos, takes its rise, and running N. E. empties into the gulf of Mexico, about 30 leagues east of Vera Cruz; it has 10 and 12 feet water on its bar, and is navigable for craft of 4 or 5 feet up to the above city.—East of the said city, the river (or a stream which empties into the river,) Chimilapa takes its rise, and taking a westerly direction empties into the Pacific ocean, at the port of Mahuantipa, which is a good harbor for large ships, and the river is navigable for craft of 4 or 4 feet up to the above city of Ciudad Real; the two rivers passing each other at or near the city in nearly a parallel line at the distance of only seven miles from each other; neither of them have falls to impede their navigation, and the ground through which a canal would have to be cut to connect the two rivers is neither mountainous nor rocky.

I have seen a minute description of the rivers, and countries through which they pass, contained in a petition to the king of Spain, begging permission to cut the above canal; it was presented in 1816, and contained the most convincing evidence of the facility with which the two oceans might be connected,—the petition met with an utter denial from the king of Spain. Had it been granted, the intention of those concerned was to have steamboats employed between the two oceans, which would have made a voyage in much less time than it occupies between this and Louisville, and as the mouth of the Goazacealcos is not more than 8 or 10 days sail from the mouth of the Mississippi, may we not with propriety hope that Spanish America will soon shake off the European yoke, when she is in be at liberty to make improvements for her own benefit, without consulting those who have no rule of government but their own jealous fears.—Should such a communication be opened between the two oceans, what calculations can realize the future grandeur of New-Orleans?

Rumor of War in Europe.—The Adriatic, arrived at Boston, brings a rumor from Gibraltar, (which, however, we deem altogether improbable,) that "the Emperor of Russia has demanded that the King of Prussia should abdicate his throne, in favor of his own family." It is added, that there was strong talk of war; and that Prince Metternich, Prime Minister of Austria, who was at Naples with his Imperial Sovereign, was to proceed on the 2d June, to the Court of France.

ALBANY, July 30.

A new Steam Mill on a small scale, has been recently put in operation in this city, by Mr. Junia Curtis, on his improved plan of applying steam, which is much less complicated and far less expensive than the ordinary steam engine. The whole steam machinery consists of two boilers, of five hogsheads each, an iron box, a large tub of water, which serves as a condenser, pipes for conducting steam, and forcing pump. The buckets in the wheel are 5 inches by 14. The steam is thrown directly into these, by a two inch pipe, coming directly from the boiler, and after performing nearly a revolution, is let off through a valve, passes into the condenser, the water of which it heats, preparatory to the latter passing, by means of the forcing pump into the boilers. The power of this machinery is sufficient to turn two run of stones, each of which will grind a bushel in five minutes, as we are told. The expence of erecting a steam engine upon Mr. Curtis's model, is said to be only one fifth of the engines on the old model. If these data are correct, this improvement must offer important advantages for milling upon the St. Lawrence, Ohio, and Mississipi, where scites for water mills are scarce. The ingenious inventor has struggled with pecuniary difficulties for some time to carry his improvement into operation, and we hope he will now find suitable renumeration in the patronage of a liberal public.—Argus.

From the Democratic Press.

The prickly heat.—An Englishman arrived in this city a few weeks ago, and being very much troubled with the prickly heat, he went into his bed room, and sponged his body all over in some vinegar and cold water. The consequence was, he was a corpse within five hours!!!

Ice Punch.—A few days since, two brothers, Irishmen, feeling thirsty, yet being fearful to drink water, went into a tavern and drank a bowl of Ice Punch. They both expired in less than twelve hours.

These facts are mentioned in the hope that they may operate as cautions. To them we would add that a citizen died a few days since, in consequence of having eat heartily of hot corn and water melons. An indulgence of appetite, at this season, is peculiarly dangerous, unless it be under the government of moderation.

GALLIPOLIS, (Ohio,) June 23.

A new method of getting a Wife.—A few days since a man by the name of —— SANS, having made some advances to a young lady in the county of Meigs, which did not meet with the approbation of her father, the old gentleman forbid him his house. But my gentleman, intent upon his game, was not to be defeated this way,—He, with a few of his associates, went to a magistrate, procured a state's warrant for the old gentleman, had him arrested in the dead of the night, and put under keepers; then, by virtue of a summons, took the daughter, pretendedly as a witness against her father; but instead of taking her to the magistrate's where her father was confined, they took her to a neighboring house, where the same magistrate who had issued the warrant for the father and summons for the daughter, soon made his appearance, and where, through much persuasion, the girl was joined in wedlock, after which the father was suffered to depart in peace to his own house.

What a blessing is a free government!

The Charleston City Gazette states, that a Shark, 9 feet long, was caught in Charleston Harbor on the 25th ult. The day before he was caught, he snapped at an oar with which a boy was sculling a boat, and broke off one of his teeth. The fragment of the tooth, found sticking in the oar, was compared with the broken one in the monster's jaw.

From the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser, of July 27.

Important.—Why are not the guardians of our city providing, in time, some kind of relief for the thousands of journeymen mechanics and laboring poor, who are now wandering through the streets of our city, unable to procure employment, and their families almost reduced to starvation. It is said that not less than 10,000 able bodied men are now entirely destitute of employment and almost frantic with the gloomy prospects before them;—this is too serious a subject to be neglected—these persons must get work soon, or be driven to street-begging or robbing—for live they must and will, and their families also.—The winter is approaching, and we must not depend on the benevolent societies whose funds are nearly or quite exhausted, and cannot be replenished in the present state of trade and embarassment. Are not many more men wanted on the grand canal and public works and roads, or would it not be good policy for the corporation and wealthy citizens to unite and resist 4 or 5000 of these destitute persons to emigrate to Ohio or Illinois, where they are certain of getting employment and a comfortable maintenance. Something should be done immediately and effectually, or we may expect to be compelled to support thousands of persons next winter, or submit to be robbed, and that by men who are now willing and anxious to earn for themselves and their families an honest livelihood.

A MECHANIC.

A fleet of four French men of war appeared off Bermuda on the last of July. They were from the West Indies, where they had been cruising for pirates, and were bound to Newfoundland to remain during the hurricane months.—The fleet consisted of the frigates La Gloire and La Thais, and the brigs L'Oliver and L'Eveyale, under command of Admiral Duperre.

The British brigof war Fly, had captured two piratical vessels, which the commander intended to carry to Barbadoes. A Danish brig of war had also captured a piratical vessel.

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass. July 8.

Tornado.—On Wednesday, the 30th ult. the inhabitants of the south part of the town of Lee, were greatly alarmed by the approach of a terrible tornado; which threatened instant destruction to all the buildings in its vicinity. A number of thunder showers had passed over in the fore part and middle of the day.—But about 5 o'clock in the afternoon this shower approached from the south with vivid flashes of lightning and heavy thunder. By the time it had reached the mountains, south of Lee, it became tremendously awful. The wind blew with such violence, as it came over the mountain, as to tear up by the roots and twist off the largest trees. It struck a piece of woods containing about three acres, and demolished every tree—and even removed a fence, built of heavy logs, to its foundation—some of which were half buried in the earth—these were actually moved, a number of them several rods. The inhabitants stood viewing its approach with horror, expecting the destruction of their houses, if not instant death; but its violence abated as it came upon the river, a few rods east of the mills, after throwing a thick cloud of water an hundred feet into the air—twenty rods further, and the whole village must inevitably be laid in ruins. Some of the trees twisted off were three feet in diameter. Happily no other damage was done.

From the Buffalo Journal of July 6.

We regret to learn, that the remnant of the six nations Indians, residing within this state, during the last week, in full council, solemnly resolved not to encourage the introduction of the christian religion among them. We understand that the debates on this subject, were long and violent.

On Wednesday last, about the commencement of the storm a herring weighing 9 ounces and measuring 13 inches in length, fell from the clouds and landed in main street in this village, near the Phœnix Coffee-House. At the moment it was supposed to have dropped from the talons of some bird of prey; but a close survey of the heavens, made with a particular view of ascertaining the fact satisfied the spectators that no such bird was in sight, nor did the fish bear any indications of having been grasped in the talons of a bird. It was seen more than 20 feet before it struck the ground, and lived for some minutes after its fall. If the incredulous should doubt the above statement it can be corroborated by several highly respectable eye-witnesses.

On Saturday last a non-descript animal was caught with a hook at Black Rock.—It has almost a rectangular or square head three gills on each side, four feet, with very short legs, or rather no legs at all—its tail shaped much like that of a lamprey eel, its skin perfectly smooth, and its length more than a foot. Its general appearance indicates it to be of the Lizard family.

UPPER-CANADA GAZETTE.

NOTICE.

NOTICE is hereby given, to all those persons who have orders for land, and who expect to procure locations in Chinguacousy, that the Southern half of that Township will be open for settlement on the month of September, consisting of 288 lots of 100 acres each, two of which it is believed are Mill Seats. The mill seats will be given, in addition to the other 100 acres, to the first applicant who gives security for erecting a Saw Mill immediately, and a Grist Mill in eighteen months. The residue of the Township will be thrown open as soon as the Survey shall be finished.

The Surveys of Albion, Caledon and the north part of Esquesing, are daily expected, and will be thrown open for all Settlers, those who have larger grants as well as others.

YORK, September 2, 1819.

To the Most Noble and Puissant Prince, Charles Duke of Richmond, Lenox, Aubigny, Earl of March and Darnley, Knight of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, General of His Majesty's Forces, Governor in Chief of the British North American Provinces, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR GRACE,

WE, dutiful subjects of His Majesty, residing in the Western District of Upper Canada, beg leave to approach your Grace with sentiments of profound loyalty and respect.

We congratulate ourselves upon the personal acquaintance with our District, with which the present tour will supply you, and we humbly hope for and solicit the favorable countenance and protection of your Grace, towards this distant part of your Government. In all things, that the word and spirit of God may be from the same sources we trust to draw a perpetuation of the unfeigned sentiments of loyalty, with which we are animated. Unwilling as we are to trespass on your Grace's time, we however cannot refrain from expressing our grateful sense of the benevolent spirit which animates your Grace to encounter the fatigue, and suffer the privations attendant on so long a journey; permit us then to tender our heartfelt wishes, that your return to the seat of Government may be accomplished in health & safety; and participating too in that happiness which your Grace's presence can no where have failed to inspire among His Majesty's faithful subjects in these Provinces.

The Signatures are the same as appeared to the Address from Amherstburg, to His Excellency the Lieut. Governor in last week's Gazette.)

To which His Grace was pleased to give the following answer.

GENTLEMEN,

I have to thank you for your loyal and flattering address.

I am most happy to have had it in my power to visit this part of His Majesty's North American Provinces, and can assure you that my best endeavours will never be wanting to promote its happiness and prosperity, and in so doing, I shall be fulfilling the commands and wishes of His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, and performing a duty most gratifying to my own feelings.

Scarborough Springs FARM.

For Sale, liberal terms,

AN extensive and very valuable Farm, situate in the fourth Concession of the Township of Scarboro', within fifteen miles of the Seat of Government, and containing about three hundred acres of the very best timbered Land.

There are about forty acres of the premises in a high state of cultivation, fenced, and abundantly supplied with water. And the Farm, from its being contiguous to an important Salmon Fishery, and containing an extensive Maple Bush, must prove a most desirable purchase to any one wishing to settle in the vicinity of York.

The eligibility of the situation for a Farmer, within a few miles of a good and sure market, connected with the fertility of the soil, and various other local advantages are of themselves fully sufficient to recommend the above to the public; but the subscriber has it in his power further to state, that it is the seat of the much celebrated Scarborough Springs, the efficacy of whose waters in the cure of a variety of maladies is too notorious to need recapitulation: suffice it therefore to say, that if a commodious house were erected for the accommodation of strangers, and conducted by an attentive and enterprising person, the continual resort of the infirm and sickly to these Springs, to enjoy the salubrity of their waters, could not fail to secure most ample remuneration for any exertions which might be bestowed for their ease and comfort.

From the foregoing it may be inferred, and the proprietor is bold to say, that there is not a situation in the Province better adapted for the establishment and speedy growth of a Village, and that to any intelligent and industrious individual he offers a most tempting and lucrative speculation.

For Sale also—The unexpired term of a Lease of the Clergy Reserve adjoining the said Lands, of which Lease three years only have expired. There are ten acres of improvement, well enclosed, thereon, with a fine stream of water passing through it, as well as the Springs Farm.

An indisputable Title with immediate possession will be given, and a liberal credit allowed for part of the purchase money, on approved security.

For further particulars application to be made to the proprietor.

FROM EUROPE.

LIVERPOOL, July 1.

On Monday night, the 21st inst, a serious disturbance took place near the Old Dock, ascribed to the Irish volunteers for South America, but which actually originated in an attempt on the part of some lumpers, as they are called, to rescue two women from the custody of the Dock watchmen. The mob increased, and proceeded from one violence to another, until at last the door of the Bridewell near the Custom House was broken open, and a number of prisoners liberated. Several of the Dock Police were severely handled, and attempts were made, it is said, to throw some of them into the dock, which, fortunately, was not accomplished. The military and police were called out, who apprehended a great number, several of whom were Irishmen of General Deveraux's corps, but of eight committed for trial, only one is of that description.

GLASGOW, June 17.

Yesterday a meeting of weavers took place on the Green. The 40th regiment, some troops of cavalry, and the police, were in readiness to act. The crowd was very large, and supposed to amount to 35,000. Several speakers addressed them, and among other means of relief, proposed a petition to the Regent, to grant such as wished it the means of reaching the colonies of N. America, with the means of support for one year after their arrival, which sums they propose to repay by remittances of produce.

The Steam-Ship Savannah, Captain Rogers, arrived at Liverpool on the 21st of June, after a passage of 25 days. Her arrival is thus noticed in a Liverpool paper of the 23th.—"Among the arrivals at this port, on the 21st we were particularly gratified and surprised by the novel sight of a fine steam-ship, which came round at half after seven; P. M. without the assistance of a single sheet, in a style which displayed the powerful advantage of the application of steam to vessels of the largest size, being 350 tons burthen. She is called the Savannah, Capt. Rogers. and sailed from Savannah 26th May, and arrived in the Channel five days since. During her passage, she worked the engine 18 days. Her model is beautiful, and the accommodation for passengers elegant and complete. This is the first ship on this construction that has undertaken a voyage across the Atlantic."

The Foreign Enlistment Bill, after a powerful opposition, passed the House of Commons, on the 21st of June by a majority of 81, and was ordered to the House of Lords for concurrence.

An instance of the unparalleled distresses of the times, is evinced in the fact of the celebrated London Museum the property of Mr. Bullock of Piccadilly, and the result of 30 years assiduous exertions, being lately sold under the hammer. The same has occurred to the grand library at Blenheim House, and the late Queen's Library is to be disposed of in a similar manner.

His Excellency the Lieut. Governor of Halifax has published by a proclamation a dispatch from Lord Bathurst refusing to permit the annexation of Prince Edward's Island to that Province. This is an answer to an application which was made to the Prince Regent praying for this junction some time ago.

Accounts from Germany, state a strong probability of a rupture between the Russian and Turkish governments.

A very extensive printing establishment in London, belonging to Messrs Bensley and Son, was lately destroyed by fire. The whole loss is estimated at £130,000 of which only 30,000 was insured.

The infant daughter of the Duke of Kent was baptized on the 25th June, and received the name of Alexandria Victoria.

French Funds June 26.—Bank Stock 15 10l. 2 per cent.

Mr Oliver Cromwell, whose descent from that illustrious family was first noticed in this miscellany, will shortly publish Memoirs of the Protector Oliver Cromwell, and of his sons Richard and Henry, illustrated by original letters, and other family papers.

In a few weeks will be published, with a portrait, an Account of the Life of James Crichton, of Cluny, commonly called the Admirable Crichton; with notes, and an appendix of original papers; by Mr. Patrick Frazer Tytler.

In the first week of June will be published, in 4 vol. 12mo. a Third Series of Tales of My Landlord: collected and arranged by Jedediah Cleishbotham, schoolmaster and parish-clerk of Gandercleugh; containing "The Bride of Lammermuir" and "A Legend of the Wars of Montrose."

Lord John Russell has nearly ready for publication, in 1 vol. 4to. the Life of William Lord Russell, with some Account of the Times in which he lived.

A new quarterly publication, of great promise, is announced by Drs. Brewster and Jameson, of Edinburgh, under the title of the Edinburgh Philosophical Journal; exhibiting a view of the progress of discovery in natural philosophy, chemistry, natural history, practical mechanics, geography, acoustics, and the fine and useful arts.

Professor Jameson announces a Manual of Mineralogy; and also Elements of Geology, with illustrative plates.

Captain Manby has invented and completed a light fire-cart, which was lately exhibited at the Royal Barracks at Yarmouth. It is provided with every necessary apparatus for extinguishing fires, to be applied by one man only on the first alarm.

The Tenants of Mr. Morton Pitt, one of the members for the county of Dorset, were agreably surprised at their last audit, by finding that that gentleman had ordered a material reduction in all their rents, so that each had about one-quarter of his half yearly payment to return home with in his pocket. At the late sale of some of the Duke of Dorset's freehold land at Brighton, one lot, not exceeding three quarters of an acre, was knocked down at fifteen hundred pounds.

A five hundred pounds share of Covent Garden Theatre sold last week for 475 guineas, being within £17 5s. of par.

A poor man begging food at a nobleman's house, one of the servants gave him a bason of vermicelli soup. He ladled it about for some time with the spoon, and then returned it, saying, "I am poor, it is true, and I am very hungry, but yet I can't eat broth with maggots in it."

The distress at Leeds is so great, that it is under consideration to afford from the parish funds means of conveying one hundred and fifty cloth manufacturers and their families, amounting to five hundred and seventy-seven persons, to the Cape of Good Hope or Canada!

It appears, by the first report of the Parliamentary Finance Committee, that the total amount of the revenue of Great Britain and Ireland, in the year 1818, £53,563,937, and that the probable expenditure of the United Kingdom for the current year is estimated at £67,779,382.

By a second report, it appears, that the number of the non-commissioned officers and privates ordered to be discharged in October last amounted 26,533 men; but, when the regimental reductions now in progress shall be completed, the total reduction will ultimately amount to 31,916 rank and file, and 4,593 horses The intended peace establishment of the army, exclusive of the regiments of cavalry and infantry serving in the East Indies, will then amount to—

Cavalry . . .	8,954
Foot guards . .	5,760
Infantry . . .	55,090
Making a total of	69,794 men.

Warwickshire.—Two petitions were lately forwarded from Coventry to Mr. Peter Moore, to be presented to the House of Commons, one from the mayor and corporation, and the other from the master-weavers. The petitioners stated, that they were obliged to pay in poor-rates 49s. per acre on their landed property, and 19s. in the pound upon the rent of every house of which they are occupiers; and that, unless some relief were granted them, they should perish in one common ruin. There are now five classes of manufacturers in Coventry, each working ninety six hours in the week, or sixteen hours in the day. The first of the classes gain 10s. a-week, or a penny-farthing an hour. The second gain 5s. 6d. a-week. The third 2s. 9d. The two remaining classes receive 2s. and 1s. 6d. a-week. The men have been obliged to resort to the funds of their friendly societies; and not only have these funds been exhausted, but the funds of their saving banks, which are now a mere mockery!

OLD BAILEY.

Mock Bail.—The King v. Milner; this prosecution arose out of the nefarious practices which are in such frequent practice in our courts of law, of putting in persons as bail for large sums, who are, in point of fact, mere "men of straw;" that is to say, persons utterly destitute of property, and who have been termed "men of straw," from the fact of their being known in former times to ply up and down in Westminster-hall with a straw in their shoe, in order to indicate their calling. The defendant in the present case was employed to justify bail in an action for a large amount, and swore himself to be possessed of property, both free-hold and personal, to more than twice the sum sought to be recovered. Upon the plaintiff recovering however, neither the bail nor the defendant were to be found; and thus the plaintiff was deprived of the fruits of his verdict. For this perjury the defendant was indicted, and was found guilty.

The Common Serjeant, in passing the sentence of the law, commented with great force upon the dreadful and too prevailing crime of which the defendant had been so properly convicted; and directed that he should stand for one hour in the pillory, and be transported for seven years. It is to be hoped that the severity of this punishment will operate as a warning to deter others from similar pursuits.

PARIS, June 9.

Marshal Soult is expected to morrow, not at Paris, but at his country house of Vellenenve l'Etang, near St. Cloud.

The duke of Hamilton, one of the greatest lords of Scotland, has been in Paris some days. It is said that in virtue of ancient rights and of ancient possessions in France, he is taking measures to obtain a seat in the house of peers, but our constitutional provisions appear not very favorable to his pretensions.

Gen. Van Damme, comprised in the ordinance of 24th July, has arrived at Havre; as he was not provided with any authorization, he was placed at the disposition of the local authorities, who have given him the city for his prison.

June 11.

At Hamburg, Altona, and their environs, there are more than 800 German emigrants waiting an opportunity of embarking for Brazil; their numbers are daily increasing—the greater part are from the country of Wittgenstein, and the grand duchy of Darmstadt. The others mostly from the Palatinate.

BREMEN, June 3.

Accounts from Russia say, that the deficit of the great house of Zur Kebacker & Kleen is estimated at two millions of rubles, and it was feared would produce many others failures at Petersburgh and Holland. The chief partner in the house has put an end to his existence.

MENTZ, June 6.

From the 17th April to the end of May, the number of emigrants to America, who have passed by our city, down the Rhine, is 1162, viz 315 men, 262 women, and 585 children; 685 of whom were from Wirtemburgh, called separatists. There was one man of 64 years of age, with his wife and 14 children.

LONDON, June 18.

Consols closed yesterday, (or acct. at 63 4-8; omnium 1-2 discount.

A mischievous meeting took place on Monday on Hunslet Moor, near Leeds, when after several tedious harangues, it was agreed that an inflammatory declaration should be signed for the information of all whom it may concern. Another meeting of the same mischievous characters is to take place on Monday next.

June 16.

A very highly respectable house in the Dutch trade, stopped payment yesterday morning.—From the high credit the house holds, and the surprise it has evidently caused, it is impossible to anticipate the result. The letters from Hamburg also notice the failure of the house of Elliot & Co.

Accounts were received yesterday that the Carlisle weavers, amounting to not less than 2000, have diminished their demands to 18s a cut.

Yesterday the Hon. C. Bagot, was introduced to the regent, upon his arrival from America.

The third reading of the foreign enlistment bill is further postponed to Monday next.

The king of Netherland appears likely to give new offence to his subjects. He has interdicted all the numerous popish processions except two, and all the fantastical dresses, which he remarks, were only productive of scandal to religion and disorder to the public peace.

June 17.

The Persian ambassador opened his residence in Charles-street on Tuesday evening with a grand assembly. The interior was brilliantly illuminated, particularly in those parts where the whole length portraits of the royal family of Persia appeared. The sovereign in his robes of office, occupies the principal situation in a leading drawing room, enriched by a canopy of rich cashmire shawls. In the banqueting room was a similar picture of their apparent.—The apartments displayed all the costly luxury of eastern splendor. The king's throne was enriched with the most precious gems in diamonds and pearls The fair Circassian retired to rest at 10 o'clock, before the arrival of the company. The ambassador received the guests with the most polished demeanor, and accommodated them with sherbet and liquors peculiar to the Persian court.

The last "TALES of MY LANDLORD."

The following farewell address from the author of those highly popular tales will no doubt be read with regret by the numerous admirers of Jedediah Cleishbotham, in this country.

It is copied from the "Legend of Montrose" the last tale of the third series—published this day.

Reader! The Tales of my Landlord are now finally closed; and it was my purpose to have addressed thee in the vein of Jedediah Cleisbotham; but, like Horam the son of Asmar, and all other imaginary story tellers, Jedediah has melted into thin air.

Mr. Cleisbotham bore the same resemblance to Ariel as he at whose voice he rose doth to the sage Prospero; and yet, so fond are we of the fictions of our imagination, that I part with him, and all other imaginary localities, with childish reluctance.

I am aware this is a feeling in which the reader will little sympathise; but he cannot be more sensible than I am, that sufficient varieties have been exhibited of the Scottish character, to exhaust one individual's powers of observation, and that to persist would be useless and tedious.

I have the vanity to suppose that the popularity of these Novels have shown my countrymen, and their peculiarities, in lights which were new to the Southern readers; and that many, hitherto indifferent upon the subject, have been induced to read Scottish History, from the allusions in these works of fiction.

I retire from the field, conscious there remains behind, not only a large harvest, but labourers capable of gathering it. More than one writer has of late displayed talents of this description; and if the present author, himself a phantom, may be permitted to distinguish a brother or perhaps a sister's shadow, he would mention, in particular, the author of the very lively work entitled "Marriage."

Waterloo Trophies.—On Friday week a numerous & fashionable party attended at the late museum in Piccadilly, to witness the sale of the carriage and other things which belonged to Napoleon Bonaparte, which were captured at Waterloo. The articles were all eagerly bought up, and some of them at most extravagant prices. The following statement of the prices given for some of the things, will serve to show in what estimation these relics are held: The carriage sold for 268l.; small opera glass, 5l. 5s.; tooth brush, 3l. 13s. 6d.; snuff box, 166l. 19s. 6d. military stock, or collar, 1l. 17s.; old slippers, 1l.; razor, (common) 4l. 4s.; piece of sponge, 17s. 6d. shaving brush, 3l. 14s.; shirt 21. 5s.; comb, 1l.; shaving box, 7l. 7s.; pair of gloves 1l.; old pocket handkerchief, 1l. 11s. 6d. Many other articles sold equally high.

It appears from a late London paper that a cargo of Timber had arrived in England from Sierra Leone. It is said to be of an excellent quality, some of the logs weighing from 3 to 5 tons each. It is the first cargo of the kind ever brought from Africa to England.

A London paper remarks, that the famous edition of Boccacio, for which the present duke of Marlborough gave £2,260, was lately purchased by Messrs Longman for 874 guineas.

The important question between the earl of Fife and sir James Duff and others, (the trustees of the late lord Fife) has been decided by the second division of the court of session, in Scotland, which unanimously reduced and set aside the trust deed and deed of entail, executed by the late James earl of Fife. By this decision the present earl succeeds to an estate of nearly £20,000 sterling per annum.

American stocks in London, June 23d.—New 6 per cents, 98 to 100, with dividend from 1st of April.—U. S. Bank shares, 23l. to 23l 10s. with dividend from 1st of January.

Norbury Park, Surrey, which contains 527 acres, has been sold at public auction for 19,000 guineas. F. Robinson, Esq. is the purchaser. Belmont, late the residence of T. Harris, Esq. of Covent Garden Theatre, was sold at the same time for 10,400 guineas.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

HAMOUDA PACHA.

This extraordinary man governed Tunis as bey, upwards of thirty-two years, and with perfect tranquility. He was distinguished for bravery, vigilance, shrewdness and sagacity; and was deservedly popular among his countrymen.—From a habit of administering justice for many years, says Mr. Noah "Hamouda Pacha had accustomed himself to a promptness and decision which never admitted of quibble or delay. If a crime was committed, the culprit was immediately brought before him, the evidence adduced, the defence heard, the sentence given, and the execution immediately followed. He spoke little, and never without reflection, and always to the purpose. He accustomed himself to read the looks of men with a keen scrutiny, which seldom or never deceived him in his idea of character; and this species of investigation had become so familiar to him, that he was accounted a physiognomist of the first order. One fact alone will serve to illustrate.

A Bedouin had a horse, which he valued highly, and which he was in danger of losing by sickness. In the fervor of his zeal, and conformable to the superstitious customs of the country, he vowed that if his horse recovered he would present his favorite saint with 100 piasters. The horse was pronounced out of danger, and the Bedouin, on serious reflection, regretted the extravagant vow which he had made. Consoling himself with the assurance, that it was unknown to any but himself, he deliberated on the best means of getting rid of the claim; and accordingly, after a long struggle between his conscience and his avarice, he decided to pay the saint 50 piasters being one half of the original promise. The bey is trustee for all sums offered to the numerous saints in the kingdom, to whom he is accountable, and doubtless is prepared for settlement when called upon by them.—The Bedouin repaired to the palace with his 50 piasters and told his story. The bey, struck with the hesitating manner of the man, suspected all was not right; and during the recapitulation of the story, he fixed his eyes on him with remarkable keenness, and on his conclusion he said to him—Wretch, tell me quickly, did you not promise to the saint 100 piasters? The affrighted Bedouin fell on his knees and confessed the fact. Caitiff, said the bey do you think any thing is concealed from me who am myself a saint! Begone, bring the 100 piasters; and, as a punishment for your sacrilege, you shall receive 100 blows on the feet, which sentence was faithfully executed.

From the West Indies.

Accounts from Hayti state, that the President Boyer had caused his senate to pass an act enabling foreign merchants to recover, by legal process, debts contracted by the natives. Heretofore strangers were compelled to receive produce in payment of their demands, at an exhorbitant price, or wait the pleasure of their debtors. The wise regulation, it is justly expected, will greatly augment the trade of Hayti.

FROM LOWER CANADA.

From the Quebec Gazette.

QUEBEC, 19th August, 1819.

A Paragraph extracted from the London papers, having appeared in our last Gazette, which, as we find from good authority, gives a very erroneous account of the objects of a Bill brought into the Imperial Parliament by Lord Bathurst, relating to the Bishops and Clergy of the Colonies, we now correct the errors of that Paragraph.

The objects of the measure were these: the Bishops could not regularly ordain for the Colonies; even for those, where no Bishop is established: on the other hand, the Colonial Bishops could ordain in England. The Bill, therefore, gives permission to the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, and the Bishop of London, to ordain for His Majesty's Foreign Possessions; and takes from every Clergyman who shall be ordained by a Colonial Bishop, out of the limits of his own Diocese, all capacity of holding preferment in England.

The Bishops at home very generally require in candidates for orders, that they shall have been educated at one of the Universities: the colonial Bishops find it necessary occasionally to ordain persons who have not had that advantage: the Bill therefore (at the suggestion of the University of Oxford,) makes the consent of the Archbishop of the Province, and the Bishop of the Diocese necessary to persons ordained in the Colonies, in order to their holding preferment, or being employed, at home: and the consent of one of the Archbishops, and of the Bishop of the Diocese, is, in like manner, required, in the case of persons ordained for the Colonies by one of the Archbishops, or the Bishop of London.

And thus, the Bill withholds only from the Colonial Bishops and Clergy, such privileges as would in effect go beyond those of the Bishops and Clergy at home.

The farmers in the vicinity of this city are now busily employed in their harvest. We are sorry to find that it does not prove so good as was generally expected. In some fields, where the grain was not exposed to the free action of the winds, it is rusted; in other places, particularly on high light grounds, the ears have been scorched and dried up before they were ripe, by the late intense heats. The result will be, that although the quantity of wheat will be great, the quality will, in general, be rather inferior. The weather continues to be uncommonly favorable for getting in the crops. The hay has generally proved deficient in quantity.

MONTREAL, August 1819.

SAVINGS BANK.

As there is a proposal for establishing a Savings Bank in Montreal, and a General Meeting is called for this purpose on Monday next, it may be of service to so good a cause to submit to the Public some account of the nature and tendency of such an institution.

The object of this Institution is to open to the lower orders a place of deposit for their small savings with the allowance of a reasonable monthly interest, and with full liberty of withdrawing their money at any time, in whole or in part. Without entering into a detailed account of the plan of the institution, suffice it to say that it is very simple and easy in practice. One hour's attendance during the week will be sufficient for transacting the whole of the business, and as persons of a benevolent turn of mind will not be wanting to discharge gratuitously this office, almost the only expence incurred by the Establishment will be that of books and stationary. The contributor who places a weekly deposit of five shillings in the bank, and continues to do so regularly for twenty years, will find it, at the end of that time, to amount, without interest, to 240—and at the rate of 5 per cent interest alone will come to £165 16—so that, altogether he will find himself in possession of a sum exceeding £400. And let it be observed, that in this process of accumulating money, there is no risque and uncertainty—there is no additional care or labour required—nor any disarrangement of the comforts and conveniences of life.

The only effectual method of assisting the poor, is to encourage industry, economy and sobriety among them—to excite and animate their exertions—and aid them in securing the full advantages of their success. The great source of Poverty will be found in the want of economical and provident habits. Nor are habits of thoughtlessness and improvidence, among the poor, always the offspring of idleness and vice: they are as often the effect of ignorance and accident. The want of a place of deposit for the small savings which the poor man can lay up, prevents him from doing so and from acquiring a habit which is the foundation of so many virtues. Many would gladly adopt the plan, if the facilities were brought within their reach. But, while there is no means of placing their small savings beyond the reach of temptation by withdrawing them from their immediate control, the slightest invitation to squander them is too seldom resisted—they are pilfered by thieves—they are lost by being entrusted to improper hands —or (worse that last) at the alehouse and gin-shop. If the small savings, which are misspent or lost from the mere want of a convenient mode of depositing them with safety, were carefully secured & properly taken care of, it may be asserted, without fear of contradiction, that with the usual portion of health with which Providence blesses them, there would be very few who could not lay up a provision for old age adequate to all their wants—who might not have the means of supporting themselves comfortably during occasional intermissions of employment, during seasons of scarcity and dearth, and, (what is not less pleasing) of bestowing on their families the inestimable blessing of good education, and setting them happy in the world.

Such are the effects of Savings Banks, in improving the condition of the poor.—At the same time, their general effect on Society cannot be too highly estimated. They tend to promote industry, economy, sobriety and foresight among the labouring class, thereby affording them an effectual security against the most formidable of human evils want and dependence while they add to the good order and prosperity of Society in the highest degree. They check, more powerfully than any other means, the growth of pauperism, by suppressing the very seeds of it.—Whatever causes are most actively powerful in spreading corruption and misery among the lower orders, are hereby counteracted in the most direct manner. By opening a certain prospect of independence and even of wealth to a class of men who have no such excitement to exertion, and who are apt, for that reason, to be careless and improvident they extend to them also the influence of that honest ambition and laudable emulation to better their circumstances and increase their respectability and consequence, which actuate the classes above them, and are the great cause of the prosperity and improvement of mankind. In a word, such institutions, are calculated to render this class more intelligent as well as more independent, easy and comfortable in their circumstances.

In this country, where high wages are earned by the Labourer during summer, while very little can be done by him during the course of a very long and severe winter, the utility, I might almost say the necessity, of Savings Banks will appear in the clearest light. The temptations to spend, arising from the greatness of wages during the season of employment —from the want of constant occupation during winter—from the facility of obtaining spirituous liquors, and above all, from the unhappy influence of those examples of idleness, extravagance and dissipation which are so lamentably numerous, loudly call for the adoption of some means like the present, to counteract their tendency and operation. All therefore who feel an interest in the welfare of this society, or a wish to promote the virtue and happiness of their fellow-men, as they cannot but approve of the proposed institution, ought heartily to co-operate in giving it effect and extending its usefulness. There are few who, in this way, may not do some good. Heads of families can recommend it to their servants—all who employ labourers or mechanics may persude them to avail themselves of this institution and rest assured that they will greatly advance their own interests by engaging them in a practice so favorable & all those whose professional duties lead them to frequent intercourse with the lower orders, and give them naturally an influence among them, cannot render them a greater service than by pointing out and recommending to them this new path to Independance and Comfort which the ingenuity and benevolence of this improving age have opened to them.

The citizens of Montreal, ever prompt to adopt and carry into effect schemes of public utility or general beneficence, will deserve the gratitude of these provinces by introducing an institution of such peculiar & pre-eminent importance as the Savings Bank, while they will deliver themselves in no inconsiderable degree from the heavy burdens which the numerous benevolent establishments now formed in our city threaten to impose; and, what is more, counteract that tendency which most of them (even under the best management) are admitted to have, namely, to increase the very causes of the evils for which they furnish only a partial and temporary remedy.—Canadian Cour.

From the Quebec Gazette.

New invented Patent Arch Bridge, Mr. JOHN BRAGG, of the City of Montreal, Carpenter, INVENTOR and PATENTEE.

This day was completed, near the Parish Church of St. Henry, (12 miles from the City of Quebec,) by Mr. John Bragg, a most elegant and beautiful Toll Bridge, over the River Etchemin, agreeably to the model deposited in the House of Assembly.

This Bridge consists of one entire Arch of 200 feet chord, 24 feet broad, and 28 feet altitude; without a single mortise, tenon, bolt, bands, post, pier, tressel, or even any abutments, that ministers to its support. It was commenced in the latter part of the month of May last, and built by 15 men in about two months, (under circumstances peculiarly disadvantageous, which greatly retarded the progress of the work,) and is the first Bridge that ever was erected on this excellent construction, in America, Europe or in any part of the known world. And the public are assured that for strength and solidity, as well as beauty, it has not been excelled by any Bridge constructed upon any other plan whatever.

It is now fully ascertained by this experiment that Arches may be extended to a much greater distance, upon this simple, though valuable plan, than was heretofore generally believed; and that no other impediment but the immense altitude, will even prevent Bridges being thrown over almost any of the largest Rivers in the Country, and for less than one half the expence which would necessarily be incurred in erecting Bridges upon any other plan heretofore known; and for Military purposes it will prove an invaluable acquisition, for, upon sudden emergencies, rivers of ordinary dimensions may be bridged with rough materials as they are taken from the Forest, without the aid of any implement except an Axe, and with a facility and dispatch unexampled.

It is worthy of observation, that although the most important and valuable discoveries and improvements have been made within a Century past, in the mechanic Arts, and almost every other Art & Science, yet no very important or valuable improvement has been made in the art of Bridge building, since the erection of London Bridge, in the year A. D. 1173, a period of upwards of six hundred and fifty years, until the present system of arching was invented by Mr. Bragg, the builder of this bridge, who obtained an Act of the Parliament of this Province last winter, granting to him the exclusive privilege of building Bridges and Arches throughout the Province of Lower Canada, upon this most valuable and important plan.

It is much to be hoped that every advocate for useful and valuable improvements in mechanism, will feel gratified at the success of inventive genius, and that when the excellence in principle, and utility in practice, of any new discovery or great improvement, so fully tested by actual experiment, as in the present instance, they will come forward with alacrity, and afford their aid and influence in its encouragement and support, especially when the enormous expences of erecting Arch Bridges upon any other system heretofore exhibited, is taken into consideration, in comparison with the one now proffered to the public; every person possessed of a spark of public spirit ought to feel it their duty to patronize an invention where ingenuity and public utility are blended, and so conspicuously preeminent. St. Henry, 3d August, 1819.

Something to do in dull times.

A HOAX.—On Wednesday afternoon one of the most perfect jokes of this description was played off on the good citizens of Montreal we have ever witnessed. Some days previous a few young men circulated a report of a match on Velocipedes being about to be run on the Champ de Mars at 5 o'clock in the Evening. The story took very well & obtained so general credit, that it appeared as an article in one of the public papers. This gave to it the desired publicity, and excited the proper degree of curiosity. Before the appointed hour, a large concourse of people had assembled on the appointed spot to witness this unusual spectacle. The windows of the surrounding buildings and the gardens which commanded a view of the ground, were crowded with the beauties of our City. Men, women, and children, of all ranks and ages, served to encrease the crowd. Nay, some of the votaries of Epicurus tho' at the time of their usual sacrifice, deserting their favorite orgies, had sw allowed their dinners with an unusual degree of celerity to obtain a sight of this expected match. The hour passed, anxious expectation was strained to the utmost pitch but no velocipedes made their appearance. After some time spent in doubtful delay, busy rumor whisper'd the whole was a hoax !! and the hopes of the expected treat vanished with a celerity, greater than the speed of the machines that had excited the idea. We were happy to observe, that on this occasion, there was none of that turbulent spirit we have been sorry to disappointment on similar occasions. The crowd separated, after a few hours, and returned quietly to their homes, each enjoying the laugh against his neighbour and pleased that it they had not had their hopes realized, they had contributed to their health, by the enjoyment of a pleasant walk in an agreeable Evening.

HALIFAX, July 12.
SUPREME COURT.

Trinity Term.

On Thursday last, Captain Pechell, commanding H. M. Sloop Bellettre, and P. G. Phanton, Esq. the 1st Lieutenant, were brought before the Court under a Writ of Attachment, issued against them for contempt of its authority, in opposing the Sheriff's Officer in the execution of his duty, after having served a Capias on the sailing-master of the said ship. It appeared that the sailing-master was desirous of going on shore with the Officer in a peaceable manner, and to settle the demand against him, but Lieut. Phanton rescued the prisoner, ordered the Officer over the side of the vessel at the point of the bayonet, and threw the writ after him, as appeared by the Affidavit of Thomas Hardy, the officer who served the writ; upon this affidavit and that of Lewis Demoliter, Esq. (the under Sheriff) the Court issued out writs of attachment against the Captain and the 1st Lieutenant for the contempt of Court and the King's Writ, directing Mr. Demoliter to perform his duty forthwith. Mr. Demoliter however, returned without being able to accomplish it, and tendered into Court his affidavit, of having been opposed in its execution, by Lieut. Phanton ordering the marines to fire upon the boat if she attempted to approach the ship.

Capt. Pechell and Lieut. Phanton, came on shore on Thursday morning, and delivered themselves up to the Court.

Decision of the Court.

"You now stand before the Court, for improperly interfering in the execution of a King's Writ, and you must be aware that it is an offence of a most heinous nature.—It was your duty as H. M.'s officer to enforce, and not prevent the execution of the Laws. You may probably be unacquainted with the circumstances about to be related to you, but it is well known to the gentlemen of the Bar—that in England the King's Courts are so jealous of their Writs, that an instance is on record, of the Captain of a King's ship having been brought up by a Writ of Habeas Corpus, for contempt, and compelled in the face of the Public to go down on his knees and beg the pardon of the Court. The Officer had taken the person duly authorized, and must under any Court, whether Civil or Military be protected—you turned the Sheriff's Officer out of the ship, and therefore treated him with disobedience, and your own declaration on this subject is conclusive—could you both have answered, that you had no knowledge such an officer was coming, the case would have been different; but you have admitted, you entertained suspicions. The order given by the Captain, to prevent all boats coming alongside the ship, was doubtless very proper, yet it cannot be enforced so as to resist a King's Writ. The conduct, however, of Capt. Pechell, in coming on shore after being informed there was a complaint against him, does him much credit, and is certainly an alleviating circumstance. As to Lieut. Phanton, he is charged with one of the most contemptuous acts that could possibly be offered to His Majesty's Court, throwing the Writ overboard; and his own Captain has confessed that he rescued the prisoner. It is but proper to tell you, that if a ship is bound upon the most urgent business—if an enemy's fleet was at the mouth of the harbour and threatened to destroy the town, and a King's Writ to come on board, you are even in that case bound to obey it. During a long and tedious war we know what your services were, but they are now no longer wanted—when the heat of war was raging, it is true indulgences were sometimes shown to the Officers of H. M. ships; but in the midst of serenity and peace, no reason can be advanced to palliate your conduct. The debt, for which the sailing-master was arrested, was due to a poor man, therefore, instead of preventing it being paid, it was your duty to have rendered all the assistance in your power to enforce the ends of Justice. Had the Sheriff been one of those determined men whic we often see, and had notwithstanding, proceeded to execute writ, and the marines had fired and killed him, you would have been guilty of the crime of murder. And on the other hand, had they got on board and in the conflict had killed one of your men, the Sheriff would not have been guilty of murder, but would have been acquitted by the Laws of the Country.

Your station in life is high—your rank may be high, but however high it be, you must yield and be subservient to the Laws of this Country, which you are bound to respect here equally as much as at home.—The sentence of the Court is, that you pay the sum of £10 each.

UPPER-CANADA GAZETTE.

At eight o'clock on the morning of the 26th of last month, expired at Richmond, Charles, Duke of Richmond, Lenox, and D'Aubigny, Knight of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, Captain General and Governor in Chief of the Provinces of Lower Canada, Upper Canada, Nova Scotia, New-Brunswick and their several dependencies, Vice Admiral of the same, General and Commander of all His Majesty's Forces therein, and in the Islands of New-Foundland, Prince Edward, Cape Breton, and Bermuda, &c. &c. &c.

YORK, 9 September, 1819.

The melancholy event which our readers will find announced in our official column, seems to have been brought on by the intense heat of the weather, and the great exertion made by His Grace to visit the new settlements, and Survey the works which he had ordered to be carried on for the improvement of the navigation of the Ottawa.

His Excellency the Lieut. Governor, it is said, received an account of this lamented event, by express on Lake Simcoe, returning from a visit to the Machadash, and other rivers on the North East shore of that Lake.

The report that the symptoms of hydrophobia, which preceded the dissolution of His Grace, were in consequence of the bite of a dog, we find to be altogether erroneous. It seems, indeed, to have arisen from a mistaken idea that such symptoms can have no other origin; whereas it is well known to all professional men, that they were likely to result from the sort of exertion his Grace was actually making; in wading through swamps under an intense heat.

[BY AUTHORITY.]

An Act to give effect and validity to deeds executed by Married Women in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or in any of His Majesty's Colonies, and to repeal part of and amend an Act passed in the forty third year of His Majesty's reign, entitled, "An Act to enable Married Women, having real estate to alien and convey the same."

WHEREAS, there is by Law no Provision enabling Married Women resident abroad, and owning real estate in this Province to alien the same, Be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain entitled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of His Majesty's reign, entitled, an Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province" and by the authority of same, that from and after the passing of this Act, it shall and may be lawful to and for any Married Women, having real estate in this Province, and being above the age of twenty one years, (if desired,) an old established DISTILLERY, with all the necessary apparatus for carrying on an extensive business, together, with a new BREWERY and MALT KILN, DWELLING HOUSE, Stabling, Stores, &c. &c. and upwards of two acres of land in Town Lots, well watered and most advantageously situated in the flourishing little village of Port Hope, in the Newcastle District. This purchase is particularly deserving the attention of those who may wish to carry on a very lucrative branch of business with a moderate capital. For further particulars, apply to the Editor, or to Charles Fothergill Esq. at Port Hope.

MR. GEORGE O'BRYAN.

STUCCO WORKER & PLAISTERER.

Late of the County of Tipperary, Ireland

SHOULD this advertisement meet the eye of the above named young man, he is hereby informed, that agreeable to his invitation contained in a letter dated, York, U. C. in October last, his sister has arrived in this country; but, to her inexpressible mortification, every enquiry for him at York, has proved ineffectual, but in the hope that he may still reside in this Province, or in a situation where this advertisement may come under his notice, his sister takes this method of acquainting him, that she is now residing at Messrs. Piggot & Gurnetts, Ancaster, U. C. where she trust he will instantly repair & relieve her mind from the excessive grief which the disappointment alluded to has occasioned.

Should any person be able to give Miss O'Bryan any information respecting her brother, they would confer on her an invaluable favor, if they would do so, by means of a letter to her as above.

LUCRATIVE CONCERN.

TO be Sold on the most liberal terms, (and immediate possession given,) with a credit of four years, if desired, an old established DISTILLERY, with all the necessary apparatus for carrying on an extensive business, together, with a new BREWERY and MALT KILN, DWELLING HOUSE, Stabling, Stores, &c. &c. and upwards of two acres of land in Town Lots, well watered and most advantageously situated in the flourishing little village of Port Hope, in the Newcastle District. York, 4th August 1819. tf—12.

Scarborough Springs FARM.

For Sale, on liberal terms,

AN extensive and very valuable Farm, situate in the fourth Concession of the Township of Scarboro', within fifteen miles of the Seat of Government, and containing about three hundred acres of the very best timbered Land.

There are about forty acres of the premises in a high state of cultivation, fenced, and abundantly supplied with water. And the Farm, from its being contiguous to an important Salmon Fishery, and containing an extensive Maple Bush, must prove a most desirable purchase to any one wishing to settle in the vicinity of York.

The eligibility of the situation for a Farmer, within a few miles of a good and sure market, connected with the fertility of the soil, and various other local advantages are of themselves fully sufficient to recommend the above to the public; but the subscriber has it in his power further to state, that it is the seat of the much celebrated Scarborough Springs, the efficacy of whose waters in the cure of a variety of maladies is too notorious to need recapitulation: suffice it therefore to say, that if a commodious house were erected for the accommodation of strangers, and conducted by an attentive and enterprising person, the continual resort of the infirm and sickly to these Springs, to enjoy the salubrity of their waters, could not fail to secure most ample remuneration for any exertions which might be bestowed for their ease and comfort.

From the foregoing it may be inferred, and the proprietor is bold to say, that there is not a situation in the Province better adapted for the establishment and speedy growth of a Village, and that to any intelligent and industrious individual he offers a most tempting and lucrative speculation.

For Sale also—The unexpired term of a Lease of the Clergy Reserve adjoining the said Lands of which Lease three years only have expired. There are ten acres of improvement, well enclosed, thereon, with a fine stream of water passing through it, as well as the Springs Farm.

An indisputable Title with immediate possession will be given, and a liberal credit allowed for part of the purchase money, on approved security.

For further particulars application to be made to the proprietor.

LONDON, July 12.

Preparations were begun on Saturday at the House of Lords to receive the Prince Regent, who is expected to go in State to-morrow to prorogue parliament.

Wooler, the Black Dwarf, was soundly thrashed on Saturday last in his own room, for some impudent remarks respecting the York Hussars. This wholesome discipline was inflicted, it is said by the commander of that regiment. The particulars are not worth relating.—Courier.

A number of respectable inhabitants of the city mean to be sworn in as Special Constables to assist the civil power in quelling any disturbance that may take place at Smithfield on the 21st of this month.

The new duty on malt was laid for the first time on the stock in hand, on Friday.

At the corn market to-day, wheat went heavy at a reduction of 2s from last Monday's prices.

Nothing ever exceeded the abundance of the crops of corn of every kind in the northern provinces of France; though it has been feared they have been laid by the late heavy storms of rain and hail which have taken place in that country.

A serious calamity has befallen Mr. Moore, the poet, in consequence of the conduct of a deputy whom he had employed some years at Bermuda, and who has embezzled a considerable sum of money, for which Mr. M is of course responsible. An attachment is decreed against his person.

At a seditious meeting of reformers, held at Blackburn last Monday, a deputation from the Blackburn Female Reform Society mounted the stage to present a Cap of Liberty and an address to the meeting. The latter was read, and in it the women composing the society "pledged themselves to instil into the minds of their children a hatred of civil and religious tyranny."

The Prince Regent has appointed Adam Duff Esq. Sheriff of the Shire of Edinburgh, in the place of Sir Wm. Rae, resigned.

At the Doctor's Commons, on the 10th of July, a suit was brought by a Mrs Turner against her husband F. M. Turner, Esq. for a separation on the ground of adultery. The fact of adultery was proved, and the Court pronounced sentence of separation. The husband, who was present, was so much affected at the sentence, that he burst into a flood of tears.

The funeral of Madam Blanchard was attended by seven mourning coaches, and several family coaches were in the mournful train. She was 45 years of age.

A respectable Leeds paper says—"A Sunday School has been established for some time at Manchester, for the purpose of teaching children 'To hate Kings and Priests:' it is conducted by reformers. Thus they hope to increase their ranks, by alienating children from the worship of Almighty God on a Sunday, and imbuing their minds with the principles of infidelity and jacobinism; a sufficient comment upon their schemes, when they cannot accomplish them except by destroying the obligations of religion and the foundation of morality."

During the last week a Reforming Female visited Leigh and the neighbourhood, to disseminate revolutionary principles in the families of the work people to whom she expatiated on the necessity of altering things, and descanted fluently on the usual topics of reform. But perhaps the most singular, as it was certainly the most degrading part of her mission, was to instruct them in the manufacture of the Revolutionary pike: a formidable weapon which has been introduced into various parts of this neighbourhood, and the existence of which now remains no longer a matter of doubt.—She was very precise in her directions. Chesters Manchester Chr.

From the London Star of June 22.

The Chamber of Deputies were on Saturday occupied with the subordinate regulations attached to the budget of expenses. The question as to allowing capt. Pource, the grenadier who claims the merit of having saved the life of Bonaparte, in the affair of St. Cloud, to draw the pension awarded him for that service, along with his half pay as a retired officer, came again under discussion, and took a turn equally curious and unexpected.

M. Dupont (de L'Eure) addressed the Chamber:—"What," he said, "is the title which Sieur Pource produces? The brevet of pension gives him in the year 5 makes no mention of the faculty of cumulation; but I see there a gross imposture averred. The Sieur Pource—it is there said, 'covered with his body and his arms General Bonaparte, on the day of the 18th Brumaire, year 8, at the affair of St. Cloud.' Gentlemen, I was at that epoch a member of the Council of Five Hundred; I was present at what was called the affair of St. Cloud; all the facts passed before my own eyes; I declare upon my honour, before all France, that no attempt at assination was made on the person of Bonaparte; that there was neither dagger nor pistol-shot; and, nor any arm whatever raised against him! and that it is altogether false that Sieur Pource covered, or that he had any occasion to cover him with his body. My colleagues, Daunou, Chaubaud-Latours, and Jard Panvillers, who were, like myself Members of the Council of Five Hundred, can bear witness to the fact. I call upon them to say it the assassination of General Bonaparte was not a falsehood invented to justify the violence committed, by force of arms upon the National Representation.—Bonaparte, who never loved liberty, and from the 18th Brumaire, year 8, meditated the subjugation of France, knew well, in order the better to rule the nation, it was necessary to exhibit its Representatives assassinating. Hence the execrable denomination of Representatives of the Poignard, given to the deputies by Lucien Bonaparte, when haranguing the soldiers in the Court of of St Cloud, and encouraging them to the dissolution of the Council of Five Hundred—hence the fable of the poignard directed against Bonaparte.

[Here the orator spoke with so much warmth and gesticulation, that he began to scatter the leaves of his speech about him; one of the messengers having gathered them together, he resumed.]

"And hence in short, the brevet of pension granted to grenadier Pource who had consented to attest an assassination which never existed.

"Gentlemen, I have a horror at assassination, and I do not wish to justify one, whatever may have been the object or whoever the authors of it; as little have I any intention of extolling the sort of encouragement given to a General who dissolves an Assembly because he is pleased to consider it factious. All that I propose at this moment is to protest against a political lie invented by an ambitious man who wished to enslave his country, and to justify the act by which he seized the sovereign power. I conclude with moving the previous question."

After some farther discussion, the amendment was put to the vote, and negatived by a large majority.

The East India Company have declared a dividend for the last half year of five and a half per cent.

The Grand Ball at Carlton House.

At the special request of the prince regent, the ladies and gentlemen wore fancy dresses at the ball on Thursday night. The inventive faculties of hairdressers and mantua-makers, have accordingly been in full exercise, and the customs of all nations, ancient and modern, real and ideal, were put in requisition.—Turks, Indians, Persians, Swedes, Danes, Germans, old French, old English, Hungarians, Spanish, Neapolitan, Parisians, Grecians, Romans, besides an immense number of personifications, for which even manners have no name, glittered through the magnificient apartments of Carlton-house, as dazzling and various as the fictions of a poetic imagination. The most splendid preparations were made in order to make the beauty of the external decorations harmonize with the gorgeous appearance of the guests. On each side of the grand hall were evergreens, plants, &c. brought from the royal gardens. On the side were placed for refreshments, tables, on which were two large silver candelabras, containing 12 uncommon large wax candles! In the octagon-hall was a chandelier in which were twelve patent lamps. On the stair-case, leading to the lower suit of rooms, were placed trees, plants flowers, &c. In this suite of apartments, rooms were set apart for refreshments & supper. The principal dining room, and the temporary room in the garden, which was used for refreshments at the late juvenile ball, were set apart for supper. Refreshments were served also from the octagon room and council chamber in the state rooms.

Admiral Sir James Saumarez is appointed rear admiral of England, in the room of admiral Sir William Young, created vice admiral of England on death of the hon. admiral Cornwallis.——It is hinted by the Censeur Europeen, that marchal Soult, expects to be chosen a deputy for the department of the Tarn, at the ensuing election, as a preparatory step towards his return to the office of minister at war! This is indeed to "forget and forgive."

Colonel M'Dermot, notwithstanding the many disadvantages that have operated against him, nearly compleated his regiment in the space of five weeks; and that too, without noise or parade. The first division will sail on Wednesday next, the 20th inst. and the second on the 27th.—Dublin paper.

A great number of the inhabitants of Manchester have offered to form an armed association for the protection of the towns of Manchester, Salford, and their neighbourhood, and their offer has been accepted by government.

Counterfeit pepper.—Since the act of July 5, authorising the excise officers to inflict penalties where fabricated pepper may be found, barrels of this spurious article have been rolled into his majesty's warehouses, One officer seized 18 cwt. another 15 cwt. and the utmost confusion has been caused amongst the ingenious fabricators, who have been making fortunes by this manufacture. The new whole pepper is made up of the balls of mustard seed, glue and chalk, and a certain quantity of stuff called P. D. The profit derived by the manufacturer, upon each pound, is 2s 4d, and the sale has been most extensive; the proprietors, who are now in jeopardy, having all of them respectable characters, and being men of active, industrious, and, as would appear from the speculations in which they were detected, enterprising habits. The prosecutions are to come on in Nov. Pepper is sold at 2s 6d per lb. The P. D. which composes the principal material of the spurious pepper, is sold at 4d a pound.

The British government have consented that American ships may take from British ports one passenger for every five tons burthen of each ship, and not be restricted to the tons of the vessel not laden with merchandize as heretofore. A number of promotions of officers in the British navy took place on the 1st of July.

The list of the navy contains—admirals, 181—in commission 12, post captains, 860—in commission 53, commanders, 775—in commission 53, lieutenants, 3867—in commission 339; masters, 617: surgeons, 596; assistant-surgeons, pursers, 663.

A mechanic of Offenbourg, in Brisgau, named Xavier Miclot, has invented a portative machine, by which a person shipwrecked may support himself on the water, and carry provisions, for several days. This machine is five feet in diameter, and three inches high. By the use of it rivers can be passed. Two experiments were made with it on the Rhine on the 20th and 21st of May, and perfectly succeeded.

Carrier Pigeons.—A letter from Brussels, dated July 17, says—"thirty-two pigeons, with the word Antwerp marked on their wings, have been sent to London, where they were let loose on the 11th of this month, at 7 o'clock in the morning, after having their wings contermarked London. The same day towards noon, one of these faithful animals arrived at and obtained the first prize; a quarter of an hour later a second arrived, and obtained the next prize. The following day twelve others arrived, making fourteen in all. The prizes, which are very considerable, will be distributed to-morrow (Sunday) at Antwerp. It is not with any intention of establishing a correspondence between London and Antwerp (as the Paris journals pretend) that those pigeons were sent to London, but merely for the pleasure of seeing them return.

MADRID, July 3.

The king, before his departure for the baths of Sacedon, presided in the council of state which lasted three hours. The subject of discussion was the treaty with the United States, which is what most engages our attention at present. It is believed that nothing was decided in the conference; but it is certain that the king heard with the greatest attention the opinions of his counsellors, and the arguments by which they supported them.

DRESDEN, June 15.

The want of rain throughout Saxony is so great that the farmers are compelled to fodder their cattle on straw.

PARIS, July 11.

The duke de Bassano, inscribed upon the list of the thirty-eight, has obtained permission from the French government to take up his residence at Genoa.

Accounts from Marseilles state, that one hundred and fifty Cachemere goats have arrived there. The harvest promises well in the south of France, but Marseilles is "incumbered" with wheat sent from Odessa and Genoa.

BRUSSELS, July 12.

Much has been said, particularly in the foreign journals, respecting the recall of our ambassadors from the courts of France, London, and Madrid. It is reported here, that in future we are only to have charge d'affaires at those courts.

A London paper of the 23d of July gives an account of the proceedings of the Court of Common Council, held at Guildhall the preceding day, in the course of which it was declared by the Lord Mayor, that information had been laid before him, on oath, of the existence of a conspiracy, the object of which was to excite the assemblage in Smithfield to acts of open violence, and even bloodshed, had it not been checked by the measures of precaution adopted by the government and magistracy.

Circular letters have been addressed by Lord Sidmouth to the lords lieutenants of the manufacturing counties, directing them to give orders to the yeomen cavalry to hold themselves in readiness to assist the magistrates in the preservation of the public peace. It is stated that upwards of 120,000 men are enrolled in the Reform Societies in Yorkshire Lancashire and Cheshire.

An order of council of the 12th of July, prohibits the exportation of gunpowder, saltpetre, or any sort of arms and ammunition to the ports within the dominions of Spain

Parliament has granted 50,000*l.* to aid emigrants to the Cape of Good Hope.

Intelligence from Berlin, of the 3d July, states, that recent investigations in Prussia and other countries, have proved the existence of secret democratical societies, whose proceedings are of a reasonable nature. A complete plan of a republican constitution had been seized in Germany.

One of Gen. Devereaux's transports, the Laforey, had put into Waterford & landed 50 of her men, who had manifested a mutinous disposition. The Laforey left Waterford on the 16th. Gen. Devereaux, remained at Dublin.

The latest Madrid papers say, that it is confirmed that Don Onis is to be Prime Minister of Spain.

King Ferdinand, it is rumoured, intends to accompany the Grand Expedition to South America, under a hope that his presence may do what the force of arms could not effect. It is said, he is privately to embark for Lisbon.

The thermometer at Berlin on the 16th July, stood at 29 degrees of Reaumer (94 1-4 Fahrenheit) in the shade and 33 in the sun.

From a Paris paper, July 1.

Cornelius Sakayouta, the Ossedan chief, and his court, arrived at Niort on the 26th of June, and gave to the inhabitants of that town a specimen of their talents. The prince chanted some fifty couplets, beat a drum, and danced with a grace quite singular. His Majesty levied a contribution on those who witnessed his exertions of 2fr. 60c. each.

The last number of the Military Journal, printed in Austria, communicates some interesting particulars respecting the past and present military state of Prussia. The author of this work states the expenses of the Prussian army at 12,000,000 of crowns. The official Gazette of Berlin states the revenue of Prussia at 35,000,000 of crowns. Is thence appears that the Prussian army consumes more than three-fifths of the entire revenues of the state. In France the army absorbs a little less than a fifth, and in Bavaria almost a third of the taxes. The chamber of deputies of France has reduced the budget of the minister of war by 8,000,000 of francs; and the deputies of Bavaria have expressed the most lively complaints on the subject of this prodigality.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

FROM NILES' REGISTER.

In this country, there is no necessity for any one to be idle on account of a superfluity of laborers. We receive commodities from abroad, which ought to be made at home, because it is that though a superfluity of laborers does not exist, there is at this time a severe want of employment.

It is estimated, that there are 20,000 persons daily seeking work, in Philadelphia. In New York 10,000 able bodied men are said to be wandering the streets looking for it, and if we add to them the women, who desire something to do, the amount cannot be less than 20,000.

In Baltimore there may be about 10,000 persons in unsteady employment, or actually suffering because they cannot get into business. We know several decent men lately "good livers" who now subsist on such victuals as two years ago they would not have given to their servants in the kitchen. Here are 90,000 persons in three cities wholly or partially idle. Admit that they obtain half employment, just enough to keep them from becoming incumbrance to others, & average the value of what they might earn, at only fifty cents per day, and the amount of loss is D12,500 per day, 75,000 per week, 300,000 per month, &c. Here we see how it is, that the want of employment strikes at national wealth. Thousands who are best disposed to support themselves decently by labour, are in a state of positive suffering because they have not any thing to do.

The distress of the people has reached an alarming extent, and there is no considerate man in our large cities and towns that looks to the approaching winter without anticipating scenes of misery, such as he never witnessed.

Most Melancholy Accident.

It is now ascertained; it is with pain we announce it, that the steam boat Phœnix on Lake Champlain was destroyed by fire, 3 miles off Plattsburgh, on the morning of Monday last about 2 o'clock. This accident was occasioned by a lighted candle left in the pantry by some of the passengers. So far had the flames advanced when they were discovered, and so dry was every thing on board that in ten minutes after the vessel was on fire from stem to steem.

The boat or boats belonging to the Phœnix were sufficient to have rescued & carried off all on board, but such confusion ensued that five men and one woman perished.

Rumor of War.—The Franklin Gazette of yesterday, says—"We understand, from credible authority, that orders have been issued by the navy department, to double the number of work men engaged in various ports in building ships of the line, for the purpose of hastening the completion of these vessels."

It has information is correct, the cause of these orders may no doubt be traced to the delay on the part of the King of Spain in ratifying the late treaty.

FROM LOWER CANADA.

FROM THE QUEBEC GAZETTE.

By Authority.

On Monday evening, the 30th August, Major Bowles, Military Secretary to His Grace the Duke of Richmond, K. G. Governor in Chief and Commander of the Forces in and over the British possessions in North America, arrived at Montreal, bringing the melancholy intelligence of the Duke's decease, on the morning of Saturday the 28th August, at the new Military Settlement of Richmond, after a short but severe illness, during which he was attended by a Medical Officer of that place, and that His Grace's remains attended by Lieut. Col. Cockburn and himself, had arrived at La Chine. Arrangements were immediately made for the removal of His Grace's remains to the Government House at Montreal, where they accordingly arrived, escorted by a Captain's Guard of the 37th Regt. (and having been met some miles from Town, by the Officers of His Grace's Personal and of the General Staff) at day break on Tuesday morning the 31st. Having lain in state (privately) during part of this day, and having been placed in a strong leaden coffin, with an outer one of mahogany, and all necessary arrangements being completed for its removal to Quebec, the Corpse was conveyed from the Government House to the Malsham Steam-Boat, passing through a considerable part of the City of Montreal, attended by the Officers of His Grace's Personal and General Staff, and by the Clergy and Principal Inhabitants of Montreal, in procession, as well as by an immense concourse of people.

A Guard of Grenadiers of the 37th Regt. was embarked with the Corpse, and the following Officers attended His Grace's remains to Quebec: Lieut. Col. Ready, Private Secretary, Major Bowles, Military Secretary, Major M'Leod, Extra Aid-de-Camp, Lieut. Col. Harvey, Deputy Adjt. Gen. of the Forces, Lieut. Col. Cockburn, Dep. Qr. Mr. Gen. &c. Commissary Gen. Wood, Capt. Montr-sor, Royal Navy.

At ten o'clock on Wednesday morning the 1st September, His Grace's remains were removed from the Steam-Boat, and placed upon a Hearse upon the King's Wharf at Quebec, from whence they were conveyed to the Chateau St. Louis, attended by the Honourable the Members of the Legislative and Executive Councils, the Chief Justice, the Right Reverend the Lord Bishop of Quebec, and the Clergy, and by the whole of the Officers of the Staff and Departments, in procession, escorted by six Field Pieces, a Guard of Honour of the 60th Rifle Battalion with the Band of that corps playing a Dead March, the Flags of the Garrison, and of all Ships in the Harbour, being hoisted half-mast, and minute guns being fired during the procession.

The corpse was received at the Chateau by a Guard of Grenadiers of the 76th Regt. with Regimental Colours, and the band of that Regiment playing a Dead March.

His Grace's Remains were placed in a lower room in the Chateau, where they lay in state until 4 o'clock of Saturday the 5th of Sept. when they were removed to the place of Interment in the Cathedral Church at Quebec, in the following order:—

The whole of the troops composing the Garrison of Quebec, consisting of a large detachment of Royal Artillery with 15 Field Pieces with lighted Matches, the whole of the Rifle Battalion 60th & 76th Regiment, composed the Funeral and firing party, and formed a lane extending from the door of the Chateau, passing the French Church, through the Market Place, up Garden Street, to the great west entrance of the Cathedral.

On the Corpse being brought out, (the Collar and Insignia of the Order of the Garter, with His Grace's Military Appointments, being placed on the Coffin), the whole of the troops Presented Arms. On its being placed on the Hearse, the Troops rested on their Arms Reversed.

The procession then moved on in the following order:

Persons of the Public Military Departments under the rank of Deputy Assistants.

Officers of the Staff and Departments. Militia and unattached Officers, according to their respective ranks, and that of their Departments, the juniors of each rank preceding—this part of the procession was closed by the Heads of the several Departments, (and the Adjutant General of Militia,) the whole walking two and two.

Then followed the Civil Procession, consisting of the Law and other principal Officers of the Crown, Courts and Public Offices.

The Honourable the Judges.

The Honourable the Members of the Legislative and Executive Councils.

The Honourable Mr. Chief Justice Sewell.

THE BODY.

On a Hearse drawn by four Horses, The Horses covered with Crape.)

Attended by

The Hon. A. L. J. Duchesnay,	Lieut. Col. Harvey, C. B. D. A. G. of the Forces,
Hon. M. H. Percheval.	Lt. Col. Cockburn, D. Q. M. G. of Ditto. and
Hon. Mr. Justice Perrault,	Col. Wilson, Commandant of the Garrison,

AS PALL BEARERS,

AND FOLLOWED BY

Major M'Leod, (His Grace's relative.)
Sir Charles Saxton, Baronet, Lieut. Col. Ready, Private Secretary.
Major Bowles, Military Secretary.

AS MOURNERS.

The Officers of the Private and Military Secretary's Office, and of His Grace's Household, followed by His Grace's led Horses, Grooms, and Servants, and by a Company of Grenadiers of the 76th Regiment, with their Arms reversed, and Pikes trailed, closed the procession.

The Drums of the different Corps ceased with Crape, rolled as the Corpse passed. The Military Band filed off at the Door of the Cathedral, and ceased playing as the Body entered the Church.

The Right Reverend the Lord Bishop of Quebec, preceded by the Clergy, met the Corpse at the Gates of the Cathedral Church-Yard, and conducted it up the Centre Aisle, where it was placed on a platform, the Mourners and Pall Bearers remaining near the Body.

After the Anthem, and the part of the service before the interment, had been performed, the Body was deposited in a Vault opened for the purpose, betwixt the Pulpit and the Communion Table, and the Service was concluded by the Lord Bishop.

A signal was then given, when one gun from 15 Field Pieces was fired, slowly and distinctly, followed by a volley of musquetry from the whole of the Infantry; then a second and a third round in like manner.

After which, the troops moved off in slow time and perfect silence, no band playing or drum beating.

Thus were Interred the Remains of the Most Noble and Puissant Prince CHARLES, Duke of RICHMOND, LENNOX and AUBIGNY, Knight of the most Noble Order of the Garter, Governor in Chief & Commander of the Forces and over the British Possessions in North America.

From the Quebec Mercury.

His Grace's family name, titles and style, were Charles Lennox, Duke of Richmond, Lennox, and Aubigny, Earl of Darnley and Baron of Settrington and Torbolton, Knight of the Garter; Grand Master of the Order of St. Patrick; a General in the Army; and Colonel of the 33th regiment of foot. To which were superadded, his local appointments of Governor General and Commander in Chief in British America. He was the son of Lord George Lennox, by Lady Louisa Ker, daughter to the Marquis of Lothian; he was born in 1764, and succeeded his uncle, the late Duke of Richmond, in 1806. He married in 1783, Lady Charlotte eldest daughter of the Duke of Gordon, by whom he has had fourteen children, of which nine sons and seven daughters are now alive. He had been Lord Lieut. of Ireland. His eldest son, the Earl of March, succeeds to his titles. His Grace was in the 55th year of his age.

Extract from the General Order of 3d Sept. 1819.

"It is confidently expected that all Officers throughout British North-America will evince their respect for the memory of their late illustrious Commander by continuing to wear mourning for six weeks."

BRITISH NORTH AMERICA.

The Legislature of Nova Scotia, at its last Session, appointed a Joint Committee, to enquire into the present state of the trade of that Province generally, to encourage their prosperity, and provide for the future security, and encouragement to ambitious projects of the United States.

This Committee consisted, on the part of the Council, of the Honbles. Michael Wallace, Richard J. Uniacke, and James Fraser; on the part of the Assembly, Messrs. Thomas Higgins, Edward Mortimer, Charles R. Prescott, Joseph Freeman, Henry H. Cogswell, Thomas Ronch, and John Bingay. They forwarded Queries on the subjects committed to them, to the best informed Merchants, and others acquainted with the trade and situation of the North American Colonies, and agreed upon a report, which was signed by both bodies, and an Address, voted upon the same occasion, to His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, which was forwarded by the Earl of Bathurst.

The Report and Address was also ordered to be printed, and copies thereof were requested to be transmitted to the Governors of each of the North American Colonies, and to the Presidents and Speakers of the Legislative bodies therein.

Having the honor to bring the subject matter of this said Report under the consideration of their respective Houses, with a view "to every necessary and respectful course of proceeding, to obtain objects of such vast importance to the true interests of British North America."

We cannot undertake, in this paper, to give the voluminous documents which the report contains; but we think it our duty to inform our readers, briefly, of the objects which the Nova Scotia Legislature has in view.

1st. A Line of Fortifications on the Frontiers.

2d. Roads and inland Navigations. In counteracting the like measures on the part of the United States. The inland Navigations particularly mentioned, are Canals by the Shubenacadie Lakes from Halifax, to the Bay of Fundy, and by the Bay of Fundy to the Baye Verte, in the Gulph of St. Lawrence; from Montreal, by the Ottawas and Rideau, to Kingston, and by the Ottawas, by the Riviere des Francois, to Lake Huron. The only Military Road mentioned, is from the Fredericton Road, by the mouth of the Nashwack, Meramichie, and Ristigouche, to the Saint Lawrence, at Bic.

3d. The same freedom of trade with all the world, that the United States have acquired.

3d. Laying out lands in all parts, on which Settlers may be immediately and advantageously located, without wandering as they do now, in search of Farms.

4th. By prohibiting passengers from embarking in foreign vessels, and making off unnecessary restrictions on British Ships carrying passengers.

5th. A duty to be imposed on British Salt shipped in foreign vessels.

6th. Excluding foreign vessels from taking salt from Turks Island.

7th. Prohibiting the export of the produce of the British Westindies, to or from either the domestic or foreign free ports, in the West Indies, and American vessels from entering the domestic Free Ports and also their entry there, from foreign ports.

8th Allowing and encouraging American Merchants and Fishermen employed in the whale and cod fisheries, to settle in Nova Scotia, naturalizing the vessels they bring with them, while employed in the Fisheries.

9th Establishing two British Governments, on the Labradore Shore, and Straits of Belisle, to secure British interests there, from encroachment.

10th. Regulations to prevent the abuse by the Americans, of the right of fishing on the British American coast, by the late convention, limiting their entering the Bays and Harbours except in cases of real necessity.

11th. The navigation of Prince Edward and Cape Breton Islands to Nova Scotia.

The Committee concludes by stating that "if "the remedies pointed out are liable to objec- "tions, they feel confident, from the concur- "rent testimony of the witnesses before them, "that there can be but one opinion as to the ne- "cessity for the most speedy and efficient mea- "sures being adopted, for the relief and securi- "ty of British America, which if any longer neglected, will produce the most serious and fa- "tal injury to the commercial, marine, and fi- "nancial interests of Great Britain."

We give from the Report, the 53d question, put by the Committee, and the answer thereto, as in some measure explanatory of the whole subject.

Quest 53.—Turn your attention generally to the subject matter of this enquiry, and state any matter relative thereto, which may not have been set forth, and particularly explained in your answers to the foregoing questions; and state your opinion as to the consequences to be apprehended, if some measures are not speedily adopted, to place the North American Colonies upon such a footing, as will enable them to prepare, during peace, to resist the attack which the hostile preparations of the United States so manifestly prove is meditated against them?

Ans. 53.—Whatever efforts the Government of the United States may have in their present exertions to acquire the dominion of British North America, the Colonies can derive no possible advantage from them, regarding a spirit of hostility between the two countries. If they are not pleased with the system of Government they enjoy, so are we with ours; our habits, our inclinations, and every feeling which it is laudable to cherish in the mind, bind us to the Mother Country; and we have proved, that interest could not influence us on this point. When the United States suddenly declared war against Great Britain, the temptation was held out to induce the Colonists to depart from their allegiance: we were offered liberty to form ourselves whatever Government we the right people, and a free commercial intercourse with the whole world was to be established to us if we would incorporate ourselves in the Union of the American States. This event took place during the most dark and gloomy days that our Mother Country experienced; under such circumstances every honest heart flew to its arms, with a fixed determination to stand or fall with our Government, and in this trying time we finally waited the attack. Traitors and treachery were outlawed of amongst us; and such of our brethren as came in immediate contact with the enemy, made him know, that the people of British North America are not cowards, and that they are attached to their Government by principles which a mere token can be changed by any regard for private interests. With these feelings, however, the duty we owe to ourselves and the nations to which it is our pride to belong, requires that we should, while now in peace more fully attend to the Mother Country to our situation; and it is a duty she owes to allow us to enjoy to the full extent, the advantages of our natural situation, by giving us equal freedom of commerce with the people of the United States—by strengthening our extended frontier with Fortifications, such as will correspond with those erecting in opposition to us—by opening Military Roads from one Province to the other, thereby enabling us with rapidity to unite our forces for mutual defence, by opening the Navigations which nature has so strongly marked out and almost effected, so as to make it practicable to transport our heaviest articles (which may be done) from the harbor of Halifax to Lake Superior with half the expence that it cost to carry warlike stores and provisions during the late war into the Canadas. By such steps as these, British power in North America will soon be placed beyond the reach of any combination of force, the sources of whose revenue would be opened up in a scale that would increase in a rapid progression from year to year, and no jarring interests could ever exist in such a system, as British North America has but one common interest, which can never clash with the interests of the Mother Country. Nature has so arranged the Provinces, that it must be forever the interest of the one to support the other. Thus, with comparatively a small expence, during peace, the cause of future wars may be materially diminished. Indeed nothing but the apparent weakness of the North American Colonies could ever tempt the United States to hope to acquire them by conquest; and while the Mother Country permits that want of physical strength to exist, she holds out encouragement for future wars, that must be supported by millions of expence, every prospect of which would be extinguished, if, on our part, we followed the system of the United States, who make it their study, by increasing fortifications, roads and inland navigations, and by opening to their subjects every advantage which nature gives them, whether in commerce or otherwise, they draw to their own dominions a population from the United Kingdom, which if turned to British America, would render the possessions of the Mother Country in North America safe and secure; besides which, the increasing wealth of such an immense territory would continually open new resources for the unbounded consumption of British commodities, rendering at the same time a revenue proportionably increasing with their prosperity. These are not exaggerated or fanciful opinions; for if the natural advantages of British North America have been well known and understood in Great Britain, this country would never have remained as it does at present, a tempting object to the United States; who are already putting all their exertions to the one great object, that is our conquest; which our present neglected state renders almost certain. If Great Britain is determined not to counteract such measures by a corresponding exertion, it is but the justice which is due to faithful and loyal people, to give them timely notice of her intentions to abandon them, that they may prepare in such forlorn state for their last struggle, to avoid being incorporated into a government they detest. At present the United States are making every exertion by fortifications, Military Roads, and extensive Inland Navigation and extending their population every where to our lines, to prepare a way for the easy conquest of British North America; at the same time, she is also, by Navigation Laws and hostile Custom House Regulations, endeavouring to crush British commerce and industry, and by the same means to increase her own.—To such measures Great Britain can offer no just objections; but we have the same right to resort to the same means; and, fortunately for us, the power rests with us; and, if Great Britain thinks proper to use it, she will soon make the United States feel more than their superiority in every respect. If, in addition to the measures before pointed out, Great Britain shapes her Navigation Laws and Custom House Regulations more favourable every New System adopted in the United States; so to turn the advantages in favour of her own Colonies, and by adopting the only remedy left, to counteract the extensive field which the Fisheries conceded by the late Convention have opened, for the increase and extension of American Navigation, the United States would soon discover that all her efforts to become the successful Maritime Rival of Great Britain, would be in vain: she would soon see that it was her interest to lay aside that intolerable spirit of Republican ambition, which, at present she so zealously cherishes and promotes, by every possible means in the power of her Government, to wean the dependencies from the neglected state of British America. The system pursued in carrying on the Cod and Whale Fishery in the United States, is far superior to any that is established in the British dominions; and we would call your attention to reduce their strength, by adding to our own, one of the most powerful supports of their extensive Navigation "

"If Great Britain would hold out to the Merchants and Fishermen of that country, engaged in the Whale and Cod-Fishery, the enjoyment of the same Commercial Advantages in North America, which they now enjoy in the United States, and lay aside all the commercial and other advantages which belong exclusively to British subjects; and would also allow them to remove with their vessels and effects into the British dominions, naturalizing the Merchants and Fishermen, and continuing the vessels they bring with them into a special and particular branch of British Navigation, so calculated as to naturalize their vessels as British built ships, (paying the same duties on the Whale and Cod Fishery from British America to Great Britain, as upon the produce of the Fishery carried in their own vessels) and thereby encouraging

A remarkable presence of mind displayed by a child of three years of age.

A Mrs. Sargent, living on the banks of Chateogy Lake, went to visit her father in law, on Sunday the 2d of May, leaving this child at home alone. During his mother's absence the child took a pipe and went to the fire and light it; in effecting this his frock, (a calico one) took fire, which, together with his shirt, were nearly burnt off of him, and his body burnt severely. He extinguished the flames by dipping a towel in a pail of water and flapping it about him, and after dressing himself with a candle all over the parts affected, went to bed. He is now well.

Dairy secret.—Have ready two pans in boiling water; and on the new milk's coming to the dairy, take the hot pans out of the water, put the milk into one of them, and cover it with the other. This will occasion, in the usual time, great augmentation of the thickness and quality of the cream.

Mr. GEORGE O'BRYAN.

STUCCO WORKER & PLASTERER.

Late of the County of Tipperary, I. eland.

SHOULD this advertisement meet the eye of the above named young man, he is hereby informed, that agreeable to his invitation contained in a letter dated, York, U. C. in October last, his sister has arrived in this country; but, to her inexpressible mortification, every enquiry for him at York, has proved ineffectual, but in the hope that he may still reside in this Province, or in a situation where this advertisement may come under his notice, his sister takes this method of acquainting him, that she is now residing at Messrs. Piggot & Garnetts, Ancaster, U. C. where she trust he will instantly repair & relieve her mind from the excessive grief, which the disappointment alluded to has occasioned.

Should any person be able to give Miss O'Bryan any information respecting her brother, they would confer on her an invaluable favor, if they would do so, by means of a letter to her as above.

LUCRATIVE CONCERN.

J. POST, Junr.

York 15th Sept. 1819.

Scarborough Springs FARM.

For Sale, on liberal terms,

AN extensive and very valuable Farm, situate in the fourth Concession of the Township of Scarboro', within fifteen miles of the Seat of Government, and containing about three hundred acres of the very best timbered Land.

There are about forty acres of the premises in a high state of cultivation, fenced, and abundantly supplied with water. And the Farm, from its being contiguous to an important Salmon Fishery, and containing an extensive Maple Bush, must prove a most desirable purchase to any one wishing to settle in the vicinity of York.

The eligibility of the situation for a Farmer, within a few miles of a good and sure market, connected with the fertility of the soil, and various other local advantages are of themselves fully sufficient to recommend the above to the public; but the subscriber has it in his power further to state, that it is the seat of the much celebrated Scarborough Springs, the efficacy of whose waters in the cure of a variety of maladies is too notorious to need recapitulation: suffice it therefore to say, that if a commodious house were erected for the accommodation of strangers, and conducted by an attentive and enterprising person, the continual resort of the infirm and sickly to these Springs, to enjoy the salubrity of their waters, could not fail to secure most ample remuneration for any exertions which might be bestowed for their ease and comfort.

From the foregoing it may be inferred, and the proprietor is bold to say, that there is not a situation in the Province better adapted for the establishment and speedy growth of a Village, and that to any intelligent and industrious individual he offers a most tempting and lucrative speculation.

For Sale also—The unexpired term of a Lease of the Clergy Reserve adjoining the said Lands, of which Lease three years only have expired. There are ten acres of improvement, well enclosed, thereon, with a fine stream of water passing through it, as well as the Springs Farm.

An indisputable Title with immediate possession will be given, and a liberal credit allowed for part of the purchase money, on approved security.

For further particulars application to be made to the proprietor.

UPPER-CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the THIRD, by the Grace of GOD of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Counsellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to our Provincial Parliament, at our Town of York, on the twenty eighth day of September instant to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you

GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our Proclamation bearing date the sixteenth day of August last, WE thought fit to prorogue our Provincial Parliament, to the twenty eighth day of September instant, at which time at our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear, NOW KNOW YE that WE taking into our Royal consideration, the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you, of your attendance at the said Council, hereby convoking and by these presents enjoining you and each of you, that on Monday the first day of November next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary, and herein fail not.

IN TESTIMONY whereof, WE have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed, WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this twenty-fourth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, and in the fifty-ninth year of our reign.

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, July 31.

From the London Gazette.

By his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Regent of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in the name and on behalf of his Majesty.

A PROCLAMATION.

George, P. R.

Whereas, in divers parts of Great Britain, meetings of large numbers of his Majesty's subjects have been held upon the requisition of persons who, or some of whom, have, together with others, by seditious and treasonable speeches addressed to the persons assembled, endeavoured to bring into hatred and contempt the Government and constitution established in this realm, and particularly the Commons House of Parliament, & to excite disobedience to the laws, and insurrection against his Majesty's authority.

And whereas it has been represented unto us, that at one of such meetings the persons there assembled, in gross violation of the law, did attempt to constitute and appoint, and did as much as in them lay, constitute and appoint a person then nominated, to sit in their name and on their behalf in the Commons House of Parliament; & there is reason to believe that other meetings are about to be held for the like unlawful purpose.

And whereas many wicked and seditious writings have been printed, published and industriously circulated, tending to promote the several purposes aforesaid, and to raise groundless jealousies and discontents in the minds of His Majesty's faithful and loyal subjects.

And whereas we have been further given to understand, that with a view of the better enabling themselves to carry into effect the wicked purposes aforesaid, in some parts of the kingdom, men clandestinely and unlawfully assembled, have practised military training and exercises.

And whereas the welfare & happiness of this kingdom do, under Divine Providence, chiefly depend upon a due submission to the laws, just reliance on the integrity and wisdom of Parliament, and a steady perseverance in that attachment to the Government and Constitution of the realm, which has ever prevailed in the minds of the people thereof: and whereas there is nothing which we so earnestly wish as to preserve the public peace and prosperity, and to secure to all his Majesty's liege subjects the entire enjoyment of their rights and liberties.

We, therefore, being resolved to repress the wicked, seditious, and treasonable practices aforesaid, have thought fit, in the name and on the behalf of his Majesty, and by and with the advice of his Majesty's Privy Council, to issue this our royal proclamation, solemnly warning all his Majesty's liege subjects to guard against every attempt to overthrow the laws, and to subvert the government so happily established within this realm; & to abstain from every measure inconsistent with the peace and good order of society, and earnestly exhorting them, at all times and to the utmost of their power, to avoid and discountenance all proceedings tending to produce the evil effect above described.

And we do strictly enjoin all his Majesty's loving subjects to forbear from the practice of all such military training and exercise as aforesaid, as they shall answer the contrary thereof at their peril.

And we do charge and command all Sheriffs, Justices of peace, Chief Magistrates of Cities, Boroughs and Corporations, and all other Magistrates throughout Great Britain, that they do, within their respective jurisdictions, make diligent inquiry in order to discover and bring to justice the authors and printers of such wicked and seditious writings as aforesaid, and all who shall circulate the same: and that they do use their best endeavors to bring to justice all persons who have been or may be guilty of offering seditious speeches and harangues, and all persons concerned in any riots or unlawful assemblies, which, on whatever pretext they may be grounded, are not only contrary to law, but dangerous to the most important interests of the kingdom.

Given at the Court of Carlton-house, this 30th day of July, 1819, and in the 59th year of his Majesty's reign. GOD SAVE THE KING.

LONDON, July 22.

Stuart Papers.—Erroneous accounts having been published by several of the newspapers, respecting this valuable acquisition, we think it may be interesting to the public to be accurately informed. It is now about 2 years since those important documents were discovered at Rome, by Mr. Watson, a Scotchgentleman, then resident in that city, in a situation which must have produced their description, from the joint operation of vermin and the elements. Mr. Cousins, the auditor of the Pope, was the executor of Cardinal York, the last male descendant of James II. The Pope did not long survive the cardinal; and his successor, M. Tassoni, became his representative as executor of the Cardinal York. To M. Tassoni, then, application was made for leave to examine the papers. It was granted, together with permission to copy or abstract. This last indulgence was soon discovered, from the number and importance of the documents, to present labor almost without end, and led to the acquisition of the originals by purchase, from M. Tassoni. Though the sum which he received for them was inconsiderable, yet so little value did M. Tassoni set upon them, that he actually considered himself much overpaid. As they were perused, however, their immense worth became known; and Mr. Watson, unfortunately considered himself under no necessity of concealing the value of private property, which he had legally bought from a competent vender. But, under an absolute or despotic government, right is no protection. The archives of the Stewarts were seized, by an order of the Papal government, in the apartments of the proprietor; and Cardinal Consalvi justified this despotic act by a brief avowal, that the Stewart papers were too great a prize for any subject to possess. With his eminence Cardinal Consalvi, the proprietor in vain remonstrated against this injustice, and at length notified his determination to appeal to his own government, the British consul having pusillanimously declined to interfere. The Roman government under further reflection, saw the measures which it adopted, could neither be justified nor tolerated; and, in this dilemma, it sought refuge from a curious expedient—it offered to the prince regent, as a present, that property which had been taken by force from one of his subjects. In Great Britain, the "rights of kings" are better understood. The British government never denied the right of Mr. Watson to properly which he had fairly bought—though it wisely entered into a negociation with him for the purpose of rendering objects of such peculiar national interest, the property of the nation. A respectable commission has lately been appointed, under the royal warrant of the prince regent, to inquire into their nature and their value, and will report them accordingly.

LONDON, July 24.

M. Rey, of Grenoble, has been struck off the list of Advocates by a decision of the Council of Discipline of the Faculty of Advocates of Paris, for certain expressions injurious to the Government & the Charter, contained in two complaints signed by him as Advocate, against Gen. Donadieu & other individuals, "accused of assassination."

The discussion between the Bavarian Government and Legislature on the subject of the army expenses, has taken an extraordinary and rather unpleasant turn. The Minister has caused to be published in the Journals a letter written by the king to prince Wrede, in which his Majesty expresses, in strong terms, how much he is hurt by the opposition which he has experienced from the Chamber of Deputies. It is in these terms—"I owe it to my army and my kingdom not to allow the former to be weakened. I have, therefore, my dear Marshal, made known to the Minister of War, that, from the 1st. of October next, there will be paid out of my Cabinet Fund 75,000 florins per month to the military chest. Unfortunately many poor people will be the sufferers; let those answer for it who wish to prevent me from supporting the dignity of my crown and fulfilling my duties as a member of the Confederation.

(Signed) "MAXIMILIEN.

"Nymbeubourg, June 26."

This publication has not produced the effect which was probably anticipated from it. In a public sitting of the 9th inst. deputy Seyffert, insisted that the retrenchment of 300,000 florins on the War Budget, should not fall on his Majesty's private funds, but that the Minister of War should be of new invited to shape his expenditure to the diminished sum allotted to his department; & another deputy, M. Dietrich, added, that if the present Minister could not do this, another might be got who would find no difficulty in the matter. Next day a proposition was sent from the Chamber of Senators, for an augmentation of imposts for the army and gendarmerie, but it was rejected by a large majority. A vote was however passed for an augmentation of 15,000 florins to the grant for the widows and orphans of Protestant Ecclesiastics.

The Wirtemberg Diet have unanimously elected M. Weishaar as their president, and appointed a committee to draw up an address of thanks to the King. The Members are described as animated with a spirit of conciliation, which promises the happiest results.—The great object which the government has had in view in calling them together, is to obtain their aggregate acceptance of an amended edition of the project of Constitution, proposed of the king two years ago, but then rejected in consequence of what is termed "a singular coalition between the High Noblesse & the Burgeois." The king appealed to the Nation, and we are told, that the payers of taxes, convoked in their respective bailwicks, have adopted by a great majority the Constitutional project. Negociations have been also entered into with the High Noblesse, and it is hoped the greater part will be gained over. The general opinion is said to have distinctly declared itself in favor of the Royal Project, which in fact accords stronger guarantees to public liberty than many of the new Constitutions introduced into neighbouring countries.

An article from Carlsruhe gives the following account of the result of the precognition instituted at Manheim, in consequence of the assassination of Kotzebue. If correct, it is of really momentous interest to the people of Germany:

"It appears daily more and more evident, from the proceedings instituted at Manheim against the assassin of M. Kotzebue, that what the friends of good principles said the country have dreaded is but too true, and that Sand has had accomplices. M. de Elohen Horck, who has the direction of the procedure, has, as we are assured from good authority, discovered the traces of a conspiracy which extends thro' all Germany, and probably even further.—The principles of this conspiracy are equally revolutionary in religion & in politics. It aims at amalgamating all the different faiths in Germany into one religion, which shall recognize no other authority than the Bible, and no duty or moral principle but what is the result of self-conviction. The chief political end of this conspiracy is the unity of Germany; to effect which, all the existing governments are to be overturned, and a general assembly convoked in the centre of Germany, under the name of a Senate, which shall elect a prince for the whole German nation. Such are the facts, so far as they have yet been suffered to transpire, arising out of this procedure, which will soon be published, in order to make known to all Germany the foolish hopes of a faction whose ramifications are daily extending. Many arrests have already taken place in different parts of Germany, and very recently at Berlin, where on the 7th, the great seal was put on the papers of several students and of a professor. In the mean time Sand bears up very well, and will probably survive his imitator, Leising, at Wisbaden, who after having vainly tried to open an artery, has swallowed some pieces of glass, which have put his life in great danger."

A very fine frigate, named the Fingard, to mount upwards of 50 guns, was launched from the new Dock-Yard, Pembroke, a few days since; she went off the stocks in very fine style, amidst the acclamations of thousands of visitors; amongst whom were Lord Cawdor, Admiral Trollope, and all the neighbouring Gentry. The ceremony of naming the ship was performed by lord Cawdor.

LONDON, Aug. 3.

A Flanders mail arrived this morning, bringing Brussels papers to the 4th inst. It is stated, that the whole Russian Army is to be divided into colonies. The Regiments will be distributed over the whole extent of the Russian Empire, and divided into colonies or settlements. In time of peace, they will cultivate the ground along with the peasants. Measures, however, will be adopted, that they may be speedily assembled in time of war, and ready to go wherever circumstances may require. By the accounts from Spain in the French papers, it appears that the Ex-Minister Pizaro and Casa-Yrujo have been brot to Valverde, a small Village near Madrid, where they have been lodged in a convent, and strictly guarded. This has been done to facilitate the precognition of the proceedings which have been instituted against them. The Councellor of Castile, Orellana, has put himself to death at a village near Avast, to which he had gone on a visit to his brother, who is Bishop of the Diocese. It is supposed that chagrin, on account of his disgrace at Court, led him to commit that act of despair. It is said that difficulties unforeseen by, and foreign to the Spanish Government, delay the ratification of the transfer of the Floridas, which the United States Envoy continues to press: but the Gazette says nothing on the subject; and individuals know nothing of the details.

According to advices from Madrid, 3000 men sailed from Cadiz on the 18th ult. in 12 heavy transports escorted by the Sabina frigate, of 40 guns, and the armed brig Ligero. They are under the orders of Gen. Cagigal, who had a high command in Carracas, previously to about the time the revolution broke out there. It is therefore presumed this expedition is bound to that quarter; but it is not known whether Cagigal supersedes Morrillo.

July 6.

Extract of a letter, dated Gibraltar, July 22.

The famous armada is completely dissolved: above 30 millions of dollars have been expended, but it would now take 30 millions more to repair the disaster which has recently occurred.

I have ascertained, since I wrote you on the 19th, some curious facts about the Cadiz expedition. O'Donnel has acted a cunning, and many think a dishonourable game in this affair. He knew that dissaffection existed very generally among his officers as well as soldiers, not merely against the expedition to South America, but against the government of Ferdinand. O'Donnel appeared to favor the views of the dissaffected, and entered into their views with warmth. On the day he called a general review, the dissaffected officers believed that it was for the purpose of openly manifesting his sentiments in favor of a constitution. He formed his army into a square, called all the officers to the centre; he informed them that, with the exception of a very few, all the rest were his prisoners. He then turned round to the troops, and said, "All who do not wish to go to South America, lay down your arms.' At this moment the troops discovered that the cartridges they had received that morning were all blank, except to one regiment and a battalion, to whom O'Donnell had issued ball. The whole of the troops, with the exception of those who had ball cartridges, threw down their arms with indignation, crying out, "we are betrayed."

They immediately began to scamper in all directions—O'Donnel, either from fear, or from some motive not yet explained, permitted them to disperse without making the least effort to stop them. All the country round Cadiz is full of them. Their expressions against O'Donnel and Ferdinand are bitter and loud. Among the officers arrested are eighteen very distinguished individuals, whom the soldiers are said to be much attached to. Several officers have arrived here, from whom I shall get some correct information on the subject, and will by next mail transmit you further particulars.

A pretty scene of confusion reigns at Cadiz. O'Donnel appears to have some new grounds of dread from the portion even of the troops who have been so very loyal, as all of them openly declare they never will embark. The sailors are likewise in a great ferment, and swear they will not go. The owners of vessels, agents, and government creditors are all running about Cadiz like maniacs.

Dispatches have been received at Kensington Palace from her royal highness the princess of Wales, announcing her immediate return to England, and directing that her apartments in the palace shall be forthwith prepared for her reception. Her royal highness has also desired Miss Garth to meet her at Dover. The sudden resolution of the princess gives countenance to the rumour that steps are to be taken towards a prosecution of some sort, which her royal highness is determined to meet here in person. Her return was totally unexpected at Carlton House.

DUBLIN, July 27

The 1st division of the rifle corps now raising in this city for the service of New Grenada, is to embark to-morrow, under the command of Colonel Gore, and proceeds direct to St. Domingo, to act under the orders of general count Macerone, who proceeds from London in a few days to take the command of the troops assembled there.

In the court of King's Bench, on Friday, Mr. Rhodes, a midshipman in the navy, but who had been a voyage to the East Indies, in the Orwell, as gunner's mate, obtained a verdict of five hundred pounds damages against captain Leeches, commander, for an assault under aggravating circumstances. It seems, on the vessel arriving in May, Rhodes was ordered to draw the guns, but the crew having been on short allowance, he was not able to do it. On this the captain commanded him to be flogged. To avoid the flogging he jumped overboard, and it was in evidence that the captain would not allow the boat to be lowered for him, but said—"Never mind him—damn him, let him swim." He was however taken up by a Deal boat, and on his being brought on board the Orwell, the captain had him stripped, tied up, and flogged. For this conduct a jury has made him pay pretty smartly.

Last week some miscreants at Henley upon Arden having rubbed a little rot over with spirits of turpentine, set it on fire, and let it loose in a barn over-run with those vermin, thinking it would drive the rest out. Their plan succeeded, but in a different way from what they intended, the barn being burnt to the ground!

A student of Vienna, a native of Prussia, lately blew out his brains in a tavern at Leopoldstadt, under the following extraordinary circumstances. This young man arrived at Vienna, accompanied by an intimate friend, and fell in love with a young lady, who also engaged the affection of his friend. It was therefore agreed to decide the affair by a party at picquet on an undertaking that the party who lost should blow out his brains. The game was accordingly played, and the loser, a youth of 19, instantly paid the forfeit by shooting himself through the head.

A discovery has taken place which has disappointed the fond wishes of two lovers in high life, and totally deranged the hopes and expectations of the family of one of the parties. A young Nobleman, heir apparent to a Marquis, was lately on the eve of marriage with the interesting and accomplished daughter of an English Earl. Every preparation was made, and the day fixed for the completition of their mutual happiness, when a fatal defect was discovered in the pedigree of the Noble suitor, which has cheated him of his fondest hopes. He was found to be the offspring of an illegal marriage.

A letter from Constantinople dated the 26th April mentions that serious affrays had taken place between the Janissaries and other Turkish troops, in which many lives had been lost, and eastern ferocity displayed in all its savage glory. Of these combats, the most sanguinary had occurred between the Janissaries & the workmen in the Arsenal, in which each was alternately victorious. The former first stormed the Arsenal, but were shortly after driven out. The latter then stormed their opponent's barracks, although besieged, and defended by cannon. The Aga of the Janissaries, in endeavouring to restore order, was fired at and escaped with difficulty. The captain Pacha (who commanded the arsenal) succeeded in restoring order; but the conflict was renewed the next morning, and was continued, at the date of the accounts, with fresh fury, notwithstanding the interposition of the highest military authorities. Great apprehensions were entertained lest the battle should be followed by a conflagration.

Artists in England.—It appears from a list of each class inserted in a late number of the annals of the fine arts, the modern patronage has created in England not less that 931 professional artists of various descriptions, in and near the metropolis; of whom there are 324 painters, 45 sculptors, 491 architects, 93 engravers in line, 30 in mixed styles, 16 in mezzotinto, 85 in aquatints, 27 on wood; and it deserves to be especially noticed among the painters, that there are no less than 42 ladies.

CORFU, June 10.

General Maitland, lord high commissioner of his Britannic majesty in the Ionian Isles, embarked on the 8th inst. on board the Ganymede frigate, and set sail for Ancona. He is to proceed to Rome to negociate a species of Concordat, relative to the Latin Clergy of the Ionian Isles. The Earl of Guilford, by command of the Prince Regent, associated with his excellency in this negociation.

The day before the departure of general Maitland, the deputies of the Piedmontese emigrants were introduced to him at the palace. They claimed the distribution of 656,000 piastres, which were due to them from Ali Pacha, as the price of their property according to valuation. The lord commissioner consented to the reduction from this sum 33,000 piastres, in order that payment might be received in available money, instead of the Turkish coins, which the Pacha wished them to accept. General Maitland promised the deputies also, that he would not depart without adopting satisfactory measures, and the same day he issued the following proclamation:—

"His excellency the lord commissioner general has appointed Robert Fereday, Esq. the Count Antonio Lando, and Edward S. Foresti, Esq. to superintend the arrangement and final distribution of the sum of 656,000 talleris (piastres), which his excellency has received from the highness the Vizir Ali Pacha, and which is now in the treasury-general for the indemnities due to the inhabitants of the town and district of Parga, for their property, valued previous to the emigration, and their arrival in this state.

Advices from the Cape of Good Hope dated May 10, communicate information of another irruption of the Caffres (who, by the last accounts, were supposed to be completely repulsed,) to the number of 30,000 men. They had crossed the river which divides their territory from that of the Cape, and were committing the most extensive depredations. Orders had been issued to compel the military service of the inhabitants of the adjoining district, and all the horses had been put into requisition, in order to equip a portion of them as cavalry, the only species of force best calculated to repel the attacks of these dastardly but mischief-contriving invaders.

CALCUTTA, March 24.

A treaty has been concluded by the Hon. Sir Stamford Raffles on the part of the most noble the Governor General with the Sooltaun of Johore, and Tumongong of Sincapoore, establishing a British Residency under Major Farquhar with a settlement on the ruins of the ancient capital of that country, over which we may congratulate our readers that the British flag is now flying; Sir Stamford Raffles having returned from the expedition to Penang on the 19th of last month. The grant of this island, which is situated at the southern extremity of the Peninsula of Malacca, may from local circumstances, become valuable to the British government, especially when accompanied, as we understand that it is with the privilege of establishing further settlements along the extensive coasts of Johore; which must afford considerable protection to our commerce in that quarter, particularly to ships passing through the straits, and enable us to watch the progress and proceedings of our Batavian competitors. Whether any preponderance in our favor which some have imagined, may induce the natives of those parts to frequent a British settlement rather than carry their merchandize for sale to a Dutch Market, be ideal or founded on truth, we confess ourselves wholly incompetent to decide. We apprehend that the Batavian government will feel mighty indignant at our proceedings, and be perhaps indeed so Riots at Manchester.—On the 16th of August the Reform meeting held at Manchester. The meeting was held at this meeting from 10 to 15 thousand collected from all the villages and towns within 15 miles. Order Hunt was then called, and on the approach of the different bodies of the deluded populace, of which they constituted, was made with much ostentatious display, in order to intimidate by the appearance on the civil authorities, the banners and bands of music added to the different divisions of the procession, which was conducted with as much order & military precision. Among the mottos were several bearing the following inscriptions and devices. "Equal representation and no corn laws—Annual parliaments and universal suffrage—Major Cartwright—The Rose, supported on the right by the Shamrock and Thistle, with hands united, and the words "Unity" Them. Three different figures bearing the cap of liberty, on the first of which was written "Equal representation or death," on the second "With false representation," and on the third "Tyranical."

Women, in considerable numbers, were united in these processions, and were graced with them to the great annoyance of Peter's square. The business of preliminary arrangement being concluded, Hunt, with his usual effrontery, mounted a platform prepared for the occasion, from whence he addressed the multitude.

Hunt continued to go on for one hour and a half, but not had been read in the meeting when he was interrupted by a most violent storm of rain, accompanied by thunder and lightning, which rendered it impossible for the speakers to proceed. The multitude, however, remained for some time, but at length dispersed, and the streets were filled with their wretched and miserable looking inhabitants, who, with their sticks, and all on the stage prisoners, presented a most strange appearance, and made a second charge to the people, in which hundreds were driven and rode over. Fifteen lives, it is said, were sacrificed, and 500 were wounded.—All continued confusion

LONDON, July 30.

John Playfair Esq.—Letters from Edinburgh bring us the melancholy intelligence of the death of Mr. Playfair, which took place there on the 20th inst. His health had been on the decline during the whole winter, and since the middle of June his complaints have returned with a violence which left little hope of recovery. There are few men whose death will be more regretted by the friends of science, both here and on the continent. Mr. Playfair was the author of several papers, printed in the transactions of the royal society of Edinburgh, and elsewhere, which have deservedly gained his name high in every country in Europe. He was also the author of illustrations of the Huttonian theory, a life of professor Robinson, and a preface to the second part of the supplement to the Encyclopedia Britanica. All these prove him to be no less a pure and eloquent writer than he was a profound and comprehensive thinker. Those who knew him will at the same time regret the loss of a man whose mild and generous virtues, whose unaffected simplicity and modest candor, whilst they formed an unexpected relief to extensive and abstract knowledge, made him the most Executors of companions, and the most each of you, &c. &c. &c. will be time to read by those who have attained mathematical knowledge sufficient to comprehend them; his opinions, free without intolerance, and liberal without extravagance, will ever be held in veneration by the lovers of truth; but the warmth and generosity of his heart, the kindness and equality of his temper, the benevolence of his manner, the cheerfulness and the variety of his conversation —though "all perishable"—will sink deeper in the hearts of those who had the good fortune of his acquaintance, or the proud distinction of his friendship.

Riots at Manchester.—On Monday the 16th of August the Reform meeting was held at Manchester. There was not less at this meeting than 100,000 people collected from all the villages for 20 miles. Orator Hunt was the leader. The approach of the different bodies of the deluded populace, of which it was constituted, was made with all manner of outward display, in order to impose forbearance on the civil authorities. Banners and bands of music added their effect to the different divisions of the reformers, which was conducted with something like military precision. Among the former were several bearing the following inscriptions and devices. "Let us die like men and not be sold as slaves!"—No corn laws—Annual parliaments, and universal suffrage—Major Cartwright's bill.—The Rose, supported on each side by the Shamrock and Thistle, with two hands united, and the word union among them. Three different flags, bearing the cap of liberty, on the flag staff.—Equal representation or death.—Taxation, with false representation, is unjust and tyranical."

Women, in considerable numbers, were united in these processions, and advanced with them to the general place of meeting in Peter's square. When every thing of preliminary arrangement had concluded, Hunt, with his immediate party, mounted a platform prepared for their reception, from whence he proceeded to address the multitude. His harangue was suffered to go on one hour, until the riot act had been read in due form, and then he was interrupted by a body of cavalry, acting under the orders of the civil magistrates. They made a charge in full gallop, amongst the crowd to the platform on which he was placed, cut it down with their swords, and took Hunt and all on the stage prisoners. They then made a second charge to disperse the people, in which hundreds were thrown down and rode over. Five lost their lives, & about 100 were severely wounded.—All continued confusion till evening when the mob broke some windows in the New Cross.—The 68th foot then fired on them and killed four men; they were assailed by the mob with stones & bricks-bats, and one dragoon was knocked down from his horse senseless by a blow, and has since died. On the 17th all was alarm, and steets crowded with militia. Orders were issued for all the shops to be closed, and it was reported that some thousands were coming to Manchester with pikes and arms. Cannon was placed in the streets, but the mob seemed desperate, and determined to have revenge [Our accounts are no later than the 17th.] Hunt, Johnson, Knight, Morehouse, Saxon, and the other leaders of the reformers, were imprisoned in separate cells.

A second edition of the same paper mentions;

Excepting the riot at the New Cross before mentioned, at which two men were shot, and taken to the infirmary, where one of them had a leg taken off, the night was passed in comparative peace. Indeed in the centre of the town, there was almost an uncommon silence, only broken by the distant trampling of the patroling cavalry.

The report of numbers killed at that unusually riotous place, the New Cross, in the tumult last night, are so vague and contradictory, that we refrain to repeat them.

In our first edition, we had trusted to what we deemed a correct authority, and stated that six persons had died in the Infirmary yesterday of their wounds, we are happy to learn this morning, that only one has died; and that the gentleman belonging to the Manchester yeomanry corps, who was thought dying at four o'clock yesterday, and whose actual death was mentioned with confidence last night, has passed a comparative good night.

In surrounding the hustings, and in dispersing the meeting yesterday, the spirit and promptitude of action so admirably displayed by the yeomanry cavalry, was accompanied by a temper and forbearance, which has been spoken of by persons of all parties in terms of approbation.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

From the Norfolk Herald, Sept. 13.

From Spain—Important ! !—From our correspondent in Gibraltar we have received the following interesting communication.

GIBRALTAR, July 19.

"You will have heard so much about the banishment of the Marquis Yrujo from Madrid, before this can get to hand that it is useless to trouble you with the story now. A matter of more importance is before me: the grand expedition at Cadiz is gone to the devil.—Just at the moment that 20,000 troops were in the highest state of equipment for foreign service, 15,000 laid down their arms and scampered off in all directions!!!

"Several fugitive officers have arrived here, who state that O'Donnell, their Governor in Chief, from the first had projected a plan that when the expedition was complete, instead of embarking the troops for South America, he would march them to Madrid, and demand the Constitution and Cortes; that in the progress of this plot he had enlisted the General and subaltern officers, and three-fourths of the army, and found out that the rest were loyal and devoted to the king. That he called a grand review of the whole (preparatory to divulging publicly the scheme that they thought was about to be consummated) at St. Mary's over the bay of Cadiz. That he secretly gave orders that the disaffected regiments should be provided with blank cartridges, and the loyal (3000) with ball, the latter of which he took command of in person, formed them into a square, and under pretence of having some orders to communicate, called all the officers of other regiments to the centre, when he informed them they were prisoners: then riding up to their division ordered it to ground arms.—Seeing they were betrayed, and panic struck at the capture of all their officers, the troops, 14,000 in number, laid down their arms and fled in the greatest consternation in every direction, nor was any effort made to stop them. The officers were put in confinement, consisting of eighteen general and eight hundred subalterns. O'Donnel himself has gone to Madrid to know what is to be done with them, and what measures are necessary to be taken in such an extremity.

"Such is the history of the business, as we get it from the officers who have fled to this place, and from travellers coming over. No one dare trust an account of it upon paper, through the Post Office. This is however sufficient to show that the expedition is destroyed, which these officers say no power of the King can restore! It is not to be supposed that so great a rebellion is over at once—more may be looked for.

"The treaty is in statu quo, and the whole of our squadron is in the harbor—part of it, however, moves in a few days up the Mediterranean."

P. S. Many of the merchants of Cadiz, it appears were concerned in the conspiracy—three of them fled and have just now arrived here, one of whom had subscribed some thousands of dollars to raise the ways and means.

"Capt. Sebia Sears, who has been long a captive of the Spaniards, and was fined on the island of Mellillo, on the coast of Barbary, had made his escape and got amongst the Moors. It is expected he is now at Tangiers."

20th—New troubles have broken out in Valencia—Elio, the Governor, is said to have been assassinated!"

"—A letter from Cadiz this morning, says—"Twenty five hundred troops have been embarked under a strong convoy, believed for Caraccas."

FROM LOWER CANADA.

From the Montreal Herald.

The Editor of the National Advocate, with his usual foresight, has begun to draw inferences and establish conclusions from the military operations recently commenced on our Frontiers. But as has frequently happened before, he has in this case swelled his hypothesis to an unreasonable extent, to allow him to indulge in imaginary suppositions. An instance of the former is seen in the bold assertion, "that several fortifications are erecting in different points to put the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada in a very strong posture of defence." That "the Isle aux Noix is strongly garrisoned, and new works are owing up in every direction; it is said 600 Dollars per diem are spent on these works," and above all, the unblushing story "of 12000 Tons of ordnance stores" having arrived this season from England. From all this fine spun story he adds, that Great Britain may be pledged to stand by Spain in any contest growing out of the Florida question, or may make that question an excuse for interrupting the peace." While we do not ask him to conceal aught, we would also recommend him to "set down nought in malice." The fact is we have a working party at Isle aux Noix; a detachment of the 37th Regt. is now there, employed in making some repairs on the works; which had fallen into a state of ruin. But nothing equal to the above sum is expended in this case. We have every reason to think our late lamented Governor in Chief had directed his attention to the formidable plans now carrying on in the United States, in their cutting Canals and making roads, which are obviously designed to facilitate the conveyance of military stores to these provinces in the event of another war and for the accomplishment of their often avowed design, namely to get possession of the Canadas. With this view there is no doubt His Grace the Duke of Richmond had it in contemplation to encrease the means of defence of the country, to counteract those measures pursued by the United States. But the Duke was too sound a politician to blaze out his designs prematurely; and we have seen nothing commenced to excite the least cause of alarm, or to induce a suspicion of a rupture with the United States. His plans, were more immediately directed to the internal improvement of the country; and to meliorate the condition of its inhabitants; at the same time, without taking an opportunity of Gasconading, as this writer has done, we will not impeach his judgement by the supposition that he was regardless of the defence of the country, or that he was blind to the dispositions of those he might expect to contend with in the event of a war; his judicious plans in peace or war, would have been cordially promoted by a willing and loyal population. But to return to the subject of the operations this writer asserts we are carrying on. We have already mentioned what is doing at Isle aux Noix, is of trivial importance; and the truth is, little more is required in that point. The strong Forts the United States government have built on the Rouse's Point, which now belong to Canada, will give us the complete command of Lake Champlain, and supersede the necessity of fortifying the Island further than as an out post. The accounts of the arrival of such a quantity of ordnance stores, is now published for the first time, and we beg leave to state had its origin entirely in the writer's brain. This would have been equally superfluous. There is no inconsiderable quantity of stores of this description already in the country, and if required, more will no doubt be procured. Should the question respecting the cession of the Floridas, call for the interposition of Great Britain, be it known to the National Advocate, that she will interfere, and no doubt effectually. There are however other parts of the British empire, where warlike preparations will be made for such an event besides the Canadas. If they are to be fortified it is solely from a principle of prudent foresight, called into action by the necessity there exists for being watchful over a dangerous enemy in their vicinity, whose plans and proceedings require to be carefully guarded against, as their object is too obvious to admit of doubt. The complaints against such a measure, coming from that quarter, puts us in the mind of the depredators mixing in the croud and calling loudest, stop the thief."

HALIFAX, Aug. 27th, 1819.

We observe that the Proceedings of the General Assembly of this Province, during the present session, have been published in pamphlet form, and that the session was concluded between His Majesty & the United States of America," had reached England; and we hope that it may have a tendency to open the eyes of Government to the true interests of the North American Colonies, connected with those of the Parent State.

We understand that the annexation of the Colony of Cape Breton to the Province of Nova Scotia, has been determined on by Government.

July 19.

Major General Sir J. Kempt, is appointed to command the 81st Regt. of Foot.

HALIFAX, Sept. 2.

A most horrible act of parricide has been committed at Picton, by one Donald Campbell, who set fire to the house and cottage in which his aged father and step-mother had retired to rest.

It appears that this wretch left his own dwelling on the 23d inst. with a determination to set fire to that of his father; he wandered about during the day, considering how he might most effectually accomplish his diabolical purpose. In the evening he went to the house, and listned to the conversation of its aged inmates, until they retired to rest. He then secured the door on the outside, by passing a stick across and putting twisted withs through the latch and round the stick. His object was to prevent the escape of these unhappy people, when they should discover that their house was on fire, the cottage being destitute of windows. He then placed a fire on the roof, and retired a short distance, that he might witness the immolation of his intended victims.

Contrary to his expectations, however, the aged people forced the door, and he beheld them endeavouring to save their little all. Nature now became too powerful; those feelings which accompanied him into existence prompted him to fly to their assistance,—but the old man charged him with the crime he had committed, and drove him away. He again retired, and beheld his father enter his dwelling never to return.—He was now satisfied that if the woman survived he would be punished, and knocked her down with a stick; and at her's quest, as he says, conducted her to the door of the house, where she also perished.

The perpetrator of this unnatural and inhuman crime was shortly after apprehended, and confessed every thing; a desire of obtaining his father's property urged him to commit the unnatural deed, and nothing now remains to terminate this shocking catastrophe, but his ignominious and shameful death.

SAINT JOHN, Aug. 31.

TIMBER DUTY.

Extract of a letter from a Gentleman in London, to a Mercantile House in this City, dated the 18th July.

"The Customs Consolidation Act passed, a copy of which I will send you as soon as 'tis published. By it a Duty of 2s. 6d. per load, is to be paid on the import of Timber from our American Colonies. From this, however, we are exempted by former Acts till March, 1820; and by great exertions a promise has been obtained that the benefit of such exemption shall be extended to the period of March, 1821. Little or no opposition has been made to this Duty, from its apparent insignificance. The ship owners are silent, insisting only that the Importers, not they, must pay it: and to my great astonishment, the Liverpool Gentlemen say they can afford to pay it, and absolutely instructed their Members accordingly.

"The Foreigners, however, have been foiled; they had the assurance to demand a deduction of 10s. from their Duty, and an addition of 10s. to ours; but, in consequence of some successful representations on the increasing trade and importance of our Colonies, whatever might have been the former intentions of Government, the result has been the Duty of 2s. 6d. only."

Extract of another Letter.

"A Duty of 2s. 6d. per load, (40 ft.) which is agreed to be laid on Timbers from the Colonies, with the expectation that this is only a beginning, and that it is intended to be increased, will tend to discourage the importation.

"There is no expectation of any reduction of the Duty on Foreign Timber."

The family of His Grace the Duke of Richmond, our lamented Governor in Chief, consisting of Ladies MARY, LOUISA and SOPHIA LENOX, Lord WILLIAM LENOX, and suites, embarked yesterday on board the Ocean Transport, which sailed immediately for England.

Major M'Leod, and Lieut. Fitzroy, Aides-de-Camp, also went passengers in the Ocean.—Quebec Gaz.

LACHINE CANAL.

Last Monday was the day appointed for the meeting of the stockholders, for the purpose of proceeding to the election of the necessary officers. None, however, took place, in consequence, (we have been informed) of there appearing no person to represent the government; the power of attorney given to a gentleman concerned in the canal, having expired.

TO WIT. } Court of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace and Home District Court, will be holden for this District at the Court House, in the town of York, on the twelfth day of October instant, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of the same day, of which all Magistrates, Coroners, Constables and Bailiffs, are desired to take notice that they be then and there present to do and perform those things which to their respective offices appertain to be done.

SAMUEL RIDOUT.
Sheriff.

Sheriff's Office
York, 3d. October, 1819.

Lieut. Varnhagen, a German, has discovered, that saw dust, particularly of soft wood, mixed with gun powder, in equal parts, has thrice the strength of powder alone, when used in blasting rocks.

ANECDOTES.

In many country churches, it is the custom to place the men on one side, and the women on the other. One day, in the middle of the sermon, a Monk, heard some talking; and, on this interruption disturbing him, he complained of it. A woman starts up immediately in hopes of vindicating her sex, and said "However reverend father, it is not on our side." "So much the better, my good woman, so much the better, answered the Monk,) it will be sooner at an end."

A famous Doctor being very busy in his study a little girl came in to ask him for some fire.—"But, (says the Doctor) you have nothing to take it in;" and, as he was going to fetch something for that purpose, the little girl stooped down at the fire place, and taking some cold ashes in one hand, she put five embers on them with the other. The astonished Doctor threw down his books, saying, "With all my learning, I should never have found out that expedient."

Buttered Sovereigns.—A Sunday paper says:—The following singular circumstance took place on Friday last. A Mr. J. of Pentonville, called on Thursday at the whole-sale butter merchant's in the neighborhood of Thames street, and begged to be favored with a firkin of butter for his private use. After tasting several he bought one, and requested the seller to send it home.—This was done, and on Friday Mr. J. sawed the firkin in half; but finding he met with some obstruction, he was induced immediately to examine the cause, when to his utter astonishment, he found the impediment arose from several sovereigns sticking indiscriminately in the butter; of course, he made a closer investigation, and actually picked out two hundred and twenty of the same coin. He doubted their being genuine, but on carrying them to a bullion broker in the city, he offered him two hundred and twenty seven pounds ten shillings for them.—Lon. paper.

MR. GEORGE O'BRYAN,

STUCCO WORKER & PLAISTERER,
Late of the County of Tipperary, Ireland,

SHOULD this advertisement meet the eye of the above named young man, he is hereby informed, that agreeable to his invitation contained in a letter dated, York, U. C. in October last, his sister has arrived in this country; but, to her inexpressible mortification, every enquiry for him at York, has proved ineffectual, but in the hope that he may still reside in this Province, or in a situation where this advertisement may come under his notice, his sister takes this method of acquainting him, that she is now residing at Messrs. Piggot & Gurnetts, Ancaster, U. C. where she trust he will instantly repair & relieve her mind from the excessive grief, which the disappointment alluded to has occasioned.

Should any person be able to give Miss O'Bryan any information respecting her brother, they would confer on her an invaluable favor, if they would do so, by means of a letter to her as above.

VOL. III. YORK, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1819. No. 42.

UPPER-CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the THIRD, by the Grace of GOD of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Counsellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to our Provincial Parliament, at our Town of York, on the twenty eighth day of September instant, and to all others whom it may concern,

GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our Proclamation bearing date the sixteenth day of August last, WE thought fit to prorogue our Provincial Parliament, to the twenty eighth day of September instant, at which time at our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear, NOW KNOW YE that WE taking into our Royal consideration, the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid; hereby convoking and by these presents enjoining you and each of you, that on Monday the first day of November next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary, and herein fail not.

IN TESTIMONY whereof, WE have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed, WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this twenty-fourth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, and in the fifty-ninth year of our reign.

P. M.

By Command of His Excellency,
D. CAMERON.

THE House in which the Editor lately resided, nearly opposite the Steam Boat Wharf. Enquire at the Printing Office.

MR. GEORGE O'BRYAN.
STUCCO WORKER & PLASTERER.
Late of the County of Tipperary, Ireland.

SHOULD this advertisement meet the Eye of the above named young man, he is hereby informed, that agreeable to his invitation contained in a letter dated York, U. C. in October last, his sister has arrived in this country; but, to her inexpressible mortification, every enquiry for him at York, has proved ineffectual, but in the hope that he may still reside in that Province, or in a situation where this advertisement may come under his notice, his sister takes this method of acquainting him, that she is now residing at Messrs. Pigg & Garnetts, Ancaster, U. C. where she trust he will instantly repair & relieve her mind from the excessive grief, which the disappointment alluded to has occasioned.

Should any person be able to give Miss O'Bryan any information respecting her brother, they would confer on her an invaluable favor, if they would do so, by means of a letter to her as above.

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, Aug. 3.

Savannah Steam Packet.—This fine vessel sailed from Tranmere, on the Cheshire side of the Mersey, on Friday last—the whole strength of her steam was applied (between seventy and eighty horse power) but she was completely beat round the Rock Perch, by the Waterloo steam-packet, between Liverpool and Belfast. The latter vessel has two engines of thirty horse power each, and is completely rigged with sails, and is calculated to carry nearly 150 tons. We had an opportunity last week of viewing the Savannah, and we may safely take upon ourselves to say, that a more handsome specimen of naval architecture never entered a British port. She is calculated to carry about 340 tons, of which nearly 200 tons are occupied by her machinery.—The paddle wheels on each side are about 14 feet in diameter—each wheel has eight paddles of wood, nearly three inches thick, and four feet in length by two feet in breadth, connected by strong double chains, working in the midway, between stem and stern. The state cabin, which is entirely wainscotted with mahogany, tastefully inlaid, is 24 feet long, and perhaps 12 feet in width—on the sides are the cots, twenty in number, and admirably calculated for comfort and accommodation.—The floor is painted to imitate a tesselated pavement, looking glasses are let into the mast which divides the cabin, and this arrangement gives a pleasing effect to the tout ensemble. —The approach to the cabin, from the deck, is by a convenient staircase. There are a great number of other accommodations for passengers, and the whole is highly creditable to American mechanism and ingenuity. We had some conversation with the Captain (Rogers) who is not remarkable for being communicative —and from the purport of his answers, we are inclined to believe, that the rumour of the vessel being a present to the Emperor Alexander is totally groundless —but we are nevertheless of opinion that the Czar may purchase it—if he likes it. The fact is, the Savannah is sent to Europe merely as a specimen of Transatlantic ship architecture, and will become the property of the "highest bidder."—A silent civility pervades the whole of the crew, from the Captain to the cabin cook, for which the whole inclusive may have private reasons, which it is no business of ours to enquire into.—Chester Chronicle.

Recent Martyrdom.—The following particulars of an event, which occurred in Smyrna last April, have been transmitted by an English gentleman in that quarter:—

Athanasius, a Greek Christian, 24 years of age, was the son of a boatman, who carried on a small trade in the Archipelago. The gains of the father being unable to support the son, or the business sufficiently great to require his assistance, he was obliged to look out for employment in some other way. He engaged in the service of a Turk, who, being pleased with his conduct, considered him as a proper object for exercising his influence in converting him to the Mahometan faith. After holding out great offers, he ultimately prevailed on him to renounce Christianity, in the presence of the Meccamay, who is the Turkish Judge and Bishop. He continued in the service for a year after, when he quitted it, and having experienced severe reproofs of conscience for his apostacy he made a pilgrimage to Mount Achos, where there are many convents, from which he returned some months after.

On his arrival at Smyrna, in the costume of a Greek monk, he proceeded immediately to the Meccamay, expressed his repentance at renouncing the Christian faith, and his resolution to abjure the tenets of the Mahometan. On this he was confined in a dungeon, and endured the torture with the greatest fortitude, persisting in his resolution to die a Christian. A day was then appointed for his execution in the most public part of Smyrna, & opposite one of the principal mosques: and he was led to the scaffold bound, attended by the Turk sh guards. Here he was offered his life, nay, houses, money, in short riches, if he would still continue in the Mahometan creed; but no temptation could induce Athanasius again to apostatize.

On this occasion a Turkish blacksmith was employed to decapitate him. As a last attempt, however, to effect, if practicable, a change of opinion, the executioner was directed to cut part of the skin of his neck, that he might feel the edge of the sword. Even this, however, failed of success. He was then ordered to kneel on the ground, when he declared, with a calm and resigned countenance, that "he was born with Jesus, and would die with Jesus!" At one blow the head was struck off. The guards then instantly threw buckets of water on the neck & head of the corpse, to prevent the multitude of surrounding Greek spectators from dipping their handkerchiefs in his blood, to keep as a memorial of the event so remarkable. The body was publicly exposed for three days, the head placed between the legs, and afterwards given up to the Greeks, by whom it was decently interred, in the principal church yard of Smyrna. This is the third instance of the kind which has occured at Smyrna during the last twenty years.

At the Derby Assizes, Nathaniel Hulton, of New Mills, in that county, was indicted for a most ferocious assault upon a game keeper, whose nose Hulton actually bit off, besides other ill treatment of so severe a kind as nearly to cause his death. Hulton was one of the worthies who suffered under the Suspension Act, and being confined in Reading gaol, attracted the notice and care of Lord Folkestone who indicted the gaoler for not permitting his Lordship to visit Hulton and his fellow prisoner. Hulton feeling so great an interest to be excited in his welfare, upon his release returned to his calling as a most active Radical Reformer, and successful speech-maker. He has attended many of the public meetings lately held in Cheshire and Lancashire. He also came to Smithfield meeting, and on his return from thence was arrested upon a magistrate's warrant for killing game on a Sunday. The Reformer, fresh from the lectures on liberty which had heard in Smithfield, could not brook this restraint on his personal liberty, and committed the assault above stated, of which he was convicted. He behaved, during his trial, with great insolence, and made a vehement speech in defence. He was sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment, and to be kept at hard labor.

PARIS, Aug. 4.

"His Majesty, desirous of recompensing the services rendered to the State by the Marshal Duke de Feltre, who, after officiating ten years as Minister of War, died without fortune, has, on the report of Mr. Dessoles, President of the Council of Ministers, granted to his widow a pension of 15,000 francs."

Extract of a private letter.

BILBOA, July 22.

The principal object of these proceedings against Don Onis, M. Pizarro, and M. Casa d'Irujo, is connected with the treaty of cession of the Floridas, in which these Diplomatists, it is said, have exceeded the king's intentions. The enemies of these ministers endeavor to give to this fault the colour of treason. By the cession of the Floridas, say they, the party secretly favorable to the insurgents, was desirous of exasperating England, and thus inducing her to acknowledge the Governments of Buenos Ayres and Chili. This accusation is doubtless too severe; but if the king's ministers have acted against his orders, or even without orders, no astonishment can be entertained at the rigorous measures adopted against them by a Monarch, who finds himself, on all sides, perplexed by concealed obstacles, and secret intrigue.

At the residence of a merchant, arrested at Cadiz, have been found letters from London, which anticipate the movement which was on the point of execution amongst the troops. It had been ascertained, that the English at Gibraltar received expresses from Cadiz, which contained an exaggerated account of the symptoms of the insurrection; already, they stated, the troops were in march for Madrid. At the same time, England works at the grand armament of General Devereux and the proceedings of Colonel Macirone. It appears that General O'Donnel has discovered evident traces of some foreign intrigues.

BRUSSELS, July 24.

Accounts from Lille, say, that in the great plain round that city, in which there are several large houses, such as Roubaix, Tarcoing, and Mouscron, many thousand workmen live, who gain a good livelihood by working in the manufactories. Whilst acts year many Netherland and some English manufacturers have settled here, and from time to time furnished it with work. The jealousy thus excited, and also a diminution of the demand, by which some master manufacturers have been obliged to discharge some workmen, or to lower their wages, have caused first discontent, and then a kind of insurrection. Numerous bands of workmen, armed with sticks, forks, and bars, have assembled in these towns, and demanded that the foreign workmen shall be sent away, threatening if their demand is not complied with, to set fire to the manufactories. The gendarmerie assembled immediately from all quarters, and were supported by some detachments of the garrison of Lille. In several places they have come to blows, and some of the workmen have been wounded, and put under strict confinement. Meantime the spirit of discontent is not allayed in this populous plain, but the magistrates have adopted the best measures to preserve tranquility.

On the 22d ult. several reapers, in the Department of the Rhone, took shelter under an oak, during a violent thunderstorm. The tree was struck with lightning, which, at the same instant, killed a young man 18 years of age, and two children were also struck with it, and they are hardly expected to survive.

In the early part of last month, a dreadful storm burst upon Fontainiere, in the arrondissement of Coignac. A person was seated on a stone bench, amidst his family and domestics, when the lightning fell amongst them, and they were all more or less, wounded. After four days suffering, the wife of the farmer died. None of the persons assembled received any electric shock; but it appeared that the ball of fire, which fell amongst them, and then dissipated. None of their cloaths were singed on the outside, but all interiorly.

While the extreme heat has been complained of at Paris, letters from Pau, seven degrees farther south, mention, that the weather lately has been there so stormy and cold, that they have been obliged to resume their winter garments, and to light fires in their apartments. The wheat crop has suffered much from the cold in that quarter.

The mountain which lately moved from its ancient position near Namur has come quite close to the citadel, & blocked up a new road leading to France. The space which it has deserted presents a curious and interesting appearance; its mould being easily crumbled, and impregnated with a mineral substance.

A very curious piece of mechanism, of the nature of a pendulum clock, the completion of which has cost the artist, M. Rovez, 25 years labor, is now exhibiting at Paris. It offers to the eye 13 dial plates, great or small, which indicate, 1st. the age of the mood, the phases of that luminary, her rising, setting, and passage to the meridian; the epacts, and the golden number, for which the indices make their revolution in 19 years. 2d. The diurnal horary circle, subdivided into minutes and seconds of time; the rising and setting of the sun in regard to the inequality of every day in the year; the dominical letters; the solar cyle; for which purposes the indices make their revolution in 22 years. 3d. The annual motion of the earth round the sun; that of the moon round the earth; and the revolution of the celestial signs in their natural order.—4th. The difference of longitude for 42 cities, expressed by the diurnal movement of a circle of copper gilt, in the centre of which is a dial-plate divided into 24 hours, with a pointing of the minutes from 5 to 5, and carrying the sun in the middle in such a manner, that on reading the name of these cities, you see at a look the hour that is in each of them at the moment you make the examination.—This ingenious piece of machinery is put in motion by a counterbalancing weight of only 6lb. For ordinary usage it sounds the quarters and hours, but that can be stopped at will; and in case the pendulum were forgotten to be wound up, it suffices, after having repaired the omission, to bring the minute hand to its place. This simple operation rectifies all the other dials. It is said that a foreign prince is in treaty with M. Rovez to acquire this splendid specimen of mechanical skill.

A correspondent has handed us the following anecdote:—"The late Jame Sutherland, whose death you announced last week, was some time an inmate and lodger in the house of another pauper of eccentric character, Jamie Fairweather, who was attacked with a dangerous distemper, and was attended by a distinguished member of the faculty, who had prescribed some pills to be taken at night.

In the morning, Jamie Sutherland called upon the Doctor, to report the state of his patient. As soon as the Doctor saw Sutherland, he rather rapidly interrogated the messenger—How is he? has he taken his pills? No, replied Sutherland, he had no time—What, not time! No—you ordered the pills to be taken at eight o'clock, but he died at seven!"

Evacuation of Parga.—Letters have been received from the Ionian Islands, dated in the beginning of June, detailing the events which took place on the cession of Parga to the Turks. We collect from them the following particulars:—By Sir T. Maitland's orders, the officer commanding the British garrison at Parga, made known to the inhabitants, that in conformity to arrangements with Ali Pacha, a Turkish force was to enter their territory without delay, but that the English troops would remain for their protection, along with the Turks, until they were able to arrange all their affairs, and complete the emigration.—On receiving this intimation, which was confirmed by the approach of an Ottoman force, the Parganiotes held a consultation, and sent to inform the commandant, that as such was the determination of the British government, they had unanimously resolved, that should one single Turk enter their territory before all of them should have had a fair opportunity of leaving it, they would put to death all their wives & children, and afterwards defend themselves against any force, Turkish or Christian, that should violate the pledge made to them; and that they would fight until only one should survive to tell the story.—The English commandant, perceiving by their preparations that this resolution was irrevocable, instantly despatched information to Sir Thomas Maitland, at Corfu, who sent Gen. Sir Fred. Adam to expostulate with them.—That officer, on his arrival at Parga, observed a large fire in the public square, where the inhabitants had heaped together the bones of their ancestors, collected from the churches and cemeteries. All the male population stood armed at the doors of their respective dwellings; the women and children were within, awaiting their fate; a gloomy and awful silence prevailed. A few of the Primates, with the Protopapa at their head, received Gen. Adam on his landing, and assured him that the meditated sacrifice would be immediately executed, unless he could stop the entrance of the Turks, who had already arrived near the frontier, and effectually protect their embarkation and departure. Fortunately Sir F. Adam found means to prevail on the Ottoman Commandant to halt his force. The Glasgow frigate, Capt. Maitland, which had been sent from Corfu, having arrived, the embarkation commenced, and all the Parganiotes proceeded, under her protection, to Corfu. The Turks, on their entrance, found Parga a desert; and the only signal that marked their reception, was the smoke of the funeral pyle, in which its late inhabitants had consumed the bones of their forefathers. The unfortunate emigrants are now principally at Corfu, waiting, as houseless wanderers, the distribution of the miserable pittance of £48 per head, obtained for them by their protectors, which is to be called a compensation for the loss of their property, their native soil, and social existence. Thus has closed the memorable negociation in a scene of calamity which the most lively imagination could not have anticipated.

The Airthrie Whale.—No circumstance has occurred for many years so highly interesting in natural history as the discovery of the skeleton of the whale, which was found the other day at Airthrie. This gigantic animal, which must have been one of the largest of its tribe, was buried in the soft mud of the Forth, and covered over with a thin coating of muggy soil, which, by means of draining, and other agricultural improvement, is now in the process of being converted into valuable arable land. It is to this improvement we are indebted for the discovery of the skeleton, as it was in deepening a ditch that the workmen of Sir R. Abercrombie, discovered the bones. The deposition of so large a body would have led us to expect that some slight protuberance would have marked the spot where it was laid. This was not the case, however, an uniform flat surface extended all round, and, if ever its grave was marked by an undulation at all, time, that almighty leveller, has completely worn it out.

Since the discovery of the mammoth bones on the Ohio, we know of nothing in natural history at all to compare with this, and to us it is rendered more interesting, as it proves that an animal, the species of which we presume we are still unacquainted with, lived in a situation which could not have been accessible to it at any period since the commencement of the Christianera.

The situation where it lay was within a very short distance of Dunmyat, that hill which forms so prominent a feature in the landscape as viewed from Queenstreet, about sun-set. It is about a mile from the Forth, and that many miles above the point at which it becomes a firth; indeed in its nearest neighborhood the river is so shallow as to be fordable at low water, and to the circumstance the direction of a Roman road is to be attributed, which crossed the river at this spot, and was protected by a camp or fortress which was established on the north bank of the Forth.—These well known circumstances are valuable data upon the occasion, as they afford us indisputable proof of the Forth having flowed at that time in the same channel it does now, and also that the banks of it must have been of solid consistence, ere they would attempt to lead a road across that part of the country, or establish a fortress in the midst of a swamp. This conclusion we know to be a process of time; and, at a period when the industry or ingenuity of mankind had not yet suggested the advantages of draining, we may readily believe that the Romans found them, in respect to firmness, much in the same state they now are; consequently it is to some period, much beyond that of history to which the mind must wander, in the vain pursuit of forming a conjecture as to the time when the base of the Ochil Hills was washed by the tide, & accessible to the inroads of this monarch of the ocean. The discovery of this skeleton sets all question upon the fact beyond a doubt.—The finding of a few oyster shells in this kind of mud, a circumstance of very common occurrence, afforded room for speculation, but now no question can be entertained as to the fact of the sea having covered the whole of this district long after the creation of living animals.

We learn that some single bones of the same species have been occasionally found in the district of the Carse of Falkirk, and we hope to have more information on the subject shortly; meantime we may observe, that the only other skeleton of the whale tribe, found under similar circumstances, that we know of, is one which was discovered in the alluvial soil of Po, at Castel Arquato, near Piacentino, where the remains of two whales lay up. They are both deposited in the museum of the Council of Mines at Milan, and were sent there by Bonaharnois, when Viceroy of Italy. One only is in any thing like a state of preservation; the head and right jaw are entire, several of the ribs remain, and 42 articulations or vertebra, but the length is not one third of the Airthrie skeleton, as it measures only 21 feet. Two other skeletons of the Delphinus tribe are exhibited in the same place—all found in the alluvial soil of the Po.

From the appearance of that country no doubt can be entertained of the sea having once stood at a much higher level. The enormous quantity and variety of shells which occur in various places now removed far inland and far above the present level of the Mediterranean, will not permit of a doubt on this head; but, that the level extended somewhat beyond the limits of that sea, seems to be somewhat confirmed by this recent discovery.

Last summer a swallow built her nest about six feet towards the paddles of the stern, under the projecting part of the deck of the Marion steam-boat, plying to Loch Lomond, Scotland, and had laid several eggs, when unfortunately one windy day the water was thrown so high as to wash the nest completely away. This summer another one has been formed, and now contains four eggs. The bird sits very close when the boat is at anchor opposite Balloch Ferry, and goes up every morning to the mouth of the Loch with the boat, and meets it at the same place in the afternoon on her return; but it is doubted whether any brood will be produced, as the boat is absent every week day on her passage about seven hours.

During the very severe storm of thunder and lighning last week, at Bristol, a mass of caterpillars fell as if from the clouds into a garden there, and were shovelled away by bushels.

A MOVING MOUNTAIN.

A singular and recent event excites the astonishment of the inhabitants of Namur and Dinant. Behind one part of the castle of Namur there is a pretty high mountain (perhaps hill) at the foot of which there was a spring of water, of considerable magnitude, which never dried up. Since the time of the new fortifications of Namur and of its citadel, has been executed, this spring has been choaked up, & has disappeared. The proprietors of all the parts of the mountain perceived that a revolution of some kind was preparing in the interior of their property, nothing could equal their surprise when they became convinced that the powerful action of the waters of the choked up spring was undermining a great part of this mountain, and continued to make it move in a mass, without any sinking or cracks which might assist the observers in their calculations respecting it. he news of this event soon spread; and in a short time the whole part of the road which leads to Dinant has been occupied by one of the points of this mountain; and it has been necessary in consequence to remedy this inconvenience by throwing a bridge over the Meuse, towards the bank which leads to Ivor, the actual residence of count Depatin, formerly commander of Tournay. The people have now given to this mountain the name of the walking mountain; and in fact its motions are perceptible, as well as the direction that the weight of the waters, which daily increases more and more, makes it take towards the bank of the Meuse.

The London Gazette of Aug. 10, contains a long list of Naval and Military Promotion, of which the following is an outline:

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

BOSTON, Sept. 27.

LATEST FROM ENGLAND.

The ship Mary and Susan, Capt. Curtis, has arrived at this place, with London papers to the 23d, and Liverpool, to the 25th ult. Excepting on the subject of Manchester riots, their contents are uninteresting; but on this fruitful theme of political speculation, they are literally overburthened; and present as many aspects of the present, and anticipations of the future, as peace and safety of the country, as there are hues in the rainbow. On one side, the meeting of the populace though multifarious, is described as in the highest degree orderly, and decorous, and the attack upon them to have been wanton and unnecessary. The people received the different military corps with cheering, until their sabres informed them, that their visit was hostile. On the other hand the marching in regiments under regular leaders, the numerous banners with their inscriptions, the call of several persons to the people to lock their arms fast together round the husting—and other circumstances indicated any thing but a peaceable meeting. And the riot act having according to the ministerial papers, been hurice read,—the Magistrates consulted together, and issued a warrant to arrest Hunt. The officers and cavalry who were appointed to execute it, were assailed by heavy vollies of stones and shouts, and they did not use their sabres, but compelled to do it for self defence. Not a single shot was fired by the military. There were 100,000 persons within view.

On Wednesday, 18th, there was not the least disturbance in Manchester or Salford. Every thing resumed its wonted appearance. Cheerfulness and confidence were restored, and seemed the happy harbingers of general satisfaction. No precaution was relaxed, the utmost vigilance prevailed on the part of the police, and the military patrolled the streets during the night; but the day and the night were one continued period of quietness. The following notice, in large types, was plentifully posted through the streets, and the attention that has been paid to it by the inhabitants is highly praise-worthy. From its effect proceeded the tranquility above described.

CAUTION.—The Inhabitants of Manchester and Salford are requested not to be out of their own houses after nine at night, during the present disturbed state of these towns."

On Thursday, 19th, the town of Manchester was quiet; but not so in the neighborhood, for large parties were assembled at Middleton, Hayton, and all the adjacent parts, committing the most outrageous depredations on every well dressed individual that passed them. A person who came from Middleton this morning states, that there were at least three thousand assembled there: a portion of the Cheshire Cavalry have been sent to disperse them.

The number of persons present at the Manchester meeting on the 16th was probably little short of 100,000; but the latest accounts show that but three men had been killed, on whose bodies a jury had returned a verdict of accidental death; the wounded were about 70, most of them slightly; and when it is considered, what confusion must have arisen, when the cavalry was ordered to disperse the mob, the number is surprisingly small, and shews the forbearance which the armed force must have used, in discharging their duty; had a wanton or vindictive disposition prevailed among them, hundreds, if not thousands of victims must have fallen.

PUBLIC MEETINGS.

Seditious placards continue to be stuck up, in and about London, calling upon the people—"To arms! and revenge the murders of your fellow citizens, butchered by the military at Manchester."

One of the hand-bills announced a public meeting to be held in Kennington the 23d August, but this meeting was postponed; or rather transferred to Smithfield, and to be held on the 28th instead of the 23d. The printed placard, announcing this meeting, bears the following motto.

"Universal, Civil, and Religious Liberty."

"A public Meeting of the British Metropolis is to be held on the people of the whole Empire. It will be held in Smithfield, on the 25th of August, six o'clock, to the afternoon." [An important hour for the peace and safety of London.]

Sir C. Wolseley is invited to the Chair; and the Card closes with the memorable telegraphic despatch of Lord Nelson:

"England expects every man to do his duty."

To guard against the mischievous tendency of this meeting, the civil and military authority have organized every necessary arrangement; but should any riotous proceeding break out, as the night fall must close its proceedings, fears are to be apprehended that the most bloody and horrible crimes will be committed; of which the acts of the authorities will not be the least.

The following, among other regulations, adopted in Manchester, must have a salutary tendency in preserving the public peace.

"The Watch and Ward Act is now put into full operation. This will be a great security to every one. Its powers are very summary, especially against night walkers & skulkers.—The unlawful training of men in the neighbourhood to the use of arms will be put down by force. The following salutary Rules have been put forth by Civil Authorities:

"PUBLIC CAUTION.—To prevent as much as possible any fatal results under the present circumstances, the Boroughreeve and constables of Manchester feel it their duty to issue the following friendly caution:

"When stones are thrown from a crowd, (a practice by which the lives of the Peace Officers and military, on duty, are continually endangered,) the persons offending must be immediately seized, and given up by those about them, or such as did not actually throw a stone may suffer from the firing of the military.

"In the event of stones being thrown, the persons concerned, who are flying from the pursuit of the civil or military authorities should be refused admittance into houses or cellars, which may otherwise be offered into. The occupiers of houses, from the windows or roofs of which stones are thrown, must consider themselves respon sible for all the consequences.

"It is earnestly requested that individuals will avoid collecting in groups or parties in the streets."

Every engine is at work, which falsehood can invent and baseness employ, to interpose the shield of public opinion between the disaffected and their just punishment. We have no fears, however, as to the final result. When the alarm and irritation of the moment have subsided misguided minds will admit the influence of candor and honesty; and then, too, the wilful propagators of delusion will find it their interest to desist.

The present political situation of England is a very serious one. This is, however the constituted authorities are vigilant and efficient, in the discharge of their duty, nothing can save the country from the horrors of an insurrection, which, if not producing a complete revolution, must be attended with incalculable loss of blood and treasure to the country.

The London Courier remarks, "It is evident, by our accounts from the disturbed districts, the disaffected, thought checked, are not subdued and it will require a long and steady perseverance in the course which has accomplished the former, finally to produce the latter."

Previous to the meeting at Manchester a large body of men met in the neighborhood of Royton and Middleton, about nine miles distant from the city, for drilling service; they were assembled by the sound of a bugle, and bodies of them marched in military order, with pikes, not unlike the ancient battle axe used by the British infantry, though smaller. Five of these persons, who acted as drill serjeants, were arrested by the magistrates. This meeting smacks very much of rebellion.

The Duke of Wellington was expected to repair to Carlsbad, to join the expected conference of ministers there.

It is said that the Emperor of Russia has ordered four frigates to be fitted out for the purpose of exploring the Polar regions. It is expected that they will arrive in this country, and remain here till the proper period for proceeding on their expedition.

Count Charles de Damas is appointed first Gentleman of the Chamber to the French King, in the room of the Duke of Richelieu.

The Madrid advices state that several detachments of the Royal Guards, and of the Gardes du Corps, were marching towards the frontiers of France, for the purpose of escorting the Princess of Saxony, Ferdinand's intended consort, who travels through France. The Duke de l'Infantado is sent to receive her Royal Highness and the marriage is to be solemnized by proxy, the moment the Princess arrives on the Spanish territory.

From Stockholm it is asserted that the good understanding between the Swedish Government and the Court of Petersburgh is more perfect than ever. The Swedish Charge d'Affaires in Russia is said to have received from M. de Nesselrode new assurances of esteem and personal friendship on the part of the Emperor for the King of Sweden.

Numerous arrests have lately been made in the "discontented districts;" at Rochdale, seven men were apprehended, & convey ed to the new Bailey in Manchester under a charge of training bodies of men in military discipline, contrary to the laws.

Letters from Madrid state, that the British Minister at that Court, in announcing the act forbidding British subjects from affording aid or relief to the insurgents of South America, had declared, that this act would not only be rigorously enforced, but that a squadron of ships of war, would be sent to the American seas, to restrain the pirates who sail under the flags of the independent States.—It is certain that the Vengeur and Superb, are now repairing; and that it is reported, they are intended for the service.

NEW-BEDFORD, Sept. 10.

Earthquake.—On Sunday night last, a few minutes before two o'clock, a shock of an earthquake was experienced in this town and vicinity. It commenced with an explosion like that of a heavy cannon, and was immediately succeeded by a loud rumbling noise, which lasted from one to two minutes, during which time the buildings continued to tremble, so that some persons were much alarmed. Its effect on the water was more extraordinary than on the land. We learn from persons who were on watch on board a ship in the harbor, that previous to the shock the water was perfectly calm, but was suddenly agitated as if it had been a violent storm.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at New-Orleans, to a friend in this city.

NEW-ORLEANS, Aug. 17.

In this place at present, we view nothing but scenes of misery, the hearse for the dead almost constantly going—the sickness proves most fatal amongst the shipping. Twenty ship masters have died within these last three weeks, and scarcely an hour in the day but we see the colors half mast throughout the shipping. The moschettoes were never known to be so numerous or troublesome as they are here this season.

Extract to the Editor, dated,

St. THOMAS, Sept. 2.

You will no doubt have heard ere this reaches you, of the unfortunate result of Admiral Brion's late attack on Cumana—various causes have been assigned for its failure, and the Admiral himself seems to feel that he is entitled to a full participation in the censure that we cannot avoid attaching to the defeat. From a personal knowledge of and conversation with several of the officers attached to the British troops which composed the greater number of the expedition, I find that the forces disembarked, were fully competent to carry the place with ease had the attack been properly conducted, but it unfortunately happened that the leaders were wholly destitute of military abilities, though the principal, Gen. Ourdinatich attained some celebrity for his enterprise and courage. The second in command General English, who had the immediate superintendence of the British troops, had never attained any higher rank than that of a clerk in the commissariat of the army, during the peninsular war. Until some better organization of the troops takes place, we cannot but anticipate a succession of disasters. The whole of the Admiral's squadron are out cruising separate; from which he expects to replenish his coffers, which are at a low ebb. The troops proceeded to form a junction with Bolver, in the interior.

At Marguerita a large transport has arrived from England, with 400 troops, forming the advance of a division, raised by General Devereux, in Ireland; he is himself daily expected with the remainder, who, I am informed, are in an excellent state of discipline, and as he is an officer of talents and experience, much may be expected from him.

Mammoth Peach.—The largest Peach I remember ever to have seen was purchased at the Market-House, by a gentleman of this city, on Wednesday morning last. It measures eleven inches round, and weighs ten ounces. This one was selected from a number of others, very little inferior to it in size. It grew upon the Meadow Bridges plantation, formerly the property of Mr. Lewis Tuckwant, now of Jarvis Storrs, Esq. within six miles of this city. It is certainly a very uncommon production of the kind.

Extract dated La Guira, 17th August.

The English Expedition from the Island Margaritta to the Main.

This Expedition consisting of 24 vessels, left Margaritta, on the 13th July, and landed at Barcelona, on the 15th, 16th and 17th.—They did not attempt to penetrate into the interior, in consequence of a division, which was prepared to resist them. They directed their course towards Cumana, and on the 3d of August, they attacked Berdones, by land and sea, but they were repulsed. On the 5th they made four assaults upon the Castle of Aqua Santa, but were driven back with great loss, at the same time they experienced the same fate in their attempts upon the batteries of the town, on which occasion they lost a schooner. On the same day the fleet made sail leaving the troops in a state of desperation on shore, where they are now suffering all the miseries of hunger, and those incident to the climate, and where they find lead and lances instead of gold and silver.

Our maritime forces were not collected, and although we had but 5 vessels, the enemy did not dare to attack them. On the 17th, 18th and 19th, our fleet was re-united for the purpose of carrying supplies to Porto Carello.—To facilitate this operation an embargo was laid, and in the mean time a division of troops was operating in the plains of Barcelona. Bermudez, with 800 men arrived to reinforce his friends, but it was too late, they had left the coast, and were flying before the troops. Pereyra who was marching to oppose the enemy, met a convoy of cattle under charge of Tarage—the escort was dispersed and the convoy taken. Pereyra, subsequently attacked Bermudez, who after making a great resistance was defeated, and pursued by our cavalry a distance of six leagues, leaving the field covered with dead bodies, muskets and mules, together with all his materials, the commander only escaping with 20 men. The 13th and 14th were memorable days for the plains of Barcelona, as the enemy was entirely destroyed. Pereyra having completed the destruction of Bermudez, marched against Marino, who, with 200 men was in Angua—he was compelled to fly to the Banks of the Orononko, and our troops who followed him, have extended their operations even to Guyana.

Our maritime forces arrived at Cumana on the 24th. Some of the enemy's vessels were dispersed, and others fled to Margaritta where they have been followed by our squadron for the purpose of destroying them.

Such is the result of the Quixotic expedition of the English from Margaritta, in which they were joined by Hollanders, French and Germans, and in which they have all reaped the reward of their maritime piracy, losing the greater part of their foreign troops, and more than six hundred natives of the corps of Bermudez.

On the west a powerful diversion was attempted. The vanguard of Bolivar, commanded by Santander, penetrated into the kingdom of Santa Fe. The first division under command of Lancis Semmyoth arrived in the valley of Tensa, was attacked and he surrendered at discretion. The common soldiers entered into the royal service, and Semyoth with eight officers were executed.—At the same time Santander was beaten at Salazador in the mountains, and was compelled to fall back upon Bolivar at Cansandre, where with water up to their middle, they wait for the month of October to recommence the campaign.

Paez, who with so much pomp, passed the Apur, with 900 horse, and 200 infantry, arrived at the town of the Cross, when he surrounded 200 of the king's troops. The latter defended themselves with determination, disputing possession of the streets and the houses, with the loss of almost all their officers. Twenty assaults, filled the entrance of their entrenchments with dead bodies, of men and horses. All the Royal officers were killed or wounded; a soldier took the command, and Paez persuing in his attempts was driven back with the loss of 400 killed and 200 wounded, and leaving behind him 400 horses, he was compelled to seek his safety in flight, while the remains of our victorious Locedemonians, placing their wounded brothers on the enemy's horse, fell back on their principal fort at Nutrias. There does not exist a parallel to the intrepidity displayed on this occasion. The soldier that took the command has been rewarded with the Cross of Honor and a pension of 800 dollars. Such is the result of the plans of our enemies, and which has secured the quiet repose of our troops, until the opening of the next campaign."

NEW-ORLEANS, Aug. 21.

"Our city continues generally healthy; there have occured some new cases of malignant fever among the shipping, steam boats, and strangers. We have had much rain, and the coolest summer thus far that has been experienced for many years.

"You have no doubt, heard of our late hurricane; the force of the wind & sea must have been very terrific; in about two hours the water rose 20 feet perpendicularly, swe pung every thing before it. All human skill and knowledge availed nothing. A hurricane so early in the season, and with such violence and duration, is not recollected by the oldest inhabitant: houses and trees, which had withstood storms for many years, were totally destroyed and swept away. Upwards of 100 human bodies have already been interred in a space of only 30 miles along the coast.—Carcases of animals of various descriptions, sea-fowl and fish, line the shore; it appears literally to have been a war of elements, for the feathered and finny tribes appear to have suffered as much as man and beast.

"Not a vessel that I have heard of has survived the sale between the lake Borgne and Mobile Bay."

FREDONIA, (N. Y.) Aug. 29.

Migration.—Mr. Damon and his wife, with two children, came into this town on Thursday last direct from Boston, (Mass) the whole distance of about 500 miles, they travelled on foot, conveying their little all, together with their youngest child, on their backs; while the little boy, but three of age, faithfully trudged along keeping even pace with them. And what renders this adventure still more singular, is that they traversed a new and heretofore considered impracticable route, through the counties of Cattaraugus and Allegany, a distance of 100 miles of almost a couple wilderness. Mr. Damon is a house joiner, and emigrated to this country with the laudable intention of fixing his residence among us for life.

Ad. Brion has published an official account of the capture of Barcelona:—It state that 1300 of the royal troops were taken, or destroyed; and that consider able magazines of provisions and military stores fell into the hands of the victors, as well as some vessels in the harbor, one or two of which were loaded.

An American paper states that the river Ohio is at present at so low an ebb that steam boats are entirely out of the water, or will scarcely enough to float them. This, it remarks, is astonishing, as it rained three months ago, presented a compass of 1500 miles in length—from one to two miles in breadth—and with a depth almost unfathomable. Now it continues the same article, it is "a small stream, fordable in many places and seeking its way over pebbles like the great Father of waters the Mississippi."

Boundary Line.—It is confirmed, that the commissioners under the treaty of Ghent for running the boundary line between the United States & Lower Canada, have agreed to report, that the 45th degree of north latitude runs about one mile & a half to the southward of Rouse's Point; and consequently that this fortified post falls within the British province. It is probable this was anticipated, as the works on that point have long since been discontinued.—In a national point of view this result is of small importance, as, in the event of another war between the United States and England, and the possession of Canada should become a national object, it needs no second sight to foretel, that the former need rely as no other point than that of the bayonet to make a safe lodging in the citadel of Quebec in two months after the declaration!!!—Boston Centinel.

On Tuesday of last week, while several men were engaged in ditching, in the town of Wilton, they discovered at a short distance from them, a rattlesnake's mate, (or cousin, as they are denominated) of an enormous size. In the true spirit of heroism, they determined to secure the prize, and finally succeeded in killing it. On opening it, they found eighty-two live young ones, of from nine inches to one foot in length.

Extract of a letter, received at Baltimore, dated Hamburgh, July 27th, 1819.

"The accounts from Prussia continue to wear a gloomy aspect. The unfortunate division between the king and his subjects threatens some serious consequences. It is said that Field Marshall Blucher is watched closely—Gneisenau next to Blucher in rank, and Governor of Berlin, is under actual arrest. The Prince, Army & people form on one party, while the King with his Ministry and the nobility form the other. Time only can tell what the consequence will be."

YORK, OCTOBER 14, 1819.

His Excellency the Lieut. Governor Lady Sarah Maitland, and His Excellency's suite arrived yesterday by the steam boat from Lower Canada.

We understand Messrs. Foster and Troy of this city have nearly finished one of these celebrated —— lines upon an elegant new construction embracing all the advantages of the use of the improved plan, in England. It will be ready for working early in the present week, and may be seen at their Chair Ware Room near the Mansion House St. Paul Street.

We are also authorised to state, that an ingenious gentleman of this city is now employed in constructing a Velocipede on a new plan. How soon the machine is completed, it will be opened for the inspection of the curious of which due notice will be given hereafter.—Mon. Herald.

LONDON, Aug. 21.

Our readers, we are sure, will be glad to find that those distinguished eminence the seditious placards, are likely to be suppressed by the active and judicious measures of the police both in London Westminster, and Surrey.

The following placard was stuck up in some parts of the metropolis during Wednesday night; among other places, it was stuck up on the door of Lord Sidmouth house:—"To arms——Revenge——The Manchester Murders."—Another placard was also stuck up, enforcing the necessity of a strong attendance on Monday, Kennington-common.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 23.

It is rumoured that the office of Comptroller of the Customs, throughout the kingdom, is about to be abolished. The present occupants to have their salaries for life.

A placard was posted up in London on Saturday, deferring the Kennington meeting to a future day, and calling a public meeting of the metropolis in Smithfield on Wednesday. Sir C. Wolseley is invited to take the chair.

Extract of a letter dated Aix-La-Chapelle, August 18—"Since the coolness between the Emperor Alexander and Bernadotte has increased to so great a degree as to leave scarcely any hope of reconciliation, we are not a little curious to ascertain the policy England will observe, should the party among the Swedish nobility who meditate the overthrow of Bernadotte, receive support and encouragement from Russia. The light in which the Swedish monarch is regarded by the other powers of Europe, is best shewn by the fact, that he has already addressed himself to three different courts in order to obtain the hand of a Princess for his son Oscar, and has received a refusal from them all. These three courts are Prussia, Hesse-Cassel, & Mecklenburgh-Schwerin."

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mons. Chabert, the celebrated fire eater, exhibited his wonderful capability of resisting the effects of heat, at the theatre, Penzance, on the night of Monday last. After going through the various feats of standing in melting lead, eating burning torches, &c. he concluded by getting into a frame-work, on which was hung a number of rockets, and to which he was to set fire, whilst he remained exposed to the flame, until his clothes were literally burnt from his body. On exhibiting this experiment, the house became filled with smoke, and the sulphurous smell became so intolerable, that the auditory were quickly forced to seek for a purer atmosphere.—But as the means of egress did not allow of their doing this as quickly as was necessary, several persons fainted, and a scene of general confusion ensued. The screams for assistance became loud and piercing ; a cry of fire was raised, and the crowd that quickly assembled, lost no time in breaking through the roof, in order to extricate those imprisoned within, who, by tumbling over each other, had nearly blocked up the ordinary passages. Happily this expedient, by allowing the smoke to evaporate, and giving an opportunity of removing to the open air those who had become insensible, prevented a fatal termination of the disaster, which in all probability, would have otherwise occurred.

The British frigate Orlando has been condemned in India as unseaworthy.

The Phaeton frigate, from England, with a large amount in specie, has arrived at Calcutta.

The ship Mysore, of Calcutta, from Canton for Suez, foundered off Pulo Sapata, in a severe gale, and the capt. (Dobie,) 1st, 3d, and 4th officers, and about 90 lascars, of her crew, perished. She was laden with the produce of China, by an Italian.

A new ship of 1111 tons, pierced for 50 guns, and built for the Imaum of Muscat, was launched at Bombay, in Feb. last. She was named the Shaw Alum.

FROM THE NASHVILLE CLARION.

Passage across the Isthmus of Darien.

Baron Humbolt offers nine points which have each been suggested as suitable points from which a canal across from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean could be made. Gen. Abercrombie made some minute surveys on the same subject some years ago, and laid his calculation and estimate of the labor before the British ministry ; but nothing has been done. It is now supposed that in case an independent government should be established in Mexico, the project will be revived. The waters of the gulf are said to be considerably higher than those in the Pacific ocean ; owing to the trade winds, which, blowing from the east, heap them up and force them to escape through the streights of Florida, thereby occasioning what we call the gulf stream.

By cutting a passage across the Isthmus of Darien, or rather through a flat country, " between the head of Nicuragua in 12 degrees north latitude, says Dampier, and the coast Nicoga, where there are no mountains, would make only 20 miles across a savanna country covered with trees, then the waters would rush through the opening, and by degrees wear a fine and wide channel, till the two oceans would become nearly on the same level."

The navigation to the East Indies would be shortened near ten thousand miles. The waters would recede from the coasts all round the gulf, and increase the territories of the bordering countries.

Vol. III. YORK, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1819. No. 43.

UPPER-CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the THIRD, by the Grace of GOD of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Counsellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to our Provincial Parliament, at our Town of York, on the twenty eighth day of September instant to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you

GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our Proclamation bearing date the sixteenth day of August last, WE thought fit to prorogue our Provincial Parliament, to the twenty eighth day of September instant, at which time at our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear, NOW KNOW YE that WE taking into our Royal consideration, the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid; hereby convoking and by these presents enjoining you and each of you, that on Monday the first day of November next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary, and herein fail not.

IN TESTIMONY whereof, WE have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed, WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this twenty-fourth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, and in the fifty-ninth year of our reign.

MR. GEORGE O'BRYAN.

STUCCO WORKER & PLAISTERER.

Late of the County of Tipperary, Ireland.

SHOULD this advertisement meet the Eye of the above named young man, he is hereby informed, that agreeable to his invitation contained in a letter dated, York, U. C. in October last, his sister has arrived in this country; but, to her inexpressible mortification, every enquiry for him at York, has proved ineffectual, but in the hope that he may still reside in this Province, or in a situation where this advertisement may come under his notice, his sister takes this method of acquainting him, that she is now residing at Messrs. Piggot & Garnette, Ancaster, U. C. where she trust he will instantly repair & relieve her mind from the excessive grief, which the disappointment alluded to has occasioned.

Should any person be able to give Miss O'Bryan any information respecting her brother, they would confer on her an invaluable favor, if they would do so, by means of a letter to her as above.

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, Aug. 24.

The City, one o'clock.—There has been little or no business doing at the stock exchange for the last four or five days; the varintion has not been 4-8 or 1-4 per cent. Yesterday a failure of some consequence was announced; and this morning another, but the latter is for a small account. We are sorry to state several more are expected previous to settling day, which is the 26th inst.—Courier.

A letter from Portsmouth, dated Aug. 23, says—"His Royal Highness the Prince Regent has been cruising about Spithead and St. Helen's all day, attended by his squadron, and is now steering for Cowes Roads, where moorings are laid down for the yatch." His cruise being now ended, his royal highness is expected to return immediately to London or Brighton.

Prince Leopold left Edinburgh on Friday last on his way to Perth, where he was to remain one night, and we understand it is his intention to proceed to Dunkeld, where he will visit his grace the duke of Atliol. On his way to Inverness, he will visit also the duke of Gordon and the marquis of Huntley.

Globe Office, Tuesday, 24th, 1-2 past four o'clock.

The lords commissioners met in the house of lords at four o'clock, when parliament was further prorogued to the 2d November. The commissioners were—the lord chancellor, the duke of Wellington, and the earl of Liverpool.

We understand the reformers do not intend to hold their meeting at Smithfield, as announced for to-morrow.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 26.

A letter received from our correspondent at Manchester, informs us, that the rumors in circulation yesterday, respecting the liberation, and likewise the final committal of Hunt and his accomplices, on the charge of high treason, are totally without foundation, no further examination since last Friday having taken place, the particulars of which are given below.

It is very probable, that on to-morrow, the case will undergo a thorough investigation.

Our readers are already apprised, that at the late assizes for the county of Warwick, a bill of indictment was found by the grand jury against major Cartwright, M. Wooler, George Edmonds, Charles Maddocks, and Wm. G. Lewis, " for conspiring to elect and return, without lawful authority, Sir Charles Wolseley, bart. as a member to represent the inhabitants of Birmingham in the commons house of Parliament." The indictment has since been removed by certiorari into the court of King's Bench, and will come on for trial at the next Warwick assizes, in the nisi prius court. The defendants have all given bail to appear and plead to the charge in the King's Bench next term.

General D'Everenx, accompanied by major Young and Captain Smith, arrived here on Tuesday in the Waterloo steam packet from Dublin.

On Sunday last, the Tribune frigate sailed for the Irish station.

It is said there have been no fewer than fifty thousand applications made to the colonial office to proceed to the Cape of Good Hope.

An establishment on Mr. Owen's plan will, it is affirmed, be tried on a small scale in the vicinity of Leads.

The strongest proof of the health of the metropolis was given in the weekly bill of mortality, ending 26th July, in which it was stated, that in the 97 parishes within the walls, there was not one burial!

We have heard that a pension of £100 per annum, is to be granted to Birch during his life; and if his death takes place now, which is not expected, the reversion is to be given to his wife. A hand some subscription is commenced for him in Stockport, which is expected in a few days to amount to £200.

A few days ago a dreadful accident occurred to the Holyhead Mail, within a mile of St. Albans, on its way from town. The accident was solely occasioned by the driver of the Chester Mail, who, in attempting to pass the Holyhead Mail on the wrong side of the road, crossed the leaders of the latter, and turning them up a bank, upset the coach. Several of the passengers were severely hurt; they were conveyed to the Wool-pack inn, St. Albans, where one of them, an iron-master of the neighborhood of Dudley, died soon after from the injury he had sustained; the other passengers received immediate medical aid, and it is hoped they are doing well. The coachman & guard were both hurt, but not so much as to prevent their coming forward to the extent of their ground.

The Duke of Wellington arrived in town on Friday evening, after having inspected the frontier fortresses of the Netherlands. It will be recollected that we stated this to be precisely the object of his grace's journey, when our contemporaries were sending him to Carlsbad, to Warsaw, and upon a mission expedient of reconciliation between Sweden and Russia.

Corn Exchange, Aug. 23.—The ports are now shut against the importation of every description, of foreign grain for home consumption, for the next three months, yet the wheat trade was very heavy this morning, and 2s. per quarter cheaper than on this day week, having a large supply of new wheat from Essex, and the quality much finer than was expected. The arrival of oats (particularly foreign) since last Monday, have been large, which were taken off slowly, and in small quantities, at a decline of 1s per quarter. In barley, peas and beans there is but little doing; prices nominally the same as last week.

Wheat (English) 80s to 76s; wheat (foreign) 60s to 74s; rye 32s to 36s, barley 34s to 38s.

Loss of Ten Davies' Straits Fishery Ships.

HULL, Aug. 21.

A letter has been received here which states the loss of the following Davies' Straits ships, viz:—Ocean, Samuels, and Equestris, of Hull; Sisters, of Kirkaldy; Majestic, of London; Ruth, Royal Bounty, and Thomas and Ann, of Leith; Mary Ann and Tay, of Dundee. The crews are all saved. The above news was brought by the Dexterity, of Leith, which passed Peterhead on the 17th inst. with three fish. She also mentions the additional success of the under mentioned Hull ships, viz.:—Ærial, seven fish; Eclipse and Truelove, four each.

We continue to lay before our readers, from every quarter whence authentic information can be derived, additional details respecting the recent transactions at Manchester. We do this, from two motives; first, because the country is interested in knowing the facts; and secondly, because it is of importance to counteract the malicious misrepresentations which have been made, and still continue to be made, upon the subject. It is only by a comparison of statements, that the real truth can be approached.—Every engine is at work, which falsehood can invent and baseness employ, to interpose the shield of public opinion between the disaffected and their just punishment. We have no fears, however, as to the final result. When the alarm and irritation of the moment have subsided, misguided minds will admit the influence of candor and honesty; and then, too, the wilful propagators of delusion will find it their interest to desist.

We have not room to-day, for any remarks upon the contents of our preceding columns; but we earnestly recommend them to the attentive perusal of our readers. In particular, we would urge this recommendation with respect to a statement of the names and condition of those persons who are in the Manchester infirmary.—Let it never be forgotten that the Times declared, that the yeomanry "cut their way to the platform," and that nearly a hundred of his majesty's subjects had been sabred by the cavalry! How is this monstrous and wicked assertion borne out by facts? Look at the official statement of the infirmary, which gives the names of all the persons now there, and the nature of their wounds. Only two out of thirty persons, received any injury from the sabre of the cavalry! Among the forty out-patients also, there are very few instances of sabre wounds. But there must have been ten-fold ten times this number, had the cavalry indeed "cut their way,"—odious and malignant expression—through fifty thousand persons.

Hunt, it will be seen, with nine of his associates, have been remanded on charges of high treason.

A warrant was issued on Saturday against Harrison, the preacher, at Stockport, for seditious language, used by him in a sermon on the preceding Sunday. He was taken into custody, and not being able to find bail, was committed to Chester castle for trial.

There were some reform meetings in the North last week, notwithstanding the events of Monday at Manchester. But they were of a very moderate and quiet character.

Accounts from Madrid to the 10th of August state, that the King of Spain has dismissed Count L'Abisbal from the command of the expedition army, and appointed Gen. Don. Felix Calleja. A council of war has been appointed to investigate the conduct of the officers concerned in the late revolt of the troops at Cadiz.

A communication has been issued from the office of Lord Sidmouth, desiring the magistrates and all the officers to remain in attendance during the night of the adjourned meeting (25th Aug.) of the reformists at Smithfield. Dr. Watson has addressed a letter to Lord Sidmouth and the Lord Mayor, enquiring "whether it is the intention of his majesty's ministers to interrupt the peaceable assembling of the people on that day (the 25th.)

From the result of Mr. Telford's experiments, there is reason to conclude that, by means of malleable iron, properly combined, a substantial Hanging bridge, with a clear water-way of one thousand feet, may be constructed.

The iron hanging-bridge to be constructed over the Menai Strait, is to consist of one opening of 560 feet between the points of suspension, and 100 feet in height between the high water line and the lower side of the road-way; and the road way being horizontal, this height is uninterrupted for the whole 560 feet, except where the natural rock, which forms the western abutment, now interposes. But, in addition to these 560 feet, there are to be four arches on the western, and three on the eastern side of the main opening, each fifty feet span, that is, making in all 820 feet opening.

The road-way will consist of two carriage-ways, each twelve feet in breadth, with a foot-path of four feet between them, so that the platform will be about thirty feet broad. The whole is to be suspended from four lines of strong iron cables by perpendicular iron rods placed five feet apart, and these rods will support the road-way framing. The suspending power is calculated at 2016 tons, and the weight to be suspended, exclusive of the cables, is 342 tons, leaving a disposable power of 1674 tons. The four sides of the road-ways will be made of framed iron work, firmly bounded together for seven feet in height, and there will be similar work, for five feet in depth below the cables. The weight of the whole bridge between the points of suspension will be 489 tons.

"The length or distance between the piers of the Menai Bridge is proposed to be 500 feet and the greatest deflection 30 feet, which will require the length of the cable or bar to be 505 feet, and the weight of 505 of a square inch rod will be about 17041bs. which will produce a strain on each point of suspension of 3,632lbs. The strain necessary to produce a fracture on the same rod, is 27 tons, or 60,48lbs. Such a bar would therefore, bear a load (including its own weight) of 28,372lbs to be uniformly distributed over it, before a fracture would take place. This weight, multiply by the number of square inches in the section of all the bars, will give the extreme weight the bridge would support, or rather the least weight that would break it.

"I believe it is intended to have four cables, each of 15 inches area, or 60 inches section in four; therefore 28,382×60 —17,023,200lbs. or 760 tons, is the whole weight the bridge would be just able to support.

"Mr. Telford estimating the whole weight of the Runcorn Bridge (independent of any passing load) at 574 tons, there will remain a surplus strength of 475 tons; but this may be increased ad libitum, by increasing either the number of bars, or the section of each.

ROYAL SOCIETY OF EDINBURGH.

Professor Playfair read a paper in December, on the Side of Alpnech, erected by M. Rupp, in 1812, for the purpose of bringing down to the Lake of Lucerne the fine pine trees which grow upon Mount Pilatus. The wood was purchased by a company for 3000l; and 9000l. were expended in forming the slide. The length of the slide is about 44,000 English feet, or about eight miles and two furlongs; and the difference of its two extremities is about 2600 feet. It is a wooden trough, about five feet broad and four feet deep the bottom of which consists of three trees, the middle one being a little hollowed; and small rills of water are conducted into it, for the purpose of diminishing the friction. The declivity, at its commencement, is about 22½, and Mr. Playfair calculated, that a heavy body, not retarded by friction, would describe the whole length of the trough in 66." The large pines, with their branches and boughs cut off, are placed in the slide, and descending by their own gravity they acquire such an impetus by their descent through the first part of the slide, that they perform their journey of 8 miles and a quarter in the short space of six minutes; and, under favourable circumstances, that is, in wet weather, in three minutes. Only one tree descends at a time, but, by means of signals placed along the slide, another tree is launched as soon as its predecessor has plunged into the lake. Sometimes the moving trees spring or bolt out of the trough, and when this happens they have been known to cut through trees in the neighbourhood as if it had been done by an axe. When the trees reach the lake, they are formed into rafts, and floated down the the Reuss into the Rhine. The very singular phenomena described in Mr. Playfair's paper, arise from the diminution of friction, in consequence of an increase of velocity; and may be regarded as an experimental confirmation, on a large scale, of the ingenious views of Coulomb, who had the merit of discovering this remarkable property of friction.

The British Government have fitted out two new expeditions for the arctic regions; the one has sailed for Baffin's Bay, and the other, by land, for Hudson's Bay, and the coasts of the arctic ocean. The party to be employed in the land expedition, consist of Lieut. Franklin, the commanding officer; Dr. Richardson, of Leith, medical officer and naturalist; two midshipmen, and two servants: in all, six Europeans. They sailed about the 20th of May, and expected to reach York Factory about the middle of July. The primary object is to co-operate, if necessary, with the nautical expedition; to ascertain the north-eastern boundary of the American continent; and endeavour to trace the Copper mine River to its termination in the ocean. There is a probability, then, by tracing this river to its termination, the expedition may reach nearly to the north eastern point of the continent. The expedition expect to embark in canoes eight or ten days after their arrival at York Factory, proceed by Cumberland House Isle a la Crosse, &c. to Fort Chepewa, or, if possible, by Slave Lake.

We rejoice in being able to state, from good authority, that a material and flattering re-action has occurred in our commercial system—and particularly at the great port of Liverpool. Cotton Wool has risen 2d, per lb. and is in demand; Sugars are much higher, and Coffees and almost all other Colonial produce, are considerably advancing. Combining this intelligence, with the prospect of a most favorable and abundant Harvest, we may hope, that the present temporary distress, will speedily give way to the genial influence of revived trade and national prosperity.

It is calculated that 200 hands by machines will spin as much Cotton, as twenty millions could have done forty years ago with the common spinning wheel. The work now done in Great-Britain in this way would require sixty millions of hands in the old way. It is further calculated that the manufacturing machinery of all kinds, in England, does the work of four hunded millions of artizans, without machinery.

Accounts from Spain state, that Ferdinand has offered to Portugal, payment of the amount claimed for the delivery of Monte Video, one half to be paid when the royal troops reach La Plata, and the other half when the Eastern bank is evacuated by the Portuguese. The expedition, was actively preparing; large sums of money had arrived at Cadiz; and it was expected the whole armada would sail about the middle of September.

It is now said that the Spanish Ministers, though dismissed from Court, were untrammelled by any other restriction, and that Don Onis, was not arrested, or interrupted on his way to Madrid.

Sir Thomas Hardy was preparing to assume the command in the Rio de la Plata. He will go out with several ships of the line, which are nearly ready for sea.

A serious misunderstanding exists between Bernadotte & the Russian Court; which, it is thought will hazard his imperial reign.—Every overture of this sans-culotte monarch, for the marriage of his son, to some continental Princess, has failed.

The Duke of Wellington, has returned to England after having inspected the frontier fortresses of the Netherlands.

Colonial Etiquette.—The Lady of a gentleman in a high judicial station in Demerary, in consequence of asserting certain claims to rank and precedence in the assemblies of George Town, has produced a sort of civil war among the ladies there. The Lady's claims were backed by her husband, who appealed to the Governor, stating the law of precedence in England. The Governor, it seems, did not coincide with the Judge in his view of the case, and some unpleasant correspondence took place between them, which ended in a reference to Lord Bathurst. This important business is therefore to be decided by the Secretary of State for the Colonial Department! Gen. Elliot when Governor of Gibraltar, very happily settled a similar dispute among the Ladies of the Garrison under his command, by ordering in all cases respecting precedence in the Ball Room, the ladies were to take rank according to their ages. It is needless to add, that after this order, the top of the dance was readily yielded to the first candidate for the distinction!

Mr. Johnson, the ingenious inventor of the patent Velocipede, has completed a machine upon entirely new principles; examining its merits we find it may be conducted or rode by either gentlemen or ladies, or by a gentleman and lady at the same time. The rage for inventions of this sort appears to be travelling from one end of Europe to the other; but whether any practical benefit will result from it remains to be proved. For our own part, we are not yet prepared to pronounce an opinion, and still less are we inclined to negative these velocepedian attempts, being confident that if no advantage can be derived from them in travelling, they at least afford most delightful and salutary exercise.—Liverpool Mercury.

Denmark.—The Lancasterian system of education has been established at Copenhagen by order of the king.

Gymnastics form an important feature of Danish education. Several pupils have been taught to plunge to a depth of twenty feet in the water; to swim under the surface for 100 yards; and even to swim with their clothes on, armed, & with a man on their shoulders.—About 2000 persons have been taught to swim in this way, at Copenhagen, during the last year.

A Danish captain has invented a new rocket, which ascends a prodigious height and may be seen at sea from a distance of 100 miles.

Gunnery.—A new iron rail-way has been invented in Bavaria. On the exactly horizontal surface of this improvement, a woman, or even a child, may, with apparent ease draw a cart loaded with more than sixteen quintals. On another kind of railway, by the same inventor, in which there is an insensible descent of six inches and a quarter in 100 feet, a loaded waggon will run alone, without any external impulse. It is proved that these iron railways are two-thirds better than the English, and that they cost only half as much. A single horse is equal to twenty-two on the best common road.

Public buildings for the instruction of the blind, similar to that of Dr. Guille at Paris, are preparing in Munchen, and in the principal towns of Bavaria.

M. Demoor has announced the important practical discovery, that fruit may be preserved by means of carbonic acid gas. They were placed in glass vessels, filled with carbonic acid gas obtained from carbonate of lime by sulphuric acid and were in the colour nor taste of cherries was altered at the end of fifteen days; and, at the end of six weeks, they were in the same state as if they had been preserved in brandy.

Extract of a letter from the cape of Good Hope, dated Upper Town, May 5.

"The Caffrees have broken out and a very serious war is carried on at present on the borders. It is said that the savages are to the amount of 50,000; & a detachment of 6000 attacked Graham's Town on Saturday week, about 12, o'clock in the day, but were repulsed and 150 left dead on the field. They carried off 300 wounded. Orders have been issued in every district in the colony, for the young boors to enrol themselves to to oppose the enemy. The settlers are in a bad state, as the Caffrees have stolen all their cattle.

The 13th Regiment, commanded by Col. Wiltshire, have come up with the main body of the Caffrees near Graham's town, and have defeated them with great loss. Since then they have with drawn from the British territory.

Edinburgh University.—Nothing can more strikingly display the rising eminence of the University of Edinburgh, than the following account of the number of students who, during the present session, have attended the different branches of instruction which are taught in this seminary of learning: 1909 have entered their names in the book of matriculation, and it to this we add those who have attended the Divinity-hall including about 30 who have not matriculated, we shall find that upwards of 2150 students have been present at the College during the winter session. Such a number exceeds all parallel in the annals of Edinburg University, and is not equalled either by Oxford or Cambridge.

GLANCE AT EUROPE.

Our attention has been for some time past occupied by the singular state of things which appears to have grown up among some of the nations of Europe since the general peace. Though all is quiet and smooth without, there are occasional indications of a deep seated spirit of discontent, particularly in the north of Germany and in England; which would seem well calculated to arrest the attention even of the transatlantic politician. As to France, though still somewhat distracted by parties, by her ultras, and her liberals, her constitutionalists and her democrats, she is, at this moment, after all her humiliations, her costly triumphs & most signal defeat, the richest, the happiest, the least oppressed, and if need were, the most efficient nation of Europe. At the cost, indeed, of torrents of blood, and of unspeakable misery and crime, she has attained to a degree of freedom unknown to her before. Her people are infinitely improved in knowledge, the property of the nation is more equally distributed, the oppression of feudal rights is completely abolished; and if the present king survive, as for the interest of the world as well as of France it is most desirable he should, for some years longer, the constitutional liberty of French-men, and the compact and mighty power of France will be established upon the most solid foundations. In Germany, and particularly in Prussia, the scene is far different. The great diffusion of taste for knowledge, which distinguish the people of the north of Germany, their habits of deep reflection, and love of metaphysical abstraction; while they tend to keep them distinct from the ordinary political struggles of monarchs and statesmen, (in which for the most part, the interests of the people are not at all considered, or unhesitatingly sacrificed,) eminently qualified them to act a distinguished part in any struggle where their feelings and prejudices shall once be fairly enlisted. Such a struggle was

French Courts.—Brief account [illegible] organization of the principal Courts.

We have occasionally copied French papers, reports of trials in the courts of France, partly with a view of exhibiting the course of judiciary proceedings there. The practice is so different from that which prevails in this country and in England, that it is often difficult to understand the course of proceedings.

The highest judiciary tribunal in France, is the court of appeals [illegible] Cassation. It adjudges in the last resort in cases of appeal from decrees and judgments of the other courts. It exercises a variety of ways, a jurisdiction over the other courts, and decides on applications for the transfer of causes from one court to another. It consists of a president, three presidents of sections, eight councellors or judges, all of whom are appointed by the king for life. The presidents and judges are divided into three sections of chambers, and there is for all ordinary purposes three distinct courts, to each of which a specific class of duties is assigned.—Four of the members of each chamber are sometimes referred, and divided equally between the other two. This court has also a procurator general of the king, six advocates general, a register in chief, four or eight others.

The court next in rank is the court of accounts [Cour des Comptes.] It has no jurisdiction principally in matters relating to the treasury and the revenue.

The tribunal next in rank are the courts royal, of which there are twenty-seven in the kingdom. The most distinguished is the royal court of Paris, which has a jurisdiction over the seven contiguous departments. Such a struggle was that, in which, after having seen their country overrun by the licentious hordes of a foreign invader, and its inhabitants made to drink the bitterest dregs of the cup of humiliation, they were invited by their sovereign to take part in 1812 and 13, with an assurance from their prince that the overthrow of the enemy should be the signal of their own more complete emancipation, and that on their return from the field of victory, they should return to the rights of freemen at home; they rushed to the contest with the most enthusiastic ardour; liberty, so long the idol of their secret worship, a worship nourished and confirmed by the deep lessons of classic lore, liberty was held forth, as the reward of battle; and the despoilers of their country, the insolent oppressors who had degraded and scoffed at their station, and insulted their high minded and lovely queen, were the foes whom they were called upon to encounter. In such a contest, so solicited, they could not, as they did not, fail—but they are yet the subjects of a despotic military government—cheated in their hopes, betrayed in their dearest interests, looked upon with suspicion, if not with hatred, can it be wondered at, by those who understand the highly excitable and enthusiastic character of the German, that a most portentous ferment should exist among them, or that existing, it should occasionally vent itself in such feelings as led to the assassination of Kotzebue, by the fanatic Sandt. We shall indeed be surprised, if much more serious scenes are not yet to follow.

In England the causes of dissatisfaction have none of this depth of moral feeling—They are there, the mere ebullitions of ignorance, poverty, & vice: and consequently threaten much less serious consequences. The immense debt, and consequent expenditure of Great Britain, require the continuation of enormous taxes, when the monopoly of commerce and manufactures which mainly support them, can no longer be maintained. The competition of foreigners, in diminishing the extent of English manufactures, must necessarily deprive those, whom the excess of these branches of industry formerly employed, of occupation and support; and these outcasts, together with the numberless seamen and soldiers, whom the return of peace has thrown without means of support or habits of industry, upon an already surcharged community, constitutes, together with a few profligate and designing leaders, the chief actors in the scenes of riot and confusion, which have recently disturbed, and still seem to menace, the peace of England. That these threatening appearances, however, are little regarded either by the government, or the people at large, is to be inferred from the unconcern with which the former beheld the late numerous assemblage in Smithfield (in the centre of London,) and the unopposed arrest by a few peace officers, from the midst of this multitudinous people, of one of their ringleaders—and as to the latter, it is clearly evinced by the progressive improvement in the stocks, and by recent large investment of money in the various public funds, than which there can be no surer criterion, of the confidence of the people at large in the stability of the government, and of the very slight impression, which the popular tumults occasion among those, who are ever the most sensitive to approaching changes, the monied interest.

It is divided into five chambers, viz. three civil, one of correctional police, and one of preliminary inquiry [de mise en accusation.] Besides these chambers, courts of assize are formed from members of the court royal. The keeper of the seals or the first president, appoints five counsellors or auditers of the court royal, to hold the courts of assize of each session, designating one of the counsellors for president.

English Ministry.—Some alterations having taken place in the several offices, composing what is called the ministry of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, as well as certain changes among the persons of the ministers themselves, occasioned by death, resignation, or otherwise, it may perhaps be a satisfaction to our readers of European intelligence to receive a few explanations relating to this subject.

Formerly the cabinet ministers, consisted of thirteen members, and the ministers not of the cabinet composed also the same number. The cabinet now contains fourteen persons—and the other ministers are only twelve, whilst the offices which they fill, are variously modified and changed.

Until lately, neither the treasurer of the navy, nor the president of the board of trade, were of the cabinet;—the offices are now both united in one person, who is a cabinet minister. Of the offices lately filled by ministers, not of the cabinet, four are taken away; two secretaries of the treasury, the master of the rolls, and one of the paymasters of the forces. To the same body are added the five offices, of lord steward, lord chamberlain, master of the horse, lieut. gen. of the ordnance, and first commissioner of land revenue.

The following is the list as it stood at the opening of the present parliament.

Cabinet Ministers.

Earl of Liverpool, first lord of the treasury.
Lord Eldon, lord chancellor.
Earl of Westmoreland, lord privy seal.
Earl of Arrowby, president of the council.
Viscount Sidmouth, secretary of state for the home department.
Viscount Castlereagh, foreign affairs.
Earl Bathurst, colonies and war.
Rt. Hon. Nicholas Vansittart, chancellor of the exchequer.
Viscount Melville, first lord of the admiralty.
Earl of Mulgrave, master general of the ordnance.
Rt. Hon. George Canning, president of the board of control.
Rt. Hon. Charles Bathurst, chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster.
Rt. Hon. Wellesley Pole, master of the mint.
Rt. Hon. Frederick John Robinson,* treasurer of the navy and president of the board of trade.

Ministers not of the Cabinet.

Marquis of Cholmondeley, lord steward.
Marquis of Hertford, lord chamberlain.
Duke of Montrose, master of the horse.
Viscount Palmerston, secretary of war.
Rt. Hon. Charles Long, paymaster of the forces.†
Rt. Hon. Thomas Wallace,‡ vice president of the board of trade.
Sir Samuel Shepherd, knight,¶ attorney general.
Sir Robert Gifford, knight, solicitor general.
Earl of Chichester and marquis of Salisbury,§ paymaster general.
Sir Hildebrand Oakes, bart. lieut. gen. of the ordnance.
Rt. Hon. William Huskisson, first commissioner of land revenue.

*These offices were formerly held, by the late Rt. Hon. George Rose, and the Earl of Clancarty—respectively.
† The other paymaster of the forces, was lord Charles Somerset.

Useful Invention.—There is now in operation at Mr. Peter Schuyler's in Watervliet opposite Troy, a newly invented threshing machine. It is worked by one horse, and puts into operation twenty flails, which thresh about one hundred sheaves in an hour. A fanning mill may be attached to the machine and worked by the same horse. By adding power the number of flails may be increased. A machine of the above description may be built for thirty or forty dollars, as to the price of labor and timber. Several gentlemen from Troy have seen this machine in operation and recommend it as preferable to any other they have seen. The patentee, Mr. Thomas Cohoon, now resides in Troy, who will dispose of the rights for counties, or for single machines. Mr. Cohoon will exhibit a machine at the Rensselaer County Cattle Show, with which one may thresh a sheaf in a minute. Such a machine may be built for ten dollars.

THO'S RIDOUT,
Surveyor General.

YORK, OCTOBER 21, 1819.

To His Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland, Knight Commander of the most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

WE, His Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Grand Jury for the Midland District, in the town of Kingston assembled, beg leave, with feelings of the deepest sorrow, to approach your Excellency and offer our sincere condolence upon the late afflicting event which has deprived your Excellency of an affectionate relative, and His Majesty's Canadian subjects of their Illustrious Governor in Chief.

Although it is impossible that we can feel this heavy calamity so acutely as your Excellency, and the august family of Richmond, yet, of this, we are convinced, that no public misfortune could more deeply affect, not only us, but all classes of the community to which we belong.

If any thing can console your Excellency, and the distinguished persons to whom you are allied, under this dispensation of Providence, it must be the soothing reflection that, while alive, His Grace possessed the love and respect of all those who venerate real worth, and that his memory will be cherished in this District, in proportion to the grief which his death has occasioned.

We take this opportunity of expressing our attachment to your Excellency, praying that a life so valuable may long be preserved, and that His Majesty's subjects, in this Province, may enjoy a continuance of the happiness they have already experienced under your Excellency's administration.

GENTLEMEN,

Be assured, that both myself and my family, will long entertain a grateful remembrance of the genuine and honorable feeling which you have been pleased to manifest on this afflicting and memorable occasion.

To His Excellency, Sir Peregrine Maitland, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

WE, the Magistrates, Clergy and Inhabitants of the Town of Kingston, beg leave to approach your Excellency, to express our unfeigned sorrow and grief at the melancholy event which has bereaved your illustrious family of a Father, and this Province of a most kind and affectionate Governor.

Although we, it is true, cannot compare our feelings upon this occasion, with those of His Grace's more immediate connections, and although the voice of gratitude is never so strong as that of natural affection; yet without pain we cannot but recollect how recently we saw the Noble Duke passing through this place, exposing himself to toil & fatigue beyond his strength, for the benefit of these Provinces, then so happily under his government. Nor can our hearts be so cold & thankless as not to feel and acknowledge that one so inclined to him for the adoption of many most important measures, tending rapidly to increase our happiness and prosperity; nor, above all can we ever forget, that it was to the very act of visiting the new settlers in the wilderness, (adding thereby fresh energy to their illustrious labours,) and planning improvements for the internal communications of the country, that the fatal summons overtook him, to resign a life evidently so zealously devoted to the public good.

These reflections as they increase our regret at the loss of so much excellence, must, we would fondly hope, sooth the sorrows of his beloved children and relatives. In offering our condolence to your Excellency, we cannot omit to express our unfeigned thanks to our most gracious Sovereign, for the additional mark of his favor in having placed over us so illustrious a character as our late Governor; and although we deplore his loss, we feel also, that it is our bounden duty to submit with patient acquiescence to this or any other affliction with which the wisdom of Providence may be pleased to visit us.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LINES TO THE MEMORY OF PROFESSOR PLAYFAIR.

Weep, weep, Edina, for thy classic town
Has lost the jewel that adorn'd its crown:
The glorious likeness of the' Athenian sage,
Undimm'd by years, and nasilov'd by age;
Whose gentle wit, and wisdom not severe,
Could charm his country, and his name endear:
The star of science, whose delightful blaze
Shone in the zenith, at the height of fame,
Ennobling life through all its useful years,
And, falling, follow'd by a flood of tears.
Such years and honors both, our favorite bore,
That fame nor nature had demand for more.

A MEMORY. July 24, 1819.

From the Alexandria Gazette, August 20.

The drought of the present year exceeds any since that of 1803, and is even more universal. In Kentucky, from which our seaports were beginning to procure corn by the way of New-Orleans, many have to drive their cattle ten miles to water; in the western parts of Virginia it is worse. In that great corn country on the Rappahannoc and James river, whose abundant crop filled our granaries, reduced the price of that article, and fed the poor of our cities, farmers are stopping the sales of their last year's crop of corn. Although rains have partially fallen in the last ten days no gladdening change has taken place; such is the fired and shrivelled state of our corn fields that nothing can renovate them, neither the bounteous rains from heaven, nor the skill of the farmer.—Three years ago, corn, the staff of life, in Virginia, was 8 and 10 dollars per barrel: in the present absence of money, 5 dollars is more than 10 dollars was in 1816, as money has not only appreciated in value, but in face has disappeared almost from the fact of the earth: still at that period crops were doubly as abundant as we can now venture to anticipate.

Description of a kind of Dropsy in the Crops of young Turkies. By M. Ligneau.

Among the different kinds of domestic animals there is one, to the diseases of which little attention is given; and yet it is one of the greatest delicacies of our tables; I mean the birds of our poultry-yard. Few authors, even to this day, have employed themselves in writing of their diseases; they are, however, subject to the most cruel of them, which destroy, in a short time, the most healthy. We have seen an example of this in a kind of dropsy of the crop, which has attacked the young turkies of Picardy.

Symptoms.—This kind of dropsy is announced by a dull look, paleness of the head, loss of appetite, and aversion to food. The birds allow themselves to be approached and seized with facility, and they are without strength. Very soon, a slight swelling of the crop is added to these symptoms, which in ten days becomes very considerable. I have taken nearly a pint of water from one. By pressing upon the crops of some of them a certain quantity of matter is discharged by the bill, but never enough entirely to ease the crop. All these symptoms increase, and the bird dies at the end of fifteen or eighteen days' illness. These slight symptoms must have announced the disease: but the little attention paid to them by those who are in the habit of taking care of these animals renders it not so easy to observe it.

Appearances on dissection.—The inside of the crop contained a quantity of black liquid, of a strong smell, mixed with gravel. The membrane viscous, and having a tendency to gangrene; the gizzard did not contain any thing but the small stones necessary to digest the food: but the intestines were inflamed, and on them were to be seen the same spots as on the crop. All the animals who were attacked were extremely lean.

Causes.—I then sought after the cause of this disorder, and it was easy to find that it was occasioned by the stagnant water of which these animals had drunk. In the course of the year, the heat had been great, and there was little rain.—The heat had hatched a vast swarm of small red worms resembling ascarides. It is quite certain that these insects must have been swallowed by the turkies; and from this cause, and the bad quality of the water which they drunk, a great degree of inflammation in the crop would ensue, with a stoppage of the passage which conducts to the gizzard. The water would thus be detained and decomposed in the first vacancies, and would produce the consequences which we have just been examining. The effects, as might be expected, would be gradual and imperceptible at first. It is only by the frequent use of the water that they become in a high degree painful.

Treatment.—I divided the turkies into two classes:—for those who were still sound I ordered grain and good water. With all that were diseased I practised the operation of tapping with a lancet in the lower part of the crop. I injected at the opening, by means of a small syringe, a slight decoction of quinquina (Jesuit's bark,) mixed with a little brandy —which was repeated twice in the course of the day. Next day the wound was better marked. I made again the same injection; and two hours after, I forced them to eat a little of the yolk of an egg, mixed with some crumbs of bread. At the end of three days the wound in the crop was closed—which I might have prevented—but finding a natural opening in the bill, I made them take, during eight days, in their drink, the same substances which had been injected; and they were, by degrees, put upon their usual diet. I need not add that clear water was given them instead of that of the standing pools. Ten of these animals had died before my arrival: two perished during the treatment, and the rest of the flock, which might be about forty, either escaped the disease or were cured.—Agric. Mag.

September 8.

Georgia Sugar.—We find in a paper of Darien, Geo. some remarks on the cultivation of the sugar cane. A river swamp plantation in sight of that city has produced a crop of cane equal to any raised in the more fertile parts of Jamaica. Four hundred gallons of juice were got from each acre, which brought 30 cents per gallon at the land. It is found on a comparative estimate, that the cultivation of the cane is almost thrice as profitable as rice or cotton, and it is represented as a crop not liable to casualties.

Sugar from grain.—We have stated the discovery that good sugar had been made from grain, and we now observe the business is successfully prosecuted in Virginia, by the patentee and others. The process of the manufactory is said to be as follows:—The grain is ground and mashed, as if for distilling—as soon as the mash arrives at the highest state of saccharine fermentation, it is strained and the beer (as it is called) boiled down to molasses.

A person lately in New-York, in a paroxysm of melancholy or hypochondria, attempted to cut his throat, and was found extended on a bed, his sleeves rolled up, collar open, a razor in his hand, and head thrown back as if dead. No blood being discovered, it was supposed he had made the fatal attempt with the back of the razor, and it was a long time before he could be convinced that he was still in existence: A good lesson to people afflicted with the blue devils.

Lieut. Governor.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the THIRD, by the Grace of GOD of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Counsellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to our Provincial Parliament, at our Town of York, on Monday the first day of November next ensuing, to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you

GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our Proclamation bearing date the twenty-fourth September WE thought fit to prorogue our Provincial Parliament, to the first day of November next ensuing, at which time at our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear, NOW KNOW YE that WE taking into our Royal consideration, the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you, of your attendance at the aforesaid; hereby convoking and by these presents enjoining you and each of you, that on Thursday the ninth day of December next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary, and herein fail not.

In TESTIMONY whereof, WE have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed. WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this twenty-sixth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, and in the sixtieth year of our reign.

MANCHESTER MEETING.

FURTHER PARTICULARS.

As the account of the proceedings and fatal results of the above meeting inserted in our last was necessarily brief, we this week copy the following narrative from Wheeler's Manchester Chronicle, the materials of which appear to have been gleaned with great care:

"On the previous Saturday it was observed that strangers, of a low description, began to drop into the town. This was more particularly the case in the evening. On Sunday morning an occurrence took place which gave a shock to the feelings of all who heard of it. Two residents had gone very early in the morning to a common called the White Moss, not far from Middleton, to see what they had so often been told of, the radical reformers going through their military movements. Unfortunately they were recognised; and underwent the most barbarous treatment. A number of those ruffians detached themselves from the rest, beat those persons inhumanly with large sticks, threw them down, jumped upon them, kicked them over the head and face, made them beg their lives upon their knees, forced them to abjure their king, and withdrew their allegiance, and finally threw one of them into a ditch bottom in a state of lifelessness, and left the other insensible, with a horrid remark, 'that they were done for.' One of the miserable men was also cut desperately in the face by them with a sharp instrument.

"At length Monday arrived. Early in the morning the various responsible Authorities were on the alert. The Magistrates the Boroughreeves and Constables of Manchester, Salford, an immense body of Special Constables, many of them men of the first consideration, and the various forces of the military and artillery, were in motion for their appointed duties. The latter consisted of our own Yeomanry Cavalry, under Lieut. Col. Townsend; the 15th Hussars, from the Barracks, under Lt. Col. Dalrymple; a detachment of the 88th foot, now stationed in the King Street Barracks, under Col. M'Gregor, some pieces of Royal Horse Artillery, under Major Frankey; and a detachment of the 31st foot, under Lt. Col. L'Estrange, the able, intelligent, and active officer who commanded the whole, and made all the necessary arrangements for the occasion.

"At eleven o'clock in the forenoon, the following magistrates assembled at a Gentleman's house in Mount-St. which commanded an immediate and uninterrupted view of the whole extent of ground near St. Peter's Church, in which the meeting was to take place, viz. the Revd Mr. Hay, the Revd. Mr Ethelston, Mr. Wright, Mr. Marcott, Mr. Norris, Mr Tatton, Mr Fletcher, Mr. Silvester, and Mr. Fielden. The Special Constables assembled on the ground soon after; the military were halted in various suitable stations, retired from the public ground.

"The Radical Reformers now began to make their formidable appearance. They marched in regiments, under regular leaders, and all the appalling insignia, Caps of Liberty, &c which had been long preparing for what they considered a most glorious day. As they progressively advanced to the hustings, they were received with the loudest acclamations, with huzzas, and the clapping of hands by those who came to see the appearance of military army, and were totally unlike that of a body of people met for deliberation.

"Amongst the numerous flags were the Stockport, Oldham, Middleton, Royton, Rochdale, Ashton, and Saddleworth Union flags, which from the last mentioned place was of a shocking description. It was black with large tassels of the same colour; the inscription in white characters, was, 'Taxation without Representation is unjust and tyrannical.' Smith Dyers. and Mossley Union' on the reverse.] 'Unite and be free! equal Representation or DEATH!' Several persons had already addressed the assemblage at different times from the partly formed hustings, desiring them to form in close and compact order to the hustings, and to lock their arms fast together, in order to prevent their enemies from penetrating amongst them. After this another cart arrived with planks of timber, and more regular hustings were formed. A woman exhibited a white deal board, with the words, 'Order! Order!' painted upon it. When HUNT mounted the hustings, he commanded the different musical instruments which were piled upon them to be removed and in a very peremptory tone also commanded all persons to leave the hustings who did not intend to address the meeting. He was immediately called to the chair, and was proceeding to make some indecent references to the Magistrates, when the Cheshire Yeomanry Cavalry suddenly appeared on the ground, and formed in line before the house in which the magistrates were placed. HUNT turned to JOHNSON and said, 'There's a treat for you.' He then said to the people, 'Stand firm, my friends: you see they are in disorder already: give them three cheers;' at the same time taking off his hat and waving it above his head. The cheers were instantly returned by the Cavalry and the whole of the people. Of course, the former brandishing their sabres whilst huzzaing.

"A short consultation now took place amongst the Justices, and they immediately issued a Warrant against HUNT, Johnson, Knight and Moorhouse. Mr. Nadin, the Deputy Constable of Manchester, was appointed to execute it. The Riot Act had been twice read; once by the Revd. Mr. Ethelston, and once by John Silvester, Esq. The rebellious nature of the meeting, its numbers and threatening aspect, the warlike insignia displayed, the order of march and military arrangement, many of the reformers having shouldered large sticks and bludgeons as representatives of markets, compelled the Magistrates on oath of very many respectable inhabitants as to the consequences that must, in their opinion, unavoidably flow to lives and property from such an immense meeting, assembled under such influences, and the Magistrates on view of the whole of this tremendous scene, rendered it imperative to interfere. To have attempted it by the common means would have been preposterous, and could only have caused the loss a great number of lives, without the chance of completing the object. Mr Nadin therefore took the warrant attended by a host of special Constables. Mr Trafford, a highly respectable Cheshire Magistrate, headed the Manchester and Stalford Yeomanry, and an order was given for the whole to advance & take their prisoners. This was done in a steady and masterly style; but the Cavalry had not advanced many yards before they were assailed with two Pennanry man used his sword, each man having confined himself to waving it over his head. Now the duty of self preservation obliged them to strike, but in very few instances to cut. The Manchester and Stalford troops in a moment surrounded the whole hustings, and the Civil Officers proceeded to seize their prisoners. Immediately the Cheshire Yeomanry galloped on the ground; to them succeeded the 15th Hussars and the Royal Artillery Train, whilst all the various detachments of Infantry also advanced. On every side the soldiery were attacked with the most determined resolution; many of the Cavalry were struck to the ground and the reformers attempted to knock out their brains with large stones, (previously provided) and sticks whilst lying on the ground. One gallant youth, Mr. John Hulme, was struck in the face with a brick. It took away his senses, and he clenched his horse so suddenly that they both fell together. A man had also stabbed him in the back with a sharp instrument, and, whilst in this deplorable state, a fellow with a club was about to finish him, when a foot soldier bayonetted the villain, who sprang high from the earth, and fell down dead. Another Yeomanry man was unhorsed at the same moment, and his life with great difficulty rescued. The Manchester Yeomanry's meeting house, where a furious battle raged. In the burying ground, there many persons committed murderous work from the inclosed walls, till the gates were burst open by a private soldier with the bayonet of his musket. Many innocent spectators had also been there during the whole of the day, as a place of security. At length it was necessarily cleared by force; and one of our Yeomanry leaped his horse over the wall and pursued the rioters. The multitude perceived active. The man it is believed, paid a severe penalty for his desperate conduct. To the front of these premises a considerable quantity of timber was laid which unfortunately sheltered the reformers from the bayonets

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 10.

The dissentions which had prevailed among the Janissaries of different corps has eventuated in some bloody rencoun ters.

HUDDERSFIELD, Aug. 20.

A meeting of the reformers and others, took place in consequence of a very short and indefinite notice, at seven o'clock, when several thousands were addressed by a person unknown, supposed to have come from Lancashire. His object apparently was to induce the populace to acts of riot, and to obtain by physical force what they could not by entreaty. He desired those who wished to assist their brethren in Lancashire, to signify the same by holding up their right hand, and concluded by informing them, that another meeting would take place this evening, to which he hoped they would come prepared for any emergency. At this the multitude cried out, "What, with fire arms?" but the orator left his meaning to be understood. It is expected that another meeting will take place this evening in Fixby Pastures, and the most serious apprehension is entertained. This morning a placard has been stuck on our walls, calling on the inhabitants to come forward as special constables, and to be sworn into office at twelve o'clock. The soldiers were and are now in readiness. The people are all in great anxiety—the Magistrates are assembled and on the alert.

The Mayor having refused to call a Reform meeting in this town, the requisitionists had themselves advertised one to be held on Monday next (this day). We learn this morning, that in consequence of the proceedings which took place on Monday, the design of holding the meeting has been abandoned.—Preston Chr.

We have with pain observed a requisition posted up, calling a meeting, for similar purposes to those, under pretence of which the one at Manchester was convened, at Wakefield, to be held on Monday next. We should certainly intreat the requisitionists, most earnestly, in the name of humanity, religion and their country, to countermand their notice; did we not imagine, from our knowledge of some of the characters whose names appear there, that an appeal made to them under such sacred titles must be made in vain.—Wakefield Jour.

Union Hall—About 7 o'clock on Monday evening a man went into the watch-house near the toll gate at the Surrey Theatre, and enquired for the night constable, to whom he said he had something very important to communicate. Mr. Ascott, the watch-house keeper, was the only person there, and he informed him that the constable had not yet arrived, but was every moment expected; the stranger (apparently somewhat disappointed) again pressed the importance of his communication, which induced Ascott to question him. At first he seemed much affected, but laboured vainly to conceal his emotion, and after a few minutes pause, he suddenly exclaimed, "I am a murderer—I have committed a great crime, and deserve to suffer!" and then he sank motionless into a chair. Ascott endeavored to compose him, and when he had revived a little, desired him to state explicitly the business that had brought him thither; when the stranger said his name was Wood, that he was a native of Leicestershire, and had in his youth formed a very strong attachment towards a young woman of his own age, named ——, but for many reasons they broke off the courtship, and he was soon after married to another woman. He did not see the first object of his love during the time of his marriage, nor till after the death of his wife, which happened near two years ago, and then he was induced to enquire after her, and found she was still living and single. His first flame returned with increased force; he visited her, a reconciliation was easily effected, and he had intended to marry her when a decent time had elapsed.—This intention he communicated to her friends, who had no objection to the match, and, with the consent of all parties, a day was fixed for the celebration of their nuptials, when a circumstance unexpected and dreadful, at once ended the negociations, rendering him an object of horror and reproach to himself, and of execration to society. A soldier, who was quartered in the town, had, it seemed, succeeded in gaining the affections of the young woman; he took her to public places, walked with her and seemed professedly her admirer. These attentions of the soldier roused his jealousy, and inspired him with an utter contempt of the woman, whom in the first emballitions of his passion he determined to sacrifice! With this dreadful intention he repaired to the shop of a shoemaker, and borrowed a large working knife, which he sharpened to a very keen edge, and then placed himself in ambush near the residence of his destined victim, whom he soon saw, and after upbraiding her with ingratitude, plunged the knife into her body, just under her left breast, and gave her several other wounds in the neck and arms till she was quite dead, he then threw the body into the river, near the stone-quarry.—After the perpetration of the deed he fled to Hodmister, but could obtain no rest; his imagination perpetually brought the murder before his eyes, and even in sleep the bleeding figure of his victim stood before him. Having wandered about a year through different parts of the country, during which he experienced the greatest tortures, he arrived in this town for the very purpose of giving himself up to the ministers of justice.

The unfortunate man was put into close custody by Ascott, who took care that he should not have any means by which he could make any attempt on his life, and yesterday morning he was brought to this office and examined before the presiding Magistrate, B. Allen Esq. He appeared perfectly firm and resigned, and his confession was taken down in writing.

Mr. Allen asked him if the body of the young woman was ever found? to which he replied, that he had heard it was, but was afraid to be inquisitive, as it might betray him

He was committed to the custody of the Keeper of the House of Correction, Horsemonger-lane, till a message can be sent to Leicester to make inquiries. The Prisoner is about 30 years old; the deceased was at the time of her death 28.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

The Texas Expedition.—We would be led to suppose, from the pompous letters from the adventurers in this enterprise, that their numbers at least were respectable, and their prospects brilliant. We have authentic accounts from that quarter, which represent them to be directly the reverse. They have not the least prospect of succeeding in obtaining possession of the territory they are so liberal in offering to dispose of to recruits and proselytes. Their actual numbers, as late as the middle of August, did not exceed one hundred, and they were said to be without funds, and ill supplied with provisions. The province in which they have raised the standard of liberty, with the exception of Labahie and St. Antonio, contains not many more than a score of families, and they are chiefly Americans, who migrated thither about a year ago. The very persons who have issued a proclamation of independence, from which one would suppose that they, with thousands of others were groaning under the lash of Spanish tyranny, whilst the U. States had failed in its duty to protect them, have themselves just renounced all the advantages of American citizenship, and engaged in a revolutionary project, the principal object of which is personal aggrandizement, though some may possibly have embarked in it under the influence of higher motives. We warn the young men of the United States against being seduced into this scheme by such highly colored statements as those which the above may in some degree serve to expose and correct. It is not by hostile invasion, nor yet by conquest of foreign countries, that the principles of free government are disseminated.—Nat. Intelligencer.

From the Norfolk Herald, Sept. 22.

FROM THE MEDITERRANEAN.

From a source that may be relied on, we have received the following statement of facts relative to the late unhappy misunderstanding among the principal officers of our Mediterranean squadron:—

"By virtue of a warrant issued by commodore Stewart, Commander in chief, &c, a Court Martial, composed of the following officers, viz.

Capt. M'Donough, President,
—— Ballard
—— Nicholson
Lt. Gallagher,
—— Page, } Members.

Benj. F. Bourne, Judge Advocate convened on board the frigate Guerriere, on the——day of——, for the trial of —, a marine, charged with having stabbed a man belonging to the Franklin.

"The Court, pursuant to order, continued its proceedings on board the Guerriere, until the evidence was closed and sentence passed, when it adjourned to meet on Shore at Naples, the next day in consequence of the indisposition of the Judge Advocate, where having revised and signed the record, the Court then adjourned, "without a day."

"The proceedings and sentence being sent to the commander in chief for his approbation (as the law requires) were by him declared illegal and of no effect —first, because the court had been held on shore, in disobedience of his order requiring it to be held on board the Guerriere; and secondly, that it had been held where the United States had no jurisdiction—consequently having no jurisdiction there over the offence charged against the prisoner, he was ordered to be discharged from arrest, and the proceedings against him annulled.

"The Commander in chief revived the court by signal to receive this communication, to which by way of remark he added, that, "satisfied these irregularities on the part of the court had proceeded from inadvertence, he should not further notice them at that time, but trusting that in any future proceeding they would be more observant of the laws and regulations provided in such cases, that culprits deserving punishment should not escape to the prejudice of the service"—or words to that effect.

"The Commodore considers the Court to have been dissolved, although he made no order to that effect, as is customary.

"The court were of opinion that this communication of the Commodore should form part of the record, and as he had not returned it to them, they requested it of him for that purpose, which was complied with; and the Court were further of opinion, that the language used by the Commodore in his communication, was a censure upon their proceedings—an unjustifiable interference with the solemn deliberations of the Court, who, as a body, were perfectly independent of his control, and without the pale of his reproof. Not having been dissolved by the Commodore's order, the Court still considered itself in existence, and resolved to convene again to vindicate its honor and dignity against the imputations of the Commander in Chief. The Court did meet, and a resolution was unanimously passed to that effect, but the squadron being ordered to sail, nothing further was done in it until its arrival at Gibraltar, when the Court was convened by signal from the President, to act upon the resolution, which was accordingly done, when it was sent to the commodore.

"It is (the commodore) considers the act of the members of the court as declared in language highly disrespectful to him as their superior officer—insulting to his rank and authority, and subversive of his power—that the court was no longer in being, he having, as he had an undoubted right to do, annulled its proceedings and discharged the prisoner.

That a signal made (while he was present) ordering the court to meet, was a contempt of his power, and the meeting of the officers for that object, an usurpation of authority to erect themselves into a tribunal contrary to the law, and for no other purpose than to bring him into contempt and to violate the fundamental rules enacted for the subordination and discipline of the service."

"The members of the court disavow such an intention, and offer their tribute of respect to the person and character of the commander in chief, but sustain the opinion of their corporated rights and the resolution founded thereon. The commander in chief declares the meaning to have been unlawful, the language disrespectful and insulting, suspends the officers from command, and prefers his charges, &c."

From the Baltimore Patriot, Oct. 4.

By Capt. Denny, of the schooner James H. McCulloh, from St. Thomas, we are put in possession of the following memorandum. He received it from Capt. Joseph King, commander of the regular republican brig of war General Gudanata, who boarded him off St. Thomas on the 30th Aug.

"On the 11th of July the squadron left Margaretta, after having embarked the British and German legion, amounting to about 1800 men. On the 15th the troops were landed a few miles to windward of the Moro, for the purpose of taking the city of Barcelona; on the morning of the 16th they marched for that purpose, and the same day about 11 A. M. the fleet weighed anchor, and sent in boats about 150 seamen to land on the shore to attack the heights of the Moro, who were attacked and fired upon while landing by about 60 infantry of the enemy, who immediately retreated as we rose the height. The place was taken by us, consisting of about 6 regular batteries, with 2 or 4 of temporary defence, mounting a number of 18's 24's, and small brass pieces Our loss, two wounded (not mortally) and a number of the enemy killed, 40 prisoners, and 150 deserters. The city of Barcelona was taken without loss.

On the 18th the forts of the Moro were blown up, guns destroyed and troops embarked; 30th sailed for Cumana—on the 2d August landed the troops a short distance from Cumana in the evening; & on the 3d A. M. the fleet got under way and shortly after commenced a cannonading on the flecheras and batteries, which was continued 3 days by the most part of the squadron, destroyed three of the flecheras and silenced some of their battery guns. The upper fort at Cumana was attacked by part of the troops who, after a warm action for an hour retreated, not being able to take possession of the same; the rest of the troops fell in with a party of Spaniards who intended to join the enemy, and out of about 300, 40 escaped to tell the news. Our loss in killed or wounded on shore, were about 40, in the fleet about 3 wounded, not dangerously. The place was evacuated in consequence of the difficulties attached to mounting battery guns on the heights, and the troops are marched.

On the 14th August, arrived at Margaretta, a part of Gen. Deversaux's command, consisting of about 5000 men. There are several men of war on their way out from England to join the squadron. A 74 named the General Devereaux, a 44, 2 frigates, 4 corvettes and 2 brigs, which are this in all probability have arrived.—The subscriptions have been made to a great amount in Liverpool and Dublin, supposed about two millions sterling."

The Ohio papers contain accounts of many deaths by bilious typhus fevers.

The mills of Brandywine Creek are stopped for want of water. Such a circumstance is not recollected for 30 years.

There are vessels in this port waiting for corn meal & cannot be supplied. There is plenty of corn in the mills, but it cannot be ground for want of water. This complaint is very general throughout the country.—Bost. Press.

The yellow fever had broken out among the British troops, at Kingston, Jamaica, and one regiment has lost above 80 officers and 170 privates.

Dreadful.—We just announced the arrival of 3000 troops at the Havana. They paraded in great pomp for about seven hours in the heat of the sun, and we are told that 400 of them were on the evening of that day sent to the hospital, to die of the yellow fever. It was thought that a majority of the persons composing this expedition would cease to be in less than a month!—Niles Reg.

BUENOS-AYRES, Aug. 6.

Under the above date, the following intelligence from Buenos-Ayres is received.

A new director, ad interim, went into office in Buenos Ayres, on the 10th of June, in the person of Don Jose Rondeau, Puerrydon not being able, on account of ill health, to remain in the situation until the apointment of a new director according to the forms of the constitution.

The American ship Horatio, Skinner, sailed June 14th, without a clearance; a brig, commanded by Capt. Galvis, was despatched to bring her back, but did not overtake her.

The Chili privateer Congress, laying in the port of Ensenada, was ran away with by her crew, it is supposed provided with an Artigas commission.

A Portuguese trader between Buenos Ayres and Monte Video, on her voyage to the latter place, having considerable money on board, was taken by an armed boat in the night, and the passengers landed on the beach.

Lord Cochrane having made an excursion along the coast of Peru to the northward, left the greater part of the squadron at Callao, under the command of admiral Blanco, who before his return left the station, but put into Valparaiso in want of provisions. The utmost activity prevailed to supply the fleet and make them renew the blockade, while Blanco was arrested to be tried by a court martial.

Lord Cochrane had made several captures, and taken several sums of money out of neutral vessels, after having ascertained them to be Spanish property.

We have much talk here of the war accounts from Gibraltar, respecting the Spanish expedition from Cadiz. God forbid we should have any fear of them.

Died, on the 23d August, on board the U. S. schooner Nonsuch, at the moment of her arrival at Port Spain, in the island of Trinidad, Commodore OLIVER H. PERRY. He was taken with the yellow fever on his passage from the town of Augustura, and although he was attended by two able physicians, he was reduced to the greatest extremity on the fourth day of his illness. Sensible of his approaching dissolution, he called his officers together, and communicated his last wishes.

He retained his faculties to the last, was perfectly collected and resigned, & submitted to his fate with great resolution and fortitude.

His remains were interred at Port Spain on the 24th of August, with naval and military honors. The troops of the Island, a great concourse of citizens together with the officers and crews of the John Adams and Nonsuch, formed the procession.

The funeral was splendid and imposing, and there appeared to be but one sentiment of mournful regret among all who assembled to witness this melancholy spectacle. The conduct of the governor, Sir Ralph Woodford, on this occasion was marked with distinguished respect towards the deceased, and every American should feel grateful to him for the honors which he paid to the remains of their gallant countryman.

It was the wish of the officers of the squadron, that the body should be immediately conveyed to the United States; but the surgeons were of opinion that it would be utterly impracticable.

NEW-YORK, Sept. 28.

The ships Ann, Capt. Crocker, and Hector, Capt. Gillender, went down the Bay yesterday, and put to sea this morning for Liverpool. The former we understand, has about 100 passengers most of whom are foreigners who had recently arrived here, and who are returning for want of employment; and the latter has, it is said, Mr. Wm. Cobbet and family on board. Mr. Cobbet will return to his native country in troublesome times; perhaps in season to lend a helping hand to the cause of reformation, and share with his friend Hunt in the honors and comforts of a prison.

FROM LOWER CANADA.

QUEBEC, Oct. 12th.

On Sunday morning, in the Cathedral Church, the Rev. W. Macaulay, was ordained Priest; and Mr. R. Ralph and Mr. J. Stoughton, were ordained Deacons by the Lord Bishop of the Diocese. The service of the day was performed by the Rev. Official Mountain, the Rev. J. L. Mills, the Rev. E. Leg[illegible], and the Rev. R. Knagg.

It may be remarked as a proof of the growing prosperity of our country, the great number of Steam Boats and the consequent facility for travelling they now afford on the River St. Lawrence. There are at present seven Steam Vessels, employed in navigating between Quebec and Montreal including those belonging to Messrs. Molson and Sons, to whose active exertions we are indebted for their first appearance in the Canadas. These vessels are all constructed on the most approved principles and several of them are fitted up in a style of neatness and comfort not inferior to any in America. Among others we observe the Steam Boat Caledonia, has again commenced running. She has undergone a thorough repair and can now vie with any boat in the river in point of accommodation for Passengers or swiftness of sailing. Though against a strong head-wind we understand she performed her last trip from Quebec to Montreal in the space of 35 hours, including a stop of two hours, at William Henry and the usual detention at Three Rivers.—Mont. Herald.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The folly of anticipating trouble.

Afflictions seen in prospective are more appalling than which they actually arrive. For there are few but are attended by some alleviating circumstances that deaden their force. Why then should we sour the present cup of happiness by anticipating trouble, that may never reach us, and in probabilities dependant only on a thousand contingent circumstances never likely to occur at once. The folly of doing so will be placed in a stronger light by the following anecdote:

A countrywoman set her daughter, a girl of fifteen, to bake, while she went to neighbour. After some stay she returned and found the oven sparkling hot, and her daughter in another apartment in the greatest agony and in tears. A sight so unexpected excited the tenderest sympathy in the maternal bosom, and solicitude for the cause. After much entreaty the daughter complied: "I was thinking, (said she,) if I was married, and should have a dear little child, and it should live to run about, and I should be baking as I am now, and I should go out for fuel, and should leave it alone, and it should take a chair, and should get up to the mouth of the oven, and should crawl in, and should burn itself to death, all to crisp, what a terrible thing it would be—Oh! oh! oh! dear; what should I do?"

From the Memoirs of the Philadelphia Society for promoting Agriculture.

On the duration of Posts, when their natural position is reversed.

On removing the old fence of my garden, to set a new one, about five years since, I found that the old fence was supported by a few posts that were forked, and the fork down, and that they were quite sound, while the rest were rotten and broken off.——The yard fence, (only five pannel) three parts of which were strong and sound, and likely to last for ten years more, were not forked, but from their being knotty, it was easy to see that they were top in the ground. I have made enquiry of the carpenter who built the fence, and he says the fence stood 20 or 21 years, and that it was the design of my predecessor to turn all posts top down, that would admit of it, the fact being known to him that they would last longer.

JOHN R. EENS.

Another specimen of the perfection to which the cutlery trade has been brought to in England, was given in July last, by Rodgers and sons, of Sheffield—an elegant knife in miniature, containing fifty instruments, moving on twenty springs and twenty-five joints, of the most exquisite workmanship, mounted in gold and mother of pearl. It employed the workman thirt. days of close application, is only five eighths of an inch in lengt , and does not weigh five penny weights. The following articles are contained in it:— 6 penknife blades, 2 stick knife blades, 1 grafting blade, 1 budding blade, 1 gold fruit blade, 2 pruning blades, 1 bow saw, 1 silver fruit blade, 1 double toothed saw, 1 button hook, 1 wood saw, 1 1 nail blade, 1 nail cleaner, 1 nail file, 1 gum lancet, 5 fleams, 1 double joint widdener, 1 double joint auger, 1 double joint timber scribe, 1 double joint punch, 1 horse picker, studded with gold, 2 gimblets, 1 awl, 1 chisel, 2 gouges, 1 gold six inch rule, 1 pair gold compasses, 1 gum picker, 1 pair tweezers, 1 pair scissors, 2 lancets, 1 gun screw, 1 leather punch, 1 gold tooth pick, 1 needle; 1 double joint cork-screw.

ALEXANDRIA IN EGYPT.

The vice roy, Mohammed Ali Pacha, conceived the design of digging a navigable canal from the Nile to Alexandria, by means of which large boats might be enabled to convey merchandize directly to Cairo, indepeudent of the changeableness of the weather which often impeded their progress to Rosetta and rendered the entrance of the Nile impassible.

The works commenced in October last—and their superintendence is committed to Mohamed Bey, who had the command of 300 troops destined to preserve order amongst the workmen, collected from the country, who are changed once a month. The waters of the Nile having increased more than had been expected, the labors were suspended and recommenced in the month of December. The workmen were augmented to 30,000; at present, the whole number employed amounts to 270,000 persons. The genius and activity of Ali Pacha promises to conduct this enterprize, so useful to commerce, in a short time to a glorious issue. The workmen are divided into eight divisions at the head of each is a bey with a certain number of troops. Besides these Ismail Pacha, with a corps of cavalry, patroles incessantly the whole line of divisions, to inspect the workmen and animate them in the performance of their labors. The length of the canal is to be 45 miles, its breadth 90 feet; but its depth has not been yet decided. Besides the Turkish engineers, several foreigners are also employed, amongst whom is Don Carlo Bilioti, a Neapolitan.

From the Baltimore American.

We should feel a strong repugnance to publish the following disgraceful circumstance, had it not come from a source whose veracity we cannot doubt. A stranger travelling to the westward about was taken ill on the Frederick road, near the Monocracy.—He applied at several places, but was denied admittance—he lay under a tree for some days, and on Friday last expired, probably from having been denied the rights of hospitality. His corpse remained from Friday till Tuesday last without interment—was not even enclosed in a coffin—and on that day a person in the neighborhood nailed some rough planks together, in which the remains were placed, and a few black persons offered to dig a grave for it, when the owner of the land refused its burial on his ground! The corpse was above ground when our informant left the place.

A letter from New-Orleans of the 23th ult. states that it had rained for the last three weeks almost incessantly. Business was extremely dull, and freights not to be had at any rate. The steam boat business was so much overdone, that the stock was "as bad as it could be."

UPPER-CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the THIRD, by the Grace of GOD of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Councellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to our Provincial Parliament, at our Town of York, on Monday the first day of November next ensuing, to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our Proclamation bearing date the twenty-fourth September WE thought fit to prorogue our Provincial Parliament, to the first day of November next ensuing, at which time at our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear, NOW KNOW YE that WE taking into our Royal consideration, the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council to relive you and each of you, of your attendance at the aforesaid; hereby convoking and by these presents convoking you and each of you, that on Thursday the ninth day of December next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada, and therein to do all may seem necessary, and herein fail not.

In testimony whereof, WE have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed. WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this twenty-sixth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, and in the sixtieth year of our reign.

P. M.

By Command of His Excellency.
D. CAMERON.
Secretary.

Executive Council Office,

IT is this day ordered by His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that to relieve as much as possible the Provincial Revenue, in future, from the charges attending the Granting of Land which it has hitherto sustained, the Fee on the Patent on all orders for Grants of Land, pronounced after this date, shall be according to the following Table:

	Sterling.
Two hundred Acres,	£16 17 6
Three hundred Acres,	24 11 7
Four hundred Acres,	32 5 8
Five hundred Acres,	39 19 9
Six hundred Acres,	47 13 10
Seven hundred Acres,	55 7 11
Eight hundred Acres,	63 2 0
Nine hundred Acres,	70 16 1
One thousand Acres,	78 10 2
Eleven hundred Acres,	86 4 3
Twelve hundred Acres,	93 18 4

The fees on 100 Acres, being the allowance most usually granted to Emigrants, are not to be increased, but to remain as before, viz. £5 14

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, Aug. 26.

At an advanced hour this morning, we received by a Flanders Mail, Brussels papers to Tuesday last, which state, that on the evening of the 18th numerous arrests took place in the city of Ghent, caused by the want or the irregularity of passports, and that among the persons so arrested were captains of recruiting parties, and a Saxon Baron, who were recruiting for the South American cause. Accounts from Brussels of the 21st inst. add, that a letter has been written by the Emperor of Russia, the address of which is not known, in which his Imperial Majesty, recognising the danger of Secret Societies, offers the assistance of 300,000 troops, if necessary, to guarantee the safety and independence of all the Sovereigns of Germany.

It is also said that a new Congress of Sovereigns is about to be held at Warsaw, on the invitation of the Emperor Alexander. The accounts from Carlsbad, by this conveyance, add nothing to what is already known.

August 27.

Three more defaulters, were announced this morning on Change, one of them, it is understood, on an extensive scale. Twenty have now been declared as, defaulters on this account, and many more are expected.

This morning Consols commenced at 71 3-4 went to 72, and fluctuated to 71 15 and 28 at noon. Upwards of £400 000 Stock was posted just before the defalcation we mentioned. This gentleman, who was a Bear for above £1,000 000 in stock, and whose differences are estimated at £50,000, is well known in public life, respected in private circles and is understood to have offered ten shillings in the pound.

Ministers, it seems, have announced their determination to make the letter from Sir Fras. Burdett to the Electors of Westminster the subject of a prosecution.

LONDON, Aug. 31.

It appears by letters to the 20th of May from the Cape of Good Hope, that the Caffres have been so completely discomfited in every situation to which they directed their attacks, that it is confidently expected they will be long prevented from making new aggressions on the British territory. We regret to state, that the scarcity not only of grain, but of all kinds of provision, was so great, that the governor had thought it prudent to restrict all the inhabitants, as well as the troops, to certain short allowances, until the arrival of supplies from England.

In consequence of this intelligence, government have dispatched 1000 barrels of flour to St. Helena, which has hitherto derived its provisions almost exclusively from the Cape of Good Hope.

LONDON, Sept. 1.

A Mail from Hamburgh arrived this morning, bringing papers to the 24th ult. They contain no intelligence of any interest. An article dated Copenhagen, Aug. 21, says, "The further deterioration of the Course of Exchange excites here general alarm and despondency. We are not able to explain the reason of it."

We understand that the affairs of the respectable Broker, alluded to in our paper of Friday last, and which caused so great a sensation in the city, were satisfactorily arranged at the Stock Exchange yesterday.

Mr. Keon has entered into a treaty with Mr. Harris, to perf-rm 20 nights at Covent Garden Theatre, after which he embarks for America.

Mr Phillipps the singer, has been engaged by the proprietors of Covent Garden Theatre.

FRANKFORT, Aug. 19.

The desire of insulting the Jews seems as if it was spreading all over Germany. Beginning at Wurtzburg, it has extended not only to Bamberg and Frankfort, but also to Darmstadt, Mentz, and even Prague where the Jews are very numerous. Our Senate, by way of precaution, still continues the measures of prevention that have been adopted at Wurtzburg.

HAMBURG, Aug. 17.

A rich banker of this city, M. Heck, who for some time occasionally manifested symptoms of derangement, has given a new proof of madness. His stealing a gold watch at the baths of Pyrmont can be explained upon no other ground. This is become a subject of general conversation. The possessor of thousands a pick pocket! This is a combination we do not often meet with.

The inclination against the Jews is very great here, and there is no doubt but it will manifest itself in acts of violence if government continues to favour them to the injury of the Christian inhabitants. Already many branches of commerce are exclusively in their hands, and there are no bounds to their usury. They are no longer confined to certain quarters but spread themselves every where, so that there is reason to apprehend they will soon be in possession of the best houses in the city, as they are this in the country.—For the moment they seem terrified, and endeavour to conceal a little the unsupportable arrogance by which they are characterised almost as much as by their insatiable avarice.

LIVERPOOL, Sept 4.

Extract of a letter from Lancaster, dated 3d Sept. received here yesterday morning.

"Mr. Hunt is here; and this morning moved the Judge on the Crown side (Bacon Wood) for an order to remove such of the Grand Jury as were related to the Manchester magistrates, against whom he meant to prefer bills of indictment for cutting and stabbing, &c. The Judge said he could not dismiss any of the Grand Jury, but had no doubt that when such bills were presented, such of the Grand Jury as were so situated would retire; and Mr. Bootle Wilbraham said, he, for one, should. The Judge, in his charge, told the Grand Jury, that if any such bills were so presented, and supported even by doubtful evidence, it was their duty to find the bills."

Mr. Nadin, the police officer of Manchester, has received a letter, dated London, 18th August, and signed "A Radical Reformer," wherein the writer says, "Your conduct for a length of time, but more especially last Monday, has outraged the feelings of every real friend to radical reform; therefore, it has been decided, at a meeting of the friends of reform, that it is highly expedient to rid the world of such a miscreant, and it is hoped that it will prove a salutary lesson to others. I can confidently assure you that you have but a few days to live."

The partiality of the Emperor of Hayti to England has been evinced on many occasions, but perhaps never more markedly that in the following incident:—A dispute arising at Cape Francois between a few English merchants and some others, respecting the settlement of some property, both parties appealed to the law, and the case was decided against our countrymen. These, however, instead of yielding submission to the constituted authorities, repaired to Christophe, and obtained a promise that the affair should be reconsidered. On the day appointed for the merchants to meet him, they were introduced into his presence, where they found the judges from whose decision they had made the appeal. The merchants were requested to sit down, while the judges were ordered to take their stands in certain parts of the room which he allotted them. The places which they thus occupied were immediately under some cocks, through which water occasionally issued to cool the apartment. The cocks were then instantly turned, and in this degraded situation the judges were compelled to remain with water streaming on their heads, and running over their bodies, until his majesty was pleased to liberate them. Having detained them in this condition for some time, they were dismissed with these observations; "I hope gentlemen, that by this time your heads are somewhat cool. When you gave your decision against these English merchants, they were rather too warm. But as they are now reduced to a more moderate temperature, you must reconsider this business and give your judgement accordingly." The affair was immediately re-examined; and the claims of the English, as might naturally be expected, were soon discovered to be just.—Bell's Mes.

On the 30th of Aug. a meeting was held at Clayton-square in Liverpool, which was attended by more than 10,000 persons. Col. Williams was called to the chair, and having stated the object of the meeting, Messrs. Shepherd, Wood, E. Smith, Bushton, and Crompton, severally addressed the people. An address was voted to the Prince Regent on the subject of reform; and a resolution adopted reprobating the measures pursued by the magistrates at the Manchester Meeting. The Chairman then mentioned that another meeting would be held in the same place for the express purpose of consideringut ne Manchester business; and the crowd dispersed without any riot.

LONDON, Sept. 4.

It is now ascertained, that as soon as the Spanish Cabinet had been made acquainted with the decided and angry language of the American Secretary, Mr. Adams, and had taken an opportunity to deliberate on the reports of Mr. Onis, in which the king was told the Americans insisted on the payment of their long out standing debt, that possibly they would enforce it, and besides aid the South Americans, it was resolved to act upon the advice given, and at once to make a transfer of the Floridas, whilst yet something could be had for them, and before they were seized by force; for Mr. Onis assured them that no further forbearance could be expected from the Washington Government, as it was then constituted. No sooner was this point settled than the king was informed that the transfer, besides paying the debt and stopping the mouths of the boisterous and clamorous Americans, might also be used as a medium through which he could display his royal munificence to some of his own most faithful and deserving subjects. The hint was taken, and in consequence there of three special grants were made, of which a short outline may not be unacceptable.

First Grant.—The king granted to the duke D'Alagon (a great favorite, & here considered as one of those obsequious appendages necessary at the court of a young monarch fond of the fair sex) a tract of land with boundaries clearly defined, in East Florida, of which, though no regular survey had been made, it was thought that ready and advantageous sales would be easily made.

Second.—The king graciously bestowed on Count Punon Rostre a tract nearly of the same dimensions as the above. This grant was at the time considered as the safest, because the Count had rendered some essential services to the crown, but that of the Duke was very much scoffed at by all those high minded Castilians, who were aware of the sacrifices by which it had been obtained.

Third.—The king also gave to Vargas, his private treasurer, a grant "comprising all the lands in either of the Floridas belonging to the crown of Spain, and which had not been included in the preceding grants." This broad and sweeping grant was received by the grandees with surprise and jealous indignation, but Vargas and his friends endeavoured to convince them that the royal donation was not so much intended to make the fortune of himself and his associates, as it was that it should operate as a grand political coup de main against the executive of the United States, because in the event of Spain being obliged to cede the sovereignty of the Floridas, the king was determined the Washington government should have no soil in the Floridas to dispose of.

In the month of June last year, Ferdinand had the satisfaction to learn that the American Cabinet were apprised of these tokens of royal munificence, and by the diplomatic intercourse that immediately took place, he also discovered that matters were assuming a serious aspect.—He therefore found himself constrained to issue a royal order, in which he laconically states, that "for imperious political reasons he revokes the cession made to the three individuals above mentioned, and commands them immediately to give back their grants"

The Count Punon Rostre and the treasurer Vargas promptly acquiesced in the decree, and returned to the king their grants, but the duke d'Alagon, who in Madrid is considered as a cunning old fox, ventured to remonstrate with his lord and master, and stated, that as an agent had been sent to America for the purpose of selling these lands, and as bona fide sales had actually been effected of part thereof, it was not possible to revoke them without a breach of good faith, that might affect the national character; adding however, that he would suspend further sales.

Ferdinand who is not in the habit of allowing any of his courtiers, even those who have most witnessed his foibles, to disobey him with impunity, intimated to the duke, that if he did not conform to the literal tenor of the Royal Decree, he might calculate on incurring his utmost displeasure.

Thus, for the present has terminated the most curious affair that ever disgraced the Spanish Court. A splendid fortune would have been overturned by the royal decree, but the objects of the King's intended munificence are now viewed with contempt by all parties.—Some other strange transactions in this mysterious affair, of which we are yet to see the denouement shall form the subject of another communication.

Literary.—According to the latest accounts from the literary circles it appears that Professor Leslie who, it was expected, would succeed the illustrious Playfair, in the chair of Natural Philosophy in the University of Edinburgh, will, in all probability, fail of that object; the celebrated Chalmers, of the Tron Church, Glasgow, having offered himself as a candidate to the town council for that station. Mr. Chalmers is perhaps not less remarkable for his acquirements as a mathematician & natural philosopher than as a preacher.

A third volume of the MSS. of Herculaneum is in the press, and will be soon published. Sir H. Davy is expected in September to make his experiments with the chemical compositions which he has invented to unroll and decypher the ancient Latin MSS. of this collection. It has been observed that the Latin MSS. on papyrus are covered with a certain varnish, which increases the difficulty of unrolling them, and which the Greek MSS. have not.

DUBLIN, Sept. 3.

The Duke of Wellington Packet proceeded on her voyage from Liverpool to this port, on Saturday last in the afternoon, full of passengers, and between three and four hundred of the lower orders of working laborers on the deck and in the hold. On Monday night last, when off the Kish Light, a sudden squall came on which threw her on her beam ends, when a scene of confusion ensued, which baffles all description, the skylights and hatchway being off, the water rushed in torrents to the cabin and hold in the latter of which were two horses, who became unmanageable, one of which the people in the hold were obliged to put to death in their own defence, and the other was so cut and hacked, that he is past recovery. Many people were washed off the deck, some of whom were unfortunately drowned, and a few smothered in the hold, and the boat, which hung at the stern containing a few of those unfortunate people, was washed away with all it contained—luckily the greater part were saved, but two fine children sunk to rise no more, whose mother, with an infant in her arms, was along with them in the boat when she was washed away, was saved by the presence of mind of some of the passengers, and now survives to mourn her loss. After undergoing unparalleled hardships, the vessel (not being able to make Dublin, the wind being so adverse) bore away for Holyhead, where she arrived on Tuesday. It is supposed there were twelve or fifteen lives altogether lost, but the exact number cannot be ascertained.

The Sultan Katte Ghery.

Friday week, a meeting was held in the Trades Hall, Glasgow, for the purpose of hearing the Sultan Katte Ghery, of Caucasus and Crimea, give an account of the religious state of his countrymen, and of the plan which he proposed to carry into effect for their instruction, under the patronage of the Emperor Alexander and of the Scottish Missionary Society. The Hall not being able to contain the crowds of highly respectable people who pressed for admittance, the meeting adjourned to the College Church, which was soon crowded to excess. James Mackenzie, Esq having been called to the chair, Mr. Liddle, Assistant Secretary of the Scotish Missionary Society, opened the business by reading some extracts of correspondence, and a minute of the above mentioned Society relating to the proposed mission to the Crimea. The Sultan then addressed the meeting in very good English, considering the short time he has resided in the country; he gave a most interesting account of the state of the Tartar and Caucasian nations, containing at least 80 millions of people, mostly Mahomedans, speaking several different languages and in a state of gross ignorance, some of them without a written language, or characters to express words in writing. He proposes establishing a mission in the Crimea, and the Scotish Missionary Society have promised him four suitable persons to go out with him, to instruct the people in the principles of Christianity, the art of reading, and other useful arts. He proposes also to take with him a printing press and types, with the view of printing the necessary elementary books for the education of the people, and ultimately the Holy Scriptures in their own languages. We do not recollect ever to have witnessed greater interest excited by any speaker, than the vast assembly seemed to feel in the pathetic address of this interesting stranger. The meeting was then addressed in animated speeches by the Rev. Dr. Burns, the Rev. Mr. Craig of Edinburgh, the Rev. Dr. Chalmers, and the Rev. Mr. Lapslie, at the close of whose speech we left the meeting, but we understand the Sultan rose to address them again. A committee was named for the purpose of taking measures to assist the Scotish Missionary Society in relation to this particular object.—Glasgow Chronicle.

On Wednesday last, a bull, cow and calf of the breed of Purneah, a district of Bengal, were brought to Dumfries from Carnitta. They are very small, not larger than a Leicester sheep, but extremely handsome, and very gentle. The calf is about ten weeks old, and was produced at sea. While in the King's Arms stables, they excited considerable interest amongst the curious and those concerned in agriculture, and were much admired for the symetry of their shape. The grass upon which they were fed during their voyage, resembled fiorin, but appeared to be of finer texture, and was perfectly fresh and sweet flavoured. They were also supplied with grass, a sort of grain not unlike our pease. The animals, notwithstanding the length of the voyage, were in high condition, and we hope they will thrive in their new country.—They were sent over by Robert Cutler Fergusson, Esq. and have since been taken to Craigdarrock, the seat of his brother.—Dumfries Journal.

LONDON, Aug. 7.

Guildhall.—The justice room was yesterday crowded to excess, through the anxiety of the public to witness the examination of Henry Stent, a butcher, residing at No. 4. Arabella-row, Pimlico, who was taken into custody the evening before, at the Saracen's Head, Snow-hill, for an attempt to murder his wife, as reported in our paper of yesterday. The woman had eloped from him in the month of March, 1813, with a fellow of the name of Seaton, a broker in that neighborhood, who had been the intimate friend of the husband, and nearly supported by him and his family.—The guilty pair left the country for America, and shortly after their arrival at Philadelphia, Seaton deserted her, leaving her in great distress in a foreign land; with much difficulty she procured a passage to England, and, after encountering great perils at sea, arrived at Liverpool, from whence she proceeded to London, and wrote to her husband from the Saracen's Head; the circumstances that followed are fully detailed by the witnesses produced against the prisoner.

Previous to the arrival of the Magistrate (Mr. Alderman Heygate,) a message was despatched from the office to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, to learn the state of the wife, and whether she was able to make her deposition; to this inquiry the following note was returned:—

"This is to certify, that Mrs. Stent has passed a good night, and is better this morning, but cannot be considered out of danger at present; as rest is a principal object in the treatment of her case, it would be better to defer her examination.

"There is no immediate danger to be apprehended.

"H. BENWELL, House Surgeon."

Bartholomew's Hospital, Aug. 6. 1 o'clock

The prisoner was then placed at the bar; he is a young man, about 28 years old, was respectably dressed in black, with a white waistcoat, and appeared perfectly cool and collected.

The first witness called was Thomas Pithouse, waiter at the Saracen's Head, who stated that the woman came to the Inn by their Liverpool coach, between 10 and 11 o'clock on Thursday morning, had breakfasted and desired to be furnished with paper, &c. to write a letter, she wrote one, which was sent by a porter to Pimlico; she staid within doors the remainder of the day, and about half past six in the afternoon, after she had had her tea, the prisoner arrived, and on inquiring for Mrs. Stent, was shewn into the room to her; there were no other persons in the room but themselves; shortly after, he (the witness) being in the passage leading to the back-yard, heard a violent shriek, and immediately a second, and before he and his fellow servant could get to the room door, a third; they both rushed into the room, his fellow servant was first, who immediately called out, "The man has got a knife!" the woman at the same time cried out, "Oh he will kill me!" His companion made a snatch to get the knife, but missing his hold, the man altered the direction of the knife, and grasping it full in his hand, stabbed the woman with great violence in the throat; he then said, "I have accomplished my purpose; I wish for nothing but to suffer; I know I shall suffer." The wife replied, "Yes you have Henry, and I freely forgive you, come and kiss me;" the prisoner then knelt down, and kissed her twice, when she returned again, "I hope the law will not take all of you, you are the best of husbands and I am the very worst of wives and I hope my fate will be a warning to all bad wives." She was then taken on a shutter to the hospital; on her way thither she was calling on her dear Henry, wishing him to kiss her, and begging him to give her his hand, one of the persons attending took hold of her extended hand, which she then closed most affectionately, saying, "God bless you, I shall now die happy;" mistaking the stranger's hand for that of her husband.

At this part of the evidence, which was given with much feeling on the part of the witness, the prisoner's fortitude seemed to be quitting him, his lips quivered, tears stood in his eyes, and his whole countenance evinced he was greatly agitated and affected; but after a short interval, he recovered his composure.

Thomas Turner, the porter, said he was the first person in the room; he saw the wife on her back on the floor and the man kneeling on her stomach. On his coming in, the man rose up, and perceiving he had a knife, he (the witness) drew back, and before he could get to the prisoner to seize him, he stabbed the woman in the neck, as described by Pithouse. He then said, "don't be alarmed; I will not hurt any of you; I have accomplished my purpose;" he then let the knife drop from his hand—on the witness observing to him what a rash man he was to commit such a deed and that he signed his own death warrant, the prisoner replied, he was perfectly satisfied; she had been a bad woman; on which his wife said, "indeed I have; I freely forgive you, and hope no harm will come to you." This witness also corroborated Pithouse's account of the affecting scene which subsequently took place between the husband and wife, and the expressions of penitence and affection used by the latter while being conveyed to the hospital.

Hodson, an assistant at Giltspur-street Compter, was sent for to take the prisoner. On his entering the room, Stent immediately said, "I am the man," and surrendered himself without making the smallest resistance. On searching him there were found only a few shillings, part of a razor case, which he had used as a sheathe for the knife while in his pocket, and the letter he had received from his wife in the morning, which was in these words:—

"August 5, 1813.

Oh, Henry, I have suffered more than I can tell you in crossing the seas; there was nothing but storms and trouble, and the ship was lost. But you, perhaps, already know that I have put my trust in God for safety in crossing them again, and have got safe to England once more to throw myself at your feet and implore your pity, if you cannot pardon me. But oh! for one moment consider before my doom is fixed. Indeed, I am penitent and sorry for my sins, and you will hear my prayer for mercy, as well as the God which I have offended. But if my story was told by any other than me, you would see what a villain he was. If you find you cannot forgive—but oh! that thought makes me tremble; do not let my dear father and mother know you have heard of me, for that would bring their trouble afresh to their mind (that is, if their lives are spared,) and I hope I have not got that to answer for. All I wish is, to pass the remainder of my days in obscurity or in the workhouse, if you think proper, or in any other place. Do not desert me, for God's sake do not. I have come from America, landed on Tuesday morning, and at night left Liverpool, and this morning got to the Saracen's Head, Snow-hill, where I shall await your answer with the greatest distress. If you please to let me have some of the clothes I left, as I have not a gown to wear. Oh! Henry, think well before you say what shall be my fate—only ask your own heart—do not tell any body that you know of my being in England; but think what a journey for a lone woman to take. I do not know when you will get this; but if you can let me know to night what is to be my lot—Indeed, I will be content on bread and water if I can obtain your forgiveness. Oh! Henry, be not deaf to my prayers. I know it is a crime I have often heard you say you never would forgive—only write to say you will pardon me, and do what you like after; but do not let any of my friends know that I have wrote to you—grant me that request if you cannot grant any more—let me know, for I had only two pounds five shillings to bring me to London.

"One o'clock." "MARIA STENT."

Hodson also produced the knife with which the bloody deed was committed; it was one of the common sticking knives for killing calves, and was covered with blood up to the hilt; the point and edge appeared turned, as if it had struck against a bone, the woman having been stabbed in the side and stomach before the witness entered the room.

On the prisoner being taken to the Compter, he asked for pen and paper, and wrote a note to his sister; this was taken to her by Hodson, but he thought it right to bring the note back after she had read it. The note was then produced, and read as follows:—

"DEAR ELIZA—I have been to the Saracen's Head, and seen Maria, and from what has passed between us I am now in Giltspur-street Compter. I must leave it to you to break the matter in the best way you can to our dear father and mother.

"HENRY STENT."

On the other side was written—"I have stabbed her, but would not put that on the other side for fear of shocking you too suddenly. It is no use to come to-night, as you cannot be admitted, but I shall be glad to see some of you in the morning."

This being the whole of the evidence at present to be produced, the prisoner was asked if he wished to say any thing for himself? on which he bowed respectfully to the alderman, and simply replied, "No Sir." He was then remanded till Monday next, and was conveyed back to the Compter in a coach, accompanied by his brother and his cousin.

Mrs. Stent has been visited by her sisters and other members of her family who feel it a duty, whatever have been her failings, to offer her the consolations of affection in her present melancholy situation. It seems that she had received five stabs, one on her arm, another on her hand, a third on her breast, a fourth in the right side, and a fifth in the neck. That in the right side is the most to be apprehended; but inflammation can be prevented, there is no serious danger. Mr. Stent remains resigned to his fate. He says he anticipates death; and, indeed, shall welcome it as a relief from the misery in which he has felt ever since his wife's desertion. He was surprised on hearing that he inflicted more than one wound, and said he was only conscious of having given one stab. His friends have endeavoured to console him; but he says he needs no consolation, as his mind is perfectly easy; he still seems to feel an affection for his wife, and hopes that if she is to die she may not linger in pain. The crime of which she had been guilty, he says, was one which he could not forgive; and the love he bore her rendered it more agonizing to his feelings. The unhappy man seems painfully alive to his dishonor, and to the ingratitude with which he has been treated; and, if the crime of which he has been guilty can be excused under any circumstances, perhaps his case possess the strongest claims to that excuse. We can imagine no affliction so great as the infidelity of a wife, in whose bosom a husband may have deposited his dearest affections and his honor, and who, brutalized by the suggestions of illicit passion, forgets the sacredness of her duty, and plunges herself into infamy and her husband into a state of wretchedness and despair, which in a sensitive mind, can admit of no mitigation.

Mrs. Stent, we understand, is about six and twenty years of age—her husband eight and twenty. She is a woman of agreeable person and pleasing manners.

He was tempted to a disclosure of the particulars of his life in the course of a conversation with one who was much interested in every thing that concerned his family. From his wifes' infancy he had known her; they were play-fellows from the time that she was four years old; he was then six; and there grew up between them, at least upon his side, an attachment incapable of being broken. Upon her side, we apprehend, that though the interruption took place, and under circumstances the most dreadful, it is now beyond the power of human effort to dissolve or to diminish the strength of her love. It is impossible to read the letter of the poor wretched penitent without feeling a conviction that she hates the destroyer of her happiness, as well as the crime that separated her from the bosom of her husband.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

From the Charleston Courier, of Sept. 27.

Summary process.—It frequently happens in this community, that men of influence in commercial affairs complain in a low tone of voice, not to be heard afar, of the hardships they experience from the arbitrary measures of the officers of government, without seeking redress from the proper source, where a remedy would no doubt, be applied, in most if not in all cases. By such conduct, they betray a passive supineness very culpable, if not criminal, in yielding without resistance to such rigorous measures as are calculated to oppress and distress those who possess less influence, and fewer resources.

On Saturday last, there were several custom house bonds payable at the branch bank of the United States—a considerable number went out; whether from negligence, or want of means at the time, it matters not. The principals to these bonds rested their hopes on the prevailing custom, of paying only for protest, in the event of receiving a letter on the succeeding day, (Monday, in this instance) which is paying liberally for an indulgence until the following Thursday, when writs would be issued; but in lieu of the letter on Monday, or the writs on the succeeding Thursday, what was the process? Immediately after the bonds were sent, bail writs were issued against principals and sureties. The deputy marshal was busily employed until a late hour on Saturday night. Some of the parties were taken prisoner (in the name of the United States) when about retiring to rest with their families. One of the victims of this despotic measure was surety on a bond—a resident here, with a regular establishment—he was obliged to abandon his motherless offspring, and run about town for an hour and a half to seek a security, and pay five fees, or go to gaol. To aggravate the evils still further, when 10 o'clock on Monday morning arrives, an order is obtained for judgment, and the parties are saddled with about 70 dollars expenses, besides the fees of the deputy, amounting to about 10 dollars more.

BATON-ROUGE. Sept. 4.

We have been informed that distressing circumstance occurred a few days since on the plantation of Mr Sherburne, late American consul in France, now a resident of West Baton-Rouge, about 18 miles above this place.

It is reported, that whilst that gentleman and family were sitting in the house, the bank suddenly gave way and the house was precipitated into the river, and it was with the greatest difficulty the family escaped from the the jeopardy to which they were exposed; no lives, however, we are happy learn, have been lost. One of the children of that gentleman was thrown into a chasm of the ground, from which he was happily rescued by means of a rope let down to him, when the cavity was immediately filled by other ground falling in; another young man, also one of the family, was taken into a boat from a piece of ground on which he stood in the middle of the water; all the furniture is said to be lost.

Important News From Spain.

The brig Joseph, arrived at this port last evening from Bordeaux, having left there on the 8th of September. F. Columbus Fenwick, Esq. came passenger, and is bearer of despatches from the American minister at the court of Madrid, which place he left the 23 of August.—The grand council of Castile had assembled and decided NOT TO RATIFY THE TREATY WITH AMERICA, and a courier was immediately dispatched to the Spanish ambassador in London. The courier passed through Bordeaux on the 29th of August with the official tidings of the nonratification. Mr. Fenwick is bearer of despatches to our government to the same effect.

From the National Intelligencer, Oct 7.

The question respecting the Spanish treaty appears to be at length settled; information has reached Philadelphia that the king of Spain has definitively refused to ratify the treaty for the cession of the Floridas, and has determined to send a special agent to assign his reasons for not doing it.

From the complexion of this information, though we have heard nothing officially on the subject, we incline to think it may be relied on. We shall however reserve further remarks on the subject until it is made certain.

Should such be the result as is reported, we have already expressed our opinion of the course the United States would be justified in taking; and we have seen no reason to change it. On the contrary, there is the most unequivocal evidence that the sense of the country as far as expressed, is in favor of that course.

FROM LOWER CANADA.

QUEBEC, October 18.

We have been favoured with Bermuda papers brought by the Mersey, to the 3d inst.—by them we are sorry to learn that a very alarming fever was raging at St. George's; several Officers of the Army and Navy, and gentlemen of the town had fallen victims to it—as also from 40 to 50 soldiers of the garrison, and several seamen from vessels in the harbour.

In the list of deaths we notice the following:—Doctor C. Ryan, Staff Surgeon; Mr. Joseph Burges; Mr. Hogan, first Clerk in the Ordnance Office; Capt. Mercer, Commanding Royal Engineers; Lieut. O'Mara, R. N.; Mr. T. Poole; Mr. Jameson; Mr. J. Wrighley Lewes, of the Custom House; Mr. G. Ollerhead, of the Commissariat; Mr. C. R. Humble; Mr. H. A. Black, Master of St. George's Academy, M. J. L. Millar; Mrs. Phillips, wife of T. Phillips, Ordnance Storekeeper.

Laudable Spirit.—A very handsome subscription, amounting to nearly £250 currency, has been raised at Fredericton, New Brunswick, for the purpose of assisting a number of Welch Families in forming a settlement between the Madame Keswick and the Nashwack, to be called the Cardigan Settlement.

A person acquainted with the construction of Log-Houses, has been employed to assist them—a quantity of bark has been procured, and other preparations made to commence building immediately.

Saint John's (N. F.) Aug. 10.

Extract of a letter from a Merchant in Liverpool, to his correspondent in this place, dated 22d June, 1819 —

"I am happy to inform you the duties on Oil, Blubber, and Seal Skins, imported from Newfoundland, and the tonnage duty on vessels to and from the said Island, are suspended until the 5th July, 1824, which I have no doubt you will be pleased to hear."

We learn by a Schooner arrived this morning from Forte Bay, Labrador, that some time last month H. M. Ship Turner, was set ashore by the current, during a thick fog, at Barge Point, on that coast, and was obliged to cut away her main and mizen masts, and throw her guns overboard, before she could be got off again. She afterwards obtained two spars, and having refitted, proceeded to the eastward.

August 19.

Accounts from the Labrador, and from the northward, southwards and westward of that coast, all agree that the catch of fish is at present very fair.

We have learn that Col Arnold, and two other officers of the Engineer Department have arrived at St. John, in the armed brig Chebucto, from whence they will proceed to Grand Manan, with an intention of fixing upon some position on the island to fortify: We are happy that Government has, at length, turned their attention to this important island, as from its situation, it must necessarily command the entrance of the Bay of Fundy, and in the result of a war give the party possessing it a decided advantage in this quarter.—*N. YORK, NOVEMBER 4, 1819.

We have been obligingly favored with the following copy of an official circular to Half Pay Officers.

(CIRCULAR.)

War Office,
23d July, 1819.

SIR,

It having been determined, that Officers entitled to Half Pay, may in certain cases receive an allowance equal thereto, together with emoluments of places or employments of a civil nature; I am directed by the Secretary at War, to acquaint you for the information of Half Pay Officers to whom you are agent, that any such Officer holding any place or employment of profit under the Crown, the net annual emoluments, of which do not exceed three times the amount of the highest rate of Half Pay attached by regulation to the rank, in virtue of which, he is entitled to Half Pay, may, upon application to the Secretary at War, be permitted to receive a Military allowance equal to and instead of his Half Pay, upon making an affidavit in the following form viz:

I, A. B. do swear, that I had not between the day of and the day of any Military place, or any employment of profit, in any Military Department under His Majesty, besides (here specify the Military Commission or employment on the Staff, or in the Garrison, or in the Colonies, inor any civil place or employment of profit under His Majesty, except (here specify the civil place or employment,) and that the net annual emoluments of (here repeat the net civil place or employment,) do not exceed (here state the annual amount of three times the highest rate of Half Pay attached to the rank, in virtue of which, the Officer receives Half Pay.)

You will further apprize them, that if they hold any such civil place or employment, the net annual emoluments of which exceed three times, but fall short of four times the amount of Half Pay, they may, upon application to the Secretary at War, at the end of the year, receive so much of their Military allowance as, together with those net annual emoluments, may be equal to four times the amount of such Half Pay, upon making affidavit in the following form:

I, A. B. do swear, that I had not between the day of and the day of any Military place, or any employment of profit, or any Military Department under His Majesty, besides, (here specify the Military Commission or employment in the Staff, or in the Garrisons, or in the Colonies,) nor any civil place or employment of profit under His Majesty, except, (here specify the civil place or employment,) and that the net emoluments received or to be received by me in respect of (here repeat the civil place or employment,) from the day of to the day of together with the portion of my Military allowance now claimed by me, do not exceed (here state 4 times, the amount of the highest rate of Half Pay attached to the rank, in virtue of which, the Half Pay is claimed.)

I am directed to add, that the arrangement is not to have a retrospective operation beyond the 25th December 1818.

(Signed) W. MURRAY.

On Saturday, the 6th inst. a daughter of Mr. William Ketchieson, Junior, aged six years, left the dwelling of her father, who is a respectable farmer in the township of Sidney, and went to a neighbouring house. As she did not return home the family became alarmed, and summoned the people of the neighborhood to their assistance early next morning. A search was immediately set on foot and prosecuted with unremitting assiduity during the six following days by the relatives, & the inhabitants of Thurlow, Sidney and Ameliasburgh—but these exertions were unsuccessful, and all hopes of discovering the child were nearly abandoned—A party, however, assembled on Sunday the 17th, with a determination to make another and a final effort to ascertain the fate of the unfortunate girl, and towards the close of the day, after a diligent search, a young man named Cummins found her leaning against a tree, about two miles from the place where it appears she had entered the wood; she was alive, but in a very weak and exhausted state.—He took her in his arms, and quickly restored her to her despairing and afflicted parents. She said that on returning homewards from the neighbour's house she had insensibly strayed into the woods, and had in vain attempted to regain the beaten path—that while in the woods, she supported life by means of the berries and acorns, which she found in her way, and that on the approach of night she lay down under logs.—When the coldness of the nine days & nights during which she was exposed to the wind and frequent rains, is considered, her preservation may well be accounted extraordinary and providential. The humane conduct of the inhabitants of the above named townships is above all praise. Many came upwards of 15 miles to render their assistance in rescuing the little innocent from the grasp of death, and from 150 to 250 persons attended daily.

DIED;

On Thursday the 14th inst. after a short illness, Lawrence Hagerman, Esq. aged 52 years. The character of this gentleman through life was marked by rectitude of principle and propriety of conduct. He was scrupulously exact, and honorable in his private business, unassuming in his manners, and distinguished by a pious discharge of the duties enjoined by our Holy Religion.—His unexpected death, while in the apparent possession of a robust frame, and unbroken constitution, is a heavy lot to the domestic circle wherein his heartly happiness was centered, and leaves a melancholy blank in the community of which he was a valuable and unobtrusive member.—Ib.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Eastport Sentinel.

An improvement, in curing fish, having lately come to my knowledge, I beg leave to communicate it to the public through your paper:—that improvement depends on the judicious use of alum on salted fish; when duly prepared, and salted, put one quarter of a pound of alum at the time of salting; prepare the alum by pulverizing and dissolving it in water, and then pour the solution into the tubs, among the fish, whether intended for drying, smoking or sending off in barrels. The alum thus used on fish for drying, will prevent the salt from deliquescing (or giving) in damp weather; will render them firm, and preserve their weight and flavour; pickled and smoked herrings will be equally benefited.

MISSOURI TOLERATION.

Mob at Boon's Lick.—A most shameful outrage was committed about the middle of July last, on the person of Mr. Humphrey Smith, and his wife, living near Franklin, Missouri Territory. Mr. Smith is opposed to slavery, and amidst the turbulence which manifested itself at that place, had the hardihood to declare his intention to support the cause of freedom, and that he would do all in his power to prevent the admission of slavery into that territory when it should be admitted into the union as a state. In consequence of which, his house was beset in the night by a mob of slave holders, who dragged him out of his bed, beat him with clubs, and inflicted from twenty to thirty lashes on his body with a green withe. Mrs. Smith, springing from her bed to assist her husband, was knocked down with a club, and otherwise abused in a shocking manner.

Mr. Smith is a native of New Jersey. He moved to Boon's Lick three years ago, and settled on the public lands. At the late sales he was outbid by a slaveholder, and lost his improvements.

The mob declared their intention "to kill, or drive out of the country," any man who should open his mouth against slavery. It is in this way the Missourians intend to show their unanimity of sentiment; and it is from the fear of such proceedings that the public sentiment of that territory has heretofore had so much the appearance of that character.

Indiana.—A letter from the neighborhood of the famous seat of the Harmonists, under charge of Mr. Rapp, says—"This society goes on with great success, and manufactures almost every thing—children excepted. It is said that a restriction has been had, and though numbers of married men & women sleep in the same house, it is greatly to the credit of this people, that, (believing it right to refrain,) only one or two children have been born in their settlement in the last five years.—Duchess Observer.

It is now contemplated to open a Canal between New-York and Philadelphia, by way of the Raritan and Delaware Rivers. We have long wondered why this enterprize, as well as a Canal from Barnstaple to Bizzard's bay, and another from the Delaware to the Chesapeake Bay, have not been opened. A moment's reflection, it has appeared to us, would not only point out their practicability, but by and the public good, the immense profits that would accrue to such individuals as should embark their property in the undertaking. Patriotism, as well as private interest, would seem to stimulate the accomplishment of these important objects.—Boston Commercial Gazette.

Wonderful Boy.—Mr. Christopher Bartlett, of this town, has a son now three years of age, who at thirty-two months old, was sent to school for the first time. Without any previous instruction, he acquired a competent knowledge of the alphabet in two hours; and so rapid did he learn the combination of letters and syllables into words, that at the end of two or three days he surpassed in spelling the best scholars in the school, and maintained his place for five successive days at the head of the first class; and until his father, alarmed at the visible declension of his health, took him thence, and forbade him the use of his book. Immediately on learning the alphabet, he could readily spell without mistake the longest word, no matter of how many syllables it was composed, provided there were no silent letters in it.—Elizabethtown, Essex co. Patriot.

The population of Bombay has increased since 1801, from 160 to 180 thousand; of which 1-8 are Mussulmen, 1-6 of the east of Parsis, 1-32 christians, and the rest Hindoos. The number of men exceeds that of women, except of the christians, who are the only class in which polygamy is not allowed.

R. Pryce, a young man who was clerk to Martin, Son and Hughes London, is accused of committing forgeries in his employers to the amount of upwards of 80,000 dollars. He had absconded, and it was reported to America.

Remarkable Death.—On the 25th September, a young man at Burlington, N. J. ate a piece of honey-comb, in which a bee was concealed. While in the act of swallowing it, the bee stung him in the throat, which swelled so as to occasion, within half an hour, his death by suffocation.

Lentils.—The first experiment that we have heard of being made with this crop in our neighborhood, has been by Mr. Charles H. Hern, of Bern; and the result is flattering. He sowed 3 quarts on an eighth of an acre of ordinary soil in May, & has gathered 3 and a half bushels of seed, weighing 65 lbs. per bushel, more than 37 for 1. Lentils answer all the purposes of pease, and are an ameliorating crop.—Alb. Argus.

Ruta Baga.

THE Upper Canada Agricultural Society has received some good seed of the Yellow Swedish Turnip or Ruta Baga. The quantity being small, the members of the Society will have the preference in the purchase of it (at cost price.)

This valuable root is peculiarly useful as a late spring food for cattle and other stock, at a time when generally all other succulent food is exhausted. Purchasers of the seed are requested to communicate to the Society their observations on the culture, produce and employment of the product. The seed to be had by applying to R. C. HORNE

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, August 24.

Melancholy Event.—On Saturday evening, Aug. 7, six boatmen from Hoylake took a boat and went on Hoylake bank, at low water to dig for copper, supposed to have been left from a wreck. Two of the party, Joseph Little and Samuel Sincock, by some mischance separated, it is supposed five miles from their companions, who, at night, on the return of the tide, got into their boat, but exerted themselves for a considerable period, by repeated shouting, and by sailing round the bank in different directions to endeavour to discover them.—When the party first separated they agreed to meet at a certain place, which it is supposed some of them had mistaken.

As they could not swim, and the tide was gradually surrounding them, they had to endure, for a considerable time, the horrible feelings that must have been excited by the certainty of their miserable fate. It was midnight, which must have increased their despondency.

In this dreadful situation it would appear that they were anxious their bodies should be found, for they fixed shovels in the sand, to which they tied themselves with their shirts, their handkerchiefs, and their hathands. The strength of the tide, or their own struggling, must have loosened the shovels from the sand as the poor men were found dead next few morning tied to their shovels, within a few yards of the spot, where, from appearances, they had in all probability fastened themselves.

Such quantities of that delicate fish, the Red Mullet, have been caught in Weymouth Bay, that they sell at one penny each, which formerly were sold there at half a crown; 5000 were taken in one night—an instance never known before.

It may be curious to remark the in roads which the sea is constantly making on various parts of the eastern coast of this country, particularly in Holderness. In 1786, the Church of Mapleton was distant from the cliff, 28 chains 71 links. In 1801, 26 chains 95 links; so that within the above period, the land has lost 311 yards.

Christianity in India.—The daily increase of pious officers in the army in India, and the truly laudable manner in which some of them employ their talents and influence, are things calculated to afford pleasure of the most refined nature to the lovers of truth. The cold sneer of infidelity is now seldom, if ever met with, and not a few in the army are the warm and judicious friends of the Gospel. Many of them being persons of liberal education, and well acquainted with the languages of India, are capable of rendering great service to the cause of Christianity. By letters from various quarters, it appears that some engage in translating parts of the Holy Scriptures; some assist in superintending the education of native children; others liberally contribute to their support: some illustrate the history and customs of the countries around them by their writings, and thus furnish a collateral auxiliary to the spread of Divine knowledge; others encourage the instruction of the children of European soldiers.—Some take the lead in Bible Associations; others have several schools, taught under their own personal inspection, and their families. There is one instance in which three schools, consisting of 300 children, are superintended by an English officer. We cannot but observe with delight, pious ladies also, the wives of these officers, employing their talents in writing useful tracts and books for children—engaging in the superintendence of native schools, and schools of industry, as well as visiting the cottages of the poor, and endeavoring to conduct them to the knowledge of Jesus Christ.

To persons who are anxiously observing the progress of Christianity in India, these circumstances are of no ordinary interest; and the Minister or Missionary, who has such useful coadjutors planted around him in the scene of his labours, may truly say—The lines are fallen to me in pleasant places.—The Indo-Chinese Gleaner.

The accounts of the diabolical conduct of lord Byron to his wife, floating on a general tide of scandal, were not generally in this country considered worthy of credit; but the worst of them has recently been mentioned on an authority that cannot well be distrusted.—After the marriage ceremony, and when the parties were seated in the carriage, lord Byron, observed the tears usually shed on leaving the paternal mansion filling his lady's eyes, said "Spare your tears, lady Byron, you shall soon have better cause to cry. I married you not out of love, but hatred. You once dared to resist me; and I have linked myself with you for the sake of revenge." And yet this man, whose love was turned into hatred because of a refusal, seeks refuge among the mountains of Switzerland, to avoid the wretchedness of his fellow creatures!—Glasgow paper.

Antiquities.—Among the many reliques of antiquities with which this country abounds, one has lately been discovered at Newbaldu, in the parish of Dolphinton, Lanarkshire. At the head of the avenue which leads to the house, upon a cut being made through a little eminence, there was observed a regular row of stones, and on removing the earth, there appeared a most entire and well formed stone coffin. Contrary to the general mode of construction, it was narrow, and made in exact conformity to the shape of the body. The stones were closely and regularly set around. The upper edge was as smoothly levelled as if it had been hewn. The bottom was laid with stones, and they who had paid the last tribute to the mortal remains had kindly placed a stone for a pillow. Notwithstanding the lapse of ages since the body must have been deposited in its dreary abode, the bones were found very entire. The skull was almost whole, and to the eye seemed uncommonly large between the occiput and sinciput. Most of the teeth were sound. The arms, bones, back, thighs, and legs, were all recognized. The inside of the coffin was fully six feet long, and it appears as if the body had been pressed into it. These sad reliques were examined with reverence, and again deposited in the place which they had occupied for so many centuries.

Dunshire, Aug. 18.

On the morning of Friday se'nnight, the brig Margarets of Arbroath, William Spinks, jun. master, arrived at that port, having in tow a large whale of the finner species, which the crew picked up at sea off Ely Ness, on the coast of Fife, having been dead apparently six or eight hours. In consequence of the excessive heat, the stench it emitted was too powerful for the tender olfactory nerves of the worthy citizens of Aberbrothwick; it was, therefore, early on Saturday morning towed round to Montrose, where it was exposed to the gaze of wondering thousands till the afternoon, when the operation of flenching was performed upon him by some of the hands belonging to the ships just arrived from Greenland fishery. The dimensions of this aquatic monster were found to be as follow:—Extreme length, 47 feet; greatest circumference, 20 feet 8 inches: breadth of tail, 10 ft.; and the distance from wick to wick of the mouth, 15 ft. 6 inches. His belly, from about 15 feet from the tail to the beginning of the head, presented a beautiful set of regular lines, about an inch broad, and raised from the intervening surface about the eighth part of an inch; the space betwe n each bar or line being exactly in proportion to the breadth of the latter. This fish (numbers of which in several particulars from the whales caught in Greenland and Davis's Straits; and in none so much as the quantum of blubber that it yields, which bears no proportion to the deep and solid masses of the Greenlanders." No external marks of violence appeared on any part of his body.

MANCHESTER, Sept. 4.

About ten o'clock in the evening of this day, another of those barbarities occurred which have of late shewn the fruits of Radical Reform tenets. Thomas Nowland, one of the pensioners who is acting as a Constable attached to the Police, was attacked near New-Town by a set of men who designated him as "a Nadin's man," and treated him so inhumanly, that he was conveyed to the Infirmary in a shocking state, much injured on the head. The men who bore him thither, said they should probably share the same fate for doing this humane office.—The constable whom we mentioned, a fortnight ago as having been so cruelly handled at the New Cross, Mr. Campbell, is dead of his wounds at the Infirmary. This respectable man had served his king and country in the army for twenty years, and at last fell a victim to the fury of the times. Two men connected with this crime are in the New Bayley, awaiting the issue of the Coroner's Jury, which has entered upon the inquiry; but it has been postponed for a few days on account of the absence of some material witnesses at the Assizes. Private threats and intimations are held out against those who do the important duty of the civil office.

Extract of a letter, dated Carlsbad, August 24.

"The conferences here among other subjects, have turned upon the extra executed on the Jews at Frankfort, Wurtzburg, and different free towns of Germany. They have excited the most lively indignation, both towards the immediate actors in them, and on account of the imperfect protection afforded to those against whom the tumultuous proceedings were directed. I understand that a notification has in consequence been despatched from this place, signed by the envoys of different powers assembled in Congress, and addressed to the resident Minsters at the towns where the excesses have been committed; wherein they are directed to remonstrate with the magistracy and local authorities, and to demand for the Jews that equal protection which every government is bound to afford all those who live under it, without distinction of persons or classes. They are to be informed, that a repetition of the offence, unless visited with due punishment, will render them accessories to the transaction, and subject them to a deprivation of rank and office. Nor will the punishment end there; the degradation of the magistracy will be followed by a military occupation of the place, either by Austria or Prussia, and perhaps, an eventual cession to some neighbouring state, possessing both the will and the power to protect all its subjects equally."

In the highest point of a field, on the farm of Craignarthro', a mile south from Forfar, there was a Druid's place of worship, consisting of a circle of large stones, with one (the largest) in the middle. The field was fallowed last year, and this temple trenched, from which a very great quantity of stones were turned up. Nothing particular, however, appeared, except a few bones that went to dust. The field this year was sown with barley, and this trenched part with the rest; now, so far as this space extended, there are considerable quantities of oats, of various kinds, sprung up among the barley, the seeds of which must have remained there more than 1000 years. Without the trenched ground there is not a head of oats to be seen. Orders have been given to preserve these oat plants.—Montrose paper.

LONDON, Sept. 6.

The last advice from the Cape of Good Hope were dated in the middle of May; but we have now letters bringing down the intelligence to as late a date as the 10th of June. In the interval it appears that the Caffres have been again collecting their scattered forces.—The governor had received despatches from the corn districts, giving the unfavorable information. The chief force of the savages was concentrated on the bank of the river which is opposite to Graham's town, and both in numbers and boldness they were extremely formidable. If forthey were extremely formidable. tunately happened that five hundred troops shortly before these details arrived had been landed at Cape town, and they were immediately sent off to reinforce the military in the interior. This force the military in the interior. renewed incursion was wholly unexpected, but it had been ascertained that the Caffres had been instigated to further hostilities by a number of deserters from the British forces, who had directed their operations against Graham town. Hence, the able manner in which they were carried on is in some degree accounted for. The principal deserter, who had been of most assistance to the enemy, was named Patrick Moore, who seems to be high in authority among the Caffres.

Yesterday a Court of Common Council assembled at Guildhall, to take into consideration the transactions at Manchester on the 10th ult. pursuant to the lord mayor's summons, issued upon a requisition signed by 31 members of the court. Seven resolutions condemning the conduct of the Magistrates and Yeomanry of Manchester, were carried by a majority of 71 to 45.

"Negotiations," says one of the letters received in the city, "are still carried on between the British government and that of Spain, for the supply of a quantity of specie, probably in contemplation of the expiration of the act restricting the Bank of England for Cash Payments. The proposal was in the first instance, that nine, and subsequently, ten millions should be conveyed from Havana or Vera Cruz, in British ships of war. Hitherto nothing has been definitely determined; but it seems from the progress which has been made in the negociation, that Spain is herself, at the present moment, so much in want of gold and silver, that none can be spared by her for the use of the country, until next year, at the earliest."

Princess of Wales.—It is now believed that the Princess of Wales is not about to revisit England, and the reason is that her highness has sent orders to various tradesmen for goods, to be forwarded to Italy; particularly for a full set of state harness, for ten horses, which was completed last Saturday, and will speedily be shipped for Italy.

Two mails from London to Gibraltar, had fallen into the hands of the Guerillas, who are stated to be in force in the southern province of Spain. These circumstances had occasioned much commercial inconvenience.

Corn harvest is finished in this country except on some lands in bad aspects, and scarcely ever were the crops housed in so short a time, and in such good condition. Wheat is a variable crop; the ears are said to be generally short, and the grains in them below an average number; but very thick upon the ground & remarkably clean and wholesome. The barley crops are great, but samples are not so good for malting as last years' New wheat and barley were produced in our market on Saturday.—Shrewsbury Chr.

Private accounts from Italy represent the roads between Rome and Naples as highly dangerous on account of the number of banditti. The robbers have agents in Rome and Naples, and indeed several other largetowns; and the chiefs are said to have been formerly officers in the French army. Their system is regular, and, where no resistance is offered, unaccompanied with violence. The traveler is conveyed to their residence, and there detained until his letter of credit has been converted into cash by one of their agents.—The baggage of the traveller is frequently spared, and instances have been known in which the robbers have shared the spoil with the victim. Persons travelling in Italy should be very circumspect at the coffee houses and billiard rooms, which are frequented by the agents of the different bands, who under the disguise and manners of gentlemen, ascertain the course and connexions of the traveller.

On the 23d ult. a peasant, who resides near Leighterton, in this county, at four o'clock in the morning entered a field of oats, with the intent to mow four acres of a short crop before eight in the evening hoping to win a wager of ten guineas. Upon measuring the quantity cut, it was found to be five acres and a quarter! The age of this workman is about sixty years; his name is Hervomb. It was performed on Bowldown farm, in the possession of Mr. Emerson.—Gloucester Journal.

In letters from Buenos Ayres, of the 3d of June it is stated, that intelligence had been received there of the total destruction of the town of Copiapo, in Chili, by an earthquake. No date is assigned, nor are any particulars given of this deplorable event. Copiapo is a considerable town in the northern part of Chili, and gives the name to a jurisdiction.

LONDON, Sept. 10.

Letters from Cadiz state the return of the Alexander, man of war, of 74 guns, to that port on the 19th of August. This ship it will be recollected formed part of a squadron despatched from Cadiz on the 11th May last consisting of two 74 gun ships and a frigate and whose destination, from the circumstance of its having sailed immediately on intelligence being received of Lord Cochrane' blockade of Callao was generally understood to be Lima. The Alexander was the best of the line of battle ships sold to Spain by the Emperor of Russia; yet she bore her voyage extremely ill. During near the line, on the 21st day of her departure from Cadiz she sprung her bowsprit, and made so much water, that her officers, together with those of the San Telmo and Pravia, held a council of war, which determined that she could not perform the voyage with the other, and must put back; she was 79 days from that time in returning to Cadiz. The other two vessels are considered to have reached Lima within 70 days from their separation, as they were in the best state, and sailed well. The letters from Cadiz further state, that some disease of a suspicious nature has broken out in the island of St. Leon, and that a cordon had in consequence been drawn round it to prevent the infection being communicated.

BONAPARTE.—Extract of a letter from an officer of the 20th Regt, dated St. Helena, April 11:—"We sailed from Cork on the 27th of January, with a fair wind. We anchored off St. Helena on the 6th April, and disembarked on the 8th. I am afraid that I have little chance of ever seeing Bonaparte, as he very seldom stirs out, and it is against orders to go near Longwood, where he is. When he goes abroad, he is always accompanied by a Captain, who gets a guinea a day; and, if he should happen to be absent when he calls for him, he makes sad complaints to the Governor, who is very much liked on the island. Every thing is very dear here; you cannot buy a horse under £150, and every thing else is in proportion. The Governor is not near so strict as you imagine. If you have on your cap and sash, it is quite sufficient. We (the 20th) have established a good character already. Invitations coming every day, but it rains so much on this mountain that it is impossible to walk a quarter of a mile. Our pay is very liberal; an ensign gets 12s. a day, £50 lodging money, rations, and cloth for two coats. There is a government store, where we can get every thing to buy for a lot of cash.

LONDON, Aug. 20.

The following is an extract of a letter received from the county of Tyrone, respecting the awful visitation by storm, at Lisahelly House, near Omagh, the seat of the late A. Galbraith, Esq.

"I must endeavor to give you some idea of the shock we received on Monday evening, by hearing of the awful death of poor Mr. Galbraith; but, indeed language can hardly pain the horrors of the scene I From his infancy Mr. Galbraith had the utmost fear of thunder and lightning; and when this fatal storm began to grow very violent, he had the window-shutters closed, got candles, and sat down to his bible. The servant came in to lay the cloth for dinner, and he instantly dismissed him, desiring him to take the knives and forks out of the room, and entreated every person in the house would go to their devotion, until (as he emphatically said) this awful visitation passed.—He was sitting on a sofa, at a table, his lady opposite to him, his two daughters and their governess at their work, when he got up, after reading for some time, and unfortunately sat down in a corner, and leaned his head back against the wall. He had not been there two minutes when he was struck dead instantaneously. Mrs. Galbraith was thrown on the floor, where she lay quite insensible—one of the children's faces severely scorched, the other burned in the neck, as if three bars of red hot iron had been laid on the place—the window curtains burned to cinders, and scattered all over the room—the marble chimney pieces in three rooms shattered in a thousand pieces—the locks twisted off the doors, and 700 panes of glass broke—a dog in the kitchen killed and every being in the house (except the governess) either more or less injured. You may judge of the size of the house by the number of panes of glass I have mentioned to be broken; and every room except one, is left almost in ruins."

Unexampled Mortality.—The National Intelligencer of Tuesday says—"A letter to the editors, under the date of September 12th, from the new Spa-brook on Mobile, (Alabama) affords very distressing account of a mortality at the place. The Yellow Fever, in its most malignant form, prevails at Mobile.—The whole population of the town does not exceed eight or one hundred. But there died in the week preceding the date of the letter, on Monday 7; Tuesday 9; Wednesday 6; Thursday 11; Friday 7; Saturday 12; Sunday, before one o'clock 4. Making an average of nearly eight per day, or one per day out of every hundred souls! The plague cannot be worse than this; and, what is most extraordinary, the Mobile paper of the 15th is silent on the subject; as silent as the New-Orleans papers are, whilst disease is peopling their cemeteries with scores a day. Our informant adds that the men of Blakely is entirely evacuated, as he is told, in consequence of the sickness. It is unpleasant to communicate such news; but it would be treacherous to withhold it."

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.

Several letters are received by this arrival of the same purport as the following, which is addressed to a very respectable house in this city.

Liverpool, Sept. 11.

"My principal reason for addressing you by this opportunity, is the report prevailing here this day, of some war on the part of this country, being in contemplation, and most probably with the United States, which I trust, for your sake, will prove quite false. Improbable as such an event may at first appear, it becomes less so when coolly considered, with all the concurrent circumstances of the times. This country cannot permit Spain to ratify the treaty of cession of the Floridas to the United States; this must involve Spain in a war with the nation; she cannot defend her still remaining transatlantic possessions against America; therefore England must do it for her. Moreover it is argued, and plausibly so I think, by many among us, that not only England, but many continental powers are bound upon supporting Spain, if necessary against America; besides which, they deem it politic to check in time, the rapidly growing Colossus of Northern America, shewing plainly an unlimited ambition after extension of territory, such as, if crowned with success, may prove dangerous to other European powers besides England. Another reason in support of the probability of the said event rumoured, is the present situation of public and private credit in the United States, which is said to be at its lowest ebb, and the conclusion is that the government could not therefore make months, &c. I give you the report as it prevails here, with the reasoning suggested on the occasion, and which, certainly, makes the dreadful event much less improbable that it appears at first—

You will, of course, draw your own conclusions from all I have stated, & consider my communication in its proper light;
my wish is to be useful to you on all occasions. It is ascertained that all the packets at Falmouth preparing for service have been suddenly ordered to sea;
this argues at least that something of moment is on the tapis with government."

The Governor at Gibraltar, in consequence of a proclamation issued by Lieut.
Gen. O'Donnell, commanding in the neighboring district, stating that the Yellow Fever or Epidemia prevailed to an alarming degree in the Isle de Leon, in order to insure the safety of the garrison, has prohibited all communication by sea or land; no person coming from the territory of Spain is permitted to enter the garrison, under certain restrictions. A cordon of troops had been established, and an inspector of strangers placed at the entrance of the village—any person entering except where the inspector is stationed, the sentries are directed to fire upon him. Dated at Gibraltar, 29th Aug.
1819.

On the 2d of September, the Governor of Gibraltar learning that the Epidemic Fever was extending itself to town beyond the limits of the cordons, and being apprehensive that no measure of precaution would answer short of closing the communication entirely with Spain, except thro' the customary process of quarantine, had given notice by proclamation that the communication would be closed the next evening (Sept. 3) at gunfire. Tents have been erected on the Neutral Ground for the encampment of the poor, who are permitted to pursue their several callings in town during the day, and to return to their encampment at night.

It is asserted that Lord Cathcart is employed in negociating a treaty with the Emperor of Russia for the mutual admission of the produce and goods of the two

SQUALLY!

Orders were received in Philadelphia on Saturday last to ship Twenty Thousand Stand of Arms, with a corresponding quantity of Ordnance and Ammunition, to Savannah, for which the commanding officer on that station has made the necessary preparations. It was announced a few days ago in the Democratic Press, that that Capt. Morris was appointed to succeed Commodore Perry in the command of the squadron on the West Indian station. This is correct, but in addition to the above intelligence, orders have been issued to suspend the sailing of that squadron, as its destination may be changed.

BOSTON, Oct. 6.

HURRICANE IN THE WEST INDIES.

Extract of a letter from Cape Bourn, of the Brig James and Isabella, to S. Tipliff dated "WELLS, (Maine) 17th
Oct. 1819.

I arrived at Kennebunk yesterday from Moran Bay, (Martinico) from which place I sailed on the 23d Sept. On the 26th I touched at St. Bartholomews, where I obtained a list of American vessels which went on shore during the hurricane of the 20th Sept. but, unfortunately, I left it on board. At Morn the gale was not severe, but as I passed St.
Pierre, I saw four or five vessels on shore
At St. Barts it must have been dreadful beyond the conception of any person, who never saw the place before; and since the gale it is said to have been more destructive than any that ever preceded it in the memory of its oldest inhabitants.
Every vessel in port without a single exception, went on shore, most of which will be totally lost. A great many of the houses and stores were blown down —a number of lives were lost. It came on so suddenly and violently, that a great many persons saved nothing from their houses, and with difficulty escaped with their lives. The streets were filled with ruins of buildings, broken furniture, masts and spars of vessels which went on shore; hencoops, binnacles and boats—and so very impetuous was the wind that it actually blew over one of the keys of rocks situated off the harbor, which had been standing perhaps ever since the creation of the world. St. Martins has suffered equally with St. Barts. Six boiling houses were all that were left standing, and it was said that one hundred and forty seven lives were lost there; and a few at Augnilla, which suffered more, in comparison, than either St. Barts or St. Martin. St. Kitts received a great deal of damage—Antigua had not been heard of.

Extract of a letter from Capt. Barns, of schr. Oscar, dated

"St. BARTS, Sept. 27.

"We obtained a new anchor & cable sufficient for a vessel of 150 tons (the Oscar is only 65) but before 12 o'clock on the 21st we went on shore, as many vessels had done before, and the remainder soon followed.—We saved some of the cargo and had it stored, but such was the violence of the gale that the store together with the merchant's house were washed away. I have lost the vessel's papers, &c. and in fact every thing except what I stood in. To describe the horrors of the 21st is beyond my power—an eye witness could only judge of them. Ships from 300 to 400 tons are now on dry land—hundreds of buildings are blown to atoms, and the sea is now flowing where many stores stood before the gale. Fortunately there were only twenty one lives lost, but many much injured, myself among the number, by the failing of a house—I lay under the ruins some minutes before I obtained assistance. I am now on the recovery.

"By accounts received from the neighbouring Islands, they have suffered as much as at this. Every estate in St.
Martin's, except two are in ruins; and returns are received of one hundred and forty-six persons having been lost, and many missing."

ALBANY, Oct. 22.

Our foreign relations excite at present much of the public attention. The non-ratification of the Spanish treaty; the arrival of a Spanish military force in our vicinity; the angry tone of the British journals and reviews, towards this country; the influence which is ascribed to the British cabinet over that of Madrid;
the notes of precaution, if not of preparation, which are heard upon our northern borders; and indeed some recent measures of our own government, are each a fruitful source of speculation, and have drawn forth many conjectures as to the probable result.

The National Intelligencer gives a more pacific aspect to the Madrid news than it has heretofore worn. It says the time for the ratification of the treaty passed by without its being ratified; and it intimates, probably on the authority of Mr. Fenwick, the messenger, that nothing had transpired at Madrid which would warrant an inference, that the council of Castile had had any thing to do with the treaty. In addition to this it may be mentioned, that, according to report, Mr. Forsyth, our Minister, was preparing for a permanent residence at Madrid; that, according to another report, the negociation was to be transferred to Washington, and that a distinguished nobleman had been designated to repair forthwith to the United States as the Spanish negociator.

A rational conclusion, from all the facts and reports, seems to be, that Spain dared not ratify the treaty, for fear of off-ending England; and that an equal repugnance to provoke hostilities with the United States, induce her to seek a procrastination, until some fortuitous event shall occur to relieve her from her present dilemma. How far she will surcede in these views, a short time will probably determine.

It seems evidently to have been the intention of our government, to close the negotiation at all hazards! and it has been published that the instructions sent to Mr. Forsyth by the Hornet, were peremptory, that he should demand passports if the treaty was not ratified in the time stipulated.—The Hornet had not reached Cadiz at the last dates. It will devolve upon Congress to decide upon the ultimate course which is to be pursued upon our part, in the mean time, if reports are to be relied upon, the executive branch are actively engaged in preparing for the worst. A peculiar activity is especially manifested in the navy department. It is a prevailing opinion, that the military occupation of the Floridas will be one of the first subjects that will engage the deliberations of Congress.

KINGSTON, Jam. Aug. 25.

Private letters received from Panama state, that about three weeks since, a plot was discovered to have been formed by the British prisoners, made at the recapture of Porto Bello; the object of which was to obtain possession of a battery and powder magazine, near the city, and then to bombard the place. In the mean time, part of them were to take possession of the Spanish brig Venturosa, lying in the harbor of Panama, and it was intended that the whole of them should proceed in her, and join Lord Cochrane in the south sea. Two of the ringleaders were shot by order of Gen.
Havie, who shortly afterwards issued an order for all foreigners to depart from Panama within ten days.

It was reported at Panama, that Lord Cochrane had taken Petit Callao, in the harbor of which port a vessel was at anchor, having on board 100,000 dollars.
It was further stated, that his Lordship had actually passed Guayquil on his way to Chili.

Advices from Lima to the 8th June, have reached this city. By them we learn, that Lord Cochrane had captured the American schooner Montezuma, belonging to Baltimore, on her way to the roadstead of Callao; she had on board a cargo valued at 80,000 dollars.
His Lordship had also taken from a port in Peru, 70,000 dollars.

The report of a rich prize with two millions said to have been captured by Lord Cochrane, is ascertained to be without foundation.

The government of Lima had despatched a fast sailing schooner to cruize off Valdivia, to apprize any Spanish squadron of the movements of Lord Cochrane, and she had passed in safety his fleet—Subsequent to this, his Lordship had raised the blockade of Callao. His reception at Valparaiso, it was supposed, would not be very flattering, as previous to his leaving Callao, he declared he would destroy the marine force at that place.

Six Field Officers and thirty-seven of inferior rank, who had been made prisoners by the insurgent Chief St. Martin, where put to death by his orders, in the village of St. Louis.

A letter from New Orleans, dated the 18th September, which has been handed us by one of our friends, contains a distressing account of the condition of that city by reason of the sickness which prevails there—" The fever, within a few days, has abated more from the want of subjects than from any other cause—most that were able having fled.
All strangers have rendered their accounts; and are buried, not under the clods of the valley, but, shocking fact, under a promiscuous mass of half decayed bodies, winding sheets, &c. So numerous have been the interments, that in preparing a new grave, th y come in contact with bodies in the most dreadful state. The Mayor has been advised on the state of the burying ground, and requested to order it strewed with lime, of which there is abundance.—Whether or not he will deem it expedient to comply with this request, is not yet ascertained. The inhabitants panic struck at the great mortality, more especially as the disease has attacked the Creoles.
The city, without any exception, is the filthiest in the world, dead cats, rats and dogs laying in every direction, to say nothing of the gutters, &c.

It has been very sickly in Natchez,
St. Francisville, and all along the river.
They have adopted the most efficient measures to arrest its progress by vacating the towns, and providing the lower classes with houses."

The letter states the interment's in two weeks to have been, in one 110, and the other 137. This, in a population of perhaps 25, or 30,000 is terrible.

FROM LOWER CANADA.

MONTREAL Oct. 30.

Destructive Fires.—Between the hours of 12 and 1 o'clock on the night of Tuesday last, our Citizens were raised with the appalling cry of fire resounding through the streets. The cause of the alarm was found to proceed from a House near the Seminary in Notre Dame Street occupied by Mr. Girard, confectioner, which was discovered to be on fire, It was first seen by two young men of Messrs.
Gibbs and Kolmyer, who slept in a building, in rear of the adjoining premises, and notwithstanding the alarm was instantly given, the destructive element had attained such height, that three houses fell a prey to its merciless ravages, before it could be checked. The silent hour in which it occurred; the length of time which unavoidably elasped, before assistance could be got, and the extent the flames had reached before they were discovered, gave it an appearance threatning and awful in the extreme. From the same causes, the adjoining buildings were in the most imminent danger. The Cloth Stores belonging to Messrs Gibbs & Kolmyer, which joined the house where the fire broke out, was saved by by the indefatigable exertions of the citizens, and the Printing Office & book store belonging to Mr. Brown run the utmost risk, being on fire in several places at different times; it was to the prompt and vigorous efforts of all who were present, aided by the calmness of the evening, and the fall of snow, which had happened the afternoon before, that we are indebted for getting the flames so rapidly subdued. Among others we were informed the gentlemen of the Seminary were particularly conspicuous for their exertions and kindly furnished a supply of water from the pump in their garden.
It is reported that the greater part of the property was covered in the insurance Offices; but the loss must be very considerable, for the progress of the conflagration was so rapid, that some of those occupying the houses barely escaped with their lives without saving any of their effects. Among the chief sufferers, is Mr. Girard Confectioner, and Mr. Kauntz, both of whose houses were entirely consumed, and hardly any thing saved. Messrs. W. & J. Spagg, whose Auction stores are partly burnt, and the Book Store belonging to Messrs. Bos-sange & Paniueau, the roof of which was entirely consumed, and the property much injured in the attempt to rescue it.

There has been no certain accounts of the way in which the fire originated;
the most probable, is that it arose from the negligence of a maid servant, who had been sent an errand to the Garret with a lighted candle the preceding evening.

On Thursday last, the fire which had not been completely extinguished in the ruins of Bossage & Paniueau's, broke out again about 10 o'clock A. M. It was fortunately got under without doing any further injury.

On Thursday evening about 7 o'clock, another fire broke out in a house in St.
Paul Street occupied by Messrs. Stewart,
Holroyd & Co. and Mr. Leveque's Dry Good Stores, adjoining to Messrs. Gerard and Co. The violence of the fire was so great, that although early discovered, the whole premises, with almost their whole contents, were entirely consumed. The great exertions on the part of the citizens and firemen, favoured by the calmness of the evening, prevented its communicating to the adjoining houses.

We have been informed that a considerable part of the property destroyed by the late Fires particularly that of Thursday evening, was insured in the Montreal Fire Insurance Company. The extent of the loss is not yet accurately known. Insurance had been effected for £3600 in the above office

YORK, NOVEMBER 11, 1819.

FOR THE UPPER CANADA GAZETTE.

THE attention and emulation already excited by the establishment of Agricultural Societies in Canada, affords a very pleasing anticipation of the benefits to be derived from the truly patriotic endeavours of those individuals, who have thus devoted their attention to the encouragement of those arts by which mankind advance from barbarism to civilization; from poverty to plenty; from discord to peace! It has, however, with too much truth been observed, that it has hitherto been one of the misfortunes of mankind, that in consequence of a false taste, they have bestowed more attention and applause upon great talents or ingenuity, when exerted in the arts of destruction, than when employed in devising the means of giving plenty and felicity to nations. One instance of this cruel neglect, is recorded in the fate of Gabriel Plattes, that original genius in husbandry, during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, who, notwithstanding his great merit as a writer and the essential service he had rendered his country, was un-gratefully suffered to starve and perish in the streets of London.

The Chinese, however, have long stood foremost among those whose experience has taught them the great importance of Agriculture, and the estimation in which it ought to be held. And to render it honorable, the emperor annually assists at the plough, in the presence of the princes of the blood royal, of the officers of state, and the first mandarins of the empire. With a similar view it was also a custom among the ancient Persians, that once a month their king sat down to table with a party of practical husband-men. Indeed, it is only in proportion to the degree in which this important art of agriculture has flourished, that nations, or provinces, have been or ever can be, permanently prosperous

Perhaps no place in the known world affords a nobler opportunity to the emulous in Agriculture than America, and as that department in husbandry which includes the breeding of animals is so well known in Europe, it is the more surprising that so little attention has been paid to it on this side the Atlantic; it is evident that the length and severity of a Canadian winter is in very few instances sufficiently provided for, hence that diminutive and diseased stock, which emigrants so often notice; and could a correct return of the mortality of cattle, be annually made, the account would excite astonishment, particularly with respect to sheep and lambs, which perish in great numbers for want of an early bite of green food.

Our resources are here abundant, and nature denies nothing to industry. The value of root crops for the subsistence of animals are not yet sufficiently known, and perhaps indolence is the only obstacle in adopting the practice in winter of giving hay tea, by which it is asserted, that a stock of timothy, will last eight or ten times longer than in the dry or uninfused state, and the cattle kept in better health.
I have myself experienced the benefits on my own stock during the last winter, by simply pouring on a good handful of hay, two or three gallons of boiling water at night, and the next morning giving both hay and tea just warm. But though our crops of timothy are in general very good, there are several other grasses, the introduction of which would be of the highest importance to the interests of Upper Canada; among these may be reckoned more particularly Lucerne, (Medica, or Medich Clover.) It is gratifying to observe in the circular letter of the Agricultural Society of Upper Canada, that one of their leading objects, is "that of importing and distributing such rare and valuable seeds, as are not in common use, or easily attainable in this country," among these we have no doubt but that Lucerne, Burnet (the Pimpinella of Linnæus,) &c. will be found with those of their first distribution, especially among infant settlements, where the difficulty of supporting or rearing live stock is often so afflictingly felt. I was much pleased to find by the valuable essays of C. F. Greece, that the hardy Lucern had found its way into the lower province, where, says he,
in favourable years, it is cut four or five times, and affords an early feed for pigs, lambs, calves, &c. producing four times the quantity of other grasses. It will be nine inches high, when other grasses but just make their appearance. Colonel Cullen calls it the choicest of all fodder;
it will last ten years; it enriches the land,
as well as fattens cattle. About an acre, (some says three quarters,) is considered abundantly sufficient for three horses during the whole year! Cold will not injure it, and it will thrive in dry summers, when other grasses are burnt up.
The famous Arthur Young, asserts that the culture of Lucern is an object of such consequence, that it does not admit of doubt or question." He recommends the drilling of it at nine inches, though it may be sown broad cast, with barley or oats, on clean land, of a dry sandy kind.
In drilling, 15lbs of seed is sufficient for an acre. It must be sowed and hoed in dry weather: when transplanted the tap roots are to be shortened, and the top of the plant cut off. It is generally cut green as wanted, for animals if allowed to graze long on it will eat off the head of the plant. It should be given with straw.
The hay made of Lucern is to be managed as clover.

Seaton, the miscreant to whose overtures she became the willing victim, lived next door to her husband, and was treated by him with kindness. He was a married man, and at the time of his elopement with Mrs. S. had four children, and his wife pregnant of a fifth.—The elopement took place on the 21st August last, and on the preceding evening Mrs. Stent and her husband drank tea with Seaton. After tea Seaton engaged the husband at a game of cards, while his wife returned home, packed up all the moveables on which she could lay her hands—clothes, plate, and money—and removed them to another place.—After she had accomplished this object, she returned and finished the evening in a most convivial manner. The next morning she set off, and was not seen again by her husband till Thursday. About three weeks after the elopement, Seaton returned to his wife in the dead hour of the night, and demanded what money she had in her possession. She denied that she had any; but he persisted that she had, and insisted upon having it. The poor woman then urged the proximity of her confinement, and the calls of her other children. He was, however, deaf to these arguments; he shut the door, and with dreadful threats, forced her to strip herself, and from her stays ripped £60 with which he went off. His unhappy wife was soon afterwards seized with the pains of child birth. The agonies of her mind on this occasion exceeded those of her body; she gave way to the full tide of misery which had burst upon her, and becoming raging mad. She died—and was soon followed by her helpless infant. Thus did vice triumph over the happiness of an innocent family!—The death of the mother and infant was succeeded by the death of another child. Whatever property remained was soon dissipated in the necessary expenditures of the funeral, and the support of the surviving children, who were subsequently removed to the workhouse, where they now remain a burthen to their parish.—What may be the sensations of the guilty father when this heart-rending tale reaches his ears, it is impossible to anticipate; but if a shadow of feeling remain in his bosom, his misery cannot be less than his crimes; nor can Mrs. Stent, who was the partner in his flight and the participator in his infamy, be less exposed to the horrors of remorse. Of the three individuals—the adulterer, who is in America—the wife, who is in Bartholomew's Hospital—and the husband, who is in Giltspur-street Compter—we think the feelings of the latter, are by far the most enviable. We have only to add, from the testimony of all who know Stent, that he was a fond and indulgent husband, a sincere friend, and an honest and humane man.

September 7.

The public have already been made acquainted with the fact, that some liberal and humane individuals, "commiserating the melancholy situation into which the unfortunate Stent has plunged himself, by attempting the life of his unfaithful and hypocritical wife, have undertaken to secure for him the best defence possible on the day of his approaching trial.—The arrangements for this purpose, up to the present period have been eminently successful; and we learn from those philanthropic individuals, among whom Mr. Bryant, of Grocer's-hall-court, Poultry, is still the most active, that a very favourable result is anticipated.

Stent, agreeably to his request, still remains in the Giltspur-street Compter, where he conducts himself with the greatest propriety, and devotes nearly the whole of his time to reading and devotional exercises. He is, however, occasionally engaged in imparting instruction to his less informed companions in prison. Upon the whole, although his firmness has never forsaken him, he maintains a dejected spirit. Hitherto he has been constantly visited by his wife, who is now in a perfect state of convalescence; but he has, on no occasion whatever, since the period of the melancholy transaction which has placed him in such an awful jeopardy, evinced the slightest desire to renew his confidence with, or unbosom his feelings to her; in fact, he has for some days past directed that Mrs. Stent should not be admitted to his apartment. There is, however, another cause, which seems to actuate the mind of Stent; and he desponds under it the more, as one of those dreadful results of his wife's infidelity: His father who is an aged but independent man, it appears, immediately after the lamentable transaction at the Saracen's Head, undertook the management of his son's affairs. In performing these duties, a few days since, the old man had the misfortune to fall from his chaise and dislocated his hip so dangerously, that mortification, it is apprehended will ensue. The misfortune has produced a kind of agony of mind of his son.

The Fisheries.—It is stated in a Halifax paper of the 24th ult. that the Lieutenant Governor of Prince Edward Island, has issued a Proclamation, relating to the late Convention between Great Britain and America, declaring—"That, if any vessels or subjects of the United States, be found fishing, or preparing to fish, within three marine miles of any part of the coasts of the Island; or shall attempt to use any part of the coasts of the Colony, for drying or curing fish, or for other purposes, connected with the fisheries—that the most prompt measures will be taken for enforcing a due adherence, on their part, to the stipulations contained in the said convention."

MR. GEORGE O'BRYAN.

STUCCO WORKER & PLAISTERER.

Late of the County of Tipperary, Ireland.

SHOULD this advertisement meet the eye of the above named young man, he is hereby informed, that agreeable to his invitation contained in a letter dated, York, U. C. in October last, his sister has arrived in this country; but, to her inexpressible mortification, every enquiry for him at York, has proved ineffectual, but in the hope that he may still reside in this Province, or in a situation where this advertisement may come under his notice, his sister takes this method of acquainting him, that she is now residing at Messrs. Piggot & Gurnetts, Ancaster, U. C. where she trust he will instantly repair & relieve her mind from the excessive grief, which the disappointment alluded to has occasioned.

Should any person be able to give Miss O'Bryan any information respecting her brother, they would confer on her an invaluable favor if they would do so, by means of a letter to her as above.

UPPER-CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the THIRD, by the Grace of GOD of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Counsellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to our Provincial Parliament, at our Town of York, on Mondaythe first day of November next ensuing, to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you,

GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our Proclamation bearing date the twenty-fourth September WE thought fit to prorogue our Provincial Parliament, to the first day of November next ensuing, at which time at our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear, NOW KNOW YE that WE taking into our Royal consideration, the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid; hereby convoking and by these presents enjoining you and each of you, that on Thursday the ninth day of December next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary, and herein fail not.

IN TESTIMONY whereof, WE have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed, WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this twenty-sixth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, and in the sixtieth year of our reign.

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, Sept. 6.

Mansion House.—Saturday J. Ellis, aged about 20, was fully committed on a charge of having robbed the dwelling house of Mr. Samuel Gale, Solicitor, Bedford-street, of a quantity of plate. The Lord Mayor said, that the prisoner was well known at that office as having, for a long time, infested the City for a considerable time. His mode of depredation was, by watching a favorable opportunity of gaining into a house, and secreting himself until every thing was at rest, when he would emerge from his hiding place, and plunder the house with security. His Lordship mentioned a singular instance of female resolution and courage within his knowledge which had taken place upon one of these occasions. Some months since, the wife of a person of great respectability was retiring to rest, when she saw the feet of a man under the curtains of her bed. Instead of falling into hysterics, as some would have done under circumstances of this nature, she resolutely seized the fellow by the feet, and dragged him from under the bed, and held him, in spite of a powerful endeavor which was made by him to escape, until an officer was procured to take him into custody. The prisoner was the identical man, and had been repeatedly brought up on similar charges, but had hitherto escaped with impunity, on account of a very reprehensible reluctance on the parties to prosecute.—Mr. Gale assured his Lordship that that would not be the case with him. The prisoner had nothing to say in his defence.

Fashions for September.

From Ackerman's Repository of Arts, Fashions, Manufactures, &c.

Morning and Walking Dress—A second muslin round dress; the skirt is moderately full, and trimmed round the bottom with four flounces of the same materials; these are of different widths, the bottom one is the broadest, the top one the narrowest; these flounces are each finished by a double tuck, and set on full: their effect is extremely pretty. The body is high, the front is tight to the shape, the back is full; a double fall of rich work goes round the throat. Long sleeves finished with epaulettes of rich work, and trimmed at the bottom to correspond. Head dress, a morning cornette, composed of British net, and trimmed with lace; the caul is low; it is ornamented with full puffs of net on the crown of the head; these puffs are formed by satin, and edged with lace; the border is set on full; the ears do not reach above half way under the chin, where the cap fastens with a large bow of ribbon. The bonnet worn over this cornette, for walking is composed of white gros de Naples; it is large and of a novel shape; there is a mixture of net lace in one side of the crown, in a very neat and tasteful manner, and the trimming of the edge of the brim, is at once singular and tasteful. A superb plume of feathers is placed on one side, and it has with white ribbon under the brim. A white lace scarf, lined with rose coloured sarsnet. White shoes, Limerick gloves.

Evening Dress.—A plain white transparent gauze frock over a white satin slip; the trimming of the skirt consists of a rich fall of blond lace at the bottom, which is surmounted by two rows of the most novel and tasteful trimming we have seen for a considerable time; it is a mixture of white satin and transparent gauze; there are two rows of it. It is surrounded by a row of pearls ten roukaux; these are composed of white satin. The corsage is cut very low round the bust, which is finished by a double row of blond. The sleeve is short and full; it corresponds with the trimming of the skirt.—The hair is dressed very full on each side of the forehead; the hind hair is brought up in a full tuft on the crown of the head; a bunch of flowers, intermingled with grass, is placed on the left side. Necklace and ear-rings, cubics.—White satin shoes, and white kid gloves.

Spanish Dress, Costume.—Madrid robe of white gros de Naples, fringed with gold; the fringe surmounted by points of ethereal blue satin, the corsage of the same colour, with short sleeves, finished by a full fringe. Castilian scarf of fine white net, finished by open points of ethereal blue. Small dress hat to answer the scarf, placed backward, & discovering a wreath of blue flowers, with pistils of pearls.—Negligee necklace and ear-rings of pearls.—Bracelet glove tops of hair fastened with pearls, or cameo medallions. Satin shoes, with pale blue rosettes; carved ivory fan.

Bow-Street.—W. Brown alias Lintot, only twelve years of age, was brought up on the extraordinary charge of stealing a hackney coach and horses. A charge of fraud was also made against him. R. W. Hebbard, driver of a hackney coach, stated, that on Sunday morning he took a party to Richmond, and on stopping at Putney-bridge to pay the toll, he found the prisoner riding behind his coach.—He spoke to him, and as the boy pretended to be known to several hackney-coachmen, he permitted him to ride on to Richmond. On his arrival there, some of the party agreed to return with him at a certain hour, and he went to dinner, leaving the boy to take care of his horses, and giving him 6d. to procure refreshment. On his return, some hours after, he learned, to his surprise, that the boy having procured five passengers at two shillings a head, had driven off with the coach for a head, had driven off with the coach for London, and told the ostler that he was authorised to do so by the witness. The latter came to town, and having got scent of his coach, he traced it from one stand to another, until he found it in Bridge-street, Blackfriars, and the young Jehu on the box. Anxious to see how the boy would behave, the witness called "Coach!"; and the urchin, with all the skill of an old whip, cried out, "Yes, your honor!" and drew up to the pavement to let his passenger in, little dreaming who it was. He drove him to Bedford street Covent Garden, where he got out and asked the boy his fare? and was told 1s. 6d. He then gave him in charge. On searching him 7s. 3d. were found in his pocket. The boy said, the prosecutor, when he saw him at Putney-bridge, hired him for the day to look after the coach while he staid at Richmond; and when he went to dinner, he desired him (the prisoner) to endeavor to procure four passengers in addition to those who had promised to return with him—that having done so, and waited long after the appointed hour, for the prosecutor's return, the gentlemen became impatient, and at their request he consented to drive them to London, knowing that the prosecutor would follow. Hebbard denied having promised to return with him—that having given him money merely from compassion, as he seemed hungry. The boy declared that Hebbard did drive him, and had done so before, and knew him very well.—Hebbard declared on oath, that he never saw the boy until Sunday. When questioned by the magistrate, the boy acknowledged receiving ten shillings from the passengers, and said he treated himself with a pint of beer, and bought half a bushel of beans for the horses. This accounted for the deficiency of 2s. 9d.—Remanded.

The Gazette de France gives the following as an extract of a letter from Altona of the 31st of August:—"The recruits in our Dutchies and in Denmark, have suddenly received orders to join their respective regiments, which excites conjectures so much the more important, as it is reported that revolutionary and bloody scenes have taken place in Sweden."

Letters from Madrid to the 29th of August, received in London, mention, that there is a schism in the Spanish Cabinet in relation to the Florida Treaty. The majority of the ministers, it is stated, are in favor of the ratification; but two or three individuals possessing the most influence with the King, are opposed to it, and have persuaded him not to give to the treaty his ultimate approbation. Some of the letters state, that Mr. Forsyth had quitted Madrid, and was on his way to Cadiz to embark for America.—Other letters state, that the Duke de San Carlos will return to the Ministry of the state, or, more probable, that it will be M. Lazaro de Torres, whose successor in the Ministry of Justice is already designed. It is also said that Don Onis will replace Gen. Alava at the Hague.

Another letter mentions, that the departure of the fleet from Cadiz for South America was fixed for the 15th of September; that the preparations were pushed forward with surprising rapidity; and that it was the expectation that every thing would be ready by that period.

Advices from Marseilles state, that 8000 English are expected at Genoa, to keep the garrison of that town. By this it appears, that all the maritime powers, even of various Governments, are disposed against the Barbary Powers.

The fact of the retirement of M. Roverella Rard from the Presidency of the Council of Public Instruction is confirmed. He was to take his leave of the Council on Wednesday. It is said that M. Frayssinous will be his successor.

It is understood that the fortifications of Mentz and Coblentz are to be augmented; a places spoken of formed by the Duke of Wellington, for establishing new points of defence on the Rhine.

An article under the head of Turin, the 26th of August mentions, that the three commercial houses here, those of Henry Bolmida, Farcasca and Vasco, and Raimondo Vigliano, have stopped payment. The house of Guiseppi, Vinatier & Co. had previously failed.

A Dresden paragraph, of the 31st of August, announces that, on the 28th of that month, the marriage of the Princess Josephine, to the King of Spain, was celebrated by procuration. She was soon to set out for Spain; and expected to arrive at Strasburgh on the 10th of September, at Bayonne on the 24th and at Madrid on the 28th. The Spanish Ambassador at Paris was to meet the new Queen at Strasburg and accompany her to the Spanish Capital.

The Russian Gen. Wolkow, Commandant of Moscow, passed through Strasburg, on the 4th of Sept. with dispatches for Spain.

The Emperor of Russia, it is said, is to visit Warsaw about the last of October; and is then to visit Cuban and Mount Caucasus.

An article from Rastadt of the 1st of September, says, that all the letters from the interior of Germany, speak of the importance of the armaments which are actively going forward in the Austrian Monarchy; 80,000 recruits have been distributed amongst the different corps, and a second levy is talked of. The battalions of the Landwehr are all armed & ready to join the regiments of the line; 4000 horses have been purchased in Holstein, to remount the heavy cavalry.

Hunt, the celebrated Radical Reformer, made his triumphant entry into London, on the 15th of September. No mischief was done by the immense mob which was drawn together on the occasion.

Plymouth Dock, Thursday—Mr. Thornton, our new Minister to the Court of Brazils, arrived at Wembley's hotel late last night, where he had been expected for some days.—This morning he embarked on board the Superb, Commodore Sir Thomas Hardy, under a salute, and immediately got under weigh, accompanied by the Vengeur, Capt. Maitland, and the Hyperion, Capt. Seale. The latter ship is to make the best of her way to Madeira, for the purpose of taking in a supply of wine for the whole of this squadron, whose destination and object are involved in mystery. Sir Thos. Hardy, it is stated, sails with sealed orders, which are not to be opened till he reaches a certain Latitude.—Each ship is in fine fighting trim, being just upon the full war establishment, both as to seamen and marines, with an extra supply of stores. This, at a period of profound peace, bespeaks not only a long and active service, but a distant station. The Dutch brig of war Gier, sailed yesterday, and a British frigate from the eastward, said to be the Spartan, came to an anchor this afternoon, in the sound, having first saluted the Admiral's flag. The Prince Regent, it is rumored, is to embark at Brighton on the 12th, when it is confidently said that he will visit this port.

FRANKFORT, Aug. 31.

Accounts from Wurtzburg state, that on the night of the 18th the windows of the houses inhabited by Jews were broken at Somerack and Kimpon. In this last town the populace, not content with breaking the windows of the Synagogue, penetrated into the interior, and destroyed every thing that served for the exercise of the Jewish worship.

The king of Bavaria has decided that the town of Wurtzburg must indemnify the Jews for the losses they have suffered in the late tumults there, and that the amount of the indemnity shall be imposed on such of the inhabitants as have excited these troubles.—The general animosity against the Jews is quite inconceivable. From every quarter we have accounts of the same scandalous scenes. At Rimbach, a village near Wurtzburg, the peasants not only plundered the houses of the Jews, but demolished the Synagogue, trampled on the Thosa or Ark, in which were the books of Moses, threw the whole into the street, broke the chandeliers, and committed the most reprehensible excess. In some little towns in Franconia there have been very serious tumults, occasioned by the same hatred of the Jews. At Bechta a Jew is supposed by a mistake to have been killed in the act of eating himself; but he gain in the cry of "help! help!" which is become so terrible to the Jews in Germany.

HEIDELBERG, Aug. 26.

After the words Hep! Hep! which may be considered as a rallying cry, had been heard for several weeks in the streets of this city, a Jewish girl was personally insulted by a mob, who were arrested; the larger crowd which marched through the city yesterday morning with music playing, on occasion of the fete of St. Louis, set him at liberty by its own authority; during all the rest of the day, a report was spread that excesses would be committed in the night against the Jews; part of them looked upon this report as quite unworthy of attention; but between 7 and 8 in the evening, bodies of men crying "Hep!" proceeded to the houses of the Jews, armed with hatchets, crowbars, and other similar instruments; they broke to pieces the doors, the windows, and shutters, and entered several houses, where they pillaged and destroyed all they could find; they then broke open the bureaus, in which there were money and papers; and took the first and tore the latter; lastly they cut the beds to pieces, and committed such ravages that almost a whole street was filled with feathers from the beds, fragments of furniture, &c.—This operation continued for some hours, without meeting with any obstacle; not the smallest step was observed to be taken by the police, or the armed citizens, to check the disorders, even after it was terminated: three houses were already pillaged, a fourth was on the point of experiencing the same fate, which would infallibly have been shared by all the Jewish houses, when all at once an unlooked for assistance appeared, which changed the face of things. It was the students of our university, who, armed with sabres, swords, &c. fell upon the plunderers immediately, put them to flight, and delivered those whom they could seize into the hands of the municipal authorities. Thus they preserved the Jews from further outrages, the citizens from greater disgrace, and the magistrates from a still greater responsibility.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 16.

Accounts from Irun, say, that several divisions of seamen have sailed from the ports of the Atlantic and Mediterranean, to join the fleet at Cadiz, where they would arrive by the end of August. The garrisons of Seville, Granada and Cordova, are ready to proceed to the coast for embarkation, at the first signal. Many transports from Bayonne and Bordeaux, furnished by private persons on terms very advantageous to themselves, have arrived at Cadiz. The fleet will consist of 200 sail and it seems certain that it departs in September. There is no foundation whatever for the report of the yellow fever having broken out at Cadiz.

GHENT, Sept. 5.

The persons, to the number of 11, arrested in this city, suspected, we believe, of enlisting men for the Independent of South America, are still in confinement, and have been interrogated several times.—Only one of them, M. de Gerville, a lawyer and householder of Cassel, who it seems was here on his private business, has been released after 10 days confinement.

MANHEIM, Aug. 20.

The Hanoverian Minister to the Diet has made, in the name of his Court, an important declaration that the Hanoverian Government does not consider the Diet as competent to lay down principles on such a subject; that, on the contrary, it is of opinion that each state is authorised to act according to the system which it shall judge the best to adopt. That the elector of Hesse has adopted a principle recognized by the law of nations, and according to which the conqueror, or temporary holder (detenteur) of a country, cannot exercise any other rights than those which he derives from military occupation; consequently, that he cannot alienate domains or other property.

NAPOLEON.

On returning from his facultless expedition to China, in 1817, Lord Amherst called at St. Helena, and with his suite paid a visit to Bonaparte. Mr. Abel, who was one of those attached to the Legation, thus describes him in the account of his journey, which he has published:

"Bonaparte's person had nothing of that morbid fullness which I had been led to look for; on the contrary, I scarcely recollect to have seen a form more expressive of strength, and even of vigor. It is true that he was very large, considering his height, which is about five feet seven inches; but his largeness had nothing of unwieldiness.—The fine proportion of his limbs, which has been often noticed, was still preserved. His legs, although very muscular, had the exactest symmetry. His whole form, indeed, was so closely knit, that firmness might be said to be its striking characteristic. His standing posture most attracted my attention. Dressed in a remarkable plain white frockcoat, which seemed scarcely to belong to the graceful ease of his step. The most remarkable character of his countenance, in this state, especially when viewed in profile, might be called settled design. But the instant that he enters into conversation, his features express any force or kind of emotion with suddenness and ease. His eye especially, seems not only to alter its expression, but its color. I am sure, had I only noticed it while the muscles of the face, and particularly of the forehead, were in play, I should have called it a very dark eye; on the contrary, when at rest, I had remarked its light colour and peculiar glary lustre. Nothing, indeed, could better prove its changeable character than the difference of opinion which occurred amongst us respecting its color. Although each person of the embassy naturally fixed his attention on Napoleon's countenance, all did not agree on the color of his eyes.

"There was nothing in the appearance of Buonaparte which led us to think that his health had at all suffered by his captivity. On the contrary, his complexion seemed to be the consequence of active nourishment. His form had all that tone, and his movement all that elasticy, which indicate and spring from powerful health. Indeed whatever sympathy we felt for the situation of any of the prisoners, received no increase from any commiseration of their bodily suffering; they were all in excellent health."—p. 316,317.

Mansion-house.—A poor bewildered creature named Elizabeth Dunham, was brought up, on charge of having stolen the keys of the bank on Saturday se'night. An officer stated that in consequence of information, he went to the prisoner's lodgings, and asked her for the keys of the bank. She at first denied that she knew anything of them, but the officer having found them under the bed, she readily admitted that she had taken them. In her apartment were found about a thousand keys, amongst which were those of the court of chancery, Christ's Church, Bartholomew's hospital, &c.. She told the officer that she had the best right to them, as they contained her property. "Why, (said he) you may go over the herring brook for this." "Very well, (she replied) I shall see a little more of the world—that's all." Two chests of keys were produced, to each key a piece of paper was affixed, stating from what place it had been taken. The officer said he found no more. "Oh! (said the woman) there is another chest full which had escaped your notice." The porter of Lothbury gate stated, that he met the prisoner coming out of the lodge. She had a small basket, and he suspected she had stolen something, and ran back to ascertain, but missed nothing. He afterwards missed the keys. He identified the keys produced by the officer. The poor manage called for Justice.—The country wanted reform, and she hoped the lord mayor would grant it. She had lost her husband, but she would not sell her flesh and blood for support though it satisfied to do so. Lord Castlereagh was her enemy, and she had robbed the House of Commons and the House of Lords, but she defied them to touch her. She hoped that the lord Mayor would allow her to go in his gilt coach to trial. It wanted painting and gilding, and could not be put to a better use. The lord mayor ordered that great care should be taken of her until her son who supports her should attend.

Mansion-house.—Elizabeth Dunham, the poor maniac, was examined a second time on Friday upon the charge of stealing the bank keys.

The officers brought from her apartment another chest of keys, which were most of them ticketed. Amongst them were the keys of the Houses of Lords and Commons, Carlton house, and the Treasury. But the most valuable in her opinion, were the keys of lord Sidmouth's wine cellars, and those of the duke of York. The number in all was about 3000.

Her son is in law attended. He said she was a woman of good education, and had married to great advantage.—About five years ago her husband died and left her a competency. She took a house and had lodgers amongst whom was one man, who by a series of villanies, deprived her of the means of living, placed her herself and children three or four months in confinement, and reduced her low, but she fell into the hands of persons in that situation who made her worse. The excess and variety of her misfortunes were greater than she could bear and her senses were lost amidst the accumulated miseries by which she was surrounded. A good humored levity succeeded to the tears, which used to flow at the prospect of her children's ruined expectations; and from that moment she became possessed of a sort of happiness which was only interrupted by the schemes and terrors of a wild imagination. She frequented the Courts of Law and upon one occasion lost the twelve Judges in the Exchequer Chamber, where they were deliberating upon a question of life and death. This extraordinary act she performed for its purpose, she said, of "keeping justice under lock and key," that the thousands who had been looking for it in vain might find it at last and be supplied with it for nothing. Soon after it occurred to her, that her own case demanded some of the powerful interference of her learned prisoners, but on going back she found that even they violated principles which they were bound to protect, by breaking prison, and that they had not left an atom of justice behind them except their wigs. She had among other strange fancies supposed that every place of which she had obtained possession of the keys became from that moment her own property, and had determined to leave them as an inheritance to her relatives. She was to be seen at all places of public resort. Her powers of memory are great. A number of keys were not ticketed. Upon glancing at them she mentioned from what particular rooms or houses she had taken them, and at what time of getting hold of the dressing room or trunk, of preventing the owner, had at one time one lace, from sell another. Upon one stole the keys of Hos Gaol, and caused the mos ry sensation among thos much interested, for it was another Jack Shepherd and all the ingenuity of set at work to prevent an cape. Notwithstanding tentions to this system o was never known to ne dren. THE WHALE FISHERY.

"What nation given to make war, and sitteth not down first, and counteth the cost."

Some of the newspapers speak as lightly of going to war with Spain, even if o ther nations should join her, as if war was a mere race show, which could be waged and closed like a sham fight; and be as expenseless and bloodless. But have those who thus speak, ever set down and counted the cost to their country and fellow citizens, of a war, to be waged to obtain compensation for damages? If they have not, what are their opinions worth? If they wish to make the calculation, they need not search for a multitud of documents. Our present object is to call their attention to one item of the losses which must occur to their Commercial Friends, in the annihilation of the Whale Fishery. To help them, we refer to a publication lately made in the New-Bedford Mercury; which we persuade ourselves must make a deep and lasting impression on their minds. In this publication, the following statement of the extent of the Whale Fishery of New Belford, Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard, is as authentic as it is interesting:

FROM NEW-BEDFORD.

There are round Cape Horn, or on their passages, 48 ships and 1 brig, (tonnage 5884) and whose outfits cost	$455,000
Return cargoes estimated at	890,000
From the Vineyard, there are two ships, which cost	50,000
Their return cargoes would probably amount to - - -	93,000
From Nantucket, 50 ships, which probably cost - -	1,330,000
Their return cargoes will probably amount to - - -	2,212,000
From New-Bedford, on this side Cape Horn, there are 11 ships and 8 brigs, which probably cost - - - -	277,000
Their return cargoes will probably amount to - - - -	363,000
From Nantucket, 10 ships probably cost - - - -	140,000
And their return cargoes will probably amount to - - -	227,000
Amounting in all to - - -	$6,20[illegible],000

An amount exceeding that to be paid for the Floridas; and this too the property of only three ports of Massachusetts! Most of this immense property—from the nature and extent of the voyages in which it is embarked—must be in immediate jeopardy on the declaration of war with Spain; as, independant of the facility of annoyance which Spain possesses, all the freebooters of the world, not excluding those of our own country, will be prowling the ocean in pursuit of it, under the Spanish flag.

In the grand agricultural race which has been run this fall, the following counties have come out first, viz:

Oneida—Wheat, 71 bushels to the acre.
do oats, 93 bushels to the acre.
do. domestic manufactures.
Otsego—corn, 125 bushels 26 quarts to the acre.
Saratoga—potatoes, 714 bushels to the acre.
Schenectady—ruta baga, 1250 bu. to the acre.
Schoharie—in the best style of ploughing, and also in the novelties and fur-nerlike style of their procession.
Hampshire—in their oxen for the stall.
Hartford—for the most splendid—the most useful display, and the greatest abundance of excellent domestic manufactures, must be permitted to wave the triumphant flag of patriotism.

We shall readily correct errors and mistakes, and continue the review as we are furnished with materials.—Albany Gazette.

NASHVILLE, Oct. 2.

A gentleman immediately from New-Orleans states, that previous to its leaving that city, the agent of a Swiss merchants arrived there from Europe, bearing the official transfer from the Spanish monarch of the whole province of Texas, to his employers. The Swiss purchasers are required to settle the country immediately, to acknowledge to his Catholic Majesty; but to be in every respect at liberty to form their own government, laws, &c.

The agent had expressed a wish to employ a small force to occupy the country until the settlers on the way arrived; but no one seemed to think it probable that General Long would respect his transit, unless he had power to compel it.

Capture of Santa Fee, Capital of New Grenada, by the army of General Bolivar.

His Britannic Majesty's brig Beaver, of 10 guns, Capt. Saumerez, from Carthagena, arrived at Kingston, (Jamaica) on the 14th September last; by her, official information was received, that on the 1st of July a battle took place between Bolivar and the troops of Spain, at a place called Yauge, in the valley of Sogamose, to the province of Junia. Bolivar had 2000 infantry and 500 cavalry in opposition to the forces of the Spanish General Barasino, of 3000 Royalists. The battle lasted till 10 at night, when the King's troops were obliged to retreat in great disorder.

A second battle was fought on the 25th of the same month (July) between the same parties, at Pantano de Bargas, near the capital of the Province of Junia, which lasted five hours, with desperation on both sides. Bolivar obtained a complete victory over the Royalists, who abandoned all their artillery, baggage & pressure. Bolivar has proclaimed martial law, and the Inhabitants are flocking to his standard.

A third battle was fought on the 7th of August, the result of which was that the army of Barasino was completely destroyed, with the exception of 400, who saved themselves by escape, and arrived at Mompax on the River Magdalens. There were 600 killed and 400 taken prisoners.

On the 9th of August, the Vice Roy (Samano) evacuated Santa Fee, and on the 11th Bolivar took possession of the same.

Bolivar has dispatched a division of his army against Carthagena.

Resurrection of Specie.—On Wednesday last, as some labourers were employed in removing the rubbish of an old building, and digging a new foundation, in Baker's Alley, on a lot belonging to Martin Hartley, Esq. they discovered, about two feet below the surface of the ground, a copper chest, and on raising it from its sepulchral bed, where it had slumbered in peaceful security probably twenty-five years, and opening it, to their great astonishment they found it filled with Spanish milled dollars, to the number of one thousand and upwards. The sudden and unexpected acquisition of such an immense and invaluable treasure, threw the poor fellows into such a transport of joy, as to make them overlook all arithmetical modes of calculation in the division of their prize, and each grasped eagerly for his share under the rule of the old maxim, "best fellow who gets the most"

The transition from under the "iron curse" of hard times, to the blessings of "silver age," proved however, of short duration—The rusty old Carolus's, just raised from the dead, on assaying were found to be all spurious—rascally copper—slenderly covered with a light silver wash, but in such a state of preservation as to give them the appearance of genuine, sterling silver money—they are dated 1793, and so exceedingly well executed as to leave no doubt of the proficiency of the artist in the work of counterfeiting.—Phil. Am. Cent.

NEW-YORK, Oct. 12.

It is worthy of remark, that the steam boat Manhattan, of nearly 500 tons burthen, is at this moment taking in freight and passengers for New Orleans. The superior power of her machinery has been satisfactorily proved and no anxiety is entertained as to her progress in ascending the Mississippi to New-Orleans, Louisville, &c. This novel and yet splendid undertaking cannot fail to excite the attention of those who have commercial operations in that rich and growing country.

FROM LOWER-CANADA.

MONTREAL, Nov. 6.

We are happy to understand the waters have been surveyed from La Chine to the foot of the Vaudreuil Rapids, and found practicable for navigation by steam with very little exception. The chief obstacles have been met with in these Rapids opposite to the Seignory of the Hon. Chartier De Lotbinier, and we are glad to hear these are of such a nature as to be overcome with little expense of labour or time. In the event of an inland navigation being established here, it will open a free and easy intercourse with one of the richest districts of our country; and also save a very great expense in the transport of goods to the Upper Province.

New Steam-Boat.—On the 7th ult. was launched at Boucherville the steam-boat Catherine, of which C. D. Decelles, Esq. of the same place, is the proprietor. It is said to be of an handsome construction —to be intended to ply between the New-Market and Longueil, and that it will commence its trips next Spring. Its size is pretty much the same as that of the steam-boat Edmond—Can. Courant.

HALIFAX, Oct. 9.

By a late London paper, we observe, that the Duke of Richmond was to be succeeded in the ensuing spring, in the command of the Canadas, &c. by our worthy Governor, His Excellency the Earl of Dalhousie. The mildness and beneficence of his Lordship's administration, and the lively interest he has taken in the internal prosperity of this Province, have gained him the universal esteem of its inhabitants. His departure to the above important command has long been looked upon as certain.

We congratulate the good people of Miramichi upon the growing importance of their place. There has been no less than forty seven arrivals at that place from July 8, to September 29;—And those cleared from July 2, to September 10th ninety. We are told that the cargoes of those that cleared, chiefly consisted of square timber.

We observe with much pleasure that our fellow-subjects in New-Brunswick not content with the increase of trade, resulting from the natural advantages which that Province possesses, are now employed in ascertaining the probability of connecting the waters of the Bay of Fundy with the Gulf of St. Lawrence, by means of a canal, to be cut from Chegnecto Bay, through to the Bay of Verte.

To the Judges of the Ploughing Match, for the readiness with which they accepted the Office and discharged the duties; and to W. F. Scott, Esquire, for the use of his Field, and the zeal which he has otherwise shewn for accommodating the Committee, and promoting the views of the Society.

A notice lately appeared in the Quebec Gazette of an intention to apply to the Legislature at its next Session for the exclusive privilege of erecting a Bridge over the St. Lawrence, at that city. In the next Gazette, the following Notice was given:

The Subscribers give notice that they will apply to the Legislature during its next Session, for obtaining the exclusive privilege of LIGHTING and WATCHING BY STEAM, Mr. Baptiste Caillouet's New Bridge over the River Saint Laurence.

VINCENT VAPEUR, & Co.
Quebec, 15th Oct. 1819.

We copy in this and the next number, an Essay on Roads; distributed by order of the Board of Agriculture, in Great Britain.

Although some parts of the Essay may be considered inapplicable in this country, yet the whole is interesting, and all its many valuable hints that may be found highly useful in the construction and repair of our Roads; and any information tending to lessen the annual expence in forming good and durable Highways, must be truly acceptable to every member of the community. We would particularly call the attention of Overseers of Roads to the paragraph respecting the rise from sides to centre. The sides of the Roads, in this part of the Province, rise so very slightly to the centre, that every carriage move as much as possible on the latter, causing thereby very undue wear of that part of the road: and, what is a much greater evil, when compelled to go on the side, by meeting other vehicles, not only is there very great risk of oversetting, but the ruts given by the lower or outer wheel is so enormous, that we might suppose such roads were made only for the encouragement of wheelwrights.

A practical Essay on the scientific repair and pre eration of Public Roads, presented to the Board of Agriculture, by John Loudon M'Adam, Esq. printed and distributed by order of the Board of Agriculture and Internal Improvement, London, 1819.

MEMORIAL.

To the Rt. Honorable the President and the Board of Agriculture.

The duties of the Memorialist, as a Magistrate and Commissioner of the roads in Scotland for many years, first induced him to turn his attention in a particular degree to this branch of our domestic economy. The obvious disproportion existing between the facility with which large sums are raised for the service of the roads on the one hand, and the means provided for ensuring a wise and economical expenditure on the other, excited an inclination to trace the causes of this great defect in the national system of road management; and for this object the Memorialist was induced to travel over a great part of the country, from Inverness in Scotland, to the Land's End in Cornwall, which gave him many opportunities to observe all the various modes of making and amending roads; the different kinds of materials used; and of comparing the success resulting from the several methods of constructing roads throughout the kingdom.

The ancient roads of the kingdom were paths beaten by travellers, who sought the driest ground, but without any attempt at forming an artificial surface. Modern roads have in most instances followed the same course as the old paths, which accounts for the improper lines of roads observable all over England.

When commerce became extensive and enclosures confined travellers to one path, attention was paid to making artificial roads, and a remedy was applied to the inconveniency of sinking into a soil constantly moistened under an uncertain climate. Great quantities of stone were thrown upon the subsoil, which rendered the roads just passable. But no regular system was adopted; and although practice has produced considerable improvement, yet to this day no scientific principles have been applied to this most important branch of our domestic economy. Nothing has been written on the subject of the surface of roads or the means of making them proper for the easy passage of carriages, though volumes have been published to recommend many useless, and many vexatious restrictions on the carriages themselves.

It seems never even to have been considered, what is required in constructing a public road; and it is generally deemed sufficient to collect a considerable quantity of stone or gravel, and to throw it down upon the ground.

The opinion having once unfortunately prevailed, that all exertions of science was unnecessary in the forming and preservation of the public roads, the profession of road-making became contemptible in the greatest decree; and it is at present believed to be perfectly adopted to the capacity of the most ignorant day-labourer.

This misapprehension has occasioned the fatal error of intrusting the care of the Turnpike roads, and the actual expenditure of the immense sums annually raised for their maintainance, to the hands of Surveyors selected from the lowest and most illiterate class of the community. Experience has shown, that the control exercised over these men by Commissioners, is very inefficient. The number of gentlemen constituting a trust; the universal ignorance of the principles of road making; and the private occupations of the Commissioners, render them totally unfit to enter into the detail of the business, or to exercise that constant and vigilant control, requisite to preserve integrity and economy throughout an expenditure so complicated and so extensive.

From these two causes, the want of all scientific principles in the construction of roads, and the want of education, rank and character in the officers under whose inspection the money passes to its destination, have proceeded the provincially bad state of the roads of Great Britain;—the enormous amount of the expenditure;—and the consequent creation of debt, which threatens in a few years to absorb the whole road funds for payment of interest.

The turnpike roads of England and Wales amount to about 25,000 miles in extent, and cost annually about a million and a quarter to maintain them, in their present defective state. The debt over the whole cannot well be estimated at less than seven millions; probably it even exceeds that sum; whilst the numerous petitions yearly presented to Parliament for increase of tolls, show, that this enormous debt is accumulating with alarming rapidity.

Many years necessarily elapsed, before the efforts of a private individual could obtain sufficient information to enable him to form any comprehensive maxims respecting a branch of the public service so widely extended; and where the ignorance of the executive officers rendered their communications of small value, whilst that little was often deceitful, always unwillingly bestowed. The following plans for the construction and repair of the roads of Great Britain, and the protection of the funds from mismanagement and speculation, were the result of the reflections of thirty years.

A road ought to be considered as an artificial flooring laid upon the naturally moist and soft soil of the island; this artificial flooring requires considerable skill and ingenuity in the choice and preparation of the materials, and in distributing them, so as to form what is required, namely, a strong, smooth, solid surface, over which carriages may pass without danger of sinking into the subsoil, or finding any impediment to prevent their being drawn with the smallest possible effort of animal labour.

We remark among the passengers who arrived in New-York on the 3d instant in the Packet ship Courier, from Liverpool, the name of Major Hillier, Private Secretary and A. D. C. to His Excellency the Lieut. Governor.—Kingston Chron.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CLARE ASSIZES.

The execution of the four unfortunate wretches who were hanged, pursuant to sentence at the Ennis Assizes, on Wednesday and Thursday week, is calculated to awaken those horrified feelings which accounts of savage ferocity, perpetrated centuries since, would fail to inspire. We would almost wish to avoid the contemplation of those scenes that led to the fatal consummation of a miserable drama; but our duty wills it otherwise, and sickening at the retrospect, we must still look on it, till vision, disgusted, refuses to perform its wonted office. The crime for which the first two suffered was murder—murder in such a shape as renders description hideous; the victim, an unfortunate female, who was supposed to have given information relative to illicit distilleries in the district of Moyree. At the close of the evening, a few months since, she passed, as was frequently her custom, the house of John and James Sullivan, wherein their companion, John Burns, was then employed in making whiskey. As the woman passed, Sullivan's mother called out in Irish, "There goes Biddy the informer." The men paused, gazed at each other, and, at that instant revenge and murder expelled reason and humanity from their souls; the ill-starred Biddy pursued her course, and they resumed their illicit work until they found it completed, without the hindrance which Biddy's appearance had led them to expect; joy at their success induced them to drink freely of the newly finished spirits, but this only added to their thirst for vengeance, and nought but the blood of their miserable victim could quench its fire. Armed with various weapons, they left their dwelling, and in one short hour Biddy, the informer, was no more: On entering her hut, which could not resist them, the foremost struck her on the head with a stone, which fractured her skull, and laid her at his feet; a yell of savage joy announced the triumph, and the prostrate, almost inanimate being was raised from the earth, to undergo more cruelties. She was placed against a wall, and her breasts were severed from her body; trembling with agony, she showed signs of life, till one, with more pity than the rest, by repeated incisions with a knife and pitchfork, made in the side and stomach, completed the work of carnage. Finding her no longer capable of administering to their horrid pleasures, they precipitated the misshapen carcase into an adjacent river, and coolly informed a man who lived near to it, that there was a woman drowning.—He, perhaps, aware of their character, or at least suspecting something, told them he would not open the door—that if the woman was drowned, his assistance could be of no use.—They could gain no admittance, and they retired—their hands and persons begrimed with gore. When they had gone, the man came out, and found what to him appeared to have once been a human body, but so mutilated as scarce to retain the semblance. They were arrested, convicted, & received the punishment they merited. Forty eight hours from the time sentence was passed, were allotted to them. A Clergyman of the Roman Catholic Faith attended, and, we trust, his constant admonitions were not lost. We saw them launched into eternity before those sads of spectators, from whom no groan of dissatisfaction proceeded, and the awful solemnity of which cannot fail to teach that country a deep, long lesson. But we are fated to proceed in this painful task; the following sun beheld two more pay the debt of nature for a crime, equal if not superior in magnitude, to what we have related. Singular, melancholy, and dreadful coincidence—one day a man dies for the murder of a woman—the next a woman dies for the murder of a man, and that man her husband!—her assistants, her panders in sin & guilt are—her father and her brother!—Oh, spirit of pity! hast thou fled the earth, or is our nature altered—are there no bonds strong enough to chain down this demoniac principle—has feminine tenderness been changed into bloody vengeance—have those mild and heavenly beauties which raised, her above the coarser qualities of manhood, been expelled the bosom of a woman, and left us nought to cheer us in the desertion of those better attributes? The execution of this terrific deed was more speedy than that above.—A family feud long existed between the unhappy husband and his wife's family, which they determined on concluding, by murdering the object of their sanguinary rage. The husband had been from home, and had drank some what too freely. On his return, his wife met him, and Judas-like, gave him the fond salutation of a kiss, drew him into the house, and casting her arms round him, seated him in her lap, whilst her brother beat out his brains. The father, we have heard, was a silent tho' relentless spectator. On the trial every circumstance was fully proved against the brother and sister. We need scarcely say they suffered for the deed.—Limerick Advertiser.

Commodore Rodger's visit to the Eastward is understood to have objects of greater importance than the examination of candidates for promotion in the navy. We understand that this experienced and scientific officer left Washington for the purpose of making a complete inspection into the state of our naval preparations in the Atlantic ports north and east of the Metropolis; and that which cannot fail to have a beneficial effect upon those branches of the naval service which his tour will extend to the Lakes.—Georgetown Mes.

At Washington, Mr. Isaac Clark aged 67, to Mrs. Ann Goddard, aged 65.—This couple we are informed, were situated to each other forty five years ago. The engagement, however, was broken off, and each married differently. In the course of time, the son of the one intermarried with the daughter of the other. It having pleased providence to take from them their respective partners, the two lovers in youth and now grands id age, have joined their fortunes in matrimony. It is worth remark that the married couple before mentioned, the children of the bride and bridegroom, were present and witnessed the union of their parents with real satisfaction.

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, Sept. 17.

At length the unsettled state of Drury-lane Theatre has determined Mr. K—— to accept the splendid offers made to him by the American mangers.—We understand he sails from Greenock the moment he has completed his Scotch engagements. The fate of our favorite Cooke, makes us regard the departure of Mr. Kean with great regret.—Edinburgh Courant.

CITY OF LONDON ADDRESS TO THE PRINCE REGENT.

At twelve o'clock on Friday forenoon, the Lord Mayor, attended by two Sheriffs, Alderman Waithman, the Recorder, the Common Serjeant, a number of Common Council men, &c. waited on the Prince Regent, agreeably to the appointment made on Thursday, with the Address voted by the Common Council, on the subject of the late transactions at Manchester.

Their reception from his Royal Highness was most gracious. On the right of the Prince were Lords Sidmouth & Castlereagh, on the left were the Duke of Wellington and Lord Liverpool.

The address having been read by the Recorder the Prince Regent made the following answer;

I receive with feelings of deep regret, this Address and Petition of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled.

At a time when ill-designing and turbulent men are actively engaged in inflaming the minds of their fellow subjects, and in endeavoring, by means the most daring and insidious, to abdicate them from their allegiance to His Majesty and the established Constitution of the Realm, it is on the vigilance and conduct of the Magistrates that the preservation of the public tranquility must, in a great degree, depend; and a firm, faithful and active discharge of their duty, cannot but give them the strongest claim to the support and approbation of their Sovereign and their Country.

"With the circumstances which preceded the late Meeting at Manchester, you must be unacquainted, and, of those which attended it, you appear to be incorrectly informed.

"If, however, the laws were really violated on that occasion by those to whom it immediately belonged to assist in the execution of them, the tribunals of their country are open to afford redress; but to institute an extra judicial inquiry, under such circumstances as the present, would be manifestly inconsistent with the clearest principles of public justice."

DUBLIN, Sep. 18.

Bernadotte.—Reports from Frankfort and Hamburg, have appeared in the French papers, received by this day's mail, that Bernadotte the King of Sweden has been shot dead; the Bremen Gazette of the 2d instant contains a similar report. No particulars, however, are mentioned, and accounts direct from Stockholm, dated several days anterior mention that Bernadotte was preparing to take a journey into the interior of his kingdom, to choose a proper situation for a strong fortress, which is to be made the principal depot of arms in the kingdom.

BERLIN, Sept. 18.

On the 14th, in the evening, the news which we had for some time dreaded arrived here, that Field Marshal Prince Blucher, of Wahlstadt, terminated his glorious life on the 12th of this month, at 19 minutes past ten o'clock in the evening, at his seat of Kriblowitz, in Silesia. His Majesty the King received this sad news by a report from the Aid-de-Camp of the Prince, Colonel Count Von Nostuzt, and also by a verbal communication from Captain Von Rudorf, the second Aid-de-Camp. His Majesty immediately gave orders that the army should put on mourning for eight days, and despatched Count Blucher, of Wahlstadt, the Prince's grandson, with a most gracious letter of condolence to the Dowager Princess.

Our readers wi l be glad to hear some account of the last days of the Prince's life.—On the 5th his Majesty sent from Breslaw his Aid-de-Camp, Major General Von Witzleben, to him. The Prince was very weak, but in full possession of his mental faculties. He desired General Witzleben to thank his Majesty for all the favours he had conferred on him, to recommend his wife to his Majesty's kindness, and to beg that he might be buried without ostentation, in the open country, in a field on the road between Kriblowitz and Kilast. on a spot which he described, under three lime trees. On the observation of the General that he need not think his death so near, as the physicians by no means considered his case as desperate, he said, "I know that I shall die, for I feel it better than the physicians can judge of my situation. I die without reluctance, for I am now of no further use. Tell the King that I have lived and shall die faithful to him." He gave the General his hand to take leave. The next day his Majesty, accompanied by Prince Charles, paid him a visit; at first he was in a kind of lethargy, and did not notice what was passing but afterwards he knew the King. His Majesty, among other expressions of regard, said to him, "You may be assured that no one takes more interest in your welfare than I do. I know what the country and myself owe to you—do not give up the hope of recovery; follow the advice of your physicians, and take the remedies that are offered you."—[The Prince had latterly omitted to do this.]—He thanked his Majesty, and recommended the Princess to him.

In the last few days he was without pain, but his strength greatly declined, and he was quite unable to speak. The body is embalmed, and placed for the present in the church of Kriblowitz. He was born, as far as we can learn from former accounts, on the 16th December, 1742; and has therefore lived 76 years, 8 months, and 25 days.

London, Sept. 13.—The Dublin Gazette of Wednesday last says, "On Sunday night the guards at the Castle were trebled, the pieces of artillery on the spot were prepared for any emergency, and a strong body of horse was ordered to patrole on the Nass road. Similar precautions were taken at the last mentioned town; the guards were there doubled, and the staff of the Kildare militia was ordered on duty. It is also asserted, in letters from the Queen's county, that several meetings took place in the neighbourhood of Mount Mellick of persons in arms.

The latest intelligence from St. Helena represents Bonaparte to be in good health, composing Memoirs, in which he is assisted by Bertrand and Count Montholon.

The expedition of Sir Thomas Hardy is said to protect British trading vessels in the ports of South America, and to prevent the blockade of ports by Spanish or Independent flags.

Henry Goulburn, in reply to a letter addressed to him from individuals in Glasgow, states that his Majesty's government no longer gives encouragement to persons proceeding as settlers to British colonies in North America.

It is known, that the Lancashire white hats are quite the rage among the radicals; and so much is this party badge in request in this county, that a hat manufacturer near Colne last week, received orders for 300 dozen of them. A hatter at Bolton sold last Thursday, 40 dozen of white hats trimmed with green girdles and a rose or knot of black crape on one side, the latter of which is worn as mourning for those who fell on the 16th ult at Manchester.

Sept. 19.

We have received Paris papers of Tuesday and Wednesday last. Several of the Departments have completed their elections of deputies; and by the list of the fortunate candidates hitherto published it is evident that the Ultra Royalists will rather lose than gain strength by the general result. We find that for the most part the deputies who have just vacated their seats, do not enjoy the confidence of the Electoral Colleges, and that not a few of their successful rivals have held offices under Napoleon, and were distinguished by their having held seats in the Chamber of Deputies during the short government of the "hundred days."

It is to be regretted that nocturnal meetings for the purpose of military training, are still common in the unfrequented parts of Lancashire and Cheshire.

The publicans of Dudley have received an intimation from the Magistrates, that if they allow "seditious publications" to be read in their houses, their Licences shall be taken away.

REVIVAL OF MANUFACTURES.

DUBLIN, Sept. 20.

A correspondent from Leeds informs us that a considerable improvement has taken place in the woollen trade at Leeds. This favourable alteration is felt chiefly in the shawl and pelice departments, which is confined to the home market. The stuff trade is also gradually improving, and it is hoped that this alteration, conjoined to the bountiful crops with which Providence has blessed the country, will render the approaching winter less distressing than was some time ago apprehended.

Hunt.—An obscure Morning Paper of Saturday states, that Hunt is coming over to Ireland, and will visit this city and Cork on a Reform Mission.

The following regiments have been ordered to be disbanded:—21st, 22d and 25th Light Dragoons, on their arrival from India; 3d West India regiment, on arrival at Sierra Leone; Royal African corps, on arrival at Sierra Leone and the Cape; Royal York Rangers, Royal West India Rangers, and York Chasseurs, on arrival in North America.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 17.

Spain.—An article from Madrid, in mentioning the refusal of the Spanish Court to ratify the Florida Treaty, adds, "We have doubtless provoked the anger of the United States, but we reckon upon the sincere and disinterested support of England, whose alliance has been for several years so useful to us."—The Ca[illegible] expedition, it is said, is positively to sail on the 15th inst. The bands of Melchior and Merino still maintain their position in Estremadura.

Austria is reinforcing its army.—Prussia is building fortified towns all along the provinces of the Rhine. The Duke of Wellington is to inspect them all, and Prussia's Police Commissaries are ranging all over Germany. Taking all these strange occurrences together, it is difficult to imagine how much our politicians must be puzzled.—Frankfort paper.

LONDON, Sept. 23.

Our readers are aware, that this is the day when the radicals of the common hall, at the suggestion of Mr. Alderman Waithman, are to have a civic uproar. We have made arrangement for detailing what passes, as amply as our limits, and the early hour at which we are compelled to go to press, will permit. We trust a proper degree of vigilence will be exercised to keep out of the hall those who are not livery-men. Let all the glory, or all the disgrace, of this day's proceedings be fairly shared by the citizens of London.

We have this morning received the Paris journals of Sunday. The bulletins respecting her royal highness the dutchess de Berri, and the infant princess, continue favorable.

From the Rhine, Sept. 1.—The Spanish Ambassador in North America, Don Onis, concluded before his departure, a provisional convention with a society of Swiss and Germans in North America, receiving the sanction of his catholic majesty, in order to found, in the province of Texas, a colony of Swiss and German peasants and mechanics. The members of this society have written to Baron Gugera for his opinion.

It is said that our ships of war on the peace establishment are in future to shift their station, so as not to remain more than a year on one station. Thus, if they begin in the Channel, they are to serve one year in the West Indies, and one year at St. Helena; or one year in the Mediterranean, and one year in South America. By this regulation, our officers and seamen will be more inured to the different climates, and obtain a more perfect knowledge of maritime geography.

A letter dated Ingouville (near Havre.) Aug. 29, 1819, says—"The vintage of this year will be so productive throughout France, that an immediate reduction of 50 per cent. in the prices of wines is expected; but the heavy rains in July so completely laid the corn, that the wheat will not average more than 50lb the Winchester bushel, in any of the provinces."

PARIS, Sept. 26.

From recent intelligence, which has reached us from the island of Sumera, we learn that the trade with India is wholly in the hands of the English. The Anglo-Americans alone rival them on some points. All other nations find there more danger than profit.

An extensive plan of defence is talked of, which is said to have been adopted by government. All the vulnerable points of the kingdom, from the Pyrenees to the Rhine, and the Belgian frontier line, are to be fortified. Bayonne will be erected into a fortress of the first rank. Grenoble will be a depot for arms, and will be encompassed by fortifications. Belfort, which has only a citadel of little importance, will be converted into a fortress capable of containing a strong garrison. The fortifications of Lauterburgh, on the lines of Alsace, will be extended; Bitche, which has hitherto only had a fortified castle, will be made a considerable fortress. Several small fortified towns of the third class will be put in a respectable state of defence.

GLASGOW, Sept. 14.

Monday night, our streets exhibited one scene of confusion, alarm and mischief. A body of men and boys to the amount of nearly 3000, came in at the east end of the town at darkning, from Bridgeton, Calton &c. Paisley, it was understood, was the place of their destination. On their way through Gallowgate street they left only six whole lamps, and at eight o'clock that part of the town was in complete darkness. Breaking lamps in Trongate, Candleriggs, Argyle street Stockwell, Glassford street, they proceeded to the west end of Tradestown, leaving not one on the bridges. On arriving at Bridge street they assailed the Methodist meeting house there while the people were at worship, and broke almost every window. The windows in Clyde-street, West-street, Dale-street and King's-street, were more or less broken, and the shops of ——Jamison and —— Dun, bakers, were broken into and bread and other articles carried away. John Cochrane, spirit dealer, had his house completely emptied of rum, whiskey, porter, &c. and the jars broken to pieces. In Carlton, several shop keepers' shops were ransacked, and the windows of many respectable inhabitants broken. At the Black Bull, the riot act was read by the sheriff at nine o'clock, and the streets which were in the utmost confusion with depredators and women and men, who had collected from mischief and curiosity, were cleared in a very short time. Two pieces of ordnance, accompanied with a body of infantry and a troop of hussars, were speedily brought out. We have heard of no particular accident further than a fire that happened in a small wright's shop in Stockwell, which was soon extinguished; several of the military, by the throwing of stones from a new building there, were much annoyed and hurt.—Several of the inhabitants received slight wounds; but owing to the good conduct of the masters, which deserves the highest praise, nothing of a serious kind happened. At two o'clock this morning, the military retired leaving a small piquet behind; and till this moment all remains quiet. The house of the Rev. Dr. M'Lean, Gorbals, was also assailed, and the whole windows in the second flat broken. Two hundred and twenty city lamps have been demolished.—During the night upwards of two hundred men and boys were made prisoners. They have not yet all been examined; but of those, more than thirty have been sent to gaol to undergo a prosecution. Those found in the new house corner of Stockwell, have been wholly sent to prison. At this place the rioters threw a fence, made with tresses and masons planks, at the time the fire was burning, across the street to prevent the cavalry and the firemen from advancing; besides the military, many have got themselves much bruised, as those of the mob who had climbed up into the interior of the new building threw stones indiscriminately on those in the streets.

A person who witnessed the breaking of the lamps, states that seemed to be their first object. The night was exceedingly dark, and rendered it still more irksome by attacking every window on their route, even at the height of three stories, in which the light was put out on their approach; this, with the horrid yells they emitted, swelled their numbers almost to infinity in the minds of the terrified inhabitants. When the drums beat, it was conceived that the revolutionists had set fire to the town and that all was over.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

NEW BRITISH MINISTER.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Liverpool, to his friend in this city, dated Oct. 1.

"You will hear by this ship, that a new minister, Mr. Stratford Canning cousin of George Canning, is appointed minister to the United States—he was formerly minister to Switzerland.

A Summary of the Progress of the Arts in France.

Compiled for the Democratic Press, from M. Chaptal's comparison between the industry of France in 1789 and 1819.

In 1789 the French imported cotton goods, to the amount of 26,000,000 of francs; in 1812, 1 million and a half.

The Cachemire shawls of M. Ternaux are fully equal to those of India. The Angola goats imported lately, promise new facilities to this manufacture.

The Manufactures of linen and silk, have been wonderfully improved of late years; the machinery of Mr. Douglass, invited into France, by M. Chaptal, has greatly contributed to the perfection of all the manufactures depending on spinning and weaving.

The establishments of the manufactures of chemical articles now excel the English, both in quality and price.

The art of bleaching, both with and without the aid of oxymuriatic acid, has been carried to the highest perfection, not only on linen and cotton, but on the pulp of paper. In this way, colours are not only discharged, but paper is also coloured now, with the most beautiful tints, at a cheap rate.

Distillation has been brought to great perfection, by the improvements of Messrs. Chaptal, Argand and Edward Adam. The first improved the form of the still by diminishing its depth in proportion to its capacity; the latter saved fuel by his mode of heating the wash, and condensing the spirit of various strengths by a single operation.

During the revolution the art of making vinegar for the table, for manufacturers and for medicine, by distilling wood and clarifying the pyroligneous acid, has been so improved, as to supply great part of the consumption of this article at the best tables of Paris.

The art of chemically purifying water by the improvement of filtres, not merely in the mechanical construction, but in the chemical additions that precipitate the impurities of water, have essentially contributed of late years to health and comfort.

The art of extracting the finest and most nourishing of soups from the gelatine contained in bones, was brought to great perfection by M. Cadet de Vaux,——, and the art of preserving meat, fruit, vegetables, and milk, perfectly good for years by the process of M. Appert, is also a present from philosophy to society.

The expeditious mode of tanning, of M. de Seguin, is, indeed only expedient upon urgent occasions; but the theory of tanning has wonderfully improved the practice of it, by applying to this art, the discovery of the skin and the chemical changes that take place in it, during the operation of tanning.

In France for some years past paper has been manufactured of any definite length.

The memoir of Monge, on the process of felting, has greatly improved the last manufacture.

The metallurgy of France, now in all its branches equals the English.

In porcelain the French excel at present all Europe.

The stone engraving of M. de Lestrychie, is daily improving, and promises to afford every scientific work requiring plates, at much lower prices than formerly.

From the Detroit Gazette of Oct. 1.

We understand that a treaty with the Chippewa Indians has been concluded by Governor Cass, for the cession to the United States of a considerable portion of this Territory, including all the country upon the Saguna river and its branches. The boundary of the tract now purchased, commences at the present Indian boundary line west of this place, and runs from that point due west six miles, thence in a direct line to the head of Thunder-bay river, and down the same to the mouth, which is probably from seventy five to one hundred miles north west of Saguna river."

The treaty has been concluded upon terms equally advantageous to the United States and to the Indians, and in a manner so satisfactory to the latter, that we learn their chief speaker, Nushemenonequet, was despatched by the nation to wait for Governor Cass upon this side of the Saguna river, and to inform him that they felt perfectly satisfied with the arrangement which had been made, and very thankful for the attention shewn to them.

Considerable reservations have been made for them, and the means provided for assisting them in agriculture; and there is reason to hope from the disposition they now manifest, that they will become a stationary, industrious and farming people.

This cession, containing more than six millions of acres, is very important to this Territory. The gentlemen who attended the treaty from this place, concur in opinion respecting the situation of the land and the natural advantages of the country. They represent the soil to be of the finest quality, heavily timbered with immense forests of sugar tree and black walnut timber, and a large part of it equal, in every point of view, to the Miami and Scioto bottoms in the state of Ohio.

The Sagana is stated to be a fine large river, navigable many miles from the Sagana Bay for vessels of burthen, and far into the interior of the country for loaded boats. Five considerable streams unite at a place called La Fourche, to form this river, presenting an almost unexampled instance of a beautiful and highly fertile country, being watered in a most beautiful manner.

A letter from Buenos Ayres, on the 18th of June, states that Lord Cochrane had received information of a convoy richly laden, that was about to set sail from Guayaquil, and he despatched two vessels after them. In the mean time they took refuge in the port of Paita, where they are closely shut up, having received information of the movement of our ships. Finding the convoy including money, was estimated to two millions of dollars, Cochrane we learn, yesterday, resolved to go down upon them with the Marin Isabel and Galvarino; and no doubt, he has ere this given a good account of them. The convoy was escorted by the Spanish frigate Cleopatra. Lima is in a state of the greatest fermentation; and from thence we are firmly assured that a debarcation of 4,000 men, would be more than sufficient to overturn the vice regal power and forever crush the hopes of Spain.

NEW-YORK, Nov. 9.

Effects of the Hurricane of 23d September last.

At Tortola, of forty sets of sugar works, not more than six are standing, and four fifths of the town laid in ruins. The hon. Andrew Anderson, and the hon. A. C. Hill, members of the council, are among the killed; also Mrs. Hetherington, the lady of the President of the Island. The President himself was taken out of the ruins of his house, on the morning of the 22d, in such a mutilated state, that his life is despaired of. Twelve other white inhabitants were killed, and total number of lives lost 146.

At St. Martin's, the town of Simpson's Bay was inundated by the swell of the sea, the houses carried away and many lives lost. The town at Marigot suffered partially the same fate, and the houses near the sea washed away. The town at Phillipsburg on the Great Bay side of the Island, was torn to pieces by the sea and wind; very few buildings were left standing, and they very much shattered. The sea forced a passage through the town, so that it now communicates with the salt pond, which was back of the town. The walls of the English Church were of the best workmanship and two feet thick, yet the building is levelled to its foundation. Mrs. Bartow was crushed in the ruins of her house, and about two hundred lives lost on the Island.

In the country every estate has suffered heavily, and some of the finest completely destroyed, particularly at Cul de Sac and Little Bay. The growing crop entirely destroyed, and but three boiling houses left standing on the island.

ALEXANDRIA, October 17.

Extraordinary Load of Flour.—We were gratified on Thursday last with a sight both novel and pleasing—it was the arrival of a waggon from the neighborhood of Winchester, drawn by six horses, with the extraordinary quantity of forty barrels of flour on it.—This team belonged to Mr. R. W. Hamilton of Frederick county, and travelled the distance in the usual time, without any apparent difficulty to the horses.—It was unloaded at the store of Messrs. Gibson and Lupton, on King-street.

The merchants of Amsterdam (says the Philadelphia Gazette,) have raised five millions of Guilders for the purpose of opening a Canal from the Helder to that city, a distance of 50 miles, by which the largest ships will be enabled to proceed and discharge their cargoes at the city and thereby avoid the great expence and pillage attending the present mode of transporting by lighters—the work commenced in May, and upwards of 2000 men have been employed in its prosecution.

At the Cattle Show and Fair held at Ballstown Spa, for the County of Saratoga, E. Stimson, Esq. had awarded to him the following premiums, viz.

The best cultivated Farm 150 acres, $10

Indian Corn, 104½ bus per ac	15
Barley, 60½ bus per acre	5
Sp wheat, 26 bu 6 qts p acre	8
Potatoes, 714 bus per acre	6
Beans, 40 bus per acre	5
Grass, 3 tons 3 cwt per acre	4
Garden, 1 acre 50 rods	5
Gelding	6
Yard of Poultry, 250 Fowls,	3

The hills of corn were planted at the distance of two feet eight inches apart—There were two hundred and twenty-five pumpkins to the acre, which grew on the same land with the corn. A cabbage from Mr. Stimson's garden, which was exhibited at the fair, weighed 33 1-2 lbs.—Alb Gaz.

Foreign Gold Coins, having ceased to be a tender in the United States, it is understood that the banks, generally, will still continue to receive them. They eventually will find their way into the mint of the United States for coinage.

SNOW, two feet deep, (says the Chatauque Gazette) fell on the 24th October in this county and the sleigh bells begin to jingle.

Novel Legal Decision.—A suit was lately instituted in the Fayette circuit court of Kentucky, on behalf of the bank of the United States, by its office at Lexington, for the recovery of the amount of a note for 600 dollars. A demurrer was filed by the defendant, on the ground, that the bank of the United States has no right to purchase or deal in promissary notes; and the court, Judge Mills on the bench, sustained the demurrer, and discharged the defendant, the bank having to pay costs.

MONTREAL, Nov. 13.

Meteorological Phenomena.

The astonishing appearances which the past week has exhibited will make it long remembered by the inhabitants of this district; and Tuesday last will be classed by after ages, with the celebrated dark Sunday which happened in 1765. A series of awful events have occurred, equally impressive to the mind of the illiterate and the learned. While the former viewed these events as they passed, and with a mixture of dread & veneration saw in them the immediate interposition of "Him who rides on the whirlwind, and directs the storm"; the latter felt his mind recoil back on itself, and tremble at his own nothingness.—All his best established facts, all his first principles, and his long train of causes, and effects were totally in adequate to explain the aberations from the usual course of nature he saw passing before him.

The first unusual appearance which attracted general notice happened on Sunday last. The morning was remarkably dark for the season; and about 8 o'clock A. M. the whole atmosphere appeared covered with a thick cloud or haze of a dingy orange colour. The wind was light from the N. N. W. and seemed incapable of dispelling the heavy mass which floated in the sky. A little before 9 o'clock a shower of rain fell, of a dark inky colour, and apparently, much impregnated with some black substance resembling soot or fine ashes. This for the time seemed to account for the singular appearance of the heavens. It was conjectured a volcano had broke out in some distant quarter and the ashes from the eruption floating in the cloud gave it the unnatural colour. During the day the weather cleared, the sky assumed its natural aspect, and the afternoon became seasonably pleasant.

Tuesday was a day that set anxiety on the rack and put conjecture at defiance. The morning opened with a clear serene sky; a gentle breeze from the northwest, and a smart frost during the night led us to anticipate a day fitted for business or amusement. About 10 o'clock A. M. the wind became variable, veering round to the westward, and again becoming more northerly. A heavy damp vapour seemed to envelope the whole city, and the appearance of the atmosphere indicated rain. As the forenoon advanced the sky became more and more surcharged with dense clouds; The darkness encreased to such a degree that by 12 and 1 o'clock it became necessary to light candles in all the public offices in Town and even in the butchers stalls in the market place they were found indispensably necessary. The darkness still continued to increase, and with it there appeared a general dread as to what might be the result, pervading every countenance. But although the darkness went on augmenting, it was not uniform in its progress. A white silver coloured stream of light seemed for the moment to penetrate the dense atmosphere, and for a few seconds it appeared as if clearing away.

It was during these periods, the aspect of the heavens was most striking to an attentive observer. The deadly pale light which came for the instant, as if to cheat our hopes and mock our feelings, seemed by their refraction through the cloud to proceed from a stratum between it and the earth; and the blackened colour of the air viewed through the luminous substratum presented a spectacle awful and grand in the extreme. The general dread seemed now to have reached its climax: all viewed the phenomenon as connected with some great convulsion of nature, but whether the precursor or follower of such an event none could tell. A little before 2 o'clock there was a slight shock of an Earthquake, distinctly felt in different parts of the city, accompanied with a noise resembling the discharge of a distant piece of Artillery. As the attention of all classes was closely rivetted on the more imprissive aspect of the sky, but little notice was paid to the clock. The increasing gloom engrossed the attention of all, and every thing else gave way to the awful expectations of what might be the conclusion. About 20 minutes past 3 o'clock, after the darkness had gradually increased and seemed at that moment to have attained its greatest depth, the whole City was instantaneously illuminated by one of the most vivid flashes of lightning ever witnessed in Montreal; This was suddenly followed by an awful peal of thunder, so loud and near as to shake the strongest buildings to their foundation.

The proximity of the thunder, and the violence of the concussion, impressed many people with the belief that a second Earthquake had happened. If this was the case, it must have been at same instant with the thunder and not distinguished from it; but we are of opinion the vibratory motion felt, was altogether owing to the vicinity of the cloud at the the time it discharged its electric contents. The first peal was followed by a few others, and accompanied with a heavy shower of rain, similar to what had fallen on Sunday, but of a darker hue and apparently more charged with black sooty matter.

After the thunder and rain had subsided the darkness did not entirely disappear as might have been expected, had it proceeded from a thunder cloud as usual. On the contrary it still continued and seemed to increase till about 4 o'clock. The general anxiety however became somewhat appeased as the cause of the unusual appearance had been in explained. To describe the general feeling during the forenoon of this day, is a task to which few pens are adequate. Although the first peal of thunder gave relief to many as being explanatory of the cause; it came at such a time, and when the minds of all were prepared to expect some dreadful catastrophe "that the boldest held his breath for a time."

As "the murky hour of night" approached, men became less sensible of the continued darkness, they had become in some measure reconciled to the appearance, and were talking over the occurrence with comparatively more composure. But the events of this day were not yet closed. Between 4 and 5 o'clock it was discovered that the lightning had struck the spire of the French Church in Notre Dame street; and the first intimation of this was the flames issuing from the top of the spire at the place where the iron crucifix joins the wooden part of the steeple. The appearance through the cloudy dense atmosphere showed like a distant lighthouse seen far at sea. The fire engines were procured with all possible despatch, but none of them were of a sufficient power to throw the water to such a height. With great exertion a small garden engine was procured, and got up to the highest Belfry. From this position they kept playing on the inside of the spire, by which means the progress of the flames was checked; but not before the timber which supported the crucifix was consumed, as well as the ball at the bottom of it. About 8 o'clock the iron crucifix fell, with a tremendous crash, and broke in several pieces. Fortunately it came down in Notre Dame-street, near the corner of a house occupied by Mrs. Barnard, Milliner; and no further accident occurred from its descent. Soon after it fell, the fire was extinguished, without destroying the spire or communicating with any of the adjacent buildings.

We have not as yet heard of any farther injury having been done by the lightning in other quarters. Reports of some churches in the country being burnt have reached town, but they require confirmation.

YORK, NOVEMBER 25, 1819.

We understand that George Crookshank, Esq. is appointed Receiver General of this Province, and also, a member of the Executive Council; and that H. J. Boulton, Esq. is appointed Solicitor General.

The Anniversary Dinner of the Society of Friends to the Stranger in distress, will take place on Tuesday the 30th inst. at the Mansion House Hotel.—Dinner to be on the table at 5 o'clock.

Members or other Gentlemen who wish to be present, will please to send their names to Mr. Forest, on Saturday next.

R. C. HORNE, Sec'y.

It is our painful duty to communicate to our readers the death of Mrs. M'Gill, wife of the Hon. John M'Gill, Receiver General of the Province. This melancholy event, which happened on the morning of the 21st, has thrown a deep gloom over the face of the whole Society, and left a sad blank which will not soon be filled up. She had experienced the most acute and racking pain during a very long illness, which she bore with uncommon meekness and resignation.—In her departure, York has lost one of its most useful members and distinguished ornaments; her intimate acquaintances, a kind hearted friend; her husband, an affectionate and invaluable wife. Few persons ever possessed the benevolent and amiable qualities of her sex in a more eminent degree. The kindness and attractive simplicity of her manners, endeared her to all who knew her. The sons and daughters of distress and want claimed her regard, and shared it bountifully.—Her life might be considered a stream of benevolence, and it was Christian benevolence, which disregarded labour, fatigue, or trouble in doing good.

In the hour of death, Mrs. M'Gill enjoyed the consolations of our holy religion, for she was a sincere Christian, and of the most pious habits; and, from the whole tenor of her life, we have the best grounds for believing, that she will be welcomed at the day of judgment, and admitted to the joy of her Lord.

May we not hope, that an example so pious, benevolent, and resigned, will not pass away without producing some blessed effects upon her sorrowing friends and neighbours.

[It has been observed, that the general appearance of the country improves with the improvement of the roads that intersect it; they may be compared to a tract of reclaimable country, as arteries and veins in the human body, conveying life and vigour from part to part. —County Rep.]

A practical Essay on the scientific repair and preservation of Public Roads, continued.

The first of these objects, strength, is obtained by the quantity of materials; in this respect, all the old roads of the kingdom have been overdone; and the Memorialist has generally found a sufficient supply in a road for several years use.

The second, smoothness and solidity, can only be obtained by a proper selection, preparation and distribution of the materials. None but firm and solid bodies can be made smooth. It seems therefore an obvious proposition, that the materials of which a road is to be composed, should be reduced to such a size as shall enable carriages to pass over, without striking against them, so that they may be consolidated by a perpendicular pressure. The size of the stones must be proportioned to that part of the wheel which will form the point of contact upon a smooth, level surface; and this will be found to be about an inch square. When the stones of a road exceed the size of this bearing, the wheels of carriages will keep them in constant motion, and prevent their consolidating; because, when a wheel rests only on one part of the stone, the other part rises; or, if the stone be so large that the wheel does not pass over, but strikes against it, besides the impediment presented to the carriage, a great damage is done to the road. From this it appears, that every stone above a specified size is a positive disadvantage in road making. Upon a road made of well ordered materials, wheel carriages will pass over without any jolt or shake; and consequently without that action and reaction between the wheels and the stones, which is the real cause of the present bad state of the roads of Great Britain. A rough road can only be a road made of large stones; and as neither use, nor change of weather, can produce them, this defect must be entirely of the road-maker.

It has been urged in favour of the practice of using large materials, that carriage wheels very soon break them. Supposing this assertion well founded, it would not be difficult to prove, that carriage wheels are the most expensive breaking hammers which can be employed by the public. But it is not true, that the work is effectually performed; for wheels passing over and amongst large stones grind them to powder, instead of breaking them into proper sizes. The same argument also applied to an opinion very commonly entertained, that breaking the stones small, anticipates the friction and consequently the wear of the road: There is much more friction upon a rough road, than on one perfectly level and smooth.

In making a road, the practice of mixing the stone with sand or earth, is to be carefully avoided. Earth retains the moisture, is strongly affected by frost, and changes with every variation of the weather. Clean unmixed stone cannot be acted upon by any change of the weather; and a road properly made will be equally good in all seasons.

Until some powerful hand shall form one uniform system of making and repairing roads upon a scientific plan, and of preventing different Trusts being competitors for the purchase of materials, as is the case at present in the neighbourhood of London, all the little palliatives of regulating acts will be nugatory: the hydra evil, of Commissioners expending immense sums in marring the roads with large stones, blended with earth, and other mischievous materials, will continue. Whatever carriages the law may compel men to draw through such roads, for at present they do not travel over them), must continue to act as ploughs.

When the necessity of adopting one scientific system for the management of roads throughout the kingdom shall be felt by the Legislature, in order to insure its success, another great public act will remain to be performed.

The Legislature has intrusted the care of local road affairs, to Commissioners selected from that class of the community least liable to abuse the confidence reposed in them; and as far as their duties extend, it is impossible to commit this great trust into better hands. But it appears, that these Commissioners are, from various causes, incompetent to the unremitting vigilance & quisite in executive officers; and thus while every other branch of the public service, requiring the expenditure of large sums, is placed under the constant control of men of rank and character, the road revenue remains without any efficient protection against the united depredations of dishonesty and ignorance.

The remedy proposed is, to commit the scientific direction of the work into the hands of responsible officers, of the rank of Gentlemen; to place the Subsurveyors under the orders of those officers, upon whose report the Commissioners may safely rely, in selecting deserving and trust worthy persons as Subsurveyors; and by whom all those Surveyors may be first instructed, as well as directed in the proper discharge of their duties.

The system of road management hitherto practised, has had the effect of repressing every effort for acquiring skill, and every exertion of science, as connected with this branch of service. Men of education, of character, & of rank in society, must now be induced to accept the situation of General Surveyors of Counties or Districts, by due encouragement from the country; by the profession being made properly respectable and reasonably lucrative.

As the care and management of the roads of the kingdom can never, with advantage to the public, be taken from the commissioners, and consequently the nomination of General Surveyors, and other officers, must remain with them, it will be necessary, in order to obviate the danger of the abuse of patronage to commit a general inspection of roads, to some department of the Government. The department most obviously and naturally connected with the roads, is the Post-Office, and the public voice has already decided, that to this authority the superintendance should be committed by a special commission to the Post Masters General.

This additional department must be invested with a discretionary power, to suspend officers in cases of neglect or misconduct; and a report of the condition of the roads in every district, their extent, alterations made, &c. &c. with a copy of the accounts, and an exact statement of the finances, must be transmitted yearly, by the Surveyor-General to the Post-Office, which must lay the whole before Parliament.

A laudable ambition to excel being thus excited by the prospect of further promotion, gentlemen's sons will be induced to acquire the necessary skill and information, to follow this profession. Although from local circumstances, some appointments will be less liable than others, the confidence reposed must in all cases be so great, that it will be impossible to consider the public interest safe in any other than the hands of a gentleman.

The expence of such an establishment will appear as nothing when the immense sums annually lost to the public through misapplication and fraud, are properly considered. Whenever the Memorialist has been called upon to examine into the affairs of a Trust, and to attempt an amendment of its Roads, it has been proved incontestibly, that at least one-third of the funds has been unprofitably, if not mischievously expended. A tythe of the money thus squandered would liberally provide for an establishment which would effect a general reformation of roads throughout the kingdom.

The heavy expence to the public, in the consumption of horses and carriages, occasioned by the present deplorable state of the roads, although it falls so gradually on all ranks of the people, as to be little thought of, is a subject deserving the serious attention of the Legislature. The sum so lost by the nation has been estimated by a Committee of the House of Commons, in 1811, at five millions per annum.

CHINESE NOTIONS AND SUPERSTITIONS.

On the 13th of May, 1818, a storm suddenly arose at Peking, which darkened the Heavens, and filled the air with sand and dust. The Emperor was excessively alarmed, conceiving it to be a Divine Judgment, and was anxious to know its meaning; he also called on his Ministers of State to endeavor to discover the cause.

In a public document, he reprimanded his astronomers for not having previously informed him when the hurricane was to take place: they had but three days before stated to him what felicitous stars shed their happy influence around his person, and indicated long life and prosperity; but all this, he says, was the language of flattery, whilst they either could not or would not tell him what evils were about to happen.

Three of these 'wise men' gave their opinion that the cause of the hurricane was the dismissal of the late premier Sung Tajin, and suggested the propriety of recalling him; but his Majesty was far from approving their suggestion, and reproved the advisers for their presumption in meddling with his royal prerogative.

The Mathematical Board also presented their opinion, and intimated that if this kind of hurricane, accompanied by a descent of dust, continued a whole day, it indicated perverse behavior and discordant counsels between the sovereign and his ministers: it also indicates great drought and dearness of grain. If the wind blew up the sand, moves the stones, and is accompanied with noise, inundations were to be expected. If the descent of dust continued but an hour, pestilence may be expected in the south west regions, and half the population will be diseased in the south east.

The Gazette expresses his majesty's painful anxiety on account of the long drought, and has sent his sons to fast, to pray, and offer sacrifice to Heaven, to earth, and to the God of the wind. The 20th of May was to be a solemn fast—and on the day of sacrifice, the kings, nobles, ministers of state, &c. &c. were all to appear in a peculiar cap and upper garment, indicating deep contrition

From the above it appears, that the minds of the highest classes of the community in China are exercised about Sin—and providence—and punishment; and that the light which unassisted reason affords them, is by no means such as to render a Divine Revelation superfluous.

From the Cooperstown Journal, Oct. 25.

Agricultural.—We are pledged to publish the mode of culture adopted by those who were the successful candidates for premiums on corn, &c. at the late fair in this county; but upon an examination of the papers on this subject, could find but a very few instances in which they had been so particular as to describe the whole process, and some of those were not novel nor extraordinary. However to redeem our promise in part, we have selected the descriptions given by Mr. Hayden and Mr. Brightman, the former having raised 125 bushels and 26 quarts of corn to the acre, and the latter 109 bushels and 4 quarts.

Mr. Haydon's Statement.

"The land upon which the crop was raised, had been occupied several years as a meadow, is of a flat surface, was ploughed first in October 1818, in the spring following harrowed, and soon after plowed and harrowed—then furrowed, the furrows being 2 feet 3 inches apart. The seed was prepared by steeping it in a strong lye made of hog manure, for 24 hours; after which the lye was drained off and I added to half a bushel of seed half a peck of plaster, stirring it until the corn was covered with plaster.—The seed was then suffered to stand until it had grown an inch, when I planted it in single kernels promiscuously at the bottom of the furrows, and then filled the furrows about half full of barn yard manure, to which had been added about five load of hog manure. In weeding time I pulled out many stalks, leaving those remaining about seven inches apart. It was succored once, and hoed three times."

Mr. Brightman's Statement.

The ground is a clayey loam and had been many years in meadow.

About the middle of April it was ploughed very shallow, just cutting through the sward. I then carried on to about an acre and a quarter, thirty waggon load of barn manure, and ten waggon load of chip manure; then gave it a deep ploughing and harrowed it down. The whole of the ploughing was 4 times and harrowing was performed as often. About the middle of May I disposed the land into ridges about 3 feet a part. After leveling the ridges with the hoe, I planted the corn on the ridges at the distance of 8 inches per grain a part. It was hoed in the usual manner 3 times. Previous to hoeing the last time, the succors were all taken off, immediately following with the hoe, and covering up the wounded stalks, which I think was of essential service to the crop by preventing them from emitting their juice. The corn that I planted was the small 8 rowed white corn, intermixed in slight degree with the yellow.

Two Calves, raised by Mr. Isaac J. Newton, of West-Hartland, one calved on the 25th of March last, weighed on the 6th inst. 672 lbs; the other, calved on the 8th of April weighed 547 lbs.: after having been driven 30 miles.

PROSPECTUS.

"Salus Populi, Suprema Lex."

The safety of the People, the supreme Law.

IN the motto selected, we trust the Rulers and the ruled, in all countries where rational freedom is cherished, will recognize the great and important truth it contains. Life, Liberty and Property are the primary objects which the compact of civil society is intended to secure; and on those principles are the Constitution and Laws of England founded. Among the most essential securities the British nation doth enjoy at this day, may be ranked the Independence of the Press. But for this auxiliary, the condition of the liberties of the people of England would be no better than that of the Cossacks, or poor and miserable peasantry of Poland & of Germany. So valuable a privilege cannot be too highly appreciated by the people of this Province, who have hitherto displayed an honourable attachment towards its support; and their patronage is again respectfully solicited.

In putting forth to the public—to the world, the Prospectus of a Journal, which has for its end the welfare of this Province, and must necessarily embrace many objects, it may be easily conceived the Editor feels impressed with the weight of the task he has undertaken. He pretends not to infallibility, but is aware he may frequently err; and can only console himself in the anticipated indulgence of a generous Public.

In the first place, we wish it to be distinctly understood, that we invite discussion on all subjects connected with the immediate interests of the Country; in the expectation it be temperate in its style and language, and making a due discrimination between public and private characters. Our own observations, from time to time, will be guided by these principles; reserving always to ourselves the full and undoubted right to investigate the conduct of public men and their measures,—"nothing extenuating, nor setting down aught in malice." Those, it any such there be, who may attempt to make this journal a vehicle for detraction or malignant gratification, will be assuredly disappointed. Agricultural essays, tending to facilitate the labors of the husbaudman, will be regarded among the most important which can grace our columns. This Colony, from its situation, is peculiarly adapted to agriculture, the mother of all sciences; and with its prosperity the commercial interests of the community are most intimately connected. All communications having in view the promotion of true piety & benevolence, will be thankfully received and attended to; inasmuch as in the practice of the Christian virtues, consist, in an eminent degree, the happiness of society. Assiduity shall not be wanting to collect & insert in our columns the proceedings of the House of Assembly, when in Session, from time to time; also, all articles of intelligence, foreign and domestic, as shall be thought most useful and instructive; we shall, indeed, endeavor to unite the "utile cum dulce," the useful with the agreeable.—And, in short, from the grave philosopher and plodding politician, to the fantastic admirer of the Muses, all will be equally entitled to attention, and shall have a corner appropriated for their chaste effusions

The Canadian Argus and Niagara Spectator will be printed on super-royal paper, with a handsome type, and the first number issued on Thursday the 18th inst.

Subscriptions will be received at the Argus & Spectator Office.

FROM EUROPE.

"LONDON, Sept. 6.

Effects of the late excessive heat.—A number of work-people were lately building a haystack in the barn yard of Kirkhill, at Kippen, they felt unusually oppressed by the extreme heat of the day, about one o'clock, p. m. when Fahrenheit's thermometer was placed in the shade on the top of the stone fence, when the mercury soon rose to the surprise of all present, so high as 139, at which point it stood about 20 minutes.

Last week, Robert Thomson, farmer, Bellshill, when very warm, took a drink of cold water, when he became instantly insensible, and was carried home, when his life for some time was despaired of. He is not quite recovered.—A woman servant of Robert Anderson, farmer, Burnbroom, taking incautiously a drink of cold water, was seized in the same manner, & has been in a fever ever since.

A few days since a number of men were employed in reaping a field of corn, belonging to a gentleman at Willand, near Collington. The heat being intense, obliged several of the reapers to give out, being unable to continue their work: upon which, one of them, called Searl, jocosely observed, "Why, will you all give out before me?" and he pursued his work in apparent good spirits. But, awful to relate—five minutes had scarcely elapsed, when he threw out his sheaf, fell on it, and immediately expired, without uttering a word. This awful and sudden death was doubtless the effect of extreme heat.

A young woman, daughter of Nicol Allan, butcher, Kelso, while employed in reaping, was so overcome by the late excessive heat, as to be unable to continue her labour. She, according to the present practice, drank some cold water, and then attempted to return home; but soon fell down in convulsions, when she was put into a cart, and conveyed to her residence, where, although every medical aid was afforded, she died in a few hours.

Prevention of the fatal Effects of Drinking Cold Water in Warm Weather, or when heated by Exercise.

Avoid drinking whilst warm, or drink only a small quantity at once, and let it remain a short time in the mouth before swallowing it: or wash the hands and face, and rince the mouth with cold water before drinking. If these precautions have been neglected, and the disorder incident to drinking cold water has taken place, the best remedy is to administer 60 drops of liquid laudanum in spirits and water, or warm drink of any kind; if this should not afford relief, the same quantity of laudanum may be given in 20 minutes afterwards. When laudanum cannot be obtained, rum and water should be given——From the Report of the Royal Society.

The present hot weather has been productive of cholera morbus, fever, and a very general disorder in the stomach and intestines, and even sudden death, all arising, apparently, primarily from drinking cold water, butter milk, &c. when the body was supernaturally heated. It has also produced what may, perhaps, be interesting to the naturalist, an uncommonly small flea, which has made its appearance in great numbers in many respectable houses, where cleanliness is scrupulously observed, and where none of the inferior animals are kept.

A few days ago while a labourer and his wife were in the harvest fields at Hadlow, having left their two children, of the ages of seven and two years and a half, at home, the children got a box, in which was a bottle of spirits of vitriol, used for making blacking, when one of them drank part of it, and died in much agony in a few hours after.

The new crop of hops is expected to reach in duty £200,000, in quality to afford as good samples as ever were produced, and at prices more moderate than for many years past. Hop picking will commence this week.

Mr. Wilton, at Alcombe, in Somersetshire, has at this time in his orchard, an apple tree, which has already yielded a fine crop of fruit, and is again in full blossom and many of the young apples set.

LONDON, Sept. 21.

OLD BAILEY—September 18.

Trial of Henry Stent.—At half past eleven o'clock, Henry Stent was put to the bar. He was genteely dressed in a new suit of clothes. He looked pale, but his conduct and demeanour was firm and respectable. When placed at the bar he bowed to the court, and looked with apparent surprise at the ladies who filled the galleries. He seemed to be a man of about 30 years of age. As the indictment was read over to him, he fixed his eyes upon the ground with rather a melancholy expression of countenance, but did not display the slightest want of firmness. He occasionally surveyed the court with an air of more indifference than was, we believe, felt by any individual in court. The indictment charged him with wilfully and feloniously stabbing Maria his wife, in divers parts of her body with knife, on the 5th of August last, in the parish of St. Sepulchre. He pleaded Not Guilty.—Mr Council attended on the part of the prosecution.

After some objection as to the admissibility of his wife's evidence, which was over-ruled, the court proceeded on her examination, when she burst into tears, and stated her reluctance to speak against her husband. The court in her examination, treated her with great tenderness; but could elicit nothing material from her, she continuing to persist in her declaration that she had no recollection of what passed after her husband came to the inn, until she found herself in Bartholomew's Hospital. Other evidence, however, was adduced, which clearly established the guilt of the prisoner. The prisoner made no defence, but called a number of witnesses, who were all most respectable, who had known him for a long series of years, and gave him a most excellent character as an affectionate husband, a humane kind-hearted man, and a dutiful son.

Mr. Justice Best summed up. He observed, that he and the Jury had a most painful duty to perform—but painful as it was, he trusted they would perform it conscientiously. However they might lament that the unfortunate man at the bar, who had entitled himself, through a long course of years, to the excellent character he had this day received, should have done an action that placed him in such an awful situation, still they must look to the evidence, and the evidence only—Whatever weight the goodness of the prisoner's character might have elsewhere, in this place he conceived it could have no effect whatever. This was one of those melancholy cases in which a man, after sustaining a humane character for several years, forfeited it in a moment—and it was for the jury to consider whether it was not an act of ferosity, which fully sustained the indictment that had been preferred against the prisoner. The statute under which the prisoner was indicted, was proposed to the legislature by the late ever-to be lamented Chief Justice of the King's Bench, and was adopted by them——By that statute, any person stabbing another, with an intent to kill, or to do some grievous bodily harm, was subjected to the penalty of death. Could there be any doubt, that the prisoner at the bar had intended to take away the life of this woman? It was evident that great bodily harm had been sustained——and, if death had followed, this would, to all intents, and purposes, have been a case of murder. The palliation which had been set up in this case arose from the circumstance of the person injured standing in the relation of wife to the prisoner. It appeared that she had misconducted herself——and as it appeared that she had separated herself for a twelve month from her husband, the Jury might assume that she had eloped from him; but that afforded no justification for murder. If a man surprised his wife in an adulterous act—in flagranti delicto—and killed her, on the instant, the law of England did not deem it murder—because it was supposed, that, where an individual discovered himself to be wounded in the tenderest point—wounded at once in his happiness and honor—the shock might produce temporary insanity; but, if the shortest time were given for reflection, the law did not recognize such a plea. In this instance, the unfortunate woman had repented of her crime—she sought her husband's forgiveness—but their interview terminated by this desperate assault on her person. Yet this poor creature, when the dreadful conflict was over, kissed the hand that had shed her blood. She acknowledged that she had behaved ill, and she forgave her husband; but whatever her feelings might be—however she might consider this transaction—the Jury had a special duty to perform—namely, to say whether this act of ferocity was not committed, either with a design to murder the woman, or to do her some grievous bodily harm? The Learned Judge recapitulated the evidence at length.

During the address of the learned Judge to the Jury, the unhappy Stent seemed to have lost some of that unshaken firmness which he had preserved throughout the trial, and betrayed symptoms of strong internal feeling and agitation. The charge, which occupied nearly an hour in delivery, was one of the most able and impressive which was perhaps ever delivered in a Court of Justice.

The Jury asked leave to retire, and during their absence Stent was accommodated with a seat. The Jury returned into Court in about twenty minutes, and the most breathless silence and anxiety prevailed. The Foreman pronounced a verdict of—Guilty, but recommending him to mercy on account of his excellent character.

Mr. Justice Best observed, that the recommendation should certainly be attended to.

The prisoner did not appear to be at all affected when the verdict was pronounced. He bowed to the Court as he retired.

BERLIN, Sept. 15.

GIBRALTAR, Oct. 2.

A royal decree, issued at Madrid on the 10th of Aug. after a short preamble, stating that many Jews from his garrison, Tetuan, and other ports, load in Spain, particularly at Cadiz, Algeziras and Seville, and present themselves with pass ports from the civil authorities, before the tribunals of the inquisition, requesting to be admitted to abjure their errors, directs the captain general, governors and magistrates of the ports and frontier towns, and all concerned, to prevent any Hebrew from landing, or proceeding into the interior, without his majesty's previous permission, or due notice being given to the officers of the inquisition.

The remains of the late king and queen of Spain, having been brought from Italy to the peninsula, were conveyed to the Escurial last month.

Longevity of the Oak.—Near Malwood Castle, in the centre of New Forest, Hampshire, there is now standing, though in the last stages of decay, the memorable oak on which Tyrrel's arrow glanced, which shot William Rufus. It was first paled round by an order of Charles II.

The Holy Land.—Count Forbin who visited the chief scites of sacred history only last year, has published the most splendid work which ever appeared on that interesting part of the world; and although it is published in French at 10 guineas, the conductors of the Monthly Journal of New Voyages and Travels have translated it, and re-engraved no less than eleven of its views, most curious to the christian world, which they offer at their periodical price of three shillings.

Comets.—A German astronomer, Mr. Hayer has published a new hypothesis respecting comets. He conceives that these celestial bodies are composed of water only, and that their tails are but solar rays passing through their medium, that they attract to themselves a quantity of impure gas floating in the air, which is again dispersed, as they approach the sun. They originate a great quantity of oxygen gas, and thus contribute to purify the atmosphere, and promote vegetation.

The Duke of Wellington's Palace, &c. The intended plan for a residence at Strathfield-say, lately the seat of Lord Rivers, still occupies the attention of his Grace. Various plans have been submitted to his inspection. Ancient and modern Greece have been ransacked for models, but nothing has yet been determined on; in fact, the Duke has observed that as he was not in a hurry, a further delay might take place, even till the next spring before the foundation stone was laid. One thing is certain, namely, that Blenheim house will not be the model. The illustrious hero himself feels disposed to adopt a style of architecture at once bold and noble, but blended with great simplicity. One design for a structure, a specimen of superb ancient magnificence, has been much admired by the few who have seen it. The Pope's treasurer, who is a great virtuoso, brought over a ship load of rare specimens of the arts from Herculaneum and Pompeii; some more presents to his grace from his holiness. With this Italian the duke of Wellington has lately passed much of his time, in holding frequent consultations respecting the stately pile. The front will occupy a space of at least 1800 feet. In the interim, no time has been lost in other respects; the grounds have been all broken up, and buildings removed; a great number of men are employed, and the land has assumed a new feature. During the whole of the preceding winter, hedges and ditches were removed, and new plantations formed; the whole of which are now in a thriving state.—Morning Paper.

Burn's Mausoleum.—We are happy to say, that at length the mausoleum over the remains of Burns is so far completed, as to leave the marble monument, by Turnerelli, erected in it. The subject is taken from the bard's dedication to the Caledonian Hunt, when he says, "My lords and gentlemen, the Poetic Genius of my country found me, as the prophet of old found Elisha, at the plough, and threw her inspiring mantle over me." A full length figure of Burns (the size of life) is represented standing between the handles of the plough; his attention appears arrested; he has one hand on the plough, and with the other he holds the Scotch bonnet to his breast, and looks upward, with a steady attention, to the Genius of Poetry, who is hovering above, and in the act of drawing her flowing mantle so as to throw it over him. The Genius seems beholding the bard with a look of placid satisfaction. The workmanship is excellent. The figure of the poet is manly, and the expression of his countenance is good. To those who have seen Burns, perhaps they will not be gratified in finding a very correct likeness, nor was it to be expected. The plough rests on the pedestal, seems in the act of uptearing a tuft of mountain daisies. The whole group, of white statuary marble, rests against a back of dove-colored marble, and occupies a space of about twelve feet in height and seven in length. The only inscription on the pedestal is "Burns."

LONDON, Sept. 23.

It is believed, incertain quarters, that the object of the expedition of Admiral Sir T. Hardy is to preserve an undisturbed communication to British trading vessels with all the ports of South America, and to prevent the blockade of such ports (to which otherwise British merchantmen would have access) either by Spanish or Independent flags. If this opinion be founded on fact, it may lead to important consequences, as the measures said to be taken by Lord Cochrane would bring him within the rule of the gallant admiral's instructions.

Extract of a letter, dated Valencia, September 2.

"Words are wanting to express my feelings and to convey to you an idea of the scenes of horror and blood represented in this ill-fated city. My pen drops from my hand when I attempt to describe to you the horrid and excruciating torments which Elio has imposed on 119 persons, of all classes, ages, sexes and conditions, he himself being present at the greatest part of these abominable punishments, in order that by his captious and designing questions he might be able to read from them the secret of a revolution, which he imagined would take place in Valencia. Some have had their arms and legs dislocated with irons of a new invention; others have been pressed down with heavy weights, placed on the breast and belly; others have had their nails plucked out one by one, in order to prolong their sufferings. Even a lady, lately delivered of twins, has been separated from her family, and cast into one of the most dismal dungeons of the Holy Office, merely because information against her was lodged by a wicked character, who declared that she knew a great deal respecting the imaginary revolution.—Elio himself went to the Inquisition to interrogate her, & she was exposed to a disgraceful torture, of which, even in this country we have no example. She was bound by the legs & arms with harsh ropes on an uneven cradle of iron, and finding that in this painful attitude she did not give declarations conformably to the questions proposed to her, scalding water was poured on her naked limbs. This unfortunate heroine expired amidst the greatest agonies, famine with the remembrance of her twin children, only twenty one days old. She was one of the heroines of Valencia, against the attack of Marshal Moncey. This scene has been divulged by one of the dependents on the Inquisition, less inhuman than the rest, and the weeping relatives of this female martyr to freedom are now deploring her loss. So great has been the horror and fury excited in the whole of Valencia by this painful affair, that it is visible on the countenance of every individual."

St. Helena.—A letter from St. Helena quotes the prices of certain articles, in the month of July last, as follows, viz: Beef, mutton, and veal, 1s 5d a pound; a turkey 30s; a goose, 21; a grown fowl 10s; a chicken 5s; a duck 19; eggs might be had so low as 8s per dozen; cabbages (in abundance we must suppose) at 9d a piece; and turnips and carrots 1s per dozen. Bread was 5d per pound, and very good Cape Madeira wine seven shillings and six pence per gallon! Bonaparte was very well, and his palace nearly finished.

Ascent of Messrs Sadlier and Livingston.

This is the longest aerial voyage ever made in Great Britain. The balloon ascended from Liverpool at a quarter past two o'clock, and alighted at five minutes past five, at a distance of about a mile and a half from the town of Stockton. In a space of two hours and fifty minutes, therefore, they traversed a distance of nearly 110 miles in a lineal direction, and if the undulations and aberrations of the machine are allowed for, it would make at least 170 miles. In the course of this voyage, they traversed some of the finest parts of the counties of York and Durham, the views of which both gentlemen describe as sublime and enchanting beyond all description. At a height of nearly two miles from the earth, they took their refreshment, and drank the health of the sovereign, and prosperity to the town and trade of Liverpool, in that awful symposium. They frequently, on approaching a town or village, descended so low as to be able to converse with the people, by whom they were often invited to make a call and take some refreshment; but such morning visits being rather inconvenient, they were obliged to decline the honor. The noble waving line made by the balloon in these descendings and ascendings, must have been the finest sights which occurred in the whole exhibition, and accordingly, they seemed to excite the highest rapture in the rural spectators. They did not suffer much from cold; the mercury in the thermometer generally ranging about 38. Unfortunately, they had no barometer with them; but Mr. Livingston conjectures, that their utmost elevation might be about four miles and a quarter. Near the town of Stockton, they approached a range of hills, and on surmounting these, were somewhat startled at perceiving themselves within a few miles from the sea. They immediately drew the valve, and alighted with all possible expedition. On reaching the ground, they threw out the grappling iron, the hook of which broke at the first pull, and on throwing it out again, another hook was bent straight, and the anchor again dragged. The balloon now forced itself through a thick hedge, then a dyke, occasioned by which, unfortunately pitched Mr. Livingston against the side of the car, by which his head and shoulder were so severely bruised, that it was thought advisable to have him let blood, but he is now nearly recovered. At length, by continually keeping open the valve, the balloon gradually subsided in a stubble field, and was finally secured without having sustained the least damage.

We understand that the aerial travellers undertook this long voyage with the view of trying the power of the balloon, and its capability of crossing the channel from hence, the practicability of which is now ascertained.

Whilst the Balloon was majestically sweeping over the Fever Hospital, Brownlow-hill, &c. on Tuesday, Mr. Livingston was observed standing on the outer-edge of the frail car that sustained him, and holding only with one of his hands on the netting. This instance of gratuitous dacing excited the greatest astonishment, and some terror; like many other brilliant achievements however, it was the't more worthy of admiration than of imitation.

Swearing in the Sheriffs.

A Common Hall was yesterday convened for the purpose of swearing in the new Sheriffs, Mr. Alderman Richard Rothwell and Mr. Joseph Wilfred Parkins. We never recollect seeing so full an attendance of the Livery upon any similar occasion.——The Lord Mayor attended by his usual train, came in state, and entered the Hall at about half past one; he was received with loud hooting and hisses, and with every expression of dislike and displeasure from the people. His Lordship was literally assailed by cries of "Fire, fire! Murder murder!" and several most coarse expressions were used by some of the crowd. At about two o'clock, Mr. Alderman Rothwell made his appearing in his carriage at the door of the Hall: he was preceded by several other carriages, and by a band, which was stationed within the porch of the hall, and played the national air of God save the King, as the Alderman entered the Hall. The reception he met with from the people was rather flattering than otherwise. The retinue of Mr. Parkins was not so splendid, nor did we observe that he was accompanied by his Company, as is usual.

The Lord Mayor ascended the hustings at a little after two o'clock, and was greeted by the people in the same manner as when he entered. The cries of "Fire, fire!" were again vociferated, and were continued until his Lordship had taken his seat.

The Crier then in the usual form proclaimed Richard Rothwell, Esq. and Joseph Wilfred Parkins, Esq. having been chosen Sheriffs for the ensuing year, and called them forth for the purpose of being sworn.

Mr. Alderman Rothwell presented himself, and stood at the table to be sworn first, as senior Sheriff; when

Mr. Parkins addressed the Lord Mayor, and claimed precedence of the Alderman, as having been first chosen.

The Recorder, who was sitting on the right hand of the Lord Mayor, replied, that by the law of the land, as well as by the municipal law, Mr. Alderman Rothwell had a right to precedence, and to be sworn first.

Mr. Parkins protested against such doctrine, and presented a paper to the Lord Mayor, which he said was his protest against such proceedings.

The Recorder.—Swear Mr. Alderman Rothwell.

Mr. Parkins again appealed to the Lord Mayor, and demanded that he should have the precedence of the Alderman.

The Lord Mayor.—I am not competent to form any opinion or judgement upon the matter. The question must be referred to another tribunal.

Mr. Parkins.—My Lord, I have a duty to perform to the Livery of London, and I demand that my Protest may be received.

The Lord Mayor.—I can not receive it.

Mr. P. immediately laid his Protest upon the desk before the Lord Mayor.

Mr. Alderman Rothwell and Mr. Parkins were then sworn in (the former standing in the place of seniority next to the Lord Mayor) by the Town-Clerk, and took the accustomed oaths. This ceremony having been gone through, Mr. Alderman Rothwell was adorned with the chain of office; he bowed to the people, and met with some applause. Precisely the same ceremony was observed with respect to Mr. Sheriff Parkins.

The Court then proceeded to the election of an Under-Sheriff, upon which occasion another dispute arose between the Sheriffs.

Alderman Rothwell presented Frederick Turner, of Bloomsbury-square, attorney-at-law, as a fit and proper person to serve the office of Under-Sheriff of the county of Middlesex.

Mr. Turner, who was Under-Sheriff last year, came forward in the expectation of being sworn.

Mr. P. immediately said—I object to the nomination of Mr. Turner, and I present as a fit and proper person to fill the office Mr. William Jackson, of Mary-Alderman Rothwell.—I object to Mr. Jackson.

Mr. Parkins—I object to Mr. Turner for many reasons. It is impossible that I can consent to his nomination.
The Lord Mayor.—I cannot enter into or permit a discussion of reasons here. You must know that it is impossible for me to interpose in a case which regards the two Sheriffs only. All I can wish is, that you may agree, that the business of the day may be concluded as soon as possible, and that any unnecessary conversation may be avoided.
The Recorder requested that the names and descriptions of the two Candidates for the office of Under-Sheriff should be read by the Clerk.
As soon as this was done, the Recorder said, it did not appear that Mr. Jackson was of any profession or business, and that circumstance invalidated his claim in a very essential degree.
Mr. Parkins.—He is written down as a gentleman. That is quite a sufficient designation.
The Recorder.—Clerk, put down, after Mr. Jackson's name, "no occupation."
The Recorder then addressed himself to Mr. Parkins.—The Lord mayor cannot Mr. Sheriff, listen to any reason you may have for objecting to Mr. Turner, as you might take it into your head to asperse the character of a man at the time he should have no opportunity of defending himself. Mr. Turner, although here, is in that predicament. The lord mayor cannot listen to accusations or defences."
Mr. Turner.—Upon what grounds does Mr. Parkins object to me?
Mr. P.—I cannot place the slightest confidence in Mr. Turner, and of course should act unconscientiously, if I were to agree to his election. I am willing however, to retire with my colleague, and consult with him upon the subject I can have no reason for concealing from him my objections to Mr. Turner.
The Sheriffs then retired, and upon their return, which was in a very short time, Alderman Roth well said,—My lord Mayor, my colleague and I have been out but a very short time. I have, however, fully ascertained that he and I can never agree in the appointment of an Under-Sheriff.
Mr. Parkins.—My objections to Mr. Turner are insurmountable.
Mr. Turner stepped to the table, and tendered himself to take the oaths prescribed by the Act of Elizabeth.
The lord mayor.—I am extremely sorry, Gentlemen (to the Sheriffs) that you cannot agree, but I can have no power in this case, and shall therefore give no opinion. Perhaps it will be necessary, if this difference continues, to appoint an Under-Sheriff to each of you Another tribunal will, however, decide that. In the mean time I must refuse to swear Mr. Turner.
The Court then broke up, and the meeting dispersed.

UPPER-CANADA.
P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the THIRD, by the Grace of GOD of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Counsellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to our Provincial Parliament, at our Town of York, on Thursday the ninth day of December instant, to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you

GREETING;

WHEREAS, by our Proclamation bearing date the twenty-sixth day of October last, WE thought fit to prorogue our Provincial Parliament, to the ninth day of December instant, at which time at our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear, NOW KNOW YE that WE taking into our Royal consideration, the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid; hereby convoking and by these presents enjoining you and each of you, that on Tuesday the Eighteenth day of January next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary, and herein fail not.
IN TESTIMONY whereof, WE have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed. WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this Second day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, and in the sixtieth year of our Reign.

P. M.

By Command of His Excellency
D. CAMERON.
Secretary.

YORK, December 2, 1819.

The annual meeting of the Society of Friends to the Stranger in distress was held on Tuesday last.
His Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland, Patron of the Society, in the chair.
The Hon. Dr. Strachan, Treasurer and Almoner of the Society presented the following REPORT.

The great influx of Emigrants during this season, and the sickness which prevailed among them, have nearly exhausted the funds of this Society, ample as they appeared to be at the last meeting.
The Treasurer forbears entering into any particular description of the nature of the distress relieved, or the extent to which relief was frequently given, as these are known to every gentleman present.
The sums actually expended, amount to three hundred and twenty pounds nine shillings and five pence; and the number of persons now sick, and promised relief, will require the further sum of £21 at least, to redeem the pledge of assistance which has been given them. After deducting this from the money in the hands of your Treasurer, there is only the sum of £69: 1: 3½ at the disposal of the Society.
The Treasurer has in many cases acted by the advice and recommendation of the subscribers; and almost in all from examining and inquiring into the situation of the parties applying: and the scenes of wretchedness and distress in which he has found many families of Emigrants were enough to harrow up the soul. He has, however, the satisfaction of stating, that comparatively few deaths occurred, and most of the sick were restored by the aid of the Society.
The Treasurer having distributed the benevolence of the Society in very small sums, can furnish very few vouchers to support this account, except the names of the persons relieved; and he feels this to be the most irksome and disagreeable part of his office.
Twenty five pounds were sent as a donation, to assist the inhabitants at Smith's Creek to erect a house for the reception of Emigrants.
Twelve pounds ten shillings were remitted to Col. Talbot, for the relief of some widows, whose husbands (Emigrants) were drowned as they were landing their baggage at Port Talbot.
The sum of twenty five pounds was given in loan to Richard Talbot, Esq. who found on it with a great number of settlers and had met with very severe losses by an unfortunate concurrence of events.
The Treasurer feels much pleasure in mentioning to the Society, the great and persevering exertions of the Medical gentlemen, and their promptness on all occasions to visit the poor and distressed.
The smallness of the Fund, requires the consideration of the Society, as the demands upon it, now that the winter is approaching, may be expected to be great: perhaps some general plan of relief, without giving money, may be discovered, which may prove more efficacious.
From one great cause of expence, the Society has been relieved by the munificence of the Lieutenant Governor, in opening some of the Barrack rooms for distressed Emigrants. The sums spent in paying for rent, form a formidable item in the detailed account.
The Society may likewise anticipate much relief from the establishment of an Hospital, which is now in contemplation, as it will open its doors to all the sick, and may become frequently a temporary asylum for the destitute.
All which is repectfully submitted.
The Report being read and adopted, His Excellency the Lieut. Governor was graciously pleased to inform the Society that he had given authority to the Commissariat officer at this post to issue Rations, at the Contract price, to destitute Emigrants—the distribution to be under the direction of the Society, which is to be responsible for the payment.
The Hon. Chief Justice Powell, seconded by the Hon. Mr. Chief Justice Scott moved that the thanks of the Society be presented to His Excellency for the benevolent assistance vouchsafed to it, as expressed in the preceding minute. Unanimously adopted.
The following resolution was also carried;
That the Hon. Dr. Strachan and Lieut. Col. Wells be a Committee to meet F. T. Billings Esq. D. A. Com. Gen. to form a plan more effectually to carry his Excellency's intentions into effect.

By Order, R. C. HORNE, Secy.

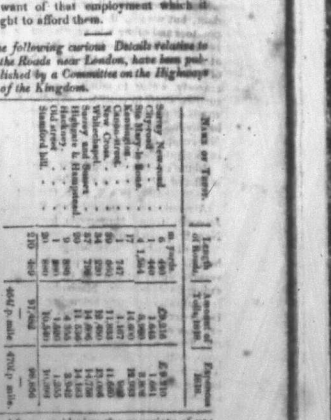
(Essay on Roads concluded.)

The Contractors for expediting the Mails, find considerable difficulty in fulfilling their contracts, from the same cause. Notwithstanding the destruction of horses, painful to humanity, in drawing the mail coaches, it is nearly impossible, on some roads to perform the distance within the given time.
Although necessity of some public control over the roads of the kingdom can hardly be questioned, yet the hints respecting the manner in which that control should be exercised, are offered with great diffidence. It is generally hoped that the importance of the subject will call forth the attention of much abler men. Of that part of the system which relates to the construction of the roads, and the appointment of General Surveyors of Districts, the Memorialist speaks with that confidence which is the result of actual experience.
When years left the Memorialist at liberty to devote his time entirely to the public service, the Commissioners for care of the Turnpike Roads of the Bristol District were induced, by an acquaintance of many years during which the Memorialist had acted as Commissioner in that Trust, to place their roads under his direction as General Surveyor. The public spirit of the Commissioners having empowered the Memorialist to begin the work of reformation, their zealous & unwearied support enabled him to extend it to the most minute details in the management of the roads.
During three years that the Memorialist has held the Office of General Surveyor, an extensive field of observation has presented itself to his view. Above all, having now felt the difficulties of a profession, requiring the union of much statistical information and practical knowledge of country work with the regular habits of business, the estimation of his own abilities as a road-maker has been much lowered; & consequently, the opinion of the urgent necessity of employing officers of education and character, in the executive department of the mind. roads, has daily acquired strength in his Many things which appeared desirable in theory, were found unprofitable in practice; and others of obvious utility, have been rendered difficult of execution, from the obstacles of prejudice and ignorance which nothing but time and talent, exerted under the fostering care of the Legislature, can effectually overcome.

J. LOUDON M'ADAM.

Directions for Repair of an old Road; being the Substance of a Communication made to the Committee of the Honourable House of Commons in 1811, and published with the Report by Order of the House, with additions and alterations, deduced from actual practice during the last three years. 1st February, 1819.

No addition of materials is to be brought upon the road, unless in any part it be lost, & that there is not a sufficiency of clean stone equal to ten inches in depth in thickness.
The stone already in the road is to be loosened up and broken, so as no piece shall exceed more than six ounces in weight.
The road is then to be laid as flat as possible; a rise of three inches from the centre to the side, is sufficient for a road thirty feet wide.
The stones, when loosened in the road are to be gathered off by means of a strong heavy rake, with teeth two and a half inches in length, to the side of the road, and there broken; and on no account are stones to be broken on the road.
When the great stones have been removed, and none left in the road exceeding six ounces, the road is to be put in shape, and a rake employed to smooth the surface, which will at the same time bring to the surface the remaining stone, and will allow the dirt to go down.
When the road is so prepared, the stone that has been broken by the side of the road, is then to be carefully spread on it; this is rather a nice operation and the future quality of the road will greatly depend on the manner in which it is performed. The stone must not be laid on in shovels full, but scattered over the surface, one shovel full following another, and spreading over a considerable space.
Only a small space of road should be lifted at once; five men in a gang should be set to lift it all across; two men should continue to pick up and rake off the large stones, and to form the road for receiving the broken stone to be laid on as soon as the piece of road is prepared to receive it and then break up another piece—two or three yards at one lift is enough.
The proportioning the work among the five men, must of course be regulated by the nature of the road: when there are many very large stones, the three breakers may not be able to keep pace with the two men employed in lifting and forming, and when there are few large stones, the contrary may be the case; of all this the Surveyor must judge and direct.
But while it is recommended to lift and relay roads which have been made with large stone mixed with clay, chalk, or other mischievous materials, there are many cases in which it would be highly unprofitable to lift and relay a road, even if the materials should have been originally too large.
The road between Cirencester and Bath is made of stone too large in size, but it is of so friable a nature, that in lifting it becomes sand; in this case I recommend cutting down the high places, keeping the surface smooth and gradually wearing out the materials now in the road, and thus replacing them with stone of a better quality properly prepared.
In like manner a part of road in the Bath District is made of freestone which it would be unprofitable to lift.
At Epsham in Surrey, it was necessary to remove the whole road, to separate the small proportion of valuable materials from the mass of soft matter, of which it was principally composed, which was removed at considerable expence, before a road could be again made upon the site.
Other cases of several kinds have occurred, where a different method must be adopted, but which it is impossible to specify and must be met by the practical officer, whose duty it may be to superintend the repair of road, and who must constantly recur to the general principles laid down in this Memorial, (p. 272). These principles are infirm, however much circumstances may differ, and they must form the guide by which his judgment must be always directed.
When additional stone is wanted on a road that has consolidated by use, the old hardened surface of the road is to be loosened with a pick, in order to make the fresh materials unite with the old.
Carriages, whatever be the construction of their wheels, will make ruts in a new made road, until it consolidates, however well the materials may be prepared or however judiciously applied; therefore, a careful person must attend for some time after the road is opened for use, to rake in the track made by wheels.
The only proper method of breaking stones both for effect and economy, is by persons sitting; the stones are to be placed in small heaps, and women, boys or old men past hard labour, must sit down with small hammers and break them, so as none shall exceed six ounces in weight. The tools to be used are,
Strong picks, not short from the handle to the point, for lifting the road.
Small hammers of about two pounds weight in the head, the face the size of a new shilling, well steeled, with a short handle.
Rakes with wooden heads, ten inches in length, and iron teeth, about two and a half inches in length, very strong, for raking out the large stones when the road is broken up, and for keeping the road smooth after being relaid, and while it is consolidating.
Very light broad mouthed shovels, to spread the broken stone, and to form the road.
Every road is to be made of broken stone, without mixture of earth, clay, chalk, or any other matter that will imbibe water and be affected with frost; nothing is to be laid on the clean stone on pretence of binding; broken stone will combine by its own angles into a smooth solid surface, that cannot be affected by vicissitudes of weather, or displaced by the action of wheels, which will pass over it without a jolt, and consequently without injury.



Prices.

The price of lifting a rough road, breaking the stones, forming the road, smoothing the surface, cleaning out the watercourses, and replacing the stone, leaving the road in a finished state, has been found in practice, to be from one penny to two pence per superficial yard, lifted four inches deep; the variation of price depends on the greater or lesser quantity of stone to be broken.
At two pence per yard, a road of six yards wide will cost, therefore, one shilling per running yard, or 88l per mile.
Any rough road may be rendered smooth and solid at this price unless it be weak, and require an addition of stone or require some very material alteration of shape.
Breaking stone has been reduced in price, by the use of more proper hammers and the sitting posture.
The Commissioners at Bristol used to pay fifteen pence per ton for limestone from Burdham Down, for the use of their roads, and broken to a size above twenty ounces; stone is now procured from the same place, broken so as none exceed six ounces, for ten pence per ton and the workmen are very desirous of contracts at that rate, because the heavy work is done by the men, the light work with small hammers by the wives and children, so that whole families are employed.
In Sussex, the proportion is greater between former and present prices; the breaking of flint cost at one time two shillings per ton; and is now done by introducing a better method and three tools, at about one shilling per ton.
By a more judicious preparation and application of materials, the quantity of stone consumed in roads is decreased, by which a great saving of expence is made, and with this great advantage that the saving is in horse labour and carriage, while the labour price is given to men, and in such a manner as includes boys from the age of ten upwards, women, and old men past the age of being able to labour hard. The proportion of men and horse labour, in the Bristol District, under former management, was one fourth to men's labour, three-fourths to horse labour. Under a better system of management, the proportion has been exactly reversed—during half a year that an exact account was kept, there was paid,

For men, women, and children's labour,	£2088
For horse's labour,	1000

This immense advantage is presented in every part of the country, as roads are confined to no particular place, and are universally in want of repair; ample funds are already provided for every useful and proper purpose, although at present misapplied in almost every part of the kingdom, while the labourers are in want of that employment which it ought to afford them.

The following curious Details relative to the Roads near London, have been published by a Committee on the Highways of the Kingdom.

After considering the propriety of various plans of altering the general constitution of the laws affecting the management of turnpike roads, the Committee give the preference to that of empowering the magistrates of every county, assembled in Quarter Sessions, to appoint one or more surveyor-general, who shall have the superintendence and management of the turnpike-roads within the county, under the authority and direction of the commissioners of the different trusts. They also are of opinion that the most eligible mode of paying the salary of this officer, would be by a uniform rate per mile upon all the roads within the county, to be fixed by the magistrates at Quarter Sessions, and paid from the funds of their respective trusts.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NEWBERN, N. C. Oct. 23.

A pear, from a tree belonging to colonel James Shine of Jones county, was a few days since brought to this place—The weight of it was 1 lb. 15 oz. Twenty-seven of the same size would have made a bushel, weighing 52 and 1-8 lbs.

A hint.—Every farmer should occasionally spread on his manure heap and farm pen, through the winter, a bushel or two of plaster—we are assured that fermentation quickly ensues, and putrefaction is so rapidly promoted, that the manure is in much better order for use in the spring—So says Experience.

Butter.—Mrs. Mary Jenkins, wife of Mr. Thomas Jenkins, of Newport, Herkimer county, made during the last season, from three cows, six hundred and seven pounds of butter, of the first quality. It was purchased by Mr. Wm. Davies of this village, on the 1st inst, for the New York market.—Utica Gaz.

St LOUIS. Oct 6.

THE SEASON.—More than two months have expired since we have had as much rain as afforded a temporary relief to vegitation. Crops of corn wheat and other small grains are abundant, but we fear the crops of turnips, potatoes and other late vegetables will be short. The Ohio is now lower that at any period within the remembrance of the present generation; there is scarcely water to admit boats of the smallest draft to cross the rapids. Upwards of twenty steam boats are laying by, waiting the rise of the Ohio. The Mississippi & Missouri are at all seasons in navigable order.

In the interior of South Carolina, corn is offered for 25 cents a bushel.

HALIFAX, N. S. Oct. 24.

Arrived, last evening, ship Hannah, Johnson, from Margaretta bound for New Brunswick, put in for provisions.

The Island of Santa Margaretta had been blockaded by 20 Spanish armed vessels, until the time of the Hannah's sailing, 28 days since. She had on board several officers, lately belonging to gen. Devereux's corps of lancers; but who are now returning to their native country, from a service, we should suppose, neither very pleasing or profitable. They speak, however, of further success having attended Gen. Paez, subsequent to the capture of Barcelona.

It is said that overtures have been made by mercantile houses in the U. States, largely concerned in the whale fishery, to remove to this town, for the purpose of carrying on that lucrative branch of business.

At a court of vice admiralty held yesterday, the American schooner Levant, of Weymouth, was condemned on a charge of smuggling.

The American fishing schooner Hallet, of Barnstable, taken by H. M. S. Cyrene, drying her fish in Liscomb Harbor was also condemned, under the new commercial convention between Great Britain and America.

PROSPECTUS.

"Salus Populi, Supremæ Lex."

The safety of the People, the supreme Law.

IN the motto selected, we trust the Rulers and the ruled, in all countries where rational freedom is cherished, will recognize the great and important truth it contains. Life, Liberty and Property are the primary objects which the compact of civil society is intended to secure; and on those principles are the Constitution and Laws of England founded. Among the most essential securities the British nation doth enjoy at this day, may be ranked the Independence of the Press. But for this auxiliary, the condition of the liberties of the people of England would be no better than that of the Cossacks, or poor and miserable peasantry of Poland & of Germany. So valuable a privilege cannot be too highly appreciated by the people of this Province, who have hitherto displayed an honourable attachment towards its support; and their patronage is again respectfully solicited.

In putting forth to the public—to the world, the Prospectus of a Journal, which has for its end the welfare of this Province, and must necessarily embrace many objects, it may be easily conceived the Editor feels impressed with the weight of the task he has undertaken. He pretends not to infallibility, but is aware he may frequently err; and can only console himself in the anticipated indulgence of a generous Public.

In the first place, we wish it to be distinctly understood, that we invite discussion on all subjects connected with the immediate interests of the Country; in the expectation it be temperate in its style and language, and making a due discrimination between public and private characters. Our own observations, from time to time, will be guided by these principles; reserving always to ourselves the full and undoubted right to investigate the conduct of public men and their measures,—"nothing extenuating, nor setting down aught in malice." Those, if any such there be, who may attempt to make this journal a vehicle for detraction or malignant gratification, will be assuredly disappointed. Agricultural essays, tending to facilitate the labors of the husbandman, will be regarded among the most important which can grace our columns. This Colony, from its situation, is peculiarly adapted to agriculture, the mother of all sciences; and with its prosperity the commercial interests of the community are most intimately connected. All communications having in view the promotion of true piety & benevolence, will be thankfully received and attended to; inasmuch as in the practice of the Christian virtues, consist, in a permanent degree, the happiness of society. Assiduity shall not be wanting to collect & insert in our columns the proceedings of the House of Assembly, when in Session, from time to time; also, all articles of intelligence, foreign and domestic, as shall be thought most useful and instructive; we shall, indeed, endeavor to unite the "utile cum dulce," the useful with the agreeable.—And, in short, from the grave philosopher and plodding politician, to the fantastic admirer of the Muses, all will be equally entitled to attention, and shall have a corner appropriated for their chaste effusions.

The Canadian Argus and Niagara Spectator will be printed on super-royal paper, with a handsome type, and the first number is used on Thursday the 18th inst.

Subscriptions will be received at the Argus & Spectator Office.

SHOULD this advertisement meet the Eye of the above named young man, he is hereby informed, that agreeable to his invitation contained in a letter dated, York, U. C. in October last, his sister has arrived in this country; but, to her inexpressible mortification, every enquiry for him at York, has proved ineffectual, but in the hope that he may still reside in this Province, or in a situation where this advertisement may come under his notice, his sister takes this method of acquainting him, that she is now residing at Messrs. Piggot & Gurnetts, Ancaster, U. C. where she trust he will instantly repair & relieve her mind from the excessive grief, which the disappointment alluded to has occasioned.

Should any person be able to give Miss O'Bryan any information respecting her brother, they would confer on her an invaluable favor, if they would do so, by means of a letter to her as above.

General Land Agency Office,

YORK, UPPER-CANADA.

THE Subscribers have established an Office at the Seat of the Government of Upper-Canada, for the purpose of transacting Land Agency Business of every description.

EMIGRANTS, and all others applying for Lands from the Crown, can obtain every requisite assistance and information, to enable them to transact their business with the least possible loss of time and trouble. One of the subscribers having been appointed a Commissioner to administer the Oath of Allegiance, additional facility is thereby afforded, in expediting the business of Petitioners for grants of the Crown Lands.

This Office will afford the easiest and most probable means of enabling Persons to purchase or sell Lands in any part of the Province. A regular Register of all Lands offered for sale will be kept, and Persons wishing to purchase, shall have access to it free of expense.

No pains will be spared to make this Establishment of great utility to the Public, who, in their transactions with it, may depend upon meeting with the most ready attention.

Letters transmitted by Post, are required to be post-paid

VOL. III. YORK, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1819. No. 50.

UPPER-CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the THIRD, by the Grace of GOD of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Counsellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to our Provincial Parliament, at our Town of York, on Thursday the ninth day of December instant, to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you

GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our Proclamation bearing date the twenty-sixth day of October last, WE thought fit to prorogue our Provincial Parliament, to the ninth day of December instant, at which time at our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear, NOW KNOW YE that WE taking into our Royal consideration, the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid; hereby convoking and by these presents enjoining you and each of you, that on Tuesday the Eighteenth day of January next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary, and herein fail not.

In TESTIMONY whereof, WE have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed, Witness our trusty and well-beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this Second day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, and in the sixtieth year of our Reign.

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, Sept. 28.

A snug party.—The friends of Mr Bailey, the unsuccessful candidate at the late Wilts election, gave a dinner at Salisbury on Friday last, to the poor of that city, friends to their cause, which was held on a green, at the back of the house of J. Merris, Esq. Two Thousand two hundred persons sat down to a plentiful dinner of most excellent roast and boiled beef, vegetables of all descriptions, and a good store of plum pudding. Beside every plate stood a two penny loaf. On the table were a thousand new tin cups (made for that occasion) indented with "Astley for ever." and which were given to the people. To every person was allotted a quart of ale, and a quart of stingo. The booth, which extended nearly round the field, was in length 800 feet; the width was sufficient to admit of two rows of tables, four rows of persons and ample space for those who were desirous of witnessing the gratifying scene to view it with comfort. Mr. Alderman Goddard presided, and a great number of highly respectable characters were present. The whole was conducted with the utmost order and regularity.

The warm baths of Julian, the sole relic of Roman architecture in Paris, have lately become an object of so much interest there, that a considerable part of a street is to be pulled down, to give a fuller view of them. This structure was erected by Julian (the apostate) in the year 357, in imitation of the baths of Diocletian at Rome.

FRANKFORT, Sept 2.

Whilst the King of Bavaria is occupied in reducing his army, Austria, on the contrary, is making preparations which begin to engage seriously the attention of Germany. The army of that power has just received an addition of eighty thousand men, raised by the late levy; and a second levy is even spoken of. To this increase of military force must be added, all the battallions of the landwher, which are armed and equipped, and only wait an order to join the troops of the line. The minister of war has caused 4000 horses to be purchased in Holstein, which are destined to remount the heavy cavalry. The artillery regiments have been completed to their full effective. Though, as yet, the points at which these forces will assemble be not known, it is thought that they will be directed towards Galicia. It is rumored that the cabinet of Vienna has conceived very serious alarms for this rich province. Has the project of the emperor Alexander, already so often announced, of re-constituting the kingdom of Poland, given offence to the Austrian government?

VIENNA, Aug. 29.

A camp of military exercise will be formed at Pest, in the course of next month. Troops of every arm are already on their march to that place. There is no other military movement in the Austrian monarchy, and nothing indicates the least misunderstanding between our court and the neighboring powers.

Not long before Mr. Garrick left Paris in 1765, several persons of the first distinction of both sexes, English & French, met by appointment at the hotel de——, Mr. and Mrs. Garrick and Mademoiselle Clairon were of the party. The conversation turned for some time on the belles lettres, in which the merits of several eminent writers were discussed with equal judgement and candor; many critical observations were made on the action and eloquence of the English and French theatres; and at the request of this very brilliant circle, La Clairon and Garrick consented to exhibit various specimens of their talents, which produced much entertainment. This friendly contest lasted a considerable time, with great animation on both sides.—The company loudly declared their approbation in the strongest terms of the two exhibitors. It was remarkable that the French gave the preference to Mr Garrick, and the English, with equal politeness, adjudged the victory to Mademoiselle Clairon; but, as the greater part of the former were little acquainted with the English language, Mr. G. was induced to relate a fact, and afterwards to exhibit it by action, which happened in one of the provinces of France, at a time he was there, and of which he had been an eye witness.—"A father," said he, "was fondling his child at an open window, whence they looked into the street; by one unlucky effort, the child sprung from his father's arms, fell upon the ground, and died upon the spot.—What followed (he said) was the language of nature." He immediately threw himself into the attitude in which the father appeared at the time the child leaped out of his arms. The influence that a father's agony produced on such a company, and exhibited by this darling son of nature, in the silent but expressive anguish of sorrow, is easier to be imagined than expressed; let it suffice to say, that the greatest astonishment was succeeded by abundance of tears. As soon as the company had recovered from their agitation, Mademoiselle Clairon caught Mr. Garrick in her arms, and kissed him; then turning to Mrs. Garrick, she apologised for her conduct, by saying it was an involuntary mark of her applause.—

Comets.—According to the calculations of the learned astronomer of Bremen, M Olbers, after a lapse of 28,000 years, a comet will approach to the earth to the same proximity as the moon; after 4,000,000 years it will approach to the distance of 7,700 geographical miles, and then, if its attraction equals that of the earth, the waters of the ocean will be elevated 13,000 feet, and a deluge will necessarily ensue; after a lapse of 220,000,000 years it will clash with the earth, and what the consequences will be is easy to determine.

Carrier Pigeons.—The Flemish papers have recently contained accounts of the late annual competition of the society of pigeon fanciers at Antwerp. On this occasion thirty-two pigeons, with the word Antwerp, in ribed on their wings, were despatched from the above city to London, whence they were sent back with answers, their wings being previously countermarked with the word London.—The custom of training pigeons to convey letters from one place to another, is prevalent in all parts of the east, but particularly in a vast number of pigeons for the purpose of carrying letters on occasions when extraordinary speed is necessary.—They fly from one extremity of his dominions to the other. By this mode of conveyance the consul of Alexandria, daily sends despatches to Aleppo in five hours, though couriers oc upy a whole day in proceeding from one town to the other. The caravans travel ing through Arabia, maintain communications with Arab soverei ns, by means of pigeons with letters fastened under their wings. These messengers fly with extraordinary rapidity, and return with fresh speed to the place where they have been reared. They are frequently observed lying with their backs on the sand, with their bills open to receive the morning dew, and recover breath. Pliny mentions, that pigeons were emp oyed to introduce letters into Mutin, (Modena,) when that place was besieged by Mark Antony. they were also employed in 1574 at the siege of Harlem, and in 1775, at that of Leyden. The prince of Orange, when the latter siege was rais d, determined that the pigeons should be maintained at the public expense, and that at their death they should be embalmed and preserved in the town house, as a perpetual mark of gratitude.

The late Elections in France.—The Paris papers of Friday reached us yesterday. The Gazette de France and the Journal des Debats give loose to the most gloomy forebodings with respect to the future fate of France. The former expresses an opinion, that, "if the spirit which presided at the late elections, passes into the chamber, there is no doubt but the municipal system, to be discussed this year, will have for its object to overthrow royal authority and property, and to place power in the hands of provincial revolutionists. We shall see at the head of the police, persons who will endeavour to gain the good will of their constituents, by attacks upon the throne and priesthood, and by taking vengeance on the men of 1815." The Journal des Debats continues in the same strain, and says, "While the present law continues, elections will become more and more hostile to the house of Bourbon."

LOUISBERG, Aug. 31.

The Commissioners of the King and of the States of Wirtemberg have now concluded their deliberations on the plan of a Constitution. The articles of this Act, which are proposed in common, are already distributed among the members of the Assembly of the States in proportion as the sheets are printed, in order to facilitate the omissions when the Sittings are commenced. The following are the principal points of this Act:—

1. All the integral parts of the kingdom are to form an inseparable whole, and are united under one and the same Constitution.

2. In case that in future the kingdom should receive a new accession of territory, whether by exchange, sale, or any other manner, this accession shall be admitted to a joint participation in the Constitution. That is to be regarded as an accession of territory which the King acquires not only from his own person, but by the employment of the resources of the State, or with the express stipulation that such territory is an integral part of the kingdom.

3. The kingdom of Wirtemberg makes a part of the Germanic Confederation, consequently all the organic resolutions of the Diet which concern the constitutional relations of Germany, or the general relations of the Burgher German States, have also the force of laws for Wirtemberg, when they have been published by the King. However, the constitutional co-operation of the States is necessary in the means of carrying into execution the obligations founded on their resolutions.—German Papers, September 10.

One of the most interesting volumes of the season, is Mr. TROTTER's work descriptive of his Walks in Ireland within the four last years.

Mr. ACTON, the industrious chemist, has published a Description of the Progress of Manufacturing Coal-gas, with Plans of the Gas-works in London, and other Towns; which, as elucidating a discovery recently established, and applied to grand public utility, is entitled to the notice of the curious and scientific of all nations.

Mr. John Scott, author of a Visit to Paris, &c. has just returned from the Continent, after an absence of upwards of two years, with abundant stores of information, which he is preparing for publication, under the title of Italy in 1818 & 1819; comprising remarks, critical and descriptive, on its manners, national character, political condition, literature, and arts.

Enquiries having for some time been continued respecting the publication of the Second Volume of Dr. Syntax, the public are respectfully informed, that, in the course of the autumn, its future peregrinations will be offered to its attention, by the same author and the same artists.

Sweden.—According to certain researches just made in Sweden, on the different kinds of wood indigenous to the country, it is ascertained that the birch reaches the farthest north, growing beyond the 70th degree; the pine reaches to the 69th; the fir tree to the 68th; the osier, willow, aspine, and quince, to the 66th; the cherry and apple-tree to the 63d; the oak to the 60th; and the beech to the 57th: while the lime tree, ash, elm, poplar, and walnut, are only to be found in Scania.

The famous Melchior, of Spain, that he might want neither men nor money, has adopted this singular expedient: He sends to persons whom he knows to be in easy circumstances, bills of exchange ready prepared for some thousands of reals, to each, in proportion to his fortune, and commands them to accept the bills at one, two, or three months. The acceptors, knowing the danger they would encounter by permitting their signatures to remain out, pay the bills regularly as they become due. But it, during the time between the acceptance and the time of payment, the acceptor should send one or two men to Melchior's band, they are exonerated, and the bills returned to them.

Sir John Sinclair, in a letter lately published, after lamenting the ravages made on our wheat crops by the rust covering the plant with black spots, by which, it is presumed the mildew is meant, proposes the use of saline manures, as the only remedy, after many others, particularly a steep of the sulphate of copper, has been tried. This salt manure, the Right Hon. Baronet calls a new remedy, and cites various experiments to prove its success exclusive of the assumed fact, that the disease is unknown on lands upon the coast washed by the sea, and by consequence benefited by the impregnation. Of this fact our former readers who inhabit the sea coast will be the best judges. One instance is given of a treble crop of wheat from the use of salt as a manure, and a superior crop of clover afterwards. Ten bushels 25lbs. of salt were used in one experiment, and 12 bushels 21 lbs in another, to the statute acre.—Such were the highest quantities. From 30 to 40 bushels of fossil salt, are required to manure an acre of fallow. After it has remained for a few days afterwards well incorporated with the soil, before the wheat is sown. Any farmer desirous of making trial of salt, may obtain it at Liverpool, by sending thither to the merchant a certificate from an Excise officer in his neighbourhood.—That salt is an excellent manure, is known on immemorial experience; whether it be also probably an efficacious preventative of mildew, is submitted to the judgment of the practical farmer who has attended to the invariable effects of atmospheric influence.

TO BANISH CROWS OFF NEW-SOWN CORN.—Take a crow, pull the long feathers out of the wings, then dig a hole 5 feet in circumference, and a foot deep, in the midst of the field, stick the feathers round the edge of the hole, and then throw in the carcase, and not a crow will light in the field, until the seed is out of danger.

The infant daughter of the duchess of Berri has been baptized by the name of Louisa Maria Theresa D'Artois Mademoiselle. This is the third accouchement of the duchess, in little more than two years; and the hopes of the kingdom continue suspicious, that from this stock the future heirs of the Bourbon dynasty will proceed. It has been erroneously stated that her royal highness is only 16 years old.—She was born in 1798.—French paper.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

In the Free Press, of the 17th ult. published at Halifax by Mr WARD, is a long article upon the reduction of the Naval Yard at that place, which concludes as follows:—

"In conclusion we will now state what we understand to be the cause of this impolitic measure; and in doing so we beg our readers will not suppose that in attributing it to Sir JAMES COCKBURN, we are actuated by motives of personal hostility. The idea of imputing to him the odium of this transaction did not occur to us; but originated in a quarter where better information was to be had upon the subject. It appears that considerable discussion had taken place between the Committee of Finance of the House of Commons and the Navy Board, upon the great expence of supporting two Yards in America; and it was not determined upon which should be reduced when Sir JAMES arrived in England.—The public will recollect the promises which he made the people of Bermuda in his replies to the addresses presented to him at his departure; which were republished in some of the prints of this town, God knows for what purpose, unless they were meant to warn us of approaching danger. Those promises he most probably fulfilled by advising his brother, Sir GEO. COCKBURN, who is one of the efficient Lords of the Admiralty, to retain the Bermuda Yard. Sir George we believe was never in Halifax, and therefore could not be aware of the importance of its Naval establishment or of the extent of the sacrifice."

GREAT FIRE.

Extract of a letter, dated Wilmington, N. C. Nov. 5.

"Yesterday morning about 5 o'clock, we were alarmed by the cry of fire—when we turned out, we witnessed the severest calamity of the kind that ever happened here. It commenced (and is supposed to be the act of an incendiary) near Urquhart's store, at the corner of Dock-street, and continued to rage with unabated fury, both north and south, for 4 hours, leaving but 3 or 4 houses standing in 4 squares. Between Market and Orange st. and from the river up to Second-street, and even beyond those bounds, a few houses are destroyed.—Luckily, from the lightness of the wind and the considerable exertions, the flames which severs times communicated to the town market house and court house, were extinguished; otherwise the north side, including the custom house and banks, must have also gone. The loss of property, including merchandize, &c. is immense; it cannot be estimated at less than half a million, and comparatively speaking but little insured. Some time after the fire had subsided, a most melancholy accident occurred—poor Farquar M'Cera incautiously adventured within the walls of a warehouse which fell and crushed him to death; when found, he was dreadfully mangled. During the fire no lives were lost nor did any serious accident happen.

The number of houses burnt is said to be two hundred.

In 1818, flour and grain to the amount of $58,985,284, were imported into G. Britain. Now none is imported for domestic consumption. Will not this great saving relieve England from a portion of her pecuniary distress.

It has been calculated that the quantity of work done by machinery in England would require 400,000,000 of laborers, without such machinery.

Late reports from the Spanish Maine mention that a revolutionary army was within 20 miles of the city of Carthagena.

The Jamaica Courant, of Sept. 16th says—"That according to advices there are 1000 royal troops in Carthagena city and 300 in advance of it—that the resources gained by Bolivar at Santa Fee, will enable him to raise an army of from 8 to 10,000 men with which he intended to proceed against Popayan—that M'Gregor, with three vessels and 4 or 500 troops, was to sail from Aux Cayes about Sept. 10, supposed for Santa Martha—and that lord Cochrane had offered eight Spaniards for each British officer taken at Porto Bello; fifteen for col. Raffer, and 10 for a Mr. Moore.

The National Intelligencer represents that there are very few federalists chosen to the 16th congress. It should rather say, they are nearly all federalists. For the democrats have embraced most of the federal sentiments—and the bases of others have been removed. Differences, hereafter, if any rise, will be designated by other terms, and defended by associates not exclusively of any "old schools."

The commissioners appointed by the states of Virginia, Pennsylvania and Ohio, to examine the falls in Ohio river, have recommended a canal on the Kentucky side, at Louisville, which will be only 700 poles in length, while on the Indiana side one of 1100 poles would have been required.

In the popular meetings, in lord George Gordon's time, the British ministry were accused of not employing the military in season—and history shews what followed. At this day of multitudinous assemblages and popular excitement in England, it is said the military have been employed too soon.

In the short space of but little more than a single week, four governors have been numbered with the dead. If in holy writ it was recorded on the death of Abner, that a great man had fallen in Israel, we may take up the same lamentation, and say, not only has a great man this day fallen in Israel, but this day have four of our great and good men fallen in America—men who occupied a large space in the public eye," and whose virtues and talents will long be had in grateful remembrance by the American people.

Governor BARRY, of Georgia, was in office at his death.

Governor JOHNSTON of Maryland, was the first governor of that state.

Governor SNYDER, of Pennsylvania, retired from office at the conclusion of his constitutional term in 1817.

Governor STRONG, of Massachusetts, was for many years the chief magistrate of that commonwealth, and declined a re-election in 1816.

The papers by yesterday's mail add the name of a fifth governor to the list of those exalted men who have within so short a period, closed their earthly existence and descended to the grave. The hon. THOMAS SIM LEE, was the second governor of the state of Maryland. He died on the 9th inst. in Frederick co. Md. aged 75 years.

In mentioning in a late paper the names of the governors of several of the states lately deceased, that of Governor LANGDON, of New-Hampshire, was inadvertionally omitted. His death took place in September. He is the sixth governor whose decease has been recorded in the short space of a few weeks, and that too at a time of general and universal health throughout our country.

The legislature of Tennessee have unanimously voted an appropriation of $500.000 for the improvement of the navigation of the rivers of that state.

A French ship with 3000 barrels of flour, direct from France, arrived at Havanna on the 20th ult.

HERKIMER, Nov. 11.

Distressing Accident.—On Saturday evening last, two very promising children of Valentine Gill, Esq. of this village, one a boy of 7 years old, the other an only daughter, aged 4 years, were found drowned, in a rain water cistern, near the door of their parent's dwelling.—They had been absent but a short time before they were discovered, lifeless—the female floating upon the water, which was more than five feet deep in the cistern. Two physicians were immediately called in, and unremitted exertions were continued for an hour or more to resuscitate the lifeless bodies, but in vain. Thus, at the same moment, was an almost distracted mother, in the absence of her husband, and among strangers, called to witness the heartrending spectacle of two of her dear children, drawn from a watery grave, within a few feet of where she had constantly been—and this, too, in consequence of the inattention of some person in leaving the cistern uncovered. Her situation can better be imagined than described.—And it should prove a solemn warning to all against carelessness. The bodies of the children were interred on Monday, in one grave, and the crowd of persons attending at the house, and the long train of the funeral procession, evinced that the sympathies of our citizens were in full force, and directed to their proper object—the afflicted and distressed.

We are happy to hear that arrangements are in promising train, for establishing an elegant steam ship, to ply between Boston and Portland.

Mr. Henry Hall, of Dennis, Cape Cod, has undertaken to cultivate cranberries, in patches or gardens, and has been very successful. Several barrels have been ordered to New-York, where they are commended as remarkably high flavored and excellent.

The Virginia Intelligencer in remarking on Hunt's late triumphs in London, says, "It is scarcely six months, we believe, since this same Hunt was stoned from the Westminster hustings by the same populace."

It seems that orator Hunt exercises a citizen's privilege in every town in England which he pleases to visit—and enjoys the freedom of speech to great extent. This is not the best proof of excessive tyranny in England.—How much more liberty could be found in the other European nations?

Some persons have supposed the disturbances at elections in London, were partly occasioned by their not being frequent—but the riots at the choice of a lord Mayor, an annual officer, seem not to support this idea.

The management of live stock on farms considered.

In the important branch of [illegible] cy, namely, the management [illegible] stock, great improvement is [illegible] ster—and however much the [illegible] of agriculture may be [illegible] late years, I am of opinion we [illegible] backward on the head; that [illegible] comparatively few arable [illegible] would not maintain and fatten a [illegible] quantity of stock; and perhaps [illegible] three, four or five times the pre[illegible] ber, without lessening the [illegible] of grain. The advantages [illegible] such an increase of stock to [illegible] to be overlooked, and call loudly [illegible] tention.

Upon arable farms live stock [illegible] really considered as a secondary [illegible] and the quantity kept is usually small. According to the old [illegible] husbandry, this must be the case [illegible] by a proper combination of green [illegible] such as tares, clover, and buckwheat in summer; turnips, carrots, potatoes and kale for winter; it is possible for the tillage farmer to [illegible] and fatten a quantity of stock equal to [illegible] grazier, on the same number of acres, admitting the soil to be of a similar quality.

To do this, I grant, a considerable capital is absolutely necessary. The whole expence of an arable farm, added to that of a grazing farm, the purchase of stock for breeding, &c. will probably found that the latter is the most profitable; indeed, where bred cannot be too strenuously recommended in animals of every description, would here remark, that size is not always a criterion of excellence in any stock; and that a great object of the farmer ought to be, to gain the greatest possible weight of animal food, from a given quantity of [illegible] table. If, therefore, three cattle, the small breed, can be fattened to the weight, in less time, and upon less food than two of a larger breed, the former ought to be preferred.

The arable farmer should raise a sufficient supply of green food as will enable him to keep all his horses, cattle and sheep in the farm yard throughout the year, except very young stock, which appear to me to answer quite as well in confinement. These, however, are more beneficial in the sheep pasture, which requires only the same fences as for young enclosures, is an object of some moment. This is, beyond question, the most economical mode of using clover. One acre of red clover, mowed and given to the farm yard, will, I suspect, afford more sustenance in the summer, than three acres of grass land pastured.

Still feeding I consider preferable to giving cattle food in racks

—Early on Saturday morn ast. the extensive powder manufactory, belonging to Jared Mills, Jr. in Canton, took fire, as it is supposed from the friction of the machinery. Before the fire was discovered, it communicated to the powder, which, in the mill, and in an adjoining storehouse, amounted to about 400 barrels. We have again to record the destruction by fire of three valuable rope walks, situated on the water's edge on the west side of the common. There were recently five rope walks running parallel with one another, but a few feet apart, extending nearly a quarter of a mile in length, and having large store houses at the southern extremity. It was one of these rope walks belonging to Mr. Winslow Lewis, which was burnt down on the evening of the 6th ult. This had been mostly rebuilt. The fire on Saturday evening first broke out near the northern extremity of the fourth building, and spread with surprising rapidity along the whole length. The wind blew quite freshly from the north, shifting occasionally a little to the west, and in a few minutes the three middle buildings were entirely enveloped in flames. The volume of flame was driven with great violence upon the store houses at the southern extremity, so that no efforts could save them.

It was only by the most strenuous exertions of the fire-wardens, engine-men and citizens, that the progress of destruction was stayed here.—Not only the buildings on the south side of Pleasant-street, opposite to the store houses, were in the greatest danger of destruction, but the whole southern part of the town was imminently exposed. FROM THE FARMER'S MAGAZINE.

The management of live stock on arable farms considered.

In the important branch of rural economy, namely, the management of live stock, great improvement is still requisite; and however much the general system of agriculture may be amended of late years, I am of opinion we are yet so backward on this head, that there are comparatively few arable farms that would not maintain and fatten a double quantity of stock; and perhaps in some, three, four or five times the present number, without lessening the annual produce of grain. The advantages resulting from such an increase of stock are too manifest to be overlooked, and call loudly for attention.

Upon arable farms live stock is generally considered as a secondary object, and the quantity kept is usually very small. According to the old system of husbandry, this must be the case. But by a proper combination of green crops, such as tares, clover, and buck wheat for summer; turnips, carrots, potatoes, cabbages and kale for winter; it certainly is possible for the tillage farmer to support and fatten a quantity of stock equal to the grazier, on the same number of acres; benefitting the soil to be of a similar quality.

To do this, I grant, a considerable capital is absolutely necessary, as the whole expence of an arable farm is to be added to that of a grazing one. In the purchase of stock for breeding, it will be invariably found that the best are the most profitable; indeed, attention to breed cannot be too strenuously recommended in animals of every species. I would here remark, that size is no proof of excellence in any stock; and that the great object of the farmer should be to gain the greatest possible weight of animal food, from a given quantity of vegetable. If, therefore, three animals of a small breed, can be fattened to a greater weight, in less time, and upon less food, than two of a larger breed, they are infinitely to be preferred.

The arable farmer should have such a supply of green food as will enable him to keep all his horses, cattle and pigs in the farm yard throughout the year; except very young stock, which do not appear to me to answer quite so well in confinement. These, however, may be beneficial in the sheep pastures, and will require only the same fence; which, in young enclosures, is an object of no small moment. This is, beyond doubt, the most economical mode of consuming food. One acre of red clover, mown and carted to the farm yard, will, I am confident, afford more sustenance during the summer, than three acres of the best old grass land pastured.

Still feeding I consider preferable to giving cattle food in racks in the farm yard; they are at all times quiet, and less disturbed by flies in the summer; and in winter the shelter it affords from the inclemency of the weather is of great service. Cattle never thrive so well as when they are perfectly at ease. Strict attention is also necessary to have them well bedded with dry straw, of which much less will suffice in the house than in the yard. But the number of sheds required for this purpose may sometimes prevent this practice.

I am aware the expence of soiling will be considered a serious objection by many; but when the additional quantity of stock supported, together with the immense return of manure, and consequent amelioration of the land are taken into consideration, surely it may be viewed as a small object. One man will cut, cart the food, and attend to a very considerable number of cattle, provided the crops are good, and the land near the farm stead; and it ought always to be the work of one man, as nothing contributes more to the thriving of animals than regular attendance. The food ought to be given frequently in small quantities, and never allowed to stand before them; and the troughs kept perfectly sweet and clean. Variety of food, too, is necessary; and it is convenient to the farmer that it is so: as it renders it easy to provide food for every season, and allows a more frequent change of crop.

To lay down a rotation of crops necessary to support this system, would occupy too large a space of your valuable publication; but to every one conversant in agriculture, it must be obvious this is by no means difficult. That the number of acres sown with corn will hereby be diminished, must be admitted; yet, from the increased excellence of the land by the green fallows, such abundant crops would be insured as to make the produce of grain fully to equal, if not exceed, all that could be raised by more frequent introduction of corn crops.

In addition to the above, let it be considered how great is the difference to the farme between one good and two inferior crops. How immense the saving of rent, seed and labour! Surely these circumstances will far outweigh all that can be said in opposition to soiling, on account of its attendant expence. Indeed, my own practice has so fully convinced me of the advantages of this system, that I recommend it with particular solicitude; and feel assured, that after a fair and impartial trial, no one will give it up.

THE DOG OF GALLOWAY.—The following remarkable instance of animal sagacity, occurred a short time ago; while one of the Dalbeattie carriers was on his way to Dumfries, he had occasion to stop at some houses by the road side, in the way of his business, leaving his cart and horse upon the public road, under the protection of a passenger and a trusty dog. Upon his return, he missed a led horse, belonging to a gentleman in the neighbourhood, which he had tied to the end of the cart, and likewise one of the female passengers. On inquiry he was informed, that during his absence the female who had been anxious to try the mettle of the poney, had mounted it, and that the animal had set off at full speed The carrier expressed much anxiety for the safety of the young woman, at the same time he cast an expressive look at his dog. Oscar observed his master's eye, and aware of its meaning, instantly set off in pursuit of the pony, which he came up with soon after he passed the first toll-bar on the Dalbeattie road, when he made a sudden spring, seized the bridle, and held the animal fast. Several people having observed the circumstance, and the perilous situation of the girl, came to relieve her: Oscar, however, notwithstanding their repeated endeavours, would not quit his hold, and the pony was actually led into the stable with the dog till such time that the carrier should arrive. Upon the carrier entering the stable, Oscar wagged his tail in token of satisfaction, and immediately relinquished the bridle to his master.

The law against the disgusting practice of Charivaries, has lately been put in force in this city. A Blacksmith by the name of J. Valiquette, was found guilty of the practical Agriculturist, going through the St. Antoine Suburb, under disguise, and crying Charivarie; for all of which offence he was convicted and sentenced to pay a fine of 20 shilling and costs. A few salutary examples of this sort would put an effectual stop to this disgraceful custom.

We understand some enterprising individuals, who possess the lands, near the Cross, at the foot of the Current St. Mary, have in the determination to form a Building Lots, for the purpose of laying out the grounds in Building Lots, and establishing the scite of a Town that place. This is a plan which will doubt be productive of considerable lument to those concerned, and ultimately beneficial to the public at large.

This town is to be designated by the old Indian name, Hochelaga, and will include the ruins of that old village. There are few places possessed of more advantages, from nature, and capable of greater improvement from art, as the scite of a Town, than this. It lies at the head of the navigation of the St. Lawrence; vessels from the sea may at all times reach it, when the river is navigable, without being subjected to the delay of ascending the current. The river here forms a capacious bay, with safe anchorage for any number of vessels, and of any burden. It will include the point where the Lachine Canal will disembogue into the St. Lawrence. While these and many other circumstances give it a decided advantage over the scite of Montreal; its proximity to that city will be the means of producing for it a rapid growth and increase its prosperity. A proper degree of liberality in the present holders of the ground, will soon render this a favorite resort for all men, whose circumstances and employment, allow their residing at a short distance from town. While its advantages in a commercial point of view, will make many establish themselves there in that line. This will be more obvious when the La-Chine Canal goes into operation.

Longueuil Traverse.—The steamboat which plies between Longueuil and the opposite shore, is we understand, very lucrative; clearing, after a deduction of all expenses, about £8 per day, on an average. So certain is this, that the sum expended in her construction has been offered to her proprietor by a person noted for acuteness & foresight in dealing; but has been refused by the latter, who demands an additional £50 to reimburse him for the cost of an apartment erected on the deck, devoted to the purposes of a canteen. He is probably disposed to the sale, from an appreh-nsion that his profits will no are diminution to considerable by the competition of the steam-boat recently launched at Boucherville. But, to those who have observed the number of batt-aux formerly employed in the passage; and the more considerable number of persons, vehicles and cattle whom the present facility of conveyance, induces; it will readily appear, that a handsome revenue may be derived from both. If the steam-boat ascends the current to the New-Market, she will probably be preferred by the market people from Longueuil and its vicinity; who bringing no vehicles and having baskets to carry, have, at present, a fatiguing walk from the landing place to the city. But those who, coming to Longueuil from the interior, bring with them vehicles, (and who can therefore reach the market in a short time after disembarcation) will prefer a passage in the team-boat to the slower and more expensive process of ascending the current. If the steam-boat does not ascend the current, she will still, from her greater celerity, have the majority of foot-passengers; but, in return, the superior dimensions of the team-boat will secure her the conveyance of large droves of cattle. Thus, neither will prevent a reasonable profit on the capital employed in the other, and the public will be accommodated while the enterprising proprietors are enriched.

We have occasionally inserted in this paper extracts from the Letters of AGRICOLA, originally published in the Acadian Recorder at Halifax. The whole of these Letters, it will be seen by an advertisement in this day's Gazette, are about to be published in a more permanent and useful form. Having perused them as they reached us in the Recorder, we think it but justice on this occasion, to say, that they contain a tremendous practical exposition of the System of Agriculture now followed in the North of Scotland, adapted to the climate and circumstances of Nova Scotia is not only in this respect, however, that the Letters of Agricola will be valuable through the whole of the Northern parts of this Continent. The Author, in these Letters, it will be seen by an advertisement in this day's Gazette, are about to be published in a more permanent and useful form. Having perused them as they reached us in the Recorder, we think it but justice on this occasion, to say, that they contain a tremendous practical exposition of the System of Agriculture now followed in the North of Scotland, adapted to the climate and circumstances of Nova Scotia is not only in this respect, however, that the Letters of Agricola will be valuable through the whole of the Northern parts of this Continent. The Author, which his writings have produced in Nova Scotia, is wonderful; but we shall hall let a far more competent authority than ours, speak on this subject. The Earl of DALHOUSIE, whose name will be dear to the inhabitants of Nova Scotia, as long as his successful exertions in the cause of Agriculture, will be remembered, has lately been pleased to honour the Author of these Letters, with a Gold Medal, as a reference being thereto had, will more fully appear.

IN TESTIMONY whereof, WE have caused the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed. Witness our trusty and well beloved Sir FREDERICK MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this twenty-fourth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, and in the sixtieth year of our reign.

P. M.

By Command of His Excellency,
D. CAMERON,
Secretary.

YORK, DECEMBER 9, 1819.

The Committee appointed at the last Meeting of the Society, for relieving strangers in distress, to digest a plan for carrying into the simplest practicable effect the benevolent offer of His Excellency the Lieut. Governor, to supply the settling emigrants from Great Britain, with RATIONS through the Commissariat, upon payment by the Society of the actual cost thereof, beg leave to recommend the following arrangements as the result of their deliberations:—

1st.—That printed Tickets of recommendation for relief, (according to the annexed form prepared by this Committee,) be distributed among the Subscribers to the Society in proportion to their respective subscriptions for the current year.

2d.—That upon application of any distressed person, to become an object of the bounty, it is to be hoped due pains will be taken by every subscriber to whom such application may be made, to ascertain the actual necessity of the case previous to giving the applicant one of these recommendatory tickets.

3d.—That for the purpose of simplifying the distribution of these Rations by the Commissariat as well as of checking any undue attempt on the part of any applicant, to procure the relief in question from more than one subscriber, it is considered expedient that these recommendatory Tickets should be countersigned by the Treasurer or Secretary of the Society, previous to their becoming obligatory upon the Commissariat.

4th.—That therefore each applicant for relief upon proceeding from some one of the Subscribers to the Institution, a recommendatory Ticket, should at the same time be instructed to proceed therewith either to the Hon. & Revd. Dr. Strachan as Treasurer, or to R. C. Horne, Esquire, as Secretary of the Society, at the time pointed out in a subsequent regulation, for the purpose of having the name of one of these Gentlemen subscribed to the order upon the Commissariat, which is subjoined to the Ticket.

5th.—As these orders will of course be preserved by the Commissariat, as vouchers for the actual delivery of the Rations therein ordered, they will ultimately form claims upon the Society for the due payment of the amount of the charge founded thereupon; these claims are therefore to be discharged regularly every month by the Treasurer, upon the necessary abstract of distribution with its corresponding vouchers being furnished by the Commissariat.

6th.—That as well for the information of the Subscribers to the Institution, as for that of the applicants for relief, it is hereby notified, that a ration is intended to consist of one lb. of Bread or Flour & one lb. of fresh Beef, & that the following proportion of distribution will be adopted viz.

Men,	One Ration each per diem
Women,	Half	do.
Children above 2 years of age,	a Third	do.
Children under 2 years of age,	a Quarter	do.

It is further notified, in consequence of arrangements, kindly acceded to by the Hon. & Revd. Dr. Strachan as Treasurer, and by R. C. Horne, Esq. as Secretary, and by F. J. Billings, Esq. as head of the Commissariat at this post, that the two former will generally be at home every morning at 10 o'clock (except Sundays,) for the purpose of countersigning the recommendatory Tickets; and the latter will be prepared to have Rations upon the butcher and Baker delivered at the Commissariat Store on the same days between the hours of 11 o'clock & 1 o'clock for such Tickets.

7th.—That Copies of these Regulations be printed and circulated among the subscribers to the Institution for their information and guidance and that their proportion of recommendatory Tickets do accompany the same.

All which is respectfully recommended by your Committee.

We have not seen more than two or three extracts from Agricola's Letter: the resolutions of which in a more permanent form, is announced in another part of this paper, but, judging from the reports we have read of them, and the very great effects produced in Nova Scotia, we think that the work will prove highly useful in this Province, and that every intelligent farmer ought to possess a copy. Subscriptions will be received at Mr. Dewson's, Bookseller, who will forward a list to the publisher in a few days.

DIED.—On Thursday last, after a very long illness, Mrs. Jarvis, wife of Stephen Jarvis, Esq. Register of the Home District.

To all to whom these presents shall come, GREETING:

WHEREAS, it has been represented to us, that, the establishment of a Public Fair or Mart, in the Town of York, in the Home District of our said Province of Upper Canada, would tend greatly to the welfare, convenience, and prosperous advancement of the said District, NOW KNOW YE that in furtherance of so desirable an object, WE have thought fit, by our Letters Patent, bearing even date with these presents, to give and grant unto Samuel Ridout, Esquire, being our Sheriff in and for our Home District, and to his successors respectively (Sheriffs of the same for the time being,) to and for the resort and intercourse of our liege subjects of this Province of Upper Canada, All and singular the public Fair and Mart, and the right, privilege, advantage and franchise of keeping and holding a public Fair and Mart, as Stewards of the same respectively, at and within the Town of York, in the County of York, in the Home District aforesaid, at two different times in each and every year, that is to say, to begin and be holden on the third Monday in the month of May, and the first Monday in the month of October, and to continue at each time respectively for and during the space of six successive days and no longer—subject nevertheless to the conditions, provisions, payments for package and stallage, restrictions and limitations in our said Letters Patent contained, as reference being thereto had, will more fully appear.

a.—Early on Saturday morn-inst. the extensive powder manufactory, belonging to Jared Mills, Jr. in Canton, took fire, as it is supposed from the friction of the machinery. Before the fire was discovered, it communicated to the powder, which, in the mill, and in an adjoining storehouse, amounted to about 400 barrels. The explosion was of course tremendous, and was distinctly heard and felt in this city. One of the workmen had just entered the threshold of the door, at the moment of the explosion: a similar explosion took place at the same manufactory, a little more than a year since.

We understand that the Great Swamp, about ten miles west of Springfield, New Jersey, which caught fire about four weeks since is still burning, and that about 3,000 acres of timber have been destroyed. The inhabitants who reside near the Swamp, suffer very much from the smoke.—Gaz.

BOSTON, Nov. 15.

We have again to record the destruction by fire of three valuable rope walks, situated on the water's edge on the west side of the common. There were recently five rope walks running parallel with one another, but a few feet apart, extending nearly a quarter of a mile in length, and having large store houses at the southern extremity. It was one of these rope walks belonging to Mr. Winslow Lewis, which was burnt down on the evening of the 6th ult. This had been mostly rebuilt. The fire on Saturday evening first broke out near the northern extremity of the fourth building, and spread with surprising rapidity along the whole length. The wind blew quite freshly from the north, shifting occasionally a little to the west, and in a few minutes the three middle buildings were entirely enveloped in flames. The volume of flame was driven with great violence upon the store houses at the southern extremity, so that no efforts could save them.

It was only by the most strenuous exertions of the fire-wardens, engine-men and citizens, that the progress of destruction was stayed here.—Not only the buildings on the south side of Pleasant-street, opposite to the store houses, were in the greatest danger of destruction, but the whole southern part of the town was imminently exposed. The store houses were strongly built, and thought to be fire-proof, but the heat was so intense, that the safeguards proved insufficient. With them was consumed a large amount of valuable stock

FROM THE FARMER'S MAGAZINE.

The management of live stock on arable farms considered.

In the important branch of rural economy, namely, the management of live stock, great improvement is still required; and however much the general system of agriculture may be amended of late years, I am of opinion we are yet so backward on this head, that there are comparatively few arable farms that would not maintain and fatten a double quantity of stock; and perhaps in some, three, four or five times the present number, without lessening the annual produce of grain. The advantages resulting from such an increase of stock are too manifest to be overlooked, and call loudly for attention.

Upon arable farms live stock is generally considered as a secondary object, and the quantity kept is usually very small. According to the old system of husbandry, this must be the case. But by a proper combination of green crops, such as tares, clover, and buck wheat for summer; turnips, carrots, potatoes, cabbages and kale for winter; it certainly is possible for the tillage farmer to support and fatten a quantity of stock equal to the grazier, on the same number of acres; admitting the soil to be of a similar quality.

To do this, I grant, a considerable capital is absolutely necessary, as the whole expence of an arable farm is to be added to that of a grazing one. In the purchase of stock for breeding, it will be invariably found that the best are the most profitable; indeed, attention to breed cannot be too strenuously recommended in animals of every species. I would here remark, that size is no proof of excellence in any stock; and that the great object of the farmer should be to gain the greatest possible weight of animal food, from a given quantity of vegetable. If, therefore, three animals of a small breed, can be fattened to a greater weight, in less time, and upon less food, than two of a larger breed, they are infinitely to be preferred.

The arable farmer should have such a supply of green food as will enable him to keep all his horses, cattle and pigs in the farm yard throughout the year; except very young stock, which do not appear to me to answer quite so well in confinement. These, however, may be beneficial in the sheep pastures, and will require only the same fence; which, in young enclosures, is an object of no small moment. This is, beyond doubt, the most economical mode of consuming food. One acre of red clover, mown and carted to the farm yard, will, I am confident, afford more sustenance during the summer, than three acres of the best old grass land pastured.

Still feeding I consider preferable to giving cattle food in racks in the farm yard; they are at all times quiet, and less disturbed by flies in the summer; and in winter the shelter it affords from the inclemency of the weather is of great service. Cattle never thrive so well as when they are perfectly at ease. It is not only in this respect, however, that the Letters of Agricola will be valuable through the whole of the Northern parts of this Continent. The Author, while he enters into all the minute detail of the practical Agriculturist, possesses at the same time the rare talent of transfering to his readers his own enthusiasm in favor of agriculture. The effect which his writings have produced in Nova Scotia, is wonderful; but we shall shall let a far more competent authority than ours, speak on this subject. The Earl of DALHOUSIE, whose name will be ever dear to the inhabitants of Nova Scotia, and who by his successful exertions for the improvement of Agriculture, will rank as one of the distinguished benefactors of mankind, in answer to an Address of the Uuaba Agricultural Society of King's County, Nova Scotia, delivered at the Cattle Show held on the eighth October last, at which his Excellency attended and presided at the distribution of the Premiums, has borne ample testimony to the good effects of Agricola's writings. Although the many contains another matter, we cannot refuse ourselves the pleasure of transcribing it entire:—

"GENTLEMEN,

I receive this address with feelings of peculiar satisfaction, because it comes to me from a part of the country to which I am inclined to give a superiority in the public voice on matters connected with our general interests. This is one of the earliest settlements; the improvements are most extensive; the natural advantages of the soil more encouraging, and the spirit of the resident proprietors more generally active in this than in almost any other county of the province. On these grounds, I give to this address more importance than is attached to a compliment paid me in visiting you on this occasion; and I acknowledge this expression of your sentiments as the more acceptable, because my own bosom tells me, how earnestly I do feel interested in the improvement of the Agriculture of this beautiful country."

"But I am not vain enough to attribute to my endeavours, the happy results already experienced from the general spirit excited in all parts of the province. Give that merit where it is most justly due; and I shall think it honor enough, to share your praises avowedly with him, who is now known to you all as Agricola."

"I am sanguine enough, Gentlemen in this cause, to think the grand object already obtained; and I do not entertain a doubt, that every succeeding year will give you additional reason to pursue your improvements with encreasing energy & spirit."

"One or two seasons of success are no criteria of what this province is capable; and I am convinced, that no farmer here, who has not seen the scale of Agriculture in Great Britain, can form an idea of the extent to which a perseverance in your labours will lead you as a natural consequence."

"Our most lively gratitude is due to Almighty God for his blessing this season in a most abundant crop, in all parts of the province."

"In thanking you for this address, allow me to make the request of being enrolled a member of the Union Agricultural Society of King's county.—Although I cannot be a practical member, I will venture to assert, that none can wish its prosperity more sincerely than I do."

(Signed) "DALHOUSIE."

"October, 1818."

We trust that the Inhabitants of this Province will not be backward in encouraging the publication and dissemination of a work of such acknowledged usefulness.

Lieut. Governor.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the THIRD, by the Grace of GOD of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come, GREETING:

WHEREAS, it has been represented to us, that, the establishment of a Public Fair or Mart, in the Town of York, in the Home District of our said Province of Upper Canada, would tend greatly to the welfare, convenience, and prosperous advancement of the said District, NOW KNOW YE that in further pursuance of so desirable an object, We have thought fit, by our Letters Patent, bearing even date with these presents, to give and grant unto Samuel Ridout, Esquire, being our Sheriff in and for our House District, and to his successors respectively (Sheriffs of the same for the time being,) to and for the resort and intercourse of our liege subjects of this Province of Upper Canada, All and singular the publicFair and Mart, and the right, privilege, advantage and franchise of keeping and holding a public Fair and Mart, as Stewards of the same respectively, at and within the Town of York, in the County of York, in the Home District aforesaid, at two different times in each and every year, that is to say, to begin and be holden on the third Monday in the month of May, and the first Monday in the month of October, and to continue at each time respectively for and during the space of six successive days and no longer—subject nevertheless to the conditions, provisions, payments for pacage and stallage, restrictions and limitations in our said Letters Patent contained, as reference being thereto had, will more fully appear.

In TESTIMONY whereof, WE have caused those our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed. Witness our trusty and well beloved Sir PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this twenty-fourth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, and in the sixtieth year of our reign.

P. M.

By Command of His Excellency,
D. CAMERON,
Secretary.

YORK, DECEMBER 9, 1819.

The Committee appointed at the late Meeting of the Society, for relieving strangers in distress, to digest a plan for carrying into the speediest practicable effect the benevolent offer of His Excellency the Lieut. Governor, to supply the settling emigrants from Great Britain, with Rations through the Commissariat, upon payment by the Society of the actual cost thereof, beg leave to recommend the following arrangements as the result of their deliberations:—

1st.—That printed Tickets of recommendation for relief, (according to the annexed form prepared by this Committee,) be distributed among the Subscribers to the Society in proportion to their respective subscriptions for the current year.

2d.—That upon application of any distressed person, to become an object of this bounty, it is to be hoped due pains will be taken by every subscriber to whom such application may be made, to ascertain the actual necessity of the case previous to giving the applicant one of these recommendatory tickets.

3d.—That for the purpose of simplifying the distribution of these tickets by the Commissariat as well as of checking any undue attempt on the part of any applicant, to procure the relief in question from more than one subscriber, it is considered expedient that these recommendatory Tickets should be countersigned by the Treasurer or Secretary of the Society previous to their becoming obligatory upon the Commissariat.

4th.—That therefore each applicant for relief upon presenting from some one of the Subscribers to the Institution, a recommendatory Ticket, should at the same time be instructed to proceed therewith either to the Hon. & Revd. Dr. Strachan as Treasurer, or to R. C. Horne, Esquire, as Secretary of the Society, at the time pointed out in a subsequent resolution, for the purpose of having the name of one of these Gentlemen subscribed to the order upon the Commissariat, which is subjoined to the Ticket.

5th.—As these orders will of course be preserved by the Commissariat, as vouchers for the actual delivery of the Rations therein selected, they will ultimately form claims upon the Society for the due payment of the amount of the charge founded thereupon; these claims are therefore to be discharged regularly every month by the Treasurer, upon the necessary abstract of distribution with its corresponding vouchers being furnished by the Commissariat.

6th.—That as will for the information of the Subscribers to the Institution, as for that of the applicants for relief it is hereby notified, that a Ration is intended to consist of one lb. of bread or Flour & one lb. of fresh Beef, & that the following proportion of distribution will be adopted viz.

Men,	One Ration each per diem
Women,	Half do.	do.
Children above 7 years of age,	a Third	do.
Children under 7 years of age,	a Quarter	do.

It is further notified, in consequence of arrangements, kindly acceded to by the Hon. & Revd. Dr. Strachan as Treasurer, and by R. C. Horne, Esq. as Secretary, and by F. J. Billings, Esq. as head of the Commissariat at this post, that the two former will generally be at home every morning at 10 o'clock (except Sundays,) for the purpose of countersigning the recommendatory Tickets; and the latter will be prepared to have checks upon the Batchelor and Baker delivered at the Commissariat Store on the same days between the hours of 11 o'clock & 1 in exchange for such Tickets.

7th.—That Copies of these Regulations be printed and circulated among the subscribers to the Institution for their information and guidance and that their proportion of recommendatory Tickets do accompany the same.

All which is respectfully recommended by your Committee.

We have not seen more than two or three extracts from Agricola's Letters, the republication of which in a more permanent form, is announced in another part of this paper, but, judging from the reputation we have heard of them, and the very great effects produced in Nova Scotia, we think that the work will prove highly useful in this Province, and that very considerable encouragement ought to be given to it. Subscriptions will be received at Mr. Dawson's, Bookseller, who will forward a list to the publisher in a few days.

DIED.—On Thursday last, after a very long illness, Mrs. Jarvis, wife of Stephen Jarvis, Esq. Register of the Home District.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the N. B. Courier.

TO AGRICULTURALISTS.

☞ The principal part of our Readers have either seen or heard of the Letters of "AGRICOLA," published in the Halifax "Acadian Recorder," and much benefit, no doubt, has been derived from them, both by our Agricultural friends in this and the Sister Provinces.—They have given rise to the formation of Agricultural Socities in every part of Nova-Scotia; and we are informed that it is in contemplation for this Province to follow their very laudable example. AGRICOLA has, by particular request, been induced to offer to the Public (under the particular circumstances referred to in his Address below) the whole series of his Letters, (number about sixty) in an octavo volume to be printed at Halifax, at a moderate price to Subscribers; which no doubt will prove a rich treat to the Agriculturalist, as he will not only have the opinion of Agricola, but of the most celebrated writers on that subject.

Those of our Agricultural friends or others, who are desirous of countenancing the undertaking, will please leave their names at this Office, before the 1st January next.

Subscribers from the Country are particularly requested to give references to some Gentlemen in the City.

St. Johns, Oct. 16. 1819.

AGRICOLA TO HIS READERS.

I AM under the necessity of intermitting the series of these letters, till my tour through the Western and Easterndistricts of the Province is completed, and which is undertaken at the request of the agricultural Committee. This month I have set apart for that purpose, in order so to arrange my journey as to attend the two cattle shows—the first at Horton Corner on the 8th—and the second at Truro on the 29th Instant. I shall write to the President or Secretary of each Society previous to my arrival, that I may have the pleasure of meeting the members in full assembly.

As these essays of mine are drawing towards a close, in as far as regards the first part of the plan, and it is the wish of many that they should be published in a distinct volume, I mean to devote the winter to their revisal and correction, that they may issue from the press early in the spring. At the outset I had not the most distant intention of giving them such a permanent shape; and I engaged in the work, rather as the amusement of my literary leisure, than in the hope of meeting such ample success, or of producing such happy and extensive effects.

Under the influence of public favour, they have been continued to their present length; and indeed have thriven by a liberal patronage. But I am not blind to their many errors, both in point of composition, of reasoning, and I fear, in some instances even of facts; and on these grounds, though given to the public, and placed in some measure beyond the possibility of recall I shall recast many of them anew, and either abridge or enlarge the illustrations, as the nature of the subject may dictate.

As nothing was further from my view than deriving any pecuniary profit from these essays, & as I always regarded them as offerings on the altar of our provincial prosperity, I shall give £50 out of the nett proceed of the sales, to be distributed in agricultural premiums, under the direction of the Central Board; provided the subscription throughout the Province shall be such, as to defray the expences of the publication, and leave a surplus to that extent. If, after this sum, the book shall yield me any emolument, it must be owing to the fervour and generosity of my friends in recommending it strongly to the public notice. It may happen however from the pressure of the times, and perhaps, too, from the decay of that interest and curiosity, which were once so lively; that the number of subscriptions may fall much short of what is needed for the charges of printing; and in that case, it will remain as a question with the Provincial Agricultural Society whether the these letters shall reappear or to be suffered to perish in their present fugitive and evanescent form. Of their imperfections I am so sensible, that I hardly feel a wish to commit them to posterity; and I only yield, because many, whose judgment I esteem, think themselves, and have tried to persuade me that they will be useful.

They will form a full sized octavo volume, and in all amount to upwards of sixty letters, and these interspersed with the principal events that occurred, and have led to the present gratifying return. Such a book could not be published in England, and sold under 15s. 6d; but the greatest economy shall be used, to bring them forth here as cheap as possible. JOHN YOUNG, Secy

Halifax, Oct. 1, 1819.

From the New-York Daily Advertiser.

NEW HOLLAND.

There is, perhaps, no colony, of modern establishment, in the world, which considering its origin and its object, is of more singular character than the British settlement at New South Wales, or as it is otherwise called, New Holland. This immense territory, which is called an island, but might with more propriety be considered a continent, was explored by the celebrated navigator Cook, in the year 1770, and, in consequence of his suggestion, was adopted by the British government as a receptacle for the convicts. The first use made of it for this purpose was, if we recollect aright, in the year 1787, when several hundreds were sent over from the parent country, under sentence of transportation for various crimes, and under the government of governor Philips.—From that time to this, it has been made use of for the same purpose, and is now a large and important colony, and bids fair, at some future day, to become an immensely valuable portion of the British dominions, or perhaps may grow, in the end, to a powerful independent nation. The number of inhabitants, in the year 1817, was more than twenty thousand, who had under cultivation near 50,000 acres of land, which was stocked with numerous flocks and herds, the sheep amounting to more than 170,000, and the horned cattle to rising 44,000.

The natural productions of New Holland in plants, flowers, birds and quadrupeds, are rare and extraordinary. Although it is more than thirty years since its settlement commenced, still, owing to its extent and the peculiar circumstances of the colony, the true character of the interior of the country has been, until lately, but little explored or understood. Within the last two or three years, however, under the patronage of Gov. Macquarrie, attempts have been made, and with great success, to examine and survey the unexplored regions, and the result has been such as not only to gratify, but to surprise, the persons engaged in the excursions. Among other discoveries thus made, we find an account, in the Edinburgh Review for July, 1819, in an article on several publications respecting that country, of a most majestic river heretofore unknown, but which bids fair, in its extent and character, to equal the most distinguished streams on our own continent. This account is "contained in a despatch from Mr. Oxley, Surveyor General of the settlement, to the Governor, dated 30th of August, 1818" and is as follows:—

"On the 19th we were gratified by falling in with a river running through a most beautiful country, and which I would have been well contented to have believed was the river we were in search. Accident led us down this stream about a mile, when we were surprized by its junction with a river coming from the south, of such width and magnitude, as to dispel all doubts as to this last being the river we had so anxiously looked for. Short as our resources were, we could not resist the temptation this beautiful country offered us, to remain two days on the junction of the river, for the purpose of examining the vicinity, to as great an extent as possible.

"Our examination increased the satisfaction we had felt. As far as the eye could reach in every direction, a rich and picturesque country extended, abounding in limestone, slate, good timber, and every other requisite that could render an uncultivated country desirable. The soil cannot be excelled; whilst a noble river of the first magnitude, affords the means of conveying its productions from one part to the other. Where I quitted it, its course was northerly; and we were then north of the parallel of Port Stevens, being in latitude 32° 45' south, and 148° 58' east longitude.

"It appears to me that the Macquarrie had taken a north northwest course from Bathurst, and that it must have received immense accessions of water in its course from that place. We viewed it at a period best calculated to form an accurate judgment of its importance, when it was neither swelled by floods beyond its natural and usual height, nor contracted within its limits by summer droughts. Of its magnitude when it should have received the streams we had crossed, independent of any it may receive from the east, which, from the boldness and height of the country, I presume, must be at least as many, some idea may be formed, when at this point it exceeded, in breadth, and apparent depth, the Hawkesbury at Windsor. Many of the branches were of grander and more extended proportion than the admired one on the Nepean River from the Warraganbis to Emu plains.

"Resolving to keep as near the river as possible during the remainder of our course to Bathurst, and endeavor to ascertain, at least on the west side, what waters fell into it, on the 2d we proceeded up the river, and, between the point quitted and Bathurst, crossed the sources of numberless streams all running into the Macquarrie. Two of them were nearly as large as that river itself at Bathurst."—

The Reviewers then add, that "The nearest distance from the point at which Mr. Oxley left off to any part of the western coast, is very little short of 2000 miles. The Hawkesbury, at Windsor, (to which he compares his new river in magnitude,) is 250 yards in breadth, and of sufficient depth to float a 74 gun ship. At this point it has 2000 miles in a straight line to reach the ocean: and if it winds as rivers commonly do wind, it has to flow over a space of between 3 and 5000 miles."

PROSPECTUS.

"Salus Populi, Suprema Lex."

The safety of the People, the supreme Law.

IN the motto selected, we trust the Rulers and the ruled, in all countries where rational freedom is cherished, will recognize the great and important truth it contains. Life, Liberty and Property are the primary objects which the compact of civil society is intended to secure; and on those principles are the Constitution and Laws of England founded. Among the most essential securities the British nation doth enjoy at this day, may be ranked the Independence of the Press. But for this auxiliary, the condition of the liberties of the people of England would be no better than that of the Cossacs, or poor and miserable peasantry of Poland & of Germany. So valuable a privilege cannot be too highly appreciated by the people of this Province, who have hitherto displayed an honourable attachment towards its support; and their patronage is again respectfully solicited.

In putting forth to the public—to the world, the Prospectus of a Journal, which has for its end the welfare of this Province, and must necessarily embrace many objects, it may be easily conceived the Editor feels impressed with the weight of the task he has undertaken. He pretends not to infallibility, but is aware he may frequently err; and can only console himself in the anticipated indulgence of a generous Public.

In the first place, we wish it to be distinctly understood, that we invite discussion on all subjects connected with the immediate interests of the Country; in the expectation it be temperate in its style and language, and making a due discrimination between public and private characters. Our own observations, from time to time, will be guided by these principles; reserving always to ourselves the full and undoubted right to investigate the conduct of public men and their measures,—"nothing extenuating, nor setting down aught in malice." Those, if any such there be, who may attempt to make this journal a vehicle for detraction or malignant gratification, will be assuredly disappointed. Agricultural essays, tending to facilitate the labors of the husbandman, will be regarded among the most important which can grace our columns. This Colony, from its situation, is peculiarly adapted to agriculture, the mother of all sciences; and with its prosperity the commercial interests of the community are most intimately connected. All communications having in view the promotion of true piety & benevolence, will be thankfully received and attended to; inasmuch as in the practice of the Christian virtues, consist, in an eminent degree, the happiness of society. Assiduity shall not be wanting to collect & insert in our columns the proceedings of the House of Assembly, when in Session, from time to time; also, all articles of intelligence, foreign and domestic, as shall be thought most useful and instructive; we shall, indeed, endeavor to unite the "utile cum dulce," the useful with the agreeable.—And, in short, from the grave philosopher and plodding politician, to the fantastic admirer of the Muses, all will be equally entitled to attention, and shall have a corner appropriated for their chaste effusions.

The Canadian Argus and Niagara Spectator will be printed on super-royal paper, with a handsome type, and the first number issued on Thursday the 18th inst.

Subscriptions will be received at the Argus & Spectator Office.

GEORGE the THIRD, Grace of GOD of the Kingdom of Great Brit Ireland, King, Defende Faith:

To our beloved and faithful L Councellors of our Province Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens, Burgesses of our said Province Provincial Parliament, at your York, on Thursday the ninth December instant, to be convened called and elected, and to every

GREETING.

WHEREAS, by our Proclamation bearing date the twenty-first of October last, WE thought fit to call our Provincial Parliament, to be held day of December instant, and time at our Town of York, you held and constituted to appear KNOW YE that WE taking into al consideration, the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice Executive Council to relieve you each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid; hereby commanding by these presents enjoining you, and each of you, that on Tuesday the fourteenth day of January next you meet us in our Provincial Parliament Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare Province of Upper Canada, and to do as may seem necessary, and fail not.

IN TESTIMONY whereof, WE have caused these our Letters to be made patent, and the Great Seal of the Province to be hereunto affixed. WITNESS our trusty and well beloved PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Esquire, Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding Our Forces therein, at York, this day of December, in the year of Our Lord one thousand eighteen hundred and nineteen, and in the sixtieth year of our Reign.

By Command of His Excellency

PROCLAMATION

GEORGE the THIRD, Grace of GOD of the Kingdom of Great Britain Ireland, King, Defender Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come, or may concern, GREETING.

WHEREAS, it has been represented to us, that the estimates for the Public Roads, Piers or Harbours in the District of York, in the Home District of Upper Canada, will require greatly to the welfare, convenience and prosperous advancement of the said District, NOW KNOW YE that We, in the exercise of so desirable an object, have thought fit, by our Letters Patent, bearing even date with these presents, to give and grant unto Samuel Ridout, Esquire, being our Sheriff in and for the said District, and to his successors in the said office, (Sheriffs of the same District being,) to and for the respective

TO AGRICULTURALISTS.

☞ The principal part of our Readers have either seen or heard of the Letters of "AGRICOLA," published in the Halifax "Acadian Recorder," and much benefit, no doubt, has been derived from them, both by our Agricultural friends in this and the Sister Provinces.—They have given rise to the formation of Agricultural Socities in every part of Nova-Scotia; and we are informed that it is in contemplation for this Province to follow their very laudable example. AGRICOLA has, by particular request, been induced to offer to the Public (under the particular circumstances referred to in his Address below) the whole series of his Letters, (number about sixty) in an octavo volume to be printed at Halifax, at a moderate price to Subscribers; which no doubt will prove a rich treat to the Agriculturalist, as he will not only have the opinion of Agricola, but of the most celebrated writers on that subject.

Those of our Agricultural friends or others, who are desirous of countenancing the undertaking, will please leave their names at this Office, before the 1st January next.

Subscribers from the Country are particularly requested to give references to some Gentlemen in the City.

St. Johns, Oct. 16. 1819.

AGRICOLA TO HIS READERS.

I AM under the necessity of intermitting the series of these letters, till my tour through the Western and Easterndistricts of the Province is completed, and which is undertaken at the request of the agricultural Committee. This month I have set apart for that purpose, in order so to arrange my journey as to attend the two cattle shows—the first at Horton Corner on the 8th—and the second at Truro on the 29th Instant. I shall write to the President or Secretary of each Society previous to my arrival, that I may have the pleasure of meeting the members in full assembly.

As these essays of mine are drawing towards a close, in as far as regards the first part of the plan, and it is the wish of many that they should be published in a distinct volume, I mean to devote the winter to their revisal and correction, that they may issue from the press early in the spring. At the outset I had not the most distant intention of giving them such a permanent shape; and I engaged in the work, rather as the amusement of my literary leisure, than in the hope of meeting such ample success, or of producing such happy and extensive effects.

Under the influence of public favour, they have been continued to their present length; and indeed have thriven by a liberal patronage. But I am not blind to their many errors, both in point of composition, of reasoning, and I fear, in some instances even of facts; and on these grounds, though given to the public, and placed in some measure beyond the possibility of recall I shall recast many of them anew, and either abridge or enlarge the illustrations, as the nature of the subject may dictate.

As nothing was further from my view than deriving any pecuniary profit from these essays, & as I always regarded them as offerings on the altar of our provincial prosperity, I shall give £50 out of the nett proceed of the sales, to be distributed in agricultural premiums, under the direction of the Central Board; provided the subscription throughout the Province shall be such, as to defray the expences of the publication, and leave a surplus to that extent. If, after this sum, the book shall yield me any emolument, it must be owing to the fervour and generosity of my friends in recommending it strongly to the public notice. It may happen however from the pressure of the times, and perhaps, too, from the decay of that interest and curiosity, which were once so lively; that the number of subscriptions may fall much short of what is needed for the charges of printing; and in that case, it will remain as a question with the Provincial Agricultural Society whether the these letters shall reappear or to be suffered to perish in their present fugitive and evanescent form. Of their imperfections I am so sensible, that I hardly feel a wish to commit them to posterity; and I only yield, because many, whose judgment I esteem, think themselves, and have tried to persuade me that they will be useful.

They will form a full sized octavo volume, and in all amount to upwards of sixty letters, and these interspersed with the principal events that occurred, and have led to the present gratifying return. Such a book could not be published in England, and sold under 15s. 6d; but the greatest economy shall be used, to bring them forth here as cheap as possible. JOHN YOUNG, Secy

Halifax, Oct. 1, 1819.

From the New-York Daily Advertiser.

NEW HOLLAND.

There is, perhaps, no colony, of modern establishment, in the world, which considering its origin and its object, is of more singular character than the British settlement at New South Wales, or as it is otherwise called, New Holland. This immense territory, which is called an island, but might with more propriety be considered a continent, was explored by the celebrated navigator Cook, in the year 1770, and, in consequence of his suggestion, was adopted by the British government as a receptacle for the convicts. The first use made of it for this purpose was, if we recollect aright, in the year 1787, when several hundreds were sent over from the parent country, under sentence of transportation for various crimes, and under the government of governor Philips.—From that time to this, it has been made use of for the same purpose, and is now a large and important colony, and bids fair, at some future day, to become an immensely valuable portion of the British dominions, or perhaps may grow, in the end, to a powerful independent nation. The number of inhabitants, in the year 1817, was more than twenty thousand, who had under cultivation near 50,000 acres of land, which was stocked with numerous flocks and herds, the sheep amounting to more than 170,000, and the horned cattle to rising 44,000.

The natural productions of New Holland in plants, flowers, birds and quadrupeds, are rare and extraordinary. Although it is more than thirty years since its settlement commenced, still, owing to its extent and the peculiar circumstances of the colony, the true character of the interior of the country has been, until lately, but little explored or understood. Within the last two or three years, however, under the patronage of Gov. Macquarrie, attempts have been made, and with great success, to examine and survey the unexplored regions, and the result has been such as not only to gratify, but to surprise, the persons engaged in the excursions. Among other discoveries thus made, we find an account, in the Edinburgh Review for July, 1819, in an article on several publications respecting that country, of a most majestic river heretofore unknown, but which bids fair, in its extent and character, to equal the most distinguished streams on our own continent. This account is "contained in a despatch from Mr. Oxley, Surveyor General of the settlement, to the Governor, dated 30th of August, 1818" and is as follows:—

"On the 19th we were gratified by falling in with a river running through a most beautiful country, and which I would have been well contented to have believed was the river we were in search. Accident led us down this stream about a mile, when we were surprized by its junction with a river coming from the south, of such width and magnitude, as to dispel all doubts as to this last being the river we had so anxiously looked for. Short as our resources were, we could not resist the temptation this beautiful country offered us, to remain two days on the junction of the river, for the purpose of examining the vicinity, to as great an extent as possible.

"Our examination increased the satisfaction we had felt. As far as the eye could reach in every direction, a rich and picturesque country extended, abounding in limestone, slate, good timber, and every other requisite that could render an uncultivated country desirable. The soil cannot be excelled; whilst a noble river of the first magnitude, affords the means of conveying its productions from one part to the other. Where I quitted it, its course was northerly; and we were then north of the parallel of Port Stevens, being in latitude 32° 45' south, and 148° 58' east longitude.

"It appears to me that the Macquarrie had taken a north northwest course from Bathurst, and that it must have received immense accessions of water in its course from that place. We viewed it at a period best calculated to form an accurate judgment of its importance, when it was neither swelled by floods beyond its natural and usual height, nor contracted within its limits by summer droughts. Of its magnitude when it should have received the streams we had crossed, independent of any it may receive from the east, which, from the boldness and height of the country, I presume, must be at least as many, some idea may be formed, when at this point it exceeded, in breadth, and apparent depth, the Hawkesbury at Windsor. Many of the branches were of grander and more extended proportion than the admired one on the Nepean River from the Warraganbis to Emu plains.

"Resolving to keep as near the river as possible during the remainder of our course to Bathurst, and endeavor to ascertain, at least on the west side, what waters fell into it, on the 2d we proceeded up the river, and, between the point quitted and Bathurst, crossed the sources of numberless streams all running into the Macquarrie. Two of them were nearly as large as that river itself at Bathurst."—

The Reviewers then add, that "The nearest distance from the point at which Mr. Oxley left off to any part of the western coast, is very little short of 2000 miles. The Hawkesbury, at Windsor, (to which he compares his new river in magnitude,) is 250 yards in breadth, and of sufficient depth to float a 74 gun ship. At this point it has 2000 miles in a straight line to reach the ocean: and if it winds as rivers commonly do wind, it has to flow over a space of between 3 and 5000 miles."

PROSPECTUS.

"Salus Populi, Suprema Lex."

The safety of the People, the supreme Law.

IN the motto selected, we trust the Rulers and the ruled, in all countries where rational freedom is cherished, will recognize the great and important truth it contains. Life, Liberty and Property are the primary objects which the compact of civil society is intended to secure; and on those principles are the Constitution and Laws of England founded. Among the most essential securities the British nation doth enjoy at this day, may be ranked the Independence of the Press. But for this auxiliary, the condition of the liberties of the people of England would be no better than that of the Cossacs, or poor and miserable peasantry of Poland & of Germany. So valuable a privilege cannot be too highly appreciated by the people of this Province, who have hitherto displayed an honourable attachment towards its support; and their patronage is again respectfully solicited.

In putting forth to the public—to the world, the Prospectus of a Journal, which has for its end the welfare of this Province, and must necessarily embrace many objects, it may be easily conceived the Editor feels impressed with the weight of the task he has undertaken. He pretends not to infallibility, but is aware he may frequently err; and can only console himself in the anticipated indulgence of a generous Public.

In the first place, we wish it to be distinctly understood, that we invite discussion on all subjects connected with the immediate interests of the Country; in the expectation it be temperate in its style and language, and making a due discrimination between public and private characters. Our own observations, from time to time, will be guided by these principles; reserving always to ourselves the full and undoubted right to investigate the conduct of public men and their measures,—"nothing extenuating, nor setting down aught in malice." Those, if any such there be, who may attempt to make this journal a vehicle for detraction or malignant gratification, will be assuredly disappointed. Agricultural essays, tending to facilitate the labors of the husbandman, will be regarded among the most important which can grace our columns. This Colony, from its situation, is peculiarly adapted to agriculture, the mother of all sciences; and with its prosperity the commercial interests of the community are most intimately connected. All communications having in view the promotion of true piety & benevolence, will be thankfully received and attended to; inasmuch as in the practice of the Christian virtues, consist, in an eminent degree, the happiness of society. Assiduity shall not be wanting to collect & insert in our columns the proceedings of the House of Assembly, when in Session, from time to time; also, all articles of intelligence, foreign and domestic, as shall be thought most useful and instructive; we shall, indeed, endeavor to unite the "utile cum dulce," the useful with the agreeable.—And, in short, from the grave philosopher and plodding politician, to the fantastic admirer of the Muses, all will be equally entitled to attention, and shall have a corner appropriated for their chaste effusions.

The Canadian Argus and Niagara Spectator will be printed on super-royal paper, with a handsome type, and the first number issued on Thursday the 18th inst.

Subscriptions will be received at the Argus & Spectator Office.

GEORGE the THIRD, by the Grace of GOD of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come, GREETING:

WHEREAS, it has been represented to us, that, the establishment of a Public Fair or Mart, in the Town of York, in the Home District of our said Province of Upper Canada, would tend greatly to the welfare, convenience, and prosperous advancement of the said District, NOW KNOW YE that in further pursuance of so desirable an object, WE have thought fit, by our Letters Patent, bearing even date with these presents, to give and grant unto Samuel Ridout, Esquire, being our Sheriff in and for our Home District, and to his successors respectively, (Sheriffs of the same for the time being,) to and for the resort and intercourse of our liege subjects of this Province of Upper-Canada, All and singular the public Fair and Mart, and the right, privilege, advantage and franchise of keeping and holding a public Fair and Mart, as Stewards of the same respectively, at and within the Town of York, in the County of York, in the Home District aforesaid, at two different times in each and every year, that is to say, to begin and be holden on the third Monday in the month of May, and the first Monday in the month of October, and to continue at each time respectively for and during the space of six successive days and no longer—subject nevertheless to the conditions, provisions, payments for picage and stallage, restrictions and limitations in our said Letters Patent contained, as reference being thereto had, will more fully appear.

IN TESTIMONY whereof, WE have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed. WITNESS our trusty and well beloved Sir PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this twenty-fourth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, and in the sixtieth year of our reign.

P. M.

By Command of His Excellency,
D. CAMERON,
Secretary.

LONDON, Oct 6.

Yesterday Mr. Carlisle, of Fleet-street, received notice of trial from the Crown-Office, to take place on Tuesday next, at half past nine o'clock, at Guildhall, for the publication of Paine's Age of Reason; The Deist, or Moral Philosopher, &c. number, in all, five different Indictments, and Ex officio. It is expected that his first trial for The Age of Reason will occupy the whole week, if not longer. Mr. Carlisle has taken out no less than thirty subpœnas for some of the most eminent characters in this country. Both Archbishops are subpœned to attend.

Notices have also been served upon him to attend at the Crown-Office, and reduce the Juries on Thursday.

PARIS, Sept. 29.

Whatever may be the result of the rumors widely circulated and generally accredited, in the political circles of the capital, they have lately acquired so much consistence, that I lose no time in transmitting them to you. The late Ukase of the Emperor of Russia, levying on his forty millions of inhabitants one man in 250, produces an increase to his army of 160,000 soldiers, so that the whole mass of his disposable force may be justly calculated at 900,000 men.—Great military preparations are observed throughout the whole of Germany; the regiments are receiving their full complement, and the fortresses of Gallacia are being armed with all promptitude. Austria, should it be thought necessary, will be able to open the campaign in the early months of spring. The king of Bavaria has not made any public declaration, but no doubt is entertained that the secret negociations of this court are in unison with its family alliances. The king of Wurtemburg quitted Stutgard yesterday, to concert with the emperor of Russia at Warsaw, in whose views he entirely acquiesces.—The other German princes are waiting the impulsion of England, which is believed to be closely united with the cabinet of Versailles, in the measures which it may be judged right to adopt. The German Liberals propagate reports that the emperor of Russia, on his arrival in Warsaw, proposes to unite to the kingdom of Poland the Palatinates which were separated from it at the first and second division, to recall the Russian garrisons, to abolish corporal punishment, especially the use of the stick in the army, to reduce the taxes, and to remove some of the principal Functionaries, who according to the Liberals) have incurred the hatred of the nation, by acting with a vigor beyond the law, and beyond their instructions.—Courier.

IRUN, (Spain) Sept. 10.

With regard to the Florida treaty, some new facts come out daily. Among other extraordinary circumstances, the Spanish minister required of Mr. Forsyth a categorical answer, whether or not he was authorised, in case his Catholic Majesty agreed to ratify the Treaty, to annex thereto a new article, in which the United States would pledge themselves not to acknowledge the independence of Buenos Ayres. It is understood that the American plenipotentiary readily answered, that although his instructions gave him no powers to enter into new articles, but merely urge the ratification of an instrument that already wore a perfect and official form; yet, nevertheless, he felt himself perfectly authorised to say in the name of his government, that such a propositions was totally inadmissible.—He further added, that his impressions were, that the United States, would recognize the independence of Buenos Ayres, or any other of the fre sections of South America, which had sufficient strength and stability to warrant such recognition; and the line of policy with regard to the new states of South America, was totally independent of existing relations with Spain. He further informed king Ferdinand's minister, that nothing but a desire to evince to the world the amicable disposition of the United States, had prevented him from withdrawing from Madrid the very instant it was notified to him the ratification would not take place; adding that in this spirit of forbearance he should await the final instructions of his government, which he hoped to receive before the end of September. At the close of this interesting and spirited communication, Mr. Forsyth assured the Spanish cabinet, that they were not be considered to consider any one of the conditions of the treaty, as binding on the United States.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 9.

General meetings on the unfortunate affair of the 16th of August, both in counties and towns, continue to be announced in various parts of the country. That of the County of York, which is signed by the duke of Norfolk, Earl Fitz William, Lord Milton, and other distinguished personages, is announced in terms of the greatest caution and suspence—but expresses a determination to demand enquiry. Meetings of the counties of Westmoreland and Cumberland are also in preparation.

It is affirmed, that the king of Saxony, compassionating the persecution to which the Jews are subjected in many parts of Germany, has granted to all persons of Jewish religion, residing in his dominions, rights of citizenship.

Accounts from Frankfort say, that several Jewish houses are preparing to quit that city, in order to avoid the persecution of which their nation is the object. The rich bankers, Rothschilds, going to settle at Vienna. Our readers will remember that the Emperor of Austria has granted these patents of nobility, as a recompence for the services which they performed during the last war.

Disturbances have broken out at Oldenwald, a province of the grand duchy of Hesse, which seemed to have been very serious. They are said to have arisen from the raising of taxes. A detachment of cavalry, ordered to arrest a lawyer of Michelstadt, suspected of having excited these troubles, has been put to flight by the country people. A detachment of infantry, with four pieces of cannon, has been sent from Darmstadt, to reduce the rioters to order. It is said the insurgents have made themselves masters of six pieces of cannon belonging to the castle of the count of Erbach.

France—The number of English in Paris is increasing. It is reckoned that not less than 15,000 are now in that city.

Denmark.—It is stated, on the authority of private letters from Hamburgh, that the disturbances at Copenhagen, directed against the Jews, had been renewed with greater violence. The troops having put them down, it is asserted, that the next day the sailors in the port reinforced the populace, and after holding some parleys with the soldiers, the latter refused to act against the people, it is added, that the king had in consequence, quitted his capital, to proceed to a strong fortress at some leagues distance, and that new troops had been ordered to march upon Copenhagen. There have been disturbances of a similar character at Elsineur.

The outrages committed at Copenhagen against the Jews, were of a more violent character than those of many towns in Germany. One of the Jews was forced from his carriage, and stoned in the open day; he is said to be dead of his wounds. The Secretary of an advocate, who headed a mob that broke into the house of a Jew, and threw the furniture and goods into the street, has been condemned to be imprisoned for life in a house where prisoners are employed in sawing wood.

Spain.— The most afflicting accounts have been received from Madrid, under the date of the 10th ult. They state, that the yellow fever had increased with alarming rapidity, during the last few days, in the Isle of Leon. From the 1st to the 20th of August, 105 persons died of the contagion, 392 recovered, and 723 were attacked. From the 20th (the day on which the communications ceased) the mortality amounted to 1413. The latest accounts from the above isle state, that on the three first days of September, 145 fell victims; on the 4th, 57; 5th, 40; 6th, 40; and 7th, 35. Letters from Cadiz, of the 15th ult. report, that the malady begins to assume a serious character in that city.

Accounts from Madrid, of the 8th of last month, mention that the English Government has revived its proposal to the Court of Spain, to obtain upon certain conditions, the cession of the Island of Cuba, which appears to place the Spanish Ministry in a situation which is the more embarrassing, as the inhabitants of that rich colony seem resolved to defend their liberty by force of arms, rather than submit to the power of Great Britain. The correspondence between London & Madrid is extremely active at this moment, which seems to indicate that highly important negociations are afoot; but they are involved in mystery, and we must wait with patience till time shall discover the secret.

LONDON, Oct 11.

The famed American frigate Chesapeake, a crack ship of their navy, which became the Shannon's glorious prize, and was condemned at Plymouth, has been purchased by Messrs. Fishmans & Holmes, of Portsmouth, who are under bond to government to break her up next spring She has been brought round to Portsmouth harbour, by captain George Goble, of Bosham, with a crew of 10 men only, under jury masts, to the most seamanlike manner, and is a great object of attention among nautical men She is unquestionably as fine a ship as ever swam; her timbers are remarkably stout; her upper deck is 174½ feet in length, and 41 feet 6 inches in the midships; she mounted 54 guns of heavy metal, and was the Shannon's superior in every respect but discipline.

The following is an extract of a private letter from Liverpool, dated Oct. 9.—"The Betty, capt. Wedgewood, arrived here from Philadelphia, with upwards of 160 men, women and children, returned emigrants. The tide of emigration has turned, and these poor creatures who have been induced to leave their country, their homes, and friends, from the flattering prospects held out to them of that land of plenty and freedom (the United States) are now happy if they can find the means of paying their passage to return to Old England.

A letter, dated Norwich Oct. 8, says—"such is the demand for our manufactures, that there is a good prospect of the numerous population at present employed being supplied with work through the winter. Such large orders have, indeed, lately been received in Norwich for bombazines of all colours, that hands begin to be wanted to execute them within the limited time."

We have just heard, on the authority of a private letter, that a duel has taken place between Mr. Long Wellesley and Mr. Bennet, the members for Wiltshire, which has proved fatal to the latter gentlemen.

October 12.

The following important communication we have to day received from Africa, by the conduct of which it will be seen, that the different powers of Europe have come to some important resolutions regarding the Barbary States.

"ALGIERS, Sept. 10.

"An English and French combined squadron, composed of the Rochfort, of 80 guns and a brig of war, under the command of Vice Admiral Sir Thomas Freemantle, and the French ship Colossus, & frigate Gabiea, commanded by Vice Admiral Lurein, arrived here on the 3d inst. on the 4th the two admirals came on shore; on the 5th they presented to the Dey, in the name of their sovereigns, the Resolutions of the Congress at Aix-la-Chapelle, relative to the Barbary Powers, one of which was to the following effect:

"That the Barbary Powers will no longer be allowed to remain on the footing they had been; and that they must henceforth, in their political relations, consider themselves to be viewed in the light of civilized nations,' &c. &c.

'To this the Dey replied, that he really could not comprehend what the Admirals would say to him; they have in fact, left Algiers without any further arrangement."

LONDON, Oct. 13.

We gave on Monday the detail of the revenue of the year, which closed on the 9th of October, (the usual day, the 10th being Sunday.) Our readers will have perceived that it does not gratify the hopes of the Radicals, or realize the anticipations of croaking Whigs. The total produce of the year 1819, exclusive of the Property Tax, compared with that of 1818, shows a decrease of no greater amount than £368,541, or about one quarter of one per cent. upon the whole revenue.

October 19.

On the representation of the captains commanding the large ships in ordinary on the Canadian lakes, Warrant Officers have been appointed to all the vessels, some of which are large first rates, as the following list, which we have been favoured with, will show. This is a wise measure, and ought to have been adopted sooner. We hear, also, that an extra number of Warrant officers are to go out for the purpose of providing for casualties.

Ships and Vessels on Lake Ontario, 1819:—Nos. 1 and 2, in frame, 110 guns; St. Lawrence, 112; Prince Regent, 64; Psyche, 54; Princess Charlotte, 42; Niagara, 21; Montreal, 21; Star brig, 14; Charwell brig, 14; Netley schooner, 9; Gun boats, No. 1, 2, and 4, one twenty-four pounder each; ditto, 4, 5, 6, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, and 11, two 24 pounders each.

Lake Erie—Lake Huron.—Two small schooners, 8 guns; Newash ditto, 3; Confidence ditto, 2; Surprize ditto, 2; Sauk ditto, 2; Huron ditto, 2.

Ships building, and ordered to be built, at Chatham Dock-yard;—Prince Regent, 120 guns; Trafalgar, 105 guns; Powerful and Formidable, 14 guns; Mermaid, Thames, Unicorn, Leven, and Dunn, 45 guns; Rattlesnake, Rainbow, & Crocodile, 28 guns; Procris, 18 guns, Weazle, 10 guns; and Sulphur and Etna bombs.

Earl Fitz William is removed from the office of Lord Lieutenant, and Custos Rotulorum of the West Riding of the County of York. A wise and seasonable measure.

October 23.

Yesterday there was a great sensation excited in the city, by the information that government had resolved on an augmentation of 10,000 men to the army, and had removed Earl Fitzwilliam from the office of lord Lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum of the West Riding of York. Both these facts proved the impression on the minds of his majesty's ministers that a state of things existed, in no ordinary degree serious and alarming.

On the 23d of October a report was circulated on Change, that Lord Castlereagh had been assassinated by a butcher. It produced the momentary effect of reducing Stocks one per cent, but the rumor soon vanished, and the Stocks revovered the ground they had lost.

The Reformers of Manchester were to have a second public Meeting on the 1st of November.

DURHAM, Oct. 49.

Reform is spreading with the rapidity of lightning in the Tyne district, where, if the keelmen and pitmen are not soon brought to reason, the mischief that may be done will be incalculable. A meeting of a conciliatory nature was agreed to be held yesterday, at Newcastle.

October 21.

We lay before our readers the following interesting intelligence, received this morning from Newcastle and its neighbood.

Extract of a letter, dated Newcastle, October 18.

"There has been a meeting of the Magistrates with the coal owners and the keelmen to-day, which continued from 12 o'clock till 5; no arrangement has been made, nor is there a prospect of their doing so.—The men are determined not to go to work 'till their demands are complied with, which, on the part of the owners, cannot be done. There is no knowing where the matter will end."

October 22.

The information received from different parts of the kingdom, of the progress of sedition, becomes, as might have been expected, of more and more importance. The radicals, rejoicing in the impulse given to their cause by few a foolish whigs whom they have deluded, no longer conceal their detestable projects, but speak openly, and without disguise, of "revolution already begun."

Such is the impression produced on the minds of good and loyal men, where the spirit of insurrection against the constitution chiefly prevails, that some of them are proceeding with all the vigour in their power, as individuals, to protect each other against the danger they apprehend.

"When bad men conspire, good men must associate."—This was the awful warning of Burke. But what can individual efforts do, against the open violence of an armed populace, intent upon the destruction of property and the subversion of all that restrains their licentiousness? Effectual protection can, at the present moment, proceed only from those in whom the constitution has placed the power of the state, and we should tremble for the fate of this envied land, if we saw any want of vigilance or courage in our government.

The monarchy of France was surrounded by an infuriated mob, bearding the king upon his throne, by the timidity and laxity of his ministers. An early effort on the part of that government, had stopped those torrents of blood which afterwards swept away both the throne and the altar.

We congratulate our peaceful fellow countrymen, that government is fully alive to the danger which threatens us.—Their determination to assemble the legislature, was a decisive indication of their sense of the present awful times, and we have no doubt their precautionary measures, until parliament shall have met, will continue to keep pace with the ferocious activity of our modern Catalines.

As a measure of indispensable precaution, in the present reduced state of the army, an addition of 10,000 men is to be immediately made to the protecting force of the country. This will be accomplished in the most efficient and economical manner, by calling into activity those who are receiving from the state the rewards of their former service, and placing them under the command of officers already upon the pension establishment. These veterans, so distinguished in the annals of the country, will, we have no doubt, in the protection of its internal peace, display the vigour they have shewn in asserting its foreign glory.

The services of a part of the regular army, will be in like manner rendered available, by relieving the soldiers now in the garrisons and dock-yards, and by substituting marines in their place. With this view, twenty men will be added to each company of marines, making together 11,600 men.

We suppose we shall hear from the press of the radical whigs, a great deal of wisdom about standing armies and arbitrary power. We have one short answer for them.—That the regent, and those ministers, who, in contempt of their wise predictions, and their unceasing counteraction, carried this country in triumph through the war abroad, will not basely surrender their constitution, our liberties and our monarchy, "in their high and palmy state," to a revolutionary banditti at home.

October 28.

Parliament is summoned by proclamation, to meet on the 23d of November.

It was said on the continent, that count Montholon, came to Europe with his wife from St. Helena, disguised as a servant; that he has brought several letters from Bonaparte concealed in his clothes, and the three first volumes of Bonaparte's memoirs, which are to be forwarded to New York for publication.

Our readers will find, in our preceding columns, an advertisement from the secretary of war, calling upon—

"All officers lately belonging to Royal Veteran Battalions, and now upon the retired list, immediately to report their respective addresses, to the adjutant general, at the horse guards,"

We trust this call will be immediately obeyed; for the projected simultaneous meetings of the reformers on the first of next month, make it necessary every means should be prepared to counteract their designs.

LONDON, Oct. 22.

Snow Storm.—Yesterday morning a great fall of snow commenced, accompanied by a violent hurricane. The wind blew from north west, and has done considerable damage in and about the metropolis. The roads at the entrance of London were in several parts impassible, particularly at Walthamstow, where a number of trees were torn up by the roots, and lay across the highway, compelling travellers to make a circuit of several miles. The snow had also accumulated near a foot deep, and the pathways in the fields were not passable for foot passengers.

Meeting of the States General.

The arrival of a mail from Holland, this morning, has furnished us with Dutch papers to Wednesday last. Agreeably to the annunciation made some days since the session of the states general was opened on the 18th inst, at the Hague, by commission, the sovereign of the Netherlands not deeming it consistent to appear in person so soon after the decease of the duchess of Brunswick. The picture which the commissioners have given, both of the internal and external state of that kingdom, is certainly encouraging one; but, although not the most distant hint of hostilities is to be discerned, the monarch is constrained to confess, that the relative situation of his dominions will not authorise the reduction of their military force. Every thing will be done, however the king says, to ameliorate the condition of his subjects at large, and particularly the equalization of duties and the promotion of industry.

The royal commissioners having been introduced with the usual form, the minister for the home department, read the opening speech in his majesty's name.—After first announcing the death of the princess of Brunswick, the following is the substance of his speech:—

"This sitting will be of the highest importance, as the states general will have to discuss measures which will complete the edifice of the constitution. His majesty has the satisfaction to announce, that the most cordial friendship continues to exist with all foreign powers, and that all of them are animated with the same sincere desire of peace, so that there is every reason to presume, that all the nations of Europe will continue to enjoy entire tranquility."

India.—The Calcutta Government Gazette, states, that Sir Stamford Raffles has hoisted the British flag on the island of Sincapore, in the eastern extremity of the straits of Malacca.—This is said to have been done to counteract the designs of the Netherland's government, who, since the cession of Batavia, have endeavoured to prevent the commerce of our merchants eastward of the straits. The Rajah of Johore ito receive four thousand dollars annually for the cession of the island above mentioned.

Mr. Foster, member for the county of Louth, has sat longer in parliament in regular succession than we believe any man has ever done before.—He was first returned in the year 1760, and has regularly sat in parliament by repeated elections since that time. He has of course been a member 59 years.

Lord C. Cavendish Bentinck, who died a few days ago at his residence near Brussels, was brother to the late duke of Portland. His lordship was in the seventy-sixth year of his age.

Great trotting match for 200 guineas.—The buy mare belonging to capt. Hughes, which lately trotted the 15 miles within the hour, was then backed to do 6 miles in half an hour, within a month, and yesterday the undertaking was accomplished by going the 8 miles out on the Cambridge road—The mare came in 8 stone, and she did the 6 miles in 22 minutes and 59 seconds.

The report contained in the Morning Chronicle of this day, of the chancellor of the exchequer being under the necessity of funding exchequer bills, is, like all its other financial reports, without the smallest foundation; their exists no cause for such a measure. This, like other exaggerated statements, is well calculated to produce a depression of the funds; but the vigorous measues adopted by the government will restore the confidence of the stockholder, and convince him and all classes of the community who have any thing to lose that their properties will not be surrendered to the radicals.

Saturday night's Gazette contains the appointment of Field Marshal the Duke of Wellington to be Governor of Plymouth, vice the late Duke of Richmond.

Private letters received this morning from Newcastle & the neighboring ports, give far from a satisfactory account of the present situation of that part of the country, the trade up the Tyne is nearly suspended, and the few wharfs at work are protected by the military.

Letters from Istavia to the 14th June were received yesterday; they are principally filled with accounts of the unfavorable state of commerce there. The market is represented as overstocked with European manufactures, and the native products high in price.—Vessels are leaving for Canton, Buncoolen, and Bengal, in search of better fortune.

HAGUE, Oct. 15.

The death of her Royal Highness, the Princess Dowager of Brunswick, Luneburg, in the course of the last night, has filled all the inhabitants of this place with grief, and will be universally lamented by the whole kingdom.

BRIGHTON, Oct. 22.

Last night we experienced one of the most tremendous storms which has visited this coast for many years. The violent hurricane commenced soon after eleven o'clock in the evening, with all it frightful accompaniments of rain, hail, sleet, and subsequently a deep fall of snow.

The revenue for the present quarter, compared with the corresponding quarter of 1818, has fallen off to the amount of £1,151,556. This deficiency has chiefly taken place in the customs, amounting in this department to 916,588. In the excise the deficiency amounts to 192,117; and in the stamp duties to 96,723. while in some other branches of the revenue an increase has taken place.

The demand for iron, for exportation to America, has been so great in Sweden, that the depots of that metal at Gottenburg are quite empty.

At the Lancashire assizes on Monday, the attorney General, Mr. Scarlett, hurried into court without his gown and wig, apologized to his lordship, and expressed a hope that the time would come when those mummeries would be thrown away. In precise accordance with this prediction, all the counsel who still remained, appeared next morning in court without any professional badges.

We are sorry to learn that the military discipline is so bad in the 8th (or king's) regt. at Corfu, as to call for the decided marks of his royal highness the Prince Regent's displeasure, for the purpose of restoring order in this old corps; and as a warning to every regiment in the service to adhere to the rules and regulations laid down by his majesty. lieut. col. VENICE, Sept. 21.

We learn by a private letter from Egypt, that the country is in the most thriving condition: no longer are the roads infested by robbers; agriculture & commerce flourish; a number of new manufactures are established; the plantations of cotton and of sugar both succeed; the silk manufactures are not so far advanced, but great quantities of mulberry trees are planted for the growth of the silk worm; sail cloth and cotton of a most transcendant whiteness are brought to great perfection there; and a cloth work manufactory is shortly to be erected there.

GLASGOW, Oct. 1.

About ten o'clock P. M. on Tuesday last, a number of those miscreants, who have lately infested the town, made their appearance at the head of Clyde-street, Calton, and began sham combats, and other stratagems, for the purpose of collecting a mob: but in this they completely failed, for not an individual joined them. They then moved up Cross-Lanestreet, bawling out for the face of a special constable, and then for that of a radical; but their efforts to bring the people into the streets being still unsuccessful, they laid hold of the stones laid down for the building of the prison, and with the utmost deliberation they broke the lamp at the corner of Tobago-street, and be-gan to demolish the shop of Mr. Johnson, grocer, whose door was broken to pieces in a few minutes; but, appearing conscious of their own weakness, they did not attempt to enter, but proceeded to Bell-street, breaking the windows of some weavers' shops at the head of the street. Seeing, however, that all their efforts were insufficient to raise a mob to cover the pillage of the shops, they all at once dispersed.

MADRID, Sept. 21.

The sentences relative to the conspiracy of the Ex General Porlier, approved by his Majesty on the 1 th ult. include 242 individuals. Brigadier de Ramon Romay, Colonel M. Peon, Major Peter Miqueiz, Captains Lopez and Arguez, Lieut. Urruetia, and the Naval Officers Uburn-s, all sentenced par contumace, are sentenced to be shot in the back, and their property confiscated; they may, however, be heard in their defence, if they present themselves. Captains Castanedo and Peon are sentenced to the same punishment, with the exception that they may not be heard in their defence. The merchant, Andres Rozo, is also sentenced to the same fate.

The other punishments are imprisonment from ten to two years. This class includes 20 Officers of all ranks. Some are sentenced to be confined in fortresses from four years to six months, and 40 have been deemed sufficiently punished by the detention they have already suffered. The number acquitted amount to 140, nearly all officers, amongst whom are three Colonels, and three Lieut. Colonels.

In consideration of the enfeebled health of the Auditor of War, Don Manuel Saturio Garcia, and his sufferings during a long imprisonment, he is sentenced to be deprived of his office, and to be confined at Ceuta for the term of five years, under the surveillance of the Governor, from whence he cannot remove without the special leave of his Majesty.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

EDWARDSVILLE, Oct. 23.

A SCENE IN MISSOURI.

It is reported by a gentleman from St. Louis, that on the night of the 17th inst. a mob collected in that town and after driving from their posts the guards who had been stationed around the jail, attacked the jail with crows, picks, &c. and almost demolished it; when they proceeded to disencumber the prisoners of their fetters, which having accomplished, and set the prisoners to the number of eight or ten at liberty, they dispersed in the most perfect order. What is more remarkable than any thing else, is, that of the mob consisting of 2 or 300 persons, no one has yet been recognized as having been engaged in the affair. It is understood that only four or five of the prisoners were confined for capital offences.

Curious circumstance.—It is mentioned in a Nassau paper of the 29th September, that a wrecking vessel had arrived that day from the coast of Florida with a quantity of Indians on board, whose appearance in Nassau had excited considerable curiosity as to their errand and intentions. They reported themselves as having been robbed by our frontier citizens and driven from their homes. The following particulars are from the Bathama Advertiser of the 2d October:—

"NASSAU, Oct. 2.

"The Indians who arrived here on Wednesday last from Florida, are come to solicit some supplies; the chief has with him a proclamation issued by admiral Cochrane and general Keane at the time of proceeding against New Orleans. We believe an application has been made to the commander in chief for assistance but they have had no encouragement to except a compliance with their demands, the unity subsisting between our government and that of the U. States precluding any measure tending to increase or promote a hostile disposition between these people and the subjects of the states. They are desirous of getting to Jamaica, but their visit there can b to as little effect as it is here. They represent themselves as driven from their homes, and hunted as wild deer; that there are about 2000 of them, and that their greatest enemies are Cowetas, a nation like themselves, who having made terms with the Americans are set on by them to harrass and annihilate their tribe.

The number arrived are 28, and being destitute of the means of support, are, furnished on the score of humanity with rations and to lodge in one of the barracks."

BALTIMORE, Nov 17.

On the 13th. Oct, a violent hurricane was felt in the Windward Islands, equally as destructive at Barbadoes, Grenada, St. Lucie, &c. as the September gale was to St. Thomas and St. Barts. Accounts have reached St. Thomas of the ravages occasioned to the shipping and plantations in these places. Nothing was felt at St. Thomas of the last gale, but the swelling of the sea indicated a very violent blow at no great distance. The weather during the latter part of October to the middle of November, has been so smoky and thick at sea, in those latitudes, that it was with difficulty the sun could be seen. The smoke of wood could be distinctly smelt, & at times quantities of dead fish were discovered floating on the surface of the sea.

A tract of land of three hundred acres, sold a few days ago about 25 miles from my house, for $300 only.—The improvements on this land I have heard variously represented in point of value; some say they were worth $1500, some much more. A horse valued at $80 was sold the other day near my house for 10; and two waggon horses were sold about the same time for $40, which I well know cost nearly $200. If the state of the currency was calculated only to ruin the knave, it might be endured without complaining; but alas it is calculated to ruin the honest man also. The writer of this article can weather the storm; he owes nothing, he views the scene with impartiality; he feels for his neighbors, and hence he has devoted his thoughts to their relief.

I have said distress is every where; I prove it thus.—In Tennessee and Ohio, the banks pay no specie; in Kentucky the banks have closed their doors; in Pennsylvania twenty at least are broken and many more approximating to bankruptcy. In Maryland and North Carolina the account stands but little better—and from the balance against us abroad, no bank can issue paper with safety.—On the contrary all must curtail and continue to curtail.

FROM LOWER-CANADA.

QUEBEC, 26th Nov.

The public curiosity has been lately excited among us by a novelty, in the person of a fair Quaker, who held forth with effect on Tuesday and Wednesday evening, to crowd d audiences, from the pulpit of the Wesleyan chapel. The last evening was for the benefit of poor emigrants, when the word produced abundant fruit, the collection having been considerable. Her auditors were of all denominations, and all expressed much gratification on the occasion. We hear that she, in a spirit of truly christian benevolence, visited the emigrant hospital and the Gaol.

From the Canadian Courant.

By the arrival of the ship Magnet, at New York from Liverpool, in 25 days, we have been furnished with London dates to the 24th and Liverpool to the 25th October. It is with a concern not easily to be expressed, that we find the state of England much more serious than from a consideration of former accounts, we were led to imagine. As long as the meetings were composed of the rabble, and headed by a few worthless, untalented and obscure individuals, they were rather to be despised than feared; but now that men of rank, (we cannot call them noblemen) forgetting that they are the hereditary advisers of the Crown, and the constitutional barrier between the throne and the people, have enlisted under the banners of democracy, we must avow a feeling of apprehension.—Distress and half starvation are, if not an excuse, yet some palliation of the conduct of the inferior class; when the stomach craves, the understanding, much more the uneducated understanding, is incapable of calm reflection; but what can be pleaded in exculpation of men to whom education has given foresight; on whom fortune has bestowed the means not only of every comfort but every refined gratification; whose desire of distinction birth has at once indulged; yet who, for the sake of displacing their political opponents, have been base enough to unite with a senseless mob—foolish enough to give accelerated impulse to a body they may not be able to arrest—and blind enough not to foresee that, should the rabble prevail, their own dignities will be abolished, their properties thrown into the general scramble, and their persons probably executed as recalling a superiority obnoxious to the eye of republican equalization? Yet grave as is at present the aspect of affairs, there is no foundation for great alarm; the numerous loyal addresses recently presented to His Royal Highness THE PRINCE REGENT, demonstrate the general loyalty of Englishmen—the arm of government is muscular and powerous—the ministers prompt, discriminating, experienced and cool—and which is for from certain) blood be shed, it will be the blood of the guilty.

YORK, 16th December, 1819.

The following circular had been addressed to the Sheriffs of the different districts in this Province.

(CIRCULAR.)

Lieut. Governor's Office.
York, December 8th, 1819.

SIR,

Representations having been made to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor from various quarters, that it has been found necessary in many instances to resort to Courts of Law for remedies against the Sheriffs of certain Districts of this Province, to compel them to pay over money which they have received for Suitors; His Excellency considers that scarcely a greater grievance can exist, than that the delay and expence of such proceedings should be thrown upon the people, by the misconduct of Officers whose appointment is not, as in England, merely annual, but may be held for life, and whose responsibility and that of their sureties may prove insufficient to indemnify the King's subjects against a series of such defaults. His Excellency has commanded me to apprise you, without reference to any particular representation, that in all cases where such evils are found to exist, it will be deemed necessary to take the most effectual means to guard the welfare of His Majesty's Subjects, by dismissing the Public Officer whom it may be found necessary to compel, by legal process, to the correct discharge of his duty.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your most obedient humble servant
GEORGE HILLIER.
P. Secy.

On Friday last, John Oliver, a settler from England, was killed by the fall of a tree that he had been cutting. It is observed that many of the English, when they have ready cut they a tree, run away to some distance until it falls; this very dangerous practice has lately caused the loss of several lives and many severe injuries the safest place, is near the tree, where the less tendency to fall is seen several seconds before it actually comes down, and may be easily avoided

Perhaps no Town in America, of equal size, has suffered less from the destructive element fire, than this: on Sunday last we had occasion to lament its occurrence; a large new dwelling house and manufactory, belonging to Messrs. Bates & Co Chairmakers and Painters, was discovered to be on fire about 2 o'clock in the morning, and such was the rapid progress of the flames owing to the highly inflammable materials in the house, that all efforts to subdue them were useless. The family with difficulty escaped, but all the stock and tools were destroyed. From the direction of the wind, only one other house was endangered, which was however preserved by great exertion.

It is too much the custom with Editors of Newspapers who exchange with each other, to put up torn or defaced papers for that purpose. This is certainly improper; and if the Editors do not think any paper worth a fair copy in exchange, it would be a favor to discontinue sending any. This is particularly addressed to a Lower Canada paper, which has repeatedly been sent to this Office so much mutilated as in many places to be quite illegible.

VOL. III. YORK, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1819. No. 52.

UPPER-CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the THIRD, by the Grace of GOD of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Counsellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to our Provincial Parliament, at our Town of York, on Thursday the ninth day of December instant, to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our Proclamation bearing date the twenty-sixth day of October last, WE thought fit to prorogue our Provincial Parliament, to the ninth day of December Instant, at which time at our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear, NOW KNOW YE that WE taking into our Royal consideration, the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid; hereby convoking and by these presents enjoining you and each of you, that on Tuesday the Eighteenth day of January next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary, and herein fail not.

IN TESTIMONY whereof, WE have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed, WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this Second day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, and in the sixtieth year of our Reign.

Secretary.

UPPER-CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the THIRD, by the Grace of GOD of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come, GREETING:

WHEREAS, it has been represented to us, that, the establishment of a Public Fair or Mart, in the Town of York, in the Home District of our said Province of Upper Canada, would tend greatly to the welfare, convenience, and prosperous advancement of the said District, NOW KNOW YE that in furtherance of so desirable an object, WE have thought fit, by our Letters Patent, bearing even date with these presents, to give and grant unto Samuel Ridout, Esquire, being our Sheriff in and for our Home District, and to his successors respectively, (Sheriffs of the same for the time being,) to and for the resort and intercourse of our liege subjects of this Province of Upper Canada, All and singular the public Fair and Mart, and the right, privilege, advantage and franchise of keeping and holding a public Fair and Mart, as Stewards of the same respectively, at and within the Town of York, in the County of York, in the Home District aforesaid, at two different times in each and every year, that is to say, to begin and be holden on the third Monday in the month of May, and the first Monday in the month of October, and to continue at each time respectively for and during the space of six successive days and no longer—subject nevertheless to the conditions, provisions, payments for picage and stallage, restrictions and limitations in our said Letters Patent contained, as reference being thereto had, will more fully appear.

IN TESTIMONY whereof, WE have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed, WITNESS our trusty and well beloved Sir PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this twenty-fourth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, and in the sixtieth year of our reign.

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, Oct. 16.

During the absence of the Jury yesterday, Mr. Carlile* retired to the Guildhall coffee house to dinner.—As soon as the verdict was announced, intelligence was immediately conveyed to him. He was not surprised, having fully anticipated his fate. Shortly after he had received this intelligence he proceeded to his house in Fleet-street, in company with Mr. Hunt. He was followed by an immense multitude, who cheered him as he passed along. The moment the public were apprised of the verdict, there was manifested and overwhelming demand for Paine's Age of Reason, Palmer's Principles of Nature, and every other blasphemous work which was on sale, the whole stock on hand of which found instant purchasers.

The first trial of Carlile terminated yesterday in a verdict of Guilty; and never, assuredly, has a verdict been given in a British Court of Justice, more accordant with the best feelings of British hearts. He has been an obdurate, an insolent, and a wilful offender, not only against the laws of his country, but against its morals, its religion, and its character. He has been one of the most daring traffickers in blasphemy and sedition that perhaps ever disgraced any christian, any civilized country. In his example, then, let those who would be base enough to imitate him, learn from their fears that restraint which they can never receive from their principles.'

* He was indicted for selling Paine's Age of Reason.

LONDON, Oct. 22.

It is impossible to read the account of the proceedings of the court of common council yesterday, without perceiving that late events have read a serious lesson to the individuals who so lately presumed to dictate to the city of London. They have been taught that they cannot break down all the barriers of long-established order and regularity. A faint, and but a faint, attempt was made to insult the prince regent, by omitting the usual expression of respect in speaking of his royal highness's answer, which, though perhaps unpalatable enough to the little junto at the Horn Tavern, was really "most gracious," if compared with the address which called it forth. The celebrated Dr. Johnson, has a remark very appropriate to the conduct of Mr. Waithman and his 70 followers. "To offer a petition (says he) which is not expected to be granted, to insult a king with a rude remonstrance, only because there is no punishment for legal insolence, is not courage, for there is no danger; nor patriotism—for it tends to the subversion of order, and lets wicked-ness loose upon the land by destroying the reverence due to sovereign authority."

A shirt without seams.—Thomas Hall, an ingenious linen-weaver, in Ireland, has lately finished a shirt entirely in his loom. It is woven throughout without seams, is very neatly and accurately gathered at the neck, shoulders, and wrists. The neck and wrist bands are doubled and stitched; there is a regular selvage to each side of the breasts; the shoulder straps and gussets are neatly stitched, as well as the wrists. In short it is in perfectly finished, as if made by an expert seamstress. This shirt has been exhibited to several gentlemen in the linen trade, who have completely satisfied themselves, that it is actually the production of the loom, without any assistance from the needle.

An affecting anecdote is related in the French Papers:—A young man took a dog into a boat, rowed to the centre of the river, and threw the animal over with intent to drown him—the poor dog often tried to climb up the side of the boat, but his master as often pushed him back, till overbalanced himself, he fell overboard. As soon as the faithful dog saw his master in the stream, he left the boat, and held him above water till help arrived from shore, and his life was saved!

A cabbage, of the early Battersea kind, was cut last week in the garden of Mr. David Beck, Maryport, in Cumberland which when the outer leaves were taken off, measured in circumference four feet six inches, and weighed thirty pounds.

Gig race for one hundred guineas.—A sporting gig match took place on the Alton Road, on Monday, between Mr. Briggs and Captain Stone, who should drive their horses furthest in one hour, with 14 stone in the gig. A piece of ground of 16 miles, and in an indifferent road, was marked out. The parties started at opposite ends, at the same time, and there was not 50 yards difference between them at the eight miles, the captain having the lead. Mr. Briggs was declared the winner, he having done within a few yards, thirteen miles and a half, and the grey whose horse broke into a gallop twice, did thirteen miles with the two turns.

Providential Escape.—Yesterday morning, when the Brentford stage coach was about starting from the White Horse Cellar, Piccadilly, heavy laden with passengers inside and out, a young villain mischievously went to the wheels, and contrived to steal out the linch pins which fasten the wheels to the carriage; and went some distance and stood to see the coach go on. Mr. Bailey drove on as far as Dover-street, when one of the wheels came off, in consequence of the pin being out; and the others, at the same time, were nearly off, and the coach overturned; but fortunately none of the passengers were injured. The boy being immediately recognized and taken into custody, was brought to Marlborough-street office, and committed.

BRESLAW, Sept. 18.

The 13th Sept. which was the last appointed day for the review of the collected troops, called them together for another melancholy occasion, on account of the death of Prince Blucher, which happened the preceding evening. During the whole of their exercises, the troops knew that this old venerated commander was in great danger, around whom they were now once more assembled, as though the general should die, as he had lived, amidst his soldiers; Kribiowitz is in the middle of the cantonments.

On the 15th in the morning, the troops to the number of 20,000 assembled at the place which the prince himself had pointed out for his grave to pay him, by a religious ceremony, on the spot, the last sad tribute of their gratitude. On the 14th the body of the deceased was embalmed, and on the 15th in the evening, at 9 o'clock, it was deposited till the funeral shall take place in a little chapel hung with black, in the catholic church of the village of Wolgowitz, near Kapsdeff. Besides the magistrates of Breslaw, a great crowd of persons of all ranks followed the body of the deceased.

A reform has just been effected in the Liverpool work-house, to which the epithet radical may more justly be applied, than to any other which has been either projected or perfected within our observation. The principal parish officers, have successively perceived, that there was very little hope of effecting any considerable improvement in the manners and morals of the work-house children, so long as they were exposed to the contagion of the adult and aged paupers—and unfortunately, the actual state of the building did not admit of a complete separation. This difficulty, which, for many years past, has been a constant subject of lamentation with the different church-wardens, overseers and parish committees, is at length obviated. The removal of the lunatic paupers to the county asylum has left vacant a large ward of the workhouse, entirely detached from the main body of the building, and provided with a garden, flagged courts, &c. so as to be admirably adapted to the reception of children.—Into this they are to be immediately removed; but such of them as have parents in the house will be allowed to visit them, at certain times, and under proper restrictions. From these arrangements the most sanguine expectations are rationally indulged, that a material improvement will soon be perceptible in the morals and habits of that large class of the rising generation, whom the faults or the misfortunes of their relations, have consigned to the hardship of parish dependence.—Liverpool paper.

DUMFRIES, (Scotland,) Sept. 7.

Mrs. Cook the Giantess.—Last week, Mrs. Cook, the celebrated giantess, made her first appearance in Dumfries, and was pretty generally visited by the inhabitants of the town and neighbourhood. Many persons, however, were disappointed in the expectations they had formed of her extraordinary stature; and it is even asserted, that there is a fair inhabitant of our good town, who might lay claim to the 1000 guineas which Mr. Cook's partiality as a husband induces him to offer to any one who can produce an equal to his gigantic spouse. For so large a woman, however, Mrs. Cook is allowed to be uncommonly handsome, and as bodies are well known to appear more gigantic from being mis-shapen, probably this circumstance may account for the disappointment expressed by some of her visitors. But, however this may be, we may mention one a rising fact that they come to our knowledge, and which our readers may rely on as quite authentic. In travelling betwixt the different towns we believe the giantess frequently for the sake of exercise, takes the start of her retinue; and among the persons who paid their respects to her on Wednesday last, there happened to be an honest Goloviliar, who had lately overtaken her on the road betwixt Gatehouse and Kirkcudbright. On entering the place of exhibition he was of course a good deal surprised at finding his old acquaintance transformed into a "wonderful phenomenon of nature," and reflected, muttering to himself, "many a sleepless night I've done in my life time, but never one thing half so sleepless as this. My conscience! (as Billie Jarvie says) to give a shilling to see a woman I walked five or six miles wi' on the King's highway, and thought her nae-thing mair that a sclem strappin' lassie, and ane that was like enough to lead her husband a lounder, unless her temper was a'the better."

From the Galway Advertiser.

Hoax upon Sir Hudson Lowe.—Some wag in this town lately played off a hoax upon the present Governor of St. Helena, General Sir Hudson Lowe. In the month of November last, a letter was addressed to him, stating that a widow lady, of the name of Drury, had died here, and by her will bequeathed to Sir Hudson £1000 in cash, and houses and plots in this town to the value of £2000 more, and of her having appointed Lawrence Comyn, Esq. (in whose name the letter was written to Sir H.) executor; and requesting Sir Hudson's directions as to the manner in which the bequests were to be disposed of; and recommending Sir Hudson to send some person over to take possession of the premises, as there was a gentleman of encroaching celebrity who might otherwise throw down the buildings, under pretence of improving his town. The letter was sent to London, and from thence, by some of the Secretaries of State forwarded to that little paradise, St. Helena.—Sir Hudson was sitting in council upon some complaint made by a ci-devant emperor, upon the scantiness of his yesterday's meal, when his letter arrived. In a moment the solemnity of the occasion which assembled them was forgotten, and enraptured at the grateful remembrance in which he was held by the inhabitants of a town where the Low family had its origin, he announced the happy tidings to his gaping auditory. Sir Hudson could not, however, permit the diminution of his trusty band by immediately sending off a person to take possession of the Galway estate; he however, addressed the executor in terms of heartfelt satisfaction, thanked Mr. C. for his attention to his (Sir Hudson's) interest, and apprising him that he had drawn on him in favour of Messrs. Coutts & Co. Bankers in London, at ninety one days sight, for £1,000 sterling, requesting also to have an immediate survey and maps made of the premises, and a copy of that part of the will sent to him in which the dear departed had so kindly recollected him; and that notice in legal form should be served in upon the gentleman who had imagined the property might be his, and who wished to encroach on his (Sir Hudson's) estate: acknowledged with pride that Galway had seen the first son of his prosperity shine upon him; and leaves it entirely to his executor to distribute amongst his townsmen some token of recollection of the place that gave him birth.

It only now remains for us to state the disappointment occasioned by receiving this letter, freed by some of the high authorities of the State, with a seal upon it of the size of a tolerable cream cheese, which, upon its first reaching the executor's hands, made his heart beat with high hope: but alas! the palpitation soon subsided upon finding it contained Sir H. Lowe's letter, with our from Messrs. Coutts and Co. requesting to know, should they negotiate the draft for £1,000 in British or Irish currency as Sir Hudson had, in the hurry of the moment, occasioned, no doubt, by his joyous ecstacy, forgot to state in which it should be paid.

N. B.—Notwithstanding the above hoax we have ascertained that Mrs. Drury is certainly dead, but to whom her property devolves is unknown, as her will has not been brought in and proved as yet.

Losses at Davis's Straits.

Letters from a Captain of one of the lost vessels, published in an Edinburgh newspaper:

EDINBURGH, Sept. 10.

"The destruction of so many ships in Davis's Straits in one season, I believe, is unprecedented. No person who has not visited these northern regions can form (even from the most correct description) a just idea of those immense masses of ice called icebergs, and of those heavy sheets of ice flaws, which, when set in motion by a gale of wind, spread destruction wherever they are wafted.

"As I am lately returned from the Straits of Davis, my mind is still pregnant with the tragic scenes which were there presented to my view.

"On the morning of the 7th of July, the Mary Ann of Dundee, and Rash of Leith, were seen to fly wrecked, their masts were by with their ice. On the evening of the same day I visited the wreck of the Mary Ann & found a number of her crew, along with those of other ships, as busily engaged in getting bedding, provisions, or any article of value. The crews of both ships were saved. We had on board our ship eight men belonging to the Rash. As our situation was critical, our only safety was placed in being in dock. Docks are places cut out in the last ice, by means of saws constructed for this purpose, in which the ships are placed, forming a safeguard to the pressure of floating ice. Our dependence was placed upon our docks, but alas! our trust proved of no effect.—On the morning of the 14th two other sail were seen destroyed, not far distant from our ship; we sent a boat's crew for information, and they reported them to be the Patriotis of Hull, and the Sisters of Kirkcaldy; their docks gave way from the excessive pressure of an ingress of ice. On the morning of the 16th July a strong gale arose from the south-west, and we observed at an early hour, from the top-mast, that a quantity of heavy flaws were put in motion, and were setting in fast upon us. There were four ships placed in docks (to one of which I belonged,) namely the Majestic of London, Tay of Dundee, and the Royal Bounty and Thomas and Ann of Leith. At three P. M. the inevitable fate of our feeble barks appeared certain, altho' now and then a feeble ray of hope gladdened our hearts with the idea that our docks would stand the squeeze. All our hopes were delusive, for at four P. M. the space of water between the destructive masses of ice and our docks was little broader than a canal; at five they were near at hand, and the collision of one piece against another conveyed a sound similar to a peal of distant thunder; at twenty minutes past five the ice, which was running at the rate of three knots an hour, first came in contact with the most windward dock, where the Tay and Majestic were stationed; in a moment our ears resounded with the destructive crash; in a few seconds afterwards the Royal Bounty and Thomas & Ann shared the same fate. No language can picture a state more truly alarming. The appalling cry of leave the ship, leave the ship, sounded from every quarter. The majority of the men saved their baggage, although a great number sustained serious loss. We next made tents upon the ice with spars and sail-cloth, and spent the night in most shipwrecked state, amidst a thick fog and a shower of snow. Fahrenheit's thermometer stood at four degrees below the freezing point of water. By the end of the third day the fog cleared away, and a number of ships, to the joy of all, were seen to the southward, and a signal of distress was hoisted; their distance from us was about twelve miles, and men were soon seen coming across the ice to learn the extent of the losses, and reported that the Captains severally would be happy to take their share of the cast-away men, and would proceed instantly to Great Britain. Among the first was the Dexterity of Leith, which set sail on Wednesday at forenoon, the 21st July, with a large share of the wrecked men. At six, P. M. she passed a number of casks, heaps of ashes and lumber, lying upon the ice. The master ordered a boat to be lowered, and ascertained them to be the remnants of the Ocean and Samuels of Hull, that were likewise crushed to pieces on the 14th or 15th July.

"Notwithstanding ten ships have suffered, only two men lost their lives; they belonged to the Equestris of Hull; the one was drowned, and the other died on the ice after a fit of intoxication. No blame whatever can be attached to the different Captains, as they used every effort to save the ships committed to their charge: in fact, the general destruction is proof sufficient of this."

No family on earth can boast of a longer established right to its paternal estates, than the King of Great Britain to the possessions which devolved on him at the accession of his present majesty, now 61 years ago. Had this illustrious monarch been a private individual, and had his property to the nation for a stipulated sum, he would at this moment have been the richest sovereign in Europe.

The resignation was frank, & we should have felt that it was wise, had it not furnished a pretext for the selfish and malicious to turn upon that monarch, and reproach him with the effects of his own sacrifice.

Bonaparte, when master of Madrid, at the end of 1808, demanded from all the corporations, communities, magistrates, &c. an oath of allegiance upon the holy sacrament. "Oh!" replied the Spaniard in a half whisper, "the wafer was not consecrated."

Emigration to Africa.—The leader of the intended Colony to the Cape of Good Hope is Mr. Wm. Parker, who lately resided at Passage, near Cork, and who, for a long period, was most extensively engaged in commercial pursuits in that city, having at one time afforded employment to not less than one thousand individuals. Mr. Parker's objects is to establish a commercial port or colony, and to locate a body of agricultural settlers at a short and convenient distance therefrom in the interior. He has selected between three and four hundred men to accompany him, many of whom are married; they comprise farmers, and labourers, in a proportion, as well as mechanics and manufacturers of various kind.—There are also associated in the undertaking a number of gentlemen, possessing not only a local knowledge of the country, but all those requisites as to scientific attainments so necessary to ensure its success. The situation chosen for the new town is between Cape town & Algo bay, on one of the most fertile spots on the coast of Africa. The expedition sails in November.

SIERRA-LEONE, July 24.

Trial of Pei, a captured Negro, for Murder.

Pei, a captured and liberated negro, was indicted for the murder of Zongobia, another captured negro, at Charlottetown in this colony, on the 5th of January last, by severing his head from his body with a sharp instrument made of a piece of iron-hoop.

Previously to the commencement of this trial, much difficulty was experienced in procuring adequate means of interpretation between the court and prisoner; and at length, when a person was found capable of conversing with the prisoner in his language, a second interpreter was required to explain the [illegible] first interpreter ill [illegible]; but, at the best, the interpretation altogether, was very insufficient and unsatisfactory.

The first object of the interpretation was, to inform the prisoner of his arraignment and to instruct him how he plead; which being accomplished, an endeavor was made to apprise him of his right to challenge the jurors, and of the proper mode of exercising that right; but upon the first option of challenge being put to him, in swearing the foreman of the jury, an answer was returned, which threw the whole court into an involuntary burst of laughter, at the same time that it produced a strong and universal sensation of horror. When the prisoner was told to look upon that man, and say if he liked to be tried by him, the answer, as interpreted, given in a tone of astonishment by the English interpreter, was, "He say, he like him too much; if he catch him he eat him."

After this answer it was thought best, in tenderness to the prisoner, to go through the remaining forms, without any further reference to him: but it was subsequently believed, that the latter part of the answer was a remark added by either of the interpreters, according to the uniform practice of the Africans, of interposing their own remarks in every thing.

The first interpreter was frequently in laughter, during the horrid details of the trial, and was more than once reproved for it by the court, for want of feeling.

The particulars of the horrid transaction, as detailed in evidence, were as follows:

Hyers, an interior overseer of captured negroes at Charlottetown, employed to superintend the deceased & his countrymen, because he could speak their language, having missed the deceased (Zongobia) at ration time, reported his absence to his superior, Mr. Ashford, who ordered him to cause search to be made in the bush. Shortly after leaving Mr. Ashford, he saw a man coming out of the bush with a canvass bag, which he attempted to shift away, as if to put it out of sight. He immediately questioned the man, whom he found to be one Quia Pei, of Zongobia's nation, and insisted on seeing the bag and its contents. The man reluctantly opened the bag, which he said contained some meat; on inspection, he discovered several pieces of human flesh. The man was immediately secured, and Mr. Ashford was sent for; Quia Pei died in prison while awaiting his trial.

William Ashford, principal native superintendent at Charlotte-town, stated, that on being informed by the last witness that Zongobia was missed, he had

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, Oct. 16.

During the absence of the Jury yesterday, Mr. Carlile* retired to the Guildhall coffee house to dinner.—As soon as the verdict was announced, intelligence was immediately conveyed to him. He was not surprised, having fully anticipated his fate. Shortly after he had received this intelligence he proceeded to his house in Fleet-street, in company with Mr. Hunt. He was followed by an immense multitude, who cheered him as he passed along. The moment the public were apprised of the verdict, there was manifested and overwhelming demand for Paine's Age of Reason, Palmer's Principles of Nature, and every other blasphemous work which was on sale, the whole stock on hand of which found instant purchasers.

The first trial of Carlile terminated yesterday in a verdict of Guilty; and never, assuredly, has a verdict been given in a British Court of Justice, more accordant with the best feelings of British hearts. He has been an obdurate, an insolent, and a wilful offender, not only against the laws of his country, but against its morals, its religion, and its character. He has been one of the most daring traffickers in blasphemy and sedition that perhaps ever disgraced any christian, any civilized country. In his example, then, let those who would be base enough to imitate him, learn from their fears that restraint which they can never receive from their principles.'

* He was indicted for selling Paine's Age of Reason.

LONDON, Oct. 22.

It is impossible to read the account of the proceedings of the court of common council yesterday, without perceiving that late events have read a serious lesson to the individuals who so lately presumed to dictate to the city of London. They have been taught that they cannot break down all the barriers of long-established order and regularity. A faint, and but a faint, attempt was made to insult the prince regent, by omitting the usual expression of respect in speaking of his royal highness's answer, which, though perhaps unpalatable enough to the little junto at the Horn Tavern, was really "most gracious," if compared with the address which called it forth. The celebrated Dr. Johnson, has a remark very appropriate to the conduct of Mr. Waithman and his 70 followers. "To offer a petition (says he) which is not expected to be granted, to insult a king with a rude remonstrance, only because there is no punishment for legal insolence, is not courage, for there is no danger; nor patriotism—for it tends to the subversion of order, and lets wicked-ness loose upon the land by destroying the reverence due to sovereign authority."

A shirt without seams.—Thomas Hall, an ingenious linen-weaver, in Ireland, has lately finished a shirt entirely in his loom. It is woven throughout without seams, is very neatly and accurately gathered at the neck, shoulders, and wrists. On the evening of the same day I visited the wreck of the Mary Ann & found a number of her crew, along with those of other ships, as busily engaged in getting bedding, provisions, or any article of value. The crews of both ships were saved. We had on board our ship eight men belonging to the Rash. As our situation was critical, our only safety was placed in being in dock. Docks are places cut out in the last ice, by means of saws constructed for this purpose, in which the ships are placed, forming a safeguard to the pressure of floating ice. Our dependence was placed upon our docks, but alas! our trust proved of no effect.—On the morning of the 14th two other sail were seen destroyed, not far distant from our ship; we sent a boat's crew for information, and they reported them to be the Patriotis of Hull, and the Sisters of Kirkcaldy; their docks gave way from the excessive pressure of an ingress of ice. On the morning of the 16th July a strong gale arose from the south-west, and we observed at an early hour, from the top-mast, that a quantity of heavy flaws were put in motion, and were setting in fast upon us. There were four ships placed in docks (to one of which I belonged,) namely the Majestic of London, Tay of Dundee, and the Royal Bounty and Thomas and Ann of Leith. At three P. M. the inevitable fate of our feeble barks appeared certain, altho' now and then a feeble ray of hope gladdened our hearts with the idea that our docks would stand the squeeze. All our hopes were delusive, for at four P. M. the space of water between the destructive masses of ice and our docks was little broader than a canal; at five they were near at hand, and the collision of one piece against another conveyed a sound similar to a peal of distant thunder; at twenty minutes past five the ice, which was running at the rate of three knots an hour, first came in contact with the most windward dock, where the Tay and Majestic were stationed; in a moment our ears resounded with the destructive crash; in a few seconds afterwards the Royal Bounty and Thomas & Ann shared the same fate. No language can picture a state more truly alarming. The appalling cry of leave the ship, leave the ship, sounded from every quarter. The majority of the men saved their baggage, although a great number sustained serious loss. We next made tents upon the ice with spars and sail-cloth, and spent the night in most shipwrecked state, amidst a thick fog and a shower of snow. Fahrenheit's thermometer stood at four degrees below the freezing point of water. By the end of the third day the fog cleared away, and a number of ships, to the joy of all, were seen to the southward, and a signal of distress was hoisted; their distance from us was about twelve miles, and men were soon seen coming across the ice to learn the extent of the losses, and reported that the Captains severally would be happy to take their share of the cast-away men, and would proceed instantly to Great Britain. Among the first was the Dexterity of Leith, which set sail on Wednesday at forenoon, the 21st July, with a large share of the wrecked men. At six, P. M. she passed a number of casks, heaps of ashes and lumber, lying upon the ice. The master ordered a boat to be lowered, and ascertained them to be the remnants of the Ocean and Samuels of Hull, that were likewise crushed to pieces on the 14th or 15th July.

"Notwithstanding ten ships have suffered, only two men lost their lives; they belonged to the Equestris of Hull; the one was drowned, and the other died on the ice after a fit of intoxication. No blame whatever can be attached to the different Captains, as they used every effort to save the ships committed to their charge: in fact, the general destruction is proof sufficient of this."

No family on earth can boast of a longer established right to its paternal estates, than the King of Great Britain to the possessions which devolved on him at the accession of his present majesty, now 61 years ago. Had this illustrious monarch been a private individual, and had his property to the nation for a stipulated sum, he would at this moment have been the richest sovereign in Europe.

The resignation was frank, & we should have felt that it was wise, had it not furnished a pretext for the selfish and malicious to turn upon that monarch, and reproach him with the effects of his own sacrifice.

"Oh!" replied the Spaniard in a half whisper, "the wafer was not consecrated."

Emigration to Africa.—The leader of the intended Colony to the Cape of Good Hope is Mr. Wm. Parker, who lately resided at Passage, near Cork, and who, for a long period, was most extensively engaged in commercial pursuits in that city, having at one time afforded employment to not less than one thousand individuals. Mr. Parker's objects is to establish a commercial port or colony, and to locate a body of agricultural settlers at a short and convenient distance therefrom in the interior. He has selected between three and four hundred men to accompany him, many of whom are married; they comprise farmers, and labourers, in a proportion, as well as mechanics and manufacturers of various kind.—There are also associated in the undertaking a number of gentlemen, possessing not only a local knowledge of the country, but all those requisites as to scientific attainments so necessary to ensure its success. The situation chosen for the new town is between Cape town & Algo bay, on one of the most fertile spots on the coast of Africa. The expedition sails in November.

SIERRA-LEONE, July 24.

Trial of Pei, a captured Negro, for Murder.

Pei, a captured and liberated negro, was indicted for the murder of Zongobia, another captured negro, at Charlottetown in this colony, on the 5th of January last, by severing his head from his body with a sharp instrument made of a piece of iron-hoop.

Previously to the commencement of this trial, much difficulty was experienced in procuring adequate means of interpretation between the court and prisoner; and at length, when a person was found capable of conversing with the prisoner in his language, a second interpreter was required to explain the [illegible] first interpreter ill [illegible]; but, at the best, the interpretation altogether, was very insufficient and unsatisfactory.

The first object of the interpretation was, to inform the prisoner of his arraignment and to instruct him how he plead; which being accomplished, an endeavor was made to apprise him of his right to challenge the jurors, and of the proper mode of exercising that right; but upon the first option of challenge being put to him, in swearing the foreman of the jury, an answer was returned, which threw the whole court into an involuntary burst of laughter, at the same time that it produced a strong and universal sensation of horror. When the prisoner was told to look upon that man, and say if he liked to be tried by him, the answer, as interpreted, given in a tone of astonishment by the English interpreter, was, "He say, he like him too much; if he catch him he eat him."

After this answer it was thought best, in tenderness to the prisoner, to go through the remaining forms, without any further reference to him: but it was subsequently believed, that the latter part of the answer was a remark added by either of the interpreters, according to the uniform practice of the Africans, of interposing their own remarks in every thing.

The first interpreter was frequently in laughter, during the horrid details of the trial, and was more than once reproved for it by the court, for want of feeling.

The particulars of the horrid transaction, as detailed in evidence, were as follows:

Hyers, an interior overseer of captured negroes at Charlottetown, employed to superintend the deceased & his countrymen, because he could speak their language, having missed the deceased (Zongobia) at ration time, reported his absence to his superior, Mr. Ashford, who ordered him to cause search to be made in the bush. Shortly after leaving Mr. Ashford, he saw a man coming out of the bush with a canvass bag, which he attempted to shift away, as if to put it out of sight. He immediately questioned the man, whom he found to be one Quia Pei, of Zongobia's nation, and insisted on seeing the bag and its contents. The man reluctantly opened the bag, which he said contained some meat; on inspection, he discovered several pieces of human flesh. The man was immediately secured, and Mr. Ashford was sent for; Quia Pei died in prison while awaiting his trial.

William Ashford, principal native superintendent at Charlotte-town, stated, that on being informed by the last witness that Zongobia was missed, he had property to the nation for a stipua prison while awaiting his trial.

Ashford, principal native in-ent at Charlotte-town, stated, ing informed by the last wit-Zongobia was missed, he had given orders to search for him; shortly after he was informed of the detention of Quia Pei, and came to the place where he saw the bag and its contents. Quia Pei, he understood, avowed the killing of the man Zongobia, and implicated the prisoner Pei as his accomplice in the act. Quia Pei and the prisoner Pei were kept in close custody for the night, while Mr. Kearney, the nearest magistrate, was sent for.

John Ouseley Kearney, Esq. a Magistrate, was resident at Bathurst-town. In the month of January last, he was sent for, by Mr. Ashford, to enquire into the particulars of this horrid transaction now before the court. The bag, containing the mutilated remains already described, was shown to him. Quia Pei, upon whom it was found, confessed the act, and alleged that the prisoner Pei first suggested it to him, saying, that deceased was fat, and good to eat; both together seized the opportunity of surprising the deceased as he was stooping down in the brook searching for crabs; the prisoner caught the arms of the deceased behind his back, and held him while Quia Pei threw him over; he struggled hard. They were obliged first to cut off his hand, and afterwards they cut off his head; they then proceeded to the horrid process of cooking and eating the flesh, and in this abominable repast it was understood that others also assisted. This statement was given freely and voluntarily by Quia Pei, the man who had since died in prison: the prisoner Pei also confessed, but slowly and reluctantly, and not till the other repeatedly accused him, and remonstrated with him on the inutility of his denial. Mr. Kearney caused them to conduct him to the place where the dreadful deed was perpetrated, and to show where the further remains were to be found. We saw the place where the fire was made, and the bones that had been left, some of them bearing the marks of such persevering voracity, that a thigh-bone had been broken for the purpose of extracting the marrow: the head, with the tongue and upper part of the neck, had been left entire and buried. He caused them to be taken up; the face was recognised as Zongobia's. The reason given for the distinction with respect to the head and its contents was, that eating any part of the head was supposed to cause madness in the country of these cannibals. They were called the Manni, or Mania, and were notorious for this practice, for which they were despised by all their neighbors. On Mr. Kearney's asking whether there was any quarrel or any enmity towards the deceased, he was told there was not; and upon some expression of surprise that so great an atrocity should be perpetrated without a [illegible] or motive, it was thought sufficient to explain it by the same motives which induced Mr. Kearney to kill a fat sheep. Quia Pei said, the cause of his having been sold as a slave was, that he had killed and eaten so many men as to render him formidable to the king of his country and to the head men, who made a palaver for him, and had him condemned and sold.

Philip Bragger was present at the examination and search. He saw the same facts, and had the same understanding as Mr. Kearney as to the confessions.

The substance of Mr Kearney's testimony was interpreted to the prisoner, and he was asked whether he wished to put any questions. He did not ask any question, but denied having participated in the murder in any way; he had never confessed it: he was near the place, with his knife and pot, and was called by the others after the man was killed.—In reference to the charge of holding the hands of Zongobia behind his back, he asked whether a person of his own slight frame was capable of such an exertion? With reference to the charge of having pointed out Zongobia as a fat man, and fit to be killed, he denied having given any such suggestion, or having had any part in such conversation or design: he knew, however, that Quia Pei, and the others of his country, had held such talk on board the ship in which they came (San Juan Nepomuceno), and that they had formed a design accordingly, for the opportunity of future execution.

After this special denial of the charge by the prisoner in all its most material parts, it was thought desirable by the court that the interpreters of the original examination should be called.

One of them, an English interpreter, was it was found, unfortunately detained by sickness, in the country, but the other, the native interpreter, was found to be the same who was now interpreting for the prisoner; this person was immediately put under examination.

Corkeye was a captured negro, of a nation bordering on the country of the nation to which the prisoner and Quia Pei belonged; he resided at Charlotte-town, and generally was employed to look after and interpret for these people: he had interpreted at the examination before Mr. Kearney. Quia Pei, who had been caught with the bag, on being told by the witness to tell all to master, and so to avoid palaver (trouble), did declare all that had been related concerning himself and the prisoner, and had urged the prisoner also to confess; but the prisoner had not confessed any part of the transaction, but always firmly denied having any share in it, or any knowledge of it, until after the murder was perpetrated.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

We have received Halifax papers to the 13th inst. On the 11th a fire broke out in the Naval Hospital in town, from the careless[illegible] of a woman who had been one of the nurses in the Hospital; and the building was entirely destroyed.—Fortunately there was but one sick person in the hospital at the time, the others having been a short time before removed to the Military Hospital. The loss estimated at 12,000*l.*—Boston. Dai. Adv.

Our Canal.—We take pleasure in announcing to the public, that the canal is now full of water, from Fort-Edward to White-Hall; and that boats have passed the whole distance last week. Some little iron work remains yet to be done to the gates, which we are informed by the commissioner, Col. Young, will also be completed this week: so that boats and rafts of lumber will be enabled to pass from Champlain to the Hudson, on Monday or Tuesday next. It is expected that great quantities of lumber will pass from Champlain to the Hudson this fall, some of which we are informed is already on its way.

At Smithfield, R. I. there were raised this year from a single potatoe, four hundred and two potatoes, weighing eighty-three pounds, and measuring nearly a bushel and a half.

From the Barbadoes Mercury, Oct. 18

On Wednesday last, the atmosphere threatened us with an approaching storm, which, indeed, has been too fatally realised; for, with but little intermission, the elements were in a state of dreadful commotion from that time until Friday afternoon, when the wind, which had blown in violent gusts from various points, fortunately subsided, and the rain, that had fallen in torrents, gradually abated. It is impossible to describe the situation in which the town was placed on Thursday night; for, from the immense fall of water, the Gully had become so impetuous, that it forced its way into the green, and thence through Broad-street, the houses of which were inundated, and consequently much property was injured; but had not the body of water, at the same time, taken a direction through Nelson-street to the sea, it is more than probable that the whole of Broad street and perhaps others, would have been destroyed. As it was, the New Bridge, which had been very recently erected at an enormous expense, was carried away; and the adjoining back stores of Michael Jackson, Esq. and those of Messrs. Wilkins & Row, went along with it; and in the destructive career, a large portion of the wharf was thrown in, and with it the back store of the late Fr. Williams, Esq. in which there was property to a very large amount; also another store, occupied by Messrs. W. H. wkesworth & Co. and one by J. George, Esq. In the progress of the Gully stream through the Bay, it made sad havoc, several houses having been thrown down;—and on the sea side, where it emptied itself, the houses of Capt. Merry and Mr. J. Burnham, were carried along with it, as were those persons who inhabited them.—Mr J. Young, his wife and child, & Mrs. Benskin, and her child. We understand the body of Mr. Young has since been found. The Officers' Quarters at St. Ann's have suffered materially in some parts of the Garrison; and many houses in town have had their roofs injured, and a few galleries have been blown down. The bridge over the river at Constitution, is nearly demolished. According to every account the roads in general are impassable.

During this truly alarming period, in which the fears of the inhabitants were increased by the thunder and vivid lightning that accompanied the high wind and heavy rain, several droghers and many lighters, as well as boats of other descriptions, were driven out of the Careenage, and some of them stranded on the Reef. The ship Superior, partly laden with lumber, and the schr. Three Sisters, both of which had put to sea, were wrecked to windward of Charles Fort; the schr. Elizabeth, lately from Bermuda, was cast on shore on the Reef; and the sloop Elliot, of this port, at the head of the Bay. The plantations have more or less felt its effects among their buildings, some of which are reported to have been blown down, and others unroofed; the negro houses, as far as we can learn, have been mostly razed to the ground; the canes on some estates are said to have been torn up by the roots, and others levelled with the ground; in some places, many acres of cultivated land are now under water; and what is additionally distressing, much of the corn has been spoiled by the rain, which gained admittance to the granaries, owing to their being unroofed, or very much shattered; and the ground provisions will likewise suffer, on account of the heavy fall of water.

There has been but little communication with the Country Parishes since the storm, therefore only a few particulars can be known; and such as we have heard of we subjoin. The buildings on the estate of W. Hall, Esq. in St. Andrews are said to have been entirely destroyed. The negro houses on Hallon plantation, which were erected at a very considerable expense, being built of wall and good plank posts, is a heap of ruins. Sandy-Hill estate has lost three negroes and 20 head of cattle. The buildings on J. B. Franklin, Esq's Estate are blown down; as were those of J. Gittens, Esq. with the exception of the dwelling house. The new Chapel and hospital on the Society estate were destroyed: as was the dwelling house on Burnt house plantation. A number of small houses near the salt pond, Speight's, have been washed away:—and the house of Mrs. Sandiford, and the Cooperage of John G. Gooding, Esq. have also suffered.

We have been favored with the following extract of a letter from the country; "All of the below Club is in the most dreadful state. At Foster Hall the earth has opened in many places, and swallowed up sheep and cattle; many fields are removed, and part of the wood has gone into the body of the estate: there are many cracks and chasms; the distilling house, trash-house, and out-houses at the works, with the land they stood on, have quitted their situation and come down to the mansion, and sunk;—the flock of sheep that were in the stoke-holes, were buried alive in the ruins; many of the negro houses have removed, or are destroyed;—Ben River is not much better. The road between Foster-Hall and Mr. Benjamin Mayer's, has separated."

The damage at the Island of St. Vincent, was inconsiderable.

HURRICANE AT TORTOLA.

Tortola appears to have drank deep of the cup of affliction. The following extract of a letter from that island, dated the 29th, conveys a minute and very pathetic statement of the deplorable situation to which it has been reduced.

"There exists not in the memory of man, nor in the annals of history, so severe a hurricane as that with which it pleased Heaven to visit this island from the evening of the 21st to the morning of the following day. On the morning of the 21st, it blew strong from the N. E. which increased gradually, and arrived at about 7 o'clock in the evening to a most tremendous and awful tornado, accompanied with torrents of rain. During the continuance of the wind at the point from which the gale set in, by extreme exertion, the inhabitants were favored by the Almighty, and enabled to secure a shelter over their heads; but about 12 o'clock, the wind suddenly changing to S. W. it blew so furiously, that all attempt to describe its [illegible] force, and violence, is vain. At the dead hour of the night, in an instant, in the twinkling of an eye, scarcely was a house standing upon the island. From the meanest hut, to the most costly and well built houses, with a few, and very few exceptions, all were literally swept from the face of the earth; and the fragments carried by the destroying elements to the distance of 2 or 3 miles from the spot upon which they had been erected. Of the planters' houses in the country, 5 will not number those that have been spared—only 4 sets of works, out of the 35, now remain, the canes are wholly destroyed, and not one root of vegetables saved. This is dreadful, yet this equals not the devastation, & we may say the total ruin of the town, nine tenths of which are levelled with the ground, and the remaining part much injured and impaired. Property of every kind, and of every person, has been almost totally lost. A great part of the provisions that were in the town, have been either blown or washed away, and swallowed up by the sea.

"Hundreds of the poor inhabitants have been entirely ruined, and the few to whom remained a little from the ravages of this awful visitation, have nearly expended that little in clothing, feeding, and succouring their afflicted fellow creatures. The loss of property has been great—but how truly harrowing is it to our feelings, to be obliged to relate the very great loss of life. The suddenness of the crash of houses prevented the possibility of escape: and, even had an escape been effected, the poor individuals would have no where to fly, every one being similarly circumstanced. Among those killed by the fall of their houses, with extreme pain we are compelled to mention the lady of President Hetherington, the lady of Doctor Doty, Mrs. Fleety, the hon. Abraham Chalwei Hill and about 80 colored persons and negroes. Mrs. Sheen, an elderly and much respected inhabitant of the town, has died since, in consequence of her exposure to the inclemency of the weather, after her house was blown down; and our venerable and highly respected president has received so many and dangerous fractures of limbs, and contusions, that it is expected he cannot long survive.—Thus have we been, by the fearful hand of the Almighty, doubtless for wise and good ends, although to us blind mortals inscrutable, reduced, in the course of 24 hours, from comfort and happiness to real want and abject misery. Not more than 500 know where to lay their heads, nor can lumber be procured to rebuild shelters from the weather. The provisions in the Island are not more than sufficient for the calls of one week. There are upwards of 8000 inhabitants and from where we are to obtain necessary food and raiment, is in the knowledge of Him alone, who has been pleased to bring this affecting providence upon us."

Another communication from Tortola estimates the number of lives lost, at 50. The Court-House fell, and killed the seargeant at arms.

From the Salem Register.

Murder and Robbery.—At Stoneham, (about 11 miles from Salem) on Thursday evening last, between 7 and 8 o'clock, the house of Mr. Jacob Gould was entered by three men who were disguised by having their faces painted, &c. a fourth remained outside. The family were sitting round the fire at the time the villains entered, and consisted of Mr. Jacob Gould, about 65 years of age, his brother David, about 60 years, the sister of Mr. Gould, a single woman, of 60 years and the widow Winship. On entering they ordered the Messrs. Goulds to deliver up their money on pain of death. Jacob, the elder brother, took a chair to defend himself, when one of them knocked him down, stamped on him and stabbed him in the breast and shoulder with a knife; his brother David was knocked down by another at the same time and stabbed in the side; the sister was stabbed in the hand; Mrs. Winship was not hurt. They then took both the wounded men, and the women, carried them down cellar, bound them with cords; and afterwards took them up separately, compelled them to tell where the money was, carried them again to the cellar, and nailed the door. They then took all the money they could find in the house, (about a thousand dollars, consisting of dollars, half dollars and a small amount in gold.) These proceedings occupied about half an hour, when they decamped. The family remained shut up in a dark cellar, in the greatest pain and distress until half past 11 o'clock, when when Mr. David Gould succeeded in unloosing the cords with which he was bound, broke open the door, and gave the alarm to the neighbours, who repaired to the house, and immediately procured medical assistance for the wounded persons, but the old gentleman (Jacob) died about one o'clock. A considerable number of the neighbors immediately set off in different directions in pursuit of the villains; and it was from a nephew of the deceased, and one of the neighbors, who were in this town yesterday, that we obtained the above distressing particulars. One of our informants put up a horse at the barn of Mr. Gould, an hour after the robbery was committed, but seeing no light in the house, and presuming the family had gone to bed, he did not go in. The money, for which the villains were tempted to commit this horrid deed, which we consider unprecedented in this part of our country, was a part of the savings of 40 years industry and frugality; it was generally known that the family was wealthy, and kept money in their house, and the villains must have had a knowledge of the circumstance. Our informants were unable to give a particular description of the murderers. From the representation of one of the women as to the appearance of two of them, some suspicion exists that they were two brothers who were acquainted with the family, and who reside in the neighboring town; the other two were apparently very young men. A party of the neighbors proceeded to the house of the suspected to watch them.

Mr. David Gould jr. has offered a reward of five hundred dollars for the detection of the robbers, and the recovery of the money.

From the Franklin Gazette.

The late trial of Carlile, the bookseller, in the Court of King's Bench, England, for the publication of Paine's Age of Reason and Palmer's Principles of Nature, terminated, in his conviction.—A sketch of the trial we have read in the London Morning Chronicle. It is really a curiosity, and that of a most lamentable nature. The crime was the publication of an impious, a profane and blasphemous bible upon religion, with an intention to bring it and the Scriptures into discredit and contempt. Carlile defended himself; read to the jury the whole of the Age of Reason, with extracts from other similar works, and animadverted upon them justifying and eulogizing their principles; repeatedly declared his belief that the Bible was an imposition upon the credulity of mankind, an obscene, immoral and pernicious book, and was about to read it through, to convince the jury of the truth of his opinions; but chief justice Abbot stopped him several times, and told him that as christianity was a part of the law of the land, he could not permit him to examine or to revile in that court the Holy Scriptures. Carlile, however, persisted so far as to read and reprobate several passages. In the progress of the trial, he treated the court with a boldness and independence equal to those which his friend Hunt displayed to the chief Justice at the same sittings, denying the law laid down by the bench, and telling the court that he had no confidence in it. The chief justice bore his remarks with [illegible] patience, and allowed him a latitude of freedom of defence, which perhaps would hardly be permitted in this country. The jury exhibited symptoms of horror at the impious language of the defendant. They found a verdict against him almost instantaneously.

Upon the whole, we are of opinion, on reading this trial, that persecutions of the kind are extremely unwise; that the cause of christianity does not need their aid; that they tend to give countenance to the cry of persecution for opinions respecting religion, and thereby to spread the very blasphemies which they are designed to punish and suppress. At the same time, we cannot avoid the expression of our detestation of the irreligious and wicked opinions, so wantonly and foolishly avowed by Carlile in open court, and so fatal in their tendency to subvert morality and social order in this life, and to destroy the best hopes of man hereafter.

From the Wilmington, Delaware paper.

English affairs.—Among the circumstances which almost daily thicken around us to shew the industry and preconcerted system of the present opposition in England, is the return of Mr. Cobbett to that country; his flight from which sufficiently indicated his regard to personal safety, to warrant us in believing that he would not return without adequate assurance of important changes in contemplation.

One of his sons was in this neighborhood a few weeks ago; and then by observed that a revolution was in train, to be developed early in June, 1820; shortly before which time his father would arrive in England, to take a part in the scene. But he had lately received very important communications, by which it appeared that the plot in contemplation would be ripe for operation in November or December; that consequently Mr. Cobbett would cross the Atlantic by or before that time. He has lately departed accordingly.

The reformers in this country have clandestinely disinterred the bones of Thomas Paine, & sent them to England, with the avowed intention of erecting a splendid [illegible] over them; no doubt for a political effect.

YORK, DECEMBER 23, 1819.

By a vessel which arrived on Tue day, from Niagara, we are sorry to learn that the Schooner Mary Ann, J. Monier, was lately compelled to take refuge at Oswego, during a severe gale; she rode out the storm, but was completely dismasted. We understand that she had a valuable cargo, principally for this place.

This port is still open, and we are informed that upwards of 16,000 tons have been entered in the Custom House books during the present season.

THE HORSE OF COLUMBIA RIVER.

The following description of the fine animal above mentioned, is from the St. Louis Enquirer.

The Horse of the Columbia River, will rank with the finest of his species in the known world. His size is fifteen or sixteen hands, even in a state of nature, unprovided with food or shelter by the hand of man. His form exhibits much bone and muscle, but not the mass of flesh which is found on the fat European horse. His limbs are clean and slender; the neck arched and rising; the hoofs round and hard, and the nostrils wide and thin. He is equally distinguished for speed and bottom. He runs rapidly and for a long time; rivalling in this respect all that we have heard of the English hunting horse. In other respects, in the docility of his nature, in his capacity to sustain hunger and hardship, in his power to provide food for himself and his master, he is wholly unrivalled. He is readily trained to the business of his master's life, that of hunting, and pursues the game with all the keenness of the dog, and with equal sagacity and more success. He will run down the deer in the prairies with, or without his master on his back, and when overtaken will hold it with his teeth. When rode after he game he needs no guiding of the bridle to direct him. He will pursue a drove of buffaloes, and coming up with them, will stop one by biting him with his teeth.—The animal bitten immediately wheels to defend himself with his horn; the horse defend himself with his horn; the horse wheels at the same instant to avoid it; and at this moment when the side of the buffalo is presented, the Indian lets fly an arrow which often passes entirely thro' his body. The wounded animal always turns out of the drove to lay down and die; the horse and his rider pursue the gang to make fresh slaughter. Another horse, trained to a second part of the game, with other Indians, take the trail of the wounded buffalo, which is butchered and carried into camp.—These things seem incredible; but we have them upon the authority of Lewis and Clark, and a great number of traders who have been upon the Columbia river since the time of their discovery; some of whom are now in this town.

The capacity of this horse to sustain fatigue and to provide food for himself, is equally astonishing. He is gallopped all day, sometimes eighty or ninety miles in the space of ten or twelve hours, and is then left to shift for himself during the night. In the spring, summer and autumn he finds no difficulty. The short and sweet grass of that country gives him an abundant and nutritious repast. In the winter, and towards the mountains, where the snow is several feet deep, his unerring instinct tells him where to search, he scrapes away the snow with his hoof till he comes to the ground, and rooting there with his nose finds wherewith of moss and grass to sustain his life On the borders of the creeks and rivers, he feeds on the boughs of willows, and other soft wood which his master has sometimes the kindness to fall for him with a hatchet.

This fine animal is found on the banks of the Columbia, in latitude 46. in the great plain which lies on the borders of this river, between the upper and lower range of mountains. His origin is traced to Mexico, thence to Spain, thence to the south of Africa, where the Arabian barb is found in all the perfection of his species. His fine form, his generous spirit, and his noble qualities are preserved upon the Columbia river; and certainly it is worthy the experiment to endeavour to transplant him into other parts of the United States. Many citizens have attempted to do so, but have always been robbed by the Indians of the Rocky mountains. Lewis and Clark procured seventy-three, said by Gov. Clark to be the most beautiful collection of horses that he has ever seen together before or since; but the whole number was stolen from them by Indians who followed their trail and never ceased their operations untill they had carried off the last. It is to be hoped that the military establishments forming on the upper Missouri will facilitate the attempts which will no doubt be renewed to introduce this fine breed into the settled parts of our continent

A late Natchez paper states, that a dreadful disease has appeared among the cattle in that country, which, without the immediate application of some strong decoction of bark, proves fatal—the disease first appearing on the tongue, and incapacitating the animal to eat or drink.

We have letters from New-Orleans, to the 25th ult.—The fever of that place although somewhat mitigated in its malignity, still raged, making the town, as it were, "a grave yard."

Another Governor Deceased.—The Watchman, a paper printed at Wilmington, Delaware, announces the death of HENRY MOLLESTON, Esq. Governor elect of that State. This is the seventh Governor, whose death has been recorded in our paper within the last few weeks.

The intended Fortifications of Grand Manan, (for which purpose £40,000 was voted by Parliament at the last Session,) are we understand, to be immediately commenced on that Point of the Island, called the Swallow's Tail, being the spot most approved of for that purpose, and establishing a depot; in the vicinity of which there is a spacious day and safe anchorage for Ships, secure from all winds except from the Eastward.—Star.

Captain Rossmond from Curracos, informs, news had been received there, that the Patriots under Gen. Bermudas after having defeated the royalists, had captured Cucuta; had entered Maracaibo, and that the royalists are flying from Santa Martha.

The Schooner Apponatox, from Curracoa, brings intelligence that a battle had been fought at Cacontar, between Gen. Bermudas and the Royalists, in which 200 patriots were killed and wounded.—The Royalists had from 4 to 500 killed wounded and prisoners.

Captain King of the schooner Luminary, arrived at this port, informs, that Panama was blockaded by a Chilian frigate, who had taken possession of a small island commanding the entrance of the harbour.—Balt. Chron.

PROSPECTUS.

"Salus Populi, Suprema Lex."

The safety of the People, the Supreme Law.

IN the motto selected, we trust the rulers and the ruled, in all countries where national freedom is cherished, will recognize the great and important end it contains. Life, Liberty and Property are the primary objects which the compact of civil society is intended to secure; and on those principles are the Constitution and Laws of England founded. Among the most essential securities the British nation doth enjoy at this day may be ranked the Independence of the Press. But for this auxiliary, the condition of the liberties of the people of England would be no better than that of the Cossacks, or poor and miserable peasantry of Poland & of Germany. So valuable a privilege cannot be too highly appreciated by the people of this Province, who have hitherto displayed an honourable attachment towards its support; and their patronage is again respectfully solicited.

In putting forth to the public—to the world, the Prospectus of a Journal, which has for its end the welfare of this Province, and must necessarily embrace many objects, it may be easily conceived the Editor feels impressed with the weight of the task he has undertaken. He pretends not to infallibility, but is aware he may frequently err; and can only console himself in the anticipated indulgence of a generous public.

In the first place, we wish it to be distinctly understood, that we invite discussion on all subjects connected with the immediate interests of the Country; in the expectation it be temperate in its style and language, and making a due discrimination between public and private characters. Our own observations, from time to time, will be guided by these priciples; reserving always to ourselves the full and undoubted right to investigate the conduct of public men and their measures,—"nothing extenuating, nor setting down aught in malice." These, if any such there be, who may attempt to make this Journal a vehicle for detraction or malignant gratification, will be assuredly disappointed. Agricultural essays, tending to facilitate the labors of the husbandman, will be regarded among the most important which can grace our columns. This Colony, from its situation, is peculiarly adapted to agriculture, the mother of all sciences; and with its prosperity the commercial interests of the community are most intimately connected. All communications having in view the promotion of true piety & benevolence, will be thankfully received and attended to; inasmuch as in the practice of the Christian virtues consist, in an eminent degree, the happiness of society. Assiduity shall not be wanting to collect & insert in our columns the proceedings of the House of Assembly when in Session, from time to time; also, all articles of intelligence, foreign and domestic, as shall be thought most useful and instructive; we shall, indeed, endeavour to be the "utile cum dulce," the useful with the agreeable.—And, in short, from a grave philosopher & plodding politician to the fantastic admirer of the Muses, all will be equally entitled to attention, and shall have a corner appropriated for their chaste effusions.

The Canadian Argus and Niagara Spectator will be printed on super-royal paper, with a handsome type, and the first number issued on Thusday the 18th inst.

Subscriptions will be received at the Argus & Spectator office,

Niagara, Nov. 10. 1819.

TERMS OF THIS GAZETTE

Four Dollars per annum; when sent by Post, Four Dollars and a Half. The Subscriptions to be paid in advance to the 1st of July or 1st of January. Country Subscribers, who send to the office for their Papers, who discontinue their subscription, are requested to send notice to that effect, and pay up all arrears, otherwise they will still be considered as Subscribers and charged accordingly.—The Editor is obliged to insist upon this condition, several Subscribers neglecting, frequently for many months, to send for their Papers, which accumulate to an inconvenient degree, and become, if not paid for, a serious loss.

The intended Fortifications of Grand Manan, (for which purpose £40,000 was voted by Parliament at the last Session,) are we understand, to be immediately commenced on that Point of the Island, called the Swallow's Tail, being the spot most approved of for that purpose, and establishing a depot; in the vicinity of which there is a spacious day and safe anchorage for Ships, secure from all winds except from the Eastward.—Star.

FROM THE SPANISH MAINE.

Captain Rossmond from Curracos, informs, news had been received there, that the Patriots under Gen. Bermudas after having defeated the royalists, had captured Cucuta; had entered Maracaibo, and that the royalists are flying from Santa Martha.

The Schooner Apponatox, from Curracoa, brings intelligence that a battle had been fought at Cacontar, between Gen. Bermudas and the Royalists, in which 200 patriots were killed and wounded.—The Royalists had from 4 to 500 killed wounded and prisoners.

Captain King of the schooner Luminary, arrived at this port, informs, that Panama was blockaded by a Chilian frigate, who had taken possession of a small island commanding the entrance of the harbour.—Balt. Chron.

PROSPECTUS.

"Salus Populi, Suprema Lex."

The safety of the People, the Supreme Law.

IN the motto selected, we trust the rulers and the ruled, in all countries where national freedom is cherished, will recognize the great and important end it contains. Life, Liberty and Property are the primary objects which the compact of civil society is intended to secure; and on those principles are the Constitution and Laws of England founded. Among the most essential securities the British nation doth enjoy at this day may be ranked the Independence of the Press. But for this auxiliary, the condition of the liberties of the people of England would be no better than that of the Cossacks, or poor and miserable peasantry of Poland & of Germany. So valuable a privilege cannot be too highly appreciated by the people of this Province, who have hitherto displayed an honourable attachment towards its support; and their patronage is again respectfully solicited.

In putting forth to the public—to the world, the Prospectus of a Journal, which has for its end the welfare of this Province, and must necessarily embrace many objects, it may be easily conceived the Editor feels impressed with the weight of the task he has undertaken. He pretends not to infallibility, but is aware he may frequently err; and can only console himself in the anticipated indulgence of a generous public.

In the first place, we wish it to be distinctly understood, that we invite discussion on all subjects connected with the immediate interests of the Country; in the expectation it be temperate in its style and language, and making a due discrimination between public and private characters. Our own observations, from time to time, will be guided by these priciples; reserving always to ourselves the full and undoubted right to investigate the conduct of public men and their measures,—"nothing extenuating, nor setting down aught in malice." These, if any such there be, who may attempt to make this Journal a vehicle for detraction or malignant gratification, will be assuredly disappointed. Agricultural essays, tending to facilitate the labors of the husbandman, will be regarded among the most important which can grace our columns. This Colony, from its situation, is peculiarly adapted to agriculture, the mother of all sciences; and with its prosperity the commercial interests of the community are most intimately connected. All communications having in view the promotion of true piety & benevolence, will be thankfully received and attended to; inasmuch as in the practice of the Christian virtues consist, in an eminent degree, the happiness of society. Assiduity shall not be wanting to collect & insert in our columns the proceedings of the House of Assembly when in Session, from time to time; also, all articles of intelligence, foreign and domestic, as shall be thought most useful and instructive; we shall, indeed, endeavour to be the "utile cum dulce," the useful with the agreeable.—And, in short, from a grave philosopher & plodding politician to the fantastic admirer of the Muses, all will be equally entitled to attention, and shall have a corner appropriated for their chaste effusions.

The Canadian Argus and Niagara Spectator will be printed on super-royal paper, with a handsome type, and the first number issued on Thusday the 18th inst.

Subscriptions will be received at the Argus & Spectator office,

Niagara, Nov. 10. 1819.

TERMS OF THIS GAZETTE

Four Dollars per annum; when sent by Post, Four Dollars and a Half. The Subscriptions to be paid in advance to the 1st of July or 1st of January. Country Subscribers, who send to the office for their Papers, who discontinue their subscription, are requested to send notice to that effect, and pay up all arrears, otherwise they will still be considered as Subscribers and charged accordingly.—The Editor is obliged to insist upon this condition, several Subscribers neglecting, frequently for many months, to send for their Papers, which accumulate to an inconvenient degree, and become, if not paid for, a serious loss.

LONDON, Oct. 23.

Meeting of the Radicals in Finsbury Market Place.—Every thing that can be learnt of the proceedings of those desperate and deluded men, the adherents of Thistlewood, Watson, and Preston, leads us to believe, that unless very closely watched or powerfully restrained, they will on Monday next produce some serious disturbance. Since their quarrel with Hunt, they have determined, we hear, to discard his flag and cockade, which are red, and to assume a new one, which will be green and white.

Their arrangements for the meeting in Finsbury Market are said to be on a large scale. The following has been communicated to us as an outline. The assemblage will not come together promiscuously, as has been usual with the reform meetings in the metropolis; but they will proceed to the place of rendezvous in regular divisions, under their respective leaders. It is ascertained that twenty stand of colors are prepared for the occasion, and that these divisions will march in the following order, viz. :—

One division from Tower-hill; one ditto from Smithfield; one ditto from the bottom of Fetter-lane; two ditto from Palace-yard, Holborn; two ditto from Piccadilly, Westminster; two ditto from the Obelisk, Westminster-road; one from the Shepherd and Shepherdess' Fields; and the last from Northampton-square.

These madmen have openly and repeatedly avowed their intention of going armed to their meetings: and it is well ascertained that some of them have secretly furnished themselves with arms for that purpose.

One of the Paris papers of Monday last states, that the Princess of Wales still remains at Lyons.

The idea of calling another meeting at Manchester is abandoned.

The Radical Committee are to have a public Meeting in the Market Place, on Monday (this day) and Dr. Watson has accepted their invitation to take the chair.

Our venerable and afflicted Sovereign entered on Monday upon the sixtieth year of his reign—a reign now longer in its duration, by nearly four years, than that of any former sovereign on the English Throne, that of Henry the third being barely fifty six years.

It will be seen by the advertisement in another column, (received this evening) that the general subscription for raising an armed force in this county, to suppress the designs of the revolutionists, already amounts to upwards of six thousand pounds, exclusive of the subscriptions at the different Banks, &c.—The establishment of the Lieutenant heads the list with a munificent contribution of 500l.

A meeting of the Lieutenancy of the county of Denbigh will be held on the 9th of November, at [illegible] in that county, by the Lord Lieutenant, Sir W. William Wynn. Part. for the purpose of adopting the best means for aiding the civil power, in the preservation of the public peace. Sir Watkin's firm attachment to the principles of the constitution is well known; and the calling this meeting is a proof of the worthy Baronet's opinion of the measures contemplated by the radical reformers, or rather radical revolutionists.—Chester paper.

LEEDS, Oct. 5 1819.

Sir—The following facts, will, I think, pretty well shew what we may expect, should the Radical Revolutionists ever gain an ascendency :—

A very considerable manufacturer, Mr. V—y, of Stanigby, in this neighborhood, has been seriously inconvenienced for sometime past, by the demands of his work men for advanced wages. He agreed to their demands, and all differences appeared to be amicably settled: but in consequence of the great increase wages which he was compelled to give, he found it impossible to carry on the extensive trade he had hitherto done; and consequently, as his out-door workmen finished their work, he dismissed them, and only continued to find employment for those in his own mill, to the number of about 100. The out-door workmen were incensed at being thus deprived of work, and laid their case before their Committee, who sent two delegates to Mr V—y, demanding that his work should be equally divided between the In and Out-door workmen. This audacity astonished the gentleman, who in return asked them if he was to let his own premises and tools be unemployed, and be compelled to put his work out to do to others at a considerably advanced price? and he dismissed them with a peremptory denial. The Committee immediately ordered all the men working in the mill, to strike; this they accordingly did; and on Wednesday last all the king ceased. Another similar outrage to law and reason was committed at Dewsbury, to a house of the first respectability, and of the most extensive connexions. A very mischievous man was employed in their manufactory, and had given offence two or three times, by his activity and forwardness in striking for wages whenever an occasion offered; and last week he was told that his services were no longer required: he took no notice of this, and appeared at his work again the next morning, when one of the principals was taking his round; he was again ordered out, and by main force, expelled. This occasioned a deputation from the workmen's committee, to wait upon the house in question, and they demanded that the discharged weaver should be instantly re-employed; the gentleman who had rejected him, replied, that they were not to submit to have their workmen chosen by the Reform Union, if necessity had compelled them to give advanced wages. The delegates immediately ordered all the work people, to the number of 170, to turn out, and cease working for the house until the discarded villain was employed.—This order was immediately obeyed. I leave you to make what comments you please upon this—to me it seems the beginning of the radical system of things in the union amongst the workmen is very close, and those who are standing out, receive from 9 to 10 shillings a week during their rebellion against their masters. One of the chiefs of these men, said to the senior partner in the house at Dewsbury, "You old D—l you have fattened upon the sweat from our bones; we will soon change places; the reckoning day is not far off." It is remarkable, that those who are most forward in the demand for increasing of wages, are receiving the greatest sums, and are at the same time most active at the many Reform farces that are now acting in this neighborhood.

I remain, your's, &c. O. H. R.

P. S. A very large shop is open in this town, for the sale of all the radical trash that emanates from Wooler & Co's press, and the blasphemy and sedition that is vended by Carlisle; it is occupied by J. Mann, of reform notoriety, & I need not add fully answers his expectations, for it is rarely empty.

Newcastle upon-Tyne, Oct. 16.

We have had sad work here on Thursday evening. In the afternoon the mayor, with about twenty constables in the steam boat, brought down three keels, determined to try to cast them in a staithe lying near South Shields shore. The men in casting were assailed with stones from the shore, so much so as to be obliged to send to the cutter for a boat's crew for protection.—This, however did not prevent the mob, and the men were obliged to desist, and come over to the North side New Quay. The mayor, in landing, was hissed and pelted in his way to Mrs. Carr's for refreshment, and he collared one man, who was active against him, and took him into the Inn. This was about 5, or little after. The mob on the New-Quay immediately assailed the constables in the steam boats with stones, and compelled them to go below; they also attacked the cutter's boat's crew, among which were 4 or 5 marines, and a stone struck the cockswain of the boat violently, and one of the marines fired, and most unfortunately shot a man dead on the Quay. The mob immediately called "blood for blood," and swore that the ——mayor" had given orders for the marines to fire, which could not be as the mayor was in the inn when it happened. Showers of large stones (for the ground was broken in front to lay gas pipes) were thrown, and every window, and almost all the window frames in front, nearly demolished. An iron pipe was made a battering ram, and the front door broken in. There were no troops in the town: it was now dark, and the greatest confusion prevailed, the mob threatening to burn the house and even the town Mr. W. Richardson, J. Richardson, and some others were at dinner, and a message was sent up from the mayor to our justices to beg assistance. Mr. Scott was unwell, and could not come, and J. Wright said he would not go down without a force to protect him, but he and Scott would repair to George Inn, and wait there. In this dilemma Mr. Donkin, as high constable, thought it his duty to go and offer his assistance to the mayor, who only had Ostle and John Brown. Donkin, in the most spirited manner, came to the front through the showers of stones, gave them his name, and asked what they wanted. They said they were determined to rescue the man, & that they would be revenged on the mayor for ordering the man to be killed. Donkin told them the man could be given up, finding opposition vain, and told them the mayor could not be to blame. This paci[illegible]d a while, the man was delivered up, but the fury on the house was not satisfied, which continued. John Richardson made his escape, and went off to Wall's end and Newcastle for dragoons, who had been stationed that day at the Staiths, but not one had been sent to Shields.—The mayor was advised to steal out at the back door, which for a moment had been left unguarded by the mob, and thus escaped most narrowly, for they surely would have killed him.—The mob about this time began to be more quiet, and some of them searched the lower rooms for the mayor. A short time after he fled, about fourteen dragoons came from Wall's end, and remained until they were relieved by some from Newcastle. It appears that the justices in North and South Shields knew nothing of the mayor's intention, otherwise a plan might have been concerted; but he never dreamt of any opposition, and of course the attempt failing, does more harm than good, and at present there is no symptoms of the men going to work. The popular feeling was most violent all day yesterday during the inquest, the people saying if the Manchester over again, and great attempts are making to prove that it was a lieutenant or an officer who snatched a gun from the marine and fired. One witness, I understand, yesterday attempted to prove this, but the two who followed him, denied it. The inquest continues to sit, and Maxwell the joiner, a violent Radical, was very obtrusive on the court. The mob were quiet yesterday, but a large number were assembled about the George all day. The chief constables are undergoing an organization. A large body of men went down to the cutter, for we have only a small brig with about 20 marines, and demanded the "——murderer" to be given up to them, and afterwards went alongside.—To day the boat's crew is to be examined. We expect some foot soldiers of the 40th to day, and I believe a large vessel with marines is on the passage. It is unfortunate the man was killed, as it gives occasion for the blackguards to mix the Reform business with the keelmen's disputes, and keeps the latter out of work. There are guards at all the spouts, and no violence has yet been attempted on them, though threatened.

NEWCASTLE, Oct. 23.

On Friday night, the 15th instant, an inquest was held at the George Inn, Dockwray-square, before Stephen Reed, Esq. coroner, on the body of Joseph Cheesley, the unfortunate person who was killed upon the New Quay, during the riot on the preceeding evening. The examination of the witnesses lasted five days, when, after a patient investigation of most extraordinary evidence, the jury on Wednesday afternoon returned a verdict of Justifiable Homicide. This verdict, we regret to state, has caused the evil disposed to break out into fresh acts of violence. About 2 o'clock the same evening, Mr. Coppin, one of the jury, who resides near Milburn place, was sitting in his parlour, a pistol shot was fired at the window, but owing to the thickness of the window shutter, the bullet fortunately did not pass through, or otherwise it would have proved fatal from the direction in which it had been fired. A short while after, another shot was fired at the house of Mr. Fenwick, in Milburn-place, brother to the foreman of the jury; the villains having mistaken the houses of the two brothers who reside next door to each other; the windows of Mr. Fenwick's house were also broken. This shot was also providentially unattended with any fatal consequences. Both these shots are strongly suspected to have been fired by four men dressed in blue jackets and white trowsers, who were seen in the neighbourhood at the time; and who after the last shot ran down the steps in front of Milburn-place, and seizing a boat, escaped on the river. About the same a new mortice door hinge was thrown through one of the bed room windows of Mr. Hall, another of the jury, who resides in the same neighbourhood; it fell upon a bed in which a child was asleep. These daring outrages, as might be expected, excited the alarm, and roused the indignation of all the respectable inhabitants, who at a meeting held next day, resolved to offer a reward of 300 guineas for the discovery of the miscreants, and to use every exertion to bring them to justice. A most liberal subscription was instantly entered into for this purpose. The streets of the town were patrolled by cavalry on Wednesday, and at the time when our informant left Shields on Thursday evening, re-inforced parties of special constables, cavalry, and infantry, were preparing to set out to patrol the streets that night.

Accounts of these disturbances have been transmitted to government, and a large ship on board of which are three hundred marines, is daily expected to arrive off Shields. The Courier also states that some military are on their march for this neighbourhood.

We are happy to state that the keelmen on this river returned to their work on Friday morning.—The terms which have been arranged between them and their employers, will raise the funds of their hospital, we understand, from 1800l. to about 2700l. a year. The sailors on the Wear also returned to their last week, the ship owners having acceded to their terms.

Contest about precedency between the Sheriffs at the Old Bailey.—Our readers have been already apprised of the difference of opinion which subsists between the Sheriffs respecting precedency and the several attempts made by Mr. Sheriff Parkins to sit in the senior Sheriff's box, at the Old Bailey.

Mr. Sheriff Parkins entered the Court at 9 o'clock this morning, and took his seat in the box of the senior Sheriff (who was absent,) and which he has done more than once before.—On the arrival of the Judges at the usual time, a few minutes before ten o'clock, the Sheriffs were summoned according to the customary ceremony to attend them in Court.

Mr. Sheriff Rothwell, who insists upon his seniority, according to the opinion of the Court of aldermen, took his station, we understand, in the passage leading to the senior Sheriff's box, at the right hand of the bench, and in the passage behind it, where he waited to usher in Mr. Baron Wood.

Mr. Sheriff Parkins, who had to pass out through the passage to attend the Judges, on finding that his colleague had taken his station there, took his place by his side near the door leading to the bench, so that when Mr. Justice Park advanced from the Judges' room to enter the Court, he found no Sheriff in waiting to receive him at his side, which was the left door of the bench.

The Learned judge immediately demanded the reason why he was not attended by the Sheriff with the usual respect.

Mr. Sheriff Parkins replied, that his colleague was at his wrong side, and should be with Mr. Justice Park, as his attendant, for that he (Mr. Parkins) was, as senior, at his proper side of the Court, where he was to attend the other Judge.

The Recorder, who by this time came out of Court, denied Mr. Parkins' assertion, and said that Mr. Alderman Rothwell was senior.

Mr. Justice Park said he had nothing to do with the discussion of seniority; but must be attended in the usual manner.

Mr. Sheriff Parkins then said, he would do himself the honor of attending the Learned Judge, whom he immediately ushered into his place in Court, and then took his departure from Court, apparently much chagrined.

Mr. Sheriff Rothwell, after ushering in Mr. Baron Wood, took his seat in the senior Sheriff's box.

Loss of the Mysore.—The Mysore left China on the 1st of December last, and had proceeded as far as the coast of Cochin-China, in about lat. 13. N. when she experienced a heavy gale of wind from the northward and westward in which she scudded as long as was deemed safe under a reefed foresail; but on the 7th it blew so violently that the ship was obliged to be have to under her bare masts; this had not been effected two minutes, before her lower yards, top-mast, jib boom, &c. were all swept away, and at the same time it was found that she had sprung a dangerous leak, and six feet water was reported to be in the hold; all other duty was laid aside, and every one repaired to the pumps, where their exertions proved unavailing, as, by 8 P. M. the water had risen in the ship to 15 feet, and the gun deck was also half full; it was then determined to save as many of the crew as possible, by getting their two remaining boats out (the other boats having been torn away from either quarter.) About nine o'clock the large cutter was got out, and Mr. Wemyss was charged with the care of keeping clear of the ship, and to remain close under the lee while the long boat could be got out; nearly one half of the boat's crew deserted Mr. W. while getting clear of the ship, owing to a largeboble being knocked in the bot against the ship, and only seven lascars remained with him, one of whom he employed in stopping in with a blanket, and the other six were employed at the oars. The gale having considerably abated, about eleven the long boat was nearly hoisted out and Captain Dobbie hailed Mr. Wemyss to approach the ship as quick as he could; immediately after they heard a terrible crash, as if the ship had burst, or a heavy gun gone off, which was followed by a general shriek from those on board.—Captain Dobbie hailed the cutter as before—"Pull hard, Wemyss, and approach us;" but in a moment after the ship sunk from their sight, and every soul perished. Nothing was seen except a large white whirl or boil in the water, where the ship had been, and they appeared surrounded with the cries of people for assistance; the night was dark and although they made every exertion to move the unwieldy boat toward the sound of voices, first on one side and then on the other, they failed in being able to save a single soul. Mr. Wemyss now found himself in the open sea, without a morsel of any thing to eat or drink, or a compass to steer by; they were so overcome by fatigue, that they fell into a sound sleep in the boat's bottom, and remained until next day; they then set the reefed sail, and steered by the sun for Pulo Spata, which they made on the second day, but could not land on account of a heavy surf. They made Pulo Candore three days after, but could get nothing to eat, except some fish they caught among the rocks, as the hostile appearance of the inhabitants prevented their going up amongst the trees; they were eight days more before they made Trinqano, and their only sustenance was six small biscuits, found in one of the lascars, and 3 water they caught when raining. The Rajah of Tringano treated them hospitably for a month, and then sent them in a prow to Malacca, where they arrived on the 23d ult.

Lost in the ship Mysore—Capt. Alex Dobbie—Mr. William Barr, chief mate —Mr. Charles Ludin, 3d do—Mr. James Limond, 4th do—and about ninety Lascars.—East India Paper.

PRESIDENT [illegible] great and important [illegible]

National Interest, [illegible] Liberty and Free[illegible] which the TUESDAY, Dec. [illegible] ended to this day at twelve o'clock, the [illegible] dent of the United States transmitted to both houses of Congress, by Mr. J. Monroe, the following Message:

Fellow Citizens of the Senate and of the House of Representatives:

The public buildings being advanced to a stage to afford accommodation for Congress, I offer you my sincere congratulation on the re-commencement of your duties in the Capitol.

In bringing to view the incidents most deserving attention, which have occurred since your last session, I regret to have to state that several of our principal cities have suffered by sickness, that [illegible] amount of drought has prevailed in the middle and western states; and that a derangement has been felt in some of our monied institutions, which has proportionally affected their credit. I am happy, however, to have it in my power to assure you that the health of the cities is now completely restored; that the produce of the year, though less abundant than usual, will not only be amply sufficient for home consumption, but afford a large surplus for the supply of the wants of other nations; and that the derangement in the circulating paper medium, by being left to those remedies which its obvious causes suggested and the good sense and virtue of our fellow citizens supplied, has diminished.

Having informed Congress, at the 27th of February last, that a treaty of amity, settlement, and limits, had been concluded in this city, between the United States and Spain, and ratified by the competent authorities of the former, full confidence was entertained that it would have been ratified by his Catholic Majesty, with equal promptitude, and in like earnest desire to terminate on the conditions of that treaty, the differences which had so long existed between the two countries. Every view which the subject admitted of was thought to have justified this conclusion. Great losses had been sustained by the citizens of the United States, from Spanish cruisers, more than twenty years before, which had not been redressed. These losses had been acknowledged and provided for by the treaty, as far back as the year 1802, which, although concluded at Madrid, was not then ratified by the government of Spain, not since, until the last year, when it was suspended by the late treaty, a more satisfactory provision to both parties, as was presumed, having been made for them.—Other differences had arisen in this long interval, affecting their highest interests, which were likewise provided for by this big treaty. The treaty itself was formed with great consideration, & a thorough knowledge of all circumstances, which could in any manner affect every article having been for years under discussion, and repeated references having been made by the minister of Spain to his government, on the points respecting which the greatest difference of opinion prevailed. It was formed by a minister duly authorised for the purpose, who had represented his government in the United States, and been employed in this long protracted negociation several years, and who, it is not denied, kept strictly within the letter of his instruction. On the part of the United States this treaty was evidently acceded to in a spirit of conciliation and concession. The indemnity for injuries and losses so long before sustained, and now again acknowledged and provided for, was to be paid by them, without becoming a charge on the treasury of Spain. For territory ceded by Spain, other territory, of great value, to which our claim was believed to be well founded, was ceded by the United States, and in a quarter more interesting to her.—This cession was nevertheless [illegible] as the means of indemnifying our citizens in a considerable sum, the presumed amount of their losses. Other considerations of great weight, urged the cession of this territory by Spain. It was surrounded by the territories of the United States on every side, except on that of the ocean. Spain had lost her authority over it, and falling into the hands of adventurers connected with the voyages, it was made the means of annoying our commerce to our Union, in many of its most essential interests. By this cession then, Spain ceded a territory, of no value to her, and obtained concessions of the highest importance, by the settlement of long standing differences with the United States, affecting their respective claims and limits, and likewise relieved herself from the obligation of a treaty relating to it, which she had failed to fulfil, and also from the responsibility incident to the most flagrant and persistous abuses of her rights which she could not support her authority.

It being known that the treaty was formed under these circumstances, not a doubt was entertained that his Catholic Majesty would have ratified it, without delay. I regret to have to state, that this reasonable expectation has been disappointed; that the treaty was not ratified within the time stipulated, and has not since been ratified. As it is important that the nature and character of the

Anxious to prevent all future [illegible] arrangement with Spain, by giving to [illegible] effect to the treaty, which [illegible] been concluded, and pending the establishment of a government [illegible] Florida, which would [illegible] there, the Minister of the United [illegible] who had been recently appointed [illegible] Catholic Majesty, and to whose [illegible] station, by his government, [illegible] committed, to be exchanged for [illegible] Spain, was instructed to [illegible] letter to the Department of State [illegible] be obtained, by a public ship, [illegible] to his order for the purpose. [illegible] ed delay occurring in the ratification [illegible] Spain, he requested to be informed [illegible] cause. It was stated, in reply, [illegible] great length, the state of the negotiation [illegible] orders & explanations on [illegible] points, which were not specified [illegible] which, after delay, and that [illegible] would be dispatched to the United States, to obtain such explanations [illegible] this government. The Minister of United States offered to give [illegible] explanations on any point, on which he desired—which proposal was declined. Having communicated the [illegible] to the Department of State, [illegible] last, he was instructed, notwithstanding the disappointment & surprise [illegible] produced, to inform the government of Spain, that, if the treaty should be ratified, and transmitted here at any time before the meeting of Congress, [illegible] he received, and have the same effect as if it had been ratified in the usual manner, [illegible] was executed; the communication was made to the government of Spain, and by its answer has just been received, we are informed made acquainted for the first time with the causes which have prevented the ratification of the treaty by his Majesty. It is alledged by the minister of Spain, that this government has attempted to alter one of the principal features of the treaty, by a declaration which the Minister of the United States had been ordered to present, which declaration should deliver the ratification of this government in exchange for that on the part of which he gave notice, of the [illegible] to which that would be understood. It is further alledged that this government had recently violated, or protected, an expedition from the United States, against the province of Texas. These [illegible] are asserted as the reasons which have induced his Catholic Majesty to withhold the ratification from the treaty, to which plenipotentiaries expecting which, and that an envoy would be forthwith dispatched to the United States, to remove those allegations will justify the conclusion.

The government of Spain has not taken a view of the subject in the following form, nor has it produced any evidence which supports the allegations.

It will be seen by the documents hereafter herewith, that the [illegible] mentioned relates to a claim of the [illegible] jesty, in Florida, which it is understood had [illegible] all the late negotiations, and [illegible] till then had been ungranted, with the intention of the parties to the [illegible] latter grants, and that clause [illegible] for that express purpose, and no other. The date of these grants is known; but it was understood by the [illegible] terior to that inserted in the treaty, deed, it [illegible] obvious to [illegible] that provision in the treaty [illegible] effect of annulling these grants, [illegible] be altogether nugatory. [illegible] after the treaty was concluded [illegible] tified by this government, [illegible] was received that these grants [illegible] anterior date to that fixed by the treaty, and that they would not be affected by it. The [illegible] of such a case, so inconsistent with the intention of the parties, [illegible] ing of the article, indicated the [illegible] ment to demand an explanation on the subject, which was immediately [illegible] ed, and which corresponded with the [illegible] statement. With respect to the [illegible] act alledged, that this grant had been tolerated or protected against Texas, it is utterly void of foundation. Every discontent has [illegible] variably been given to such an attempt within the limits of the United States, as is fully evinced by the proceedings of the government, and the decisions of the courts. There has been, however, to apprehend, in the [illegible] last summer, that some adventurers connected with the voyages, entertained views of this nature, but the attention of the constituted authorities of the country was immediately directed to them, and it is known that their enterprises [illegible] whatever it might be, [illegible] ed.

These facts will, it is presumed, satisfy every impartial mind of the [illegible] government of Spain in this respect. Cause for declining to ratify the treaty, concluded on the basis of the instructions, is obliged to conclude that in all its stipulations, it was entered into with the true intent and meaning of both parties. Each party is bound to the faithful execution of it. One could act it aside [illegible] one of the other, there could be no rule to govern any rules applicable

Anxious to prevent all future disagreement with Spain, by giving the most prompt effect to the treaty, which has been thus concluded, and particularly by the establishment of a government in Florida, which would preserve order there, the Minister of the United States, who had been recently appointed to his Catholic Majesty, and to whom the ratification, by his government, had been committed, to be exchanged for that of Spain, was instructed to transmit the latter to the Department of State as soon as obtained, by a public ship subjected to his order for the purpose. Unexpected delay occurring in the ratification, by Spain, he requested to be informed of the cause. It was stated, in reply, that the great importance of the subject, and a desire to obtain explanations on certain points, which were not specified, had produced the delay, and that an Envoy would be dispatched to the United States, to obtain such explanations of this government. The Minister of the United States offered to give full explanation on any point, on which it might be desired—which proposal was declined. Having communicated this result to the Department of State, in August last, he was instructed, notwithstanding the disappointment & surprise which it produced, to inform the government of Spain, that, if the treaty should be ratified, and transmitted here at any time before the meeting of Congress, it would be received, and have the same effect as if it had been ratified in due time. This order was executed; the authorized communication was made to the government of Spain, and by its answer, which has just been received, we are officially made acquainted for the first time, with the causes which have prevented the ratification of the treaty by his Catholic Majesty. It is alledged by the Minister of Spain, that this government had attempted to alter one of the principal articles of the treaty, by a declaration, which the Minister of the United States had been ordered to present, when he should deliver the ratification by his government in exchange for that of Spain; and of which he gave notice, explanatory of the sense in which that article was understood. It is further alledged, that this government had recently tolerated, or protected, an expedition from the United States, against the province of Texas. These two imputed acts, are stated as the reasons which have induced his Catholic Majesty to withold his ratification from the treaty, to obtain explanations of especting which, it is repeated that an envoy would be forthwith dispatched to the United States.—How far these allegations will justify the conduct of the government of Spain, will appear on a view of the following facts, and the evidence which supports them.

It will be seen by the documents transmitted herewith, that the declaration mentioned relates to a clause in the 8th article, concerning certain grants of land, recently made by his Catholic Majesty, in Florida, which it was understood had conveyed all the lands, which till then had been ungranted. It was the intention of the parties to annul these latter grants, and that clause was drawn for that express purpose, and for no other. The date of these grants was unknown; but it was understood to be posterior to that inserted in the article; indeed, it must be obvious to all, that, if that provision in the treaty had not the effect of annulling these grants, it would be altogether nugatory. Immediately after the treaty was concluded and ratified by this government, notification was received that these grants were of an anterior date to that fixed on by the treaty, and that they would not, of course, be affected by it. The mere possibility of such a case, so inconsistent with the intention of the parties, and the meaning of the article, induced this government to demand an explanation on the subject, which was immediately granted, and which corresponds with this statement. With respect to the other act alledged, that this government had tolerated or protected an expedition against Texas, it is utterly without foundation. Every discountenance has invariably been given to every such attempt within the limits of the United States, as is fully evinced by the acts of the government, and the proceedings of the courts. There being cause however, to apprehend, in the course of the last summer, that some adventurers entertained views of the kind suggested, the attention of the constituted authorities in that quarter was immediately drawn to them, and it is known that the project, whatever it might be, has utterly failed.

These facts will, it is presumed, satisfy every impartial mind, that the government of Spain had no justifiable cause for declining to ratify the treaty. A treaty, concluded in conformity with instructions, is obligatory, in good faith, in all its stipulations, according to the true intent and meaning of the parties. Each party is bound to ratify it. It cannot set it aside, without the consent of the other, there would be no longer any rules applicable to such transactions. By this proceeding, the government of Spain has rendered to the United States a new and very serious injury. It has been stated that a Minister would be sent, to ask certain explanations of this government. But, if such were desired, why were they not asked within the time limited for the ratification? Is it contemplated to open a new negociation respecting any of the articles or conditions of the treaty? If that were done, to what consequences might it not lead. At what time, and in what manner, would a new negociation terminate? By this proceeding, Spain has formed a relation between the two countries which will justify any measures on the part of the United States, which a strong sense of injury, and a proper regard for the rights and interests of the nation may dictate. In the course to be pursued, these objects should be constantly held in view, and have their due weight. Our national honour must be maintained, and a new and distinguished proof be afforded, of that regard for justice and moderation which has invariably governed the councils of this free people. It must be obvious to all, that if the United States had been desirous of making conquests, or had been even willing to aggrandize themselves in that way, they could have had no inducement to form this treaty. They would have much cause for gratulation at the course which has been pursued by Spain. An ample field for ambition is open before them. But such a career is not consistent with the principles of their government nor the interests of the nation.

From a full view of all circumstances, it is submitted to the consideration of Congress, whether it will not be proper for the United States to carry the conditions of the treaty into effect in the same manner as if it had been ratified by Spain, claiming on their part all its advantages, and yielding to Spain all those secured to her. By pursuing this course, we shall rest on the sacred ground of right, sanctioned in the most solemn manner by Spain herself; by a treaty which she was bound to ratify; for refusing to do which she must incur the censure of other nations, even those most friendly to her; while, by confining ourselves within that limit, we cannot fail to obtain their well merited approbation. We must have peace on a frontier where we have been so long disturbed; our citizens must be indemnified for losses so long since sustained, and for which indemnity has been so unjustly withheld from them. Accomplishing these great objects, we obtain all that is desirable.

But his Catholic Majesty has twice declared his determination to send a minister to the United States, to ask explanations on certain points, and to give them, respecting his delay to ratify the treaty. Shall we act, by taking the ceded territory, and proceeding to execute the other conditions of the treaty, before this minister arrive and is heard? This is a case which forms a strong appeal to the candor, the magnanimity of this people. Much is due to courtesy between nations. By a short delay we shall lose nothing; for, resting on the ground of immutable truth and justice, we cannot be divested from our purpose. It ought to be presumed, that the explanations which may be given to the minister of Spain, will be satisfactory, and produce the desired result. In any event, the delay for the purpose mentioned, being a further manifestation of the sincere desire to terminate in a friendly manner, all differences with Spain, cannot fail to be duly appreciated by his Catholic Majesty, as well as by other powers. It is submitted, therefore, whether it will not be proper to make the law, proposed for carrying the conditions of the treaty into effect, should it be adopted, conditional; to suspend its operation upon the responsibility of the Executive, in such manner as to afford an opportunity for such friendly explanations as may be desired, during the present session of the Congress.

I communicate to Congress a copy of the treaty and of the instructions to the minister of the United States at Madrid, respecting it; if his correspondence with the minister of Spain, and of such other documents as may be necessary to give a full view of the subject.

In the course which the Spanish government have, on this occasion thought proper to pursue, it is satisfactory to know, that they have not been countenanced by any other European power. On the contrary, the opinion and wishes, both of France and Great Britain, have not been withheld either from the United States or from Spain, and have been unequivocal in favour of the ratification. There is also reason to believe, that the sentiments of the imperial government of Russia, have been the same, and that they have also been made known to the Cabinet of Madrid.

In the civil war existing between Spain and the Spanish provinces in this hemisphere, the greatest care has been taken to enforce the laws intended to preserve an impartial neutrality. Our ports have continued to be equal, open to both parties, and on the same condition, and our citizens have been equally restrained from interfering in favor of either to the prejudice of the other. The progress of the war, however, has operated manifestly in favour of the Colonies. Buenos Ayres still maintains unshaken the independence which it declared in 1816, and has enjoyed since 1810. Like success has also lately attended Chili and the provinces north of the La Plata, bordering on it; and likewise Venezuela.

This contest, late from its commencement, been very interesting to other powers, and to none more so than the United States. A virtuous people may and will continue themselves within the limits of a strict neutrality; but it is not in their power to behold a conflict so vitally important to their neighbours, without the sensibility and sympathy which naturally belong to such a case. It has been the steady purpose of this government, to prevent that feeling leading to excess; and it is very gratifying to have it in my power to state, that so strong has been the sense, throughout the whole community, of what was due to the character and obligations of the nation, that few examples of a contrary kind have occurred.

The distance of the colonies from the parent country, and the great extent of their population and resources, give them advantages which, it was anticipated, at a very early period, would be difficult for Spain to surmount. The steadiness, consistency and success with which they have pursued their object, as evinced more particularly by the undisturbed sovereignty which Buenos Ayres has so long enjoyed, evidently give them a strong claim to the favourable consideration of other nations. These sentiments on the part of the United States, have not been withheld from other powers, with whom it is desirable to act in concert. Should it become manifest to the world, that the efforts of Spain to subdue those provinces, will be fruitless, it may be presumed that the Spanish government itself will give up the contest. In producing such a determination, it cannot be doubted that the opinion of friendly powers, who have taken no part in the controversy, will have their influence.

It is of the highest importance to our national character, and indispensable to the morality of our citizens, that all violations of our neutrality should be prevented. No door should be left open for the evasion of our laws; no opportunity afforded to any who may be disposed to take advantage of it, to compromise the interest or honor of the nation. It is submitted, therefore, to the consideration of Congress, whether it may not be advisable to revise the laws, with a view to this desirable result.

It is submitted, also, whether it may not be advisable to designate by law, the several ports or places along the coast at which, only, foreign ships of war and privateers may be admitted. The difficulty of sustaining the regulations of our commerce, and of other important interests from abuse, without such designation, furnishes a strong motive for this measure.

At the time of the negociation for the renewal of the commercial convention between the United States and Great Britain a hope is been entertained that an article might have been agreed upon, mutually satisfactory to both countries, regulating, upon principles of justice and reciprocity, the commercial intercourse between the United States and th British possessions as well in the West Indies as upon the continent of North America. The plenipotentiaries of the two governments, not having been able to come to an agreement on this important interest, those of the United States reserved for the consideration of this government the proposals which had been presented to them as the ultimate offer on the part of the British government and which they were not authorized to accept. On this interesting subject, they were examined with due deliberation, the result of which was a new effort to direct the views of the British government. The minister of the United States was instructed to make a further proposal, which has not been accepted. It was, however, declined in an amicable manner. I recommend to the consideration of Congress whether further prohibitory provisions in the laws relating to the trade in question may not be expedient. It is seen with interest, that although it has not been practicable, as yet, to agree in any arrangement of this important branch of their commerce, such is the disposition of the parties that each will view any regulations, which the other may make respecting it, in the most friendly light.

By the 5th article of the convention concluded on the 20th Oct. 1818, it was stipulated that the differences which had arisen between the two governments, with regard to the true intent and meaning of the 5th article of the treaty of Ghent, in relation to the carrying away, by British officers, of negroes from the United States, at the ratification of the treaty of peace, should be referred to the decision of some friendly sovereign or state, to be named for that purpose. The minister of the United States has been instructed to name to the British government a foreign sovereign, the common friend to both parties, for the decision of the question. The answer of that government to the proposal, not yet received, will indicate the course to be pursued on the part of the United States.

Although the pecuniary embarrassments which affected various parts of the United States during the latter part of the preceding year, have, during the present, been considerably augmented, and will continue to exist, the receipts into the treasury, to the 30th of September last, have amounted to 15,000,000. After defraying the current expenses of the government including the interest and reimbursement of the public debt, payable to that period, amounting to $18,250,000, there remained in the treasury on that day more than $2,500,000, which, with the sums remaining due from the remainder of the year, will exceed the current demands upon the Treasury for the same period.

The causes which have tended to diminish the public receipts, could not fail to have a corresponding effect upon the revenue which has accrued upon imposts and tonnage, during the three first quarters of the present year. It is however ascertained that the duties which have been secured during that period, exceed $18,000,000, and those of the whole year will probably amount to 23,000,000.

For the probable receipts of the next year, I refer you to the statements which will be transmitted from the Treasury, which will enable you to judge whether further provision be necessary.

The great reduction in the price of the principal articles of domestic growth, which has occurred during the present year and the consequent fall in the price of labor, apparently so favourable to the success of domestic manufactures, have not shielded them against other causes adverse to their progress, which the pecuniary embarrassments which have so deeply affected the commercial interests of the nation, have been no less adverse to our manufacturing establishments, in several sections of the Union.

The great reduction of the currency which the banks have been constrained to make, in order to continue specie payments, and the vitiated character of it where such reductions have not been attempted, instead of placing within the reach of these establishments the pecuniary aid necessary to avail themselves of the advantages resulting from the reduction of the prices of the raw materials and of labor, have compelled the banks to withdraw from them a portion of the capital heretofore advanced to them. That aid which has been refused by the banks, has not been obtained from other sources, owing to the loss of individual confidence, from the failures which have recently occurred in some of our principal commercial cities.

An additional cause of the depression of these establishments, may probably be found in the pecuniary embarrassments which have recently affected those countries, with which our commerce has been principally prosecuted.

Their manufactures, for the want of a ready or profitable market at home, have been shipped by the manufacturers to the United States, and, in many instances, sold at a price below their current value at the place of manufacture. Although this practice may, from its nature, be considered temporary or contingent, it is not on that account less injurious in its effects. Uniformity in the demand and price of an article, is highly desirable to the domestic manufacturer.

It is deemed of great importance to give encouragement to our domestic manufacturers—to what manner the evils adverted to may be remedied, and how far it may be practicable, in other respects, to afford to them further encouragement, paying due regard to all the other great interests of the nation, is submitted to the wisdom of Congress.

The survey of the coast for the establishment of fortifications, is now nearly completed, and considerable progress has been made in the construction of materials for the construction of fortifications in the Gulph of Mexico and in the Chesapeake Bay. The works on the eastern bank of the Potomac, below Alexandria, and on the Penpatch in the Delaware, are much advanced; and it is expected that the fortification at the Narrows, in the harbour of New York, will be completed the present year.—To derive all the advantage, contemplated from the fortifications it was necessary that they should be judiciously planned and constructed with a view to permanence. The progress hitherto has therefore been slow, but as the difficulties, in parts heretofore the least explored and known, are surmounted, it will, in future, be more rapid. As soon as the survey of the coast is completed, which, it is expected, will be done early in the next spring, the engineers employed in it will proceed to examine, for like purposes, the northern and north-western frontiers.

The troops intended to occupy a station at the mouth of the St. Peters, on the Missisipi, have established themselves there; and those which were ordered to the mouth of the Yellow Stone, on the Missouri, have ascended that river to the Council Bluffs, where they will remain until next spring, when they will proceed to the place of their destination. I have the satisfaction to state, that this measure has been attended in amity with the Indian tribes, and that it promises to produce in regard to them, all the advantages which were contemplated by it.

Such progress has likewise been made in the construction of ships of war, and in the collection of timber and other materials for ship building, that it is not doubted that our navy will soon be augmented to the footing provided for by law.

The Board, consisting of engineers and naval officers, have not yet made their final report of sites for two naval depots, as contemplated according to the resolutions of March 20th, 1818, & April 20th, 1818, but they have examined the coast therein designated, and their report is expected in the next month.

For the protection of our commerce in the Mediterranean, along the southern Atlantic coast, in the Pacific and Indian oceans, it has been found necessary to maintain a strong naval force, which it seems proper for the present to mention. There is much reason to believe, that if any portion of the squadron heretofore stationed in the Mediterranean should be withdrawn, our intercourse with the powers bordering on that sea would be much interrupted, if not altogether broken off. Algiers has been the growth of a spirit of piracy, in the other quarters mentioned, by adventurers from every country, in abuse of the friendly flags which they have assumed, that for the protection of our commerce, would be in abandon it as a prey to their rapacity. Due attention has likewise been paid to the suppression of the slave trade, in compliance with a law of the last session. Orders have been issued to the commanders of all our public ships to seize vessels navigated under our flag, engaged in that trade, and to bring them in, to be proceeded against in the manner prescribed by that law. It is hoped that these vigorous measures, supported by like acts by other nations, will soon terminate a commerce so disgraceful to the civilized world.

In the execution of the duty imposed by those acts, and of a high trust connected with it, it is with deep regret I have to state the loss which has been sustained by the death of Commodore Perry. His gallantry in a brilliant exploit, in the late war, added to the renown of his country. His death is deplored as a national misfortune.

dis-
tions. By this proceeding, the govern ment of Spain has rendered to the Unit-d States a new and very serious injury.
It has been stated that a Minister would be sent, to ask certain explanations of this government. But, if such were desired, why were they not asked within the time limited for the ratification? Is it contemplated to open a new negocia-tion respecting any of the articles or conditions of the treaty? If that were done, to what consequences might it not lead.
At what time, and in what manner, would a new negociation terminate? By this proceeding, Spain has formed a relation between the two countries which will justify any measures on the part of the United States, which a strong sense of injury, and a proper regard for the rights and interests of the nation may dictate. In the course to be pursued, these objects should be constantly held in view, and have their due weight. Our national honour must be maintained, and a new and distinguished proof be afforded, of that regard for justice and moderation which has invariably governed the councils of this free people. It must be obvious to all, that if the United States had been desirous of making conquests, or had been even willing to ag-grandize themselves in that way, they could have had no inducement to form this treaty. They would have much cause for gratulation at the course which has been pursued by Spain. An ample field for ambition is open before them.
But such a career is not consistent with the principles of their government nor the interests of the nation.

From a full view of all circumstances, it is submitted to the consideration of Congress, whether it will not be proper for the United States to carry the condiions of the treaty into effect, in the same manner as if it had been ratified by Spain, claiming on their part all its advantages, and yielding to Spain all those secured to her. By pursuing this course, we shall rest on the sacred ground of right, sanctioned in the most solemn manner by Spain herself; by a treaty which she was bound to ratify; for refusing to do which she must incur the censure of other nations, even those most friendly to her; while, by confining ourselves within that limit, we cannot fail to obtain their well merited approbation.
We must have peace on a frontier where we have been so long disturbed; our citizens must be indemnified for losses so long since sustained, and for which indemnity has been so unjustly withheld from them. Accomplishing these great objects, we obtain all that is desirable.

But his Catholic Majesty has twice declared his determination to send a minister to the United States, to ask explanations on certain points, and to give them, respecting his delay to ratify the treaty. Shall we act, by taking the ceded territory, and proceeding to execute the other conditions of the treaty, before this minister arrive and is heard?
This is a case which forms a strong appeal to the candor, the magnanimity of this people. Much is due to courtesy between nations. By a short delay we shall lose nothing; for, resting on the ground of immutable truth and justice, we cannot be diverted from our purpose.
It ought to be presumed, that the explanations, which may be given to the minister of Spain, will be satisfactory, and produce the desired result. In any event, the delay for the purpose mentioned, being a further manifestation of the sincere desire to terminate in a friendly manner, all differences with Spain, cannot fail to be duly appreciated by his Catholic Majesty, as well as by other powers. It is submitted, therefore, whe ther it will not be proper to make the law, prop[illegible] for carrying the conditions of the treaty into effect, should it be adopted, conditional; to suspend its operation upon the responsibility of the Executive, in such manner as to afford an opportunity for such friendly explanations as may be desired, during the present session of the Congress.

I communicate to Congress a copy of the treaty and of the instructions to the minister of the United States at Madrid, respecting it; it his correspondence with the minister of Spain, and of such other documents as may be necessary to give a full view of the subject.

In the course which the Spanish Government have, on this occasion thought proper to pursue, it is satisfactory to know, that they have not been countenanced by any other European power.
On the contrary, the opinion and wishes, both of France and Great Britain, have not been withheld either from the United States or from Spain, and have been unequivocal in favour of the ratification.
There is also reason to believe, that the sentiments of the imperial government of Russia, have been the same, and that they have also been made known to the Cabinet of Madrid.

In the civil war existing between Spain and the Spanish provinces in this hemisphere, the greatest care has been taken to enforce the laws intended to preserve an impartial neutrality. Our ports have continued to be equally open to both parties, and on the same condition, and our citizens have been equally restrained from interfering in favor of either to the prejudice of the other. The progress of the war, however, has operated manifestly in favour of the Colonies. Buenos Ayres still maintains unshaken the independence which it declared in 1816, and has enjoyed since 1810. Like success has also lately attended Chili and the provinces north of the La Plata, bordering on it; and likewise Venezuela.

This contest, has from its commencement, been very interesting to other powers, and to none more than the United States. A virtuous people may and will confine themselves within the limits of a strict neutrality; but it is not in their power to behold a conflict so vitally important to their neighbours, without the sensibility and sympathy which naturally belong to such a case. It has been the steady purpose of this government, to prevent that feeling leading to excess; and it is very gratifying to have it in my power to state, that so strong has been the sense, throughout the whole community, of what was due to the character and obligations of the nation, that few examples of a contrary kind have occurred.

The distance of the colonies from the parent country, and the great extent of their population and resources, give them advantages which, it was anticipated, at a very early period, it would be difficult for Spain to surmount. The steadiness, consistency and success with which they have pursued their object, as evinced more particularly by the undisturbed sovereignty which Buenos Ayres has so long enjoyed, evidently give them a strong claim to the favourable consideration of other nations. These sentiments on the part of the United States, have not been withheld from other powers, with whom it is desirable to act in concert. Should it become manifest to the world, that the efforts of Spain to subdue those provinces, will be fruitless, it may be presumed that the Spanish government itself will give up the contest.
In producing such a determination, it cannot be doubted that the opinion of friendly powers, who have taken no part in the controversy, will have their influence.

It is of the highest importance to our national character, and indispensable to the morality of our citizens, that all violations of our neutrality should be prevented. No door should be left open for the evasion of our laws; no opportunity afforded to any who may be disposed to take advantage of it, to compromise the interest or honor of the nation. It is submitted, therefore, to the consideration of Congress, whether it may not be advisable to revise the laws, with a view to this desirable result.

It is submitted, also, whether it may not be advisable to designate by law, the several ports or places along the coast at which, only, foreign ships of war and privateers may be admitted. The dificulty of sustaining the regulations of our commerce, and of other important interests from abuse, without such designation, furnishes a strong motive for this measure.

At the time of the negociation for the renewal of the commercial convention between the United States and Great Britain a hope was been expressed that an article might have been agreed upon, mutually satisfactory to both countries, regulating, upon principles of justice and reciprocity, the commercial intercourse between the United States and th. British possessions as well in the West Indies as upon the continent of North America. The plenipotentiaries of the two governments not having been able to come to an agreement on this important interest, those of the United States reserved for the consideration of this government the proposals which had been presented to them as the ultimate offer on the part of the British government and which they were not authorized to accept. On their transmission here they were examined with due deliberation, the result of which was a new effort to meet the views of the British government.
The minister of the United States was instructed to make a further proposal, which has not been accepted. It was, however, declined in an amicable manner. I recommend to the consideration of Congress whether further prohibitory provisions in the law relating to this intercourse, may not be expedient. Happy to meet with interest that although it has not been practicable, as yet, to agree in any arrangement of this important branch of their commerce, such is the disposition of the parties that each will view any regulations, which the other may make respecting it, in the most friendly light.

By the 5th article of the convention concluded on the 20th Oct. 1818, it was stipulated that the differences which had arisen between the two governments, with regard to the true interand meaning of the 5th article of the treaty of ghent, in relation to the carrying away, by British officers, of slaves from the United States, after the ratification of the treaty of peace, should be referred to the decision of some friendly sovereign or state, to be named for that purpose. The minister of the United States has been instructed to name to the British government a foreign sovereign, the common friend to both parties, for the decision of the question. The answer of that government to the proposal, when received, will indicate the further measures to be pursued on the part of the United States.

Although the pecuniary embarrassments which affected various parts of the Union during the latter part of the preceding year, have, during the present, been considerably augmented, and will continue to exist, the receipts into the treasury, to the 30th of September last, have amounted to 15.000,000. After defraying the current expenses of the government, including the interest and reimbursement of the public debt, payable to that period, amounting to $18,200,- 000, there remained in the treasury more than $2.500,000, which, with the sums recoverable during the remainder of the year, will exceed the current demands upon the Treasury for the same period.

The causes which have tended to diminish the public receipts, could not fail to have a corresponding effect upon the revenue which has accrued upon imports and tonnage, during the three first quarters of the present year. It is however ascertained that the duties which have been secured during that period, exceed $18, 000,000, and those of the whole year will probably amount to 23,000,000.

For the probable receipts of the next year, I refer you to the statements which will be transmitted from the Treasury, which will enable you to judge whether further provisions be necessary.

The great reduction in the price of the principal articles of domestic growth, which has occurred during the present year, and the consequent fall in the price of labor, apparently so favorable to the success of domestic manufactures, have not decided them against which seems adverse to their prosperity. The pecuniary embarrassments which have so deeply affected the commercial interests of the nation, have been no less adverse to our manufacturing establishments, in several instances in the Union.

The great reduction of the currency which the banks have been constrained to make, in order to continue specie payments, and the vitiated character of it where such reductions have not been attempted, instead of placing within the reach of these establishments the pecuniary aid necessary to avail themselves of the advantages resulting from the reduction of the price of the raw materials and of labor, have compelled the banks to withdraw from them a portion of the capital heretofore advanced to them. That aid which has been refused by the banks, has not been obtained from other sources, owing to the loss of individual confidence, from the failures which have recently occurred in some of our principal commercial cities.

An additional cause of the depression of these establishments, may probably be found in the pecuniary embarrassments which have recently affected those countries, with which our commerce has been principally prosecuted.

Their manufactures, for the want of a ready or profitable market at home, have been shipped by the manufacturers to the United States, and, in many instances, sold at a price below their current value at the place of manufacture. Although this practice may, from its nature, be limited in its temporary or continued, it is seen that account less injurious in its effects. Uniformity in the demand and price of an article, is highly desirable to the domestic manufacturer.

It is deemed of great importance to give encouragement to our domestic manufactures—to what manner the evils adverted to may be remedied, and how far it may be practicable, in other respects, to afford to them further encouragement, paying due regard to the other great interests of the nation, is submitted to the wisdom of Congress.

The survey of the coast for the establishment of fortifications, is now nearly completed, and considerable progress has been made in the selection of materials for the construction of fortifications in the Gulph of Mexico and in the Chesapeake Bay. The works on the eastern bank of the Potomac, below Alexandria, and on the Pesquich in the Delaware, are much advanced, and it is expected that the fortification at the Narrows, in the harbour of New York, will be completed the present year—To derive all the advantages contemplated from the fortifications, it was necessary that they should be judiciously located and constructed with a view to permanence. The progress hitherto has, therefore, been slow, but as the difficulties, in parts heretofore the least explored, are known, are surmounted, it will, in future, be more rapid.
As soon as the survey of the coast is completed, which, it is expected, will be done early in the next year, the engineers ought to, and will proceed to examine, for like purposes, the northern and north-western frontier.

The troops intended to occupy a station at the mouth of the St. Peters, on the Mississippi, have established themselves; and those which were ordered to the mouth of the Yellow Stone, on the Missouri, have ascended that river to the Council Bluffs, where they will remain until next spring, when they will proceed to the place of their destination. I have the satisfaction to state, that this measure has been executed in amity with the Indian tribes, and that it promises to produce in regard to them, all the advantages which were contemplated.

Much progress has likewise been made in the construction of ships of war, and in the collection of timber and other materials for ship building. It is not doubted that our navy will soon be augmented to the footing provided for by law.

The Board, consisting of engineers and naval officers, have not yet made their final report of sites for two naval depots, as instructed according to the resolutions of [illegible] 20th, 1818, but they have examined the coast therein designated, and their report is expected in the next month.

For the protection of our commerce in the Mediterranean, along the southern Atlantic coast, in the Pacific and Indian oceans, it has been found necessary to maintain a strong naval force, which it seems proper for the present to keep employed. It is much to be wished, that if any portion of the squadron heretofore stationed in the Mediterranean should be withdrawn, our intercourse with the powers bordering on that sea would be much interrupted, if not altogether destroyed. Even now, has been the growth [illegible] a spirit of piracy, in the obscurer quarters mentioned, by adventurers from every country, in abuse of the friendly flags which they have assumed, that not to protect our commerce there would be to abandon it entirely to their rapacity. Due attention has likewise been paid to the suppression of the slave trade, in compliance with a law of the last session. Orders have been given to the commanders of all our public ships now in the seas navigated under our flag, engaged in that trade, and to bring them in,
to be proceeded against in the manner prescribed by that law. It is hoped that these vigorous measures, supported by like acts by other nations, will soon terminate a commerce so disgraceful to the civilized world.

In the execution of the duty imposed by those acts, and of a high trust connected with it, it is with deep regret I have to state the loss which has been sustained by the death of Commodore Perry. His gallantry in a brilliant exploit, in the late war, added to the renown of his country. His death is deplored as a national misfortune.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Catskill Recorder.

The following observations respecting bots in horses, were communicated and read before the agricultural society for the county of Greene, in Dec. 1817, and lately forwarded to us by their author for publication.

OBSERVATIONS ON BOTS.

As early as the summer of the year 1801, I began a course of observations and experiments on the bots, a worm that infests the bowels of the horse, and often proves fatal to that useful animal. I took a large bot immediately after it was discharged from my horse, and enclosed it in dry horse dung and put it into a bottle, and stopped it tight, and had the satisfaction to see it transform into a chrysalis in the course of three days, in which state it continued about 5 weeks, and then was hatched into a horse-bee or nitter. I then carried the bottle to my horse and set the fly at liberty, and she immediately began to deposit her nits on the legs of the horse.—The fly had not been with any other of her kind, and in what manner the nits had been fecundated was a mystery to me; but I soon found that the nits were deposited on the hair of the horse. The male fly does not make its appearance until the latter part of August, and has every appearance of the female fly, except it is somewhat smaller, and has not the tail nor sting of the female. You will frequently see two male flies in September or October, contending for the chance of impregnating the nits, and they frequently engage and fight with the greatest obstinacy, in order to obtain their favourite employment. The nits usually remain about eight days after impregnation before the bot is fit to enter the bowels of the horse, at which time they make a small hole in the end of the nit; but they frequently remain in the nit for weeks and even months after they are produced; yet if the lips or tongue of the horse, covered with warm saliva, come in contact with the nit, the bot immediately leaves the nit & adheres to the tongue and is swallowed with the food of the horse. You may [illegible] of your hand with warm [illegible] it to the nits on your [illegible]nds at a time, and naked eye a num[illegible] your hand about [illegible] a magnifying [illegible]de the bots, it [illegible]e the nits off [illegible] a week in the [illegible]ctober: and [illegible]ll never be [illegible]ave tried a [illegible]n order to [illegible]vels of the [illegible]thing to [illegible]hat a day [illegible]the blue[illegible]ven to a [illegible] a great [illegible]els. The [illegible]and every [illegible]y to pro[illegible]. [illegible]LIN.

Augusta.—Letters from Augusta, Georgia, of 16th instant, state, that there was an extensive and distressing fire in that city, on the night of the 15th. One of the letters mentions that between 20 and 30 houses and stores were destroyed; and another says, that all the buildings on Centre street, between the bay and Reynolds-street, were consumed, excepting the counting house of Messrs. Leigh and Cantelou, and a small tenement opposite.

The two greatest planters of trees in Perthshire, and perhaps in Scotland, are the Duke of Athol, and the Earl of Breadalbane; each of these noblemen, we are informed, has planted 50,000,000 trees!

(Trial of Quia Pei, concluded.)

It became necessary, however, again to refer to the prisoner, in order to enable him to understand and explain the circumstances which appeared still to bear against him, and in particular the share which he seemed to admit that he had in the latter part of the dreadful business. The prisoner's answer, or rather statement, on this head, was, that when the men was killed, and they were proceeding to devour his body, they called him and invited him to partake; but he refused, saying it was thought fatal in his country to eat human flesh; and that those who did it became inevitably mad. He was not a native of Quia Pei's country, but of a country bordering on it.

After this further denial of what was supposed to have been admitted, the Court thought it not right to put any further questions to the prisoner.

No further evidence was produced on the part of the prosecution.

The prisoner was informed, that it was now the time for him to state to the Court what he had to say in his defence.

The interpreters having communicated with the prisoner, gave as his answer on this head—that he had nothing to say.

One of the Jury expressed a doubt whether the prisoner's meaning might be that he had nothing to say to the murder, or nothing to say to the court.

This point being interpreted to the prisoner for his explanation, he said he had nothing to say to the murder, and that he had nothing to say to the court.

The Chief Justice then summed up the evidence in a luminous manner.

The Jury retired, and after an absence of half an hour, returned their verdict—"Guilty of assisting."

The Chief Justice informed them, that this verdict could not be received; the indictment charged the prisoner, not as assisting, but as the actual perpetrator of the murder, and as such alone the only verdict, therefore, that the Jury could regularly give, or that the Court could receive, was, simply, one of guilty or not guilty. The Chief Justice said that although he conceived that he had already marked, as distinctly as he could without appearing to dictate to the Jury his sense of the insufficiency of the evidence to convict the prisoner, he thought it right now, least there should be any misconception, to say so expressly. It was not sufficient.

The Jury retired again, and returned in less than half an hour, giving their verdict Guilty.

The Chief Justice observed, that on receiving this verdict, it would be incumbent on him, in ordinary course of his duty, forthwith to pass sentence of death upon the prisoner, in one of the most awful forms prescribed by law; but the same statute which enjoined that course of proceeding, gave a power to to Judge to postpone the judgment if he should see sufficient cause. After the opinion that he (the Chief Justice) had expressed of the insufficiency of the evidence, he would act very inconsistently with himself if he did not avail himself of this power; he therefore postponed the judgment.

Thomas Cole, the foreman of the jury, was a white man, the other jurors were colored men of the settlement.

Note—It was suggested after the trial, that an extraordinary good understanding appeared to exist between the native interpreter (Cockeye) and the prisoner Pei. Particular inquiry was in consequence made to ascertain whether any previous intimacy had existed between them. It was soon said, it was possible that the might have communicated in the hour of relaxation when all the prisoners are intermixed for their airings. Cockeye having been a prisoner for some time in the house of Correction; but it was not likely that any arrangement could have been made so as to affect the interpretation of the day, as the employment of Cockeye in that capacity was altogether accidental; for he was not in attendance by subpœna, and was only found by chance after the trial had been first called on, and postponed for want of a person capable of interpreting.

On the last day of the Session, previous to the passing of the sentences on the other convicts, the Chief Justice intimated, that it was thought proper to refer the case of Pei, with his (the Chief Justice's) exception to the verdict of the Jury, and the grounds thereof, to superior authority in England. A statement of this case, with the evidence, and a copy of the indictment duly authenticated, having been soon after placed in the hands of the Governor for the purpose, the same was transmitted by his Excellency to Earl Bathurst, his Majesty's principal Secretary of State for the Colonial Department. Earl Bathurst, in consideration of the circumstances, thought it incumbent on him to recommend Pei to his Royal Highness the Prince Regent, for his Majesty's most gracious pardon. The pardon was received a few weeks since, accompanied by an official letter to his Excellency, and the prisoner was, in consequence, liberated without delay.

PROSPECTUS.

"Salus Populi, Suprema Lex."

The safety of the People the Supreme Law.

IN the motto selected, we trust the rulers and the ruled, in all countries

FROM equal freedom is cherished, will spring great and important results. RESPECTING Liberty and Property, as constitutional blessings which it is the primary object of civil society to extend and secure; and on those principles are the Constitution and Laws of England founded. Among the most essential securities the British nation doth enjoy at this day, may be ranked: the Independence of the Press. But for this auxiliary, the cautious of the liberties of the people of England would be no better than that of the Cossacks, or poor and miserable peasantry of Poland & of Germany. So valuable a privilege cannot be too highly appreciated by the people of this Province, who have hitherto displayed an honourable attachment towards its supports; and their patronage is again respectfully solicited.

In putting forth to the public—to the world, the Prospectus of a Journal, which has for its end the welfare of this Province, and most necessarily three many objects, it may be easily conceived the Editor feels impressed with the weight of the task he has undertaken. He pretends not to infallibility, but is aware he may frequently err; and can only console himself in the anticipated indulgence of a generous public.

In the first place, we wish it to be distinctly understood, that we invite discussion on all subjects connected with the immediate interests of the Country; in the expectation it be temperate in its style and language, and making a due discrimination between public and private characters. Our own observations from time to time, will be guided by these priciples; reserving always to ourselves the full and undoubted right to investigate the conduct of public men and their measures,—"nothing extenuating, nor setting down aught in malice." Those, if any such there be, who may attempt to make this journal a vehicle for detraction or malignant gratification, will be assuredly disappointed. Agricultural essays, tending to facilitate the labors of the husbandman, will be regarded among the most important which can grace our columns. This Colony, from its situation, is peculiarly adapted to agriculture, the mother of all sciences; and with its prosperity the commercial interests of the community are most intimately connected. All communications having in view the promotion of true piety & benevolence, will be thankfully received and attended to; inasmuch as in the practice of the Christian virtues, consist, in an eminent degree, the happiness of society. Assiduity shall not be wanting to collect & insert in our columns the proceedings of the House of Assembly, when in Session, from time to time; also, all articles of intelligence, foreign and domestic, as shall be thought most useful and instructive; we shall, indeed, endeavor to unite be "while cum dulce," the useful with the agreeable.—And, in short, from the grave philosopher & plodding politician to the fantastic admirer of the Muses, all will be equally entitled to attention, and shall have a corner appropriated for their chaste effusions.

The Canadian Argus and Niagara Spectator will be printed on super-royal paper, with a handsome type, and the first number issued on Thursday the 18th inst.

Subscriptions will be received at the Argus & Spectator Office.

Niagara, Nov. 10. 1819.

TERMS OF THIS GAZETTE

Four Dollars per annum; when sent by Post. Four Dollars and a Half. The Subscription to be paid in advance to the 1st of July or 1st of January. Subscribers receiving their Papers by Post, to give 2 or 3 months notice, should they wish to discontinue their subscription: Country Subscribers, who send to the office for their Papers, who discontinue their subscription, are requested to send notice to that effect, and pay up all arrears, otherwise they will still be considered as Subscribers and charged accordingly.—The Editor is obliged to insist upon this condition, several Subscribers neglecting, frequently for many months, to send for their Papers, which accumulate to an inconvenient degree, and become, if not paid for, a serious loss.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the THIRD, by the Grace of GOD of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King; Defender of the Faith:

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Counsellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to our Provincial Parliament, at our Town of York, on Thursday the ninth day of December instant, to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our Proclamation bearing date the twenty-sixth day of October last, WE thought fit to prorogue our Provincial Parliament, to the ninth day of December Instant, at which time at our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear, NOW KNOW YE that WE taking into our Royal consideration, the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid; hereby convoking and calling you, and each of you, by the Eighteenth day of January next ensuing, your meeting in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary, and herein fail not.

IN TESTIMONY whereof, WE have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed, WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this Second day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, and in the sixtieth year of our Reign.

Commercial Treaty with France.

A letter received from London says—"We understand that a commercial treaty with France is now forming, constructed on principles of the most liberal policy, and equally calculated to advance the real interests of both countries. French wines and silks, it is said, are to be admitted into this country at a lower rate of duty—and France, in return is to admit our cotton goods (which are now wholly prohibited) at a rate of duty which will render the general use extremely probable."

Fires at Constantinople, and conduct of the Turks at them.

FROM DALLAWAY'S TRAVELS IN THE LEVANT.

Fires are so frequent, that few months pass without them, and they are generally so furious, that whole districts are laid in ashes.* Houses are so soon erected, that the former appearances of the streets is speedily restored, as little alteration is ever made in their form. Notice of a fire in Constantinople, or at Galatea, is given by beating a great drum from two high towers; the night watch then patrole the streets, striking the pavement with their staves shod with iron, and crying out Yaugen war.—"There is a fire," naming the place.—The Sultan is then summoned three times, and when the conflagration has lasted one hour, he is forced to attend in person, and to bring mules with him laden with piastres, which he distributes with his own hands to the firemen, who are very inactive before his arrival.—These are armed against accidents as in London, and are equally expert & adventurous. Fires are extinguished by pulling down the adjoining houses, for the engines are very small and borne on the shoulders of two men.

The perfect resignation with which a good Musselman sees his house consumed by the flames, and himself reduced from affluence to poverty, has been often and justly remarked by others; he exclaims Allah Karim; that is "God is merciful," without apparent emotion, and has assured himself that the same Providence which hath made him poor and abject, can once more restore him to wealth, if it be his fate. As to the women, they have not the praise of such philosophy. They assemble in a groupe near the Sultan, and unmercifully load him with the bitterest revilings, particularizing his own crimes, and the errors of his government, and charging him with the cause of their present calamity. At such rencontres no crowned head need envy Sultan Selim his situation. As this is the only privileged time of conveying the voice of the people to his ears, and as women in Turkey say any thing with impunity, it is presumed that many of the fires are not accidental.

As a grand spectacle, detaching the idea of commisseration of the calamity from the present view, if the volcanic eruption be excepted, none can exceed a great fire at Constantine &c. The houses being constructed with wood, and frequently communicating with magazines filled with combustible materials, a vast column of flame, of the most luminous glow, rises from the centre, which lighting up the mosques and contiguous cypress groves, produces an effect of superior magnificence. In other cities, where the buildings are of stone, the flames are seen partially, or are overpowered with smoke.

* In 1665 seventy thousand houses were burnt and in 1783 the conflagration was so extensive as to threaten the universal destruction of the city.

The Ex-General Sarrazin has, it is said, solicited the favour not to stand in the pillory with the notorious Coignard (the Count or the convict,) and his brother, who are also condemned to the same ignominious punishment. He expresses the greatest repugnance at the idea of being associated with these two culprits. He continues in confinement at La Conciergerie, where he walks to and fro from morning until evening, with the penal code in his hand; he is going to publish a protest against his sentence, against the rejection of his appeal, and that of his petition, for a commutation of punishment.

DIED.—At Paris, aged 85 years, the Count DUPONT, Peer of France, and Commandant of the Legion of Honour. He was born at Lisbon in 1736, his father being at that time baker to the Court of Portugal. Count Dupont was at Lisbon during the memorable earth quake in 1755. The first shock buried him into the cellar of the house, where he was about to be suffocated with the ruins of the buildings which were falling above him, when a new shock drew him out of the ruins, and delivered him from danger. Having lost by this event the greater part of his fortune, he came to France, where, by his industry and probity, he amassed considerable property. He was successively Administrator of the Treasury of Accounts, Mayor of the Seventh Arrondissement of Paris and Senator and Peer of France.

MADRID, Sept. 11.

The Supreme Council of Castile, on the 10th of this month, registered an order of the King, communicated by the Duke de l'Infantado, President of the Council, and Minister of Grace and Justice, commanding the establishment in the capital of a School on the Lancasterian plan. This school is to serve as a model for all the other schools which it is the King's pleasure should be established throughout the kingdom. His Majesty has appointed the Duke de l'Infantado, the Dukes of Montemar and de Vallahermosa, the Marquis de Ceralbe de Santa Cruz, the Dukes de Medina-Celi, de St. Fernando, and others, to superintend these several establishments. He has also forbidden all tribunals, corporations, and other persons to whom the laws of the kingdom confide the care of public education, to interfere with this Lancasterian system of instruction, and has appointed Don Juan Kearney, with a salary of 16,000 reals, as director of the facultative part of the system.

Insanity.—The following curious table of the causes of insanity, as they occurred in the county and city of Cork lunatic asylum, commencing the 1st January 1798, and ending the 30th June, 1818, is from a work recently published by Dr. Halloran. There were insane patients, caused by—

Short Courtships and happy Marriages.

It is well known that there are living in Trinidad a number of negroes, brought off [how justly we do not inquire] from the American coast during the late war by Sir Alexander Cochrane, and who let themselves out for hire, like the free labourers of any other country; but these persons being men and bachelors, in Sabine war was apprehended in the island. It happened, fortunately that in the last year a ship was captured, containing only young girls, from 16 to 20 years of age; and these becoming free by the existing abolition laws, were sent to Trinidad, and being placed under the custody of discreet matrons, the American negroes were invited to see them, and a small portion of land offered to each who should marry. The proposal was highly agreeable to the men, nor did these young ladies of lauded property give themselves the airs which are sometimes observable in those who have that enviable possession in this country.—The courtship was brief and sentimental: "I'll have that little girl," says one of the wooers; I'll have that tall one, says another; and thus the whole were betrothed. When the day of marriage arrived, which was deferred at least twenty-four hours, in consideration of the feelings of the ladies, it happened some what unluckily that some of them had slipped their collars, and the enamoured bridegrooms were unable to distinguish their respective charmers. The ceremony however, proceeded. The clergyman was about to make short work of it, by requiring "these men" to take "these women" to be their wedded wives, but the governor, Sir R. Woodforde, compelled him to marry each couple separately.—The ceremony lasted about four hours, during which time some of the Bridegrooms recollected the object of their love, and discovered that others had married them. The die was however, cast, and the exchanges made none unhappy. A gentleman lately arrived from the island, who communicated the above fact, says, that he saw them frequently several months afterwards, all apparently very happy and contented with their lot, and most of the ladies looking "as ladies wish to look who love their lords."—London Cou.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

PICTOU, Oct. 18, 1819.

Caution to ship owners and emigrants.

The schooner Ann, of Banff, arrived here on Wednesday last, with about sixty passengers from Cromarty; by a paragraph lately inserted in the Inverness Journal, and well attested documents on board the Ann, it appears the above vessel was freighted by a person of the name of Colonel N. Fraser, to take in passengers at Cromarty and proceed with them to Picton; she accordingly went to Cromarty, received her passengers, and as far as was then to be seen was provisioned according to law by the freighter, (the surveyor for the port of Inverness having previously inspected them): she proceeded on the voyage, and when about a week at sea, then off the Flannel Islands was taken with a heavy gale of wind, in which she lost her foremast. She put back to Stromness, in order to be repaired, when she was boarded by an officer from one of H. M. cutters in Stromness, when on inspecting the provisions, a scene of villany of the most shameful kind was discovered.—The casks which were said to contain bread, had only two layers to each, the middle of the casks being filled with rotten potatoes, stones, earth, and straw, and other substances; on examining the beef and pork, they were in like manner found to contain a little of these articles in each end of the casks, the middle being filled with corrupted fish, and other things equally nauseous; the vessel was consequently detained, and a legal investigation took place, in the course of which it appeared—that both the owner and master of the vessel were totally ignorant of the deception, and that a person had been employed by Colonel Fraser, at Inverness, to pack the provisions in the manner described; by this investigation it appeared that there was not exceeding one month's provision on board: the bread which was stated to be 60 cwt. turned out to be about eight only, when collected; the owner was under the necessity of laying in provisions at his own expense, the freighter having previously sailed in another vessel for Picton.

From the National Intelligencer.

With an even step, both houses of congress are proceeding, by the appointment of committees, &c. to make the arrangements preparatory to the transaction of the important business which will present itself to their consideration. At the commencement of the first session of each congress, it takes some time for the new members to amalgamate sufficiently with the old leaven of congress, to be able to do business unitedly with satisfaction. To expedite this object, we have sometimes almost wished that the members lived in one great caravansera, instead of being dispersed at a distance from each other among thirty or forty boarding houses, that they might perforce be more in the society of each other, and more acquainted with each others feelings and opinions, partialities, and prejudices.

Early in the session as it is, however, two subjects of great importance, besides those embraced in the message of the president, have been already brought to the notice of the house of representatives. The first of these is the question involved in the bill for the admission of the territory of Missouri into the union, and now frequently referred to as "the Missouri slave question." By whatever name called, it yields to no question in importance, for its consequences, to none in the history of this country. We hope, being so well understood, it will be but little debated; and that what is said on the subject will be characterized by that dignity and temper which ought ever to characterize the deliberations of the congress of the United States.

The second subject is, that of the circulating medium of the country, respecting which Mr Pinckney has given notice of his intention to introduce a bill. This at least ensures to those who feel interested in such an experiment, that it will become a subject of consideration for congress, whether it is in their power to relieve the pressure under which, since the resumption of specie payments by the banks, it is acknowledged the trade and industry of the country labor. What are the particular features of Mr. P's. plan, we are not apprised; but we understand, generally, that it embraces an issue of government paper, transferable by delivery, and calculated to come in aid of specie, and of paper equivalent to specie, to increase the quantity of circulating medium, supposed now to be less than is necessary for the purposes of trade and internal intercourse.

VINCENNES, (Indiana,) Nov. 13.

Horrid Murder.—A short time since, we adverted to the frequency of crime in the western country, and copied from an Illinois paper, an account of a murder committed at the U. S. Saline. We have now the disgusting task of recording another, as brutal and barbarous as any which has stained the annals of the West. Unless more exertion is made for the conviction of the perpetrators of such deeds, the great roads in Illinois will soon rival the most dangerous parts of Italy and Germany, and travellers, as in those countries, will be obliged to go in bands, particularly armed against the murderous assaults of monsters of human shape, whose trade is robbery, and whose pastime is spilling human blood.—Three men were travelling on foot from St. Louis to Vincennes. Their names were Squires, Morris, and Wagner. At the persuasion of Wagner, they passed Lewis' Tavern, about 4 miles, and encamped in a thicket on Friday night last. In the dead of the night, Wagner rose and with a large knife cut the throat of Squires, who was an old man, and expired without struggle. The wretch then attempted the same act on Morris, but fortunately the first stab awakened him, and in the struggle the murderer seized the old man's cane, and beat Morris until he supposed him to be dead. He then robbed and left them. Morris revived, and was discovered by some travellers on Saturday, as he was strolling about the prairie in a deranged situation, who humanely conveyed him to Lewis's, where he soon recovered so as to tell the shocking story. A party immediately started in search of Squires, and found him in the thicket, dead, with his neck dreadfully mangled, and bathed in blood. He was buried as decently as circumstances would permit. Travellers, who have seen Morris, affirm that he cannot long survive.

Such is the plain narrative of this bloody business. Morris states that he had $70 in notes on the bank of Chillicothe, and $10 in silver, which are all missing. He knows nothing of the property of the old man. He describes Wagner as being a man of about 160 pounds weight, dark hair and beard, prominent mouth, and a carpenter by trade—his clothing such as is usually worn by boatmen; with a linen knapsack. It is believed he passed through Vincennes on Saturday evening last. We are sorry we cannot give a more particular description of this fiend-like villain.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 4.

Extract of a letter from a Kentuckian, dated Frankfort, Nov. 15.

"The situation of things here is such at this time, that where a person has tolerable prospects at the eastward, I should not advise him to come out here, because I really think the times more dull here than with you. Such severe and general distress was never known before in this quarter. In my former letter I gave you some idea of it, and it has grown worse since." There is but very little money in circulation, and not one third of what will pay the debts of the people. All confidence is destroyed in banks and individuals. Our legislature meets in a few days, when it is expected they will take up some expedient for relief—probably oblige creditors to take real estate at three-fourths its appraised value in payment of debts. It is considered this is the only thing that can be done to relieve us. The fact is, we have been this side the mountain too extravagant—we owe more money for foreign goods than there is in the country; and our real estate must go to make up the deficiency."

Extract of a letter dated London, Oct 9.

"The scheme adopted by our ministers, of giving land and encouragement to those who emigrate to the Cape of Good Hope, added to the melancholy accounts we have from your side, reduces the emigration to your country. Fifty thousand entered their names in one week. Our government send them out free of expence, and make other provision for them.

"The papers announce the capture of La Hache.—A paper printed at St. Thomas, dated the 14th ult. and received in Fredericksburg, Virginia, by an arrival in 13 days, announces, that about the 1st of September, Sir Gregor M'Gregor succeeded in raising 250 men, with whom he sailed for Rio de la Hache, which place they attacked & captured about the 10th. M'Gregor did not go on shore until the place was taken. After having been in possession of Rio de la Hache 5 days, the Spaniards (joined by a body of Indians) returned in considerable force, and in their turn attacked the town, which was obstinately defended. M'Gregor, as he did before at Porto-Bello, immediately repaired on board one of his vessels and made off. The unfortunate and deluded men whom he thus so shamefully abandoned, finding it useless to make any defence against such a superior force, and knowing what would be their fate if taken, resolved to follow themselves up in the Fort, which they accordingly did.

"M'Gregor had returned to one of the ports of St. Domingo, and was refused admission, but on the day previous to our informant's departure from Aux Cayes it was understood there that he had obtained permission. It is stated that M'Gregor intends to join Aury."

It was stated in our paper of Monday, that, on Sunday morning last, the sloop Hope, Captain George Wiltsie, of Fishkill, was upset by a flaw of wind in the Highlands, and that Mrs. Cheeseman of Long Island, Miss Dubois of Fishkill, and a colored woman were drowned. The Poughkeepsie Observer, in addition to these particulars, states, that after the vessel had been drifting an hour, Mr. & Mrs. Holden of New York, and a young man were cut out of the after cabin, and Mr. C. P. Luyster and Miss Cooper out of the main cabin. It is also said, that a Troy and a New-Paltz Sloop passed just as the Hope upset, but offered no assistance. The latter was hailed for aid, but coolly and cruelly answered, that she had no time. To the exertions of Captain Harris, of the sloop Dutchess of Poughkeepsie, were the survivors indebted, under Providence, for their preservation. The Passengers on board, beside those already named, were Jacob G. Van Wyck, Tunis Wiltsie, John Scouten, and two or three strangers, whose names are not recollected.

Fire at Rochester.—The Palmyra Register of the 8th inst. mentions, that, on the morning of the 5th, the printing office of the Rochester Gazette, two stores, a dwelling house, and a saddler's shop were destroyed by fire in the village of Rochester. The fire originated in the saddler's shop.

The Savannah [illegible] inst. remarks, that a [illegible] rived there on the [illegible] Augustine, mentions that [illegible] tions were making for the [illegible] place. The fort, it is said, was undergoing a complete repair. A contract, for supplying the garrison with provisions, had been made at Havanna, and transferred to a Merchant in Charleston; and one cargo had already been safely delivered.

From New Orleans.—A letter from New Orleans of the 10th ult. has been received in Norfolk, which states, that the Yellow Fever had subsided, that upwards of three thousand persons had been cut off by it during the past season; and that most of those who had recovered from this disease, had since been attacked by the Fever and Ague.

From the Albany Daily Advertiser.

On Saturday night, the river opposite this city, and for some distance below, was frozen over. The Steamboat Chancellor, came up within nine miles of the city, on Saturday, and on Sunday morning, the passengers went down in carriages, not daring to wait the usual departure of the boat on Monday. The earth remains white with snow, and the cold is about equal to what is usually experienced at Christmas and New-Year. We have however never known the winter permanently to close in when the water in the Hudson was so low as at this time.

We understand an order has been received from the war department, for the immediate transport of some large cannon from the depot at Gibbonsville, a few miles north of this city, to our southern frontier. It is rather unfortunate that the order should arrive so late, as, unless the river should again open, the transport from this place to New-York, must be by land.

Seneca Oil.—Mr. John Gibson, formerly of Greensburgh, Pa. has, in boring for Salt Water, near George town, on the Conemaugh river, struck upon a copious supply of Seneca Oil, which rises from the bottom of the well, now 207 feet deep, and floats on the water at the top. He supposes that a barrel per day might be procured.

From the Travels of Humboldt.

This traveller affirms that the riches of Mexico are infinitely superior to those of Peru. I know of no Peruvian family (says he) in the possession of a fixed and certain revenue of 150,000 francs, [illegible] there are individuals who possess no mines, and whose revenues amounts to a million of francs, (200,000 dollars.) The family of the Count de la Valenciana possesses alone, on the ridge of the Andes, a property worth 25 millions of francs, (5,000,000 dols.) without including the mine of Valenciano, which yields, one year with another a nett revenue of 1,500,000 livres, (240,000 dollars.)

The Count de Regla built at his own expense, two vessels of the largest size, worth 600,000, dollars, and presented them to the king of Spain.

The family of Fagoaga, well known for its beneficence, intelligence, and zeal for the public good, exhibits the example of the greatest wealth which was ever derived from a mine. A single vein which the marquis of Fagoaga possesses in the district of Somtedath, left in five or six months, all charges deducted, a profit of four millions of dollars.

The Europ[illegible] will be still more astonished, when I inform him of the extraordinary fact that this family lent, about the year 1800, a sum of more than three millions and a half of francs, (700,000 dls.) without interest, to a friend whose fortune they believed would be made by it in a solid manner.

To complete the view of the immense wealth centered in the hands of a few individuals in Mexico, it is only necessary to add, that, amongst instances of individual opulence, nine clergymen, only, possess an annual income, collectively, of 339,000 dollars—a sum almost equal to the whole expenses of the civil government of the United States.

To purify Tallow for Candles.

Take five eighths of tallow and three eighths of mutton suet, melt them in a copper cauldron, with it mix three ounces of brandy, one of salt of tartar, one of cream of tartar, one of sal ammoniac two of pure and dry potash.—Throw the mixture into the cauldron, make the ingredients boil a quarter of an hour, then let the whole cool. Next day the tallow will be found on the surface of the water, in a pure cake. Take it out and expose it to the air on canvass. It will become white, and almost as hard as wax. The [illegible] is favourable to its bleaching. Make your wicks of fine even cotton; give them a coat of melted wax; then cast your mould candles.—They will have the appearance of wax, in a degree, and one of them (six to the pound), will burn 14 hours, and not run.

MISCELLANEOUS.

An Extract from Burton's Report on prisons.

"When Mrs. Fry first visited Newgate, she found the female side in a situation which no language can describe. Nearly three hundred women, sent there for every gradation of crime, some untried, and some under sentence of death, at times one hundred and twenty in one ward, without as much as a mat for bedding, and many of them were nearly naked. She saw them openly drinking spirits, and her ears were offended by the most terrible imprecations. Every thing was filthy to excess and the smell was quite disgusting. Every one, even the governor, was reluctant to go amongst them. He persuaded her to leave her watch in the office, telling her that his presence would not prevent its being torn from her.—She saw enough to convince her that every thing bad was going on. Two women were seen in the act of stripping a dead child, for the purpose of clothing a living one.

"On her second visit she found all the women playing at cards, or reading improper books, or begging at the gratings, or fighting for the division of the money thus acquired, or engaged in the mysteries of fortune telling. Mrs. Fry's first step was to establish, by consent of the prisoners, a school for the children of those confined in the prison. This succeeded so well that many of the prisoners began earnestly to entreat admission into it; and, penetrated by the greatness of their sins, their wants, their vices, she at last consented, if a committee could be found to undertake it, that the benefit now confined to the children, should be extended to the adults, and especially the untried prisoners. The committee immediately presented itself; it consisted of the wife of a clergyman, and eleven members of the society of Friends.

"At first, every day in the week, and every hour in the day, some of them were to be found at their post, joining in the employments, or engaged in the instruction of their pupils: and at this very period, when the necessity of such close attendance is much abated, the matron assures me that, with only one short exception, she does not recollect the day on which some of the ladies have not visited the prison; that very often they have been with her by the time the prisoners were dressed—have spent the whole day with them, sharing her meals, or passing on without any, and have only left the school long after the close of the day. After many difficulties and much discussion, on all hands against so apparently quixotic an undertaking, she assembled seventy of the [illegible] women; stated the views of the committee to them; and asked if they were willing to abide by certain rules which had been drawn for their regulation.—They unanimously acquiesced in her wishes. As each was proposed, every hand was held up, in testimony of their approbation. The 15th chapter of St. Luke was then read, and the monitors, with their classes, returned to their respective wards. The early result of these exertions is thus described: When the Lord Mayor visited the prison a short time after these regulations had been made, the sheriffs and several of the aldermen attended. Many of these knew Newgate, had visited it a few months before, and had not forgotten the painful impressions made by a scene, exhibiting, perhaps, the very utmost limits of misery and guilt. They now saw what, without exaggeration, may be called a transformation. Riot, licentiousness, and filth, exchanged for order, sobriety, and comparative neatness in the chamber, the apparel, and the persons of the prisoners. They saw no more an assemblage of abandoned and shameless creatures, half naked and half drunk, rather demanding than requesting charity. The prison no more resounded with obscenity, and imprecations, and licentious songs; and, to use the coarse, but just expression of one who knew the prison well, this hell upon earth exhibited the appearance of an industrious manufactory, or a well regulated family. The magistrates to evince their sense of the importance of the alterations which had been effected, immediately adopted the whole plan, as a part of the system of Newgate, empowered the ladies to punish the refractory by short confinement, undertook part of the expense of the matron, and loaded the ladies with thanks and benedictions. Many of the most distinguished individuals in church and state, have visited the prison to ascertain for themselves the extent of the improvement; and the Bishop of London has quitted his palace to visit this dungeon of his diocese, to pour balm into the wounds of the broken-hearted, and to exhort the captive to the cultivation of those principles which render him practically free in the midst of his chains; which will draw the iron from the soul of the prisoner, and give him, for bondage and darkness, the glorious light and liberty of the children of God."

We read in the journal of North Brabant very curious details of the removal of a windmill, entire, to the distance of 3,520 feet from the place where it was originally erected. This removal was effected in 12 days, and the mill will soon be ready for use in its new situation. Nothing was taken out of the enormous mass, and the mill itself was in operation during its transport. A glass filled with water, which was in the gallery, did not experience the least agitation, though the mill advanced 400 feet each day. A building connected with the mill, and built principally of stone, and being 25 feet high 24 broad, and 27 long, was removed after it in five days. Not a stone was shaken from its place nor a glass broken. The traineau for the carriage of the mill was constructed in the simplest manner, and the whole operation did honor to M. Homberger, of Osterwich, who directed the work.

NASHVILLE, Nov. 9.

For two months there has not been rain enough in this neighborhood to wet the earth. Cumberland river is lower at this time that it has been since the fall of 1784; there is not water enough in several places to float an empty boat; the earth is generally unusually dry. For about two weeks the woods have been on fire, and the whole atmosphere darkened with smoke, so much so that a man cannot be seen two hundred yards distant.—We are told the Ohio river is lower than it ever was known before.

It is apprehended we shall be afflicted with another epidemic, if the weather does not change for the better in a short time.

The Standing Miracle.—(From Turner's History of England, vol. ii. p. 82)—When we recal to mind, that these are only specimens of what the Jews endured in other places, and were for several centuries in perpetual danger of every where suffering, we can hardly persuade ourselves that any remnant of the nation so butterly persecuted, can now be surviving. And yet, such is the extraordinary history & preservation of this unparallelled people, that above a million are now in Poland, Lithuania, & the Austrian Dominions; that in 1791, they stated their numbers in France to be above 60,000; that there are 30,000 in Salonica; 22,000 in Amsterdam; 10,080 in Rome; 5000 at Mantua; two thousand five hundred at Adrianople; that they are spread over various parts of Germany, and through the Turkish Empire, and abound even in Georgia and Mount Caucasus; that they are in Egypt, Morocco and other parts of Africa, and have for ages penetrated to India and China. At Copenhagen, they have an institution for instructing their youths in Hebrew, German, French, Geography, and Natural History; at Brunswick they have a similar establishment; also at Berlin; and at Prague have even obtained permission to build a Synagogue, and to open public shools there. The Jewish nation must be astonished to find the two opposite vaticinations of their ancient prophets, both so literally fulfilled. That they should be every where scattered, despised, and persecuted; and yet, that amid all their sufferings, their race should be preserved and continued, to be ultimately re-assembled.

ANIMAL SAGACITY.

The following remarkable instance of the sagacity of that noble quadruped, the horse, occurred not many days ago.—When the mail stage from Warrenton to Fox's, was on the road to the latter place, the passengers got out five miles beyond Louisburgh, to warm themselves at a house on the road, the driver also imprudently left the box. After standing a few moments, the horses started and kept the road to Louisburgh stopped as usual at the post-road, as if to leave the mail, proceeded over the high bridge across Tar river, drew up to the door at Mr. Fox's stage-house, two miles farther, to let the passengers out, and no one coming to them, it being early in the morning, they swept round to the stables; from thence having waited the usual time to be unharnessed, they went to the place where they are usually watered, and in safety, except breaking the tongue, returned to the stable. This is not instinct, nor could it be reason, it was a feeling perhaps stronger than either. It was HABIT. Did the occasion or limits of a weekly paper permit moral reflections on such a subject, we might extend our remarks on the tendency of forming habits, when even the brute creation furnish daily proofs of the strength of their dominion.—Raleigh Register.

Wasp-eater.—A few days since, a fellow in the neighborhood of Frimley, named Fisher, whose gluttonous propensities have long since acquired him the by-name of the Cormorant, undertook, for a trifling wager, to eat a dozen live wasps, with their stings in them, and demolish 2 pounds of raw salmon, in the short space of ten minutes. This he achieved with comparative expedition, notwithstanding he was sorely perplexed over his first course. He afterwards offered to eat wasps by wholesale, at the rate of sixpence per doz.: this he continued doing till he had consumed nearly two dozen of these creatures, when his throat and mouth became so dreadfully swollen and inflamed, that he was obliged to desist, in a state almost bordering on madness and suffocation.

Punishment of Ingratitude.—A French writer relates the following remarkable instance of the punishment of ingratitude in children. An eminent trader in Lyons, who had acquired an easy fortune, had two handsome daughters, between whom, on their marriage, he divided all his property, on condition that he should pass the summer with the one, and the winter with the other. Before the end of the first year, he found sufficient ground to conclude that he was not a very acceptable guest to either; of which however he took no notice, but hired a handsome lodging, in which he resided a few weeks. He then applied to a friend and told him the truth of the matter, desiring the gift of two hundred livres, and the loan of fifty thousand in ready money for a few hours. His friend very readily complied with his request; and the next day the old gentleman made a splendid entertainment, to which his daughters & husbands were invited. Just as dinner was over, his friend came in a great hurry, told him of an unexpected demand upon him, and desired to know whether he could lend him 50,000 livres. The old man told him without any emotion, that twice as much was at his service, if he had wanted it; and going into the next room, brought him the money. After this he was not suffered to stop any longer in lodgings; his daughters were jealous if he remained a day more in one house than the other, and after three or four years spent with them, he died; when upon examining his cabinet; instead of the livres, there was found a note containing these words: "He who has suffered by his virtues has a right to avail himself of the vices of those by whom he has been injured, and a father ought never to be so fond of his children as to forget what is due to himself.

A gentleman in the neighborhood of Manchester, had a man in his employ as a farm servant for many years, apparently very happy with his situation. Latterly he had exhibited some discontent, when enquiry into the cause was made by his employer. It appeared that he had been listening to some Reformers at a neighbouring ale-house, and had become a convert.—On being asked whether he was of opinion that Parliament wanted a reform, he answered—"why as to that matter, I thinks as how it's not right for one man to work and another to enjoy his labor, considering as how we are all equal." "But what do you call being all equal?" "Why that every body should share and share alike, and none have more than another." On being told, that if such an event took place, in a short time things would become again in the state they were in at present, as some would take care of their property while others would squander it away; John considered this was likely enough, but thought it would then be time to divide again.

Melancholy Case.—On Monday last an Inquest was held by H. Phillips, Esq. one of the Coroners for the county of Monmouth, at Ebbw Vale Iron-works, near Abergavenny, on the bodies of Mary Rosser, Daniel Rosser, Elizabeth Rosser, Thos. Rosser, Edw. Rosser and John Davis. Verdict, in each case, accidental death.—The following are the particulars of this melancholy event; The family of Edward Rosser, a man employed in the works, not appearing at their usual hour, in the morning of Saturday se'nnight, the neighbors apprehending something unusual had happened, went to the house, and after knocking at the door, and receiving no answer, forced it open, when, to their astonishment, they found the whole family, consisting of Mary Rosser and her four children, lifeless, and the house filled with a suffocating vapor, which upon investigation was found to proceed from a heap of burning ashes lying at the end of the house, the smoke of which being driven by a brisk wind towards the premises, entered through an aperture in the back part of the building. Medical assistance was procured, but means for restoration perse'vered in for a length of time, but the vital spark had fled, never by mortal means to be recalled.—Oct. 19.

In digging the capacious drain in Bilsby parish, connected with the new works of sewers near Alford, at a depth of thirty feet some oak trees have been found, which are at this time the subject of examination by the curious. They are as black as ebony, but the heart is firm notwithstanding the trees are believed to have been deposited for several thousand years. The conjecture formed by those best qualified for considering the subject of similar discoveries in other situations is, that the trees existed before the deluge.

The excavations of Pompeii are continued with success. They have lately discovered several edifices in the fine street which leads to the Temple of Isis to that of Hercules, and to the Theatre. In a house which doubtless belonged to some man of science, there were found some surgical instruments of excellent workmanship, and some paintings, representing fruit and animals, which are worthy of admiration, for the extreme truth of the imitation.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

ANNUAL TREASURY REPORT.

Treasury Department,
December 10, 1819.

Sir, I have the honor to transmit herewith a Report, prepared in obedience to the act, entitled "An act to establish a Treasury Department."

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant.

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

The Hon. the President of the Senate.

In obedience to the directions of the "Act supplementary to the act to establish the Treasury Department," the Secretary of the Treasury respectfully submits the following Report.

1st Of the Revenue.

The net revenue arising from duties upon imports and tonnage, internal duties, direct tax, public lands, postage & other incidental receipts, during the year, 1815, amounted to $49,556,642 76, viz: Customs, (see statement A) $36,306,922 51; Internal duties; $6,963,225 28; Direct tax, $5,729,159 25 Public Lands, $1,287,959 26; Postage, and other incidental receipts, $275,289 84.

That which accrued from the same sources, during the year 1816, amounted to $36,657,904 72, viz; Customs, (see statement A) $27,464,100 36; Internal duties, 4,306,133 25; Direct tax, 2,785,343 23; Public Lands, 1,784,467 38; Postage, and other incidental receipts, 237,840 53.

That which accrued from the same sources, during 1817, amounted to $24,365,227 34, viz: Customs, (see statement A) $17,524,775 15; Internal duties, $2,676,882 77 Direct tax, $1,633,737 40; Public Lands (exclusive of Mississippi stock) $2,015,977; Postage, & other incidental receipts, $313,856 98.

And that which accrued from the same sources, during the year 1818, amounted to $26,095,200 65, viz. Customs. (see statemen A) $21,828,451 48; Arrears, of internal duties, (see statement B $963,926 01; Public Lands, (exclusive of Mississippi stock,) (see statement C) $2,484,527, 99; Postage, dividends on bank stock, and other incidental receipts, (see statement B) $90,348 93.

It is ascertained that the gross amount of duties on merchandize and tonnage which have accrued during the three first quarters of the present year, exceeds $18,000,000.

And the sales of public lands during the same period, have exceeded $8,700,000.

The payments into the Treasury during the three first quarters of the year, are estimated to amount to (inclusive of $169,594 07 in Treasury Notes) $12,550,607 17; Customs, $14,604,081 58; Public Lands, (exclusive of the Mississipi stock) $2,858,556 61; Arrears of internal duties, $195,531 02; Arrears of direct tax, $72,880 24; First instalment payable by the U. States Bank, $500,000; First dividend on the U. S. shares in the U. S. Bank, $175,000 Incidental receipts, $59,003 43; Re-payments. $85,462 29.

And the payments into the Treasury during the fourth quarter the year, from the same sources, are estimated at $5,000,000.

Making the whole amount estimated, to be received into the Treasury during the year 1819 (exclusive of $169,591 07 in Treasury Notes) $24,381,013 10.

Which, added to the balance in the Treasury on the 1st day of January last, (exclusive of $32,154 51 in Treasury Notes,) amounting to $1,446,371 23. Makes the aggregate amount of $25,827,384 33.

The application of this sum for the year 1819, is estimated as follows, viz:

To the 30th of September the payments (exclusive of $81,161 79 in Treasury Notes, which have been drawn from the Treasury and cancelled,) have amounted to $18,192,367 43.

Civil, Diplomatic and Miscellaneous expenses, $2,544,612 99.

Military service, (including arrearage) $7,666,931 72.

Naval service, (including the appropriation for the gradual increase of the navy,) $3,527,640 42.

Public Debt, (exclusive of $1,151 79 in Treasury Notes, abovementioned) $4,454,272 31.

During the fourth quarter it is estimated that the payments, (exclusive of $2,585,587 79 in Treasury Notes, which will be drawn from the Treasury and cancelled) will amount to $7,300,000, viz.

Civil, Diplomatic and Miscellaneous expenses, $500,000.

Military service, 1,530,000.

Naval service, 300,000.

Public debt to the 1st January 1820, (exclusive of $130,537 in Treasury Notes, abovementioned) 4,970,000.

Making the aggregate amount (exclusive of $20,749 58, in Treasury Notes, drawn from the Treasury and cancelled) of $25,492,367 43

And leaving on the 1st of January 1820, a balance in the Treasury, estimated at $334,996 90.

2d Of the Public Debt.

The funded debt which was contracted before the year 1812, and which was redeemed on the first day of October 1818, (as appears by statement 1.) amounted to $9,681,209 07.

And that contracted subsequently to the 1st day of January 1812, and redeemed on the 1st of October, 1817, as appears by the same statement, amounted to $68,756039 94—Making the aggregate amount of $77,827,349 91.

Which sum agrees with the amount stated in the last Annual Report as unredeemed on the 1st October, 1818, excepting the sum of $1,585 13 which was then short estimated and which has since been corrected by actual settlement.

On the 1st day of January, there was added to the amount for Treasury Notes brought into the Treasury and cancelled, and for which the following Stock was issued: in 6 per cent stock, $49,024 71; in 7 per cent stock, $2,646,000, 51,670 71—Making in all $47,872,090 62.

From which deduct Louisiana, 6 per cent stock reimbursed on the 21st of Oct. 1818, $4,977,930 00.

And deferred stock reimbursed between the 1st of Dec. 1917, and 1st of January 1819, $622,863 27—5,230,813 27.

Making the public debt, which was unredeemed on the 1st Jan. 1819, (as appears by Statement 2,) amount to $72,-643,177 35.

From the 1st of Jan. to the 30th Sept. inclusive, there was, by funding Treasury Notes, and issuing 3 per cent stock for interest on old registered debt, added to the public debt, as appears by Statement three, the amount of $36,135,-59—94,684,312 94.

From which deduct the amount of stock purchased during that period, (as appears by Statement 4,) 711,957 56.

And the estimated reimbursement of deferred stock, $243,827 88—955,785 43.

Making on the 1st of Oct 1819, (as appears by Statement 3) the sum of $91,-728,527 67.

Since the 30th of Sept. there has been redeemed or provision made for the redemption of the 6 per cent of the Louisiana, stock unpaid on the 1st Oct. 1818 amounting to $3,601,817 15.

And there will be reimbursed of the principal of the deferred 6 per cent stock, on the 1st Jan. 1820 $241,506 70—2,843,323 85.

Leaving the public debt unredeemed on the 1st January, 1820, by estimate, $88,885,203 66.

The Treasury Notes in circulation are estimated, (as appeared by Statement 5) at $181,521 00.

The whole of the awards made by the Commissioners appointed under the several acts of Congress for indemnifying certain claimants of public lands, (as appears by Statement 6,) amounts to $4,262,151 12.

Of which there has been received at the Office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, (as appears by Statement C,) the sum of $2,372,674 31.

Leaving out standing at the dates of the several returns from the Land Districts, $1,969,576 81.

3d. Of the Estimates of the public Revenue and Expenditures for the year 1820.

In presenting his estimate for the year 1820, it may be proper to observe, that, when the internal duties were repealed, on the 31st of December 1815, the permanent revenue, including those duties, was estimated at $15,526,000, whilst the annual authorised expenditure was ascertained to be less than $12,000,000.

The repeal of the internal duties reduced the former to $22,025,000, whilst the payments from the Treasury, during the year, will probably fall but little short of $25,500,000.

In the annual Report of the Treasury of the 21st of November, 1818, the receipts for the present year were estimated at 25,220,000 dollars. Although this estimate will be realized in its general result, deficiencies have been ascertained in the customs, the internal duties and direct tax, the bank dividends, and the postage of letters. The deficiency which has occurred in the customs, internal duties and direct taxes, will probably amount, in nearly the same degree, the receipts from these sources in the year 1820, by the payment of the revenue bonds, and of the portion of the internal duties and direct taxes, which, if the accustomed punctuality had been observed, would have been received during the present year. But it is probable that the receipts of that year will be diminished by the non-payment of the bank dividends and by the application of a portion of the proceeds of the public lands to the redemption of the out standing Mississippi stock. The receipts for the year 1820 applicable to the ordinary and current demand upon the Treasury, may therefore be estimated at $22,000,000, viz:—

Customs, $19,000,000; public lands, $1,600,000; arrear of internal duties and direct tax, $450,000; second instalment due by the United States Bank, $400,000; incidental receipts, $50,000; which, with the sum estimated to be in the Treasury on the 1st January 1820, $334,996 90 cents—make the aggregate amount of $22,334,996 90 cents.

The estimates of the expenditure for the year 1820 are not yet complete; but it is ascertained from those which have already been received, that a sum not less than $24,000,000, will be required for the service of that year. This deficit of nearly $5,000,000, resulting from the excess of expenditure beyond the receipts, cannot be supplied by any application of the ordinary revenue. After paying the interest and reimbursement of the public debt, and redeeming the remainder of the Louisiana stock, about $2,500,000 of the sinking fund will remain without application if the price of the public stocks should continue above the prices at which the commissioners of the sinking fund are authorised to purchase. During the years 1821, 1822, and 1823, the average sum of $5,000,000 of the sinking fund will also remain without application, if the price of the public stock should prevent its purchase. A by application of that portion of the sinking fund which, on account of the price of the public stock, may remain unemployed in the hands of the Commissioners of the sinking fund to other branches of the public service, if allowable under the provisions of the act making the appropriation, would only postpone the period at which additional impositions would be required to meet the public expenditure. Such an application would also have the effect of ultimately retarding the redemption of the public debt.

It may be proper to add, that although some of the items in the estimate for the ensuing year may be considered in their nature temporary, yet it is probable that the estimate for succeeding years will exceed, rather than fall below it.

Under all the circumstances, it is respectfully submitted that the public interest requires that the revenue be augmented, or that the expenditure be diminished.

Should an increase of the revenue be deemed expedient, a portion of the deficit may be supplied by an addition of the duties now imposed upon various articles of foreign merchandize, and by a reasonable duty upon sales at public auction; but it is not probable that any modification of the existing tariff can supersede the necessity of resorting to internal taxation, if the expenditure is not diminished. Should Congress deem it expedient to modify the present rate of duties, with a view to afford that protection to our cotton, woollen and iron manufactures, which is necessary to secure to them the domestic market, the necessity of resorting to a system of internal taxation will be augmented. It is believed that the present is a favourable moment for affording efficient protection to that increasing and important interest, if it can be done consistently with the general interest of the nation. The situation of the countries from whence our foreign manufactures have been principally drawn, authorizes the expectation, that, in the event of a monopoly of the home market being secured to our cotton and woollen manufactures, a considerable portion of the manufacturing skill and capital of those countries will be promptly transferred to the United States, and incorporated into the domestic capital of the Union. Should this expectation be realized, the disadvantages resulting from such a monopoly would quickly disappear. In the mean time it is believed that a system of internal taxation would be severely felt by the great mass of our citizens.

Whether the revenues be augmented, or the expenditure be diminished, a loan to some extent will be necessary. The augmentation of the one, or the diminution of the other cannot be expected in sufficient time to prevent this necessity. As the six per cent stock of the United States is considerably above par, the sum required to be raised by loan can be conveniently and advantageously obtained by the sale of stock of that description; or it may be obtained by the issue of Treasury Notes. If the revenue and expenditure shall be equalized, the issue of Treasury Notes, not bearing interest, is recommended in preference to the creation and sale of stock, as the loan, in that event will be small in amount, and temporary in its nature. All which is respectfully submitted.

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

Serious Loss.—The ship America, Capt. Vibberts, from India, with a valuable cargo of silks, &c. was wrecked on Sunday evening, near the light-house at Sandy-Hook. Capt. V. the two supercargoes and 11 men were lost. The remainder of the crew, 11 in number, were saved. There was insured upon the vessel and cargo, in New York, $200,000 about 10,000 dols. worth of the cargo has been picked up on the beach and saved.

From Chili.—Capt. Coffin, arrived at Nantucket, left Tonga, Chili, on the first of September, and brings news that a patriot squadron had taken Payti, and burnt the town; that the patriot army had taken the city of Chilan, and a number of small towns near it, in one of which they had indiscriminately put every male inhabitant to the sword, and were in full march for Valdavia, the only place in Chili which continued to be held by the royalists; and that Lord Cochrane had sailed with a squadron to blockade Lima.

By the last mail we have a report, that Bolivar has sustained two defeats from the Royal army, and it is added that Santa Fee had again fallen into the hands of the latter. We have no particulars nor do we think the report entitled to credit; as other accounts represent the vice-king as being without an army or resources.

BOSTON, Dec. 15.

Thomas H. Daniels, recently arrested on a charge of murder and robbery, committed suicide on Sunday last, in the Middlesex jail. The means he used to effect his purpose so completely were uncommon. He contrived to cut off about four inches of the waistband of a pail, to this he fastened one end of his handkerchief, and then passed the stick through an interstice between two large stones which form a part of the roof of his cell, and so as to place it on the upper part of the stones so as to make a good bearing for his purpose. He must then have made the loose part of the handkerchief fast round his neck, and then have fastened his hands behind him; and all this while standing on the head of a keg, when he kicked it away, left his body suspended about six inches from the floor. When found at the usual dinner time of the prisoners, he was still and cold.

On Sunday he asked the jailer to send him a razor to shave himself; but Mr. Train sent him a barber; and while he was shaving Daniels, the latter said, smiling, "I suppose the reason a razor was not sent to me, was, that he feared I should destroy myself with it. But if I had any such intention, I should not wait for a razor, as there are many other ways of doing it."

It is added, that about 12 o'clock on Sunday, Daniels called to a prisoner in an adjoining room, with whom he had got acquainted, & exclaimed:—"Good bye, I am going to take a tramp to see old Pluto. You haven't courage." It is probable that he swung himself off immediately after this exclamation, and that he had been hanging nearly two hours when found.

The following note was found in his cell, written with charcoal on a half sheet of letter paper:—

"Mr. Simmons must see my body buried." He has directions for money of mine. If the innocent of this crime, though I am well acquainted with those that did it. Adieu this world. I forgive all."

The verdict of the jury of inquest we understand was Felo de se, and that the body has been given to the surgeons for dissection. Notwithstanding the denial of his participation in the Stoneham murder, a chain of circumstances makes his guilt unquestionable.

* It is understood that Wm. Simmons, Esq. had been engaged as counsel for Daniels, and had received a retaining fee. It is to this circumstance, we doubt, that Daniels alludes above; and having no further occasion for his services probably thought it equitable he should appropriate a part of the fee to pay funeral charges.

He must then have made the noose part of the handkerchief fast round his neck, and then have fastened his hands behind him; for all this while standing on the head of a keg, when he kicked it away, left the body suspended about six inches from the floor. When found at the usual hour time of the prisoners, he was stiff and cold.

It is added, that about 12 o'clock on Monday, Daniels called to a prisoner in the adjoining room, with whom he had become acquainted, & exclaimed:—"*Good bye. I am going to take a tramp to see Pluto. THE DEAD ALIVE.

The singularity of the case of the Brothers, lately convicted in Vermont of the murder of Russell Colvin, continues to increase in peculiarities. The supposed murder was alledged to have been committed 7 or 8 years since. The accused were arrested in consequence of several persons dreaming recently that Colvin murdered Colvin, and buried the body near a certain tree, where on search a human skeleton was found; and other strong circumstantial evidence was given on the trial, and conviction and sentence followed. The Bournes avowed their innocence, and their belief that Colvin had gone off, and might be still living. In consequence their friends advertised, in the hope of obtaining some information, if their statement was true. The advertisement has been answered by Mr. Taber Chadwick, of Shrewsbury, Monmouth, N. J. who says a man calling himself Russell Colvin, came to that place from Vermont, between 5 and 10 years ago, in a state of mental derangement, and has continued there and insane ever since; but from his appearance and names he occasionally mentions, there is reason to believe he is the identical Colvin, supposed to have been murdered.

One of the Bournes was sentenced to death, to be executed on the 18th of Jan. the other was sentenced to the State Prison for life. No doubt the proper authority of Vermont, as well as the friends of the accused, will use the utmost diligences to determine whether Colvin still exists and if he does, to relieve, as soon as possible, the miserable sufferers from confinement and the imputation of having committed the horrid crime.

The public will also wish to know who the dreamer was—and whose skeleton was found.

The above circumstances shew the propriety, of that reasonable delay of execution, after sentence, which is common in this country.

House of Representatives.
MILITARY EXECUTIONS, &c.

Mr. Williams, of N. Carolina, offered for consideration the following resolution

"Resolved, that the President of the United States be requested to cause to be laid before this house any information he may possess, respecting certain executions or other punishments which may have been inflicted on the army of the United States, since the year 1815, contrary to the laws and regulations provided for the government of the same."

In offering this resolution, Mr. Williams took occasion to refer to the reports in general circulation, on which his motion was founded, and particularly to one case reported as the most aggravated. The report of it, he said, was to this effect; Col. King, who was left by Gen. Jackson in command of Pensacola, issued an order that if any soldier deserted, and was overtaken or apprehended, he should be put to instant death. One soldier, who had deserted, was overtaken, and so put to death. When apprehended, he exclaimed that, as an American citizen, he was entitled to a trial according to the laws of his country, and claimed his rights as such. But, with cruelty and precipitance, his request was refused, and he was put to instant death. Congress, Mr. W. said, sat here as guardians of the rights of the people. But it was the weak, more than the strong, whose rights were the peculiar care of this house. If the facts he had stated on the authority of common report, were confirmed, a just punishment ought to await the offenders. Are the rights of an officer invaded, said he, the alarm is sounded from one end of the country to the other: every feeling is roused in his defence! And, when the case of the private soldier, weak and defenceless in his own cause, presents itself, should no one be found to stand up for him? Mr. W. hoped, he said, that there would be a thorough examination into the case, that, if the officer in question had acted as reported, he might be exemplarily punished; and, if the report was not true, it was due to Col. King that the statement should be disproved.

Mr. Smith, of Maryland, said, he hoped the gentleman from North Carolina would for the present, let the resolution lie on the table. He had heard, he said, that a court martial had been ordered on col. King, on this very point. If so, he would be tried for his alledged misconduct by the proper test—the rules and articles of war. Should he not be punished for misconduct, if any had been committed, it was then time enough for this house to take it up.

Mr. Williams said, he would be willing that the resolution should lie on the table, if any good purpose could be answered by its taking that course. It had been said, that a court martial had been ordered in this case: that was part of the very information which he wished to obtain from an authentic source. If assured officially that such was the fact, Mr. W. said he should be willing to stay all further proceedings on this case.—But the report of that fact was rumor merely, vague surmise, and, for ought he knew, unfounded conjecture.

Mr. Cobb, of Georgia, expressed his opinion, that the resolution, if objectionable at all, was so on the ground that it did not go far enough. If he was not greatly deceived, in the information he had received, the case mentioned by the gentleman from North Carolina was not the only one, of the infliction of punishment in the army, contrary to law. If a very strict enquiry was made into this subject, he believed it would be discovered that, daily, the rules and articles for the government of the army are violated. He had understood, from a gentleman formerly an officer of the army, of high respectability, that it is now the daily practice in the army, directly in the face of the law, to punish soldiers corporally for offences. He hoped the resolution would pass, and that the House would obtain information on the subject.

Mr. Storrs, of New-York, rose principally to state a fact, in corroboration of what had fallen from others. He had himself seen, in the cantonment at Sackett's Harbor, punishment inflicted on soldiers by stripes; and, when it had been a subject of conversation among the officers, it had been justified on the ground of the absolute necessity of resorting to it. There were he doubted not, repeated instances, like this, in which under the eyes of the officers, the articles of war were openly violated. The soldier, so far from preferring charges against those who violated these rules to his injury, dare not even murmur. It was very proper now, Mr. S. said, to ascertain, whether any orders from the War Department authorised these proceedings; and, if not, it was desirable to know why proper measures had not been taken to prevent their recurrence.

Mr. Trimble, of Kentucky said, a reason why this proposal to enquire into it should not be laid on the table, was, that if the facts should be confirmed, there were other and higher duties than those of enquiry merely which this house would be called on to perform. It would be found, on an examination of the rules and articles of war, that after conviction by a court martial, a commanding officer may approve a sentence of death; but, in peace no military execution could legally take place, but by approbation and authority of the President of the United States. Now here was a case stated, in which death had been inflicted, not only without the authority of the President, but without trial by a court-martial. If the law martial is not strong enough to prevent such excesses, said Mr. T. we must try some different mode.

Mr. Mercer, of Virginia, said it appeared to him that, upon the information which had been given to it, it had now become the imperious duty of the house to prosecute this enquiry—not only for the reasons stated, but because it had been asserted, and contended even in this house, that the rules and articles for the government of the army, are not binding on the army after it passes the limits of the United States. If such were the fact, it was high time some rules should be made for the government of the army when without limits of the U. States.

The question was then taken on laying the resolution on the table, and decided in the negative without a division.

The original motion of Mr. Williams was then agreed to, nem. con. and a committee of two members ordered to be appointed to lay the same before the President.

FROM CHINA.

By an arrival in the United States from China, it is said, that a Russian frigate had arrived at Canton, and reported that the territory on the Coast of California, which is about 800 miles in length, had been ceded by Spain to Russia, in payment for the assistance offered by the Emperor Alexander to his Catholic Majesty, in fitting out the expedition for Buenos Ayres and Lima.

Anecdote of Dr. Herschel.

One morning a countryman knocked at his door, and requested the favour of a few words with him; he went out to the hall, when the countryman said to him, "I ask pardon, Doctor, for disturbing you; but I am quite in a quandary, as the saying is, and so I made free to call and ask your advice: you must know my meadows are a great deal too long of cutting, but before I begin I should like to know whether you think the weather will soon take up?" "First look round you," said the doctor, "and tell me what you see." "See," replied the other, "why hay that is not worth the the saving; what blunderhead owns it, that lives so near you, and cuts it without asking your advice?" "I own it," said the Doctor, "and had it cut the very day before the rain came on."

EDUCATION.

Although the deficiency of general education in this Province, is daily felt by its inhabitants in the common intercourse and transactions of life, there are perhaps few that are aware of its full extent, and the woeful deficiency of the existing means of remedying so great an evil.

Both will, we presume, be more generally perceived by a statement of the existing public institutions for general education & elementary schools throughout the Province, and an estimate of the number of students and scholars in them, compared with the number of young persons of a proper age for instruction.

Although the establishments of the Jesuits, the chief institutions for the education of the male youth of the country before the conquest, were broken up at that time, and their property suffered to be diverted from the only use for which it could be held under their rules, the public authorities of the country never occupied themselves with providing and facilitating the means of education for the people, till the year 1801, ten years after the establishment of the present Constitution, and forty-one after the conquest.

In that year an Act was passed by the Provincial Legislature, for the establishment of a Royal Institution for the promotion of learning and the establishment of Free Schools throughout the Province.

The public will judge how far this law was adapted to its professed object, by the result, after a lapse of nineteen years.

On the 26th March last, the following information relative to the execution of the different provisions of that Act, was prayed for by an unanimous address of the House of Assembly.

"Resolved. That an humble address be presented to His Grace the Governor in Chief, praying His Grace will be pleased to cause to be laid before this House, the following information, relating to the execution of the Act passed in the forty-first year of the reign of His present Majesty, entitled, "An Act for the establishment of Free Schools, and the advancement of learning in this Province," or such part of the said information as can at present be obtained.

"1st. A list of the Trustees of the Schools of Royal Foundation, appointed under the said Act, with the dates of their appointment.

"2d. A list of the President and Officers of the body corporate and politic, established under the said Act, with the dates of their appointment.

"3d. A copy of the Bye-Laws ordained and constituted by the said Corporation for the government of the Free Schools.

"4th. A list of the Free Schools erected under the said Act, in virtue of Petitions from the majority of the inhabitants of any Parish or Township.

"6th. A list of School Houses erected in pursuance of a petition of any certain number of the inhabitants of any Parish or Township.

"6th. A list of the School Masters commissioned for each of the said School Houses, with the date of the appointment, and rate of their annual Salaries.

"7th. A statement of the present number of Scholars in each School, distinguishing those who are gratuitously instructed, from those who are not so instructed, with the rate of tuition for the latter.

"8th. A statement of the different branches of learning taught in the said Schools, together with a list of Books used.

"9th. A statement of the different days at which the said Schools have been visited by the Trustees.

"10th. A statement of the rents of any lands vested in the said Corporation, or sums of money paid by the same, into the hands of His Majesty's Receiver General of this Province, for the purpose of the said Act."

Although His Grace the then Goveror in Chief gave immediate orders for the transmission of the information required, and although such part of it as could be immediately obtained was prayed for in the address, no communication on the subject was received before the prorogation on the 24th April following.

From these facts it may be fairly inferred that the operation and execution of the Act has been very limited and imperfect.

RECAPITULATION.

37 Schools under Act 41, Geo. III, average at 20 scholars each	740
3 Seminaries estimated at	500
4 Nunneries ditto	400
32 Schools established by Curates, average at 25 each	800
11 Schools for Girls kept in the Country by the Sisters, average at 30 each	330
25 Private Schools chiefly in Quebec and Montreal, average at 40 each	1000
Total Students and Scholars,	3770
Add to the total for tuition in families	230
Grand Total,	5000

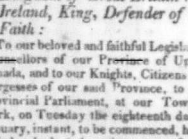
The above estimate we consider rather to exceed than to be under the true amount.

There are no data whereby the total of population of this Province may correctly be known, and still less the subdivisions of its population. The Militia Returns, however, prove that the population of Lower Canada is about half that of New York, which is about one million.

We find that generally throughout the Northern States, one half of the population is under 16 years of age, and probably one half of those under that age are fit to attend schools. We accordingly find that in 1811, the superintendant of public schools of the state of New York, reported to the Legislature that there were then in the State 5000 common schools, and that the number of scholars exceeded 200,000. In 1815, the report stated the following numbers, not including the city and county of New York, & the city of Albany; common and primary schools, under the Act, 2621; scholars, 140,106; expense of instruction, $55,720.

The total number of children; fit to go to school in Lower Canada, must therefore be about 125,000; but let us take the whole number at half those that actually attended school in the state of New York in 1815, without including the city and county of New York, and the city of Albany, the account will stand thus:

No. of children in Canada of an age to attend schools,	70,083
Total number of students and scholars in all the public institutions of education,	4000
Number of children fit to attend, not attending any school,	66,083



We are almost ashamed to publish this statement. We believe we are not exaggerating, and should be happy to be contradicted on good authority.

A drove of Cattle (one hundred in number) lately arrived in this town from Chippawa, being purchased by the contractors of beef for his Majesty's troops. Farmers of the Midland district, cannot you afford to supply the Kingston market with beef as reasonable as your brethren of the district of Niagara, who reside three hundred miles further off than you do? This is an interesting subject of competition. It is a practical recommendation of exertion and economy to breeding, raising and fatting cattle for market. If they must be brought from such a distance, we are glad to see them come from places within the Province. Too long have our farmers suffered money to be sent out of the country for meat.—*U. C. PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the THIRD, by the Grace of GOD of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Councillors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to our Provincial Parliament, at our Town of York, on Tuesday the eighteenth day of January, instant, to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you

GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our Proclamation bearing date the second day of December, one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, WE thought fit to prorogue our Provincial Parliament, to the eighteenth day of January, Instant, at which time at our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear, NOW KNOW YE that WE taking into our Royal consideration, the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid; hereby convoking and by these presents enjoining you and each of you, that on Saturday, the twenty-sixth day of February next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary, and herein fail not.

IN TESTIMONY whereof, WE have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed. WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honourable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this twelfth day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty, and in the sixtieth year of our Reign. We can no longer boast of the rare occurrence of fires in this Town: on Monday night, about 10 o'clock, the District School House was observed to be on fire, but by the very active and judicious assistance given by a number of the inhabitants who immediately assembled, it was soon extinguished—a few minutes later it would have been hardly possible to save the building.

Dr. Strachan presents his sincere thanks to the inhabitants of York, whose prompt exertions extinguished the fire that had commenced in the District School-house, on Monday evening, through the negligence of the school servant, and by which but for their timely assistance that edifice would have been consumed.

Montreal, Dec. 31, 1819.

WHEREAS JACOB SNIDER, of the Township of Scarborough, has, on the 29th day of the month of December last, advertised me, his wife, in the Upper Canada Gazette, as having left his bed and board without any just cause for so doing, and likewise forbidding every person trusting or harbouring me on his account: I consider it a justice I owe to my own character, to state to the public, that so far from my having done any such thing, as he has thought proper to state, he himself withdrew from me and his children, on the 20th of December now last past, thereby leaving me and them without the means of support or bedding, at this inclement season of the year. I think it necessary further to state, that his conduct has been, for many years past, marked with the utmost severity and a total want of feeling, either to myself or his children, and that he has not furnished either food or clothing for myself and children since the month of October last, although one of the children is an infant at the breast.

FROM EUROPE.

BOSTON, July 14.

We have been favoured with a Royal Gazette of Hayti of May 25, from which we have translated the following article for the amusement of our readers, as a specimen of the parade with which King Henry receives his friends.

Translated from the Royal Gazette of Hayti.

Cape Henry, May 25.

On the 4th May current His Britannic Majesty's brig Swarwater, Capt. D. Cox, entered the port of the Capital from Jamaica, despatched by His Excellency Sir Home Popham, Admiral and Commander in Chief of his Britannic Majesty's naval force of the station of Jamaica and its dependencies, to announce his speedy arrival in this city.

As soon as his Grace the Duke of Marmelade, Governor of the capital, and Monsieur the Baron de Dupuy, Secretary Interpreter to the King for the English language, were apprised of this agreeable and flattering news, they hastened to give notice to his Majesty, our well beloved Sovereign, who was absent, visiting the lines on the Spanish part of the Island. His Majesty immediately gave his orders to the Governor of the Capital and the Baron de Dupuy, to dispose of every thing so as to be prepared to receive the Admiral with all the regard, and all the distinction, due to his character, and to the friendship and respect which we feel for a friendly nation, that has always shewn us marks of its good feelings toward us. In consequence Monseigneur the Governor and Monsieur the Baron de Dupuy caused suitable preparations to be made at a Hotel in the City, to receive the Admiral; and ordered a guard of troops of the line to be constantly on duty waiting his arrival.

His Excellency was expected with impatience for many days, by the people of this capital; for the reputation of Admiral Popham had preceded him in our clime. At length on the 16th, after twelve days of expectation, the feelings of the inhabitants of the capital were at their height, when at one o'clock in the afternoon his Britannic Majesty's frigate Iphigene, of 44 guns, Captain H. Parker, followed by the brig of war Beaver, Capt. King, from Havanna, entered the port, having his Excellency Admiral Sir Home Popham on board the frigate.

A Royal salute was fired by the frigate answered from the battery of the City Arsenal.

M. the Baron de Dupuy repaired on board the frigate, to compliment, in the name of the king, the Admiral upon his happy arrival, and to express to him how much his Majesty was flattered and gratified by his visit. M. the Baron de Dupuy invited his Excellency to come on shore, where every thing was prepared and made ready to receive him at the hotel. The Admiral landed the next morning; he was shown into the carriage of the Governor, which was on the King's wharf to receive him, and repaired with his retinue to the hotel destined for him.

The next day after his arrival his Excellency gave audience to the Board of Foreign Commerce. The Merchants of the city had the honor to present their respects in a body to him, and to congratulate him upon his happy arrival.

The day following, his grace the Governor of the Capital accompanied by a numerous staff, the officers of the corps civil and administrative, of the capital, repaired in grand procession to the hotel of his Excellency, to compliment him and felicitate him upon the happiness which we feel in having amongst us an English Admiral, of so distinguished a character, and so high a reputation, and who has so generously shewn himself the friend of Haytians. His Excellency appeared to be extremely flattered by this visit, and expressed his satisfaction to Monseigneur the Governor, with much benevolence and cordiality.

His Grace the Duke of Marmelade invited his Excellency to dine with him, together with Capt. Parker and the other officers of the ships. On this occasion there was a splendid repast at the hotel of the Governor, where gaiety the most free and the greatest cordiality reigned between the English and Haytian officers. Among the patriotic toasts suitable to the occasion, the following were drank by the guests of the two nations—" The King of Great-Britain"—" The King of Hayti, may he complete gloriously which he has commenced wisely."—and " A perpetual union between the Haytians and the English."—After dinner his Excellency retired; and in the evening he honored with his presence the ball which was given by the Governor, on the occasion of his Excellency's arrival.

The following day his Excellency visited the Royal Academy, the National School, and the Magazines for Clothes and Provisions; and walked in the country with Captain Parker and his officers.

Captain Parker, accompanied by the Admiral's surgeon, Dr. Macknamara, & other officers of the frigate, visited the military Hospital of the city, to which Dr. Stewart, Surgeon of the King and Surgeon in Chief of the Hospitals, repaired at the same time.

On the 21st at 3 o'clock in the morning, His Majesty, our very august and well beloved Sovereign, entered this city accompanied by his Royal Highness the Prince Royal, returning from his tour. His Majesty immediately announced his arrival to his Excellency, and signified to him that he should be happy to give him an audience in his palace at tea.

The Admiral went at the hour appointed, having Capt. Parker in his carriage. His Excellency was introduced as were the other officers, into the hall of audience, by the masters of ceremonies, and presented to the King by M. the Baron de Dupuy. His Majesty received his Excellency and his officers with much friendship and with the greatest attention. His Majesty and his Royal Highness, his well-beloved son, remained more than four hours with his Excellency, who appeared to be very well pleased with the particular attention which he received from his Majesty.!

The King departed at 5 o'clock in the afternoon for Sans Souci.

On the morning of the 22d, his Excellency went on board the frigate, which sailed early next morning.—His Excellency carried with him our good wishes, and our regrets that we could not retain him any longer time.

Every kind of refreshment has been sent on board the frigate, by order of his Majesty, with a readiness and pleasure which furnish unequivocal proof how happy we shall always be to receive visits of our true and good friends!

THE CREWLESS BARK.

These stanzas are founded on the following very singular relation, which was published in a New-Brunswick paper a considerable time since:

"About sixty years ago, the inhabitants of the island of Rhode Island had their attention attracted by the appearance of a square rigged vessel, under full sail, coming in from sea, from a southeasterly direction, with the apparent intention of putting into Narragansett bay. The vessel was seen early in morning, at a great distance. As she came near the island, about 11 A. M. a number of the inhabitants collected on the shore, to ascertain her name and character. But instead of making good harbour, the vessel came under full sail directly on shore. No persons were seen on deck, nor had any person, from the time the vessel hove in sight been seen to leave. Some of the inhabitants from the shore went immediately on board; when to their great surprise and astonishment they found a tea-kettle over the fire in the cabin, the fire burning, the table set for breakfast, as if for a number of hands, and yet not one of the crew on board; nor was one soul of them ever after heard of. No living creature was found in the vessel, except a slut and her litter of puppies. The boat of the vessel was missing. The truth of the above story cannot, with propriety, be doubted. The writer of this had his information from a gentleman who had the particulars of the history of Mr. Lawton, a man of unquestionable veracity, who, (being then a boy,) saw the vessel come in, and went on board of her. Mr. Lawton lives on the island. Other persons also testify the same thing. The place, moreover, where the vessel was run aground, has, from this circumstance, ever since been called The Wreck. The vessel belonged to owners in Newport. Papers and writings were found in regular order."

New-Brunswick Times.

How gay before the morning breeze,
The gallant vessel braves the foam;
From wandering over the antient sea,
How proudly she appropriates home!
The rudder has but lit'le for her guards,
For, far beyond the source bay,
And all her swelling canvas crowds,
To urge her on her destin'd way.

She seems, at first, a feather bung,
Upon the red horizon's verge,
Or like a distant sea-fowl flung
Along the undulating surge.

But as she wanders calmly on,
And nearer hails the morning beam,
She glows like some majestic swan,
Gliding in beauty o'er the stream.

Well—well she speeds—the gallant bark!
She hastens up the channel now;
Her sails shine glorious!—and hark!
How the waves murmur round her prow!

Nearer and nearer—on she rides—
So grand, so gaily, and so fair,
That, as she treads along the tides,
She almost seems to skim in air.

But whither goes she now—before
The breeze, direct still flying on,
See—see—she hastens to the shore
She strands,—she strands;—why was this done?

* * * * * *

The vessel seems in goodly plight,
Her sails are bursting tight and clear,
And all that meets the wondering sight,
Offers a trace of festive cheer.

But no one now her action guides,
Or leads her o'er the yielding wave;
And, whose was recent life resides
Around the graves.

And where is all that noble crew,
For whom this feast so late was spread;
Who form'd this little world a few Short hours ago—where are they fled?

Alas! alas! for them—perhaps Some blast of death has swept them by,
And—as the withering billow wraps
Their forms in ocean's cemetery.

Perhaps their little boat has run
On some wild coast on the wave,
And faithless, ere his task was done,
Consign'd them to one common grave.

Perhaps some cannibal's unsated might
Their sudden parting—and have made
That bark fear skeleton from the surge
Which round its prow is murmuring play'd

Perhaps—but ah! no tongue remains
To tell their sad unpitied fate;
And all of them that was—remains,
Is, that they were, and now are not!

MONTALDO.

Philadelphia, August, 1819.

Walter Scott has acknowledged himself the author of Harold the Dauntless, and the Bride of Triermain; two poems, evincing, in the opinion of many critics, as much true poetical talent as any of his other works.

An original Voyage to Hudson's Bay, lately performed by Dr. M'Kenzie, of Dublin, will constitute the second number of the second volume of the Journal of New Voyages and Travels, which is to appear in the middle of October. Among other engravings will be one of a pair of Esquimaux spectacles, formed without glass, but on true optical principles! They consist of a slit made in a piece of wood, which, admitting no other vibration of light than the pencil which enters the eye from the object, produces that distinct vision of objects, which otherwise, at a given distance from the eye, would be confused.

Executive Council Office,
York, 14th Dec. 1819.

WHEREAS, it is desirable to alleviate the situation of the poorer classes of settlers, by an exemption from any charge on the Patent Deed, and also to remove all obstacles from the more free accommodation of others with larger grants, than have been usually made: His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council, has been pleased to order that the first mentioned class of settlers may receive a gratuitous Grant of Fifty Acres, under exclusion, be it understood, from any further Grant from the Crown, but with liberty to Lease the Reserves.

To meet the above Gratuity, and increased burthens attending the purchase and distribution of Lands &c. It is ordered that the scale of demands on the Grant of One Hundred Acres & upwards, shall be regulated according to the annexed Table, to take effect from the 1st January 1820.

It is further ordered that the restriction from sale for three years be abolished, and that Deeds may issue on proper certificates of the performance of Settling Duties being produced. The Grantee will be required to clear one half of the Road in front of each Lot, and the depth of two and one half Chains from the Road the whole length of every Lot, and erect a Dwelling House.

FEES.

Upon all Grants of Land issuing under orders in Council, bearing date subsequent to the 1st January 1820, the following sums will be paid by the Patentee:

Ruta Baga.

THE Upper Canada Agricultural Society has received some good seed of the Yellow Swedish Turnip or Ruta Baga. The quantity being small, the members of the Society will have the preference in the purchase of it (at cost price.)

This valuable root is peculiarly useful as a late spring food for cattle and other stock, at a time when generally all other succulent food is exhausted. Purchasers of the seed are requested to communicate to the Society their observations on the culture, produce and employment of the product. The seed to be had by applying to R. C. HORNE

A motion has been unsuccessfully made in the Court of Chancery to re-lease from arrest Don Luis Lopez de Mendez, Agent of the Venezuelean Government, on the complaint of Wm. Duncan Campbell, for an alleged sum of £3000 for supplies furnished the Venezuelean Revolutionists on the application of Don Luis.—The Court declined interfering, as it might imply a recognition of the government above mentioned. That Government has, however, acknowledged the debt & promised payment.

Mr. Carlisle, the bookseller, has been sentenced to three years imprisonment, and to pay a fine of £1500 for blasphemy in publishing Paine's Age of Reason.

Mr. Carlisle, while on trial for publishing Paine's Age of Reason, read the whole book in his defence; and his wife had his trial published, and the Age of Reason thus introduced in it. The original and interdicted book sold at 7s. 6d. The trial &c. for about 1s. 3d. This evasion of the object of the law, could not be tolerated without extreme absurdity—accordingly a prosecution was commenced against Mrs. Carlisle, for printing this pamphlet, which was, moreover, entitled "The Mock Trial of R. Carlisle."

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 1,

The operations of the Reformers, or Radicals as they are called, have had a serious effect on our commercial operations. It has checked the manufactures in a very considerable degree. The disturbances have now subsided; and it is understood that things are reverting to their usual course.—The country has been in a truly distressing state; but all ideas of any great political revolution taking place, is scouted among the rational part of the community; and any open attempt of the kind would, I am convinced, be immediately put down by the weight and influence of the country; and the radicals are now quarrelling among themselves."

Another letter says, "The Collector of this port has refused to permit the landing of Paine's bones, being a contraband article."

"We regret to announce the failure of a respectable American house here."

Accounts from Vienna state, that the Supplementary Congress, as it is called, was to assemble at Vienna, for the purpose of being formally opened on the 10th of November, and the first conference is to take place on the 20th. Its first measures will, it is said, have for their object the means of surveillance over the students at the Universities.

LONDON, Dec. 5.

The following is an extract of a letter from Manchester, received this morning.

Manchester, Dec. 1.—I have just heard that Walker and Knight have this morning been arrested on a warrant of Col. Hargreave's as an active Magistrate residing near Burnley, and the charge against them is understood to be High Treason, committed in the part they took at the meeting held at Hyberglum Eaves on the 15th ult. when a large part of the persons assembled went armed, as is shown in one of the last papers laid before Parliament."

Of the plates of the new bank-notes, to prevent forgery, is a very small miniature portrait of his Royal Highness the Prince Regent, most admirably executed in the chalk manner, and from the plates being of the newly discovered prepared steel, at least two hundred thousand impressions can be worked off without scarcely any injury to the engraving.

Morning Paper.]

Germany.—The Congress at Vienna is shortly to be opened. Notwithstanding the rumors in circulation with regard to the intentions of the Great Powers, as affecting the little States, the Diet, it appears, is so constituted as to allow the majority of votes in favor of the Small Powers. Invitations have been given to Frankfort and other free cities, to send Representatives to the Congress, to assemble at Vienna.

Spain.—It is asserted that Sir Henry Wellesley has repeated to the Duke of San Fernando, the observations he delivered to his predecessor in office, recommending the adoption of a constitution suited to the increased knowledge of the age, the abolition of the Inquisition, and the release and recal of the Cortes Deputies, as measures now demanded by the situation of Spain.

Denmark.—Accounts from Copenhagen say, that new troubles broke out in that capital and at Elsineur on the 28th ult. About nine at night, crowds assembled in the squares, and from thence proceeded to break the windows of the Jews, whom they even threatened to exterminate.—They were particularly violent against the Jewish bankers, Meyer & Frier; but patroles of hussars, and the agents of police, soon succeeded in restoring order. The measures resorted to, in order to suppress the former tumult, were again declared to be in full force. The scarlet fever had carried off a number of children in Denmark. Trade was still depressed and languid.

Flanders.—On the 2d of November, in the afternoon, a red or reddish colored rain fell at Blackenburg and Dixmude, in Flanders. The following night the same happened at Scherveningen. Such phenomena have been frequently observed, but no satisfactory chymical analysis of the coloring matter has yet been made public.

Mediterranean.—Advices from Malta state, General Sir T. Maitland sailed from thence on the 12th of Oct. in the Glasgow frigate, in consequence of accounts of great discontent and mutinous proceedings at Santa Maura.

Africa.—According to accounts received from the Coast of Barbary, the Regencies have given an entirely unsatisfactory answer to the demands of Admiral Freemantle and Admiral Jurier, who went, with a combined English & French squadron, to insist on the renunciation of piracy. The plague has ceased at Algiers, but still rages at Tunis, where it has carried of 60,000 persons.

Letters dated 4th Aug. have just been received from the Cape of Good Hope. At that period the colony was entirely freed from their troublesome neighbors, the Caffres, who had retreated across the river that separates their territory from that of the Cape. Government, we are informed, have ordered the 21st regiment of light dragoons from India to the Cape, which, if the intelligence is correct, will completely secure the settlers from the future inroads of the Caffres.—By the aid of Cavalry, they may always be driven off before there has been time to effect any extensive mischief.

China.—Interesting advices have been received from China, through Mr. Milne, of the London Missionary Society, resident there. That extensive empire is greatly agitated, and apparently on the eve of revolution; the country is filled with secret societies which numerous executions cannot put down; one hundred per month are executed in the single province of Canton. The names of some of the societies are ludicrous enough, viz; White Jackets, Red Beards, and Short Swords! A dreadful earthquake and famine, lately occurred in China, and which the superstitious natives consider as portending the fall of the present dynasty.

The paintings of students, who are candidates for the gold and silver medals, given by the Royal Academy, for the best works executed by them in the several schools of painting, sculpture, architecture, the antique and living models, were delivered on yesterday evening for the judgement of the President and general assembly of Royal Academicians. It is rather remarkable that the gold medal, for an original historical picture, has not been given for the last six or eight years. The subjects for the historical pictures are The Cave of Despair, from Spencer's Fairy Queen; that of the Models, Jacob wrestling with the Angel; and the architecture design, Pliny's Villa at the Laurentinum.

LONDON, Nov. 14.

Fire at Whitechapel.—The flames were first discovered by a watchman, issuing from a wing of the extensive premises of Messrs. Severne, King and Company, Sugar-Bakers. These premises were nine stories high, were very recently built of the finest brick, and cover more than an acre of ground; the walls were in some places three feet thick, strengthened by iron bars run through from the inside; the doors and windows frames were cast iron, and all the flues were lined with the same metal to prevent accidents. The surrounding neighbourhood consists principally in old buildings, not higher at the most than three stories. As soon as the fire was discovered, messengers were dispatched for engines; but before their arrival the whole premises were in flames, and the three surrounding streets (Union, Hollywell, and Mulberry streets) were so full of smoke and flames, as to preclude the possibility of bringing an engine near enough to play upon the warehouses—consequently they abandoned them to their fate and directed all their attention to the houses most in danger. The neighbourhood for a quarter of a mile round, wears the appearance of desolation, the warehouses look very much like the ruins of an old castle. Rumour assigns various causes for the fire, but the following is the most probable.—Messrs. Severne and King had a quantity of oil on the premises for the purpose of trying an experiment on the sugar, some of which it is supposed took fire by some means at present unknown. The whole damage will exceed £300,000.

A curious discovery was made a few days ago in the neighbourhood of Whitby. As some men were passing along the rock on the sea coast, they discovered, about two miles south of the town, a man in a cavity of the rock above them, apparently at work. It struck his observers, that he was about no good, and that he must be either engaged in smuggling, or in the fabrication of base coin. Under these impressions they deemed it proper to give information to the Excise, and no time was lost in making the necessary search. A neat little room was soon found cut in the rock; it contained a fire-place and cast metal stove, with the apparatus used in distilling spirit, but no liquor was found.

The following circular letter has been issued by the Provost of Glasgow, calling upon the citizens to enroll themselves for military service in case of necessity.

"The present alarming situation of this part of the country makes it generally apprehended that it may become necessary to call for the active aid of the loyal and well disposed part of the community, to suppress the attempts of the turbulent and disaffected.

"Circumstances may occur which may render the removal of a large part or the whole of the regular military force quite indispensable, and, in such case, the city would be left without any protection whatever.

"In this situation it has been judged proper to call for a pledge of service from every individual who can afford, without pay, to take up arms in defence of his King and country—of the peace and tranquility of this city—and of his own life and property.

This day his Majesty repaired in state to the Legislative Palace, and opened the sessions of the Chambers, by a speech from the throne. The affairs of France are represented in the speech as being in the most auspicious situation; and the information was received by animated tears.

He congratulated the Chambers upon the favorable termination of the negociations with the Holy See; upon the evident progress which was apparent in the trade, agriculture and fine arts, and upon the amelioration in the finances. He concluded his speech with recommending that the elections should be disencumbered with the annual action of parties; & that he should present laws for their confirmation which will give permanent security to all the interests guaranteed by the charter. An interesting case, in substance as follows, is shortly to come on before the Preliminary Court at Amsterdam: Louis Bonaparte, while he was King of Holland, had purchased the magnificent seat of Mr. Hope, the banker at Harlem.—Being obliged to quit his throne, he could not enjoy this private property. The present King of the Netherlands, at his entrance into the kingdom, took possession of the palace of Mr. Hope, as being a demesne of the Crown. On the first remonstrance of Louis Bonaparte, the Sovereign showed a desire to make an amicable arrangement, and offered to the ancient possessor, first 200,000 florins, and afterwards 300,000. Though the latter sum was pretty nearly the value of the estate, Louis refused it, as insufficient. The Ex-King then caused a consultation to be held by some distinguished lawyers—the majority of whom decided in favour of their sovereign; the minority, consisting of three members, decided in favour of the ex-King. This affair is going to be brought before the tribunal of the first instance in Amsterdam. Louis Bonaparte has chosen for his counsel, Dr. Mayer, one of the first lawyers in the Netherlands, and the author of some excellent works. The question to be proved before the tribunal will be, whether Louis Bonaparte paid for this palace out of his own private fortune and whether, in 1813, at the time of the installation of his Majesty, he was still in possession of this estate, or whether the Imperial Administration which had succeeded him, had not appropriated it and united it with the demesnes of the Crown? In the first place, the palace would be the private property of Louis Bonaparte; in the second, the King would owe nothing to the former possessor.

LONDON, Dec. 2.

The following is the substance of the bill to prevent training and military exercises:—

After stating in the preamble, that "in some parts of the United Kingdom, many clandestinely and unlawfully assembled, have practised military training and exercise, to the great terror and alarm of his Majesty's peaceable and loyal subjects, and the imminent danger of the public peace," it goes on to enact, that all meetings and assemblies of persons for the purpose of training or drilling themselves, or of being trained or drilled to the use of arms, or for the purpose of practising military exercise, movements or evolutions, without any lawful authority from his Majesty, or the Lieutenant of any county or riding, or of any stewartry, by commission or otherwise, so doing, shall be, and the same are hereby prohibited, as dangerous to the peace and security of his Majesty's liege subjects and of his Government; and every person who shall be present at or attend any such meeting or assembly, for the purpose of training and drilling any other person or persons to the use of arms, or the practice of military exercise, movements or evolutions, or who shall train or drill any other person or persons to the use of arms, or the practice of military exercise, movements or evolutions, or who shall aid or assist therein, legally convicted thereof, shall be liable to be transported for any term not exceeding seven years, or to be punished by imprisonment not exceeding two years, at the discretion of the Court, in which such conviction shall be had.

Every person who shall attend or be present at any such meeting or assembly as aforesaid, for the purpose of being, or who shall at any such meeting or assembly be trained or drilled to the use of arms, or the practice of military exercise, movements or evolutions, being legally convicted thereof, shall be liable to be punished by imprisonment, not exceeding two years, at the discretion of the Court in which said conviction shall be had."

The second clause enacts, that it shall be lawful for any Justice of the Peace, or peace officer, or any person acting in their aid or assistance, to disperse such training parties, and to commit or bail to suit the individuals composing them.

By another clause, persons so apprehended are required to plead, and proceed to trial forthwith, unless the trial is postponed by the Court, on sufficient ground shewn.

Any action against a Magistrate for any thing done under this Act must be commenced within three months after the fact committed; and double costs are awarded to the Defendant, if the Plaintiff fails in establishing his case.

This act may be repealed or altered this Session.

Search of Arms Bill.

The preamble of this bill states, that arms and weapons of various sorts have been collected, and are kept in various parts of the kingdom, for purposes dangerous to the public, and that it is expedient that Justices of the Peace should be authorized and empowered to obtain such ancient arms, it is therefore enacted, that upon the information, on oath, of one or more credible witnesses, Justices may issue warrants to search for and seize arms thus sworn to be kept for such dangerous purposes, and, in case admission is refused, power is given to the constable to enter by force, by day or by night, in any such house, or place whatsoever, and to detain, or cause to be detained, in safe custody, in such place as the said Justice of the Peace shall appoint and direct, the arms so found and seized as aforesaid, unless the owner thereof shall prove to the satisfaction of such Justice, that such arms or weapons were not kept for any purpose dangerous to the public peace.

The next clause gives the power of appeal to the Quarter Sessions, for the restitution of such arms.

The third clause authorises the arrest, the detention and holding to bail of all persons found carrying arms under suspicious circumstances.

The fourth clause gives a concurrent jurisdiction to all Justices of counties affected by the bill.

The Sheriff Depute of Scotland is, in the next clause, invested with similar powers.

Actions against Justices, constables, &c. for acts done in pursuance of this statute, must be brought within three months—the venue must be local, and in case of verdict for Defendant, or judgment on demurrer, Plaintiff must pay double costs.

A similar limitation holds with regard to Scotland, with the difference merely of allowing treble costs against the pursuer, inc se of the failure of his suit.

The act extends to the counties of Lancaster, Chester, the West Riding of Yorkshire, Stafford, Derby, Leicester, Nottingham, Cumberland, Northumber-

The Centaur, 74, has been brought up in England.—21 Warrant officers were to proceed in the Phaeton, to join the fleet on the Canada Lakes.—Rear Admiral the Hon. Sir Henry Blackwood is appointed Commander in Chief in the Indian Seas, his flag on board the Leander, 50.

LONDON, Dec. 2.

The following is the substance of the bill to prevent training and military exercises :—

After stating in the preamble, that "in some parts of the United Kingdom, men, clandestinely and unlawfully assembled, have practised military training and exercise, to the great terror and alarm of his Majesty's peaceable and loyal subjects, and the imminent danger of the public peace," it goes on to enact, that all meetings and assemblies of persons for the purpose of training or drilling themselves, or of being trained or drill ed to the use of arms, or for the purpose of practising military exercise, movements or evolutions, without any lawful authority from his Majesty, or the Lieutenant of any county or riding, or of any stewartry, by commission or otherwise, or so doing, shall be, and the same are hereby prohibited, as dangerous to the peace and security of his Majesty's liege subjects and of his Government; and every person who shall be present at or attend any such meeting or assembly, for the purpose of training and drilling any other person or persons to the use of arms, or the practice of military exercise, movements or evolutions, or who shall train or drill any other person or persons to the use of arms, or the practice of military exercise, movements or evolutions, or who shall aid or assist herein, legally convicted thereof, shall be liable to be transported for any term not exceeding seven years, or to be punished by imprisonment not exceeding two years, at the discretion of the Court, in which such conviction shall be had—and every person who shall attend or be present at any such meeting or assembly as aforesaid, for the purpose of being, or who shall at any such meeting or assembly be trained or drilled to the use of arms, or the practice of military exercise, movements or evolutions, being legally convicted thereof, shall be liable to be punished by imprisonment, not exceeding two years, at the discretion of the Court in which said conviction shall be had"

The second clause enacts, that it shall be lawful for any Justice of the Peace, or police officer, or any person acting in their aid or assistance, to disperse such training parties, and to commit or hold to bail the individuals composing them.

By another clause, persons so apprehended are required to plead, and proceed to trial forthwith, unless the trial is postponed by the Court, on sufficient ground shewn.

Any action against a Magistrate for any thing done under this Act must be commenced within three months after the fact committed; and double costs are awarded to the Defendant, if the Plaintiff fails in establishing his case.

This act may be repealed or altered this Session

Search of Arms Bill.

The preamble of this bill states, that arms and weapons of various sorts have been collected, and are kept in various parts of the kingdom, for purposes dangerous to the public, and that it is expedient that Justices of the Peace should be authorized and empowered to obtain such arms, it is therefore enacted, that upon information, on oath, of one or more credible witnesses, Justices may issue warrants to search for and seize arms be sworn to be kept for such dangerous purposes, and, in case admission is refused, power is given to the constable to break open, by day or by night, in every such house, or place whatsoever, and retain, or cause to be detained, in safe custody, in such place as the said Justices of the Peace shall appoint and direct, the arms so found and seized as aforesaid, until the owner thereof shall prove, to the satisfaction of such Justice, that such arms or weapons were not kept for any purpose dangerous to the public peace.

The next clause gives the power of appeal to the Quarter Sessions, for the restoration of such arms.

The third clause authorises the arrest, detention and holding to bail of all persons found carrying arms under suspicious circumstances.

The fourth clause gives a concurrent jurisdiction to all Justices of counties afloat by the bill.

The Sheriff Depute of Scotland is, in the next clause, invested with similar powers.

Actions against Justices, constables, and others for acts done in pursuance of this Act, must be brought within three months—the venue must be local, and in case of verdict for Defendant, or judgement on demurrer, Plaintiff must pay full costs.

A similar limitation holds with regard to appeals, with the difference merely of allowing treble costs against the party in case of the failure of his suit.

The act extends to the counties of Chester, Chester, the West Riding of York, Stafford, Derby, Leicester, Durham, Cumberland, Northumberland, Renfrew and Lanarks, and such other counties as, upon representation made by the Justices at Quarter or General Sessions, or by any general meeting of the Lieutenancy, shall, by Royal Proclamation, be declared to be disturbed.—

The operation of the act may be restricted or extended by the King in Council.

The London Courier of the 31 inst. states, that on the perceeding evening, there were very interesting debates in both Houses of Parliament. In the House of Lords, the bills for the seizure of arms and the prevention and punishment of drilling and training, were severally read a second time without a division. Lord Sidmouth on the occasion, observed, that "since the papers were laid upon the table all the information received from the quarters referred to, decidedly proved that the training to the use of arms had materially increased and extended, and that arms to a considerable amount had also recently been procured." In the House of Commons, the bill on seditious meetings was read a second time, and the question was pressed to a division, when the numbers were—ayes, 351—noes, 128; majority, 223. The Courier adds, that the opposition had 22 votes less than on either of their former divisions.

A change of ministry in France has recently taken place. Count de Cazes is prime minister, and the French ambassador at the court of St. James is appointed minister of war. The London Times remarks that the new ministers are all repectable men; and that the new minister of war "is in the highest degree popular, both with the army, and beyond its limits."

The London Gazette of the 13th contains an order for the Court's going into mourning for Charles IV. late King of Sardinia.

All the English officers in foreign countries have been ordered to join their respective corps and regiments without delay.

Sandt, the murderer of the celebrated Kotzebue, is stated to have been recovered from the wounds which he inflicted on himself, and is soon to be brought to trial. He has arrived at Mentz.

Strong gates are making for the several entrances to Chester Castle: and 20 pieces of cannon have been mounted on the castle.

The Court of King's Bench has granted rule for a criminal information against the high Constable of Coventry, for having dispersed, "with circumstances of violence," a meeting of the people for the discussion of political grievances.

On the 6th of November Lord Sidmouth issued a circular to the several Lord Lieutenants, calling their attention to the cannon which are lying about throughout the Kingdom, and which are private property. Lord Sidmouth directs that immediate steps be taken for rendering such cannon useless, or for removing them to a place of security.

The regular Prussian army consists of the following troops. Guards, 17,903; infantry, 104,712; cavalry, 19,232; artillery, 13, 718; total, 157,370. The whole of the landwehr consists of 438,237 men, in 289 battalions and 276 squadrons.

Extracts from the Prince Regent's Speech:

"I regret to have been under the necessity of calling you together at this period of the year: but the seditious practices so long prevalent in some of the manufacturing districts of the country, have been continued with increased activity since you were last assembled in Parliament.

"They have led to proceedings incompatible with the public tranquility and with the peaceful habits of the industrious classes of the community; and a spirit is now fully manifested, utterly hostile to the Constitution of this Kingdom, aiming not only at the change of those political institutions which have hitherto constituted the pride and security of this country, but at the subversion of the rights of property and of all order in society.

"I have given directions that the necessary information on this subject be laid before you—and I feel it to be my indispensable duty to press on your immediate attention the consideration of such measures as may be requisite for the counteraction and suppression of a system, which if not effectually checked, must bring confusion and ruin on the nation.

"The necessity of affording protection to the lives and property of his majesty's loyal subjects, has compelled me to make some addition to our military force; but I have no doubt you will be of opinion that the arrangements for this purpose have been effected in the manner likely to be the least burthensome to the country.

"Although the revenue has undergone some fluctuation since the close of the last session of Parliament, I have the satisfaction of being able to inform you it appears to be again in a course of progressive improvement.

"Upon the loyalty of the great body of the people I have the most confident reliance; but it will require your utmost vigilance and exertion, collectively and individually, to check the dissemination of the doctrines of Treason and impiety, and to impress upon the minds of all classes of his majesty's subjects, that it is from the cultivation of the principles of Religion, and from a just subordination to lawful authority, that we can alone expect the continuance of that divine favour and protection which have hitherto been so signally experienced by this Kingdom."

On the 24th of Nov. in the British House of Commons, the address to the Prince Regent, echoing his speech, was debated, and the speeches occupy ten columns in the Times. An amendment, proposed by Mr. Tierney, was negatived. The yeas on it were 150, the nays 381. Lord Castlereagh supported his speech, by laying on the table a great number of letters relative to the internal state of the nation.

On motion of the Marquis of Lansdowne in the House of Lords, Nov. 30, for an inquiry into the causes of the distresses in the manufacturing districts; supported by lord Erskine and earl Grey—lord Grenville opposed it warmly. Yeas 47, nays 178. Majority against the motion 131.

A similar motion was brought forward in the House of Commons on the same evening by lord Althorpe, and the motion was seconded by Col. Davies. Mr. Bathurst opposed the motion. Sir. M. W. Ridley contended that the call for inquiry from every part of the kingdom made it imperative on the House to refer the papers to a committee. The other speakers were, Mr. Long Wellesley, Mr. Knnaiard, lord Lascelles, lord Milton, and several other members. The House divided, and there appeared for the motion 150—against 523—majority, 173.

Mr. Canning has taken part in some of the interesting debates in Parliament—but at the last date was confined with the gout.

The Address of the House of Lords was presented on the 25th.

Letters have been received from Mogadore, dated the 28th of Sept. which mention, that the plague which had been for some time in the vicinity, had at length broken out in that town. PORTSMOUTH, Oct. 2.

On Wednesday the Redpole brig of war, Capt. J. D. Evance, arrived from St. Helena station, after a passage of 50 days, having left the island on the 9th of September. She brought despatches from Sir Hudson Low and Admiral Plampin, and a mail. The following is an extract from a letter:

ST. HELENA, August 7.

"The Redpole proceeds to England immediately. As neither this vessel nor the Dotterel, which sailed before, has served longer than two years, it is supposed to be intended that they shall both finish their term of service on the home station. We understand Bonaparte is in better spirits than he has been for some time; his health much as usual. Whatever others, of any rank or station residing here, may affect to state concerning him, be assured very little is certainly known. He has so long imposed a seclusive life upon himself, that he appears to have at length obtained all the habits of a confirmed recluse. He had become so entirely abstracted even from the distant view of those whose duty it was to make a daily report of his being alive, that it became necessary to inform him, that if he did not voluntarily afford the officer on duty an opportunity to certify the fact required from him, namely, that he was alive, there would be a necessity of the officer's making a daily personal visit to him for that purpose.—He has since relaxed in his manners in this respect, and has been out of his house a little. The new house building for him is expected to be finished in about nine months. The Island is generally healthy.

An Abstract is in the press of all the most useful information relative to the United States of America, and the British colonies of Canada, the Cape of Good Hope, New South Wales, and Van Dieman's Island; exhibiting at one view the comparative advantages and disadvantages each country offers for emigration; collected from the most valuable and recent publications with notes and observations, by Wm. Mr. James Ramsaw, copper-plate printer, Fetter-lane, has received the Silver medal of the Society for the Encouragement of Arts, Manufactures, and Commerce, for an improved plan of copper-plate printing, by the use of steam in the place of charcoal fires, the effluvia of which are so injurious to the health of the workmen, and at the same time subject to many accidents by fire,—as by the old process, each man works over a charcoal fire, without any chimney to carry off the vapour arising from the burning charcoal. Thirteen of those fires he formerly had in his work-shop and one seacoal fire or stove in his drying-room, fourteen fires in the whole: but, by this new process, the use of the thirteen charcoal fires is suspended.

Vinegar from Wood.—This new and useful article of commerce we wish to point out to our readers, as not yet sufficiently known, and but lately brought to great perfection." It is made in the large way at an establishment at Battersea belonging to Dr. Bollman, 139, Sloane-street, Chelsea, of one uniform strength of fifty degrees by the new Excise antometer.

The of the above strength admits of being diluted with seven waters, or mixed, one part of acid with seven parts of water, which will reduce it to the strength of common distilled vinegar; it is then well qualified for pickling vegetables and fish; the latter particularly, is found to be preserved longer with this vinegar, and to eat firmer and better, than with any other. This acid is bright and colourless as water; but it readily takes any colour or flavour and when coloured and flavoured, to give it a fruit taste. At the establishment, it makes an excellent vinegar for the table use, when diluted with five or six waters, and then its colour is like white wine: it has not the malt flavour, but it is superior to it in taste, with this additional quality, that it will keep for any length of time, in any climate, without losing its strength, or becoming ropy and thick, or mothery, as it is generally termed. At sea it is particularly useful for the scurvy; and for all medical purposes, it answers the uses of the best distilled vinegar, and makes the ammonia acetata in great perfection. Also for surgical purposes, where often a more concentrated vinegar is required than is found in the shops, it is eminently useful.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

NEW-YORK, Dec. 24th.

From Cadiz.—We learn from Capt. Macey, of the ship Edward, in 47 days from Cadiz, that the new Queen of Spain, Amelia, of Saxony, arrived at Madrid on the 19th of October, and was received with great and splendor. It was a report at Cadiz, and we only mention it as such, that a treaty offensive and defensive had been entered into between Great Britain and Spain. The former promises to assist the latter in warding off all attacks upon the Floridas. In consideration of which, she is to be permitted to introduce cotton fabrics in Spain, and her colonies. The expedition for South America was to sail from Cadiz the first of January. British ships were preferred to American, when any freight offered, on account, it was said, of two American vessels having been lately captured by the patriots, bound from Cadiz to Vera Cruz. The deaths, which had averaged upwards of 100 daily, for 2 weeks before capt. Macy sailed, had diminished to from 60 to 80 a day. The whole number of deaths were computed at 5000, and 6000 remained sick in the hospitals.

FROM LOWER-CANADA.

HALIFAX, N. S. Nov. 12.

To His Excellency Lieutenant General the Right Honorable GEORGE Earl of DALHOUSIE, Baron Dalhousie, of Dalhousie Castle, Knight Grand Cross of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Captain General and Governor in Chief in and over His Majesty's Provinces of Lower Canada, Upper-Canada, Nova Scotia, and New-Brunswick, and the Islands of Prince Edward & Cape Breton, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY.

His Majesty's Council beg leave to offer you their cordial congratulations, upon your Appointment to the exalted and important Trust of Governor General of His Majesty's North American Dominions.

The ability, impartiality, and integrity which your Lordship has evinced in the administration of the Government of Nova Scotia, enable us to appreciate the favour which his Royal Highness the Prince Regent has bestowed upon his Majesty's Subjects, in North America, by committing the Charge of their Rights and Interests to Your Lordship.

The unwearied pains which your Lordship has taken to make yourself acquainted with the state of this Province, the exertions you have made to understand and to advance its best interests; the attention which you have afforded to the application of all classes of His Majesty's subjects, under your Government, and the readiness with which you have endeavoured to relieve their wants, are certain indications of the benefits which our Fellow Subjects in the Canadas will derive from your Lordship's immediate superintendence and command.

While we rejoice at every mark of the royal favor which is conferred upon a nobleman so justly entitled to our warmest affections; we lament, that this event will remove your Lordship from Nova Scotia & deprive us of a Governor, under whose administration we have lived in harmony and happiness. We will not, however permit our personal feelings to diminish the warmth of our congratulations upon this occasion; and we beg leave to assure your Lordship, that we shall ever rejoice at any event that may extend your power of doing good, or contribute to your welfare and happiness; and that, wherever you go, you will carry with you the esteem, respect and affection, of His Majesty's Council of this Province.

ANSWER.

Mr. President, and Gentlemen of His Majesty's Council,

I Receive this Address from you with the utmost satisfaction and pleasure.

I receive it as a most honorable testimony of my conduct, expressed by those who have had the best means of judging of the motives and principles upon which I have acted. It is a testimony which I shall feel proud in presenting to my Sovereign, as a proof that I have faithfully and zealously done my duty; and on which I might rest a hope of receiving His Majesty's approbation.

His Royal Highness the Prince Regent has been most graciously pleased to raise me to still higher honour, and still more important duties; in these I shall continue the course which you have approved here; and the sentiments expressed in your Address shall be the guide of my public life.

If my time has been spent among you with any advantage to the country, it has also passed in uninterrupted happiness to myself. My residence must now be removed from hence; but, be assured that no change can diminish the warm interest I shall ever take in the welfare and prosperity of Nova Scotia.

(Signed,) DALHOUSIE.

A man of the name of Mitchel, a notorious offender, from the States, a woman, and young girl, were yesterday evening taken into custody, the woman for passing, and the man for bringing into Quebec, and having in his custody ten dollar counterfeit notes, of the Quebec Bank. Another man, who had passed some, and was taken hold of, contrived to make his escape. The counterfeits are imitations of the latter-printed notes; but are engraved, or plate-printed, instead of being letter-printed. The names that are written on the true bills, are also engraved on the false ones. In the counterfeits there is a fine hair stroke running from the top of the strong part of the X, in the right hand corner, expressive of ten, which is not in the true notes. The counterfeits are made payable to J. Wilson, in which the bottom of the strokes of the W. are much more open than in the true notes, forming ovals. The right arm of the T. is considerably longer than the left. A close examination of them cannot fail of leading to detection. It is supposed that only about ten or twelve have been put into circulation, as the man who brought them arrived only yesterday.

Burglary.—A daring attempt at robbery was made, last Sunday morning between the hours of 4 and 5, at the dwelling house of Mr. Andrew Allan, Notre Dame street. Mr. Allan, having several times during the night heard a noise in the passage which separates his house from that of Mrs. Lukin, rose at length from his bed, went to the back part of the house, and looking out of a window from the attic story, perceived a man stealing with cautious steps from the inner gate of the passage (which, as well as the outer one he had succeeded in forcing) towards the cellar window, through which he crept, feet foremost; but, upon Mr. Allan demanding in a loud voice his business there he sprung back through it with agility, darted through the gate, and made off. The family being alarmed and a candle lighted, Mr. A. descended to the first floor and found, to his surprise, the trap-door, leading to the cellar, open. Upon going below he discovered that the villain must have been there several times in the course of the night, as the cellar window had been removed by breaking four of the panes, and a whole partition of boards taken down in order to gain access to that part of the cellar communicating with the apartments above. An operation which must have occupied a considerable time and required no small labour to effect. In the confusion of his retreat, the villain had left behind his hat, glove, shoe and stick that, from its peculiarity of formation, seemed to have been contrived for the purpose of burglary—the shoe fortunately led to his detection and apprehension; on being brought round to several shoemakers, it was recognized as the fellow of one which a servant man of Mr. McDonell had left to get matched, saying that he had lost the other in a Christmas frolic. He was accordingly apprehended and avowed the fact. We have omitted to mention that he stole a hat out of Mr. Allan's parlour, in order to replace his own which he had lost in the cellar. Some time before his apprehension, he had the audacity to enter Mr. Allan's shop, in hopes of recovering by stealth the articles he had left behind him in his flight.—Com. Cour.

From the Kingston Chronicle.

We deem it our duty to put the public on their guard against counterfeit gold coins, which seem to have been pretty generally introduced into circulation.—We have heard of several unsuspecting persons having been imposed on—and have ourselves seen a spurious double Louis d'or, the sort of money principally counterfeited. On close inspection, the fraud may be easily detected. The piece bears the date of 1790—is about 56 grains lighter than the standard weight, badly milled, and of a larger size than the good coin. The Head of Louis 16th, the device, &c. are very faintly impressed, and the whole so clumsily executed as to render the imposition apparent to the cautious observer.

The purity of flour may be easily ascertained by grasping a handful and squeezing it for half a minute, when if laid on the table it will preserve its form, if adulterated it falls down. Another mode to try good flour is to dip the forefinger and thumb into a little sweet oil and take up a small quantity of flour between them, if pure, it may be rubbed for any length of time and will not become adhesive.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Acadian Recorder, Nov. 27.

At a late meeting of the East Hants Agricultural Society, Mr. Wier the Vice President addressed the members in the following

SPEECH :—

GENTLEMEN,

In the history of man we find, that the portion of happiness allotted to him in this life is only to be obtained in a state of society; and that the human race can exist with comfort only in that state. And as happiness is the object that his nature requires him to pursue, and that happiness consists in the gratification of his wants, his efforts are unceasingly directed to the most important of all, viz:—The support of the body—and as it was taken from the earth, so by the productions of the earth it must be supported.

This established truth leads us naturally to conclude, that this is the very first and most essential of all his occupations—to which all others must look for their support. In the progress of time it came to be improved by discoveries in many different branches of science—and by the institution of societies, the successful experiments of individuals were made known to others, and promoted the general interest. In this view alone their advantages were very great and obvious, and led to their formation in this as well as in other arts. From an extraordinary circumstance, Nova Scotia is likely to reap the benefits of this excellent system—which the efforts of Agricola have taught us here to understand and value.

Permit me, now gentlemen, to address you on that subject, for which we are this day assembled.

And, first, I am extremely happy to see so numerous and respectable a body of farmers coming forward with the determination to rescue in some degree Agriculture from the degradation into which it had fallen in this Province.

If it be a fixed truth that by Agriculture we are all supported, it is surely the most noble and important of all employments, and claims the first attention of all classes, as in the discharge of a duty which they owe to God, to man, and to themselves.

We are commanded by our Creator to subdue the earth; and let us here take a view of the arduous task thus enjoined us, and of the cares and duties of the farmer.

First of all the trees of the forest must be removed and every other obstruction, to make way for the tilling of the soil and depositing the seeds. After this first labour, only one white crop can be taken. It must then be left to grass from ten to fifteen years—when a new process is to be commenced, viz: to root out and destroy the stumps, gather and remove the stones, in some places cut drains—all of which must be done before he can introduce the plough to level the cradle hills and convert his fields into arable land.

Having surmounted these formidable difficulties, we are next attacked with numerous tribes of weeds—which are so wonderfully multiplied and propagated by their seeds, that if not carefully extirpated they will contend with the crop, and as I have sometimes seen, get the complete ascendant. On this head I earnestly recommend to you the instructions of Agricola in one of his letters on Weeding.

We have also to collect and put into the ground manures—composed of fossils, earths of different qualities, animal and vegetable substances, and in short all putrescent materials. To understand this branch of his business and to attend to it closely is a leading duty in every farmer, and in Nova Scotia has been shamefully neglected. The principles upon which improvement can be effected are so simple that no man can plead ignorance as an excuse.

The seed is the next object of attention, and it requires all the attention we can bestow.—Like the human body it is subject to many and various diseases—for the cure of which anumber of curious expedients have been tried.—These it is the duty of every farmer to be acquainted with; for if the seed be diseased and light, how can we expect a heavy crop? As a change of seed is of great use, it might do good were the eastern and western Districts to exchange every year—which, with the new importations by the Central Board, would remedy the evils we now complain of.

When we compare the state of the Province with what it might and will be on all these particulars, we are sensibly struck with the difference, and with the wretched state in which we have hitherto stood. We had no idea until lately of what improvement Agriculture was really capable, and that it was connected with the whole circle of the sciences.

But when we turn to the cheering prospects which are now opening upon us, what glad emotions do they not excite! By the efforts of the Secretary of the Provincial Society, all classes are now interested in the first of arts. Every description of men, high and low, rich and poor, are pressing forward with a laudable anxiety to promote the good cause. The dawn of science in this our infant country, is instigating us to a spirit of unity and exertion—whose results, happy and great as they must be, no one can fully estimate. We have every thing to animate us. We have a large field before us—are little encumbered with taxes—have no rents to pay—no tithes—no oppressive poor rates—and what improvements we make will in all likelihood descend to our children. With these considerations before our eyes; under the guidance of men of talents and perseverance; with the aid of improved machinery; with the information which can now be preserved and reduced to scientific principles; and these combined with the spirit which has extended every where, and to this District as much as to any other—I know not what flattering results may not reasonably be expected.

The objects which this Society have to pursue are obvious; and in showing the duties of the farming life, have been partly alluded to. Every man should come to our meetings to think and talk of nothing but Agriculture. If he has made any discovery or experiment, let him describe it to others; and in his turn he will no doubt learn something useful. The knowledge of one man will be no longer confined to himself, but will reach and benefit all—We will thus learn the most speedy and effectual means of clearing the ground, of forming composts, of cleaning our seeds, and of doing all Agricultural operations. In my humble opinion, however, our funds, should be expended, first—to procure the best seeds of corns and grasses: second—to improve by importation, our breed of cattle, horses, sheep and swine—which may be got, many of them, within the Province: third—to obtain the best and approved implements of of husbandry: and fourth—to collect Books treating of these subjects—from which we may get at an easy rate, much valuable information.

It is my earnest hope and belief, that this Society, now regularly and respectably organized, will strive to overtake these several objects as fast as circumstances will permit, and that we shall not be behind hand in the race of emulation. A kind and benevolent Providence has hitherto smiled on our endeavors; and let us with one heart and voice, implore the continuance of his favour and protection.

REMARKS.

This Speech was composed by an old man who has passed the meridian of life; and was delivered at the formation of the East Hant's Agricultural Society. It abounds with such a variety of sprightly images, that were I not in the knowledge of the fact, I would suppose it to be the production of a fervid and youthful fancy. That sort of enthusiasm, which breathes throughout the tenor of the composition, is seldom the attribute of old age; and nothing but an ardour and swell of feeling, and the paramount importance of the subject and occasion, could have lifted him above the simple and unadorned language of ordinary life. No surer proof of the strength and expansion of the agricultural spirit could be adduced than the lively interest which this venerable old man has taken in the conducting of the Society's affairs; and in instituting those experiments, to which the new theory of manures has given rise. Not satisfied with discharging in a scrupulous and conscientious manner, the duties of the vice-presidency, he has constructed his barn on new principles, on purpose to save the urine, and considering his stock, can exhibit the largest pile of compost in Nova Scotia, prepared with this enriching liquid. Such an example in a new settlement speaks more strongly to the understanding, and leads more directly to practice, than the most laboured and finished arguments; and is admirably calculated to quicken and arouse that torpor, which has so long been the bane of our agriculture. The fervour of youth catches fire and blazes into action, when thus sanctioned by the soberness of age; and the careless and indifferent shake off their supineness when brought within the sphere of such an animating example. A character, like this, placed in every district of the Province, would give a vigour to our measures, and insure a success to our undertaking, which would be quite irresistible and certain. I cannot restrain from bearing this honorable testimony; although much more personal than any thing I have yet attempted, either underany assumed or real signature.

The letter, which announces the establishment of another Agricultural Society, must be equally gratifying to the friends of Nova Scotia. It clearly evinces, that the flame which has been kindled at the holy altar of the public welfare is not a sudden flash which bursts forth unexpectedly, and as quickly expires, but is a steady light, which has gathered strength with its continuance, and in the end will illuminate our whole horizon. This for a Society is an excellent station and the spirit, which has been infused into many of the farmers there, gives an earnest of their future progress. Placed at a suitable distance from Truro and Musquodoboit, this association will embrace all those freeholders, who skirt the Shubenacadie, Gay's river, St. Andrews, and the lower part of Stewiac, and may thus become the centry of energy to a very wide and extensive district. From the names, which embellish the list of its officers, I anticipate the happiest effects.

JOHN YOUNG, Secy.

Halifax, Nov. 25.

A new road is proposed by the gentlemen of Cumberland, which will shorten the distance between Huntingdon and Edinburgh upwards of thirty miles, by bending the road to Carlisle Gretnabridge, by Alston-moor, New Castleton, and Hawick. This will produce a saving of ten miles to Glasgow and Portpatrick.

Robert Southey, esq. author of Wat Tyler, &c. will soon publish, in foolscap octavo, a poem called the Fall of Paraguay.

IT having been represented to Mrs. Goodman, that the Terms for Education in her School are too high, she takes the earliest opportunity of announcing such alterations as the expense of the establishment will allow, which she flatters herself will now meet the approbation of her friends and the public.

NOTICE

IS hereby given that my wife Hannah Snyder, having without just provocation quitted my bed and board, and now living with another man, I do hereby forbid any person harbouring her or trusting her on my account, as they will answer at their peril.

JACOB SNYDER.

York, 29th Dec. 1819.

WHEREAS JACOB SNIDER, of the Township of Scarborough, has, on the 29th day of the month of December last, advertised me, his wife, in the Upper Canada Gazette, as having left his bed and board without any just cause for so doing, and likewise forbidding every person trusting or harbouring me on his account: I consider it a justice I owe to my own character, to state to the public, that so far from my having done any such thing, as he has thought proper to state, he himself withdrew from me and his children, on the 26th of December now last past, thereby leaving me and them without the means of support or bedding, at this inclement season of the year. I think it necessary further to state, that his conduct has been, for many years past, marked with the utmost severity and a total want of feeling, either to myself or his children, and that he has not furnished either food or clothing for myself and children since the month of October last, although one of the children is an infant at the breast.

Surveyor Genl.

Ruta Baga.

THE Upper Canada Agricultural Society has received some good seed of the Yellow Swedish Turnip or Ruta Baga. The quantity being small, the members of the Society will have the preference in the purchase of it (at cost price.)

This valuable root is peculiarly useful as a late spring food for cattle and other stock, at a time when generally all other succulent food is exhausted. Purchasers of the seed are requested to communicate to the Society their observations on the culture, produce and employment of the product. The seed to be had by applying to

FROM EUROPE.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.
DECEMBER 2.

Seditious Meetings Prevention Bill.

Lord Castlereagh moved the order of the day for the second reading of the Seditious Meetings Bill.

The order of the day having been read, some conversation ensued on a point of order.

Mr. Grenfell begged the indulgence of the House for a few minutes, as he was most anxious to express his opinion on the measures before it. He would briefly state, that he had abstained, on a former occasion, from giving his vote either on the question for an amendment, or on the motion of the Noble Lord (Castlereagh) on Tuesday last, purely from personal feelings of affection for his Right Honorable Friend below him, and of esteem for the noble lord. He certainly had to perform, on the present occasion, a most painful task; because the opinions he was about to declare were, he knew, in opposition to those of the friends by whom he was surrounded, and with whom it had ever been a personal gratification to him to have acted in union; but now that a question, involving measures of serious importance to the welfare of the country, was before the House, he could not allow personal feelings to interfere with his public duty. From the best consideration he had been enabled to give the subject, and from the best information he had been enabled to obtain, he felt it incumbent upon him to declare, that to the principle of the measures introduced by the Noble Lord he agreed; reserving to himself, however, the right of supporting any amendment he might consider to be an improvement, and also reserving to himself the right of considering whether any and what clauses ought to be of a temporary nature (Hear, hear!) Upon these conditions he gave the measure his hearty concurrence and support.

The Solicitor General congratulated the House on the opinions just expressed by the last Hon. Member who addressed them. He congratulated them also on what he calculated to be the result of their deliberations, relative to the two great measures proposed by his Majesty's Government for the suppression of disloyalty and the protection of the well disposed. After these measures were fully developed, he trusted they would secure the sanction as well as the approbation of them all. Here he wished to claim their indulgence for himself; as in consequence of the absence of his hon. and learned friend the Attorney-General, a serious duty had been cast upon him, that of explaining to the House, the nature, the object, and the bearings of those measures which them formed the subject of discussion. He could not pretend to say he was fully acquainted with all the various details of these measures. Without that acquaintance with them, the House would perceive the difficulty he had to contend with, and would, he had no doubt, excuse those imperfections almost consequent upon the unprepared state in which he was called upon to address them. He (the Solicitor General) would proceed however to their development with as much distinctness and simplicity as possible; and when he had spoken of their nature as he believed it to be, trusted they would not be found to go beyond what the dangers of the country called for. He regretted the disposition which was manifested by many Gentlemen on the other side of the House to underrate the evils with which they were all threatened, as if the public danger were confined to the county of Lancaster, and a part of that of Chester. To dissipate such a notion, it would be only necessary to look at the documents on the table; to the facts which were already before the public. It was stated, that the situation of the county of York was not of such a character as to call for the measures proposed by his Majesty's Government; but he considered its situation quite as dangerous as that of either of those counties admitted on all sides to be in a state of considerable danger.—Granting that no very immediate or very imminent danger was to be apprehended from their present condition, was there any reason to suppose, if some measures for repressing disaffection were not now resorted to, that little short of open rebellion would be the inevitable consequence? Precautionary measures were now loudly called for, in order to the maintenance of the public peace. Absolute revolution was the aim of those parties who advised and assisted at all the various meetings which ought to be put down, if the Constitution of England was to be defended. In estimating, however, the dangers that assailed them, surely should they merely refer to the documents before them? Let them look at the state of Cumberland, Westmoreland, and Durham, and the immediate vicinity of Glasgow and of Paisley, leaving for the present out of their consideration what went forward in the metropolis; the attempts that were made in Warwickshire, in short, from the West Riding of York to Glasgow, a distance of above two hundred miles, and comprising the industrious and manufacturing people, perhaps the most active part of the population of the Kingdom. All these things should be considered and taken into account by hon. members before they could properly estimate the necessity and justness of the measures which were proposed by his Majesty's Government. That activity of the disaffected, their zeal in planning and their rapidity in spreading their dangerous objects throughout the country, rendered it necessary to follow them from their head quarters in Lancashire, and follow them so promptly, that their guilty designs might be punished and frustrated, before they swell to such a height as to defy the laws and overthrow the Constitution. Good God! was it to be said that all the evils which were admitted to exist were merely local?—Were they not to look to the events that occurred in France at the period of the Revolution? Who was there that did not know the same spirit which now operated in this country, was also exhibited in those parts of France, which were peculiarly the manufacturing districts, while the others looked supinely on, until they fell in the general wreck, which swept every thing that was venerable and respectable away? He asked if bad principles were not now prevalent, if wild and disaffected schemes were not now going on, which, if suffered to extend, would produce the same effects in England they had done in France? He asked, then, whether they could not almost consider a Revolution in this country was not already consummated and perfected? It was only necessary to look to the character of the measures lately pursued throughout the country, it was only necessary to look to the leaders by whom the deluded people were directed, it was only necessary to look to the avowed objects which they had in view, in order to see the necessity of some expeditious measures being resorted to, in order to combat them successfully. He had so far made a few general observations on the measures necessary to be proposed, and he now proceeded to the more particular points to which he begged their attention. First then, as to the bill against training to the use of arms for revolutionary purposes, there could be no doubt of some measure being requisite to prevent it. Secondly, as to the collecting of arms for similar purposes; there equally existed no doubt that it should also be put down. But the measure of greatest importance, which was the third, would be, to ascertain by what means these two desirable objects could be effected, without the least infringement on the subject's right, and the greatest security to the public peace. In addition to the danger of training and collecting arms for improper purposes, the House should not forget the open & unblushing encouragement which was given to assassination, not only in the disaffected press of the metropolis, but also in the Gazette of the Reformers, published at Manchester, in which several individuals were specially pointed out to the wrath of the misguided and infuriate multitude, and in which, amongst other things, it was asked, if no noble minded Brutus could be found to rid the earth of them? Such things could not and would not be long tolerated. The next measure to be regarded was, the formation of those dangerous societies, which were ostensibly used for the purpose of Reform, but in point of fact, for making such demonstration of their strength, as to intimidate the weak, and secure, if possible, the adherence of numbers to their cause. One of the most formidable engines that could be wielded had been too long in their possession, and they made such an use of it, as to call for its prompt and immediate suppression. He alluded to the press, (for the regular and more respectable, but the cheap and low press. It was admitted on all hands, that press was in such a state, as to require the exertion of every means to prevent its poison from any wider and more extensive circulation.—Having thus far pointed out the leading features of that system against which the measures of His Majesty's Government were directed, the question came to this, whether the counteracting system proposed by the servants of the crown was not as wise, discreet, and moderate as could be submitted, for effecting those objects which all admitted to be necessary——His Majesty's Ministers knowing some measure to be necessary, only proposed those which they thought most calculated to effect the desired object. And he took upon himself to say, that they should trench as little on the established laws of the country, as the circumstances of the time admitted. He flattered himself that when their nature was fairly considered, they would be found to realise the object which every friend to order and to loyalty must have in view. He knew it had been said by an Hon. and Learned Friend of his at the other side of the House. (Mr. Brougham) that the different measures proposed could not well be separated.

Mr. Brougham.—"I beg the honorable and learned gentleman's pardon; I never said the measures could not be considered separately: I said the discussion of one almost involved the discussion of the others, but not that they could not be separately considered."
