COUNCIL-CHAMBER.
NAVY-HALL,—April 16th. 1793.

PRESENT

HIS EXCELLENCY
JOHN GRAVES SIMCOE, Esq;
Lieutenant Governor, &c. &c. &c.—IN COUNCIL.

HIS EXCELLENCY directed the eighth Article of the Rules and Regulations, framed by the Governor and Council of the late Province of Quebec, bearing date the Twenty-fifth of Auguſt 1789, for the Conduct of the Land Office Department to be read, whereby the ſeveral Boards are reſtricted from granting ſuch ſpots as contain convenience for Mills which are to be reſerved in the hands of the Crown, and upon a [illegible] Wealth within the Province, it appearing to His Excellency and the Council that the reaſons aſſigned for laying ſuch reſtraint no longer ſubſiſt; it would therefore not be conformable to His Majeſty's Gracious intentions of Promoting the Welfare and Proſperity of His ſubjects in this Province ſhould theſe Reſtrictions continue to be impoſed.

RESOLVED,—That all Proprietors of Land having thereon conveniences for the erection of Mills are hereby permitted and authorized to make uſe of ſuch advantages provided they do not thereby prejudice the navigation, or obſtruct the paſſage of Fiſh in thoſe waters where they uſually reſort.

PROVIDED always that this Permiſſion does not extend to any part of the River above, or below the Falls of Niagara forming the Military communication between Lake Erie and Lake Ontario, which is reſerved for the purpoſes of the Crown.

Foreign Intelligence.

CONSTANTINOPLE, December 5.

The Port has ſent orders to the Hoſpodars of Moldavia and Wallachia, to receive the Ruſſian Ambaſſador who is expected there in February with the moſt diſtinguiſhed marks of honor and reſpect. The reports which have been ſpread in Europe that the Port was making preparations for war againſt Ruſſia, are without foundation. The people in general deteſt France.

STOCKHOLM, February 1.

A war between this country and Ruſſia has long been deemed probable, it now appears inevitable.

The tidings of the tragical end of his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, has filled every mind with horror and diſmay. The court is expected to go into mourning for ſix weeks, like that of Copenhagen.

MADRID, February 7.

Our armament which was at firſt to conſiſt of twenty-one ſhips, has been increaſed, and orders have been given to have every thing in readineſs to arm the whole Spaniſh navy.

The Portugueſe fleet which was only to have conſiſted of ſix ſail, is alſo increaſed to ten ſail of the line.

HAGUE, February 23.

His Royal Highneſs the Duke of York arrived here late on Thurſday night. His highneſs immediately took up his quarters in the Palace of the Stadtholder.

The Engliſh guards arrived ſafely at Helvoet on the 1ſt. inſtant. The only accident that happened amongſt them was one man's breaking his arm by a fall. They are ſtationed at Helvoet, at the Brille, and at Dort. Sixteen hundred are at the latter place.

The hereditary prince of Orange is named commander in Chief.

Feb. 25.—Their high mightineſſes have iſſued a Proclamation for public prayers, to begin on Wedneſday the 27th. inſtant, and to be continued for a fortnight, to implore the bleſſing of Almighty God on the Dutch arms and thoſe of her allies, againſt the French.

March 4.—General Clairfayt croſſed the Roer, and on the 1ſt inſt. attacked the French army, under General Miranda, which he defeated, killed and took 2000 men, with nine pieces of artillery. It was underſtood that he was to detach 5000 men to prince Frederick of Pruſſia, who was about to make an immediate attack upon Ruremonde—and Clairfayt himſelf was preparing to march to the relief of Maeſtricht.

FRANKFORT, February 15.

The two brothers of his late moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, have ſent official notice of their brother's death to all the Courts in Europe. They have proclaimed the dauphin King of France, under the title of Louis XVII.—Count de Provence is declared Regent of the Kingdom; and Count d'Artois, Lieutenant General. The Regent has ſent Col. Van Roll to be Ambaſſador at the Head Quarters of his Pruſſian Majeſty. The King of Pruſſia has already acknowledged the new King, the Regent, and the Lieutenant General of France.

Feb. 27.—The fortreſs of Koenigſtein is on the eve of ſurrendering to the Pruſſians. The garriſon is reduced by famine to the moſt dreadful extremity.

Cuſtine, at Mentz, is alſo reduced to the laſt extremity and there is reaſon to ſuppoſe that he will very ſhortly make overtures to the Pruſſians for capitulation, or for permiſſion to retire into France.

Great numbers of the French from Mentz are daily deſerting; and upon their arrival in the Pruſſian camp, they are enrolled and regimented. The knowledge of this circumſtance brings numbers of them in daily.

PARIS, February 21.

The executive power has demanded of the government of Venice—1ſt, that it ſhall acknowledge the French Republic——2dly, it ſhall permit a free paſſage for veſſels in the Adriatick Sea—3dly, Grain.—3nd 4tly, an account of the French Citizens that have diſappeared there. The government has anſwered to the firſt, that it will acknowledge the Republic when it ſhall have eſtabliſhed itſelf, and be acknowledged by the other powers. The ſecond and third they have refuſed, and to the fourth they anſwer, that the Venetian government concerns itſelf no more about the French citizens at Venice, than the French government does about the Venetians at Paris.

Theſe anſwers are conſidered as a declaration of war.

The government of Venice is alſo preparing to join the allies againſt France.

Petion has been erafed from the liſt of the members of the Jacobin Club.

Marie Antoniette and her family have not yet ſtirred out of the apartment which they occupy in the Temple. The day before yeſterday the Commiſſioners of the Commune invited them to go down into the garden to take the air, and to enjoy the benefit of the fine weather. The widow of Louis thanked them, and refuſed their offer, ſaying, that "it would be too painful for her to paſs by the door of the chamber from which her huſband had been led to execution." She alſo refuſed to go up on the platform of the great tower, at leaſt for the preſent. Her daughter continues to be ill, the ſwelling in her leg is not abated.

LONDON, February 14.

The grand army of the French is ſtill ſtationed at Ruremonde and it's vicinity, and is in great force, ſuppoſed to be from 60 to 70,000 men.

In the inſurrection which took place in Paris laſt week the militia were called out, and a number of perſons, chiefly women, were murdered. This we believe to be only the prelude to a general maſſacre.—The ſhops of the grocers were pillaged.

Marat has been denounced in the Convention as the inſtigator of this inſurrection.

That France is in a ſtate of war with Spain, is certainly no new intelligence, for we ſtated ſome days ago, that Spain had formally declared war againſt the French republic.

Our ſhips of War have been uncommonly ſucceſsful againſt the French. It is ſuppoſed that the French property brought into Britiſh Ports already, amounts to near 2,000,000l. while on the contrary, that of ours taken by the French will ſcarcely exceed a tenth part of the ſum.

The health of the Duke of Brunſwick is completely reſtored; on the 3d of February he appeared for the firſt time on horſeback, and rode to Manheim.

Monday the Convention between Great Britain and Spain, reſpecting the Nootka Sound buſineſs, was ſigned by Sir Ralph Woodford, and M. Las Herras. The Court of Spain, beſides reſtoring the veſſels, pays an indemnity of two hundred and ten thouſand dollars.

Feb. 22. A proclamation is publiſhed by the King reciting, that as attempts may be made to ſeduce our ſubjects on board of French ſhips, it is therefore neceſſary to notify and declare, that ſubjects ſerving on board enemies ſhips, or otherwiſe adhering or giving aid or comfort to our enemies upon the ſea, will be conſidered guilty of high treaſon and piracy, and puniſhed accordingly.

WHITEHALL, Feb. 28.

The King has been pleaſed to conſtitute and appoint Sir John Temple, bart. to be his majeſty's conſul general in the eaſtern States of America.

The King has alſo been pleaſed to conſtitute and appoint Phineas Bond, Eſq; to be his Majeſty's conſul in the middle and ſouthern States of America.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, March 1.

Mr. Dundas laid before the houſe the following Meſſage from the King:

"His Majeſty having judged it expedient to employ in the ſervice of Great Britain a body of the electoral troops for the purpoſe of aſſiſting his majeſty's allies the States General of the United Provinces, and of proſecuting in the moſt effectual manner the juſt and neceſſary War in which his Majeſty is engaged, his majeſty has ordered an eſtimate to be laid before the Houſe of Commons, of the charge attending the employment of the ſaid troops; and his Majeſty relies on the zeal of his moſt faithful Commons, that they will be ready to make the neceſſary proviſion for maintaining the ſame."

Referred to the committee of ſupply.

March 2. The meſſage delivered to both houſes of Parliament from his Majeſty yeſterday, for taking into the pay of Great Britain a body of Hanoverian troops will be taken into conſideration this day.

The numerous bounties given in every part of the country, prove the zeal of all deſcriptions of men.—It is eſſential that that zeal ſhould not relax, whilſt the French bear the ſmalleſt weight in the ſcale of Europe.

DUTCH MANIFESTO.

In anſwer to Dumourier's Proclamation.

WE rather expect that all citizens, laying aſide any party ſpirit which diſunites them, will unite their efforts to ours and to thoſe of all the true friends of their country to defend and preſerve, under divine protection, the territory which has given them birth, and in which they have been bred—that they will ſnatch religion and true liberty, thoſe guarantees of our happineſs, from the inſupportable yoke of foreign and barbarous hordes.—We expect every thing from their courage and bravery; and we are perſuaded that they will not ſuffer themſelves to be intimidated by the exaggerated ſtatement of the forces which are repreſented as advancing againſt them. We perſuade ourſelves, that they will neither forget the invincible valour with which our immortal anceſtors reſiſted ſucceſsfully theſe very Frenchmen, at a time when the greateſt powers of Europe did not, as at this day, combat with us, but on the other hand were leagued with our enemies;——nor the ſituation of our country, which more eſpecially in this ſeaſon, oppoſes inſurmountable obſtacles to an hoſtile invaſion; nor, the diligence and energetic activity of the government, which will neglect nothing to ſecure the ſucceſſes of our common efforts; nor, laſtly, the efficacious ſuccours we expect in a little time from our faithful allies. If after ſo many important conſiderations, they may ſtill need a motive to confirm them in their reſolution to ſacrifice every thing to the defence of their dear country; we will place before their view the example of our neighbours the inhabitants of the Auſtrian Netherlands, who have called on and welcomed as friends, the very general who dares to call himſelf their deliverer, and thoſe very Frenchmen he commands; thoſe Belgians now reap the bitterſt fruit of their heedleſs credulity.

Deign, thou Supreme, and All-puiſſant Being, who haſt ſo often extricated this Republic from the moſt imminent dangers—deign to preſerve it at this day from ſuch a deliverance, and from ſuch friends.

ABSTRACT OF FOREIGN NEWS.

Mr. Bourgoing the French Ambaſſador at Madrid has not been received at that court ſince the death of the King of France; the Leyden Gazette, ſays, he was to be arreſted, but found means to eſcape. The Duke de Crillon is to have the command of the Spaniſh army.—It is ſaid there is a ſcarcity of bread in Paris—great uneaſineſs is apprehended in conſequence. The Convention of France has decreed that all the ports of the French Colonies ſhould be open to the veſſels of the United States of America, paying duties as French veſſels—The deputation from the French Weſt-India Iſlands now in England, have received, it is ſaid, an anſwer from the Britiſh government—and that the French Iſlands as offered by the deputies, will be accepted by the Engliſh.

The French it appears, have a fleet of nine-teen ſail of the line in the Mediterranean—Two French prizes captured by two ſhips of War are eſtimated to be worth 70,000l—Eight thouſand Hanoverian Troops are to march into Holland. It is reported that the Grand Signior is dead, and that his ſucceſſor is going to renew the war againſt Ruſſia—A Mr. Butler and Mr. Bond, who had ſigned a publication reflecting on the committee of the Houſe of Lords in Ireland (as Chairman and Secretary to the Society of United Iriſhmen) have been condemned to ſix months impriſonment, and 500 hundred pounds penalty each for their offence—Lord Barrymore of the Queens Regiment, was lately killed by a fuzee which went off accidentally, as he ſtepped into a carriage with the gun in his hand.

Engliſh papers of the 9th of March contain the King's proclamation for a general Faſt.

The Pruſſian army was at Venlo and Cleves in February, and part of the French at St. Michael, oppoſite, and at no great diſtance; an engagement was hourly expected.

LONDON, March 9.

Miniſters yeſterday received by Mr. Silveſter, one of the King's Meſſengers, diſpatches from the Hague, which bring intelligence of various important ſucceſſes gained over the armies of France.—From the beſt accounts that we can collect theſe diſpatches announce.

That the Auſtrians had attacked a body of French, detached across the Meuſe to keep Juliers in check; that upwards of 2000 were killed or taken priſoners, and the whole detachment put to the route. This, as we apprehended, was the affair that took place on the firſt inſt. of which we had ſome vague reports on Wedneſday.

That after this General Clairfait had marched to the relief of Maeſtricht, which he had effected, and that Miranda in his retreat to Ruremonde had loſt 8 pieces of cannon:

That Frederick of Pruſſia had attacked Ruremonde, and had gained a complete victory, by which that important poſt had come into the hands of the Auſtrians:

That Prince de Cobourge had ſucceſsfully attacked the French at Aix-la-Chapelle, who after a vigorous reſiſtance, in which 4000 men were killed, and 1600 taken priſoners, were obliged to evacuate that place, and leave behind them 120 pieces of cannon, and a great quantity of military ſtores;

That the young Prince of Brunſwick had attacked the French at Venlo, and had alſo beaten them with conſiderable loſs, by which he was ſure of re-taking St. Michael.

That Dumourier had been three times repulſed at Williamſtadt, through the vigour of the gun boats, and had abandoned the place; but had made himſelf Maſter of Gertruydenburgh.

Theſe are but a few of the many reports circulated upon the Authority of theſe diſpatches.

It is agreed to by all parties, that Dumourier's invaſion of Holland was judicious on his ſide, thereby having a chance to obtain both money and breeches, two articles very much wanted in his army.

[From Woodfall's Regiſter, February 6.]

VIENNA, January 15.

All our regiments are in motion to increaſe the army deſtined againſt France. The Regiments of Baco, Lobkowitz, and Karaiczay, are of this number. The firſt is compoſed of two thouſand five hundred men, all choſen Huſſars; it paſſed through Limberg the 29th of December; there were among them 15 men who had been decorated during the War againſt the Turks with gold or ſilver medals; this was the Regiment which ſignalized itſelf ſo much at the battle of Romaw, and of whom the Turks were forced to beg for quarter.

The regiment of Veczii, which was quartered in the Buckovine, is already on the march, and that alſo of Levencher, has received orders to depart.

Field Marſhal Prince de Cobourge ſet off from Buda to Vienna the 7th and his equipages followed on the ſame day. General Baron Kinnaizy, whoſe name was the terror of the Turks, has alſo received orders to make this campaign. General Wurmſer is already arrived here. The Carriage Company has received orders to prepare 16 of the beſt carriages, eight for the field Marſhal, four for Gen. Count Ferraris, and four for Gen. Wurmſer.

The works of our arſenals are going forward with every exertion, and it is the ſame in thoſe at Budweis in Bohemia. Two millions of cartridges are arrived here bound for Trieſte, from whence they will be conveyed to the Sardinian army, the carriage from Budweis to Vienna coſt 2500 florins. On the 26th, four millions of cartridges will arrive here, from whence they will be conveyed to the army on the Rhine, escorted by a battalion of Transylvania.

It is not yet known whether the army of the Empire will act separately, or will be divided into distinct corps, which, united to the Prussian and Austrian armies, may act in concert with them. The latter system will probably be adopted.

It is now confirmed, that the Empress of Russia has taken into her pay the corps of Emigrants, which was under the command of the Prince de Conde.

All the corps, now on their march, have received orders to get forward as fast as they can, without waiting for the recruits which were to join them on the road. The new regiment of arquebuziers is already completed: it is compoled of two battalions, of 1000 men each. M. Jellachick, formerly Lieut. Col. of the Regiment of Oglus, is appointed to the command.

The Emperor has publilhed an ordinance exempting all his fubjects engaged in commerce from military enrollments.

A number of voluntary contributions are presented to the Emperor to carry on the war. The company of Merchants has prelented his Majefty with a fum of 300,000 florins, without intereft, till the end of the war. A Nobleman unknown, (who however is Prince Colloredo) 20,000 florins; the Company of Booklellers, 20,000; the Commercial Company, 20,000; Prince de Kinfki, 20,000; Prince Schwarzenberg has engaged to furnilh pay, cloathing, and horfes for 400 cavalry; the reigning Prince of Lichtenftein has depofited 40,000 florins. Thefe examples will doubtlefsly excite an emulation that will produce more than a military contribution.

TREVES, December 24.

On the 17th and 18th inft. the French attempted to attack the entrenchment at Wavern, but were lo well received by the Auftrians, that the whole furface of the ground was covered with their dead.

On the 19th the French detached 400 men to the village of Tavern, to raife batteries. As foon as the Auftrians heard of this, they marched againft them, killed the advanced poft, furrounded the village, fell upon the French, who were then boiling their foup in the village, who were all cut to pieces, owing to their deiperate refiftance, except leven who were made prifoners, and 13 dangerously wounded—three of the Hufars faved themfelves by flight.

In this action the French loft 50 horfes—8 cannon and all their baggage.

They evacuated Starburgh and the whole diftrict of Saergan on the 20th inftant.

FRENCH NATIONAL CONVENTION.

JANUARY 3, 1793.

General Cuftine, in a letter dated Mentz the 20th of December, addreffed to the Prefident of the National Convention, fent an exact account of the various events which preceded and accompanied the retaking of Frankfort by the Heffians and Pruffians, of which the war miniiter had given only an extract.

After having left a ftrong garrifon in Frankfort, he put himfelf at the head of 23,000 men to ftop the approach of the enemy; but they, by a fecret march, turned his flank; the inhabitants of that city opened their gates, and a great number of French foldiers were flaughtered.

He beftowed praifes on general Houchard, and on the troops who difplayed the greateft courage; but I cannot conceal from the Convention, added Cuftine, "that the troops begin to complain of their prefent ftate of nakednels.

"They call me their father, but I have only the bowels of a father. I am penetrated with grief at the afflicting ftate of thofe brave foldiers. It freezes very hard, and they have laid feven nights upon their arms, without coats and without breeches. General Biron has been witnefs to their fituation, and is as much afflicted as myfelf."

SIR,

Having been a fpectator at the folemn proceffion attending Joleph Draper, foldier in the 7th regiment, mentioned in your laft paper, I have endeavoured to recollect (as much as poffible) Prince EDWARD's fpeech to the unhappy man in pronouncing his pardon, and think it not undeferving a place in your Gazette.—Your inferting it I prelume, will gratify the public, as well as oblige a conftant reader.

"DRAPER,

"You have now reached the awful moment when a "few leconds would carry you into the immediate pre"fence of the Supreme Being. You muft be conficious "of the enormity of your guilt: and that you have "not the leaft right to expect mercy. I, as your Com"manding Officer, am entirely prevented making any "application whatever in your favour; there being "from various circumftances of the cafe, no one open"ing that could juftify me in that ftation to take fuch a "ftep: However as the fon of your Sovereign, whofe "greateft prerogative is the difpenfation of mercy.—— "I feel myfelf fortunately enabled to do that, which "as your Colonel, the indifpenfable Laws of Military "Difcipline render it impoffible for me even to think "of.—In this fituation therefore I have prefumed to "apply to the King's Repreientative here for your "Pardon; and I am happy to be authorized to inform "you that my intercellion has been fucceisful: Major "General CLARKE, in conlequence of my warm prayers "and entreaties, has had the goodnels by his acquief"cence with my wilhes, to enable me to prove both to "you and the public, that although your atrocious "machinations were chiefly directed againft my perfon, "——I am the firft to forgive you, and to obtain for "you his Majefty's Mercy. May you take warning by "this awful fcene and fo conduct yourfelf, that by the "remainder of your life, you may atone for your paft "crimes; and that I may not hereafter have occafion "to repent having now been your Advocate."

From the Gazette of the United States of the 27th of April—We learn, that the Prefident has iffued a Proclamation to the following effect,—

"That as a ftate of War exifts between Great Britain, "Auftria, Pruffia, Sardinia and the United Netherlands, "on the one part, and France on the other—the duty "and intereft of the United States, require, that they "fhould with fincerity and good faith adopt and purfue "a conduct, friendly and impartial towards the Belligerent Powers."

On Friday laft Beverley Randolph, and Timothy Pickering, Efqrs; Commiffioners from the United States, to the Indians, arrived at Navy Hall, from Philadelphia, through the Geneiee country, in their way to Sandufky—We underftand that General Lincoln, the third Commiffioner is fhortly expected here by Oiwego.

HAGUE, MARCH 22.

OFFICIAL.

Bulletin of field marshal Prince Saxe Cobourge, of the action which took place on the 18th near Tirlemont.

OUR van guard which marched the 14th instant from Tongres, took up their cantonments beyond that town. The 17th they advanced to Orsmaal; their headquarters were established at St. Tron, and the body of the army cantoned beyond St. Tron. They met the the enemy on the road of Tirlemont, and drove them through the place, and beyond it.

On the 16th the army left their cantonments, in order to form a camp beyond the river Gelhe, when the two armies met unexpectedly, on their march; for the enemy advanced from Louvain, with a design to surprise us in our cantonments. The enemy had just retaken their position of the Town of Tirlemont, which they before had evacuated. A very severe cannonade began on both sides, which continued the whole day, but with very little loss on either side, when night put an end to that combat.

As our arms could not reach the River of Grand Gelhe, and as we should have been in want of water in our then position, the field marshal Prince Cobourge ordered a retreat in the evening, towards the road of Orsmaal, and the army occupied during the night the heights along the little river of Gelhe.

On the 17th our army took a position, which was not defensible. It was taken merely for the purpose of having an extent of ground, to enable us to attack the enemy on several quarters at once, in case they advanced. The little river of Gelhe was in our front, and our van was posted along that river; our right wing extended to the road of St. Tron, where the van guard, under the command of the Arch duke Charles, was encamped, and next to them the whole army, in two lines of battle: the first under the command of General Count Colloredo, and the second, under prince of Wurtemberg. They had the village of Orsmaal, Guthenhoten, and Neerviden in front.—Their left wing was commanded by General Count Clairfayt, which was going to take post between Racour and Landen. The enemy remained in their position behind Tirlemont.

On the 18th we saw the enemy at day-break, marching towards us in different columns. They extended to the right and left of the road towards the heights on this side Tirlemont, in such a manner that their right reached Guthenhoten, and their left Willmotium. About eight in the morning a column, preceded by a quantity of heavy artillery, advanced on the road of St. Tron, towards Orsmaal, from which place they dislodged our van corps, & raised considerable batteries near the church.

The Arch duke, on his side, immediately raised batteries with the artillery of the van guard, and dismounted several cannon of the enemy, which however they had the skill to supply instantly by others.

Although this was an obstacle to their advancing, they however, pushed forward with so much activity, that they profited by the advantage of the ground, and marched a column on the left towards the water, & another through Racour upon our flanks, and even on our back, in order to turn us, leaving at the same time a number of troops in the centre, to make use of them in case of necessity.

The field marshal planned his attacks against these different columns in this manner; the Prince of Wurtemberg was ordered to advance on his left towards the water, and Lieut. field marshal Benjoiky advanced on the road towards Orsmaal and Donmael. The Arch-duke marched with two battalions of Stirey, into the village of Orsmaal, general Clairfayt towards Racour, and Count Colloredo remained in the centre: these generals beat the French on all sides, and repulsed them.

General Dumourier, at the head of 20,000 men, conducted in person the principal attack near Racour; but General Clairfayt marched his reserve which consisted of scarcely 8000 men, and repulsed Dumourier, who, although he had rallied his forces again, was overthrown a second time.

During this attack near Racour, the enemy advanced a column upon our centre; but count Colloredo repulsed them, and dislodged them from the village of Neerviden, where he posted himself, when night again terminated the engagement which lasted 11 hours, and also prevented our troops from pursuing the enemy any further.

The extraordinary bravery with which our troops fought cost us dear; we lost between 12 and 1500 men, amongst whom we reckon major Hugo Adonelli, killed; general Robeck, and col. Riche wounded, and also several officers. The enemy lost at least 4000 men killed and wounded.—We have taken from them above 30 pieces of cannon.

March 19.—We perceived this morning a strong rear guard, employed in the position which the enemy had yesterday, retreating with considerable disorder, and general Benjoiky was detached with six battalions of infantry, and ten squadrons of cavalry to pursue them. He succeeded by skilful manœuvres in dislodging their rear, so that this general, with his detachment, are at present very near Tirlemont. SAXE COBOURGE.

In the action of the 18th, 120,000 men, were at times engaged!!!

General Valence was not killed, but badly wounded in the head, in the battle of the 16th. ult.

He was carried to Brussels.

OFFICIAL ACCOUNT,

By Field Marshal Prince de Saxe Cobourge of the further operations of the Austrian army. March 20.

LIEUTENANT field marshal Benjoiky drove the French from Tirlemont, and pursued them to the diſtance of a league and a half beyond that town. The enemy covered their retreat with much order and coolneſs. Exactly at noon our army advanced on the right and paſſed Tirelemont—Part of them encamped behind that town, having in their rear the large rivulet of Gelhe, on their centre the cauſeway which leads to Louvain; the body of reſerve on the right, and the village of Hongard behind them.

Colonel Baron de Mylius, who was detached from Kempan with two battalions of the regiment of Wallis had received orders to diſlodge the enemy, on the 20th from Dieſt, which he happily executed, with much ſkill, as appears by the following account:

"At ſeven o'clock in the morning, Colonel de Mylius attacked Dieſt, and was at firſt repulſed; but on the ſecond attack he entered the town on both ſides, took 90 priſoners, and ſeized one cannon, beſides ſeveral carriages. Our loſs amounts to 50 men killed or wounded, one of whom is a captain. The enemy having been cut off from the cauſeway of Louvain, were obliged to retire towards Heerenthal, on the 21ſt the army reſted.

Tirelemont, March 22.

At break of day our army marched forward in three columns. The firſt advanced on the right of the cauſeway of Louvain, the ſecond on the left and the third which formed the van guard, directed it's march towards Tourine.

When the ſecond column arrived at the heights, where it was to encamp, it found them occupied by numerous bodies of French cavalry, and the village of Blanden, which was intended to cover their left wing, by a great number of their infantry.

The enemy were attacked on all ſides, but they made ſtating "that he found it impoſſible to make head againſt the Allied Powers, and he thought the only means of ſaving France from being over-run by thoſe powers, would be to have a KING."

In conſequence of this letter, a decree of accuſation was paſſed againſt Dumourier in the ſitting of the 30th of March, who had been denounced by the municipality of Paris a traitor; and Bournonville the Miniſter at War, Camus, and five others, were deputed to go to the army, and put the decree into execution, by arreſting Dumourier and ſending him a priſoner to Paris. Dumourier himſelf ſays, he firmly believes it was their intention to have him maſſacred on the road.

They reached the army, and informed the general of their miſſion.—He ſaw the time was come to ſtrike a deciſive blow. He aſſembled his troops, informed them of the decree of the convention, and hinted his own wiſhes and deſigns. They exclaimed, that they would ſtand by him. He immediately begun to act. He arreſted Bournonville and the other Commiſſioners, and ſent them with a letter to general Clairfayt, to Tournay, recommending them in civil terms to the protection of that General, as priſoners of war. He likewiſe informed Clairfayt, that he was about to march to Paris next morning (the 2d inſt.) at the head of his army, for the purpoſe of reſtoring the French Monarchy.

General Clairfayt forwarded the priſoners committed to his charge by Dumourier, to the Prince de Saxe Cobourge, and immediately wrote with his own hand, an account of theſe extraordinary tranſactions to Count Metternich, the Imperial Miniſter at Bruſſels, who forwarded this account to the Hague. The expreſs that brought this news left the Hague on the 4th, a few hours ſidering the heavy fire from the place; that the enemy diſcharged not leſs th ſhot.

Saint Tron, March 5.—I learned o'clock at night, that the enemy, by a body of 12 or 13,000 men had t forced our troops to retreat to Ans a intelligence made General Valence and ſend for all the troops from Viſe and near the citadel of Liege, that we mig to St. Tron, where by taking a good m we might be able to make a ſtand a battle.

In conſequence of this diſpoſitio morning, in ſufficient force, and ad Tron by the great road of Liege. way, we found a body of troops and four thouſand men, whom the enem village of Orray. Our light troops they fell back to Tongres.

At eight in the evening, the army artillery at St. Tron, where we ha tageous poſition which covers the retre and hoſpitals, as well as ſome fugi who on account of the impoſſibility ders to them in time, or through t their commanders, have not yet join

This day (the 6th) we have made covering their retreat, and for tran to them, in the courſe of the day.

Our troops are in good ſpirits, and if an occaſion offers, their bravery ſurmount every obſtacle, and triumph enemies.

Bulletin of field marſhal Prince Saxe Cobourge, of the action which took place on the 18th near Tirelemont.

OUR van-guard which marched the 14th inſtant from Tongres, took up their cantonments beyond that town. The 15th they advanced to Orſmaal; their head-quarters were eſtabliſhed at St. Tron, and the body of the army cantoned beyond St. Tron. When the ſecond column arrived at the heights, where it was to encamp, it found them occupied by numerous bodies of French cavalry, and the village of Blamden, which was intended to cover their left wing, by a great number of their infantry.

The enemy were attacked on all ſides, but they made an obſtinate defence, procuring re-inforcements, and ſupplying, by freſh troops whom they brought from Louvain, and their camp behind that town, thoſe who had been repulſed.

The battle was bloody; our ſecond column loſt above 400 men, and the enemy more than two thouſand. They were, however over-come by the bravery of the Imperial troops, driven from all their poſts, and forced to evacuate the town of Louvain, to quit the rivulet Dyl, and to retire behind Louvain towards Bruſſels.

The firſt column fell in, near Belemberg with a body of the enemy, who occupied the heights between the village and Loutain, in order to cover the latter. The enemy defended themſelves there for ſeven hours, with the greateſt obſtinacy, but they were at length overcome and driven beyond the rivulet Dyl.

This battle was ſtill more bloody than that of the ſecond column, and we reckon our loſs which is not yet aſcertained, at more than 5000 men; the enemy loſt above 2000. Our column took poſſeſſion of three cannon and one carriage.

The enemy abandoned at Louvain a conſiderable magazine. Terror and diſorder again encreaſed among their troops. They have quitted the advantageous poſt which they occupied, on the iron mountain, and have encamped before Bruſſels, between the Canal and the foreſt Soignes. (Signed) SAXE COBOURGE.

From a Miniſterial paper, intitled the Sun.

LONDON, April 6.

By an expreſs which we received this morning from the Hague, we are enabled to give the certain accounts of a counter revolution being on the eve of taking place at Paris.

The circumſtances that have led to this, are of a moſt extraordinary nature. We ſhall ſtate them as our correſpondent, in the hurry of ſuch important communication, has been able to arrange them, reſerving to ourſelves the ſatisfaction of giving hereafter a more particular detail.

The ſtoppage of all communication with France has kept us in the dark compietely, with reſpect to the proceedings of the convention. It now appears, that the moſt important tranſactions have taken place.

After Dumourie had been forced to retreat within the French frontier, he wrote a letter to the convention, ſtating "that he found it impoſſible to make head againſt the Allied Powers, and he thought the only means of ſaving France from being over-run by thoſe powers, would be to have a KING."

In conſequence of this letter, a decree of accuſation was paſſed againſt Dumourier in the ſitting of the 30th of March, who had been denounced by the municipality of Paris a traitor; and Bournonville the Miniſter at War, Camus, and five others, were deputed to go to the army, and put the decree into execution, by arreſting Dumourier and ſending him a priſoner to Paris. Dumourier himſelf ſays, he firmly believes it was their intention to have him maſſacred on the road.

They reached the army, and informed the general of their miſſion.—He ſaw the time was come to ſtrike a deciſive blow. He aſſembled his troops, informed them of the decree of the convention, and hinted his own views and deſigns. They exclaimed, that they would ſtand by him. He immediately begun to act. He arreſted Bournonville and the other Commiſſioners, and ſent them with a letter to general Clairfayt, to Tournay, recommending them in civil terms to the protection of that General, as priſoners of war. He likewiſe informed Clairfayt, that he was about to march to Paris next morning (the 2d inſt.) at the head of his army, for the purpoſe of reſtoring the French Monarchy.

General Clairfayt forwarded the priſoners committed to his charge by Dumourier, to the Prince de Saxe Cobourge, and immediately wrote with his own hand, an account of theſe extraordinary tranſactions to Count Metternich, the Imperial Miniſter at Bruſſels, who forwarded this account to the Hague. The expreſs that brought this news left the Hague on the 4th, a few hours after General Clairfayt's account had arrived there, and reached London this morning.

The ſame accounts have been received from Bruſſels and Oſtend.

Letter from General Miranda to the Miniſter at War.

LIEGE, March 4.

Ten o'clock at night, and finiſhed at St. Tron on the 6th.

The attack at Maeſtricht was continued with the greateſt ſucceſs, and on the 2d of this month our batteries of twenty-four pounders were ready to begin a heavy fire, which would doubtleſs have reduced the city to the utmoſt extremity and produced it's ſurrender, when at eleven o'clock in the forenoon, I received official intelligence from General Lanoue, confirmed by General Valence, informing me, that the enemy had attacked our advanced poſts on the Roer, forced a paſſage through the body of obſervation commanded by the former, which covered the inveſtment of Maeſtricht, and were rapidly advancing with more than 35,000 men towards Wick, to throw ſuccour into Maeſtricht, and to ſave the place by putting an end to the inveſtment and the attack. Under theſe circumſtances I had ſcarcely time, to withdraw the body of 5000 men under General Leveneur, who were poſted before Wick, and who three hours after were attacked by the van-guard of the enemy. Notwithſtanding theſe movements, I continued the bombardment of the place in the uſual manner, to conceal my intentions, and with ſo much ſucceſs, that the conflagration was never ſo conſiderable ſince the commencement of the ſiege.

At midnight I begun to retreat, cauſing the heavy artillery to march before, and which happily arrived at Tongres covered by a body of 4000 men, which formed the rear guard, and whom the enemy could not diſcompoſe, notwithſtanding the forces which they ſent for that purpoſe, for they were eaſily repulſed by our troops.

A body of 7000 men was advantageouſly poſted at Tongres, under the command of Generals Egalité, Ruaut, and Blotefer: and another of the ſame force, under the command of Generals Diethican, and Iſſer, which were the whole employed in the ſiege of Maeſtricht, advanced to the heights of Harcour, near Vize, to cover Liege, and to prevent the enemy from penetrating by any of the routs which conduct to that city.

Our loſs on the attack of Maeſtricht was only twenty men killed, and ten wounded; which is very little con-

SAINT TRON, March 5.—I learned yeſterday, at ten o'clock at night, that the enemy, by a third attack with a body of 12 or 13,000 men had taken Tongres and forced our troops to retreat to Ans and St. Tron. This intelligence made General Valence and myſelf reſolve to ſend for all the troops from Viſe and Herve, &c. to Ans, near the citadel of Liege, that we might retreat in force to St. Tron, where by taking a good military diſpoſition, we might be able to make a ſtand and even to riſque a battle.

In conſequence of this diſpoſition we united, this morning, in ſufficient force, and advanced towards St. Tron by the great road of Liege. When we got half-way, we found a body of troops amounting to three or four thouſand men, whom the enemy had poſted in the village of Orrey. Our light troops attacked them, and they fell back to Tongres.

At eight in the evening, the army arrived with all its artillery at St. Tron, where we have taken an advantageous poſition which covers the retreat of our magazines and hoſpitals, as well as ſome ſmall bodies of troops, who on account of the impoſſibility of tranſmitting orders to them in time, or through ſome negligence of their commanders, have not yet joined the army.

This day (the 6th) we have made new diſpoſitions for covering their retreat, and for tranſmitting new orders to them, in the courſe of the day.

Our troops are in good ſpirits, and we muſt hope, that if an occaſion offers, their bravery and patriotiſm will ſurmount every obſtacle, and triumph over our numerous enemies.

Gen. Valence has doubtleſs informed you of what concerns the attack of the enemy on the Roer. He writes to you alſo this day.

I beg you will excuſe my delay, on account of the weighty affairs which required my preſence before the troops, and which obliged me to be continually on horſeback.

ST. TRON, March 6.—On the 4th inſtant, the army commanded by general Lanoue, which covered the ſiege of Maeſtricht, having retired from Herve, was attacked on the heights of Lemarque. I immediately repaired thither. The enemy was repulſed with much ſucceſs. General Lanoue had made excellent diſpoſitions, as well as General Dampiere of the rear guard. After a combat of twelve hours the enemy retired.

Letter from the Commiſſioners in Belgium.

DOUAY, March 8.—We ſend you three diſpatches from General Dumourier. By a letter from General Miranda, we have received the diſagreeable intelligence that Liege is occupied by the Auſtrians. It appears happily, by the ſame letter, that our troops rallied and retired in good ſituation. General Dumourier, in his letter, confeſſes us for the check experienced at Aix-la-chapelle, which rendered the ſiege of Maeſtricht neceſſary. "Unleſs people abſolutely loſe their ſenſes," ſays he, "I cannot ſee how 23, or 30,000 men can venture to paſs the Meuſe, before more than 30,000 united, who for ſome days paſt, have had no other object than to defend that paſſage. I am here engaged in two ſieges; ſhould they be prolonged, I ſhall not periſh. I ſhall myſelf join the army and bring with me a reinforcement of more than 20,000 men. What has happened ſhould give no uneaſineſs, provided we confine ourſelves for two weeks to a regular defenſive ſyſtem, which we muſt ſoon change into a terrible of enſive one."

Extract of a letter from General Miranda to the Miniſter at war.

ST. TRON, March 8.—The army remained during the 6th and 7th, before St. Tron, to reſt the troops, and cover the junction of the detached corps. It will move to-day, and advance towards Fireſemont, where we have our camp equipage and proviſions in abundance. To-morrow it will probably take a grand poſition before Louvain, will cover Belgium, and as it will enable us to act on the defenſive, in all the points where our enemies are. We wait here for the orders of General Dumourier, and the diſpoſitions of the Executive power.

MAESTRICHT, March 8.

Head Quarters of the Imperial Royal Army.

After the French had been repulſed and beat in all quarters on the 1ſt and 2d inſtant, and ſuſtained a loſs of 5000 men killed, 1000 taken priſoners, and 21 pieces of cannon; the army marched this day through Valkenburg to Maeſtricht; and having gained intelligence that the enemy had raiſed the ſiege in the night between the 2d. and 3d. inſtant, and taken flight, they were purſued on both the banks of the Meuſe, upwards and downwards, and had ſeveral magazines of proviſions and cloathing taken from them. Prince de Cobourge has his head quarters here, and the army is quartered in cantonments between this city and Valkenburg.

After the advanced guard and the firſt line of the Imperial army had paſſed the Meuſe yeſterday, they came up with the enemy on his march to Tongres at the diſtance of one league and a half hence. The Arch duke Charles, who commanded them, attacked the enemy with a reſolute bravery, notwithſtanding the abſence of his cavalry, which on account of the diſtance of their quarters, could not arrive, and drove the French before him towards Tongres, where he could not purſue them further on account of the falling of the night. At break of day the Arch-duke Charles again put himſelf in march. He found that Tongres had been evacuated, and left a garriſon of three battalions of grenadiers in that place. The enemy was purſued by the light troops, who took two pieces of cannon,—— and one ſtand of colours. At Tongres our troops found a conſiderable magazine, five iron baking ovens, the military cheſt, and ſeveral waggons.

At the ſame time General Clairfayt made a diverſion upwards on the left bank of the Meuſe, in the diſtrict of Liege, by which the enemy ſtationed in the diſtrict of Liege & Limburg was annoyed in the rear; and accounts have juſt been received, by which it appears that he was preparing to evacuate Liege and to fall back to St. Tron.

General Prince of Wurtemberg likewiſe attacked with a detachment of the left wing, a corps of the enemy near Herve, diſlodged them, and drove them to the diſtance of two leagues from thence; our troops took two pieces of cannon, and one officer and 35 priſoners.

The detachment of the right wing, under the command of General Count La Tour, advanced yeſterday from Sittard to Linne, and drove back the French who fell in with him from Ruremonde, and took one officer and 42 priſoners.

At the ſame time General Wenkheim advanced on the right bank of the Roer, from Wellemberg towards Ruremond, and opened a communication between him and General La Tour, by the bridge of Vlodrop, in which action the French had thirty men killed, and ſeven taken priſoners.

LONDON, March 19.

BOMBARDMENT OF CAGLIARI.

The following particulars of this unſucceſsful expedition are detailed in a letter, dated on board the Scipio, in the harbour of Toulon, March 1ſt. The bombardment commenced on the 24th of January, but as all the tranſports, with the Land troops, were not arrived, the Admiral ordered the firing to ceaſe on the 25th. The volunteers however, being impatient to land, the Admiral after uſing every argument to convince them how dangerous it would be to make any attempt, without ſufficient force, at length conſented, and gave orders for a diſembarkation on the 14th February. Four ſhips and two bomb ketches, were poſted before the town, and two more with as many bomb ketches were placed between the town and a ſmall mountain defended by batteries; another came to anchor before the town to batter it, and 3 ſhips and 3 frigates, were employed in covering the landing of the troops. Of all theſe ſhips the Themiſtocles alone did execution, but ſhe was ſet on fire by a red hot ball, and the Captain was wounded in the leg, and died four days after. In the night time the Themiſtocles was obliged to retire. The Patriot, which kept up a continual fire for three days and three nights, expended all her ammunition; and had eight men wounded, among whom was a Lieutenant Colonel of marines.

The deſcent was effected under the command of Gen. Caſa-Blanca with 1500 troops of the line, and 3000 national volunteers, another deſcent was to be made at ſome distance, and a certain signal was agreed upon. The same signal was observed in the island, and the troops heard the following words pronounced through a speaking trumpet, Citizens come on shore, we have put to flight the enemy. The troops however suspected this invitation, especially as they could observe with their spy-glasses, that it was made by people in the Sardinian dress. The second descent therefore, was countermanded.—Casa-Blanca, however, formed a camp at the distance of half a league from the town, with 15 pieces of cannon and some mortars. Owing to some panic with which these troops were suddenly seized, they mistook the word of Command, and the patrol fired upon each other; the soldiers thought themselves too weak in numbers, and requested to be re-embarked, and some of them without orders, began to retire towards the sea shore.—in this sad situation, Casa-Blanca was obliged to re-embark his troops, and it was with great difficulty that he was able to save his cannon. When the troops returned on board. Truguet immediately set sail. The Leopard a ship of the line, ran on shore, but the crew were saved; a Tartan, which ran on shore also, was burnt by the Sardinians.

PORTSMOUTH, March 12.

This day arrived here the Dorset armed cutter, with the Van Huth brig, laden with corn, and woolen cloth, bound from Hamburg to Marseilles, a valuable prize.

The Ferett sloop, Capt. Nowell, which was in company, likewise took a ship of 600 tons burthen, laden with wheat and corn.

The above prizes were part of a fleet of twenty sail, all deeply laden with corn and cloathing for France.

Government was fully informed of their sailing and destination, and had given particular instructions to a number of cruizers to be vigilant in intercepting them.

LIVERPOOL, March 7.

On Thursday last, in the morning, the King George revenue cutter, of 14 guns, sailed from Ramsey Bay, and returned the same evening (in about 12 hours) with a prize, supposed to be a fine French cutter: a salute of 11 guns was fired from the King George, on which the town of Ramsey was illuminated; and a number of fires lighted on the adjacent hills.

MESSAGE from His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor to the Assembly 25th April 1793.

(Signed) ALURED CLARKE,
Lieutenant Governor, &c.

Mr. Speaker of the House of Assembly,

I YESTERDAY received a letter from the Right Honorable Mr. Dundas, one of his Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, dated the 9th of February last, stating, that the Persons exercising the Supreme Authority in France had declared War against His Majesty, and signifying the King's Commands that the same be made public in this Province, in consequence whereof I have issued a Proclamation to that effect. And as a well regulated Militia, which has ever been considered the best security and Protection of every State, is under the present circumstances an object more particularly worthy of Consideration, I feel it my duty to recommend to the Legislature a Revision of the Laws now in force for regulating the Militia, that such alterations and Amendments may take place, if any should be found necessary, as shall seem best adapted to secure and protect the Province from every insult or injury that may be attempted.

ADDRESS of the Assembly to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor presented on Saturday, 27th. of April.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELENCY,

We his Majesty's dutiful and loyal Subjects the Representatives of the people of Lower Canada in Assembly met, return your Excellency the thanks of this House for your Message of Thursday last.

We assure your Excellency, that it is with horror we have heard, that the most ATROCIOUS act which ever disgraced Society has been perpetrated in France, and it is with concern and indignation we now learn, that the persons exercising the Supreme Authority there, have declared War against his Majesty.

His Majesty's faithful subjects earnestly pray that his Arms may be crowned with such signal Success over His Enemies as shall speedily bring about a Peace, honorable, safe and advantageous to His Majesty, and the Empire.

We assure your Excellency that this House will immediately proceed to a revision of the Militia laws now in force, and if alterations and amendments shall appear necessary, we will make such as may be deemed the most fit and proper to secure and protect the Province from every insult and injury of His Majesty's Enemies,

WHEREAS, by certain information it appears, that several persons in the night of the 31st of May last, about Eleven o'clock, passed by the Garrison of Niagara, in a boat or batteau, carrying with them, as it is presumed Contraband Goods; and upon being hailed by the Sentinel, refused to return an answer:—Whereupon Serjeant THOMAS LAWSON, of the 5th Regiment of Foot, and a party of the Privates of the said Regiment, were dispatched to stop the said Boat or Batteau, and detain the persons till further enquiry should be made. And whereas it appears that the persons, or some, or one of them, upon being again challenged by the said Serjeant Lawson, not only refused to come ashore, but fired upon the said Serjeant and his party, and again in a short time afterwards fired a second time in defiance of the Laws, and in contempt of the Peace of our Lord the King. Now I do hereby give Notice, that if any person or persons will give information, to any of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace, of the said Party, or any of them that were in the said Boat or Batteau, so that they, or any of them, may be brought to Justice; or if any one or more of the said party, will give information to any one of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace, of the person or persons that fired as aforesaid upon the said Serjeant and his Party, so that they may be brought to punishment, he or they, shall receive upon conviction of the Offender or Offenders, the Sum of £50:0:0 Quebec Currency; And if the informer or informers should have been of the said Party in the said Boat or Batteau, other than the person or persons that fired as aforesaid, he or they, shall receive the King's Pardon, upon such information and conviction as aforesaid, besides receiving the above Reward. LOYAL ASSOCIATION OF THE HOME DISTRICT. (UPPER CANADA.)

ON Saturday laſt the 16th inſtant the following Addreſs was preſented to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, by the unanimous vote of a numerous Meeting of the Magiſtrates and other reſpectable Inhabitants of this Settlement conven'd in conſequence of the reſolution of a previous Meeting on Monday laſt.

The Hon. ROBERT HAMILTON, Eſq; in the Chair.

To his Excellency JOHN GRAVES SIMCOE, Eſq;
Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

HIS Majeſty's loyal and faithful Subjects of the Home Diſtrict of Upper Canada, tho' at preſent they do not know a ſingle diſaffected perſon among them, yet anxious to maintain and preſerve the bleſſings they enjoy from their connection with Great Britain, and their participation of her happy Conſtitution, do wiſh to aſſociate for the purpoſes of ſupporting the Laws; of diſcountenancing all ſeditious or inflamatory opinions; and of defending at the riſk of their lives and fortunes their preſent Government againſt all foreign or domeſtic Enemies——do moſt humbly entreat your Excellency to ſanction and countenance their Loyal Intentions in this aſſociation.

To which his Excellency was pleaſed to return the following Anſwer

GENTLEMEN,

THE wiſdom of aſſociating for the protection of the Laws and the ſyſtem of Government ſo wiſely eſtabliſhed by our anceſtors, when factious and deſigning men are combining to ſubvert them, has been clearly evinced by the happy effects which it has produced in the Parent State. It has diſcountenanced the practices of incendiaries, and held out to the peaceable, and well affected, a bond of union and ſafety.

I do not believe, that this Royal Province poſſeſſes any perſons within it, who are not ready to riſk as much in the preſervation of their natural Government, as either foreign or domeſtic enemies will venture for its deſtruction, but as you ſeem wiſely to aſſociate for the diſcountenancing and preventing ſuch opinions, ſhould they be attempted hereafter, to be inſidiouſly diſſeminated to injure our common harmony and growing proſperity, and as I have conſtantly born witneſs to the loyalty and fidelity of this diſtrict and of the Province in general, ſo in the preſent inſtance, I ſhall in all reſpects ſanction and countenance what I conſider the effect of ſuch worthy and eſtimable principles.

The Meeting then unanimouſly entered into the following Reſolutions, and Subſcribed the ſame.

WE the Inhabitants of the Home Diſtrict of Upper Canada, deeply impreſſed with the ſenſe of the manyfold benefits we have received, and the valuable bleſſings we enjoy, from our connection with the Britiſh Government, and from our participation of her happy Conſtitution; and fully convinced that we can neither poſſeſs nor tranſmit to our Children, any Boon more valuable to us, or more uſeful to them:

We do aſſociate for the purpoſes of maintaining and preſerving theſe ineſtimable advantages by every means in our power.

And we do reſolve and declare as the moſt effectual ſteps for theſe purpoſes, that we will exert ourſelves to the utmoſt, in ſupport of the General Laws of the Empire, as well as the particular laws of our own Province; that in every caſe where we ſhall ſee theſe broken or infringed upon, we ſhall think it our indiſpenſible duty, jointly or individually, to bring the offenders to juſtice.

That we will diſcountenance by every poſſible means, the introduction of all ſeditious or incendiary opinions, whether theſe may be preſented in writings or converſation;

And we do declare our determination ſtedfaſtly to unite, in defending our preſent Conſtitution and Government, as eſſentially neceſſary to our happineſs and deareſt intereſts, by every exertion in our power, whether directed againſt foreign enemies or domeſtic foes.

Then the Meeting Reſolved nem. con. that the Subſcribers to the Reſolutions above mentioned, ſhall henceforth be an Aſſociation for preſerving and continuing an unanimity of principles and efforts in ſupport of our preſent happy Laws and Government.

Reſolved unanimouſly, that the Honorable ROBERT HAMILTON Eſq; be Preſident thereof.

Reſolved, that a Committee ſhall ſit at Free-Maſon's Hall every Saturday from the hour often in the morning until noon, for the purpoſe of receiving ſubſcriptions to the aſſociation.

Reſolved, that Printed Copies of the above proceedings be ſent into the more diſtant parts of the Diſtrict, with a ſpace to receive the ſignatures of the Inhabitants deſirous of being admitted into this aſſociation.

LOYAL ASSOCIATION OF THE HOME DISTRICT. (UPPER CANADA.)

ON Saturday last the 16th instant the following Address was presented to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, by the unanimous vote of a numerous Meeting of the Magistrates and other respectable Inhabitants of this Settlement convened in consequence of the resolution of a previous Meeting on Monday last.

The Hon. ROBERT HAMILTON, Esq; in the Chair.

To his Excellency JOHN GRAVES SIMCOE, Esq;
Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

HIS Majesty's loyal and faithful Subjects of the Home District of Upper Canada, tho' at present they do not know a single disaffected person among them, yet anxious to maintain and preserve the blessings they enjoy from their connection with Great Britain, and their participation of her happy Constitution, do wish to associate for the purposes of supporting the Laws; of discountenancing all seditious or inflamatory opinions; and of defending at the risk of their lives and fortunes their present Government against all foreign or domestic Enemies——do most humbly entreat your Excellency to sanction and countenance their Loyal Intentions in this association.

To which his Excellency was pleased to return the following Answer

GENTLEMEN,

THE wisdom of associating for the protection of the Laws and the system of Government so wisely established by our ancestors, when factious and designing men are combining to subvert them, has been clearly evinced by the happy effects which it has produced in the Parent State. It has discountenanced the practices of incendiaries, and held out to the peaceable, and well affected, a bond of union and safety.

I do not believe, that this Royal Province possesses any persons within it, who are not ready to risk as much in the preservation of their natural Government, as either foreign or domestic enemies will venture for its destruction, but as you seem wisely to associate for the discountenancing and preventing such opinions, if ould they be attempted hereafter, to be insidiously dissemin ted to injure our common harmony and growing prosperity, and as I have constantly born witness to the loyalty and fidelity of this district and of the Province in general, so in the present instance, I shall in all respects sanction and countenance what I consider the effect of such worthy and estimable principles.

The Meeting then unanimously entered into the following Resolution, and Subscribed the same.

WE the Inhabitants of the Home District of Upper Canada deeply impressed with the sense of the manyfold benefits we have received, and the valuable blessings we enjoy, from our connection with the British Government, and from our participation of her happy Constitution; and fully convinced that we can neither possess nor transmit to our Children, any Boon more valuable to us, or more useful to them:

We do associate for the purposes of maintaining and preserving these inestimable advantages by every means in our power.

And we do resolve and declare as the most effectual steps for these purposes, that we will exert ourselves to the utmost, in support of the General Laws of the Empire, as well as the particular laws of our own Province; that in every case where we shall see these broken or infringed upon, we shall think it our indispensible duty, jointly or individually, to bring the offenders to justice.

That we will discountenance by every possible means, the introduction of all seditious or incendiary opinions, whether these may be presented in writings or conversation;

And we do declare our determination stedfastly to unite, in defending our present Constitution and Government, as essentially necessary to our happiness and dearest interests, by every exertion in our power, whether directed against foreign enemies or domestic foes.

Then the Meeting Resolved nem. con. that the Subscribers to the Resolutions above mentioned, shall hereafter be an Association for preserving and continuing an unanimity of principles and efforts in support of our present happy Laws and Government.

Resolved unanimously, that the Honorable ROBERT HAMILTON Esq; be President thereof.

Resolved, that a Committee shall sit at Free-Mason's Hall every Saturday from the hour often in the morning until noon, for the purpose of receiving subscriptions to the association.

Resolved, that Printed Copies of the above proceedings be sent into the more distant parts of the District, with a space to receive the signatures of the Inhabitants desirous of being admitted into this association.

COUNCIL-CHAMBER, May 24, 1794.

PRESENT

His Excellency JOHN GRAVES SIMCOE, Esq; Lieutenant Governor, &c. &c. &c.—IN COUNCIL.

Read a Representation from the Acting Surveyor General stating that many irregularities have been practised, with regard to the occupation of Lands and setting forth the inconvenience and confusion likely to ensue therefrom, which being taken into consideration His Excellency and the Council

RESOLVE,

THAT whereas many persons have settled upon Lands in different parts of this Province without having obtained any Authority, Licence or Title so to do, such intrusion is injurious to the Rights of the Crown, and abusive of the King's Bounty so liberally held out to all sober and industrious Settlers on making a proper application to his Excellency in Council or to the several Land-Boards: and therefore it is necessary that immediate measures be taken to remove such Trespassers, and to prevent the extending of such lawless practices, for which purpose it is hereby ordered, that the Deputy Surveyors, & others employed under the Surveyor General, who shall find in the course of their progress, that any person or persons have taken possession of any pieces of ground or lot in any unsurveyed or unlocated part, whereby there may be good reason to believe, that such occupation has been usurped; that they do immediately report the same, together with the name of the party to the Surveyor General, who in case he shall find that such person has not been located by a competent authority, shall issue a notice to the party or parties, requiring them to remove from the Premises without delay, and if such Warning be not obeyed, he shall report the same to his Excellency in Council in order that the Attorney General may be directed to proceed against such intruders with the utmost rigour of the Law; and further that all persons, who shall wilfully hold out after receiving such Warning from the Surveyor General, shall be disqualified from becoming partakers of the King's bounty in any part of this Province.

And whereas at the first Settlement of the Home District, some few persons were authorized by the Commanding Officer for the time being, to take up, and occupy, certain parcels of Land, in consequence of which, they have been considered as having an equitable claim to the property of such Lands, with a view to prevent the Confusion, Uncertainty and Contention that will hereafter take place unless the boundaries of each persons property be distinctly ascertained, and described, as well as to confirm the Right and Title of those who have been deserving objects of his Majesty's Bounty. It is hereby ordered, that all persons claiming such right from an authorized occupation of the Land, do forthwith hereby give in a Memorial thereof, containing a Statement of the quantity of Land which they respectively claim, to the Surveyor General, who shall report thereon to his Excellency in Council, that proper grants may be made out to those who shall be entitled to the same.

And whereas many persons having obtained a certificate have taken possession of Lands without having received any assignment from the Surveyor General or Deputy Surveyors, by means whereof much confusion has arisen. It is further ordered, that no person shall in any case take possession of any lot or parcel of ground until he shall have received a regular assignment thereof from the Surveyor General or a Deputy Surveyor under the penalty of being compelled to relinquish all improvements to the person who shall obtain a regular assignment of such lot, and therefore be lawfully entitled to take possession of the same.—Inasmuch as all lots must necessarily be considered as vacant until they are duly assigned and Registered in the Surveyor General's Office.

And further that all persons at present holding Orders or Certificates for Land, which has not been assigned, do make application for that purpose as soon as possible.

And whereas it is desirable to make early provision for all persons authorised by His Majesty's Proclamation or Instructions to receive their respective allotments of Land, such persons are hereby required to make immediate applications for the same.

Note presented by the British ambassador to the Divan at Constantinople.

THERE exists between the belligerent powers, and the nations, mutual duties, regulated by treaties, or in default of these, by the law of nations.

The mutual nations are bound to an exact impartiality towards the parties at war; they ought to assist none of them.

They ought consequently, not to permit in their country, the fitting out or arming of men of war, or privateers, in favor of one belligerent power against another.

Their harbors ought neither to be the refuge of privateers, which, if at all received, ought to be allowed to enter them, only in cases of the most urgent necessity: and they have a right to make them put to sea again as soon as they have undergone the most indispensable repairs. The armed ships have no right to bring up and carry their prizes into those ports. And the belligerent powers ought on their part to abstain from all hostilities among the neutral nations; they ought to respect their territories.

But the above duties being perfectly reciprocal, it cannot be required from one party to make sacrifices for the sake of conformity, if on the other, those duties are dilowned, or neglected; if these principles are applied to the present juncture, it is supposed that a nation, which has violated all that is sacred among men, has the same rights as other nations: that the French democrats, instead of being treated like pirates by the Turks, ought to be admitted on an equal footing with the ancient and sincere friends of the country.

But the Ottoman officers, who command in certain provinces, do not confine themselves to a partiality in favor of the French, difficult to be interpreted; they even seem, since the beginning of the present war, to have lost sight of all the obligations of neutrality acknow-

STATE PAPER.

Note presented by the British ambassador to the Divan at Constantinople.

THERE exists between the belligerent powers, and the nations, mutual duties, regulated by treaties, or in default of these, by the law of nations.

The mutual nations are bound to an exact impartiality towards the parties at war; they ought to assist none of them.

They ought consequently, not to permit in their country, the fitting out or arming of men of war, or privateers, in favor of one belligerent power against another.

Their harbors ought neither to be the refuge of privateers, which, if at all received, ought to be allowed to enter them, only in cases of the most urgent necessity: and they have a right to make them put to sea again as soon as they have undergone the most indispensable repairs. The armed ships have no right to bring up and carry their prizes into those ports. And the belligerent powers ought on their part to abstain from all hostilities among the neutral nations; they ought to respect their territories.

But the above duties being perfectly reciprocal, it cannot be required from one party to make sacrifices for the sake of conformity, if on the other, those duties are disowned, or neglected; if these principles are applied to the present juncture, it is supposed that a nation, which has violated all that is sacred among men, has the same rights as other nations: that the French democrats, instead of being treated like pirates by the Turks, ought to be admitted on an equal footing with the ancient and sincere friends of the country.

But the Ottoman officers, who command in certain provinces, do not confine themselves to a partiality in favor of the French, difficult to be interpreted; they even seem, since the beginning of the present war, to have lost sight of all the obligations of neutrality acknowledged by the civilized nations. At Smyrna the sailors of the convention were seen to commit open hostilities against the British officers & seamen without the aggressors having been given up, or even searched after.

In the same harbor of Smyrna, ships have been at different times seen arming, fitting out as privateers against the English, without the smallest interruption on the part of the magistrates. Prizes, taken by the French cruizers, were seen to have been brought thither publicly & without obstacle.

A squadron of frigates and armed ships of that same nation remained in that harbor as frequently, and as long as it tho't proper; it blocked up, as it were, the harbor of Smyrna, and interrupted the commerce of nations for near two years.

In this self same position, and in the distance marked out by the rules of neutrality, the French armed ships took prizes, and even in sight of the Turkish fortresses, they searched and plundered neutral ships, and even those of the subjects of the sublime Porte. What is the consequence to be drawn from these facts? It is natural to suppose, that what it lawful for one party, must also be for the other. A British officer of the royal navy acted in consequence; he attacked and captured one of the enemy's frigates in a bay called Turkish, having, however, previously made himself sure that there was neither a Turkish fort or flag in it, in order to avoid every thing that might be deemed an insult to the jurisdiction of the sublime Porte, and having afterwards resolved to indemnify the inhabitants of the coast for damage he might have done them, if they actually had been sufferers, he offered freely to me to promulgate his name.

If the French democrats were susceptible of those feelings which influence other men, that occurrence would have brought them to their senses, and, seeing that an abuse subsequent to the indulgence which they enjoyed on the part of the Turkish commandants, might be followed by disagreeable consequences, and finally compromise the sublime Porte herself, they would have taken the resolution to forbear committing their unlawful depredations, and to conform themselves forthwith to the rules prescribed by the law of nations.

But the result was quite different; the French having obtained exclusive immunities and privileges from the Turkish government, talk of avenging themselves on those who durst imitate their example; they have the audacity to threaten the peaceful inhabitants of Smyrna with pillage and death; they provided arms, combustibles, and held conventicles to concert the execution of their plans.

The conduct which the sublime Porte should observe in this respect, is plain and evident; the partiality, or rather the too great weekness of the governors who command her provinces, has been the origin of this evil; let that weakness cease, let the French be obliged to observe the articles of neutrality, or else find no more the indecent protection which they have hitherto enjoyed in harbors and roads of the Turkish empire. Let the Porte maintain good order in her territories, by a respectable armed force, and I dare to answer, that no excess, no irregularity, will in future be committed by the officers of his Britannic majesty.

AMSTERDAM, Feb 6.

In the sitting of the municipality of this city, on the 3d instant, the morning assembly having been opened, the president read a letter from one of the deputies of the Hague, of which the following is an extract.

1. At the prayer of the inhabitants it was decreed to oppose the regency.

2. The commission for the affairs of the East-India company, which was composed of the Vanderdoe, Van de Wall, Dedel Salomoner, and Jah Van Stralen, has been replaced by other citizens.

3. A missive from the municipality of the bille, giving information of the revolution that has taken place, having been received; a decre paſſed inviting them to ſend deputies to the aſſembly.

PUBLIC RECORDS CANADA. OFFICE.

4. In conſequence of a miſſive from the ſtates of Zealand, concerning the affairs of the Eaſt-India company, it was decreed to have them conducted by the committee of finance belonging to the company.

5. On an order, from the French repreſentatives, relative to the poſſeſſions belonging to the government with which France is at war, it was decreed by the municipaliſts of the province, and afterwards to the committee of public ſafety, with an order to the deputies of the generality to inſiſt that their high mightineſſes would preſent a memorial to the French repreſentatives to entreat of them, once for all, not to iſſue any orders themſelves, but to addreſs their high mightineſſes.

6. On a miſſion from the French repreſentatives to regiſter the poſſeſſions of the ſtadtholder, it was decreed that the deputies of the generality ſhould make known the French repreſentatives, on the part of their high mightineſſes.

I. That many of the poſſeſſions alluded to were not in fact the property of the cidevant ſtadtholder, but he was only permitted to hold them for his own uſe.

II. That it would be firſt neceſſary to deduct his debts, which were enormous.

III. That he did not hold his poſſeſſions as ſtadtholder, but as a private individual.

It was then decreed to refer this miſſive to the committee of public ſafety, to take the opinion of citizen Vander Drogit, fiſcal of the domains on that ſubject, &c.

A commiſſion of the arbitrators of Diemen, demanded that they might diſplace their bailiff; but they were informed it could not be done without a real accuſation was brought againſt him, being an eſtabliſhed officer of the city, and that it was alſo neceſſary for ſuch accuſation to be confirmed by proof: however it was adviſed to eſtabliſh another college of ſheriffs.

The afternoon ſitting was commenced with the reviſion of an act for accuſing the ſecretary of the city. A commiſſion of the committee of Negro inſiſted ſtrongly on the regulation concerning aſſignats. The preſident anſwered, that the aſſembly concurred with the deſires of the committee, and that they would give orders to the deputies at the Hague, to have this buſineſs ſettled with all expedition. It was then reſolved to ſend during the night a courier to the Hague, with an order relative to aſſignats, and an anſwer to the letter which the municipality had received.

The ſitting of Wedneſday morning, Feb. 4th, was commenced with a notification concerning the ſtate of the bank of this city. The citizens Van Acher and Vanker Zoo, who has been charged with the commiſſion relative thereto, produced their written notice, with the alterations—it was decreed that the ſame ſhould be publiſhed with the alterations.

LETTER

From his Majeſty the King of Poland, to Mr. Gardiner, envoy extraordinary from Great-Britain, at Warſaw.

My dear Gardiner,

Since the official cnonection which exiſted between you and me ſeems to be near an end, and, as I have no hopes to ſee you again, I think it my intereſt to wiſh you a farewell, and this truly from the bottom of my heart. In the latter you will retain your place until my death; and I hope we ſhall be found together, in that place were righteous ſouls and good hearts, according to my belief, will be united for ever. Every etiquete & ceremonious cuſtom is now totally interrupted between you and me, at leaſt as to myſelf I ſhall never have the trouble of obſerving again the diplomatic rules and cuſtoms; but I ſhall always confeſs that I love and honor your King and your nation—this is what I deſire you to tell them. I wiſh alſo that you may always preſerve a remembrance and affection towards your friend. Since I cannot any more converſe with you in perſon, my miniature will now and then make you think on

(Signed)
STANISLAUS AUGUSTUS, REX.

ANSWER

From Mr. Gardiner, the Britiſh envoy to his Polith Majeſty.

SIRE,

The letter which your majeſty did me the honor of writing me from Grodno, and which I received yeſterday, has moved me to tears, and will conſtantly cauſe emotions within me, whenever I ſhall think on it. I moſt gratefully thank your majeſty for the miniature you did me the honor to ſend me. It is doubly dear to me for coming from your hands, and from preſenting me with the idea of your perſon. The image of your Majeſty, the excellence of your character, your diſtinguiſhed kindneſs towards me, and your misfortune, ſhall be engraved on my heart, and never be effaced from my mind. May juſt heaven in future grant to your Majeſty the fate which your virtues deſerve, and may he reſtore the calm within our ſoul, which is ſo neceſſary after ſo many ſtorms!—I ſhall always pray for the welfare of your Majeſty; and I entreat your Majeſty occaſionally to think on a perſon, who always felt the moſt profound reſpect, and eſteem for your Majeſty. Pleaſe to accept of the aſſurance of my true ſubmiſſion to your future commands.

I have the honor to be Sire, your Majeſty's humble ſervant, (Signed) GARDINER,
Envoy extraordinary and miniſter plenipotentiary of his Britannic majeſty.

Extract of a letter from the maſter of a veſſel at Aux Cayes, to his wife in this place, dated Feb. 10, 1795.

"I am under the unfortunate ſituation to inform you that I was taken on the 3d of February on my paſſage from St. Thomas's to Port-au-Prince, by a privateer under Spaniſh colours. At 2 P. M. on the 2d, ſhe gave us chaſe, but did not bring us too until day light on the 3d. Coming to the windward of us ſhe hailed us in broken Engliſh, demanded what nation we were, I anſwered Americans. She inſtantly let go a broadſide into us, together with a volley of muſquetry, which fortunately did not injure us. The captain while I was walking the quarter deck fired a muſket at me but did not hit me.

I had not been out of my bed for 14 days, and had a fever on me; but I was obliged to go on board the privateer, though the weather was very boiſterous. After I got on board I was treated in a moſt ſavage manner. The captain beat me on the head and ſhoulders with his cutlaſs, and ſaid that I was a "damned American thief, bound to Jacquemel with proviſions for the French." He ordered me chained forward, kicked me into the hole—ſent his boat on board my veſſel and took out all the poultry, cheeſe &c. bringing on board the ſupercargo and two of my people. He then permitted me to go on board, with a prize maſter and four men, to carry us into Spaniſh St. Domingo. We left the privateer (the ſupercargo and people on board her) and ſtood in for St. Domingo, the privateer ſtanding to the Southward until we had loſt ſight of her. The prize maſter ſaid he could not fetch St. Domingo, and would therefore, go to St. Marks. Three days afterwards, to my great ſurprize, he brought us in here. He then told me he belonged to the republic of France.

The privateer is out of Gaudaloupe, commanded by Joſeph Calather, a Genoeſe.—His crew are Spaniards, French, Portugueſe, and Negroes.

I was not permitted to go on ſhore, nor any American to ſpeak to me; but the American captains, finding how I was uſed, aſſembled and petitioned to the general for my liberty, which was granted.—I have liberty now to walk on ſhore. The people are ſtill on board, where every thing is ſealed up. When we ſhall have a trial God only knows, but I hope in a few days, and if we get cleared it will be at leaſt a thouſand pounds damage to us.

MINT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Mr. Rittenhouſe, director of the mint of the United States, in his letter read in the houſe of repreſentatives, ſtate, that a beginning has been made in coining the precious metals. Near an hundred and twenty thouſand ounces of bullion have been lodged in the mint, for coinage, but much of it is too baſe for the ſtandard of the United States. It has been ſucceſſively refined by the aſſayer, who is ſtill going on with that proceſs. A quantity of blank dollars are ready for coining, but a more powerful preſs is not yet got finiſhed, in order to complete them for circulation.—A great quantity of copper ſtill remains on hand, part not yet refined. This will occaſionally be wrought, ſo as not to intertere with the ſilver coinage.—The expence of the mint have hitherto been chiefly applied to preparatory meaſures for carrying on the eſtabliſhment. Neceſſary buildings have been erected, ſuch as furnaces for melting, refining and aſſaying, &c. For this purpoſe an additional lot of ground has been purchaſed, as alſo the very extenſive machinery uſed in the operations of coining.

ATROCITIES COMMITTED AT NANTES.

It appears from the different depoſitions of the 80 witneſſes from Nantes, heard on the trial of the 14 members of the revolutionary committee of that city, that the number of perſons who have died in priſon there, through ſickneſs or miſery, amounts to 10,000; the number ſhot or drowned, to 30,000; that among the drowned were 4 or 500 work houſe children, the eldeſt of whom was not more than 14 years of age; that an old man and an old woman, were tied naked together, and likewiſe a young man and woman who remained in that ſituation half an hour, when they were cut on the head with a ſword, and afterwards thown into the Loire.

Theſe murders were called republican weddings. The deputy Carier was the chief author of theſe horrid enormities: and often appeared at the tribune of the popular ſociety with a poniard in his hand, exciting the people to murder and carnage; in ſpeaking of the children he had killed, on taking them from their mother's breaſts, he had ſaid, 'theſe are vipers, they muſt be deſtroyed;' and he threatened to guillotine whoever ſhould dare to intercede for the victims devoted to his fury.

Newark, April 6, 1795.

[From the London Morning Chronicle.]

The following intereſting caſe has lately excited the public attention :

IN July laſt one Loiſerotles the younger, was condemned to death. On the 7th Thermidor the uſher of the revolutionary tribunal brought to the bar the warrant for the execution of ſeveral perſons. He called the name of Loiſerotles. The father of L. the younger immediately anſwered to the ſummons, and was conducted to the conciergerie. He received the act of accuſation made out by order of the committe of public ſafety, in which his ſon was charged with a conſpiracy in priſon.

Informing the ſecretary that his chriſtian name and his age were incorrectly given, he deſired that they might be altered ; which was accordingly done. The word Francois, was eraſed, and Jean Simon ſubſtituted, and the figures 61, were put inſtead of 22.

PENZANCE, Nov. 28.

A droll affair happened here laſt week. A ſoldier being very much in liquor, and very abuſive withall, was taken up and put in the town priſon pretty early in the evening, where he being unable to ſtand, laid down and preſently fell faſt aſleep ; an idiot well know by the name of crazy Tom, happening that evening to behave very ill, was late at night ſent to the ſame priſon. Tom (who is remarkable for always carrying a prayer book under his arm) knew nothing of the ſoldier's being there ; he placed the prayer book for his pillow, laid down and ſlept till the dawn of the day, when riſing and moving about, he happened to ſtumble on the ſleeping ſoldier, and fairly tumbled over him. Tom railing and diſcovering the ſoldier aſleep, he ſaid to himſelf here is a dead corpſe, but I will give it a chriſtian burial. He went, and juſt behind the priſon door found a parcel of dirt, with which he filled his hat, then pulling off his coat and waiſtcoat, and drawing his flaps from his breeches, now, ſays Tom, I am in my ſurplice, and with his prayer book in his hand, walking towards the ſleeping ſoldier, calls out make room for the parſon, then began diſtinctly to read the burial ſervice ; when he come to "earth to earth," Tom taking an handful of dirt ſtrewed it over the ſoldier, "aſhes to aſhes," Tom ſtrewed another handful, "duſt to duſt," Tom took up his hat, and threw the whole in the ſoldiers face, which waked him, and ſeeing and hearing Tom read, he really believed they thought him dead, and were abſolutely burying him.

The ſoldier immediately cied out, pray reverend ſir, don't bury me, I am not dead yet ; you lie, ſays Tom ! You are dead dead enough I warrant you, no living man could look through the keyhole nor the iron grates ; there was no body here but myſelf laſt night, and I found this dead corpſe here this morning ! Tom began to read on—ſir, ſays the ſoldier, I was put in here for being drunk, and am not dead, then ſays Tom you died while you was drunk and have forgot it, that's all, but you muſt and ſhall have a chriſtian burial ; with this the ſoldier jumped up, which ſo frighted Tom, that he began to roar out, thieves ! murder ! fire ! fire ! the cry of fire alarmed the inhabitants, who, ſome dreſſed, and others almoſt naked, for it was ſtill early crouded about the priſon, and the cry of fire being repeated by Tom, they called up the priſonkeeper, who unlocked the priſon door ; Tom ſprung out in his ſhirt, & running down the ſtreet, informed the gaping multitude, that he had ſeen the devil in the priſon in the ſhape of a dead ſoldier.

ANECDOTE.

There is now living in the pariſh of Hereford, (England) a man of the name of Richard Brown, at the ſurpriſing age of 115. He has had 17 children, and the eldeſt boy (as he familiarly terms him) is now in the 84 year of his age. This venerable patriarch retains his faculties in aſtoniſhing perfection, can read the ſmalleſt print without the aſſiſtance of ſpectacles, and a few days ſince walked to Hereford and returned to Peter-church, a diſtance of 24 miles within the ſpace of eight hours.

Public notice is hereby given that fifteen hundred barrels of flour, and two thouſand buſhels of peas are wanted for the uſe of government, at Niagara. The flour to be packed in caſks containing 200lbs. nett. Each ſpecies to be of the firſt quality, and packed in good and ſufficient caſks. Sealed propoſals will be received at the Aſſiſtant Commiſſary General's Office, at Niagara, on or before the 1ſt day of June next, in any proportion for the above quantity of flour and peas, provided that no propoſal will be received for leſs than ten barrels of flour and fifty buſhels of peas. The earlieſt period of delivery ſpecified, but not later than the firſt of Auguſt next, together with the rate of payment in tranſferable certificates PAYABLE at Quebec, and alſo the price demanded, if payment ſhould be made in ſpecie, on the ſpot. GEORGE the third, by the grace of God of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, king, defender of the faith, &c. &c. &c.

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS,

GREETING:

WHEREAS, by our Proclamation, bearing date the twentieth day of November, we thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council to prorogue our provincial parliament until the SECOND day of this present month of January, at which time in our town of YORK you were held and ordained to appear; but we taking into our royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our executive council, to relieve you, and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the ELEVENTH day of February next, ensuing, you meet us at our provincial parliament, in our town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our province of Upper-Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary: Herein fail not. In testimony whereof we have caused these our letters to be made patent, and the great seal of our said province to be hereunto affixed:—Witness PETER HUNTER, Esq. our Lieutenant Governor and Lieutenant General commanding our Forces in our said province, and in the province of Lower Canada, this thirtieth day of December, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-nine, and of our reign the fortieth.

COUNCIL-OFFICE,
29TH OCTOBER, 1799.

THE BOARD having reason to believe, that very frequent FRAUDS have been committed by persons who are entitled to lands free of expence, having asked for, and received the same TWO or THREE times over:

ORDERED, that hereafter, no petition be received from any person claiming as a U. E. or child of a U.E.; unless the same be signed by the petitioner in presence of a magistrate, and be accompanied by an affidavit by the petitioner; stating that he, or she, is of the age of TWENTY ONE years or upwards, or married if a female; and that he, or she has never received any lands from the crown; and also by a certificate of the same magistrate that the petitioner is the person he, or she describes himself, or herself to be; and that he, or she never has, to the knowledge and belief of the magistrate, ever received lands, or any order for lands from the crown.

JOHN SMALL.

York, Dec. 10, 1799.

NOTICE is hereby given, that the Reserves on Dundas-street are now ready to be Leased; and will be leased to actual Settlers only, on such terms and conditions as may be known at the Council-Office.

CUTHBURGA, an Anglo Saxon Tale.

☞ This elegant Tale would have been long ere this concluded, were it not for the heavy indisposition under which our correspondent laboured for some time past; but now, we are glad to hear, is perfectly recovered, by which we hope, shortly to have it in our power to gratify our numerous and respectable readers with its sequil.

DURING his gloomy journey, Edwin had revolved in his mind, those circumstances relating to Cuthburga's prior engagement, which were likely to injure Ofred's cause; and summing up all the obstacles that appeared to interrupt him, in the attaining of that happiness he so ardently sought, resolved if possible to withdraw him from the pursuit which he feared would end in sorrow and disappointment; accordingly when, in the morning, he was admitted to the presence of the anxious prince, he thus addressed him:—"Hail to my gracious liege, and may his Edwin ever be engaged on more auspicious service, than that which employed him yesternight."—"Thou art the bearer then of evil tidings," replied Ofred, "the maid rejects my suit, and leaves me to despair—say it at once, nor trifle with my patience." "It is not wholly so, my honored prince," cried Edwin, "for thou mayest remember I was not charged to urge thy suit to her, but merely to enquire from Edilda, if yet the virgin heart of fair Cuthburga had yielded to the sovereign power of love." "And has it," cried the king, "speak, have I a rival—O give him to my rage ye heavenly powers! for by your sacred attributes I swear, that man exists not, who shall wrest her from me." Edwin stood aghast, for well as he was acquainted with the temper of the king, he had looked not for such violence, he knew not how to proceed, he mused—"why art thou silent?" Ofred in an agitated voice demanded. "Why doſt thou not at once reveal, all thou haſt learned of the lovely maid? declare the worſt, and let me ſeek redreſs." "Alas!" cried Edwin, "I know not what to ſay, thy heat, thy ſtrong impatience ſo alarms me, but this I would adviſe, that thou forget her. Why, I need not add, but ſure a fairer maid, at leaſt as fair, may eaſily be found, who gladly would accept thy royal hand, and yield thee all her heart; then turn thy thoughts on ſuch, and leave the daughter of thy haughty foe to ſeek another love, more ſuited to endure her cold repulſive manners, than is Northumbria's king." "In vain thou doſt endeavour to divert my fixed intention to obtain Cuthburga by any means;" cried Ofred. "I tell thee I am reſolved ſhe ſhall be mine; though I ſhould be oppoſed by Mercia's ſovereign, nay tho' I lay her country all in ruin, and ſhed the nobleſt blood my own can boaſt, I will poſſeſs her, or periſh in the attempt.—Then tell me what it is I muſt encounter; is ſhe haughty? I'll crouch beneath her feet. Cold? I'll melt her icy boſom with my tears. Ambitious? I'll dazzle her with the ſplendor of a throne. Point me out the barrier to my bliſs, and unleſs it be beyond the reach of man, I will ſurmount it." Edwin was now convinced that it was equally dangerous as vain, to oppoſe the wiſhes of his ſovereign, and after a ſhort preface, in which he endeavoured to prove, that all attempts to gain Cuthburga to his wiſhes (who was under a ſevere control, and ſtrictly attentive to the claims of duty) would be fruitleſs, he declared that meaſures for an interview, were concerted with Edilda, in which, if Ofred choſe to make the trial, that night ſhould fix his fate. The king gave way to tranſports of joy, at this intelligence, yet ever, and anon would chide his friend, for keeping him ſo long in ignorance, of this approaching happineſs. Edwin ſaid he did not deem it happineſs to ſue, and be rejected; but Ofred's hopes were high, and he longed for the moment that ſhould bring him to the preſence of Cuthburga. Confiding to his chamberlain his intended abſence, which he ſaid an event of conſequence required, and ordered it to be concealed from the whole court, under pretence of his being indiſpoſed he ſet out equipped in the hunter's dreſs, accompanied by his faithful Edwin, and arrived in view of the caſtle, a ſhort time before ſunſet. Edwin halted, and fixed on a commodious ſpot, ſpread the king refreſhments, with which he had ſupplied himſelf, and which he began to feel the neceſſity of. But Ofred had no appetite, and turning his eyes towards the caſtle bade Edwin eat, for he had no need of food, with ſuch an object in his view. The veſper bell rung out, which was to call the domeſtics of Cuthburga to the cloiſter; he ſtarted up, "they go to prayer," cried he, "and I to heaven." The bell ceaſed—Edwin aroſe and led the way—they arrived at the weſtern hall—the door was opened—Ofred advanced, but Edilda was not there—he looked in the face of Edwin—alarm ſat upon his manly brow. "My prince," he cried "we are betrayed, Edilda is not here, ſhe has betrayed us into Eldred's power, and dares not now behold us." While yet he ſpoke, the damſel entered the hall, and ſeeing them, exclaimed "alas! alas! the ſorrow which overwhelms the houſe of Eldred had driven you from my mind; but haſte let me conceal you, leſt the buſy domeſtics who run in confuſion from room to room, ſhould ſee, and queſtion you." "What ſorrow doſt thou ſpeak of?" cried the king, "how fares Cuthburga?" "as well," replied Euilda, as deep affliction will permit; lord Eldred is at the point of death—he calls for her to cloſe his eyes, ſhe is haſtening to him, and ſets off for court immediately." "Can I not ſee her, for a moment ſee her?" cried the prince. "To what purpoſe," Edilda ſaid, "ſure this is not a time to ſpeak of love." "If not," returned Ofred, "it is a time to offer comfort, therefore lead me to her." The damſel obeyed, and brought him to the preſence of her miſtreſs. Cuthburga was in tears. "When beauty weeps," ſaid Ofred, "ſenſeleſs muſt be the heart, that does not ſympathiſe." He took her hand—"kind ſtranger," replied Cuthburga, "thy pity deſerves, and has my thanks, but why I pray thee art thou here? I have not been accuſtomed to receive viſits from any of thy ſex, ſave thoſe who brought me tidings from my father." "I came ſweet maid," cried Ofred, "not thinking to find thee in affliction, to offer to thy acceptance an heart, which thy exalted charms have won, and to woo thee for my wife."—"Alas!" ſaid ſhe "the heart thou offereſt I cannot accept, thou muſt beſtow it on ſome happier maiden, for never ſhall Cuthburga be a wife." "Ah! ſay not ſo, fair daughter of lord Eldred," cried the king, "thou who art formed to bleſs whom thou acceptеſt with the full meaſure of connubial happineſs, ſince thy virtues will give ſtability to that love, thy beauty doth inſpire; but I will not urge thee in the hour of ſorrow, when that ſubſides, thou ſhalt beſtow thy feet again." "I know not who inſpires my heart," replied Cuthburga, "but from thy appearance, I judge thee worthy of a milder fate, than to love in vain; therefore I pray thee think of me no more. I go to receive the command of a dying father, what they may be I know not, but by me they ſhall be held moſt ſacred—fare thee well, I haſten to commence my journey." Cuthburga retired to an inner chamber, and the king fearful of offending her, immediately left the caſtle.

"Edwin," cried the monarch to his companion, after they had meaſured back near half their journey in profound ſilence, "this maid has twined herſelf about my heart; I love her more than ever, and cannot (though ſhe has commanded it) forget her; but on the contrary am reſolved to omit no poſſible means of obtaining her. I have meditated as we came along and I think I now can proſecute my deſign, with good aſſurance of ſucceſs." "Has ſhe not," aſked Edwin, "received thee with that cold reſerve, which baniſhes all hope and of which I had warned thee?" "With that reſerve which modeſty requires, replied the prince, "ſhe certainly received me, yet not with repulſive coldneſs I find her candid, gentle and compaſſionate; I am not without hope. Cuthburga looks on me as an inferior, ſhe has no right to [illegible] and her reſerve was prudent. I cannot therefore ſuppoſe ſhe will accept me under theſe unfavourable appearances. Again, ſhould I obtain another interview, and appear in my real character, her virtuous ſoul, would ſhrink from an alliance with her country's foe. Mark then what I deſign; the truce I granted to the king of Mercia will ſhortly be expired. I will prepare me to renew hoſtilities, with ſuch a formidable body of troops, as ſhall ſtrike terror to the ſoul of Ethelred, now deprived of Eldred's ſteady counſel. I will approach his frontier, and thus prepared to hurl him from his throne, ſend overtures of peace, in which ſhall be included alliance with his houſe.—Avice his only child, he has affianced to his kinſman Kenred; her will I demand, but her I cannot give me. Cuthburga is the daughter of his ſiſter. Her will he offer her will I accept." Edwin ſighed, "do thou not approve thoſe meaſures," ſaid the king. "Moſt certainly," replied Edwin, "they almoſt inſure ſucceſs, but if the affections of Cuthburga ſhould be pre-engaged, is it not cruelty thus to lead her into an union of which ſhe muſt not dare avow her diſapprobation, though it ſhould break her heart." "I truſt it is not ſo," returned Ofred, "for I caſt not on me the glances of diſlike her mild, yet tearful eyes beamed pi-ore than hatred; but be it as it may, I cannot live without her." Thus received, and Edwin making no reply, the amouted prince ſunk again into ſilent editation, which was not interrupted ll he arrived at his abode, whence at early hour next day, he departed th all his retinue for Bamburg caſtle, here he held his court; and commend his military preparations.

LABORS in themſelves uſeful, whatever their primary objects might ave been, whether that of amuſing or enefiting the individual or the com-unity, are entitled to a reward, be it ecuniary, honorary, or the tribute hich I believe none will deny, it beomes a public duty to encourage every ffort of genius or ſtudy, of which the elancholy as it is general, that few re they in number who can ſo far diveſt hemſelves, of that penury of thought nd ſelfiſhneſs of diſpoſition, ſo inheent in, and ſo biaſſing, and burthen-ome to ordinary minds; and which, renders the world at large ſo unwilling to do juſtice to merit, however varied in kind, or eminent in degree. I am led into theſe reflections, by obſerving with ſorrow, and I may ſay, a juſt indignation, that ſo little notice is taken of, and ſo little attention paid, to a lately propoſed regulation, entitled the "Stump Act." The extenſive and happy influence, that this act if properly inforced, would have, muſt be obvious to the moſt inattentive and careleſs obſerver; and the happy genius, whoſe ſtupendous conception, could embrace and blend the union of ſo ma ny truly great and uſeful views, in one plan, certainly arreſts, and muſt for ever claim our higheſt admiration; while at the ſame time it evinces the philanthropiſt, the moraliſt, and the genuine legiſlator. Add to this, that inſuperable modeſty which doubly appreciates, this concealed benefactor of the human race. It is to be lamented for his ſake, that he does not announce his real name and condition to a wondering multitude—and thereby challenge that ſacrifice of praiſe, which is ſo juſtly due at the ſhrine of his merit. Numerous and happily pointed, are his uſeful animadverſions on the different ſpecies of intemperance, ſo predominant in every claſs of ſociety; and a torrent of information and edifying matter, flows from his worthy pen. Now, may we beſeech his preſiding Divinity, to bleſs and preſerve his rare, his precious in telleſts, and truly invaluable faculties;

may they be exerted with ſuch irreſiſt-able force, and ſuch ardent energy that an inundation of enlightening wiſdom, may overwhelm the barbarous and depraved herd: for whoſe inſtruction only, he deigns to labor, and not for thoſe mercenary and intereſted ends, which prompt and generate the eſſays of common ſcribblers. While eſſays, are in themſelves oftener inſults offered to, than ſubjects of improvement to medium underſtandings. So ſublime, ſo pathetic and ſo awfully grand, is every production from the pen of the re-doubted Amicus; that none can hope for the ſupreme felicity, or enviable honor, of participating in either his labors or his celebrity. However, as oceans are but accumulated drops—and the largeſt material objects, but accumulated particles—may not the huge, the coloſſean mind of Amicus be an accumulation of inferior minds; are not his remarks and aſſemblages, his ſubjects and concluſions—drawn from a general analyſis, and ſubſequent com-mixion, of hints, ideas, motions of thought, &c.—which ariſe, not more from perſonal obſervation than borrowed information. I feel an impulſe at this moment, which induces the belief of this—and urges a deſire to contribute a mite to the general concatenation.

It ſometimes happens that extraordinary ends, are accompliſhed by apparently inadequate means; if what I am now about to propoſe, ſhould once more call forth the pen of Amicus, I ſhall then place it in the liſt of extra-ordinaries—If Amicus ſhould deem the offences (I propoſe to ſpeak of) cognizable, I leave it entirely to his wiſdom and moderation to affix the penalties.
I ſhould at the ſame time think it, a ſingular happineſs, if they could by any means be thruſt into the "Stump Act."

PROPOSALS,

And queries offered to the conſideration of the ſucceſſor and genuine deſcendant of Lycurgus.

I. What is the crime puniſhable with, when an illuminati gets drunk at home, and by a too copious emiſſion of moiſture ſpoils his bed-linen, thereby diſagreeably affecting the olfacto-ry nerves of his laundreſs?

II. What, when he gets drunk at any brandy-ſhop or tavern within the ban-lieus, by which the ſame diſagreeable effects are produced?

III. What, when he gets drunk at a diſtance from home, not exceeding the diſtance between Mount Dor cheſter and the town of Newark, and loſes his ſaddle-bags, whip, hat, ſpurs, &c.?

IV. What reward is that horſe entitled to, who, by his ſagacity avoided killing his rider, who ſat ſo uneaſily, that he alighted twelve times head-fore-moſt, within the aforementioned diſ-tance?

V. Whether the antient Illuminati, who aſſembled in the Valley of Jehoſhaphat, got drunk, or uſed horſes?

VI. Whether Hiram, the maſter builder of Solomon's Temple, was a wet ſoul or not?

An additional favor will be conferred on the public, if Amicus would, by ſome ſeaſonable animadverſion, diſcountenance that odious paſſion for duelling, ſo prevalent at Newark, by which ſo much blood is ſhed there, and by which the lives of ſo many of its good citizens are endangered.——I greet thee, Amicus, and am thy affured ſincere friend

KING's SPEECH.

This day, in compliance with his Majeſty's proclamation, a number of their lordſhips attended; and about 3 o'clock the King came to the houſe in ſtate, with the uſual attendants who accompany him on thoſe occaſions. Being ſeated on the throne, Sir Francis Molyneux, uſher of the Black Rod, was ſent to deſire the attendance of the commons, the ſpeaker whom, with a few of the members, being come to the bar, his Majeſty addreſſed them as follows:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I have called you together at this unuſual ſeaſon, in order to recommend it to you to conſider of the propriety of enabling me, without delay, to avail myſelf, to a farther extent, of the voluntary ſervices of the militia, at a moment when an increaſe of our active force abroad may be productive of the moſt important and beneficial conſequences.

"We have ſeen the happy effects of the meaſure which you adopted on this ſubject, in the laſt ſeſſion; and the forces which I was thereby enabled to employ, have already diſplayed in the face of the enemy, a courage, diſcipline and ſteadineſs, worthy of the character of Britiſh ſoldiers. In the ſhort interval ſince the cloſe of the laſt ſeſſion, our ſituation and proſpects have, under the bleſſing of Providence, improved beyond the moſt ſanguine expectation.

"The abilities and valour of the commanders and troops of the combined Imperial armies, have continued to be eminently diſplayed; the deliverance of Italy may now be conſidered as ſecured by the reſult of a campaign equal in ſplendor and ſucceſs to any the moſt brilliant recorded in hiſtory; and I have had the heartfelt ſatisfaction of ſeeing the valor of my fleets and armies ſucceſsfully employed to the aſſiſtance of my allies, to the ſupport of our juſt cauſe, and to the advancement of the moſt important intereſt of the Britiſh empire.

"The kingdom of Naples has been reſcued from the French yoke, and reſtored to the dominion of its lawful ſovereign, and my former connections with that power has been renewed.

"The French expedition to Egypt has continued to be productive of calamity and diſgrace to our enemies; while its ultimate views againſt our Eaſtern poſſeſſions have been utterly confounded.

"The deſperate attempts which they have lately made to extricate themſelves from their difficulties, has been defeated by the courage of the Turkiſh forces, directed by the ſkill, and animated by the heroiſm of my naval force under his command; and the overthrow of that reſtleſs and perfidious power, who, inſtigated by the artifices, and deluded by the promiſes of the French, had entered into their ambitious and deſtructive projects in India, has placed the Britiſh intereſts in that quarter of the globe in a ſtate of ſolid and permanent ſecurity. The vigilance, deciſion and wiſdom of the governor general in council, on this great and important occaſion, and the tried abilities and valor of the commanders, officers and troops employed under his direction, are entitled to my higheſt praiſe.

"There is, I truſt, every reaſon to expect that the efforts which I am making for the deliverance of the United Provinces, will prove ſucceſsful.

"The Britiſh arms have reſcued from the poſſeſſion of the enemy the principal port and naval arſenal of the Dutch republic; and altho' we have to regret the loſs of many brave men in a ſubſequent attack againſt the enemy, whoſe poſition enabled them to obſtruct our progreſs, I have the ſtrongeſt ground to expect that the ſkill of my generals and the determined reſolution and intrepidity of my troops, will ſoon ſurmount every obſtacle, and that the fleet, which under the uſurped dominion of France, was deſtined to co-operate in the invaſion of theſe iſlands, may ſpeedily, I truſt, under its ancient ſtandard, partake in the glory of reſtoring the religion, liberty and independence of thoſe provinces, ſo long in intimate union and alliance with this country.

"While you rejoice with me in theſe events, which add ſo much luſtre to the Britiſh character, you will I am perſuaded as cordially join in the ſentiments ſo juſtly due to the conduct of my good and faithful allie the emperor of Ruſſia. To his magnanimity and wiſdom, directing to ſo many quarters of Europe the force of his extenſive and powerful empire, we are in a great degree indebted for the ſucceſs of our own efforts, as well as for the rapid & favorable change in the general ſituation of affairs. I have directed copies to be laid before you of thoſe engagements which have conſolidated and cemented a connexion ſo conſonant to the permanent intereſts of my empire, and ſo important at the preſent moment, to every part of the civilized world.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

"The ample ſupplies which you have granted to me in the courſe of the laſt ſeſſion, will, I truſt, ſo nearly provide for the exigencies of the public ſervice even on the extenſive ſcale which our preſent operations require, as to enable me, without farther aid, to continue thoſe exertions to the cloſe of the preſent year; but, in order to afford you the convenience of a long receſs, I recommend it to you to conſider of providing for the expences which will be neceſſary in the early part of the enſuing year; and with this view, I have ordered the proper eſtimates to be laid before you.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"In purſuance of your recommendation, I judged it proper to communicate to my two houſes of parliament in Ireland, at the cloſe of their laſt ſeſſion, the ſentiments which you had expreſſed to me reſpecting an incorporating union with that kingdom.

"The experience of every day confirms me in the perſuaſion, that ſignal benefit will be derived to both countries from that important meaſure; and I truſt that the diſpoſition of my parliament there, will be found to correſpond with that which you have manifeſted for the accompliſhment of a work which tends ſo much to add to the ſecurity and happineſs of all my Iriſh ſubjects, and ſo conſolidate the ſtrength and proſperity of the empire."

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, January 11.

It is with much regret that we expreſs, to the public, the death of John White, Eſq; his Majeſty's Attorney General in this province; not only from the melancholy reflection of the untimely fall of this high law character; but alſo from the contemplation of the many attributes of the human mind, which have been abſorbed in that fall.——To deſcant upon thoſe attributes were a taſk extenſive indeed; as every event, which called forth his talents, only tended to diſcloſe, that though his diſquiſitions were perſpicuous, yet, his reſources were far beyond the ordinary flight, or elevation of thought.

In a ſtation to which the public eye has ever been directed with a jealous vigilance, he ſtrictly attended to the inſtructions of his Royal Maſter; for in guarding the prerogative of the Crown, he proteſted the right of the ſubject—in neceſſarily enforcing the rigid rules of juſtice, he feelingly diſplayed a benign regard to clemency—and in his application of the law to every caſe of public import, he not only drew from virtue its warmeſt approbation, but even vice itſelf, in the moment of its correction, could not with hold its applauſe.

He, in his intercourſe with ſociety, evinced that urbanity, and thoſe blandiſhments of manners, which, whilſt they characterized the man of honor and the gentleman, peculiarly diſtinguiſhed himſelf; and appreciating truth as the early embelliſhment of his mind, he cheriſhed it through life, and prized it at his death.

His remains, were on Tueſday evening, interred in a ſmall octagon building, erected on the rere of his park lot. The proceſſion was ſolemn and penſive, and ſhewed, that though death "all eloquent," had ſeized upon him as its victim, yet it could not take from the public mind the lively ſenſe of his virtues.

Vivit poſt funera Virtus.

SEVERAL letters, received by gentlemen in this town, from their correſpondents in Montreal, mention the melancholy circumſtance of the Philadelphia-fever rageing there with great mortality: that fifteen of the forty-ſecond regiment (now in Montreal) died in one day with it: that the phyſician (Gold) who viſited the unhappy victims, caught the diſeaſe, of which, himſelf and family died!—Many of the inhabitants of the city have already fell victims to it.

We hear that the duke of Kent is to viſit this province in the courſe of next ſpring, and that the forces in it are to be reviewed by him.

Several companies of the Midland Diſtrict militia, have voluntarily offered to go to any part of Britiſh America, that emergency may require.

By a letter received from field marſhal the duke of York, by the right hon. Henry Dundas, dated, H. Q. Shagen-Brug, Sept. 20: From which it appears that an attack was made upon Bergen, by lieut. gen. D'Harman, commanding the 7th light dragoons and twelve battalions of Ruſſians, who advanced with ſuch intrepidity as to overlook the formidable reſiſtance with which they were to meet, had not retained that order which was neceſſary to preſerve the advantages they had gained; and they were in conſequence, after a moſt vigorous combat obliged to retire from Bergen with the loſs of their commander and a few men; but it is certain, from recent intelligence, received from Holland, that the efforts which have been made, altho' not crowned with immediate ſucceſs, ſo far from militating againſt the general object of the campaign, promiſe to be highly favorable to future operations—The capture of 60 officers, and upwards of 3000 men, the deſtruction of 10 pieces of cannon by the Britiſh, is no omin of their defeat; which is verified in a paragraph dated Hague, Oct. 5. which ſays: "The tranquility that continued for 12 days, has at lenght been interrupted, on the 2d inſt. by one of the moſt violent attacks, which the enemy made on our left wing and centre, which laſted the whole day.—We were obliged to give up all our poſitions before Alkmaer, and even that town to the enemy; our army was forced to take another poſition, which we alſo loſt. The town of Lemmer, whoſe harbor is of ſuch importance for our inland trade, is ſaid to have ſurrendered after having ſuffered ſome time a heavy cannonade from the Engliſh gunboats—If the enemy once get a footing in Friſeland, where there are no ſufficient means of defence againſt a formidable force, the conſequences muſt be fatal to us."

His imperial majeſty of Ruſſia has raiſed gen. count Suwarow to the dignity of a prince of the empire, ſurnamed the Italian.

Married at Ancaſter, Mr. Richard Hatt, merchant, to Miſs Polly Cooly, both of ſaid place.

Died a few days ago, at Buffaloe, Mr. Cornelius Winne.

IT is no ſmall ſatisfaction to ſuch an honeſt plain-meaning man as I am, that in this refined and ungrateful age, ſome are ſtill to be found ſo diſintereſted and impartial, as to acknowledge and point out merit in individuals. A recent inſtance of this has occurred; it is no other than the praiſes beſtowed by Philo-Amicus on Amicus, and which appeared in your laſt week's Gazette. Theſe, however, if not inexplicit, are certainly taxable with ambiguity, and leave us in doubt whether Philo meant to write a panegyric or a ſatire; his abſurd reaſoning (if reaſoning it may be called) on the materials and ſtructure of the mind of Amicus, leads to a belief in the latter—whilſt benevolence, and a ſacred regard to juſtice, prompts a hope of the former. In either caſe, much might been ſaid in addition. One conſolation ſtill remains in the pleaſing hope, that ſome able and more willing hand, will take up the ſubject, and amply celebrate the wiſdom and public ſpiritedneſs of Amicus.

It is a bitter, and moſt mortifying reflection to the ſober part of the community, (who, be it known by theſe preſents, are not the moſt numerous) to ſee the many unhappy effects of inebriety. Yet let it not be inferred from this, that I wiſh totally to aboliſh drinking—or interdict the moderate and temperate uſe of invigorating, and exhilirating liquids. No.—Far be the illiberal idea from my honeſt mind; I only wiſh to regulate the quantity—and point out the proper time of uſing them. IV. On Saints days—I permit the freeſt and fulleſt uſe (St. Nicholas's day excepted.)

V. On other feſtival days, I permit a reaſonable augmentation.

Finding myſelf involuntarily, though I hope uſefully engaged, in recommending a ſyſtem of temperance and reformation: it is a reſulting conſequence, that I conſider of certain offences taken notice of by Philo-Amicus.

An offender in the 1ſt inſtance, ſhall (in my humble opinion) be made to ſubmit to the effects of a powerful ſudorific (in his own perſon) whoſe higheſt operation ſhall continue twelve hours; during which time, his head be kept bound in the offended ſheets.

In the 2d: To make an apology and ſmall preſent to the bed-maker, and laundreſs, and purchaſe one pound weight of ſponge.

In the 3d: To refrain from generous beverage for twenty-four hours.

In the 4th: To get his neck inſured, and a treatiſe publiſhed in the Conſtellation, on the eaſieſt and ſafeſt methods of alighting head foremoſt.

The fagacious horſe is entitled to a funeral Oration and to be made honorable mention of in, and by the brighteſt Stars of the Conſtellation.

Not being verſed in Illuminatiſm, I paſs over the myſtic queries as too ſublime for my vulgar comprehenſion.

With reſpect to dueling, I differ in opinion from Philo. It has ever been allowed (by judges) as a genteel and ſpirited practice, and the infallible criterion of gentlemanhood.—No man can be ſaid to know life, or have any pretenſions to taſte or bravery—who does not glory in the ſound and flavor of blazing powder. In ordinary diſputes, doubtleſs, every one will confeſs, that it is an equitable, ſummary, and eaſy mode of deciſion, far preferable to the tedious judicial forms of obtaining redreſs. This ſingle conſideration will for ever ſecure it a preference in the judgment of the ardent and brave, independent of the laſting fame it procures. Conſcious that it would require the talents of a Cicero, to ſay what might be ſaid in its praiſe and juſtification, I ſhall diſmiſs the ſubject, and leave to duelliſts to feel, what I feel myſelf unable to deſcribe to them. I would juſt hint what may eventually be an improvement in the art; that is, that blunderbuſſes be uſed inſtead of piſtols! would it not have a warlike appearance and raiſe a noble ardour? A Diſpatch, of which the following is a copy, has been this day received from field marſhal his royal highneſs the duke of York, by the right hon. Henry Dundas, one of his majeſty's principal ſecretaries of ſtate.

SIR,

In my diſpatch of the 16th inſt. I acquainted you with my intentions of making an attack upon the whole of the enemy's poſition, the moment that the reinforcements joined.

Upon the 19th, every neceſſary arrangement being made, the army moved forward in four principal columns, in the following order: the left column under the command of lieut. gen. ſir Ralph Abercromby, conſiſting of two ſquadrons of the 18th light dragoons; major gen. the earl of Chatham's brigade; major gen. Moore's brigade; major gen. the earl of Caithneſs's brigade; firſt battalion of Britiſh grenadiers of the line; firſt battalion of light infantry of the line; the 23d and 55th regts. under col. Macdonald, deſtined to turn the enemy's right on the Zuyder Zee, and marched at 6 o'clock on the evening of the 18th.—The columns upon the right the firſt commanded by lieut. general D'Hermann, conſiſting of the 7th light dragoons; 12 battalions of Ruſſians, & major gen. Manners's brigade.—The ſecond, commanded by lieut. gen. Dundas, conſiſting of two ſquadrons of the 11th light dragoons; two brigades of foot guards, and major gen. his highneſs prince William's brigade.—The 3d column, commanded by lieut. gen. ſir James Pulteney, conſiſting of two ſquadrons of the 11th light dragoons; major gen. Don's brigade, and major general Coote's brigade, marched from the poſitions they occupied at day break the morning of the 19th. The object of the firſt column was to drive the enemy from the heights of Camper Duyne, the villages under the heights, and finally to take poſſeſſion of Bergen; the ſecond was to force the enemy's poſition at Walmenhuyſen and Schoveldam, and to co-operate with the column under lieut. gen. D'Harmahn; and the third, to take poſſeſſion of Ouds Carſpel at the head of the Lange Dyke, a great road leading to Alkmaar.

It is neceſſary to obſerve, that the country in which we had to act, preſented in every direction the moſt formidable obſtacles. The enemy upon their left occupied to a great advantage the high ſand hills which extend from the ſea in front of Patten to the town of Bergen, and were intrenched in three intermediate villages. The country over which the columns under lieut. generals Dundas and ſir James Pulteney had to move for the attack of the fortified poſts of Walmenhuyſen, Schoreldam, and the Lange Dyke, is a plain interſected every three or four hundred yards by broad, deep wet ditches and canals.—The bridges acroſs the only two or three roads which led to theſe places were deſtroyed, and abbatis were laid at different diſtances.

Lieut. gen. D'Hermann's column commenced its attack, which was conducted with the greateſt ſpirit and gallantry, at half paſt three o'clock in the morning, and by 8 had ſucceeded in ſo great a degree, as to be in poſſeſſion of Bergen. In the wooded country which ſurrounds this village the principal force of the enemy was placed, and the Ruſſian troops advancing with an intrepidity which overlooked the formidable reſiſtance with which they were to meet had not retained that order which was neceſſary to preſerve the advantage they had gained, & they were in conſequence after a moſt vigorous reſiſtance, obliged to retire from Bergen, (where I am ſorry to ſtate) lieut. gens. D'Herman and Tchertchekoff were made priſoners, the latter dangerouſly wounded, and fell back upon Schorel, which village they were alſo forced to abandon, but which was immediately retaken by major gen. Manners's brigade, notwithſtanding the very heavy fire of the enemy. Here this brigade was immediately reinforced by 2 battalions of Ruſſians, which had co-operated with lieut. gen. Dundas in the attack of Walmenhuyſen, by major gen. D'Oyle's brigade of guards, and by the 35th regt. under the command of his highneſs prince William. The action was renewed by theſe troops for a conſiderable time with ſucceſs; but the entire want of ammunition on the part of the Ruſſians, and the exhauſted ſtate of the whole corps engaged in that particular ſituation, obliged them to retire, which they did in good order, upon Petten and the Zuyder Sluys.

As ſoon as it was ſufficient light, the attack upon the village of Walmenhuyſen, where the enemy was ſtrongly poſted with cannon, was made by lieut. gen. Dundas. Three battalions of Ruſſians, who formed a ſeparate corps, deſtined to co-operate from Krabbendam in this attack, commanded by major gen. Sedmoratzky, very gallantly ſtormed the village on its left flank, while at the ſame time it was entered on the right by the firſt regiment of guards. The grenadier battalion of the guards had been previouſly detached to march upon Schoreldam, on the left of lieut. gen. D'Hermann's column, as was the 3d regiment of guards, and the 2d battalion of the 5th regt. to keep up the communication with that under lieut. gen. ſir James Pulteney. The remainder of lt. gen. Dundas's column, which, after taking poſſeſſion of Walmenhuyſen, had been joined by the firſt battalion of the 5th regt. marched againſt Schoreldam, which place they maintained, under a heavy and galling fire, until the troops engaged on their right had retired at the concluſion of the action.

The column under lt. gen. ſir James Pulteney proceeded to its object of attacking at the time appointed, and after overcoming the greateſt difficulties and the moſt determined oppoſition, carried by ſtorm the principal poſt of Ouds Carſpel, at the head of the Lange Dyke; upon which occaſion the 20th regt, under the command of col. Spencer, embraced a favorable opportunity which preſented itſelf of highly diſtinguiſhing themſelves.

This point was defended by the chief force of the Batavian army, under the command of gen. Daendels. The circumſtances, however, which occurred on the right, rendered it impoſſible to profit by this brilliant exploit, which will ever reflect the higheſt credit on the gen. officers, and troops engaged in it; and made it neceſſary to withdraw lieut. gen. ſir Js. Pulteney's column from the poſition which he had taken within a ſhort diſtance of Alkmaar. The ſame circumſtances led to the neceſſity of recalling the corps under lt. gen. ſir R. Abercromby, who had proceeded without interruption to Hoorne, of which city & garriſon he had taken poſſeſſion.

The whole of the army therefore reoccupied its former poſition.

The well grounded hopes I had entertained of complete ſucceſs in this operation, and which were fully juſtified by the reſult of the three, and by the firſt ſucceſſes of the fourth attack upon the right, add to the great diſappointment I muſt naturally feel on this occaſion; but the circumſtances which have occurred I ſhould have conſidered of very little general importance, had I not to lament the loſs of many brave officers and ſoldiers, both of his Majeſty's and the Ruſſian troops, who fell.

The gallantry diſplayed by the troops engaged, the ſpirit with which they overcame every obſtacle which nature & art oppoſed to them, and the cheerfulneſs with which they maintained the fatigue of an action, which laſted without intermiſſion from half paſt 3 o'clock in the morning until five in the afternoon, are beyond my powers to deſcribe or to exſol. Their exertions fully entitle them to the admiration and gratitude of their King and country.

Having thus faithfully detailed the events of this firſt attack, and paid the tribute of regret due to the diſtinguiſhed merit of thoſe who fell, I have much conſolation in being able to ſtate that the efforts which have been made, altho' not crowned with immediate ſucceſs, ſo far from militating againſt the general object of the campaign, promiſes to be highly uſeful to our future operations. The capture of 60 officers and upwards of 3000 men, and the deſtruction of 16 pieces of cannon, with large ſupplies of ammunition, which the intereſted nature of the country did not admit of being withdrawn, are convincing proofs that the loſs of the enemy in the field, has been far ſuperior to our own, and in addition to this, it is material to ſtate, that nearly 15,000 of the allied troops had unavoidably no ſhare in the action.

In viewing the ſeveral circumſtances which occurred during this arduous day, I cannot avoid expreſſing the obligations I owe to lt. gens. Dundas and ſir Js. Pulteney, for their able aſſiſtance, and alſo to mention my great ſatisfaction at the conduct of major gens. his royal highneſs prince William, D'Oyle, Manners, Burrard, and Don, to whoſe ſpirited exertions the credit gained by the brigades they commanded, is greatly to be imputed.

Capt. ſir Home Popham and the ſeveral officers of my ſtaff exerted themſelves to the utmoſt, and rendered me moſt eſſential ſervice. I feel alſo much indebted to the ſpirited conduct of a detachmen. of ſeamen, under the direction of ſir Home Popham and capt. Godfrey of the navy, in the conduct of three gun-boats, each carrying one 12 pound caronade, which acted with conſiderable effect on the Alkmaar canal; nor muſt I omit expreſſing my acknowledgments to the Ruſſian major generals Eſſen, Sedmoratzky, and Schutorff.

I tranſmit herewith returns of the killed, wounded and miſſing.

I am, ſir, your's,

FREDERICK.

P. S. Not having yet received returns of the loſs ſuſtained by the Ruſſian troops, I can only obſerve, that I underſtand their loſs in killed, wounded & miſſing amounts to near 15,00

Head quarters, Schagen Brug, Sept. 26.

Return of the killed, wounded and miſſing of his Majeſty's forces, under the command of his royal highneſs field marſhal the duke of York, in the action of the 19th Sept.

Total—Lieut. colonel, 2 captains, 2 ſubalterns, 1 ſtaff, 2 ſergeants, and 109 rank and file killed; 7 lieut. colonels, 6 majors, 15 captains, 15 ſubalterns, 2 ſergeants, 2 drummers, and 345 rank and file wounded; 22 ſergeants, 5 drummers, and 463 rank and file miſſing.

N. B. Lieut. Roward, of the royal navy wounded. Four ſeamen, killed. Seven ſeamen wounded.

350 rank and file of the 1ſt battalion of the 35th regt. cannot exactly be accounted for, from the nature of the action, and from the regt. being ſent immediately to the Helder in charge of priſoners; but it is much feared, that nearly 100 are killed, and the remainder wounded and miſſing.

The return of the royal artillery, received ſince the general return was cloſed.

5 gunners 4 gunner drivers 3 additional gunners killed; 1ſt lieut. Elgin, wounded and taken priſoner; volunteer John Douglas, wounded; 8 gunners, 6 gunner drivers, 4 additional gunners, wounded; 7 gunners, 9 gunner drivers miſſing.

Aſſiſtant adjutant general.

Head quarters, Alkmaar, Oct. 7.

SIR,

The enemy after the action of the 2d having taken up the poſition between Beverwyck and Wyck-op Zee, I determined to endeavor to force him thence before he had an opportunity of ſtrengthening by works the ſhort and very defenſible line which he occupied, and to oblige him ſtill further to retire before he could be joined by the reinforcements, which I had information, were upon their march.

Preparatory, therefore, to a general forward movement, I ordered the advanced poſts which the army took upon the 3d inſt. in front of this place, of Egmont-op-Hoof, and Egmont-op-Zee, to be puſhed forward, which operation took place yeſterday morning. At firſt little oppoſition was ſhewn, and we ſucceeded in taking poſſeſſion of the villages of Schermerhorn, Archer Sloot, Limmen, Baccum, and of a poſition on the ſand hills near Wyck op Zee: the column of Ruſſian troops under the command of major gen. D'Eſſen, in endeavouring to gain a height in front of their intended advanced poſt at Baccum (which was material to the ſecurity of that point) was vigorouſly oppoſed, and afterwards attacked by a ſtrong body of the enemy, which obliged gen. ſir R. Abercromby to move up in ſupport with the reſerve of his corps.

The enemy on their part advanced all their force; the action became general along the whole line from Limmen to the ſea, and was maintained with great obſtinacy on both ſides until night, when the enemy retired, leaving us maſters of the field of battle. The conflict has, I am concerned to ſtate, been as ſevere & has been attended with as ſerious a loſs (in proportion to the numbers engaged) as any of thoſe which have been fought by the brave troops compoſing this army ſince their arrival in Holland. The gallantry they alſo diſplayed, and the perſeverance with which they ſupported the fatigues of this day, rival their former exertions.

The corps engaged were, major gen. D'Oyley's brigade of guards; maj. gen. Purrard's ditto; major gen. earl of Chatham's brigade; major gen. Coote's do.; major gen. the earl of Cavan's brigade, commanded by major gen. Hutchinſon. The reſerve under the command of col. M'Donald; part of the 7th & 11th light dragoons, and 7 battalions of Ruſſians.

To gen. ſir R. Abercromby, and the other general officers in command of the brigades before mentioned, as alſo to col. M'Donald, my warmeſt acknowledgments are due, for their ſpirited exertions during this affair; nor ought I to omit the praiſe due to col. Clenhane, commanding 4 companies of the 39th and 1 of the Coldſtream regiments of guards, who, by a ſpirited charge, drove 2 battalions of the enemy from the poſt of Achar Sloot, making 200 priſoners. I have ſincerely to regret, that in the courſe of the action major gen. Hutchinſon received a muſket ſhot in the thigh which, however, is not ſerious.

I have not yet received any reports of the killed and wounded, but I am apprehenſive that the number of Britiſh is not leſs than 500, and that the loſs of the Ruſſian troops, as far as I can underſtand, amounts to 1200 men.—I ſhall as early as circumſtances poſſibly admit, tranſmit particular returns.

The loſſes of the enemy upon this occaſion have been very great; and in addition to their killed and wounded, 500 priſoners fell into our hands.

I am, &c.
FREDERICK.

Rt. hon. H. Dundas, &c. &c.

Head quarters, Schagen Brug, Oct. 9, '99.

SIR,

I have already acquainted you with the reſult of the action of the 6th inſt. which terminated ſucceſsfully to the allied arms, and at the ſame time pointed out the neceſſity of the movements that produced this affair.

From the priſoners taken on the 6th inſt. I learnt the certainty of the enemy having been reinforced ſince the action of the 2d, by 2 demi brigades, amounting to about 6000 infantry, and of their having ſtrengthened the poſition of Beverwick and fortified ſtrongly in the rear of it, points which it would be ſtill neceſſary to carry before Haarlem could be attacked.

It ought alſo to be ſtated, that the enemy had retired a large force upon Purmirind, in an almoſt inacceſſable poſition, covered by an inundated country, and the debouches from which were ſtrongly fortified, and in the hands of the enemy; and further, that as our army advanced, this corps was in our rear.

But ſuch obſtacles would have been overcome, had not the ſtate of the weather, the ruined condition of the roads, and total want of the neceſſary ſupplies ariſing from the above cauſes preſented difficulties which required the moſt ſerious conſideration.

Having maturely weighed the circumſtances in which the army was thus placed, and having felt it my duty upon a point of ſo much importance to conſult

Head quarters, Alkmaar, Oct. 7.

SIR,

The enemy after the action of the 2d having taken up the poſition between Beverwyck and Wyck-op Zee, I determined to endeavor to force him thence before he had an opportunity of ſtrengthening by works the ſhort and very defenſible line which he occupied, and to oblige him ſtill further to retire before he could be joined by the reinforcements, which I had information, were upon their march.

Preparatory, therefore, to a general forward movement, I ordered the advanced poſts which the army took up on the 3d inſt. in front of this place, of Egmont-op-Hoof, and Egmont-op-Zee, to be puſhed forward, which operation took place yeſterday morning. At firſt little oppoſition was ſhewn, and we ſucceeded in taking poſſeſſion of the villages of Schermerhorn, Archer Sloot, Limmen, Baccum, and of a poſition on the ſand hills near Wyck op Zee: the column of Ruſſian troops under the command of major gen. D'Eſſen, in endeavouring to gain a height in front of their intended advanced poſt at Baccum (which was material to the ſecurity of that point) was vigorouſly oppoſed, and afterwards attacked by a ſtrong body of the enemy, which obliged gen. ſir R. Abercromby to move up in ſupport with the reſerve of his corps.

The enemy on their part advanced all their force; the action became general along the whole line from Limmen to the ſea, and was maintained with great obſtinacy on both ſides until night, when the enemy retired, leaving us maſters of the field of battle. The conflict has, I am concerned to ſtate, been as ſevere & has been attended with as ſerious a loſs (in proportion to the numbers engaged) as any of thoſe which have been fought by the brave troops compoſing this army ſince their arrival in Holland. The gallantry they alſo diſplayed, and the perſeverance with which they ſupported the fatigues of this day, rival their former exertions.

The corps engaged were, major gen. D'Oyley's brigade of guards; maj. gen. Purrard's ditto; major gen. earl of Chatham's brigade; major gen. Coote's do.; major gen. the earl of Cavan's brigade, commanded by major gen. Hutchinſon. The reſerve under the command of col. M'Donald; part of the 7th & 11th light dragoons, and 7 battalions of Ruſſians

To gen. ſir R. Abercromby, and the other general officers in command of the brigades before mentioned, as alſo to col. M'Donald, my warmeſt acknowledgments are due, for their ſpirited exertions during this affair; nor ought I to omit the praiſe due to col. Clenhane, commanding 4 companies of the 39th and 1 of the Coldſtream regiments of guards, who, by a ſpirited charge, drove 2 battalions of the enemy from the poſt of Achar Sloot, making 200 priſoners. I have ſincerely to regret, that in the courſe of the action major gen. Hutchinſon received a muſket ſhot in the thigh which, however, is not ſerious.

I have not yet received any reports of the killed and wounded, but I am apprehenſive that the number of Britiſh is not leſs than 500, and that the loſs of the Ruſſian troops, as far as I can underſtand, amounts to 1200 men.—I ſhall as early as circumſtances poſſibly admit, tranſmit particular returns.

The loſſes of the enemy upon this occaſion have been very great; and in addition to their killed and wounded, 500 priſoners fell into our hands.

I am, &c. FREDERICK.

Rt. hon. H. Dundas, &c. &c.

Head quarters, Schagen Brug, Oct. 9, '99.

SIR,

I have already acquainted you with the reſult of the action of the 6th inſt. which terminated ſucceſsfully to the allied arms, and at the ſame time pointed out the neceſſity of the movements that produced this affair.

From the priſoners taken on the 6th inſt. I learnt the certainty of the enemy having been reinforced ſince the action of the 2d, by 2 demi brigades, amounting to about 6000 infantry, and of their having ſtrengthened the poſition of Beverwick and fortified ſtrongly in the rear of it, points which it would be ſtill neceſſary to carry before Haarlem could be attacked.

It ought alſo to be ſtated, that the enemy had retired a large force upon Purmirind, in an almoſt inacceſſable poſition, covered by an inundated country, and the debouches from which were ſtrongly fortified, and in the hands of the enemy; and further, that as our army advanced, this corps was in our rear.

But ſuch obſtacles would have been overcome, had not the ſtate of the weather, the ruined condition of the roads, and total want of the neceſſary ſupplies ariſing from the above cauſes preſented difficulties which required the moſt ſerious conſideration.

Having maturely weighed the circumſtances in which the army was thus placed, and having felt it my duty upon a point of ſo much importance to conſult with gen. ſir R. Abercromby and the lieut. gens. of this army, I could not but conſider, and their opinion was unanimous on the occaſion, that it would be for the benefit of the general cauſe to withdraw the troops from their advanced poſition, in order to wait his Majeſty's further inſtructions.

I muſt requeſt you will again repreſent to his Majeſty the diſtinguiſhed conduct of his army, which, whilſt acting under the preſſure of uncommon difficulties, never for a moment ceaſed to be actuated by the nobleſt feelings for the ſucceſs of the public cauſe, and the honor of the Britiſh arms.

As there are many points reſulting from our preſent ſituation upon which you may require particular information, and ſuch details as cannot be brought within the compaſs of a letter, I have thought it neceſſary to charge my ſecretary col. Brownrigg with this diſpatch, who will be able to explain fully all matters relating to this army.

I tranſmit a return of killed, wounded and miſſing, of his Majeſty's & the Ruſſian troops in the action of the 6th inſt. I moſt heartily lament that it has again been ſo ſerious, and that ſo many brave and valuable men have fallen.—I am your's, &c. FREDERICK.

Rt. hon. H. Dundas.

LONDON, October 14.

The Inſpector ſloop of war, captain Lock, arrived yeſterday afternoon in Yarmouth Roads from the Texel, whence ſhe ſailed on Saturday afternoon. This veſſel brings accounts that there had been ſkirmiſhing every day between our troops and the enemy, and that a kind of general action took place on Thurſday laſt along the line, in which the enemy were repulſed.

Strong intrenchments, we underſtand were throwing up at Ryck-down, to cover, it was ſuppoſed, the embarkation of our forces, whenever ſuch a meaſure ſhould be reſolved on.

When the Inſpector left the Helder, it was currently reported there, that 25,000 Pruſſians had entered Holland, but the immediate object of this movement had not been aſcertained. [Sun.

A cabinet council was held yeſterday (14th) for the purpoſe of coming to a determination on the queſtion of evacuating Holland. Col. Brownrigg attended to make known to them all the particulars of the allied armies, and the reſult was an order for their re-embarking.

The col. and ſir Charles Hamilton, ſet out for Holland with the order and inſtructions; the guards & other troops under orders for that country were countermanded, & meaſures are immediately to be taken to procure more veſſels for the return of the army." Hopes are entertained, that as the Helder is capable of being ſtrongly fortified, and as we have a number of gun-boats to flank the embarkation, it will be effected with little loſs. It is the only thing for which we have to be anxious.

It is reported that the French, on reentering Alkmaar, after the retreat of our troops, burned it to the ground, probably for having opened its gates to the allies.

YORK, Saturday, January 18.

☞ WITH due deference to the opinions of the Niagara printers, we think them a little in advance with their compliments of the ſeaſon; they ſhould have remembered that the nineteenth century will not commence, until the expiration of the eighteenth, which will be on the thirty-firſt of December, 1800.

There is a report in town, that the United States of America have declared war againſt the republic of France; what degree of credit is due to this report, we cannot take upon ourſelves to ſay, as the Preſident in his ſpeech to both houſes of congreſs, on the 3d ult. makes not the leaſt mention of any ſuch event taking place; nor does the Albany Centinel of the 24th Dec. with which we have been favored by an hon. gentleman of this town, take notice of any ſuch thing being likely to happen.

To the Printers of the American Oracle.

Gentlemen,

FEW diſcoveries are ſo perfect at their birth as to exclude further improvements; ſuch is the caſe with the Stamp Act, lately propoſed in the Conſolidation, that inſtitution might, in my opinion, be amended, 1ſt, By extending its operation over the province in general.—2d, By enlarging the circle of its principles into a much more comprehenſive ſyſtem of juriſprudence. kenness too limited an object of its controul: For, gentlemen, there are many genera of drunkards—that vice is the effect of moral as well as physical causes; and a man may be intellectually or materially inebriated.

Moralists have said, that all vice is folly—now, in my apprehension, all folly is inebriety; for I will prove that all the mischief and misery (future criterions)—which since the days of Eve, (who, good woman, fuddled herself with cyder, in the very prologue to the Tragedy of Man) have lorded it over this little orb of ours, proceed from that source; it matters not by what agency the nervous system be irritated;—its irritation is drunkenness. Now one man is tipsey with vanity—another with power—this is fuddled with love, that with ambition. Some are reeling with jealousy—others stark staring drunk with envy.—I shall say nothing of those intoxications which expose to pity as their only punishment—poetical debauchery for instance the source and symptoms of which were well known to the poor bard, who sung,

Drink deep or touch not the pyerian spring,
For shallow draughts intoxicate the brain—
But drink largely sobers us again.

For the ORACLE.

Messrs. PRINTERS,

IT has long been a matter of astonishment to me, that you have not enlarged the size of your gazette. You are assuredly the best judges of your own affairs, and yet you do not seem thoroughly to understand your own interests—As arguments are best enforced and illustrated by coexistent instances, permit me to recommend to your example and imitation the methods so successfully used by your brethren of the type at Newark. There indeed, we see a large paper weekly furnished, and filled with real occurrences, precious scraps, and instructive themes—a collection admirably adapted to the taste of every reader. Whilst your's contain little else than ordinary events simply narrated—neither scandal—schemes of legislation—astronomical observations—aspersions nor any thing which can amuse, interest, or instruct. Alas gentlemen! I find that you are totally unacquainted with the stores, the key, and the method of opening pandoras box—It would be painful to me, (your well-wisher) to exhibit the control in its true colours; I shall consequently draw the curtain over your sterility, and only recommend to your study the selection that Cotta Copia, the CONSTELLATION; therein may you trace, and therein discover the true secret of enthralling men's minds, captivating their understandings & improving their morals. In its publishers, you see, blended the every requisite, the ne plus ultra of perfection in gazette-editors.

It is the impulse of pity and not the ebullitions of anger which renders me thus plain with you—To your shame be it spoken: you cannot like the "youthful orator, advance to the stage, blush, bow, excite compassion, &c."—No contempt, instead of compassion, is your allotment, and to it I shall consign you if you do not speedily manifest symptoms of amendment and improvement. You neither "expaciate on a subject well understood nor crave permission to shew how far yourselves understand it; you neither flatter with promises of being entertaining, nor offer without reserve your abilities to instruct and promote a zeal for doing good whilst you amuse; to please any you do not endeavor, to the unprejudiced you pay no attention, to the lovers of useful knowledge you do not address yourselves, & of your patrons you have not named the class; you are little aware of the influencial stations which printers hold, or that principles are sucked down, nursed and directed by the press; that whilst they are just, the community is in unity and prosperity; that when printers are remiss in, or ignorant of their duty, sad or no effects are produced from their labors; you seem very little emulous of obtaining the name of good and faithful servants."—When your failure in every point of your duty is so glaring, what can you expect? I am uninterested, from that consideration my lecture should weigh with you.—Rouse infatuated men, shake off your torpor, turn your eyes on the farrago (the Constellation) of the 28th ultimo; there will you find in the advertisement of Hepseba Burton, a model of delicacy, instruction, and profundity exhibited, a very master-piece in its kind. The bosom of every wedded subscriber to the Constellation, who is blessed in a virtuous wife, or hopeful daughter, must surely glow with conscious pride, at having introduced to their peruful a lesson, so replete with chaste instruction as the recital of the sensual disappointments and pitiable state of the modest, the once suffering Hepseba. The style is so plaintive, the grievances so exquisitely painted, that the retrospect is, of all things, best calculated to inspire sympathy and inculcate fellow feelings. It is by a careful attention, Messrs. printers, to the tenor of such compositions, and by a precise imitation of them, that you can hope to succeed—by interesting and putting in motion the machinery of the human mind—by exciting intellectual action—by rising the blush of the modest—depressing the frown of the formal—appealing to the sense of the libidinous—audaciously attacking common-sense that you can hope to arrive at eminence.

A friend of mine coming in when I had got so far with my letter, requested permission to add a postcript, which he did in the following words:

On seeing the prefatory address of the publishers of the Constellation, and the subsequent principles on which that paper is conducted, I know not which most to admire—the audacity of the publishers—or the forbearance of the subscribers. When indecent advertisements are inserted, and to make the deeper impression, the doubtful parts by being printed in italics, put beyond the reach of misconstruction, it is as great an insult offered to our understandings, as it is an infringement on the order of good breeding and decency—did it flow from a more respectable source, the effects might be deleterious; but as any thing urged to the extreme counteracts its aim—if readers grow neither disgusted nor alarmed, the publishers will, in time, grow ashamed, and cease to prostitute their abilities to such venal and criminal purposes.

CONVERSATION.

THE first ingredient in conversation is truth; the next, good sense; the third, good humour: the last, wit.

The best method to succeed in conversation, is to admire little, to hear much, to seem distrustful of your own reason, but to see that of others in the fullest light.

The great error in conversation is, to be fonder of speaking than of hearing. Few shew more complaisance than to pretend to harken, intent all the while upon what they themselves have to say; not considering that to seek one's own pleasure so passionately is not the way to please others. To make another's wit appear more than your own, is a wholesome rule. Let others take notice of your wit never yourself. Ridicule is contemptible in persons who possess no other talent.

All the world are plagued with cold jesters: we trade every where upon such insects. A good jester is uncommon and he finds it a hard task to maintain his character long; for he that makes others laugh seldom procures esteem to himself.

to do and perform what to their several offices in that behalf appertain.

THE fete given yesterday by the representative of the people to Buonaparte and Moreau, was very brilliant. The number of covers was about 750.

The president and elders were at the head of the table, in the middle on the right the president of the directors: on the left gen. Moreau, then the president of the council of five hundred, and then general Buonaparte.

The following are the toasts, which were drank:

The president of the council of elders—" The French republic."

The president of the council of five hundred—" The armies by sea and land."

The president of the directory " PEACE."

Buonaparte—" The union of all Frenchmen."

Moreau—" All the faithful allies of the republic."

The Spanish admiral Massaredo —" The liberty of the seas."

Kosciusko was also present at the banquet which began at 6 o'clock; great order prevailed during it. At the lower end of the temple where the great alter formerly stood, was to be read in the midst of trophies—" Be united and you will be victorious "

AUGSBURGH, Nov. 9.

Suwarrow appears inflexible in the resolution he has announced of remaining inactive till he has received fresh orders from his emperor. It is to explain his motives: I have just parted from a military gentleman, who had a long conversation with this general, in which the latter disclosed to him the entire cause of his anger. This conversation has been detailed to me: the following as the precise tenor of it, tho' I cannot answer for the very words:—

" I have quitted Italy (said Suwarrow) sooner than I expected; but I have acted in conformity to a plan which I had adopted from confidence more than conviction. I had laid down before hand, the plan of my march to Switzerland. I passed St. Gothard and overcome every obstacle in my way: I arrived at the day appointed at the place where I was to have been joined, yet every one failed me. Instead of finding an army in good order, and in a good position, I found none at all.—The position of Zurich, which ought to have been defended by 60,000 Austrians, was abandoned to 20,000 Russians. This army was in want of provisions: Hotze suffered himself to be surprized: Korsakow allowed himself to be beat: the French remained masters of Switzerland, and I found myself alone with my body of troops without artillery, without provisions, without ammunition and obliged to retire among the Grisons to rejoin the routed troops; no part of the promises I received were fulfilled. An old soldier like myself may be tricked once, but he must be a fool indeed if he suffers himself to be duped a second time. I can now enter into no plan of operations likely to produce advantage. I have sent a courier to Petersburgh; I shall let my army rest, nor shall I take a single step without the orders of my sovereign.

DARMSTADT, Nov. 19.

Our hopes that the change in the government of France would speedily have produced an armistice, are vanished.—On the 15th, gen. Lecourbe have received dispatches by a courier from Paris, informed the army of the Rhine of the events that had taken place there, of the dismission of the directory, and of the appointment of three consuls, and called upon them to continue their unanimity, bravery, and love for their country. Soon after this had been announced to them, they were ordered to march against their enemy, and early on the 16th an attack was made on the whole line, from Neckargemund as far as Langenbrucken. Gen. Ney made only a feint attack, but more serious was that on the position of the Austrians, near Bretten, behind Bruchsal.—Gen. Laborde surrounded a whole battalion of imperialists, part of whom he made prisoners. The posts of Philipsburgh were either driven in or made prisoners: that fortress will now again be blockaded. It is said to have been the intention of the enemy to attack, but gen. Lecourbe was beforehand with them. The latter returned yesterday from Bruchsal, where the French head quarters at present are, to Manheim, but his stay at that place will be short.

CHUR, (Grison country) Oct. 31.

This afternoon, the imperialists were attacked by the French, near Kunkels, and driven back: the engagement was very obstinate, and the Austrians fought desperately, but at length were forced to give away to very superior numbers: the French—whose force amounted 300 men, having brought some cavalry with them from the valley of Vettis. The Austrians retreated across the Rhine, near Reicheneau, towards Bonaduz, and burnt the bridge after they had passed it. Thus the French have established their communication, and are now in possession of all the heights on the opposite banks of the Rhine,

DARMSTADT, Nov. 19.

Our hopes that the change in the government of France would speedily have produced an armistice, are vanished.—On the 15th, gen. Lecourbe have received dispatches by a courier from Paris, informed the army of the Rhine of the events that had taken place there, of the dismission of the directory, and of the appointment of three consuls, and called upon them to continue their unanimity, bravery, and love for their country. Soon after this had been announced to them, they were ordered to march against their enemy, and early on the 16th an attack was made on the whole line, from Neckargemund as far as Langenbrucken. Gen. Ney made only a feint attack, but more serious was that on the portion of the Austrians, near Bretten, behind Bruchsal.—Gen. Laborde surrounded a whole battalion of imperialists, part of whom he made prisoners. The posts of Philipsburgh were either driven in or made prisoners: that fortress will now again be blockaded. It is said to have been the intention of the enemy to attack, but gen. Lecourbe was beforehand with them. The latter returned yesterday from Bruchsal, where the French head quartes at present are, to Mauheim, but his stay at that place will be short.

CHUR, (Grison country) Oct. 31.

This afternoon, the imperialists were attacked by the French, near Kunkels, and driven back: the engagement was very obstinate, and the Austrians fought desperately, but at length were forced to give away to very superior numbers: the French—whose force amounted 300 men, having brought some cavalry with them from the valley of Vettis. The Austrians retreated across the Rhine, near Reicheneau, towards Bonaduz, and burnt the bridge after they had passed it. Thus the French have established their communication, and are now in possession of all the heights on the opposite banks of the Rhine.

Buonaparte, in his pilgrimage in the Holy Land, seems not to have carried his infidelity so far as to neglect the antiquities connected with sacred story.—After a severe action, in which he made a great number of the Canaanites, now Naplousians, bite the dust, he was gratified with a sight of the spot, where Judith killed Holofernes. Unfortunately, he seems to have paid no attention to collecting relics, so that many authentic teeth, hairs, nails, other inestimable articles are lost to the dealers in these commodities.

On the much lamented death of a beloved FRIEND.

How shall my muse the mournful tale relate,
And paint the grief that agitates my heart?
How learn to bear the hash decree of fate,
And view the stroke of death's unerring darth?
Alas! 'tis useless all—nor sighs nor tears,
No prayers that flow unfeigned from the soul,
Can e'er recall those friends, however dear,
When they arrive at nature's certain goal.
But, shall we bid our tears no more to flow?
From memory strive their image to erase?
Forget, when dead, the living friend? oh! no,
Let grateful tears inspire the friendly lays.
I had a FRIEND whose every thought I knew,
Esteem like his, deserv'd that sacred name;
His actions all bespoke him firm and true,
O friendship! aid me to record his fame.
The noblest sentiments his soul inspir'd,
To him, the needy ne'er applied in vain;
Godlike benevolence his bosom fir'd,
To aid the wretched and alleviate pain.
If cruel fortune frown'd upon his steind,
His hand was ever open to relieve;
His kind compassion would his sorrows mend,
And friendly counsel mitigate his grief.
But here my feble pen would wish to rest,
And paint the sad reverse of human joy;
The heart-corroding cares that rent his breast,
The friends whose baseness did his peace destroy.
His generous mind that never knew controul,
Was doom'd beneath misfortune's wound to smart,
'Twas vile ingratitude that pierc'd his soul,
Prey'd on his vitals and consumed his heart.
For thee, I'll offer up my earnest pray'rs
Thou much lamented and beloved shade!
To Him, whose love releas'd thee from they cares,
Snatch'd thee from earth, and all thy griefs allay'd.
Farewell! a short farewell, departed friend!
For death must soon unite us in the tomb,
A few revolving years, life's couse must end,
And yield to fate's irrevocable doom.
May awful silence shade thy mossy bed,
And slumbers sweet be on thy sacred dust,
May the green turf lay lightly o'er thy head,
Till the archangel wake thee with the just.

THE SEDUCER.

Addreſſed to the fair daughters of America.

" I long to claſp the haughty maid,
" And bend her ſtubborn virtue to my paſſion.
" When I had gone thus far, I'd caſt her off!" CATO.

THE news which I have lately received, reſpecting the lovely, but unfortunate, JULIANA, may afford to youth an important leſſon of inſtruction. She was young and comely; belonged to a worthy family, and poſſeſſed ſuch attractive graces as procured her the eſteem of all her acquaintance.—She was courted for a conſiderable time by a gentleman, who made her the ſtrongeſt proteſtations of friendſhip: but how often is the name of friendſhip uſed to cover the blackeſt deſigns!

" The friendſhips of the world are oft " Confederacies in vice or leagues in guilt.

Her unſuſpected heart little thought that his ſolemn declarations of conſtancy were intended only to conceal his infernal intreagues, and to effect her ruin. But ſhe has fallen a victim to the too ſucceſful ſnares of her baſe ſeducer.

This tale of woe cauſed me many ſerious reflections, upon the unhappy conſequences of female ſeduction. It is, indeed a moſt copious ſource of miſery. When we ſee a blooming female, the pride of her parents, and the glory of her ſex, fall a ſacrifice to the falſe arts of ſeduction, our minds are melted to pity, and we are led to curſe the author of our wretchedneſs.—It is aſtoniſhing that rational beings ſhould ſo far forget the dignity of their natures, as to give themſelves over to the controul of their paſſions. In this way they involve themſelves in wretchedneſs, and entail on others laſting miſery.

The evils, which ariſe from female ſeduction, are great and numerous.—The miſeries brought on the perſon ſeduced, exceed the power of words, to deſcribe, or even of imagination to conceive. She immediately bids adieu to happineſs, and enters upon an unceaſing ſcene of woe.—She leaves the circles of mirth and gaiety, to drag out the remainder of her exiſtence (if her life be ſpared) in gloomy ſolitude.—Though it affordeth her the moſt flattering proſpect; though her countenance ſparkled with delight, and diffuſed joy through the circle of her acquaintance; though in the enjoyment of all that peace of mind, which reſults from conſcious virtue—yet all are fled. Her pleaſing proſpects vaniſhed forever. Her former proſperity and happineſs, only make her more ſenſible of her preſent miſery. Her company is no more ſought—ſhe is no more ſpoken of with reſpect; but becomes an object of ſcorn and deriſion. She

" In vain looks back to what ſhe was before,
" She falls like ſtars that ſet to riſe no more."

Her ſunſhine of proſperity is overcaſt with gloomy clouds. Her mind is tortured with guilt, ſhame, and remorſe, and often ſhe ſeeks relief from her miſery, by deſtroying her own life.

But the evil ſtops not here. Her parents are bowed down with ſhame and ſorrow. The happineſs of parents depends much on the welfare of their children.—While they behold them walking in the paths of virtue & proſperity, they rejoice, and their miſconduct fills them with the moſt poignant grief. Little do youth conſider the long train of evils conſequent on their folly.

What ſhall we think of him, who, by his baſe arts, is the author of all theſe miſeries? Who poiſons all the ſocial enjoyments of life, to gratify his brutal luſt!—To obtain his deſires, he practices every art of diſſimulation, and does not hebitate to violate the moſt ſolemn engagements. Falſehood and perjury become familiar to him. They prepare his mind, for the reception of every vice and embolden him to the perpetration of every crime. He ſports with the fair victim of his luſt, and prides himſelf in his ignoble exploits. Such a one is a monſter in creation, and ought to be treated with univerſal contempt. The injury done by the thief and the robber, may be repaid: but the vile ſeducer does an injury, for which he never can make reſtitution.—Virtue is ſacrificed to his luſt; and the morals of youth are corrupted by his example. The peace of individuals, families & ſocieties is deſtroyed. "Like the mad man, he ſcatters fire brands, arrows and death." Such are more dangerous to meet, than bears bereaved of their whelps. They ought like ravenous wolves to be hunted from civilived ſociety.

HOUSE OF LORDS, JANUARY 28.

His Majesty's Message.

Answer to Lord Grenville,

(Concluded from our last)

SUCH, at least, was a fair inference from their manner, from the eagerness with which they published the intercepted correspondence, and from the spirit of the notes which they attached to it. He had read only the introduction to the last publication of this sort, in which he should hope that the government of this country had no concern; for it was written in a style which certainly reflected infinitely more disgrace on the man who had wrote it, than it did on those whom it was intended to degrade.—But he would not impute to ministers the pitiful malevolence of a personal triumph. He would not suppose they prosecuted the contest until they could attain a more favourable situation for treating. Such a situation might possibly arise; but what was our present prospect? If we depended on our allies, what security had we that they might not be detached from our interest by separate treaties of peace? Did we rely on the assistance of Austria? What pledge had we that she did not, as before, limit her view to her own aggrandizement, totally regardless of the interest of this country, or the rest of Europe. If Russia was the main pillar of our hope, was there no room to doubt that she might fall off from the common cause with as little realon as could be given for many of her public acts. But admitting that our allies might be kept together, were there no other considerations to be taken into account.—When we looked to our internal situation, was it of so consoling a nature as to prompt us to continue the contest? If we look to Ireland we should find those who have the least opportunity of information asserting, that it is far from being in a state of tranquility. Were our finances to flourishing as to justify the prosecution of hostilities? Our financical system we had already been compelled to abandon, and two different modes had been tried within two years. The first had been abandoned as inefficient, and the second, though not relinquished, had fallen short of expectation, and would require to be new modelled. Some time ago it was thought that we could starve France into submission; but what was our own situation? What greater confirmation could there be of the necessity of peace, than to see the miserable wretches who wander in our fields and woods a prey to all the horrors of cold and famine. In lately riding thro' a village in the country, he was shocked by seeing the children ranging about in all the wildnels of despair, and crying out for that food which it was impossible for their unhappy parents to give them. Such of the noble lords as had occasion to act as magistrates, must have lately known frequent instances of appeals from the parish officers, by men whose claims for charity had been passed unheeded, because they appear to be strong, healthy, and capable of labour. But the miserable sufferers in vain demand for the means of employment; and they cannot return to meet the horrid sight of a wife and children perishing with hunger. This was but very lately the deplorable situation of the lower classes of our fellow countrymen. It was true, it had been somewhat changed within these few weeks. Men of property had voluntarily adopted measures to prevent the recurrence of such scenes. But surely that was not the natural situation of a country in which the many subsisted on the charity of the few.

Six months ago violent and unprecedented measures had been taken to recruit our army; and the flower of the British troops had been landed on a foreign coast, in a manner more suitable to the celebration of a triumph than that of going to battle. The consequence was, that they had been obliged to purchase their retreat with a disgrace hitherto unknown to British soldiers. Did ministers intend to repeat the project? Did they mean to collect provisions from every quarter and to empty the public magazines for the purpose of fitting out some other frantic expedition? If he were asked whether the present was a favourable opportunity to conclude a peace, he would say it was the most so which had occurred since the negociations at Lisle. But ministers intend to wait for the evidence of facts—such evidence as that which preceded the negociations at that period; namely, the succession of the emperor. That was the event which constituted the principal ground of treating upon that occasion; for it was regarded as absurd in England to continue the contest after the defection of her continental allies. But this government had not, it seems, lasted a sufficient time. Had the house forgotten that in his majesty's speech in the month of October it was stated, that the affairs of France were hastening to a favorable crisis? That crisis was the event which happened on the eighth of December, and which elevated to the supreme authority the present rulers of France. The noble secretary stated, the only grounds of pacification held out by the enemy rested on the personal disposition of Buonaparte. The plainest answer in that assertion would be the perusal of this letter. —

[Here the noble duke read the whole of Buonaparte's letter to the king.]

In this his personal disposition was not the only ground; his reasons were also of a general nature. He mentioned the evils which had already arisen from the war, and those which would most probably result from continuing it, as motives to a commencement of negociation. The same reasons were alledged in the second communication.

[Here the noble duke read some passages of Mr. Talleyrand's official note.]

Whether these professions were sincere or not, was not material to the present question. When a nation unanimously expressed a desire for peace, and the government became the organ of their wishes, it was pretty strong reason for at least receiving them with attention and respect. That such is the general desire in France might be inferred from the anxiety which every public person, and even the generals of their armies discovered in recommending themselves to public affection by pacific professions. From the manner which the noble secretary spoke that night of the negociations at Paris and Lisle, he was at a loss to know whether ministers wished to be considered as sincere in those transactions, or whether they were mere mockeries practised to suit their own purposes? If it did not detain the house too long, he could easily shew, whatever their intentions might have been, their language was at variance in every point to every sentence uttered that night by the noble secretary. During the first attempt to negociate, after feelingly describing the calamities of war, they laboured, in case of the negociation failing, to throw the reproach upon the French government. At Lisle they pursued the same conduct, & when the negociations there were broken off, they declared in the name of his majesty, that they were ready to renew them whenever the rulers of France should manifest a disposition similar to his own, &c. The government of France had now evinced such a disposition; and it was, therefore, incumbent on them to put its sincerity to proof. The noble secretary asked whether Buonaparte was prepared to make a variety of cessions. He would again answer, the best method of ascertaining that, was to enter into negociations. Six weeks were, it seems now, not a sufficient trial of the stability of a government; and yet our ambassador at Lisle was empowered to negociate with a government of only five days standing, which had obtained power by means the most violent. It was amusing to remark the contradictory inference which had been drawn from the reports of citizens Monge and Berlay de la Meurthe, and the declarations of Talleyrand, which he garbled, and alternately praised and condemned, as suited the fleeting purpose of the moment. He should have recollected before abusing Buonaparte, that he adopted the very language in which the latter condemned the proceeding of the Jacobins. It was not his object to enter into a justification of the character of Buonaparte, but he conceived he must be desirous of peace, because the French nation was anxious for peace; because it would tend to consolidate his own power; and because it had been found that when the reins of government had been assumed by any set of men in that country, in the hope of effecting a peace, and they had failed in their object, that they generally made a way for another set. Ministers ought, therefore to reflect, whether by refusing to treat with them they did any thing more than give an opportunity for a worse being put in his stead. Buonaparte had even in the preliminaries of the treaty which had been so frequently cited to his reproach, shewn views of moderation. He was desirous of ceding Mantua to the emperor, and supported his wish, by observing it in a letter to the directory, that it was for the interest of all great nations not to exact too much from the defeated party. But that ministers should abuse Buonaparte, did not with him preclude the belief that they would yet treat with him. They had loathed their scurility on all his predecessors, but when driven to negociate, that circumstance never formed any impediment. They made overtures to any whom they found at the head of affairs. But while there remained to them any prospect of being able to continue the war, he did not suppose they would cordially enter into schemes of accommodation. They knew that while it continued, its events would occupy all the attention of the country, but that, on the return of peace, the public would begin to enquire for what purpose, so much blood had been shed, and so much treasure expended. The present ministers felt an interest in the continuance of the war, and therefore he despaired of the recurrence of so favourable an opportunity for treating while they held their places. The present was a crisis which involved the fate of existing men, and of succeeding generations. Nothing else could have induced him to give their lordships the trouble of listening to him, or to take to himself the irksome task of addressing them; for irksome it must be to contend, as from all appearance he then did, without the prospect of producing any effect. But his sense of duty, his anxiety for the happiness of his country did not permit him to remain entirely silent at so important a moment. Recollecting how often within those walls he had foretold the calamities which had already befallen this nation, he came down once more to warn them by all that they venerated and loved, to reflect upon the consequences of that night's decision; to remember that they were now called to throw away the scabbard, and plunge at once into all the horrors of eternal war. Such was in reality the nature of the contest, if the sword was not to be sheathed until the restoration of monarchy in that country: and even on the supposition that ministers bounded their views to compelling her to retire within her ancient limits, and to relinquish her projects of aggrandizement—what was it but saying that we were to fight as long as we had power to wield our arms. If it was declared that France and England should be rivals, let us resort to other means of establishing our superiority. Instead of sending millions to the slaughter, and ravaging the face of the earth, let us, in the bosom of peace, endeavour to relieve our people from the miseries under which they already groan; let us turn our thoughts to the extension of agriculture and commerce, and vie with each other in diffusing the means of happiness. In such a contest it would be worthy to excell. In our triumphs we might then exult without offence to our God, or horror at the means by which they had been attained. Such were his reasons for addressing their lordships.—If by any exertions of his, such an object could be promoted, he would certainly toil day and night to accomplish it. But he lamented that he could entertain no such hope. There was no apparent change either in that house or in the people. Infringed and mutilated as he would maintain their privileges had been they still possessed the power of addressing their sovereign and their parliament. Of this power they had not availed themselves: and he must therefore suppose they continued to place the same confidence as ever in that parliament. The English people loved their constitution, and while there was any danger of its being torn from them there was no evil to which they would not submit; but he would entreat the house to be cautious how that confidence was abused, and to recollect the responsibility which they incurred by neglecting every favourable opportunity to put an end to the evils which they had patiently endured for so many years. They were now bending under a load of taxes; it was for that house to take care they did not sink under them—to guard against their being reduced to the dreadful alternative of abject slavery or revolution. If driven to despair by the unfeeling gripe of the tax gatherer, what could be expected, but, like France they would make an effort to redress their own grievances? These were the dangers, the calamities which he apprehended from a further continuance of the contest. He hoped the house would take warning before it was too late.—But, if by that night's decision, he should find that there was no prospect of any change to that system, which had been so long pursued to the ruin & degradation of his country, he must refrain from any further mooting of their lordships. He must abandon a scene where his efforts could be no longer serviceable, and in the bosom of retirement, administer that comfort and happiness to the few, which he in vain attempted to procure for the nation at large.

His grace then proposed an amendment, in which he recapitulated the different communications from the throne on the subject of the present war, and the resolutions of the house on the same, and in which he recapitulated the leading points of his own speech, in order to shew that the different revolutions in France, and the instability of the government of that country from time to time, did not furnish sufficient ground of argument to preclude the policy, prudence and wisdom of meeting the late overtures of the enemy, for the purpose of opening a negociation for peace.

For the noble duke's amendment, see our paper of the 30th instant.

(From Wraxall's History of France.)

GREATER intrepidity or resources were never, perhaps, exerted, in the history of any country, than were evinced by the generals and commanders who conquered India. Almeyda, Albuquirque, and Castro, obtained the most signal victories, under every disadvantage. The defence of Cochin by Edward Pacheco, may rank with the most illustrious exploits of the consular ages of Rome. The two sieges of Diu have immortalized the names of Sylveira and Malcaregnas: that of Goa covered Alfonde with equal glory. The Portugueze seemed to perform exploits above the powers of man; and in perusing the narrations transmitted of them by the contemporary writers, we may conceive ourselves among the paladines of romance. No effort was above their strength or fortitude, or perseverance, when impelled by honor, and the service of their country. To cite examples would be to transcribe the whole history of that period: they occur in every page. Mendoza, governor of Ormus, being anxious to transmit accounts to the court, of his situation, and of the posture of affairs in Asia, in 1528; Anthony Ternlec voluntarily offered to undertake to carry dispatches across the unknown deserts, which divide Bassora from the coast of Palestine, and to reach Lisbon by the way the Mediterranean. He traversed the great desert on a dromedary, accompanied only with one Arab as a guide, and steering by a compass. After encountering every species of danger, he executed his commission, embarked from Tripoli in Syria, and landing in Italy, got safe to Portugal. However familiar the present century is become with this passage, it was then regarded as almost impossible; and Ternlec was long an object of wonder to his countrymen, who followed him in crowds, to hear the relation of his adventures.

Bold as that undertaking may be considered, it was eclipsed by another of Diego Botello; who, after the cession of Diu to Acugna, in 1536, set sail from the harbour of the place, with a determination to carry to John the third the first news of the acquisition, and to anticipate all other intelligence. It can scarcely be credited, that the galley in which he undertook to effect the voyage, was only twenty two feet in length, twelve in breadth, and six in height. He had on board five Portugueze, and some slaves, who were ignorant of his intention; but, partly by force, and partly by promises, he prevailed on them to proceed. During the passage, in consequence of continually exerting his voice to enforce obedience, or to conduct the boat, he was seized with such a total extinction of speech, that, for fourteen days, he could only issue his directions in writing. A mutiny having taken place among his little crew, he steered the galley himself; passed the Cape of Good Hope; touched at the islands of the Azores, in the midst of the Atlantic; and at length entered the Tagus in safety, bringing the earliest information of the event, which spread universal joy over the whole kingdom. It may be justly doubted, whether in the present age, when navigation has attained to so high a point of perfection, and with all the assistance of science, any greater instance of nautical skill, intrepidity, and success can be adduced.

This fortunate temerity, caused, however, no little alarm in the court, from the incontestible evidence which it bore to the possibility of traversing the immense ocean between Europe and India, in so very small a vessel.—To conceal as much as possible, the knowledge of the fact from all foreigners, Botello's galley was burned by order of the king; and he himself, after performing so unparalleled a voyage, was long left to languish, unrewarded.

FOREIGN NEWS.

LONDON, March 3.

THE amount of the supply for the present year, asked for, and obtained by Mr. Pitt, is 39,500,000l. to raise which, only 350,000l. is found necessary to be obtained by new taxes.

Arrangements for an expedition to Britanny are nearly matured. Sir R. Abercrombie is to command.—The Russian troops which were in Holland, and a reinforcement are to be employed.

The Austrian general Klenau has been obliged to give up certain advantages he recently gained in Italy; reinforcements not arriving seasonably; and the French being superior in number.

A measure is in contemplation in France to raise two hundred millions by civic gifts. All those persons who have robbed the republic or gained money by dishonest manoeuvres are to contribute half the money so acquired, under pain of being considered as dilapidators, and denounced before the military commissions.

The American envoys are well received at Paris. Buonaparte orders that for 10 days black crape shall be suspended to all the standards and flags of the republic, for the death of general Washington; his death has been noticed here in a very honorable manner; Mr. Erskine in a beautiful digression delivered an eulogium on the occasion in the house of commons.

It is strongly expected that Genoa will soon fall into our hands and those of Austria; the latter besiege it by land and we by sea.

By a statement of the French government, it appears, that three millions of citizens have accepted the new constitution, and one thousand voted against it. The acceptors in this instance exceed those of the constitution of 1793, one million; and those of the constitution of the third year, two millions.

His Majesty has concluded a treaty with the Emperor of Germany, by which neither is to conclude a separate peace with France; and in consequence of which two millions was immediately to be paid to the emperor as a subsidy.

THE HERMIT.

"The world subsists by elemental strife,
"And passions are the elements of life."

THAT this is a true description of the passions, will doubtless be acknowledged by every one who has studied the human character. Mankind being stimulated to all their actions by some one of their passions, and often led into errors and irregularities, it appears highly necessary that those powerful agents of the human mind should be well understood, in their various operations, as they tend either to virtue or vice. Let us then for a moment endeavor to trace the parallel between the elements which compose the material world, and the human passions.—As all the motion, in the world is effected by the impulse of some one of the elements; so in the mind of man every movement proceeds from the impulse of a particular passion. In the elements there is also a continual strife; and the great architect has composed them of such opposite qualities, that the force of one should be a guard against the intrusion of another: As when the devouring element of fire is let loose upon the combustible parts of matter; and air and fire combined to spread devastation over the creation, the opposing element of water is sufficient to repel the invasion. The same strife and contention exists among the passions. And it is plain, that the influence of one, may be suppressed by the strength of the other.

Mankind having suffered such direful calamities through the violence of unbridled passions, many are set to consider them as our greatest enemies; and therefore suppose they ought wholly to be subdued. This is carrying the matter quite too far; and would be as unnatural as a wish to annihilate the element of fire, because many have felt the dreadful effects of its rage; or the element of water, because it has swept whole towns to destruction; and vast quantities of the richest treasures of the earth have been overwhelmed in it.—Great damage has likewise been done by the violence of the air. Beautiful forests have been prostrated, and the most magnificent buildings levelled with the ground. Shall we for this reason wish that the air might become stagnant? No, for by this means we should destroy animated creation itself. And we at once see that each of the elements is necessary for our subsistance in life, although mischief is often produced by the irregularity of their motions. I think it may likewise, with equal propriety, be said, that although our passions are, in some measure, the cause of our misery; yet they are also the sources of all our pleasures. Therefore a proper regulation of them, instead of their expulsion, is requisite, in order to render us capable of pursuing a proper line of conduct in life: or of enjoying the good that falls within our reach.

ANECDOTES.

Dr. Sheridan, the celebrated friend of Swift, had a custom of ringing his scholars to prayers in the school-room at a certain hour every day. The boys were one day very devoutly at prayers, except one, who was stifling a laugh as well as he could, which rose from seeing a rat descending from the bell-rope into the room. The poor boy could hold out no longer, but burst into an immoderate fit of laughter, which set the others a-going when he pointed to the cause. Sheridan was so provoked, that he declared he would whip them all if the principal culprit was not pointed out to him; which was immediately done. The poor pupil of Momus was immediately hoisted, when the witty schoolmaster told him, if he said any thing tolerable on the occasion, as he looked on him as the greatest dunce in his school, he would forgive him. The trembling culprit, after a little hesitation, addressed his master with the following beautiful distich:

There was a rat—for want of stairs,
Came down the rope—to go to prayers.

Sheridan instantly dropped the rod, and instead of a whipping, gave him half a crown

Sam'l Marthler.

York, May 16, 1800.

From the New York Gazette of May 5.

By the Fanny, Braine, in 43 days from Greenock in Scotland, we have received London and Glasgow papers to the 20th March from which we select the following :

GLASGOW, March 20.

ON Tuesday last, Paris papers to the 12th inst. were received in London. By them it appeas that Buonaparte has publicly announced his intention of taking the command of the army, in the approaching campaign. In his address to the people on this subject he expreifes his wish for peace, inveighs againft the government of this country for rejecting his overtures, and insinuates that the continental powers will be influenced by more pacific principles. In order to obtain money, men and arms, he had recourfe to every perfuafive, every oppreffive art. From his rigorous requifitions no age, no condition is exempt. Thus it is to be free !—A new army of obfervation is to be formed at Dijon, under his command.

Perfect unanimity, it is faid, fubfifts between the confuls and legiflature, a circumftance which induced one of its members to expreis his hope, that it would afford that evidence of facts fo much wifhed for.

One of these papers, on the authority of a German journal, mentions the death of the king of Denmark.

London, March 15. The Sirius frigate, capt. King, is arrived at Plymouth.—Capt. King looked into Breft on the 1ft inft. and counted 48 fail of men of war 12 of whom had top-maits down, and only top gallant maits up.

Deal, March 13. The publicans of this place have juft received a meffage from the mayor, informing them that about 7000 troops would arrive there in the courfe of feven or eight days for embarkation.

Six days after the Fanny failed, fhe was boarded and treated politely by a French privateer !

Verbal accounts ftate, that 48 fail of the Breft fleet were out. Ireland ftill in commotion.

Refpecting the American envoys, we learn that they are arrived in Paris, and that a commiffion had been appointed by the firft conful on the part of the Republic, to confer with them on the fubject of peace. This commiffion (of which citizen Mourgues is fecretary) conifts of Joieph Buonaparte, Fleurieu, and Roederer.

In confequence of the fcarcity of wheat in England, the Britifh government have authorifed a direct intercourfe with France by means of neutral veffels, for that article, as well as for leather, tallow, feeds, rags, &c. This communication is not the refult of any arrangment between the two governments, but arifes out of the enterprife of individuals, which the government has been induced to countenance.

Preparations are making by all the belligerent powers for opening the campaign with vigor ; and fecret expeditions were preparing, of which the object had not tranfpired.

Captain Braine informs, that juft before he failed a report was in circulation of the Breft fleet having left the harbor and that lord Bridport was in queft of them.

Ratifbon, Feb. 23. Gen. Bawrrow arrived on the 13th of Feb. at Cracow, from which, after repoling fome days, he was to fet out for Peterfburgh.

The Ruffian army continues its march towards Wolhynia ; the principal column files off thro' Eaftern, & the other thro' Weftern Gallicia : the firft, commanded by gen. Deieiden, is divided into 8 different columns, conifting of 32 thoufand men, including thofe who do not bear arms, and who are eftimated at 5000 men ; the 2d corps, under the command of gen. Rofemberg, conifts of about 10,000 men.

Letters from Lithuania announce that a Ruffian army of 80,000 men is collecting towards the fhores of the Baltic, and that it is fuppofed that thefe troops will embark either altogether or in part, to co-operate in a grand expedition on the coafts of France or Holland.

Augfburg, Feb. 24. Gen. Stipfchutz has arrived from Donaueichingen at Vienna, with difpatches of the utmoft importance, thought to relate to the overtures of peace made by the French government. Private letters from Vienna ftate, that the minifter of his Imperial Majefty frequently received difpatches relative to that object, and it is prefumed, that the negociations muft already be pretty far advanced, but hitherto nothing has tranfpired that can afford any authentic ideas, either in regard to the reality or progrefs of the negociations.—It is alfo aflerted that his royal highnefs the archduke Charles will retain the command of the German army and that field marfhal baron de Kray, who is to command under him, will fupply his place in cafe of indifpofition.

LONDON, March 14.

Another packet has arrived at Yarmouth from Heligoland without mails. The froft ftill continues very fevere in the Elbe, and it will probably be yet a conliderable time before we have any arrivals from Hamburgh.

The American fhip Hope, Hooper, maiter, from Boiton, laden with fugar, coffee &c. is arrived at Cowes, after a very boiflerous paffage of fifty two days. At the entrance of the channel, fhe was boarded by a large French corvette privateer, the capt. of which fuffered the American to proceed, on feeing that his clearance was for Bremen.

The Batavian directory have named vice admiral de Winter, admiral of the Batavian fleet.

It is ftated in letters from Augfburg, that in conlequence of a capitulation which has been ordered and ligned, England is to take definitively into its pay for three years, three regiments of Swifs, Roveréa, and Bachenaun.

The Ukafe which forbids the Ruffians to ftudy in foreign countries, is ftill in full force, for Paul has refufed an individual to permit his children to finifh their ftudies in Pruffia.

The firft brigade of guards conifting of the grenadiers, and the 3d battalion of the firft regt. who fo bravely diftinguifhed themfelves in Holland, received orders yefterday to hold themfelves in readinefs to embark for the Mediterranean. They are to be augmented by 100 of the light infantry.

March 16.

Letters from Vienna ftate, that the emperor is dangerouily indifpoied.

It is reported that the emperor of Ruffia has demanded from one of the neutral powers of the north the liberty of embarking a corps of 25,000 men, deftined for England. It is added, that this neutral power has claimed the mediation of Pruffia to avoid receiving a Ruffian army in its territories.

March 17.

By accounts received from Britanny, dated the 1ft inft. it appears, in contradiction to the French ftatements, that the Chouans are again in great force, & that all communication between Breft and Paris had been cut off for leven days previous to the above date.

The combined fleets conifting of 29 fail of the line, 14 of which are Spanifh were in the outer road, but quite unfit for fea, the whole crews of fome of the French fhips having, it is faid, deferted to the Chouans.

The fleet under command of lord Bridport, failed from Torbay on Saturday laft.

It is with extreme concern we ftate the lois of the Republic of 64 guns, capt. Alms, on the coaft of France ; 30 of the crew were drowned ; the reft made prifoners, except a few who made their efcape in the cutter.

It is reported that government are about to purchafe of the prince of Orange all the Dutch fhips of war which were given up to him in the Texel. They are moft probably intended for tranfports for the troops, intended for one of the expeditions now in preparation.

The Eaft India company, in conlideration of the important fervices rendered them by the Marquis of Wellefley, it is faid, have made his lordfhip a preient of one hundred thoufand pounds.

It gives us pleafure to hear that trade is reviving at Hamburgh. Some of the houfes that ftopt payment laft year, are after paying 20s to the pound, found to have great reverfions, and have again begun buiinefs. At Altona only one houfe ftopt, at Bremen only two, and at Embden not one ftopt payment. Trade is brifk in all thefe towns, and the demand for Britifh manufactures, American and Weft India produce, is great.

GLASGOW, March 20.

Since our laft no intelligence of importance has been received. Nine Hamburgh mails are due. The expedition under gen. Stuart, &c. is ftill expected to fail. Its deftination is ftill a profound fecret. Deal is the principal rendezvous.

PARIS, 19 and 20 Ventofe,
March 10 and 11.

It is faid that the king of Denmark has died fuddenly.

To-morrow the grand conful will review feveral corps of foldiers, fome of which have arrived from the weftern departments, now reftored to a ftate of tranquility. On the 23d thofe who are completely accoutred will fet out for Paris. It is rumoured that the firft conful will leave it on the 25th (March 16)

The minifter of war, Berthier, is to accompany him in the capacity of chief of the ftaff. In his abfence the ex-director Carnot will be charged with the management of the war department.—Bernadotte is to accompany Buonaparte in the quality of lieut. general.

By accounts from Turin, dated the 15th Feb. it appears that a numerous corps of Auftrians were aflembled in the vicinity of Alexandria and Novi. It is alfo ftated the French general Miolis, has iffued a proclamation to the inlurgents of Fontana and Buona, exhorting them to lay down their arms ; but the proclamation produced no effect. The inlurgents amount to no lefs than 6000 men, amply furnifhed with military ftores, and under the direction of able officers.

Advertiſement.

ALL perſons having any demands againſt the eſtate of the late JOHN LAWRENCE, Eſq; are requeſted to give in their accounts to Mr. Samuel Heron, on or before the 3d of June next.

enemy could have moſt eaſily effected a landing, have been put in a ſtate of preparation to receive them. We hope they may meet with the ſame fate that their expedition againſt that country, under their late famous general Hoche, met.

The obſtinacy and bravery of the Imperialiſts at the battle of Arcola, is ſufficiently known. It is well known that Buonaparte and his army were twice repulſed with very great loſs; but it is not ſo well known, (but no leſs true,) that he was found in his tent counting one million livres to an Auſtrian officer, when his army was preparing for a third attack. It is thus we are to eſtimate the glory of a Buonaparte.

PHILADELPHIA, May 22.

IN the beginning of last week, it was rumoured, that a lady had been stabbed on the Saturday preceding, by a person unknown; but, as no name was mentioned, it was conceived to be a false report, and did not receive the attention it merited, during the whole of the week, tales of females being stabbed or abused after dark, were flying about, but still were unheeded. Yesterday, however, conceiving it our duty to ascertain the truth or falsity of these reports, we endeavoured to investigate the matter. The result of this investigation enables us to state, that some unknown villain, has for ten days past, carried on a most barbarous and systematic plan of torturing defenceless women.

Within this time no less than a dozen have been stabbed by him, one of whom is not likely to recover. Four of them we have seen and conversed with. One of these, a married lady, states, that on passing Elbow-lane in Third street, in the dusk of the evening, with a child in her arms, a man rushed upon her from the alley, gave her a violent blow on the back with some sharp instrument and ran off. Another of them was wounded in the same way at the same place a few evenings after. The third was walking in Arch-street, near the Friends burial ground, when a man seized and attempted to stab her, but the instrument only pierced her clothes. The fourth walking alone in Third-street, near the sign of the Plough, about nine o'clock at night, when a man came behind her and stabbed her four times in the back; she called for assistance, but the villain fled into Church-alley and escaped. She was immediately conveyed to a neighbouring house, where a shoemaker's awl, which he had left in her back, was extracted. The lady has now in her possession. It appears to us from comparing the different accounts that this diabolical business carried on by one person only, as all four ladies nearly agree in the description of his person and clothing, and their wounds are supposed to have been made by the same kind of instrument. In some instances he has beaten females in the most cruel manner. Attempts have been made to discover him, but they have hitherto proved fruitless. We have not heard of his attacking any unless unprotected.

From the Mississippi Gazette of March 22.

It is with extreme regret we learn, that an affray happened at Loftus Heights on Tuesday last, between Major William Kersey and Lieut. Peter Marks, officers in the United States army, in which the former was run thro' the body with the sword of the latter, of which wound Major Kersey expired on Friday night last. We understand that this unhappy quarrel commenced in a conversation respecting the trivial circumstances of the sale of a horse—that in the course of the conversation the major became irritated and shook his cane at lieutenant Marks, who immediately wrested it from him and threw it away—the major took up the cane and struck lieutenant Marks.—This happened between three and four o'clock in the afternoon; and immediately after fun set, lieutenant Marks, came up to major Kersey on the parade and demanded of him instant satisfaction for the insult he had offered him—the major replied that he had not insulted him, and should give no satisfaction. Lieutenant Marks then gave the major a stroke with his cane, upon which they both drew their swords, and lieutenant Marks received a wound on the head, and instantly ran the Major through the body, in the direction of the vital parts.

NEW YORK, May 21.

Captain Whittemore, who arrived here yesterday from Lisbon, informs, that the American consul told him the morning he sailed, that the Spaniards had joined the French, and marched 30,000 men against Portugal.

It was reported just as the Trio sailed that an English frigate had been carried into France by the crew.

A British packet, with dispatches, arrived at Lisbon, the day captain Whittemore sailed; but no news had transpired.

Yesterday arrived here from Cape Francois the schr. Juno, of Portland, a prize to the United States frigate General Green. She had been captured by a French corvette, and recaptured on the 3d ult. The Juno has on board several disabled seamen from the Constitution.

On Friday last Ebenezer Saunders, late deputy post-master, at Georgetown Cross Roads, Kent County Maryland, was indicted at the circuit court held at Annapolis, for secreting and embezzling a letter directed to Mr. John Chew, of Chestertown, and for stealing out of the same ten post bank bills of one hundred dollars each. He was tried found guilty, and sentenced by the court to receive thirty-nine lashes and seven years imprisonment at hard labor. After receiving the first part of his sentence, in which he fainted at the last blow, and continued senseless for two hours, he was on Saturday lodged in the jail of Baltimore to undergo the latter part of his sentence. The just severity of his punishment, it is hoped, will long preserve society from the repetition of a similar and so flagitious a crime.

GLASGOW, April 26.

Paris papers to the 23th inst were received on Tuesday evening. They are very barren of intelligence. The campaign has not yet commenced. A paper of the 20th says, that Moreau was to pass the Rhine on the 19th.

Two Hamburgh mails arrived on Wednesday, but the little information they bring is not of so late a date as that brought by the French papers.—Malta, it is again said, has surrendered. Gen. In his address to the Divan of Cairo, and those of the different provinces of Egypt, dated the 6th of March, after the ratification of the terms of the capitulation, he calls Buonaparte his illustrious predecessor, and justifies the whole of his conduct with regard to the expedition; while in his letter, published in our paper on Tuesday, he evidently imputes the failure of that enterprize solely to the cond of the executive directory.

General Souchet, lieutenant of the general in chief, to general Buonaparte, First Consul of the French Republic.

Head quarters, at Melogna, April 6.

GENERAL,

For ten days the army of Italy has been engaged with the enemy.—Finding myself detached from the army of the commander in chief Massena, and having an opportunity of being able to give you intelligence of the army, I think it my duty to do so directly. On the 16th Germinal, gen. Melas attacked in person the heights of Savona. Lieut. gen. Souchet, who commanded them, withstood, during the whole day, the attack of the enemy on Cadiburna and Montenotte, in order that he might be able to send to the fort of Savona, what was necessary for its defence, and to effect his retreat to Genoa; for at the commencement of the day he could easily perceive that the enemy had such a superiority of forces that he could not hope to overcome them. He threw a garrison of 700 men into the fort of Savona, and in the evening effected his retreat to Albissola; the same day general Moillis was attacked on the Riviere di Levante. He was at first obliged to fall back; but on the 17th general Massena advanced hither in person, beat the Austrians and took from them 2500 prisoners, among whom are gen. Baron d'Alpre.

On the 20th, gen. Massena attacked the enemy at Sotello and Albissola,—The affair continued the whole day, and on the 21st general Massena briskly repulsed the enemy, and took from them a great number of prisoners.

On the 23d, 24th and 25th general Massena had sharp engagements; the result of which was constantly in our favour. He took from the enemy 4500 prisoners, seven standards and six pieces of cannon.

On the 22d, however, I had evacuated the position of St. Jacque, and had advanced to the line of Borgetto. The Madona de la Nava was taken and retaken several times. The Hungarian grenadiers suffered considerably at Melogna, where they were vigorously repulsed—The 17th, and the grenadiers of the 24th distinguished themselves in a particular manner. Observing that the enemy were endeavouring to turn me, I determined to advance to the line of Borgetto.—During this time general Zeblouski completely beat the division of the enemy, which was debouching by Tanaro, and had already arrived at Pieve.—He took 500 prisoners.

On the 19th having received orders from Gen. Massena to attack the enemy, I marched on the 20th. The troops took by assult and the bayonet the tower and the redoubt of Melogna, with 400 prisoners, 12 of whom were officers.—The chief of the battalion of Vedal, belonging to the 34th demi brigade, was the first who rushed into the entrenchments. The colonel of the Austrian regiment of Orange was killed.

The numerous redoubts of Setepani were taken on the 21st. Gen. Compere, with a part of the 7th light infantry, the grenadiers of the 34th and 10th, favoured by a very thick fog, surrounded the enemy, and took 1200 prisoners of the regiment of Hoff, and of the Prince of Orange, among whom are a major and two lieutenant colonels. One standard only fell into our hands, the rest having been concealed among the works.

My loss in these different affairs does not exceed 120 wounded and 30 killed. The loss of the enemy, independently of prisoners, has been much greater.

Among the brave men whom the army has to regret, is Clavet, chief of battalion, of the 10th. General Clausel, who commanded these different expeditions, is entitled to much praise. The 7th light infantry, and their commander Boyer, particularly distinguished themselves.

On the 20th, general Clausel, was engaged the whole day on the small hills in the nighbourhood of Jacques. He took prisoners 150 Hungarian grenadiers. Chevalier, chief du battalion assistant to the adjutant general Solignac, was killed. We fought the whole day of the 22d. Gen. Solignac was wounded.

Gen. Oudmot, chief of the staff, who was the bearer of dispatches from the commander, has just joined me. I am in the heights of the Finale and Melogna. The 104th demi brigade has just arrived. We are going to redouble our efforts for a general and decisive attack.

On the 21st, gen. Souchet attacked and retook the heights of Melogna.—Massena, commander in chief, and lieutenant general Soult, by different manoeuvres, drew the enemy into the valley of Albissola. All who opposed him there were either killed or taken prisoners. Gen. Miollis occupies and commands in Genoa.

On these different days, gen. Massena, in person, took 6000 prisoners, among whom are one general, two colonels, several majors, 200 officers, also seven standards, and 6 pieces of cannon. General Souchet, on his part, took in these different engagements 1800 prisoners and 1 standard. I have arrived here by orders of the commander in chief, to concert with gen. Souchet the movement which is to take place on the 1st of Floreal, April 20.

Extract of a letter from captain Talbot, of the U. S. frigate Constitution; to the Secretary of the Navy, dated May 12, 1800.

"I have now to acquaint you, sir, that I have for some time since been meditating an enterprize against a French armed ship, lying at Port Plate, protected by her own guns, and a fort of three heavy cannon. It was my first intention to have gone in with the Constitution, and to have silenced the fort and ship, which had all her guns on one side, to co-operate with the fort, in defending against any hostile force. But after the best information I could gain, I found it somewhat dangerous to approach the entrance of the harbour with a ship of the draught of water of the Constitution.—Having detained the sloop Sally, which had left Port Plate but a few days before, and which was to have returned there again previous to her sailing for the United States. I conceived this sloop would be a suitable vessel for a dispatch; I therefore manned her at sea, from the Constitution, with about 90 brave seamen and marines; the latter were to be commanded

The explanations sent by him to the court of Constantinople failed in re-establishing so desirable an union, and the march of the Grand Vizier against Dumas having opened a direct mode of communicating, he opened negociations, and confided to me the task of terminating them at the moment when affairs of a superior interest obliged him to return to Europe. I have this day concluded them, and restore this country to the possession of our ancient ally. The re-establishment of the commerce of Egypt will be the first effect of the measure. The treaty shall be the first clause of a peace, which is become necessary to the nations of the west. The principles according to which we have governed Egypt are sufficiently known to you. We have maintained and respected your religion your laws, your customs, and the enjoyment of your property. We do not leave among you the remembrance of any violence. It was to you that the interests of the inhabitants were particularly entrusted. You have been placed between the French and them, that no injury might be done to the ancient usages of the country. To the wisdom of my predecessor have you been indebted for these regulations, and I have been sensible of the necessity of maintaining them. The zeal with which you filled such honorable duties entitled you to the approbation of all just men, and to the special protection of the government which is on the point of succeeding us. The people of Egypt, directed by your counsels, have submitted to the established authority. The concord which has existed between them and us is the object and reward of our labors. I trust that this harmony will be uninterrupted until the complete execution of the treaty. Should unforeseen disorders lead to the breach of it, I would be compelled to surprise them by the force of arms.

ARMY OF ITALY.

Telegraphic Dispatch.

Albenga, 20th Germinal, April 10.

"The Commander in Chief to General Martilliere, commanding the 7th Division.

"Cause all the troops coming from France to file off by forced marches towards Albenga."

Of the same date.

"Gen. Souchet, commanding the centre.

"We have taken 2100 prisoners, among whom are gen. Baron de Alpre, and several officers of distinction. The commander in chief continues his success.

"(Signed) SOUCHET."

General Souchet, lieutenant of the general in chief, to general Buonaparte, First Consul of the French Republic.

Head quarters, at Melogna, April 6.

GENERAL,

For ten days the army of Italy has been engaged with the enemy.—Finding myself detached from the army of the commander in chief Massena, and having an opportunity of being able to give you intelligence of the army, I think it my duty to do so directly. On the 16th Germinal, gen. Melas attacked in person the heights of Savona. Lieut. gen. Souchet, who commanded them, withstood, during the whole day, the attack of the enemy on Cadiburna and Montenotte, in order that he might be able to send to the fort of Savona, what was necessary for its defence, and to effect his retreat to Genoa; for at the commencement of the day he could easily perceive that the enemy had such a superiority of forces that he could not hope to overcome them. He threw a garrison of 700 men into the fort of Savona, and in the evening effected his retreat to Albissola; the same day general Moillis was attacked on the Riviere di Levante. He was at first obliged to fall back; but on the 17th general Massena advanced hither in person, beat the Austrians and took from them 2500 prisoners, among whom are gen. Baron d'Alpre.

On the 20th, gen. Massena attacked the enemy at Sotello and Albissola,—The affair continued the whole day, and on the 21st general Massena briskly repulsed the enemy, and took from them a great number of prisoners.

On the 23d, 24th and 25th general Massena had sharp engagements; the result of which was constantly in our favour. He took from the enemy 4500 prisoners, seven standards and six pieces of cannon.

On the 22d, however, I had evacuated the position of St. Jacque, and had advanced to the line of Borgetto. The Madona de la Nava was taken and retaken several times. The Hungarian grenadiers suffered considerably at Melogna, where they were vigorously repulsed—The 17th, and the grenadiers of the 24th distinguished themselves in a particular manner. Observing that the enemy were endeavouring to turn me, I determined to advance to the line of Borgetto.—During this time general Zeblouski completely beat the division of the enemy, which was debouching by Tanaro, and had already arrived at Pieve.—He took 500 prisoners.

On the 19th having received orders from Gen. Massena to attack the enemy, I marched on the 20th. The troops took by assult and the bayonet the tower and the redoubt of Melogna, with 400 prisoners, 12 of whom were officers.—The chief of the battalion of Vedal, belonging to the 34th demi brigade, was the first who rushed into the entrenchments. The colonel of the Austrian regiment of Orange was killed.

The numerous redoubts of Setepani were taken on the 21st. Gen. Compere, with a part of the 7th light infantry, the grenadiers of the 34th and 10th, favoured by a very thick fog, surrounded the enemy, and took 1200 prisoners of the regiment of Hoff, and of the Prince of Orange, among whom are a major and two lieutenant colonels. One standard only fell into our hands, the rest having been concealed among the works.

My loss in these different affairs does not exceed 120 wounded and 30 killed. The loss of the enemy, independently of prisoners, has been much greater.

Among the brave men whom the army has to regret, is Clavet, chief of battalion, of the 10th. General Clausel, who commanded these different expeditions, is entitled to much praise. The 7th light infantry, and their commander Boyer, particularly distinguished themselves.

On the 20th, general Clausel, was engaged the whole day on the small hills in the nighbourhood of Jacques. He took prisoners 150 Hungarian grenadiers. Chevalier, chief du battalion assistant to the adjutant general Solignac, was killed. We fought the whole day of the 22d. Gen. Solignac was wounded.

Gen. Oudmot, chief of the staff, who was the bearer of dispatches from the commander, has just joined me. I am in the heights of the Finale and Melogna. The 104th demi brigade has just arrived. We are going to redouble our efforts for a general and decisive attack.

On the 21st, gen. Souchet attacked and retook the heights of Melogna.—Massena, commander in chief, and lieutenant general Soult, by different manoeuvres, drew the enemy into the valley of Albissola. All who opposed him there were either killed or taken prisoners. Gen. Miollis occupies and commands in Genoa.

On these different days, gen. Massena, in person, took 6000 prisoners, among whom are one general, two colonels, several majors, 200 officers, also seven standards, and 6 pieces of cannon. General Souchet, on his part, took in these different engagements 1800 prisoners and 1 standard. I have arrived here by orders of the commander in chief, to concert with gen. Souchet the movement which is to take place on the 1st of Floreal, April 20.

PARIS, April 5.

The commissioners for carrying on the negociations between the French Republic and the United States of America, held their first sitting on the 3d, and exchanged their powers.

The king of Prussia has required Prince Louis of Wirtemberg to resign the government of Anspach and Baireuth. The cause of this disgrace is not known.

United States.

Extract of a letter from captain Talbot, of the U. S. frigate Constitution; to the Secretary of the Navy, dated May 12, 1800.

"I have now to acquaint you, sir, that I have for some time since been meditating an enterprize against a French armed ship, lying at Port Plate, protected by her own guns, and a fort of three heavy cannon. It was my first intention to have gone in with the Constitution, and to have silenced the fort and ship, which had all her guns on one side, to co-operate with the fort, in defending against any hostile force. But after the best information I could gain, I found it somewhat dangerous to approach the entrance of the harbour with a ship of the draught of water of the Constitution.—Having detained the sloop Sally, which had left Port Plate but a few days before, and which was to have returned there again previous to her sailing for the United States. I conceived this sloop would be a suitable vessel for a dispatch; I therefore manned her at sea, from the Constitution, with about 90 brave seamen and marines; the latter were to be commanded by capt. Carmick and lieut. Amory, when on shore; but the entire command of this detachment I gave to Mr. Hall, my first lieutenant, who entered the harbour of Port Plate yesterday in open day, and approached the fort and ship with his men in the hold of the sloop, except five or six to work her in. They ran along side of the ship, and boarded her sword in hand, without the loss of a man killed or wounded. At the moment the ship was boarded, and agreeably to my plan, capt. Carmick and lieut. Amory landed with the marines, up to their necks in water, and spiked up the cannon in the fort, before the commanding officer in the castle had time to recollect or prepare himself for defence.—Perhaps no enterprize of the same nature was ever better executed; and I feel myself under great obligations to lieut. Hall, capt. Carmick, and lieut. Amory, for their avidity in undertaking to execute this enterprize, and for the handsome manner in which they performed this bold and daring undertaking.

"The prize ship mounts four sixes and two nines; she was formerly the British packet Sandwich, and from the boasting publications at the Cape, and from the declarations of the officers, it appears, that she is the fastest sailor that swims; and that she run three or four years, if I forget not, as a privateer out of France, and with greater success than any other that ever sailed out of their ports.—She is a beautiful copper bottomed ship; her cargo consists principally of sugar and coffee."

BALTIMORE, June 7.

Arrived brig Susan and Polly, Taylor, from Rotterdam 42 days. Lat. 48 long. 18, was boarded by a French privateer of 22 guns and 180 men, which informed that they had orders not to capture any American vessels, and that there was every prospect of an amicable settlement of all differences between France and the United States. She had only been nine days from Bourdeaux.

EXTRAORDINARY.

Extract of a letter from Vermont.

A NEW PROPHET.

"A child of James Walker, born blind, and only five years of age, is visited by crowds of people for his great sagacity and foresight. He foretold the coming, and the continuation of the yellow fever at New York and Philadelphia last season, and also the present scarcity of bread in Europe.

He says that before the year 1808, the jacobins are to swarm in this country, to overthrow our present government and to put to death all the clergy and the religious of both sexes. That having effected this revolution, they will then fall out for the supremacy, and finally destroy each other with the sword; after which the present government will again be restored, and the country flourish for one hundred years &c. &c."

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, July 12.

TO THE PUBLIC.

THE subscriber having seen his name in several of the Gazettes, in this place, as a CANDIDATE for the County of York, and having never determined or declared his intentions on that head till the present instant, and as the ensuing Election will soon arrive takes this opportunity to communicate his intentions to his Friends, and begs leave to dispense with the honor they appear so ready and willing to confer upon him, by offering him as their Representative; and at the same time, assures them, it is with the greatest regret he finds it inconvenient to accept their very kind offer.

TO THE FREEHOLDERS
Of the Counties of Durham, Simcoe
And Eaſt Riding of the County of York.

WHEREAS his Majeſty's Royal Proclamation hath been iſſued for the purpoſe of calling together a Legiſlative Council and Houſe of Aſſembly for the Province of UPPER-CANADA; and whereas, by a certain Act of this Province, paſſed in the fortieth year of his ſaid Majeſty's reign, intituled, "An Act for the more equal Repreſentation of the Commons of this Province in Parliament, and for the better defining the Qualification of Electors," it is declared and appointed, That the Counties of Durham, Simcoe, and Eaſt Riding of the County of York, ſhall and may be repreſented in the ſaid Houſe of Aſſembly by one Member; and whereas by a certain Inſtrument under the Sign Manual, and ſealed with the Seal of his Excellency PETER HUNTER, Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c. I have been nominated and appointed Returning Officer of the Counties of Durham, Simcoe, and Eaſt Riding of the County of York; and whereas by a certain WRIT, under the Great Seal of Upper Canada, by me received, I am thereby directed to cauſe one KNIGHT girt with a Sword, the moſt fit and diſcreet, to be freely and indifferently choſen, to Repreſent the ſaid Counties in Aſſembly, by thoſe who ſhall be preſent at the day of Election.

NOW KNOW YE, that by virtue of the ſaid nomination and appointment, and in obedience to his Majeſty's ſaid Writ, I ſhall attend on the Twenty-fourth Day of July, inſtant, at Ten o'Clock in the Forenoon, at the Huſtings, under the Colonnade of the Government Buildings, in the Town of York, and proceed to the Election of one Knight to Repreſent the ſaid Counties in the ſaid Houſe of Aſſembly, and hereof all Freeholders of the ſaid Counties and Riding, are to take notice, and attend accordingly.

WILLIAM CHEWET,
Returning Officer for the Counties of Durham, Simcoe, and the Eaſt Riding of the County of York.

York, 12th July, 1800.

TO THE Free and Independent ELECTORS of the Counties of Durham, Simcoe,
and the Eaſt Riding of the County of York,

Gentlemen,

BEING fully ſenſible, as I am perſuaded you have been for theſe ſix months paſt, of my Intention to become a CANDIDATE for your Suffrages at the enſuing Election; yet conceiving, from the various REPORTS which have been circulated with much indecent confidence, (and which reports have been founded in falſehood,) it may be underſtood that I have relinquiſhed my former intention:—I think it a duty which I owe to my fellow-ſubjects to ſtate explicitly, that it is now, as it ever has been, fully my intention to Offer myſelf a Candidate at the approaching Election; it is true I have not ſolicited the ſuffrages of my fellow ſubjects from door to door. Such conduct, I am confident, you would think ill became a man who, ardently wiſhes, ſhortly to be in the character of your Repreſentative. I have not been urgent in the purſuit of ſo diſtinguiſhed a preference, deeming it the moſt conſtitutional way for you to exerciſe your own diſcretion and judgment in the Choice of a perſon to repreſent you in the next Provincial Parliament. Such are my ſentiments, and ſhould I be ſo far honored as to be placed in that ſituation by your votes, reſt aſſured, the object of my ambition would be to prove myſelf to have been deſerving of your choice.

I am, gentlemen,
Your moſt devoted,
And moſt humble Servant,
WM. JARVIS.

Foreign News.

From the London Gazette Extraordinary.

Downing-ſtreet, April 28.

A Diſpatch of which the following is an extract, has been received from the right hon. Lord Minto, his Majeſty's envoy extraordinary and miniſter plenipotentiary at Vienna, by the right hon. Lord Grenville, his Majeſty's ſecretary of ſtate for the foreign department.

Vienna, April 17, 1800.

MY LORD,

I have the ſatisfaction to acquaint your lordſhip that the campaign has opened in Italy, by an important ſucceſs on the ſide of the Auſtrians. On the 6th inſt. gen. Melas attacked the ſeveral poſts occupied by the French to the northward and weſtward of Savona and Vada, and drove them from the poſitions of Torre de la Buona, Monte Notte, and ſeveral others; ſome of theſe poſts were ſtrongly entrenched, and one of them defended by 3000 men; but they were carried by the courage and conduct of the Auſtrian troops, who appear to have acquired much honor on this day.

The enemy retired with precipitation to Vado and Savona, leaving their cannon and about 300 priſoners, among which is a chief de brigade, and ſeveral officers of diſtinction. In the night between the 6th and 7th, the troops evacuated Vado, having deſtroyed the ſtores and ſpiked the cannon and retired by ſea towards Nice. Their number is ſuppoſed to have been between 7 and 800.

The Auſtrians took poſſeſſion of the fort of Vado in the morning, and found 17 pieces of heavy cannon. Gen. Melas immediately inveſted Savona.

End of the London Gazette Extraordinary.

French Account of the above tranſaction.

ARMY OF ITALY.

Nice. April 10.

On the 6th general Melas, at the head of 18,000 men, attacked in perſon the Bochetta, but was repulſed with conſiderable loſs. On the ſame day 12,000 Auſtrians marched by way of the Bormida, and took poſſeſſion of Montelezo, Savona and Vado. The French troops retreated into the citadel of Savona.

Gen. Maſſena on the 8th advanced againſt Piſtarello and Montenotte, and cut off the diviſion of the enemy which was at Savona, making 2,700 priſoners, among whom was the general Zubi. He purſued the enemy in their flight.

Nice is no longer in a ſtate of ſiege, and the government of the police has paſſed from the military to the civil authorities. The prefect of the department is not arrived.—The 68th demi-brigade, which was there in garriſon, has been ordered to Port Maurice; it has been replaced by Polish troops.—From the Official Journal.

Bruſſels, April 27.

At this moment a courier is paſſing in great haſte, on his way from Paris to Berlin with diſpatches, ſuppoſed to be important.

Letters from Paris which may be conſidered as authentic, ſpeak in the following manner:—It is certain that negociations between government and the emperor of Germany are purſued with activity. Belgium is the only obſtacle to peace. England and Auſtria are ſo determined upon that point, that it is thought they will not recede from it.

ARMY OF THE RHINE.

Letters from Straſburg, under date of the 25th of April, contain the following intelligence:

"The armies have been engaged ſince ſix o'clock in the morning. It is now nine, and the advantage begins to be apparently on our ſide.—The attack was made by our centre."

It is ſtated in letters from Hamburgh that the emperor Paul has publicly announced, that he has withdrawn from the coalition.

It is certain that none of the ſeries of overtures which Buonaparte has made for effecting a peace with the cabinet of Vienna have proved ſatisfactory; that the reſtitution of the ten provinces of the Auſtrian Netherlands, ſo violently incorporated with the French republic, is as ſtrenuouſly demanded by the allied powers, as it was before the negociation at Liſle. Upon this point we are aſſured the courts of London and Vienna are immoveable, ſo that the liberation of Brabant and Flanders is once more become the ſine que non of the peace.—Without it, indeed, it is clear that no peace, which could have the effects of peace, or deſerve the name of it, can be concluded in Europe.

LONDON, April 30.

The king of Pruſſia, it is reported, is now forming a league in the north of Germany, the object of which is to place obſtacles in the way of the aggrandizement of his neighbours. It is ſaid, that one of the firſt ſucceſſes obtained by it, was the recall of the Ruſſian forces from the theatre of the continental war.

May 1.

The capture of the two Spaniſh frigates, with eleven of their convoy, as ſtated in yeſterday's Albion, is as important as it is valued. This flotilla was bound from Cadiz to Lima, and the frigates had fifteen hundred quintals of quick ſilver on board, for the uſe of the mines in South America. The loſs muſt be moſt ſeriouſly diſtreſſing to the Spaniſh government, as the mines cannot be worked without a regular ſupply of this article. The value of this capture is moſt probably under-rated at 700,000l. Three of the merchantmen and one frigate only eſcaped, but as the Swiftſure, capt. Hollowell, was left in chaſe of them, there is every probability that they will be brought to join their conſorts in the bay of Gibraltar. The Britiſh ſhips which made the capture, were the Leviathan, of 74 guns, capt. Carpenter, and the Emerald frigate, captain Waller, both under the command of rear admiral Duckworth; capt. Carpenter is brother to the reſpectable ſolicitor of that name, lately of King's Arms Yard, and the good fortune, it is allowed, could not have occurred to a more meritorious officer.

The following is an extract of a letter, received yeſterday from Leghorn.

"It is known that two hundred and ſix men belonging to the Queen Charlotte were ſaved. Many of the ſailors, who had endeavoured to extinguiſh the fire, were burnt to death. Several of theſe unfortunate men threw themſelves into the fire in deſpair; others put an end to their lives with piſtols & ſwords. Of twelve women who were on board, five ſupported themſelves for four hours on a piece of wood, but no one coming to their aſſiſtance, they ſunk. A non-commiſſioned officer, who ſaw there was no poſſibility of ſaving his wife, ſnatched his child out of her arms, and with it plunged in deſpair into the ſea; for two hours he ſupported himſelf on a piece of wood with one of his arms, and held the child all that time above water with the other; at laſt, when his ſtrength had entirely failed him, he was ſaved by a boat; but the child died in the ſpace of two hours. Captain Todd, who never for a moment loſt ſight of his duty, killed himſelf by a piſtol ſhot. Out of 30 officers only ſix were ſaved. The powder-room, in which were 916 caſes, was not blown up, as at the commencement of the fire it was filled with water."

WE received this morning, by expreſs, the Paris Journals of the 29th ult. In the Journal des Debates we find an official article, dated Florence, April 12. This contains the important intelligence that the paſs of Bochetta, termed the key of Genoa, and which has hitherto been deemed impregnable, has been taken by the Auſtrians under count Hohenzollern, on the 9th ult. by aſſault. They had to force no leſs than ſix lines of entrenchments, which they did, in ſpite of the moſt obſtinate reſiſtance. The French army under gen. Maſſena, is by this achievment completely enveloped, and preſſed in every direction. On the north there is now no ſtrong place to impede the advances of count Hohenzollern—on the eaſt is general Ott's diviſion, aided by the inſurgents of the Fontana Buona; on the weſt by general Melas, on the heights of Savona, with an army conſiſting originally of 40,000 men; and to the ſouth, in the gulf of Genoa, is the ſquadron of lord Keith, who according to letters from Leghorn of the 4th ult. ſailed from thence on board the Audacious, of 74 guns, for the expreſs purpoſe of co-operating with the movements of the Auſtrians in the Genoeſe territory.—The army of Maſſena, which is thus hemmed in on every ſide, is ſaid to conſiſt of about 15000 men. If the deſperate attempt, which the French generals promiſed for the 21ſt ult. ſhould not ſucceed, and its ſucceſs is beyond probability, there can be little doubt but that the whole of this army will be compelled to a ſpeedy ſurrender.

In the official account mentioned, it is ſaid that gen. Melas "had entered in part into Savona."—By this we preſume is meant that he was maſter of ſo much of the place as was not under the immediate fire of the citadel.

Letters from Straſburg of the 25th ſay, "that the army of the Rhine was then actually engaged; that the action commenced at ſix o'clock in the morning, and at nine o'clock the advantage began to turn on the ſide of the French." This intelligence, thus circumſtantially given, we totally diſbelieve. If any action had taken place on the Rhine near Kehl on the 25th, it is not poſſible that the reſult ſhould be unknown at Paris on the 28th, particularly as there is a telegraphic communication between the capital and Straſburg. Our readers will recollect alſo that the ſame intelligence was given in the Paris papers of the 27th, and nearly in the ſame terms. In theſe caſes we can only ſuppoſe the fact to be, that a partial cannonade has been interpreted at ſome diſtance into a general action.

Died lately, at Woolwich in England, Mr. Bartlett, a ſuperannuated carpenter of the navy; though in perfect health, he confined himſelf to his room, for 23 years; he wore nothing during this period but a morning gown, he did not make uſe of either fire or candle, never read or amuſed himſelf in any manner, and would ſuffer no perſon to ſee him except his relations where he lived; neither his hair or nails were cut, or his face ſhaved, for the above time; before he died his hair reached the floor, and was ſo matted together, from not being combed, that it was as hard and as firm as a board; his nails were about one inch longer than his fingers, curved like a parrot's bill.

On Monday ſe'nnight one Richard Dart, a grocer in St. James' ſtreet, Portſea, was found murdered behind his counter. On examining him, two wounds were diſcovered at the back of his head, and the ſkull much fractured. From the form of the wounds it is ſuppoſed he was murdered by his own ſugar hatchet, by ſome perſons who had either found an opportunity of ſecreting themſelves in the evening, or had broke into his houſe during night. As he had no inmates in his houſe or intercourſe with any perſons, except his uncle, who had acceſs to his ſhop, his relative was taken on ſuſpicion into cuſtody, and on being examined by the coroner' inqueſt, ſuch circumſtances appeared as to cauſe him to be committed to Winchester gaol for trial.—The verdict of the jury was: "wilful murder againſt ſome perſon or perſons unknown."

The above unfortunate perſon was a remarkable character. He was generally known by the name of Dicky Dart, the Wooden Grocer. He derived this title from his having apparently a very large ſtock of ſugar, which, however, was well known to be nothing but blocks of wood, covered with paper and candied. His habits were thoſe of penury and ſullen ſeclusion from all ſocial intercourſe. Although poſſeſſed of property to the amount of 3000l. in deeds, money, ſtock, &c. He was ſo miſerably avaricious as to deny himſelf the common ſuſtenance which nature requires, and the cleanlineſs which health and decency indiſpenſibly demand. His bedding was rotted with filth, vermin and negligence. He had two ſhirts, and thoſe in a moſt tattered condition; there were no ſigns of any other linen about himſelf or his dwelling. His dreſs was diſtinguiſhed by his wearing all weathers, five or ſix waiſtcoats, a cloſe coat, and an old threadbare ſpencer. But with all the ſlabbineſs of attire, he had ſome pretenſions to beauiſm; for he conſtantly wore flour as his powder, which he put on with a ſheep's tail inſtead of a puff. He was ſeldom ſeen to eat, and when he was, his food was never known to be meat, or ſcarcely any thing elſe but dried cruſts, biſcuits, raw turnips, radiſhes, and ſuch articles as require little or no cookery.

Being in the habit of taking nocturnal peramulations, he might perhaps have been followed home, and murdered by ſome perſon or perſons too well acquainted with his ſecluded ſituation and conſiderable property. However this may be, we truſt that, as murder is an act of ſuch attrocity as ſeldom ſuffers the perpetrators to remain undiſcovered, thoſe who have been guilty of the above horrid crime will not elude the penetrating eye of juſtice.

NEW YORK, June 25.

One of the diſbanded ſoldiers, rather overcome with fatigue, ſat himſelf down on a butcher's ſtall in the Exchange market, on Saturday laſt, and was enjoying the pleaſures of a ſound nap. A gentleman who was paſſing at the time, fixing his eye upon the ſoldier, jocoſely aſked the butcher at the next ſtall, how he ſold live meat? The butcher replied, that he would ſell cheap, as meat, without quarters, would not bear a good price.

We underſtand that the St. Albans, a Britiſh 64 gun ſhip, arrived at the watering place, captured a few days ago a Daniſh ſhip from Philadelphia, and a brig which ſailed from Salem on the 7th inſt. her name and deſtination unknown to us. The latter was taken on the 9th (two days after ſailing) and both were ſent to Halifax for adjudication.

On the 18th April the ſoldiers in the garriſon of Newfoundland commenced an inſurrection; they were ſoon quelled; on the 5th May five were hanged, and on the Tueſday following ſeven were to be ſhot.

From the Farmer's Muſeum.

An article, extracted from a Paris paper, and lately publiſhed in the Aurora, contains the following ſentiment. The production is ſaid to have the Abbe Sieyes for its author. After enumerating a liſt of fallacious charges againſt the miniſtry of Great Britain, for protracting the preſent war, he addreſſes Lord Grenville in this truly ridiculous language: "Liſten, my lord, to the threats that are echoed from the popular taverns of the metropolis, where the only reſemblance of virtue and liberty in Britain is now to be found!" This is a very pretty picture of Engliſh freedom, and is probably of that kind moſt congenial to the ideas of the Abbe and his co conſuls. He who would ſeek in theſe ſcenes of "riot and miſrule," for the principles of true liberty, acts conſiſtently, when he procures from a bagnio a chaſte female, to be expoſed as the Goddeſs of Reaſon, to the heathenith and puerile adoration of three millions of French rabble.

On the ſubject of the late ſcarcity of grain in England, among the other ſubſtitutes for the ſtaff of life, Lord Hawkeſbury, in the Britiſh Houſe of Commons mentioned a cuſtom which prevailed in Scotland, of eating herrings inſtead of bread, and that it was found to be a very wholeſome food. A Caledonian journaliſt ſomewhat angrily recommends to his lordſhip, when he eats his next beef ſteak, to try a herring with it in lieu of a biſcuit.

Iriſh Eloquence.

In the debate on the leather tax, in the Iriſh houſe of commons, the chancellor of the exchequer, (Sir John Parnell) obſerved, with great emphaſis, "that in the proſecution of the preſent war, every man ought to give his laſt guinea to protect the REMAINDER." Mr. Vandeleur ſaid, that however that might be, the tax on leather would ſeverely felt by the bare footed peaſantry of Ireland. To which Sir Boyle Roach replied, that this could be eaſily remedied, by making the under-leathers of wood.

THE RAT.

"The lion ſhall lay down with the lamb, and Nations learn war no more."

A few weeks ſince, a Mr. Shortridge, of this town, found a neſt of young rats, four of which were milk white, the others of the common colour. Two of the white ones are now kept in a cage, they very much reſemble the weſel, their eyes are of the garnet red, but whether this be owing to diſeaſe, from their unnatural ſituation and aliment, I cannot ſay—they are now nearly half grown, very ſprightly and really beautiful.

One from the ſame neſt, but of the common colour, was given to a cat with young kittens, ſhe took it up very carefully in her mouth and carried it into her box; the young rat allured to the breaſt by the ſcent of the milk, partook of nouriſhment from its natural enemy the cat, whoſe ferocious heart, melted by the innocent, helpleſs orphan, foſters it as one of her natural offspring. She now takes the utmoſt care of it, waſhing, playing with, and ſuckling it as one of her kittens, the rat acknowledges her and flees to her for refuge and protection—when taken from the box ſhe follows, takes it up in her mouth, carrying it in again.—The young rat and kittens play together in the greateſt harmony, ſhewing no inimical diſpoſition, though they ſometimes quarrel for their birth-right—the young rat ſets on your hand, waſhes itſelf, and adjuſts its hair with the utmoſt familiarity.—But ſtill it is the rat, he looks and peeps about for ſmall holes and crevices in which he is very fond of ſkulking.

LEGAL ADVICE.

Some years ſince, one of the ſons of Mr. G—, a well known Jew, being on the point of marrying a fair Chriſtian, the father, who had no objection to the religion, but to the ſmallneſs of the fortune, expatiated with his ſon on the abſurdity of his conduct; but the ſon, vindicating his choice, replied, "whether you conſent or not, I will marry the lady; and if you refuſe to give me a proper ſhare of fortune, I will turn Chriſtian, claim the benefit of the law, and obtain half your property!" At this menace, G— being greatly confounded, reſolved to conſult counſel on the legality of the doctrine.

The counſellor replied, that his ſon, by turning Chriſtian, would indeed obtain half his eſtate.—"But if you will make me a preſent of ten guineas, the graceleſs dog ſhall never obtain a farthing." At this, G—'s hopes revived; and inſtantly putting ten guineas into the hand of the lawyer, expreſſed his anxiety to know in what manner he was to proceed. The counſellor replied with a ſmile, "you have nothing to do Mr. G—, but to turn Chriſtian yourſelf!"

The Emperor Charles V. having one day loſt himſelf in the heat of a chaſe, and wandered in the foreſt far from his train, after much fatigue in trying to find a road, came at laſt to a ſolitary hedge public houſe, where he entered to refreſh himſelf. On going in, he ſaw four men, whoſe mein preſaged him no good; he however ſat down and called for ſomething. Theſe men pretending to ſleep, one of them roſe and approaching the Emperor, ſaid, he had dreamed that he took off his hat, and accordingly took it off. The ſecond ſaying he had dreamed that he had taken his coat, took that. The third, with a little prolcgue, took his waiſtcoat. And the fourth, with much politeneſs, ſaid, he hoped there could be no objection to his feeling his pockets, and ſeeing a chain of gold about his neck, whence hung his horn, was about to take that too, but the Emperor ſaid, "Stop my friend, I dare ſay you cannot blow it, I will teach you;" ſo putting his horn to his mouth, he blew repeatedly & very loud; his attendants heard the ſound, and entering the cottage were ſurpriſed to ſee him in ſuch a garb.—

"Here are fellows," said the Emperor, "who have dreamed what they please. I muſt alſo dream in my turn!" ſitting down and ſhutting his eyes a while, he then ſtarted up, and ſaying, I have dreamed that I ſaw four thieves hanged, and immediately ordered his dream to be fulfilled, the maſter of the inn being compelled to be the executioner.

A man paſſionately fond of wreſtling, could not, however, ſucceed in that exerciſe at the public games, but was overcome, diſgraced and thrown. After ſome time he took it into his head to ſtudy and practice phyſic—being aſked his motives for chooſing that profeſſion, he anſwered I am determined to bring them to the ground one way or the other,

A French nobleman one day viſiting a late famous duke, a favourite little dog bit his lordſhip's leg: "fear nothing my lord," ſaid the duke, "my dog never bites!" On which his lordſhip inſtantly knocking down the little animal with a violent blow of his cane, replied, in the ſame tone of voice, fear nothing my lord, I never beat dogs.

A paſſenger going to Peru, a great ſtorm aroſe, and the maſter of the veſſel ordered that the moſt burthenſome articles that every one had, ſhould be thrown into the ſea, to lighten the veſſel; upon which the paſſenger ran and brought up his wife, ſaying, that ſhe was the moſt burthenſome article he had.

Two rakiſh chaps riding paſt a field, obſerved an old man employed in ſowing it. "That's right, old daddy," bawled one of them, "you ſow, and we reap the fruit of your labours." "Very like," replied the old man, "for I am ſowing hemp."

When Dr. Shebbeare ſtood in the pillory in London for writing a libel, the weather proved rainy, a porter was employed to hold an umbrella over him. The man afterwards applied for pay, and was preſented with a ſhilling. This ſum he thought inadequate, and plead for more. The doctor obſerved, "if you ſtood but one hour, ſir, and ſurely I have paid you enough." "'Tis enough for the work, I grant," replied the porter, "but for Heaven's ſake, your honor, conſider the diſgrace of being expoſed in company with you. I find, d'ye ſee, that one half the ſtaring multitude took me for a rogue as well as your honor, and by all that's honeſt, I would not go through the ſame again to be made a juſtice of the quorum." Shebbeare pauſed a moment, took back the ſhilling and gave him a guinea.

ELEPHANTINE OX.

To be ſeen at the circus, Philadelphia.

IT is the largeſt OX ever exhibitted in America; raiſed in Morris county, New Jerſey, by Mr. Fiſh, and purchaſed by mr. Holdridge. It meaſures 17 feet 3 inches from the noſe to the tail, excluſive of the bruih, 6 feet 2 inches and 1-4 high, and the girth 9 feet 3 inches and 1-2. It is larger than the noted Blackwell ox, which was killed at Darlington in 1799, and which is ſaid to be the largeſt ox ſeen in England before that period.

This animal was meaſured by Mr. Peale proprietor of the muſeum, and weighed at the ſcales in Philadelphia, weight, 2,996lb.

LATEST.

[By an arrival at BALTIMORE.]

From the Baltimore Telegraphe, June 24.

ARRIVED laſt night at 12 o'clock, the ſnow Ranger, capt. Gardner, from Briſtol.—The Ranger left Briſtol the 4th of May.

By this veſſel we have received The Albion, a London paper, of the third of May, and The Briſtol Journal of the ſame date. The contents of theſe papers being of an intereſting nature, and ſome time having elapſed ſince advices were received from Europe, we have thought it our duty to lay their contents immediately before the public.

By the diſpatch of Lord Minto, Britiſh miniſter plenipotentiary at Vienna, it will be found that the Auſtrian general Melas, on the 6th April, attacked the poſts occupied by the French troops in advance from Genoa, and took poſſeſſion of Vado, a town about three miles weſt of Savona, both of which were under the Genoeſe juriſdiction; of the latter place, however, the French ſtill hold poſſeſſion, and ſo far ſtop the progreſs of their enemy. By this atchievment, the Auſtrians divided the French army by cutting off the diviſion commanded by Souchet from that of the commander in chief, leaving Souchet between themſelves and France, and their army in a central poſition between Maſſena and Souchet—It will be ſeen under the date of the firſt of May that Maſſena was ſenſible of his ſituation and had reſolved to recover his loſt ground by regaining the heights of Savona, and altho' the eventual reſult is not mentioned, yet it appears that it was attended with ſome ſucceſs; for on the 7th of April, the Auſtrians took poſſeſſion of Vado, and on the 9th and 10th, Maſſena ordered Souchet to attack the enemy on his ſide, while himſelf at the ſame moment began the attack from the other Souchet retook Melogno, and was engaged ſmartly on the 11th and 12th.

Theſe are the engagements, an account of which came to hand by the laſt arrival at New York, in which it was ſtated the French had gained ſuch advantages; ſo that from their different ſtatements, there can be no aſcertaining the truth; each account will have its believers and unbelievers. One thing, however, will be almoſt certain, that in the end, Genoa will either fall into the hands of the Auſtrians, or the French army will prove completely victorious. From the ſituation of the army of Melas the latter appears moſt probable.

In theſe papers we have copious details of debates on the ſubject of Union, as late as the 2d of May, which will be publiſhed as ſoon as poſſible. Several inſurrections had occurred in England in conſequence of the ſcarcity of proviſions, in one of which ſeveral perſons were killed and wounded by the military, who were called in to quell the riot.

Napper Tandy was to be tried in Dublin on the 5th of May. The new Pope has entered on his functions at Venice, and the Papal Court has been opened at Rome.

Foreign News.

PARIS, April 29.

There is reaſon to believe that the Conſuls paſſed a decree yeſterday, ordering about 300 new eraſures from the Emigrant liſt.

The Conſervative Senate has appointed the following perſons to the three vacant places in the Tribunate, viz. Simeon, Perrein, Profeſſor of Legiſlation, and Felix Beaujour, formerly Conſul at Salonica.

The army of reſerve, on the 19th of April, was 45,000 ſtrong. The different reinforcements it has received during the laſt 8 days muſt make it now amount to 70,000 men at leaſt.

Paul I. not only recals his troops from England, but even thoſe which remain in Italy and at Malta.

According to letters from Leghorn, dated April 4, Lord Keith ſailed on the day before on board the Audacious, for the Gulf of Genoa. The Engliſh ſquadron is to co-operate with the Auſtrians in their operations againſt Laguira.

FRENCH REPUBLIC.

COUNCIL OF STATE.

8 Floreal—April 28.

The conſul Cambaceres preſided in this ſitting.

After different deliberations on queſtions of finance, on the propoſition of the miniſter of the marine, and on the report of the ſection, the council was engaged in diſcuſſing the meaſures neceſſary to be adopted on the return of the army of the Eaſt to France, in order to prevent any alarm on the ground of health.

The plan of a decree was diſcuſſed and adopted, purporting that the army of the Eaſt ſhould be landed at the Iſles of Hieres, and there perform quarantine. An extraordinary commiſſion will provide for the wants of the army, and ſecure the performance of thoſe regulations which public health may require. The inhabitants of the Iſles of Hieres, are to be indemnified. The decree is to be preſented to the Firſt Conſul for his approbation.

ARMY OF THE WEST.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head quarters at Angers, April 26.

The General in Chief thanks all the corps of the army for the good diſpoſition they have diſplayed while under his command. Their perfect ſubmiſſion to the laws of diſcipline, and the celerity of their movements, are proofs of the courage they would have teſtified had the war broken out. But it was French blood that would have flowed. A fortunate pacification has, however, given us brothers, where we expected to have found enemies, and the moſt flattering eulogium the government can beſtow on the army is the arrete which replaces under the empire of the conſtitution, thoſe departments which were for a moment withdrawn from it.

Governed by the ordinary laws of the republic, protected by a wiſe and powerful government, the departments of the Weſt will forget the evils cauſed by long diſſentions, and will ſoon return to that proſperity for which nature has deſtined them.

The army is acquainted that the Firſt Conſul has appointed Gen. Bernadotte Counſellor of State, to the chief command.

The general in chief, on his departure, leaves the command, ad interim, with Lieut. Gen. Hedouville.

The preſent order ſhall be read at the head of every company. It ſhall alſo be printed and fixed up in all the places and cantonments which depend on the army.

The cauſe of the diſpleaſure of the Emperor Paul is ſaid to have ariſen originally from the refuſal of allowing him to take poſſeſſion of Malta.

Captain Sir Edward Hamilton, of the Surpriſe frigate, who cut out the Hermione frigate from Port Cavallo, in the Weſt Indies, having on his paſſage home been taken by the French, is returned to England on his parole of honor, and yeſterday attended at the admiralty. He ſtates, that the Chief Conſul had actually departed for Dijon, in conſequence, probably, of the account of the diſaſter of the French arms in the beginning of the Campaign.

That affair has excited very ſtrong ſenſations at Paris, where the firſt rumour magnified their loſs to 15,000 men.

The French conſulate have paſſed a decree reſpecting the organization of the marine, by which the maritime power of France is divided into ſix diſtricts, the chief towns of which are, Havre, Breſt, L'Orient, Rochfort and Toulon. A particular regulation will determine the chief town of the fifth diſtrict, and which include the ports and coaſt of the channel, from the frontiers of the Batavian republic to Dunkirk inclusive. In each diſtrict there will reſide a maritime preſect.

Orders are ſent to the Mediterranean for commodore Trowbridge's immediate return to England, being appointed captain of the channel fleet, in the room of rear admiral Pole, who is to command on the Newfoundland ſtation.

The Ruſſian ſhips at Sheerneſs and Chatham, it is ſaid, are under orders to return to Ruſſia as ſoon as poſſible.

An encampment of 30,000 men is immediately to be formed at Southampton, and the troops that are to compoſe it are ſuppoſed to be deſtined upon another ſecret expedition.

The Moniteur of that date contains the relation of the late battels in Italy, officially tranſmitted to the Chief Conſul by the generals Suchet and Oudinot from their reſpective head quarters at Melogno and Pietra.

Seldom have official details been ſo artfully confuſed, and ſo well calculated to impreſs an opinion, the reverſe of the true ſtate of facts, which can be made out with aſſiſtance of a map, and the former accounts. Upon a haſty peruſal, we find there has been a ſucceſſion of engagements from the 6th to the 15th inclusive, in all of which the French have had the advantage, making 2000 priſoners.

But theſe letters ſo flattering to the French, take no notice of the fall of Vado, nor do they acknowledge that Maſſena, and the greateſt part of his army, are cut off from France, except by ſea. Souchet, indeed, finds himſelf "detached" from Maſſena and more at hand to ſend accounts to Paris; that is, he is cut off from Maſſena, and between the Auſtrians and France, while the Auſtrians are between Maſſena and France. It is not owned that Savona is beſieged, but aſſurances are given that Savona and Gavi "are provithoned." Why are we not alſo informed that Genoa and other forts are proviſioned? Becauſe they are in immediate danger. Maſſena, we are told, attacked the Auſtrians at Salello and Abiſſola on the 10th: the action laſted the whole day, and on the 11th he drove back his enemy. May 1.

Yeſterday were received by expreſs, Paris Journals to the 27th ult. inclusive.

The Moniteur of that date contains the relation of the late battels in Italy, officially tranſmitted to the Chief Conſul by the generals Suchet and Oudinot from their reſpective head quarters at Melugno and Pietra.

Seldom have official details been ſo artfully confuſed, and ſo well calculated to impreſs an opinion, the reverſe of the true ſtate of facts, which can be made out with aſſiſtance of a map, and the former accounts. Upon a haſty peruſal, we find there has been a ſucceſſion of engagements from the 6th to the 15th inclusive, in all of which the French have had the advantage, making 2000 priſoners.

But theſe letters ſo flattering to the French, take no notice of the fall of Vado, nor do they acknowledge that Maſſena, and the greateſt part of his army, are cut off from France, except by ſea. Souchet, indeed, finds himſelf "detached" from Maſſena and more at hand to ſend accounts to Paris; that is, he is cut off from Maſſena, and between the Auſtrians and France, while the Auſtrians are between Maſſena and France. It is not owned that Savona is beſieged, but aſſurances are given that Savona and Gavi "are provihoned." Why are we not alſo informed that Genoa and other forts are proviſioned? Becauſe they are in immediate danger. Maſſena, we are told, attacked the Auſtrians at Saſello and Abiſſola on the 10th: the action laſted the whole day, and on the 11th he drove back his enemy. On the 10th he muſt have been repulſed and purſued, or how could he drive back the enemy on the 11th? As he made the attack, he could not drive back his opponents without having been repulſed, ſince to drive back ſuppoſes a previous preſſure.

On the 13th, 14th, and 15th, warm actions took place; all of which, according to Souchet's letter, terminated in favour of the French. This is falſe.—The obvious object of thoſe actions was to expel the Auſtrians from the heights of Savona, and to re-open the communication between Genoa and France. In this object Maſſena failed. Souchet is ſtill more anxious to conceal his own misfortunes than thoſe of Maſſena. He never retreats but after a victory. He repulſed the Hungarian grenadiers with great loſs from Melogno, but he does not ſay that he loſt the poſt; an event which muſt have taken place, ſince we find him claiming much merit for afterwards taking it. On the 10th, Clauzel, under Souchet, "fought all day" near St. Jacques, but no reſult is mentioned, though the letter is dated the 16th. On the 12th, ſays Souchet, "we fought all day!"—again he conceals the reſult. Would he not have boaſted had it been in his favour?

Stripping theſe letters of mere boaſt, and putting out of conſideration the number of killed, wounded and priſoners on either ſide, the following appears to be a true ſtate of facts: the Auſtrian general Melas attacked the whole French line on the 6th of April; but he made two principal efforts, the one on the eaſt ſide of Genoa, along the ſea coaſt, which failed, the French taking 2,500 men, and baron D'Alpre, priſoners; the other acroſs the mountains, covering Savona, which ſucceeded. This laſt was by far the moſt important, and the former was probably only a diviſion in its favour. No attack was made on the Bochetta, as ſtated in the former French papers. At this time the 6th ult. Maſſena had his head quarters at Genoa; but the command of that city, and its defence in Eaſtern Riviera, were eſpecially entruſted to gen. Miollis. The heights of Savona, and the line of mountains, were defended by ſtrong poſts occupied by two diviſions, the one under general Soult, which ſtretched towards Genoa, and the other commanded by general Souchet, which ſtretched towards France. Theſe diviſions appear to have joined near Monenotte, on the Bormida, and it was by this way that Melas advanced on the 6th, driving in all the poſts, defeating Soult's left wing, and compelling his diviſion to fall back towards the eaſtward, one part to proteſt the Bochetta, and another to garriſon and provide Savona againſt a ſiege, which Soult foreſaw would take place, as he found himſelf unable to reſiſt the progreſs of the Auſtrians. By this combined attack, Maſſena's attention was divided on the 6th; and as he went to the aſſiſtance of Miollis to the eaſtward of Genoa, Melas no doubt found an eaſier paſſage to the ſea coaſt, than he might otherwiſe have experienced. Souchet's diviſion was not engaged till the 7th. He was then driven from St. Jacques, next from Melogna; and laſtly, finding a column of Auſtrians, aſcending the Tanaro, had reached Pieva, and threatened to ſurround him, he fell back weſtward to the line of Borghetto; and the Auſtrians reached the ſea coaſt, taking Vado, inveſting Savona, and cutting off one half of the French army from the other.—Maſſena, appriſed now of his critical ſituation, reſolved on making a vigorous effort to re-eſtabliſh his communication with Souchet and France, by recovering the heights of Savona. For this purpoſe he inſtructed Souchet to attack the Auſtrians on his ſide on the 9th or 10th, while Maſſena attacked them at the ſame time on the other ſide. We find that Souchet re took Melogno, and was fighting briſkly on the eleventh and twelfth.

We find alſo, that on the 10th Maſſena attacked the Auſtrians at Abiſſola on the ſea coaſt, and at Safello on the mountains; but we neither find that he raiſed the ſiege of Savona, nor re-eſtabliſhed his communications with Suchet. Maſſena continued the attack with great vigor on the 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, and 15th: and though we are told of advantages and numbers of priſoners, we can perceive that he failed, the Auſtrian line remaining unbroken. On the 21ſt, another great effort was to be made, which would decide the fate of one of the armies. Maſſena is an excellent general, and may extricate himſelf from his critical ſituation, but his fate is at preſent very doubtful. The Telegraphic order for all the troops on march to move from France to Albenga by forced matches, ſhews the feeling of danger. The report in the former Paris Journals of the retaking of Monenotte, and of the Auſtrians at Savona being cut off, was unfounded. The aſſurance in Oudinot's letter, that Savona is proviſioned, ſufficiently ſhews that the place was beſieged when the laſt accounts came away. Oudinot muſt have gone from Maſſena to Souchet by ſea; he could not paſs it by land unleſs the Auſtrians were ſurrounded, a fact which would have been eagerly announced, if true. What eſſential ſervice might not the Britiſh navy have rendered by blockading Genoa?

All the Paris papers, except the Official Journal, aſſert, that hoſtilities have commenced on the Rhine, and that on the 24th, the armies were engaged in a ſevere battle. Important news from that quarter may now be daily expected.—Buonaparte was in Paris the 26th.

The following preſentations took place yeſterday at the Levee at Saint James's:

Lord Cunningham and General Maſſey, on their arrival from Ireland.

General Simcoe, from the Weſt Indies.

General Sir Ralph Abercrombie, on his return from Scotland.

Col. Wooleſton, and Mr. Ponſonby, on promotion in the Dragoons.

Captain Frederick Irby, ſon of Lord Boſton, on his promotion in the navy.

Mr. Howarth and Mr. Soane, aldermen of the city of Dublin, preſented a petition to his Majeſty from the corporation of Dublin, againſt the Union.

A Heraldry College is to be eſtabliſhed in Ireland, and the Earl of Roſcommon is to be appointed Earl Marſhal.

Tueſday night Mr. Fiſher, principal oboe player to his Majeſty, while performing a ſolo at the Queen's houſe, was ſeized with an apoplectic fit. Prince William of Glouceſter obſerving the unfortunate calamity, ſupported him out of the apartment, from whence he was conveyed to his reſidence in Compton ſtreet, Soho, where he expired in about an hour.

Yeſterday about 12 o'clock, ſix leagues S. W. of the Lizard, the Pandora engaged upwards of three hours a French lugger privateer carrying about 14 guns, and full of men, and beat her off: one of the Pandora's men is much wounded. Since arrival both his arms were cut off.

A letter from Leghorn, by Wedneſday's Mail, dated March 19, ſays that 197 men belonging to the QUEEN CHARLOTTE, had been brought into that port by different veſſels, and they were in hopes that others might have been picked up.

A letter from Leghorn, of the 24th March ſays, "From the hiſtory of the misfortune that befel the Engliſh ſhip of the line, the Queen Charlotte, the following circumſtance demands our moſt particular notice. An Engliſh ſailor ſwam five times from a boat to the burning ſhip, each time carrying off one of the crew on his back. His ſtrength at laſt forſook him, and he regretted that he was not able to ſave more of the unfortunate ſufferers.—On the morning of the 17th inſt. when the Queen Charlotte ſailed, two imperial officers intended to go on board her, but, fortunately, ſhe was diſcovered to be on fire before they were able to reach her. Only the ſmall powder magazine blew up, the larger having been ſet under water before Several young Gentlemen of the firſt Engliſh families were on board the Queen Charlotte, intending to perfect themſelves in the ſervice, who either became victims to the flames or to the waves.

"We have nothing new from Genoa. Notwithſtanding its being blockaded, ſhips laden with proviſions arrive there from time to time.

PARIS, 7 FLOREAL, April 27.

It is ſtated in one of the Paris Journals that Madame Monteſſon, wife of the Duke of Orleans, the mother of the late Egalite, has been acknowledged as ſuch by the French government, and has received the 80,000 francs of rent-charge, of which ſhe has been deprived by the revolution.

Two Engliſh commiſſioners, from the interior of Germany, paſſed Bruſſels on the 21ſt, on their way to Paris. The object of their miſſion is not yet known.

Two veſſels laden with proviſions have entered the port of Malta. The French have abandoned the environs and withdrawn into the forts. It is in a condition to hold out for ſome months longer.

Letter have reached Toulon, announcing the arrival of a frigate, having on board 350 men of the army of Egypt, and an aid-de-camp of gen. Kleber. The veſſel is at preſent performing quarantine. This veſſel is probably Aviſo, which has brought the diſpatches of gen. Kleber.

We hear by recent letters from India that the Government General has it in contemplation to eſtabliſh an effective marine round the Sands Head, and about Balaſore Roads, for the purpoſe of affording protection to the coaſt trade againſt the depredations of the enemy's privateers. Ships of a competent force are to be ſtationed on this ſervice, as well as to cruize in the bay of Bengal.—Similar eſtabliſhments, we learn, are to be adopted on all the other coaſts where the trade is likely to be intercepted.

YARMOUTH, April 30.

Yeſterday ſailed the Diana packet, captain Dean, and the Dolphin packet captain Flyn, with mails, and meſſrs. Neſbitt, Le Brett, Bollman, Nowell, Patterſon, and Molet, paſſengers for Cuxhaven. Arrived an armed brig.

Paſſed through, the Lynx armed ſhip, with a large fleet of merchantmen under convoy.

No Packets yet arrived from Cuxhaven, but are hourly expected.

TORBAY, April 29.

Arrived a large Eaſt and Weſt India fleet, under convoy of the Severn man of war, from Portſmouth.

YORK, Saturday, July 26.

THE poll for the Election of a Member to ſerve in parliament for the Eaſt Riding of the County of York, was cloſed yeſterday, when HENRY ALCOCK, Eſq. was declared to be duly elected.—The election terminated ſooner than was expected, by conſequence of a daring Riot inſtigated by perſons inimical to Peace and good Order, and to the pure exerciſe of that valuable privilege of the ſubject—the elective franchiſe. After the Returning Officer cloſed the poll, conformably to precedents eſtabliſhed in ſuch caſes—he called upon the Magiſtrates to check any further outrage, and by the ſpirited exertions tranquillity was in the courſe of the evening reſtored.

It was matter of much regret to a large majority of thoſe who were ſenſible of the advantages to be derived from the election of a character, diſtinguiſhed for talents and virtue, that they were prevented, (by the acts of the riotous and diſorderly) from enrolling themſelves among the number of the independant electors who ſupported Mr. Alcock—they have, however, in common with the public, to rejoice that the majority of the poll, has ſecured to the country his ſervices, and enabled them to look with confidence, to a faithful and an independant repreſentative.

Agricultural.

From a Philadelphia paper.

An agricultural correſpondent (who has paid much attention to the ſubject) has favored us with the following obſervations on

HARVESTINTG WHEAT.

"WHAT ſtage of ripeneſs is the beſt for cutting wheat, is not aſcertained in America: but enough I have ſeen of cutting early, to be convinced that it is ſuffered to ſtand too long.

"At the time of reaping, — generally have a clear ſky and a peculiarly drying air, which in ſome harveſts ripen wheat very ſuddenly, ſo that the plants from an apparent ſtate of vigor, are killed in a day or two, and receive no further nouriſhment from the root or blade; and even the ſtems become exhauſted of the nouriſhment which they had imbibed, ſo that it could not reach the ear or grain. If with this ſudden heat and drying ſtate of the air, the plants be ſtruck with ruſt, and are ſtill ſuffered to ſtand longer, the grain receiving no more nouriſhment can never fill; but by cutting it inſtantly, and ſetting it ſheltered to cure gradually, the beſt chance is had for obtaining marketable good wheat.

"The reaping corn ten or fourteen days earlier than my neighbours, (ſays Mr. Parkinſon) is an advantage I have attended to. As corn begins to decay firſt at the root, all the nouriſhment it can receive, while ſtanding uncut, after the decay of the root, muſt be derived from the ſtraw. The ears may feed the grain at one time; but when nearly ripe and the root decayed, the ſun and wind have ſo much power as to ripen it too quickly, or ſcorch or dry it before its natural period of maturity."

"Riding on the road about harveſt time, he obſerved a field of wheat that had taken the mildew. The ſtraw was of a remarkably deep green, and inſtead of being dead, appeared to have acquired a great verdue; though after ſuch appearance comes on, it never receives any nouriſhment or grows any larger. Inſtead whereof the ſtraw becomes diſtempered, ſpotted and diſcolored.—The ſooner it is cut the better. He took 12 ears of the wheat, which, and the ſtraw, was green as graſs, and at the ſame time mildewed. A great deal of rain had fallen the forepart of the

...ut the ears of wheat were pretty ... He tied them in a bunch, intending to hang them up in his house to dry and ripen. Several weeks afterwards, having been forgot, he took them out of his great coat pocket; when the straw was found to be ſtill green. The grain was then rubbed out, and to his aſtoniſhment he never ſaw better. It was fine in colour, and well filled; but what remained in the field, from which he took thoſe ears, was very ſmall and of little value.—This is a ſtrong caſe, which ought to make a ſtrong impreſſion on the mind of Farmers. He adds—From hence it would ſeem, that if the Farmer would cut his wheat when it is ſtruck with mildew, and ſet it up in the field in ſmall ſtacks of about a cart load each, ſo as neither to heat nor mould, it would, be better than to let it ſtand, as is the practice, uncut.

"He had at the ſame time taken 12 ears of wheat from an adjoining upper field, which were likewiſe found in the pocket of the great coat. Tho' theſe when gathered, appeared ſo much ſuperior to what had taken the mildew, they did not turn out nearly ſo good as the others. From the above circumſtances, Mr. Parkinſon was ever afterwards partial to cutting wheat when the ſtraw appeared of a reddiſh caſt, or ſome of it green, with the joints full of ſap; and it fulfilled his expectations.—The ſtraw, he adds, is better for chaff; the flour, much fairer and heavier; and for fine flour it will grind into broad bran. But he does not think that if the wheat eſcapes the mildew, it ought to be cut ſo green.

"It is probable that the ſtate of the wheat, as it approaches to ripeneſs in the enſuing ſeaſon, will admit of various inſtructive experiments, to be made by thoſe whom it chiefly concerns; eſpecially they may learn for their future conduct, how far it will bear to be cut unripe or green to advantage.

"Hitherto during the preſent month of May, there has been much cool weather, accompanied with frequent rains.—Such was the May of the the great year of ſcab and ruſt, I think about 1785. The crops of wheat were uncommonly promiſing; but firſt the ruſt, and then (though not till the Farmer expected daily the wheat was about to ripen the ſcab ſtruck it, by which the crops were reduced in quality as well as quantity. What was effected by ſcab, could never be made to yield good flour, but was more or leſs clammy. During the progreſs of the ruſt & ſcab, I examined the roots of many plants, which appeared injured, if not dead, at the ſame time that the ſtalks and blades looked thriving.

"In this ſtate of this, the Farmer may take into conſideration at what time it will be beſt that he ſhould cut down his wheat. For a ſlight degree of ruſt it need not be hurried; but when greatly ruſted in its advanced ſtate of ripening, and when conſiderably ſcabbed, (which never happens but in the moment before it ripens) immediately cut it down, and guard it againſt ſun and wind, ſlightly, left by ſecuring it two cloſe it heat and be entirely ſpoiled. What in wheat is by ſome called ſcab, by others is called empty ears."

United States.

NEW-YORK, July 1.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Richmond (Virg.) to his friend in New-York, dated 18th inſt.

"The great quantity of rain which has fallen here of late, has entirely deſtroyed the crop. The hopes of the farmer were a fortnight ago at their height; but now he contemplates, with mournful looks, his early oat, May wheat lying on the ground, ſhooting up; and the ears of the common ſort of wheat wholly emty, occaſioned by the ruſt. My father-in-law had 30 acres of wheat cut down to ſerve for food to the cattle.—Never was a year more promiſing that has produced ſo little.

"The ſhip Pomona, Meril, arrived at Philadelphia in 56 days from Liverpool, was boarded on the 28th of April by the French privateer Bellona, 9 days out, and informed that there was a peace between France and America.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, Auguſt 2.

FOR THE GAZETTE.

HOWEVER ill-timed it may at preſent appear, when the public mind is in ſome meaſure agitated by the proceedings and reſult of the late election, I cannot refrain from intruding my ſentiments on the ſubject of general elections and their relative and probable conſequences.

As this is a ſubject of which I propoſe a continuation, it may not in this place be an impertinent digreſſion, to ſay—that whatever my ſentiments and opinions may be, they are but thoſe of an individual, detached from, and independent of every faction; yet a warm admirer of civil liberty and proud of being a Britiſh ſubject; one whoſe humble ſtation, and unaſpiring genius, ſhields him from the notice of the one party and ſecures him from being looked up to as the champion of the other; whoſe ſole ambition is to diſcharge faithfully and with ſelf-applauſe, his civil and moral duties, and promote the ſame diſpoſition in his fellow-ſubjects. His obſcure ſituation, muſt leave him unknown to all, and his motives unſuſpected by any—humble in his hopes, ſtill humbler in his pretenſions, he boaſts nothing but copious benevolence, which extends equally to Sovereign and to ſubject.

Many of us, live in the happy and daily experience of the beneficent operation of the beſt of human laws, under the ſtrong and ſecure protection of the beſt of conſtitutions, without knowing how we became in poſſeſſion of theſe laws, or ſufficient knowledge of the conſtitution, to eſtimate its value.

To ſuch, let me in this place ſay, that the laws, of which we boaſt, have progreſſed towards perfection in the ſame order and methods, that the arts have progreſſed. If they could admit of a compariſon with ſenſible objects, it might be ſaid—they were at firſt as a block of marble, which the united art of various ſculptors has faſhioned to the moſt perfect form.

Of our glorious conſtitution, let it ſuffice to inform them, that it is a fabric reared on the ſtruggles of oppreſſed virtue, againſt divided and arbitrary power; the war of mutual right and civil liberty, againſt aſſumed and undefined authority, of improving knowledge againſt the ſhackles of ſavage and barbarous ignorance. It is an edifice cemented with the blood of many patriots, and ſanctified, by the accumulated wiſdom of many ſages.

The melancholy period is recoded, when Europe was enveloped in darkneſs—when ignorance reigned in all its gloomy terrors!! Britain at this time affords an affecting retroſpect a degrading picture of humanity, enchained by ignorance and barbariſm. The cauſes are as obvious, as the conſequences were deplorable—licence was miſtaken for liberty, juriſprudence was nominal—juſtice was undefined, and depraved vindictive will the baneful "rule of right." Let us, however painful the review, look back to the dread effects: We behold the Engliſh loſing their rank amongſt nations—a prey to foreign invaders, and more pernicious inteſtine commotions—bloodſhed and ſlaughter fill the annals of the times; ghaſtly deſolation ſtalked the land—brutal deſtruction was the order of the day! and with brightening knowledge, impartial juſtice, order and every virtue ſeemed —fled.

By what means did they emerge?—By what happy combination recover from this ſtate of barbariſm, weakneſs and ignorance, to be the envy of ſurrounding nations, the guardians of liberty, and the diſpenſers of ſcience to Europe?

Let it be anſwered, and with incontrovertible truth—by ſubmitting to civil order, by placing enlightened men in their councils, by the wiſdom of their legiſlators, and by ſtrengthening the executive ARM.

Now my friends and fellow ſubjects, we univerſally know, that our government gives to all freeholders an approving voice in the nomination of law givers; we alſo know, that ſtill further, to promote our welfare it ſubdivides the community into ſmaller bodies, from which repreſentatives are elected—men known to them—and elected of their free choice. It relies not on the wiſdom of one to legiſlate for too great a number; its paternal care is general, and its faſtering regard is unlimited.

Hence my friends, ſince we all know that national, as well as private greatneſs, is founded on WISDOM, why ſhould we contrary to reaſon, common-ſenſe, conſcience and experience give our VOTES to a perſon who has no pretenſions to wiſdom or knowledge?—To prefer ſuch an one, when men of talents ſtand ready to ſerve their country, would be to prefer a barren deſert, to a fruitful and well cleared field for the purpoſe of agriculture—truly a choice which no man in his ſenſes would make!!!

Once more my friends let me beſeech you, not to proſtitute that voice which Heaven has given you as a RIGHT, and which the conſtitution confirms to you as a PRIVILEDGE:—Elect not a man who neither knows your laws, liberties or intereſts—Send not (to uſe the language of ſcripture) your VIRGINS to the feaſt without oil in their lamps—remember that if your choice is imprudent, the iniquities of the FATHERS may be viſited on the children to many generations!

The character of a good legiſlator has been often defined, it is unneceſſary to enter on the defination here; but it muſt be allowed, that wiſdom and a competent degree of knowledge in him are indiſpenſible; without this, what is integrity in a repreſentative? What can clumſy honeſty, wedded to clumſy ignorance, effect?

What my friends, would the greateſt ſtrength avail in a blind man, oppoſed to a weak though clear-ſighted foe, in battle?—His ſtrength would encumber him; and the integrity ... an ignorant repreſentative ... ſhew itſelf, in troubleſome ſtubbo... neſs, be a fetter on buſineſs, and ... mere luggage to the poſſeſſor. W... attributes do we more admire than ... hon in that preſiding Power who ... WISDOM preſerves the Univerſe ... turning diſorder, ſin more, from in... diſſolution!

Call forth your reaſon my fellow ſu... jects! Break from your minds the ... ters of prejudice, free them from a ... very ſo degrading and ſo hurtful? ... Think on, although a man be mo... learned than yourſelves, he is leſs ... triotic, leſs upright or virtuous. ... gentlemen and friends, learning an... knowledge are the true parts to lead ... to virtue, integrity, rectitude an... truth, with the will to be uſeful to the ... country—ſuch men only, unite th... ability.

ed wisdom of many sages.

The melancholy period is recoded, when Europe was enveloped in darkneſs—when ignorance reigned in all its gloomy terrors ! ! Britain at this time affords an affecting retroſpect a degrading picture of humanity, enchained by ignorance and barbariſm. The cauſes are as obvious, as the conſequences were deplorable—licence was miſtaken for liberty, juriſprudence was nominal —juſtice was undefined, and depraved vindictive will the baneful "rule of right." Let us, however painful the review, look back to the dread effects : We behold the Engliſh loſing their rank amongſt nations—a prey to foreign invaders, and more pernicious inteſtine commotions—bloodſhed and ſlaughter fill the annals of the times ; ghaſtly deſolation ſtalked the land—brutal deſtruction was the order of the day ! and with brightening knowledge, impartial juſtice, order and every virtue ſeemed fled.

By what means did they emerge ?—By what happy combination recover from this ſtate of barbariſm, weakneſs and ignorance, to be the envy of ſurrounding nations, the guardians of liberty, and the diſpenſers of ſcience to Europe ?

Let it be anſwered, and with inconvertible truth—by ſubmitting to civil order, by placing enlightened men in their councils, by the wiſdom of their legiſlators, and by ſtrengthening the executive ARM.

Now my friends and fellow ſubjects, we univerſally know, that our government gives to all freeholders an approving voice in the nomination of law givers ; we alſo know, that ſtill further, to promote our welfare it ſubdivides the community into ſmaller bodies, from which repreſentatives are elected—men known to them—and elected of their free choice. It relies not on the wiſdom of one to legiſlate for too great a number ; its paternal care is general, and its foſtering regard is unlimited.

Hence my friends, ſince we all know that national, as well as private greatneſs, is founded on WISDOM, why ſhould we contrary to reaſon, common-ſenſe, conſcience and experience give their VOTES to a perſon who has no pretenſions to wiſdom or knowledge ?—to prefer ſuch an one, when men of talents ſtand ready to ſerve their country, ſhould be to prefer a barren deſert, to a fruitful and well cleared field for the purpoſe of agriculture—truly a choice which no man in his ſenſes would make ! ! !

Once more my friends let me beſeech you, not to proſtitute that voice which heaven has given you as a RIGHT, and which the conſtitution confirms to you as a PRIVILEDGE :—Elect not a man who neither knows your laws, liberties or intereſts—Send not (to uſe the language of ſcripture) your VIRGINS to a feaſt without oil in their lamps—remember that if your choice is imprudent, the iniquities of the FATHERS may be viſited on the children to many generations !

The character of a good legiſlator has been often defined, it is unneceſſary to enter on the definition here ; but it muſt be allowed, that wiſdom and a competent degree of knowledge in laws are indiſpenſible ; without this, what is integrity in a repreſentative ? what can clumſy honeſty, wedded to ſtupid ignorance, effect ?

What my friends, would the greateſt ſtrength avail in a blind man, oppoſed to a weak though clear-ſighted one in battle ?—His ſtrength would encumber him ; and the integrity of an ignorant repreſentative would ſhew itſelf, in troubleſome ſtubbornneſs, be a fetter on buſineſs, and a mere luggage to the poſſeſſors What attributes do we more admire than wiſdom in that preſiding Power whoſe WISDOM preſerves the Univerſe from jarring diſorder, yea more, from inſtant diſſolution !

Call forth your reaſon my fellow ſubjects ? Break from your minds the fetters of prejudice, free them from a ſlavery ſo degrading and ſo hurtful ?—Think not, although a man be more learned than yourſelves, he is leſs patriotic, leſs upright or virtuous. No gentlemen and friends, learning and knowledge are the true parts to lead us to virtue, integrity, rectitude and truth, with the will to be uſeful to their country—ſuch men only, unite the ability.

When Mr. ALCOCK firſt offered himſelf as a repreſentative for the eaſt riding of this county, it was preſumed, it was fondly anticipated, that the people's ſuffrages would be general in his favor. He whoſe knowledge of the laws of his country, and the value of liberty, advanced him to the dignity of judging—of pronouncing in judicial caſes on the fates of his fellow ſubjects, their lives and properties. Now my friends, when a gracious Sovereign's love could beſtow on us a man inveſted with ſuch large, ſuch diſcretionary and efficient powers—can it be ſuppoſed that he would baſely ſell our liberties ? No. Spurn at the ungenerous thought, avert the baleful idea. Scrutinize his conduct as a judge—it tranſcends all-praiſe. Again, is he not a ſubject, does he enjoy a priviledge which you do not ?—could he make, or conſent to a law, which would not be as binding on him and his poſterity, as on you and on your's. He is a huſband, he is a father ; do you ſuppoſe him to have leſs natural affection than yourſelves ? Shame forbid you ſhould ! Does it reſt with one man to legiſlate for this province ? Would a Britiſh houſe of commons blindly yield to his guidance ? No. Have we not the concentrated wiſdom of a mother country to ſanction or annul laws enacted in this. Can, or will you, entruſt your liberties to a perſon who is a ſtranger to their nature, who wants firmneſs to contend for them, energy to enforce and preſerve them, and knows them not even by name ! ! No, my fellow ſubjects, you cannot be ſo blinded by prejudice, or influenced by perſonal motives. A little examination, a very little calculation indeed, will point out the glaring inconſiſtency—the unhappy and certain effects which would reſult from ſuch a choice. Your liberties are too precious—too ſacred to be thus triſled away !

Legiſlature of Upper-Canada.

AN ACT

PASSED IN THE

Fourth Seſſion

OF THE SECOND

Provincial Parliament

UPPER-CANADA.

An ACT for the further introduction of the Crimina Law of England into this Province, and for the more effectual Puniſhment of certain Offenders.

I. WHEREAS the Criminal Law of England was by an act of the Parliament of Great Britain, paſſed in the fourteenth year of his Majeſty's reign, entitled, "An Act for making more effectual proviſion for the government of the province of Quebec in North America," introduced and eſtabliſhed as the Criminal Law of this Province : And whereas divers amendments and improvements have ſince been made in the ſame by the Mother country, which it is expedient to introduce and adopt in this Province : Be it therefore enacted by the King's moſt excellent Majeſty, by and with the advice and conſent of the Legiſlative Council and Aſſembly of the Province of Upper Canada, conſtituted and aſſembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an act paſſed in the Parliament of Great Britain, entitled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an act paſſed in the fourteenth year of his Majeſty's reign," entitled "An Act for making more effectual proviſion for the government of the province of Quebec in North America, and to make further proviſion for the government of the ſaid province," and by the authority of the ſame, That the Criminal Law of England, as it ſtood on the ſeventeenth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety-two, ſhall be, and the ſame is hereby declared to be the Criminal Law of this Province.

II. Provided nevertheleſs, That nothing herein contained ſhall be taken or conſtrued to vary, repeal, or in any manner to affect any Ordinance of the late Province of Quebec, which may have been made ſince the ſaid fourteenth year of his Majeſty's reign.

III. And whereas the puniſhment of burning in the hand, when any perſon is convicted of felony within the benefit of Clergy, is often diſregarded and inefectual, and ſometimes may fix a laſting mark of diſgrace and infamy on offenders, who might otherwiſe become good ſubjects and profitable members of the community, Be it therefore enacted by the authority aforeſaid, That from and after the paſſing of this act, when any perſon ſhall be lawfully convicted of any felony within the benefit of Clergy, for which he or ſhe is liable by law to be burned or marked in the hand, it ſhall and may be lawful for the Court before which any perſon ſhall be ſo convicted, or any Court holden for the ſame place with the like authority, if ſuch Court ſhall think fit, inſtead of ſuch burning or marking, to impoſe upon ſuch offender ſuch a moderate pecuniary Fine as to the Court in its diſcretion ſhall ſeem meet ; or otherwiſe it ſhall be lawful, inſtead of ſuch burning or marking, in any of the caſes aforeſaid, except in the caſe of Manſlaughter, to order and adjudge, that ſuch offender ſhall be once, or oftener, but not more than three times, either publicly or privately Whipt ; ſuch private whipping to be inflicted in the preſence of not leſs than two perſons beſides the offender and the officer who inflicts the ſame ; and in caſe of female offenders, in the preſence of females only ; and ſuch fine or whipping to impoſed or inflicted inſtead of ſuch burning or marking, ſhall have the like effects and conſequences to the party on whom the ſame, or either ſhall be ſo impoſed or inflicted, with reſpect to the diſcharge from the ſame or other felonies, or any reſtitution to his or her eſtates, capacities and credits, as if he or ſhe had been burned or marked as aforeſaid.

IV. Provided always, and be it further enacted by the authority aforeſaid, That nothing in this act contained, ſhall abridge, or deprive any Court of the powers now veſted in it by law, of detaining and keeping in priſon, for any time not exceeding one year, or of committing to the houſe of correction, or public work-houſe, to be kept to hard labor, for any time not exceeding one year, or of committing to the houſe of correction, for any time not leſs than ſix months, or exceeding two years, any ſuch offender as aforeſaid ; but that ſuch offender may, if ſuch Court ſhall think fit, after ſuch burning or marking, or after ſuch whipping or fine as ſhall by virtue of this preſent act be inflicted or impoſed inſtead thereof, be ſo detained or committed, and with ſuch accumulated puniſhment, in caſe of eſcape from ſuch houſe of correction or work-houſe, as if this act had never been made.

V. And whereas ſo much of the ſaid criminal law of England, as relates to the tranſportation of certain offenders to places beyond the ſeas, is either inapplicable to this province, or cannot be carried into execution without great and manifest inconvenience, Be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, That when any person shall be convicted of any crime, for which he, or she, shall be liable by law to be transported, the court before which such person shall be so convicted, or any court holden for the same place with the like authority, instead of the sentence of transportation shall order, and adjudge, that such person be banished from this province, for and during the same number of years, or term for which he, or she would be liable by law to be transported, and do remove him, or herself therefrom within a space of time to be then fixed and declared by the court, which shall, in no instance, be less than two days nor more than eight, including the day on which such sentence of banishment shall be passed.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person on whom such sentence of banishment shall have been passed as aforesaid, or to whom his Majesty, his heirs or successors, shall hereafter be graciously pleased to extend the Royal mercy upon condition of his, or her, leaving the province for any term of years, or for life, shall be found at large in any part thereof without some lawful cause, after the time within which he, or she, shall have been so banished, or shall have so consented to leave the province, and before the expiration of the term for which he, or she, shall have been so banished, or shall have so consented to leave the same, every such offender being thereof lawfully convicted shall suffer death as in cases of felony without benefit of Clergy; and such offender may be tried either before Justices of assize, oyer and terminer or goal delivery, for the District, County or place where such offender shall be apprehended and taken, or where he, or she, may have received such sentence of banishment; and the Clerk of the Crown, Clerk of the Peace or other officer, having the custody of the records where such sentence of banishment shall have been pronounced, or the Register of the province in the case of such conditional pardon as shall at the request of any person on his Majesty's behalf, and without fee or reward, make out and give a certificate in writing signed by him the said Clerk of the Crown, Clerk of the Peace or other officer, or by the said Register, respectively, containing the effect and substance, omitting the formal part of every indictment and conviction of such offender, and of the sentence of banishment, or of such conditional pardon, respectively, to the Justices of assize, oyear and terminer and goal delivery where such offender shall be indicted, which certificate [illegible] proof of such conviction and sentence of banishment, or of such conditional pardon, respectively.

VII. Provided nevertheless, That nothing herein contained shall be construed in any manner to restrain, or prevent his Majesty, his heirs or successors, to grant an absolute and unconditional pardon to such offender, and to allow of his, or her return to this province.

Copy of a letter from Admiral Sir Hyde Parker, Commander in Chief of his Majesty's ships and vessels at Jamaica, to Evan Nepean, Esq; dated in Port Royal harbour, the 20th Feb. 1800.

SIR,

I Have the honor to transmit you herewith an account of armed vessels and merchant ships captured and destroyed since my last return, by his Majesty's squadron under my command, which I desire you will be pleased to communicate to my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty. I am, Sir, &c.

H. PARKER.

Spanish frigate Hermione, late his Majesty's ship Hermione, 4 ships, 4 brigs, 9 schooners, 2 polacres, having on board 1300 men and 215 guns; two recaptured Americans with one detained, and 135 sail of vessels, different descriptions, laden with various kinds of merchandize. (Signed)

H. PARKER.

Admiralty Office, May 3.

Extract of a letter from John Thos. Duckworth, Esq; Rear Admiral of the White, to Evan Nepean, Esq; dated on board his Majesty's ship Leviathan, at Gibraltar, the 11th ult,

On the 5th inst. in the afternoon, I discovered 12 sail from the mast head, but at the close of day could ascertain no more than that three or four were men of war; I therefore attempted to anticipate their manouvres, that I might fall in with them the next morning, & at 3 o'clock we crossed on one, which the Emerald boarded; from her I learned that she had sailed the 3 inst. with 13 sail, under convoy of three frigates —at day break we could only see a brig, which was so nigh and the weather inclined to be calm, that I sent the boats of the Leviathan and Emerald under my 2d lieut. Gregory, to capture her, and after a smart skirmish of 40 minutes they succeeded; she mounted 14 guns, with 46 men, and bound to Lima; by this time we saw 3 sail, east, west, and south, in consequence, the Swiftsure being much to leeward, I made her signal to chase south, the Emerald east, and stood westward in the Leviathan, with a very light air, when, at noon, the Emerald made the signal for 6 sail in the N. E. this induced me to stand directly to the eastward, and at the close of day we saw 9 sail from the mast head, it was then nearly calm, and continued so till 11 o'clock P. M. when a fresh breeze sprang up from the S. W. and I steered N. in hopes of crossing them; at midnight we observed 3 sail, and as we approached them fast, at two o'clock I plainly saw two of them were frigates, standing to the N. N. W. and close together; I therefore kept on a parallel with them and proportioned my sail to theirs, that I might commence the attack just before day break, because I feared the vessels under their convoy (which I judged must be near) would, on our commencing a fire, separate, and we might lose them all; at this time the Emerald being near, I hailed and acquainted capt. Waller with my intentions.

At dawn of day I bore down upon the two frigates, which evidently had taken us for part of their convoy, and upon hailing one of them, she directly endeavoured to make all possible sail, as did the other close upon her bow, on which I directed a volley of musquetry to be fired, concluding they would strike, but this not having the desired effect, I gave a yaw, and discharged all the guns before the gangway at her yards and masts but it was not successful, in bringing any of them down; at this time capt. Waller very judiciously shot up to the leeward one, and in a few minutes we so disabled their sails and rigging, that on my being in a position to have fired a broadside into them both, they struck their colours; during this the Spaniards kept up a straggling fire, & I should not do justice to their captain were I to omit saying that from the moment of their discovering us to be enemies, they used the greatest exertions to get off, and displayed a gallantry in commencing an action with such a superior force as might be truly termed temerity; for I evidently could have destroyed them. You will find by their return of killed and wounded, they sacrificed many lives It was near half past 5 when they struck, and I directly made the Emerald's signal to chase the third sail, which appeared to be the other frigate; but soon after discovering more, and being doubtful whether the Emerald (whose copper is very bad) would come up with the frigate, I made her signal to attack the convoy, which capt. Waller in a very officer-like manner executed, and before night had possession of 4 of the largest. As soon as I had secured the frigates and put them in a state to make sail, which took near two hours, I gave chase to the other frigate; but after 4 hours the wind dying away, and not appearing to gain on her so as to expect success, I hauled towards the Emerald, and in the afternoon took a brig; it then became quite calm, and continuing so till after dark, I saw no more of the enemy; and the next day joining the Emerald, I made for this port with the prizes, and arrived safe with them all the 10th in the morning, when I found the Incendiary had arrived the previous day with two of the stragglers, that she had fortunately picked up in looking for me.

In this transaction I trust their lordships will believe, that nothing in my power was left undone to secure the whole of a convoy so important to the Spaniards. The two captured frigates which were bound to Lima with quicksilver, are completely stored for such a voyage, and recently coppered. On board of the Carmen, the Archbishop of Buenos Ayres was a passenger. I herewith send you a list of the prizes, with their force and destination.

Return of two frigates captured by the Leviathan and Emerald, on the 7th April.

Carmen, don Fraquin Porcel, commander, commanding the expedition, of 36 guns, 340 men, and 950 tons, from Cadiz, bound to Lima, laden with 1500 quintals of quicksilver, sundries of cards, and four 24-pound guns; stored for foreign service, and victualled for 4 months, newly coppered; weight of metal 12-pounders; passenger on board, El Senor Yiluftrisimo Don Pedro Yufconcio Bejarano, Archbishop of Buenes Ayres.

Florentia, Don Manuel Norates, commander, of 36 guns, 314 men, and 950 tons, from Cadiz, bound to Lima, laden with 1500 quintals of quicksilver, sundries of cards, with five 24-pound guns, newly coppered and copper fastened; passenger, Don Josef Beleatino, Official Real.

Return of killed and wounded on board the two Spanish frigates.

Carmen, 1 officer and ten men killed, 16 men wounded.—Florentia, 1 officer and 11 men killed, 1st and 2d captain, with ten men wounded.

Florence, April 29.

The latest news arrived this morning from the vicinity of Genoa, states, that Massena, having been beat a second time at Voltri on the 18th inst. was obliged to take refuge with the remains of his army, within the walls of Genoa; and that all the strong posts and forts without the city were in the hands of the combined powers, under the command of Gen. Melas and Admiral Lord Keith.

Admiralty Office, May 10.

Letters received this morning from Lord Keith, dated 21st April, mention several important advantages gained by the Austrians in the vicinity of Genoa, under the walls of which place the enemy have been obliged to concentrate their force. In many attacks the fire of the English ships was employed with considerable effect.

The messenger reports that he saw an English ship towing a captured Dutch ship of the line (with a frigate or sloop) into Yarmouth Roads.

Riedlingen, on the Danube, May 6.

MY LORD,

The army marched from Donaueschingen the 2d inst. and arrived at Eugen in the course of the forenoon, before the enemy reached that place. Notwithstanding the great importance that was attached to the gaining the position of Stockach, yet it was not thought possible to proceed so far that day, without exposing to imminent danger the several corps of the Archduke Ferdinand (which covered the march on the side of Zollhaus) and those of Generals Ginlay and Kienmayer, which had received orders to retire from Fribourg & Offenburg, and join the main army. On the same day the enemy withdrew the army which had till then occupied the N. Riedlingen, on the Danube, May 6.

MY LORD,

The army marched from Donaueſchingen the 2d inſt. and arrived at Eugen in the courſe of the forenoon, before the enemy reached that place. Notwithſtanding the great importance that was attached to the gaining the poſition of Stockach, yet it was not thought poſſible to proceed ſo far that day, without expoſing to imminent danger the ſeveral corps of the Archduke Ferdinand (which covered the march on the ſide of Zollhaus) and thoſe of Generals Ginley and Kienmayer, which had received orders to retire from Fribourg & Offenburg, and join the main army. On the ſame day the enemy withdrew the army which had till then occupied the N. E. part of Switzerland, and was oppoſed to the Auſtrians on the ſide of the Griſons and the Voralberg, and bro't the whole of it towards Conſtance and Schaffhauſen in the courſe of the following night, leaving the eaſtern frontier of Switzerland entirely open.

On the 3d in the morning, this force united to that which had paſſed the Rhine at Schaffhauſen on the 1ſt inſt. attacked and carried the Auſtrian poſition at Stockach, occupied by Prince Joſeph of Lorraine, with a force under his command quite inadequate to meet that of the enemy. On this occaſion the Auſtrians ſuſtained a very conſiderable loſs both in men, cannon and ſtores; tho' fortunately a part of the magazines which had been formed at Stockach, had been carried away in the courſe of the two preceding days. The prince having been obliged to fall back on Pfullendorf and Maſkirch, the left flank of gen. Kray's army was uncovered.

In this ſituation of things, and before the archduke Ferdinand had effected his junction, gen. Kray was attacked at Engen, about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, by the main French army, commanded by gen. Moreau in perſon. This army had been reinforced by a detachment from the camp at Dijon, and conſiſted of five entire diviſions. A ſeparate force fell at the ſame time upon the archduke, and obliged him to fall back on Durlingen. The French attacked every where with the utmoſt impetuoſity, bringing up freſh columns in ſucceſſion, and ſacrificing immenſe numbers of men on every part of the Auſtrian line where they had hoped to penetrate. They were however unable to make any impreſſion on any one point, at nine in the evening they gave up the attempt, at which time the Auſtrians remained maſters of the whole poſition which they had occupied in the morning, and the archduke had joined the main army, after having defeated the corps oppoſed to him, and taken ſeveral priſoners and 3 pieces of cannon. His royal highneſs, to whoſe perſonal exertions this ſucceſs was chiefly owing, has, on this occaſion merited and gained the eſteem and admiration of the whole army. At this moment the ſpirit & confidence of the army was ſuch, that Gen. Kray would in his turn, have attacked the enemy, but for the loſs of Stockach, which rendered his retreat abſolutely neceſſary. He remained, however, in the field of battle all night, and only began his march at day break.

The army arrived at Leptingen at 9 in the morning of the 4th, where it halted till 3 in the afternoon, and then marched forward to Moſkirch, where a junction was effected with prince Joſeph of Lorraine at 9 in the evening. The archduke covered the march, in the courſe of which his royal highneſs was joined by gen. Ginlay, with the corps from Fribourg, and by the firſt diviſion of the Bavarian ſubſidiary army, from Baylingen. The whole of this march was made, and the junction with Gen. Ginlay, Prince Joſeph of Lorraine, and the Bavarians, effected without any material interruption from the enemy.

In the afternoon of yeſterday, the different corps of the enemy being concentrated in one great army, whilſt Gen. Kray had ſtill be ween 30 and 40,000 men detached on different points, Gen. Moreau attacked the Auſtrian poſition at Moſkirch with his whole force, but owing to the ſteady bravery of the Auſtrian troops, and particularly the decided ſuperiority of their artillery, he was unable to make any material impreſſion, and at ſunſet each army retired to its reſpective quarters. The loſs was very conſiderable on both ſides, but there is every reaſon to believe that the enemy has ſuffered much more conſiderably than the Auſtrians. This opinion, which is confirmed by the unanimous report of the priſoners made at the cloſe of the day, is founded not only on the circumſtance of his not renewing his attack in the night or this morning, notwithſtanding his great ſuperiority of numbers, but on the nature of the action itſelf, which conſiſted in a ſucceſſion of impetuous, but unſucceſsful attacks made by the French infantry, under the fire of the Auſtrian artillery, and expoſed to frequent charges of cavalry. Unleſs Gen. Kray ſhould be again attacked in the courſe of to-day, he will, probably take a poſition this afternoon or to-morrow behind the Danube, his left at this place, and his right at Sigmaringen.

Your lordſhip will probably have been much alarmed at the firſt report of this affair that will have reached England through France, nor indeed can it be ſuppoſed that the expectation of the enemy ſhould not have been extreme during the whole day of the 3d, or that the French officers ſhould not have holden out to their government the moſt flattering hopes of ultimate and complete ſucceſs; but the ſteady valour of the Auſtrian troops, the order that reigns thro' every department of the army, and the ſkill and unſhaken courage and coolneſs of the generals, have, I truſt, under the bleſſing of God, fruſtrated the great deſigns of the enemy.

I have the honor to be, &c.

W. WICKHAM.

Ulm, May 8.

MY LORD,

On the 6th inſt. the Auſtrians took a poſition behind the Danube without any material oppoſition from the enemy, whoſe loſs in the battle of the 5th appears to have been greater than was at firſt ſuppoſed. On the ſame day the junction was effected with Lieut. Gen. Kienmayer. The ſecond diviſion of the Bavarians paſſed through this place yeſterday, and marched about a league farther, where they will halt to-day, & their junction with Gen. Kray will be effected either to-morrow or the day after, according to the neceſſity that may exiſt for haſtening their march. The firſt diviſion conſiſting of 6000 men had joined the main army in time to render very eſſential ſervices, and was cloſely engaged with the enemy in the battle of the 5th.

The Swiſs regiment of Roverea in his Majeſty's ſervice, under the command of Col. de Watterville, has formed a part of the archduke's corps from the beginning, and has been particularly diſtinguiſhed by its bravery and good conduct. I am ſorry to add, that it has ſuffered in proportion, and that a number of excellent officers have been either killed or ſeverely wounded.

It is impoſſible at preſent to obtain an exact return of the Auſtrians loſs in killed and wounded. Tho' the general officers expoſed themſelves on every occaſion, yet I believe not one of them has been killed or made priſoner, and one only (Major Gen. Karazai) wounded. Few priſoners have been made on either ſide; but the Auſtrians were obliged to leave ſome of their wounded at Engen, for want of carriages to carry them away.

No one corps of the Auſtrians has been broken or diſperſed by the enemy, nor have they loſt a ſingle piece of cannon in the different actions between the main armies, tho' ſeveral fell into the hands of the enemy at Stockach.

The archduke Ferdinand, as I have mentioned in another diſpatch, took three pieces from the enemy at the time when his royal highneſs formed his junction with the commander in chief near Engen.

I have the honor to be, &c.

(Signed) W. WICKHAM.

TURKEY.

CONSTANTIOOPLE, March 1.

THE meaſures of the Porte appear to be of a nature calculated to give great uneaſineſs to thoſe who fear a new war.

Thirty or forty thouſand infantry have received orders to march immediately to the environs of Adrianople; the one half of theſe troops have been drawn from Albania, and the other from Macedonia, and other European provinces. Theſe corps are expected to be at their place of rendezvous by the beginning of April. A body of Aſiatic cavalry, together with four companies of artillery, and twenty field pieces have alſo this day paſſed this city for the ſame deſtination. They have for a long time been exerciſed under the direction of Chriſtian officers. The new Beglerbeg of Romelia has departed at the ſame time, at the head of three thouſand Janiſſaries, inſtructed in the new tactics, in learning of which they have ſhewn great docility.

March 2. A conſiderable fleet is preparing to be in a ſtate of readineſs to obey the firſt order. It will be immediately put under the command of the grand admiral. It will conſiſt of fourteen ſhips of the line, and eight frigates, beſides other veſſels. Some think it will cruiſe in the Archipelago, while others affirm it will be ſent into the Black Sea. This laſt opinion is the moſt common.

The doctors of the laws of Mahomet have preſented a memorial to the Grand Signior, in which they repreſent it as a diſgrace to ſend ambaſſadors to Chriſtian courts. According to the political and religious principles of the Sublime Porte, it may receive from, but it cannot render homage to Chriſtians.

March 15. The feſtival of the Ramadan, which ſtill occupies the Turks in ſpiritual exerciſes, leaves them little time or diſpoſition to conſider or diſcuſs political affairs. All the accounts however, from Adrianople and its environs are full of the great aſſemblage of troops and that Mechmad Akir Becha, Beglerbeg of Romania, is buſied in collecting troops from different quarters, and diſtributing them into the neighbouring cantonments.

The report which the court wiſhes to circulate, that this immenſe force was collected for the purpoſe only of reducing the rebels of Bulgaria, is diſproved by a variety of circumſtances. The rebel Paſſovan Oglu, has, to the knowledge of the public, obtained his pardon. The troops alſo at Adrianople are more than ſufficient to ſuppreſs any diſturbances in the capital, in which conſpiracies were formed againſt the Sultan himſelf, excited by thoſe Pachas who revolted in the European provinces, and ſuſpected alſo to be promoted by the Pachas of Acre, and other parts of Aſia.

Letters from Smyrna unfortunately adviſe us of the conflagration of near four thouſand houſes, entirely belonging to Ottoman merchants, the value of which is eſtimated at four millions of piaſtres.

SCOTLAND.

EDINBURGH, May 12.

On Saturday a meeting of the quarter ſeſſions of the county of Edinburgh was held in the parliament-house, Mr. Sheriff Campbell in the chair.

The lord advocate rose, in a very animated and perspicuous speech, descanted on the high price of provisions, which he lamented, as bearing hard on the poorer classes, and for whom he expressed the strongest inclination of obtaining relief. After illustrating on the subject at great length, and stating his determination to use all the power with which he was invested to procure the desired relief, he concluded by moving, "that a committee of the gentlemen of the county should be appointed to meet with the magistrates of the city on Wednesday next, in order to concert measures for investigating the present state of grain in the market, and devising such other measures as are most likely to procure a more plentiful supply in the markets, and at more reduced prices."

This motion being agreed to unanimously, a committee was appointed.

The fishery on our coast has been so successful, that the finest cod fish has sold in Edinburgh at less than one penny per pound.

In the counties of Wigtown, Kircudbright, and others of the district formerly called Galloway, in consequence of the introduction of English agriculture, land has increased in value 40 per cent. within the last ten years.

In Bute and Argyleshire, the agricultural premiums are chiefly offered for the cultivation of cottages; in Aberdeen, Banff, Forfar, &c. for the melioration of grasses and turnips; in the western islands for reclaiming moss lands, so as to render them capable of bearing grass, 5l. for every four acres.

LONDON, May 20.

We have great satisfaction in stating that the Hamburgh mail of yesterday brings advice of 62 sail of ships, laden with grain, having passed the Sound, on their way to different ports in this kingdom. Of these 24 are for London.

A letter from Palermo, of April 28, mentions the arrival there of the William Tell, French ship, lately captured by the English in the road of Malta. She had on board six millions of specie, with a quantity of other valuable effects, which the French found in that island. The conflict was desperate, and continued four hours. The number of killed & wounded on board the French ship amounted to about 400; the loss on our part is 90 men. There was about 1600 men on board the William Tell, chiefly of these belonging to the garrison, sick, and the Malta Patriots.

A powerful expedition is certainly preparing to sail; it is to consist of 12000 men, under the command of Sir Ralph Abercromby. The old regiments of Gibraltar and Minorca, are, it is reported, to form a part of this force, and being replaced by militia corps, will be embarked for Genoa, from whence a combined army of British and Imperial troops is to be marched into the South of France.

A letter received from an officer on board Admiral Sir Alan Gardner's ship, dated off Brest the 8th inst. states, that six sail of French line of battle ships came out of that harbour for the purpose of getting in a convoy which they were greatly in want of, when Lord St. Vincent made the signal to Admiral Berkeley's division to chase, which they did, but the ships escaped back into port, and it is said the convoy also got in during the chase.

The importance of extricating Massena and his army from his perilous situation, may be judged of from the repeated, furious, and desperate attempts made by the French on the Austrians; and which all proved fruitless, thro' the intrepid valour displayed by the latter. The sacrifice of lives, which must have taken place, is shocking to humanity; and adds daily to that dreadful responsibility which attaches to the French usurpers.

Private accounts from Italy state, that Massena is determined to defend himself to the last in the city of Genoa, still expecting relief, on account of the great importance of that place to France. He has thrown himself into the citadel with the flower of his army, threatening the destruction of the city, if the inhabitants should give the least encouragement to the Austrians. It is said that Gen. Melas, on being informed of his menaces, had sent an officer to Massena to ask him whether he was seriously inclined to carry these threats into execution. He ordered that officer to inform him, that in a public proclamation he had assured the Genoese of the protection of his Sovereign, which they should enjoy under any circumstances. He solemnly declared to Massena that he and his staff should be answerable for every calamity that the defenceless Genoese should suffer from the French troops.

Since the 6th of April, the Genoese territory has been the theatre of the most obstinate and bloody conflicts.—Battles have taken place almost daily from the 6th to the 20th, the result of which has been glorious to the Austrians, whose firm courage has ultimately triumphed over the fury and desperation of the enemy. The battle of Voltri, on the 18th, has proved decisive, and must be speedily followed by the fall of Genoa.

Admiralty Office, May 31.

Extract of letters from Vice Admiral Lord Keith, commander in chief of his Majeſty's ſhips and veſſels in the Mediterranean, to Evan Nepean, Eſq: Secretary of the Admiralty, dated on board the Minotaur, off Genoa, the 3d and 6th of May, 1800.

ON the 29th ult. Gen. D'Ott communicated to me his intention of making a general attack on all ſides of Genoa, and requeſted co-operation, that we might ſettle the plan. At 3 A. M. on the 30th, the attack began on the part of Gen. D'Ott, by ſignal from St. Pierre d'Arena, on Quarto, St. Martino and St. Chriſtino, by Gen. Gottesheim, who preſſed the enemy up to the wall near the ſhore, under cover of the fire of the Phoenix, Mondovi, Entreprenante, Victoir tender, launches & boats of the ſquadron. The affair continued until night, when the Auſtrians retired, being unable to diſlodge the enemy from the little fort of St. Martino, ſituated on a hill two miles from the ſea. General D'Ott was moſt ſucceſsful in ſeizing Dui Fratelli, by eſcalade, and blocking up Diamonti: on the ſide of St. Martino the French durſt not follow the Auſtrians, in conſequence of the well directed fire of the ſquadron. It rained the whole day. Shells from the town fell among the ſhips. The French, however, on the ſame evening attacked and repoſſeſſed themſelves of all their former poſts. It is reported they loſt many men, as far as fifteen hundred.— On the 2d the enemy made a deſperate ſortie on Lieut. Gen. D'Ott's centre at Seſtri. They kept advancing in columns to the muzzles of the cannon repeatedly for an hour, and did not retire till they loſt 1200 men, of whom 20 officers and 280 privates are priſoners.—On the 4th I received a letter from the General, informing me that the French had retired to St. Elpiratto, and had ſuſtained a conſiderable loſs on the 2d at Lonima. He ſays that he was much indebted to the fire of the Phaeton, &c. and to the good management of captain Morris.—On the 7th, two mortar boats and two gun boats arrived from Naples. The ſame day I heard from Gen. Melas that the French had burnt their magazines at Aluſſino, and had retired to Fort Maurice; and that Capt. Morris had ſeized 20 corn veſſels and a depot of arms, and galled the enemy's rear for ſeveral miles of their retreat. Two of Maſſena's ſtaff were taken in a ſmall boat near Albanga in attempting to eſcape from Genoa.

Copy of a letter from Vice Admiral Lord Keith to Evan Nepean, Eſq; dated Minotaur off Genoa, May 10.

SIR,

I have the honor of incloſing a copy of a letter received by me at a late hour laſt night, from his excellency General Melas, which will convey to their Lordſhips the moſt ſatisfactory accounts of the progreſs of the Auſtrian arms, and of the retreat of the enemy's army from the Genoeſe territory. I have the honor to be, &c. &c. KEITH.

Evan Nepean, Eſq.

Head quarters, Oneglia, May 8.

My Lord, we have been very ſucceſsful yeſterday. The right wing of the army commanded by Gen. Elſnitz, who was on Monte Carro, attacked the enemy at Murchidelle Pierre, and ſucceeded ſo well, that at 9 o'clock in the morning victory had declared in his favour. The Gen. of diviſion Gravier, with a great number of officers and 1500 men were made priſoners. The right of the enemy, informed of the defeat of its left, did not delay retreating from Capo di Berta. We have purſued him beyond Fort Maurice. Fifteen pieces of cannon of different ſize's have been taken from him along the coaſts. Our loſs has not been conſiderable; but I regret the loſs of Major Gen. Brentano mortally wounded, and Major Caſate killed. The corps of Gen. Elſnitz is now at St. Bartholomeo, and General Gourroupp marches with his flying corps to Colla Ardente, and his van guard is already at Broglio, behind the Col de Tende. I wait for the reports of the patroles, who are in the purſuit of the enemy, to make my final diſpoſitions. In the mean while, I requeſt your excellency to accept the report with which I have the honor to be, &c. &c. MELAS.

Vice Admiral Keith, K. B.

Downing-ſtreet, May 31.

Diſpatches of which the following are copies, were this morning received from Thomas Jackſon, Eſq; his Majeſty's minister plenipotentiary at Turin, by the right hon. Lord Grenville, his Majeſty's principal ſecretary of ſtate for foreign affairs.

Turin, May 10.

My Lord, I have the greateſt ſatisfaction in informing your Lordſhip that the intelligence which has arrived here of the further operations of the Auſtrians in the Riviere is highly favourable and important. Two days ago a dispatch was received of a ſucceſsful attack of the Col de Tende on the 6th, which important poſt was carried by the bayonet, and the enemy was driven be yond Saorgio and Breglio, with the loss of 4 pieces of cannon. This affair made only a part of the plan of general attack, and was connected with the operations of the rest of the army in all the intermediate positions down to the sea side; the result of these attacks is, that the enemy, being forced and driven from the positions of St. Esprit and in every quarter, was retreating towards Nice.—In the official relation of these affairs which has been published here, it is said that the British vessels which pursued the enemy on the coast contributed greatly to accelerate their flight.—Yesterday morning official intelligence arrived here from the head quarters of Oneglia, the 7th, of the enemy having been again attacked that morning, and completely defeated, with the loss of 1500 prisoners, 40 officers, and the general of division Gravite, and 15 pieces of cannon. The Austrian gen. Breutano is said to be mortally wounded. In consequence of this affair the whole principality of Oneglia was evacuated, and the French are represented as retreating in the greatest disorder towards St. Remo. In these official relations much praise is bestowed on the Piedmontese officers and troops, who have much distinguished themselves. The French have another position at Vinomille, on the Roia, but which it is not supposed they can maintain, and it is not doubted that they will be driven beyond the Var in a few days. We have nothing new from Genoa or Savona; these places still hold out.

I have the honor to be, &c. &c.

THOMAS JACKSON.

Turin, May 12.

My Lord, it is with infinite satisfaction that I can inform your lordship of the entire evacuation of the Riviere of Genoa, and the County of Nice, by the French troops under Suchet, the remains of which have passed the Var; and Nice, with its two castles, was yesterday occupied by the Imperial troops under general Knesevich. Gen. Kaim, the commander in chief here, has this moment sent intelligence to the government of this joyful event.

I have the honor to be, &c.

T. JACKSON.

Admiralty Office, June 2.

Copy of a letter from Vice Admiral Lord Keith, commander in chief of his Majesty's ships and vessels in the Mediterranean, to Evan Nepean, Esq; dated on board his Majesty's ship Minotaur, off Genoa, May 7, 1800.

SIR,

You will be pleased to lay before their Lordships, the inclosed copy of a letter from Capt. Dixon, of his Majesty's ship Lion, to Sir Thos. Trowbridge, Bart. containing a narrative of the circumstances attending the capture of the Guillaume Tell, and a list of the killed and wounded on board his Majesty's ships on that occasion.

The honorable testimony borne by capt. Dixon to the meritorious conduct of the officers engaged with him in the pursuit and capture of this ship, cannot fail to attract their Lordships attention, and ensure the honor of their countenance and support. I have the honor to be, Sir, &c. KEITH.

Lion at sea, off Cape Passero, March 31.

SIR,

I have the honor to inform you, that yesterday morning, at 9 o'clock, Cape Passero bearing N. 1-2 E. distant seven leagues, the French ship of war Le Guillaume Tell, of 80 guns and 1000 men, bearing the flag of Contreadmiral Decres, surrendered, after a most gallant & obstinate defence of 3 hours and a half, to his Majesty's ships Foudroyant, Lion, and Penelope.

To detail the particulars of this very important capture, I have to inform you that the signal rockets and cannonading from our batteries at Malta, the midnight preceding, with the favorable S. wind, together with the darkness which succeeded the setting of the moon, convinced me the enemy's ships of war were attempting to make an escape, and which was immediately ascertained by that judicious and truly valuable officer capt. Blackwood, of the Penelope, who had been stationed a few hours before between the Lion and Valette, for the purpose of observing closely the motions of the enemy; nearly at night an enemy's ship was descried by him, when the Minorca was sent to inform me of it, giving chase himself, apprising me by signal that the strange ships seen, were hauled to the wind on the starboard tack. I lost no time in making the signal for the squadron to cut or slip, and directed capt. Miller of the Minorca, to run down to the Foudroyant and Alexander with the news, and to repeat the signal.

Under a press of canvass I gave chase until 5 A. M. solely guided by the cannonading of the Penelope; and, as a direction to the squadron, a rocket and blue light were shewn every half hour from the Lion. As the day broke, I found myself within gun shot of the chase, and the Penelope within musket, raking her, the effects of whose well directed fire during the night, had shot away her main and mizen top-masts and main yard; the enemy appeared in great confusion, being reduced to his head sails, going with the wind on the quarter.—The Lion was run close along side; the yard arms of both ships being just clear, when a destructive broadside of three round shot in each gun was poured in, luffing up across the bow, when the enemy's jib-boom passed between the main and mizen shrouds: after a short interval I had the pleasure to see the boom carried away, and the ships disentangled, maintaining a position across the bow, firing to great advantage.

I was not the least solicitous either to board or be boarded, as the enemy appeared of immense bulk and full of men, keeping a prodigious fire of musquetry, which, with the bow chases, she could for a long time only use. I found it absolutely necessary, if possible, to keep from the broadside of this ship; after being engaged about fifty minutes the Foudroyant was seen under a press of canvass, and soon passed, hailing the enemy to strike, which being declined, a very heavy fire from both ships, broadside to broadside, was most gallantly maintained, the Lion and Penelope frequently in situations to do great execution; in short, Sir, after the hotest action that probably was ever maintained by an enemy's ship, opposed to those of his Majesty, and being totally dismasted, the French admiral's flag and colours were struck.

I have not language to express the high sense of obligation I feel myself under to capt. Blackwood for his prompt and able conduct in leading the line of battle ships to the enemy, for the gallantry and spirit so highly conspicuous in him, and for his admirable management of the frigate; to your discriminating judgment it is unnecessary to remark, of what real value and importance such an officer must ever be considered to his Majesty's service: the termination of the battle must be attributed to the spirited fire of the Foudroyant, whose captain, Sir Edward Berry, has justly added another laurel to the many he has gained during the war.

Capt. Blackwood speaks in very high terms of the active and gallant conduct of capt. Long of the Vincejo, during the night; and I beg to mention the services of capts. Broughton & Miller.

The crippled condition of the Lion and Foudroyant, made it necessary for me to direct capt. Blackwood to take possession of the enemy, and proceed with her in tow, to Syracuse.

I received the greatest possible assistance from Lieut. Patey, senior officer of the men, & from Mr. Spence, the master, who together with the other officers and ship's company, showed the most determined gallantry.

Capts. Sir Edward Berry and Blackwood have reported to me the same gallantry and animated behaviour in the officers and crews of their ships.

I am sorry to say that the three ships have suffered much in killed & wounded, & that the loss of the enemy is prodigious, being upward of 200.

I refer you to the inclosed reports for further particulars as to the state of his Majesty's ships, and have the honor to remain, &c. MANLY DIXON.

P. S. The Guillaume Tell is of the largest dimensions, and carries 36 prs. on the lower gun deck, 24 prs. on the main deck, 12 prs. on the quarter deck, and 32 pound carronades on the poop.

A return of the number killed and wounded on board his Majesty's ships as undermentioned, in action with the Guillaume Tell, a French ship of 84 guns, on the 30th of March, 1800.

Foudroyant—8 killed, 61 wounded.
Lion—7 killed, 38 wounded.
Penelope—3 killed, 2 wounded.

Officers killed or wounded.

Foudroyant—Capt. Sir Edward Berry slightly wounded, but did not quit the deck; Lieut. J. A. Blow, wounded; Philip Bridge, boatswain; Edward West, Granville Proby, and Thos. Cole, midshipmen, wounded.

Lion—Mr. Hugh Roberts, midshipman, killed; Mr. Alex. Hood, midshipman, wounded.

Penelope—Mr. Domerel, master, killed; Mr. Silthorpe, midshipman, wounded. (Signed) MANLY DIXON.

Leghorn, April 21. A general insurrection against the French has broken out in Corsica. Salicetti, who had marched against them with all the troops he could collect, has been entirely defeated.

Constantinople, April 25. Positive intelligence has been received here, officially, that war has recommenced in Egypt. General Kleber learning, that the harbour of Alexandria continued to be blockaded, and that his departure for France would meet with difficulties, attacked the Grand Vizier's army on the 17th and 18th of March, and totally defeated it. Meanwhile, a Pacha detached by the Grand Vizier, had defeated a French corps near Cairo, entered that capital, and massacred all the French it contained.

Paris, May 24. Manheim has been evacuated by the Austrians, & the French are in possession of that place as well as Heidelberg.

The French troops passed the Rhine on the 14th at three in the morning, at Sandhoffen. At eight they were beyond Feydenheim. On the 16th they appeared before Philipsburgh.

LONDON, June 2.

Advice was received yesterday at the Admiralty from Earl St. Vincent, stating the combined fleet having entered the inner harbour of Brest.

"On the 14th of May last, the Anti-Unionists were expected to make their last great effort in the Irish House of Commons, on which day Lord Castlereagh had given notice he should move for leave to bring in the Union Bill.

It has been reported that a treaty of alliance, offensive and defensive, has been concluded between the courts of Russia and Prussia; the object of which is, to procure, by an armed mediation, peace for the continent of Europe. It is by no means improbable that such a treaty may have been concluded: but we cannot speak of it from any known authority.

The trial of Napper Tandy came on in the Court of King's Bench at Dublin the 12th of May last, when Sir J. Crauford, the British resident at Hamburg, having proved that the prisoner would have sufficient time for taking the benefit of the fugitive Bill had he not been arrested, the jury found a verdict of acquittal. The Attorney General of course consented to the withdrawing of all the proceedings against Harvey Morris. They were, however, both remanded to prison by the directions of the Court. It is understood that Napper Tandy will be tried for high treason, as his present acquittal amounts only to a declaration that he does not come within the force of the act, which adjudged him and the others therein named, to be guilty, unless they surrendered before a determinate time.

On the 31st ult. the house of commons resolved itself into a committee on the high price of corn; when Mr. Lechmere gave notice, that he intended to submit to the house a motion, for the more effectually preventing the exportation of corn. The distresses of the poor, he said, occasioned by the enormous price of corn and flour, demanded an immediate remedy. The consolidation of small farms into large ones he considered as at the root of the mischief. It facilitated monopoly, and it tended to make the large farmer careless, or at least obliged him to depend too much on the fidelity of hired labourers. Mr. Lechmere having stated that it appeared, that large quantities of corn were clandestinely sent for Jersey and Guernsey, which were afterwards conveyed illicitly to France, Mr. Pitt observed, that he was not aware of any exportation to Jersey or Guernsey, having taken place to a greater amount than the 9,500 quarters limited by law. No more could be publicly exported, except for the use of his Majesty's army or navy; and he was convinced there was not much abuse on account. As to clandestine exportations, he could say nothing; but there had certainly been no want of vigilance on the part of government to prevent them.

Mr. Pitt made several observations on the scarcity, which he thought was increased by the alarm which had been produced, and thought gentlemen should take care that they did not do more harm than all the measures that proposed could do good.

Government had done every thing that could be expected on the head, and he had the pleasure to inform the house that by all the accounts received from different parts of the kingdom, there was every appearance of a most plentiful and early harvest.

DUBLIN, May 17.

This day exhibited in Dublin a ſpectacle, which Heaven itſelf beheld with delight. It was not a holiday ſhow, promoting rioting and drunkenneſs, but one that called forth the beſt and moſt benevolent feelings; near eleven hundred poor children, with many orphans who have loſt both parents, and foundlings who know of none; it was awful and affecting—there was not time for greater exertion. We rejoice in predicting that another year will unite the children of all denominations, that brotherly love will increaſe in Ireland, and that bigotry and ſuperſtition will daily decreaſe, and at laſt be finally baniſhed. The Rev. Mr. Burton preached the annual ſermon before theſe children; it was animated and pathetic, and went to the hearts of many who heard him. When he concluded with an addreſs to the children, it excited extreme ſenſibility—every good mind felt for them—every eye was moiſtened with tears.

They aſſembled in due time in Stephen's green, and proceeded to Saint Thomas's church in the following order: the Lord Mayor's carriages, the city regalia, the Lord Mayor, the Sheriffs, the Lord Mayor elect,

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, Auguſt 16.

GENERAL ELECTION.

The Hon. D. W. Smith is returned a member to ſerve in the next Provincial Parliament, for the counties of Oxford, Middleſex, and Norfolk.

On Friday laſt, the 8th inſt. a ſervant man belonging to Doctor Davidſon, of the Royal Canadian Volunteers, coming to this Garriſon from Newark, for his maſter, with a pair of horſes, was, with one of them, unfortunately drowned in croſſing the Humber. The body of the man was diſcovered ſticking in the ſand on Monday laſt, and taken up; the horſe was alſo found.

FOR THE ORACLE.

Gentlemen and Friends,

I Hope that as many of you, as have met with my former addreſs, are impreſſed with the truths it contains, and convinced of the friendlineſs of its intention. Let the honeſty of zeal, and the conviction of right, palliate any harſhneſs which the nature of the ſubject may now oblige me to uſe. I have endeavored without partiality or biaſs to inſtruct you in ſome plain truths, which ſeem unknown, or what is in reality the ſame, if known, unoperative.

I will in this place juſt remind you of what moſt of you already know, that it was determined to adopt the Engliſh law as a code beſt adapted to the intereſt of the ſubject and the province.—The repreſentative government was deemed moſt congenial to the body of the people who had formerly been as they now are, the ſubjects of Great-Britain, and moſt of them Britons, or their deſcendants of the firſt and ſecond generation.

Local and other conſiderations, rendered it neceſſary to make many additions, amendments and retrenchments to this code, and theſe labors have heretofore occupied the time and attention of our houſes of parliament; they had the corner ſtone to lay and the troubles of a beginning to encounter—let us not impeach their wiſdom, nor depreciate their efforts; they labored in their vocations for themſelves and the country.

But let us now, and hereafter, my friends, ſo regulate our choices by the dictates of reason and prudence, by the benefit of recent experience, and by regard for ourselves and posterity, as not to bring on us the imputation of forming "rump parliaments." Let us like men who'e only wish is to see their country flourish, and participate in its prosperity, reject every pitiful motive of like or dislike, and elect men who know and revere our liberties in private and can contend for them in public.

In war sand-bags may stop a breach, and wool-sacks repel bullets—can they otherwise annoy an enemy? In parliament, a member may rise, may stare broad stupidity, may gape out nothing, & seat himself satisfied at having at least made an effort. To give our suffrages to such, and to withhold them from men of talents and virtue, on the single principle of personal aversion, would be for a sick man to reject a medicine at the existence of his hopes, because he hated the physician who prescribed it. To suppose that a man, because he is a mere honest man, will make a good and useful representative, is neither more or less than supposing, that sheep may be taught to hunt down wolves, and goats be transformed into blood-hounds. A late most contemptible puffer, has attempted to storm you into an election of what he calls "the noblest work of God, an honest upright man." Let us not my friends so far degrade the wisdom of Omnipotence, as to suppose, that it has not implanted nobler principles in the human heart, than mere lifeless honesty!!!

With truth it may be said, that the honesty of many is the effect of imperfect mechanism of mind, the restricting imposition of fame, or more powerful dread of the law. To defraud the people of their rights, because, unable to defend them—or not to defraud them of their property because the law prevents it—I leave the public to judge which is the greater virtue.

I have my friends, endeavored to convince you by the fairest reasoning, of the impropriety of loading the shoulders of ignorance with a burthen which consummate wisdom finds difficult to bear. I have invariably endeavored to impress your minds with uths, which, if made the means of regulating your votes, will establish in the strongest light, my love to my country, its subjects and laws. It is this love that leads me to lament, that disposition to riot, which was manifested by some, and produced the disagreeable issue to the late election. I here invoke the pity of Infinite Goodness on the people, whose liberties are to be protected and whose rights are to be explained by a wretch, notorious for his insolence, ignorance and brutal intemperance, and whatever else is disgusting and degrading to humanity! If when so large and respectable a body of the people was assembled on so solemn an occasion, their proceedings were to be interrupted and themselves so grossly insulted by the most despicable of mortals—authority would be a mockery, and solemnity a farce, if such an outrage could pass with impunity. To what purpose form we a magistracy? To what end speak of order, or civil subordination?—but to curb the unruly—to correct the turbulent and immoral—and guard public and private peace from insult and breach.

If there are men among us, such enemies to their country and good government, as daringly to thwart the mild operation of authority when exerted for the general good, and general harmony, may they suffer for their presumption—may the intemperance of their conduct, and the wickedness of their designs meet with adequate and merited punishment.

By nature and habit, I am an enthusiastic admirer of liberty—not that misaken liberty which would protect insult and insolence in a worthless vagrant, whose very appearance is the INSIGNIA of depravity—of wretchedness and contempt. I shall not say, that this object of odium, was tutored for a purpose—I shall however presume to say, that an evil unrestrained is tacitly approved. Benevolence shall in this place deter me from severities, which circumstances would abundantly justify. I despise the slave of party—I abhor the tool of faction; my aim is to correct—it is not to irritate; e'er I prostitute my pen to prejudice my country, may the hand that guides it be bereft of motion, and may the heart that dictates, that moment cease to beat.

When the commotion, (occasioned by this representative of insignificance) had in a measure subsided, how painful was it, to hear many of the people avow their intentions of quitting the country! What superlative absurdity in them to imagine that the gilded opinions and interested efforts of a lawyer (since of all practical lawyers—the fee is the leading star,) was a slur to their liberties! Was the election illegal—the avenue to redress was open—an enlightened and patriotic Governor has pledged himself to aid and patronize the investigation.

I do not wish, and far be it from me, to attempt a justification of what must be left to abler judges to pronounce upon. I console myself in the full assurance that neither illegality or impropriety will be allowed or pass unnoticed, when the subject involves, such incalculable consequences.

Legislature of Upper-Canada.

ACTS passed in the Fourth Session of the Second Provincial Parliament of Upper Canada.

An ACT for the summary conviction of persons selling Spirituous Liquor by retail without Licence.

I. FOR the summary conviction of persons selling spirituous liquor by retail without licence, Be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an act passed in the parliament of Great Britain, entitled an act to repeal certain parts of an act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled, "An Act for making more effectual provision for the government of the province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said province;" and by the authority of the same, That if any person or persons shall, directly or indirectly, sell any wine, brandy, rum, or other spirituous liquor by retail without licence for that purpose previously obtained, such person or persons having, if resident in the District in which the offence shall have been committed, been summoned to appear before any three or more of his Majesty's Justices of the peace, who are hereby authorized and impowered to hear and determine the matter, and being lawfully convicted thereof, by the oath of one credible witness, shall forfeit and pay the sum of twenty pounds of lawful money of this province, to be levied with costs of suit, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such offender or offenders, one half of which penalty shall be paid to the person or persons informing, and the other half into the hands of his Majesty's Receiver-General, to and for the public uses of this province; and in default of the said offender or offenders, having goods and chattels, from which the said penalty may be raised, it shall and may be lawful for the said Justices to commit him, her or them to the goal of the District in which the offence shall have been committed, for, and during the space of three calendar months.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any such offender or offenders, be not usually resident within the District in which the offence shall have been committed, it shall and may be lawful to, and for any one of his Majesty's Justices of the peace in, and for the District in which the offence shall have been committed, upon information upon oath made before him, to issue his warrant for apprehending such offender or offenders, and to oblige him, her or them, to enter into recognizances with one or more sufficient sureties for his, her or their appearance at such time and place as shall be appointed for the hearing of the said complaint, or in default thereof, to commit him, her or them for safe custody to the common goal of the District, until the said complaint shall have been finally heard and determined.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That from and after the fifth day of April now next ensuing, it shall not be lawful to or for any shopkeeper licenced to sell wine, Brandy, rum and other spirituous liquors by retail, to sell or vend the same, in any less quantity, or by any smaller measure than one quart; and if any shopkeeper or shop keepers shall from and after the said fifth day of April sell, or vend any wine, brandy, rum or other spirituous liquors, in less quantity, or by smaller measure, than one quart, he, she, or they shall, for such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of twenty pounds, to be levied in manner and form here in before mentioned, and the monies arising therefrom, shall be divided and applied in like manner and to the same uses as herein before is directed.

IV. Provided also, and be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no information, or complaint, shall be received under this act, if more than six calendar months have elapsed since the time of the offence committed.

An Act to revive and continue an Act entitled "An Act to provide for the appointment of Returning Officers for the several Counties within this Province.

I. WHEREAS an act passed in the thirty-third year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "An act to provide for the appointment of returning officers for the several counties within this province," was limitted to be and continue in force for, and during the space of seven years; and whereas the time limitted in the said act is now expired, and it being necessary that the same should be revived and continued, Be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an act passed in the parliament of Great-Britain, entitled an act to repeal certain parts of an act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled, "An Act for making more effectual provision for the government of the province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said province;" and by the authority of the same, That the said act of the thirty-third year of his Majesty's reign, and every part thereof, and every clause, matter and thing therein contained, are by the present act revived and continued for, and during the space of eight years, and no longer.

An ACT for making a temporary provision for the regulation of trade, between this Province and the United States of America, by Land or by Inland Navigation.

I. WHEREAS it may be expedient to carry into effect that part of the treaty of amity, commerce and navigation, concluded between his Majesty and the United States of America, and signed at London in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-four, which authorizes the levying and collecting the same duties upon articles imported into this province, from the United States of America, by land or inland navigation, as the same would be liable to if imported by the port of Quebec, Be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an act passed in the parliament of Great Britain, entitled an act to repeal certain parts of an act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled, "An Act for making more effectual provision for the government of the province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said province;" and by the authority of the same, That it shall and may be lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the government of this province, by and with the advice and consent of his Majesty's Executive Council, by order, or orders to be from time to time issued, and published, to establish such ports of entry, and to make such other regulations for the purposes aforesaid, and for carrying on the trade by land or inland navigation, between the people and territories of his Majesty in this province, and the people and territories of the United States of America, as may be necessary, in order to carry such parts of the said treaty into effect, and all, and every such orders, and regulations shall have the same force, effect, and validity, as if the same were herein particularly repeated and enacted; any law, statute, custom, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That this act shall be in force until the first day of June, which will be in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and one, and from thence to the end of the next session of the provincial parliament, and no longer.

LONDON, June 8.

THE result of the different affairs of the advanced posts since the arrival of the army in its present position has uniformly been to the advantage of the Austrians.

No very material alteration has taken place in the line of operations, as mentioned in our last number. The operations of General Kray appear to have been directed with great judgment, notwithstanding the impetuosity of the French in their advances, the Imperialists have succeeded in stemming the torrent of invasion, and opposing an effectual barrier to the further progress of the enemy. The situation of the entrenched camp at Ulm is equally calculated for offensive and defensive measures, while it is impossible for the enemy to push forward on either side, to cut off the reinforcements which may be sent from Hungary, Bohemia, Austria, Bavaria, and the smaller states of the empire in that quarter. The Republicans have certainly gained many essential advantages. They have carried off many valuable magazines of provisions and warlike stores; they have facilitated the march of the army of reserve, and they have taken possession of Fieldkirch and Coire, posts of the utmost importance, and admirably adapted to accelerate their communications with Buonaparte in the North of Italy. It is, however, evident that the victories claimed by the French in their official dispatches could not have been as decisive as they have been represented, since they have been compelled to linger so very long in the career of victory before the walls of Ulm.

The movements of Gen. Melas against the left wing of the army of Italy have been attended with complete success, he has by a very masterly stroke diminished the number of his enemies.

The struggle that is to decide the fate of Genoa, will probably take place in the plains of Piedmont, where the Austrian cavalry are encamped in very considerable force. The British fleet, under the command of Lord Keith, is rendered the most effective to the common cause; but Malta seems determined to hold out to the last.

June 9.

Silver medals, in commemoration of the happy escape of his Majesty at Drury-lane Theatre, have been struck, by order of Mr. Sheridan; the front represents Providence protecting the King from the traitorous attempt against his life, figuratively displayed by a Shield and thirteen Arrows, pourtraying the Sovereign's safety; and, encircled, are the words "God save the King!" On the reverse of the Medallion is the British Crown in the centre of a Wreath of Laurel, the radient beams of Glory spreading their influence over it; the words, "Preserved from Assassination, May 15, 1800," and, on the Knot of the Wreath, "Give God Praise."

The Foudroyant, of 80 guns, in her engagement with the Guillaume Tell, expended 162 barrels of powder, 1200 thirty-two lb. shot, 1240 twenty lb. do. 100 eighteen lb. do. and 200 twelve lb. do. Although much damaged, she was within a very short period ready for sea. Lord Nelson had previously been landed at Syracuse, in consequence of a severe illness.

Downing-street, June 7, 1800.

A dispatch, of which the following is an extract, has been received from Lieutenant Colonel Clinton, by the Right Hon. Lord Grenville, his Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

Head-quarters, Ulm, May 22, 1800.

My Lord,

Since the army crossed the Danube at this place on the 12th inst. the enemy has not ventured to undertake any movement of consequence: in the night of the 18th he passed the Danube in considerable force, at Erbach, and the following day reconnoitered the position of the Austrians, on the heights above the town, which he found so formidable, that he recrossed the Danube in the course of the night, and resumed his position between that river and the Iller, without attempting any thing.

June 10.

By Mr. Arthur Paget's servant, who arrived on Sunday from Palermo, government also received dispatches from Lord Keith, of a very recent date, and of considerable importance. His Lordship's dispatches, after stating the surrender of the citadel of Savona on the 13th of May, in consequence of famine, mention, that on the 19th of the same month the Magistrates of Genoa requested permission of Gen. Ott to send a flag of truce to Gen. Melas, which was granted. The nature of the message was not known, but it is supposed to contain an offer to surrender up the city on certain conditions.

Mr. Jackson's dispatches from Turin confirm the report of the march of gen. Melas towards Piedmont, for the purpose of attacking the army of Reserve before it receives additional reinforcements. It is stated that the whole of Buonaparte's army did not exceed 19000 men on the 15th of May. Moreau is certainly drawing off a part of his army from the Danube, to support the projects of the Chief Consul in Italy.

The forces which sailed in different troop ships from Portsmouth on the 23d, and from Plymouth on the 24th of May, under sealed orders, appear to have been destined for Quiberon Bay, where they were disembarked at Carnac, under the orders of Gen. Maitland, and the next day they attacked and carried Fort Penthievre.

The present expedition to Quiberon is not undertaken, like the former one

HE result of the different affairs of the advanced posts since the arrival he army in its present position has ornably been to the advantage of the rms.

o very material alteration has taken e in the state of the armies at the e our last number. The operations ve K y appear to have been ted with great judgment, and notstanding the impetuosity of the ch in their advances, the Imperialists have succeeded in stemming the ent of invasion, and opposing an effectual barrier to the further progress of enemy. The situation of the entched camp at Ulm is equally calcud for offensive and defensive measures, while it is impossible for the enemy push forward on either side, to cut off the reinforcements which may ne from Hungary, Bohemia, Austria, Bavaria, and the smaller states of empire in that quarter. The Republicans have certainly gained many antial advantages. They have cut off many valuable magazines of provions and warlike stores; they have ilitated the march of the army of serve, and they have taken possession of ildkirch and Coire, posts of the utt importance, and admirably adapted to accelerate their communication h Buonaparte in the North of Italy. is, however, evident that the victas claimed by the French in their offidispatches could not have been as sive as they have been represented. e they have been compelled to stop so very long in the career of victo before the walls of Ulm.

The movements of Gen. Melas against left wing of the army of Italy have en attended with complete success, & has by a very masterly stroke diminished the number of his enemies.

The struggle that is to decide the fate Genoa, will probably take place in plains of Piedmont, where the Austrian cavalry are encumpered in very comerable force. The British fleet, under the command of Lord Keith, is dered the most useful services to the mmon cause; but still it seems determined to hold out to the last.

June 9.

Silver medals, in commemoration of the happy escape of his Majesty at Drury-lane Theatre, have been struck, by order of Mr. Sheridan; the front represents Providence protecting the King from the traitorous attempt against his life, figuratively displayed by a Shield and shivered Arrows, pourtraying the Sovereign's safety; and, encircled, are the words "God save the King!" On the reverse of the Medallion is the British Crown in the centre of a Wreath of Laurel, the radient beams of Glory spreading their influence over it; the words, "Preserved from Assassination, May 15, 1800," and, on the Knot of the Wreath, "Give God Praise."

The Foudroyant, of 80 guns, in her engagement with the Guillaume Tell, expended 162 barrels of powder, 1200 thirty-two lb. shot, 1240 twenty lb. do. 100 eighteen lb. do. and 200 twelve lb. do. Although much damaged, she was within a very short period ready for sea. Lord Nelson had previously been landed at Syracuse, in consequence of a severe illness.

Downing-street, June 7, 1800.

A dispatch, of which the following is an extract, has been received from Lieutenant Colonel Clinton, by the Right Hon. Lord Grenville, his Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

Head-quarters, Ulm, May 22, 1800.

My Lord,

Since the army crossed the Danube at this place on the 12th inst. the enemy has not ventured to undertake any movement of consequence: in the night of the 18th he passed the Danube in considerable force, at Erbach, and the following day reconnoitered the position of the Austrians, on the heights above the town, which he found so formidable, that he recrossed the Danube in the course of the night, and resumed his position between that river and the Iller, without attempting any thing.

June 10.

By Mr. Arthur Pagett's servant, who arrived on Sunday from Palermo, government also received dispatches from Lord Keith, of a very recent date, and of considerable importance. His Lordship's dispatches, after stating the surrender of the citadel of Savona on the 13th of May, in consequence of famine, mention, that on the 19th of the same month the Magistrates of Genoa requested permission of Gen. Ott to send a flag of truce to Gen. Melas, which was granted. The nature of the message was not known, but it is supposed to contain an offer to surrender up the city on certain conditions.

Mr. Jackson's dispatches from Turin confirm the report of the march of gen. Melas towards Piedmont, for the purpose of attacking the army of Reserve, before it receives additional reinforcements. It is stated that the whole of Buonaparte's army did not exceed 19000 men on the 15th of May. Moreau is certainly drawing off a part of his army from the Danube, to support the projects of the Chief Consul in Italy.

The forces which sailed in different troop ships from Portsmouth on the 23d, and from Plymouth on the 24th of May, under sealed orders, appear to have been destined for Quiberon Bay, where they were disembarked at Cairn e under the orders of Gen. Maitland; and the next day they attacked and carried Fort Penthievre.

The present expedition to Quiberon is not undertaken, like the former one in June 1795, with a view of fomenting an insurrection in the Western departments of France, but to keep the peninsula as a Point d'Appui, and harbour for our ships of war, and thereby to harass more effectually the trade of the enemy, particularly in provisions, between the Western coast and Brest.

Our private advices from Hamburgh of the 8th inst. inform us, that Moreau is at length retreating, but very slowly, and every day fighting. His retreat is less owing to the ineffectual attempts which he has made against the very formidable position of the Austrians before Ulm, than his having been forced at the desire of Buonaparte, conveyed to him by Carnot, to detach 18000 men, in order to cover the lesser cantons, which are much threatened by the Austrians, and particularly to support the movements of Berthier, who is pushing into Italy by the Valais, at the head of more than 25,000 men, from Switzerland to the army of reserve. General Kray, whose army is every day reinforced, follows him, and will no doubt press upon him so closely as to embarrass him greatly in his retreat.

It must for the present remain a matter of conjecture, to what causes are to be attributed the recommencement of hostilities in Egypt. It is certain, however, that immediately after the interception of the Egyptian Correspondence, the English Government having discovered the duplicity of Buonaparte and Kleber in treating, sent out orders to counteract the republican perfidy. It is equally certain, that afterwards, when they received information of the Convention having been actually concluded by Sir Sidney Smith (whatever was their opinion of the expediency of the part taken by that excellent officer) they determined to accede to it; and that they sent out orders accordingly.

These orders, only contradictory from the intervention of unknown events, arrived at different periods, as was natural. The strange and perfidious conduct of Kleber can only be ascribed to some secret information respecting the first instructions, and he will be eternally censured as having acted upon that information respecting the wishes of the English Cabinet, without waiting to know positively the fact, whether they would ratify or deny the guarantee of Sir Sidney Smith. Had gen. Kleber thought proper to wait for positive information upon this head, he would have had no occasion for even a pretended retreat, nor would the blood of so many innocent Musulmen taken by surprise, nor of so many unhappy Christians massacred in revenge, be to be laid to his account. Still less would he be touched with remorse for the fate of the army he commands, of whom a single individual can never reach the shores of France, unless by the unmerited mercy of the brave but undisciplined enemy they have outraged beyond the patience and sufferance of humanity.

Whatever may hereafter appear to have been the precise and immediate motive of this horrid transaction, we cannot forbear to remind the public of Buonaparte's instructions to Kleber, published in the intercepted correspondence, by which it appears the French government never intended to observe it; that their object was only to give time, and to deceive the powers who were weak enough to believe in the sincerity of their pacific offers.

Massena still continues obstinate, in expectation of relief—and the Austrians have began to bombard the unfortunate city of Genoa.

In Germany, the French army under Moreau, although lately boasting of its victories—has been, in its turn, compelled to retreat, by gen. Kray; whose forces have recently been considerably augmented.

On the 19th of May the Channel fleet under Lord St. Vincent, returned to Torbay, in order to repair some material damages, which most of the ships had sustained, in a violent gale of wind, which happened early in that month. The gale was at one time so severe, that the Atlas of 98 guns, (one of the fleet) was thrown on her beam ends—her lee guns, and six feet of her main yard, were under water, and it was with great difficulty she righted.

The combined fleets are said to have taken advantage of this disaster, and put to sea; whither bound is not ascertained; but we understand, that Lord St. Vincent, with a respectable number of ships, had gone in quest of them.

Genoa still holds out.—The French army having crossed the Alps, had reached the plains of Piedmont on the 18th of May—General Melas had advanced with the main body of his army to Turin, and it was expected that a general engagement would take place in a few days which would decide the fate of Italy.—The Austrian army under Gen. Kray, had retired behind the Danube, after leaving a garrison in Ulm, and Gen. Moreau did not discover a disposition to advance further into Germany, but was detaching a part of his army to Italy.—The renewal of hostilities in Egypt is confirmed by official advices received by Government.—A report prevailed that the French fleet was at sea, and this report was confirmed by an American vessel, the master of which reported that he had fallen in with a Venetian, which came through them.—If this intelligence is true we have no doubt but our brave Tars will soon give a good account of them.—The treaty between France and America, was progressing fast, and it was expected would in a very short time be finally concluded.

The Hamburgh mail, which arrived in course yesterday, has not brought intelligence of any peculiar interest. The accounts from the theatre of war in Germany are two days later than those received from Col. Clinton, and published in the gazette of Saturday evening.

All remarks with respect to the real designs of Gen. Moreau are fully confirmed. He does not intend to penetrate further into Germany, but is now stretching his line to the Tyrol and the Vorarlberg, for the purpose of favouring the operations of the French army of reserve, to which he had already dispatched, by the way of Mount St. Gothard, a corps of 25,000 men.

General Melas, as we had previously observed, appears to have had early information of the progress made by General Berthier and Buonaparte. He was to proceed to Turin on the 14th of last month, in considerable force, and having effected a junction with the Austrian cavalry near that place, it was expected that he would immediately prosecute offensive operations against the enemy in Piedmont.

Massena still makes a gallant defence in Genoa, and the hopes of the speedy reduction of that important city become every day less sanguine, more particularly as the French have received large supplies of provisions by sea.

The death of Suwarrow has at length been officially announced to our government. It happened on the 18th of May at Petersburgh.

The Ruſſian ambaſſador at Vienna has been recalled. The affairs of the Imperial Court are in future to be conducted by a Charge des Affaires, the ſame as in this country. The Emperor Paul is ſaid to be negociating a peace with the French Republic, through the medium of the Court of Berlin.

IRELAND.

DUBLIN, June 3.

In conſequence of the very judicious regulations lately made by government to prevent all illicit export of corn, bread, biſcuit, &c. from any of the ports of this kingdom, the price of wheat and flour have been gradually lowering, and the aſſize of bread in proportion increaſing, for ſome weeks paſt. On Saturday there were two ounces added to the aſſize of bread by order of the right hon. the lord mayor: ſo that in a very ſhort time the twelve-penny houſehold loaf has increaſed above 8 ounces, being now 4lb.—Oatmeal has alſo fallen in price, and we are happy to be informed, that there is a ſtill further proſpect of a reduction in every kind of grain out of market.

Crops of all kinds never looked more luxuriant and thriving at ſo early a ſeaſon.—In ſhort, we have the greateſt proſpect of a moſt plentiful harveſt, that has appeared within theſe twenty years.

May 14. Laurence Malone, gardener to John Verſchoyle, Eſq; of Roſe Vale, exhibited to Mr. Byrne, Blackrock, on Monday laſt, and regiſtered a very fine ripe melon, which, being the firſt, entitles him to the premium. We do not remember to have heard of ſo early a production of the kind in this country. He alſo cut cucumbers of a large ſize on the 10th March laſt.

MEATH, April 28.

Thurſday night laſt, five perſons in the gaol of Trim, effected an eſcape, two of whom were under ſen ence of death. A ſixth was ſhot by the guard of the gaol, in the attempt. Another of the party, who his confederates feared was about to retreat and give the alarm, while they were upon the wall of the gaol, was thrown by them from thence and killed. They accompliſhed their liberation by means of their blankets, which they tore up in ſtripes, and formed a ladder for that purpoſe, in conſequence of which all the blankets have been ſince taken from the priſoners in the gaol. As ſoon as their eſcape was known the country round was ſearched for them, and it is more than probable they will not elude the purſuit.

At the adjournment aſſizes held at Trim on the 8th of May, nine perſons were capitally convicted, and received ſentence of death for crimes committed as defenders. Several others were convicted for inferior offences. Thoſe charged with high treaſon will not be tried till next aſſizes.

KILDARE, April 22.

On Friday laſt, a fire broke out in the houſe of Mr. Wall, an eminent ſhopkeeper of Celbridge, which in a few hours, conſumed his entire houſe, ware-houſe, furniture, and nearly the whole of his ſtock in trade. The humane inhabitants of the town, at the riſk of their lives ſaved part of the merchandize from the mercileſs fire, but villains equally mercileſs, carried off all they could lay their hands on. In the article of linen alone they took off 26 pieces and a pocket book with about 200l. in bank notes.

Mr. Wall a few years ago was largely in country trade, but had the misfortune to fail: he compounded with his creditors for a ſmall dividend. By his own and wife's induſtry, he was enabled and did pay 20s. in the pound to all his creditors, but he is now left without a ſhilling to ſupport his wife and ſmall children.

ENNIS, (co. Clare) April 25.

Yeſterday, about one o'clock in the afternoon, a fire accidentally broke out in a houſe in Gort, occaſioned it is ſuppoſed, by the careleſſneſs of ſome carpenters who were at work, by lighting chips. Its effects were ſo rapid, owing to a ſtrong wind at the time, that in the ſpace of little more than an hour it conſumed upwards of twenty houſes. Several very reſpectable inhabitants of Gort are conſiderable ſufferers on this melancholy occaſion.

ANTRIM, March 23.

The grand jury of this county were enabled to congratulate the county, on the peaceable, quiet, and orderly behaviour of the inhabitants, at a time when ſome neighbouring counties were diſgraced by cruel and atrocious conduct, which was evinced by the ſmall number of indictments offered to their conſideration.

FRANKFORT, May 24.

Yeſterday ſeveral German deputies paſſed through Nancy, with paſſports from Gen. Moreau, on their way to Paris, to enter into negociations for peace.

MILAN, April 29.

Reſpecting the late victories, General Melas has iſued two proclamations, in one of which he ſays: "Theſe victories have even gained to us the admiration of the enemy. Let us perſevere only for a ſhort time more, and we will be richly rewarded for our exertions.—The enemy is blocked up in Genoa, with 7000 combatants, and 18,000 partly ſick, partly wounded. The preſence of the enemy only increaſes the miſery of the inhabitants, and the greateſt ſcarcity of bread prevails at Genoa. The perſeverance evinced by the troops, in the preſent fatiguing method of carrying on war, is beyond example. The enemy's fury, even if it ſhould carry them to the laſt extremity, in making ſallies, will certainly be repelled. We have already taken 37 pieces of cannon, 10 field pieces, 1500 hollocks, and 140 cwt. of ammunition. At the head quarters alone the number of priſoners amounts to one General, 72 officers, and 500 privates."

A corps of reſerve is to be ſtationed near Bellinzona to cover the frontiers of Switzerland and the Valais.

Admiral Keith has declared, that he would order any Captain of a ſhip to be hanged, who ſhould aſſiſt Maſſena in effecting his eſcape.

The following is the letter which General Melas wrote to Gen. Maſſena, ſummoning him to ſurrender the city of Genoa:

"General,

"Fortune has not crowned your value, which alone renders you worthy of my eſteem, and that of the whole univerſe. With your ſmall number of men you muſt fall under my exertions; but you will fall with honor. I believe it is time to liſten to the voice of humanity. General Suchet has again been defeated at St. Giacomo, and you can no longer have any hope from ſtruggling againſt the forces I command.

"Every drop of blood which your courage may cauſe to be ſhed will fall upon your own head; you will encreaſe the miſfortunes of a people who have already ſuffered too much. The city, which yet holds out, is expoſed to ſtill greater evils. It is threatened with pillage and all the horrors of war, ſhould the peaſants enter it with their minds inflamed, and without any previous capitulation. I cannot even anſwer completely for my own victorious troops.

"Hear then the voice of humanity, and ſacrifice the glory of defending yourſelf to the laſt drop of blood, to the real glory and admiration of which no one can deprive you. I offer you that honorable capitulation which an officer of your character deſerves, and thus I teſtify the eſteem with which I am, &c.

"MALAS."

ARMY OF THE RHINE.

Extract of a letter from the Head quarters of the Right Wing at Memmingen, dated May 12.

"This morning Lecourbe entered Memmingen. Kray evacuated it during the night, after having in vain contended during the preceding evening againſt a diviſion of our corps of the army. All the accounts confirm, that Kray was there in perſon at the head of about all his army, united by forced marches.—We took from him 1500 priſoners, including the red cloaks, whom Lecourb took on their road to him, in the foreſt above Attrach.

"On the 9th Moreau defeated the enemy at Biberach, and put out of the battle (mis bars de combat) 5000 men, 2000 of which number were priſoners.

"On the right corps of the army of Lecourbe, Vandamme took on the 10th a convoy of 150 carriages, containing wheat and oats, on their road to Feldkirch, and 250 horſes.

"Kray is retreating to Ulm, which, it is ſaid, he has cauſed to be evacuated. It is thought that he will abandon that place to retreat behind the Lech. The army is, perhaps, about to reſt for ſome days."

SUABIA, May 9.

Should Gen. Kray, whoſe head quarters remained at Kohlingen on the 7th, be obliged to retreat till Lether, it muſt be behind the Iller, which is received by the Danube near Ulm; the ſecond poſition would in that caſe be behind the Lech.

It is evident that Moreau's manoeuvres were not foreſeen.

AUGSBERG, May 12.

All that we have been able to learn is, that yeſterday the Auſtrians maintained their poſition near Mindelheim. Early this morning orders were received by all the retreating columns of the artillery of reſerve, ammunition waggons, &c. not to march to the Lech, but to the Danube. In conſequence of this, all the carriages have paſſed this city ſince four o'clock this morning, towards Donauwerth, &c. Thus it ſeems that General Kray intends to withdraw to the Danube.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, October 4.

We hope our readers will be so kind as to excuse us for not publishing the Gazette last week, as it was merely owing to an unforeseen accident which happened to our press.

A Paris article says, that 8000 persons perished at Genoa for want of food.

It was rumoured in London on the 30th of June, that a messenger had arrived there from Cuxhaven, charged by Buonaparte to make a renewal of overtures to the Court of Great Britain for peace. The report gained credit with the week, but had no effect on the price of Stocks. It melted the day following into thin air.

The English and Batavian governments had been occupied for six weeks in discussing some commercial arrangements which were proposed by the latter, and in which they are mutually interested.

The British ministry had not on the 1st of July received information of the late decisive victories obtained by the French in Italy. They are said to have another expedition to Holland in agitation.

Peace was said to be the general wish of the English nation.

The disaffection excited amongst the people of Egypt previous to the renewal of the war in that country, towards the Ottoman government, by the enormities committed by its troops, had extended to the chiefs, from an account that the Porte had appointed 5 Pachas to govern Egypt, instead of the Beys, who encouraged by the defeat and dispersion of the Turkish army, are said, together with the Mamelukes & Arabs, to have joined their fortune with the French. This intelligence, which is fully credited at Constantinople, has excited the most lively distress amongst the well disposed part of the people; whilst the rabble talk, by joining the tribes of free-booters, who ravage to the gates of the city, of partaking of general plunder.

LATE FROM EUROPE.

Received yesterday, by the ship Five Brothers, capt. Phillips, 35 days from London.

SURRENDER of GENOA.

Massena, gen. in chief, to the consuls of the French republic.

"CITIZENS CONSULS,

"I HAVE the honor to address to you the convention agreed on for the evacuation of Genoa, by the right wing of the French army.

"From the 5th of April, we have not received either from France or Corfica any succours.

"From the 21st of May, the inhabitants of Genoa have had no bread. The army received only six ounces, composed of a mixture, half bran & half maise. For the last ten days the maise was replaced by cocoa, and the allowance diminished to three ounces. The greater part of the horses have been consumed.

"On the 25th, the troops of the right wing began their march, with their arms, baggage and ammunition, to rejoin the centre of the army, which on the 26th was at Alassio—To-morrow I shall go there myself.

"I shall have the honor of transmitting to you immediately, an account of the events which have taken place from the 25th of April, to the 5th of June.

"Health and Respect, MASSENA.

"The accounts will be brought you, as well as the 8 standards taken from enemy, by my Ade-du-camp."

Negociation for the evacuation of Genoa.

Art. I. The right wing of the French army charged with the defence of Genoa, the general in chief, and his staff, shall depart with their arms & baggage to go to rejoin the centre of the army. —Answer. The right wing charged with the defence of Genoa, shall depart to the number of 8110 men; and shall take the road by land to go by Nice to France. The remainder shall be transported by sea to Antibes. Admiral lord Keith engages to furnish these troops with subsistence in biscuits, in the same proportion that they are distributed to English troops. On the other hand, all the Austrian prisoners made on the river of Genoa by the army of Massena in the present year, shall be given up in a body by way of compensation, except those already exchanged up to the present time. In other respects the first article shall be fully executed.

Art. II. Every thing belonging to the said right wing, as artillery, and ammunition of all sorts, shall be transported by the English fleet to Antibes, or to the Gulph of Jouan.—Answer. Granted."

☞ The articles are 16 in number—the residue provide that the sick, &c. shall be well treated, and sent to Antibes; that none of the Genoese should be molested for their political opinions, and that all officers of all ranks of Massena's army, taken prisoners from the commencement of hostilities in the present year, shall return to France on their parole, and are not to serve until exchanged. The articles were mutually exchanged on the Bridge of Cornegliano, on the 5th June, 1800—and are signed by Ott, lieut. gen.; vice admiral Keith; and Massena.

From gen. Massena to gen. Buonaparte.

"My General, Genoa, June 7.

"I have the honor to give you an account of the evacuation of Genoa, conformable to the annexed convention. I hope you will find it worthy of the obstinate resistance of the brave garrison shut up there. We had not hitherto lost a single inch of ground; throughout we preserved a constant superiority; and had it not been for want of subsistence, we would have forever held out in Genoa. This day I gave the soldiers the last three ounces of what we call bread, and which is nothing but a wretched mixture of bran of oat chaff, and cocoa nut, without any wheat. We have eaten all our horses.

"The mortality occasioned by famine was at its height among the people and the troops. Hunger, and the bombardment, had excited movements of insurrections always stifled from their birth. It was in the hope of seeing you arrive to our deliverance, that I carried so far the severity of measures which enabled us to wait for your arrival; but our means failed, and it was necessary to think of withdrawing, not to lose all, and to preserve to the republic the remainder of a body of troops whose firmness could not be changed by hardships, fatigue, or starvation hitherto unheard of; their physical strength had entirely failed, and I had nothing remaining but walking skeletons. The officer who carries my dispatches can tell you in this respect, all that has been suffered to preserve Genoa.

"I go with the garrison to join the centre of the army, and to act there according to the instructions which I request you will send me; it is from thence that you shall hear from me. Health & respect. Signed "MASSENA."

☞ OPERATIONS IN ITALY.

OFFICIAL BULLETINS.

Bulletin of the Army of Reserve, dated Milan, June 3.

"The division of gen. Lannes which had been the advanced guard from St. Bernard to Ivrea, was advancing to Chivasso to make the enemy believe that it was our intention to make a junction with gen. Thureau, who was between Rivoli and Susa. In the mean time the army filed off on the opposite side, and passed the Sesia and the Tesino. When it was sufficiently advanced, gen. Lannes repaired the Dora Baltea, passed to Crescentino, Trino, Vercelli, where he received orders to march upon Pavia which he entered this morning; he there found magazines very considerable in provisions, 130 millers of powder, 1000 sick or wounded Austrians, 500 pieces of brass cannon on carriages, a powder magazine, bullets, &c. To-morrow we expect the inventory from Pavia.

"Gen. Lechi, with the Cisalpine legion, has marched to Cassano.

"Gen. Dubesme, with the corps under his orders, has marched to Lodi."

MILAN, June 4.

"Te Deum has been sung in the Metropolis of Milan, for the happy delivery of Italy.

"All the hospitals of the enemy fell into our power. There were 1500 sick at Pavia, and 1200 at Milan. Every day we discover fresh magazines. Among others we have just discovered at Pavia one of 5000 coats, and 10,000 new mutquets.

"General Dubesme yesterday passed Lambro, after a slight affair of advanced posts. He has reached Lodi, passed Adda, and in pursuit of the enemy.

Letter from the First Consul to the Minister at war, dated Milan, June 4, contains the following:

"We are at Milan. We have found at Pavia 300 pieces of cannon, on their carriages, half of them for the field, and half for sieges; 10,000 new firelocks, a great quantity of powder and ammunition, and magazines of every kind.

"The enemy for a long time believed there were no more than seven or eight thousand men, and that we had made a diversion merely for the raising the blockade of Genoa and Nice. They persisted in this error till the 28th of May.

"At the affair of Chiusella their cavalry made seven or eight prisoners but the enemy got information from them which they were unwilling to believe.

"On the 2d of June, gen. Hohenzollern, who commanded the blockade of Genoa, appeared, as you have seen by a letter that I have sent to the consuls, not much to fear our forces. Gen Melas has written to Pavia to a woman he had with him—"I know they say at Lombardy that a French army has arrived. There is no danger. I will defend you on that side." Two hours after this we entered Pavia. We are at Lodi. The advanced guard of Moncey have arrived at Cano, and endeavor to collect boats sufficient to enable them to pass the Po.

"All the hospitals of Lombardy have fallen into our hands. We have found 5 or 6.000 sick and wounded.

Signed, "BUONAPARTE.

June 7.

"Gen. Loison, after having passed the Adda at Lodi, took possession of Crema, passed the Oglio in the affair of the 5th, and took possession of the Orisnovi, a place between Brescia and the Po, which is regularly fortified with bastions and a counterscrap.

"After having pursued the enemy upon the grand road of Brescia, gen. Loison made a counter march, and moved towards Cremona, to make himself master of the numerous magazines the enemy have in that place, then to pass the Po, and to join the corps of gen. Murat at Placenza.

Letter of gen. Buonaparte, first consul of the republic, to the two consuls.

"MILAN, June 9.

"You will see, citizen consuls, by the letters of gen. Melas, which are annexed to my preceding letter, that gen. Ott received orders to raise the blockade of Genoa on the very day that gen. Massena, urged by the total want of provisions, demanded a capitulation. It appears that gen. Massena has 10,000 combatants, and gen. Souchet nearly as many. If these two corps had united, as I think they have, between Oneglia and Savona, they will be able to enter Piedmont by the Tanaro immediately, and be very useful, at a time when the enemy will be obliged to leave some troops in Genoa.

"The greater part of the army is at this moment at Stadella. We have a bridge at Placenza. Orisnovi, Brescia, and Cremona, are ours.

"You will find subjoined different Bulletins, and many letters, which have been intercepted, and which it will perhaps be useful to publish. I salute you.

Signed BUONAPARTE."

The first consul writes to me to-day from Broni the following letter:

"We had yesterday a very brilliant affair. Without exaggeration the enemy had 1500 men killed, and twice as many wounded. We have made 4000 prisoners and taken five pieces of cannon. It is the corps of lieut. gen. Ott which came from Genoa by forced marches; he wished to open a communication with Piaisance.

As I have not time to dispatch a messenger to Paris, I request you will send this news to the consuls by a courier extraordinary.

We found in the place 30 millers of powder, and several magazines. We made 60 prisoners.

"On the 6th, gen. Murat possessed the head of the bridge of Piaisance, defended by 5 or 600 men and 20 pieces of cannon. But the enemy having cut from the coast of the town some bridges of boats, and defended the passage with 18 pieces of cannon, he fought another passage. "I had ordered gen. Lannes to proceed on the Po, and to endeavour to effect a passage opposite Stradella. The enemy had destroy ali the floating bridges, but gen. Lannes found means to assemble some vessels, in which the 28th of the line commenced to pass the Po, on the 6th, at 3 in the morning. One part of the 40th also crossed the river. The corps of troops under gen. Mainoni had taken the banks and marshes behind St. Cypriano. At 4 in the evening the regiment of Reiski & Gravates, amounting to 2000 men, supported by some pieces of cannon, attacked with impetuosity the troops which had landed, that consisted of 1500 men. Already had the enemy commenced to make way in our centre, when the order to charge was beat.—The combat was obstinate, but the enemy was put to the route. They left on the field of battle more than 300 killed & wounded, and we made 200 prisoners, and took two artillery waggons.—We cannot praise too much the intrepidity displayed on this occasion by the 28th and 40th demi-brigades, and general Mainoni who commanded them.

"The 19th, at 3 in the morning, the division having passed with its artillery, the 28th proceeded to Boni, where they charged with audacity the infantry and cavalry of the enemy. We made 200 prisoners in the action. The citizen Manegre, aid de camp to gen. Watrin, was wounded in the head. This distinguished officer had already received a wound in the affair of Chinsella.

"I hope that to-morrow, the 10th, all the army shall pass the Po. Gen. Lecchi had received orders to proceed to Lecco on the 7th; he found the passage defended by the enemy with artillery and gun boats—he determined to transport his vessels on waggons, to pass the Adda, and enter the lake—he sent over a column of 300 men, which turned the enemy, whilst another corps cannonaded the gun boats that defended the passage of Lecco. The enemy being turned, determined to fly, and, we captured four pieces of cannon, 2 gun-boats, and magazines of ammunition, and made twenty prisoners.

ALEX. BERTHIER."

From gen. Berthier to gen. Buonaparte.

H. Q. Broni, June 9.

"I have the honor to inform you, that having learned that gen. Ott had left Genoa with thirty battalions, and that he was arrived yesterday at Voghera. I ordered gen Lannes to quit the position of Broni, to attack the enemy wherever he should meet him, and gen. Victor to support him with his corps.

"Gen. Watrin met the first posts of the enemy at San Diletto; the principal force of the enemy occupied Casteggi, and the heights on the right, having much artillery in their positions, presenting a force of about 15,000 men. The 18th demi brigade, the 6th, 22d, and 40th, having repulsed the enemy's advanced guard, attacked his line in front, for the purpose of turning his right; the enemy obstinately maintained his position; never was there a more animated fire kept up; the corps mutually charged each other repeatedly; a battalion of the 40th who gave way, gave some advantage to the enemy; then gen. Victor made the division of Chamberlac advance; the 24th attacked the left of the enemy; the 43d, where gen. Victor was, turned the heights of the left, while the 96th pierced his centre, which it overthrew and decided the victory. The village of Casteggio was taken and retaken several times, as well as many other positions. The brave 12th regiment of hussars, who contended alone against the cavalry of the enemy, has performed wonders. The enemy was pursued to near Voghera.

"The result of this day gave us 6000 prisoners and 5 pieces of cannon, with their caissons. The enemy had more than 3000 men killed or wounded; we have had about 1500, among whom are the chief of the 2nd light demi brigade and my aid de camp, Laborde, slightly wounded on the head.

Signed ALEX. BERTHIER."

TELEGRAPHIC BULLETIN.

Paris, June 21.

"The first consul has obtained a complete victory on the 18th of June, 8000 Austrians and 40 pieces of cannon are taken by the French army. Six thousand dead, belonging to the vanquished, remain on the field of battle.

"The enemy capitulates for the restoration of Genoa, and the fortresses of Italy and Lombardy."

SECOND BULLETIN.

Same date.

"The army has been victorious at Maringo. This battle has decided the fate of Italy, and announces peace.

"We wait for an answer from Vienna. The armies will resume hostilities within ten days, if the answer be not favourable.

"Gen. Desaix is wounded in the head."

Maringo, where the battle mentioned in the above bulletin was fought, is a village on the right of the Bormidda, and the Tanaro, and about five miles distant from Alessandria.

Paris, June 24.

Gen. Cudinot writes from his H. Q. at Broglio, June 4. that gen. Rechambeau entered Nice the 29th; that the Austrians had retreated by the Col di Tende, into Piedmont, and that he was following them. He has taken from 2 to 3000 prisoners. (This was anterior to the surrender of Genoa.)

18. A letter from Nice of the 7th, announces the arrival of Massena, and his proceedings to join the army at Port Maurie.

A German Gazette asserts, that the Emperor has peremptorily demanded to have the 18,000 British troops in the Mediterranean placed under gen. Melas.

19. Savona has been recaptured, and Suchet is marching towards Genoa.—[☞ In all these accounts, it should be recollected, that the capture of places is frequently mentioned, when only the mere town is taken. All the fortified towns in Italy have citadels, that generally hold long and desperate sieges. We do not think the citadel of Savona will fall by a coup de paragraph.]

Halifax, N. S. Aug. 14.

Admiral Parker arrived here yesterday from England to take the command on this station. It is expected that some change will take place in the court of Admiralty. An American war is much talked of.

A letter from an officer in Earl Saint Vincent's fleet, states that the motions of the fleet are chiefly confined to a blockade of the enemy in Brest harbor, not the smallest vessel being suffered to pass unnoticed, and tho' the French fleet are more in number than the English, they have yet shewed no inclination to come out. Earl St. Vincent has 24 sail of the line immediately under his orders; five more are close off the harbor's mouth, besides several line of battle ships off Quiberon.

A Portuguese convoy of 12 sail from the Brazils to Leghorn, are captured by a French frigate off the Canary Islands. They were under the protection of two brigs, one of which was sunk, and the other made her escape and arrived at Barbadoes.

LONDON, July 2.

At a very early hour this morning we received Paris Journals up to the 28th inclusive. They contain very little news being chiefly occupied with more detailed accounts of the battle of Marengo. Gen. Berthier's official letter reduces the loss of the Auſtrians in killed to 3000, which is one half of the number firſt ſtated. On the 18th of June the French took poſſeſſion of Tortona, of Alexſandria on the 20th, and the citadels of Milan and Turin were ſurrendered the ſame day. Genoa was alſo given up about the 20th, but ſome diſpute is ſaid to have ariſen between Ld. Keith & the French, on account of the 119 ſhips which were claimed by his lordſhip, as having entered during the blockade, and for the releaſe of which he demanded 15,000l. ſterling.

We are not told how the buſineſs was adjuſted, but the character of Ld. Keith, both reſpecting this affair, and his pretended ill treatment of Delaix, when the latter was taken priſoner, is ſpoken of with an indecent ſcurrility, which does very little honor to its authors. Gen. Melas, with the whole of the Auſtrian army, has marched towards Mantua.—The French are ſending troops to Lucca, and gen. Muncay has marched from Breſcia to take poſſeſſion of the Valteline.

There are no further official accounts from the army of the Rhine, nor is any thing ſaid reſpecting the negociation with the Court of Vienna.

There is a report, which is not even credited by the journaliſts who have given circulation to it, and which we conſider as entitled to no manner of credit, that the Engliſh army has failed in an attempt to effect another landing at Quiberon, and that its loſs on this occaſion, in killed, wounded and priſoners, amounted to no leſs than 3000 men.

Letters from Conſtantinople of the 15th of May mention, that gen. Kheneris army becomes every day more eſtabliſhed in Egypt. It is ſtated that M. Elgin has made a declaration to the Porte, that altho' his Britannic Majeſty diſapproved of the conduct of El Ariſen, and of the conduct of Sir Sidney Smith, he would not impede the execution of it, from a reſpect to the Grand Seignior.

It is ſaid however, that Kleber refuſes to renew the convention on the ſame terms as heretofore.

Policies have been underwritten at Lloyd's, at a premium of 12 guineas to return 100, in caſe preliminaries of peace are ſigned between France & Auſtria within two months; and at a premium of 20 guineas, in caſe preliminaries are ſigned between France and England within ſix months.

July 4. This morning a meſſenger arrived at the Secretary of State's office with diſpatches from Lord Minto, ambaſſador at the court of Vienna; a courier had arrived there from Conſtantinople, with intelligence that the French army under the command of gen. Kleber, had been defeated in Egypt by the Turks.

This morning alſo arrived the Hamburgh mail due on Sunday laſt. The intelligence it brings from Italy is not of ſo late a date as to comprehend thoſe events which have produced ſuch a reverſe of fortune in that country. The lateſt date is Roveredo June 12.

In regard to the armies on the Danube, there are accounts ſo late as the 19th of June.

A letter from Ulm, of that date, ſpeaks of an action the afternoon of the 17th, at Leipheim, near Gunſburgh, on the left bank of the Danube, in a level country, where the Imperial cavalry could act with advantage. The reſult is not mentioned, but we are told that on the morning of the 18th 200 French priſoners had arrived in the neighbourhood of Ulm, and that the field of battle was covered with dead bodies. The French on the 19th formed a ſemicircle on the right bank of the Danube from the Illerdiſſen to Gunſburgh. The poſition of the Auſtrians extend from Wultzich through Biberach to Ulm.

July 7. The intelligence from the Danube is highly intereſting, and the details tranſmitted by gen. Moreau to the Chief Conſul reſpecting the action of Hochſtadt (the paſſage of the river between Blenheim and Dellingen) are both important and extraordinary. It was on the 22d ult. that this attack took place at day break; there were ſeveral falſe demarcations, but the real point was at Blenheim, where the bridges had been left ſtanding upon account of their decayed and dangerous ſtates, in which it was thought no army could attempt to paſs them. Eighty ſwimmers firſt paſſed the river, naked, with their arms following in two miſerable ſkiffs. The immediate iſſue of this affair, was the loſs of 5000 men in priſoners alone and 20 pieces of cannon, which fell into the hands of the French. But the remote conſequences of their ſucceſs were of ſtill more importance. General Kray immediately broke up from his ſtrong poſitions before Ulm, leaving only a ſufficient garriſon to defend it, and was marching, according to the letter of gen. Moreau, to give battle to the Republicans. We ſhall have the enemy, adds the French general, one half of his journey. Thus is the fate of Germany about to be decided in a battle, which threatens to equal or to exceed the horrible carnage we have lately to deplore in the north of Italy.

July 10. A motion tending to peace was made in the Houſe of Commons by Mr. Weſtern yeſterday, and rejected with the uſual powerful majority.

The Pope has made peace with Bonaparte.

12. The number of Britiſh troops ordered into the Mediterranean, is ſaid to prove that miniſters are aſſured of the determination of the Emperor to renew the war. It being ſuppoſed theſe troops are to join the Auſtrian army in Italy.

The French army in Germany have now reached the very ground they poſſeſſed in 1796, when Jourdan was defeated and Moreau was obliged to retreat.—The French occupied every place as faſt as the Auſtrians retreated. On the 23d and 24th ult. they took poſſeſſion of Gienger, Heidenheim, the valley of the Brenz, Aſen, Ellingen, Swabian Gemund, and Geislingen.

16. The Engliſh miniſters aſſert, notwithſtanding appearances, that the Emperor has no intention of making peace. Several meſſengers have lately arrived from the Britiſh miniſter at Vienna.

19. A report generally prevailed yeſterday, that negociations are on foot. The funds roſe. It is ſaid the Emperor has ſent diſpatches declaring he muſt make peace; and that the Engliſh court failing to induce him to continue the war, have requeſted to negociate in concert. Conſiderable agitation and diſmay exiſt in our cabinet. Mr. Pitt in obtaining a vote for a loan to the Emperor laſt evening, ſaid nothing inconſiſtent with this report. His language was ſuch as he would hold if about treating. (Albany Gazette.

The negociations with the Emperor cannot be broken off as hoſtilities have not been renewed in Italy. It is not yet declared whether the government in Italy is to be republican or monarchical: and the idea of the reſtoration of the King of Sardinia is not wholly excluded. If Buonaparte ſincerely wiſhes for peace, he will not attempt to revolutionize a ſingle diſtrict more than was agreed upon at the treaty of Campo Formio.

Miniſters, by propoſing to pay the Emperor a ſubſidy of 2 millions, exhibit a confidence in the continuance of the war.

JOHN CUMMING, & Co.

York, 6th August, 1800.

The following account of the Great Common Prison in Venice is given by Dr. Moseley, an English gentleman, who with some difficulty obtained permission from the inquisitors to visit it on the 6th Sept. 1787.

"I Was conducted through the prison with one of its inferior dependants. We had a torch with us. We crept a long narrow passages as dark as pitch. In some of them two people could not pass each other. The cells are made of massy marble, the architecture of the celebrated Sansovino.

"The cells are not only dark and black as ink, but being surrounded and confined with huge walls, the smallest breath of air can scarcely find circulation in them. They are about nine feet square on the floor, arched at the top, and between 6 and 7 feet high in the highest part. There is to each cell a round hole of 8 inches diameter; thro' which the prisoner's daily allowance of twelve ounces of bread, and a pot of water is delivered. There is a small iron door to the cell. The furniture of the cell is a little straw and a small tub; nothing else. The straw is renewed, and the tub emptied thro' the iron door, occasionally.

"The diet is ingeniously contrived, for the perduration of punishment.—Animal food or a cordial nutritious regimen in such a situation, would bring on disease, and defeat the end of this Venitian justice—Neither can the soul, if so inclined, steal away, wrapt up in slumbering delusion, or sink to rest; from the admonition of her sad existence, by the goaler's daily return.

"I saw one man who had been in a cell thirty years; two who had been in twelve years; and several who had been 8 and 9 years in their respective cells.

"By my taper's light I could discover the prisoners horrid countenances. They were all naked. The man who had been there thirty years, in face and body was covered with long hair. He had lost the arrangements of words, and order of language. When I spoke to him he made an unintelligible noise, and expressed fear and surprize; and like some wild animals in deserts, which have suffered by the treachery of the human race, or having an instinctive abhorrence of it, he would have fled like lightning from me if he could.

"One whose faculties were not so obliterated; who still recollected the difference between day and night—whose eyes and ears though long closed with a silent blank, still languished to perform their natural functions, implored in the most piercing manner, that I would prevail on the jailor to murder him; or to give him some instruments to destroy himself. I told him I had no power to serve him in this request. He then entreated I would use my endeavours with the inquisitors to get him hanged, or drowned in the Canal Orfano. But even in this I could not serve him. Death was a favour I had not interest enough to procure for him.

"This kindness of death, however, was during my stay in Venice, granted to one man, who had been "from the cheerful ways of man cut off" thirteen years.

"Before he left his dungeon, I had some conversation with him:—this was six days previous to his execution. His transport at the prospect of death was surprising. He longed for the happy moment. No saint ever exhibited more fervour in anticipating the joys of a future state, than this man did at the thoughts of being relieved from life, during the four days mockery of his trial.

"It is in the Canal Orlano where the vessels from Turkey and the Levant perform quarantine. This place is the watry grave of many who have committed political or personal offences against the state or senate, and of many who have committed no offences at all. They are carried out of the city in the middle of the night, tied up in a sack, with a stone fastened to it, and thrown into the water. Fishermen are prohibited, on forfeiture of their lives, against fishing in this district. The presence is the plague. This is the secret history of people being lost in Venice.

"The government, with age, grew feeble, was afraid of the discussion of legal process, and of public executions, and navigated this rotten Bucentaur of the Adriatic, by spies, prisons, assassinations and the Canal Orlano.

"If there be an hell, the idea of which a virtuous mind can be susceptible, this is that hell—and some Italian devil was its inventor. Such a one as he of that country who, to accomplish the eternity of the perdition of his enemy, beguiled him to disclaim his faith, to save his life; then instantly stabbed him to the heart to prevent his repentance.

"What I now unfold in regard to the prison in Venice, is known but to a few people. I have reason to believe, that no foreigner besides myself witnessed the same I have related; the exploring which, nearly cost me my life.

"The heat and want of air in the passages among the cells, so oppressed my strength and respiration, that I could scarcely walk or breathe, when I left the prison. Sweat ran through every pore of my body. My cloathes were to my coat sleeves wet through. I staid too long there. I went to St. Mark's place as soon as I could—and by the assistance of the trembling Dominico, waiting for my return, the blessed sight of day, fresh air, and a few glasses Maraschino, I was enabled to get to my lodgings at the Scudo di Francia, off the side of the great canal, near the Rialto—where I was for several hours extremely ill, and for several days much indisposed.

"It is not my province here, to enquire whether the Venitian people were wicked or the Venitian government wise; nor to settle the proportion of crimes and punishments, in such a state as Venice. An Englishman cannot.

The late FRENCH DIRECTORY.

[By a Traveller.]

IT is curious to mark the characters of the five who have succeeded the Bourbons to the throne of this powerful nation, and to compare the state, before the revolution, with the present grandeur of these Pentarchs. Barras is the only one of them noble by birth, and of the military profession. The rest are all of obscure origin, and were trained to the peaceable trade of the Law.

In 1778, Barras had left the army, lived at Paris in wretched indigence in a garret; Merlin was an advocate in French Flanders, his native country, more obscure than thousands of the same profession. Reveilier Lepaux having abandoned the law, taught botany in a provincial college. Reubell practised law in the supreme courts of Alsace, and Treilhard did the same in the tribunals of Paris.—The botanical professor in Normandy, the lawyers of Brabant, Alsace and Paris, and the idle soldier in a garret, first met each other as deputies to the constituent assembly.—Little thought they then that in seven years they should divide among them the prerogatives of French Royalty.

The four lawyers had spent uniform and stationary lives. They had never travelled out of France, and got their wisdom from books rather than from observation. The soldier's life had been boisterous, full of change, perils and adventures. He fought with the English in the Carnatic; had led many a skirmish, and stormed many a mountain fort in the Deccan. He had escaped on a raft from a sinking ship, to an isle in the Indian Ocean, peopled by savages, and passed a whole month without the hope of ever again seeing the face of an European.

Barras was a count of the most ancient family in Provence, the most ancient of the French provinces. Merlin was a peasant's brat, born in a cabbin, in the new acquired and half galicised territory of Brabant. Revelliere was the son of a propertiest farmer in Guienne. Reubell was the misbegotten son of a man of his own profession in L'Isle de France.—The various original, as to place and rank of the five Directors, is therefore somewhat remarkable; only three of them, the Provincial, Gu[illegible]hois, and Parisian, are, strictly sp[illegible]ing, Frenchmen.

Barras commenced a grand and p[illegible]ous career with the Revolution. [illegible]force of mind, eloquence and intrep[illegible]ty, made him distinguished in all [illegible]transactions that terminated with [illegible]triumph of the Mountain; yet he [illegible]red the success without partaking in [illegible]sanguinary measures of their tyran[illegible]His exploits were illustrious; for [illegible]he subdued the revolt of the south[illegible]departments; secondly, he swayed [illegible]convention against Robespierre, and [illegible]the armed force against him and his [illegible]leagues; thirdly, he suppressed the [illegible]insurrections of the sections of Pari[illegible]against the Convention; and lastly, [illegible]has now become Director, and ch[illegible]superintends the internal adminis[illegible]on of the Republic.

Merlin passed from the hovel to [illegible]kitchen of a convent, where he acte[illegible]a servant, and thence to the office [illegible]lawyer. He was a great senatorial [illegible]der in all the efforts made for innov[illegible]on, and has passed through many [illegible]cutive and ministerial offices before [illegible]directorship.

Revelliere was first a deputy, th[illegible]provincial administrator, then a dep[illegible]again, and declaimer from the pu[illegible]then a fugitive, beset with numbe[illegible]hazards from the jealousy of Ro[illegible]pierre; then a deputy again; and fi[illegible]ly a Director.

Reubell has act[illegible]his part as a f[illegible]tor; secondly, as military commiss[illegible]er on the Rhine; and thirdly, has [illegible]charged the same functions against [illegible]rebels of La Vendee.

Treilhard has been active in th[illegible]gislative body, being in high reputa[illegible]elegance; but in stormy times, [illegible]to have studied privacy. He has [illegible]ambassador to Germany, and was o[illegible]the envoys to negociate with Mal[illegible]bury at Lisle, and at the Congr[illegible]Rastadt; all the five, therefore, [illegible]been leaders, and conspicuously a[illegible]from the beginning of the Revolu[illegible]

At the opening of this great [illegible]1788, Barras was in the prime of [illegible]being only 33 years old. He [illegible]youngest of the five. Reubell was [illegible]years older. Merlin was 34, Revel[illegible]was 36, and Treilhard was 38.

ON OATHS.

THE frequent taking of oaths [illegible]to lessen the reverence of them [illegible]to lead to perjury. It is an evil [illegible]lamented, that our laws require [illegible]upon too frequent and too frivolo[illegible]casions, which in all probabilit[illegible]been the means of encreasing the [illegible]perjury. Even to have the na[illegible]God in our mouths upon every [illegible]occasion, without due reverence [illegible]not in the way of swearing, is no[illegible]

my return, the bleſſed ſight of day, freſh air, and a few glaſſes Maraſchino, I was enabled to get to my lodgings at the Scudo di Francia, off the ſide of the great canal, near the Rialto—where I was for ſeveral hours extremely ill, and for ſeveral days much indiſpoſed.

"It is not my purpoſe here, to enquire whether the Venitian people were wicked or the Venitian government wiſe; nor to ſettle the proportion of crimes and puniſhments, in ſuch a ſtate as Venice. An Engliſhman cannot.

The late FRENCH DIRECTORY.

IT is curious to mark the characters of the five who have ſucceeded the Bourbons to the throne of this powerful nation, and to compare the ſtate, before the revolution, with the preſent grandeur of theſe Pentarchs. Barras is the only one of them noble by birth, and of the military profeſſion. The reſt are all of obſcure origin, and were trained to the peaceable trade of the Law.

In 1778, Barras had left the army, lived at Paris in wretched indigence in a garret; Merlin was an advocate in French Flanders, his native country, more obſcure than thouſands of the ſame profeſſion. Reveilier Lepaux having abandoned the law, taught botany in a provincial college. Reubell practiſed law in the ſupreme courts of Alſace, and Treilhard did the ſame in the tribunals of Paris.—The botanical profeſſor in Normandy, the lawyers of Brabant, Alſace and Paris, and the idle ſoldier in a garret, firſt met each other as deputies to the conſtituent aſſembly.—Little thought they then that in ſeven years they ſhould divide among them the prerogatives of French Royalty.

The four lawyers had ſpent uniform and ſtationary lives. They had never travelled out of France, and got their wiſdom from books rather than from obſervation. The ſoldier's life had been boiſterous, full of change, perils and adventures. He fought with the Engliſh in the Carnatic; had led many a ſkirmiſh, and ſtormed many a mountain fort in the Deccan. He had eſcaped on a raft from a ſinking ſhip, to an iſle in the Indian Ocean, peopled by ſavages, and paſſed a whole month without the hope of ever again ſeeing the face of an European.

Barras was a count of the moſt ancient family in Provence, the moſt ancient of the French provinces. Merlin was a peaſant's brat, born in a cabbin, in the new acquired and half galiciſed territory of Brabant. Revelliere was the ſon of a propertieſt farmer in Guienne. Reubell was the miſbegotten ſon of a man of his own profeſſion in L'Iſle de France.—The various original, as to place and rank of the five Directors, is therefore ſomewhat remarkable; only three of them, the Provincial, Guienhois, and Pariſian, are, ſtrictly ſpeaking, Frenchmen.

Barras commenced a grand and perilous career with the Revolution. His force of mind, eloquence and intrepidity, made him diſtinguiſhed in all the tranſactions that terminated with the triumph of the Mountain; yet he ſhared the ſucceſs without partaking in the ſanguinary meaſures of their tyranny. His exploits were illuſtrious; for firſt, he ſubdued the revolt of the ſouthern departments; ſecondly, he ſwayed the convention againſt Robeſpierre, and led the armed force againſt him and his coleagues; thirdly, he ſuppreſſed the two inſurrections of the ſections of Paris againſt the Convention; and laſtly, he has now become Directot, and chiefly ſuperintends the internal adminiſtration of the Republic.

Merlin paſſed from the hovel to the kitchen of a convent, where he acted as a ſervant, and thence to the office of a lawyer. He was a great ſenatorial leader in all the efforts made for innovation, and has paſſed through many executive and miniſterial offices before his directorſhip.

Revelliere was firſt a deputy, then a provincial adminiſtrator, then a deputy again, and declaimer from the preſs; then a fugitive, beſet with numberleſs hazards from the jealouſy of Robeſpierre; then a deputy again; and finally a Director.

Reubell has acted his part as a ſenator; ſecondly, as military commiſſioner on the Rhine; and thirdly, has diſcharged the ſame functions againſt the rebels of La Vendee.

Treilhard has been active in the legiſlative body, being in high repute for elegance; but in ſtormy times, ſeems to have ſtudied privacy. He has been ambaſſador to Germany, and was one of the envoys to negociate with Malmeſbury at Liſle, and at the Congreſs at Raſtadt; all the five, therefore, have been leaders, and conſpicuouſly active from the beginning of the Revolution.

At the opening of this great ſcene, 1788, Barras was in the prime of life, being only 33 years old. He is the youngeſt of the five. Reubell was nine years older. Merlin was 34, Reveilliere was 36, and Treilhard was 38.

ON OATHS.

THE frequent taking of oaths is apt to leſſen the reverence of them, and to lead to perjury. It is an evil to be lamented, that our laws require oaths upon too frequent and too frivolous occaſions, which in all probability has been the means of encreaſing the ſin of perjury. Even to have the name of God in our mouths upon every ſlight occaſion, without due reverence, tho' not in the way of ſwearing, is not proper, becauſe it tends to leſſen the reverence of his name in our minds, and to make us uſe it without having that reſpectful veneration which we ought to have at the uttering of it. We ought to imitate the example of the famous Mr. Boyle, who never uttered if in diſcourſe, without making a pauſe, as a token of the reſpect and veneration due to it.

THE COVETOUS MAN.

A Perſian merchant who had acquired immenſe riches by traffic, diſcourſing with a Derviche, told him that he intended to leave off trading: but that he wiſhed to make one journey more. "Son," ſaid the Derviche, "you have already ſpent the greateſt part of your life in travel; what journey do you propoſe to make before you ſettle?"—The merchant anſwered, that he meant to trade with ſulphur into China; "from thence (ſaid he) I will bring China ware to ſell in Greece; and from Greece I will carry ſtuffs of gold to the Indies; from the Indies I will bring ſteel to Hamlet; from Hamlet will trade with glaſs into Arabia Felix; and from Arabia Felix I will bring painted cloths into Perſia; and when I have done this, I will bid farewell to trade, and"—"Hold, ſaid the Derviche, there is but one thing capable of filling the covetous man's eye—that is the earth which is thrown upon him after his death."

NAVAL TACTICS.

A Writer in the Moniteur enters into a diſcuſſion of the very intereſting queſtion, "What is the cauſe of the Naval Superiority of the Engliſh over the French?" He flatters himſelf that he has made the diſcovery in a long eſſay, of which the following is the ſubſtance:

Reducing the poſſible cauſes of this excellence to three, he conſiders that in the two firſt of them, the ſuperior architecture of the ſhips, and the ſuperior theoretic ſkill of the officers, the advantage is on the ſide of the French. In the third, the direction of the artillery on board ſhip, he conſiders the whole ſuperiority of the Britiſh navy to conſiſt.

"The French," he obſerves, "direct their guns at the rigging which is above all the body of the veſſel. Three 4ths of the ſpace thus aimed at form a void, ſo that three-fourths of the balls thus fired loſe themſelves in the air. From the uncertain elevation which is given to the guns when they are directed againſt the rigging, the balls which ſtrike the maſts muſt neceſſarily ſtrike them one above the other; and experience proves, that fifty ſtrokes of this kind againſt a maſt do not break it, for though they may make the maſt uſeleſs for the future, they do not diſmaſt the veſſel during the combat.—The yards are ſtill leſs expoſed than the maſts, on account of the oblique manner in which they preſent themſelves to the enemy. The damage done to the cordage is not difficult to be repaired, eſpecially as the enemy muſt commonly be in a line from which they cannot depart, in order to profit of this momentary advantage. Notwithſtanding the great number of balls which paſs through the ſails they generally ſerve till the end of the engagement.

"Thus it appears, from the effect of directing the cannon in this manner, that it cannot ſecure the diſmaſting of the veſſels, and that the damage which it does to the yards, the cordage, and the ſails, is not of great conſequence. And thus alſo it is evident, that when the guns are pointed principally againſt the rigging, the hulk of the ſhip cannot be ſtruck, the guns cannot be diſmounted, nor any conſiderable number of men killed or wounded; from which it follows, that the crew of the enemy being ſo little injured, his valor, his force and conſequently the briſkneſs of his fire cannot be much enfeebled.

"The Engliſh direct their ſhot always againſt the hull of the veſſel. It is thus that they ſucceed in ſtriking between wind and water, in diſmounting guns, and in killing ſuch a number of the crew. In the firſt caſe they force their enemy to take away a number of men from the management of the guns for the ſervice of the pumps, & nothing is ſo fatiguing or diſpiriting as this.—When a fear of ſinking is induced, men are not much diſpoſed to contend for victory.—The diſmounted guns cannot then be replaced. The carnage which is produced among the crew diminiſhes its number, and ſpreads terror and alarm among the ſurvivors to ſuch a degree, that their courage, their force, and conſequently the briſkneſs of their fire muſt abate.

"When the cannon are directed againſt the hull of the veſſels, the balls which paſs above muſt paſs almoſt at the ſame height, ſo that thoſe which ſtrike the maſts hit them nearly at the ſame point, and it is this which injures the maſt preciſely in the manner which can bring it by the board.

"It appears to follow, from the above reaſonings, that the manner in which the Engliſh direct their guns muſt produce a much greater effect than that employed by the French, and that the ſuperiority of the Engliſh marine in battle conſiſts in the better employment of its artillery, that is to ſay, in the better directing of it. The facts which have taken place in the principal combats of this war ſupport theſe reaſonings. On the firſt of June, 1794, the Engliſh had two veſſels diſmaſted, the French had eleven. In the battle of the Nile the former had one, the latter had ſix. The Engliſh diſmaſted veſſels were thoſe which loſt the greateſt number of men. Other ſimilar facts might be added, but they are ſo well known, that it is unneceſſary to enter into ſo wide details.

"In order to make the truth of the preceding reaſonings, and the utility of their application more full, let us examine into the conduct of the Engliſh Admirals in battle, with a view of ſeeing whether they have fought by fineneſs of manoeuvring, the advantage of poſition, &c. or if they have depended upon the manner of directing their artillery. On the 1ſt of June, 1794, Admiral Howe, being to windward of the French, who expected him, made the ſignal to his fleet, that each ſhip ſhould manoeuvre in ſuch a manner as to attack his adverſary in the enemy's line. Thinking himſelf ſecure of victory, he only added to this ſignal another, which inſtructed them to get to leeward of the French, with a view of rendering their retreat, after defeat more difficult. Admiral Duncan, in the battle of the Texel, acted preciſely in the ſame manner with Howe, believing himſelf, like him ſure of ſucceſs, he paſſed to leeward of the Dutch, in order to prevent them, after the battle, from retreating into their ports, which were to leeward. When the advantage of the wind is in poſſeſſion, as in the two preceding caſes, and when, inſtead of profiting of the advantage which this poſition affords, it is only ſought to oppoſe ſhip to ſhip, it is to be preſumed that great confidence is placed in the manner of directing the guns.

"Admiral Nelson did not attack the whole French line—but why did he not do it? It was because his enemy, being at anchor, allowed him to employ all his veſſels againſt a part of theirs, and becauſe the French rear-guard, from its poſition and the ſtate of the wind, could only be a ſpectator of the deſtruction of the advanced guard and of the centre.

"The conduct of Admiral Rodney on the 12th of April, 1782, & of Howe on the 29th of May, 1794, may be oppoſed to the ordinary tactics of the Engliſh: but it ought to be examined why they acted in this manner. On the 12th of April, 1782, the French had the advantage of the wind, and ſailing better than the Engliſh, could keep themſelves at a diſtance, which was not conſiſtent with the Engliſh tactics. Rodney found himſelf obliged to break their line, in order to fight them nearer. The conduct of the French enabled him to ſucceed. On the 29th of May, 1794, the French had alſo the advantage of the wind over the Engliſh; and as they did not ſhew themſelves diſpoſed to come ſufficiently near, to engage in a deciſive affair, Admiral Howe, in order to force them to it, endeavoured to break their line. This manoeuvre did not ſucceed. It is known in what confuſion his fleet then was, and what the French Admiral had in his power to do. It may be ſuppoſed, from the conduct of the French in the battle, that their intention was only to get clear of the Engliſh veſſels, ſo as to avoid a deciſive affair, and they have ſo much this habit, that in the battle of the Nile, in which almoſt all the veſſels were at anchor, they nearly all perſevered in it. The headmoſt veſſel of the Engliſh line, to which a French veſſel ſurrendered, and which, on the following morning, ſet ſail to prevent the flight of the two French ſhips and of the two frigates which eſcaped, and whoſe fire ſhe received in paſſing, had only one man killed and a few wounded. The ſecond veſſel ahead of the Engliſh line had only two men killed, though a French veſſel ſurrendered to her alone. Other ſimilar examples might be adduced.

"To convince one's ſelf of the ſuperior utility of killing as many as poſſible of the enemy, rather than of injuring their ſhips, it is only neceſſary to read the official account of the Engliſh captains who have been taken, to ſhew that it is always the loſs of men which has forced them to ſurrender. If the ſuperiority of the Engliſh marine does not depend on the manner of their directing their artillery, upon what does it depend? Why are continual defeats which their enemies experience never interrupted by the chance of war? The French have reduced naval tactics to a ſyſtem. The Engliſh never ſtudy it; they have not even a ſchool for the marine. The facility with which they triumph over their enemies, has made them neglect the ſtudy of a theory ſurely neceſſary for the perfect knowledge of the practice which it teaches.

"It may be ſaid, perhaps, that the Engliſh veſſels are manned with better ſailors, and a greater number of them, than the French—But, in a battle, there is only a certain number choſen, to perform the manoeuvres, the remainder attend to the guns, and a ſailor is better for this than another man. The French have cannoneers: the Engliſh have none. Are the Engliſh ſailors more brave than the French: they ſhould be, as bravery conſiſts in a great meaſure in the confidence which one has in the means of diſplaying it, and in the ſmalneſs of the danger which a perſon believes that he runs. The habit of conquering alſo makes them engage in battle with an enthuſiaſm and courage, which men accuſtomed to defeats and ſevere loſſes cannot have. Do the Engliſh ſoldiers reſemble their ſailors? No; the French troops are to them, in this reſpect, what the Engliſh ſailors are to the French ſailors, and for the ſame reaſons.

"It appears from theſe new obſervations, that the ſuperiority of the Engliſh marine conſiſts in the manner of their directing their guns, and that the excellence of its officers and ſailors in the day of battle is only the natural conſequence of this.

"If its own means of victory were employed againſt this marine, it would not long continue to be the principal ſupport of a government which is the greateſt obſtacle to the triumph of the cauſe of liberty."

A HORRID MURDER.

CAPT. John Patterſon, inſpector at Horſley's Warehouſe in the town of Dinguidſville and county of Buckingham, was lately murdered in a cruel manner by Abram, a negro man ſlave, the property of the ſaid Patterſon. The circumſtances of this attrocious deed is in ſubſtance thus related by the wretch who perpetrated it—being his confeſſion at the time he was apprehended—repeated immediately after his trial and condemnation, and on the morning of his execution.—Says he—"In conſequence of ſome puniſhment inflicted on me by my maſter for ſome miſdemeanor of which I was guilty, a conſiderable time prior to the fatal cataſtrophe, I ever after meditated his deſtruction:—On the evening in which it was effected my maſter directed me to ſet off home (about 7 miles diſtant from the warehouſe, where I generally attended) and carry a hoe which we uſed at the place. I ſet off, and was determined to diſpatch him that night, after proceeding ſome diſtance I concluded to way lay him—having the hoe in poſſeſſion accordingly, I lay on or behind a log, convenient to the road on which my maſter was to paſs, and fell into a ſlumber—after waiting there a conſiderable time, I heard the trampling of horſes feet; I concluded therefore my maſter was near—I got up and walked forwards—my maſter ſoon overtook me, and aſked me (it being then dark) who I was, I anſwered Abram; he ſaid he thought I had been gone from town long enough to have been further advanced on the road; I ſaid, I thought not, I ſpoke ſhort to him, and did not care to irritate him—I walked on however; ſometimes by the ſide of his horſe, and ſometimes before him.—In the courſe of our travelling an altercation took place; I raiſed my hoe two different times to ſtrike him, as the circumſtances of the places ſuited my purpoſe, but was intimidated—when I came to the bridge (acroſs a ſmall ſtream) I thought that place favourable to my views, but ſeeing a light and ſome people at a houſe a little diſtant from thence, I reſiſted the impulſe. When I came to the fatal ſpot, being moſt obſcured by the loftineſs of the trees, I turned to the ſide of the road; my maſter obſerved it, and ſtopped; I then turned ſuddenly round, lifted my hoe, and ſtruck him acroſs the breaſt; the ſtroke broke the handle of the hoe—he fell—I repeated my blows; the handle of the hoe broke a ſecond time—I heard dogs bark at a houſe which we paſſed, at a ſmall diſtance; I was alarmed, and ran a little way, and ſtood behind a tree, till the barking ceaſed; in running, I ſtumbled and fell—I returned to finiſh the ſcene I began, and on my way picked up a ſtone, which I hurled at his head, face, &c. again and again, until I thought he was certainly dead—and then I went home."

The body was found the next morning, the features ſo defaced, the body ſo mangled, that it was with difficulty his perſon could be recognized—a ſcene too ſhocking for human ſight.—Capt. Patterſon was a man univerſally eſteemed. He was a tender huſband, an affectionate brother, a mild maſter, a kind neighbour, a faithful officer, in ſhort, he poſſeſſed every quality that conſtitutes the good citizen, and an amiable member of ſociety.

P. S. After the cruel monſter, who ſacrificed the life of ſo worthy a character to his revenge was hanged, his head was ſtruck off and exhibited on a pole about twenty-four feet high, in view of the ware houſe where he was uſually employed.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, November 1.

A very ſimple and economical method to take out every kind of ſpot occaſioned by fruits, ſuch as ſtrawberries, gooſeberries, &c. Cauſe the ſpotted part to imbibe water, and afterwards burn one or two common brimſtone matches over the place: the ſulphurous gaz which is diſcharged ſoon cauſes the ſpot to diſappear.

A gentleman going on horſeback lately, and not being able to find his ſpurs, a friend who was preſent adviſed him to take another glaſs, obſerving, "that one ſpur in the head, was worth two in the heel." The gentleman replied, "He had no objection; but was fearful he ſhould then be apt to ride with his head in the ſtirrup."

A plain ſpoken gentleman being aſked his opinion as to peace, replied, that a little conciliation and conceſſion might do wonders; but that if one party was determined to be Dog-matical, and the other Cat-egorical, he ſaw nothing for it, but worrying & ſcratching to the end of the chapter.

Once for thee I fought courageous, ('Twas a lucid interval,)
But a Gallic peſt contagious, Stole the wits of Crazy Paul!
Malta's Iſle your fleet blockaded;
Martin's ſkill each paſs ſecures;
Silly I, by France perſuaded,
Tho't it mine—but found it yours!
Little Paul no more grand maſter!
Mad with baby rag I bawl:
Malta fell, but how much faſter Fled the faith of Crazy Paul!
Now for Gallia's cauſe right hearty,
Fickle as the paſſing air,
Led about by Buonaparte!
Growling like a dancing bear:
How I ſhame the ſons of Ruſſia!
While intent to work they fall,

Cry "come help us, Crazy Paul!"

NEW-YORK, April 25.

WE are informed by capt. Newſon, of the brig Reſolution, arrived here yeſterday from St. Bartholomews, that a Britiſh ſquadron, conſiſting of one 98 gun ſhip, a 74, three frigates, and ſeveral brigs and ſchooners, to the number of 23, with 4000 troops, under the command of Admiral Warren, have taken St. Bartholomews, St. Martins, St. Thomas, and St. Croix—St. Bartholomews was taken on the 20th of March, St. Martins on the 23d, St. Thomas and St. Croix on the 28th April 27. The capture of St. Bartholomews by the Britiſh is confirmed. A gentleman of high reſpectability in this city, received a letter on Saturday from his correſpondent at St. Bartholomews, dated the 30th March, of which the following is an extract:

"I have to inform you that this colony was taken on the 20th inſt by capitulation entered into by Gen. Trigge and Admiral Duckworth, in the name of his Britannic Majeſty. The bearer hereof is capt. Andrew Flodberg, of the Swediſh Company's ſhip Triton, which with its cargo, has been taken, and the capt. permitted to return home on his parole."

We have not yet received a confirmation of the ſurrender of St. Martins, St. Croix, and St. Thomas; but there remains very little doubt of the fact.

NEW-YORK, April 29.

FROM LONDON—21 days the latest.

YESTERDAY afternoon arrived here the ſhip Sampſon, capt. Anderſon, in 23 days from London, ſhe ſailed from Cowes on the 1ſt of this month, and brings an irregular ſeries of London papers down to the 28th of March. From theſe papers we ſelect the following details—together with a ſummary of the laſt European events, which compriſe iſſue of the moſt importance.

It appears that Lord St. Helens had gone to Paris to negociate for a peace—and that a miniſter from Paris was about to embark for England.

That the Britiſh Government has revoked their late order for capturing the French fiſhing veſſels. This event was officially announced by Lord Hawkeſbury (preſent Secretary of State for foreign affairs) to Mr. Otto, commiſſary on behalf of the French priſoners.

That Lord Nelſon left Yarmouth Roads on the 11th ult. on an expedition up the Baltic, and was ſpoke on the 15th at the entrance of the Categat.

That it was the moſt prevalent opinion at Lloyd's, that a general peace would ſpeedily take place. In conſequence of this belief, ſtocks had taken a conſiderable ſtart.

That the Invincible of 74 guns, on her way to join the Baltic ſquadron, was lately loſt on the Sand Banks, off Yarmouth Roads, and about 400 perſons periſhed.

That the King had entirely recovered from his late indiſpoſition, and was indulging in his uſual recreations.

The report so generally credited last week, that the expedition to Egypt was about to be abandoned, and the troops were about to return, is discountenanced, by ministers. On the contrary it was stated that, by accounts so late as the 5th of February, General Abercrombie was preparing to carry the attempt into execution, that he had communicated with the Grand Vizier who had 18000 men under his command, which, though bad troops, would distract the attention of the enemy, and prevent them from concentrating their forces. Great hopes, it is said, were entertained by the army of success, as the French were represented to be very eager to return home. This account agrees with that received by the Princessa, Lee, arrived from Smyrna. The particulars of the intelligence by this vessel is as follows:—

Intelligence from the Mediterranean.

The Princessa, Capt. Lee, is arrived in the Downs, from Smyrna, from whence she sailed the 29th of Jan.

By the last accounts at that place from Macri, opposite Rhodes, Lord Keith and the troops under General Abercrombie were to sail for Alexandria the 28th Jan. the force consisted of about 17,000 men, all in good health and spirits. Lord Keith had seven sail of the line besides frigates. The first division of transports, consisting of about 26 sail, left Smyrna on the 28th of January, under convoy of the Victorieuse brig. It is supposed they put into Misurnise, near Metelyn, as the wind continued for three or four days to the southward. The transports left at Smyrna were expected to be ready the first week in February, and then to sail under convoy of the Greyhound frigate; they were part loaded with forage, and the rest fitted up as horse and mule ships.

A report was circulated at Smyrna, that the plague had broken out in the Vizier's army (already much reduced by desertion) at Jaffa. General Koehler and his wife had fallen victims to it.—The French in Egypt declared that they would withstand every attack the English might make.

A letter from Rhodes of the 27th of January, mentions, that Col. Anstruther, Mr. Hamilton, and Mr. Spurning, had been over to Marorica, and to have made provisions for watering the transports which with some of the horse ships had arrived from Smyrna. Several gun boats were prepared at Rhodes, and the whole expedition was in readiness to sail.

A report was received at Jaffa that two old 64 gun ships, three frigates and four transports with four to six thousand troops on board, had sailed from Toulon for Egypt.

The Termigant sloop had captured and sent into Rhodes a ship under Russian colours from Alexandria.

LONDON, March 24.

The Swedish Minister, Baron Ehrenward, has applied to Lord Hawkesbury for a passport to quit this country, which has been granted him; and he is to leave London, we believe, this day, to pass by the way of Dover into France. His excellency departs in a very uncourteous manner, without taking leave of the King.

It is said that the last dispatches from sir Ralph Abercrombie mention his having received advices from admiral Blanket at Suez, stating that the Bombay army would be ready to co-operate with the forces under the command of his excellency by the 5th February. It is said to be the intention of sir Ralph Abercrombie to disembark his army at Aboukir.

His majesty's ship Mercury, in the Mediterranean, has fallen in with 20 sail of merchantmen, laden with wine and brandy, from Cette, bound for Toulon, of which 15 were made prizes. The same ship also fell in with and captured a French corvette, laden with arms and amunition, out one day from Toulon, destined for the army of Egypt. All the prizes have been carried into Minorca.

Some dispatches which were sent off by count Strahremberg, in the course of the last week, to count Cobentzel, at Paris, have been construed by one of our journals into a proposition for peace between this country and France. It is not unimportant to observe the construction which is frequently attempted to be given to the most trifling occurrences. Those who are guided by such vague conjectures must be deceived. The point is of too serious a nature to be the subject of idle speculation. Whenever ministers see a fit opportunity for negociation, which some people seem disposed to press upon them too hastily, we have no doubt but they will avail themselves of it in a more direct and approved of manner.

The public will not attach to the presence of mr. Vanfittart, at Copenhagen, either the importance or the intentions, assigned to the journey of that gentleman by some of the papers. Mr. Vanfittart might indeed carry out discretionary powers to his friend mr. Drummond, or be joined with him in the sole negociation that can now take place between Denmark and Great-Britain; but it is difficult to conceive that any concessions of the former power can be accepted without a pledge for their observance. It is not six months since it signed a convention with lord Whitworth in sight of admiral Dickson's squadron. In the presence of sir Hyde Parker's it may sign another; but the fortress of Cronberg will be required as the pledge of its good faith; to be restored whenever a peace takes place between the country and other powers of the Baltic.

It was reported yesterday that five sail of French ships of war had been descried cruizing off Robin Hood's bay, on the coast of Yorkshire.

Last night we received Paris papers to the 21st inclusive.

Preparations continue to be carried on with the greatest activity by the Spanish government, for the invasion of Portugal. Twenty nine battalions of infantry, and eight squadrons of cavalry, are ordered to march into the province of Gallicia, where there are at present no less than 15,000 troops.—The Spaniards expect to be joined by a large body of Republican troops.

An armistice has at length been concluded between the French and the king of Naples, under the mediation of the emperor of Russia. The first effect of this convention was to order the departure of all the English shipping in all the ports of his Sicilian majesty and to order that no English vessels shall in future have access to them. The same order extends to Turkish ships. The English merchants at Naples have requested passports to return home.

A proclamation has been published by the French government, announcing a general peace on the Continent, which is to be celebrated by great rejoicing all over France; but the feast of peace, is not to be solemnized until the fourteenth day of July next.

The only illusion we can find in these papers to the reported change in the Dutch government, is an article from the Hague, dated March 15, which states that an agent is going to Berlin to treat of the indemnification the prince of Orange demands for the loss of the estates he had in the republic.—Perhaps this embassy may terminate in the arrangement mentioned, but the Paris journals do not mention the project.

The French frigate, the African, has been captured in the Mediteranean, after an obstinate engagement of four hours, during which she lost her capt. two lieutenants, and 127 men killed, and 176 wounded. The English ship that took her is mentioned in the Monitor.

March 28.

On Tuesday mr. Ryder moved, that his majesty, in council, should be authorised to permit the importation of foreign goods in neutral bottoms; and also to equalise the duties paid by foreign vessels, to those paid by English bottoms. The amendments were agreed to, and the report ordered to be received tomorrow.

CORN-EXCHANGE,

March 23.

We had but a few fresh arrivals this day of any kind, owing to the late blowing weather. Fine wheat went off readily at an advance of 10s. per quarter. Price of flour this day, 125s. to 130s.—meal, 120s. per sack.

We yesterday announced the melancholy intelligence of the loss of his Majesty's ship Invincible, which sailed from Yarmouth on Monday last to join the North Sea fleet. The following are some further particulars respecting that lamentable catastrophe:

The Invincible first struck upon that fatal bank, between two and three in the afternoon. In this situation she remained near three hours, when the mizen main mast went by the board, and the main mast was immediately after cut away. The ship to the infinite joy of the crew then dropped from about three and a half into 17 fathom water, where unfortunately losing her rudder, she soon became unmanagable, and was again driven upon the bank. A fishing smack now approached the wreck; on which two boats belonging to the Invincible were ordered out. On board one of these, the Admiral, the purser, four midshipmen, three of the Admiral's servants, and six or eight seamen, reached the fishing smack in safety, as did also the other boat full of people. Both of them immediately returned to the ship, but on reapproaching the smack, one was forced away, and every person would inevitably have perished, had not another which happened to be passing at this critical moment, happily picked them all up.—This vessel afterwards afforded every assistance that humanity urged, or that he was capable of giving, and was the means of saving the lives of many of the crew. The fishing smack, with the admiral on board, being unable to afford the least assistance to the ship, remained at anchor during the whole of Monday night. On the approach of day the master of this vessel expressed an unwillingness to go any nearer the wreck; but admiral Totty, in direct opposition to him, caused the cable to be cut, and immediately proceeded to the ship. Melancholy, however, to relate, while he was doing every thing of which human exertion is capable, to assist the unhappy people on board, the wreck once more got into deep water, and gradually sunk, to the infinite distress of the admiral and the other spectators, who were nearly frantic with grief, at this tremendous scene of human misery and destruction.—While the ship was thus rapidly going down, the launch was hove out—as many of the crew as she could possibly hold, instantly jumped on board, and had only time to clear the poop, when the vessel, with upwards of 400 souls, entirely disappeared and went to the bottom. A number of the unhappy sufferers attempted to get on board the already over laden launch, but as no more could be permitted to enter, without the certain loss of the whole, they were struck away with the oars, and in a few seconds became wholly ingulphed in the pitiless waters. Captain Rennie, after the ship had sunk, attemp-it signed a convention with lord Whitworth in sight of admiral Dickson's squadron. In the presence of sir Hyde Parker's it may sign another; but the fortress of Cronberg will be required as the pledge of its good faith; to be restored whenever a peace takes place between the country and other powers of the Baltic.

On the approach of day the master of this vessel expressed an unwillingness to go any nearer the wreck; but admiral Totty, in direct opposition to him, caused the cable to be cut, and immediately proceeded to the ship. Melancholy, however, to relate, while he was doing every thing of which human exertion is capable, to assist the unhappy people on board, the wreck once more got into deep water, and gradually sunk, to the infinite distress of the admiral and the other spectators, who were nearly frantic with grief, at this tremendous scene of human misery and destruction.—While the ship was thus rapidly going down, the launch was hove out—as many of the crew as she could possibly hold, instantly jumped on board, and had only time to clear the poop, when the vessel, with upwards of 400 souls, entirely disappeared and went to the bottom. A number of the unhappy sufferers attempted to get on board the already over laden launch, but as no more could be permitted to enter, without the certain loss of the whole, they were struck away with the oars, and in a few seconds became wholly ingulphed in the pitiless waters. Captain Rennie, after the ship had sunk, attempted to swim to the launch, and after a severe exertion got within reach of the oars, when exhausted with fatigue, and unable to make any farther efforts, he calmly resigned himself to his fate; lifted up his hands as if to implore the blessing of Heaven, and immediately after placed them upon his face, and went down without another struggle.

All the other commissioned officers of the ship except Lieutenants Tucker and Quash, together with all the officers of Marines, and most of their men, likewise went to the bottom.

About 70 or 80 of the crew were saved by means of the launch, the whole of whom had assembled upon the forecastle; but all those who remained on the poop were lost.—The total number of human beings who thus found a watery grave, amounted to upwards of 400, among whom were several passengers, on their way to join their ships belonging to the North Sea fleet. The number saved, including officers, is stated at 195.

The Invincible was one of the oldest ships in the navy. She was built in 1766, and had not returned many months from the West Indies, where she had been stationed under the command of captain Caley since 1795.

This afflicting disaster is attributed solely to the ignorance of the pilot.

LONDON, March 25.

The French funds continue to fall. Notwithstanding the attention that has been paid to the amelioration of the finances, they are in a state of the greatest disorder, nor is there any money in treasury.

It is stated in private letters, that the English Consul at Hamburgh has given an intimation to all British ships to depart out of the Elbe. It is certainly probable that if the Consul has been consulted, he has given the most prudent advice; but while the King of Prussia waits for the ultimatum of the Court of London, and while we know that hopes are entertained of bringing the difficulties in th. North of Europe to an amicable termination, no positive conclusion can be drawn from this circumstance.

A letter from Petersburg, dated the 9th of February, contains the following official note:

"His Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias, being desirous of giving to his faithful allies a fresh proof of the zeal with which he is animated for the success of the Maritime Confederacy of the North, and wishing to prevent the English from procuring, by means of other nations, any articles necessary for the equipment of their marine, at a moment in which all direct commerce with Russia is prohibited, has judged it expedient to forbid all exportation of such articles from the ports of Russia. This resolution, which shews that his Imperial Majesty does not hesitate to sacrifice the interest of his empire to the cause in which he is embarked, has been notified by an official declaration to the Swedish ambassador, and also to the ministers of Prussia and Denmark.

MARCH 26.

Letters from Frankfort mention, that no doubt is entertained of the perfect agreement of France and the Emperor, with the concurrence of Prussia respecting the division and spoilation of the empire. The conditions were doubtless settled before the interchange of signatures at Luneville. They are carefully kept secret, however, lest the Ecclesiastical States should intrigue against their performance, if they knew what fate was in store for them.

MARCH 27, 2 o'clock.

We have already stated that Mr. Otto sent off dispatches to Buonaparte on Saturday night last:—They were forwarded from Dover on Monday morning, and reached Paris on Tuesday night. Buonaparte returned an answer on Wednesday, which arrived at Calais on Thursday morning, from whence it was instantly conveyed to Dover in a flag of Truce, and reached London about midnight. We can assure our readers the contents of this answer have not transpired; so that we can only state the report, which was current this morning, in the best informed political circles, which is, that a negociation on the subject of peace will be open in due form; and that as soon as the preliminaries are settled, Lord St. Helen's is to repair to Paris as our Minister on that occasion. Perhaps it is unnecessary to add, that the private and public character of this nobleman stands extremely high on the continent.

There are many circumstances which tend to strengthen this report. The pacific language of the new administration and their friends in the house of commons—the personal attention of lord Hawkesbury to Mr Otto's note, relative to the French fishermen, and mutual assurances on other occasions.—Besides, that asperity of language which used to be levelled at this country in the French prints, has of late given place to a more conciliatory tone.

There is, however, another report to which we give very little credit, viz. that Buonaparte has declared his determination to treat with this country in conjunction only with his allies—Russia, Denmark, Sweden, Spain, &c.

It is said that Denmark and Sweden are disposed to listen to negociations, and that the new ministers are ready to convince those powers they will gain more by resorting to pacific arrangements, than to those of a hostile nature, especially on a question, the principles of which are interwoven with the existence of our navy, and of course with the security and prosperity of the British nation.

Naples is to be garrisoned by French troops, under the pretext of repelling any attacks of British fleets. The corps of Conde is to be disbanded. The French armies have nearly evacuated Austria.

One of the last Paris papers contains the following article, which it states to have extracted from a paper of considerable authority, published in the North of Germany:—Prince Adolphus of England, governor of Hanover, is at Berlin, where he has been invited; it has been notified, that all resistance will be useless for defending Hanover, since the occupation of that country by the Prussian troops was a thing irrevocably agreed upon between the King of Prussia, the Emperor of Russia, and the French Government.

The Duke of Parma, who is a very religious prince, has, it is said from scruples of conscience, refused to take possession of the duchy of Tuscany.—Hopes are entertained that the Grand Duke will be permitted to retain it; more particularly as Prussia has remonstrated against that Prince's being indemnified in Germany, where it would require almost a whole circle of the empire to compensate the loss of his Italian territories.

M. Tallien appeared last night in the gallery of the house of commons, accompanied by Mr. Scott the barrister. He soon attracted the eyes of the members. He seemed to listen with much attention to Mr. Scot, while he described to him the mode of proceeding in the house, and pointed out the principal members. Mr. Sheridan came up to the gallery, and was introduced to him. He was addressed by several members, among whom were general Tarleton, &c. After remaining some time, he went to the House of Peers.

VIENNA, March 4.

Notwithstanding peace is concluded with France, great preparations are making to place the Austrian armies on a respectable footing, put the fortresses in good condition, fill the magazines, &c. The recruiting of the corps of Austrian riflemen is again revived. Natives who enlist receive 20 florins bounty, and foreigners 30 florins, and are only engaged for six years. This recruiting we are assured is not with a view to any new wars, but merely to repair the great losses which the Austrian army has sustained.

All householders are now required to give in a list of their lodgers.

HAMBURGH, March 10.

Last Saturday an eminent commercial house received intelligence from Riga by express, that the Emperor Paul had issued two Ukases, one of which allows a free commerce to and from France with orders for the French flag to be respected; the second forbids the exportation of all the Russian products, both by sea and land. The subjects of Russia are, however, allowed to sell certain articles to those of Prussia, with this restriction, that every Prussian who purchases, do prove by authentic documents that the goods will not be sent to England, nor purchased on account of any English agent.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, May 30.

About noon, on Thursday last, the commissioners appointed to administer the oaths to the Members of the Assembly, came to the Government Buildings and swore in such of the gentlemen as appeared; who, after signing the rolls, took their seats in the house.

A message was then delivered from his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor by the gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, commanding the attendance of the Commons in the Legislative Council Chamber; they accordingly went up, accompanied by the officers of the House, and being there, the honorable Speaker of the Legislative Council said, he was commanded by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor to acquaint the gentlemen of the House of Assembly that they must return to the House and elect a fit person for their Speaker and present him to-morrow at twelve o'clock for his Excellency's approbation.

The members being returned—the honorable D. W. Smith was proposed and unanimously elected Speaker, and conducted to the chair with the usual formalities.

The House then adjourned till Friday.

Friday 29.—The Members being assembled, and Mr. Speaker elect, having taken the chair, at twelve o'clock a message from the Lieutenant Governor, requesting the attendance of the House in the Legislative Council, was received.

Mr. Speaker and the house went up, and Mr. Speaker addressed his Excellency in nearly the following words:

May it please your Excellency,

The zeal and attachment which I have ever manifested in endeavoring to maintain the happy constitution which the Mother Country has been pleased to grant to this Province, induces me to submit to the suffrages of the House of Assembly, who have done me the honor again to present me as their Speaker elect.

Then the honorable Speaker of the Legislative Council said:—I am commanded by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor to inform you that he approves of the choice of the House of Assembly, and doth allow and confirm you to be their Speaker.

Then mr. Speaker said:—

In the name of the same Assembly, I most humbly claim the liberty of speech, and generally all the privileges in use and which are of right claimed by the Commons of Great Britain.

Then the honorable Speaker of the Legislative Council said:—I am commanded by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor to inform you, that in his Majesty's name he allows them all their privileges in as full and ample a manner as ever they have heretofore been granted.

Then mr. Speaker said:—

And that at all times when necessary for his Majesty's service and the public weal, the House of Assembly may have free access to the person of his Majesty's Representative in this Province.

Then the honorable Speaker of the Legislative Council said:—I am commanded by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor to assure you that the House of Assembly may depend on a ready access to his Excellency at all seasonable hours. After which his Excellency was pleased to make the following SPEECH to both houses of Parliament:—

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and Gentlemen of the Assembly,

THE Wisdom of those who framed the Constitution of this Province, is in nothing more manifest than in the Care which has been taken, that the Legislature shall meet as frequently as it is probable that subjects worthy of its Consideration will occur.

Two subjects call at this moment for your most serious attention.

The first is the formation of a Plan for the improvement of our Revenue upon the Basis of the Agreement made by the Commissioners appointed by me under the Authority of an Act of the last Session to treat on the part of this Province with Commissioners on the part of Lower Canada.—The terms of that Agreement, Copies of which I have directed to be laid before you, appear to be as consistent with the real Interests of the two Provinces, considered as branches of the Empire, as they are Equitable between the Provinces themselves, and I trust that you will lose no time in digesting a plan equally convenient and effectual for carrying them into effect.

The other subject to which I wish to draw your attention is the offering such Encouragement as you may think necessary or proper, for the Culture of Hemp. The present Circumstances of Europe render that Article an object of the highest importance, and there can be little doubt, but that if the Soil and Climate of this Province are favorable to the growth of it, it will amply reward every degree of labor and expence that may be bestowed upon it.—How far Nature, which has been so bountiful to us in other respects, has favored us in this, you are better able to determine than I am; but I hope that nothing will be wanting on your part, as nothing shall on mine, to secure to the Province the source of Wealth which the success of the Experiment will open to it.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

I have directed the usual Accounts to be laid before you.—You will regret with me that our expectations of an Increase to our Revenue, from the Articles which pass the Coteau du Lac, have not been realized, and that the importation of some of those Articles has considerably diminished. Whether this Circumstance arise from a diminution in the Consumption of those Articles, or whether the demand for them be supplied by another Channel, it is a subject that demands the most serious consideration: And I cannot help adding to it that the encrease of our internal revenue seems by no means to keep pace with the encrease of our Numbers, and the improvement of the Country.—To enquire into the cause, and to suggest a remedy for the Evil, is equally worthy of the attention of the Legislature.

Honorable Gentlemen, and Gentlemen,

It is with the sincerest pleasure that I announce to You an Event of the utmost importance which has lately taken place in Europe: I mean the Union of the Kingdoms of Great-Britain and Ireland. The British Nations are now entirely consolidated, and all that seemed wanting to make them all that they are Capable of being made is attained.—Every thing that was partial; every thing that was Local; Every thing that could recall the recollection that those whom Nature intended to be one, were distinct, is done away, and the most intimate Union is established on the justest and most liberal principles! Our Strength is encreased by being brought to a Centre: Our resources are enlarged by the unreserved communication of every advantage.—Nor is it to be doubted but that under the Auspices of the August and enlightened Prince, whose wisdom projected and whose perseverance has accomplished this great Event, Effects the most beneficial will soon be felt, which after deluging wealth and power and happiness over the now United Kingdoms, will gradually spread themselves thro' the remotest branches of the Empire.

PROCLAMATION,

By his Excellency PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General commanding his Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada.

WHEREAS his Majesty's Royal Proclamation hath been transmitted to me, dated the first Day of January in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and One, and in the Forty first Year of his Majesty's Reign, Declaring his Majesty's Pleasure concerning the Royal Stile and Titles appertaining to the Imperial Crown of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and its Dependencies, and also the Ensigns Armorial, Flags and Banners thereof, which said Royal Proclamation is as herein after followeth;

By the KING.------A PROCLAMATION,

Declaring His Majesty's Pleasure concerning the Royal Stile and Titles appertaining to the Imperial Crown of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and its Dependencies, and also the Ensigns Armorial, Flags, and Banners thereof.

GEORGE R.

WHEREAS by the first Article of the Articles of the Union of Great Britain and Ireland Ratified and Confirmed by two Acts of Parliament, the one passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, and the other in the Parliament of Ireland, and respectively intituled, An Act for the Union of Great Britain and Ireland, it was Declared,—That the said Kingdoms of Great Britain and Ireland should upon this Day, being the first Day of January in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and One, for ever after be United into one Kingdom by the Name of THE UNITED KINGDOM OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND; and that the Royal Stile and Titles appertaining to the Imperial Crown of the said United Kingdom and its Dependencies, and also the Ensigns Armorial, Flags and Banners thereof, should be such as We, by our Royal Proclamation, under the Great Seal of the said United Kingdom should appoint; We have thought fit, by and with the Advice of our Privy Council, to Appoint and Declare that Our Royal Stile and Titles shall hereafter be accepted, Taken, and Used, as the same are set forth in manner and form following; that is to say, the same shall be expressed in the Latin Tongue by these words: "GEORGIUS TERTIUS, Dei Gratiâ Britanniarum Rex, Fidei Defensor." —And in the English Tongue by these words: "GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith."—And that the Arms or Ensigns Armorial of the said United Kingdom shall be quarterly, First and Fourth England; Second, Scotland; Third, Ireland: And it is our Will and Pleasure, that there shall be borne therewith, on an Escocheon of Pretence, The Arms of Our Dominions in Germany, ensigned with the Electoral Bonnet. And it is Our Will and Pleasure that the Standard of the said United Kingdom shall be the same Quarterings as are herein before declared to be the Arms or Ensigns Armorial of the said United Kingdom, with the Escocheon of Pretence thereon herein before described: And that the Union Flag shall be Azure, the Crosses Saltires of Saint Andrew and Saint Patrick quarterly per Saltire Counter changed Argent and Gules; the latter fimbriated of the second, surmounted by the Cross of Saint George of the Third fimbriated as the Saltire. And Our Will and Pleasure further is that the Stile and Titles aforesaid, and also the Arms or Ensigns Armorial aforesaid shall be used henceforth as far as conveniently may be, On all Occasions wherein Our Royal Stile and Titles and Arms or Ensigns Armorial ought to be used. But nevertheless it is Our Will and Pleasure, that all such Gold, Silver and Copper Monies as, on the Day before this first Day of January One Thousand Eight Hundred and One, were Current and Lawful Monies of Great Britain and all such Gold, Silver, and Copper Monies as shall, on or after this Day be Coined by Our Authority with the like Impressions until Our Will and Pleasure shall be otherwise Declared, shall be deemed and taken to be Current and Lawful Monies of the said United Kingdom in Great Britain; and that all such Gold, Silver, and Copper Monies as on the Day before this first Day of January One Thousand Eight Hundred and One were Current and Lawful Monies of Ireland, and all such Gold and Silver and Copper Monies as shall, on or after this Day be Coined by Our Authority with the like Impressions, until Our Will and Pleasure shall be otherwise declared, shall be deemed and taken to be Current and Lawful Monies of the said United Kingdom in Ireland; and all such Monies as shall have been Coined for and issued in any of the Dominions of the said United Kingdom, and Declared by our Proclamation to be Current and Lawful Money of such Dominions respectively, bearing Our Stile, or Titles, or Arms or Ensigns Armorial, or any part or parts thereof, and all Monies which shall hereafter be Coined and issued according to such Proclamations shall continue to be Lawful and Current Money of such Dominions respectively, notwithstanding such Change in Our Stile, Titles, and Arms or Armorial Bearings respectively as aforesaid, until Our Pleasure shall be further Declared thereupon. And all and every such Monies as aforesaid shall be received and taken in Payment in Great Britain and Ireland respectively, and in the Dominions thereunto belonging, after the Date of this Our Proclamation in such manner and as of the like Value and Denomination as the same were received and taken before the Date hereof.—And it is also Our Will and Pleasure that the several Dies and Marks, which have been used to denote the Stamp Duties and all other Stamps and Marks and Instruments, which, before the issuing of this Our Proclamation shall have been in actual use for any Public Purpose and in which Our Royal Stile and Titles or Our Arms or Ensigns Armorial or any Parts or Part thereof respectively, may be expressed, shall not, by reason of this Our Proclamation or any thing therein contained, be Changed or Altered, until the same may be conve-nently so Changed or Altered, or until Our Pleasure shall be further Declared thereupon: But that all such Dies, Stamps, Marks and Instruments respectively bearing Our Royal Stile and Titles, or Arms or Ensigns Armorial, used before this first Day of January One Thousand Eight Hundred and One, or any Parts or Part of such Stile, Titles, or of such Arms or Ensigns Armorial, shall have the like Force and Effect, as the same had before the said first Day of January instant.

GIVEN at Our Court at St. James's, the first Day of January One Thousand Eight Hundred and One in the Forty-first Year of Our Reign.

GOD save the KING.

IN Testimony whereof, and that the said Royal Proclamation may hereby be made known to all his Majesty's Liege Subjects in this his Province of Upper Canada, I PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province, have hereunto put my Hand and Seal at Arms, at York, this Twenty-fifth Day of May, in the Year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and One, and in the Forty-first Year of his Majesty's Reign.

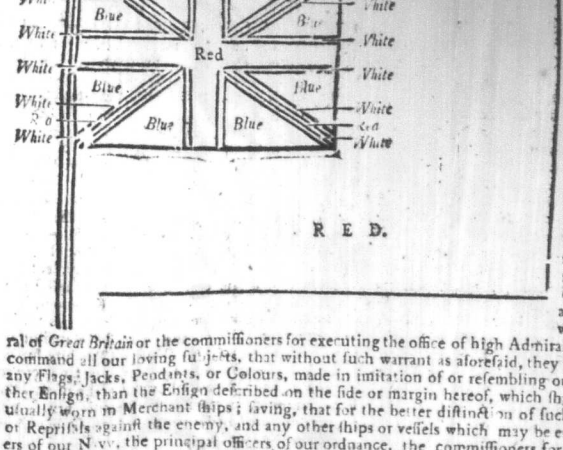
By His Excellency's Command,

WILLIAM JARVIS, Secretary.

PROCLAMATION,

By his Excellency PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper-Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding his Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower-Canada.



WHEREAS his Majesty's Royal Proclamation hath been transmitted to me dated the first day of January in the year of our Lord one thousand, eight hundred and one, and in the forty first year of his Majesty's reign: Declaring what Ensign or Colours shall be borne at Sea in Merchant ships or vessels belonging to any of his Majesty's subjects of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the Dominions thereunto belonging, which said Royal Proclamation is as herein after followeth:—

By the KING.------A PROCLAMATION,

Declaring what Ensign or Colours shall be borne at Sea in Merchant ships or vessels belonging to any of his Majesty's subjects of the United Kingdom of Great-Britain and Ireland, and the Dominions thereunto belonging.

GEORGE R.

WHEREAS by the first article of the articles of Union of the Kingdoms of Great Britain and Ireland, as the same have been ratified and confirmed by two Acts of Parliament, the one made in our Parliament of Great Britain, and the other in our Parliament of Ireland, it was Provided, that the Ensigns Armorial, Flags, and Banners of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, should be such as we should appoint by our Royal Proclamation, under the Great Seal of our said United Kingdom:—And whereas we have, by our Royal Proclamation dated this day, appointed and declared, that the Arms or Ensigns Armorial of the said United Kingdom shall be as therein expressed: And whereas according to ancient Usage, the Ensigns, Flags, Jacks, and Pendants worn by our ships, and appointed as a distinction for the same, ought not to be worn on board any ship or vessel, belonging to any of our subjects, so that our ships and those of our subjects may be easily distinguished and known: We have therefore thought fit, by and with the advice of our Privy Council, to order and appoint the Ensign described on the side or margin hereof, to be worn on board all ships or vessels belonging to any of our subjects whatsoever; and to issue this our Royal Proclamation to Notify the same to all our loving subjects, hereby strictly charging and commanding the Masters of all Merchant ships and vessels belonging to any of our subjects, whether employed in our service or otherwise, and all other persons whom it may concern, to wear the said Ensign on board their ships or vessels: And to the end that none of our subjects may presume on board their ships to wear our Flags, Jacks, and Pendants, which, according to ancient Usage, have been appointed as a distinction to our ships; or any Flags, Jacks or Pendants, in shape and mixture of colours so far resembling ours as not to be easily distinguished therefrom. We do, with the advice of our Privy Council, hereby strictly charge and command all our subjects whatsoever, that they do not presume to wear in any of their ships or vessels, our Jack, commonly called the Union Jack, nor any Pendants, nor any such Colours as are usually borne by our ships, without particular warrant for their so doing from us, or our high admiral of Great Britain or the commissioners for executing the office of high Admiral for the time being: And we do hereby also further command all our loving subjects, that without such warrant as aforesaid, they presume not to wear on board their ships or vessels any Flags, Jacks, Pendants, or Colours, made in imitation of or resembling ours, or any kind of Pendant whatsoever, or any other Ensign, than the Ensign described on the side or margin hereof, which shall be worn instead of the Ensign before this time usually worn in Merchant ships; saving, that for the better distinction of such ships as shall have commissions of letters of Mart or Reprisals against the enemy, and any other ships or vessels which may be employed by the principal officers and commissioners of our Navy, the principal officers of our ordnance, the commissioners for victualling our Navy, the commissioners for our Customs and Excise, and the commissioners for Transportation for our service, relating particularly to those offices, our Royal Will and Pleasure is, that all such ships as have commissions of letters of Mart or Reprisals, shall, besides the Colours or Ensign hereby appointed to be worn by Merchant ships, wear a Red Jack with a Union Jack, described in a canton at the upper corner thereof next the staff; and that such ships and vessels as shall be employed for our service, by the principal officers and commissioners of our Navy, the principal officers of our Ordnance, the commissioners for victualling our Navy, the commissioners for our Customs and Excise, and the commissioners for Transportation for our service, relating particularly to those offices, shall wear a Red Jack with a Union Jack in a canton at the upper corner thereof next the staff as aforesaid, and in the other part of the said Jack, shall be described the seal used in such of the respective offices aforesaid, by which the said ships and vessels shall be employed. And we do strictly charge and command that none of our loving subjects do presume to wear any of the said distinction Jacks, unless they shall have commissions of letters of Mart or Reprisals, or be employed in our service by any of the before mentioned officers. And we hereby require our high Admiral, the commissioners for executing the office of high Admiral, the Governors of our Forts and Castles, the officers of our Customs, and the commanders or officers of any of our ships for the time being, upon their meeting with, or otherwise observing any ships or vessels belonging to any of our subjects, neglecting to wear the Ensign hereby appointed to be borne as aforesaid, or wearing any Flag, Pendant, Jack or Ensign, contrary hereunto, whether at Sea or in Port, not only to seize, or cause to be forthwith seized such Flag, Pendant, Jack, or Ensign worn contrary to our Royal Will and Pleasure herein expressed, but also to return the names of such ships and vessels neglecting to wear the

NORFOLK, (Virginia) May 2.

THE ship Woodrop, Sims, arrived here yesterday from Rochelle, whence she sailed on the 28th of March. The same evening was boarded by the tender of the English frigate, Doris. At the next day, was boarded by the Doris, who informed that they were waiting for the remainder of the French fleet from Brest and l'Orient, that were to assemble at Rochfort, as was supposed, for some secret expedition.

There had just arrived at Rochefort, an 84, a 74, and 2 frigates from Brest and l'Orient, and were in daily expectation of many more, as the fleet was to consist of 45 sail, most of which were to be line of battle ships.

On the 22d of March, all the private copper bottomed ships and brigs in Ensign hereby appointed, or wearing any Flag, Pendant, Jack or Ensign contrary hereunto, together with the names of their respective Masters or Commanders, unto our high Admiral or commissioners for executing the office of high Admiral, or the Judge of our high Court of Admiralty for the time being, to the end that all persons offending may be duly punished for the same.—And we do hereby command and enjoin the Judge and Judges of our high Court of Admiralty for the time being, that they make strict enquiry concerning all such offenders and cause them to be duly punished: And all Vice Admirals and Judges of the Vice-Admiralties are hereby also required to proceed in the like manner within the several Ports and places belonging to their respective precincts. And our further Pleasure is, that this Proclamation shall take place according to the times hereafter mentioned; videlicet, for all ships in the Channel or British Seas, and in the North Seas, after twelve days from the date of these presents; and from the mouth of the Channel unto Cape St. Vincent, after six weeks from the date of these presents; and beyond the Cape, and on this side of the Equinoctial Line, as well in the Ocean and Mediterranean as elsewhere after ten weeks from the date of these presents; and beyond the line, after the space of eight months from the date of these presents.

GIVEN at our Court at St. James's, the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and one in the forty-first year of our Reign.

GOD save the KING!

IN TESTIMONY whereof, and that the said Royal Proclamation may hereby be made known to all his Majesty's liege subjects in this his Province of Upper-Canada, I PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province, have hereunto put my hand and seal at Arms, at YORK, this twenty-fifth day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand, eight hundred and one, and in the forty-first year of his Majesty's Reign.

PROCLAMATION,

By his Excellency PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding his Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada.

WHEREAS an Order of his Majesty in Council, dated the first Day of January, in the Year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and One, hath been transmitted to me, which said Order is as hereinafter followeth:—

AT THE COURT AT ST. JAMES's, THE FIRST DAY OF JANUARY, 1801.

Present, the KING's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.

WHEREAS by the Act of Uniformity which establisheth the Liturgy and Enacts, That no Form or Order of Common Prayer be openly used, other than what is prescribed and appointed to be used, in and by the said Book; it is, notwithstanding, provided, that in all those Prayers, Litanies, and Collects, which do any wise relate to the King, Queen, or Royal Progeny, the Names be altered and changed from time to time, and fitted to the present Occasion, according to the Direction of lawful Authority: It is thereupon, this Day, ordered by his Majesty, with the Advice of his Privy Council, that the following Alterations be made viz —

In the Book of Common Prayer.

Title Page,—Instead of "The Church of England," put "of the United Church of England and Ireland."

Prayer for the High Court of Parliament,—Instead of "Our Sovereign and his Kingdoms," read, "and his Dominions."

The first Prayer to be used at Sea,—Instead of "His Kingdoms," read "His Dominions."

In the Form and Manner of Making, Ordaining, and Consecrating of Bishops, Priests, and Deacons,—Instead of the Order "of the "Church of England," read "of the United Church of England and Ireland."

In the Preface of the said Form, in two places,—Instead of "Church of England," read "in the United Church of England and "Ireland."

In the First Question in the Ordination of Priests,—Instead of "Church of England," read "of this United Church of England and "Ireland."

In the Occasional Offices, 25th October, the King's Accession,—Instead of "these Realms," read "this Realm."

In the Collect before the Epistle,—Instead of "these Kingdoms," read "this United Kingdom."

For the Preachers,—Instead of "King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland," say "King of the United Kingdom of Great "Britain and Ireland."

And it is further ordered, That no Edition of the Book of Common Prayer be from henceforth printed but with the aforesaid Amendments; and that, in the mean time, until Copies of such Edition may be had, all Parsons, Vicars, and Curates, do, (for the preventing of mistakes) with the pen, correct and amend all such Prayers in their Church Books according to the foregoing Directions: And, for the better Notice hereof, that this Order be forthwith printed and published, and sent to the several Parishes; and that the Right Reverend the Bishops take care that Obedience be paid to the same accordingly within their respective Dioceses.

STEPH. COTTRELL.

IN Testimony whereof, and that the said Order of his Majesty in Council may hereby be made known to all his Liege Subjects in this his Province of Upper Canada, I PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province, have hereunto put my Hand and Seal at Arms, at York, this Twenty-fifth Day of May, in the Year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and One, and in the Forty-first Year of his Majesty's Reign.

NORFOLK, (Virginia) May 2.

THE ship Woodrop, Sims, arrived here yesterday from Rochelle, whence she sailed on the 28th of March. The same evening was boarded by the tender of the English frigate, Doris. At 9 the next day, was boarded by the Doris, who informed that they were waiting for the remainder of the French fleet from Brest and l'Orient, that were to assemble at Rochfort, as was supposed, for some secret expedition.

There had just arrived at Rochefort, in 84, 74, and 2 frigates from Brest and l'Orient, and were in daily expectation of many more, as the fleet was to consist of 45 sail, most of which were to be line of battle ships.

On the 22d of March, all the private copper bottomed ships and brigs in France were put in requisition, for the purpose of making transports of them, for the intended expedition against Portugal.

Eighteen thousand men were assembled in the neighbourhood of Bourdeaux, and were to be encreased to go against Portugal.

A Portuguese ambassador had passed through Bourdeaux for Paris; and on the 7th of March a general embargo through Spain was laid on all Portuguese vessels. The Queen of Spain died on the 26th of February.

Provisions in France were remarkably plenty and cheap.

Orders have been given to British ships not to molest the Prussian flag.

The Woodrop was detained 30 days on account of the rejection of the treaty by our senate; nor was she permitted to sail until the news of its ratification had reached France.

PHILADELPHIA, May 6.

Yesterday arrived the ship Martha, capt. Martin, 32 days from Portsmouth. The Portsmouth papers are to the 30th of March, inclusive, two days later than before received; but do not afford us much interesting matter.

PORTSMOUTH, MARCH 30.

Mr. Mayutz the messenger, we understand, set off late at night on Thursday sen'night for France. He is said to be the bearer of dispatches from count Stahrenberg, the Imperial ambassador, addressed either to count Colbenzel or to the French minister for foreign affairs, and it is generally believed, in the best informed circles, that he carries with him overtures for opening a negociation for peace with the French government.

LONDON, March 27.

The declaration of the new minister, in the house of commons on Wednesday, certainly leaves no room to doubt that measures are to be speedily adopted to open a negociation with the republic of France. He stated that

"With respect to the subject of peace with the enemy, he could assure the honorable member, his Majesty's ministers were earnestly disposed to that desirable object, and determined to oppose nothing on their parts unfair or unreasonable to impede an event so devoutly to be wished. They had no reason to imagine the enemy indisposed for peace, or desirous of throwing in its way any insurmountable obstacles."

March 29.—A meeting of the Cabinet Ministers was held yesterday on the subject of the communication which has lately taken place between our Government and France, through the medium of M. Otto, on the subject of negociation. We believe our new rulers to be actuated with a sincere and ardent desire for peace, on terms consistent with the honor and interests of the nation, and we are persuaded that the enemy is not less anxious to terminate a war, to the successful prosecution of which, his means are to inadequate; yet with this impression, and a further opinion that negociation will be shortly instituted, we regard the question of peace to depend upon the issue of our Northern and Egyptian expeditions.

THE ADDRESS

From the hon. the Legislative Council to his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor.

To his Excellency PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of his Majesty's Province of Upper-Canada, and Lieutenant General commanding in Upper and Lower Canada.

May it please your Excellency,

WE his Majesty's most dutiful and Loyal Subjects the Members of the Legislative Council in Provincial Parliament assembled, return your Excellency our thanks for the very interesting Speech you have made us from the Throne.

The two Subjects to which your Excellency has been pleased to call our Attention, being of the utmost Importance to the future Prosperity of this Province, shall be taken into immediate Consideration.

After we have read the Copy of the Agreement entered into by the Commissioners appointed on the parts of Upper and of Lower Canada, which your Excellency has directed to be laid before us, we shall lose no time in endeavoring to digest such a Plan for the Improvement of our Revenue upon the Basis thereof as may be equally convenient and effectual for carrying its Terms into Execution.

We receive at the same time with Pleasure and Gratitude your Excellency's Suggestions respecting the Advantages to be drawn from the Culture of Hemp in this Province; and we shall not fail most Cordially to join the other Branches of the Legislature in offering such encouragements within the Compass of our Ability for promoting its Growth as may appear most likely to render it at no great distance of time a Staple of the Province, and thereby secure to Upper Canada an unquestionable Source of Wealth, while it is accompanied with the grateful Reflection that we have contributed to render the Mother Country independent on Foreign Nations for Supplying her Navy with an Article so very important.

We thank your Excellency for announcing to us that very Great and Important Event, the Union of the Kingdoms of Great-Britain and Ireland:—An Event which impresses our Minds with Joy and Exultation in contemplating the Strength, Power and Greatness to which it will raise the Empire of which we pride ourselves in being a Part; while we admire with your Excellency the great Wisdom and Perseverance with which it was projected and at length so happily accomplished under the Auspices of our August and enlightened Sovereign.

COPY OF ADDRESS,

(Signed) JAMES CLARK,
Legislative Council Chamber, York, May 30, 1801. } C. L. C.

To which his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, was pleased to make the following answer:—

Honorable Gentlemen,

I Thank you for your dutiful Address. It gives me the sincerest Satisfaction to find that your Sentiments perfectly agree with mine, respecting the promoting of Measures, which I trust, will not only promote the Wealth and Prosperity of this Province, but also the Advantage of our Parent State, the now happily United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

THE ADDRESS

From the House of Assembly to his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor.

To his Excellency PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of his Majesty's Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

May it please your Excellency,

WE his Majesty's dutiful and Loyal Subjects the Representatives of the Commons of Upper Canada in Parliament assembled, return our sincere Thanks for your Excellency's Speech.

We cease not to feel, and shall embrace every Opportunity of expressing our Gratitude for the liberal Sentiment of Legislative Policy manifested by the Mother Country, in having provided us with the Constitutional Means of resorting, annually, to the Wisdom of a Provincial Parliament.

We are happy to understand that the Commissioners on the part of our Sister Province, (Lower Canada) have concurred with those appointed by your Excellency, in behalf of this Province, in adjusting the Dividends of the Collective Revenue, to be applied to the Uses of the two Provinces respectively, upon principles of Equity, being convinced that no System can derive permanent Stability from any other Source than natural Justice. And we doubt not but that the Provincial Agreement entered into in the present Instance, will meet our Approbation and Support, at the same time we are happy to observe, that our Dependance on External Markets diminishes, as it evinces the general Exertions made to supply our Wants by our encreasing Manufactories at Home.

We anticipate with Eagerness the Advantages which may result to this Province from the Culture of Hemp, and receive with Gratitude the Assurances of your Excellency to promote the Success of Experiments to open a Source of Wealth to the Province by its Means, and we hope, that thereby a Solid Foundation will be laid without the Aid of Parliament, which shall not be wanting on our part if ultimately necessary.

We shall bestow due attention upon the Investigation of the Provincial Treasurer's Accounts when submitted to our Consideration. And we truly rejoice with your Excellency in the happy Issue of his Majesty's Paternal Endeavors for Concentrating the Energy of his Empire by the late Act of Union which has cemented into One, his Kingdoms of Great Britain and Ireland.

To which his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, was pleased to make the following Answer:—

Gentlemen,

YOUR Readiness to promote such Measures as I trust will prove equally Advantageous to this Province and the Mother Country, gives me the highest Satisfaction.

I sincerely join with you in your Congratulations on the happy Union that is now established between the United Kingdoms of Great Britain and Ireland.

Last Thursday being the anniversary of his Majesty's Birth Day, the same was observed here with all the demonstrations of joy the inhabitants of so infant a town could express.—The Militia assembled about eleven o'clock opposite the Government Buildings, and went through their different manœuvres with such promptitude and exactness, as to do them credit.—There was a Royal Salute fired from the great guns at the Garrison, accompanied by three vollies of small arms by the Queen's Rangers, now doing duty there.

About one o'clock, his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor held a Levee, which was numerously and respectably attended: and in the evening gave a splendid ball and supper on the above joyful occasion.

We hear that the Queen's Rangers are to be relieved by three companies of the Volunteers, and that they are to be stationed at Fort Moldin, Michilmacanic and St. Joseph's.

We understand that col. Shaw, lieu. Givins, ensign Peters and a few of the privates are to remain in the garrison.

☞ In the account respecting the election of the Speaker of the House of Assembly, contained in our sheet of last week, instead of "unanimously elected," read by a majority.

Captain Lewſon, from St. Croix, informs, that the iſland of Martinique was in a ſtate of revolt, occaſioned by famine; and that the inhabitants, having received a partial ſupply of proviſions from the Britiſh, had ſolicited them to take poſſeſſion of the iſland.

Captain L. further informs, that two Britiſh frigates had captured the iſland of Marieglante, where they found five million weight of coffee, which they were about to carry off in Britiſh veſſels that have been ordered there for the purpoſe.

The Britiſh colonies in the Weſt Indies are repreſented as being well ſupplied with flour, a large quantity having been ſhipped to St. Croix from Barbadoes.

Two Dutch line of battle ſhips, and an Eaſt Indiaman, were ſcuttled, and left in poſſeſſion of the enemy.

Lord Caſtlereagh in the debate on Wedneſday, ſtated a circumſtance which is of material importance.—On the 2d of Aug. at one of his levees, Bonaparte, turning to the Portugueſe Ambaſſador, aſked him, whether he had tranſmitted to his court the demand that the navy of Portugal ſhould be ready to unite with the other navies of Europe againſt England, on the 1ſt of Septmber? Having ſaid this, he immediately turned to the Daniſh miniſter, and aſked him whether he had made the ſame communication to his court?

Baltimore, May 9.

Lateſt from Holland—On Saturday evening arrived at this port the faſt ſailing Brig Suſanna, Samuel Franklin, maſter, in 45 days from Amſterdam, which port he left on the 25th March, by permiſſion of the Dutch government. In her came paſſenger Mr. Rittenhouſe, the bearer of diſpatches from Gen. Armſtrong, our miniſter at Paris; he ſet off yeſterday for the ſeat of government. The ſhip Lexington was to ſail in 14 days by permiſſion, to bring home diſtreſſed American ſeamen. No American veſſels had arrived there ſince the ſailing of the Eliza. In lat. 43 34. was boarded by a Britiſh frigate and treated politely,

By this arrival we learn, that the embargo continued on American veſſels. It was ſaid 40,000 troops were to be collected at the Helder for the invaſion of England; but no obvious indications of arrangements for its collection appeared.

The Vienna gazette of the 31ſt of March mentions, that Ruſſia has conſiderably reinforced her army with men and munitions in Moldavia and Wallachia. It appeared to be the determination of both Turks and Ruſſians, to begin the campaign in April, at the termination of the armiſtice at Sloboja. Gen. Kutuſow is appointed to the chief command of the Ruſſians. The Turkiſh troops are not numerous upon the Danube. Great difficulty and diſappointment has been experienced in bringing troops over from Aſia. A few only of the Pachas croſſed into Europe to join the Grand Vizier at Adrianople. The other Pachas have refuſed obedience to the orders of the Porte.

From Leyden gazettes of the 18th and 22d of March, it appears, that the french have formally taken poſſeſſion of Fluſhing, with a radius of the ſurrounding territory of the extent of 1300 metres, ceded by the treaty of Fontainbleau. On the other hand, the King of Holland has taken poſſeſſion of Eaſt Friesland, and the Lordſhips of Jever, Kniphauſen and Varel, as the equivalent.

An article under the head of Peterſburgh, 20th February, mentions that ſeveral regiments of the army of Moldavia have received orders to proceed to the Caſpian Sea, where the Ruſſian army is to embark, in order to go through Perſia for Hindoſtan; and that they have begun their march for this deſtination.

General Gardainne, the French miniſter, arrived with his ſuit, at Teheren, in Perſia, on the 4th December, & was pompouſly received by its ſovereign, who laviſhed upon them the inſignia of the ſun.

At Paris Bonaparte has iſſued two ſtatutes, carrying into effect the inſtitutions decreed the 14th of Auguſt 1806, whereby the titles of princes, dukes, counts and knights of the French Empire are created, and conferred upon various deſcriptions of perſons.

The marriage of the prince of Neufchatel, (Gen. Berthier) vice Conſtable of France, with the princeſs Elizabeth of Bavaria, was celebrated on the 9th of March.

A diet has been held with the king's approbation for Eaſt Pruſſia, to deliberate upon the means proper to remedy certain evils.

London, March 25.

GEN. WHITELOCKE's SENTENCE.

General Orders.

Horſe Guards, March 24.

At a General Court Martial of which gen. the right honorable Sir Wm. Meadows, K. B. was preſident, held by virtue of his Majeſty's ſpecial warrant, bearing date the 25th of January, 1808, at the royal hoſpital at Chelſea, on the 28th of the ſame month, & continued by adjournment until the 18th of March following, lieut. Gen. John Whitelocke was tried upon the charges (preferred againſt him relative to the deſeat at Buenos Ayres.)

SENTENCE.

The Court martial having duly conſidered the evidence given in ſupport of the charges againſt the priſoner (lieut. General Whitelocke) his defence, and the evidence he has adduced, are of opinion that he is guilty of the whole of the ſaid charges, with the exception of that part of the ſecond charge which relates to the order that "the columns ſhould be unloaded, and that no firing ſhould be permitted on any account,"

The court are anxious that it ſhould be diſtinctly underſtood that they attach no cenſure whatever to the precaution taken to prevent unneceſſary firing during the advance of the troops to the propoſed points of attack, and do therefore acquit lieut. gen Whitelocke of that part of the ſaid charge.

The court adjudge, that the ſaid lieut. gen. Whitelocke be caſhiered, and declared totally unfit and unworthy to ſerve his majeſty in any military capacity whatever.

The king has been pleaſed to confirm the above ſentence, and his royal highneſs the commander in chief has received his Majeſty's command to direct that it ſhall be read at the head of every regiment in his ſervice, and inſerted in all regimental orderly books, with a view of its becoming a laſting memorial of the fatal conſequences to which officers expoſe themſelves, who in the diſcharge of the important duties confided to them, are deficient in that zeal, judgment and perſonal exertion which their ſovereign and their country have a right to expect from officers intruſted with high commands.

To his Majeſty, who has ever taken a moſt lively intereſt in the welfare the honor, and reputation of his troops, the recent failure of South America, has proved a ſubject of the moſt heartfelt regret; but it has been a conſolation to him, and his Majeſty has commanded it to be intimated to the army, that after the moſt minute inveſtigation, his Majeſty finds ample cauſe for gratification in the intrepidity and good conduct diſplayed by his troops lately employed in that ſervice and particularly thoſe diviſions of the army, which were perſonally engaged with the enemy in the town of Buenos Ayres on the 5th of July, 1807; and his Majeſty entertains no doubt that had the exertions of his troops in South America been directed by the ſame ſkill and energy, which has eminently diſtinguiſhed his commanders in other quarters of the world, the reſult of the campaign would have proved equally glorious to themſeves and beneficial to their country,

By command of his royal highneſs, the commander in chief,

HARRY CALVERT,

Major-general and adjutant-general of the Forces.

Admiral Berkeley arrived on Wedneſday at Plymouth from Halifax in the Triumph, with the Leopard.

SICILY.

Extract of a letter from Melazzo, dated Jan. 28, 1808.

The French have penetrated in conſiderable numbers into Calabria, and their advanced poſts are at preſent immediatly oppoſite Meſſina; fortunately there are the Streights between us, otherwiſe I doubt not their threat of paying us a visit would be executed; indeed, from the preparations making in every quarter, the idea does not appear merely chimerical.

Our force at present on the island amounts to about 8,000 men, including three foreign regiments, they are thus divided—at Messina, the head quarters are stationed the 21st 27th, 58th, 62d, and 81st chasseurs Britaniques and Maltese regiment, the 81st forms a cordon from the Light House at the Faro to Messina; at Augusta, under the command of Colonel Oswald, the 20th regiment, and part of De Rolle's are stationed at Syracuse; under brigadier gen. Stewart, the 31st and remainder of De Rolle's; and at Melazzo, under brigadier gen. Cole, the 35th and flank companies of all the numbered regiments on the island except the 62d; a detachment of 300 of 20th dragoons and some companies of artillery compose the remainder of the force in Sicily.

A detachment of about 200 men, from the garrison of Messina, maintains Scylla, under captain Robertson.

We know very little of the politics of the court of Palermo. As long as the ——— possesses the dominion she exerts at present, they cannot be favorable to us. I believe, and am confidently assured, that the population of the country is highly favorable to us, and would with alacrity and joy throw themselves under our protection, should circumstances require us to assume the government of this island. We are at present actually employed in taking a statistical survey of that part of Sicily immediately in the vicinity of our posts, and I doubt not but that the result will prove the resources of the country to be very abundant under proper cultivation and encouragement. We are, of course, all activity at present, and with the characteristic eagerness of British soldiers, notwithstanding our inferior force, look forward with confidence and joy to the moment of the threatened attack. March 25.

The King of Sweden, justly estimating the danger with which he is threatened, has sent his adjutant Von Darmfeldt, to France, with propositions of accommodation. This officer arrived at Stralsund on the 23th ult. and received leave from general Castello to prosecute his mission, and it is understood that he had an interview with general Bernadotte at Vienna, on his route to Paris.

Letters from Paris to the 9th instant, state that Napoleon had determined on the seizure of all the public treasures and church plate in Spain; the greater part of the produce of which was intended for a loan to the Emperor of Russia, for the purpose, as supposed by some, of enabling him to send an army to the Caspian sea; but according to one of the letters, for the purpose of "securing fidelity to the compact lately entered into between Russia and France, and of enabling Alexander to carry on the war without calling upon his discontented subjects for a new supply."

The Dutch government are stated in letters from Amsterdam, to have ordered the levying of a fresh contribution of one hundred million of francs. March 26.

The Gottenburgh mail of the 21st arrived this morning. It has brought intelligence of importance. The Russians continue to advance, and a battle has taken place near Travastchus. The Russians are said to have lost 5000 men; the Swedes 1700; but the latter afterwards deemed it necessary to retreat.

The King of Denmark departed this life suddenly on the 13th. His demise is an event of no importance: he had been politically dead for many years. The Crown Prince was proclaimed King on the 16th.

Quebec, April 21.

The brig Triton, Wm. Wright, master, arrived here from Hull, on Monday last. The captain reports, that he understood a fleet of fifteen sail of the line, and 20,000 troops had sailed for the Baltic, as was supposed for the assistance of the Swedes. We trust however it is destined for Cronstadt, where the Russian fleet lies; and so bring off the Swedish fleet in case of the Swedes being overpowered or submitting to become the instrument of our enemies.

Captain Wright also mentions that it seemed to be the general opinion in England that there would be no rupture with America.

An Act for granting to his Majesty an annual sum of Money for the purposes therein mentioned.

[Passed 16th March, 1808.

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN,

WHEREAS it is expedient that some provision be made for an adjutant general in this Province; Be it therefore enacted by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "an Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "an Act for making more effectual provision for the government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That from and out of the rates and duties already raised, levied and collected, or hereafter to be raised, levied and collected, to and for the uses of this Province, there be granted to his Majesty, his Heirs and Successors, annually, the sum of Two Hundred Pounds, for the payment of a salary to the adjutant general of the militia of this Province, for the time being.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the government of this Province, from time to time to issue his warrant to the Receiver General of this Province for the payment of such salary as aforesaid, yearly or half yearly, and the said Receiver General shall account to his Majesty, his Heirs and Successors, for the same, through the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury, in such manner and form as his Majesty, his Heirs and Successors, shall be graciously pleased to direct.

An Act for applying certain Sums of Money therein mentioned, to make good certain Monies issued and advanced by his Majesty, through the Lieutenant Governor, in pursuance of an Address.

Passed 16th March, 1808.

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN,

WHEREAS in pursuance of an Address of your Commons House of Assembly to Francis Gore, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of Your Majesty's Province of Upper Canada, bearing date the ninth day of March, and the Speaker's letter dated the tenth day of said March last past, in the forty-seventh year of your Majesty's reign, several sums of money, amounting in the whole to the sum of five hundred and eighty-eight pounds and eight pence half penny have been issued and advanced by your Majesty through your Lieutenant Governor, to the Clerks and other officers of the two Houses of Parliament for certain contingent expences attending the last Session of Parliament, and to Church or Town Wardens in several districts in this Province, may it therefore please your Majesty that it may be enacted and be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "an Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "an Act to make more effectual provision for the government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That out of the surplus of any fund or funds subject to the disposition of the Parliament of this Province, now remaining in the hands of the Receiver General unappropriated, there shall be issued and applied the sum of five hundred and eighty-eight pounds and eight pence half-penny, to make good the said sum of Money which has been issued and advanced in pursuance of the aforesaid address and letter.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the due application of the said sum of Money pursuant to the direction of this Act, shall be accounted for to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, through the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury for the time being, in such manner and form as his Majesty, his heirs and successors shall direct.

An Act for the further encouragement of the Growth and Cultivation of Hemp within this Province, and for the Exportation thereof.

Passed 16th March, 1808.

WHEREAS by an act of the parliament of this Province, made and passed in the forty fifth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "an act for granting to his Majesty a certain sum of money for the encouragement of the Growth and Cultivation of Hemp in this Province, and the exportation thereof," it was amongst other things enacted, that the sum of fifty pounds should be the rate or price to be paid per ton for hemp which may be purchased under or by virtue of the said act; and whereas it is found by experience that the said sum of fifty pounds per ton is insufficient to compensate for the labour of the cultivators of hemp in this Province; for the further encouragement thereof, Be it therefore enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an act passed in the parliament of Great Britain, entitled "an act to repeal certain parts of an act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "an act for making more effectual provision for the government of the province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said province," and by the authority of the same, That the sum of sixty-two pounds and ten shillings per ton shall be the rate or price for good and merchantable hemp which may be hereafter purchased under and by virtue of this act or any former act of the parliament of this Province, any law or usage to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding.

N. Y. Paper.

The ship Agustus, Capt. Chever, arrived at Salem, in 40 days from Leghorn a gentleman who came passenger in her, informs, that they had no accounts of the French and spanish fleets having arrived at Forto Ferrajo—nor was there any positive accounts of them. It had been reported that a large fleet had passed Sicily, where bound, unknown. Off Cape de Gatt, fell in with Capt. Flet, who sailed in co. with him, and informed, that he fell in with a British squadron off Majorca, who were watching a small French fleet at Port Mahon, and had captured four store ships bound to supply them.

The fire in the Island of Trinidad, as mentioned in a late paper, consumed nearly four-fifths of the whole town of Port Spain. Every merchant's store, every baking house, every doctor's and apothecary's shop are entirely destroyed; the public hospitals, old and new government house, and portestant church, shared the same fate. The loss of property is thought to be upwards of one million sterling.

A subscription has been opened at Trinidad for the relief of the sufferers by this fire, at the head of which are the names of his Excellency Brig. General Hislop, Governor of the Islands, and Charles Grant Esq. Collector of the Customs, for one thousand pounds sterling each, an example of beneficence which does infinite honor to the hearts of the donors.

Gibraltar, Feb. 13.

As the most minute circumstances relative to the operations of the Rochefort squadron cannot fail to cause a lively interest among our readers, we have been induced to make some further inquiries relative to it from the American captain alluded to in our last number; and from his log book, we learn, that it was on the 23d inst. he fell in with it, when he was taken in tow by the frigate two seventy-fours keeping constantly on either side, and the brig astern, as he supposes, in case the tow rope should break, to prevent his escape in the night. On the 26th. about 6 P. M. they cast him off, and made all possible sail in for the land being then in lat. 35. 58. Soon after they parted company, a signal was made from the flag ship and answered by the frigate, which immediately shortened sail, hove to, and spoke the American, ordering him to steer S. W. till they should be out of sight. He accordingly hauled his wind to the westward about 2 hours, and then bore away for the Gut. He learned from the frigate that the squadron had been 6 days at sea when he fell in with it. The ships are described as being most wretchedly manned with respect to seamen, with the exception of two seventy-fours which appeared to be very well handled.—They were completely filled with troops, which material circumstance he omitted mentioning in his former declaration.

An Act to continue an Act passed in the forty-fifth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "an Act to afford relief to those persons who may be entitled to claim Lands in this Province, as Heirs or Devisees of the Nominees of the Crown, in cases where no Patent hath issued for such Lands, and further to extend the benefits of the said Act.

Passed 16th March, 1808.

WHEREAS an act passed in the forty-fifth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "an act to afford relief to those persons who may be entitled to claim lands in this Province, as heirs or devisees of the nominees of the crown, in cases where no patent hath issued for such lands," will shortly expire, and it is expedient to continue the said act, and further to extend the benefits thereof; Be it therefore enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, entitled "an act to repeal certain parts of an act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "an act for making more effectual provision for the government of the province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said province," and by the authority of the same, That the said act of the forty-fifth year of his Majesty's reign, and every part thereof, and every clause, matter and thing therein contained, shall be and the same is hereby continued.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the assignee or assignees of the nominee or nominees of the crown to lands in this Province, who is or are dead, or who have left this Province before the passing of this act, without having obtained his Majesty's letters patent for such lands in his, her or their lifetimes, or before he, she or they did leave this Province, may respectively bring their claim or claims for the said lands before the commissioners hereinafter to be appointed, who shall and may and they are hereby authorized to hear and determine the claim or claims of such assignee or assignees, and to report thereupon to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the government, in council, in like manner and under the like regulations and restrictions as are in and by the said act passed in the forty-fifth year of his Majesty's reign, and hereby continued, directed to be observed respecting the claim or claims of the heir or heirs, devisee or devisees of the nominee or nominees of the crown to lands, brought before the commissioners under that act, and that it shall and may be lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the government, in council, to issue his Majesty's letters patent for the lot or lots, parcel or parcels of land specified in the said report to or in trust for such person or persons, his, her or their heirs and assigns, as is or are therein declared, by the said commissioners to be appointed under and by virtue of this act, to be the assignee or assignees of the nominee or nominees of the crown, as aforesaid, to such lot or lots, parcel or parcels of land; and that all and every the provisions, regulations, restrictions, matters and things, which in and by the said act of the forty fifth year of his Majesty's reign, are enacted and contained, of and concerning, or in any wise touching or relating to the claim or claims of the heir or heirs, devisee or devisees of the nominee or nominees of the crown, mentioned in that act, shall be and are hereby extended to the assignee or assignees of such nominee or nominees.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That for the better procuring of evidence to be laid before the commissioners to be appointed under this act, respecting any claim or claims that may be brought before them by virtue thereof, it shall and may be lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the government of this Province, for the time being, to appoint some person in each and every district of this Province to be a commissioner for taking upon oath (which oath the said commissioners are hereby authorized to administer) the testimony of any person or persons relative to such claim or claims to be brought before the said commissioners.

IV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person or persons shall forswear him, her or themselves before any such commissioner, he, she or they shall on conviction thereof, be subject to all the pains and penalties of wilful and corrupt perjury.

V. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the government of this Province, at any time during the continuance of this act, to issue such and so many commissions under the great seal of this Province to the members of the Executive Council thereof, his Majesty's Chief Justice of the said Province, the Justices of the Court of King's Bench, and such and so many other persons as the said Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the government shall think fit, which said commissioners, or any three of them, of whom the said Chief Justice or one of the said Justices shall be one, shall have full power and authority to carry into force and effect all and every the powers and provisions, matters and things, specified and contained in the said act of the forty-fifth year of the reign of his present Majesty, and in this act; and that the said commissioners shall hold their sittings at the same place, and at the like times and in like manner as are specified and declared by the said first mentioned act, respecting the sittings of the said commissioners therein mentioned, under and by virtue of the same.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the clerk of the peace in each and every district of this Province shall once in every three months make a list of the claims set up in his office, specifying the name or names of the claimant or claimants, together with the number of the lot or lots, and the concession or concessions, with the name or names of the township or townships in which the lands so claimed do lie, and affix the said list on some conspicuous part of the court house or place where the courts are usually held at each general quarter sessions.

VII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That this act shall be and it is hereby declared to be in force for and during the term of four years, and no longer.

An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the forty-sixth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "an Act to continue an Act passed in the forty third year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "an Act for the better securing to his Majesty, his Heirs and Successors, the due collection and receipt of certain Duties therein mentioned.

Passed 16th March, 1808.

WHEREAS by an act passed in the forty-sixth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "an act to continue an act passed in the forty third year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "an act for the better securing to his Majesty, his Heirs and Successors, the due collection and receipt of certain duties therein mentioned," it was thereby enacted that the said act of the parliament of this Province, passed in the forty-third year of his Majesty's reign, should be and the same was thereby continued, and it was thereby further enacted that the said act passed in the forty-sixth year of his Majesty's reign, should be and continue in force for and during the term of two years, and from thence to the end of the then next session of parliament, and no longer; And whereas it is thought fit that the said recited act, passed in the forty-third year of his Majesty's reign, should not be subject to any limitation in point of time, but that the same should be made perpetual; Be it therefore enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an act passed in the parliament of Great Britain, entitled "an act to repeal certain parts of an act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "an act for making more effectual provision for the government of the province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That so much of the act passed in the forty-sixth year of his Majesty's reign as limits the continuance of the aforesaid act to the term of two years, and from thence to the end of the then next session of parliament, shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

An Act to continue an Act passed in the Thirty-third year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "an Act to provide for the appointment of Returning Officers of the several Counties within this Province.

Passed 16th March, 1808.

WHEREAS an act passed in the thirty-third year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "an act to provide for the appointment of returning officers of the several counties within this Province," and which act has since been revived and continued by a certain act entitled "an act to revive and continue an act entitled "an act to provide for the appointment of returning officers for the several counties within this Province," will shortly expire, and it being necessary that the said act passed in the thirty-third year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "an act to provide for the appointment of returning officers of the several counties within this Province," be continued; Be it therefore enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an act passed in the parliament of Great Britain, entitled "an act to repeal certain parts of an act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "an act for making more effectual provision for the government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That the said act of the thirty third year of his Majesty's reign, and every part thereof, and every clause, matter and thing therein contained, are by the present act continued for and during the space of four years, and no longer.

An Act for granting to his Majesty a certain sum of Money out of the Provincial Fund, to increase the salary of the Clerk of the Legislative Council and the Clerk of the House of Assembly.

Passed 16th March, 1808.

WHEREAS it is thought expedient to increase the salaries of the Clerks of the Legislative Council and House of Assembly in this Province; Be it therefore enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, entitled "an act to repeal certain parts of an act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled "an act for making more effectual provision for the government of the province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said province," and by the authority of the same, That from and out of the rates and duties already raised, levied and collected, or hereafter to be raised, levied and collected, to and for the uses of this Province, there be granted annually, to his Majesty, his Heirs and Successors, the sum of one hundred and fifty pounds, to and for the uses hereinafter expressed, that is to say, the sum of seventy-five pounds to the Clerk of the Legislative Council, and the sum of seventy-five pounds to the Clerk of the House of Assembly, for the time being, in addition to the sums heretofore granted to and for the uses of the said Clerks.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the monies hereby granted to his Majesty for the payment of salaries to the Clerk of the Legislative Council and the Clerk of the House of Assembly, shall be paid by the Receiver General, in discharge of such warrant or warrants as shall for the purposes herein set forth be from time to time issued by the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the government of this Province, for the time being, and not otherwise, and the said Receiver General shall account to his Majesty for the same through the commissioners of his Majesty's treasury for the time being, in such manner and form as his Majesty shall direct.

PROCLAMATION
PARDONING DESERTERS
FROM His Majeſty's Regular Land Forces.

WAR OFFICE, Auguſt, 25, 1808.

WHEREAS it has been repreſented to THE KING, That there are at this Time ſeveral DESERTERS from the different REGULAR CORPS in HIS MAJESTY'S LAND SERVICE, who might be induced to return to their Duty by an Offer of His Majeſty's GRACIOUS PARDON, and that ſuch an Inſtance of His Royal Clemency would have a due Influence upon their future Behaviour; His Majeſty has been graciouſly pleaſed to grant His FREE PARDON to all DESERTERS from HIS REGULAR LAND FORCES, who ſhall ſurrender themſelves, on or before the Twenty-fourth of OCTOBER, to the Commanding Officer of any Regiment, or to any of the Superintending Field Officers of the Recruiting Service, whoſe Stations are mentioned in the Margin hereof, or to the Commandant of the Army Depot in the Iſle of Wight.

Such Deſerters, if Able bodied Men and fit for Service, ſhall be ſent to the Regiments from which they reſpectively deſerted, or be appointed to ſuch Regiments in the United Kingdom as His Majeſty may be pleaſed to command; and, when ſo placed, ſhall not be liable to be claimed by any other Corps to which they may formerly have belonged.

AND WHEREAS many of the ſaid Deſerters may have enliſted in other Regular Corps, and are now ſerving therein, His Majeſty is graciouſly pleaſed to extend to ſuch Deſerters the Benefit of this Pardon; and to direct that they ſhall continue to ſerve in the Corps wherein they now are, upon declaring themſelves to their reſpective Commanding Officers, on or before the Twenty-fourth of OCTOBER next, & they ſhall not be liable at any future Time, to be claimed by the Regiments in which they formerly ſerved.

The Magiſtrate to whom any Deſerter from His Majeſty's Regular Forces may ſurrender himſelf, is authorized and required to certify the Day on which ſuch Deſerter ſurrendered himſelf, which Certificate is to continue in Force until the Arrival of the Deſerter at the Head Quarters of the neareſt Military Poſt, provided he proceed at the Rate of Ten Miles a Day, unleſs prevented by Sickneſs, to be certified by ſome Medical Practitioner on the Back of the Magiſtrate's Certificate, or to be otherwiſe proved to the Satisfaction of the Officer Commanding at ſuch Military Poſt.

And with a View to prevent as far as poſſible all Soldiers from Deſertion, after theſe His Majeſty's moſt gracious Intentions ſhall be made known, His Majeſty has been pleaſed to command, that the Name of every Soldier who may hereafter deſert, ſhall be tranſmitted through the Secretary at War to the Church Wardens of the Pariſhes, to which the Deſerters belong; in order that their Names may be expoſed to public View in the Church, or ſuch other conſpicuous Place, as may render it impoſſible for Men, who have been guilty of this Crime, to return home to their friends, on whom they have brought diſgrace by their Miſconduct, without immediate Detection; and His Majeſty has further commanded, that this Meaſure ſhall be made public, that every Soldier may be aſſured, that the greateſt Exertions will be uſed for the Apprehenſion of any Man who may hereafter deſert, and that thoſe who have already been guilty of that Crime, may be aware of the daily Riſk they incur of Detection, and of the moſt ſevere Puniſhment, if they do not immediately avail themſelves of the Pardon held out in this His Majeſty's moſt gracious Proclamation.

Any Soldier who may deſert after theſe His Majeſty's gracious Intentions are made Public, ſhall not be included in the above Pardon, but be proceeded againſt with the utmoſt Severity.

It is to be clearly underſtood, That this Proclamation of Pardon is intended to include all Deſerters from the Army of Reſerve and Additional Force Act, but not to extend to any Deſerter from His Majeſty's Militia Forces

By His Majeſty's Command,
JAS. PULTENEY.

THE COMMANDER OF HIS MAJESTY'S FORCES in the BRITISH PROVINCES of NORTH AMERICA, having received an Official Copy of the above PROCLAMATION iſſued by His Majeſty's Orders in England and deſirous of affording to all Deſerters the opportunity of availing themſelves of His Majeſty's gracious offer of Pardon, is pleaſed thus to make the ſame public, and to extend the term to which it is limited with reſpect to the Provinces of UPPER and LOWER CANADA to 24th DECEMBER next enſuing, and with reſpect to ſuch perſons as are deſirous of atoning for their paſt miſconduct who may come in from beyond the limits of theſe Provinces, to 24th FEBRUARY, that will be in the year 1809. Deſerters are to ſurrender themſelves to any Field Officer or to any other Officer commanding any Detachment or Military Poſt in either of the aforeſaid Provinces, or to any Magiſtrate near whom they may be; ſuch Magiſtrate being deſired to furniſh them with a Certificate of the date of ſuch ſurrender, which Certificate will be in force in the ſame manner and under the ſame limitations as directed in His Majeſty's Proclamation.

GIVEN AT HEAD QUARTERS,
Quebec, 7th November, 1808.

General.

BY HIS EXCELLENCY'S COMMAND.
ED. BAYNES,
Adjutant General.

York, Upper Canada, 15th Feby. 1809.

His Excellency the COMMANDER OF THE FORCES has been pleaſed to ſignify to the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR of this PROVINCE, that the Time for Deſerters ſurrendering themſelves in the PROVINCE OF UPPER CANADA, is extended from the 24th of FEBRUARY, to the 24th of APRIL next enſuing.

The interdiction of foreign Commerce for an indefinite period, by perpetual Laws, is justly considered as a total annihilation of it. The people of this Country are not accustomed to class among their rights, such enjoyments and privileges as depend on the will of any set of men whatever: under such circumstances they would cease to be the rights of a free people. Yet it is obvious that the acts laying an embargo have suspended their Commercial rights; and if those Acts are Constitutional, these rights can never be restored to without a concurrent act of all the branches of the Federal Government. The events now passing at the seat of Government strongly exemplify the force of this remark. If one branch of the Legislature, should be unanimously inclined to repeal the Embargo and even if be other branch should concur, yet the President of the United States may prevent the passing of an act for such a purpose: and if afterwards only twelve members of the Senate should adopt his Policy and unite in supporting his measures, the Embargo must remain in force. Most certainly the people of this country never intended to subject to the discretionary power of thirteen men, one of their most essential and invaluable rights. If the existence, or the apprehension, of war would justify a Temporary Embargo, the spirit of the Constitution, would demand that it should be imposed for a short and definite period; so as to require from time to time the same concurrence of opinion to continue it, which now is required for its removal.

In the act of Congress passed on the ninth day of January last for enforcing the preceding Embargo act, this Legislature see with extreme pain and perseverance in the system, which has proved so injurious to the Country. But they are still more alarmed from examining some of the provisions of this act, which appear to them hostile to the dignity and independance of this Commonwealth, and subversive of the civil liberty and constitutional rights of its citizens. They see there the rights of individuals subjected to the arbitrary will of an Executive officer, instead of being defined & secured by standing laws: secret and variable instructions and others of the President, entitled to equal respect with the laws of the land: an indefinite and almost unlimited authority given to the officers of the Customs, without any warrant from a civil Magistrate, to search for and seize the property of the Citizens: excessive sureties required of men who are not even charged with any offence; and excessive fines and penalties imposed: individuals exposed to losses and penalties for actions which were lawful at the time of committing them: and the benefits of a trial by Jury in many cases virtually denied. If any Citizen who is aggrieved should apply for redress to the laws and judicial Courts of the Commonwealth, their processes may be impeded, their Officers resisted, and their authority put at defiance, by the Standing army of the United States under the command of any inferior officer, empowered by the President. Thus whenever a petty officer shall be found hardy and adventurous enough to exercise the authority conferred by this act, the sovereignty and independence of the State will be humbled in the dust: or its Government must vindicate by force its dignity and its honor, and may be consequently involved in a civil War.

This Legislature cannot review without the most painful emotions, the measures of the general Government, which they have here been considering. They cannot without the most gloomy apprehensions, contemplate the probable consequences of a perseverance in those measures. They are constrained respectfully, but most unequivocally, to declare their conviction that the several laws before referred to, which interdict the foreign Commerce of the United States, and which have imposed numerous embarrassments on the coasting trade, must have originated in a misconstruction of the Federal Constitution; that they are contrary to the spirit and intention of that instrument; and are not warranted by any of the powers therein given by the People to the Congress of the United States. In the hope of preventing any further evil consequences from these measures, and with the most ardent desire to preserve inviolate the Constitution of these States, and to remove every source of discontent and jealousy among the different members of the Union, this Legislature do solemnly remonstrate against the several acts of Congress for impelling and enforcing the Embargo; and do earnestly request your honorable body to take the same into your most serious consideration, and by repealing them to restore this people to their former enviable state of Freedom, Prosperity, and Happiness.

It is impossible to contemplate the repeal of the several acts relating to the Embargo, without considering the various substitutes for this measure, which have been proposed, and which are now before the Public. This Legislature feel bound to express the strong and decided opinion they entertain on this subject, before any of these proposed measures shall be adopted. The expression of this opinion is required by a just sense of their own rights, and those of the State which they represent; and also by a due regard to the sentiments and feelings of their constituents, which are well known to the individuals of this Legislature, and which are so strongly displayed in the numerous petitions and memorials daily arriving from all parts of the Commonwealth.

The prohibition of all intercourse with France and Great Britain and their respective dependencies, would probably prove fruitless and inefficient, from the extreme difficulty of enforcing its observance; and would thus serve to bring into contempt the laws and government of the country; or if enforced, it would impose embarrassments on Commerce, nearly as fatal as the obstructions created by the present Embargo. It would soon become a restriction only on the orderly and well disposed part of the community; and would furnish opportunities and inducements to the officers of Government, by occasional indulgence and connivance, to promote the interests of their personal or political friends. But in another view of this measure, it appears still more serious and alarming. It is obvious that if the Embargo was removed, our citizens would have but little intercourse with France or her dependencies. The total disregard of the Laws of Nations, and the obligation of treaties, manifested by that Government;—the seizure and detention of Neutral property in all parts of her dominions;—the unprecedented Decrees against Neutral Commerce promulgated at Berlin, at Milan, and at Bayonne; would deter our citizens from adventuring in commerce with her subjects. The proposed non-intercourse therefore would in effect apply solely to Great Britain. The natural tendency of this measure which is undoubtedly foreseen if not intended by some of its advocates, would be to involve the Nation in war with Great Britain, a measure which would necessarily produce a fatal alliance with France.

The project of arming our Merchantmen to resist seizures by either of the Belligerents, appears to manifest a spirit, which when excited in a just cause will always be warmly approved and vigorously supported by the people of Massachusetts. They cannot cease to lament, that some portion of this spirit had not been exhibited in resisting the first outrage on our rights, by the Berlin Decree of November 1806. If our Government had at that time expressed a strong sense of this Outrage on the nation, and a firm resolution to vindicate and maintain its rights, they would have been most cordially and zealously supported by men of all political parties.

The project if adopted now without limitation, however it may be intended by those who propose it, would speedily and inevitably lead to a war with Great Britain. France has comparatively few Cruizers on the Ocean, which is covered by the ships of her enemy. Our vessels would be seldom encountered by those of the former power, while hardly one would escape those of the latter. All our actual collisions would necessarily be with G. Britain, who would thus me made to appear to be the only aggressor; and when the public sensibility was excited by these causes, the dictates of reason, of justice, and of sound policy, would cease to be regarded. It cannot be too often repeated that such a War would necessarily involve a destructive alliance with France; an Alliance which experience has shewn to be more fatal than any war; & which is universally dreaded throughthis part of the United States as highly dangerous to the Independence of the Nation, and hostile to the liberties of the World.

The Legislature of Massachusetts express without reserve their sentiments on the conduct of the two Belligerent Powers of Europe. They cannot be restrained by the audacious and unfounded insinuation, that the people of New England are influenced by undue partiality to either of those Powers. They repel with indignation this slanderous aspersion, which cannot be believed even by those who propagate it. It is refuted by the well known spirit and patriotism of this People; it is disproved by the Annals of our Revolutionary War, and by our whole history to the present day. This State was among the first to resist the encroachment of the British Government at that time; her citizens still retain the same spirit to oppose unjust aggressions from whatever quarter they may attempted. While they cultivate this spirit, the pledge of their Liberties and their Independence; they cherish also those moral habits and religious principles, which distinguished their ancestors, the first settlers of this country. While vindicating their own rights, they are admonished candidly to examine, and religiously to respect, the rights of others. They can never cordially engage in any contest which does not appear to them necessary on the honor and the essential interests of their Country; nor can they appeal with confidence to the God of Armies, in a war which does not appear to them to be just.

With these impressions the Legislature of Massachusetts, have deliberately examined the several Documents respecting the foreign relations of the United States, which were published by Congress for the information of the people. They have impartially weighed & considered the dates, and the contents, of the Maritime Decrees and orders of France, and Great Britain, affecting the Commerce of the United States, and the dispositions of those two Governments as manifested in their correspondence with our public Ministers. The numerous and repeated aggressions on the part of France, displayed in those Documents are as injurious to the honor of the Nation as to the interests of the citizens; violating at once the sacred obligations of our treaty with that Government, and the established principals of the law of nations. The Remonstrances and Complaints of our Minister appear to have been treated with contemptuous silence, or answered only with new outrages; and he seems at last to have abandoned all hope and expectation of influencing that Government by Diplomatic representations; and to have left it to the wisdom and the spirit of the United States, to adopt such other measures as may be necessary to cause their rights to be respected. While France shall maintain this contemptuous indifference and these hostile dispositions, it appears hardly possible to attempt any accomodation with her, which shall not tarnish the honor, and endanger the independence of our Country.

On the part of Great Britain, there appears from thoſe Documents to be a diſpoſition to cultivate a good underſtanding with this country. They have manifeſted a ſtrong deſire to make atonement and compenſation for injuries that were even unauthorized, and unintentional ; and to adjuſt the reſpective rights and claims of the two Nations on ſuch a baſis as ſhall prevent future Colliſions. If theſe diſpoſitions on her part are ſincere, and we do not ſee in theſe Documents, any reaſon to queſtion their ſincerity, they ſhould undoubtedly be met by a correſpondent diſpoſition on our part. They certainly furniſh an opportunity to attempt a negociation, without any ſacrifice of honorable ſentiment or independent feelings ; and this Legiſlature have great confidence, that ſuch a negociation, conducted in a fair, impartial and candid manner, would ſpeedily reſtore harmony between the two Countries. In conſidering the different Decrees and orders of France and Great Britain, it is obvious that thoſe of the former have been uniformly firſt in order of the time and moſt injurious in their nature. But even if thoſe Nations were, as has been ſometimes aſſerted, on the moſt perfect equality in this reſpect, and if the conduct of each furniſhed ſuch a cauſe of War as would leave only the choice of our adverſary, every motive of policy would induce the United States to ſelect France for her enemy. Without condeſcending to calculate with preciſion the Comparative ability of thoſe two Nations to injure and annoy this country, the preſent ſtate of the World would decide our choice. In one event, we ſhould have the ſatisfaction of aiding in that glorious ſtruggle now carried on in Europe againſt the tyrant of France ; and of aſſiſting to maintain the cauſe of that brave and gallant Nation which has lately thrown off the yoke of her oppreſſor ; and which was among the firſt to promote our exertions in a like cauſe. In the other caſe, we ſhould immediately be arraved on the ſide of France ; we ſhould neceſſarily aid the gigantic ſtrides of her Emperor towards univerſal Domination, and aſſiſt in annihilating the Independence of Nations, and the Freedom of the World.

From the Albany Gazette of March 13, 1809.

CIRCULAR.

Treaſury Department, March 3d, 1809

SIR—I herewith tranſmit a printed copy of an act to interdict the commercial intercourſe between the United States and Great Britain and France, and their dependencies, and for other purpoſes.

The proviſions of the 1ſt and 2d ſections extended to public ſhips and veſſels of France, the regulation already in force in relation to public veſſels of Great Britain.

The 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th ſections, take effect after the 15th day of this month ; after which day, veſſels owned by citizens of the United States may be cleared for any port or place, other than thoſe excepted by the 12th ſection, on giving bond in a ſum double the value of the veſſel and cargo, and in other reſpects complying with the requiſite of the 2d ſection of the act of January laſt. It follows, that the proviſion in the laſt mentioned ſection requiring bond in ſix times the value of the veſſel and cargo is repealed from and after the 15th of this month.

The law remains in full force in relation to veſſels owned by foreigners ; and in addition thereto, bonds in four times the value of the veſſel and cargo muſt be required from ſuch veſſels, whether they ſail in ballaſt or with the cargoes which they had prov in, that they ſhall not proceed to forbidden ports &c in the form preſcribed by the 13th ſection. Not even Engliſh veſſels can, after that day, be cleared for the dominions of England, or French veſſels for the dominions of France. Packets and other veſſels excepted, under the 18 ſect. of the act, may however be permitted to proceed. No foreign veſſel whatever, and whoever bound, can take any cargo on board.

The coaſting trade, is, by the 14th ſect. releaſed from every impediment laid by the embargo laws, ſuch proviſions excepted as are contained in the 15th ſect. All inſtructions therefore, on that ſubject are revoked, and particularly thoſe reſpecting re-ſhipments. Detentions are ſtill however authorized in caſes where there is ſufficient cauſe to apprehend that an evaſion of the law is intended. And the proviſions applicable to diſtricts adjacent to foreign territories remain in force. But you are authorized to grant permiſſion to proceed to New-Orleans, unleſs you have reaſon to believe that there is an intention to invade or violate the laws, in which caſe you will refer the application to this department.

Every country nominally enjoying an independent form of government, (other than Great Britain or France) and not in the actual poſſeſſion of either Great Britain or France, is open by the law, and particularly Holland, Spain, and Portugal, and their colonies ; but you will ſuſpend until the queſtion has been better inveſtigated, granting clearances for any part of the iſland of St. Domingo, or the kingdom of Italy.

Colonies conquered by, and in poſſeſſion of Great Britain or France, are prohibited.

I am yours, reſpectfully,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Collector of the port of Philadelphia.

The Senate of the United States have rejected the additional duty bill ; and have ſtruck out of the appropriation bill the item of one million dollars for fortifications.

Patriotiſm of Rhode Iſland—We have juſt learnt that Reſolutions have paſſed in the Legiſlature of R. Iſland, 37 to 30, diſapproving of the late meaſures of the National Government ; a remonſtrance is contemplated, and expecting to paſs, at their adjournment, in a fortnight.

The Britiſh frigate Horatio, and ſloop of war driver, on the 12th of February, captured after a moſt deſperate action, a French frigate from Guadaloupe—The French captain and 30 men were killed, and the frigate was wholly dismaſted —The Engliſh frigate had her captain, 1ſt lieutenant and 20 men killed, and loſt her main-maſt, mizen-maſt and fore-top maſt —The Britiſh frigate with her prize was ſpoken off Bermuda by the Juniata arrived at Philadelphia from Hamburgh.

GREAT NEWS.

A Gentleman of undoubted veracity has arrived from Barbadoes, who ſailed from that place on the 28th Jan. He informs, that on that day a packet arrived from England, bringing London papers to the 27th of December ; that he heard them read in the Coffee-Houſe, amidſt a large crowd ; that the paper of the 26th, contained an account of a great victory obtained in Spain, over the French, by the combined forces of Britain and Spain — That from 30 to 40,000 Frenchmen, were killed, wounded, or taken priſoners and that the ſurvivors and fugitives, were driven into Biscay, (near France.) The Britiſh loſs was conſiderable, and many officers fell, whoſe names were mentioned in the papers, but are not recollected,

The ſame paper contained an account of the acquittal of Sir A. Welleſly, (Sir H. *D*alrymple is undoubtedly meant) for his conduct in Portugal.

The above account was likewiſe confirmed by an arrival from Spain.

The above mentioned gentleman alſo states, that an inſurrection had taken place in the Carraccas a Spaniſh Province. Some *A*riſtocrats wiſhed to declare the *P*rovince independent, but the common people were loyal to Ferdinand VII - and had executed 25 of the oth r party.

Boſton, March 3.

Attack on Martinique—Yeſterday arrived brig Thomas Jeffrey, Captain Power from Dominica, via Halifax.—Left the former place 30th January, and the latter the 25th ult. captain P. informs, that the attack on Martinique was to take place the 31ſt January ; that Sir George Prevoſt was to direct it.——The Governor of Dominica, with all the regular troops in the Iſland, ſailed from that place the evening of the 24th, to join the force from Barbadoes, expected to be off St. Pierres, where the principal landing of the troops would take place, and where, it was generally ſuppoſed, they would meet with a welcome reception.

The attack on Martinique, was for ſomething delayed, owing, it was currently reported and believed, to a difference of opinion between lieutenant General Beckwith, and Sir George Prevoſt, as to the probable reſult ; but by the firſt December Packet arrived at Barbadoes, it was ſaid, Sir George received the appointment of Commander in Chief of the Expedition, and gallantly reſolved upon making an immediate attempt.

The ſchooner Rachel, from Trinidad to Halifax, has arrived at the Vineyard. —The captain ſtates, that the expedition againſt Martinique ſailed from Barbadoes January 28th.

Halifax, Feb. 24.

"The Topas, French frigate of 44 guns, 400 men, and 1500 barrels of flour on board for Guadaloupe, was taken under the batteries of that iſland, by H. M's ſhips Jaſon, Cleopatra, Hazard, and Cherub, on the 23d, ult. The Cleopatra was cloſely engaged with her for half an hour, before the other veſſels came up. The Topaz is the frigate that ſunk the Blanche. The Cleopatra had only two men wounded."

Captain Marſhal, of the Swediſh ſchr. Harriot, who arrived here laſt night in 21 days from St. Bartholomews, informs us, that 2 days before he ſailed, intelligence was received, that the Iſland of Martinique was taken by the Britiſh, under General Prevoſt, excepting Fort Bourbon, which the French had poſſeſſion of.

The Charleſton Times ſays—"There has been a very deſperate action fought between the Africa man of war and about 50 ſail of Daniſh gun boats. The Africa, captain Barrett, ſailed from Carliſcrona on the 14th of October, with about 440 veſſels bound to Gottenburg. The Danes being in expectation of this fleet, collected at Kalmo a large fleet of gun boats ; and the Britiſh commercial fleet, under convoy of the Africa, having arrived of that port, the Daniſh gunboats came out and attacked them. The Africa took immediate meaſures to defend her charge, and gallantly oppoſed the enemy. In the conteſt, however, 3 of the Britiſh ſhips were driven on ſhore, and but for the deſperate manner in which captain Barrett fought his ſhip, many others muſt have ſhared the ſame fate. In this unequal conteſt the Africa has ſuffered very much. At one time 30 of the enemy's boats were engaged upon her together for a conſiderable time. She had 20 killed and 40 wounded. The loſs of the enemy was not known, but it muſt be conſiderable, as the Africa, during the conteſt, was like a perfect vulcano, and ſeveral of the enemy's boats went to the bottom."

A letter received by yeſterday's Mail, dated Wathington March 1ſt, ſtates, that the fortification Bill which paſſed the Houſe of Repreſentatives, granting one million of dollars, has been negatived in the Senate, only 6 riſing in favor of it.

PROCLAMATION
FROM His Majesty's Regular Land Forces.

WAR OFFICE, August, 25, 1808.

WHEREAS it has been represented to THE KING, That there are at this Time several DESERTERS from the different REGULAR CORPS in HIS MAJESTY'S LAND SERVICE, who might be induced to return to their Duty by an Offer of His Majesty's GRACIOUS PARDON, and that such an Instance of His Royal Clemency would have a due Influence upon their future Behaviour; His Majesty has been graciously pleased to grant His FREE PARDON to all DESERTERS from HIS REGULAR LAND FORCES, who shall surrender themselves, on or before the Twenty-fourth of OCTOBER, to the Commanding Officer of any Regiment, or to any of the Superintending Field Officers of the Recruiting Service, whose Stations are mentioned in the Margin hereof, or to the Commandant of the Army Depot in the Isle of Wight.

Such Deserters, if Able bodied Men and fit for Service, shall be sent to the Regiments from which they respectively deserted, or be appointed to such Regiments in the United Kingdom as His Majesty may be pleased to command; and, when so placed, shall not be liable to be claimed by any other Corps to which they may formerly have belonged.

AND WHEREAS many of the said Deserters may have enlisted in other Regular Corps, and are now serving therein, His Majesty is graciously pleased to extend to such Deserters the Benefit of this Pardon; and to direct that they shall continue to serve in the Corps wherein they now are, upon declaring themselves to their respective Commanding Officers, on or before the Twenty-fourth of OCTOBER next, & they shall not be liable at any future Time, to be claimed by the Regiments in which they formerly served.

The Magistrate to whom any Deserter from His Majesty's Regular Forces may surrender himself, is authorized and required to certify the Day on which such Deserter surrendered himself, which Certificate is to continue in Force until the Arrival of the Deserter at the Head Quarters of the nearest Military Post, provided he proceed at the Rate of Ten Miles a Day, unless prevented by Sickness, to be certified by some Medical Practitioner on the Back of the Magistrate's Certificate, or to be otherwise proved to the Satisfaction of the Officer Commanding at such Military Post.

And with a View to prevent as far as possible all Soldiers from Desertion, after these His Majesty's most gracious Intentions shall be made known, His Majesty has been pleased to command, that the Name of every Soldier who may hereafter desert, shall be transmitted through the Secretary at War to the Church Wardens of the Parishes, to which the Deserters belong; in order that their Names may be exposed to public View in the Church, or such other conspicuous Place, as may render it impossible for Men, who have been guilty of this Crime, to return home to their Friends, on whom they have brought disgrace by their Misconduct, without immediate Detection; and His Majesty has further commanded, that this Measure shall be made public, that every Soldier may be assured, that the greatest Exertions will be used for the Apprehension of any Man who may hereafter desert, and that those who have already been guilty of that Crime, may be aware of the daily Risk they incur of Detection, and of the most severe Punishment, if they do not immediately avail themselves of the Pardon held out in this His Majesty's most gracious Proclamation.

Any Soldier who may desert after these His Majesty's gracious Intentions are made Public, shall not be included in the above Pardon, but be proceeded against with the utmost Severity.

It is to be clearly understood, That this Proclamation of Pardon is intended to include all Deserters from the Army of Reserve and Additional Force Act, but not to extend to any Deserter from His Majesty's Militia Forces

By His Majesty's Command,
JAS. PULTENEY.

THE COMMANDER OF HIS MAJESTY'S FORCES in the BRITISH PROVINCES of NORTH AMERICA, having received an Official Copy of the above PROCLAMATION issued by His Majesty's Orders in England and desirous of affording to all Deserters the opportunity of availing themselves of His Majesty's gracious offer of Pardon, is pleased thus to make the same public, and to extend the term to which it is limited with respect to the Provinces of UPPER and LOWER CANADA to 24th DECEMBER next ensuing, and with respect to such persons as are desirous of atoning for their past misconduct who may come in from beyond the limits of these Provinces, to 24th FEBRUARY, that will be in the year 1809. Deserters are to surrender themselves to any Field Officer or to any other Officer commanding any Detachment or Military Post in either of the aforesaid Provinces, or to any Magistrate near whom they may be; such Magistrate being desired to furnish them with a Certificate of the date of such surrender, which Certificate will be in force in the same manner and under the same limitations as directed in His Majesty's Proclamation.

Adjutant General.

York, Upper Canada, 15th Feby. 1809.

His Excellency the COMMANDER OF THE FORCES has been pleased to signify to the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR of this PROVINCE, that the Time for Deserters surrendering themselves in the PROVINCE OF UPPER CANADA, is extended from the 24th of FEBRUARY, to the 24th of APRIL next ensuing.

FRANCIS GORE, Lieut. Govr.

An ACT for the continuing for a limited time the Provisional Agreement entered into between this Province and Lower Canada at Montreal, on the fifth day of July, in the year one thousand eight hundred and four relative to Duties, also for continuing for a limited time the several Acts of the Parliament of this Province now in force relating thereto.

[Passed 9th of March, 1809.]

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN,

WHEREAS an Act passed in the forty-fifth year of His Majesty's reign, intituled, "an Act to ratify, & confirm certain Provisional Articles of Agreement entered into by the respective Commissioners of this Province & Lower Canada, at Montreal, on the fifth day of July one thousand eight hundred and four relative to duties, and for carrying the same into effect, also to continue an Act passed in the thirty-ninth year of your Majesty's reign, and continued by an Act passed in the forty-first year of your Majesty's reign, and also to continue an Act passed in the forty-seventh year of your Majesty's reign, intituled, "an Act for granting to his Majesty, his heirs and successors to and for the uses of this Province, the like duties on Goods and Merchandize brought into this Province from the United States of America, as are now paid on Goods and Merchandize imported from the United States of America into the Province of Lower Canada, which Provisional Agreements & Acts will shortly expire, & whereas it is found expedient to continue the same, May it therefore please your Most Excellent Majesty that it may be enacted, and be it therefore enacted by the King's most Excellent Majesty, by & with the advice & consent of the legislative council & assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted & assembled by virtue of & under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled," "An Act for making more effectual provision for the government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, & to make further provision for the government of the said Province," & by the authority of the same, That the said Provisional Agreement and the said Acts of the forty fifth and forty-seventh years of his Majesty's Reign, and every part thereof, and every clause, matter and thing therein contained, shall be, and the same are hereby continued.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That this Act shall continue to be in force to the Twenty fifth day of March in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and Eleven and no longer.

An ACT for Quartering and Billeting on certain occasions His Majesty's Troops and the Militia of this Province.

[Passed 9th of March, 1809.]

WHEREAS the laws now in force for Quartering and Billeting His Majesty's Troops, and the Militia of this Province, are not sufficiently applicable to the situation thereof. Be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the legislative council and assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain intituled, "an Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "an Act for making more effectual provision for the government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That from and after the passing of this Act, when and as often as the said Troops or Militia, shall be on a march within the said Province, each and every householder therein, shall furnish them when required, in manner hereinafter mentioned, with house-room, fire, and utensils for cooking, and in cases of emergency, by actual invasion or otherwise, it shall and may be lawful for the Officer Commanding His Majesty's Troops, or Militia, or in cases where orders cannot be received from him in due time, for the Officer Commanding any Regiment, Battalion or Detachment of Troops or Militia, to direct, and authorize, any officer of the same, having first obtained a warrant for such purpose, from one of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace, to impress such Horses, Carriages and Oxen as the service may require, for the use of which, the owner or owners thereof, shall be entitled to receive the sum of seven shillings and six pence per day, for every Cart or Carriage, with two Horses or Oxen, during such time as they shall be employed in such service, and when, and so often as the owner of such Team shall send a driver, he shall be allowed a further sum of two shillings and six pence per day.

II. And be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That when the said Troops or Militia, or any Regiment, Battalion or Detachment of the same, are on a march as aforesaid, the officer commanding such Troops or Militia, or any Regiment, Battalion or Detachment thereof, shall present to one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace, the order received by him from the commander of the said Troops or Militia, authorizing him the said Officer Commanding as aforesaid to make, and when upon extraordinary emergencies, such order cannot be obtained, it shall & may be lawful for him the said Officer Commanding as aforesaid, to make a requisition in writing to such Justice to Billet, who shall immediately thereupon, so Billet the said Troops or Militia, as to facilitate their march, and in such manner as may be most commodious to the Inhabitants, and that every Inhabitant Householder, who shall refuse to receive the said Troops or Militia so Billeted on them as aforesaid, shall for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of forty shillings.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That when the safety of this Province, shall require that the said Troops or Militia, or any Regiment, Important Intelligence.—From our Philadelphia Correspondent we have received proof sheets of late Foreign Intelligence received by the Government dispatch Ship Union, arrived at that Port from Falmouth.—We hasten to give our readers the following prominent articles in an extra sheet.

Plymouth Chronicle Office, Jan. 3, 2 o'clock

We stop the press to announce the arrival of the Joseph hired cutter in this Port bringing a confirmation of the statement brought by the Encounter gun brig of the MASSACREE of the FRENCH in MADRID, and that TWENTY SIX THOUSAND FRENCHMEN had Fallen by the knives of the Spaniards in that city.

We find in accounts received from Truro, that Coruna papers had reached that place to the 26th ult.—They mention, that since the defeat of Castanos, a battle had been fought at Tudela, in which the French were much worsted. It is added, that the Spaniards ate the dinner prepared for the French troops.—A Spanish General had been executed for treachery, and a proclamation had been issued, declaring every unmarried man and widower, from 18 to 50, who did not join the levies a traitor to his country. Even the nuns had quitted the Convents and were at work in the trenches.—The same papers also state, that there was much desperate fighting after Bonapare entered Madrid; and adds, that the French have lost 50,000 men since they entered Spain.—They confirm the union of the British Generals and Romana, and state that they were going to march to Valladolid with the view of cutting off the communication between Bonaparte's army at Madrid, and his rear at Astorga.—Coruna is certainly situate at a great distance from Madrid, the principal scene of action; yet we see little reason to discredit the junction of the British troops and Romana, both from antecedent accounts, and local circumstances. The victory said to be obtained by Castanos is not so strongly to be entitled to belief. If any great victory has been obtained by the Spaniards, it is most probably by Palafox, near Saragossa, over Marshal Ney, as the French bulletins are very shy in their mention of that town.

The intelligence received by the French Bulletins, and which was communicated to the public in the Pilot, a London evening paper of great celebrity, contains some favorable, and many unfavorable points. We shall endeavor to state, as briefly as possible, the impression which an attentive perusal of them has left upon our minds.

In the midst of the disasters which Spain has been compelled to endure, it is not a little consolatory to find that the great mass of the Spanish people seem to remain true to themselves, and to the cause in which they are struggling. There is not even an attempt on the part of the enemy to disguise the sentiments of wrath and indignation which are universally felt, particularly among the lower order of the people, at the unprincipled invasion, of which they are the unfortunate, but unwilling victims.

He does now pretend to give out, as was done on the first entry of Joseph into Spain, that he is any where received with enthusiasm or hailed as the sovereign of the people's choice. No public body ran to greet his approach; no venal municipality assemble in the vestibule of his dwelling to welcome his arrival. "The moon indeed may have shone with brightness," but no illumination took place on his entering the capital, but what was caused by the gunner's torches; and the terrific silence of the scene was broken by the shrieks of his murdered subjects.

The Encounter gun brig arrived yesterday from Vigo, after a passage of five days. She

V. And whereas in cafes of Emergency, it may fometimes become neceffary to provide proper and fpeedy means for the conveyance by water, of the faid Troops or Militia, and alfo of their Ammunition, Provifions and Baggage. Be it therefore further enacted by the authority aforefaid, That any one of his Majefty's Juftices of the Peace, of and in the Diftrict where fuch Troops or Militia, may be either on a march, or in Cantonment, upon receiving an order from the Commander in Chief of the faid Troops or Militia in that behalf, or a requifition in writing from the Officer Commanding any Regiment or Detachment of the fame, for fuch Boats or other craft, as may be requifite for the Conveyance of the faid Troops or Militia, and their Ammunition, Provifions, and Baggage fhall and may, and he is hereby required, to iffue his warrant to fuch perfon or perfons, as may be poffeffed of fuch Boats or other Craft, within his jurifdiction, requiring him or them, to furnifh the fame for that fervice, at and after the rate of payment to be allowed by the faid Juftice, not exceeding the ufual rate of hire for fuch Boats, or other craft, and if any fuch perfon or perfons fhall neglect, or refufe, after receiving fuch warrant, to furnifh his or their Boats, or Craft for that fervice, each and every fuch perfon or perfons, fhall forfeit and pay the fum of five pounds.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforefaid, That all penalties and forfeitures by this Act inflicted, or authorized to be impofed, fhall be levied and recovered, by diftrefs and fale of the offender's Goods and Chattels, by warrant under the hand and feal of any Juftice of the Peace, and fuch Juftice is hereby impowered and required, to grant the fame upon the confeffion of the party or parties, or upon the evidence of any one or more credible witneffes or witneffes, upon oath, and the overplus if any, of the money arifing by fuch diftrefs and fale, fhall be returned upon demand, to the owner or owners of fuch Goods and Chattels, deducting therefrom the coffs and charges of fuch diftrefs and fale one half of the faid penalties and forfeitures, fhall be paid to the informer, the other half into the hands of his Majefty's Receiver General, to and for the ufe of his Majefty, his heirs and fucceffors, for the public ufes of this Province, and towards the fupport of the Government thereof, to be accounted for to his Majefty, through the Commiffioners of his Treafury, for the time being, and in fuch manner and form as it fhall pleafe his Majefty to direct.

VII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforefaid, That an Act or Ordinance of the late Province of Quebec, paffed in the twenty feventh year of his Majefty's reign, intituled, "An Ordinance for quartering the Troops upon certain occafions in the country Parifhes, and providing for the conveyance of effects belonging to the Government, be, and the fame is hereby repealed.

brought private letters from thence, dated the 27th ult. which ftate, that a meffenger had left Sir D. Baird's army on the 18th at Benevento, and paffed through Sir J Moore's army on the morning of the 19th—both armies were in good health and fpirits. Gen. Blake has made a ftand, and was collecting his army at Leon. It was confidently aflerted at Vigo, that there had been an infurrection at Madrid, after the French got poffeffion of it, and that the enraged Spaniards had put to death feveral thoufands of the enemy, whofe bodies were piled up in heaps in the ftreets. The lofs of the French in killed and wounded, at Madrid, Saragoffa and Miflatedo, is ftated to be 50,000 men. Thefe letters alfo ftate, that the 15th regiment of light dragoons had fallen in with a regiment of French dragoons, near Rio Seco, and had charged through them, made 200 prifoners, and deftroyed the reft. It was alfo reported that Bonaparte had returned to Paris, on account of an infurrection in La Vendee and La Manche.

LONDON, Dec. 20—31.

Difpatches were on Friday afternoon received from Admiral de Courcy, at Coruna, brought by the Swallow, dated the 23d ult. enclofing letters from Sir David Baird, dated 17th, in which he ftates, that he was on the point of effecting a junction with Sir John Moore, whofe head quarters were then at the diftance of about 24 miles.

Advices from Rio de Janeiro have been received. Sir Sidney Smith retains all his influence, which he exerts to promote and ftrengthen the connexion between the two courts.

The officers both in Sir David Baird's and Sir J. Moore's armies now carry about their baggage themfelves: all public fervants whether as batt-men, fervants, &c. have been taken away—Gen. Moore being determined to have as many muskets as poffible. At firft the Staff grumbled; but lately they faw the neceffity of the meafure. Inftead of every captain and every two fubalterns having each a tent, 7 officers fleep in one tent.

On the 22d Gen. St. Hilaire, who commanded the French garrifon at Berlin, delivered the keys in a very formal manner to Prince Ferdinand of Pruffia. The Court was expected to return by the end of the prefent month.

From the London Statesman.

The following article is copied from laft night's London Gazette:—

At the Court of Queen's Palace, the 21ft of December, 18 8, Prefent, the King's Moft Excellent Majefty in Council:

His Majefty, in virtue of the powers referved to him by two certain Acts, paffed in the forty eighth year of his Majefty's reign, the one intituled "An Act for granting to his Majefty, until the end of the next feffion of Parliament, Duties of Cuftoms on the goods, wares and merchandizes therein enumerated, in furtherance of the provifions of certain Orders in Council;" the others intituled, "An Act for granting to his Majefty, until the end of the next feffion of Parliament, certain duties on the exportation from Ireland, of goods, wares, and merchandize therein enumerated;" is pleafed, by and with the advice of his privy council, to order, and it is hereby ordered, that until further orders fhall be made herein, the operation of the aforefaid Acts be fufpended, as to any duties on exportation granted by the faid Acts fo far as relates to articles being the growth, produce, or manufacture of any country for the time being, in amity with his Majefty, and from the ports of which the Britifh flag is not excluded, which articles have been, or fhall be imported direct from fuch country into any port or place of the United Kingdom, either in Britifh fhips, or in fhips of the country of which fuch articles are the growth, produce, or manufacture.

And his Majesty is further pleased, with the advice aforesaid, to order, and it is hereby ordered, that the operation of the aforesaid Acts be in like manner suspended, as to any duties on the exportation of goods, wares, or merchandize, which have been, or may be condemned as prize:

And the right. hon. the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury are to give the necessary directions according.

W. FAWKENER.

THE ARMY.

It is said that, that excellent officer, Sir A. Wellesley, goes out in command of all the reinforcements going to Spain. With him go—

Maj. Gen. Spencer,		Maj. Gen. Dyott,
	Murray,		Thewes,
	Ferguson,	Brig. Gen. Ewes,
	Payne,		Dorrien,
	Cotton,		Duff.

There will shortly be an English army in Spain, to conquer for the Spaniards, even if they will not fight for themselves. Sir J. Moore has very urgently prefsed government to expedite the return of the General Officers attached to the army under his command now in this country, and several of them, among whom is Sir Arthur Wellesley, are making preparations to proceed to Spain immediately.

Besides the Spanish papers which have arrived, we received this morning the Coruna Diary, of the 14th Dec. It contains not a word of news either foreign or domestic; its contents consist of only a long elegy in honor of the gallant Don Francisco Recum, Maj. Gen. in the Spanish army, who being severely wounded in one of the battles in Biscay, died as he was conveying to Coruna on board a Spanish Frigate. There is also a few voluntary contributions.

Reinforcements to the amount of about 10,000 men are forthwith to embark. The troops selected for this purpose are, as we understand, the brigade of Guards from Chatham, and the 87th and 89th regiments. The detachment will immediately embark at Ramsgate. Maj. Gen. Spencer is to command these troops, having under him Maj. Gen. Tilson and Brig. Gen. Campbell. In Ireland, the Royal Dragoons and the second battalion of the 83d are said to be actually on their march to Cork, where they are to embark without delay.

We can assure the public that there is not the least foundation for the assertion made by a Morning paper of yesterday, that it was the intention of Lord Mulgrave to resign the office of First Lord of the Admiralty, previous to the meeting of Parliament.

The Spaniards have a corps of 6,000 men, under General Belestuas, which defends the pass at Costillon-us, in Asturias, and should the enemy advance, near 120,000 peasants are ready to assemble and act against them. They are continually taking prisoners by attacking foraging parties of the French in the Montagna, where the enemy, according to all accounts, are in great distress for provisions.

CAPTURE of MARTINIQUE.

From the St. Thomas Gazette, Feb. 8.

We have been politely favored with the following extract of a letter from Martinique together with the proclamation issued by the Commander in Chief:—

Caffe Navire Bay, Martinique, 5th Feb. 1809.

Our operations go on swimmingly. The fortress of Pigeon Island surrendered yesterday morning at ten o'clock after sustaining a very heavy bombardment; 5 men of the enemy were killed and eleven wounded; 4 officers, and 126 men taken prisoners, and our shipping are all this morning come into this anchorage to land the mortars and artillery for the operation of Fort Desaix. The enemy's force in the two last actions were one half militia, who have suffered severely. Although we have not correctly ascertained it, they allow that they have in hospital 340 regulars wounded, and upwards of 100 militia. They have only 1500 men in the fort, and as we have possession of the whole of the redoubts but one, they cannot stand our fire very long. Gen. Beckwith and his army are on the heights of Mount Surruier. Genl. Maitland we expect here this evening. St. Pierre's will not be summoned until Desaix surrenders.—Villaret has ordered all the Militia to their homes.

Benevento, Dec. 28.

Since I had the honor to addreſs you upon the 16th from Toro, the army has been almoſt conſtantly marching through ſnow, and with cold that has been very intenſe. The weather, within theſe few days has turned to rain, which is more uncomfortable than the cold, and has rendered the roads almoſt impaſſable. The 21ſt the armies reached Sagun; it was neceſſary to halt there in order to refreſh the men, and on account of proviſions. The information I received was, that Marſhal Soult was at Saldana with about 16,000 men, with poſts along the River from Guarde to Garrion.

The army was ordered to march in 2 columns at 8 o'clock on the night of 23d, to

An ACT for granting a sum of Money in aid of the Building a Bridge across the Grand River.

[Passed 9th March, 1809.]

WHEREAS it is expedient for the safety of his Majesty's subjects that a Bridge be erected across the Grand River, in the County of Haldimand, in the District of Niagara; Be it enacted by the King's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "an Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "an Act for making more effectual provision for the government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That the Justices of the Peace or the majority of them, in General Quarter Sessions assembled, in and for the District aforesaid, shall have full power, and they are hereby authorized and impowerd to contract with any person or persons to build a Bridge of durable timber across the Grand River, at the most convenient place near the fording place, at the house of the widow of the late Isaac Brant.

II. And be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the person or persons so contracting with the Justices of the Peace as aforesaid, shall give security to the said Justices of the Peace, to erect a good and sufficient Bridge, binding the person or persons so contracting, to complete the same within Two years from and after the passing of this Act, and that the same shall stand not less than three years from the time that it may be completed and approved of by the Certificate of any two Justices of the Peace for the said District.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That a sum of money shall be appropriated and paid out of the provincial funds towards building the said Bridge, not exceeding the sum of Two hundred and fifty pounds, to be paid to the order of the Justices of the Peace in Quarter Sessions assembled, to the person or persons contracting to build the same: Provided always, that unless sufficient security shall be given by the person or persons contracting to build the said Bridge as is herein before required, it shall not be lawful to issue any warrant or warrants for the payment of the sum allowed to be applied by virtue of this Act.

IV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawfull for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor or person administering the government of this Province, to issue a warrant or warrants to the Receiver General to pay the said sum of Two hundred and fifty pounds out of any monies in his hands applicable to the uses of this Province.

An ACT to repeal and amend certain parts of an Act passed in the thirty sixth year of his Majesty's Reign, intituled, an Act for the better regulation of certain coins current in this Province, to equalize them to the standard weight and value of the like Coins in the Province of Lower Canada.

[Passed 9th of March, 1809.]

WHEREAS an Act passed in the Parliament of this Province in the thirty sixth year of his Majesty's Reign, intituled, "an Act for the better regulation of certain Coins current in this Province" which it is found expedient to alter and amend in order to equalize them to the current value of the like coins in the Province of Lower Canada. Be it therefore enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the legislative council and assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain intituled, "an Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "an Act for making more effectual provision for the government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That so much of the first clause of the above recited Act, by which it is enacted that the value of the Milled Doubloon or four Pistole piece of Spain, weighing seventeen pennyweights Troy, shall pass current and be deemed a legal tender in payment of all debts and demands whatsoever in this Province for three pounds and fourteen shillings, and the French Louis D'or piece coined before the year one thousand seven hundred and ninety three, weighing five pennyweights and four grains, at one pound two shillings and expence, and the French Pistole piece, coined before the same year, weighing four pennyweights and four grains, at eighteen shillings. Also the second and eighth clauses of the said recited Act, be and the same are hereby repealed.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That from and after the passing of this Act, the gold coins hereinafter mentioned, shall pass current and be deemed a legal tender in payment of all debts and demands whatsoever in this Province, at the weights and rates following, that is to say, the milled Doubloon or four Pistole piece of Spain, weighing seventeen pennyweights Troy, at three pounds fourteen shillings and six pence, the French Louis D'or coined before the year one thousand seven hundred and ninety three, weighing five pennyweights and four grains at one pound two shillings and eight pence, and the French Pistole piece coined before the same year, weighing four pennyweights and four grains, at eighteen shillings and three pence, and all the higher and lower denominations of the said gold coins shall also pass current and be deemed a legal t force the bridge at Garrion, from thence to proceed to Saldana. At 6 o'clock that evening, I received information that considerable reinforcements had arrived at Garrion from Palencia and a letter from the Marquis de la Romana informed me that the French were advancing from Madrid either to Valladolid or Salamanca. It was evident it was too late to prosecute the attempt upon Soult, that I must be satisfied with the division, I had occasioned, and that I had no time to lose to secure my retreat.

The next morning Lieut. Gen. Hope, with his own division and that of Lieut. General Fraser marched to Majorgo. Lieut Sir D. Baird with his division to pass the river at Valmira, and followed Lieut. Gen. Hope on the 25th with the reserve, and the light brigades, by Malgora, Villeras, to Benevento. The cavalry under Lord Paget followed the reserve on the 26th; both the latter corps entered this place yesterday. We continue our march on Astorgo. Generals Hope and Fraser are already gone on; Sir David Baird proceeds to-morrow from Valencia; and I shall leave this with the reserve at the same time; Lord Paget will remain with the cavalry, to give us notice of the approach of the enemy; hitherto their infantry have not come up, but they are near, and the cavalry is round us in great numbers, they are checked by our cavalry, which have obtained, by their spirit and enterprize, an ascendency over that of the French, which nothing but great superiority of numbers on their part will get the better of.

The diversion made by our march on Sabagun, though at great risk to ourselves, has been complete; it remains to be seen what advantage the Spaniards in the South will be able to take of it, but the march of the French on Badajoz, was stopped when his advanced guard had reached Talaveira de la Reine, and every thing disposable is now turned into this direction.

The only part of the army which has been hitherto engaged with the enemy, has been the cavalry, and it is impossible for me to say too much in their praise. I mentioned to your lordship in my letter of the 26th the success which Brigadier General Stewart had met with in defeating a detatchment of cavalry at Rueda. Since that, few days have passed without his taking or killing different parties of the French, generally superior in force to those which attacked them. On the march to Sahagun Lord Paget had information of 6 or 700 cavalry being in that town. He marched on the night of the 20th from some villages where he was posted in front of the enemy at Majorga with the tenth and fifteenth hussars. The tenth marched at night to the town, whilst Lord Paget with the fifteenth endeavored to turn it. Unfortunately he fell in with a patrole one of whom escaped and gave the alarm. By this means the French had time to form on the outside of the town before Lord Paget got round. He immediately charged them, beat them, and took from 140 to 150 prisoners, among them were two Lieutenant Colonels, and eleven officers, with the loss on our side of 6 or 8 men, and perhaps 20 wounded.

There have been taken by the cavalry from 4 to 500 French, besides a considerable number killed; this since we began our march from Salamanca. On his march from Sahagun on the 20th, Lord Paget, with two squadrons of the 10th, attacked a detachment of cavalry at Majorga, killed 20 and took about 100 prisoners. Our troops and cavalry is very superior in quality to any the French have, and the right spirit has been infused into them by the example and instructions of their two leaders, Lord Paget and Brigadier Gen. Stewart.

this morning, followed by Sir David Baird. The two flank brigades go by the road of Penefiada. I shall follow with the reserve and cavalry, to Villa Franca, either this night or to morrow morning, according as I hear the approach of the French. The morning I marched from Benevento, 7 squadrons of Bonaparte's guards, passed the river at a ford above the bridge. They were attacked by Brig. Gen. Stewart at the head of the piquets of the 18th and 3d German Light Dragoons, and driven across the ford. Their colonel a general of division, Lefebvre, was taken, together with about 70 officers and men.

The affair was well contested. The numbers with which Brig. Gen. Stewart attacked, were inferior to the French, which was the corps of the greatest character in their army; but the superiority of the British was, I am told, very conspicuous. I enclose for your Lordship's satisfaction, Lord Paget's report of it.

Benevento, Dec. 29.

SIR,

I have the honor to inform you, that about 9 o'clock this morning I received a report that the enemy's cavalry was in the act of crossing the river at the ford near the bridge. I immediately sent down the piquets [illegible] and Lieut. Colonel Otway, of the 18th. Having left orders that the cavalry should repair to their alarm posts, I went forward to reconnoitre, and found four squadron of Imperial guards formed and skirmishing with the piquets and other cavalry in the act of passing. I sent for the 10th Hussars, who having arrived, Brig. Gen. Stewart immediately placed himself at the head of the piquets and with utmost gallantry attached. The 10th Hussars supported in the most perfect manner.

The result of the affair, as far as I have been able to collect, about thirty killed, 25 wounded, seventy prisoners, and about the same number of horses.

It is impossible for me to avoid speaking in the highest terms of all those engaged.—Lt. Col. Otway, and Major Bagwell headed the respective night pickets. The latter is slightly wounded. The utmost zeal was conspicuous in the whole of my Staff; and I had many volunteers from head quarters, and other officers of your army. Amongst the prisoners is the general of division Lefebvre (who commanded the cavalry of the Imperial Guards,) and two captains. Our loss is I fear, near fifty men killed and wounded. I will send a return the moment I collect the reports. I have the honor to be, &c.

(Signed) PAGET, Lieut. Gen.

To Lieut. Gen. Sir John Moore, K. B.

I have forwarded the prisoners to Benizo. On the other side of the river the enemy formed again, and at this instant three guns of captain Donovan's troops arrived, which did considerable execution.

Translated from Spanish papers.

Seville, Dec. 31.—Extract from the official intelligence received this day.

The English have beaten a division of French of 6000 men at Saldano, and on the 23d inst. entered Sahogun with 163 prisoners, 9 pieces of cannon and 100 horses, with a French general. The Marquis of Romana is at Gallitilen, after having beaten another division of 6000 men. The English beat another division of 15,000 men at Carrion.—The greatest harmony prevails in the combined army; the English having witnessed the energy of our generals, begin to manifest the intention to support our cause.

Carolina, Dec. 28.—Extract from the official dispatches of Despena-Perros:

We have seized here a mail from Madrid, which has been sent to the Central Junta. In it was found the new breviary for the Spanish Clergy.—Doubtless it will not enjoin festivities to our lady of Pilar, not announce the apparition of St. Jago, as in former times when the Spaniards were fighting for their religion and liberty. Napoleon and his brother are either in Madrid or its vicinity.

A courier who had been with dispatches to the duke of Infantado, has just arrived here, and informs us, that the Marquis of Romana was in Somosierra, in consequence of which Napoleon had left Madrid for that point, with 30,000 men—That the 3000 French who were at Aranjuez, the 4,000 at La Manca, and the 12,000 at Toledo, had marched for Madrid; and that the advanced party of the duke of Infantado, compoled of 8000 men, was at Aranjuez. The whole of that army amounts to 18,000 foot and 2000 horse.—These advices conclude with the information of Cuesta having collected an army in Estremadura of 40,000 men.

January—By the mail of this morning we have a confirmation of the defeat of the French at Santo Christi del Caloco, about 10 leagues from Madrid, beyond the passes of the Guadarama, between Espinum and Villa Castin, on the road to Valladolid, with the loss of 20 waggons loaded with silver—No mention is made of the number killed or taken prisoners, but we are assured that the general Bassiere, a favorite of Napoleon, had retired from action severely wounded, and there were in Madrid but 2 or 3,000 French troops as a garrison.

Cordova, Dec. 31.—A colonel belonging to an American company of guards, has passed as a courier through this place—He informs us, that the abandoned posts of the Duke of Infantado engaged the enemy at Alenza de Hucte, and although double in number to our troops, they were beaten with the loss of 20 dragoons, and a booty of 300, 000 rials, which have been distributed among the victors.

January 3.—A lieutenant colonel of volunteers has passed through this city with dispatches—He informs us, that the advanced parties of the army of Despena Perros had brought in 81 prisoners taken at Tembleque, and that he had seen a letter from Miranares to General Palacois, delivered on the 2d inst. advising that the Marquis of Romana, with 50,000 English and 30,000 Spaniards, had beaten the French, killing 14. 000 men, and taking 16,000 prisoners.

Jan. 6.—Frequent couriers have passed within these few days. We have the pleasure to find that the account of the defeat of the French has not been contradicted by any of them—It may not have been as complete as represented by some advices, but it must have been important inasmuch as the enemy is concentrating his force at Madrid, abandoning on one side the points of Ocana, Ypresa and Aranjuez, and the advantageous positions of Somosierra and Guadarama on the other. Our army of Carolina must have advanced towards Madrid, to act in concert with the others in the total destruction of our cruel and perfidious enemies.

For the benefit of the Public, or such as are afflicted with Rheumatic complaints.

HAVING been severely afflicted with the Rheumatism for fifteen years past, and for the space of ten months in the year 1808 confined alternately to my bed and crutches, trying every thing I could hear of in the course of my illness for relief, with little or no effect, I was induced, through recommendation, to use the mineral waters in Scarborough.—I was conveyed thither with great difficulty & pain, but after drinking freely of these waters and bathing therewith, could in the course of four days, walk without the assistance of crutches, and have gradually recovered my wonted activity, having now no pain or symptom of Rheumatic complaint.

Some time after quitting the use of the waters, by getting wet I had a relapse; but on a further application to them received immediate relief.—

Persons using these waters, are advised to use them freely both internally and externally.

Since my experiments, a number of my neighbours have tried the above waters, with very beneficial effects.—Aged persons, I think may use them with safety, being myself sixty years of age, and in a weakly state when I made the experiment.

BARBADOES, Feb. 7.

We have infinite pleasure in this day following up the account given in our last of the safe and successful landing of our forces at Martinique, by a more particular detail of their proceedings and progress in the reduction of that important Island. The accounts that we have been put in possession of, although not idly boasting any official authority, are sufficiently authentic to satisfy us as to their just claim to our confidence; and with this impression on our minds, we offer our warm and hearty congratulations to both service on the enterprise, on the rapid progress of success that has attended their zeal, perseverance, and courage, and look forward to a speedy termination of their toil and danger, in a glorious conquest of the whole Island!

The expedition arrived off Martinique on Sunday 29th January, but the land when first made was supposed to be St. Lucia, and the fleet was near the Carval Rock off the N. point of the Island, before the mistake was discovered, a very strong current having swept them far to windward, which compelled them to haul off for that night. On the morning of the 30th, the signal being given to make sail, they separated in two divisions, the Acasta hoisting a broad pendant, and leading that with the division of the army under the Commander in chief and Sir G. Prevost, intended to effect a landing in Bay Robert; while the Admiral proceeded with that under Major General Maitland, round Maran, and entered the Bay of St. Luce.

At noon on the 30th, the first division of the fleet entered Robert (a most spacious harbour on the N. E. coast of the Island, but difficult of access,) and commodore Beaver (of the Acasta,) with three armed launches, having approached and reconnoitered the shore, and all the preparations for landing the troops being instantly in readiness, at three o'clock in the afternoon Sir G. Prevost and Brigadier General Hoghton, with the first brigade of this part of the Army, consisting of the 7th regt. under Lieut. Colonel Ellis, and five companies of the 1st W. I. Regt. under Lieut. Colonel Tolley, landed in a most orderly and regular manner, without any opposition, the inhabitants of the village and neighborhood even meeting them on the beach with welcomes o the Country! At about half past five, Lieut. Gen. Beckwith (Commander in chief,) with Brig. Gen. Colville, and the second brigade, consisting of the 8th regt. under Major Maxwell, the 13th under Lieut. Col. Keane, and four companies of the 1st W. I. regt. under Major Clifton, also landed; at which time Sir Geo. Prevost with the first brigade had marched forward, and was far advanced in the country; and the reserve commanded by Lt. Col. Blackwell, consisting of the 3d batt. 60th regt. under Major Mackey, and the flank companies of the 25th regt. and 4th batt. 60th, with the 4th W. India, having been also landed, the Commander in Chief proceeded with his brigade as far as Papin, about seven miles from Robert, Sir George Prevoft being ſtill farther advanced. On the following morning (the 31ſt. Captain Dick of his Majeſty's ſhip Penelope, with one Lieut. three Midſhipmen and 45 ſailors, and 3 Marine officers and 55 marines, left Robert for the attack of Trinity, which ſurrendered upon their approach; and thus far the whole of this part of the expedition proceeded with uninterrupted ſucceſs.

The landing of the ſecond diviſion of the Army commanded by Major General Maitland, conducted immediately by Sir Alexander Cochrane, was alſo effected on the 30th, the Admiral leading the fleet into the Bay of St. Luce; which being defended by two batteries that threatened to annoy the troops, he inſtantly diſpatched 60 marines to drive the Enemy from them, and they accompliſhed their purpoſe in the moſt effectual manner, having after ſpiking the guns and throwing them down the Hill, broken up the carriages and platform, and returned with the loſs of only one man, ſuppoſed to be drowned. The landing of the troops immediately proceeded, Major General Maitland with Lieut. Col. Barnes and his firſt brigade, conſiſting of the 63d Regt. under Lieut. Colonel Fairclough, and York Rangers under Major Henderſon, being debarked at a little after eight in the morning; and before ten, followed by the ſecond brigade, commanded by Lt. Colonel Riall conſiſting of the flank companies of the 15th and 46th regiments under Major Payne, the 15th regiment under Major Davidſon, York L. I. Volunteers under Lieutenant Colonel Streicher, and 8th W. I. regiment under Lieut. Col. Prevoſt—the reſerve commanded by Lt. Colonel M'Nair, conſiſting of the 90th regiment under Major Wright, and 3d W. India under Major Allan ſoon after following. While theſe brigades were landing, the enemy ſet fire to the Carnation ſloop of War (lately captured from us) lying in Marna Bay and totally deſtroyed her;—the troops mean time commenced their march, and with great gallantry reached the heights leading to Point Borgneſe and Cape Solomon, and the Fort on the latter was taken poſſeſſion of by Major Henderſon, and the guns of it being rendered uſeleſs, he proceeded with his Corps, and took up a poſition directly in the rear of Pigeon Iſland; in his progreſs to which (ſome accounts ſtate) he made 200 of the Militia priſoners. A 13 inch mortar being got up the height, and brought to bear on the enemy, it was opened with much apparent effect on the morning of the 31ſt, Major Henderſon with a party of ſharp ſhooters being at the ſame time advantageouſly poſted within 300 yards of the enemy's works, and conſiderably annoying with muſketry and Shrapnel ſhells.—The fire of the enemy was vigorouſly returned on this poſt, and they often threw four or five ſhells to each one of ours, but not with much effect, although unfortunately two ſeamen of the Pompee employed in the Battery were killed by the burſting of one of them; and by that of another, Sir A. Cochrane, on a visit to them, had nearly ſhared the ſame fate.

While theſe operations were carrying on in this quarter, the Enemy, who had upon our firſt approach burnt the Carnation, now alſo deſtroyed the Favorite ſloop of war lying at St. Pierre, which captain Naiper, of the Recruit, had orders to cut out; and the Admiral with the principal part of his Squadron having after leaving ſeveral veſſels in advantageous ſituations for keeping up a communication with the army and ſupplying them with ſtores and proviſions, taking up anchorage at Petit Anced'Arlat and being informed that the Enemy's frigate Amphitrite was ordered from the Carenage round to Pigeon Iſland, with a view of diſlodging our party from the mortar battery, he ſent in two frigates and brig to intercept her, and during the night they worked up into the Bay, and brought up beyond Pigeon Iſland; which the enemy diſcovering, they ſet fire to their frigate, and ſhe was ſpeedily conſumed—giving, by thus prematurely deſtroying their veſſels, the ſtrongeſt demonſtration of the apprehenſion and diſmay into which they have been thrown.

The one mortar battery that had opened on Pigeon Iſland on the 31ſt, and with the co-operation of Major Henderſon's brigade had been conſtantly annoying the Enemy, had alſo the happy effect alſo of diverting their attention of the proceedings of our Engineers, who in the mean time had been indefatigably employed in conſtructing a battery of five mortars and three howitzers on a more commanding eminence; in effecting which our ſeamen diſplayed a perſeverance and underwent a fatigue and labor almoſt peculiar to themſelves, this height being hitherto conſidered inacceſſable.—Sir C. Shipley was ſuperintending and directing this battery in perſon, the works of which were entirely covered by a thick wood fronting the harbor, and completely ſcreened it from the view of the enemy at Pigeon Iſland; it was in great progreſs on the 3d inſtant, and ſo far completed, that a party of ſeamen had gone on to the heights for the purpoſe of felling the wood during the night, and the whole line of battery was intended to be opened on the following morning. So advantageous was this poſition for diſlodging the Enemy, that it was confidently expected they would, within twenty four hours after the battery was opened, be compelled to ſurrender Pigeon Iſland, a poſt ſeemed deſigned by nature for defending the grand harbour of the Iſland, which would conſequently be then completely open to our fleet. During the operations carrying on here, and the progreſs for a more effectual attack on the Enemy's ſtrong poſition of Pigeon Iſland, Major Gen. Maitland with the main body of his diviſion of the Army had advanced as far as Lamentin; while Gen. Beckwith and Sir G. Prevoſt had proceeded towards Bruno, and Sourrier, both brigades of this diviſion having frequent ſkirmiſhes with the enemy in their march. On the ſecond inſt. they came to a more general battle with the enemy in the neighbourhood of Sourrier, an important height that in ſome meaſure commands the redoubts or advanced works of Fort Bourbon—The particulars of this affair had not been further aſcertained, when the laſt advices left the neighbourhood of Fort Royal Bay, than that our troops had made themſelves maſters of this poſition having defeated the Enemy with the loſs of nearly 300 men, and of a few on our part, among whom are particularly regretted, Lt. Col. Taylor Dept. Adjt. Gen.) killed; and Lt. Col. Pakenham and Major Maxwell, wounded.

The lateſt accounts are of the 3d inſt. and are up to the evening of that day (Friday laſt) at which period, and at the very moment of the departure of the veſſel arrived from the ſcene of action, the Poſtſcript to one letter adds, that "Pigeon Iſland had ſurrendered."

LONDON, March 28.

A flag of Truce arrived yeſterday afternoon at Dover, with a Ruſſian meſſenger on board—He came from Boulonge in a French ſchooner, and his name is De Saſs—He left Ruſſia the latter end of February.—At ſeven o'clock laſt night he ſet off for London in a poſt chaiſe and four, and arrived in town this morning.—The flag of truce returned to Boulogne as ſoon as ſhe had landed him.—It is ſuppoſed by ſome, that he is the bearer of another joint overture from France and Ruſſia: but had that been the caſe, he would have been diſpatched from Paris, and not from St. Peterſburgh.—Others aſſert that he is come with diſpatches for the Ruſſian Admiral.

The Succeſs frigate arrived yeſterday at Portſmouth with diſpatches of importance from Lord Collingwood; the nature of them has not tranſpired. She brought over two meſſengers, ſaid to have come from Vienna by the way of Trieſte, with diſpatches from the Auſtrian Cabinet. The Succeſs ſailed from Malta on the 2d and touched at no port in her paſſage. She was put under quarantine as ſoon as ſhe arrived.

SPAIN and PORTUGAL.

London, March 28.

A freſh expedition is preparing with activity, conſiſting chiefly of cavalry. Two brigades are under orders for embarkation, one of light dragoons, to be commanded by Major Gen. Stewart, and one of heavy Horſe, Major Gen. Payne. The 7th, 10th and 15th regiments, we underſtand, are to compoſe the former, and they are to be ſupplied with horſes from the 13th and two other regiments. The 3d and 4th Dragoon Guards, and part of the Hanoverian Legion go with Gen. Payne. The men diſmounted from the 13th and other regiments, to ſupply horſes to the 7th, 10th and 15th. in place of thoſe loſt in Spain during the late campaign, are to be ſent to India, and will probably proceed thither in the fleet to be diſpatched in April.

The French, as appears by the Paris paper to the 20th, did not make their formal entry into Saragoſſa till the 5th inſt. though its ſurrender is ſaid to have taken place on the 21ſt of laſt month. The account of General Palafox's death is contradicted. Long may he be preſerved to his country, of which he is ſo bright an ornament!

It is announced in the laſt letters from Cadiz, which are of the 10th inſt. that tranquility has been reſtored in that city; & that the ſeveral perſons confined in the Capuchin Convent, on the charge of treaſon, are to be brought to a ſpeedy trial. Upon this ſuppoſed an intereſting Proclamation has been Publiſhed by the Supreme Junta to the people of Cadiz. It aſſerts the innocence of the Marquis de Villel; and in order to prove it more fully, ſtates that the Commiſſioners who are to examine his conduct are not to be choſen out of their own body, but out of perſons indifferent to his perſon, and partial only to the cauſe of their country. His papers are ſaid to have diſcovered no ſymptoms of treaſon, having been ſubjected to the inſpection of Gen. Jones, the perſon in whom more than others the people place the greateſt confidence. At the commencement of the diſturbances, Gen. Mackenzie was invited to land with his troops, in order to aid the popular cauſe; an interference which he very properly declined.

Admiral Purvis is ſaid, at the date of the above letters, to have been employed in aſſiſting to fit out the ſhips of war in Cadiz, & preparations for the defence of the town were daily continued.

General Sherbrooke, we underſtand, proceeded in the firſt inſtance to Cadiz, but af-

Mackenzie's corps alſo reached the Tagus from the ſame place.—Major Gen. Tilſon, with his Brigade, 87th and 88th regiments, and Brigadier Gen. Campbell, with the Brigade of guards, were to diſembark on the 13th.

THE FLEETS.

London, March 25.

Letters are received from the fleet under Sir T. Duckworth, K. B. which ſtate that he took with him from the Liſbon ſtation the Norge 74, Elizabeth 74, Buffleur 98, & Conqueror 74, making his fleet 13 ſail of the line and four frigates. It is underſtood that the gallant Admiral means to divide his fleet into two ſquadrons, one to be detached to the Baltic, and himſelf will proceed with the other diviſion to the Weſt Indies in ſearch of the l'Orient ſquadron.

By a veſſel (the Nelſon) arrived at Plymouth, letters have been received of the 11th inſt. from Oporto. At that period no French troops had made their appearance in Portugal, nor was there any apprehenſion entertained of their immediate arrival. The government of Oporto was adopting the moſt vigorous meaſures to reſiſt the enemy; and ſo far from party feuds prevailing in any of the northern provinces, the reſolution to keep out the French was as great as at any former period. On the 10th inſt. the Venus frigate arrived at Oporto, with a ſupply of arms, ammunition, &c. from Liſbon. The Boadicia, with Mr. Jeffery, the new Conſul-General on board alſo arrived there; but after an interview with the Governor, he continued his voyage to Liſbon. The outward bound fleet, conſiſting of about 40 ſail, had left the port, and moſt of them had paſſed the bar in ſafety. Every exertion was making to load them as expeditiouſly as poſſible.

March 28.

Capt. Maſon (an American) ſtates, that he was boarded by a 74, (the Warſpite) one of Sir J. Duckworth's ſquadron, off Cape St. Vincent, and that on the night of the day before, he was hailed by a line of battle ſhip in French. The people on board appeared to be in great confuſion, and deſired him to heave to, but Capt. Maſon, ſeeing, that the French man of war could not readily take her ſail in, purſued his courſe: and on the following morning he ſaw two ſail of the line, ſteering for the Gut of Gibraltar. This intelligence Capt. Maſon communicated to the Warſpite.

Extract of a letter from an officer in the ſquadron off Rochefort, dated March 18, 1809.—"We are this day mooring our ſhips in a half moon line of battle, within four miles of the enemy's ſhips, and our frigates half way in advance, ſo that it is impoſſible for the Frenchmen to get out without bringing us to action. They have one three decked ſhip, and ten two deckers. We have the ſame, but I am afraid they will not engage us, and that it will be a long blockade. It is ſaid that the Commander in Chief is determined to lay at anchor, blow high or low, ſo that the raſcals cannot eſcape."

THE DUKE OF YORK.

Horſe Guards, March 18.—Field Marſhal His Royal Highneſs the Duke of York, having requeſted permiſſion to reſign his ſituation on the Staff, as Commander in Chief of the Army, and his Majeſty having been graciouſly pleaſed to accept his Royal Highneſs's Reſignation, his Majeſty has commanded it to be announced to the Army, that he has appointed General Sir David Dundas, K. B. to be Commander in Chief of his Army, with the ſame Authority with which his Royal Highneſs the Duke of York held that Command.

By his Majeſty's Command,
HARRY CALVERT, Ad. Gen. to the Forces.

Horſe Guards, March 20.—The Commander in Chief has received the King's Command to make known to the Army, that his Majeſty has thought fit to command that the following regulations ſhall hereafter be ſtrictly obſerved in regard to promotions in the army, and appointments on the Staff, viz.

"No officer ſhall be promoted to the rank of Captain, until he has been three years a Subaltern.

"No officer ſhall be promoted to the rank of Field officer until he has been ſeven years in the ſervice, in which he ſhall have been at leaſt two years a Captain.

"No officer ſhall be promoted to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, until he has been nine years in the ſervice, of which he ſhall have been at leaſt two years a Major.

"No officer ſhall be allowed to fill any Staff appointment, that of Aid-de-Camp excepted, until he has been one year a Captain."

By the Commander in Chief's Command,
HARRY CALVERT, Adj. Gen.

On Saturday morning his Royal Highneſs the Duke of York left town on a viſit to their Majeſties at Windſor, and in the evening returned to his houſe in the Stable Yard, where he entertained with an elegant dinner Sir David Dundas, and a numerous party of military officers.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, March 27.

Mr. ROSE ſtated, from an account which had been preſented to the Houſe of the general return of the exports and imports for the year, ending 5th January, 1809, that notwithſtanding the Embargoes and other meaſures of the American Government, that the exports of Britiſh manufactures, for the laſt year exceeded that of the preceding year by nearly a million and a half, and that it had been very nearly equal to the beſt years which the country had ever known.

A paſſenger in the ſhip United States, arrived at Alexandria, informs, that before he ſailed from St. Bartholomews, a gentleman came on board and informed that a veſſel had juſt arrived from St. Thomas, which brought accounts of the capture of St. Domingo by the Britiſh.—It was expected that Guadaloupe would not ſtand out long, the Britiſh had commenced the bombardment.

N. N. Speciator.

From Spain.—A letter received in Philadelphia, from Havanna, the 27th April, ſays, "This day a veſſel arrived here in a ſhort paſſage from Teneriffe, which brings the account that all Catalonia was once more in poſſeſſion of the Spaniſh patriots."

From a late London Paper.

Some few days ſince Carliſle gaol was again broken open, when the notorious Naylor, along with three priſoners, viz. White, Row and Barnes, made their eſcape. The manner in which this undertaking was atchieved, diſplayed much ingenuity and courage, and gives ſome conſiſtency to the bravado of Naylor himſelf, that no gaol in England but Lancaſter could hold him. Since his laſt return to the place of his confinement, he was loaded with above 60 pounds weight of iron, only eight pounds ſhort of that which the famous Baron Trenck had to ſuſtain while confined in his dungeon at Magdeburg. He was chained to the wall, frequently handcuffed, and generally thin bolted and neck bolted. Under all theſe diſheartening circumſtances, he effected his eſcape merely by means of two iron bars, which had been wrenched from the windows of the cell. With theſe implements, he with the help of his fellow priſoners, forced the flags from beneath the door (each ſtone being ſunk a great depth) and proceeding forward, made a hole ſufficient to admit one perſon at a time. Having accompliſhed this, they ſcaled the iron paliſade, and the outermoſt wall of the priſon, and got clear off. The ingenuity of Naylor, as a priſon breaker, has long been known; ſome years ago, when confined in Richmond priſon, in Yorkſhire, he removed a ſtone from under the door of his cell, which was above a ton weight, by taking away the earth from below it, when it ſunk down, leaving the iron work that ſecured it, and gave him room to free himſelf.

LIGHTENING.—On the 13th September, the Sultan, of 74 guns, Capt. Griffith, lying at Port Mahon, Minorca, was ſtruck with lightening, in a way that was truly awful and terrific. The officers were at dinner, when in a moment the ſhip received a dreadful ſhock, as tho' a ball of fire had ſtruck her, and had gone quite through, making an exploſion in its paſſage as loud as the exploſion of a quantity of gun powder. The officers, as it were, involuntarily ruſhed out of their cabins, and diſcovered that it had ſtruck the jib-boom, killed ſeven men, badly wounded three others, and, conducted by ſome of the iron work, ran along the jib boom, tore it to pieces, ſtruck the cap of the bowſprit, ſhivered it, and then fell into the water. The 3 poor fellows who were wounded were dreadfully mangled. The unfortunate ſufferers were ſome of the beſt ſeamen in the ſhip. [Lond. paper.

SWINDLING.—On ſaturday ſe'nnight a young lady of reſpectability, whoſe reſidence is in Vere ſtreet, Oxford road, was familiarly accoſted at the corner of the ſtreet by a gentleman dreſſed a la militaire; ſaying, "Madam, I beg your pardon, but I believe you are Miſs M.?" On receiving an anſwer in the affirmative, he informed the lady that he had juſt come from Dublin, and was charged by her brother, who is a military gentleman, at preſent quartered in that city, with the delivery of certain letters and commiſſions to her mother, adding, that he himſelf was a captain in the ſame regiment. The lady expreſſed her gladneſs at hearing the joyful news, and requeſted that he would do her mother & her the honor of dining with them on Monday, when he would have an opportunity of delivering all his letters, &c.

to her mother, who was then out of town on a visit. After the usual ceremony of good bye, this son of Mars immediately proceeded to the lady's residence, and having told the servant maid a plausible tale, he was readily admitted. Having remained alone in the house upwards of an hour, in expectation of the young lady's return, as he pretended, he called the servant, and informed him that he was under the necessity of making a call in another part of the town, but would certainly return to drink tea by six o'clock. He thus escaped without suspicion; but the young lady, on her return from her walk, was not a little surprised and vexed to find that her military beau, her new acquired acquaintance, had purloined from her mother's coffers, a gold watch, and various other articles of plate. — Every search to discover the swindler has hitherto proved unsuccessful.—ibid.

Proclamation.

FRANCIS GORE, Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS by an Act paſſed in the forty fourth year of the reign of His preſent Majeſty, intitled, "An Act for granting to His Majeſty, a certain ſum of Money, for the further encouragement of the Growth and Cultivation of Hemp within this Province, and the exportation thereof;" It is (among other things enacted,) that at any time or times after the paſſing of the ſaid Act, it ſhould and might be lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon adminiſtering the Government, by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council of this Province, to iſſue one or more Proclamations, and therein to name ſuch and ſo many perſons within the Province as to him ſhould ſeem meet, as Commiſſioners for the purchaſing of merchantable Hemp, the growth of this Province. And whereas by an Act paſſed in the forty eighth year of the reign of His preſent Majeſty, intitled, "An Act for the further encouragement of the Growth and Cultivation of Hemp within this Province, and for the exportation thereof;" It is enacted, that the ſum of Sixty-two Pounds and Ten Shillings per Ton, ſhould be the rate or price for good and Merchantable Hemp, which might be thereafter purchaſed under and by virtue of the hereinbefore recited Acts.

NOW KNOW ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That I, FRANCIS GORE, Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of the ſaid Province of Upper Canada, do, by virtue of the ſaid hereinbefore firſt recited Act, and by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council of this Province, nominate, conſtitute and appoint, the Honorable James Baby, the Honorable Richard Cartwright, the Honorable Robert Hamilton, Members of the Legiſlative Council of this Province, Thomas Talbot, of Port Talbot, Eſq. and William Allan, of York, Eſquire, in the ſaid Province reſpectively, to be Commiſſioners for the purchaſing of Merchantable Hemp, the Growth of this Province, which ſaid Commiſſioners or any one or more of them are, and is hereby reſpectively authoriſed & empowered, to purchaſe ſuch Hemp, at & under the price or rate in manner and conformity to the Regulations and Proviſos contained in and according to the Statutes, in ſuch caſe made and provided; And to do, perform and execute all ſuch other matters & things, as they are authoriſed and required to do, in and by the ſaid recited Acts.

Given under my Hand and Seal at Arms at York, in the Province of Upper Canada, this thirteenth day of February, in the year of our Lord one thouſand eight hundred and nine, and in the forty-ninth year of His Majeſty's Reign.

FRANCIS GORE,
Lieut. Governor.

Lateſt Foreign News.

Seleſtions from London papers to the 25th of March, received by the ſhip Ann, from Ramſgate.

LONDON, March 20.

On Saturday night diſpatches were received at the Foreign Office from France—they were brought over by a flag of truce, which arrived at Dover on Saturday morning at 3 o'clock, and immediately ſtood out to ſea again. The ſubject of this communication has not tranſpired—Peace is naturally the firſt idea which will ſuggeſt itſelf to the public—but of that moſt deſirable event we apprehend not the ſlighteſt expectation at this criſis can be entertained. The general opinion at Dover is, that ſome negociation reſpecting an exchange of priſoners is on foot, between the governments of France and England.

Admiral Lord Gambier arrived off Rochefort on the 7th inſt, with the Caledonia, Tonnant, Illuſtrious, Bellona, & ſeveral frigates and ſloops. On the day following the Reſolution joined company. The line of battle ſhip which was driven on ſhore, is lying on the ſhoal with all her maſts gone; and there is not the leaſt probability of getting her off. One of the frigates that went on ſhore is got off, and is refitting.—The French frigates L'Italienne, La Calypſo, and Le Furieuſe, are totally loſt.

Commencement of hoſtilities between Auſtria and France.

Courier Office: 4 o'clock.

Private letters from Holland of the 17th, have been received which ſtate that hoſtilities have actually commenced between France and Auſtria near Trieſte. The French are ſuppoſed to have made an attempt to get poſſeſſion of Trieſte.—The Auſtrians puſhed on and came up with them near the city, an engagement took place in which the French were defeated.

The amount of the force on each ſide is not known.

The Auſtrians are alſo ſaid to have marched a body of troops into Dreſden.

Liverpool Globe Office, March 23, 2 o'clock, P. M.—The Telegraph has juſt announced, that a courier is on the road with important diſpatches from Spain, who may arrive in town in the courſe of the day.

"Government have received diſpatches by the Scout and Peacock, communicating the favorable appearance in Spain.

"The French have been driven out of Vigo by the inhabitants en maſſe, with bayonets, daggers, bludgeons, &c. Great numbers were maſſacred.

"The reports of Auſtria oppoſing France ſeem to gather ſtrength—though no act of hoſtility has taken place. Ruſſia ſtill keeps aloof, undetermined whether to join Auſtria or France in the new war.

"Further reinforcements are to be ſent to the South of Spain.

"Bonaparte was in Paris at the laſt dates.

"Sir David Dundas holds the office of Commander in Chief, at preſent; though it is highly probable, that the office will in a ſhort time be put in the hands of Commiſſioners, ſomewhat ſimilar to the Admiralty."

"Regular convoys are eſtabliſhed by the Admiralty to and from North America, to ſail from England 20th March, April. 10, May 10, June 10, July 10, Auguſt 5: and from Halifax and Quebec, 25th of each month to October. Alſo from Halifax to the Weſt Indies, windward, leeward, monthly, and back again."

March 25.

Letters dated the 21ſt inſt have been received from Holland. They do not corroborate the previous accounts received through the ſame channel, of hoſtilities having actually commenced between Auſtria and France. The extreme caution they obſerve in adverting to the occurrences as a proof of the rigorous precautions which have been adopted to prevent intelligence of the real ſtate of the country being tranſmitted to this. By a compariſon of their contents, however, the following particulars may be collected and relied on. The Auſtrian armies are univerſally in motion; and are far more numerous, formidable and better organized, than they have been repreſented in the papers under the control of the tyrant. They have arrived before now, amply and better ſupplied than in any former campaign, with every article eſſential to a vigorous proſecution of hoſtilities, at their reſpective places of deſtination, and probably ſuſtained already the firſt ſhock of the enemy.—The nomination of the Arch Duke Charles to the Chief and uncontrouled command of the reſpective armies, has produced the higheſt confidence in the officer and ſoldier, and diffuſed among every claſs of Auſtrian ſubjects the moſt ſanguine hopes of ſucceſs. He places himſelf at the head of that force, whatever it may be, which ſhall be oppoſed to that command by Bonaparte in perſon.—The higheſt unanimity prevails in every province in Auſtria, and a cheerful ſubmiſſion to meaſures propoſed by government in this important juncture, diſtinguiſhes the conduct of the peaſant as well as that of the nobleman and merchant.—The militia evince as much zeal and alacrity as regular corps, and the Hungarians ſo often the terror, and in a criſis almoſt equally dangerous, the laſt prop of the empire, diſplay as much order or the preſent occaſion as hey did in that memorable one, when they ſtepped forward to ſupport the rights of Maria Thereſa againſt the united efforts of Pruſſia, France Spain and Bavaria.

We underſtand that the 3d, 4th, and 10th regiments of cavalry are immediately to be embarked for Liſbon, & theſe are to be followed by the heavy horſe of the German Legion.

London, March 13.

An order of Council has been Gazetted, declaring the Iſles of France and Bourbon, in a ſtate of the moſt rigorous blockade.

Swediſh papers to the 7th inſtant, announce the fixed determination of his Swediſh Majeſty to proſecute the war with Ruſſia.

Rumour has confidently ſtated, that the ſquadron eſcaped from L'Orient has the Spaniſh Ex Royal Family on board; and is bound to South America with them. ☞ As it is probable this ſquadron has arrived in the Weſt Indies, this rumor was unfounded.

The celebrated Expoſe by Cevallos, of the conduct of Bonaparte towards the Royal Family of Spain, has been publiſhed, in a cheap form in Vienna; and is circulating through all the North of Europe. Its peruſal is ſaid to have had an excellent effect in Peterſburgh. The Paris Moniteur is extremely angry with the Auſtrian Emperor for permitting ſuch "cruelties" to be publiſhed in his dominions.

March 14. Ruſſia is ſaid to be changing her politics once more. A Ruſſian meſſenger has arrived here from St. Peterſburgh, miniſters are ſtated to have received intelligence from St. Peterſburgh, decidedly auſpicious to our intereſt.—M. De Tiltikoff has been reappointed Miniſter of Foreign Affairs.

March 18.—Lord Gambier with five ſail of the line, has joined the ſquadron which was watching the Breſt fleet in rochefort waters. We have now twelve ſail of the line, and a great number of frigates on that duty. This diverſion, as the French call it, has not afforded them much fun, for it has coſt them a ſhip of the line, and three fine frigates.—The Warſaw of 80 guns, L'Italienne, La Calipſo, and La Furieuſe frigates.

FRANCE AND AUSTRIA.

London, March, 25.

The whole amount of force of which France has the abſolute command may be taken at 400,000 men—Of this number about 100,000 men we ſuppoſe, are in Spain, perhaps more, for there were three whole diviſions employed againſt Saragoſſa alone, about 60,000 men. The amount of the troops in Italy has been eſtimated at 80,000 men—Perhaps there are in the Sileſian fortreſſes and in Dantzic about 20,000 men. What the amount of the French force in Germany under Barnadotte may be, and which we ſuppoſe has by this time begun its march Southward, we know not. Oudinot's corps was the firſt that approached the Bavarian frontiers—it is ſtated to be about 50,000, the laſt Paris Papers having ſtated that 40,000 men had lately marched from Paris to join Oudinot. This diviſion occupied a line along the Lech from the Danube to Auſburg, and was deſtined to puſh on immediately to the Iser to prevent Munich from being ſurpriſed by the Auſtrians. Mean while the Bavarian force of 12,000 men under Gen. Wrede, were to occupy the valuable paſſes of that Country. The amount of the contingents of the Rhenish Confederacy may be eſtimated at 50,000 men, of which number Saxony and Bavaria furniſh three-fifths.

Excluſive of this force we ſuppoſe France has at this moment in Germany 100,000 men—who are all, or nearly all, in Bavaria.—What Bonaparte's plan of attack may be, and xcluſive of this force we ſuppoſe France at this moment in Germany 100,000 men ho are all, or nearly all, in Bavaria.—

at Bonaparte's plan of attack may be, and where the firſt and chief preſſure of the war will be, we are unable to do more than conjecture. At preſent it muſt be confeſſed the march of the troops ſeem for the moſt part directed towards Germany. But we are very ſcantily informed with reſpect to the military preparations in Italy, and we ſurpriſed at the recent intelligence of a French corps of 20,000 men being ſo near Trieſte as to attempt to take that town by ſurpriſe.

Of the Auſtrian force we have received more details than of the French, but we are almoſt as little able to ſtate the amount of it with accuracy. While the French accounts would reduce it below 150,000, the Auſtrians ſwell it to 400,000. Neither of theſe is perhaps correct. We eſtimate the amount of it at 250,000; and this force as far as we are informed, is extremely well appointed. The Hungarian levies we do not include in this ſtatement. This force is diſtributed in the following manner.

By the laſt accounts they had not advanced further than the right Bank of the Inn—But the Archduke Charles was at Prague, and a large force was aſſembled at Egra evidently to overawe Saxony, and probably to ſeize Dreſden. The operations againſt Dreſden muſt be combined with the operations on the Inn: and the advantage of the poſition at Dreſden or at Egra, would be to iſolate Saxony from the Confederacy of the Rhine, and prevent her from ſending off her troops to join the French—to alarm the Saxon Princes, and deter them from furniſhing their contingent"—to cut off the French in Sileſia and Dantzic from the main French army—to give the hand to Pruſſia, and enable her to put her force in motion, if ſhe be ſo diſpoſed. —Whilſt the Archduke is at Prague, and a ſecond Auſtrian diviſion is on the Inn, the Archduke John has moved down to Salzburg, with a view to the firſt of making a rapid movement againſt the Tyrol, whoſe inhabitants are ſo well diſpoſed to the Houſe of Auſtria. Could the Tyrol be wreſted from Bavaria, it would be of ſignal advantage. The main part of the Auſtrian army covers Vienna. In the mean time the Hungarians are arming their levies with great ſpirit and activity and they will be ſtationed on the frontiers of Styria.

March 27.

Dutch papers have been received to the 22d inſt. and though they do not announce the commencement of hoſtilities, they afford us additional proofs that war is inevitable. The firſt column of Oudinot's army, 30,000 ſtrong, is now at Auſburgh. The ſecond column filed off through Ulm on the 18th, and proceeded in the ſame direction. The number of French in Germany including the Rheniſh contingents, is eſtimated at 180,000 men. The Auſtrian troops are encamped at Egra, in Bohemia, Linz, in Upper Auſtria, and an the ſide of Italy. Conſiderable apprehenſions are entertained in Saxony on account of the contiguity of the Auſtrian army, and the treaſures and Archives have been ſent off in great haſte from Dreſden. From Ruſſia we have not yet ſufficient information to aſſert that ſhe will take part with Auſtria; but we have a ſtrong belief that the will. Count Wimoden an Auſtrian Officer, is repoſted to be gone to Turkey, to arrange with the Ruſſian General the march of the Ruſſian army from Turkey into Gallicia.

PARIS, March 16.

The Emperor arrived at Rambouillet, on the 14th, at eight in the evening. Prince Alexander Kourakin, and a great number of courtiers, have repaired thither.

The following day their Majeſties rode out with Prince Kourakin in a carriage. The Emperor returned on the 15th.

From private letters we learn that the greateſt activity is employed in the arſenal at Ferrol.

On the 10th, paſſed through Nancy, Count de Paris, Major General and Chamberlain of the Emperor of Auſtria, as Courier on his way to Paris; Colonel de Gervais, Ruſſian Counſellor of State; on his way to St. Peterſburgh; Colonel de Berpiger, returning to Stutgard; and Ildi Bey, with diſpatches for the Ambaſſador of Perſia, going to Paris. Marſhal Kellerman is arrived at Pau.

Our Papers remark, that the Prince of Schwartzenberch has been received at St. Peterſburgh with all the ceremony and etiquette required, but with no particular marks of favor; he was not invited to the Hermitage.

March 17.

Yeſterday's Moniteur has the following: General Andreoſſi, Ambaſſador from France to Vienna, is arrived at Paris on leave of abſence.—He left behind him, to tranſact his affairs, M. Dobrin, his firſt Secretary of Legation. On his arrival he had an interview with the Emperor.

This morning Colonel Gorgoly, Aid-de-Camp of the Emperor of Ruſſia, arrived here; he left Peterſburgh on the 1ſt inſt. The Emperor invited him inſtantly to accompany him to the chace, and alſo to dine with him.

Our lateſt intelligence from Auſtria announces that in imitation of the Spaniards, the Students of the Univerſities and high ſchools had offered to ſerve their country in ſeparate regiments, which offer the Government had accepted. A number of officers in the Auſtrian army born ſubjects of the Princes of the Rhenith League, had on the other hand, demanded their diſmiſſion, being unwilling to fight againſt their countrymen.

In Auſtria, the military preparations ſtill continue. Beſide the camp forming at Egra, in Bohemia, at Lintz Upper Auſtria, and on the ſide of Italy, it is alſo ſaid, that a fourth army is to be formed in the territory of Salzburg.

In Bavaria, by way of precaution, orders had been given to empty the Houſes of Correction of Munich and Ingolſtad, of their Magazines, and bring them to Auſburg.

In the laſt Vienna Cours Courant, the writer goes ſo far as to aſſert, that the peace with England was not compelled by a freſh inſurrection of the Janiſſaries, and that it was equally falſe that the Ruſſian Commander had, on that account, broken connexion with the Turkiſh provinces.

Dreſden, March 7.

We have ſuffered great alarm here, on account of the movements of the Auſtrian army, and with great rapidity the treaſures of Das Gruene Gewoelbe, (the green vault) were tranſported to the impregnable fortreſs of Konigſtein. The fortifications of the town were repaired, and the army put on its war eſtabliſhment; but our apprehenſions have in a great meaſure paſſed over. The Auſtrian army, we hear, in Bohemia is collecting towards Franconia, and it is ſaid. Auſtria will not in this war, act offenſively. We do not flatter ourſelves, that peace will be maintained; but in the mean while, we gain time for the return of our army from Dantzic, and of the auxiliaries of our mighty ally.

Paſſau, March. 7.

At Branuau the fortifications are repairing with the greateſt activity. Between Lenz and the Auſtrian frontiers are no great number of Auſtrian troops, but between that town and Vienna, is a numerous army. At Salſburgh are ſcarcely 8000 Auſtrian troops.

Ulm, March 10.

The firſt column of General Oudinot's army which conſiſts of 30,000 men, paſſed the Danube between the 2d and 27th of February and proceeded in the direction of Auſburg. The ſecond column has been filing off thro' this city ſince the 1ſt inſt. and purſues the ſame rout. A conſiderable part of the artillery attached to this army, alſo paſſed thro' beſides a detachment of artillery from the grand park at Erfurth.

The Duke of Auerſtadt's army in Bayreuth, of which 7000 cavalry are paſſing the Danube for Bavaria, and thoſe of Oudinot, Bavaria, Wirtemberg, and Baden, which will be immediately united for the protection of this country, are eſtimated at 160,000 men; and this force is excluſive of the contingents of Saxony, Weſtphalia and the other Confederates.

March 13.

The Marſhal Duke of Auerſtadt is arrived here. It is reported that this place is to be the head quarters of the Rhine army. From the Tyrol we learn, that a conſiderable French army is entering the Venetian territory.

From Munich of the 8th inſtant, we hear that Andreoſſi has taken the ultimatum of the Auſtrian Court to Paris. From Carlsruhe we hear that on the 9th further French troops were arrived on the right bank of the Rhine. At Straſburgh a conſiderable corps of cavalry was arrived.

London Elbe, March 14.

Letters from Leipzic of the 6th ſtate, that a number of waggons with royal effects and ſtate archives, had arrived there from Dreſden.

(From the Delit Courant of March 21.)

" In Auſtria, all Newſpapers publiſhed in France, or the Confederation of the Rhine, have been prohibited.

" It is ſaid that the Duke of Auerſtadt (Davouſt) is appointed Commander in Chief of the French army in Germany, which, including the troops of the Confederation of the Rhine, amount to 180,000 men, and that the head quarters are removed to Wurzburg; that the diviſion of Boudet and Molitor paſſed the Rhine by Huntingen, and 20,000 other French troops had entered the Black Forreſt by Oniebis; and that the diviſion of Legrand was to return from France, and repair to Nuremberg."

Paris, March 18.

They write from Vienna, that Gen. Count Bellegarde has ſet out for Crawcow. A great number of Generals and Staff Officers quitted the capital on the 3d, for different deſtinations. In Bohemia and Moravia ſeveral great Noblemen have requeſted to ſerve as volunteers. A Poet at Vienna is employed in compoſing war-ſongs.

It is ſtrongly reported that inſtead of a proclamation by the Emperor Francis, France has declared war againſt Auſtria, and that the declaration was publiſhed at Paris on the 17th inſt.

The treaty between Great Britain and Spain, we underſtand, was ſigned on Wedneſday; but ſome articles not yet preciſely adjuſted, are left for future arrangement.

It is ſtated, that Vigo and ſome other harbours of Gallacia are now open to Engliſh ſhips. The communication with the ports of Aſturias has not been obſtructed by the enemy, ſince his appearance on the Northern ſhores of the Douro.

Saragoſſa.—It appears that Saragoſſa was not wholly ſubdued, until after the garriſon had ſuſtained 150 attacks, which were made night and day without intermiſſion, for 45 days. In this memorable ſiege, the French are preſumed to have loſt nearly 30,000 men; and to have encountered from the unexampled bravery of the inhabitants, every kind of oppoſition which human ingenuity, ſtimulated by patriotiſm and the thirſt of vengeance, could deviſe. After the firſt breach was made, which was about 30 days before its final reduction, the aſſailants were ſo powerfully oppoſed in the ſtreets, and from the houſes, as to defeat the execution of any immediate ſurrender of the place—they were compelled to conquer ſtreet by ſtreet, and houſe by houſe—for every houſe was a fortreſs, and was defended until blown up.—The details of this ſiege are highly intereſting preſenting a daily journal of operations for 30 days, in which the French were unremittingly engaged in fighting the inhabitants, and deſtroying their dwellings; one by one. Such unexampled heroiſm, is without precedent in the annals of hiſtory.

Spain.—Important and interesting intelligence was received this morning by government. The precise particulars we have not been able to learn, but the news is from the Eastern Provinces of Spain, where the Spaniards have gained some signal advantages over the enemy. Not only the strong city of Barcelona, the capital of Catalonia, but Mount Joy, the fort by which it is defended, situate on a Rocky mountain about a mile to the West of the city, has surrendered to the Patriots under General Reding. This success was followed by the immediate retreat of the French not only from the whole of Catalonia, but from all the Eastern Provinces of the Peninsula; and a solemn thanksgiving had in consequence been observed throughout the Spanish armies.

In one of the neighbouring provinces, in which the French had attempted to rally, report says, they were again attacked by the Spanish peasantry, who after three days hard fighting, had entirely annihilated the whole body.

Twelve sail of large copper-bottomed transports are now fitting at Sheerness for fire ships.—All the troops and cavalry ships in the River are ordered round to portsmouth where there will be between five and six hundred sail of transports including ordinance and store ships.

A very considerable embarkation of troops will take place almost immediately. There will be four brigades of cavalry, two heavy two light, and a large force of infantry;—among them there will be two brigades of Foot Guards; and the Queen's Dragoon Guards and 4 Dragoon Guards are mentioned, in addition to the regiments mentioned in Saturday's Star.

The success left Malta on the 2d inst. She brings an account of the capture of a French 40 gun ship in the Mediterranean.

Twelve sail of fine transports, which have been covered into fire ships, having had their masts and numbers eraied, and been filled with combustibles, sailed from the Nore last week for Portsmouth; these with a number of Col. Congreve's rockets, which are shipping at Dover, it is conjectured, are intended for an attack on the French fleet in Basque Roads; the destruction of which, from its exposed situation; it is thought may by these means be accomplished.

The utmost possible exertions is making in every department in the Dock-yards, in order to equip a fleet for the Baltic.

NEW YORK. May 22.

By the brig Lydia, captain Parsons, in 13 days from St. Bartholomews, we learn that on the 14 h of April, Admiral Cochrane landed his troops and took possession of the Saints. At half past 2 at night, the three French men of war, cut their cables and put to sea, and were pursued by a division of Admiral Cochrane's fleet, consisting of the Pompey, of 74 guns, Latona and Acasta frigates, which came up with the French line of battle ship D'Hautpault, and after an action of 3 hours, the French ship struck her colors and surrendered to the British. Admiral Cochrane in the Northumberland, with 2 74's and a tender had arrived at St. Bartholomews; and the prize, we understand, was ordered to St. Kitts. Passengers in the Lydia, the Doctor and the purser of the French ship D'Hautpault, which was captured by the British.

Spain.—Important and interesting intelligence was received this morning by government. The precise particulars we have not been able to learn, but the news is from the Eastern Provinces of Spain, where the Spaniards have gained some signal advantages over the enemy. Not only the strong city of Barcelona, the capital of Catalonia, but Mount Joy, the fort by which it is defended, situate on a Rocky mountain about a mile to the West of the city, has surrendered to the Patriots under General Reding. This success was followed by the immediate retreat of the French not only from the whole of Catalonia, but from all the Eastern Provinces of the Peninsula; and a solemn thanksgiving had in consequence been observed throughout the Spanish armies.

In one of the neighbouring provinces, in which the French had attempted to rally, report says, they were again attacked by the Spanish peasantry, who after three days hard fighting, had entirely annihilated the whole body.

Twelve sail of large copper-bottomed transports are now fitting at Sheerness for fire ships.—All the troops and cavalry ships in the River are ordered round to portsmouth where there will be between five and six hundred sail of transports including ordinance and store ships.

A very considerable embarkation of troops will take place almost immediately. There will be four brigades of cavalry, two heavy two light, and a large force of infantry;—among them there will be two brigades of Foot Guards; and the Queen's Dragoon Guards and 4 Dragoon Guards are mentioned, in addition to the regiments mentioned in Saturday's Star.

The success left Malta on the 2d inst. She brings an account of the capture of a French 40 gun ship in the Mediterranean.

Twelve sail of fine transports, which have been covered into fire ships, having had their masts and numbers eraied, and been filled with combustibles, sailed from the Nore last week for Portsmouth; these with a number of Col. Congreve's rockets, which are shipping at Dover, it is conjectured, are intended for an attack on the French fleet in Basque Roads; the destruction of which, from its exposed situation; it is thought may by these means be accomplished.

The utmost possible exertions is making in every department in the Dock-yards, in order to equip a fleet for the Baltic.

NEW YORK. May 22.

By the brig Lydia, captain Parsons, in 13 days from St. Bartholomews, we learn that on the 14 h of April, Admiral Cochrane landed his troops and took possession of the Saints. At half past 2 at night, the three French men of war, cut their cables and put to sea, and were pursued by a division of Admiral Cochrane's fleet, consisting of the Pompey, of 74 guns, Latona and Acasta frigates, which came up with the French line of battle ship D'Hautpault, and after an action of 3 hours, the French ship struck her colors and surrendered to the British. Admiral Cochrane in the Northumberland, with 2 74's and a tender had arrived at St. Bartholomews; and the prize, we understand, was ordered to St. Kitts. Passengers in the Lydia, the Doctor and the purser of the French ship D'Hautpault, which was captured by the British.

New View of the Battle of Tudela.—We lately published a concise account of this decisive battle, by General Palafox. We now give a more detailed account than that of Castanos himself, and undoubtedly a more correct one. It was addressed to General Palafox by General O'Neill. We will introduce it by some very remarks of the Editor of the London Globe.—Free. Journal.

"We give this day an official account of the battle of Tudela. It is written by gen. O'Neill, who commanded the left wing of the Spanish army.—He attributes the defeat of the Patriots to the confusion and contradictory orders of Castanos, and to his retreat with the centre of the army, at the very moment the efforts of the left wing were crowned with complete success. The charge if it does not amount to treachery and cowardice, represents him as totally unfit for the command of an army. There thus appears to have been good ground for the removal of General Castanos, and the appointment of the Duke Infantado in his place. While we recognise and we deplore the unequal conflict which is carrying on beyond the Pyrenees, we are far from joining in any reproaches on the apathy, the difference or the want of national character and energy in the Spanish people!—They have betrayed no want of those qualities which were manifested by their ancestors under Sertorius and Viriatus, or, in more modern ages, by Palagius, and by the Cid. Under circumstances of unexampled depression, betrayed by their own imbecile sovereign, and surrendered up by his infamous ministers: the keys of the kingdom put into Bonaparte's possession; the capital occupied by his troops; the Spanish armies sent to fight a Corsican's battles at the other extremity of Europe; the monarchy thus disarmed, and the young king, together with all the Royal Family seized, detained and imprisoned by the invader; in this desperate position, the Spaniards did not imitate the example set them in Austria, or in Prussia.—Uncertain even of assistance, or of co-operation from England, they rose against their oppressors. They have fought and bled, nor are they yet subdued.—We venture even to say, that if the contest had been of an ordinary nature; if it had been a war against Louis the fourteenth, or against any of the ancient governments of Europe, they would have triumphed.—Globe.

"From the Spanish papers.

"GAZETTE EXTRAORDINARY.

"Published at Saragossa, Saturday, Dec. 3.

"In consequence of the actual situation of this city, threatened with a siege by the enemy, it has been, until now found impossible to lay before the public an official account of the details of the attack and ultimate battle fought at Tudela, on the 22d ult.; a battle, equally fatal and glorious to this army, which supported by its own strength, and its own valor, maintained the contest for eight hours in the midst of the most dreadful fire. It is impossible to convey an adequate idea of the number of heroic achievements performed by the officers and soldiers, whilst one half of the army was defending their posts with distinguished intrepidity, and the other was maintaining the contest with the bayonet, until the number of slain on both sides left scarcely room for action, and both the contending armies retired. The captain general of this excellent army of reserve has received the following detail dispatched from Lieutenant General Don Juan O'Neill, who commanded the troops in the engagement, from Illueca, whither he retired with field marshal D. Felippe S., March :—

"Most Excellent Seignor,

A few hours after my conference with your excellency, at Caparoso, respecting the good condition of the troops under my command, at that important point, from the superiority which they conceived themselves to possess over the enemy, who, for so long a period, had not dared to attack us, and from advantages of greater magnitude, which they anticipated in the direction of Pampeluna: and where your excellency convinced of the necessity of not permitting a favorable opportunity to pass, or executing designs in which I cordially concurred, proceeded to consult with the captain general of the centre, I received a dispatch from the captain general of the army of the centre and the representatives of the Supreme Central Junta, D. Francisco Palafox, dated the 21st instant, informing me of the extreme urgency that all my troops should immediately put themselves in motion, and proceed by way of Tudela, to the right of the line, which was to be formed upon Cascante and Tarragona, as far as the heights of Moncayo; and charging me not to lose a moment, since they had given orders for the march of the army of the centre, and were on the point of attacking and defeating the enemy, in order to save that army;—an object, the attainment of which would be of the greatest importance to Spain, and totally disconcert the plans of the enemy.

"Surprised at the novelty of this dispatch, so completely at variance with the plan we had agreed upon at Caparoso the day before, I sent to inform your excellency, and before I had received your answer, your dispatch, dated at Tudela on the same day (the 21st), reached me, directing, that in consequence of what the captain general of the centre had stated to you, I should, the instant I received it, march with the whole of my army, and the troops belonging to the centre attached to it, to Tudela, there to fix my head quarters, it being understood that the troops that occupied the posts of the Cintruenego, Calahorra, and the other parts of the Ebro, were already on their march for Borja and Tarazona and consequently that any delay might be very injurious, and expose the army to be turned in that quarter. On the same day as my troops were just setting off, I received your excellency's answer, confirming your previous order, in consequence of the army of the centre, having already commenced its movement.

"I cannot describe to your excellency the exultation felt by the troops under my command, in consequence of this retrograde movement, as all of them, previously animated by the preceding fortunate movement, found all their hopes frustrated, and saw themselves removed from the advanced situation that they always occupied in front of the enemy. An event so unexpected disheartened them; and in order to inspire them with the same degree of valor which they had hitherto manifested, and to prevent the fatal consequences of which I was apprehensive, I exerted by authority, accompanying it with the most energetic persuasion, and shewing them the order of this evening, according to which the safety of the whole army depended upon our retrograde movement, and in short, telling them that it was the result of the express orders of your excellency, and must be obeyed.

"This representation in some degree, tranquilized them, and I proceeded with my troops to Tudela, where your excellency the seignior representative, and the captain general of the army of the centre, were already arrived. At nine in the morning of the following day, (the 23d,) colonel Don F. Perena sent to inform me, that two columns of the enemy were deploying in front of Ablitas. —In consequence of this intelligence, and the captain general of the army of the centre having the preceding evening, informed me, that the enemy had entered Cintruenego I ordered the gererale to be beaten, apprising at the same time, the captain general, that as commander in chief, he might make the necessary dispositions. He ordered some reinforcements to advance, and soon after caused General St. Mark to do the same on the left, sending various corps of my division to the heights of Santa Barbara, to reinforce that important point and to support the troops already occupying it, belonging to the division of General Rocha.

"As he left me on high road, with the remainder of my troops, I sent him my aid-de-camp, D. B. Galabert, to ascertain what I was to do, as the engagement was already begun. His answer was that I should proceed to the centre of the line, where he was posted.—Soon after, he ordered the remainder of the troops to join him, and he assigned me the command of the whole of the left wing. When I arrived I found the heights on the left occupied by the enemy, who threatened to turn us; but having received his order to attack them, and an assurance that the division of general La Pena would advance to my assistance, I determined to execute the attack by echellons of battalions. The battalion of the Royal Spanish guards commenced it with such unexampled gallantry, that the enemy instantly abandoned that important post, leaving the field of battle covered with dead bodies. The same success attended the attack in front, by the regiments of the volunteers of Castile and Segorbia. While I was indulging in the satisfaction produced by our success, and considering the battle gained, two orderly officers of cavalry came to desire me, on the part of the captain general, not to be alarmed by the appearance of a column of infantry, with a considerable body of cavalry who were advancing on the left, as they were the troops of general la Pena, coming from Cascante. Congratulating myself upon this aid, which would have decided the battle in our favor. I rode along my left to direct Gen. St. Marck to continue the attack in the same order, when that general surprised me by telling me it was necessary we should retreat, as our right had been forced, that the enemy were in Tudela, and that all the troops that occupied the centre of one position had retreated. This intelligence astonished me the more, as the captain general had sent me no information of this event, a circumstance which appeared to me impossible; but a firing being heard in the rear of the olive plantation, I was convinced of the fact.—In this melancholy situation, the division of general la Pena not having moved, and that which was announced as his division proving to be a corps of the enemy, of about 8000 infantry and 2000 cavalry, I gave directions for retreating in the best possible order; placing the second regiment of Valencia in an oblique position to cover the retreat of our troops.—The troops were surrounded on all sides, but they gallantly cut their way with the bayonet. I put myself at their head, and found general St. Marck with the cavalry to protect this daring; and only resource that was left to us. The general discharged this trust with the same exactness that he did every other duty confided to him during the action. I can assure your excellency, that I never witnessed an occasion in which all the officers and soldiers more completely performed their duty; but of those who were under my orders, I ought to make particular mention of the third battalion of the Royal Spanish guards, and the regiments of Castile, Segorbia, and Turia, D. M. Valasco commander of the artillery of my division; D. A. Ulloa, commander of general D. R. Ships are in great demand here; most ly all the vessels in port are taken up in the transport service, to carry French prisoners to the Island of Minorca; the Junta allows about or will allow for a ship of 200 tons, 400 dollars a trip, with a convoy of 3 or 4 ships of the line, and 4 or 5 frigates and sloops of war, with insuring the ship, &c. The French army is stationed at Madrid, the Spanish and British are combined at Seville; a great battle was fought a few days since, the particulars it is impossible to learn, although the Spaniards report it favorable to themselves—they appear in high spirits here, but any thing unfavorable is never known publicly, but men of general information appear at times alarmed. — It is generally reported that the German powers have declared war against Bonaparte. The Moors have offered to the service of Ferdinand the 7th, 50,000 troops completely equipped.
A great revolution has taken place among the Portuguese, many of their leading characters have been discovered corresponding with Bonaparte, they have been generally killed—the government is under a British General of their own choice. Many of the confidential Spanish officers have gone to Madrid & joined the French army.

By the schooner Mary Ann, Captain Jones, from St. Bartholomews, we learn that the French ship D'Hautpoit, of 84 guns, captured by the Pompey and 2 frigates, arrived at St. Bartholomews on the 3d of May.

The general in chief of the army of Estre-madura, [Gen. Cuesta] is posted at Berlanga with the whole of the divisions of his army, at which place likewise is posted the troops which were nigh Guadaloupe, but were not in the battle of Medellin, and the troops that were scattered in consequence of it. Till the 29th March the enemy had not passed the Don Benito and la Serena. General Cuesta, although wounded in the battle, yet with that activity and enterprize which cha racterize him, continued profiting of every opportunity to observe the French, and defend the capital, in case of an attack upon it.

The Supreme Junta which is so much interested in the preservation of this worthy general, has ordered him hence forward to declare the state of his health.

Remarkable Funeral.—On Saturday last, was interred in the burial ground of St. Martin in the Fields, the Remains of Hugh Hewson, who died at the advanced age of 85.——The deceased was a man of no small celebrity, though no funeral escutcheons adorned his hearse, or heir expectant graced his obsequies. He was no less a personage than the identical Hugh Strap, whom Dr. Smollet has rendered so conspicuously interesting in his life and adventures of Roderick Random, and for upwards of forty years had kept a hair dresser's shop in the above parish.
—The deceased was a very intelligent man, and took delight in recounting the adventures of his early life.—He spoke with pleasure of the time he passed in the service of the Doctor, and it was his pride, as well as boast to say that he had been educated in the same Seminary with so learned and distinguished a character.
His shop was hung round with latin quotations, and he would frequently point out to his customers and acquaintances, the several scenes in Roderick Random, pertaining to himself, which had their foundation, not in the Doctor's inventive fancy, but in truth and reality.——
The meeting in a barber's shop at Newcastle upon Tyne, the subsequent mistake at the inn, their arrival together in London, and the assistance they experienced from Strap's friend, were all of that description.—We understand the deceased had left behind him an interlined copy of Roderick Random, pointing out these facts, shewing how far they were indebted to the genius of the Doctor, and to what extent they were bottomed in reality.
The deceased could never succeed in gaining more than a respectable subsistence by his trade, but he possessed an independence of mind superior to his humble condition.
Of late years he was employed as a keeper of the Promenade in Vallier's Walk, Adelphia, and was much noticed and respected by the inhabitants who frequented that place.

COURT OF KING'S BENCH, Feb. 27.

Pearson V Taylor.—This was an action of slander, for calling the plaintiff a rogue, a thief and a robber. The plaintiff and defendant were both officers of excise, and a quarrel about shutting a door, when the defendant called the plaintiff a liar, and said he was a d——d scoundrel. The plaintiff said he supposed he would also call him a robber and a thief.
This he accordingly did.

Mr. Garrow, for the defendant, explained the words in rather a curious sense. He said that the plaintiff was a hyprocritical, canting Methodist preacher, and that the defendant in allusion to the 10th Chapter of St. John, v. 1st. called him a robber, because it is there said,
"He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber."

The jury gave a verdict for the plaintiff—Damages, 1s.

[From the Baptist Magazine.]

THE DOVE.

The following very extraordinary circumstance, respecting the Conduct of a Dove, may be relied on as a fact.—It took place on the first Lord's day in August last, in the Baptist Meeting House in Fowler, in the state of Ver mont, in the time of public service:—consequently several hundred people were witnesses of this singular event.

"The Rev. Mr. Beal, pastor of the Baptist Church was called upon in the intermisson to Baptize. He preached to the people that day from Psalm. xcii. 1. 2. and in illustrating his subject he took occasion to bring into view the descent of the Holy Ghost, in bodily shape like a Dove, on the head of our glorious Redeemer, at his baptism. Before he had done with the subject, a Dove flew into the door of the meeting house & lit upon the cornice over the pulpit, and soon hovered down and lit upon the top of the speak er's head: from thence it went down on to his right shoulder. After sitting there some time, it walked across the back of his neck on the left shoulder. At length it walked out upon his left arm, (that being at the time extended) from which it hovered down, and sat upon the Bible before him.—After sitting on the Bible for some time, it spread its wings and flew out of one of the gallery windows.

"It was judged that the time that this innocent bird stayed upon, & about the Preacher, was half an hour.—It did not appear to break, but rather help his ideas in preaching. It had a most solemnizing effect on his mind, also, as was thought, on the whole assembly. It occasioned (says the writer from whom this extract is taken) much talk in this vicinity. But the END God had in this providential occurrence is yet kept a secret."

We have thus simply narrated the above fact, and leave the reader to make his own comments upon it.

ODE TO INNOCENCE.

By the Rev. Doctor JOHN OGILVIE.

'Twas when the flow declining ray,
Had ting'd the cloud with ev'ning gold,
No warbler pour'd the melting lay,
No sound disturb'd the sleeping fold.

When by a murm'ring till reclin'd
So rapt in thought a wand'ring swain;
Calm peace compos'd his musing mind;
And thus he rais'd the flowing strain:

'Hail! INNOCENCE! celestial maid!
'What joys thy blushing charms reveal!
'Sweet, as the arbour's cooling shade,
'And milder than the vernal gale.

'On thee attends a radiant choir,
'Soft-smiling Peace, and downy Rest:
'With love that prompts the tuneful lyre,
'And hope, that soothes the throbbing breast.

'O Sent from Heav'n to haunt the grove,
'Where squinting Envy ne'er can come!
'Not pines the cheek with luckless Love,
'Nor Anguish chills the living bloom.

'But spotless Beauty, rob'd in white,
'Sits on you moss-grown hill reclin'd;
'Serene as Heavn'n's unsullied light,
'And pure as Delia's gentle mind.

'Grant, Heav'nly Pow'r! thy peaceful sway
'May still my ruder thoughts controul;
'Thy hand to point my dubious way,
'Thy voice to soothe the melting soul!

'For in the shady sweet retreat
'Let thought beguile the ling'ring hour;

" Let Quiet court the mossy seat,
" And twining oliver from the bow'r!

" Let dove-ey'd peace her wreath bestow,
" And oft sit list'ning in the dale,
" While night's sweet wasble from the bough
" Tells to the grove her plaintive tale.

" Soft as in Delia's snowy breast,
" Let each consenting passion move;
" Let Angels watch its silent rest,
" And all its blissful dreams be Love!"

Proclamation.

GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:—

To our beloved and faithful Legiſlative Counſellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes of our ſaid Province, to the Provincial Parliament at our Town of York on the 29th day of this preſent month of June, to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you——GREETING:—

WHEREAS by our Proclamation bearing date the Tenth day of May laſt, We thought fit by and with the advice of our Executive Council to prorogue our Provincial Parliament until the twenty ninth day of this preſent month of June, at which time in our town of York, you were held and conſtrained to appear; but WE taking into our Royal conſideration the eaſe and convenience of our loving ſubjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our executive Council, to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforeſaid, hereby convoking and by theſe preſents, enjoining you and each of you, that on the Fifth day of Auguſt next enſuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our town of York, there to take into conſideration the ſtate and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada and therein to do as may ſeem neceſſary; herein fail not.

IN Teſtimony whereof, WE have cauſed theſe our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our ſaid Province to be hereunto affixed.— Witneſs our truſty and well beloved FRANCIS GORE, Eſquire, our Lieutenant Governor of our ſaid Province at York, this twenty-third day of June in the year of our Lord one thouſand eight hundred and nine, and in the forty ninth of our Reign.

WM. JARVIS, Secretary.

Proclamation.

FRANCIS GORE, Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS by an Act paſſed in the forty fourth year of the reign of His preſent Majeſty, intitled, "An Act for granting to His Majeſty, a certain ſum of Money, for the further encouragement of the Growth and Cultivation of Hemp within this Province, and the exportation thereof;" It is (among other things enacted,) that at any time or times after the paſſing of the ſaid Act, it ſhould and might be lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon adminiſtering the Government, by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council of this Province, to iſſue one or more Proclamations, and therein to name ſuch and ſo many perſons within the Province as to him ſhould ſeem meet, as Commiſſioners for the purchaſing of merchantable Hemp, the growth of this Province. And whereas by an Act paſſed in the forty-eighth year of the reign of His preſent Majeſty, intitled, "An Act for the further encouragement of the Growth and Cultivation of Hemp within this Province, and for the exportation thereof;" it is enacted, that the ſum of Sixty two Pounds and Ten Shillings per Ton, ſhould be the rate or price for good and Merchantable Hemp, which might be thereafter purchaſed under and by virtue of the hereinbefore recited Acts.

NOW KNOW ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That I, FRANCIS GORE, Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of the ſaid Province of Upper Canada, do, by virtue of the ſaid hereinbefore firſt recited Act, and by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council of this Province, nominate, conſtitute and appoint, the Honorable James Baby, the Honorable Richard Cartwright, the Honorable Robert Hamilton, Members of the Legiſlative Council of this Province, Thomas Talbot, of Port Talbot, Eſq. and William Allan, of York, Eſquire, in the ſaid Province reſpectively, to be Commiſſioners for the purchaſing of Merchantable Hemp, the Growth of this Province, which ſaid Commiſſioners or any one or more of them are, and is hereby reſpectively authoriſed & empowered, to purchaſe ſuch Hemp, at & after the price or rate in manner and conformity to the Regulations and Proviſos contained in and according to the Statutes, in ſuch caſe made and provided; And to do, perform and execute all ſuch other matters & things, as they are authoriſed and required to do, in and by the ſaid recited Acts.

Given under my Hand and Seal at Arms at York, in the Province of Upper Canada, this thirteenth day of February, in the year of our Lord one thouſand eight hundred and nine, and in the forty-ninth year of His Majeſty's Reign.

FRANCIS GORE,
Lieut. Governor.

Swedish Revolution —Extract of a letter dated Stockholm, March 17.—"You will probably have heard before now of the revolution here. The King arrived in the city from his country ſeat at Aga, at ſeven in the evening of the 12th; he ſlept in town. In the morning of the 12th, the guards marched out of town, and the king and royal family were to join them on the 13th, in order to proceed towards the inſurgents.—On the 12th, at twelve o'clock the time appointed for the carriage to be at that place, maj. gen. Adlercruiz, col. Jagerhorn, and others, went to the king's apartment, and Adlercreutz told the king that he muſt not depart. The king drew his ſword, and on their laying hold of his perſon, he defended himſelf bravely, and was on the point of killing Adlercreutz No ſoldiers were in the palace, becauſe it was reported that the king had at night returned to Haga.

In the next room to that where he was, was a ſervant called a cambet hazard of the king whoſe name is Seding. On hearing the noiſe in the room, he wiſhed to open the door, but it was locked; he then broke open the door, and with his ſabre in hand was going to cut Adlercreutz down, but the ſabre was wreſted from his hand. In the mean time the unfortunate monarch, without hat or ſword, ran down the ſo called Queen's Stairs; there they followed him and he took away the ſword from col. Mehrn, and cut the hand of the count Snoiſky. He defended himſelf a long time, but at laſt, almoſt fainting, they carried him up to his room. He expreſſed at firſt, his aſtoniſhment at their conduct, and ſtill kept ſaying that his principals are and will ever remain the ſame. In the night he was carried out to Drottingholm. On the 13th, a great force of the cuiraſſiers and artillery was ſent to Huga, where the queen and her children were, and ſtill are.

Adlercruetz was immediately appointed the commander, adjutant general and field marſhal; count Klingspor, lord governor of Stockholm, count Ugglas, has loſt his place; every thing is quiet here. A publication was iſſued on the 13th, that all taverns and public houſes ſhould be ſhut up preciſely at nine o'clock in the evening; and the duty laid on by the king for carrying on the war, was taken off. The regiment of the king's body guard, which was diſgraced in Finland, have received their colors, and are re inſtated in their rank.—The queen and her children are not allowed to ſee the king, and, in a word, no one is allowed to come near the caſtle, where a great number of guns are placed. A Diet is appointed for the 1ſt of May.—The Duke of Sudermania, it is ſaid, will keep on friendly terms with England; but I hardly think Bonaparte will ſuffer it. Major Delagrange is ſent to Denmark, and from thence to Paris; Major Arfvedson to St. Peterſburgh; and a meſſenger from the Secretary of State's Office to England.—I have ſpoken to one of the perſons who attended one day on the king at Drottengholm; he told me that the king ate but little, and that he often went backwark and forward and claſped his hands together, and lifted up his eyes, as if he were praying. Thus this monarch, adored in proſperity, is abandoned by all.—God help him."

London, April 5.

General Dupont, who ſurrendered to the Spaniards under Cueſta, is ſaid to have been brought to Trial and condemned to Death. He was ſhot by torch-light. This puniſhment is underſtood to have produced much murmuring among the French Officers.

April 8.

There was a report this morning that the Delecstiana under General Fall, had ſucceeded in releaſing the King of Sweden from his confinement, and in reinſtating him upon his Throne—that the Duke of Sudermania had fled towards Finland to take refuge in the Ruſſian territories. We know not on what authority this rumour reſts. We have not heard of any arrivals from Sweden ſince the 28th ult.

African Inſtitution.—The Earl of Moira having informed the meeting, in a very impreſsive ſpeech, of his having recently learnt that Sir Sir Sidney Smith had been presented by the Prince Regent of Portugal with an eſtate, and with a number of Negro Slaves, to be employed in cultivating it, and that the uſe Sir Sidney Smith had made of this gift was immediately to liberate the ſlaves, and to allot to each of them a portion of this eſtate, to be cultivated by them as free laborers, for their own excluſive benefit:

It was reſolved unanimouſly, on motion of Mr. Wilberforce,—that his Royal Highneſs the Duke of Glouceſter (the patron and Preſident of the Society) be requeſted to communicate to Sir Sidney Smith the high ſenſe entertained by this meeting, of his admirable judgement and liberality in the above inſtance, and to return him their warmeſt thanks for a conduct, which is ſo truly honorable to the Britiſh name and character, and which may be expected in the way of example to be productive of the happieſt effects.

We wiſh by quoting the above reſolution, to expreſs our admiration of Sir Sidney's conduct. Without meaning any diſreſpect to the military profeſſion, we could almoſt hope that he may be leſs known hereafter by the appellation of the Hero of Acre, than by that of THE PHILANTHROPIST OF THE BRAZILS.

Philadelphia May 24.

At a late hour laſt evening, we received Engliſh Papers to the 10th ult. Upon a haſty peruſal, we are only able to give the following:

It is reported that Maſſena has been killed by Bonaparte in a fit of paſſion, though other accounts ſay it was by accident.

Accounts are received from Paris on the 28th March, that Bonaparte had not left that place—but that he would probably ſet off after an extraordinary meeting that was to be held of the Senate. Troops are pouring into Germany from all parts.

A paper of the 4th mentions reports being received of actions between the French and Auſtrians, but later papers give no confirmation of them and it only appears that preparations are going on vigorouſly between them.

A paper of the 4th, ſays,—Two expeditions are intended—one has juſt ſailed from Cork—the other will ſail from Portſmouth in a few days—one is intended for Portugal the other unknown.

The papers contain a variety of paragraphs from Spain and Portugal, but none ſo late as received, nor of any great moment, which the want of time and room obliges us to poſtpone till our next.

Abercrombie's Monument.—The monument voted by the Britiſh Parliament to the illuſtrious and lamented General Sir Ralph Abercrombie, has been lately erected in its deſtined ſituation in St. Paul's Cathedral. It is compoſed of a group of figures larger than common life, and conſiſting of the general fainting in battle from loſs of blood, and falling from his horſe, but his fall arreſted or caught by a Highland Soldier, who is repreſented in the action of running by the ſide of the horſe, to keep pace with his ſpeed, and received his dying general in his arms. Beneath the elevated feet of the horſe is alſo a dying soldier graſping a French ſtandard.

The compoſition of this monument is ſimply hiſtorical, without introduction of allegory. The only emblamatic ornament is a pair of Sphinxes, placed at the baſe of the pedeſtal, one on each ſide of the Monument, and in country in which the hero fell.

The principal group in on is adjudged to be one which has yet occupied a p thedral. the Monument, and indicative of the country in which the hero conquered and fell.

The principal group in this composition is adjudged to be one of the happiest which has yet occupied a place in the Cathedral. Every part bears the air of nature, and every part excites interest. The faithful Highlander is a well studied figure, the dress is judiciously arranged for the display of the action, and the energy of the attitude is without any disagreeable distortion of the limbs. The posture and countenance of the fainting hero are sufficiently explanatory of his actual condition without attempting any romantic grandeur of expression, and equally without grimace or caricature. Westmacott is the sculptor.

Mechanism.—A German Mechanic, of the name of Maelzi, is now exhibiting at Paris, an automaton of a singular construction. The figure exhibits a Trumpeter in the uniform of the Band of the French Imperial Guards, and at the word of command raises the Trumpet to its mouth and plays some exquisite pieces of martial music. The whole of the mechanism is contained in the chest of the automaton, its feet rest upon a board to which castors are affixed, and the proprietor moves it from place to place, in the exhibition room, to shew that there is no communication with any other apartment. In this respect it is superior to the celebrated automaton fluteplayer of M. Vancanson, which once made so much noise in Europe: this latter figure reclined against a wall, behind which some complicated machinery was supposed to be placed.—The most wonderful part of M. Maelzie's automaton, is the effect produced by the lips of the figure upon the trumpet, which are made to exhibit all the delicacy of touch peculiar to the lips of the human body. No jarring or cracking of machinery is to be heard, although the ear be applied close to the body of the automaton, nor can any musical sound be emitted unless when the trumpet is applied to the mouth. At the conclusion of the exhibition M. Maelzi sits down to a piano forte, and his trumpeter performs an accompaniment of several pieces of music with all the precision of a first rate performer.—This artist has heretofore distinguished himself by several improvements on musical instruments.

SINGULAR OCCURRENCE.

A child (named Jenkins) aged about 5 years, living with a Mr. Pollard, at present of the New Purchase, wandered about a fortnight ago to the woods, accompanied by a small dog. From 20 to 40 people were indefatigable in search of the woods for the discovery of the child; after seven days absence the child returned emaciated, and excessively excoriated, apprehended it is understood from the ravages of the Musquetoes, &c. The Dog had not returned, it is supposed he became the victim of Hunger. The Child from its youth, is unable to account for its manner of living, or the latter fate of the dog.

LONDON. April 25.

Some letters have been received from Holland, which ſtate that the Archduke Charles, at the head of 50,000 men, has got poſſeſſion of Munich. We are inclined to believe this intelligence. It is certain that the king of Bavaria fled from Munich with all poſſible ſpeed as ſoon as he heard of the Auſtrians having paſſed the Inn. The paſſage was effected ſooner that the Dutch papers allow.—We have before us a Paris paper which aſſerts that private letters from Auſburgh, announce the paſſage to have taken place on the 6th, in the environs of Mulhdorff—Mulhdorff is the direct Road to Munich.

April 26.

The intelligence in the letters from L ſbon is contradictory.—Some aſſert that Soult had advanced on the 4th from Oporto in two diviſions, 50,000 ſtrong, within 30 miles of Liſbon, and that in conſequence of the immenſe ſuperiority of the enemy, (for whilſt Soult was advancing in one direction, Victor was advancing in another), preparations had been made for the embarkation of our troops.—Others affirm that an army had marched from Liſbon to give battle to Soult, and that Marſhal Beresford, with 40,000 Portuguese troops had taken an advantageous poſition for covering L ſbon—that the French had been driven from Oporto, and that great hopes were entertained of compelling Soult to ſurrender.—not at all improbable. If Soult determined upon proceeding againſt L ſbon with all poſſible rapidity, combining his march with the movement of Victor from the Eaſtern frontier he would leave but a ſmall force in Oporto, which would not be able to make any ſucceſſful reſiſtance to the force that might be brought againſt it. But it is not upon Oporto that our eyes are fixed with a great attention at preſent. They are fixed upon Soult, and the Britiſh army, which we believe are marching to meet each other, and from whoſe meeting we truſt will ſpring another laurel to bind round the brows of the Britiſh ſoldier.

May 3.

A letter has been received from Charante, giving a dreadful deſcription of the battle in Baſque Roads. The mouth of the river Charante is entirely choaked with wrecks of the French ſhips.—The enemy have loſt 3,000 killed, beſides a great many wounded.

THE ſubſcriber being Indebted to John Gray, Eſqr. Merchant in Montreal in a Sum of Money, and as Merchants have always occaſion for their money, he wiſhes to diſcharge ſaid debt as ſpeedily as poſſible; would therefore ſell Five or Six Thouſand Acres of his land in the Townſhip of Norwich near Lake Erie in the Long Point ſettlement at the low price of half a Dollar per Acre.

Such as wiſh to purchaſe will please to call on him at York, and he will ſhew them the Map of, and the King's Deed for the Land, the quality of which is moſt excellent, and for the goodneſs of the Title unqueſtionable ſecurity will be given.

He has alſo Twelve Hundred Acres of choice Land in the Townſhip of Whitby adjoining Lake Ontario, which he would ſell at Two Dollars per Acre for the above purpoſe.

LONDON GAZETTE EXTRAORDINARY.
Admiralty Office, April 21.

Sir Harry Neal, Bart. first captain to Admiral lord Gambier, commander in chief of his Majesty's ships and vessels employed in the Channel soundings, &c. arrived here this morning, with a dispatch from his lordship to the honorable William Wellesley Pole, of which the following is a copy.

Caledonia, at anchor in Basque Roads, April 14, 1809.

SIR,

The Almighty's favor to his Majesty and the nation has been strongly marked in the success he has been pleased to give to the operations of his Majesty's fleet under my command; and I have the satisfaction to acquaint you, for the information of the lords commissioners of the Admiralty, that the four ships of the enemy named in the margin* have been destroyed at their anchorage, and several others from getting on shore, if not rendered altogether unserviceable, are at least disabled for a considerable time.

The arrangements of the fire vessels placed under the direction of captain the right honorable lord Cochrane, were made as fully as the state of the weather would admit, according to his lordship's plan, on the evening of the 11th instant, and at 8 o'clock on the same night they proceeded to the attack under a favorable strong wind from the Northward, and flood tide, (preceded by some vessels filled with powder and shells, as proposed by his lordship with a view to explosion) and led on in the most undaunted and determined manner by captain Wooldridge, in the Mediator fire ship, the others following in succession; but owing to the darkness of the night, several mistook their course and failed.

On their approach to the enemy's ships it was discovered that a boom was placed in the front of their line for a defence.—This, however, the weight of the Mediator soon broke, and the usual intrepidity and bravery of british seamen overcame all difficulties.—Advancing under a heavy fire from the forts in the Isle of Aix, as well as from the enemy's ships, most of which cut or slipt their cables, and from the confined anchorage got on shore, and avoided taking fire.

At day light the following morning, Lord Cochrane communicated to me by telegraph, that seven of the enemy's ships were on shore, and might be destroyed.—I immediately made the signal for the fleet to unmoor and weigh, intending to proceed with it to effect their destruction. The wind, however, being from the northward, and the flood tide running, rendered it too hazardous to run into Aix Roads (from its shallow water.) I therefore anchored again, at the distance of about three miles from the forts on the island.

As the tide suited, the enemy again evinced great activity in endeavoring to warp their ships, (which had grounded) into deep water, and succeeded in getting all but five of the line towards the entrance of the Charante before it became practicable to attack them.

I gave orders to captain Bligh of the Valiant to proceed with that ship, the Revenge, frigates, bombs, and small vessels, named in the margin,† to anchor near the Boyart Shoal in readiness to begin the attack. At 20 minutes past 1 P. M. Lord Cochrane advanced in the Imperieuse with his accustomed gallantry and spirit, and opened a well directed fire upon the Calcutta, which struck her colors to the Imperieuse; the ships and vessels above mentioned soon after joined in the attack upon the Ville de Varsovie & Aquilon, and obliged them, before five o'clock, after sustaining a heavy cannonade to strike their colours, when they were taken possession of by the boats of the advanced squadron. As soon as the prisoners were removed, they were set on fire, as was also the Tonnerre, a short time after by the enemy.

I afterwards detached Rear Admiral the Hon. Robert Stopford in the Cæsar with the Theseus, three additional fire ships (which were hastily prepared in the course of the day) and all the boats of the fleet, with Mr. Congreve's rockets, to conduct the further operations of the night against any of the ships which lay exposed to an attack.—On the morning of the 13th, the rear admiral reported to me, that as the Cæsar and other line of battle ships had grounded, and were in a dangerous situation, he thought it adviseable to order them all out, particularly as the remaining part of the service could be performed by frigates only; and I was happy to find that they were extricated from their perilous situation.

Captain Bligh has since informed me, that it was found impracticable to destroy the three decked ship, and the others which were lying near the entrance of the Charante, as the former being the outer one, was protected by three lines of boats placed in advance from her.

This ship and all the others, except 4 of the line and a frigate, have now moved up the river Charante. If any further attempt to destroy them is practicable, I shall not fail to use every means in my power to accomplish it.

I have great satisfaction in stating to their lordships how much I feel obliged to the zealous co-operation of Rear-Admiral Stopford, under whose arrangement the boats of the fleet were placed; and I must also express to their lordships the high sense I have of the assistance I received from the abilities and unremitted attention of Sir Harry Neal, Bart. the captain of the fleet, as well as of the animated exertions of the captains, officers, seamen, and marines under my command, and their forwardness to volunteer upon any service that migh. be allotted to them; particularly the zeal and activity shown by the captains of the line of battle ships in preparing the fire vessels.

I cannot speak in sufficient terms of admiration and applause of the vigorous and gallant attack made by Lord Cochrane upon the French line of battle ships which were on shore, as well of his judicious manner of approaching them, and placing his ship in the position most advantageous to annoy the enemy, and preserve his own ship, which could not be exceeded by any feat of volour hitherto atchieved by the British Navy.

It is due to the rear admiral & Sir Harry Neal, that I should here take the opportunity of acquainting their lordships of the handsome and earnest manner in which both these meritorious officers had volunteered their services before the arrival of lord Cochrane, to undertake an attack upon the enemy with fire ships; and had not their Lordships fixed upon him to conduct the enterprize, I have full confidence that the result of their efforts would have been highly creditable to them.

I should feel that I did not do justice to the services of captain Godfrey, of the Ætna, in bombarding the enemy's ships on the 12th, and nearly all the day of the 13th, if I did not recommend him to your lordship's notice; and I cannot omit bearing due testimony to the anxious desire expressed by Mr. Congreve to be employed wherever I might conceive his services the management of the rockets would be useful; some of them were placed in the fire ships with effect, and I have every reason to be satisfied with the artillerymen and others who had the management of them, under Mr. Congreve's direction.

I send herewith a return of killed, wounded and missing of the fleet, which I am happy to observe is comparatively small. I have not yet received the returns of the number of prisoners taken, but I conceive they amount to between 4 and 500.

I have charged Sir Harry Neal with this dispatch (by the Imperieuse) and I beg leave to refer their lordships to him, April 15 —(P. As the tides will take her off in a day or two, there is every probability that ſhe will be deſtroyed.

Since writing the foregoing, I have learnt, that the hon. lieutenant colonel Cochrane (Lord Cochrane's brother) and lieutenant Biſſet, of the navy, were volunteers in the Impericuſe, and rendered themſelves extremely uſeful, the former by commanding ſome of her guns on the maindeck, and the latter in conducting one of the exploſion veſſels.

From Bell's Weekly Meſſenger of April 23.

War between Auſtria and France is no longer doubtful. We lay before our readers the following noble Proclamation of the Archduke Charles, juſt received by Government:

"Vienna, April 6.

"The protection of our country calls us to new exploits. As long as it was poſſible to preſerve peace by means of ſacrifices, and as long as theſe ſacrifices were conſiſtent with the ſecurity of the ſtate, and with the welfare of the people, the heart of our bountiful ſovereign ſuppreſſes every painful feeling in ſilence; but when all endeavors to preſerve happy independence from the inſatiable ambition of a foreign conqueror prove fruitleſs, when nations are falling around us, and when lawful ſovereigns are torn from the hearts of their ſubjects, when in fine the danger of univerſal ſubjugation threatens even the happy ſtates of Auſtria, and their peaceable fortunate inhabitants; then does our country demand its deliverance from us, and we ſtand forth in its defence.

"On you, my dear brother ſoldiers, are fixed the eyes of the univerſe, and of all thoſe who ſtill feel for national honor and national proſperity. You ſhall not ſhare the diſgrace of becoming tools of oppreſſion. You ſhall not carry on the endleſs wars of ambition under diſtant climes. ——Your blood ſhall never flow for foreign intereſts and foreign covetouſneſs; nor on you ſhall the curſe alight to annihilate innocent nations; and over the bodies of the ſlaughtered defenders of their country to pave the way for a foreigner to the uſurped throne. A happier lot awaits you; the liberties of Europe has taken refuge under our banners. Your victories will looſe its fetters, and your brothers in Germany, yet in the ranks of the enemy, long for their deliverance. You are engaged in a juſt cauſe, otherwiſe I ſhould not appear at your head.

"On the fields of Ulm and Marengo, where of the enemy ſo often remind us with oſtentatious pride, on theſe fields will we renew the glorious deeds of Wurtsburgh and Oſtrach, of Liptengen (Stockach) and Zurich, of Verona, of the Trebbia and Novi.—We will conquer a laſting peace for our country; but the great end is not to be attained without great virtues. Unconditional ſubordination, ſtrict diſcipline, perſevering courage, and unſhaken ſteadineſs in danger, are the companions of true fortitude. Only a union of will and a joint co-operation of the whole lead to victory.

"My ſovereign and brother has inveſted me with extenſive powers, to reward and to puniſh. I will be every where in the middle of you, and you ſhall receive the firſt thanks of your country from your general on the field of battle. The patriotiſm of many of the Auſtrian Nobility has anticipated your wants; this is a pledge to me for the fulleſt meaſure of the public gratitude; but puniſhment ſhall alſo, with inflexible rigor, fall on every breach of duty: merit ſhall meet with reward, and offence with admadverſion, without diſtinction of perſon or rank; branded with diſgrace ſhall the worthleſs perſon be caſt out to whom life is dearer than his and our honor. Adorned with the marks of public eſteem will I preſent to our ſovereign, to the world, thoſe brave men who have deſerved well of their country, and whoſe names I will ever carry in my heart.

"There remains no conſideration which I muſt put you in mind of; the ſoldier is only formidable to the enemy in arms; civil virtues muſt not be ſtrangers to him; out of the field of battle, towards the unarmed citizens and peaſants, he is moderate, compaſſionate and humane; he knows the evils of war, and ſtrives to lighten them. I will puniſh every wanton exceſs with ſo much greater ſeverity, as it is not the intention of our monarch to oppreſs neighboring countries, but to deliver them from their oppreſſors, and to form with their princes a powerful bond in order to bring about a laſting peace, and to maintain the general welfare and ſecurity. Soon will foreign troops in ſtrict unison with us attack the common enemy. Then, brave companions in arms!—honor and ſupport them as your brothers;—not by vain glorious high words, but by manly deeds do honor to the warrior; by intrepidity before the enemy you muſt ſhow yourſelves to be the firſt ſoldiers.

"Thus then ſhall I one day lead you back to your country, followed by the reſpect of the enemy, and by the gratitude of foreign nations, after having ſecured by your arms an honorable peace, when the ſatisfaction of our monarch, the approbation of the world, the rewards of valor, the bleſſings of our fellow-citizens, and the conſciouſneſs of deſerved repoſe await you.

"CHARLES, Archduke, Generaliſſimo."

The Britiſh took 800 French ſoldiers priſoners in the capture of the Saints, W. Indies.

The killed, wounded and miſſing of the Britiſh in the capture of the Saints is ſtated at 7—of the French at 200. Between 2 and 300 of the priſoners the Britiſh made at their requeſt, were permitted to enter the Britiſh ſervice. They were chiefly Germans.

The Emperor Napoleon has preſented to his Majeſty the King of Denmark 300 pieces of heavy ordnance, with the ammunition, belonging to the fortreſs of Stralſund, which is now razed.

Baron Von Eſſen will go as ambaſſador extraordinary from Denmark to Paris. A Ruſſian ambaſſador is alſo expected at the Swediſh capital.

London Paper.

AARON BURR AND MIRANDA.

The Spaniſh Junta Ambaſſador at London (Apodoca) having made repreſentations to the Britiſh miniſter for foreign affairs, that ſeveral perſons were in London who had in hand an enterpriſe againſt the Spaniſh colonies in South America, Miranda and Burr were particularly named; the former however contrived to obtain a paſſage in a veſſel bound to St. Chriſtophers, for which place it is ſaid he departed; Aaron Burr who was alſo ſummoned to appear did not make his eſcape, but preſented himſelf according to the Summons; and was notified that he muſt depart from England; he diſclaimed all connexion or participation with any deſign againſt the Spaniſh colonies, and claimed as a Britiſh ſubject, under magna charta, to remain unmoleſted in the country, to which he owed and avowed allegiance.

Upon it's being urged that he was an American citizen, and that he held a ſtation which put his character of an American beyond queſtion; he diſclaimed the character of an American citizen, and aſſerted that he was entitled to protection by his birth, under the Britiſh government, long before the Independence of America: and that although the Britiſh government might conniver at, it he maintained that the principles of Britiſh law and policy never admitted of expatriation; and could not refuſe to recognize the right of any ſubject born within the realm or its colonies.

He was nevertheleſs adviſed that he muſt depart the realm.

He thereupon ſignified that it was out of his power; that he was deſtitute of the funds requiſite to defray the expenſes of his removal, or diſcharge the obligations which he had already incurred.

Whether the funds were advanced or not, we have not learnt—but he was accompanied to one of the ports on the North Sea, and ſhipt for the continent.

We heard ſeveral weeks ago that he had taken his paſſage for the iſland of St. Chriſtophers, and was deſtined for Trinidad.

Lateſt Foreign News.—By the Boſton mail of to day we have received from our correſpondent in Portugal, a file of Liſbon newſpapers up to the 17th of May; the laſt of which contains the particulars of an engagement between the allies and the French, in which the latter were completely defeated; but the late hour at which the mail arrived, rendered it impracticable to procure a tranſlation for this evening. Theſe papers confirm the late intelligence that Bonaparte was haſtily withdrawing his troops from Spain.

Boſton, June 29.

LATEST FROM LISBON.

By the arrival yeſterday of the brig Favorite, captain Tracy, in 37 days from Liſbon, we have been favored with papers of that city to the 16th May. They ſpeak favorably of the ſtate of the combined Engliſh and Portuguese troops—that they had been ſo greatly encreaſed and diſciplined as to afford the ſtrongeſt aſſurances of ſafety to the inhabitants; that buſineſs had revived, and the public houſes again opened for the amuſement and accommodation of the people: that the Theatre was opened on the 14th May, for the firſt time ſince the departure of the Prince Regent.—Of the military operations of the armies and other information, the following ſketch from the lateſt date, will furniſh examples:—

Liſbon, May 16.

"Authentic letters from Lamego, of the date of the 9th current (May) affirm that the Portugueſe have rendered themſelves maſters of the paſſage of Regoa, and of other ſtrong poſitions on the oppoſite ſide of the Duero, and that our troops in conſequence have a free paſſage to the other ſide of the river.—The French have not given us battle.

"By a veſſel which ſailed from Oporto to Brazil and which has been obliged to enter the Tagus, we are aſſured that the French have retired from Amaranta, to take a poſition on the Duero.—In a few days we expect to give details of an action which cannot fail to take place.

"The captain of the ſame ſhip reports, that the Province of Gallicia has recovered its liberty;—that the French are ſhut up in the fort of Corunna, and that the troops of Romana ſurround them, and that there is no doubt that they will be obliged to ſurrender in a few days.

Copy of a diſpatch from Gen. Beresford, to his Excellency Pereira Forja.

"I have the honor to communicate to your Excellency, that on the 9th of May, I had caused a detachment to advance to take a favorable poſition between Amarnta and Mezao Frio, which are occupied by the French, having met with no other enemy than a ſmall detachment who fled.—I had an opportunity of placing four pieces of cannon in an excellent poſition. I ordered a conſtant fire upon the diviſion of the enemy, who at the end of two hours beat a retreat in great disorder. Major Harding, whom I had ſent to obſerve the effect of their fire, reports to have ſeen the French carry off five waggons of wounded. Their force conſiſted of 2500 infantry, and 500 cavalry commanded by Gen. Loiſon. I have ordered a reinforcement commanded by Gen. Francisco de Silveira, to keep this poſition, and to cut off the communication between Amaranta and Mezao Frio. The conduct of the enemy was horrible, having burnt all the villages and huts in his retreat. (Signed) BERESFORD.

Head-Quarters at Lumago, 11th May.

Copy of a letter, dated the 11th of May, at the advanced poſts.

"I have the honor of informing your Excellency that the French have abandoned Mezao Frio,—I ſhall do my utmoſt to maintain the good poſition I have taken.—By the advices that I have received I can ſay that the French have loſt 30 cavalry and 30 infantry, and that they have had a great number wounded and have abandoned one ammunition waggon and a great quantity of waggons loaded with proviſions.

(Signed)
FRANCISCO DE SILVEIRA.

Copy of a letter from his Excellency M. Villiers, miniſter of his Britiſh Majeſty to his Excellency Pereira Forjas, May 11th.

"I have this inſtant received the news that the troops commanded by Sir Arthur Welleſley have completely beaten the French to the number of 4000—The 16th Portugueſe regiment diſtinguiſhed themſelves—We have obliged the enemy to abandon their poſitions."

The following article is received in a letter from Liſbon, dated on the 17th of May:—"There have been been great rejoicings here to day, on account, as I underſtand by the Guards, of the French being defeated at, or near, Oporto."

In confirmation of the above intelligence, Capt. Stacy verbally reports, that the day previous to his departure, (18th May) official accounts were received of the retaking of Oporto by the Engliſh & Portugueſe troops;—that the French had retreated ſome miles from the city; but their communication with Spain being completely cut off, and ſurrounded by a ſuperior force, news was momently expected of their unconditional ſurrender and that great rejoicings and illuminations had taken place in conſequence of this agreeable intelligence; Capt. Stacy alſo reports, that the armies were in high ſpirits; and that the greateſt good will & unanimity exiſted between the Engliſh and Portugueſe armies.

A veſſel had juſt arrived from England bringing the agreeable intelligence of a final adjuſtment of our differences with England. Capt. Stacy did not underſtand that they had been officially received.

Extract of a letter from Liſbon, May 17.

"We have juſt received the glorious news that Oporto is retaken by the Engliſh; the retreat of the French is cut off, and their ſurrender as priſoners of war is inevitable."

Philadelphia, June 28.

Lateſt and moſt important intelligence from Spain.

We are indebted to a paſſenger on board the brig Expectation, captain Turner, in 11 days from Laguira, for the following intelligence.

Two days previous to the departure of the brig from Laguira, accounts were received of the arrival of a ſchooner in Porto Cavello, which left Cadiz on the 10th of May—at that date, all Catalonia had been evacuated by the French, and the patriots were in poſſeſſion of Barcelona and Fort Montjuy. The French troops who had been within twenty leagues of Seville, had retreated to Madrid.

The Miniſterial Gazette likewiſe contained the pleaſing intelligence of a ſevere engagement having taken place between the French and Auſtrians, in which the latter were completely victorious, the former having loſt thirty thouſand, killed, wounded and priſoners. Rumours were in circulation that Joſeph Bonaparte had left Madrid for Paris.

From Martinique.

Capt. Somerſell, in 13 days from Martinique, informs, that the inhabitants were all peaceable, and well diſpoſed towards the new government.—No attack has yet been made on Guadaloupe by the Britiſh.—A Britiſh ſquadron was blocking it as late as the 1ſt of June.

London May 6.

Letters, received from Holland, mention a report of the King of Saxony having been arreſted by order of Bonaparte, on ſuſpicion of having carried on a ſecret correſpondence with the Emperor of Auſtria, but this is not confirmed.

Lateſt from Liſbon—Captain O'Connor ſailed from Madeira on the 17th of May. On the 16th a Portuguese brig arrived there in 4 days from Liſbon, with diſpatches for the Goveanor, the contents of which had not tranſpired. We learn verbally that Liſbon remained in poſſeſſion of the Portuguese and Britiſh, who felt themſelves perfectly ſecure from any attack of the French : having ſent up the Tagus ſeveral gun brigs and veſſels that drew little water, in order to prevent the paſſage of the French, ſhould they make their appearance.

LONDON PARAGRAPHS.

A very ſingular circumſtance occurred on Friday night laſt to a ſon of Mr. Brooks, Staplehurſt, about nine years of age.—In his ſleep he went out of the garret window in which he uſually ſlept, got to the roof of the houſe, about the diſtance of ten feet over, and down the other ſide near forty feet, and jumped off full ſix feet from the ground ; he then went to a neighbouring houſe, two fields diſtant, called up the people, who were much alarmed at the noiſe he made, told them his fathers houſe was falling down, as the roof had fallen in, and the horſes were running out of the ſtables over ſome ſtubble ſtacks to get away ; the people of the houſe actually got up, knowing the voice of the boy, with the greateſt agitation of mind came down to him, and found him with nothing on but his ſhirt—they with difficulty awaked him, being himſelf conſiderably alarmed when diſcovering his ſituation.—The boy being hence aſked his feelings during the night's excurſion, ſays, he perfectly remembers when he got into his father's garden at the houſe, he looked up and thought himſelf out of danger from the ruins, and ſaw the horſes running away ; he went over two hedges, and only once pricked his foot, and got no other bruiſes whatever.—He was the next day perfectly well, and his friends have placed iron bars at the window to prevent the like in future.

Major Napier, who has lately returned from Corunna, ſtates, that after having been ſurrounded and wounded by the enemy, his life was ſaved by a French drummer, who for that act received a mark of diſtinction, always granted upon ſuch occaſions in the French army. When taken to Marſhal Soult's quarters, he received the attention his ſituation required ; the Marſhal's own ſurgeon was ordered to attend him, and he was deſired to draw for what money he choſe. The French Officers ſpoke in the higheſt terms of the Engliſh, and declared that they were as generous to their priſoners, as they were brave in the field. The French ſoldiers of every deſcription alſo ſpoke with the higheſt reſpect of Sir John Moore, for whoſe military talents, and maſterly retreat they expreſſed the greateſt admiration, and Marſhal Soult ordered an inſcribed ſtone to be placed on the ſpot where he received his mortal wound, as a tribute of reſpect to his memory.

A late publication makes the number of inhabitants on this globe to be 896 millions.—Of theſe, 226 millions are Chriſtians, that is, people generally denominated Chriſtians ; 10 millions of Jews, 210 millions of Mahometans, and 460 millions of Pagans. Of thoſe profeſſing the Chriſtian religion, there are 50 millions of Proteſtants, 30 millions of the Greek and Armenian Churches, and 90 millions of Catholics. If we calculate with the ancients, that a generation laſts 30 years, in that ſpace 896,000,000 will be born and die ; conſequently, 81 76 muſt be dropping into eternity every day : 34 7 every hour, or about 36 every minute.

The Miniſter of the French Treaſury, in the printed budget, felicitates his Emperor on the plunder and extortions of the army, in the following terms :—"Your Majeſty, Sire ! has protected your people both from the scourge and the burthen of war ; your armies have added to their harveſt of glory, one of FOREIGN CONTRIBUTION, which has aſſured their ſupport, their clothing, and their pay." If the Tyrant of Europe carry the ſcourge of war into Germany, as he has threatened to do, he will find it difficult to levy contributions, and maintain his army at free quarters.

An elderly lady, of the name of Pickering, died lately at Hackney, England, of a cancer in her nose, occaſioned by frequently picking her ear with the point of her ſciſſars.

On Saturday noon, John Wood, a native of Scotland, and a rigger by profeſſion, fell from the main yard of the India Packet into the hold, a height of 60 or 70 feet, and pitched with his bare head upon the ſtone ballaſt ; yet, to the aſtoniſhment of every perſon who ſaw him, he was taken up alive, carried to the Hoſpital, and there is good reaſon to hope that he will recover—a memorable inſtance of preſervation from death.

Peach Trees.—The following uſeful information is communicated for publication, for the benefit of thoſe who are in the habit of propagating the peach tree, by a gentleman of Newport (R. I.) who has been twice in South America :—The preventive againſt the ravages of the inſects which infeſt the peach tree in South America, found moſt effectual, is ſimply binding a piece of raw hide round the trunk of the tree, juſt above the ſurface of the earth. The hair ſide of the hide is placed outwards. ib.

Account of the progreſs of Herrings from the North Seas.

The north-pole is the native country of fiſh of paſſage, ſuch as herring, mackarel, plaice, &c. The ice which covers the ſeas that ſurround it, and never thaws, affords in thoſe places a peaceable retreat, which favours the aſtoniſhing fruitfulneſs of this little fiſh. The large ſpecies of fiſh, eſpecially thoſe that are voracious, want a free air for reſpiration, and cannot purſue the ſmaller ſort into their ſanctuaries, where they multiply ſo prodigiouſly, that at laſt for want of ſubſiſtence, they are forced to quit their retreat, in order to ſeek their food elſewhere. The large fiſh do not fail to wait for them at the extremity of the ice, toward the time of their migration ; they devour all they can catch, drive them cloſe into the coaſts, and purſue them in their route, while the birds of prey pour down upon them from every quarter. In conſequence of this perſecution, their march is always in columns, which are commonly as thick as they are broad. With regard to the herrings—they quit the ice of the north in the beginning of the year ; but the prodigious column which they form ſoon divides into two wings ; the right moves weſtward, ſo as to be near Iceland in the month of March ; the left—bends its courſe eaſterly, and comes down the north ſea to a certain latitude, where it divides into two other wings, the eaſterмoſt of which, pointing to the nothern cape, coaſts along Norway ; from whence it ſends off a diviſion by the ſtrait of the Sound into the Baltic, and another towards the country of Holſtein, Bremen, &c. and thence into the Zuyderzee. The weſtern wing, which is the ſtrongeſt, falls directly upon the iſles of Shetland and the Orkneys, and thither the Dutch go to wait the coming. All that eſcapes theſe dexterous fiſhers, continue their rout towards Scotland, and dividing again into two columns, one paſſes to the eaſt of it, and goes round England, detaching numerous diviſions to the coaſts of Friefland, Holland, Zeland Flanders and France, while the other moves to the weſtward of Scotland and Ireland. The remains of the whole weſtern wing, which have eſcaped the nets of the fiſhers, and the voracity of other fiſh and fowl, having at length rallied in the Channel, the column is formed anew, and then iſſues into the ocean ; from which, (without ſhewing itſelf again on the coaſt) it regains, like the firſt weſtern wing, towards winter, the polar ice ; under the protection of which, it repairs the loſs which the species has ſuffered ſince they abandoned it.

TO THE MEMORY OF GENERAL SIR JOHN MOORE.

As muſing the centinel ſtood on his ſtation,
Whilſt friends and companions are ſlumbering ſecure;
He ſighs o'er the fall of the flower of the nation,
The generous — the brave — the illuſtrious MOORE.
Now pale is his viſage, and altered each feature,
For peaceful he ſlumbers beyond the ſalt wave ;
Whilſt gently the ſew, the kind tribute of nature,
Is ſhed o'er the green-growing ſkirts of his grave.
His country ſtill grateful, his memory may cherish,
And fond admiration may ever rear his name ;
The laurels he won, ſtill through ages may flourish,
But when ſhall he hear the ſweet ſound of his fame ?
But why thus reflect o'er the fate that is glorious,
And why thus lament o'er the fall of the brave ?
For death, though repuls'd, ſhall at laſt be victorious,
And fearleſs, and fearleſs, muſt ſink to the grave.
As an oak, ſo he ſtood, in the dread hour of danger,
When, waving, its branches reſound in the gale ;
As the Sun, ſo he ſank, in the land of the ſtranger,
When glorious, it ſets o'er you weſtern blue vale.
Then Fame, to the tow'rs of thy gay gilded temple,
His honours diſpatch on thy grey ſtately wing ;
For the Soldier, inſpir'd by his Gen'ral's example,
Bra'es danger and death, for his country and King.

TOTAL NUMBER 502.] SATURDAY, JULY 29, 1809. [FOUR DOLLARS PER ANNUM.]

Proclamation.

GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:—

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Councillors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes of our ſaid Province, to the Provincial Parliament at our Town of York on the Fifth day of Auguſt now next enſuing, to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you —GREETING:—

WHEREAS by our Proclamation bearing date the twenty-third day of June last, We thought fit by and with the advice of our Executive Council to prorogue our Provincial Parliament until the Fifth day of Auguſt, now next enſuing, at which time in our town of York, you were held and conſtrained to appear; but WE taking into our Royal conſideration the eaſe and convenience of our loving ſubjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our executive Council, to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforeſaid, hereby convoking and by theſe preſents, enjoining you and each of you, that on the Twelfth day of September next enſuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our town of York, there to take into conſideration the ſtate and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada and therein to do as may ſeem neceſſary; herein fail not.

IN Teſtimony whereof, WE have cauſed theſe our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our ſaid Province to be hereunto affixed.— Witneſs our truſty and well beloved FRANCIS GORE, Eſquire, our Lieutenant Governor of our ſaid Province at York, this twenty eighth day of July in the year of our Lord one thouſand eight hundred and nine, and in the forty ninth of our Reign. F. G.

WM. JARVIS, Secretary.

Proclamation.

FRANCIS GORE, Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS by an Act paſſed in the forty fourth year of the reign of His preſent Majeſty, intitled, "An Act for granting to His Majeſty, a certain ſum of Money, for the further encouragement of the Growth and Cultivation of Hemp within this Province, and the exportation thereof;" It is (among other things enacted,) that at any time or times after the paſſing of the ſaid Act, it ſhall and might be lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon adminiſtering the Government by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council of this Province, to iſſue one or more Proclamations, and thereby to name ſuch and ſo many perſons within the Province as to him ſhould ſeem meet, as Commiſſioners for the purchaſing of merchantable Hemp, the growth of this Province. And whereas by an Act paſſed in the forty-eighth year of the reign of His preſent Majeſty, intitled, "An Act for the further encouragement of the Growth and Cultivation of Hemp within this Province, and for the exportation thereof;" it is enacted, that the ſum of Six Pounds and Ten Shillings per Ton, ſhould be the higheſt price to be paid and Merchantable Hemp, which might be thereafter purchaſed under and by virtue of the hereinbefore recited Act.

NOW KNOW ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That I FRANCIS GORE, Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of the ſaid Province of Upper Canada, do, by virtue of the ſaid hereinbefore firſt recited Act, and by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council of this Province, nominate, conſtitute and appoint, the Honorable James Baby, the Honorable Richard Cartwright, the Honorable Robert Hamilton, Members of the Legiſlative Council of this Province, Thomas Talbot, of Port Talbot, Eſq. and William Allan, of York, Eſquire, to the ſaid Province reſpectively, to be Commiſſioners for the purchaſing of Merchantable Hemp, the Growth of this Province, which ſaid Commiſſioners or any one or more of them are, and is hereby reſpectively authoriſed & empowered, to purchaſe ſuch Hemp, at & after the price or rate in manner and conformity to the Regulations and Proviſos contained in and according to the Statutes, in ſuch caſe made and provided; And to do, perform and execute all ſuch other matters & things, as they are authoriſed and required to do, in and by the ſaid recited Acts.

Given under my Hand and Seal at Arms at York, in the Province of Upper Canada, this thirteenth day of February, in the year of our Lord one thouſand eight hundred and nine, and in the forty-ninth year of His Majeſty's Reign.

Lateſt Foreign News.

LONDON, 16th May.—The French garriſon of Martinique were according to terms of the capitulation, carried to a French port, (Quiberoon) but as the French Government would not receive them agreeable to the ſtipulation, entered into, viz. to be exchanged man for man, and officer for officer, according to their rank, the whole Garriſon have been brought to England, and arrived yeſterday evening at Portſmouth.

Yeſterday Hamburg Papers to the 7th inſt. reached Town. They confirm the account of the capture of Warſaw by the Auſtrians.—Reports are circulated on the Continent with great induſtry, by the French agents, that the Ruſſians are going to take an active part againſt Auſtria, and that 70,000 Ruſſians are on the point of entering Gallicia. We are very much inclined to believe that Ruſſia will not take an active part againſt Auſtria; but even if ſhe were inclined to do it, ſhe has not we are convinced, a diſposable force of 70,000 men on the Frontiers of Gallicia.

DRESDEN, April 30—The Saxon army, under the Prince of Ponte Corvo, is at this moment on its march to Bohemia by Egra.

This city is again placed in a ſtate of defence, to ſecure it againſt the poſſible advance of the hoſtile corps.

Bucharеſt,—April 2.—About 70 000 Ruſſians are in Motion towards the Danube.

PRAGUE, April 28—His Majeſty has appointed Viſcount Von Wallis, Land Commiſſary-General in Bohemia. This nobleman has ſubſcribed 20,000 guilders in aid of the means adopted for increaſing the heavy cavalry, and this day he iſſued a Proclamation, in which among other things, he ſays—

The unexpected reſult of the ſanguinary battle of the 22d. is known. After an almoſt uninterrupted conteſt of five days a great ſuperiority of cavalry, on the evening of the 22d. decided the actions unfavorably for our arms. Diſaſters in war are unavoidable. The meaſures of defence, however, muſt not be relaxed. His Majeſty has appointed me Land Commiſſary General in the ſame manner as I filled that dignity in 1805, and has been pleaſed to empower me to enjoin the execution of this office with the command of the troops, and alſo to direct the zeal of the inhabitants of Bohemia to the augmentation of the army. Born a Bohemian, I ſhall, in a few days, in compliance with His Majeſty's commands, join the army myſelf. &c,

LETTER

From Bonaparte to the Duke of Sudermania.

"My Brother,

I have received your Royal Highneſs's letter of the 17 h of March. You are right to believe that I wiſh Sweden to enjoy tranquility, happineſs and peace with her neighbors, neither Ruſſia, Denmark nor myſelf, were eager to wage war againſt Sweden, but on the contrary, did every thing in our power to ward off diſaſters which it was eaſy to foreſee. I have taken the earlieſt opportunity to acquaint thoſe Courts with your Royal Highneſs's ſentiments and views, and truſt that they will perfectly agree with me in opinion, and that it will not be our fault if Sweden ſhould not be reſtored to the enjoyment of happineſs and peace.

As ſoon as I ſhall be informed of the intentions of my allies, I will not fail to communicate them to your Royal Highneſs. In the mean time, you will not entertain one doubt of the reſpect which I entertain for your nation—I ſay with for its happineſs—and of the high eſteem with which your character and virtues have inſpired me for your Royal Highneſs.

I pray to God to keep you, my brother, in his holy guard.

Your good Brother.

NAPOLEON."

LEIPZIC, April 30—We have received certain intelligence that the Prince of Ponte Corvo will this day enter Bohemia, while the Duke of Auritadt at the ſame time advanced through the Upper Palatinate.

LONDON May 18.—Laſt night Dutch papers to the 14th inſt. reached town. They contain the Fourth Bulletin of the French army, which is dated from Brannau, the 1st of May.

It was reported a few days ago that the progreſs of the Auſtrians in Poland was ſanctioned by the Emperor Alexander, and that the latter had ſince declared againſt France. This Report was again in circulation yeſterday; but we have not heard any thing to induce us to rely upon its authenticity.

Yeſterday Marquis Wellesley took leave of his Majeſty, previous to his leaving England, upon his Embaſſy to Spain.

PARIS, May 9—Intelligence of the 6th and 7th, received from Italy by the Telegraph, ſtates, that the Viceroy was on the point of purſuing the Auſtrian army, which had precipitately fled. On the 4th, the head Quarters of the Viceroy were at Treviſo, and the country between Milan and Venice is quite free.

Letters from Havanna mention the arrival of the St. Paula, of 74 guns, from Vera Cruz, with ſeven millions of Dollars for the uſe fo the Spaniſh Patriots, and two millions for Havanna; and that Mr. Anderſon, the American agent, had been ordered by government to quit the iſland.

Lateſt from Portugal.

The brig Two Brothers, Captain Gardner, had arrived at Beverly, in 37 days from Liſbon. Her accounts ought to have been to the 28th May, ten or twelve days lateſt.—We have not received either papers or letters by her; but learn, that the French were ſaid to be in conſiderable force about 200 miles from Liſbon; and that the Engliſh and Portugueſe army (amounting it is ſaid, to about 45,000 men) continued in high ſpirits.

Since writing the above, we have ſeen a letter from which the following is an extract:

"Liſbon, May 27, 1809.

"This Kingdom is nearly entirely free of the enemy, who has been driven to the neceſſity of eſcaping to Spain. Very ſanguine hopes are entertained that this country is perfectly ſafe, as long as Auſtria is able to cope with the French power."

Liſbon May 13.

The 14th inſt. being the anniverſary of the birth of the Prince Regent, who is as much the ſovereign of our choice, as he is by inheritance, it was celebrated in a brilliant manner. The ſhips were dreſſed, and ſaluted; the troops were in full dreſs on parade, and fired a fue de joie; and the Caſtle, Theatre, &c. were illuminated at night.

We have accounts that the inhabitants of Vienna (a Portugueſe ſeaport) have riſen againſt the French; and that Tuy, Valencia, and all the Diſtrict between the rivers Lime and Minho is again in the power of its lawful ſovereigns.

The laſt papers from Seville mention that they have accounts there of an inſurrection at Marſeilles and Toulon.

Tarragona, April 10.

General Joachim Blake, Commander of the Diviſion of Tortola, has written to our General Reding, under date of April 4, at Tortoſa, an account of ſeveral ſmall affairs in which the Patriots have been ſucceſsful.

The accounts from Tarragona are to April 17, on which day, a very animating Proclamation was iſſued by Gen. Reding. The French appear to make no progreſs in the South of Spain.——In the middle of March, they were about to take Tarragona.

News, April 4.

We have juſt learnt that between 500 and 2000 of the Gallo Italian troops in this Province have deſerted, and joined the brave Patriots at Tarragona.

The Seville dates are to April 26—ſeveral days the lateſt. The Spaniſh Junta was ſtill there, and had juſt iſſued a Proclamation, which ſhews that their confidence of eventual ſucceſs, and their deteſtation of thoſe who are endeavoring to force a King upon them is undiminiſhed.

Francisco Palafox, brother probably of the immortal hero of Saragoſſa, has publiſhed an animating addreſs to the brave Aragonese.

Letters from the Spaniſh Gen. Cueſta are to April 19.

Joſeph Bonaparte ſoi disant King of Spain has written a letter to the Supreme Junta, lamenting the conteſt in Spain, and the misfortunes it had produced, and propoſing that Commiſſioners ſhould be appointed to negociate for tranquilizing the country.

The Junta anſwered, that all their calamities were attributed to the criminal ambition of the Bonapartes: that Joſeph would reſtore tranquility if he pleaſed by withdrawing the French troops and himſelf, and returning to the country the ſovereign it acknowledged; and they had made oath to accept of no other terms.

The Portugueſe paper has many accounts of donations for carrying on the war for their independence.

BOSTON, July 1.

Further from Portugal.

Since Wedneſday, an arrival from Liſbon has given additional evidence of the change of affairs in Portugal;—and food for hope that the patriotic cauſe in Spain is not ſo deſperate as it had appeared. After the battle of Corunna, Marſhal Soult overran Gallicia, entered Portugal and took poſſeſſion of Oporto. Soon after it was obſerved, that his progreſs had become ſlow and cautious, and indicated either that he had become too weak to attempt Liſbon, and was waiting reinforcements, or that ſome unexpected obſtacles, ſuch as want of ſupplies, ſickneſs, &c. had interpoſed to check his career. We have no regular details of his operations; but it appears, he did not croſs the Douro. The Engliſh and Portugueſe ſeeing his ſituation, advanced from Liſbon to harraſs him. Gen. Beresford, it ſeems, made a feint to menace the French flank by a detour to the right, and by actually ſending a party, under the Portugueſe Gen. Silviera, acroſs the Douro, near Lamego, 50 miles above Oporto, to drive in the French outpoſts, and to occupy a poſition near Amarenta, in the rear of the French. Another column probably commanded

On the propoſal of the deputies, the count of Salvivar and D. Joſeph Maria de Aenes, this committe reſolved at its ſeſſion on the 9th inſt. that public notice ſhould be given, That the 20th of the preſent month is fixed as the peremptory and final period for the embarkation of the French who are to leave this Iſland; it being underſtood that ſuch as ſhall not have done ſo, ſhall next day be placed on board his Majeſty's ſhip Olivia in this bay. And the inhabitants of this city are notified that thoſe who know of the ſaid French being concealed, ſhall give information to the Commiſſary of the ward in which the houſe is ſituated; and alſo the houſe-keepers and inhabitants will take notice, that if they do not give information, as is expected from them, they will ſuffer the penalty due to their offence.

By the Revolution, Love, arrived at Philadelphia from Teneriffe, we learn, that the accounts from Spain received there were highly favorable to the cauſe of the Patriots. Some time previous to his ſailing, the advices from Cadiz were down to the beginning of May. Fifteen hundred French priſoners had arrived at Teneriffe, and orders were iſſued for receiving an additional number.

At the ſame moment that Bonaparte is diſſolving the monaſteries and nunneries of Spain, thereby captivating thoſe diſciples of Dr. Pangloſs, who in a ſmall modicum of incidental good, finds an apology for all the evils he inflicts on mankind, it is not a little ſurpriſing that he ſhould have revived the ſyſtem of religious ſeclution in France. By a decree of the 29th of March, two nunneries are eſtabliſhed, one at Ecouen, to receive 300 young ladies; the other, containing an equal number, at St. Denis. They are to conſiſt of daughters, ſiſters, neices, or couſins german, of members of the Legion of Honor.—The only perſons of the maſculine gender who are to have acceſs to theſe damſels are, the Princes of the Blood Imperial, and the Grand Dignitaries of the Empire.

It is ſaid, that ſome improvements in the army are meditated by Sir D. Dundaſs. There is to be a repeal of all the numberleſs orders relative to dreſs, which is in future to be ſimple and uniform, and of the cheapeſt materials; in every corps throughout the army, in cavalry regiments and guards, as well as in the regiments of the line. No officers, with the exception of field officers, are to wear two epaulets. There is alſo to be a ſmall reduction of our cavalry force; and a conſiderable reduction of the foot guards, which will be allowed to drop to the original number, 3 regiments or 3 battalions for duty in London.

The daughter of Addiſon, by Lady Warwick, who died a few years ago, left 500l. for raiſing a monument to his memory. Lord Bradford one of her executors, allotted the taſk to Mr. Weſtmacott, adding 500l. to the bequeſt: and a fine ſtatue of Addiſon is now placed in Poet's Corner, Weſtminſter-Abbey.

A Watchmaker in Dublin, has diſcovered by repeated experiments, that plantina poſſeſſes, on account of its imperceptible expanſion, a great ſuperiority over other materials for making the pendulum ſpring of watches, and alſo compenſation curbs. Arſenic muſt not be employed in conſolidating it, as it then would be liable to expanſion.

A patent has been taken out for making iron caſks or tanks, as ſubſtitutes for the wooden caſks on ſhipboard. The advantages are ſaid to be theſe; the iron tanks being made either ſquare or octangular, will occupy one third leſs ſtowage, and are five times as durable as the wooden veſſels now in uſe; they will prevent all leakage, as well as all damage from rats and inſects. We underſtand that a trial is about to be made, on a large ſcale in ſome veſſels now going to the South-Sea Fiſhery. The preſent high price of ſtaves is greatly in favor of this ſpeculation.

After the relation of ſome circumſtances which attended the dying moments of the deteſtable and chriſtian T. Paine, the laſt moments of the virtuous ADDISON. are contraſted in the following terms, in the N. Y. Spectator.

"At the cloſe of his life, and with the beſt views of his diſſolution, he ſent for his ſtepſon, the young Earl of Warwick. Of his interview with the young Earl, Dr. Young has given the following account.

After a long and manly, but vain ſtruggle with his diſtemper, he diſmiſſed his Phyſicians, and with them all hopes of life. But with his hopes of life he diſmiſſed not his concern for the living, but ſent for a youth nearly related, and finely accompliſhed, but not above being the better for good impreſſions from a dying friend. He came; but life now glimmering in the ſocket, the dying friend was ſilent; after a decent and proper pauſe, the youth ſaid "dear Sir! you ſent for me; I believe and hope that you have ſome commands; I ſhall hold them in ſacred." May ſtanding ſtars not only hear, but feel the reply! ſtrongly graſping the youth's hand, "See in what peace a chriſtian can die" He ſpake with difficulty and ſoon expired."

One of the Sources of injuſtice is flander.

There are men who would not game another out of his money, nor forge a Deed, though they could obtain his eſtate with ſecurity, nor run him through the body; yet ſhall without ſcruple butcher his reputation with ſlander. An unbecoming levity of converſation and behaviour is natural to many, who thereby do great harm without once being aware of it; but this, though a great evil in ſociety, is innocence if compared with the malevolence of others. There are men of ſuch ra[illegible]corous hearts, of ſuch malicious natures, that they ſeem to have nothing human but the form; wretches, who to gratify their ſpleen, or to indulge a pique, tear in pieces the good name of thoſe whoſe merit is perhaps ſuperior to their own.

All the moral writers condemn this cenſuring, cruel humour; and a celebrated Dramatic Poet* deſcribes very beautifully the ſuperior loſs of reputation to that of riches. A man that is robbed on the highway ſees his loſs, and knows the worſt of it; but he who is levelled at from afar, or receives a ſtab in the dark, neither diſcovers his enemy nor knows where the miſchief will end.

* He who ſteals my purſe, ſteals trafh.
'Twas mine, 'tis his; and has been a ſlave to thouſands:
But he who ſtiches from me, my good name,
Robs me of that, which not enriches him,
But makes me poor indeed ——Shakeſpeare.

The following Impromptu has been publiſhed, on Bonaparte's politeneſs in ſending over packets of Bulletins:

WE thank you for theſe Bulletins,
Great Emperor & King and Sir;
And hope you long may have them to A Bulletin yourſelf! Lon. Paper.

Lateſt Foreign News.

New York, July 10.

LATE AND IMPORTANT NEWS,

FROM LISBON AND CADIZ.

Capt Hague, of the ſhip Paragon, ſailed from Liſbon on the 7th June, and informs us that the news of the ſurrender of Oporto to the Engliſh, whereby a French army of of 25,000 troops were made priſoners, reached Liſbon on the firſt of June; and that, in conſequence thereof, the Britiſh merchants, &c. who had left Oporto previous to the French taking poſſeſſion of it, were returning.

It was alſo reported, that the Auſtrians had obtained a complote victory over the French in which the latter loſt 25,000 men, including the killed, wounded and priſoners.

A conſiderable force of cavalry arrived at Liſbon on the 2d of June from England, deſtined for the interior of Portugal; and it was ſuppoſed they would proceed to Spain. The Britiſh and Spaniards were uſing every exertion to clear the country of French, and it was ſuppoſed they would completely effect their object, calculating that Auſtria would find ſufficient employment for the army of Bonaparte. It was alſo reported at Liſbon, that Ruſſia had declared war againſt France.

Captain Johnſon, of the ſhip Caroline from Cadiz, informs us that he had a Seville Gazette, which he underſtood contained the Ruſſian declaration of war, but that he was boarded on his paſſage by a Britiſh frigate, and gave it to the boarding officer.

A Britiſh brig of war had arrived at Liſbon from Malta, and brought advices that on the 16th of April a ſevere battle was fought on the Tyrol between the Auſtrians and French, that the advanced guard of the Auſtrian army, conſiſting of 25,000 men, was twice repulſed by the French army of 50,000 men, under command of Prince Eugene Beauharnois that the Arckduke John came up with a corps of reſerve of 20,000 men, and entirely defeated the French, who loſt 20,000 killed, wounded, and taken priſoners, among the wounded was Eugene Beauharnois.

St. Andero has been retaken by the Spaniards.

Marſhal Soult, whoſe army ſurrendered to the Britiſh and Portugueſe, has made his eſcape.

By the ſhip Caroline, 39 days from Cadiz, Seville Gazettes to the 28th of May are received at the office of the Mercantile Advertiſer; and by the Paragon, from Liſbon, Portugueſe papers to the 5th of June; from which the following articles are tranſlated.

Extraordinary Gazette of the Government.

Seville, May 27, 1809.

By Official Letters received from Trieſte, dated 20th April, the Supreme Central Junta have advice of the Archduke John having beaten the French army of 50,000 men, under the command of the Vice Roy of Italy, Beauhornois, at Saſille, Poria, and Corneglíano.

They have alſo received officially through the ſame channel, advice of RUSSIA having declared in favor of AUSTRIA, againſt FRANCE.

Liſbon, June 1.

The Army commanded by General Romana, attacked the French at Meira, and followed them to Paradas. Here the enemy hid themſelves in a foreſt, which we ſurrounded, fired on them and killed many. They then retreated to Lugo, leaving in our hands 8 pieces of cannon, &c. Our troops followed the enemy to the gates, ſurrounded the city, placing ſtrong detachments at the gates, expecting that it will ſurrender by capitulation or compuiſion. Fortunately the apoſtate Mozzriado, who has ſo long been praiſing king Joſeph in Aſtorga, is now ſhut up in Lugo.

P. S. This day at 7 o'clock in the evening we have received the official account of the retaking of Lugo, by Marſhal Nicola Mahi, ſecond in command of the left, and commander in chief in the abſence of the Marquis of Romana. In this glorious action, the reſiſtance made by the enemy was obſtinate, but they were defeated after looſing 4000, men, in killed wounded and priſoners.

June 2.

Letters from Elvas of the 28th ult. mention that General Cueſta had advanced his head quarters from Monalterio to Fuerte del Marſtre.

The Dutch Papers mention a battle in Polonid; Archduke Ferdinand commanded there, but ſay nothing of its reſult, a convincing proof that the French were defeated, and it is believed that Monsovia had fallen into his hands.

We learn from Seville, that it is certain, that peace has been made between Ruſſia and England, and that Ruſſia has entered into the coalition againſt the grand usurper of Europe. With impatience, we expect a confirmation, as we have good reaſon to give credit to this news which is given by Col. Alava, who had arrived at Seville. In England, this event, as late as the 13th of May, was conſidered probable.

June 4.

Account of the battle fought on the 16th of April, near Fontanafreda.

In their retreat the French left one regiment of the line, No. 35, in Padernone. This regiment commanded by adjutant-general Dagomir and Col. Breſſieau, was ſurpriſed by a ſtrong body of Auſtrians, and compelled to ſurrender.

The Auſtrians in their march met in Saſille a French army of 35,000 men, commanded by the Vice-Roy Eugene Beauharnois, and the General of Brigade Gillet, with 80 pieces of artillery, which together with the reinforcements brought by general Cervelloni, who came from Italy with 15,000 men, making a total of 50,000 men. The Auſtrians commanded by the Archduke John commenced the attack with an army of 35,000 and were twice obliged to fall back; but having been joined by 20,000 men from the Tyrol, from Seravale, and Ceuada, of infantry and cavalry, attacked the French army in the rear. The French army was thus placed between two fires. The battle laſted the whole day of the 16th. The French after loſing a great number of men abandoned the field to the victorious Auſtrians. Scarcely 15,000 men eſcaped, whoſe retreat was favored by the conflagration of the village Ronco, which they ſet on fire to favor their retreat. The loſs of the enemy was in killed, wounded and prisoners, upwards of 20,000 men. The Vice Roy was wounded, a general Serras was made priſoner with a number of officers of rank. The Italian regiment called Velites laid down their arms but were afterwards compelled by the French cavalry to take them up again. Soon after this regiment was deſtroyed by the Auſtrian cavalry. The loſs of the Auſtrians was conſiderable. General Gindlay was wounded after having two horſes killed under him. Many of the ſtaff officers were killed and wounded, Some of the regiments remain with very few officers, moſt of them having fallen in the action.

The Auſtrian army continued advancing. In ſhort the field was left completely in the power of the Auſtrians. Upwards of 5000 wounded French men have been found between Saſille and Paderone, amongſt whom is General Desaix, who was wounded and made priſoner in the firſt action, and was ſent to the houſe of Signior Galvani.

Lateſt from England.—Halifax papers received at Boſton on Sunday laſt, contain London news to the 10th of May. The only article which the Boſton papers contain, beſide the French bulletins, is the following from a London paper of the 10th.

LONDON May 10.

It is with the utmoſt ſatisfaction that we announce to our readers the arrival of Prince Strahremberg in town, as ambaſſador from the Court of Vienna. His Highness arrived in London about twelve o'clock this day, and immediately had an interview with Mr. Canning. He came through Holland, and after escaping innumerable dangers, was picked up in a fiſhing boat by one of our cruisers. The intelligence which he has brought reſpecting the operations in Bavaria, we are happy to say, differ moſt materially from the accounts given in the French Bulletins. He says, that the loſſes ſuſtained by the French in the ſeveral actions, were quite as great as thoſe of the Auſtrians, and that as late as the 28th ultimo, the Fr. were unable to advance, having ſuffered ſo ſeverely.—His Highness is in high ſpirits, and by no means conſiders the advantages which the French obtained as deciſive of the fate of the campaign. He alſo ſtates, that in Italy, the Auſtrians had obtained ſome very important advantages, and that the whole population of the Tyrol have riſen to a man in favor of Auſtria.

We have received a letter from our correſpondent, dated Liſbon, June 5, enclo-ſing a paper of that city of the 4th, ſtating the arrival of a Britiſh brig in fifteen days from Malta. with the official news of the declaration of war on the part of Ruſſia againſt France——Our Correſpondent alſo notices, in a triumphant ſtrain, the brilliant ſucceſs of the Auſtrians on the Tyrol, and the ſurrender of the Fr. army in Portugal, to the Britiſh and Portuguese troop. Soult, with a few of his troops, had it is ſaid, made their escape. This, with the taking of Oporto and St. Anuero, occaſioned the rejoicing at Cadiz.

N. Y. Spectator.

LONDON, May 12.

If the Archduke Charles has not ſucceeded at the outſet ſo fully as we could wiſh, though he is far from being overwhelmed with any thing like a diſaſterous defeat, or ſuffering any thing but what may be retrieved; we have the conſolation to know that the Archduke Ferdinand has taken Warſaw which is at preſent his head quarters. He had, under him 40,000 men. The archduke Charles has under his command, an army of 110,000 men, independent of any loſſes he may have ſuffered in the late actions. The Auſtrian army is in nine diviſions of about 32,000 each. Bellegrade has the firſt—the Archduke Ferdinand the ſecond—the Archduke Charles has three—the Archduke Louis two—the Archduke John two. There is beſides a Militia, which forms an army of reſerve. The Auſtrians behaved very bravely in the late conflict with the French.

May 15.

We have nothing to add to the accounts we published on Saturday of the capture of Warſaw, by the Auſtrian army of the Archduke Ferdinand, except that a Poliſh regiment laid down their arms at Tarcyn, and that the garriſon of Warſaw, on its retreat to Kalish, had been purſued for two days, and that many priſoners were taken.

In Germany, we learn by advices brought on Saturday by an Auſtrian meſſenger, who left Holigoland on the 7th inſt. that the Archduke Charles, ſo late as the 28th ult. continued on the Rugen between Champ and Stollway, where he was joined by the diviſions of gens. Kienau and Bellegrade, and a

At all events we truft that Bonaparte, will fhortly have to repent of his temerity in having advanced fo far, leaving in a manner the formidable army of the Archduke Charles in his rear, and in this hope we are encouraged, by all the private advices received by the laft conveyance.

The Emperor of Auftria we are happy to find, is not in the leaft difmayed by the refult of the firft operations in Bavaria. His Imperial majefty has iffued a proclamation from Lintz, in which he calls out the fecond or referve militia, intending to place himfelf at their head—The Hungarian inſurrection army had been aſſembled at Preſburgh, and every meaſure of his government evinces a determination and energy correſponding with the danger which menaces his throne.

Private advices ſtate that the inſurrection in Heſſia has become very formidable.

Proclamation of General Gellechick, to the inhabitants of Tyrol.

Tyrolians!

If you are yet, what you have been, not long ago, if you remember the happineſs, the proſperity, and the true liberty which you have enjoyed under the beneficient ſceptre of Auſtria, if the voice of a General whom you acknowledge as one of yours, when in 1799 he ſaved you from imminent danger, by the victory of Feldkirch which the following year rendered ſecure from attack, your frontiers from Arlberg, to the valley of Kiratendil, if all this is not extinguiſhed from your memory, hear what I am going to ſay, hear and be penetrated.

Your legitimate Lord, I ought to ſay your father, ſeeks you, come and place yourſelves under his banners, his heart bleeds to ſee you under foreign domination, you his faithful ones return to the children of Auſtria, do not miſunderſtand this precious title!

Auſtrian armies more numerous than ever, more animated and more patriotic will enter your country, look upon them as brethern as children of the ſame father, unite with them and follow the example of the people who render homage to the Auſtrian throne. In a word, behave in every thing ſo as you have done, recently to the admiration of the whole of Europe.

Tyrolians! God is with us, we do not ſeek new conqueſts, but we will bring back to the boſom of our Imperial and gracious father, brethren who have been detached from him: nothing will reſiſt us, if we unite for our happineſs and for the preſervation of our exiſtence. Believe me Tyrolians God is with us.

Revolution at Buenos Ayres.—We have long ſuſpected that Liniers was exerting himſelf to the utmoſt in favor of the family of Bonaparte, and we now learn by letters from Rio Janiero, of the late date of February 6, that a revolution took place on the 1ſt of January, in which Liniers triumphed, and is now completely maſter as Viceroy of the city. It ſeems that the marriage of his daughter with a young man of the name of Perichon, which was contrary to law, diſguſted the people generally, who were beſides, very deſirous to elect a Junta, in imitation of Seville. The Cabildo met, and the uſual elections took place on the firſt January; after it previous to diſpoſitions having been made by arming, &c. on both ſides, to decide the matter by force, in caſe of neceſſity, a negociation took place between the Cabildo and Liniers, regarding his laying down the ſovereign authority. At length the heads of that body went to the Fueſte to treat perſonally with the Viceroy, when up went the draw-bridge, and they were quickly marched through the Puerto del Sucorro to the water ſide, put on board a ſchooner, and have been ſent off, nobody knows where; but it is ſuppoſed that the voyage was not a long one, ſince it is now known there were very few proviſions on board. The names of thoſe who then put themſelves into the trap are—Alzaga Villamuva, St. Coloma, Varcia, and another.

As a proof that this revolution is altogether in favor of France, we need only ſtate, that the above mentioned Perichon is a Frenchman by birth, and is the Perſon who was charged by Liniers with diſpatches for Bonaparte, giving an account of his defence of Buenos Ayres againſt the Britiſh under Whitelocke, and was, on his return from France through Spain, on his way back to South America, in May or June of laſt year, apprehended in Andaluſia, by order of the Junta of Seville, and confined in Cadiz, from whence it would appear he effected his eſcape.

The event which has thus taken place, though unfortunate for the patriotic cauſe of Spain, has removed every difficulty which obſtructed the courſe of operations that it might behove the Government of this country to purſue, in concert with the Prince of the Brazils. Monte Video ſtill holds out againſt Liniers, and muſt be prevented from falling under his authority, or the whole of Spaniſh America may be loſt.

It is to be apprehended, that the Fr. ſquadron which ſailed ſome time ſince from L'Orient, may have proceeded to the Rio de la Plata. Bells Meſſenger.

Ingenuous Invention—On Tueſday, Lt. Brown, of the Royal Navy, croſſed the Thames, and paſſed through one of the arches of Weſtminſter bridge in the preſence of ſome thouſand ſpectators in a canvaſs batteau, invented by Col. Brown, of St. Vincent's for the uſe of the army with 30 perſons.

This military batteau is made of prepared canvaſs, ſo as to be impervious to water.—It is 17 feet long, 3 wide, and 3 deep, and when loaded with 30 perſons, only draws three inches water. It is capable of conveying 100 ſoldiers, with their arms, accoutrements and baggage, across the wideſt river provided they lay down, and ſo if fitting.

This batteau weighs only ſixty pounds and can be fitted up and taken to pieces in three minutes ſo that it forms an eaſy load for a man on a march.

Two laſhed together, are capable of conveying the heaviest piece of ordinance; and a number connected together, form a bridge for the paſſage of cavalry.

This invention of Colonel Brown's has been highly approved of by the Duke of York, Lord Moira, Lord Mulgrave, Ld. Chatham, and Sir Arthur Welleſly. The Colonel, we underſtand is fitting up one of his batteaux with two 6 pounders, one in the head and the other in the ſtern.—London Paper of April 15.

Longevity.—There died in February, 1805, at Cloves, near Athenry, in Ireland, of a ſhort illneſs, Dennis Conrohee, of Ballendangin, aged 117 years.—The life of this man was remarkable, not only for its duration, but from its exemption from moſt of the evils of humanity. He retained his mental and corporeal faculties in full vigor to the laſt.—Three weeks before his death he walked out and home 26 miles in one day, and read the ſmalleſt print without glaſſes as diſtinctly and eaſily as a boy of 16. Two days previous to his death, he never remembered to have any complaint or ſickneſs whatever, tooth-ache only excepted. The firſt fifty years of his life paſſed entirely from even the tooth-ache. After that period his teeth began to decay; but in the courſe of 15 years a new ſet appeared, of which he continued in poſſeſſion till his death.

Of his moral character, it is only recorded, that he was ſtedfaſtly an honeſt man; ſober, regular, and perfectly upright in his deport,—His mind was naturally ſtrong and acute, not diſciplined by literary education, but enriched by obſervation and experience. He ſpent his life in the cultivation of the ſame farm, the property of which he had acquired early in life, and bent his attention chiefly to agriculture, in which he was generally allowed to be eminently proficient.—He was one of the earlieſt who introduced and propagated the potatoe, which he cultivated for the laſt ſeventy years.

He was ſeven times married.—He was firſt married at the age of 21. With his laſt wife who ſurvived him, he lived longer than the previous ones, that is, 26 years, having married her when nine-y three years old. In general they were ſhort lived, and were young women of his immediate neighborhood.—The years of his widowhood, had, taken together, amounted to 11.—All the children born to him were 48 which is on an average, one for every two years, ſince the firſt year of his marriage.—He had three ſets of twins; and his third wife bore him eleven children in twelve years.

His grand children were in number 236, which is a little more than 5 to each child.—His great-grand children amounted to 944, which is more proportionally, than 8 to each child. He had 25 great-great-grand children, the oldeſt of whom is now 4 years old. Of 1253 deſcendants of his body, 487 ſurvived him.

By his laſt wife he had 6 ſons, the youngeſt of whom is a fine lad of 18.

Theſe facts are extracted from a regiſter kept by the old man, of the names, births, marriages, deaths, and general ſituation of his wives and deſcendants. The keeping of this regiſter was his principal amuſement; and his deſcendants being ſcattered far and wide over the earth, he took great pains in making the liſt as complete.

YORK, AUGUST 5, 1809.

WE this week, have received the Light Houſe on Gibraltar Point ſo far finiſhed, as to be applied to its original purpoſe. This Beacon is eſſentially material to our Lake navigation, and to the protection ſeverally of veſſels, and their crews and paſſengers, muſt be generally acceptable, and much approved of. The Building from being ſubſtantially conſtructed of handſome Stone, holds out a ſtrong preſumption, that its duration will long ensure as well its great utility, as is known neceſſity. The view from the Garriſon and Town, being in a great meaſure bounded by the Timber growing on the Peninſula, to obviate it and to remedy the privation, his Excellency has directed (in addition to the intention of its common use) that signals be hoisted at the Light House, whenever a veſſel bears in ſight of it, for the deſired information of perſons here, in any wiſe intereſted.

The Papers received yeſterday evening, contain various reports, ſome particularly flattering, and others unfavorable to the operations in Germany.—The Capture of the Toulon Fleet by Lord Collingwood, is the only article now extracted; the next weeks Gazette will give the general details.

New-York, July 18.

CAPTURE OF THE TOULON FLEET.

Captain Datheill, of the ſloop Henry, 8 days from Bermuda, (arrived here on Sunday) informs us, he left Martinique on the 27th of June, and on that day advices were received there of the capture of the Toulon fleet, by Lord Collingwood, conſiſting of 5 ſail of the line, 6 or 7 frigates, and 30 transports, with the French garriſon of Barcelona on board.—They were ſent into Gibraltar.

A veſſel arrived at Martinique, having ſpoken on her paſſage, an American ſhip from Gibraltar, the captain of which ſtated, that Lord Collingwood arrived at Gibraltar previous to his ſailing, with the French fleet.

A letter received from St. Croix, by the Richard, of the 2d of July, confirms the above account of the capture of the French fleet.

THE Subſcriber begs leave to inform his friends and the public, that he has taken the Shop in this Town, lately occupied by Mr. Jordan Poſt, Watchmaker; where he now carries on the TIN and SILVER SMITHS BUSINESS in their various branches. He has now on hand a great variety of uſeful Tin utenſils. Store keepers either in the Town or country, will be ſupplied at a large diſcount from the retail prices. Any orders in this line with which he may be favored, will be gratefully attended to and executed with neatneſs and diſpatch.

Lateſt Foreign News.

From London Papers of 20th May.

The German papers contain the 7th, 8th and 9th Auſtrian Official Reports. Theſe admit, that the French had in general, the advantage, though not to the extent which their Bulletins hold out; and if credit can be given to the ſubſequent intelligence received by way of Hamburg, the Archduke Chs. has been eminently ſucceſsful. He is ſtated after 3 days hard fighting, to have driven the enemy 30 miles back, and to have taken or deſtroyed upwards of 40,000 of their troops. In Italy, the Archduke John is ſaid to have gained on the 15th and 16th ult. a deciſive victory over the French; who loſt 8000 killed and 10,000 wounded and taken; 20 pieces of cannon and 3 Eagles were taken. The Auſtrians loſt 10,000 men, killed wounded & priſoners.

Jerome Bonaparte has iſſued a proclamation, ordering the inhabitants of Weſtphalia, Heſſia and Saxony, to be deprived of every offenſive weapon—even of knives, forks, &c.

In Spain, the cauſe of the Patriots has aſſumed a more favorable aſpect than for ſome time paſt. The French are conſtantly marching off a part of their army for Italy.

The French General Laſon, was killed in the ſtreets of Oporto, by ſome Portugueſe ſoldiers.

By an official diſpatch from the Auſtrian Gen. Tanis, we learn that the inhabitants of the Tyrol, have with the utmoſt enthuſiaſm, riſen in favor of Auſtria; and have defeated the Bavarian troops in ſeveral engagements. Two Generals, and about 12,000 Bavarians, have been taken priſoners.

A letter has been received in this city via Leguita, dated Cadiz May 30th, which confirms the accounts of the Spaniſh and Auſtrians ſucceſſes—repeats the evacuation of Catalonia by the French—and ſays, that ſucceſs & the diſtreſs of the French troops in Andaluſia, from the plague, that they had ſolicited relief in medicines, from the Spaniſh Government.

Supplement extraordinary to the priviledged Gazette of Prague.

"On the 23d April, at nine in the evening, Count Aversperg, Adjutant General to his Imperial Highneſs the Generaliſſimo, arrived at his Majeſty's head quarters at Scharding. He was ſent on the 22d from the field of battle.——The two Chiefs and their armies advanced that day to combat each other. Success was on the ſide of the Auſtrians.—The Generaliſſimo cauſed the poſt of Abbach, on the Leber to be attacked, for which we had contended the preceding evening, & he carried it.——The third corps of the army took Faipont. Whilſt the right wing of the Auſtrian army was victorious, the enemy ſucceeded in getting poſſeſſion of Echmuhl,—but the preſence of the Generaliſſimo reſtored order, and thus ended a battle which had laſted five days without interruption.—We have in this and other previous affairs, taken a great number of priſoners, among whom is a Lieutenant General under the orders of Marſhal Davout. The loſs on both ſides has been great. We have ſeveral Generals and officers of the Etat Major wounded. The firſt corps of the army has advanced to the Hemmenau, and touches the grand army by Abbach.

LONDON, May 18.

Orders from the Admiralty were received at Plymouth on Saturday, to fit out all the ſmall veſſels of war in that port which were deemed capable of being rendered fit for ſervice, and to afford every facility and encouragement to the fitting out of privateers.—So urgent was this order, that numbers of Shipwrights were ordered to work on Sunday.

On Saturday an Auſtrian Meſſenger arrived charged with diſpatches from M. Stuart, the Britiſh envoy at that Court; the accounts he brings are favorable; the Arch Duke Charles has been re enforced by the corps of Generals Bellgarde and Klenau, as well as by several others, which has augmented his army to 160,000 men. Wertzberg and Dresden are also said to be occupied by the Auſtrians. The capture of Warsaw is confirmed, and the accounts from Italy are not leſs gratifying. The ſpirit of diſcontent begins to manifeſt itſelf throughout Heſſia, Hanover, Brunswick Watteravia, and Turengia—Colonel Doenberg, of the Weſtphalian Rangers, is reported to direct the operations of the malcontents, and is ſaid to be at the head of a numerous and well organized force.

ORDER IN COUNCIL.

At the Court of the Queen's Palace, the 24th May, 1809.

Preſent the King's moſt excellent Majeſty in Council.

Whereas his Majeſty was pleaſed, by his order in Council of the 26th of April laſt, to declare certain ports and places of the countries which have been lately ſtyled the Kingdom of Holland, to be ſubject to the reſtrictions incident to a ſtrict & rigorous blockade, as continued from his Majeſty's former order of the 11th November 1807, and whereas advices has been received of a certain proviſional agreement entered into by his Majeſty's Envoy Extraordinary and Miniſter Plenipotentiary in America, with the Government of the United States, whereby it is underſtood that his Majeſty's Orders in Council of the 7th of January and of the 11th November, 1807, ſhall be withdrawn, ſo far as it reſpects the United States, on the 10th of June next.

And whereas, although the ſaid proviſional agreement is not ſuch as was authorized by his Majeſty's inſtructions, or ſuch as his Majeſty can approve, it may already have happened, or may happen, that perſons being citizens of the ſaid U. States may be led, by a reliance on the ſaid proviſional agreement, to engage in a trade with and to the ſaid ports and places in Holland, contrary to, and in violation of the reſtrictions impoſed by the ſaid Orders of the 7th Jan and of the 11th of November, 1807, as altered by the Order of the 26th of April laſt; his Majeſty, in order to prevent any inconveniences that may enſue from the circumſtance above recited, is pleaſed by and with the advice of his privy council to order, and it is hereby ordered, That the ſeveral orders ſhall be ſuſpended, ſo far as is neceſſary for the protection of veſſels of the U. S. ſailing under the faith of the ſaid proviſional agreement, videlicit, That after the 9th day of June next, no veſſel of the United States which ſhall have cleared out between the 19th of April laſt and the 20th of July enſuing, for any of the ports of Holland aforeſaid, from any port of the U. States, ſhall be moleſted or interrupted in her voyage by the Commanders of his Majeſty's ſhips or privateers.

And it is further ordered, That no veſſel of the United States, which ſhall have cleared out from any port in America Previous to the 20th of July next, for any permitted port, and ſhall, during her voyage have changed her deſtination, in conſequence of information of the ſaid proviſional agreement, and ſhall be proceeding to any of the ports of Holland aforeſaid, ſhall not be moleſted or interrupted by the commanders of any of his Majeſty's ſhips of privateers, unleſs ſuch veſſels ſhall have been informed of this order on her voyage, and ſhall have been warned not to proceed to any of the ports of Holland aforeſaid, and ſhall, notwithſtanding ſuch warning, be found attempting to proceed to any ſuch ports.

And it is further ordered, That after the ſaid ninth day of June next, no veſſel of the ſaid United States, which ſhall have cleared out or be detained to any of the ports of Holland from any other port of place not ſubject to the reſtrictions of the ſaid order of the 26th of April laſt, after notice of ſuch proviſional agreement as aforeſaid, ſhall be moleſted or interrupted in her voyage by the commanders of his Majeſty's ſhips or privateers.—Provided ſuch veſſel ſhall have ſo cleared out previous to actual notice of this Order at ſuch place of clearance, or in default of proof of actual notice, previous to the like periods of time after the date of this Order, as are fixed for conſtructive notice of his Majeſty's Orders of the 11th November 1807, by the Order of the 25th Nov. 1808, and the 18th May 1808, at certain places and latitudes therein mentioned, unleſs ſuch veſſel ſhall have been informed of this Order on her voyage, and warned by any of his Majeſty's ſhips or privateers not to proceed to any port of Holland, and ſhall, notwithſtanding ſuch warning, attempt to proceed to any ſuch port.

And his Majeſty is pleaſed further to order, and it is hereby ordered, that the ſeveral orders of the 7th January and 11th November, 1807, as altered by the ſaid order of the 26th April laſt, ſhall alſo be ſuſpended ſo far as is neceſſary for the protection of veſſels of the ſaid United States, which ſhall clear out to any ports not declared to be under the reſtriction of blockade from any port of Holland, between the ninth day of June and the firſt day of July next; provided always, that nothing that is contained in the preſent Order ſhall extend, or be conſtrued to extend to protect any veſſels or their cargoes, that may be liable to condemnation or detention for any other cauſe than the violation of the aforeſaid Orders of the 7th of January and the 11th of November, 1807, as altered by the ſaid Order of the 26th of April laſt.

Provided alſo, that nothing in this Order contained ſhall extend, or be conſtrued to extend, to protect any veſſel which ſhall attempt to enter any port actually blockaded by any of his Majeſty's ſhips of war.

And the Right Honorable the Lords Commiſſioners of his Majeſty's Treaſury, His Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State, the Lords Commiſſioners of the Admiralty, and the Judges of the High Court of Admiralty, and the Judges of the Courts of Vice-Admiralty, are to give the neceſſary directions herein as to them may reſpectively appertain.

It appears from the Gazette of Saturday night, that Mr. Erſkine is recalled from America. Mr. Jackſon is appointed Miniſter to the United States, and will ſet out upon his miſſion without delay.

The Gazette alſo contains an account of the occupation of the Daniſh Iſland of Anholt, in the Baltic, by a Britiſh force.

We underſtand that the Marquis Wellesley's Embaſſy to Spain is merely complimentary. He is to remain only two months with the Junta; and his brother the Hon. Henry Wellesley, is, we hear, to ſucceed Mr. Frere as Envoy extraordinary, and Miniſter Plenipotentiary.

It is reported that the Emperor Alexander refuſed to ſee the Envoy ſent to him by the Duke of Sudermania, and had ordered the renewal of hoſtilities.

The Falmouth paper received this day, ſays under the date of the 27th inſtant—"A rumour has reached us of the ſurrender of the whole of Soult's army to Sir Arthur Wellesley; but we know not what credit is due to it."

A veſſel is arrived at Penzance, that ſpoke a ſhip on Wednesday from Cadiz, who informed, that Madrid was in poſſeſſion of the Spaniards.

Boſton, July 14.

Capt. Bartlette, who arrived laſt evening from Cadiz, ſailed thence May 30. There were great rejoicings at Cadiz in conſequence of the recovery of St. Audero, and the victories in Italy and Portugal. It was reported that the French had evacuated Barcelona, and that General Blake had made 3000 priſoners.

Letters from Algiers, ſtate that all the natives of France, ſettled in that city, have been put in Irons.

SEVILLE, May 25.

The Junta have decreed that the Cortes of the nation, (National Aſſembly) ſhall be convened.

The Supreme Junta have decreed, that there ſhall be an annual religious ſervice to invoke benedictions on King Ferdinand; and to perpetuate the remembrance of the tyrannical conduct of Napolean Bonaparte.

The Spaniſh papers contain many accounts of ſmall military affairs in which the patriots were ſucceſsful.

The Spaniſh Admiral Maſſerede, who joined the French againſt King Ferdinand, and who was ſent by Joſeph Bonoparte to command the Spaniſh ſquadron which the French took at Ferrol—is ſaid to have been caught by the Patriots at Lugo.

Bridgetown, (Barbadoes) June, 27.

The war in Auſtria, (and it is ſome conſolation,) places Spain under the moſt auſpicious circumſtances; and aided by the genius of Britain, the expulſion of the French from that important country might reaſonably be hoped for, did not the artifices of the modern Machiavels in the uſurper's train effect all the purpoſes of treaſon.

Portugal, preſents, upon the whole an aſpect more pleaſing and proſperous.—A great army, under a great commander, is now in the very heart of that country, and with the Britiſh ſpirit following ſo cloſe upon the heels of the retreating enemy, that long ere this we willingly purſuade ourſelves, the ſubjugatory invaders have been completely conquered or expelled.

Our government for the aſſiſtance of Portugal, has granted a loan of 600,000l. to the Prince Regent, ſecured on the revenues of the Iſland of Madeira.

The French Government, we find, have refuſed the exchange of the priſoners taken at Martinique; and in conſequence, they have been carried to England, the Belleiſle and Ulyſſes, with ſeveral tranſports, having arrived at Plymouth with them from Oberon Bay.

His Majeſty's frigate Alcmene has been loſt of Nantz, on the coaſt of France; and we further regret to ſtate that, by accounts from Leeward, one of our frigates (ſuppoſed the Gloire) is on ſhore off Mariegalante, and is feared will be loſt.

The London papers ſpeak of a probable change in the Miniſtry, in which the Duke of Portland, Earl Camden, and Lord Mulgrave, will be ſucceeded by Earl Grey, the Duke of Bedford, and Mr. George Ponſonby.

The Britiſh Naval force in the Baltic has been conſiderably augmented. Rear-Admiral Pickmor, in the St. George, has been ſent to join Sir James Saumarez on that ſtation. Some operations of great extent were expected to be carried on immediately againſt Ruſſia, in the event of her taking part againſt Auſtria; which England hoped to deter her from, and in order to conciliate her, the Ruſſian Admiral Siniavin, and the crews of the ſquadron, pledged by the convention of Cintra, have been ſent home.

TENTH FRENCH BULLETIN.

FRENSDORFF. May 23.

After describing the town of the Danube at Ebendorff, the Bulletin states, that on the night of the 20th. the Emperor crossed the Danube, accompanied by Berthier, Massena, and Lasnes—they took a position on the 21st, on the left bank, the right wing was at the village of Essling, and the left at Grossaspren. Both these villages were taken. At four in the afternoon, on the 21st. the enemy shewed themselves, and attempted to drive our advanced guard into the river—Vain attempt!

The Duke of Rivoli was first attacked at Grossaspren, by Bellegarde—He manoeuvred with Milton's and Legrad's divisions, and rendered all their attacks abortive—The Duke of Montebello defended Essling—The Duke of Istria covered the flank with cavalry. The action was severe. The enemy having two hundred cannon and 90,000 men, being the remains of their armies.

General D'Espagne, divided his corps into squares, but he was killed with a musket ball at the head of his troops, and General Foulers was also killed. General Nansouty arrived in the evening on the field of battle, and distinguished himself highly. At eight in the evening the battle ended, and we remained masters of the field. During the night Oudinot's corps, Hillaire's division, and two brigades of cavalry, crossed from the right bank to the left. On the 21st, at 4 P. M. the Duke of Rivoli was engaged with the enemy, who made several successive attacks on the village; but Rivoli at last completely defeated them.——The enemy occupying a large space between the right and left wings, we took the resolution of penetrating their centre. The Duke of Montebello headed the charge, Oudinot was on the left, St. Hillaire, in the centre, and Boudet on the right. The centre of the enemy could not withstand us; in a moment all was overthrown.

The Duke of Istria made several fine charges. It seemed all over with the Austrian army, when at seven in the morning an Aid de-camp of the Emperor came to inform him that the the rising of the Danube had drifted a great number of trees and booms, which in consequence of the events at Vienna, had been cut down and laid on the bank, and that they had broken down the brioges which communicated from the right bank with the little island Inder Lobau.

All the reverse troops which were advancing were upon the right bank, as also part of our heavy cavalry, and all Auerstadt's corps. In consequence of this shocking accident the emperor resolved to stop the troops from advancing. He ordered the Duke of Montebello to stop on the field of battle, and take his position with the left wing against a curtain which the Duke of Rivoli covered, and his right wing at Essling. The cannon, infantry, and cattridges which belonged to our parks, could not be brought over. The enemy was in the greatest disorder just at the moment when he learnt our bridges had been broken down. The slackening of our fire and the concentrating of our forces, left him no doubt respecting the unforeseen accident that had happened. All his cannon and artillery equipage, were again brought in line, and from 9 A M. till 7 P. M. he made the greatest efforts, supported by 200 cannon, to overthrow the French army—but all his efforts, turned only to his discomfiture.—Three times he attacked the villages, and three times he filled them with his dead. The enemy resumed the position which they had left before the attack begun, and we remained masters of the field of battle. Their loss has been great.—Prisoners who have been taken, say that they lost 23 generals and 60 superior officers. Marshal Weirder 150 prisoners are in our hands. Our loss has also been very considerable—1100 killed, and 3000 wounded.—The Duke of Montebello (Lasnes) was wounded by a cannon ball in the thigh on the 22d, in the evening. General Hillaire is also wounded. General Durosnel was killed.—The waters of the Danube did not permit the bridge to be rebuilt during the night, and the Emperor ordered the army to pass the little arm from the left bank, and to take a position on the Island of Inder-Lobau.—We are laboring to replace the bridges, and nothing will be undertaken till they are replaced.

[In addition to these particulars, a great part of the Bulletin consists of a sentimental description of the interview between Lasnes and Bonaparte, at the time when the marshal's wound was thought to be mortal, in which of course, the Duke of Montebello manifested all possible heroism, and evinced the greatest readiness to die for his Emperor, and that the Emperor was melted into tears.]

The Bulletin has however other passages, from which some inferrences may be drawn as to the extent of the loss sustained by the French. Bonaparte, it is said, boasted that the retreat was well conducted, though 200 pieces of cannon were playing upon them, which they could not answer, during which forty thousand rounds of shot was fired amongst them. Bonaparte promised to repair his loss, and declares his intention not to renew the attack till his force is concentrated, and better prepared.—He allows the Austrian army to have been well furnished and equipped on the occasion.

AUSTRIAN OFFICIAL BULLETIN.

DEFEAT of the FRENCH

Published by order of his Imperial Highness, the ARCHDUKE CHARLES.

In purtuance of the command of his Imperial Highness the Generalissimo, the following preliminary report of the brilliant victory obtained on the 21st & 22d of May, is issued on the 23d from the head quarters at Bretenlee:—

On the 19th or 20th the emperor Napolean passed the great arm of the Danube with the whole of his army, to which he had drawn all the reinforcements of his powerful allies. He established his main body on the Island Lobau, whence the second passage over the less arm, and his further offensive dispositions, were necessarily to be directed.

His Imperial Highness resolved to advance with his army to meet the enemy, and not to obstruct his passage, but to attack him after he had reached the left bank, and thus to defeat the object of his intended enterprize.

His determination excited throughout the whole army the highest enthusiasm; animated by all the feelings of the purest patriotism, and of the most loyal attachment to their sovereign every man become a hero, and the smoaking ruins, the scenes of desolation which marked the tract of the enemy in his process through Austria, had inflamed them with a just desire of vengeance. With joyful acclamations, with the cry a thousand times repeated, of—"Live our good emperor," and with victory in their hearts, our columns at noon on the 21st, proceeded onward to meet the reciprocal attack of the advancing enemy; and soon after 3, the battle commenced. The enemy or Napolean in person directed the movement of his troops, and endeavored to break through our centre with the whole of his cavalry; this vast body of horse, he had supported by 60,000 infantry, his guards, and by 100 pieces of artillery.

His wings rested upon Aspern and Essingen, places to the strengthening of which the resources of nature and art had as far as was possible contributed. He was not able however to penetrate the compact mass our battalions presented, and every where his cavalry shewed their backs, whilst our curassiers, unorsed his armored cavaliers, and our Light-horse carried death into their flanks. It was a gigantic combat, and is scarce capable of description. The battle with the enemy became immediately general. More than 200 pieces of cannon exhibited on the opposite sides a rivalry in the work of destruction. Aspern was ten times taken, lost, and again conquered. Essingen, after repeated attacks could not be maintained. At 11 o'clock at night the villages were in flames and we remained masters of the field of battle. The enemy was driven up in a corner, with the island of Labau and the Danube in his rear. Night had put an end to the carnage.

Meanwhile fire boats, which were floated down the Danube, destroyed the bridge which the enemy had thrown over the principal branch of the river.—The enemy however, conveyed over during the night, by continued embarkations, all the disposable troops which he had in Vienna, and on the Upper Danube, made every possible effort for the reconstruction of his great bridge and attacked us at four in the morning with a furious cannonade from the whole of his artillery, immediately after which the action extended along the whole of the line—Until seven in the evening every attack was repelled.

The perseverance of the enemy was then compelled to yield to the heroism of our troops and the most complete victory crowned the efforts of an army, which the French Proclamations had declared to be dispersed, and represented as annihilated, by them the most idea of the invincibility of their adversaries,

The loſs of the enemy has been immenſe the field of battle is covered with dead bodies, from among which we have already picked up 6000 wounded, and removed them to our hoſpitals. When the French could no longer maintain themſelves in Aspera, the brave Heſſians were obliged to make a laſt attempt and were ſacrificed.

At the departure of the courier the Emperor Napoleon was in full retreat to the other ſide of the Danube, covering his retreat by the poſſeſſion of the large iſland of Lobau —Our army is ſtill engaged in cloſe purſuit.—The more particular details of this memorable day ſhall be made known as ſoon as they are collected.—Among the priſoners are the French Gen. Daronel, Gen. of diviſion, and Fouler Royer, firſt chamberlain to the Empreſs; alſo, the Wirtemberg gen. Roder, who was made priſoner at Nusdorf, by the ſecond battalion of the Vienna Landwehr.

YORK, AUGUST 12, 1809.

MR. CAMERON,

By inſerting the following in your Gazette (ſhould it not come too late) you will oblige a Subſcriber.

On Wedneſday the 2d Inſt. was held the annual examination of the Pupils of the Diſtrict School in this Town, in the preſence of the Truſtees, and ſeveral Gentlemen of York.

The ſpecimens that were exhibited of the proficiency of the Scholars during the laſt year, were ſatisfactory; and more particularly, an exerciſe in oratory afforded an evidence of the advantages to be derived from a public Inſtitution, where emulation and a laudable deſire of praiſe, tend to produce the beſt effects on the youthful mind, not only in that art, but alſo in every other purſuit and attainment.

Married, at Kingſton, on the 27th ultimo, WILLIAM ALLAN Eſq. of this place, to the amiable Miſs L. T. GAMBLE.

DEPARTED this Life, at Gannanuqui below Kingſton, in May laſt, William Stone, an amiable young Man, whoſe death will be feelingly regretted by his affectionate Father; and his many friends.

MANIFESTO.

VIENNA.

From the Imperial Press. 1809.

"Though the Petersburgh Treaty of peace bore, in all its essential articles, the stamp of those unhappy circumstances which imposed upon his Imperial Majesty the duty of rendering every other consideration subordinate to the momentary necessities of his treaty there was conscientiousness was not to be mistaken with which his Majesty has ever been anxious to discharge obligations once incurred.

"The articles which imposed upon Austria severe sacrifices, and painful renunciations were executed without reserve or limitation; while those which were inserted for the alleviation on Austria were either not at all carried into effect, or only after arbitrary and disadvantageous alterations; or at the close of fatiguing negociations, and, in part only, at the existence of new sacrifices.

"Scarcely one of the conditions of this treaty, which affected the interests of the Emperor's court, his princes, or his subjects, was fulfilled to the full extent, within the period prescribed, and to the real satisfaction of the parties.

"Neither his Imperial Highness the Archduke, then Elector of Saltzburgh, or his Imperial Highness the Grand Master of the German Order, obtained the full enjoyment of the possessions or revenues assigned them.

"His Royal Highness the Archduke, then Landgrave of Brisgau, was, according to the express terms of the treaty, to receive an indemnity of the full value of the lands and revenues he had lost. Every attempt to realize this precise engagement, in any, was remained without effect. It even appears, in the course of frequently renewed negociations, that the French Cabinet had at no one time the intention of compensating his Royal Highness even in part; and the Ministers of his Imperial Majesty were forced more than once to endure the mortification of seeing the just demands of the Princes of the Imperial House, treated as objects which merited no serious consideration.

"A like fate was reserved for every complaint which was made concerning the violated interests of his Majesty's subjects or revenues. From the day of the exchange of the articles of peace, no further contributions were to be raised, and all arrears of military requisitions were to be discharged by the payment of 40,000,000 francs. The payment was made, but the hoped for alleviation did not take place. On the one hand, new and oppressive requisitions for the support of the French army were made, because the French magazines were suddenly found empty which had been lately richly filled at the expence of the country. On the other hand, a number of valuable objects, the undoubted property of his Majesty; lying in various of the ceded provinces, were yielded to the new possessors of them, for a consideration ascertained by express treaty; and this remains unpaid. The loss sustained by these two articles amounted to 24,000,000 florins. All endeavours to procure satisfaction for this were in vain.

"Nevertheless his Imperial Majesty would have endeavored to forget this loss and these affronts, however painful, could the great end of peace, purchased by such great sacrifices, have been attained. To devote himself in uninterrupted repose to the welfare of his people—to provide for the success of the interior administration, and divert fresh dangers by suitable measures of defence;—this was the wish, this the just expectation of his Majesty. To frustrate this pacific plan by ill will has been, from the conclusion of the Petersburgh peace to the present moment, the undeviating effort of the French government.

"Before any articles stipulated in favor of Austria were carried into execution by France its Imperial Majesty found himself involved in unpleasant discussions by demands of a very questionable kind. In order to facilitate the military communication between Venice and the provinces on the opposite coast of the Adriatic Sea, an uninterrupted march for the French troops was required through the Imperial dominions, and this not for the moment only, but to be confirmed by a formal convention as a permanent arrangement.—The weightiest objections, derived partly from former relations towards the Republic of Venice, which had never abdicated or relinquished this prerogative—partly from the condition of these maritime provinces, by no means well supplied with provisions—partly from the danger of occasioning neighboring states to make like demands—were opposed to this proposal: they obtained neither a reply nor even a hearing.——The will of the Emperor Napoleon, which had been already intimated—the intimation that more serious evils might occur, if this were not readily endured—the threat to renew the war, and proceed at once to take possession of the frontier provinces; these were the unanswerable arguments before which every remonstrance was to give way. As in that, so in all late discussions, no others were ever urged by the French Cabinet.

"A fertile source of unpleasant embarrassments was soon after opened by the unexpected appearance of a Russian fleet, which had seized the harbour and territory of Cattaro. The delay of the French Plenipotentiaries, in taking possession of this territory within the period assigned by treaty, was the sole cause of the intervening occurrence, and Austria was forced to suffer for their negligence. It was in vain that every thing was done to convince the French Cabinet, that how little soever his Imperial Majesty could be answerable for this accident, he would do yet every thing in his power to convince, by every becoming measure, the perfect purity of his designs, and the wish to fulfil even this stipulation of the treaty with literal exactness—it was in vain that the required convention for the right of passage was assented to and concluded: it was in vain that on the tumultuous entreaties of France, the Austrian sea ports were shut against the Russian & English flag—a measure which struck a deep wound into the reviving commerce, the consequent internal prosperity, and into the finances of the monarchy: it was in vain that troops were sent out in orders, in common with the French, to effect the surrender of Cattaro—No notice was taken of either of these steps. The Austrian territory on the right bank of the Isonzo, which ought to have been yielded up by the French troops within 2 months of the exchange of the ratifications of peace, not only continued in their possession, but was even formally organized and considered as French property; the fortress of Brandau was not delivered up. But, what was more offensive than all the rest, the great French army prolonged their abode in Germany, and incessantly threatened the frontiers of the Monarchy from the side of Bavaria and Franconia.

"The procrastinated delivery up of Cattaro was but an insignificant pretence for this highly vexatious proceeding. But, what at the same time was taking place in Germany, furnished a clue to the real motives.

"The Petersburg Treaty had introduced important changes in the possession of several Princes of the Empire of the South of Germany. Nevertheless, in this Treaty, the former Constitution of the Empire was not merely maintained in silence, but even expressly confirmed. The title of "Emperor of Germany," was without any scruple or objection admitted into the Treaty of Peace;—and the recognition of the Royal title in the Houses of Bavaria and Wirtemburg, stipulated with the express addition that the bond which had united these princes to the German Imperial Confederation, should not be considered as broken by the new prerogatives granted to them.

"In the mean while, under the veil of secresy, the probably long fostered plan of utterly annihilating the Imperial Constitution had grown to maturity at Paris.——A considerable number of greater and smaller German Princes had offered their concurrence to this plan. Without giving the slightest previous intimation to so important an event to the legal head of the Empire, the Princes who were under French authority, or French influence, on a sudden burst asunder the bond to which were joined so many of the most sacred rights of the Sovereign and the subject, and constituted the Emperor Napoleon their Chief, under the title of a Protector. It was only at the moment of a notification of this proceeding, that this Majesty was informed, that "henceforth the Emperor Napoleon would know nothing of the existence of an Emperor of Germany and a German Constitution."—In order to give greater effect to this declaration, recourse was had to all these menacing expressions, which had hitherto undeviatingly accompanied every measure of the French Cabinet, with redoubled emphasis, and under circumstances, which his Majesty gladly bury in oblivion.

"No doubt could be entertained of the import and purpose of this proceeding; and the consequences to be expected from it were not palpable? to need the occurrence of painful experience before they could be fully surveyed. His Majesty was at once aware of the lamentable fate prepared for all Germany; he was at once aware of the augmented and pressed danger which arose to the Austrian hereditary dominions, from a system which placed all adjoining countries to immediate dependence upon France.——No one could have disputed with the Emperor the right to protect himself against the introduction of such a system, by the utmost resistance.——But however powerful the motives might be which appeared to invite his Majesty to the assertion of this right, a consideration which prepondered over all of them, decided him to observe an opposite conduct.——The immediate preservation of the Austrian monarchy was the Emperor's first and holiest duty; and on the mournful concurrence of events which had taken place, this was become the interests of all regents and nations which had not altogether and forever renounced the felicity of independent existence. In the situation of the Emperor at that epoch, to have set the existence of Austria on a throw would have been a manifest contradiction to what his Majesty owed to himself and his faithful subjects, and would besides, have broken in upon all the prospects and hopes of redemption entertained by all fellow sufferers with himself.

"His Majesty thought himself so much the more entitled to adopt as the basis of his policy, a system of a temporary renunciation of all resistance which might compromise the repose of the Monarchy at so dangerous a moment, as the earlier history and uniformly consistent character of his Government must forever absolve his Majesty from the suspicion of considering exclusively his private interest, and indulging a selfish indifference to the welfare of neighboring States. What the Emperor had done, during a long series of years, to oppose a barrier against the torrent of universal ruin which had been rushing in, was known; what had frustrated his efforts was not less notorious. Now it was of moment to yield to necessity. An insulated & untimely resistance would have been then as assuredly and essentially calamitous to Austria, Germany and Europe, as at an earlier period the inactivity of other powers, and their deplorable system of separation.

"His Majesty, therefore resolved to prevent all useless and painful discussions of a subject, the bearings of which were, besides, subject to no doubt. This resolution was facilitated by the unqualified subserviency and subjection which appeared to promote, on all sides, the success of so violent a revolution through the silence of all other powers, and especially the marked difference with which a considerable part of Germany beheld the destruction of the ancient institutions. To be compelled to maintain by arms, a crown which had been entrusted to him by the legal election of the imperial States, which had been worn with glory for centuries by his illustrious ancestors, for the promotion and welfare of the Empire,, would, under less oppressive circumstances, have put the dignity and sensibility of his Majesty to a painful trial. He laid down this crown.

"It might have been believed that so important a step would at least not have failed to improve his relations towards France.——But the state of things remained the same.—None of the outstanding conditions of the peace were performed; every attempt to procure their execution was answered with reproaches and threats.——Far from any way taking into the account all that Austria had done for the maintenance of peace, the French cabinet seemed, on the contrary, resolved to avail itself of every proof she had given of moderation and submission, as a basis and step to make still severe demands; and it is hard to determine whether this constant and hostile irritation might, even then, have led, in spite of all the efforts of his Majesty, if the breaking out of a war with Prussia had not occasioned a necessary pause.

STOCKHOLM. May 11.

Abdication of the KING of Sweden.

The members having produced their credentials from their constituents, and the Diet being duly constituted, the States proceeded in a body on the 6th inst. to pay their respects to his Royal Highness the Regent, and to express their most grateful acknowledgements for the zeal, activity, and patriotism he had evinced, in relinquishing the comforts and tranquility of a private station, and convoking the grand Constitutional Assembly of the nation, as the only means of saving the country from impending destruction.

On Tuesday the 9th, his Royal Highness the Regent opened the Diet with a speech addressed to the States, in which the Lord-Chancellor of the court baron, read in an audible voice, a detailed account of the events and circumstances which had rendered the convocation of the States indispensably necessary for the salvation of the country. The marshal of the Diet, and the respective speakers of the Clergy, Burghers and peasants, addressed his Royal Highness in appropriate speeches.

On Wednesday the 10th. all the members of the States met an early hour in the assembly, which will ever be remarkable in the annals of Sweden. His Royal Highness having ordered the Lord Chancellor to read aloud the Act of abdication voluntarily made by the King on the 20th of March, Baron Mannenheim addressed the Assembly. The Baron, in a speech of considerable length, drew a picture of the situation to which Sweden was reduced by the King's passion for war, renounced all allegiance and obedience to the person and authority of Gustavus IV. and declared him and his issue, now and for ever, deprived of the crown and government of S.—The Baron then asked whether this Act, this solemn resolution of his, in which his heart and tongue concurred, met with the approbation of the members composing that august Assembly? —Long and reiterated exclamations of yes! yes!—all! all! resounded from all parts, and Baron Mannenheim's declaration was adopted by the Constitutional Representatives of the Swedish nation, without a single dissentient voice.

LONDON, June 10.

The accounts from the Continent reſpecting Col. Schill, continue to be moſt favorable. It is ſaid that he is advancing with a regular equipt army of 10,000 men, to beſeige Caſſel. He has iſſued a Proclamation, declaring Jerome Bonaparte an outlaw.

He has beaten the Mecklenburgh troops in ſeveral actions. The Duke of Brunſwick Oels, one of the members of the Rhenish confederacy, has taken the field againſt the Fr.

A declaration has been publiſhed againſt Auſtria by the Court of Peterſburg, but as it does not go the length of announcing the commencement of actual hoſtilities, it is not likely to be attended with any other reſult than a ſuſpenſion of friendly intercourſe between the two nations.

ST. PETERBURG, April 23.

In an anppendix to our Court Gazette, the following appears:——

"After repeated approximations to peace with the Ottoman Porte, which were however without effect, it was judged expedient to open negociations with her Plenipotentiary, in order to ſettle the baſis of it. But juſt as the Plenipotentiaries reached the deſignated ſpot, intelligence was received that the Porte, contrary to her engagements, had formed a new alliance with a Power, hoſtile to us, and received an Engliſh Ambaſſador. This intelligence revealed the principle of her conduct, and her wiſh, by negociation, to gain time for preparations in order to carry on the war.

"In conſequence of this diſcovery, Prince Prosorowsky, Commander in Chief of the army of Moldavia, received orders to ſend an expreſs to Conſtantinople, and announce to the Turkiſh Government, that unleſs the Britiſh Miniſter was diſmiſſed within twenty four hours, the armiſtice ſhould be at an end, and hoſtilities renewed.

"This propoſal was rejected by the Porte, and the war began on the ſame day.

"The firſt movement was to deſtroy Slobodsekah, a poſt of importance to the enemy, near the fortreſs Guirge, and the ſeizure of the ammunition and magazines in that fortreſs. This was carried into effect with the characteriſtic bravery of Ruſſians, and on the 25th of March Lieut. Gen. Miladowitsch ſent the following diſpatch to the Commander in Chief:——

"The intrenchments of the fortreſs Guirge have been completely deſtroyed, notwithſtanding the obſtinate reſiſtance of the enemy. Two pieces of cannon were captured, & the reſt ſpiked.

"Slobodsejah was taken and deſtroyed by Colonel Lopuchan. The powder magazine under the Baſhaw's houſe, with an arſenal in the houſe were blown up. From the magazines every thing poſſible was taken off, and the reſt deſtroyed. Twenty ſeven cannon of large calibre were ſpiked. The enemy loſt alſo 22 ſtandards. The booty was diviſed among the ſoldiery.

"The enemy's loſs was conſiderable, tho' it cannot yet be eſtimated. Our loſs has not been conſiderable; but Maj. Gen. Stawitzkie was killed by a cannon ball.

"Colonel Grekow has brought over to our ſide about a thouſand families."

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 2.

We have accounts from, that a Ruſſian corps has croſſed the Danube above Widen, to join a Servian army of 40,000 men.

All alarm of freſh inſurrection amongſt the Janiſſaries has ſubſided. Some days back, the Janiſſaries as uſual, recieved their pay & rice. The Grand Seignior very unexpectedly appeared on horſeback at the diſtribution; a meſs of rice was preſented to him to taſte, he did ſo, alighted, went about the barracks, and with particular condeſcenſion inquired about their grievances, and promiſed them redreſs. This cauſed great ſurpriſe among the Janiſſaries, who unanimouſly cried out, they demanded nothing but that the Grand Seignior (who was himſelf one of their own corps) would not ſuppreſs it.——The Sultan aſſured them he had no ſuch deſign, but would only gradually reform their abuſes; he exhorted them at the ſame time to obedience, and promiſed to continue them in his favor. This occaſioned a general ſhout of joy, and they unanimouſly ſwore obedience to the S. The Sultan then wiſhed to know who had propoſed raiſing an inſurrection; they were inſtantly named, and 200 of them were immediately executed. The Aga of the Janiſſaries loſt his place, and the captain Pacha, Seid Ally, was ſent into exile to Breuſſa, in Aſia. All this happened with remarkable tranquility.

AUGSBURG, May 10.

One hundred and thirty waggons, crowded with wounded French, arrived at Augsburgh on the 2d inſtant. Another escort, equally as numerous, arrived on the 5th; and it is computed that during the preceding fortnight, the wounded French, Wirtemberg and Bavarian troops conveyed thither, exceed 14,000 men.

A Ruſſian army is collecting on the frontiers of Poland, which is called the Weſtern army of obſervation, and Prince Sergei Golezyn has been appointed to command it.

Jerome Bonaparte has confiſcated the revenues of the Chapter of Walleſtein, at Hamburg, as alſo the property of the abbeſs and canoneſs, for favoring the Weſtphalian inſurgents.

Forty thouſand French troops from Spain, and the ſouthern departments of France, were to croſs the Rhine at Huningue, between the 10th and 15th inſt.

The King of Naples is forming a camp of 10,000 men near Eboli, and another at Lugonegro, under an apprehenſion of an attack from the Britiſh army in Sicily.

A letter from Heligoland of the 22d May, mentions that Col. Schill was at Goslar on the 10th, and occupied ſeveral ſtrong paſſes in the Hartz Mountains. He had intercepted a train of artillery, and a convoy of arms and ammunition going to Magdeburg, and had obtained a quantity of arms, cloaths and money at Halle, Celle, Brunſwick, &c. He has been joined by young Blucher, ſon of the Pruſſian General, Capt. Brunnow, and ſeveral other Pruſſian Officers.

OPORTO, May 13.

My Lord, I had the honor to apprize your Lordſhip on the 7th inſt. that I intended the army ſhould march on the 9th from Coimbra, to diſpoſeſs the enemy of Oporto.

The advanced guard and the cavalry had marched on the 7th, and the whole halted on the 8th, to afford time for Marſhal Beresford with his corps to arrive upon the Upper Douro.

On the 10th, in the morning before daylight, the cavalry and advanced guard croſſed the Vouga, with the intention to ſurpriſe & cut off four regiments of French cavalry and a battalion of infantry and artillery, cantoned in Albergaria, Nova, and the neighboring villages, about 8 miles from that river, in the laſt of which we failed; but the ſuperiority of the Britiſh cavalry was evident throughout the day; we took ſome priſoners and their cannon from them; and the advanced guard took up the poſition of Oliviera.

On the arrival of the advanced guard at Vendez Novas between Santa Redondo and Gaijon, they fell in with the out poſts of the enemy's advanced guard, conſiſting of about four thouſand infantry, and ſome ſquadrons of cavalry, ſtrongly poſted on the heights above Gaijon, their front being covered by woods and broken ground. The enemy's left flank was turned by a movement well executed by Maj. General Murray, with Brigadier Gen. Long werth's brigade of the Hanoverian Legion, whilſt the 16th Portuguese regiment of brig. gen. Rd. Stewart's brigade attacked their right, and the rifle men of the 95th, and the flank companies of the 29th, 43d, and 52d of the ſame brigade under Maj. Way, attacked the infantry in the villages & woods in the center.

These attacks ſoon obliged the enemy to give way, and the hon. Brig. Gen. Charles Stewart led two ſquadrons of the 16th and 20th dragoons, under the command of Major Blake, in purſuit of the enemy, and deſtroyed many and took many priſoners.

On the night of the 11th the enemy croſſed the Douro, and deſtroyed the bridge over that river.

It was important, with a view to the operations of Marſhal Beresford, that I ſhould croſs the Douro immediately; and I had ſent Maj. Gen. Murray in the morning with a battalion of the Hanoverian Legion, a ſquadron of cavalry, and 2 ſix pounders to endeavor to collect boats, and if poſſible, to croſs the Ovintas about 4 miles above Oporto, and I had as many boats as could be collected brought to the Ferry, immediately above the towns of Oporto and Villa Nova.

The ground on the right bank of the river at this Ferry is protected and commanded by the fire of cannon, placed on the height of the Sierra Convent at Villa Nova, and there appeared to be a good poſition for our troops on the oppoſite ſide of the river, till they ſhould be collected in ſufficient numbers.

The enemy took no notice of our collection of boats, or of the embarkation of the troops till after the firſt battalion (the Buffs) were landed, and had taken their poſition under the command of Lieut. Gen. Paget, on the oppoſite ſide of the river

They then commenced an attack upon them, with a large body of cavalry, infantry, and artillery, under the command of Marſhal Soult, which that corps moſt gallantly ſuſtained till ſupported, ſucceſſively by the 48th and 66th regiments, belonging to Maj. Gen. Hall's Brigade, and a Portuguese battalion, and afterwards by the firſt battalion of detachments belonging to Brig. Gen. Richard Stewart's brigade.

Although the French made repeated attacks upon them, they made no impreſſion, and at last M. G. Murray having appeared on the enemy's left flank on his march from Ovintre, where he had croſſed, and Lieut. Ge. Sherbrooke, who by this time had availed himſelf of the enemy's weakneſs in the town of Oporto, and had croſſed the Douro at the ferry, between the towns of Villa Nova and Oporto, having appeared upon the right with the brigade of guards, and the 20th regiment, the whole retired in the utmoſt confuſion towards Amaranthe, leaving behind them five pieces of cannon, eight ammunition tumbrils and many priſoners.——The enemy's loſs in killed and wounded in this action has been very great. &c.——I cannot ſay too much in favor of the officers and troops. They have marched in four days over 80 miles of moſt difficult country, have gained many important poſitions, and have equalled and defeated three different bodies of the enemy's troops.

On the night after the laſt action, when our parties were ſent out to trace the courſe of the enemy, they were blowing up their ammunitions, and deſtroying their ammunition.

——Then follows an account of our trifling loſs, and the immenſe Stores Cannon Ammunition &c. captured from the Enemy.

New York July 26.

The following article is copied from an Edinburgh paper:

"While I was at Smyrna, there was a girl afflicted with a Cancer in her lip; and the gum was affected. The European phyſicians conſulted on the meaſure to be taken, and agreed that they ſaw no other method than to cut it out; and the girl had already ſubmitted herſelf to that neceſſion. By an accident of that nature which men cannot account for, an old Armenian came to them juſt in time to prevent the application of the knife. "Do nothing said the Armenian, I will cure her," and when he had pledged himself, the phyſicians conſented.

"He procured a copper veſſel, newly tinned in the inſide, an eſſential circumſtance, and having poured a certain quantity of olive oil into it, he made it boil over a ſmall fire, ſufficiently to keep it gently agitated, and ſo for three times in 24 hours. With this the oil reſolved itſelf to the conſiſtency of an ointment, and by conſtantly rubbing the part affected, he cured her in fourteen days—Nothing elſe was done."———The phyſicians ſuppoſed that the oil received its virtue from the Tin, and that it was communicated by its long boiling over the fire.

MANIFESTO.

VIENNA.

From the Imperial Press, 1809.

"His Majesty could not possibly behold with indifference the progress and issue of this war. The fate which had befallen the Prussian Monarchy and the Royal House of its Sovereign, was in itself severe enough to awaken the liveliest sympathy; and the easily calculated consequences of this event affected the interests of the Austrian States on so many and such critical points, that the gloomiest apprehensions for the future appeared to be justified on all sides. To take a share in such a conflict at any other period would, from the most urgent and laudible motives, have been his duty; but now, motives to which all others were forced to yield, had imposed the necessity of following a contrary system; and his Majesty, with the same firmness with which he had been able to yield up his own prerogatives and own advantages, now renounced that higher satisfaction which the application of his resources in behalf of his neighbors would have afforded him. At all times hostile to an ambiguous and insincere policy, he did not, in this situation of things, permit himself to maintain a false or half neutrality; and the strictness with which from the beginning of the war he adhered to this resolution, forced the Emperor Napoleon to the unwilling eulogist of it.

"Peace took place, without the interference of his Majesty, though the mediation he had not long before proposed to the Belligerent Powers meditated a reciprocal attention. The conditions were by no means of a kind to appease or entirely mitigate the earlier formed apprehensions of the Emperor. But his Majesty, invariable in his Peaceful projects had made no resistance to the changes in the government effected at Naples and in Holland, he has also accommodated himself to those which had been settled at Tilsit. It would have been in vain for him to attempt deceiving himself concerning the fearful and dangerous extent of the advantages which were secured to the Emperor Napoleon by the Tilsit peace; and yet, contemplated for a certain point of view, it seemed as if the very extent of these advantages afforded some prospect of repose by the gratification of certain desires, which it was easy to see would follow. If this glimmering of hope vanished but too soon, he cannot at least be reproached by the French Government, with having attended to it for a moment.

"In the mean while all the subterfuges which had been employed to delay the execution of the treaty of Presburg from time to time till October in the year 1809, lost even the inoffensible meeting.——The evacuation of certain points of the Austrian territory possessed by the French troops could not with decency be any longer postponed. A negociation was begun. The fortress of Brannau was given back.——The possessions on the right bank of the Isonzo were lost. Under the arbitrary domination of an exchange, the Earldom of Mount Falcone, on the left bank of the River, was ceded to Austria, as an indemnity; but this had not a tenth part of the actual value of what was to be given back on the conclusion of peace.

"It soon appeared that even this shadow of moderation, this half turn to friendly relations, was out the introduction to new embarrassments and the most oppressive demands. The Emperor Napoleon had resolved that this war with England should be the concern of the whole Continent, his hatred of the British Government the inheritance of all Sovereigns and nations; and the oppression, which, in order to injure England, he had laid upon the industry and trade of every country which his troops or his decrees could reach, should be the line to be adopted by all States.—— Under the pretence of not having rendered sufficient homage to this unheard of system, a few months after the Tilsit peace, the House of Braganza was driven from the throne of Portugal! At the same time a distinct proposal was made to his imperial majesty utterly to abandon all connections with England; and the choice between such a resolution and an immediate war with France, was the intimation which accompanied this proposal, without any further modification or mitigation.

"Though under the circumstances of the moment, and the measures already forced upon his Majesty in the year 1806, concerning the exclusion of the British flag from his ports, and by means of the entire blockade which the Emperor Napoleon had ordered of the Continental harbours, the commerce of the Austrian dominions was already in a high degree crippled and destroyed; nevertheless, the step now required gave the evil its utmost extension, and, in fact, the effects became too soon visible to their full extent. Considered from a higher point of view, the sacrifice which his Majesty on this occasion made for the maintenance of peace was of no small importance. It broke the bonds which had hitherto connected the common interests of the European States; it impeded every reciprocal communication; it lessened the means of defence possessed by the greater States, and completed the abject condition of the smaller; and in as far as motives of personal hostility, with which Austria has nothing in common, co-operated, it could not but be more sensibly felt by the Emperor.—When this sacrifice was to be offered up, his Majesty felt still more acutely than before, how difficult it would be to fix any external limit to his pacific submissiveness opposed to the ever-growing pretensions of the French Cabinet.

"Soon after this negociation, the restless ambition of this Cabinet manifested itself in a new shape, apparently less hostile to Austria. Propoals were made to his Majesty which respected the dissolution and partition of a great adjoining empire. The palpable injustice of such an enterprize (which made a stronger impression upon his Majesty, because the very Cabinet which had made the proposal, had hitherto suffered no opportunity to pass by without declaring that the preservation and integrity of that empire was one of the fundamental maxims of its political system) would have been quite sufficient to restrain the Emperor from giving his approbation to it; but besides this, a sound policy and the true interest of his monarchy would never have allowed him to take a share in it. The proffered increase of territory would have been, at best, an illusive gain to his Majesty: on the other hand, the only sure consequence would have been, the introduction of a French army into the interior of his states. And what the consequence of this latter circumstance might have been, was exhibited on another theatre of French policy with fearful and warning perspicuity.

BELFAST, July 1.

We stop the press to acknowledge the receipt of letters and papers from London of the 27th ult. The letter of our Correspondent, being the latest and most important, is all we can at present lay before our readers:

"London, June 27.

"This morning we received Dutch papers to the 24th and French to the 19th; also private letters from Holland, of the same date as the papers, which tend rather to increase than diminish our hopes, for the success of the Austrians. We are told there is not a vestige of the French left in the Tyrol; the brave and loyal people of that country having completely driven them hence.

"I have seen letters from Frankfort, of the 18th instant, which confirm the accounts in the Dutch papers, namely, that the Prince Primate, the King, Queen, and Royal Family of Saxony, had arrived at that town from Dresden, from whence they had fled, in consequence of the approach of the Duke of Brunswick with a large army under his command. On the same day, the Grand Duke of Wurtzburg reached Frankfort with the Foreign Ministers residing at his Court. Soon after, in the evening, arrived also the Grand Duke of Berg, (lately created) Son of the King of Holland, who was amongst other fugitives from Saxony. The town of Frankfort was in the utmost state of alarm and confusion, and the fugitives from Dresden knew not where to fly for safety, as Frankfort was soon expected to fall. All accounts agree, that the Germans throughout Germany, are become enthusiastic in the cause of their country: But however pleasing this intelligence may be, it does not exceed that which has this moment come to hand, and I wish I could add was equally authentic.

"I am just informed from the Foreign Office, that a Messenger arrived there about an hour ago, from the Continent, with the agreeable tidings that an Insurrection had broken out at Presburgh, in which the Nobility and the leading men of the country took a part, and had threatened to depose the Emperor, if he did not give direction for the immediate return of his army which had marched against the Austrians. It is also added, that they peremptorily demand the Emperor to make peace with this country. I hope you will soon have this gratifying intelligence confirmed; but at present I can only say, that it is generally believed at the Foreign Office."

GRAND EXPEDITION.

Unprecedented exertions are making to send to sea the Grand Expedition intended to operate as a diversion in favour of Austria. It will diverge toward several points, none of which, it is supposed, are exactly known. It is indeed said, that Government did, upon positive information, propose some weeks ago an attack upon the shipping in the Scheldt, but their informant fled over to the enemy; that object is, therefore, now said to be abandoned; but of this we are no more certain than we are respecting any other to which the attention of Government has since been directed. The force preparing will amount to 36,000 men. The naval part of it, we understand, will be under Sir Richard Strachan. The Generals already named for commands in it are, Lieutenant Generals Sir E. Coote, Sir John Cadogan, the Marquis of Huntly, Sir John Hope, Mackenzie, Fraser, & Grosvenor—Major Generals William Stewart, C. Hope, Thomas Graham, Sir W. Erskine, and Dyott—Brigadier Generals Howson, &c. &c. Major General M'Leod is to be Adjutant General, and Lieutenant General Brownrigg to be Quarter Master General. The cavalry to be under Lord Rossyn. It is said no commander in Chief has been yet named, nor is it likely that the nature of the service to be performed will be such as can centre in the command of one person. An embarkation of 12,000 troops is to take place at Portsmouth immediately. The regiments are to march in with all possible speed, encamp on South-sea Common, and at Gosport, and embark from those places as fast as transports can be got ready to receive them. Colonel Torrott is appointed to the command of the Royal Artillery, which will be employed on the service, with the rank of Brigadier-General. It is ordered, that arrangements may be made to embark this force with the utmost celerity. A vast number of flat-bottomed boats are attached to the different armaments fitting out along the eastern coast.

July 3.

London papers and Letters were this morning received by Express from Donaghadee. Their contents are of considerable importance confirming the intelligence of the capture of Dresden, Wurtsburg, and Liepsic, by the Austrians. The Foreign Papers also contain the formal announciation by Bonaparte, of his having annexed the Papal dominions to the Fr. Empire. The decree to this effect was issued at Vienna, the 17th May, in the plenitude of the first successes of the campaign.

Dutch papers of Monday last have been received. They contain the eighteenth Bulletin of the French army, dated at Vienna on the 13th ult. by which it appears that the Fr. Emperor was still either unwilling or unable to cross the Danube to attack the Austrians.

The (Hamburgh Correspondent) confirms the intelligence of the successes of the various Austrian Corps which are in motion in detached parties in Saxony and in the Tyrol—the operations of these aimed bodies evidently have excited considerable alarm on the part of the French, is a proof of which we may add that fresh troops are continually pouring into the seat of war from France and its dependencies.

DRESDEN, June 12.

Yesterday morning an Austrian corps from 8 to 10,000 men strong, arrived here very unexpectedly from Bohemia, after it had previously fallen in, a few miles from this capital, with a Saxon corps, commanded by Colonel Thileman, Adjutant General to his Majesty the King of Saxony. This officer marched from hence with about 3000 men, the whole of our disposable force, as soon as he received advice of the Austrians having made their appearance on the frontiers of Saxony to reconnoitre their strength. Deceived by a treacherous spy, who reported the Austrians to be only 600 strong, he advanced too far, and found his corps on a sudden on all sides surrounded by the enemy, and was at length obliged to yield to the enemy's vast superiority in number, after the most gallant resistance. The brave Col. Thileman escaped with some hundred horse, and carried the unpleasing intelligence to Liepsic, where the Court resided. Immediately after the Austrians had occupied this place, their van put itself in motion on its march to Liepsic, & was last night followed by the whole corps with the sole exception of the regiment of Erbach, which forms at present the garrison of this Town. The Austrians keep the strictest discipline, and all the Royal buildings are provided with safeguards.

MANIFESTO.

VIENNA.

From the Imperial Preft. 1809.

"The tranfactions beyond the Pyrenees, by which a dynafty clofely connected by family bonds with the Auftrian Houfe was robbed of the throne and freedom, would, without any perfonal reference, have deeply affected his Imperial Majefty. Not lefs would his Majefty have been touched and affected by the unmerited fate of a noble and high fpirited nation, which, at one blow, deprived of their deareft bleffings, their independence, their conftitution, their laws and their princes, had no other than the defperate refource remaining of a glorious refiftance. But the circumftances by which this fhocking catastrophe had been prepared and occafioned, added to its natural effect. For twelve years had the Spanifh Court, in order to purchafe from a formidable neighbor, if not friendfhip, at leaft forbearance, facrificed its refources, treafure, troops, fleets, and colonies.—The will of the Emperor was omnipotent in Spain as in France. But inftead of this excefs of fubferviency availing to fave what alone was remaining to it—an independent name, internal fecurity, and domeftic peace—this Court found rather, in its miftaken endeavors to obtain repofe, the immediate fource of its ruin. His Imperial Majefty had alfo declined no facrifice for the maintenance and affurance of peace; only one boundary he had not overftepped. He had at all times carefully maintained the dignity of his throne, and the right of leaving no means unimployed for its defence. That when that is trifled with, and this is neglected, nothing can fhield the State from ruin, the fate of Spain has confirmed by a frightful and warning experience.—In the then fituation of Auftria, fuch an example could not fail of its effect; an army of 200,000 men environed the monarchy, and waited but for the fignal of attack.—The conqueft of the Weftern States being thus completed by that of Spain and Portugal, and the principle, that every thing is juft and lawful which the intereffs of the Emperor of France required, being openly avowed in this act of outrageous violence, and without referve proclaimed in the official papers of the Government; and that reftlefs love of dominion, for which Europe feemed hardly large enough, having on no account found its limit; nothing was more natural than the expectation, that the next mortal blow would be aimed at Auftria. The apprehenfions and the pre fentiments of the world were in concord with fuch an expectation.

"What at the fame time was taking place in Italy, gave new force to thefe threatening omens. That broad circle of dominion which at one time was denoted under the name of the "New Federal Syftem;" at another, under the more expreffive appellation of the "Great Empire;" had long embraced the whole of the Italian States.—This was not enough. The fubjugation was to go into the detail—was to be more immediate and complete. The Pope had, in the fenfe of his duty, refifted a feries of pretenfions which would have wounded the dignity of the head of the Church, and his ancient rights as a Sovereign. In an inftant every thing was difregarded, which reverence for his fublime perfon, and eftem for the greater part of Chriftendom, which beheld in him a common father, appeared to prefcribe even to unfparing violence. The provinces were taken away, which remained to the Pope after earlier encroachments. Rome itfelf became the feat of a military prefecture, and it could not be concealed from the world that his Holinefs endured in his own capital, the fate of a ftate prifoner.—The provinces belonging to the Church, as well as the principalities of Parma and Piacenza, and the kingdom of Etruria, which France herfelf had erected, and now fuddenly and tyrannically deftroyed, were incorporated either with France or the kingdom of Italy; and Auftria learnt on this occafion, by a folemn oration in the French Senate, that "it is the will of the Emperor Napoleon that THE WHOLE COAST OF THE MEDITERRANEAN AND ADRIATIC SEA be united with the French territory or with that of the GREAT EMPIRE."

To rely, under fuch circumftances, upon the uninterrupted continuance of peace, however ftrong the refolution might be to do he utmoſt to obtain it, would have been obvious infatuation. From day to day the neceſſity might occur of vindicating the independence of the monarchy, from pretentions utterly inadmiſſable, or from immediate attack; from day to day the approximation of this critical moment became more apparent. If there were means of adverting this, they could be found only in the adoption of a perfect ſyſtem of defence——only in a military conſtitution which might ſet bounds as effectual as poſſible to the hope of ſubjugating the monarchy with eaſe.—In this ſenſe, and with this deſign alone, did his Majeſty adopt thoſe meaſures which were to lay a broader foundation for the reinforcement and completion of his army. The enlightened patriotiſm of his faithful ſubjects promoted the ſucceſs of thoſe meaſures. Every mind was impreſſed with the conviction that, his Majeſty ſought nothing but well guaranteed repoſe; that nothing was more foreign from his breaſt than a longing after war; and that inevitable neceſſity alone could induce him to demand new ſacrifices from his people. The paternal regulations of the Emperor were every where carried into execution with a confidence honorable alike to the government and its citizen.

"The true character of theſe meaſures could be miſtaken or miſinterpreted by foreign powers, only in caſe they were before reſolved to deny Auſtria the right of ſelf-preſervation. Every thing which was eſtabliſhed at that period, remained within the ſtricteſt limits of a juſt ſyſtem of defence——It was confined to the organization and completion of the military powers of the nation;—and ſo much the leſs reaſon was there to apprehend that this could give offence to any State, as ſimilar, and far more extenſive eſtabliſhments had been made for ſeveral years before, and were every day making not only in France, but in other adjoining countries. The kingdom was ſurrounded by foreign armies, who were put under a war eſtabliſhment, and every moment ready to march.—The Auſtrian troops were on the peace eſtabliſhment; they were diſperſed in their ordinary garriſons, and no where collected together. A poſition exciting leſs ſuſpicion, and giving leſs alarm, could not well be expected from a great State.

"Even on the part of the French Cabinet there was no reaſon to expect complaint; as his Majeſty on every occaſion which preſented itſelf, give proof of his unſhaken adherence to the pacific ſyſtem he had hitherto followed. While, to avoid unpleaſant diſcuſſions, his Majeſty maintained an uninterrupted ſilence on ſome eſſential matters of complaint—while, by virtue of a military decree, more than 80 Auſtrian veſſels had been taken by French cruizers, (a precedure which afforded no promiſing prognoſtic of the freedom of the ſea)—the Auſtrian Court was inceſſantly engaged in repelling from itſelf and its ſubordinate agents the fancied or feigned accuſations which were brought forward by reſtleſs French agents, principally at Trieſte. Not one of theſe accuſations could be verified. They were all victoriouſly refuted. His Majeſty did not, however, reſt here. In order to cloſe a ſource of groundleſs, yet ever returning complaints, and at the ſame time give the French government a proof of readineſs which even anticipated its deſires, and which, as the Emperor flattered himſelf, would allow no doubt to ariſe concerning his real ſentiments, his Majeſty did not heſitate, how ſeverely ſoever this farther reſtriction upon the laſt remains of commerce would be felt in his maritime provinces, to ſhut his harbours (though not required to do ſo) againſt the flag of the North American States.

"But nothing now had the power to induce France to eſtimate more juſtly the conduct of his Majeſty. The ſteps which his Majeſty had taken to ſecure the exiſtence and independence of his ſtates, in caſe of a nearer approaching dandger, paſſed in the eyes of the Emperor Napoleon for ſo many unwarrantable attempts to counteract the plans which had long been prepared, and were to determine the future deſtiny of this kingdom.——Theſe ſteps were treated as hoſtile movements againſt France.——The moſt anxious endeavors of the Auſtrian Miniſter to ſet this matter to a proper light were without effect. Their explanations were not worthy of any attention. The French Cabinet intimated in an official note of the 30th of July, 1808. "War is inevitable, unleſs the military movements made throughout the Auſtrian Monarchy be ſucceeded by meaſures of a directly contrary tendency;" and this alſo, after the ſame note had immediately before expreſſed, "The French army in Germany, as well as in Italy, is twice as ſtrong as it was in 1805, independently of the troops of the Confederation." From that day war was to be conſidered as declared. The language then held was never retraced.—At Paris, Bayonne, and Erfurt, it remained unalterably the ſame. If, in the mean while events occurred which held the French armies engaged on other points, this could be conſidered only as a compulſory poſtponement of actual hoſtilities. The reſolution was embraced to bring the point to deciſion as ſoon as poſſible. The relation between Auſtria and France had taken a certain direction; and an eſſential change in thoſe relations was for this reaſon impoſſible—that the conditions of peace impoſed by the Emperor Napoleon was of ſuch a character that it could not be even a ſubject of deliberation.

"Already in the month of Auguſt, ſteps were taken which cauſed an immediate rupture to be apprehended. The German princes dependent upon France were called upon to furniſh troops even beyond their contingents, to collect them together into camps, and to be every day prepared to march. That which with intentional perverſity was called "the Armaments of Auſtria," was aſſigned as the reaſon for theſe meaſures——The French armies themſelves made movements, the direction and object of which were for a long time veiled in obſurity During ſeveral weeks the ſtrongeſt apprehenſions were raiſed on different points of the Auſtrian frontier, and numerous French agents, from Liſbon to Conſtantinople, already announced the ſpeedy ruin of this Monarchy.

"The tempeſt, however, diſperſed for a time. But not to ſuffer the moment to paſs away without profiting from it, the French Cabinet required the immediate and unconditional recognition of the French Prince who had been nominated king of Spain, amid the moſt determined reſiſtance of the Spaniſh nation. The price ſet upon this recognition, was the removal of the French troops from the hitherto cloſely environed frontiers of Auſtria to ſomewhat more remote, but not leſs dangerous time, that he was indebted for the altered poſition of the French troops, merely to the neceſſity of employing them on another theatre, and by no means, from conſideration for Auſtria. The unconditional recognition of the new king of Spain was, under theſe circumſtances, no indiſpenſible procedure; and ſince, moreover, the moſt weighty objections to this meaſure preſented themſelves on all ſides, his Majeſty thought himſelf juſtified in not carrying it into effect. But even in the negociations on this propoſal, his Majeſty evinced with a clearneſs which could not be miſtaken, his invariable deſire to avoid whatever could give the French government juſt reaſon for diſſatisfaction.

"The reſidence of the Emperor Napoleon in Erfurth caſt a new, & no very joyous light over the real ſtate of things. What was mentioned there, what was required from him amid the moſt vehement threats, was to be conſidered as nothing but a commentary upon the Declaration of the 30th of July.—Far from relinquiſhing either the ſubſtance or the form of that Declaration, the Emperor Napoleon on the contrary boaſted, that, as a proof of extraordinary forbearance, and at the ſame time as an eſpecial complaiſance to the friendly mediation of an independent Sovereign, it he has HITHERTO ſpared Auſtria."

"The campaign in Spain, led to a pauſe of ſome months; but no ſooner did the Emperor Napoleon believe, that to a certain degree he had aſſured himſelf of the conqueſt of that unhappy country, than the ſtorms burſt forth againſt Auſtria with renewed violence. It was from the interior of Spain that the firſt command iſſued for the armament of Germany. The Emperor's return to Paris was the ſignal for the moſt deteſtable lampoons, in which the pretended deſigns, the paſt calamities, the preſent external and internal condition, and even the moſt illuſtrious perſons of the Auſtrian Houſe, were treated at one time with deriſion, and at another time with bitterneſs; and no means were left unemployed to alenate the eſteem and confidence of his people from the Sovereign, his ſervants and ſyſtem of government. Chance alone could not have cauſed theſe articles to appear in every public paper ſimultaneouſly. It was impoſſible to miſtake their origin. At the ſame time, the German Princes under the influence of France were occupied in putting their collective military power into a ſtate of preparation. All the French troops which remained in Germany and Italy aſſembled at ſeveral principal points; and it was no further to be doubted that the long determined attack upon Auſtria was delayed only till the arrival of freſh reinforcements; and when poſſibly the threatening preparations made might have a diſheartening influence upon the counſels of the Auſtrian Cabinet.

"His Imperial Majeſty had labored with ſincere and indefatigable preſervance for the maintenance of peace. He had, during 3 long years, ſubmitted to many ſevere and unjuſt demands of the French Cabinet, without giving utterance to a ſingle complaint. He had brought a long ſeries of coſtly ſacrifices to his longing wiſhes for repoſe. He even at different times indulged the idea of forming, by means of new treaties, more definite relations with France; an idea which, in fact, could never be realiſed, becauſe his Majeſty ſought for nothing by it but pledges for the permanence of repoſe and ſecurity for himſelf and his neighbours: that is, he ſought ſuch conditions as the French Cabinet muſt neceſſarily oppoſe, and not accede to in the purſuit of projects of a totally different character. When, finally, every thing was thought to be exhauſted which had been imagined, in order to put the amicable ſentiments of Auſtria to the ſevereſt proofs, the French Government, neverthelſs, ſucceeded in driving his Imperial Majeſty to reſiſtance, by inſiſting that he ſhould deſiſt from thoſe meaſures which were an eſſential part of the defence of the country. To purchaſe peace at this price was impoſſible. The Monarchy was from that ~~moment~~ annihilated, when they on whom was impoſed the care for its preſervation were ready with their own hands to deſtroy the laſt bulwark of their exiſtence.

"The Emperor could not have deceived himſelf concerning the import of his deſire, nor would he have ever formed ſuch a pretention, if that, which could not but neceſſarily follow it, had not already conſtituted a part of his plans. Whatever may be done, either now or hereafter, to conceal the point of view from which the preſent relations muſt be judged, there will always remain but one ſingle charge, againſt which Auſtria has nothing to ſay. To lay claim to independent exiſtence at a criſis when one State after another was loſing its ancient conſtitution and independence--this alone was Auſtria's offence. The often repeated expreſſions of the Emperor Napoleon, that he has nothing to require of Auſtria, could have no other import than that——not Auſtria ſhould felicitate herſelf on the integrity of her Empire (for the moment at leaſt, & till further arrangements,)

y. The Emperor's return to Paris was signal for the most detestable lampoons, in ch the pretended designs, the past cala-ies, the present external and internal con-on, and even the most illustrious persons the Austrian House, were treated at one e with derision, and at another time with ernels; and no means were left unemployto alleviate the esteem and confidence of people from the Sovereign, his servants as impossible to mistake their origin. At same time, the German Princes under influence of France were occupied in put-g their collective military power into a e of preparation. All the French troops ch remained in Germany and Italy assem-d at several principal points; and it was further to be doubted that the long de-nined attack upon Austria was delayed

y till the arrival of fresh reinforcements;
when possibly the threatening preparatimade might have a disheartening influ-e upon the counsels of the Austrian Ca-et.

His Imperial Majesty had labored with ere and indefatigable preservance for the ntenance of peace. He had, during 3 long s, submitted to many severe and unjust ands of the French Cabinet, without givutterance to a single complaint. He had ught a long series of costly sacrifices to longing wishes for repose. He even at erent times indulged the idea of forming, means of new treaties, more definite relas with France; an idea which, in fact, ld never be realised, because his Majesty ght for nothing by it but pledges for the manence of repose and security for him-and his neighbours: that is, he sought conditions as the French Cabinet must ssarily oppose, and not accede to in the suit of projects of a totally different chaer. When, finally, every thing was thought e exhausted which had been imagined, in r to put the amicable sentiments of Auto the severest proofs, the French Go-ment, nevertheless, succeeded in driving Imperial Majesty to resistance, by insist-that he should desist from those measures ch were an essential part of the defence the country. To purchase peace at this e was impossible. The Monarchy was that moment annihilated, when they whom was imposed the care for its preseron were ready with their own hands to ow the last bulwark of their existence.
The Emperor could not have deceived self concerning the import of his desire, would he have ever formed such a pre-ion, if that, which could not but necesy follow it, had not already constituted a of his plans. Whatever may be done, er now or hereafter, to conceal the point iew from which the present relations must judged, there will always remain but one e charge, against which Austria has nog to lay. To lay claim to independent ence at a crisis when one State after anowas losing its ancient constitution and pendence—this alone was Austria's of-
e. The often repeated expressions of Emperor Napoleon, that he has nothing to re of Austria, could have no other import this—that Austria should felicitate heron the integrity of her Empire (for the ent at least, & till further arrangements,) but stripped of all the attributes which could impart to her firmness and worth, without enjoying any security for the future; without the political influence which is inseparable from the existence of a great state, or claiming a voice in the common concerns of Europe. If this intimation that France required nothing of Austria, were not sufficiently refuted by a long series of facts, but principally of the insolent pretention to condemn as unwarrantable measures of mere territorial defence, it would still, in the form in which it stands, characterise more distinctly than the ablest description the state of the monarchy till then, and the condition of Europe.

"His Majesty has recourse to arms, because the duty of self-preservation does not permit him to comply with the condition upon which alone the French Cabinet grants the continuance of peace; viz. to yield up a means of just defence, because he dares no longer delay the protection of countries and nations, which God has entrusted to him, against an invasion long planned, more than once clearly announced, and now ripe for execution; because he is sufficiently acquainted with the thoughts and wishes of his people, to know that there is not one among them who would not prefer the utmost exertions in their power to an ignoble self annihilation by voluntary injection.

"His Majesty has embraced this resolution with a feeling which must inspire himself and every just defender of his cause with confidence; for not only is the step which his Majesty has been impelled at length to take the most just in itself, but his Majesty rejoices in the consolatory and inestimable assurance that the whole world acknowledges it to be so. The Emperor's just principles—his detestation of unnecessary wars—his long, our ineffectual efforts to avoid the conflict which has now burst forth, are so notorious; the designs of the enemy are so little concealed, and the motives which have called for this final resolution are so decisive, that truth and justice must be banished from the Earth, if all free judgeme ts were not unanimous concerning the origin of this war.

"The immediate object of his Majesty is to put an end to that unnatural and ambiguous state in which Austria during three years has vacillated; a state which, under the vain denomination of peace, has involved in all the sacrifices, burthens and dangers of the most oppressive war;—and to place the country in a situation which may secure it the honorable repose of a real peace. But such a situation cannot subsist while foreign armies, it matters not under what pretence, are allowed to hold the Monarchy in a state of perpetual siege; it cannot subsist while the political and military relations of the States which surround Austria, are of such a quality, that it needs only a single order, a hint from a foreign country, to spread over the whole Austrian frontier the apprehension of hostile incursion; and while seriously intended, or merely illusive movements, or only the threatening proximity of a numerous army, ready to strike, compel the adoption of extraordinary means of defence, and costly armaments.

"The security of the Austrian Monarchy cannot, therefore, be sought in an insulated state. It cannot be conceived as separate from the state of adjoining countries, and from the general condition and constitution of the collected system of European state policy. Austria can find a perfect guarantee of her independence, only in that degree of independence in the powers which surround her, which the claim of universal dominion, from whatever quarter it proceeds, would render impossible. Austria cannot not and ought not to look with careless indifference upon the state of those powers, more especially Germany and Italy. Her interest is too closely, too indissolubly interwoven with the interest of those countries, The central position of her Monarchy causes her to come too frequently in contact with those states; and the station she has held for centuries, and the share she has taken in all great European concerns, has connected her too intimately with the whole body politic, to permit her, without sustaining a mortal wound, to be torn from it.

"His Imperial Majesty's wishes and sentiments are in perfect harmony with the unalterably prescribed interests of his dominions. Next to the duty of providing for the welfare of his subjects, and the support of his throne, his Majesty will at all times consider those as the most sacred which spring from a sincere regard for the repose, felicity, prosperity, and lawful freedom of his neighbors. The Emperor will never deem himself authorized to interfere with the internal relations of foreign states, or to assume to be the judge of them, or their system of government, or their developement of their power. He demands just reciprocity. Far removed from ambition and jealousy, the Emperor will envy do other Sovereign, his power, his fame or his just influence; it is only in the exclusive claim to these prerogatives that lies the object of general apprehension, and the root of everlasting wars. It is not France which has generated the present conflict, in the prosperity and maintenance of which his Majesty will always feel an interest, but the progressive extention of a system, which under the indefinite title of a French Empire, allows Europe to enjoy no other than its law. That conflict will cease, and all the wishes of His Majesty will be fulfilled, when the reign of moderation, forbearance, the reciprocal dependence of every State, respect for the rights of each, the inviolability of treaties, and the preponderance of pacific councils, shall assume the place of an arrogant system of sole and exclusive dominion.

"By what means and to what extent these just wishes may be realized his Majesty leaves in the hands of Providence. Only this much he ventures confidently to promise, that even for his own supreme interests, for the undiminished preservation of his own Monarchy, he will never adopt or require measures which can encroach on the well acquired rights, independence and security of other States, and that if the success of his arms should correspond with the justness of his views, the same results of the war from which Austria expects an adequate guarantee to her independence and her future repose, will at the same time be in perfect harmony with the true interests of her neighbours, and the common welfare of Europe."

HALIFAX, July 21.

By an arrival at Newfoundland from Lisbon, news had been received to June 1—it is favorable; and announces great Austrian victories &c.

A letter from Lisbon, June 10, says, "This moment accounts are received that the English and Spaniards have retaken Ferrol."

BOSTON, July 31.

A letter, received yesterday from Halifax in 7 days from that place, contains the following information:—"London dates to the 16th June have reached this place; they advise, that Bonapartes army had evacuated the Island of In-der Lobau, and returned again to the Vienna side of the Danube with severe & great loss.

There are various reports of battles subsequent to the 23d May. Prussia is said to be coming forward with an army of 40 or 50,000 men; the Duke of Brunswick is also said to have raised his standard in Saxony, and to be daily strengthening his party.—Col. Schill is not dead, as was reported; but on the contrary has augmented his forces very considerably.

N. YORK, August 3.

The brig Orange, Capt Hathaway, arrived at this port yesterday from Oporto, which place he left on the 28th of June. Capt H. informs us, that the British and Portuguese armies were at Branco on the 24th June, in pursuit of the French army under gen. Victor. Soult's army was said to be in Spain, excepting 600 of his rear guard, and 80 pieces of cannon, which had been taken by the British army. On the 26th and 27th of June, 1800 French prisoners of war, were embarked at Oporto for England. The French were e[illegible] of Portugal.

YORK, SEPTEMBER 2, 1809.

Cornwall, August 5d.

This day the Students of the Public School were examined in the presence of the Trustees, the Clergy and gentlemen of the vicinity, and several respectable strangers from Montreal. The exhibition commenced at 10 o'clock in the morning, and finished at three. A number of pieces composed for the occasion, chiefly in verse, were recited as interlude between the classes; from among these we send you the Prologue.

PROLOGUE.

As on St. Lawrence banks I lately stray'd,
To view his rolling flood—meet fancy laid,
What glorious scenes shall here infuse delight
When ten revolving cent'ries take their flight.
O shall the wisdom of the Parent state
Still give her aid to make us good and great.
Spread justice, freedom, knowledge through the plains
And virtue nourish in her children's veins.
And shall her genius noble deeds inspire
That fill her offspring with their father's fire.
Her liberal arts and science expand
These cheering blessings through this fruitful land.
But learned hails along these banks appear,
The nurse of Bards to ev'ry nation dear.
But if her Sun of glory must decline,
And on th' admiring nations cease to shine.
Her sons perhaps, when plenty ease bestows
And learned leasure fond of lost repose.
With grateful pride shall fruitfully explore
The march of science on this rugged shore.
And bid some hard unlearned numbers flow
When first the Nymph display'd her golden wing.
I join the bard exulting in his theme,
Pour from his hearing breast a glowing stream.
I feel, I feel the tumult of his soul
And thus methinks his vig'rous numbers roll.
When Europe dress'd in fable robes of war,
Wept in despair beneath a tyrants blow.
Imploring Britain by the rights the nurs'd
The vile usurper's slavish chains to burst.
When ranking treachery and hatred burl'd
Their dreadful evils o'er a prostrate world.
And when our Fathers propt the sinking cause
Of justice, order, liberty and laws.
Rescued the nations crush'd by lawless power,
And clos'd in death, the Tyrant's latter hour.
At this eventful time which must engage
The lively ken of ev'ry future age.
Bright science on this distant land appear'd
And gen'rous Gore her tender branches rear'd.
Enlighten'd Gore, who loves the rapt'rous glow
Which none but science' av'rites votaries know.
Those glorious truths which mighty Newton knew,
Were first presented to the chosen few.
How gravity and swift projection poise,
The splendid orbs that deck the circling skies.
Sustain the fickle wand'ring Queen of night
And Sol himself the source of heat and light.
How fix Mechanic powers by skilful art
To one the strength of millions can impart.
Arts various properties appear in course,
Its weight, its pressure and elastic force.
The num'rous benefits that daily flow
From this rare element to all below.
Wonder on wonder opens to their view,
As nature's works their curious eyes pursue.
New worlds sublime great Newtons tubes display
And subtle wonders microscope pourtray
The jarring elements their secrets shew
The cause of sound, the tides amazing flow.
Light, fickle water, earth and cruel fire
The mind with many novel thoughts inspire.
The Magnets useful properties unfold
And electricity enwrapt in Gold.
The youthful minds admire the splendid view,
But more the simple rules found to few.
Effects they think so beautiful and grand,
The guidance prove of an almighty hand.
This lovely science always leads the soul
Up to the Architect that rules the whole.
To him she points in all her brilliant course
Our greatest friend, our only sure resource.
And from his grand perfection quickly draws
For human life, the best and purest laws.
She bids Swees freedom cheer our native plains
And equal rights, justice pure maintain.
Dark superstition from her presence flies
And gloomy ignorance turns pale and dies.
The virtues in their room their charms proclaim,
And dear religion, Heav'n's eternal flame.
But who can trace, the Poet through the whole
O[illegible] delightful song that fill'd my soul.
[illegible] thoughts he strove in vain to raise
To Science, Heavenly science give the praise.

THE KING'S SPEECH

On Wedneſday evening the following Speech was delivered by the Lords Commiſſioners of to both Houſes of Parliament:

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"We are commanded by his Majeſty to acquaint you, that his Majeſty has great ſatisfaction in being enabled by the ſtate of the public buſineſs, to releaſe you from your laborious attendance in Parliament.

"His Majeſty doubts not, that on your return into your reſpective counties, you will carry with you a diſpoſition to inculcate both by inſtruction and example, a ſpirit of attachment to thoſe eſtabliſhed laws, and that happy conſtitution, which it has been his Majeſty's wiſh to ſupport and maintain, and upon which, under divine providence, depends the welfare and proſperity of the Kingdom.

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"The attrocious and unparalleled act of violence and treachery by which the ruler of France attempted to ſurpriſe & enſlave the Spaniſh nation, while it has excited in Spain a determined and unconquerable reſolution againſt the French and the uſurpation of the French government, has at the ſame time awakened in the other nations of Europe a determination to reſiſt by a new effort the continued and encreaſed encroachments on their ſafety and independence.

"Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

"We have it in command from his Majeſty, to thank you for the liberal proviſion which you have made for the ſervices of the preſent year—and to expreſs the ſatisfaction which his Majeſty derives from your having been enabled to provide for theſe ſervices without any other immediate addition to the burthens upon the people.

"His Majeſty particularly commands us to acknowledge your prompt attention to his wiſhes reſpecting an increaſed proviſion for the poorer clergy, an object in the higheſt degree intereſting to his Majeſty's feelings, and deſerving the favorable conſideration of Parliament.

"Although the uncertainty of all human events, and the vicitudes attendant upon war, forbids too confident an expectation of a ſatisfactory iſſue to the preſent ſtruggle againſt the common enemy of Europe, his Majeſty commands us to congratulate you upon the ſplendid and important ſucceſs, which has recently crowned the arms of the Emperor of Auſtria, under the able and diſtinguiſhed conduct of the Archduke Charles.

"To the efforts of Europe for its own deliverance his Majeſty has directed us to aſſure you, that he has determined to continue his moſt ſtrenuous aſſiſtance & ſupport, convinced that you will agree with his Majeſty in conſidering that every exertion for the re eſtabliſhing of the independence and ſecurity of other nations, is no leſs conducive to the true intereſt, than it becomes the honor and character of Great Britain."

We underſtand that it is the intention of Government to ſend a ſtrong force to occupy the Iſland of Rugen, in the Baltic, to as to be able to afford prompt aſſiſtance to the general ſpirit of inſurrection which has broken out in the north of Germany againſt French oppreſſion.

Official details.—The following, from a London paper of the 18th of June, are the Auſtrian official details of the battle of the 21ſt and 22d of May, (publiſhed by the Arch Duke Charles) which were promiſed in the Preliminary Report already given.

Brittenlee, May 23.

The French army commanded by the Emperor Napoleon in perſon, has been totally beaten on the 21ſt and 22d of this month, at Aſpern and Eſsling, by the Auſtrian army, commanded by the Arch-Duke Charles. Several days before the two ſanguinary ones, the French army had prepared a grand attack, by movements and demonſtrations upon a line ſix or eight leagues oppoſite Vienna, above and below that city.—The Archduke, who on the 16th and 17th of May had collected and contracted the columns of his army in a line parallel with the left bank, was eager only to ſecond the ardor of his troops to come in contact with the enemy, and to take their revenge for the battles of the 19th, 20th, 21ſt, and 22d of April.—The opportunity was afforded them on the 20th.

The Emperor Napoleon evinced a determination to paſs the Danube by a bridge, whoſe right was upon Labou, an iſle of the Danube, two leagues long and three-fourths wide. It is below Vienna, and a league and a half diſtant by the right bank, and three leagues by the left; the Danube making an arm, whoſe angles both inſide and outſide, ſerved for a ſupport to the developement of the French army. The Archduke did not attempt to oppoſe the paſſage. The French troops who had already debouched, and who took part in the battle of the 21ſt, chiefly conſiſted of three diviſions, generals Legrand's, St. Cyl's and Molitor's, and a ſtrong body of cavalry. It was thought at firſt, by the movements of the French army, that it wiſhed to puſh its line upon the village of Aſpern on its left, and on the village of Eſsling, a little more advanced on its right.

The two armies began the battle about 4 P. M. on the 21ſt—and after the moſt obſtinate reſiſtance, the French army was diſlodged and driven back to the Danube with the exception of the extremity of the wood on the bank, where they continued to maintain themſelves. The firing had laſted without interruption till 11 at night and night alone prevented us from clearing the banks of the Danube.

On the 22d, at 4 P. M. the attack recommenced.—In the mean time the emperor Napeleon had brought all his army both upon the Labou and in front of the Danube, and it reſumed the ſame line as on the preceding day.—His force was on that day 10,000. Beſides the French corps, he had brought over part of the Bavarians, and the Baden and Heſſe Darmſtadt contingents.—A part of his guards and all his cuiraſſiers and heavy cavalry were in the field.

The Emperor Napoleon had proceeded to the left bank of the Danube, and directed all the movements of his army.—At firſt the latter had ſome advantage, and ordered his cavalry to charge and ſupport the infantry, which had reinforced itſelf in Eſsling, and had again taken poſt in Aſpern; but the repeated charges of the cavalry could not pierce our centre. Here Prince John de Lichtenſtein commanded, to whom the victory is in a great meaſure to be attributed.

The Auſtrian infantry, who on this brilliant day, performed prodigies of valour, formed quickly en maſſe, and ſuſtained all the ſhocks of the cavalry without ſuffering themſelves to be penetrated. The admirable fire of our artillery ſoon thined the ranks of the cavalry. In fine, our reſerve of grenadiers was put in motion to retake Aſpern for the laſt time, which, in the ſpace of 24 hours, had been taken and retaken 10 times; and to carry Eſsling, where every houſe had, as it were, been taken by ſtorm.

The ſtouteſt reſiſtance was at a large building at Eſsling, which had been a magazine for corn, and which by its thickneſs was proof againſt bullets, and the fire of artillery. All the French that were in Aſpern and Eſsling, periſhed either in the attack or in the flames that conſumed entirely theſe two places. The ſtreets as well as the road that communicates from one to the other were choaked with cuiraſſiers, their arms, and horſes. Our infantry had at length, made itſelf maſters of theſe two principal poſts, and overthrew every thing that was oppoſed to it. The enemy therefore, perceiving that his communications with the Danube was threatened, haſtened his retreat. At 4 in the afternoon he was repulſed at all points and in the evening he croſſed the Labou, leaving on the field of battle a great number dead and wounded, cannon, an infinity of cuiraſſiers and muſquets.

Since the night of the 22d, our army has encamped on the field of battle, which extends along the Danube.——The greater part of the priſoners we have made are cavalry and light infantry.—Gen. Durоſnel, Firſt Equerry, and governor of the pages of the Emperor Napoleon, doing the duty of one of his aid de camps in the battle, was taken on the 22d at 5 in the morning, at the moment he had taken an order for the French cavalry to advance; he was immediately ſurrounded by the dragoons of the regiment of Reiſh.—Gen. Foulet, Firſt Equerry of the Empreſs, was wounded and taken on the 21ſt.

General de Roder, in the ſervice of the King of Wirtemburg, was taken on the 21ſt at Ausdorf, by the ſecond battalion of the Landswher of Vienna.——The 3 Generals have been ſent to Brunn.—Among the wounded who are in our hands and who were taken on the ſecond day, there are a great number of officers of the cuiraſſiers, ſeveral of whom are of the Etat Major.—They are of the regiments of the army who have moſt ſuffered on the 21ſt and 22d, and from the report of the priſoners, they are reduced below a third of their number.

All our attacks have been conducted and executed with that brilliant valor, and that cool intrepidity which laughs at danger, and triumphs over every obſtacle. From the general to the private, every body done more than his duty, and there was as many brave men as there was combatents.—Our loſs is great both in killed and wounded. That of the enemy if we may judge from the field of battle, muſt have been immenſe.

the dale of the Lower Inn, and the Wipp, chiefly by the well known Sandworth and Andura Holes, who commands the fuſileers; and as early as the 27th May, the former arrived with 2000 men, in the environs of Schonberg and Major Tiemer with a large number in Telf. Schonberg is ſituated 3, and Telf 5 hours march from Inſpruck.

On the 28th, an action took place with the Bavarian troops, from 6 to 8000 ſtrong, and an armiſtice was concluded for twelve hours. The Bavarians had evacuated Inſpruck, but were overtaken near Vomp, where another ſevere battle was fought. According to the ſame account the Imperial Auſtrian troops are making inroads from the Southern part of the Tyrol, as far as Verona." Utrecht Gazette, June 12.

Prague, June 15.

According to official intelligence juſt received from the head quarters of the Generaliſſimo Archduke Charles, which ſtill continue in Grafin Nenſidd, no action had taken place between the two grand armies; but his Imperial Highneſs expected a battle would be fought the following morning, the 14th, and had taken the neceſſary meaſures for that purpoſe.

Vienna June 12.

On the 5th a heavy cannonade was heard on the part of Kloſter Newburgh. It is now known that the French had collected a large quantity of pontoons and other neceſſaries for the conſtruction of bridges, which the Auſtrians deſtroyed by the above cannonade.

London, July 1.

A gentleman who left Holland on Tueſday laſt, arrived in town yeſterday. He ſtates that before he left Amſterdam a great fermentation prevailed in the mind; that the people ſeemed inclined to oppoſe the meaſure of their Government, and that an account, ſaid to have been received of an inſurrection having broke out in Flanders, greatly tended to augment and keep alive that ſpirit of diſobedience which was little ſhort of open revolt.

This morning Government received by one of our cruizers, arrived at Harwich from the Dutch coaſts, intelligence of extraordinary exertions making by King Louis, to raiſe and embody all perſons capable of military ſervice. This force, when collected, was to be marched to the frontiers of Weſtphalia, where it was not concealed, the ſituation of his brother Jerome had become very perilous. A letter from Rotterdam dated on the evening of the 26th ult. ſays, "It is expected that the King of Weſtphalia has in conſequence of a general commotion amongſt his ſubjects by this time taken refuge in Frankfort, the inhabitants of which city are even apprehenſive of an hoſtile viſit from the inſurgents."

Letters were received from Amſterdam of ſo late a date as the 28th inſtant. They write that no account of the ſecond battle between the two grand armies had reached them; it was certain, however, that Bonaparte was in an awkward predicament.—He was completely kept in check by the Archduke Charles, while the whole of the Tyrol was up in arms and the North of Germany in poſſeſſion of the Auſtrians. It was underſtood in Holland, that all the Dutch ports would be cloſed on the 20th July, but on what account was not ſaid. American veſſels would not be admitted according to the preſent determination of the Dutch Government.

July 2.—Yeſterday we received an Amſterdam paper of Tuesday laſt, together with ſeveral German Gazettes to the 20th ult.—The information which they furniſh will be read with intereſt, principally as ſhewing the great embarraſſment to which Bonaparte is reduced, and the ſucceſſes which have attended the patriotic exertions of the Tyrolians.

So critical had Bonaparte's ſituation become, and ſo comprehenſive his expedients to reinforce his army, that the ſoldiers wounded in the battle of Ratiſbon, Eckmuhl, &c. who were left in the lick-quarters of Munich, Auſburg, &c. have been obliged to appear before a Medical Commiſſion, charged with an examination into the condition of their wounds, and every man, ſufficiently recovered to be competent to any kind of military duty, has been ſent to the army in waggons. Between the 1ſt and 12th of June, Gen. Meunlin ſent from Auſburgh upwards of 300 wounded officers for Vienna. Many of thoſe who were unable to bear the fatigue of a land carriage were conveyed by water.

July 5.

In the Court of King's Bench, on the 3d ult. an action was brought by a Mr. Wright, an upholſterer, againſt Colonel Wardle, for the recovery of 1914l. for articles furniſhed Mrs. Mary Anne Clarke, upon his perſonal promiſe of payment—in return for which Mr. C. was to give him every information in her power relative to her connection with his Royal Highneſs the Duke of York. The Jury found a verdict for the plaintiff.

It appears that after Colonel W. had accompliſhed his object againſt the Duke of York, he denied the promiſe he had made to Wright, and the action was the conſequence.

Halifax, Aug. 4.

LA FURIEUSE.

The following particulars of the capture of the French frigate La Furieuſe by H. M. ſloop of war the Bonne Citoyenne, Capt. Mounſey, were handed us from a Gentleman who was paſſenger on board the latter ſhip.

The Bonne Citoyenne ſailed from Spithead June 18, with the Quebec trade; and on the 2d July, lat. 44. long. 27. had the misfortune to ſeparate from the convoy, in a thick fog, while purſuing a ſtrange ſail. This unpleaſant circumſtance determined Capt. Mounſey to cruize between lats. 43. and 45. inclining to the weſtward in the hope of falling in with the trade again. At 2 P. M. on the 5th of July, lat. 43. long. 36. a large French frigate was ſeen at a conſiderable diſtance, taking poſſeſſion of an Engliſh merchantman. Capt. M. ordered immediate chaſe to be given, under every ſail that could be ſet; and had the good fortune, though the wind continued light, to gain on her in a purſuit of 14 miles, ſo as to enable him to lay the Bonne Citoyenne within a cable's length of the enemy, at 58 minutes paſt 9 o'clock the next morning, when he commenced the engagement in the moſt ſpirited and gallant manner, which continued with unabated fury, for the ſpace of 6 hours and 51 minutes, during which, the French officers ſince ſay, the frigate diſcharged 71 broadſides, and his Majeſty's ſloop ſtill more profuſe, poured in (from the larboard and ſtarboard alternately, as circumſtances and the extreme heat of the ordnance would permit,) 131 broadſides. At length our ammunition being nearly expended, Captain M. determined to run along ſide of the frigate, give her three warm diſcharges, and board her in the ſmoke, with every man in his ſhip. Here the enemy's prudence got the better of his obſtinacy; & at 50 minutes paſt 4 o'clock P. M. he hauled down his colours.

The ſhip proved to be La Furieuſe frigate, commanded by Capt. La Marian Kerdaniel, pierced for 44 guns, (can mount 54) armed en flute, carrying only twenty 42 pounders, including 8 thrown below ſubſequent to the action, 2 long 24 pounders, and 6 of ſmaller caliber; manned with 195 men (including a Colonel and detachment of the line) and 16 paſſengers. Thus ended a conflict, perhaps never ſurpaſſed in the proudly triumphant page of Britiſh Naval Glory. She is a frigate of the largeſt claſs, 7 years old, lofty and markably faſt, and is well calculated for his Majeſty's ſervice.—She was one of the ſquadron from L'Orient, ſafely blockaded up in the Saints by Admiral Cochrane, and was on her paſſage from Guadaloupe for France, with a valuable cargo of ſugar, coffee, and ſpices. When firſt taken poſſeſſion of, the had 6 feet water in her hold, with 18 ſhot holes under water, and her upper works wonderfully torn, not a ſingle yard aloft, and only her three lower maſts ſtanding, two of which (her mizen and main) went overboard 28 hours after the ſtruck, and left the foremaſt without rigging trembling with its own weight; nor was it untill the 10th of July, that any ſail could be ſet upon it.

With our ſmall boat the only one left that could float on the water, one half our number was immediately exchanged for one half of theirs; and thus were both ſhips expoſed in the middle of the Atlantic, with the number of priſoners in each nearly double that of her crew.

The hull of the Bonne Citoyenne received conſiderable damage; her maſts and yards much injured, her ſails and rigging cut to pieces, (113 cannon ſhot through the main top ſail—19 of which were in one cloth) and her anchor at the bows broken ſhort like a pipe ſhank.

The frigate had 17 men killed, and 32 wounded during the action.—The ſloop of war, one man killed and four wounded.

The conduct of Mr. Black, who was a paſſenger on board the Bonne Citoyenne during the action, is highly ſpoken of by Capt. Mounſey, his officers and crew.

IMPORTANT.

[From Meſſrs. Ruſſell and Cutler's Liverpool Correſpondent]

Liverpool, July 9. 1809.

"LEITH, (Scotland.) July 6. The Quail, Lt. Oſborn, has juſt arrived from Holigoland, which ſhe left on Sunday.—The commander reports, that while quitting the harbour a meſſenger arrived from the fleet of war with news of the Auſtrians having obtained a deciſive victory over the French, the 26th of June. Two Marſhals, 20 Generals, and 40,000 men, killed, wounded, and priſoners. Capt. Malcomb, who left Holigoland 5 hours after the Quail, brings a proclamation of the Archduke Charles for a Te Deum for the victory."

LATEST FROM SWEDEN.

The Ann, Hall, arrived in Beverly, from Gottenburg, left there the 26th June; and brings advice, that the Ruſſian Emperor had been for ſome days on a viſit to the king of Pruſſia, in Konningſburg;—That it was conſidered in Sweden to be problematical, whether Ruſſia would act with or againſt France: That the French troops had all been drawn from Hamburgh, Lubec, &c. to reinforce the Grand Army; and that Daniſh garriſons had been introduced into thoſe places;—That the new King of Sweden was popular, that peace between Ruſſia and Sweden, the excluſion of the Engliſh from Swediſh ports, and the annexation of Norway to Sweden were events expected.

New York, Auguſt 26.

Second Grand Battle.—In addition to what we publiſhed yeſterday, of a ſecond battle having been fought between Bonaparte and the Archduke Charles, the Boſton Gazette received by this morning's mail, ſays, "A veſſel alſo arrived from Rotterdam, which left that port on the 2d inſt. and brings ſimilar accounts."

London, July 3.

Bonaparte in one of his Bulletins, ordered, that the Auſtrian Field Marſhal Chaſteller, if taken, ſhould be executed as a brigand:—In conſequence, the Auſtrian Emperor has notified Napoleon, that the French Generals Deroulnel and Fouleis, as well as other French General Officers, ſhould be held as hoſtages for the perſonal ſafety of the Field Marſhal, ſhould the chance of war put him in the power of the French.

Court of King's Bench, July 3.

WRIGHT v. WARDLE, ESQ.

The Attorney General stated, that this action was brought to recover the sum of 1900 and odd pounds, for household furniture supplied by the plaintiff, on the defendant, Colonel Wardle's credit, to a lady of the name of Mrs Anne Clarke.——On this Lady perhaps the Jury might have heard something, for not very long since he had made some noise in the bankruptcy of an inquiry brought forward in the House of Commons by the defendant. The plaintiff was an upholsterer, and the claim he now made upon the defendant and the manner in which it arose, he would state to the Jury. It seemed sometime about the autumn of last year, Colonel Wardle became acquainted with Mrs. Clarke, and very shortly discovered a great preferance for her; shortly after their acquaintance, the Colonel, the Lady, a Major Dodd, and a Mr. Gurney, set out on a tour of inquiry, or curiosity, and of business, for they visited the Barrello Towers on the coast. About that time Mrs. Clarke had taken a house on Westbourne-green, and Mr. Wardle, no doubt, in well-founded generosity, determined to present her with furniture for it. At that time Mrs. Clarke was indebted to the plaintiff in sums of 5 or 600l. and he would not have given her credit for any sum, knowing her then embarrassments; but as Mr. Wardle was to be the paymaster, he felt no such hesitation. He would prove by the evidence of Mrs. Clarke, and the plaintiff's brother, that Col. Wardle most unequivocally undertook to be the paymaster.—He would shew that he went with Mrs. Clarke to the warehouse of the plaintiff, where he was introduced as the intended paymaster: that he there ordered a side board to be exchanged; gave directions for a new set of dining tables.——That on other occasion he was there with Mrs Clarke and Major Dodd, when the Lady happened to differ from them in the taste of a carpet, the Col. chusing one of scarlet and bronze; upon which occasion the Lady very politely observed, "well as you are to pay, you shall make choice."—He should also prove, that after these goods were sent home, Colonel Wardle was continually at the house at Westbourne place, "otherwise, indeed, then he could recollect," for he was there so much that some times he (a jest whether he had been there the day before or not.——Yet after all this, he now came into court to deny that he was responsible to the tradesman who had lent in this furniture on his credit. It was astounding how he could forget this unaccountable affair, though a trail memory might perchance forget a thing which had happened the day before. But if he really remembered any thing of the transaction he was at a loss to know how Col. Wardle meant to extend him self from the payment. Surely he did not mean to lay that Mrs Clarke was not a creditable witness, especially when she was confirmed by others; but if he denied her testimony, there was Major Dodd who would confirm the plaintiff's case. And this he would do, whether the defendant called him or not. If he were called, he must corroborate Mrs Clarke's testimony; and if he were not called, his very absence would do the same thing.——He must also state to the Jury, that after the plaintiff had furnished some of the articles, he wished to touch a little ready money. Mr. Wright was certainly a very good tradesman for having secured a good paymaster. His next object was to render him a little more one, and therefore he begged a little ready money in advance — The money was therefore mentioned to the Colonel. His reply was, "Ah! money! money; won't a bill do as well."—"Yes, a bill at a short date will do as well."—"Ah!" said he, "but just now, it won't be quite so well to have my name appear on a bill for Mrs. Clarke's affairs!"—The Attorney General begged the Jury to recollect this time was when a certain inquiry was going on in the House of Commons. However, last Mr Wardle, I will contrive it, and manage to get you a bill, which in fact he did, and it his learned friends on the other side had any appetite to go into the transaction, they should have full evidence how the affair was managed —— There were the circumstances which he had to produce in evidence, and from them he had no doubt but the Jury would justly infer that the Colonel must pay the debt for which he had made himself responsible, and no doubt when he heard the opinion of the Jury he would do it with great satisfaction.

Mary Anne Clarke, examined by Mr. Garrow, deposed as follows:—In the Autumn of 1808, I took a house in Westbourne place.—I had shortly before become acquainted with Col. Wardle. At that time I was indebted to Wright in the amount of 5 or 600l and I had no means of paying for the furniture myself, for then I had not a single guinea. But I told Wright, "I had a friend in view who would furnish the house for me." I certainly meant to allude to Colonel Wardle; I was to give colonel Wardle every assistance and information in my power respecting the enquiry he was about to institute, and in return he was to furnish my house.——Among other things I communicated to Col Wardle the conversation I had with Wright about payment.—He said he should consult a friend, and afterwards told me he approved of what had been done.——Col. Wardle knew that I then owed Wright money, for he advised Wright to bring an action against the person whom he supposed liable to pay it, and offered himself to pay the costs of the action; but Wright was afraid, as a tradesman, of using it. Colonel Wardle accompanied me to Wright's. Wright had met with an accident, and was in bed; but he saw Daniel Wright, his brother. I said, this is the gentleman who is to furnish; he was silent and did not reply.

Q. Col Wardle made no reply when you said he was to furnish the house?—A. No, why should he? he went on purpose to give his credit.

Mrs. Clarke continued; Mrs Wright took me aside, and when I returned, I found Daniel Wright and Wardle talking about a side board, which col. Wardle observed was a handsome one, and was to be sent in to me. There were also several other things which they had settled, were to be sent in. After this col. Wardle accompanied me to Wright's several times in a hackney coach, and once or twice went in with me. Once in particular, he and Major Dodd accompanied me. They did not approve of the pattern of the carpet which had been sent for the drawing room. I chose a blue and white. Colonel Wardle a scarlet and bronze. At last, as I could not bring him to my taste, I observed, in the presence of Wright, "Well, as you are to pay, I'll take what you please."—Major Dodd was by, and observed the pattern was Turkish, and would therefore suit me, for that reason, I said I did not like it.

Q. Do you not like any thing Turkish?—A. Not in the pattern of a carpet.—There were several things ordered on that occasion by me and Mr Wardle, in the presence of Major Dodd, and the house was furnished during the 3 months of December, January, and February. Colonel Wardle was continually with me daily; he was ever coming without invitation; he ran over the house from the kitchen to the garret. One day, in particular, I recollect a large mirror coming home: he was in a great passion, so much so, that the man had nearly dropped it. The colonel said as there was a large lustre in the room, the mirror was unnecessary. Wright begged that he might leave the mirror, and perhaps the colonel in a day or two might change his mind. Upon this occasion he observed that Wright would not be so ready in sending things in, if he did not know that he was to be the paymaster. The mirror was afterwards sent back, I thought it was unnecessary. Another day he objected to an elegant writing Desk; he found much fault with it, observed there were two or three already about the house; at all he said it was ill made.—I said no, it was not ill made, and I would pay for it myself rather than return it.

Q. Was it sent back? A. No; he was afterwards ashamed of himself, and it remained. Some short time after this, Wright expressed a wish for some money. I mentioned it to Col. Wardle; he said he had not any ready, but would consult a friend. He told me afterwards he had sent a friend, a Colonel Glenny, to Wright, and they had settled for a bill. A bill had been given—it was given through a Mr. Illingworth, a wine merchant in Mall. He observed that it would be very improper at that time that his name should appear to any bill connected with my affairs; he explained his meaning as being relative to the charges he was about to bring against the Duke of York. The bill was given on the 2d of January, and charges made in the House of Commons a week or two afterwards. The bill transaction was to prevent suspicion in the world.—Illingworth took a bill of me, though I told him it was not worth a farthing. This was a form to keep Colonel Wardle's name out; and so Mr. Illingworth understood.

Being cross examined by Mr. Serjeant Best, she said she became acquainted with Colonel Wardle the last autumn. It was in consequence of a letter she received from the Exchequer Coffee-House, from one M'Cullum. Col. Wardle introduced himself.—She was rather fearful of doing what Wardle wished her to do on the first interview, as he was so little known, and had been in Parliament but a short time. He came about one o'clock & staid until her dinner hour (6); during the whole of which time, as she afterwards understood, Mr Dodd was walking in the street.

Colonel Wardle afterwards introduced Major Dodd, whose name she knew before. It was about the end of November. She went out of town for two or three days with Colonel Wardle, Major Dodd, and Mr. Glenny, whom she understood to be an officer of engineers. They visited the Martello Towers on the coast, she was at that time in distressed circumstances and before she could set out she got 50l. of Wardle to pay her butcher and other trifling bills.—At that time she had several friends about her, and Col. Wardle was afraid they would persuade her not to give the evidence she wanted, and therefore took her out of the way. She had made many applications to him for money, and he always complained of wanting money himself; but he was obliged to find it for her, and let her have sums continually, which he called lending to her.

Q. Were they to be repaid?

A. No; I never understood or intended them to be repaid. She had lately called for a small sum of money; the Col. said, as it was settled in their negociation what she was to have, he would send her a small sum, and the same day he sent her a draft upon a banker, (Marsh, Sibbald & Co.) drawn by one Scott, an army clothier, who had assisted in the inquiry. She explained, by their negociation it was agreed what she should have, that in case it was asked her by the house of commons, whether she did not give her evidence under the expectation of future reward, she might say no.

The Serjeant asked her, whether she had not quarrelled with Mr. Wardle. She said she had not, but Mr. Wardle had not visited her for months, why she did not know; but Mr. Corfield, Mr. Wardle's's Attorney, had come to her on Saturday with a subpoena; he told her, that wishing to treat her with respect, he brought the subpoena himself, instead of sending a clerk with it. That Col. Wardle was a man of honor, and he had brought him in the Champion; that he wished to refer the case to arbitration, and if she appeared in Court, Serjeant Best would cut her up by a severe cross-examination, and Mr. Wardle would give it out she was bribed by the ministers to give evidence against him.

Daniel Wright the brother of the plaintiff, was next called. He stated, that no goods were sent in to Mrs. Clarke's house until Col Wardle came to their warehouse. When he came, his brother had met with an accident, had was confined to his bed. Mrs. Clarke said, this is the gentleman who is to furnish my house. She was then called away by Mrs. Wright to see his brother, and while she was absent, Col. Wardle bespoke several things, particularly a fine board and a set of dining tables. He also confirmed Mrs. Clarke as to the subsequent conversation in the presence of Major Dodd, respecting the carpets. After some time his brother as he understood, expressed a wish for money, and a day or two afterwards Mr. Wardle called at the door in his gig. He said Mrs. Clarke had repeated to him what his brother had said, and asked how much money was wanted. The witness told him his brother wished for 5 or 600l. Wardle said would not a bill do? The witness said if it was at a short date it would do, as his brother could then get cash for it. Wardle then said he could manage it for them and procured them a bill. The bill was sent and paid. The list of the articles was then produced, which the witness and another said was fairly charged. Among the articles were two Grecian couches, 100 guineas; drawing-room curtains, 100l.; a lamp, 18 guineas; & other articles equally costly.

Mr. Serjeant Best then addressed the Jury, and the topics he urged were, that no credit was due to Mrs Clarke, and none to the other witness, because it was clear that many articles were furnished before her acquaintance with Col. Wardle, consequently could not be done on his credit. He pressed these topics with his usual ability and ingenuity, but did not call any witnesses.

Lord Ellenborough having summed up the evidence, said, that if considering the evidence given by Mrs. Clarke and Mr. Daniel Wright was wholly invalidated, they disregarded it entirely, the action must certainly be lost. But if they did not wholly throw out their evidence, if they believed that Mr. Wardle had given orders for furnishing Mrs. Clarke's house, still it must appear the articles charged in the bill were a most extravagant extension of those orders. Should they be of opinion that Mrs. Clarke's house had been furnished by Mr. Wardle's orders, they must find a verdict for the plaintiff to the amount of the upholstery, deducting from the bill the charges for painting, plastering, insurance, coals, &c. But if, on the contrary, they wholly disbelieved the evidence of Mrs. Clarke and Mr. D. Wright, they must give a verdict for the defendant.

After a short consultation in the box, the Jury retired, and in about an hour returned a verdict for the plaintiff, deducting of course the 500l. as paid to the account, 200l. for the goods lent on hire, and the charges for painting, plastering, and every article independent of the upholstery.

The following is the Proclamation dispersed by the Archduke John, on his entrance into Italy:—

ITALIONS!—Give ear to the voice of truth and reason. These tell you that you are the slaves of France; that you for her waste your gold and your blood.—The Kingdom of Italy is a mere dream, a vain name. The conscription, the burthens, the oppressions of every kind, the nothingness of your political existence; these alone are the realities.

"Reason also tells you, that in such a state of degradation, you can neither be esteemed, remain at peace, nor be Italians.—Do you wish to be once more Italians?——Unite then your hearts, and your power to the generous arms of the Emperor Francis.—At this moment he causes a powerful body to descend into Italy. He sends them, not to satisfy an idle thirst of conquest, but to defend himself and secure the independence of all the nations of Europe, which are threatened by a successful attack; that allow no doubt of the inevitable slavery prepared for them.

"I GOD protects the various exertions of the Emperor Francis and his mighty allies—Italy shall be again happy, and once more respected in Europe.——The head of the church shall possess again his freedom and his dominions, and a constitution, founded on nature and true policy, shall bless the Italian soil, and render it impenetrable to any foreign power.

"It is Francis who promises you so glorious and happy an existence. Europe knows it; the word of the Prince is sacred—is as immutable as pure.——Awake, then, Italians, rouse yourselves. Of what ever party you have been, or now are, fear nothing, for you are Italians. We come not to investigate—to punish; we come to aid—to deliver you. Will you remain in the state of confusion in which you are sunken?—Will you behave otherwise than the Spaniards, that people of heroes, whose words and actions are in harmony.

"Do you love less than they, base servitude, because you were seduced into it by snares, by fraudulent speeches; though the treatment you have experienced has been most opposite to those speeches. Italians! truth and reason say to you, that so favorable an occasion never offered itself of throwing off the yoke cast upon Italy. They tell you that if you do not listen to them, you incur the danger arising from the victorious army, which subdues without confideration, a people without a name and without rights; that, on the contrary if you cling to your deliverer, and conquer with them, Italy will resume its station among the greatest nations of the earth, and may become again what it once was, the first.

Italians!—A better fate is in your hands; in hands which brought the torch of illumination into every quarter of the Globe, and restored to Europe, when sunk in barbarity, the sciences, arts and morals.

"Ye Milanese, Tuscans, Venetians, Piedmontese, be mindful of the period of your ancient being. The days of peace and prosperity may return to you faster than ever, if your conduct render you worthy the blessed change.

"Italians!—Have but the will, and you will be Italians again, as glorious as your ancestors, as happy and contented as you ever were in the fairest epoch of your history.

London, July 2.

The communication between Munich and Vienna has become so insecure from the incursions of the Austrians and Tyrolians, that five waggons loaded with specie, which were proceeding from Munich for the payment of the French army, had, on their arrival at Markel, been obliged to return to Munich, and it was supposed would be sent to Aufburgh.

Bonaparte, after the battle of Ratisbon, ordered his military chest, and the greater part of the baggage of his army, to be sent to Mentz, promising his soldiers abundant supplies from the Austrian magazines. He has, however, been disappointed, and obliged to bring back his baggage, &c. from the Rhine to Aufburgh and to transport it from thence to Vienna on rafts. Early in June, Count Collowarth intercepted three of these rafts, with a considerable quantity of baggage and ammunition, on the Danube, below Crems.

The most important successes continue to crown the patriotic exertions of the Tyrolians. They have compelled the Bavarian General Deroy to fly, from the strong position of Kufstein, after two days fighting, and to retire by Wilbachaut towards Munich. General Pichard had at the same time, been driven from Kempton, and been pursued as far as Kaufbeuren within four posts of Aufburgh, while the Wirtemburgh corps, under General Von Scheeler has been beaten beyond the Schuffen. Another corps of patriots from Schernitz, had advanced into Bavaria, as far as Arbling and had on their route been joined by numbers of the inhabitants.

A body of Austrian cavalry, from the Tyrol, has penetrated through Bavaria into Franconia. It proceeded by Ellingen and Gresslingen, and levied heavy contributions on its route. Gen. Moulin dispatched a corps of French and Bavarians from Aufburgh by Newburgh and Auchstadt, towards Nurnburgh, to watch their motions at Dic furth; the hostile squadrons came in contact, and after a sharp action, the French retreated, and the Austrians continued on their route to Nurnburgh, where it is understood they joined the Bohemian corps, under the command of the Duke of Brunswick.

The Archduke Maximillion, on retiring from Vienna, carried with him the whole of his own corps, together with 6000 men who had joined him on the 11th under the orders of Gen. Kienmayer; and this retreat, which is represented in the French Bulletin as the flight of a few individuals, was conducted with the greatest order.

We hear with much pleasure that accounts have been received by Government, of the French having been repulsed with considerable loss in several attempts which they made on the 15th, 16th, and 17th ult. to cross the Danube, in the neighborhood of Pressburgh. The details of these operations are unknown; but the fact of the defeat of the enemy is so far credited by ministers, as to have induced their communication of it to Prince Starembergh; and to the Spanish Ambassador.

Early in the last month several waggons loaded with presents from Napoleon to Alexander, passed through Frankfort, on their route from Paris to Petersburgh. —They are valued at three millions of florins.

The Earl of Chatham has, it is reported, received the necessary orders for his immediate departure as Commander in Chief of the intended Grand Expedition.

Since the raising of the Embargo in America, 150 sail of merchantmen have entered the port of Liverpool, whereas only two vessels have entered the port of London.

The King has been pleased to constitute and appoint the Rt. Hon. Granville Leveson Gower, (commonly called Lord Granville Leveson Gower,) to be his Majesty's Secretary at War.

THE EXPEDITION.

From the Secrecy which has hitherto been preserved, there is not the smallest reason to believe that the numerous points of destination which have been ascribed to the Expedition are announced on any better authority than that of mere conjecture. The quantity of artillery, both field and battering, is so numerous, as to render it extremely probable that a sudden attack is meditated on some great naval arsenal, or place of strength of some of our enemies. It is already discovered that it will be impossible to complete the various arrangements so early as the 8th instant, on which day it was originally proposed that the Expedition should sail, and to collect the whole at one point is found to be equally impracticable, within any reasonable time; the Expedition must therefore sail from different ports. —Portsmouth is the grand point of assemblage; at Harwich and the Downs also troops are collected. Notwithstanding the expedient of employing ships of war to convey the troops, which now appears to be a measure of necessity, the deficiency is such, that even foreign vessels have been taken up by government as transports. The following ships of war have already been appointed to the present service, to which it is expected that there will be a considerable addition.

Ships of the line—Eagle, Impetueux, Revenge, Hero, Valiant, Venerable, Superb, Ganges, Centaur, Aboukir, Resolution, Marlborough, Royal Oak, Alfred, Cæsar, Monarch, Belleisle, Bellona, Orion, Achilles, Repulse, Illustrious.

Frigates. Impetueuse, Rota, L'Aigle, Pearl, Pallas, Dryad.

Bombs. Vesuvius, Devastation.

ARTILLERY.

Sixty 18 pounders, battering; forty 24 do. 110 pieces of field artillery; ten 68lb. carronades; 40 Mortars; many Howitzers; an immense number of Congreve Rockets, Shrapnell Shells, and an ample supply of ammunition for a siege.

Foot Artillery 2300 } Men.
Horse do 8 Troops 960 }

Sir Richard Strachan. Sir Samuel Hood Rear Admiral Otway, and Sir Home Popham, it is said, are already named to naval commands. With respect to the command of the land forces, there is no reason at present, to doubt, that the Earl of Chatham will be intrusted with the direction of this formidable force.

Captain Plampin of the Courageux, has several men of war placed under his command. Guns and stores for between 60 and 70 armed launches are on board the ships of war.

All such American and other neutral vessels as may be engaged by the transport Board to serve, are to be commanded by British officers, and navigated by British crews. It is also said that British merchants have a decided interest in such ships.

Monday morning, at four o'clock, the flank companies, to the number of 480, of the 21 and 31 regiment of foot guards, who were ordered for foreign service, mustered in their barracks, and marched from thence at five o'clock, for Chatham, under the command of Colonel Bing. As they passed under the Horse guards, the men, as with one voice, gave three cheers. The band of the 31 regiment played them out of the environs of London.

Ninety sail of transports came into the Downs on Monday, and part sailed immediately for Harwich. The ordnance ships have almost all been loaded, and are dropping down the river. The troops from Plymouth are arrived at Portsmouth. Most of the line of battle ships have taken out their lower deck guns.

The horses belonging to the 12th regiment of light Dragoons, ordered on foreign service, are in the hurdle order possible, and the men are in high spirits.

At Harwich the troops are all in readiness, and a division of transports have sailed from that place for Deal, to take on board the 11th, 59th, and the first battalion of the 79th regiment. All the ordnance transports will have dropped down the river by next Thursday.

Extract of a letter from Liverpool, dated July 9, to the Editors of the Boston Gazette.

Messrs. M. O'Hough and Co. of this City, received last evening the following letter from the Ruby, capt. Gurnie, dated Hoyle Lake, (quarantine ground, about 14 miles from this place) July 8—viz:

"I have arrived here after a winter like passage of 37 days from Palermo, which I left on the 1st ult. honored with dispatches from Lord Amherst and General Sir John Stewart, whom I left at Malmzo, embarking an army of 23,000 men, British and Sicilian, under his command, destined to attack Naples, and which were intended to sail three days after my departure—the particulars of this and the action of the Austrians, compose my dispatches."

LONDON, July 8.

On Saturday dispatches were received from Admiral Berkely, and Sir A. Wellesley brought by the Entreprenante cutter of 10 guns, from Lisbon.

When the messenger who brought the General's dispatches left the army, Sir Arthur was within sight of Victor's army and intended to give him battle the following day. Victor's retreat was entirely cut off, and from the dispositions that were made there was every rational hope that his army would be destroyed. Sir A. Wellesley had been joined by the 48th regiment.

By the Malta mail, we have received accounts from Smyrna, of the 20th of May, and from Constantinople to the 21st of April. The Grand Seignior is reported to be determined to carry on the war with vigor against the Russians, and was making great preparations for that purpose.

The following short extract of a letter from Heligoland is from a gentleman at the head of a respectable and responsible office, to a public body.

"I have seen the official dispatches of a victory by the Austrians over the French. Thirty thousand of the enemy were killed, & two French Marshals were taken prisoners."

A letter from Hull, dated on Wednesday, says, "A vessel arrived here, this morning, from Heligoland, brings information that another battle had taken place between the Grand Armies on the Danube; that Bonaparte commanded in person, and was wounded, and that the French army was completely defeated, with the loss of an immense number of men in killed wounded and prisoners." The Captain of the vessel arrived at Hull, adds, that this account was implicitly credited at Heligoland on the 2d instant, when he came away. The vessel brought several letters to the same effect, from persons in Heligoland, to their correspondents in London. They all state that Cuxhaven was occupied by 126 British troops.

LISBON June 20.

(Extract of a letter.)

"Yesterday a regiment of British troops sailed up the Tagus; and on Sunday two regiments of infantry were landed here from Gibraltar.

"A very large force is collecting in the North of Portugal. Within the last 4 days, one brigade and two regiments of the Line, which had been quartered here, have marched towards Braga.—The whole of the forces in the North are under the Portuguese general Silveira, who has eminently distinguished himself and has the unqualified confidence of the troops under his command.

"June 17—" General Beresford has been here for a few days to make arrangements; he quitted us on the 9th for Badajos. The armies are in motion; but they cannot march with great rapidity, being compelled to carry with them every necessary article of provision and stores, the country through which they pass affording nothing to their necessities.

"Victor, it is now said, is between Talavera, Merida, and Truxillo; his army spreading to the margin of the Tagus. The allies are approximating to the same situation.

"We are recruiting for men who are to compose new regiments. The service is not attended with much difficulty. Towards payment of this and other extraordinary expences, a contribution has been levied on the opulent and misdoing cities of the inhabitants, which is not to exceed one million of crusades. The contributors pay cheerfully.

"The weather has been very unseasonable, and unusually irregular; at the time I am writing, the rain falls in torrents."

Proclamation.

GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:—

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Councillors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to the Provincial Parliament at our Town of York on the Twelfth day of this present month of September, to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you——GREETING!—

WHEREAS by our Proclamation bearing date the twenty eighth day of July last, We thought fit by and with the advice of our Executive Council to prorogue our Provincial Parliament until the twelfth day of this present month of September, at which time we commanded our Provincial Parliament to be held at our town of York, you were held and constrained to appear; but WE taking into our Royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our executive Council, to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking and by these presents, enjoining you and each of you, that on the Twentieth day of October next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada and therein to do as may seem necessary; herein fail not.

IN Testimony whereof, WE have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed.—Witness our trusty and well beloved FRANCIS GORE, Esquire, our Lieutenant Governor of our said Province at York, this fifth day of September in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and nine, and in the forty ninth of our Reign. "Dead men can't bite."

GENERAL LASNES.

Was born in a village near Perpignan, where his father kept a wine vault and lodging for smugglers waggoners, mule drivers, and other persons of the same description.—He was in 1784, bound apprentice to a dyer, whom, after pilfering, he left, and enlisted in a regiment of dragoons, from which, in some few months he deserted, and the revolution found him a groom with the post-master at Montalimar in Dauphiny. He soon became conspicuous there amongst the patriotic brigands, who in 1789 laid waste that unfortunate country, murdered or proscribed all men of property, and plundered or divided their possessions.

Recommended by the jacobins of that province, he returned in 1796 to Perpignan, where he was chosen an officer in the national guard, and to the terror of all good and loyal men, directed most of the cruel transactions of the Jacobin Club of that city; he was the denouncer and accuser of Colonel Adhemar and the officers of the regiment of Cambresis, the cause of their transportation in chains to the prison of Orleans, and of their massacre at Versailles on the 9th of September, 1793.

In 1793, when war was declared against Spain, Lasnes was promoted to the rank of a Chief of Battalion; and in 1794, to that of a Colonel. By the recommendation of Gen. Dugommier, in the beginning of the same year, backed by the then reigning jacobins and terrorists, he literally put to requisition the daughter of a capital merchant at Perpignan, and married her contrary to the wishes of her parents or her own inclination; afterwards, when he had squandered her fortune, and became acquainted with his present wife, who had been for two years his mistress, he divorced, and left her in the greatest distress with a child; her parents having died in a prison, where Lasnes had confined them as lunatics, because they believed in a God, and he wanted their property.

During Barras's mission to the South of France, Lasnes had made himself noticed for his famous patriotism, and was therefore appointed an adjutant-general under Bonaparte, when in 1795, the rigicide national convention, contrary to the avowed opinion of the sovereign people in France, desired to continue its oppression and tyranny over French men, by having two-thirds of its detested members re elected in the councils of the five hundred, and of the anciens; and the sections and citizens of Paris oppoled this violation of their rights. Surrounded with the mutilated carcases of EIGHT THOUSAND Parisian men, women and children, murdered by their bayonets and cannon, Lasnes and Bonaparte for the first time fraternized together; and so congenial were the feelings of these two revolutionary characters, that when by the influence of Barras, the direct ry nominated Bonaparte the commander in chief of the army in Italy, the latter demanded the rank of a general of brigade for Lasnes, and employed him in such during the campaigns of 1796 and 1797. He distinguished himself in Italy on several occasions, particularly at the passage at Po, on the 7th of May, 1796, at the battle of Fombio, and in the affair of Arlote on the 16th of November following, when he was severely wounded.

When the cruelty & plunder of the French marauders in Lombardy, had produced universal discontent, which broke out in several partial insurrections, Lasnes received from his Corsican friend the honorable commission to silence complaints and clamour by terror and ferocity, and by burning and shooting to make the republicans as much dread death as they are already abhorred. Some towns in the imperial bailiwicks near Genoa, were punished by him with atrocious severity.—In May 1796, he ordered every house in the village of Borgetto to be burnt, after first being plundered by his soldiers, and 2—. of the inhabitants to be shot upon the smoaking ground of their former mansions, after having been forced to see their wives violated, and their daughters ravished under their eyes.—In the next month he inhabitants and their dwellings of 6 villages near Tortona, shared the same dreadful fate. On this occasion Lasnes condemned every man above 15 years of age to die, and every woman or girl under 3—, to surrender herself to the disgusting emotions and lust of his vile soldiery, under pain of being thrown alive into the flames of their burning habitations.

In 1798, Lasnes went with Bonaparte to Egypt, and when he deserted his army, accompanied him back again to France.——In the revolution effected by the Corsican in November 1799, Lasnes had a great share. He was first Commander of the important post of the Thuilleries, and afterwards in the hall of the Council of Ancients.

When Bonaparte no longer apprehended resistance in the capital, he sent Lasnes to restrain and keep in subjection, the rebellious jacobins in the South of France, in particular at the seige of Toulon. Having to the satisfaction of the consular government, but at the expence of the lives of many of his former accomplices calmed, if not quieted the part of the republic, he was made the successor of General Murat, as chief over the consular guard at Paris; in this place he tried more to cultivate the friendship and confidence of his officers and men, than to obtain the favors of the First Council; he acted more as a person who intended to succeed him, than one who wished to strengthen or preserve his usurpation. Of all despots, the military are the most suspicious; Bonaparte seen observed the manoeuvres of his general, and on ordering an examination of the military chest, a deficit was discovered amounting to five hundred thousand livres, which Lasnes had distributed among the soldiers, well knowing where bayonets elevate a tyrant into power, bayonets also can destroy the tyrant with the same ease. He usurped with the usurpation.—Upon this discovery, Lasnes was immediately put under arrest, and many of the countries ex everthat he was to be made a batisfaction; but after a private conversation of three hours with the Conful, during which he is faid to have hinted, he had taken care that neither the political fecrets of Italy, nor the poifonous deeds of Syria fhould periſh with him, he was fent in an honorable exile as ambaſſador to Portugal.—His infolent conduct in that country is well known, and that in trying to prevent the lawful trade with England, he abuſed and diſhonoured his priviledged character of deplomatic agent, by introducing contraband commodities from France—and when his frauds and infamy were diſcovered, inſtead of being aſhamed of his nefarious tranſactions, he impudently inſiſted upon the diſmiſſal of thoſe faithful ſervants to their king and country, who had loyalty enough to expoſe this new proof of French republican villainy.

A ſhort time before, the Regent had been the ſponſor of Lasnes' child, and preſented him with many valuable preſents. He, notwithſtanding this liberal condeſcenſion, wrote a threatening letter, & not receiving a ſatisfactory anſwer, deſerted his poſt, and left the country without any further ceremony. At his return to France, he was ordered not to approach Paris within thirty leagues, but this marked diſgrace was of ſhort duration, and when the war began again Lasnes aſſumed his former ſtation, where his intrigues had already effected ſuch changes in the miniſtry as French pretentions might deſire, but which Engliſh moderation alone at that time could prevent from being the ruin of Portugal.

Since that time the Regent having ſtood godfather to another child of Lasnes; and that contrary to the etiquette of his court, he admitted him and his wife to his table. If any evidence be required of the degraded ſtate of the continent, this fraternity of a ſovereign Prince, with a revolutionary ſans-culotte and with his republican wife, once his miſtreſs, may convince even the moſt incredulous.

This is the man for whom Frenchmen are compelled to ſign a REQUIEM.

LONDON, July 8.

The Army.—Admiral Lord Gardner has ſtruck his flag on board the Britomar, at Yarmouth, preparatory to his taking a command in the ſecret expedition.

As we learn by the letters of our correſpondent at Chatham, Portſmouth, Deal, Ramsgate, Canterbury and Harwich, the moſt active exertions are making to fit out the grand expedition. Report again buſily ſtates that more than one expedition will ſtart, and at one time, and the circumſtances mentioned to us make it probable that Lord Chatham is certainly to command one, and Sir John Hope another; and it is not improbable but there may be a third, with which the Marquis of Huntly will go, and Lord Cochrane will have the naval command of it.

The name of Sir Samuel Hood is added to the liſt of naval heroes, who will go with the expedition about ſtarting.

As all the ſhips cannot be ready for the reception of troops before the 12th inſt. no embarkation can commence till after that day. We imagine the grand expedition will not ſtart ſo ſoon as firſt intended. Sir Eyre Coote, and Lieutenant General M'Kenzie Frazer, have both arrived in town from Portſmouth; and we hear that Lord Chatham, the commander in chief, does not leave town for a week yet, and that no attempt will be made for the expedition going off before the 15th of this month.

The Marquis of Huntly goes with his regiment (the 42d) and the Highland brigade from the Downs.

We are glad to hear that the Commiſſarial Department in the preſent ſervice, will be ſelect, and well filled up, and diſtinguiſhed for local mercantile knowledge being maſters of the language of the country they go to.

Greatly occupied as government are with the grand expedition, other quarters are not neglected—ſmall convoys are ſailing once or twice a week for Liſbon, with reinforcements of men and officers, and we are keeping every corps in Sir Arthur Welleſley's army to its fulleſt eſtabliſhment. Beſides ſome corps have recently ſailed from Ireland for that quarter; and laſt week a whole brigade, conſiſting of three regiments from Guernsey and Jersey. Sir Arthur Welleſley's army is now not leſs than 20,000 men, and the Portugueſe army under Marſhal Beresford is equally ſtrong.

July 7.

Yeſterday a conſiderable number of veſſels arrived from Holland unexpectedly, with corn and other commodities. The reaſon aſſigned for their ſudden departure was, the expectation of an embargo being impoſed throughout all the ports of that kingdom. They have brought very few papers, and no additional information of importance on which we can rely.

A gentleman who has arrived from that country, has favored us with ſome intelligence as to the ſituation of matters there at the preſent moment.——The Dutch government apprehending that the Secret Expeditions is intended for the invaſion of Holland, thought fit to make preparations for the public defence; but if a judgement may be formed from the vaſt collection of materials, the plan is ſo extenſive that it cannot be completed for any immediate purpoſe. A large battery is conſtructing near the light houſe, about ſeven miles from Amſterdam; and numerous hands are employed, with a powerful ſyſtem of machinery, to drive prodigious piles into the earth, to give ſtability to the embankment. The city is ſurrounded on the land ſide, by a great number of ſmaller batteries, ſo that acceſs, in that direction, ſeems to be almoſt impoſſible. There is an encampment near Utrecht, of about 4000 men, and all thoſe who could be ſpared from Stralsund ſince the conflict with Schill, have received orders to return.—King Louis was in Guelderland and it was ſuppoſed that he would ſoon take his departure to join the Royal Fraternity aſſembled at Frankfort on the Maine.—It does not appear that any acts of open hoſtility againſt the conſtituted authorities have been committed; but it is ſaid, that, for the laſt two years, the natives had been greatly irritated by the increaſed contributions required, and by the obſtruction of their commerce.—It is added, that the demands of the ſtate could not be ſatisfied, if it were not for occaſional indulgences granted to trading adventurers; and that the diſſatisfaction from ſuch cauſes was ſo extenſively diffuſed, that a ſeparation from France, and an alliance with great Britain, was conſidered as the only means of appeaſing the general diſquietude, alleviating the public burthens, and reſtoring the national proſperity.

Some of the letters from Holland mention the ſame fact that was ſtated in the Portuguese Journals received yeſterday that king Joſeph has again quitted Madrid, and proceeded to the frontiers. We know not what degree of credit is due to this news.

When we read the French account of the battle of Raab, we expreſſed our conviction that they had by no means obtained ſuch a victory as they claimed. We are happy to find, by the Auſtrian Bulletin, which we ſubjoin, that our opinion was well founded. The intelligence contained in this Bulletin is of a moſt ſatisfactory nature. Dalmatia is again in poſſeſſeſſion of the Auſtrians, and the French have abandoned Fiume and Zeng.

BULLETIN OF THE IMPERIAL AND ROYAL AUSTRIAN ARMY.

"Wolkersdorf, June 18.

"On the 15th inſt. the corps under the command of his Imperial and Royal Highneſs the Archduke John, compoſed of 20,000 troops of the line, and 16,000 of the Hungarian Inſurrection, were, in the environs of Raab, vigorouſly attacked by the French army, eſtimated at 50,000 men.

"The troops of the line fought the whole day with the greateſt ſucceſs, and the enemy ſuffered a loſs of 2000 men in killed and wounded. But as the right wing, conſiſting for the moſt part of the inſurrection, that could not be expected to poſſeſs the courage of veteran troops, was no match for the enemy, his Imperial and Royal Highneſs thought it moſt proper, for the attainment of his object, to fall back to a poſition near Cormorn, and thereby to ſecure and facilitate his junction with the main army.

"But this has cauſed no material change in the poſitions of the Imperial and Royal army; and the Archduke John praiſes highly the excellent diſpoſition and patriotic alacrity of the troops of the Hungarian Inſurrection.

"The Imperial and Royal troops ſuffered in this engagement a loſs of 1800 men in killed, wounded, and ſome few priſoners. About 400 Frenchmen were made priſoners by the Auſtrians. The enemy ſo far from purſuing the Auſtrian troops, has again retreated behind the Raab. Dalmatia is again in the poſſeſſion of the Imperial and Royal troops. The enemy has been obliged to abandon Zeng and Fiume, as well as the Iſlands along the Dalmatian coaſt. General Marmont retreated in ſuch haſte, that the Auſtrians made a number of priſoners. In the hoſpitals, too, the enemy left a number of wounded, among whom are three French Generals, and one of them Launy. Theſe muſt by this time be delivered from enemies. The Engliſh on the one hand, and the Turks on the other, make common cauſe with the Auſtrian troops.

"The enemy's corps under Gen. Marmont is reduced to 6000, and is poſted at preſent between Laybach and Klagenfurth. But General Count Kinlay is again maſter of the country of Gilley, and immediately communicates with General Caſtelar."

KEEPERS AND TRAVELLERS.

OURT OF EXCHEQUER, May, 11.

Jones v. Jones.

was a caſe of conſiderable public in-nd eſtabliſhed the act of Landlords and Innkeepers being anſwerable for the property of their cuſtomers while under their roof. It was in action tried at the laſt Shrews bury Aſſizes before Mr. Baron Wood; the fact was nearly as follow.—The plaintiff had a ſervant in his employ of a cattle drover, named Evan Jones, whom he ſent from Lon don in December, with the produce of a drove.
The ſervant arrived at Wrexham in a few days, and went to the inn there kept by the defendant.——He ſlept in a three-bedded room, two of which were occupied by the defendant's own family.——The plaintiff's ſervant ſwore on the trial that when he arrived at Wrexham he had a pocket book containing 4 lol. in bank notes; that during the day preceding the loſs of it he had drank freely, but was not intoxicated.——On going to bed at night he recollected placing his waiſtcoat on a chair by his bed ſide, and the pocket book was ſafe in an inſide pocket. When he awoke the next morning his clothes were there but his pocket book was gone; upon which he raiſed the whole family; declared his loſs, and all joined in ſearching the bed chamber,
but the pocket book could no where be found.
The defendant and his wife appeared extremely anxious that the pocket book ſhould be found: and the defendant brought his ſervants and children to prove that they never ſaw the pocket book. The judge ſummed up the evidence, obſerving, that it was a very hard law againſt innkeepers, who were liable for the ſecurity of the goods of their gueſts; and unleſs the Jury were ſatisfied with the evidence of the plaintiff's ſervant, they would find for the defendant.—The Jury conſulted together for ſome time, and found for the plaintiff:—Damages 4 lol.

Mr. Jarvis came to court this Term, and obtained a rule to ſhow cauſe why the verdict ſhould not be ſet aſide, and a new trial had;
the verdict being againſt the directions of the Judge.——This day the caſe came to be fully argued, and ſince the Court granted the conditional rule, the following extraordinary fact came to light. The defendant had fallen into diſtreſs, his goods were ſeized in execution, and a public ſale advertiſed on the 29th ult. on which day the auctioneer in pre-ſence of the perſons aſſembled, put up for ſale a bed and mattraſſes, remarking, that it was the ſame in which the young man had ſlept who loſt the 4 lol. The lot was pur chaſed by a perſon who joined in making af fidavit of the fact; and to his aſtoniſhment and ſurprize, between the two old mattraſſes, which were under the feather bed, the loſt pocket book was diſcovered, and the 4 lol.
in notes within it. Upon the knowledge of that fact Mr. Jarvis ſuggeſted that if a new trial was not granted, that a jlet proceſſus ſhould be awarded, and the defendant ſpared from payment of the coſts. Mr. Jarvis added, that the defendant was moſt intereſted for his character, which had ſuffered by the verdict; and he contended, that Evan Jones having gone to bed intoxicated, might by the cunning which men poſſeſs in their intoxication, have hid the book between the mattraſſes, and the next morning having loſt all recollection of the fact.

The Chief Baron admitted, that it was a ſort of action which required as much ſtrict-neſs in proof as in a trial for felony; and the imprudent conduct of the plaintiff's ſervant laid him open to a ſevere cloſe examination; but the Jury believing his teſtimony, had come to a right concluſion.—The ſubſequent finding of the pocket book was decliſive con firmation of the truth of his ſtory; & though he did not mean to attach ſuſpicion to the defendant or his wife, yet he might have dif honeſt people about him; and he could not believe the pocket book was between the mattraſſes on the morning of the ſeare. He rather believed that from the noiſe the ch cumſtance had occaſioned in the country, the perſon who took the pocket book, was appre henſive that it could not be got rid of without deſection, and had therefore placed it between the mattraſſes previous to the ſale but the accounts kept by the plaintiff and defendant not harmonizing, as the ſuppoſed scare crow an octave too high for her cuſtomer, the proſecutor's wife refuſed to pay the bill. This produced a very diſcordant crash: the defenddant harped a good deal. The muſician's lady endeavored in vain to play ſecond; but her piano had no chance with the forte of the claimant whoſe deep bait and counter tenor drowned every attempt of her deponent to be heard. In vain did Mrs. Gilliot endeavor to attenuate the ſhrilneſs of Mrs. Barnet's pipe.
The more ſhe endeavored to lower the key of her opponent the higher it was pitched and her flats and ſharps were dealt out in ſuch diſcordant ſtyle, that Mr. Gilliot, who conceived he had the right of playing firſt fiddle in this Sonata, deemed it proper to call in for the purpoſe of reſtoring harmony. He was however, ſuddenly aſtonithed at the introduction of another inſtrument by Mrs Barnet, who being a poker, was proceeding to accompany her own bravura with Mrs. Gilliot, by staccato on the head of her huſband, which muſt ſon ſtantly have put him out of tune, for life, had he not had the good fortune, by a fugue, and ſome exertion of manual ſtrength, to deprive the lady of her weapon. She, nevertheleſs, continued for near half an hour to ſerenade him with a Billingſgate ſolo, much to the amuſement of a crowded auditory aſſembled on the occaſion.

The defendant was found guilty of the aſſault and ſentenced to a fine of 20l.

Longevity.—In the retired parith of Llandebar, in the Iſle of Angleſea, there is now living a woman of the name of Winifred Rees, who has attained the patriarchal age of 119 years and nearly 7 months; the enjoys the undiſturbed leaſe of a cottage, in which ſhe has reſided 105 years. She is bleſſed with the perfect uſe of all her mental faculties:
her eyes being as good as they were when ſhe was in her 5th year; and ſtrange as it may ſeem, has ſcarcely a grey hair on her head.—
On the 27th of March, ſhe walked the diſ-tance of eight miles, and back, to viſit a cottage, bringing home with her a parcel which weighed upwards of 22lbs.

Upon the whole he ſaw no grounds for diſ-turbing the verdict, or for granting a ſtet pro ceſſus.—The other Judges concurred in opinion, and the rule for a new trial was diſcharg-ed.

A Canine Mendicant.—A venerable ſailor, with white locks, has lately made his appear ance in London, attended by a large Newfoundland dog. The veteran tar is an eccentric character, but the ſagacity of his Canine aſſociate excites admiration. The dog takes the hat of his maſter in his mouth, and he implores charity, in the ſhops of the inhabi-ants by the moſt expreſſive ſigns. He bows his head, ſcrapes his foot off the ground, and looks ſtedfaſtly in the face of the perſons from whom he expects a donation. If he procures a halfpenny of one friend, he immediately walks to another, and returns to his maſter with the contribution he had raiſed.

It frequently happens that this honeſt ſervant meets with hard treatment and a denial of aid; but his humility upon ſuch occaſions is truly aſtoniſhing. Without waiting to trouble the uncharitable, he immediately returns to his maſter, and walks into another houſe, where he has a greater chance of ſuc ceſs. The docility and diſcriminating faculty of this dog are the ſupport of the old tar, who drinks, eats, and converſes with him as a friend. Their intimacy is of ſo long ſtanding, and the ſailor often gratefully declares that the animal had rendered him more ſer-vices than he ever received from his fellow men.

Extraordinary Phenomenon.—At Landſide, in the parish of Reay, in the county of Caith neſs, there was ſeen, about the 18th of April laſt, an animal, ſuppoſed to be the Mermaid.
The head and the cheſt, being all that was vi ſible, exactly reſembled thoſe of a full grown young woman. The Mammonæ were per fectly formed; the arms longer than in the human body, and the eyes ſomewhat ſmaller.
When the waves daſhed the hair, which was of a ſea green ſhade, over the face, the hands were immediately employed to replace it. The ſkin was of a purple colour. Though obſerved by ſeveral perſons, within the diſtance of twenty yards, for about an hour and a half, it diſcovered no ſymptoms of alarm. It was ſeen by four or five individuals, of unqueſtionable veracity, at the ſame time. Something of the ſame kind was obſerved in the ſame neighborhood, about ſeven or eight years ago, by a gentleman reſiding near the

VERSES BY THOMAS CAMPBELL.

On viſiting the Ruins of his Anceſtor's Manſion.

At the ſilence of twilight's contemplative hour,
I have mus'd, in a ſorrowful mood,
O'er the wind-ſhaken leaves that embo ſom the bower
Where the home of my forefathers ſtood,
All ruin'd and wild was their roofleſs abode,
And lonely the night raven ſhriek'd from the tree,
And cover'd with graſs was the once beaten road,
Where the hunter of deer, and the warrior trod
To his hills that encircled the ſea.
Yet wand'ring, I found on my ruinous walk,
By the dial ſtone, aged and green;
One roſe of the wilderneſs left on its ſtalk,
To mark where a garden had been:
Like a brotherleſs hermit, the laſt of its race,
All wild in the ſilence of nature, it drew
From each wand'ring ſun-beam a lonely embrace;
For the night weed and morn overſhadow'd the place
Where the flow'r of my forefathers grew.
Sweet bud of the wilderneſs! Emblem of all
That ſurvives in this deſolate heart!
The fabric of hiſs to its centre may fall,
But Patience ſhall never depart:
Tho' the wilds of enchantment all vernal and bright
In the days of deluſion, by fancy combin'd
With the vaniſhing phantom of love and delight Abandon my ſoul like a dream of the night,
And leave but a deſert behind
Be hush'd my dark ſpirit, for reaſon contemns
When the faint and the feeble deplore,
Be firm as the rock of the ocean, that ſtems
A thouſand wild waves on the ſhore,
Thro' the perils of chance and the ſtorm of diſtreſs,
Thro' the pains of deſire and the pangs of deſpair,
May my front be unabaſh'd—my courage elate;
Yet I—even the ſame I have worſhip'd in vain,
Shall wake not the ſigh of remembrance again,
To heave—it is COWARDLY OUR PAIN.—N. Y. Spect.

AUSTRIAN BULLETIN.

Supplement to the LONDON GAZETTE.

Tuesday, July 11.

An account of the BATTLE fought near Aſpern, on the Marchfield, on the 21ſt and 22d of May, 1809, between the Archduke Charles of Auſtria, Generaliſſimo of the Imperial Auſtrian Armies, and the Emperor Napoleon, Commander in Chief of the French and Allied armies.

The Emperor Napoleon, having, after ſome ſanguinary engagements near Abensberg, Hanſen, and Dinzingen, in which the fortune of war favored the Auſtrians, ſo as to force the French garriſon at Ratiſbon to ſurrender, ſucceeded in cutting off the left wing of the Auſtrian army, and driving it back to Landshut, and afterwards advancing by Eckmuhl with a ſuperior corps of cavalry, taking the road of Eglofshemi, and forcing to retreat thole Auſtrian corps that were poſted on the heights of Lenkepoint and Talmeſſing, the Archduke on the 22d of April, croſſed the Danube near Ratiſbon, and joined the corps of Bellegarde, who had opened the campaign by ſeveral ſucceſsful efforts in the Upper-Palatinate, had reached Amberg, Neumarkt, and Hemau, and had by this time approached Staadhau-Hof, in order to execute his immediate junction with the Archduke.

The Emperor Napoleon ordered the bombardment of Ratiſbon, occupied by a few battalions who were to cover the paſſage of the Danube. On the 23d in the evening, he became maſter of it, and immediately haſtened along the right banks of the Danube to enter the Auſtrian States, in order, has he openly declared, to dictate peace at Vienna.

The Auſtrian army had taken a poſition near Cham, behind the River Regen, which was watched by ſome of the enemy's diviſions, while the Emperor Napoleon called all the diſpoſable troops by forced marches, from the North of Germany to the Danube, and conſiderably reinforced his army with the troops of Wittemberg, Heſſia, Baden, and ſome time after with thole of Saxony.

Near Kirn and Nittenau, ſome affairs have happened between the out poſts, which, however had no influence upon the armies.

However eaſy it would have been for the Archduke to continue his offenſive operations on the left bank of the Danube without any meterial reſiſtance, and however gratifying it might have been to relieve provinces which were groaning beneath the preſſure of foreign dominion, the preſervation of his native land did not permit him to ſuffer the enemy to riot with impunity in the entrails of the Monarchy, to give up the rich ſources of its independence, and expoſe the ſubject to the devaſtation of foreign conquerors.

Theſe motives induced the Archduke to conduct his army to Bohemia, by way of Kremnitz and Neumarkt, to occupy the Bohemain Foreſt with light troops and part of the militia, and to direct his march towards Budweis, where he arrived on the 3d of May, hoping to join near Linz, his left wing, which had been ſeparated from him, and which was under the command of Lieutenant General Baron Hiller.

But the latter had been ſo cloſely preſſed by the united forces of the French armies, that after ſeveral ſpirited engagements, and even after a brilliant affair in which he had the advantage, near Neumarkt, and in which the troops achieved all that was poſſible againſt the diſproportionate ſuperiority of the enemy, he indeed was able to reach Linz but was incapable of croſſing the Danube, and obliged to content himſelf with deſtroying the communication with the left bank, and taking up a poſition behind the Traun, near Ebersberg. This was the occaſion of an extremely murderous engagement, during which the enemy, in ſtorming the bridge, loſt near 4000 men ; Ebersberg was ſet on fire, and Lieutenant-General Hiller continued his retreat till he got ſo much the ſtart as to paſs the Danube near Stain, without being diſturbed by the enemy, and to wait the approach of the Archduke, who having in vain attempted the junction of the army near Linz, had marched from Budweis to Zwettel ; ſtill hoping by a quick paſſage of the Danube to arreſt the enemy's progreſs towards the Metropolis.

Meanwhile a corps of Wurtembergers had advanced from Paſſau, along both the ſhores of the Danube, had occupied Linz, and the bank of poſſeſſion of it, had reſtored the bridge, and ſignalized itſelf by deſtroying the defenceleſs villages and caſtles which could not be protected by the ſmall advanced guard proceeding by the ſide of the main army.

The enemy by marching through the valley of the Danube, in the ſtraighteſt line, had got ſo much a head, that all hopes of coming up with him in front of Vienna vaniſhed ; ſtill, however, if that city had been able to hold out for five days, it might have been relieved ; but the Archduke reſolved on venturing the utmoſt to reſcue that good city, which, by the excellent diſpoſition of its citizens, the faithful attachment to its ſovereign and its noble devotion, has raiſed itſelf an eternal monument in the annals of Auſtria. All his plans were now directed towards gaining the bridges acroſs the Danube, near Vienna, and endeavoring to ſave the Imperial reſidence, by a combat under its very walls.

Vienna, formerly an important fortreſs, was in vain beſieged by the Turks, and would even now, from the ſolidity of its ramparts the ſtrong profiles of its works, and the extenſive ſyſtem of its mines, be capable of making a protracted reſiſtance, had not, for upwards of a century back, the luxury of a large metropolis, the wants of eaſe, the conflux of all the Magnates in the Empire, and the pomp of a ſplendid court, totally effaced every conſideration of military defence. Palaces adorn the ramparts, the caſements and ditches were converted into workſhops for tradeſmen, plantations mark the counter-ſcarps of ſome of, ſtreets, and avenues of trees traverſe the glacis uniting the moſt beautiful ſituation in the world to the Corps de-la-Place.

Although under such circumstances no obstinate resistance of the capital was to be expected, yet from the unexampled loyalty of the inhabitants, it was confidently hoped, that Vienna might for a few days serve as a tete-de-pont to cover the passage of the river; —whence all preparations amounted to no more than to secure the place against a coup-de-main; and for this reason the Archduke had for some time before directed Field Marshal Hiller to send part of his corps along the right bank towards the capital, in the event of his (the Archduke's) passage to the left.

Field Marshal Hiller now received orders to burn the brigde near Stain in his rear, to leave a small corps of observation near Krems to hasten by forced marches with the bulk of his army to the environs of Vienna, and, as circumstances would permit, by occupying the small islands, to keep up the communication with the city and the debouche across the bridges.

The Army of the Archduke now advanced, without interruption, by Neupolla, Horn, Weikendorff, upon Stockerau: and in order to overawe such enterprizes as the enemy might project from the environs of Linz, part of the corps of the General of Artillery, Count Kollowrath, which till then had remained near Pilsen with a view to secure the North and West frontier of Bohemia, was ordered to March to Budweis.

Napoleon had used so much expedition on his march to Vienna, that on the 9th of May his advanced troops appeared on the glacis of the fortress, whence they were driven by some cannon shot. From 3 to 4 000 regular troops as many armed citizens, and some battalions of country militia, defended the city; ordnance of various calibre was placed on the ramparts; the suburbs were abandoned, on account of their great extent; and the numerous islands and low bushy ground behind the town were occupied by some light troops of the corps of Hiller, as well as by the militia.

The corps itself was posted on what is termed, "the Point," on the left shore of the river, waiting the arrival of the army, which was advancing in haste.

The occupation of Vienna formed too essential a part in the extensive plans of the French Emperor; its conquest had been announced by him with too much confidence, and was of too great importance towards confirming the prejudices of his irresistable power, for him not to employ every method of taking it before the assistance which was so near could arrive.

For the space of twenty four hours the howitzers played upon the town; and though several houses were set on fire the courage of the inhabitants remained unshaken. But a general devastation threatened their valuable property, and when at length the enemy availed himself of the numerous craft which he found there, crossed the smaller branch of the Danube, dislodged the troops from the nearest Islands, and menaced their communication with the left bank, the city was justified in capitulating, while the troops retreated by the great bridge of Labor, which they afterwards set on fire.

The Archduke received this intelligence in his head-quarters, between Hern and Meissau, and though it was scarcely to be expected that a city surrounded as it was, should continue its resistance, the Archduke proceeded on his march without interruption, flattering himself that he might be able to execute his favorite project by a bold attempt to pass the Danube at Vienna.

This city capitulated on the 13th of May, so that there was no further occasion to expose the army to hazard by crossing the Danube, for which no sufficient preparation had been made, and which must have been effected in the face of the enemy, and under local circumstances of the greatest disadvantage. By the surrender of Vienna the army had lost a point of support on which it rested its military operations.

In this situation of affairs, the Archduke resolved to collect his army at the foot of the hill Bisamberg, and allow it a few days rest, which, after so many forced marches, it urgently wanted. The cavalry, for the convenience of water, was posted along the Russ, a rivulet which is concealed by ground covered with bushes, and the advanced guard pushed forward to the Danube, in order to observe the movements of the enemy, and prevent his passing the river, which he had already attempted to do from Nussdorff, to what is called the Black Lake, but with so little success, that a battalion of his advanced guard was taken. The chain of the out-posts extended on the left side as far as the marsh, and on the right to Krems; this place and Presburg were occupied by some battalions;—and the head-quarters of the Archduke were on the 16th of May at Ebersdorff, near the high road leading to Brent.

On the 19th the out post reported that the enemy had taken possession of the great Island of Lobau, within about six English miles of Vienna; that his numbers increased there every hour, and that he seemed to be employed in throwing a bridge across the great arm of the Danube, behind the Island. From the top of the Bisamberg, the whole opposite country appeared to be enveloped in a cloud of dust, and the glitter of arms evinced a general movement of troops beyond Summering, towards Keiser Ebersdorff, whither according to later accounts, the Emperor Napoleon had removed his head-quarters, and was, by his presence, hastening and promoting the preparations for passing the river.

On the following morning, at day break, the Archduke resolved to reconnoitre the island, and employed for this purpose, part of the advanced guard, under the command of Field Marshal Lieutenant Count Klenau, supported by some regiments of cavalry.

The Isle of Lobau forms a convenient place for arms, which is about six English miles long and four and a half broad, and being separated by the large arm of the Danube from the right bank, nothing prevents the building of a bridge, which is concealed by ground covered with bushes; and the great extent of the island affords the advantage of sending troops and ordnance from so many points of it, that the passage across the smaller arm to the large plain of Marchfield may be made good by force of arms.

It was soon perceived by the strength of the enemy's columns which advanced upon the Island, and placed their cannon so as to support the second, that he meditated a serious attack. The advanced guard sustained a tolerable warm engagement, and the cavalry routed the first division of the enemy, which debouched from the low grounds on the edge of the river, late in the evening; upon which the Archduke, whole intention was not to prevent the passage of the enemy, but to attack him the following day, retreated with his cavalry to Anderklaa, and ordered the advanced troops to fall back to Meuss, according as the enemy would extend himself.

On the 21st at day break, the Archduke ordered his army under arms, and formed it in two lines on the rising ground beyond Gersdorf, and the Bisam hill and the rivulet Russ.—The corps of Lieutenant General Hiller formed the right wing near Stammersdorf; on its left was the corps of the general of cavalry, Count Bellegarde, and next to that Lieutenant General Prince Hohenzollern in the Alignement of Deutsch Wagram.—The corps of Prince Rosenberg was posted by battalions in columns on the Russbach, on the rivulet Russ, kept Deutsch Wagram strongly occupied, having, for the security of the left wing, placed on the heights beyond that place, a division in reserve.—The whole cavalry, which the day before had advanced under the command of Prince Lichtenstein, by Anderklaa, was called back into the line filling in two lines, the space intervening between the left wing of Prince Hohenzollern and right of Prince Rosenberg.

The vast plain of the Marchfield spread like a carpet before the front of the line, and appeared by the absence of every obstruction, to be destined to form the theatre of some great event. The grenadiers remained in reserved near Sersening, and the corps of the general of artillery, Prince of Reuss, kept the Bisam hill, and the low bushy ground along the Danube, strongly occupied. Part of it was still left near Krems, the corps being almost broke up by having so many of its divisions detached to so considerable a distance.

At nine o'clock the Archduke ordered the arms to be piled, and the troops to dine. The piquet of observation on the Bisam hill reported that the bridge across the Danube behind the Island of Lobau, being now quite finished, was plainly perceivable, and that troops were without intermission seen filing off over it, as well as passing in boats to the isle. The out-posts, likewise, gave information of the gradual augmentation of the enemy in the town of Euzerdorff and in the villages of Essling and Aspern, and of his advancing towards Hirschstetten.

The Archduke Charles now thought that the moment for giving battle had arrived, and hastened to Gerasdorff, where the Chief of Quarter Master General's Staff, General Baron Wimpfen, sketched out the following plan:—

Plan of attack upon the hostile army on its march between Essling and Aspern, and towards Hirschstetten.

"The attack to be made in five columns. The first column, or the column of the right is formed by the corps of Lieut. Gen. Hiller. It will advance from its present position in the direction between the "point," and Leopoldau along the nearest arms of the Danube, pass along the left bank towards Stadeau and Aspern keep constantly near the Danube and the meadows bordering upon it, and is vigorously to repulse the enemy, who most likely will meet it on the same road, and to drive him from the left bank. This column must not suffer its progress to be impeded by the batteries which the enemy perhaps may have erected on the islands, but must endeavor to silence them by its cannon, and spiritedly continue to advance.

"The second column consists of the corps of the general of cavalry Count Bellegarde; leaving Gerasdorf to the left, it will march towards Leopoldau, endeavoring to join the first column on the right, advancing upon Kagran, and then conjointly with the third column upon the left push forward towards Hirschstetten.

"The third column is composed of the corps of Lt. Gen. Prince Hohenz lern. It will march by Sussenbrunn to Brattenlee, and from thence towards Aspern, and will endeavor to join on its right the second column, and on its left the fourth.

"The fourth column, under the command of Lieut. Gen. Prince Rosenberg, is made up of that part of his corps which is posted on the right bank of the rivulet Russ; it is to advance by Anderklaa and Raschdorf, towards Essling.

"The fifth column is formed by that part of Prince Rosenberg's corps which stands between Deutsch, Wagram and Beaumersdorf. It will cross the Ruts near Beaumersdorf, leave Ratchdorf and Bischdorf to the right, endeavor to pass to the left round the town of Euzersdorf, and secure its left flank by the Arch Duke Ferdinand's regiment of huzzars.

"The cavalry reserve under the command of Gen. Prince Lichtenstein, to march by the way of Anderklaa, without coming in contact with the fourth column, between Raschdorf and Brattenlee, and flank to the New Inn, keeping continually at such a distance between the head of the third and fourth columns as in case of necessity, to be near at hand for the purpose of repelling the main body of the enemy's cavalry.

"The grenadier corps of reserve to march from Sersering into the position which the corps of Bellegarde has t

London, July 11.

It is probable that the next accounts from Germany will bring intelligence of the greateſt importance—we do not mean from the Danube, but from the North of Germany—It is reported that a general inſurrection has broken out in Hanover and Heſſe, and the Auſtrians were advancing from Leipſic on the one hand, and from Wurtzburgh on the other, for the purpoſe of giving confidence to the inſurgents.

The foreign intelligence ſhows the diſpoſition of the people in Germany, and proves that they are every way prepared to riſe againſt the French—from the North to the South, from the banks of the Lake of Conſtance to the ſhores of the Baltic. The inſurgents from the Voralberg, and the Tyrol keep Swabia and Bavaria in a conſtant ſtate of alarm.——Their activity is inceſſant—we hear of them in the neighborhood of Salzburg—of Memmingen, of Kempten—on the Lech, the Iſer and the Inn—they enter towns and levy contributions—carry off proviſions and hoſtages, and ſo infeſt the country that the enemy obtain ſupplies with the greateſt difficulty.

This muſt naturally increaſe the ſcarcity which is acknowledged to be felt at Vienna, and which is ſo great that the populace beſiege the bakers and butchers ſhops day and night, juſt as they did at Paris during the early periods of the revolution.—Hungary was the ſource from which Vienna uſually drew her ſupplies, but that ſource is no longer open, and to an application in behalf of the capital, made by Bonaparte to the Archduke Charles, a polite refuſal is ſaid to have been returned.

Whilſt theſe events are paſſing in the Southern part of Germany, the Northern is not more diſpoſed to remain quiet under the French yoke. The progreſs of the Auſtrians in Francona and Saxony is already known. In Weſtphalia and Heſſe the ſpirit of inſurrection has ſhown itſelf, and the inſurgent peaſants as they are called, lately broke into the town of Marburgh, on the Lahn. Theſe peaſants are not raw troops, unuſed to arms: they are men who by the ancient conſtitution of their country, were enrolled and exerciſed during a certain part of the year. Thus rapidly and vigorouſly is the ſpirit of inſurrection ſpreading itſelf every where round the enemy.——Meanwhile the Archduke Charles is reinforcing himſelf by the landwher (militia) of Moravia and Bohemia, and ſo ſtrong does he feel himſelf that he has ſent a part of the Hungarian inſurrection, which had arrived at Brunn, to join the Archduke John at Comorn. This reinforcement is ſaid to have enabled him to advance again, and reſume his poſition at Raab. The two great Auſtrian armies, under the Archdukes Charles and John, occupy an almoſt ſtrait line from Walkersdorff to Comorn—Preſburgh is in the centre of it—hence the French have made the greateſt exertions to take Preſburgh, they would then have interpoſed between the two armies—But all their efforts have been ineffectual: and Marſhal Davouſt has been conſtantly repulſed in all his attempts to make himſelf maſter of the Tete de Pont near Wolfſthal.

July 12.

Yeſterday Mr. Jackſon, his majeſty's newly appointed miniſter to the United States of America, ſet out for Portſmouth from his apartments in Lower Groſvenor-ſtreet; he will embark in the Africaine frigate, captain Ranget.

On the 16th ult. his Majeſty ſhip the Havoc left Yarmouth, having on board a Ruſſian courier. She bore a flag of truce and ſailed for the Baltic. The veſſel was examined by the Danes on her paſſage, and ſuffered to proceed: the captain was treated with courteſy by them. After landing the courier near Riga, on the 27th the Havoc ſailed back and has arrived again in England.

An article in the Kent Gazette of yeſterday ſays, "a naval officer ſent by Admiral Campbell, the port admiral in the Downs, paſſed through Canterbury from Deal to London yeſterday afternoon, about 1 o'clock. He is ſaid to be the bearer of diſpatches of the utmoſt importance, relative to a battle having been fought on the Banks of the Danube, the ſubſtance of which was received by a ſmall veſſel which came into the Downs the ſame morning; at any rate the communication is of that nature, that the admiral deemed it expedient to ſend an officer purpoſely with it."

This diſpatch did not relate to any battle upon the Danube, but to the demonſtrations making by the Fluſhing ſquadron. Lord Gardner ſailed yeſterday morning from the Downs, with ſix ſail of the line to cruiſe off Scheldt.

Banks of the Elbe June 30.

"Nothing deciſive has as yet arrived from the great theatre of War; but according to all accounts may be daily expected, as the three bridges over the Danube were finiſhed on the 17th, and great reinforcements had reached the French army. Napoleon had alſo finiſhed all the preparations and diſpoſitions for a grand and deciſive attack on the heroic Archduke Charles and his valiant army, who were alſo all prepared to receive him.

"According to private letters from Auſtria, the Duke of Ragusa's has been defeated and totally diſperſed in the confines of Hungary, and no more than 6000 men are ſaid to remain of it. By the ſame channel, it is ſaid, that a combined Britiſh and Turkiſh military and naval force has retaken Trieſte and Fiume, and conquered the greateſt part of Dalmatia.

"The preſence of a Britiſh army in Hanover would be a very great diverſion in favor of Auſtria, as many of the inhabitants would join, particularly as the conſcription for France will ſoon be introduced.

July 13.

Orders were received at the Cuſtom Houſe this morning for a general embargo to be laid on immediately.—The expedition will ſail in two or three days.

We received ſome more German papers this morning, which contains a Bulletin from the Auſtrian army relative to the operations in Saxony, on the Raab, and in the Tyrol.—It does not announce, however, any new fact of much importance.

Fortune has frowned upon another of the Bonaparte family, and Jerome, who had advanced with his Weſtphalian and Dutch troops againſt the Auſtrians, threatening to drive them in a few days out of Saxony, has been checked in his preſumptuous boaſting, and been beaten himſelf.—I his we infer from an article in the 2d edition of the Berlin Gazette of 1ſt July—He would not elſe have ordered all the baggage in his rear to return to Magdeburgh, nor ſend in ſuch haſte to Caſſel for all the diſpoſable troops to be put immediately in motion. A victory over Jerome Bonaparte will be important, in asmuch as it will enable the Auſtrians to advance, about the time when the great events were to take place in Hanover and Heſſe.

There are two articles in the German papers, which ſpeak of negociations for peace—One of them is from the Banks of the Mayn, the other from Leipzig:—Each of them ſtate that Auſtria and France are negociating a peace—Perhaps theſe articles are inſerted only to induce a belief that Bonaparte's inactivity ſince his defeat at Aſpern, had not been produced by the magnitude of that defeat, and his inability to repair the loſſes he ſuſtained in it, but has been occaſioned by negociations. We will not believe that Auſtria is negociating.

BANKS OF THE WESER July 1.
(Extract of a letter.)

"The expected conflict between the two Grand armies did not take place on the 20th of June.—The laſt letters from Vienna of that date report that Bonaparte, finding himſelf ſtrained with reſpect to proviſions had applied to the Auſtrian Emperor and the Archduke Charles, in behalf of the inhabitants of Vienna, and met with an abſolute refuſal. It is therefore expected, that the ſcarcity which prevails in his camp will force him to attack the entrenched Auſtrian camp on the other ſide of the Danube.

"In the neighborhood of Preſburg, the Auſtrians have eſtabliſhed a bridge over the Danube, defended by a tete du pont, near Wolfsthal, which Marſhal Davouſt attacked in vain, with 12,000 men.—The Auſtrian general Branchi repulſed his attacks.

Lateſt From Europe.—We learn verbally from a gentleman paſſenger in a veſſel arrived off Sandy Hook, from a port in Ireland, where ſhe ſailed about the 23d of July, that the Grand Expedition ſailed from England on the 17th of July; that there were a general Embargo in England; the Ruſſian and French armies had formed a junction, and negociations for a peace were ſaid to be in a train of forwardneſs between France and Auſtria.—*Mer. AUSTRIAN BULLETIN.

Supplement to the LONDON GAZETTE.

Tuesday, July 11.

An account of the BATTLE fought near Aspern, on the Marchfield, on the 21st and 22d of May, 1809, between the Archduke Charles of Austria, Generalissimo of the Imperial Austrian Armies, and the Emperor Napoleon, Commander in Chief of the French and Allied armies.

"The principal object in view is to drive back the enemy entirely over the first arms of the Danube, destroy the bridges he has thrown over them, and occupying the bank of the Lobau with a numerous artillery, especially howitzers.

"The infantry will form on the plain in battalions, with half divisions from the centre.

"His imperial highness the general in chief, recommends order, closeness during the advance, and a proper use of every species of arms. His station will be with the second column.

all which amounted to seventy five thousand men effective troops.

Of artillery there were 18 batteries of brigade, 13 of position, and eleven horse artillery; in the aggregate two hundred and eighty eight pieces of different calibres.

The enemy had availed himself extremely well of the advantages of the ground to cover his passage.—The extensive villages of Essling and Aspern, mostly composed of brick houses, and encircled all round by heaps of earth, resembled two bastions, between which a double line of natural trenches, intended to draw off the water, served as the curtain, and afforded every possible security to the column passing from the isle of Lobau. Essling had a granary furnished with loopholes, and whose three stories afforded room for several hundred men, while Aspern was provided with a strong Churchyard. The left side of the latter village borders on an arm of the Danube. Both villages had a safe communication with the bushy ground near the Danube, from which the enemy had it constantly in his power, to dispatch, unseen, fresh reinforcements. The isle of Lobau served at once as a place of arms and as a tete de pont, a bridgehead for the bridge, in the rear across the main arm of the river.

The enemy with the divisions of General Molitor, Boudet, Nansouty, Legrand, Espagne, Lasalle, and Ferraud, under the Marshals Massena and Lannes, as well as Marshal Bessieres together with the guards of the Wurtemberg, Hesse-Darmstadt and Baden Auxiliaries had already left their position and was directing his march towards Hirschstetten when the first Austrian advanced guard met him.

If it be at all permitted in war, to indulge favorable presentiments, it was certainly excusible so to do at that great moment, when on the 21st of May, exactly at 12 o'clock, the columns began to put themselves in motion for the attack. A general enthusiasm had taken possession of the troops—joyful war songs accompanied by Turkish music, resounded through the air, and were interrupted by shouts "Long live our Emperor, long live the Archduke Charles!" whenever the Imperial General appeared, who had placed himself at the head of the second column: Every breast panted with anxious desire and high confidence after the decisive moment; and the finest weather favored the awful scene.

BATTLE OF THE 21ST OF MAY.

First Column.

The advanced guard under General Nordman, consisting of two battalions of Gyulay and Lichtenstein Hussars, had formed near the destroyed bridge of Tabor, and leaving the villages of Kihan and Hirchstetten to the left, and Stadelau to the right, marched in the plain towards Aspern.

It was followed by the column, which having left the high road before the post office at Strammersdorf, had marched from the right by half divisions. Its right flank along the Danube was covered by a battalion of St. Georgians, by the first battalion of Vienna volunteers, and by a battalion of militia, under the command of Major Count Colleredo.

Within a cannon shot of Stadelau the out post met the enemy's piquets, which gradually retreated to their original divisions.

At this time General Nordman ordered two battalions of Gyulay to draw up en echellon, in order to favor the advance of the column. The enemy drawn up in large divisions, flood immediately before Aspern, having to cover his front, occupied all the ditches of the fields, which afforded excellent breast-works. His right was covered by a battery, and his left by a broad and deep ditch (one of those that carry off the water of the Danube when it overflows,) as well as by a bushy ground, which was likewise occupied by several bodies in close order.

Though the enemy had the advantage of position to himself, insomuch as the freshets of the Danube were only passable by means of a small bridge, at which he kept up a vigorous fire from behind the ditches, both with cannon and small arms, it did not prevent the second battalion of Gyulay, immediately after the first had penetrated as far as the bushy meadows, to pass the bridge in a column, to form without delay, and with charged bayonets to attack the enemy, who precipitately retreated to Aspern, on which occasion that village, after a vigorous, but not very obstinate resistance, was taken for the first time. It was, however, not long before the enemy had it in his power, by the arrival of fresh reinforcements, to expel again the battalion of Gyulay. By this time some battalions of the column had arrived, the chasseurs of Major Scheider, of the second column, joined the advanced guard of the first; Gyulay formed again, and the enemy was a second time pushed to the lower end of the village, though he succeeded again in regaining what he had loft.

Both parties were aware of the neceffity of maintaining themfelves in Afpern at any rate which produced fucceffively the moft obftinate efforts both of attack and defence ; the parties engaged each other in every ftreet, in every houfe, and in every barn ; carts ploughs and harrows were obliged to be removed during an uninterrupted fire, in order to get at the enemy : every individual wall was an impediment of the aflailants, and a rampart of the attack ; the fteeple, lofty trees, the garrets and the cellars were to be conquered before either of the parties could ftyle itfelf maiter of the place, and yet the poffeffion was ever of fhort duration ; for no fooner had we taken a ftreet or houfe, than the enemy gained another, forcing us to abandon the former. So this murderous conflict lafted for feveral hours ; the German battalions were fupported by Hungarians, who were again aflifted by the Vienna Volunteers, each rivelling the other in courage and perfeverance. At the fame time the fecond column combined its attacks with thofe of the firft, having to overcome the fame refiftance, by reafon of the enemy's conftantly leading freth reinforcements into the fire. At lenth General Vacquant of the fecond column fucceeded in becoming maiter of the upper part of the village, and maintained himfelf there during the whole of the night.

By the fhells of both parties many houfes had been fet on fire, and illuminated the whole country around.

At the extremity of the right wing on the bufhy meadow, the combatants were not lefs severe. The left flank of the enemy was secured by an arm of the Danube, impenetrable underwood, intersected only by foot paths, covered its front ; and a broad ditch and palliſadoes afforded him the advantage of a natural rampart.

Here fought, at the beginning of the battle, the firft battalion of Gyulay under colonel Mariassy ; then the battalion of Chaſseurs under Major Scneider ; next the St. Georgians under Major Mitrillovich, and finally, the two battalions of Vienna Volunteers under Lieutenant Colonel Steigentesch and St. Quentin. Here alfo the enemy were defeated ; and the firft day of this sanguinary engagement, terminated by the occupation of Aspern by Gen. Vacquant, at the head of eight battalions of the fecond column, while Lieut. Field Marfhal Hiller drew the troops of his corps from the village, placed them again in order of battle, and paffed the night under arms.

Second Column.

The advanced guard commanded by Lieut. Gen. Fresnel, advanced by Leopoldau and Cagran towards Hirchftetten, and confifted of one battalion of chasseurs and two battalions of Anton Mitsovsky under Gen. Winzingerode, as well as the brigades of cavalry, Klenau and Vincent, under General Veesey. It was followed in the fame direction by the column from its position near Gerarsdorf.

The enemy having been difcovered from the eminences near Hirchftetten to be near Afpern and Esslingen, the brigade Veesey was detached againft the latter place, and the brigade Winzingerode to diflodge the enemy from Afpern.

The column deployed before Hirschftetten in two lines, in order to fupport the advanced guard, and leaving Afpern on the right, followed upon the plain, at a proper diftance.

The brigade of Winzingerode, however, met with fo fpirited a refiftance in its attempts upon Afpern, that an attack upon the front alone was not likely to be attended with fuccefs ; the cavalry, therefore, of the advanced guard, was puthed forward from Aspern on the left, in order to fupport the attack on the flank with the two batteries of cavalry, as well as to facilitate the junction with the third column which was advancing by Breitenlee. At the same time the regiment of Reuss Plauen was ordered to the right fide of Afpern, with a view to an attack on that place, the reft of the corps were formed into clofe columns of battalions.

Meanwhile the enemy formed his left wing which he directed towards Aspern, and his right upon Esslingen. Thus he advanced with columns of infantry and cavalry upon the main army, while an extremely brifk cannonade fupported him. A line of twelve regiments of cuirassiers formed the centre of the fecond line of the enemy, giving to the whole an impofing afpect.

Meanwhile the attack of a battalion of Reuss Plauen on Afpern was repulsed, and it gave way, being thrown into confternation by the lofs of its commander, but it rallied immediately after. Count Bellegarde ordered Gen. Vacquant to renew the attack with the regiment of Volgelsang, and to carry the village at all hazards. The latter obeyed the order with the moft brilliant fuccefs, and Aspern though defended by 14000 of the beft of the enemy's troops, was carried by ftorm ; Vacquant being aflifted by the regiment of Reuss Plauen, by a battalion of the Archduke Rainer, and by the brigade of Mair of the third Column.

To fruftrate this attack, the enemy advanced with two columns of infantry, fupported by his heavy cavalry, upon the main army, repulfed the regiments of Klenau and Vincent's light horfe, and fell upon the infantry.

The latter expecting him with their fire locks ready and with cool intrepidity, fired at ten paces diftance so effectually, as totally to route the enemy, upon which Gen. Veesey at the head of a diviſion of Klenau, attacked the enemy's cuirassiers with fuch energy, that their retreat was followed by that of the infantry.

Hereby the army along the whole of its lines was diſengaged from the enemy, obtained communication on the left with the corps of Prince Hohenzollen, and became poſſeſſed of the important poſt of Aspern. The enemy being in full retreat, attempted no further attack, and confined himſelf merely to a cannonade. The corps remained during the night under arms.—The enemy repeated, indeed, his attacks on Afpern, but they all proved unfucceſsful.

Third Column.

This column, according to its deſtination, had began its march from its poſition at Scie-ring, by the road of Suffenbrunn and Breitenlee. Some divifions of O'Reilly's light horfe and chasseurs formed the advanced guard of the column, and at three o'clock in the afternoon met near Hirschſtetten, the left wing of the enemy, which conſiſted moſtly of cavalry.

At about this time the firft and fecond columns advanced intrepidly upon Afpern, and the enemy began to fall back to his poſition between Esslingen and aſpern, Lieut. Gen. Hohenzollen, ordered up the batteries, and a very briſk cannonade commenced on both ſides.

The firft line formed in clofe columns of battalions, and advanced with the greateſt reſolution upon the enemy, when his cavalry ſuddenly ruſhed forward in ſuch diſproportionate numbers, and with ſuch rapidity, that there was ſcarcely time to ſave the artillery which had been brought up, and the battalions were left to defend themſelves by their own unſupported exertions.—This was the remarkable moment in which the regiments of Zach, Joſeph, Cellerdo, Zettwitz, Froon, a battalion of Stein's, and the ſecond battalion of the Archduke Charles's Legion, under the conduct of Lieutenant General Brady, and Generals Buteach, Maier, and Koller, demonſtrated with unparalleled fortitude, what the fixed determination to conquer or die is capable of effecting againſt the moſt impetuous attacks.

The enemy's cavalry turned theſe battalions on both wings, penetrated between them repulſed the ſquadrons of O'Reilly's light horſe, who were unable to withſtand ſuch a ſuperior force, and in the confidence of victory, ſummoned theſe corps of heroes to lay down their arms.—A well directed and deſtructive fire was the anſwer to this degrading propoſition, and the enemy's cavalry abandoned the field, leaving behind them a conſiderable number of dead.

This corps, as well as the others, paſſed the night on the field of battle.

Fourth and Fifth Columns.

They were both compoſed of the corps of Lieutenant General Prince Rosenburg, on either banks of the Russbach, and directed their march from their poſition to the right and left of Deutsch Wagram.

The fourth proceeded through Rochedorf ſtraight to Esslingen.—Col. Hardegg of Schwatzenburgh's Hulens conducted the advanced guard.

The fifth directed its march towards the left, in order to go a circuit round the little town of Enzersdorf, and drive the enemy out of the place. It was reinforced by Stiptic's Huſſars, under the command of Colonel Frolich. Lieutenant General Klenau led the advanced guard of both columns.

As this circuit round Enzersdorf obliged the firſt to deſcribe a longer line, it was neceſsary for the fourth to advance rather more ſlowly.

Enzersdorf, however, was quickly taken poſſeſſion of by a detachment of Stiptic's Huſsars, and of the Wallacho-Illyrian Frontier Regiment, as it was already for the greateſt part evacuated by the enemy from whom no more than 30 priſoners could be taken.

Both columns now received orders to advance upon Esslingen.

The fourth in cloſe columns of battalions of Czartorisky's Archduke Louis's and Coburg, who were twice ſucceſſively attacked by upwards of two thouſand of the enemy's heavy cavalry ; but theſe were each time put to flight by our brave infantry with conſiderable loſs.

Of the fifth column, two battalions of Chasteler's advanced directly upon Esslingen, while two battalions of Bellegarde's were ordered to penetrate the left bank of the village and the ſmall contigious wood. Two battalions of Hiller's and Stutterays, beſides the Archduke Ferdinand's and Stiptic's regiment of huſsars, and two diviſions of Rosenberg's light horſe, were in the plain in readineſs to ſupport them.

Theſe combined attacks were made twice ſucceſſively with uncommon intrepidity, the enemy's troops were repulsed at all points, and driven into the village of Esslingen which had been set on fire.——But as the enemy's army was drawn up in ſeveral lines between Esslingen and Aſpern, and that each new attack with freſh reinforcements, because the ſafety of his retreat depended on the poſſeſſion of this village ; our troops were obliged to abandon it at the approach of night, and to await, under arms, the arrival of morning.

The reſerve corps of cavalry marched in two columns under the command of General Prince of Lichtenſtein, and advanced upon the New Inn between Rosshdorf and Breitenlee. General Count Wartensleben with Blankenſtein's huſsars, conducted the advanced guard.

No ſooner did the enemy perceive the general advance of the army, than he placed the bulk of his cavalry, ſupported by ſome battalions of infantry, in order to battle between Esslingen and Aspern, and commenced a briſk cannonade upon the columns of Auſtrian cavalry as they advanced.

Prince Lichtenſtein directed his columns to march forward in two lines, on which the enemy detached four or five thouſand cavalry from his poſition to the right by way of Esslingen, & excited ſome apprehenſions that he would impede the progreſs of the fourth column, or even break through it.——The Prince therefore ordered four regiments to the left, and kept the ſecond column formed

Of the fifth column, two battalions of Chas-eler's advanced directly upon Esslingen, hile two battalions of Bellegarde's were or-ered to penetrate the left bank of the village nd the ſmall contigious wood. Two batta-ons of Hiller's and Szluarays, beſides the rchduke Ferdinand's and Stiptic's regiment f huſſars, and two diviſions of Rosenberg's ght horſe, were in the plain in readineſs to upport them.

Theſe combined attacks were made twice ucceſſively with uncommon intrepidity, the nemy's troops were repulſed at all points, nd driven into the village of Esslingen which ad been ſet on fire.——But as the enemy's rmy was drawn up in ſeveral lines between sslingen and Aſpern, and that each new at-ack with freſh reinforcements, because the afety of his retreat depended on the poſſeſſi-n of this village; our troops were obliged o abandon it at the approach of night, and o await, under arms, the arrival of morning.

The reſerve corps of cavalry marched in wo columns under the command of General Prince of Lichtenſtein, and advanced upon he New Inn betwen Rasehdorf and Breiten-ee. General Count Wartensleben with Blan-enſtein's huſſars, conducted the advanced uard.

No ſooner did the enemy perceive the ge-eral advance of the army, than he placed the bulk of his cavalry, ſupported by ſome batta-ions of infantry, in order to battle between Esslingen and Aspern, and commenced a brisk annonade upon the columns of Auſtrian ca-valry as they advanced.

Prince Lichtenſtein directed his columns o march forward in two lines, on which the enemy detached four or five thouſand caval-y from his poſition to the right by way of Esslingen, & excited ſome apprehenſions that he would impede the progreſs of the fourth olumn, or even break through it.——The Prince therefore ordered four regiments to the left, and kept the ſecond column formed in two lines, till he was convinced that the fourth would not meet with any impediment in its march.

During this movement the remainder of the enemy's cavalry, alſo advanced with the greateſt confidence, towards the right wing of the Auſtrians.—They were received with a firmneſs which they probably did not expect. The intrepidity of the cavalry which had marched up, particularly Maurice Lichtenſtein's regiment and the Archduke Francis's cuiraſſiers, the former headed by its gallant Col. Ruſſell, fruſtrated the repeated aſſaults of the enemy by counter-attacks, by which they at length put a ſtop to his impetuous advance, and completely repulſed him with conſiderable loſs. In theſe conflicts the French General of diviſion, Durosnel, Equerry to the Emperor, was taken priſoner in a few paces from him, as was alſo General Fouler, Equerry to the Empreſs, after having been ſlightly wounded. Notwithſtanding the fire of muſketry which now enſued, the Prince ordered a General advance, by which the enemy was ſtraitened in the alignement between Esslingen and Aſpern, but on account of the flanking fire from Esslingen, could not be purſued any further. The fire of his guns was answered with ſpirit by the horſe artillery.—About ſeven in the evening, three thouſand horſe were again detached towards the point of union between the cavalry of the corps of reſerve and the left wing of Prince Hohenzollern, and fell en maſſe upon the brigades of cuiraſſiers of Generals Knoyber, Kuary, and Siegenthal; but by the ſteady intrepidity of the Blankenſtein's and Riesch's regiments, who with the utmoſt gallantry made a ſudden attack on the enemy's flanks, his cavalry was again repulſed, and part of it, which had fallen upon ſome of the regiments of the new levies, placed in the third line, was cut off and there taken.

Meanwhile night came on, and it was paſſed by the Prince in the beſt ſtate of preparation on the ground which he had gained from the enemy.

For the firſt time Napoleon had ſuſtained a defeat in Germany. From this moment he was reduced to the rank of bold and ſucceſsful Generals, who, like himſelf, after a long ſervice of deſtructive atchievements, experienced the vicissitudes of fortune. The charm of his invincibility was diſſolved. No longer the ſpoiled child of fortune; by poſterity he will characterize as the ſport of the fickle goddeſs. New hopes began to animate the oppreſſed nations.—To the Auſtrian army the 21ſt of May was a grand and glorious epoch, that muſt inſpire it with a conſciousneſs, of its ſtrength, and a confidence in its energies. Overwhelmed by our irreſiſtable infantry, its proud opponents were extended in the duſt, and the preſence of their hither to unconquered Emperor was no longer capable of ſnatching from the heroes of Auſtria the laurels which they had acquired.

Napoleon's glory was obviouſly at ſtake.—New efforts were to be expected the following day; but he was alſo obliged to fight for his exiſtence. By means of fire ſhips ſent down the Danube, the Archduke had cauſed the enemy's bridge on the Lobau to be broken down, and its repairs would take up ſeveral hours.—Meanwhile Napoleon had already in the evening been joined by the corps of General Oudinot: and all the diſpoſable troops followed from Vienna and the Upper Danube, and were tranſported acroſs the river in veſſels as faſt as they arrived. The Archduke on his part, ordered the grenadier corps which had not had any ſhare in the firſt engagement, to advance from its poſition near Gerasdorf to Breitenlee; and the ſhort night was ſcarcely ſufficient to complete the reſpective preparations for the commencement of a ſecond tragedy.

Lateſt Foreign News.

London, July 25.

A Gentleman arrived from Corunna gives a moſt deplorable account of the ſufferings of the Spaniſh peaſantry from the rapacious neſs of the French armies. They ſeize on whole flocks of ſheep, and ſlaughter them for the use of their troops without any remuneration. Sometimes, indeed, they are ſo juſt as to give drafts on Bonaparte's Commiſſiaries.

July 28.

The Emperor of Auſtria iſſued a very important Proclamation at Budweis, on the 15th inſt. a copy of which has been received in town. This Proclamation, we underſtand, ſtates, that the loſs ſuſtained by both armies, the French as well as the Auſtrian, had rendered an Armiſtice neceſſary, and that there being no ſtipulation againſt military movements in the Armiſtice, every thing would be done, during its continuance, to promote the ſecurity of the Auſtrian Empire. Reverſes are admitted to have been ſuſtained, and are attributed to one of the Generals who commanded a diviſion in the battle of Wagram having ſuffered his troops to fall back and expoſe the reſt. Not a word is ſaid reſpecting peace.

Letters from St. Peterſburgh of the 6th of July, ſtates that an Engliſh ſquadron of 7 ſail of the line, and 20 other veſſels, have made their appearance between Hochland & Cronſtadt, in preſence of the Ruſſian fleet, and that a naval engagement was expected—and that the Ruſſians were alarmed for the ſafety of Cronſtadt, the Britiſh ſquadron having evinced a diſpoſition to bombard it.

The Archduke Charles and Prince Lichtenſtein, were ſlightly wounded in the late actions.

July 30.

Before the greater part of our readers will have received this day's Courier, the expedition will have reached the firſt point of its deſtination, and ſtruck the firſt blow. The firſt and ſecond diviſions of the Expedition ſailed early yeſterday morning, and were ſoon clear of the Downs. Admiral Otway with the remaining diviſion of the Expedition ſailed at five this morning, with a fine wind from the weſtward. The troops embarked at Harwich were to ſail this morning. In the mean time, more horſes, troops and artillery, are embarking, and we have probably by this time, on the enemy's coaſt, the largeſt force that was ever ſent from the Britiſh ſhores at one time; perhaps between 40 and 50,000 troops.

Three iſlands lie at the mouth of Scheldt, Cadsand, Walcheren, and Schowen. The poſſeſſion of theſe iſlands is neceſſary to all interior operations up the Eaſt and Weſt Scheldt, and theſe we may now ſay, it is the object of the three diviſions of the Expedition to attack in the firſt inſtance. Cadsand will probably be the firſt iſland attacked, becauſe it commands the entrance of the Weſt Scheldt, and will enable our ſhips to go up the river. The Marquis of Huntley's diviſion of the 6th, 50th, 91ſt, 9 h, 38th, and 42d regiments, will attack Cadsand.—Cadsand is not ſtrong on its weſtern ſide, but the enemy we underſtand have erected a mortar battery above Breskens. With ſuch a battery and Flushing the Scheldt may be in a great meaſure commanded. But it is probable that it is not intended to attack this battery in front at leaſt till after a landing had been effected in another part. The ſecond diviſion, under the command of Sir John Hope, is deſtined for the Schowen iſland and the North part of Walcheren. Schowen, is neceſſary to ſecure the Eaſt Scheldt, and to put us in poſſeſſion of North Beverland. The operations againſt Walcheren will be committed to Sir Eyre Coot. Upon this jubject it is ſaid in a morning paper that "the enemy had already aſſembled 6000 troops in Walcheren, which it is ſuppoſed will be ſufficient to cope with 30,000 aſſailants, placed as they are on terra firma, and provided with extenſive redoubts & batteries.—The town of Middelburg in the centre of the iſland, has had the pavement removed from the ſpacious ſquares within its walls, and the ſame induſtry has been employed at Flushing, to prevent the deſtruction of the garrilon and inhabitants from the rebounding of the miſſiles, and from the fragments of ſtone in the caſe of bombardment."

We are glad to find that the enemy have no more than 6000 troops in Walcheren: but, as to their being able to cope with 30,000 Britiſh troops, we have little doubt, ere a few hours have elapſed, that we ſhall find they have not been able to cope with a third of that number. Middelburgh is not a place of any ſtrength. Flushing is ſtrong; & there may be ſome batteries on the Weſtern coaſt of the iſle of Walcheren. But the valor, ſkill, and firmneſs of our troops will ſoon overcome the obſtacles.

What objects are in contemplation after the operations againſt Cadsand, Walcheren, and Schowen, have been carried into effect, it would be at preſent improper to diſcloſe.

July 31.

A cutter arrived on Saturday from off Flushing. A variety of reports were immediately in circulation on the coaſt. It was ſaid by ſome that the iſland of Walcheren had ſurrendered to our troops without reſiſtence. Others that a conſiderable body of French troops had been collected in the iſland, and that the reſiſtence would be obſtinate. A Dutchman who arrived in the cutter, ſays, that the crews of the veſſels at Flushing have deſerted and gone into the interior.

The Hague Gazette of the 14 h inſt, contains an account of the defeat of the army of Gen. Junot by the united corps of Rudewitch, Kienmayer, and the Duke of Brunſwick Oel, near Barenth.

It was reported at Dover on Saturday, that Flushing had ſurrendered without oppoſition, not to the expedition, which had not then arrived; but to the Britiſh ſquadron, which arrived off that ſtation on Tuesday ſe'nnight, the French ſquadron having returned up the Scheldt.

Banks of the Elbe July 14.

The French Cuſtom houſe officers and marines have not re-appeared ſince the landing of the Engliſh, and at Hamburg they begin to diſguiſe themſelves by changing their dreſſes.

In Hanover the rumours of the ſpeedy arrival of an expedition from Great Britain, for the deliverance of the loyal inhabitants of that country from the French, have cauſed the greateſt enthuſiaſm, eſpecially in the capital, where the inhabitants ſang "God Save Great George," & bade defiance to the French authorities. The Governor has threatened martial law, and ſerious exceſſes are apprehended as the indignation of the loyal inhabitants can no longer contain itſelf. Some Frenchmen are ſaid to have been roughly handled. May theſe loyal people ſoon ſee their deliverers, whom they ſo much pant after. At Bremen, the Cuſtom houſe officers have fled; but, attempting to get away ſome confiſcated goods, the people, to the number of two thouſand, prevented them, by cutting the traces of the horſes. The French Commandant has been pelted with ſtones by the indignant populace, whom the Senate do all they can to oppoſe. They have alſo aſked pardon of the French Commandant, who has returned no favorable anſwer.

What gives the Hanoverians ſuch enthuſiaſm, is a ſtatement, generally ſpread over the country, that General Vallmoden, in the convention for delivering up Hanover, had ſtipulated with Mortier, that if it was not occupied by the Engliſh before the firſt of Auguſt, 1809 it would remain in the poſſeſſion of the French. This is ſaid to be a leſſon to the good oppreſſed people, who love their king and Engliſh very well, and to excite the French, love to indulge this beliſh.

St. Petersburgh, June 28.

Three English frigates have taken possession of Catherine Harbor, in Kola, near the Icy Ocean, and of all the stores belonging to the Company of the White Sea, consisting of salt, cordage, &c. as well as some vessels loaded with corn. The garrison has also been taken in Kola, from which place the few inhabitants had fled. These frigates are now cruizing at the mouth of the White Sea. The Government has put an embargo upon all vessels in Archangel, that they may not fall into the hands of the English, who seem to have devoted their attention principally to the corn vessels from Archangel. This is the first attack of the English upon the Russian territory.

Glasgow, August 8.

There are no accounts from the Expedition, but it is pretty confidently reported, that by a telegraphic dispatch received at the Admiralty, on Saturday afternoon, accounts were received of the surrender of the island of Walcheren.

The London Gazette contains an official account of a gallant enterprize under the command of Lord George Stuart, of his Majesty's ship amiable, who with 150 sailors and marines, attacked a party of the French at Gessendorf, a town 28 miles distant from Cuxhaven, where they destroyed the batteries, routed the party opposed to them and brought off a quantity of confiscated merchandise

August 9.

German papers to the 22d ult. have been received. It should seem, from what they say, of the re-entrance of the Austrians into Dresden and Leipsic, that the Armistice does not extend to the North of Germany. These papers confirm what we stated in our last, of the order given at Vienna to prepare quarters for 32,000 wounded French; and describes Bonaparte's loss at the battle of Wagram, to have been very great.—The Duke of Istria, (Marshal Bessieres) is among the wounded, and several other Generals

A mercantile house of great respectability in London, is said to have received a letter from Rotterdam, of a very recent date, which positively asserts, that intelligence had been received there of the rupture of the armistice; and adds, that another battle had taken place between the French and Austrians, in which the former were defeated with the loss of 14,000 men.

London, August 2.

MOST GALLANT ATCHIEVEMENT.

We have the pleasure to lay before the public an account of a most brilliant atchievement against the Russian flotilla in the Baltic. We ardently hope that frequent opportunities may be offorded us of making Russia feel our power.

About the beginning of last month the Russian flotilla in the Baltic took up a position under a point called Pencula.—each wing of their flotilla was flanked by a rock. In this position they seemed to defy our power.—Such a defiance could not of course be brooked by British seamen; and it was resolved to man our boats and send them in to teach the Russians more respect.—The boats of the Bellerophon, Implacable, Melpomene, & Prometheus, were accordingly manned, and on the night of the 7th ult. proceeded under the command of Lieutenant Hawky to attack the enemy in their strong position.—Observing our approach the Russians poured a heavy fire from their flotilla from the two rocks—Our gallant countrymen, however, advanced with their characteristic bravery and steadiness, disregarding the fire of the enemy and not firing a shot till the boats were close to the flotilla—then they opened upon them, boarded the flotilla sword in hand, and drove all before them. The flotilla consisted of eight gun boats, each mounting a 32 and 24 pounders, and 46 men. Six of these were brought out and one sunk. There were besides twelve vessels under the protection of the flotilla, laden with powder and provisions for the Russian army—these were all taken and a large ship was burnt. We grieve to say, that lieut. Hawky, as promising an officer as any in our service, was killed by a grape shot after he had taken one of the gun-boats.—Lieutenant Sterling, of the Prometheus, was so severely wounded, that he died soon after the action.—Mr. Mounteney, a Midshipman, being killed.—We had in all 17 killed, and 6 wounded.

The loss of the Russians was much greater—they had 55 killed, and a great number were drowned; 127 were made prisoners, of whom 51 are wounded

Harwich August 4.

☞ Intelligence has just been brought from the Expedition, by a foreign vessel which left the Dutch coast last Wednesday night. She had been with the Expedition from Saturday last—on that day about one P. M. he was in the midst of our Expedition, which was then about 2 miles distant from Flushing. They were then at anchor. Three guns having been fired at the British Admiral's ship, the whole of the fleet weighed and stood close in. The foreign vessel then set sail for another part of the Dutch coast more to the Northward, where she remained until Wednesday night, when she receive a short note by a fishing vessel, directing her to return with all haste to England, and adding, that "Flushing had been taken by the British."—By Flushing the master of the foreign vessel means the surrender of the whole Island of Walcheren.

The above intelligence comes from a source that may be relied on."

On Wednesday night a Telegraphic order was received at Deal from the Admiralty, for all the vessels, with the heavy artillery on board, laying in the Downs, to sail immediately to join the Expedition: and they all sailed on Thursday morning, under convoy of his Majesty's sloop Rinaldo.

AUSTRIAN BULLETIN

Supplement to the LONDON GAZETTE.
Tuesday, July 11.

An account of the BATTLE fought near Aſpern, on the Marchfield, on the 21ſt and 22d of May, 1809, between the Archduke Charles of Auſtria, Generaliſſimo of the Imperial Auſtrian Armies, and the Emperor Napoleon, Commander in Chief of the French and Allied armies.

BATTLE OF THE 22d OF MAY.

Corps of Lieutenant General Hiller.

With the Morning's dawn the enemy renewed his attacks, with a force ſtrengthened, if poſſible, by the reinforcements of the preceding day. It was a conflict of valor and mutual exaſperation. Scarcely had the French guards compelled General Vaquant to abandon Aſpern, when the regiment of Kienmeyer again penetrated into the burning village, drove back the choiceſt troops of the enemy, and engaged in a new conteſt in the midſt of the conflagration, till, at the expiration of an hour, it was alſo obliged to give way. The regiment of Benjovsky now rushed in, and at the firſt onſet gained poſſeſſion of the churchyard, the walls of which Field Marſhal Lieutenant Hiller immediately ordered the firſt diviſion of pioneers to pull down, and the church, together with the parſonage, to be ſet on fire. Thus was this regiment ſupported by ſome battalions commanded by General Blanchi, at length enabled to maintain itſelf at the entrance of the village, after overcoming the reſiſtance, bordering on deſpair, oppoſed by the flower of the French army.

Neither could the enemy procure any further effect upon the bulky meadow, after Lieutenant General Hiller, had ordered the force there to be ſupported by two battalions of Anton Mittrowsky's and a battery; on which the Jagers, St. George's and two battalions of Vienna Volunteers, drove him from his advantageous poſition, which he never afterwards attempted to recover.

About this time the left wing of the corps was likewiſe placed in ſecurity by 3 batteries ſent by the Lieutenant General, to ſupport the general of cavalry, Count Bellegrade, and the latter maintained his ground againſt the moſt deſperate attacks of the enemy: the Lieutenant General Hiller kept his poſition on the left flank of the enemy, and the victory was decided in this quarter. The corps was therefore again formed in two lines, and thus awaited the approaching events.

Corps of the General of cavalry Count Bellegrade.

Count Bellegrade having received a meſſage from General Vaquant that the enemy was aſſembling in force before Aſpern, towards the bulky meadow, and apparently had in view an aſſault upon that point, was juſt going to ſend a freſh battalion of Argenteau's into Aſpern, when the enemy, in heavy columns of infantry and cavalry, ſupported by a numerous artillery, began to advance upon the centre of the corps in the plain.

The troops ſtationed at Aſpern, exhauſted as they were with the inceſſant fire kept up during the night, were unable to withſtand the impetuoſity of the attacks, their ammunition both for the artillery and muſketry began to fail, and General Vaquant retreated in good order to the church yard. This poſt gained at ſo dear a rate, was again taken from him, after ſeveral attacks ſuſtained in conjunction with Lieutenant General Hiller; the fire was alternately taken and loſt, till at length the ſuperiority of our fire, obliged the enemy to abandon the houſes, and a laſt aſſault of Hiller's corps prevented all further attempts. From the moment of the retaking of Aſpern it became poſſible to oppoſe an offenſive movement to the enemy advancing upon the centre, and to open upon the left flank a communication. The defence of Aſpern was therefore left entirely to Hiller's corps, and while Count Bellegrade applied his right wing on Aſpern he formed his left and the centre in the direction of Eſslingen, in ſuch a manner that, by degrees, he gained the right flank of the enemy, compelled him to retreat, and by the complete effect of the artillery, brought to bear upon the left wing, which commanded the whole ſpace from Aſpern to Eſslingen gave him a moſt favorable Corps of Lieutenant General Prince of Hohenzollern.

The dawn of morning was with this corps alſo the ſignal for the renewal of the gigantic conflict. The enemy's infantry was drawn up in large diviſions, and between it the whole of the heavy cavalry was formed in maſſes. The General of cavalry, Prince Lichtenſtein, on obſerving this order of battle, perceived the neceſſity of keeping up a cloſe communication with the infantry placed near him; he therefore drew up his right wing en echequier behind the corps of infantry, but kept his left wing together, with reſerves poſted in the rear.

A prodigious quantity of artillery covered the front of the enemy, who ſeemed deſirous to annihilate our corps by the murderous fire of cannon and howitzers. Upwards of two hundred pieces of cannon were engaged on both ſides, and the oldeſt ſoldiers never recollected to have witneſſed ſo tremendous a fire.

Vain was every effort to ſhake the intrepidity of the Auſtrian troops. Napoleon rode through his ranks, and according to the report of the priſoners, made them acquainted with the deſtruction of his bridge, but added, that he had himſelf ordered it to be broken down, becauſe in this caſe there was no alternative, but victory or death. Soon afterwards the whole of the enemy's line put itſelf in motion, and the whole cavalry made a principal attack on the point where the corps of cavalry of Prince Lichtenſtein communicated with the left wing of Lieutenant General and Prince of Hohenzollern. The engagement now became general; the regiments of Rohan, D'Alpi, Joſeph Colloredo and Stain, repulſed all the attacks of the enemy. The Generals were every where at the head of their troops, and inſpired them with courage and perſeverance. The Archduke himſelf ſeized the colours of Zach's and Duke battalion, which had already begun to way, followed new enthuſiasm his heroic example. Moſt of thoſe who ſurrounded him were wounded: his Adjutant General Count Colleredo received a ball in his head, the wound from which was conſidered dangerous, a ſqueeze of the hand ſignified to him the concern of his ſympathiſing commander, who filled with contempt of death, now fought for glory and his country.

The attacks of our impenetrable corps, both with the ſabre and the bayonet ſo rapidly repeated and ſo impetuous, as to be unparalleled in military annals, fruſtrated all the intentions of the enemy.

He was beaten at all points and aſtoniſhed at ſuch undaunted intrepidity, he was obliged to abandon the field of battle.

About this time Lieut General the Prince of Hohenzollern obſerved on his left wing, near Eſslingen, a chaſm, which had been formed during the heat of the engagement, and afforded an advantageous point of attack. Fielich's regiment, commanded by Colonel Meesery, was ordered thither in three columns, and repulſed four regiments of cavalry, accompanied with infantry and artillery.

The corps remained in the poſition which they had taken, till the grenadiers of the reſerve, which the Archduke had ordered forward from Brietenſee arrived, the battalions exhauſted with the ſanguinary conflict, and continued the attack upon the centre of the enemy's poſition. Lieut. Gen. D'Aſpre penetrated with the four battalions of grenadiers of Pzzſky, Puleany, Sſovaux and Scaltach without having a ſhot, to the enemy's cannon, where he was flanked by ſuch a deſtructive fire from Eſslingen, that nothing but the preſence of the Archduke, who haſtened to the ſpot, could have induced his grenadiers to maintain their ground. Captain Count Dominic had already reached the enemy's battery, when he was wounded by two balls and quitted the field.

The Archduke ordered a new aſſault upon Eſslingen, which was immediately undertaken by Field Marſhal Lieutenant D'Aſpre with the grenadier battalions of Kirchenbetter and Sſovaux on the left, and Scaltach and Gregory on the front. Five times did theſe gallant troops ruſh up to the very walls of the houſes, burning internally and placed in a ſtate of defence; ſome of the grenadiers thruſt their bayonets into the enemy's loop holes, but all their efforts were fruitleſs, for their antagoniſts fought the fight of deſpair. The Archduke ordered the grenadiers to take up their former poſition, & when they volunteered to renew the aſſault, he would not permit them, as the enemy was then in full retreat.

Corps of Field Marſhal Lieutenant Prince Rosenberg.

Both diviſions of this corps, which in advancing had compoſed the fourth and fifth columns, were formed before break of day for a new attack, for which the enemy likewiſe made preparation on his ſide but a manifeſt ſuperiority in numbers.

Prince Rosenberg reſolved to attack the village of Eſslingen with the Archduke Charles's regiment of infantry, to puſh forward his other troops in battalions, and in particular to go and meet the enemy, who was advancing in the open country between Eſslingen and the neareſt arm of the Danube.

The village was already gained, and battalions advancing on the left, obliged the enemy, drawn up in ſeveral lines, to yield. The moſt violent cannonade was kept up inceſſantly on both ſides, and it was ſuſtained by the troops with the greateſt fortitude.

Favored by a fog which ſuddenly came on, the enemy's heavy cavalry ventured to attack on all ſides the corps formed by Sztaray's & Hiller's regiments of infantry. Theſe brave fellows received him with fixed bayonets, and at the laſt moment poured in their fire with ſuch effect, that the enemy was compelled to betake himſelf to flight with conſiderable loſs. Five times were theſe attacks on Sztaray's & Hiller's repeated, and each time they were repelled with equal courage and reſolution. The cavalry contributed all that lay in their power to the purſuit of the enemy and the ſupport of the infantry.

Coburg's, the Archduke Louis's and Czartoſky's regiments belonging to the diviſion of Lieutenant General Dedovich ſtationed on the right, renewed the exertions of the preceding day with the ſame diſpoſition and the ſame ſucceſs. After this ſevere conflict the enemy ſeemed to have no inclination to expoſe himſelf to any freſh diſaſter, and confined himſelf merely to the operation of his ſuperior artillery.

About eleven P. M. Prince Rosenberg received orders from the Archduke, commander in chief, to make a new attack upon Eſslingen, and a meſſage to the ſame effect was ſent to Lieut. Gen. Dedovich, who commanded the right diviſion of this Corps.

Prince Rosenberg immediately formed two columns of attack under the conduct of Lieut. Generals Princes Hohenzollern and Rohan, while Lieut. Gen. Dedovich advanced againſt the citadel of the place, and the magazines ſurrounded with walls and ditches.

The attack was made with redoubled bravery, and our troops ruſhed with irreſiſtable impetuoſity into the village. Still, however, they found it impoſſible to maintain this poſt into which the enemy kept continually throwing new reinforcements, which was of the utmoſt importance for covering his retreat which he had reſolved upon, and which he defended with an immenſe ſacrifice of lives. Prince Rosenberg therefore reſoved to confine himſelf to the obſtinate maintenance of his own poſition, to ſecure the left flank of the army, and to increaſe the embarraſſment of the enemy by an inceſſant fire from all the batteries.

In the night between the 22d and 23d the enemy accompliſhed his retreat to the Lobau and at three in the morning his rear guard alſo had evacuated Eſslingen and all the points which he had occupied on the left bank of the Danube. Some diviſions purſued him cloſely, and took poſſeſſion as near as poſſible of the neceſſary poſts of obſervation.

Thus terminated a conflict of two days, which will be forever memorable in the annals of the world, and in the hiſtory of war. It was the moſt obſtinate and bloody that has occurred ſince the commencement of the French revolution.

It was deciſive for the glory of the Auſtrian arms, for the preſervation of the Monarchy and for the correction of public opinion.

The infantry has entered upon a new and brilliant career, and by the firm confidence it has manifeſted in its own energies, has paved the way to new victories. The enemy's cavalry has been its acquired, but hitherto untried glory diſſipated by the maſſes of our battalions, whoſe cool intrepidity it was unable to endure.

Cavalry and artillery have ſurpaſſed themſelves in valor, and in the ſpace of two days have performed atchievements ſufficient for a whole campaign. Three pieces of cannon, ſeven ammunition Waggons, 17,000 French muſkets, and about 3000 cuiraſſes fell into the hands of the conqueror. The loſs on both ſides was very great: this, and the circumſtance that very few priſoners were taken by either party proves the determination of the combatants either to conquer or die.

The Auſtrian army laments the death of eighty-ſeven ſuperior officers, 4199 ſubalterns and privates.

Lieutenant Generals Prince Rohan, Dedovich, Weber, and Frenel, Generals Winſingerode, Grill, Neuſtadter, Siegenthal, Collereode, May, Hohenfield, and Buresch, ſix hundred and ſixty three officers, and 15,651 ſubalterns and privates were wounded. Of theſe, Field Marſhal Lieutenant Weber, eight officers, and 829 men were taken priſoners by the enemy.

The loſs of the enemy was prodigious, and exceeds all expectations. It can only be accounted for by the effect of our concentric fire on an exceedingly confined field of battle, where all the batteries crossed one another, and calculated by the following authentic data.

Generals Lasnes, D'Espagne, St. Hilare, and Alquerque, are dead; Maſſena, Beſſieres Moliter, Poudet, Legrand, Laſſalle, and the two brothers Legrange wounded; Duroſnel and Fouler taken.

Upwards of 7000 men, and an immenſe number of horſes were buried on the field of battle; five thouſand and ſome hundreds wounded lie in our hoſpitals. In Vienna and the ſuburbs there are at preſent 29,773 wounded, many were carried to St. Polten, Enns, and as far as Lintz; 2,300 were taken. Several hundred of corpſes, floated down the Danube, are ſtill daily thrown upon its ſhores; many met with their death in the iſland of Lobau, and ſince the water has fallen in the ſmaller arms of the river, innumerable bodies thus conſigned by their comrades to everlaſting oblivion, have become viſible. The burying of the ſufferers is not yet over, and a peſtilential air is wafted from the theatre of death.

His Imperial Highneſs, the Generaliſſimo, has undertaken the duty ſo dear to his heart of acquainting the Monarch of the country with the names of thoſe who took the moſt active ſhares in the atchievements of theſe glorious days; but he acknowledges with profound emotion, amidſt the rivalſhip of the higheſt military virtues, it is ſcarcely poſſible to diſtinguiſh the moſt valiant, and declares all the ſoldiers of Aſpern worthy of public gratitude.

His Imperial Highneſs conſiders the intelligent diſpoſitions of the Chief of his ſtaff, Gen. Baron Wimpfen, and his inceſſant exertions, as the foundation of the victory.

The officers commanding corps have rendered themſelves deſerving of the higheſt favors by uncommon devotedneſs, perſonal bravery, warm attachment to their Sovereign and their high ſense of honor.

Their names will be transmitted to poſterity with the atchievements of the valiant troops who were under their direction. Colonel Smith, of the artillery, by his indefatigable activity in the proper application of the ordnance, and his well known bravery, rendered the moſt important ſervices.

[Here follow a liſt of officers who diſtinguiſhed themſelves, which is unintereſting to the American reader.—We obſerve in the commendations, that the mode of praiſe is alike given to the ſoldier and the general, by puſhing the name of the former, with his atchievements.]

PARLIAMENTARY REFORM.

We are induced to inſert the following Letter, from the Earl of Selkirk to John Cartwright, Eſq. from a conviction, that our readers will be highly gratified by the peruſal of it.

PORTLAND PLACE, APRIL 25, 1809.

SIR,—The letter, in which you propoſed to me to act as Steward at the approaching meeting of the friends of Parliamentary Reform, ought to have received an earlier anſwer: but I have not found it eaſy to command ſufficient leiſure to reply to it, in the manner which appeared to me due, both to the reſpectability of your character, and to the ſentiments of eſteem, which I know to have been entertained towards you by my father and brother. Senſible that in many important points there is a coincidence of opinion between us, while at the ſame time I feel it impoſſible to accede to your propoſal, I wiſh to ſtate at ſome length, the motives which influence me in that determination.

To Parliamentary Reform, my father and brother were, as you well know, zealous friends; and all my own early prepoſſeſſions were in favor of ſuch a meaſure—I ſaw with abhorrence the aſcendency, which unprincipled and worthleſs characters often acquired through the influence of corruption. I lamented the public advantages ſo often ſacrificed to the intereſt of individuals. I was ſtruck with the glaring manner in which the practice of our Conſtitution appeared to deviate from its theory: and I flattered myſelf that if the repreſentation of the people were put on a proper footing, theſe abuſes would be eradicated;—that if the repreſentation were equaliſed, the right of ſuffrage extended, the duration of Parliament ſhortened, bribery could ſcarcely be applied with effect;—that the influence of corruption being thus removed, the real friends of the country would obtain the preference naturally due to worth and talents; and that the Houſe of Commons being ſo compoſed, every abuſe would ſpeedily be checked or thoroughly reformed.

Such, Sir, were the views upon which the propoſal of a great and radical change of the Houſe of Commons. I believe a long train of reaſoning, my father and brother well as many other men of diſtinguiſhed opinions. Of the corruptions of this preſent have ſince been reaſon to doubt—not to horrence and contempt for corruption—to dergone any change—in theſe ſentiments of thoſe honoured meditations with which well acquainted: but I have had an opportunity never had of ſeeing the practical application ples from which we expect conſequences of grief and mortification I perceive that in reſulted, as from theory I had been led to

I allude to the obſervations which I made in the United States of America, where ſeparation is eſtabliſhed, approaching as practicable, to the ideal perfection, and where that ſyſtem is combined with property, or itſelf calculating to check the force of corruption. A very ſhort acquaintance with the legiſlative proceedings of America may convince univerſal ſuffrage and frequency of election, miſconduct of repreſentatives; and the power, rather to power by popular favor, than by that power, as is the purchaſer of a rotten

There is no ground for the idea, that affairs are managed with a higher regard to than in our own. The Parliament, with corruptions, cannot be accuſed of proceeding with diſgrace, to the infamous and hurtful meaſures tranſacted in many of the legiſlatures of dent to the moſt careleſs obſervation, that morals is there worſe than England—that reſpected—that corrupt motives have a degree of check from feelings of honour, Engliſhmen. To ſum up all, there is no between the two countries in that great ment, the admiration of juſtice.

When I conſider this country, thoſe eſſential points of practical good governance framed upon the very principles to which Parliamentary Reform looks, as the object of amendment in our own, I cannot that theſe principles are fallacious. I have occurred to me, as to the ſource leaſt me into too great length; but I think which I have already referred, ſufficient that Parliamentary Reform in England effects which it moſt ſincere and ſtrong.

Fully as I am impreſſed with the opinion ry Reform is not the road to any perfection am very far from thinking that there quires reform in our government. I am there are many corruptions of moſt pernicious may and ought to be extirpated. But how that object is to be effected, without of the greateſt importance. The advantages entire truſtees, have perhaps fairly contributed variety of guarding every avenue to the proceedings which are taken for repreſſion Servе only to open for it ſome new channel our. PARLIAMENTARY REFORM.

We are induced to inſert the following Letter, from the rl of Selkirk to John Cartwright, Eſq. from a conviction, at our readers will be highly gratified by the peruſal of it:

PORTLAND PLACE, APRIL 25, 1809.

R.—The letter, in which you propoſed to me to act as ward at the approaching meeting of the friends of Parliantary Reform, ought to have received an earlier anſwer
I have not found it eaſy to command ſufficient leiſure to ply to it, in the manner which appeared to me due, both to reſpectability of your character, and to the ſentiments reem, which I know to have been entertained towards you my father and brother. Senſible that in many important nts there is a coincidence of opinion between us, while at e ſame time I feel it impoſſible to accede to your propoſal, with to ſtate at ſome length, the motives which influence
e in that determination.

To Parliamentary Reform, my father and brother were, you well know, zealous friends; and all my own early poſſeſſions were in favor of ſuch a meaſure.—I ſaw with horrence the ſtupendency, which ſuppriniciples and worth-ſs characters often acquired through the influence of coruption. I lamented the public advantages ſo often ſacrificed the intereſt of individuals. I was ſtruck with the glaring nner in which the practice of our Conſtitution appeared to ariate from its theory; and I flattered myſelf that if the re-preſentation of the people were put on a proper footing, theſe vils would be eradicated;—that if the repreſentation were qualized, the right of ſuffrage extended, the duration of Parament ſhortened, bribery could ſcarcely be applied with ef-ct; that the influence of corruption being thus removed, s real friends of the country would obtain the preference turally due to worth and talents; and that the Houſe of ommons being ſo compoſed, every abuſe would ſpeedily be ected or thoroughly reformed.

Such, Sir, were the views upon which I was led to approve the propoſal of a great and radical change in the Conſtitution of the Houſe of Commons. I believe, that through a ſimi-lar train of reaſoning, my father and brother had been led, as well as many other men of diſtinguiſhed worth, to the ſame opinions. Of the correctneſs of this practicable concluſion, I have ſince ſeen reaſon to doubt—not that my feelings of abhorrence and contempt for corruption and venality have undergone any change—in theſe ſentiments I do not fall ſhort of thoſe honourable mediators with whoſe opinions you were well acquainted: but I have had an opportunity, which they never had of ſeeing the practical application of thoſe principles from which we expect conſequences ſo beneficial. With grief and mortification I perceive that no ſuch advantages had reſulted, as from theory I had been led to anticipate.

I allude to the obſervations which I had occaſion to make in the United States of America where a ſyſtem of repreſentation is eſtabliſhed, approaching as nearly as perhaps is practicable, to the theoretical perfection at which you aim; and where that ſyſtem is combined with a general diffuſion of property, of itſelf calculating to check in a great degree the force of corruption. A very ſhort acquaintance with the le-giſlative proceedings of America may afford conviction that univerſal ſuffrage and frequency of election prove no bar to the miſconduct of repreſentatives: and that a political adventurer, raiſed to power by popular favor, is full as likely to abuſe that power, as is the purchaſer of a rotten borough.

There is no ground for the idea, that in that country public affairs are managed with a higher regard to the public welfare, than in our own. The Parliament of England with all its corruptions, cannot be accuſed of proceeding approaching, in diſgrace, to the infamous and bare faced jobs which have been tranſacted in many of the legiſlatures of America. It is evident to the moſt careleſs obſervation, that the ſtate of public morals is there worſe than England—that political integrity is leſs reſpected—that corrupt motives have not the ſame degree of check from feelings of honour, as they have among Engliſhmen: To ſum up all, there is no room for compariſon between the two countries in that great teſt of good government, the adminiſtration of juſtice.

When I conſider a country thus deficient in the moſt eſſential points of practical good government, has a Conſtitution framed upon the very principles to which the advocates of Parliamentary Reform look, as the foundation of every proſ-pect of amendment in our own, I cannot avoid the concluſion that theſe principles are fallacious. The reaſonings which have occurred to me, as to the ſource of the fallacy, would lead me into too great length; but I think the obſervations to which I have already referred, ſufficiently juſtify the opinion that Parliamentary Reform in England would not have the effects which a moſt ſincere and zealous friend anticipates.

Fully am I impreſſed with the opinion that Parliamentary Reform is not the road to any practical public good; I am very far from thinking that there is nothing which requires reform in our government. I am well convinced, that there are many corruptions of moſt pernicious tendency, which may and ought to be eradicated. But we have to conſider how that object is to be effected, without endangering benefits of the greateſt importance. The advocates of a partial and entire reform, have perhaps fairly conſidered the extreme difficulty of guarding every avenue to abuſe, and how many demeaſures which are taken for reforming it in one quarter, ſerve only to open for it ſome new channel. Bad, more pernicious. We have a government in which with all its corruptions the ſtate is much eſſentially good, though particular caſes of hardſhips may undoubtedly be quoted, yet would not be heaſy to find, either in the paſt or preſent ſtate of the world, a parallel to the great mass of public happineſs, which has grown up in England, under thoſe inſtitutions of which we complain.—The protection which our government offers to the perſonal liberty of the ſubject, the purity of the diſtri-bution of juſtice, and the ſecurity to which every man may enjoy the fruit of his induſtry, are fulfilled in no country in the world;—hardly can we find one that bears the leaſt compariſon to our own. Let the value of that which we poſſeſs be fairly appreciated; and then let us conſider coolly, whether the blemiſhes of our government are of ſo much magnitude, as to warrant the application of remedies, which, if they do not cure, may kill.

"I ſhall not repeat the hackuied tropicks to which the French Revolution has given occaſion; but I muſt entreat your attention to one view, which deſerves the ſerious conſideration of every genuine friend of liberty, as illuſtrating the fatal hazard of graſping too haſtily at political perfection. It is well known, that on the meeting of the Etats Generaux at Verſailles, in the year 1789, the King offered the moſt ample conceſſion, that no taxes ſhould for the future be exacted, without the authority of that body, conſtituted according to its form in Three Chambers.—There is no reaſon to doubt, that if this had been accepted to, the periodical meeting of the Etats Generaux would have been fully ſecure—that the arbitrary proceedings of the old government could not have been renewed, and that by the ſame ſteps, through which of old the Commons of England role into conſequence, the Tiers Etat might laid the foundation of a gradual improvement in the government of France. This flow progreſs, however, did not ſuit the ideas of the ardent friends of liberty. To obtain an immediate and complete regeneration, they inſiſted on the immediate abolition of the Three Chambers. They obtained their object; but on of the Three Chambers. They obtained their object; but not till they had taught the mob to ſcruple their old habits of obedience to eſtabliſhed authority. From this fatal ſource, we have ſeen a train of conſequences to ariſe, ending in the wreck of every veſtige of freedom, and the eſtabliſhment of a ferocious deſpotiſm! Among all the genuine patriots, whole well-meaning, though miſtaken zeal, contributed to the firſt exceſſes of popular enthuſiaſm in France, can we believe, that any one, if now ſurviving, would not look back with regret to the ſyſtem of poverty, however impeached, which France would have enjoyed under the old conſtitution of the Etats Generaux?—would they not lament the impoſſibility which led them to deſpiſe every reform, ſhort of complete regeneration; and to purſue as a phantom of ideal perfection, to throw away the ſubſtantial good which was in their hands?

Though I do not ſuppoſe that the friends of Parliamentary Reformers would imitate the mad fury of French Revolutioniſts, their principles have the ſame tendency, and their efforts may have in a great meaſure the ſame effect. Popular ferment is a two edged weapon, which if frequently inflicts the wound where it was not aimed: often has it ruined the cauſe of liberty, and ſeldom contributed to improve the condition of mankind! Before we riſk the infinite miſchief which may be dreaded from the uſe of ſuch an engine, let us weigh well the value of the object. Setting aſide the chance of failing in the conteſt—(ſuppoſing it ſucceſsful which might leave the conſtitution impaired by changes of an oppoſite character) let us conſider the moſt favorable caſe. On the ſuppoſition that Parliamentary Reform were peaceably accompliſhed, what proſpect would it afford of an amelioration in our condition?

The diſtranchiſement of the rotten boroughs, and the ſubſtitution of a different ſet of elections in their place, would certainly occaſion ſome change in the compoſition of the Houſe of Commons; but it is not very clear that this would be an advance in additional portion of virtuous principle. The friends of Reform do not ſufficiently adverte to the ne-ceſſity of elections purely democratical, to throw power into the hands of men, whoſe only merit conſiſts in being maſters of ſtriking addreſs to the groſſer popular deluſions. Mr. Wilkes was the only ſtrong repreſent-ative, who, without diſſembling in public an abhor-rence of the exerciſe of the influence of the Crown, was known to encourage it in private, that he had no command of the Treaſury.

From the hiſtory of all free governments, it appears that the elective power has always been divided into two parts, the Ariſtocracy and the Democracy, between which, the moſt regular ſyſtems have found it no eaſy matter. In the government, hence ariſe diviſions of theſe powers in ſuch a manner as to correct each other's exceſſes, and produce a compound, as near to perfection, as the nature of the principles had an equal chance.

A large portion of influence is now in the hands of ſervants and vaſſals, men of wealth and family, connected with, or in the other hand, many of the elections are alſo really popular enough. The proportion is ſuch, that men in power cannot venture to deſpiſe public opinion, as the Houſe of Commons is not ſo entirely dependent on popular favor, that a momentary ferment can ever rule their deliberations in the ſame manner which has often been experienced in more democra-tical governments.—This branch of the le-giſlature is ſeldom, perhaps, entirely free of men who may deſerve the title of demagogues. A few of that deſcription, however, cannot gain a dangerous aſcendency in an aſſembly ſo conſtituted—they may even be uſeful, and without being virtuous themſelves may form a check to the oppoſite vices of a different portion of the Houſe. But though occaſional benefit may be experienced from the efforts of ſuch men, we ought not to forget the danger which would ariſe, if there were no counterpoiſe to their influence.

In America, we may ſee a legiſlature untainted by any mixture of borough-mongers;
but what is the reſult? are their legiſlators &
magiſtrates always upright and wiſe men?
Are their proceedings uniformly pure? Are they never led aſtray by popular violence and deluſion?—On theſe points we refer you to one of the ableſt and moſt zealous advocates of reform. Ask Mr. Cobbett, whether, in the popular elections of America, the preference is more generally given to the man of ſolid judgement and tried integrity, or to the artful knave, who, free from the reſtraints of truth and honor, can exert all his dexterity in the arts of deception. If direct bribery be leſs frequent than in England, the advantage is fully counterbalanced by the greater influence of the blind and impetuous paſſions of the vulgar; an influence even more pernicious than the aſcendancy of wealth, and the practical effect of which fully verifies the obſervation of Burke, that, in courts be the ſcene of cabals, the people are the natural prey of mountebanks and impoſtors.

Look, Sir, at the horrible and too accurate picture which is drawn by Peter Porcupine; and you will ſee what ſort of men the moſt genuine popular elections may raiſe to pre-eminence.—Thoſe who are ſo fond of repeating that one miniſtry is no better than another, the rule recollect that a demagogue in power may be full worſe. Hiſtory does not abound in examples of men, who after riſing into power by flattering the paſſions of the multitude, have employed a power for the good of their country.

We are told, however, that a reform in Parliament is a neceſſary preliminary to the redreſs of other grievances. The facts which I have already ſtated, may ſuffice to prove, that this notion is not only unfounded, but the very reverſe of the truth: and I conſider it as a deluſion peculiarly unfortunate at the preſent moment. The attention of the country is of late been rouſed, to a multitude of abuſes, in the management of the public money, and in the diſtribution of public employments.—No candid man can entertain a doubt of the importance of checking, and as far as poſſible eradicating ſuch abuſes. They have a direct tendency to waſte the national reſources, to aggravate the burdens of the people, and damp the patriotic exertions, by exciting a general belief that the power is employed to ſubſerve the ſhifter purpoſes of individuals.

The meaſures which are neceſſary for removing theſe evils may not be agreeable to thoſe who profit by their continuance; and objections are urged, as objections always will be urged, againſt any improvement by which the intereſt of many individuals is to be effected. But reforms of this deſcription do not neceſſarily involve any conſequences dangerous to the country; on the contrary, the moſt ſerious perils are to be apprehended from neglecting them. To every juſt meaſ-ure of economical reform I am therefore a decided friend: but the conſtitution, as it now exiſts, has ſufficient means for the correction of all theſe abuſes; and if the attention of the public be not diverted from that great object, the management of the revenue may and will be reformed.

The efforts hitherto made for that object have had little ſucceſs, becauſe they have obtained from the public at large but a feeble ſupport. The importance of the object has not been ſufficiently appreciated; but the nation is now alive to it. If a ſteady and perſevering ſupport be given to thoſe who exert themſelves in Parliament for the attainment of economical reform, the friends of that principle will multiply every day; and, ſo ſooner later, the minority will find it impoſſible to hold out againſt the public voice.

To defeat this great object, I know no means more effectual than to divert the attention of the public from the ſolid intereſt, by connecting it with the plan of a conſtitutional change in the elections of the Houſe of Commons. A ſtruggle for Parliamentary reform would come at the preſent moſt ſeaſon-ably to the aid of the Anti-jacobin hypocrites, who are trembling for their ill-gotten gains. They would hail it as a moſt convenient bauble to amuſe the public, and would rejoice that, while the attention of the country was diverted from their malverſations, their cauſe would again be linked with that of ſocial order, and obtain the ſupport of all, who are not prepared to try the rotten old experiment, of ſtirring down the eſtabliſhed bulwarks of the conſtitution.

I would in fine ſay to the advocates of Parliamentary reform, to reflect how many men there are who, though prepared to ſupport every economical reform, would tremble at the idea of conſtitutional changes, to which they can ſee no termination. If the notions of a radical and entire change are purſued with violence, moderate men will again be forced to believe, that there is no alternative between meaſures of revolutionary tendency, and a reſiſtance to every reformation whatever. Many fincere friends of economical reform, may thus be driven to a co-operation with men, who have no principle but to fupport every eſtabliſhed abuſe.—Anxiouſly do I hope, that thoſe who with honeſtly to purſue the good of the country, may not again be forced to make their option between Jacobin and Anti-jacobin.—I am no afarmiſt; but this I firmly believe, that amidſt violent changes, there is more probability of making our government worſe than better. I depreciate the diſcuſſion to which you with me to lend my name, as calculated to divide the friends of ſubſtantial reformation, and improvement in the management of our publik affairs.

Cadiz, July 24.

With reſpect to our polit cal ſituation I have only to ſay that the French, finding their force too much divided, have evacuated the North of Spain as far as Ferrol, and have concentrated all their forces in the neighborhood of Madrid, with a determination no doubt of waiting united, the reſults of the campaign in Germany. The combined troops of England and Spain are, however, determined to bring them to action, and it is expected at this very moment that a general action has taken place. The reſults are not much dreaded. Should the French be worſted, their army will be deſtroyed. Should the combined army meet any reverſe, they have a powerful army of reſerve on the road to their aſſiſtance, and the paſſes to this province are well guarded. It is reaſonable to expect, that if the Auſtrians hold out but a few months longer, that there will not be a Frenchman in Spain except priſoners.

CONTINUATION OF LATE FOREIGN NEWS.

London, July 20.

Letters of a late date, which have been received from Petersburgh, via Hamburg mention that the emperor Alexander, & the Grand Duke Conſtantine, Coun R. and a numerous ſuite, accompanied by the Duke of Friuli (Marſhal Duroc) were preparing to leave that city for the army in Galicia, and that events of great importance to the world might be expected ſoon to take place. It was alſo ſaid there were no grounds to hope that Alexander would change his politics; that Caulincourt was too active and intriguing; and that he was continually ſurrounded by the French party. The idea of poſſeſſing European Turkey, and placing his brother Conſtantine upon the Throne of Conſtantinople, tended not a little towards retaining in him a diſpoſition favorable to Napolean.

July 22.

The city of Rotterdam was on Friday and Saturday laſt a ſcene of dreadful confuſion and violence in conſequence of diſputes between the military and the newly raiſed conſcripts, who refuſed to comply with the orders for marching.—Several lives were loſt on both days, and tranquility was with difficulty re-eſtabliſhed.

Advices have been received from Mr. Duff, at Cadiz. Theſe are dated in June and ſtate that the whole of the French troops in Spain had formed a junction near Madrid, and that Joſeph Bonaparte was at their head. About 4000 French had been ſurrounded at Val de Pena, by a large body of the Spaniards, and with an exception of one man, the whole were maſſacred by the Spaniſh.

LIMERICK, July 29.

Thurſday, arrived in our port the Edward and Charles, of and from Philadelphia; ſhe ſpoke the ſhip Ann, Bradford, from Liverpool bound to New-York, in lat. 39, long. 69, out 62 days; on the 8th inſt. in lat. 46, long 42, W: ſaw in with four ſail of men of war, all diſmaſted but one frigate, then ſtanding to the eaſtward one of the frigates having a jury foremaſt rigged, had a 74 gun ſhip in tow ſuppoſed to be French, with her foremaſt only ſtanding; they were ſteering in ſuch a direction that the maſter ſuppoſed they were bound for Halifax.

THE GREAT BATTLE OF WAGRAM.

The Auſtrian army, as we have all along expected, and more than once predicted, has been overpowered by numbers, and obliged to retreat from the borders of the Danube. It does not follow, however that the conqueſt of Auſtria is completed, while Britain, Turkey, Perſia, and even India, as a means of the Napoleonites conclude. The ſaid concluſion is fallacious in the extreme.—The Armiſtice, which Bonaparte appears to have been as anxious for as the Emperor of Auſtria, leaves the latter in the poſſeſſion of Bohemia, Moravia, Hungary, and other Provinces, with a population of from twelve to fifteen millions of people, an army of near two hundred thouſand men, beſides an immenſe militia, the moſt numerous artillery in the world, if the French tell truth upon that ſubject, and almoſt inexhauſtable magazines of ammunition and proviſions. How enviable is the ſituation of the Auſtrian monarch, compared with that of Frederick the Great, before the battle of Rosbach diſſipated the magnificient dream of Prince Kaunitz, the realization of which was to divide Europe between France and Auſtria, as Europe & Aſia are now, according to ſome new political dreamers, to be divided between France and Ruſſia!

The twenty-fifth Bulletin is extremely obſcure and unſatisfactory, which is never the caſe when the French achieve a real victory. The diviſion of the army into right, left, and centre, is marked with ſufficient clearneſs, but we have none of thoſe details which alone can enable us to judge of particular operations. In the dawn of the morning of the 5th of July, we are told that the Emperor had already turned the entrenchments on the enemy's left wing, and at nine in the evening he had done no more. The Works of Groſs Aſpern were taken, and yet the next day there was a violent cannonade (in Auſtrian cannonade if we can underſtand the bulletin) at Groſs Aſpern. It is evident that the French gained but little ground the firſt day, for they ſay that from noon till nine o'clock in the evening they manoeuvred in the vaſt plain of Enzersdorff.—That they were forced to manoeuvre there ſo long proves the Auſtrian diſpoſitions to have been moſt admirable. When night came on the enemy was every where put to flight and annihilated (this is not the ninth but certainly the fourth or fifth time that the French ſay they have annihilated the Auſtrians this campaign) but notwithſtanding no enemy remained, the French prepared for the battle of Wagram which they foreſaw was to take place the next day, and the diſpoſitions of the French and Auſtrian Generals were oppoſed to each other! Wagram was taken in the night but the French and the Saxons got at loggerheads in the dark, and the annihilated Auſtrians, ably profiting by this miſtake, triumphantly repoſſeſſed that village.—The French were met and reſiſted at every point, from daybreak till noon on the ſecond day of the battle, which, at the beginning of July, muſt have been ſeven or eight hours, and at laſt the French only regained their famous old poſition of Eberſdorff. After one battle of ſeventeen hours had been fought, without any material advance on the part of the French, the great Napoleon diſcovered that the Archduke's diſpoſitions were ſo unſkilful that it would be no triumph to defeat him, and actually waited ſome time to ſee if he would not become aſhamed of them himſelf, and run away without fighting a ſecond time. Charles however, concluded to fight ſome eight or ten hours longer, and now Napoleon's movements were rapid beyond the conception of us poor mortals, who can form no adequate idea of the operations of an "Omnipotent Genius." In a moment the centre of the enemy loſt a league of ground. What an awful "moment" was this! Omnipotence alone could remove a hundred thouſand men a league in one moment. Broom Wood did not move ſo rapidly to Dunſinane. But in the mean time "our left wing was ſurrounded at 3000 toiſes."—Yes—Bonaparte tells us that his left wing was not only cut off, but ſurrounded by his "annihilated" and "unskilfull" enemy, and there is every reaſon to believe that this moſt maſterly manoeuvre of the Auſtrian commander failed of compleat ſucceſs only because his whole numbers were greatly inferior to thoſe of the French.——Although the Emperor, at day break, was aſtoniſhed at the unſkilfulneſs of the enemy, and aſhamed to defeat them too ſoon, it was not till ten o'clock (after 24 or 25 hours fighting beſides the midnight conteſt at Wagram) that "intelligent men ſaw that the day was decided and the victory on our ſide," and it was not till a little "before night" that "the enemy was out of ſight," unpurſued, unmoleſted by the triumphant Gauls.

Evidently the truth is, that the Archduke Charles like an able and prudent commander, like Bonaparte himſelf at the battle of Eſslingen, where he found that it was impoſſible to maintain his ground much longer, determined not to throw away the lives of his brave ſoldiers, but retired at his leaſure, and in perfect order from the ſcene of battle. Bonaparte does not hint at a purſuit until his enemy was "out of ſight." But there is one part of the bulletin that places this point beyond the poſſibility of doubt with every perſon who has any pretentions to military knowledge. The Auſtrians are ſaid to have had 800 or 900 pieces of cannon, and the French only claim to have taken 40, of which 12 were taken on the firſt day of the battle, in the fortreſs of Sachsengang. Now every ſoldier knows that heavy cannon cannot be carried off in a confuſed and diſorderly retreat, at leaſt that many muſt be ſacrificed.—It is clear as the beams of day, therefore, that the retreat was an orderly and undisturbed one. A retreating army muſt neceſſarily yield many priſoners to the enemy. But as the French claim only 20,000, it is probable that the number actually taken, did not exceed half that number.——We are ſatisfied that the Auſtrian force in this battle, did not exceed from 140 to 150,000, and the French, including the German contingents, muſt have been at leaſt 170 or 180,000.——The killed and wounded on both ſides, could not be leſs than 70 or 80,000, and were probably equal on each ſide.

From the language of the 25th Bulletin, and the terms of the ſubſequent armiſtice, we are convinced alſo, that Napoleon deſpairs of the conqueſt of the Auſtrian Empire, and will eventually evacuate it with his whole force, either with or without a treaty.

The Battle of Wagram, will not cauſe the laurels of Prince Charles to fade. It is to be conſidered that Bonaparte has forty or fifty generals almoſt equal to himſelf, and that there are very few able commanders in the Auſtrian ſervice, beſides the Generaliſſimo. If the Archduke be not the firſt Captain of the day, he is not far inferior to the firſt. It is difficult to determine, all things conſidered, whether Napoleon, Moreau or Charles, be the firſt General of the age. They are all great, all equal to the Cyruzes and Epaminondaſes, the Hannibals and Caeſars, of antiquity, the Pelagiuses and the Alfreds of the dark ages, and the Fredericks and the Washingtons of more modern times.—Freeman's Journal.

London, Aug. 3.

The following is an extract of a private letter from Conſtantinople, dated, Para, April 27:—"I informed you in my laſt of the firmneſs diſplayed by the Porte in its poſitive refuſal to break with England, at the once highly reſpected Alexander, though now become the ſorry tool of the Corſican Bonaparte. The firſt feat of the Ottoman arms has fortunately correſponded with the appearance of energy in their councils.—Three days had hardly elapſed ſince the return of the Ruſſian meſſenger to Bucharest, when general Miloradowitz, at the head of 14 or 15,000 men, made a ſudden attack upon Guirvia on the Danube; he ſucceeded in occupying no more than the town (which you know is quite open) the ditch of the fort, and a neighboring tchiſlik (village.) The Turkiſh garriſon was not ſtrong enough to withſtand ſo large a force, until being reinforced by freſh troops from Rudschuck, they ſallied forth, and routed the Ruſſians ſo completely as to force them to decamp, with the loſs of 2000 ſoldiers. This happened the 5th of this month, and a few days ſince 200 heads and ſome bags of ears, with 13 priſoners, were brought to Conſtantinople.—The heads being too far gone, were not expoſed as usual, but were thrown away. As to the priſoners, I ſuppoſe they are in the bagnio. The ſpirit of the people has been wonderfully roused by this dawn of ſucceſs, and not a little exaſperated by the inſolence and perfidy of the Ruſſians. The fleet is equipping with the greateſt expedition, and already eight ſail of the line, as fine ſhips as ever ſwam, are ready for ſea in every reſpect but one, and that is ſailors. They are to act in the Black Sea, and I hope in conjunction with ſome of ours. The Ruſſians have 20 ſhips altogether, but let them be only informed that but two Engliſh ſhips are with the Turks, and I'll ſuffer death if they dare move."

SPAIN AND PORTUGAL.

The Arethusa frigate arrived from Corrunna on Saturday, after the ſhort voyage of four days. By this opportunity government received diſpatches, and a Spaniſh officer of the rank of captain of infantry arrived with intelligence for his excellency admiral Apodaca. We are happy to announce that the information through this channel is very ſatisfactory. General Romana has entered the Province of Leon, and had his head quarters at Astorga, at the cloſe of the laſt month.—His force conſiſted of 24,600 men, completely armed and equipped, and he had recruits to augment it to 40,000, if the deficiency of muſkets did not prevent the acceſſion to his army.—He had actively, but ineffectually purſued Marſhal Soult from Crenſe to Montforte, and from the Minho to Ponferrade, from whence the French took the direction to the ſhores of the Duro, and were ſuppoſed to be in the neighborhood of Zamora, with the deſign of proceeding to reinforce the garriſon of Madrid.——It was underſtood that the troops in the capital had been greatly reduced, in order to ſupply the ranks of the armies of Victor and Sebaſtiani. The acquiſition by the arrival of Soult will not be very conſiderable, as the remains of his corps conſiſted only of about 5000 men, of which, however, a large proportion was cavalry.

THE GRAND EXPEDITION.

This morning intelligence was transmitted from lord Caftlereagh in the following Note:

"TO THE LORD MAYOR.

(COPY)

Downing-Street, Aug.

My Lord,

"I have the honor to acquaint your lordfhip, that difpatches have been received from the Earl of Chatham, dated the 2d and 3d inftant, from Middelburgh, by which it appears the Ifland of Walcheren has been occupied by his Majefty's troops, and Flufhing invefted after fome refiftance, in which a confiderable number of prisoners were taken from the enemy.

"The Ifland of South Beverland has alfo been taken poffeffion of by the division under the orders of Sir John Hope.

(Signed) CASTLEREAGH."

"To the Right Hon. the Ld. Mayor."

We fubjoin fome particulars not detailed in the above Bulletin:

The divifions of the Marquis of Huntley, Lord Rosslyn, and general Grosvenor had not landed, the whole of these fine brigades being intended for interior and moft important operations.

Such is the subftance of the dispatches received yefterday by government.

The following letters reached us this morning. Deal, Aug. 7.

Arrived the Idas (1) hired cutter, and a Revenue cutter, from the fleet off the Scheldt, whofe officers landed this morning at Margate with dispatches, the crews of which report that our troops were all fafely landed on Sunday laft, and has got poffeffion of the Ifland of Walcheren, except the Town of Flufhing, which our fhips began to bombard at 12 yefterday noon, & when these veffels left it at leven o'clock in the evening, it had not furrendered, but was thought could not hold out long.—The transports, fhips of war, and small crafts, were left all well. A frigate had got on fhore on the falling of the tide, but got off again on the tide flowing.

Dover, Sunday Auguft, 6.

"Six P. M.—We have juft heard from Deal, that the Idas cutter arrived this afternoon in the Downs from our fleet, and brings an account that Flufhing was taken poffeffion of by our troops laft night."

On the arrival of the armament in the Scheldt, the wind and weather were fuch as to render it neceffary, inftead of fending the troops from the Weft Put, as was originally intended, to proceed to the Veer Gat, on the North Eaft fide of Walcheren.—On Sunday morning the troops were put on board the boats appointed for their conveyance to the fhore, and moved in excellent order to the Sands. Our brave troops fpeedily overcame every obftacle. Campveer, Rammakins, and Middleburgh, the capital of the ifland, fucceffively fell into our hands. They all furrendered by capitulation, after the enemy had made as much refiftance as they could. About 1000 prisoners were taken; and at the date of the dispatches, the whole of the Ifland was in poffeffion of our troops except Flufhing, to which the remainder of the enemy retreated, and which was fo closely inveftedd, that it could not long hold out.

St. Bartholomews, Auguft 29.

The Britifh have declared Guadalupe St. Martins, and St. Euftatia, in a ftate of blockade. We have juft learned that a French fquadron has juft arrived at Guadalupe with troops. The Britifh have enforced the old act, that all neutrals are to carry the productions of their own country to Britifh ports.

From a London Paper.

The following circumftance refpecting the immortal Nelson, which seem not to be generally known, took place during the battle of the Sound; as it proves no fituation, however dangerous, can difconcert the truly brave man, or render him inattentive to those minutiae which being watched by the enemy, betray our weaknefs or proclaim our power. In the midft of the dreadful flaughter of that tremendous engagement, surrounded by the dying and dead, the Britifh admiral ordered an officer, bearing a flag of truce to go on fhore with a note to the Crown Prince. It contained a propofal to his royal highnefs, to acquiesce, without further delay, in the propofition of the Britifh government; not only to put a ftop to the prefent effufion of blood on both fides, but to fave from total deftruction Copenhagen with its arfenals, which he would otherwife level with the water. Whilst his Lordfhip was writing with all the calmnefs of a man in his ftudy, he defired Colonel Stewart to send some one below for a light that he might seal his difpatch. Col. Stewart obeyed: but no one appearing with a candle, when Lord Nelson had nearly completed his letter, he enquired the reafon of fuch neglect, and found that the boy had been killed by a cannon fhot. The order was repeated; upon which Col. Stewart obferved—"Why fhould your lordfhip be so particular in writing, to ufe wax? why not ufe a wafer? The hurry of battle will be a fufficient apology for the violation of etiquette."—It is to prove, my friend replied Lord Nelson, that we are in no hurry, that this requeft is not dictated by fear, or a wifh on our part to drop the carnage, from the leaft apprehenfion of the fate of this day to us, that I am thus particular.—Were I to feal my letter with a wafer, it would ftill be wet when it reached the fhore, it would fpeak of haffe. Wax is not the act of an inftant, and it impreffes the receiver accordingly. The reafoning of the Admiral was duly honored by the refult. The Danes acceded to his propofal, and a ceffation of hoftilities was the confequence.

Bonaparte, on the 13th of July, addreffed a circular mandate to the Bifhops, commanding them to offer up praifes on account of the victories of Enzersdorf & Wagram—In this inftrument he says—"Though our Lord Jefus Chrift fprang from the blood of David, he fought no wordly empire; on the contrary, he required, that in concerns of this life, men fhould obey CÆSAR——His great object was the deliverance of human fouls.—We the inheritor of Caefars power, are firmly refolved to maintain the independence of our throne, and the inviolability of our rights. We fhall perfevere in the great work of the reftoration of the worfhip of God: we fhall communicate to its Minifters that refpectability which we alone can give them; we fhall liften to their voice in all that concerns fpiritual matters and affairs of confcience."——"We fhall not be drawn afide from the great end which we ftrive to attain, and in which we have fucceeded in part—the reftoration of the altars of our divine worfhip; nor fuffer ourfelves to be perfuaded that thefe principles, as Greeks, Englifh, Proteftants, and Calvinifts, affirm, are inconfiftent with the independence of thrones and nations. God has enlightened us enough to remove fuch errors far from us: our fubjects entertain no fuch fear."——

Singular preservation of three perfons previoufly to the explofion of his B. M. fhip the Boyne at Spithead.

When the rapid and dreadful conflagration happened on board the Boyne, a mariner was peaceably fitting in his birth, with his wife & fon, a child of about 20 months old juft beneath the place where the mifchief began; and finding every effort to escape the flames in the ordinary way, ineffectual, the man, with the greateft compofure and prefence of mind, took from the pens a sheep of the captain's live ftock, and tearing the wool from the animal's fleecy back, dipped him into the fea—"There" faid he," unto the land, and God go with you." Encouraged by her husband's refolution, his wife leaped into the fea, and the man followed, fupporting his companion above the water, till the boats arrived to their affiftance, when they were taken up, little the worse for their adventure. The sheep with the greateft fteadinefs, was seen making to the fhore, with the young failor riding upon his back, like an infant river god, to the vaft delight of the fpectators on fhore; who from the tendereft motives, finding themfelves intereffed in the boy's fafety, rufhed into the element to meet the young navigator, whom they prefently unfhipped, and succoured with tenderness, till he again fell into the arms of his adventurous parents.—The fingularity of this event obtained the patronage of a very liberal lady in the Ifle of Wight, who having prevailed on the mother of the child to leave his future fortune to her guidance, declared in the moft friendly manner, that as the boy had began his naval career on a lamb, he would never leave him till [illegible] Admiral.

DIED,

In Stamford, (Eng. June 28th, very suddenly, Mr Daniel Lambert, the Mammoth man of the Age—weighing 769 lbs. = 54 heavier than the famous Knight. His coffin was 6 feet 4 inches long, four feet 4 inches wide, 2 feet 4 inches deep. He measured 3 yards and 4 inches round the belly, and 1 yard and 1 inch round the leg. His cloths coft him about 20l. fterling. Mr. Lambert's corpulency had conftantly increased, until the clogged machinery of life ftood ftill. He was in his 40th year. He had apartments on the ground floor: for he had long been incapable of afcending ftairs. His coffin was placed on two axle trees and four wheels; and the window and a part of the wall of the room was taken down to allow of its paffage. The earth was cut away floping towards his grave, for a confiderable distance; and the coffin was moved on wheels to the very place of final depoit.

CONTINUATION OF LATE FOREIGN NEWS.

LONDON, Aug. 13.

Letters from Holland to the 14th inſt. ſtate that Bonaparte has iſſued a decree, by which all American veſſels permitting themſelves to be ſearched by Britiſh cruizers, ſhall continue to be excluded from the Ports of France, and in the mean time all American property in France has been placed in a ſtate of ſequeſtration. The ſame letters ſtate that Bonaparte has determined to incorporate the whole of Holland with France ; and that his brother Louis, is to be made king of the territory about to be wreſted from Auſtria.

Yeſterday a Gottenberg mail arrived in town. By this arrival we learn, that an armiſtice has been entered into between the Swedes and the Norwegian troops. Great hopes are entertained that this conteſt will terminate in peace between Sweden and Denmark. Among other ſtates it is one that the Iſland of Alſen has been captured by a Britiſh ſquadron :—a ſecond that 7000 Ruſſians had been forced to ſurrender to the Swedes in Bothnia—and a third that the Prince of Auguſtenburg who had been nominated as ſucceſſor to the Crown of Sweden, had refuſed to accept that nomination.

The ſucceſsful attack made by our ſquadron at Archangel, is ſaid to have excited a ſtrong ſenſation in the Baltic.

The Duke of Brunſwick Oels, with 2000 men is ſaid to have fully effected his retreat to the Weſer, and to have been received, with all his troops, on board the Britiſh ſquadron under Lord Stewart.

Cuxhaven has been abandoned by our troops on the advance of a French corps, deſtined to take poſſeſſion of that place.

The diſpatches from Lord Collingwood, in the Mediterranean, furniſh an additional inſtance of the harraſſing effects which, with our numerous and irreſiſtable navy, might be produced upon the enemy's coaſt.

The public accounts mention that Sir James Saumarez with the ſquadron under his orders, had appeared off Reval, and that an embargo was thereupon impoſed on all the Ruſſian ports of the Baltic.

There is a report of a firing having been heard on the oppoſite coaſt : in conſequence of the preliminaries of peace having been ſigned between Auſtria and France, and that by one of the articles, the Emperor Francis conſents that the French ſhall occupy Vienna, and the Archduchy for ſix years !

The Ruſſian priſoners that ſurrendered to Sir Charles Cotton, in the Tagus will ſail in a few days from Portſmouth to St. Peterſburgh. Admiral Siniavan takes his paſſage in the Champion frigate, Capt. Henderſon. The crews of the ſquadron will be put on board a diviſion of tranſports, which are under the orders of Captain Shepherd. The Ruſſian ſhips are to be brought into Portſmouth.

From the Evening Poſt.

Late, intereſting and highly encouraging news comes by the arrival reſpecting the affairs of Spain, and from a gentleman paſſenger we are enabled to give the following particulars.

After the battle of Talavera the Britiſh and Spaniſh armies were only prevented from purſuing their victory and following the French in their retreat by the want of proviſions and forage, the French having burnt and deſtroyed the harveſts. This ſame circumſtance induced the combined armies to fall back, a ſhort diſtance on the Tagus. On their way thither they heard of Marſhal Soult with a detachment of the French army of about 20, 000 men, which had been ſent back upon the rear of the Engliſh for the purpoſe of cutting them to pieces on the retreat to Liſbon which the French had ſo aſſuredly calculated upon.

But the battle of Talavera, turning out rather contrary to their expectations, the Marſhal returned by the road he came; his army being without artillery or even neceſſaries.

During the battle of Talavera, a Spaniſh regiment which was not in the engagement, left the ground in a panic and reported in Talavera that all was loſt, in conſequence of which the Intendant of the army ordered all the proviſions to fall back to the Tagus, by means of which haſty meaſure, the army which had been engaged for nearly two days, found itſelf without proviſions for nearly forty eight hours. For this miſconduct, the brigadier who commanded the regiment, was executed on the ſpot, and orders given to put to death every third officer and every tenth man of the ſoldiers. Part of the execution took place, but a ſtop was put to them by the humane interpoſition of Sir Arthur Wellesley.

In conſequence of the above order to remove all the proviſions, the combined armies found it neceſſary to fall back to the Tagus.

On Sir Arthur Wellesley's retiring, he ſent a flag of truce to the French, informing them that the great heat of the climate prevented his taking his wounded with him, and requeſting that he might have permiſſion to lend his ſurgeons to attend them; which was granted.

After the battle of Talavera, Venegas having advanced within ſight of Madrid, received information from Cueſta, that the French were concentrating toward Toledo, and fell back as far as Aranjuez. In this poſition he was attacked three ſeveral times by the French but he repulſed them every time with great ſlaughter. After this he fell back to Siera Morena, principally for want of proviſions.

Madrid has been abandoned by the French. King Joſeph had retired with 6000 men to Somma Sierra, a ſtrong paſs ſituate on the road from Madrid to France, ſuppoſed to be for the purpoſe of ſecuring a retreat, as Beresford with a combined army of Portugueſe, Spaniſh and Engliſh, Romana with the army of Gallicia and Aſturias, and the Duke of Parque were coming down upon Madrid, with as was ſaid, 80,000 men.

The Duke of Parque had already taken Salamanca from the French, and Romana was in Valladolid by the laſt accounts.

The Marquis of Wellesley, Ambaſſador from England, had been received with the greateſt enthuſiasm. Numbers of the women went out to meet him, though the weather was exceſſively hot, and the people unharneſſed his horſes, and drew his carriage themſelves for near a league, amidſt the acclamations of thouſands; a circumſtance which had never occurred in any part of Spain before, not even upon the entrance of a king. The Marquis has aſſiſted at ſeveral meetings of the Junta, & had inſpired new life into the hearts of the Spaniſh patriots.

The army of reſerve conſiſting of about 23,000 good troops, had marched from Seville, Cuenca, &c. to join the combined armies on the Tagus.

Gerona, a very important fortreſs in Catalonia had ſurpaſſed even Saragoſſa in the brave reſiſtance to the troops of the Uſurper. After being inveſted upwards of three months it hath compelled the French to retire to the heights; even the women had formed themſelves into troops and had received badges of diſtinction for their heroic conduct. Gen. Blake at length appeared before the place with an army of brave volunteers, conſiſting principally of the old garriſon of Saragoſſa, of whom he had left about 3000 men in Gerona, to defend it; being as many as was thought neceſſary by the governor; the ſame intrepid officer who refuſed to give up to the French, Mount Juich (a fort commanding Barcelona) even after an order from the old Spaniſh Court to do ſo. The governor has ſince written that he defied all the force that the French could now ſend againſt it.

Blake was, by the laſt accounts, collecting an army and ſtores in Tortoſa, to march into Arragon to aſſiſt the people who had riſen en maſſe againſt the French, and had confined them to the environs of Saragoſſa which they had fortified.

Marſhal Angereau whom Bonaparte had ſent to command the troops in Catalonia was in Perpignan, ſaid to have feigned ſickneſs, and had iſſued a proclamation to the Catalonians making them fine French promiſes in the name of his Emperor, if they would ſubmit, which had been treated with only ridicule and contempt.

The mountaineers of Navarre, Arragon & Catalonia, had made incurſions into France, levying contributions and deſtroying villages. To check their progreſs and defend their own territory, it had been found neceſſary to detach 15,000 French troops from the army of Navarre, by the road of Irun.

The inhabitants of Rancal, notwithſtanding the threats of the Ex-duke of Mahon, Vice-Roy of Navarre, under Bonaparte, had laid ſiege to Jaca; their commander had ſent back to the Vice-Roy his proclamation accompanied with an excellent anſwer inviting him to meet them in the field.

As to Blake's late defeat which had been attributed to the cowardice of the Spaniſh ſoldiers, it is now aſcertained to have been produced by the intrigue of the Captain General of Valencia, who was jealous of Blake, and cauſed the retreat of the army in hopes it would afterwards be committed to him. The people of Valencia had killed numbers of the runaways who had preſented themſelves at the gates of the city and demanded entrance.

To conclude: It is confidently aſſerted that the affairs of Spain never wore ſo good an aſpect ſince the revolution. More men offer their ſervices to defend their liberties than can be armed. The inhabitants of the country were ſo exaſperated againſt their invaders that they omitted no opportunity to put every Frenchman to death whenever they could do ſo. On the approach of the French armies it was cuſtomary to abandon their villages and flee to the mountains from whence they conſtantly harraſſed them; and more of the French fell by this mode of warfare than in regular battle.

The different French armies in Spain are now ſuppoſed to amount to about 90,000 men, and it has been calculated that nearly 200,000 who entered the country, have periſhed in various ways or are made priſoners of war.

A few days before the Cornelia ſailed, the San Fulgencia, a 74, had arrived at Cadiz, with nearly eight millions of dollars from Lima, and that a friggate in company with further ſupplies, had ſtopped at the River La Plata and was daily expected at Cadiz. Part of the Spaniſh fleet at Cadiz had gone round to Ferrol to bring back the fleet that lay there and had been recovered by the Gallicians from the French to whom it had formerly been treacherouſly delivered.

From Holland.—Captain Balch arrived at Portſmouth on Saturday, from Trinidad, ſpoke on the 26th ult. on George's Bank, a ſhip from Briſtol, bound to Philadelphia, the captain of which informed him, that the Engliſh had taken the Dutch fleet, and had advanced within two miles of Rotterdam.

PRIVATE CORRESPONDENCE.

London, Wednesday evening, half paſt 7.

We have not heard that Miniſters have received any further advices from the Iſland of Walcheren. A veſſel has arrived in the river from the coaſt of Holland, by which letters till the 15th have been received. These letters confirm the report of the arrival of General Armſtrong at Amſterdam, from Paris. They alſo inform us, that the American armed ſhip which ſome time ſince went into the Texel, for the avowed purpoſe of imparting to the maſters of American veſſels, the ſtate of the relations between the Government of the United States and thoſe of the Belligerent Powers, had, ſince General Armſtrong reached Holland, been directed to quit her anchorage and proceed on a cruiſe in the North Seas; with a view, no doubt of warning American veſſels in thoſe Seas not to enter the ports of Holland or France. In theſe letters it is ſaid, deciſively, that the Armiſtice between France and Auſtria had been broken; as a proof of which, are mentioned, the various riſes and falls of colonial produce in the courſe of a few days.

It is believed that Bonaparte had ſignified a determination to call out the conſcripts for 1811—12. This was merely a ſpeculative rumour of Yeſterday; to which it is added, that a great coldneſs had taken place between Napoleon and the Emperor of Ruſſia—the latter having ſeriouſly remonſtrated againſt the French proceedings in Gallacia. Theſe are reports which emanated from the ſtock exchange.

Auguſt 29.—It is ſaid now that the Auſtrian Government poſitively gave, on the 3d inſtant, the ſtipulated notice of the ceſſation of the armiſtice in fifteen days from that date, conſequently hoſtilities might have recommenced yeſterday. It is added that the Archduke Charles publiſhed an addreſs to the Auſtrian army, on reſigning the command, ſpeaking in the higheſt terms of Prince John of Lichtenſtein, his ſucceſſor. Some of the papers have already raiſed the moſt unbecoming cry againſt the Archduke Charles—the Hero Charles, whom they recently almoſt deified. We cannot follow them in theſe tranſitions. The Archduke Charles may have been weak; but we know nothing of the matter.—The Generals whoſe advice he followed, may have been a cabal; but we know nothing of that. The Prince of Lichtenſtein may be a much abler man; but we know nothing of that. If the war be renewed, we hope Auſtria will be ſucceſsful under whoever may be entruſted with the command of her armies. But it is direct as unjuſt as ungracious to arraign a Prince whoſe character has been hitherto unimpeachable, merely becauſe he diſcontinued the war before we wiſhed him; and to extol, at the expence of his character, a ſucceſſor of whom we know nothing, except that he is in power, and is about to renew the war; and even that we know on doubtful authority.

The myſterious veil which has covered the negociations between Auſtria and France is at length drawn aſide, and an appeal to arms has been once more reſolved upon by the Emperor Francis. This important intelligence has certainly reached his majeſty's Miniſters. The Archduke Charles no longer commands the Auſtrian armies, and Prince John of Lichtenſtein has been declared Generaliſſimo, with full powers. An official communication declaring this change, and at the ſame time announcing the determination of the Auſtrian Government to perſevere in the conteſt at all riſks rather than yield to the Arrogant demands of Napoleon, was on Sunday evening received by Mr. Canning. This we ſtate as a fact which cannot be contradicted.

Two letters from the Earl of Chatham, dated Middleburgh, Auguſt, 14th and 18th, will be found under the London Gazette department. The one notices as formerly mentioned, the opening of the ſluices at Fluſhing by the French, and letting in ſalt water, which ſays his lordſhip, has been attended as yet with little inconvenience—the other the ſurrender of the towns of Zeirikee and Bowershaven, and the iſlands of Showen and Duiveland, from which his lordſhip believes, he will be enabled to draw very ample ſupplies of battle ſpirits and biſcuits, His lordſhip encloſes General Monnet's return of the late garriſon at Fluſhing, at the time of its ſurrender—he makes the amount in all, 5893. His lordſhip farther ſays, from the information which had fallen into his hands, that the enemy's whole force oppoſed to him in iſland of Walcheren, may very fairly be taken at 9,000 men.

It has for ſome days been rumoured, that the Auſtrian government gave notice, on the 3d inſt. of the termination of the armiſtice in fifteen days. This rumour is now confidently repeated in letters from Holland, received in London on Wednesday.

Extract of a letter dated Rio de Janiro, Aug. 3.

"A Spaniſh veſſel has juſt arrived here in 14 days from Buenos Ayres, with information that the new Spaniſh Vice Roy had arrived there from Spain, and a Governor at Monte Video ; that on the 13th ult. Liniers gave up the Government quietly ; and had retired with an annuity, and the rank of Field Marſhal, in conſideration of paſt ſervices. Senior Elio, late governor of Monte Video, gave up at the ſame time No Engliſh or neutral veſſels will be allowed to enter the river without ; ſpecial licence from the Spaniſh Junta or the government of Buenos Ayres ; which may generally be obtained here."

New York, October 7.

By the arrival yeſterday of the Britiſh brig Tom Batry, Captain M'Dougall, in the ſhort paſſage of 36 days from Scotland, the Editors of the New York Gazette have received London and Glaſgow papers to the 27th of Auguſt.

Theſe papers contain the important information, that Fluſhing, after being nearly deſtroyed by a bombardment, had ſurrendered to the Britiſh forces under Lord Chatham. The garriſon conſiſting of 4379 officers and men, were to be ſent to England. The Engliſh Expedition afterwards went up to attack Antwerp, and to deſtroy the French fleet at that place.—Accounts had been received in England, through a variety of channels, that the armiſtice was at an end, and that hoſtilities had commenced between France and Auſtria—though in article from Paris of the date of the 19th Auguſt, ſtates that peace between Auſtria and France was ſigned on the 10th.

Hamburgh. Aug. 10.

We have juſt received advices of the Archduke Charles having been removed from the command of the army, and that notice had been given to the French of the termination of the armiſtice. It is ſaid that Prince John of Lichtenſtein is to ſucceed the Archduke Charles in the command of the Auſtrian army.

Gottenburgh, Aug. 18.

A merchant veſſel called the Providence, came in this morning, and brings accounts of having ſeen his Majeſty's ſhip Alert taken near the Scaw in a calm by ſix gun boats, after a deſperate act on.

"A letter from Carlscrona this morning, ſtates that they had juſt learned of the Iſland of Ertholm having been taken poſſeſſion of by his Majeſty's ſhip Dictator ; ſhould this account be correct, it will prove of great importance to the Britiſh navy, the port and harbour will fully protect the Baltic trade, and ſhould occaſion require it 20 ſail of the line may conveniently lay and winter there, as there is above 40 feet water and a good anchorage.

"Letters from Genoa and Marſeilles ſtate that the French Conſul at Algiers, has been arreſted by order of the Dey, & that war has been declared againſt France.

New York, October 14.

The brig Rebecca from Cadiz, altho' ſhe left that Port on the 24th Auguſt, four days later than the Spaniſh frigate, brings nothing new, printed or verbal. The Captain had not heard of the battle which was ſaid in the Salem papers to have been fought about the 19th of Auguſt, near Madrid, between the Anglo-Spaniſh army and the French, in which the former were ſaid to be defeated with great ſlaughter. Letters of the 24th of Auguſt repreſent the affairs of the Patriots as in a favorable ſtate, and that the preſent form of government was about to be changed to a Regency.

London, Auguſt 28

Letters have been received from Bordeaux to the 18th inſt. which ſtate that Bonaparte was expected at Paris on the 15th, the anniverſary of his birth day, but that his Rop in that capital would be very ſhort, as it was underſtood that he would proceed immediately to aſſume the command of the French army in Spain. —The prefect of Bordeaux had in conſequence iſſued orders to prepare for his reception. It is obvious however, that this was a ſpeculation formed upon the preſumed certainty of a ſpeedy peace with Auſtria.

The King of Pruſſia has lately paid ſix millions of franks more of the arrears of contribution claimed by France.

The contributions levied on the Auſtrian provinces by Bonaparte, amount to the enormous ſum of 196,240,000 franks.

YORK, OCTOBER 28. 1809.

The Grand Jury requeſt Mr. Cameron will give the following Addreſs with His Excellency's Answer thereto, to the Public, through the medium of the York Gazette.

York, 27th October, 1809.

This day the Grand Jury of the Home Diſtrict waited upon His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, and preſented the following Addreſs.

WE His Majeſty's dutiful and loyal Subjects the Grand Jurors of the Home Diſtrict of this Province, beg leave to appear before your Excellency to acknowledge our hearty approbation of your Excellency's mild, firm, and prudent adminiſtration of the Government of this Province.

We ſhould not have thus intruded upon your Excellency, did we not feel ourſelves moſt imperiouſly called upon by the duty we owe our Sovereign, his Repreſentative, the public for whom we act and our own feelings ; did we not expreſs our abhorrence and deteſtation of a publication laid before us, called the "Upper Canada Guardian" of the 7th of October, 1809 which we have thought not only from our unanimous opinion, but from the beſt of legal concurrence to be incumbent on us to preſent, as a falſe, malicious, wicked and ſeditious Libel upon your Excellency and his Majeſty's Government in this Country ; that the ſame may come before the Tribunal of that Country.

Your Excellency will be pleaſed to permit us to aſſure you, of our admiration and veneration of that glorious, enviable, and unparalleled Conſtitution, under which we have the happineſs to live ; the full participation of every part thereof, this Colony moſt amply enjoys, but like an Infant during his minority, is fed and ſupported by his parent.

That your Excellency may be long continued in the Government of this Province, for the proſperity thereof, from our conviction of your wiſhes and exertions to promote the general good and intereſt of the Province, is the fervent prayer of Your Excellency's moſt obedient and moſt humble Servants.

Grand Jury Room, York, 27th Octr. 1809.

To which his Excellency was pleaſed to make the following answer.

GENTLEMEN OF THE GRAND JURY.

TO receive the commendation of ſo reſpectable a body, as that of the Grand Jurors of the Home Diſtrict, in my adminiſtration of the Government of this Province, cannot but be grateful to my feelings.

I know that I have had no other end in view but the public good, in the diſcharge of the various duties of the arduous ſituation His Majeſty has been pleaſed to call me to.

Perſonally ſpeaking therefore, I feel totally regardleſs of any other ſort of calumny than that which is levelled againſt his Majeſty's Government, being well perſuaded, that ſuch will never paſs unnoticed, by ſo true and faithful an Inqueſt, to their Country, and their King.

GENTLEMEN,

I thank you for your very Loyal addreſs to me, and I ſhall ever feel gratified by the flattering teſtimony you have given me of your approbation.

London Gazette Extraordinary.

SUNDAY, August 20.

Downing-street, August 19.

A dispatch, of which the following is a Copy, was this day received at the office of Viscount Castlereagh, one of his Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, from Lt. General the Earl of Chatham, K. G. dated Head Quarters, Middleburgh, Aug. 16.

My Lord—I have the honor of acquainting your Lordship, that, on the 13th inst. the batteries before Flushing being completed, (& the frigates, bombs, and gun vessels, having at the same time taken their stations,) a fire was opened at about half past one P. M. from fifty-two pieces of heavy ordnance, which was rigorously returned by the enemy.—An additional battery of 6 24 pounders was completed the same night and the whole continued to play upon the town, with little or no intermission, till late on the following day.

On the morning of the 14th inst. about 10 o'clock, the line of battle ships at anchor in the Durlo passage, led by Rear-Admiral Sir Richard Strachan, got under weigh, and ranging up along the sea line of defence, kept up as they passed a most tremendous cannonade upon the town for several hours, with the greatest gallantry and effect. About 4 in the afternoon, perceiving that the fire of the enemy had entirely ceased, and the town presenting a most awful scene of destruction, being on fire in almost every quarter, I directed Lt. Gen. Sir Eyre Coote to send in to summon the place: general Monnet returned for answer, that he would reply to the summons as he had consulted a Council of War; an hour had been allowed him for the purpose, but a considerable time beyond it having elapsed without any answer being received, hostilities were ordered to re-commence with the utmost vigour, and about eleven o'clock at night, one of the enemy's batteries advanced upon the Sea Dyke, in front of lieut. gen. Fraser's position, was most gallantly carried at the point of the bayonet, by detachments from the 36th, 71st and light battalion of the King's German Legion, under lieutenant colonel Pack, opposed to great superiority of numbers: they took 40 prisoners, and killed and wounded a great many of the enemy.

I must not omit to mention, that on the preceding evening, an entrenchment, in front of Major General Graham's position was also forced, in a manner equally undaunted, by the 14th regiment and detachments of the King's German Legion, under Lieutenant Colonel Nichols, who drove the enemy from it, and made a lodgement within musket shot of the walls of the town, taking one gun and 30 prisoners.

About two in the morning, the enemy demanded a suspension of arms for 48 hours which was refused, and only two hours granted, when he agreed to surrender according to the summons sent in, on the basis of the garrison becoming prisoners of War.

I have now the satisfaction of acquainting your Lordship, that these preliminaries being acceded to, as soon as the Admiral landed in the morniug, Col. Long, Adjutant General and Captain Cockburn of the Royal Navy, were appointed to negociate the further Articles of Capitulation, which I have now the honor to enclose. They were ratified about three this morning, when a detachment of the Royals on the right, and of his Majesty's 71st regiment on the left, took possession of the gates of the town.—The garrison will march out to-morrow, and will be embarked as speedily as possible.

I may now congratulate your lordship on the fall of a place so indispensibly necessary to our future operations, as so large a proportion of our force being required to carry on the siege with that degree of defence the enemy possessed, and particularly his powers of inundation (which was rapidly spreading to an alarming extent) rendered absolutely necessary.

Having hoped, had circumstances permitted, to have proceeded up the river at an earlier period, I committed to Lieut. General Sir Eyre Coote the direction of the details of the siege, and of the operations before Flushing, and cannot sufficiently express my sense of the unremitting zeal and exertion with which he has conducted the arduous service entrusted to him, in which he was ably assisted by lieutenant Colonels Walsh and Offery, attached to him as assistants in the adjutant and quarter master general department.

I have every reason to be satisfied with the judicious manner in which the general officers have directed the several operations, as well as with the spirit and intelligence manifested by the commanding officers of corps, and the zeal and order of all ranks of officers.

It is with great pleasure I can report the uniform good conduct of the troops, who have not only on all occasions shown the greatest intrepidity in presence of the enemy, but have sustained, with great pleasure and cheerfulness, the laborious duties they have had to perform.

The active and persevering exertions of the corps of Royal Engineers have been conducted with much skill and judgement by Col. Fyers, aided by Lieutenant Col. D'Arcey, and it is impossible for me to do sufficient justice to the distinguished conduct of the officers and men of the Royal Artillery, under the able direction and animating example of Brigadier General M'Leod.

The seamen, whose labors had already been so useful to the army, sought their reward in a further opportunity of distinguishing themselves, and one of the batteries was accordingly entrusted to them, and which they served with admirable valour and effect.

I must beg leave to express my strong sense of the constant and cordial co-operation of the navy on all occasions, and my warmest acknowledgements are most particularly due to Captain Cockburn, of the Belleisle, commanding the flotilla, and to Captain Richardson, of the Cæsar, commanding the brigade of seamen landed with the army.

I have the honor to enclose a return of the garrison of Flushing, in addition to which, I have learned, that besides the number killed, which was considerable, upwards of one thousand men were transported to Cadsand previous to the complete investment of the town.

I also subjoin a statement of deserters and prisoners, exclusive of the garrison of Flushing.

This dispatch will be delivered to your lordship by my first aid-de-camp, Major Bradford, who is fully qualified to give your lordship every further information, and whom I beg leave earnestly to recommend to his Majesty's protection.

I have the honor to be, &c.

(Signed) CHATHAM.

Moravia, August 1.

We learn that the Archduke Charles, owing to bad health, has resigned the command of the army, and that Prince John of Lichtenstein has taken it, ad interim.

August 6.

The Austrian army is again represented as very formidable in numerical strength, not less than 360,000 men, independent of the Landwher. This army is posted along the eastern banks of the river Maich, the centre is stated to be at Cremzie; the right at Olmutz; the left at Holitach.

The report of the renewal of hostilities between France and Austria was repeated yesterday with increased confidence. It was farther stated in the ministerial circles last night that Prince Stakremberg had acknowledged the receipt of private letters announcing an actual engagement in which the French were defeated.

Letters from Paris, of so late a date as the 17th, have been received. They state that Peace between Austria and France was signed on the 10th; but accounts from Vienna of the 14th (two days later) positively assert that no such event had then taken place.

PARIS, Aug. 8.

Letters from Munich of the 31st July, state that an entrenched camp has been formed on the Wittenberg, (Wh. Mount) near Prague in Bohemia, to which the Austrian army is to retreat in the unexpected case that peace should not be concluded. The works of Prague have been considerably re-inforced, and the place has been victualled for a 6 months siege. Much heavy ordnance has been also conveyed thither from Theresienstadt.

Letters received in London from Gottenburg, mention the probability of the annexation of Norway to the Swedish territory.——Prince Augustenberg, of the House of Holstein, who is declared successor to the new Swedish monarch, is understood to have accepted the nomination on the express condition that that country, of which he has been governor, shall form a part of the dominions to which he is destined to succeed. This arrangement has diffused as much joy amongst the Swedes as it has excited dissatisfaction to the Danish government.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 4.

In all the Synagogues, the Rabbis have exhorted the Jews to arm in defence of their country. In the present circumstances, an extraordinary levy of seamen is to take place.——Able seamen are to have 50 florins bounty, and ordinary seamen to have half that sum.

LEYDEN, Aug. 5.

The French fleet lies at the distance of half a mile from Antwerp. Within these few days a great number of troops have passed through Gorcum, Harlem and Dordrecht, and are destined to Bergen-op-Z. where it is supposed the principal Dutch force will be collected. ——

A proposal has been made to celebrate the 26th of October next, by a national jubilee, as His Majesty will on that day enter the 50th year of His reign; an event that has not occurred since the reign of Edward III. and only twice in twelve hundred years. Lon. Pap.

Renewal of Hostilities.—On this subject the London Globe of the 26th of August, gives the following remarks:—

It is in vain for the most enthusiastic admirers of Bonapartes to deny that in spite of his talents and victories, his own elevation and the fortunes of his family, are involved in some degree of embarrassment. Even in the silence of his Bulletins, which were almost considered as the oracles of fate; and, in the pause which has succeeded to the armistice of the 12th of July, we perceive that this conqueror is not able to impose peace on his vanquished enemy. He may, indeed, by renewing the war, eventually crush and annihilate the house of Austria. Such an event is even, we are aware, by no means removed beyond the limits of probability. But he is, evidently, incapable of terrifying the Emperor Francis into any such acts of submission as followed the victory of Austerlitz; and though, before the lapse of many weeks, he may possibly dictate conditions, under the walls of Prague or of Olmutz, yet, it amounts to demonstration, that he has not succeeded in terminating the contest, before the concluding of the period fixed for the suspension of hostilities.—This is, in itself, however, a prodigious point gained; since we have a moral assurance and conviction, arising from the actual state of things at the present moment, in Holland, Spain and Naples, that Napoleon must ardently desire, and would probably make some sacrifices to obtain, the means of transferring his energies, and his forces, from Vienna, to Antwerp, or to Castile.—The surrender of Flushing; the defeat of Joseph Bonaparte, at Talavera, in whatever colours the Madrid Gazette, or the French Moniteurs, may attempt to conceal the real fact; the invasion of Naples by Stuart; and more than all these, the meditated attack on his ulterior operations as may follow in a quarter so contiguous to France; all these considerations must necessarily render the presumption of war with Austria most painful to him. To the firmness, or to the delays of that Cabinet, we may, indeed, attribute, in an eminent degree, the success which has hitherto attended our arms in Zealand. For if peace had followed the battle of Wagram, as quickly as Bonaparte unquestionably meant that it should, the armies of France would have been, before this time, on their way to the Netherlands, and Bonaparte, in person, would have appeared on the Scheldt. It is difficult for us to calculate, or to over-rate, the effects of such an event.—At Presburgh, in 1805, and at Tilsit, in 1807, he allowed, indeed, the negociations to proceed slowly, and to be protracted to some degree of length; because in both these cases, he had an enemy to fear elsewhere. The victories of Austerlitz and Friedland, had laid the Monarchies of Austria, Russia, and Prussia, at his feet. Germany and Italy were tranquil.—Spain was his ally; of them still holds an office, must be matter of regret to every good subject, if the particular instance did not afford evidence that under a happy constitution, the equal march of the laws was not to be biassed in favor of the most justifiable policy, acting upon concomitant legal advice, which, notwithstanding the highest authority, leaves the question of right still doubtful, until the tenure of the County Register shall be established on appeal to the last resort.

Entrusted with the conduct of a Press purposely established for the publication of matters of Provincial application, yet a literal transcript of interesting news, and a faithful Record of the great Political Events and occurrences of the present Century, the Editor forbears to subjoin one solitary comment on the foregoing subject, leaving his Readers, from its prominent facts, to draw conclusive inference.

A Gentleman who was a Candidate to represent a large and populous County, had during his infancy or youth, suffered so much from the influence of a paralytic shock, that he was disabled from applying rigidly to his Classical Studies. On the Hustings, an interested friend reminded him of the disqualification, stating his apprehension that it might interfere with his Legislative duties; but on being informed by the Candidate that he was to take his Clerk with him to Parliament, his fears were instantly overcome, and the Gentleman was duly elected.—*Lon. FROM THE MEDITERRANEAN.

"Baltimore Sept. 24.

Arrived last night schr. Hawk White, 43 days from Messina—Captain W. reports, that about 12th July, at Messina, the Admiral of the Sicilian gun boats undertook to dislodge the French from the Castle of Scaletta, which commanded the Straits of Messina, and annoyed the passage. He requested the English commander to lay by as a reserve. He attacked the French gun-boats and took 32 of them, which he brought in, and carried the Castle. The conduct of the Sicilians exceeded the expectation of the English and every body on shore; the whole of the engagement being distinctly seen from the town. 2000 British troops had taken the possession of the islands of Ischia and Capri, at the entrance of the harbour of Naples. They and the French were some time in view of each other, when an order came from Admiral Collingwood for the English to evacuate and retire to Sicily, which was executed without a gun having been fired. Information having been received that the French had 200 transports and 30,000 men at Toulon ready for sea, an attack was expected on some quarter, which caused the recall. The latest accounts they had from Vienna of Austrian affairs, was of the 13th July. They were confident. The Hawk was bound to Trieste; when well up the Adriatic, was spoke by an Austrian Imperial brig, informed that the French had possession of Trieste; and of its blockade by the British and Austrians. He put back and arrived at Sicily. Cap. W. says that the Mediterranean is full of Pirates, who acknowledge no government, and plunder every vessel they fall in with, and often massacree the whole of their crews.

New York.

It was reported in Spanish papers of the 31st July, that Vanegas had captured Madrid.

Sir James Saumarez's Squadron had made a successful attack on Archangel, and took 100 ships in the harbour, laden with tallow and other valuable commodities.

The Emperor of Austria had repaired to Campsin, to accelerate the conclusion of the Negociations for Peace. It was reported that a Congress would be held at Presburg, to settle the terms of peace.

Joseph Bonaparte has issued a Proclamation at Madrid, stating, that in consequence of the non arrival of remittances from South America, and the difficulty of collecting taxes, he was obliged to economize in his establishment.

Among the various marks of honour paid to His Excellency Marquis Wellesley, on his arrival in Cadiz, the people brought out a French flag, and spread it upon the steps of the landing place, in such a situation, that the foot which first His Excellency set upon Spanish ground, must trample upon the colours of the most perfidious and cruel foe of the Spanish nation.

The fine town of Schwartz, in the valley of the Inn, and in the neighborhood of which is the celebrated silver mine, which was burnt down on the 18th of May, during a conflict between the Tyrolese and Bavarians, consisted of 630 houses and comprised a population of about 5000 souls, 1200 of whom, including 800 women and children, perished in the flames.

"The Connecticut Bible Society," have republished an interesting Sermon, preached in England, by the Rev. Claudius Buchanan, entitled——"The STAR in the EAST." The friends of this pious and benevolent association, will be pleased to find from the perusal of this pamphlet, what wonderful progress has been made in spreading the Gospel in various parts of the heathen world, particularly in the East Indies. The exertions made for this purpose, by the inhabitants of Great Britain, are truly astonishing. It is probable, that there is a greater sum of money given by the people of that little island for pious and charitable objects, than by those of all the world besides. How infinitely more gratifying, and consoling to the mind, how much more beneficial to human nature, is the successful ambition of piety and charity, than of bloodshed and conquest? What good man would not rather be William Wilberforce, than Napoleon Bonaparte! Who would not rather, here and hereafter, meet the prayers and the blessings of millions once ready to perish who have been rescued from bondage, or taught the sublime, and heavenly truths of Christianity, than to meet the dying groans of thousands and millions, butchered at the shrine of ambition, pride, and power, or to writhe under the scorpion stings of conscience, and the fearful forebodings of final retribution?

Translation of the Scriptures.

FEW persons are acquainted with the manner in which the translation of the Bible, now in use, was performed. This translation was made at the command of James I. The translators were fifty-four of the most learned men of that time, whose names are mentioned by Selden. They were divided into six bodies, of which each was to labour on particular parts. The Pentateuch and books of Joshua, Judges, Ruth, Samuel & Kings were assigned to one division; from the Chronicles to the Ecclesiastes to a second: all the Prophets and Lamentations to a third; the Epistles to a fourth; the Gospels and Acts to a fifth; and the Apocrypha to a sixth. They met at Westminster, Oxford and Cambridge, as it proved convenient to each body. The method in which they proceeded was this: Several translations of each part were drawn up by the members of that body to which it was allotted, who then, in a joint consultation, selected three of the best, or compiled them out of the whole number. Thus, in three years, three translations of the whole were sent to London; then six deputies, two from each place, were appointed to extract one translation out of the three, which was finished and printed in the year 1611.

FROM A LONDON PAPER.

THE FINE ARTS,

Yesterday the scaffolding and awnings were removed from the statue erected in Russell square, in honor of the late Duke of Bedford. Many friends of the Duke, and lovers of sculpture attended; the effect produced on the spectators was a lively admiration of the performance, mingled with emotions of regret for the loss of a nobleman who delighted in promoting the good of his country. The statue is colossal; the attitude well chosen, graceful and manly; the folds of drapery are ample, yet sufficiently detailed.—His Grace reposes one arm on a plough, the left hand holds the gift of Ceres, conforming with the general plan of a monument intended to mark the Duke's patriotic fondness for agricultural pursuits. Spring, Summer, Autumn and Winter, personified the endearing semblance of children, play round the feet of the statue, whose apparent magnitude seems augmented by the contrast. —The pedestal, in embellishments and size, is well adapted to the purposes of illustration and strength; to the four corners are attached bulls heads in a very high relief, the cavity immediately beneath, the upper moulding is adorned with herds of cattle in recumbent postures; on the curved sides are rural subjects in basso-relievo, the first represents the preparation for the ploughman's dinner; the husbandman's wife on her knees, attends the culinary department; a youth founding a horn, two rustics and a team of oxen at rest, finish the groupe. The second composition is made up of reapers and gleaners variously employed, the young woman in the center is delineated with the comeliness of a village favourite.—These enrichments, the four seasons, and the statue of the Duke, are all cast in bronze, and so very successfully, that, with the polish of high finishing, they preserve the spirit of an original model.

The massy material of the pedestal is Scotch granite, and together with the superstructure, measures from the level ground to the summit of the monument, twenty seven feet.—The principal figure is nine feet high.

Extract from the Messina Gazette of July 31, 1809.

A vessel under a neutral flag from Cevata Vecchia, has furnished us with a copy of the declaration issued by his holiness Pius VII. at the time of the sacrilegious invasion of all his dominions, and of the patrimony of the church; and likewise of the sentence of excommunication issued against Bonaparte and his accomplices, on the 10th June, which acts of the Pope are herewith published, to render them more generally known throughout the Catholic world.

PIUS POPE VII.

The disastrous designs of the foes of the apostolical see are at length completed. After suffering the violent and iniquitous spoliation of the fairest and most considerable portion of our dominions, we now behold ourselves deprived entirely, under unworthy pretexts and with the most grievous injustice, of all our temporal sovereignty, with which our spiritual independence is closely connected. This consolation accompanies us, under the pressure of this severe persecution, that it has not been incurred for any wrong done to the Emperor, or to France, which has been always the object of our tender fatherly solicitude; nor on account of any worldly political artifice; but because we would not betray our duties or our conscience.——No one, who professes the Catholic religion, and much less he, who presides over, and is principally bound to announce it, can displease God for the sake of pleasing men.—Bound moreover to God, and to the church to transmit our rights whole and entire, we protest against this new spoliation, and declare it null and void.—We reject, with the most determined resolution, the assignment of any allowance intended for us, the members of our colledge (of Cardinals,) by the Emperor of the French. —We should be overwhelmed with disgrace in the sight of the church if we submitted to receive our subsistence from the hands of the usurper of her patrimony. —We resign ourselves entirely to divine providence, and to the devotion of the faithful servants of God, and shall be satisfied piously to conclude the bitter career of our painful life.—We adore with profound humiliation the inscrutable designs of God. We invoke his mercy over all our good subjects, who will be always our joy and crown; and after having discharged, in these most distressing circumstances, our duty, we exhort them to preserve, in all integrity, their religion and faith, and with signs and tears between the porch and the altar, to unite themselves with us in supplication to the Supreme Father of lights, that he would graciously be pleased to work a change in the wicked designs of our persecutors. —Given at our Quirinal Apostolical Palace, this 10th June, 1809.

Concluſion of the Sentence of Excommunication.

PIUS POPE VII.

By authority of the Almighty God, and of the Saints Peter and Paul, we declare you Napoleon Bonaparte and all your accomplices (co-operators) in the act, which you are now executing, to have incurred the cenſure of excommunication; under which, by our apoſtolic letters contemporaneouſly publiſhed and affixed at the uſual places in this city, we declare all thoſe to have fallen, who, ſince the forcible invaſion of this city, on the ſecond of February, 1808, have committed the violences, againſt which not only our ſucceſſive ſecretaries of State by our orders; but we ourſelves have proteſted in two conſiſtorical allocutions (diſcourſes) of the 16th March and 11th of July, 1808; and the ſame penalty attaches to all mandataries, ſupporters, adviſers and all others who have executed themſelves, or procured the execution of the abovementioned usurpations and violences.—Given at Rome, at the church of St Maria Major, June 10, 1809,

PIUS POPE VII.

FRENCH GENERALS.—Moſt of the generals of diviſions, marſhals of the empire and others who hold the principal commands, ſufficiently prove that war is an experimental ſcience, and that military renown is not the prerogative of birth, but the harveſt of toil, or the bounty of fortune.

Beſſieres, originally a common ſoldier, became in 1796, a captain of infantry in the army of Italy. Brune, a printer at the commencement of the revolution, a member of the Club of Cordiliers, commenced his military career in 1793. Angereau, a private in the Neapolitan ſervice in 1787, became ſoon after fencing maſter at Naples, in 1792 entered as a volunteer in the army of Italy and in 1784 was a general of brigade in the army of Pyrennees. Bernadotte, at the commencement of the revolution a ſerjeant in the regiment of royal marines; in 1794 a general of diviſion. Jourdon enliſted in 1778, but left the ſervice in 1784; was a ſhop keeper at the commencement of the revolution. Kellerman began his career as a ſimple muſketier in the regiment of Conflans. Lannes, originally a common ſoldier, became 1794 adjutant of diviſion in the national guards of Paris. Maſſena, a ſubaltern in the Sardinian ſervice at the beginning of the revolution, in 1793, became a general of brigade. Mortier, a captain of a volunteer company in his native province at the ſame period. Ney a huſſar, an adjutant general in 1795 after paſſing through all the inferior grades. Lefebvre, a ſon of a miller of Alſace, became a ſerjeant in the regiment of French guards before the revolution. Perignon, after acting as a juſtice of peace of Monteach, engaged in the army and paſſed rapidly through all the ſubordinate grades and in 1794, commanded the army of the Eaſtern Pyrennees. Soult was a ſubaltern before the revolution, in a regiment of infantry, and an adjutant general in 1795. Murat, ſerved originally in the conſtitutional guard of Louis XVI; became afterwards an officer in the 12th regiment of chaſſeurs, &c. Junot began his career in 1792 as a grenadier in one of the volunteer battalions commanded by general Pille; and in 1796, was one of the aide-de camps of Bonaparte.

FROM LONDON PAPERS.

Lord Mansfield has, with a view to the future ſupply of timber for the Britiſh navy, very patriotically raiſed, ſince 1808, at Scone, near Perth, 96,000 oaks part of them from acorns in his Lordſhips nurſery, and part from other young plants. The Society of Arts, in conſequence, awarded his Lordſhip the gold medal.

Longevity in Lincolnſhire.—When the famous Turketul, who had been Chancellor of England, and one of the greateſt warriors and ſtatesmen of his time, retired from the world, and became abbot of Croyland, he found five very aged Monks in a monaſtery, to whom he paid particular attention. Father Clarenbold, the oldeſt of theſe Monks, died after he had completed the 168th year of his age. The ſecond who was named Swarling, died the ſame year, at the age of 142. The third, who was called Father Turgar, died the year after in the 115th year of his age. The two other Monks, Brune and Ajo, died about the ſame time, whoſe ages are not exactly known though they muſt have been very old, as they both remembered the old abby of Croyland, which had been deſtroyed by the Danes in the year 879. Theſe facts are related with much confidence by Ingulphus, who was Abbot of Croyland, and wrote from the hiſtorical regiſter of that Abbey. When we recollect alſo the very recent inſtance of longevity in Eliz. Shaw's caſe, who died at Kealby-Cotes, aged 107, we think Lincolnſhire not ſo unhealthy as generally reported.

Inſtance of Frugality.—Mr. Mattinſon was formerly curate of the pariſh church of Petersdale, in Weſtmoreland, for the period of 50 years, the annual ſtipend of which, many years, did not yield more than 12l. and never exceeded 18l. upon this ſlender pittance he contrived to maintain a wife comfortably, and bring up and educate a family of four children. While curate of this pariſh he buried his mother, and afterward officiated as miniſter at the ſecond marriage of his father; he chriſtened his wife, and publiſhed his own banns of marriage: he chriſtened and married all his children and gave his only ſon a good claſſical education, ſo as to qualify him for the Univerſity. This venerable man lived to the age of 90, and died in 1766, univerſally reſpected by his pariſhioners, after having accumulated a fortune of one thouſand pounds. His ſon is at preſent maſter of the grammar ſchool at Lowther.

Lord Evelyn Stuart, ſon of the Earl of Bute, and an officer of the guards, wore long muſtachios, and appeared thus in the houſe of Commons, of which he was a member. One day Mr. C——y thus addreſſed him "My Lord, now the war is over won't you put your muſtachios on the peace eſtabliſhment?"—"I do not exactly know whether I ſhall do that," replied his Lordſhip; "but I adviſe you, to put your tongue on the civil liſt."

Two men happening to joſtle each other in the ſtreet, ſays one: "I never allow a backguard to take the wall."—"I do," ſaid the other, and inſtantly made way.

"THINGS TO BE LAUGHED AT."

"At a meeting on the 4th July at Paris, to celebrate the Independence of the United States, among the ornamental emblems prepared for the occaſion, France and America were repreſented as repoſing together in the Temple of Peace, with poor Old England at their feet."

Mont. Gaz.

The laſt Weeks papers from the U. States up to the 19th ult. being ſo particularly ſterile, that not a ſingle article of news was contained in them.——The Editor has now inſerted a Gazeteer deſcription of ſome of the places againſt which the Expedition under the Earl of Chatham was deſtined to act. A veſſel was ſpoke lately, on Georges Banks, from Briſtol, bound to Philadelphia; the capt. of which, ſtated that the Engliſh has taken the Dutch Fleet, (ſuppoſed what was above Antwerp,) and had advanced within two miles of Rotterdam.

Antwerp, a city of Brabant, capital of the marquiſate of the ſame name, with a biſhop's see. It lies in a low, marſhy ground on the Scheldt, 24 miles North of Bruſſels. It is the third city in Brabant, large and well built, containing ſix large ſquares, and above 200 ſtreets, all ſtraight and broad. Moſt of the houſes are of free ſtone, and have an air of antiquity, being high, with courts before, and gardens behind. The cathedral is a fine ſtructure, and contained an aſſemblage of paintings by the greateſt maſters of the Flemiſh ſchool, particularly Rubens and Quintin Matsys. But of theſe it has probably been plundered by the French, who in their progreſs into Holland took this city. The ſtadt-houſe and the exchange are magnificent ſtructures: the latter is the firſt building of that kind in Europe, and on its model the exchange of London and Amſterdam are built. Its pillars are all of blue marble, and carved, but all in a different manner. Antwerp, towards the end of the 15th century, was one of the moſt celebrated towns in the world. The Scheldt, on which it ſtands, being 20 feet at low water, and riſing 20 feet more at flood, ſhips of the greateſt burthen come up to the keys; but when the United Provinces formed themſelves into a free ſtate, they got the entire command of the navigation of the Scheldt, which ruined the trade of Antwerp, and transferred it to Amſterdam. Among the cloiſters, the moſt remarkable are, the noble and rich abbey of St. Michael, on the banks of the Scheldt, the appartments of which are truly royal. As to the fortifications of the city, it is environed with a fine wall, planted with rows of trees on each ſide, with walks between, broad enough for two coaches to go abreaſt, being alſo defended by a very ſtrong, large, regular citadel, in form of a pentagon, erected by the duke of Alva, in 1568, which commands the town and the adjacent country. Antwerp was taken by the Prince of Parma, in 1585, after a long and memorable ſiege. It has been ſince taken by the French in 1700, by the allies in 1706, and by the French in 1746. It has been twice taken by the French, ſince the beginning of the preſent war, (1800.)

Walcheren, an iſland of the United Provinces, the principal one of Zealand. It is ſeparated from the iſlands of North and South Beveland, by a narrow channel; and from Dutch Flanders, by the mouth of the Scheldt; being bounded on the other ſides by the German Ocean. It is nine miles long and eight broad, and being low, is ſubject to inundations, but has good arable and paſture lands. The capital of this iſland and the whole Province, is Middleburg.

The following characters of Guſtavus and the queen, are drawn by a perſon who has reſided for a long time at Stockholm :——

The King of Sweden.—This unfortunate Pr. bears a ſtriking reſemblance to the beſt portraits of Charles XII. and ſeems not to neglect the addition of ſimilar habiliments; for really at the firſt glance you would think that the portrait of his renowned anceſtor had walked from its canvas. He is thin, but is well made; about the middle ſtature, pale. His mouth is well ſhaped, with ſmall muſtachios on his upper lip, and his hair, cropped and without powder, is combed up from his forehead.

The Queen of Sweden.——This diſconſolate princeſs, is moſt intereſtingly beautiful, very much reſembling her ſiſter the Empreſs of Ruſſia. She is fair, with expreſſive blue eyes her features are fine. She dreſſes with exquiſite taſte. The laſt time ſhe graced the ſtage-box at the theatre, her majeſty wore her hair in light treſſes over her brow and head, and looped up with a double diadem of jewels. Her robe was embroidered, and on her breaſt ſhe wore the badges of the orders of St. Catherine.

STRAYED from this Town, a ſmall dark BROWN MARE, with white feet and a long blaze down her forehead and between eight and nine years old. Any perſon bringing ſaid Mare, or giving information where ſhe is, to the Printer hereof, ſhall be rewarded for their trouble.

THE Subſcribers duly appointed to adminiſter to the Eſtate of the late James Playter of the Townſhip of York, deceaſed, hereby requeſt all perſons to whom the Eſtate is indebted, to preſent their accounts for Settlement, on or before the firſt day of January next enſuing. —And all perſons indebted to the ſaid Eſtate, are alſo requeſted to make immediate payment to Hannah Playter, now reſiding at Mr. James Miles's on Yonge Street, or to Thomas Stoyell in York, by either of whom legal acquittances will be given.

Boston, October 18.

Since our paper was put to press last evening, the ship Packet has arrived in 38 days from Liverpool, bringing London dates to the 6th September, at which time news had been received that Peace had been concluded between France and Austria. The Emperor Francis, as might be expected, makes immense sacrifices to the conqueror—he is to relinquish his imperial title and the greater part of his dominions, and in future is to be styled King of Hungary and Bohemia—Bonaparte adds to his former title that of Archduke of Austria.

The Earl of Chatham had returned from the Walcheren expedition with the whole of the troops excepting 15 000, which are to remain to keep possession of the island.—It was found impracticable to proceed with the fire Sloops, to assault possession of the French fleet near Antwerp.——Wellington, late Sir Arthur Wellesley, was under the necessity of retreating before the French troops immediately after the battle of Talavera, and had taken poſſeſſion at Delcytoſa, as appeared by his diſpatch, dated at that place, Auguſt 8. His ſituation was conceived very critical.

Centinel Office, Wednesday noon.

The Packet has juſt arrived from Liverpool bringing London papers to the 16th Sept.

In a paper of the 5th, it is reported, that France and Auſtria had concluded a peace.—That Auſtria ſurrenders a great part of her territory.—That Francis is to looſe his title of Emperor, and take that of King of Hungary and Bohemia; and that Napoleon adds to his other titles, that of Archduke of Auſtria. So far the report; and we think it a mere bubble, Paris Moniteurs to the 22d Aug. makes no mention of any treaty being concluded, and that the negociations of it were not to be opened in Hungary untill the 15th of Auguſt.——And a London paper of the 5th is ſilent on the ſubject.

The Expedition to the Scheldt was returning. A great number of the troops had arrived in England, principally cavalry, the horſes of which had not been landed.—Lord Chatham ſtates as the cauſe of the abandonment of the ulterior objects, the impractability of an attempt upon Antwerp from the great number of troops aſſembled to defend it; and from the ſickneſs, the effect of the climate, which began to be felt in his army. A force (15,000) is to be left in the iſland of Walcheren, ſufficient to ſecure that important poſſeſſion. The papers are loud in condemning the Earl of Chatham for his dilatorineſs and want of energy. It is ſtated that the army is to be employed on a freſh expedition; and that the orders were transmitted on the 4th from the admiralty to Zealand, on the ſubject. —The troops are to be proviſioned for one month. Some accounts ſpeak of great inundations in the country bordering on the Scheldt.

Liſbon, Auguſt 22.

Great hopes are entertained of ſucceeding in keeping the French forces in Spain from repoſſeſſing this country. The accounts received these few days are of a flattering nature; and it is ſincerely wiſhed the next intelligence from Germany may be equally ſatisfactory."

Extract of a letter to the Editor of the Mercantile Advertiſer, dated

"BOSTON, Oct. 18. noon.

"This morning arrived here the ſhip Packet, Field, from Liverpool, from whence ſhe ſailed on the 18th September.

"It is reported that the Preliminaries of Peace between France and Auſtria are agreed on; and that the Plenipotentiaries were to meet at Oltenburgh, in Moravia, on the 15 of Auguſt, to ſettle the definitive articles. Champagny and a Ruſſian envoy had already gone thither.

"Sir Arthur Welleſley's official diſpatches to the 8th of Auguſt had been publiſhed. He reflects but delicately, on Cuesta. The French accounts of occurrences in Spain down to Auguſt 8th or 10th gives very florid reports of their ſucceſſes to that time, which muſt be very much exaggerated. The French on the 7th Auguſt, took the fort of Montjere, appertaining to the city of Gerona. It was not ſurrendered by the brave Spaniards untill the effects of the ſiege had rendered the place untenable.—The garriſon retreated in ſafety to the city.—The French ſay Gerona muſt ſurrender in a few days.

FROM SPAIN AND PORTUGAL.

We have accounts as late as the 8th ult. It is ſtated by them, that the great armies which had been in contact on the borders of Caſtile and Eſtremadura, after conſuming and deſtroying every kind of food for man and beaſt, had been compelled to ſeparate and retire to points where ſubſiſtence could be obtained.—That the French had fallen back on Madrid, where ſupplies were received acroſs the Pyrennees from France; the Engliſh on Portugal: and the Spaniards on the Guadiani, and that no battles ſince thoſe which have been reported, had been fought. The laſt advices from Liſbon (the neareſt maritime place to the ſcene of war) do not intimate any preparations on the part of the Engliſh to embark their troops, nor any apprehenſions, on the part of the Portuguese, for the iſſue of the patriotic cauſe. The patriots were in excellent ſpirits; and proviſions were very plenty and cheap in Cadiz and Liſbon: and nothing was wanting to ſupply the armies, but energy in the adminiſtration of their affairs.

Letters from Spain ſtate, that in all the provinces they have overrun, the French deſtroyed every ſpecies of animal and vegetable food, which they cannot conſume:—That on quitting a country after robbing the houſes and cottages, they ſet fire to the wheat fields, olive groves and vines; and that all these beautiful flocks of ſheep—once the boaſt & wealth of Spain—though they afford but indifferent meat, have been nearly all killed by the French or ſent out of the kingdom. That the diſtreſſes of the peaſantry in Spain, are almoſt beyond deſcription. That a great ſcarcity of ſpecie was experienced at Madrid; and that ſome of the beſt informed Frenchmen in Spain were of opinion, that unleſs Napoleon has a proſpect of recovering the Spaniſh colonies, he will evacuate the peninsula as a bad bargain, and give his brother Joſeph ſome other kingdom. The American Charge des affairs, near the Supreme Governing Junta, is ſaid to be a warm advocate of the Patriot cauſe: and to have confidence in its ultimate ſucceſs.

The Clergy of Spain continue the moſt faithful and zealous ſupporters of the patriotic cauſe It appears too they are held in high eſtimation. The Biſhop of Toledo, is to be Regent of the kingdom! and the new Viceroy of Mexico, Don Francisco de Zana de Beaumont, is a Prieſt. The conduct of Napoleon to the Pope, has, if poſſible, ſharpened their hatred of him,

From the language of ſome of the anſwers to the capitulation of Fluſhing, it is evident the Engliſh intend to keep the iſland of Walcheren as a commercial depot. The importance of it to their trade, may be eſtimated by that which has attached to the poſſeſſion of Heligoland, off the Elbe.

A diſpatch, of which the following is a copy was yeſterday morning received at the office of Lord Viſcount Caſtlereagh, from Lieutenant-General the Earl of Chatham, dated Head quarters, Bathz, Auguſt 28, 1809.

MY LORD,

Major Bradford delivered to me your Lordſhip's diſpatch of the 21ſt inſt. ſignifying to me his Majeſty's command that I ſhould convey to Lieutenant General Sir E. Coote, the General and other officers and troops employed before Fluſhing, and particularly to thoſe of the artillery and engineer departments, his majeſty's moſt gracious approbation of their conduct; which I have obeyed with the moſt entire ſatisfaction.——I had the honor in my laſt diſpatch of acquainting your Lordſhip with my intention of proceeding to this place, and I ſhould have been moſt happy to have been enabled to announce to your Lordſhip the further progreſs of this army. Unfortunately, however, it becomes my duty to ſtate to your Lordſhip that, from the concurrent teſtimony from ſo many quarters, as to leave no doubt of the truth of the information, the enemy appears to have collected ſo formidable a force, as ſo convinced me that the period was arrived, at which my inſtructions would have directed me to withdraw the army under my command, even if engaged in actual operation. I had certainly early underſtood on my arrival at Walcheren, that the enemy were aſſembling in conſiderable force in all points; but I was unwilling to give too much credit to these reports, and I was determined to perſevere until I was ſatisfied, upon the fulleſt information that all further attempts would be unavailable.

From all our information it appears that the force of the enemy in this quarter, diſtributed between the environs of Bergen-op-Zoom, Breda, Lillo, and Antwerp, and cantoned on the oppoſite coaſt, is not leſs than 35,000 men, and by ſome ſtatements is eſtimated higher. Though a landing on the Continent, might, I doubt not, have been forced, yet, as the ſiege of Antwerp, the poſſeſſion of which could alone have ſecured to us any of the ulterior objects of the expedition, was by this ſtate of things rendered utterly impracticable, ſuch a meaſure, if ſucceſsful, could have led us to no ſolid advantage; and the retreat of the army, which muſt have been at an early period inevitable, would have been expoſed to much hazard.—The utmoſt force (and that daily decreaſing) that I could have brought into the field, after providing for the occupation of Walcheren and South Beveland, would have amounted to about 23,000 infantry, and 2000 cavalry. —Your Lordſhip muſt at once ſee, even if the enemy's has been leſs numerous, than repreſented, after the neceſſary detachments to obſerve the garriſons of Bergen-op-Zoom and Breda, and ſecuring our communications, how very inadequate a force muſt have remained for operations againſt Lillo, Lieſkenſhoeck, and ultimately againſt Antwerp, which town, ſo far from being in the ſtate which had been reported, is, from very correct accounts, repreſented to be in a complete ſtate of defence; and the enemy's ſhips had been brought up and placed in ſecurity, under the guns of the citadel.

Under theſe circumſtances, however mortifying to me to ſee the progreſs arreſted of an army, from whoſe good conduct and valour I had every thing to hope, I feel that my duty left me no other courſe than to cloſe my operations here; and it will always be a ſatisfaction to me to think, that I have not been induced lightly to commit the ſafety of the army confided to me, or the reputa-
