Extract of a talk of the Six Nations, to the President of the United States, sent by mail, January 4, 1818, to the Secretary of War, for him to communicate to the President.

TO THE SECRETARY OF WAR.

Brother:

It is the desire of the Six Nations assembled at their great council fire, in their village near Buffalo, that you would please to lay the following talk before our father, the President of the United States.

Father:

From the fatherly care the President of the United States has exercised towards their red children, we speak to our father in confidence, believing he will not turn away his ears from his red children. Having no agent through whom we might speak, we are persuaded that our father will not be displeased that we speak directly to him, as it were, face to face.

Father:

We need not tell you that we are a poor, ignorant people; unacquainted with the great affairs and wise management of our enlightened white brothers. We are distressed and alarmed—We have no where to look but to our father, whom we trust will bear with his children, should their fears appear to him to be groundless.

Father:

We are alarmed lest we lose our seats. Those men that say they have a right to purchase our lands, have been distressing us for a number of years with their plans to possess our land; offering us in exchange lands to the westward. We decidedly told them we did not wish to part with our lands, desiring they would be at no more expense in visiting us on this errand; if we should alter our minds, we would send them word. Some months after a deputation of our brothers to the west visited us, offering us a large tract of their land a free gift, if we would accept it. We thanked our brothers for their generous offer, and promised, at some future time to send men to view the land. The war took place the next year—nothing more was done or heard of by us of this land, until the spring after the peace, when our brothers again visited us, making the same offer. It never entered into our hearts of leaving our present seats and going to the westward ourselves; but as there were many of the Six Nations in the western country who had no seat to set on, but what was liable to be sold from under them any day the owners choose, we rose up to consider the offer of our brothers, that we might provide for our scattered children. Through the assistance of our brothers Jones and Parrish, and another great friend who advised and assisted us, we had our circumstances and views before our father, the President of the United States, acquainting him with our offer—that with his approbation we would accept this land, provided the United States would make it sure to us.—Our father, the President, has pleased to certify his approbation, and that the land should be made sure to us agreeable to our request. On receiving this information from our father, the President, we sent our eight men to view the land and take its dimensions. Our brother, Captain Parrish, went with them to do the writing, that it might be made sure to us, according to the word of our father, the President. Our men found no land. Col. Ogden (who is said to hold the right of purchasing our land) recommended us to send to Detroit, and Gov. Cass informed our men that in September there would be a large council of Indians of different nations met at Fort Meigs—the Six Nations would do well to have a deputation there, they would then doubtless fix their land. We sent 12 men to Fort Meigs; instead of our western brethren having lands to give the Six Nations, they sold the seats from under those that were among them.

Father:

We are distressed. Capt. Parrish has informed us that we could now exchange our lands for lands to the westward; he advised us to it, or we should certainly lose them: for it was the determination of the government of the United States that the Indians should leave their present seats; those that did not exchange them would lose them.

Father:

We are astonished and amazed! Our old friend, Col. Ogden, has altered his address to us; he has for years talked to us as a man than wished to purchase our lands, if we were pleased to sell; he now writes to us how we shall conduct on his lands which we occupy.

Father:

To whom shall we go, but unto you? We doubt not but many of our white brothers fear God, and ought to be trusted, but how shall we find them?

Father:

We fear that we have been deceived, and your predecessor imposed on. Strange things have come to our ears—that our message to your predecessor which we signed was very different from what was read to us—that it said we were desirous of leaving our seats here and going to the west—provided we obtained lands to the westward, we relinquished our reservations here. If any thing like this was in our message we were basely deceived. We had but these objects in view, to inform our father, the President, of this offer of our western brothers; the opportunity that it offered for providing for our scattered children—to obtain his approbation and assurance the land should be confirmed to us by the United States; any thing more, except providing provisions for our men while transacting the business, was as base an imposition as ever was practised.

Father:

We declare to you, we desire you to publish to all our white brothers, that it is our fixed and determined purpose to live and die on our present seats. It is sealed to us by the bones of our fathers. They obtained it by their blood. Our bones shall lie beside theirs. It is the heritage of the Almighty. He gave it us. He it is must take it from us.

Father:

We mean no threat by this. We know we are in the hands of our white brothers, they can destroy us with ease. But they need not think to persuade us to part with our land. As free men we claim the right to choose between being killed outright, or a lingering execution, by being driven a thousand miles into the wilderness. Where, father, where brothers have us go. The Indian claim to land is put out for more than a thousand miles to the west, except little plots for particular nations.

Father:

We have confidence in you; you cannot see your red children with their little ones driven off their land, and by stealth and fraud leaving the sepulchres of their fathers, their farms, their farming tools and cattle, dying by families on the road, through hardship and privation. Exchanging all their advances to civilization, and all its comforts, for the hardships of the chase, without house or friends.

Father:

We have confidence in you; that if you see any device formed against us, you will frustrate it, and succour your red children. We have deceived no man: we have wronged no man. Our language has been one; we choose not to part with our land. If we have been needlessly alarmed, you will pity our ignorance, and forgive our childish fears.

Father:

We have many things to say. The character of our agent is of great importance to us—If any come to you for the office, having our request to recommend them, we wish to withdraw that request. We see so little into white men, that we feel incapable to choose for ourselves. We desire our father to choose a man that he can trust, and we will confide in him.

Father:

We trust that you will pardon the multitude of our words, and let us deceive you, that this is the voice of a few individuals, and not the voice of the Six Nations. It is the united voice of the Six Nations in the state of New York.

The chiefs of Buffalo, Cattaraugus, Genesee and Onondaga are now in council; we have the message of Albion and Oneida with us, desiring we should speak to our father, the President, entreating him to consider and help us:

Our Father

Will not be deceived; our words will find his heart. He will receive them.—They are the words of truth and soberness. We ask nothing, but wherein we have been mistaken, we may be better informed—wherein we have been wronged, we may be righted—wherein we may be in danger we may be protected, and that our white brothers may know our fixed purpose of living and dying in our present seats.

Father:

You will pity us; you will forgive us; your wisdom and goodness will succour us. Speak, father, speak to your children, that their minds may be at rest. Speak to their council fire at this place. Let us bear your own words, and them by safe hands; for we fear liers are in wait, watching to devour your words, that they may not reach us.

May the Great Spirit preserve you many years a blessing to all your children.

NO II.

"Open thy mouth, for the dumb, in the cause of all such—are appointed to destruction."

"Open thy mouth, judge righteously, and plead the cause of the poor and needy."

In my first number I laid before the public, the Talk forwarded by —— last winter to the President of the United States. I shall now give an account of some information the Indians have received, as from government, since that period; but as the Indians have not been able to obtain copies of the communications they have received as from government, until the following letter, I have thought best to examine carefully those facts, that they have informed me of from their memories, that no mistake or misrepresentation may be made. This may appear a departure from my declaration, but it cannot be concealed from them, in an affair involving such important interests.

I deem it my duty to acquaint them of my purpose and motives, and carefully enquire whether in any circumstance I had misunderstood them.

JABEZ B. HYDE.

The following is a transcript from the copy of a letter interpreted to the Six Nations by Jasper Parrish, sub agent, on the 19th of September, 1818, as a letter from their father the President of the United States, written by his secretary of war.

(COPY.)

Department of war, 19th Aug. 1818.

SIR,

It is certainly much to to be regretted that the Six Nations should by the arts of officious and designing men, be induced to hesitate in changing their present residence for one more congenial to their habits, and better calculated by its remoteness from the settlements of the whites, permanently to secure their interests and happiness.

The country of Arkansaw, was designated as combining every advantage most likely to render their change agreeable to them, and to produce these results; while it would at the same time promote the views of the government, which it is a desirable object, to induce as many of the tribes of Indians as may be disposed to change their residence, to emigrate to the west of the Mississippi. The objection to the Arkansaw, on account of its unhealthiness is futile and erroneous. It is believed that no section of the country is more healthy.

However, should they adhere to the determination not to remove to that country, governor Cass will be requested to consult with the Indians inhabiting the country lying north of the state of Indiana and the Illinois territory, and ascertain whether they are willing to make a cession of land to the Six Nations and receive them among them, and in event of any of them assenting to the proposition, he will be instructed to make the arrangements necessary for their reception and to facilitate their removal; provided the portion of country so selected for their new residence receive their approbation.

It is hoped that the disposition manifested on all occasions by this department to attend to the wishes of the Six Nations, will have the effect of convincing them, that the individuals who endeavour to influence them on this subject and persuade them to act in opposition to their best interests, by whatever motives they may be actuated are certainly their worst enemies, and that they should not listen to them, but to the government of the United States, which is their best friend.

You humble & obdt. servt.

CONTROVERSY.

A dispute is carried on in the Richmond papers among the members of the Episcopal church, of a most singular nature. The convention, it appears recently held at Winchester, passed a resolve that it was improper for communicants to attend balls, theatres, horse racing, gambling, &c. Several able writers, probably of the church, have attacked this resolution, and laboured forth in vindication of the propriety of attending those public amusements that in themselves are not morally evil. They deem the resolution "unnecessary; ill-timed; a departure from the principles and practice of the church; an unwarrantable stretch of authority, and an ill judged attempt to regulate what from its nature, ought to be left to every man's conscience." That none ought to be rejected from the church, but the "open and notorious evil doer." That the resolution can do no possible good, but may have a tendency to evil, by engendering dissatisfaction and distrust in the minds of many of the friends of the church; arraying friends and connexions against each other, because one goes to the ball or theatre and the other does not, and exciting hostility between those who presume to call themselves godly, and others whom they name the wicked.—They also consider it a departure from the ancient custom of the Episcopal church, which has long been distinguished for its enlightened liberality—a liberality by which alone it can hope to prosper. Free from the fanatical cant of superstition; it did not wage war with all the elegancies & gaieties of life, it did not ask its disciples to be "righteous over much," it did not make religion to consist in grouns and sighs and monastic sheliness; but it maintained its dignity and good sense and rational piety, in the midst of infidelity and bigotry.

On the other side it is contended, in support of the resolution, that every member, "by his sponsor in baptism, renounces the vain pomp and glory of the world, with all covetous desires of the same, and the sinful desires of the flesh;" and to this he gives assent by the ceremony of confirmation; that his prayer every Sabbath is, "that he is expected to live in obedience to the commandments; that the whole tenor and spirit of the scriptures are opposed to those proscribed amusements; that balls & theatres are very pernicious places of amusement, that such indulgences strain the purity of the christian character, & endanger the salvation of the souls of men;" that dancing is not fit for a being who is preparing himself for eternity, that in promiscuous assemblies there is no security for moral character—that gaming & drunkenness are tolerated there—that amusement runs into debauchery, and time, health and fortune are sacrificed to pleasure."

To this it is urged by the opposers of the resolution, that those disposed to drunkeness and debauchery will always find other places to indulge in those vices; that even those predisposed to drink and game have been allured from their favorite vices by the wit and gaiety of a ball-room; that the example of the vicious is no more contagious in a ball-room than the example of the vicious elsewhere; that sickly bodies predisposed to disease, may catch the infection; but that the really healthy and vigorous will escape unhurt; that dancing has been consecrated to religious purposes; that there is a time to rejoice and a time to dance; that David danced before the ark in honor of God, to express his joy on its return to Zion; that the daughter of Shiloh danced a yearly feast before the Lord; that dancing was admitted among the primitive christians, and that the bishops themselves were performers.

Those with many more of a similar nature are the arguments used on both sides with much ingenuity, learning & ability. The controversy is not yet at an end—and we may reasonably presume, that it will end without much profit to either side. It is generally the case on such question, "if one side is blind, the other can't see."

From Poulson's Philadelphia Gazette.

We mention the following accident which occurred to an interesting boy, as a warning to those children that are in the habit of playing with gunpowder. He had in his possession a substitute for a pistol, a circumstance of which the elder branches of the family were not aware. It consisted of a small cylindrical tube, one end of which had been plugged up by a piece of lead, a small hole had been afterwards filed near the sealed extremity. After this clumsy instrument had been charged, he raised it towards his eye and fired: the leaden plug was forced from the piece, and entered and destroyed his eye; effects still more serious may probably result from the accident, as he still continues in a languishing condition.

From the Pittsburgh Intelligencer.

Hydrophobia among the Foxes.—We have seen several gentlemen from the Northern Neck (between the rivers Potomac and Rappahannock) who state that the hydrophobia exists at present to the most alarming degree among the foxes. In the county of Northumberland, upwards of forty persons have been bitten, who have been sent to the stone. A most remarkable circumstance attends the malady, which is, that the afflicted animal, in place of avoiding the human species, immediately makes towards them, and even enters houses in the middle of the day. We have on one gentleman who states that a fox entered a house yard in his presence, notwithstanding there were several dogs, and that the dogs instead of attacking the animal, immediately retired, exhibiting great signs of fear. On another occasion a fox made towards a boy who was walking along the road. The latter, to avoid him leaped into a waggon which was passing, but the fox pursued and bit him in several places. Much injury has likewise been done to the cattle; and we are informed that the greatest uneasiness exists among the inhabitants on account of this singular and extraordinary malady.

The superb Exchange Coffee House, at Boston, lately consumed by fire, was perhaps the most extensive and valuable building in the United States—It was seven stories high, exclusive of spacious cellars under the whole; contained 200 apartments, and occupied nearly an acre of ground, it was surmounted by an elegant and spacious dome, 100 feet in circumference, and by means of a sky-light in its centre, light was thrown into the interior of the building—the base of the sky-light was 45 feet in circumference, protected by a substantial railing, within which was a seat and box, containing a perspective glass used daily to ascertain the shipping entering the harbor, and from which was an extensive view of the harbor, and its various islands, the adjacent villages and country seats, and all the public edifices in the towns of Boston, Charlestown and Roxbury.

LONDON, Sept. 27.

As the attention of the several sovereigns and ministers at the proposed congress has been called to the question of mediation between Spain & her South American provinces, and pledges have been given that the basis proposed shall be liberal, we understand the following to be the grounds stated by the moderate party of independents; on which, if the subject is actually brought forward, any deliberation likely to be effectual can be held.

1. General oblivion of the past, and no injury or molestation to occur to the property or persons of those who may have taked part in the revolution.

2. Perpetual abolition of the inquisition & torture.

3. Perpetual abolition of all excisive privilege (fueros) all persons being equal in the eye of the law, and all to be rewarded or punished according to their merits.

4. Abolition of all government monopolies (estancos) and of inland Custom-Houses.

5. Freedom of the press; of commerce with all nations; of agriculture, and of all kinds of industry.

6. Establishment of chambers of representatives.

7. The king to sanction all acts of the chambers.

8. Religious toleration; but the catholic worship to predominate.

9. Perpetual abolition of ecclesiastical tithes; but the expenses attending divine worship and its ministers to be defreyed from contributions to be raised on account of the state, in order to avoid the enmity between the pastor and his flock, which is generally produced by ecclesiastical imposts, and the irremediable abuse inseparable from them.

10. The king to nominate to all employments, giving them to Americans & Spaniards indiscriminately.

11. The military force to be composed of natives alone, according to regulations to be made by the chambers, with the king's approbation.

12. All trials to be public and by jury.

13. The judges to be for life, & independent of the king; but the king to have the appointment of them.

14. Foreign powers to have consuls in America.

15. Foreigners of all nations to be allowed the privilege of establishing themselves in America.

16. The sovereignty of the king of Spain and his successors to be acknowledged in America, and the oath of allegiance and fidelity to be taken agreeable to the aforementioned articles.

17. The infraction of any of the above articles by the Spanish government, to constitute the absolute independence of America from that government: and in this case the allied sovereigns shall acknowledge them by an interchange of envoys or ambassadors.

18. The allied powers conjointly and separately to guarantee to America the full and entire accomplishment of all the foregoing articles.

As Spain herself has implored the mediation of the allied powers, and her note offered to submit to their decision, provided it was compatible with the preservation of the king's rights and dignity, it is further understood that their mediation on the aforesaid terms will be the first proposed to the Spanish government, for their own previous adoption at home, and if not acceded to, they will proceed no further in the business: but if accepted by Spain, the same will be proffered to the independent governments of America.

The following is an extract of a letter from Preston, dated 25th inst:—"The weavers of this place have lately adopted some singular measures. A full meeting of their body was held yesterday in the town, at which a green rag was produced, and the names of the manufacturers of that district being written on slips of paper, were put into it. A resolution was then put, and carried unanimously, that the first name drawn from the bag should be read out of the trade, and that no weaver would consent to work for him. The first name drawn proved to be the firm of Horrocks, Millers & Co. and produced loud applause from all present. It was put to the vote, and carried by a show of hands, that no weaver should work for that firm. The meeting then proceeded to other business. They have offered six months warehouse rent to any manufacturer that will come forward and give them an advance of 4s in the pound. A letter has actually been sent to a house at Bolton with such an offer and an invitation to come to Preston, assuring him of 100 good fancy weavers, and a great number of good cambric weavers. It is fully understood that none of the weavers will work for Messrs. Horrocks & Co.; the rest are all gone to work, but are expected to attend the parades & meetings."

A letter of the 24th inst. from Manchester, says—"Every thing still remains tranquil here; but at Bury, Bolton, Preston, Burnley, and the other neighboring towns & villages, much dissatisfaction prevails (though not expressed by any open acts of violence,) on account of the vast number of weavers, &c. still out of employ; nor is the situation of those who are employed such as to make us feel secure from alarm. They cannot, I learn, with the addition that has been made to their wages, earn more than from eight to ten shillings per week; and to add to their distress, fine, and all articles of domestic consumption are advancing in price.——Bread is about 1s. the quarter loaf. Potatoes 1s. per score pounds. Beef & Mutton 8d per pound. Another detachment of the 97th regiment arrived here this afternoon; and it is generally understood that both the regular and temporary barracks here will be occupied by strong bodies of troops during the ensuing winter. This very necessary and unavoidable measure of precaution cannot fail to enhance a little the price of provisions."

PARIS, Sept. 26.

Several emissaries have recently arrived in Paris, from the English Society in London for the Conversion of Jews, either to the Protestant, Calvinist, or any other Christian Sect whatever. They have had several interviews with some persons who interest themselves much in religious affairs. It is thought, that these Missionaries of a new description intend proceeding to Alsace.

Accounts have been received from Captain Freycinet, who, it will be recollected, left France on a voyage of discovery for new lands beyond the ices of the Antarctic Pole. They announce, that a few months ago he was at the Isle Bourbon.——it is from port Louis, that M. Freycinet has written to his friend M. Desfontaines, and despatched for the Museum of Natural History, cases of birds, fishes, & plants, which being collected by himself, and his officers & crew, all well informed men, full of enterprising zeal, cannot fail of being a valuable acquisition to the King's Cabinet.

The first volume of "the History of the Spanish war against Napoleon Bonaparte," written and published by order of his Catholic Majesty, has recently appeared at Madrid.—It is the production of the third section of the Commission of chiefs & officers of all ranks, established at Madrid, under the immediate direction of his excellency the Secretary of State, Minister of War.

VIENNA, Sept. 12.

By the last letters from Constantinople, dated the 10th of August, we learn that all the foreign Ministers have addressed a note to the Divan, relative to the persecutions against the Christians at Aleppo; the English Minister, in particular, evinced the most laudable energy on this occasion.——His colleagues convened a meeting in order to vote to him their thanks.

Melancholy Accident.—On Friday last, an afflicting circumstance took place in Bulverhithebay near Hastings.—A boat, in which were six men from the Camilla cutter, stationed off the coast for the prevention and detection of smuggling, had been sent ashore in the afternoon for the purpose of obtaining provisions. These being procured at Bexhill, the men returned to their boat, by which time, however, a storm had arisen, the tide flowed with fearful violence, and the sea ran mountains high. The cutter, however, being but a short distance from the shore, the men determined to put off and try to reach her. They did so, and were shortly carried out some distance by the breakers. In an instant they lost sight of the cutter, as did the cutter of them. The storm increased ——destruction threatened around, and the poor men resolved upon again making for the shore. The attempt proved fatal, for having just succeeded in turning their boat towards the land, a dreadful wave & surf overtook & sunk them —four to rise no more. A fifth would inevitably have perished also, but for the generous and humane conduct of one Beachey, a smuggler, who seeing the catastrophe at some distance from the shore, instantly mounted his horse and rode to the spot, which he reached time enough to rescue a fellow-creature, though in some measure an enemy, from a watery grave. One of the sufferers was a young man named Chandler, from Rye. The remaining three were from Portsmouth, and one of them has left a wife & eight children. None of the bodies had been found up to a late hour on Friday night.

A letter from Copenhagen speaks of a serious insurrection having broken out in Norway, the object of which is said to be the dissolution of the Diet, and the dismissal of the President Christie, and the Governor in Chief Count Morner. But as the same letter asserts that numerous bands of peasants had marched against Christiana, whilst the King and Crown Prince were there, and that they were dispersed by the troops—circumstances which, had they really occurred, could not have so long remained concealed—we may reasonably suspend our belief, with respect to the rest of the contents of this communication, until the arrival of further advices. The slightest disturbances in Norway would naturally be reported with the utmost latitude of exaggeration by the Danes, who cannot so soon forget or forgive, the circumstances under which that country was torn from their dominion.

LONDON, Sept. 29

This day we present the first portion of the list of those who purchased Stock of the Bank of Scotland last spring, at the moment it was supposed every foreigner holding a share of that Stock, thereby became a naturalized citizen; and that many foreigners would make such purchases with a design of securing to themselves a place of refuge in this country. We have no particular remarks to make upon the list. Others may know the parties better than we do. The count de Forbin Janson was, we believe, an Aid de Camp to Bonaparte at the battle of Waterloo. Count Lusi is married to a relation of the Marquis of Lansdown. Comte Mereer Elphaut was a General under Bonaparte, and has lately married Miss Mercer, the great Scottish heiress. Why the Countess of Thanet should have been so anxious to be naturalized we know not. The above persons, together with Count Juels de Polignac and some others, expressly purchased that they might become naturalized British subjects.

Sept. 25.

Old Bailey.—On Wednesday the 16th inst. Laurence Halloran, otherwise Gregory, Doctor in Divinity of King's College, Aberdeen, a gentleman of most respectable appearance, and apparently about fifty years of age, was indicted for having in the month of January, 1817, counterfeited a frank in the name of sir Wm. Garrow, Knt. then a member of Parliament, and having thereby defrauded the post-office of "a ten pence." On being called upon to plead to the indictment, the prisoner in a firm voice addressed the court to the following effect: "In the long interval of time that has elapsed since the date of the letter in question (upwards of twenty months,) the death of the only person who could have established my innocence having unfortunately precluded all possibility of exculpation, and the total exhaustion of my pecuniary resources, and ruin of my circumstances, by the long confinement I have undergone, having equally deprived me of all power to engage legal advice and assistance, I feel that I have no alternative but to plead "Guilty" to the charge, and to throw myself on the clemency of the court.

Mr. Baron Graham admonished the prisoner to reflect on the conduct he was about to adopt, before he decided on pleading.—To which Dr. Halloran replied—"I am most grateful for your Lordship's" counsel and consideration, but standing, as I do, single, unarmed, and defenceless, against armed and powerful opponents, I am advised that it will be most prudent to decline the contest, from the hopelessness of success.—I beg leave therefore, to persist in the plea of "Guilty," and to implore the the commiseration of the Court."

A Solicitor of the name of Hyatt, here offered, though not personally known to Dr. Halloran, to undertake his defence, and to engage Counsel on his behalf, but the offer was declined, and the plea recorded.

A Correspondent gives us the following account of Dr. Halloran:—The name of this unfortunate Gentleman is not unknown in the literary world. His publications, poetical and theological, amount to seventeen. He conducted a school establishment near Exeter, upwards of twelve years, which was in the highest repute; and from which he turned out many excellent scholars, who now fill respectable situations in life. Among these may be reckoned the present Solicitor General, Sir Robert Gifford, who was nine years in the pil, and received from him the whole of his school education. It was at Dr. Halloran's recommendation that Sir Robert's talents were devoted to the law. Dr. Halloran has also been employed many years as a Naval and Military Chaplain, in which engagements he was highly respected. He was three years and a half Chaplain and Secretary to the Earl of Northesk, with whom he was present in the Britannia at the battle of Trafalgar, on which he published a poem. He was also on terms of friendship with Lords Nelson and Collingwood, to the former of whom he had been long known. He was upwards of three years Chaplain to the Naval and Military forces, and Rector of the public Grammar School at the Cape of Good Hope. His last engagement, as Curate and Lecturer of Broseley, in Shropshire, has been a most unfortunate one: for though highly valued by the inhabitants, he was unfortunately on unfriendly terms with the Rector, Dr. Townsend Forester, to whom the counterfeit frank was addressed, and who has been the promoter of this novel prosecution, the first that has ever taken place under the statute, and which subjects the prisoner after an active and useful life, now in the wane, to seven years transportation. Dr. H. has a large family, at present in extreme distress from this most afflicting reverse.—He is confined in the Infirmary in Newgate.]

PARIS, Sept. 18.

The diet of Norway rejected, by a great majority, the propositions made by the Swedish government, the object of which was to change some articles of the constitution. They also rejected by a majority of 67 to 5, the proposition of going in a body, before the king, to the frontiers of the kingdom. Two councillors of state were on the eve of being impeached. One only escaped by an equality of votes. The vote of the president decided in his favour.

Don Pedro Cevallos, lieut. general of the Spanish navy, died at Bordeaux on the 7th of this month at the age of 63. It was he who in the year 1794, took on board his vessel, at Toulon, for the purpose of landing them at Carthagena, more than 400 persons who otherwise would have been made the victims of the commissaries of the national convention.

AIX-LA-CHAPELLE, Oct. 2.

We doubt very much that the conferences will be long, and the sovereigns have declared their intention not to consider many of the questions which have been submitted to them. A report is in circulation that the evacuation of France has been the subject of discussion this morning, and the departure of the sovereigns is speedily looked for. We are assured that Gen. Woronzoff's aid-de-camp has gone to view the plain in which the grand review previous to their departure is to take place on the 17th inst. near Sedan; whence they will proceed to Brussels, and afterwards to Paris, while their ministers will continue the discussions here.

Oct. 5.

The day before yesterday, the Emperor Alexander dined with the king, and in the morning visited the duke of Kent. In the evening the grand ball took place. At 7 o'clock the emperor of Russia, & king of Prussia were already present. The emperor of Austria was confined at home with a fever. The croud was immense. The emperor, and the king figured in almost all the dances. The emperor danced with lady Castlereagh, the duchess of Kent, Mrs. Harvey, as well as with several of the German princesses. The duke of Kent, lately arrived, lord Castlereagh, the duke of Wellington & the principal Russian officers also danced with the same ladies, above all with lady Castlereagh.

BREMEN, Sept. 22.

Letters from Tangiers state that the Barbary states are making great preparations for piracy. The Spanish government has received accounts from Algiers which leave no doubt of this fact. And it appears that they will no longer respect some flags as heretofore. Spain will make every effort to prevent the egress of the pirates, since it is certain that they will carry the plague with them.

Proposed Alliances with the Royal Family.

Mansion House.—The Lord Mayor received intimation that a most extraordinary personage would wait upon him on Saturday, with the design of making a proposal of great interest to this country. It seemed to have been generally expected that something out of the usual course of things was about to take place, for the office was greatly crowded. At 12 the visitor arrived. A chair was placed near the lord mayor, and the marshalmen were directed to conduct the gentleman to it. A man of a most venerable aspect then entered the justice room. His head was white, and his beard, which descended and was scattered over his chest, made his appearance truly patriarchal. He had upon his head a military hat, which seemed to have witnessed innumerable campaigns. It was fantastically decorated with gold leather & pieces of ribbon. A belt was tied round his waist, to which was suspended a sword. Pieces of brass were attached to his dress in various places. He bowed to the lord mayor, who spoke to him with the familiarity which never fails to give encouragement.

"I understand, sir, said the lord mayor, that you are native of America?"

"I am, my Lord," replied the stranger; "I have been impatient to see your lordship upon a very important occasion. My name is Moses Osgood."

The lord Mayor.—You served in the revolutionary war?

Moses Osgood.—Yes, we had hard knocks in that war.

The lord Mayor.—Who did you fight for?

Moses Osgood—For his Britanic majesty, and I have reason to remember it.

The lord mayor.—I apprehend you laboured under severe disabilities on that account?

Moses Osgood.—I have indeed, and am still suffering; but expect that all disagreeable things are at an end; at least I am determined to do all I can to finish disagreement: I have a marriage in view.

The lord mayor.—Pray what age may you be?

Moses Osgood.—Exactly seventy-four.

The lord mayor.—And intend to marry?

Moses Osgood.—Yes; I can serve the nation by an alliance, and I can serve myself, which is a stronger motive.

The lord mayor led him to the immediate subject of his visit: when Moses Osgood rose and said he had a warm attachment to the house of Brunswick; and that nothing but that had induced him to leave America with such advantageous proposals to make to his royal highness the prince regent.

The lord mayor asked why he had applied to him upon a subject in which he could not be expected to have much influence.

Moses Osgood replied, that his object was to get introduced to the prince regent through means of his lordship, that he might propose an alliance between himself and the princess Elizabeth, of whose excellent qualities he had heard a great deal, and he depended much on the influence that might be exercised by the lady mayoress over that royal person.

The lord mayor.—Why, my friend, the princess Elizabeth is already married.

Moses Osgood.—Is it possible? Sorry I am to hear it!

Here the veteran sat down; his eyes were filled with tears; his dog, which had followed him into the room, jumped upon his knee, and seemed to participate in his master's affliction. Patting the dog upon his back, he said, "I brought this faithful animal over from Massachusetts to present to the Princess, and to no other human being would I part with him."

The lord mayor, with great humanity, endeavoured to turn poor Osgood's thoughts from this theme, but it was impossible. Having been given to understand that there was another of the royal family unmarried, he hesitated for some time, and seemed to entertain a hope that all was not over with him. The hope was but momentary. "Well," said he, as I am foiled in that respect, I shall think of going back to America; but I must ask the Prince Regent one favor."

The lord mayor.—Perhaps it may be granted to you without any application to his royal highness.

Moses Osgood.—I have discovered a rich mine of gold on the estate to which I am entitled; nobody knows any thing of it but myself. I wish the marriage you mention had not taken place, for that mine would have made me and the princess quite comfortable, and might be of service to her brother too. However, I'll do all I can to serve the son of his majesty; and I hope he will order me a certain number of men and utensils to work on the mine, which I am afraid to show to my own countrymen.

The American consul to whom his lordship had sent, and the captain of the ship in which the American had come over to this country, at this moment entered the office.

The captain of the ship said, that he was led to suppose from the conduct of the stranger on applying for his passage to England, that he was in a sound state of mind. No sooner, however, was Mr. Osgood let on board, than he gave symptoms of behaviour that bid fair to

AIX-LA-CHAPELLE.

Extract from a private letter in the Times.

"I have to-day made a circuit of the houses engaged for the different Sovereigns and Ministers, and have heard the sums for which they are hired. They are all engaged provisionally only, for two months, and the rents which they pay would make it politic for less illustrious characters not to prolong the term on the same conditions. The good citizens of this place knew well that they had a monopoly of lodgings, and like other monopolists, have taken advantage of their privilege, without making any deduction in solid cash for the honor done their houses by the temporary residence of Royalty. The Emperor of Austria pays for apartments for himself and his suite, including Prince Metternich, 45,000 francs. His Majesty will occupy the house of Mr. Bramertz, a small but elegant residence in one of the best streets of the city, towards the south side. The Emperor of Russia has engaged two houses, one in the town (that of Madame Claus,) for which he pays 20,000 francs; and one beyond the walls about a mile towards Louisberg for which he is to pay 26,000 more. The suite of his Majesty Alexander will be more numerous than that of any other Sovereigns. The Russian Minister at the Court of Berlin, M. Alopeus, is already here. The King of Prussia has engaged a house at 18,000 francs (that of Madame Offerman); and his Minister, Prince Hardenberg, that of M. Bettendorff, at 28,000. Lord Castlereagh is to occupy the hotel of the banker Schlosser, and the Duke of Wellington that of the burgo-master M. Guaita, each at a rent of between 28 and 30,000 francs. The Duke of Richelieu is to occupy the house of M. Polen, for which he pays 22,000 francs; his suite, it is said, will be very limited. Among the Prussian financiers, diplomatists, & military officers who are expected to arrive, are mentioned, besides Prince Hardenburg, the Counsellor of State Jordan, the Counsellor of State Rother, who negociated the late loan at London, and General Muffling, who during the campaign of 1815, was attached to the staff of the Duke of Wellington. M. Gentz, also celebrated for his political writings, will be in the suite of Prince Metternich. The Princess of Tour and Taxis, the sister of the late Queen of Prussia, has hired a house, and will reside at Aix-la-Chapelle during Congress. Bankers will be as necessary in a part of the ensuing negociations as Ambassadors, and accordingly Messrs. Baring, Bothman, and Muhlens, are soon expected. Two of the firm of Rothschild are here.

The shopkeepers and the poorer inhabitants of the town who have not hotels to let, are as busy in preparations as those who have, and have taken the hint with astonishing quickness regarding prices. In every street you see masons, plaisterers and carpenters at work, repairing, embellishing or enlarging houses, to enable their owners to catch a portion of the golden shower. Loads of furniture are daily arriving from Paris or Brussels, to fill the formerly unprofitable spaces of empty rooms and unexplored attics: assortments of candelabres, candlesticks, lamps, housebells, looking-glasses, and inkstands, are sold before they reach the shopkeeper; and on every third or fourth window along some of the streets you see the inviting notice of Chambres garnies a louer. Their numbers, however, have not yet reduced the price. The enormity of the demand made by the owners of these chambres garnies exceeds any thing we experience in the small assize towns of England, on the arrival of the judges. They know not, indeed, here what to ask, as they have no experience to guide them in deciding what the daily sight of one king and two emperors is worth at Aix-la-Chapelle: and therefore they exhibit, when fixing the price, the awkward appearance of people struggling between a violent desire to gain all they can, and a fear least the magnitude of their demand should appear ridiculous. It is no uncommon thing for them to ask 20 or 25 francs a day, during two months, for apartments, which in London could be procured for less than that sum a week. Two thousand francs for a small bed room and parlor during congress, are frequently asked and given. If they ask more, they generally assign some reason however unsatisfactory, for the excess. A pert little French woollen draper, in one of the principal streets who is coining every inch of a large house into francs and Napoleons, had yesterday the conscience to ask for more, and justified the extravagance of his demand when it appeared to excite ridicule, by elaborately proving that this Congress would be different in point of facilities of accommodation from the Congress of 1814-15, as Aix-la-Chapelle was not so large as Paris or Vienna.—Lord Castlereagh pays forty francs a day for a stall for four horses, without including the expenses of their fodder."

Bow Church.—We understand that the dragon which has served the purpose of a weathercock, on the summit of Bow steeple, for the last 145 years, will be lowered to the ground on Tuesday next, preparatory to taking down the stone-work, which the injudicious use of iron in the original construction of this justly admired structure has rendered necessary for the public safety.—In ascending the scaffolding which has lately been put up, it was astonishing to see the prodigious effect produced by the expansion of the iron work above mentioned, which has partially lifted the obelisk on its eastern side in a most surprising and dangerous degree.—The vane, which is constructed of thick copper, gilt, is of exceedingly curious workmanship, and (for a dragon) possesses a very intelligent countenance; it measures 7 feet 6 inches in length. Mr. H. Elmes, of College-hill, has contracted with the parish for taking down as much of the present edifice as is considered to be dangerous. We are exceedingly pleased to find, that it is intended to replace this fantamed chef-d'œuvre of Sir C. Wren in the ensuing spring without the slightest variation from the present design, except in the use of more permanent materials.

The Indian Chief.—The following is an extract of a letter from a gentleman at Portsmouth to his friend in London:

"Having seen by the newspapers that the Indian chief, George Berryman, the son of Hopoy Mico, whom I knew in the Floridas, was on board the Semiramis, in this harbour, I was induced to go to see him yesterday; and, as you may suppose, he was happy to meet an acquaintance, one to whom he conceived he might speak in confidence, as it appears to him that those who prevent him from coming ashore are in the interest of his enemies.—Perryman informs me, that he is ordered to return, without delay, to his own country, and is not allowed to land in this.——He asked me some questions, which I really felt at a loss how to evade, namely, 'What shall I tell the Indians on my return when they ask me, Why would not your great father and king allow you to land on his ground'? And did you not say, when you asked us to go to war, that you would always assist us if the Americans should attempt to take our lands? They have now made that attempt; they made it soon after you left us, without any provocation on our part; and I am sent to England to remind you of your promise.' This is the substance, and nearly the words, of his complaint, to which, of course, I could make no answer. He then went on to state, that the Americans are not disposed to come to any terms with them, until they are driven to the other side of the Mississippi. The chiefs, Francis & John, he says, were both decoyed to a vessel under English colors, and immediately hanged. Ambrister he states to have had but little to do with the Indians; and Arbuthnot was put to death for having given the Indians information that their enemies were coming upon them, and thereby preventing a surprise. I am sorry to find this man so much neglected; he appears even to be in want of warm clothes, having nothing but his native dress: he told me, however, that he was in expectation of some on the day I saw him: it would surely be advisable, at least, to pay him some personal attention—one who was so intelligent and useful to our troops, and who has succeeded (though not in the dignity of Mico) to all the authority of his father, and, no doubt, from his abilities, to much more. His father died soon after I left the Floridas, and his elder brother, who succeeded him, was lately killed in battle.——Hambley shamefully betrayed them, and Innerrarity & Doyle are still their most determined enemies. Mappichinico-Kenadgee is General in Chief. The attack on the fort continued nine days, when the magazine blew up. The blacks behaved nobly. General Gaines has established himself at the forks of the river."

The king of England.—His Majesty is perfectly blind and occupies a long suit of rooms, through which he is almost continually strolling. Several pianofortes and harpsichords are placed at certain intervals, and the Monarch frequently stops at them, runs over a few notes of Handle's Oratorios, and proceeds on his walk. He dines chiefly on cold meats and frequently eats standing. He has a silk paid dress, and will sometimes stop and address himself to a Noble Duke or Lord, thus holding a colloquy and furnishing their answers. He suffers his beard to grow two or three days. His hair is perfectly white. He seems cheerful in his conduct and conversation, eats very heartily and enjoys a good bodily health.

COPY OF THE RESOLUTIONS OF THE UPPER CANADA AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At a Meeting of several Magistrates and other gentlemen, held by public advertisement, at York, on Monday the 14th day of December 1818 for the purpose of taking into consideration the most effectual and practical means to encourage, promote and improve the Agriculture of the Province, it was resolved and agreed upon, and we whose names are hereunto subscribed, do resolve and agree as follows: viz.

1.—That we do now and from hence forward unite and associate for the purpose of adopting all such means within our power, as will tend to create competition and emulation amongst the Farmers of this Province—as well by exciting, as by enabling them to excel in the various branches of Agriculture and Rural Economy; and that this present association be termed "THE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY OF UPPER CANADA."—of which His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor has been graciously pleased to signify his assent to become the Patron.

2.—That any person or persons, who shall be approved of by the Board of Directors, hereinafter mentioned, and who shall subscribe a sum not less than one pound per annum, or who shall confer a donation of five pounds or upwards, for the use and purposes of this Society, shall, from the time of paying the same, become a Member of Members thereof, and be entitled to vote at all General Meetings, and be eligible to any office in the Society. And that a Donation of Ten Pounds, or an annual Subscription of Two Pounds, shall entitle the Donor or Subscriber to two votes, and so on in like proportion for every additional donation of five pounds or subscription of one pound.

3.—That the ordinary business and affairs of the Society shall be managed and transacted by a President, two Vice Presidents, a Secretary, Treasurer, and seven Directors; any [illegible] whom, together with the President and one Vice President, shall form a Board to be termed the Board of Directors of the Agricultural Society, which Board, so constituted, shall have power to meet and adjourn when and as they see fit, for the purpose of carrying into full effect the views and objects of this Society, conformable to these articles of Institution, and to such rules, regulations and instructions as may at any time hereafter be adopted & issued by the Society, at the Annual General Meetings thereof.

4.—That there shall be a General Meeting of the Society, held at York, on the second Saturday after the commencement of the sitting of the Legislature, in each and every year, for the purpose of electing a President, Vice Presidents, Directors, Secretary & Treasurer, to serve for the year then next ensuing; and of inspecting the proceedings & accounts of the preceding year; and of giving such orders & instructions to the Board of Directors as may be deemed expedient.—Also that the Directors have power to call a General Meeting of the Society at any time that they may think proper—always giving twenty days previous public notice.

5.—That the Board of Directors shall, from time to time, devize, prepare & publish such scale of Premiums, prize medals, or other pecuniary or honorary marks of distinction, as in their judgment the funds of the Society will admit, and be most conducive to promote competition and emulation to excel in the various branches of Agricultural pursuits, improvements & productions; and shall appoint proper days, times & places for the public exhibition, inspections & trial of such Agricultural productions, or proof of the productions or circumstances upon which the claims of candidates or competitors may be founded. And the Board of Directors, on all such occasions, shall be the judges to decide on the comparative merit of such claims; and shall then and there faithfully and impartially award and distribute the prizes accordingly.—Provided always, that no such exhibition, trial or distribution shall be had or made, unless three months public notice of the time and place of holding or making the same, shall have been previously given in the Provincial Gazette.

6.—That when the annual subscriptions of persons residing in any of the out Districts of the Province, shall amount to twenty pounds or upwards, a sufficient number of Director shall be elected & appointed in such District, with power to manage the affairs of the Society within the same, in such manner as may most conveniently and effectually carry into effect the objects of the Institution.

7.—That the Secretary shall keep a book in which he shall regularly enter the names of Subscribers & Donors to the Society, with the amount of their respectives donations and annual subscriptions, a transcript of all which names and sums, he shall from time to time furnish to the Treasurer, for his information and guidance: and shall also enter and keep a record of all the proceedings of the Society, as well at the General Meetings of the Members, as of the Board of Directors.

8.—That the Treasurer shall have the charge of collecting all monies which may become due to the Society by subscription or otherwise: and shall enter & keep, under proper dates, a regular account thereof, as well as of all disbursements and expenditures which from time to time shall be made by order of the Board of Directors; which orders signed by the President or one of the Vice Presidents, and countersigned by the Secretary, shall be sufficient warrants or vouchers for all or any such disbursements or expenditures.

9.—That any member of this Society, who may refuse or neglect to pay the amount of his annual subscription, for the space of six months after the same becomes due or demand made thereof by the Treasurer, shall be declared to be no longer a member of the Society, but shall be entitled to be re-admitted at the discretion of the Board of Directors

YORK, 8th Dec. 1818.

TO THE MILITIA OF UPPER CANADA.

GENTLEMEN,

I cannot in justice to my Brother Officers, and with a due regard to the respect which I bear to you, permit to pass uncontradicted, the gross falsehood written by Mr. Gourlay, and published in the Niagara Spectator of the 3d. inst.

There were few officers in this Province during the late War who were not known to me; I have ever heard them speak of you with respect, and frequently in terms of admiration.

I do therefore, step forward to repel this impudent calumny, and to express to your honest indignation the man who would seek to destroy the cordial good will which has hitherto subsisted between us and which, under the blessing of Divine Providence, contributed so much to our glorious successes during the late contest with our neighbours.

I cannot forbear, on the present occasion, exposing the fabrication of Mr. ——'s representations on the subject of the Petitions of which he speaks. It is to my knowledge, that the answer of His Royal Highness the Prince [illegible] to the Address of the Commons of the Assembly of Nova Scotia, was communicated to that House during the last session; and that the passage of the Speech of Augustus Foster, was received with the most gracious approbation by the Royal Highness.

These facts have casually come to my knowledge, and I think it very reasonable to suppose that the others have been equally attended to.

I have the honor to be
Gentlemen
your very faithful
humble servant.
JAMES FITZ-GIBBON.
Capt. late Glengarry Lt. Infantry.

Miscellaneous.

From the Plattsburgh Republican.

MILITARY ROAD.

Our worthy President, when on his tour last year, saw the national importance of opening a military road from Plattsburgh to the French Mills; thus affording an easy communication between the waters of Lake Champlain & those of the river St. Lawrence by way of Salmon river.

In obedience to his direction, this work was commenced last season by the sixth regiment of United States Infantry commanded by col. Atkinson, and was resumed last summer, and continued to Monday in this week. It is with peculiar satisfaction that we announce the completion of thirteen miles of this road.—For a considerable portion of this distance, the land upon which it has been constructed, was an uncultivated wild—it was rocky and thickly clothed with a heavy growth of hemlock and other trees. These have been extirpated and great numbers of massive rocks have been removed. The bed of the road is composed of the best materials: it is raised several feet above the neighbouring ground; wide and deep ditches are dug upon either side, and its whole surface is covered with a thick stratum of gravel. By means of excavation the traveller now finds a safe and easy passage over hills which were before scarcely accessible. In a word, it is confidently believed, that this road, for goodness, beauty & durability, is not surpassed by any in the United States.

Too much praise cannot be given to Col. Atkinson, Lt. Col. Snelling—the other officers—the non commissioned officers, and privates on this station, for the alacrity with which they undertook the enterprize, and the industry and perseverance with which they have prosecuted it. It is hoped that the inhabitants of this place will show their gratitude to the garrison by sending for its use supplies of vegetables and other necessaries not embraced by ordinary rations.

A rumour is abroad, that the 6th regiment is shortly to be removed from this place, and that but one company is to be continued here in charge of the post. Utterly unable to reconcile such a step with the obvious policy of the government, and with the avowed motive under which the work was commenced, we cannot yield our belief to this report.

In the event of another war with England, (of which there is no prospect at present) it will not certainly be defensible so far as Canada is concerned; and as it would be worse than folly to commence offensive operations higher up the St. Lawrence than St. Regis, it is manifest that this way would be of the utmost importance. The enormous expense at which provisions & munitions of war were transported to and from the French Mills during the late conflict, is a practical proof of its utility.

If the precept of our illustrious Washington, that "in peace we should prepare for war," be just, then ought this road to be made: If economy in the expenditure of public money, and if celerity of movements is necessary to the success of armies, then, will this road be finished.

From the Evening Post.

Important Improvements contemplated.

The committee appointed by the legislature of Rhode-Island at their late session, to take into consideration the various subjects recommended in the governor's message, have reported, that "a most important project has long been in contemplation for opening a communication, by means of a canal, between the head waters of the East river, running through the state of Rhode-Island, and those of the Boston bay. Immense advantages to this state (say the committee) would be derived from such an improvement; the great utility of which, as well as its practicability at an expense bearing no comparison with its importance, leaves no room to doubt that it will, ere long, be undertaken. The committee are indeed informed, that a company for that purpose are about being organized, and will be prepared to apply for an act of incorporation at the next session of the general assembly. It is also contemplated to cut a passage across the low part of the island of Canonicut, thro' which the tide water already flows, for the passage of steam-boats, and to connect this work with a new turnpike road, from the south ferry in South-Kingston, or from Wickford, direct to New-London, from which place to New-York a line of steam-boats has already been established. This work would be important, not only to the state, in a commercial and agricultural point of view, but especially so to the United States themselves, considering it's great naval establishments, which, in all probability, will be erected in some of the harbours of the Narragansett bay."

From the Buffalo Patriot.

Internal Improvements.—It appears by a report of the commissioners, appointed to explore the route of a contemplated canal, between Seneca lake and Tioga river, that there can be obtained a supply of water at the summit level, adequate for every purpose—that the fall from this level towards Seneca lake, is about 140 feet, and will require 27 locks: that towards Tioga river, is 43 feet, requiring 7 locks. The length of the canal is estimated at about 20 miles. Among the inducements held forth for opening this navigation, are, the transportation of military stores to the frontier, in the event of future wars, and to send our salt and plaster to Pennsylvania, and to receive their iron and coal in return. When once the grand canal shall have been completed, there is no doubt but our numerous lakes & creeks will afford many facilities for the prosecution of those of minor importance.

Chinese generosity.—About three years ago, at a public dinner given by some East India ship owners, the conversation turned on the dishonesty and immorality of the Chinese, and many stories were told in proof of it. The late Mr. John Locke of Walthamstow, observed, how very unjust it was to stigmatize a whole nation for the vices of a few: that it was true, rogues were to be found among Chinese, as well as among other nations; but (added he) I have known characters among them who were an honour to human nature; for instance, there was Sha-king-qua, the Hong merchant, who behaved in so generous a manner to poor Anderson. The story seemed to be familiar to many of the gentlemen present, but as others did not know it, Mr. Locke was requested to relate the circumstance, which he did nearly in the following words:

"The Hong merchant had known Mr. Anderson intimately, and had large transactions with him. Mr. Anderson met with heavy losses, became insolvent, and at the time of his failure, owed his Chinese friend upwards of 80,000 dollars. Mr. Anderson wished to come to England in the hope of being able to retrieve his affairs; he called on the Hong merchant, and in the utmost distress explained his situation, his wishes and his hopes. The Chinese listened with anxious attention, and having heard his story, thus addressed him; My friend Anderson, you have been very unfortunate; you lose all; I very sorry; you go to England; if you more fortunate there you come back and pay; but, that you no forget Chinaman friend, you take this, and when you look on this, you will remember Sha-king-qua; in saying these words, he pulled out a valuable gold watch and gave it him. Anderson took leave of his friend; but he did not live to retrieve his affairs, or to return to China. When the account of his death, and of the distress in which he had left his family, reached Canton, the Hong merchant called on one of the gentlemen of the factory who was about to return to Europe, and addressed him in the following manner:—" Poor Mr. Anderson dead. I very sorry; he good man; he friend; and he leave too child; they poor; they have nothing; they childs of my friend; you take this for them; tell them Chinaman friend send it;" & he put into the gentleman's hand a sum of money for Mr. Anderson's children, amounting to several hundred pounds. We have only to add, that the story made a strong impression on all present, and Mr. Locke, in relating it, was so very much affected, that his eyes filled and his voice thickened.—Lit. Panorama.

From the New-York Evening Pilot.

Continuation of extracts from Reece's Gazette of Health.

Sir—Permit me to make a small, but certainly, in my opinion, an important addition to your very valuable article on the means of perserving health. At the age of 45, or thereabouts, the bowels of both men and women who lead sedentary lives and live well, are very apt to become enlarged, not only from the accumulation of fat, but relaxation of the stomach, intestines, and even the muscles and skin, producing what is generally termed pendulous bowels. In consequence of the relaxation of the outer integuments, (the muscles and skin,) the stomach and intestines lose an important support, the food that is taken is not properly digested, and after it has passed into the intestines it is very apt to lodge there and occasion flatulence; the healthy fat undergoes a change, and a disposition to dropsy soon follows. To obviate these consequences of relaxation of the outer integuments, I made use of stays of fustian, with whale bone to apply over the back bone, and to lace on the left side from below upwards. The support this contrivance afforded to my stomach and bowels greatly surpassed that I had derived from the most powerfuls strengthening medicines. My appetite became good, the bowels regular, and every symptom of indigestion left me. To my own feelings I appeared to be considerably lighter, and the strength of my limbs gradually increased. These effects of a simple contrivance have induced me to send you this communication, which I hope to see in an early number of your very valuable work. It may be proper to add, that on mentioning to Dr. Gheston, of Gloucester, by what means I was so rapidly restored to health, he observed, "It is a valuable discovery, but in organic diseases of any of the viscera, the pressure might be hurtful."

I am, sirs,
Your obedient servant,
A CLERGYMAN.

Gloucester, Sept 19th, 1817.

Extract from No. 26, of the same work.

"The abdominal bandage made by Messrs. Baker and Son, † is first fixed by a non-elastic strap to the lower part of the abdomen, and the pressure being gradually extended upwards; it affords support to the viscera. The part which surrounds the bowels is fastened by elastic straps, which instead of oppressing the chest appear to render respiration more easy, and we have met with old asthmatic subjects who assert that they have breathed with greater facility since they have adopted the use of it. In the first number of our work, we have stated, that in the sub-irritative asthma, the difficulty of breathing is greatly aggravated by relaxation or debility of the abdominal muscles, and in such cases we have no doubt the abdominal bandage will prove very beneficial. The writer of these remarks has made use of the bandage invented by Messrs. Baker & Son, for about 3 weeks, and in the course of that period, he has lost in weight nearly five pounds. He has gained much muscular power, being able to walk many miles without experiencing the least fatigue, when, before he adopted it, a walk of 3 miles nearly exhausted him. His general health has been also greatly improved by it.—Of the addition of a pad, to apply over the abdominal ring, we much approve. The support afforded by the bandage, alone, is, we conceive, in incipient cases of rupture, sufficient to keep the bowels in their proper situation, and in bad cases, with the abdominal bandage, a very slight degree of pressure will be necessary to prevent the escape of the intestines, &c. through the abdominal ring and in such cases it is probable the tone of the muscles of the abdomen and intestines, and the peritoneum, may be so far restored in the course of a few weeks, as to render a compress over the abdominal ring unnecessary. Of late we have heard much of the "radical cure of rupture," but of the plans that have been suggested to effect it, this to us is the most plausible."

† These bandages, or very nearly similar, may be had at J. Best's, merchant tailor, No. 18 Wall-street.

OXFORD, Oct. 2g.

Accident.—On Saturday evening last, as three of Mr. Sperry's children were sitting before the fire, they were suddenly and one badly scalded by the fall of a kettle of cider which was boiling over the fire. Mrs. S. was near the fire carding cotton, but escaped unhurt. In the moment of confusion a neighbor stepped in, and recommended an application of cotton wet with molasses to the parts of the child affected—the boy was immediately stripped and completely covered with the cotton, when by accident the candle was brought in contact, and the child was wrapped in a blaze of light. Mrs. Sperry in attempting to extinguish the flame, caught her own clothes, and her situation soon became so alarming, that she was obliged to throw herself upon the floor to smother the flames; unfortunately she happened to throw herself upon the cotton she had been carding, and the whole exhibited a complete bonfire. The child, when taken up, was literally burnt to a cinder—it is still alive, but cannot survive long; Mrs. Sperry and the other children will recover, but must endure a long & painful confinement. It is supposed that the bail of the kettle was not in the bend of the hook, but only on the edge of it—the boiling of the fluid caused an agitation, which occasioned the accident.

Fire.—The house of James Mix, in this town, was burnt to the ground on Saturday last. It does credit to the benevolent inhabitants of Beekman's patent, that on Sunday they went into the woods and hewed the timber for a house 20 by 24 feet, and had it completely framed and raised the same day. On Monday and Tuesday, they so far finished the house that Mr. Mix was enabled to move into it with his family.—Albany Gazette.

To make Yeast, when very scarce.

Boil one pound of good flour, and a quarter of a pound of brown sugar, and a little salt, in two gallons of water for an hour. When milk-warm, bottle and cork it close. It will be fit for use in 24 hours. One pint of this will be sufficient for 18 lbs. of Bread.

Sea Serpents again.—By the arrival of the Sloop Ann-Maria, Capt. Stedman, at Brandford, we learn, that on his passage from Charleston to New-York, in lat. 36, long. 75, saw 5 sea-serpents, the longest he judged to be 120 feet long—that his mate shot a ball through the head of the largest—the water was covered with blood, and he presumes they not killed him—he was so near that he could have jumped on him from the taffrail. The crew and passengers are ready to make oath to the above facts.

LONDON, Sept. 24.

Onions.—The rise and fall of this valuable vegetable has been almost as rapid as the rise and fall of modern Empires. A Kentish horticulturalist in the early part of the season, sold the produce of 20 acres for more than £20,000. This article was then worth twenty-five shillings per bushel; but at Reading fair last week, they were purchased wholesale at less than five shillings; so that onions, contrary to the usual custom, bear at least in the eyes of the vender, rather than the buyer.

HAMBURGH, Sept. 11.

We have very little weather here: provisions are, however, very dear. This is attributed to the enormous exportation of them for England.

LONDON Sept. 29.

The city, twelve o'clock.—The following is a statement of intelligence which was received yesterday from Russia, and was much talked of upon the Exchange:—

"It will be recollected that a few years ago, about 150 vessels, with valuable cargoes, were seized in Russia; their cargoes were reported to be of great value; we believe several millions. These ships had, what at that time was termed simulated papers, appeared to have cleared out from Lisbon, from Teneriffe, and other, at that time, neutral or friendly ports, bound for Russia; and we believe, in several instances, foreign houses in London, shipped produce to their ports, to be again reloaded for Russia. At the same time it was believed that many of these ships were entirely loaded in the Thames, and only received the simulated papers from the neutral ports. These vessels were all ensured at Lloyd's. When they arrived in the Baltic for different ports in Russia, Sweden, and Prussia, they were supposed to amount to 3 or 400 sail of valuable merchantmen; they remained for some time in the Sound, but receiving assurances from the consignees of the cargoes, that all was right, that they had received assurances from the government of safety, they ventured into the Russian ports: they were subsequently all seized and confiscated. The owners of these cargoes in London were all foreigners though for a length of time domiciliated here, and many, we believe, of much respectability. On the other side, as the affair was in some shape or other compromised with the Government of Russia, the insured in London made a demand for the whole amount insured, and in several instances 60, 70 or 80 per cent. was settled till the compromise in Russia was brought to a final conclusion. On the return of peace between Russia and England, the whole affair was laid before the Russian government, and the English minister made repeated applications to that Court on this subject, in behalf of the English Merchants. At several periods since, great promises were held out that the affair would be satisfactorily adjusted, and the claims would in a great measure, be allowed. The expectations on this subject were so great a few months ago, that a deputation from the Merchants of the City, and of Lloyd's, departed for Russia, to bring the business to a final close. At the head of the deputation was Alderman Rowcroft, a man of acknowledged talents. The affair has, however, taken an unfavorable turn, and yesterday Letters were received from the deputation, stating that the Russian Court had come to a determination to reject the claims, and had transmitted an official communication to that effect. The particulars have not yet transpired, but the result was yesterday known in the City, and produced a considerable sensation on Change."

From the London Courier.

Extract of a letter from a respectable gentleman in Virginia, who has been many years a resident in that country, dated 30th July, 1818, to his friend in Glasgow.

"The affairs of this country are assuming a very interesting aspect, owing to the prodigious increase of its inhabitants. You can have no conception of its boundaries indeed: in a short time, nothing less than the Atlantic on the east, the Pacific on the west, will form two of its bounds: and how long the people on your side will be able to form our northern boundary, it is difficult to say: I apprehend it will not be many score of years; we look to Canada with a wishful eye: and, as to our sombrero holder, we have this year taken possession of a part of the poor king of Spain's territories, and the whole of the Floridas must follow. Although we are here very zealous republicans, we are as encroaching and as fond of power and extensive dominons as Bonaparte was. When Great Britain and this country goes to war again, there will be the most violent struggle that perhaps we ever heard of in the history of the world: I hope in God not to live to see it. The vanity of the leading demagogues here is inconceivable. In their public speeches and orations they maintain, that they are the bravest, most valiant, and wisest people on earth and that no people on earth can compete with them, when there is any thing like equality of numbers. Your newspapers are ransacked constantly for matters of ridicule and abuse against the British government; latterly, indeed the Spaniards came in for a large share. Our violent men are eager to assist and countenance the patriots (as they are called) in South America. They even abuse the President for not recognizing them as an independent people, at once. "We have had a summer, thus far, of excessive hot weather; nothing like it for twenty years. For five weeks past, the mercury has ranged from 70 to 100 degrees; I do not believe that it has been, even in the night, below 70. In Philadelphia, several degrees to the northward of this, the thermometer has been, in the shade, several times, 102; in the sun, it has risen to 126. We have had several heavy rains, but the heat, notwithstanding, has continued; we continue healthy, notwithstanding the extreme heat.

"Your parliamentary orators betray, in their speeches, the grossest ignorance with respect to this country. Even Brougham, the great demagogue, either intentionally or through ignorance endeavours to lead you astray with respect to the state of morals and police here. It is a fact, that the state of morals throughout the United States is depraved to an extreme degree; forgeries on the Banks, and burglaries of every kind prevail exceedingly; and in some of the western states, the life of the human species is held in no higher estimation than the most noxious of the brute creation, when any the slightest offence is given. Oh! I wish some of your murmuring, discontented gentry were in this country but a very few years, they would soon change their tone!!"

From the same Sept. 26.

The topic to which the Morning Chronicle recurs most frequently, and with the greatest delight, is an invidious comparison between the state of this country and that of America. We are far from denying the general improvement of the United States, and as far from repining at it, considering them as among our best customers and most useful friends, and that perhaps no two nations are so eminently calculated to promote the prosperity of each other by an amicable and intimate connection.—Nor are we ever disposed to prevent those among our own countrymen, who prefer the government, laws, and manners of America to our own, from going to enjoy them. We only wish the truth to be told on those subjects, and that the ignorant and unwary should not be intrigued into a ruinous experiment by false representations.

It may, however, surprise those who pin their faith on the Morning Chronicle, to find that poverty and poor's rates have found their way beyond the Atlantic, and that New-York contains as large a proportion of paupers, as perhaps any city in England: and it cannot but surprise them after being told that all the taxes in America would be repealed, to find at least seven-eighths of them in existence. If, indeed the happiness of a people is to be estimated by the amount of taxes from which it has been relieved, the people of England are in a state infinitely preferable to those of America, who have only been relieved from taxes to the amount of 6 or 7,000,000, being about 15d. a head, according to the last accounts of their population; while in Great Britain, taxes have ceased to the amount of above 27,000,000, being at the rate of 25s. for every individual.

LONDON, Sept. 29.

Emigration.—This morning the deaf and dumb Brother and elder Son of Citizen Hunt, went on board a vessel in the River bound for New Orleans.—— Their final Destination, we understand is to Shawnee Town, in the Illinois, near the residence of Maurice Birkbeck, Esq. from whom they have purchased a considerable tract of land, for the purpose of commencing Agricultural pursuits, and have carried with them a large quantity of necessary husbandry implements.

Prescription for Bonaparte's Liver Complaint.—Unobserved exercise especially at night! Unassisted escape to an American vessel. Unexpected landing in France. A procession to Paris. A levy of eight hundred thousand men for a march to Berlin and Vienna in behalf of the peace of Europe! After taking these places, the patient will find himself considerably better. Let him next prohibit English ships from the ports of the Continent and English manufactures from all the markets. His cure will then be complete, and his health may be sustained by daily doses composed of accounts of English distress and English Reform!

The quantity of fruit in Scotland this year is so abundant, that the produce of the orchards on the river Clyde only, including those situated between Glasgow and Hamilton have been sold for nearly eleven thousand pounds.

Mischief and destruction of a mad dog at Knightsbridge.—About ten o'clock on Thursday morning, the neighbourhood of Knightsbridge was thrown into a serious and too well grounded alarm, by the appearance of a mad dog, at Hyde Park corner. He first snapped at horses in the Park; but at the Piccadilly gate he too successfully seized Mr. Crosson of the gatekeeper, by the leg, and making his way down on the right hand side of the Knightsbridge road, snapping at every person and animal he met, he fixed upon Mr. Edwards, whom he bit severely; he then attacked Mr. Richardson, of Hammersmith, whom he fell upon most ferociously, in consequence of his determined resistance with his umbrella. This gentleman escaped, we understand, without any cutaneous impressions, although his coat & trowsers were literally torn to pieces. In the mean time the dog was pursued by a labourer, of the name of Danford, who overtook him at the coach stand at Sloane-street, but unfortunately missing his first aim with a pitch-fork, the dog flew at his ancle, and made five deep incisions. It required the whole strength of the poor man's brother to extricate him, while the courageous sufferer dispatched the animal. He is now in St. George's hospital, with Mr. Edwards and the boy, undergoing the extraction of the bitten part.

According to an article from Rome, Madame Letitia Bonaparte has found a treasure in the cellar of the Palace of Rimiccini, which she had purchased, consisting of gold and silver coins, lace, &c. We learn from the same quarter, that the captains of the American ships at Leghorn, recently gave a brilliant entertainment to the family of Buonaparte, who reside in that neighbourhood.

Hunt will be proceeded against by an action for defamation, in calling Mr. Dowling a government spy, who tried to swear away the life of Dr. Watson.

Hunt has preferred an indictment against the proprietors & printer of the New Times, for a libel on his character in that paper.

Cobbett, sick of his trans-atlantic paradise, on Long-Island, has, it is said, landed in Ireland, whence his return to London may shortly be expected.

LONDON, Oct. 4.

It would seem, from an article in the French papers, that it is proposed, upon the evacuation of France by the Allied troops, and the restoration of that nation to domestic independence, to apply vigorously to a maritime and commercial system, in order to restore the trade of that country to something like its former condition. America is doubtless occupied in the same plans; it is probable, therefore, that we shall have a new code of Navigation Laws published by every kingdom in Europe.

An important communication was received yesterday, which throws a new light upon the recent changes in the Spanish ministry. It appears that the Russian interest predominated over the councils of the Spanish cabinet, but that by the timely zeal & ability of Sir Henry Wellesley, our ambassador at Madrid, that interest has been completely put down. That gentleman presented a frank exposé to the King of Spain on the state of the nation and pointed out the inevitable consequences of the existing system.—The king was so forcibly struck with this exposition that he immediately dismissed his ministers. This intelligence, we understand, was communicated to the court of France by a special courier, who arrived at Paris on Tuesday last. The English interest triumphs in Spain. By the advice of our ambassador, it is said, that all proscriptions are to cease, and the inquisition is to be limited in its powers.

Treaty for the evacuation of France.

The sovereigns assembled at the congress at Aix-la-Chapelle, have entered into a convention that the allied troops shall be withdrawn from France on the 30th Nov. next. The following are the articles:

Art. 1. The troops composing the army of occupation shall be withdrawn from the French territory by the 30th of November next, or sooner if possible.

Art. 2. The strong places and fortresses which the said troops now occupy, shall be surrendered to commissioners named for that purpose by his most christian majesty, in the state in which they were at the time of the occupation, conformably to the 9th article of the convention concluded in execution of the fifth article of the treaty of Nov. 20, 1815.

Art. 3. The sum destined to provide for the pay, the equipment, and the clothing, of the troops of the army of occupation, shall be paid in all cases, till the 30th of November next, on the same footing on which it has existed since the 1st of December, 1817.

Art. 4. All the pecuniary arrangements between France and the Allied powers having been regulated and settled, the sum remaining to be paid by France, to complete the execution of the 4th article of the treaty of November, 1815, is definitely fixed at 265 millions of francs.

Art. 5. Of this sum, the amount of 100 millions of effective value shall be paid by an inscription of rentes on the great book of the public debt of France, bearing interest from the 22d of September, 1818. The said inscriptions shall be received at the rate of the funds on the 5th of October, 1818.

Art. 6. The remaining 165 millions shall be paid by nine monthly instalments, commencing with the 6th of January next (Note—Formerly by mistake, named the 26th December, of the present year) by draughts on the houses of Hope & Co. Baring, Brothers, & Co. In the same manner the inscriptions of the rentes, mentioned in the above article, shall be delivered to commissioners of the courts of Austria, Great Britain, Prussia, and Russia, by the royal treasury of France at the epoch of the complete and definitive evacuation of the French territory.

Art. 7. At the same epoch, the commissioners of the said courts shall deliver to the royal treasury of France, the six obligations (engagements) not yet discharged (acquittes) which shall remain in their hands of the 15 obligations (engagements) delivered conformably to the 3d article of the convention concluded for the execution of the 4th article of the 20th November, 1815. The said commissioners shall at the same time deliver the inscriptions of seven millions of rentes created in virtue of the 7th article of the said convention.

Art. 8. The present convention shall be ratified, & the ratifications exchanged at Aix-la-Chapelle, in the course of 15 days, or sooner, if possible, in the faith of which the respective plenipotentiaries have hereupon signed their names and affixed to it their seal and arms.

Done at Aix-la-Chapelle, the 17th Oct. in the year of Grace, 1818.

LONDON, Oct. 22.

We understand that Mr. Gallatin, ambassador of the United States at Paris, left town yesterday morning for Dover, on his return to the French capital; nothing has yet transpired as to the result of the negotiations in which his excellency has been engaged (with Messrs. Robinson and Goulbourn, our plenipotentiaries) during his stay here.

The discontent at Fribourg is so great, in consequence of the resolution of the great council for restoring the Jesuits, that several of the inhabitants are preparing to abandon the country, and emigrate to America.

Wallack, late of Drury-lane, took with him to America a most splendid wardrobe of theatrical dresses, stage ornaments, and other properties, to the estimated value of two thousand pounds.

AIX-LA-CHAPELLE.

Among the subjects which still occupy the attention of the allied sovereigns is, the differences which unhappily subsist between the king of Bavaria, and the grand duke of Baden. The chief cause of dissention is the demand made by Bavaria of a portion of the territory of Baden. Bavaria, it appears, entered into a treaty with Austria, to cede to the latter, part of her territory; and Austria engaged to compensate Bavaria by the session to that state of a part of the dominions of Baden, Nassau or Wurtemburg. To this treaty, the grand duke of Baden was not a party. Bavaria has fulfilled her part of the contract, by ceding a portion of her territory to Austria; and she now demands a portion of the Badenese dominions as her compensation.—This is the claim advanced by Bavaria. In opposition to it, the subsequent fact is adduced on the part of Baden, that when the courts of Baden and Hesse and Darmstadt acceded in 1815, to the alliance between Great Britain, Austria, Russia & Prussia, it was formally stipulated, that the political existence of the two grand duchies should be maintained. Thus two treaties are directly at variance with each other. Another cause of difference between the two states originates in the following political arrangement. In the treaty of 1815, it was agreed by the allied powers, that in the event of the grand duke of Baden leaving no successor, in a direct line, the whole of his dominions should be transferred to Bavaria. But, since that arrangement took place, the grand duke in a letter to the king of Bavaria, has complained of this infraction of his right to nominate a successor, and of the right of the Badenese to choose one for themselves, should the succession fail. Such are the causes of the quarrel between these personages, and it is referred to the arbitration of the allied sovereigns.—Meanwhile, the king of Bavaria has assembled a number of troops on the Badenese frontier, that he may be able, in case of the death of the grand duke, who is at present indisposed, to take possession of his dominions. The latter is preparing to defend them; and Wurtemburg has declared in an official note, that they shall not be invaded with impunity. The emperor of Russia, also, it is said, espouses the cause of Baden.

It is asserted in an article from Brussels, that the allied sovereigns have determined not to interfere in the disputes between Spain and her colonies, as being objects foreign to the purpose of their assembling.

According to the private letters from Aix-la-Chapelle, the emperor Alexander has caused a note to be submitted to the congress, urging the removal of Bonaparte to some more healthy place of confinement than St. Helena.

A letter is in circulation on the continent, purporting to be from general Gourgaud to the empress Maria Louisa soliciting her to repair to Aix-la-Chapelle, for the purpose of endeavouring to procure the release of Napoleon or, at least, some amelioration of his unpleasant

The mother of Napoleon Bonaparte, who at present resides with Cardinal Fesch, in Rome, hearing of her son's illness, is said to have applied to the allied sovereigns at Aix-la-Chapelle and to the ministers of the Prince Regent, for permission to visit St. Helena, and has been refused.

Mr. Clarkson, the benevolent & well known opponent of the slave trade, is at Aix-la-Chapelle, to enforce the views of the abolitionists. Lord Castlereagh is also the bearer of the memorial from Mr. Wilberforce, on the same subject, and of another memorial from sir Joseph Banks, relative to the Barbary powers.

Madame Reichard made her last ascent in a balloon at Aix-la-Chapelle on the 8th inst. All the city flocked to see the spectacle, which was quite new to the people of Aix-la-Chapelle. The king of Prussia conversed with the aeronaut some minutes before the fastenings of the balloon were cut; she displayed the utmost courage & indifference in making the preparations for the dangerous experiment, and entered the basket with the greatest composure and some grace. Immediately on its leaving the court, she scattered flowers on the spectators, and waved her flag as she ascended. Her motions were answered by a corresponding shout. The balloon took the direction of the north-east, towards Louisberg. It was soon out of sight; the evening was cloudy, and nothing was heard of the lady till the following morning, when it was understood that she alighted in safety in a garden, about 15 miles on the road to Cologne.

The French papers mention that the Sieur Vanderberg has purchased no less than 20,000 horses, belonging to the allied armies.

The dounniers of the Netherlands have seized a part of the wines destined for the emperor of Russia, on account of an erroneous declaration to their price.

Polar expedition.—Thursday night, Mr. Fisher, an officer belonging to the Dorothea, Capt. Buchan, arrived at the admiralty with despatches, announcing the return of that ship and her consort, the Trent sloop, from the Arctic seas. It appears that the highest latitude the ships ever attained was about 80. 20. longitude 12 east. They attempted proceeding to the westward, but as in the case of Capt. Phipps in the Racehorse, in 1773, they found an impenetrable barrier of ice.—The ships proceeded nearly over the same space as Capt. Phipps did, and met with similar impediments as experienced by that officer. The Dorothea & the Trent are on their way to Deptford. They arrived on Thursday se'nnight in Scarborough roads. We are sorry to learn that one of the ships has sustained considerable damage having been caught between two floating ice bergs, the collision of which was so great, that she was lifted completely out of the water. Her irons were all forced, and her ribs broken, and we understand it has been with great difficulty she has been able to reach port.

These are the ships which were equipped with a view to their reaching the pole, and entering the Pacific ocean by Behring's Straits. This is, we believe, the 17th or 18th failure to accomplish the daring project of crossing the polar region.

In different years the Greenland whalers have advanced to the latitude of 81 & 82; and so late as 1806 the elder Mr. Scoresby ascended to the latitude of 81. 50. It is now clear, we think, that all hope of sailing to the pole is at an end. A son of Mr. Scoresby lately suggested the bold plan of approaching the pole over the icy continent from Spitzbergen. Adopting the mode which the Russian hunters have employed with such advantage in exploring the frozen sea from Nova Zembla to the shores of Kamschatka, he proposed to pass the winter in the island of Spitzbergen, and starting in the spring with sledges drawn by dogs, to pursue a journey of 6 or 700 miles to the pole. He might then expect to find a continuous sheet of ice stretching through his whole track.

The pope, by a bull, has granted the inquisition permission to torture, in cases of treason & freemasonry.

By private correspondence from Aix-la-Chapelle, it appears that a proposition for the renewal of the Quadruple Alliance, which would infallibly have had the effect of driving France again into hostilities against all the rest of Europe, has been prudently rejected; and that a project for holding a general congress of all the powers every three years, for a general settlement of conflicting interests, is on the carpet, which has met with much approbation, and stands a considerable chance of being adopted.

Several commercial houses at Paris have been informed by their correspondents, that the American government has offered a sum of 30 million francs to the king of the two Sicilies for the cession of the port of Syracuse. This pro-

It is well known that the Americans use every effort to procure an establishment in the Mediterranean, and that they have successively directed their attention on Porto Ferrajo and on Mahon. In the fear of injuring the commerce of Leghorn, the grand duke of Tuscany has refused them the Isle of Elba, for which they offered 4,000,000 fr.

Their majesties, it is supposed, are the only instance in the united kingdom, of man & his wife having been married above 56 years, with 12 children living, the youngest of whom is 40 years of age.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 24.

The funds have suddenly risen two or three per cent within the last few days, without any assignable cause whatever, for it is not to be supposed that the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, so well known, and so perfectly anticipated, could have had any sensible operation. The rise is generally thought to have been produced by some recent manœuvres at the stock exchange. Such is now the prodigious extent of the combination of capital in this country, that even the money market and the corn market, which by their magnitude have been always supposed out of the reach of its influence, are no longer secure from the operations of this powerful engine.

Monday se'nnight, the ship Union, of Limerick, Wm. Stewart, master, arrived in the Shannon from Quebec, after a passage of 14 days.—This is the quickest run we ever remember to have heard of in any vessels from Quebec, (or indeed any other part of America) to any part of Europe.

We stated, a few weeks ago, that the celebrated Abraham Thorton had arrived in this town, for the purpose of emigrating to the United States. He has experienced more difficulty than he anticipated in getting a passage thither. It appears that he had engaged one in the Independence, but when the other passengers became acquainted with his name and character, they unanimously refused to go in the same vessel with him; and a new muster-roll was, in consequence, made out, in which his name was omitted.

AIX-LA-CHAPELLE, Oct. 7.

It is a rumour here, and which I send you without vouching in the slightest degree for its authenticity, that the duke of Wellington, at the first conference, solemnly declared in favor of the evacuation, observing, that war seemed to him inevitable if the army of occupation left not quit France. Lord Castlereagh, it is said, did not concur with his grace.

SPAIN AND THE UNITED STATES.

HAMBURGH, Oct. 1.

We have received the following document, the importance of which renders it worthy of public attention. It is the note lately presented by the Spanish minister for foreign affairs, to the ambassador plenipotentiary of the United States of America, and which contains the protest against the occupation of a part of the Territory of Florida.

NOTE.

"Sir—In the department confided to me, disagreeable accounts continue to be received concerning the nature and circumstances of the late events in Florida, and the hostile proceedings of the American general Jackson, and the troops under his command, in the territory of those provinces which belong to his majesty. Besides the facts to which I invited the attention of your excellency in my notes of the 26th July, and of the 6th and 11th of this month, I have now before me the copy of a capitulation, which, it appears, followed the hostilities committed by that general against the fortress of Pensacola, and in consequence of which the Spanish garrison has been conveyed to the Havana. In my preceding notes, I had the honor to inform your excellency, that notwithstanding the particular character of violence which seemed to mark the actions and operations of general Jackson, since his first entrance into the Floridas, his majesty, although willing to consider those proceedings as the arbitrary acts of the said general, was convinced that the government of the United States would no longer delay to disavow them, as soon as they came to its knowledge, and that proper orders would immediately be given, not only for the evacuation of the territory invaded, but also for the reparation of the outrage occasioned, and for the restoration of the property taken, which belonged as well to his majesty, and Spanish subjects, as also to strangers, who lived there under the protection of his majesty's government.

"It could not be presumed, without malice to the integrity of the American government, that there would be any delay in giving satisfaction to a friendly power, and to all civilized nations, this testimony of respect for those principles upon which the maintainance of social order depends. It was with profound affliction that his majesty learnt from the subsequent report of his minister at Washington, that as the first excesses of general Jackson had not been disapproved, he had not hesitated to continue his acts of violence and desolated with fire and sword every thing upon the Spanish territory, which he met with a resistance which sense of honor prescribed to some small garrisons which were attacked in the midst of peace by a numerous body of troops. In general the territory of his majesty was attacked in the most revolting manner, the fortresses and depots of arms have been taken by force, the garrison made prisoners, and then sent out of the provinces, where his majesty had ordered them to serve—Nay, subjects of powers in friendship with his majesty have been executed upon Spanish ground, and this act of barbarity cloaked with judicial forms, which, in that situation, and in those circumstances, can only be considered as a refinement of cruelty. It cannot be doubted but these excesses are known to the government of Washington; and it does not yet appear that orders are given to put an end to them, or give to the Spanish government the only satisfaction his majesty considers to be due to his own dignity, and that of the people whom he governs, to order me, at the same time that I again most solemnly protest against all that has been done by general Jackson, from the day that he set his foot on the territor. of Florida, to add further that your excellency will be pleased to inform your government that the king is of opinion, that from the nature of the said injuries, and really hostile proceedings, the course of the negociations pending between the two powers is and must remain, interrupted and broken off, till the government of the United States has marked the conduct of general Jackson in a manner suitable to its honor, and which, it seems, can be no other than to disapprove of the excesses committed; to give orders to place things on the same footing as they were in before the invasion; and to inflict an appropriate punishment on the author of so many disorders.

"It is extremely disagreeable to his majesty to be compelled to this declaration, which is a more necessary consequence of the nature of the affair, than an act of his royal will, whose wishes & endeavors have always been directed to making an equitable arrangement of the matters in debate between the two governments: but the whole impartial world will equally recognize in the present state of things the impropriety that must ensue, if negociations, which suppose a state of perfect political friendship, were to be continued at a time when such great insults have been offered without provocation.—The occupation of the larger and better part of Florida in 1810, by the United States, who deprived his majesty, during his captivity, of a country of which he was in peaceable possession, under pretences, which if they had been even well founded, ought never to have been enforced by violence; and the late improper attack on Amelia Island, were facts of the same nature & tendency, equally unjust in their principle, and equally protested against on the part of Spain, but as they were less offensive in their kind, and under the circumstances his majesty believed at the same time that he gave proofs of his moderation, that he might wait for satisfaction on these points till the definitive arrangement of the points in dispute, which it was expected would soon take place. The same is not the case in the present instance.—The Americans have no claim either founded or unfounded, to the territory which General Jackson has attacked—no real or pretended revolution of the inhabitants could serve as a pretext—no previous attack by robbers, which was alledged as a reason for the unjust seizure of Amelia Island; the Spanish flag was flying on the fortresses of San Marcus and Pensacola, when they were attacked; and, to complete the measure of insults, that has been taken by violence, which His Majesty had offered in the pending negociations to cede to the United States in an honorable manner, so that it seems to have been preferred to seize it by violence, rather than to acquire it from the generous friendship of the king.—These extraordinary circumstances has induced his Majesty to take the resolution, that it is incompatible with the dignity of his exalted character to continue negociations, till an affair has been settled and terminated in a suitable manner which takes the present state of all other points in dispute between the two governments, and which, from its importance, is calculated essentially to change, in their whole extent, the political relations between the two countries.

"At the same time, to give a proof of the peaceable & moderate sentiments which characterize the conduct of the Spanish government, I am acquaint your excellency, that his majesty has, in charging me to communicate to his minister at Washington the declared rupture of the negociations, has likewise commanded me to inform him, that if the government of the United States had given or should give the only satisfaction which the circumstance admits of, and which his majesty may expect from the justice and probity of that government, he may in this case continue the negociations begun, without applying to his majesty for new orders to authorize him to continue them.

"In making to your excellency this communication, I cannot omit to state to you how painful it has been to me, that this unexpected obstacle should occur just at the time when I flattered myself with the hope of seeing the political relations, and the most perfect harmony between the two governments, re-established upon solid and durable foundations. I renew to your excellency the assurance of my distinguished respect, and pray to God to preserve your excellency many years.

"Your excellency's
JOSEPH PIZARO."

A New Town.

THE advantageous situation of a tract of land on the East side of Fort Wellington, in Upper Canada, and directly opposite the American town of Ogdensburgh, has induced the Proprietor to have the same Surveyed and laid out into regular Streets and Lots, for the purpose of establishing a town, to be called WELLINGTON, in which the lots will be let on building Leases, for a term of twenty one years.

By the plan adopted, every lot in town will have the singular advantage of being not only a corner lot, but also of being bounded by streets on three sides, and giving to every dwelling house in town a southern aspect, with a full view of the Harbour and Shipping, and of the opposite town of Ogdensburgh and the surrounding country.

The Harbour is a bay of the St. Lawrence formed by projecting points of land, which will effectually shelter the wharves and shipping from the current of the river and from the floating ice, so frequently destructive in other parts of the river,—It is extensive and commodious, affording good anchorage with sufficient depth of water for all descriptions of vessels that navigate the river.

When twenty families are settled in the town, the proprietor will engage to build a Church and School House for their use.

The situation being in the midst of a populous and highly cultivated country, will always ensure a cheap & well supplied market, and afford an extensive field for country trade, and is particularly well situated for the lumber & transport business.

For further particulars, apply to Wm. Allan Esq. of York, Thos. Dickson Esq. of Queenston, Allan M'Lean Esq. of Kingston, L. P. Sherwood Esq. of Brockville, Hamilton Walker Esq. of Prescott, and Archd. M'Lean Esq. of Cornwall, with whom plans of the town are deposited for inspection.

Mr Walker of Prescott is particularly instructed, and authorized to prepare Leases.

DOCUMENTS

Referred to in the President's Message at the commencement of the second session of the Fifteenth Congress.

Mr. Rodney to the Secretary of State.

Washington, Nov. 5, 1818.

Sir—I have the honor to present the report herewith enclosed, agreeably to the desire of Mr. Graham, who on reflection, preferred submitting some additional remarks, in a separate paper.—For this purpose, two of the documents referred to in the report remain in his possession—Dr. Fune's outline of events in the United Provinces since the revolution, and the manifesto of independence by the congress at Tucuman.

I have the honor to be,
With great respect,
Your most obed't serv't,
(Signed) C. A. RODNEY.

Hon. John Q. Adams, secretary of state.

Mr. Rodney to the Secretary of State.

Sir—I have now the honor to submit to your consideration my report on the subject of the late mission to South America, embracing the information derived from the various sources within my power, so far as I had an opportunity of improving the advantages possessed.

With the history of the conquest of the Spanish possessions in America you must be familiar. They were principally, if not exclusively, achieved by private adventurers. When completed, a most oppressive system of government, or rather despotism, was established by the parent country.

These extensive regions were originally swayed by two viceroys. The dominions of Spain in North America were under the government of the viceroy of Mexico, and all her possessions in South America were subject to the control of the viceroy of Peru.

The remoteness of some parts of the country from the residence of the viceroy at Lima occasioned, in 1718, the establishment of another viceroyalty at Santa Fee de Bogota, in the kingdom of New Grenada. In 1731, New Grenada was divided, and a number of the provinces composing that kingdom were separated from it.—These were put under the jurisdiction of a captain general and president, whose seat of government was at Caracens.

In 1568, Chili was erected into a separate captain generalship; in 1778 a new vice royalty was established at Buenos Ayres comprehending all the Spanish possessions to the east of the Western Cordilleras and to the south of the river Maranon.

This immense empire seems, according to the laws of the Indies, to have been considered a distinct kingdom of itself, though united to Spain, and annexed to the crown of Castile. In this light it is viewed by Baron Humboldt in his essay on New Spain.

With some slight shades of difference in the regulations established by these governments, the prominent features of their political institutions exhibit a striking resemblance, as the general system was the same.

Their commerce was confined to the parent country, and to Spanish vessels exclusively——They were prohibited, under penalty of death, to trade with foreigners. The natives of Old Spain composed the body of their merchants. Though this part of the system had, previously to the revolution, been relaxed in some degree, particularly by the statute of free commerce, as it is styled, the relief was partial, and the restrictions continued severe & oppressive.

All access to the Spanish settlements was closed to foreigners, and even the inhabitants of the different provinces were prohibited from intercourse with one another, unless under the strictest regulations.

The various manufactures that might interfere with those of Spain were not permitted. They were prevented under severe penalties from raising flax, hemp, or saffron. In climates most congenial to them, the culture of the grape and the olive was prohibited. On account of the distance of Peru & Chili, and the difficulty of transporting oil and wines to these remote regions, they were permitted to plant vines and olives, but were prohibited the culture of tobacco. At Buenos Ayres, by special indulgence of the viceroys they were allowed to cultivate grapes & olives, merely for the use of the table.

They were compelled to procure from the mother country articles of the first necessity; and were thus rendered dependent on her for the conveniences of life, as well as luxuries. The crown possessed the monopoly of tobacco, salt and gunpowder.

To these oppressive regulations and restrictions was added an odious system of taxation. From the Indians, was exacted a tribute in the shape of a poll tax, or a certain servitude in the mines called the mita. A tenth part of the produce of cultivated lands was taken under the denomination of tythes. The alcavala, a tax varying from two & a half, to five per cent, on every sale & resale of all things moveable and immoveable, was rigidly exacted, though in some cases a commutation was allowed. Royal and municipal duties were laid on imports and on the tonnage, entrance and clearance of vessels, under the different appellations of almoxarifago, sea, alcavalla, ceras, consulado, armada, and armadilla. To these may be added the royal fifths of the precious metals, the most important tax in the mining districts. Besides all these, there were stamp taxes, tavern licenses, and sums paid for the sale of offices, of titles of nobility, papal bulls, the composition and confirmation of lands, with a number of others of inferior grade.

Under the Spanish monarchs, who had early obtained from the Pope the ecclesiastical dominion and thus had united in their royal persons all civil & religious authority, a most oppressive hierarchy was established with its numerous train of officers and orders, succeeded by the inquisition.

The posts of honor and profit, from the highest to the lowest, were filled almost exclusively by natives of Old Spain.

The principal code of laws, thus maintaining the supremacy of Spain over those distant regions, almost locked up from the rest of the world, emanated from the council of the Indies established by the king, and he was supposed to be always present. The royal receipts, the recopitations of the Indies, and the partidas furnished the general rules of decision; and when these were silent or doubtful, recourse was had to the opinions of professional men.

This system was generally executed by the viceroys, captains-general, and by the tribunals of justice, with a spirit corresponding with the rigorous policy that produced it. To this form of government the country had for centuries submitted with implicit obedience, and probably would have continued to submit much longer, but for events in this country and the changes in Europe. The sagacious minds of many able writers penetrating into the future, had predicted at some distant date, a revolution in South America, before that in North America had commenced.—From the period of the successful termination of our own struggle for independence, that of the inhabitants of the south, has been, with more confidence foretold; and there is reason to believe it has been hastened by this fortunate event. The conduct of Spain during the war of our revolution, was calculated to make a lasting impression on her colonies. This result was then foreseen by intelligent politicians; many were surprised that she could be so blind to her own interests, after she had on one occasion, manifested the strongest suspicion of Paraguay; for to her scrupulous jealousy of this power, the expulsion of the Jesuits from that country in 1750 is to be attributed.

A Son of Misfortune.—The following tale of distress, which we think has scarcely its parallel, was related at this office. An individual about 30 years of age, in tattered garments, presented himself to the Magistrate, and craved relief for his wife, who he said, was far advanced in pregnancy, and two small children. The Magistrate asked him to be more explicit, and say what had brought him to such a state of poverty and wretchedness as he now exhibited. The applicant, who had the language and manners of a gentleman, stated, that he was by profession a solicitor, and was a native of Birmingham. On his commencing practice he went on flourishingly, married a young lady with some property, and was as happy as he could wish. This, however, was of short duration. He purchased a small estate, but through the mismanagement of those employed to conduct it, the crops failed, a distemper seized his cattle, and in about two years he was compelled to dispose of it by auction. By this speculation he had suffered very considerably; but by a close attention to the duties of his profession he had nearly recovered his losses, when a merchant in London, in whose hands a great part of his property was invested, failed, and reduced him almost to beggary. This circumstance, together with a heavy domestic affliction (the loss of his mother and sister) had such an effect upon his mind, that he became for a time deranged.—After a lapse of about seven months, by the skill of his medical attendants he recovered, but the scene which presented itself to his restored senses had nearly nigh caused a relapse. He found his wife and two children in an obscure lodging, all suffering dreadfully from poverty and the scarlet fever, and with scarcely a friend to assist them. In this dilemma he applied to her friends for pecuniary relief; but they having taken offence at some imagined mark of disrespect, refused to see him. His own relations were dead, and not knowing what to do, and unable to procure employment even as a clerk in his own profession, he went as a laborer in a manufactory. Here, by attention and industry, he acquired the good opinion of his master, and in a few months, obtained more respectable employment.—He had a considerable salary, his wife and children recovered, and his prospects in life were once more beginning to brighten, when his new employer failed in business, and he was again cast on the world destitute of the means of support. With the little money he had contrived to save, he brought his wife and children to London, and in a short time was fortunate enough to obtain a considerable deal of practice as an attorney about the police courts. This was about a year and a half ago; and for several months he found himself & family comfortably situated, and he looked forward with confidence to the enjoyment of affluence. His evil genius, however, still pursued him. He fell sick with the typhus fever, his wife and eldest child caught the dreadful malady, and being unable to attend his professional duties, a clerk, who had the management of his affairs, took advantage of the opportunity thus presented for his own advancement, and setting up for himself, succeeded in drawing away the practice of his master. The debility attendant upon the disease continued for four months to deprive him of the power of doing business, and all his money being spent, he was again reduced to utter despair. In this state of wretchedness he had continued ever since, and having parted with his last piece of furniture, he was at length compelled, however reluctantly, to make his sorrowful tale public, to save his wife and children from absolute starvation.

The Magistrate observed, that the tale of misfortune exceeded any thing he had ever heard, and was altogether so extraordinary that he almost doubted the truth of the statement.—The unfortunate man seemed hurt that his veracity should be doubted, and gave the readiest & most explicit answers to several interrogatories from the Magistrate. The whole train of misfortunes which he had described, happened within the short space of seven years—His wife was now in a very weak state, and six months advanced in pregnancy. The utmost commiseration for the poor man and his family seemed to prevail among the persons present, and they gave the best possible proof of it, by collecting, in a few minutes, a very considerable sum of money for them. The applicant, who said his name was Chanter, seemed overcome with this kindness, and left the office in tears. After his departure, a gentleman, determined to ascertain whether the applicant had told the truth, went in the course of the day to the house where he said he was lodging in a court in Drury-Lane, and found the now happy man with his family, exactly as he had described, seated at a comfortable meal. The change in their affairs seemed to have had a powerful effect upon them all, they expressed the deepest gratitude to their kind benefactors.—It is the intention of Mr. Chanter to proceed to Birmingham with his family, should he succeed in raising a sum sufficient to bear his expences to that place.—London Pap.

Distressing Case.—A gentleman in very respectable circumstances, had a son in business, for whom he was cautioner; but his son becoming bankrupt he was unable to answer the demands on him, and became bankrupt also——Immediately after this, one of the daughters died of a consumption. Soon after, another was seized with the same complaint, and followed her sister.——The son, having gone abroad, lost his health, and died also. The father wishing to remove another and a favorite daughter, now become doubly dear to him, to a little distance for change of air & scene, was conveying her in a gig along the side of the canal leading to Grangemouth, when the horse, becoming restive, fell with the gig into the canal—the young lady was drowned; he with difficulty got ashore. All these calamitous events happened within the short period of one year.—Perth Courier.

AGRICULTURAL.

Ephraim Buckett, of the township of Pilesgrove, in Salem county, New Jersey, has (this present season) raised upon one acre of ground, accurately surveyed, 110 bushels of Indian corn. The method of culture which he practised, was as follows:

1. Ploughing and ameliorating the ground as is usual.
2. By furrowing it at the distance of 7 feet one way.
3. Filling (or nearly so) those furrows with manure.
4. Covering up said manure by two furrows, one on either side.
5. Planting the seed corn in those two latter furrows, at the distance of 10 inches per grain as under.
6. Ploughing &c. said corn all one way.

N. B. The space between the rows for the tillage of the same was 5 feet—the space between the manure lay at rest was two feet, from which the weeds, &c. were kept cleansed.

From the foregoing example in the line of agriculture, we may readily perceive the great saving of labor and accumulation of interest derived to the farmer through the medium of proper management; for, by the foregoing method, the present crop, thus manured, fits the ground for a succeeding crop of winter grain. The usual method of stirring about the manure, exposes a great proportion thereof to the sun's beams, by which means the very life of the substance becomes rarified; losing, at the same time, the one half of its virtue.

The writer of the above is well acquainted with the quality of the soil from whence said crop was raised, and believes it in no degree superior to the second quality of land in this state.

A most singular circumstance took place lately at Knightsbridge barracks. One of the first troop of life-guard observed, in cleaning his horse, that the animal seemed particularly fond of having his head and face continually rubbed, in doing which the soldier discovered something moveable as he passed the cheek of the horse. He accordingly communicated the same to Mr. Bloxsam, the vetinary surgeon to the troop, who took considerable pains to examine it, and having made every necessary preparation he lanced it, in the hope of discovering the cause, when to his surprize, he extracted a grape shot, weighing nine ounces, from the horse's head, which he received at the battle of Waterloo, where the wound was dressed in the usual manner, after the engagement, and was considered only as a sword cut.—London paper.

MAHOGANY FURNITURE.

A Mr. Callender in England, has proposed a method of seasoning mahogany, for which the society for the encouragement of arts, have rewarded him. The following is his simple and efficatious process.

Having provided a steam tight wooden box, capable of holding conveniently such pieces of mahogany as are fit for tables, chairs, &c. he adapts to it a pipe from a boiler, by means of which he fills the box (after the mahogany is put into it) with steam, the temperature of which is about equal to boiling water. The time required for wood an inch and a half thick is about two hours; and pieces of this thickness are stated to become sufficiently dry to work, after being placed in a warm room or work shop for 24 hours.

By this treatment, the wood is somewhat improved in its general color and the blemishes which are technically called green veins are entirely removed. The eggs or larvæ, also, of any insects which may be contained in the wood will be destroyed by the heat.

By this process a considerable part of the capital vested in wood lying to season for many months may be saved—and a great deal of warping article made in mahogany is prevented.

BONAPARTE, like the English Arthur of glorious memory, it appears, had his round table also. It was left by Bonaparte in his precipate flight among his other household furniture, and has recently been sent to England as a present from Louis to the prince regent.—It is made entirely of porcelain with the exception of the legs, and its face ornamented with the portraits of conquerors.

A London paper mentions that an Iron Sloop had been lately launched from the works of Mr. Joseph Shaw, at Hunlet, which brought up to Leeds 32 tons of coals from Thorp-Hall colliery. This vessel, which measures 56 feet in length, by 9 feet 6 inches in breadth draws only 3 feet 4 inches of water, and would, if enlarged to the same size, carry 15 tons more than a common sloop built of wood.

From Europe.

LONDON, Oct. 13.

The urgency of other matter prevented us yesterday from adverting to several articles of political intelligence, to which some degree of importance attached. Among them, was the note addressed to the minister of the United States at Madrid, by the late prime minister of Spain, M. Pizarro, respecting the hostile proceedings of General Jackson in Florida. As a state paper, it does infinite credit to the writer. Its strength lies where, indeed, mental vigour must always be found, in the quality of its arguments, rather than of its language. The facts are powerful; the expressions temperate; and we really think it will require all the skill of American diplomacy, to give it such an answer as shall satisfy Europe that unprovoked aggression has been committed on a power, confessedly incapable at the moment, of adequately resisting the injury.—This protest is dated Aug. 29, and it states, that unless satisfaction is given by the American Government, as is therein required, the negociations actually in progress between the two countries, were to be suspended.

In looking at the foreign policy of the United States, it is difficult to discover in it any symptoms of a conciliatory character. England & Spain are the only two European nations with whom her own domestic interests can come in collision and her proceedings towards both have manifested any thing but an amicable spirit.—With respect to ourselves, indeed, we perfectly recognise the right of America to pass any laws apparently favourable to her own commerce, without consulting how those laws may affect our maritime pursuits. But between the possession of a right, and the expediency of exercising it, there is a wide distance. It is in reference to the latter principles alone that we should feel disposed to question the wisdom of the course pursued by the Washington Cabinet.

Destruction of the Limerick Theatre by fire.

Last night the Theatre Royal, Cornwallis street, was totally consumed by fire, which broke out between eleven & twelve o'clock; though the attendance of several engines was prompt, and the supply of water was considerable, yet the flames spread so rapidly, that the progress of them could not be effectually got under until the interior of the building was destroyed.

October 18.

It is said in a German paper, that Mr. Baring has cleared by his different French loans upwards of £1,800,000 sterling.

We believe it is at length decided, that Lord Ellenborough retires from the high judicial station where he has so long, & so honorably presided over the public administration of Justice in this country. The state of his lordship's health, we regret to add, is the immediate cause of this determination on his part. He will be succeeded, we understand, by Mr. Justice Abbott.

October 22.

The following article is extracted from the Courier of the Bas Rhin:—"An agent of one of the principal houses of Boston, in the United States of America, arrived here a few days ago, and set off almost immediately on his route to Germany. This agent is the bearer of authentic deeds for nearly two million of acres of land, of superior soil, situated in the states of Kentucky & Virginia; he is commissioned to sell them collectively or in lots, or to engage individuals to form an agricultural and manufacturing society, for the purpose of improving the land, and form establishments, which would be compensated by incalculable productions. The authority under which he acts leaves not the least doubt of the authenticity of his mission; and the stay which he intends making at Carlsruhe, will facilitate the means of obtaining information to those interested in this important concern."

The Genoa Gazette relates the following fact, which affords another proof of the excess to which jealousy may mislead the human mind:—"A man named Passadore, aged 36, who was recently admitted into the corps of Royal Carabiniers, being quartered at St. Pierre d'Arena, had formed an intimacy with a young female of that canton. He conceived that he had some cause to doubt of her fidelity, and all of a sudden his jealousy turned to fury. On the 5th of October, at seven o'clock in the evening, he called upon her, and thrust his sword through her body. He afterwards hastened to the barracks, and without any known motive, twice discharged his musket at the brigadier of his company, who was in bed with his wife. Not being badly wounded, the Brigadier leaped out of bed and effected his escape. The wretch then directed his murderous attack against his wife, and shot her dead with a pistol. Thus remaining master of the field of battle with arms & ammunition, Passadore barricadoed himself in one of the barrack rooms, threatened those who attempted to approach, and fired several times through the window into the street. A detachment of soldiers at length arrived, to take this ferocious villain into custody. The first of them who advanced he killed, and wounded four others, two of them mortally. The next morning, as they were preparing means which left the assassin but little hope of escaping, he appeared at the window dressed in the full uniform of his regiment, and after saluting the assailants, terminated, with a pistol, his life & his crimes."

Germany.—War!—The following are extracts from German papers received by the mail.—The sovereigns of Baden and Bavaria, both acceded to the holy alliance, yet they seem as well disposed to make war upon one another as if they were not bound by that sacred compact.

CARLSRUHE, Sept. 23.

We live here as in the midst of war. All the absent military are brought with the greatest haste in waggons, and for the most part go to the frontiers of the grand duchy. What all this means we do not know, & it would be too precipitate to believe the reports in circulation:—The order to call in the military came immediately from Grieshach.

HEIDELBERG, Sept. 25.

The Baden troops are assembled in great numbers here, and in the neighbourhood; they are ready for battle, though we do not know to what end, and against whom they are armed. Very strange reports, however, are in circulation, and if a certain case happens, important events may very probably take place in this neighbourhood.

From the Upper Rhine, Sept. 26.

All our regiments (Baden) have received orders to be ready to march at the first notice. It is now affirmed that the Landwehr also is to be called together, and that by the 1st October Baden will have 30,000 troops under arms. The immediate cause of this measure is not known.—Reports ascribe it to some movements which are said to have taken place among the troops of Bavaria. It is asserted that a strong corps of Bavarians is assembling in the province of Wurzburgh, and that the court of Baden has intelligence which gives cause to apprehend that a military occupation of the Palatine of the Rhine is intended.

From the United States.

From our correspondent—Washington city Dec. 5.

"You have seen, no doubt, in the National Intelligencer of to-day, the commencement of the proceedings in the trials of Arbuthnot and Ambrister. But the most interesting incident in the affair, deeply interesting as are the whole of the proceedings, which I have seen, that the court martial first sentenced Ambrister to be shot; but afterwards reconsidering the sentence, adjudged that he should be whipped and otherwise punished. Gen. Jackson, on considering the proceedings, approved the first sentence, and disapproved the second! [and Ambrister was shot the same morning, between the hours of 8 and 9 o'clock.] This, I am told, was within his power; but it is an exercise of power which has produced much excitement here. A motion in congress on the subject is spoken of, and would not surprise me." Mer. Adv.]

ROBERT BUTLER, Adj. Gen.

Fort St. Mark, 26th April, 1818.

The court convened pursuant to the foregoing order, when, being duly sworn, in the presence of the prisoner, and he being asked if he had any objections to any members thereof, and replying in the negative, the following charges and specifications were read, viz.

Charges against A. Arbuthnot, now in custody, and who says he is a British Subject.

Charge 1—Exciting & stirring up the Creek Indians to war against the United States, and her citizens, he (A. Arbuthnot) being a subject of Great Britain, with which the United States are at peace.

Specification—That the said A. Arbuthnot, between the months of April & July, or some time in June, 1817, wrote a letter to the Little Prince, exhorting & advising him not to comply with the treaty of Fort Jackson, stating that the citizens of the United States were infringing on the treaty of Ghent, and, as he believed, without the knowledge of the chief magistrate of the United States; and advising the Upper & Lower Creeks to unite and be friendly, stating that William Hambly was the cause of their disputes; also advising the Little Prince to write to the governor of New Providence who would write to his royal highness the Prince Regent, through whom the United States would be called to a compliance with the treaty of Ghent, and advising them not to give up their lands, under the treaty of Fort Jackson, for that the American citizens would be compelled to give up to them all their lands, under the treaty of Ghent.

Charge 2—Acting as a spy and aiding, abetting & comforting the enemy, supplying them with the means of war.

Specification 1—In writing a letter from the fort of St. Marks, dated 2d April, 1818, to his son John at Suwany, (marked A.) detailing the advance of the army under gen. Jackson, stating their force, probable movements, and intentions, to be communicated to Bowleggs, the chief of the Suwany towns, for his government.

Specification 2—In writing the letters marked B, without date, and C, with enclosures, 27th January, 1818, and D, called a "note of Indian talks," and E, without date, applying to the British government, through governor Cameron, for munitions of war, & assistance for our enemies; making false representations; and also applying to Mr. Bagot, British ambassador, for his interference, with a statement, on the back of one of the letters, of munitions of war for the enemy.

Charge 3—Exciting the Indians to murder & destroy! William Hambly & Edmund Doyle, and causing their arrest, with a view to their condemnation to death, and the seizure of their property, on account of their active & zealous exertions to maintain the peace between Spain, the United States & the Indians, they being citizens of the Spanish government.

Specification—In writing the letters marked F, dated 26th August, 1817, G. dated 13th May, 1817, and H. threatening them with death, alledging against them false and infamous charges, and using every means in his power to procure their arrest. All which writings & sayings excited, and had a tendency to excite, the negroes & Indians to acts of hostility against the U. States.

By order of the court.

J. M. GLASSELL, Recorder.

To which charges & specifications the prisoner pleaded not guilty.

The prisoner having made application for counsel, it was granted him; when the court proceeded to the examination of the evidence.

John Windsett, a witness on the part of the prosecution, being duly sworn, stated, that sometime before last July, the Little Prince received a letter signed by a Mr. Arbutinot, advising the upper parts of the nation to unite with the lower chiefs in amity; and stating, the best mode for them to repossess themselves of their lands would be to write to him, (Arbuthnot) and he would send their complaints to the governor of Providence, whence it would be forwarded to his Britanic Majesty, and he would have the terms of the treaty of Ghent attended to. He moreover stated his belief, that the encroachments on the Indian lands were unknown to the president of the United States. The witness also identified the signature of the prisoner in a letter to his son, marked A. and referred to in the 1st specification, in the 2d charge, and heretofore noted as the same with that sent to the Little Prince.

The witness, on being further interrogated, stated the language of the letters alluded to, to be, that the British government on application would cause to be restored to them their lands they held in 1811, agreeably to the terms of the treaty of Ghent.

Question by the prisoner. Who is the Little Prince, or is he known by any other name?

Ans. He is known by the name of Tustenukke Hopin, and is the second chief of the nation.

Question by the prisoner. Where is the letter you alluded to, or in whose possession?

Ans. It was left in the possession of the Little Prince when I last saw it.

Question by the prisoner. Has this Little Prince no other name than what you state?

Ans. Not that I know of.

Question by the prisoner. Do you swear that the letter alluded to was addressed to the Little Prince?

Ans. I do not. It was presented me by the Little Prince to read and interpret for him, which I did.

Question by the prisoner. Are you certain that the letter stated that the chief magistrate of the United States could have no knowledge of settlements made on Indian lands, or injuries committed?

Ans. The letter stated that to be the belief of the writer.

John Lewis Phenix, a witness on the part of the prosecution, being duly sworn, stated, with regard to the 1st specification of the 2d charge, that being at Suwany in the town about the 6th or 7th of April, he was awakened in the morning by Mr. Ambrister's receiving, by the hands of a negro, who got it from an Indian, a letter from St. Marks, at that time stated by Ambrister to be from the prisoner.

Question by the prisoner. Did you see that letter or hear it read.?

Ans. I did see the paper, but did not hear it read.

Question by the prisoner. Did you state that the letter was received by an Indian express?

Ans. So the black man that delivered it said.

A question being raised by member of the court as to the jurisdiction of the 3d charge and its specification, the doors were closed, and after mature deliberation, they decided that this court are incompetent to take cognizance of the offences alledged in that charge & specification.

Peter B. Cook, a former clerk to the prisoner, and a witness on the part of the prosecution, being duly sworn, stated that about December or January last, the prisoner had a large quantity of powder & lead brought to Suwany in his vessel, which he sold to the Indians & negroes; that, subsequent to that time, which he cannot recollect, Ambrister brought for the prisoner in his (the prisoner's) vessel, nine kegs of powder and a large quantity of lead, which was taken possession of by the negroes. The witness also identified to the following letters, referred to in the foregoing charges & specifications, marked A, B, C, D, E, F, G, & H, as being the prisoner's hand writing; also the power of attorney No. 1, granted by the Indians to A. Arbuthnot.

Letter from A. Arbuthnot to his son J. Arbuthnot, dated Fort St. Mark's, April 2, 1818—9 o'clock in the morning.

Dear John—As I am ill able to write a long letter, it is necessary to be brief. Before my arrival here the commandant had received an express from the governor of Pensacola, informing him of a large embarkation of troops, &c. under the immediate command of gen. Jackson; and the boat that brought the despatch reckoned 18 sail of vessels off Appalachicola. By a deserter that was brought here by the Indians, the commandant was informed that 3000 men, under the orders of Gen. Jackson, 1000 foot & 1600 horse, under Gen. Gaines, 500 under another general, were at Prospect Bluff, where they are rebuilding the burnt fort; that 1000 Indians, of different nations, were at Spanish Bluff, where they are rebuilding another fort, under the directions of American officers; that so soon as these forts were built they intended to march. They have commenced.—Yesterday morning advice was received that they appeared near——and taken two of the sons of M'Queen and an Indian. Late in the afternoon 3 schooners came to anchor at the mouth of the river, and this morning the American flag is seen flying on the largest.

I am blocked here; no Indians will come with me, and I am now suffering from fatigue of coming here alone.

The main drift of the Americans is to destroy the black population of Suwany. Tell my friend Bolech, that it is throwing away his people to attempt to resist such a powerful force as will be down on Sahwahnee; and as the troops advance by land, so will the vessels by sea. Endeavor to get all the goods over the river in a place of security, as also the skins of all sorts; the corn must be left to its fate. So soon as the Sahwahnee is destroyed, I expect the Americans will be satisfied and retire; this is only my opinion, but I think it is conformable to the demand made by Gen. Gaines to king Hatchy some months since: in fact, do all you can to save all you can save, the books particularly. It is probable the commandant will receive some communication from the vessels to-day, when he will know more certainly what are their motives in coming off the fort. I think it is only to shut up the passage to the Indians. Twenty canoes went down yesterday, and Mickasucky is said to be stopped. Billinia & Hamaldo Mico were here last night, to hear what vessels they saw, remove all their cattle & effects across St. Mark's river this morning, and perhaps wait their return for the event.

I have been as brief as I can to give you the substance of what appears to me that cannot be doubted; to enter into details in the present moment is useless. If the schooner is returned, get all the goods on board of her and let her start off for Mountier creek in the bottom of Cedar Key Bay. You will there only have the skins to hide away. But no delay must take place, as the vessels, will, no doubt, follow the land army, and perhaps even now some have gone round. I pray your strictest attention for the more that is saved will be exceutfully more to your interest. Let the bearer have as much calico as will make him two shirts, for his trouble; he has promised to deliver this in 3, but I give him 4 days.

I am yours affectionately,

A. ARBUTHNOT.

From A. Arbuthnot to Charles Cameron, governor of Bahamas.

Sir—Being empowered by the chiefs of the lower creek nation to represent the state of their nation to your excellency, that you may be pleased to forward the same for the information of his majesty's government—to whom alone they look for protection against the aggressions and encroachments of the Americans; I beg leave to submit to your excellency the enclosed representation, humbly praying that your excellency will be pleased to take an early opportunity of forwarding the same to Great Britain.

I am instructed by Bowleck, chief of the Sahwahnee, to make the demand herein enclosed, he never having had any share of the presents distributed at Prospect Bluff, though he rendered equally essential services as any of the other chiefs to the British cause while at war with America, and was at New-Orleans with a part of his warriors. His frontier being more exposed to the incursions of the back Georgians, who enter his territory and drive off his cattle; he his obliged to have large parties out, to watch their motions and prevent their plundering. And, being now deficient of ammunition, he prays your excellency will grant his small demand, humbly submitting the same.

I have the honor to be your excellency's most humble servant,

A. A.

The humble representation of the chiefs of the Creek nation to his Excellency the Governor Cameron.

First, we beg leave to represent, that Edmund Doyle & William Hambly, formerly clerks, at Prospect Bluff, to Messrs. Forbes & Co. and who still reside on the Appalachicola river, we consider as the principal cause of our present troubles & uneasiness. Hambly was the instrumental cause of the fort at Prospect Bluff being destroyed by the Americans, by which we lost the supplies intended for our future wars. Since then, both these men have kept their emissaries among us, tending to harass & disturb our repose, and that of our brethren of the middle & upper nation; they spread among us reports that the Cowetas, aided by the Americans, are descending to drive us off our land; they equally propagate false.

Sir—The enclosed, containing matter of serious moment, and demanding the immediate attention of his excellency the British ambassador, I trust he will, for this time, forgive the trifling expense of postage, which I have endeavored to prevent as much as possible, by compressing such matter in one sheet of paper. Should you sir, be put to any trouble or expense, by this trouble I gave you, by being made acquainted with the same, I will instruct Bain, Dunlee & Co. to order payment of the same. I have the honor to be, sir, your most obedient humble servant,

Sir—It is with pain I again obtrude myself upon your excellency's notice, but the pressing solicitations of the chiefs of the Creek Nation, and the deplorable situation in which they are placed by the wanton aggressions of the Americans, I trust, your excellency will take as a sufficient apology for the present intrusion.

Attack upon Gen. Lallemand's Establishment at Galveston.—From the New Orleans Gazette of the 7th ult. we copy the following Extract of a letter from a gentleman at Natchitoches, under date "the 28th of October:"—"Juan Bermudi and Jose Angel Navarro, arrived here last night, and confirm the news of the arrival at Atascosito, of the expedition which I alluded to in my last—it is composed of 500 men under the orders of Don Juan de Castepeda; 200 men had made themselves masters of a fort belonging to general Lallemand, and Castaneda had sent a flag of truce to Galveston, which had not returned at the departure of Beramindi. The ob- the expedition appears to have o destroy this fort and Galvezton, intercept as much as possible, ade of the Comanches. They left 100 men on the Trinity at a nation called the Salto, six leagues n the main road. It would seem that the commander does not wish to ap- proach nearer to the frontier for fear of desertions—four deserters have al- ready come in."

Out at last.—The day before yesterday the Aurora contained the following pa- ragraph, verbatim.

"Mr Monro and Mr. Madison, (who, alas! has buried all his greatness in the grave of his official influence!) and all who cling to them and their measures, are no more entitled to our confidence than lord Castlereagh and Mr. Canning are worthy of the suffrages of the sub- jects of England. Both the former and the latter uphold the same system of bank fraud and purchased boroughs, un- authorized taxation and universal oppres- sion." They both tread upon the necks of the people, while their minions pick our pockets of our money. They are both political highwaymen, who, by put- ting the pistol of law at the heads of the people, force them to disgorge the last cent of their earnings, to support them in luxury, splendor, and prostitution!

BRUTUS."

Now, this is a step beyond Mr. Noah. He only deals thus far, in gentle chas- tisement, and talks, with affected reluc- tance, of Mr. Monroe's errors and of his "great defects of judgment." He has not yet prepared his readers for the plain terms of "political highwaymen." But, be not impatient, gentle reader, all in good time. E. Post.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Baltimore, to his correspondent in this city, dated,

Nov. 29, 1818.

"Commodore Taylor's trial is going on but very slowly. The prisoner, as he is called, is not however, in prison, nor any ways confined, but lives at the Fountain-Hotel, in the same house with the judge who sits upon the trial, and eats at the same table with him. Tay- lor lives surrounded with the officers un- der his command, and others, his allies, carousing and toasting away with them in the presence of the judge who is to decide on the question of piracy, with which he stands charged, and involves no less a question than one of life and death. This, however, I suppose, is what is meant by liberty and equality. To what avail is the fairness of the most jury? Fifty five presentments are being concerned in fitting out privateers, have already been made, and there is reason to think there are more behind.

"Privateers continue coming and go- ing to this port as to their home. Two arrived this week, one of which landed at midnight 8 dray loads of gold and sil- ver."

BOUNDARY LINE.

We learn that William F. Odell, Esq. his Majesty's principal Surveyor in this quarter, under the 5th article of the trea- ty of Ghent, has returned to Frederick- ton with his party, having concluded the operations for the season. The ex- ploring Survey of the Line running due north from the source of the river St. Croix, was, we have heard, continued this year from the point where it was terminated the last season, at the great Wagunsis, a branch of the Restigouche, a river which empties itself into the Bay of Chaleurs, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and after crossing several other branches of the Restigouche, the Surveyors hav- ing met with a stream running westward into a lake which they supposed to be lake Metis, communicating with the St. Lawrence, this exploring Survey of the due North Line was here finally concluded, in pursuance of their in- structions.

They then proceeded down the river St. John, to commence an exploring Survey of the Highlands intersected by the due North Line to the southward of the St. John, of which Mars Hill, lying a short distance above the Presque Isle, is the most prominent. We understand that from the top of this mountain the Surveyors made the most full and satis- factory observations of the surround- ing country; and from all the informa- tion we have at present been able to collect, we have every reason to believe that it must be determined, that the Highlands truly intended by the treaty of 1783, as forming the boundary in this quarter, and those lying in this section of country to the southward of the St. John, and thence tending westerly to- wards the sources of the rivers Kennebec and Penobscot, emptying into the Atlan- tic Ocean; and of the Claudiere, emp- tying into the river St. Lawrence; in which case the due north line will stop, and the north west angle of Nova Sco- tia be found in this section of the coun- try; and the whole of the river St. John, including the valuable settlement on the Madawaska, and thereby the present communication with Canada, by this route, which is a matter of the last importance to the security and wel- fare of these North American Provinces, be preserved to his Majesty. We have been told that there were no Highlands discovered in the course of these ope- rations, to the southward of the river St. John, (where we believe it is contended on the part of the American Govern- ment, that they will be found) which will at all answer the description in the treaty of 1783.

Cornwall, Nov. 27, 1818.

The following Address from the Township of Cornwall, has been forwarded to His Excel- lency the Lieutenant Gover- nor, by ARCHIBALD McLEAN, Esqr. with a letter, in which he states, that the lateness of the season and bad state of the roads, have prevented its receiving a great number of other signatures.

ADDRESS

To His Excellency SIR PERE- GRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honora- ble Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor and Com- mander of His Majesty's Forces in the Province of Upper Cana- da, &c. &c. &c.

WE His Majesty's dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Inhabitants of the Township of Cornwall in the Eastern District, at a period when your Excellency is receiv- ing Petitions and Addresses from other Townships and Places within this Province, cannot re- concile it to ourselves to remain silent lest your Excellency might suppose, that We yield a tacit approbation to the sentiments contained in some of these ad- dresses from persons styling themselves, "Friends to In- quiry."

We cannot on this occasion conceal from your Excellency our fears, that Sedition and Dis- content, in the Garb of Patriot- ism, may have misled many of His Majesty's Loyal Subjects in this Province; but we trust, that whatever may be the plans, and however mischievous may be the advice of the Incendiary who has thus lighted the torch of Discontent, the good sense of His Majesty's Subjects will ulti- mately prevail, and point out to them ere too late, the Happiness which the Inhabitants generally enjoy under their present mild and considerate Government, and that the fancied Grievances which have lately been so loud- ly spoken of, may be discovered to be, as they really are, the mere creations of an Individual, industrious and desirous to stir up jealousy, distrust, discontent and disloyalty, in a Province, where, till his arrival, Confi- dence in the Government, Peace and Prosperity in all classes of the Community, and Loyalty, tried and confirmed, to His Ma- jesty's Person and Government, had reigned without interrup- tion. Against such a person, We beg to assure your Excellency, we shall always be upon our guard, and we observe with much pleasure, that your Ex- cellency has submitted the pro- ceedings which have already taken place in the Province, and which have originated with such an Individual, as a fit subject for Legislative Consideration.

While we have so recent and strong an instance of the anxiety of your Excellency, to preserve the Peace and promote the pros- perity of the Province, we can- not refrain from assuring your Excellency of our entire confi- dence in the wisdom of your Excellency's Administration of the Government, and our Con- viction that the Public Good is, and will be its primary object.

We beg your Excellency will do us the justice to believe, that Discontent and Disloyalty are terms unknown as applicable to us, and that amongst us, their Friends or Supporters will find neither countenance or support.

To which His Excellency was pleased to make the following re- ply:

GENTLEMEN,

Your loyal Address has af- forded me much satisfaction: not that I needed fresh proof of your devotion to the Constitu- tion, nor of your friendly dispo- sition to the government of your country; but it appears to me that you have adopted the best means of convincing the United Empire at large, that the Peo- ple of Upper Canada has still a claim to be distinguished not less for tranquil and neighbourly demeanor in Peace, than for a spirit of Loyalty and gallantry in War.

Your address will in a great measure remove the evil impres- sions which late events and late Publications must have created, and the continued existence of which must inevitably have robbed the Province of that ra- pid growth in power, which, re- sults from the acquisition of Eu- ropean emigration.

In this view, gentlemen, es- teeming it highly beneficial to the interests of the Province, I am particularly satisfied with your address.

DIED.

On Monday the 28th instant, Mr. William Marshall, a student at law in this town.

The circumstances of the death of this unfortunate young gentleman are peculiarly distressing to his friends and acquaintance.

On Sunday morning he breakfasted, as usual, with the family he resided with, but did not attend church; nei- ther, when they returned from thence did they find him at home; conceiving he might be with some young friends, & having noticed nothing to create alarm they were not uneasy at his absence.—The next morning they found he had been absent all night, and as he did not make his appearance at breakfast, an alarm was created, to which his me- lancholy appearance which had struck some of his companions, now gave ad- ditional grounds. After some search, he was found in a loft over the stable of the house he lived in. He was not dead, but the great loss of blood from wounds which, doubtless in a moment of insani- ty, he had inflicted upon himself and the cold of the preceding night, had nearly extinguished life. The best sur- gical assistance was immediately pro- cured; but though the wounds were as- certained not to be necessarily mortal, the fears of death, from loss of blood and exposure, were unhappily realized, very soon after his removal into the house. He discovered no sense and said nothing.

A paper was found in his pocket, writ- ten, it is supposed, on the Sunday morn- ing. It bespeaks the awful resolution he had taken, but gives no satisfactory solution of the reason that could have prompted it. It exhibits the most un- questionable evidence of insanity, appa- rently proceeding from the effect of a sense of the sacred duties required of us by our religion, rising in sudden gloom in his mind, at a moment, when from exter- nals, probably constitutional, it seem- ed to be particularly disposed to gloom. He recommends all those who think more of this life than the next, to reflect upon the uncertainty of life— says, "that he had been hurried on to ruin by want of reflection"—that the power of the devil cannot be withstood without recourse to religion" and con- cludes with a wish that he had read the bible more.

With this paper was found in his pock- et, a short letter, written to him by a female relation or friend in England, when he was about departing for this country, including some small tributes of esteem, and telling him, that "whether difficulties arose or not in his future ca- reer, he should always keep a firm trust in God, and be thankful to him for the great blessings he had received," and concluding, "let me earnestly entreat you, when you leave this your native land, not to forget to attend to religious duties; for if you do, you can never expect to prosper; you may for a time be noticed by the thoughtless, but you will never be respected by the good part of the community."

On this letter the unfortunate young man had written "miss by anticipation," and on another part of it "Oh had I but read this every day."

These papers were produced to the Coroner's Inquest, who, after hearing all the evidence, immediately returned a verdict of "Came to his death by his own hand, in a fit of insanity."

We will obtrude upon the public no expression of feeling upon the affecting fate of this unhappy youth, who, in the unfortunate disposition of Providence, has precluded that miserable tax, land of strangers—but we feel a melancholy sat- isfaction in adding, at the request of those to whom his conduct was most in- timately known, that they are aware of nothing in his situation or habits that could have produced unhappiness, or awakened such overwhelming reflec- tions—that on the contrary, he exhibit- ed a regularity and propriety beyond what may be seen in the lives of most of those whom youth and health too na- turally dispose to thoughtlessness.

CHURCH PEWS.

At a meeting of the heads of families and subscribers to the Church now in this town, held at the Church on Tues- day last, it was resolved

That a meeting shall be held in the Church on Saturday the 9th day of Ja- nuary next, for the purpose of selling the pews.

That previous to that day, the com- mittee shall ascertain the sum for which the Church is in debt, and apportion that debt among the pews, estimating the average price the double and single pews respectively shall sell for, to dis- charge the debt.

That that sum being so ascertained, the pews shall be put up accordingly, and sold to the highest bidder above that sum.

That the sums formerly paid by pew- holders in the old Church, shall be al- lowed them on account of any bid for the present pews; and subscribers to the Church, shall have credit to the amount of their subscriptions in any bid they may make for pews.

That one third of the purchase mo- ney for each bid, shall be paid down; another third in six months from the sale; and the remaining third at the ex- piration of a year. That on failure of such payments, the pew may be re-sold in ten days after the year's end, and the first deposit of one third forfeited.—No title to be given to any pew until the whole purchase money is paid.

That the ground rent for the pews shall be as formerly, to wit. two pounds per annum for double pews, and one pound for single pews. That a meeting of pew-holders shall be holden every se- ven years, on Easter Monday, to con- sider the expediency of increasing or diminishing the rent; and that the rent shall continue as now fixed, unless alter- ed by such meeting.

That the committee shall prepare a plan of the pews, shewing their situation and numbers, which shall be exhibited in the Church three days before the day of sale.

A. BOWMAN,

(Mr. Rodney's Report continued.)

The wars that arose from the French revolution, have produced, in Europe, changes of the greatest magnitude, which have had an immense influence on the affairs of South America. When Spain joined France against the combined princes, she exposed her distant possessions to British hostilities. The great naval power of England gave her ready access to the American colonies. Engaged in an arduous contest, she was prompted, by her feelings and interest, to retaliate on Spain the conduct she experienced from her during the war of our independence. Encouraged perhaps, by the counsels of her enemies, the first symptoms of insurrection, in the continental possessions of Spain, were exhibited in the year 1797, at Venezuela. These were succeeded by the attempts of Miranda in the same quarter, which were accompanied, or were followed, since the vascillating state of the Spanish monarchy, by revolutionary movements in Mexico, Grenada, Peru, Chili, and Buenos Ayres; and from which scarcely any part of the Spanish dominions in America has been entirely exempt.

The occurrences that led the way to the subsequent important events in the provinces of La Plata, were the invasion of the British, under Popham and Beresford, in the year 1806, and their expulsion, a few months afterwards, by the collected forces of the country, under Leniers and Puerydon. Those incidents fortunately gave to the people a just idea of their own strength; and they afterwards repelled, with a firmness and bravery that did them great honor, the formidable attack of the British under Gen. Whitlocke.

The wretched state to which Spain was reduced, by the policy, the power, and the art of Napoleon, the resignation of Charles the 4th in favor of Ferdinand the 7th, and the renunciation of both in favor of Napoleon, were productive of the most important results. They threw the kingdom into the greatest confusion. The alternate successes and disasters of the French armies produced a new era in Spain. The people, generally revolted at the idea of being governed by the brother of Napoleon, to whom he had transferred the crown. Juntas were established, who acted in the name of Ferdinand, then confined in France. These were substituted for the ancient Cortes, and the regular council of the nation, to which, in times of imminent danger, they ought to have recurred agreeably to their usages. Conflicting authorities produced a distracted state of affairs. In the scenes that ensued, the proper attention was not paid to the American provinces. Their conduct towards them was versatile and inconsistent: they were lost sight of or neglected, until it was too late. Conceiving they were abandoned by the parent state, they thought it justifiable to act for themselves. It was not very long before the inhabitants of Buenos Ayres, embracing the example of their brethren in Spain, established a junta, which assumed the reins of government, and finally, in the year 1810, sent off the viceroy Cisneros, and his principal adherents. For a summary of events subsequent to this period, until the time of my departure, I beg leave to refer to the outline subjoined, (Appendix A) from the pen of Dr. Funes, drawn up, in part, at my request. Without vouching for the perfect accuracy of the work, I think, from the information received, it will probably be found to contain, in general, a correct and impartial sketch of the prominent transactions and occurrences.

In perusing this interesting document, I have to lament, that its pages are marked with some cases of severity & cruelty, which seem almost unavoidable from great revolutions. It must however be consoling to observe, that they appear to have passed through the state, which might possibly have rendered examples necessary, and to have arrived, perhaps, at that stage, when, the passions becoming less turbulent, and the people more enlightened, a milder system may be expected to prevail.

The dissentions have produced most of their calamities. In such seasons they were naturally to be expected. But their disputes have been principally useful, by the prudent and energetic measures of the Congress, which commenced its sittings in Tucuman in the year 1815, and adjourned in the year following from thence to Buenos Ayres, where it remained in session, occupied with the task of forming a permanent constitution. This respectable body, besides acting as a convention, or a constituent assembly, exercises temporarily legislative powers. Their sittings are public, with a gallery of audience, for citizens and strangers. The debates are frequently interesting, and are published every month for the information of the people.

The dispute with Artigas, the chief of the Orientals, has not been adjusted. This, with a certain jealousy of the superior influence of the city of Buenos Ayres on the general affairs of the provinces; the conduct of the government of Buenos Ayres, towards the Portuguese, and the high tariff of duties, which I understand have been since reduced, appeared to constitute the principal cause of dissatisfaction at the time of my departure.

The declaration by Congress of that independence, which they had for many years previously maintained in fact, was a measure of the highest import once, and has been productive of an unanimity & decision before unknown. This must of their wishes, was only to be reached by slow and gradual progress. The public mind had to be illumined on the subject by their pulpits, their presses, and their public orations. The people were to be prepared for the event. When the season arrived, they cut the knot which could not be untied. The declaration of independence was adopted in the directorship of Mr. Pueyrredon, on the ninth day of July, 1816. It was succeeded by an able exposition of the causes that extorted it, to justify, to their fellow citizens and to the world, the measure they had deliberately voted to support with their fortunes & their lives.

Believing the latter paper might be thought worthy of perusal, a translation has been annexed (Appendix B.)

The salutary influence of this bold & decisive step, was at once felt throughout the country. It gave new life and strength to the patriotic cause, and stability to the government. The victories of Chacabuco and Maipu, achieved by the arms of Chili and Buenos Ayres, have produced and confirmed a similar declaration of independence by the people of Chili, which is also annexed, (Appendix C,) and cemented the cordial union, existing between the confederate states. The consequence has been, that, within these extensive territories, there is scarcely the vestige of a royal army to be found, except on the borders of Peru.

Having thus, in connection with the succinct account given by Dr. Funes, traced the principal events, since the revolution in Buenos Ayres, I shall proceed to state the result of the information received, according to the best opinion I could form, of the extent, population, government and resources of the United Provinces, with their productions, imports, and exports, trade and commerce.

The late vice-royalty of Buenos Ayres, of which that city was the metropolis, was by many considered the largest, as well as the most valuable of all the Spanish dominions in South America, extending in a direct line, from its north to its south boundary, a distance of more than two thousand miles: and from its eastern to its western, not less than eleven hundred.

It was composed, at the commencement of the revolution, of the nine provinces, or intendencies following. Buenos Ayres, Paraguay, Cordova, Salta, Potosi, La Plata, Chechabamba, La Paz & Puno.

Watered by the great river La Plata and its numerous tributary streams, which afford an easy communication with countries of an immense extent, and furnishing an easy access to the treasures of South America, it has always been regarded by Spain, as one of her most precious acquisitions. Enjoying every variety of climate to be found between different and distant latitudes, and blessed with a large portion of fertile soil, it is capable of producing all that is to be found in the temperate or torrid zones. Immense herds of cattle and horses graze on its extensive plains, and constitute at this time, their principal source of wealth. The mines of Potosi are also included within its boundaries. There are no woods for a very considerable distance from Buenos Ayres. No forest trees are to be seen on the widely extended pampas, except at intervals a solitary umboo. After passing the Salado, in a northerly direction, the woods begin, and proceeding in the upper provinces, the hills appear, and mountains rise in succession, interspersed with valleys. On the east side of the rivers La Plata and Parana the country is said to be very fine. The Entre Rios, is represented as capable of being made a garden spot: and the Banda Oriental presents hills and dales, rich bottoms, fine streams of water, and at a distance from the great river, on the banks of the smaller streams, some excellent woodland. Between Santa Fe and Monte Video, the eastern part of the Cordilleras terminates on the river La Plata.

Since the revolution, five more provinces have been erected, making in all fourteen within the limits of the ancient vice royalty, viz. Tucuman, taken from Salta; Mendoza or Copo, taken from Cordova; Corrientes, Entre Rios, comprising the country between the Uruguay, and the Parana, and the Banda Oriental, or eastern shore of the river La Plata. The two last were taken from the province of Buenos Ayres which was thus reduced to the territory on the south side of that river. The subordinate divisions of the country with the principal towns, will be found in the appendix to this report, with a account of the produce, or manufactures of the different districts.—(Appendix D.)

Of the fourteen provinces into which the ancient vice royalty is now divided, five were, at my departure, principally occupied by the royal forces, (which, in consequence of the victory of Maipu, were expected soon to retreat to Lower Peru,) or partially under their influence, viz. Potosi, La Plata, Cochabamba, La Paz, and Puno; and the nine following, independent de facto of Spain were in possession of the patriots, viz. Buenos Ayres, Paraguay Mendoza, Salta, Corrientes, Entre Rios, and Banda Oriental. But Paraguay of Santa Fee are independently of Buenos Ayres, though Paraguay is not on unfriendly terms with them, and it is hoped by some will before long join the union. Entre Rios and the Banda Oriental, under general Artigas in the character of chief of the Orientals, are in a state of hostility with Buenos Ayres.

Monte Video, the capital of the eastern shore, was occupied by a Portuguese army, and a squadron of ships of war from Brazil blockaded the ports of Colonia and Maldonado, and prohibited the entrance of neutral vessels, unless they paid them the same duties on their cargoes, that they were charged on the importation of the goods when landed in the country.

The territory of the United provinces is computed to contain one hundred and fifty thousand square leagues, though it probably exceeds that quantity. The lands occupied in the country, remote from the cities, are generally converted by their owners, into estanias, or large grazing farms for cattle, and chacras for growing grain. The small farms, or quintas, in the neighborhood of cities are in fine order. Those around Buenos Ayres, which furnish their market with an ample supply of fruit and vegetables, are, by irrigation, in the highest state of culture.

The population, exclusive of the Indians, is now calculated at about one million three hundred thousand; but, adding the civilized Indians only, who are of great importance, it would in all probably exceed two millions.

The whole population consists of natives of old Spain, and their descendants born in the country, or, as they style themselves South Americans; of Indians, civilized, or uncivilized with different "casts," or mixed blood; of Africans, and descendants, or negroes and mulattoes.

I could not ascertain, with satisfaction, the population of the different provinces the province of Buenos Ayres contains about one hundred and twenty thousand, whilst the population of Entre Rios & Banda Oriental is computed at fifty thousand.

The city of Buenos Ayres contains a population of sixty thousand. The inhabitants of this place appear to be amiable, and an interesting people. They are considered brave and humane; possessing intelligence, capable of great exertions and perseverance, and manifesting a cheerful devotion to the cause of freedom and independence.

There is also a certain mediocrity and equality of fortune prevailing among them, extremely favorable to a union of the popular sentiment in support of the common weal. Many industrious mechanics, and enterprising merchants, are, however increasing their estates, and adding to the stock of capital in the country.

The people of the province of Buenos Ayres, residing out of the city, are, generally speaking, poor, and rather indolent: though a hardy race, and when excited to action, they become zealous defenders of the liberties of their country. They are capable of great improvement, and under the influence of a good example, when a change takes place in their habits and manner of living, they bid fair to become useful and industrious citizens.

The inhabitants of Cordova are said to be more superstitious, and more industrious, but less patriotic. This is principally attributed to the loss of the trade with Peru, occasioned by the revolutionary war.

Tucuman, I was informed, possessed an excellent population.

The people of Mendoza, or Cuyo, are moral, industrious and patriotic. They have sacrificed largely at the shrine of independence, supporting with zeal and confidence, the cause of their country; whilst the citizens of Santa Fe are represented, as immoral and insubordinate, and manifesting, on most occasions, an extreme jealousy of their neighbors.

The population of Entre Rios and Banda Oriental is perhaps not inferior in value to that of Buenos Ayres. Nor is it deficient in military skill, particularly in carrying on a partizan warfare, for which its troops are admirable adapted. Their other good qualities have been probably somewhat impaired by the system pursued in that quarter, where they have been compelled to give up every thing like civil revocations, and to continue without any regular kind of government, under the absolute control of a chief, who, whatever may be his political principles, or professions, in practice concentrates all power, legislative, judicial, and executive, in himself.

A New Town.

THE advantageous situation of a tract of land on the East side of Fort Wellington, in Upper Canada, and directly opposite the American town of Ogdensburgh, has induced the Proprietor to have the same Surveyed and laid out into regular Streets and Lots, for the purpose of establishing a town, to be called WELLINGTON, in which the lots will be let on building Leases, for a term of twenty one years.

By the plan adopted, every lot in town will have the singular advantage of being not only a corner lot, but also of being bounded by streets on three sides, and giving to every dwelling house in town a southern aspect, with a full view of the Harbour and Shipping, and of the opposite town of Ogdensburgh and the surrounding country.

The Harbour is a bay of the St. Lawrence formed by projecting points of land, which will effectually shelter the wharves and shipping from the current of the river and from the flooting ice, so frequently destructive in other parts of the river.—It is extensive and commodious, affording good anchorage with sufficient depth of water for all descriptions of vessels that navigate the river.

When twenty families are settled in the town, the proprietor will engage to build a Church and School House for their use.

The situation being in the midst of a populous and highly cultivated country, will always ensure a cheap & well supplied market, and afford an extensive field for country trade, and is particularly well situated for the lumber & transport business.

For further particulars, apply to Wm. Allan Esq. of York, Thos. Dickson Esq. of Queenston, Allan M'Lean Esq. of Kingston, L. P. Sherwood Esq. of Brockville, Hamilton Walker Esq. of Prescott, and Archd. M'Lean Esq. of Cornwall, with whom plans of the town are deposited for inspection.

Mr Walker of Prescott is particularly instructed, and authorized to prepare Leases.

GEORGE CROOKSHANKS.

York, 16th Dec. 1818.—tf. 51.

From the United States

CURRACOA, Nov. 7.

His majesty's brig Swallow of 18 guns, Capt. Lieutenant Bolken, sailed on Wednesday morning, having under her convoy the trade for Cabello and La Guayra.

By the return of the schooner Juliana, one of the vessels which went under convoy of his Majesty's brig Swallow, we learn the following particulars:—

Early in the morning of the 5th, the day after the convoy sailed, whilst off Coraire, two strange sail were descried in a south east direction standing towards the fleet: they soon proved to be a very fine brig & a large schooner, quite new.—The usual compliments of hoisting colours, and firing lee guns being over, a boat was sent from the Swallow, with an officer, on board the strange brig, then under Brion's flag, who was informed by her captain that they belonged to a squadron of five vessels ordered to blockade La Guayra & Puerto Cabello by Admiral Brion. Immediately after the officers had quitted the brig, both vessels bore up towards the Juliana, and it was expected that they would board her, but they contented themselves with asking what port she was bound to, and on the master answering for La Guayra, the captain of the Independent brig replied, in good English, "you shan't go to La Guayra," and immediately repeated the same in Spanish. The schooner Harmony, of this port, & the Spanish armed brig Perigunon, and another schooner, being at this time far to leeward, the independent vessels made sail towards them, and previous to sun-down they were seen to be close up with these three vessels. It is understood that Capt. Bolken, notwithstanding the said blockade of Puerto Cabello & La Guayra, intended to continue his voyage, and see the vessels under his charge safely into their ports of destination.

Late last evening the arrival of the Spanish schooner N. S. del Carmen, Spanish accounts of the fate of the brought in Harmony, & brig Perigoun, schooner H[illegible] about noon on the 5th. It appears that [illegible] vessels came up with the Independent v[illegible] Carmen, and the Harmony & N. S. de[illegible]argo of N. S. after capturing both, the c[illegible]ually of del Carmen consisting principally of flour, was taken out and put on board the Harmony, and her crew, with the exception of two men who entered into the service of the Independents, were put on board the N. S. del Carmen, as also Mr. Rutgers, a passenger, and the Harmony ordered for Margarita. About six o'clock in the evening the Independent vessels stood for the Perigoun, the captain of which had run her ashore on the main; and yesterday morning the boats of the Patriot vessels were sent to board her, but before they could reach the wreck the captain ordered her to be blown up. Such are the accounts that have reached us, and which we hasten to lay before the public.

His Majesty's frigate Euradice, capt. Peyton, sailed this morning to join his Majesty's brig Swallow, for the protection of the convoy. Forty men belonging to the Euradice, having been put on board the Swallow, her complement has been completed from the merchant vessels in the harbour. A detachment of 50 men from the garrison were sent on board to act as marines, should it be found necessary to have recourse to hostile measures.

Nov. 21.

The American brig George Washington, capt. Noah Pratt, 4 days from Margaretta, arrived in this harbor on Wednesday afternoon. This vessel sailed from New York in August last, for the Havana, with a cargo consisting principally of flour, but finding no market there, she sailed again for La Guayra, and on the 12th of October was boarded by the independent privateer Brutus, commanded by capt. Joli, who ordered her for Margaretta, under the pretext that the port of La Guayra was in a state of blockade. At Margaretta the cargo was formally condemned by a court of admiralty, of which Gen. Arismendi was president, it being considered as property belonging to the enemy, in consequence of the consignees at Havanna having consigned the vessel to a merchant at La Guayra. The brig was, however, released and the amount of freight from New-York to La Guayra awarded to be paid in the currency of the island, which is from 25 to 30 per cent below par. Capt. Pratt having protested against the seizure of his cargo, sailed for this island on Sunday last.

On Saturday the 14th, a dispatch was received by admiral Brion from Lord Cochrane, stating that his lordship had arrived at the Testigos, (a small island to windward of Margaretta,) with 4 vessels under his command, and that Sir Gregor M'Gregor sailed from England at the same time with his lordship, with 3000 men to join the independants of Venezuela. Immediately on the receipt of this news at Margaretta, a discharge of artillery, from the batteries & vessels of war, followed by the ringing of bells, &c. &c. announced the welcome tidings to the inhabitants.—Lord Cochrane's flag ship, a frigate of 44 guns had been struck by lightning a few days previous to her arrival at the Testigos, and the foremast somewhat injured.

Brion's squadron lying at Pamparar consisted of a frigate, pierced for 30 guns, but only mounting 22, two brigs of 18 guns each, four schooners of 10 guns each, and about 20 sail of feluchas of 1 gun each.

This force was destined for a secret expedition, and the precautionary measure of an embargo adopted at Pamparar, but which was taken off on the accounts of Lord Cochrane's arrival having reached Margaretta. His lordship was daily expected at that island, and it was supposed that on his arrival the combined forces of his lordship & admiral Brion would immediately make a descent upon some part of the main. It was not known who would command, but it was thought that admiral Brion would yield the point of seniority to his lordship.

Neither his majesty's frigate Euradice, nor the schooner Harmony had arrived at Margaretta when the George Washington sailed

The brig & schooner which captured the Harmony, are called L'Irresistible, of 14 guns & 100 men, Capt. J. D. Daniels; and Buenos Ayres, of 10 guns & 100 men, capt. Decatur, both fitted out at Baltimore. They do not belong to admiral Brion's squadron, nor do the independents of Venezuela acknowledge the flag of Artigas, under which the brig sails. These vessels were lately at Margaretta, and it was known to admiral Brion that they had been committing depredations, for which he intended to call them to an account should he fall in with them.

It is somewhat probable that the schr. Harmony was not sent to Margaretta, but most likely to some port or place in North America.

The Dutch brig Maria Ann, capt. Thomas E. Wood, belonging to St. Eustatia, was taken on her passage from Barcelona to La Guayra, by the brig Otonoko, capt Duval, but shortly after retaken by the Spanish frigate Nymph, which carried her either into La Guayra or Porto Cabello. Capt. Weed and his mate were carried to Margaretta and were loaded with irons. The Maria Anna had on board 4 male and a number of female passengers, the former were taken out of her and carried to Margaretta, where two of them, being Spanish officers, were executed the day after their arrival, and the others remained in uncertainty of what shall be their fate.

Extract of a letter dated St. Thomas, 12th September.

"A few days ago arrived here, capt. Brown, of the schr. Eliza of New York; this schooner was bound from here to Rio de la Hacha or St. Martha. Near the coast she was overhauled by a royal Spanish privateer, commissioned by the governor o. Rio de la Hacha, who wantonly fired into her after having taken in all sail. While the captain was in his boat, going from his schooner to the privateer, they were pouring volleys of musketry at him, and on boarding the Eliza, one of the Spaniards deliberately took aim at, and shot a Mr. Williams, part owner of the Eliza, through the heart. They then plundered the vessel, and carried her into Rio de la Hacha, where capt. Brown made a protest, and got a part of the things stolen from him restored; the schooner was so torn to pieces, that he had to sell her. I understand that capt. Brown has made the proper communications to the President of the United States, and I hope such a foul murder will not be suffered to pass without proper satisfaction being given, and the injury, as far as possible, redressed to this unfortunate man."

ST. THOMAS, Sept. 18.

Since writing the foregoing, we have received accounts here from Hayti, stating that Boyer had totally defeated the army under Christophe, between St. Marks & Port-au-Prince—that Christophe left 4000 men killed on the field, &c."

ANTIGUA, Oct. 10.

A schooner about 80 tons burthen, apparently new, was discovered off English Harbor on Saturday last, bottom upwards. She was taken in tow by a London brig, the Statira, capt. Thomas, and the Earl Bathurst cutter, belonging to this port, with the design of bringing her in here; but this being found impracticable, the latter vessel, having no papers on board, cast her off and returned, leaving the Statira to carry her into Montserrat. There can be little doubt she was cut out in the late gale: and it is to be feared the whole crew have perished. No name could be seen upon her stern, but as several barrels of flour were floating near her, branded "Baltimore," it is very probably conjectured that she was last from that place.

JAMAICA, Oct. 29.

Accounts from Santa Martha state, that a Proclamation had been issued at that place directing all British subjects to leave it in the course of fifteen days from the 12th of this month. This measure was considered a most extraordinary one, after the assistance rendered Spain by Great Britain, in an arduous contest to compel the French to leave their territory.

A report was propagated at Santa Martha on the arrival of the last post from Sena Fe, stating that Great-Britain, intended furnishing vessels for the purpose of conveying 20,000 men to Buenos Ayres, and other ports of South America, to assist in quelling the Independents, and that she had also promised that she would entirely clear the seas of independent privateers.

From the neutrality all along observed by the British Government in the dispute between Spain and her colonies, the incorrectness of the above report will appear evident.

The ship Louisa, capt. Almeida, of 16 guns and 100 men, under the republican colours of Buenos Ayres, from the Capes of Virginia, going round Cape Horn on a cruize, was spoken with on the 10th Aug. lat. 14 36, long. 60.

By the Florida we learn that the schr. El Carmen, which sailed from this port for Santa Martha, under convoy of his Majesty's frigate Sybelle, has been seized at that port about 12 miles to leeward of her destination for landing rum, and sent to Santa Martha, where she was condemned, and the captain ordered to be shot.

Lieut. Colonel Francisco, Aid-de-Cam General Morillo, came passenger in the Florida. American Camels, a male & female, arrived in the brig Florida, and we believe the first of the kind ever seen in this island.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.

The treaty between Great Britain and this country, mention of which has been made in the public gazettes, has not reached this place. I learn, that by the treaty, an arrangement has been made respecting the fisheries on the British North American coast, leaving them to be enjoyed as they were under the treaty of '83; also respecting the Columbia river establishment, which is to belong to the United States, and respecting the slaves carried off by British cruisers in the late war. It likewise provides for fixing the boundary on our north western frontier; and for the continuation of the commercial convention of 1815, for the term of 10 years. Our foreign relations, with the exception of dilatory, vacillating Spain, are now on the most friendly footing."

Steam Batteries.—The navy commissioners have agreed with Messrs. Robert M'Queen & Co. proprietors of the Columbian foundery, and steam engine manufactory, of this city, for the engine & machinery for a new steam frigate, which government have authorised to be built under the law for the gradual increase of the navy.

The model of the vessel they have had prepared, and which has been forwarded to the commissioners, is entirely different from the Fulton battery, and will possess all the qualities of ordinary ships of war.—Nat. Adv.

From the Washington City Gazette.

The interest excited by a perusal of the documents in relation to the trial of Arbuthnot & Ambrister, appears to be universal; but the case of these individuals in being condemned according to the preposterous doctrine "that any individual of a nation making war against the citizens of any other nation, "they being at peace, forfeits his allegiance, and becomes an outlaw and a "pirate," is, indeed serious and alarming at this moment. That we should have set the example of carrying these principles into effect, cannot be too much regretted. What will the royal Spanish authorities say to this? They need no further justification for putting to death every stranger that may have stepped into the ranks of the patriots, made prisoners. It is truly a most unfortunate application of the principles set forth by Gen. Jackson, and may tend to do more mischief to the cause of liberty, than it may ever be in our power to repair.

Calcutta papers, to the 27th of July, are received in Newport, by the arrival of the brig Stephen, Capt. Smith, in 121 days from Calcutta. It is stated, that a large expedition was fitting out at Calcutta, to proceed to the Island of Ceylon. The first division of transports, with 3,000 troops on board, sailed on the 25th of July, and Capt. S passed them at Sangor. Two ships of war, with troops on board, were to sail in a few days after Capt. Smith.

The Stephen also anchored at St. Helena on the 21st of October, for a supply of water. The Conqueror of 74 guns, Rear-Admiral Plampin, two 28 gun ships, and four brigs, were laying there. Capt. Smith was informed by the British Officers, that Bonaparte had not been out of his house for several months, but enjoyed good health; that he still continued very reserved, and treated the British Officers commanding at that Island, with the greatest indifference. Every article of provisions was extremely scarce and high at St. Helena, and the inhabitants were experiencing great distress on account of the scarcity.

The Northern Canal.—It is stated in the Albany Daily Advertiser, that the digging and excavating of the Northern Canal, in its whole extent from Fort Edward to Whitehall, with some trifling exceptions, have been completed; and that a doubt no longer remains, that the Canal will be finished, and a water communication will be opened between lake Champlain & the Hudson river, before the close of another season.

Execution of Ambrister & Arbuthnot.—A writer at Nashville, in attempting to justify Gen. Jackson in executing these men, asserts, that "the General so far from regretting the course he had adopted, had publicly declared, that he was only sorry that he had not hung up the governor of Pensacola, & the commandant of St. Marks!"

MORISTOWN, Nov. 26.

Extraordinary Occurrence.—A correspondent writes us from Easton, in Ohio, giving the following account, as a fact, of which he was a witness, and which if we are not mistaken we have seen mentioned by some of the papers some time since:

He states, that a Mr. Peter Fleming, in the fore part of the season, in digging a well for the use of his brick yard, after penetrating 33 feet, suddenly broke through into a vein of water which immediately rose upon the two workmen, at such a rate that it was with difficulty they escaped being overwhelmed with it; it continued to rise so rapidly that in 30 minutes it ran over the top of the ground; the mouth of the well was immediately bedded with a rough clay, planked over, and a pumstock about four feet high inserted, which has ever since continued to discharge as much water as would run from an inch and a half hole; and this at a time when most of the wells in that part of the country have been dry.

From Gen. Gaines to the Seminole Chief.

To the Seminole chief: Your Seminoles are very bad people. I don't say whom. You have murdered many of my people, and stole my cattle and many good horses, that cost me money, and many good houses, that cost me money, you have burnt for me: and now that you see my writing, you will think I have spoken right. I know it is so; you know it is so; for now you may say, I will go upon you at random; but just give me the murderers and I will show them my law, and when that is finished and past, if you will corral about any of my people, you will see your friends, and if you see me you will see your friend. But there is something out in the sea, a bird with a forked tongue; whip him back before he lands; for he will be the ruin of you yet. Perhaps you do not know who or what I mean—I mean the name of Englishman.

I tell you this, that if you had not given me up the murderers who have murdered my people, I say I have got strong warriors with scalping knives, sad to relate. You have a great many of my black people among you, at Sabawhee. If you give me leave to go by you against them, I shall not hurt any thing belonging to you.

(Signed) Gen. GAINES.

From King Hatchy to Gen. Gaines, in answer to the foregoing.

To General Gaines: You charge me with killing your people, stealing your cattle, and burning your houses. It is I that have cause to complain of the Americans. While one American has been justly killed while in the act of stealing cattle, more than four Indians have been murdered while hunting, by these lawless freebooters. I harbor no negroes. When the Englishmen were at war with America, some took shelter among them, and it is for you white people to settle those things among your selves, and not trouble us with what we know nothing about. I shall use force to stop any armed Americans from passing my towns or my lands.

(Signed) King HATCHY.

"Note of Indian Talks."

In August, Capp had a letter from Gen. Gaines, in substance as annexed, No. 1, and returned the answer as by No. 2. Nothing further was said on either side. The end of October, a party of Americans, from a fort on Flint river, surrounded Fowl Town during the night, and began burning it. The Indians then in it fled to the swamps, and in their flight had three persons killed by fire from the Americans: they rallied their people, and forced the Americans to retire some distance, but not before they had two more persons killed. The Americans built a block house or fort, where they had fallen back to, and immediately sent to the fort up the country, for assistance, stating the Indians were the aggressors; and also settled with Inhemockko for the loss his people had suffered, at the same time sending a talk to King Hitchy, by a head man (Apiag) that he would put things in such a train as to prevent further encroachments, and get those Americans to leave the fort. But, no sooner was the good talk given, and before the bearer of it returned home, than hundreds of the Americans came pouring down on the Indians; roused them to a sense of their own danger: they flew to arms and have been compelled to support ever since. It is not alone [illegible] country, but by vessels entering Appalachicola river with troops, and boats are pouring in to the Indian territory; and, if permitted to continue, will soon overrun the whole of the Indian lands. From the talk sent king Hatchy by governor Mitchell, I am in hopes that those aggressions of the Americans in the Indian territory are not sanctioned by the American government, but originate with men devoid of principle, who set laws and instruction at defiance, and stick at no cruelty and oppression to obtain their ends. Against such oppressions the American government must use not only all their influence, but if necessary, force, or their names will be handed down to posterity as a nation more cruel and savage to the unfortunate Aboriginies of this country, than even were the Spaniards in more dark ages to the nations of South America.

The English government, as the [illegible] cial protector, on whom alone they rely for assistance, ought to step forward and save these unfortunate people from ruin; and as you, sir, are appointed to watch over their interests, it is my duty, as an Englishman, and the only one in this part of the Indian nation, to instruct you of the talks the chiefs bring me for your information; and, I sincerely trust, as you will use the powers you are vested with, for the service and protection of those unfortunate people, who look to you as their saviour. I have written Gen. Mitchell, who, I heard, is an excellent man; and, as the acts as Indian agent, I hope his influence will stop the torrent of innovations and give peace and quietness to the Creek nation.

I pray your excellency will pardon this intrusion, which nothing but the impropriety of the English language, and my being thus, after having resided many years among the Americans, have not kept your excellency's most obedient servant,

From Cappahachico and Bonlack, to the governor Cameron.

To his excellency Gov. Cameron: I am with pain we are again obliged to intrude ourselves in your excellency's notice, in consequence of the cruel war we have been forced into by the irruptions of the Americans into the Indian lands. It will be first necessary to refer to your excellency, that one head man of Kinlajah, received a letter from General Gaines, in August last, a copy of which is enclosed, with the answer returned thereto. This was every thing we desired to have been a prelude to a plain determination on by the said General and General Jackson, to bring on troops and soldiers to drive us from our lands, and take possession of them; for, in the end of October, a party of American troops surrounded Fowl Town during the night, and in the morning began setting fire to it; making the unfortunate inhabitants fly to the swamps, and who, in their flight, had three persons killed by the fire of the Americans. Our Indians, rallying, drove the Americans from the town, but, in their exertions, had two more of their people killed. The Americans retired some distance, and built a fort or block-house to protect themselves, until the assistance they had sent for to the fort up the country, should arrive. A letter falling into the hands of General Mitchell, the Indian agent, which said the Indians to have been the aggressors, he suspected in truth, and, on enquiry, found it was the reverse; in consequence, he made satisfaction to Inhemocka, the chief of the Fowl Town, and his people, for the injuries they had sustained; at the same time desired a talk to be sent to our head chief, stating his wish to see all the Indians friends, and that in twenty days he would send and get the Americans to retire from the forts. But this had no effect on the lawless invaders of our soil; for, before the bearer of our talk could return home, he met hundreds of American Camels [illegible] The seeming to end to these troubles, necessity compels us to have recourse to arms, and our brethren are now fighting for the lands they inherit from their forefathers, for their families and [illegible] But what will our nations do [illegible] assistance? Our sinews of war are almost spent; and harassed as we have been for years, we have not been able to lay by the means for our extraordinary wants; and to whom can we look to for protection and support, but to those friends who have, at all former times, held forth their hands to uphold us, and who have sworn, in their late treaty with the Americans, to see our just rights and privileges respected and protected from insult and aggression? We now call on your excellency, as the representative of our good father, King George, to send us such aid, in ammunition, as we are absolutely in want of, and, as our brethen chief Hillis Hadjo informed, when in England, that whose ammunition was wanted, to enable us to protect our rights, your excellency would supply us with what was necessary.—We have applied to the Spanish officer at the fort of St. Marks, but his small supply prevented his being able to assist us, and we have only on your Letter from A. Arbuthnot to Col. Edward Nicholl.

Nassau, N. P. 26th Aug. 1817.

Lt. Col. Edward Nicholl—Sir: Especially authorised by the chiefs of the lower Creek nation whose names I affix to the present, I am desired to address you, that you may lay their complaints before his majesty's government.—They desire it to be made known, that they have implicitly followed your advice, in living friendly with the Americans, who are their neighbors, and no wise attempt to molest them, through they have seen the Americans encroach on their territory, burning their towns, and making fields where their houses stood. Rather than make resistance, they have retired lower in the Peninsula.—The town Euchalla-way, where Olis Micco was chief, is one instance of the encroachments of the Americans. This town is situated under the guns of fort Gaines, and Micco was desired to submit to the Americans, or his town would be blown to atoms; rather than do so, he retired, and is now living in the lower nation, and his fields, & even where the town stood, is ploughed up by the Americans.—They complain of the English government neglecting them, after having drawn them into a war with America; that you, sir, have not kept your promise, in sending people to reside among them; and that they have not some person or persons resident in the nation, to watch over their interest, they will soon be driven to the extremity of the Peninsula.—You our P. Mr. Hambly to watch over the day eek nation; but you hardly left the dred ion when he turned traitor, and was Tow by Forbes to take the part of the Astrafricans. His acting in us, of which the annex you a copy, will shew you what length he could go if he had the means. It is Hambly & Doyle who give the Indians all the troubles they experience. They send agencies among the lower Creeks, and make them believe the Cowettas, aided by the Americans, are coming to destroy them; thus both are put in fear, and their fields are neglected, and hunting is not thought of; I have endeavored to do away this fear, by writing the chief of the Cowetta towns, that they ought to live in friendly terms with their brethren of the lower nation, whose wishes were to be on good terms with them, and not listen to any bad talks, but to chase those that give them from among them. My letter was answered from the chief rather favorably; and I hope that the talk that was sent to the Red Warrior last June, will heal the difference between them.

Hillisjo arrived in my schooner, Ockfuskee, sound last June, and was well received by all the chiefs & others who came to welcome him home; in consequence of his arrival a talk was held, the substance of which was put on paper for them, and it was sent, with a pipe of peace, to the other nations. Hillisjo wished to return to Nassau with me, but I prevailed on him to stay in the nation, and to keep them at peace. I regret, sir, to notice this poor man's affairs, though by his desire. It appeared, that he arrived at Nassau a short time after had left it in January, and capt. W. being here, took charge of him, his goods & money, prevailing on the governor to h him stay with him, until he went down to the nation, which was his intention to do. Of the money received of governor Cameron, he had only given fifteen gity dollars, by capt. W. a barrel of rum, a bag of coffee, & a small keg of rum, and the interpreter Tougat informed me, that, when Hillisjo asked for an account, capt. W. refused it, saying, I would be useless to a man who could not read. He also misses two cases, one of which, he thinks, contains crockery. I have made enquiry of his majesty's ordinance store keeper, and he informs me, the whole were delivered to capt. W. They are therefore lost to Hillisjo.

I am desired to return Hillisjo's warm acknowledgements, for the very handsome manner you treated him in England, and he begs his prayer may be laid at the foot of his royal highness the Prince Regent. I left him and all his family well, on the 20th June.—Old Cappachimicco desires me to send his best respects, and requests, that you will send out some people to live among them, and all the land they took from Coshes shall be theirs. At all event, they must have an agent among them, to see that the Americans adhere to the treaty, and permit them to live unmolested on their lands. This agent should be authorised by his majesty's government, or he will not be attended to by the Americans. In the Gazettes of Georgia, the Americans report the Seminoly Indians are continually committing murders on their borders, and making incursions into the state. These are fabrications tending to irritate the American government against the poor Indians; for, during the time I was at the nation, there was only one American killed, and he with two others, were in the act of driving off cattle belonging to Boleg, chief of Suwany, whereas three men & a boy were killed, last June, by a party of American cattle stealers, while in their hunting camps. The boy they scalped, and one of Bowleg's head men was killed in St. John's river, in July. The backwood Georgians, and those resident on the borders of the Indian nation, are continually entering it, and driving off cattle. They have in some instances made settlements, and particularly on the Chocrohatchy river, where a considerable number have descended. (To be continued).

From the Saint Louis Daily Advertiser

Arbuthnot and Ambrister—The fate, the incidents of fate, of these wretched men may be ascribed to the defective organization of the military code of the U. States. It appears that the law officer, who is styled in the proceedings recorder, was taken from the general's staff, and probably wholly unacquainted with the responsible and delicate duties he undertook to discharge. No regular record of the proceedings of the court martial, was being stuck; many of the most common principles in the law of evidence, being frequently violated. Therefore it is, we find the court, on the face of record, or too, refusing to hear a witness on the part of the prisoner, because forsooth he was in confinement, and charged with similar crimes—Montreal Herald.

No one who properly estimates the ends of government, and the purposes for which laws are made, can review the proceedings in their trial, without most poignantly lamenting the mockery by which they were hurried to death. How could general Jackson, a lawyer, a judge, approve the proceedings of his court? Was it enough that he believed them to be incendiaries, instigators of Indian ravages, and leaders of ferocious negroes and savages? Nay, their guilt should have been ascertained according to law. Moreover, we most seriously doubt, whether a court martial could take cognizance at all of the cases of Arbuthnot and Ambrister. We find, in the charges and specifications, reference to any one of the rules and articles of war, nor any allegation that satisfactorily shows how the general (or himself authorized to put them on trial before such a tribunal.

Arbuthnot and Ambrister, residing and taken like the unfortunate Palm, murdered by Boisvert, by the authority of an independent nation, were not amenable to our laws; they could have been answerable to our country for their conduct, which cannot be admitted they ought to have been tried by the laws of England, known to our constitution, and not by military men unacquainted with the laws and principles which would direct a righteous decision.

From the same paper.

Arbuthnot and Ambrister.—I have just risen from the perusal of the trial of Arbuthnot and Ambrister, and though, warm with the indignation which a knowledge of the circumstances which attended that transaction will soon make universal, I am disposed to examine the question with candour and impartiality.

I find Arbuthnot been disposed to consider the extraordinary outcry against this occasion to the British papers, against Gen. Jackson, as one of the usual exhibitions of their spleen towards America, and as deserving no more attention than is commonly bestowed upon newspaper invectives against rival nations. I was not willing to believe that a court martial would have dared to be so claringly oppressive, and thought that enough for punishment in a case of that nature, was certainly just. But the repetition arising from the splendour of the talents of our officers, has given way to a statement of facts, made by the court and the General themselves, and I consider it the duty of every friend of justice and every lover of his country, to mark, by the full exposition of his sentiments, such arbitrary and unlawful proceedings with public disgrace.

From the manner given previous to the war, by the letters of Arbuthnot to the American agent for Indian affairs, to the British forces at Providence, and the ambassador to the United States, and the Spanish commander at Pensacola—all concurring in the same tenor, it would appear that the Seminole Indians had been the victims of continual aggression on the part of the Americans on the frontier, and that the resistance at last given by bands of lawless robbers, had been tortured by the southern prints into merciless attacks upon our innocent settlers. Whether this be true or not, it is now perhaps impossible to discover. It seems probable that their weakness would prevent the Indians from becoming aggressors; while the cupidity of the whites, irritated by the contentions of strength and the hope of impunity would be very likely to give them cause to...ssist. On the other hand, the animosity which has so long subsisted between the Indians and our frontier settlers, might probably blind the former to the consequences of their conduct, and induce them to commence a course of hostility against those whom they considered as usurpers of their rights.

If the former supposition be true (and it is by no means an improbable one) the war against the tribes, even though it had been constitutionally carried on, was highly unjust.

To all the facts connected with this subject, it is hoped that the vigilant and earnest attention of congress will be given, in order that punishment may not fail to attend the guilty, or the innocent suffer any one longer be suspected.

With your permission, sir, I propose, in a few papers on the subject, to investigate the question deliberately, and to endeavor to lay before your readers an opinion of facts highly important as concerning the character of the nation.

LUCIUS.

From the Baltimore Telegraph.

We have read the report of the trials of Arbuthnot & Ambristie with mingled emotions of astonishment & horror. We have always thought from the vague reports which have heretofore reached us respecting these cases, that Gen. Jackson and the court martial proceeded against these men in a most arbitrary & high handed manner; but we were in hopes when the proceedings of the court came to be laid before the public, a sufficient justification of their conduct would appear, instead of which the detail of the cases, makes them ten fold blacker than they were before. That were but two charges against Arbuthnot, which if proved, rendered him worthy of death, either by the laws of nations, or by the municipal laws of our own country—these were his acting as a spy, and his exciting the Indians to murder Hambly & Doyle—one only of these, that of his being a spy, was cognizable by a court martial. On both of these charges, however, the accused was acquitted. The other charges, whether true or false, were neither cognizable by a court martial, nor punishable by any court, or any law. We do not say that the offences were venial or justifiable, but we say they were not punishable by any law, national or international.

The charges against Ambristie were also either unfounded in law, admitting them to have been true. Are we to be told at this time of day, that a foreigner is to be punished with death for joining our enemies in war, because the nation to whom he owes allegiance is at peace with us? And are we to be told also, that he is to be tried by a court martial? We have always supposed that the citizens of any neutral nation had a right so far as the belligerent was concerned, to join the armies, and fight the battles of either party at his pleasure. The captors have a right to enquire if the prisoner of war be a citizen, and owe allegiance to the government of the captors; and here their enquiries must stop—they have no right to enquire to what other government he may owe allegiance. This question has, however, been so well settled for two centuries past, that it is almost disrespectful to an enlightened public to offer any arguments to prove it; and yet Gen. Jackson says in his order, that it is an established principle of the laws of nations, that any individual of a nation making war against the citizens of any other nation, they being at peace, forfeits his allegiance, and becomes an outlaw and pirate."

A principle more shocking to humanity we have no recollection of ever having heard uttered. We should like to know where the General finds such a law or such a principle. We suppose, however, he is the maker of his own laws. A man found in this predicament is, according to Gen. Jackson's code an outlaw & a pirate.

The term outlaw when applied to America as jurisprudence, is a word wholly without meaning. In the English law it has a meaning, and some of the old English legal writers say, that an outlaw (as Coke Sopinion) may be shot down & knocked on the head like a wolf by any one that should meet him, but this doctrine has been abrogated in England, (if it was in reality the law) for centuries. It seems however, that Gen. Jackson has revived it in America.—According to no code of laws that we are acquainted with, is there any such thing as piracy on land, but Gen. Jackson, it seems has adopted this principle also in his code.

Finally take these trials all in all they are the most extraordinary we have ever seen, both as it respects the charges alleged against the accused,—the proof by which they were convicted (the hearsay testimony of the Indians, who could not have been admitted as witnesses in person) and the arbitrary, unfeeling & inhuman manner ... which the sentence of the court was carried into execution. We have always been among the warmest admirers of Gen. Jackson's military talents and achievements, and we are sensibly pained that he should do any thing to tarnish the glory he has so nobly earned. We would be among the last to reprobate his conduct in any case, if duty did not require it, but we cannot and we will not draw a veil over the arbitrary exercise of power by any man.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The general congress of the united provinces, assembled at Buenos Ayres, on the 3d of December, of 1816, established, by a provisional statute, a form of government which will be found in appendix marked E.

This congress is comprised of deputies from the different provinces. It actually consists of twenty-six members. But, as a representative is allowed for every fifteen thousand citizens, it would be numerous, if all the provinces had sent delegates in that ratio of population.

With some exceptions, and particularly of that paladium of our rights, which is unknown to the civil law, the trial by jury, the provisional constitution will be found, on an attentive perusal, to contain a distinct recognition of many of the vital principles of free government. A church establishment also, that of the Catholic faith, is contrary to our ideas of religious freedom; though a measure, adopted from necessity, perhaps, by them.

It declares, that all power, legislative, judicial, & executive, resides in the nation. The congress are to be chosen by electors, who are to be voted for by the people in the primary assemblies. The cabildos, or municipalities, are to be elected immediately by the citizens. It recognizes the independence of the judiciary, and declares the tenure of office, with respect to the superior judges, to be during good behaviour.—It provides for the election of a chief magistrate by congress, removeable when they choose to appoint a successor, and responsible for the execution of the duties of his office, which are defined & limited. In the oath of office, he is sworn to preserve the integrity & independence of his country.

The three great departments of state, of the treasury, and of war, are distinctly marked out, and their respective powers and duties assigned.

On some subjects it enters more into detail than is usual with us, particularly in those of their army, navy, & militia. But this, perhaps in their situation, was necessary.

It provides that no citizen shall accept a title of nobility, without forfeiting the character of citizenship.

It provides, also, against general warrants, and the arrest of individuals, unless on probable proof of guilt.

It contains a salutary provision that a judge, having original jurisdiction, before taking cognizance of the cause, shall use all possible means of reconciling the parties. This constitution is but temporary. The congress are engaged in the task of forming a permanent one. In the mean time, no alterations have been adopted.

The subject of a permanent constitution was before a committee of 16 members of congress. There was a difference of opinion prevailing among them, the point of a confederated or a consolidated government. If they should adopt the former, they will frame the constitution, in all probability, nearly after the model of that of the United States. Should they decide on the latter, it is highly probable they will incorporate the leading features of our system into their form of government. They seem to concur in the proposition to have a chief magistrate elected for a term of years, and a representative legislature, to consist of two branches. A senate, to constitute the most permanent body, & a house of representatives, whose term of service shall be of shorter duration.

Perhaps it would be better for them to delay the completion of this all important task, after the example of the United States, until a period of peace.

Their present provisional statute is no improvement on those which preceded it; and we may expect their proposed constitution will be still more perfect, as they advance in the knowledge of those principles on which republican governments are constituted.

But, however free in theory this provisional statute may be, it is undoubtedly true, that, unless administered agreeably to its letter and spirit, it will not afford security to the citizen. Whether any infraction have occurred since the date of its restoration, I cannot presume to determine, not being in full possession of the facts.

When we recollect that they have the benefit of our example, it may reasonably be expected that they will, in general, adhere to their written constitution. They have also the fatal result of the French revolution, warning them of the dangers of its excesses, of which they appear to be sensible.

The productions and the manufactures of the different provinces, will be found in appendix D; but I was unable to procure any satisfactory estimates of the probable value or amount in each province. There is, however, considerable internal trade carried on in the interchange of various articles between the several provinces; cattle, horses & mules, furnish a considerable source of barter; with the latter, Peru is supplied; the Paraguay tea is a great article of trade throughout the country. The will be given more or less in detail, in brandy, wine, raisins and figs of Mendoza and Santa Juan, are becoming important; the hides of oxen, the skins of the vaccina and grunaco, with a number of fine furs, afford valuable articles of exchange. These, with the foreign goods transported in every direction from Buenos Ayres, very rapidly, by oxen and mules, which also furnish the means of carrying their native productions to their sea ports, form a branch of trade of great magnitude, considering the population of the country.

Their exports are calculated, with some degree of accuracy, at ten millions of dollars.—These consist, principally, of ox hides, jerk beef and tallow, the present great staples of the country. A variety of furs and peltries, some grain, copper, mostly brought from Chili, with gold and silver in bullion and coin, chiefly from the mines of Potosi.

The imports are computed to be about equal to their exports. British manufactures form the principal mass, and they are to be had in abundance. They consist of woolen and cotton goods of every description, some of them wrought to imitate the manufactures of the country;—ironmongery, cutlery, hardware, saddlery, hats, porter, ale and cheese, are among the remaining articles.

From the United States they received lumbers of all kinds, and furniture of every description; coaches and carriages of all sorts, codfish, mackarel, shad and herring, leather, boots and shoes, powder and munitions of war, and naval stores, ships and vessels, particularly those calculated for their navy, or for privateers.

From Brazils they receive sugar, coffee, cotton and rum.

From the north of Europe they receive steel and iron; and from France a number of articles of its manufacture.

Their foreign commerce is principally carried on by British capitalists, though there are some Americans, a few French and other foreign merchants, also settled at Buenos Ayres; they are all placed, I believe, on the same footing of equality.

The revenue of the state may be estimated at about three millions of dollars annually; but their system of finance is very imperfect, and although their debt is small, their credit is low. They have hitherto avoided the issuing of paper money, and they have established no bank; but they have sometimes anticipated their revenue by giving due bills receivable in payment for duties, on goods imported, or articles exported; the impost furnishes the principal part of the revenue. A copy of their tariff, as at first established, was sometime since transmitted, I believe, to the department state; in this the duties were generally specific & high—I understand they have been lately reduced, as their exhorbitancy had occasioned much smuggling.

Voluntary contributions from those friendly to the revolution, and forced loans from the old Spaniards, have constituted another portion of their funds. To show the public capital adequate to all exigencies, their different civil, military and naval establishments have been taken into view, and are comprised in the estimate furnished, a thing unusual with us; but they have omitted their public lands, which, if a prudent use be made of them, must, at no distant day, become a very productive source of revenue to the state.

The mines of Potosi, which, in all probability, will very soon fall into their hands again, may furnish them with a considerable supply of the precious metals. It is stated, on respectable authority, that so late as the year 1790, the amount of gold, and silver coined at Potosi in that year, was calculated to have been $ 299,846 in gold, and $ 3,988,176 in silver. The state of their army, and the condition of their navy, will be seen by a reference to the annual return presented. [Appendix F.]

Their army is composed of regular troops, Cuyous, and militia. In one or other of these classes, they are reduced to the military art, and as far as I had an opportunity, and was capable of judging, they appeared to be well acquainted with the elements of their profession. Their forces, according to the paper furnished, are estimated at nearly 30,000 thousand men. They are composed of 1,299 artillery, 13,667 infantry, and 14,618 cavalry; of which 12,148 are troops of the line, 7,041 are Cuyous, and 10,573 militia. These form the different armies of the centre of Peru, of the Andes, of Cordova, and the auxiliary forces in the East o Rios. This statement, however, only includes the militia of the province of Buenos Ayres itself. Their supply of arms and munitions of war is ample, as will be seen by the statement annexed, on that subject.

Their navy is small, and some of their vessels are laid up in ordinary. A list of them, as well as of their privateers, will be found in Appendix F. Their private armed vessels are subjected to very strict regulations, agreeably to their prize code, which is among the original papers presented and here with

The document referred to is not sent delivered. It may be proper in this place, to introduce the subject of the irregular conduct of the privateers under the patriotic flag, against which the commissioners were directed to remonstrate. Having taken an opportunity of explaining to Mr. Tagle, the secretary of state, the proceedings of our government relative to Amelia Island and Galveston, agreeably to their instructions, the commissioners embraced a suitable occasion to urge the just cause of complaint, which the malpractices of private armed vessels, wearing the patriot colours, had furnished our government with; on both topics, they had long and interesting conversations. With the conduct of the government respecting Amelia Island and Galveston, Mr. Tagle expressed himself perfectly satisfied, and he disclaimed for his government any privity or participation in the lodgments made at those places, by persons acting in the name of the patriots of South America. In reference to the acts of cruisers under the patriot flags, he said he was sensible that great irregularities had occurred, though his government had done every thing in their power to prevent them, and were willing, if any instance of aggression were pointed out, to direct an inquiry into the case, and, if the facts were established, to punish those concerned, and redress the injured individuals. He professed his readiness to adopt any measures that would more effectually prevent a recurrence of such acts, in which he expressed his belief that the privateers of Buenos Ayres had rarely participated, though the character of the government had suffered from the conduct of others. He stated that they had, on one occasion, sent out some of their public vessels to examine all cruisers wearing the Buenos Ayrean flag, to see that they were lawfully commissioned, and to ascertain whether they had violated their instructions. (To be continued.)

INTERESTING TO THOUSANDS;

COLONY OF MUTUELLY UNION.

It is in agitation to found a Colony upon the ancient Spartan plan, sanctioned by Apostolical usage, of living in common, and enjoying a community of goods.—In this Establishment, as each will labour for all, and all for each, personal property will be unknown—and as but of private gain, engendered by an imperfect organization of Society, will be sacrificed at the shrine of public felicity.

To carry this project into execution, a fertile tract of land, consisting of some thousands of acres, is on the point of being purchased and surveyed.

Husbandmen and artizans of every sort are invited to this Colonization.—We tender the right hand of fellowship, to the honest and industrious of every description of People, whatever be their religious or political faith.

Want of funds will not furnish a reason to exclude any Colonist, and on the other hand, it will be a fundamental law of this establishment, that whatever property may be by adventurers put into the Common Stock, will be considered as a loan, and refunded to them or their assignees on demand.

The Colony will be situated within the bounds of Lower-Canada, and under the protection and controul of His Majesty's Government.

All persons who are willing to embark in this Enterprize, are requested to address themselves to the Subscriber, personally or by letter.—They will speedily their Country, age, profession, number of Children, (if married) property, &c.

No letter will be received but from Principals, nor unless post paid—Every letter to bear on its superscription, the words "Colony of Brotherly Union."

As soon as a sufficient number of applicants shall have enrolled their names, notice will be given by public advertisement to convene and digest a code of laws and regulations for the establishment. S. CLEVELAND BLYTH.

PROSPECTUS.

The Editors of the Newspaper, which is now offered to the patronage of the public, desirous of obtaining that approbation to which they aspire, are endeavouring to make such arrangements with their correspondents in Europe, and in the United States, as may open to their use the most extensive channels of early intelligence.

The Chronicle will contain a summary of foreign and domestic news, which proportion to its general, or local interest.

With a due sense of their importance, the Editors will be careful to make commerce, agriculture, & internal improvements, leading topics in the pages of their journal; and will feel themselves highly indebted to such gentlemen, as may furnish them with communications, either upon these or upon other subjects of utility. In the discussion of all questions, the strictest impartiality will be adhered to; but under no circumstances will the CHRONICLE be permitted to be made the vehicle of unjust or illiberal insinuations, or low invective.

Well aware that the happiness of society chiefly depends on the moral conduct of the members. The Editors will always be ready to give a place to communications which have for their objects, the promotion of virtue and religion. Determined to support the liberty of the Press, they will peculiarly endeavour to maintain an independent spirit in the discussion of political subjects; at the same time, they will be careful not to mistake licentiousness for independence, or intemperate declamation for manly arguments. The Chronicle will be printed on a sheet of Super-Royal paper, and published every Friday afternoon. A New Town.

THE advantageous situation of a tract of land on the East side of Fort Wellington, in Upper Canada, and directly opposite the American town of Ogdensburgh, has induced the Proprietor to have the same Surveyed and laid out into regular Streets and Lots, for the purpose of establishing a town, to be called WELLINGTON, in which the lots will be let on building Leases, for a term of twenty one years.

By the plan adopted, every lot in town will have the singular advantage of being not only a corner lot, but also of being bounded by streets on three sides, and giving to every dwelling house in town a southern aspect, with a full view of the Harbour and Shipping, and of the opposite town of Ogdensburgh and the surrounding country.

The Harbour is a bay of the St. Lawrence formed by projecting points of land, which will effectually shelter the wharves and shipping from the current of the river and from the floating ice, so frequently destructive in other parts of the river.—It is extensive and commodious, affording good anchorage with sufficient depth of water for all descriptions of vessels that navigate the river.

When twenty families are settled in the town, the proprietor will engage to build a Church and School House for their use.

The situation being in the midst of a populous and highly cultivated country, will always ensure a cheap & well supplied market, and afford an extensive field for country trade, and is particularly well situated for the lumber & transport business.

For further particulars, apply to WM. ALLAN Esq. of York, THOS. DICKSON Esq. of Queenston, ALLAN M'LEAN Esq. of Kingston, L. P. SHERWOOD Esq. of Brockville, HAMILTON WALKER Esq. of Prescott, and ARCHD. M'I'NISH Esq. of Cornwall, with whom plans of the town are deposited for inspection.

Mr Walker of Prescott is particularly instructed, and authorized to prepare Leases.

BOSTON, Dec. 24.

Latest from England.

The ship Triton, Capt. Holcomb, arrived at this port yesterday, in 48 days from Liverpool, bringing dates to the 31 Oct. They furnish no political news of any great moment, excepting the full ratification of the Treaty for the evacuation of the allied army from France, & the dispersion of the troops, to their several homes.

British army had reached England. The Sovereigns, and high military commanders were assembling at Paris, for the purpose of taking an affectionate, and it is hoped, a long farewell, of the Illustrious house of Bourbon. A few getrious have been made from the latest dates:

The ratifications by the French government, of the Treaty of the Sovereigns of Europe, for evacuating the French territory, was received at Aix-la-Chapelle, on the 17th Oct.

The Emperor of Russia & King of Prussia, were at Valenciennes on the 21st Oct. The Duke of Wellington was to give, the next day, a splendid fete to the sovereigns, and on the following day, a grand review of the troops; when immediately after the evacuation was to follow. The route of all the troops has been traced.

The Emperor of Russia, King of Prussia, together with many illustrious personages of civil & military distinction, were expected at Paris on the 28th Oct.

The Bank of England had not resumed specie payments; but it was said, they were prepared for that measure, and would commence with the issue of silver.

On the 30th Oct. fifty sail of vessels arrived at Dover from Calais, having on board a large body of British troops, of the late army of observation in France. After landing the men, the vessels immediately returned to Calais.

The Queen of England still lingers on the bed of sickness, & suffers great pain and restlessness.

Sir Humphrey Davy has been raised to the dignity of a Baronet.

Died at Paris, M. Bertrand de Molleville, Minister of Marine under Louis XVI. aged 75.

From a London Paper.

The following extraordinary sale of stock, of the improved short-horned breed, took place at the sale of Mr. Robert Collings, of Brampton, near Darlington, who is celebrated as an agriculturalist of the first class, and whose stock was brought to the hammer on the 29th & 30th Aug.

NEW METHOD OF MAKING BUTTER.

Put the cream intended for butter into a strong linen cloth, tie it up with a string, dig a hole in the earth 15 inches deep, and let the bottom of it be sufficiently capacious to allow the cream in the linen cloth to lie about four inches deep all over it. Put another cloth around that which contains the cream to keep the dirt from it.—When deposited in the hole, cover it up with earth (but do not tread it down) and let it remain 24 or 26 hours; then take it out and pour the cream, which will now be very thick, into a bowl or other vessel, and stir it well from five to ten minutes with a wooden spoon or ladle, when the butter will be completely formed, and may be taken out and washed as usual. The advantages of this mode of making butter are as follows, viz.—1st. The cream yields a larger quantity of butter, or an addition of about one pound in ten; 2d. In hot weather the butter is obtained without a tedious process, and is free from the rancid taste that long & hot churned butter generally possesses; and 3d. A very small stock of cream may be operated upon equally as well as a larger quantity.

From the Boston Gazette.

It is expected three more new states will be added to the union, before many months. The Illinois will be the 21st in the numerical order of the states. The legislature met in October last appointed two senators to sit in the present congress; a representative has also been elected by the people. The Missouri Territory, it is said, will be formed into a state this winter, and will be No. 22. Next follows the Alabama Territory, and will be called No. 23. The population of the latter is supposed to be upwards of 60,000. Two new territorial governments will be also erected; first, the Red River, and the country which lies south of it, towards the gulf of Mexico. The next is the North Western Territory. it is twice as large as the state of Virginia, and comprises the ancient French settlement of Prairie du Chien & Green Bay.

Steam Boat on the Missouri.—A Louisville paper, of the 30th of September, mentions that a new Steam Boat, named Johnson, commanded by S. Craig, built by Col. James Johnson of Wheeling, Virginia, and intended as a trader on the Missouri as far north as the Yellow Stone River, had passed the falls in safety. The same paper adds—"This Boat, if successful, will open a new source of trade to the enterprising inhabitants of the West, and will afford great facility in the transportation of troops and military stores intended for the new depot at that point."

Singular Preservation.—The following circumstance, says the Rockestr Telegraph, took place at Carthage on Tuesday last. A Mr. Johnson, was on the end of the lever which hung over the precipice in the act of raising a stick of timber, the end of the lever gave way and he precipitated down the bank 150 feet; he struck twice on the projecting rocks before he reached the bottom. We are informed that none of his bones were broken, and that he is in a fair way of recovery.—N. Y. Spectator.

LAKE FISHERIES.

We cannot sufficiently appreciate the goodness of Providence, for the peculiar bestowment of his favors on the people of this state.—The resources of New York yet only dawn upon us.—Heaven has placed an exclusive supply of salt in the heart of the state, and this necessary article is dispensed for one shilling a bushel, where the transportation alone, if imported would cost twelve. Not only are the inhabitants of the whole interior of the state provided at a low rate, but a large surplus is yearly exported. The present season, more than sixteen thousand barrels have gone through lake Ontario.—Gypsum too, in quantity equal to every purpose & beyond consumption, is found in vast beds where the distance must, but for the bounty of the great Author of nature have denied the farmer this great aid in agriculture. These sources of wealth & convenience have been frequently described, while the no less liberal hand of Providence in furnishing the waste of many and the luxury of others, by means of the fish found in the lakes, is hardly known or acknowledged. The season for taking fish is just closing—I have not the data for an estimate of the yearly product of this lake, but have ascertained from the most correct sources the following to be the quantity and species of fish taken & salted this season in this & Chaumont bays.

Siscoes or lake herring	4,000
bbls. selling price $7 per bbl.
is			$28,000
White fish	1200 bbls.	9 is	10,800
Salmon trout	400 bbls.	14 is	5,600
Total	5,600 bbls.	amount	$44,400

The distance comprised is less than twenty miles, and the quantity is exclusive of the abundance distributed fresh in the country, contiguous to the fishing grounds.—From this statement some opinion may be formed of the value, importance & extent of our inland fisheries. Industry & labour are alone wanting to share this bounty, and the poor are enabled to provide a resource for winter with but very little expense. To some they furnish the means of subsistence, while others at a distance seek them as a luxury. We are glad to have it in our power to state, that a law was passed by the last assembly to regulate the tracking of lake fish & provides for the appointment of inspectors, who have branded all those up under their direction.—Ib.

By the treaty with Great Britain, the Americans were to give up to the Indians all the lands that may have been taken from them during the war, and place them on the same footing they were in 1811. It appears they have not done it; that Fort Gaines, on the Chatahoochy, and Camp Crawford, on the Flint river, are both on Indian territory, that was not in possession of America in 1811. They are fearful that, before any aid is given by the English government, they will no longer be in possession of any territory.

I wrote last January to his excellency the hon. Charles Bagot, respecting the encroachments of the Americans; as I was informed by the copy of a letter from the right hon. earl Bathurst, handed me by his excellency governor Cameron, that his majesty's ambassador had received orders to watch over the interest of the Indians. Since my return here I have received an extract of a letter from the hon. Charles Bagot, that the expense of postage is so considerable, any further communications of the same nature must be sent by private hands. Now, sir, as no person goes from this direct to Washington, how am I to be able to comply with his desire? Thus he will be kept ignorant of the situation of the poor Indians, and the encroachments daily made on their lands by American settlers, while he may be told by the American government that no encroachments have been made, and that the forts they still hold are necessary to check the unruly Seminoles. Thus, the person appointed to watch over the interest of the Indians, having no other means of information than from the parties interested in their destruction, and seeing from time to time, in the American gazettes, accounts of cruel murders, &c. committed by the Indians on the frontier settlements of the United States, he apprehends the Indians merit all the Americans do to them.

But let his majesty's government appoint an agent, with full powers to correspond with his majesty's ambassador at Washington, and his eyes will then be opened as to the motives that influenced American individuals, as well as the government, in villifying the Indians.

The power given me, and the instructions, were to memorialize his majesty's government, as well as the governor general of the Havanna; but if you will be pleased to lay this letter before his majesty's secretary of state, it will save the necessity of the first, and I fear that a memorial to the governor general would be of no use.

Referring you to the answer, I am, most respectfully, your obedient servant.

A. ARBUTHNOT.

From A. Arbuthnot to William Hambly.

OCKLOCKNEE SOUND, 9d. May, 1817.

Sir—On my return home this day I received a letter signed by you, & dated 23d March.—As you therein take the liberty of advising me, as you say, by order of the chiefs of the Creek Nation, I am glad of, and I shall embrace this opening you give me, and reply to you at some length—and, sir, let me promise, that when you lived at Prospect Bluff, a clerk to Messrs. Forbes & Co. you did not consider Cappachimico, the Queen, or any other of the chiefs of the lower Creek Nation as outlaws, nor have they been considered as such by the English government, who are the natural protecters of the Indian nations; and it ill becomes Mr. Hambly to call Cappachimico an outlaw, through whom has ever been his friend, and by his authority has prolonged his life. Yes, sir, the young chiefs or warriors of the Creek Nation, considering you as the chief cause of their troubles, would have long ere this had possession of you, and perhaps with your life made you paid the forfeit for the injuries heaped on them, had not that man who has been your friend from your early youth, stepped in as your protector. Yes, this is the man who Mr. Hambly presume to call an outlaw. A pardoned villain, when going to the gallows, would bless the hand that saved his life; but Mr. Hambly blasphemes his saviour.

As Mr. Hambly's generous friend is the principal cause of my being in this country, as an honest man, I shall endeavour to fulfil my promise to him and the other chiefs. The guilty alone have fear—an honest & upright man dreads no dangers, fears no evil, asks commits no ill; and your arm of justice ought to be applied where it would rightly fall, on the heads of the real guilty. Your mean & vile insinuations that have been the cause of theft and murders, comes ill from he who has been the cause of the murder of hundreds. Though your usage was most villainous at the fort, yet your revenge was too savage & sanguinary. If your conduct, sir, to the Indians were guided by as pure motives as mine, it would endeavor to influence them to respect each other as brothers, and live in harmony & friendship, cultivating their lands in summer, and taking their diversions of hunting in winter, respecting their neighbors, and making yourselves respected by them. If thus, sir, you would act, (and by your knowledge of their language, you have much more in your power than any other man) you would then be the true friend of the Indians. Were I an instigator of theft & murder, would I hold the language I have done to the chiefs and others who have called on me? Ask the Lieut. Commanding at Fort Gaines if my letter to him breathed the strains of a murderer? Ask Opy Hatchy, or Dany his interpreter, if the recommendatory note I sent him by order of Apiny could be written by an instigator of murder? Ask Apiny himself if my language to him was that of a murderer? Ask Mappalitchy, a chief residing among the Americans on Ockmulgee, if my language & advice to him favored that of a murderer? All those and every Indian who have heard my talks, will contradict your vile assertions.

But Mappalitchy has given me a clue by which I can unravel whence the aspersion comes.—Not from Apiny, Hatchy or any of the chiefs of the Upper Towns, but from he who endeavors to lead them to mischief & quarrels with each other. Did not the chiefs hear my note read with respect, and perfectly according to my sentiments of being all as brethren uniting with bonds of friendship & love? Did not they approve of what we have done, and what we are doing, and it is by his recommendation we have thus presumed to address your excellency.

We have the honor to be your excellency's most obedient and very humble servant.

SIR,

Having been some years resident in this Province, and possessing a considerable property in it, which I had always found and looked on as secured by the just administration of a wise system of laws I have, of late, been very much concerned at the confident assertions which have met my eyes, in the shape of Addresses, Petitions, &c. "that all the blessings of the social compact were centering to ours," and that "all we fought for in war, and all we hoped for in peace was in danger."

My own observations seemed to be going on much in the old way, and I have always asked in vain, where the danger was coming from; but have been lately much relieved from my apprehensions, by the publication of an Inventory of grievances, by Anthony McGuin, Esq. J. P.

I now know the extent of our danger, and feel easier; and for the benefit of others, who may have been panic-struck, like myself, shall state the remarks that occurred to me when I saw the worthy justice's production.

We now therefore beg leave to assure your Excellency that the petitions or addresses lately forwarded from this place, do not express the true sense and feeling of the Township. They were unquestionably dictated by one who has been for some months past labouring to seduce the affections of a people whose loyalty had never before been doubted; but at the same time, that it cannot be denied he has in some instances succeeded in imposing upon the good intentions of a few loyal subjects, we must assure your Excellency that many of those who appear most active in promoting his designs, are people who from their short residence under the government of this country, have not yet been able to overcome their prejudices against it, and from not being able therefore duly to appreciate its advantages, are now loudly complaining of alledged grievances, at the same time they would seem to be courting them.

Your Excellency will therefore do the loyal inhabitants of this township the justice to believe, that, although some few may have been hastily led into error, the great mass of his majesty's subjects are not to be led astray by the machinations of any factious and discontented person, but that they will always be found ready to repel the inroads of sedition and disorder, and to spurn with indignation, the malevolent designs of all turbulent intruders upon their quiet and happiness.

To the Address, His Excellency was pleased to return the following answer:

GENTLEMEN,

I have received particular satisfaction from your loyal Address: for I think it important that the United Empire at large, and not less that the nation on our borders should know, that the people of this Province are not of a character to follow any band of factious individuals who may choose to originate an enterprize, however craftily disguised, against the government and constitution of the country.

In my anxiety to learn the real causes of discontent, which were complained of, but not stated, I readily answered a petition, signed by certain individuals of your Township; though I could not fail to notice that it exhibited the reverse of that tone of duty, which is usual and becoming in such communications. On this occasion, however, my feelings and understanding both assured me that the writing conveyed neither the language nor intention of the petitioners. I am now happy to be confirmed in that opinion by the declaration which accompanies your Address, and I gladly take this opportunity to remark, that the fifteen individuals, whose signature it bears, deserve much praise for having honestly discharged a service which was at once due to themselves, their fellow subjects and the government.

I have ordered the statement of grievances, which I received in answer to my enquiry, to be inserted in the Gazette, and I leave it to the honest good sense of His Majesty's subjects of this Colony to consider, whether they are such as to justify the revolutionary measures which were hurrying, they knew not whither, many loyal but misguided persons.

Be assured, gentlemen, that it is no less my inclination, than I feel it to be my duty, to remedy as far as lays in my power any description of evil, whether it be of a partial nature, or such as affects the general interests of the Colony.

In the month of December last, a Petition was received by His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, from certain inhabitants of the Township of Haldimand, in which many grievances were complained of, but none set forth. By His Excellency's command a letter was immediately written to Mr. Wilson Rus, the first subscriber of the petition, desiring to be informed what were the specific grievances complained of; to which the following answer has been received:

HALDIMAND, 26th Nov. 1818.

SIR,

I had the honor to receive a letter from His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor's Office, dated the 26th inst. In reply thereto, I beg leave to state, that I received a letter of occupation for Lot No. 22, in the first Concession, and also for Lot No. 23, being a Crown Reserve in the same Concession of Haldimand, but have been and am at present, prevented from occupying said Lots by William Burnham, who alledges that he purchased them from the original proprietor, Francis Burnham, I have made known this circumstance to Mr. Boulton (who was then Attorney General) nearly three years ago, without receiving any redress; this I considered a grievance, and was the cause of my signing the petition from Haldimand.

I have the honor to be,
Sir,
your obedient servant,
WILSON RUS.

To His Excellency SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper-Canada &c. &c. &c.

May it Please Your Excellency.

By a letter from your Secretary, dated the 6th instant, directed to the first signer of the Petition of the Inhabitants of Ernest-town, we are informed, that your Excellency has received our Petition, and desire to know what are the specific grievances, of which we complain.

We thank your Excellency for this notice of the Petition, and view it as an earnest of well timed attention to the wishes and interests of His Majesty's loyal subjects under your government.

Whatever in the "tone of the Petition" has appeared to your Excellency "undutiful," we hope will be ascribed to the surprise and pain, with which we perceived that the efforts we had been making, in conjunction with our fellow subjects in other parts of the Province, to obtain an enquiry concerning grievances complained of, with a view to their redress, had been too successfully misrepresented to your Excellency, as "attempts to excite discontent and organize factions;" were likely to be made the occasion of an act, which, if passed, would in our apprehension, cast a reproach upon the inhabitants of the Province, and unnecessarily abridge their political liberty. Conscious as to ourselves, and satisfied with respect to our fellow subjects, that no such seditious views existed, we expressed, in strong unstudied language, our sense of the injustice of the charge, and our alarm at the contemplated measure. Our duties might possibly have been couched in more happy terms; but our sentiments remain the same. Resection has indeed confirmed our repugnance to such a statute. If it is not passed, we interest your Excellency to withhold it for Royal assent. If it should be passed, we hope your Excellency, by further experience of the disposition of the people, whom you are appointed to govern, will become so well satisfied of their loyalty, as to recommend a repeal of the restrictive law. In the mean time, we know not how far we are safe in deliberating together upon the subject of specifying the grievances of which we complain, lest they should be deemed to be matters on which we are forbidden by the Law law, to meet and deliberate: and yet, without such joint deliberation, the separate statement of a single petitioner, will be of little avail. Presuming that the letter written by your Excellency's order, was not intended solely for the individual to whom it was directed, as he happened to be the first signer of our Petition, but that it was intended to be communicated to all the Petitioners, for their common benefit, we venture to comply with it in that sense, and unite in this deliberate, but imperfect statement of a number of specific grievances, of which we complain.

1. The land granting department, has long been complained of, for unnecessary delays, occasioning much disappointment, trouble and expence to applicants; for unreasonable charges; and for partiality and favoritism in the granting and location of lands; one instance of which among many others, has been mentioned, of a valuable tract of land, in the front of the Township of Murray, very near the outlet of the River Trent, granted to a member of the Land Council, in preference to othe s who had long wished to obtain so favorable a location for actual settlement. The consequence of such complaints, continued from year to year, whether with or without just cause, has been, in this part of the Province, and so far as our acquaintance has extended, a general dissatisfaction and discontent; a decrease of confidence in that department of the Government. The most effectual method of removing this evil, we sincerely believe, would be an impartial enquiry into the causes of it, by some commission or competent authority, in order that any existing errors may be corrected, and any unfounded reports and impressions refuted. In praying for such an investigation, without pretending to the means of ascertaining the facts ourselves, and stating them in detail, we feel in consciousness, that our motives have not been seditious, but loyal and patriotic.

J. SMALL,
Clk. Ex. Coun.

The papers we have received for some time past, have been extremely barren of European intelligence. Private letters from London, of the 29th Oct. mention that Her Majesty's indisposition continues unabated.

We observed in a late Niagara Spectator, that in consequence of certain publications, tending to disturb the tranquility of this Province, of which Mr. Robert Gourlay had avowed himself the author, he had been required, in pursuance of the 44th Geo. III. to quit the Province within a limited time. We have since learnt, that not having obeyed this requisition, Mr. Gourlay has been committed to prison as the act prescribes.

Our readers will observe in the official columns of our paper, an Address signed by a number of the principal inhabitants of Ernest-town; & also a representation addressed to His Excellency the Lieut. Governor, and signed by several persons whose names will appear as subscribers to a paper of another character, which will be seen in this and the following numbers of the Gazette.

In reviewing the contents of these addresses, we cease to wonder that similar measures have succeeded in producing similar effects, to a greater or less extent, in several other Townships of that part of the Province where they have been so industriously practised, and where no doubt others have been equally deceived.

To the Editor of the Upper-Canada Gazette.

MR. EDITOR,

I see it is again insinuated by Mr Gourlay, in the last Niagara Spectator, that the Lieutenant Governor kept the House of Assembly waiting a week after the Public Business was finished.—I have seen this contradicted once already in the Phœnix. Now, Sir, I can positively assert, that this insinuation is as false as it is base. The Speakers of both Houses, I appeal to them and to all the members, if this is not the fact, and notice, that the moment their Business was at an end, the Lieutenant Governor was ready to go to Parliament and the day after they made a report to that effect, the Parliament was prorogued.

Instead, however, of the Public Business being finished a week before the prorogation took place, an important bill was passed on the 20th, granting to His Majesty a sum of Money for the Survey of the Waters of the Saint Lawrence, and for other purposes therein mentioned, and a great deal of other Business was disposed of on that and the following day: so much so, that on a reference to the journals of the Assembly, I find the Records of the Proceedings of those two days occupies fourteen pages of Folio Post, closely written.—Yet the good people of this Province are assiduously told, that His Excellency kept the two Houses for a week "to count their Fingers."

It is true His Excellency had not quitted his room for some days before, and his disorder, I understand, was contracted during his services in Spain, from exposure to the climate. It is no wonder that the same disingenuousness which would make the services of His Excellency under the Duke of Wellington a subject of ridicule, should attempt to raise a false calumny from a circumstance, which it was no doubt hoped had arisen from His Excellency's indisposition.

I am, Sir,
Your Obedient Servant,
JAMES FITZ GIBBON.

TO THE MILITIA OF UPPER CANADA.

GENTLEMEN,

The spirited and decent language which Mr. Gourlay has lavished on you, is no way affects the truth of my statements.

That impatient gentleman, who, in a fit of passion, has so modestly compared himself to Job, facetiously remarks, that I see falsehood even in his interrogatories. Does he mean, that an interrogatory cannot convey an insinuation, or an affirmative, or a negative? I appeal to you, gentlemen, if there is one among you that has read the paragraph in question, which ends with "what was the fate of this Petition?" without understanding it to mean, that they were not answered.

Insinuation is naturally the favourite weapon of falsehood, and the wretched duplicity which looks for a loop-hole to escape out at in the manner of conveying it, is only worthy of such as have recourse to invention for their facts, and whose calumnies are the offspring of their own malignant imagination.

I repeat again that it happens to come under my knowledge, that the Petition which prayed for the pardon of Angelique Pilotte, and that Address of House of Assembly relating to privilege, were forwarded from this Province without delay, and were answered at home with as little delay as possible. The answer to the latter was duly communicated to the two Speakers and the result was, that the misunderstanding between the two Houses ceased to exist.

I have to add to my former statement which related to the conduct of the Army held your services, that Major General Sir [illegible] KEMPT wrote a very gratifying letter to Lt. Col. NICHOL on the subject.

Now, gentlemen, seeing with what malignity I have been attacked for the simple statement of these facts, people will cease to doubt, that hearts may be found malevolent enough to seek the gratification of a low minded revenge, connected with the hope of mending a desperate fortune at the expence of the peace and happiness of a whole community.

I am,
Gentlemen,
Your faithful and obedient servant,
JAMES FITZ GIBBON.

YORK, 8th Jan. 1819.

THOMAS TAYLOR, Esqr. of the Middle Temple, London, Barrister at Law, was this day admitted and took the oaths in H. M. Court of King's Bench, as a Practitioner in this Province.

Mr. Rodney's Report Concluded.

Among the causes of dissatisfaction, to which I have alluded, the preponderance of the capital has been mentioned. Its great weight in the scale of national affairs is to be ascribed to its greater exertions in the national cause. These are owing to its comparative wealth, and to its active, intelligent and enterprising population. The armies that have been raised in this city and the neighbouring country, with supplies in money and munitions of war drawn from these sources, have been truly extraordinary.

It would be a difficult task to make an exact computation, or to form even a probable estimate, but all seemed to concede the superior merit claimed on account of their exertions when compared with their wealth and population; and it is not unlikely that Buenos Ayres, has, in consequence, assumed a higher tone, and acquired a controlling influence, which she has sometimes abused.

Another source of discontent is the unfortunate dispute between the Banda Oriental and Buenos Ayres, which had also an influence on the proceedings of the latter towards the Portuguese.

The original cause of division may be traced to a jealousy, long subsisting between the rival cities of Monte Video and Buenos Ayres. This has become habitual, and has extended to the country. Private interests and personal views have also increased their dissentions.

Gen. Artigas (who bears the character of chief of the Orientals, as has been already stated, & has also assumed that of the protector of the Entre Rios & Santa Fee,) was originally in the royal service a captain in the provincial corps. In this he continued for some time after the revolution had commenced at Buenos Ayres. But in the year 1811, taking offence, as it is said, at some conduct of the Spanish commandant of Colonia, he abandoned the royal cause, and entered into the service of the patriots. So early as the year 1813, when acting against Monte Video, he became dissatisfied with Sarratea, the commander in chief from Buenos Ayres. On his removal from the head of the army, he quarrelled with gen. Rondeau, who, it was supposed, would have been accepted to him, and finally withdrew, before the siege of Monte Video was finished under gen. Alvear. For this conduct, Pondas, when he succeeded to the government, treated him as a deserter from their service. By a proclamation, he offered a reward for his apprehension, and set a price upon his head; an act which Gen. Artigas never forgot nor forgave.

During the subsequent directorship of Alvear, he induced the Cabildo of Buenos Ayres to issue a similar proclamation against Gen. Artigas. When Alvear was dismissed, the people of Buenos Ayres endeavoured to attone for their conduct, by burning, with every mark of ignominy, the degrading proclamation. They also addressed a conciliatory letter, to the general, and received from him a corresponding answer. These were preliminary to a fruitless attempt at reconciliation, made by the director ad interim, Col. Alvares, who succeeded Alvear. The correspondence on this occasion is annexed. (Append. H.) Other endeavors to reconcile him have failed, notwithstanding the changes in the office of director at Buenos Ayres. On one occasion, the proposition was made, that Banda Oriental should remain independent of Buenos Ayres, and merely send deputies to the general congress, to concert measures against the common enemy. On another, when the Portuguese army was approaching the frontiers of the Banda Oriental, an effort was made by Pueyrredon to reconcile him, and to unite him in the common defence. Ample supplies of arms and munitions of war, were offered, and some furnished; but this attempt also failed.

In order that a fuller view of this subject may be had, I have subjoined a translated copy of an animated letter from gen. Artigas to Mr. Pueyrredon. (Appendix I.) It is but justice to add, that Gen. Artigas is thought, by persons entitled to credit, to be a firm friend to the independence of the country. To express a decided opinion on this delicate question would scarcely be expected of me, my position did not command a view of the whole ground. I had not the satisfaction to be derived from a personal interview with Gen Artigas, who is, "unquestionably, a man of rare and singular talents. But if I were to hazard a conjecture, I think it not impossible, that in this, as in most family disputes, there have been faults on both sides. It is to be lamented that they are in open hostility. The war has been prosecuted with great animosity; and in two late engagements, the troops of Buenos Ayres have been defeated with great loss. By some it was said that the inhabitants of the eastern shore were anxious that a reconciliation should take place, whilst the people in the country preferred their present state.

I must not omit to take a glance at the situation of Paraguay. This province presents a singular spectacle. It stands aloof from the rest. The people, with the aid of the few remaining royal troops, repulsed an army, sent to compel them to join the common standard. Very soon afterwards they expelled the royalists, and set up for themselves.—Since this period, they appear to have adopted a partial non-intercourse system. But Buenos Ayres, on one occasion, succeeded in obtaining an understanding with them. Some suspect that they are secretly inimical to the existing order of things, and wish to keep themselves within their shell, that, in case of a change, they may profit by future events; others calculate with some confidence on their ultimate union with Buenos Ayres, with which, at present, they indulge a limited, and reluctant intercourse. Paraguay is under the immediate control of a person named Francia, who styles himself director of Paraguay.

From the domestic concerns of the provinces, we naturally turn to their foreign relations. On this subject the commissioners were informed that they had nothing more than a friendly understanding with any foreign nation. With the Portuguese government they concluded an arrangement in 1812, under the mediation, it is said, of the British, with respect to the Banda Oriental. They have since had a correspondence with them on the subject of their entrance into that province, and the forcible occupation by a Portuguese army of the city of Monte Video, of which a copy is annexed. (Appendix I.) This will present the state of affairs between Buenos Ayres and the Brazils, which has been the theme of much discussion. The superior naval force of the Portuguese, stationed in the river La Plata, could have effectually blockaded all the ports of Buenos Ayres—By this means they would have prevented supplies of arms and munitions of war, and entirely destroyed the great source of revenue to the state, the duties on imports and tonnage, at a season when money was much wanted.—For about this period Buenos Ayres had a powerful army to contend with on the side of Peru, and had taken the burthen of the renewed contest of Chili with Spain. Under such circumstances, they were in some measure obliged to adopt a cautious and moderate policy. Their conduct in this respect seems to have been coerced. Their unhappy state with the Orientals had also an influence on their measures; they alledged that the restless conduct of Artigas had furnished the Portuguese a pretext for the invasion; but, it is probable that they will ultimately break with the government of Brazils.

The British government has, through their official agents, entered into commercial stipulations with general Artigas, as the chief of the Orientals, on the subject of their trade with the eastern shore. A copy of this instrument will be found in Appendix K.

The government of Buenos Ayres have a confidential person in Europe soliciting from England, and the other powers, it is said, assistance of every kind, and a recognition of their independence. England has a consul, who, with her naval commander on that station, appeared to conduct the confidential affairs of the British cabinet with the government of Buenos Ayres.

What effect the victory of Maipu will produce abroad, it would be hazardous in me to conjecture. Whether, like the capture of Burgoyne, it will procure for the United Provinces foreign alliances, I cannot pretend to say.

From a source which is entitled to credit, I was informed that the raising and embarkation of Osorio's army in Peru was not accomplished without serious difficulties. Alternate force and persuasion were used to collect them, and nothing but the name, character, & promises of their general, could have induced them to go on board of the vessels prepared for the purpose, at the port of Callao. Some of them were actually in a state of mutiny, justly intending they were told they would be received with open arms by their brethren in Chili.

The forces finally embarked, agreeably to an account furnished by a gentleman of undoubted veracity on the spot, consisted of the following troops:

1 company of artillery	70
1 do. sappers & miners	81
Regiment of Brugos	900
Do of San Carlos infantry	907
Do of Arequipa	1000
Arequipa dragoons	260
Lamas	144
	3362

This army was composed of all the regular soldiers they could spare from Lima, who were united, at Talcaguna, to the royal forces left in Chili. By the battle of Maipu, it has ceased to exist. The probable effects in Peru and in other parts of South America, may be conjectured, but cannot be affirmed.

The same gentleman who has been mentioned and is conversant in Peruvian affairs, apprehended, that important changes would result.

I cannot conclude this paper without drawing your attention to a rapid survey of the reforms and improvements in the province of Buenos Ayres, produced by the revolution, and its influence on knowledge, society & manners.

The effects of the revolution are visible in the changes produced in the state of society. The difference in the freedom of acting and thinking, which preceded the revolution must necessarily be great. The freedom of commerce has given a spring to exertions of native enterprize and intelligence, while the active scenes of war and politics, for the last ten years, have awakened the genius of the country, which had so long slumbered. The generation now on the stage, may almost be said to have been reared under a new order of things. The common stock of ideas among the people has been greatly augmented; the natural consequence of the important political events which daily transpire, and in which every man like the citizen of Athens, feels an interest. The newspapers are every where circulated, together with the manifestos of the government, which is obliged to court the approbation of public opinion on all measures of moment. It is not very unusual for the same countryman, who a few years ago, never troubled himself about any thing beyond the narrow circle of domestic concerns, to purchase a newspaper on coming to town, as a matter of course, and, if unable to read, to request the first one he meets to do him that favour. The country curates are, moreover enjoined to read the newspapers and manifestos regularly to their flocks. —The spirit of improvement may be seen in every thing. Even some of those who are under the influence of strong prejudices against the revolution, frequently remark the changes for better which have taken place. Their habits, manners, dress, and mode of living, have been improved by intercourse with strangers, and the free introduction of foreign customs, particularly English, American, and French. Great prejudices prevail against whatever is Spanish. It is even offensive to them to be called by this name; they prefer to be identified with the aborigines of the country. The appellation which they have assumed, and in which they take a pride, is that of South Americans.

A powerful stimulus must necessarily have been given to their industry, by two important circumstances, the diminution in prices of foreign merchandise, and the great increase in value of the products of the country, with the consequent rise of property.—Though the grounds in the neighbourhood of cities are highly improved, as I have already stated, agriculture, comparatively speaking, is in a low condition. In general the lands are badly tilled. The plough is rarely used, and the substitute is a very indifferent one. But, notwithstanding the disadvantages of the present method of culture, I was informed by reputable persons that the average crop of wheat is not less than 50 bushels per acre in good seasons.

On the subject of religion, especially, the change in the public mind has been very great. The catholic faith is established as that of the state, but there are many advocates both in conversation & in writing, of universal toleration. Some members of congress are strongly in favour of it, but the ignorant and superstitious part of the people, together with the regular clergy, would not be satisfied with such a measure—while the liberality evinced by such as secure a virtuous inactivity for the present. Besides, in the circumstance of there being no sects in the country, such a provisionary step would be premature. In fact, the human mind has not yet free, on all matters of a general & abstract nature, although the liberty of the press is circumscribed in some degree with respect to strictures on public measures and men, and the established religion; but there is neither inquisition nor previous licence. They acknowledge the pope as a spiritual head merely, and do not think him entitled to any authority to interfere in their temporal concerns. His bull in favor of the king of Spain against the colonists, which may be almost regarded as an excommunication, produced little or no sensation.

The number of monks and nuns never were very great in Buenos Ayres, when compared with other portions of the Spanish dominions.—They have diminished since the revolution.—There was at one time a positive law passed, forbidding any one to become a monk or a nun; but they were obliged to repeal it, and it was afterwards passed with some modifications.—The restrictions substituted, aided by public opinion, have nearly produced the desired effect. Few of the youth of the country apply themselves to the study of theology, since other occupations, much more tempting to their ambition, have been opened to their choice. Formerly the priesthood was the chief aim of young men of the best families, who were desirous of distinction; as in fact, it constituted almost the only profession, to which those who had received a liberal education could devote themselves; which will readily account for the circumstance of so many of the secular clergy directing their attention, at present, almost exclusively to politics. The regular clergy, who are not permitted, by the nature of their profession, to take part in the business of the world, or to hold secular offices, are many of them Europeans; but those of them who are natives, take the same lively interest in passing events, with the other classes of the community.

They have gone cautiously to work in reforms in the different branches of their municipal laws and the administration of them. The number of officers has been considerably diminished, and responsibility rendered more direct and severe. The judiciary system has undergone many improvements, and nearly all the leading features of the law, which did not harmonize with the principles of free government, have been expunged, though some of the former evils still remain. The barbarous impositions on the aborigines have been abolished.—The odious alcavalla, and other obnoxious taxes, modified so as to be no longer vexatious—slavery, and the slave trade, forbidden in future—and all titles of nobility prohibited, under the pain of the loss of citizenship. The law of primogeniture is also expunged from their system. In the provisional statute, as has already been stated, nearly all the principles of free representative government are recognized, accompanied, it is true, with certain drawbacks, for which they plead the necessity of the times, but which they profess their intention to do away, on the final settlement of the government—a consummation anxiously desired by all classes of inhabitants. The example of France has warned them not to attempt too much at first: they have followed the plan of the United States in the introduction of gradual reforms, instead of resorting to violent & sudden innovations & revolutions.

Next to the establishment of their independence by arms, the education of their youth appears to be the subject of the most anxious interest. They complain, that every possible impediment was thrown in the way of education previous to the revolution; that, so far from encouraging public institutions for this purpose, several schools were actually prohibited in the capital, and the young men were not without restraint permitted to go abroad for their education.—There was a college at Cordova, at which those destined for the bar, or the priesthood, completed their studies, upon the ancient monkish principles. Another called San Carlos, (now the union of the south) had been opened at Buenos Ayres, but was afterwards converted into barracks for soldiers. It is an immense building, more extensive, perhaps, than any which has been dedicated to learning in this country; and it has lately been fitted out at a very great expense. The school was to have opened in May or June last, on a more modern & liberal plan of discipline and instruction. The library of the state is kept in an adjoining building; it occupies a suite of six rooms, and contain nearly 20,000 volumes; the greatest part rare and valuable.—It is formed out of the library of the Jesuits, the books collected in the different monasteries, donations from individuals, and an annual appropriation by the government, and contains works on all subjects and in all the languages of the polished nations of Europe. A very valuable addition has been lately made of several thousand volumes, brought to Buenos Ayres by M. Bonpland, a companion of the celebrated Humboldt.

Besides the university of Bordoval at which there are about one hundred and fifty students, there are public schools in all the principal towns, supported by their respective corporations. In Buenos Ayres, besides an academy, in which are taught the higher branches, and the college before mentioned, there are eight public schools, for whose support the corporation contributes about seven thousand dollars annually; and, according to the returns of last year, the number of scholars amounted to eight hundred & sixty four. There are five other schools, exclusively for the benefit of the poor, and under the charge of the different monasteries; these are supplied with books and stationary at the public expence. There are also parish schools in the country, for the support of which a portion of the tithes has been lately set apart. It is rare to meet with a boy of twelve years of age, in the city of Buenos Ayres who cannot read and write. Besides the schools thus instructed, many have private tutors. In addition to all this, I must not omit to mention the military academies supported by government at Buenos Ayres & Tucuman, at which there are a considerable number of cadets.

There are no prohibited books of any kind; all are permitted to circulate freely, or to be openly sold in the bookstores; among them is the new testament in Spanish. This alone is a prodigious step towards the emancipation of their minds from prejudices. There are several book-stores, whose profits have rapidly increased: a proof that the number of readers has augmented in the same proportion. There has been a large importation of English books, a language becoming daily more familiar to them.

Eight years ago, the mechanic art of printing was scarcely known in Buenos Ayres; at present there are three printing offices, one of them very extensive, containing four presses. The price of printing is, notwithstanding, at least three times higher than in the United States, but, as there is no trade or intercourse with Spain, all school books used in the country, some of them original, are published at Buenos Ayres; the business is therefore profitable, and rapidly extending.—There are many political essays which, instead of being inserted in the newspapers, are published in loose sheets; there are also original pamphlets, as well as publications of foreign works. The constitutions of the United States and of the different states, together with a very good history of our country & many of our most important state papers, are widely circulated. The work of Dean Funes, the venerable historian of the country, comprised in three large octavo volumes, considering the infancy of the typographic art in this part of the world, may be regarded as an undertaking of some magnitude.

There are three weekly journals or newspapers published in the city, which have an extensive circulation through the united provinces.—They all advocate the principles of liberty and republican forms of government, as none other would suit the public taste. The year before last, it is true, one of the papers ventured to advocate the restoration of the Incas of Peru, with a limited monarchy, but it was badly received. No proposition for the restoration of hereditary power of any kind, as far as I could learn, will be seriously listened to for a moment by the people. Even the ordinary language had changed. They speak of "the state," "the people," "the pubuc," "the country," and use other terms, as in the United States, implying the interest that each man takes in what appertains to the community. The first principle constantly inculcated is, "that all power rightfully emanates from the people." This and similar dogmas, form a part of the education of children, taught at the same time with their catechism. It is natural, that the passion for free government should be continually increasing. A fact may be mentioned to show the solid advancement they have made, which is, that the number of votes taken at their elections increases every year. In becoming habituated to this peaceful and orderly mode of exercising their right of choosing those who are to be invested with authority, the tumultuous and irregular removal, by a kind of general oratory or acclamation, of those who have been chosen, will gradually cease.

Rather than disturb the order of society, they will endure with patience, until the time arrives for effecting a regular and constitutional change. Since the election of the present director, none of these tumults, before so frequent, have occurred. These tumults have seldom been attended with bloodshed; yet they produce great confusion and disorder, and give rise to habits of insubordination, at the same time that they are ruinous to the character of a nation.

I am sensible that in the course of these statements and remarks, some inaccuracies & errors must have occurred, but they have been unintentional. I have only to add, that the reception of the commissioners at Buenos Ayres, by the chief magistrate, was friendly & flattering.

From every class they met with a cordial welcome. The people in general appeared to be very much attached to the American character, and to the governments and citizens of the United States.

Should any thing further occur, it shall be made the subject of a future paper.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your most obedient servant.

C. A. RODNEY.

A Tartar, who arrived here yesterday from Cairo, in an interval of 20 days, has brought the news, that the troops of the Pacha of Egypt have been beaten by the Wechabites in Upper Egypt. The decision of congress, in the affair of Baden and Bavaria, is said to be that Baden shall retain all her former possessions, except a part of the Tauber Circle, which is to be given immediately to Bavaria. If I can depend upon the information I have received, the ceded district does not contain a population of more than 3000 souls. The succession of Baden will descend to the family of Flockberg without any dismemberment of the Palatinate. If such is the decision of congress, it appears extraordinary that Austria or Bavaria should resign so easily so rich a succession; and the decision can only be attributed to the powerful interference of Russia.

FRANKFORT, Oct. 18.

We learn that the diet has already adopted some preliminary measures respecting the military system of the German confederation, which are doubly important at this moment, since the allies, by evacuating France give up the fortresses which they hold on the frontiers.

Thus it is resolved, that the important fortresses of Luxemberg Mentz and Landau, shall be shortly given up to the army of the confederation. On the south western frontiers on the side of France, where there is at present no fortress, it is resolved to make the town of Ulm a place of arms and fortress of the first rank, and to defray the expense twenty millions are assigned out of the French military contribution.

In order to have at all times a fortified point, to pass to Upper Rhine and keep up the communication with Landau, it is intended to erect, at Gomersheim, or, if the nature of the ground should hinder it, as near to that place as possible, a double tete de pont, for the expenses of, which fifteen millions also from the French contribution are assigned; the erection of these fortresses to be commenced as soon as possible, that is, before the end of these present years, so that they may be in a proper state of defence in three years.

Besides these fortresses, some other point is to be fortified on the south west frontier, probably Rastadt or Donaueschingen, and another between Landau and Luxemberg, for which latter the military committee proposes Homburgh.

It is proposed that the army shall consist, for the next five years, of one per cent. of the whole population of the confederation, that is, about 300,000 men. The reserve of one half per cent on 150,000 men; the reserve shall be called together in the several states as soon as the army marches. Two thirds of the reserve shall be then always ready to march when required.

A sixth of the army to be cavalry, a third part of which is to be heavy cavalry. Two pieces of artillery for 1000 men, or six hundred for the army and three hundred for the reserve; one half 6 pounders, one quarter 12 pounders, and one quarter howitzers. A one hundredth part of the whole army to be pontooners and pioneers; one twentieth sappers & carbineers; a part of the contingents may consist of laudwehr, but the troops of the line must be the majority. The landsharm is no part of the regular defence of the confederation.

DEATH OF SIR SAMUEL ROMILLY.

MELANCHOLY SUICIDE.

The melancholy event which we have this day to announce, will fill every part of the kingdom with mourning—not only of the kingdom, but every part of the enlightened world, where a just reverence for the cause of civil and religious liberty rendered its most distinguished Advocate dear to the hearts of the liberal and humane. Sir SAMUEL ROMILLY, distracted by the death of his most amiable and beloved wife, has sunk under the severe visitation of Providence. An Inquest was held by the Coroner this day, and therefore our readers will have the afflicting particulars in to-morrow's paper. We have already stated that Lady Romilly died at the house of Mr. Nash, in the Isle of Wight, after an illness of near a twelve month, during which time were intervals of convalescence. Sir Samuel had suffered the most heartrending agitation for some weeks, during which he was without the refreshment of natural sleep, when all the delusive hopes he had entertained of her recovery were withdrawn, by the visible approaches of the fatal moment. The agony of his sufferings occasioned the most alarming apprehensions to his friends; and his nephew, Dr. Roget, the Rev. Mr. Dumont, and Mr. Nash, as well as his own family, attended him with the most anxious solicitude. The event was not communicated to him till Friday morning, and it was thought proper to remove him from the scene the same day. He was brought to London by easy journies, where he arrived on Saturday. His fever was most excruciating, but he manifested the most exemplary fortitude to conquer the despair which assailed him. "My head," he exclaimed, "is a furnace—I feel the violence of my distress—I may sink under it—my excellent nephew is exhausted—pray call to his aid Dr. Marcet."—Both Dr. Marcet & Dr. Babington did attend him, and in the course of Sunday and of Sunday night, a favorable perspiration gave the Physicians hopes that his fever would abate. But, alas! in a paroxysm, he desired his amiable daughter, who had been left in the room with him, to call Dr. Roget, and on her departure, it appears that he suddenly quitted his bed, and in the delirium of his grief put an end to his existence. In one minute Dr. Roget entered, and found him weltering in his blood. He was in his sixtieth year. He left six sons & one daughter to lament his loss—but who shall repair it to afflicted humanity?

FROM THE KINGSTON CHRONICLE.

SIR,

Having been some years resident in this Province, and possessing a considerable property in it, which I had always found and looked on as secured by the just administration of a wise system of laws, I have, of late, been very much concerned at the confident assurances which have met my eyes, in the shape of Addresses Petitions, &c. "that all the blessings of the social compact were running to waste," and that "all we fought for in war, and all we hoped for in peace was in danger."

My neighbors around me seemed to be going on much in the old way, and I have always asked in vain, where the danger was coming from; but have been lately much relieved from my apprehensions, by the publication of an inventory of grievances, by Anthony McGuin, Esq. J. P.

I now know the extent of our danger, and feel easier: and for the benefit of others, who may have been panic-struck, like myself, shall state the remarks that occurred to me when I saw the worthy justice's production.

KINGSTON GAZETTE, Nov. 24.

GRIEVANCE.—That, during the late war, the inhabitants of this Province, aided by a small body of regular troops, resisted it, and even captured the enemies armies. They went from their peaceful homes, to endure all the privations of a military life, to different from their own, contracting diseases, by being exposed to fatigue and other sufferings. They have received no recompence for their property destroyed by the enemy: but have been slighted, through misrepresentation at home, so as to have their loyalty questioned.

REMARK.—When, and by whom has such misrepresentation been made? I have heard of none. But I know that the effect of the miserable Township meetings, and the resolutions and misrepresentations there made by such idle and discontented people as usual together and call themselves a numerous and respectable body, have been to misrepresent and very much to disgrace the loyal people of this province in the opinion of our Parent State. Our mother country is fully sensible of our meritorious exertions during the late war,—we have received repeated assurances of it, and if any thing can weaken the impression, it is the clamour of Squire McGuin, & his friends. A brave and generous people never boast of their courage, nor expect to be paid for defending themselves and the government they have sworn to maintain.—When, some years ago, the people of Great Britain, of all ranks & classes, at the prospect only of their country being invaded, embodied themselves and rallied at all points, ready to meet the invader, did they expect to be paid or land for their services? Do not let us hold ourselves out to the world, as mere mercenaries, or worse than mercenaries; for they are contented with their pay & allowances.

Then as to payment of all losses we have sustained in the war, would Squire Anthony tell us of the country that has a right to be indemnified against all they lose and suffer by the ravages of war.

GRIEV.—That the fostering care of the mother country is almost withheld from us: we are threatened with a duty upon our lumber sent home, and if it takes place the trade is destroyed; when at present, our exports do not meet our imports.

REM.—What can we have a right to expect from the mother country than she does not extend to us? As to the duty upon lumber, proper representations on that head, had the desired effect. Can Great Britain have any desire or intention wantonly to injure the trade of her Colonies?

GRIEV.—In the Land granting department, partial gifts have been given to such as extent, as to paralize or destroy the hopes of the actual settlers, by being surrounded by wild land, owned by persons looking forward for its increased value at the expence of such actual settlers.

REM.—Is it part of the desired reform to deprive people of their property that has been granted to them? If not, why exclaim about it now? Has Squire McGuin no wild land? The Golden days for grants I believe have passed; but, when they were in fashion, would Squire McGuin have objected to receiving a small block of 1200 acres near some actual settlers?

GRIEV.—That we lament to observe a manifestation to circumvent and curtail the rights of the subject, and to reduce them to abject submission: almost intimating that our duty is passive obedience and non-resistance, pursuing a system of taxation, wherein the burden falls upon the middle class, letting the opulent escape with a mere trifle.

REM.—Squire McGuin talks of passive obedience and non-resistance, and Mr. Gourlay of dying a martyr. All these phrases are of the date of Charles 1st. They are quite out of place in the Kingston Gazette for 1818, and look rather ridiculous. As to taxation, we know not whether Squire McGuin is one of the opulent or the middle class, nor, consequently how heavy his burden is: will he have the goodness to tell us whether he pays 2s. 9d. per annum, or 12s. 6d. to the support of the state?

GRIEVANCE.—That we always desire to pay a due respect to the laws, and to those in authority to execute them, providing honor and justice guide their conduct. Yet, other feelings must take place, when we hear of men debasing themselves, by exciting tumults, and actually committing an assault and battery, using their power of office to escape with a small fine, and in inflicting a long imprisonment on another, whose only fault was in protecting the object of their rage.

REM.—Parish business.—'Squire McGuin should dispose of assaults & batteries in the Session: we know not the man of wrath, who used the power of his office to escape with a small fine; nor do we know the object of his rage.

GRIEV.—The unequal assessment of land, all being rated alike in whatever situation it may be in, or if it is worth ten times more than others.

REM.—Will 'Squire McGuin tell us how we shall proportion our Land Tax? it would puzzle His Royal Highness the Prince Regent to do it, even upon 'Squire McGuin's information.

GRIEV.—The road act requires a man with small means to do as much, as the man glutted with landed or other property.

REM.—All but half true, and 'Squire McGuin must get into Parliament, and join his wits, to remedy the evil. But there is no need of getting into a passion about it.

GRIEV.—Absentees not being rated at all.

The rating all stores and shops alike.

The licences for Shops and Taverns alike, no regard being paid to the stand, or the stock in trade.

REM.—As 'Squire McGuin's political knowledge expands, he will find that these matters occasionally employ the consideration of the Legislature, who think a little now and then of what they are about.

GRIEV.—The application of the revenue of the Province, large sums being applied for purposes the public derive no benefit from; particularly the giving three thousand pounds to purchase a toy with. The increasing certain salaries, already large enough, considering the state of the Province.

REM.—That is not the sin of the present parliament: that was the last wicked act of Representatives, who were so inconsiderate as to give several servants of the public quite enough to keep them from starving; they before had only half enough. Our present representatives have been guilty of no such liberality.

GRIEV.—The want of an act to enforce the payment of small debts (where there is no visible property) by the Commissioners of the Courts of Requests. If are told they have an act at home; that does not fine the debtor (if he does not give satisfaction) as many days as the debt is shillings.

REM.—'Squire McGuin thinks the liberty of the subject is rather too great, and proposes giving the little Court power to imprison.—What naughty man owes the 'Squire twenty shillings, that he cannot enjoy the luxury of keeping the poor rogue twenty days in gaol. Who told the 'Squire they would work him so in England? Happy country!

GRIEV.—The same want for a breach of trust.

REM.—Why 'Squire McGuin, who's your Attorney? does he tell you we have no remedy for a breach of trust? Read 'Squire, read before you write. Did you never hear we have the laws of England?

GRIEV.—The same want to moderate the extortionate charge of Lawyers.

REM.—O! the lawyers and the Crown Officers! what have they done to you, 'Squire? Pay your debts, 'Squire, and keep out of a scrape, and you may laugh at them all.

GRIEV.—The act to imprison a person three months, or a fine of £20 for selling liquor without a licence even by the small measure with a sheep license, (and this upon one single oath) is unbecoming, many bad thieves escape with that confinement.

REM.—Most christian 'Squire! did it never occur to you that if you want any revenue, you must make laws to enforce the collection of it? It is easy for a man to avoid selling by the small measure, or to take out a licence. But you are an active Magistrate, 'Squire. You will find that uncertainties as the law is, it is very often broken: besides; laws are not always severe in proportion to the moral guilt of an offence, but often to the difficulty of preventing it. Then as to one oath: I dare say, 'Squire, if you saw a man steal your horse, you would see him afterwards hanged upon your oath with great complacency.

GRIEV.—That the manner of confining debtors in Kingston, is repugnant to every humane feeling: numbers are crammed together in a room, without the means of egress when the calls of nature require. For little a expence the yard might be made safe for them to be admitted to take the air.

REM.—If that is true, it can only be for want of good magistrates. Anthony McGuin, Esq. J. P. I am sorry to hear it.

GRIEV.—The bringing produce from the States, duty free, when under a certain rate, is very unjurious to the farmer, and the country in general.

REM.—Here again, 'Squire McGuin, we want you in parliament, and if you only go on abusing the government I dare say you will get there. I do not believe you know altogether what you are telling us, about duty free, certain rates, &c. &c. look at the act, 'Squire! You have heard somebody holding forth about grievances, and have caught hold of the wrong end—but you meant well!

GRIEV.—That persons whose sufferings and loyalty for the Government was great, have, by some capricious or interested persons been struck off the U. E. list, to the great injury of their families, and their Town Lots wrested away from them by some unjust means.

REM.—Most Christian 'Squire. You would not fine a man £20 upon a single oath for selling liquor without a licence would you? But you will charge the public with wresting away town lots by unjust means, and injuring people's families, upon no oath at all—and give us nothing but the 'Squire's word for it—that's candid, 'Squire, and christian.

GRIEV.—It is reported that the crown Lawyers receive 30 dollars for every person they can get convicted. We hope no such means of speculation are allowed to sport with the liberties and sufferings of the people.

REM.—Have you ever committed offences, and had rather no one should be paid for prosecuting you, 'Squire? or have you had any of your sheep stolen, and would rather pay the extortionate Lawyers yourself for prosecuting the thief, than have the expense paid for you.

GRIEVS.—That persons engaged in particular duties having no land were promised some to settle upon, which they have not received.

REM.—Do, 'Squire, descend to particulars.

GRIEV.—That a large sum of money is given for the support of Teachers in District Schools, the greatest part of which never reaches them.

That the money given for the common schools, of any district, the poor should receive the benefit of.

REM.—Besides the District Schools, of which not only the children of the opulent have reaped the benefit, about £5000 per annum are devoted to the support of the Township Schools, which are expressly for the poor. What you next contented 'Squire, that all of another country under the Sun that spent one fourth of its revenue in schools for the poor?

GRIEV.—That we have great cause of alarm when we remember it was contemplated by some in the Assembly, that the Executive might dispose of the public money, without accounting to them for it, at the time an enquiry was made after the fate of several thousand pounds, in the early part of Gov. Gore's administration.

REM.—Don't be frightened 'Squire, Sally's frightened at things that are past. Get into parliament, 'Squire, I tell you again.

GRIEV.—That of late the sale of the Province lands have been confined to some of the Executive Council, and others favoured in the sale of them, and that no Land Board has been held for the last two years. What a pity! but perhaps the ignorant people did you know there was an Anthony McGuin, Esq. J. P. There will be no excuse in future, so I hope 'Squire will get all the acts, not read, learn, and inwardly digest them. Among the rest, an act to prevent certain mortgage

GRIEV.—That we acknowledge the Right of Assembly by virtue of the Constitutional Act, to tax our stock and lumber.

REM.—

GRIEV.—That it is their duty to raise the encouragement of those who are willing and ready to make the general welfare, and prosperity of the Province, the object of their pursuits, and that they were [illegible] for the [illegible]

REM.—

GRIEV.—That the disorderly conduct of the disaffected people in the late war, [illegible] that the disgraceful proceedings of the Militia Court of Inquiry, held at various places in the Province, and more particularly at Ancaster, in the Gore District, where persons were [illegible] of their allegiance, and incapable of the Government care which had charged [illegible] with treason, although the person had [illegible] as to the moment of the [illegible] and that the Court [illegible] Upper Canada Gazette, [illegible] Township meetings. Look at the English and even at the American papers, which contain the [illegible] wretched Conventions of the disaffected [illegible] of one malignant Jacobin, to the encouragement of the revolted Colonies before the revolution, and then wonder at our folly, and ask what we could gain by several. They take their measures to express the general sense of the people, as they know, 'Squire, that every respectable inhabitant of this Province, for from countenancing them, despises them, and all who are joined by the instigation of them; and as to the [illegible] whose oath requires that they should assemble and not add thirty-one to those of a few [illegible] disaffected brawlers. Your Representatives, worthy 'Squire, never called the people to deliberate, but imagined that the efforts of a few factious men tended to give actual currency to the opinion of our neighbors, and it is very true.

GRIEV.—That nothing is more dangerous than to [illegible] unfounded [illegible]

REM.—Except factious Magistrates, who, instead of being an example to their fellow subjects, to sink into their minds discontent with the government they are especially bound to [illegible]

GRIEV.—That the enactment of [illegible] arises from the conduct of the [illegible] [illegible] Let them act justly to the people and discontent ceases.

REM.—No, No, 'Squire!—The [illegible] Canada is a sudden rolling out of [illegible] country, with his pockets crammed with ready made [illegible] and [illegible] Lots, for which [illegible] and there a score of the People [illegible] foolish enough, and wicked enough to want [illegible] name to. That's the excitement, 'Squire. There will very quiet before the [illegible] Wilcocks, Marcer & and Mallory, the [illegible] dependent representatives of the people, were over to the Lastepe.

GRIEV.—That it is necessary that some restriction be made for the poor; by the [illegible] of your House, or [illegible] some means to [illegible] soon as possible, [illegible] manner of [illegible] them, being very expensive and without any [illegible] authority.

REM.—Why, 'Squire, where's the burden? and what is the present manner of keeping them? Charity is never against legal authority. You would have the Poor Laws, would you? the very best laws that ever man or mind warbled out of the British Constitution. Mr. Gourlay talks to us a vast deal about the poor laws, (and no doubt you have heard him [illegible] them) and tells us to read a note to every single Member of the Parliament in England about them: which said letters, strange to tell, they took no notice of! Oh! 'Squire, if we had but had the Poor Laws, you would not have been half so hard run for grievances.

Having derived great comfort from a good contemplation of all the grievances that Anthony M'Guin, Esq. J. P. has been able to conjure up, I am happy to find that 'Squire M'Guin, (taking to himself one discreet brother from the Township of Kingston) should get enough of the money subscribed at the meeting at Mr. Gourlay's store, and if it will pay their way over the Atlantic, should present themselves at the foot of the Throne, and simply inform His Royal Highness how very easy a thing it is to govern a country so as to please every body: So [illegible] also hint the necessity of [illegible] taxes; letting all men that serve the public starve for the general good, and for the gratification of her pleasure of Anthony M'Guin, Esq. J. P. [illegible] ving the little knots the contrast over the liberality of the subject; letting lawyers and revenue officers work for nothing, and honorable and luxurious thing, the Poor law, into a new country: then, if the fund holds out, let the 'Squire try a little of the world, and, when he comes back, lay his hand on his heart, and with candour declare, whether he believes there is a country on earth, where Mr. Gourlay and his friends, settling all their ingenuity at work, could find so little to amuse, without destroying life.

UPPER-CANADA GAZETTE.

Lieut. Governor's Office,
January 16th 1819.

The melancholy intelligence of His Majesty's death having been received it is hoped that every class of His Majesty's subjects in this Province will express their grief for this fatal event, by appearing in decent mourning according to their ability.

(By Order) GEORGE HILLIER.
P. Sec'y.

His Excellency the Lt. Governor has received the following address from the magistrates, &c. &c. of the county of Glengarry :

To his Excellency Major General Sir Peregrine Maitland K. C. B. Lieut. Governor of the Provinces of Upper Canada &c. &c. &c.

The Loyal Address of the Clergy, Magistrates, Officers of Militia and other Inhabitants of the County of Glengarry.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY.

We, the Clergy, Magistrates, Officers of Militia and other inhabitants of the County of Glengarry, having in the address we had the honor of presenting to your Excellency, on your arrival in this Province, expressed our firm attachment to the Government of our Sovereign, and to the glorious constitution of our Country, and our determined resolution to defend both with the last drop of our blood, should consider it unnecessary to trouble your Excellency on this occasion, with a repetition of our unalterable sentiments, did we not perceive so many others pressing forward to testify their approbation of the Laws passed in the last Session of our Provincial Parliament, for restraining certain seditious meetings.

We concur most heartily with our fellow subjects in approving of that law, and every other constitutional measure that may be adopted to bear down treason and sedition, under whatever form those odious monsters may wear their guilty heads. For we should consider we had discharged the least important part of our duty, by shedding our blood in the field, in repelling the open attacks of the foes of our country, were we not equally ready to support the government, in repressing the insidious machinations of its domestic enemies.

We view with indignation, the attempts of desperate demagogues, to disturb the public mind, by conjuring ideal grievances, which exist only in their heated imaginations, perfectly convinced that their object is not the amelioration of the condition of the inhabitants of this province, who actually enjoy every freedom and independence, which the mildest laws and the most perfect form of constitution can bestow : but to create confusion and to fish in troubled waters in hopes thereby of gratifying their malice and of extricating themselves from the desperate situation into which their madness has brought them, and that to attain their selfish ends those pretended patriots would wade through oceans of the blood of their deluded votaries.

The wisdom and energy which manifested themselves in the commencement of your Excellency's administration, & the measures which we see in progress for the good of the country, command both our grateful acknowledgement, and our implicit confidence, and open to our view a cheering prospect of the rapidly increasing prosperity of this highly favoured portion of the British Empire.

That the Almighty may preserve your Excellency's life and health, already rendered dear and important to every loyal subject in this Province, and enable your Excellency to rule for many years in the grateful hearts of a free people, is the sincere wish and ardent prayer of the inhabitants of this county.

[The signatures, amounting to nearly four hundred, we are obliged to defer inserting until next week.

To which His Excellency has been pleased to make the following reply :

GENTLEMEN,

Receive my thanks for your loyal, patriotic, and affectionate address.

The hearts of your ancestors were ever obedient to the call of their Country. It was their glory to have made the banner of St. Andrew respected by her European Enemies. It is yours to have made the same banner respected by her Enemies in this Hemisphere : But this was not their only merit : an equal degree of praise is due to them for the not less important exercise of pacific virtues ; for their brotherly attachment to each other, their love of order and instruction, and for their principled submission to the laws and government of their country.

Such, Gentlemen, were the virtues that enabled your ancestors ; such are the virtues which eminently exist at this day among your European brethren. And I rejoice that the beneficent and blessed author of our Faith, has made you perceive them worthy of your esteem and imitation : may he, in his goodness, confirm you in every good habit, and bestow on you every other blessing.

His Excellency the Lt. Governor has been pleased to appoint the following Gentlemen to be Commissioners under the act for vesting the Forfeited Estates viz :

The Hon. James Baby,
James Macaulay,
Grant Powell,
Geo. ge Crookshank,
William Allan, and
Peter Robinson, (M. P.) Esqrs.

His Excellency has further been pleased to appoint Lt. Col. Wells to be Special Receiver under the above Commission.

Grievances, as stated by certain inhabitants of Ernest-town. continued.

Another source of complaint is the injudicious grants of public money. Among several which have appeared to us objectionable, in the present pecuniary circumstances of the country, we beg leave to state, that in the appropriation of nine thousand two hundred pounds two shillings and two pence half penny, towards defraying the charges of the civil list of the Province for one year, by the Act of the 57th of Geo. III. there is the sum of four hundred pounds appropriated " for four Clergymen," and fifty pounds for " one Minister of the Gospel." Believing the Clergy Reserves, which equal a seventh part of all the Lands granted in the Province, " to be an appropriation beyond all precedent lavish," for the maintainance of the Clergy of one religious denomination, we consider it a grievance that the Provincial fund should be encroached upon for that purpose ; and we likewise humbly hope, that the Crown Reserves, being equal to another seventh part of the lands granted in the Province, may consistently with the design of their reservation, be made to produce a fund sufficient to relieve the mother country from the burthen of the civil establishment of the Province ; without charging so heavy a sum upon the Provincial Revenue. With this view we wish the subject to be represented to the proper authorities for consideration.

3. The instructions issued by Lieut. Governor Gore to the Magistrates, not to administer the oath of allegiance to emigrants from the United States, without special licence, besides putting applicants to the trouble and expence of going and sending to York from all quarters of the Province, have made their admission to the oath depend upon the discretion of the Executive, in cases where it is a matter of legal right, if the Act of the 13th of Geo. II. for the naturalization of foreign protestants, by seven years residence, and the 30th of the present King, entitled, " An Act for encouraging new settlers in His Majesty's Colonies in America," are in force in this Province. Until the instructions referred to, we believe, those statutes were considered to be in force here, and were acted upon accordingly ; and they have not been repealed. But the effect of those instructions has been to suspend their operation ; and, as the oath of allegiance is a requisite qualification for holding lands, many valuable settlers have thus been excluded from purchasing, settling and cultivating land in this Province, where agricultural labour, especially that which is adapted to the clearing of new lands, is so much wanted. To remove this obstacle, Resolutions were introduced into the House of Assembly, at their Session in 1817, declaring those statutes in force here, and for other purposes ; some of which Resolutions were adopted by the House, but, before they had acted upon the others of them, they were suddenly prorogued, and thereby prevented from making the intended representation on the subject. The prohibitory instructions, we are informed, remain unrevoked, although, in some instances, disregarded by Magistrates, who think them contrary to law. We complain of this as a grievance.

4th—There is a grievance of an opposite character, the recent attempts to execute British Navigation Laws, which from the first settlement of the Province, have been considered as not in force in this Province, and therefore have not been executed here, until the Collector of Kingston lately undertook to put them in execution, by seizing a cargo of flour belonging to James Crooks, Esq. together with the vessel in which it was shipped at Burlington, with a clearance from the Collector there to the port of Kingston. Under the same laws one or two other seizures are said to have been made. Without presuming to decide the question of the applicability of these Navigation Acts to this Province, we will only remark, that if they are to be executed upon the principle of being now discovered to be applicable to our inland waters, after more than thirty years inexecution, it would surely be reasonable to give His Majesty's subjects notice of the intended change, by a public Proclamation of it, before subjecting them to the forfeiture of their property, for shipping their goods on board vessels not supposed to be prohibited, having also been employed by Government in the transportation of Public Stores from one port to another in this Province. It would also be just that the same laws should be enforced alike against all, if against any, vessels, boats and cargoes coming within their prohibitions ; whereas we are informed, and believe, that cargoes of great value have been, and are, suffered, without seizure or interruption, to be transported to and from the port of Kingston, on bottoms as fairly within the prohibition of those laws, if in force here at all, as that in which Mr. Crooks' flour was transported.

5th—The Collector of the same port has also required boats, &c. employed exclusively in the inland trade of the Province, and the transport trade between this and the Lower Province, to be entered at the Custom-House, as being within the Provincial Statute on the subject, after sixteen years uniform practice upon that Act, as applicable only to boats, rafts and carriages arriving from the United States.

6th—Ignorance of the laws not being admitted as a legal excuse for transgressing them, it is important, that they be fully and seasonably promulgated. On this point we have had cause for complaint. The Provincial Statutes passed from year to year, and generally taking effect from their dates, have been so tardily printed and distributed, that they have frequently been in operation for months, before any effectual publication of them. Sometimes, indeed, we have been, a great part of the year, subject to laws, which we had no practicable means of obtaining.

7th—We complain of the highway taxes, required of the inhabitants of the Province by Statute ; not on account of their object, which are highly approved ; not for their amount, to which we do not object ; nor for the manner of their payment in labor, which is more convenient than if payable in money, without the option of paying in labor ; but, for their apportionment, which we think is unequal and unjust, and in which we pray to Your Excellency to recommend an alteration.

YORK, 21st January, 1819.

A gentleman, on whose accuracy we can rely, has requested us to insert the following statement :

Having on many accounts, a respect for the Gentry of Wiltshire, and having as good reason as the gentlemen who traduces them in the Niagara Spectator, to know what passed at the county meeting, held at Devizes in 1816, I beg you will give the following account of it, a place in your paper. It happened that the meeting in question, took place in front of the Bear Inn, which had formerly been kept by a person of the name of Halcomb, whose daughter, Mr. Hunt had married, and afterwards deserted, having run away with the wife of Col. Vince, at whose house he had been received as a friend.

The people who assailed Mr. Hunt with the overbearing clamour Mr. Gourlay complains of, were not " the tenantry of the nobility and other great Landlords," but the manufacturing people of the town.——Their cry was " where's your wife, Hunt ?" mixed with allusions to his having run away with the wife of his friend, &c. So far from the Gentlemen having excited this clamour, it arose from the generous indignation of the people at unprincipled conduct. The gentleman who were present wished that he should be heard, and tried their utmost to gain him a hearing.

These, Sir, are the facts which composed the scene described by Mr. Gourlay, as being more " disgraceful to civil society than any he had ever witnessed."

I have, &c.

That it is the opinion of this meeting, that it is highly expedient a Memorial be immediately drawn up and forwarded to York, in order to be laid before his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, in Council, praying for the authority and patronage of that Honorable Executive body, to erect a commodious building for an English Episcopalian Church upon the ground reserved by the Executive Government of this Province for such purpose, between Church and Rear Streets in the town of Belleville.

Q. by the court. What steps were taken by the Negroes & Indians on the receipt of the letter?

Q. by the court. Did the Indians and Negroes act together in the performance of military duty?

A. No—but they always said they would fight together.

No. 2.

Supposed to be for Bowlegs, to the Governor of St. Augustine.

To his Excellency Don Jose Coppinger

To his Excellency James Grant, Governor, of St. Augustine.

SIR—I had the honor of receiving your letter of September, but the impossibility of finding a person to write an answer to the same, is the cause of this apparent neglect.

I shall be very happy to keep up a good understanding and correspondence with you, and hope you will, when occasion offers, advise me of such things as may be of service to myself and people. My warriors and others that go to St. Augustine, return with false reports, tending to harrass and distress my people, and prevenring them from attending to their usual avocations. At one time, the Americans and upper Indians supported by a force of about 3000 men were runing lines far within the Indian territory; another time, are collecting a force at Fort Mitchell, in the forks of Flint and Chatahoochy rivers, to fall on the towns below. Now, sir, we know of no reason the Americans can have to attack us, an inoffensive and unoffending people. We have none of their slaves; we have taken none of their property since the Americans made peace with our good father, King George. We have followed the orders of his officer that was with us, Lieut. Col. Edward Nichols, and in no wise molested the Americans, though we daily see them encroaching on our territory stealing our cattle, and murdering and carrying off our people.

The same officer also told us, we, allies to the Great King, our father, were included in the treaty of peace between our good father and the Americans, and, that the latter were to give up all the territory that had been taken from us before and during the war. Yet so far from complying with the 9th article of that treaty, they are daily making encroachments on our land, getting persons who are not known to the Chiefs, and without any power or authority, to grant and sign over lands to them. Thus, they deceive the world, and make our very friends believe we are in league with them.

The principal Chiefs of the nation, with the head Warriors, assembled at my town on the 8th instant, and came to the resolution of informing the British Minister at Washington, of the conduct of the Americans and the officers of their government, towards us; it has been done accordingly, and copies sent to England.——We demand of the King, our father, to fix some of his people among us, who may inform him, from time to time, of what is passing, and see the Americans do not extend themselves on our lands. The Spanish subjects in Floridas are too much in the interest of the Americans to be our friends.——For the Governors I shall always entertain the greatest regard—but, for the people, they do not act so as to merit any extension and protection. You desire I would chase those marauders who steal my cattle; my people have lately driven some Americans from Lathewoy, and, I have no doubt, the Americans will hold off this as a pretext to make war on us, as they have before done, in stating we harbor their ran away slaves.

Gen. Mitchell, Agent for Indian Affairs.

King Hatchy, the head chief of the Lower Creek Nation, had called on me to request I would represent to you the cruel and oppressive conduct of the American people, living on the borders of the Indian nation, and which, he was in hopes, from a talk you were pleased to send him some weeks since, would have had put a stop to and peace restored between the Indians and American people. But, far from any stop being put to their inroads and encroachments, they are pouring in by hundreds at a time. Not only from the land side, but ascending the Appalachicola in vessel loads; thus the Indians have been compelled to take up arms to defend their homes from a set of lawless invaders. Your known philanthropy and good will to the Indians, induces the head chiefs to hope, that you will lose no time in using your influence to put a stop to those invasions of their lands, and order those who have already presumed to seize our fields may retire therefrom.

The Indians have seized two persons they think have been greatly instrumental in bringing the Americans upon them, and they are now in their possession as prisoners.——It is even reported they have made sales of Indian lands without the knowledge, consent, or approbation of the chiefs of the nation; and from their long residence in the nation, and the great influence that one of those people formerly enjoyed among the chiefs, there is some reason to believe he has been guilty of improper conduct to the Indian nation.

Petition of the Chiefs of the Lower Creek Nation, to Governor Cameron.

We, the undersigned, deputed by the Creek nation to wait on your Excellency, and lay before you their heavy complaints.——To the English, we have always looked up to as friends, as protectors, and on them we now call to aid us in repelling the approaches of the Americans, who, regardless of treaties, are daily seizing our lands and robbing our people; they have already built seven forts on our lands; they are making roads and running lines into the very heart of our country, and, without the interference of the English, we shall soon be driven from the land we inherited from our forefathers.

The Americans tell us the English will regard us no more, and we had better submit to them; but we cannot submit to their shackles, and will rather die in defence of our country.

When peace was made between the English and Americans, we were told by Lieut. Col. Nichols, that the Americans were to give up our lands they had taken, and we were desired to live quietly and peaceably, in no wise molesting the Americans. We have strictly followed those orders: but the Americans have not complied with the treaty. Col. Nichols left Mr. Hambly in charge of the fort at Prospect Bluff, with orders to hear us, if any cause of complaint, and represent the same to the British government; but he turned traitor, and brought the Americans down on the fort, which was blown up, & many of our red brethren destroyed in it. The ammunition stores intended for our use were either destroyed, or taken off by the Americans. We have sent several messengers to inform your excellency of these proceedings of the Americans, but they have never returned to us with an answer. Three of our red brethren have lately been killed by the Americans, while hunting on our lands, and they threaten to attack the towns of Michkasuky and Sahwahnee, the only two large towns left us in the Creek nation, and, without aid from your Excellency, we cannot repel their attack. We are, therefore, deputed to demand of your excellency the assistance of troops and ammunition, that we may be able effectually to repel the attack of the Americans, and prevent their further encroachments: and, if we return without assistance, the Americans, who have their spies among us will be more quickly on us upon us. We most humbly pray your excellency will send us such a force as will be respected, and make us respectable.

Charles Cameron, Esq. Governor, Commander in Chief, &c. &c.

I beg leave to represent to your excellency the necessity of my again returning to the Indian nation, with the deputies from the chiefs, and as my trouble and expense can only be defrayed by permission to take goods to dispose of amongst them, I pray your excellency will be pleased to grant me such a letter or licence, as will prevent me from being captured in case of meeting any Spanish cruiser on the coast of Florida.

The court adjourned to meet to-morrow morning at 7 o'clock.

Fort St. Marks, 28th April, 1818.

The court convened pursuant to adjournment. Present.

Maj. Gen. E. P. GAINES, President.

Members—Col. King, Col. Williams, Lt. Col. Gibson, Major Muulenberg, Maj. Montgomery, Captain Vashon, Col. Dyer, Lt. Col. Lindsay, Lt. Col. Elliott, Maj. Fanning, Major Minton, Capt. Crittenden, Lieut. J. M. Glassell, Recorder.

When the further examination of the the witness Peter B. Cook, took place, viz.

Q. by the prisoner. How long have you been acquainted with the settlements on the Suhwaisee?

A. Between six & seven months.

Q. by the P. For what term of years did you engage to live with the prisoner?

A. For no stated period—I was taken by the year.

Q. by the P. Were you not discharged by the prisoner from his employ?

A. He told me he had no further use for me after I had written the letters to Providence.

Q. Where did you stay after you were discharged?

A. I staid in a small house belonging to a boy called St. John, under the protection of Nero.

Q. What was the subject matter of the letters you wrote to Providence?

A. After being refused by the prisoner a small venture to Providence, I wrote my friends for the means to trade by myself.

Question by the P. Do you believe the prisoner had knowledge of the ventures being on board the schooner?

A. I don't believe he did. It was small and in my trunk.

Q. by the P. Do you know that Ambristie was the agent of the prisoner?

A. I do not.

Q. Do you think that the powder & lead shipped would more than supply the Indian & negro hunters?

A. I did not see the powder & lead myself, but was told by Boleg that he had a great quantity he had there keeping to fight with.

Q. Did the Indians reside on the east side of the river? A. They did.

Q. You were asked if the negroes & Indians, when the letter marked A. was communicated, they did not take up arms: had they received information of the defeat of the Indians at Mickasuky prior to that time?

A. It was afterwards, I believe, they received the information.

Q. Did not Boleg keep other powder than that he got from the prisoner?

A. He had some he got from the Bluff which was nearly gone; he said his hunters were always nothering him about powder.

Q. Did you state that at the time Ambristie ascended the river there was no other vessel at the mouth of the river?

A. There was none other there; there was one had sailed.

Q. There is a letter A spoken of; how do you know that the son of the prisoner had that letter in his possession?

A. I saw him with it, which he dropped, and a boy, called John, picked up and gave to me.

Q. You stated that the Indians and negroes doubted the fidelity of the prisoner in sending letters to the Prince Regent—do you think the prisoner would have been punished by them had he not complied with their wishes.

A. I do not know.

Q. Do you believe the prisoner was compelled to write the Indian communication?

A. He was not compelled.

William Hambly, a witness on the part of the prosecution, being duly sworn, and commencing a statement of what he heard the chiefs say, and the prisoner objecting to hear any evidence of that kind—the court was cleared in order to take the question; when they decided that the prisoner's objection was not valid. The witness was therefore recalled, and stated, that fifteen or twenty days after the prisoner arrived at Ocklocknee, the Seminole Indians began to steal horses from the United States settlements, and committed murders on the Satilla river, which, he was informed by them, was at the instigation of the prisoner.

The chiefs of the Little Village in witnesses's neighborhood then desired him to write a few lines to the prisoner, stating those reports, and that he did not know that those Indians he was executing had long been outlawed, and cautioned him against such proceedings, or he might be involved in their ruin. This the witness did, when the prisoner wrote him a long and insulting letter, which was lost, upbraiding the witness for calling those Indians outlaws, and accusing him of exciting the Indians to cruel war. The witness was told by chiefs and Indians who had seen the prisoner, that he advised them to go to war with the United States, if they did not surrender them the lands which had been taken from them, and that the British government would support them in it.

The Indians that took the witness & a certain Mr. Doyle prisoners, which happened on the 15th December last, told them that it was by the prisoner's order; and on their arrival at Mickasuky (as prisoner) King Hijah and all his chiefs told them it was by the prisoner's orders they were taken and robbed—on their arrival at Suwaney they were told by the Indians and Negro Chiefs who sat in counsel over them, that the prisoner had advised that he should be given up to 5 or 6 Choctaw Indians who were served from the Negro Fort, who would revenge themselves for the loss of their friends at that place. On their return from Suwaney, the Chief King Hijah told them that he had got the prisoner to write several letters for him, one to the Governor of Providence, one to the British Minister at Washington, one to the Secretary of State in London, and one to the American Agent for Indian Affairs, protesting against the proceedings of the commanding officer at Fort Scott. While the witness was at Suwaney, the Indian Chiefs told him, that the prisoner had arrived at that place with ten kegs of powder on board his vessel; and while at Fort St. Marks, sometime in March, Hillisajo or Francis, brought an order from the prisoner to the commandant for two kegs of powder, with other articles which were in his possession.

Q. by the Court. Were any murders or depredations committed on the white settlements by the Indians previous to the prisoner's arrival at Ocklocknee?

Ans. None, except one murder at Fort Gaines, which was before or about the time of the prisoner's arrival.

Ques. How long have you resided among the Indians; state to the Court whether you are acquainted with the indian language, and how long since you learned it?

Ans. I have resided among them fourteen years, and have understood their language twelve years.

Ques. Do you believe the Seminoles would have commenced the business of murder and depredations on the white settlements, had it not been at the instigation of the prisoner and a promise on his part of British protection?

A.—I do not believe they would, without they had been assured of British protection.

Ques. by the Court. What was the light in which the prisoner was received by the hostile Seminoles; was it that of an authorised agent of the British government?

Ans. The different chiefs always represented him to me as such.

The witness recognised the letter marked G. and signed A. Arbuthnot, as being a copy of the one alluded to in his testimony as lost.

Ques. by the Prisoner. Are you acquainted with the prisoner's hand write?

Ans. I have seen it, but cannot say I am acquainted with it.

Ques. Is that which you have just seen and say is the copy of the one you lost, the prisoner's hand write?

Ans. It looks to be his hand writing, but I cannot say positively.

Ques. Was the prisoner considered as the agent of the Seminoles at the time those murders were committed.

Ans. I had not seen the prisoner at that time; the Indian Chiefs told me that the prisoner had reported himself to them as an English Agent.

Ques. Where did you understand the prisoner to be when you were taken prisoner?

Ans. The Indians told us that he had gone over to Providence, but was expected back by the time we should arrive at Suwaney.

Ques. Did you not request King Hijah to prevail upon the prisoner to give you a passage in his schooner to Providence?

Ans. Yes, but was told that the prisoner refused it, stating that, if we were forced upon him, he would blindfold us and make us walk overboard.

Ques. What were the reasons given by King Hijah for the prisoner's not granting your request?

Ans. King Hijah stated that the prisoner was fearful of meeting with an American vessel, where we should be taken out and he thereby lose his schooner.

Edmund Doyle, a witness on the part of the prosecution, being duly sworn, was questioned as follows:

Q. by the Judge Advocate. Do you know any thing that would lead to substantiate the charges against the prisoner now before you?

A. I know nothing but from common report.

William Fulton, an evidence in the present prosecution being duly sworn, testified the copy of the letter from A. Arbuthnot to General Mitchell, Agent for Indian Affairs, dated Suwaney 19th January, 1818, and marked No. 6, as acknowledged by the prisoner, to be the same in substance as one written by himself at that time—an extract from the letter was then read.

No. 6.

Extract from a letter written by A. Arbuthnot to Gen. Mitchell, American Agent for the Creek Nation of Indians, dated Suhawnee, 19th January, 1818.

In taking this liberty of addressing you, sir, in behalf of the unfortunate Indians, believe me I have no wish, but to see an end put to a war, which, if persisted in, I foresee must eventually be their ruin, and, as they were not the aggressors, if in the height of their rage they committed any excesses, that you will overlook them as the just ebullitions of an indignant spirit against an invading foe.

I have the honor to be, &c.

A. ARBUTHNOT.

By order of King Hijah and Bowlegs acting for themselves and the other Chiefs.

Q. by the Prisoner. Where did the prisoner acknowledge the letter just read to be a copy of the one written by him?

A. In the encampment before the place about the 6th or 7th inst.

Q. by the P. Did you hear a gentleman say to the prisoner, when in confinement, that those who recommended the scalping knife and tomahawk, should feel their keenest edge?

A. I did hear a gentleman say, that those who excited the Indians to the murder of the murdering, should feel the keenest edge of the scalping knife, but, as well as I recollect, that observation was not made until after the required acknowledgments of the prisoner having written the letter.

TAKE NOTICE.

WHEREAS a most Gross, Wicked, Vicious, and Malicious Falsehood, having appeared in the Niagara Spectator, signed Henry Dress, intimating, that Daniel Brook, junr. had taken a Receipt Book, belonging to the said Henry Dress, which contained sundry papers and one note of hand against the said Daniel Brook, for £1749 12 3, Halifax Currency, whereas it appears in a final settlement made at the request of both parties, by Nicholas Osborne, Esq. Merchant, of Montreal, that there is a balance due Daniel Brook, of £2090 12 2, Halifax Currency, which was not brought forward at the first settlement in the account current, the documents being mislaid and lately found, and it was finally agreed by both parties at that time, and a Bond signed by each, that if any omission, or errors should hereafter discovered, the same should be allowed; the latter sum having been found on a close investigation of the account Current, to be due to the said Daniel Brook, it leaves Henry Dress £826 10 11 Hx. Cy. in his debt; the items composing the sum of £2090 12 2 Hx. Cy. have been sworn to by Nicholas Osborne, Esq. before J. B. C. De Lery, Justice of the Peace, Montreal, the most of those items were brought in the account current, at the final settlement on the dissolution of their Partnership.

THE NAVY.

The following regulations have been just issued, are now carrying into effect at Portsmouth, Plymouth, and the river :—

Reduction in Guard Ships—A three decker reduced to a complement of 135 (from 360,) including a Sergeant's party of Marines; If a flag ship, to have 10 more Marines, 10 additional seamen, & a Subaltern of Royal Marines. Three Lieutenants, the Chaplain, second Master, 16 Midshipmen, and Assistant Surgeon, reduced,

A two decker reduced from 300 to a complement of 95, including a Sergeant's party of Marines; but if bearing a flag, to have the same addition of seamen & Marines as that to which the three deckers are entitled. One Lieutenant, second Master, one Assistant Surgeon, and ten Midshipmen, with Chaplain, reduced.

The lower masts & yards only to be kept rigged; topmasts pointed through the caps; the boats to be returned to the dock-yard, and a cutter and two small boats substituted to each ship, from the Ordinary. They are to have one month's provisions, and water complete, on board. The whole will make a reduction of about 2,000 men. The cruising ships are not reduced.

By the regulations, only five sail of the line will in future be kept in a state of equipment: one in the East Indies, one in the Mediterranean, one at St. Helena, one at Leith, and one at Cork. The remaining eight guard ships will be placed upon the low scale mentioned. One naval Chaplain only will be appointed for ships at each port.

General instructions for the future exercise of the great guns on board his Majesty's ships and vessels have recently been issued to the respective Captains and commanders by the Lords of the Admiralty, by which it is intended that some uniform system should be established throughout the fleet, so that the Officers and men belonging to one ship, in case of need, may be capable of co-operating immediately with the crew of any other ship to which they may be removed. The divisions of Royal marines and royal marine artillery, on shore, are also to be instructed in this exercise.

FUNERAL OF SIR SAMUEL ROMILLY.

The remains of this much lamented gentleman were removed on Friday morning, so early as six o'clock, from Russell square, for interment in the family vault of Lady Romilly's father, at Knill, near Prestein in Radnorshire. The cavalcade consisted of six out riders, a hearse and six containing the body, followed by a coach and six, with the late author only. Immediately on the death of Sir Samuel an express was sent off to delay the interment of the remains of Lady Romilly till the arrival of his corpse, in order that they might be interred in the same grave; and this mournful and affecting ceremony is expected to take place on Wednesday next. No arrangement could possibly be more proper or praise worthy.

It is stated that Sir Samuel Romilly died worth no less a sum than £180,000, in landed and funded property. He is supposed to have annually netted from sixteen to seventeen thousand pounds, by his professional exertions. Sir Samuel's law library is said to have been the most choice and valuable of any possessed by the profession.

It is a fact well known in the legal circles, that the late Sir Samuel Romilly was in the constant habit of giving his able opinions upon cases laid before him when the parties were in the humbler walks of life, without fee or reward, & in several instances the worthy Barrister has given sums of money out of his own purse, to enable distressed objects to carry on their suits with success.—Sir Samuel was for several years subject to a very severe "nervous" irritation, (doubtless induced by his almost incessant mental exertions,) which very frequently appeared, while engaged in his barristerial avocations.

It is a singular circumstance, that in the parish church of St. Bride, Fleet street, there is a simple undecorated tablet, placed against the wall, on which there is an inscription to the memory of an ancestor of Sir Samuel Romilly, "who died of a broken heart," seven days after the decease of a beloved wife.

Extract of a letter from a Gentleman in Georgia, to his friend in Newark N. J.

"While on this subject, (the importation of negroes,) I will relate an affecting anecdote that came to my knowledge yesterday. My negro boy, Mr. B. had purchased 20 of that unfortunate race, a few weeks ago in Charleston, among whom was a woman about 20 years of age. On the way home, they stopped to pass the night at a house on the road, just as the negroes belonging to the owner of the place, were returning from their labor in the field.—One of them proved to be the husband of the woman. They had been torn asunder two years before, in Africa. They met in this distant clime, and with such emotion of joy, mixed with bitterness and grief, on the recollection of their past & present condition, as may be more easily conceived than described. They flew to each other—asked an hundred questions—& looking at the spectators, who sympathised in their feelings, declared they should never be parted.—Mr. B. who is a man of humanity, was present at this affecting scene. He immediately offered the owner of the husband, to sell the wife or purchase the husband—but in vain! He then offered two negroes for the man—but the wretch would do neither. The momentary pleasure the poor creatures experienced, when Mr. B. was endeavoring to prevent their being separated, was converted into frantic agony when they saw nothing would avail. All who were present, black & white, united in entreaties; & every eye but the miscreant owner of the husband, was in tears. Nothing would soften his obdurate heart —and the unhappy victims of his cruelty were a second time literally torn asunder.

Report of the Secretary of War, upon the subject of the reduction of the expenses of the Military Peace Establishment of the United States; on a change in the ration established by law; and of a system for the establishment of a Commissariat for the Army.

Department of War.
Dec. 11th, 1818.

In compliance with a resolution of the house of representatives, passed the 17th of April last, directing "the secretary of war to report, at an early period of the next session of Congress, whether any, and if any, what reduction may be made in the military peace establishment of the United States, with safety to the public service; and whether any, and, if any, what change ought to be made in the ration established by law, and in the mode of issuing the same; and also to report a system for the establishment of a commissariat for the army," I have the honor to submit the following report.

In order to form a correct opinion on a subject involving so many particulars, as the expence of our military establishment, it will be necessary to consider it under distinct & proper heads: To ascertain, then, "whether any, and, if any, what reductions may be made in the expences of our military establishment," I propose to consider its number, organization, pay and emoluments, and administration. To the one or to the other of the heads all of its expences may be traced; and, if they are greater than what they ought to be, we must search for the cause in the improper extent of the establishment—the excessive number of officers in proportion to the men—the extravagance of the pay and emoluments, or the want of proper responsibility and economy in its administration.

Pursuing the subject in the order in which it has been stated, the question which offers itself for consideration is, whether our military establishment can be reduced "with safety to the public service," or can its expenditures be, with propriety, reduced, by reducing the army itself. It is obvious that, viewed in the abstract, few questions present so wide a field for observation, or are so well calculated to produce a great diversity of sentiment, as the one now proposed. Considered as an original question, it would involve in its discussion the political institutions of the country, geographical position and character.

Lane Intelligence.—At the last Mayor's Court came on for trial the case of Maurice, inspector of oil, vs. Judd a vender, which, strange as it may seem, turned on the question whether a whale is a fish? To support the negative, the learned Dr. Mitchell was sworn, and a number of persons not so learned: while, on the other side, a number of witnesses, equally respectable, testified that they had always been accustomed, during their whole lives, to consider every inhabitant of the great deep, and which could not live on land, as fishes, and the whale among the rest. It consumed nearly three days in settling the question; all the sellers of oil being one way of swearing, and all the buyers another; and perhaps the jury might have been puzzled until this time, had not the learned Dr. Mitchell unfortunately quoted the first chapter of Genesis in support of his opinion. The doctor remarked, that it is there said, that "God created great whales, and every living creature that moveth, which the waters brought forth abundantly": from which he inferred that the whale was a separate creation from fishes. This put the other side upon the same track; who found a text in the old testament, which states, that "Jonah was in the belly of the fish three days & three nights," and in the new, that "Jonah was three days in the whale's belly." Putting the two together, they proved that a whale was a fish, according to scripture authority. Besides, they said that the doctor's text, if it proved any thing in the case, would prove too much, for it would equally prove that a whale was not a living creature. Finally the jury by their verdict decided that a whale is a fish. Sir Joseph Banks, we are told by the ingenious Peter Pindar, once made an experiment, to satisfy himself whether dons were not lobsters, by boiling them to see if they would turn red, but the result disappointed his expectations, he is made by the poet to exclaim, peevishly.

"Plague on't lobsters, d——n their souls."

MOURNING FOR A QUEEN.

All the dyers' houses in London, and generally through the country, have been for a considerable time in full activity, dying black. Garments of every description, in male and female attire, have been sent to the dyers to be dyed black, in contemplation of a certain event daily apprehended in the Royal Family. It has, however, been recently discovered that purple, not black, is the court mourning prescribed on the demise of a British Queen. It will, therefore, be necessary to send the black back to the dyers to be dyed purple. It is now eighty years since the death of a reigning Queen (Caroline,) in England. The ignorance of the present generation with respect to the mourning to be observed on such an occasion, is therefore the more excusable. The gentlemen's dress, we believe, is purple coat and waistcoat, with black breeches and stockings.

SAINT JOHN, (N. B.) Dec. 15

I am happy to observe, from the Editorial Remarks in the Fredericton Royal Gazette of the 1st instant, that the late unwarrantable conduct of some Americans in coming in to the Madawaska settlement, and other places, on the upper part of the River St. John, and claiming all the country on that river above the line of the late exploring Survey, as belonging to the United States, has excited attention in that quarter.

UPPER-CANADA GAZETTE.

UPPER-CANADA.

P. Maitland,
Lieut. Governor.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the THIRD by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith,

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Councellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to our Provincial Parliament, at our Town of York on the eighth day of February one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you

GREETING:

WHEREAS by our Proclamation bearing date the twenty sixth day of December one thousand eight hundred and eighteen, WE thought fit to prorogue our Provincial Parliament to the eighth day of February one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, at which time at our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear, NOW KNOW YE that WE taking into Our Royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforesaid; hereby convoking AND by these presents enjoining you and each of you, that on Tuesday, the sixteenth day of March, next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament, in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada, and thereto to do as may seem necessary, and herein fail not.

IN TESTIMONY whereof We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed. Witness our Trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of our Province of Upper Canada, and Major General Commanding our Forces thereon, at York this thirtieth day of January in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighteen and in the Fifty-ninth year of our reign. P. M.

By Command of His Excellency.
D. CAMERON.
Secretary.

Grievances, as stated by certain inhabitants of Ernest-town, concluded.

These proceedings appear to us to be an abuse of the Custom House authority and laws, which ought to be checked and redressed. No grade of officers should be permitted to use His Majesty's name to sanction vindictive or interested prosecutions. Laws should be executed faithfully, but impartially, and not in a manner to entrap and plunder, by captious penalties, those who honestly endeavour to comply with them, according to their true intent and meaning.

10th—The successor of President Brock to the administration of the Province did, as an encouragement to the Militia to volunteer in the flank companies, and enlist in a Provincial corps for permanent duty in defence of the country, recommend such volunteers and corps to His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, for grants of land, at the expiration of the war with the United States. Nearly four years have elapsed since, and no appearance of the fulfilment of such a promise. Wherefore we consider this a grievance, and pray that your Excellency will be pleased to recommend to His Royal Highness the expediency of making such grants, as a reward for the eminent and useful services of His Majesty's loyal militia of Upper Canada.

11th—Another cause of complaint has originated among many against the land Council, that officers of the Navy and Gentlemen from Great Britain, have, on application to the Board granting pretences, received grants with the privilege of special locations, to the exclusion of many natives of the province, whose locations are generally remote from settlements and of little benefit, and consequently a manifest injury to the prosperity of the Province, inasmuch as the former in a very few instances make a settlement, while the latter are deterred by the unfavorable situation of their's. Such instances of partiality call much complaint, and we humbly pray your Excellency will allow every grant of land to locate any waste lands which are now open, or may be hereafter open for location.

12—By a Provincial Act passed in the 55th year of His Present Majesty, entitled "An Act to licence practitioners in physic & surgery throughout the Province," persons not licenced according to the provisions of that act, were prohibited from prescribing for sick persons or practising Physic, Surgery or Midwifery, under the penalty of a hundred pounds for every offence. Many practitioners of good character, education, skill, and experience, although not licenced in the manner required by the act, were then in practice, throughout the Province, in each of those branches with the general confidence and approbation of their patients. By the lenity of the act, we must look upon it to have from its date, all such persons incurred its penalty, before they would know of its passage, and have since had no opportunity of being examined and licenced, as the board of examiners provided for by the act have not been organized. This we consider a grievance to those practitioners, and to His Majesty's subjects at large, who have frequent occasion for medical assistance, and wish to be at liberty to obtain it from those to whom they can conveniently apply, and in whom experience has taught them to confide.

13—The common law rule of descents, by which the eldest son of an intestate inherits all his land, to the exclusion of the other children, appears to us not necessary in this Province, upon any political consideration, there being no hereditary aristocracy among us, requiring to be supported by a perpetuation of the real estate in one branch of a family; nor is it adapted to the circumstances, education, habits and manners of those who are the subjects of it, but is uncongenial with the general sentiments there being probably few if any parents, in the Province, having more children than an only son, who would be willing to have their estates descend as the law now casts the descent; and yet, from a natural propensity to defer the disagreeable business of making a will, and the difficulty of complying with the requisite legal formalities, in cases of sudden death, in the absence of counsel, and amidst the distress and agitation of dying hours, many persons die, without declaring their estates as they would wish them to be disposed. The principle of the statutes of distribution of personal estate, seems to be equally applicable, in this country, to real estates; and we pray your Excellency to consider the propriety of recommending an act, to extend and apply that equitable principle to the descent of intestate real estates.

These, may it please your Excellency, are subjects, on which we humbly pray for redress, and improvement. In compliance with your Excellency invitation, signified in a letter from your Secretary, we specify them to your Excellency and respectfully submit them to the consideration and decision of the proper authorities for granting the relief prayed for, with a solemn assurance, that while, as free born British Subjects, we assert & exercise the right of petitioning, we feel, and as loyal subjects, will practise the duty of submission to the laws and respect for the constitutional authorities.

YORK, Feb. 3, 1819.

Having arrived at the end of the list of grievances, which our readers will have observed in the Official columns of our three last numbers, we feel it, in some degree, a duty we owe to the public, to offer a few remarks upon the production.

In the address which forms the preamble, it is said, "whatever in the tone of the petition has appeared unfinished. we hope will be ascribed to the surprise and pain with which we perused the new and unexpected attack" &c. we expressed in strong unstudied language" &c.

Unfortunately, just before this address arrived at our office, we had been reading an article of Mr. Gourlay's in the Niagara Spectator of the 10th Dec. which relates the history of the petition alluded to in the above extracts, and it fell thrown at into much perplexity. We cannot discover how the pain and surprise, which the subscribers state themselves to have felt, can have had any effect upon the style of a petition, which Mr Gourlay says, he "composed at the outset of the business," and which, it seems, he brought with him to Ernestown, ready drawn in his pocket. Here are his own words, "Next day the hog drawn out for the occasion, I submitted to the meeting that which I have now shown as having composed at the outset of the business."

We have read of a poor deranged gentleman, who having been born dumb, fancied himself a great orator; and Mr. Hatter tells us of many unhappy Bedlamites, who were possessed by fancies of the same nature: but did any body ever hear, except in the present instance, of a whole assembly of thirty or forty persons, all fancying themselves the author of another man's composition? and which, near two months afterwards, the delirium still continuing, they say, "we expressed ourselves in strong unstudied language"? That is, in a petition, which, before they left the board of it, had probably been produced for the applause and concurrence of one or two other meetings, & which was composed by Mr Gourlay at the outset of the business. Moreover, this strong unstudied language of theirs, the sudden abortion of pain and surprise, as the subscribers will have it, or his petition, composed at the outset of the business, as Mr. Gourlay has it, was,

...ing to be under consideration, and which was ...ly adopted," as the honourable gentleman, "deliberately adopted," so that however little study the real author may have bestowed upon the engendering of it, the adoption of the strong embodied bran, by the meeting at Scarnistown, seems to have been a deliberate act.

But to be serious, among the list of subscribers, we see, besides the fifteen who have so honestly confessed that they were imposed on, the names of many others, who we feel are incapable of leading their names to a direct falsehood; and we therefore think it just to conclude that some artful deception has been played off to ensnare them.

We now proceed to the grievances; the first of these contains complaints against the land granting department;—first for unnecessary delays of these the complainants have not brought fit to produce any particular instances, and so we are not inclined to form what has gone before and from what follows, to take any thing upon their bare assertion; when they attempt to substantiate these complaints by facts, we hope to be able to answer them. The other complaint against the department is, for partiality and favoritism in the granting of lands; and of this the complainants have thought fit to adduce an instance. "A valuable tract of land" say they, "in the township of Murray, has been promised to a member of the Land Council, in preference to others." This is their statement, and a more wilful instance of misrepresentation, we have never witnessed. The land in question was not granted to a member of the Land Council, but it was granted to the present Mr. Jones, and twelve years before he had any thing to do with the Land Council. It was granted to Dr. Strachan, then Minister of Cornwall, as the usual grant given to Clergymen, to induce gentlemen of that profession to settle among us, and it was located for the Dr. by a friend of his, who happened to be at York, in preference to any other person whatever; nay, the land in question had not at that time, probably, been even an object of desire to anybody, for in 1804 there was no settlement near it, and only two houses at Bellville.

The next grievance complained of, is the injudicious grant of public money—Great Britain, finding herself on finishing, with glory to herself and benefit to mankind, the arduous war in which she was engaged, burthened with a great debt, called upon her Colonies to support a portion of the expence necessary for conducting their own affairs. They rejoiced in obeying the call. Some, like Lower Canada, assumed the whole of their expenditure; but the complainants now declare that Upper Canada should refuse to pay even a small part; for the great sum of nine thousand pounds, in so far from defraying the expences necessary for carrying on our own affairs, that the British Parliament is obliged to vote an annual grant of more than eleven thousand pounds to make up the deficiency—so that we do not pay one half of the sum necessary to support our Courts of Justice, different departments, &c.

But the Clergy, it seems, get £460 out of this £9000. Did the subscribers, when they signed this, know that our Mother Country gives £2,800 to support Clergymen in Canada? They resign £4600! Will any one then dare to reproach this Province for its inattention to religion; such as it is, they desire to make it worse and to deprive us of the solitary indication, afforded by the local authorities, that this is a Christian country.

The Clergy sevenths are said to be an appropriation beyond all precedent lavish. What of them? So long as lands are granted for nothing, the reserves will not be productive and lavish as the appropriation is said to be, it is not equal to the provision made for the Clergy in England.

And the Crown reserves, why are they not made to relieve the Provincial revenue? Why not say at once to the King, "Most Gracious Sovereign, we are living upon Your Royal Bounty; You have bestowed upon us, or granted for our benefit, six-sevenths of all Your lands in Canada, but this is nothing, so long as you keep back one-seventh for yourself: give us this also, that we may be content, or we shall continue to consider it a very great grievance.

[We intend resuming the subject in our next.]

Good roads being of the highest importance to every country, and particularly to this, we are pleased to observe a spirit of improvement increasing very much in different parts of the Province, and with pleasure insert the following communication:

To the Editor of the Upper Canada Gazette.

SIR,

It may be well to inform the public that I have carried a line, to be run from my farm, No. 14, fourth concession of Hope, to No. 14, first concession of Cavan: and the road, which was begun on Wednesday the 20th inst. will in all probability be completed next week, by a few hardy determined Townsmen. The ground through which the road passes is generally good & dry, and no hill of any moment. It will I hope be of lasting benefit to the settlers; and government, hereafter, seeing its importance, will render some assistance.

Yours &c.

Fort St. Marks, 27th April, 1818.

The court proceeded to the trial of Robert C. Ambristie, a British subject, who, being asked if he had any objections to any one of the members of the court, and replying in the negative, was arraigned on the following charges and specifications, viz:

Charges against Robert C. Ambristie, now in custody, who says he is a British subject:

Specification 1st. That the said Robert C. Ambristie did give intelligence of the movements and operations of the American army between 1st and 20th of March, 1818, and did excite them, the negroes and Indians, to war against the army of the United States, by sending their warriors to meet and fight the American army;—whose government was at peace & friendship with the U. States and all her citizens.

Head Quarters, Division of the South, Arty. General's Office, St. Mark's, 23d April, 1818.

GENERAL ORDER.

Captain Allison, of the 7th infantry, is detailed to form a supernumerary member of the special court now sitting at Fort St. Marks.

By order.

ROBERT BUTLER, Adj. Gen.

Pursuant to the above order, the supernumerary member took his seat.

John Lewis Phanix, a witness on the part of the prosecution, being duly sworn, stated that about the 26th of April, 1818, his vessel & himself having been captured by the prisoner, and he brought to Suwany as a prisoner, there was an alarm among the negroes & Indians, created by learning some news from Mickasuky at which time the prisoner appeared active in sending orders and sending a detachment to meet the American army. The witness also stated that the prisoner appeared to be a person vested with authority among the negro leaders, and gave orders for their preparation for war, providing ammunition &c. And that the leaders came to him for orders. The prisoner furnished them with powder & lead, and recommended to them the making of ball, &c. very quickly.—The witness also stated that the prisoner occasionally dressed in uniform, with his sword; & that, on the first alarm, which he understood was from Mickasuky, by a negro woman, he put on his uniform.

The witness further stated, that some time about the 20th of March, 1818, the prisoner, with an armed body of negroes, (24 in number) came on board his vessel, and ordered him to pilot them to Fort St. Marks, which, he stated, he intended to capture before the Americans could get there—threatening to hang the witness if he did not obey.

Q. by the Court. Did you ever understand by whose authority, and for what purpose, the accused came into the country?

A. I have frequently heard him say, he came to attend to Mr. Woodbine's business at the bay of Tamper.

Q. by the Prisoner. Did I not tell you, when I came on board the schooner Chance, I wished you to pilot me to St. Marks, as I was informed that two Americans, by the names of Hambly and Doyle, were confined there, and I wished to have them relieved from their confinement?

A. You stated you wanted to get Hambly & Doyle from St. Marks.—I did not know what were your intentions in so doing.

Q. Did I not tell you that I expected the Indians would fire upon me when arriving at St. Mark's.

A. You did not; you stated that you intended to take the fort in the night, by surprise.

Q. Did you see me give ammunition to the negroes & Indians; &, if so, how much & at what time?

A. I saw you give powder & lead to the negroes when you came on board, and advised them to make balls; and I saw you give liquor & paint to the Indians.

Q. Have you not often heard me say, between the 1st & 20th of April, that I would not have any thing to do with the negroes & Indians in exciting them to war with the U. States?

A. About the 15th of April, I heard you say you would not have any thing to do with the negroes & Indians; I heard nothing about exciting them to war.

Q. Can you read writing?

A. Not English writing.

Q. Did you not hear me say, when arriving at Suwany, that I wished to be off immediately for Providence?

A. I did not; after the alarm, you said you wished to go to Providence.

Q. Did you not say to the accused you wished to visit Mr. Arbuthnot, at his store in Suwany, and get provisions for yourself?

A. I did not; I stated I wanted provisions.

Q. Did I send or commaid any Indians to go & fight the Americans?

A. I did not exactly know that you sent them; the Indians & negroes were crowding before your door, and you were dividing the paint, &c. among them; and I understood a party was going to march.

Q. Did I not give up the schooner to you in charge as captain?

A. After our return from Suwany Town, you directed me to take charge of her to go to Tamper.

John L. Arbuthnot, a witness on the part of the prosecution being duly sworn, stated that, some time about the 23d of March, the prisoner came, with a body of negroes, partly armed, to his father's store on Suwany river, and told the witness that he had come to do justice to the country, by taking the goods & distributing them among the negroes & Indians—which the witness saw the prisoner do; and that the prisoner stated to him that he had come to the country on Woodbine's business to see the negroes righted. The witness has further known the prisoner to give orders to the negroes, and that, at his suggestion, a party returned on meeting the Mickasuky Indians in their flight. The witness also testified to the following letter, marked A, and referred to in the specification of the 2d charge as the writing of the prisoner: A.

Robert C. Ambristie to Governor Cameron, March 20th, 1818, Sahwahnee, near St. Marks Fort.

Sir—I am requested particularly by all our Indian chiefs, to acquaint your Excellency, that the Americans have commenced hostilities with them, two years ago, and have advanced some considerable distance in this country, and are now making daily progress. They say they sent a number of letters to your excellency, but have never received one answer, which makes them believe that he never delivered them; and will oblige them much if you let me know whether he did or not. The purport of the letters were, begging your excellency to be kind enough to send them down some gun powder, musket balls, lead, cannon, &c. as they are now completely out of those articles. The Americans may march through the whole territory in one month, and without arms, &c. they must surrender. Hollis Hajjo, or Francis, the Indian chief, the one that was in England, tells me to let your Excellency know, that the Prince Regent told him that whenever he wanted ammunition, your excellency would supply him with as much as he wanted. They bid me to press upon your excellency's mind to send the above-mentioned articles down by the vessel that brings this to you, as she will sail for this place immediately—and let the Prince Regent know of their situation.—Any letters that your excellency may send down, be good enough to direct to me, as they have great dependence in my writing. Any news that your Excellency may have respecting them and Americs, will be doing a great favor to let me know, that I may send among them.

There is now a very large body of Americans & Indians, who I expect will attack us every day, and God only knows how it will be decided. But I must only say, this will be the last effort with us. There has been a body of Indians gone to meet them, and I have sent another party. I hope your excellency will be pleased to grant the favor they request.

I have nothing further to add, but am, sir, with due respect, your obedient humble servant,

R. C. AMBRISTIE.

Q. by the Prisoner. Did you hear me say that I came on Woodbine's business?

A. I did.

Q. Were not the negroes alluded to at Arbuthnot's store before I arrived?

A. No, you came with them.

Peter B. Cook, a witness on the part of the prosecution, being duly sworn, stated, that he never heard the prisoner give any orders to negroes or Indians; that the prisoner distributed Arbuthnot's goods, and, also paint to the negroes & Indians. Also that some powder was brought from the vessel to Suwany by the prisoner, and distributed among the negroes by Nero. Some time in March, the prisoner took Arbuthnot's schr. and with an armed party of negroes, 24 in number, set out for St. Marks, for the purpose of taking Arbuthnot's goods at that place, and stated that he would compel the commandant to deliver them up. On hearing of the approach of the American army, the prisoner told the negroes it was useless to run, for if they ran any farther they would be driven into the sea.

The prisoner told the witness that he had been a lieutenant in the British army, under Col. Nicholls. The prisoner was sent by Woodbine to Tamper, to see about those negroes he had left there. The prisoner told the witness that he had written a letter to governor Cameron for ammunition for the Indians, some time in March, and also told the

DEAR SIR—I have, and all the Indian chiefs, have requested the particularly to acquaint you, that the Americans have commenced hostilities with them these two years past, and are making daily progress in their territory, and say they will proceed. That you are the only friend they have in that part of the world, and hope that you will exert yourself in their behalf, and ask for as much assistance as can be had. That the Americans are at the forks of the river Appalachicola. They have written a number of times to England & Providence, but have never received one answer; they expect the manner never delivered the letters, but they have full hopes in my writing. They request you would make the prince regent acquainted with their deplorable situation. The Americans have been very cruel where they commenced, and I hope you will lose not a single moment in forwarding their views. They say they will be extremely happy to see you out—nothing should give them greater pleasure than to see you out at this time. If they should not see you, to send them all news and directions, that they may be guided by it.

There is about three hundred blacks at this place—a few of our Bluff people. They beg me to say, they depend on your promises, and expect you are on the way out. They have stuck to us some, and will always believe in the faith of you, and any directions you may give send to me at this place, and I will do what I can.

And remain, my dear sir,
most truly yours,

Sir—I am requested by Francis and all the Indian chiefs, to acquaint your excellency, that they are at war with the Americans, and have been some time back. That they are in great distress for want of ammunition, balls, arms, &c. and have wrote to Mr. Arbuthnot several times, but they suppose he never delivers them to your excellency. You would oblige them much to let them know whether he did or not.

I expect the Americans and Indians will attack us daily. I have quite a party of men to oppose them. They beg on me to press on your excellency's mind to lay the situation of the country before the prince regent, and ask for assistance.

All news respecting them, you Excellency will do a favor to let us know by the first opportunity, that I may

I expect if they do not procure some very shortly, that the Americans will march through the country. I have nothing further to add.

The wind, I am in hopes, will be fair in the morning, when I will get under weigh, and make all possible dispatch. I will make old Lewis pilot me safe. If those Indians don't conduct themselves straight, I would use rigorous means with them. Beware of Mr. Jerry: I found him on board when I came. Keep a good look out. I have sent two kegs of powder & one bar of lead.

TUESDAY, 3 o'Clock.

Q. by the Prisoner. Did you not frequently hear me say that I would have nothing to do with the Indians in exciting them to war with the United States?

A. I do not recollect.

Q. by the P. Are you acquainted with Lewis Phenix, and have you not heard him express ill will against me, in consequence of my wishing him to pilot me to St. Marks?

A. I never did.

Q. Do you know of my sending troops at any time to fight against the U. States: and have I not been constantly with you, so that you would have had an opportunity of knowing if there had been sent any by me?

A. I have not: they might have been sent without my knowledge.

Jacob Harrison, a witness on the part of the prosecution, being duly sworn, that some time in the latter end of March, or the first of April, the prisoner took possession of the schooner Chance, with an armed party of negroes, and stated his intention of taking St. Marks. On his way thither, going ashore he learned from some Indians that Arbuthnot had gone to St. Marks, which induced him to return. The witness also stated, that, while the prisoner was on board, he had complete command of the negroes, who considered him as their captain. The prisoner took the cargo of the vessel up towards Suwany, which consisted of, with other articles, nine kegs of powder, and 500 pounds of lead.

The evidence on both sides being closed, the prisoner was allowed until 5 o'clock this evening to make his defence.

The time allowed the prisoner for the preparation of his defence, having expired, he was brought before the court, and made the defence marked M. which is attached to these proceedings.

The court was then cleared, and the proceedings read over by the recorder, when, after due deliberation on the testimony brought forward, the court find the prisoner, Robert C. Ambrister, guilty of so much of the specification to the first charge, as following, viz. "and did excite them to war with the United States, by sending their warriors to meet and fight the American army, he being a subject of Great Britain, which government was at peace and friendship with the United States, and all her citizens;" but not guilty of the other part of the specification: guilty of the first charge; guilty of the specification of the second charge, and guilty of the second charge: and do, therefore, sentence the prisoner, Robert C. Ambrister, to suffer death, by being shot, two-thirds of the court concurring therein.

One of the members of the court requesting a re-consideration of his vote on the sentence, the sense of the court was taken thereon, and decided in the affirmative, when the vote was again taken, and the court sentence the prisoner to receive fifty stripes on his bare back, and be confined with a ball and chain to hard labor, for 12 calendar months.

The court adjourned, sine die.

Fort St. Marks, April 28th 1818.

The United States of America, }
vs.
Robert Christy Ambrister, }

Who, being arraigned before a special Court Martial, upon the following charges to wit:

1st. Aiding, and abetting, and comforting [the Indians]; supplying them with the means of war, he being a subject of Great Britain, at peace with the United States, and lately an officer in the British colonial marines.

Charge 2d. Leading and commanding the lower Creek Indians in carrying on war against the U. S.

To the first charge, the prisoner at the bar pleads not guilty, and to the second charge he pleads guilty and justification. The prisoner at the bar feels grateful to this honorable court for their goodness in giving him a sufficient time to deliberate, and arrange his defence on the above charges.

The prisoner at the bar, here avails himself of the opportunity of stating to this court, that, inasmuch as the testimony which was introduced in this case was very explicit, and went to every point the prisoner could wish, he has nothing further to offer in his defence, but puts himself upon the mercy of the honorable court.

ROBERT C. AMBISTER.

Head-Quarters, Division of the South,
Adjutant General's Office,
Camp 4 miles north of St. Marks,
April 29th, 1818.

GENERAL ORDER,

At a special court martial, commenced on the 26th inst. at St. Marks, and continued until the night of the 28th, of which brevet Major General E. P. Gaines is President, was tried A. Arbuthnot, on the following charges and specifications, viz:

Charge 1st.—Exciting and stirring up the Creek Indians to war against the U. States, and her citizens, he, A. Arbuthnot, being a subject of Great Britain, with whom the U. States are at peace.

Charge 2d.—Acting as spy; aiding abetting, and comforting the enemy, and supplying them with the means of war.

Charge 3d.—Exciting the Indians to murder and destroy Wm. Hambly and Edmund Doyle, confiscate their property, and causing their arrest, with a view to their condemnation to death, and the seizure of their property, they being citizens of Spain, on account of their active and zealous exertions to maintain peace between Spain, the U. States and the Indians.

To which charges the prisoner pleaded not guilty.

The court, after mature deliberation on the evidence adduced, find the prisoner, A. Arbuthonot, guilty of the first charge, and guilty of the second charge, leaving out the words "acting as a spy;" and, after mature reflection, sentence him, A. Arbuthnot, to be suspended by the neck, until he is dead.

Was also tried, Robert C. Ambristie, on the following charges, viz.

Charge 1st—Aiding, abetting & comforting the enemy, and supplying them with the means of war, he being a subject of Great Britain, who are at peace with the United States and late an officer in the British colonial marines.

Charges 2d.—Leading and commanding the lower Creek Indians in carrying on a war against the United States.

To which charges the prisoner pleaded as follows: to the 1st charge, not guilty; to the 2d charge, guilty and justification.

The court, on examination of evidence, and on mature deliberation, find the prisoner, Robert C. Ambristie, guilty of the 1st and 2d charges: and do, therefore, sentence him to suffer death, to being shot. The members requesting a re-consideration of the vote on this sentence, and it being had, they sentence the prisoner to receive fifty stripes on his bare back, and be confined with a ball and chain, to hard labor, for twelve calendar months.

The Commanding General approves the finding and sentence of the court in the case of A. Arbuthnot, and approves the finding and first sentence of the court in the case of Robert C. Ambristie, and disapproves the re-consideration of the sentence of the honorable court in this case.

It appears, from the evidence and pleading of the prisoner, that he did lead and command within the territory of Spain, (being a subject of Great Britain,) the Indians in war against the United States, those nations being at peace. It is an established principle of the laws of nations, that any individual of a nation making war against the citizens of any other nation, they being at peace, forfeits his allegiance, and becomes an outlaw and pirate. This is the case of Robert C. Ambristie, clearly shewn by the evidence adduced.

The Commanding General orders that Brevet Major A. C. W. Fanning, of the corps of artillery, will have, between the hours of eight and one o'clock, A. M. A. Arbuthnot suspended by the neck with a rope, until he is dead, and Robert C. Ambristie to be shot to death, agreeable to the sentence of the court.

John James Arbuthnot will be furnished with a passage to Pensacola, by the first vessel.

The special court, of which Brevet Major General E. P. Gaines, is President, is dissolved.

By order of Major General Jackson,
ROBERT BUTLER, Adj. Gen.

6th. That a copy of these Resolutions be immediately transmitted to the Editors of the Kingston Chronicle, and to the Editor of the Upper Canada Gazette, requesting the insertion thereof in their respective papers for the space of six weeks successively, after the receipt of the same.

7th. That the unanimous thanks of this meeting be presented to the Chairman, for his attendance, and the encouragement he manifested to promote such a laudable intention of the said inhabitants of Bellville and its vicinity. 6w4.

200 DOLLARS REWARD.

ON my leaving Niagara, about the 23d of July 1816, I forgot a Book which contained promissory Notes & Receipts, to a large amount, among which was Mr. Daniel Brook's Note to me for £1763 12s. 3d. H. Currency, for which I have not hitherto received value. The Book was last seen in the hands of said Daniel Brooke, by the clerk who then superintended his business. And to corroborate this fact, an affidavit has been sworn to by him, before Doctor Muirhead, of Niagara.

As I must experience an irreparable loss from the want of these valuable documents, the above reward shall be immediately paid to the person, on returning the Book in an unmutilated state.

To the public it may seem strange, that I have withheld this notice since the above period. I will only say, that I never could conceive that I should be under the disagreeable necessity of bringing this subject before them; but strong necessity now obliges me to do so.

IN Contradiction to the Misstatement of the Settlement between Mr. DANIEL BROOK and the Subscriber, which has appeared in the Upper Canada Gazette of the 14th Inst. Signed D. Currency, which was the balance due me; which Note was witnessed by Nicholas Osborne, Esq. and dated July 24th 1816, and that there has been no settlement whatever between us since that date. That this was shortly after the dissolution of the Co-partnership which had subsisted between the said Henry Drean and Daniel Brooke; that, after three or four days the said Henry Drean returned from Buffalo, and soon after embarked on board the Asp, Capt. Fish, for Kingston, in such a hurried way, that he forgot, as this Deponent believes, the said Receipt Book, and the same was left in the custody of this Deponent in a small Desk in which the said Daniel Brooke's papers were kept—that about six or seven days after the embarkation of Mr. Drean as aforesaid, the said Daniel Brooke came to Niagara, and in the course of an examination of the papers in the small desk abovementioned, discovered the Receipt Book of Mr. Drean, and said to this Deponent, "Mr. Drean forgot his Receipt Book did he?" to which this Deponent replied that he did; that the said Daniel Brooke took up the said Receipt Book, and was looking over and examining the contents of it, when this Deponent was called to breakfast, that this Deponent was gone from the shop about half an hour and left the said Daniel Brooke there alone, and found him alone there on his return, but did not see the said Receipt Book, nor in fact think of it at that moment; after about an hour, when the said Daniel Brooke had gone from the shop, this Deponent thought of the said Receipt Book, and went to the desk where it had been kept and whence the said Daniel Brooke had taken it, and there searched for but did not find it; this Deponent then examined the shelves and every part of the shop, where he thought it might have been laid by the said Daniel Brooke, but did not any where find the said Receipt Book; that no person was in the shop, this Deponent believes, after the said Daniel Brooke left the shop, and before he this Deponent missed and searched for the said Receipt Book as aforesaid, and if there had been, this Deponent is certain the said Receipt Book was not in such part of the shop as that it could have been taken away without his knowledge. This Deponent further maketh oath and saith, that on receipt of the letter from Mr. Drean, dated 19th August, 1816, at Montreal, whereof the annexed writing is a true copy, he, this Deponent wrote to the said Daniel Brooke to enquire what he had done with the said Receipt Book, as this Deponent then suspected, he the said Daniel Brooke might have taken it away, as he found from the said letter it contained a Promissory Note against him the said Daniel Brooke for a large sum of money; that this Deponent received no written answer from the said Daniel Brooke, but soon after saw him at Niagara and asked him about the Book, and said he had not seen it since he saw it in his the said Daniel Brooke's hands, whereto the said Daniel Brooke replied, that he knew nothing of the Book, or words to that effect, and that he was sorry it was lost, as he might be sued on his note, meaning as this Deponent understood and believes, the Promissory Note contained in the same Book, which is mentioned in the said annexed letter, and further this Deponent saith not.

LONDON, Nov. 16 1818.

Polar Expedition.—The following is an extract of an interesting letter received by a gentleman in Montrose, from on board the Dorothea, one of the vessels lately returned from an unsuccessful attempt to penetrate to the North Pole:

"On the 26th June we again came to anchor in Fair Haven, which is situated between two islands called Yargel Sang & Clover Cliff. On those, & the neighboring islands, we discovered numerous herds of rein deer; and in running in for the anchorage, immense numbers of sea horses were seen lying on the ice, huddled together, and at a distance, much resembling a group of cattle. We succeeded in killing several, some of which were of prodigious size; for instance, one which we cut up was found to weigh twenty hundred weight. These animals are seen every where, near the land, on the ice, as well as in the sea; and they are found in the bays (which are numerous all along the coast,) lying on the beach, sometimes to the amount of several hundreds. To a stranger they present the most forbidding & ugly aspect, imaginable. When much annoyed by shot, they assemble their forces—surround the boat, as if determined to retaliate; thirty, forty, or more, will appear in every direction, and almost at the same moment, and so near, that the muzzle of your musket will often reach their heads; they now make a hissing, barking kind of noise; and no sooner receive your fire than they become apparently furious, roll about, descend probably for a minute, when they re-appear with immense increase of numbers, and seem proportionably bolder in their assaults.

"Several of our oars were snapped in two, or otherwise broke by them. In their upper jaw are two tusks of great size, which seems as if intended by nature to form the principal means of defence, as well against the attacks of their enemies as to raise & support their huge carcases when they elevate themselves from the sea to the ice: these tusks are of the purest ivory, and, when they have attained their full growth, are of considerable value. Their hides are very thick, and of the toughest texture; but they are coarse, and fit only for sparing on the rigging of ships to prevent chafing. When brought on board, their bodies emitted a most intolerable stench; to get rid of which, as soon as they were skinned, the carcase was thrown over-board. The rein deer of Spitzbergen, of which we procured a plentiful supply, do not, I think, differ essentially from the deer of England, except that, as the autumn advances they begin to cast their summer coat, and, during the winter months become perfectly white, even in the end of June their winter coat was but beginning to fall off, and many of those we killed were still nearly white. We also saw many white bears, but only succeeded to kill one. Here you will be sorry to hear, that, on the afternoon of the 30th of June, having accompanied Captain Buchan and the purser, in pursuit of rein deer, I unfortunately received the ball from a rifle of the latter, at the distance of thirty yards, the ball of which struck the upper and inner part of the left knee bone. I was surprised to find myself so collected, and able to keep my feet and still more so, on finding that I could walk a short distance to join Capt. Buchan, by whom and the purser I was supported to the boat; but before I could gain the beach I attempt'd in the direction of the forecast forty yards. I experienced a faintness & tremor, which, for the time rendered me nearly insensible, and unable to proceed. On reaching the ship, and being conveyed below, I immediately examined the wound: and both Mr. Bertland, the assistant surgeon, & myself, were of opinion that the knee joint was not perforated; but we were unable to ascertain where the ball was lodged, or the portion of trowsers, drawers, and stocking, which it had carried along with it. On inquiry, it appeared that, in charging his rifle, the purser, in addition to the ball, had put two or three large buck shot, so that we concluded that it must have been one of the latter that struck me, for, although the probe readily entered, and pursued two or three inches in various directions, yet the knee bone did not appear to be fractured, neither, as was before observed, did the joint seem to be laid open———. We continued at anchor in Fair Haven about seven or eight days, during which time, we (the whole ship) succeeded in killing about forty-five or fifty deer, the weight of which averaged at least 120 pounds. We again put to sea, hoping, that as the season was now more advanced, we should be able to penetrate towards the north. Having discovered some partial opening in the ice, we forced our way in, and on this occasion we gained the highest northern latitude we were destined to reach, viz: 80. 32. Here we were again completely surrounded & blocked up, in which state we remained during a period of three weeks! But alas! it being this long time say thing extraordinary preceded itself, I was unable to witness it; such however, did not appear to have been the case. At length, on the 29th of July, after immense labor & fatigue we succeeded once more in getting into open water, little aware of the catastrophe which was so befal us on the approaching morn. We had gained an offing of eight or ten miles from the packed ice, when about four o'clock, A. M. on the 30th July, a dreadful gale of wind came on, blowing directly on the ice. In a few hours we found ourselves in an awful situation, unable to weather the ice on either tack, and drifting fast upon the main body of it, which the wind and swell had now rendered to every appearance a solid mass. We knew not what to do; there was no time for deliberation; and to prevent the ship from driving broadside on, the only alternative we had was to put the helm up, and, if possible, to force her head into the ice.—The scene must have been awful beyond description; to me it was truly dreadful. A little after 9 o'clock, the word was given to put the helm up on a swift pause succeeded, the most solemn dread pervaded every countenance; to all human probability there were but a few moments betwixt us & eternity; and every individual, with the most dreadful anxiety watched the moment when the ship should receive the first shock: the concussion was tremendous. The sea was running awfully high; and, at the instant of coming in contact with the ice, it threatened every moment to swallow us up. Our ship continued to receive the most dreadful shocks; but in the course of half an hour had forced herself in, probably about two or three times her own length. The immense masses of ice, which now surrounded us in every direction, served, in a great measure, to shield us from the violence of the sea; and we were now so firmly wedged, that the ship comparatively had little motion. During the whole of this dreadful scene conceive the horror of my situation; prostrate on the bed of sickness & almost incapable of raising my head from the pillow, ignorant of our situation, and not a soul to speak to, every officer & man having been on deck throughout & too much concerned for their own preservation to think of me. When the ship first struck the ice, the violence of the shock forced me against the upper part of my bed place, and then threw me nearly out of it. I scrambled and used every exertion of which I was capable to get from my bed, expecting every moment to be my last; but it was all in vain—I could not move. At length the assistant surgeon came to me. I was much relieved, as well as astonished, on the learning that we were in the ice, having been assured in my own mind that we must have struck on a reef of sunken & unknown rocks. Fortunately the gale soon moderated; but we found ourselves in a sinking state all the pumps going; and unable to keep the ship free. We now expected every moment to go to the bottom. The following morning was, providentially, fine, and the ice had somewhat separated; with the utmost exertion of every soul on board, we succeeded in getting the ship out of the ice, and were able, on the following morning, to reach Smeerenberg harbour, Spitzbergen. Our ship being now in such a shattered condition, every idea of wintering was at an end; and it became a question whether the ship, (the starboard side, in several places being literally stove in) was sea worthy; or if every thing considered, and under all the circumstances, it would be prudent at this late hour in crossing the Atlantic. However, it was found there we possessed the means of materially strengthening our vessel; after the completion of which, it was determined that we should proceed to England. We accordingly sailed from Smeerenberg harbour, Spitzbergen, about the beginning of September; and, after examining the state of the ice to the westward, we arrived on the coast of England about the 10th of October, without encountering any thing remarkable during our passage home.

FUNERAL OF HER MAJESTY.

November 29.

Saturday evening about half past 8, the leaden coffin for the body of the late Queen was removed from the dining parlour at Kew Palace, to Her Majesty's chamber, where she breathed her last. Preparations were then made for the last act towards the remains of the Queen, of placing them in a coffin, which was conducted with most solemn order & decorum. At nine o'clock the body was wrapped in a white satin sheet, every thing being completed that was necessary for the royal remains, Mr. Grande, agreeable to the duty of his office, proceeded to fill up the coffin with spices, after this was finished, Mr. Hoyroyd, the plumber, & his assistants, were admitted, and the cover was soldered to the coffin in the presence of the above named official persons.

The solemn spectacle of lying in state, will not open before Tuesday next, and will continue for that day only.

The remains of her majesty will be removed to Windsor. The hearse will be drawn by eight beautiful black horses, the property of her late Majesty; they will be fully plumed and caparisoned, and driven by the state coachmen.

The procession will set forward at a slow foot pace over Kew Green, and by way of Richmond & Hounslow to Frogmore, where it will be joined by several members of the royal family.—From Frogmore, the road leading to Windsor Castle will be lined by the Foot Guards, every sixth man bearing a lighted flambeau. His Royal Highness the Prince Regent will join the mournful cavalcade, as chief mourner, on its arrival at St. George's Chapel, and it is expected his Royal Highness will be supported by the Duke of York, and the Duke of Sussex. His Royal Highness's train will be borne by four Marquises, and six Dukes will support the pall of the coffin. The carriages of the Princess Augusta & the Duchess of Gloucester are to be lined with black, preparatory to the solemn occasion.

On Thursday evening an order was issued from the Lord Chamberlain's Office, appointing Wednesday next, the 2d December, for the day of the funeral.

St. George's Chapel, Windsor, is to be lined with fine black cloth throughout all the fronts of the stalls and galleries, and it will be illuminated with wax lights in silver branches.

The parish churches of Kew, Richmond, & Windsor, have also been lined with black along the fronts of the galleries, pulpits, organ lofts, &c.

The coffin which incloses the remains of her Majesty, will weigh when completed, upwards of 4 cwt.

Nine carriages of the Queen's, with six horses to each, will follow immediately behind the hearse & succeeded by three of the Prince Regent's carriages: those of the Princess, of the Duke of York, the Duke of Gloucester, Prince Leopold, the Duke of Sussex, the Officers of state &c. the whole with six horses to each carriage, all mantled with black velvet, and plumed.

We may confidently state that the general report of her Majesty's having left a Will is quite correct. We do not, however, pretend to know what testamentary deposits of his Will may be, yet we have reason to suppose the small property that has been left, consisting principally of Frogmore & personals, is to be divided between her Majesty's four younger daughters: & the Queen's old & faithful servant, Madame Rackenzell, has been left her Majesty's entire wardrobe.

So far from her Majesty's having died possessed of accumulating wealth, there is we understand, a debt amounting to a few thousand pounds, to discharge which direction has been left that a part of the property be sold. To those who have had the opportunity of knowing the extent of her private charities, this emptiness of purse will not appear extraordinary; and to those who have so unjustly hazarded the most uncharitable conjectures, for positive facts a complete and direct answer is given.

The principal evening amusement of her late Majesty, was writing her own memoirs, in which it is said all the extraordinary political occurrences which took place during her long reign, are related with the ease so peculiar to a female writer.

The great Bell of St. Paul's tolled for one hour on the night of the decease of the Queen.

The Prince Regent has been in a low nervous state ever since the death of the Queen.

The bodily health of the King continues unimpaired; but during the intervals of reason with which he is blest he makes constant inquiries after the Queen.

A Genoa paper states, that on the 10th of September, Mr. Jones the American Consul General at Tripoli, went out to hunt with his Secretary, the Danish Consul, & a Janissary. Being separated from his companions, he was attacked by 3 Moors of the Admiral Mourat-rais, who struck him several times with the butt ends of their muskets, knocked him down, and would have murdered him, had it not been for the return of his companions. The Consul was conveyed, covered with blood, to the Palace of the Bashaw, who promised every reparation that should be required, and then convoked all the Consuls at his country-house to consult with them. In the mean time Mourat-Rais, who is an English renegado, and the private enemy of Mr. Jones, took refuge at the house of the British consul. Mourat-Rais was exiled, one of the Moors was sentenced to death, and of the two others, one had his hands cut off, and the other received a hundred blows by bastinado. Mr. Jones transmitted information of the circumstances to the American consul at Tunis, who immediately sent off the American squadron then in that port. The appearance of the squadron before Tripoli excited much surprize, but as the American flag was still hoisted on the house of the American Consul, a parley was entered into, & after several communications, the American commander sent off a messenger to the U. States with report of what happened.

The Allied Sovereigns have returned to their respective Nations. The Emperor of Austria left Aix-la-Chapelle on the 17th of November, the King of Prussia on the 19th, & the Emperor of Russia on the 22d.

UPPER-CANADA GAZETTE.

His Excellency the Lt. Governor has received the following addresses:

From the Magistrates of the District of Niagara:

To His Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Major General commanding His Majesty's Forces there in, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY.

WE His Majesty's dutiful & loyal subjects, the Magistrates of the District of Niagara, in General Quarter Session assembled & the several Inhabitants of the said District, beg leave to crave your Excellency's indulgence, in deviating from our usual municipal duties & functions, in addressing His Majesty's Representative in this Province. We believe the occasion requires it, and the character of the District demands it.

The liberty of the press is the pride of British subjects, its licentiousness, their degradation; the one is pregnant with morality & public tranquility, the other with anarchy, vice, & attendant misery.

Happy, peaceable, & enjoying every right consistent with rational liberty, & prizing our constitution, and the wise administration of the government and laws, and perfectly satisfied with our representatives, as to their duty in the Provincial Parliament; what cause can we have for complaint, or for any popular ferment, or agitation. Nevertheless, this loyal district has been calumniated: & from the wicked & insidious diffusion of the writings of a very few discontented, virulent, & malignant characters, it is presumed that this district is the concentration of folly, & the focus of sedition and disloyalty.

It would ill comport with our feelings and the respect & consideration we bear to your Excellency, to condescend to notice individual immorality, however bold, and offensive. We trust the arm of the Law has vigour to reach, & the country virtue and wisdom to punish such. With such sentiments, we are only anxious, & trust your Excellency will discard from your mind any impressions unfavorable to the gratitude, loyalty, and peaceable demeanour of His Majesty's subjects in the District of Niagara, and that our fellow subjects elsewhere, & others may be undeceived regarding our political affairs & feelings.

Accompanied by an address from the Grand Jury of the same District:

WE the Jurors for our Sovereign Lord the King, for the District of Niagara, beg leave to represent to his Majesty's Justices of the Peace in Quarter Sessions assembled, that we feel hurt at the Reports that have been but too generally circulated through every part of the world, which may be construed in an unfavorable light with respect to the loyalty & fidelity of this District as in this District particularly We hereby beg leave respectfully to represent to you, & through you, to that Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, that we for ourselves reprobate, & highly disapprove of the proceedings that have taken place to give rise to such surprizes, we are also convinced that the body of the people in this District, with very few exceptions indeed, are firmly attached to His Majesty's Government and the excellent Constitution under which we live, which we consider quite sufficient to protect our persons and property, against the hand of power, or the machinations of designing Incendiaries: and we deeply lament that such proceedings should have taken place, as have given rise to such Reports.

From the Inhabitants of Queenstown:

To His Excellency, Sir Peregrine Maitland, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces within the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant Governor of the said Province, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY.

WE His Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Inhabitants of the town of Queenstown and its vicinity, in approaching your Excellency, beg leave to express our regret, that at so early a period of your Excellency's Administration, we should be called upon to give assurances of our loyalty and attachment to His Majesty's Government.

However superfluous it may seem for the loyal people, whose lives and property have been more than once exposed in defence of their liberty, their King, and their country, thus to testify their attachment to the constitution; yet would they prefer to degrade, rather than incur the imputation or indifference, at a crisis, when the public feeling is so much agitated.

Aware, how much disaffect has been occasioned by the too unguarded writings and publications of an individual, & the tendency which in some instances, the faulty laws have afforded to screen, yea further to encourage the baleful effects of such writings, we feel confidently, to assure your Excellency, that in no one instance, have our hearts given way to disloyalty, or participated in rendering assistance to sedition.

We are fully impressed with the conviction, that the constitution with which we are blessed, is sufficient, under a wise administration of its laws, to wind convict and suppress every the practical inhabitants of this Province, from the most consummate and unlawful attempts of designing men; and keep them in bounds of security the Representative of His Majesty.

Permit us with every sentiment of respect to express our approbation of your Excellency's conduct, and, as respectfully, to offer our prompt obedience to the dictates of justice, which are the main springs, in all well regulated governments, we shall at no time be wanting to show ourselves worthy of the confidence you repose in our constituted authorities, for assistance in support of the sentiments of Her Sovereign.

To each of which respectively, His Excellency was pleased to make the following reply:

GENTLEMEN,

I am obliged to you for your loyal address which I have just received.

Though a conviction of delinquency no longer exists, it has, no doubt, left behind it an impression in other parts of the world, unfavorable to the interests of this Province.

The persevering efforts of a small faction, in possession of the usual channels of public information, and claiming to be a majority of the people, has increased the mischief. Under previous rights I judged that the respondent of your loyal sentiments is the antidote best calculated to destroy the evil.

I need not say that, otherwise, the gallant services performed by the Inhabitants of the District of Niagara, in the late war, would have rendered such an expression of their sentiments altogether superfluous.

Grievance the third, from cases of certain information issued by Lt. Governor Gore to the Magistrates, not to administer the oath of allegiance to any person from the Isle of Wight without special license &c. I am not much of a Lawyer, but I have read the British Acts of Parliament, which you say these instructions superseded, and I cannot help admiring the hardihood of your assertion.

The first law which you set foolishly conjure up to your aid is the 13 Geo. 3da law which respects foreign Protestants only, and has no reference to Europeans; and, if it had, as one would comply with the conditions it requires. The second law which you pronounce to have superseded, namely the 30 Geo. 3d, may be construed to extend the provisions of the 13 Geo. 3d to Europeans, but there are none of those that has complied with its requirements. Has your Grievance-maker taken the oath of allegiance remained seven years in the Province, without being called upon six months at one time, and joined the church of England? If not how ridiculous to call up laws that condemn you!

As to their suspension, your grievance-maker, who has read them, (altho' you have not) knows the contrary. They commend the oath of allegiance to be administered by the civil magistrate, in open court; and so far was governor Gore from going to the extent of the law, that he refused the oath to persons that were recommended, and appointed commissioners, whom he could trust, to administer it in every district of the Province, after proper application.

The fourth grievance respects the Navigation laws. If these laws are not in force, the Collector is liable for seizing under them: if they are in force, they ought to be obeyed. How they can be considered a grievance, when their efficiency to prevent the smuggling trade within our own waters, is a puzzling question, which I should not have been able to unravel, had I not perceived that you are more anxious about the prosperity of the States, than of Upper Canada, to which end the suspension of the Navigation laws would be no small benefit.

Grievance the fifth, complains of the Collector at Kingston. That this Gentleman, acting upon oath, should not always please those, who are willing only to obey upon informers, may be expected; but there can be no reasonable cause of uneasiness, for, if he do any thing illegal, he is answerable to the laws, as well as any other man.

We are unavoidably compelled to defer further remarks on the grievances until next week—some communications must also be deferred.

YORK GARRISON,
9th February, 1819.

(Report of the Secretary of War, concluded.)

ter, the number and distance of our posts, and our relations with the Indian tribes, and the principal European powers. It is conceived, however, that a satisfactory view of it may be taken, without discussing topics so extensive and indefinite.

The military establishments of 1802 and 1808, have been admitted, almost universally, to be sufficiently small. The latter, it is true, received an enlargement from the uncertain state of our foreign relations at that time; but the former was established at a period of profound quiet, (the commencement of Mr Jefferson's administration,) and was professedly reduced, with a view to economy, to the smallest number then supposed to be consistent with the public safety. Assuming these as a standard, and comparing the present establishment, (taking into the comparison the increased size of the country) with them, a satisfactory opinion may be formed on a subject, which otherwise might admit so great a diversity of opinion.

Our peremptory peace establishment is limited, by the act of 1815, passed at the termination of the war, to 10,000 men. The corps of engineers and ordnance, by that and a subsequent act, were retained as they then existed: and the President was directed to constitute the establishment of such portions of artillery, infantry, and riflemen as he might judge proper. The general order of the 17th May, 1815, fixed the artillery at 3,200, the light artillery at 600, the infantry 5,440, and the rifle 667 privates and musicians. Document A exhibits a statement of the military establishment including the general staff, as at present organized and fixed by a reference to which, it will appear, that our military establishment is, at the respective periods, taken in the order of their dates, present an aggregate of 12,474, 9,000, and 12,868 officers and privates; that the establishment of 1808, compared with the then growth and population of the country, the number & extent of military posts is larger in proportion than the present; & consequently is not entitled to a greater ratio with France and England, at that period, than at the present time, and entirely void. Document three, that of 1802 will be necessary to retain, for the expansion and preservation of the country, than constituted of the present time. The present establishment, with the necessary additions, will be sufficient for our possession: and with a great extent of frontier, both maritime and inland. With the exception of artillery, and the increase of our commercial marine, the military establishments have been recently instituted.—Document marked C exhibits the number and positions of posts in the year 1802, and document D those of the present time. By a reference to which, it will appear that the latter number as we had but 27 posts, the most remote of which was, to the north at Mackinaw, and to the south at Fort Stoddert, and Mobile river, but now we have 73, which occupy the line of frontier to the north extended with the Lakes, the Mississippi, Missouri, Arkansaw, and Red river, our posts are now, or will be shortly, extended for the protection of agriculture and the preservation of the peace with the Indians, to Green Bay, the mouth of St. Peters, and the Yellow Stone River, Bellepoint and Natchitoches. Document marked E exhibits a statement of the extent of the line of our frontier, inland and maritime, and document F, one of the most complete maps in the seat of government, drawn up by major Long, of the topographical engineers, from the most approved maps.

It, then, the military establishment of 1802 be assumed to be as small, as was then consistent with the safety of the country, our present establishment, when we take into comparison the prodigious increase of wealth, population, extent of territory, and number of military posts, cannot be pronounced extensive—but, on the contrary, after a fair and full comparison, that of the former period must, in proportion to the increase and extent of the country, be admitted to be quite as large as the present: and, on the assumption, that the establishment of 1802 was as small as the public safety would then admit, a reduction of the expense of our present establishment cannot be made, with safety to the public service, by reducing the army.—In coming to this conclusion, I have not over looked the opinion, that a large standing army is dangerous to the liberty of the country, and that our ultimate reliance for defence must be in the militia. To such men as this advocate, must, however, acknowledge, that a standing army, to a limited extent, is necessary; and our good sense can be assured in no way any should exist, but what will equally prove, that the present is not too large. To consider the present army as dangerous to our liberty, paradox, it is conceived, more of theoretic than wisdom. Old notions on the character of the officers, who, as a body, are high-minded and honorable men, attached to the principles of freedom by education and reflection; what well founded apprehension can there be from an establishment distributed on an extended frontier, with many thousand miles, intervening between the extreme points occupied? But the danger, it may be said, is not so much from its members, as a spirit, hostile to liberty, by which, it is supposed, all regular armies are actuated. This observation is probably true, when applied to standing armies collected into large and powerful masses; but, dispersed as ours is, over so vast a surface, the danger, I conceive, is of an opposite character, that both officers and soldiers will lose their military habits & feelings, by sliding gradually into those purely civil.

I proceed next to consider whether any reduction can be made with propriety by changing the organization, or by reducing the number of officers of the line, or the staff, in proportion to the men. It is obvious, that, as the officers are much more expensive in proportion to their numbers, than the soldiers, that the pay of the army, in relation to its aggregate numbers, must be increased or diminished, in the increase or diminution of the former. It is impossible to fix any absolute proportion between officers and men, which will suit every country and every service; and the organization of different countries and of different periods, in the same country, has, accordingly, varied considerably. Our present organization of which document marked A. contains an exhibit, is probably as well, or better adapted to the nature of our country and service, than any other; as it seems to be the result of experience; for, by a reference to documents marked B. it will be seen, that it is nearly similar, with the exception of the general staff, in which the present is more extensive, to the organization of the military establishments of 1802 and 1808. It is believed that the proportion of officers of the line to the men, will require no further observations.

The staff, as organized by the act of the last session combines simplicity with efficiency; and is considered to be superior to that of the periods to which I have reference. In estimating the expenses of the army, and particularly that of the staff, the two most expensive branches of it, the engineers and ordnance departments, ought not fairly to be included. Their duties are connected with the permanent preparation and defence of the country, and have no little reference to the existing establishment, that, if the army were reduced to a single regiment, no reduction could safely be made in either of them. To form a correct estimate of the duties of the other branches of the staff, and consequently, the number of officers required, we must take into consideration not only the number of troops, but, what is equally essential, the number of posts and extent of country which they occupy. Were our military establishment reduced one half, it is obvious, that if the same posts continued to be occupied which now are, the same number of officers, in the quarter master's, commissaries, paymaster's, medical, and inspector general's departments, would be required.

To compare them, as is sometimes done, our staff with those of European armies, assembled in large bodies, is manifestly unjust. The act of the last session, it is believed, has made all the reduction, which ought to be attempted. It has rendered the staff efficient with out making it expensive. Such a staff is not only indispensable to the efficiency of the army, but is also necessary to a proper economy in its disbursements; and, should an attempt be made at retrenchment by reducing the present number, it would, in its consequences, probably prove wasteful and extravagant.

In fact no part of our military organization requires more attention in peace than the general staff. It is, in every service, invariably the last in attaining perfection; and, if neglected in peace, when there is peace, it will be impossible, in the midst of the hurry and bustle of war, to bring it to perfection. It is in peace, that it should receive a perfect organization and that the officers should be trained to method and punctuality, so that at the commencement of a war, instead of creating a new, nothing more should be necessary, than to give to it the necessary enlargement. In this country particularly, the staff cannot be neglected with impunity. As difficult as its operations are, in actual service, every where, it has been to encounter great and peculiar impediments from the extent of the country, the badness, and frequently the want of roads and the sudden and unexpected calls which are often made on the militia.—If it could be shown, that the staff, in its present extent, was not necessary in peace, it would, with the view taken, be unwise to lop off any of its branches, which would be necessary in actual service. With a defective staff, we must carry on our military operations under great disadvantages, and be exposed, particularly at the commencement of a war, to great waste, embarrassments and disasters.

As intimately connected with this part of the subject, it is proper to observe, that so many and such distant small posts as our service requires, not only adds to the expence of the army, by rendering a more numerous staff necessary, but it increases the price of almost every article of supply, and the difficulty of enforcing a proper responsibility and economy. To an army thus situated, the expenses and losses resulting from transportation alone, constitutes a considerable sum. Under the best management, our army must be more expensive, even were our supplies equally cheap, than European armies collected in large bodies, in the midst of populous and wealthy communities.—These observations are not made to justify an improper management, or to divert the attention of the house from so important a subject, as the expense of our military establishment. They, in fact, ought to have an opposite effect; for, just in the same proportion as it is liable to be expensive, ought the attention and effort of the government to be roused to confine its expenses within the most moderate limits which may be practicable.

The next question which presents itself for consideration is, can the expenses of our military establishment be reduced, without injury to the public service, by reducing the pay and emoluments of the officers and soldiers. There is no class in the community whose compensation has advanced less, since the termination of the war of the revolution than that of the officers and soldiers of our army. While money has depreciated more rapidly, than at any other period, and the price of all of the necessaries of life has advanced in proportionably, their compensation has remained nearly stationary. The effects are severely felt by the subaltern officers. It requires the most rigid economy for them to subsist on their pay and emoluments. Documents marked F. & G. exhibit the pay & subsistence during the revolution, and as at present established; and document marked H. exhibits the allowance of clothing, fuel, forage, transportation, quarters, waiters, stationary, and straw, at the termination of the revolutionary war, and in 1802, 1815, & 1818. By a reference to those documents, it will be seen, that under most of the heads, the variation of the different periods has been very small; and that, on a comparison of the whole, the pay of an officer is not near equal now, if allowance is made for the depreciation of money, to what it was during the revolution. I will abstain from farther remarks, as it must be obvious from these statements, that the expence of our military establishment cannot be materially reduced, without injury to the public service, by reducing the pay and emoluments of the officers and soldiers.

It only remains to consider, in relation to this part of the resolution of the House, whether the expence of our military establishment can be reduced by a proper attention to its administration, or by a more rigid enforcement of responsibility and economy.—Our military establishment is doubtless susceptible of great improvement in its administration. The field is extensive, and the attention of the government has not heretofore been so strongly directed towards it, as its importance deserves. Here all savings are real gain, not only in a monied, but in a moral and political point of view. An inefficient administration, without economy or responsibility, not only exhausts the public resources, but strongly tends to contaminate the moral and political principles of the officers, who are charged with the disbursements of the army. It introduces, however, a high state of economy and responsibility in the management of subjects so extensive and complicated as our military establishment, is a task of great difficulty, and requires not only a perfect organization of the department charged with it, but a continued energetic and judicious enforcement of the laws and regulations established next for its government. The organization is the proper province of legislation, as the application of the laws and regulations is that of administration. The former has done all, or nearly all, that can be done. It is believed, that the organization of the War Department, as well as the general staff of the army, is not susceptible of much improvement. The act of the last session regulating the staff has not only made important savings, in the expences of the army, but has given both to the department & the staff a more efficient organization, than they ever before had. Every department of the army, charged with disbursements, has now a proper head, who, under the laws and regulations, is responsible for its administration. The head of the department is thus freed from detail, and has leisure to inspect and control the whole of the disbursements. Much time and reflection will be required to bring the system into complete operation, and to derive from it all the advantages which ought to be expected. The extent of the saving which may result from it can only be ascertained by time and experience. It will, with an attentive vigorous administration, doubtless will be considerable.—In war, it will be much more difficult to enforce economy and responsibility; but with a system well organized, and with officers trained to method and punctuality much of the waste and frauds, which would otherwise take place in war, will be prevented. In peace there can be no insuperable difficulty in attaining a high degree of responsibility, and economy. The pecuniated responsibility, or that of purchases and disbursements, will be easily enforced. The public now sustains much greater losses in the waste and improper use of public property, than in its monied transactions. In our military establishment, responsibility in the latter is well checked, and not easily enforced. The accounts are rendered with considerable promptness, and are promptly settled; and even despite of misapplication of public funds, by the disbursing officers, are not often accompanied with ultimate losses, as they are under bonds for the faithful discharge of their duties. Accountability as it regards the public property, is much more difficult, and has heretofore been much less complete. Returns of property in many cases, particularly in the medical department, have rarely been required; and even where the laws have been, they have not been made with punctuality. It cannot be denied but what the public has sustained very considerable damage from the want of accountability. Every article of public property, even the smallest, ought, if possible, to be in charge of some person, who should be responsible for it. It will be difficult to attain this degree of perfection; but it is hoped, by making each of the subordinate departments of the War Department liable for the property in its charge, a very considerable improvement and reduction of expenses will be made.

On the quality of the ration, & the system of supplying and issuing it, which I propose next to consider, the health, comfort and efficiency of the army mainly depend. Too much care cannot be bestowed on these important subjects; for, let the military system be ever so perfect in other particulars, any considerable deficiency in these must, in all great military operations, expose an army to the greatest disasters. All human efforts must, of necessity, be limited by the means of subsistence. For sustains the immense machinery of war, and gives the impulse to all its operations; and if this essential be withdrawn or cease to move. No absolute standard can be fixed as it regards either the quantity or quality of the ration. These must vary according to the habits and products of different countries. The great object to be kept, first mainly, to sustain the health and spirit of the troops; and the next, to do it with the least possible expense. The system which effects these in the greatest degree, is the most perfect. The ration, as established by the act of the 16th March, 1802, experience proves to be ample in quantity, but not of the quality best calculated to secure either health or economy. It consists of eighteen ounces of bread, or flour, one pound and a quarter of beef, or three quarters of a pound of pork, one gill of rum, brandy or whiskey, and per the rate of two quarts of salt, four quarts of vinegar, four pounds of soap, and one pound and a half of candles, to every hundred rations.

The objections to it in relation to the health of the army, are fully stated in a report of the Surgeon General to the War Department, (marked I) which I would respectfully annex as a part of this report. Under this view of the subject, more need not be added, except to urge its importance, both on the score of humanity and policy.

Our people, even the poorest, being accustomed to a plentiful mode of living require, to preserve their health, a continuation, in a considerable degree, of the same habits of life, in a camp; and a sudden and great departure from it subjects them, as is proved by experience, to a great mortality. Our losses in the late and revolutionary wars, from this cause, were probably much greater than from the sword. However well qualified for war in other respects, in the mere capacity of bearing privations, we are inferior to most nations.—An American would starve on what a Tartar would live on with comfort. In fact barbarous and oppressed nations have, in this particular, a striking advantage, which, however, ought to be much more than compensated by the skill and resources of a free and civilized people. If, however, such a people want the skill and spirit to direct its resources to its defence, the very wealth, by which it ought to defend itself, become the motive for invasion and conquest. Besides, there is something exciting to the feelings, that, in a country of plenty, beyond all others, in a country which disparity is so careful of the lives and life of the meanest of its citizens its brave defenders, who are not only ready but anxious to expose their lives for the safety and glory of their country, should through a defective system of [illegible] be permitted almost to starve or to perish by the poison of unwholesome food, as has frequently been the case. If it could be supposed that these considerations are not sufficient to excite the most anxious care on this subject, we ought to remember that nothing adds more to the expense of military operations, or exposes more to its disasters, than the sickness and mortality which result from defective or unwholesome supplies. Impressed with this view of the subject, considerable changes have been made in the ration, under the authority of the 8th section of the act regulating the staff of the army, passed at the last session of Congress. The vegetable part of the ration has been much increased. Twice a week, a half allowance of meat, with a suitable quantity of peas or beans, is directed to be issued. Fresh meat has also been substituted, twice a week, for salted. In the southern division, bacon and kiln dried Indian corn meal have been, to a certain extent, substituted for pork and wheat flour. In addition, orders have been given, at all the permanent posts, where it can be done, to cultivate a sufficient supply of ordinary garden vegetables for the use of the troops; and, at the posts remote from the settled parts of the country, the orders to extend to the cultivation of corn, and to the supply of the meat part of the ration, both to avoid the expense of distant and expensive transportation, and to secure, at all times, a supply within the posts themselves.

In addition to these changes, I am of opinion, the spirit part of the ration, as a regular issue, ought to be dispensed with; & such appears to be the opinion of most of the officers of the army. It both produces & perpetuates habits of intemperance, destructive alike to the health & moral & physical energy of the soldiers. The spirits, ought to be placed in depot, and be issued occasionally, under the discretion of the commander.—Thus used, its noxious effects would be avoided, and the troops, when great efforts were necessary, would, by a judicious use, derive important benefits from it. Molasses, beer, and cider, according to circumstances, might be used as substitutes. The substitution of bacon and kiln-dried corn meal, in the southern division, will have, it is believed, valuable effects. They are both much more congenial to the habits of the people in that section of our country. Corn meal has another, and, in my opinion, great and almost decisive advantage; it requires so little art to prepare it for use. It is not easy to make good bread of wheat flour, while it is almost impossible to make bad of the Indian corn. Besides, wheat is much more liable to be damaged than the Indian corn, for the latter is better protected against disease and the effects of bad seasons in time of harvest than any other grain, and when injured, the good is easily separated from the bad. Experience proves it to be not less nutritious than wheat or any other grain. Parched corn constitutes the principal food of an Indian warrior, and such are its nutritious qualities, that they can support long and fatiguing marches on it alone.

I next proceed to consider the system of supplying the army with provisions, for the establishment of a commissariat, and as they are connected in their nature, I propose to consider that part of the resolution in relation to a commissariat, and the mode of issuing the rations, at the same time.

The system established, at the last session, will, in time of peace, be adequate to the cheap and certain supply of the army. The act provides for the appointment of a commissary general, and as many assistants as the service require, and authorises the President to assign to them their duties in purchasing and issuing rations.—It also directs, that the ordinary supplies of the army should be purchased on contracts to be made by the commissary general, and to be delivered, on inspection, in the bulk, at such places as shall be stipulated in the contract. Document marked J. contains the rules and regulations which have been established by order of the president, and presents the operation of the system in detail. It is believed that it is as well guarded against fraud, as any other department of our military supplies; and, judging from the contracts already formed under it, it will, when improved by experience, probably make a very considerable saving. It would improve the system, to authorise the appointment of two deputy commissaries, one for each division, with the pay, rank, and emoluments, of major of infantry, to be taken from the line or from citizens, and so to amend the act of the last session, as to authorise the President to appoint the assistant commissaries, either from the line, or citizens. When the assistant commissary is not taken from the line, to make his pay equal to that of a subaltern appointed from the line, it ought to be $50 per month, with two rations a day. It should be the duty of the deputy commissaries to perform such service as the commissary general might prescribe, and particularly to inspect the principal depots, and, in cases of necessity, to make the necessary purchases. When a suitable subaltern cannot be had, or when his services are necessary in the line, the power proposed to be vested in the President, to select from citizens, would be important. It is not believed that any other alteration would be necessary in peace; but the system would require great enlargement in war, to render it sufficiently energetic to meet the many vicissitudes incidental to the operations of war.

It would then be necessary to divide the system into two divisions, one for purchasing and the other for issuing of rations, with as many deputy commissaries of purchases and issues, as there may be armies and military districts, to whom ought to be added a suitable number of assistants. The basis of the system ought, in war, to be the same as is now established. The ordinary supplies ought to be by contract on public proposals. By a judicious collection of provisions at proper depots, combined with an active and energetic system of transportation, it would be seldom necessary to resort to any other mode of purchasing. To provide, however, for contingencies, the purchasing department ought to be efficiently organized; and a branch of it, as already stated, attached to each army and military department. As it is the means to be resorted to in cases of necessity, it ought to possess those high and discretionary powers which do not admit of exact control. It is in its nature liable to many abuses, and, to prevent them from being great, more efficient regulations and checks are required than in any other branch of the general staff.

The defects of the mere contract system are so universally acknowledged by those who have experienced its operation in the late war, that it cannot be necessary to make many observations in relation to it. Nothing can appear more absurd, than that the success of the most important military relations, on which the very fate of the country may depend, should, ultimately, rest on men, who are subject to no military responsibility, and on whom there is no other hold than the penalty of a bond. When we add to this observation, that it is often the interest of a contractor to fail at the most critical juncture, when the means of supply become the most expensive, it seems strange that the system should have been continued for a single campaign. It is believed that a well organized commissariat, whose ordinary supplies are obtained by contract founded on public notice, possesses (besides those peculiar to itself) all the advantages fairly attributable to the system of issuing rations by contract. It is equally guarded against fraud, and its purchases can be made on terms more advantageous. A considerable objection to the system of issuing the ration by contract, is, that the merchants and capitalists are deterred from bidding, by the hazard of issuing the ration; and thus the sphere of competition is contracted, and the contracts for supplying the army often thrown into the hands of adventurers. The objection is avoided under the present system, by which the nation will be cheaply supplied, and the danger of failure almost wholy removed.

All which is respectfully submitted.

ON my leaving Niagara, about the 25th of July 1816, I forgot a Book which contained promissory Notes & Receipts, to a large amount, among which was Mr. Daniel Brook's Note to me for £1763 12s. 5d. H Currency, for which I have not hitherto received value. The Book was last seen in the hands of said Daniel Brooke, by the clerk who then superintended his business. And to corroborate this fact, an affidavit has been sworn to by him, before Doctor Muirhead, of Niagara.

As I must experience an irreparable loss from the want of these valuable documents, the above reward shall be immediately paid to the person, on returning the Book in an unmutilated state.

In this publication I am aware, that I have withheld this notice since the above period. I will only say, that I never could conceive that I should be under the disagreeable necessity of bringing this subject before them; but strong necessity now obliges me to do so.

Niagara, in the District of Niagara, in the Province of Upper-Canada, gentleman, maketh Oath and saith: that on or about the twenty-eighth day of July, in the year of Our Lord, One thousand eight hundred and sixteen, he, this Deponent was in the management of DANIEL BROOKE's Shop at Niagara, that about that time, HENRY DREAN came over from York to Niagara, and left in this Deponent's charge a small Receipt Book, of an oblong shape or figure, covered or bound as this Deponent thinks, with Leather; which Book the said Henry Drean desired this Deponent to be particularly careful of until his return from Buffalo, as it contained Securities and Memorandums of great importance to him the said Henry Drean. That this was shortly after the dissolution of the Co-partnership which had subsisted between the said Henry Drean and Daniel Brooke; that, after three or four days the said Henry Drean returned from Buffalo, and soon after embarked on board the Asp, Capt. Fish for Kingston, in such a hurried way, that he forgot, as this Deponent believes, the said Receipt Book, and the same was left in the custody of this Deponent in a small Desk in which the said Daniel Brooke's papers were kept—that about six or seven days after the embarkation of Mr. Drean as aforesaid, the said Daniel Brooke came to Niagara, and in the course of an examination of the papers in the small desk aboveinentioned, discovered the Receipt Book of Mr. Drean, and said to this Deponent, "Mr. Drean forgot his Receipt Book did he?" to which this Deponent replied that he did; that the said Daniel Brooke took up the said Receipt Book, and was looking over and examining the contents of it, when this Deponent was called to breakfast, that this Deponent was gone from the shop about half an hour and left the said Daniel Brooke there alone, and found him alone there on his return, but did not see the said Receipt Book, nor in fact think of it at that moment; after about an hour, when the said Daniel Brooke had gone from the shop, this Deponent thought of the said Receipt Book, and went to the desk where it had been kept and whence the said Daniel Brooke had taken it, and there searched for but did not find it; this Deponent then examined the shelves and every part of the shop, where he thought it might have been laid by the said Daniel Brooke, but did not any where find the said Receipt Book; that no person was in the shop, this Deponent believes, after the said Daniel Brooke left the shop, and before he this Deponent missed and searched for the said Receipt Book as aforesaid, and if there had been, this Deponent is certain the said Receipt Book was not in such part of the shop as that it could have been taken away without his knowledge. This Deponent further maketh oath and saith, that on receipt of the letter from Mr. Drean, dated 19th August, 1816, at Montreal, whereof the annexed writing is a true copy, he, this Deponent wrote to the said Daniel Brooke to enquire who he had done with the said Receipt Book, as this Deponent then suspected, he the said Daniel Brooke might have taken it away, as he found from the said letter it contained a Promissory Note against him the said Daniel Brooke for a large sum of money—that this Deponent received no written answer from the said Daniel Brooke, but soon after saw him at Niagara and asked him about the Book, and said he had not seen it since he saw it in his the said Daniel Brooke's hands, whereto the said Daniel Brooke replied, that he knew nothing of the Book, or words to that effect, and that he was sorry it was lost, as he might be sued on his note, meaning as this Deponent understood and believes, the Promissory Note contained in the same Book, which is mentioned in the said annexed letter, and further this Deponent saith not.

From Europe,

LONDON, Nov. 29.

Letters from Holland give the most distressing accounts of trade, and the state of money matters in that country. At Amsterdam the rate of interest had risen within a few weeks to 10 per cent, and money was very scarce at the latter rate. Four houses of very considerable consequence had stopped payment. The report respecting the failure of Austrian & Prussian stock has been confirmed. The former had fallen 16 per cent, the latter declined from 78 to 71 — The reason given for the fall of the Prussian bonds was, that large sums had been borrowed, and these bonds lodged as security; the money was called for on account of the failures, & the consequence was, the bonds were necessarily brought into the money market, and sold at whatever could be obtained. The letters, which are dated the 20th, concluded by stating that such was the gloom on the Exchange, that by agreement no business was done that day.

Dec. 1.

The commercial intelligence received yesterday from America is of the utmost importance. The trade of the United States is represented to be in the most deplorable state. Several of the letters refer the present distress, and the want of confidence amongst the merchants, to the measures lately adopted by America respecting commerce, which they state have been followed by the most ruinous consequences. The general opinion in the United States was, that the measures would be found in their effect favorable to the trade of this country: (an opinion pretty general, we believe, in England.) The proposed national establishment, the Bank, appears to be a complete failure, & great doubts are now entertained that it can be carried into effect, unless Congress interferes. The cause of the depression of the Bank Shares is ascribed, in some measure, to the Government of the different States claiming an authority to tax the Branch Banks. The Shares, which were 112 by the last accounts, were quoted 111 at New-York on the 7th of November; a few months previous, 142 144 — The public Funds in America have also fallen two to three per cent. The 7 per cent. Stock, quoted formerly at 106 1-2 to 107, had declined to 102; 3 per cents. from 67 1-2 68, to 66. Silver varied from 5 to 7 1-2 prem.; and such was the great demand for money, occasioned by the commercial distress & want of confidence, that bills on England, formerly at par, were 3 to 8 1-2 per cent discount.

We learn from one of the first Yorkshire houses, that very extensive orders for woollen cloths have been received within these few days, both from America & the countries bordering on the Baltic — that house alone has received an order to the amount of £60,000 from Russia.

A Physician at Constantinople, and one at Smyrna, have ascertained that vaccination is a protection against the plague.

Dec. 7.

The Emperor of Russia and the Duke of Wellington.

We have great pleasure in publishing from an authentic communication, the following interesting anecdote, so honorable to the distinguished persons who are the objects of it:

"When the emperor Alexander arrived at Aix-la-Chapelle, which was in the middle of the night, after the late grand military review near Valenciennes, his imperial majesty went early the next morning, without any previous notice, to the hotel of the Duke of Wellington, who was then at breakfast with his aide-camp. The emperor entered the room without ceremony, but in full military costume. After shaking his grace by the hand very cordially, he addressed him nearly in the following words:

"Duke of Wellington—I lose not a moment in calling on you to express my sense of the obligation I feel, for the attention which my army has uniformly experienced at your hands, since it has been under your orders. No words can do justice to what I feel—as little I am able to express my admiration, at the high gratification you afforded me, at the late reviews of our troops, especially by the finest military movement I ever witnessed—the advance of the British guards, when attacking the heights of Famars. I have therefore to desire that you will permit me to nominate you a Field Marshal of Russia.—The Duke bowed assent, & expressed his deep sense of the distinguished honor intended him by his imperial majesty. The day after this interview, the emperor, on meeting the duke, said, 'You must dine with me to-day in the Russian uniform.' 'Sire,' replied the duke, 'I have not yet been able to furnish myself with a coat.' 'That shall not be wanting,' rejoined the emperor, 'if you will wear the best I have in my wardrobe.' In half an hour the emperor's own uniform coat, which he had worn the day before, was sent to the duke, who appeared in it at dinner, with the order of a Russian field marshal, and a magnificent sword presented to his grace by his imperial majesty, on the occasion. The manner in which the emperor conferred this high military honor is, perhaps, the most flattering personal compliment which the hero of Waterloo has yet received, and it had the additional grace of being given with all the cordiality & kindness of an intimate friend."

LIVERPOOL, Dec 12.

We are concerned to state, that the contagious fever which has so long prevailed in this town, but has hitherto been chiefly confined to the abodes of wretchedness & privation, is now extending itself amongst the higher ranks of society.

Globe Office, London, }
Dec. 10, 2 o'clock. }

We have just heard a report, that Lady H. Dalrymple was mortified, last night, in her bed, at her house in Wimpole-street.

The king of France has presented the duke of Wellington with the magnificent insignia of the Order of the Holy Ghost, estimated at the value of 500 000 francs.

Private letters by the Flanders mail state, that the sum advanced by the Dutch government, for the relief of the mercantile interests, amount to 5,000,000 of guilders; two for the merchants of Antwerp, & three for Amsterdam. This temporary aid has answered the purpose in a considerable degree; and bills, which, a few days ago, would not be looked at, can now be discounted at a legal interest.

The captain of a band of robbers, named Peter Mans, was lately executed at Lubeck. This fellow has, for more than twenty years, been the terror of all Germany. During the French revolution he has frequently pushed forward his troops as far as the frontiers of France & Italy. He was a man of extraordinary daring, and was literally covered with wounds.

A letter from Tunis, of the 1st of November, contains the following passage:—"The plague having commenced its annual ravages, trade is paralyzed. From 3 to 300 persons die daily, but as yet Mahometanism is the only victims; the Christians, as well as the Jews, preserve themselves by means of precautions which the Alcoran prohibits Mussulmen from using. The plague does not appear this day to be of so malignant a nature as in preceding years; we are not, however, the less obliged to keep ourselves shut up, the contagion being communicated not only by contact, but by communication with persons affected."

On Thursday morning, as one of the special constables was going about St. James'-street, in search of beggars, he met a middle-aged man, begging, supported by two crutches, walking very lame, and apparently with great difficulty, from door to door. The constable took hold of him, and was going to take him to Bridewell, when he began to tremble very much, and he was only begging, and that he was unable to work. A number of women then associated round the cripple, to whom he told a pitiful tale, when they, taking compassion upon him, endeavoured to rescue him from the constable. On his getting loose, he threw away his crutches, & ran down the street, followed by the constable, who pursued on full speed a mile, but could not overtake him, and at last lost sight of him who, of running through some narrow passages. He has not since been found. The crutches were picked up by the constable.

PARIS, Nov. 28.

The number of births at Paris, 1817, was 26,768 of which there were 13,149 males and 13,619 females; in this number he there were 6,047 natural children. The deaths amount to 22,124, of which 7,10 died of the smallpox, and 1,[illegible] deposited at la Morgue; there are the number of births surpasses that of deaths by 1606. In the same year there were 6,[illegible] marriages, of which 3,71[illegible] were young men & spinsters, 3,[illegible] between young men & widows, 60[illegible] between widowers & spinsters & 2[illegible] between widowers & widows.

Dec. 3.

The Duke of Wellington is now field-marshal of Austria, Russia & Prussia, his Prussian majesty having recently conferred this rank upon him, and sent the brevet to him by his aide-de-camp Count de Massow.

Yesterday, his Grace was received by the King, in a private audience, with the Russian general Woronzoff. His majesty made the duke of Wellington a present of a superb diamond cross, valued at 500,000 francs. The king also presented count Woronzoff with a very handsome snuff-box, enriched with diamonds.

FRANKFORT, Nov. 22.

Government paper is on the decline in consequence of the firm of Hope, at Amsterdam, being desirous of converting a large stock which they possess into cash, by offering it for sale.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 24.

In consequence of the progressive decline of our public funds, a commercial house at Amsterdam has just failed for 4,000,000 Dutch florins; and a banking house, one of the principals in the town, has stopped payment; other failures are apprehended, for a general stagnation prevails. To-night, the minister of Finance sets off for Amsterdam. To what can be attributed this rapid fall, which in seven days is already seven per cent?

Lord Ellenborough is mentioned on the 20th of November, as being very low, and his physicians entertained little or no hopes of his recovery.

A report reached London on the 27th, that an attempt had been made near Frankfort, to assassinate the Emperor Alexander. No confirmation of the rumor had been received on the 29th.

A part of the King's Jewels, it is said, have been missing since last June. No discovery in relation to them has yet been made. Among the articles missing, are a the George diamond sword, and invaluable button & loop.? The fact that they were missing was not made public until since the death of the Queen.

The Earl of Mulgrave, in consequence of continued indisposition, has regnested leave to resign the office of Master General of the Ordnance. The resignation was accepted by the Council, and it was agreed to offer the vacant seat, if agreeable to the Prince Regent, to the Duke of Wellington.

The House then adjourned.

WEDNESDAY, Jan. 27th.

A petition of Thos. Lee, Esq. was received, read & referred to a committee of five.

A petition of Neil M'Rennan, licenced practitioner of physic was read by Mr. Borgia in his place.

Mr. Borgia moved, seconded by Mr. Vanfelson, that the said Petition be brought up.

Mr. Speaker declined receiving the motion, as the recommendation of His Grace the Governor in chief did not accompany the Petition, which recommendation is required by a Rule of this House, in all cases where application is made for any sum of Money relating to public Service.

Mr. Borgia appealed to the House from the Speaker's decision.

The House divided——Yeas 15

So it was carried in the affirmative.

A Petition of divers Inhabitants of the Counties of Devon & Cornwallis was presented.

SIR,

It is with deep concern that I communicate to you the intelligence of the decease of Queen Charlotte which took place this day at one o'clock in the morning, after a long illness, which her Majesty bore with a most pious fortitude & resignation.

YORK, Feb. 18, 1819.

Remarks on the Grievances concluded.

That the Laws are not seasonably promulgated, is the sixth grievance on the list; and a silly grievance it is. They are published, in all the Newspapers, as soon as enacted; and printed in the form of a pamphlet as quickly as possible, (excepting those of the year 1816, and sent to the Magistrates: but as none of you are of the quorum, it is very probable that you seldom see them. The only remedy is to make you a Justices of the Peace.

The seventh grievance complains of the Highway taxes. We cannot help admiring your pertinacity, in returning to this subject, after you know that the Lieut. Governor had recommended the revision of the Road Laws to the consideration of Parliament. Had it not been for the unquiet state, into which a revolutionary faction had thrown the public mind, it would probably, ere this, have been brought forward last Session.

Grievance the eighth complains, that applications have made to the Executive for the sanction to Acts to incorporate for various useful purposes, &c. which have been refused. What Acts we recollect only one, for establishing a Bank at Kingston; no great loss; for a clause in the same commanded a statement in detail, not an abstract, of the business, (!) to be annually laid before the Legislature. This would have destroyed its usefulness, for the sole of commerce is secrecy; and it was sufficient, for every purpose, to make the Directors responsible. The real grievance, is the scarcity of capital; petition the Governor, or the House of Assembly to furnish this in abundance, and then we may laugh at interruptions, which hinder trade, and infringe our liberties.

The ninth grievance complains, that the Collector at Kingston exercised a praise-worthy diligence, in the execution of his office; a vigilance which has been confirmed by the verdict of a respectable jury. Had this officer connived at the deception, we should have heard nothing of this notable grievance.

The tenth grievance respects Major General Shaufe's recommendation of the Volunteer & Flank Companies for land. That this recommendation went home, as well as an Address from the Legislature on the same subject, has been admitted: but the policy of giving people rewards for defending their property, & keeping their oaths, requires great consideration. Give the militia of this Province lands for their services, and you must likewise give to those of Lower Canada, Nova Scotia, New-Brunswick &c. but as there are no lands of any value to give, in some of these Colonies, you must find a substitute. Moreover, the militia of Great Britain & Ireland, are equally entitled to the consideration of government; and cannot, with justice, be refused a gratuity of equal value with that which is requested for the militia of this Province. Now two hundred acres of land, the gratuity demanded for the Volunteer & Flank Companies, is worth £30 at least; this sum ought to be given to every militia-man in Great Britain, or her dependencies, who served during the war; but where is the money to come from? or what government could afford to give all its subjects money or land for those services which they ought to perform for nothing, when their country is attacked?

The merit acquired by the militia of Upper Canada, & of which they are proud, & with reason, would be extinguished, were it to be supposed that they were actuated by interested motives; and instead of being considered, as they now are, the brave defenders of their laws & properties, the lovers of their country, and the determined supporters of our happy constitution, they would sink into selfish mercenaries, alike destitute of patriotism & honor.

It is here, or a loyal aspersion to say, that they consider it a grievance, they have not been rewarded for services, which their duty called them to perform. Should the King bestow lands upon them, they will receive them as a mark of Royal approbation & favor; but not as a reward which was due, or to which they had any claim.

Grievance the eleventh, complains, that some of our brave defenders of the army & navy, have got favorable locations, & many natives of the Province unfavorable. Were it true, this grievance proceeds from a base, not a British feeling; but the allegation is false: for every one of such persons, there are 20 natives of the Province, who get favorable locations; for the Governor knows nothing of the badness or goodness of the lots improved for, but gives them to the first applicant, if vacant & grantable; and persons living in the country are much better judges of land, than gentlemen on half pay, just retired from the service.

The Law which obliges surgeons to submit to examination, and, on being qualified, to get licence to practice, constitutes the twelfth grievance, and a very serious grievance it is. What business has the Legislature to take care of the lives & health of the people? Let ignorant pretenders to physic, poison, and destroy as many as they please; it is nobody's concern. This is the only [illegible] grievance which we have yet to-

YORK, Feb. 18, 1819.

Remarks on the Grievances concluded.

That the Laws are not seasonably adjusted, is the sixth grievance it is. They published, in all the Newspapers, as soon as enacted; and printed in the form of a pamphlet as quickly as possible, (excepting those of the year 1816, sent to the Magistrates: but as not you are of the quorum, it is very probable that you seldom see them. Had it not been for the unquiet state, into which a certain reputationary faction had thrown the public mind, it would, probably, have been brought forward last Session.

The eighth grievance complains, that applications have been made to the Executive for the sanction to Acts by subscription for various useful purposes, &c. which have been refused. What Acts do you recollect only one, for establishing a Bank at Kingston: are not you? for the use in the time commanded a statute in detail, not an abstract, of the business annually laid before the Legislature. This would have destroyed its usefulness, for the soul of commerce is secrecy; and it was sufficient, for every purpose, to make the Directors responsible. The tenth grievance respects Major General Sheaffe's recommendation of the Queen's & Flank Companies for land, and this recommendation went home, with an Address from the Legislature, to the same subject, has been adopted: but the policy of giving people lands for defending their property, & risking their oaths, requires great consideration. Give the militia of this Province lands for their services, and you will likewise give to those of Lower Canada, Nova Scotia, New-Brunswick, and as there are no lands of any value to give, in some of these Colonies, it will not find a substitute. Now two hundred acres of land, the gratuity demanded by the Volunteer & Flank Companies, is worth £30 at least; this sum is to be given to every militia-man at Britain, or her dependencies, who served during the war; but where is the money to come from? or what argument could adduce to give all its moneys or land for those services, and they sought to perform for nothing, their country's cause?

The land required by the militia of Canada, & of which they are in want, would be exorbitant, were it to be supposed that they were actuated by interested motives, and not as being considered, as they are, the brave defenders of their properties, the lovers of their country, and the determined supporters of its happy constitution, they would not, in this case, act like destitute of patriotism & honor.

Therefore a foul aspersion to say, that they consider it a grievance, they consider it a favour called them to perform. The King bestow lands upon them, they will receive them as a mark of approbation & favor: but not reward which was due, or to which they had any claim.

Of the grievance the eleventh, complains, that the officers of our brave defenders of the British navy, have got favorable locations among natives of the Province, unjustly. Were it true, this grievance would be far from a base, not a British feeling: but the allegation is false: for every one knows, that there are 20 natives of the Province, who get favorable locations; for the Governor knows nothing of the badness or goodness of the lots or, but gives them to the first applicant, if vacant & grantable; and every one living in the country are much better judges of land, than gentlemen of the navy, just retired from the service.

The twelfth grievance complains, that the Law which obliges surgeons to undergo an examination, and, on being found fit, to get license to practice, was the twelfth grievance, and a most outrageous grievance it is. What business has the Legislature to take care of the bodies & health of the people? What pretenders to physic, poisoners, destroy as many as they please; it is nobody's concern. This is the only grievance which we have yet encountered, and ought immediately to be removed; and we hope the Legislature will be convened as soon as possible, for that express purpose.

Grievance thirteenth is the climax: it presents the cloven foot, & by changing the principle of inheritance, undermines the English Law concerning landed property, which is founded on this principle. As the law now stands, every man can will his property, as he pleases; and the people of this Province are too much attached to the Parent State, to relish this new-fangled doctrine, this precursor of republicanism. It is the grievance-maker's own grievance, for his humble signers could have no knowledge of the pernicious changes which it is calculated to produce.

There are not more sincere friends to liberty, and the right of petition, than ourselves; nor any, more inclined to shew proper deference to public opinion: but, in the above grievances, we see the right of petition wrested to the purpose of indulging private pique. It is notorious that the member of the Land Council, alluded to in the first grievance, was the first person that opposed Mr. Gourlay; and a grievance is formed, without the least regard to the truth of the case, for the purpose of vilifying him, and the Land Council.—Surely it becomes the duty, under circumstances like these, of any Editor of a journal, who is in possession of the truth, to give it to the public. The press ought always to be free for the detection of misrepresentation, whether it proceed from a mistaken Government, or a mistaken party of the people. If, in commenting on the foregoing grievances, we have fallen into a tone of irony or asperity, it has arisen from observing an attempt to traduce certain of our fellow subjects, in the eye of the government, and of the public; and as loyal subjects we did not observe, without emotion, that the Representative of our Sovereign, was desired to think properly and such like new, and uncouth many language. We had moreover been persuaded, that the grievances were the work of an individual, not long since arrived in this country from the United States; and that very few of the subscribers had read them. We felt certain that had they read them, very many of them would not have acquiesced, in much of the tone and matter: for we understand that not a few were induced by the loyal conclusion, which was handed to them, to give their signatures to the whole.

We set out up for infallibility; we have no other documents to guide us than such as were alike open to every individual: we have raised a single voice in vindication of many of our fellow subjects; for, whether they be employed in the Executive duties, or belong to the Legislature of the State, let us not forget that they are our fellow subjects. For them we have raised our voice; but in striving to do them justice, had we thought we should exist the slightest shadow on the beautiful right of petitioning, we would not have opened our lips against calumny and misrepresentation, though the attack had been made upon ourselves.

From the Canadian Courant.

Mr. Editor.—In our humble opinion this gentleman has become a very secondary object of our consideration. The Parliament of Upper Canada, in their zeal to demonstrate the most profound submission to their noble Governor, has introduced a most decent precedent, even nearly allied to imperatorial tyranny. With closed doors, either aloud, or whispered of their proceedings, they have passed an act" contrary to the spirit of the British Constitution, and as inimical to the liberty of the subject, as could ever be expected even from the passioned borough-mongers, which disgrace a ministerial majority at home. It has been the fashion of a certain class of people, in this province, to deteriorate from the merit of the Lower Canada Representatives by making comparisons, or drawing conclusions, between them and the great advantage of having an "inquisitive legislature."—We believe however that our House of Commons, would never have performed so servile a part, as they have lately done in Upper Canada. Our members are too jealous of their constitutional rights. And "as far as freedom is, and in their hearts join estimation far above all price"—they would have paused to reflect on the future consequences of a vote, which dumped a tellow subject to "Banishment"—and "lest the like precedent should lead them" to reflected. they would spurn the proposed such law. Are the subordinate Court of Justice in Upper Canada so inefficient then? Could not one honest jury be found to try an individual for any imputed offence?

Congress of Aix-la-Chapelle.

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 33.

The conferences at Aix-la-Chapelle having finally closed, and most of the Allied Monarchs and the Ministers having taken their departure, the State Papers which are to announce to the world the result of this august Congress of Sovereigns, have at length made their appearance. These papers are four in number, but they are neither very voluminous, nor very explicit. The two first consist merely of an invitation to France to join the great confederacy, and the eager accession of that power to an alliance which is founded on such magnificent purposes. The third and fourth contain a simple and dignified appeal to the whole civilized world in vindication of the great objects which the allied powers have already accomplished, the still greater objects which they have in view, and the sacred compacts into which they profess to have entered for the benefit of the human race. They solemnly invoke the assistance of heaven and of mankind to carry these noble projects into execution, and declare that their great objects of contention, hence forward, shall be only as respect the gradual advancement of the human species, and the maintenance of peace and good will on earth.

DECLARATION

of the Allied Sovereigns, on the breaking up of the Congress of Aix-La-Chapelle.

Now that the pacification of Europe is accomplished, by the resolution of withdrawing the foreign troops from the French territory; and now that there is an end of those measures of precaution which deplorable events had rendered necessary, the Ministers and Plenipotentiaries of their Majesties the Emperor of Austria, the King of France, the King of Great Britain, the King of Prussia, & the Emperor of all the Russias, have received orders from their sovereigns, to make known to all the courts of Europe, the results of their meeting at Aix-La-Chapelle, and with that view do publish the following Declaration:

The convention of the 9th of October, which definitively regulated the execution of the engagements agreed to in the Treaty of Peace, of November 20, 1815, is considered by the Sovereigns who concurred therein, as the accomplishment of the political system destined to ensure its solidity.

The intimate union established among the monarchs, who are joint parties to this system by their own principles, no less than by the interests of their people, offers to Europe the most sacred pledge of its future tranquility.

The object of this union is as simple as it is great and salutary. It does not tend to any new political combination—to any change in the relations sanctioned by existing treaties. Calm and consistent in its proceedings, it has no other object than the maintenance of peace, and the security of those transactions on which the peace was founded & consolidated.

The sovereigns, in forming this august Union, have regarded as its fundamental basis, their invariable resolution never to depart, either among themselves or in their relations with other States, from the strictest observation of the principles of the right of Nations; principles which, in their application to a state of permanent peace, can alone effectually guarantee the independence of each government & the stability of the general association.

Faithful to these principles, the sovereigns will maintain them equally in those meetings at which they may be personally present, or in those which shall take place among their ministers; whether it shall be their object to discuss in common their own interests, or whether they take cognizance of questions in which other Governments shall formally claim their interference. The same spirit which will direct their Councils, and reign in their diplomatic communications, shall preside also at these meetings: and the repose of the world shall be constantly their motive & their end.

It is with such sentiments that the Sovereigns have consummated the work to which they were called. They will not cease to labour for its confirmation and perfection. They solemnly acknowledge, that their duties towards God and the people whom they govern, make it peremptory on them to give to the world, as far as in their power, an example of justice, of concord, of moderation; happy in the power of consecrating, from henceforth, all their efforts to the protection of the art of peace, to the increase of the internal prosperity of their States, and to the awakening of those sentiments of religion and morality, whose empire has been but too much enfeebled by the misfortune of the time.

Curious article of Commerce.—A London paper says "It is perhaps not generally known to the commercial world that at least two vessels are entirely loaded on the coast of Hampshire every year, with a fine red Sand, for this market, which is used to sprinkle on the bottom of bird cages. This article some times experiences all the fluctuations in prices of our more staple commodities.

It is reported here, that since our discovery ships, an American vessel has entered Baffin's Straits and Bay. It penetrated into Sir James Lancaster's Straits, where it found a depth of 100 fathoms, the water warm; it continued its course with great hopes, it is said, of succeeding in the attempt to find through that Strait, a passage into Behring's Straits.

The public has been officially informed that the plague extends its ravages upon the coasts of the Mediterranean & the Adriatic. Our government will use the greatest vigilance to prevent that calamity from reaching the English coasts. It was brought to Venice by an Austrian vessel from Albania; it is true that the authorities of Venice instantly took measures of safety.

We have received newspapers and letters from Madrid to the 25th of November. The newspapers are as usual barren. According to the private letters, they expected at Madrid a royal decree, relative to the army, which is to be increased to 70,000 men, the guards will consist of 5000 men. They say nothing of new changes in the ministry. It is believed that Pizarro and the other exiled ministers, will obtain permission to return to the capital.

Col. Clitheron obtained yesterday in the court of common pleas, a judgment against Mr. Peters, son of a banker of Loudon, for £3000 damages, for having destroyed the domestic happiness of the plaintiff, by seducing his wife, with whom Mr. Peters is now living in France.

200 DOLLARS REWARD.

ON my leaving Niagara, about the 23d of July 1816, I forgot a Book which contained promissory Notes & Receipts, to a large amount, among which was Mr. Daniel Brook's Note to me for £1768 12s. 5d. Currency, for which I have not hitherto received value. The Book was last seen in the hands of said Daniel Brooke, by the clerk who then superintended his business. And to corroborate this fact, an affidavit has been sworn to by him, before Doctor Muirhead, of Niagara.

As I must experience an irreparable loss from the want of these valuable documents, the above reward shall be immediately paid to the person, on returning the Book in an unmutilated state.

To the public it may seem strange, that I have withheld this notice more than above period. I will only say, that I never could conceive that I should be under the disagreeable necessity of bringing this subject before them; but strong necessity now obliges me to do so.

IN Contradiction to the Misstatement of the Settlement between Mr. DANIEL BROOK and the Subscriber, which has appeared in the Upper Canada Gazette of the 14th Inst. Signed D. From Europe.

We insert the following interesting particulars of the rescue of a boy, who was cast upon a rock near the mouth of Kingsale harbor, during the wreck of a vessel in which he was a passenger :—

The praise worthy exertions of the Sovereign of Kingsale, assisted by several other Gentlemen, to rescue the unfortunate lad, or to convey provisions to him, were ineffectual, the boats having been reluctantly obliged to retire, and to leave the unfortunate boy for the second night upon this desolate rock, without food or shelter, and with all the fearful anticipation that, before morning, cold and hunger would terminate his existence. As they retreated he was seen collecting in a particular spot (a kind of cavern) a quantity of weeds with the intention of making a bed, and picking from the earth some wild vegetables, with which the rock abounds, and which he was observed to eat. A fog suddenly concealed him from further observation while thus employed.

Reluctant to suffer such an interval, as between night and morning, to pass without making a new effort in behalf of the boy, at eleven o'clock at night Mr. Gibbons's whaleboat was the second time manned and attempted to get out, but could not succeed. In the morning long before day, she again started with Lieuts. Bevan and Naton, of the Royal Navy, and John Heard Isaac, Esq. and rowed towards the island, but with no hope of reaching it, as the sea and wind were still higher than on either of the two preceding mornings, and the scene altogether more terrific. The worst apprehensions were entertained for the boy, who had been then two days and two nights on the rock without any other food than the wild vegetables which it yielded. Those fears, however, were in a me degree relieved when he was again seen from the boat moving about; but hope derived no support from the aspect of the morning, which promised a bad and stormy day. After renewed but fruitless efforts to gain any point of the island, the whale boat was again obliged to return to Kingsale, which it reached about twelve o'clock, after having been several times in imminent danger of swamping. Here a most interesting scene took place; the crew of an American vessel, the Dryad, which was undergoing some repairs in the dock yard of Messrs. Gibbon and Co. volunteered to go out in the whale boat, and make an effort to rescue the boy. Their services were gratefully accepted, and they swore they never would return if they did not succeed. They then proceeded to make an experiment by firing a musket ball, with a rope attached to it, which was found to convey it with ease as far as they considered would be necessary, and thus provided they proceeded to sea.

In the mean time the boats from Oysterhaven had got into activity and they could be seen for three hours in succession, contending with, but scarcely living in the breakers at the base of the rock. As the situation of the boy became more hopeless their exertions increased, and their desperate daring was more visible. It was impossible that he could have survived another night, and the knowledge of this circumstance seemed to infuse new resolution in the hearts of the men. Two boats were for a long time seen supporting each other in their perilous undertaking, yet they were frequently concealed for minutes together in the dip of the sea, or in the surge of the breakers. The day was then far advanced, and to those who were on the coast provided with glasses, and who could see what was going forward, there appeared as little hope of relieving the boy as on the preceding day, and his fate seemed inevitable. They did not know, however, the resolution which the crews seemed to have formed either to succeed or perish, and the interest of the scene was excited into intense agitation, when one of the men, a brave and dauntless fellow, named Jack Carty, the owner of one of the Oysterhaven boats, was observed to be tying a rope round his body, and in a few minutes to throw himself with the most fearless intrepidity into the surge, in which his boat could not live. The sensation which prevailed cannot be described, all attention was now turned towards this heroic fellow, and the suspense was intolerable until he was seen clinging to, and occasionally climbing the cliffs, where an imminent sea had left him. He succeeded in mounting beyond the reach of the spray, and was seen most actively employed assisting the poor boy, who was in a completely exhausted state of mind and body, and who could with difficulty descend to where his preserver beckoned him. At length he reached him, and Jack Carty proceeded to invest his body with the rope which he had taken from his own, and then performed the duty of ushering him to the spot where he had himself been thrown, where he consigned him to the waves. Doubt and anxiety were again painfully excited while the men in the boat were drawing him through the breakers and seas, through which he must pass, before his safety could be said to be ensured; but both were dispatched when he was seen taken in over the gunael, which was announced by three cheers by the men in the boats.—During these few moments of agitation, the intrepid Jack Carty, who remained on the Island, was forgotten; but the boy's safety being known, all eyes were turned to the former, and he was distinctly seen sitting down with the utmost composure on the point of a rock, waiting for his own chance of being released. This happily was not long accomplishing; a rope was flung on the cliffs, and Jack more adroit than his predecessor on the Island, soon seized and tied it round the waist and shoulders.—Notwithstanding the perils of the scene, it was almost whimsical to see this fine fellow collecting the boy's and his own clothes, which he deliberately tied up in a bundle and put under his arm, and then descending to the most favorable spot, he watched his opportunity, and threw himself into the sea, from which, in the course of about five minutes, he was released by his companions, who signified his safety by loud cheers, which were returned from those parts of the land where they could be heard. It was exactly half past two o'clock. The whale boat, with the American crew, arrived almost at the moment Carty had got into his boat, but they were in sight some time before, and were seen rowing in the most undaunted manner, in the heavy sea, and almost in the surge, closing the most accessible point of the Island. Upon learning the safety of the boy, they gave three cheers, and returned to Kingsale, scarcely less entitled to public gratitude than if they had been the instruments of preservation.—Other boats also arrived at the moment, ignorant of what had occurred, but all determined to make a simultaneous effort.

Arctic Curiosities.—Amongst the collections made by Capt. Ross, one of the most remarkable is the sledge used by the natives, which is simple in form, & so light that it appears almost impossible to bear the weight of a human being. It consists of two pieces of bone between five & six feet long, about three inches from the ground, which are kept together by five pieces, about 18 or 20 inches in length, and placed at intervals of 9 or 10 inches. At the end are two upright pieces of sea elephant's skin, producing rather a curve, which forms the seat of the person, without any other support. The whole of this curious carriage, which is entirely of bone, is bound together with pieces of skin & whalebone, and is so extremely light as to admit of its being conveyed from place to place with great facility. To the fore part six dogs are affixed, which are fastened together, two & two, with a species of harness made of slips of skin, and they draw it with much rapidity. The whip for managing these useful animals is about three yards in length, made of skin, and which the natives are represented as using with as much dexterity as any of the Members of the London Whip Club. The handle is about the length of those used by postilions, consisting of six pieces of bone, one placed transversely at the handle, to prevent its slipping, fastened together by skins & the sinews of birds.

A dog & bitch had been sent to her Royal Highness the Duchess of York; and a dog, & a bitch with pup, to Sir Joseph Banks.—There are also several stuffed birds, the plumage of which is very remarkable, together with some very curious star fish, and the apparatus by which the natives catch the seals & sea elephants. The whole of the curiosities have been very properly sent to the British Museum, where, as soon as they are arranged, they will be submitted to the inspection of the public.

Treaty between Great Britain and the U. States.

ARTICLE I.

Whereas differences have arisen respecting the liberty claimed by the United States, for the inhabitants thereof to take, dry, & cure, fish, on certain coasts, bays, harbors, & creeks, of his Britannic Majesty's dominions in America, it is agreed between the high contracting parties, that the inhabitants of the said United States shall have, forever, in common with the subjects of his Britannic Majesty, the liberty to take fish of every kind, on that part of the southern coast of Newfoundland, which extends from Cape Ray to the Rameau Islands, on the Western & Northern coast of Newfoundland, from the said Cape Ray to the Quirpon Islands, on the shores of the Magdalen Islands, & also on the coasts, bays, harbors & creeks, from Mount Jolly, on the southern coast of Labrador, to & through the Streights of Belisle, and thence northwardly indefinitely along the coast, without prejudice, however, to any of the exclusive rights of the Hudson's bay company:—And that the American fishermen shall also have liberty, forever, to dry & cure fish in any of the unsettled bays, harbors, & creeks, of the southern part of the coast of Newfoundland, hereabove described, & of the coast of Labrador; but so soon as the same, or any portion thereof, shall be settled, it shall not be lawful for the said fishermen to dry or cure fish at such portion so settled, without previous agreement for such purpose, with the inhabitants, proprietors, or possessors of the ground. And the United States hereby renounce forever, any liberty heretofore enjoyed or claimed by the inhabitants thereof, to take, dry, or cure fish, on or within three marine miles of any of the coasts, bays, creeks or harbors of his Britannic Majesty's dominions in America, not included in the above mentioned limits: Provided however, that the American fishermen shall be admitted to enter such bays or harbors, for the purpose of shelter & repairing damages therein, of purchasing wood, and of obtaining water, and for no other purpose whatever. But they shall be under such restrictions as may be necessary to prevent their taking, drying, or curing fish therein, or in any other manner whatever abusing the privileges hereby reserved to them.

ARTICLE II.

It is agreed that a line drawn from the most northwestern point of the Lake of the Woods, along the forty-ninth parallel of north latitude, or if the said point shall not be in the forty-ninth parallel of north latitude, then that a line drawn from the said point due north or south, as the case may be, until the said parallel of north latitude, and from the point of such intersection due west along & with the said parallel shall be the line of demarcation between the territories of the United States & those of His Britannic Majesty, and that the said line shall form the northern boundary of the said territories of the United States, and the southern boundary of the territories of His Britannic Majesty, from the Lake of the Woods to the Stony Mountains.

ARTICLE III.

It is agreed, that any country that may be claimed by either party on the northwest coast of America, westward of the Stony Mountains, shall, together with its harbors, bays & creeks, & the navigation of all rivers within the same, be free & open, for the term of ten years from the date of the signature of the present convention, to the vessels, citizens & subjects of the two powers; it being well understood, that this agreement is not to be constructed to the prejudice of any claim which either of the two high contracting parties may have to any part of the said country, nor shall it be taken to affect the claims of any other power or state to any part of the said country, the only object of the high contracting parties, in that respect, being to prevent disputes & differences amongst themselves.

ARTICLE IV.

All the provisions of the Convention "to regulate the commerce between the territories of the United States & of His Britannic Majesty," concluded at London, on the third day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred & fifteen, with the exception of the clause which limited its duration to four years, & excepting, also, so far as the same was affected by the declaration of His Majesty respecting the Island of St. Helena, are hereby extended & continued in force for the term of ten years from the date of the signature of the present Convention in the same manner as if all the provisions of the Convention were herein specially recited.

ARTICLE V.

Whereas it was agreed by the first article of the Treaty of Ghent, that "All territory, places & possessions, whatsoever, taken by either party from the other, during the war, or which may be taken after the signing of this Treaty excepting only the Islands hereinafter mentioned, shall be restored without delay, and without causing any destruction, or carrying away any of the artillery or other public property originally captured in the said forts or places, which shall remain therein upon the exchange of the ratifications of this Treaty, or any slaves, or other private property;" and whereas, under the aforesaid article, the United States claim for their citizens, and as their private property, the restitution of, or full compensation for, all slaves who, at the date of the exchange of the ratifications of the said Treaty, were in any territory, places, or possessions whatsoever, directed by the said Treaty to be restored to the United States, but then still occupied by the British forces, whether such slaves were, at the date aforesaid, on shore, or on board any British vessel, lying in waters within the territory or jurisdiction of the United States; and whereas differences have arisen, whether, by the true intent & meaning of the aforesaid article of the Treaty of Ghent, the United States are entitled to the restoration, of, or full compensation for, all or any slaves, or the above described the high contracting parties hereby agree to refer the said differences to some friendly sovereign or state, to be named for that purpose; & the high contracting parties further engage to consider the decision of such friendly sovereign or state to be final and conclusive on all the matters referred.

NEW PUBLICATIONS IN OCTOBER.

A portable, & therefore useful volume has been printed, of Orfila's directions, for the treatment of persons who have taken poison, with the means of detecting poisons, &c. The translation is correctly made by Mr. R. H. Black, who has added a valuable appendix on suspended animation.

In addition to the Books on America noticed in our last number, another has been published during the present month under the title of Sketches of America, by Henry Bradshaw Fearon, which claims attention as a matter-of-fact book, without any other pretensions.

Professor Playfair's geographical & statistical description of Scotland, in two volumes, 8vo. will speedily be published. It will contain a general description of Scotland, of every county, & each parish, and the whole will be illustrated by appropriate statistical tables.

Dr. Brewster, inventor of the kaleidoscope, is engaged on a new edition of professor Robinson's system of mechanical philosophy, with notes & illustrations; comprising the most recent discoveries in the physical sciences.

A manual of chemistry; containing the principal facts of the science, arranged in the order in which they are discussed & illustrated in the lectures at the royal institution, with a prefatory history of the science; by W. T. Brande, F. R. S. secretary to the royal society of London, is announced, in one volume, 8vo. with upwards of 100 wood-cuts. Such a work has long been wanted, & will be received with pleasure in all seminaries of education & among students in general.

Mr. Dufief has exhibited repeatedly & successfully, before enlightened auditories at Edinburgh, his new method of teaching French to a very numerous class. He first pronounced aloud each letter & dipthong, & instantly all the class pronounced after him. He then, in the same manner, pronounced to them, first short, and then very long, sentences of English translated into French, and French into English; pronouncing the French twice, & the English once. They then spell aloud the words after his spelling, & write by memory, each sentence on slates. He teaches them to translate nearly in the same manner. As the whole class are almost constantly speaking, they soon acquire the pronunciation, the command of the sentences in his first volume, and the grammar in the second. All present were convinced, that the plan is effectual for teaching simultaneously a great number of pupils.

Mr. Accum, also has in the press, elements of chemistry, for self-instruction, after the system of Sir H. Davy, illustrated by experiments; in an octavo volume, with plates.

Dr. Granville is preparing a series of memoirs on the present state of sciences & scientific institutions in France.

Mr. James Hacket, first lieutenant in the late artillery brigade, is preparing a narrative of the expedition which sailed from England in the winter of 1817, under the command of colonels Campbell, Gilmore, Wilson & Hippesley, to join the South American patriots; comprising an account of the delusive engagements upon which it was fitted out; the proceedings, distresses, & ultimate fates of the troops; with observations & authentic information, elucidating the real character of the contest, as respects the mode of warfare, and present state of the independent armies.

A statistical, political, & historical account of the United States of America, from the period of the first establishments to the present day, is announced on a new plan; by D. B. Warden, Esq.

The Rev. Dr. Chalmers, of Glasgow, will shortly publish a volume of Sermons, preached by him in the Tron Church, Glasgow.

Brig. Gen. McDonnel is preparing for publication, in two quarto volumes, a polyhian view of the late war in Spain & Portugal.

France.—The illustrious count Chaptal is preparing for the press, the history of the inventions & discoveries in the arts & sciences in France, since the commencement of the revolution. The English edition of it is, we understand, to be confided to Sir John Byerley. It will be a most valuable & important work, and will form two volumes in 8vo. with plates; and the English & French editions will appear about the same time, in Paris & London.

The king of Prussia arrived at Potsdam on the 28th of Nov. from Aix-La-Chapelle.

The persons who had been arrested at Brussels, were on the 5th Dec. under examination; they were charged with "plots tending to excite a civil war, by arming the inhabitants against each other, in the kingdom of the Netherlands."

On the 12th of Dec. there was a considerable scuation in the money market, owing to the bank of England having come to the determination to limit their discounts; the bank had thrown out "an immense quantity of bills, presented by bankers and individuals of the first respectability." Specie was so scarce in the city, that good bills were, with difficulty, cashed at 5 per cent.

The king of Wirtemberg has abolished the punishment of the gauntlet in his army.

A new candidate for Westminster is expected to offer himself in a few days; his political principles are the same which governed Sir S. Romilly.

A meeting of the council of the city of London has been held for the purpose of considering the propriety of petitioning parliament to revise & alter the penal code, in order to diminish the number of capital punishments for minor offences. Mr. Finvel, one of the speakers, observed, that during the reign of Henry VIII. two thousand persons were executed annually.

Lord Ellenborough is stated to be considerably better. Sir Isaac Heard, garter king at arms, attained his 88th year the 10th of Jan. He has officiated at the funeral of six of the royal family.

Mr. Neilson accompanied by the other Messengers reported to the House that their Address of the 29th January to His Grace the Governor in Chief has been presented to His Grace, and that his Grace had been pleased to make the following answer.

Gentlemen,

The Title deeds of the Fiefs Sillery & St. Gabriel which are now vested in the Crown, being public documents to which all His Majesty's subjects have a right of access, directions shall be given to the Deputy Secretary of the Province & to the prothonotaries of the Court of King's Bench, in whose custody those documents are kept, to lay copies thereof before the Assembly whenever required by that House so to do.

Being, however, apprized by the Journals of the Assembly of the circumstances which have led to the present application, I think it necessary to acquaint the House, that the several tribes of Indians residing within this Province of Lower-Canada, are, for weighty reasons of state, under the immediate superintendance & protection of the Crown, & that their respective claims to lands, heretofore held by the late order of Jesuits, in this Province, have long since been fully investigated & determined upon, by Tribunals appointed under the Royal authority for that purpose.

Should circumstances at any time occur to render Legislative interference necessary, of which His Majesty must be the judge, due information will be given thereof to both Houses of the Provincial Parliament.

The following Message from His Grace the Governor in Chief was laid before the two Houses of the Legislature on Monday last.

RICHMOND, LENOX & AUBIGNY,
Governor in Chief.

The Governor in Chief acquaints the House of Assembly, that he has received the Instructions of His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, as to the manner in which His Royal Highness's commands respecting the proceedings of the Assembly against Mr. Justice Foucher, which were communicated to the Assembly by message upon the second day of March last, are to be carried into execution.

His Royal Highness the Prince Regent considers it most advisable & has accordingly been pleased to direct that the Assembly, previous to any ulterior proceedings, to adduce without delay, & deliver to His Grace the Governor in Chief, such documentary evidence as they may consider adequate to support the charges which they have brought against Mr. Justice Foucher, & that copies of such charges, of such documentary evidence, & of the examinations already taken & annexed to the charges, be then transmitted by His Grace the Governor in Chief, to Mr. Justice Foucher, for his answer & defence.

And His Royal Highness has been further pleased to direct that the answer & defence of Mr. Justice Foucher, be, by His Grace the Governor in Chief, communicated to the Assembly, for their reply, and the whole of the documents, as soon as the reply of the Assembly shall be received, shall be by him transmitted to His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, for such further course as the case may require.

MR. NEILSON,

Perhaps the Public curiosity will be gratified by the following statement of the present population of the City of Quebec, the precision & exactness of which may be relied on.

Quebec, February 10th, 1819.

Division.	Upper Town	Lower Town	St. John's Suburbs	St. Roch's Suburbs	Total.
Dwelling Houses.	424	440	515	609	2088

Catholics.	1630	2223	3359	4158	11570

The present Season still continues to be unusually mild. A heavy rain yesterday has again laid the fields partly bare, a thing unexampled in this country in February. From Sunday till this morning the Thermometer has been constantly above the freezing point. On Monday it was at 47.

YORK, Feb. 25, 1819.

Mr. Gourlay having been committed to Gaol, pursuant to the provisions of an Act of the 44th of the King, applied, shortly after his committal, for a writ of Habeas Corpus; hoping perhaps that it would be refused him; but it was granted, and by virtue of it he was brought from Niagara to York, to lay his case before the Chief Justice, who had issued the writ. That Magistrate having decided that the order to Mr. Gourlay to quit the Province, and his imprisonment on refusal to do so, were strictly comformable to the Statute, he was remanded to prison at Niagara. While Mr. Gourlay was at York, he resided at Mr. Forest's Inn.

That our readers may see how far party spirit will carry misrepresentation when not restrained by a respect for truth, we extract the following article from the Canadian Courant of the 13th inst.

"By late accounts from York, U. C. it appears that Mr. Gourlay has been removed by virtue of a writ of Habeas Corpus from Niagara to the Gaol of that place, in consequence of a design of some misguided people to pull down the prison, and to liberate Mr. G. who (depending on a more constitutional redress of his grievances) gave notice of the intended violence. Our correspondent goes on to inform us, that since his arrival at York, the prison doors have been open to him, with an intimation that he might go out, which, however, Mr. Gourlay has refused to do."

Our readers will observe that the above short paragraph contains six direct falsehoods, viz.

1st. That Mr. Gourlay was removed to the Gaol at York.

2d. That certain misguided people intended to pull down the prison at Niagara.

3d. That Mr. Gourlay gave notice of such intention.

4th. That the prison doors at York were thrown open to him.

5th. That it was intimated to him that he might go out.

6th. That he refused to do so.

Early Navigation.—The Schr. Mary Ann, J. Mosier, arrived here on Monday the 22d instant with passengers from Niagara, being probably the first instance of the lake being navigated at so early a period of the year. The season has however been so very mild as to make the navigation practicable and safe almost every day since the commencement of the winter, between Niagara and this port, and indeed it is said even to Kingston.

A letter from Cornwall of the 12th inst. mentions a heavy fall of rain the day before, accompanied by very severe thunder and lightning.

Fire.—A small house built & inhabited by two brothers of the name of Stewart, and a sister, was unfortunately burnt early on Sunday morning last. They emigrated to this country last summer, and were remarked for their incessant industry and frugality, by which they had accumulated a sum of money in gold and silver which they had great hopes of increasing until they could be enabled to build a comfortable house for their parents, who it is said they expected out in the spring. The flames spread with such rapidity that they could not save a single article, & with difficulty escaped themselves. The money was found melted into a solid mass: but a large stock of clothes which they had brought with them was entirely lost.

Kingston, Feb. 16th

To Captain FITZ-GIBBON.

SIR,

Having noticed a letter in the Niagara Spectator, signed Robert Gourlay, in which that gentleman professes that he does not answer three letters of yours, because he despises them, I send you the following anecdote, which perhaps may not have fallen within your line of reading.

Mons. G. one of the theist Philosophes of Voltaire's day, being in bad odor at the French court, had retired to the Prussian dominions, & there, spread certain calumnies against the French nation. In the mean time, Mons. F. a Prussian gentleman, was appointed to — diplomatic situation from the court of Berlin to that of Paris. At length Mons. G. having returned to the latter capital, Mr F. on some occasion, published, in three letters, the calumnies alluded to, to each of which the Philosophe deigned no other reply, than "Mr. F. is a despicable fellow and beneath my notice."

At last a friend of the Philosopher's waited on him, and suggested the necessity of disproving the calumnies in question, adding the impression of the public, seeing the respectable character of Mr F. was extremely against him, and in short, that full credit was given to Mr. F's. assertions. "Que voulez vous faire" calmly replied the Philosophe, "the fellow has truth & evidence of his side. Let us divert the public attention, and blacken the author's reputation." Shortly after a calumnious philippic appeared against Mr. F. and the Prussian government.

Being a sincere friend to the freest discussion, but a mortal enemy to wilful falsehood or a distorted representation of facts, I remain

Sir
Your obt. Servt.

SIR,

Ere I proceed with my illustrations and criticisms, I must beg you will permit me, for its greater decorum, to adopt the fashion, both of ancient and modern Reviewers, who conceal, by addressing their readers in the plural number, the unbecomingness of Egotism.

The plan we pursue, is, to take up the Spectator over our cup of tea; and we generally find matter for criticism in the first paragraph that catches our eye:—this evening we have stumbled on one which appears to be part of a letter addressed by our author, to the Lieutenant Governor of this Province, from New York. It runs thus,

"My detention in Canada, in consequence of these prosecutions, had deranged all my plans, and I had to hurry off to this place to receive letters which had long lain for me, to have the latest intelligence from my friends at home, and to quiet their anxiety by communicating the issue of the unpleasant occurrences which had broken the chain of correspondence, and delayed my return to England."

Here, Sir, we behold an author of great talents, keen discernment fallen into the gross error of imposing an intolerable insult on the understandings of mankind: and we can only vindicate his reputation for ability, by conceiving he must have been driven to the wretched shift by the exigency of the dismon. When—travel six hundred & odd miles to receive & answer letters!!! Was there no Post? A similar absurdity as so well shown off in the scene of a Farce carrying the date of the French Revolution that we need give ourselves no further trouble than to transcribe it for our readers' amusement & instruction. The personages brought before them are Isaac Dupe, an honest believing lad, servant to a Mr. Democrat, and a shrewd fellow of honest Isaac's acquaintance, called Ferret; the scene lies in England.

"Ferret. Where's your master, Isaac?

"Isaac. My master!—he's gone to Calais, sure, to bathe in the Sea.

"Ferret. Gone to Calais, sure, to bathe in the Sea—humph—why, honest Isaac, have we no Sea on this side the water?

"Isaac. Yes, Master Ferret, Sea in a manner surely.

"Ferret. Now, Isaac, I'll tell thee; thy master Democrat is no more gone to bathe in the Sea than thou art. Thou last carried letters, Isaac, to Calais, to one Citizen Red Dogger. This man, Isaac, is the head of one of those British societies that lend arms & money to—(here look astonished)—don't twigg, lad, eh?—

"Isaac. (with emotion) oh! the smooth tongued villain—the sound things rush upon my mind—look ye, Ferret, thank'ye, I see it all, Sir, Sir.

As we have been so fortunate as to find so apt an illustration ready to our hand, we may proceed this evening with another paragraph—ay—here are some indications of criticism, it seems, on the Speech from the Throne

"When it is told that our subject Assembly Scarcely reasonable did to the consti—, and that the constitution be long held up to the world as "a model of perfection stood in need of "such and ?" What will be the feelings "in England? Why, truly, John Bull will be quite staggered with the news "—the wolf dandt his existence—he will "doubt if he ever had a constitution or "not"

Hold, gentle author: did you not drop a word or two the other day about Pitt's gagging bill? If John Bull then had a gagging bill of his own, make him not gentle author, to doubt of his existence on hearing that your virtuous labors have inflicted the like on this Province—not quite to doubt of his existence if you please—you may let him be a little astonished or so, that grown up men should be found in a country of such unrivalled blessings as this, to be the dupes of eloquence like yours.

But tell us, gentle author, for we are weak & ignorant, what have been the suspensions of poor John's Habeas Corpus, that he should be so surprized to hear of aiding the constitution. We have considered these suspensions hitherto as aids to the constitution; and we hold it a species of aid, Sir, that has been too visible a far off by its effects. When the Mariner sees the mighty swell of the Ocean come rolling from the North, he can with certainty affirm that the winds have been violent in that quarter. So we, when we behold men of unquiet character and revolutionary principles coming into our Province, we can assert with some degree of certainty, that the suspension of the Habeas Corpus has taken place in the mother country.

But now, Sir, in return for the old story of Giles Joh, the application of which is stolen from Cobbet, we will give you an unbackmied anecdote of the Bishop of Lisbon & the Church of St. Jeronimo, which we relate as concisely as we can.

The tremendous earthquake which destroyed the Capital of Portugal, was preceded at intervals by sundry minor shocks: in one of these, the great Church was a little deranged at the North East Angle. The worthy Bishop, as seemed rational enough, set about ordering it to be assisted by props. But while the workmen were preparing, in came to the Rev. Prelate, a deputation, consisting of the Dean, Sub-Dean, Prebends, Chanters, Sub-Chanters, Sextons, Sub-Sextons, singing boys & all; to prop the great church of St. Jeronimo would be no better than — rubbage!"—The shock was renewed the next m[illegible]—Near Sunset, the Dean, Sub-Dean, Prebends, Chanters, Sub-Chanters, Sextons, Sub-Sextons, singing boys & all, were assembled round a heap of stones—it was the ruin of St. Jeronimo—the best constructed and noblest edifice in the Universe, whose fall was to be identified with the dissolution of the world!

I am, Sir,
Yours, &c.

I. B.

BELVILLE, 16th Jan. 1819.

SIR,

I agree with Mr. Gourlay perfectly that it is not a proper comparison between Lord Sidmouth having refused to receive a petition, and Sir Peregrine Maitland having refused to receive a petition.

The petition Lord Sidmouth refused to receive was one, purporting to be from the inhabitants of Westminster. The Petition Sir Peregrine Maitland refused to receive was one from a convention of Delegates; and if it had been, what does this mighty fact amount to—why that Mr. Gourlay's friend, Mr. Hunt, did what any man, of any character, or of any description, might have done, he left a paper at an office!! But let us carry on the comparison a little further than has suited Mr. Gourlay's prudence. The very description of petitions, then, which Lord Sidmouth did refuse to receive, Sir Peregrine Maitland has unfortunately received and answered, as I learn in that part of the country through which I lately passed. I confess, from the style of some of them, I was as much astonished, the' probably not so much disappointed, as the Gentlemen, whose hearts of being their author was, at their having such immediate notice. As to Lord Eskestone's having presented the petition, it may be asked, why should he not have done so? It was not a petition from a national convention, and it in no way bears upon Sir Peregrine Maitland's refusing to receive a petition from three delegates, though magistrates of an unblemished reputation. The truth however is, that unless these worthy gentlemen have told Mr. Gourlay one, & every body else another story, that this unfortunately, like most of the statements of the same author, happens to be not quite correct, and this commission could only boast of two thirds of the importance Mr. Gourlay has bestowed upon it. If these two gentlemen err not, their brother Justices did not go up, and manfully, in Mr. Gourlay's phrase, tell the Lieutenant Governor that the Petition was his own act & deed. But as the young militia man says in Beaumont's play.

"This (other Captain lurk'ed behind the wall."

F. T. BILLINGS,
D. A. C. G.

Commissariat Office,
York, 18th Feb. 1819.

Mr. Durand's Letter concluded.

or Acts, and that no such Act shall be valid or effectual to any of the said purposes, within either of the Provinces of Canada, unless the Legislative Council and Assembly of such Province, shall in the Session in which the same shall have been passed by them, have presented to the person administering the Government, an address or addresses, specifying that such Act contains provisions for some of the said purposes before described, &c. and desiring that in order to give effect to the same, such Act should be transmitted to England without delay, for the purpose of being laid before the Parliament." This, Sir, was what the Committee meant when they said that our gracious Sovereign and the Parliament of the United Kingdom could alone lay the axe to the root of the obstructions—and not that the Committee alluded to any grievances under which the country was groaning; for, God knows, if ever there was a part of the globe blest with an extensive portion of human happiness, it is Canada, and that every honest man must say, who puts his hand upon his heart, and speaks truly.—If there is one amongst those who may read this, who can suppose that a government exists or ever did exist, wholly free from abuses—to him I do not address myself; for, such an one can neither have read or studied.—The duty of those who love their country, is undoubtedly to check innovations, but not to pull down the noble structure about their ears, because it has blemishes which are the inevitable lot of all things human. In the Spectator of the 24th Dec. Mr. Gourlay again takes my name in vain, and charges me with having felt the influences of "Little York;" he says, "on my arrival at York, what was my astonishment when I found that Mr. Durand, who had long stood forward as the people's friend, had now turned against them, and voted for the Gagging Bill." How we see him throwing aside the veil of decency, and exposing the naked malignity and rancour of a bad heart;—charging me at once with abandoning my sacred trust, and why?—because I have differed with him in opinion, as to the propriety or safety of permitting the continuance of political Conventions.—I would ask, is it fair, generous, or reasonable, of this presumptuous man, to expect that I am to go hand in hand with him in all his plans, if I think them dangerous to the community? I may allow myself to be a strong advocate for the rights of the subject, and the suppression of abuses—I hope, without that sacrifice; and Mr. Gourlay has been most egregiously mistaken in me, if he has counted upon my support to his wild and mad projects.—Far different, indeed, has ever been the object of any opposition I may have made to some public measures—and, Mr. Editor, I do not despair of convincing dispassionate reasonable men—all, indeed, who are unblinded by mad enthusiasm, or worse motives, that the experience of the conduct of the first Canada Convention, held at York, (which I have ever considered as principally controlled by Mr. Gourlay, as he promised he would do, in his address to the land owners, of the 2d of April, where he says—"In the scheme proposed, I am accept of no appointment, but persons acting in it shall have no interest as distance, and I shall make clear to them every cause to be pursued.") afforded sufficient reasons to those whom the public had entrusted to represent them, to prevent, for the future, a recurrence of such meetings. To use one of Mr. Gourlay's metaphors: The little cloud of discontent and murmuring at first merely shewing itself, under the figure of a Convention for redress of grievances, already began to expand, rousing over with relentless anathemas the constituted authorities, and no doubt, would in time have covered the whole of this happy land a storm of anarchy and confusion, that would have completed its destruction.—It was therefore meet and fitting to suppress them, and in passing the Convention Act, it was not meant to reflect upon, neither did it fulminate any individuals of the Convention at York, having only a prospective operation, and in my opinion, is founded in sound policy, under existing circumstances.

My sentiments of the principles of those of the inhabitants who attended the late Township Meetings, as well as the Convention, are publicly known.—Mr. Gourlay himself says he heard at Kingston, that I was only defending them; and if he will be candid, he will acknowledge, that the truth of this information has since been confirmed to him by William Keer and George Hamilton, Esqrs. both of whom attended the Bar of the House for upwards of three weeks, heard all the debates, and cannot do less than testify to my exertions to prevent any idea of sedition intentions being attached to those who called themselves Friends to Enquiry. I had good reason to do so; and I acquitted my conscience fully.——No man in the country is a stronger friend to Enquiry than myself, and many who went to the Township Meetings, had first consulted me.—I knew them to be loyal men; I did not discourage their attending those Meetings—they happened previous to the administration of Sir Peregrine Maitland, and at a time when enquiry and watchfulness were considered, by me as more immediately needful.—I could not with propriety attend them myself—I was in my proper place, agitating an Enquiry into the state of the Province, and these Township Meetings I deemed as useful levers or stimulants to Parliamentary men. I saw no more of my friends, after the Meetings took place, had they consulted me further, I should have cautioned them from giving way to Mr. Gourlay's rash and doubtful views.—My opposition in the Commons to the strong manner in which they replied to that part of the speech from the Throne, relative to an organized system of sedition, was grounded upon various reasons, and principally, because I did not understand the speech as at all accusing the people of sedition—for from it—I conceived then, and still do, that it was immediately levelled at the system as unconstitutional, (when coupled with the avowed sentiments of its projector—and confirmed to His Majesty's Representative, by a previous address from the principal inhabitants and Executive Officers at York.)—Indeed when the subject was adverted to in the Speech, I could not help admiring the constitutional spirit which animated that part of it, where it was enjoined to be cautious not to trespass upon that sacred right of the subject to obtain redress of grievances by petition. What, I would ask, could be the impression upon the mind of "Sir Peregrine Maitland, on the object of the Convention in question, when the petition that emanated there, and first assailed his ear, required of him to dismiss "the people's legal Representatives?" A set of men he could know nothing of, & that it would have been both rash and unjust for him to have interfered with, without any alleged crime against them: the very men, (think, of whom Mr. Gourlay thus speaks:—"Your members of Assembly are now at home—compare their characters with them—around them, and you will find them equally honest, equally wise, equally independent—Now that they are returned to society as private individuals, I should be the very last man to call in question their worth or their probity—they are possessed in every way above par. Niagara 20 April, 1818." And when was this petition signed by? Was it the declaration will accompanied by the signatures of that majority of the people of every Township in the Province, that of constitutional right, had chosen members to present them in Parliament?—No, it was a petition signed only by a few Delegates, and those Delegates chosen too only by a few—and merging a dictum paramount to their own instructions from those who chose them at the Township Meetings, who I am certain, never instructed them to abandon and repeal the humble of their legal Representatives, but who had met at first merely to petition for redress of grievances of real, viz. reparation of losses by the war, and lands for Militia services?—What then, I say, could His Majesty's Representative think of such a petition? As a stranger just arrived amongst us, he could not but consider it as the silly act of discontented turbulent malcontents, no doubt, I felt it the duty of the Commons, coming as they did from every section of the Province, and knowing the loyalty of the people, to have shewed this unfavourable impression of their answer, and one which I drew out, (as now appears by the Journals), went fully to this effect; but it was thought unnecessarily rejected, and I opposed the one that was adopted by our House, through every step, and have now by me a copy of my last speech upon that subject, which I may yet, one day or other, submit to the public.

The Legislative Council wisely steered clear of any charge against the public in these manner.

I have now, Mr. Editor, fulfilled the object I had in view, of vindicating my conduct, as to the part I took in voting for the Convention Bill, and I feel confident of its being satisfactory to that respectable body to constantly whom I have the honor to represent. It is not, therefore, my intention, ever to renew the subject though it may involve me in the common fate of others, viz. of dragging down volumes of abuse from the pen of Mr. Gourlay—he uses no discrimination in the choice of his subjects or vindictives;—the most manly virtues, the most exemplary piety—the proud emblems of honour, and rewards of valour for services rendered to your country—public stations, that in the ages of Heroes, elevated men to the highest pinnacle of admiration & respect from their fellow-subjects, afford no protection; but, on the contrary, nauseate this unhappy man's taste: his infamous trifling with the character of Sir Peregrine Maitland, is, in my mind, one of the strongest proofs of this fact, and of the wretched depravity of his disposition.

The army.—A correspondent of the Baltimore Telegraph, under the Washington date of the 14th inst. expresses the opinion that the conflict in the house of representatives, on the conduct of gen. Jackson, will terminate in a successful attempt to disband the army. The letter adds, "the Virginia legislature is said to be four to one against gen. Jackson. This will be the severest blow to col. Monroe, he has had to dread. Gen. Jackson will be here on Monday. Rooms are said to be engaged for him, and it is further said he is to take his seat in the house of representatives, and look at his assailants eye to eye."

The following article is dated at Brussels, Nov. 21. It gives a new version of the alledged plot to seize the emperor Alexander.

"It is with great astonishment we read in the Journal de Frankfort of the 17th of this month, the following article, dated Brussels the 12th:—A plot has just been discovered, the object of which was nothing less than to seize the emperor Alexander on his journey hither, and to force him, under pain of death, to declare the duke of Reichstadt (young Napoleon) emperor of France, and her majesty the duchess of Parma, Regent. The conspirators had got proclamations printed, on which they depended to excite an insurrection. Several of them have been arrested, and they are almost all French. This plot is supposed to have extensive ramifications."

200 DOLLARS REWARD.

ON my leaving Niagara, about the 2d of July 1816, I forgot a Book which contained promissory Notes & Receipts, to a large amount, & among which was Mr. Daniel Brook's Note to me for £1763 12s. 3d. H. Currency, for which I have not hitherto received value. The Book was last seen in the hands of said Daniel Brooke, by the clerk who then superintended his business. And to corroborate this fact, an affidavit has been sworn to by him, before Doctor Muttlestad, of Niagara.

As I must experience an irreparable loss from the want of these valuable documents, the above reward shall be in addition to the person so returning the book in an unmutilated state.

To the public it may seem strange, that I have withheld this notice since the above period. I will only say, that I never could conceive that I should be under the disagreeable necessity of bringing this subject before them; but strong necessity now obliges me to do so.

IN Contradiction to the Misstatement of the Settlement between Mr. Daniel Brook and the Subscriber, which has appeared in the Upper Canada Gazette of the 14th Inst. Signed D. Brooke Senior, it is only necessary to state, that at the final settlement between the parties, Mr. Daniel Brooke, gaveme his Note, at 6 months, for £1763 12 3 H. Currency, which was the balance due me; which Note was witnessed by Nicholas Osborne, Esq. and dated July 24th 1818, and that there has been no settlement whatever between us since that date. From Europe.

LONDON, Dec. 2.

Mr. Ritchie, an English traveller, 28 years of age, embarked lately at Marseilles, for the purpose of proceeding into the interior of Africa, to effect discoveries. He was secretary of the present English Ambassador at Paris, when he learnt that the English Ministry had resolved, on the invitation of the Dey of Tripoli, to send an agent into the interior of Africa. Having imbibed early a passion for distant travels, he solicited with eagerness this honorable and perilous mission. As soon as he had obtained it, he spent several months of his stay in London and Paris in studying the Arabic, in procuring the necessary astronomical and physical instruments, and making himself familiar with their use. Mr. Ritchie has only a single travelling companion, Mr. Du ont, a young Frenchman, very ingenious in the art of preparing and preserving objects of Natural History.

A swindler, who is known to call himself Captain Long, late of the 64th foot, has exercised his calling with a great deal of audacity in Glasgow of late, although the police-officers have been in pursuit of him. He is a complete Dandy. To our young men he made a proposal for a swindling partnership. He proposed that Perth should be the scene of the fraud. They were to pretend to be agents for Sir Gregor MacGregor; to have splendidly fitted balls; and, when the rogues should be discovered, to move off to another place. Dandy coats, riding horses, and footmen, were to be employed in this undertaking. The villain who forms such a scheme is very ill-off, and was formerly, it is supposed, a private in the Dumfriesshire militia; and he has been in confinement in Aberdeen.—Glasgow Chronical.

A novel kind of explosion took place in the kitchen of Mr. Huntley, Bishopwearmouth-green on the morning of Sunday week. Mr. Huntley, jun. was standing near the kitchen fire, when the oven, in an entire state, was projected past him on to the floor; and at the same time a report, as loud as that of a small cannon, assailed his ears. Upon investigation it was ascertained, that the oven not having been in use for several months, and the damper being down, a quantity of carbureted hydrogen gas or fire damp had lodged in the flue of the oven, and there mixing with the atmospheric air, was ignited by the kitchen fire. After this description, we need scarcely advise our kitchen-g ods to be attentive in examining the state of their own vents, in order to prevent such accidents in future.—Carlisle Journal.

The Rev. Mr. Best, of Sheffield, having inveighed from the pulpit against theatrical amusements, the manager of the Sheffield theatre has published a letter in reply, in which he says—"I contend it is an infringement upon the rights afforded me by the law, to make the precise theatre that I have opened an object of your attack; and so strong is my conviction on the subject, that if I could only prove that you had kept a single individual away, I would bring an action against you for damages."

Hamburg, Nov. 27.—Immediately on his arrival here, Gen. Gourgaud presented himself to M. de Bartels, Prefect of the police, and solicited his authority to reside in this city. His request was granted, on the express condition of his strictly conforming to the existing laws.

Growth of tea in France.—The Moniteur has the following:—This precious herb, first introduced into France by a Russian, in 1814, promises to become naturalized amongst us. There are already three hundred stocks, which it is easy to multiply. This tea is received the approbation of the king's physicians, and the first naturalists in France. The plants are to be sold by subscription.

PARIS, Dec 11.

Yesterday, at one o'clock in the afternoon, salutes of artillery announced the departure of his majesty from the chateau of the Thuileries, in order to repair to the chamber of deputies.

The procession moved in the following order;

A detachment of gendarmerie, or household dragoons; a squadron of gendarmerie des chasses; the superior staff officers of the garrison & of the first division, having at their head the generals de Rochechouart & D'Espinois; the superior staff of the national guard & a squadron of the national guard mounted; a carriage of the duke of Orleans—carriage of the duke de Berri; two carriages of Monsieur's; a tea of the king's carriages, containing several dukes and peers, marechals of France & general officers; a squadron of hussars of the royal guard; the superior staff of the royal guard; a squadron of the body guard; the four heralds at arms; the king's coach; in which was his majesty, monsieur on his left, and at the front the dukes de Berri & Orleans. These three princes wore the robes and mantles of peers. The marechals duke of Ragusa & duke of Luxemburg were on the right of the coach; the duke of Havre & the General Bourmont were on the left.

The body guards on foot commanded by the duke de Mortemart, formed in files on each side of the coach; a squadron of cuirassiers & a detachment of gendarmerie closed the march. The national guard, the royal guard & the legions in garrison lined the streets through which the procession passed.

A deputation, consisting of twelve members of the chamber of peers and twenty-five of the chamber of deputies, received the king at the foot of the staircase leading to the grand perystyle of the legislative palace.

On his majesty's entrance into the hall of sitting, the whole assembly rose, and greeted the monarch uncovered, and exclaimed with Vive le Roi!

The king being seated on the throne, having on his right monsieur and the duke d'Orleans, and on his left the duke de Berri, addressed himself to the peers & desired them to be seated; and the chancellor, in his majesty's name, gave the same permission to the deputies.

His Majesty then delivered the following Speech:

"GENTLEMEN, At the opening of the last session, whilst I deplored the calamities which afflicted our country, I had the satisfaction to predict the near approach of their termination. A generous effort, of which I have a noble pride in declaring a more illustrious example was never afforded by any nation, enables me to realize these hopes. They are realized: my troops alone occupy all our posts. One of my sons, joining in these first raptures of our independent provinces, with his own hands, in the midst of the acclamations of my people, hoisted the French flag upon the ramparts of Thionville. Tuesday that flag floats over all the soil of France.

"The day when those of my children who leave with so much contingency, supported the burthens of an occupation of more than three years, shall be delivered from them, will be one of the most delightful days of my life; & my French heart has not less rejoiced at the termination of their sufferings, that at the disenthralment of the country. The provinces, which have so painfully employed my thoughts to this day, deserve the respect of the whole nation, which has, with me, admired their heroic resignation.

"The noble unanimity of feelings & of sentiment which you have manifested when I have demanded of you the means of satisfying our engagements, was a brilliant proof of the attachment of the French to their country—of the confidence of the nation in their King: and Europe has eagerly welcomed France to that rank amongst nations which belongs to her.

"The declaration which announces to the world the principles on which the alliance of the five powers is founded, sufficiently establishes the friendship which exists among the sovereigns. This salutary union, dictated by justice, and consolidated by morality & religion, has for its object to prevent the calamity of war by the maintenance of treaties, by the guarantee of existing rights & by mits us to fix our attention on that long period of peace which such an alliance promises to Europe.

"I have expected in silence this happy epoch to prepare myself for that mature solemnity in which religion consecrates the intimate union of the people with their king. In receiving the royal unction in the midst of you, I shall take to witness the God through whom kings reign, the God of Clovis, of Charlemagne, of St. Louis. I shall renew, on the altars, the oath to support the institutions founded by the charter, which I then in the more since the French, by an unanimous sentiment, have freely rallied around it.

"In the laws which will be presented to you, I shall take care that the spirit of that instrument is always transfused, to secure more & more the public rights of the French, and to preserve to the monarchy the strength it ought to have, to maintain all those liberties so dear to my people.

"In seconding my wishes & my efforts, you will not forget, gentlemen, that this charter, in delivering France from despotism, has put an end to revolutions. I depend upon your co-operation in repelling the pernicious principles which, under the mask of liberty, attack social order, and conduct by anarchy to absolute power, and whose fatal success has cost the world so much blood & so many tears.

"My ministers will lay before you the budget of expences which the public service requires. The prolonged effects of the events, which we were obliged to undergo or take the consequences, have not yet permitted me to propose to you the alleviation of the burthens imposed upon my people: but I have the consolation to perceive, that the moment is not far distant, when I may be able to gratify this wish of my heart. From this time, a period is definitively put to the increase of our debt. We have the certainty that it will rapidly diminish. This certainty & the fidelity of France in the fulfilment of her engagements, will establish, on an unmovable foundation, the public credit, which some circumstances, reasoned in their nature, and common to other states, have for a moment appeared to shake.

"The French youth have given a noble proof of their love for the country & for the king. The law for recruiting the Army is executed with submission, and often with joy. Whilst the young soldiers pass into the ranks of the Army, their brethren, exempt from service, will remain in the bosoms of their families; and the veterans who have finished their engagements, will return to their families, living examples, both the young & the old, of fidelity, benceforth inviolate, in the execution of the laws.

After the calamities of a dearth, the memory of which yet grieves my heart, providence, prodigal in this year of its beneficence has covered our fields with the most abundant harvests. They will serve to revive confidence, whose vessels navigate every sea, and will show to the remotest nation the flag of France. Industry & the arts, extending also their empire, will add to the blessings of general peace. To the independence of our country, and to public liberty, will be joined a more perfect private liberty than France has ever yet tasted. Let us unite in strains of gratitude to the author of so many blessings, and endeavor to make them durable. That object will be secured, if, discarding every painful recollection, suppressing every resentment, the French shall well understand that liberty is inseparable from order, which itself reposes on the throne, their only palladium. My duty is to defend the people against their common enemies. I shall perform it, and shall find in you, gentlemen, the aid which I have never asked you in vain."

Wonderful season.—We are now enjoying one of the most extraordinary seasons within the memory of man. For almost the whole month of January, the temperature of our climate has resembled that of April, and some days as pleasant as any in the month of May.

The farmers on Long Island, have turned their attention to ploughing, and several hundred acres in the neighborhood of New-York, have been ploughed within two weeks, which must be attended with the most beneficial consequences; it will not only destroy the grub-worm, but the wild onion also; besides the great advantage of preparing the ground for seeds at the early opening of spring.

General Gregor M'Gregor it will be seen, arrived at Norfolk on the 9th January, in the brig Hero, of 18 guns, from London, & sailed again on the 16th, for South America.

The following extraordinary statement is copied from the Washington City Gazette of Saturday last.

"The Duel.—We regret to state the melancholy result of an unfortunate meeting that took place between general Armistead T. Mason, of London co. Va. & John M'Carty, of Fairfax co. Va. They repaired, we are informed, to the neighborhood of Bladensburg, early this morning, armed with muskets, containing three balls each, & fought at the distance of six paces. At the first fire, gen. Mason received the contents of his antagonist's piece in his body, which put an immediate period to his existence. Mr. M'Carty received, at the same time, a wound in one arm.

General Mason's remains were conveyed to Georgetown, and lodged at general John P. Mason's. We have heard no further particulars: when they are known they will be published.

The deceased (gen. A. T. Mason) was a Senator in the 14th Congress, from Virginia; a valuable member of society, & highly respected by all who knew him. He has left a wife & child to deplore his untimely end. We believe this melancholy catastrophe grew out of a former well known political dispute with Mr. M'Carty.

From Lower Canada.

BROCKVILLE, 12th Feb. 1819.

A Coroner's inquest was held yesterday on the remains of a man, which was discovered the day before, secreted behind a log, in a small piece of wood, 30 yards from the highway leading to Perth, and two miles from this Village. From appearances the body must have lain for several months, as the flesh was entirely consumed, with the exception of the feet and legs, which were partly preserved by boots; the Skeleton nearly all disjointed and the clothes torn by dogs. On examination it appears that the deceased has been about the middle size, wore a blue round Jacket with pewter buttons, defaced with a file or some other instrument, as if to remove some kind of impression that may have been on them; a light coloured marseille vest, with pearl buttons, grey worsted cord trowsers, coarse half boots nearly new, a white hat has been found 70 or 80 yards from where the body lay concealed in a hollow stump, with some chips thrown over it. There has also been found amongst the remains, a necklace of fair coloured hair plaited and joined by a light coloured ribband which the deceased has worn round the neck; a twisted finger ring of gold, with a small plain platt on it; a pair of Scissars with one point broke off, and a pocket Comb.

The skull bears evident marks of violence, and the fracture on it appear to have been made by the head of an axe. Nothing has been found to lead to a discovery, who the unfortunate sufferer has been; that he was a stranger is without doubt; and it is conjectured a Pedlar, from the circumstance of a man with a blue Jacket, and white hat, having been in the neighbourhood in Autumn with a large pack. The Jury did not hesitate in bringing a verdict of Wilful Murder, by some person or persons unknown.

Every enquiry is making that may lead to a discovery of the perpetrators of the horrid deed. A man is now in custody on Suspicion.—Montreal Herald.

UPPER-CANADA GAZETTE.

His Excellency the Lieut. Governor has received the following address from the inhabitants of the Township of Lochiel in the county of Glengary.

To His Excellency, Sir Peregrine Maitland, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces within the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant Governor of the said Province, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY.

WE His Majesty's loyal & dutiful subjects the Protestants, freeholders of the township of Lochiel in the Eastern District, of the Province of Upper Canada, beg leave to offer our respectful & sincere congratulations, on your safe recovery from the severe indisposition which your Excellency has experienced.

May a gracious & protecting providence, enable your Excellency long to hold the reins of this government; we regret that the short visit of your Excellency to the County of Glengary, precluded the loyal & numerous protestants, of this Township, from expressing on that occasion those sentiments of respect, which we entertain for your Excellency, as well as the gratitude we owe to our Sovereign, in having nominated to this Government, one of your, Excellency's elevated rank, connected with the high and noble family of Lenox.

Few months have elapsed since we, hailed with the most flattering anticipation, your Excellency's arrival amongst us, to diffuse harmony & happiness amongst all classes of his Majesty's subjects in this Province, to encourage them with the most unlimited confidence in the honor, the integrity and talents of his Majesty's Representative.

Superior to all prejudice, your first care was to guard against the impression of party & individual opinions, often grafted by partiality, often vindicative to interested motives you soon convinced all that you are determined to judge for yourself, upon the unerring principles of experience, and that Justice & impartiality forms the basis of your wise administration.

You have already studied the interest of this Province in every point of view: your ready compliance with every just request, the correctness & equity of your decision, and your respect for the constitutional right is in itself sufficient proof of your wisdom & attachment to the people of this Province.

Allow us to offer our fervent wishes that you may enjoy every domestic happiness; & that you may long reside to administer justice amongst us, and witness the growing prosperity of this Province, is the sincere wish of all the Protestants of this Township.

To which His Excellency was pleased to give the following Reply:

GENTLEMEN,

I am much gratified by your loyal and affectionate address. That the transplanted offspring of North Britain, has retained the virtues of the Parent Stock, you shewed in the late war; your loyalty kindred to that which was bearing the standard of the Mother Country into the heart of France. You have shewn it equally in Peace by that strong good sense and honest principle, under the guidance of which you saw at once into the overtures of disembodied treason, and repelled them with becoming disdain. May the blessed author of our Faith, from whom alone are all good sentiments, confirm your dependence upon him & give you every other blessing.

Accept my thanks for your congratulation on my being restored to better health. I hope to be enabled to fulfil my intention of visiting your township in the ensuing season.

SOPHIASBURGH, 23d Feb. 1819.

SIR,

Inclosed is an Address from this Township which I will thank you to lay before his Excellency the Lieut. Governor.

Some of our Townsmen who had unthinkingly placed their names to the Petition prepared by Mr. Gourlay, have seen their error and have requested permission to place their names to the Address.

I understand that there are a few persons privately preparing a List of Grievances to forward to His Excellency but have no doubt they will be as groundless as those which have already appeared.*

I am respectfully
Sir,
Your obedt. Servt.
JAMES COTTER.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY.

WE His Majesty's dutiful & loyal subjects Inhabitants of the township of Sophiasburg, beg leave to address your Excellency.

A Petition has been forwarded to your Excellency from our Township, & we are unwilling to remain longer silent, lest it should be imagined that our townsmen generally concur in the sentiments therein contained, but we assure your Excellency that we entirely disapprove of, and disavow it.

The petition was hastily adopted at the recommendation of an individual who has for some time past, been traversing this Province, endeavouring to excite discontent in the minds of His Majesty's loyal Subjects. We regret that some of our townsmen, whose [illegible] ty is undoubted, should have lent their names to that disrespectful production, but we attribute it wholly to inconsideration, and to the artful misrepresentations of the individual alluded to above.

We beg leave to assure your Excellency, that we are fully sensible of the happiness we enjoy in our present [illegible] & beneficent Government, and we are satisfied that under your Excellency's truly parental administration, this Province will advance rapidly in strength & prosperity.

received with particular sa

isfaction your loyal Address, for I think it important to the interests of the Province, that it should be universally known how little its inhabitants are to be shaken by the most insidious & persevering attempts to undermine their loyalty to their Sovereign, or their attachment to the Constitution of their country. It is particularly becoming in those who were inadvertently led into error (and which of us is not liable to be so?) to have avowed it by their concurrence on the present address.

Be assured Gentlemen, that it is no less my inclination than my duty to remedy as far as lies in my power any description of evil, whether of a private nature, or such as affects the general interest.

YORK, MARCH 4, 1819.

At the Session of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery, holden at the Town of York, in and for the Home District, on Monday the 22d day of February, 1819, before the Hon. Wm. Dummer Powell, Chief Justice, and William Allan, Esquire, associate.

ARCHIBALD MCLELLAN, convicted of an assault and battery upon Samuel Gale Esq. in the vicinity of the Court House, during the last Assizes, sentenced to pay to the King a fine of one hundred pounds, to be imprisoned in the common gaol of this District, for the space of six calendar months, and until he shall give security for his good behaviour for two years thereafter, to remain in prison till the fine be paid and security given.

JOHN MCNALLY, convicted of Larceny, sentenced to be imprisoned in the common gaol of this District for the space of twelve calendar months, and at the expiration of that period to be publicly whipped and discharged.

THOMAS MASON, convicted of Larceny from the Dwelling House, and Grand Larceny, convicted of Arson, sentenced to be taken from hence to the place from whence they came and from thence to the place of execution, there to be hanged by the neck till they be dead.

The following Indictments were found by the Grand Jury.

THE KING VS. the EARL OF SELKIRK and thirteen others, for a conspiracy to destroy the trade of the North West Company.

THE KING VS. WILLIAM LOSEE and thirteen others for a Riot, and obstructing the Deputy Sheriff in the execution of his duty.

At the same Court, a verdict of five hundred pounds damages was given against the EARL OF SELKIRK, for false imprisonment of Mr. WILLIAM SMITH, Deputy Sheriff of the Western District.

A verdict of fifteen hundred pounds damages was also given against the EARL OF SELKIRK, for false imprisonment of DANIEL MCKENZIE, Esq formerly a partner of the N. W. Company.

From the Canadian Courant.

Two communications from residents of Upper Canada, have been received by the Editor. They both complain that we misrepresented the conduct of their Representatives, by our statement in this paper of the 16th ult. "that an act to authorize imprisonment, &c. &c. &c. was passed with closed doors." This was an error on our part, tho' we conceive a very pardonable one; for it across from the difficulties that the Sister Province was in the full enjoyment of all the privileges conferred by the British constitution. At the time the piece was written we did not know of the existence of any Act that act, hostile to its spirit. And altho' we even had been acquainted with that regulation which has been recently used as a flimsy pretence to sanction the violation of the sanctuary of freedom in the person of a native Briton, who could not fall a victim of tyranny which have dared to warp this "alien act" from its original intention to the purposes of their political hatred, and revenge? The inference therefore that we drew, when the news first arrived, was, that an Act had been secretly passed.

To the Editor of the Upper Canada Gazette.

SIR,

Had as the case of Upper Canada may appear to us now to which we are by no means disposed, to consider the Editors of the above paragraph as culpable for making it public as they wish, without Comment, I will leave that to their own reasoning, (reasoning which I trust they possess for a mistaken moment,) and will only say, that I conceive a very pardonable one for the following reasons, viz.—They conceive "this was an error on our part," though we say that we conceive a very pardonable one. Why pardonable? It arose from a mistaken idea, that Upper Canada well had enjoyment of the privileges conferred by the British Constitution." That is, "we told the public that the House of Assembly passed an Act with closed doors," because we had mistaken idea that the Province was in full enjoyment of the privileges conferred by the British Constitution." At the time," they could, "the piece was written, we did not know of the existence of any Alien Act, hostile to its spirit." Do they mean by the open letter piece, according to English construction, or to the spirit of the British Constitution, as the above allusion seems to suggest? In either case this is their argument: Would not the public, that the House of Assembly passed an Act with closed doors, because we did not know any Alien Act, hostile to the piece we were writing—nor to the British Constitution? Not near the gentlemen proceed— And altho' we had been acquainted with that Regulation, (the Regulation alluded to is an Act of Parliament printed like all the others, and has been to be seen in the book of Statutes, the last thirteen years) which has been recently used" &c. "The inference therefore that we drew, when the news first arrived, was, that an Act had been recently passed." Pretty gentlemen these to instruct the public! Here is an Act, published in the book of Statutes of the Province, thirteen years, which they have the assurance to tell them is latent, and they volunteer writing on Parliamentary subjects, without knowing of such an Act, and to close this over, they call it a Regulation.

What must the world think of the public when such nonsence and palpable falsehood is thus intended to pass?

I am &c.

It is exceedingly gratifying to me, after so long an absence from my official duties, and more especially during a period of so much public interest, to meet from you a reception so flattering to my character, on returning home.

Of the good opinion of a body of gentlemen, who amidst the greatest privations and most discouraging circumstances, so honorably supported their own character as well as that of the 2d. AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At a meeting of the Inhabitants of the town of Kingston, held at the Court House on the 8th day of February, 1819 for the purpose of establishing an Agricultural Society in the Midland District,

THOMAS MARKLAND, Esq. in the Chair.

It was resolved unanimously,

1st. That a Society shall be established to be denominated, "The Agricultural Society of the Midland District," for the encouragement of Agriculture by all such methods as may hereafter be deemed expedient.

2d. That all persons subscribing ten shillings, Halifax Currency, annually, shall be considered members of this Society; and Gentlemen residing in Great Britain or Ireland, shall be considered admissible as honorary members.

3d. That a Committee of seven shall be appointed to draw up Rules and Regulations to be submitted to the meeting notified to be held at Bath, in the township of Ernest Town, on the 18th day of February, and that the following Gentlemen form said Committee, namely:

The Revd. R. G. CURTOIS, JOHN WILSON, THOMAS SHAW, BENJAMIN WHITNEY, ALEX'R. PRINGLE, ANTHONY MARSHALL, JOHN M. BALFOUR, } Esqrs.

In consequence of the foregoing Resolutions, the following Report and Regulations were presented, by the Rev. R. G. Curtois, Chairman of the Committee, to the Magistrates and Inhabitants assembled at Bath, in the Township of Ernest Town, on the 18th February, 1819.

REPORT.

In proposing to the inhabitants of the Midland District the establishment of an Agricultural Society, your Committee are of opinion, that a stimulus will be given to active industry, not so much by holding out rewards, as by throwing open a field for laudable competition.

Possessed, as this portion of the Province is, of advantages, every way superior, it is lamentable to observe the very little progress which has hitherto been made in Agricultural improvement.

Unhappily there exist in this country many inducements to turn away the attention of the farmer from the true objects of his profession. One is allured by the apparently lucrative, though at all times precarious, employment of lumbering; another is seduced by the miserable notion of respectability & ease, which is attached to the occupation of keeping a Store; and a third, if unfortunately for him, his land be situated on the public road, cannot resist the temptation which Tavern Keeping holds out. Of necessity these various employments operate as so many hindrances to an husbandman's success. Without any other observation, it may be sufficient to remark, that two avocations rarely prosper in the hands of one man.

To give a new bent to their inclinations, to point out to the agricultural part of this community where their interest really lies, must, your Committee are assured, be the desire, as the result of such undertaking will be the benefit of every member of Society.

The object of this Institution ought strictly to be confined to these purposes, and there should be no methods, which seem in any way calculated to produce them, which should not be tried, and if successful, adopted.

The distribution of prizes, your Committee are of opinion, must of necessity be chiefly confined to the productions of the grazier. Under existing circumstances it might perhaps be impossible to make awards to the farmer, who produced most grain on a acre, or who had his farm in the highest state of cultivation. But even if it were otherwise, encouragement seems hardly to be required to promote more generally the breeding and rearing of Stock. The war it is said, created so great a demand that scarcely any cattle were left to continue the breed But surely if a proper attention had been paid, as the cause of the deficiency has so long ceased to operate, the deficiency listed might have by this time been removed.

Upon this consideration your Committee hesitate not to affirm, that much good will necessarily result, from furnishing to every individual an opportunity to acquire distinction by his superior skill and superior attention.

The proceedings of the Society lately established at York, under the denomination of the Agricultural Society of the Upper Province, have not escaped the notice of your Committee. Keeping however in view the vast extent of the Province, it does not seem feasible that this Society should ever any closer connection with it than that which an occasional correspondence may form.

In a preliminary address it is neither necessary, nor would it be nevis able to take too wide a view of the subject. Undoubtedly there is an extensive field for improvement every way, and hereafter many useful suggestions may be offered for adoption.

RULES AND REGULATIONS.

1st. That the affairs of this Society shall be conducted by a President, three Vice Presidents, a Secretary, and Treasurer, and a committee of thirty members, ten of whom shall reside in the township of Kingston, and any seven shall form a quorum for the transaction of business.

2d. The Officers of the Society shall be elected yearly, at the meeting in the Town of Kingston, the first Monday in February.

3d. There shall be two half yearly general meetings for the shew of Cattle, &c. and for the distribution of prizes; the one to be held at Kingston on first Monday in February, the other at Adolphustown the first Monday in October.

4th. The Judges for making the awards shall be appointed by the Committee on the day of Exhibition. Three Judges shall be required, and no person who is not a member of the Society, shall be chosen a Judge.

5th. All persons bona fide residents within the District may become candidates for prizes, whether they be members of the Society or not.

6th. The Committee shall apportion the prizes (according to the state of the funds) at each half yearly meeting for each next ensuing exhibition, and shall publish in the different newspapers in the District the amount of prizes to be given, and for what to be given.

7th. At present prize shall be given chiefly to encourage improvements in the breed of cattle and to promote the introduction of the most approved implements of husbandry. This regulation is not to preclude the Committee from assigning prizes for the encouragement of ploughing.

8th. According to circumstances the provisions of the foregoing regulation may be extended.

9th. The names of the successful candidates and the premiums they have received, and for what received, together with the other proceedings of each meeting shall be published in the newspapers of the District.

10th. The premiums shall always be in money or in farming utensils.

14th. All donations shall be appropriated to the purchase of works on agriculture, to be placed under the care of the Secretary for the use of the members of the Society.

15th. The Committee shall be empowered to meet at such times and places as they may deem fit. Upon a requisition signed by not less than three of its members, meetings of the Committee shall be called by the President, or in his absence, by one of the Vice Presidents, notice whereof to be given once in the Kingston newspaper.

16th. The Committee shall likewise be empowered to frame such Laws and Regulations for their own guidance and conduct as may be required. Provided that no infringement be thereby made on the fundamental Articles of the Institution.

FROM THE ALBANY DAILY ADVERTISER.

Observations on various Implements of Husbandry, kept for inspection at the office, in the capitol, of the Albany County Agricultural Society.

MESSRS. EDITORS.

Agriculture is one of the chief concerns of every civilized nation; and from the earliest period to the present time, we find individuals, and of late years, societies, engaged in promoting its extension and improvement. It is with this view, that the Albany County Agricultural Society have collected, and are collecting, improved implements of husbandry, for the inspection of the public generally, and of farmers in particular; in order to have them brought into general use—For, in fact, sir, if we are to adopt a better system of husbandry, we cannot pursue it in all its branches, without the introduction of a greater variety of, and better constructed, implements and machinery, than those now used.

The first in importance, is the plough; four of which are there exhibited—three swing ploughs, and one wheel plough. One of the above ploughs is made of iron, partly cast, and partly wrought. This implement (on Small's swing plough mode) is in my mind liable to two objections, viz 1st—the beam, by a twist, or side pull of the horses, would evidently bend; in which case, it would ever after be more easily twisted or bent—and in consequence, too often, without effect, in the hands of the blacksmith. The second objection is, it is too heavy for two horses; and in ridging land, no man of ordinary strength could throw it about at the turnings, which has frequently to be done—otherwise, it seems from the proportion of parts, and curvature of mould-board, to go steadily, and turn a furrow well. But screws are wanted to fix the coulter to the beam, more firmly than it can be done with wedges—these last will serve the purpose of altering the position of the coulter when necessary in splitting a land, or in ridging it. The other three ploughs are one double mould board plough; which will be found a useful & necessary implement, in the drill culture, to strike out the furrows for potatoes, forming the drills for turnips, and earthing up potatoes and corn. Another double mould-board plough, but smaller and lighter in its construction, is well calculated for light soils and sandy lands. The wheel-plough, with expanding mould boards, is an excellent implement for horse-boeing, (for the mould-boards may be taken off) drilled potatoes, turnips, corn, or drilled pease and beans: but is rather slender for very stiff or stony lands.

The next I shall notice, sir, is a pair of harrows, of excellent construction—an implement, which no farmer having land clear of roots, ought to be without. They are calculated in every point of view, to do the work more speedily, & more effectually, than the common drag; but I should caution the owner of such, not to use them on very rooty land; for, as they stick closer to the ground than those of any other description, Lester's patent harrows excepted, and tear & cut the surface much more, they, of course, are more liable to be split to pieces. The lines I perceive, are, very properly set to draw angularwise.—Another improvement would be to have them a little bent or curved forward: they would then penetrate deeper, and harrow weeds and couch grass, if any, more effectually out of the ground.

The machine for breaking & swingling flax, will prove a useful appendage to those who are in the practice of raising quantities of that article,—as it is said to fit the material for the hatchel, without the process of water rotting it. It is a pity however that this machine as well as some others of them, could not be so placed, as that persons viewing them, might have an opportunity of seeing them in operation.

We come now to the machines for shelling corn, which seem very well calculated for the purpose. But it is urged that they are too small, to serve any good purpose, except on a very limited scale: the same may be said of every model of any newly invented machine,—but it is the principle of the thing once hit upon,—they then can be altered & enlarged to any dimension wanted for steam, water or horse power. The same may be said of the turnip slicer, a very useful, and indeed a necessary machine, where turnips, &c. particularly the ruta baga, are cultivated for farm stock.

There are yet, sir, three other machines to be mentioned.—The first is, that for sowing grass seeds, intended for land free from roots, and which with the addition of another wheel, may be more manageable; and would certainly sow the seeds a great deal more even than can be done by hand. The turnip drill is a neat implement, and well fitted to sow them in rows at any distance required, where the cultivation is not extensive. But where it is intended to introduce the drill system, another wheel would be necessary, to run from two feet, to two feet four inches apart, —and a small roller, of about four feet in length, and about one foot in diameter, attached to the machine, for the purpose of rolling the drills before, and after it is sown.

The machine for churning butter is liable to insuperable objections. Grease or oil put into the boxes, would work into the butter, and run through it in streaks—more need not be said of its utility. I should recommend the barrel churn, with breakers fixed inside, to be turned round by a handle at each end; and may be made of any size, to churn the milk of one cow or twenty or forty. In my zeal, sir, to assist in diffusing agricultural information, and its minutiæ, I have drawn this communication to too great a length I fear. But if what I have wrote herein, is worthy of a space in your highly respectable paper, I shall at some future leisure time send you further remarks and observations on improved implements and their uses.

I am, with great respect, sir, yours, &c. &c.

PRACTICUS.

VIENNA, Nov. 11.

M. Luigi Localetti has obtained an imperial patent for ten years, for building up entirely new kind of ships.—In the patent it is stated that he has represented, that with much labour and expence he has discovered a new method of building ships:—1st whatever size they may be, never suffer shipwreck: nor 2d, are liable to the bursting of the keel, usual in other vessels, and third such a ship is not impelled either by wind or by steam, but put in motion by simple mechanism, worked either by men or animals; 4th the rapidity of this motion depends entirely on the will of the captain: and 5th, the expence of building ships of this kind is considerably less, and their durability much greater, than of ships built in the usual manner.

New Plough.—A highly important improvement in the construction of ploughs, which we learn has been effected by Gideon Davis, a farmer in Montgomery county, in this state, and which promises important benefits to agriculture.

1st. In being constructed wholly of iron, which renders it as durable as can be desired, without inconvenient weight.

2d. The inclination of the coulter being over the land, has an advantage peculiar to itself, first in cutting the furrow inclined, so that all the after part of the plough on the land side, runs entirely clear except the bar of the share, of course without friction; secondly the furrow is turned over easier, and thereby the edge of the furrow rests on the top of the one last turned, in which way land pulverizes much better, than when the furrows are wedged down, side by side.

3d. The share being made in such a way that the part called the sharp (or lay,) works flat on the bottom of the furrow; by this form it runs much longer and also better than shares made in the usual mode.—Balt. Paper.

Wonderful Bridge.—The Great bridge at Carthage, Ontario county, is nearly completed. A correspondent of the Catskill Recorder says, "It will almost rank with one of the wonders of the world. The banks or rises in side & the Genesee river are 200 perpendicular feet in height—350 feet from bank to bank—across which is thrown one entire arch, from the centre of which to the water is 275 feet. The project of this vast work was considered truly chimerical: and the accomplishment of it has disappointed the expectations of the most calm and calculating. The architect was Col. Ezra Brainard.

According to lists drawn up by order of the emperor Alexander, it appears that, since the year 1814, four hundred and fourteen thousand men have been discharged from the Russian armies!

The Asiatic company at Copenhagen, are fitting out an expedition to the East Indies.

Exchange Coffee House.—It appears by the Boston papers, that a subscription is now filling up for that town for the purpose of building a new Hotel in the room of the splendid edifice which was lately consumed.

Important Invention.—It is stated in the National Intelligencer, that the Hon. WILLIAM J. LEWIS, Member of Congress from Virginia, has recently invented a Machine for propelling vessels of all sizes from a small Boat up to the largest ship of war. This machine is said to be more simple, and incomparably more powerful, than any other hitherto invented; and tides and currents instead of weakening, will encrease its active power. Steam, weights, springs, horse, or manual power, can be used to work the machine. It will answer for the sea as well as a millpond. No wave can injure or destroy it.

200 DOLLARS REWARD.

ON my leaving Niagara, about the 23d of July 1816, I forgot a Book which contained promissory Notes & Receipts, to a large amount, among which was Mr. Daniel Brook's Note to me for £1763 12s. 3d. H. Currency, for which I have not hitherto received value. The Book was last seen in the hands of said Daniel Brooke, by the clerk who then superintended his business. And to corroborate this fact, an affidavit has been sworn to by him, before Doctor Shuttleworth, of Niagara.

As I must experience an irreparable loss from the want of these valuable documents, the above reward shall be immediately paid to the person, on returning the Book in an unmutilated state.

To the public it may seem strange, that I have withheld this notice since the above period. I will only say, that I never could conceive that I should be under the disagreeable necessity of bringing this subject before them; but strong necessity now obliges me to do so.

IN Contradiction to the Misstatement of the Settlement between Mr. DANIEL BROOK and the Subscriber, which has appeared in the Upper Canada Gazette of the 14th Inst. Signed D. Brooke Senior, it is only necessary to state, that at the final settlement between the parties, Mr. Daniel Brooke, gave me his Note, at 6 months, for £1763 12 3 H. Currency, which was the balance due me; which Note was witnessed by Nicholas Osborne, Esq. and dated July 24th 1816, and that there has been no settlement whatever between us since that date. LONDON, Dec. 19.

We have received Dutch & Hamburgh mails this morning, bringing papers respectively of the 16th & 15th inst.

It appears that the small pox is committing serious ravages at the Hague. In the course of the last month no less than 80 persons died of it. It has also appeared at Oudewater, and some other places.

The duke of Wellington is expected at Dover from Calais to-morrow. The Lord Duncan packet sailed on Tuesday for that port, to be in readiness to receive his grace, Lord Castlereagh, who was to precede the duke by one day, was expected last night at Dover.—

We dismiss the subject of moves and changes with asserting, that there is no foundation for another report, that Sir Hudson Lowe is to be removed from the government of St. Helena. Sir Hudson is to continue Governor.

From the Dumfries and the Galloway Courier.

The weather.—The winter has hitherto been as remarkable for its unusual mildness as the summer was for its warmth. On the first day of December we see the flowers of the spring in full blow in our gardens, & in the fields striking instances of the genial influence of the season, both on the animal and vegetable tribes, have been communicated to us. The thrush and the black bird are heard from the hedges of unfaded privet joining their mellow notes with those of the red breast! and the rooks have for several weeks been rebuilding their nests, as if the winter had already passed, and the season of love had returned. In the vegetable creation, the indications are not less extraordinary. On Tuesday last, a dish of strawberries, of very fine flavour, was gathered at Rockhall, from an open border, fully as large and as ripe as any produced in the summer months; and on the same day, two mowers were employed on the Glebe of Ruthwell, in cutting down a crop of new hay, which had sprung up with an astonishing rapidity and luxuriance after an excellent crop of barley, although that barley had been cut close to the ground with the sythe. We are also assured that a second crop of gooseberries fully formed are now to be seen in the garden of Andrew Roddick of Dalton, who, we hear, intends to bake them in a pye, that on St. John's day they may grace the meeting of St. Ruth's Lodge, in Ruthwell, of which he is a member. The extraordinary mildness of the season has been perhaps no where more apparent than in the neighbourhood of Frome: Young Green Pease are sold in the market at 2s. a peck; the second crop of gooseberries are now on the bushes; and there is a field of Barley in full green ear. In a garden belonging to Mr. Maynard, of Street Inn Somerset, there was last week seen in the open ground, a strawberry tuft in bloosom, with some of the fruit, of full size and perfectly ripe! Young rooks, half fledged, are now in the trees at Hatch Court, the seat of H. P. Collins, Esq. and several old ones are sitting on eggs.

Last week a linnet's nest was found in a furze bush near Milnheugh, a little above Hamilton, with young birds completely fledged.

There are at present in an open garden in Wellmeadow Street, Paisley, ten week stocks, and carnation in full blossom.

CADIZ, Dec. 1.

The following is a list of the ships of war at present fitting out in this port, for the American expedition: these forces are under the orders of brigadier Don Francis Maurelle, an able officer, who, to the experience & wisdom of his mature age, unites all the energy of youth:

Ships of war of 74 guns each—The Ferdinand VII. the Northern Eagle, the Lubeck, and the Alexander. These four ships were of the number of those composing the squadron purchased of Russia.

Frigates—Three of 44 guns each; La Pruera, La Mercurio, and La Ligera—two of the 36 guns each; La Prouta & La Vica; making in all five frigates, the four last of which were purchased of Russia.

Ships of war—La Fama of 24 guns, & the Diamond of 20 guns.

Brigantine—L'Hiena, of 16 guns.

This fleet is on the point of being augmented by some ships and brigs, and 24 gun boats. The light forcess will be commanded by the major d'Escadre D. Joseph Primo Rivera.

With respect to the expeditionary army, it is still hoped that it will be composed of 18,000 men of all arms. It will be commanded by gen. comt de l'Abinbal, appointed viceroy of Buenos Ayres, and who, it is said, will preserve the government of Cadiz & Andalusia, at the head of which he is at this moment, until the departure of the expedition. It would be difficult to assign this epoch; there is a want of obstacles which retard the operations, and not the least is the penurious state of finances.

Hazardous enterprize.—Some young gentlemen were lately on a visit to the natural bridge.—One of them, a youth of extraordinary activity, determined to inscribe his name, in the perpendicular rock which faces the chasm, and supports the arch, higher than any had ever done before. It was found no difficult work to ascend to that height of ambition. But when this object was accomplished, the young adventurer found, as orators & poets often find it, much more difficult to descend than to rise. Just the reverse of Virgil's facilis descensus Averni, was true here. In short going down was impossible. There was no alternative, but to fall & be crushed to pieces, or to climb to the top of the rock. In this most perilous situation, the hardy youth, undismayed by the terrors which surrounded him, resolved to make an attempt, which every one regarded as desperate. And while his companions looked on with anxiety which thrilled thro' all their limbs, expecting every moment to see him precipitated on the rock below, he pursued his way, suspended often by one hand on a projection of the lime-stone, while with a knife in the other he picked a place higher up, by which he could get a firm hold. When it is recollected that the rock is almost always moist: that its projections often are loosened & fall; that the precipice is nearly 300 feet high, & so nearly perpendicular that a plumb line will descend from top to bottom & scarcely touch, it is impossible to conceive of an undertaking of greater peril, nor of a higher order of resolution and presence of mind, than that displayed on this occasion. The ascent required considerably more than an hour. The adventurer rose to the top of the rock with unabated vigour, and was hailed by his companions with a shout of joy. But immediately a revolution of his feeling succeeded, and he lay & panted on the earth, totally spent, and for a considerable time unable to rise. I understand that he ascribes his escape to a gracious interposition of Providence,—and gives this salutary caution, not to indulge the ambition of inscribing the name high on the rock, until one has well considered how he may descend with safety. Bold and successful a cragsman as he is, he not at all disposed himself to engage in a similar adventure, or to recommend an imitation of it to others.

Interesting account of Thomas Thoen.

The British forces had scarcely obtained possession of the Candian Capital, when a man presented himself at head-quarters, in a Candian dress, but having the features of an European. His pale & haggard looks, and his long & matted beard, exhibited a melancholy appearance. This man, whose name was Thomas Thoen, said that he had marched with the British army to Candy in 1803, & that he was among the one hundred & fifty sick who had been left in the hospital when the espital was surrendered unto the enemy. When his fellow sufferers were butchered, the barbarians, having torn off the blisters which had been previously applied to his stomach in the hospital, felled him to the ground with the butt end of a musket, and left him for dead in the general heap. He recovered, however, enough to crawl to a neighbouring drain, when on being discovered the next morning, he was hung up to a tree, and left to perish. The rope, happily, broke; when he was again discovered, & again hung up in the same way. But again the rope broke, when he contrived to crawl to a hut at a little distance, where he supported himself for ten days with nothing but the grass that grew near the door, and the drops of rain that fell from the roof.—At the expiration of this interval, he was accidentally discovered by an old Candian, who, after looking at him, suddenly disappeared, but soon after came again with a plate of rice, which he put down and went away.

The king who had never felt for human woe, was struck with the story which he received of Thoen's numerous extraordinary escapes. Superstition, in the place of sympathy made its way into the monarch's mind. He thought that Thoen would not have been so often preserved if he had not been a peculiar favorite of heaven; and he accordingly ordered him to be taken care of by one of the chiefs, and to receive every accommodation which he required.

The king allowed him a house in the town of Candy, in which he remained till the arrival of the British.—He experienced no further ill treatment from the jealous tyrant; but the horrid barbarities which he beheld, & which the slightest offence was sufficient to excite, kept him in a state of constant inquietud, & alarm. A woman, who had been detected in merely conveying a message from him to Major Davie, was instantly put to death.

The only source of solace which this unfortunate man had access to, in the dreary hours of his long confinement, was in the perusal of a detached portion of an English Bible, which contained some chapters of Jeremiah.

The distance is stated at 525 miles; of course the average run of the Tamerlane was nearly eleven, and that of the Frankfort more than eleven miles an hour. It is mentioned, that the family of the late Commodore BARNEY were among the passengers on board the Frankfort.

So flourishing is this Island, at present, so great has been its progress of late years, and so promising are its future prospects, that (with the exception of Mexico and Peru) it may be safely pronounced the most important possession of His Catholic Majesty on this side of the water. Indeed, when we call to mind the immense revenues which those two great Vice Royalties formerly yielded to the mother country, but which from revolutions & civil discord they no longer yield, and recollect that prior to the Spanish revolution, Cuba was a burthen instead of a benefit to the royal treasury, we cannot help considering her "the brightest gem" in Ferdinand's diadem.

The weather.—The winter has hitherto been as remarkable for its unusual mildness as the summer was for its warmth, On the first day of December we see the flowers of the spring in full blow in our gardens, & in the fields striking instances of the genial influence of the season, both on the animal and vegetable tribes, have been communicated to us. The thrush and the black bird are heard from the hedges of unfaded privet joining their mellow notes with those of the red breast ! and the rooks have for several weeks been rebuilding their nests, as if the winter had already passed, and the season of love had returned. In the vegetable creation, the indications are not less extraordinary. On Tuesday last, a dish of strawberries, of very fine flavour, was gathered at Rockhall, from an open border, fully as large and as ripe as any produced in the summer months; and on the same day, two mowers were employed on the Glebe of Ruthwell, in cutting down a crop of new hay, which had sprung up with an astonishing rapidity and luxuriance after an excellent crop of barley, although that barley had been cut close to the ground with the sythe. We are also assured that a second crop of gooseberries fully formed are now to be seen in the garden of Andrew Roddick of Dalton, who, we hear, intends to bake them in a pye, that on St. John's day they may grace the meeting of St. Ruth's Lodge, in Ruthwell, of which he is a member. The extraordinary mildness of the season has been perhaps no where more apparent than in the neighbourhood of Froue: Young Green Pease are sold in the market at 2s. a peck; the second crop of gooseberries are now on the bushes; and there is a field of Barley in full green ear. In a garden belonging to Mr. Maynard, of Street Ina Somerset, there was last week seen in the open ground, a strawberry tuft in blossom, with some of the fruit, of full size and perfectly ripe! Young rooks, half fledged, are now in the trees at Hatch Court, the seat of H. P. Collins, Esq. and several old ones are sitting on eggs.

Last week a linnet's nest was found in a furze bush near Milnheugh, a little above Hamilton, with young birds completely fledged.

There are at present in an open garden in Wellmeadow Street, Paisley, ten week stocks, and carnation in full blossom.

Island of Cuba.—The Royal revenues arising from this Island, in the year 1818, amount, according to the official statement to $4,104,666, exceeding those of the year before, by $894,471. So flourishing is this Island, at present, so great has been its progress of late years, and so promising are its future prospects, that (with the exception of Mexico and Peru) it may be safely pronounced the most important possession of His Catholic Majesty on this side of the water. Indeed, when we call to mind the immense revenues which those two great Vice Royalties formerly yielded to the mother country, but which from revolutions & civil discord they no longer yield, and recollect that prior to the Spanish revolution, Cuba was a burthen instead of a benefit to the royal treasury, we cannot help considering her "the brightest gem" in Ferdinand's diadem.

To His Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Major General commanding His Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY.

WE the Magistrates, Clergy, and other inhabitants of the Town and Township of Kingston would not take the liberty of Addressing your Excellency at this period on the subject of the late Township Meetings, and other unconstitutional attempts to disturb the tranquility of this highly favored Province, were it not for a report which has gone abroad of our concurrence in a Petition of Grievances, which has come from the Township of Kingston, but in fact written at an obscure village, and countenanced by a very small part of the neighbouring population.

Convinced of the undubited loyalty of the Province at large, and especially of this Township, we attributed these complaints rather to the ravings of a few deluded strangers, than to the sentiments of the peaceable inhabitants, and therefore, from an impression that they would not be carried to any alarming extend, treated their declamations with indifference. Nor do we now think it necessary to notice their proceedings further than to assure your Excellency that they have ever met with our most unqualified disapprobation, and the better to enable your Excellency to contradict any reports which might reach His Majesty's Government in England through less authentic channels.

We cannot but congratulate ourselves, that such evils as may have arisen from those causes will be speedily remedied by the wise measures adopted under your Excellency's Administration, under which we feel confident, that every cause of complaint will be investigated and removed, and that this Province will continue in its hitherto uninterrupted line of happiness, blessed in the fostering care of its Mother Country, and grateful for the blessing.

To which His Excellency was pleased to give the following reply.

GENTLEMEN,

Accept my thanks for your loyal address. I have no doubt that any proceedings hostile to His Majesty's Government or the Constitution of the Province, have met with your unqualified disapprobation. Your address affords me the means of contradicting any reports which may reach through unauthentic channels His Majesty's Government in England.

Reserved it is my wish to investigate and remove as far as lays in my power every well founded cause of complaint, whether it be of a more local nature — such as affects the general interests of the province.

YORK, MARCH 11, 1819.

Our readers will find in our column an article from the Montreal Herald.

The writer has evidently looked through a powerful multiplying glass on the numbers and influence of the discontented party. He also speaks of the people, where his observations can apply with accuracy to only a very small part of them. In his illustration, towards the conclusion of his letter, though it is perfectly apposite and just, and shews precisely the effect the measure he alludes to was calculated to produce on the government of the Mother Country, he has attributed to the followers of an individual, a greater knowledge of that person's former character, than they in fact possessed. To suppose such knowledge would compel us in fair reasoning to go the whole length with the writer, but we cannot without limitation admit the premises.

With these strictures, we think the article in question well worthy the notice of our readers, as the observations of an intelligent bystander on the strange transactions of the last year.

To the Editor of the Upper Canada Gazette.

SIR,

I am aware that many persons hold an opinion that religious topics are out of place in the columns of newspaper. But surely things had taken quite our mental interests, cannot be brought into question before our eyes. So thought the implied teacher, who was "instant in season, and out of season," who became all things to all men, that he might gain the more. Let it be considered, moreover, that the church is now celebrating the fast of Lent, which is intended to commemorate the sufferings of our blessed Lord, who died for our sakes. At least, let me intreat your readers to take kindly that which was intended charitably. Having considered the greatest benefit and consolation from the consideration of the following passage, my object is to recommend it to the serious attention of those who may find it applicable to their case.

"This leads naturally to the mention of another fault, incident to serious persons, which without a foundation for a very sad [illegible] this object. The fault here intended is failing into a habit of despondent neglect of duty. The devotees of Satan, (for great enemy are very vigilant, and unspeakably artful. When he cannot keep men in security, and drive the [illegible] along the broad path which leadeth to destruction, he endeavors to make their duty a painful and burdensome to them as possible. When some persons give themselves to serious self-examination, he embarrasses their consciences, he involves them in doubts, or distresses them with fears. Therefore bring on a reluctance or unwillingness to the serious duties of religion. I cannot believe [illegible] they [illegible] to get gone any length of self-examination, [illegible] and [illegible] dissatisfied with himself, so soon as he perceive that this is its effect, he ought to stand at a temptation. I cannot believe [illegible] this [illegible] a cautious [illegible] to bring [illegible] the same subject: Whether do you think [illegible] soul dissatisfied under a sense of his sinfulness, was pleasing and acceptable to God, or [illegible] only applies himself to his work as it is his duty, and [illegible] to [illegible] with pain and [illegible] endeavours unanimously [illegible] in question and future's love?

From the Montreal Herald.

There must always be an absence of proper feeling, when insolence is exercised, where it cannot be resented; and always a deficiency of genuine self respect, where there is a wilful neglect of respect to our superiors.

Let it be once asserted that Insolence is not Courage; our rudeness, bad politeness; on the contrary, the one is allied to cowardice, the other to impudency.

It is well known, that the revolutionary Armies of France have always been characterized by insolence towards their adversary; and military writers inform us, that they never manifested this characteristic blemish, in a greater degree, than towards the conclusion of the late Peninsular campaigns, when insolent defiance, and saucy menace, became the constant forerunners of easy discomfiture, and precipitate retreat.

When the people of the same nation discarded their courtesy to the reigning authorities, it was the first step of their revolutionary career; but it has since been seen, how easily the long train of unmanly insult, so lavishly heaped upon their Royal victims, could slide into the most abject servility, under the tyranny of a succeeding Government.

Such are the unpleasant reflections which perpetually intrude themselves, as we behold similar tares springing up among the golden wheat of our Sister Province; and we are naturally led to enquire into the intentions and characters of the laborers who have sown them; we have learnt, with pretty good certainty, that the Author of the sundry petitions and other writings which we have in view, and of which the principal intention seems to be to insult and defy the Chief Magistrate of the Province, is a man of desperate fortune, who, after sundry abortive attempts to excite discontent & lawless proceedings, fled from the mother country, on the suspension of the Habeas Corpus. The author of a few other articles of the same description, and chiefly of a long list of grievances, we understand, is a fugitive from the United States, having rendered himself, by prevarication, obnoxious to the Justice of his Country.

Neither of these Gentlemen, it must be admitted, have any introductory claim to public confidence, nor could either of them be produced, as satisfying the shrewd requisition of an ancient author who says, "Shew me, our among all the officious reformers of the disorders of the state, that has not first introduced disorder & ruin into his own concernments."

We need not seek far for the motive, that has led these persons to direct their whole artillery against the first Magistrate. The same bloody history that suggested to them their Convention of Deputies, would instruct them, that to undermine the reputation of all who were placed in authority, was a no less necessary part of the revolutionary process. That their efforts to this effect must of necessity be in proportion to the rank & character of the persons assailed, they would find abundantly self obvious. And no doubt, they having successfully led their partisans up to the point of openly insulting both the Legislative Body, and the Representative of the Crown, would appear to them a material progress in the high road to revolution. To estimate the measure of their success, in this last respect, we need only point to the disgusting tone of the petitions, or even to that schedule of grievances, which with a novel & happy compliment to the public good sense, has been exhibited among the official communications of the Government.

We freely confess there was a moment, in which we entertained the most gloomy apprehensions for the fate of our Sister Province. When we heard of the proceedings of a national convention, a name which every European Ear will pronounce with horror; when we observed the people assuming a tone of superiority, in addressing the Representative of their King, "desiring Him to do this" and "recommending Him to think proper to do that;" when we saw them suffering an interpreter to exercise over them the sort of command that a Huntsman exerts over his pack, when we saw them withholding and calumniating their Parliamentary Representatives, and eagerly receiving any calumny that was offered against every man of established character and integrity in the state; when we saw them inventing grievances, and discarding enquiry, not easy into abuses, but into the rumors of abuses, we honestly confess that we trembled on looking after the things which were to come. It was evident that the leaders of the disorder had in contemplation some possible end in view but, downright Rebellion; and such pre-dramatic appeared the views of their [illegible]. To have raised the hue and cry, whether it were for money, or redress of grievances, or both for redress, or compensation for losses sustained in the war, is the usual [illegible] of a man, who was an ground and at the enemy in the Government of the Mother Country, and only quitted it according to his own showing, after a solitary pump let in his pocket, even of so short, as it was of reasoning understanding returned to him; that the projects projected, were the real ones the malcontents had in view. If, it was justly argued, the United States, in a proposed arrangement between herself and Great Britain, should place the management of her interests in the hands of O'Connor, the banished Irish Rebel, what would be the immediate result? Undoubtedly that Great Britain would at once break off the negotiation, [illegible] and [illegible] the United States, exactly similar to that of the malcontents of our Sister Province, only that the relative situation of the parties renders it, if possible, still more insulting in the case of the latter.

But here, Sir, fearing lest I should ask too great a space in the columns of your present number, I will, albeit, somewhat abruptly, conclude my observations, & resume them, with your permission, in another Letter.

I remain Sir
Your obedient Servant,
A CONSTANT READER.

Report of the Canal Commissioners.
January, 1819,

To the Legislature of the State of New-York: In obedience to the act, entitled "An Act respecting navigable communications between the great Western & Northern lakes and the Atlantic ocean," passed April 15th, 1817, the Canal Commissioners most respectfully report—

In relation to the Erie canal,—

That, after a winter of unusual severity, followed by excessive rains in the spring, they had the satisfaction to find, when they commenced their operations for the last season, that those parts of the canal line which had been finished, or nearly so, by the labors of the preceding year, had suffered very little; so that their apprehensions of injury to the banks of the canal, from the breaking up of winter, under the most favorable circumstances, are considerably diminished.

Between the Mohawk and Seneca rivers, a great portion of the canal line passes through swamps and marshes, or along their southern margin. And this location, though it will eventually prove of great importance, in reclaiming large tracts of the richest bottom-lands, by intercepting the waters which have heretofore inundated them, was yet attended with the serious disadvantage, last spring, of enabling the weather to prevent the contractors from prosecuting their work, with any success, to a late period. Actuated by a laudable determination to omit no means in their power, of a punctual compliance with their engagements, several of the contractors had continued to labor on their jobs all winter; and by their experience it is sufficiently ascertained, that in deep cuttings, in embankments, and where the ground is constantly watered by warm springs, or so covered by vegetable matter as to protect it, in a great measure, from freezing, such labors may be carried on profitably during the coldest months of the year. From motives of economy, and because most of the roads by which the route of the canal is intersected, between Utica and Salina, are nearly impassable in the summer season, many of the contractors had purchased, in advance, large stores of subsistence for their men and cattle, and transported them to the proper places on the canal line, by sleighing.—But this wise & prudent measure was rendered almost unavailing, as to any advance of the work, by uncontrolable events. The surface of the earth was beaten and drenched, by heavy and frequent rains, from the melting of the snow, till near the first of June. During a great part of this time, the stores of the contractors were decreasing, and their expenses were accumulating, while their work was at a stand.—The effects of this state of things were equally detrimental and disheartening. But, with the commencement of the summer, the weather became favorable, and since that period, the canal business, in all its branches, has advanced, with economy and rapidity.

The same causes which obstructed the efforts of the contractors, retarded those of the engineers. In the course of the fall of 1817, the country west of the termination of the Rome level, had been examined, in several directions, to a considerable extent; in order to discover, if practicable, some means of obviating the great expense of the Salina embankments, and the serious hazards, as well as much greater expense, of the deep cutting, though the marl meadow, to the town of Camillus. From these examinations, there resulted a deep impression of the difficulties presented at these places, especially at the latter. When the canal line was run through the marl meadow, in 1816, the season had been uncommonly dry; and, though a deep cutting three miles in length, through light, soft and porous materials, gradually swelling to fifteen feet in the centre above the bottom of the canal, could never be regarded without solicitude, the appearance of this, upon every subsequent inspection, has been more formidable and repulsive. When the past season, however, had so far advanced as to admit of a renewal of these examinations, they were more extensively pursued: and at length, the acting commissioner, upon whom was cast the responsibility of setting the line in that part of the route, in full accordance with the conviction of the engineer of the section, and his assistants, determined, that two alterations from the line of 1816, were expedient. These alterations were not adopted, without a careful ascertainment and collation of facts and circumstances, which, upon much deliberation, were deemed decisive by them.

The first of the alterations consists of sinking the canal line, across the Salina plains, six feet lower than had been at first proposed. This alteration requires the construction of an additional lock of six feet lift, on each side of these plains; but, by affording sufficient excavation, in the canal, for the formation of the adjacent banks, it altogether supercedes the necessity of embankment, for about a mile and a half; and where embankment is still requisite, its height is materially diminished. The same diminution is also obtained in the heigth of an arched bridge, and the largest stone aqueduct to be erected between Utica & the Seneca river.—This alteration was recommended, chiefly, by the following reasons.

1st. It produced a saving in expense, estimated at seventeen thousand dollars. This estimate does not include damages to the lands, through which the canal line is laid, which would probably have been claimed, to a large amount, for the half mile adjoining Onondaga creek on the east, in case the original plan had been pursued. The land, along the half mile referred to, had been laid out into village lots, upon which the owners set a high value; and one tier of these lots, on each side of the canal, must have been dug over and defaced, in order to obtain the earth necessary for the embankment.

2d. It renders the canal more secure. Embankments are, in general, more liable to accidents than other parts of a canal; and whenever breaches are effected in them, the usual consequences are more injurious.

3d. It will facilitate the construction of a side cut to connect the main canal with the salt works, at the village of Salina, by approaching nearer to a level with those works, in that part of the line to which they are most contiguous.

4th. It will promote the convenience of all those people, who, from the fertile country on both sides of the canal, shall hereafter have occasion to communicate therewith, on the Salina plains. These plains, for the most part, consist of a dry, coarse gravel, mixed, to the depth of three or four feet, with sand & loam, and constitute, from the nature of their soil, as well as from their local situation, an excellent site for business. There is little doubt but they will soon become the scene of extensive dealings.

The second alteration consists in the establishment of a new summit level extending from the nine mile creek to the Skeneateles outlet, a distance of between eleven and twelve miles, and involving the construction of two additional locks, of eleven feet lift each, but relieving the line from all the difficulties of the marl meadow. There are three never-failing & pure streams naturally flowing across this level, either of which, in the period of considerable drought, affords water enough for its supply: but if, collectively, they should hereafter prove deficient, the two copious creeks, which bound the level, may be easily conducted into it. Having satisfactory assurances of this essential fact, this alteration was adopted.

1st. Because, it produced a saving in expense, estimated at seventeen thousand dollars, without taking into the amount the charge of lining both banks, for the purpose of sustaining them with solid earth, brought from a great distance, an operation which the character of the marl meadow would undoubtedly have rendered necessary to a large extent, if the primary designations of the canal line had been adhered to.

2d. Because, at the nine mile creek, it admits of the substitution of stone arches, in the aqueduct, instead of a wooden trunk; and at the Skeneateles, of an entire stone aqueduct, in place of a dam with guard locks. At both of these places, excellent stone are contracted for, at reasonable prices.

3d. Because, it carries the canal line farther south, and nearer to the populous and productive settlements of the western part of Onondaga county.

4th. Because it was very much feared, that the completion of the canal, upon the old plan, could not be effected, so as to render it navigable, as soon as it might be, upon the new, by at least one year. This would have been discouraging to the public spirit, by which this great enterprize is supported, and a serious delay of the profitable returns, which may be expected, whenever the communication between the Mohawk and Seneca rivers, is all the way opened.

ON my leaving Niagara, about the 23d of July 1816, I forgot a Book which contained promissory Notes & Receipts, to a large amount, among which was Mr. Daniel Brook's Note to me for £1763 12s. 5d. H. Currency, for which I have not hitherto received value. The Book was last seen in the hands of said Daniel Brooke, by the clerk who then superintended his business. And to corroborate this fact, an affidavit has been sworn to by him, before Doctor Muirhead, of Niagara.

As I must experience an irreparable loss from the want of these valuable documents, the above reward shall be immediately paid to the person, on returning the Book in an unmutilated state.

To the public it may seem strange, that I have withheld this notice since the above period. I will only say, that I never could conceive that I should be under the disagreable necessity of bringing this subject before them; but strong necessity now obliges me to do so.

HENRY DREAN.

York, Dec. 1, 1818. ft 5

IN Contradiction to the Misstatement of the Settlement between Mr. DANIEL BROOK and the Subscriber, which has appeared in the Upper Canada Gazette of the 14th Inst. Signed D. Brooke Senior, it is only necessary to state, that at the final settlement between the parties, Mr. Daniel Brooke, gave me his Note, at 6 months, for £1763 12 3 H. Currency, which was the balance due me; which Note was witnessed by Nicholas Osborne, Esq. and dated July 24th 1816, and that there has been no settlement whatever between us since that date. LONDON, Dec. 3.

There are, it seems, forty frigates now upon the stocks, or ordered to be laid down. May it be hoped, that the American scale will be considered in the structure of every one of them? Some of the most painful of our historical recollections are those which place before us the unequal contests of British with American frigates. There hall been meand enough, even before this late war, to know the force of the latter, for nothing is more public than ship building; it must be carried on close to navigable channels; and the eye of every seaman readily compares the length and breath of one ship with another. Yet, with all this opportunity for preparation, not a single frigate existed in our navy equal to the American rate. Surely this will not be the case hereafter. The subject should, however, be mentioned in Parliament, and the money refused unless the frigates are built upon proper scales. A delicate confidence is more tolerable in any matter than in this.

Dec. 21.

We find it stated in the Courier, that within the last week or two, wheat had fallen considerably in price, and that there seems every prospect that after the next general average shall have been ascertained, the ports will be closed against the introduction of Wheat. That general average will be calculated in about a fortnight, but in the mean time it has been taken for the four weeks already past. At the end of the first week, the average price of Wheat was 81s per quarter; at the end of the second week, it was 80s. 10d; at the end of the third week was 80s. 6d; & at the end of the 4th week 79, 11.

The Algemeine Zeitung states, that Abraham Uffenheimer, the Jew Banker, who lately failed at Vienna, had lent several millions of francs to the Crown of Spain, and that his loss from the extraordinary fall of the Spanish paper was immense. This failure was immediately felt on the Change at Vienna.

Dec. 23.

The accounts from Constantinople state, that the greatest activity prevailed in the naval arsenal there; a ship of 80 guns, and another of 74 guns, were launched in the course of last month.

By a letter from Cairo, dated the 10th Oct. published at Florence by Osman Aga, a general in the service of the Viceroy of Egypt, it appears that the Wechabites, had been again totally defeated, and their Caliph or Prince, Abdallah, with all his family, had been taken prisoners by Ibrahim Pacha, the son of the Viceroy.

Letters from Madrid of the 7th inst. state that large bodies of banditti, who are assembled in the mountains, made descents upon the towns & villages, and laid them under contribution.

DOVER, Dec. 20.

Arrived yesterday, the Chichester packet, with Lord & Lady Castlereagh, and suite. This morning the Duke of Wellington landed from the Lord Duncan, under a salute.

The young men destined for S America, who were recently arrested here at the request of the Spanish Minister, were afterwards at liberty. They then assembled to the number of 800, and proceeded to the Danish territory, where they effected their embarkation without experiencing the slightest obstacle.

CHRISTIANA, Dec 2.

On the 28th Nov. at three in the morning, a terrible fire broke out at Drontheim, which reduced almost the whole of one division of the city to ashes. Besides many small dwellings, fifty large houses were the prey of the flames.

Arctic Expedition.—It is said, that early in the ensuing summer another expedition will be sent out for the purpose of exploring a north western passage to the Pacific Ocean. The Griper, gun brig, has arrived at Deptford, and will be prepared as one of the discovery vessels, in lieu of the Trent. It is also said that two of the bomb vessels which were at Algiers, will be ordered on the same destination. The Isabella & Alexander will be paid off this day or to-morrow, and the crews will be allowed a month to go home and see their friends.

From Sedan we learn the following anecdote:—As the Emperor of Russia was travelling some time since from Paris to that town, in a very plain travelling carriage, he perceived a little peasant boy get up behind it; after some time, his Majesty said to him—"My boy, why do you get up behind my carriage?" to which the little fellow replied—"Because, Sir, I want to get to Sedan as quick as possible."—"And what do you want to do at Sedan, my boy?"—"To see the Emperor Alexander, Sir."—"Indeed! and pray what makes you so desirous of seeing the Emperor?"—"Because, Sir, I heard that he is a very good man, and loves the French."—"Well my little fellow, you see him before you."—The poor boy, quite confused, got off the back of the carriage, & burst into tears; the Emperor, however, re-assuring him, made him retake his place, saying they should travel together. By the time that they had reached Sedan, the Emperor became so taken with his little companion, that he asked him if he would go to Russia with him, to which the latter replied "most willingly;" "then (said the benevolent Alexander,) "as Providence has placed you in my hands, your future fortune shall be my care." Accordingly the fortunate young rustic left Sedan as one of the Imperial Suite.

There is a tree, of the silver kind, now growing at Hutton John, the property of A. Hudleston Esq. which is eighty feet in height: the first 60 feet from the ground, containing 250 cubic feet; the trunk, exclusive of branches, contains upwards of 300 feet of timber. —The first branch, which is 27 feet from the base, contains 19 cubic feet. The tree is perfectly perpendicular, and has stood upwards of a century.—Carlisle paper.

Observations on Improved Implements of Husbandry.

No. 2.

MESSRS. EDITORS,

In my last communication, I promised to send you some further observations on improved implements of husbandry; I shall now endeavour to fulfil that promise; notwithstanding the frequent interruptions of my vocation; and indeed, nothing less than the importance of the subject could have induced me to write you these observations.

In noticing the double mould-board plough in my last, I omitted to state the great advantage which the addition of a bar of iron or wood, fixed across the beam, above the wings, or feathers, as it is sometimes called, of the share; into which, may be fixed at each end, at from eighteen to twenty four inches apart, two coulters, so curved or elbowed inward, that their points shall nearly touch the two wings of the share; and made to cut the same depth into the soil. This implement, so fitted up, and by taking off the mould-boards, will then serve the excellent and expeditious purpose of scuffling the land between the rows of corn, potatoes, turnips, (when sown with wide intervals,) beans, &c. and which will also accomplish it much more effectually, than can be done by hand hoeing: nevertheless, hand hoeing & hand weeding in the rows are necessary.

The double-furrow plough, originally invented, I believe, says Mr. Lawrence, in his Farmer's Calendar, by Mr. Duckitt, and improved by Lord Somerville's, it is commonly called lord Somerville's double furrow plough. This tool is best fitted for level lands and light soils; & which, having a pair of wheels, and a man to drive horses, will plough without a bolder; it may be made to plough hilly land also; but the Kentish turnwrest plough, is an implement, the best calculated of any other, for ploughing sidehills that are too steep to be ploughed up & down hill.

A French plough, invented by Mr. Duckitt, Jun. would be found a valuable implement. "It has a skim-coulter, by which the surface may be turned under, and fresh soil brought up from a depth of six, eight, or ten inches: three horses being employed." Land intended for carrots, beets, or parsnips, or sward turned down for corn, or turnips or potatoes, ought, when it can be done, to be ploughed with the above excellent tool: green manures also, may be effectually turned in with it, such as buckwheat, rye, or tares, when grown for that purpose.

The hand-drill, at the office of the "Albany County Agricultural Society," for sowing grain or pulse, and small seeds of any kind, is an excellent implement, nearly on the principle of T. A. Knight's invention: an additional side wheel, is however wanted, to accelerate the motion of the seed rollers, to augment the quantity of seed to be sown. Being constructed to sow only one row at a time, it is best suited for small seeds, viz: turnips, upon not too large a scale, radishes, onions, beets, carrots, and parsnips; by rubbing the seeds by hand, and mixing a little dry sand or saw-dust, these may be sown as regularly as any other. It might, however, I am persuaded, be enlarged, so as to sow six rows at a time, when it might be carried to the field culture of wheat, or any other grain, or pease, at from nine to twelve inch intervals; and to any required extent.

As an appendage to the above machine, and in fact, whenever the drill culture is pursued, of grain or vegetables, with not too wide intervals, Mr. Mark Duckitt's new invented hand hoes, for doing more work, and at less expense than with common ones will be found of immense saving, where labor is dear, and cuts deep into the profits of the agriculturist. In 1790, lord Somerville had them tried to satisfaction:—his servant hoeing the fifth part of an acre, drilled at nine inches, in thirty six minutes; and could continue the work, at the rate of two acres per day, for any length of time:—made good work upon any sort of soil.

Those who intend pursuing the drill culture of grain, &c. upon an extensive scale, would unquestionably find their account in the saving of time and labor, and superiority of produce, in the use of the Rev. Mr. Cook's drill machine, improved so that a set of hoes can be attached thereto by which it can be converted into a sacrificator or horse hoe; which with a man and boy, and two horses, may sow or hoe ten acres per day. If weeds accumulate on the coulters, in sowing, they must be displaced by a spaddle or a piece of wood flattened for the purpose. It is necessary to harrow before sowing, and once in a place after.

The advantage of the drill culture, according to "Mr. Amos's theory & practice of drill husbandry" is, at nine inch intervals, for grain of every kind, compared with the broad cast mode, a superiority of from five to seven bushels per acre. An able writer in the Agricultural Magazine for 1806, states the difference in favor of the drill, upon land equally well prepared in both cases, to be about two and one half bushels per acre. But upon land not so prepared, the difference has been stated by Dr. Dickson and others, at two, and even five to one.

Dr. Darwin's drill machine, is upon somewhat different principles of construction, and, I believe, comes cheaper; and is also fitted up with hoes.

As a necessary appendage to either of the above machines, the clod roller, is an effective implement for pulverizing all stiff loams & clayey lands; and which will accomplish more than can possibly be effected by the plough and harrow, upon such soils. They may be made of cast iron, stone or wood. An oak roller of two & a half feet in diameter, and from five to six feet in length, the weight of which, if necessary, can be increased, by loading on large stones, will answer exceeding well for pulverizing clayey lands, &c. and occasionally rolling old meadows, which smooths the surface for the scythe, and thickens the sward. A roller of a smaller dimension, is also a necessary implement for every farmer to have; for the purpose of rolling wheat or rye, (an operation that never ought to be omitted in the spring—granting the land dry enough to bear the tread of horses without poaching) and clover & timothy, and other grass seeds, also barley upon light gravelly & sandy soils.

With the above, a pair of light small tined harrows, ought in all cases, to form part of the farmer's stock of implements;—to harrow wheat or rye in the spring after the grass seeds have been sown, and before rolling,—but indeed, wheat or rye ought to be harrowed before rolling, whether it is seeded with clover, &c. or not,—it is indispensable, and together with rolling is one of the most beneficial operations, upon soils of every description; but more especially upon clayey lands & stiff loams:—it is to broad cast crops of winter grain, nearly, if not quite, equal to horse hoeing drilled crops of those grains.

Mr. Hayward's Extirpator, with improvements by McDougal of Oxford-street, London, recommended by Arthur Young, Esq. in his general view of the agriculture of Suffolk, and by Mr. Lawrence, in his Farmer's Calendar, as one of the most effective tools in husbandry, for all light soils; upon which a man & boy, with three or four horses, can cultivate or scuffle ten acres per day. Upon heavy lands, after once ploughing, I presume it would require a greater force of draught, to accomplish the same quantity of work. The implement is fixed to a pair of low wheels, & made to go deep or shallow. The shares, 13 in number, are eight inches broad, & nine inches long, fixed to stalks ten inches in height, a double set of which are fixed into two ledges of strong timber, at eleven inches distance. Beam seven feet long: its elevation three feet three inches.

Mr. Editor,—On reading the correspondence of Mr. Adams & Don Onis, published in the National Intelligencer of the 24th Dec my feelings were roused in the cause of common justice by the following lines.—"It is to the artifices & instigations of Arbuthnot, thus, to say the least, tolerated by the governor of Pensacola, and thus aided & abetted by the commandant of St. Marks, that the war with the Seminole Indians has been due. But for them, it would undoubtedly never have happened."—

No doubt Mr. Adams believes what he here says, and so must many others, who, like him, remote from the scene of action, have only heard from one party the misrepresentations of previous & more important occurrences, causes of this war, or never heard of them at all; but in Tennessee, and particularly in Georgia, the following facts are well known.

I mean in reflection on the community of Georgia by the following statement; on the contrary, I believe every thinking man of that state will lament with me, that from a local cause, congenial to the feelings of bad men, (the vicinity of another government) a large proportion of such characters as are just fit to keep two countries in a broil, must, in spite of legal exertions, gather near to the southern boundary of Georgia. And at the present period of public enquiry, I conceive it my duty to write, and yours, sir, to print, this information; in the commencing of which I must go a little farther back, the better to point out the evil by shewing its origin.

General Matthews, who had been a governor of Georgia, having formed the design of revolutionizing the Floridas, made several visits to those provinces for this purpose, during the years 1810 and 1811, and kept his agents constantly employed in endeavoring to seduce the inhabitants of their northern parts. The difficulties he met with were so many, that he at length reduced his terms thus low—"If only five of the inhabitants will raise the flag of independence, I will back them with the whole military and naval force on this frontier," which consisted of several companies of regulars, and eight gunboats.—Five bad men are to be found in any country. Accordingly, on the 11th of March, 1812, the flag was set up at St. Mary's river, and immediately a crowd of volunteers flocked to it from Georgia. On the 17th, Fernandina was compelled to surrender to this band, now called patriots, under the cannon of six United States' gun boats, levelled on the town, and within pistol shot of it—and on the following day the patriot flag of Fernandina was substituted by that of the United States. A small garrison having been left there, the whole force moved off for the reduction of St. Augustine; and a siege of that city was but just commenced when general Matthews was recalled by his government, to give an account of his conduct. But the United States' forces remained with the patriots, in operation against that fortress, for above twelve months after, under the command of colonel Smith, of the rifle corps.

Some of those Seminole Indians, who had long been in the habit of supplying St. Augustine with cattle from their immense stocks in Alachua, were down with a drove for the relief of that city, and joined a sortie destined to intercept a detachment of the besiegers then in search of provisions—which was effected; and in that action, fell the brave and much lamented captain Williams, of the American infantry. In consequence of that defeat, colonel Smith was obliged to raise the seige, and retire to St. John's river, about 40 miles in his rear. Colonel Nunez, or Nunling, then marched into Alachua with a force composed of Georgia and Tennessee volunteers, where the Indians fought him several days, with much loss on both sides, until their venerable chief, Payne, fell at the head of his men in the open field. The Indians then removed to their late residence at Suwany, (from whence they were driven by general Jackson, last summer,) having abandoned their settlements in Alachua, Payne's town, Bowleg's town, &c. and not being able to remove their immense stocks of cattle, those have been the object of a serious rapine and murder reciprocally carried on ever since, with the greatest barbarity on both sides, but with far more prejudice to the Indians than to the Georgians.

About the close of 1816, the authorities of Camden county, after great efforts to restrain the inhabitants, did, in a great measure, diminish this nefarious commerce: since then, fresh beef has been selling in the market of the town of St. Mary's, from twelve to eighteen cents per pound, which, for years before, sold there at from four to six cents—and droves of grown cattle were selling at Trader's Hill for three dollars a head. One of those adventurers, who has since been killed in an excursion to Alachua, produced two strips of skin which he had cut from the back of the head to the heels of an Indian he had murdered, and which he was tanning for a pair of bridle reins!

Cession of the Floridas.—We are happy to announce that a TREATY, ceding the Floridas to the United States, and fixing the southern boundary of that portion of our Territory which lies west of the Mississippi has at length been concluded. The treaty was laid before the Senate on Monday; and there can be no doubt of its receiving the immediate and unanimous sanction of that body.

The following paragraph, communicating this highly interesting intelligence is copied from the National Intelligencer of Tuesday:

"It is said, and we have no doubt correctly, that the President of the United States yesterday laid before the Senate a TREATY recently concluded between Mr. Secretary Adams, on the part of Spain, FOR A CESSION OF FLORIDA to the United States, and a provision for the payment, in consideration thereof, of a sum of money to our merchants having claims on the Spanish government for spoliations on their property; including also a settlement of the Western boundary line between the United States and Spain. The highly important Treaty so long wished, so long expected, if ratified, will impose on Congress the necessity of organizing a government for that territory before adjournment, and will add thus much to the mass of important business already before them."

The following paragraph, from the Georgetown Messenger of Monday, throws additional light upon the terms of the Treaty:—

"We understand that the negotiations with Spain are brought to a close.

"The report is that Spain has ceded the Floridas; that all the grants of land by the crown, since the year 1802 are to be abrogated; that the U. States are to pay the claims of their citizens for spoliations committed by Spain and in Spanish ports, to the amount of five millions of dollars; the southern boundary of the United States is to be the 31st degree;—and, on the Pacific ocean, the 41st degree of north latitude.

"It being understood that Russia has relinquished to the United States all her right to the countries on the Pacific Ocean south of the 55th degree of north latitude, and that Great Britain relinquishes all hers to the same countries after the ten years, stipulated in the late treaty with respect to a certain portion of them, the United States will now possess a territory embracing fifteen degrees of latitude on the Pacific Ocean.

The Augusta Chronicle of the 10th inst. mentions that the rain which fell on the preceding Thursday and Friday had occasioned a rapid rise in the Savannah river. The Steam-Boat, floated from her grounding, where she had remained 5 or six weeks. The same paper says—"The unprecedented lowness of our river, taken in connection with the depreciated state of the Cotton market, during the present season, have given, generally, a dull and inert aspect to our city, seldom, if ever before exhibited. A little more animation however, may ere long be expected, as the means of transportation will be considerably facilitated as the river continues to rise."—N. Y. Eve. Post.

"We have been waiting anxiously some time for an opportunity to address you with reports on the state of this market for articles of your produce, and now avail ourselves of a vessel from St. Ubes to apprize you of the material alteration in the prices of grain, which have taken place since our last.

"The immense & continued importations of wheat & Indian corn, received here of late from the Black sea & Italy, have so completely filled our granaries, that it is with the utmost difficulty stores have been found to place it in, & should more cargoes arrive, they must remain on board. It naturally follows, that with so great a supply on hand, prices must rate low. Wheat of superior kind, will hardly command 360 a 800 rs. and Indian corn has been selling a 260 a 400. At these terms, according to the last quotations from the United States, it cannot answer to ship to this market, unless from the abundancy of your late crop, prices should give way. At the commencement of the year the consumption of corn increases here a great deal, and to that period we looked forward with an expectation of an improvement in our prices. At present however, with the large quantities on hand, we see but little hopes of its taking place, and are, therefore, anxious to apprize our friends thereof.

The Seminole war.—The important debate on this subject which has occupied Congress three weeks has at length terminated in favour of the conduct of Gen. Jackson, by a majority of 30. Although the result is contrary to the opinion, which we have expressed, in regard to the proceedings of the commander in chief of the Seminole war; yet it affords us no small satisfaction to perceive that the majority of the Virginia delegation were of the same sentiments. The worthy representative of this district, General Pegram, also gave his vote disapproving of the trial and execution of Robert C. Ambrister, and of the capture and occupation of Pensacola. If we have had therefore the misfortune to differ from the majority of the republican party in congress in opinion, with respect to the conduct of Gen. Jackson, we have at least the majority of the republican representation of our own state on our side. On what grounds this question can be called a party question; or those who differ from Gen. Jackson can be termed federalists we know not; unless by some magical charm, the majority of Virginia Republicans have at once been metamorphosed into federalists. It is also somewhat singular that the Delegation of the state of Georgia, the very people who suffered from the Indians, and who alone had to dread the Indians gave an unanimous vote against Gen. Jackson. This circumstance, in our opinion, speaks more strongly against the proceedings of the Seminole war, than any other fact. d Ambrister, as those men whose relations & friends — have been told by the advocates of Gen. Jackson were butchered by the Seminoles ? Yet these very gentlemen, we find, are the loudest for the censure of Gen. Jackson. We do not profess ourselves to have any other information on this subject than what we collect from the public prints. But we have been accustomed to reason and judge of evidence which respects public affairs, in the same manner as in the private concerns of life. If all those circumstances were true which the supporters of Gen. Jackson would make us believe, respecting the barbarities committed by Arbuthnot & Ambrister, we cannot help thinking that the feelings of Mr. Cobb would have been more excited than those of Mr. Hugh Nelson, of Albemarle, who was removed near a thousand miles from the seat of the Seminole war.

The subject of the Seminole war has been so fully discussed in Congress, that we conceive it would be superfluous to invite the public attention further to it. We entirely disapprove of all strictures or insinuations tending to shew that the opponents of General Jackson are the opponents of the administration. We perceive no connecting circumstance which would warrant such a conclusion. We are well convinced from personal knowledge that several of the Virginia Delegation who were in the minority are the warmest supporters of the administration ; and we have reason to believe that many of the Delegates from the other states, who vote against General Jackson, are also the friends of the Administration.

Utica, Feb. 16, 1819.—The Season.—The uncommon mildness of the present winter has been noticed in all parts of the United States. In this part of the country we have scarcely had snow sufficient to cover the ground till Saturday last, since which time it has fallen to the depth of five or six inches, although the weather continues mild and pleasent. Wednesday last was the warmest day we have had this winter. The thermometer, suspended against a brick wall in the shade, stood for several hours at 53 ; and it is worthy of notice, that on that day, a butterfly was seen flying in one of our streets, so lively that an attempt to catch it proved ineffectual.

From the Baltimore Federal Republican.

The editors of the Telegraph have, by the politeness of a friend, received from South America a file of the Censor from the 22d August to the 17th October, 1818 inclusive.

The only items of any interest are that

Letters of the 18th of August received at Buenos Ayres from SALTA, announce the discovery of a very rich Silver Mine, 7 leagues from that place and that, " A rumor circulates among our most repectable men, that a citizen of character has seen a printed proclamation from Brazil of the President of the Republic of Venezuela, by which it appears that patriot Englishmen arriving there at different periods, to fight in the glorious cause of the Republic have formed themselves into four regiments of 1500 each, which compose the Republican Army, and which in a series of engagements has beaten General Morillo —who has retired to a small fortress, with hopes of capitulation.

The President presents his warmest and well merited thanks to the English heroes whose courage and firmness have proved the support of the State. He assures them of the gratitude of his country, and numbers them among the Sons of the Republic, securing them after so many conflicts and dangers the full enjoyment of civil and religious rights, or a perfect civil and religious freedom."

From the Montreal Herald.

SIR,—If, on those disquietudes in which we have alluded as existing in our sister Province, we form a verdict grounded on past experience, we must confess them to be of a very ominous nature. They were the very symptoms, in fact, that first ushered in, and afterwards predominated through the bloodiest and most prodigious tragedy, that ever disgraced or terrified humanity. But while we had carried them for a comparison to the test of European history, the periodical writers of a neighbouring state had referred them to a history with which they were much more intimately acquainted, and, in the result, pronounced them to be such as formed the prelude to their own rebellion. It is very remarkable, however, that after having satisfied themselves of this resemblance, they immediately enquire, what can that people, which of all people in the world, has, undeniably the least cause to complain, hope to acquire by rebellion ? To this question, the gentlemen who have ranged themselves under the guidance of an avowed enemy to the British Government, would find it, we believe, difficult to give a satisfactory reply. Great Britain by the secession of Upper Canada, would no doubt, lose much : but we are convinced the loss to Upper Canada would be a thousand fold ; but the difficulties the malcontents would have to encounter before they could arrive at such an end, appear to us to be almost insurmountable. Their leader indeed, pointedly observes to them, and with great truth, that the present military force in the country is contemptibly small, that they might assemble sufficiently numerous, to eat up the capital, and its garrison, at a breakfast. But granting this, and admitting, for the sake of argument, that a revolutionary party had overpowered, at the outset, the military actually stationed in the Province, what would they have gained ? The leaders, indeed, by such an overt act of rebellion, would have committed the alliance between them and the less determined of their followers ; but, for their ultimate view, this success, if such it must be named, would have done very little. Whatever hopes the embassy to New York may have inspired, we are convinced that it is inconstant with the present policy of the U. States, to give any efficient support to an undertaking of this nature. If any hope of co-operation or diversion, has been built on the projects of Gen. Lallemand, that must now be at an end. The reinforcements he expected from France never arrived, and his views are diverted altogether from this quarter. As to the malicious insinuation, so industriously propagated, that the parent state would easily abandon her colony, let them not "lay that flattering unction to their souls" While there remained a loyalist in the Province, the mother country would stand by that loyalist. Yes : this deluded faction may insult the government of the parent state, they may ruin our sister Province by a civil war, but that they can establish her independence under any favorite demagogue is in the eyes of common sense, humanly speaking, next to impossible.

We have entered into this argument more fully, because we perceived the productions which are wont to emanate every new-day, from certain presses, have had the effect of deluding many into a belief, that the discontented faction is as numerous as it affects to be, and that it is therefore probable, that our Western District, instead of resting safely on the boundary of a Sister Province, will be exposed, ere long, to incursions from a hostile state. From what we have urged above, we trust that even those who believe this party to be so numerous, will find they have no good reason to despair. For ourselves, we see other proportions in the people we love & respect ; and with whom we hope ever to remain united in the bands of family affection ; animated by this feeling, we cannot but express our gratitude to those well judging men, whose loyal addresses have shone out to us like the Arc of Promise, charming away the gloom of civil discord, and presenting to the eye of Hope & Patriotism, a prospect of better things.

Let it not be supposed by what has fallen from us, that we deride as groundless the impression of alarm, which has fastened on many worthy persons. No, we are as firmly persuaded as they can be, "that to bring about all they would most deprecate, has been uppermost in the hearts of a few desperate individuals ; and never can we be too watchful, against the contagion of evil principles. A modern author has justly observed, " It is not necessary a party should be the most numerous, to render it the most powerful in a state : it is enough it should be the most active, the most clamorous, and the most vindictive ; the least scrupulous, and conscientious. That it should be in possession of the usual channels of public information ; that it should hardly call itself the majority, and by the careless, the thoughtless, and the unsuspecting, be taken at its word—that proportion did the adherents of Sylla or Marius bear to the great body of the Roman Citizens ? What proportion did the assassins and atheists of the French nation ? No state of Society can be conceived, in which a minority such as this may not be formidable."

Undoubtedly a great share of wretchedness & mischief may be produced, by the efforts of a party which has little chance of ultimate success : internal warfare is no less destructive of the moral, than of the civil blessings, of a state ; and virtuous men will watch with jealous anxiety, every avenue by which it may approach. Here, Sir, I will again take my leave of you ; intending with your permission to present myself again to the notice of your readers ; and my only apology for so doing, shall be the sincerity of my intention to prove beneficial to my Country.

Our readers will perceive in another part of our paper, an article from the Montreal Herald, being the continuation of one we lately extracted from that paper.

We are sorry to observe that the late periodical publications of this Province should have produced an impression so unfavorable to the loyal character of our people. However, we are firmly persuaded, that the people of England themselves are not more sincerely, more unalterably attached to their government and constitution. We admit that the most mischievous schemes have been carried on, to undermine them, under a very specious disguise. But have not such attempts been repeatedly made to overthrow the constitution and government of the Mother Country ? In every state, there are some wicked and ill disposed men. Did not Wilcox formerly swear to us he was the most loyal of subjects ? That he was the last in the Province for disconnecting her from the Parent State, and so forth ? and, under pretence of a redress of abuses, lead a few deluded men along with him ? But how was it, when his real intentions appeared ? Was he not left alone ? and truly he shewed his loyalty, and affection for the Parent State, by going over to the enemy. It was only while the late disturber of the public peace could keep the mask completely on, that he had a momentary popularity. If he has still, a dozen desperate men with him who would entail civil war on their country, for their own private ends, we may find at least as many persons of that description in any other State A convention of Delegates, indeed, might have sanctioned any suspicions. But those people who gave countenance to it, were deceived as to its real nature. In short, our Representatives, in their unanimous Resolutions, spoke the real sentiments of the People.

COMMUNICATION.

During the season of Lent, I shall continue Mr Editor, with your leave, to send you some article, which may call our attention to those things which concern our peace."

" Why do I mourning, because of the oppression of the enemy ?" Psalm 42 & 43.

Alas, Christian ! thou puttest that question, which is too frequently forced from the mouth of every believer in the sense of the coldness of his heart, and the absence of the light of God's countenance, from the " the oppression of the enemy"—" the carnal mind which is enmity against God"—" which doth always resist the Holy Ghost"—" that hideth the face of God" from thy sight, and leaveth thee mourning for that sweet " peace of God which passeth all understanding." But, Believer, and " know then that it is for thy good," it is " but for a season, and because it is needful for thee, that thou art in heaviness through manifold temptations" (1 Peter 1 6). The Father is still the same " Father of Mercies ;" the son is still the same " consolation of Israel ;" the Holy Spirit is " still the same " Comforter." Though thou canst not feel thy covenant related to the three blessed Persons of the Glorious Jehovah, in thy " present distress." Have seen the " sun shining in his strength," and rejoiced in the grateful warmth of his cheering beams, when suddenly the " Heaven was black with clouds," the East wind blew keenly, the " rain descended," " the treasures of hail were opened," " the Lord also thundered in the Heavens," and soon all around was gloomy, cold, and comfortless. But I knew, the while, that " far above out of sight," all was bright, calm, and pleasant. I knew that the Sun held his place in the Heavens ; for though it was sometimes hidden from my sight, a portion of his light still was present. In a " little season," the dark clouds heavily bore away the rain, the hail, and " the lightning of thunder." The Sun rising in his bright face above the last retiring cloud, again shed smiles over the Earth ; the lark rose on flickering wing with the song of thanksgiving ; the cattle gradually spread themselves over their pastures, man returned to his work and to his labour. " And my heart was glad and my glory rejoiced in the " power, wisdom and goodness of God" my maker.

Thus, believer, though the art " mourning because of the oppression of the enemy," thou mayest confidently " encourage thyself in the Lord thy God" ; even when thou art said, " in darkness in the deeps," " underneath these are the everlasting arms."

Wipe away thy tears, look up to the " Heaven of Heavens," for the Sun of Righteousness shines in all its glory ; with open face behold the glory of the Lord, until thou art changed into the same image. " even as by the spirit of the Lord" ; even when thou art said, " in darkness in the deeps," " underneath these are the everlasting arms."

Wipe away thy tears, look up to the " Heavens

And the reasonableness of such a fear is manifested by the following considerations: The marl-meadow is a swamp without any outlet, except at its eastern and western extremities; and as it contains great quantities of water, proceeding from Bland's brook, and numerous springs, which run into it, the only possible mode of excavating the canal through it, would be to begin by opening a wide drain at each end, below the bottom of the canal, and prosecuting the work from these points towards the centre, taking especial care, as advances should be made, to keep these drains free from all obstructions. The common mode of executing a heavy job of this kind, by stationing numerous parties of labourers upon it, at short distances from each other, could not be adopted here for besides the difficulty of transporting every barrow of earth a great way, upon a soft and wet surface, all such parties, except one at each end, would soon find themselves at work in a pond, in which the depth of water would increase in the same ratio with that of the excavation. No cattle or horses could be employed; and as the parties, at both ends, could not advantageously include more than seventy or eighty hands, it is evident, that so great a labour, even without the occurrence of any untoward events, would require the application of all practical exertions, during several years, for its accomplishment. But, it must be acknowledged, that the depth of the cutting, the weight of the spoil-banks, the quantity of water with which the swamp is filled, and the nature of the earth, which is ascertained, by frequent borings, to be chiefly vegetable matter, marl, and sand, are circumstances connected with the old plan, calculated to render untoward events, affecting both the cost and time within which the canal could be constructed, and its security afterwards, extremely probable.

5th. Because there is no part of the middle section, of the same length, where the whole expense of opening the navigation will be less than that of the new summit, between the locks.

From the Skeneateless outlet to the Seneca river, the survey and location of the canal line was easy, and this last portion of it was finally completed by the middle of July. The whole was judiciously divided into short sections, and perspicuously exhibited in maps, profiles and descriptions, which are herewith presented.

The avidity with which great numbers of wealthy and respectable citizens sought contracts, was highly gratifying, and afforded a sure pledge of the energy which has since been displayed in their execution. Many applications, for every section, were always made immediately after, and often before, the returns of the engineer had been received, so as to render it proper to let them out. A very few of the contractors are foreigners, who have recently arrived in this country; but far the greater part of them are native farmers, mechanics, merchants and professional men, residing in the vicinity of the line; and three fourths of all the laborers were born among us.

Within a few days after the survey had been extended to the west end of the middle section, the whole was taken up, except a few short places not necessarily left, where structures of wood & stone were to be erected. But as it required two or three weeks after a section is agreed for, to construct tools, collect provisions, hire hands, purchase teams, and provide the necessary shelter, it was not till about the 10th of August that the whole line became a scene of the most animated and laborious exertions. From that time to the tenth of December, between one and three thousand men, with half as many horses & cattle, and a considerable variety of mechanical inventions, have been unremittingly employed upon it: And the diligence, ingenuity, and good judgement, with which these means have been applied, would hardly be credited, if they did not rest upon a testimony, impossible to be doubted, that of the effects produced.

Machinery has hitherto been used, with most success, in the heavy business of grubbing and clearing. By means of a cudieus screw, connected with a roller, a cable, a wheel and a crank, one man is able to bring down a tree of the largest size, without any cutting about its roots. For this purpose, these means are all, except the cable, combined in a small but very strong frame of wood & iron. This frame is immoveably fastened into the ground, at a distance of perhaps one hundred feet from the foot of the tree, around the trunk of which, fifty or sixty feet up, one end of the cable is secured, the other being connected with the roller. When this is done, the man turns the crank, which successively moves the screw, the wheel and the roller, on which, as the cable winds up, the tree must gradually yield, until at length, it is precipitated by the weight of its top. The force which may be exerted in this way, upon a tree, is irresistible, as with the principle of the wheel and the screw, by the application of the cable at a point so far from the ground, it unites also that of the lever.

There is no grubbing so difficult and expensive, by the common methods, as that of sound, green stumps; and as our citizens west of Utica, are every day multiplying these evidences of their industry, it was desirable to discover some easier means of eradicating them. Such means have been found; but the cost of machinery in which they partly consist, would forbid the use of them in ordinary cases. Two strong wheels, sixteen feet in diameter, are made and connected together by a round axle-tree, twenty inches thick and thirty feet long; between these wheels, & with its spokes inseparably framed into their axle-tree, another wheel is placed, fourteen feet in diameter, round the rim of which a rope is several times passed, with one end fastened through the rim, and with the other end loose, but in such a condition as to produce a revolution of the wheel whenever it is pulled. This apparatus is so moved as to have the stump, on which it is intended to operate, midway between the largest wheels, and nearly under the axle-tree; and these wheels are so braced as to remain steady. A very strong chain is hooked, one end to the body of the stump, or its principal root, and the other to the axle tree. The power of horses or oxen is then applied to the loose end of the rope above-mentioned, and as they draw, a rotary motion is communicated, through the smallest wheel, to the axle-tree, on which, as the chain hooked to the stump winds up, the stump itself is gradually disengaged from the earth in which it grew. After this disengagement is complete, the braces are taken from the large wheels, which then afford the means of removing that stump out of the way, as well as of transporting the apparatus where it may be made to bear on another. The expense of the wheels, axle-tree, chain and rope, is about two hundred and fifty dollars; and with them in this way, seven hands and a pair of horses, can grub from forty to forty large stumps in a day. A few stumps have been found to require the strength of four horses. The gain of power by this machinery, is somewhat more than eight fold, with very little loss by friction.

Great obstruction to the excavation has been offered by the small roots and fibres, which overspread the surface, and every where penetrate the top soil of timbered land. A plough has been invented for cutting up these, great y superior to the one in common use. It is very narrow or thin, and consists of a piece of iron much heavier than a common plough, strongly connected at its upper edge with the beam, and in the rear with the handle, both of which are of the usual construction. The front edge of the iron, where the cutting is to be done, is covered with steel well sharpened, and shaped like the front of a coniter, except that it retreats more as it rises to the beam. The lower edge is made smooth and gradually thickens as it extends the handle, to about four inches. Two yoke of oxen will draw this utensil through any roots not exceeding two inches in diameter; and by moving it at short intervals, through the surface of any ground to be excavated, the small roots and fibres are so cut up as to be easily picked and harrowed out of the way of the shovel and scraper.

The experience of two seasons, embracing all those operations concerning which we had most anxiety, has abundantly confirmed our most favourable hopes, in relation to the construction of the canal. But we do not feel ourselves at liberty, in this report, either to conceal or to disguise the fact, that in several places unexpected obstacles have been presented. There have been frequent spots of hard-pan, through most of which, however, the excavation is already completed. At the Onondaga hill, in the neighborhood of Rome, and on sections 14, 16, 17, & 24, we have been troubled with quick-sand. In some of these places, by a slight alteration of the canal line, we have, in a great measure, avoided the evil; and what we could not avoid, we have overcome; in the others, such progress is made as leaves no fear of the result.

On sections 27, 37, and 40, considerable quantities of breccia, or gravel firmly cemented together, have occurred. This substance is the most stubborn and expensive to break up of any that we have found. Some of it we have contrived to shun, and the rest is chiefly removed.

But we have been subjected to the most accumulated expense by indurated clay, and stone, of various descriptions. The indurated clay is either red or blue, and has shown itself to the greatest extent, on section 14, 20, 24, 25, 50, 51, 54, and 55, all of which are in great forwardness, and will surely be finished before next August. The stone is all, either gypsum, common limestone, or a kind of meagre limestone. Of the last we expect to make a very important use; as, by a number of small experiments, in which, after being thoroughly burnt and slaked, or ground, and mixed in equal portions with sand, it appears to form a cement that uniformly hardens under water. The gypsum is found on sections 27, 28, and 39; the common limestone on sections 19, 23, 24, 27, and 33; and the meagre limestone, on sections 26, 31 and 37. The greatest part of all this stone is now excavated; and where it is not, it probably will be in two months, as a number of men are daily at work in it.

THE subscriber particularly requests that all those persons indebted to him, previous to the co-partnership of Wood and Anderson, will Liquidate their respective accompts on or before the first day of May next, otherwise they will without reserve be put into the hands of an Attorney for collection.

200 DOLLARS REWARD.

ON my leaving Niagara, about the 23d of July 1816, I forgot a Book which contained promissory Notes & Receipts, to a large amount, among which was Mr. Daniel Brooke's Note to me for £1763 12s. 5d. H. Currency, for which I have not hitherto received value. The Book was last seen in the hands of said Daniel Brooke, by the clerk who then superintended his business. And to corroborate this fact, an affidavit has been sworn to by him, before Doctor Muirhead, of Niagara.

As I must experience an irreparable loss from the want of these valuable documents, the above reward shall be immediately paid to the person, on returning the Book in an unmutilated state.

To the public it may seem strange that I have withheld this notice since the above period. I will only say, that I never could conceive that I should be under the disagreeable necessity of bringing this subject before them; but strong necessity now obliges me to do so.

HENRY DREAN.

York, Dec. 1. 1818. ft 5

IN Contradiction to the Misstatement of the Settlement between Mr. DANIEL BROOK and the Subscriber, which has appeared in the Upper Canada Gazette of the 14th Inst. Signed D Brooke Senior, it is only necessary to state, that at the final settlement between the parties, Mr. Daniel Brooke, gave his Note, at 6 months, for £1763 12 5 H Currency, which was the balance due; which Note was witnessed by Nicholas Osborne, Esq. and dated July 24th 1816, and that there has been no settlement whatever between us, since that date. FRANCIS JACKSON

From Europe.

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 1.

An agricultural friend has favoured us, by sending to our office, a branch of a blackberry bush, plucked the day before Christmas day in a meadow, Town Green, Aughton. It has on it a considerable quantity of blossom, the unripened berries, and a number of fine ripe blackberries. It was accompanied by a few primroses, got from the same meadow.

In the will of the late lamented Sir Samuel Romilly, just published, we remark a codicil, dated Oct. 9, 1818, of which the following is an extract. From this it is evident that he anticipated the dreadful calamity which led to terminate his valuable existence.

"I am at the present moment of perfect mind and mind, and in full possession of all my faculties; but I am labouring under a most severe affliction, and I cannot but recollect that insanity is amongst the evils which mental afflictions sometimes produce, without observing to myself that the unhappy lot may possibly, at some time, be mine. If I ever should become insane (which God forbid,) it is my earnest desire that while I continue in that state, the following bounties may be made to different relations out of my income, during my life, and may be considered as part of the expenditure which I, certainly should have made, if I had continued capable of managing my own affairs:—To my brother, £150 a year, and to my nephew, Peter Roget, £150 a year, to my nephew, Cuthbert Romilly, £100 a year; to my niece, Caroline & Margaret Romilly, £30 a year a piece. All these payments I desire may be made during the joint lives of myself & the several annuitants respectively."

Sir S. in the body of his will, states, that "it is his earnest & anxious wish, that none of his sons should be educated at any public school: by which he means such schools as Eton, Westminster, Winchester, & Harrow."

The late Lord Ellenborough died worth upwards of £240,000. "By his will he has left £2000 for life to his widow; £10,000 a year to his eldest son, the present Lord; and £15,000 to each of his other children. He has directed the house in St. James's square, and the villa at Rochampton to be sold—the former cost £18,000.

Finance.—A deputation from the body of contractors for the last loan, and their subscribers, had an interview lately with the Chancellor of the Exchequer, to present their memorial against the return to cash payments. The refusal of the Bank to extend the periods for the redemption of omnium has alarmed these gentlemen & even Mr. Vansittart himself. A petition in aid of the contractors & their friends has been for some time handed about, and it is said that the signature of about 700 names have been obtained to it.

The King's Diamonds.—The expectation of the public, that the mystery respecting the disappearance of the King's diamonds would have been, before this, satisfactorily explained, remains as yet disappointed. In the mean time it has been eagerly & significantly inquired, when was the last time that the persons entrusted with the care of the King's property, saw these precious articles? And with not less anxiety has it been asked, whether or not they were in their proper place, when that place was searched about two years ago, in the presence of one of the Royal Dukes?

An enormous oak tree was found, a few days ago, in Contley Common, part of the Yorkshire estate of J. Childers, Esq. which appears to have been buried under ground many centuries. The length of the trunk measure 120 feet, & its diameter, at twenty yards' distance from the root, four feet in circumference; with the moderate allowance of two yards for the height of the branches, it must, when standing, have been at least fifty yards high.

London bill of Mortality.

A general bill of all the christenings & burials, from Dec. 16, 1817, to Dec 15, 1818:—

Christened.——Males, 12,530; Females, 11,708. In all 24,235.

Buried——Males, 9883; Females, 9822. In all 19,705.

Died, on Tuesday evening se'nnight, Sir Philip Francis, in St. James'-square. It is a singular coincidence, that this is the fourth death, within a short period, in that corner of St James's-square, viz. Lord Bennetkamp, Lord Anson, Lord Boringbrough, & Sir Philip Francis.—Sir Philip was born in Dublin, in 1740. Dr. Francis, the translator of Horace, was his father. He received the first rudiments of his education in Ireland. In 1750 he came to England, and was placed at St. Paul's school. In 1755 Mr. Henry Fox, afterwards Lord Holland, gave him a small place in the Secretary of State's office. Mr. Fox, who succeeded Mr. Fox, patronised him. By that patronage he was appointed Secretary to General Bligh. In 1760 he was made Secretary to the Earl of Kinnoul, Ambassador to Lisbon. In 1763 he was appointed by the late Lord Bedford to a considerable post in the War-office, which he resigned in 1772, in consequence of a difference with Viscount Barrington. The greatest part of 1772, he spent in travelling. In about half a year after his return to England, Lord North inserted his name in an act of Parliament, to be a member of the Council appointed for the Government of Bengal, in conjunction with Warren Hastings, and three others. The records of his long contest with Mr. Hastings, are preserved in the books of Council, &c. This quarrel had previously occasioned a duel in India, when Mr. Hastings shot Sir Philip through the body. On the dissolution of Parliament, in 1784, he was elected for Yarmouth. In 1806, his Majesty was pleased to invest him with the order of the Bath. On the 2d of the last month he expired, after having been reduced to a state of extreme debility by an excruciating disease in the prostrate gland, with which he had been for several years afflicted, and from which his age precluded all chance of recovery. He has left a son & two daughters, Mr. Philip Francis, Mrs. Johnson, & Mrs. Cholmondeley. When between 70 & 80, he married Miss Watkins, a daughter of a clergyman. He had been many years employed about an historical sketch of his principal contemporaries, and it is believed by many, that he was the author of the celebrated Letters of Junius.

On Thursday the 26th Nov. at Vienna, of water on the chest, aged 84, the celebrated Field-Marshall Colloredo, minister of state, & director-general of the Austrian artillery.

On Saturday the 28th Nov. at her daughter's Collin's Cottage, Harrowgate, Mrs. Ann Dawson, aged 161.

Lately, at London, Mr. Courtoy. He was a native of France, &, when young, served in the French army. He was by trade a hair-dresser, which business he followed for many years in the vicinity of St. James's. He was one of the largest proprietors of Bank & East India stock in the kingdom, and is said to have left property to the amount of nearly £300,000. During the whole period of a long life, his personal expenses were never known to exceed one guinea per week.

LONDON, Dec. 20.

The Queen's Will.—Mr. Banting was appointed by command of the Prince Regent to value the private property, which is to be equally divided between the Princess Augusta, the Princess of Hesse Hombourg, the Duchess of Gloucester, and the Princess Sophia. The valuation of the property at the Queen's Palace, Windsor Palace, & Frogmore House, is nearly completed. On Monday, Lord Arden & Gen. Taylor, the executors of the late Queen's Will, attended at the Queen's Palace, to proceed with the arrangements, as directed by the will, the chamber of her late Majesty, which had been sealed upon her demise, was opened. At two o'clock Mr. Serjeant Vaughan & Mr. Hart, the late Queen's Attorney & Solicitor-General, attended the Executors at the Queen's Palace, to make the necessary legal arrangements for the Executors to act upon & prove the will. Yesterday the executors attended at the King's Mews, Charing-cross, to view the carriages & horses of the Queen, previous to their being sold.—The Royal Arms, except the supporters, are obliterated from the carriages with paint the colour of the pannels. Yesterday morning five of the horses were shot on account of their age, being between 20 & 30 years, to prevent their falling to the work of dust-carts, &c.

LONDON, Dec. 27.

The metropolis was on Tuesday enveloped in a fog, the most dense that has been witnessed for several years. The darkness in the early part of the day was not so very great as to be attended with extraordinary inconvenience; but it gradually increased, and about four o'clock it became impossible to discern an object at the distance of a few paces. The carringes & waggons moving along the streets were not discernable from the flag-ways, and the passengers on the latter derived very little aid from the lights in the windows, or in the lamps, as most of the shops, from fear of accidents, were shut, and several of the latter were extinguished by the fog; even those which did burn afforded but a very feeble twinkling light, not visible until a near approach. The coachmen alighted from their boxes to lead the horses, and the link-boys were in great numbers to offer their assistance; but with every possible care & precaution the passengers both on foot & in carriages, seldom succeeded in making their way without mistakes, and horses & carriages frequently deviated from the street to the flag-ways, to the imminent danger of the passengers. The noises made by the people in the streets, were frightful; some shrieking from terror when surprised by the sudden approach of a horse or a carriage, and others calling out to their fellow-travellers, to warn them of danger, or anxiously inquiring their way. In many cases the company deserted their carriages, which remained station-ary, the coachmen not knowing where they were. Various sums, from half a crown to ten shillings, were obtained by link-boys for conducting a carriage through a single street. In the theatres, the actors on the stage were scarcely visible to the audience; and even private houses, though closed & well furnished with fires were filled & darkened by this unwelcome visitor.

Dec. 26.

The crew of the Mermion, 18 in number, Americans, with Capt. Cranston, their Commander, attended Divine Service, at the Church of St. Clement, Ipswich, on Sunday week, for the purpose of returning thanks to the Almighty for their deliverance from ship-wreck; a suitable discourse was delivered by the Officiating Minister from the 107th Psalm, 23 & 24 v. The Marmion lost her rudder, and was otherwise damaged, on the Sheep Wash Sands, a short time since. She sailed on her voyage to New-Orleans on Tuesday last.

The Letters of Junius have been given to so many distinguished characters, and amongst the rest to the late Sir Francis, upon proof presumptive, that more conclusive evidence must be produced, before the question can be fairly set at rest. The Preface to the Trial of Lord George Sackville, afterwards Lord George Germain, was certainly written by Junius; one person only, a nobleman long since dead, was supposed to have known who the writer really was, and that Nobleman, in his life time communicated the secret to his present Majesty.

Letters from Amsterdam state, that a commercial establishment which has attracted much notice from the extent of its speculations in the Government securities of France, is at length declared in a state of insolvency. The ruin of this house, which, though not perhaps of the first order, maintained a very high rank at Amsterdam, is chiefly to be ascribed to those speculations, of the magnitude of which some idea may be formed by stating, that at one period it held 4,000,000 of rentes, forming a capital of 80,000,000 of francs; and that every half of one per cent. that took place in the funds, constituted a difference of more than £40,000 sterling.

So great is the malaise it would be brought to the neighbouring fishing towns & villages, in consequence of the late successful season, that the young men, since their return, have been occupied in little else than marrying.—Inverness Courier.

COLCHESTER, Dec. 25.

Arrived from Ostend, after a passage of 8 hours, the Lady Francis Packet, with Brussels & Ghent papers of yesterday's date. Trade is uncommonly dull at Ostend, and likely to be still more so, in consequence of the British ports being shut against the importation of wheat into this country from next month. A heavy tonnage duty is also to be imposed on British vessels every voyage.

PARIS, Dec. 26.

At last the divisions in the Ministry have led to a general rupture. On Thursday all the Ministers gave in their resignations, and the king accepted of them all, with the exception of that of the Duke of Richelieu, who immediately formed a new Ministry, composed as follows:—M. Cuvier, (the great naturalist, who was lately in England,) the new Minister of the Interior; M. Mollien, formerly Minister of the Treasury during the reign of Bonaparte, a place which he held even during the hundred days.) Minister of Finance; M. Simeon, (Member of the Chamber of Deputies, who had been counsellor of State under Bonaparte, and Minister of Justice in the kingdom of Westphalia.) Minister of Justice: M. de Vibele (Member of the Chamber of Deputies.) Minister of Marine; and Count Law de Lauriston, Peer of France, Aide-de-Camp of Bonaparte, and his Ambassador at the Court of Peter lately during the years 1811 & 1812.) Minister of War.

According to this new arrangement, the ministry of police was to have been suppressed. Yesterday, by 5 o'clock in the afternoon, all these gentlemen had declined the places tendered them, with the exception of M. Cuvier. MM. Mollien & Simeon refused office, from a fear that they might be required to give their sanction to measures which they regard as anti-national; and MM. de Vibele, & Lauriston (two Ultras) declined to act, unless a pledge were given by their colleagues, that they would support such modifications of the laws of electors & recruiting as would render them more monarchical.

Dec. 26. (Afternoon.)

The crisis of the Ministry has as yet had no influence on the public funds. To day, at the Exchange, the five per Cents. are 62f. 65c.—Nothing is as yet decided regarding a new Ministry. The Duke of Richelieu is in negociation with M. Laine, to induce him to remain in the Ministry with M. de Villele, and to prevail upon him to accept of the department of Marine. In this case the Ultras would triumph, and M. de Cazes would lose his influence. I cannot give credit to this theory.

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 1.

An express which left Paris on Monday night, states, that the new Ministers had been appointed under the direction of the Duke of Richelieu. M. de St. Cyr is to be at the head of the new cabinet, and Minister for the War Department. It is reported that Drouet was to be made Minister of the Marine.

The French funds rose, and the 5 per cents left off at the close, on Monday, as high as 66.

Stocks.—The news from France, respecting the completion of the Cabinet has a favorable effect upon our funds to-day.

FROM OUR BALTIMORE CORRESPONDENT.

"Extract of a letter, dated Aux Cayes, Jan. 26.

"Gen. Gregor M'Gregor has just arrived here with an armed ship and brig, he expects hourly from London ten other vessels which sailed in company with him—the object of his visit is not known.

"In conversation with one of the principal officers this day he told me, he expected there would be from two to four thousand troops on board the shipping, and they should immediately, on the arrival of the remainder of the squadron, make an attack on some of the principal towns or cities on the coast of South America."

In relation to the force under the command of Sir G. M'Gregor the Charleston Gazette of the 22d ult. contains the following information:—

"A gentleman who arrived from Aux-Cayes, on Saturday last, in the schr. May Flower, informs us, that Gen. Sir Gregor Mac Gregor was at that place on the 21st January, when he sailed. He had arrived some time previous from Nassau, and had established his rendezvous at Aux-Cayes, where he had 1000 of the finest troops in the world, part of them encamped on shore. A sloop of war and a large transport ship were lying at anchor—During our informant's stay, a brig arrived with troops, said to be from Greenock. A large ship was also daily expected from the same place, with 300 more. The expedition waiting for further reinforcements, which, when all concentrated, would amount 5000 men. Their precise destination was not publicly known."

Melancholy and Singular event.—After narrating the military parades, &c. at Richmond, Va. in honor of the 22d of February, the Compiler adds:—

A most melancholy catastrophe closed the day. Col. William Tatham, so well known in England and this country, for his acquaintance with civil engineering, who has been residing in this city for two or three years, but whose utility was considerably arrested by an unfortunate habit to which he had become addicted, was destined on this day to breath his last. In a moment of intemperance, as he stood by the piece of artillery which was firing the evening salute, he exclaimed that he wished to die. As the second gun was about to fire, and immediately after the commanding officer had given the word "fire," Col. Tatham presented himself in front of the muzzle of the piece, and by its discharge his abdomen was almost literally blown to pieces. His body was raised a few feet in the air by the explosion, and he fell upon his face, without uttering one word that was heard by the by-standers. When he was taken up, he was found perfectly lifeless.

Col. T. died without any family—circumstances had strip life of much of its attractions in his eyes; but it is impossible not to regard the manner of his death with horror, and to feel the deepest commiseration of his melancholy fate. He was a man of great information; of great genius; of great resources of mind. But to this melancholy end he has arrived.

The batture at New-Orleans.—The following extract of a letter from New-Orleans has just reached town:—

"This morning the supreme court gave a decision in favor of Benjamin Morgan, vs. Edward Livingston, in the great cause of the batture, which has been so long depending. By this decision, property to the amount of a million and a half of dollars at least, has been restored to the rightful owners. Nothing that ever happened in this place, of a similar nature, has caused equal sensation."—Eve. Post.

"GIBRALTAR, Jan. 6th, 1819.

"The only news I have to give you is, the death of the Queen of Spain, (of transient memory) last week, in childbed. It being absolutely necessary to extract the fœtus, she expired in convulsions, twenty minutes after that operation was performed. A pretty general rumour is in circulation that she was poisoned; but why she should have been the victim of secret resentment, is not stated; and as the King has certainly removed to the Escurial since the demise of his Consort, it has been whispered in no very low tone, that the germs of revolt have become so apparent as to render some preparation for his safety a matter of necessary precaution. There are some more charitable, however, who say, that the King has absented himself from his court, only from a pious inclination to brood over his grief in tranquility. But nothing authentic can be known about it, and a rupture outright will perhaps take place before it is known beyond the vicinity of the Capital. Certain it is that the sufferings of the Spanish people have reached that climax when "forbearance ceases to be a virtue:" and they are fully sensible of it. An uncommonly intelligent Spaniard with whom I have conversed, states, that the people is now ready for the worst, and must ere long give a loose to their indignation. It would be needless to give you all the arguments which he urges in support of his opinion—many of them will be found in the black catalogue of wrongs which have oppressed the nation ever since the king's return to the throne.

Observations on Improved Implements of Husbandry concluded.

The chaff-cutting machine; an implement of great use, and ought to form an item in every farmer's catalogue of farming utensils. Also, Zachariah Park's bark mill, for grinding horse feed, hog's feed, &c. would be found of inestimable utility, in the economical consumption of those articles; and their superior nutritive effect; which, ultimately, would amply reimburse their cost. Mr. Thomas Rustall's family mill, for the invention of which he obtained the premium of forty guineas from the society of arts & commerce, London, may be constructed at a moderate expense, and occupies a small space. It can be worked in a barn or in a dwelling-house, without much inconvenience. The mill stones are vertical, consequently, motion can be given to it without the intervention of cogs or wheels: it will grind malt, or bruise oats, &c. for horse feed, or make flour, &c. for family use; can be altered to grind fine or coarse, as may be required. It may be worked by one man, or two men in one hour can grind sufficient to serve a family of six or eight persons one week. The utility of this mill has been established by repeated and satisfactory experiments. The boiler, a necessary appendage to the above mill, by which the brass can be separated from the flour without losing any of the fine particle) by hand. The introduction & general use of these machines, would be of incalculable private & public benefit.

Winnowing machine or fanning mill. Improvements are much wanted in this most useful implement. The magnitude of interests concerned, in cleaning and purifying our grain, wheat in particular, as—open to the character of the flour of this state, in foreign markets; and in the wholesome nutriment of flour and meal for home consumption; and lastly, in the immense benefit to those immediately interested—the farmers—in sowing and clean pure seed, is incalculable. The machine exhibited at the capitol, by the society, appears to me calculated to remedy these defects.

ent, from the description of it in the agricultural magazine for 1802, from the transactions of the Rotterdam society, vol. 2d. it appears calculated to do a considerable quantity of work in a short space of time; and at a time also, when labour is generally high :—and as it is said, that one person may spread the hay from the swath of three acres in one hour,—having a horse to drag the harrow; it must be an excellent addition to our means of securing hay in changeable weather. "This harrow is made of wood, nine feet broad by four feet four inches long. The upper and under rails are two or three inches square, and nine feet long, fastened together with three pieces, five inches broad, one inch & a quarter thick, & four feet four inches long, one in the middle, and one at each side, ten inches from the ends of the rails. To give this machine more strength, there must be two diagonal braces. In each of the rails, must be five teeth of six inches long in the clear, and three quarters of an inch in diameter, and sloping outwards to the rear; for if they slope forward, or are upright, they will cluster the grass too much in heaps. If the teeth are made of iron, they may be a little smaller; however, this depends on fancy; but care ought to be taken to make the harrow light enough, least it should sink through the grass or hay into the ground." It may be necessary to employ a man, besides a boy to ride the horse, when the harrow is at work, to go behind & guide it by a cord fastened to the hind rail, to prevent its heaping the grass too much; & also a hand to follow, and shake out any that may happen to be laid too thick or in heaps. To the above, may be added a large horse rake, with smaller tines, and set more close, in double or triplicate rows; —these two implements, with two men, a boy & a horse, may do the work of fifteen or twenty men. The value of these tools will appear in a stronger point of view, to those who are accustomed to make hay, particularly in wet or showery weather,—when a thunder storm will sometimes rob the grass, of several acres at once, of its nutritive qualities, and render it not more than one third or one fourth of its former value. It is a matter, occasionally, of very serious consideration with the farmer, and indeed the public also; for it is a well established axiom, that all private losses are public misfortunes.

I shall now, gentlemen, close this communication, and in my next, give you a succinct history, and description of the threshing mill and its improvements; together with further details of a few other implements of less importance. If my endeavors to assist in introducing the improved implements and machinery into the general agricultural practice, should prove beneficial, it will afford me incomparable satisfaction; for it is on the introduction & use of those implements; and on the establishment of an improved rotation of crops, together with the general emancipation from the shackles of agricultural prejudices, that our true greatness depends.

I am, gentlemen, with the greatest respect yours, &c. &c.

From Rio Janeiro.—Capt. Reardon, of the Brig Spy, who arrived at Baltimore on Sunday evening, states, that accounts were received over land from Vaiparaiso, that the Spanish expedition some time expected, on making their appearance, were decoyed into the port by keeping the royal flag flying on the fortifications in possession of the patriots; they consisted of one 50 gun ship, two sloops of war & seven transports, with a number of troops, all of whom fell an easy prey to the Patriots.

It was understood (at Rio, that the whole country surrounding Monte Video, was in possession of General Artigas.

RICHMOND, Feb. 20.

Singular Snow.—Between one & two o'clock yesterday, we witnessed in this city the most singular flakes of snow which we recollect ever to have beheld. They were of astonishing size, and looked like small snow-balls falling from the clouds. Some of them measured an inch & a half in diameter. The substance of them was uncommonly light—their chrystallization, very delicate—exhibiting a collection of the finest needles, lying together in every direction.

DIED.—Near Milton, Penn. on Tuesday morning, the 12th Jan. aged 97 years & some months, Mrs. Maria Eve Keffer, widow of the late Martin Keffer, who died at the advanced age of 98 years & 10 months, and daughter of Mr. Morris Lawrence, who departed this life on the 14th June, 1792, aged 109 years, 6 months & 3 weeks. She has two brothers yet living, one of whom is only 2 years & 6 months younger than herself. Mrs. Keffer was the mother of 12 children, 9 of whom where married, and 7 of them yet living. The present united ages of these children amount to 730 years. Her youngest children are upwards of 45 & 59 years of age, each of whom had 11 children—50 of them now living. Mrs. Keffer is the mother of 83 grand children, 75 of whom are living—30 of them have been married, and 27 yet survive.—She is also mother of 135 great great grand children, 114 yet living. She has one great grand child married, who has two children.

Extract from the speech of the Earl of Dalhousie, Lieut. Governor of Nova Scotia, to the legislature of that province, Feb. 1819.

"I shall call your attention to a measure tending to animate the spirit of improvement in agriculture; and I will submit to you the plan of an institution in Halifax, in which the advantages of a collegiate education will be opened to all sects of religious persuasion."

"Nova Scotia, resting secure under the powerful protection of the British crown, has nothing to do with foreign connections, or political questions; the prosperity, the improvement, the happiness of the land you live in, are the important, and the only objects of your deliberation."

Extract of a letter from Thomas Gold, Esq. late president of the Yorkshire agricultural society to a gentleman in this city.

PITTSFIELD, 1st March, 1816.

It is with great pleasure I inform you, that our legislature has recently passed an act for the permanent encouragement of our Agricultural & household manufactures. This pleasing event is deeply connected with the welfare & future destinies of this state.

The provisions of the act are—

1. All county agricultural societies who shall establish a permanent fund of thousand dollars, shall receive from the state treasury two hundred dollars a year.

2. Every incorporated company which shall raise from one to six hundred dollars yearly, shall receive an equal sum —not exceeding, however, 600 dollars in all. The plain amount of the law is, that every incorporated agricultural society in this state will have it in their power to draw from the state treasury yearly, the sum of $200, for the important purposes of improving our agriculture & extending our domestic manufactures, which is now admitted by the experience of this county, to be the best course to relieve the community by degrees, and permanently, from the present distress.

I sincerely hope this great example & these evidences of general utility, may impress your patriotic legislature, to erect another monument to perpetuate the glory your state has acquired.

The example of this favored country has produced a new era in our state, especially in the province of Maine. Agricultural societies are forming in all directions, and we now begin to hope & believe that our young men will find sufficient inducements to cultivate their native soil, upon the new system of agriculture, instead of emigrating to new countries.

Yours, &c.

Canal from the Spanish Maine to the Pacific Ocean.

The following preamble & resolutions we copy from the Columbus (Ohio) Gazette, of the 4th Feb.

Mr. Foot, in the senate, offered for consideration, on Tuesday last, the following preamble & resolutions;

Whereas, it would be of the greatest importance in a commercial point of view, to every part of the United States, & especially to the states & territories bordering on the Mississipii, and the waters leading thereinto, that an easy & direct communication should, if practicable, be opened across the narrow part of the American continent, from the Spanish Maine to the Pacific Ocean, for the following reasons, to wit:

First, the long & dangerous passage round Cape Horn could be avoided. The distance to the North West Coast & the East Indies, would be shortened of nine thousand mile, calculating from the 12th degree of north latitude (the point thought to be the most practicable) to the 55th south latitude, the places of doubling Cape Horn, then returning north in the Pacific to the aforesaid latitude of 12 north.

Secondly. It affords an easy & short communication with that part of the North West Coast claimed by the United States. It would completely lay open to the use & control of our government, the whale & seal fisheries in those seas, and the fur trade on that coast, with the facility of planting & protecting commercial colonies in those immense & fertile regions of the west.—The American empire, and the commercial enterprize of a free people, could & would be extended as circumstances might require. Our fellow-citizens would be enabled to participate deeply in the rich traffic of the East Indies, especially as that trade could then be carried on by the whale, seal, & furs found on the North West Coast, thereby saving our specie from continual exportations to a quarter of the world that has heretofore swallowed up the precious metals of every age & nation.

Thirdly. That great advantages resulting to the several states and territories in the completion of this project, would be the possession of the canal to the mouth of the Mississipii, and the facility of ascending that noble stream and its great navigable branches with steam boats to our doors. In this event New Orleans or some point lower down, would become one of the greatest commercial depots in the world, and secure to the people of the western country, a sure & lasting market for their exports: Therefore,

Resolved, by the general assembly of the state of Ohio, that our senators and representatives in congress, be requested to make application to and use their best endeavors with the general government, to apply to the court of Madrid for the privilege of examining the ground, and opening a canal for the passage of large vessels, from the Spanish maine, across the portlinock to lake Nicaragua, or such other point in that quarter as may be found most practicable.

Resolved, That his excellency the governor of this state be requested to transmit copies of this preamble and resolution to the president of the United States, the vice president, the speaker of the house of representatives, and to each of our senators and representatives in congress, and also to the executives of the different states and territories, with a request to lay the same before the legislative bodies over which they preside.

From Lower Canada.

The following Message from his Grace the Governor in Chief, was transmitted to both Houses of the Legislature on Friday last:

RICHMOND, LENNOX AND AUBIGNY,

Governor in Chief.

Experience having demonstrated, that the provisions contained in the Provincial Statute, passed in the 34th Year of His Majesty's Reign, for amending the Judicature of the Province, have not produced the effects for which they were intended, and that the constitutions of the several Courts thereby erected, are not calculated to produce uniformity or certainty in the administration of Justice, either in Criminal or Civil Cases. The Governor in Chief deems it indispensably necessary to recommend this important subject to the consideration of the House of Assembly.

The Governor in Chief takes this opportunity to inform the House of Assembly, that in the execution of the Provincial Statute to which he has referred, its defects have been found to consist principally in the want of one superior & and permanent tribunal, as well for the administration of Justice in appeal in all Civil pleas, as for the administration of Justice in all pleas of the Crown, by an original Jurisdiction, co-extensive with the limits of the Province; and in a matter which appertains so immediately to the Royal prerogative, he cannot therefore but recommend to the House of Assembly, in revising the constitutions of the Courts of this Province, to consider whether it will not be most expedient to constitute one superior Court of King's Bench, with power to hear, try and determine all cases, matters and things appealed, or removed by Writ of error, from any Court of Jurisdiction, holding cognizance of Civil pleas, wherein an appeal or Writ of error by Law is or may be allowed; and to hear, try and determine originally all crimes and criminal offences committed within this Province; vesting for these purposes such superior Court of King's Bench, all and every the powers and authorities which are vested in the present Court of Appeals, and in the existing Court of King's Bench, particularly as to crimes and criminal offences; so much of such powers and authorities as relate to the original jurisdiction of such existing Court of King's Bench in Civil Pleas and in other matters purely Civil, being alone excepted. To constitute also one Court of Common or Civil Pleas, to sit by divisions in the several Districts of this Province, or to constitute several distinct Courts of Common or Civil pleas in such Districts respectively as may be deemed most advisable, vesting in such Court or Courts of Common or Civil Pleas, all and every the powers and authorities which are now by Law vested in the present Courts of King's Bench, and relate to the original jurisdiction of such Courts or either of them in Civil Pleas and matters purely Civil; and in such Courts of King's Bench and Courts of common or Civil Pleas concurrently and in the Justices thereof, severally & respectively, power and authority to award issue and determine upon the Writ of Habeas Corpus as well in Criminal as in all other cases, for the better security and protection of the liberty of His Majesty's subjects in general; but at the same time vesting all jurisdiction & authority whatever to award, issue and determine upon the remaining prerogative Writs of the Crown and the general superintending powers of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench of Westminster Hall, in such Court of King's Bench exclusively.

It appears also to the Governor in Chief that some effectual Jurisdiction is required to meet the growing exigencies of the Public Revenue, and ensure its regular collection, and he therefore desires the House of Assembly to consider whether it may not be expedient to vest in the Court of King's Bench an original Jurisdiction of His Majesty's Court of Exchequer in England as the circumstances of the Province may permit.

EXTENSIVE POTATOE CROP.

Mr. DANIEL MANSEL, of the Township of Stanstead, last year planted 30 acres of Potatoes, from which he reaped 13000 bushels; averaging 300 bushels per acre, of this very valuable vegetable. We cheerfully notice this, or any article of this description, in our columns, as tending to show in the most unequivocal view, the encreasing prosperity of our country. Although the above quantity, gathered from each acre, is perhaps not so great as has occurred in many other instances, we believe, the extent of ground under crop, and the amount of the whole produce, has never been exceeded and seldom equalled, in this country before. During the present season, the price of Potatoes has been so low that many are of opinion, they will not pay the farmer's expense for raising them. It ought to be observed, that the expense of rearing potatoes, if properly done, is less than that of almost any other crop. The ground requires little or no preparation, for the reception of the seed. Manure is not required, on our rich soil for grain crops, and far less for Potatoes. Hence, the chief expense in cultivating these, is the labour expended, in hoeing and raising them. The first of these cannot be a very arduous task, where we have but few ground weeds; and as the price of labour is now falling, a few labourers to assist in reaping the crop, could easily be procured, which will lessen the expense of the latter. If Potatoes sell at 1s 3d. per bushel, Mr. D. M. would at this rate receive £18 15 for the produce of one acre; or £937 10s. for the whole quantity raised. And if we allow £2 15 for the expense of seed, cultivation and raising the crop on each acre, we shall have a clear gain of £16, per acre, £800 for the whole produce of 50 acres. But there are superior advantages arising from the cultivation of this valuable root, over that of any other species of grain. Besides their being reared at less expense, they are applicable to different purposes. Since the superabundance of the crop, and the market and demand for them, as an article of food for man, they can be employed with advantage and profit for fattening Cattle: with Beef, at £1 10, per Cwt. and pork, at £2 per Cwt: Potatoes when they can be had at 10d per bushel, is the cheapest food that can be used for feeding Cattle and Pigs. It is also well known that they are an excellent substitute for grain, for the purpose of feeding work horses. And the farmer will find it to his advantage, to use potatoes in this way whenever he can sell his oats at 1s 6d, per bushel.—Montreal Herald.

COMMUNICATION.

SIR,

I am happy to see you are not ashamed to comment the columns of your paper, with communications which bear the real impress of Christianity; and I would fain persuade your correspondent to continue his labours. But I own a little inclined to quarrel with you for allotting the worst type to the most interesting matter.

The greatest impiety I have witnessed, in any modern publication, with the exception of those of the French revolutionists, appears in the Niagara Spectator of the 18th inst. with a name affixed, and in a good sized type; by this defiance to decency, and bidding every person who has the slightest veneration for our holy religion

MARCH, 22. T. J.

"And I will cause you to pass under the Rod, and I will bring you into the bond of the Covenant." Ezek. XX. 37.

In this passage, the word Rod seems to have reference to a Tything or Marking Rod, an account of which we have in Leviticus XXVII. 32, and Jer. XXXIII. 13. The Lord hadens acted a law, that every tenth lamb should be His; and the manner of taking it, was this: The lambs were enclosed in a place, which had a door wide enough for one lamb only, at a time, to pass through; the dams were placed without. At this door stood the tything man with a Rod dipped in red liquid, to mark them. As the lambs passed, he counted them: on every tenth, he laid his Rod; and these were set aside from the rest, as being holy to the Lord. All the lambs passed under the Rod, but it was only laid upon every tenth. This was a personal application of it. Many are brought under the Gospel, but how few have a personal application of it to their heart and conscience? Yet, all that are saved, all that the Lord will own as His, must experience this application. It is not enough that they come under the Gospel call—that word which invites sinners to come unto Jesus Christ, and live—that exhorts men to repentance towards God and to faith in Jesus; that word in the hand of the Spirit must be applied to the conscience, must address itself to the sinner, as Nathan did to David, "Thou art the man." Then, and not till then, will the sinner see himself condemned, and feel the necessity of not only knowing that Christ is a Saviour, but that Christ is his, and that his sins are pardoned by the Saviour's blood. When the thief applied to Jesus, it was "Lord remember me." When the jailer passed under the Rod, it was "What shall I do to be saved?"

COMMUNICATION.

On the 22d inst. Lady Sarah Maitland, Patroness of Mr. Goodman's School, Mrs. Justice Powell, and many of the principal Ladies and Gentlemen of York, assisted at the public examination of the Young Ladies.

The company was very much gratified with the progress made by the scholars, as it not only proved their attention to their studies, but reflected the greatest credit on the diligence and ability of their several Teachers.

The advantages which York possesses, in having a Seminary for Young Ladies, conducted by Gentlewomen of so great worth and respectability as Mrs. Goodman, Miss Purcell, & Miss Desbarats, cannot be too highly appreciated.

The Church Catech

Besides the additional cost of the foregoing contingencies, we have, in several instances, by enlarging the plans upon which our original estimates were formed, or by procuring more durable and better materials, for their construction, contributed to swell the expense of our operations; yet we are firmly persuaded, that the savings we have made, and the economy we have pursued, will enable us to complete the middle section at an amount not exceeding the sum total of those estimates. The better to justify this persuasion, in the minds of your honorable body, we beg leave to refer to the detailed statements, hereto annexed, exhibiting the names of the contractors, the nature of their contracts, the progress made in executing them, & the amount of payments upon them, together with a variety of other particulars tending to explain the true condition of the work confided to our management.

While the labours of this great section have been thus going on, the following system has been adopted, to instruct, to inspect, to advise, and to aid the contractors. The whole line has been subdivided into five parts, to each of which has been assigned an intelligent, active and vigilant overseer, or assistant engineer, who had previously learnt the use of the levelling instrument; an accurate method of designating the dimensions of the canal, upon every variety of surface; the general principles necessary to ensure the best construction; and the nature of the stipulations contained in the several contracts. These assistants have been constantly passing backwards and forwards, within the limits assigned them; to stake out the width of the grubbing and clearing, of the excavation or embankment, and of the mucking from under the banks; to fix pegs in the earth, shewing the depth and width of the bottom of the canal, and the height and slope of its banks; to watch that no work should be done unfaithfully; and to take account of, and measure, all unforeseen obstructions.

The original selection of these assistants was in most cases fortunate; and where it was otherwise, the delinquent was soon detected and removed. Two of these assistants, Canvass White and Nathan S. Roberts, having had more extensive experience to qualify them for it, besides the services above indicated, have been employed in others of a highly responsible character.

Mr. White has run a test-level throughout the long summit, which became necessary in order to correct some errors into which the work was falling, between Rome & Utica. He aided essentially in performing the surveys, on the authority of which, the alteration was made in the town of Camillus; he has scientifically examined two routes, upon different levels, for the distance of several miles down the Mohawk river, for the purpose of enabling the commissioners to determine, more judiciously, the location of the canal-line through the village of Utica; and he has recently, in the months of November and December, explored, with the level and compass, more than thirty miles of the country, in the marshes, swamps and woods adjoining the Seneca river, on the west. This last service was undertaken with alacrity, and executed with skill and perseverance, at the request of the acting commissioners, who, though the weather had become severe, were very anxious, while the waters were low, to obtain all the information required, in order to the proper connexion of the line with the Seneca river, on the east, which could not be ascertained without first knowing the proper continuation of it, from that point westerly, whenever that shall be authorised. Of these services accurate and full returns have been made, in descriptions, maps and profiles.—And the commissioners were most agreeably disappointed, on inspecting them, as well as on personal examination upon the spot, by two of their number in company with the principal engineer, to find, that the Cayuga marshes, and the swamps beyond, will admit the canal to be constructed through them at less than the average rate of expense.

Mr. Roberts had been employed, as surveyor, throughout the middle section, in the year 1816; and understanding the difficulties and facilities of the line then run, he has, the last year, conducted the operation of the levelling, & designating the canal line, as it is actually established, most of the way from Salina to the Seneca river. And with the aid of the principal engineer, who often visited, communicated with and advised him, especially at all the important points, the line is laid out in the manner & direction first approved.

The department of principal engineer, for the middle section, is still filled by Benjamin Wright, Esq. to whom all the assistants are subordinate and accountable; and who, besides directing the whole line as often as possible, has devoted his time, to a minute examination of all the most difficult places; to contriving modes and giving direct ons best adapted for subduing these difficulties; to forming plans, and executing drafts, of all the more artificial works; to computing, from time to time, as Jobs have been successively completed, the number of cubic yards of excavation & embankment performed upon them; and to estimating, determining and certifying the value of extra labor, of every species, necessarily done upon any of the sections. These duties have expanded into an immense multiplicity of detail: They have been delicate, arduous and fatiguing: But they have been discharged by Mr. Wright with such practical knowledge, industry, equity and discretion, as to deserve the praise of the state, while they have produced no complaint from the contractors.

Several other agents have been appointed, for the transaction of business, which could not safely or conveniently have been done without them.

One has had the care of making and using machines for piling, and of digging out & preparing the foundations of the stone culverts and aqueducts. This last being a business so liable to contingencies, & so necessary to be conducted with a faithful adaptation to circumstances, which could not be known until it was in progress, that it was thought unsafe to have it done by contract.

Another has been employed in making a large number of agreements, for piles, for timber, for plank, for sand, for lime, and for fencing the canal; and in obtaining cessions to the state of the lands through which it passes.

Another was charged to explore the country within a reasonable distance of the canal, for stone, previously to any undertaking, for the delivery of that article, in order that we might surely understand where the best quarries were situated, and also be able to purchase the stone without being subject to exorbitant demands.

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, Jan. 23.

A young man of respectable connections, confidential clerk to a merchant in Manchester, eloped on Monday morning, with cash, notes, bills, &c. to the amount, as stated, of £10,000. He was soon missed, and his master learning that he had gone by the coach to Liverpool, proceeded thither with all possible despatch. Having learnt that the delinquent was at the Crown Inn, he procured the assistance of a constable, and proceeded to his bed-room, took him into custody as he was dressing himself. He was taken before a magistrate, who committed him to the town prison, from whence he was transferred to Manchester by the mail-coach. It seems the delinquent intended to embark for America.

Jan. 26.

On Monday the 11th Jan. a fine American vessel, the Kitty, of Norfolk, about 300 tons burden, was driven on shore at Abereatte, near Fishguard; her cargo, consisting of tobacco, is strewed for miles, and the vessel a most complete wreck; the crew having deserted her, and taken all papers out of her, it is not known where she was bound; the pieces of the vessel are collecting under the superintendence of three persons; one of whom lays claim as agent for the droits of the admiralty, the other as agent to Lloyd's, and the third as agent for the manorial rights. In this state the matter rests until something is settled; at all events, they serve to keep each other honest, and combine to prevent pilfering. The cargo lies in large heaps, and has the appearance of sea-weeds; being sodden with salt-water, it is completely useless, supposed it was in hogsheads, but not one is to be seen. The water within 200 yards is quite discoloured, and a great number of fish floating in, poisoned with tobacco juice.

From the London Courier, Jan. 21.

A private letter from Paris says—"Pamphlets redouble their violence in proportion as the attempts of faction become more hopeless. Two numbers of a work entitled the Ami de la Royaute have been published, in which an appeal is made to the most ungovernable passions. The prospectus of the Drapeau blanc has also been distributed. A scene took place the day before yesterday which seems to be the forerunner of some design. Colonel Farvier was met on the Place du Carousel by a man who insulted and followed him into the hotel of one of the Ministers with the most abusive threats. When inquires were made about this person it was found that his lodgings had been paid for by a well known person only the night before. What are we to think of these facts? However, they are sufficient to put Government on their guard? and they are no longer dangerous from the moment the authors become known.

"The Bankruptcies declared a short time ago have a less alarming character. This crisis will however be a warning to merchants not to give into imprudent speculations in the Funds. During his Ministry, M. Covetto had lent the Agents of Exchange about 44 millions to support them in the late fall of the funds. The new Minister has, it is said, given the debtors a year to repay that sum, from month to month, so as not to occasion the ruin of any one."

Madame Catalani is said to have been early distinguished for her musical talents, for the clearness and compass of her voice. At the age of eight years she was placed in the convent Della Visitazione, at Sinigaglia, in the Roman state. She there was in the habit of singing in the choir with her young companions. The concert in which her voice was mingled, soon attracted to the convent crowds of Dilettanti, whose raptures could not be restrained within the bounds of the due decorum, but expressed themselves in profane plaudits, unsuited to the sacred nature of the place. The Cardinal, informed of this scandal prohibited the young artiste from joining any more in the musical exercise of the church; and thus compelled her to leave the cloister for the world & the stage.

The late Mrs. Brunton.—It is with deep concern that we announce the death of a female novelist, whose pen was consecrated to the interests of religion and virtue. The Author of Self Control & Discipline has prematurely terminated her honorable career, in the flower of life. Mrs. Brunton was a native of North Britain. Her childhood was chiefly spent in the Highlands; and it is not improbable that these early habits of seclusion conspired with native enthusiasm to give her character that romantic bias, which is in general unfavorable to the tranquility of its possessor. It is impossible without feelings of tender commiseration, to advert to Mrs. Brunton's death; she expired shortly after having given birth to a lifeless infant, the sole offspring of that harmonious conjugal union, which, during 20 years, had been crowned with a more than ordinary portion of human felicity.

As another instance of the effects of the late mild weather. A Correspondent mentions, that Mr. Blaker, carpenter, of Broadwater, near Worthing, having one day during the last week, occasion to use a small earthen vessel, that had for some time stood in his work shop, he found it to have been taken possession by a robin, and in which the little warbler had built her nest, and was at the time above mentioned actually hatching on five eggs.

From the London Morning Post January 15th.

The publication of the official documents recording the proceedings which led to the execution of our two fellow-subjects, Mr. Arbuthnot, and Mr. Ambrister, by the orders of the American commander, Jackson, has excited the utmost astonishment and indignation throughout the whole country. The case has turned out to be one of much greater atrocity; more shocking by the monstrous mockery of justice, and the barbarous cruelty which it displays than any thing that had been conceived by those who, from the first imperfect accounts, had formed the worst opinion of the conduct of the Americans implicated in this transaction. For our own part we confess, that without entertaining any very high opinion of the justice or humanity of those who sat in judgment upon these our two countrymen, yet being a thing done in the face of day, and with something at least like the forms of a legal act, we certainly thought that when the documents were produced it would turn out, that the sentence of death which was executed, if not fully deserved, was at the least awarded according to the strict and stern interpretation of the law. But now the case appears to be far otherwise. On the face of these documents there is proof, that the execution of Mr. Arbuthnot and Mr. Ambrister was a most inhuman murder. The facts cannot be explained away. We have considered the subject with feelings subdued from the first burst of indignation, which the perusal of these terrible documents excited. We have read them again and again, carefully dwelling upon every circumstance which in any degree could be made to aggravate the case of these two unhappy men. But the more we contemplate the case, the more atrocious does it seem against those Americans who are implicated. It is not a thing to be lightly talked of—it is no case for a hasty opinion. With this impression it is, that we have abstained from expressing any decided opinion, till we had thoroughly examined the subject. We were anxious, too, that so far as any question of law is involved, we should have an opportunity of ascertaining whether these could justify the proceedings, or even make their injustice doubtful. The whole trial and condemnation are as abhorrent to the principles of international & even martial laws, as they are shocking to humanity.

Let us only consider the charges on which the trials took place—the proof adduced to substantiate those charges—the decision of the court martial—and, lastly, the order for execution issued by general Jackson. Against Mr. Arbuthnot three charges were exhibited; the first was that he stirred up the Creek Indians to make war against the Americans, he being a subject of G. Britain, a country at peace with the U. States; the 2d charge was that of acting as a spy, aiding and abetting the enemy, and supplying them with ammunition; the 3d charge was, that he caused two American citizens to be arrested, and incited the Indians to murder them. As to the proof of these charges, there was not one atom of legal proof, admitting the credibility of witnesses; not one atom of reasonable proof, considering the character of the principal witness, and that the main charge was supported merely on hearsay evidence as to the contents of a letter. As to the sentence of the court, even on the evidence which they admitted, they acquitted him of the only material charge, namely, that of acting as a spy, and finding him guilty of the rest, condemned him to death! But do we talk of witness?—Do we talk of sentence of death? What was the crime? Take away the charge of acting as a spy, and what remains as a charge on which to try a British subject? And is it an American tribunal that sets the example of condemning to death the subjects of a neutral state, that sells to their enemies the munitions of war? Is it an American tribunal, that sets the example of hanging the subjects of a neutral state for inciting to a war? Are these the acts of the authorised agents of that country, one half of whose citizens were engaged in such acts against this country during our late war with revolutionary France! And what was this war to which Mr. Arbuthnot is accused of inciting the Creek Indians? Not a war of aggression—not a war of robbery and spoliation—but a war to resist aggression; a war to use the language of the Indian chiefs against the United States, whose citizens "murder our red brethren—steal our cattle by hundreds at a time—daily encroach upon our lands—and maintain the settlers in their ill-gotten possessions by an armed force!"

As to the case of Mr. Ambrister, he was accused of taking an active part in the war—a proceeding justified by universal practice in modern times. But for this, our countryman has been put to death in cold blood by the American general Jackson. The court-martial pronounced as their final sentence, that Mr. Ambrister should receive fifty lashes, and be confined 1 hard labor for 12 months. This sentence, gen. Jackson not only does not confirm, but substitutes one of his own, ordering the punishment of death, which was inflicted accordingly. Weary this latter sentence was that of Gen Jackson, and not of the court—for though the court did, in the first instance, award the punishment of death, yet they immediately desired leave to re-consider their sentence, and leave they obtained. They did re-consider it before their first sentence had been recorded, and their final sentence was for the punishment of flogging and temporary imprisonment.

Such are the main features of these most barbarous deeds. They have not their parallel in the history of any civilized country; and we are happy to observe, that even throughout the United States, the general disclosure of the real facts has excited a feeling of horror and indignation against gen. Jackson & the other individuals implicated in the murderous transaction. The British government, as we have already stated, have paid due attention to the subject, and we have reason to believe that the American government view the horrid business in its true light. The whole of the documents have been submitted to congress; and we have no doubt that a due sense of such gross violation of the law of nations and the dictates of humanity, will be shown by a prompt and ample infliction of that punishment on the guilty persons, which is regard to their own character, and the true interests of their country, so imperiously demands.

Progress of a pound of cotton.—The following account of one pound of manufactured cotton will shew the importance of the trade to the country, in a very conspicuous manner. There was sent off for London lately, from Paisly, a small piece of muslin, about one pound weight, the history of which is as follows: The cotton came from the East Indies to London; from London it went into Lancashire, where it was manufactured into yarn; from Manchester it was sent to Paisly, where it was tamboured; afterwards it was conveyed to Dumbarton, when it was hand sewed, and again returned to Paisly, when it was sent to a distant part of the county of Renfrew, to be bleached, and was returned to Paisly; then sent to Glasgow, and was finished; and from Glasgow was sent, per coach, to London. It is difficult precisely to ascertain the time taken to bring this article to market; but it may be pretty near the truth to reckon it 3 years from the time it was packed in India, till in cloth it arrived at the merchant's ware-house in London, whither it must have been conveyed 15,000 miles by sea, 920 by land, and contributed to employ no less than 150 people, whose services were necessary in the carriage and manufacture of this small quantity of cotton, and by which the value has been advanced 2000 per cent. What is said of this piece, is descriptive o[illegible]ncounterable part of that trade.

A chemist of Copenhagen has discovered a means of producing a lively yellow color for dying cloth. He gathers the tops of potatoes when ready to flower, presses the juice, mixes it with more or less water, and suffers the cloth to remain in it during 24 hours. He then dips it in spring water. The cloth may be either of wool, silk, cotton or flax. By plunging the cloth thus dinged with yellow into a vessel of blue, a brilliant and lasting green is obtained.

NORTHERN EXPEDITION.

The discovery of a New Colony on the Northern Shores of Baffin's Bay has given rise to a variety of speculative opinions.

The information we shall obtain from the Work which is promised us from the pen of Capt. Ross, will be most important. In the mean time, a few observations founded upon a conversation with several of the persons who accompanied the Expedition, may not be unintresting.

It is quite clear, that upon a part of the Northern Coast of the Bay, which there was no previous reason to suppose was inhabited, seven or eight persons were seen and conversed with. The intercourse was carried on through the medium of John Sackheouse, an Esquimaux, who accompanied the ships through the whole of the voyage.

This John Sackheouse is described, by all the persons on board, to have proved himself, during the voyage, an enterprising & intelligent young man.

His own history is eventful, having been found far at sea, in his canoe, driven by the wind, and unless he had providentially been picked up by one of our ships, he must have perished.

We have seen some of the pictures drawn by Sackheouse, as representations of his first interview with these newly discovered inhabitants of the Northern Regions, and they describe, perhaps better than he could in words, the meeting as it took place.

The natives are shown in their sledges, drawn by four dogs. Sackeouse himself is depicted on the ice, setting up a pole with a flag upon it, to which were attached some beads & other trifles, intended as conciliatory presents.

The dress of the Natives consist of skins, covering the body as far as the loins, and breeches of the same materials, fastened so as to meet the body covering. A small space, through which the flesh is seen, is observed in all the figures at the part where the upper and lower coverings meet, arising from their imperfect mode of attaching them to each other.

In these drawings the astonishment of the natives upon examining the different parts of the vessel, is very characteristically depicted. One of them is viewing the anchor, another the masts, & the countenances very faithfully describe the surprise occasioned by these new objects of vision.

In questioning Sackheouse upon some points of the interview, he states the natives to have appeared docile & ready to give such information as he was desirous of obtaining from them.

His language was sufficiently analogous to theirs, to allow of keeping up a conversation with them; he inquired, amongst other matters, as to the number of their nation, but they seem either to have no idea of numbers, or what is more probable, no corresponding term by which they could reply to the enquiry.

Their general conduct gave reason to suppose that they had, like their more fortunate discoverers, fixed principles of social conduct. When chips were given them over the vessel's side upon the ice, each collected as much as he could, but no one appeared to infringe upon the bundle of another. He who had gathered any little stock, seemed to be recognized as the proprietor, although he left it to proceed in his further collection.

It is not very astonishing that they endeavoured to appropriate some of the objects of wonder which they saw about the vessel, but their very mode of attempting to pilfer was a proof that they had not acquired dexterity by practice.

In a few instances they took articles from the ship with a view of purloining them, but they were as necessarily unsuccessful, for they did not understand concealment, some part of the pilfered property being always left uncovered, and in sight.

The circumstance which excited the most attention on the part of the discoverers, was the finding in the possession of the natives, knives, the blade part of which was of iron.

They had already ascertained that wood was unknown to these newly found beings, & that the only fuel which they had, if fuel it could be called, was a species of moss, and the use made of this moss seemed to be confined to the supping it in oil, & burning it as a torch or candle.

Through the medium of Sackheouse, however, it was discovered, that two blocks of iron, in its pure state, situated at no great distance from the shore, were known to the natives, and that, for making their knives, they hammered off pieces, of it by means of heavy stones.

One of those knives we have seen. It is formed of a piece of bone about seven inches long, the upper part, to which the iron is attached, being grooved. In this groove, several irregular serrated pieces of iron are inserted.

These appear to have been beaten flat with a hammer, and as they present an irregular serrated edge, it should rather be called a saw than a knife.

The bone handle smells inoffensively strong of rancid oil, from the saturated state in which it appears the number is astonishing.—Here they are formed of the same nation from the rest of the world, they are probably the most uncivilized of the earth's inhabitants.

On board the discovery ships were several dogs, apparently of the Danish breed; rough wiry hair, no tuse, bushy tail, being the principal characteristics. They do not bark, nor in common, make any particular noise.

The only dog which Capt. Ross obtained from the natives is stated to have been lost overboard in a gale of wind off Cape Farewell; but from the description given of it, it was not unlike (though larger in size) the dogs which were brought from the coast of a more southern latitude.

In one of the drawings before mentioned, John Sackheouse, the Esquimaux is represented with his arms in a sling, and upon asking the cause, he stated that it was done by the concussion of a bowling piece, which he had loaded upon the principle of "the more fire more shooter;" by the blow his collar bone was broken.

He had never learned to draw when he put to paper the subjects he had depicted, but his representation has probably more faithful resemblance to the scene he describes, from its very rudeness, than the most finished drawings of our officers would possess.

From the London Champion.

Literature and Science, &c.—The use of cast iron has become very general in Russia; it is formed into balconies, staircases, ornaments in relief for the fronts of houses, &c. Prince Labouhasha has lately built a palace at St. Petersburg, on which he has expended upwards of three millions and a half of rubles, and has ordered forty-two colossal pillars, and the architectural ornaments for the grand front, to be cast at one of the principal iron founderies in Russia. In the gardens of Zarskozelo, an immense triumphal arch of cast iron was erected some months ago: this gigantic mass was fitted up in the short space of four days. Since that time, the emperor Alexander has given orders for the construction of a pavilion, of which the walls, cupola, peristyle, &c. are all to be cast iron.

M. Schmidt, an inhabitant of Mecklenburg, has lately invented a machine, which ploughs and harrows the land without human assistance. It is put in motion by four large wind mill sails.—The inventor has presented a model of it to the Duke of Mecklenburg, and intends to submit it to the Mecklenburg agricultural Society for examination.

The Icelandic poet, John Thorlakson who has translated Milton's Paradise Lost into the Icelandic language, lives at Bergisa, in a poor cottage. The door of his bed room is scarcely four feet high, and the room itself but eight feet long and six feet broad. In this room stands his bed, and close to the door, opposite a small square window, a table, on which he has written his poems. The situation of his dwelling may properly be called poetical, being between three mountains, near streams and water-falls, where there is on every side a prospect of mountains, 4000 feet high. His whole income, from the parishes of Baegisa and Beiku, amounts to about thirty dollars (six pounds sterling.

Lord Erskine.—The marriage of this eminent lawyer is not generally known, although it took place so far back as October last, at Gretna-Green. It is certain that little notice of this remarkable event has yet appeared in the public prints. In October his lordship arrived at Gretna, accompanied by Miss Sarah Buck, the present lady Erskine, by whom he had had several children out of the pale of wedlock. He was dressed in fashionable female attire, with a large Leghorn bonnet and a long veil. On the arrival of the officiating priest of the temple of hymen, his lordship threw off his dress, and appeared in proprin personae, and the usual ceremony being gone thro' the parties were declared man and wife! His lordship again put on his female vestments, and was on the point of taking his departure, when his son, the hon. Thomas Erskine, made his appearance in a chaise and four; but the knot was tied, and shortly after, the new married couple drove off. The bride is about thirty-seven years old, the noble bridegroom nearly seventy. The object of this very extraordinary step is said to be for the purpose of legalizing the children of this connection, who, according to Scottish law, cease to be illegitimate on the marriage of their parents at any time.

WARSAW, Dec. 31.

According to a new statistical account, the Kingdom of Poland, in its present state, contains 2,191 square miles, 481 towns, 22,694 villages, and a population of 2,782,324 inhabitants, of whom 2,519,58 are Christians, and 212,944 Jews.

ANCIENT BRIDGE.—Between Valte and Exloo, in the Need, (a marsh) in the district of Drenthe, a bridge has been uncovered for a length of a league and a half, and the end of which is not yet known. The following are some particulars:—the bridge, of which more is daily discovered, runs from the Weerdingerstout, through the marsh, past Haar, and the convent Ser Apel, a distance of 3 full leagues. It consists principally of rough firs, of the length of twelve feet, neatly laid together.—When the marsh ground is carefully taken up, no interval is to seen between these stems, which are on an average three or four inches in diameter. There are no nails, and all is hewn with the axe. It is generally believed that this is the bridge of Germanicus, mentioned by Tacitus, and which was laid about this place by 40 Roman cohorts, on occasion of a hasty retreat, 15 years after the birth of Christ.

SLAVE TRADE.

Extract of a letter dated St. Mary's, Georgia, September 29, 1818.

"At last the French are making a show of stopping the slave trade. A few days ago one of their armed vessels brought into Genee, a schooner under American colors, with about thirty slaves on board; but we heard the result of the detention, that there is a visible change for the better, and Genee, since the commencement of this year, has not had a single slave; but I understand it is hardly entered another week now can scarce from the Africa, regularly from Bassoe, to the Caribbee Islands, with twenty or thirty slaves on board; and the French ports are now become the grand depot from thence they are publicly shipped to Havana, &c.

Parties of slaves from the interior have arrived on the coast. The great traffic has quite put a stop to commerce.

With this you will see a letter from Grey, dated August 7, 1818, at Accra, and his party were at Sambo. SLAVE TRADE. In a letter dated St. Mary's, Gamoia, September 29, 1818.

The French are making a show of slave trade. A few days ago one ped vessels brought into Goree, a nder American colours, with about thirty slaves on board; but we have not yet heard the result of the detention. However, I find that there is a visible change both in St. Louis and Goree, since the commandant forbid the exportation of slaves; but I assure you the channel is only turned another way, for the Goree trade now runs across from the coast, and particularly from Bassou, to the Cape de Verd Islands, with twenty or thirty slaves at a time, and land them on one of those islands, which are now become the grand depot for slaves; from thence they are publickly shipped for the Havana, &c.

Parties of slaves from the interior are frequently arriving on the coast. The renewal of this cruel traffic has quite put a stop to all lawful commerce.

With this you will see a letter from Captain Gray, dated August 7, 1818, at which time he and his party were at Sambá Kantoye.—The Captain says, that he had only lost two men, and Mr. Burton, a Lieutenant; but that except three, the whole of his horses had died on the journey. The Almamy (of Boondou) was very friendly to the mission, and had built them a good house to stay in during the rains which were then very heavy.

I am sorry that the young settlement is almost inundated with water. The few Europeans who are obliged to remain on it during the rains are very sickly; and we dread the end of the season, when the marshes begin to dry. Sierra Leone has been sickly this year: perhaps this is occasioned by the heavy rains, which have not been equalled since 1812, when Senegal was almost covered with water, and two thirds of the Europeans died.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

From the Rochester Telegraph.

It is with pleasure we announce to the public that the CARTHAGE BRIDGE is completed, and that its strength has been successfully tested by the authority designated in its charter of incorporation.

It consists of an entire Arch thrown across the Genesee River, the chord of which is 352 7-12ths feet, and the versed sine 54 feet. By a recent and accurate admeasurement, it is found that the summit of the arch is 196 feet above the surface of the water. It is 718 feet in length, and 30 in width, besides four large elbow braces placed at the extremities of the arch, & projecting 15 feet on each side of it, thereby presenting a resistance to any lateral pressure or casualty, equal to a width of 60 feet. The travel passes upon the crown of the arch, which consists of nine ribs, two feet & four inches thick, connected by braced levellers above and below, and secured by nearly 800 strong iron bolts. The feet of the arch rest upon solid rock about 60 feet below the surface of the upper bank; and the whole structure is braced and bound together in a manner so compact, as to disarm even cavil of its doubts. The arch contains more than 200 tons, and can sustain any weight that ordinary travel may bring upon it. Loaded teams of more than 13 tons, passed over it together a few days since, and produced very little tremor. Great credit is due to the contractors, Messrs. Brainard & Chapman, for their persevering and unremitted efforts in accomplishing this stupendous work.

It was erected upon a frame called the supporter or false bridge. The Genesee river flows under the bridge with an impetuous current, and is compressed to the width of about 120 feet. This width was crossed by commencing a frame on each side near the margin, & causing the weight behind to sustain the bents progressively bending over the water, which meeting at the top, formed a Gothic arch over the stream, the vertex of which was about 20 feet below the present floor of the bridge. Though now purposely disconnected from the bridge, the Gothic arch still stands underneath the Roman, and is esteemed by architects, (in point of mechanical ingenuity) as great a curiosity as the bridge itself.

The bridge contains 69,515 feet of timber, running measure, besides 64,620 feet of bored measure, in addition to 20,806 feet of timber contained in the false bridge or supporter. All this has been effected by the labor of some what less (upon an average) than twenty-two workmen, within the short space of nine months. Were this fact told in Europe, it would only excite the smile of incredulity. The bridge at Schaff hausen in Switzerland, which for almost half a century was regarded as the pride of the eastern hemisphere, was built were informed in a "little less than three years," and was the longest arch in Europe. It was but 12 feet longer span than the bridge at Carthage, (admitting that it derived no support from a pier in the centre—was only 18 feet wide and of ordinary and convenient height. It was destroyed during the French revolution, and no entire arch is known at present in the old world to exceed 240 feet span. The most lofty single arch in Europe is in England, over the river Wear at Sunderland, which falls short of the bridge at Carthage 116 feet in the length of the span, and 96 feet in the height of the arch. The bridge at Carthage may, therefore, be pronounced unrivalled, in its combined dimensions, strength and beauty, by any structure of the kind in Europe or America.

The scenery around it is picturesque and sublime, within view from it are the waterfalls of the Genesee, one of which has 105 feet perpendicular descent. The stupendous banks, the mill and machinery, the forest yielding to the industry of a rising village—and the navigable waters not 100 rods below it, are calculated to fill the mind of a generous beholder with surprise and satisfaction. Particularly is this the case when the utility of the bridge is regarded in connection with its extent. It presents the nearest route from Canandagua to Lewistown—it connects the points of the great Ridge Road—it opens to the counties of Genesee and Niagara a direct communication with the water privileges at the lower falls, and the head of navigation on the river, and renders the village of Carthage accessible and convenient, as a thoroughfare from the east, the west, and the north.

New Orleans and General Jackson.—By the New-Orleans Chronicle, we perceive that a bill, proposing to present a sword to gen. Jackson, with a vote of thanks, for his services in repelling the invasion of the British in the late war, was taken up on the 10th of Feb. and, after an animated debate, indefinitely postponed—in other words, negatived! Doubtless the inhabitants of New-Orleans are deeply sensible of the services rendered, but also still feel the smart of the wounds inflicted on them as citizens of a free country, and the still deeper wounds inflicted upon the constitution. Let those at a distance reflect upon this event.—Ev. Post.

Island of Cuba.—The Royal revenues arising from this Island, in the year 1818, amounted, according to the official statement to $4,104,666, exceeding those of the year before, by $894,471. So flourishing is this Island at present, so great has been its progress of late years, and so promising are its future prospects, that (with the exception of Mexico and Peru) it may be safely pronounced the most important possession of His Catholic Majesty on this side of the water. Indeed, when we call to mind the immense revenues which those two great Vice Royalties formerly yielded to the mother country, but which from revolutions and civil discord they no longer yield, and recollect that prior to the Spanish revolution, Cuba was a burden instead of a benefit to the royal treasury, we cannot help considering her "the brightest gem" in Ferdinand's diadem.

Commerce of the Potomac.—There was inspected by the inspector of Georgetown, on Friday last, 4,300 barrels of flour; and it was supposed there yet remained on the wharves and in the boats, 10,000 barrels.—This quantity had come down the river in two days, and great quantities more are now on the way. The price at which considerable part of this flour has been sold is six and three eighths of a dollar per barrel.—Ib.

ST. LOUIS, (Missouri) Feb. 10.

We have conversed with some of the old inhabitants of this country, who recollect the annual rotation of the seasons for the last fifty years, and they have declared that they never had experienced such hot weather as last summer—such a dry fall—and such an uncommonly mild winter as we now enjoy.—On Thursday last, Fahrenheit's thermometer stood as high as 63, at 8 o'clock, P. M.

Our prairies resemble the April verdure of former times. The autumn of 1805 bid fair for a hard winter; the ice on the waters near Chicago was able to bear canoes in the month of November of that year; on the 20th the weather became mild, similar to the present winter, except about two weeks' frost in January. About the 20th or 25th of Feb. following, the grass measured two inches high in the prairies bordering the Illinois.

CHARLESTON, S. C. March 8

Green Peas.—This vegetable was brought to our market on Saturday last, for the first time this year. The peas were sold at the rate of twelve dollars a bushel! From the uncommon mildness of this season, we may expect a plentiful supply shortly, and at cheaper rates.

We have seen a letter from a gentleman in Boston which mentions that accounts had been received there from Havre, stating that upon an investigation of the affairs of Messrs. Campbell, Bowden & Co. of London, a surplus of £200,000, good assets over their debts was found, so that their credit was perfectly restored; and not only the Bank of England, but all their friends offered them all the aid they wished; in consequence of which they immediately resumed their payments. Their embarrasment was only for a moment, and proceeded from the extreme difficulty of the times.—Mer. Adv.

COMMUNICATION.

Vermont outdone by Maryland.—Some few years since, the Attorney General of Vermont, then a president of a bank in that state, attempted to get a man, by the name of Ruggles, indicted by the grand jury for felony, for demanding specie of the bank, in payment of its notes—but failed, for the want of a statute making it criminal to demand the fulfillment of a lawful promise. But the state of Maryland, it seems, by the 5th section of the law published in the Evening Post of the 23d inst. have removed that difficulty, by enacting "that it shall not be lawful for any person or persons, bodies politic or corporate, to ask, demand and receive, from any of the several incorporated banks of this state, any gold and silver, with the intent or design to make sale thereof, or to obtain a premium therefor; and any person or persons, or officer or officers, of any body politic or corporate, who shall be duly convicted of receiving from any of the banks of this state, gold or silver, contrary to the provisions of this section, such person or persons, officer or officers, shall forfeit and pay a sum of money equal to double the amount of the gold and silver so received as aforesaid"—and to obviate the inconvenience of proving "the intent, the courts are required, in the next section, to consider the act of demanding money, as a proof of an intent to commit the crime forbidden.—The section shall speak for itself:—"Be it enacted. That the courts of law of this state, in the construction of this act, shall consider the same as remedial, and shall give such a construction thereto, as shall be calculated to restrain any evasion, by any subtlety or device whatsoever, of any of the provisions thereof." Is not this imposing the obligation of contracts, as forbidden by the constitution? By the ninth article of the eleventh section of the charter of the Bank of the United States, the directors are allowed to deal in gold and silver—by this law they are forbidden so to do; which of the laws is paramount? A fine protection for the branch bank in Baltimore! Merchants who have connections in Maryland, will do well to make themselves acquainted with the whole of this act.—N. Y. Ev. Post.

Emigration.—Under this head, one of our late London papers thus remarks:—"The emigrations from this country to America, are not confined to the lower order of the society; on the contrary, great numbers of families not only possessing wealth, but also a knowledge of the mechanical professions are quitting England, from the disgust they feel, at the enormous taxations with which we are at present burthened.—We understand that a vessel is now building, for the express purpose of taking out several respectable families to the Illinois territory, where there are upward of 9000 acres of land preparing for cultivation. Some of the parties, who will sail in the above vessel, are citizens of great opulence and intelligence; the number of men, women, and children, amount to one hundred; they take with them all the necessary implements of agriculture, &c. and the amount of money amongst those families is upwards of £100,000. It seems it is their intention to form an English settlement among themselves, under the American Government, and from the prospects held out there is no doubt it will be a flourishing concern. Several of the gentlemen going, are men of science, literature, and general information."—N. Y. E. Post.

From the National Intelligencer.

OF EAST FLORIDA.

Extract from Elliott's Journal, published in 1814.

East Florida is but little better than a wilderness; the soil is not superior to that of West Florida, and none of its navigable waters raising in the United States, it does not appear equally interesting. It is nevertheless, of immense importance to the United States, from its present situation well calculated to give security to the commerce between the Atlantic and the Western States; and may be considered one of the main keys to the trade of the Gulf of Mexico. On the west side, it affords two remarkable fine harbors; one is known by the name of Hillsborough bay, (bay Tompa, or Spirito Santo, the latitude is stated to be 27 deg 30 min. north, and the longitude 84 deg west of Greenwich. It is very commodious will admit any vessel over the bar, not drawing more than 24 feet water. The other harbor is called by the Spaniards, Boca Grande; and by the English, Charlotte Harbor, stated by the latitude 26 deg 43 min. north, and 82 deg. 30 min. west long. It has fifteen feet water on the bar, and good anchorage within. Exclusive of those harbors, there are several others well calculated for coasting vessels that draw not more than seven feet water. The Florida Keys and Reef likewise furnish a great number of harbors proper for coasting vessels, and advantageous stations for cruisers; particularly that of Key Biscaino, situated at the northern entrance of the Reef, and capable of commanding the whole coasting trade which should take that passage. This being the entrance of the Reef, and the most proper place to depart from in sailing north westerly, would be one of the most eligible positions on the whole coast, and perhaps on the continent, for a light-house. But, instead of any advantage being derived either to the United States, or his Catholic Majesty, from these favorable situations, they serve as dens and hiding places for the privateers and pirates of the Bahama Islands, by which the trade of both nations has suffered immensely in depredations; and, extraordinary as it may seem it is no less true, that nearly the whole coast of East Florida, so far as maritime possession gives a right, is under the dominion of the Bahama Islands; the coast and islands being inhabited, even by a single solitary settler, from Apalachy almost round to St. Augustine; from which the inhabitants of the Bahama Islands cut and carry off, without interruption as much of the valuable ship timber as they find necessary or convenient."

From a London Paper.

Water in the brain.—In the course of last week a young bullock, belonging to Mr. J. Mosses, of Looseham Meany near Plymouth, being ill of water in the brain, or what is provincially termed moorsom, he resolved on the extraordinary operation of cutting open the skull immediately between the eyes and horns. In effecting which a bag of considerable size was found concealed within, between the horns. This being drawn out through the aperture, with a crooked instrument, contained more than a pint of water, filled with entrails. The skull was then closed, and the wound covered with a pitch plaster, after which the bullock was set at liberty, evidently much relieved by the operation. It is now quite well and promises to thrive as a sound and healthy bullock.

Farriery.—Wednesday an operation in the veterinary art was performed at Glasgow, which did great credit to the operator, and promises to be of considerable benefit to the public. Horses in general, but especially hunters and roadsters are liable to a disease, called, in technical language, an affection of the interior surface of the navicular bone, which produces lameness, and oft lately, the seat of this disease was considered by most practitioners to be in the shoulder joint, which usually created suspicion. No complete cure for it was known till about eighteen months ago, when Mr. Sewell, assistant professor at the veterinary college in London, discovered one, which practice has since proved to be most effectual. The cure consists in cutting out a part of the two main trunks of the nerve leading to the foot, and the moment the operation is performed the horse becomes sound. This was completely verified in the case we allude to, where the horse, when brought out of the stable, was quite lame, and had been for months past, but immediately after undergoing this operation, he walked, trotted, and galloped perfectly sound and well. Mr. Archibald Sinclair, veterinary surgeon, performed the operation, which did not occupy more than fifteen minutes, in the surest manner, in the presence of a number of gentlemen who were highly gratified at witnessing it—and, we understand, this is the fifth case in which Mr. Sinclair has operated in the same way, in all of which he has been successful.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the last Massachusetts Agricultural Repository and Journal.

One of the most successful experiments in agriculture that we have ever known, is that of the Almshouse farm in Salem, which is under the superintendence of Mr. Paul Upton.

This farm consists of about thirty-five acres, as we are informed, and was two years since in a state of nature, and very rough land. It has been brought to, and the produce during the year 1818 was as follows:

Pork killed, weight 7960 lbs.
Twelve live pigs sold for forty two dollars.
On hand fifty-seven live pigs.
Corn, 600 bushels.
Potatoes 2250 bushels. Turnips 900 do.
Three tons of squashes.
Fifty tons pumpkins.
All the common summer vegetables for the Almshouse.

We doubt whether any farm in the United States has produced more in proportion to its size, and it is a proof what we l directed industry can effect.

TOWANDA, (Penn.) Feb 27.

James Munks—A gentleman late from Bellefonte, in this state, informs, that Munks, the murderer, who was hanged there on the 23d ult. has been seen alive since that time, at the house of a man who was acquainted with him.

It appears that suspicion was entertained by some, that the criminal was not duly executed Search being made, it was found that the coffin, in which he was supposed to be buried, was empty, and that holes were bored in the coffin – probably for the purpose of admitting air.

Perhaps two such cases never came before one term of any court, as those of Keys and Simmons. One for the murder of his brother—the other for that of his uncle. The scenes of each different and distant—all the parties at each relations, and all intoxicated at the time of each.—American Republican.

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, Jan. 5.

Prussia.—M. de Kamptz has published at Berlin, from authentic documents, an account of all the fatal accidents which have occurred within the Prussian dominions during the year 1817. The violent deaths amounted to 1925, of which 500 are suicides. The robberies committed within the same period are 9643, of which 535 occurred at Berlin alone. The whole population of the Prussian states, according to de Kamptz, amounts to 10,065,000 souls.

New Expedition.—The fitting out two ships for a voyage of discovery to the North West, which are to sail early in the ensuing spring, under the command of Lieut. Parry, instead of Capt. Ross, is said to be determined upon. The following year another attempt will be made to sail to the North Pole direct.

THE ISLAND OF SUMATRA.

By the arrival of the Kingston, from Java, intelligence of much importance as affecting British interests in the Indian Seas has been received. The Governor of Fort Malborough (Sir T. S. Raffles,) has displayed his characteristic energy and activity since his arrival in Sumatra, and has anxiously endeavoured to extend the British influence over the whole of that valuable and extensive island. Sumatra has, hitherto, been very little known. The European establishments are entirely on the coast—Europeans had never penetrated into the interior.—All attempts to do so, indeed, were reckoned desperate; no European would embark in them. The population of the interior were considered as savages, and the mountains impassable; and yet the natives would still bring down their gold and cassia, and camphor, &c. for which Sumatra had, from the earliest ages, been famous. The Governor felt there was but one alternative, and that was to open the road by going himself. His enterprise was crowned with success. He penetrated into the interior in three different directions; to the southward inland of Manna, to the important provinces occupied by a people called the Passummahs; to the northward to Menangcabon, the far famed capital of the Malay empire; and inland of Bencoolen, across the island to Palembang.

The result has been the discovery of a mine of wealth—a country highly cultivated, and abounding in precious metals. The Passummahs are an athletic, fine race of men, as superior to the people on the coast as it is possible to conceive; they are agricultural and numerous. At Menangcabon he was gratified with a population and country, fully equal to any part of Java. Within the space of twenty miles the population does not fall short of a million. In short, it is the Governor's opinion, that, with a little encouragement, far greater resources are to be found in Sumatra, than the British have derived from Java; but much remains to be done. A central government must be established, the whole island must be brought under control, and the avenues of commerce, now closed up, re-opened. Our readers are aware, that Menangcabon was the place whence all the gold, that gave Melano the name of the Golden Chersonesus, was carried.

These discoveries have not, however, been made without great personal risk and fatigue. The country could only be explored on foot—mountains 6,000 feet high were to be crossed, and rocks, precipices, and forests, to be traversed. For many nights the party had no shelter but the leaves they could collect after their day's journey; and their journies were seldom less than 20 to 30 miles day, over the very worst roads that ever were passed. In this expedition the Governor was accompanied by lady Raffles: she was occasionally carried on a man's back, but generally walked, as the roads were too bad to admit of her being carried in a chair. Doctor Arnold, physician and naturalist, fell a sacrifice to the fatigue, and died of a violent fever. Dr. Horsefield, who accompanied the Governor to Menangcabon, was on the 12th August, the date of our latest intelligence from Fort Malborough, dangerously ill, with a dysentery, but we hope his life will be spared to carry home the important collections he has made both in Java and Sumatra.

As this was the first appearance of the European authority in the interior, lady Raffles was the most peaceable standard the party could hoist. It was impossible for the natives to consider their object warlike, when the governor proceeded unarmed, and confided his wife to their hospitality.

They found the country beautiful and magnificent. Sir Thomas Stamford Raffles has thrown the trade open, and reformed all the establishments. Treaties have been entered into with the Princes of Menangcabon.

LONDON, Jan. 26.

The vacancy in the Council occasioned by the death of Lord Ellenborough, is to be supplied by the present Chief Justice.

The King of France has given permission for more of the banished to return to France—among them a General, who, when the king was on his flight to Lisle, pursued him at the head of some cavalry. Soult, and M. Arnaud, will, it is said, be also invited to return.

From India.—The Saratoga, from Calcutta has brought advices from the Peninsula and Hindostan to November 4th. The war with the Peshwa & Pindarees had ceased—and the British army had gone into cantonements. The native powers were completely subdued and the English jurisdiction has been widely extended.

The insurrection in the island of Ceylon, is nearly quelled.

The Emperor of Russia has granted a pension to the widow of General Moreau.

It appears that governor Bentzon of St. Croix is about to leave the island for the recovery of his health, and the planters have addressed him a letter highly approving his administration, and requesting his acceptance of a service of plate of the value of 2000 guineas.

GERMANY.—According to late tables, published officially, the population of the countries composing the present Germanic confederation is 30,094,050—the following are the principal powers according to the amount of their respective population, viz:—Austria 9,480,226—Prussia 6,928,499—Bavaria 3,560,000—Wurtemburg 1,395,462—Hanover 1,303,351—Saxony 1,200,000—Baden 1,000,000, making an aggregate of near 26,000,000. The following territories have more than five hundred thousand and less than a million of inhabitants, viz: Grand Duchy of Hesse—Mecklenburg Schwerin—Churchissia—Territories having more than one and less than four hundred, viz: Holstein & Lauenburg—Luxemburg—Brunswick—Nassau—Saxe-Weimar—Saxe-Gotha—Holstein Oldenburg—Hamburg—Twenty-one other territories, have each less than 100,000 inhabitants.

The following very remarkable anecdote was referred to by Mr. Williams, in his speech upon seconding Mr. Favell's motion for a petition to the legislature to revise the criminal code:

Two men were once convicted of highway robbery, before judge Caulfield, the lineal ancestor of the present archdeacon Caulfield. When the jury brought in their verdict of guilty, the elder of the two felons turned round to the younger, and with a countenance expressive of the most diabolical rage, malice and revenge, addressed his companion in the following manner: 'D—n seize you, you hen hearted villain! if it had not been for you I should have sent that rascal to hell, who bore witness against us. I would have murdered the villain and then he could have told no tales. But you, you cowardly scoundrel, persuaded me to let him go. You dog, if I be hanged, you will be hanged with me, and that is the only comfort and satisfaction I have. But, good people, if any of my profession be among you, take warning by my example; if you rob a man, kill him on the spot; you will then be safe, for dead men tell no tales. I have robbed many persons, and I may escape from prison to rob many more, and, by Heavens, the man I assuredly will murder.' 'May God visit the blood of the men you murder upon my head,' said Judge Caulfield. 'Go, Mr. Sheriff, procure a carpenter, have a gallows erected and a coffin made on the very spot where the murder stands; for from this bench I will not remove, until I see him executed; as for the young man, whose heart, though corrupt by the influence of this infamous wretch, still retained the principles of humanity, he shall not perish with him: I most undervass upon him the sentence the law requires, but I will respite him, and use my influence with the Crown to pardon him. This hardy villain shall not, therefore, have the satisfaction his malignant heart has anticipated.' The Sheriff obeyed the order: a gallows was erected in the court house, and in the presence of the judge, the jury, and the people, the unparalleled monster ascended the scaffold, cursing and blaspheming even to the moment when he was launched into eternity."

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 25.

It is long since the thunder of the cannon has been so continued at Constantinople as for some days past. For three three days, salutes of artillery from the Seraglio, Tophane, and from all the forts on the Bosphorus, have announced to us, that the Porte has now received the official confirmation of the victory obtained by Ibrahim Pacha over the Wechabites. Not only a political, but a religious importance is attached to this victory, since, besides the subduing of a numerous body of rebels, possession is regained of Medina and Mecca, those cities so sacred to every Musulman. The Reis Effendi (Minister of Foreign Affairs) has communicated to the foreign Ambassadors the following Bulletin of this happy news:—

"The despatches lately received by a Tartar (Courier) from the Governor of Egypt, Mehmed Ali Pacha, contain the highly joyful intelligence, that Ibrahim Pacha, now Governor of Gedda, marched, according to his instructions, against Derajeh, in which Abdallah Bensund, the head of the rebellious sect, had fortified himself. After Ibraham Pacha had besieged the city for some time, and had several actions with the besieged, the city was attacked on the 5th of Zilkide, and, with God's help, stormed within and without and taken. All the batteries and fortifications, with 80 pieces of cannon, fell into the hands of the conquerors. Not less than 20,000 rebels, among whom were several chiefs, fell under the sword. The Chief of the Sect, Abdallah Bensund, was taken alive, and sent to Constantinople in chains, with several of his principal people and counsellors. (An ample indemnity for the head of the Hospodar of Wallachia, which has escaped the iron spikes at the gate of the Seraglio.")

A carriage is making for the purpose of placing Abdallah in it when he arrives, and exposing him to the view of the people.

The newly appointed Hospodar of Wallachia, Prince Alexander Sazzo, was summoned to the Porte on the 17th, and invested with the usual Caftan. He has since taken up his residence on the Canal. On the 20th, he sent the Greek fattala Nicola, as Caimacam to Bucharest.

LONDON, Jan. 23.

The most singular feature in the foreign intelligence last arrived, is the general gloom of the Continent, resulting from the death of the great personages in their respective courts.—It is indeed extraordinary, that in a less space of time than three months, there should be three Queens dead in Europe: namely the Queen of England, the Queen of Spain, and the Queen of Wirtemberg. The death of the Queen of England, indeed, was to the due course of nature, and considering her infirmities and her long disease, was, in fact only a desirable release from mortal suffering. But the two other Royal Personages have fallen in the very prime of life, and whilst many years of the highest condition of human splendour remained in prospect before them.

It is not perhaps generally known, that the king of Wirtemberg and the late Queen were to each other the object of a first affection; but that some state reason, or the authority of their superiors, had intervened & compelled each of them to marry another. The King at that time Prince of Wirtemberg, was compelled to marry the lady now the Empress of Austria, and the late Queen was obliged to accept the hand of the Duke of Oldenburg.—But though the ceremony passed between the Prince of Wirtemberg and the present Empress of Austria, the consorts, if so they may be called, never afterwards saw each other, except in the presence of a third person; & when the authority of Bonaparte was extinguished by the battle of Waterloo, a divorce was solicited and procured by both parties, and the Prince & Duchess were united, and have ever since, till the day of her death, exhibited a rare example of the utmost possible domestic happiness in royal life.

Colonel Ussher has dispatched another ship the Hero, with 120 men on board, who have volunteered for the service of the South American Patriots. The vessel sailed on Thursday last: the men were in high health and spirits, and so enthusiastic are our disbanded soldiers for this popular service, that the Colonel would not have the least difficulty in raising 10,000 men. All these he has stopped are young men under 30 years of age, in good health, and of sound constitution: none are accepted that have not been in actual service.—Colonel Ussher is actively engaged at present in raising body of 500 men, to form a regiment of cavalry, to be armed with a sabre, pistol, and short rifles: the regiment will principally consist of men who have served in the German Legion. A complete medical staff sailed on board the Perseverance, at the beginning of this month. The ships which are to take out the cavalry corps are expected to be ready for sea in the course of the present week, and the Colonel, it is said, will proceed with them.

The terms demanded by Madame Catalani for her talents at the Opera-house for the ensuing season, were, a sum of £9000 a benefit to produce £1000, a coach, a dinner of 14 covers daily, and liberty to sing at concerts, &c. as she pleased. It is almost superfluous to add, that these extravagant terms were refused.

February, 20.

Letters from Spain mention, that an entire regiment, which had left Zaragoza, under orders to proceed to Valencia, where it was supposed popular commotions existed, broke out into a state of open mutiny, at a place called Caspe, where the soldiers declared they would not take up arms to subjugate their fellow-countrymen. The Colonel endeavoured to appease them, but, it is added, they rose upon and killed him, together with some of his officers, and then disbanded themselves. On the other hand, the Ministerial Evening Paper is to be credited, letters of the 1st have been received from Madrid, which represent Spain to be in the most complete tranquility; Ferdinand VII. to be the idol of his subjects, and a model of virtue; and the clergy to be without the slightest influence in the decisions of the Spanish Cabinet!!!

Considerable agitation has been excited among the Westphalian Catholics, in consequence of the recent suppression, by the Prussian Government of the Catholic University and Theological Seminary at Paderborn. A remonstrance on the subject had been transmitted to Berlin. As a further proof of the unfriendly disposition of the Prussian Cabinet towards the Catholics, it is stated that their high schools at Breslau and Munster, the convent of Nanerzelle, & the mixed university of Erfurt, have also been lately suppressed.

The reigning Princess of Lippe has protested against a decision of the Diet of Frankfort, adopted last session, relative to the baliwick of Blomberg, upon which a younger branch of the family has some claims. She intimates, that to submit to the decree of the Diet, until it shall have been determined that it can exercise a similar power with respect to all the Members of the Germanic Confederation, would be to abandon that equality of right to which she is entitled as a Sovereign. The protest, and several documents accompanying it, were referred by the Diet to the Committee of Mediation.

Conspiracy at Valencia.—A full statement has been made public of the particulars of this plot, with the names of the conspirators, and an account of their execution. Colonel Vidal their leader, had raised himself from the ranks, and was therefore a good officer, but of bad morals, and an extremely bad character. Twenty-four hours were allowed the prisoners to make their defence which is a mere matter of form for no defence is ever listened to; and the day after, all the thirteen were condemned to be hanged; but the executioner, who is a poor slim fellow, with too much feeling for his employment, gave notice that he was ill, in consequence of his having strangled a father, son, son-in-law, and two cousins, the same week. He was asked if he could hang one? he answered yes; so Vidal was fixed upon, and the others sentenced to be shot, and afterwards to be hanged up by the side of their fellow-conspirator. Vidal, when brought out to his execution, was so emaciated by fever, as to be scarcely able to support himself; but just before he was executed, being called a traitor to his country by the Monk who attended him, he started, raised his head with a sort of convulsive effort, and looking at the monk in the face, sternly exclaimed, Traitor to my Country! Never, never! I have been too loyal to her, and for that I die. The following are the names of the remaining sufferers, who were all shot:—Felix Beltram, receiver of the salt duties at the Gros; Diego Manuel Calatrava, Beltram's head clerk; Manuel Rougel & Sarafin Larosa, two serjeants; Peregrin Pla, apothecary; Vincente Clemente, common soldier; Blas Ferriol, shoemaker; Manuel Bendegar and Francisco Segrera, two small proprietors in the village of Ronsafa; Louis Albino, a peasant; Francisco Gay and Louis Vivo, two shopkeepers. Albino was the only one of them who consented to receive a confession; but as he was possessed of no secret, nothing could be learned from him. The conspirators were all seated in a line, upon stools, and the execution was performed by 96 soldiers, who fired at the same instant. They all behaved with heroic fortitude and resolution.

The late Queen of Wurtemberg has bequeathed to the King, her husband, a million of roubles and two services of plate, one of which is gold, and still continues in the chests in which it was transported from Petersburgh. She has also granted to him the use of two millions of roubles, which she has bequeathed to her daughters, until they come of age.

A French traveller now in Egypt has discovered, at a distance of about nine hours journey from the Red Sea, an ancient city built in the mountains, between the 24th and 25th degree of latitude. There are still 800 houses in existence. Among the ruins are found temples dedicated to various divinities. There are 11 statues, and various ruins of others. He has also discovered the ancient stations that were appointed on the route thro' the Desert, going from the Red Sea to the Valley of the Nile. These stations are at regular distances of nine hours between each.—This route is undoubtedly one of those traversed by the commerce of India, a commerce which was so flourishing at the time of the Lagides, and under the first Emperors. The situation is now ascertained of the Emerald mine, of which no certain knowledge was had for several ages.

A young French traveller, nephew of count Mollien, ex-minister, has succeeded in reaching Tombuctoo, by way of Senegal. His family has just received a letter from him, in which he announces his safe arrival in that celebrated town, hitherto unknown to Europeans, and which the unfortunate Mungo Park twice vainly attempted to reach.

It is said that a considerable quantity of English Bank notes, of one and two pounds each, have been forged in Paris and sent to England.

The eldest son of the deceased Austrian Minister, Count Wallis, is, it is said, to be married to the daughter of Fouche, the ex-French Minister.

Affecting and Extraordinary Occurrence.—On Tuesday last, Mrs. Lees, who resided in the Nursery-grounds, Surrey road, went from her house to purchase some articles at a shop in Blackfriars-road, and left her child, Eliza Lees, a girl about ten years of age, alone in the house; a short time after her absence the neighborhood was alarmed by the cry of "Fire," and the daughter of Mrs. Lees was seen running out of her mother's house enveloped in flames; the neighbors rendered every assistance in their power to extinguish the fire, and afterwards carried her to Guy's hospital, where she expired. The injury she received was too severe to admit of description. While some of the neighbors were carrying the child to the hospital, others went to look for the mother; at the end of Blackfriars-road they met several watchmen carrying a woman upon a shutter; one of the neighbors exclaimed, "Good God, it is Mrs. Lees;" and upon examining the person such was the extraordinary fact. Mrs. Lees, it appears, was crossing Blackfriars-road, when some fellow, with little gentleness and less humanity, rode full gallop up the street, his horse knocked Mrs. Lees down, and trampled upon her, and he rode on as if nothing had happened, although loudly called after to stop. The watchmen, who were soon after sent for, who said there was not the most remote chance of her recovery, and last evening she expired. An inquest was held yesterday at Guy's Hospital upon the child, and a verdict was returned by the jury—Accidentally burnt to death.—We understand an inquest will be held on the mother to-morrow.

"GIBRALTAR, Jan. 1819.

"Sir—I have just received an official letter from Morocco, of the 18th ult. informing me, that a vessel had arrived there from Algiers, after a passage of eight days, bringing accounts that the deaths in that city amounted to above 400 per diem. The master of the vessel reported, that just before he sailed, he heard that the deaths had increased to above 700 per diem. A Dutch frigate has just arrived at Mogadore, from Algiers, bringing dispatches only to the British, by which it appears that fresh attacks of the plague had taken place in that city. The consuls were supposed to have been re-imbarked by persons who accompanied the Bey of Constantine Califa, with the quarterly payments for the Algerine government.

The following is the complete list of most of the proscribed French Generals who served in the army during the French Revolution:—Bonnaud guillotined at Lyons.

General Dumouriez, exiled from France, now has a pension of 12,000 per annum from the British government.

Lefebvre, Desnouettes, Bouchard, Bison, (Duc de Lunzen) Wouves, Rossin, Rosiguol—guillotined under the government of Robespierre.

Miranda, a native of Caracas, died lately in Cadiz, of a broken heart.

Hoche and Championnet, poisoned.

Kleber, assassinated in Egypt.

Pichegru, exiled from his country, afterwards strangled.

Brune, was ousted at Avignon, in 1815.

Malet and Lahorie, (the latter implicated in George's conspiracy, but fled from France; shot for attempting to subvert the Government of Bonaparte in 1812.

Ney, shot in 1815, during the government of Louis XVIII.

Mouton Duvernet, ditto, in 1815.

Murat, shot by order of the King of Naples, after having himself been sovereign of that country.

Moreau, exiled from his country, and killed in battle in the war carried on against France, in 1813.

Labedoyere thrown out of a window and killed, his murderers not known.

The following are at present exiled from France:—Grouchy, Vandamme, Thureau, Savary, (Duc de Rovigo) Excelmans, Huchet, Bertrand Clausel, Drouet, Count Real, Lallemand.

Caution against taking medicines in the dark.

The Liverpool Courier mentions a circumstance of a young Lady of this town having narrowly escaped her destruction by the mistake of some person prescribed for her from an adjoining druggist; when she unfortunately put into a glass of lemonade which was in the same place, and which stood for some time in the darkness. She immediately felt into a state of insensibility, from which all applications of restoratives could not have recovered, had not her attention been discovered by accident.—Her head and throat are much inflamed, and by every account the poison was providentially expelled from the stomach, and she is now in a fair way of recovery.

Another instance of the blessed effects of Boring.

The Town of Desborough, a navigation, and thoroughfare, a mile in length, in consequence of a quarrel at a public house, between Humberstone street (Desborough) fought for four hours on Wednesday morning, at Enwell, near Stamford. One Desborough had his jaw broken, but Humberstone died on the field.

We are sorry to announce that two more very old and respectable houses in the city failed yesterday.—They are general merchants, and have hitherto carried on an extensive business.

Vendors of "Paine's Age of Reason."—On Friday, Mr. Tyer, Bookseller, of Cow cross-street, Smithfield, was arrested on a Judge's Warrant, for selling Paine's Age of Reason.

The same evening, about nine o'clock, Mr. Carlisle, Bookseller, of Fleet street, was again arrested in his own shop, charged on a third indictment for continuing the sale of Paine's Age of Reason, for which he is already under two prosecutions, one at the suit of the Society for

Mr. Hobhouse and his friends were the only persons allowed a hearing yesterday; Hunt and Jones were not there. It is evident that these impostors are driven away. Little as the present election promises of good, it has already given the public the advantage of reducing this worthless pair even below the level of their former degradation, and given to them the scorn of the mob, in addition to the contempt of the honest, the rational, and the good. Hunt has now made good the placard of the preceding day, by scampering off like a dog with a tin-kettle tied to his tail."

Three mails from Hamburg and one from Holland have arrived, the contents of which are unimportant. It is stated from the French frontiers that considerable desertions have taken place from the army of the Low Countries. Government of the Netherlands are actively proceeding with the erection of frontier fortresses in all directions. Letters from Hanover state, that the Duke and Duchess of Clarence will set out from Hanover, on their return to England, at the end of the present or in the beginning of the next month.

We have again to notice the non-arrival of French Papers; but private letters of the 18th have reached town, which relate entirely to the subject of the reported death of the King, to which, in the first instance, we attached not the slightest degree of credit. The refusal of the Duke of Rochelieu to accept the pension voted to him, is said to have reached the Chamber of Peers on Tuesday last. The French Funds on Tuesday were at 89. 80c. On Saturday, according to an express arrived yesterday, they were rather lower.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

[The following we cut out from the National Advocate some time since and laid it aside, intending the first opportunity that the room could be spared to insert it. It is too great a literary curiosity not to be preserved. The editor of that excellent paper, the Hudson Wing, introduces it to his readers in the following witty strain.—N. Y. Ev. Pos.]

Tammany Literature.—That immaculate band of patriots, who are combined under the name and style of the Tammany Society, in New York, when they first nominated Gen. Jackson were about to come among them, agreed, "unanimously," they say, to send him a long talk. This was a prudent course, beyond all question; for a man so united for "principles so unanimously," might prove, if not conciliated, a very troublesome visitor to a race of men who may be said, like Arbuthnot and Ambrister, in some sort to have "identified themselves with the savages." They would have been lacking in Indian sagacity had they acted otherwise.

It was a matter of considerable moment, likewise, to use terms of expression suited to the great occasion. The simple eloquence of the native aborigines of this land was found sufficient to have little influence on the feelings or judgement of this mighty hero; and the Tammanies therefore very wisely determined to keep as far from it as possible.

The battle of New-Orleans is introduced as follows;

"Columbia's voice, in peals of iron thunder, proclaimed the dread fate of that ceaseless morn; Carrera was drenched with human gore! Sloan and Bellona retired from the unassigned field!"—scared off, no doubt, by the terrible vanquisher of the Creek Indians.

It is in vain however, to think of giving any adequate idea of this excellent production, and we shall therefore copy it entire, by which we communicate, we presume, is needed. The address is its own expositor:

CONCORD, (N. H.) March 16.

Warning to Cancer Doctors!

At the late sitting of the court at Portsmouth, a certain doctor Evans of Candia, was sentenced to the state prison for two years. The story we understand is simply this. He undertook to remove a tumour from a lady's breast,—no cure, no pay. The lady suffered several months torture from his caustic, and was dismissed as cured, with a large open ulcer and her constitution ruined. The doctor sued for his fee—contending it was a perfect cure. The demand being unjust, rendered it necessary for him to resort to dishonest means to support it. He swore roundly to every thing he thought necessary to substantiate his claim; but unfortunately for the doctor, he swore to too much. He was convicted of perjury and sentenced as above.

☞ Those needing the doctor's services will now call at Concord, and what should recommend him to his numerous customers, he will always be found at home.

It was a co-partner of the doctor, as we are informed, that was fined a short time since, 300 dollars, with costs of court, for mal-practice, in applying caustic to a lady's ancle, by which the joint was destroyed.

It is a subject of congratulation that our courts of law begin to take cognizance of this species of crime—that a check is about to be put to a class of men that are pests of society, who are daily endangering the lives of the people, imposing their secret nostrums upon the ignorant and credulous, and are as ignorant of the nature of disease, & the use of suitable remedies, as the beasts they ride.

From the Boston Paladium.

FROM INDIA.

By the ship Saratoga, capt. Leach, form Calcutta bound to Boston, (put into Portsmouth,) we have received papers to the 4th of November.

CALCUTTA, Nov. 4.

The first division of the volunteers destined for Ceylon, embarked yesterday, when the ships dropped down the river. The intelligence from Ceylon continues every day more and more favourable; and no doubts are now entertained of the tranquility of the island having been re-established. On the arrival of the volunteers, the 20th regiment, now at Ceylon, will embark for Prince of Wales' Island, Bencoolen, &c. Rumours are abroad, that another destination, having some important political ends in view, awaits the marine regiment.

We have nothing to offer to our readers of any importance, in the way of intelligence from central India. The returning tranquility of the provinces, so lately the seat of rapine and war, is fortunately taking away the interest we once felt, in accounts from that part of the country; and leaves the journalist little else to do, than record his sense of the wisdom and vigour of the policy, whose good fruits appear in the barrenness of his own columns.

The scarcity in the money market of Calcutta continues still to be felt. It not worth enquiring into, how far a commercial bank, on a large and liberal scale of accommodation, would tend to obviate evils, arising from the circulating medium being too limited for the trading operation, which the spirit of mercantile speculation has created?

BERMUDA, March 7.

A great mortality, we are sorry to learn, has lately taken place, among the troops in the garrison of Tobago.

The Crater of the Soufriere Mountain in the island of St. Vincent, we ascertain has been filled with water. The centre has about 16 fathoms of that fluid which appears by the latest accounts to be still rising, and has a sulphuric taste, emitting a strong smell.

The following Circular from the house of Messrs. Campbell, Bowden and Co. of London, addressed to Joseph Fowler, Esq. their agent in the United States, and their other correspondents, will explain the circumstances of the momentary embarrassments of their affairs, and the gratifying developement under which they were enabled to resume their payments.

LONDON, 19th Jan. 1819.

Sir—We make no doubt that advices will have reached you of the unpleasant situation in which the great and very extraordinary delay in the returns we have been expecting from all quarters had unfortunately placed us on the 8th inst. and we therefore take the earliest opportunity of informing you, that the Bank of England having come forward to our assistance with a loan of £150,000, and our private friends, who have on this trying occasion, and notwithstanding the great and general pressure of the times, acted in the most liberal manner towards us, making us a further voluntary advance of £50,000, we are enabled to resume our payments on the 12th inst. and we have now the full means of discharging our engagements.

It is incumbent upon us to state, that after a strict investigation of our affairs, by six of the most respectable Merchants of this city, it is fully evident our assets, made up much under what they will necessarily yield, and reposing upon the best securities, exceed our debts by £200,000; and on these grounds it is that we feel fully warranted in soliciting a continuance of that confidence and good will with which our friends have hitherto honoured us.

Although not the smallest restrictions are imposed upon our operations, yet we consider ourselves in honor bound not to engage in any new concerns, until we shall have reduced our affairs within the scope and management of our own capital, and we are, on this account, under the necessity of declining for the present any new engagements. We trust, however that the arrangements we are making for the rapid liquidation of our pending concerns, will in a short time be carried into full effect and enable us to enter again into active correspondence with you.

We have to we great pleasure in adding, that our temporary suspension has not in the least affected our friends, Messrs. Collings & Maingy, of Rotterdam, whose great prudence and very extensive means continue to give them every claim to the utmost confidence of their numerous friends. Referring to their own communications on the subject, we have the honor to be, Sir,

Your obedient servants,

CAMPBELL, BOWDEN & Co.

The following confirmation of the destruction of Commodore Aury's fleet at Old Providence, and the distressed situation of the troops at that place, naked and in a state of starvation, is copied from the Kingston, (Jam.) Chronicle, of Feb. 4.

The following statement has been handed to us for publication, and we are assured that the authenticity of the relation is indisputable: we therefore feel it our duty to give it a place;

"The following are the names of officers carried off since the 21st September last, by the fever and ague, so prevalent at Old Providence: Colonels Irving and Henry, captain Arnold, assistant commissary Beal, lieutenants Smith, Robertson, Moore and Burke, Cannon of Chili's nephew, doct. Clark, and many more, whose names are not recollected, and which does not include a very great number of mulattoe seamen who were considerably exposed, constantly lying about in the bushes, with no covering except the clothes on them; in fact no medicine could be procured, and, from the very great scarcity of provisions, no nourishment could be obtained for them. One hundred and seven British seamen and soldiers have deserted, and the greater part of them went so far as to venture themselves in small canoes, hardly fit to contain more than 4 or 5, trusting themselves to the ocean. Many more would have followed, had not the remaining boats been so guarded as to prevent the possibility of an escape. An English seaman, named Nelson, late of the British navy, was hung for expressing his discontent—the unfortunate man knew nothing of his sentence, until brought to the place of execution, when he requested permission to write his friends in London, and to be allowed time to say his prayers; the former was refused him and the latter request was after some hesitation granted. Neither officers or soldiers have received pay for upwards of eighteen months, several of whom are in a state of nakedness. On the Island there are two Camps, one consisting of French, the other of English and Americans; the former fare considerably best, which is attributed to the partiality of their General, and the Commissary General, a Mulatto, being of that country. Previous to the sailing of the Shearwater, some of the English Officers had not received any rations for five days. Several runaway negroes are at Old Providence from this island, and one, a Samboe of the name of Thomas, belonging to Pedro Estate, Morant-Bay, has been recognized by a Gentleman there; he says that before leaving Jamaica he received an advance of eight dollars from an officer—The whole of Aury's fleet is on shore (except the Congress) but which is so much injured as to be completely unseworthy. All the British officers have left Providence in disgust, and several English seamen are left behind only for want of opportunity to get away; poor wretches they are much to be pitied, as they are completely allured away and are in a most deplorable state. The officers attribute the great desertion in part to the tyranny of Admiral Bogue, a man destitute of humanity, and who was formerly a barber at St. Thomas's; he possesses a most tyrannical disposition, and the sailors hold him in such dread, that on the 21st November last, there were upwards of one hundred men known to be absent in the bush; and at the present moment, in consequence of the sickly state of the garrison, not more than 50 men can be mustered capable of service."

At a late hour last night, the fast sailing ship Ann Maria, Capt. Waite, arrived from Liverpool, whence she sailed on the 26th of Feb. By this arrival we have received from our correspondents at London, regular files of papers, Prices Current & Lloyd's Lists, to the 24th of Feb. & Liverpool papers to the 26th inclusive.

The aggregate averages of grain, for the six weeks previous to the 23d of Feb. was as follows: wheat, 77 7 ; barley, 66-6; Oats, 32-8; rye, 67-10; peas, 88-6

The ports are in consequence shut against the importation of foreign wheat, and open for all other descriptions of grain. Wheat & all other kinds of grain may be imported free from British America.

The following vessels were to be launched at Plymouth, early in the spring: Fondroyant, 82 guns; Sterling, Cast - 74; Portland, 60; Lancaster, 60; Pyramus, 42. The Active frigate, Sir James Gordon, is fitting at Portsmouth for Quebec; Capt. Barry, is appointed Naval Commissioner at that place, & goes out in the frigate.

The late Ex-King of Spain, died a short time since at Naples.

On the 22d of Feb. it was reported in London, that King of France was dead. In announcing this event the Sun of the 22d, observes, "We shall be happy in finding that this report is not well founded, though we confess that, from the quarter whence we received it, we are not disposed to raise any doubts of its authenticity. We say we shall be happy in finding that the report is not well founded, not only because we revere the virtues, & respect the abilities of the French Monarch, but because we fear that his death would be the signal for the vile Faction of Jacobinism once more to rear his head, and France be exposed to new horrors that might disturb the tranquility of all other States."

A definitive arrangement for regulating the payment of 100 Millions indemnities, due from France to the Allies, was concluded on the 2d of February; the time fixed on is June 1820, for the payment of the first instalment of one third part.

M. Beauregard, formerly physician to Bonaparte, was to leave England early in the month of March for St. Helena, as medical attendant to the Ex-Emperor. This appointment is sanctioned by the Allies.

A recent arrival from Sierra Leone, informs that the slave trade was in a prosperous state on the coast.

An association has been formed at Treves, for the establishment of a settlement in the United States. Great numbers are ready to embark.

France is engaged in establishing a colony in Senegal, for the cultivation of cotton, indigo, coffee, & sugar.

A letter from Stockholm of Jan. 15 contradicts the report, of Sweden having sold the island of St. Bartholomews.

Count Regnault, (Saint Jean d'Angely,) has obtained permission to return to Paris.

John Sackehouse, the Eskimaux, who went out in the late Northern expedition, died at Edinburgh on the 14th Feb. He had already rendered important service to the country in the late expedition of discovery, and great expectations were formed of the utility which he would prove on the voyage about to sail for Baffin's Bay. The Admiralty, had directed the greatest pains to be taken in his farther education; and he had been several months in Edinburgh with this view, when he was seized with a violent inflammation in the chest, which carried him off in a few days. Just before his death, the poor Eskimaux said he knew he was going to die; that his father and mother had died in the same way; and that his sister, who was the last of all his relations, had just appeared to him & called him away.

Lord Cochrane's steam vessel was lying at the Commercial docks, London, on the 20th of Feb.

Another posthumous work of Madame de Stael, will soon be published. The Morning Herald says, "this work will contain much novel information."

The Prince of Poix, Governor of Versailles, died at Paris on the 15th of Feb.

Lord Erskine, was in a very low state of health.

An official article in the Stockholm Gazette, of the 2d Feb. states, that a new Tariff of Export duties is drawn up, and will be put in force; the basis of which is, that the exportation of goods shall be prohibited except of some few, the exportation of which would cause a scarcity of some raw materials necessary to the country, or in some other manner loss & injury; and that all goods which may be exported in Swedish vessels (consequently timber,) may be exported in foreign vessels also, without any limitation to certain quantities, or any difference in the duties, except that the former are to pay five, & the latter 10 per cent. of the value; but all goods, the duties on which is only twelve schillings (or pence) per the 100 dollars, may be shipped in foreign vessels without any augmentation of the duty.

CORRECTION.—The editors of the New-York Gazette, having received the following letter from a friend in Liverpool, feel gratified in having it in their power to benefit those who are constantly writing to their correspondents in England.

LIVERPOOL, 14th Jan. 1819.

Messrs. Lang, Turner & Co. New-York,

Gentlemen—Knowing your anxiety to do all in your power to promote the interests of your commercial friends, I take leave to suggest the propriety of your making public, for their information, the fact that, by our post office laws, "owners or consignees of goods arriving in vessels from foreign parts are entitled to receive their letters free of sea postage, provided they do not in the whole exceed six ounces in weight, and that the person to whom they are addressed be described as owners or consignees in the address or superscription"—as follows:

Messrs. Cropper, Benson & Co.
Consignees of goods per Pacific,
LIVERPOOL.

But if letters are addressed as under—
Messrs. Cropper, Benson & Co.
LIVERPOOL.

Consignees per Pacific.

the postage will not be allowed.

As letters are more frequently directed the latter way, and are consequently charged with the postage, you will be doing a general service, not only to publish this yourselves, but to request your brother editors throughout the union to give it all the publicity possible.

Economy.—Having made an accurate experiment, as to the difference of ex ense in burning sperm oil or dip'd tallow candles, I am induced to give the result, for the benefit of all those who think "a penny saved is as good as a penny earned." A lamp with two wicks, containing one third of a half pint of winter pressed oil, which cost at $1 25 per gallon, two candle six molds, burnt 9 hours and 30 minutes. A dip'd tallow candle weight 2 2 3 oz. cost at 18 cents per lb. three hours, burnt 3 hours and 35 minutes. The light of the lamp was equal or rather superior to the candle, and required no attention, while the candle required snuffing two dozen. The difference that will be saved one third cheaper than tallow. In warm weather the proportion in favor of oil would be still greater, as summer strained oil, which sells at retail at 87 1-2 cents per gallon, would then burn as well and rather longer than winter pressed oil, and candles would consume more rapidly. I find that oil makes not only the cheapest, but a more cleanly and steady light than candles. FRANKLIN.

DIED.

At Fredericton, N. B on the 9th Feb inst, universally regretted, JOHN JARVIS, Esq. late Capt. 4th Royal Veteran Battalion, and Town Major of New Brunswick.

The most ardent zeal and activity in His Majesty's Service, have marked this young Officer's career through life, and yet calmly is Consin, during the late war with the United States, who as a Captain in the Glengarry Light Infantry. His distinguished services called for the admiration of his Country. His sufferings during the last six years of his life were unrivalled, having while leading his Company to the most gallant manner at the Battle of Ogdensburgh lost one arm, and received a most severe wound in the other, the consequence of which were finally the cause of his death, at an age which with a sound and vigorous constitution might have justified a hope of his living to an advanced period of life. His virtues in private life are no less entitled to the esteem of his Friends; uniting with the most gentle integrity that urbanity of manners which distinguishes the character of the manly soldier, and which had endeared him to all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance. In his character were united the distinct and efficacious Son, the tender husband and fond parent—in him Society is deprived of one of its most valuable members, and the Service of one of its brightest ornaments.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Philadelphia Daily Advertiser.
BLOODY MURRAIN.

The above distressing complaint having made its appearance in Chester county, and there being too much reason to fear it may extend its ravages by infection, the following preventives are offered as the most approved. Certain cures it is believed do not exist—

Cleanly stables—dry sweet straw for litter, often changed—sweet clear water—the rack staves and trough anointed with tar, sulphur and assafœtida mixed—a free use of salt slightly mixed with sulphur—should one of the cattle be infected, remove him from the rest, fumigate the stable with vinegar poured on hot stones, and rub the noses of the sound cattle with the above mixture; and in case of death bury the animal deep, with the hide on.

The extensive country watered by the great rivers Oronoco and Magdalena, and their tributary streams, in Spanish America, is said, by Dr. Robinson, to produce in abundance the largest and best ship timber in the world. "Vast forests," he says, "of cedar and mahogany are to be found on, and adjacent to, these waters; it is not uncommon to see boats sixty feet in length and eight in diameter hewn out of a single tree! and ebony, satin wood, Gateady, purple wood, and almost every species of wood deemed rare and valuable, are produced in those countries, as well as all the precious gums and balsams so highly prized throughout the rest of the world.

Scottish Fanatics.—A religious sect professing some most extraordinary doctrines, has appeared in the Highlands of Perthshire. These misguided fanatics have come from the Lowlands—they call themselves "free-men," and adopt the tenets of the Minnonites of the 16th century, and of that sect known in England by the name of Brownonians. They affirm that every sort of external worship is useless—that they are free from all mortal and political restraint—that the truth has made them free, and that being under the immediate guidance of the holy spirit, they can commit no sin. Happily this sect is not numerous.

MR. EDITOR—As every thing relating to agriculture is read with great interest, please insert the following:

I sowed 1 bushel of flaxseed in the spring of 1817, on little more than an acre of ground, corn stock land, pretty much worn down, and soil a sandy loam. I soaked the seed 12 hours in a strong lye made of potash, and then dried it with plaster.—The crop was eighteen bushels of seed, and 696 pounds of excellent flax.

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, Jan. 18.

Our readers will observe in our columns of to day, some important documents; which consist of a Protest, and its accompanying illustrative papers, put forth by Sir Thomas Stamford Raffles, Lieutenant Governor of Fort Marlborough, (the settlement held by the Great Britain in the Island of Sumatra) against certain acts committed by the Dutch Commissioners of the Island of Java. The case is certainly a strong one, as made out by Sir Thomas, and it required to meet it with first decision and promptitude which he displayed on the occasion. That it will be capable of amicable adjustment between the two Governments at home, we should be unwilling to doubt. The Island of Banca is of much importance in a commercial point of view. The tin mines which it contains are very productive, and are worked by a Chinese colony, said to consist of 25,000 persons. Many cargoes are yearly carried to China, where the consumption is chiefly for religious purposes. It sells rather higher than the English grain tin, as the Chinese say it is more malleable, and on that account prefer it. In former times the profit from it to the Dutch East India Company was estimated at £450 000, but very little was sent to Europe. The island, and the tin mines, were taken possession of by us in 1813, and restored to the King of the Netherlands by the 8th article of the Convention of 1814, under what stipulations, and for what purposes, will appear from the protest of Sir T. S Raffles. We are sorry to add, that it is the opinion of that Gentleman, that there existed on the part of the Netherlands Government "an evident disinclination to concede any thing to the name and character of the British nation in the Eastern Seas; and that, judging by the general policy evinced, there seemed reason to believe it to be the wish of the Netherlands Government, to erase the recollection of the British Administration, and studiously to prevent the Native Princes and Chiefs perceiving any influence of the British Government in the arrangements of that transfer."

January 14.

Letters have have been received from Java, dated the 27th of September. They mention that a serious insurrection had broken out at Samarang. About 100 Dutch troops had been killed, and between 3 & 400 inhabitants had been massacred by the soldiery. Very high duties to be imposed on foreign shipping. The alteration was to take place on the 1st November. It is further stated, that serious differences have arisen between Sir Thomas Raffles & the Dutch Governors & Agents in the East Seas. The British character, it is said, has been insulted and degraded in the grossest terms, and the Governor has personally protested against the pretensions and principles on which the Dutch act. It will be recollected that by the convention of 1814, between this country & Holland, all colonies in Asia, in possession of the Dutch on the 1st January, 1803, were to revert to them: but it is alleged, that, not satisfied with this, they claim all they ever had in those seas, although many of them have not had the Dutch flag flying for the last 50 years. Their system is, to the first instance, to send a large force to overawe & intimidate the natives, and having once got them to sign a deed, then studiously to prevent the English from ever after having communication with the port; and, in prosecution of this project, are accused of sacrificing every unfortunate Prince who was acknowledged by and attached to the English.

New differences are said to be growing up between the governments of Spain & Portugal.

The Kendal Chronicle says:—We are informed from good authority, that at Manchester and its vicinity there are at this time either building, or the ground laid out for building 126 new cotton spinning factories! BRUN, SPAIN, Jan. 24.

Madrid enjoys the most perfect tranquility, and but for the extreme vigilance of the police, the numerous pasquinades every night in that capital, and a host of spies distributed to the public places, in every coffee house, in the theatres, and in every society would be observed.—The garrison is very numerous, besides the new guard, the regiment of Spanish guards, and that of the Walloon guards, there are three other regiments of infantry, and one of cavalry.—The two national theatres are much frequented, particularly that of Del Principe, where a tragic actor, who is the Talma of Spain, draws crowded audiences. The promenades on the Prado are always crowded with company, and it is not uncommon to see six hundred carriages there in a line.

Our differences with Rio Janeiro are far from being yet settled; not with standing the mediation of some allied powers, they have not been able hitherto to reconcile the reciprocal pretensions. The government of Brazil requires as the first condition, the restitution of the town of Olivenza and its territory.

LONDON, Feb. 12.

In the house of Lords, last night, lord Holland, on presenting a petition from certain insolvent debtors in confinement, relative to the insolvent act, expressed his hope that, since the present act was not found adequate to all the purposes at which it aimed, and since some measure that had the same objects in view will required, such improvements should be introduced into the intended bill as would tend to attain the ends in a manner more suitable to the circumstances of the country.—On some additional papers being presented by Lord Liverpool, relative to the late diplomatic transactions, lord Holland asked, whether there were among them any documents relative to the slave trade, and whether they contained a copy of the holy alliance, and what was the nature of its object? In answer to the former question, lord Liverpool repeated his promise of a communication: but, in reference to the latter, observed, that as the Prince Regent was not a party to the holy alliance, a copy of that act could not be consistently presented. With respect to the nature or tendency of that much talked of compact, the public must be still left to conjecture, as no communication whatever was made.

THE PRINCESS OF WALES.

Extract of a letter from Milan, dated January 1.

"The Princes of Wales is making preparations for a trip to the Holy land. The Baron & young Austin, who is always addressed by the title of prince, accompany her Royal Highness together with a vast suite. The princess told the Marchioness of Douglas, that it was her intention to be absent six months; and that she meant to visit all the places of note in Egypt.—During the princess's absence, her new palace will proceed. Two gentlemen lately arrived from England and a long conference with her royal highness."—Morning paper.

Princess of Wales.—We are informed, in a quarter to which we have often been indebted for important intelligence, that a gentleman, of very high character at the chancery bar, has visited a distinguished female in Italy, for the purpose of preparing her to expect a minute investigation of her conduct. It must be evident that the reports which have long been in circulation, & which recent events are said to render more striking, loudly call for enquiry. If the lady of any nobleman in England continued flitting about the world with similar volatility, would not the husband be censure if he did not resolutely demand investigation.—Sun.

Snow.—January 16—1st, there was so heavy a fall of snow on the fronts of Austrian Poland, that it covered it to the depth upon the ground as high as the houses.

There is a cause depending in the court of Chancery wherein the extraordinary name of "Kildare cranksockers & prakingsticks &c." appears as a party to the suit; the pronunciation of such names seems to be no small annoyance to the gentlemen of the long robe, and their coadjutors.

The James Monroe, arrived at Liverpool, after a quick passage from New-York, has brought considerable remittances for the merchants at Liverpool, Manchester, as well as some extensive orders for British manufactured goods, particularly Yorkshire cloths, upon which superior description meets a good sale in the American market. There have been, however, been several extensive failures on the other side of the Atlantic, chiefly owing to the unaccommodating temper of the bankers throughout the union, and to over strained speculations in the South American market.—Leeds Mercury.

On Sunday last, Wall, Cable, and Wilkinson, three persons of Longborough, returned from America to this place. About 6 months ago they, with several others, were induced to visit that "land of liberty and plenty," in the hopes of bettering their condition, but were miserably disappointed. They were in the neighborhood of Baltimore, where they were employed in breaking upon the roads; and bad as was their situation, many others of their countrymen were much worse off.—There was nothing but paper currency in circulation: they represent the country as swarming with thieves, and were repeatedly in danger of losing what little they had. These may be considered as home proofs, and we hope they will have the desired effect.—Leicester Journal.

Extract of a communication from lord Charles Somerset, Governor of the Cape of Good Hope, to T. P. Courtenay, Esq. agent for that settlement, and transmitted by him to the Committee for Managing the Affairs of Lloyd's, for the information of merchants & masters of ships trading to the East Indies,

"The river Knysna, so long considered impracticable as a port, has, by repeated surveys made in the course of last year, been proved to be easy & safe of access, and a most valuable harbour, not only as a refuge for shipping when caught in a heavy southeast gale upon this dangerous coast, but its vicinity abounding in valuable timber for ship building, and other purposes. The former transport brig, in the service of the dock-yard at the Cape of Good Hope, was the first vessel that entered the Knysna, but being taken aback in the narrows, on event which, for want of local knowledge, her Commander did not expect, she struck upon an unknown sunken rock, and received so much injury that it became necessary to run her on shore within the entrance.—This circumstance, unpromising as it appeared, has in the end, led to the experience of the advantages which the harbour offers.—The Podargus sloop of war was sent to the assistance of the Emer, but from the recent misfortune which had happened, it was not intended that she should go into the river, her commander, however, upon surveying the entrance with the master of the sloop, was convinced that there was no danger, & accordingly ran in, took on board the Emer's stores, and came out perfectly satisfied with the excellence of the port. The Dispatch, a naval transport, drawing fifteen feet water when laden, has been twice in the Knysna for cargoes of timber; she has now gone thither a third time for a cargo of compass timber, which she is to take to England. His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to establish such signals as are most obviously necessary at the present moment; also a pilot & boat's crew, for giving directions and assistance to all vessels approaching the port. It may frequently happen that, although the weather may be favourable for ships coming in, that it might not be perfectly safe or possible for the pilot boat to go out. A signal is provided to indicate this circumstance, and the pilot boat will then be within the bar, to give the necessary directions for anchoring, &c. It is also the intention of His Excellency to establish the merchant code of telegraphic signals by Capt. Murrayt, R. N. and communication will be made by means of it after the 1st day of May next."

THE UNITED SERVICE CLUB.

The bone relicts which has been excavated on the south front of the handsome pile was exhibited to the public gaze on Saturday last, the idea is that—

Britannia is offering a recompence—holding out a wreath in each hand to our navy & army. The soldiers are classically treated. On the left, the army, indicated by heroes & warriors of different ages. The figures are four feet in height & possessing uncommon intelligence & animation. Smirke furnished the drawing & Westmacott executed it.

The house will be finished in November; but it will occupy a month longer to complete the interior decorations, namely, the furniture, &c. A portico of the Doric order, with four columns, of 3 feet square as those on the Western side, will give a commanding effect to the bone relicts. The principal rooms will be three, each from 60 to 70 feet long, & 30 wide. The first—the saloon will be richly ornamented with shields of the three countries—England, Scotland and Ireland. At the upper end of the apartment will be placed a very fine picture of Lord Lyndesh, as being the founder of the club. The second great room is intended for a library & reading room; the third, the dining & coffee room; other eating rooms: the largest is to be a grand lodge; this is to be called the house-dining-room, wherein covers will be laid every day in the year. There are two billiard rooms. The establishment will be very large, not less than 15 men servants, with proper domestics of a superior description: the mains d'hotel to have a salary of 1,200 a year. Immense & large cellars for wine: they will contain 150 pipes, and a great part of them already filled.

The first dinner will be held in January, at which the Duke of Wellington will preside. The Prince Regent & the Commander in Chief will also be present.

It is a singular coincidence, that in 1718, at the distance, precisely, of 100 year seconds have been received from Arringael and the Wolga.

By an Order from the Horse Guards, the Mourning in the Army for the Queen is to change on the 2d of April, and to cease on the 2d of June.

The French and English Funds.—It is generally a subject of surprise why the French Funds should rise and fall with the rapidity they occasionally do. Their late violent rises seem particularly mysterious. The explanation is simply this. The French National Debt is about 100 millions, and a sale or purchase to the amount of 3 millions would affect them 3 per cent.

On the contrary, the National Debt of England is about 800 millions, and a sale or purchase to the amount of 8 millions, affects it only 1 per cent. Therefore, in the purchase and sale, what affects French Stocks 3 per cent, will affect ours only 1.

The annual taxation in France, in consequence of their national debt, is about five millions per annum. Their sinking fund proceeds in its liquidation at the rate of two millions and a half a year.

Therefore, their sinking fund, as compared with their debt, is in the proportion of 1 to 2.

The annual taxation of England, in regard to the national debt, is 42 millions; and the operation of the sinking fund, in its discharge, is at the rate of 11 millions a year.

Therefore, the sinking fund of England, as compared with her national debt, is in the proportion of 1 to 3.

FOR THE ALBANY GAZETTE

On Thrashing Machines, and other improved Implements of Agriculture.

No. III.

Messrs. Editors,

There is not, in the whole range of agricultural inventions & improvements, any implement of greater importance, perhaps, than the threshing machine; and although, within the last forty or fifty years, great improvements, in every branch of the act of farming, and every the mechanical art connected with it, has been accomplished; yet it will probably occur to every philosophical speculator, that we are far from having arrived at the acme of perfection.

The first attempts to invent & erect machines for threshing grain, in Great Britain, were made a—t three previous to the year 1772. A threshing machine was erected in Yorkshire, by Mr. Ewart, of Scotlington, in that year; and was used on the farm of Mr. John Turnbull, of Rigby. The grain was laid on a circular floor, and as it moved round, a number of stampers struck the corn, and by this means beat out the grain. This machine was complicated, and it does not appear that any other was afterwards erected upon the same principle.

A machine was constructed on the farm of Linkly-head in Aberdeenshire, by Mr. Gordon of Premerry, the proprietor, which was to work a number of flails at a short time after which, it must have been laid aside, as there is no further account of it. It is said, that a machine on the plan of working a number of flails, also, was erected in Virginia, and is described, as having a number of long fan poles, placed over a circular floor, whereof one end being fastened down, the other is elevated by means of a small lever, and let fall by its own descent, upon the grain, which is placed above the grating.—There are no reasonable objections to these machines under consideration by flails; the loss in labor in removing the straw from the threshing floor, and placing the grain to be threshed, is a serious drawback from their efficiency. To place machinery, to move the flails and clean the grain, & take away the straw as threshed, would render the whole so complicated, and of doubtful efficacy, that the cost of such would deter the majority of farmers from using them.

Among other early attempts to invent threshing mills, was one by a Mr. Menzies, the principle of which was to work a number of flails by a water wheel; and this was afterwards imitated by Mr. Meikle, as may be seen in a letter describing the operations thereof, from six respectable farmers. The next we read of, was erected by a Mr. Sterling, of Perthshire, in Scotland, upon the principle of the flax mill; which was used by himself for several years, and even imitated by others;—this, however, also appears to have fallen into disuse; and the public attention seems to have been attracted by two machines that were erected in Northumberland, England, in 1773, the one by Mr. Bircton, near Alnwick, and the other by Mr. Oxley, Fledden. Mr. Paterson's acted by pressing or rubbing out the grain, which was imperfectly done. Mr. Oxley's approached nearer to success; and it has been alledged by many, that Meikle's plan was borrowed from it. However appears, that Mr. Meikle's machines are constructed upon principles essentially different from [illegible] which will appear evident from a description of one made by Mr. Oxley for Sir Edward Delavel, Bart.; this machine had a feeding rollers, and instead of the ends by cross bars. [illegible] were made of pieces of [illegible] inches broad, 1 1-2 [illegible] edge by 3-4 inch at the ends connected with the cross straps. A circular breast beneath the center, about [illegible] feet from the skutchers, to receive the corn to pass between it and the threshed grain was laid on a level of the centre of the drawn in by two fluted rollers, operation of the above machine is [illegible] & dangerous. ected in Northumberland,
1775, the one by Mr. Ideri-
Alnwick, and the other by Flodden. Mr. Ideriton's ressing or rubbing out the was imperfectly done. Mr.
proached nearer to success;
een alledged by many, that was borrowed from it. It pears, that Mr. Meikle's ma-constructed upon principles
essentially different from that of Oxley's; which will appear evident, by a descrip of one made by Mr. Oxley, for Sir John Delaval, Bart.; this machine had two feeding rollers, and instead of a drum, had a double butt of arms connected at the ends by cross bars. The skutchers were made of pieces of wood about 3 inches broad, 1 1-2 inches thick on one edge by 3-4 inch at the other, and were connected with the cross bars by leather straps. A circular breast was fixed beneath the centre, about three inches distant from the skutchers, so as to allow the corn to pass betwixt them. The unthrashed grain was laid on a board at the level of the centre of skutchers, and drawn in by two fluted rollers.†† The operation of the above machine was defective & dangerous. The great radical defects were:—it wanted velocity, although, it may be argued, that by augmenting the speed of the first impelling power, or the size of the large horse wheel, velocity might be imparted to the beaters; yet it is evident, that this could not be done without endangering the lives of the people, particularly the feeder, and of breaking the machine to atoms. The next defect was the want of a drum or cylinder; whereby the straw & chaff are liable to clog & choke the machinery, and occasion a stoppage of the work at a time when all hands ought to be diligently employed; and frequently breaking some part of the machine. From the form of the skutchers, and the manner in which they were fixed, the effect of every stroke was weakened by the yielding of the beaters, and consequent reverberation; therefore, greater power was necessary to impart velocity, than could with safety be employed, for the reasons above given. The relative position of the feeding rollers & skutchers were also defective, being placed too wide apart, and at too great a distance from the beaters: the consequence of which was, the grain was not held with a sufficient grasp by rollers, to the effect of the strokes of the beaters; & being drawn easily through, of course could not be clean thrashed. The beating wheel also being placed at too great a distance from the rollers, a considerable portion would fall down, without receiving a blow from the skutchers.

Sir Francis Kinlock, of Gilmerton, happening in some of his tours through Northumberland, to see Mr. Ideriton's machine at his farm near Alnwick, and having a considerable share of mechanical knowledge, ordered a model to be made for his use, and upon which he afterwards made several improvements. A large model, which Sir Francis caused to be made, but which he had not an opportunity of trying, was by him sent to Mr. Andrew Meikle, civil engineer, at Houston mill, near Haddington, in Scotland, the only surviving son of the late James Meikle, who went to Holland in 1710, agreeable to articles of agreement with Mr. Fletcher, of Saltoun, for the purpose of learning the art of shelling barley; who, after learning this art, brought over from thence materials for the shelling mill, and also the winnowing machine. The above large model Meikle attached to the water wheel of his barley mill, and in making the trial the model was torn to pieces: and such was the fate of another of full size which Sir Francis had erected some years afterwards. These machines having all been abandoned, is positive proof of their inefficiency & incapability to answer the purpose intended. Mr. Meikle was now induced to apply his genius to the erection of a thrashing mill upon new principles. It appeared to him that in order to thrash clean, great force was necessary to communicate a sufficient degree of velocity, a principle which all the machines previously invented had not, and could not be communicated to them with safety & effect; and from the various trials and experiments that have been made, and forty years experience has confirmed the fact, that no machine will do the work in a perfect manner that every inch of the grain would receive repeated strokes of the beaters, rendering it impossible for any of the ears, although presented side ways, to escape without being clean thrashed. The first machine erected by Mr. Meikle, was on account of Mr. Stein, of Killbeggie, and as a proof that such machines were then altogether unknown, it was stipulated in the agreement that Mr. Stein should furnish the wood, and that if the machine did not answer the intended purpose no payment should be given to Mr. Meikle for the work performed. Another was shortly thereafter erected for Mr. Selby, at Midleton, Northumberland, which was immediately copied & imitated by several millwrights of that county; one of whom afterwards had the singular modesty to claim the invention, & what was of more importance, at least to him, had the good luck of getting many people to credit the assertions which he offered.‡‡ fourteen years. It appears, however, that others had erected machines on the same essential principles as Meikle's; & whether from indolence or any other cause, his patent right was not acted upon; and from his indolence or inability, or both, others claimed the invention as their own, and occasioned the public to believe that the patent had been obtained upon false pretences. After ten years of the right had expired, Mr. Meikle's friends stepped forward to establish the validity of his patent, and after taking steps for that purpose, it was found more intricate business than they calculated upon; inventors & imitators of his machine being so numerous, that the other five years of the patent might be wasted before he could come at any beneficial result. A suit was, however, instituted against Rastrick, of Northumberland, who contested the right of the patentee; and finally it was abandoned for reasons already given, or as it said by others, that "the jury determined, that the thrashing machine was not entirely the invention of Mr. Meikle." By that decision, it was thrown open to the public & the probability of farther improvement much increased. It is worthy of observation, however, that while all other thrashing machines, invented previous to that period, have been thrown aside & abandoned, those on the principle of Meikle's construction have spread far & wide into every part of Great Britain, and some other countries. In 1790, a machine on Meikle's model was erected in the neighborhood of Gottenburgh, Sweden, the first ever seen in that country.

To illustrate the construction of those on the most approved principles, as well as the nature of the case will admit without a plate, I shall endeavor briefly to describe the several parts of two horse machine. The horse wheel, placed on the outside of the barn or building erected for the purpose of thrashing in, 19 feet diameter, on the top of its periphery of circumference is fixed 250 cast iron or wooded cogs; the horses to be attached to two levers or starts, so called by mechanics, the proper length of which, by calculation, is found to be 13 feet each, from their insertion in the central or upright shaft. If made shorter, time is gained, but is attended with a proportionable loss of power,—if made longer, power is gained, but with a loss of time in exact proportion. The horses ought to be fixed precisely at the ends of the starts or levers, for if placed in advance of the levers, with long traces, the line of draught will describe the cord of an arc, whose obliquity to the lever will occasion a loss of power by friction at the centre; whereas, if the horse is fixed by small perpendicular shafts, at the ends of the levers, and being placed high enough to admit the horse under them, the end of the lever then becomes the point of draught. The wheel, in those I have had opportunities of examining, is placed horizontally overhead; & together with the horse path, are covered from the weather by an octagon shed. The cogs of the above described wheel turn a pinion wheel of 20 cogs, whose axis is continued through the span.

Having now ascertained the utility of his machines, Mr. Meikle applied for & obtained a patent, securing the benefits of the invention to him & his heirs for

We are indebted to a commercial friend, says the New-York Daily Advertiser, for a Liverpool paper, containing the following description of the public funds in Great Britain, which will, no doubt prove interesting to many merchants in this country. Perhaps it would be well for them to cut the article out for preservation.

DESCRIPTION of the PUBLIC FUNDS

Navy five per cent Annuities, produced from about 50 millions of Stock, partly formed on navy bills, converted in 1783, into stock, bearing interest at 5 per cent, whence the name.

Four per Cent. Consolidated Annuities, produced from about the same quantity of stock as the last, bearing interest at 4 per cent, as the title indicates; these annuities are called consols or consolidated, from the stock having been formed by the consolidation of several debts of Government.

Three per Cent. Reduced Annuities, produced by about 170 millions of stock, formed for several debts, that originally bore higher rates of interest; but which, on various conditions, has been reduced to the rate which the name of the stock expresses.

Three per Cent. Consolidated Annuities, produced by about 400 millions of Stock, in part formed by the consolidation of several stock, bearing interest at 3 per cent.—N. B. When the word consols is indefinitively used, it is always understood to mean these annuities.

Three per Cent. Imperial Annuities, produced by about 3 millions of stock, created by loans to the emperor of Germany, with security to the interest being paid by the Government of these countries, when the Emperor should fail in his engagement.

Five per Cent. Irish Annuities produced by about 2 millions stock, formed by loans for the use of Ireland before the Union.

Bank Stock, is a capital of nearly 12 millions, with which the Company of the Bank of England has accommodated Government with various loans, and with which they carry on the banking business, bullion, &c. The dividends on Bank stock are now 10 per cent; so that the profits of the Company are near £1,200,000, per annum.

India Stock forms the trading capital of the East India Company. This stock (6 millions) produces a dividend of 10 1-2 per cent. per annum.

South Sea Stock and Annuities consist of, or are produced from a capital of nearly 20 millions. The greatest part of this lent to Government, for which the South Sea Company receive 3 per cent. but from the increase of other profits the dividends to the proprietors are 3 1-2 per cent. The terminable annuities are,

Bank Long Annuities, so called, from the annual payment being, from their origin, made payable at the Bank, and from their being granted for a greater length of time than other terminable annuities. These annuities extend to the beginning of the year 1860, and the annual payments are about £1,100,000.

Imperial Short Annuities, formed in the same manner, and upon the same conditions as the Imperial 3 per cent. Annuities: they extend to May, 1819, and amount to upwards of £230,000 per annum.

Besides the permanent Loans to Government, which have created the perpetual & terminable annuities, various sums have been raised from time to time, as temporary loans, which are called Exchequer bills, from their being made payable at the Treasury of the Exchequer.

Exchequer Bills are issued for different hundreds or thousands of pounds, and bear an interest of 2 1-2d. per cent. per diem, from the day of their date to the time when they are advertised to be paid off.

Navy Bills are merely bills of exchange, drawn at 90 days date and are given by the Commissioners of the Navy for the amount of supplies for the use of that department, and the interest upon these amount to 3d. per cent. per diem.

Omnium is a term denoting the different stocks formed by a loan, while any part of the loan remains unpaid—For example, suppose 20 millions of money are to be raised, and for every £100, in money are to be given £100, stock in the 3 per cents, 50*l.* stock in the 4 per cents. and 6s 3d. per cent, in the long annuities; then, if any person engages to advance 10,000*l.* in money, upon paying the first instalment (for the money, is usually advanced at the rate of about 10 per cent per month until the whole is paid) he will receive receipts which which separately contain an engagement to transfer to the person possessing them 10,000*l.* stock in the three per cents. 5,000*l.* stock in the 4 per cents. and 31*l.* 10s. stock in the long annuities, upon the whole of the instalments being paid, at or before the appointed time.—While these three receipts are sold together, and before the whole of the instalments have been paid, they are called Omnium, as they are made up of all or of several of the stocks.

Scrip is a term given to each of the receipts of the omnium, when they are sold separately; thus in the foregoing supposition, if the receipt containing the engagement to transfer the £10,000 in the 3 per cent. be sold without the other two receipts, this would be called a sale of scrip. Immediately the whole of the instalments upon any scrip is paid, the transfer of the stock is made to the person who buys it, & there is usually a discount allowed for prompt payment.

The prices of the Stocks, &c. are exhibited in the lists that are published in this manner.—The value of any perpetual annuity thus:—

Three per cent Consols, 63 1-8, 64 3-4, 4 1-2—Signifies that the value of £100 stock of these annuities sold on the day this price is given was £63 2s 6d in money at the beginning of the market, that this stock rose to £64 15s and left off £64 10s.

The value of any terminable annuity thus:—

Bank Long Annuities, 16 1-8 16. Signifying, that any annual payment of these annuities was worth 16 1-8 years purchase at the end of the market.

Exchequer Bills 2 4 premium; or India Bonds. 1 or 2 discount. This signifies that every £100 in Exchequer bills bore premium of 2s. at the beginning, & advanced to 4s. in the end of that day; and that every £00 in India bonds sold at first at 2s. premium, and afterwards sold at 2 disc't. The value of Omnium is expressed thus:

Omnium 3 1-2 premium, or 5 1-2 discount. And signifies that every £100 of omnium brought a premium of £3 10s. or sold at a loss of £5 10s. on the government receipts for £100 transferred sold on that day on the Stock Exchange.

FROM LOWER CANADA.

QUEBEC, April 12.

The Quebec Agricultural Society held its first Show of Fatted Stock in the Upper Town Market Place, on Wednesday last, when the Premiums and gratifications mentioned in the advertisement of this day's paper were adjudged. The show, we are informed, was much superior to any thing of the kind which has as yet taken place in the Province, and augurs favorably for this District as a breeding and grazing country. The Canadian and mixed breed of horned cattle were evidently the best, and were admired by all strangers: we are glad to say that those produced by the Canadian farmers, proved that they had been fed with much care and cleanliness. The show of meat by the Butchers, on the Saturday before Easter, was pronounced by competent judges, to be equal to any thing of the kind usually met with in Great Britain. Eight Sheep fattened by Mr. Anderson, of the Canardiere on Turnips, sold for one hundred dollars. It is to be hoped that the farmers will see the advantage of improving their breed & mode of fattening Sheep.

The season in this neighbourhood still presents all the appearance of winter; last night there was a heavy fall of snow and the ice on the St. Lawrence, opposite Point Levi, still remains firm, notwithstanding a good deal of mild weather, and the last spring tides.

April 9.

It was decided in the Committee of the whole House, on monday last, that the Lachine Canal Company should bring the Canal to the foot of the current, with permission to make two lateral cuts, one of which to come out at the Harbour of Montreal.

On Tuesday a Message was sent to the House of Assembly, by His Grace the Governor in Chief, informing that body, that His Royal Highness had been pleased to order grants of lands to the Militia embodied during the late War, and requesting an appropriation of Three Thousand Pounds to carry His Royal Highness' orders into effect.—The money was voted in a Committee of the whole House, and a bill is we understand, preparing accordingly.

The discussion on the Civil List, commenced last evening, and will be resumed Saturday. Gazette, April 8.

Letter to Dr. S. L. Mitchill, on the oil of pumpkin seeds, by C. S. Rafinesque.

NEW-YORK, Feb. 20.

While I was at Harmony, on the banks of the Wabash, in the state of Indiana, last summer, I was told by the industrious German Society of the Harmonists, that instead of throwing away or giving to the pigs the seeds of their pumpkins, as is usually done all over the country, they collected them and made an oil from them which they use for all the purposes of lamp oil and olive oil. It is well known that all the different species and varieties of pumpkins (genus Cucurbita of Linneus) afford an oil, which has valuable medical properties, possessing in the highest degree the refrigerent quality; but I had never heard before of its being made on a large scale, and for economical use.

It will be sufficient to mention this fact to some of our enlightened farmers, to induce them to imitate the worthy harmonists, and I recommend highly the practice, as likely to become eminently beneficial. The pumpkin seeds afford their oil with the greatest facility and abundance. One gallon of seeds will give about half a gallon of oil. They may be pressed like rape seed and flax seed. Their oil is clear, limpid, pale, scentless, and when used for sallad instead of sweet oil has merely a faint insipid taste; it burns well, and without smoke. Those advantages entitle it to our attention, as an indigenous production of first necessity. Pumpkins grow all over the United States, from Maine to Louisiana, and with such luxuriance as to produce sometimes as much as 50,000 lbs. weight of fruits, and about 2000 lbs. weight of seeds, in one acre of Indian corn, without injuring the crop of corn. Those 2000 lbs. of seeds might produce about 200 gallons of oil, worth about 200 dollars. I calculate that about two millions of gallons of such oil could be made annually in the United States from the seeds that are wasted or given to cattle and pigs. This is worth saving—and in addition to the bread, pies, soups, dishes, feed, &c. afforded by pumpkins, we shall have a good and wholesome home made vegetable oil for lamps and food.

A NEW SORT OF INDIAN CORN.

Messrs Ide and Aldrich,

If you will be kind enough to publish the following in your useful paper, it may be of essential benefit to the public, especially to enterprizing farmers.

As I was on my way to Boston, in October 1817, an acquaintance of mine told me, that a man in Bedford, by the name of Porter, had raised that year a new sort of corn, that was early and large. Our corn having been cut off by the frost for two or three years, I was anxious to embrace an opportunity to get an earlier sort, and the light rowed corn was so unproductive, I did not choose to plant it, and had not for many years. I therefore called on Mr. Porter, who took me into his corn house, where he showed me the handsomest bin of corn I ever saw. The ears were large and bright, and from 8 to 12 inches long, and there were from 10 to 18, but generally from 12 to 16 rows on an ear. Mr. Porter told me, that it was a fortnight earlier there than the little eight rowed Canada corn. I bought three pecks of it, a part of it in the ears to show its quality. I gave away several quarts of it to my friends, on my way home.

On the 28th of May, 1818, I planted a piece of ground containing 84 rods by exact measurement, with some of said corn. I furrowed the ground about 3 1-2 feet apart one way; I then took yard manure, that was carried out and laid in a large heap, the fall before, and spread it all along in the furrows; I then took a horse and plough and turned the furrows right back on to the manure; I then put three kernels in a hill, and planted the hills about 20 inches apart, which made it about twice as thick that way as the other. It grew very large, and was much admired. "I never saw the like," was the general expression of all who noticed it.

Some of my neighbors wished me to ascertain the quantity that grew on this piece of ground, which I have done as nearly as I could with convenience. In September I picked for seed the first ripe ears all over the piece, and traced up just 20 ears in a trace, and had 150 traces, which contained 3000 ears. I have since shelled, and find the whole to amount to 28 bushels. The fore part of October I gathered the remainder, and had it husked out in the evening, and laid it in a heap in my own house; and the next day we picked it over, and that which was then sufficiently dry to put into the bin, we measured in a basket which holds 2 1-2 bushels of shelled corn, and had 26 baskets, which we judged would be as much or more than 26 bushels of shelled corn, which, together with 28 bushels of seed corn, make 54 bushels; and we concluded that the part which we refused to put in the bin, was equivalent to the four rods which the piece of ground contained over a half acre; and by the cubs about the field, we judged that the hens and turkies had devoured four or five bushels. I therefore conclude, that the whole product was as much as at the rate of one hundred and sixteen bushels to the acre.

It being a good season for corn, doubtless I should have had a large crop, if I had planted my old sort; but I presume not so much, by more than one quarter. This I ascertained, by planting some side by side, and found its produce to be less than the new sort, by more than one quarter.

Finding this new sort of corn to be so valuable an acquisition, and wishing to have it propagated as much as possible, I saved a large quantity of it for seed; and that there might be a small beginning of it at least in each town in the state, I took 15 ears of it last October, and carried them to Montpelier, that the members of the legislature, who lived so remote that they would not otherwise have an opportunity to obtain it, might each of them obtain an ear.

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, Feb. 13.

AFRICA.

SIERRA-LEONE, DEC. 15.

We are happy to say, that Sir George Collier has arrived on the coast, in His Majesty's ship Tartar; and we sincerely hope he will prove successful, not only in clearing those seas from the numerous pirates which have invested the whole line of coast from hence to Bonaa, during the last two years, but that we shall hear no more of the slave-trade, which, during the same period, has been carried on with such suc. ess & facility, by the Spaniards, French, & Portuguese, for want of a man of war.

Since Feb. 1818, no vessel of war has appeared at the British settlements on the Gold Coast; the last arrival of any force was His Majesty's ship Semiramis, Commodore Sir James Yeo; since whose return the slave ships have anchored & carried on their abominable trade with, in sight of the British forts, to the number of six, seven, & eight vessels at a time, with impunity..

FEB. 16.

Preparations are making at Bushy-park, for the reception of the Duke & Duchess of Clarence, whose arrival in England is expected the beginning of the next month.

FEB. 17.

We are happy to have the authority of private letters from Naples, alluded to in the French Journals, for contradicting the report of M. Belzoni's death —an event so long believed, and so deeply deplored by all the admirers of Egyptian art, the students of ancient history, and the friends of hardy and useful enterprise.

This distinguished traveller has written to Lord Belmore, resident at Naples for some time past, to acquaint his Lordship that he was busy at Thebes, in Upper Egypt, on the 27th of October, where he pursued his interesting researches with equal activity & success. The British world will soon, we earnestly hope, be made acquainted with the extent of its farther obligations, to a gentleman who has already contributed more than any modern individual, to bring to light some intelligence of ages & of nations, which have left behind them no other trace of their existence, but the unquestionable grandeur of their works—an individual, who, almost destitute of resources, but in his own zeal, diligence, fortitude, & generosity, bestows them all without hesitation or regret, that science may profit by the fruits of them.

Mr. Tierney gave notice last night, that he should divide the House upon the proposed grant to the Duke of York of £10,000 a year, on his undertaking the custody of the King's person; or rather upon this question—whether, if the sum of £10,000 a year, is to be assigned to His Royal Highness, it ought not to be taken out of the Privy Purse?

The first question which occurs to every one to ask, is—whether the King, in coming under the Duke's care, comes a poor unprovided creature? No, we reply, every want & every wish of the amiable & afflicted Sovereign is amply covered by his affectionate people, in a noble & magnificent grant. His Majesty will be, under any circumstances, what may be called a rich boarder to the Duke. The £10,000 a year, therefore, is for the Duke's use exclusively, and we ask then, whether the very feelings of nature do not cry out against accepting such a sum, for the discharge of such a duty; or whether, if the money is to be advanced at all, it ought not to be taken, as Mr. Tierney now proposes, from the Privy Purse? We were in hopes that this matter would have come differently out of the Committee; but as the case rests at present, we trust that Ministers will not press a point which cannot fail to do more essential injury to His Royal Highness, in public opinion than ever the money can do him service in his domestic concerns.

GREENOCK, Jan. 26.

Melancholy Shipwreck.

About six o'clock on Friday morning, the fine ship Trelawney, 450 tons burthen, of Glasgow, bound to Jamaica, & commanded by David Reid, one of our most respectable & experienced shipmasters in the West India trade, went on shore on the Ayreshire coast, between Stevenson Burn & Irvine Bar. There was no communication between the vessel & the land in the morning; and at ten o'clock it came on to blow very hard, with a heavy swell, when four of the crew came on shore in the jollyboat, with a line, but it unfortunately slipped from the vessel. A cask, however, with a line, reached the shore, & four active, adventurous seamen, of Saltcoat, (three of them shipmasters,) immediately pushed off in a boat and succeeded in reaching the vessel. Having taken on board the Captain, & ten of the crew, which was as many as the boat could carry, they were returning, when the boat upset & all on board perished, within 200 yards of the shore, in the sight of a great number of people, who could give them no assistance.—The body of Capt. Reid, & that of one of the ship's boys named Clark, came on shore soon after, but all attempts to restore animation failed. The remainder of the crew, consisting of nine, with a passenger, were seen clinging to the masts & rigging all day, the sea breaking over the vessel, but no attempt could be made to save them, and four of them dropped off during the night. Next morning the weather having moderated, the other five seamen, with the passenger were carried on shore, and are fast recovering from the humane attention they have met with. Those six, with the four who got ashore in the jollyboat the preceding forenoon are all that are saved, nineteen having been drowned, including the four men who lost their lives in the generous attempt to save the lives of others.—The following are the names of those four men, three of whom have left families:—Capt. Robert Wood, jun. Capt. Samuel Ferrow, Capt. Highan, & John Hogart, seaman.

The vessel is already sanded as far as the gunwale, and partly broken up. The cargo fortunately was not very valuable, consisting mostly of herrings with some plantation stores, a considerable part of which will probably be saved.

The Archbishop of Jerusalem.

The Syrian Archbishop of Jerusalem, Gregorio Pierro Giarve, has lately arrived in this country, & has taken up his residence in Frith-street, Soho. He is in the dress of the Apostle St. James, with the blue turban, a loose robe, &c. His beard, and venerable & Apostolic appearance, attract great notice, & excite much curiosity. We learn, that the Archbishop's object in visiting England is to solicit assistance, and obtain some of the machinery, to establish a printing press at Mount Lebanon, for the purpose of preparing, and there distributing correct editions of the Sacred Scriptures in the Syriac Language. Although Mount Lebanon is under the dominion of a Christian Prince, nearly all the rest of Syria is governed by, & composed of Turks. Not a few of those have lately become Christians, for the fanatic fury of their faith seems to be every day abating. To gain many, very many, from Mahometanism over to Christianity, little more seems wanting than to distribute copies of the Bible amongst the Syrian Turks, in their own language; but to prepare such works has been found heretofore generally impracticable. The editions of the Bible printed in this country, for most parts of the East, have, from their total inaccuracy, been utterly useless. We believe, we may venture to say, without any offence to the learned, that none but a native ought to attempt to be the corrector of a Syriac press.—A single mistake in the placing of a point, may make the same word convey a meaning the most ludicrous, for what the author intended to be of a precisely opposite character. As the Archbishop undertakes to be himself the corrector of the press about to be established; and as the learned Prelate has travelled far, relying on the liberality & Christian feeling of England, we sincerely trust, that the stranger's reception here may be such as his sacred mission & character eminently deserve.

CAUTION TO SWEARERS.

About a fortnight ago two young men, one named Joseph Gowlett, a sailor, & the other a coal porter, in company at a public house, engaged, for a pot of beer, to try which could swear the most diabolical oaths; when Gowlett, after using the most abominable expressions for a short time, became exhausted, and could not utter a syllable, and has remained speechless ever since; a living example to those who take God's name in vain.

From the London Papers.

Mr. Vansittart the Chancellor of the Exchequer, lately stated in the house of commons, that since the close of the war, the people of Great Britain had been relieved from a burthen of taxation amounting to 15 millions sterling, and there had been paid off within the same period from 25 to 30 millions of unfunded debt.

Mr. Tierney in the house, early in February moved for the appointment of a committee to enquire into the effects of the restriction on payments in cash by the Bank of England, on exchanges with foreign countries, and on the state of the circulating medium, with a view to report whether any reasons existed for continuing the restriction beyond the period at present fixed by law. A debate ensued in which Mr. Vansittart moved an amendment for a general enquiry into the subject, and to report the result as far as the same could be done without being inconsistent with the public interest. The votes for the original motion of Mr. Tierney were 108. For the chancellor of the exchequer's amendment 217—majority—109. The committee was ordered to be secret & chosen by ballot.

A committee of parliament have been appointed to enquire into the validity of the doctrine, that the plague is a contagious disorder.

A bill was brought into parliament by the attorney general to abolish appeals of murder, felony, &c. by wager of a trial by battle.

Sir James Mackintosh gave notice on the 9th of Feb. that on that day three weeks he should bring in a motion on the criminal laws of the country.

A Committee of parliament has been appointed to consider the state of the poor laws, and to report their opinion thereon from time to time.

Mr. Sergeant Onslow, in parliament, Feb. 8th, moved for a new writ for the election of a member for Guilford, in the room of Mr. Justice Best; & for Aisburton, in the room of Sergeant Copley, who, since his election, has been appointed chief justice of Chester. New writs were also moved for New Windsor, in the room of Col. Desbrow, deceased; for Inverness, in the room of the right hon. Charles Grant, appointed chief secretary for Ireland; for Yarmouth, in the room of T. Anson, Esq. now Lord Anson; for the Borough of Shelburne; for Bletchingly, in Surrey; for Peterborough, in the room of W. Elliot Esq. deceased.

Agreeably to the late Lord Ellenborough's will, the mansion in St. James' square has been sold. The duke of Portland purchased it for £22,000. This proves the increasing value of houses in London, as lord E. gave only £18,000.

A premium of £50 has been offered by the prince regent, as duke of Cornwall & lord of the forest of Dartmoor, to the person who this year, shall cultivate the greatest number of acres of flax.

The coronation of Louis XVIII, is stated in Paris papers to have been postponed till the 15th of August next, the day of assumption. It will take place at Paris, and not at Rheims. It is a singular coincidence, that the day of the year, which Louis has chosen, is the same as that on which Bonaparte was crowned emperor of the French.

In the House of Commons, Feb. 18th, Lord Castlereagh rose pursuant to notice, to move for the appointment of a select committee to enquire into the income & expenditure of the country. His lordship congratulated the house on the present prosperous state of the country in a long & eloquent speech.

In the year ending Jan. 5, 1818, the receipt of the revenue was £51,655,000 —in the year ending Jan. 5, 1819, it was £57,063,000—giving an increase this year of £5,408,000 & combining it with other imposts, there was a general increase 4,062,000!—The general result would show that this year exceeded even the year 1815, in which the amount so greatly exceeded any previous one (by not less than £10,000,000) that it was esteemed an overgrown proceeding from unnatural & temporary causes which would never be expected to occur again. In the statement which he would now make, he would take the three quarters of each year, from Jan. to October. In the year 1813, the amount of the exports was £35,231,000 an amount greater by nearly 10,000,000 than any preceding year.

The last year being nearly £8,100,000 more than the excessive year 1815; (hear, hear,) he trusted that what he now stated would dispel gloom; he did not wish that it should diminish exertions; but he certainly thought that it would show how little weight was due to the exertions of those, who thought the country ought to recede from its duties, and from the high station which it so justly held in the politics of Europe. The noble lord concluded by moving "that a select committee be appointed to inquire into the income & expenditure of the country, and also to consider of the expenditure of the country, to the year ending Jan. 1820, so far as the same could be made up, and also to inquire & report as to what reduction might be made in the expenditure."

A machine invented by lieut. Burton, flag lieut. to rear ad. Otway, for propelling ships in a calm, has received the approbation of the lords of admiralty; and is ordered to be fitted for experiment, on board of the Clive, capt. sir James Gordon, now fitting up at Portsmouth.

Earl of Lauderdale.—We are concerned to state, that the Earl of Lauderdale, whilst sitting on the committee appointed by the house of peers to inquire into the state of the bank, relative to the question of cash payments, was seized with a fit of apoplexy. His lordship remained insensible for some time. On his coming to himself, he was conveyed to his residence, but in a very weak state; we are, however happy to learn, that since then his lordship is much better & in a fair way of doing well.

From the London Morning Chronicle, of March 5.

The public could not fail to remark, that the speech of Mr. Hobhouse, from the hustings, was literally the same in all the papers of yesterday. It was circular, & therefore the words of it cannot be disputed by that gentleman. We have then in this document the proof, that at the very moment when the rabble in his interest, inflamed by the intemperate harangues of Sir Francis Burdett & himself, were breaking into the committee house of Mr. Lamb, & were perpetrating murderous attacks upon every gentleman who supported him, Mr. Hobhouse did not hesitate to ascribe to the whigs, all the atrocities of the day. What shall we think of a person who, in the face of the riot that he had provoked, casts it upon his opponent? and what, in like manner, can be thought of that honorable baronet himself, who, in that scene of fever & fury, gave his followers a hint of the conduct of a most respectable tradesman, whose eyes had been opened to the levelling & destructive doctrines of the rump, & who had consequently left his side. A pointed denunciation of an individual was never made, & it was fortunate for Mr. Storch that his house was not in the direct line of the rioters.

The mischief committed in different parts of the town was considerable. The house of Lord Castlereagh is for the time, rendered uninhabitable; the front of Mr. Wishart's premises was completely demolished; and the same destruction took place at the committee rooms in Henrietta st. in Park-Place, at the British tavern, & at the Newcastle coffee house; but what was still more horrible, the gentlemen who appeared on horseback to shew respect to the successful candidate, escaped with difficulty from being murdered; and yet, with all this staring Mr. Hobhouse in the face, he presumed to charge the employment of ruffians on the Whigs!

The Duke of Wellington.—Very erroneous ideas are entertained respecting the wealth acquired by our illustrious hero. It is well known, to all leading military men, that the duke's allowance amounted only to £6000 per annum.—His expenses, except when in Paris, greatly exceeded his income; and at Cambray, where he kept open house to all who chose to join in the sports of the field, they were enormously great. It is true that £500,000, (the award of parliament) appears a great sum; but when we consider that £263,000 of that sum goes to lord Rivers, there is then to be built a magnificent palace, which will swallow up the greater part of the residue. As to the services of plate, the one from Portugal takes the lead, & even that, what is the intrinsic value? It abounds with ornament, & the sculpture is very beautiful; but as to solid worth, it is inconsiderable. As to the story of the pictures, it is a fable. Extravagration has extended their value to between one and two hundred thousand pounds. His grace has few pictures of great celebrity; and not one of those which he rescued from the fangs of Joseph Bonaparte, at the battle of Vittoria, who stole them from the Escurial. A gentleman, very likely to be well informed, asserts, that the duke of Wellington's income, when all his affairs are arranged, will not exceed £20,000 per annum.

Remarkable Oak.—Near the thirty-third mile stone, on the London road, near Rainham, Norfolk, in the garden of a cottager, lies the decaying trunk of an ancient oak, which has lost its important character & honors by time, that has with it also destroyed the roots, its foliage, & its limbs. The tree itself was once a parish boundary; also a sea mark, and separated the eastern & western divisions of the county. These were sufficient to give it importance—it may be replaced but another cannot obtain the honor the old stump can boast as it was under that tree the famed Watts, of Rochester, in the year of his mayoralty, in company with the corporation met the more famous queen Elizabeth on her return from Dover, where she had been to view part of the fleet after it had defeated the Spanish Armada & under which she and they enjoyed a dejeune, leaving the remainder of viands, plates, knives, & forks, for the use of the poor of the parish of Rainham, after which, she accompanied the cavalcade to the worshipful the mayor's house, on Boley Hill, which she called "Satis," from the sumptuous entertainment she enjoyed there. When this tree, worn out with age & time, fell down, other plants were placed in the same situation, but, as though the earth felt jealous of a supplanter, it refused to nourish them, nor have any efforts to raise another oak on that spot, although several attempts have been made, ever succeeded.

New Publications in December.

The most costly book of the month, & one of the most splendid in the language, is the edition of Don Quixote, embellished with masterly engravings, from original paintings by Mr. SMIRKE. It may indeed, be called the Smirke Quixote; for the father executed the designs, while his ingenious daughter corrected, improved, & perfected the translation. The engravers having exerted their best skill, and no expense having been spared in every department of the work by the publishers, it may be considered, in its best editions, as a specimen of the advanced state of the arts of design, engraving, and typography in London, at the epoch of its publication. As may be expected the quarto & the royal octavo editions are becoming scarce, and are likely to bear a considerable premium.

The Memoirs of General Sir James Leith, add to the authentic materials of the military history of the late war. The general, after setting at defiance all the machinery of death in fields of battle, in various parts of Europe, fell a victim to the West-India climate in October 1816.

Florence Macarthy, by LADY MORGAN is distinguished by the same spirit of enthusiasm which characterizes all the productions of the author of "the Wild Irish Girl." The commendable design of the present novel is to awaken the attention of the public to the wretched & degraded condition of the lower classes of the Irish nation, by a spirited picture of their manners & customs, their sufferings, their privations, & their hitherto unconquerable loyalty.

The fourth part of the Encyclopedia Metropolitana indicates the same care in its composition, and the same good faith in the embellishments, which have characterized the former parts. We learn, from the last American journals that its republication is announced in Philadelphia, by the proprietors of the the republished Rees.

INDIA.—M. LANGLES in his very able & curious work on Indian Literature & English Missions, states,—

That there are more than twenty establishments of English missionaries in the East Indies, extending from Sirdhana, north of Delhi; to Amboyna, in the Indian ocean, a distance of more than four thousand miles!

The number of persons employed in these missions at the end of year 1813 was forty-four, twelve of whom were Europeans & thirty-two natives. But, according to a statement published in the Asiatic Journal for May 1817, there were at that period ninety-eight European & twenty-three native Protestant missionaries in India, of different denominations.

SUFFOLK.—A thrashing machine upon a simple & useful construction, was exhibited at the last Bury fair; the whole complete can be drawn by a single horse to any distance, and is not heavier than a common turnrell; it is made to work by four levers, similar to a pump sweep, and those worked by men, who can thrash from fifteen to twenty coombs per day.

SCOTLAND.—Seventy thousand pounds have been lately bequeathed to the parish of Dollar, in Clackmannanshire, by a person named Macnab, whose history & connexion with the parish is very impertinently known. The money is left at the sole disposal of the minister & kirk session of Dollar, a parish containing only about 800 persons. The Ministers the Rev. Andrew Mylne, a gentleman long eminent as a teacher in Edinburgh, and the author of several valuable works on education. It is proposed to employ the money in forming an academy, which will be the most extensive in Scotland, and perhaps in Britain. Besides teachers for English, Latin, Greek, and the modern languages, there will be professors of botany, practical chemistry, mathematics, natural history, moral philosophy, and some other branches.

LONDON, Feb. 2.

The Duke of Wellington's Banquet, given expressly to the Archduke Maximilian, &c. on Friday last, was one of the most sumptuous entertainments ever witnessed. Selections were made from the three magnificent services of plate presented to the illustrious Field Marshal by three Sovereigns. These inimitable specimens decorated the side boards; on the centre of the table was placed a fine plateau, enriched with massive sculpture. The centre ornament, of vast size, represented the military fame of Great Britain; it is said to be a present from the Spanish Government. Candelabras of massive silver, and of the most superb description, illuminated every object. The dinner consisted of three courses; and among the novelties was the leg of a wild boar, shot by the Emperor of Russia, and sent as a present to Count Munster. At seven o'clock the party sat down to dinner. The dessert consisted of a display of foreign fruits & preserves, served on China of matchless device, and selected from fifteen different sets. The wines were the produce of the rarest vintages; and the most delicious liqueurs, with golden water. The party did not break up till midnight.

The Report of Col. Stephenson, Surveyor-General of the Board of Works, as to the practicability of superceding the practice of Climbing boys by the use of machinery, is on the whole favorable to the use of machines, though the result of the experiments is, that the three Royal Architects concur in opinion, that Climbing Boys cannot be at present totally dispensed with.

National Monument.—It has been rumoured, and is generally believed, that Sir Wm. Scott has suggested an admirable idea concerning the proposed National Monument. Parliament, we have heard, has it in contemplation to vote £200,000 for the erection of a fabric, which may be a permanent memorial of British Glory. However, this may be, it is impossible not to feel gratitude to Sir William Scott for the suggestion. It would combine both utility and ornament; and the addition of the Museum would, as it were, be a permanent biographical account of the thing and its intention.

On Threshing Machines, and other improved Implements of Agriculture concluded.

wheel. This spur wheel has 84 cogs; the pinion wheel on which it acts 12 cogs. The axis of this pinion wheel, by being continued through the drum, turns it with the required velocity. On the drum is fixed 6 beaters or skutchers, which act with such force as would astonish any person that had never seen the operations of thrashing machines before. And to prevent the danger of persons getting maimed by the slightest touch of the cylinder or beaters, flying with such immense velocity. & waste of grain, it ought to be closely covered in. The feeding rollers, for offering the grain to the repeated strokes of the beaters, is thus contrived. Into the end of the axis of the before mentioned spur wheel, is fixed an iron cylinder or roller, in which is cut deep grooves longitudinally, & at its other end, has a small toothed wheel, which connecting with a similar wheel, on the end of another roller of the same dimensions, & grooved in the same manner, driving it round with equal velocity, in an opposite direction; whereby the grooves of both rollers thus turning inward, carries with irresistible force whatever is presented to their grasp. A sloping board is placed, so as almost to touch the feeding rollers; on which the feeder spreads the grain as evenly as possible, which is taken in & uniformly presented to the repeated blows of the skutchers, which are made to strike upwards.

The diameter of the drum of such a machine is 3 feet 6 inches; the length of the beaters 3 feet 7 inches. The diameter of the drum of a four horse machine is 4 feet, length of beaters 4 feet 6 inches,—the price of which with wire network, to let the grain pass into a winnowing machine, and a couple of rakes or shakers, to move the straw as it falls from the drum, is 100 guineas in Great Britain.—a two horse one is 60 guineas. The first will thrash 240 bushels in 10 hours; and a two horse one will thrash 140 bushels in the same space of time. The large machine would require seven hands to attend when thrashing, viz. one to feed, one to hand the sheaves to the feeder, two to take away & bundle up the straw, & stow it in a house for the purpose, two to riddle the grain from the fanning machine, or if sufficiently cleaned without riddling, to measure it into bags, and one to drive the horses: two in number less would suffice for a two horse machine.

A model of a machine on the above principles, was brought into Virginia about 24 or 25 years ago, & I believe gov. Lee got one built; but whether it answered in that state, I have never been informed.

It appears that in 1782 a Col. Anderson, then of Philadelphia, invented a mill to go by horses for thrashing wheat or other grain; and in 1791 he had one built on full size, which worked to advantage; but which he admits, was susceptible of considerable improvement. He has also invented a machine on a different construction, to rub out the grain.¶¶

FROM LOWER-CANADA.

Extract of a letter from Montreal April, 11, 1819.

"In consequence of a communication which appeared in the Montreal Courant, of Saturday 10th instant, signed, "An active Advocate of an Hospital" Mr. O'Sullivan sent to demand the author, (of Mr. Mower), who prematurely gave up the name of Dr. Caldwell; a duel was the result, and at 6 o'clock, Sunday morning the parties with their seconds having met near the Windmills, five shots were fired by each Gentleman; two of them have dangerously wounded Mr. O'Sullivan; Dr. Caldwell has received a shot in the arm, which is much shattered."

Mr. O'SULLIVAN is a Member of the Assembly of this Province, for the County of Huntingdon. He opposed in the House, this Session, a Petition from Montreal, for an Hopital there, of which Dr. CALDWELL was one of the promoters. His speech on this occasion was published, and gave rise to some anonymous and personal remarks in the Montreal papers. The publication which produced the challenge, was signed "An active friend for an Hospital," & appeared in the Courant. It contained an allusion derogatory to the personal courage of Mr. O'Sullivan, on the occasion of an insult which his friends had been of opinion he could not notice.

The high and amiable character of Mr. O'SULLIVAN, the nature of the duel and the possible result of the wounds which he has received, has given to this unfortunate affair an uncommon interest both in Montreal and this City.

Mr. O'SULLIVAN was alive when the cause away on Tuesday.

A STORE wanted, in an eligible situation in the main Street of this town. The terms to be left with the Editor.
York, 3d May, 1819.

From the Albany Gazette.

Messrs. Editors,

Will you do me the favor to lay before your readers the following article from an English paper, on the subject of a Canal proposed to be made in that country, the principal object of which is to facilitate the transportation of Sea Sand into certain counties, where it is much used as a manure for their lands.

Yours, A. B.

Canal from Bude Haven into the interior of the Counties of Cornwall and Devon.

The proposed scheme appears to us very different in its nature to most other canals, its object being principally Agricultural, and the returns to be expected will arise chiefly, though not entirely, out of the conveyance of seas and from the coast of Bude, into districts where it is now generally used as a manure.

The value of the Bude sea sand, as a manure, may be judged of by the fact, that it is now carried even the distance of 20 miles into the country, over the worst roads, with immense labor, and consequently at a very heavy expense; and it has been correctly ascertained, that even with such disadvantages the quantity of sand now carried from Bude into the districts through which the canal will pass, amounts to 224,000 seams or 28,000 tons; and that the quantity will be increased in proportion to the facility and lowness of price at which it can be obtained by this canal, there can be no doubt; and an immense number of acres of land, which are now wholly or in part unproductive, from the want of manure, will be brought into a state of improved cultivation. It is calculated that if the sand be carried only three miles on each side of the canal, (and it will probably be carried much further,) 158,000 acres of land will be improved, of which 75,000 acres may be considered at present waste, or nearly unprofitable. The rental of the land, of which the cultivation would be improved, may at a very moderate estimate increase ten shillings per acre on the land at present cultivated, and 15s per acre on that which is not, making on both together an annual increase to the rental of those districts of no less than the enormous sum of 95,550*l.* This calculation alone is sufficient to show the great consequence of the undertaking to the possessors of property on or near the line of the proposed canal. It should also be observed, that the canal if executed in its full extent, would require 3 or 4 years for its completion, and during that time would give general employment to the laborers of the several parishes through which it would pass, and therefore tend greatly to diminish the poor rates of the whole district; nor would this advantage be felt only during the execution of the canal, for as its natural effect will be to produce an increased cultivation of land, the additional employment thereby afforded will be gradual and uniform, and must produce a great and permanent benefit to all classes of persons.

There are other advantages which would attend this most important and beneficial measure, which although not wholly agricultural, are not less evident though it may be more difficult to estimate in numbers the results that may be confidently expected. The markets, which would be open for lime, from the pits at Sourton, Lifton and St. Stephens which cannot at present be worked to any considerable extent, from the expense of coals and culm obtained as they now are by land carriage from a very considerable distance; the facility that would be afforded for selling even to distant counties, the surplus produce of the districts through which the canal would pass; the easy and economical conveyance of that most necessary article of fuel, and all the general merchandize, which the consumption of the country might require; these, and many other advantages, must impress every mind with the importance of the undertaking.

The Improvement of Bude Haven is in itself an object well worthy the attention of every one connected with the agricultural or commercial interests of the country, since it promises, with the proposed lines of the canal, to open a safe, easy, and certain communication between the coast, and an extensive back country, which is at present for want of such a communication, destitute of almost all the means of improvement; and if the proposed line to Launceston be adopted, an immediate connection of the Bristol Channel at Bude, and of the British Channel at Plymouth, will speedily be effected, an object to the importance of which no one be insensible. The undertaking considered as a whole, appears fraught with incalculable advantages to the country at large; and from the report and estimate of the engineer, which we have seen, it cannot fail of becoming a lucrative source of profit to the adventurers.

It appears that on the article of sea sand only, supposing but double the quantity now carried by land will be carried by the canal, and furnished to the farmer for half the present price, an income will rise equal to more than 10*l* per cent on the required capital; but it has been most clearly ascertained, that the demand for sand very far above that which the engineer has calculated on, will take place, and that he would have been warranted in anticipating much larger returns, independently of every other species of trade. The undertaking is likely to prove not only beneficial to the agricultural interests of the country, but also to the mouths of men and capitalists, to whom it offers a very advantageous opportunity for the investment of capital.

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON Feb. 1.

We have received Hamburgh and Dutch mails. An article dated Brussels, Jan. 27, states, "That the number of persons included in the royal ordinances, and banished in consequence from France, is very much diminished. Six of them have died in foreign countries, and many others, including three generals, have obtained leave to return home. It is now said, that on the coronation of his Majesty, several others will be recalled. There is no want of exertion in behalf of marshals Soult & Grouchy, and gen. Lallemand.—Many persons take particular interest in gen. Carnot, who is now in Prussia, where he seems to enjoy great esteem. Those who have the least chance of ever being permitted to return, are said to be Savary, ex-minister of the police, and gen. Hullin, who was president of the court martial which condemned to death the unfortunate Duke D'Enghien.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Feb. 11.

PLAGUE CONTAGION.

Sir John Jackson, after observing that he believed there would be no objection to his motion, moved for a select committee to inquire into the validity of the doctrine of contagion in the plague, and to report their observations thereon.

Mr. Wynn observed, that as no explanation of the reasons of this motion had been given, it seemed to him a subject on which it would be better to call for the opinion of the college of physicians than of a committee of the house.

Mr. Robinson said, he should be able to shew that there were very sufficient Parliamentary grounds for the present motion.—The quarantine laws, it was well known were very rigid in their nature, and entailed much inconvenience & expence on the ships that were subject to them. These laws were entirely founded on the opinion which for some centuries had prevailed, that the plague was contagious; but recent enquiries had thrown considerable doubts on the validity of this doctrine.—The question had been brought under the consideration of the branch of government with which he was connected, and he confessed he had been struck with the reasonings which had been adduced in favour of the opinion that it was not contagious, but epidemic. The subject had been referred to the college of physicians, who had originally advised the enactment of the quarantine laws: their opinion certainly was, that their original doctrine was sound and untouched by subsequent experiments. The subject, however, deserved every degree of light which could be thrown upon it, and it so happened that the committee which had sat last on the prevailing epidemic fevers in London, had added to the doubts which had been entertained as to the nature of the plague. He trusted, therefore, that the subject was not unworthy of the consideration of a committee, as the settlement of this question, especially if it should be established that the plague was epidemic and not contagious, would be of the highest importance to the interests of commerce and the happiness of the world [hear!]

Mr. Wynn said, that after the explanation which had been given, he could have no possible objection to the motion. But he trusted the house would pause a little before it legislated [hear!] if a committee of the house should be of a contrary opinion to that of the college of physicians.

Sir John Jackson, in explanation of the motives which had induced him to make this motion, stated, that in addition to the reasoning contained in publications of this subject, it had been said in the evidence before the committee of last year, by the physician who had attended for 24 years at Bartholomew's hospital, that in all that time he had not met with one instance in which fever was contagious.

The motion was agreed to, and the committee was appointed.

On Tuesday se'nnight an inquest was held at Barton upon Trent, before Sir J. D. Fowler, on the body of a child of about three years of age, whose death was occasioned by eating a quantity of the seeds of a plant called "Stramonium," or Thorn Apple. The deceased and some other children had been amusing themselves with plucking off the fruit, and tossing it at each other, when one of the apples, which had been trod upon, discovered to the little infant the seeds it contained; she immediately put some to her mouth, and finding them rather sweet, eat a considerable quantity, in consequence of which she was taken ill in about an hour after; and so rapid was the poison in its progress, that notwithstanding every exertion was used by the most eminent of the profession, it proved fatal in little more than eighteen hours.

The Independence, and Fortitude homeward, from St. Thomas's & St. Kitt's, with cargoes of West India produce, report, that Colonel Macdonald, who had been joined the Independent forces from England, had been massacred, with many other British officers, through mistake, by a body of Indians; they happened to fall in with the British officers while at dinner, and supposing them to be Spaniards, they attacked them with such savage ferocity, that they were all either killed instantly, or died of their wounds. The insurgent naval force under Admiral Brion, consists of twenty square rigged vessels, and expected a further reinforcement, when, it was understood, they would instantly commence offensive operations.

On Friday evening, as general Dillon & Dr. Jarrett, two of the Grand Jurors of the county of Meath, were returning from the Assizes of Trim, in a g g, they were stopped by two foot-pads, armed with pistols, and robbed of two pounds in cash. The General also lost a gold chain & two seals, which one of the depredators took from the General's watch, returning the watch for fear of discovery by its means. The General said, "Lads, why rob me? I have been always a friend to the distressed." One of the thieves answered, "General who should a man in distress borrow from, but from a friend."

ASTONISHING TREE.

On the Isle of Sor, to the east, cotton & indigo grow naturally, and together with mangoesnmonous, the magnificent boabab, or adansonia, the elephant of the vegetable kingdom, is found. This tree often serves the negroes for a dwelling, the construction of which costs no further trouble than cutting an opening in the side to serve as a door, and taking out the very soft pith which fills the inside of the trunk. The tree far from being injured by this operation, seems even to derive more vigor from the fire which is lighted in it, for the purpose of drying the sap, by carbonizing it. In the state it almost always happens that the bark, instead of forming a ridge at the edge of the wound, as happens in some trees in Europe, continues to grow, and at length covers the whole inside of the tree, generally without any wrinkles, & thus presents the astonishing spectacle of an immense tree recompleted in its organization but having the form of an enormous hollow cylinder, or rather a vast arborescent wall, bent into a circular form, and having its sides sufficiently wide asunder to let you enter in to the space which it encloses. If casting your eyes on the immense dome of verdure which forms the summit of this rural palace, we see a swarm of birds adorned with the richest colours, and soumanga, shining with gold & azure; if advancing under the vault, we find flowers of dazzling whiteness, hanging on every side; and if in the centre of the retreat, an old man & his family, a young mother & her child meet the eye; what a crowd of delicious ideas are aroused at this moment!—The leaves when dried are converted into the powder lalo, with which the natives season almost all their food. They employ the roots medicinally inwardly, and its gummy bark for disorders in the breast, they make cataplasms of the parenchyma of the trunk for cutaneous diseases,—they use the pulp of its fruit as an astringent beverage,—they regale themselves with its almonds, they smoke the calyx of its flowers instead of tobacco,—and often by dividing into two parts the globular capsules, and leaving the long woody stalk fixed to one of the halves, which become dry & hard, they make a large spoon or ladle.

It is stated in one of the latest London papers, that the bodily health of the king remains unimpaired, excepting by the natural infirmity of old age. The stories that he had been injured by a fall, and that his apartment is in a dangerous state or decay, are both contradicted in an article under the Windsor head.

The Liverpool Courier of January 25, in speaking of the mildness of the winter, observes, that "last week, an apple was gathered from a tree in an orchard belonging to James Wilson, Esq. of Heyroyd-House."

Agricultural report for February.—As the ports will remain shut until the 22d of May, the state of the markets will be the best guide as to the produce of the last crop. According to reports from most parts, the backwardest wheats are the forwardest, that is to say, in the road to perfection; the most forward & luxuriant being in a fitter state for May than the present month, and causing apprehensions of great danger, should April & May prove cold & ungenial.

The wheats have been attacked, it is said, by the wire-worm, more probably the sing, and they are in the foulest state that has been seen for many years; a real misfortune to the broad-cast farmer. By a general report wages are very low, and many wretched laborers, in most parts, in a state of mendicancy. The high price of seed-beans has greatly extended the practice of dibbling, and both beans & peas are above ground, in some very forward lands. The fallows of the Lent corn are all in good condition.

Tranquility is restored in the French councils, the new peers having been qualified, and taken their seats. The chamber of deputies have rejected the proposition from the peers relative to the law of elections by a handsome majority.

St. Jean d'Angely, who had obtained permission to return to France, arrived at Paris, March 10th, and died the day after of gout in the stomach.

The fortune of the prince of Peace, is estimated at 100,000,000.

PARIS, March 24.

The alarms which have been spread since the congress of Aix-la-Chapelle, first by the change of ministry, and next by the proposition of the chamber of peers regarding the law of elections, are now dissipated. That proposition which appeared like the frightful prognostic of a tempest, has been rejected by the chamber of deputies by a majority of 50 votes, out of a total of 244.—The speech of the seals, which tore the veil that concealed from public view the horrible assassinations which took place in the south of France during the years 1815 and 1815, produced in the chamber an effect difficult to be described. The assembly was so struck with his description, that no orator wished to speak after him. "All possible efforts (said he) have been made by the government of the king to bring to justice the assassins of general Legarde, who was attacked at the moment when in the name of the king, he came as a minister of peace. The author of that crime was arrested, delivered over to the tribunals, and convicted of having fired upon general Legarde, while, with sword in his hand, that officer was endeavoring to appease the multitude.—The jury declared, that the homicide was rendered necessary by the want of legitimate defence, (a movement of horror in the assembly.) The law directed the president of the court of assizes to set the accused at liberty. General Ramel wounded in the tumult of Toulouse. He was assailed on his death bed by furious wretches, who tore his body. Those ruffians being brought before a court of justice, were acquitted by the jury on the ground "that the blows which were inflicted on the general, when in bed, had not determined his death, because the wounds which were previously received were mortal!" After some moments of interruption, the minister continued.—"Shall I speak, gentlemen, of a man whose name I feel a horror in pronouncing? Trestaillon, accused of frightful crimes, became the object of prosecution, at the instance of the king's law officers. The judicial authority objected to his being tried in the city where the crimes were committed, as they entertained a fear for the freedom of the court, from the consternation of the citizens, and the terror which the criminal inspired. He was accordingly transferred, for trial, to Riom.—Would you believe the result? A single witness could not be found against Trestaillon, and a hundred pretended themselves to vouch for his innocence. The terror these assassins inspired was so great, that justice could not find witnesses who durst give evidence for the prosecution, nor a jury who would have dared to find them guilty. Finally, the assassination of St. Remies was a party crime, and the government was obliged to exert all its force to protect the action of justice, and to repress those efforts which the partisans of the criminals made to rescue them from execution."

We know not what tactics the Ultras will follow after so signal a defeat in the chamber of deputies.

PARIS, March 21.

The reception of the Persian ambassador did not take place yesterday. It is asserted that difficulties, arising from the difference of the eastern ceremonies with ours, have occasioned its postponement.

A person who left Cadiz on the 10th ult and who is now in Paris, has communicated the following details relative to the expedition about to be sent to Buenos Ayres:

"The number of troops is about 13,000, including infantry and cavalry, and already occupy their cantonments in the neighborhood of that port.—Count d'Abisbal (O'Donnell) who commands in chief, and who is appointed viceroy of Buenos Ayres, assembled in Cadiz 15,000 on the 28th of January last, the day appointed to celebrate the interment of her majesty the late queen. He reviewed them in the place of St. Antoine, in the presence of a considerable body of spectators, which increased the splendor of the ceremony, and who all admired the equipment and steady discipline of the troops.

All the generals who are attached to the expedition, are at this moment assembled in Cadiz. General O'Donnell is incessantly occupied in enforcing every precaution necessary to accelerate its departure, called to such an important destiny, and which will, without doubt, be the finest that ever left the ports of Spain. The troops are animated with the best spirit, and every thing excites the most pleasing hopes.

Journal des Debats.

LONDON, March 23.

The last arrival of American papers has brought the result of a discussion of three weeks, on the question of the Seminole war, and Jackson's manner of conducting it.—Whatever may be the predominant feeling of the American people at the present day, we doubt not that some of them may live to wish, that the transactions of that war, and the votes of congress with regard to it could be for ever buried in the same grave, and snatched everlastingly from the historian, and from the observation, and remembrance of the civilized world. If the insults offered to the Spanish government, the persecutions exercised towards the Indian race, and the unheard-of atrocities inflicted on British subjects, be matter of just reproach to that furious being, by whom, in the career of successful violence, they were perpetrated;—what shall we say,—what will society,—what must posterity think of that legislative body, by whom such crimes were, after cool deliberation, acquiesced in, confirmed, and applauded?

Our readers are aware that the committee of congress on military affairs had made a report unfavourable to Gen. Jackson's proceedings, especially in the wanton murder of our countrymen. This report the house of representatives has negatived, by a majority of 108 votes to 62. We refer the public to a long speech of Mr. Johnson, which we this day insert, for a sample of the moral and legal reasoning by which general Jackson was defended; and we refer to a brief extract from the proceedings of congress for the shameful success which has attended Mr. Jackson's oratory.

The question, however, is merely determined between Mr. Jackson and the United States; their votes cannot bind or conclude Great Britain; and the pleadings of her government, & the sentence of her parliament, are still to be laid before the world.

The commercial world will learn with satisfaction, that a plan has been commenced under the auspices of the British Government, for determining the relative contents of the weights and measures of trading countries.—This important object is to be accomplished by procuring from abroad correct copies of foreign Standards, and comparing them with those of England at His Majesty's mint. This can only be effected, at a moment of universal peace, and has never been attempted on a plan sufficiently general or systematic.

PARIS, March 11.

Yesterday there was a grand council which commenced at 1, and continued until half past 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

The definitive organization of the national guards is referred to the king's ministers, and will soon be discussed in council.

Yesterday the memoirs of count Las Casas were seized at the bookseller's L'Huillier.

It is not ascertained when the projects of law concerning the press, the journals, and the trial by jury, will be presented to the chamber—but it appears certain, notwithstanding what has been said in one of the papers, that they will not be submitted to the chamber, during the present week.

It is asserted, that in compliance with the orders of the king, the minister of the interior has given directions to different statuaries, to execute marble statues of Pascal, Montaigne, Bossuet, Corneille, Racine, La Fontaine, and Montesquieu, which are to be placed in the cities which gave birth to these great men.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

Having presented our readers in our last paper with an important document, relative to the Bank of England, we shall now lay before them a view of the general Banking system of Europe, so far as we have had the means of informing ourselves on this interesting subject:—

The most ancient Bank of Europe is that of Venice; in 1171, the republic of Venice being pressed for money, levied a contribution on its citizens, and gave a perpetual annuity of 4 per cent [illegible] to have been established without a capital deposited, and its credit was well supported, till the invasion of the French in 1797, when the freedom of the city, and independence of the state being lost, it disappeared like a dream.

The Bank of Amsterdam, was founded in 1609, on liberal & commercial principles, and soon became an entrepot, for the valuable products of the whole earth; its first capital was formed of Spanish ducats or ducatoons, but it soon became a reservoir for the coins of all Europe, which were brought thither. About the middle of the last century, the municipal managers, secretly lent their bullion to the East India Company & to the Government, notwithstanding they had taken a religious oath, to retain the gold & silver in their cells, and while the unsuspecting Hollanders vainly imagined that a metallic constituent lay sealed in the Bank to meet, on demand, their paper money. This blind confidence was dissipated in 1790, by a declaration that the Bank would retain 101 per cent. of all deposits, and would return none less than 2,5000 florins! In 1755 the amount of its treasure was estimated at 33,000,000 of florins. On the invasion of Holland, by the French, the Bank declared, it had advanced to the States and to the East India Company, 10,300,000 florins, the sum which was deficient to their depositors.

The Bank of Hamburgh, was established in 1619, and was the best administered of any in Europe—its funds were German crowns—lends its money on the deposit of Spanish dollars at the rate of 2 per cent per annum. Marshal Davoust, in 1813, retook this city, and found there 7,500,000 marcs Banco.

The Bank of Genoa, originally founded on shares deposited, and the most ancient now in existence; its funds were at first independent of the government, but were afterwards placed on the security of the States; it received a fatal blow from the invasion of the Austrians, 1746, from which it has not yet fully recovered.

The Bank of Vienna, was founded by Maria Theresa, in the seven years war; the Empress issued bills of credit for 12,000,000 of florins, payable in this paper money. In 1797, the Bank could no longer redeem its notes, and, in 1816, it had issued notes to the amount of 1,000,000,000 of florins. In 1811, the Austrian Government declared it would issue no more paper, but ordered that issued, to be liquidated at one fifth of its value, by the sale of ecclesiastical property, after the manner of a sinking fund!

The Bank of Berlin, was established in 1765, and issued notes from 4 to 1,000 livres, which paper was always exactly liquidated—the capture of Berlin, by the French, in 1806, suspended its payments, which have since been discharged, and the Bank re-established.

The Bank of Stockholm, was founded

This bank borrowed money at four, and lent it at six per cent per annum, and at the death of Charles XII. it had a capital of 5,000,000. Another Bank now joined this, and they soon issued paper to the amount of 600,000,000 of crowns of copper, which soon fell to the 96th part of what it had been originally issued for! Government at last owed this Bank 80,000,000 of silver crowns, which, in time, caused notes to be issued of the low value of six pence!

The Bank of Copenhagen, was established in 1736, by royal authority, with a capital of 300,000 crowns—it had issued 11,000,000 of paper crowns, when the King of Denmark returned the deposits of stockholders, and became sole proprietor—they had issued paper to 20 times the amount of their capital, which had even increased to 600,000 crowns—the King carried his issue to 16,000,000. In 1813, 1,800 crowns in paper were offered for one crown of silver!

The Russian Assignats Bank, was founded in 1768, and issued during the first 18 years nearly 5,000,000 sterling. In 1786, the Empress created a loan Bank, and increased the mass of assignats, to 100,000,000—at her decease, in 1796, they had been multiplied to about 160,000,000 of roubles. At the death of Louis the XIV, the metallic currency of France did not exceed 1,200,000,000 of francs, or £50,000,000, sterling. In Spain, in 1800, not more than £20,000,000 sterling. It should seem then, that a paper issue of 577,000,000 of roubles, is excess for Russia, and it has proved so in the depression of the circulation, to one fourth of the nominal value of their issue—the circulation of Russia at present seems to be filled with paper, copper, and specie, to the amount of 150,000,000 of roubles, of the par of 3-4.

The Bank of England, next presses on our view, and has been established 126 years; for the history of which we refer to Allardyce, Smith & Stuart. This Bank is as unlike some of the former, as the glorious sun, to its revolving and obscure dependants; or a planet to its satellites.—A keen & ardent Scotchman a man of genius & vigour, was its projector; the same who conceived the fine design of uniting the great Ocean of the Atlantic & the Pacific, by an establishment at the Isthmus of Darien. Jealousy, selfishness & narrow policy defeated him in this laudable attempt, and directed his mind to lay the foundation of this Financial Colossus of Great Britain—its original capital was £1,200,000 sterling—like the Bank of Venice, it owed its privileges to the distresses of government—it received a shock in the invasion of 1745; when time was gained by counting out six pences. The riots & government embarrasments brought on it in 1797, caused a suspension of its metallic payments, which reduced the Bank Notes from a paper of commercial credit, to a state paper money; at which time, eight millions & a half, sterling, of its paper was in circulation, and not £1,300,000 of specie in its coffers—its circulation perhaps at this time, is about £25,000,000 sterling, which it is highly probable, could be instantly redeemed by its Bullion, & Bills discounted,—9-10ths of this paper serves the purposes of government, and the private Banks feed the great circulation of England—its capital & accumulations all remain in the public funds, or advanced on the Exchequer Bills of the State. A metallic currency can, by nothing short of a miracle, suddenly take the place of a paper circulation, nor supply the place of credit, which is the soul of our financial existence; if that take wings & fly away, the body will be at once effete & prostrate. The nature of the case, the circumstances or necessities of our condition, do not of themselves sink us to this state; Panic without adequate cause, or conduct of the grossest empiricism, folly, or weakness, can alone inflict on us this calamity. Thus we have, by considerable labour, extracted for our readers, from our English papers, the most important information concerning the public, corporate, and privileged Banks of Europe, which as our retrospect proves, have by common fate alternately fallen into the hands & snares of government.

In a future Paper, we intend to compare small things with great, and to lay before our readers, the principles on which all financial systems are grounded. The present distresses of England are entirely caused by the worthless jealousy, and selfish policy of the Banks throughout that kingdom. Commercial speculators embarking deeply in trade, with their usual reliance on the accommodation of Bank's discount, have lately been unexpectedly mortified, and many of them compelled to suspend their payments, in consequence of this restricted system of ill judged policy, which has been the sole cause of the late mercantile embarrassments. Where is the Merchant whose unsuspected credit is not to him, his all? Public confidence being once lost, there is an end to all public trust; and where is the English Merchant to look for assistance, in generously conducting and increasing the great source of Britain's wealth, but to those great sources of Commercial accommodation, the Banks of the United Kingdom? It must not be forgotten, that Banks were instituted for the use of the people; for whenever the Bank is converted by the jealousy of party into an unjust and arbitrary tool in the hands of a faction, it no longer remains a place of public accommodation & utility; but becomes a private & illegal nuisance, requiring to be speedily removed. We shall ere long point out the evils and advantages which result from Banking establishments, and how far they are useful to the public, and conductive to the interests of the State.—Western Star.

BALTIMORE, April 2.

The first number of Mr. Skinner's new publication, the American Farmer, was published this morning. It is in the quarto form, arranged and printed neatly on fine paper, and devoted to "rural economy, internal improvement, news, prices current." &c. We have no doubt that it will become not only a useful but a valuable work, and it has our best wishes for its success. The editor already announces a long list of subscribers; but if it were as easy to get pay as it is names, publishers of papers would have much more to felicitate themselves than they now have. We apprehend there are many of the fraternity, who can count their thousands upon paper, but who have to go almost supperless to bed.—Pat.

BALTIMORE, April 6.

Gale. On Sunday morning last the wind from the S. W. commenced blowing a gale and with so much violence, that several vessels lying at the wharves at Fell's Point, received considerable damage—three or four bay craft, we understand, were sunk, and among those injured was the Patriot Privateer Puerydon, by driving against a wharf—Great fears were entertained of vessels in the bay and on the coast, as but few instances can be recollected of damage being done to vessels, in the harbour of Baltimore, the wind being in the same direction. The ship Franklin, Graham of Liverpool, was on shore in the bay Bluff Point, has got off without material injury; the captain came up this morning in the steam boat Virginia. The ship is now off North Point.

From the Petersburg Intelligencer, April. 6th.

On Sunday evening last about 4 o'clock, this town and neighbourhood were visited by one of the most violent storms of wind, rain and hail, ever experienced in this part of Virginia.—From the dawn of morning, the atmosphere had worn a threatening appearance—a strong S. W. wind prevailed, and the clouds during the whole day, portended falling weather. Suddenly, the heavens grew dark, the wind rose to the strength of a hurricane, rain and hail, accompanied by lightning, poured down in torrents. A scene so terrific, so sublime, we never beheld. It is indeed at such a moment, man feels his nothingness, and acknowledges the power of Omnipotence.

The storm continued about 5 minutes—During this short period, however a good deal of damage done in Petersburg and the neighborhood around.—In town the gable end of two brick houses on Bolingbrook street were beat down—one belonging to the estate of the late Mr. Curtis, not materially injured—the other, to property of Mrs. Alexander, sustained considerable detriment. Likewise some houses were partially unroofed and many chimnies, fences, &c. blown down. From the country we hear of stables, barns, &c. being torn to pieces, trees uprooted and fences swept away. We are happy to add, we have heard of no lives being lost.

Royal Munificance.—A gentleman in Massachusetts, lately sent King Henry, of St. Domingo, one of Collins' elegant super royal quarto bibles. The present was gratefully received, and a few days after the gentleman received from the king a letter of thanks, enclosing a draft for six thousand dollars.

It is stated in the village Recorder, that, on the 14th inst. as a Mr. Benjamin Hibbard, an aged and respectable citizen of Willistown, was burning corn stalks in his field, the fire caught his clothes and hurt him so severely that he died before he could be conveyed to his house.

FROM LOWER-CANADA.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Copy of the Resolutions passed by the Legislative Council, on the second reading of the Civil List Bill, Wednesday, 21st April, 1819:

1st. "RESOLVED, That the mode adopted by this Bill for granting a supply to His Majesty, to defray the expenses of the Civil List, is unprecedented and unconstitutional, and a direct assumption, on the part of the Assembly, of the most important rights and prerogatives of the Crown. That were this Bill to be passed into a Law, it would give to the Commons of this Province, not merely the constitutional privilege of providing the supplies, but the power also of prescribing to the Crown the number and description of its servants; and of regulating the rewarding their services individually, as the Assembly should, from time to time, judge meet or expedient; by which means they would be rendered dependent on an Elective Body, instead of being dependent on the Crown; and might eventually be made instrumental to the overthrow of that Authority which, by their allegiance, they are bound to support."

2d. "That this House will proceed no further in the consideration of this Bill.

PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT.

OF LOWER CANADA.

April, 24th 1819.

This day, at three o'clock, His Grace the Governor in chief came down in state to the Legislative Council Chamber where, being seated on the Throne he sent down a message by the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod to the House of Assembly, to request their immediate attendance upon His Grace in the Upper House of the Legislature.

The House went up accordingly, when His Grace was pleased to deliver the following SPEECH:

Gentlemen of the Legislative Council and Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

I came to this Province to take the Government of His Majesty's Dominions in North America, with a sincere desire of carrying into practice the intentions and liberal views of His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, to improve their natural resources, and the individual happiness of His Majesty's people.

A reasonable hope and expectation was entertained by me, in accepting this command, that I should meet in those pursuits, with the cheerful support of every well informed person, who could appreciate in his own mind my motives in undertaking the charge.

With these impressions on my mind, and with full confidence in your zeal, your loyalty, and your local knowledge of the public and private interests of the country, I met you on your legislative duties, & have most patiently attended to your proceedings during a long Session, which I am now to close by prorogation.

You, Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, have not disappointed my hopes, and I beg to return you my thanks for the zeal and alacrity you have shewn in all that more immediately belongs to your Body.

It is with much concern I feel myself compelled to say, that I cannot express to you, Gentlemen of the Assembly, the same satisfaction, nor my approbation of the general result of your labours, (at the expense of so much valuable time,) and of the public principles upon which they rest, as recorded on your Journals.

You proceeded upon the Documents which I laid before you, to vote a part of the sum required for the Expenses of the year 1819, but the Bill of Appropriation which you passed, was founded upon such principles, that it appears from the Journals of the Upper House, to have been most constitutionally rejected: His Majesty's Government has been thus left without the necessary supplies for supporting the Civil Administration of the Province for the ensuing year, notwithstanding the voluntary offer & pledge given to His Majesty, by the Resolve of your House, of the 13th of Feb. 1810.

Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

I recommended to you by Special Message, the consideration of the Judicature Act, for such amendments as should appear necessary to remedy any inconvenience which time and experience in the course of the Administration of Justice may have pointed out as expedient; and I much regret, that this important object has not been brought so far to an issue, as would have enabled me to transmit the result of your proceedings to His Majesty's Ministers, that the opinion and assistance of the Law Officers of the Crown in England, might have been obtained in aid of the local knowledge and practical experience of those characters in this Province, who have had the best opportunity of studying and understanding the subject: I trust, however, that you will be prepared to proceed effectually thereon, at an early day of the next Session.

It is with some reluctance I have given the Royal Assent to the Militia Bill, from a principle being introduced into it, of which I do not approve.

The information given me of the inconvenience which would arise from losing certain Services specially reposed in them, for which no other provision is made by law, has induced me to assent to it in confidence that it will be amended in the next Session of the Legislature. The necessity of placing this local and constitutional Military Force, under proper and efficient regulations by Law, is strongly impressed on my mind, and no impediment should be in the way of assisting it, whether embodied or sedentary, with the services of half-pay officers settled in the Province, or others from the regular Forces, as well as those of enterprising young men drawn from the Cities or Towns, on any emergency.

The Population of this Province affords excellent materials for a defensive Army, but a general and proper selection of officers is necessary to make it formidable to an active & enterprising Enemy, and that selection must in all cases belong to the Executive power only.

The present time affords you an opportunity of maturely deliberating on these important objects, and on others essentially necessary to be better considered. I recommend particularly to your attention as individuals, the value of your constitution of Government, which affords the most complete and ample protection & freedom of Person & Property, that can possibly be desired, and superior to every system of Government enjoyed by any Colony that has heretofore existed, your sister Colony of Upper Canada excepted. And as branches of the Legislature, it is of the first importance that you should fully understand your Constitutional Rights; that Privilege may not come into question with Prerogative, and that while you maintain those Rights which respectively belong to you by the Constitution, you may be equally careful of encroaching on each other, and respectively pay a due regard to the rights of the Crown.

I shall lay before His Majesty's Ministers the proceedings of the Session & a general state of the Revenue, the Expenses, Agriculture & Commerce of the Province, and request instructions on such points as may be necessary to be more fully understand, that difference of opinion among those who ought to have only one object in view, may as much as possible be avoided."

Then the Titles of the following Bills were read; upon each of which the Royal Assent was given in the following words:

In His Majesty's name His Grace the Governor in Chief thanks his loyal subjects, accepts their benevolence & assents to this Bill.

An Act to make good a certain sum of money therein mentioned to defray the expences of the Civil Government for the year one thousand eight hundred & eighteen.

QUEBEC:

MONDAY, 26th APRIL, 1819.

The ice on the St. Lawrence, opposite this City, broke up yesterday morning, but the River continues full of ice floating down from above. The ice on the channel north of the Island of Orleans, on the Beach at Beauport, and off the mouth of the St. Charles, remains fast. Some Wheat was sown last week in the vicinity of this City; but there is still much frost in the ground.

EXPEDITION TO THE POLAR REGION.

"On the 30th of August, when in lat. 74 1-2, or thereabouts, we suddenly deepened our water, from 150 to 120 fathoms, to the amazing depth of 730 fathoms, and increased its temperature from 32 to 36. On the weather clearing up found ourselves abreast of a large opening, which we had no doubt, from its latitude, was that named by Baffin "Sir James Lancaster's Sound." From the northern to the southern highland it appeared to be at least fifty miles in width. As we knew that Baffin had not entered his Sound, but stood away from it to the south-eastward, its appearance inspired hope and joy into every countenance; and every officer and man, on the instant as it were, made up his mind that this must be the north-west passage; the width of the opening, the extraordinary depth of water, the increased temperature, and the surrounding sea, and the strait so perfectly free from ice, that not a particle was seen floating, were circumstances so encouraging and so different from any thing we had yet seen, that every heart panted to explore this passage which was to conduct us all to glory and to fortune.

We had hitherto met with nothing that could in the smallest degree damp our spirits; we had lived well, suffered no fatigue, either from anxiety or bodily exertion; we had seen nothing like danger, and we had been animated by one sentiment: but nothing had yet occurred to inspire us with the hope of success in the great enterprise; we had proceeded cheerfully, but without enthusiasm, and our ardour had rather diminished as we began to diminish our latitude. But to find so grand an opening under such circumstances as I have mentioned, and in the very spot too of all others most likely to lead us at once to the northern coast of America, was so unexpected & at the same time so exhilerating, that I firmly believe every creature on board anticipated the pleasure of writing an overland despatch to his friends, either from the eastern or the western shores of the Pacific. We stood directly into this spacious inlet; the width continued pretty nearly the same, as far as we could see, and not a particle of ice on the water: neither was there appearance of land a head—Every breast beat high, and every one was desirous to mount the crow's nest, to look out for the opening which should conduct us into the Polar Sea, near the coast of the main land of America. We had not ran, however, above ten leagues within the inlet, when the Isabella bore up, and of course the Alexander did the same; and we stood out of the Inlet; why, we could not conjecture, but under all sail. Our Commodore, as it afterwards appeared, had seen the land at the bottom of the inlet. It is impossible to describe to you the gloom that was immediately spread over every countenance, all their sanguine hopes being thus inexpectedly dashed to the ground. At the very spot where the Isabella bore up, the depth of water was 650 fathoms, and the temperature continued the same as at the entrance; the Alexander was about four or five miles astern of her consort at that time; but not the least appearance of land was visible in the direction of the Inlet from her crow's nest *

"On passing near the southern point of Lancaster Sound, the depth of water had increased to upwards of 1,000 fathoms—Close to this point we landed on a fine sloping sandy beach, at the bottom of a little bay, into which a river of running water was falling, whose width might be from 50 to 60 yards, and the water above knee deep. The flat ground through which it ran was free from ice, and appeared to be covered with tolerably good soil, in which were growing a variety of plants. On the banks were found a piece of fir tree, or branch, about five inches in diameter, and a piece of birch bark. We went through the ceremony of taking possession of this land in the name of his Majesty, which I fear is only putting "a barren sceptre in his hand," though of all the places we had yet seen since we crossed the Arctic circle, this is by far the most inviting; and, indeed, were it not for the high peaked mountains, partially covered with snow, which bound the valley on each side, we could not possibly have supposed ourselves to be in the high latitude of 74, especially on looking sea ward, and seeing not a particle of ice as far as the eye could reach.

"The month of September had now set in, and the disappointment experienced in Lancaster Sound cast a damp on all our future proceedings. We continued to the south eastward, along the land, which we saw at intervals, but kept at a very respectable distance from it. We saw several openings, but examined none. The sea continued clear of ice, and the weather moderate, but seldom clear.

* The Crow's nest is a kind of box sufficient to hold a man; generally a cask, fixed near the mast head, to protect the observer from cold, and enable him to look out for whales or open pieces of water.

On Salt, as a top-dressing for Wheat.

I was led to make an experiment on Salt, as a top-dressing for wheat, in consequence of what has been written on this subject and so copiously detailed in your Journal. The communication which was conveyed to your readers from Sir John Sinclair, on the 21st. respecting it, induces me to trouble you, with an account of what has fallen under my own observation.

Last autumn I sowed a field of wheat on a clover ley, which was dressed and treated exactly as an adjoining one, similar to it as to aspect and the nature of the soil. After Christmas, one of them began to fail in many places, increasing daily; and about March, there were several large spots, which only exhibited a few starved plants. A friend had given me about thirty bushels of Salt, that had been collected from the sweepings of Irish Ford. In April, I sowed this salt, and, as nearly as I can judge, at the rate of three bushels to an acre, all over the field where these failures were noticed. The effect was instantaneous—the bare spots did not increase—and those few miserable plants that were left on them, began to recover; and finally produced as much and as good Wheat, as an equal number of plants in any part of the field. I will not take upon myself to say what was the cause of these partial failures; whether they proceeded from the wire-worm, grub, or slug; or from any unobserved noxious quality of the soil, in these spots. I can only detail the case; and leave these considerations to others. But it may not be unacceptable to your readers, to be further informed that I, as well as every person on the farm, did think the whole field put on a more luxuriant appearance, after the application of the salt; and that I was, on the whole, extremely well satisfied with its produce; and with the quality of the wheat.

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, March 20—31.

The death of Mr. Park, the enterprising traveller in the interior of Africa, seems now to be placed beyond a doubt. The following information of that event corroborates, in part, the statement given by Amadi Fatouma, who was despatched in quest of Park from the Gambia, some years since; but is at variance with the circumstances attending it. Mr. Bowditch, who conducted a successful mission from Cape Coast Castle to the King of the Ashantees, obtained, while at Coomassie, the summer before last, the following account, during one of his visits to Baba, the chief of the Moors. A Moor, who had just come from Tombuctoo, was sent for the purpose of seeing Mr. Bowditch, and who did not express the surprise that was anticipated on seeing a white man, and accounted for it from having before seen three white men at Bonssa. This naturally created a desire of being informed of the particulars, and Baba interpreted to Mr. Bowditch the following relation which the Moor gave:—"That some years ago a vessel, with masts, suddenly appeared on the Quolla, or Niger, near Boussa, with three white men, and some black. The natives encouraged by these strange men, took off provisions for sale, were well paid, and received presents besides; it seems the vessel had anchored. The next day perceiving the vessel going on, the natives hurried after her (the Moor protesting, from their anxiety to save her from sunken rocks with which the Quolla abounds,) but the white men mistaking, and thinking they pursued for a base purpose, deterred them. The vessel soon after struck; the men jumped into the water and tried to swim, but could not for the current, and were drowned. He thought some of their clothes were now at Wanway, but he did not believe there were any books or papers." This story was afterwards repeated to Mr. Bowditch by another Moor, but who was not, like the former, an eye witness of the transaction. An Arabic manuscript was also obtained by this gentleman, which corroborates the fate of Mr. Park and his companion, Lieut. Martyn, and adds that one of the bodies had been found and buried.—There is, however, reason to hope that some further information may be obtained. Mr. Hutchinson, who was left as resident agent at Coomassie, learning from Baba, the person before mentioned, that a Moor was about to depart for Jenne, sent a letter to two Europeans who resided there, and whom he supposed were some belonging to Park's expedition, as seven of the soldiers are yet unaccounted for, who were in good health when separated from their commander. There are also, it seems, two white men at Tombuctoo, who have been there for several years. The Moors assured Mr. Hutchinson, that there was no doubt of the letter reaching its destination, and that gentleman accompanied it with two notices in English and Arabic, offering a reward for information.

The new machine, entitled "Velocipede," consisting of two wheels, one before the other, connected by a perch, on which the pedestrian rests the weight of his body, while with his feet he urges the machine forward, on the principle of skating, is already in very general use. "The road from Ipswich to Whatton," says the Bury Paper, "is travelled every evening by several pedestrian hobby horses, no less than six are seen at a time, and the distance, which is three miles, is performed in fifteen minutes. A military gentleman has made a bet to go to London by the side of the coach. The crowded state of the metropolis does not admit of this novel mode of exercise, and it has been put down by the Magistrates of Police, but it contributes to the amusement of the passengers in the streets in the shape of caricatures in the print shops. In one of these a certain Royal Duke is exhibited on his Velocipede, with the following inscription on his back, "£10,000 a year," and above, "Cheap travelling to Windsor on my father's business."

A petition from the booksellers and publishers of London and Westminster was presented on Monday night to the House of Commons, praying to be relieved from the compulsatory delivery of eleven copies of every book published to certain public libraries. They state, that the grievances which they have sustained have been fully shown in the evidence before the Select Committee of the House last session, in which it appears that the actual cost of the books delived by one house, (Messrs. Longman & Co.) since the passing of the Copyright Act, in 1814, to April 1818, was about £3,000; that Mr. Murry during the same period had sustained by the delivery a loss of £1,275; that eleven copies of five works would amount to £2,198 14s.; that the delivery of eleven copies of another single work would be about £275; and that the law as it now stands has produced the most injurious effects on the property of the owners & authors of books.

Extract of a letter from Sierra Leone dated January 9, 1819.—"To those who have seen the African slaves in the holds of slave-ships, and now witness the change effected by the blessing of freedom, the contrast is truly striking a great majority of the adults industriously supporting themselves, and embracing with avidity the precepts of Christianity; the children, owing to our excellent governor's incessant and paternal exertions, placed at the schools in the several villages. Indeed, to witness the astonishing degree of intelligence evinced by many of them at the general examinations, and the affecting manner in which they sing the concluding anthem of "God save the King," must make every British heart beat high in the idea, that to the benevolence of this country alone can be attributed all the good that has been done, and must doubly interest every feeling mind to persevere in the grand object of our hopes, that of ridding this coast of these vile traffickers in the blood of our fellow creatures."

Arctic Discovering.—The Gazette of Saturday announces the Prince Regent's approbation of the following scale of rewards proposed in a Memorial from the board of Longitude, taken into consideration by his Royal Highness in Council on the 19th inst. viz

1. To the first ship belonging to any of His Majesty's subjects, or to his Majesty, that shall reach the longitude of 110 deg. west from Greenwich, or the mouth of Hearne's or Copper mine River, by sailing within the arctic circle, £5000; to the first ship, as aforesaid, that shall reach the longitude of 130 deg. west from Greenwich, or the Whale Island of Mackenzie, by sailing from the Arctic circle, £10,000; to the first ship, as aforesaid, that shall reach the longitude of 150 deg. west from Greenwich, by sailing westwards within the arctic circle, £15,000; the Act having already allotted to the first ship that shall reach the Pacific Ocean by a north west passage the full reward of £20,000.

2. To the first ship as aforesaid, that shall reach to 83 deg. of north latitude, £1000; to 85 deg. £2000; to 87 deg. £3000; to 88 deg. £4000; the Act having already allotted to the first ship that shall reach to, or beyond 80 deg. the full reward of £5000.

Emigration.—About five months ago, the croppers and other persons employed in the manufacture of woollen cloths, raised a subscription of £40 for the purpose of sending out one of the most intelligent of their fellow-workmen to the United States, to ascertain how far they might meet with encouragement and employment, should any considerable number be tempted to emigrate to that quarter of the globe. This person has, within these few days, sent over a long and interesting detail of the reception and treatment he experienced; and says there will be no want of either employment or encouragement for any number of workmen that may chuse to emigrate; that there are already many small establishments of both woollen and cotton factories; and that the American Executive are anxious to extend their manufactures to the greatest possible extent, and are willing to afford every assistance to all descriptions of artizans who may feel disposed to emigrate; but that they cannot, consistent with the good faith which exists between the United States and our own Government, do any thing for them till after their arrival in the American territory:—No, nor can they then. In consequence, however, of this information, several meetings of the Croppers, and others employed in the woollen trade, have been held, and propositions submitted for raising a subscription, not only among their own body, but on any others who may feel disposed to contribute, to enable a given number of those who have no faculties, to transport themselves across the Atlantic, and thereby enable those who remain behind to find more employment.—Should these means fail, it is understood; be the determination of the workmen, as a dernier ressort, to petition Parliament and His Royal Highness Council, for aid to enable them to transport themselves to the United States, or such other parts as may be deemed preferable, where they may, by their talents and industry, procure the common necessaries of life, which the badness of trade and the low rate of wages, precludes them from doing in their own country, without subjecting themselves and families to the debased and degraded state of paupers.—Star.

Horrid Murder and Robbery.—An assassination has recently been committed in the most atrocious manner, in the manufacturing and commercial town of Leeds, in a house which has been newly built, situated between two inns, always occupied by travellers, and in one of the most populous quarters of the town. It was inhabited by a rich Gentleman who had with him only a faithful female servant. He had a great part of his fortune in specie, in chests; and, unfortunately for him, this fact was too well known. One night, between the hours of 11 & 12 two men were seen to enter the house: the door was closed after them. No suspicion, however, was excited, until three days afterwards, when it was remarked, that neither the master nor servant had been seen to leave or enter the house; some persons went and knocked at the door, but no answer was returned. The Police Authorities were informed of this, and the door was broken open, when the unhappy girl was found lying in a inner court, and her master in the parlour; the heads of both were cut off. A woman, one of the neighbours, who was present at this horrible discovery, was so impressed with terror, that she was attacked with a shivering fit, and almost instantly expired in the most terrible convulsions.—The most active researches are making; it is ascertained that they are taken off about 30,000 francs, or have taken off about 30,000 francs, or thereabouts, in gold. They left behind them sacks of money and other valuables, which apparently, they could not take with them. The Gendarmerie are on foot, and it is hoped, that the wretched perpetrators of this crime will not elude justice.—Paris Paper.

Derby.—At these Assizes seventeen prisoners received sentence of death, among whom was Hannah Becking, for administering poison to Jane Gran, the younger, at Laiton.—The other sixteen were reprieved. This unfortunate woman was scarcely more than sixteen years of age when she committed the crime for which she suffered. During the night preceding her execution she slept soundly. She ascended the platform with a steady step.—She had repeatedly implicated several of her relations in her guilt; and her sister, a young woman of delicate health, is now suffering dreadfully under the imputation thus attempted to be cast upon her. These accusations she solemnly retracted, confessed her own and sole guilt, and acknowledged the justice of her sentence.

The Assizes for the county of Devon closed on Tuesday noon last. The case of Mary Woodman, aged 30, indicted for the wilful murder of her husband, afforded a most melancholy proof of the deep depravity of human nature. She had been married to her husband, Charles Woodman, eight years, when she left him, and went to live with a man who attended the fairs of the neighborhood of Okehampton, as a fiddler, called Richard Smallacombe, but better known by the name of Smiler. She went about with him as his wife.—The prisoner was a handsome woman; Smiler (who was tried at the same Assizes for uttering base coin) is an ugly squalid looking fellow. Her husband had shewn uncommon attachment to her. In October last, she being then in the neighborhood of Okehampton, he sent to her, saying he wished to speak to her, when he desired she would stay at home and live with him. She refused at first, and said she was going up the country. Prisoner said to her husband "Can you maintain me?" he replied, "If I starved myself, I will maintain you." She then agreed to stay at home, and said to a witness, "the sooner I come home the better, as then I shall be happy; he will be gone, and I shall have Smiler!" She soon after this determination went to a wedding feast, with her husband, at South Zeal, apparently on the best terms of friendship with him, when she administered a deadly poison to him! It did not, however, take the effect she intended: she applied to a surgeon, who told her, her husband was getting better; she then, when he was suffering under agonies that would soften the heart of a savage, contrived means to obtain a quantity of arsenic, with which, having administered it to him twice, she completed her horrible purpose; having no other motive or object in the world than to indulge a criminal connexion with the wretched object of her attentions. When she purposed her husband's death, she put him into two clubs with a view to obtain £20 to spend at his death. On the Judge passing the dreadful sentence of death on her, she leaned her head on her arm, and looked him steadily in the face; at its conclusion she exclaimed, to the horror of the whole Court, in a most daring attitude, "All, I will never forgive any of my persecutors; they have sworn false and the devil will drag them into hell; and God will forgive me." She was taken away by force, uttering the vilest imprecations.

On Monday morning, pursuant to her sentence, she was drawn upon a hurdle, from the door of the cell-yard, to be executed, in front of the Devon County Gaol. Her conduct after her condemnation, was marked by the same obduracy and impudence as she exhibited at her trial. On ascending the steps to the press, and approaching the drop she appeared greatly agitated, but quickly resumed her former daring spirit, and ascended the platform with a firm step. Her eyes were now earnestly directed towards the prison, to take her last look at Smallacombe, but means had been taken for preventing his appearing to her view, a disappointment which she seemed to feel severely. She still continued inexorable against all entreaties of the Clergyman to make confession; but was at length prevailed upon to repeat the Lord's Prayer, which she did in a manner almost inaudible, and the fatal drop fell immediately at the close of it.—An immense concourse of spectators attended the execution.

Smallacombe had invented a plea to bring her off; no less than that of charging the death of her husband on himself; and a witness was to have been produced to swear that he had confessed his repeatedly buying poison and taking it, with a determination of destroying himself; but none could be found hardly enough to appear in Court in support of such a plea. Her body was given to the surgeons, to be dissected and anatomised.

MILAN, March. 3.

The celebrated mechanician, Locatelli, made on the 19th Feb. at Pavia, a trial with a vessel of his invention, which moves in all directions both up and down a river without the aid of sails, oars, or steam; these trials excited the admiration of the numerous spectators. Count Strassoldi, President of the government went to Pavia, to be present at the trial; and having viewed the vessel in every part, expressed his satisfaction to Mr. Locatelli in the most flattering terms. Six men are required to put the mechanism of this vessel in motion. It may be laden with one and a half times its own weight; the empty space in the vessel is nearly as great as in common merchant vessels; it can be moved with the greatest rapidity in all directions, though it is chiefly intended for the navigation of rivers it may be used for crossing lakes with all the above mentioned advantages.

LAUSANNE, March. 16.

On the 4th instant a dreadful conflagration nearly destroyed the large village of Aznoos, district of Surgans, Canton of St. Gall.—Nearly the whole population of this village, and of the neighboring communes, were at work at the dykes on the banks of the Rhine and before any help arrived, 113 houses were consumed by the flames, and 313 individuals, forming 78 families, were reduced to the most afflicting misery, by the loss of their live stock, furniture, and provisions. The Church and 25 habitations escaped this disaster, which has been alleviated in some measure by prompt relief from the Government of St. Gall. In 1716, this village experienced a similar fate. The misfortunes which the inhabitants of St. Gall have endured, during several years past, from the stagnation of trade, fires, and inundations, cannot be too much lamented.

At a time when the question runs high whether or not our penal laws ought to be enforced to their utmost severity, we cannot refrain from giving the following anecdote of the Emperor of Austria, as contained in a recent letter from Vienna:—Some days before the Emperor's departure for Italy, he had an opportunity of displaying his love of justice, and full determination that the laws shall have their free course in all circumstances, and whatever may be the rank, of the individual incurring their severity. A great Lord, enamoured of a young person, daughter of a respectable family, though of ordinary rank, seduced her under a written promise of marriage which he had no intention of fulfilling. The unfortunate girl lost her reason, & the father applying to her infamous seducer for the means of maintaining her while in that situation, was repulsed with contempt. He then carried his supplications to the foot of the throne, and the Monarch calling the degenerate nobleman before him, ordered him to take his choice of going to prison and being punished with the utmost rigour of the law, or of settling an annuity on his unhappy victim, the principal of which to consist of 50,000 florins. The next day the annuity was granted.

Letters from Rome, of the 12th of Feb. state, that the enterprize formed to draw from the bed of the Tiber the statues and other wrecks of antiquity, which it is supposed are deposited there appears to obtain success. Already the sum of 60,000 scudi is almost completed. All the subjects which it is hoped will be drawn from the bed of the river, by means of a machine invented for the purpose, will be formed into one mass, and valued by connoisseurs. The Pope's Chamberlain will receive a sixth, and will also have the right of priority to purchase the rest.

LONDON, March 7.

The following article relative to the discoveries which continue to be made in the excavations of Pompeia, will be found not ununinteresting:—

VIENNA, Feb. 16.

The Archduke Palatine, of Hungary, before he left Naples, paid a second visit to the excavations at Pompeia. A singular chance made this circumstance coincide with the happiest discoveries that have been made till now on this classic ground. While the Prince was observing with the greatest attention the labours which the Chevalier Arditi caused to be prosecuted in his presence with redoubled activity, the work men met with a bronze vase encrusted with silver, the size and form of which place it in the first rank of all the articles of this description which form so interesting a part of the Bourbon Museum.—Some days before, a bronze statue of Apollo, of admirable workmanship, was found, which is indisputably the finest in the gallery. It would be impossible to describe the beauty of the form and the life of this figure, which is of the size of nature, and represents the god sacrificing with his avenging arrow the family of Niobe.

Animal affection and gratitude.—A party of a ship's crew being sent ashore on a part of the coast of India, for the purpose of cutting wood for the ship, one of the men, having strayed from the rest was greatly frightened by the appearance of a large lioness, who made towards him; but, on her coming to him she lay down at his feet, and looked very earnestly at him, and then at a tree at a little distance off. After repeating her look several times she arose, and proceeded on towards the tree, looking back several times seemingly wishing the man to follow her, when he did; and, upon coming to the tree he looked up, and perceived a huge baboon with two young cubs in his arms whom he supposed were the lioness's, as she crouched down like a cat, and seemed to eye them very stedfastly; upon which the man, being afraid to ascend the tree, bethought himself to cut the tree down; and, having his axe with him he set to work, when the lioness seemed more attentive to what he was doing; and upon the tree falling she sprung forward on the baboon, and after tearing him in pieces, she turned round and licked the cubs over and over again; after which she turned to the man, who was greatly frightened at her in such a rage with the baboon; but she came and fawned round him, rubbing her head against him in great fondness, and which seemed to shew her gratitude for the services which he had done her; she then went to the cubs, and taking one up in her mouth, went away with it; and returning soon after ward for the other, she went away with that also; when the man made the best of his way off to the shore, where he was taken aboard, and did not get rid of his fright for some time after.

LONDON, March 15.

We are informed that the statement from Lloyd's which appeared in our paper of Friday, respecting the claims of some English merchants upon the Court of St. Petersburg for the value of certain vessels and cargoes, under neutral flags, which were detained by the Russian government in 1810, was not correct. The following has been communicated to us as an accurate account. The Emperor Alexander gave a gracious reception to the deputation to St. Petersburg; and his reply to the memorial which was presented by Lord Cathcart was of a conciliatory character. It was shortly after that his Imperial Majesty set out for Aix-la-Chapelle, whither a second Memorial was sent, called for by the observations of his Majesty upon the first. With respect to this second Memorial, it was stated by Count Nesselrode, that his Majesty being absent from this capital, and at a distance from his ministers, and all the records and documents connected with the case, it was not considered expedient to lay it before the Emperor. At the same time, the most positive assurance was given, that it should be submitted to his majesty immediately upon his return to St. Petersburgh, where count Nesselrode himself did not arrive till last month. In this situation the matter stands at present.—No report as to whether the Memorial had been presented could have reached this country yet. It may be observed in conclusion, that the similar seizures made in Sweden, at the same period, to the amount of above one million sterling, were all voluntarily restored in 1812, 1813, and before the termination of the war.

PARIS, March 3.

Madame R———, wife of an individual, who, in 1816, was sentenced to transportation for offences of a civil kind and thereby became politically dead, came before the Mayor of Melun in 1818, for the purpose of contracting a second marriage. On this Magistrate refusing to marry her again while her first husband was yet living, she cited him before the Tribunal of Melun, and pleaded the 227th article of the Civil Code, which declares that marriage is dissolvable by civil death on either side. Notwithstanding this pleading, the Judges at first rejected her suit, on the objection that she was unable to prove the execution of the sentence of her husband.—When the affair came before the Royal Court, however she succeeded in establishing the fact of her husband's having been conducted to Mount St. Michel, to be transported for life; in consequence of which the Royal Court superseded the decision of the tribunal of Melun, and directed the Mayor to proceed to the solemnization of the marriage. M. Jaubert, the Attorney-General, in agreeing to the conclusions which now directed the judgment of the Court, expressed his regret in witnessing an action so repugnant to the dictates, of religion and the principles of morality, although it was founded in legal right.

PARIS, March 8.

We learn to day, with much astonishment, that on the 5th inst. a rumour was circulated in London, that disturbances had broken out in Paris. You may rest assured, that not only public order was not interrupted; but, further, that it would be impossible for any party to produce any serious agitation, so far are the mass of the people friends of tranquility and repose.

the King. They all proceedtulate their new colleagues,
ard to request the concurrence of their talents and suffrages to consummate the work of his Majesty. This proof of confidence does not prevent the Exclusives from flattering themselves with the idea of associating in their ranks a third of Peers recently created. But of what do they not flatter themselves? What is certain is, that hitherto there reigns a perfect unanimity between all those whom the King has elevated to the Peerage.— As they will all be present at the first Sitting, which will be that of their reception, they will previously meet at the residence of Count de Semonville, Grand Referendary, from whence they will proceed in a body to the Chamber. The general opinion, therefore is, that the most perfect intelligence exists between the whole of the members who will compose the new majority.

"If at present there be reason to believe that things will resume a legitimate course in the Chamber of Peers, the question has not yet been judged in the Chamber of Deputies. This Chamber, moreover, too much at leisure, it become a theatre of intrigues, planned by the Members of the right side against the ministry. They have gained over to their party several deputies from the centre. To initiate them in their doctrines, they have made use of the name, influence, and the insidious speech of M. Laine, on the proposition of Mr. Lafitte, and it is certain that they have succeeded in gaining the ear of a great number amongst them. The majority is still doubtful; but a few more assertions, and it will be found on the opposition side. It is asserted that the government is informed of this state of things, and that they are prepared to adopt such measures as the circumstance requires. The dissolution of the Chamber of Deputies is therefore, more than ever talked of; but it is thought that previously to declaring it, Ministers, desirous of placing the two Chambers in a suitable numerical proportion, will immediately propose a projet of law for the augmentation of the number of Deputies. This enactment, which is neither contrary to the letter nor the spirit of the Charter, will be attended with the immense advantage of rendering influence less sensible, and consequently less dangerous, in legislative deliberation. It will not, in any respect, alter the mode of election, or the renewal by fifths, and the intentions of the present ministry guarantee that there would then be found more friends and fewer antagonists than in the existing Chamber."

Government have come to the determination to allow Officers on half-pay, of both Navy and Army, to enjoy situations not exceeding three times their income; it is therefore confidently hoped the same spirit of liberality will be extended to Officers on half-pay of the old establishment, by increasing the allowance, as it appears hard to be entirely forgotten. Some Ensigns have 2s. others only 1s. 10d. per day.

A circumstance has recently taken place at Fahlum, the capital of Dalecarlia, in Sweden, which might figure to advantage in a novel. By working to establish a new communication between two shafts of a mine—the body of a miner was discovered in a perfect state of preservation and impregnated with vitriolic water.—No one could indentify the individual; it was recollected that the accident by which he had been thus buried in the earth had taken place fifty years ago. All inquiries as to the name of the sufferer had already ceased, when a decrepid old woman leaning on crutches, slowly advanced towards the corpse and knew it to be that of a young man, to whom she had been promised in marriage, half a century ago. She threw herself on the body which had the appearance of a bronze statue—bathed it with tears, and fainted with joy at having once more beheld the object of her affection on this side of the grave. It is easier to conceive than to trace the singular contrast offered by this couple; the one buried fifty years ago, still answering all the appearance of youth, while the other weighed down by age evinced all the fervency of youthful love.

An article from the Lower Rhine, dated the 28th ult. mentions the following circumstances as having occurred at Virviers:

"A Frenchman from Sedan has exhibited and offered for sale at Virviers a newly invented cloth shearing machine by which a single workman can direct 60 pair of shears, and which they have not ventured to employ in England.—Scarcely had the workmen learned this when they began to say to each other: 'The machine can prepare 12 ells of cloth in a minute, we shall be reduced to beggary if it be introduced.' On the 20th, all the workmen left their work, assembled tumultuously about the machine and destroyed it before the gens d'armes could come up to prevent them. The workmen in their fury resolved to destroy all the other machines in the place, but the mayor of Virviers, foreseeing the probability of this event, had written to Liege for assistance, and the gens d'armes arrived from Liege just in time. Blood was shed on both sides; four men are severely wounded. The proprietor of the new machine had got out of the way at the first moment, otherwise he would have been torn to pieces by the mob. Tranquility is now, indeed, restored, but the principal manufacturers, who are proprietors of machines, have still military guards in their houses and manufactories, for their protection. If the gens d'armes from Liege had delayed a few hours, the furious mob would have destroyed all the other spinning and shearing machines, and set the buildings on fire."

Greek Antiquities in the Crimea.

Extract of a letter from the engineer Von Stier, at the fortress of Famagorin, in the gouvernament of Tauris, formerly the Crimea, August 20, 1818.

Among the curiosities of this place, are the remains of antiquities of the time of the Greeks, who planted colonies here. In the beginning of this month, in digging up a hill, a stone vault was discovered, which contained a corpse 6 feet and a half long, in a very good state of preservation. The head was ornamented with a golden garland of laurels; and on the forehead a golden medal which represents a man's head with the inscription Philip On both sides of the corpse stood golden and earthen vessels, as was the custom among the Greeks; also several golden chains and ear-rings; and on one of the fingers was a gold ring with a valuable stone, on which were represented a male and female figure of exquisite workmanship. From all this it may be concluded, that this was the burying place of one of Philip's generals.

LONDON, March 15.

A phenomenon, which tends to elucidate the origin and nature of funguses, particularly of that species termed mushroom, lately occurred to the observation of Sir Joseph Banks. Having a cask of wine rather too sweet for immediate use, he directed that it should be placed in a cellar, that the saccharine it contained might be more perfectly decomposed by age. At the end of three years he directed his butler to ascertain the state of the wine; when, on attempting to open the cellar door, he could not effect it, in consequence of some powerful obstacle. The door was therefore cut down, when the cellar was found to be completly filled with a firm fungus vegetable production, so firm that it was necessary to use the axe for its removal. This appeared to have grown from, or have been nourished by, the decomposed particles, of the wine; the cask being empty and carried up to the ceiling, where it was supported by the surface of the fungus.

Papers from the interior of Germany arrived on Friday to the first inst. They contain an article, confirming the report, that government of the Netherlands has consented, that the navigation of the Rhine shall be free, in the true sense of the word, that is, along its whole course through the Dutch territory, to the sea. It is, however, observed, that this privilege will be but of limited benefit to the Germans, unless the tolls at Cologne, Mentz and Manheim, are abolished. If these impediments to a free commerce by that river should be removed, the German manufacturers flatter themselves, that they could maintain a successful competition with the British manufactures, and particularly cotton, for the supply of the American market.

On Monday evening Lord Sidmouth received a severe contusion on the knee by the kick of a horse, as he was walking to the House of Lords. The Noble Lord is in consequence confined to his house, but there is every prospect of a speedy recovery.

On Wednesday last the Alfred transport arrived at Plymouth, with timber, for the dock-yard there, which was cut in the forests around Sierra Leone.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

To the Editor of the Merc. Adv.

As the launching of the U. States steamboat at Pittsburgh has been announced, and as it may not be generally known what are the objects in view, I send you some extracts of a letter from a young officer going upon the expedition. She is called the WESTERN ENGINEER, and will start from Pittsburgh about the first of May. It is intended that she shall navigate the western waters as far as the Yellow Stone River, which will require upwards of two years. It is not expected that they will do more than explore the waters of the Missouri and its tributaries the first season, as the movements will be gradual, in order to obtain a thorough knowledge of that section of the country, with a history of the inhabitants, soils, minerals and curiosities.— The expedition is under the direction of Stephen H. Long, of New-Hampshire, and the topographical engineers, attended by Mr. James D. Graham, of Virginia, and Mr. William H. Swift of Mass. from the U. S. Military Academy; Major Thomas Briddle, of Philadelphia, of the artillery and the following gentlemen:—

Dr. Jessup, of Philadelphia, Mineralogist.

Dr. Say, of do. Botanist and Geologist.

Dr. Baldwin, of Wilmington, Del. Zoologist and physician.

Mr. Peale, of Philadelphia, landscape painter and Ornithologist.

Mr. Seymour, do. do. do.

Major O. Fallon, Indian agent.

She is well armed, and carries an elegant flag painted by Mr. Peale, representing a white man and an Indian shaking hands, the calumet of peace, and a sword. The boat is 75 feet long, 23 feet beam, draws 12 inches of water, with her engine which together with all the machinery, is placed below deck, entirely out of sight. The steam passes off through the figure head, (a large serpent.) The wheels are placed in the stern, to avoid the snags and sawyers which are so common in those waters. She has a mast to ship or not as may be necessary. The expedition will depart with the best wishes of the scientific part of our country.

Ætherioscope.—Professon Leslie, of Edinburgh, has invented an instrument called an ætherioscope, for measuring the cold transmitted from the higher regions of the atmosphere into the lower. By this the relative temperature of remote and elevated as well as of inaccessible parts may be ascertained. The deductions already drawn from the use of the ætherioscope are, that cold pulses shoot downward from the heated air near the earth.—N. Y. American.

KEENE, (N. H.) April 3.

Patent Spring Roling-Saddles.

We have recently viewed several of these improved saddles, at the manufactory of Messrs. Mixer & Brewer, in this town, the former of whom is the inventor, and we do not hesitate to speak of them in terms of unqualified approbation. The improvement is in the saddle-tree. This is covered by a plate, or rib of steel, of about three feet (its original length) but so folded as to afford four springs combined in one, on each side, which supply the place occupied by wooden side-bars in the common saddle The step of the horse greatly depresses the centre of the saddle, and the action of the spring again restores it, so that the rider is free from that violent agitation, which in a hard trotting horse is peculiarly painful.

So advantageous are these saddles in this respect, that Mr. Roulstone observes in his certificate, "that an invalid may ride them with as much ease as sitting on a couch." They are not liable to break by the rolling of the horse on the ground, as the pressure upon the extremities only acts upon the springs, throwing up the centre. They are much easier to the horse, and certainly not so liable to injure his back; an advantage which every one will know how to appreciate who has ever experienced that provoking affliction, a galled jade, upon a long journey.

Extract of the Journals of the Executive Council.

FRIDAY, 16th April, 1819.

On the third reading of the La Chine Canal Bill,—It was moved to strike out the following words, in the 5th Clause viz:

"Provided that nothing herein-mentioned shall be construed to entitle the said Company of Proprietors to enter upon any part of the Ground at present fenced in and enclosed, used as yards and gardens for the Little Seminary of Montreal, unless with the express consent, in writing, of the Ecclesiastics of the seminary of St. Sulpice of Montreal."

The question being put, it was carried in the negative.

Dissentient—Because we have no evidence of the legal existence of a corporate body called the Seminary of St. Sulpice of Montreal, possessing the right of holding lands in mortmain—Because, the St. Sulpicians who remained in Canada after the conquest of the Province by His Majesty's arms, had not a valid Title to the Lands transferred to them by the community at Paris, it being indispensably necessary that the party taking under such conveyance should have a legal capacity to hold Lands, and there appears no grounds for saying, that the Members of the Society of St. Sulpicians remaining in Canada had such a capacity separate and detached from the general body at Paris (which has since been dissolved) or that the requisite licence from the Crown, which would have been required under the French Law, and was equally necessary from his Britannic Majesty has ever been granted to them.

Because this is not a defect in form merely, but in substance, since it could not but be an object of material importance with the new Sovereign to regulate in what manner, and to what description of persons, lands should be transferred in mortmain, and the necessary licence from His Majesty not having been obtained the title of those persons, claiming the estate in question under a deed of conveyance from the Community of St. Sulpicians at Paris, was originally defective, and cannot now be considered as

FROM EUROPE.

Dreadful Calamity by fire.—It has seldom fallen to our lot to record an accident of a more appalling nature than has occurred at the village of Winterbourne Stoke, about 8 miles from this city.—An accident originating in carelessness and thoughtlessness, and causing the sudden destruction of no less than seven human beings! The fire broke out between one and two o'clock, on Thursday morning last, in a large house belonging to Mr. G. Kellow, which was occupied as two tenements; in one end of the house a shop-keeper and his family resided; in the other two families, consisting of nine poor persons, seven of whom shocking to relate, were burnt to death. The fire was not discovered till the whole of the latter part of the building was enveloped in flames; and it appears that it was occasioned by Mary Adlem (one of the sufferers) having, previously to going to bed placed some ashes near to a bundle of heath, in a buttery not far from the fire-place. The names of the unfortunate sufferers were, Christiana Adlem, aged 80 years; Mary Adlem, aged 40, and her daughter Eliza, aged 3 years; Jane Target, aged 63; Ann Davis, aged 22, and her infant daughter Jane, aged 10 months; and Elizabeth Wilkins, aged 17 years. James Davis (the husband of Ann Davis) escaped with great difficulty, saving one of his children three years old. This poor man, in the fright of the moment, leapt from the window to the ground; but recollecting the danger to which his wife and children were exposed, he re-entered the house, & ascended into the chamber; at that time the women of both apartments were running about in an agony of despair; he caught his eldest child with his left hand, and with his right hand dragged the mother, clasping her infant to her bosom, down the staircase; but by some means the wife became disengaged from his grasp, and was lost with her infant in the flames, which surrounded them. The father bursting through the door which was on fire, again reached the outside with his child, but both were dreadfully burnt.—The roof at this moment fell in, burying in the mass of fire (in addition to the mother and her infant) the four women and the child who remained behind.—Salisbury paper.

WELCH INDIANS.

"To the Editors of the London Courier.

Sir,—I am not a little surprised at the historical uncertainty, expressed in communications to your respectable paper, concerning the locality of a Welch settlement in North America.

"The people in question are as well known to the inhabitants of the western continent, as the Welsh people are to the European world. During a residence of forty years in different parts of the United States, I have had dealings with some hundreds of them; and, in the year 1817, visited their settlements on the Madwaga, or, as it is vulgarly called, the Paduca, river, with one of the natives, a brave and intelligent man of the name of Austin Nerthog. These Indians, composed of two tribes, the Bridonee and the Madogee Indians, have their settlements on two promontories called Kerna, in latitude about 40 degrees north, and about 80 degrees longitude west. They are generally a tall and powerful people, of fair complexion and of amiable manners; they have the use of letters, and are in possession of numerous manuscripts respecting their ancestors of this island, whom they call Brydon.

"The language they speak is Welsh, much purer than that of the principality of Wales, as it is free from Anglicisms; their religion is Christianity, deeply blended with Druidism, and their almost unvaried amusement consists of music and versification.

"On my first acquaintance with these friendly people, which was above 30 years ago, I could hardly believe the individuals I conversed with, on account of these settlers having taken up a position so distant from the coast; to this they gave me the following answer, and which turns out to be the fact; that they first settled on the eastern coast of Llechcin, now Lexington, and at other stations, and afterwards retired to their present settlements when the country became disturbed by a succession of invaders from the old world.

"I trust, Sir, you will excuse the shortness and imperfection of this letter, as I am a plain man of business and rather hurried, having to sail for America to-morrow, I must beg leave to add, that should any of my fellow countrymen be inclined to visit the Welsh settlers at Kernan, it will give me great pleasure to assist them with every minute direction, if they will give a call upon your obliged servant, as undersigned.

OWEN WILLIAMS.

"Fur merchant" (a native of Carthiganshire, S. Wales) Fell's point, near Baltimore, United States.

London, Feb. 21.

[The above interesting letter, upon a very interesting subject, has been accidentally delayed. The writer, by this time, is probably on his voyage to Baltimore, where we hope he will be sought by some future traveller, enterprising enough to undertake a journey to the settlement of the Welsh Indians mentioned by Mr. Williams.—Edt.]

Junius.—The controversy respecting the authenticity of the Letters of Junius still remains unsettled. A Tract is now in the course of publication at Edinburgh, from the pen of C. M. Chalmers, Esq. the object of which is to refute the pretensions of the late Sir P. Francis, K. B. to be considered the author of those far famed compositions, and to establish the claims of another eminent character, hitherto unsuspected.

Mr. Sheriff Roberts, at the bar of the house presented a petition from the Corporation of London, complaining of the crowded state of the gaol of Newgate, by the influx of Middlesex prisoners.—Mr. Alderman Wood stated that the crowded state of the gaol was such, that 47 prisoners who were under the sentence of death, were confined in 15 cells. It was a fact, that 16 persons convicted of an infamous crime, were all confined in one room.

Extract of a letter from Teneriffe, 6th January.

"We are suffering the most cruel oppression from the government of Madrid sending orders, periodically, to levy contributions on us, which the improverished state of our islands renders impossible to pay to any extent to satisfy our rapacious rulers. To the last of these orders, our governor, a humane man, represented the utter impossibility of compliance. The reply he received, by return of post, was the commands of the King to prepare for the reception of a regiment of 'Catalans, (the most ferocious of all the Spanish soldiery) who are to be quartered on such of the inhabitants as may be unfortunate enough not to be able to pay.—We are besides, threatened with a visit from the grand expedition from Cadiz, as it passes along for Buenos Ayres. The one sent last year to Peru, stopped here for a supply of provisions, which distressed us much to pay for, though they did not get half what was called for, and they stood in need of. It was said, after they were out of sight, that if the real destination was so distant as the Pacific, that the unfortunate soldiers, 2,000, must perish of hunger. They were made to believe that the voyage was only to Porto Rico, which would not exceed 25 days at most. N. B. The above is the convoy of transports and frigate taken by the Chili squadron it the Pacific."

From the London Morning Chronicle—March 25.

GENERAL JACKSON.—Want of room has prevented us from making any remarks on the intelligence from the American Papers respecting the decision of the House of Representatives in the case of Arbuthnot and Ambrister. Our readers will recollect that the Committee on Military Affairs, disapproved of the proceedings, on the trial and execution of our two countrymen; but this decision of the Committee has been disapproved of by strong majorities; in the case of Arbuthnot, of 108 to 62, and of Ambrister, of 107 of 63.

"Thus has this knotty question been settled, after a debate of three weeks," says an American Journal. Yes, it has been settled—but how? The American Government and Legislature, and the nation, have deliberately made themselves sharers in the infamy of General Jackson and the Court Martial, who were his accomplices in the base murder.—By this solemn act, will the world pronounce on the American character. It will say, here is a nation which has openly recorded, that it is determined to trample on the most obvious principles of morality and justice.—For there is not a people, savage or civilized, who on hearing the account given by the Americans themselves would not, without a moment's hesitation, pronounce the death of our two countrymen to be a most unjustifiable murder. Certain we are, that there has at least been but one voice in Europe on the subject.

The Americans are a people of whom it would give us most sincere pleasure to be able to speak well. They are our brethren—their existence as a nation, is one of the proudest triumphs of the Institutions of our country. They will spread our language over a great continent, and through them, it can hardly fail to become one day the principal language of the earth. We shall always be more intimately connected with them than with any other people.

There are other reasons which weigh powerfully with us. The Americans are a free people, and we would fain believe that freedom has a tendency to ennoble the character. We do not expect that men under any form of Government will be exempt from human frailty, but we could wish that the enemies of freedom had it not in their power to say, that one of the freest nations in the world is at the same time one of the lowest in the scale of humanity.

How are we to account for this debasement of character? for a free nation which tolerates such a sentence must be debased. We are inclined to believe that we must attribute much of it to the demoralizing effects of slavery, which prevails through by far the greatest portion of North America. The American is familiarized to the commission of acts of injustice and oppression from his infancy. He is accustomed from his childhood to give scope with impunity to all the worst passions of our nature—it is impossible that this should not have its effect on the national character. In all times, and among all nations, the oppressor has uniformly been punished by degradation of character. The Americans have not proved that they form an exception to the rule.

What steps our Government have taken, or may take in this affair we know not.—This, however, we know, that they will not discharge the duty they owe to those over whom they are placed, if they allow such a signal act of injustice towards two British subjects to be committed with impunity."

A rumor has been spread that the Common's Report of the Bank Committee has been drawn up, and will be laid before the house before the Easter holidays.—We have reason to think that this rumor is wholly void of foundation—that the committee, so far from having prepared their report, have scarcely completed the examination of evidence—and that it will not be till after the holidays that any report will be presented.

At the same time the public may be sure, that perfectly aware of the great anxiety felt by every class of commercial men, and of the stagnation of mercantile enterprise and speculation consequent upon the uncertainty that must of course exist until the report is presented, every effort will be made by his Majesty's government to accelerate it as much as possible. But it will easily occur that the immense importance of the subject demands the most deliberate and mature consideration.——London Courier.

The quantity of March dust which has flown, has had the full of its proverbial good effect. All the spring crops which are above ground wear a luxuriant and promising appearance, with those occasional exceptions to be expected; and the latter seed season is likely to be favorable. All parts of the country are unusually early. The lambing has been in general very successful as might be expected in such a season.

From Jackson's Oxford Journal.

Died, a few days since, at Notter, near Landrake, Devonshire, Lieutenant Colonel O'Dogherty, of the Royal Marines, one of the most eccentric characters, perhaps, in England, who, for more than 20 years, occasionally visited Plymouth market on an old white horse, [an as Rosinante,] whose lank appearance, combined with his own singular habiliments, formed together a spectacle of wretchedness fully equal to any thing described of the celebrated Elwes. In his last visit to Plymouth, a few weeks since, he seated himself on the steps of The Plymouth Telegraph Office to eat an apple. His dress then consisted of a dirty night-cap round his head, surmounted by the poll of an old hat without a brim, a rough waistcoat, patched all over, greasy leather small-clothes, kept up by listing braces, outside the waistcoat, with wads of straw round the bottoms of his legs. In his hand he wielded a large hedge-stick. Amidst all this seeming penury, he possessed some very excellent freehold estates in the above parish, lived in a small cottage in its vicinity, without a pane of glass in the windows; he nightly entered it by a ladder which he drew after him, and slept in a corner of one of the rooms upon a wretched pallet. The anecdotes in circulation respecting this extraordinary man are many and curious. He formerly was attached to the Portsmouth Division of Royal Marines, in the streets of which town he frequently excited astonishment by his wretched garments, having on sometimes one of silk and one worn but worsted stocking. It was long a mystery with his brother Officers where he lodged; at length he was watched, and, between two guns, in a dilapidated part of Southsea Castle, he had his cot swung, and there he turned in. Although of so miserly and miserable a disposition and appearance, he was known to give way to the indulgence of a most inordinate appetite for eating, which he possessed; but this was the only known contribution he ever suffered to be levied upon his purse.

Honourable Disinterestedness.—Previous to the death of Colonel O'Dogherty, he made a will, by which after bequeathing £1000 in legacies to various persons, he left the residue, amounting at least to £40,000 to Charles Carpenter, Esq. of Modiotnham, Cornwall. At this gentleman's request, two of the neighbouring magistrates, Mr. Arundel, of Landulph, and Mr. Tucker, of Trematon Castle, attended the funeral; after which they accompanied him to read the will to Colonel O'Dogherty's son and three unmarried daughters, who were not even mentioned in it. When his will was read, Mr. Carpenter, in the handsomest manner renounced all his right and title to the property bequeathed, which he immediately assigned over to the Colonel's four children, to be divided between them, in such proportions as Mr. Charles Rashleigh, formerly a trustee in the family, "old direct. What adds more credit, if possible, to Mr. Carpenter's conduct on this occasion, is the fact, that when an express reached Redruth where he then was, with Col. O'Dogherty's will, he, without loss of time, and lest an accident might occur before he could return home, executed a codicil to his own will, wherein he gave all the property bestowed upon him to the Colonel's Children. Traits of character like these require no eulogy.

As matter of record and literary curiosity, we subjoin a list of the numbers purchased on the last day of every month, by the first book-selling establishment in Paternoster row, and perhaps in the world, for distribution among their retail correspondents. It serves to show the proportion for general sale, and it must surprize foreigners to learn that this is the consumption of one (thought the chief) of the many wholesale establishments, who send monthly parcels, to every part of the world—

These numbers, as the regular monthly consumption of one wholesale house, will appear the more extraordinary, when we state that, on the decease of the late M. CHRISTIANA, Jan. 1.

Within these few days we have had the pleasure of seeing here a drove of about 200 reindeer, among which were some white ones, or, as they are called, Siberian, with their keepers, and the dogs employed to guard them. They passed through on their way to the rocky mountains of the district of the Stravanger, where an inhabitant of that place, who followed them, will attempt to naturalize these animals, which for a long time have not been seen there tame, and as domestic animals. This person has purchased these reindeer mostly in Russian Lapland, beyond Tornea, and some in Swedish Lapland; with much trouble they have been conducted this long journey, having been on their way ever since the month of March. In Asmodt in the Osterthil want of snow obliged him the least necessary parts of the baggage, viz: tents, fur cloaths, snow-shoes, kitchen utensils, &c. About 20 reindeer were killed on the journey for food, the owner and the drivers having subsisted the whole time on the flesh and milk of these animals. In those unknown regions and large forests, as well as in the frequent fogs, he was obliged to direct his course by the compass, as if at sea. This person does not mean to content himself with this one expedition; when he has safely arrived at his own home, he will return to Lapland to get another drove. The plan to people these desart rocks with reindeer is equally remarkable and useful. An idea like this, and the resolution to execute it, occur but rarely.

NEW INVENTIONS.

Several accounts of useful inventions have appeared in the French publications relative to the arts and sciences; among others the following; a method of separating the hair from the rabbit down, and thus rendering the latter equal to the finest beaver, for the manufacture of hats, the down being more susceptible of the dye when unmixed with the hair, which has hitherto given a coarse appearance to even the best hats, in which rabbit down has been mixed with the beaver; a plan of silvering looking glasses which effectually secures the silver from decay or mildew. This plan has been fairly tried, and a looking glass placed on water for eight days sustained no kind of damage.

The Editors of the New-York Gazette having been favored with a file of Chilian papers, they feel themselves under obligations to the young gentleman who translated the following letters which passed between Lord Cochrane and Capt. Biddle, at Valparaiso, in December last. As Captain Biddle is now at the seat of government, he will readily perceive whether or not there has been a false coloring given to his correspondence. Any correction from this gentleman, will be published by us with much pleasure.

The U States frigate Ontario, Capt. Biddle, having left Valparaiso suddenly on the 31st ultimo, which, having excited various rumors, we now publish, for the satisfaction of all, the literal correspondence between the vice-admiral of the naval forces of Chili (lord Cochrane) and capt. Biddle.

No. 1.—Copy of a letter from Lord Cochrane to Capt. Biddle, dated Valparaiso, Dec. 27, 1818.

SIR,—I have been much flattered with the visit with which you have honored me, and which I consider as an honor done me, in consequence of the station I hold as commander in chief of the naval forces of the government of Chili. I cannot forget the respect due to you, and will call to see you the first opportunity.

The fulfilling my duty to the government I have the honor to serve, is superior to all personal considerations, and I therefore beg permission to remind you, that from the length of time you have been in public service, you cannot have been left ignorant of the fact, that when vessels of war of a foreign nation enter friendly ports, it has always been the custom to give a public salute to that flag. I know of but one exception, which was, when the American frigate Essex arrived at Gibraltar in the year 1805, which vessel omitted to salute the flag of Lord Keith, who was then the English Admiral on command at that station. The latter was of opinion that it was the duty of the commander of the Essex to fire the customary salute, or, if he refused he should leave the port immediately. Instead of saluting, the Essex left the port; but, on the arrival of com. Truxton, he not only saluted the vessel which bore the admiral's flag, but by the order of the same commodore, the Essex left Algeziras for Gibraltar, and was ordered to fulfil the compliment, not only for his former omission, but for his posterior return.

For my part, I have no personal sentiments on this subject; but allow me to assure you of my profound respect for your government and your person. I have the honor, &c.

No. 2.—Capt. Biddle to Lord Cochrane, dated on board the Ontario, before Valparaiso, Dec. 28, 1818.

SIR,—In answer to your letter of yesterday, I have the honor to state, that the visit which I made to your Lordship on my arrival, was in the capacity of an officer of the U. S. marine, and as a mark of my respect for the commanding officer of the naval forces of the Chilian government.

I know well that when a vessel of war arrives in a foreign port, it is customary to fire a public salute, and my knowledge of this circumstance was what induced me, when I entered this port in January, to give formal advice of my arrival to the governor, and notify him, that I would fire the customary salute. If it would be answered with an equal number of guns. My offer to salute was not accepted, and consequently, your Lordship, will see with how much propriety I excuse myself from not doing it.

In my astonishment I so receiving your written declaration you state, "that the object ter was to excuse yourself making the salute, and consequently was not necessary to know vessel under your command answered with an equal or a of guns.

This is a public affair; sir, what were my person when I find that you add, in ter, that "when a government enters a foreign port, the salute matter of courtesy—it is contrary—that it is at times practised others omitted."

No. 3.—From Lord Cochrane to Capt. Biddle, dated Valparaiso, Dec. 28, 1818.

SIR—I have received the letter with which you favored me in answer to mine of yesterday, and beg permission to observe, that being ignorant of the rules of the American Government as respects the number of guns with which its commanders are authorised to fire, in answering the salutes of foreign vessels of war who enter their ports, if you will give me your word of honor, that the American commanders uniformly, without considering the comparative rank or the locality, to answer with an equal number of guns the salutes of all foreign men of war, I will give new orders that your salute shall be answered in the same way. Moreover, as in all other services with which I have had communications, it is customary that the admiral's vessel should answer with two guns less, the salute of the foreign vessels of war, which do not bear the insignia of a corresponding rank, my instructions, until this moment, have been conformable thereto.

The alteration of the usual mode of procedure, in similar circumstances, (as respects the United States) must be regulated by the communication which you make me upon this subject.

I have the honor, &c.

No. 4.—Capt. Biddle to Lord Cochrane, dated on board of the Ontario, Dec. 28, 1818.

SIR—I have had the honor to receive the communication with which your Lordship honored me this morning. The object of my former letter was to excuse myself entirely from making the salute, and consequently it is not necessary to know whether the salute of the Ontario shall be answered with an equal or a less number of guns. When a government vessel enters a foreign port, the salute is a mere matter of courtesy, and entirely arbitrary—it is sometimes practised, and at others it is omitted.

With respect to what your Lordship informs me relative to the U. S. frigate Essex, I beg leave to inform your Lordship, that your statement is erroneous, for com. Truxton never commanded a squadron in the Mediterranean ; and I am persuaded that my friend capt. Bainbridge, who commanded the Essex in 1803, would not have suffered himself to be ordered to leave the port in the manner you state. I have the honor, &c.

No. 5.—Lord Cochrane to Capt. Biddle, dated Valparaiso, same date.

SIR—The letter with which you favored me this morning, and in which you inform me that your visit was "in your capacity of officer of the U. S. marine, and as a mark of your respect for the officer who commands the naval forces of the Chilian government," you leave me to understand, that in omitting the salute, you could have no intention of failing in the respect you owe the Chilian flag ; the more so, when in the sentence which follows, you plainly confess that you knew, "that when a vessel of war entered a foreign port, it is customary to fire a salute ; and that the knowledge of this circumstance induced you, when you entered this port in Jan. ultimo, to give formal advice of your arrival to the governor, and gave him notice that you would fire the customary salute, if it would be answered with an equal number of guns." Imagine, then, my astonishment on receiving this evening, your written declaration, in which you state, "that the object of your letter was to excuse yourself entirely from making the salute, and consequently it was not necessary to know whether the vessel under your command should be answered with an equal or a less number of guns.

This is a public affair ; but imagine, sir, what were my personal feelings, when I find that you add, in the same letter, that "when a government vessel enters a foreign port, the salute is merely a matter of courtesy—it is entirely arbitrary—that it is at times practised and at others omitted."

Conceive, sir, I repeat, what are my particular feelings, when I compare your last communication with one of your former ones, in which you state, that, "when a vessel of war arrives in a foreign port, it is customary to fire a salute." When I compare this with the offer which you made to the governor on your arrival in January, to make the customary salute if it would be answered with an equal number of guns—when I compare this with the knowledge I have (and which is incontrovertible) that in no part of a civilized nation, the power which is saluted, ever answers with an equal number of guns.

As respects the affair at Gibraltar, which I mentioned in my letter, I have not erred in fact although I may, perhaps, have been mistaken as to particulars of no importance.

I plainly perceive the unfavorable predicament in which you are placed ; and you cannot feel it more sensibly than I do. But this will deprive me of doing that, which, before the receipt of your last letter, would have given me great satisfaction, and that is, of returning your visit, which I cannot now do consistently with my feelings, until an explanation confirmies the apparent contradictions which exist in your public letters.

Yours, &c.

No. 6.—Lord Cochrane to Capt. Biddle, dated Dec. 30.

In consequence of the respect and consideration which, in your first letter, you manifested for the Chilian government, and the amicable intercourse which subsists, and which I hope will long continue between the United States and this country, I have to request of you, in the event of your intention soon to leave the port, to be pleased to postpone your departure until after the sailing of the squadron, which is on the point of going to sea. Yours, &c.

No. 7.—Capt. Biddle to Lord Cochrane, dated Dec. 30.

In answer to your Lordship's letter, I have the honor to inform you, that although I am anxious to put to sea without delay, and notwithstanding I had it in contemplation to sail this morning ; yet, as I am desirous to accede to whatever may be agreeable to the Chilian government, as far as it is in my power, I have determined to remain in port during this day ; but it will be my indispensible duty to sail to-morrow, and I hope that the delay of this day will be sufficient to accomplish the views of the Chilian government ; and to speak the truth, as my object is to double Cape Horn, it seems to me that my departure cannot be in any way prejudicial to the views of the squadron. I have the honor, &c.

" New invented Arch Bridge."—A bridge has lately been erected over Onion river, about two and a half miles below the statehouse, in Montpelier, on a new and simple model, of which Mr. Naphtali Bishop is patentee. The bridge is described as being "composed of sixty nine string pieces, thirty feet in length, and ten inches by eleven and a half in size ; together with twelve thwarts, or cross pieces, twenty-two feet long, seven inches by fourteen ; forming one entire arch one hundred and ninety five feet long and twenty broad ; with not a single mortice, tenon, bolt, or band about it. The whole expense of which, does not exceed two hundred dollars." It rests wholly on the abutments, and requires no pier in the stream for support ; it will consequently be in little or no danger from floods.

American Antiquities.—We have seen an article in the Cleveland Register, which stated that a mound of considerable dimensions on the west side of the Cuyahoga river, had been opened, and a number of silver brooches found within the body of it, which were much corroded by rust. The writer of the article proves that the mound was a depository of the ashes and the remains of human bones which were found, and he also proves it to be of great antiquity, by a part of the bones being in a state of dust, when found, and the apparently sound parts presently becoming so, upon exposure to air. The same paragraph affirms that an earthen pot, capable of holding three gallons, has been recently washed by the Miami river from a mound originally on its bank, which was 350 feet in diameter at its basis, and 100 feet high. From these and many other similar discoveries, the writer believes (and we think with good reason) that this country was once inhabited by a race of people, at least, partially civilized, and that this race have been exterminated by the forefathers of the present and late tribes of Indians in this country.

Pursuant to the act of Incorporation, and the public advertisements, the Books for the La Chine Canal, were opened here on Thursday last, the 20th. We were happy to learn that a very considerable part of the stock was taken up the same day : and the anxiety evinced by the monied men to invest capital in this laudable undertaking, augurs well for its being carried on with a degree of alacrity proportioned to its importance.

Among the numerous advantages which have resulted from the use of steam as a navigating power, we find nothing of more importance than its application for towing vessels and rafts in places where the opposition from current, or winds prevents their progress. This plan has been resorted to with the best effect in Lake Champlain during the present season. The new Steam Boat Congress has for some time back been engaged in towing the rafts and Lake craft out of the creeks and bays into the middle of the stream ; by which means they may get down the River Richelieu before the water falls, and thereby prevent the serious loss, which often occurs in jumping the St. John's and Chambly rapids, after the river has become low. We are also informed, that the New Steam Boat, intended to ply between La Chine and the Ottawa River, will be engaged in dragging up the Durham Boats when required. This boat has come down to La Chine for the purpose of getting her Engine on board, which is now making in Montreal.

The first general meeting of the Proprietors and Stockholders of the Chambly Canal, was held in that village, on the 17th inst. when the Directors were appointed and other measures adopted to forward that highly important undertaking. We have not yet learned the exact direction in which the Canal is to pass. Two different surveys were laid before the meeting ; and although made at remote periods, and by people totally unconnected, there were some important points in which they coincided, one of these in fixing the spot where the Canal should disembogue into the Bason, we have also learned that both the surveys which were presented, were favourable to the plan of the Canal's passing through the interior of the Country, and averse to its joining the river in any place between St. Johns and Chambly.

A great number of Emigrants from Great Britain have already arrived at this Port, and continue to arrive daily. We observe that a greater proportion of them than usual is from England. Few of them remain here, but proceed up the River, and many of them go to the United States.—Quebec Gaz.

By the polite attention of Messrs. Molson and Sons, the Ladies and Gentlemen of Montreal were, on Sunday last, gratified with a pleasant water excursion, as far as Point aux Trembles, in the elegant Steam Boat Lady Sherbrooke, (now fitting up at this port.) The agreeable variety, displayed upon occasions of this kind, combined with the universal wish to be pleased, which pervades the breast of every participator in such fetes, rarely fails to produce the wished for satisfaction in all, and in this instance nothing was wanting to heighten the enjoyment and increase the pleasure. The Ladies and Gentlemen of the Garrison, formed part of the company, and the whole was enlivened by the Band of the 37th Regt. which the commandant allowed to attend on the occasion.

This trip gave an opportunity of witnessing the superior speed of this handsome boat. She went down as far as Point aux Trembles, in a shorter time than the same distance had ever been performed before, by our best boats in the river ; and on her return, although a strong wind and current against her, she came up to her anchoring ground in very fine style. Her Engine, (a 60 Horse-power,) is constructed on the most approved plan, and comprehends all the recent improvements both for strength and safety.

Among others, we could not avoid observing the Superiority of the Crank, over the Cogged wheel ; by this means that unpleasant shake so injurious to the boat and annoying to the passengers, is completely obviated ; for although the Engine of the Lady Sherbrooke had only been set up, and this was the first time it had been wrought the shake or noise was hardly perceptible in any part of the boat. No labour or expence has been spared, by the spirited proprietors, to render this boat comfortable in every respect. The Ladies Cabin is fitted up below, with a due attention to taste and elegance. There are several separate apartments adjoining to it, but so unconnected that a whole family may be accommodated with a separate room or rooms to sleep in. And there is a very neat arrangement in the dining rooms on deck, by which a part may be converted into a separate dining room, for a party, in the event of their not wishing to join the general table. In short from the specimen we have seen of this boat, though under many disadvantages, (such as the Engine not being wrought to its full power, from being so recently fitted up ;) we feel confident in recommending her as one of the first Steam Boats in North America for comfort and safety.

HALIFAX, April 16.

Our assembly have voted 2000 dollars towards erecting a college in this town ; and the sum of 3000 dollars to be applied for the encouragement of agriculture. Among the bills assented to by the governor, was a bill entitled "An act for raising an additional duty of excise"—By this act, an additional duty of 1 1-4 per cent is laid on all goods heretofore paying a duty of 2 1-2 per cent. And a further duty of 5 per cent upon the amount of duties hitherto paid upon wine, brandy, molasses, sugar and all other articles calculated by weigh or by measure.

KINGSTON, May 21, 1819.

It is asserted on good authority, that the question relative to the right of property in Grant or Wolfe Island, has at length been determined, and that Government has relinquished its pretensions in favor of private claimants.—This extensive and fertile island, situated in front of Kingston, is of immense value, and if improved by its owners, will not only become a certain source of wealth to them, but furnish an abundant supply of provisions for this market.

A Steam-Boat has lately been built in the Lower Province, for the purpose of plying between La Chine and the Ottawa River. Such a mode of conveyance will obviate the inconvenience which travellers usually experience at that place, and render their journey to the Upper Province more agreeable. A Boat of 80 feet keel, 20 feet beam and to carry an engine of 20 horse power, is now building at Prescott, to ply upon lake St. Francis.

Canada Thistle.—This noxious weed, which, although not a native of this country, has, by some means or other, been introduced, and has prevailed here to such a degree as to have acquired the name of the Canada Thistle, is spreading among our neighbours in the United States, and they are endeavouring to discover some means of eradicating it. Whether that proposed in the following letter, will prove effectual, or not, is to be determined. We recommend the experiment to our readers. It is an object worthy of the attention of every scientific and practical agriculturalist. This Thistle is so injurious to our crops of grain, so troublesome in respect to the harvesting and threshing of them, and at the same time so difficult to be extirpated, that any person who may discover a practicable remedy, will essentially promote the public good, by communicating it. To this subject we invite the attention of every friend to the prosperity of the Province.

"RED HOOK, April 27, 1819.

SIR—Finding by a publication under your signature, as President of the Agricultural Society of Berkshire, that it is a desideratum with that body to discover the means of extirpating the Canada Thistle, in an economical way, practicable to farmers in general, I have thought it would not be improper to give the result of my experience on that head, without, however, wishing to be considered a candidate for your premium.

Three years ago a labourer pointed out to me a piece of ground, on my farm, covered with the Canadian Thistle. He was unable to suggest any means of killing it ; but remarked that it might be kept from spreading, by heaping & burning upon it buck-wheat or other straw. As this method was but palliative, I pursued another, and this was, to pour slowly upon it the Fish, Beef and Pork Pickle of my winter provisions. In a few days, there was not an appearance of vegetation of any kind on the earth to which the pickle had been applied, and from that day to this the Thistles have not re-appeared.

"While thinking on this subject, I determined (had the pickle failed) to try oppie pummace, spread thinly over the Thistle—knowing that whatever would destroy the most vigorous tap-rooted plants.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient humble servant,

JOHN ARMSTRONG.

Good Tavern Regulations in Ohio.

By a recent law, passed by the legislature of Ohio, no person is allowed to keep a tavern, unless it shall appear to the satisfaction of the court granting the licence, that he is provided with a good house, containing at least four rooms, and three fire places, and is furnished with four beds; and that he is also provided with a good stable, divided into at least 6 stalls. All tavern keepers are prohibited from selling on credit to any person liquor of any kind to an amount exceeding fifty cents—and is prohibited from any recovery beyond that amount. Every tavern keeper is also subjected to a fine of twenty dollars for permitting any justice of the peace to hold a court in his house; and for permitting any kind of rioting, revelling or drunkenness in or about his house, he forfeits a sum not exceeding 50 dollars, and the suspension of his licence for the space of four months.

An Irish Telescope.—Sir Frederick Flood was one day observing to a friend that he had a most excellent telescope.—"Do you see yon church," said he, "about half a mile off—its scarcely discernable—but when I look at it through my telescope, it brings it so close that I can hear the organ playing."

From the Auburn Gazette.

Montezuma Bridge.—On Tuesday the 16th inst. a number of the inhabitants of the village of Montezuma and the town of Mentz, accompanied by one of the committee for building the bridge over Seneca river and its marshes, went into the woods, cut and prepared the first timber for erecting the longest bridge in the world.

This bridge is calculated to extend a distance of three miles, being separated near the centre by an island, and will afford a communication to travelers on the northern turnpike, in a direct line along the ridge road to Rochester and Lewiston.

The magnitude of this undertaking displays to the world the progress of improvement in the western country. This will be the third bridge over the waters of the Cayuga lake and Seneca river, a distance of seven miles, through a country, which a few years since was a wilderness; & in which distance the sum of more than one hundred thousand dollars will have been expended on bridges.

The middle section of the canal ending in the Seneca river at Montezuma, near this bridge, will undoubtedly render the place an object of curiosity to gentlemen travelling the country. And the very great sum of money to be expended on this bridge and the canal, will afford a fair opportunity for employment.

FRENCH CEMENT.

This cement is designed as a paint for the roofs of houses. It answers all the purposes of common paint, and also protects the roof from fire. Those who are erecting new houses, or are about to paint the roof of old buildings, would do well to try it. The expense of painting a roof this way, would be much less than in the common method. The cement becomes very hard and glossy, and is said to be more durable than the best kind of paint.

The following is a receipt for making it:

Take as much lime as is usual in making a pail full of white-wash, and let it be mixed in the pail nearly full of water; in this, put two pounds and a half of brown sugar, and three pounds of fine salt, mix them well together, and the cement is completed. A little lamp-black, yellow ochre, or other colouring commodity, may be introduced to change the colour of the cement to please the fancy of those who use it. The gentleman who furnished us with the receipt for making it, observed that he had used it with great success, and recommends it particularly as a protection against fire. Small sparks of fire that frequently lodge on the roof of houses, are prevented by this cement, from inflaming the shingles. So cheap and valuable a precaution against this destructive element, ought not to pass untried. Those who wish to be better satisfied of its utility, can easily make the experiment, by using a small portion of the cement, on some small temporary building, or it may be tried on dry shingles put together for the purpose, and then exposed to the fire.

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, April 4—9.

The Persian Ambassador.—A Paris paper contains some curious details of the history of Mirza Abdoul-Hassan-Khan, the Persian Ambassador, now at Paris on his way to London. Being descended from a distinguished family, who occupied the highest post of honor and power under the kings of Persia, he himself when young was appointed to the government of a district of the kingdom of Persia bordering on the Persian Gulph. While thus enjoying his sovereign's favor, a reverse of fortune, not uncommon in the despotic countries of the East, plunged him from the pinnacle of honor into the depths of adversity.—His uncle who filled the situation of prime minister at the court of Persia, was accused, by the calumnies of jealous courtiers of aspiring to the throne; and the Royal displeasure, of which he in consequence became the victim, extended its withering effects to all his family. The unfortunate Minister was put to death, and his property confiscated to the Crown, while several of his relations lost their lives or had their eyes put out, for no other reason than because they happened to be connected with his family. Abdoul-Hassan, the Ambassador, who was deprived of his government and threatened with a similar fate, happily escaped death by being forgotten till vengeance was satisfied, and after languishing in prison for three months was allowed to retire from office and danger into foreign lands. His first object was to visit the tomb of the Prophet at Mecca, and this pilgrimage inspired in him the wish of more distant travel. Accordingly, after seeing the chief city of the Wechabites, and other ports of Arabia, he embarked at Bassorah on board an English vessel for Calcutta, during the time that Marquis Wellesley was Governor-general of India. In the British India, and particularly the Deccan, he spent three years; when, proceeding to Bombay, he learned that his Sovereign had made a tardy discovery of his innocence, and restoring him to favor, had summoned him home. In 1809, by the influence of a surviving uncle, who was minister of finance, he was sent to England in quality of ambassador, accompanied by Mr. Morier, who was at that time Secretary of Embassy at the court of Persia. In London he remained only seven months, when he returned to Persia along with Sir G. Ousley who was appointed our Minister to Persia. In his passage home the vessel touched at Rio Janeiro, and Abdoul-Hassan was perhaps the first Persian ambassador that saw the new world. When he returned to his master, his services were requited with the title of Khan, and new marks of confidence. He was employed to conclude a peace with Russia in 1813, and in the following year proceeded as ambassador to St. Petersburgh, whence he returned home after a stay of three years.—The ambassador is not only known for his diplomatic services, but his literary attainments and elegant accomplishments. He is known to have cultivated learning with distinguished success. He speaks several languages, English, Arabic, Russian, and Hindostanee. He has written an account of his travels in England, India, and Russia, which, whatever be its merits, has been honored by his sovereign with the title of "The Wonderful Book," and to this "wonderful book" he is said to be adding fresh claims to the favor of the great King, by annexing his observations on France and Germany. Mirza Abdoul Hassan is about 44 years of age, of an ordinary height, but of a noble and agreeable exterior. His mind is as enlightened by study and experience as his manners are graceful and polished by his extensive travels, and his intercourse with the highest society. He is an accurate observer of works of art, and takes an account of the most remarkable chefs d'oeuvres which he visits in the French capital.

SCOTLAND.

Extracts from the Narrative of a Tour through Scotland, by Charles Dupin, Member of the French Institute.

From Dundee I went to Arbroath, in front of the new and celebrated pharos of the Bell Rock. Contrary winds, and the violence of the sea, did not allow us to go immediately to the rock where it is built, 12 miles from shore. I stand two nights in a farm house on the coast, observing every night the brilliancy of the fires, and the perfect distinction of their colours, which are alternately white and red.

I was conveyed to the Bell Rock in the vessel of the Commissioners for the Northern Lights. I studied the construction of this light house, which is the design of Mr Rennie, executed under the care and immediate direction of Mr. Stevenson. I particularly remarked the mechanism of the lamps, and the disposition of the glasses, which produced the coloured flames.

The keepers of the light house have a library, not large, but composed of useful books upon literature, morality, and natural science—they are subscribers at one of the monthly journals which treat of these subjects. Thus simple workmen, in the midst of the sea, charm the leisure of their solitude by attempting to follow the progress of reason and of the human mind. It is by much local observation of this nature that I have been able to satisfy myself of the general diffusion of knowledge among the Scottish people.

The keepers of the light-house keep a register, where they beg the persons who visit this edifice to inscribe their names, and to add some lines expressive of their ideas on the subject of this fine edifice. I found nothing remarkable in this album, except six improvisatory lines of the celebrated Walter Scott, when he visited the light-house.

"Far in the bosom of the deep,
O'er the wild shelves my watch I keep,
A ruddy gem of changeful light,
Bound to the dusky brow of night;
The seaman bids my lustre hail,
And scorns to strike his timorous sail."

When I passed through Aberdeen, I met Dr. Oliuthus Gregory returning from the Shetland isles, where he had gone to meet M. Biot and captain Colby, to continue the triangulation of G. Britain, and to prolong thus far north the measure of the meridian, extended by the French southward to the Balearic isles. Dr. Gregory showed me, at the university, an observatory very rich in instruments, but, if I mistake not, very poor in observations. Another thing interested me much more, because it shows a talent and natural vocation for the sciences; the same gentleman took me to a shoemaker, who, in the intervals left to him by his humble employment, makes barometers, thermometers, and large reflecting telescopes, which appeared very perfect: he can push them up at will out of his roof upon a platform of a little wooden turret, which is reached by a window. There he shows to the curious, the sun and the moon, as well as in an observatory of the first order.

From Inverness, at the bottom of the gulf of Murray, to fort Augustus, and from thence to fort William, I coasted the Caledonian canal; an immense work, which will allow frigates and vessels of five or six hundred tons to pass from the Atlantic to the German ocean, without making the dangerous circuit of the north of Scotland, and of the Orkney isles.—Wood was wanted for the sluice-gates; they have been made of wrought iron. I have examined gates which weighed twenty tons; they were opened and shut by two men only.

The rich inhabitants of Glasgow have founded the Andersonian institution, where they teach in the evenings of winter, the elements of geometry, of mechanics, of physics, and of chemistry applied to the arts. These courses are specially designed for young artizans, who have only to pay about 5s in the season. This trifling fee is exacted in order that the students may include only persons actuated by the love of instruction, and willing to make some small sacrifice for it.

The Andersonian institution has produced astonishing effects. It is an admirable thing not to see in many Glasgow manufactories, simple workmen who understand and explain, when necessary, the principles of their operations, and the theoretical means of arriving at the most perfect possible practical results.

There is preparing at Glasgow an immense apparatus to light with gas all the streets of that great city. When I was at Glasgow, the tubes for conducting it were already cast, and they were preparing a place for the gasometer and furnaces.

IMPROVEMENTS IN STEAM VESSELS.

As every thing relating to navigation is of the utmost importance to the trade and interests of this country, we announce with the greatest satisfaction, and a considerable degree of confidence, an important discovery, in a new method of propelling ships or vessels by steam. We are happy to say that Glasgow has the honor of this discovery, and that James Jeffray, M. D. Professor of Anatomy in our College, is the inventor, for which he has lately obtained a patent, extending to Great Britain and Ireland, and the Colonies thereunto belonging. The principle, which will soon be laid before the public, we have seen, and it is so extremely simple, that without wading into the principles of mechanics or the law of fluids, we have little hesitation in saying it is likely to succeed beyond any thing at present anticipated or calculated upon. Lessening every expense connected with the building and outfit of ships, durability, expedition, and above all, certainty and safety in its movements, in comparison of the present system, are combined, and stand forward in such a commanding and conspicuous point of view, that it cannot fail to come into general use amongst all commercial nations. The simple but powerful machinery will be so placed, that unless the vessel is dashed to pieces it cannot be injured, and scarcely any thing can go wrong but what may be repaired in a short period. It will work unaffected by any surge.

The fiercest storms and the loftiest billows cannot injure its powers, nor, though directly against her course, materially retard the ship that is propelled by it. The deeper in the vessel it is placed, and the greater resistance it meets with from the surrounding fluid, so much the greater in degree will its powers be increased, and according to the force of the engine on board. It can also be constructed so as to be worked by wind or water, or animal strength.

This machinery will not only impel the vessel forward with any necessary speed, but, by a curious contrivance, a hand may turn in a moment the largest vessel, whatever may be her speed. It will not only afford the crew fresh water if necessary, and dry their clothes, but it will pump a ship to an extent scarcely credible, making every pump and impelling power draw out from her most secret recesses bad air, and replace it with good, and a machine of a curious construction may easily be attached to any vessel, which will deepen rivers with the greatest celerity, and with a force which only solid rocks can resist.

We are certain we do not err far in calculation when we state, that a steam engine of ten horses power, to work machinery upon this principle, will do as much as an engine of 44 horses power on the present system. No part of the power is lost—every particle is put into complete activity—all danger and retardation by reason of heavy seas and bad weather, so great in the present wheel system, is completely avoided, and a vessel unincumbered with wheels, paddles, and their perishable frames, may traverse any sea, in any weather, with perfect safety, and calculate upon her arrival at her destined port with almost as much accuracy (whatever may be the distance to run) as the mail coach betwixt this and London. Fifty or sixty tons of coals (perhaps a much smaller quantity) will be sufficient to carry an ordinary West Indiaman out and home; and when we consider that the vessel so propelled can steer a direct course, we will find that 16 days, with a speed of only eight miles per hour, will carry her from the Clyde to Barbadoes, and in like proportion to any port, however distant.

We need scarcely point out the advantages and new sources of trade which such a discovery will lay open. They are innumerable, and cannot fail to arrest the attention of the most careless observer. It will open up with every part of the world a trade, communication, and activity, proportionate to what now appears on the Frith of Clyde from this to the Cumbraes, compared to what that was before a steam-boat disturbed our river. It will be the means of preserving the lives of thousands of brave men, who might otherwise be engulphed in the deep, and save hundreds of thousands of pounds of property annually swallowed up, by storms and tempests. The machinery can be fitted to any vessel, and act on ships of war with equal, if not with greater effect, than merchant vessels. In short, we look upon it as one of the most important and useful discoveries ever made in navigation.

STAFFORD ASSIZES.

Important to non authorized Apothecaries.

At Stafford Assizes a cause was brought on at the suit of the Apothecaries' Company, against the son of a man who had been originally a gardener, but who had long exercised the business of a cow leech and quack doctor; the son claiming a right of following the profession of an apothecary through having studied under his renowned father. In the cross-examination of the father, by Mr. Dauncy, he was asked if he had always been a surgeon? The witness appealed to the Judge if this was a proper answer, and whether he must reply to it: and at last said, "I am a Surgeon." Mr. Dauncy asked him to spell this word, which he did at several times, viz. "Sqrugun," "Surgeard," "Surgund"—Mr. Dauncy said, "I am afraid, Sir, you do not often take so much time to study the cases which come before you, as you do to answer my question."—"I do not, Sir." Witness said he never employed himself as a Gardner, but was a farmer till he learned his present business. Mr. Dauncy said, "Who did you learn it of?"—"I learn of Dr. Holme, my brother-in-law; he practised the same as the Wentworth Doctors, and they were regular Physicians. Mr. Dauncy—"Where did they take their degrees?" Witness—"I don't believe they ever took a degree."—"Then, were they regular physicians?"—"No, I believe they were not; they were only doctors."—"Only doctors: were they doctors in law, physic, or divinity?"—"They doctored cows and other things, and humans as well." Judge to Witness—"Did you ever make up any medicine by the prescription of a physician?"—"I never did."—"Do you understand the characters they use for ounces, scruples, and drachms?" "I do not." "Then you cannot make up their prescriptions from reading them."—"I cannot, but I can make up as good medicines in my way, as they can in theirs." "What proportion does an ounce bear to a pound?"—[a pause.]—"There are 16 ounces to the pound, but we do not go by any regular weight, we mix ours by the hand." "Do you bleed?" "Yes." "With a fleam or with a lancet?" "With a lancet." "Do you bleed from the vein or from the artery?" "From the vein."—There is an artery somewhere about the temples; what is the name of that artery?" "I do not pretend to have so much learning as some have." "Can you tell me the name of that artery?" "I do not know which you mean."—"Suppose, then, I was to direct you to bleed my servant or my horse (which God forbid) in a vein, say for instance in the jugular vein, where should you bleed him?" "In the neck, to be sure."

The Jury almost instantly returned a verdict for the plaintiffs, damages 20*l*.—[This was the first conviction under the Act; and the trial afforded Messrs. Dauncey and Jervis, and even his Lordship (Garrow) a fine opportunity (which it is scarcely necessary to say they largely embraced) of displaying their wit and humour.]

From Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine for February, 1819.

THE BREAKWATER OF PLYMOUTH SOUND.

Being the other day on business at Plymouth, I went to see what every one who visits that port ought not to neglect seeing, that great national work, the Breakwater, under the shelter of which a whole fleet of ships of war, besides many hundred of smaller vessels may now find safe protection, where, heretofore, a gale of wind from the south or south west, brought with it certain destruction, to every ship and vessel which might happen to be at anchor in Plymouth Sound.

I visited likewise the quarries of Preston, from whence are drawn those vast blocks of marble, from one to ten tons each block, of which the Breakwater is formed; and it is truly astonishing to behold the immense space now levelled to a plain surface, which a very few years ago was one solid mountain of rock; not less surprising is the skill and ingenuity of the workmen in blasting off pieces of the marble rock, nearly in the size and shape they wish for, by means of a very small quantity of gunpowder; to such perfection has experience brought the art of blasting stone.—From the quarries, these huge blocks are transported on trucks, along iron railways, to the water side, where, by means of quays built for the purpose, they are at once run down an inclined plane into the Sound, each vessel taking, at one trip, from 70 to 80 tons.

On the arrival of these vessels at the line of the Breakwater, they are made fast to a chain bouyed up, by means of which, and poles placed on shore, they know precisely where it is required to drop the blocks of stone, either at the base, or on the summit: and this is done with great facility by means of a trap door, moveable on hinges, at the stern of each vessel.

The length of this enormous dyke, or artificial island, when finished, will be just one mile; its perpendicular height varying from 45 to 70 feet, the width of its base from 370 to 350 feet, according to the depth of water, and the width of the top about 60 feet. When I visited it in October last there were about 1300 feet at the top quite finished; that is to say, the breakwater to this extent was brought up to the high-water mark of spring-tides; at that time the quantity of stone deposited was 1,340,000 tons.

The first stone was thrown down on the 12th of August, 1812, the birth day of the Prince Regent, so that, on an average, 223,000 tons have annually been deposited on this great work; and, I understand, if the necessary supplies had been voted by Parliament, it could with ease have been finished long before this. The estimated quantity of stone required for the whole was two million tons.

The retardation of the work, however, has had its utility, by giving the great stones time to settle, and the rubble stones to work themselves into the crevices, and render the others immovable. For such is the force of the action of the sea upon the side of the dyke opposed to it, that in a violent gale of wind which happened two years ago, a stone of nine tons weight on the top, is said to have been carried, by the force of the waves from the side next the sea, to the opposite side facing the harbour.

Literary Shoemakers.—The fraternity of shoemakers have, unquestionably given rise to some characters of great worth and genius. The late Mr. Holcroft was originally a shoemaker. His dramatic pieces must rank amongst the best of those on the English stage. Robert Bloomfield wrote his poem of "The Farmer's Boy," while employed at this business, and Dr. William Carey, Professor of Sanscript and Bengalee, at the College of Fort William, Calcutta, and the able and indefatigable translator of the scriptures into many of the Eastern languages, was in early life a shoemaker in Northamptonshire. The present Mr. Gifford, the translator of Juvenal, and the supposed editor of the Quarterly Review, spent some of his early days in learning the "craft and mystery" of a shoemaker, as he tells us, in one of the most interesting pieces of auto-biography ever penned, and prefixed to his nervous and elegant version of the Great Roman Satirist.

WINDSOR Castle, April 13.

"His Royal Highness the Duke of York has, by a fall about four o'clock yesterday afternoon, broken the bone of the right arm about three inches above the elbow joint; the fracture was set very soon after the accident, by Mr. O'Reilly, of Windsor. His Royal Highness has passed a quiet night, and is this morning free from fever, and doing in all respects as well as under the circumstances can be expected."

From the Kingston Chronicle.

Doctor Herschel's Perpetual Weather Table.

The following table, constructed by the celebrated Doctor Herschel, upon a philosophical consideration of the attraction of the sun and moon, in their several positions as to the earth, and confirmed by the experience of many years actual observation, may, without doubt, suggest to the observer what kind of weather will probably follow the moon's entrance into any one of her quarters, and that so near the truth, that it will be very seldom found to fail.

If it be a new or full moon, or the moon enters into the First or Last Quarter, at the hour of 12 at Noon - - - -	SUMMER.	WINTER.
or between the hour of	very rainy	snow or rain
2 and 4 - -		rain & mild
4 6 - -	changeable	fair
6 8 - -	fair	rain & frosty
	rain, if wind n w, rainy if s or s w.	if n. or w. s. t. rain or shew if s. or s w.
8 10	ditto	ditto
10 midnight	fair	rain & frosty
midnight to 2	fair	cold frost unless wind s. or w.
2 4	cold, with frequent showers.	snow and stormy
4 6	rain	ditto
6 8	wind & rain	stormy
8 10	changeable	cold rain if w snow if s. cold nigh wind.
110 12	frequent showers.

From the above table it will be seen, that the nearer to midnight either of the moon's periodical changes (i. e. within two hours either before or after it) the more fair the weather is in summer; while the nearer to noon that the change takes place the reverse may be expected. Fair weather may also follow, when either of the periodical changes occur during the six afternoon hours, viz. from four to ten: but this is mostly dependent on the wind.—The moon's entrance during all the hours after midnight, except the two first, is unfavorable to fair weather. The like may nearly be observed in winter. Every farmer ought to preserve a copy of this table, and carefully to regulate his pursuits by its indications. Such a line of conduct might materially promote his comforts and his interests; while in no case could it disturb his prospects, or destroy his hopes—London pa.

From Bell's Weekly Messenger of March, 21.

A merchant who was travelling a short time since on horseback, between Sumar and Tours, in France, stopped at nightfall, at an inn in a little village; he ordered supper, and entered into conversation with two persons, of respectable appearance, to whom he incautiously expressed that his purse was well lined. On the following morning, before it was perfectly light, he left the inn, and proceeded on his journey. He had not gone far before he was overtaken by his two companions of the preceding evening, who accosted him, and when they had proceeded to a very solitary place, seized and offered him his choice, whether he would be stabbed to death, or thrown into the river Loire. The merchant prayed them to spare his life, but in vain: the robbers were determined, and he at length preferred the latter alternative. The robbers bound him, and flung him into the river, where he soon disappeared, and the robbers carried off his horse and his money. In the mean time the merchant was not dead; he was borne along the current, but he contrived to keep his head above water; and at length, as day advanced, he was discovered and dragged to shore, when he warmed himself and dried his clothes. Not far off was an inn; the master of it was at the door, and seeing a stranger in tears he inquired the cause. On hearing the merchant's story, he doubted not that the robbers were two men who were at that moment drinking in his house. The merchant recognized them. The gends d'armes were summoned, and the robbers were seized at the very moment when, believing their victim at the bottom of the river, they were dividing their booty. Proceedings have been commenced against them.

To arrest horses in the act of running off.

A German writer, suggests a simple method of stopping horses from running away—the plan is, to have blinds so attached to the head stall of the bridle, that by drawing a rein, fixed for that purpose, the blinds will immediately close over the eyes, and by confounding the horse, compel him through fear, to stop immediately. If the plan be found to answer, it ought to be adopted, particularly in the case of all public stages. The line from the blind should be fixed to the front of the stage, so that any passenger might pull it, in case of accident

Origin of Rivers.—A question has long existed among philosophers, and has never been settled by universal consent, whether the rivers depend solely for their supply upon the water which descends from the atmosphere, or whether there is a kind of circulation of water within the earth, like that of blood in the animal economy, or that of winds in the atmosphere, by means of which perennial springs are constantly supplied, by some mechanical process in nature, from "the fountains of the great deep." Ridiculous affirms upon calculation, that the Volga, or the St. Lawrence alone discharges annually a greater quantity of water than falls in rain, snow and dew, upon the whole surface of the globe. These and other known rivers are said, upon a very moderate calculation, to discharge more than five hundred times as much water into the sea as falls in rains, &c. It would seem, therefore, that there must exist subterraneous communications between the sea and the sources of fountains, rivers, and the larger springs by which these are supplied; and this opinion, is corroborated by the known existence of charybdes which swallow the sea for these purposes; and when these happen to be stopped, the largest rivers have been said to be dried up, and to have wholly ceased to run for a considerable time. It is stated in Ree's Cyclopedia, that there are accounts in history of this having happened to the Thames, the Medway, and the Trent in England; the Elve, the Motala, and Gulspang, in Sweden, and other rivers in other countries. On the contrary, if these Charybdes happen to be too open, fresh water springs depending upon them become salt. Pliny relates that this once happened in Caria, near Neptune's Temple. Various other instances have been stated by historians, ancient and modern.

Col. Pinckney arrived at this place on Wednesday last. Two companies of the 2d U. S. infantry arrived on Thursday.

COL. WILLINGTON.

Maj. Worth, and the officers stationed at this post, have taken up the remains of Col. Willington, and a lieutenant of his regiment, who were killed in Beekmantown, on the 6th of Sept. 1814, and deposited them in the burying ground in this village, near the spot where the British and American officers, who fell on the 11th September of the same year, were entombed.

The funeral ceremonies were performed on Monday the 3d inst. The procession was formed at the cantonment, and, escorted by major Worth's company of infantry with arms reversed, proceeded through the village to the burying ground, where the remains were deposited with the customary military honors.

Col. Willington commanded the 33d Buffs, and led the advance of the British army through Beekmantown: he was killed about 6 miles west of this village.

MORE JACKSONS.

An order was recently issued in Florida, by colonel Kirk, to put to instant death without delay or form of a trial, any deserter that was taken. That, in consequence, a party under the command of lieutenant——, went in pursuit of a man of this description, whom they overtook; that they informed the prisoner of the nature of their orders, and their readiness to execute them. He firmly expostulated with the officer; demanded a trial, claiming his rights as a man and an American citizen. But finding his expostulations vain, he knelt down and received the fatal bullet in his breast.

In an another instance, it is reported, that, in the Alabama territory, a soldier was condemned by his officer as a punishment for intoxication to be ducked; which was executed on the spot, and carried to that excess that the man was literally drowned. This order was also issued without the form of trial.

At Greenbay, on the western side of Lake Michigan, the military, as the same report states, have assumed a complete control over the civil authority. Citizens have been taken up for real or pretended offences, been tried by court martial, and the punishment which is called picketting inflicted upon them. This is, by placing the culprit on four wooden pins, drove firmly in the ground, with the points exposed above the ground a half or quarter of an inch, over these he is suspended by cords fastened to the thumbs, and when he can no longer sustain himself in the air, he must let his weight down on the pins.

VELOCIPEDE.

The accelerator, or walking expedition, is a machine invented by Baron Charles de Drais, master of the woods and forests of the grand duke of Baden. Its nature and properties are as follows:

1. That on a well maintained post road it will travel up hill as fast as a man can walk.

2. On a plain, even after a heavy rain, it will go 6 or 7 miles an hour.

3. When roads are dry and firm it runs on a plain at the rate of 8 miles an hour.

4. On a descent it equals a horse at full speed.

As a horse draws in a well constructed carriage, both the carriage and its load much easier than he could carry the load on his back; so a man conducts, by means of the accelerator, his body easier than if he had its whole weight to support on his feet. A great portion of the muscular strength of a man in walking or running, is exerted in sustaining the weight of the body; but on the accelerator the body being upheld, the whole exertion is merely applied to the propulsion of the machine forward. It may be always directed on the best part of the way, and on a hard road the rapidity of its movement resembles that of an expert skater; the principles of the two motions are the same. In truth it runs a considerable distance while the rider is inactive, and with the same rapidity as when the feet are in motion; and in a descent it will beat the best horses in a great distance, without being exposed to the risk incidental to them—as it is guided by the same gradual motion of the fingers and may be instantly stopped by the feet.

The machine consists of two wheels, one behind the other—connected by a perch, on which a saddle is placed for a seat. The front wheel is made to turn in a pivot, and guided by a curved lever or rudder, which comes up to the hands; the fore arms rest upon a cushion in front, and in this position, both hands holding the rudder firmly, the machine and traveller are preserved in equilibrio.

The traveller having inclined his body a little forward, extended his elbows a little, and grasped the guide, must preserve his balance by pressing lightly on the side which appears to be rising.—The arms are as necessary to maintain the balance of the machine, as the hands are to the conducting of it. Place the feet lightly on the ground, long but very slow steps are to be taken in a right line at first, lest the heels should come in contact with the hind wheel. The attempt to increase the motion of the feet, or to keep them elevated while the accelerator is moving, is only to be ventured after practice in a slow movement shall have given dexterity. The saddle may be made high or low, according to the height of the traveller.

The impelling principles of the Draisina* are not derived from the body of the machine itself, but simply from the resistance of the feet upon the ground. The body is supported without exertion upon a carriage which a slight impulse will send forward, and the alternate motion of the legs upon the earth gives the power, so that velocity is obtained without much expense of force.

FROM LOWER CANADA.

From the Montreal Herald.

MONTREAL, June 5, 1819.

A report is prevalent, that there is a considerable reinforcement on their way out for the military and naval departments in the Canadas. In tracing the origin of this rumour we find it had its rise in private letters, received from high official characters in Britain, by their friends in this country. We are unable to say what numbers are expected; the most authentic accounts, mention eight regiments of Infantry, one of Cavalry, & a proportional addition to the marines and seamen on the Lakes. We are equally in the dark as to the cause of this proceeding, while some say it is solely owing to a change in the destinations of some regiments, whose services are not required at home or in other stations, others assert that it proceeds from the high toned replies of the United States Government in the explanation demanded by Great Britain on the Arbuthnot and Ambristie business.—*Mont. Suppose the Canal may cost £100,000 which sum exceeds any estimate we have yet heard of, the capital embarked in this undertaking would consequently produce an interest of 14½ per cent. to the Stockholders.

A part of the Staff Corps, under the command of Captain Mann, left this a few days ago, on their way up the Ottawa River. There are to be employed, in removing the obstruction in the navigation of that River, as far as necessary, to effect the transportation of government stores by that route. This undertaking, we consider one of the first importance to the country, whether it be viewed as a means of promoting its internal prosperity, or for its defence in the event of hostilities being pursued against it. By rendering the Ottawa navigable, we shall have a free course opened with an extensive tract of valuable territory, which will be soon settled, and where the want of a ready mode of conveyance has been hitherto severely felt. This measure will also enable us to maintain our connection with the upper province, should the route by the St. Lawrence be ever wrested from us, or interrupted by the presence of an enemy on its south bank. While we therefore readily concur in the propriety of the undertaking, we are happy to find the execution of it has been intrusted to good hands, Captain Moon is well qualified for the duty, from his extensive professional knowledge as an Engineer, and his intimate local acquaintance with the Country.

We are informed that the Earl of Dalhousie, Governor of Nova Scotia, is to pay a visit to His Grace the Duke of Richmond in the course of this summer.

Preparations are now making at William Henry, for the accommodation of the Governor in Chief, who intends spending part of the Summer there.

A Report is also in circulation, that His Excellency De Wit Clinton, contemplates a visit to Canada this season.

UPPER-CANADA GAZETTE.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR'S OFFICE,
York, 2d June, 1819.

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, has been pleased to appoint BENJAMIN GEALE, of York, Esquire, a Commissioner for Administering Affidavits to Militia Pensioners.

YORK, 17 JUNE, 1819.

To His Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Major-General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

We His Majesty's dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Legislative Council of the Province of Upper Canada in Parliament assembled, beg leave to return our thanks for your Excellency's Speech at the opening of this Session.

We lament the continued indisposition of His Majesty, and condole with your Excellency on the death of his august Consort the Queen of the United Kingdom, whose long life was rendered illustrious by the exemplary discharge of every public and private duty.

We are gratified to learn, that His Royal Highness the Prince Regent in behalf of His Majesty, has authorised grants of Land to certain of the Provincial Navy and the Militia who served during the late war, and we feel the propriety of with-holding this mark of approbation from the individuals who composed the late Convention of Delegates.

A re-enactment of the Bill for the establishment of a Provincial Bank, will occupy our early attention.

The Road Law has undergone great consideration; any practical amendment which can benefit the remote Settlers in their access to Market will receive our particular attention, and we shall concur in any measure which will remove the present inequal pressure of its operation.

We will direct our attention to such Laws as are about to expire, and require to be continued.

We wish your Excellency every comfort whilst absent from the Seat of Government, with the laudable intention of visiting the more remote parts of the Province, and inspecting every part of the population committed to your care.

(Signed) Wm. DUMMER POWELL,
SPEAKER.

Legislative Council Chamber,
10th June, 1819.

To which His Excellency was pleased to return the following answer:

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council,

I thank you for your condolence on His Majesty's continued indisposition, and on the death of our lamented Queen.

And I am well satisfied, that the result of your deliberations will prove advantageous to the interests of the Province.

To His Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

We His Majesty's dutiful and loyal Subjects the Commons of Upper Canada, in Provincial Parliament assembled, beg leave to offer to your Excellency our most humble and hearty thanks, for your gracious Speech from the Throne, at the opening of the present Session.

We are persuaded, that under the circumstances which have rendered it necessary for your Excellency to call us together before the close of the year, you have chosen the most convenient period.

We feelingly lament the continuance of the indisposition, with which His Majesty has been so long afflicted; and in common with all his faithful Subjects deplore the recent calamity which in the Death of the Queen, has bereaved the Nation of so illustrious an example in the discharge of every public and private duty.

We are gratefully impressed with the gracious intentions of His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, in authorizing the Governors of both Canadas, to bestow Land on certain of the Provincial Navy and Militia, who served during the late war; and with your Excellency's considerate attention in setting apart adequate Tracts in the several Districts for the accommodation of such of their respective Inhabitants as are within the limit of the Royal instructions; and we lament, that any portion of His Majesty's subjects should have forfeited their claims upon the bounty of their Government.

We regret, that the Royal Assent to the Bill for the establishment of a Provincial Bank, did not reach this country in time for its being promulgated within the period limited by law; and will give every facility to the re-enacting of so salutary and useful a Bill.

Sensible of the necessity for good Roads, and of the expediency of amending the Road Law, we shall give to that subject all the consideration which its importance requires—We shall not fail to bestow our attention on that most serious evil to the actual Inhabitants of the Province, the neglected Grants of an early date, and shall endeavour to frame such regulations as will subject those Grants to the operation of the Assessment Law; in doing which, it will be our care to protect the Land from sale by distress, until due notice can be given to the Proprietor.

When the Public Accounts and Estimates are laid before us, we shall give them every attention.

We are fully sensible of your Excellency's anxiety to promote the wealth and population of the Province, and that all your measures have been adopted with that view. We shall give every consideration to the expediency of advancing to the new Settler, unavoidably situated more remote from the great Lakes and Rivers, an easy approach to Market.

Our attention will be given to such laws as are about to expire.

The intention expressed by your Excellency of visiting certain parts of the Province during the present season for navigation, that you may become personally acquainted with the population committed to your care, cannot fail to prove highly gratifying to all His Majesty's subjects in this Province.

(Signed) ALLAN McLEAN.
SPEAKER.

Commons House of Assembly,
9th June, 1819.

His Excellency was pleased to reply:

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

I thank you for condoling in common with the rest of His Majesty's faithful subjects, in the afflictions which His Royal Highness the Prince Regent and the United Empire have experienced in the continuance of our Sovereign's indisposition, and in the death of our lamented Queen.

The attention you promise to bestow on the Road Law, and on other subjects connected with the interests of the loyal people you represent, will, I have no doubt, be productive of results advantageous to the Country.

At a meeting of the officers of the Society, held this day, at the District School House.

Present, His Excellency Sir PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Patron.

It was resolved, that the first annual show of Cattle as advertised, take place at the Market House of this town, on Thursday next, the 17th inst. at one o'clock, P. M.

Resolved, that two competent individuals be requested to assist the Directors in their respective awards.

Mr. Joseph Shepard and Mr. Martin Snyder, were unanimously proposed and approved of.

(By Order) R. C. HORNE,
Secy.

To the Emigrants who arrived at Quebec in the summer of 1818, and who came in the Jane of Greenock, and the Carlow of London, from the Parishes of Comrea, Belyhidder, Weems, and Killine, in Perthshire, North Britain.

When we parted with you at Montreal for this part of the Country, we promised to inform you of the advantages, which we might find it to possess. You are probably so scattered about now, that we cannot inform you in any other way than by addressing you a letter in a newspaper; and we earnestly hope, that the Editors of other papers, will be kind enough to give our letter one insertion, that you may all have the opportunity of hearing from us.

We have been of the party of Colonel Burwell, and assisted him to Survey about seventy thousand acres of Land, in the Township of London, which we have just completed, and Colonel Talbot has located us upon one hundred acres each. The Township of London is bounded in front by the River Thames, and is well watered by the north branch of it, and a great many smaller branches which intersect every Concession in the Township; some of which are very excellent for Mill seats. The Land is of the finest quality we ever saw. The Soil is generally very black and deep; and at the same time, intermixed with a small portion of white sand. The Timber is Sugar Maple, Elm, white Oak, Butternut, Cherry and Basswood. We have not passed through a lot, but that we have seen some Butternut trees, under which, the ground was frequently almost covered with Butternuts at this season of the year. The pack-men of our party have often gathered and brought quantities of them to where we have encamped at night, and cracked as many as we wished. Towards the last of April, and the first of this month, they have been as fine and dry amongst the leaves of last year, as though they had been kept in a house.

Several persons who have removed from the Eastern parts of this Province, and now live near this place, have informed us, that the wintering of Cattle and Horses does not cost more than half as much here as there.

When we left Scotland, the Ministers of our parishes begged us to settle near each other, which we sincerely wish and hope, that such of you as are not settled to your satisfaction, will come to this part of the Province. You will certainly like the country when you see it. We have had no trouble in getting our Lands. When we made choice of them, we applied to Colonel Talbot, and we have two years to perform the Settlement duties in, which is all to our own advantage. Several of our friends are now here, and every new Settler who has money, or is industrious, can buy provisions from our neighbours on Talbot Road, and in Westminster, on the opposite side of the River Thames, to last until they can grow them from their farms. We remain your friends

MISCELLANEOUS.

Sunday evening arrived at this place from Pittsburgh, the United States's steamboat Western Engineer, major Long, bound on a voyage of discovery up the Missouri and its tributary streams. She draws, with her machinery, freight, &c. on board, two feet, and six inches water. She seems to be well built, is bottomed with iron or copper, and has a serpent's head on her bow, through which the steam passes and produced a novel appearance.—She is so constructed that the hands on board can remain in the exercise of their duty, and be perfectly secure from the fire of musquetry. She is well supplied with arms and ammunition, and is said to weigh, with all her equipments, only 20 tons.—St. Louis paper.

Seed Corn.—It has been found, in some recent experiments, that there have been no failures in a given number of seeds sown after having been heated, while 12 out of a score of good seed that had not been heated, have failed to vegetate. In consequence, inquiry is on foot to ascertain whether heated grain might not be substituted, with advantage for common seed.

Singular Fact.—A gentleman now resides near Exeter, who has not washed his face or hands for forty years, and speaks of the circumstance with pleasure. He is about fourscore years of age, strong and in good health.—Though he does not apply water in cleaning his skin, he is however, in the daily habit of dry-rubbing himself.—Plat. Rep.

FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, April 23.

Cash Payments.—The Liverpool Courier contains the following cheering intelligence, which we transcribe to gladden the hearts of those whose faith may be a little more lively than our own upon the subject.

"A fact of great public importance was stated on Wednesday by Lord Harrowby. It is this, that the Bank is at present in possession of treasure fully equal to the discharge of its engagements."

April 23.

It is with much regret that we communicate the following extract of a letter from the agents to Lloyd's at the Cape of Good Hope, dated 23d January :—

"Arrived the Frances Charlotte, Field, from Bengal and Madras, she brings accounts that a most violent hurricane was experienced at Madras, on the 24th of October, during which the Queen Charlotte was totally lost, with all on board; that the Ladies Castlereagh and Harriot had put into the Roads after the hurricane, completely disabled at sea, and had not been heard of.

LONDON, April 20.

Stocks.—We notice again to-day a still further decline of the funds, notwithstanding the depression which has continued for so considerable a length of time. Consols for the account at one time in the day, fell to 61 5-8 owing to the uncertainty as to the intention of the Chancellor of the Exchequer with respect to raising money, and the market closed at the following price :—

Red. an. 71 1-3 ; consols 72 ; do. for account 72 1-8.

Commerce continues in a most distressing state of stagnation. Two houses in the city connected with the Manchester trade, have stopped payment, one of which is stated to have paper out to the amount of £250,000.

We are sorry to state, that very unpleasant intelligence respecting the plague in Barbary was yesterday received. The letters dated the 17th of March, at which time the plague, which had been decreasing for some months, had returned with redoubled fury. The deaths were greater than had been experienced during the last fatal year. The inhabitants were neglecting all their usual avocations and were shutting themselves up in their houses.

April 16.

The first part of an expedition under Col. Eyre, & destined to join Sir George MacGregor, in South America, sailed on Friday from the port of Dublin. Vessels are now on their way from England to Galway, to receive another part of Col. Eyre's corps, ready to embark at that port, and another vessel will immediately be taken up at Dublin, for a similar purpose.

It is with much pleasure we learn from various parts of that country, that there is every appearance of an abundant harvest this year. The wheats in most places are well forward, and, generally speaking, too much advanced to be much injured by any of those sharp night frosts which may happen during this and the ensuing month.

Letters are received from Cadiz up to the 28th ult. If there be any truth in the report which was mentioned in a morning paper of yesterday as to a mutiny among the troops embarking for South America, the affair is kept very secret.

PARIS, April 16.

It appears that the petition of the merchants for removing the obstacles to the navigation of the Seine, and for establishing Paris as a sea port, which has now become a manufacturing city, has been most favorably received by the minister of the interior.

A frightful event signalised the day before yesterday.—Two individuals, animated with the most inveterate hatred to one another, went to the Boulevard, St. Hilaire, near the Barriere de L'ocrei. They were without witness.—(Would they ever have found any ?) Their swords were crossed—already both are wounded. One of them wishes to desist —the other refuses to break off. The weapons again crossed.—He who showed such a ferocious obstinacy falls dead on the spot. We do not wish to announce the names of these individuals, scarcely do we dare to say they were brothers !

Monsieur (Count D'Artois) went through the ceremony of washing the feet in the Hall of Diana, in presence of the King, of Messieurs the Dukes D'Angoulême and Berri, of Madame the Duchess D'Angouleme, the Duke of Bourbon and a great number of spectators. The ceremony lasted from ten to twelve !!! This is an imitation of our Saviour's act to the Apostles.

ROME, March 31.

A second earthquake was felt in this capital the 26th of last month. The shock which was from S. E. to N. E. was more sensible at Frascate and Albano. It did however no harm.

Ivory Paper.—The Society for the encouragement of Arts and Manufactures have given the sum of 30 guineas to Mr. Cowley, for the invention of ivory paper. This paper, or, possesses a surface having many of the valuable properties of ivory, and, at the same time, has the superior advantage of being obtained of a much greater size than ivory can possibly furnish, even nearly as large as the usual sheets of drawing paper.

PARIS, April 13.

"Yesterday, being the anniversary of the entrance of his royal highness, Monsieur, into Paris, the national guard superseded the body guard of this prince, in their service, and remained on duty until this morning. At noon, Marshal Oudinot, and the officers of the 13 legions of the Parisian guard presented to his royal highness their congratulations on that event. The prince received them with his usual affability. Amongst other kind expressions his royal highness observed, that he should always feel himself happy when surrounded by the national guard, and that the 12th of April would never fail to excite the most pleasing recollections, adding—'Gentlemen, I do not wear your uniform, but keep it by me and will wear it in the hour of danger; I know of none that is more splendid or more honorable.'

"His royal highness afterwards received the ministers, deputies, generals, &c. A repast had been prepared for the national guard on duty; at 4 o'clock the prince entered the banqueting hall, which, at his presence resounded with acclamations; and asking for a glass of wine, said—"Now my friends, to the health of the King;" which was received with shouts of Vive le Roi ! Vive Monsieur ! after an interval of a few moments, his royal highness said—My friends, to the health of the thirteen legions; I wish they should know that I drink to their glory and happiness.'

LAUSANNE, Switzerland, March 16.

Conflagration.—On the 11th inst. a dreadful conflagration nearly destroyed the large village of Azmoos, district of Sargans, Canton of St. Gall. Nearly the whole population of this village, and of the neighboring communes, were at work at the dykes on the bank of the Rhine, and before any help arrived, 113 houses were consumed by the flames, and 313 individuals forming 68 families were reduced to the most afflicting misery by the loss of their live stock, furniture and provisions. The church and 25 habitation escaped this disaster, which has been alleviated in some measure by prompt relief from the government of St. Gall. In 1716, this village experienced a similar fate. The misfortunes which the inhabitants of St. Gall have endured, during several years past, from the stagnation of trade, fire, and innundations, cannot be too much lamented.

FROM THE UNITED STATES.

From the Democratic Press, May 13.

The meeting of Congress.—We expect soon to hear that petitions, from the commercial cities and many of the large towns, will have been presented to the President of the United States, praying him to call Congress together at an earlier day than the constitution prescribes for their meeting. From the information we have had communicated to us upon this subject, we are of opinion that the causes, which have combined to give birth to those petitions, are of so imperative and pressing a nature as to justify the measure, and demand the prompt interference of the Government.

Since the above has been in type, we have been furnished with a proof sheet copy of the petition to the President of the United States, which will be found in our paper of this afternoon.

To the President of the United States.

SIR—The subscribers, with all due respect, submit to your most serious consideration the full wing reasons on which they venture to suggest the propriety of convening an extra session of Congress.

Our Agricultural productions, the great staples of our country, on which we relied to pay for our extensive importations, and which, even at their reduced rates, would have been inadequate for that purpose, are either excluded from foreign markets, or reduced in price from 25 to 40 per cent. without the probability of a favorable change.

Our markets are deluged with merchandize from foreign nations, while thousands of our citizens, able and willing to work, and capable of furnishing similar articles, are unable to procure employment; our manufacturing establishments are generally in a languishing condition, and many of them, in which immense sums have been invested, wholly abandoned, whereby their proprietors, who placed reliance on the protection of government, are ruined.

Our commerce is almost equally prostrate, and the capital of the country encaged in that useful branch, reduced since the war at least one third, probably one half.

The balance of trade in consequence of excessive importations, has been, and continues, most ruinously against us, whereby, after having remitted an immense amount of our government and bank stock in payment which subjects the nation to a heavy annual permanent tax—we have been, and are alarmingly drained of our circulating medium, in consequence of which our monied institutions are impoverished and crippled in their operations; agriculture, manufactures, trade and commerce are paralized; and all classes of our citizens more or less injuriously affected in their pursuits.

Real estate has depreciated throughout the union from fifteen to thirty-five per cent; and in many cases from fifty to sixty.

The subscribers are impressed with a conviction, that for all those alarming evils there is no adequate remedy but a reduction of the amount of our imports within that of our exports; it being undeniably true, that nations, like individuals, which buy more than they sell, or, in other words, expend beyond their income, must be reduced to bankruptcy.

To depend on this salutary effect being produced by the restoration of that spirit of economy which results from general distress, or from the forbearance of our merchants to import, is to allow a violent fever to rage in the body politic, and exhaust itself or the national strength, without the application of any remedy to arrest its destructive career.

Even if our own merchants were to reduce their importations within those bounds which our means of payment would require, they would continue to be, as they have been, inundated with goods consigned by foreign merchants, which would perpetuate the calamitous situation into which our country is plunged.

A radical remedy to this evil can only be applied by the legislature of the U. States, in such a revision and regulation of the Tariff, as shall reduce our importations, and effectually protect national industry.

In England, France, Germany, Russia, and Prussia, and most other countries in Europe national industry is adequately protected by prohibitions and heavy duties, whereas, while many of our agricultural productions and almost all our manufactures are excluded from nearly all the markets of the world, our markets are open to those of all other nations, under duties, affording by no means sufficient protection; a case probably without example in the annals of mankind.

We therefore respectfully pray that you will be pleased to convene Congress, as early as circumstances will permit.

From the Practical American Gardener.

FOR THE MONTH OF JUNE.

Melons and Cucumbers.

All the melons and cucumbers that have hitherto been under the protection of glasses, or paper frames, may now have them removed, and fully exposed to the open air. Refreshment of water will be necessary occasionally, and particularly to cucumbers.

Keep them entirely free from weeds, and hoe the ground between the plants frequently; draw the ear gently to the stems of all, and lay the vines off in a regular and neat manner; prune luxuriances, by nipping off the runners; lay a shingle underneath fruit of the melons.

In the last week of this month, sow general crops of melons and cucumbers for pickling.

Water Melons, Squashes and Pumpkins.

These plants should be thinned now, if not done before, leaving but three of the best in each hill; draw the earth, with a hoe, up to the stems of the plants, as high as the seed leaves; keep the ground loose, and perfectly clear of weeds.

Sweet Potatoes.

Sweet potatoes must have earth drawn around the hills, to encourage the growth of the roots; try off the vines as regularly as well may be, and keep them free from weeds.

Cauliflowers.

The early cauliflowers will now produce their heads; care must be had to break down the leaves, to preserve the flowers from sun and rain.

Draw the earth round the plants, in the form of a basin, to retain the water, which should be frequently given them plentifully, which will greatly enlarge the size of the flowers; this is absolutely necessary in dry seasons.

The cauliflower plants, from late sowing, should now be planted out finally; if not done in rainy weather, give them water after planting, and lay a large leaf of cabbage, as a shade, over them.

Cabbages and Savoys

Take the opportunity of moist or cloudy whatever, to plant out a full crop of the late spring sowings of cabbages, savoys, and of the red pickling cabbage.

You may now sow seeds of any of the early heading kinds, as the Smyrna, York, sugar loaf, or battersea, for autumn.

Borecole, Brussels' Sprouts, Jerusalem Kale, Turnip Cabbage and Broccoli.

The early plants, of either of the above kinds, may now be planted out, as directed in May; the late sown crops should be thinned, and these pulled out, planted in a nursery bed, four inches asunder, giving them a good watering when planted, and afterwards occasionally, until well rooted.

Early in this month, sow some more broccoli seed, for a succession crop, to produce their heads in February.

Celery.

Celery plants may now be planted out in trenches; mark out the trenches by line, ten or twelve inches wide, and allow three feet between trench and trench; dig each trench a moderate spade deep, and spread the earth, dug out, equally on each side of the trench; put about three inches of very rotten dung into the trench, then pare the sides, and dig these with about two inches of the under mould, incorporating all together; then put in the plant, in the middle of the trench, in single rows, about six inches asunder; trim them before planting. When completed, give them a plentiful watering, and shade them, by placing sticks across the trenches, and over these put pine boards, until they strike root, and begin to grow, when the boards are to be taken off.

When the plants are grown to the height of eight or nine inches, they should have their first landing; this must be done by pulverizing the earth, and laying it gently around their sides, leaving the hearts and tops free; repeating it, every few days, until they are blanched of a sufficient height.

Peas.

A few pease may still be sown, and if the season prove moist, they may produce.

Asparagus.

The asparagus now running up to seed, should be cleared of weeds; also the seeding plants.

Transplanting Leaks.

Manure and dig the ground well, then draw from the seed beds the strongest plants, trim the roots, and cut off the tops of the leaves; plant them in rows a foot asunder, and six inches plant from plant, in the rows; insert their shanks into the earth up to their leaves.

Lettuces.

Sow and transplant lettuces. Let this be done in moist weather, or else water them plentifully.

Small Sallading.

Continue to sow cresses and other small sallading once a week. Water them often in dry weather.

Kidney Beans.

Sow successive crops of kidney-beans, in the beginning, middle, and latter end of this month. Land up the kidney-beans sown last month.

Carolina and Lima Beans.

Hoe and clean the ground between these beans; see that all are properly supported with sticks.

Radishes.

A few of the salmon and short top purple radishes may be sown; also some of the white and red turnip-rooted kinds. Towards the middle or end of the month, sow a good crop of the white and black winter radish, to draw early in autumn.

Carrots, Parsnips and Onions.

The crops of carrots, parsnips and onions, must now be kept clean of weeds, and if the onions incline more to tops than roots, lay the tops down.

Beets.

The crops of beets should be kept very clean from weeds, and the plants thinned to eight or nine inches plant from plant, if not done before.

Endive

Transplant endive that is now of a sufficient size. Sow another crop of curled endive, about the middle, and latter end of the month.

Okra, Tomatos, Egg-Plant.

Earth up the crops of okra; where too thick, thin them. Keep the ground clean from weeds.

In the early part of this month, plant out tomatos and egg-plants.

Capsicums.

In the early part of this month, plant out full crops of the capsicums from the seed-beds.

Cardoons.

Plant out cardoons in a bed of rich earth, at the distance of four feet, every way, from one another; one good plant is sufficient in a place, as they rise to the height of three or four feet, and require a considerable quantity of earth to blanch them.

Plant Pot-Herbs, &c.

Plant out from the seed-beds, for edgings of the borders, or in beds, plants of thyme, hyssop, sage, sweet marjoram, winter savory, &c. &c. Let this be done, if possible, in moist and cloudy weather.

Gathering Herbs.

All kinds of herbs, such as mint, balm, clary, lavender, sage, rosemary, &c. that are gathered for drying, or for distillation, should be cut off, when just beginning to come into full flower, and laid in the shade to dry gradually.

To destroy Weeds.

As the sun, at this season of the year, is powerful, give the ground a complete hoeing, where it can be done; the weeds will more easily be destroyed, and by stirring the earth around the plants, particularly after a shower of rain, it will refresh them.

REMARKABLE FISH.

A few days ago, a boy named Bryan, son of a fisherman of Carlow, hooked in the river Barrow a pike which, after a fatiguing exertion of five hours, he succeeded in landing near Bestfield. This monstrous fish measured five feet seven inches in length, and weighed fifty-three pounds. The owner was rather precipitate in disposing of his property, by cutting up the pike, which he sold in pieces at sixpence a pound. Had he taken off the skin carefully, and stuffed it, he might have commanded almost any price for it, as it certainly well worthy of being lodged in one of our museums. On opening the pike there were no less than fourteen hooks of different sizes found in his body, which he must have broken from their lines in former efforts to take him. We have heard and read much of extraordinary fishes without giving credit to the accounts, but having an opportunity, together with hundreds of persons in this town, of examining this pike we shall not be so unbelieving in future. The head of this monster weighed several pounds, and was in size as large as that of a yearling foal.—The boy did not receive above twenty six shillings for the fish from the manner in which he disposed of it: had he kept it entire for one day, a Reverend Gentleman of this town would have gladly given £5 for it.—Carlow Paper.

Botany Bay.—The British government has sent a commissioner to ascertain the present state of the colony of New-Holland; the situation of those sent there as convicts; the state of the trade, manufactures, commerce, &c. It is contended that the colony is becoming very flourishing, though some of the convicts were in a wretched state. It is well known, that many of the convicts have become opulent and respectable merchants, artizans and farmers; and their families highly respected. The settlement was formed in the year 1787, when the British first sent convicts there. The climate is one of the most temperate in the world, the soil fertile, and producing most luxuriant crops. Many persons in England, who have connexions at Botany bay, are said to commit larcenies in order to be sent there at the expense of the government.—Bost. pap.

Rapid Travelling.—It was suggested a few days since that strip might be possibly made to Philadelphia and back again in one day. Accordingly a party of gentlemen left this city yesterday morning, in the post chaise line across Staten Island, arrived at Philadelphia, partook of some refreshment at the mansion-house, and returned to supper, at Niblo's, before 9 o'clock, performing with ease a distance heretofore unknown in this or any other country.

The party consisted of five exclusive of the proprietor and left the quarantine ground precisely at 3 o'clock, arrived at Woodbridge, at 24 minutes after 4; at Brunswick, at half past 5; at Princeton at seven minutes past seven; at Trenton at 1 Pminutes past 8; at Bristol, at 10 minutes past 9; and in Philadelphia at 11, and the New-York morning papers were delivered in Philadelphia at that hour; the party in returning, reached the quarantine ground at 8—starting at dawn and getting back at dusk, and comprehending a distance of 160 miles, exclusive of 18 miles by water in one day.

This has never been equalled, and the horses went at a pleasant trot—no racin the reason why, if to come at a gallop, and very little fatigue was sustained.

This effort is highly honorable to the enterprise of the proprietors of the post chaise line, who merit encouragement for their despatch, and comfort and convenience of their stages. Twenty five minutes were allotted to dinner at Philadelphia.

From the New-York Spectator.

Have the goodness to insert in your widely circulating paper the following facts, to shew that our transatlantic brethren will not be so much astonished at the rapid travelling of the Post Chaise Line without a little extra exertion.

Capture of Porto Bello and defeat of McGregor.

Captain Fleetwood of the schooner Sam, arrived from Jeremie yesterday, in 25 days from Porto Bello, reports that General McGregor made his appearance off the harbour of Porto Bello on the 7th April. On the 8th he landed his forces, amounting to upwards of one thousand men, and on the day following, entered, and took possession of the place. He remained in possession twenty-one days without succeeding in gaining any of the inhabitants over to his standard. The depredations and robberies of his party on the private property, compelled the inhabitants to abandon their houses, and fly to the mountains for refuge. At the last of April, Gen. Hore (Royalist) entered Porto Bello at six in the morning; and surprised McGregor and his followers, who were asleep. McGregor and 8 or 6 men escaped with difficulty by leaping from a window twenty feet high, and swimming on board of one of his vessels.

Five hundred prisoners have been sent to Panama. There was sixty men killed and forty wounded; the greatest part of whom were officers. Stragglers were daily brought in from the neighboring mountains.—The Royalists lost two men killed and four wounded.—Baltimore Amer.

District Court.—The district court of the United States for the northern district of New-York, was to have been held in this village last week. The marshal, clerk, jurors, parties and witnesses attended, but as usual no judge appeared, and the court was adjourned by the marshal. This court was established for the purpose of justice and public convenience: yet, as it is conducted, it more than defeats both. It is worse than useless. But few courts have been held since its establishment. Notice is regularly given that they will be held "as the law directs." People are disappointed; suits are procrastinated, property wasted, expenses incurred, testimony lost by death and accident, the innocent are deprived of their rights, and the guilty go unpunished. What inducements have collectors to attempt to enforce the revenue laws or prevent their violation? If they seize property they cannot have a trial. Repeatedly are they subjected to the expenses of preparation for trial, and as often disappointed.—"Loss upon loss"—vexation upon vexation, and no remedy. The same is the fact with all other parties.—Truly, said Mr. Jefferson some officers will neither "die nor resign."

To purify Rancid Butter.—Melt it with a slow fire in a well glazed earthen vessel; which put to soft water working them well together, and when it is cold take away the curd and the whey at the bottom; do it a second and a third time in rose water, always working them very well together. The butter thus clarified will be of the sweetest delicious taste.

Important to Stone Masons.

Mortar.—It is well known that mortar is composed of quick lime and sand reduced to a paste with water. When dry it becomes as hard as a stone, and as durable; and adhering with great tenacity to the surfaces of the stones which it is employed to cement, a whole wall becomes nothing else than one solid stone. But this effect is produced very imperfectly unless the mortar is skilfully prepared, a circumstance too little understood or too little attended to by those who in general have charge of the preparation. The following directions may be useful to mechanics who work in mortar.

The lime should be pure, perfectly free from carbonic acid, and in the state of a very fine powder: the sand should be free from clay, and partly in the state of fine sand, partly in that of gravel: the water should be pure; and if previously saturated with lime, so much the better. The best proportions, according to the experiments of Dr. Higgins, are three parts of fine sand, four parts of coarse sand, one part of quick lime recently slacked, and as little water as possible.

The stony consistence which mortar acquires is owing partly to the absorption of carbonic acid, but principally to the combination of part of the water with the lime. This last circumstance explains the reason why, if to common mortar one fourth part of lime, reduced to powder without being slacked, is added, the mortar, when dry, acquires much greater solidity than it otherwise would. This was first proposed by Loriot; and a number of experiments were afterwards made by Morveau. The proportion which that philosopher found to answer best, are the following:

Fine sand,	0,3
Cement of well baked bricks,	0,3
Slack lime,	0,2
Unslacked lime,	0,2
	1,0

The same advantages may be attained by using as little water as possible in slacking the lime.

Higgins found that the addition of burnt bones improved mortar by giving it tenacity, and rendering it less apt to crack in drying; but they ought never to exceed one fourth part of the lime employed.

When a little manganese is added to mortar, it acquires the important property of hardening under water; so that it may be employed in constructing those edifices which are constantly exposed to the action of water. Lime stone is often combined with manganese; in that case it becomes brown by calcination.—Philadelphia Union.

A Coachmaker's experiments.—The inventor of some improvements in coaches in England—has found an advantage in hanging the carriage, and placing the baggage, low, and mentions the following experiments:

"The patentee suspended 24 lbs. to a line, which, passing over a pulley, moved a stage coach which weighed 12 cwt. Seven half hundred weights were then placed on the roof, when it required 25 lb. more to move it. The seven half hundred weights were then placed down in the boot, when it required only 14 lb; thereby proving, that to place the weight nearer on the level with the line of draft is a saving labour to the horses of 11 lb. in every 25 of draft.—If a person was to fix a pound weight at the top of a ten foot rod, and run with it at the rate of seven miles an the hour, this would show how much more labour it required than if brought down on a level with the hands."

WILMINGTON, (Delaware) May 19.

By the brig American, Capt. Everell, arrived at New York, the Editor of the Watchman has received a letter from a friend in Monte Video, dated the 6th March, which is later than any date, thence, which we have noticed in the papers. It contains nothing very material in addition to what is now circulating in the papers. Some extracts, however, not unworthy of notice, are subjoined. The writer is in favor of Artegas, and opposed to the present administration of Buenos Ayres; and expresses his opinions very freely. With these we have nothing to do at present, but shall select the matter of fact part; on which the character of the writer justifies an entire reliance.

"The country (adjoining) is in a most deplorable condition, owing to the invasion of the Portuguese, and the want of a more enlightened policy on the part of Artegas; who, no doubt, is doing what he conceives to be the best for the country—still, the policy he is now pursuing must, in a short time, deprive him of all resources whatever. You well know the export of this country consists of jerked beef, hides and tallow. He has prohibited the curing of the former, allows no cattle to be killed but for the consumption of the inhabitants; what hides are in the country are brought to market with so much difficulty, and saddled with so much expense, that the owner gets but little (profit) for them, and for a long time! but few have come in. In fact, the distress of the country, if we may credit those who pass into the interior, is beyond description. His troops are without clothes or money; their only food is beef, generally without salt, and always without bread or other vegetables; he is in want of fire arms, more in want of powder, and, what I should suppose still worse, the population no doubt decreases.

"After all, the Portuguese make no impression on him; on the contrary, he is making head against them, and closely watching an army on the river Uruguay,* which he is fast reducing by skirmishing and protecting deserters, whom he allows to return with their arms, &c. to their own country, about Rio Grand. I have no doubt this will turn out a Burgoyne expedition; the Portuguese can never take this country from him, if the people are true to themselves."

The writer gives the following statement as the substance of late reports of rumors from Buenos Ayres:

"The people of Santiago are now up in arms against them, (the Buenos Ayreans,) joined by a large party from the interior, and have nearly or quite by this time, cut off all communication between Buenos Ayres and the country.

"I have seen some late letters from Buenos Ayres, which are on business—still they hint at something—and can see that all is not right there, and I think a change must be looked for in a short time. If a revolution should take place there, no doubt the city will be on union with Artegas; when the Portaguese will have to make their exit."

With due deference to the source of the above extracts, we have doubts whether Artegas, in separating his cause from that of Buenos Ayres, has been actuated merely by hostility to the persons administering that government. If we have not been very grossly misinformed, as to the character of that singular man, he is too tenacious of independent command to come willingly under the government of Buenos Ayres, whoever may administer it.—Wilkesman.

Extraordinary Cure.—A wealthy Swiss farmer, much affected with hypochondria, came to Langenau to consult the celebrated Michael Schuppach, better known by the appellation of the "Mountain Doctor." "I have seven devils in my belly," said he, "no fewer than seven." "There are more than seven," replied the doctor, with the utmost gravity, "if you count right you will find eight." After questioning the patient concerning his case, he promised to cure him in eight days, during which time he would every morning rid him of one of his troublesome inmates, at the rate of one louis d'or each. "But" added he, "as the last will be much more obstinate and difficult to expel than the others, I shall expect two louis d'or for him. The farmer agreed to these terms; the bargain was struck, and the doctor, imposing upon all present the necessity of secrecy, promised to give the nine louis d'or to the poor of the parish. Next morning the imaginary demoniac was brought to him and placed near a kind of machine which he had never seen before, by means of which he received an electric shock. The farmer roared out lustily "There goes one," said the doctor, with the utmost gravity. Next day the same operation was repeated; the farmer bellowed as before, and the doctor coolly remarked, "another is off!" In this manner he proceeded to the seventh.—When he was preparing to attack the last, Schuppach reminded his patient that he now had need of all his courage, for this was the captain of the gang, who would make a more obstinate resistance than any of the others. The shock was at this time so strong as to extend the demoniac on the floor. "Now they are all gone," said the doctor, and ordered the farmer to be put to bed. On recovering himself, the latter declared he was completely cured; he paid the nine louis d'or, with abundance of thanks, and returned in the best spirits to his village.

Credible witnesses attest this extraordinary cure, which proves the acuteness of the doctor, as well as the truth of Solomon's proverb, that with the fool we must sometimes talk like a fool.

FROM LOWER CANADA.

MONTREAL, 12th June.

On Saturday last at four o'clock in the afternoon the mercury in the thermometer was as high as 90 in the shade. On Sunday at the same hour it was at the same height, and at two P. M. at 106 in the sun. Increased by a southerly wind the heat was truly oppressive, but the former having shifted on Sunday evening, and since not returned to South, the latter is much moderated. The thermometer from which we have taken the above degrees is at a house near the windmills, and therefore gives much better information than those of this city, which are affected by the heat imbibed by the stone buildings, and parchment.

SUICIDE.

James Gordon, a private in the detachment of Royal Artillery stationed in this city was, about three weeks ago, admitted into hospital in consequence of febrile symptoms occasioned (as we have been informed) by an excess in liquor. Some time after, profiting by his attendant's absence from the ward in which he had been put, he descended softly to the kitchen—entered it unperceived, and grasping a fork stabbed himself several times in the stomach. Finding, however, the instrument too blunt, he seized a knife, and had inflicted on his throat a severe gash, when the cook turning round and seeing the attempt, sprung upon him, and wrested the weapon from his hand before he had completed his design. The wound not being mortal the usual assistance was given, and having recovered he was to have been discharged from the hospital on Saturday last; but on Friday he was found in the rear building with his throat cut in the most frightful manner. While the attendants were conducting him from the place through the yard, he fell down & was left there extended on the ground, it being supposed that his death must be instantaneous. Notwithstanding this, to the astonishment of every one, he soon after staggered all bloody into the ward where during his illness he had been.—The carotid artery having escaped incision, he had arisen from the spot where he had lain and crawling up stairs endeavoured to reach his bed.

Though the wound was of such a nature as to leave little hopes of his recovery, every thing that medical skill could effect was done, and a straight waistcoat put on him to prevent future attempts of the same kind. Determined, however, to effect his purpose, he again eluded the vigilance of his attendants—gained a gallery which projects from the upper story of the building—and precipitating himself to the ground was killed on the spot.

FIRE.

On last Monday night a fire broke out in, and we regret to state entirely consumed the house of the Honorable Judge Foucher situated on the declivity of the mountain. The following particulars may be depended upon; as being derived from a source every way deserving of credit.

At about 9 o'clock the Judge feeling very much indisposed retired to bed. The irritation produced by his complaint rendered him restless, he sent one of the family to an upper story for an additional pillow. In about a quarter of an hour after, Mr. Heney (the Judge's son-in-law) noticing a smell of fire hastened upstairs, and opening the door of the chamber from whence the pillow had been taken was almost suffocated by a volume of smoke which issued from the apartment. Immediately closing it, he descended and alarmed the family who, aware (from the distance of aid and the inadequacy of their means) of the impending destruction which had already made so rapid a progress, zealously applied themselves to save the moveables. In this however, they but partially succeeded, for in a short time every thing was involved in a general conflagration, and before eleven o'clock the house was reduced to ashes. It was, indeed, insured for £1200 at the Phœnix Office, but the jewels, plate, bank notes, &c. lost amount to a far greater sum. It is supposed that the (cotton) curtains of the bed from whence the pillow was taken caught fire from the candle held by the person sent for it; and this appears probable, as the curtains were let down in expectation of the arrival of a relative who was to sleep at the house that night.

We feel peculiar pleasure in announcing the appointment of Mr. Adams to the surveyor, and Mr. Price to be the engineer of the Chambly Canal. Without setting too great a value on our opinion, we confidently assert that two more eligible persons could not have been procured on the continent of America, both being men of natural ability improved by extensive experience. This choice reflects as much credit on the chooser as the chosen, and besides its advantages to be executed, will have the good effect of inducing persons of capacity to remain with us, and thus in a very important branch of domestic arrangement render our Province independent of exterior aid.

YORK, 24 JUNE, 1819.

UPPER CANADA AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At the first annual Cattle Show of the Upper Canada Agricultural Society, held at York on Thursday the 17th day of June 1819, the following premiums for Live Stock were awarded:

FOR BULLS:

No. 1. A premium of Thirty Dollars to Joshua Wixen of Pickering in the Home District, for his Bull named Buck.

No. 2. A premium of Twenty Dollars to the same, for his Bull named Bright.

Both the above Bulls were four years old, had been fed on pasture and common food only, and had been worked during the whole of the spring.

No. 3. A premium of Ten Dollars to John Knowles, of Scarborough in the Home District, for his Bull named Brindle, age and feed as above, but not worked.

The third premium was adjudged to this animal in preference to a larger Bull, belonging to Seth Howard of Etobicoke, from the superior symetry of shape and smallness of bone of the former.

FOR COWS:

Only one Cow being produced, it was decided that as there was no competition, no premium should be awarded, but as a remuneration to the owner, and to encourage competition in future, a gift of Ten Dollars was ordered to be paid to John Deary, of York, to whom the Cow belonged.

FOR RAMS:

No. 1. A premium of Fifteen Dollars for a Ram owned by John Small, Esq. of York.

No. 2. A premium of Ten Dollars for a Ram owned by George Dennison, of York.

No. 3. A premium of Five Dollars for a Ram owned by William Smith, of York.

As it is known that there are several much finer Cows in this Town than the one produced, it excited some surprize that no others were entered, and was accounted for, by the people of the town and country, each supposing that the other would bring forward a large number of these animals.

The exhibition was honored with the presence of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, Patron of the Society, and most of the Members of both Houses of Parliament, besides a large number of the inhabitants of the Town, and farmers from the country; and considered as a first effort, appeared to give much satisfaction. It was very gratifying to observe that the farmers present appeared to be deeply impressed with the importance and general utility of the association, and expressed their determination to exhibit some fine cattle at the next Show; indeed an impulse is already given, that directed by the fostering care of the Society, and aided by the patronage of the country, cannot fail to produce the most beneficial effects.

(By Order) R. C. HORNE.

At the General Annual Meeting of the Upper Canada Agricultural Society, held at the District School House, York, the 19th of June, for the purpose of appointing officers for the ensuing year, and for such other business as might be brought before it, it was unanimously

Resolved,

1.—That the officers of the Society of the past year be requested to continue in their respective offices during the present year.

2.—Resolved That no person shall at any future Shew of Cattle, compete for the prizes offered by this Society, unless a notification of the animal to be exhibited, be communicated to the Secretary, at least three weeks previous to the day of exhibition, and that in the property of the person proposing the same, and shall also pay to the Secretary, for the use of the Society, Five Shillings, unless the person so entering it be a member of the Society.

3.—Resolved that the successful candidate for any prize, shall be considered a Member of the Society for the ensuing year; and for the highest prize in each class, a Director for the same period; the amount of his admission to be deducted from the premium.

4.—Resolved that the first Resolution passed on the 16th day of Feb. 1819, be amended by substituting the words "Five Shillings" instead of "Ten Shillings" as the annual subscription for a Member of the Society.

5.—Resolved that those Members who do not attend at any future meeting, when duly notified, shall forfeit and pay the sum of Two Shillings and Six pence to the uses of the Society.

We insert the following letter and Location Ticket for the information of such individuals as they may concern, and at the same time to shew some part of the exertions now making to promote the prosperity of the country.]

Copy of a letter to D. M'Gregor Rogers, Esq. Chairman of the Land Board, Newcastle District.

Lieutenant Governor's Office, April 26th, 1819.

SIR,

I AM directed by His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, to reply to your letter of the 15th inst. in explanation of those particular points on which you in the name of the Land Board of the Newcastle District, solicit more precise information than that contained in the instructions transmitted to you by the Clerk of the Executive Council.

In the first place—With regard to such other persons besides Emigrants, as the Board may be authorized to grant Locations to, I am to explain to you, that by such "other persons," are to be understood such able settlers as resided in the District before the War, and produce their certificates of having done their duty in its defence.

Secondly—With regard to Military claimants. No Military claimant, as such, is referred to the Board;—being to receive their Lands gratuitously in the Military Settlement, any dispensation of that sort must be approved on application to the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

Thirdly—The Sons and Daughters of U. E. Loyalists being entitled to gratuitous Grants of 200 Acres, must apply to the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

Fourthly—Persons arriving from the United States, and bringing due certificates of their being British born Subjects, are admissible by the Board.

Fifthly—A form of Ticket of Location, will be transmitted to the Chairman of the Board, in which will be specified the conditions of settlement.

Sixthly—His Excellency is of opinion that the presence of the Chairman is not necessary at every meeting of the Board: any three of the Members constitute a Board, and may proceed to act accordingly.

Seventhly.—The Settler should be thoroughly instructed that in the event of his finding any improvement on the Lot to which he may be located, he is immediately to return with his Ticket of Location to the Board, and report the circumstance for the information of the Government. Should he fail in this particular, he can expect no confirmation of the Grant to him. In this case the Board will appoint him another Location.

Eighthly.—With regard to the difficulty that may be experienced by the Settler in finding his particular Lot. His Excellency bids me observe, that in order to remunerate the person who might be employed to point it out to him, the Settler must be burthened with another Fee; and as in the case of persons let to by the Surveyor General's office, no such precaution is practised, His Excellency does not perceive the necessity of the regulation.

I am, &c.
(Signed) G. HILLIER.

LAND BOARD, District.

B. born at [place,] in [Country,] of the age of years, having arrived in this Province [date,] and petitioned to become a Settler therein, has been examined by us, and we being satisfied with his character, and of the propriety of admitting him to become a Settler, and having administered to him the Oath of Allegiance, do assign to him One Hundred Acres of Land, being the half of Lot No. in the Concession of [Township,] in [District,] for which, upon due proof of having cleared and cropped Five Acres, and cleared half the Road in front or his Land, if having erected and inhabited a House thereon for One Year, he will be entitled to receive a Grant to him and his heirs, he paying the Patent Fee of £5-16-1 Sterling.

N. B. If the Settlement Duty is not performed within Two Years, the Location to be of no value, but assigned to another Settler.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Worthy of Notice.—At a saw mill one mile east of Chadd's ford across the Brandywine, and about the middle of last March, as a man was sawing a large poplar log, he was surprised at hearing the saw strike against something very unusual, that obliged him to stop the mill; upon examination it proved to be a cannon ball of four pounds weight, completely grown over so as to leave no mark. It appears evident from every circumstance, that this ball was discharged from the American battery on the day of the battle of Brandywine, Sept. 11, 1777, as the tree in which it was found grew just back of the ground where the British soldiers were encamped. From that time to the present is more than 41 years that it has lain perfectly harmless, though we cannot say what damage it may have done in its passage from the gun to the tree.

A Greek merchant, who resided at Algiers, was left executor to a friend, who among other pious legacies, bequeathed him a certain sum for charitable uses.—One day, the merchant passing by a Moor, who was sitting in the street, lame, and almost blind, asked charity of him.—The merchant dropt him his handful of aspers, which sight so transported the beggar, that he followed the merchant upon his crutches, calling out upon Heaven to shower down its blessings upon him. Nor did he leave following his benefactor till he discovered his house and afterwards took his post in a place where the merchant must daily pass by him. Next day the Moor begged his charity, and the Greek repeated it, which gained him great reputation, and a crowd of customers. At length the merchant had occasion to go to Egypt. The Beggar still kept his post, but missing his benefactor, had the mortification to hear that he was out of the kingdom. In about six months he returned. The Beggar was much overjoyed to see him again; but when the merchant was going to bestow his charity, declined it, saying it was better to pay him his arrears at once. The Greek told him he did not know what he meant by arrears; to which the other replied, that he had been absent near six months, and consequently that there was about 80 rials, due. The Greek did not know whether the fellow's impudence deserved most to be laughed or chastised but the Moor laid his complaint before the Dey, and the Greek merchant was sent for to make his defence. The Moor alleged, that the merchant had, for the continuance of a month, daily given him a rial, that upon such a daily income he was glad to leave off working; that the merchant went away without giving him the least notice that his pension was to cease; that he had still kept his post praying to God for his return; besides that, relying on his accustomed liberality he had contracted some debts for his support, but, upon demanding his arrears the merchant had laughed at him, and threatened him. After a debate by the Dey in Council, the merchant was condemned to pay the arrears, but released from any promise to relieve him in future!

Execution at Vienna.—Crimes, as well as punishments, are rare, owing to the vigilance and severity of the police. A murder is scarce ever committed, and robberies are by no means common. At almost every hour of the day or night, a stranger may walk the streets or travel the public roads in safety. Of course, executions happen very seldom; but when they take place, they are conducted with admired propriety and effect.—I had the curiosity, for the first time in my life, to be present at an execution, only a few days ago; which, from the circumstances that attended it, well merits a particular description. Many thousand spectators of all conditions assembled to witness it; and I never saw any public ceremony performed with so much solemnity and awful decorum. Four men convicted of robbery, aggravated by circumstances of cruelty and inhumanity, were sentenced to die; not by the halter, as with us, but by the sword of the executioner. They suffered on the Esplanade, without one of gates, upon a circular place or piece of ground walled in, raised twelve or fourteen feet above the level of the Esplanade. In order to have a better view of it, I got into a cart placed near the scaffold, where I could distinguish even the countenance and features of the criminals.

The first of the four malefactors having been seated in a chair screwed down into the ground, his arms and body were next tied with cords, in order to prevent him from moving, and his neck was laid quite bare to the shoulders. A bandage being drawn across his eyes, four Augustine monks with a crucifix approached, and after prayer confessed him. The executioner's assistant then collecting his hair, pulled up his head with a view to afford a fairer mark. Meanwhile the executioner, who was a very decent man in his figure and dress, arrived in a hackney coach. When all the requisite preparations were made, he threw off his coat, and being in his white waistcoat, he unsheathed the instrument of punishment. It was a stout two-edged sword, of an equal breadth quite to the point, prodigiously heavy, broad, and sharp as a razor. Coming in flank of the criminal, who was blindfolded, and ignorant of the moment, he took off the head at one stroke, with a dexterity and celerity exceeding imagination. The assistant held it up streaming with blood, and then laid it down on the ground; while the decapitated trunk was allowed to remain for some seconds in the chair, the blood spouting up at first to the heighth of three or four feet in the air. Two men next untied the corpse, and taking it by the legs and shoulders, bore it to a little distance. The head was carried with it, and the whole covered with a large mat.

Previous to beheading the second culprit, the chair was wiped clean from the blood with which it had been stained; the ropes were washed, and sand scattered over the place; so that when he was brought up to suffer, no trace of the preceding execution was visible. About half an hour elapsed between their respective deaths; the last three being beheaded with the same dexterity as the first, and the velocity with which the sword passed through the neck, and dissevered the head, was such, that the blade scarcely appeared bloody.

After inflicting each stroke, the executioner took out a white handkerchief, and wiped away the globules of blood which stood upon the sword; then sheathed, and laid it down at some paces from the chair, concealed by a cloke. The whole ceremony being ended, he advanced forward, and holding up the instrument of justice immediately after he had taken off the head of the last criminal, he addressed himself to the assembled multitude, demanding whether he had well performed his duty. They signified their approbation, and he then withdrew; while the people, before they dispersed, joined the monks in prayer for the souls of the departed. The four trunks and heads were exposed during some hours on wheels, to the view of every one, and afterwards interred.

To Farmers.—This is emphatically the time to destroy caterpillers in your orchards. On large trees blow them off with a gun charged with powder, or poke off their nests with a swab placed on the end of a stick, dipped in lime water. On young trees, place a clod of earth in the crotch, grass downwards, and they will soon leave the tree.—Albany Argus.
