LONDON, Oct. 5.

Extract of a letter from J. H. Hutchinson, Esq. to the Earl of Elgin, dated before Alexandria, Aug. 21.

"I Just have the opportunity of a meſſenger going to Conſtantinople, diſpatched by the Capt. Pacha, to inform your Excellency that Gen. Menou offered laſt night to capitulate for the town and fortreſs of Alexandria, and demanded an armiſtice of three days, for the purpoſe of arranging the terms of the capitulation, this I have granted accordingly."

October 10,

This morning we received by expreſs journals of the 9th, and we have the pleaſure on ſtating, that in the flag of truce by which they were brought over, citizen Lauriſton, aid de camp to Buonaparte, came paſſenger with the ratification of the preliminaries. He landed at Dover, at nine o'clock laſt night, and ſoon after proceeded to town, where he arrived this morning. The ratification was communicated to Lord Hawkeſbury, and was announced to the following

London Gazette Extraordinary.

Downing-ſtreet, October 10.

THE RATIFICATIONS OF THE PRELIMINARY ARTICLES of PEACE between his Majeſty and the French Republic, ſigned on the firſt inſtant, were this day exchanged by the Right Honorable Lord Hawkeſbury, one of his Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State, and by M. Otto.

The Park and Tower guns were fired upon this occaſion, and the general exultation was unbounded.

Oct. 11.

About three o'clock, the following letter from Lord Hawkeſbury, was poſted up at the Manſion Houſe, Bank, Lloyd's, and Stock Exchange.

Downing ſtreet, Oct. 10.

My Lord,

I have the ſatisfaction to inform your Lordſhip that Gen. Lauriſton arrived in town this morning, with the ratification of the Preliminaries of Peace ſigned on the 1ſt inſt. The ratification of the two governments has this afternoon been exchanged between M. Otto and myſelf. HAWKESBURY.

Preliminaries of Peace between the French Republic and his Britannic Majeſty, ſigned at London, 9th Vendemiaire, 10th year of the French Republic, (1ſt October,) 1801.

The Firſt Conſul of the French Republic, in the name of the French People, and his Majeſty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, being animated with an equal deſire of putting a ſtop to the calamities of a deſtructive war, and to re-eſtabliſh harmony and good underſtanding between the two nations, have therefore appointed viz. the Firſt Conſul of the French Republic, in the name of the French people, citizen Louis William Otto, commiſſary for the exchange of French priſoners in England; and his Britannic Majeſty, Robert Banks Jenkinſon, Eſq. commonly called Lord Hawkeſbury, one of the Members of his Britannic Majeſty's Privy Council, and Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs—who, after duly exchanging their full powers, in proper form, have agreed upon the following preliminary articles:

Article I. As ſoon as the preliminaries ſhall have been ſigned and ratified, ſincere friendſhip ſhall be re-eſtabliſhed between the French Republic and his Britannic Majeſty, by ſea and land in every part of the world; and that hoſtilities may immediately ceaſe between the two powers, and between them and their allies reſpectively, orders ſhall be tranſmitted accordingly to the ſea and land forces, with the utmoſt diſpatch, each of the contracting parties engaging for the neceſſary paſſports and facilities to accelerate the arrival of the ſaid orders and to enſure their execution. It is further agreed upon, that all conqueſts which may be made on the part of one or the other of the contracting parties from either of them or their allies, after the ratification of the preſent preliminaries, ſhall be regarded as void, and ſhall be faithfully included in the reſtitutions which are to take place after the ratification of the definitive treaty.

II. His Britannic Majeſty ſhall reſtore to the French Republic, all the poſſeſſions or colonies occupied or conquered by the Engliſh forces, in the courſe of the preſent war, with the exception of the iſland of Trinidad, and the Dutch poſſeſſions in the iſland of Ceylon, of which iſlands and poſſeſſions his Britannic Majeſty reſerves to himſelf the compleat and entire ſovereignty.

III. The port of the Cape of Good Hope ſhall be open to the commerce & navigation of the two contracting parties, who ſhall therein enjoy the ſame advantages.

IV. The iſland of Malta with its dependancies, ſhall be evacuated by the Engliſh troops, and reſtored to the order of St. John of Jeruſalem. To ſecure the abſolute independence of the iſland upon the one or the other of the contracting parties, it ſhall be placed under the guarantee and protection of a third power, to be determined by the definitive treaty.

V. Egypt ſhall be reſtored to the Sublime Porte, the territory and poſſeſſion of which ſhall be maintained entire as they were before the preſent war.

VI. The territories and poſſeſſions of her Faithful Majeſty ſhall alſo be maintained entire.

VII. The French troops ſhall evacuate the kingdom of Naples, and the Roman State. The Engliſh forces ſhall likewiſe evacuate Porto Ferrajo, and generally and all the ports and iſlands which they occupy in the Mediterranean or Adriatic ſeas.

VIII. The Republic of the Seven United Provinces ſhall be recognized by the French Republic.

IX. The evacuations, ceſſions, and reſtitutions, ſtipulated by the preſent preliminary articles, ſhall be carried into execution in Europe, within one month; and the continents and ſeas of Africa and America, in three months; and on the continent and ſeas of Aſia in ſix months, after the ratification of the definitive treaty.

X. The reſpective priſoners ſhall immediately after the exchange of the definitive treaty, be reſtored in a body, and without ranſom, on the reciprocal payment of the private debts which they may have contracted.

Difference having ariſen reſpecting the payment of the ſubſiſtence of the priſoners of war, the contracting powers reſerve the right of deciding this queſtion by the definitive treaty, according to the law of nations, and the principles ſanctioned by common uſage.

XI. In order to prevent all ſubjects of complaint & litigation which might ariſe on account of prizes made at ſea, after the ſigning of the preliminary articles, it is reciprocally agreed that the veſſels and effects which may be taken in the channel and in the ſeas of the north, after the ſpace of twelve days, to date from the exchange of the ratification of the preſent preliminary articles, ſhall be reſtored on each part into the terms ſhall be one month from the channel and ſeas of the north, as far as the Canary Iſlands incluſively, whether in the ocean or in the Mediterranean; of two months from the ſaid Canary Iſlands as far as the equator—and finally of five months in all other parts of the world, without exception or any other diſtinction more particular with reſpect to time and place.

XII. All ſequeſtrations laid on by the one part or the other on the moveable property and debts, of whatever kind they may be, belonging to one of the contracting powers, or to its citizens or ſubjects, ſhall be taken off immediately after the ſigning of the definitive treaty.

The deciſion of all claims between the individuals of both nations reſpectively, all debts, property, effects or rights whatſoever, which ſhall conformably to the acknowledged uſages and rights of nations, ſhould be found coming at the epocha of peace, ſhall be referred to the competent tribunals, and in ſuch caſes prompt and complete juſtice ſhall be done, where ſuch claims ſhall be reſpectively made—It is agreed that the preſent article ſhall, immediately after the ratification of definitive treaty, be applied by the contractive allies and individuals of their nations, under the conditions of juſt reciprocity.

XIII. With reſpect to the fiſheries on the coaſt of Newfoundland, and the adjacent iſlands, in the Gulph of St. Lawrence, the two powers are agreed to replace them on the ſame footing upon which they were before the preſent war, reſerving to themſelves the right of making by the definitive treaty, ſuch arrangements as may appear juſt and reciprocally uſeful in order to place the fiſheries of both nations in the moſt proper ſtate for the maintenance of peace.

XIV. In caſes of reſtitution agreed on by the preſent treaty, the fortifications in the ſtate in which they are at the moment of the ſigning of the preſent treaty, and all the fortifications conſtructed ſince the occupation of them ſhall remain entire.

It is further agreed, that in all the caſes of conceſſions, ſtipulated in the preſent treaty, a term of three years, to date from the ratification of the treaty of definitive peace, ſhall be allowed to the inhabitants, of whatever deſcription or rank they may be, to diſpoſe of their property acquired or poſſeſſed, whether previous to or during the preſent war—during which term of three years they ſhall be at full liberty to exerciſe their religion, and to enjoy their property.

The ſame privileges are granted in the reſtored countries, to all thoſe who have made eſtabliſhments in them, of whatever kind they may be, during the time that theſe countries were in poſſeſſion of Great Britain.

With reſpect to the other inhabitants of the reſtored countries, it is agreed, that none of them ſhall be proſecuted, diſturbed or moleſted in their perſons or their properties, on any pretence whatever, on account of their conduct or political opinions, or their attachment to either of the two powers, or for any other reaſon, unleſs for acts contracted with reſpect to individuals, or for acts ſubſequent to the definitive treaty.

XV. The preſent preliminary articles ſhall be ratified, and the ratification exchanged at London, in the ſpace of 25 days of fartheſt; and immediately after the ratification, plenipotentiaries ſhall be appointed on both ſides, who ſhall repair to Amiens, in order to proceed to the arrangement of the definitive treaty in concert with the allies of the contracting powers.

In witneſs whereof, we the undernigned plenipotentiaries of the firſt conſul of the French Republic and his Britannic Majeſty, by virtue of our reſpective full powers, have ſigned the preliminary articles, and have thereto affixed our ſeals.

Done at London, on the 9th Vendemaire, 10th year of the French Republic, the 1ſt day of October 1801.

OTTO.
HAWKESBURY.

The London paper remarks that in the original, England had the pre-eminence in the preamble and ſigning.

The marquis Cornwallis is appointed His Majeſty's Plenipotentiary to negociate and ſign the definitive treaty.

The news of Peace produced the moſt lively joy throughout the country. On the mail Coaches were written in capitals—PEACE WITH FRANCE—Some policies were done reſpecting the definitive treaty. Twenty guineas were taken to return 100 if the definitive peace was ſigned before the 1ſt January. Other policies were done that the 3 per cents ſhall not be 80 on or before the 1ſt December.

POETRY.

HYMN FOR NEW-YEAR'S DAY.

AND now, my ſoul, another year
Of thy ſhort life is paſt;
I cannot long continue here,
And this may be my laſt.

Much of my dubious life is gone,
Nor will return again;
And ſwift my paſſing moments run,
The few that yet remain.

Awake, my ſoul, with utmoſt care
Thy true condition learn;
What are thy hopes, how ſure, how fair;
And what thy great concern?

Now a new ſcene of time begins,
Set out a freſh for Heaven;
Seek pardon for thy former ſins,
In Chriſt ſo freely given.

Devoutly yield thyſelf to God,
And on his grace depend;
With zeal purſue the heavenly road,
Nor doubt a happy end.

LODGINGS for SINGLE GENTLEMEN.

[From Colman's Night Gown and Slippers.]

WHO has e'er been in London, that over grown place,
Has ſeen "Lodgings to let" ſtare him full in the face,
Some are good, and let dearly; while ſome, 'tis well known,
Are ſo dear, and ſo bad, they are beſt let alone. Derry down.

Will Waddle, whoſe temper was ſtudious and lonely,
Hired lodgings that took ſingle Gentlemen, only;
But Will was ſo fat he appeared like a ton,
Or like two ſingle Gentlemen roll'd into one.

He enter'd his rooms, and to bed he retreated,
But all the night long, he felt fever'd & heated.
And tho' heavy to weigh, as a ſcore of fat ſheep,
He was not, by any means, heavy to ſleep.

Next night 'twas the ſame—and the next;—and the next;
He perſpired like an ox; he was nervous and vex'd;
Week paſs'd after week; 'till by weekly ſucceſſion,
His weekly condition was paſt all expreſſion.

In ſix months his acquaintance began much to doubt him,
For his ſkin "like a lady's looſe gown" hung about him;
He ſent for a Doctor, and cry'd, like a ninny
"I loſt many pounds—make me well—there's a guinea."

The Doctor look'd wiſe:—"a flow fever," he ſaid:
Preſcribed ſudorifics,—and going to bed.
Sudorifics in bed? exclaim'd Will, "are humbugs;"
"I've enough of them there, without paying for drugs."

Will kick'd out the Doctor:—but when ill indeed
E'en diſmiſſing the Doctor don't always ſucceed;
So, calling his hoſt,—he ſaid—Sir, do you know,
"I'm the fat ſingle Gentleman, ſix months ago?"

"Look'e, Landlord, I think" argued Will, with a grin,
"That with honeſt intentions you firſt took me in."
"But from the firſt night,—and to ſay it I'm bold"—
"I've been to damn'd hot, I'm ſure I caught cold."

Quoth the landlord—"'till now, I ne'er had a diſpute;
"I've let lodgings ten years; I'm a Baker to boot;
"In airing your ſheets, Sir, my wife is no ſlouven,
"And your bed is immediately—over my oven."

"The Oven!!! ſays Will—ſays the hoſt, "why this paſſion?"
"In that excellent bed died three people of faſhion.
"Why ſo cruſty, good Sir?" "Zounds!"—cries Will in a taking,
"Who wouldn't be cruſty with half a year's baking?"

Will paid for his rooms; cried the hoſt with a ſneer,
"Well, I ſee you've been going away half a year;"
"Friend we can't well agree"—"yet no quarrel"—Will ſaid;
"For one man may die where another makes bread."

TO prevent disappointment and trouble, the Public is requested to take notice, that some time ago Mr. WILLCOCKS resigned his office of Post Master for York, his reasonable charges for the rent of an office, stationary, fire, candles, and a servant to attend, being disputed, although by his assiduity and attention, the revenue was productive beyond expectation, as appears by the accounts he rendered, and the money he remitted to the Post Master General at Quebec. Dec. 16, 1801.

WHEREAS Barbara Cameron, wife of Archibald Cameron of the town of York, Upper Canada, has without any just cause or provocation whatever, eloped from his bed and board, behaved in an unbecoming manner, and after absenting herself from the first January 1799 (altho' solicited to return, without effect, which he can prove) has again returned to this town; he is therefore at last under the disagreeable but absolute necessity of thus giving public notice, that the said Barbara Cameron may not be credited or harboured on his account, as he is determined to pay no debts of her contracting.

ON THE PRESENT GENIUS.

LEARNING is now more extensively diffused among the inhabitants of Europe, than at any former period; but such extension has by no means been productive of any proportional improvement in Science; a remark and an assertion which, however unpleasing and paradoxical, will yet be found deducible in theory, and true in fact.

The art of printing, and the tranquility which the nations enjoy from the stability of modern governments, are, no doubt, the principal causes of the more ample extension of learning; but why this extension has not enlarged the bounds of human knowledge, may deserve enquiry. It might naturally be expected, that an universal infusion of learning into the minds of men, would fructify their capacities, and sharpen their desires for improvement; and that Science would consequentially ripen into the highest degree of perfection: but experience evinces, that a more general examination from gross error and imposition, is no bar to confidence, and that real improvement in refined knowledge can only flow from the fountain of Genius. It is not from the man who confines his thoughts to the study of others, that such elevated improvement is to be expected. Such a man's study may indeed redound much to his own advantage; but the public stock of knowledge cannot obtain any acquisition from him. It is from him only, who, boldly casting away literary prejudices and popular opinions, and investigates truth, however profoundly enveloped, and to evolve it from labyrinths the most obscure and unexplored. If it can be shewn that the dispensations of fettering obstruct such investigation, and discourage the present race of men from emulating or rivaling their ancestors in original excellence, the prevention of scientific improvement must be admitted.

When a man makes the elaborate works of enlightened genius the objects of his study a while, unacquainted with the force of his own understanding, admiration entirely engrosses his mind; he is apt to think the attainment of such excellence to himself impossible; an unconquerable habit of pupilage becomes almost inevitable; and the human mind in such a state, frequently exercises its powers in support of sacrilments the most opposite to those which it would naturally have adopted.

On the revival of the arts and sciences, the works of genius were almost invariably moulded from such ancient compositions as had escaped the rage of barbarism; for whatever originality the variation of their subjects might produce, the eminent modes of composition, as far as the difference of language would permit, became the objects of scrupulous imitation. Philosophy was the least influenced by ancient authority; the foundations whereon the numerous systems that had divided antiquity rested, were almost universally overthrown before the cloud of Gothism were dispelled, and mankind left at liberty to think freely for themselves. But the consequence I have mentioned, arises not from ancient learning; few are so conversant in it as to be subject, in their mental operations to its coercion. The influence of modern literature is far different; whatever in it obtains an established reputation, is universally studied and implicitly admired.

To encounter this habitual prepossession, requires some fortitude; and even a man of real genius would have to lay aside his fears and prejudices, ere he would be able to fix his aim to himself sufficient inducements to emulate the works of such acknowledged transcendency; and after all, should his composition not possess the most evident superiority, it will be very little thought of.

Ancient literature is not productive of such severity. It is seldom the measure by which modern writings are judged; and though it has certainly diffused among almost every species of composition, yet its examples, however illustrious, obstruct not the attainment of perfection.

The only countryman Milton might, from the natural force of genius, have arisen to the highest pitch of faultlessness cannot be doubted; but that genius alone, unaided by learning, would have enabled him to plan and execute such a work as Paradise Lost, is not to certain. Should such learning be thought necessary, it must nevertheless be admitted, that Milton soared rapidly to perfection, unconscious of the existence of any superiority in those compositions, the principles of which he is supposed to have imitated.

The habits of thinking, which we imbibe from studying the opinions of others, damp that ardor which a bold enquiry into the nature of things can inspire—we are content to be knowing at second hand—we receive maxims upon truth, and perambulate them for truths, without examination. This together with the affectation of general knowledge, so prevalent at present, must powerfully prevent all substantial improvements in science.

BY THE KING.

A PROCLAMATION.

Declaring the Cessation of Arms, as well by sea as land, agreed upon between His Majesty and the French Republic, and enjoining the observation thereof.

GEORGE R.

Whereas preliminaries for restoring peace between us and the French Republic were signed at London on the first day of this instant, October, by the plenipotentiary of us, and by the plenipotentiary of the French Republic; and whereas, for the putting an end to the calamities of war as soon and as far as may be possible, it hath been agreed between us, and the French Republic as follows: that is to say, that as soon as the preliminaries shall be signed and ratified, friendship should be established between us and the French Republic, by sea and land, in all parts of the world, and that all hostilities should cease immediately; and in order to prevent all causes of complaint and dispute which might arise on account of prizes, which might be made at sea after the signature of the preliminary articles, it has been also reciprocally agreed, That the vessels and effects which might be taken in the British Channel and in the North Seas, after the space of twelve days, to be computed from the exchange of the ratifications of the preliminary articles, should be restored on each side; that the term should be one month from the British Channel and the North Sea, as far as the Canary Islands including, whether in the ocean or in the Mediterranean; two months from the said Canary Islands as far as the Equator; and lastly, five months in all other parts of the world, without any exception, or any more particular description of time or place; and whereas the ratification of the said preliminary articles between us and the French Republic, were exchanged by the respective plenipotentiaries of us and the French Republic, on the 10th day of this present October, from which day the several terms above mentioned of twelve days, of one month of two months, and of five months, are to be computed; And whereas it is our Royal Will and Pleasure that the cessation of hostilities be strictly observed by us and the French Republic should be applicable to the several epochs fixed between us and the French Republic, we have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Privy Council, to notify the same to all our loving subjects; and we declare that our Royal Will and pleasure is, and we do hereby strictly charge and command, all and every our officers both at sea and land, and all other our subjects whatsoever, to forbear all acts of hostility, either by sea or land, against the French Republic, and their allies, their vessels or subjects, from and after the respective times above mentioned, and under the penalty of incurring our highest displeasure.

Given at our Court at Windsor, the 18th day of this instant, October, in the forty-first year of our reign, and in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and nine.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

At a Court at Windsor, the 22nd Oct. 1801.

Present,

The King's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.

His Majesty in Council was this day pleased to declare and order, that for the convenience and security of the commerce of his loving subjects, during the cessation of arms notified by his Royal Proclamation of this day's date, passes will be delivered as soon as they can be interchanged, to such of his subjects as shall desire the same, for their ships, goods and merchandizes, and effects, they duly observing the several Acts of Parliament which are or may be in force.

W. FAULKENER.

ENGLAND and FRANCE—Land and Sea.

"The victories of the French arms during the late war, have unquestionably been brilliant; but the triumphs of the British Navy, have surpassed that brilliancy; and have not been exceeded in any war since the time of the English Alfred. During this war, the French, Spanish and Dutch navies have been so crippled as to be obliged to keep almost constantly in port; desolation having awaited them wherever they ventured beyond their land batteries. In that time, the English having captured from the powers opposed to her, or destroyed in action, Eighty one sail of the line—Three fifty gun ships; one hundred and eighty three frigates and two hundred and twenty four sloops of war, mounting in all fourteen thousand six hundred and ninety guns, besides 850 privateers. During this time the British have lost in action but five sail of the line, one fifty, eleven frigates, and 34 sloops of war, mounting one thousand and ten guns—Making a difference in favor of Great Britain of four hundred and thirty five ships, and thirteen thousand two hundred and thirty guns."

To the foregoing article it may be added; that altho' France has obtained on the Continent vast addition of territory and population, yet almost behind in all to make vast addition to her Commercial resources. By retaining Ceylon, she secures the possession of the greater part of the civilized world for Tyrants—she secures also in Trinidad the most important harbour in the Indies—and one, which in the hands of France or of Holland (which is the same thing) would prove dangerous to the English preponderance in the Isle.—Trinidad is in itself a valuable Island, but more valuable in its relation to commerce with the Spanish Main. A circumstance, however, which seems to have been overlooked by most persons who have speculated on the late peace, is the importance of the vast territories which the English have taken from Tippoo Sultan, and which they are allowed to retain—This acquisition to India, in some degree ballances the acquisitions which France has made and is permitted to hold in Europe.

GREAT-BRITAIN.—York, Oct. 29.

The joy expressed by the inhabitants of this city, on the information of the preliminaries of peace being signed by the first Consul of the French Republic, was equal to the general happiness expressed on all sides on the first news of Peace being promulgated—The agreeable intelligence was announced on Sunday evening between 11 and 12 o'clock, to an ale house where anxiously waiting. As soon as the bottles were taken from the coach, the populace drew it thro' all the principal streets, & afterwards to the barracks and Fulford, with loud bursts of joy; the bells in many of the Churches immediately commenced ringing, and continued to most part of the night. The morning of Monday commenced with general congratulations, and every preparation towards a splendid illumination in the evening. At noon, the York Volunteer corps of Cavalry and infantry marched up to Bishopthorpe, where they fired three excellent salutes on the joyous occasion. They afterward drew up before the Mansion house, and complimented the Lord Mayor. At seven o'clock in the evening, agreeable to general notice from the Mansion house, the illumination commenced. It was a spectacle in the highest degree superb and delightful. The whole city was in one blaze, accompanied with cheerfulness and festivity. Night seemed to join in the rapture; hardly a cloud was to be seen. Thousands paraded the streets highly gratified—no molestation of any kind took place. The general wishes of all seemed to be Peace and Good Will.

Thus passed one of the most joyous evenings ever experienced in this city; our accounts from the different towns in the country speak of the gaiety being universal. Scarborough, Whitby, Bridlington, Beverly, Helmsley, Malton, &c. &c. testified their joy by illuminations, bonfires, &c.

Edinburgh, Oct. 24.—On the arrival of the post yesterday morning, with the news of the ratification of the preliminaries of peace, the people took the horses out of the mail coach, and having hoisted the British colours over the French, and mounted a miller on the box, as an emblem of Plenty, they dragged it with repeated shouts, down to the Lord Provost's villa of Comely Bank, and afterwards for several hours, thro' the principal streets of the city, although it rained incessantly the whole time.

At 12 o'clock the brigade of volunteers paraded in the meadows, and attended by their right to Prince's street, where they formed a line facing the castle. The Royal Edinburgh and Midlothian Artillery, with their field pieces being previously drawn up on the Castle hill, facing the north.

At one o'clock the Royal Standard was hoisted on the Castle, and the York Militia manned the whole works, round and round.

The great guns of the Castle then fired a Royal salute. After which, the York Militia fired 3 balls of two, from right to left along the walls. General Wade and his staff appearing on the north-east bastion. Then the field-pieces fired one round on the Castle hill—immediately after which, the line of Volunteers in Prince's street fired a feu de joie from right to left of the whole line.

These firings were repeated three times by the militia, artillery and volunteers. After which, the troops, joined by an immense crowd of spectators, gave three cheers.

When the ceremony was over, the brigade of Volunteers marched from their right to their respective regimental parades.

In the morning a proclamation had been issued by the Lord Provost and magistrates, expressive of their anxiety to give full scope to the general joy of the Inhabitants, in the prospect of the restoration of peace over all the earth, directing, therefore, that a general illumination should take place in the city and suburbs in the evening to begin at seven and end at ten, and strictly enjoining the observance of peace and good order.

At six o'clock in the evening the bells were set a ringing, and at two an hour before the time, it seemed to be adopted by common consent as the signal for the commencement of the illumination, for in an instant the city was in one entire blaze of splendor & beauty. A number of transparencies, which had been for some time in preparation, were exhibited with appropriate emblems, inscriptions, &c. The weekly picquet guard of the 1st regiment of Royal Edinburgh Volunteers was paraded in front of the Merchants Hall, Hunter's Square, with the band of Public of the four Volunteer regiments of this city, where, after performing God save the King, Hearts of Oak, Rule Britannia, and Britons strike Home, in a masterly style, they separated, marched in different directions, & paraded the streets throughout the evening, playing the above mentioned tunes, with other loyal and animating strains.

The business of the evening was upon the whole conducted with a degree of regularity beyond what could have been expected; even in the tumultuous expression of popular joy, more attention was thrown to the injunctions of the magistrates than we have been accustomed to observe on occasions of public rejoicings.

The allegorical transparencies painted for the Lord Provost's windows, consisted of three pictures, connected by festoons of variegated lamps. In the middle or largest appeared Britannia, holding a medallion of the King, and accompanied by the Goddess of Peace and Plenty. At her feet a boy, setting fire to the instruments of war. And over her head was displayed the triple Union flag, crowned by Victory. The whole surrounded by a border, containing at top the Crown and Royal arms, at the bottom the trident and caduceus, in the form of the letter V, and on the sides victory of devices, happily denoting philosophy, literature and the elegant arts.

On the one hand was a fallen, on the other a plentiful urn, with their respective emblems of Commerce, navigation, agriculture and social industry.

The other transparencies exhibited on this joyful occasion amidst a variety of illumination in the streets of Peace and Plenty.

To particularize individual houses, would be endless. Many elegant devices were to be seen in every street. For many months the town filled with fresh and Comes with a profusion of wintel heaves, were peculiarly conducive to the last plentiful harvest. Nor were the most tender emotions of the heart neglected; the soldier on his return, and wife and children meeting the honourable veteran, gave a beautiful picture of domestic happiness.

The town of Leith was also very well illuminated, as were most of the villages in the environs of the city, and a number of lamps in different parts of the country.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, Jan. 2, 1802.

By Paris papers to the 30th October, received in London, it appears, that the Treaty of Peace with Portugal at last had published one of the most interesting articles (that which excludes our Ships from Portuguese ports) is at an end by the peace with Spain. All the hostile conditions may be supposed to be annulled by the peace between England and France. A commercial treaty between the two nations, upon the most favourable terms, is to be negociated.

The debt owing to England by France for the keep of her prisoners, amounts to little less than 2,000,000 sterling.—By an arrete of the First Consul, the 5th of Nov. was appointed for the celebration of a solemn festival throughout the whole Republic, on occasion of the signature of the preliminaries of peace between England and France.

A new Revolution has taken place in Holland—the particulars appear have not yet reached. Nothing about the 26th of Oct. had been quoted in the London Papers, except—"the London Gazette of Oct. 24th contains an account of the surrender of Batavia together with the articles of capitulation, which, however, time will not permit us to lay before the public this day."—The American papers contain the Message of the President of the United States, to both Houses of Congress, and a number of other interesting articles which we are at present under the necessity of deferring for the foregoing reasons.

ANECDOTE OF GAINSBOROUGH.

From the Four Ages, &c. by Jackson.

——upon seeing a thumbe in a picture of Vandyke's, he concluded (perhaps because it was finely painted) that a thumbe must be a fine instrument. He recollected to have heard of a German professor——recorded per varias gradus to his garret, where he found him at dinner upon a roasted apple, and smoaking a pipe——"Why, he, 'I am come to buy your lute.'

'To pay my lude!'

'Yes—come, name your price, and have it your money.'

'I cannot sell my lude!'

'No, not for 1 guinea or 100!' but by G—— you must sell it.'

'May lude ish vert much money! it ish vert ten guinea.'

'That it is—see here is the money!'

Well, if I couldn't—but you will not take it away, you shall. Yes, yes—good bye, for I have done but half my errand. What is your life worth if I have not your book? Why, poor Matthew Cuthbertson! Why the book of sins you compared for the last. Ah! ah, ay cot, I can never part with my poug! How can you make another at one time? This is the book I mean, (putting it in his pocket.) Ah! by Cot I cannot—Come, Come, there is another ten guineas for your book; so, once more, good day t'ye. (Descends again, and again comes up.) But what use is your book to me, if I don't understand it? And your sale—you may take it again, if you won't teach me to play on it. Come home with me, and give me my first lesson. I will come to-morrow. You must come now. I must treat myself. For what? Whose the first figure I have cut to-day, Ay must it be—I hoope your beard—Ay mush I put on my wig? Dem your wig, I come cap'ring beard become you! do you think, if Vandyke was to paint you he'd let you be shaved?

POETRY.

THE DRAM SHOP.

There stands the Dram Shop, poetry's fatal curse,
Which every morn a lowering circle nurses;
Egg pop, strong waters, brandy and white rum,
Tempt the unfeeling idlers from their home.
Domestic cares and business, must give way,
Till crowds of "liquid fire" flame the day:
And yet there lots will murmur and repine,
And charge their wretchedness to trade's decline;
Mixed and bewilder'd hear their children mourn,
And not one sigh their callous'd souls return.
A few short years, this tippling course they run,
While rags, disease, and infamy come on.
Till Death, whose patience can no longer bear
To let their vile burlesque of life remain
Puff's the blue gleaming flame of life away,
And rids the world of useless lumps of clay.

SURRENDER OF ALEXANDRIA.

London Gazette Extraordinary.

Downing-Street, Oct. 21, 1801.

A DISPATCH, of which the following is a copy, was this day received (in duplicate) at the office of the Right Hon. Lord Hobart, one of his Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, from Lieut. General Coote, Camp before Alexandria, Sept. 3, 1801.

MY LORD,

I have now the satisfaction to inform your lordship that the forts and works of Alexandria have surrendered to his Majesty's troops, who, on the 2d inst. took possession of the entrenched camp, the heights above Pompey's Pillar, the Redoubt de Bain, and the Fort Triangulaire, by the capitulation the garrison are to be embarked for France in the course of ten days, provided the shipping is in a state of preparation to receive them.

The operations against the enemy's works commenced on the 17th of Aug.

Major General Coote, embarked with a strong corps on the Inundation on the night between the 15th and 16th of Aug. He effected his landing to the westward of Alexandria with little or no opposition, and immediately invested the strong Castle of Marabout, situated at the entrance of the western harbour of Alexandria.

On the east side of the town two attacks were made to get possession of some heights in front of the entrenched position of the enemy. I intrusted the conduct of the attack against their right to Major General Craddock; and that against their left to Major General Moore. These two officers perfectly executed my intentions, and performed the services committed to their care with much precision and ability. The action was neither obstinate or severe, and our loss is but small; but it afforded to every opportunity to display the promptness of British officers, and the heroism of British soldiers.

A part of General Doyle's brigade, the 30th regiment (four under the immediate command of Col. Spencer) has taken possession of a hill in front of the enemy's right. Gen. Menou, who was in person in that part of the French intrenched camp, directly opposite our post, ordered about 600 men to make a sortie, to drive us from our position. The enemy advanced in column with fixed bayonets and without firing a shot, till they got very close to the 30th regiment, to whom Col. Spencer gave an immediate order to charge, tho' they did not consist of more than 200 men; he was obeyed with a spirit and a determination worthy the highest panegyric. The enemy were driven back to their entrenchments with the greatest confusion. They had many killed and wounded, and several taken prisoners.

On the night between the 18th and 19th, Major Gen. Coote opened the batteries against the castle of Marabout, an attack was also made from the sea by several Turkish corvettes, and the launches and boats of the fleet, under the guidance of the hon. capt. Cochrane: great perseverance and exertions were required to get up heavy guns thro' a difficult and almost impracticable country; but the troops executed this painful and arduous service with such zeal and continued firmness, that the fort capitulated in the night of the 21st: the garrison consisted of about 180 men, and were commanded by a Chief de Brigade.

On the morning of the 22d, Major Gen. Coote marched with Marabout to attack a strong corps posted in his front, in order to cover the approach to Alexandria; the management of that excellent officer seems to have been as able and judicious, and was attended with the most complete success; he drove the enemy every where, though strongly posted, and in a country which opposed uncommon obstacles to the progress of troops. The French suffered extremely in the action, and several of the enemy's guns, with a number of tumbrils and seven pieces of cannon, were left behind.

On the 25th, batteries were opened against the Redoubt de Bain; and on the 25th, at night, Major Gen. Coote carried the enemy's advanced posts, which seven officers and fifty men were taken prisoners: this service was gallantly performed by Lieut. col. Smith, with the 1st battalion of the 90th regt. and a small detachment of dragoons, under the orders of Lieut. Kelly, of the 26th. The enemy endeavored to regain possession of the ground from which they had been driven, but were repulsed with loss.

On the morning of the 26th we opened four batteries on each side of the town against the intrenched camp of the French, which soon silenced their fire, and induced them to withdraw many of their guns.

On the 27th, in the evening, Gen. Menou sent in an de-camp to request an armistice for three days, in order to give time to prepare a capitulation, which, after some difficulties and delays, was signed on the 2d of September.

I have the honor to inclose you a copy of the Capitulation, and also a list of the number of persons for whom the enemy have required shipping; by this it appears, that the total of the garrison of Alexandria consisted of upwards of eight thousand soldiers, and one thousand three hundred sailors.

This arduous and important service has at length been brought to a conclusion. The exertions of individuals have been splendid and meritorious. I regret that the bounds of a dispatch will not allow me to specify the whole, or to mention the name of every person who has distinguished himself in the public service. I have received the greatest support and assistance from the General officers of the army. The conduct of troops of every description has been exemplary in the highest degree; there has been much to applaud, and nothing to reprehend; their order and regularity in the camps have been as conspicuous as their courage in the field.—To the Quarter-master General, Lieut. Gen. Anstruther, I owe much, for his unwearied industry and zeal in the public service, and for the aid, advice and cooperation, which he has at all times afforded me.

Brigadier-General Lowry, who commanded the artillery, and Captain Bryce, the Chief Engineer, have both great merit in their different departments. The local situation of Egypt presents obstacles of a most serious kind to military operations on an extended scale. The skill and perseverance of those two officers have overcome difficulties which at first appeared almost insurmountable.

Lieut. Col. Lindenthal, who has always acted with the Turks, deserves my utmost acknowledgements; his activity and diligence have been unremitted, and he has introduced amongst them an order and regularity which does him the highest honor.

During the course of the long service on which we have been employed, Major Smith has at all times given the most distinguished proofs of zeal, activity, valour and ability. I have long considered him as an officer of the first promise, and have now the pleasure to inform your lordship that he has been appointed by the Grand Vizier, Commander in Chief of the Turkish army, with the rank of Pacha of three tails, and that a firman to that effect has been received from the Porte.

Major Smith has constantly distinguished himself in the course of the campaign, and on the 8th, 16th and 21st of March, when he displayed that coolness and gallantry in the service of his country, and that noble intrepidity, for which he has been ever so conspicuous. Capt. Reynolds of the Romney, Lieut. Cowell, and Lieut. Every, of the Tigre, animated the seamen and marines with a spirit worthy of the British name, and by their example led to those exertions which have contributed so much to the public service.

Sir Sidney Smith has constantly given the most cordial assistance and support to the operations of the army, and has rendered us essential service by the position of the squadron under his command on shore. I am also much indebted to Captain Hall after the capture of Rosetta, and returned on board the Tigre; a short time before the appointment of Admiral Gantheaume to the command of the fleet he was pressing in the most strong manner the necessity of the Admiral's coming to an anchor in Aboukir bay, which he declared was the only safe anchorage for ships of the line, and that he would pledge his credit to them and all the property in the fleet on it.

Sir Richard Bickerton

New York, December 9.

The British Packet, Duke of Kent, has arrived at Halifax to go direct into Falmouth. She brought the Preliminary articles of Peace, which Governor Wentworth carried to be instantly published, and issued a proclamation for a magnificent, and all orders, his Majesty's subjects, to express themselves accordingly."

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, Jan. 16, 1802.

By news from Paris of the 18th Oct. we are informed, that a salute of forty guns announced the signature of the preliminaries of peace between the French Republic & the Ottoman Porte.

Owing to the narrow limits of our paper, we are prevented from giving the preliminary articles at full length; the substance of which we have however extracted:—Citizen Charles Maurice Talleyrand, minister for foreign affairs on the part of the French Republic, and Dutch Mahmoudjee and the ambassador Elhadj Aly Effendi, on the part of the Ottoman Porte, after exchanging their full powers, agreed as follows:—Peace and friendship to be re-established between the French Republic and the Ottoman Porte from the exchange of the ratifications hereafter mentioned, by which, Egypt to be evacuated by the French army, and restored to the Ottoman Porte; the conquests made in Egypt, however, to be common to the French.

The French Republic recognizes the Confederation of the Seven Islands and its Venetian Country, situated on the Continent, and guarantees the maintenance of their constitution—the Sublime Porte on the other hand, is to guarantee the French Republic as well as Italy.

With respect to the property of the respective subjects confiscated or sequestered during the course of the war, definitive arrangements to be made—political and commercial agents, as well as prisoners of war of all ranks, to be liberated on the signature of the preliminary articles.

The treaties which existed between France and the Porte previous to the war, to be renewed in their full extent, and the French Republic to enjoy in the states of his Highness, the same rights of trade and navigation heretofore possessed by them. Ratifications to be exchanged in Paris in the space of 20 days.

The True Briton, in a paragraph of the 22d of Oct. makes the following observations on the above:

Four treaties have been concluded by the Chief Consul within three weeks, viz. with Portugal, Britain, Russia and Turkey—the news was received on the 20th Oct. and announced the next day by firing of cannon and other demonstrations of joy.—This last treaty recalls to mind facts not very honorable to Bonaparte—rather this conduct, he has the modesty to stipulate with the Turks for the renewal of all their ancient treaties of friendship and commerce—after Egypt has been reconquered by British arms, he has the generosity to cede it back to the Turks, and to require that France shall have the same indulgencies in Egypt, and generally in common with the Turks, as the most favoured nations!—Hence England is to be rewarded no better for all the blood and treasure expended in saving that tottering empire, than France for attempting to rob the Sublime Porte of another of her provinces!—It is well known, that when French depredations of treasure and men compelled their fulfilment and the assassination of Paris, and the threatened invasion of Greece by France, it was possible that the Turks should not very far from the commerce of the Levant and Archipelago.

LONDON, October 21.

With respect to the reduction which will take place in the army, on the definitive treaty being finally ratified, it is stated confidently in a Ministerial paper, that it is at present the intention of government not to reduce a single regular regiment, except the additional battalions that were been added to different regiments during the war. The establishment of the regiments only will be reduced to six hundred men each regiment of infantry, and five hundred each regiment of cavalry. The additional Field Officers added to each regiment during the war, it is supposed, will be put on half pay, though this conclusion we believe has not been as yet finally determined upon.

All the Beefeaters, supernumeraries, both at home and abroad, will be immediately reduced, except one or two which were called on condition of being kept embodied for a certain number of years, but which will be disbanded immediately on the expiration of that time.

All the foreign corps in the British service, it is understood, are to be disbanded forthwith.

The Lords of the Treasury have referred the Convoy Duty Act to the Attorney and Solicitor General, and wait their report to decide the line of conduct to be pursued as to its being now collected.

It appears that the reception of General Lauriston has given great satisfaction to the French government. The Moniteur says so, and adds, that "the Chief Consul personally acknowledges, with a lively gratitude, the expressions of esteem he had received from the English." We hope that Bonaparte feels a wish to stand well in the opinion of the English nation. We hope that he considers this nation as great and formidable for war, as he has so long been the great patron of peace in the world.

INSURRECTION IN St. DOMINGO.

By a gentleman from Cape Francois the editors of the Federal Gazette have been favoured with an original journal published by Toussaint, of an insurrection which broke out in the department of the North, about the 20th Oct. and was quelled on the 4th of November.

The Consul's Journal concludes thus:

"The unanimous reports of the generals and military commanders; the cries of the rebels, the information of the arrested, agreeing in stating the general of division Moyle, to be the author of this conspiracy, I ordered him to appear before me, and after having informed him of the declarations made by adjutant general Vilsenger, I ordered him to be arrested on the 6th Brumaire. On the 10th, he left our Fort-de Paix, under the charge of brigade general Clervaux, to be confined in Grand Fort, to await the issue of his trial.

"Being informed that order was re-established in every quarter, that all the planters had returned to their occupations, that the utmost vigilance was exerted, and desirous of giving confidence to the inhabitants of the Cape, I entered that city the 14th Brumaire, 4th November, conducting 40 prisoners.

"Having ordered the brigade general Henry Christophera to assemble all the armed force at the place of arms, I had 23 of the Chiefs of the revolt brought thither, who were instantly punished with death. A great number of others are in prison waiting their trials.

"This conspiracy, formed with the greatest malice, appeared to be principally directed against the government and the white inhabitants of the north. The rebels have fully discovered the author. In order to attach them to him, and press them to their atrocities, he informed them that I had sold the blacks to the whites; that General Moyle alone had refused to sign the pretended contract; but that generals Dessalines and Christophe had signed it. We know that the whole of this infamy had made chiefs obtain, in the day of the revolt, more than he could obtain as a price of this refused project of sale.

"After inserting this unfortunate occurrence, the general says,

"Tranquility is again established in every quarter.

"The most strict orders have been given that the work of the plantations be vigorously carried on; that the slightest offence be rigorously punished; and that the safety of persons and property be constantly preserved. We are sure and anxiety shall be employed to prevent this fatal event and restoring public confidence.

At the Cape only one man was killed by the revolters.

TREATY of PEACE,

Between the French Republic and the Kingdom of Portugal.

The first Consul of the French Republic, in the name of the French people, and His Royal Highness the Prince Regent of the Kingdom of Portugal and Algarva, equally animated with the desire of establishing their relations of commerce & amity which subsisted between both states previous to the war, have determined to conclude a treaty of peace, through the mediation of His Catholic Majesty, and have appointed for this purpose the following plenipotentiaries viz.

The Consul has nominated in the name of the French people, Citizen Lucien Bonaparte; and his Royal Highness the Prince Regent of the Kingdom of Portugal and Algarve, his Excellency Cypriano Ribeiro Freire, commander of the order of Christ, one of the Council of His Royal Highness, and minister plenipotentiary to his Catholic Majesty; which plenipotentiaries, after having exchanged their respective powers, have agreed upon the following articles.

I. There shall be from henceforth, peace, friendship and good understanding, between the French Republic and the Kingdom of Portugal. All hostilities, both by sea and land, shall cease immediately after the exchange of the ratifications of the present treaty that is to say, within fifteen days in Europe and the seas which bound it and the coast of Africa on this side of the equator, within forty days after the aforesaid ratifications in the territories and seas in America and Africa, on the other side of the Equator; and three months after in all the territories and seas to the westward of Cape Horn, and to the east of the Cape of Good Hope. All the prizes made after these respective periods, in the latitudes mentioned, shall be reciprocally restored. The prisoners on each side shall be restored, and the same political relations be re-established between the two powers as existed before the war.

II. All the ports and roads of Portugal in Europe shall be immediately shut and continue so until the conclusion of peace between France and England, against all English vessels both of war & trade; and the said ports and roads shall be open to all the vessels of war and trade belonging to the French Republic and her allies.

As to the ports and roads of Portugal in other parts of the world, the present article shall be obligatory only in the periods more fixed for the cessation of hostilities.

III. Portugal engages not to furnish during the course of the present war, to the enemies of the French Republic, or their allies, any soldiers, seamen, ships, arms, ammunition, provisions, or money of any kind, or in any manner whatever. All articles, the exportation of which is prohibited by the treaties of commerce, or conventions contrary to the present article, shall be arrested and confiscated as enemy's property.

IV. The boundaries of French and Portuguese Guiana shall be determined in future by the river Carapanatuba which flows into the river Amazon, about a third of a degree of north latitude above Fort Macapa. The thalweg shall follow the course of the river to its source, whence they shall take a direction to the grand chain of mountains which divides the course of the rivers; they shall follow the windings of the chain to the point nearest to the source of the river Japoc, and descend the middle of that river to the second and third degree north of the Equator.

The inhabitants of the two Guianas, in the course of the war may have been carried off from their habitations, shall be respectively restored.

The citizens or subjects of the two powers, who may be compelled within the new determination of the limits, may reciprocally retire to the countries of their respective states. They shall likewise have power to dispose of their property, moveable and immoveable, for a period of two years, to be computed from the day of exchanging the ratifications of the present treaty.

V. A treaty of commerce shall be negociated between the two powers, to establish in a definitive manner a commercial relation between France and Portugal; in the mean time it is agreed upon—

First—That the communication shall be re-established immediately after the exchange of the ratifications, and that the agents and factors of commerce shall on each side be restored to the possession of the rights, immunities, and prerogatives which they enjoyed before the war.

Secondly—That the citizens and subjects of the two powers shall equally & reciprocally enjoy in the states of both, all the rights which those of the most favoured nation enjoy.

Thirdly—That the commodities and merchandize produced from the soil or manufactures of each of the two powers, shall be admitted reciprocally, without restriction, and without being liable to any duty which would not equally affect the commodities and merchandize of a similar nature imported by other nations.

Fourthly—That the French cloths may be immediately imported into Portugal, on the footing of the most favoured merchandize.

Fifthly—That in other points all the stipulations inserted in the preceding articles, and not contrary to the present treaty, shall be provisionally executed until the conclusion of a treaty of definitive commerce.

VI. The ratifications of the present treaty shall be exchanged at Madrid within the term of 20 days at farthest.

Exchanged by duplicata, the 7th Vendemiaire in the 10th year of the French republic, (29th Sept. 1802.)

TREATY OF PEACE

Between the French Republic and the Emperor of all the Russias.

The First Consul of the French Republic, in the name of the French People, and his Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias, animated with the desire of re-establishing the relation of good understanding which subsisted between the two governments before the present war, and to put an end to the evils with which Europe is afflicted, have appointed for that purpose for their plenipotentiaries, viz.

The First Consul of the French Republic, in the name of the French People, citizen Charles Maurice Talleyrand, Minister of Foreign Affairs, and his Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias, the Sieur Arcadi Count de Markoff, his Prime Counsellor and Knight of the Order of St. Alexander Neuski, and Grand Cross of that of St. Wlademir of the first Class, who, after the manifestation and exchange of their full powers, have agreed upon the following articles:—

Art. I. There shall be in future peace friendship and good understanding between the French Republic and his Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias.

II. In consequence there shall not be committed any hostility between the two States, reckoning from the day of the day of the exchange of the ratifications of the present Treaty; neither of the contracting parties shall furnish to the enemies of the other, internal as well as external, any succor or contingent in men or money, under any denomination whatever.

III. The two contracting parties wishing as much as is in their power, to contribute to the tranquility of the respective governments, promise mutually not to suffer their subjects to keep up any correspondence, direct or indirect, with the internal enemies of the present government of the two States, to propagate by them its then principles contrary to their respective constitutions, or to foment troubles in them; and as a consequence of this concert, every subject of one of the two powers, who during his residence in the States of the other, shall make any attack upon its security, shall immediately be removed out of the said country, and carried beyond the frontiers, without being able, in any case, to claim the protection of his government.

V. The two contracting parties agree till a new treaty of commerce be made, to re-establish the commercial relations between the two countries on the footing in which they were before the war, as far as possible, and with the exception of the modifications which time and circumstances may have produced, and which have given rise to new regulations.

VI. The present treaty is declared to be common to the Batavian Republic.

VII. The present treaty shall be ratified, and the ratifications exchanged in the space of fifty days, or sooner if possible.

In faith of which, we the undersigned, in virtue of our full powers, have signed and sealed the said treaty.

CH. M. TALLEYRAND.
The Count de MARKOFF.

London Gov. 11.

Citizen Lauriston arrived at Dover, at 9 o'clock on Friday evening. On his passing through Deal to M. Otto's residence, his carriage was followed by a numerous concourse of people, who after words took the horses from his carriage, and drew it to Beal street, St. James Street, and to Downing Street, expressing on the occasion the most tumultuous joy. Citizen Lauriston is not more than 25 years of age; he was dressed in regimentals elosely buttoned; a blue jacket with epaulettes.

M. Otto and M. Lauriston, attended by Cox the Messenger, from Downing-street, proceeded to the Admiralty; they were met at the garden gate by Lord St. Vincent, who very good humouredly addressed the mob: "Gentlemen! Gentlemen!! (the populace gave his Lordship three huzza's) "let me request you to be as orderly as possible; if you are determined to draw the gentlemen accompanied by M. Otto, I request of you to be careful, and not overturn the carriage." The populace assured his Lordship they would be careful of, and respectful to the strangers.

We learn from the Hague, that the sea for several years having to damaged the works which compose the port of the Zuyder Zee in Zelande, a great part of it sunk down suddenly on the 31st of last month, and was swallowed up by the waves. A great many of the inhabitants fearing a like fate for the rest of the city, quitted it to establish themselves elsewhere.

Oct. 19.

Report says, that the Duke de Lignicourt is the person intended to be sent by Bonaparte to this country as Ambassador from the French Republic. M. Otto, it is added, will be sent as minister plenipotentiary to America.

Oct. 22.

Admiral Massaredo has been deprived of his command, and retired in disgrace to Bilboa. No reason is assigned for this proceeding.

Citizen Dutoc left Petersburgh for Paris on the 13th Sept. Previous to his departure he received a superb box, ornamented with the Emperor's picture.

It is said that it was from Admiral Graves that Admiral De Winter received the intelligence of the peace. "All the English vessels on the coast of Holland celebrated the event by discharges of artillery, and then quitted their cruize; but the cautious Hollanders did not even then profit by the opportunity to put to sea.

We learn from Copenhagen, that in consequence of the returns lately made to Government, the entire military establishment of Denmark amounts to 171,000 fighting men.

Nov. 7—8.

There is little doubt that the late proceedings in St. Domingo, and the independent government of Toussaint are extremely disagreeable to the French government.—The mission of Admiral Lacroste to Guadaloupe had alarmed the persons who direct the islands of St. Domingo, and they wished, by the form of an independent constitution, to anticipate or suspend any authorities sent out from the mother country. We are therefore more firmly perfuaded than ever, that Bonaparte will avail himself of the first moments of peace to send our an army so unexpectedly large and powerful as must soon reduce Toussaint.

We have received a late account from Calcutta, dated the 30th April, which states, that the Calipee Rajah, against whom hostilities have been conducted by the Mahrattas, has consented to terms of pacification. Chutter Sing, who is of the family of the Rajah Sahoo, and the Rajah Purnahah, have united their forces to the Calipee army. Accounts have been received at Calcutta, which represent the Rajah of Jumboo to be at the head of a strong body of Seiks, a few cos from Amtussir.

Letters from Frankfort speak of the obstacles which the late liberal regulations of the Elector of Bavaria will encounter. Among the enlightened part of the community their propriety is fully seen and gratefully acknowledged; but, among the Catholic Ecclesiastics and their superstitious adherents, they have excited a terrible outcry, as wholly subversive of religion and morality. So far have they carried this spirit, that in a number of instances they have attempted to prevent them from being carried into effect. In these attempts, however, they have wholly failed; and there is no doubt that in a short time the full value of the regulations will be generally felt and acknowledged.

Letters from Kempten mention, that all the Austrian soldiers who were billeted only during the continuance of the war, have already received their discharge.

BOSTON, Dec. 2.

New Insurrection in St. Domingo.

On Monday evening Capt. Simonds arrived here in thirty days from Cape Francois. From letters brought by him the following particulars are extracted:

"Cape Francois, Oct. 20th.

Yesterday advice was received here, that an army of revolted negroes had encamped a few leagues without the city; and that their object was to burn it, massacre the whites, and thole blacks in power. The drums immediately beat to arms, bufinefs fubfided, and the flight of women and children, to and fro prefented a fight not to be defcribed. Three thoufand troops immediately paraded, and the General in perfon headed a party of dragoons, who proceeded with fpirit and alacrity in queft of the enemy.—Nothing was left red to go on fhore or come on board: and the fituation of the Americans was thus rendered highly difagreeable. At ten at night the dragoons returned, being greatly fatigued; the weather being uncommonly hot, and a torrential rain pouring down the whole day. They encountered a party of the enemy about 15 miles from hence, & took a few prifoners. They faw 600 encamped. The prifoners will foon be executed.

"Oct. 25. The drums are again beating to arms; and no bufinefs doing. A general panic has feized all the inhabitants. The country prefents a fcene of unheard murders.—The infurgents yefterday maffacred a number of whites, but fparing women and children. Our conful (Lear) had engaged his paffage by the veffel this goes by.

"Same day, ten o'clock. The artillery and part of the infantry have marched. We cannot afcertain the force or difcipline of the revolters. Every night fince I have been here murder has been perpetrated; and fhocking to relate! I have feen human entrails carried about upon the bayonets of the foldiers.

"Oct. 26. As yet we are fafe, thank Heaven. Laft evening a body of troops marched with provifions for feveral days with their bread upon their bayonets. An embargo has been laid on all veffels in port.

"Oct. 27. This morning the Chief of the Infurgents (Flarin) was brought in. He is fettered, and his cries are heard a long diftance. It is faid he will be quartered by horfes. His object was to overturn the government of Touffaint. We have momently accounts of murders in the country. Whole families have been cut off. I expect the embargo will be taken off to-morrow.

"Oct. 29. In the courfe of this day the ftreets have been ftrewed with dead bodies, which are fuffered to putrify without removal. Another infurgent Chief has been taken. But the danger is now from within.—One of the General's aids de-camp is almoft dead by the fide of his Chief. General Chriſtopher this day cut off the heads of two men with his own hand, and left them on the heap of dead in the public fquare.

"Oct. 30. Bufinefs is recommenced, but confidence and fecurity have not been reftored. Executions of the Rebels are hourly taking place. Laft evening our conful gave me a particular account of the inſurrection. The plans of the infurgents were well arranged; & their troops properly organized. This city was their firft object, in which they had nearly fucceeded. Touſſaint and Deſſalines are now in the vicinity—the latter with a powerful army."

Capt. Symonds informs, that when he failed, the minds of the people at the Cape were in a degree tranquilized; & buſineſs re-commenced. The report was, that about 1300 of the inſurgents had been ſhot, drowned, &c. and that it was ſuppoſed they had previouſly maſſacred about 60 white people.

The principal ſcenes of the revolt were in the diſtrict called the Plain, all within 30 miles of the Cape, in which, as is ſuppoſed from 300 to 500 whites were maſſacred. Had it extended to the Cape, the loſs of many American merchants (then in town) would have been incalculable, as immenſe property belonging to them, muſt have fallen a ſacrifice.

From RUSSIA,

By the arrival at Portſmouth of the ſhip Two Siſters, Salter, in 62 days from St. Peterſburgh, intelligence is received of the good health of Alexander I. Captain S. obſerves, that ſome time previous to his ſailing, the Emperor was ſuddenly taken ſick, and a report inſtantly flew in all directions, that he was poiſoned; but it happily proved to be falſe. A few days before the Two Siſters ſailed, Alexander ſet out for Moſcow in high health, to be crowned Emperor of all the Ruſſias.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, Jan. 30, 1802.

TO THE PUBLIC.

☞ THE SUBSCRIBERS to the UPPER CANADA GAZETTE are reſpectfully informed, that with the preſent number will commence the ſecond half year.

THE Printer feels it a duty incumbent on him to offer his grateful acknowledgments to his Friends and Patrons, and to the Public in general, for the flattering encouragement he has ſo amply experienced in the Line of his profeſſion, during the preceding ſix months, however unmerited on his part; and begs they will accept them, therefore, not merely as a matter of form, but as the real ſentiments of a grateful heart.

Upon a retroſpective view of the plan on which the Gazette has hitherto been conducted, it will readily & plainly appear, that every ſpecies of inſertion has been carefully avoided—it has not been uſed as an inſtrument calculated to wound private feelings, or to blemiſh individual fame;—the ſtricteſt attention has been paid to Morality;—& the laſt & moſt intereſting occurrences poſſible to be procured, have been laid before the public:—But, from our relative ſituation, it will ſometimes unavoidably happen (particularly at this ſeaſon of the year) that the communication with the ſources from whence we derive our Information, will, for a time, meet with impediment.—This is a circumſtance againſt which the Printer cannot guard; nor can it be effectually remedied, until the eſtabliſhment of a regular conveyance.

ACTUATED, therefore, by a firm adherence to the principles of morality, & with a watchful eye to the intereſts of the Conſtitution under which we have the happineſs to be placed, he will, by every mean in his power, ſtrenuouſly endeavor to merit a continuation of that confidence ſo generouſly afforded, and exert every effort to give univerſal ſatisfaction.

HE laments the preſent abſolute neceſſity of publiſhing on paper of ſuch an inferior quality, but has ſpared neither pains nor expence to obviate that inconveniency in future, by actually importing from London a ſtock of good paper, together with an aſſortment of new Printing Materials; but owing to their late arrival at Quebec, they cannot be forwarded till the enſuing ſpring, when he will be enabled to perform every branch of his buſineſs relative to the Letter-Preſs with neatneſs, accuracy and diſpatch.

IT has hitherto been, and ever will be his conſtant wiſh and utmoſt endeavor to devote his ſlender talents to the ſervice of his Country and the Public.

 Subſcriptions for the Upper Canada Gazette, as well as orders for Printing will be received at the Printing Office and at the Toronto Coffee Houſe.

REPUTATION.

How ſweet in life, how dear is breath,
Yet when our Reputation's gone,
Life is not half ſo ſweet as death,
Night is more welcome than the morn.

Then cruel foe, why did you ſtrive,
My Reputation to deſtroy?
Ah! yes, by falſehood to deprive
Me of a NAME you can't enjoy.

But Heaven knows me innocent
Of all that your vile lips diſcloſe;
Your fiend'rous tongue is falſely bent,
To wound the fourſe of my repoſe.

Now I'll adviſe you tho' I'm young,
And this is all that I require,
That you would keep your cloven tongue,
From the tain heat of ſcandal's fire.

Political Essays on Popular Subjects.

Principiis cognitis multo facilius extrema intelligentur. Cic.

The Essay from which the following is extracted, makes only a part of one, of three Essays on First Principles, LIBERTY and DEMOCRACY, contained in a pamphlet lately published in England. The author is unknown, but the work bears on the face of it, every mark of the production of a man of no common abilities and acquirements united with soundness of judgment and accute just reasoning.

It is our intention to lay the whole of the three Essays before the public; and we humbly and earnestly recommend to every one who is desirous of being rightly informed, to divest himself of received prejudices and to proceed candidly and deliberately with the author, in search of truth, to the investigation of subjects in which we all, more or less, feel a lively interest, and which have, of late years, agitated the civilized world.

For our part, we can say, with the author, "sufficient will be our gratification, and ample our reward, if "we should co-operate, though but "in a slight degree, in the great design of promoting the cause of Political, Moral and Religious truth; "and of exposing the futility of these "arguments by which the credulous "and ignorant are misled."

ESSAY I.—FIRST PRINCIPLES.

TO commence a series of Political Essays with a position which every reader will admit, is an attempt too arduous to be accomplished without referring to some one of those moral maxims which experience has uniformly impressed with the characters of truth.

Whoever meditates on the page of history, remarks the occurrences of passing years, or reflects on the inconsistencies of his own conduct, will speedily be brought to acknowledge the necessity of some guide more steady in its directions, more unerring in its dictates, than those motives which usually decide the councils, and influence the actions of mankind.

The benighted traveller looks anxiously forward to the light which may direct his footsteps with safety thro' the bewildering shades & unexplored recesses of the forest; the mariner views, with attentive eye, the needle, ever constant to its invisible ruler in the north, and steers securely by its guidance through the dangers of the tractless ocean; but in the moral world, men are frequently content to wander through the forest of uncertainty, and to be tossed on the waves of life, without searching for a steadly light to illuminate their paths or a guide to direct their course.

If we look for the cause of this mental deficiency, we shall find it in the nature of man. The gift of reason is his glorious attribute; but, like all other gifts, its advantages depend upon its exercise. Reason is nothing more than the power of comparing our ideas and deducing inferrences for the purpose of instruction; but this comparison implies the existence of a standard to which we may refer, and according to which we may decide. All men must have some standard for the direction of their judgment, but it will vary with the degrees of their knowledge and reflection.—

"How can we reason but from what we know."

It is frequently allowed without examination; sometimes from the opinions of a leading character; sometimes from the common opinions of the world, and often from some intermediate proposition readily admitted as a criterion in its popular sense, but not carried back as it ought, to the original standard, from whence it is supposed to be derived. Of the victims of madness it has frequently and justly been alleged, that they reason right upon wrong principles. It is possible, therefore, to reason, and to reason ably, without advancing to the discovery of truth.

Hence, then, arises the greatest, the most important, though not the most obvious difference between man and man. Some through ignorance, are incapable, but more through indolence and want of reflection, are regardless of looking back to those First Principles, which form the true standard of reference and decision. It is not always necessary to look back to them, in order to obtain the applause and excite the admiration of the world. The world seldom judges from deep research, or with accurate appreciation; not, at least till frequent experiments have shewn the futility of its first decisions, and established the solidity of character and the prevalence of truth.

All the various abilities which distinguish man;—the powers of reason and of fancy, the flores of knowledge, the blaze of eloquence, and the splendor of learning, may be, and often are, possessed without that soundness of judgment which arises from a recurrence to original principles. Reason, though undoubtedly the mean of ascertaining truth, if properly made use of, implies only, as was just remarked, the power of examining ideas, and drawing inferences, from comparison. Imagination, it is obvious, seeks but to illustrate and to please; it is the province of eloquence to irritate or to persuade, and its voice is addressed to the passions: knowledge is nothing more than an accurate register of facts. Learning is conversant only with the languages and opinions of others; but wisdom consists in the possession of a standard by which we can estimate the value of all things within the range of our comprehension, and regulate the conduct of life. A man may be wise without being gifted, in any remarkable degree, with any of these dazzling qualities; but when his wisdom is combined with these, he becomes an illustrious character; when it imploys them all for the benefit of mankind he rises into a Bacon or a Johnson; of such minds it may be said, without hyperbole, that their serious and impatient opinions were generally unstained with any taint of error: they were always possessed of a rule for thought as well as action; & their dicta became the aphorisms of truth.

It may be observed, too, of these great characters, that they generally chose the synthetical mode of argument in preference to the analytical; that is, they set out with some fixed principle ready stored in their minds, and reasoned down to the matter which was the immediate subject of their consideration. Before the deep drawn disquisitions, and oracular sentences of the former, the philosophers and metaphysicians of his age sunk into obscurity; and had the latter been indulged a little longer to the world, the infidels and democrats of the present day would have crept into their lurking holes from the light of his reasoning, and the lash of his rebuke.

The difference is obvious between those first principles which respect the conduct of the individual, and those which form the foundation of a science. The former are necessary to all; the latter are requisite only for those who are called to the study and exercise of that particular science, and are useful to others only as they are adopted among the grounds of general knowledge, and employed for the advantage of mankind. The peasant may possess the former. He is graciously furnished with the means of acquiring them. He can read, or he can listen to the voice of truth, and to this sacred standard he may refer for information. The peasant with these principles is wiser than the subtlest arguer without them. He is wiser, much wiser, as far as respects himself, than those who, with greater acquirements, intermeddle with a science for which they were not educated, with whose elements they are unacquainted, and whose effects they either mistake or disregard. With such men to be daring is to be great; to be rash is to be courageous; to despise experience is to be free from prejudice; and to contemn whatever has been sanctioned by the veneration of ages is to be illuminated with superior light!—Hail to the wisdom of the pious cottager! Hail to that pure and peaceable wisdom, which exalts him to an eminence from whence he can look down on the pursuits of such men as splendid delusions, or as impious folly!

EXTRACT II.

It is not very difficult to decypher the novel characteristics of the present age. A general diffusion of the lowest species of knowledge, a dashing style of composition, a tinsel sort of eloquence, together with a deficiency of solid thought, a want of logical precision, and an ignorance of original principles, mark the features of the times in colours too glaring to be mistaken, with foreign tints which shame the modest simplicity of nature, and disguise the genuine dignity of truth.

Thereare generally a set of opinions floating loose in the world, adopted without consideration and uttered without thought, which have been handed down in the same form, from age to age, and received as established maxims by the unthinking, and the indolent. Many of these are spacious sophisms, employed only by the eloquent orators of the day, as they suited their addresses to the passions of the populace, and favored their opposition to some existing evil, or some preponderating power. Though unable to bear the test of strict examination, they have never been resisted and exposed, merely because the pressure of no peculiar circumstances has called for their refutation or exposure. These maxims are eagerly seized by the conceited trafficrers in knowledge, and the ardent spirits of turbulence and faction. They are magnified into undeniable axioms, and self-evident truths. They are expanded into gigantic shape, and displayed before the eyes of the people. They are hardened or rounded into weapons of attack, and this artillery is charged with every inflammable substance which malice or ingenuity can furnish. The watch-word of conspiracy is given out, the trumpet of sedition is sounded—and the enthusiastic demagogues hurry their deluded followers into battle with established usages and constituted authorities, undismayed, though the brittle forms of wisdom and experience be drawn out in array against them. If the ramparts of the fortress they attack are neglected or decayed—if the works are weakly defended, or difficult of defence, down falls the edifice with a mighty ruin, and shakes the astonished earth around. But if the venerable fabrick be constructed of more durable materials, and its garrison be vigilant and ardent in its defence, it frowns unhurt at the impotent attack, and bids defiance to all the storms which assail it. Yet not even in this case easily discouraged, tho' baffled in his first attempts, the practised enemy, perhaps, only changes his mode of warfare, and lays aside the open front of hostility for the secret sap and the insidious mine.

Not to much from the prevalence of evils, which called for abolition, and abuses, which solicited reform, as from opinions such as these converted into first principles, and combined with the love of power, of glory, and of plunder have arisen that monument of human pride and folly, the Revolution in France, and those abortions of human intellect, its successive and tranhitory constitutions. From similar sources flowed that enthusiastic applause with which the proceedings of an alien Republic were greeted by a party in this kingdom, and that confederate interest with which the views of its rebellious rulers were forwarded, to overthrow the established government of this country and bow the exalted dignity of Britain at the foot of those enfranquised altars which still smoke with the sacrifices of monarchy, wisdom and religion.

SIR,

I have not the good fortune to have been born a British subject, but though a stranger, since I live under the government of his Britannick Majesty, I have always had the greatest satisfaction and happiness, in knowing and making known every thing that might add to the profound respect due to his Majesty.

I have discovered, in the course of my historical enquires, the genealogy of the illustrious house of Brunswick, Lunenbourg: From the titles which support it, and which I have pointed out, it is certain that that house is perhaps the most illustrious and most ancient of all the illustrious houses of Europe.

I send you my discovery; if you think proper to make it public through the medium of the Gazette, it is at your disposal: an uncommon and hereditary merit in an illustrious house, inspires a civilized people with a very particular veneration, and it is were possible to augment that due to the reigning house, among the subjects of his Britannick Majesty, I would think myself happy in having in any ways contributed to it.

Sir, your very humble servant,

J. B. ST. M——, Pte.

ORIGIN of the House of Brunswick Lunebourg, which has been the reigning house in England since 1714.

The House of Altorff, which according to some authors is of the most ancient origin, must have been an illustrious house in the time of Charlemagne, since a son of d'Henbart, Count of Altorff, who first took the name of Guelpe, married Irmentrude, sister of Charlemagne; and Indith, daughter of this same Guelpe I. married Louis le Debonnaire, Emperor of the West and King of France.

The House of Guelpe, or of Altorff, was since grafted on the House of Este, by the marriage of Azon d'Este with an heiress of the House of Guelpe; and this House of Este, called in Latin Attestina domus, is descended of the Attii, a Roman family in the time of the Republic, which retired to Este, or Atestte. We shall trace the progress of this house before the House of Altorff, or Guelpe was grafted on it. Henry d'Este was created by Charlemagne Prince of Treviso, and Margrave or Marquis of Este; his descendants were often Vicars or Lieutenants of the Empire in Italy; and augmented considerably their possessions. One of the family, named Boniface, became Margrave of Tuscany, and possessed the territories of Ferrara, Piacenza, Mantua, Modena, Reggio, Parma, Luccas, Ancona and Spoletto.

Otto de Este sprung from this same House of Este, went over into Germany with the Emperor Othon I. in 963; in the following century, Azon, one of his descendants married the only daughter of Guelpe II. and sister of Guelpe III; when this last died, his brother-in-law inherited the dominions that the family possessed in Suabia and left them to Guelpe II. Count Altorff.

Henry, surnamed the Lion, sprung from this House, became Duke of Bavaria, and of Upper and Lower Saxony; and united to his dominions the hereditary Estates of five houses; but after having gained several victories over his enemies he was put under the ban of the Empire by the Emperor Henry I. in the Diet of Wurtzbourg, in 1180. He afterwards recovered the Duchies of Brunswick and Lunebourg, with other domains between the Elbe and the Weser which his descendants have possessed ever since.

It is then certain that the House of Brunswick Lunebourg is descended from the ancient House of Este, on which was grafted the illustrious House of Altorff or Guelpe.

POETRY.

From the MERCANTILE ADVERTISER.

THE BRAVE.

Soft are the slumbers of the Brave,
When at Death's touch their eye-lids close:
Dight Fairies dance upon their grave,
And deck with flowers the bed of their repose.

The Sire, whose locks are silver white,
Their prowess tells, with force impress'd;
The magic tale inspires delight,
And patriot-zeal fires every youthful breast.

On Fame's eternal banners wave
Their names, emboss'd with purest gold;
Where Time's corroding fingers have
No power to erase them from the silken fold.

ANECDOTE.

LORD ASH—N being at Bath, and coming down the steps of the pump-room, he observed a fine woman at some distance; on which, with his usual eloquence, he said "That's a d—d good piece." A sagacious citizen of London overhearing him, and mistaking the word, spread through Bath the news of Peace. His words being disputed, he alleged his authority, and said that Lord Ash—n had not only announced peace, at the pump room, but called it "a d—d good piece!"

Bon Mot of the late Robin Burns.

This singular character, it is well known, was addicted to the bottle. A physician who attended him in his last illness, remonstrating with him on the head, assured him, "the seat of his stomach was entirely gone."

The merry bard declared, if that were the case, he would go on drinking to the end of the chapter; "for if the coat was gone, it was not worth while caring about the waistcoat."

London paper.

Some years ago, Doctor Cullen's wife son, the famous mimic, played a humourous trick on Doctor Blair, Professor Robertson, and all the grave gentlemen of Edinburgh. At the Election of the city Magistrates, a grand dinner is usually given, and all the Clergymen and High Chancellors of the place attend. It having chanced this time to fall upon a synod day, none of the Clergymen could attend, nor could young Cullen's father. Cullen takes this opportunity of being revenged on the gentlemen of the cloth, for the dry wipes he had so often received from them—he collects a great number of his rakish companions into the room adjoining that of the Magistrates, about the time of dinner being over, now, in the voice of Doctor Blair, of Doctor Robertson, of his father, and every one he knew not to be with the Rulers, he drinks the Kirk of Scotland, &c. Singing smutty longs between them, and making great shoruffes of laugher like a company of jolly topers, to the utter astonishment of all the adjoining company, who could not conceive what powerful magic had drawn the Clergy into this confusion. In due time Cullen and his bucks dispersed—the former groaning like Doctor Blair, in the last stage of life. The next morning the whole city was agitated—the fact could not be controverted—the chief people had heard with their own ears the riot—at last the truth came out, and Doctor Cullen would not be reconciled to his son for a long time after.

Preliminary Articles of Peace

Between his Britannick Majeſty and the French Republick. Signed at London [In Engliſh and French,] the 10th of October, 1801; the 9th Vendemiaire, year 10 of the French Republick.

HIS M jeſty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the Firſt Conſul of the French Republick, in the name of the French People, being animated with an equal deſire of putting an end to the calamities of a deſtructive war, and of re eſtabliſhing union and good underſtanding between the two countries, have named for this purpoſe; namely, his Britannick Majeſty, the Right Honorable Robert Banks Jenkinſon, commonly called Lord Hawkeſbury, one of his Britannick M jeſty's moſt honorable Privy Council, and his principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs; and the Firſt Conſul of the French Republick, in the name of the French People, Citizen Lewis William Otto, Commiſſary for the exchange of French Priſoners in England; who after having duly communicated to each other their full powers, in good form, have agreed on the following Preliminary Articles:

ART. I. As ſoon as the Preliminaries ſhall be ſigned and ratified, ſincere friendſhip ſhall be re eſtabliſhed between his Britannick Majeſty and the French Republick, by ſea a by land, in all parts of the world; and in order that all hoſtilities may ceaſe immediately between the two powers, and between them and their Allies reſpectively, the neceſſary inſtructions ſhall be ſent with the utmoſt diſpatch to the commanders of the ſea and land forces of the reſpective ſtates, & each of the contracting parties engages to grant paſſports, & every facility requiſite to accelerate the arrival, and enſure the execution of theſe Orders.—It is farther agreed, that all conqueſts which may have been made by either of the contracting parties from the other, or from their reſpective allies ſubſequently to the ratification of the preſent Preliminaries, ſhall be conſidered as of no effect, and ſhall be faithfully comprehended in the reſtitutions to be made after the ratification of the definitive treaty.

ART. II. His Britannick Majeſty ſhall reſtore to the French Republick and her Allies; namely, to his Catholic Majeſty, and to the Batavian Republick, all the poſſeſſions and colonies occupied or conquered by the Engliſh forces in the courſe of the preſent war, with the exception of the iſland of Trinidad, and the Dutch poſſeſſions in the iſland of Ceylon, of which iſland and poſſeſſions his Britannick Majeſty reſerves to himſelf the full and entire ſovereignty.

ART. III. The port of the Cape of Good Hope ſhall be open to the commerce and navigation of the two contracting parties, who ſhall enjoy therein the ſame advantages.

ART. IV. The iſland of Malta, with its dependencies, ſhall be evacuated by the troops of his Britannick Majeſty, and reſtored to the Order of St. John of Jeruſalem. For the purpoſe of rendering this iſland completely independent of either of the two contracting parties, it ſhall be placed under the guarantee and proteſtion of a third power, to be agreed upon in the definitive treaty.

ART. V. Egypt ſhall be reſtored to the Sublime Porte, whoſe territories & poſſeſſions ſhall be preſerved entire, ſuch as they exiſted previouſly to the preſent war.

ART. The territories and poſſeſſions of her Moſt Faithful Majeſty ſhall likewiſe be preſerved entire.

ART. VII. The French forces ſhall evacuate the kingdom of Naples and the Roman territory. The Engliſh forces ſhall in like manner evacuate Porto Ferrajo, and generally all the ports and iſlands which they may occupy in the Mediterranean, or in the Adriatic.

ART. VIII. The Republick of the Seven Iſlands ſhall be acknowledged by the French Republick.

ART. IX. The evacuations, ceſſions, and reſtitutions, ſtipulated for by the preſent Preliminary Articles, ſhall take place in Europe within One Month; in the Continent and Seas of America and of Africa, within Three Months; and in the Continent and Seas of Aſia, within Six Months after the ratification of the definitive treaty.

ART. X. The priſoners made reſpectively ſhall, immediately after the exchange of the ratifications of the definitive treaty, all be reſtored, and without raniom, on paying reciprocally the debts which they may have individually contracted. Diſcuſſions having ariſen reſpecting the payment for the maintenance of priſoners of war, the contracting powers reſerve this queſtion to be ſettled by the definitive treaty according to the law of nations, and in conformity to eſtabliſhed uſage.

ART. XI. In order to prevent all cauſes of complaint and diſpute which may ariſe on account of prizes which may be made at ſea after the ſignature of the Preliminary Articles, it is reciprocally agreed that the veſſels and effects which may be taken in the Britiſh Channel & in the North Seas, after the ſpace of twelve days, to be computed from the exchange of the ratifications of the preſent Preliminary Articles, ſhall be reſtored on each ſide; that the term ſhall be One Month from the Britiſh Channel and the North Seas as far as the Canary Iſlands incluſively, whether in the Ocean, or in the Mediterranean; Two Months from the ſaid Canary Iſlands as far as the Equator; and laſtly, Five Months in all other parts of the world, without any exception, or any more particular deſcription of time or place.

ART. XII. All ſequeſtrations impoſed by either of the parties on the funded property, revenues, or debts, of any deſcription, belonging to either of the contracting powers, or to their ſubjects or citizens, ſhall be taken off immediately after the ſignature of the definitive treaty. The deciſion of all claims brought forward by individuals of the one country againſt individuals of the other for private rights, debts, property, or effects whatſoever, which, according to received uſages and the law of nations, ought to revive at the period of peace, ſhall be heard and decided before the competent tribunals; and in all caſes prompt and ample juſtice ſhall be adminiſtered in the countries where the claims are made. It is agreed, moreover, that this article, immediately after the ratification of the definitive treaty, ſhall apply to the allies of the contracting parties, and to the individuals of the reſpective nations upon the condition of a juſt reciprocity.

ART. XIII. With reſpect to the fiſheries on the coaſts of the Iſland of Newfoundland, and of the iſlands adjacent, and in the Gulph of Saint Lawrence, the two parties have agreed to reſtore them to the ſame footing on which they were before the preſent war, reſerving to themſelves the power of making, in the definitive treaty, ſuch arrangements as ſhall appear juſt and reciprocally uſeful, in order to place the fiſhing of the two nations on the moſt proper footing for the maintenance of peace.

ART. XIV. In all the Caſes of Reſtitution agreed upon by the preſent Treaty, the Fortifications ſhall be delivered up in the State in which they may be at the time of the ſignature of the preſent Treaty, and all the Works which ſhall have been conſtructed ſince the occupation ſhall remain untouched.

It is farther agreed, that in all the caſes of ceſſion ſtipulated in the preſent Treaty, there ſhall be allowed to the inhabitants of whatever condition or nation they may be, a term of three years, to be computed from the notification of the Definitive Treaty of Peace, for the purpoſe of diſpoſing of their properties, acquired and poſſeſſed either before or during the preſent war, in the which term of 3 Years they may have the free exerciſe of their Religion and enjoyment of their property.

The ſame privilege ſhall be granted in the countries reſtored, to all thoſe who ſhall have made therein any eſtabliſhments whatſoever during the time when thoſe countries were in the poſſeſſion of Great Britain.

With reſpect to the other inhabitants of the countries reſtored or ceded, it is agreed that none of them ſhall be proſecuted, diſturbed, or moleſted in their perſons or properties under any pretext, on account of their conduct or political opinions, or of their attachment to either of the two powers, nor on any other account except that of debts contracted to individuals, or on account of acts poſterior to the Definitive Treaty.

ART. XV. The preſent Preliminary Articles ſhall be ratified, and the ratifications exchanged in London, in the ſpace of fifteen days for all delay; and immediately after their ſignification, Plenipotentiaries ſhall be named, on each ſide, who ſhall repair to Amiens for the purpoſe of concluding a Definitive Treaty of Peace in concert with the Allies of the contracting parties.

In witneſs whereof, we, the undernigned Plenipotentiaries of His Britannick Majeſty, and of the Firſt Conſul of the French Republick, by virtue of our reſpective full powers, have ſigned the preſent Preliminary articles, and have cauſed our ſeals to be put thereto.

HIS MAJESTY'S SPEECH.

Thurſday his Majeſty went in the uſual ſtate to the Houſe of Peers, and being ſeated on the Throne with the accuſtomed ſolemnities, the Houſe of Commons attending at the Bar, opened the Seſſion of Parliament with the following moſt gracious Speech:

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I have the ſatisfaction to acquaint you, that the important negociations in which I was engaged at the cloſe of the laſt ſeſſion of parliament, are brought to a favorable concluſion. The differences with the Northern powers have been adjuſted by a convention with the Emperor of Ruſſia, which the Kings of Denmark and Sweden have expreſſed their readineſs to accede. The eſſential rights for which we contended, are thereby ſecured, and proviſion is made, that the exerciſe of them ſhall be attended with as little moleſtation as poſſible to the ſubjects of the contracting parties.

"Preliminaries of peace have alſo been ratified between me & the French Republic; and I truſt that this important arrangement, whilſt it manifeſts the juſtice and moderation of my views, will alſo be found conducive to the ſubſtantial intereſts of this country, and honorable to the Britiſh characters.

"Copies of theſe papers ſhall be forthwith laid before you, and I earneſtly hope that the tranſactions to which they refer, will meet with the approbation of my Parliament.

"Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

"I have directed ſuch eſtimates to be prepared for the various demands of the public ſervice, as appear to me to be beſt adapted to the ſituation in which we are now placed. It is painful to me to reflect, that proviſions cannot be made for defraying the expences which muſt unavoidably be continued for a time, in different parts of the world, & for maintaining an adequate peace eſtabliſhment, without large additional ſupplies. You may, however, be aſſured, that all poſſible attention ſhall be paid to ſuch economical arrangements as may not be inconſiſtent with the great object of effectually providing for the ſecurity of all my dominions.

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I cannot ſufficiently deſcribe the gratification and comfort I derive from the relief which the bounty of Divine Providence has afforded to my people, by the abundant produce of the late harveſt.—In contemplating the ſituation of the country at this important conjuncture, it is impoſſible for me to refrain from expreſſing the deep ſenſe I entertain of the temper and fortitude which have been manifeſted by all deſcriptions of my faithful ſubjects, under the various and complicated difficulties with which they have had to contend. The diſtinguiſhed valour and eminent ſervices of my forces by ſea and land, which at no period have been ſurpaſſed; the unprecedented exertion of the militia and fencibles, and the zeal and perſeverance of the volunteer corps of cavalry and infantry, are entitled to my warmeſt acknowledgments: and I am perſuaded that you will join with me, in reflecting with peculiar ſatisfaction on the naval and military operations of the laſt campaign, and on the ſucceſsful and glorious iſſue of the expedition to Egypt, which has been marked throughout by atchievements, tending in their conſequences, and by their example, to produce laſting advantage and honor to this country. It is my firſt and moſt fervent prayer, that my people may experience the reward they have ſo long merited, in a full enjoyment of the bleſſings of peace, in a progreſſive increaſe of the national commerce, credit, and reſources, and above all, in the undiſturbed poſſeſſion of their religion, laws, and liberties, under the ſafeguard and protection of that Conſtitution, which it has been the great object of all our efforts to preſerve, and which it is our moſt ſacred duty to tranſmit unimpaired to our deſcendants."

QUEBEC, January 11, 1802.

Provincial Parliament of Lower Canada.

Legiſlative Council Chamber.

Monday, 11th January, 1802.

This day His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor went in State to the Legiſlative Council, and being ſeated on the Throne, with the uſual ſolemnity, the Uſher of the Black Rod was ſent with a meſſage from His Excellency to the Houſe of Aſſembly, ſignifying his pleaſure that they ſhould immediately attend him in the Council Chamber. The Commons being come, His Excellency was pleaſed to make the following Speech to both Houſes of the Legiſlature:

Gentlemen of the Legiſlative Council, and Gentlemen of the Houſe of Aſſembly,

THE ſatisfaction with which I have hitherto met you here, receive a freſh and lively augmentation at this juncture, from the reſtoration of peace, the preliminary articles of which were ratified on the 10th October laſt. I cannot refuſe myſelf the pleaſure of congratulating you upon an event ſo highly intereſting to all His Majeſty's faithful ſubjects, nor forbear to dwell for a moment on the animating reflection, that, under the bleſſing of Almighty God, we owe the extinction of a war which has ſo long unhappily prevailed over a large portion of the world, to the atchievements of his Majeſty's forces, the fame of which has, in the courſe of the laſt year, received new luſtre from the heroic enterprizes of the navy of the United Kingdom, and from the glorious and important ſucceſſes of her army in Egypt.

It is alſo to me a ſubject of high ſatisfaction that nothing has taken place in your domeſtic ſituation to prevent my again congratulating you upon the preſent tranquility, as well as upon the proſperity and abundance with which the bountiful hand of Providence vouchſafes to bleſs this greatly favored Province.

The apprehenſions which were for a moment raiſed in the public mind by a Society of Lawleſs Adventurers, has had no other effect than to call forth freſh proofs of the perfect harmony which ſubſiſts amongſt us, and to evince that ſpirit of loyalty, which, while it honorably diſtinguiſhes all ranks of His Majeſty's ſubjects in this part of his dominions, alſo proves the ſenſe they entertain of the paternal goodneſs of the Gracious Sovereign who has given them the bleſſing of an excellent Conſtitution, and ſecured to them the enjoyment of all the advantages that flow from it, who has ſo powerfully protected their trade and their property, that during a conteſt ſuch as in modern times has had no parallel, this Province has been exempted from any ſhare in the calamities ſo generally inſeparable even from ordinary warfare.

After the cloſe of the laſt Seſſion I received His Majeſty's Commands to take into conſideration the means of introducing and encouraging the Culture of Hemp in this Province, as an article of Commerce likely to be no leſs advantageous to the Colony than to the Parent State; and I was further directed, after having collected ſuch information as might ſerve to aſcertain the fitneſs of the ſoil and climate for the growth of this uſeful plant to offer the ſubject to your particular attention.

The information which I have obtained from ſome reſpectable Perſons in the Province who have made experiments in this Culture, and particularly from the reſult of ſome trials upon a more extenſive ſcale which at my deſire were made by a Gentleman of much judgment and obſervation at Montreal, completely ſatisfy my mind that the ſoil and climate of Lower Canada are peculiarly adapted to this branch of cultivation, and induce me ſtrongly to recommend to you the early adoption of ſuch meaſures as may ſeem beſt calculated to encourage it throughout the Province.

I avail myſelf of the preſent occaſion to obſerve to you, that although the proviſions of the Act to provide Houſes of Correction were limited and temporary, they have been productive of ſome good, I therefore truſt, that you will deem it proper to continue that Act as it now ſtands, unleſs you judge it more expedient to provide for the erection of fit buildings to be appropriated to the purpoſes of Houſes of Correction.

The prevention of crimes dangerous to the well being of ſociety by the puniſhment of firſt and light offences, and by the employment of Convicts in a manner tending at once to the reformation of morals and the production of habits of induſtry, is an acknowledged principle of enlightened policy; and it will be well worthy of the wiſdom of the Legiſlature to conſider, how far theſe important objects may be attained by the permanent eſtabliſhments to which I have alluded.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Aſſembly,

I ſhall give directions that the public Accounts be laid before you comprizing ſuch as relate to the Provincial Revenue of the Crown and the expenditure of the laſt year.

Gentlemen of the Legiſlative Council, and Gentlemen of the Houſe of Aſſembly,

From my experience of your paſt conduct, I can have no doubt either of your zeal or prudence in your endeavors to promote the proſperity of the Province, and my anxiety for your happineſs excites in me the ſincereſt wiſh that no teſſion of this Parliament may paſs by, without being diſtinguiſhed by ſome plans conſpicuouſly productive of the public advantage.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, Feb. 13, 1802.

QUEBEC, 31ſt Dec. 1801.

On Saturday the 26th inſt. departed this life, the Hon. HUGH FINLAY, late Deputy Poſt Maſter Genl. of Britiſh America, and the eldeſt Member of His Majeſty's Councils;—as a Parent, friend and loyal ſubject, he ranked with the firſt in ſociety, and his faithful and meritorious ſervices in this Province, for forty-one years, ſtand ſufficiently recorded to render further comment unneceſſary.

Died on the 28th inſt. of a lingering illneſs which he bore for many years with chriſtian patience and reſignation Major S. HOLLAND. He has been in his time an intrepid, active, and intelligent officer, never making difficulties however arduous the duty he was employed in. He was an excellent field Engineer, in which capacity he was employed in the year 1758 at the siege of Louisbourg in the detachment of the army under Gen. Wolfe, who after silencing the batteries that opposed our entrance into the harbor, and from his own setting fire to three ships of the line and obliging the remainder in a disabled state to haul out of cannon shot, that great officer by a rapid and unexpected movement took post within 400 yards of the town, from whence, Major Holland, (under his directions) carried on the approaches, destroyed the defences of the town, and making a practicable breach obliged the enemy to capitulate: he distinguished himself also at the conquest of Quebec in 1759, and was made honorable mention of in General Wolfe's will as a Legatee; he also distinguished himself in the defence of Quebec in 1760 after Gen. Murray's unsuccessful attack on the enemy. After the Peace he was appointed Surveyor General of this Province, and was usefully employed in surveying the American coasts, from which survey those drafts published some years since by Major Debarres have been principally taken.

Jan. 7. Yesterday his Majesty's Royal Proclamation, declaring the cessation of Arms between Great Britain and the French Republick, was fixed up in all parts of the town by order of Government; in consequence of which, a Royal Salute was fired from the guns on the Grand Battery, at one o'clock P. M. and at night there was a general illumination throughout the town.

A poetical cobler, in the city of London, overjoyed with the news of peace thus breaks out with all the rapture of an enthusiast. Instead of making shoes to the LAST, he quits his AWL, & pours out his whole SOUL in HAMMERING out the subsequent doggrels, on the LAPSTONE of his genius. The ENDS of his lines, it may be observed, are all composed of O, though, as to MEASURE, they cannot all be considered as MATES.

A cobler near Dyot-street, St. Giles,
Exhibited in the illumination a transparency on which were the following lines,
THANKS to Lord Hawkesbury, and M Otto,
Forestallers now must go to pot o,
For all their hoarded grain will rot o;
Of all such knaves be this the lot-o,
A corner in old Belzy's grotto:
Here's to Lord Hawkesbury, Monsieur Otto:
Let's drink their health by way of motto;
As I approve the Peace in toto),
May he who breaks it first, be shot-o.

Political Essays on Popular Subjects.

LET it not, however, be irrationally and unchristianly supposed, that all who adopted these maxims, and acted upon them to a certain extent, foresaw from the first their dreadful effects, were indifferent to the evils they might produce or fought only the ruin of established power, and the aggrandizement of a particular class of the people. Candour will induce us to draw a different conclusion. It will point to error rather than to vice, as the primary source of those doctrines which have subverted the happiness of a mighty nation; they it will trace, with pity, the rapid and facile progress from the former to the latter. The minds of many Englishmen at no very distant period, from the contemplation of evils of an opposite nature, were undoubtedly inclined to receive the maxims of Gallic democracy with some degree of favor and approbation. Many, no doubt, with sheer goodness of intention, and from the love of national liberty, adopted those maxims for a time, who now shudder with horror at their tremendous and inevitable consequences. Little however, remains to be said for those who, with their eyes opened to this terrible reality, trace the tree of Gallic freedom has been known by its fruits, have perverted in the profession of the same pernicious opinions, and strenuously laboured by night and by day in public and in private, in books and conversation, in the secret haunt and from the open rostrum, to circulate their poisonous quackery thro' this happy country, at the expence of its acknowledged government, its established religion, its absolute property, and the lives of thousands of its inhabitants.

When the cause of evil is investigated, it is candid, and it is just, to attribute as little of it as possible to original and settled depravity; but when we contemplate the evil itself, it will lead us to the same inference and conclusion. Whether it spring from error, or from vice, it furnishes the same awful warning to reflection, and forcibly admonishes us to refer every opinion to those immutable principles which are the only real consolations of falsehood and of truth.

Such has, of late, been the absurdity of whimsey theories, such the folly and mischief of metaphysical speculation, that many honest and well meaning persons, and some, indeed, of high discernment, have been led to condemn theory altogether, and to ridicule every kind of metaphysical enquiry. But surely in this censure they have gone too far, it was rather against the conduct of the enquiry, rather against the erroneous objects of pursuit, that their condemnation and ridicule ought to have been directed. A distinction should have been made between the theory suggested by fancy, and that which is founded on data, established by experience. Improvements of practical advantage, and no other can properly be so called, must exist in theory, before they can be embodied in practice. They must be imagined, before they can be executed. The original plan of improvement in theory, founded on the correction of some acknowledged evil by some obvious good. All theory, therefore, is not to be condemned.

While we regret, too, that wild and extravagant species of metaphysics which leaving the realities of nature, & spurning the aid of common sense, wanders into the airy regions of hypothesis, and forms visionary systems for imaginary beings: while we despise the semblance of a science which, though free from the ancient jargon of the schools, is equally devoid of signification and substantial only in its baneful effects, let us still revere that useful part of metaphysical investigation, the study of the human mind, and the human character, which forms the basis of all positive knowledge. Wherever happiness is produced, wherever good is enjoyed, let us be persuaded that the effect may be traced to some principle which deserves to be known, and to become the rule of action in every similar case. But the difficulty of discovering this principle, and the disinclination to search for it, the love of novel opinions, & the promotion of wholly decisions, have given birth to those crude and fanciful, those foolish and impious systems, which every man of plain sense feels to be wrong, it is, therefore, provoked to condemn with an asperity of censure, too general, perhaps, when extended to the science they have abused, but justly merited by the conduct of its rash and ignorant professors.

Every science which engages the attention of man is more or less abstruse, and difficult of acquirement. All demand previous study, and deep research, and practical experience; but the principles of none are more remote from common observation, none is more complicated in its machinery, more varied in its application, and more important in its effects, than the science which has usurped the denomination of Politics. Its principles are abstruse, because it is founded on the nature of man, whose true general character is rarely estimated as it ought. Its machinery is complicated, because it is made up of parts adapted to the passions and the interests, the wants and the wishes, the follies and the vices of mankind. It is varied in its application, as it respects the characters and the manners, the local situation, or the foreign connections of a people; and it is above all other human sciences important in its effects; as well on the understanding, and reduced to practice, it promotes the happiness and the peace, or the misery and confusion of the world.

And is this a science to be wildly handled, or lightly esteemed? Does it lie open to the observation of every superficial reasoner, and shall a set of disaffected adventurers be placed on a level with its ablest and most venerable proficients? Is lefs of study and observation necessary for that, both part of social physics, the knowledge of the mind of man, than for an acquaintance with the anatomy of his body? Is lefs of thought and reflection requisite for ascertaining the grounds of legislation, than for the practice of jurisprudence? Is lefs of prudence and sagacity required for the government of a nation, than for the management of a trade? Forbid it wisdom, forbid it common sense!

The author of the following Essays is fully conscious of the difficulties attending the talk he has undertaken. He acknowledges the importance of his subject, and he is sensible of his own imperfections. But in the present times, when a daring spirit of innovation is gone abroad; when men are apt to reclaim without argument, and to decide without investigation, it may not be useless, even for the humble friend of order and of virtue, to employ the powers with which Providence has endowed him, in the support of assailed authority, and the defence of controverted truth.

To understand the whole science of politic in its widest range; to comprehend, at one glance, all its distant bearings and the dependencies; to appreciate the true value of its numerous systems, exemplified in the different governments of the earth, would require the labour of a life dedicated to its study and its exercise. Such was the life of that great character, whole earthly career has been lately finished. The spirit of Burke has fled from the world, & returned to him who gave it; but his memory still be hallowed by his countrymen, while the union of splendid abilities, with exalted piety, shall continue to excite their admiration, and respect. His powers of genius, his depth of erudition, his luxuriance of fancy, his extent of knowledge, his ardent and persuasive eloquence, his rich and sublime compositions, his predictive sagacity, and his religious zeal, will live in the remembrance of the wise and good, when all his failings and imperfections shall be buried in oblivion. He it was, whole intuitive discernment, like the spear of Ithuriel, first disclosed the demon of the French Revolution, in his native shape of deformity; and he it was, whole ardent efforts have been employed to oppose the entrance of the fiend into this region of unfulfilled comfort.

He is gone! but he has left a legacy behind him, drawn from the stores of political wisdom, experience, and reflection. The fire of his genius seemed to blaze forth with greater splendour just before its extinction; and, even since his departure, the vivid embers continue to glow with animating warmth. The opinions and advice of the greatest characters are not to be doubted without investigation, and none of the tenets of Mr. Burke cannot be expected to meet with unqualified assent; but the words of such a man at the close of life, with a heart devoted to his country, and his God, if they be not listened to as the inspirations of a prophetic spirit, must still awaken the feelings, and arouse the attention of his compatriots. They must forbid attachment into torpor, and heighten reflection into veneration.

At an humble distance from characters of such concentrated ability, with a high sense of the value of experience, and a due respect for the dictates of superior wisdom, the author hopes he may venture, without arrogance, to discuss some of those political subjects which have lately engaged so much of the public attention, and occasioned so great a diversity of opinions in the world. It is his wish to ascertain some general truths, by which the varying sentiments of the age may be tried and appreciated. In this pursuit he trusts that he is guided by laudable motives. The subjects which he has chosen are connected with the order and the liberty, the virtue and the happiness of society; and however he may fail in the execution of his design, he can confidentially assert, that it was dictated by the desire of detecting error, and assisting in the propagation of truth.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS, Nov. 6.

The House met at 4 o'clock, and the Earl of Chesterfield having acquainted their Lordships that his Majesty had been waited on, according to their orders, to know when he would be pleased to receive the address of that house, approving of the preliminaries of the peace, and that his Majesty had been graciously pleased to appoint this day, at 2 o'clock, for that purpose.

The House, therefore, having previously adjourned to Tuesday next, immediately proceeded to St. James's with their address, of which the following is a copy, with his Majesty's answer:

"Most Gracious Sovereign,

"WE, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Lords spiritual and temporal, in parliament assembled, beg leave to return your Majesty our most sincere thanks for your gracious condescension in directing the preliminary articles of peace, which have been ratified by your Majesty and the French republic, to be laid before this House.

"We can assure your Majesty, that we have bestowed on them that serious consideration which the important objects they embrace so justly demand; and we beg leave to express to your Majesty, with the most heartfelt gratitude, the satisfaction we derive from this important arrangement, which, while it manifests your Majesty's justice and moderation, and the regard and attention to good faith which have governed your Majesty's conduct towards your allies, will, we are persuaded, be productive of important national advantages, and promote the substantial interests of this country."

His Majesty's most Gracious Answer,

"MY LORDS,

"I thank you for this dutiful and loyal address.

"The satisfaction you express at the foundation which has been laid by the preliminary articles, for the final restoration of peace, is highly acceptable to me; and you may rest assured, that I shall, on my part, use my utmost endeavors to bring this important object to a conclusion in such manner as may most effectually tend to promote and secure the public interests, and the welfare of my people."

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Nov. 9.

The Speaker stated, that his Majesty had been waited upon with the address of that house, upon the preliminaries; to which his Majesty was pleased to return the following gracious answer, which he read from the chair:

Gentlemen of the House of Commons,

"I thank you for this dutiful and loyal address. The sentiments which you have expressed on this occasion are highly satisfactory to me, and cannot fail to be attended with the most important effects."

ANOTHER INSURRECTION AT GUADALOUP.

Arrived yefterday, Schooner Exchange, Capt. Vibert, from Guadaloup. Left it on the 11th, at which time Point Petre and the whole of the Ifland, was in confufion, another infurrection having taken place there, which had it not been fortunately difcovered at the moment, would have involved the total deftruction of every white and mulatto in the iflend.

The rebels in the prefent infurrection were the country blacks againft the whites and mulattoes. The former having fent a helping hand in the revolution which had been juft effected, expected a total emancipation from their maflers; but not finding that event confirmed or even contemplated in the proclamation of the yellow general, Pelage, they had determined to achieve their own liberty, thro' the blood of Pelage and his party. For this purpofe, eleven thoufand were to have been organized on the night fucceeding that on which the plot was difcovered—to have burnt the town—and to have murdered every man, woman and child of Pelage's party! At that very moment only when it could poffibly have been defeated, was the plot difcovered by a black woman who was the kept Mifs of a white man, when four of the ringleaders were apprehended.

Notwithftanding the bloody project had been difcovered, and for the prefent warded off, yet every thing was apprehended from the vengeance and ferocity of the blacks, and all was in the utmoft confufion. In fuch hafte was the iflund deferted by thofe who should go off, that the Exchange came away on the 17th with only 2 hands on board. An English and a French frigate were at that time off the island, cautioning vessels not to go in. Accounts had also been received that general M'Donald, with 28,000 men, had sailed for the windward, and gen. Rochambeau, with 40,000, for the leeward islands.

Political Essays on Popular Subjects.

ESSAY II.—On Liberty.

OH name of mighty import, & transcendent influence! whose infatuating sound had power to call forth all the energies of man; to animate his lay hearst upon the frozen mountains of the north, and rouze his languid faculties beneath the fervour of an equinoctial sun! Before whose idol form millions in every age have bowed in willing adoration, and under whose banner multitudes have marched to conquest or to death! Whose real or imaginary presence has nerved the arm of the hero, Iwelled the periods of the orator, and exalted the strain of the poet! Arrayed in all thy fascinating charms, and surrounded by all thy magic spells, still shall reflective reason truly call thee, as connected with virtue, or with vice, one of the choicest blessings, or one of the deadliest curses of mankind.

Like the Venus of Pagan times, Liberty may be worshipped under different attributes, and with contrasted modes of culture. The Uranian divinity, the sister of wisdom, the promoter of industry, the patroness of sciences and arts, the companion of order and loyalty, deserves indeed the homage she receives, and dignifies the nation who respects her. But the sensual goddess the deity of unenlightened reason, intoxicates her votaries with the draughts of delusion, pollutes and unmans them by her debasing worship, and when, with Circean spells, she has degraded the celestial resemblance in their nature, drives them forth from the abyss of brutality, to play their savage freaks of madness through the world. Such are the opposite, but faithful, portraits of freedom, as connected with the higher, or combined with the ignoble, characteristics of humanity; and such portraits might at once be sufficient to shew that the original cannot properly be considered as the first principle of government.

Liberty, as Dr. Johnson has truly observed, is that real or imagined good, which all who do not possess are desirous of obtaining, and which those who have obtained are never ready to relinquish. It therefore demands no studied eulogium, and no artificial display. On the contrary, it is an object to allure ring to the imagination, that it has a tendency to overpower the faculties of man, and the utmost exertion of his reason is required to reduce it to its real form, and estimate it at its just value.

Were we to listen to the declamatory arguments of popular orators, we should be taught to believe that the establishment of Liberty alone was the proper end and design of government. No other object is ever held up by them to admiration, no higher good is ever proposed for acquisition. They are convinced that this mode of address is the surest passport to the hearts of the people; and the appeal is made so frequently, and with so much enthusiasm, that they sometimes argue themselves into a persuasion of the truth of the doctrines which they have so eloquently maintained. But, surely, it requires no very great portion of discernment & reflection to discover the falsehood of such an assertion, and even be brought to wonder at its detected absurdity. Without previously defining the legitimate object of government, it is manifest that it must be combined with restraint; for government in its very name implies control upon the actions of men; and, therefore, whatever good is produced by its administration, must be incompatible with the possession of abstract liberty. So obvious and plain a deduction of reason, if advanced with the solemnity of an argument, would certainly be an insult to the understandings of all who had ever thought seriously upon the subject, but it is adduced with a view of persuading those to think seriously, who led away by the delusion of a fascinating idea, (observing, with pleasure, that a great portion of liberty may be enjoyed under a good government, and that it is sanctioned and supported by its system,) have been hurried into the precipitate belief that liberty alone was the true end of its institution.

Some colour has undoubtedly been given to this undigested opinion, not merely in days of old, by the popular declamations of heathen orators and authors, but likewise in modern times, by the writings and speeches of many illustrious characters, who have flourished since the first dawn of the Reformation, and who have employed their splendid abilities in opposition to civil and ecclesiastical tyranny.

At that period the evils of despotism were flagrant and obvious; they needed no exaggeration; they required no animadversion; they were seen only to be dreaded; they were felt only to be abhorred: Liberty, on the contrary, appeared a blessing of the greatest magnitude; it was but little known, and its evils had never been experienced; it was praised without being defined, for it was considered only as the opponent of tyranny.

This aera, however, has passed away. In most of the kingdoms in Christendom, tyranny has long since been lessened, or repressed, by the influence of public opinion; and, in the most enlightened nations, it has dwindled into a shadow, which can no longer appal the fancy, or alarm the apprehensions of men. In some countries freedom has become triumphant, and then, alas! The elements of fire and water, so beneficial when obedient to command, so destructive when they burst their bounds, it has produced excesses which have driven the ancient furies of tyranny from remembrance, and—

"Play'd such fantastic tricks before high Heaven
"As make the Angels weep."

But though freedom has been so much degraded in practice since the period of the Reformation, as to lose its very nature, and generate its opposite extreme, it was so much dignified in theory, at that important period, as connected with higher interests, and a certain portion of it is so necessary to the happiness of man, that whenever power has been established, and its evil consequences have subsided, it has been again extolled in the language of enthusiasm, adorned by the graces of eloquence, and exalted by some of its admirers into an idol of adoration.

Much additional support has been given to the deification of liberty, by the system of certain metaphysical writers whose undisputed abilities, upon other subjects, have afforded weight & currency to their opinions on the science of politics. By these writers it has been contended, that the right of government depends, at all times, on the will of the governed; that it is the result of a compact between the rulers and the people, in which the latter stipulated for advantages as the price of independence; that the liberty they enjoy is rather that portion of original freedom which the individuals retained on entering into political society, than the effect of those privileges which were secured to them by the wisdom of a benign institution; that if this liberty be diminished, the right of the legislature is at an end; and, in short, that no man is equitably governed, unless he be governed by his own consent.

These doctrines are highly flattering to the pride and passions of men; they have coincided with national prejudices at particular times; but, previous to experience, it is difficult to conceive, that any mind, enlarged by wisdom, & enlightened by revelation, should have deliberately embraced tenets so absurd in principle, so false in fact, and so pernicious in consequence. These are hard terms, and ought to load the author with reprobation if they be improperly applied; but if they be strictly just, the present crisis will now allow them to be softened or repressed.

What doctrine, in truth, can be more absurd than that which makes the right of government depend entirely on the will or opinion of the people? The assertion is absolutely incompatible with the subject of which it is predicated. Government means nothing, if it do not mean controul on the actions, and consequently, on the wills of men; and, without pausing in this place, to enquire how the will of the people is to be known, whether in a division of sentiment the opinion of the majority ought to be obeyed; whether the disapproving minority would not, by this principle, be justly emancipated from all restraint; and, in short, without putting more of those numerous questions, whose answers must inevitably operate as a reductio ad absurdum, it is evident, as a general truth, that government could not subsist for a week, but a day, for an hour, if it were rendered subservient to the wills of those whom it is instituted to direct. There could then be no settled constitution, no established laws, no accumulation of wisdom, no deductions of experience, no stability of administration, no security of property nor any of those various advantages which government ought to produce in human society.

PARIS, Nov. 9.

This day, at half past 11 o'clock, his Excellency, the Marquis Cornwallis, Minister Plenipotentiary of His Britannick Majesty to the Congress at Amiens, was introduced by the Minister for foreign affairs, to the Chief Consul with whom he had a private audience.

LONDON, Nov. 12.

We understand that yesterday Mr. Addington, at the course of conversation with the committee of gentlemen holding Exchequer Bills, stated that government had the satisfaction of receiving that day dispatches from Marquis Cornwallis at Paris, announcing that the Chief Consul had declared his willingness to acquiesce in the wishes of his country respecting the integrity and interests of Portugal, so that the conditions extorted by France, will not be insisted upon. It appears that the disposition shewn by Bonaparte is of the most pacific nature, and that he will concur sincerely in facilitating the settlement of a definitive Treaty.

When Marquis Cornwallis arrived at Calais he was met by a vast concourse of people. At the hotel, the Lion d'Argent, where accommodations were provided, was a guard of honor, consisting of 50 men of the 57th demi-brigade, & a picquet of the 20th horse chasseurs.

His Excellency having been prevented by the fatigues of his voyage from receiving immediately upon his arrival the first solemn expression of the sentiments of the French Republic thro' the medium of the authorities of Calais, the ceremony was deferred until the next morning, when they waited upon him in full dress, and congratulated his Lordship in terms appropriate to the importance of the subject.

Nov. 13. Colonel Abercrombie has brought home with him most accurate returns not only of all the killed and wounded, but of all the sick of the army. It is highly satisfactory to know that out of 24,000 men, British, Turks and others who have come under the care of our Medical Staff, only 1700 have died, including those who have suffered as well by sickness as by gunshot wounds. It is likewise curious as well as important to be known, upon the best authority, that out of 400 British soldiers who were infected with the plague, not much above 100 died.

Nov. 16. The expedition to St. Domingo proceeds with great vigor. Gen. Gen. Leclerc, it appears, is to command. He is to have under him Generals Rochambeau, and Boudet, both of whom very highly distinguished themselves in Italy last campaign, besides many other officers of great distinction. The civil department will also be extremely well selected.

We understand from private letters of undoubted credit, that it is believed General Rochambeau, after assisting in reducing Toussaint (if he resists) proceeds to take the chief command in Martinique. He is a very excellent officer, and well acquainted with the West Indies.

Nov. 17. It is expected that the Congress will now very speedily assemble at Amiens. If it be true that Plenipotentiaries are to meet there from the continental powers, Austria, Prussia, &c. it is not easy to say when it may terminate. Such meetings, if they do business well at all, certainly do not dispatch it quickly. But indeed we cannot see what immediate interests their powers can have. The adjustment of a treaty between England & France, and therefore, we doubt the truth of the rumors of their being called to assist at the conferences. It is generally believed that much discussion has taken place upon the definitive arrangement, and that some progress also has been made in the negociation respecting a commercial treaty.

On Wednesday last, Marquis Cornwallis gave a grand dinner to Joseph Bonaparte, Talleyrand, and several general officers of the first rank in Paris.

Marquis Cornwallis's journey to Paris was not the most agreeable, the weather, with the exception of one day, was uniformly bad; and one of the vessels, with his baggage, ran aground near Calais. His Excellency slept one night at Amiens, at the house taken for him during his residence at the congress. The morning of his departure from thence being fine, the people crowded from all parts of the town to see him, and he was several times under the necessity of appearing at the balcony, to satisfy their curiosity and impatience. Nothing could exceed the congratulations and testimonies of respect which were shewn him wherever he passed.

About two posts from Paris, Lord Cornwallis was met by Mr. Merry, with whom he entered Paris in his chariot and four. The other carriages followed escorted by one hundred and fifty of the finest hussars in the French service. The carriages drove to the hotel Grange Batteliere, on the Boulevards, where a most magnificent suite had been hired for the accommodation of the embassy.

From a Falmouth paper of Dec. 12.

LONDON, Dec. 9.

The Moniteur of the 18 inst. contains the following notice.—

The public are informed that the official correspondence between the French Republic and England is re established from the 18 Frimaire (2nd November.)

The following are the diplomatic arrangements concluded upon, and which will take place in the course of the ensuing spring. Lord Whitworth to go Ambassador to Paris, as soon as the Definitive Treaty is signed. Mr. Liston, Ambassador to the Hague; and Lord Henly Stuart (son of the Marquis of Bute) Secretary of Legation. Mr. Wickham, Minister Plenipotentiary to the Court of Berlin. Lord Carysfort, Minister Plenipotentiary to the Court of St. Petersburgh. Lord Robert Fitzgerald, Minister Plenipotentiary to the Court of Lisbon. Sir James Craufurd Minister Plenipotentiary to the Court of Stockholm. The Embassy to Madrid is not settled.

We received this morning the Paris papers to the 5th inst. They announce the departure of the Marquis Cornwallis and the French Plenipotentiary with their suites for Amiens.

The peace establishment of the army has at length been finally arranged and determined upon, between the Commander in Chief and his Majesty's Ministers, and is as follows:

29 regiments of light dragoons; 1 regiment of hussars; 101 regiments of infantry; 6 regiments of black troops; 60 companies of invalids. Seventeen regiments of infantry are to be kept in India; each regiment to contain 1200 men. The other regiments are to be reduced to 750 men. This large force is independant of the horse and foot guards, the artillery, and the waggon and staff corps, which amount to 20 battalions more, making in the whole upwards of 166 battalions, exclusive of the marine corps.

We understand that it is the intention of government to maintain a force of 12 ships of the line on the Jamaica station, and orders for that effect have been issued, and the necessary arrangements made. This is a greater force than has been in that quarter during the war. But the French force there will, in consequence of the expedition to St. Domingo, be considerable.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 20.

The English Ambassador, Lord Elgin, and the brother of Gen. Hutchinson, who left the intelligence of the capitulation of Alexandria, have received the new Turkish Order of Knighthood, which was formerly conferred on Lord Nelson, and the insignia of which consist of a crescent, with stars, richly set with diamonds. To celebrate the surrender of Alexandria, the Grand Seignior has given liberty to 250 galley slaves, and ordered all persons to be released who were detained in prison for debts under 150,000 piastres.

OF ST. DOMINGO.

The expedition of St. Domingo, to which place 20,000 men are to be sent from France, a less number being deemed to be inadequate to the placing that colony fecurely in the hands of the French Government, will not fail till the definitive Treaty is far advanced. "It is very important," fays a Miniſterial writer, "on many accounts, that Lord Cornwallis ſhould loſe no time in concluding it, and of courſe it will be neceſſary that our troops ſhould remain in Egypt until the terms of the peace are finally adjuſted. There appears at preſent on the part of the French, as ſtrong a deſire to bring every unſettled queſtion to a termination, as there is on the part of thoſe employed by this country. Thoſe who know Lord Cornwallis, well know that deciſion is a ſtriking feature in his character; and we have the moſt perfect confidence that he will not loſe a moment at Amiens by an attention to trifling or unimportant points."

NEW-YORK, January 27.

We have received by the Barque Belfaſt, Waterman, 35 days from Falmouth, a file of the Morning Chronicle down to the 18th Nov.

They contain no intelligence of great importance—The grand Fete de la Paix was celebrated at Paris with vaſt ſplendor, and with ſingular order and decorum. Not even a carriage was ſuffered to paſs, except that of Marquis Wallis.

The Britiſh frigate la Pomone, has captured off Elba, the French frigate la Carrere, of 40 guns, laden with ammunition, from Port Hercule for Longone. A detachment of Sir J. B. Warren's ſquadron, off Leghorn, Sept. 2, captured the French (late Britiſh) ſhip of war Succeſs, and ran on ſhore la Bravour, French frigate of 46 guns and 268 men, which was entirely loſt.

L'Egyptiane and la Regenerie french frigates and a Venetian corvette, are captured at Alexandria by Lord Keith.

Marquis Cornwallis, it is ſaid, has received inſtructions from the Britiſh Court, to endeavor to obtain ſome arrangement by which Britiſh ſubjects who have ſettled in Demerara, and laid out great ſums in improvements there, ſhall be permitted to ſend their produce direct to England.

The Danith General Waltersdorff, ſailed from Copenhagen about the laſt of Oct. for England on board the frigate Iris, bound to the Weſt Indies. This officer is to take poſſeſſion of the Danith Iſlands which Great Britain has conſented to reſtore.

A London article of Nov. 16 ſtates, that by report the King of Pruſſia is negociating a commercial treaty with England, by which the importation of Britiſh manufactures into the Pruſſian dominions, is to be permitted.

John Church, Eſq. of Cork, (Ireland) is appointed Conſul to the U. States of America.

FROM ST. DOMINGO.

We learn by capt. Burbank, from Port-Republican, which place he left the fourteenth January, that the report of Touſſaint's death is premature. When Capt. B. ſailed the iſland was apparently in a ſtate of the moſt perfect tranquility. The troops from France were daily expected, and the prevailing opinion was, that if the terms offered Touſſaint were not highly derogatory to him, they would be peaceably received.

The Britiſh Packet Townſend, arrived laſt evening in 57 days from Falmouth, brings London papers to the 4th Dec. but they contain nothing of importance. The following articles are taken from a London paper of the 4th.

The treaties of peace concluded by the French Republic with America and Naples, have been laid before the Legiſlative Body by two Counſellors of State, who delivered each a previous expoſition of the events that had preceded thoſe treaties, and of the principles by which the French government had been actuated. Roederer, fairly deſcribes the treaty with America, as placing the Republic and the U. States upon the reciprocal footing with the moſt favored nations; and the mention which he makes of a neutral veſſel making a neutral cargo, we need ſcarcely obſerve, bears allution only to the particular conventions between thoſe two nations, the ſpirit of which has been completely ſubdued by the ſubſequent ſubmiſſion of the powers of the North.

Gen. Menou has arrived in France, and part of the garriſon of Alexandria has reached Genoa.

The rumors which have been for ſome time circulated reſpecting the reluctance of the Court of Madrid to accede to the Preliminary Treaty, are directly contradicted by diſpatches from Marquis Cornwallis. The act of acceſſion on the part of his Catholic Majeſty has been officially communicated to his Lordſhip by the French Miniſter for Foreign Affairs.

A letter from Dublin ſtates, that Jas. Napier Tandy, who bore the commiſſion of General of Brigade in the French ſervice, has received official notice to prepare for immediate execution, or tranſportation to Botany Bay for life.

LONDON, Nov. 11

Extract of a Private Letter. Paris, Nov. 9, 10 A. M.

"I have scarcely a moment's time to spare from the day to sit down and write to you. You will see by the date of my letter that I can only give an account of the ushering in of this happy day. The amusements may be said to have commenced last night, for at six in the evening a grand discharge of artillery gave the signal to all Paris—but-nobody had a thought of no more. Every one gave himself up to pleasure. The people, as they met, seemed as if they wished to throw themselves into each other's arms, to congratulate each other on the peace—and this was actually the case in many places.—Here you saw a group dancing with all their might and main—there a lively fellow run about with a large tankard inviting every body to help him to empty it.

"The theatres were open gratis, & on each was introduced some petit-piece allusive to and in honor of the peace. At one of them the representations closed with a fine transparency. The scene represented at first dark and tempestuous clouds; the prospect was barren and desolate; on a sudden the clouds dispersed; the sun rose unclouded and bright, and its rays shone upon the words Paix & Union entre la République Française et la Grande Bretagne. The colors of the two nations waved together over the inscription, fastened by branches of olive and laurel. A great number of persons never thought of going to bed, but crouded the streets, Cabarets Guinguettes dancing to their lively national airs.

"This morning the signal was a loud discharge of cannon at 7 o'clock. Few, however, had waited to be awakened by it. They had dressed themselves in their best holiday clothes long before it was light, determined to lose no part of the amusements of the day. As soon as the cannon had given the signal, the troops of Paris, superbly dressed, proceeded to take their stations in the grand Court of the Thuilleries, the Place de Concorde, the Champ de Mars, &c.

"At the time of writing, bands of music, drums, trumpets, are parading through the street to the squares and places destined for the fete. The principal band is to occupy the Temple of Peace, on the Place de Concorde.

"All the preparations have been completed according to the directions of the Minister of the Interior, tho' the workmen were forced to borrow an hour or "twain of the night." The three bridges, the Pont Neuf, Thuilleries & Concorde, are adorned with trophies of peace, surmounting the emblems of war.

"The grand scene of the festival is, as the name points out, the Place of Concorde. A theatre has been built there for the purpose, containing a temple dedicated to Peace. From the theatre stretch porticos on each side round the square, under which the people are to dance.

"The day, tho' not very fine, is still fair, which is all that could be expected at this time of the year."

In a late Paris Journal, we find an account of a discovery equally new and extraordinary. Citizen Lebon, a very ingenious Chemist, has contrived a method of producing from hydrogen gas, not merely a very clear light, but a very strong heat. "Judging both from the simplicity and the extraordinary effects of this experiment, says a French writer, it seems to be an application of the powers of chemistry to the combustion of wood, and of aerial substances. Under a globe of glass is placed a light at once of the brightest and most steady kind, which at the same time supplies the place of an active & warm fire. An apartment of considerable extent is illuminated by it in the most splendid manner, and the light which it reflects is extremely vivid and pure. It has no tendency to spoil the appearance of the appartment, or to expose it to danger, it forces out neither any sparks from it. Tho' in proceeding along the tubes it is cool, yet it contracts a proper degree of heat in mixing with the atmospheric air: the colors of the illumination are beautiful and variegated, but it remarked that they lose their brightness on being exposed to the external air, and then assume a fainter and less striking appearance. In bringing the hydrogen gas into contact with the atmospheric air the artist has made provision either for augmenting or moderating its activity. The importance of this discovery is obvious. It may be turned to a variety of purposes, promoting at once the ends of convenience and oeconomy. It is calculated to extend to an almost inconceivable degree, the properties and powers of light, and to enjoy in the most important ules, those substances which in common cases pass off under the form of smoke, without accomplishing any object of utility."

This discovery, thus advantageously mentioned, is now much talked of and visited at Paris. The engine is called a Pherpolaxope from a composition of the Greek words denoting heat and light.

Whitehall, Dec. 5.

The King has been pleased to grant the dignity of a Baron of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland to the Right Hon. George Keith, (Baron Keith of that part of the said United Kingdom called Ireland,) Knight of the Most Honorable Order of the Bath and Admiral of the Blue Squadron of His Majesty's Fleet, and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten, by the name, style, and title of Baron Keith, of Stonehaven-Marischal, in the County of Kincardine.

The King has also been pleased to grant the dignity of a Baron of the said United Kingdom to Lieut. Gen. Sir John Hely-Hutchinson, Knight of the Most Honorable Order of the Bath, and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten, by the name, style, and title of Lord Hutchinson, Baron of Alexandria, and of Knocklofty, in the County of Tipperary.

The King has been pleased to appoint John Halkett, Esq. to be Captain General and Governor in Chief of the Bahama Islands in America.

PARIS, November 10.

The fete of yesterday comprised the character of the splendid festivals which have been celebrated in France since the 18th Brumaire, in the eighth year of the Republic. The order which universally prevailed gave the most striking proof of the high confidence which citizens now repose in each other. It at the same time demonstrated with what contentment they live under laws which while they humiliate none, are at the same time hostile to all exclusive privileges, and disposed them to look forward without dismay to futurity, as well as to look back to the glory of those ten years of triumph to which the French people owed their independence, their institutions, their repose, their tranquility, and their festivals.

The days which preceded the 18th Brumaire foreboded a temperature but little suited to the pleasures of a national solemnity. The morning of the 18th Brumaire was tempestuous, but at the moment when the preparations for the Fete were finished, the sky brightened, the sun dispelled the clouds of the preceding nights, and the most beautiful evening gave new lustre to the splendid illuminations and the fire works, of a species the most brilliant which had ever been seen in France.

Considerations of precaution, as well as equality rendered it necessary to exclude all carriages from the scene of the fete after 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Sentiments of high respect, however, suggested that the carriage of Lord Cornwallis should not be included in this restriction. He therefore visited all the places destined for the celebration of the fete. In every quarter he saw order and civility preserved without the assistance of force to secure it. Every where his presence excited that attention on which does not originate from mere curiosity, while it is at the same time a testimony of high respect for the character and reputation of him to whom it is addressed.

Nov. 11. The diamond called the Regent, which was pawned during the Revolution, is again the possession of Government. The individuals in whose hands it was placed had made known their determination to sell it at a very small price, if the sum they had advanced for it was not refunded. This diamond, the most brilliant ever seen is to be placed henceforth as an ornament on the sword of the Chief Consul.

Nov. 26.

Of the surrender of Alexandria.

The Minister at War has published the proceedings of the Council at War convoqued by Gen. Menou, previous to the surrender of Alexandria. The Council assigned the following reasons for authorizing the commander in chief to propose terms of capitulation:

1. That the troops did not amount to one third of the force necessary for the defence of the entrenchments, forts and city of Alexandria. 2. That even this number is daily diminishing by encreased diseases. 3. That the quantity of corn in the granaries cannot subsist the troops and sick beyond the 23d September. 4. That the greater part of the other articles of provision are extremely scarce, and will be totally consumed before the 23d of September. 5. That horse flesh is the only kind of meat remaining for the troops. 6. That in consequence of the encrease of disease, the hospitals can no longer furnish to the patients even the mere necessaries of life. 7. That there is a total want of the aliments and medecines indispensibly necessary for patients afflicted with scorbutic complaints. 8. That the fresh water remaining in the cisterns of Alexandria, will last only 20 days. 9. That a supply cannot this year be obtained from the Nile in consequence of the English having cut the dyke of Lake Madie, and the canal which conveyed the fresh water into the cisterns being now filled with salt water. 10. That the situation of Alexandria has become extremely insalubrious from the quantity of water by which it is surrounded. 11. That there is reason to suppose that the plague will this year break out with consider-able violence. 12. That the number of troops in a state of activity, are extremely fatigued by continual service, and the actions which have taken place since the evacuation of Cairo. 13. That the allied powers have collected before the place nearly 25,000 men in English, Turks, Syrians, &c. 14. That the ports and roads of Alexandria are blockaded on the side of the Mediterranean by more than 40 vessels of war, of all sizes, 17 of which are within the passages of the old harbor. 15. That on the south side, upon the Lake Mareotis more than 120 armed boats strictly blockade the entrenchments and the city. 16 That to the east and west of Alexandria, two formidable camps of the enemy occupy ilies extending from the sea to Lake Mareotis. 17. That upon all occasions, when the French troops have had to give battle, they have been attacked in front by the enemy's land forces, and in flank and rear by an immense number of gun boats and bombketches, whose fire reached from Lake to Lake. 18. That the Fort of Marabout has been taken, from the most honorable defence, having been attacked with more than 60 pieces of artillery. 19. That the unexpected and extraordinary surrender of Cairo, has enabled the allied powers to act with all their united force against the city of Alexandria, with the addition also of the means ceded to them at Cairo by the French. 20. That no further supplies of provisions can be derived from the Arabs, all the channels of access being completely cut off. 21. That there no longer remains any hope of the arrival of succours from Europe, sufficient to compel the enemy to retire before the 23d of September, the period when the provisions shall have been totally consumed.

To this document is annexed the particular reason which actuated Gen. Menou. It is in the following terms:

"My individual opinion is, that the capitulation of the fortress of Cairo, which could not, and ought not to have been expected by the division of the army posted at Alexandria, has irrevocably determined the fall of Alexandria. In fact, Cairo could have held out two months and a half more than it did; and then Alexandria would have received supplies, the fortifications would have been completed, the enemy's army would have been destroyed by disease, and the French would have preserved Egypt."

From a Dominique paper of the 26th Nov.

ROSSEAU, (Dominique) Nov. 26,

It appears that M. Lacroffe's endeavor to procure a reconciliation with his opponents at Guadaloupe, have proved ineffectual. He has dispatched two of his Aides de Camp to France, by the way of England.

M. Lacroffe has been landed here from the Tamer, M. W. and will remain until the forces arrive. Orders are given to all the British cruizers to intercept all dispatches from France, & forward them to him immediately, he being the legal chief of Guadaloupe.

The Cork fleet is safely arrived at Fort Royal.

The Penfee French Frigate arrived here on Tuesday; she had fallen in with one of our cruizers of Marie Galante, who informed them of the then state of insurrection in the island of Guadaloupe, and that M. Lacroffe having been refused admittance there on his return in His Majesty's ship Tamer had arrived in this island, upon which the Penfee came in here, and anchored in Woodbridge's Bay, and it is supposed will remain until the French fleet & troops arrive.

Yesterday morning the Penfee saluted the British colours at Fort Young, which was returned.

In consequence of an application made by the Chief Consul to His Majesty, passes have been granted for an army of 45,000 men to proceed from Brest, escorted by ten sail of the line (French) to reduce St. Domingo to its former state of order. The same permission has been granted to an army of 12,000 men, under the command of General Macdonald, who are to be immediately embarked likewise at Brest, escorted by seven sail of the line, to take possession of Martinique and Guadaloupe.

The island of Madagascar has been fixed on by the Chief Consul, as the place to send all those infamous insurgents who dare violate the laws of the mother country.

NEW-YORK, Feb. 10.

Extract of a Letter from a respectable commercial House in London to another in this city, dated Dec. 4, 1801.

A Bill is now in its progress through Parliament, to permit the importation of provisions into this country duty free, until the 1st of January 1803. This Bill will receive the King's assent in a day or two. Our crop has certainly been abundant; but the old stock being small, we are of opinion considerable supplies will be wanted from abroad. Spain and Portugal are also in want. France may be able to feed herself, but has nothing to spare. The same may be said of Belgium. Holland is more short than usual. Supplies will be received from the Baltic and the Elbe, but short of last year.—Upon the whole we think there is a fair opening in Europe, for the surplus grain of America the ensuing year, and at prices that will pay the planter well, that is to say, Wheat, in our opinion, will not be under 56s. to 60s. per qr.; Fine Flour, 40s. per bbl.; Rice, 80s. per cwt. Cotton 18d. to 2s. Sea Island 2s. 6d. if clean; Tobacco and West India produce, at Peace prices.

Last evening arrived the ship Oliver Ellsworth, capt. White, in 46 days from Amsterdam—By her we have received Dutch Gazettes to the 6th Dec. —but their contents are unimportant. Capt. W. informs that he was on shore at Dover the 2d inst. and was assured that no intelligence had been received of the signing of the Definitive Treaty.

An article from Constantinople of the 26th Oct. mentions, that since the restitution of Egypt, the price of rice & coffee fell considerably. The administration of Egypt is henceforth no more to be confided to Beys, but to Pachas, whole authority would be much limited. The Pacha of Cairo was already appointed. Osman Effendi, and Chenite Effendi were charged with the new organization of the country. Lord Elgin the English Ambassador, was shortly to depart for Egypt in a frigate. Some attributed his voyage to political interests and some merely to a voyage of curiosity.—This article also mentions, that according to the latest news from Egypt, General Menou had not yet embarked with the 4,500 French troops that were to accompany him, Disease had retarded the embarkation.

An article from Brest mentions, that the squadron for St. Domingo, had made an attempt to fail the 30th of November, but were still detained by contrary winds.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, Mar. 6, 1802.

It affords us much pleaſure to ſtate to our Readers that the neceſſary repair of Yonge Street is likely to be ſoon effected; as the work, we underſtand, has been undertaken with the aſſurance of entering upon, and completing it without delay: and to every one, who reflects upon the preſent ſufferings of an induſtrious community on reſorting to a Market, it cannot but prove highly ſatisfactory to obſerve a work of ſuch convenience and utility ſpeedily accompliſhed.—That the meaſure of its future benefits muſt be extenſive indeed we may reaſonably expect; but whilſt we look forward with flattering expectations of theſe benefits, we cannot but appreciate the immediate advantage which is afforded to us in being relieved from the application of the Statute labour circuitous to bye paths and occaſional Roads and in being enabled to apply the ſame to the improvement of the Streets, and the nearer and more direct approaches to the Town.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF PEERS, Nov. 3.

THE PEACE.

About five o'clock Lord Pelham entered the house, when various Peers called for the order of the day.

After some debate on points of order the Ld. Chancellor put the question, "That the order of the day be now read;" which was carried in the affirmative.

The Preliminaries of Peace were then read at length by the clerk.

The Earl of Romney rose, and in a speech of some length in which he displayed much ability and information, delivered his sentiments on the very important subject before the house. He observed that the very extensive and protracted war, in which the country had lately been engaged, was, in his opinion, strictly a defensive war, and therefore just and necessary. It was forced upon us, and we were constrained to defend ourselves against the effects of those principles, which at the time of its commencement, and during a long period of its continuance, were gaining ground in every part of Europe. Circumstances however, in this respect, had since happily changed, and it was with pleasure he observed, that the present government of France was, judging from its actions, as inimical to those destructive principles as we were ourselves. It was idle to contend that that country was not during the late contest, under the necessity of submitting to heavy burthens; but, on the other hand, he had to congratulate the country on the success of its exertions. It may be said, that the power of France was now greater than before the war.—He would acknowledge it; but this he must observe, was not at the expence of Britain. The late war was as successful as any recorded in our history, not even excepting that conducted by the late Lord Chatham. In the last year of the late war, he put it to noble Lords, if our success did not exceed their most sanguine expectations. He alluded particularly to Egypt, and also entered into a detailed view of certain operations of the late war, to evince that wherever the British were equally matched to the French, they were uniformly victorious. The conduct of Ministers in holding forth the Olive branch in the moment of success, was an equally wise and just line of policy—they did well to conduct the burthens which the continuance of the war must impose on the great body of the people; and he praised the patience with which they had borne the various heavy imposts during the war, particularly the country gentlemen, whose patience and perseverance in their respects, he said were beyond commendation. At the same time he was far from admitting that the national resources were seriously diminished; on the contrary, those, joined to the brilliant success of our arms, would have enabled us, if necessary, to have continued the contest. In proof of this, his Lordship adverted to the great and increasing commercial prosperity of the country, and her unshaken financial credit. The question then fairly before their Lordships was, whether, under the present circumstances, they would wish to carry on the war, or accept of such preliminaries of peace as they had heard read? For his part he had no doubt of their being truly advantageous and honorable, and considering the uncertainty of war, and the increasing burthens of the country, ministers acted wisely, and were entitled to the thanks of the house for having procured such terms of peace. His Lordship entered into a detailed and comparative view of the objects and progress of former wars, particularly of the two preceding wars, and inferred that the present treaty of peace was, in every respect, as favourable to England as those treaties which had terminated either of the wars alluded to.

The principal objects for which the late war was undertaken, he continued, were atchieved, namely, the preservation of Religion, Laws and Constitution. He then adverted to some of the specific articles of the Preliminaries, and commented upon the great national advantages in the acquisition of the Islands of Ceylon and Trinidad. Those which we give up could not be retained only at an immense expence, and would afford no additional protection to our commerce. He adverted to some parts of the conduct of France, which shewed its sincerity with respect to the peace and influenced its moderation in not claiming any part of our vast acquisitions in India from the ultimate Hippon. To expatiate in detail upon these advantages, would fall to the lot of those who were better able to do justice to the subject—with respect to himself, he saw the great advantages likely to accrue to the country from the present treaty of peace; as such he could congratulate their Lordships and the country; and, without taking up more of their time, would move an address to his Majesty, on the occasion of his gracious communication of the Preliminaries of Peace: and expressive of their Lordships full approbation thereof, and of their high sense of his Majesty's justice and moderation, &c.

Having moved an Address to this effect, it was read in the usual way.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Friday, Nov. 20,

GUARANTEE OF THE TURKISH DOMINIONS.

Mr. Banks rose for the purpose of obtaining some information from his Majesty's Ministers, upon a subject which he considered to be of considerable importance. He observed, that by the fifth article of the Preliminary Treaty, this country stood engaged to guarantee the dominions of Turkey; at the same time, the House, in his opinion, was not sufficiently informed with respect to our relative situation with that country. The article in question seemed to refer to a guarantee of the dominions of Turkey by a Treaty, which he believed, had not been laid before the House. He was fully persuaded the Right Hon. Person who presided in his Majesty's Councils had no wish nor intention of refusing to the House the fullest information on that subject. He felt anxious that this country should, at the end of a war, be left free from engagements or embarrassments respecting other powers, as might eventually involve her in another war, under circumstances which might be injurious to its interests, or which might tempt her to the other alternative which he considered as still more injurious, of deviating from its honorable & uniform policy of maintaining its good faith towards other powers. To obtain, therefore, the wished for information, he should move "That an humble address be presented to his Majesty, that he would be graciously pleased to give orders, that there be laid before the house a copy of the Treaty entered into between his Majesty and the Sublime Porte, in the month of January, 1799."

Lord Hawkesbury said, he saw no objection that could be made against the production of this treaty; not indeed, was he aware, till what he had heard fall from the hon. gentleman, that the treaty in question had not been actually laid before Parliament. At any rate he would observe, that the article respecting Turkey, in the Preliminary treaty, did not impose upon us any additional engagement. The treaty of 1799 was soon after the victory of Lord Nelson, and pointed to a treaty of guarantee which had been concluded between Russia and the Sublime Porte; in the January following, the treaty was formed between this country and the Porte, and agreeably to the terms previously ratified between Russia and Turkey. The article in the Preliminary treaty could not be considered as a full guarantee of the integrity of the Turkish dominions under all circumstances; the only difference, as it appeared to him, between the two treaties was this, that by the preliminary articles of peace France became engaged as a party in the guarantee of the integrity of the Ottoman dominions.

Mr. Wilberforce did not like pledging the country to treaties of this kind offensive and defensive, without most maturely considering their extent and tendency. He supposed the case of a possible rupture between the Porte and Russia, in which, under the terms of the treaty, this country would be called on by France to interfere and quarrel with an Ally. Too much caution could not be exercised on a ground of this sort.

The motion was however put and agreed to.

LONDON, Dec. 1.

Paris papers to the 25th ult. are arrived. By these it appears, that the French Legislative Body opened their sitting on the 22d. At this meeting Thibaudeau presented a review of the state of the nation, of which the conclusion which is here subjoined, is by far the most interesting part.

"After the Peace of Luneville, France was enabled to fall with her whole weight on the kingdom of Naples, for having violated the treaties, and to make him repent the affronts which the French had experienced even in the port of Naples; but the government deemed itself revenged the instant it was capable of inflicting vengeance—It felt but the wish and the necessity of peace; and, in order to grant it, it only demanded the ports Otranto, necessary to its views on the east, since Malta was in the possession of the English.

"But the First Consul loved France. He wished for the Peace of Europe; he wished above all to establish the liberty of the seas. This great soul was forcible to the pacific sentiments manifested by the first Consul. It was afterwards sensible to our victories. Thence arose the first ties which attached him to the Republic.

"On a sudden, Russia, Denmark, Sweden and Prussia united. A coalition was formed to guarantee the liberty of the seas. Grand and vast operations were preparing; but Paul the first died suddenly.

"Bavaria took the first opportunity of resuming that connection by which she was united to France. This important ally, has for us, experienced great losses on the left Bank of the Rhine. It is both the interest and desire of France, that Bavaria shall obtain on the right bank a just and complete indemnity.

"Great dissensions have risen at ratisbon respecting the execution of the Treaty of Luneville, but these dissensions do not immediately relate to the Republic.—The peace of Luneville, concluded with the empire, and ratified by the Diet, has irrevocably fixed on that side all the interest of France. If the Republic still takes part in the deliberations of Ratisbon, she does so only as the guarantee of the stipulation contained in the 7th article of the treaty of Luneville, and for the purpose of maintaining a just equilibrium in Germany.

"Peace has been signed with Russia, and nothing shall again disturb the relations existing between those two great nations, which with so many motives to love, have come to be afraid of each other's; and which nature has placed at the two extremities of Europe, to be the counterpoises of the north & south.

"The Porte restored to her true interests, and her inclinations towards France has again found her most ancient and faithful ally.

"All the differences with the United States have been settled.

"Finally, preliminaries of peace with England have been ratified.

"It was natural to expect that the peace with England would be the effect of long negociations, supported by a system of war, which though tardy in its preparations, was infallible in its result.

"Portugal adhered to her, long subject to the influence and exclusive commerce of the English. Portugal was in fact nothing more than a province to Great Britain. It was there that Spain must have found a compensation for the restitution of the Isle of Trinidad. Her army advanced; a division of the troops of the Republic was encamped on the frontiers of Portugal to sustain its operations. But after the commencement of hostilities, and some slight skirmishes, the Spanish Ministry separately ratified the Treaty of Badajos. From that moment every one might have foreseen, with respect to Spain the fate of Trinidad; from that moment, in fact, England looked upon it as a possession which she had acquired; and ever after excluded from the negociation every thing which might suppose the possibility of a restitution.

"Before the ratification of the particular treaty between France and Portugal, the government made known to the Cabinet of Madrid this determination of England.

"England refused with the same inflexibility to accede to the restitution of Ceylon. But the Batavian Republic will find, in the numerous possessions which have been restored to it, the re-establishment of its commerce and its power.

"France has contended for the interests of the allies with as much energy as for her her own; she has gone so far as to sacrifice greater advantages which she would have been enabled to obtain for herself; but she was forced to stop at the point in which all negociation became impossible. Her allies exhausted, afforded to her no more resource to a continuance of the war, & the objects, the restitution of which was denied to them by England, did not counterbalance for them the hazards attendant upon a new campaign, and all the calamities with which it might afflict them.

"Thus, in all parts of the world, the republic has only friends or allies, and her commerce and her industry every where are returning to their accustomed channels.

"During the course of the negociation, the actual ministry of England have evinced a candid desire to put a period to the misfortunes of war; the English people have embraced peace with enthusiasm; the animosities are no more, and there will alone remain the emulation of great actions and useful enterprizes.

"The government had considered it as the highest point of its ambition to replace France in its national relations with all nations: its glory will consist in preparing a peace which will constitute its happiness as well as that of humanity.

"The First Consul,
Signed BONAPARTE.
"The Secretary of State, Signed H. B. MARET."

The other subjects of this date of the nation are, a declaration that all the Blacks in St. Domingo and Guadaloupe are to be declared free; the struggles for power in Guadaloupe, and the ineffectual attempts of the government to suppress the anarchy and despotism which reigned and continued to reign in that island. The mode of public instruction, proposed to be adopted is detailed. Thirty schools, at the expence of the Republic, are to be erected in the most populous towns, six thousand native pupils are to be distributed amongst these establishments. The means are also stated which have been resorted to for the more effectual suppression of the remnants of the bandits which had infested the roads & desolated the fields.

GENOA, OCT. 17.

Yesterday afternoon, arrived here an English ship, which saluted the city, after the manner usual among friendly nations, and was answered by the cannon of our ramparts. Notwithstanding the heavy showers of rain, a number of peopled flocked to the sea shore to convince themselves with their own eyes, that the English are no longer our enemies. Yesterday also arrived the English Consul, and occupied his former house.

HANOVER, OCT. 30.

Since the restoration of good understanding between England and Russia, it has been agreed that an Ambassador shall be sent to Petersburgh, specially, charged with the interests of Germany. Count Von Munster, appointed to this important office, has already set out for the place of his destination.

DUBLIN, Nov. 24.

So much has lately occurred respecting the isle of Trinidad, and its value to this country, that the following correct account may not be unacceptable, as it shews the importations of sugar at London therefrom in the following years—1795, 145 casks of sugar; 1796 317 do.—1797, 280 do.—1798, 880 do.—1799, 762 do.—This will shew its comparative value, when the importation of West India produce, in 1792 into London, amounted, to the gross value of 13,312,000l.

Nov. 24. A very sensible reduction has taken place in the price of foreign spirits.—Jamaica rum, Standard proof, may now be bought from 10s. 9d. to 215. the gallon, which had been some time since from 15s. to 16s.—Leeward Island rum, proof M. above, is now from 9s. 6d. to 10s. which had been 12s. 6d. to 14s.—French and Spanish Brandy have fallen in proportion, and so has Geneva, owing to the large supplies recently received.

QUEBEC, Feb. 11.

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor has been pleased to cause Letters Patent to issue under the great seal, appointing Herman Witsius Ryland, Esq. to be clerk of the crown in Chancery, in the room of the Hon. Hugh Finlay deceased; and Joseph Bouchette Esq. to be Deputy Surveyor General for the Province of Lower Canada.

MONTREAL, Feb. 15.

The Burlington mail has brought London letters (received via New York) of the 22d November, saying, "this morning we received the pleasing account of the arrival in the Channel of the Everetts, Quebec, Reliance and Maitland, merchantmen, from Quebec, they parted with the Eagle, and the Adeona, Capt. Featonby, in the Gulph, but they may be hourly looked for.

Political Essays on Popular Subjects.

ESSAY II.—On Liberty.—EXTRACT II.

ON the supposition of a compact between the people and their rulers, it is necessary that the terms, on each side, should be nicely balanced and defined, and that the independence, or savage power, to be surrendered by the one, should be accurately bartered for the advantages to be ensured by the other. Such an agreement is more connected with fiction than with reality: it is more suited to the poet than the historian. Where an actual compact, prescribing the mode of government, and the limits of obedience, can be proved to exist from the acknowledged principles of a constitution, and the express letter of its laws, it may, indeed, be considered as an admirable guardian of the freedom and happiness of a people; but in an abstract case, such as is here supposed, and such as is always assumed by metaphysical writers, the compact is not quoted from the preamble, nor the section of a statute; it is not brought forward in an embodied form: it is left to be inferred only from the suggestions of theory; and the terms of such an imaginary contract cannot possibly be understood and explained, without a reference to some common and predominant principle, such as the general good of the community. But where the laws are silent, opinions will vary respecting this general good and every one deprived of that liberty which he has been taught to consider as original in himself, will necessarily complain that, in his own case, the terms of the compact have not been fulfilled. If a difference of sentiment then arise between the people and the government, which is to decide, or who is to be the umpire between them?

Supposing, however, merely for argument's sake, we admit the existence of an implied compact in the infant state of a political society, such a covenant would be good and binding only between the parties who contracted at the time, that is, between the individuals who first formed the association, and the governors who were appointed over it. But as these individuals are perpetually changing in number, and varying in person, the necessity for new compacts will be perpetually arising; for, according to another doctrine of the speculative philosophers, the progenitors could claim no right to impose an obligation on their successors; and, even on the hypothesis that both parties continue the same, a disagreement may spring up among the people, a part may be persuaded that the original contract has been broken, while another part is satisfied that it is still preserved. On this supposition, shall the discontented portion be deprived of their liberties, merely because the rest of the people do not agree with them in sentiment; or, shall a part of the contracting body have a power of annulling the compact which was entered into by the whole?

Every question of this sort involves a multitude of absurdities, which are only to be removed with the abolition of that false doctrine, by which they are suggested.

As to the necessity of obtaining the consent of every individual to the institution and conduct of government, after the arguments which have just been adduced, it would be trifling words to prove that such a visionary scheme would be utterly impossible to be put in execution, if it were attempted, and that, if it were possible, it would be absolutely inconsistent with the very end and design of government.

But the tenets, thus artfully woven into a splendid system, are not merely absurd in theory, they are, likewise, false in fact. It is not to be denied, that many governments have been founded on erroneous principles; that many have been founded on one principle & conducted on another; but no institution, that deserved the name of a government, ever professed a perpetual subserviency to the will and opinion of the people. Look at the republics of Athens and Rome; those illustrious republics, which connected with eminence in arts, and success in arms: with the taste which adorns, and the courage which enables, humanity; and combined in a classical imagination with the remembrance of early years, and the first ideas of freedom and glory, daze the mind with a false splendour, which conceals their manifold deformities from the sight. Though the Athenian government may appear, on a casual view to acknowledge the sovereignty of the people, & widely to enlarge the bounds of freedom, it owed its origin, its continuance, and its success, to the laws and institutions of one superior genius. By these institutions, which were often found insufficient to restrain the turbulence of the people, the executive, the legislative, and the judicial powers were separated from each other. The citizens were divided into classes, and the right of government arose from the due execution of the important trusts which were vested in each department, by the wisdom of Solon.

In the Athenian republic no law could be submitted to the assembly of the people till it had first been received and approved by the Senate and lest, in the times of enthusiasm or alarm, the Senate and the people should be induced to pass imprudent laws, they were again referred to another tribunal for approbation or rejection*. Let it be remembered, likewise, to the glory of Pagan discernment, and the shame of Christian polity, that those profligate and abandoned characters, who are most indifferent about the fate of the common wealth; who are most ready to light the flame of civil discord, and to spread the pest of disaffection, were not allowed a voice in the councils of Athens. Whenever the Athenian government was swayed by the will of the people at large, it departed from the maxims of wisdom and the ordinances of Solon.

The republic of Rome, which once triumped over half the world, and presented to its view a bright assemblage of orators, poets, philosophers, and heroes; whose unequal success still excites a homage from the minds of men, as its undisputed power formerly excited obedience from their persons, may be thought perhaps to have afforded an example of unbridled freedom, and have given countenance to the dominion of the people: but, though the tyranny of its ancient Kings might have driven it into the opposite extreme, let us remember that the powers of the Roman government were afterwards divided between the Consuls, the Senate and the Assemblies of the people: and that its history contains one series of bickerings, contentions, and intestine wars, till the clamours of the plebeians had succeeded in increasing the number of their Tribunes, and a majority of these officers had become liable to the influence of the Patrician order.

Not to dwell longer on this examination, it is obvious that in every country which enjoys the benefit of a constitution, the right of government must arise from adherence to the forms of that constitution, and not from obedience to the will of the people.

The social compact, the next phantasm of metaphysical speculation, in the light in which it has been recently considered, never descended from the Limbo of Vanity, to assume a real shape, on this sublunary world. The brilliancy of the invention might have delighted the fancy of Gallic philosophists, and a conviction of its truth may have been imprinted on the minds of credulous infidels; but no body of people who retained possession of their senses, ever adopted, or could adopt, this extravagant system, as the basis of political association. It has floated only in the dream of the visionary, and the brain of a Rousseau.

Whether any government has been actually instituted, and constituted, with the consent of every individual, within the range of its dominion, is a question which the youngest Tyro in history or politics, may easily decide.

The foregoing examination has been undertaken to justify the terms first applied to these metaphysical doctrines, and to prove that they are absurd in principle, and false in fact. The arguments which have been adduced in the course of the enquiry have, at the same time, tended to demonstrate, that they are pernicious in consequence. While they lie dormant as theories, they inflate the mind with pride, and flatter the passions which require controul; they excite disaffection to established government, loosen the ties of allegiance, and degrade the virtues of loyalty and submission; and, when attempted to be reduced to practice, they break down the barriers of restraint, tear up the foundations of order and comfort, and involve the world in bloodshed, confusion and anarchy.

ESSAY III.—On Democracy.—EXTRACT I

FROM the consideration of Liberty, the transition is easy to the contemplation of that form of government by which many of its warmest votaries suppose it to be most effectually supported; and, though from the connection between the subjects, some arguments, applicable to the present, may have been foretalled in the course of the preceding Essay, yet ample room remains for the investigation of so fertile a theme, in the wide field of political enquiry.

Democracy has been, of late years, the favourite topic of many a speculative philosopher, and the inflating oracle of many an infidel enthusiast; and in every age, it has been employed as the stalking-horse of the demagogue, and the watch word of the rebel: it has been painted in all the glowing colors that vivid fancy and ardent admiration could throw over its features; and, to heighten its effect, all the evils which have arisen from other systems of Government have been selected and combined at its side, in the dark inside of invidious contrast: it has actually been extolled, not merely as preferable to every other kind of political institution but as the only institution which is founded in equity and truth. By the standard of Democracy have the various systems of government, existing in the world, been condemned or approved; & to its low level would the whole bull of infidel philosophists, and disaffected subjects, reduce the multiform constitutions by which mankind is controuled.

But, happily for the instruction of the world, though unfortunately for the people of one devoted country, Democracy has not rested in hypothesis alone: it has lately been emblazoned in characters of blood, with the grisly forms of murder and proscription for its bearings, and ruin and destruction for its motto. In this species of heraldic display, which has superseded every honorable distinction, it has forced itself on the attention of surrounding nations; and, while it presents to the eye an appearance so different from the flattering portrait of its fond admirers, it provokes an enquiry into its real nature, and its probable consequences.

Democracy may be defined, in briefness, the government of the people by the people, and, more diffusively, a government derived from their appointment, and subject to their controul. A direct Democracy supposes the whole body of a nation to be assembled for the purpose of deliberating upon, enacting, and executing laws. An indirect Democracy considers the wills of the inhabitants of a country as represented by delegates, who receive the instructions, and speak the sentiments of their electors. Both reject the wills of the people as the sovereign law of the state.

According to this definition, it shall be the object of the following Essay to prove, that both species, here enumerated, are founded on a false principle, that both are impracticable with a close adherence to that principle on which they profess to be founded; and that, if either could be carried into execution, it would be productive of the very evils which government is designed to prevent.

The false bias which can be conceived to sustain the cumbrous weight of Democracy, is the true or absurd opinion that the bulk of mankind are the best judges of their own happiness, and the best guardians of their own liberty. Supposing for a moment, that this notion were true, the obvious consequence of it would be an emancipation from all restraint, and not the establishment of any specific form of government. For if government be necessary at all, it must be necessary, because the major part of the human race require to be controuled. The first question, then, to be decided by the investigator of truth, relates to the propriety of government in general, but this can only be determined in the affirmative. There is no class of men, whatever their political sentiments may be that can pretend to deny its necessity. It is impossible to resist the united voice of nature, reason and religion. The enthusiastic philosophist has indeed, amused his roving fancy with systems of perfection for imperfect beings. He has been led by the spirit of delusion in the form of benevolence. He has pictured to himself the happiness of man, unfettered by tyrannic sway, and undisturbed by those evils which, in the real scenes of life, too generally press upon him. But even the enthusiast has not left him to himself. He has exerted all his powers of invention & arrangement, to devise schemes for his better government, and to enact laws for his direction, which should be founded on equity and wisdom; forgetful, in the heat of his employment, that such laws, if dictated by the purest of motives, would be adopted and obeyed only by characters like himself. Even the hot-brained zealots for liberty, who, with their pretended rights of men, overthrow the established power of their country, and abolished every principle of due subordination, still preached to their deluded followers the necessity of government, and gave to their foolish and impious systems the name of constitutions, though they deigned not to perform in practice to the rules which they imposed.

ADDRESS TO PEACE.

CELESTIAL Peace, from thy abode descend!
And all the habitable world befriend.
No more let nation, fill'd with vengeful ire,
'Gainst nation rise with ravaging desire;
Let troubled Discord haste with rapid flight,
To the dark regions of eternal night.
Celestial Peace, descend! diffuse thy sway
Far as the sun pours his refulgent ray.
Let war desert for ever his dire reign;
And cease to hover o'er th'enfranguin'd plain.
What blessing's do thy genial reign impart!
Endearing Love presides o'er every heart.
No widows their dear husband's deaths deplore,
None hear the drum or thund'ring cannon roar,
Science and Arts renew their honor'd reign;
While Commerce wings the bark o'er the wide main;
Safe thro' old Ocean's realms she rides along,
No foe prevents, no hostile pirates wrong.
The smiling fields with golden harvests glow:
And, grapes nectareous crown the mountain's brow;
The flow'ry meads their richest hues display;
While fruitful herbs o'er the gay surface play.
Around soft virtue and content appear,
And full horn'd Plenty crowns the smiling year.
O (spotless Peace! thou source of social bliss
Begin thy reign—O may it never cease.

The following whimsical account of England was given by Count Oxenstiern after his departure from London;

ENGLAND is really the Queen of the isles—the metropolis and arsenal of Neptune—it is the treasury of Europe, the kingdom of Bacchus, the school of Epicurus—the academy of Venus—the country of Mars—the recess of Minerva—the support of Holland—the scourge of France—the purgatory of those who are advocates for slavery—& the paradise of those who are lovers of liberty.

The true ambition of an honest mind.

Were I to describe the blessings I desire in life, I would be happy in a few but faithful friends. Might I chuse my talent, it should rather be good sense than learning. I would consult, in the choice of my house, convenience rather than state; and for my circumstances, desire a moderate but independent fortune. Business enough to secure me from idleness, and leisure, enough always to have an hour to spare, I would have no master, and I desire but few servants. I would not be led away by ambition, nor perplexed with disputes. I would enjoy the blessings of health, but would rather be beholden for it to a regular life, and an easy mind than the school of Hippocrates. As to my passions, since we cannot be wholly divested of them, I would hate only those whose manners and actions render them odious, and love only where I ought. Thus would I pass chearfully thro' that portion of my life which cannot last always, and with resignation wait for that which will last for ever. A PHILOSOPHER.

ROYAL MAGNANIMITY.

WHEN the late King of Prussia was Prince Royal, he attempted to escape from his father's dominions, but being apprehended, commissioners were appointed to try him, one of whom voted his decapitation. This man suffered to live unmolested, thirty years after his accession to the throne; a greatness of mind, similar to that of the Duke of Orleans, who, when asked, on his assuming the office of Regent of France, why he did not resent the behaviour of certain persons towards him when only Prince, answered that 'it would ill become the Regent of France to resent injuries done to the Duke of Orleans.' A fine example of self command, and well deserving the attention of Princes.

ANECDOTE OF WILLIAM RUFUS.

TWO monks applied to William Rufus, King of England, to purchase an Abbot's place; they both strove to outvie each other in the largeness of their offers. A third monk, as it happened, was present; who observing a strict silence, the king said to him, as if to encourage the best bidder—"And what wilt thou give for the place?" "Not a penny!" answered he; "for it is against my conscience." On which Rufus replied, "Then thou, of the three, best deservedst the preference, and thou shalt have it!" This circumstance is the more remarkable, as the King was not over and above tender in other matters.

THEATRICAL ANECDOTE.

WHEN Lee was manager at Edinburgh, he was determined to improve upon thunder, and so having procured a parcel of nine pound shot, they were put into a wheel barrow, to which he affixed an octagon wheel. This done, ridges were placed at the back of the stage, and one of the carpenters was ordered to trundle this wheel barrow so filled backwards and forwards over these ridges. The play was Lear, and really in the two first efforts the thunder had a good effect. At length, as the King was braving the "pelting of the pitiless storm," the thunderer's foot slipped, and down he came, wheel barrow and all. The stage being on a declivity, the balls made their way towards the orchestra, and meeting with but a feeble resistance from the scene, laid it flat upon it face. This storm was more difficult for Lear to stem than the one he had before complained of. The balls taking every direction, he was obliged to skip about to avoid them like the man who dances the egg hornpipe. The fiddlers, in alarm for their catgut, hurried out of the orchestra; and to crown this scene of glorious confusion, the sprawling thunderer lay prostrate in sight of the audience, like another Salmoneus.

LONDON, Dec. 12.

Yesterday a cabinet council was held at Lord Hawkesbury's office, on the dispatches received on Thursday last from Marquis Cornwallis at Amiens. Most of the foreign ministers attended, so that it is probable the deliberations related to their respective courts. The Portuguese minister was present, and this day his Excellency sets off for Amiens. It is supposed that the business of setting the boundaries of Guyenne is the object of his journey.

Private letters from Holland state, that the declared intention of the grand Council to open the Scheldt, and restore Antwerp to its former dignity, had produced a great sensation throughout the new Batavian Republic, that it was expected a considerable French force would receive orders to remain in the country some time longer.

The district staff appointments will cease on the 25th inst. Nineteen general officers and their staff will then be reduced.

Dec. 14. Dispatches were received on Saturday from Amiens and Paris, at Lord Hawkesbury's office. No particulars have transpired, except that at the former every thing appears to be going on in the most satisfactory manner.

Dec. 16. The King of Prussia has written a congratulatory letter to the King of Etruria, on his entering on his government.

The arrival of the stadtholder has produced a very great effect on his partisans in Holland. They begin to entertain the greatest hopes, and they already believe that that prince will soon again be their governor.—Every thing is at a stand at Ratisbon, and it is to Amiens that all look for the settlement of the great interests that remain to be arranged on the continent.

The legislative body at the Hague assembles every day, except Sunday and Monday, and commences its sittings according to the ancient custom with prayers.

The corps of Gen. Blucher continues quiet in its cantonments on the Ems, without taking possession of the bishopdick of Munster.

The Batavian Republic is making every effort with he chief consul to prevent the port of Antwerp from being made free.

Rear Admiral Totty failed on Sunday from Portsmouth, in the Saturn of 74 guns, for Martinique.

Seven sail of the line are ordered from the fleet at Cork for the West Indies. This makes an encrease to our naval force at Jamaica of twelve ships of the line, a greater force than ever was there in time of peace.

A circular letter has been sent by his Royal Highness the Commander in Chief to all commanding officers of cavalry & infantry throughout the kingdom, directing them to discharge all such men belonging to their corps as are above the age of 46, and all those labouring under ailments and infirmities.

Lord Elgin having sent from Constantinople to Athens several artists who caused diligent search to be made in the temple of Theseus, they were so fortunate as to find there all the bas reliefs which formerly ornamented the temple of Minerva. These ornaments, a great number of inscriptions, and all the urns capable of being transported, have been sent by the porte to Britain.

The Russian archbishop, Plato, who officiated at the coronation of the Emperor Alexander, is 105 years of age, & a man of distinguished talents. He has confecrated three sovereigns of Russia. His speech was remarkable for its firmness and good sense, and was circulated by the emperor with great profusion.

LONDON, Dec. 17—21.

AMONG the persons presented to their Majesties was Mr. Otto, Minister Plenipotentiary of the French republic, who obtained his first audience to deliver his credentials. He was introduced by Sir Clement Cotterel, master of the ceremonies.—The minister arrived at court in a yellow colored coach, with silver ornaments, and having on it the initial letters L. G. O.—He was habited in a coat of blue velvet and a satin veft, richly embroidered. His livery is blue, laced with gold, and the servants wear the national cockade in their hats. Mr. Otto, being indisposed, has not yet visited the court.

Policies are now open at 25 guineas to receive 100, if the definitive treaty be not signed before the 1st of January.

POETRY.

THE STORM.

ON the lone cliff, that hides its savage brow
Within the bosom of each threat'ning cloud,
I listen'd for the ship bell's sound,
The merry seaman's laugh, the labouring oar,
I look'd for vales, with blooming flowrets crown'd;
But all were fled. The wind blew cold and loud;
No footstep mark'd a wanderer on the shore,
The waves with anger rent the rock below.
Shivering I saw the tumbling bark a wreck,
Sink 'amidst the fury of the boiling waves,
Poor hapless sailors' cold untimely graves,
Their knell the sea bird's melancholy shriek.
Perhaps some female at this weary hour,
Chill'd by the grasp of fear, upbraids the wind,
And racks with busy thought the brooding mind,
As on the window beats the midnight show'r.
But half the world, unknown to thought or care,
Secure in softly domes lie bid asleep,
Deaf to the moanings of the troubled air,
Or shrieks of death that issue from the deep. ORLANDO.

"A person having gone to sea, his wife desires the prayers of the congregation."

She spelled and pointed it as follows:

"A person, having gone to see his wife, desires the prayers of the congregation."

The parson (who had not examined the contents of the paper) gave it out accordingly.

ums and Bounties to the deserving Cultivators or Exporters of Hemp, according to the true intent and meaning of the said Resolution, not doubting but that the encouragement thus liberally held forth by His Majesty's Faithful Commons, will effectually promote a measure so agreeable to the wishes of the Mother Country, and so highly conducive to the prosperity of this Province.

P. HUNTER, Lt. Govr.

By His Excellency's Command,

JAMES GREEN, Secretary.

LONDON, Dec. 20.

Such is the favorable state of the negociation at Amiens, that Lord Whitworth, whose departure for Paris, in quality of ambassador, it was expected would have been delayed till the signing of the definitive peace, is immediately to proceed thither. The Dutchess of Dorset accompanied his Lordship, and we understand they will leave town this day or to-morrow.

It has been rumored for some days past, that Spain had refused to surrender the island of Trinidad, and that orders had in consequence been given by our government for the renewed blockade of her ports. We believe the reports to be unfounded, although we are unable to account for the extraordinary supineness of the cabinet of Madrid in the important affair of peace. It is a fact, that although application has been made by our government for passes to secure our merchant vessels from any molestation from the cruisers of Spain, which, in the event of a meeting, might have resulted from the latter being ignorant of the preliminaries of peace being signed, yet none have been received, and no British vessel with the exception of cartels, has yet sailed from this country for any of the ports of Spain. There are, indeed, three ships at Portsmouth and several in the river, about to proceed to Alicant, Barcelona, &c. but whether they will continue to wait for passes or sail on the faith of the existing treaty, is not, we believe, decided; although the Portsmouth ships were expected to have sailed some days since.

Dec. 24.—It is highly probable that government is in expectation of the immediate conclusion of the definitive treaty of peace; and to this hope may be attributed the unexpected adjournment of both houses of parliament, to next Monday, instead of the intended adjournment for the recess.—Mr. Addington's declaration, in answer to the question put to him by Mr. Windham, that the treaty of Badajos is to be considered as the basis of the negociations between Great Britain and France as far as they respect Portugal, while that of Madrid is to be annulled, must prove a subject of great satisfaction to the country. It evinces the peculiar attention given by ministers to the interests of our most faithful ally, as well as their firmness in filling the encroachments aimed at by France upon the Portuguese territory in Guiana, although the measure had been ratified by the tribunate and legislative body.

Marriage in France is to be thus celebrated: it is to take place at the house of one of the parties after the bans have been published twice at the interval of ten days. The marriage cannot be celebrated till three days after the second publication. The celebration of this marriage is to be by the civil officer.

Dec. 29.—A morning paper contains the following article:—"Private advices from Paris relate an anecdote of so extraordinary a nature, that we cannot venture to give credit to the relation, although the circumstance is mentioned in letters from persons of the greatest respectability. The following is said to have lately occurred: Talleyrand waited on the First Consul, and acquainted him that he had reason to believe the consular majesty might obtain an Infanta of Spain in marriage, provided he would divorce himself from his present wife, who is confined while the lived with Barras, is well known.—Bonaparte heard the proposition of his minister, but was cautious of taking any step in it until he had sounded Fouche, the minister of the police, who knows more of the state of the different factions and the intrigues of the capital, than any person in France.

Fouche, who is a determined enemy to Talleyrand, availed himself of this opportunity, (as the story goes) of endeavoring to compass the ruin of the ex-bishop, and conceived that no method could be so certain as to inform madame Bonaparte of the propofal that had been made to her husband. It is not difficult to foresee the denouement. The enraged lady sent her mandat for the secretary of state to appear before her, and made it very plain to him, that she had no intention of being divorced any more. Talleyrand it is said, is become fully sensible of the danger of interfering between a man and his lawful wife, and the Infanta is to get herself another husband.

Dec. 28.—The power that the lords of the admiralty have given to commandess in chief, is—that each of them shall try, condemn and hang any person found guilty of mutiny without consulting in any respect the admiralty Board.

Dec. 30.—We last night received Paris papers to the 26th inst. The Moniteur contains the official notice of the sailing not only of the fleet from Brest, but also of the squadrons at L'Orient and Rochefort. The total force to which those squadrons amount, is 23 ships, of which 5 are Spanish. They carry in the transports that accompany them, 25,000 men. It does not appear however, that the French government consider the object of the expedition as likely to be soon accomplished, as they have established regular mails to St. Domingo, and means of communication with that colony.

FRANCE.

FROM PARIS PAPERS.

LYONS, Dec. 19.

We expect here in a few days the Minister of Foreign Relations, for whom hotels have been prepared in the place Bellecour. We do not yet know the precise period of the arrival of the First Consul; he will be lodged in the ci-devant Hotel-de-Ville, which has been furnished with peculiar elegance and taste.

The Consulta will hold their assemblies in the ci-devant church of the Grand College. Several Prefects, it is said, will repair to our Commune, when the First Consul arrives.

December 22.

We have in this city at present 475 Cisalpine Deputies, and 20 Prefects. The chief of the French government is expected here with that eagerness inspired by his wisdom, his victories, the peace he has conquered, and his splendid fame.

The Hotel de Ville, one of the most beautiful edifices in Europe, by the majesty of its facade, the beauty of its vestibule, its staircase, the elegance of its court, and the extent of its hall, has been distinguished by the name of the Palace of Government. The useful and speedy repairs lately given to it render it worthy of that name.

All the windows of the facade have been newly painted; the principal gate which is well sculptured, has been repaired with great art; a bronze colour thrown over its surface conceals the fragments added to the old sculpture. In this state it may vie in magnificence with the celebrated gates of the Mosque of St. Sophia at Constantinople.

The vestibule has been whitened, its splendour shews to advantage the beautiful groupes in bronze of the Rhone and the Soane, made by Couston, and which are seen at the two ends. This vestibule contains also the celebrated bronze tables found at St. Sebastian, on which were sculptured by the order of Claudius, the beautiful speech delivered by that Emperor in the Senate of Rome, in order to obtain for the Lyonese the name and privileges of Roman Citizens.

In the court of the hotel several new flag stones have been substituted for those which were broken, and which threatened the safety of the citizens. The four statues of the fountain, which were terribly mutilated, have been prudently repaired, and in such a manner as not to leave any appearance of the dismal state in which they were.

The staircase is in good order, shining with marble, and the paintings with which it is decorated. The latter have been cleaned and new varnished; having long been neglected, the shades and outlines were no longer distinguishable, during thirty years, they waited for some friendly hand to give them back life and colour, and which should restore to their author, Thomas Blanchet, the celebrity he enjoyed.

It is the grand hall, however, which has experienced the most rapid metamorphoses. One could not behold without terror the devastations occasioned in it by the ravages of war and popular phrenzy. In a few days the arched roof was repaired; all the walls have been wainscoted, sculptured, and gilt ornaments have freed it from its too great uniformity; mirrors, gerandoles, and lustres have been placed in it; and the view of the whole invites to mirth, pleasure and happiness.

The celerity of those repairs and the manner in which they have been executed, do honor to the architect of the Prefecture.

Thus the desire of receiving a great man has already given new life to this city: the inhabitants have done in a few hours what might not have been undertaken in the course of half a century; and the hope alone of seeing Bonaparte has already been to them beneficial.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 12.

A forced loan of 3 per cent. has been opened for the use of this city, to which all persons who possess property to the amount of above 2,000 florins, or an income of above 600, must contribute in the proportion of three per cent.

BRUSSELS, Dec. 18.

Letters from Holland state, that the Dutch squadron in the Texel is going to sail for Batavia. It carries with it several persons appointed to situations in the Dutch colonies in the East, troops, artillery, ammunition, and every article which could not be sent during the war.

Dec. 19.

The Dutch squadron sailed, we believe, the day before yesterday, to join the Brest fleet. The Dutch squadron in the Texel for Batavia, is ordered to sail the first fair wind.

TRENT, Nov. 7.

From Italy we receive the news of the most deplorable disasters, occasioned by the rain, in the countries bordering on the Po, the Tesin, the Adda, the Oglio, the Sambro, and the Seveso.—Several rivers overflowing their banks, become united in one; bridges broken, men, houses, trees, mills, carried away by the torrent, villages submerged, mountains burst, earthquakes, which encrease the terrors of an inundation that has not yet ceased; such are the details which have reached us from the above named places.

MILAN, Nov. 12.

It is now nine days since the sky, covered with black clouds, has threatened us with torrents of rain unexampled in these countries. Already are the bridges of Pavia, Lodi, and Casilino carried away, and the wretched passengers who were passing them, overwhelmed in their fall. We dread to learn the situation of Ferrara and Ostalmaggiore, where great devastations are expected to have been suffered. News not less afflicting is expected from Como, on account of the Lake which is close to its walls. Thus, as it is to be supposed, the couriers from France, Germany and Switzerland, are not arrived.—Those from France are three days behind.

MADRID, Nov. 28.

The terrible storm which began here on Saturday evening, continued with most unusual violence, till yesterday morning, that is six days and six nights, which did incredible damage on our coasts. We yesterday received accounts that, from the Vlie to Goree, 53 ships of different nations were wrecked. The lower part of Amsterdam is laid under water. At Haerlem great damage has been done by the sea overflowing the Sloper-dyke.

Yesterday, were appointed the members of the Syndical, which, like the Senate in France, is charged to watch over the observance of the constitution. Citizen Hoop, of Amsterdam, member of the court of justice of Holland, the Ex-Representative, Bicker, of Haerlem, and citizen Vatebender, of Anheim, are nominated.

VIENNA, Nov. 25.

The new constitution of the Cisalpine Republic is formed on the model of that of France; but with the difference, that instead of a First Consul, there will be a President for 20 years; to which eminent dignity, it is said Lucien Bonaparte will be appointed.

RUSSIA.

According to an enumeration lately made, the Russian empire contains 35 millions people; one third of which are serfs (peasants saleable as Virginia negroes.) The extent of this empire is 325,000 square leagues. It is situated between 40 and 203 deg. long. from Greenwich, and 50 and 17 deg. lat.—Its greatest length, taken from the Western frontiers of the new Polish-poffeffions to the ports of St. Peter and St. Paul in the East, is 900 German miles.

DREADFUL INUNDATION.

Several districts in the south eastern parts of France, and in the north of Italy, have been entirely inundated, by the overflowings of the river, occasioned by incessant rains. From the town of Arles in the department of the mouths of the Rhone, a letter of the 15th says, "that on the 9th Nov. an inundation took place, the like of which has not surely been seen since the deluge. The damage it has done is incalculable—the rain continued to fall in torrents, and was accompanied the whole of the day before yesterday with the loudest thunder. It seems as if the cataracts of heaven and earth would overwhelm us. From the tops of our houses we see nothing but a roaring sea and wrecks of buildings, and cattle paffing every moment in dreadful confusion. All our cattle, our seed, and the produce of our last harvest, are destroyed. Our moles and our causeways (those immense works which our forefathers had built at great expence, to defend the soil and ensure our harvests) are already destroyed.

The rise of the water has been so great that it has surpassed by 4 feet the dreadful inundation of 1755.—The aqueduct of Caponbe, erected 26 feet above the level of the earth, is only a feet higher than the waters. One half of the city is under water; several houses have fallen and have buried under them merchandize, furniture, provisions and every thing that the violence or suddenness of the inundation did not permit us to snatch from their fury.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 7.

In the Bay of Bengal, the American ship Horace, Captain Beckford, saw a brig that chaled him, white decks were full of men, and whom he supposes to be a cruizer.

The brig came nearly within half a then hauled his wind to the eastward, and was soon out of sight.

We understand that a very considerable Bridge now building at Burdwan, has lately been opened for the accommodation of foot passengers. The Bridge consists of five arches, and is altogether nearly 400 feet long, it is, we believe, the greatest work of the kind within the provinces of Bengal, and promises to be of great utility to the inhabitants of the very populous and flourishing district in which it is erected.

On the 16th of last month, the Rt. Hon. the Governor of Madras, attended by His Excellency the Commander in Chief, the Members of Council, and the gentlemen of the Civil, Naval and Military services, delivered to his highness the Nabob Azeem ul Dowlah at Ghepink Palace, the ratified treaty received from His Excellency the most Noble the Governor General in Council, for settling the succession to the Soubadery of Arcot, and for vesting the entire civil and military government of the Carnatic in the Honorable Company.

On the delivery of the treaty to His Highness, royal salutes were fired from the garrison of Fort St. George, from the shipping in the roads, and vollies of musquetry by the troops under arms, and on the 18th at noon, his Highness paid his first visit to the Right Honorable the Governor, at the Government House in the fort.

The troops were formed into a street for the reception of His Highness, and the salute of 19 guns was fired on his entrance into, and departure from the garrison.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.

Mr. Otto, Minister Plenipotentiary of the French Republic, was introduced to his Britannic Majesty, the 16th of December.

Feb. 25.

The French expedition to St. Domingo, at present, we believe, engages the principle part of the attention of the consular government and of the British government. No permission has been given by England for its sailing; but notwithstanding it is daily expected to put to sea.—To the mean time Admiral Mitchell is near Cork, with a strong squadron having instructions to follow the French fleet, for which purpose vessels are stationed to give him the earliest advice. He is to keep sight of the French expedition all the way to St. Domingo, and to act as a fleet of observation, guarding against any similar design on the British colonies, from which the French are not entirely free in the minds of some persons. The marine force of Britain in the West-Indies, who, during the last years of peace, be more than double what it has been during the war; and the military force from being withdrawn, will be augmented.—Lond. Paper, Dec. 15.

New York, March 6.

Capt. Dederet of the schooner Susan, in 22 days from Aux Cayes, informs, that the French troops had effected a landing in 18 different parts of the Island of St. Domingo, and that the blacks had burnt the town of Leogane, and proceeded to massacre the white people in the shocking manner. The troops destined for aux Cayes had not arrived when our informant sailed, but were momently expected. The inhabitants were flying in all directions, and the town exhibited a picture of the utmost distress.

At a late hour last evening, arrived here in 54 days from Liverpool, the British barque Albion.—She sailed Jan. 10, and brings London papers to the 5th; but they contain nothing of moment.—The Morning Chronicle of the 5th says,—

"We have received Paris papers to the 30th ult. They contain nothing of importance. We cannot find, from any intimation in them, that Bonaparte has quitted Paris. As to the negociations at Amiens, the papers know nothing of the matter.

"The Paris papers intimate, that the St. Domingo fleet has not yet returned. The sailing of the different squadrons from Holland is mentioned; and the sailing of the St. Domingo fleet must have been permitted by our government."

A passenger on b[illegible] the William & Margaret from Havre de Grace, informs that the definitive treaty was not signed the 8th January, on account of the Spanish Consul's refusing to give up the Isle of Trinidad.

A letter from Canton to a gentleman in Providence, received by the Lovely Lass arrived at Philadelphia mentions, that in September last, the Chinese fea was visited by a tuffoon, which occasioned the loss of many junks and fishing boats; the severity of the gale produced an inundation of the low lands, and it was computed that 2000 natives had perished on shore, 8000 at sea.

March 10. A gentleman passenger in the ship Experiment from St. Croix, arrived yesterday, morning, informs, that on the 13th of February the Danish Frigate Iris, Capt. Brown, arrived at St. Croix, with Gen. Walterdorff, appointed to the command of all the Danish West India Islands. The English troops had orders to evacuate on the 20th, at which time the Genl. was to take possession.

POETRY.

SENTIMENTAL LINES.

IF life be vain, on what shall man depend?
Depend on VIRTUE. Virtue is a rock
Which stands for ever; braves the frowning flood,
And rears its awful brow direct to Heaven.
Though Virtue fear not from the grave, she gives
Her Votaries to the stars; she plucks the sting
From the grim King of terrors; smooths the bed
Of Anguish; and bids Death, tho' dreadful, smile.
Death smiles on Virtue; and his visage, black
Yet comely seems. A Christian scorns the bounds
Where limited Creation said to Time
"Here I have end." Rapt'rous, he looks beyond
O'er time or space; he triumphs o'er decay;
And fills Eternity: the next to GOD.

ANECDOTES.

AN English gentleman travelling through France at the commencement of the late disturbances, observed to a Parisian, "that he thought the people of France were something similar to mad dogs in England, as it was but to give them a bad name, and they were instantly hung up."—"Ah, ver true," returned the Frenchman, "it is better be von dog in England, than von gentleman in Paris."

A man, being at confession, accused himself of various sins, and among other things said, that he had just given his wife a sound drubbing. "Why did you do that, my son?" said the father confessor. "I never go to confession," replied the penitent, "but I do the same thing; and if I omitted it, my confession would be of little consequence. In compliance with the orders of our holy mother church, I confess once a year; and as my memory is very defective, I should never recollect any thing I had done, unless I beat my wife, who is then sure to remind me of all the sins I have committed in the whole course of my life."

COMMERCIAL.

From LONDON, December 14.

"AT the council held at the Queen's house on Saturday, his Majesty has been pleased to grant the liberty "to import, during the space of six months, into any port or place of Great Britain, in any British ship or vessel belonging to any person of any kingdom or state in amity with his Majesty, and navigated in any manner whatever without payment of any duty wharfoever, any beans, called Kidney or French beans, tares, lentils, calnvances, and all other sorts of pulse; and also bulls, cows, oxen, calves, sheep, lambs, and swine; beef, pork, mutton, veal, and lamb, whether salted or otherwise; bacon, hams, tongues, butter, cheese, potatoes, rice, sago, sago powder, tapioca, vermicelli, millet seed, poultry, fowls, eggs, game and sour crout: provided that a due entry should be made of all such articles that should be so imported, with the proper officer of the customs at the port where the same should be imported, under certain penalties and forfeitures."

"His Majesty has also been pleased to continue for six months the prohibition against the exportation of butchers meat of all descriptions, beans, butter, onions, and pulse of any sort, excepting to Ireland; and to permit the free importation of foreign corn for a like period of six months."

"Whenever the free intercourse between Great Britain and foreign countries becomes authorized, we have no doubt but provision vessels from France, Flanders and Holland will flock to our ports."

The produce of the post office, in Great Britain, in the year 1761, was only £36,400. In 1781, it was £142,400—and on the 1st of January, 1801, it was no less than £716,000.—Making an increase in forty years, of £679,600 sterling.

LONDON, Jan. 1.

A dispatch from the President of the Hon. East India Company at Amboyna dated the 6th July 1801, of which the following is an extract, has been received by the Court of Directors of the East India Company, and communicated to the Rt. Hon. Lord Hobart, one of His Majesty's principal Secretaries of State.

"I do myself the honor of congratulating your lordship in council, on the important event of the surrender of Ternatte to the British arms, which was delivered over by capitulation to Col. Burr, on the 24th ult.

"The Dutch government made a most resolute resistance, having defended the place with uncommon firmness for 52 days, though I am sorry to add, at the expence of the poor inhabitants, who perished by famine, from ten to 20 a day, from our strong blockade by sea and land. During this excellent disposition of our military and marine forces, the latter under the command of that gallant officer capt. Hugues, his vigilance, which certainly contributed in a high degree, to the ultimate success of the enterprise. The value of the captured property taken by the squadron amounts to a lack and 50,000 dollars.

"The difficulties the Hon. Company's forces by sea and land had to encounter on this service, and the spirit and intrepidity which they manifested during a siege of nearly two months, do them infinite credit, and have seldom or ever been exceeded in this part of the globe. The accounts we have received of the strength of Fort Orange and its numerous detatched batteries, proved exceedingly erroneous, inso-much that Col. Burr declares the place to be extremely strong by nature, and most excellently improved by art, with a powerful garrison, and to well provided with arms and ammunition, as to throw difficulties in the way of our force which were as distressing as unexpected; they, however, kept their ground with so much bravery and resolution, as to compel the enemy to surrender their different strong holds, one after another, until the principal fort and town were so completely blockaded both by sea and land, and so reduced by famine, as to make them use their conditions, which I understand are very satisfactory.

I am happy to inform your Lordship in Council, that, arduous as this service was, and much as our forces were exposed to the repeated attacks of the enemy, the loss of the killed and wounded of the troops does not exceed nine or ten; that of the marine does not exceed twelve seamen.

January 19.

Yesterday the two Houses of Parliament met, pursuant to adjournment.

From Lord Hawkesbury's explanation in reply to Mr. Elliott, it appears, that the fleet which failed from Brest to the West Indies, did not put to sea without previous explanations given to government, of the necessity for sending out so large a force. The noble Lord at the same time gave it to be understood, that government had not been unmindful of sending out such a fleet of observation as effectually to protect our colonies, even in the event of the French pursuing insidious objects.

The difficulties which occasioned the rupture in the progress of the Commissioners of this country and the United States of America, appointed to decide on the respective claims made by the individuals of the two countries, are happily removed.

The government of the United States have agreed to pay a specific sum to the British government, which we understand to be 200,000l. which is to satisfy all the old long-pending claims by British subjects on the individuals of that country. British claimants have now, therefore, to apply for restitution to their own government. The American claimants, also, for the captures by British cruizers are, by the present adjustment, allowed to proceed as provided by the last Commercial Treaty between the two countries, and justice will therefore be rendered them, on duly substantiating their losses.

The demands made by the British subjects on the United States was above a million sterling. As the government is now released by paying only two hundred thousand pounds, it is conceived that the bargain is very favourable to America.

PARIS, Jan. 21.

"They write from Amiens, under date of the 16th inst. that Lord Pooone son of Marquis Cornwallis, is expected to return from London, where it is said he has carried the projet of the Definitive Treaty.

"Many people are extremely impatient for the signing of the Definitive Treaty; and yesterday a report was in circulation that it had received the formal ratification of the King, and has been carried to France to receive that of the First Consul. They report also, that Lord Hervey, secretary of Lord Hawkesbury, was going to Amiens, charged with important explanations on several points which had occasioned delay in the progress of the negociation. We hope his powers will be sufficiently extensive for settling all differences and bringing this important business to a speedy conclusion.

"According to letters from Cadiz, it appears that Admiral Linois has received orders to sail for the West Indies with the squadron under his command, to co-operate with the expedition to St. Domingo."

From late Gibraltar Papers,
Received by the Roebuck, arrived on Saturday last.

GIBRALTAR, Dec. 25.

The following statement of an unpleasant circumstance which lately occurred in Egypt, we have received by H. M. S. Ajax; but hope that the extraordinary and unexpected step of the Captain Pacha, said to be in consequence of orders from the Grand Vizier, (which will strike every English reader with horror) has not been sanctioned by the Porte.

Message of the Mamelule Chiefs.

The 22d day of Oct. 1801, the day the Beys of the Mamelukes had fixed on to pay a visit to Lord Cavan, and Sir Richard Bickerton, the Beys waited on the Captain Pacha at his tent, about 10 or 11 o'clock. They were received with every mark of attention; and having told his Highness of their intended visit to the General and Admiral, he begged them to take some refreshment, and added that he would afterwards accompany them; and, if the Beys had no objection, they would go in a boat by the Lake Mareotis, and land near Pompey's Pillar. This was agreed on, and they embarked in three different boats. The Pacha was in one of the boats, with the three chief Beys, and, after rowing a little way along shore, a Turk came to the beach, with a bundle of papers, and hailed the Pacha, informing him, that he had dispatches from Constantinople. The Captain Pacha, made this an excuse for quitting the boat, and he left the Beys to go to Alexandria.

The account given by the Turks relates, that the Chouse in the boats, told the Beys he was ordered to the Sultan Selim; and the Mamelukes on hearing it, first made the attack.

The Mamelukes say the first alarm they had was a discharge of musquetry from an armed galley into the three sheets of the boats. The truth of either story is not certain; however the event has proved fatal to five Mamelukes Chiefs since mentioned:

Osman Bey Tambourgi; Osman Bey Alfaki; Mahomet Bey, picked up on the Lake 24th Oct.; Mourad Bey; Ibrahim Kiahef.

All the others were wounded and secured; Osman Bey Bedlet, was very severely wounded.

The Captain Pacha communicated to General Hutchinson the steps he had taken; and the General immediately placed a brigade of troops round the Pacha's tent; and gave him till eight o'clock the next morning to restore the Beys he had seized. The Captain Pacha shewed marks of grief at what had been done, but declared the measures to be in obedience to the orders of the Grand Vizier.—General Hutchinson was determined to protect the Mamelukes.

23d Oct. 1801. The surviving Beys, and three of the five who were murdered, viz.

Osman Bey Tambourgi, Osman Bey Alafki, Ibrahim Kiahef,—were restored to General Hutchinson, the two others had been thrown overboard. This being done, the guard was taken from the Pacha's tent, the bodies of the deceased were interred near the Grand Mosque, in Alexandria, under a fire of minute guns from Fort Creton, and Caistelli; and a salute of 17 guns, and three vollies of musquetry, were fired over the grave, with other military honors, and marks of respect to their rank. The night of the 22d, seven Mameluke officers, who had come into Alexandria by land, to meet the Beys, took refuge on board the Madras; fearing the cruelty of the Turks would not be satisfied with the blood of their chiefs, but that they would seek to assassinate their followers.

The Pacha took the horses of a small party of Mamelukes, but they were restored.

January 22.

Copy of a letter from his Swedish Majesty's Charge d'Affairs at Madrid, to the Swedish Agent of this place—received the 18th inst.

MADRID, Jan. 2.

Having been officially informed that his Majesty's ships, actually in the Mediterranean, are shortly going to blockade the port of Tripoli; I have to request, that you will make public the disposition in the ports within your district, with the view of applying navigators of the risque to which they expose themselves, of being detained and considered as good prizes, especially, if after being amicably warned to keep off they should still persist in attempting to enter the aforesaid port, already blockaded by the brigates of the United States of America, which, in the present case, are acting in concert with those of his Swedish Majesty.

I have the honor to be, &c.

Letters from Spain announce, that the French and Spanish combined fleet had been dispersed by a strong gale of wind, off Cape Finisterre, and that some of the ships have got into Ferrol, others into Lisbon, and a third division into Cadiz. Particular mention is made of the arrival of the French ship of war Duguesse, in the last harbour. She is armed en flute, and had 1200 troops on board; but this number is now reduced to 1000, 200 sick having been landed and conveyed to the hospital there. She made 36 inches of water in an hour.

We learn from the same quarter, that four French line of battle ships, and a frigate, sailed from Cadiz, on the 13th inst. for St. Domingo, having 4,000 troops on board.

The day before yesterday, a squadron of the same number, into French, was perceived from the garrison, steering through the Straits to the westward. It was soon followed by a division of the squadron in our bay, consisting of his Majesty's ships Bolona, Zealous, Warrior, Defence and Lena.

NEW YORK, March 12.

We are informed that the French have returned Louisiana to the Spaniards, in lieu of which they are to receive the Spanish part of St. Domingo, and a considerable sum of money, which, it is said, is to be expended in the purchase of provisions for the fleet. Alexandria pap.

Extract of a letter from the Havanna, dated the 28th Feb.

"Yesterday the Spanish frigate Solidad, arrived here from St. Domingo; and 14 day four Spanish ships of the line and one French frigate. The news brought by them is, that Toussaint had burnt the Cape, and fled to the mountains, leaving behind him his military chest well filled. The commander in chief has offered a large reward for his head, and has issued a proclamation, that all those who do not lay down their arms, in three days, will be hanged when taken, without distinction; and also, that any vessel taken in the act of supplying the insurgents with arms, ammunition or provisions, will be treated as pirates."

March 16.

The definitive Treaty of Peace with England was not signed; though this "desirable event" as the Paris papers expects it, was hourly expected.—The British government had two frigates at Plymouth which were ordered to hold themselves in readiness to carry the intelligence as soon as it should be known to the Cape of Good Hope and the East and West Indies.

March 17.

Late advices from the West Indies.

A letter just received from Baltimore mentions the following:—"I have seen the captain of the French covette La Bayonaise, in 24 days from Cape Francois—he says, that Christophe, Bunnel and Dessalines, are arrested. St. Marc is safe, and Gonaives is in the power of the French. Jean Rabel is safe—many of the negroes taken, with arms, have been brought back to the Cape, put in chains, and employed in repairing the houses they had burnt, many of which are already rendered habitable—the government house is not much damaged, but all the other public offices are destroyed. Petit Anse is not burnt. A large convoy, for the use of the murdering negroes has been intercepted—more than two and a half millions, in specie, have been found in the treasury at Port-Republican—They had not yet liberated a great number of the white people of Cape Francois whom the negroes had carried off with them, but several came daily to the Cape from the woods where they had kept concealed."

An article from Constantineple of the 10th says—"Before leaving Egypt, the Captain Pacha made a present to Gen. Hutchinson, of a ring of great value. The English sea and land forces have all left that country. The rebellious Beys are entirely subdued.—The Grand Vizier has them in his power." By the new organization in Egypt the annual revenue of the Porte will acquire an increase of forty millions."

Extract of a letter from Bourdeaux, dated 31st December, 1801.

"From my ignorance of the language, I can make but few observations on this place or its inhabitants. The revolutionary ardor seems to be entirely gone, and the public mind is now much taken up with the extension of commerce, improvements in manufactures, the establishment of academies, schools, philosophical societies, canals, public roads, &c. &c. Politics and Religion are totally neglected, or excite but a feeble interest. There are many Catholic churches in this city; a large congregation of Protestants, & several synagogues. The Churches are thinly attended, only by the poor, illiterate and aged. The same may be said of synagogues. There are four Theatres, and I believe all very well attended—one or more of them is playing every night, Sundays not excepted. All kinds of business go on that day the same as others, tho' not quite so crowded. The public functionaries do no business on the decades, but those days are not otherwise distinguishable.

"The number of inhabitants in this city are said to be about 100,000; & it appears to me to occupy about the same extent as Philadelphia. The streets, with few exceptions, are narrow, dirty and ill paved; no side walks and the gutters in the middle."

From a late Irish Paper.

There was living in the year 1788, a Ruffian peasant of the name of Theodore Bubilly, 78 years of age, who had the very extraordinary number of 87 children, by two wives, viz. By his first wife, at 4 births, four each time; 7 births, 3 each time; and at 16 births, 2 each time; in all 69.—By his second wife, at 3 births, 3 each time; and at 6 births, 2 each time; in all, 18—Total 87.

POETRY.

AN UNFORTUNATE MOTHER,

TO HER INFANT AT THE BREAST.

UNHAPPY child of indiscretion!
Poor flumb'rer on a breast forlorn;
Pledge and reproof of past transgression,
Dear, tho' unwelcome to be born.

For thee, a fuppliant with addreffing
To heaven, thy mother fain would date;
But conficious bluthes ftain the bleffing,
And ftghs fuppreft my broken prayer.

But fpite of thee my mind unfhaken,
In parent duty turns to thee;
Tho' long repented, ne'er forfaken,
Thy days fhall lov'd and guarded be.

And, left the injurious world upbraid thee
For mine, or for thy father's ill,
A nameleft mother oft fhall aid thee,
A hand unfeen protect thee ftill.

And though, fo rank and place a ftranger,
Thy life an humble courfe muft run;
Soon fhalt thou learn to fly the danger,
Which I too late have learn'd to fhun.

Mean time in thefe fequefter'd vallies,
Here may'ft thou reft in fafe content,
For innocence may fmile at malice,
And thou, O! thou, art innocent.

Here to thine infant wants, are given
Shelter and reft, and pureft air,
And milk as pure—but, pitying heav'n!
My tears have dropt, and mingled there.

CONJUGAL AFFECTION.

A French gentleman being married a fecond time, was often lamenting his firft wife before his fecond, who one day faid to him, Monfieur, je vous aflure qu'il n'y a perfonne qui la regrette plus que moi. "I aflure you, Sir, no one regrets her more than I."

It was a memorable practice of Vefpafian, the Roman Emperor, throughout the courfe of his whole life, he called himfelf to an account every night for the actions of the paft day; and as often as he found he had flipped any one day without doing fome good, he entered upon his diary this memorandum, "Diem perdidi." "I have loft a day."

"We all complain of the fhortnefs of time (fays Seneca,) and yet have much more than we know what to do with. Our lives are either fpent in doing nothing at all, or in doing nothing to the purpofe, or in doing nothing that we ought to do. We are always complaining that our days are few, and acting as though there would be no end of them." In fhort, that noble philofopher has defcribed our inconfiftency with ourfelves in this particular, by all thofe various turns of expreffion and thought which are peculiar to his writings.

IT having been decided at a late aflizes, that the perfons who have hitherto deemed themfelves agents for the tranfporting of goods and peltries on the communication between the Lakes Ontario and Erie, including the ftorage at Kingfton, are in every refpect to be holden as carriers, and liable, as by the laws of England, to make good every fort of damage or lofs, whether by land or by water, except only fuch as fhall arife from the act of God or the King's enemies, and that this extends even to all damage or lofs that may arife from fire, except only fuch as may be caufed by lightning; the fubfcribers, fully convinced that this refponfibility (in this new country, and on this dangerous communication) was never contemplated by themfelves, or by their employers, do hereby give public notice, that they will not receive any goods or peltries, nor tranfport the fame, as carriers under the above mentioned law; and that they will not hold themfelves refponfible for any lofs or damage that may occur, except only fuch as fhall be caufed by fraud, or negligence in themfelves, their agents, or fervants.

JAMES GREEN, Secretary.

LONDON, January 14.

Three Dutch ships of the line, a frigate and a sloop of war, have arrived at Brest.—They were met by a dispatch boat, to request them to follow the armament, which had before sailed; but the admiral replied, that he stood in need of supplies, and that his vessel made water. These ships have French troops on board.

January 16.

The yellow flag, the signal for execution, was hoisted on Friday on board the vessels in which six of the condemned mutineers were executed. The criminals met their fate with apparent resignation, and confessed the justice of their sentences. They had written to Mr. Jones, chaplain of the Temeraire, requesting his spiritual aid. When arrived at the place of execution, one of them delivered a paper, which he requested might be read to the ship's company. It contained an avowal of their repentance, and an exhortation to their former comrades never to forget the duty which they owed to God, to the king, and to their country, if they wish to avoid a similar fate. After being engaged a few minutes in prayer, the signal gun was fired, and the unhappy men launched into eternity.

Six other seditious leaders, belonging to the Temeraire, have been condemned by a court martial; five of them to suffer death, and one 200 lashes. When this sentence was read to them, they exclaimed "The Lord's will be done." Dixon, one of the condemned, requested to speak with admiral Campbell—the admiral went to him—"look at this paper, said Dixon, with tears in his eyes—I have a wife and child—see if it can be of any service to them when I am no more." This was his will, by which he bequeathed all he possessed to his wife.

The navigation of the Thames is entirely obstructed with the ice, in consequence of which the price of grain has risen.

January 19.

We are this moment informed of the arrival of part of the Windward Island convoy; but our uneasiness is far from being removed respecting some of the vessels which composed it.

LONDON, 22d. JAN.

The fleet of Admiral Campbell which sailed from Spithead for the West Indies, is composed of the following ships The Temeraire, of 98 guns, Admiral Campbell; Formidable of 98, Theseus; Majestic, Vengeance, Orion, Resolution, of 74; Frigate Defiree, of 44, and Sloop of War, Morgiane of 16 guns.

The frigate Retribution, from Jamaica, entered Portsmouth on Wednesday. She brings intelligence of the squadron under orders of Capt Elfingron being arrived there, in 34 days passage. It consists of 5 ships of the line. Four more ships have been spared from the fleet in the Mediterranean for the same destination. Our maritime forces in that quarter at this time amount to 14 ships of the line; which when joined by Admiral Campbell's fleet, will make a total of 20 vessels.

Lord Hervey's journey to Amiens is said to have for its principal object to enter into some explanation respecting the Treaty between France and the Porte, which puts the former entirely on the same footing with our country.

GERMANY—FRANKFORT, 16th Jan.

The Prince of Orange, ex-Stadtholder of Holland and his son the hereditary Prince, continued to inhabit the Castle of Oranjenstein, near Diez on the Lahn. Several sovereign Princes of the Empire have paid them visits successively. More than two hundred persons formerly employed at the court of the Prince at the Hague, and his bodyguards or other Dutch emigrants who have followed his destiny, are already assembled at Oranjenstein and in the principality of Nassau, where a great number are expected to arrive, to whom the Prince of Orange has promised employment near his person, as soon as he has received from Germany the indemnities due to him. It is known, the letters add, that these indemnities will be more considerable than was thought; and it appears not doubtful but that the electoral dignity will pass to the House of Orange. It is, however, certain, that three battalions of Prussian Infantry, two squadrons of hussars and a company of artillerists, are to be given to the prince of Orange, to enable him to take possession of his new States; these troops will remain in his pay, national corps can be organized. The arrangement which stipulates these conditions, has already been agreed upon between the Court of Berlin and the ex Stadtholder of Holland.

ITALY—NAPLES, 19th Dec.

The Marquis de Gallo is arrived in this Capital from Vienna.

There are in our Ports three Russian frigates of 56 guns, which in their construction are made 64 gun ships. Their object, it is presumed is to carry to Malta the 25,000 Russian troops garrisoned here, as in all probability the right of keeping a garrison in that island will be given to Russia.

FLORENCE, 8th January.

Don Pedro Labrador, formerly Ambassador of his Catholic Majesty to the Court of Rome, set off from hence on the third inst. for France, charged by his sovereign to assist at the Congress at Amiens in the capacity of Affociate to Count del Campo d'Alanges, minister plenipotentiary. M. Labrador will be met at Turin by M. de Tercy, minister of Spain at Genoa, with whom he will proceed to Paris, and from thence to Amiens. Count del Campo is still detained at Genoa by a rheumatic complaint. He has there received two couriers, one from Paris and the other from Madrid, and has dispatched two others for those two cities.

From the report of several arrivals from Leghorn, it appears certain the Danish frigate Triton, which sailed lately from this port is entirely lost on the isles of Hieres, in a violent hurricane; and not an individual saved.

TURKEY.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 10.

The Captain Pacha arrived here on the 7th inst. with a squadron of 4 ships of the line and 4 frigates, followed by two French prizes, one of which is the frigate La Justice. On the day following the Captain Pacha had a public audience of the Grand Signor, who treated him with great distinction; amongst other testimonies of his satisfaction the Grand Signor has given him the surname of Victorious, and made him also a present of an aigrette, a superb sabre, and a horse richly caparisoned. During the audience, the squadron displayed all their colors. And at the mainmast of the admiral's ship was suspended a trophy in gold, which, it is said, weighed 25 pounds.

Before leaving Egypt the Captain Pacha made a present to Gen. Hutchinson of a ring of great value. The English sea and land forces have all left that country. The rebellious Beys are entirely subdued: the Grand Vizier has them in his power.—By the new organization in Egypt, the annual revenue of the Porte will acquire an increase of forty millions.

Chief of Brigade, Sebastiani, who has brought here the ratification of the preliminary articles of peace with France, has presented to the Grand Signor, a letter from the First Consul. This is the second instance of a foreigner, without diplomatic character, being admitted into the presence of the Grand Signor. The Sultan has however received him incognito at the palace near the port.

Citizen Ruffin is acknowledged now by the Porte, as charge d'affairs of the French republic.—His letters of credence were brought to him by the chief of brigade Sebastiani.

Lord Elgin is still here; his departure is now much doubted of. He will soon remove from the Hotel of France, to occupy other buildings.

FRENCH REPUBLIC.

PARIS, Jan. 25.

Letters from Bale represent the affairs of Valais and Frickthal, as being fettled. The latter canton will be ceded to Switzerland in exchange for the Valais, which will remain united to France. According to the same letters the fate of the countries of Neufchatel and Valengin has been, notwithstanding what other reports have said to the contrary, settled between the French government and the king of Prussia; but the convention concluded to that effect will not be executed until the moment when the Prussian troops shall have taken poffeffion of the countries which are to serve to indemnify his Prussian Majesty for his losses on the right bank of the Rhine.

January 27.

It is said the first Consul will not arrive in Paris before the 30th. Nothing of the result of the deliberations of the consuls, has yet transpired. It is supposed they will first be published at Milan, when the Cisalpine deputies have returned.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 23.

We learn from the isle of Walcheren that the French frigate Carmagnole and Incorruptible, both of 44 guns, armed and equipped in the port of Flessingue, will soon sail for St. Domingo. They will, it is believed, carry some further detachments of troops. A small squadron is also preparing in the ports of the Batavian Republic; its destination still be for Demerara and other Dutch West India Islands, in order to make poffeffion of the same, immediately after the conclusion of the definitive treaty between France and her allies on the one part, and England on the other.—The armed squadron in the Texel, has, or were to put to sea, two days ago, for Batavia.

Letters from Semlin and Altgradisca mention, that the towns and villages situated on the Danube, and the Salve, are inundated by the overflowing of these two rivers.

The overflowing of the Rhine, from Basle to Rastadt, has done great damages on the right bank; but not so much so, however, as have been experienced on the left.

BOURDEAUX, January 27.

A new division of light vessels have gone to sea, to follow the fleet which sailed from Brest for St. Domingo.

NEW YORK, MARCH 18.

The master of a Genoese vessel arrived at Tunis, reports, that the French government has called it to be intimated to the Regencies of Africa, that if in the course of 40 days they do not let free all their slaves, and declare themselves in peace with all nations, they will be compelled to do so by force of arms. [Paris paper, Jan. 5.

March 20.

The bloody scenes which have lately been witnessed in St. Domingo, naturally draw the mind to a contemplation of the flourishing condition which that beautiful colony once enjoyed. The following is said to be an accurate statement of the product, population, and commerce of the French part of the island, in 1788:

Population.

White people 27,717, viz. 9699 men 7141 males above 12 years old, 2,136 under 12 years old, 1189 husbandmen of plantations, 1834 plantation managers, 325 sugar refiners, 378 physicians, 510 mechanics, 614 clerks, 2 white servants, 8511 women and girls. Free people of colour 21,808, of whom 3493 were men, 2092 males above 12 years, 2892 under 12 years, 27,000 servants, 9833 women and girls. Slaves 405,528.

Plantations and Manufactures.

Sugar 761, Indigo 3097, Cotton 705 Coffee 2810, Distilleries, 173, Brick and Potters ware 63, Lime 69, Tanners 3.

Productions exported to France.

70,227,789 pounds of white sugar, 93,177,510 do. brut. or brown, 68,151, 181 do. coffee, 930,026 do. indigo, 6,286,126 do. cotton, 12,995 dressed skins.

Sold to American, English, and Dutch smugglers.

25,000,000 pounds brown sugar, 12,000,000 do. coffee, 3,000,000 do. cotton. The molasses exported in American bottoms, valued at one million of dollars.

Precious woods exported in French ships 200,000 dollars.

Trade.

580 large ships, carrying 189,699 tons, in which the imports amounted to 12 millions of dollars, of which more than 8 millions were in manufactured goods from France, and the other four millions in French produce.

Spanish ships exported in French goods, or money, 1,400,000 dollars for mules imported by them into the colony.

Ninety-eight French ships carrying 40,139 tons, imported 29,506 negroes, which sold for 8,090,000 dollars.

March 24.

It is estimated that the late war has cost the city of Leghorn, in contributions, quarterings, and loss of merchandize, which has been taken partly by the English and partly by the French not less than eleven millions of dollars.

FROM CAPE FRANCOIS.

PHILADELPHIA, Mar 20,

Arrived yesterday, the brig Mentor, Capt. Girard, from Cape Francois, which place he left on the 22d ult.

We have converied with a gentleman paffenger in the Mentor, from him learn that no particular accounts of the military operations in the interior had been received at the Cape at the time of his departure. Several skirmishes had taken place, and the report which we recently stated, of several thousand of the blacks being killed in an engagement, was in currency; but nothing official or authentic on the subject had transpired. It seems, that with a view to conciliate her enemy, the French General had given permission to Toussaint's sons to depart and join their father, with liberty either to remain with him or return to the protection of the French. The forces which arrived at the Cape were supposed not to exceed 15,000, nearly one half of whom had failed found to different points in the island.

On the morning of the Mentor's failing an embargo was laid on all American vessels by order of the French Admiral; in consequence, it is said, of a quantity of specie being found on board one in the harbour, which it was supposed, had been clandestinely taken from the town during the confusion of the 4th ult.

On the 21st ult. Toussaint sent a deputation to Gen. Le Clerc, requiring him to deliver all the money and clothing found at Port Republican, which he alledged rightfully belonged to his people.

"General Le Clerc peremptorily rejected the demand, and summoned Toussaint to surrender, within three days. A second deputation was sent, and brought with them a petition, figned by all the white inhabitants from every quarter, who were in Toussaint's poffeffion, praying General Le Clerc to pay attention to the many and great services hitherto rendered to the colony by the "vituous Toussaint." "—virtuous Toussaint!" exclaimed Gen. Leclerc, "people, why will you be deluded by a villain who has deceived France and all Europe; and now wishes to deceive me, but in which he will be deceived? Go tell him that there is now no grace for him: In a few days I will make him a public and ignominious spectacle. Virtuous Toussaint, indeed! when he himself, not four months ago, instigated Moyes to murder the whites and then, after a mock trial, shot the instrument of his own guilt, because he saw in him a dangerous rival."

General Le Clerc, turning to his troops, then addressed them:

Soldiers,

The government of France has sent us here to protect the inhabitants, to establish order, and to preserve to them the colony of St. Domingo. The rebellion of Toussaint is evident. The campain against the rebels will be instantly opened. Be provident of your provisions and ammunition (70 cartridges has just been distributed to each man.) Against such brigands we need only use the bayonet.—In six weeks the colony will be ours.—Phila. Gaz.

POETRY.

TO A VERY YOUNG LADY.

(FROM THE FRENCH.)

"Elle a déjà l'air de plaire."

PHILLIS to my fond idea
Ev'ry pleasing grace has thown;
But, fweet rofe of Cytherea!
Thou art yet a bud unblown.
Thy soft youth my hopes abating,
Me to fruitless ardor dooms;
Since to gain thee, is by waiting
Till the bud a flow'r becomes.

HER ANSWER.

SINCE I please thy fond idea,
Why is this strange language thown?
Know, that in fair Cytherea,
The rose is gather'd yet unblown.
My soft youth thy hopes abating,
This to fruitless ardor dooms,
Many love the while by waiting
Till the bud a flow'r becomes.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The devil (says a Spanish proverb) tempts every man, but an idle man tempts the devil.

The bread gained by industry is the sweetest, because it is eaten with satisfaction.

A gentleman was under close confinement in the Bastile seven years; during which time he amused himself in scattering a few small pins about his chamber, gathering them up again, and placing them in different figures on the arm of a great chair. He often told his friends afterwards, that unless he had found out this piece of exercise, he verily believed he should have lost his senses.

Sir William Temple, in his Heads for an Essay on the different Conditions of Life and Fortune, pleasantly tells us of "an old man near the Hague, who (says he) served my house from his dairy, and grew so rich, that he gave it over, bought a house, and furnished it, at the Hague, resolving to live at ease the rest of his life; but at length grew so weary of being idle, that he sold it, and returned again to his dairy."

"Love labour (cried a philosopher,) if you do not want it for food, you may for physic." The idle man is more perplexed what to do, than the industrious in doing what he ought. Action keeps the soul in constant health; but idleness corrupts and rusts the mind; and he that follows recreations instead of his business, shall in a little time have no business to follow.

Varia Servilius, descended of a Prætorian family, was remarkable for nothing but sloth and lodolence; in which he grew old and odious; insomuch, that it was commonly said, by such as passed his house, Hic Varia situs est; Here lies Varia; thus speaking of him as a person not only dead, but buried to all intents and purposes of rational existence.

IT having been decided at a late assizes, that the persons who have hitherto deemed themselves agents for the transporting of goods and peltries, on the communication between the Lakes Ontario and Erie, including the storage at Kingston, are in every respect to be holden as carriers, and liable, as by the laws of England, to make good every sort of damage or loss, whether by land or by water, except only such as shall arise from the act of God or the King's enemies, and that this extends even to all damage or loss that may arise from fire, except only such as may be caused by lightning; the subscribers, fully convinced that this responsibility (in this new country, and on this dangerous communication) was never contemplated by themselves, or by their employers, do hereby give public notice, that they will not receive any goods or peltries, nor transport the same, as carriers under the above mentioned law; and that they will not hold themselves responsible for any loss or damage that may occur, except only such as shall be caused by fraud, or negligence in themselves, their agents, or servants.

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, Esquire,

Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada.

And whereas I thought fit to assent to the prayer of the said Commons—NOW KNOW YE that I PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of this Province, by virtue of the Authority so vested in me, and the better to effectuate the wise and liberal Intentions of the said faithful Commons—And well knowing the Ability, Integrity and diligence of the Honorable John M'Gill, Esquire, one of the Legislative and Executive Councils, and of the Honorable DAVID WILLIAM SMITH, Esquire, one of the Executive Council and Speaker of the House of Assembly of this Province, have nominated and appointed the said John M'Gill and David William Smith Commissioners for the purpose of purchasing and distributing of Hemp Seed gratis amongst the Farmers, and also for the paying of Premiums and Bounties to the deserving Cultivators and Exporters of Hemp, according to the true intent and meaning of the said Resolution, not doubting but that the encouragement thus liberally held forth by His Majesty's Faithful Commons, will effectually promote a measure so agreeable to the wishes of the Mother Country, and so highly conducive to the prosperity of this Province.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms at York this Twenty-ninth day of July in the Forty-first year of His Majesty's Reign, and in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and one.

P. HUNTER, Lt. Govt.

LONDON, February 1.

By the Egyptienne frigate, arrived from Gibraltar, we have a report, that a French line of battle ship with troops on board for St. Domingo, has put into Cadiz in distress. If this be true, we shall find, that the Brest fleet has sustained considerable damage, on its way to the West Indies; and the speculations we made at an early period, on this subject, from a knowledge of the tempests that had prevailed, were well founded. If the Spanish Admiral Gravina, has put into Ferrol in distress, and a French line of battle ship has put into Cadiz for the same reason, the reasonable inference is that other vessels have suffered.

Preparations are making in Paris for the expulsion of those members from the Councils who most vigorously opposed the civil code. The whole of each body is to be re-elected, and those will not of course be re-chosen who have given offence to the Grand Consul.

An article from Florence speaks of no less than two Spanish ministers going to Amiens, but neither of them has yet arrived there. The Madrid Gazette published on the 12th ult. the preliminaries of peace between France and England, a circumstance which gives reason to suppose Spain acceded to the Treaty. Still, however, we are assured Trinidad formed an obstacle to the complete adjustment of the Definitive Peace till it was agreed to proceed, referring that point, in a certain degree, for a general congress of the states of Europe, the meeting of which will be announced soon after Bonaparte's return from Lyons.

The last Paris papers announce the discovery of Piazzi's new Planet, for which all the Astronomers of Europe have been searching for many months past.

The great business of the Concordat, which, considered in a religious and political light, essentially connects itself with the internal tranquility of the country, meets with daily obstacles in France.—All the conforming Prelates abroad received the most pressing invitations to return from the Cardinal Legate, and orders were given by government on the frontiers for their repairing to Paris, when in a counter-order was transmitted to Calais, requiring the two who went from London to be sent to Bruffels, from which it is presumed similar counter-orders will be given in all the other frontier towns, to give the same direction to those bishops on the continent who may present themselves. Is this the effect of a misunderstanding on the part of the ministers? or is it a consequence of the intrigues of the Philosophers and the Constitutional Clergy.

Previously to the publication and discussion of the Concordat, the French government had desired a Statement to be drawn out as soon as possible, of all the unalienated churches throughout the republic, of the situation in which they are, and of the churches in which two different kinds of worship are exercised.

Mr. King, the American minister at this Court, though solicited to remain by Mr. Jefferson, who knows and values his abilities, it is said, has requested that a successor may be appointed. We disbelieve this.

February 2.

It is reported, in a letter from Vienna, that the Grand Duke of Tuscany is to be made an Elector of the Empire, with the territories of Saltzburgh, Passau, and Berchtesgaden. On the other hand, a new Protestant Electorate in the House of Orange is to be erected. It is said that a Congress at Amiens, to which Russia and all the other powers of the Continent are to send Ministers, will be held.

Private accounts say, that in consequence of the express demand of the French government, the delays hitherto opposed by the Court of Madrid to the conclusion of the Definitive Treaty have been forced to give way, and the Chevalier d'Azzara, who was at Paris, has received order to go to Amiens as Plenipotentiary. If this be true, the Definitive Treaty, we are inclined to think, will speedily make its appearance.

It was thought by some people, and a strange alarm was founded on the occasion, that the French armament to St. Domingo was stronger than sufficient for the reduction of that island, under the mother country. People said, that the French with such a force might be tempted to turn themselves against the possessions of Great Britain. The French Government certainly affords additional ground of apprehension on this subject, because we find that new squadrons with troops are going out to the West Indies. The French papers state that Admiral Ganthesume was about to sail from Toulon, with a considerable squadron and troops on board. The Thistle, arrived in fourteen days from Gibraltar, brings an account that four French ships of the line, (in all probability Ganthesume) passed the Cut about the 15th ult. Sir James Saumarez sent four ships to watch them.

All this proves the anxiety of the French Government respecting the island of St. Domingo. They are fully aware of the great difficulty of the enterprise, which we have repeatedly demonstrated. The French Government indeed, is employing every measure of precaution and address to accomplish the object. All men capable of giving advice have been consulted, and persons, natives of St. Domingo, have been sent for from this country, to contribute their talents.

General Nugent, it is said, is to return from the government of Jamaica at the end of five years, and that lucrative government is to be held in future for no longer a term by any governor.

By a letter from Pool, we are informed, that since the signing of the preliminaries of peace, 28 vessels have entered that port from France, with live and dead stock, poultry, and game; amongst which have been 1800 hogs. By these means the inhabitants of that place and its vicinity have been served with exceeding good fat pork at 5d. and 6d. per pound, 40 per cent. less than the usual market price.

As Mr. Dressing the Messenger was on his last journey to Lord Cornwallis, he was alarmed during the night, not far from Boulogne, by the cries of the post boy, who called out to him to "fire!" His horses stopping suddenly, he fired a pistol out of each window, thinking he had been attacked by highway men; but on enquiry he found that the boy's outcry was occasioned by two wolves, one of which attempted to bite his leg, but was prevented by the jack-boots worn by French postillions; they then each seized one of the horses by the nose, and had, as appeared on examination, torn their lips off.

Feb. 3.

Some days before the murder of the Pacha of Belgrade Mustapha, the Janissaries formally renounced their obedience, declaring at the same time that they would only acknowledge as their master, him for whom they held Belgrade, of which he would soon take possession. On the 27th of December, which was the last day of his life, about two in the afternoon, three of the boldest Janissaries of the three hundred who guarded the entrance of the chamber of the Pacha, with a menacing voice asked him, "Where are your treasures?" at the same time putting a pistol to his breast. Scarcely had the Pacha silently answered his question by pointing to some coffers in the chamber, when he fell lifeless on the ground by the discharge of the pistol in the hand of the Janissary, who immediately cut off his head and threw it on a table which stood near him.

Private letters received from Bombay, dated in August last, state the capture of Zemaun Shah, by his brother Mahmoud, who is reported to have put out his eyes.

The ringleaders of the rebels in Guadaloupe is a Mulatto, named Pelage, formerly a slave at Martinique. In 1792 when Lacrosse, the exiled commander in chief, instigated the negroes to rise against their masters, Pelage assassinated his mistress, that he might plunder her treasures.—In the next disturbances he commanded a company of Mulattoes. He afterwards enjoyed the confidence of Rochambeau, and defended with the greatest courage one of the redoubts of the Fort Bourbon, when the English attacked it.

The following anecdote is related of Toussaint L'Overture:—Six white planters had been sentenced to die, at the time of the convention between General Maitland and the Negro Chief. The former on releasing the black officers, sent a request to Toussaint, that the six victims might be spared; to which he replied, that he would take it into consideration. The next Sunday when the Priest was in the pulpit, Toussaint mounted and ordered him out, observing, that on that day he should preach, when he accordingly did for a whole hour, on the duty of forgiving our enemies. While he was thus discourling, the six gentlemen who had been condemned to die, were brought into the aisle, with halters round their necks. At the close of his sermon, he addressed himself particularly to them, and observed, that they should now see that he was a good Christian, and could practice what he preached—"You are now free, (said he) go, and sin no more."

Three thousand guineas for a service of plate have been voted in the handsomest manner, by the House of Assembly of Jamaica, to his Royal Highness the Duke of Clarence, in testimony of the gratitude of the Assembly for his exertions in Parliament in favour of their interests.

The population of Cadiz, which formerly amounted to 80,000 souls, is reduced by the late epidemic disease to 45,000.

A letter from Ettrick, in Scotland, dated Jan. 18, says, "the weather has been such as Ettrick forest hath not experienced in the memory of man. The snow in December having been softened, and again frozen to hard that no sheep could pierce it, we have been obliged to drive the whole of our flocks into the low grounds of Dumfriesshire, or into the east country where fodder was to be had. For a month past the prospect here has been truly dismal; the upper parts of Selkirkshire, and the adjacent muirs have presented nothing to the view but one desolate waste.

"You might have travelled 40 miles without seeing a living creature except a few disconsolate females and children, scarcely peeping out of doors: not has the smooth surface of the snow ever been disturbed by the foot of an animal, saving here and there by the hall tumbled bare:—even the night wanderer, the fox, astonished at seeing no creature but himself, has forsaken his wonted rounds.

"Celebrated as the pastoral life is, you see it has its difficulties; but is the above all—the thaw which is now commenced has intercepted the poor exiles on their way home, threatening the destruction of many of them by flooded waters, rendering it impassable by breaks of snow and ice."

A second squadron is fitting out against the Algerines from Lisbon.

A letter from Exeter says, that a prophetess has lately risen up in that city. Three clergymen came 300 miles to visit her, and with four other persons held a consultation with her; she has deluded many, and the ignorant and uninformed repose implicit confidence in her. She dresses in white muslin, and says that Richard Brothers is the Lamb, and she is the Lamb's wife.

February 6.

The Hamburgh mail due on Wednesday arrived yesterday. The accounts from the German Journals agree with those in some Dutch and French papers, in stating that the Porte had refused to ratify the treaty concluded between France and the Turks, at Paris, on the 9th Oct. last. The French officer, Schastienie, who carried the treaty to Constantinople, has brought back a plan of a new treaty. Lord Elgin, it is said, has concluded a convention with the Porte, in which the latter for three years gives superior privileges to this country in the Levant, and likewise for the East India Trade. We know not what is meant by the latter? Is it intended that any trade shall be opened with India by the Red Sea, through Egypt, or does the stipulation relate to facilities for overland expresses? We are inclined to think that the latter is what is meant. This country is undoubtedly entitled to advantages. The French deserve no favors from the Porte.

It appears by letters from the Hague, that the Dutch are propoling to stop the transit of French manufactures and produce thro' their country; that is, in plain language, Holland is no longer to be a depot for merchandize. The Dutch are no longer to have the faculties for trade which they once had.—This is evidently the jealousy of the French, afraid of English commodities being introduced through Holland.—The Dutch must be infinitely gratified with the friendly care of the French to promote their interests.—Their liberty and property will be unproved in equal proportions by the revolutions they have experienced! It is said that there is much discontent in the country.

February 10.

The population of some of the cities on the continent having lately been very inaccurately given in some of the London papers, we subjoin our communication from the best and most recent authorities:—

At Hamburgh in the course of the last year, there were 3775 children born; the number of burials was 3448, and that of marriages 1276. This list only relates to persons of the established Lutheran Church, those of the other Reformed Churches, Catholics, and Jews, are not contained in it. The number of communicants of the Lutheran Church was 45,626, which, it is observed, is almost one third less than it was ten years ago, when they amounted to above 60,000. Among the births, 429 were natural children.

A report was brought over yesterday which was stated to be confidently believed in France, that Bonaparte was to be chosen Chief Magistrate of the Batavian and Helvetic Republics.

A serjeant of the Guards now lying in the Upper Barracks at Chatham, some time since received a farthing in change for some articles he bought at one of the shops in the barracks, which, upon examination, proved to be one of the three only which were coined in queen Ann's reign. He was offered 50l. for it immediately, which he refused, and carried it to London, where he got 400l. and a discharge from his regiment. The remaining two farthings, it seems, have been found some time since.

A dangerous putrid fever which lately broke out among the children at the Orphan House at Vienna, is found to have originated in the children's licking the pencils which they employed in painting cotton.

Extract of a letter from Liverpool, dated Jan. 21.

"Thursday night.—We were visited here by the most dreadful hurricane last night that can be remembered by the oldest inhabitant. A horrid night it was indeed, and the day-light opened a scene shocking to behold. Many houses are blown down and demolished, innumerable others have had their chimnies thrown off in every part of the town. Many lives have been lost in the ruins, but the havoc made in the river Mersey, surpasses all description: several vessels this day, at tide time, foundered in sight of the inhabitants and spectators on shore, and in some instances every attempt to save the perishing sailors proved abortive. The river, and all along the Cheshire shore, presents a melancholy scene indeed;—dead bodies thrown up—pieces of wrecks floating here and there. Horror has been depicted in every countenance—each person was afraid to go out into the streets for fear of being killed by the falling of bricks, slates, ridging, &c. and equally apprehensive of his life, by confiant expectation of his house falling down over him. You may rely on this hasty sketch being by no means exaggerated."

FALMOUTH, Feb. 13.

The following paragraph appeared in a respectable London paper of Monday last:

"We have now the satisfaction of being able to announce from undoubted authority, that the terms of the definitive treaty between this country and France, are at length finally agreed upon and concluded.—Indeed it is more than a week since this was the case, but the official publication of the terms has been delayed from a wish on the part of our government to improve the provisions intended for the Stadtholder, and also to arrange some points respecting Switzerland, before the ratification be formally declared. The public, however may rely on what we state, that every article respecting this country is completely and finally settled. The chief difficulty in the negociation arose from its being strongly urged by this government that Demarara and Surrinam should be declared free ports for three years, to enable the British subjects who had settled there, the more easily to dispose of their property, and to remit it direct to this country.

[Star.

[This flatement was scouted in many of the London papers on the following day, as ridiculous and false. The Star of Tuesday, however, perfifted in the truth of the paragraph, which it certainly would not have done, had not the editor placed the fulleft confidence in the fource of his information—a confidence which we fhall rejoice to find has not been mifplaced.

BREMEN, February 2.

Prufſia not having been able to come to an amicable underſtanding with Auſtria, with regard to the indemnities to which each of them formed pretenſions, is at preſent extremely diſcontented with the accommodations which have taken place on that ſubject between France and the Court of Vienna, eſpecially as the projets of theſe two Courts can be in no reſpects advantageous to her intereſts. On this account the Court of Berlin endeavours more and more to form a cloſe alliance with Ruſſia, in order to prevent the effects of this plan of indemnities. The reſt of the continent awaits the reſult, and ſubmits with patience to its fate.

NEW YORK, March 31.

In addition to the information given yeſterday by the French veſſel of war arrived at Philadelphia, from Cape Francois, we learn, that previous to their departure from the Cape, a ſquadron from Cadiz, under Admiral Lenois, arrived there. The number of troops is not known—ſeveral of the ſhips of war had left the Cape, on their return to France. There were in the harbor, one ſhip of 120 guns—14 two deckers—7 frigates, and 2 tranſports.

Bonaparte has accepted of the rank of Preſident of the Italian (late Ciſalpine) Republic, at the moderate ſalary of 500,000 livres per year.

The ſquadron under Rear Admiral Campbell, deſtined for the Weſt Indies ſailed from Portſmouth the 7th ult. and put into Torbay on the 8th, in conſequence of head winds.

A letter from Malaga, to a merchant in this city dated the 8th ult. received via Philadelphia, mentions, that a moſt violent gale was experienced there the 24th Jan. which drove on ſhore 9 veſſels, within three miles of the harbor; one of which was an Engliſh tranſport, from Egypt, with troops bound home, and the others were foreign veſſels—none were expected to be got off.

HUMANITY;

OR, AMELIA'S PRAYER.

KIND Heav'n, if all thy hand beſtows,
Ne'er taught this ſoul humanity.
Let ſtern misfortune interpoſe,
And teach me by adverſity.

What curſe is like a ſavage ſoul,
Which ne'er ſweet ſympathy can know;
Where tears of pity never roll;
But hears unmov'd the tale of woe.

Where friendſhip ne'er with ſocial joys
Can give life's tide to ſweetly roll;
But hatred, with diſcordant voice,
Bids boiſt'rous paſſions rule the ſoul.

Where virtue ne'er can find a place,
To fix her temple, there to dwell;
But vice, with all her vip'rous race,*
Is welcom'd from the gates of hell.

Almighty power avert that doom—
Soften this unrelenting heart;
Or ſhroud me in old nothing's tomb
Unfit to act a being's part.

Sir Philip Sidney, at the battle near Zutphen, diſplayed the moſt undaunted courage. He had two horſes killed under him; and whilſt mounting a third, was wounded by a muſket-ſhot out of the trenches, which broke the bone of his thigh. He returned about a mile and a half, on horſeback, to the camp; and being faint with the loſs of blood, and probably parched with thirſt, thro' the heat of the weather; he called for drink. It was preſently brought him; but as he was putting the veſſel to his mouth, a poor wounded ſoldier, who happened to be carried by him at that inſtant, looked up to it with wiſhful eyes. The gallant and generous Sydney took the bottle from his mouth, juſt when he was going to drink, and delivered it to the ſoldier, ſaying, "Thy neceſſity is yet greater than mine."

ENGLAND—LONDON, Feb. 12.

One of the firft meafures which the French will adopt, after the Definitive Treaty is figned, will be to re-eftablifh thofe companies which the French Revolution and the war had nearly deftroyed. Already plans have been drawn up for refuming the trade to the Weft Indies, to Africa, to the Levant, and to the Eaft Indies. The maritime trade is expected to be extremely valuable. A company has already been formed under the title of Compagnie de l'Ile de France, with a capital of 1,500,000 franks. The company is to have two houſes, to which are to be entruſted the commercial operation; one at the Ile of France, the other at Marſeilles. The number of trips will be at leaſt four annually, according to the circumſtances and advices which the Marſeilles houſe ſhall receive.—The known members of the company are Collegue & Co. Lifort & Co. Falconet & Co.

From the Whitehall Evening Poſt, Feb. 14.

ENDORSEMENT OF THE STATE OF POLITICS FOR THIS WEEK.

Although the return of Sebaſtiani from Conſtantinople with a letter from the Sultan to the Chief Conſul, has been noticed in the French Official Journal, and the marks of attention which he is ſaid to have received there, are pompouſly enumerated, yet as that Journal is quite ſilent about the ratification of the preliminary treaty of Paris by the Porte, we are ſtrongly inclined to think, notwithſtanding the affected ſatisfaction of the crafty Conſul, that the intelligence brought by the Hamburgh mail of the refuſal of the Porte to do ſo, is founded on fact; for had no difficulty been met with, there can be little doubt but the important intelligence would have been eagerly announced; it is therefore ardently to be hoped, that the iſſue of the pending negociations between thoſe powers may give a direction to commerce that will extend the intereſts, and employ in a moſt advantageous manner the manufactories of G. Britain. The involves many important conſiderations, and ſhould our government ſucceed in opening this new ſource of traffic, the genius of our nation will be kept alive, our ſeamen will find employ and the revenue will ultimately be increaſed. The Turks certainly owe us every commercial facility for the ſervices we have rendered them, and ſhould their trade, once the moſt important to, and held almoſt excluſively by, the French, from the becoming gratitude of the Porte, be converted into a lucrative branch of Britiſh commerce, it will be the more pleaſing to the people of this country, as it has been fairly and honorably won.

The late tranſactions at Lyons have given birth to much ſpeculation and conjecture on the continent; a great difference of opinion exiſts in with reſpect to the policy of thoſe meaſures. The Pariſian politicians complain that Bonaparte has acted without the conſent of the French Legiſlature, and in private circles his conduct is very freely cenſured. Does the Chief Conſul mean, it is aſked, that France does not contain an individual, except himſelf, capable of being entruſted with the government of a ſecondary nation like the Italian Republic? What then is to become of France herſelf in the event of his death? Miſerable country, which has produced no man fit to be chief governor! or rather happy country, bleſt with the only man able to govern France, Holland and Italy!

THE ITALIAN REPUBLIC

are better ſatisfied; they are proud of having given a ſovereign to France; their preſident at leaſt is their countryman, and they entertain very brilliant views as ſoon as their army is organized. In whatever light the great body of the French people may view this affair, the conſtituted authorities have, however, preſented a variety of congratulatory addreſſes to the Scourge conqueror, on the increaſe of his influence and dignity, and the conſequent advantages to be derived to the empire of France. The moſt remarkable of theſe is that of the tribunal of commerce, the preſident of which, after congratulating the firſt Conſul on his return, expreſſed a hope of that event accelerating the concluſion of a definitive peace, and that the government will not delay the preſentation to the legiſlative body of the commercial code then under its conſideration. The Conſul, however, in his reply, takes not the ſlighteſt notice of that part of the addreſs which expreſſes a hope of the concluſion of the definitive treaty being accelerated by his return to Paris. Upon this important ſubject he is entirely ſilent, and contents himſelf with merely ſtating that the commercial code has been favourably received by the public opinion, and that every care ſhould be taken to render it as perfect as poſſible. This ſtrange reſerve has given riſe to conjectures that circumſtances may have ariſen to obſtruct the progreſs of the negociation, but we have every reaſon to ſuppoſe they are unfounded, and that the ſo much wiſhed for event is not far diſtant.

The treaty concluded in December laſt between France and the now made public, places the French on the ſame footing on which they ſtood previous to the war, and ſtipulates ſeveral other conditions in their favor; but we were not told whether any ſecret tribute is to be paid for the forbearance of the Algerine pirates.

Feb. 16.—The Paris papers contain a liſt of the members of the Tribunate who have been voted out or rather expelled, by the conſervative ſenate, in the renewal of the one fifth of the members of the tribunate, which is to take place annually. We remark with pleaſure, that luch of the Legiſlative body and Tribunate, who voted for the death of Louis XVI. have been expelled.

It has, we hear, been found to be impoſſible to remove the objections on the part of Spain, who abſolutely refuſed to cede Trinidad. Another arrangement, therefore, it is rumoured, has been made; Great Britain relinquiſhes Trinidad, and Spain keeps it. We are to have the iſland of Martinique in lieu of it.

Feb. 18. The people at Milan received with great approbation the news of Bonaparte's being appointed their chief magiſtrate. So ſay the French papers.

Feb. 20.—We laſt night received paris journals to the 16th inclusive. The official journal ſtates, that all the obſervations in the Engliſh papers reſpecting the preliminaries ſigned with the Porte, and its preſent relations with France, are deſtitute of foundation, & that at no former period were the two nations animated with a more ſincere deſire to cultivate their ancient friendſhip and to reſtore all the tiſs by which they were ſo happily connected for ſo long a time. Are we to underſtand from this that the preliminaries are ratified, and that France will again be placed on the footing of the moſt favored nations?

HOUSE of COMMONS, Feb. 17.

The Houſe went into a committee on the Bill for carrying into effect the American treaty. Mr. Vanſittart ſhortly adverted to communications lately received concerning the determination of the American government to take off the countervailing duties, and aſſerted the expediency of a ſimilar ſtep on the part of this country. He therefore moved that the chairman be inſtructed to move the Houſe for leave to bring in a Bill to enable His Majeſty to cauſe the countervailing duties to be levied under that act to ceaſe, and to be ſuſpended under certain circumſtances.

Gen. Gaſcoigne thought it was highly neceſſary that the public ſhould be well informed of the nature of this bill, and he hoped therefore there was no intention to puſh it rapidly through the different ſtages. He was the more diſpoſed to wiſh this, as, from what the Rt. Honorable gentleman had himſelf ſaid, there was no immediate neceſſity for its being paſſed.

Mr. Vanſittart obſerved, that it was very far from his wiſh to preclude any neceſſary enquiries into the nature and object of the Bill, he was convinced that the more generally it was known, the more it would be ſeen to be favorable to the commercial intereſts of the country, and the leſs would any one be diſpoſed to give it oppoſition. He begged leave to take this opportunity of correcting a miſapprehenſion of what he had ſaid reſpecting the determination of the American government. He had not ſaid that the American government had already come to a reſolution to repeal the countervailing duties, but merely that a diſpoſition to that effect had been manifeſted.

The motion was put and carried, & leave given to bring in the bill.

Feb. 19.—The American Treaty Bill was read a firſt time, and ordered to be read a ſecond time on Wedneſday.

The Gazette of Saturday laſt contains an order in Council, dated 10th inſt. prolonging for two months from the 12th inſt. the prohibition againſt the exportation of copper.

Beſt Flour ſells at Falmouth at 60s. a bag.

February 2.—We are ſorry to ſtate that Gen. Hutchinſon has arrived at Malta in bad health. It has been thot by medical men that the health of the General requires a warm climate. He was about to leave Malta to go to Palermo.

We hear that the Captain Pacha previous to his departure from Egypt made Gen. Hutchinſon a preſent of a very precious ring, in token of the high eſteem he entertains for his character. It ſhould appear that all the native Britiſh troops have quitted Egypt, and that only 5000 Seapoys in Engliſh pay remain in that colony. By the new regulations in Egypt, the Ottoman Exchequer will obtain an annual acceſſion of 40 millions of money.

Feb. 6.—The refuſal of the Porte to ratify the treaty concluded between Turkey and France on the 9th of laſt October, and the concluſion of a new Treaty between this country and the former power, by which it is confidently ſaid, our trade is to enjoy ſuperior advantages throughout the Turkiſh dominions, and even with relation to our Eaſt India poſſeſſions, form on the part of the Grand Seignior, a juſt and grateful acknowledgement of the ſplendid & important achievements of the Britiſh army in Egypt.

Feb. 8.—It is with great pleaſure we ſtate from unqueſtionable authority, that the Daniſh Court's act of acceſſion to the convention ſigned at Peterſburg, on the 17th June laſt, between England and Ruſſia, was diſpatched for Moſcow on the 25th of October; and that his Britiſh Majeſty's ratification was forwarded from Copenhagen to St. Peterſburgh on the 24th of December.

Paris Journals to the 4th inſt. which we received yeſterday, confirm the intelligence we have already ſtated, of the arrival of the Spaniſh Miniſter, Azzara, at the Congreſs of Amiens on the 29th ult. He was received with great honors and with much joy; and we can ſtate, on private authority, that he has ſigned the preliminary Treaty on the part of his Court. No obſtacles to the Definitive Peace, therefore, can now occur on the part of Spain; the negociation muſt reſt entirely between France and England.

Two Engliſh meſſengers, Meſſrs. Shaw & Dreſſings, ſailed on Friday from Dover to Calais, the one bound for Paris, the other for Amiens, with important diſpatches from our Government.

The Firſt Conſul returned to Paris in good health, as we are told, at ſix o'clock in the evening of yeſterday ſe'nnight, and a ſalute of artillery immediately announced his arrival. A number of public bodies waited on him the next day, and their ſpeeches of congratulation, with his ſpeeches in return, are inſerted in the Moniteur.

Feb. 9.—Sir John Mitford, ſpeaker of the Houſe of Commons, being appointed Lord High Chancellor of Ireland, Mr. Abbot is expected to ſucceed to that honorable ſituation.

We ſtated many days ſince, that we had reaſon to believe that all the material articles of the Definitive Treaty that regard this country and France, had been finally ſettled at Amiens. We underſtand that the points which have been latterly diſcuſſed, relate ſolely to an expreſſion made by our government, that Demerara and Surinam ſhould be declared free ports for three years, to enable the Britiſh ſubjects who have ſettled there the more eaſily to diſpoſe of their property, and to remit it direct to this country.

On Saturday the 1ſt battalion of the 3d regiment of Guards came on duty at St. James's for the firſt time ſince its return from Egypt. Sir Sidney Smith, General Coote, and other diſtinguiſhed officers, dined with Col. Johnſton upon the occaſion.

A few days ſince, died at Cadway, near Ottery, Dover, the Right Hon. Lord Graves, of Thanks, in the county of Cornwall, Admiral of the White, who ſo gallantly diſtinguiſhed himſelf in the glorious battle of the 1ſt June, 1794, in which he received a wound in his thoulder. For his ſervices on this occaſion his Majeſty was pleaſed to create him a Peer of the kingdom of Ireland, by the title of Baron Graves of Gravelend, in the county of Londonderry, and grant him a penſion of 1000l. per annum. His Lordſhip was made a poſt captain ſo far back as the year 1755.

PARIS, Jan. 29.

They write from Marſeilles, that General Menou, having performed a quarantine in the port of Toulon, landed, with a numerous ſuit of women and domeſtics. Some of theſe laſt carried horſes tails, which are the attributes of the Pachas. Madame Menou has appeared in public, but veiled according to the Turkiſh cuſtom.

Feb. 1.—M. de Melzi, who is appointed ſub-preſident of the Italian Republic, is the ſame who ſurrendered the keys of Milan to the Firſt Conſul, when he entered that town for the firſt time, at the head of the French army.

MENTZ, Jan. 19.

The French Chief of Brigade Sebaſtiani, has ſet out on his return from Conſtantinople, and carries to Paris the projet of a new Treaty of Peace, as the Porte has refuſed to ratify the Preliminaries of Oct. 9. 1801.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 24.

The Engliſh ambaſſador, Lord Elgin, has concluded, in the name of his court, a ſeparate convention with the Porte, in which the latter, on account of the ſervices rendered by the Engliſh in Egypt, has granted them certain privileges with regard to the Levant and Eaſt India trade, for three years. It is feared, however, that the French government will not agree to this convention as France expects the ſame privileges with England in that quarter.

NEW PROVIDENCE, March 16.

The following are the facts relative to the death of Lieut. Thos. Barnes, of His Majeſty's 47th regt. of foot, ſtationed part at Bermuda, and part in this country:

Lieut. BARNES had been in England ſome time in the recruiting ſervice, and was ordered to join his regiment with about 60 recruits, to take paſſage in the tranſport ſhip Majeſtic, capt. Noddings from the Iſle of Wight, to touch at Ireland, to take on board convicts, thence to proceed to Martinique, and afterwards to Jamaica; by which route Mr. Barnes was to have got to Bermuda.

The Majeſtic anchored at Martinique, and after diſpoſing of the convicts, lay in port a few days. The troops on board her were under the command of a Major M'Donald, of the 3d W. I. regt. The day before this ſhip was to have proceeded for Jamaica, Lieutenant Barnes applied to the Major for leave to go on ſhore to procure ſome ſmall ſtores, which he was in much need of for himſelf, but more particularly for Mrs. Barnes, who had then been on board the ſhip upwards of three months; to which requeſt he received a peremptory, haughty refuſal; and, in return, made uſe of ſome reſort, which irritated the commanding officer.

Mrs. Barnes was therefore compelled to go on ſhore, and purchaſe the articles without her huſband; and ſhe had not been there long, e'er it was diſcovered that the Majeſtic was getting under ſail. Mrs. Barnes immediately went into the boat, and made every effort to overtake the ſhip, but without effect, altho' at one time the boat was quite near, and ſhe was ſeen diſtinctly by all hands on board, in a ſmall boat, at ſea, waving her handkerchief for them to ſtop; but the Majeſtic proceeded, and inſtead of ſhortening ſail, they poſitively hoiſted more. Mrs. Barnes, was therefore driven to the neceſſity of returning to a place where ſhe was an entire ſtranger, and without money or clothes.

Admiral Duckworth, in H. M. S. Leviathan, ſo univerſally eſteemed for his humanity and kindneſs, being made acquainted with the above circumſtances by Mrs. Barnes, received her on board his own ſhip, carried her to Jamaica, in purſuit of her huſband, and treated her with every degree of attention and politeneſs.

On her arrival at Port Royal, inſtead of finding her huſband, ſhe was told by his brother officers, on board the ſame ſhip, that the leaving her behind was, no doubt, a premeditated thing on the part of Major M'Donald, as a puniſhment to her huſband; who, finding his entreaties to ſtop the ſhip to take her on board, and his remonſtrances for the ſituation of his wife, making no impreſſion on the obdurate major, and, having no weight with the puſillanimous captain, was driven, in a moment of phrenzy to jump overboard & was entirely loſt!!!—Proper notice has been taken of this affair in Jamaica and a Court of Enquiry or Court Martial, will of Courſe enſue.

NEW YORK, April 3.

His Excellency Prince Rufpoli, of Naples, a baſſil of the order of Malta, arrived in Charleſton the 20th ult. He is on a tour throughout the United States.

A moſt dreadful ſhock of an earthquake was felt the 26th ult. at Saint John's, (Antigua) and at Baſſeterre (St. Kitts)—The earth was kept in a tremulous motion for near a minute.

GOVERNOR WALL.

Who was executed in London in January laſt, was a captain in the Britiſh army, and governor of Goree, an iſland on the coaſt of Africa. He was diſmiſſed from his office in July 1782, when he prepared to embark for England.—Some time preceding this event there had been a great ſcarcity of proviſions in the garriſon, in conſequence of which it had been put on allowance. It is the cuſtom of the Britiſh army, when ſoldiers are not allowed their full rations, to have them made up in money. As the commiſſary was about to depart with the Gov. the men waited twice on the latter, in a body of 20 or 30 each time, and requeſted that he would ſee juſtice done to them, before the commiſſary left the iſland. The ſecond time they waited on him, he grew paſſionate and drove them to their quarters. Soon after he ordered the long roll to be beat, to ſummon the garriſon on the parade, which was immediately obeyed, and the Governor and officers met them. He then ordered a circle to be formed, and a gun-carriage to be placed in the centre, and called ſerjeant Benjamin Armſtrong, who was ſtripped and tied to the carriage. The Governor then ordered him to be flogged by black men, not belonging to the garriſon, who inflicted 800 laſhes on him with the end of a rope. The Governor was heard to command the negroes to "lay on him," &c. while the puniſhment was inflicting. He was afterwards taken to the hoſpital, where his wounds mortified, and he died in three days.

Governor Wall was not apprehended for this, until the year 1784, when he was taken at Bath; but on the way to London, he eſcaped from the meſſenger who had him cuſtody, and got off to the Continent, where he reſided for upwards of ſixteen years.

In October laſt, he wrote a letter to Lord Pelham, ſtating his readineſs to take his trial, and ſoon after repaired to England for that purpoſe. As ſoon as he delivered himſelf up, a ſpecial commiſſion was ordered to try him, at which he was found guilty of the murder.—Many of the witneſſes were dead, ſtill there were several found, who were present at the translation. The Governor, in his defence, endeavoured to prove that the men were mutinous, and that Armstrong was tried by a regimental or drum-head court martial, but neither of these assertions were substantiated. General Forbes, Gen. M'Kenzie, and many other respectable characters appeared in behalf of the prisoner's character. They stated, that he had always behaved as a gentleman and an officer; was a man of great humanity and good temper, and a most tender and affectionate husband and father. After his condemnation, considerable interest was made to obtain a pardon, but in vain.

FROM ST. DOMINGO.

Capt. Hussey, arrived at this port on Saturday evening, from Port Republican, informs, that five days previous to his leaving that place, a frigate arrived at St. Marks with 240 soldiers wounded in a battle between the whites and negroes who were posted at Mount Panot in a fort extremely well fortified, from whence it is thought it will cost much bloodshed to dislodge them. An officer who commanded a company of whites in the engagement, informed him that 40 officers were wounded, amongst whom were Generals Boudet and Duqua, and most of the staff officers; that Gen. Leclerc had his sash shot through, that after four hours well directed fire on both sides they were obliged to retreat. Some of the officers informed, that in passing a place called Venet, they were obliged to march thro' a swamp, in which they counted upwards of 400 bodies of white inhabitants who had been murdered by the negroes; that on their arrival near the fort, they saw a number of their own soldiers taken prisoners; and that, gaining on the blacks they would have retaken them, but the latter massacred the whole and retreated into the fort. Toussaint was not there in person; but Dessalines and the greater part of the army were. Every thing was very tranquil at Port Republican. A few days previous to capt. Hussey's sailing, a brig arrived direct from London, which place she left about the 1st February.

An article under the Amsterdam head, in one of our late London papers says—"The French commissioners who are gone out to St. Domingo with the first fleet, have it in charge to invite Gen. Toussaint to come to France to take upon him an important office.—Should he refuse, and not submit, he will be treated as an enemy to the Republic. The numerous land forces which are on board the fleet, are not intended solely for St. Domingo, but the effecting of some other purposes—among which is the taking possession of Louisiana.

"If Toussaint consents to leave St. Domingo, it is intended to give him the place of a Senator in France."

POETRY.

MAY DAY.

THE sun peeps o'er the eastern hill,
The drunkard reels to rest;
The fount supplies the rippling rill,
The sky-lark leaves her nest.
Aloft she soars and greets the Heaven,
And hails the rising day;
Grateful for all the blessings given,
Proclaims them with her lay:
The hawthorn bush its annual flow'r,
In gay luxuriance glows;
Prophetic of the genial pow'r,
That shall produce the rose.
The maid, the youth, in trim array,
Explore the fragrant grove!
To celebrate the new-born May,
With vows of lasting love.
Nature inspires the tales they tell,
Was nature ever wrong?
She decks with verdure hill and dell,
And swells the poet's song.
She bids the verse spontaneous flow,
To celebrate this day;
And makes our wishes warmly glow,
To hail the first of May.

From a London paper of the 19th Jan.

By the Guernsey Trader, capt. Walker, from St. Maloes, we have received the following interesting account of the escape of a gentleman of Jersey, who, since the preliminaries of peace were signed, passed over to the nearest sea port in France, with his servant and horses, intending to see the country. Having travelled nearly forty miles in the interior of France, they came to an old chateau, converted into an inn, by the side of a wood; here the gentleman ordered dinner:—whilst it was preparing, he amused himself with strolling about the house, when, in a back barn, he discovered three bodies of men, stripped and murdered, apparently very recently. Struck with horror at this sight, he communicated his suspicion of the landlord to his servant, and immediately they walked out of the yard, as if meaning to see the garden and grounds, leaving their horses in the stable, to prevent suspicion. They had no sooner reached the wood, near the inn, distant about one quarter of a mile, than they were attacked by some armed banditti. The gentleman, by striking into a thick part of the wood, and running hard, fortunately escaped, and got to a neighbouring village, where he found an Officer, and about 20 dragoons, quartered, for the purpose of detecting robbers in that part of the country. He communicated his story to the Commanding Officer, who immediately mounted the gentleman on one of the dragoon horses, as a guide, and, with the party, galloped to the inn, and completely surprized the whole banditti, in the evening, carousing in the kitchen. On searching, they found, in addition to the three murdered bodies, the gentleman's servant dead, stabbed in several places, and stripped. All the banditti, with the pretended landlord, were committed to prison, tried, and condemned to death. The gentleman was so heartily sick of travelling thro' France, that he made the best of his way to St. Maloes, and took a passage in captain Walker's vessel for Jersey, where he arrived safe a few days since.

YORK, (UPPER-CANADA,) PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY JOHN BENNETT.

The Princess of Courtland, one of the most learned women in Europe, is now at Paris, where she attends all the meetings of the Literati.

Letters from Vienna of the 14th ult. ult. inform us, that the Grand Duke of Tuscany has already assumed his new titles as follows :—"We by the grace of God, Prince of Hungary and Bohemia, Archduke of Austria, Elector of Saltzburg, Prince of the Holy Empire, of Passau and Berchtolfgaden.

The following is an extract of a private letter from Orleans, of the date of Jan. 25 :—

"This morning a vast crowd was assembled before the Cathedral to witness the downfall of the cap of liberty from its steeple, and the erection of a weather cock in its stead, and a truly juster symbol of the national character could not be presented ; they were hallooing out the exit of fanticism, as they termed it, and were probably the same people that rejoiced at the subversion of the house of Bourbon, and styled it the overthrow of despotism—but to the honor of the town, I must add, that the manners of the people appear to have been less revolutionized than any other part of France that I have seen, and Orleans, even in the worst times, furnished an asylum to emigrants of every class. Mass has been regularly performed, and though the churches and convents have not escaped the almost general wreck, yet religion has never been neglected, nor has that absolute dereliction of morals, which almost freezes us with horror in the capital, found its way hither ; you see the females of every class with their crosses on their necks, and both sexes following those priests who did not subscribe to the earliest changes, but preferred emigration, whilst the other clergy are quite neglected. Commerce has certainly suffered considerably by the war, and many manufactories have fallen into decay, but very extensive ones are yet carried on."

The great Pyramid of Chops, which was visited by Bonaparte in Egypt, according to Pliny and Diodorus, occupied 360,000 men for 20 years in building ! Herodotus tells, that in his time there was an inscription on the pyramid which expressed that 1600 talents of silver, or £413,333. was employed in garlic leeks and onions, for the workmen !

The Abbe Barthelemy, in his Travels in Italy, relates the following anecdote :—

"On entering Naples, there being a small portion of day light remaining, we wished to profit by it, by taking a view of the Cathedral. As we passed along, I perceived at the corner of a house an inscription upon the wall, which I amused myself by copying, whilst my companions, the President & our two young artists, walked on ; a great crowd in the mean time assembled. When I had finished, I was conducted, almost in spite of myself, into an arcade opposite, which is near the church, and is called the Arcade de Theatius, where seeing several inscriptions, I mounted upon a bench to copy one. A great noise was made behind ; but knowing the Neapolitans to be great talkers, I paid no great attention to it ; all on a sudden, however, the noise encreased, and I heard a voice addressing me, and ordering me to descend. Immediately an officer came to me in a great fury, and without giving me time to obey him, seized me by the arms, and pushed me with great violence into the middle of the populace, abusing me all the time, and threatening me with imprisonment. He did not give me time to speak to him before he disappeared.

"As soon as I recovered myself, I requested to be informed by some of those around me what this meant, and was told that on the other side, though at some distance, was a corps de garde, and that the arcade formed a part of the corps de garde, into which no one was allowed to enter without the permission of this officer. I, of course, knew nothing of all this, but I requested to know the name of the officer, & after having obtained it with some difficulty, I went to rejoin the President.

"On our return, we repassed the place, when the officer again made his appearance, and advancing to me with extraordinary hauteur, he told me he understood I had demanded his name, that his name was Nicola Ciampinelli, and if I wished to fight him I had nothing to do but to choose the ground. It is to be remarked, that in giving me this defiance, he called me Signor Abate. I willed to answer him, but he threw himself into a violent passion, and after abusing me in the most furious manner, he finished by saying that I ought to esteem myself happy that he had so much moderation. While he said all this, he held me by the hand, and made the most frightful grimaces, like a fool, eager to add new strength to his folly. I at length, however, with drew my hand, and retired. I made a complaint to the Marquis D'Oflun, who assured me that the officer should be punished. Since that I have heard nothing more of the matter. But I shall never forget Don Nicola Ciampinelli, Lieutenant of Grenadiers in the Royal Regiment of Naples."

Some time since, a child of about 7 years of age, whose parents live in the neighbourhood of Keusington, was seized with a violent spasmodic disorder, for which no remedy could be obtained, and of which the apparently expired ; in consequence of which she was laid in her coffin, and the time of interment was appointed ; but a few hours previous to which the mother stepping into the room to look on her, to her great astonishment observed a motion of the body ; and before she had recovered her first surprize, the child was able to sit upright. Proper cordials were administered, and in the course of a few days the child was sufficiently well to go to school, and has had no symptoms of her disorder since.

A British company of merchants, possessing a large capital, are on the point of forming an establishment in Waterford, for the express purpose of carrying on the southern Whale Fishery touching at Da Lagoa bay on the African coast, so remarkable for its cheapness and abundance in every necessary.

A very singular circumstance took place at Cayenne, in Normandy, on the 9th of January. A young woman, only eighteen years of age, convicted of having strangled her husband, an old man of seventy-four, having been sentenced to death, informed against a young man, a miller, whom she stated to be a principal in the murder. He was accordingly tried, found guilty, & was even on the point of being executed, when she confessed her guilt and declared his innocence. After this avowal she seemed to experience great firmness of mind, and was immediately executed. The punishment of the young man was suspended until the decision of the minister of Justice could be obtained.

It is mentioned in the foreign Journals, that Prince Ogiou has written to the Archduke Charles for leave, after having disbanded his army, to withdraw with his effects into the territory of the Emperor of Germany. The Prince is said to have answered, that his request could not be complied with while he was considered as a rebel by his legitimate Sovereign.

From late London papers.

A Stugard newspaper gives the following account of an introduction to the First Consul,

"We were conducted into a saloon where were assembled the ambassadors, and those foreigners who were to be conducted to the audience. We were all in the first instance, presented to the Counsellor of State, Benezech ; the Minister Talleyrand also made his appearance, while the State Indies guarded the doors and overlooked the apartments. In a short time the domestics of Bonaparte came to serve us with chocolate, liquors, &c. In about half an hour we were conducted by Benezech through a long line of guards into the hall of audience.—During this procession warlike music was heard, which seemed to transport us all to Marengo. In the saloon preceding that of the Consul, the officers of the Staff formed a double line. The Consuls were placed near the chimney, with four officers of the guards in full uniform, behind them ; the ministers were on the right, and the Counsellor of State on the left ; whilst many members of the legislative bodies, and a great number of general officers, formed a semi-circle. The entrance completed the circle. The foreigners ranged themselves by the side of the respective Diplomatic agents, who took their stations without any apparent design. The envoy from the Pope placed himself on the right of the Consuls ; by the side of him was the imperial ambassador ; then followed the ambassadors of Prussia, Denmark, &c. Bonaparte alone did the honors of the audience ; he made his round with inexpressible ease—he spoke to all without the least affectation, and found means to say something agreeable to each.

"As we were near eighty in number, he was near an hour making the round. Having at length, however, returned to his place, we made our bows, and were re-conducted by Talleyrand and Bernezech, amidst the music of martial instruments, into the first saloon, from whence we departed filled with satisfaction and admiration at what we had seen and heard."

A gentleman, a great landed proprietor in Airshire, was a few days ago waited on by several of his tenants. After a little conversation, they expressed a wish that he would use his interest to get the ports shut against the importation of grain. "That is what I cannot do," replied he, "but you can of yourselves easily effect it." "Which way?" enquired one of them. "By selling your meal," answered he "at or under one shilling the peck, the ports will soon be shut." "We cannot afford, Sir, to sell it at that rate." "Try you is," said he "for this year, and if you cannot afford it, come to me, and upon my word of honour, I will take your leases off your hand." The farmers panick struck at such an advice being given them by their landlord, instantly with drew from his presence, not knowing how to look him or one another in the face.

We learn by an article from Petersburgh, that the Emperor Alexander has abolished the practice of putting criminals to the rack, in order to extort confession from them. This wise edict was originally suggested to the Empress Elizabeth by the celebrated Beccaria.

By a letter from Newtownglen, in the parish of Lloyd, of the 12th inst. we have the following account of the miraculous preservation of two boatmen, after remaining two nights and two days exposed to the fury of the waves, on the side of an open boat, the having been overset in a gale of wind :—

"A seaman by the name of O'Drain of this parish, and another named Skilson, belonging to Lame, left home for Newtownglen, in an open boat, on Friday the 5th ult. About three o'clock in the afternoon, having turned the Garran Point, making into Red Bay, a sudden squall of wind from the shore overset the boat ; and though the accident was seen by many, yet owing to some fatality, a boat sufficient to brave the sea could not be launched in time to prevent the other from drifting out of sight, which, together with a very dark night coming on, rendered it impossible to afford them any assistance. Fortunately, however, the boat was principally laden with deals, which being fixed under the seats, kept her above water, and enabled the two men to get on her side ; in which situation they were carried up to Ballygetty head, near Lame, and the next day (Saturday) were off the Mull of Kyntyre, being driven to and fro by the tide. At length three violent waves striking the boat in succession, she rited again, when the two men were thrown a considerable way from her ; but having taken the precaution to fasten ropes round their bodies, they regained the wreck. The boat was now floating erect, but most of the sails were gone, and also her rudder ; her mast too was out of its step, so that their situation was now little better than before ; except that with the greatest difficulty, they got at a bottle of wine, mixed with opiate, which happened to be on board.

"Having drank this, their only beverage, O'Drain went to sleep for several hours, altho' the waves were almost every moment washing over him. In this hopeless situation they drifted all that night and next day along the coast of Scotland, till they came off Islay, where late on Sunday afternoon, they were seen by the boatmen on shore, who instantly went off to their relief, snatched them from the wreck, and towed their boat into harbour.

"Skilton is said to be an excellent swimmer, and might thereby have made the land, but could not prevail on himself to leave his brother in misfortune, who is a man rather advanced in years. They have both large families ; to the society and caution of whom they are again happily restored."

There is now in Spain a family of the name of Levi, who pretend to be descendants of that mentioned in the Bible, and consequently related to the Virgin Mary and Veronica ; a genealogy so far traced could not fail procuring them in Spain the Titles of Dukes and Marquilles.

One of them, originally of Flanders, when that country was under the dominion of Spain, determined to gratify himself with other honors, for want of a title, and to show his contemporaries & posterity, the source from whence he had the honor to spring ; he commissioned Albert Durer, or one of his imitators, to paint two pictures, in one of which St. Veronica is represented receiving Mrs. Levi and her two daughters, who are introduced by an Angel, whilst two other smaller Angels are bringing them chairs, and on a label attached to the mouth of St. Veronica, is written "pray be seated cousins !"—In fact there should not be much etiquette amongst relations.

The other picture represents the Holy Family at [illegible], and Mr. Levi entering with his four sons, respectfully approaching with his hat in his hand, whilst an Angel is busied in fetching plates for the visitors ; St. Joseph turns his hand towards them, as he is on the point of taking a mouthful ; and the Virgin is sitting beside him, infant Jesus on her knee, and a knife in her right hand, her eyes are fixed on Mr. Levi, and from her mouth is written, "be covered cousin."

These pictures were but a few years ago in a church in Flanders, as folding doors to a crucifixion.

A Paris paper, the Clef du Cabinet, lately received the following ludicrous Quid pro quo. One of its number announced the following intelligence on the 24th Dec.

BIRTHS,

"On the 23d inst. at Paris, Madame Daguet, of three daughters. The mother and children are as well as can be expected."

Two days after the Journal de Paris contained the following letter :

To the Editor of the Clef du Cabinet.

"I have read, my dear sir, the article which you have done me the honor to insert in your journal, upon my happy deliverance. I have been, as you state, delivered of three little daughters, who are strong, and likely to do well, but these things are not uncommon in our family. I am myself the youngest of four born at a birth, and my mother, who is still alive, is the elder of twins. My cousin, too, as Mr. Lyonnois, a surgeon barber and accoucheur, residing en Greve, can attest, lately nursed three little ones born at a birth, and has never kept her bed a single day since the was delivered of them. For her sake, as well as my own I requeft you will insert this little article, in which I have the honor to subscribe myself, your obedient humble servant, BLONDE, FEMME DAGUET."

[Note of the Editor.—You muft know that Madame Daguet is a little female pug dog, who has been in truth delivered of three little ones ; and that her owner, Cityenne Larie, of the Chaufee d'Antin, has taken the above mode of announcing it in the Clef du Cabinet, to all her friends and acquaintance, that their little favourit is in the straw.

Feb. 10. It is with infinite satisfaction, that we yesterday communicated to our readers the intelligence of Admiral Campbell's having set fail for the Weft Indies. It is a conclusive proof of a wound being entirely closed, which we hope, and indeed are confident, will never again break forth, and in the cure of which, the delicate, the skillful and decisive hand of government has been throughout so eminently displayed.

GENOA, Dec. 31.

It now appears to be certain, fays our Gazette, that the African piratical powers, will not be suffered much longer to continue their depredations. The States of America have already declared that instead of submitting to a disgraceful tribute, they will fit out some frigates for the protection of their trade ; and it is generally asserted, that English and French frigates, with flags of truce, have demanded of the Beys in the name of their respective nations—

1. That all the slaves of the two nations now in the hands of the Tunisians, shall be set at liberty.

2. That all the Corsairs shall be disarmed.

3. That all European ships be permitted freely to carry on their trade.

The same demands have been made of all the piratical states of Barbary.

NEW YORK, April 5.

His Excellency Prince Rufpoli, of Naples, a bailli of the order of Malta, arrived in Charleston the 20th ult. He is on a tour through the United States.

We learn by a gentleman from Virginia, that the college of William and Mary, at Williamsburg, is completely broken up, and the system of Education there, for the present, at least, entirely discontinued. The circumstances of this extraordinary affair are as follow :—In consequence of a difference between two of the students, a Mr. Lee, of Norfolk, and a Mr. Yates of Fredericksburg, a duel was fought, in which the latter was wounded. For this gross violation of the rules of the College, they were both expelled, which so enraged the reft of the Collegians, that they assembled, went to the Church, broke and destroyed all the windows, cut down the pulpit, tore out all the leaves of the bible and gave them to the the wind—from thence they proceeded to the House of Judge Tucker, professor of law in the University, broke all his windows, pelted his house, abused him, and then each repaired to his own home. The Judge it is said, has resigned his office of professor, in consequence of the outrage, and thus dies one of the oldest & wealthiest seminaries of learning in the United States of America. Ev. Post.

RETRACT OF A LETTER.

"Port Republican, 27th Feb. 1802.

"I had the honor to write you the 20th inst. to inform you of the new disasters of this unhappy country; they succeed one another with so much rapidity, that each day announces us the burning of some towns, the ruin of some districts, and the murdering of the white population that has the misfortune to be found there.

"The districts of Leogane, L'Arcahaye, les Grand Bois, St. Marc, Gonaives, Port de Paix, the Cape, &c. are to this moment, those that have suffered the most.

"There remains not a single vestage of buildings in les Grands Bois, even the negro houses have not been spared, all the cultivators have been carried away from them, and conducted to Miribalais, where the insurgents are entrenching; one cannot form an idea of those cannibals, they do not only murder the white race, without consideration of age or sex, but they direct also their barbarity on some good overseers and servants, that show some interest for the fate of the whites. They are monsters who must have every moment new victims, we have, to a word, my dear sir, to fight against tygers, & not men.

"By a miracle, I had the good fortune to escape their ferocity, but I sincerely regret about 60 persons of our district that have perished by all kinds of deaths. Of this number are, Mr. Mattier and his son in law, Mr. Manonville, Messrs. Manville, Point, sen. Masseau, Ducland, Lefevre, Ferrau, Bonet, Guibert, &c. to whom they add Verteir, his wife and two children, Mrs. Decoud, her daughter and three children, all the Ladies Lemaitre, Savariau, Mr. Robion, Merillon, Miss Martel, her brother and others; in fine about 60 persons of the parish des Grand Bois, add to these all the white people of Mirabalais, and many men & women of colour.

"The French that have just come full of ideas, and philanthropic opinions begin to open their eyes on the conduct of those monsters whom they called on arriving, good and unhappy men; they see that they are not spared more than the unhappy colonists, since several of them have been taken in fighting, have had, some their eyes pulled out, and others their noses or ears cut, and sent back in that state. For that reason the chief of the French army puts all his forces in motion, so that he makes against those tygers a war the activity of which astonishes them; but unhappily they they do not stand before the troops—they fly, and in flying they murder, burn, and carry away the work-shops.

"This plague cannot last long; misery, hunger, and battles destroy a great number of them. The south part, happier than that of the west and the north, is entirely submitted to the French. The harm has been stopped at Petit Guave; there has however, been about 80 whites killed by the commander of Jeremie Domage, a vagabond who is happily arrested and in irons on board the Foudroyant.

"I expect to learn that the large borough of Mirabalais, and the country round it, will have experienced the same fate as our unhappy parish of Grand Bois; where the white population has been entirely destroyed.

Extract of another letter,—same date.

"It is with extreme sorrow I inform you of the dreadful conflagration of the town of St. Marc. The black genl. Dessalines had caused the pillasters of his house to be done over with pitch and tar, in order that the fire might consume it quicker. He has forced Mr. Lucas, who sold it to him, to give him back the money, and when he was reimbursed, he sent him with the other whites to the depot of the Petite Riviere of L'Artibonite, where perhaps none of them exist to this moment.

"A white man who escaped from the Petite Riviere, reports, having seen shot Mr. Dodart, of St. Marc, as also the judge of Peace; and a negro has assured us he had seen shot near the sea, Mr. Poyes, this same negro told us also, that Messrs. Corpon, Bodin and others have experienced the same fate at Petite Riviere.

"The women and children have been carried there, the women were naked, having but an apron. The sick without distinction of colour, had been burnt in their houses.

"According to the declaration made there is missing yet, 250 whites of Port au Prince, out of those that had been carried away the day of the evacuation of the city, 113 have been found dead on the road of Mirabalais, where the Brigands were conducting them, those that have escaped, experience dreadful sickness. Mr. Tete, sen. died to day of this sickness.

"Notwithstanding all the brigands are routed, 10,000 men pursue them. The French have a garrison in St. Marc. The negroes are in the mountains of Gabon, and I hope the chiefs will be taken.

"The notorious Pierre Louis, who committed the horrors at Leogane, has been taken at Cul de Sac two days ago, in going to join Dessalines.

"The negro who escaped from St. Marc, told me, that all the south side of St. Marc had been consumed as far as the church."

POETRY.

ODE

FOR THE YEAR 1802.

BY HENRY JAMES PYE, ESQ. P. L.

LO, from BELLONA's crimson car,
At length the panting Steeds unbound!
At length the Thunder of the War
In festive shouts of Peace is drown'd:
Yet, as around her Monarch's brow
BRITANNIA twines the Olive Bough,
Bold as her Eagle-eye is cast
On hours of recent Tempest past,
Thro' the rude wave and adverse gale
When free she spread her daring sail
Immortal GLORY's radient form
Her guilding Load Star thro' the storm;
Directed by whose golden ray
Thro' rocks and shoals she kept her steady way—
"My Sons," she cries, "can Honor's Guerdon claim
"Unsoil'd my parent worth, unstain'd their Sovereign Fame."
ALBION, tho' oft by dread alarms
Thy native valour has been tried,
Ne'er did the lustre of thy arms
Shine forth with more refulgent pride,
Than when, while EUROPE's sons dismay'd,
Shrunk recreant from thy mighty aid,
Alone, unfriended, firm you stood
A barrier 'gainst the looming flood!
When mild and soft the silken breeze
Blows gently o'er the tripling seas,
The Pinnace then may lightly sweep
With painted oar the halcyon deep;
But, when the howling whirlwinds rife,
When mountain billows threat the skies,
With ribs of oak the barque muft brave
The inroad of the furious wave.
The hardy crew muft to the raging wind
Oppofe the ftiewy arm, the unconquerable mind.
In ev'ry clime where Ocean roars
High thro' the Naval Banners flew,
From where, by Hyperborean fhores,
The frozen gale ungenial blew,
To fultry lands, that Indian furges lave,
Atlantic ifles, and fam'd Canopa's wave;
Tho' from infulted Egypt's coaft
Thy armies swept the vitlors hoft,
From veteran bands where Britifh valour won
The lofty walls of Ammon's god-like fon!
Ufelefs the danger and the toil
To free each fell-devoted foil,
Auxiliar legions from thy fide
Recede, to fwell the Gallic conqueror's pride,
While on Marengo's fatal plain,
Faithful to Honor's tie, brave AUSTRIA bleeds in vain!
Not ftir'd by fierce AMBITION's flame
Did ALBION's Monarch urge his car
Impetuous thro' the bleeding ranks of War,
To fuccour and protect his noble aim,
His guardian arm while each Hefperian vale
While LUSITANIA's vine-clad mountains hail,
Their ancient Rights and Laws reftor'd,
The Royal Patriot breathes the avenging fword:
By Heav'n-born CONCORD led, while PLENTY fmiles,
And fheds her bounties wide, to blefs the SISTER ISLES.

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, Eſquire,

Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada.

WHEREAS His Majeſty's faithful Commons of this Province in Parliament aſſembled, did by virtue of a Reſolution of their Houſe of Aſſembly, pray that certain Sums of Money ſhould be applied in ſuch manner as to me ſhould ſeem meet for the purpoſe of purchaſing and diſtributing Hemp Seed gratis amongſt the Farmers, and alſo for the paying of Premiums and Bounties to the deſerving Cultivators and Exporters of Hemp in this Province. GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms at York this twenty-ninth day of July in the Forty firſt year of His Majeſty's Reign, and in the year of Our Lord one thouſand eight hundred and one.

LONDON, Feb. 28.

A FORCE is to be eſtabliſhed at Jamaica, competent to counteract any poſſible inconvenience which might reſult from the introduction of ſo large a body of French troops into St. Domingo, as have recently been ſent thither.

The growing crops throughout the country are of uncommon promiſe; the rye is particularly forward.

The expences of Holland for the current year, amount to the ſum of 64,931,775 florins. Its revenues cannot be eſtimated at a greater ſum than 31 or 32 millions.

Paris Journals to the 21ſt inſt. ſtate the ſailing of the Dutch ſquadron from Breſt, accompanied by a French ſhip arme en flute, and of two freth ſquadrons from Spaniſh ports all for the Weſt Indies. A ſquadron of frigates has alſo put to ſea from Cherbourg, and a new expedition is preparing at Breſt for Guadaloup.

March 2. Letters from Holland ſay, the preſent Conſtitution cannot outlive May. The factions are buſier than ever; among whom there is an Orange party; and for the more general content it is believed in a new order of things the young Prince will have a ſhare in the government. It is ſaid he has been invited to Paris.

NAPPER TANDY.

The London Courier of the 22d Feb. contains the following article:—"By letters from Dublin of the 16th, we are informed of the liberation of Jas. Napper Tandy.—He was brought from Lifford to Wicklow, circuitouſly, in a chaiſe and four, eſcorted by a guard of cavalry, avoiding all the large towns, the better to evade public notice.—They travelled principally in the night. He arrived at Wicklow on the 15th, & was to embark next day on board the Lovely Peggy, capt. Harris, for Bordeaux. The order for his liberation is ſaid to have been produced by proceedings at Amiens. He was not ſuffered to communicate with any one, after the order arrived."

The Morning Chronicle of the 18th ſays, "We have received from Paris, though different channels, accounts which we believe to be perfectly well founded, ſtating, that the Ruſſian and Auſtrian Miniſters have preſented notes in their own name againſt the conduct of the Chief Conſul of France aſſuming the place of Chief Preſident of the Italian Republic. The Ruſſian Miniſter cannot yet have received inſtructions from his Court; but there is little doubt that the Court of Peterſburgh will ſupport the remonſtrance of its Miniſter, ſince it has already patroniz-ed the Rights of the King of Sardania, which the French have completely diſ-regarded, by effectively uniting Pied-mont to France.

COPY of the CONVENTION be-tween the UNITED STATES & GREAT BRITAIN.

Concluded at London, the 8th day of Jan. 1802.

Difficulties having ariſen in the exe-cution of the treaty of amity, commerce and navigation, concluded at London on the 4th day of November, 1794, between his Britannic Majeſty and the United States of America, and in con-ſequence thereof, the proceedings of the commiſſioners under the 7th arti-cle of the ſame treaty having been ſuſ-pended, the parties to the ſaid treaty being equally deſirous, as far as may be, to obviate ſuch difficulties, have reſpectively named plenipotentiaries to treat and agree reſpecting the ſame: That is to ſay, His Britannic Majeſty has named for his plenipotentiary the Right Honorable Robert Banks Jenkin-ſon, commonly called Lord Hawkeſbu-ry, one of His Majeſty's moſt honora-ble privy council, and his principal Se-cretary of State for foreign affairs; and the Preſident of the United States, by and with the advice and conſent of the Senate thereof, has named for their plenipotentiary, Rufus King, Eſq. Mi-niſter plenipotentiary of the ſaid Unit-ed States to His Britannic Majeſty, who have agreed to and concluded the fol-lowing articles:—

Art. 1. In ſatisfaction and diſcharge of the money which the United States might have been liable to pay, in pur-ſuance of the proviſions of the 6th arti-cle, which is hereby declared to be cancelled and annulled, except ſo far as the ſame may relate to the execu-tion of the ſaid ſeventh article, the Unit-ed States of America hereby engage to pay, and His Britannic Majeſty con-ſents to accept, for the uſe of the per-ſons deſcribed in the ſaid 6th article, the ſum of ſix hundred thouſand pounds ſterling, payable at the time and place, and in the manner following: that is to ſay, the ſaid ſum of ſix hundred thouſand pounds ſterling ſhall be paid at the city of Waſhington, in three an-nual inſtalments of two hundred thou-ſand pounds ſterling each, and to ſuch perſons as ſhall be authoriſed by His Britannic Majeſty to receive the ſame; the firſt of the ſaid inſtalments to be paid at the expiration of one year; the ſecond inſtalment at the expiration of two years, and the third and laſt inſtal-ment at the expiration of three years next following the exchange of the ra-tifications of this convention: and to prevent any diſagreement concerning the rate of exchange, the ſaid payments ſhall be made in the money of the ſaid United States, reckoning four dollars and forty-four cents to be equal to one pound ſterling.

Art. 2. Whereas it is agreed by the 4th article of the definitive treaty of peace, concluded at Paris on the 3d day of September, 1783, between His Bri-tannic Majeſty and the United States, that creditors on either ſide ſhould meet with no lawful impediments to the recovery of the full value in ſter-ling value of all bona fide debts there-tofore contracted, and it is hereby de-clared that the ſaid fourth article, ſo far as it reſpects its future operation, is hereby recognized, confirmed and declared to be binding and obligatory upon His Britannic Majeſty and the ſaid United States, and the ſame ſhall be accordingly obſerved with punctua-lity and good faith.—And ſo as the ſaid creditors ſhall hereafter meet with no lawful impediment to the recovery of the full value in ſterling money of their bona fide debts.

Art. 3. It is furthermore agreed and concluded that the commiſſioners ap-pointed in purſuance of the 7th article of the ſaid treaty of amity, commerce and navigation, and whoſe proceedings have been ſuſpended as aforeſaid, ſhall immediately after the ſignature of this convention, re-aſſemble and proceed in the execution of their duties according to the proviſions of the ſaid ſeventh article, except only that inſtead of the ſums awarded by the ſaid commiſſion-ers being made payable at the time or times by them appointed, all ſums of money by them awarded to be paid to American or Britiſh claimants, accord-ing to the proviſions of the ſaid ſeventh article, ſhall be made payable in three equal inſtalments, the firſt whereof to be paid at the expiration of one year, the ſecond at the expiration of two years; and the third and laſt at the ex-piration of three years next after the exchange of the ratifications of this convention.

Art. 4. This convention when the ſame ſhall have been ratified by His Majeſty and the Preſident of the Unit-ed States, by and with the advice and conſent of the Senate thereof, and the reſpective ratifications duly exchanged, ſhall be binding and obligatory upon His Majeſty, & the ſaid United States. In faith whereof we, the undeſigned plenipotentiaries of His Britannic Ma-jeſty and of the United States of Ame-rica, by virtue of our reſpective full powers, have ſigned the preſent con-vention and have cauſed the ſeals of our arms to be affixed thereto.

HOUSE of LORDS, Feb. 11.

The Right Honorable Charles Ab-bot, the new ſpeaker was introduced in the uſual form to the bar of the Houſe, and the choice confirmed with cuſtomary formalities, by the Lord Chancellor, by order of His Majeſty, to whom it was inconvenient to be pre-ſent in perſon that day.

"Amiens, Feb. 19.

"The conferences between the ple-nipotentiaries continue to be very fre-quent, and if I may be permitted to judge of the cordiality of co-operation by the mutual attention of the ſeve-ral members of the Congreſs, I might venture to ſtate that we have the moſt happy prognoſtics of an approaching accommodation. With reſpect to the nature of the diſcuſſions, you cannot, of courſe, expect me to give you any information. All that I can pretend to ſay is, that the aſpect is exceeding-ly encouraging, and that thoſe who at leaſt affect to be well informed, ſpeak with confidence of the removal of ev-ery ſerious obſtacle in the way of ad-juſtment, and of courſe entertain the moſt ſanguine hopes relative to the de-finitive ſettlement of the peace."

"If a qualified obſerver on the ſpot were to have noticed and jot down the various changes and tranſitions which have taken place in the public mind for the laſt nine years, ſuch a ſin-gular record could not fail of being ex-tremely intereſting in a very high degree. To the perſon, however, who has not had an opportunity of marking the progreſ-ſive ſhades of opinion, and who has merely to compare this capital, as it is, with what it was immediately before the war, nothing preſents itſelf but a moſt abrupt and ſtriking contraſt. He muſt ſee, at a ſingle coup d'oeil, that there is a marked difference between the Pariſian of 1793, and an inhabitant of the ſame metropolis in 1802. The moral thermometer, which at the for-mer period, had aſcended to fever heat, ſtands at preſent ſomewhat below the temperate degree. In dreſs, in manners, in opinions, the tranſmutation ſeems to be complete. In the infancy of the French Republic, the Pariſian took all models and his precedents from Rome and Sparta. There are now for the ſecond time, become antiquat-ed, and what is left of them, ſeems only in the ſtyle of his furniture, and the dreſs of the female part of his fa-mily.—That reſtleſs avidity of intelli-gence which formerly pervaded all ranks, "when the ſmith, with open mouth let his iron cool, ſwallowing the taylor's news," has now given place to a torpid indifference, which cannot fail to ſtrike even without the aid of contraſt. I anſwer to any enquiry of that kind to mixed company at preſent you are told in general terms, that the French fleet muſt have ſuffered ſeveri-ly in the late ſtorm; and that Bona*parte* (for that is now his name) is the moſt extraordinary man in the univerſe. If the queſtion be re-urged, the reply is, that Mademoiſelles Bourgoing and Vol-ney are the two moſt promiſing actors that the Theatre has long witneſſed; and the converſation turns on the cli-mate, faſhions, and the weather, until it ends with the cuſtomary bon jour. I need ſcarcely add, that this ſpecies of apathy has been more than ever in vogue within the two laſt years.

"It has been ſomewhere ſaid, "that revolutions always move in a circle," & much of what I now ſee paſſing before me appears very ſtrongly to exemplify this maxim. The new fangled modes and terms are rapidly falling into diſ-uſe. The ſtreets and places which had undergone a ſort of revolutionary bap-tiſm, the Pont and Palais Royal, the Rue de Richelieu, &c. are known only by their former titles. The term Ci-toyen is become a mere mot de bureau, & if addreſſed to any perſon in private ſociety, would be nearly tantamount to an inſult. The firſt Conſul ſeems to countenance this departure from the eſtabliſhed form, as at his levees he is always addreſſed as "General, or, Ge-neral Conſul." Indeed, with the ex-ception of the laſt title only, one might be eaſily led to imagine that things were returning, and with a general and rapid recurrence, to their former place and order."

From the French Papers.

The following note has been deliv-ered by the Baron Von Reden, the Envoy of Brunſwick Lunenburgh, and it will alſo be communicated to the Courts of Vienna and Peterſburgh;

"As it has been determined by the peace of Luneville, that ſuch temporal Princes as have loſt a portion of their territories by the ceſſion of the left banks of the Rhine to the French, con-formably to the baſis eſtabliſhed by the Congreſs at Raſtadt, ſhall be indemni-fied by means of ſecularizations; this principle fairly implies, that ſuch in-demnifications ſhall bring no detriment whatever to the temporal princes, nor any portion of them be laid on their territories. His Britannic Majeſty takes it for granted, with regard to this point that in the propoſed indemnifications, the Biſhopric of Oſnaburgh, the alter-nate ſucceſſion to which is fixed in his family by the treaty of Weſtphalia, will neceſſarily be entirely out of the queſ-tion. His Majeſty and the Houſe of Brunſwick have alſo under their pro-tection the ſtate of Corvey and the town of Hochſter. Theſe rights, and the pretenſions ariſing from them, can-not be withdrawn from the Houſe of Brunſwick, but muſt be expreſsly re-ſerved to it. His Majeſty has alſo in-diſputable pretenſions to Hildeſheim, which have always been acknowledged, and cannot be given up. His Majeſty will, to the utmoſt of his power, ſup-port theſe pretenſions. Much as his Majeſty deſires to retain a good under-ſtanding with the courts intereſted in theſe arrangements, he does not ſcruple to declare, that the Biſhoprick of Hil-deſheim is ſo connected, both geogra-phically and politically, with the ter-ritories of Brunſwick Lunenberg, that it can, on no account, paſs into other hands."

INGENIOUS DISCOVERY.

St. Aubin, a man of letters at Paris, and member of the Tribunate, gives in the Journal of Commerce, of the 20th January, the following account of the ſubtem plongeur, a diving boat, lately diſcovered by Mr. Fulton, an Ameri-can:—

"I have, ſays he, juſt been to in-ſpect the plan and ſection of a nautilus, or diving boat, invented by Mr. Fulton ſimilar to that with which he made his curious and intereſting experiments at Havre and Breſt.

"The diving boat, in the conſtruc-tion of which he is now employed, will be capacious enough to contain 8 men, and proviſions enough for twenty days, and will be of ſufficient ſtrength and power to enable him to plunge 100 feet under water, if neceſſary. He has contrived a reſervoir for air, which will enable 8 men to remain under wa-ter for eight hours. When the boat is above water, it has two ſails and looks juſt like a common boat. When the is to dive the maſts and ſails are ſtruck.

"In making his experiments at Ha-vre, Mr. Fulton not only remained a whole hour under water with three of his companions, but held his boat pa-rallel to the horizon at any given depth. He proved that the compaſs points as correctly under water as in the ſurface, and that while under wa-ter the boat made way at the rate of half a league an hour, by means con-trived for that purpoſe.

"It is not twenty years ſince all Europe was aſtoniſhed at the firſt aſcen-ſion of men in balloons; perhaps in a few years they will not be leſs ſurpriſ-ed to ſee a flotilla of diving boats, which on a given ſignal, ſhall to avoid the purſuit of an enemy, plunge un-der water, and riſe again ſeveral leagues from the place where they deſcended!

"The invention of balloons has hitherto been of no advantage, becauſe no means have been found to direct their courſe.—But if ſuch means could be diſcovered, what would become of ſhips, cannon fortreſſes, and the whole art of war?

"But if we have not ſucceeded in ſteering the balloon, and even were it impoſſible to attain that object, the caſe is different with the diving boat, which can be conducted under water in the ſame manner as upon the ſurface. It has the advantage of laſting like a common boat, and alſo of diving when it is purſued. With theſe qualities it is fit for carrying ſecret orders; to ſuc-cour a blockaded port, and to examine the force and poſition of an enemy in their own harbours. Theſe are ſure evident benefits, which the diving boat at preſent promiſes. But who can ſee all the conſequences of this diſcovery, for the improvements of which it is ſuſceptible? Mr. Fulton has already added to his boat a machine, by means of which he blew up a large boat in the port of Breſt: and if by future expe-riments the ſame effect could be pro-duced on frigates or ſhips of the line, what will become of maritime wars, and where will failors be found to man ſhips of war, when it is a phyſical cer-tainty, that they may every moment be blown into the air by means of a di-ving boat, againſt which no human foreſight can guard them!"

A very curious incident is mention-ed in a country paper, as having lately occurred in the neighbourhood of Clahmore, County of Waterford:—A country man had taken ſo extraordi-nary a fancy to a young girl, who lived at ſome diſtance from him, and not meeting with proper encouragement in the uſual way of addreſſing her, he re-ſolved to carry her off, and ma*ry* her by force; and for this purpoſe engaged a number of fellows to aſſiſt him, on an appointed night. The girl's brother having been informed of this plot by a perſon in the ſecret, dreſſed himſelf up in his ſiſter's cloaths, and pretended to be very buſy in ſmoothing linen when the ravihers approached; they burſt open the door, and placed the ſuppoſed damſel behind her intended ſpouſe, who inſtantly gallopped off to his houſe where he configned her to the care of his mother and ſiſter, deſiring them to be very kind to her, and keep her in bed until he went for a clergyman. By the rudeneſs of their gueſt, however, the ſecret of his ſex was almoſt imme-diately betrayed, and the whole termi-nated in a hearty laugh at the expence of the amorous Knight Errant.

NEW YORK, April 16.

LATE FROM CAPE FRANCOIS.

We are informed, by a gentleman from Cape Francois, that on the day he left that place, a French corvette, which was detached from the Batavian fleet ar-rived, and informed that the Batavian fleet with ſeven thouſand French troops on board, was diſtant from the Cape a-bout three days ſail.

[Phil. True American.

The population of the world is, at preſent, eſtimated at about 1,000,000,000 of inhabitants, ſpread over the ſur-face of about 197 millions of ſquare miles, but of which the habitable part contains hardly 45,300,000 ſqu re miles. The reſt is covered by water.

In admitting this ſuppoſition of 1000,000,000 of inhabitants,

Europe, in an extent of 3,300,000 ſquare miles, at 69 1-2-100 to a degree, would have a population of 47 inhabi-tants per ſquare mile, and one hundred and fifty-five millions of inhabitants in total.

Aſia, including New Holland and Si-beria, which are almoſt deſarts, would contain in an extent of 18,000,000 of ſquare miles, 43 inhabitants per ſqu-mile, and 815,000,000 inhabitants in total.

Burning Africa, in an extent of one hundred millions of ſquare miles, would contain 12 inhabitants per ſquare mile, and 1200,000,000 inhabitants in the whole.

Newly diſcovered America, in an ex-tent of 14,000,000 of ſquare miles would contain ſomewhat more than one inhabitant to a ſquare mile, at the rate of 18,000,000 of inhabitants in total.

According to this computation, tak-ing all the inhabitable part of the world together, there would be 15 inhabitants per ſquare mile.

So preſſing are ſaid to be the exigen-cies of the ſtate, that the Dutch govern-ment lately ſold fifteen millions lbs. of coffee, now at Batavia, to the merchants of Holland. The purchaſe money a-mounts to three millions of florins—one third to be paid immediately, ano-ther in Batavia, and the laſt on the re-turn of the ſhips.

Tanning.—An improvement and ex-traordinary having has been lately diſ-covered by Sir Joſeph Banks in this proceis, by means of an article, the produce of India, called Cutch, on Terra Japonica. It is reported to have ten times the ſtrength of oak bark; and means are taking in England for its im-portation.

"The following is a paragraph of a letter, which I have this moment re-ceived from a friend in Paris, under date of 22d Feb. It is important, and ſhould be known in America.

"It is determined that a colony ſhall be ſettled in Louiſiana and Flori-da. Gen. Bernadotte is to have the command; its departure will perhaps depend on the accounts expected from St. Domingo; preparations are now making for this expedition. I under-ſtand the Indian nations, adjoining Flo-rida, have agents now here, for the purpoſe of making treaties with this country, to unite themſelves with the troops or ſettlers that may be ſent from hence. The eſtabliſhment of this colo-ny is ſaid to be a darling object, and it will be purſued with ardor, unleſs the difficulties that may ariſe at St. Domin-go ſhould derange the preſent plan."

Laws of divorce at preſent exiſting in France.

Whether the man or woman with to be divorced, they muſt give notice of it to the Prefect, and ſix months time is neceſſary before it takes place; in the Interim the neceſſary arrangements for the maintenance of the children are made, which are as follows:—the girls are generally conſigned to the care of the mother, and the boys to the father; a very minute inveſtigation takes place of the father's or mother's fortune, ſo that the children are certain of being provided for. If a man is rich and is the party that ſues for the divorce, he muſt return half the wife's jointure, and ſettle a maintenance on her for life. If a woman ſues for the divorce, the wife muſt return every article of preſent ſhe has received from her huſband, even before marriage. The woman is not compelled however, to maintain her huſband after divorce, but muſt keep her children. If the father re-marries, and has heir by his laſt marriage, the children of the former marriage have the ſame claim to the patrimony as the others.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms at York this twenty-ninth day of July in the Forty-firſt year of His Majeſty's Reign, and in the year of Our Lord one thouſand eight hundred and one.

P. HUNTER, Lt. Govt.

By His Excellency's Command,

Wm. JARVIS, Secy.

LONDON, March 9.

On Saturday an Admiralty expreſs was received by Sir T. Paiſley, at Plymouth, directing the Plantagenet and Conqueror of 74 guns, which were to have been placed on the ordinary eſtabliſhment of that port, to be taken into dock, and fitted for commiſſion with all poſſible diſpatch.

The preceding evening orders were received from the Admiralty and Victualing Board, to prepare with the utmoſt expedition, ſtores and proviſions for all the men of war of every deſcription, laying in Cawſand Bay and the Sound, for four months: in the execution of theſe orders, a preference was directed to be given to the line of battle ſhips: the ſtore-keeper and agent victualler commenced their preparations a few hours after the arrival of the orders, and it was expected that they would be carried into full effect before the end of the preſent week.

It is certain, that about the 20th February, Joſeph Bonaparte quitted Amiens, and went to Paris to conſult with the Chief Conſul reſpecting the negociation. He ſpent a whole day at Maiſon: on the 25th he returned to Amiens. On this occaſion, no doubt, the whole ſubject of the negociation would be received; it is ſtill the general opinion in London, that miniſters here inſiſted upon bringing the negociation to a termination one way or the other within a ſhort limited period, and the moſt active preparations are going on, if neceſſary to ſupport the determination.

March 10.

Policies were yeſterday opened in this city, on the ground that no treaty would be concluded; and 20 guineas were taken to pay 100, if the negociations at Amiens broke off. Though things are doubtleſs ſomewhat critical, we are ſtill inclined to think that there will be a treaty, and probably the ſteps which have been taken will accelerate its concluſion.

Beſides the ſquadrons deſtined to reinforce our fleets on foreign ſtations, a channel fleet of thirty ſail of the line, including fifteen three deckers, will in the courſe of a few days, put to ſea, under the command of Admiral Cornwallis; and the North Sea fleet, under the orders of Admiral Dickſon, which is now receiving ſupplies of ſeamen from Sheerneſs, is alſo expected to ſail before the end of the preſent week. An official order has been ſent to Woolwich, for ſeveral thouſand hammocks to be ſent off directly, for the equipment of theſe ships which had been laid up in ordinary to be refitted: and the beſt bower cables, which, ſince the ſigning of the preliminary treaty have been diſcontinued in many of our men of war, are, by the order of the Admiralty, to be brought again into immediate and general uſe.

March 11.

A veſſel which arrived at Dover from Boulogne, brought over a report, which is ſtated to have prevailed at Amiens, that unleſs the definitive treaty ſhould be ſigned on Friday next, at the lateſt, Marquis Cornwallis would return to England. Probably this rumour may be the echo of ſome rumours which have prevailed in England; a good deal of doubt ſtill continued in the city yeſterday, on the ſubject.

We yeſterday received Paris Journals of the 6th. They are quite barren of intelligence. Our correſpondent at Paris, informs us, that in conſequence of the late pretended conſpiracies, ſeveral emigrants or royaliſts are arreſted and ſent out of the country.—Among theſe he mentions, that the Abbe Sicard, the teacher of the deaf and dumb, is ſent into exile.—We wonder how the government could think of parting with a man who might have been rendered very uſeful, if, inſtead of teaching the deaf and dumb to ſpeak, he could have taught thoſe who can ſpeak and hear, to be deaf and dumb. This would form a moſt tranquil and harmonious community, as deaf and dumb ſubjects are very deſirable for ſome governments!

M. Sicard, it ſeems, was guilty of writing ſomething to prove that the title of citizen, was not applicable to Frenchmen. The Duke De Montmorency Laval, has been ſent away, and the Abbe du Pare, lately returned from England, ſent to the Hotel de la Force.

March 12.

Three per cent. Cons. March 12, 67 5 8, talling.

On Wedneſday an interview took place between Lord Hawkeſbury and M. Otto.

It is ſaid that Lord Nelſon is to have the chief command of our fleet in the Weſt Indies. The Meduſa frigate, Capt. Gore, is preparing at Portſmouth to take out his Lordſhip, who will proceed to his deſtination with all poſſible diſpatch. Several more ſhips of the line and frigates, have been ordered to be fitted out for immediate ſervice and join the channel fleet.

The critical ſtate of the negociation ſtill continues to occupy the attention of every one. Nothing farther, however, has tranſpired on the ſubject, no doubt is entertained that miniſters have authorized Marquis Cornwallis to bring the matter to a ſpeedy iſſue, ſo that peace or war will very ſoon be announced. In the mean time the activity of preparation in all our ports is unremitted. Although matters are thus ſuſpended, there ſeems in general to be a conſiderable confidence that a definitive treaty will be concluded.

The delay of the definitive treaty excites a conſiderable degree of alarm.

The public curioſity in this country is now wholly directed to the ſtate of the negociation, and from the great activity in naval equipments, ſome people are inclined to think that its ſucceſs is extremely doubtful. It is certain that the utmoſt exertion is employed inſtantly to ſend a prodigious fleet to ſea. A vigorous preſs has been exerted—a great force has been ordered to rendezvous at Portſmouth. Nothing leſs was to be expected with Lord St. Vincent at the head of the Admiralty; and if it ſhould be neceſſary to 28, there is not the leaſt doubt that even the ruins of the enemy's navy would be annihilated.

Miniſters being the beſt judges of what is proper to be done in conſequence of the late ſtate of the negociation, known accurately to them only, it may be ſuppoſed that theſe preparations have not been thus oſtentatiouſly diſplayed til circumſtances demanded.

All this preparation, therefore, would have been highly proper at former periods of the negociation. It may be neceſſary now, when perhaps the French Government may have ſtarted, or contrived to urge, pretenſions inconſiſtent with the ſpirit of the preliminaries. It is ſaid that the government of this country refuſes to recognize Buonaparte as firſt elected Preſident of the Italian Republic, and we think very properly refuſes. If Bonaparte thinks his ſubjects will eſpouſe his perſonal quarrel on this occaſion, he may be induced to carry things high. It is more probable, however, that the main queſtion will be evaded.

It will, however, be for the nations of the continent to decide in the firſt inſtance what they will do reſpecting the Franco-Italian Republic. Theſe things muſt take their courſe. With reſpect to the immediate intereſts of this country, it is right that an end ſhould be put to that deſtructive naval armiſtice which has ſubſiſted ſince the Preliminaries; & that a treaty of peace ſhould be concluded, which will, as far as poſſible, render its bleſſings reciprocal.—Miniſters, it is underſtood, have demanded a deciſive anſwer from the French government within a ſhort period; and, as Buonaparte cannot place the war on any principle which the French nation would now juſtify, it is probable he will agree to bring the treaty to a concluſion. To renew the war, that is, to evade a declaration after ſo much delay, would be to expoſe the French fleet at ſea, while the French would gain none of theſe poſſeſſions which were to be ceded. If the French government practice evaſion, they ought to be treated as they treated the Auſtrians in the armiſtice in Germany, that is, we ſhould be right in availing ourſelves of the means we poſſeſs to reduce them to other ſentiments.

It is not juſt that the treaty ſhould be ſuſpended till the French hear of their ſucceſs in St. Domingo—till Spain brings home to Cadiz the treaſure that has been accumulated in America ſince the war. Theſe frauds are not to be endured, and the Britiſh nation would applaud acts of true vigour, if it ſhould appear that the enemy have been attempting, under the colour of negociation, to obtain undue advantages.

We are informed by our correſpondent in Paris, that the conſpiracy which has been diſcovered againſt Bonaparte, was detected at Berlin. A correſpondence of ſome kind or other, is ſaid to have been kept up by certain emigrants particularly ſome ladies of rank. With reſpect to the nature of the conſpiracy nothing has tranſpired. It is ſuppoſed to have been directed againſt the life of the Chief Conſul. We entertain conſiderable doubt, however, whether there was any thing ſerious in the affair. It is not to be ſuppoſed that a plan of aſſaſſination would be contrived by ladies of faſhion, or communicated in letters to Berlin.

Houſe of Commons, March 10.

One hundred and thirty thouſand ſeamen were voted for the ſervice of two months, from the 25th March to the 25th May.

PORTSMOUTH, MARCH 8.

An order was this day received by expreſs at the Dock-yard, to fit and fit for ſea immediately, the Windſor Caſtle, of 98 guns, Vice Admiral Mitchell; the Princeſs Royal, of 98 guns, Captain Atkins; and the Juſtice of 80 guns, capt. Sir Edmund Nagle; they are fitting with all poſſible expedition, and will moſt probably ſail on Wedneſday next.

March 9.

The greateſt activity prevails in the different departments of the Dockyard, to get the line of battle ſhips, which were ordered yeſterday, ready for ſea: ſeveral companies of ſhipwrights were immediately ſent on board of each, where they are upon double tides, and will ſleep on board until the ſhips are ready for ſea.

LONDON, March 3.

Mr. Baſſet the meſſenger arrived this morning with diſpatches from Amiens.

We received this morning the Paris papers to the 28th ult. The only article of any importance in theſe confirms the arrival of the Hereditary Prince of Orange at Paris.

He arrived there on the 25th, and the next day was preſented to the Firſt Conſul, by whom he was favorably received.

Reſpecting the negociations at Amiens, the papers neither communicate any intelligence, nor hazard even a ſpeculation; yet the French funds are higher—57. 30.

An order has been received at Portſmouth, to fit out ſeveral ſhips of war with all poſſible expedition:—each ſhip is to take a number of troops on board, and victualled for four months. The deſtination of the ſquadron is a profound ſecret. A rumour that they are going to Turkey to act in conjunction with the Turks againſt Paſwan Oglou, ſeems to be unworthy of credit. We rather think this armament is bound for the Weſt Indies—Lond. Pack.

The Marquis Cornwallis give a moſt ſplendid dinner at Amiens, on Monday ſe'nnight to the French, Dutch and Spaniſh Plenipotentiaries, and their ſeveral ſecretaries, together with a number of the principal inhabitants of the town. His Lordſhip uniformly lives in a ſtyle of the utmoſt elegance and hoſpitality.

Lord Cornwallis diſtributes ten guineas a day, beſides the fragments of his table, among the poor at Amiens.

There is reaſon to believe that the ſalt duty will be repealed. In lieu of this and other duties which will alſo be changed, it is intended to put a heavy duty on Malt and Hops. It is alſo ſaid that coals will be taxed at the pit's mouth, ſo that the duty paid in the metropolis may be more general throughout the Kingdom.

It was not merely the Dutch funds which fell lately in Holland, but alſo the Ruſſian, American, Pruſſian, funds &c. fell 5 and 6 per cent. It is calculated that the fall in the funds of theſe countries, amounts to 50 millions. The cauſe of this aſtoniſhing depreſſion is explained in letters from Holland, received on Saturday, to be the facility of getting into the new Dutch Loan, which appears ſo advantageous that the ſales of ſtock are immenſe, for the purpoſe of carrying the produce to the officers for the new loan. In the ſingle province of Holland, there were ſubſcribed in one day 22 millions.—It is in ſhort, nothing leſs than a revolution in the moſt world.

TORBAY, March 8.

On Monday arrived here a King's Meſſenger to Admiral Cornwallis, and about an hour and a half after his arrival, His Majeſty's ſhips Belleropbon, Robuſt, Magnificent, Excellent, Audacious and Egar, got under weigh, and ſailed immediately.—Deſtination unknown, but generally ſuppoſed for the Weſt Indies.

PLYMOUTH, Feb. 26.

It has blown a hurricane at N. N. W and at ten ſuddenly ſhifted to N. N. E. when it blew with incredible fury. The frigates in the Sound, rode very hard during the night, and ſeveral guns of diſtreſs were fired. At day break the gale increaſed, and blew with addition. al violence; the Beaulieu of 44 guns, capt. Roynitz, was driven two cables length, and parted her beſt and ſmall bower anchors; fortunately the bro't up with her ſtream anchor; ſhe made ſignals for aſſiſtance, which were ſlving till twelve at noon, and was aniwered by all the men of war in the Sound, & the Cambridge in Hamooze. One of the ward launches got ſafe down along ſide the Beaulieu, and payed on board her two freſh cables, with new anchors, when ſhe was ſoon mooted in ſafety.—Four P. M. the gale is ſome what abated, though it ſtill blows hard.

SHERBORNE, March 4.

In addition to many former attempts to conſtruct a carriage to run without horſes, a method has lately been tried at Camborne, Cornwall, that ſeems to promiſe ſucceſs. A carriage has been conſtructed, containing a ſmall ſteam engine, the force of which was found ſufficient to impel the carriage, containing ſeveral perſons, amounting to a ton and a half weight, again a hill of conſiderable ſteepneſs, at the rate of 4 miles in an hour. Upon a level road it will run at the rate of 8 or 9 miles in an hour.

The wind blew ſo tempeſtouſly on the night of the 23d ult. as to break down 40 feet of the balluſtrade on the north ſide of Redcliff church, Briſtol.

From London Papers.

WAR-OFFICE, Feb. 6.

Thomas Aſton Coffin, Eſq; is appointed to be Commiſſary of Accompts in Britiſh North America.

The following dreadful accident happened to the Sir Edward Hamilton, rice ſhip bound to Bengal:—The ſhip Sir Edward Hamilton, capt. Robertſon, in lat. 46 44. S. and 40 E. long. was ſtruck by lightning, which carried away the foretop-gallant maſt, ſhivered the foretop maſt and fore-cap, and went thro' the deck, abreaſt of the foremaſt. It then ſpread below, ſetting fire to the ſailors' hammocks, wrenching all the iron from their cheſts, and taking a direction aft into the cabin, went off among the arms which were in that part of the ſhip with a dreadful explotion. Capt. Robertſon and the crew, who fortunately were on deck furling every ſail (in blowing a hurricane at the moment) the night the ſhip blown up, but the ſmoak and ſulphurous ſmell having ſubſided, they found the was ſtill above the waves, and, by timely and ſpirited exertions, they were ſucceſsful in extinguiſhing the flames. The lightning burnt all the ſails in the foretop, killed the hogs, melted the cooking utenſils in the gallery, and knocked down all the men who were in the fore-part of the ſhip; but none were killed, though a number of them were blind for ſome days, and have not yet perfectly recovered the uſe of their ſight. The gale during which this alarming accident happened, laſted for ſome days, and was uncommonly ſevere.

Letters from Kingſton, Jamaica, expreſs the high ſenſe which is entertained there of the conduct of the naval commander in chief, in the protection of trade, and the annoying the enemy's privateers. His Majeſty's ſhips are ſo ſtationed as to render it almoſt impoſſible for the enemy's cruizers to keep the ſea with any hope of ſucceſs.

INVASION OF CHINA by the TARTARS.

Recent accounts from Canton ſtate, that a ſtrong body of Tartars had made an incurſion into China, near Sothew, and had proceded along the borders of the deſart almoſt as far as the Mountains of Hoho Nor;—they were well appointed and diſciplined, and excited general terror; the more eſpecially as this invaſion ſeems to have been connected with internal commotions.

The Tartars have in conſequence made a retrograde movement, with a view, it is ſtated, to concentrate their force, and to wait for reinforcements.

Several diſtricts were at the ſame moment in arms, but the Emperor's troops by a prompt movement, brought the inſurgents to action before they could be joined by the Tartars, and routed them with immenſe ſlughter.

In the Eaſtern diſtricts of China, owing to the prevalence of an uncommon drought, the natives have been reduced to the neceſſity of abandoning whole tracts of country in queſt of food.—The Emperor has exerted his authority for their relief; but the general ſituation of the country oppoſes much difficulty to his benevolent purpoſes.

Conſpiracy to murder the Emperor of Perſia.

A plot was lately diſcovered, which had for its object the murder of Baba Khan, the preſent Sovereign of Perſia, and which, involving many of the moſt diſtinguiſhed officers of the ſtate, has excited the ſtrongeſt ſenſation through out the empire.

An officer who had been inſtrumental in advancing the Prince to the throne, conceiving himſelf neglected, formed a project to depoſe him, and won over to his purpoſe the Prime Miniſter Eimatta Dowlah, promiſing to advance him to the Sovereignty: by like means he engaged nineteen perſons of the firſt rank in the empire to embark in the plot, and Mulam Alli, the favorite and conſtant attendant of the Emperor in his retirement, was bribed to aſſaſſinate him. The ſcheme wore the moſt promiſing aſpect, and in order to colour the intended change, troubles were excited in various quarters; but on the eve of its execution the treaſon was diſcovered by means of a letter to the Miniſter, which was by chance intercepted. Eimatta Dowlah and fourteen of his aſſociates were immediately apprehended and put to death in the dungeons of the palace, and ſuch other ſteps were taken as have effectually crulhed the conſpiracy.

Eimatta Dowlah was a decided friend to the Engliſh; he materially contributed to the ſucceſs of our late embaſſy to the Court of Perſia, and is ſpoken of by Captain Malcolm in terms of high reſpect.

Col. Littlehales does not return to Amiens, but goes to Ireland, on the ſubject of the intended reduction of the military eſtabliſhment of that country.

Gov. Bentinck is mentioned as Sir J. Wentworth's ſucceſſor in the Government of Nova Scotia.

Gen Moore, we underſtand, is to be Governor of St. Vincent.

The troops recently returned from Egypt are to be ſtationed at Canterbury and Aſhford; where preparations are making for the reception of 4,000 men, including 500 artillery.

The Firſt Conſul,

H. B. MARET, Secretary of State.

PARIS, Feb. 28.

Count de Dietz, Hereditary Prince of Naſſau, and ſon of the ci devant Stadthouder, was preſented on the 25th to the Firſt Conſul, who gave orders that he ſhould be treated with the reſpect due to his brother-in-law and couſin-german of the King of Prussia. The first Conful made known to him, at his firft audience, the fatisfaction he had experienced on reading the beautiful letter of his father, tending to procure tranquillity to his country, and informed him that circumftances would foon occur when France would be able to give him real teftimonies of it.

CONSTANTINOPLE, January 11.

According to the laft intelligence from Egypt there were ſtill in that country 7000 Engliſh troops, including the corps from India; they will be diſtributed in Alexandria, Damiette, Roſetta, and Ghize. The Beys have united in the laſt place, under the protection of the Engliſh General: the differences in regard to the latter and the chiefs of the Ottoman army being not yet entirely accommodated.

HAGUE, March 1.

Our miniſter at the congreſs of Amiens has made the moſt preſſing repreſentations to the French Ambaſſador, for the re-ſhutting of the Scheldt, in order to ſuſtain the drooping commerce of this country; or if this ſhould be found impoſſible, that then, for preventing its total ruin, it might be made a law, that the trading towns of Brabant and Flanders be rendered ſubject to an impoſt of three-fourths on the tranſit or conveyance of their merchandize, and thoſe of this republic to one-fourth as offering, at the ſame time, to put Middlebourgh on a footing with Dunkirk, and thus one fourth higher. By this means he propoſed the throwing obſtacles in the way of the Engliſh merchant's in Brabant, and to deprive them there of advantages which might be found here, and thus to procure the French a conſiderable gain to the prejudice of the Engliſh.

Our Miniſter has alſo propoſed in the Congreſs, the abrogation of the famous act of navigation paſſed by Cromwell, an act which gave a mortal ſtab to the commerce of this country; and at the concluſion of the peace, to form an entire new commercial treaty with Great Britain. Theſe two points, in the preſent poſture of our affairs, are of the higheſt importance to the Republic.—How far Citizen Schimmelpennick has ſucceeded, or how far he is likely to ſucceed, time muſt determine—for as yet we are ignorant of our deſtination and our fate.

NEW YORK, April 22.

Much injury has been lately ſuſtained at Montego Bay (Jam.) by fire. On the evening of the 16th ult. between 7 and 8 o'clock, a cane-piece caught fire on Iron-ſhore eſtate, and communicated to Providence, which laſted till 3 o'clock the next morning before it was checked, and deſtroyed 30 acres of canes on Iron there, and between 70 and 80 acres on Providence.

On the following day, about half paſt 12 o'clock, a fire broke out at Reading, the property of William Haughton Tharp, Eſq; and conſumed eleven negro houſes.

A moſt ſerious and melancholy circumſtance (ſays a Baltimore paper) occurred on board the ſhip Birmingham, captain M'Carthy, on Saturday laſt.—Juſt as the ſhip entered the river, it was diſcovered that the mate had blown his brains out, in the forecaſtle; and during the conſternation which ſuch an event naturally excited, a young lady, a paſſenger, took the opportunity to throw herſelf overboard, and immediately diſappeared. What adds to the diſtreſs of this ſingular event is, that the mate has left a wife and ſeveral children in this city, and the father and brother of the young lady were alſo paſſengers in the ſame veſſel.

CURIOUS DUEL.

A diſpute lately took place in Paris between a military man and an Apothecary. The ſoldier inſiſted upon ſatisfaction from his adverſary, and appointed a meeting next morning in the Bois de Boulogne. The next morning the apothecary waited on his antagoniſt before the hour appointed, and ſaid to him with great coulneſs, "You are a military, I am a medical man—you underſtand the uſe of the ſword and piſtol—I am only acquainted with drugs.—You are the challenger, therefore I have a right to chuſe my weapon. Here are two pills—one is poiſon, the other is not. Do you chuſe one and ſwallow it, and I will ſwallow the other." The officer laughed very heartily at his propoſition, and they ſat down to breakfaſt very good friends.

An actor of ſome humour, whoſe name we ſhall not now mention, was lately preſſed for the payment of a large bill. The debtor declared himſelf to be, in the modern phraſe, in a ſtate of inſolvenſy. The taylor very modeſtly aſked for a bond, which the other expreſſed his readineſs to grant, provided the matter was kept a ſecret!—When the bond was brought, it was indignantly torn and thrown in the taylor's face. "You raſcal," ſaid the indignant comedian, "you promiſed to keep the ſecret, and now your paper begins, "Be it known to all men by theſe preſents!"

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, Eſquire,

Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada.

WHEREAS His Majeſty's faithful Commons of this Province in Parliament aſſembled, did by virtue of a Reſolution of their Houſe of Aſſembly, pray that certain Sums of Money ſhould be applied in ſuch manner as to me ſhould ſeem meet for the purpoſe of purchaſing and diſtributing Hemp Seed gratis amongſt the Farmers, and alſo for the paying of Premiums and Bounties to the deſerving Cultivators and Exporters of Hemp in this Province. And whereas I thought fit to aſſent to the prayer of the ſaid Commons—NOW KNOW YE that "I PETER HUNTER, Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of this Province, by virtue of the Authority ſo veſted in me, and the better to effectuate the wiſe and liberal Intentions of the ſaid faithful Commons—And well knowing the Ability, Integrity and diligence of the Honorable JOHN M'GILL, Eſquire, one of the Legiſlative and Executive Councils, and of the Honorable DAVID WILLIAM SMITH, Eſquire, one of the Executive Council and Speaker of the Houſe of Aſſembly of this Province, have nominated and appointed the ſaid John M'Gill and David William Smith Commiſſioners for the purpoſe of purchaſing and diſtributing of Hemp Seed gratis amongſt the Farmers, and alſo for the paying of Premiums and Bounties to the deſerving Cultivators and Exporters of Hemp, according to the true intent and meaning of the ſaid Reſolution, not doubting but that the encouragement thus literally held forth by His Majeſty's Faithful Commons, will effectually promote a meaſure ſo agreeable to the wiſhes of the Mother Country, and ſo highly conducive to the proſperity of this Province.

LONDON GAZETTE EXTRAORDINARY.

Downing-ſtreet, March 28, 1802.

MY LORD,

I HAVE the ſatisfaction of informing you, that I have received a diſpatch from Marquis Cornwallis containing the intelligence that the Definitive Treaty of Peace had been finally ſettled, and would be ſigned by the Plenipotentiary of his Majeſty, and by the Plenipotentiaries of France, Spain, and the Batavian Republic, as ſoon as the ſeveral copies of the Treaty could be prepared for that purpoſe. Marquis Cornwallis propoſed tranſmitting the Treaty by one of his Secretaries immediately after its ſignature; and it may therefore be hourly expected.

Downing ſtreet, March 29.

Mr. Moore, Aſſiſtant Secretary to Marquis Cornwallis, arrived this morning at nine o'clock with the Definitive Treaty of Peace, which was ſigned at Amiens at four o'clock in the afternoon of the 27th inſt. by the Plenipotentiary of his Majeſty, and by the Plenipotentiaries of France, Spain, and the Batavian Republic.

Downing-ſtreet, half paſt 9, March 29.

MY LORD,

Mr. Moore, Aſſiſtant Secretary to Marquis Cornwallis, is juſt arrived with the Definitive Treaty of Peace, which was ſigned at Amiens on the 27th of this month, by his Majeſty's Plenipotentiary and by the Plenipotentiaries of France, Spain, and the Batavian Republic.

I have the honor to be,
My Lord,
your Lordſhip's moſt obedient humble ſervant,
(Signed) HAWKESBURY.

The Lord Mayor.

This day, ſoon after the arrival of the news of the ſigning of the Definitive Treaty, the Park and Tower guns were fired, and the bells of St. Martin's and other churches were rung on the happy occaſion.

DEFINITIVE TREATY OF PEACE,

Between the French Republic, his Majeſty the King of Spain and Indies, and the Batavian Republic, (on the one part; & his Majeſty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, on the other part.)

(Tranſlated from an Official copy publiſhed in the Moniteur.)

The Firſt Conſul of the French Republic, in the name of the French people, and his Majeſty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, being equally animated with a deſire to put an end to the calamities of war, have laid the foundation of peace, by the preliminary articles which were ſigned in London the 9th Vendemiaire, year 10 (the 1ſt of October, 1801.)

And as by the 15th article of the preliminaries it has been agreed on, "that Plenipotentiaries ſhould be named on the part of each Government, who ſhould repair to Amiens, and there proceed to arrange a Definitive Treaty, in concert with the Allies of the contracting Powers."—

The Firſt Conſul of the French Republic, in the name of the French people, has named as Plenipotentiary the Citizen Joſeph Bonaparte Counſellor of State.

His Majeſty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, has named the Marquis Cornwallis, Knight of the Moſt Noble Order of the Garter, one of his Majeſty's Privy Council, General in his Majeſty's army, &c. &c.

His Majeſty the King of Spain and the Indies, and the Government of the Batavian Republic, have appointed the following Plenipotentiaries, to wit, his Catholic Majeſty has named Don Joſeph Nicolas d'Azara, his Counſellor of State, Grand Croſs of the Order of Charles III. Ambaſſador Extraordinary of his Majeſty to the French Republic, &c. &c.

And the Government of the Batavian Republic has named Roger Jean Schimmelpennick its Ambaſſador Extraordinary to the French Republic, &c.

Which ſaid Plenipotentiaries having duly communicated to each other their reſpective powers, which are tranſcribed at the concluſion of the preſent treaty, have agreed upon the following articles:

Art. I. There ſhall be peace, friendſhip and good underſtanding between the French Republic, his Majeſty the King of Spain, his heirs and ſucceſſors, and the Batavian Republic on the one part, and his Majeſty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, his heirs and ſucceſſors, on the other part.

The contracting parties ſhall uſe their utmoſt efforts to preſerve a perfect harmony between their reſpective countries, without permitting any act of hoſtility whatever, by ſea or by land, for any cauſe or under any pretext.

They ſhall carefully avoid every thing which might for the future diſturb the happy union now re-eſtabliſhed between them, and ſhall not give any ſuccour or protection, directly or indirectly, to thoſe who would wiſh to injure any one of them.

II. All the priſoners made on one ſide and the other, as well by land as by ſea, and the hoſtages carried off or delivered up during the war, and up to the preſent day, ſhall be reſtored without ranſom, in ſix weeks at the lateſt, to be reckoned from the day when the Ratifications of the preſent Treaty are exchanged, and on paying the debts which they ſhall have contracted during their captivity. Each of the contracting parties ſhall reſpectively diſcharge the advances which ſhall have been made by any of the contracting parties for the ſupport and maintenance of priſoners in the countries where they have been detained. There ſhall be appointed by mutual conſent for this purpoſe a commiſſion, ſpecially empowered to aſcertain and determine the compenſation which may be due to any one of the contracting parties. The time and the place ſhall likewiſe be fixed by mutual conſent for the meeting of the commiſſioners, who ſhall be entruſted with the execution of this article, and who ſhall take into account, not only the expences incurred on account of the priſoners of the reſpective nations, but likewiſe on account of the foreign troops, who before being taken, were in the pay, and at the diſpoſal of one of the contracting parties.

III. His Britannic Majeſty reſtores to the French Republic and its Allies, viz. his Catholic Majeſty and the Batavian Republic, all the poſſeſſions and colonies which reſpectively belonged to them, and which have been either occupied or conquered by the Britiſh forces during the courſe of the preſent war, with the exception of the iſland of Trinidad and of the Dutch poſſeſſions in the iſland of Ceylon.

IV. His Catholic Majeſty cedes and guarantees in full property and ſovereignty to his Britannic Majeſty all the poſſeſſions and eſtabliſhments in the iſland of Ceylon, which previous to the war belonged to the Republic of the United Provinces, or to the Dutch Eaſt India Company.

VI. The port of the Cape of Good Hope remains to the Batavian Republic in full ſovereignty, in the ſame manner as it did previous to the war.

The ſhips of every kind belonging to the other contracting parties ſhall be allowed to enter the ſaid port, and there to purchaſe what proviſions they may ſtand in need of, as heretofore, without being liable to pay any other impoſts than ſuch as the Batavian Republic compels the ſhips of its own nation to pay.

VII. The territories and poſſeſſions of her Moſt Faithful Majeſty are maintained in their integrity, ſuch as they were antecedent to the war. However the boundaries of French and Portugueze Guiana are fixed by the River Arawari, which empties itſelf into the Ocean above Cape North, near the iſlands Nuovo and Penetentia, about a degree and a third of north latitude. Theſe boundaries ſhall run along the river Arawari, from its mouth the moſt diſtant from Cape North to its ſource, and afterwards on a right line, drawn from that ſource, to the Rio-Brauto towards the weſt.

In conſequence, the northern bank of the River Arawari, from its diſtant mouth to its ſource, and the territories that lie to the north of the line of the boundaries laid down as above, ſhall belong in full ſovereignty to the French Republic.

The ſouthern bank of the ſaid river, from the ſame mouth, and all the territories to the ſouth of the ſaid line, ſhall belong to her Moſt Faithful Majeſty.

The navigation of the River Arawari, along the whole of its courſe, ſhall be common to both nations.

The arrangements which have been agreed upon between the Courts of Madrid and Liſbon, reſpecting the ſettlement of their boundaries in Europe, ſhall nevertheleſs be adhered to, conformably to the ſtipulations of the Treaty of Badajoz.

VIII. The territories, poſſeſſions, and rights of the Sublime Porte are maintained in their integrity, as they were before the war.

IX. The Republic of the Seven Iſlands is recognized.

X. The iſlands of Malta, Gozo and Comino, ſhall be reſtored to the Order of St. John of Jeruſalem, to be held on the ſame conditions on which it poſſeſſed them before the war, and under the following ſtipulations:—

1. The Knights of the Order, whoſe tongues ſhall continue to ſubſiſt, after the exchange of the Ratification of the preſent Treaty, are invited to return to Malta, as ſoon as the exchange ſhall have taken place. They will there form a general Chapter, and proceed to the election of a Grand Maſter, choſen from among the natives of the nations which preſerve their tongues, unleſs that election has been already made ſince the exchange of the Preliminaries.

It is underſtood that an election made ſubſequent to that epoch, ſhall alone be conſidered valid, to the excluſion of any other that may have taken place at any period prior to that epoch.

2. The Governments of the French Republic and of Great Britain, deſiring to place the Order and Iſland of Malta in a ſtate of entire independence with reſpect to them, agree that there ſhall not be in future either a French or Engliſh tongue; and that no individual belonging to either the one or other of theſe powers ſhall be admitted into the Order.

3. There ſhall be eſtabliſhed a Malteſe tongue, which ſhall be ſupported by the territorial revenues, and commercial duties of the iſland. This tongue ſhall have its peculiar dignities, an eſtabliſhment and an hotel. Proofs of Nobility ſhall not be neceſſary for the admiſſion of Knights of this tongue; and they ſhall be moreover admiſſible to all offices, and ſhall enjoy all privileges in the ſame manner as the Knights of the other tongues. At leaſt half of the municipal adminiſtration, civil, judicial, and other employments depending on the Government, ſhall be filled by inhabitants of the iſlands of Malta Gozo and Comino.

4. The forces of his Britannic Majeſty ſhall evacuate the iſland and its dependencies, within three months from the exchange of the ratifications, or ſooner if poſſible. At that epoch it ſhall be given up to the Order in its preſent ſtate, provided the Grand Maſter, or Commiſſaries, fully authorized according to the ſtatutes of the Order, ſhall be in the iſland to take poſſeſſion, and that the force which is to be provided by his Sicilian Majeſty, as is hereafter ſtipulated, ſhall have arrived there.

5. One half of the garriſon, at leaſt, ſhall be always compoſed of native Malteſe; for the remainder the Order may levy recruits in the countries or by whom tongues continue to be retained. The Maltaiſe troops ſhall have Maltaiſe officers. The Commander in Chief of the garriſon, as well as the nomination of the officers, ſhall pertain to the Grand Maſter, and this right he cannot reſign even temporarily, except in favour of a Knight, and in concurrence with the advice of the Council of the Order.

6. The independence of the Iſles of Malta, of Gozo and Comino, as well as the preſent arrangement, ſhall be placed under the protection and guarantee of France, Great Britain, Auſtria, Spain, Ruſſia and Pruſſia.

7. The neutrality of the Order, and of the iſland of Malta, with its dependencies, is proclaimed.

8. The ports of Malta ſhall be opened to the commerce and navigation of all nations, who ſhall there pay equal and moderate duties; theſe duties ſhall be applied to the ſupport of the Maltaiſe tongue, as ſpecified in paragraph 3, to that of the Civil and Military Eſtabliſhments of the iſland, as well as to that of a general Lazaret, open to all flags.

9. The ſtates of Barbary are excepted from the conditions of the two preceding paragraphs, until by means of an arrangement to be procured by the contracting parties, the ſyſtem of hoſtilities which ſubſiſts between the States of Barbary, and the Order of St. John, or the powers poſſeſſing tongues, or concurring in the compoſition of the Order, ſhall have ceaſed.

10. The Order ſhall be governed, both with reſpect to Spiritual & Temporal affairs, by the ſame ſtatutes which were in force when the Knights left the iſle, except in as far as they are abrogated by the preſent Treaty.

11. The regulations contained in the paragraphs 3, 4, 7, 8, and 10, ſhall be converted into laws and perpetual ſtatutes of the Order, in the cuſtomary manner; and the Grand Maſter, or if he ſhall not be in the iſland at the time of its reſtoration to the Order, his repreſentative, as well as his ſucceſſors, ſhall be bound to take an oath for the punctual obſervance of them.

12. His Sicilian Majeſty ſhall be invited to furniſh 2000 men, natives of his ſtates, to garriſon the different fortreſſes of the ſaid iſlands. That force ſhall remain one year, to bear date from their reſtitution to the Knights; and if at the expiration of this term the Order ſhould not have raiſed a force ſufficient in the judgement of the guaranteeing powers, to garriſon the iſland and its dependencies, ſuch as is ſpecified in paragraph 5, the Neapolitan troops ſhall continue there until they ſhall be replaced by ſuch other force deemed ſufficient by the ſaid powers.

13. The different powers deſignated in the 6th paragraph, to wit, France, Great Britain, Auſtria, Spain, Ruſſia and Pruſſia ſhall be invited to accede to the preſent ſtipulations.

XI. The French troops ſhall evacuate the kingdom of Naples and the Roman States; the Engliſh forces ſhall alſo evacuate Porto Ferrajo; and generally all the ports and iſlands that they occupy in the Mediterranean, or the Adriatic.

XII. The evacuations, ceſſions and reſtitutions ſtipulated by the preſent Treaty, ſhall be executed in Europe within a month; on the Continent & ſeas of America and Africa in three months; on the Continent and Seas of Aſia within ſix months after the ratification of the preſent Definitive Treaty except in caſe of ſpecial reſervation.

XIII. In all caſes of reſtitution agreed upon by the preſent Treaty, the fortifications ſhall be reſtored in the condition they were in at the time of ſigning the Preliminaries; and all the works which ſhall have been conſtructed ſince their occupation, ſhall remain untouched.

It is agreed befides, that in all the ſtipulated caſes of ceſſions, there ſhall be allowed to the inhabitants, of whatever rank or nation, a term of three years, reckoning from the notification of the preſent Treaty, to diſpoſe of all their property and effects, whether acquired or poſſeſſed by them before, or during the continuance of the preſent war; doing which term of three years they ſhall have free and entire liberty to exerciſe their religion, and enjoy their fortunes. The ſame privileges are granted in the countries reſtored, to all perſons, whether inhabitants or not, who ſhall have formed any eſtabliſhments there, during the time that theſe countries were in the poſſeſſion of Great Britain.

As to the inhabitants of the countries reſtored or ceded, it is hereby agreed, that no perſon ſhall, under any pretence, be proſecuted, diſturbed, or moleſted, either in perſon or property, on account of his political conduct or opinion, or for his attachment to any of the contracting parties, or on any account whatever, except for debts contracted with individuals or for acts ſubſequent to the preſent Treaty.

XIV. All the ſequeſtrations laid, on either ſide on funds, revenues, and credits, of what nature ſoever they may be belonging to any of the contracting powers, or to their citizens and ſubjects, ſhall be taken off immediately after the ſignature of this Definitive Treaty.

The deciſion of all claims among the individuals of the reſpective nations, for debts, property, effects, or claims, of any nature whatſoever, which ſhould, according to received uſage, and the laws of nations, be preferred at the epoch of the peace, ſhall be referred to the competent tribunals, and in thoſe caſes ſpeedy and complete juſtice ſhall be done in the countries wherein thoſe claims ſhall be reſpectively preferred.

XV. The fiſheries on the coaſt of Newfoundland, and of the adjacent iſlands, and in the Gulph of St. Laurence, are placed on the ſame footing as they were before the war.

The French fiſhermen of Newfoundland, and the inhabitants of the iſlands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, ſhall have liberty to cut ſuch wood as may be neceſſary for them in the Bays of Fortune and Deſpair, during one year, reckoning from the ratification of the preſent Treaty.

XVI. To prevent all ground of complaint and diſpute which might ariſe on account of captures which may have been made at ſea ſubſequent to the ſigning of the Preliminaries, it is reciprocally agreed that the ſhips and property which may have been taken in the Channel, and the North Seas, after a ſpace of twelve days, reckoning from the exchange of the ratifications of the Preliminary Articles, ſhall be reſtored on both ſides; that the term ſhall be one month from the Channel and the North Seas, as far as the Canary iſlands inclufively, as well in the ocean as in the Mediterranean; two months from the Canary Iſlands to the Equator; & finally five months in all the other parts of the world, without any further exception, or diſtinction of time or place.

XVII. The Ambaſſadors, Miniſters, and the Agents of the contracting Powers ſhall enjoy reſpectively in the ſtates of the ſaid Powers the ſame rank, privileges, prerogatives, and immunities which were enjoyed before the war by Agents of the ſame claſs.

XVIII. The branch of the Houſe of Naſſau which was eſtabliſhed in the ci-devant Republic of the United Provinces, now the Batavian Republic, having experienced ſome loſſes both in private property and in conſequence of the change of Conſtitution adopted in that country, there ſhall be obtained for him a ſuitable compenſation for the ſaid loſſes.

XIX. The preſent Definitive Treaty of Peace is declared common to the Sublime Ottoman Porte, the Ally of His Britannic Majeſty; and the Sublime Porte ſhall be invited to tranſmit its act of acceſſion as ſoon as poſſible.

XX. It is agreed that the contracting parties, upon requiſitions made by them reſpectively, or by their Miniſters, or Officers duly authoriſed for that purpoſe ſhall be bound to deliver up to juſtice perſons accuſed of murder, forgery or fraudulent bankruptcy, committed within the jurisdiction of the requiring party, provided that this ſhall only be done in caſes in which the evidence of the crime ſhall be ſuch, that the laws of the place in which the accuſed perſon ſhall be diſcovered, would have authoriſed the detaining and bringing him to trial, had the offence been committed there. The expences of the arreſt, and carrying him back for trial, ſhall be defrayed by the party making the requiſition; but this article has no fort of reference to crimes of murder, forgery or fraudulent bankruptcy committed before the concluſion of this Definitive Treaty.

XXI. The Contracting parties promiſe to obſerve ſincerely and faithfully all the articles contained in the preſent Treaty, and will not ſuffer any ſort of contravention, direct or indirect, to be made to it by their reſpective citizens or ſubjects; and the Contracting parties guarantee, generally and reciprocally, all the ſtipulations of the preſent Treaty.

XXII. The preſent Treaty ſhall be ratified by the Contracting Parties within the ſpace of Thirty days, or ſooner if poſſible, and the ratifications ſhall be exchanged in due form, at Paris.

In teſtimony whereof, we, the underſigned Plenipotentiaries, have ſigned with our hands, and in virtue of our reſpective full powers, the preſent Definitive Treaty, cauſing it to be ſealed with our reſpective ſeals.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, May 29.

Tueſday laſt being the day appointed for opening the Provincial Parliament, His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor came in the uſual ſtate to the Legiſlative Council Chamber, and being ſeated on the Throne, with the accuſtomed ſolemnities, the Houſe of Commons attending at the Bar, opened the Seſſion with the following moſt gracious Speech to both houſes of the Legiſlature:

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legiſlative Council and Gentlemen of the Houſe of Aſſembly,

It is with the greateſt ſatisfaction that I now congratulate you on the Preliminaries of Peace having been ſigned between Great Britain and the French Republic.

Our pleaſure on this occaſion is greatly heightened, in reflecting, that when Peace and Tranquility ſhall have been completely eſtabliſhed; Europe, after having endured the ſevereſt ſufferings, will under Providence be indebted for her Deliverance, to the valor, conduct, and ſucceſs of the Britiſh Arms.

The Commiſſioners under the Act for ſecuring the Titles to Lands, have made great and laudable progreſs in that Taſk which they have undertaken for the good of the Public; it will however be neceſſary for you ſtill further to lend your aid, to enable them to finiſh a work ſo conducive to the proſperity of this Province.

The judicious meaſures adopted by thoſe Gentlemen to whom I have entruſted the execution of the Powers committed to me reſpecting the Culture and Exportation of Hemp, will I truſt when carried into execution and perfected, effectually promote that ſalutary object.

The ſhort experience which we have as yet had, in the receipt of the Duties on Goods brought from the United States of America, opens a reaſonable expectation of a conſiderable increaſe to the Revenue of this Province.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Aſſembly,

I have directed the uſual Accounts to be laid before you, not doubting but that you will beſtow on them that attention which the nature of the ſubject requires.

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legiſlative Council and Gentlemen of the Houſe of Aſſembly,

The plenty and comfort which we now poſſeſs in this Province, muſt fill every good mind with Gratitude to the Supreme Giver of all things; but while we thus largely partake of the Bounty of Providence, let us ever bear it in mind, that it is only by the practice of Induſtry, and of Virtue, by a ſteady and Loyal attachment to our King, our Country, and its Laws, that we can hope for the continuance of that Bounty; or deſerve it.

On Thurfday at noon the Honorable Legiſlative Council preſented the following Addreſs to the Lieutenant Governor, in anſwer to His Excellency's Speech at the opening of the Seſſion.

To His Excellency PETER HUNTER, Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General; Commanding His Majeſty's Forces within the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

WE His Majeſty's moſt dutiful and Loyal Subjects the Members of the Legiſlative Council in Provincial Parliament aſſembled return Your Excellency our humble thanks for your gracious Speech to the two Houſes.

We moſt cordially meet Your Excellency's Congratulations on the happy advances made towards a Peace by the ſingring of the Preliminary Articles between Great Britain and the French Republic:—and while we ſhall with pleaſure join in the general joy which the complete re-eſtabliſhment of Peace and Tranquility, (by a definitive Treaty,) muſt occaſion throughout Europe, we cannot as Britons but exult in the reflection that her deliverance from the very ſevere ſufferings ſhe has endured in the War may be aſcribed under Providence to the valor, conduct and ſucceſs of the Britiſh Arms.

We are happy in receiving from Your Excellency the pleaſing Communication that the Commiſſioners under the Act for ſecuring the Titles to Land have made a laudable progreſs in the Taſk they have undertaken for the good of the Public:—and we ſhall not fail to afford every aid in our Power to enable them to finiſh a work ſo neceſſary to the proſperity of the Province.

We look forward alſo with pleaſure to the execution and perfection of the judicious meaſures Your Excellency informs us have been adopted by the Gentlemen to whom you have entruſted the Execution of the Powers committed to you reſpecting the Culture and Exportation of Hemp.

We are happy to hear from Your Excellency that the commencement of our Receipts of Duties on Goods brought from the United States of America opens a reaſonable expectation of a conſiderable Increaſe to the Revenue of this Province:—And we moſt ſervently join in gratitude to the Supreme Giver of all Things for the Plenty and Comfort which this Province at preſent enjoys:—the continuance of which we have no doubt its inhabitants will endeavor to merit, by the practice of Induſtry and Virtue, and by a ſteady and Loyal attatchment to our King, our Country and its Laws.

By Order of the Houſe,
(Signed) J. ELMSLEY,
Legiſlative Council, } Speaker.
York, 27th May, 1802.

To which His Excellency was pleaſed to make the following anſwer:

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legiſlative Council,

I thank you for your Dutiful and Loyal Addreſs. It gives me the higheſt ſatisfaction to obſerve that cordiality of ſentiment, which prevails reſpecting the happy events that have taken place with regard to our country at large; the proſperity of this Province, and the meaſures to be adopted for its continuance.

The various and contradictory reports ſo long in circulation reſpecting the ſigning of the Definitive Treaty, have without doubt created conſiderable uneaſineſs in the minds of the Public.—We are happy in now having it in our power to relieve our readers from that diſagreeable ſtate of ſuſpenſe, and little not a moments time in laying the intereſting intelligence contained in the firſt part of this Gazette before them. The copy of the Treaty is taken from the Star of the 5th March, (brought by the ſhip Triton arrived on the 19th inſt at Quebec from Briſtol) and tranſlated from the Moniteur, the official paper of the French Government. The Treaty in the French language, appears to have been actually ſigned on the 25th of March, but the Engliſh Copy, to which Lord Hawkeſbury alludes was ſigned on the 27th.— General Illuminations were put to take place in London till after the exchange of the Ratifications; when the Treaty was to be officially publiſhed.

Lord Whitworth is to go Ambaſſador to Paris as ſoon as the ratifications are ſigned.

The new Loan propoſed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer is ſtated at between 25 and 30 millions. It was to be negotiated on the 5th April.

Auſtria recognizes and approves the proceedings of the Conſulta at Lyons.

On Thurſday laſt a Jury of Inqueſt was ſummoned on the body of Mr. JOHN HOUSTON, Baker, of this town who put an end to his exiſtence by voluntarily precipitating himſelf into the River Don where he was drowned.—The Jury gave in their Verdict "Inſanity." We are unacquainted with the cauſes which induced the deceaſed to adopt this ſad reſolution, but it is certain that for ſome time paſt—not to his death he had evinced evident marks of Inſanity.

THE Firſt Conſul of the French Republic, and his Holineſs the Sovereign Pontiff, Pius VII. have nominated as their reſpective Plenipotentiaries the Firſt Conſul, the Citizens Joſeph Bonaparte, Counſellor of State; Crete, Counſellor of State; and Bernier, Doctor in Theology, Curate of Saint Laud d'Angers, furniſhed with full powers. The Government of the Republic acknowledges the Catholic, Apoſtolic, & Roman Religion, to be the religion of the great majority of French Citizens.

His Holineſs in like manner acknowledges that this religion has hitherto had, and ſtill expects to receive, the greateſt benefits and the greateſt ſplendour, with regard to the eſtabliſhment of the Catholic worſhip in France, and the profeſſion of it on the part of the Conſuls of the Republic.

If, after, ſuch exhortation, they ſhould refuſe to make the ſacrifices required for the good of the Church (a refuſal however, which his Holineſs does not expect) proviſion ſhall be made by means of new Titulars, for the government of the Biſhopricks of the new Circumſcription, in the following manner:

IV. The Firſt Conſul ſhall, within three months after the publication of his Holineſs's Bull, nominate perſons to the Archbiſhopricks and Biſhopricks of the new Circumſcription. His Holineſs ſhall then confer the canonical inſtitution, according to the forms eſtabliſhed in France before the change of the Government.

I alſo promiſe not to have any communication, nor to aſſiſt at any Councils, not to join in any confederacy, either in or out of the country, that may be contrary to the public tranquillity; and if in my Dioceſe, or elſewhere, I ſhould hear of any plot tending to the injury of the State, I will make it known to the Government."

April 16. The Bull for the diocesan diviſion of France ſays, "The Firſt Conſul ſhall nominate to the ſeveral ſees, within three months from the publication of our apoſtolic letters, fit and worthy men to fill them, and we have promiſed to give them canonical inſtitution before the expiration of that time." It then takes notice of the Arch Biſhops and Biſhops who have reſuſed, or delayed to give in their reſignations. Such perſons are interdicted from the exerciſe of all eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction, and their ſeveral churches and dioceſes are declared free and open, as muchſo under the new regime. This document is alſo remarkable for the explanation which it gives of the powers veſted in the Legate A LATERE. He is entruſted to carry the new plan into effect, in as full and ample a manner as his Holineſs in perſon. For the greater celerity, the uſual form of communication with the See of Rome is diſpenſed with, and nothing more is required than that he ſhall tranſmit to his Holineſs copies of all Eccleſiaſtical Acts done and conſtituted by him in purſuance of this authority.

...ſtand, and overturning at once, in one of the greateſt ſtates of Europe, the Altar & the Throne. We have ſeen the belief of Chriſtianity a cauſe of hatred, and the profeſſion of it ſcarcely compatible with common ſafety. We have ſeen thouſands of miſerable beings, caſt by their unjuſt country on our ſhores, or ſcattered over the world to ſeek relief from foreign bounty, whoſe whole crime conſiſted in their unalterable attachment to the religion of their fathers; and in the courſe of ten years, we have lived to ſee theſe very men invited back and reſtored (ſuch of them as have eſcaped diſeaſe, accident, or poverty) to a meaſure of their former, proſperity.—Though the Throne has not participated in the returning fortunes of the Church, a ſtrong Government has been founded, which has good ſenſe enough to ſee the neceſſity of taking Religion by the hand, and diſcarding abſurd and impracticable theories. The example will not be in vain. The warning will have its full effect upon France, Europe, and the world.

The Duke of Kent will leave town on the 30th of the preſent month, for his Government at Gibraltar.

LONDON, April 15.

The new religious eſtabliſhment has been ſanctioned by the Conſtitutional Authorities, and the Cardinal legate has, in conformity to the concordat and the organic articles of the church, aſſumed the exerciſe of his functions.—The Pope's Bull, relative to the arrangement of the different dioceſes, and his Holineſs's Brief, inveſting the Legates with powers to inſtitute the new Archbiſhops and Biſhops, have been publiſhed in the Moniteur of the 11th. They contain little that is worthy of notice.

He has already conſecrated three Archbiſhops. The ceremony took place laſt Sunday in the Metropolitan church of Notre Dame. They are the L'Abbe Bernier, the ci devant curate of Pancemont, and L'Abbe Cambaceres, brother of the Conſul.

AGRICULTURAL.

The following conciſe obſervations on HEMP, are publiſhed by the Committee appointed by his Excellency Sir JOHN WENTWORTH, for the information of thoſe who may be diſpoſed to cultivate that article.

SOIL.

HEMP requires a ſoil which is naturally a loam, or is made ſo by a due mixture of light and heavy earths. Sand and clay for example, will make a loam fit to produce any thing of a vegetable nature. This compoſition ſhould be conſidered as the receptacle of manure; the one or the other when alone, poſſeſſes either too little or too much tenacity: in a due mixture of theſe ſuited to the article to be cultivated, conſiſts the firſt rule in the œconomy of agriculture. Wheat requires a loam, where clay chiefly aboundis. Hemp where ſand predominates, and is not ſubject to be flooded by rivers, or rains—but Hemp will thrive in a damp atmoſphere if free from froſt, though it will not proſper in wet land.

CULTURE.

The land ſhould be either froſt ploughed, that is laid in ridges ſo as to expoſe it to the froſt, or it ſhould have been cultivated the ſeaſon before in potatoes. Land if kept rich and fowed alternately with flax and hemp, may be reſerved for thoſe purpoſes for ever; but the manure ſhould be a mixon well rotted, ploughed in, or trenched in the fall of the year:—If deſigned for ſeed, it cannot well be too rich, or ſowed too thin;—if intended for cordage, ſow a buſhel on an acre, and keep it rich—if it is intended for linen, ſow five pecks, and do not make it quite ſo rich.—Never pull the male hemp by itſelf, it is a very laborious and painful taſk, and beſides it is not good œconomy. When you want it for ſeed, ſow a ſmall patch by itſelf, and take care to watch the ſmall birds, which, in this caſe, can be more eaſily done than in the other method. If the ſeaſon will permit it, ſow from the 20th April till 1ſt of May at leaſt. It will at ſome few ſeaſons and ſituations, anſwer in Nova Scotia as late as the 20th.

Pull when the lower leaves begin to turn yellow and fall off, and the ſtalks look whitiſh. Tie into bundles as big as you can graſp, when the hands are ſtretched, and the two thumbs and the two middle fingers are three inches apart; then place them in circles of five feet diameter to dry, on end, with the tops tied together, each bundle eight inches a part at the foot. Here the farmer's labour ſhould ceaſe, and he ought to ſell to the hemp-miller, but if he chuſes to be his own manufacturer, which is very bad œconomy, he may take the following directions:

TO ROT HEMP.

To rot in a running ſtream is bad œconomy, for it waſtes the "harle." To rot in a lake is bad in a leſs degree; it will kill the fiſh, and if the lake is ſmall, it will injure the cattle if they are ſuffered to drink the water.—The beſt reſervoir is a tank, ſo ſituated as to be dug in the ſide of a hill near a meadow, and which can be tapped at bottom and have the water run in at pleaſure at top.—The water ſhould be of a ſoft nature, if coming from a lake or a ſtream which has run ſome diſtance, that will probably be the caſe; if coming immediately from a ſpring, it generally will prove hard.—It ſhould be well ſheltered by trees or by a roof, to prevent the top water from becoming warmer than the bottom, and thereby rotting the hemp unequally. If this is permitted to take place the whole muſt be ſhifted once, if not twice, which is an unpleaſant operation. To prevent this Concordat between the French Government and his Holineſs Pius VII. interchanged on the 10th Sept. 1801.

THE Firſt Conſul of the French Republic, and his Holineſs the Sovereign Pontiff, Pius VII. have nominated as their reſpective Plenipotentiaries the Firſt Conſul, the Citizens Joſeph Bonaparte, Counſellor of State; Cretet, Counſellor of State; and Berrier, Doctor in Theology, Curate of Saint Laud d'Angers, furniſhed with full powers. His Holineſs has nominated his Eminence Monſeigneur Conſalvi, Cardinal of the Holy Roman Church, Deacon of St. Agathe ad Suburram, his Secretary of State; Joſeph Spina, Archbiſhop of Corinth, Domeſtic Prelate to his Holineſs, Aſſiſtant to the Pontifical Throne; and Father Caſelli, his Holineſs's Counſellor in Divinity; all furniſhed with full powers in good and due form.

Thoſe Plenipotentiaries, after exchanging their reſpective powers, have agreed to the following Convention:

Convention between the French Government, and his Holineſs Pius VII.

The Government of the Republic acknowledges the Catholic, Apoſtolic, & Roman Religion, to be the religion of the great majority of French Citizens.

His Holineſs in like manner acknowledges that this religion has hitherto had, and ſtill expects to receive, the greateſt benefits and the greateſt ſplendour, with regard to the eſtabliſhment of the Catholic worſhip in France, and the profeſſion of it on the part of the Conſuls of the Republic.

Therefore, after this mutual acknowledgment, as well for the good of religion as for the maintenance of internal tranquillity, they have agreed as follows:—

ART. I. The Catholic, Apoſtolic, and Roman religion, ſhall be freely exerciſed in France. Its worſhip ſhall be public, conformably to the regulation of Police which the Government ſhall judge neceſſary for the public tranquillity.

II. A new Circumſcription ſhall be made of French Dioceſes.

III. His Holineſs is to declare to the Titulars of the French Biſhopricks, that he expects from them with full reliance for the ſake of peace and union, all kinds of ſacrifices, even thoſe of their Sees. If, after, ſuch exhortation, they ſhould refuſe to make the ſacrifices required for the good of the Church; (a refuſal however, which his Holineſs does not expect) proviſion ſhall be made by means of new Titulars, for the government of the Biſhopricks of the new Circumſcription, in the following manner:

IV. The Firſt Conſul ſhall, within three months after the publication of his Holineſs's Bull, nominate perſons to the Archbiſhopricks and Biſhopricks of the new Circumſcription. His Holineſs ſhall then confer the canonical inſtitution, according to the forms eſtabliſhed in France before the change of the Government.

V. The nomination of Biſhopricks afterwards becoming vacant ſhall be made in the ſame manner by the Firſt Conſul; and the canonical inſtitution ſhall be given by the Holy See, in conformity with the preceding article.

VI. The Biſhops, before they enter on their functions, ſhall, in the preſence of the Firſt Conſul, take the oath of Fidelity uſed before the change of the Government, and expreſſed in the following terms:—

"I ſwear and profeſs before God, upon the Holy Evangelifts, to obſerve obedience and fidelity to the Government eſtabliſhed by the Conſtitution of the French Republic. I alſo promiſe not to have any communication, nor to aſſiſt at any Councils, nor to join in any confederacy, either in or out of the country, that may be contrary to the public tranquillity; and if in my Dioceſe, or elſewhere, I ſhould hear of any plot tending to the injury of the State, I will make it known to the Government."

VII. The Eccleſiaſtics of the ſecond order ſhall take the ſame oath before Civil Authorities appointed by the Government.

VIII. The following form of prayer ſhall be repeated at the end of Divine Service in all the Catholic Churches of France:—

"Domine salvum fac Reipublicam;
"Domine, salvos fac Consules."

IX. The Bishops shall make a new Circumscription of the parishes in their Dioceses, which shall not have effect until it receives the approbation of the Government.

X. The Bishops shall appoint the Curates. Their choice must only fall on persons appointed by the Government.

XI. The Bishops may have a Chapter in their Cathedral, and a Seminary in their Diocese, without any obligation imposed on the Government to endow them.

XII. All the Metropolitan, Cathedral, Parochial, and other Churches necessary for worship, shall be placed under the direction of the Bishops.

XIII. His Holiness, for the sake of peace, and the happy re-establishment of the Catholic Religion, declares, that neither he nor his successors, shall give any kind of disturbance to those who have acquired ecclesiastical property which was alienated.

XIV. The Government ensures protection and good treatment to the Bishops and Curates whose Dioceses and Parishes shall be comprized within the new Circumscription.

XV. The Government shall in like manner provide that the French Catholics may be enabled, if they chuse, to make foundations in favour of churches.

XVI. His Holiness acknowledges in the First Consul of the French Republic the same rights and prerogatives which are enjoyed by the ancient Government.

XVII. It is agreed between the contracting parties, that in case any of the successors of the First Consul should not be a Catholic, the rights and prerogatives mentioned in the above article, and the nomination to Bishoprics shall, with regard to him, be regulated by a new Convention.

The Ratifications shall be exchanged at Paris in the space of forty days.

April 16. The Bull for the diocesan division of France says, "The First Consul shall nominate to the Sees vacant, within three months from the publication of our apostolic letters, him only worthy men to fill them; and we have promised to give them canonical institution before the expiration of that time." It then takes notice of the Archbishops and Bishops who have refused, or delayed to give in their resignations. Such persons are interdicted from the exercise of all ecclesiastical jurisdiction, and their several churches and dioceses are declared free and open, as mentioned under the new regime. This document is also remarkable for the explanation which it gives of the power vested in the Legate a Latere. He is enabled to carry the new plan into effect, in as full and ample a manner as his Holiness in person. For the greater celerity, the usual form of communication with the See of Rome is dispensed with, and nothing more is required than that he shall transmit to his Holiness copies of all Ecclesiastical Acts done and constituted by him in pursuance of this authority.

April 12. Yesterday arrived Paris papers to the 8th inst. and last night we received those of the 9th.

The great measure intended to restore religion in France, which has been so long the subject of conjecture and expectation, has at length been submitted to the Tribunate and the Legislative Body. In the former it was referred to a committee, who pronounced unanimously in its favor. Upon the question it was carried by 78 votes to 7. There can remain little doubt of its adoption by the Legislative Body, and probably, with an equal degree of unanimity.

In the formation of this new establishment of religion, the Roman Catholic Faith is styled that of the great Majority of the nation. But it is not considered as the established and exclusive religion of the state. The Protestant is placed upon the same footing with the Catholic. The Consulate, however, to make profession of the Catholic Faith, which will probably be celebrated with Ecclesiastical pomp and Consular magnificence.

It has been justly observed that the whole of the transaction, taken together, will form one of the most remarkable events in the history of the church since the days of the Apostles, or at least since its establishment by Constantine.

We have seen, in the space of a few short years, political and philosophical frenzy going hand in hand, and overturning at once, in one of the greatest states of Europe, the Altar & the Throne. We have seen the belief of Christianity a cause of hatred, and the profession of it scarcely compatible with common safety. We have seen thousands of miserable beings, cast by their unjust country on our shores, or scattered over the world to seek relief from foreign bounty, whose whole crime consisted in their unalterable attachment to the religion of their fathers; and in the course of ten years, we have lived to see these very men invited back and restored (such of them as have escaped disease, accident, or poverty) to a measure of their former prosperity.—Though the chrono nas not participated in the returning fortunes of the Church, a strong Government has been formed, which has good sense enough to see the necessity of taking Religion by the hand, and discarding absurd and impracticable theories. The example will not be lost on the warning will have its full effect upon France, Europe, and the world.

The Duke of Kent will leave town on the 20th of the present month, for his Government at Gibraltar.

LONDON, April 15.

The new religious establishment has been sanctioned by the Constitutional Authorities, and the Cardinal legate has, in conformity to the concordat and the organic articles of the church, assumed the exercise of his functions.—The Pope's Bull, relative to the arrangement of the different dioceses, and his Holiness's Brief, investing the Legate with powers to institute the new Archbishops and Bishops, have been published in the Moniteur of the 11th. They contain little that is worthy of notice.

He has already conferred three Archbishops. The ceremony took place last Sunday in the Metropolitan church of Notre Dame. They are the L'Abbe Bernier, the ci devant curate of Panoemont, and L'Abbe Cambaceres, brother of the Consul.

Easter Sunday is the day appointed for singing the Te Deum, which will be celebrated with all the pomp of the Roman Catholic Church. During the performance of the music, one of the finest compositions of Paesiello, the trophies of Paris are to enter the body of the cathedral, with their standards and colours flying, and to join in the celebration.

Yesterday morning, at nine o'clock, the Hon. Mr. Pierrepont, accompanied by Mr. Hunter, junr. the Messenger, embarked at Dover, on his way to Paris, with his Majesty's ratification of the Definitive Treaty.

QUEBEC, May 20.

We have been favored with a file of London papers to the 16th April inclusive, and the Gazette de France to the 6th, received by the late arrivals.

After the signing of the Definitive Treaty, the event which has most occupied the public attention in Europe, is the re-establishment of religion in France; and we are happy in being able to give the Concordat, between the Pope and the French Government in this day's Gazette. The laws proposed by the Consular Government, for the new organization of the Gallican Church, have passed the Tribunate and Legislative body, almost unanimously. We flatter ourselves in being able to lay before our readers a variety of information on this interesting subject in our next.

His Majesty's ratification of the Definitive Treaty was dispatched from London on the 13th April. The ratification of the French Government was expected in London on the 21st, when the peace was to be proclaimed and the Treaty laid before Parliament.

The reduction of the army was to take place the 24th April.

Parliament is to be dissolved early in June.

Shortly after the new loan was negociated, the 3 per cent. Consols rose to 77 3 per cent. reduced 76 & 77.

Lord Kenyon, Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench, lately died in England. He has been succeeded by Sir Edward Law, who is shortly to be advanced to the Peerage.

Letters from Naples of the 9th March mention the death of the Queen of Sardinia.

The Duke of Cumberland Packet, with the mails for New York and Halifax, sailed from Falmouth on the 12th April.

AGRICULTURAL.

The following concise observations on HEMP, are published by the Committee appointed by his Excellency Sir JOHN WENTWORTH, for the information of those who may be disposed to cultivate that article.

SOIL.

HEMP requires a soil which is naturally a loam, or is made so by a due mixture of light and heavy earths. Sand and clay for example, will make a loam fit to produce any thing of a vegetable nature. This compolition should be considered as the receptacle of manure; the one or the other when alone, poffeffes either too little or too much tenacity; in a due mixture of these suited to the article to be cultivated, consists the first rule in the œconomy of agriculture. Wheat requires a loam, where clay chiefly abounds. Hemp whose stand predominates, and is not subject to be flooded by rivers, or rains—but Hemp will thrive in a damp atmosphere if free from frost, though it will not prosper in wet land.

CULTURE.

The land should be either frost ploughed, that is laid in ridges so as to expose it to the frost; or it should have been cultivated the season before in potatoes. Land if kept rich and sowed alternately with flax and hemp, may be reserved for those purposes for ever; but the manure should be a mixon well rotted, ploughed in, or trenched in the fall of the year:—If designed for seed, it cannot well be too rich, or sowed too thin;—if intended for cordage, sow a bushel on an acre, and keep it rich—if it is intended for linen, sow five pecks, and do not make it quite so rich.—Never pull the male hemp by itself, it is a very laborious and painful task, and besides it is not good œconomy When you want it for seed, sow a small patch by itself, and take care to watch the small birds, which, in this case, can be more easily done than in the other method. If the season will permit it, sow from the 20th April till 1st of May at latest. It will at some few seasons and situations, answer in Nova Scotia as late as the 20th.

Pull when the lower leaves begin to turn yellow and fall off, and the stalks look whitish. Tie into bundles as big as you can grasp, when the hands are stretched, and the two thumbs and the two middle fingers are three inches apart; then place them in circles of five feet diameter to dry, on end, with the tops tied together, each bundle eight inches a part at the foot. Here the farmer's labour should cease, and he ought to sell to the hemp-miller, but if he chuses to be his own manufacturer, which is very bad œconomy, he may take the following directions;

TO ROT HEMP.

To rot in a running stream is bad œconomy, for it washes the "barle." To rot in a lake is bad in a less degree; it will kill the fish, and if the lake is small, it will injure the cattle if they are suffered to drink the water.—The best reservoir is a tank, so situated as to be dug in the side of a hill near a meadow, and which can be tapped at bottom and have the water run in at pleasure at top.—The water should be of a soft nature, if coming from a lake or a stream which has run some distance, that will probably be the case; if coming immediately from a spring, it generally will prove hard—it should be well sheltered by trees or by a roof, to prevent the top water from becoming warmer than the bottom, and thereby rotting the hemp unequally. If this is permitted to take place the whole must be shifted once, if not twice, which is an unpleasant operation. To prevent this some people let off all the water, and fill again afresh; but the better way is to have a continual small stream always running in, and another running out, by which means the warmth must be the same throughout. The water when done with, should be conducted over the meadow, and will greatly enrich it. The hemp must be well watched, as the time necessary for rotting it will depend on the state of the air, from 3 to 10, or 15 days. Take out a bundle and dry it, and try it with the break.—This operation of rotting requires more nicety than any other thing in the whole process; a crop may be totally ruined by want of judgment; or the labor in the ensuing stages may be doubled by it. You may rot hemp by spreading it thin on meadow or other grounds. You may effect this operation by setting it up thin on end against fences, secured by lines, to be exposed during the winter to the frost. This last method is the best for linen.

TO DRESS HEMP.

You may as a certain plain rule manage in the same way in regard to "breaking," or "switching," or "swinging," or "scutching, and "hechling," as with flax; but with coarser machines and tools, only observing that hemp designed for cordage, does not want hechling—but it must be well switched, or swingled, or scutched.

TO PACK.

Make your hemp into "hands" as they are called, of five pounds each. Having cut off the roots, and switched it well, it will become thin at the end like a horse's tail; twist it round the root end, and make a tie of it, leaving the other end loose; then take it by the middle, and make a twist of it, always placing the root ends outwards.—The bundle should weigh five hundred weight, it will therefore require one hundred and eight "hands" for the body of the bundle, and four others to make as many bands to tie it firm together, after being pressed down with a twenty feet leaver, between two cheeks made into a frame, lined with plank. The Bale thus made, should be about three feet long, by two feet square at the ends.

If a Farmer fairly estimates his labor, and want of skill, he will find that he gains no advantage by "manufacturing" his own crop, and that by "cultivating" it only—it will be among the most profitable articles he can sow.

At noon the House waited on His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor with an Address to answer to His Excellency's Speech at the opening of the present Session of Provincial Parliament.

The said Address is as follows:

To His Excellency PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General; Commanding His Majesty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

WE His Majesty's most dutiful and Loyal Subjects the Commons of Upper Canada in Parliament assembled respectfully approach Your Excellency to return our thanks for Your Excellency's Speech; and to congratulate hucerely with Your Excellency on the signature of the Preliminary Articles of Peace between our parent Kingdom and the French Republic; an event which we doubt not will soon be succeeded by a definitive and general Treaty of Peace: and whilst as Men feelingly rejoice in the common happiness of Europe on its deliverance from the calamities of War, as Britons we warmly exult in the honest pride of reflecting that the general felicity has, under Divine Providence, been acquired by the particular Valor and Atchievements of the British Arms. Nor can we refrain from mingling with those sentiments of satisfaction participated in common with all our fellow subjects others in their origin more particularly confined to ourselves; We are happy to see the presence of Your Excellency restore once more to the Government of this Province animation and the Exercise of its indispensible functions.

We shall contribute our best endeavors to keep open the means of converting equitable Titles to Land into legal Estates; and shall be unremitting in our solicitude to render Hemp a staple Export from this Province, nor shall any unforeseen accident or embarrassment (for such are generally inseparable from all new undertakings) which upon common occasions or in the pursuit of an ordinary object might abate our zeal or put a period to our progress divert or intercept in this instance our resolution from its purpose.

We understand with pleasure that the Provincial Revenue is likely to benefit so considerably by the duties upon Importations from the United States of America and shall bestow proper attention upon the usual Accounts when submitted to our consideration.

We heartily join in Your Excellency's pious reflections upon the debt of gratitude which we owe to the Bounty of Providence and shall fervently study to merit its further protection by a devout observance of the practice of Piety, Morality and Loyalty recommended to us by Your Excellency.

To which His Excellency was pleased to return the following answer:

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

I thank you for your Dutiful and Loyal Address; the sentiments which you express respecting our Parent State and this Province, while they afford me the sincerest pleasure and satisfaction, reflect the highest honor on yourselves.

Yesterday being the anniversary of His MAJESTY'S Birth Day, it was observed here with the usual demonstrations of joy.—At noon a Royal Salute was fired from the Garrison, immediately succeeded by three volleys of small arms by the troops on duty there.

It is with peculiar satisfaction we notice the Loyalty and attachment evinced on the above occasion by all descriptions of His Majesty's Subjects in this Province to the best of Sovereigns, under whose auspicious reign we experience in the highest degree the enjoyment and security of personal liberty and property with all the blessings derived from the invaluable Constitution under which we have the happiness to live.

As British subjects every heart will naturally glow with ardor at the circumstance which recalls to their minds the Paternal solicitude of His Majesty for the welfare of his People, and the devoted superiority of the British nation, to the valor, conduct and interprize of whose fleets and armies we are indebted for the uninterrupted prosperity and happiness so long enjoyed by this Province.

The Fleet for Quebec arrived at that Port about the 18th ult.

POETRY.

REFLECTIONS AT DAY-BREAK.

I GAZE from the brow of the steep
On the town and the landscape serene;
How many this hour are asleep!
How alike are the great and the mean.

The place, for their heads to repose,
A floor or a palace supplies;
They've put off their cares with their clothes,
And shut out the world with their eyes.

Recliu'd on the tapestry bed,
The Rich has forgotten his store;
The beggar, asleep in his shed,
Remembers his misery no more.

Alike in forgetfulness drown'd,
Enwrapp'd in the mantle of night;
Boy, whose are the slumbers profound,
Say, whose are the dreams of delight?

Perhaps, to the occupant's dream,
For Fancy o'er Truth can prevail,
The hovel a hostel may seem,
The hostel transformed to a gaol.

Anon they shall wake from their sleep,
And the Sun and their sorrow behold;
Why wake ye to get or to keep,
Or to feel that ye're hungry and cold?

Then lie down and slumber again;
Ere the daylight appeard I arose—
I shall see naught but sorrow and pain,
And again I return to repose.

FROM THE BALANCE.

SCRAP OF A DIALOGUE BETWEEN A FARMER AND A POST-RIDER.

Post Rider. GOOD morning, Friend, I have bro't you a family breakfast;—more to the Hudson Balance for you.

FARMER.—I believe that my family would hardly be satisfied with such light food;—we love much richer fit down to a platter of good beef steaks.

POST RIDER.—Why, here is wholesome meat of all kinds, some dressed in a plain and simple manner, and some cook'd in a higher taste and seasoned with Cayenne. Here too is plenty of all sorts of sauce, excepting SOUR GRAPE.—In short the Balance offers up a little something for every reasonable palate.—Come, Sir, will you be a Subscriber for such kind of fare?

FARMER.—Not I, at present.—As you carry the Paper, I suppose you have a share in the profits, and therefore it is for your interest to praise it, in order to get it off: but, for my part, I believe that, since the war in Europe is over, newspapers will grow very lean and will scarcely be worth reading.

POST RIDER.—I must differ from you in that particular. The reading of numerous battles never yet made man, woman or child wiser or better; it only serves to harden the mind by inuring it to scenes of blood. The distance will not teach people how to live, but it will teach how to save time, and how to render life virtuous and happy. It will contain prudent and wholesome advice to parents and children, to husbands and wives, to people of all classes and conditions. There will be something in every paper which you would wish to have your children remember; and if you should preserve the papers and bind them, they will make a cheap and useful family book.

FARMER.—As I have never read the Balance, I can't conscientiously say, but my chief objection I have not yet mentioned.—The times are growing so hard, that I can't well afford money for a newspaper.

POST RIDER.—Ah, MONEY! That's the very thing I was thinking of.—Unless a considerable quantity of that PRECIOUS ORE be easily applied, the Printing Press cannot work to any advantage.—But what is the paltry sum of two dollars to a man of your estate?—And then, consider that your taking the Balance, over a length of time, will make you a richer rather than poorer. Some part of every paper will be filled with remarks on husbandry; and, with what the editors may call from almost a hundred other newspapers, which, every week, come to their office, and from piles of magazines and a multitude of books, together with what little they can spin out of their own brains, it will be a hard case, if in a whole year they can't collect so much good matter on husbandry as will be worth two dollars to a Farmer.

FARMER.—Let me look at your paper—I perceive the print is plain;—provided the matter be as good as the manner, I shall find no fault with it. I have sometimes got to take a newspaper, now that the times are so hard and difficult, but I will consider on it; and as you have entered me what you call a family breakfast, I offer you a real breakfast.—Come, walk in.—" John, draw us a little closer, and then give this man a horse some good hay."

OF

GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND

HOUSE OF LORDS, APRIL 6

Thanks to the Army, Navy, Militia, and Fencibles.

Lord HOBART rose to make a motion which, he said, gave him great pleasure, as he was perfuaded it would not meet with a diffentient voice. It was a Vote of Thanks to the Military of the Army and Navy for their uniformly meritorious services during the war.—He need not, he was perfuaded, dwell upon the particular merits of the latter, as every year of the war was pregnant with some new instance of uncommon enterprize or extraordinary atchievement. In the courfe of the war it was fufficient for him to ftate that we had captured 77 fail of the line of the enemy, 144 frigates, and 1000 fmaller veffels of different defcriptions. At little leas it neceffary for him to go into any detail of the many brilliant exploits, and fplendid actions of the army during the war; nor would he detain their Lordfhips upon that head, for a fingle moment were it not that he felt it incumbent on him to remove feelings of anxiety and uneafinefs that had unfortunately taken place in the breaft of a very brave and deferving Officer, who for his gallant fervices was well entitled to have been mentioned when the thanks of that Houfe were voted to the other General Officers who commanded different detachments in the glorious engagements in Egypt. The Officer he alludes to was Major General Doyle, whofe name certainly ought not to have been forgotten, when the taking of Alexandria was under confideration. General Doyle had imagined that an idea had prevailed in this country that he was not prefent, nor had any fhare in that battle, whereas, the fact was, that fo anxious was General Doyle to be prefent, and on duty at that important attack, that he rode on that hot fervice between 30 and 40 miles to join the army, and take the command of his detachment, & Lord Hobart faid, he would juft read their Lordfhips an extract from a letter of General Hutchinfon on the fubject. The fubftance of the extract was, that General Doyle was at the head of his corps during the action, that he had his full fhare in the brunt of it; and that he behaved in his ufual handfome and gallant manner, and contributed, as far as in him lay, to the acquired honors of the day. His Lordfhip concluded with moving the thanks of the Houfe to the Commanders and Officers of the Army and Navy during the war.—Ordered Nemine diffentiente.

He then moved, that this Houfe do highly approve of the conduct, difcipline and bravery of the Serjeants, Corporals, Privates, Marines &c. of the Army and Navy. Ordered Nem. diff.

Next the thanks to the Officers of the Militia, &c, Ordered nem. diff.

That the Houfe do approve of the fervices of the Privates, &c. of the Militia and Sea Fencibles. Ordered nem. diff.

That the thanks be voted to the Yeomanry of the Militia who volunteered their fervices in Ireland, &c. &c. Ordered nem. diff.

And motions of Thanks or Approbation to other defcriptions of force at home, all of which were Ordered nem. diff.

For this loan, the intereſt to be paid amounts to no more than 3l. 18s. Such a loan raiſed after a war of ſuch buſtle and expence affords the moſt incontrovertible proof of the credit, the confidence, the ſtability and the reſources of the Engliſh People. At no time, indeed, of our hiſtory, and of courſe at no time in the hiſtory of any other country, was money ever raiſed upon terms ſo advantageous to the public. It will, we are ſure, be a gratifying thing to our readers, to hear that a Loan ſo beneficial to the Country, will be equally beneficial to the Contractors. As ſoon as the bargain was known it bore a premium of 4 per cent. fluctuated between 4 and 3 3-4ths for the greater part of the day, and cloſed at 4 3-4ths—It roſe this day to 6.

At ſix o'clock in the evening of the 29th ult. the intelligence reached the Hague of the ſigning of the Definitive Treaty on the 27th at Amiens. To the Treaty is added, in the Dutch papers, a ſeparate Convention entered into between the French and Batavian Plenipotentiaries, to the following effect:—

"The underſigned Plenipotentiary of the French Republic declares, conformably to exiſting ſtipulations between the French and Batavian Republics, and in virtue of ſpecial inſtructions with which he is furniſhed to that effect on the part of his government, that it is underſtood that the indemnity ſtipulated in favor of the Houſe of Naſſau in the 18th article of the preſent Treaty, ſhall not, upon any account, or in any manner, be at the charge of the Batavian Republic, the French government being guarantee to this effect towards the ſaid Republic.

"The underſigned Plenipotentiary of the Batavian Republic, in the name of his government, accepts the above declaration as explanatory of the aforeſaid 18th article of the Definitive Treaty, ſigned this day by the Plenipotentiaries of the four contracting Powers.

"The preſent Act ſhall be preſented at the Ratification of the two reſpective governments, and the ratifications exchanged in due form.

"Done at Amiens, March 27.

(Signed) J. BONAPARTE.

R. J. SCHIMMELPENNINCK."

Laſt night we received two days Paris papers, namely, to the 3d inſt. They contain no news. Joſ. Bonaparte is returned to Paris from Amiens. Gen Murat, the actual Governor of Italy, is alſo returned to Paris. The French funds are at 55.

An article from Berlin ſtates, that the Embaſſy of Gen. Hedouville to that city has only tended to aſſure the King of Pruſſia and the Firſt Conſul of their mutual friendly ſentiments, but that no buſineſs has been tranſacted during the courſe of the embaſſy.

A letter from Madras informs us, that on Wedneſday the 16th, September, the Right Hon. the Governor, attended by His Excellency the Commander in Chief, the Members of Council, and the Gentlemen of the Civil, Naval and Military Services, delivered to his Highneſs the Nabob Azeem ul Dowlah, at Chepauk Place, the ratified Treaty received from His Excellency the moſt Noble the Governor General in Council, for ſettling the ſucceſſion to the Souballidarry of Arcot, and for veſting the entire Civil and Military Government of the Carnatic in the Honorable Company. On the delivery of the Treaty to His Highneſs, Royal ſalutes were fired from the garriſon at Fort Saint George, from the ſhipping in the roads, and vollies of muſquetry from the troops under arms.

Accounts from Berne continue to repreſent the wretched country of Switzerland as torn by inteſtine diviſions, and harraſſed by perpetual apprehenſions.

The officers of the different dockyards, Ordnance, and Victualling-offices at Portſmouth Plymouth, &c. are in the greateſt buſtle, making preparations for the great number of ſhips of war that are expected to be paid off in the courſe of a few days. Orders are already received for paying off and laying up in ordinary ſeveral, which, previous to the ſigning of the Definitive Treaty were fitting for ſea with the greateſt diſpatch.

The Ruby, Standard, and Texel, of 64 guns, are ordered to the River from Spithead, to be paid off, making eleven ſhips at that port ſo circumſtanced.—The ſeamen belonging to the ſhips paid off are immediately diſcharged.

The celebration of the great Peace of 1748 was, not, we think, till a full month till after the ſigning of the definitive Treaty. A temporary building had been erected on the occaſion, at a very enormous expence, and at the national charge, in the Green Park, oppoſite the King's Library, on a magnificent plan, and forming a moſt noble architectural ſtructure, extending about 400 feet in front, and proportionably high, compoſed chiefly of timber and tranſparencies, adorned with appropriate allegorical paintings by the beſt maſters of the time. This ſuperb Temple was illuminated beyond all former examples, and the moſt brilliant fireworks diſplayed that the art could ſupply. The King (GEORGE II.) and his court were at the Library to enjoy the Spectacle, and it was thought that more than half a million of people were in the Park; who had the mortification of ſeeing this grand building ſet on fire by accident, and one half of the exhibition and rejoicings entirely cut off and deſtroyed.

The Governor of the City of Cadiz died in the beginning of March.

Sunday afternoon preſented a very intereſting ſpectacle to the feelings of the inhabitants of Plymouth, and to 26th Regiment now in Frankfort Barracks.—Four companies of the gallant Cameronians, which have been miſſing ſome months, and parted company with the remainder of the regiment in the Straits in a violent gale of wind, and were thought to be loſt, arrived there in the Doncgal tranſport, and landed at 1 P. M. at Catdown. Beſides their Commander hundreds of the people of the town aſſembled on Catdown, and eſcorted theſe gallant fellows through the town, with loud huzzas to Frankfort Barracks. Their band and drums playing ſeveral popular national tunes in compliment. They are much ſun-burnt, but very healthy.

We have great ſatisfaction in announcing to the public, the earneſt deſire which has been manifeſted by all ranks of perſons to concur in ſome teſtimony of their reſpect to the memory of the late Duke of Bedford, is likely to be gratified in the moſt exemplary way, and put into a ſtate of execution under the beſt auſpices. On Saturday laſt a meeting was held of Noblemen and Gentlemen, chiefly of perſons employed in the improvement of the national agriculture, at the houſe of Sir Joſeph Banks, Bart. in Soho-ſquare, when it was reſolved, That a coloſſal ſtatue in bronze of the late Duke ſhould be erected in the center of Ruſſell ſquare; and that, to give an opportunity to the whole people to manifeſt their love and veneration for the memory of a patriot who had devoted his life to the ſervice of his country, the ſaid monument ſhould be erected by a voluntary and general ſubſcription. We have no doubt but that this reſolution, ſo juſt to the character of his Grace, and ſo glorious as well as uſeful to the nation by the incitement which it may give to the imitation of his noble example, will be moſt cordially received, not only by every patriotic ſociety, but alſo by every individual who has the character of his country and the love of virtue in his heart.

FUNERAL OF THE DUKE OF BEDFORD.

[From a late London Paper.]

The afflicting ceremony of the funeral of the Moſt Noble FRANCIS Duke of Bedford, took place yeſterday. It was conducted without oſtentation, agreeably to his own requeſt. There required no ſplendor or pomp of preparation to intereſt the feelings of his country on the mournful event. All hearts ſympathized in the common loſs which the death of ſuch a man brings upon Society.

The preſent duke being extremely indiſpoſed, he was adviſed to quit Woburn, that the appearance of the preparations for the funeral might not increaſe his illneſs. Accordingly he left the Abbey on Wedneſday morning, in company with his brother Lord William Ruſſel for Streatham. Lord Preſton remained to give directions reſpecting the funeral, &c.

Every thing being properly arranged, the proceſſion left the Abbey about ten o'clock on Wedneſday night. The coffin is covered with the beſt crimſon velvet, & contains three thouſand ſilver nails. The hearſe was drawn by ſix horſes; it was followed by three mourning coaches: in the firſt were Mr. Gotobed, the Auditor and Solicitor; Mr. Farey, the reſident agent for Woburn eſtate, and Mr. Brown a Solicitor: in the ſecond were the Revd. Mr. Parry, the Clergyman of Woburn; Mr. Salmon, the reſident Surveyor, and Mr. Shaw of Woburn; and in the third were three principal ſervants of the houſhold; they were followed by His Grace's Carriage, empty, drawn by ſix bay horſes, and ſix footmen behind it. The proceſſion paſſed through Hockliffe, Dunſtable, Market-ſtreet and Redburn, in the moſt ſolemn manner. The inhabitants in the places through which the proceſſion paſſed, were in the road with lights, and the greateſt order prevailed. At Rickmansworth they were joined by a great number of perſons who had come from Woburn and other parts of Bedfordſhire. A proceſſion was then formed from thence to Cheyneys;—twenty-eight horſemen, Col. Moore, and a number of gentlemen farmers on foot, two and two. They were followed by the hearſe and carriages, and the whole was cloſed by about thirty of the principal tenants and ſervants, and about ſixty farmers, who live on the eſtate at Cheynies. The proceſſion arrived at the church about one o'clock, and at that time we ſuppoſe at leaſt 5000 perſons were aſſembled in the village. After the coffin was taken out of the hearſe and placed in the vault, the evening ſervice was read by the curate of the Pariſh, and a moſt excellent ſermon was preached by the Rev. Mr. Morris, tutor of his Grace from the ſecond Epiſtle to the Corinthians, the 5th chapter and laſt verſe.

"For we know that if our earthly houſe of this tabernacle were diſſolved, we have a building of God, an houſe not made with hands—eternal in the Heavens."

He paid a warm tribute to the ſplendor and uſefulneſs of the Duke's character, and obſerved truly that his ſucceſſor inherited his virtues as well as his titles and eſtates.

A funeral anthem was ſung, and was performed by a very reſpectable band of vocal and inſtrumental performers. The funeral ſervice was in the family vault over the corpſe. The following inſcription is on the coffin:—

"The Moſt Noble Francis, Duke of Bedford, born the 23d day of July, 1765, and died the 2d day of March 1802.

This makes fifty one of the family whoſe remains have been depoſited there. Two of them are embalmed, and ſtand upright in leaden coffins. This vault has been the burying-place to the family for upwards of 300 years, and an old Manſion-houſe, (one of the oldeſt in the family) adjoins the churchyard; part of it has been pulled down, and what remains now is a farm houſe.

Juſt as the coffin was going into the church, a moſt unbecoming ſcene of confuſion took place, which is too common on thoſe occaſions, by the populace ſtealing the eſcutcheons from the hearſe. A man was knocked down and trampled on by a horſe, and his leg torn and bruiſed in a moſt ſhocking manner.

On the mourners endeavoring to follow the corpſe, ſome of them were literally carried into the church and others could not gain admittance, the crowd being ſo extremely great. Several perſons were robbed of conſiderable ſums of money at the time the corpſe was going into the church. Theſe villains make a crowd of themſelves.

The windows of the church were broken by the populace, who endeavored to force into the church that way.

In London the moſt marked teſtimonies of reſpect were paid to his memory. The Theatre of Drury-lane, of which he was the land lord was ſhut, as were many of the ſhops on his extenſive eſtates. Never did any character receive ſo many and ſuch various tokens of ſincere veneration and regret as the Duke of Bedford. It is honorable to the character of the country, that all ranks and deſcriptions ſhewed themſelves ſenſible to the grandeur of that nobleneſs of ſentiment which made him devote his life to their ſervice. May the Glory of his life be an example to the Britiſh Nobility.

LONDON, April 10.

We underſtand it is at preſent the intention of Government to ratify the Definitive Treaty of Peace on Monday, and diſpatch the Paris. It will probably there meet the ratification of Spain returned back from Madrid, which, with the ratifications of France and Holland, may be expected here about the end of the week. In about ten days after Lord Whitworth will ſet out for Paris.

Several queſtions upon the ſituation of Guadaloupe have been put to the captain of the veſſel arrived a few days ago at Bordeaux from that Iſland. His anſwers ſhew that the colony is by no means in ſuch a ſituation as it was reported to be, in ſome accounts in the American papers. General Pelage has ſubmitted to the French Commiſſary Rouſſlagneng. The negroes are kept in ſubjection, the malattoes all in concert with the whites, and the arrival of French troops is hourly expected.

By the French mail of yeſterday, we have letters from Paris, ſtating, that on Monday laſt the Chief Conſul had a grand levee. Many foreigners were introduced. The principal Engliſh introductions were, Lords Cowper and Archibald Hamilton, Mr. Knox and Mr. Cuthbert.

Rear Admiral Sir Charles Cotton and Sir Robert Calder with their diviſions from the Channel fleet, are hourly expected at Portſmouth to be paid off.

According to lateſt advices received at Vienna from Conſtantinople, the Secretary of the Britiſh Legation Mr. Stratton, is ſafely arrived in Egypt, where diviſions continue to prevail between the Turks and the natives, in conſequence of the unfortunate maſſacre of the Beys.

PLYMOUTH, APRIL 4.

At one P. M. the Malta 84, (late Guillaume Tell), Hon. Capt. Bertie went up the harbor; all the boats of the fleet were ordered to attend at the buoys, from the red and white buoys in the ſound, all the way up the harbor (as ſea marks,) to her moorings. It being Sunday, a large aſſemblage of ſpectators collected at Devil's Point and Mount Pleaſant, to ſee this beautiful ſhip go up to be ſtripped and paid off. She is of an extreme draught of water.—Theſe will be very great regulations in the naval department of the dock yard here, now the Definitive Treaty has been ſigned, ſaid to be of much importance, and a great ſaving.

April 7. Orders have been received by the different men of war which are to be paid off here, to ſend returns of the different Maſters Mates and Midſhipmen particularly thoſe who have ſerved their times and may wiſh to ſtay in the ſervice, and of their qualifications; from which circumſtance it may be preſumed a proviſion is intended to be made for this valuable ſet of officers.

CONSTANTINOPLE, FEB. 25.

On the 20th inſtant the French charge d'Affaires, Citizen Ruffin, received a courier from Paris, whoſe diſpatches, it is ſaid, are of conſiderable importance.

VIENNA, MARCH 24.

The day before yeſterday the Engliſh Envoy here, the Honorable Arthur Paget, received a courier from Lord Elgin, at Conſtantinople, who it is underſtood, brings very important diſpatches, relative to the affaires of Egypt.

TALL REGIMENT

In the reviews of his Tall Regiments, Frederick, King of Prussia, was frequently attended by foreign Ministers. When the Ambassadors from France, Spain and England, were present, he often'd them whether their equal number of their country-men would engage with these GIGANTIC SOLDIERS! The ambassadors of France and Spain answered the question in the negative; whilst the English Ambassador, with a spirit characteristic of his nation, replied, "I cannot, Sir," said he, "take upon me to assert that an equal number of my countrymen would beat them, but this I think I may venture to affirm, that—HALF THE NUMBER would try!!"

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, Esquire,

Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada.

WHEREAS His Majesty's Faithful commons of this Province in Parliament assembled, did by virtue of a Resolution of their House of Assembly, pray that certain Sums of Money should be applied in such manner as to me should seem meet for the purpose of purchasing and distributing Hemp Seed gratis amongst the Farmers, and also for the paying of Premiums and Bounties to the deserving Cultivators and Exporters of Hemp in this Province. And whereas I thought fit to assent to the prayer of the said Commons—NOW KNOW YE that I PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of this Province, by virtue of the Authority so vested in me, and the better to effectuate the wise and liberal Intentions of the said faithful Commons—And well knowing the Ability, Integrity and diligence of the Honorable JOHN M'GILL, Esquire, one of the Legislative and Executive Councils, and of the Honorable DAVID WILLIAM SMITH, Esquire, one of the Executive Council and Speaker of the House of Assembly of this Province, have nominated and appointed the said John M'Gill and David William Smith Commissioners for the purpose of purchasing and distributing of Hemp Seed gratis amongst the Farmers, and also for the paying of Premiums and Bounties to the deserving Cultivators and Exporters of Hemp, according to the true intent and meaning of the said Resolution, not doubting but that the encouragement thus literally held forth by His Majesty's Faithful Commons, will effectually promote a measure so agreeable to the wishes of the Mother Country, and so highly conducive to the prosperity of this Province.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms at York this Twenty ninth day of July in the Forty first year of His Majesty's Reign, and in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and one.

P. HUNTER, Lt. Govr.

By His Excellency's Command,
Wm. JARVIS, Secy.

The Lieut. Governor's Office.
YORK, 3d June, 1802.

NOTICE is hereby given, that when the King's Vessels have received their Orders to proceed from hence to Niagara, or to Kingston, the following Signal will be hoisted at the Foretop Gallant Mast Head, and repeated from the Block House in Town, viz.

To Niagara	a White Flag.
To Kingston	a Blue Flag.

LONDON, March 28.

The jewels of the late Queen of France are said to have been sent, by the First Consul, for sale to London.

The jewels of the Queen of Portugal are proposed to be pawned for about half a million of money, at an interest of 8 per cent. to answer the demands of the Chief Consul of France upon the court of Lisbon.

The following anecdote respecting Toussaint was communicated to us many months since. Shortly after Buonaparte appointed himself First Consul, he dispatched an officer in his confidence to St. Domingo, under the pretence of commercial business, but in reality for the purpose of learning the designs of the Negro Chief. This person, who soon became suspected by Toussaint, was invited by him to a grand dinner, at which all the general officers and magistrates were present. When the dessert was served, Toussaint drew from his pocket two pistols, and placing them on the table before him, exclaimed, "There is a Spy in this Assembly." A dead silence was preserved. Toussaint then addressing himself to the officer, said, "You are the man, and I should be justified in blowing your brains out." The officer, rising with great composure, replied, "you may if you please, but it will be a useless crime." Toussaint surprised at the resolution of the man, after a short pause, said to him, "Give me your hand; you are a brave fellow. I know that Buonaparte, as soon as he has made a peace in Europe, will send an army to subdue me, but I laugh at all he can do."

April 13.

Government is losing not a moment to reduce the expences of our army and navy establishments.

The depots of biscuit, grain, &c. established by Government in the several military districts, are about to be sold; as well as the old stores belonging to the navy.

By a circular letter, dated Horse Guards, April 9, his Royal Highness the Commander in Chief desires the Colonels of Militia to give orders for all officers now absent from the regiment under their command—(such only excepted as are attending their duty in Parliament)—to join immediately, and call in every man who may be on furlough, that the necessary arrangements may be made, and the soldiers accounts held in readiness for the final settlement upon the receipt of the order for disembodying the regiment.

The last letters from Egypt mention the death of Dr. White, who had attended several patients in the plague since our troops were in that country. His death was singular.—From his observations, he wanted to establish a new doctrine, that the plague was not contagious; he had inoculated himself twice with the matter of the plague, without any effect; on making a third trial, which communicated the disorder, it put an end to his existence in two or three days.

The Duke of Kent will leave town on the 20th of the present month, for his Government at Gibraltar.

April 15.

The Ratification of the Definitive Treaty must arrive soon, as the thirty days allowed for the exchange draw towards a close. We do not however pretend to know that it will be received exactly on Easter Monday, for the better celebration of the rites of that Holiday. It is now said that the Ratification was not sent off from this country by Mr. Pierrepoint, but by Mr. Hunter, the Messenger, who will meet Mr. Pierrepoint, at Dover, and accompany him to Paris, The requisite formalities of Ratification on the part of this country only took place, it is said, on Tuesday. The Ratifications will arrive in due time, and the precise day is of no public importance.

The Militia by the new plan proposed, are to be enrolled in four distinct classes—Firſt, young unmarried men; ſecondly, married men without children; thirdly, married men who have only one child; and fourthly, elderly and married men who have more than one child. They are to be divided thus, in order that the Lieutenants of Counties may have a better opportunity of ſelection, whenever the public emergency does not require the whole of the militia to be embodied.

April 16.

We yeſterday received Paris journals to the 12th inclusive. The affairs of religion continue to be the chief object of attention in France. The Legiſlative Body have paſſed the Concordat, and the laws founded upon it. There were 228 for the meaſure, and only 21 againſt it. The Official Journal has publiſhed the Bulls of the Pope, authoriſing the Legate Cardinal Caprara to officiate in every thing neceſſary for the ſettlement of the Church. The Pope ſtiles the Chief Conſul his "dearly beloved Son in Jeſus Chriſt!" The Legate was preſented to the Chief Conſul on the 9th with uncommon pomp and ſolemnity. On Sunday next a grand Te Deum is to be celebrated in the church of Notre Dame, to which the Conſuls will go in ſtate. The Cardinal Legate will officiate, and a ſermon will be preached by M. Boiſgelin, late Biſhop of Aix. Three new Biſhops have been conſecrated: Mi Cambaceres, brother of the Second Conſul, Archbiſhop of Rouen; Bernier, Curate of Angers, Biſhop of Verſailles; and M. Paucemont, Curate of St. Sulpice, Biſhop of Vannes. M. Dudelloy, reſigned Biſhop of Marſeilles, an old man of ninety, is appointed Archbiſhop of Paris. The eſtabliſhment of Religion gives general ſatisfaction. In certain coteries of philoſophers it is ſeverely criticiſed, but with little impreſſion on the public mind, as the ſentiments of its oppoſers are ſo well known.

Anniverſary Feſtival of the Royal Humane Society, for the Recovery of Perſons apparently Drowned, held at the London Tavern.

This ſolemnity was held on Tueſday ſe'nnight, at which Sir John Eamer, our worthy Chief Magiſtrate, preſided; Lord Valentia, the Vice-Preſident, Alderman Hibbert, Ald. Flower, and a numerous aſſemblage of gentlemen, compoſed this reſpectable meeting. After the health of our gracious King, the Patron, and other loyal toaſts were drank, the heart-moving, awful proceſſion of the perſons reſtored to life ſince the laſt anniverſary, commenced with Dr. Hawes, who bore a ſtandard inſcribed, "We praiſe God, and thank you;" followed by Mr. and Mrs. Ruſſell, of Lambeth, ſupporting their ſon, a fine youth of 15, taken out of the Thames, and reſtored to life in Auguſt laſt. The reſt of the reſuſciated perſons, men, women, and children, about 100 in number, cloſed the awful ſcene.

Struck with the glorious ſight, the benevolent hearts of the ſpectators beat reſponſive to the grateful tears of the objects of their patronage, and though no actual collection was made, who could refrain from adding what was in their power to extend theſe noble efforts of humanity to future objects? Among the foremoſt we obſerved the brothers, Abraham and Benjamin Goldſmid, who each gave 50 guineas, in a manner as handſome as philanthropic; upon which the Lord Mayor very pertinently and happily obſerved, in his addreſs to the company on the occaſion, that "The example of theſe good men, he had no doubt, would not only be followed by thoſe whoſe opulence enabled them ſo to do, but he alſo truſted that it would tend to unite all men in the bond of ſocial love, let their religious diſtinctions be what they might." This truly philanthropic with warmed every breaſt; it was received with reiterated applauſe, and the donations became as liberal as general; to enumerate which, being the province of advertiſement, not of narration, the writer cloſes the ſcene by congratulating his countrymen on the happy events of the day, which was conducted with perfect decorum, elegance, and good underſtanding.

From late London Papers.

Lockman, the celebrated Perſian Moraliſt, relates the following ſtory of himſelf.—"I was once," ſays he, "ſo poor, that I had not wherewith to buy me a pair of ſhoes, and was obliged to go bare footed.—However patient I had till then been, I now became very diſſatisfied with my lot, and entered the temple at Cuffa extremely melancholy and diſcontented. I there ſaw a man who had no legs; reflecting on whoſe condition, I no longer complained of wanting ſhoes, but gave thanks to God, from the bottom of my heart, that I could ſtill walk, though bare footed. How much better is it, thought I, to be without ſhoes than without legs! If this poor man could recover his legs, how extatic would be his joy, though he ſhould have no ſhoes."

A blind beggar, who lately exerciſed his calling in the Paſſage des Feuillans, at Paris, attempted, but in vain, to draw the attention of paſſengers by ſome bad verſes written upon his humble lodging. Having communicated his want of ſucceſs to a friend, the latter aſked, "Why don't you apply to Piron, the author of Metromanie?—He is blind like yourſelf, and paſſes this way every day. The poor beggar took the advice, and being informed of the approach of Piron next day, he ſtopped the poet, and preferred his humble ſuit for his poetical aſſiſtance. "With all my heart brother," replied Piron, "I ſhall do my beſt;" and he accordingly preſented him next morning with the following lines:—

Chrétiens, au nom du Tout Puiſſant;
Faites moi l'aumône en paſſant;
L'aveugle qui vous la demande,
Ignore qui la lui fera;
Mais Dieu, qui voit tout, le ſaura;
Il le paiera qu'il vous le rende.

This ſingular adventure, added to the merit of the verſes, has attracted ſuch crouds, that the old blind man has already acquired an independence.

Among the ſeveral ſhips loſt in the North Seas in the late ſtorm, a letter from Copenhagen mentions a ſhip at Fleuſbourgh, which, as it was ſinking in the port, the crew endeavoured to ſave themſelves on the maſt. A merchant who was preſent offered a reward for ſaving the crew. A carrier, of Eſtineur, who was preſent, ſet out with his people and ſaved all but a little cabin boy; but refuſed the reward, alledging that he did not ſave the lives of men for money. The merchants of the city had a medal ſtruck by ſubſcription for this friend of humanity.

The following inſtance ſhews how apt the language of profeſſional men is to accompany them in ſocial life. At a city club, a few evenings ſince, the buſineſs at Amiens becoming the ſubject, an attorney obſerved, "that the Plenipos were preparing an indenture quadupartite, made between his gracious Majeſty George III. of the Imperial kingdoms of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and ſo forth, on the firſt part;" Bonaparte, of the French Republic, Firſt Conſul. "Have done with yout parchment lingo," cried an apothecary, "they are compounding a balſam to heal the wounds of the war, deeply ſeated in the thorax and abdomen of the ſeveral patients."—"Pho, pho!" exclaimed an architect,—"they are erecting a dome to peace—may the ſpan of its arch be as wide as the univerſe, and reſt on Hercules's pillars!"—"Aye," ſaid a maſter carpenter, "and may every plank of the building be dove-tailed!"—"Well ſaid, little Dove-tail," added an ironmonger, "and may the whole buſineſs be ſpeedily rivetted and clenched for the remainder, at leaſt, of the preſent century."

The 7th or Royal Fuzileers, ſtationed at Halifax, and the 66th regiment ſtationed at Newfoundland, are ordered to Jamaica.

April 16.

Yeſterday being Maunday Thurſday, his Majeſty's annual bounty was diſtributed to as many poor men and women as the King is years old, who ſat down at two tables in Whitehall Chapel and were waited on by his Majeſty's attendants.

The number of poor people being ſeated at two long tables, each had firſt a ration of beef of about four pounds weight, and four three-penny loaves.

A cup of ale was then given them, and they departed with chearful hearts.

In the afternoon the ſame perſons again attended, having their admiſſion tickets, when the Rev. Dr. More read the leſſon of divine morality in an audible voice from the 25th chapter of St. Matthew, in which is fully exemplified all the duties which a Chriſtian ought to follow.

The Rev. Divine then delivered to the ſupplicants as follows:

To the men, cloth for each of them ſufficient for a coat, Iriſh cloth for ſhirts, and ſhoes and ſtockings; alſo a pound note and a ſhilling, with the ſilver pennies, agreeable to the age of his Majeſty.

During the ſervice ſelect anthems were ſung by the Gentlemen of the Choir, whoſe abilities are too well known to need any panegyric.

At the concluſion the poor perſons were regaled with a cup of wine and diſmiſſed, thanking their benefactor for his bounty.

The Yeomen of the Guards who were on duty partook of an entertainment at the Northumberland Arms in Charles-ſtreet, Weſtminſter.

On Tueſday the Princeſs of Wales gave a grand dinner to ſeveral Gentlemen, high political characters, among whom was Lord Thurlow; and on Wedneſday her Royal Highneſs gave a grand dinner to a large party of the Officers who ſo gallantly diſtinguiſhed themſelves in Egypt, it being her third Egyptian dinner.

April 26.

At a late hour laſt night Mr. Hunter, jun. the meſſenger, arrived with the Spaniſh and Dutch Ratifications of the Definitive Treaty of Peace.

The time for proclaiming the peace cannot be announced till the return of a meſſenger who has been diſpatched to his Majeſty at Windſor: it will, however, be probably ſoon announced; but a few days will be allowed to prepare for the general illumination.—Notwithſtanding the preparations that have already been made, the tinmen and others employed in getting up the illuminations, have not been able to overtake their orders; and it is therefore probable Miniſters, having an eye to the general wiſh, will not fix on an earlier day than Thurſday.

The Heralds are already ſummoned to attend the proceſſion, which will be ſimilar to that of 1783, an account of which we laid before our readers ſome days ago.

By the veſſel which brought over Mr. Hunter, we received Paris Journals to the 21ſt, and this morning thoſe of the 22d inſt. They are chiefly filled with details reſpecting the mode of publicly inſtituting be eſtabliſhed in France.

It is ſeuled that Lord Whitworth ſhould go to Paris. His Lordſhip will leave town about the 6th of next month.

PLYMOUTH, April 13.

Twenty ſail of veſſels are taken up at this port, for the purpoſe of tranſporting the French prioners to their native country: the embarkation commenced this morning, and about 2000 are expected to be on board in the courſe of the day, as the weather is fine. The wind being favourable, they will ſail immediately, and many of them will probably reach France in the courſe of to-morrow. There will remain about 2000 more, which will alſo be embarked as ſoon as the veſſels return to this port.

The San Joſef, of 112 guns, Royal George of 100 guns, and Prince of 98 guns, remain in Cawſand Bay, waiting a fair wind to come into harbour; they are very ſhortly expected to be paid off.

TURKEY.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 10.

The Caimacan, or Deputy of the Grand Vizier, died here ſuddenly on the 7th inſt. He dropped down dead as he was on a viſit to the Captain Pacha. Muſtapha Bey is appointed his ſucceſſor.

The Batavian Envoy, Citizen Dedem, has now a Turkiſh honorary guard placed before his hotel, and is formally acknowledged in his late capacity of Ambaſſador.

The Engliſh Ambaſſador, Lord Elgin, has been indiſpoſed for ſeveral weeks.

We have a report here that the Engliſh require conſiderable ſums of the Porte, before they will conſent entirely to evacuate Egypt; but this is not probable; it is perhaps more ſo, that they will keep poſſeſſion of ſeveral of the ports of that country, till certain diſputes are adjuſted.

NEW YORK, May 19.

The Batavian fleet, conſiſting of three ſhips of the line and a brig, viz. the Brutus, Neptunus, and Jean De Witt, and brig Ajax, under the command of vice Admiral P. Hartſink, arrived in Hampton roads the 10th inſt. from Cape Francois. It is ſaid a part of the ſquadron will go to the port of Baltimore to refit.

MAY 26.—By the ſhip Fanny, from Cape Francois, which place ſhe left on the 6th inſt. we learn, that the troubles at St. Domingo have ſubſided. A few days before the departure of this veſſel, Chriſtophe ſubmitted, and is continued for the preſent in the rank he held. Touſſaint and Deſſalines have been compelled to ſurrender unconditionally. Touſſaint was permitted to retire to his eſtates, after having formally reſigned his public functions to the General in Chief. Troops from France were expected daily at the Cape.

ALBANY, May 17.

The following article is copied from a London paper of March 28.

"It is ſtated, that, on the ſigning of the Definitive Treaty, Cambaceres and Le Brun retire from the Conſulate; the firſt to be Grand Chancellor, and the other Superintendant-General of Finances; that Bonaparte will declare himſelf Preſident for life; his brother Joſeph perpetual Preſident of the Council of State, with the power of governing in caſe of the abſence, illneſs, or demiſe of Napoleone; the third brother, Lucien, to be perpetual Preſident of the Legiſlative Body; and Louis, of the Tribunate, Jerome and Bacciochi, are not mentioned in the bill.—Le Clerc and Murat are to be military governors of St. Domingo and of Italy.—The Republic, it is added, is to be divided into twenty-five departments, each to be governed by a Prefect, a General, and a Biſhop.—The Roman Catholic religion is to be the only one paid by the ſtate, and to have 6000 Curés, or Vicars, with a ſuitable number of inferior Clergy."

May 26.

Extract of a letter from the Havanna, to a gentleman in Philadelphia, dated April 23.

"Some days ago, a town a ſmall diſtance back of the Havanna took fire, and the whole place, containing upwards of 3000 houſes, was conſumed. The loſs is eſtimated at 4,000,000 dollars. In conſequence of this event, the government have come to a determination to admit from 3 to 5000 barrels of flour to be entered from the American veſſels laying off the harbour, to be ſold to the King at a ſtated price, and afterwards retailed to the individuals, the profits on which ſpeculation is to go to the ſufferers."

QUEBEC, May 6.

PLEASURES OF SPRING.

Thus, while the rosy blooming May!
Steals hushing on, together let us walk!
The opening flowers we'll gather as we stray,

SAY, ye moft refined thinkers on human bifs, from what natural incident or quarter can you derive to many fources of grateful enjoyment, as from the earth apparaled in verdure, and the heavens again flushing over the labors of men, dropping with dew? What an innocent fault to the fenfes is preferved in every field on every hill, in every vale! To what points can we turn the hurrying, eagel eye, where it is not captivated and fweetly delayed, where it is not fatisfied and refreshed? With what wild, yet chafte fancy, has nature mixed her colours, how gaily painted her robe! How bountifully has fhe fcattered her flowery blofforns, with what luxuriance has fhe ftung her odours, and what delightful melody does fhe awaken from the grove! While every fenfe is pleafed, the organs of each are ftrengthened; for cheerfulnefs is infpired by the fcene, and health is caught in the gale. The morning fun himfelf feems to reft over the view, and diffeufe his moft benignant fmiles on the infant year. The delights of this feafon, from charming the body, pafs to the mind. The manner in which they influence each other, we know not, we are only certain of the fact; and few, I believe, but will allow they have felt an unufual fternity, loveliness and joy, while the farrounding objects were congenial to fuch difpofitions: when the garden breathed perfume, and the gladdened choir of the woods poured forth the notes of rapture.

MORALIST.

LIFE is fhort; the poor pittance of feventy years is not worth being a villain for: what matters it if your neighbor lay interred in a fplendid tomb. Sleep you with innocence; look behind you through the tracks of time, a vaft defert of unnumbered ages lies open in the retrofpect.—Thereon ftalk the fpectres of your forefathers journied on, till wearied with years and forrow, they funk from the walk of man. You muft leave them where they reft, and you are to go on a little further, where you will find eternal reft. Whatever you may encounter between the cradle and the grave, be not difmayed. The univerfe is in endlefs motion, every moment big with innumerable events, which come not in flow fucceffion, but burfting forcibly from a revolving and unknown caufe, fly over this orb with diverfified influence. Should you be plunged into difagreeable circumftances, from thofe very circumftances may another be at that moment rifing to the fummit of his good fortune; fo may your neighbor's incompetence prove beneficial to you.

None can know the eternal purpofe of exiftence; but, thrown in a grand equilibrium, preferved by one mighty chain of dependencies. Look then at the univerfe; limit not the view of your foul to one hemifphere; and afk your reafon, if, in fuch awful revolutions of worlds and their inhabitants, pain or pleafure muft not conftitutionally affect you. Be ever fearlefs; yield reluctantly to the paffions, increafe the regions of the mind, and know that as you have no will to refift the power of death, death can be no evil further than it effects the imagination. To fleep, to go thro' various changes, or to wake everlaftingly, is equally independent of your will.—Therefore cheerfully truft the future, only dread the act that may wound your eftablifhed reftitude of thought.

POETRY.

Extempore on reading Mr. FOX's Speech in the Houfe of Commons, on the late Duke of Bedford.

BADFORD! tho' torn in manhood's ripen'd bloom,
From life, from wealth, from virtue's nobleft aim,
Who, but fhall envy thine untimely tomb?
While Britain weeps, and lives records thy fame!

SONG.

YES, MARY-ANN, I freely grant,
The charms of HENRY's eyes I fee;
Yet, while I look, I figh, I pant,
I want thofe eyes—to gaze on me.

And I allow, in HENRY's heart,
No Envy's fell a tout can fee;
Yet ftill I muft not with impart,

MEDITATIONS ON A PUDDING.

LET it ferioufly reflect on what a pudding is compofed. It is compofed of flour, that once waved in the golden grain, and drank in the dews of the morning; of milk, preffed from the fwelling udder by the gentle hand of the fweetteft milk maid, whofe beauty and innocence might have recommended a worfe draught, who, while fhe ftocked the wifeft, indulged no ambitious thoughts of wandering in palaces, and formed no plans for the deftruction of her fellow creatures. Milk which is drawn from the cow that ufeful animal, that eats the grafs of the field, and fupplies us with that which made the greateft part of the food of mankind in the age which the poets have agreed to call golden. It is made with an egg, that miracle of nature, which the theoretical Burnet has compared to creation; an egg contains matter within its beautiful fmooth furface, and an undrefs'd mafs, which becomes a regular animal, furnifhed with bones and finews, and covered with feathers. Let us conflder, can there be more wanted to complete this meditation on pudding? It more is wanting, more may be found. It contains' fait, which keeps the lea from putrefaction; and fhich is made the image of intellectual effence, contributes to the formation of a pudding.

RELIGION IN FRANCE.

PARIS, 25 Germinal.

CONVENTION

Between the French Government and his Holineſs PiusVII.

The government of the French Republic acknowledges that the Catholic, Apoſtolic, and Roman religion, is the religion of a large majority of the French people. His Holineſs acknowledges on his part, that this ſame religion has received, and yet expects to receive the greateſt advantages and ſplendor from the re-eſtabliſhment of Catholiciſm in France, and from the particular profeſſion made of it by the Conſuls of the Republic. Having therefore made this mutual acknowledgement, tending as much to the promotion of religion, as to the ſecurity of internal tranquility, they have agreed to the following articles:

Art. I. The Catholic, Apoſtolic, and Roman religion ſhall be freely exerciſed in France. Public worſhip shall be restored, under such regulations as government shall judge most conducive to peace and harmony.

II. There shall be made by the Holy See, in concert with the government, a new list (circumscription) of French dioceses.

III. His Holiness shall declare to the titulars of the French bishoprics, that for the interests of peace & unity, he confidentially expects from them every sort of sacrifice, even that of their sees.

Should they refuse to comply with this request, dictated by a regard to the interests of the church, (a refusal, however, which his Holiness does not expect) new titulars will be provided to the government of the bishoprics of the new list, in the following manner:—

IV. The First Consul of the Republic shall nominate within three months following the publication of the Bull of his Holiness to the archbishoprics and bishoprics of the new list. His Holiness shall confer the canonical institution according to the ceremonies established in France before the change of government.

V. The nomination to bishoprics which shall hereafter be vacant, shall be also made by the First Consul, & the canonical institution shall be given by his Holiness the Pope, in conformity to the preceding article.

VI. The bishops before entering on their functions, shall formally take at the hands of the First Consul the oath of fidelity which was in use before the change of government—expressed in the following terms:—

"I swear and promise before Almighty God, on the Holy Evangelists, to maintain obedience and fidelity to the government established by the constitution of the French Republic. I promise also not to hold any communication, nor to assist at any council, nor to hold any league, either within or without, that may contravene public tranquility; and if in my diocese or elsewhere I apprehend that any mischief is plotting against the state, I will make it known to the government."

VII. The ecclesiastics of the second order, shall take the same oath at the hands of the civil authorities designated by the government.

VIII. The formula of the following prayer shall be recited at the end of divine service, in all the catholic churches of France:—

* Domine, salvam fac rempublicam; Domine, salvos fac Consules.

IX. The bishops shall make out new lists of the parishes within their dioceses, which however shall not have any force till ratified by government.

X. The bishops shall nominate the curates. But their choice shall be expressly confined to such persons as are agreeable to the government.

XI. The bishops may have a chapter for their cathedrals, and a seminary for their dioceses, but the government will not engage to make any provision for the same by endowment.

XII. All the metropolitan cathedrals, parochial, and other churches which may not have been alienated, and which are necessary for worship shall be put under the care of the bishops.

XIII. His Holiness, for the sake of peace, and the happy re-establishment of the Catholic religion, declares that neither he, nor his successors, will disturb in any manner the proprietors of ecclesiastical property heretofore purchased by them, and that consequently the title to those estates and the privileges and revenues belonging to them, shall remain inviolable, or those deriving titles from them.

XIV. The government will guarantee a proper degree of respect to the bishops and curates, when dioceses and curates are comprised in the new list.

XV. The government will also take measures to secure to the French Catholics any endowments which may be made for the benefit of their churches.

XVI. His Holiness acknowledges that the First Consul of the French Republic possesses all the rights and prerogatives which were enjoyed by his Holiness by the ancient government.

XVII. It is agreed between the contracting parties, that in case any one of the successors of the First Consul, for the time being, should not be of the Catholic religion, the rights and prerogatives mentioned in the preceding articles, and the nomination to bishoprics, shall with respect to the First Consul, be regulated by a new convention.

The ratification hereof shall be exchanged at Paris, within forty days.

Done at Paris, the 26th Messidor, 9th year of the French Republic.

From the organic articles of the Convention agreed upon in the Concordat, for the regulation of religious worship in France.

Agreeable to the project of the law, the publication in France of any act of the Court of Rome, of foreign Synods, and of General Councils, before they shall have been examined by the government, is forbidden.—It also forbids any ecclesiastical assembly to deliberate in France without its authority: gives to the Council of State the cognizance of redress and errors. The archbishops and bishops may subjoin to their name the title of citoyen or monsieur, but without any other addition. No one can receive the rank of bishop under thirty years of age, nor unless a native Frenchman. The First Consul will cause the candidates to be examined touching their religious sentiments. The bishops must reside in their respective dioceses, from whence they are not to absent themselves without the leave of the first consul. Each bishop may have two vicars general, and the archbishops three; they shall visit every year the division of their diocese, and the whole of the diocese every five years, and they shall submit to the first consul the regulations for organizing their seminaries.

NEW-YORK, May 29.

It is with much regret we announce to the Public, the death of Mrs. Martha Washington. Her decease took place on Saturday last, at Mount Vernon. The death of this estimable woman, must strongly recall to the recollection of every true American, the many amiable qualities which marked her character thro' the revolutionary war, and thro' the halcyon days of the first eight years administration of the federal government—The worthy comfort of the first of men—she shared his anxieties—she soothed his cares—she conciliated for him and for herself the affections of her country, and has left a name that will be respected and beloved by the citizens of these states, while superior excellence continues to command their approbation and esteem.

From the Mercantile Advertiser.

☞Keep the feet warm and the head cool," is a maxim in physic, the observance of which is, perhaps, one of the best means of preserving health. A strict attention to the latter part of the maxim is very necessary, at all times, in tropical climates, where the heat of the sun acting upon the head has been attended with fatal consequences. In temperate climates, during the summer months, the heat of the sun is intense and prejudicial to health; and it is possible that by avoiding the sun's heat, or preventing its action upon the head, some of the diseases incident to mankind in those climates might be prevented.

White or light coloured bodies posses, in an eminent degree, the property of reflecting the heat of the sun. This has been demonstrated by the late Dr. FRANKLIN, who ascertained the fact by placing two pieces of cloth of different colours upon the surface of snow, and exposing them to the rays of the sun; in a few hours afterwards he found that the red cloth was buried in the snow; while the other, which was white, had not suffered the least depression. A black hat, or any dark coloured body, will quickly burn in the focus of a small burning glass, which would scarcely heat white or light coloured substances. From whence it appears that the fashion of wearing white or drab hats in summer is founded on utility; since, by means of it, the head is defended from the heat of the sun, and preserved cool, and, perhaps, disease prevented.

WHEREAS by a certain Act of Parliament intitled "an Act for the better Division of this Province," passed in the Second Session of the Second Parliament of this Province, to which the Royal Assent was promulgated by Proclamation bearing date the first day of January in the fortieth year of His Majesty's Reign, "It is provided and enacted that when, and so soon as the Counties of NORTHUMBERLAND and DURHAM shall make it satisfactorily appear to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person administering the Government of this Province, that there are one Thousand Souls within the said Counties, and that six of the Townships therein do hold Town Meetings according to Law; then the said Counties with all the Lands in their rear, confined between their extreme Boundaries, produced North, sixteen degrees West, until they intersect the Northern limits of the Province, shall and are thereby declared to be a separate District, to be called the District of NEWCASTLE. And the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person administering the Government of the Province is thereby authorized upon such proof as aforesaid to Declare the same by Proclamation any time within one year after the same shall be so established as to him shall seem most fit." And whereas the Inhabitants of the said Counties of NORTHUMBERLAND and DURHAM have made it satisfactorily appear to me, that there are one Thousand Souls and more within the said Counties, and that Six of the Townships therein do hold Town Meetings according to Law, the proof whereof hath been so established within one Year next before the issuing of this my Proclamation.

NOW KNOW ALL MEN that I PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of this Province, by virtue of the Authority so vested in me as aforesaid, do hereby declare, that the said Counties of NORTHUMBERLAND and DURHAM, with all the Lands in their rear, confined between their extreme Boundaries, produced North, sixteen degrees West, until they intersect the Northern Limits of the Province, do constitute and form a separate District of this Province, to be called the District of NEWCASTLE, under and by virtue of the said Act.

DOWNING-STREET, April 26.

Last night one of the King's Messengers dispatched by Anth'y Merry, Esq; his Majesty's minister plenipotentiary to the French Republic, arrived with the ratifications by his Catholic Majesty, and by the Batavian government, of the definitive treaty of peace signed the 27th of last month; which were exchanged with Mr. Merry against those of his Majesty on the 23d inst. at Paris, by the plenipotentiaries of his Catholic Majesty and of the Batavian republic.

BY THE KING.—A Proclamation declaring the conclusion of the war.

GEORGE R.

WHEREAS by an act passed in the 34th year of our reign, intitled, "an act for the further encouragement of British mariners, and for further purposes therein mentioned," various provisions are made which are directed to take effect from and after the expiration of six months from the conclusion of the then existing war, to be notified in a manner therein mentioned; and it is thereby further enacted, that for the purposes of said act, the conclusion of the said war shall be holden to be from the time that the same shall be notified by our royal proclamation, or order in council, to be published in the London Gazette. And whereas a definitive treaty of peace has been duly rauhed between us, the French republic, his Catholic Majesty, and the Batavian republic, we have therefore thought fit, by and with the advice of our privy coun..l, for the purposes of the said act, hereby to notify and declare the conclusion of the said war, by this our royal proclamation, to be published in the London Gazette, and we do direct the same to be published accordingly. Given at our court at Windsor, the twenty-fixth day of April, 1802, in the forty-second year of our reign.

God save the King!

BY THE KING.—A Proclamation.

GEORGE R.

WHEREAS a definitive treaty of peace and friendship between us, the French republic, his Catholic Majesty, and the Batavian republic, hath been concluded at Amiens, on the 27th day of March last, and the ratifications thereof have been duly exchanged; in conformity thereunto, we have thought fit hereby to command that the same be published throughout all our dominions; and we do declare to all our loving subjects our will and pleasure, that the said treaty of peace and friendship be observed inviolable as well by sea as land, and in all places whatsoever, ſtrictly charging and commanding all our loving subjects to take notice hereof, and to conform themselves thereunto accordingly. Given at our court at Windsor, the twenty-fixth day of April, 1802, in the 42d year of our reign.

God save the King!

BY THE KING.—A Proclamation for a public Thankſgiving.

GEORGE R.

WHEREAS it has pleaſed Almighty God, in his great goodneſs, to put an end to the late bloody, extended and extenſive war, in which we were engaged, we therefore, atoring the divine goodneſs, and duly conſidering that the great and public bleſſings of peace do call for public and ſolemn acknowledgements, have thought fit, by the advice of our privy council, to iſſue this our royal proclamation, hereby appointing and commanding, that a day of thankſgiving to Almighty God, for all his mercies, be obſerved throughout that part of our kingdom called Scotland, upon Tueſday the firſt day of June next; and we do ſtrictly charge and command, that the ſaid public thankſgiving be reverently and decently obſerved by all our loving ſubjects in Scotland, on the 1ſt day of June next, as they tender the favor of Almighty God, and would avoid the wrath and indignation, and upon pain of ſuch puniſhment as we may juſtly inflict upon all ſuch as contemn or neglect the performance of ſo religious a duty.—Our will and pleaſure is therefore, and we charge that this our proclamation be ſeen, at ye paſs to the market-croſs of Edinburgh and all other places needful, & there, in our name and authority, make publication thereof, that none pretend ignorance; and our will and pleaſure is, that our ſolicitor do cauſe printed copies hereof to be ſent to the ſheriffs of the ſeveral ſhires, ſtewarts of ſtewartries, and bailiffs of regalities, and their clerks, whom we ordain to ſee them publiſhed: and we appoint them to ſend copies thereof to the ſeveral pariſh churches within their bounds, that upon the Lord's day immediately preceding the day above-mentioned, the ſame may be publiſhed and read from the pulpits immediately after divine ſervice. Given at our court at Windſor, the twenty-ſixth day of April, 1802, in the 42d year of our reign.

God ſave the King!

From the LONDON GAZETTE, April 24.

At the Court at St. James's, the 21ſt April, 1802, preſent the King's moſt excellent Majeſty in Council.

This day the Right Honorable Edward Lord Ellenborough, Lord Chief Juſtice of his Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, was, by his Majeſty's command, ſworn of his Majeſty's moſt Honorable Privy Council, and took his place at the Board accordingly.

The King has been pleaſed to conſtitute and appoint the Right Hon. Francis Lord Napier to be his Majeſty's High Commiſſioner to the General Aſſembly of the Church of Scotland.

Extract of a letter from his Excellency Lord St. Helen's to the Rt. Hon. Lord Hawkeſbury, dated Moſcow, October 28, 1801.

I have the honor to tranſmit to your Lordſhip, by this meſſenger, the additional articles to the Convention of the (17) 5th June, which have been ſigned by myſelf and the Plenipotentiaries of this Crown; together with an act which I have alſo concluded with the Daniſh Plenipotentiary, containing the acceſſion of that Court to the ſaid Convention and additional articles, and its acceptance on the part of his Majeſty.

Extract of a letter from his Excellency Lord St. Helen's to the Right Hon. Lord Hawkeſbury, dated Peterſburgh, April 24, 1802.

I have the ſatisfaction of tranſmitting to your Lordſhip the Swediſh Act of Acceſſion to the Convention of the (17) 5th June, 1801, which was ſigned (with its duplicate) on the 30th paſt, by myſelf and the Baron de Stedingk; and inſtruments of a like tenor were at the ſame time interchanged between that Miniſter and the Plenipotentiaries of his Imperial Majeſty. I have moreover the ſatisfaction of being enabled to aſſure your Lordſhip, that the Swediſh Ambaſſador has been diſtinctly informed by the Count de Kotſchoubey, that as the motives which had occaſioned the late revival of the ſyſtem of the Armed Neutrality were now happily done away, that ſyſtem is conſidered by this Court as completely annulled and abandoned; not only as a general code of maritime law, but even in its more limited meaning of a ſpecific engagement between Ruſſia and the other confederates.

LONDON, April 24.

It is reported in ſome of the French papers, that the Royal Family of France has been thus provided for:—Louis XVIII. receives from Ruſſia 200,000 roubles a year, and 100,000 piaſtres from Spain. The Count d'Artois 360,000 livres from England; the Prince of Conde 100,000; his ſon, 80,000; and the Duke d'Enghien 60,000. The Ducheſs of Angouleme has the fortune her aunt left her. The Ducheſs of Orleans has 50,000 livres from France.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, April 14.

Mr. Addington then read the following Reſolutions:—

Reſolved, that it is the opinion of this Committee, that the ſum applicable under the 26th and 32d of the King, on the 1ſt of February, 1802, in the extinction of the National Debt, together with 200,000l. per annum, would, without the annuities which will expire, extinguiſh the whole in 45 years, being a ſhorter time than the two funds, if kept ſeparate upon their preſent eſtabliſhment footing would do, together with 200,000l. per annum, and 1 per cent. upon the 97,000,000l. funded this ſeſſion of parliament.

Reſolved, that it is the opinion of this committee, that the ſum of 100,000l. to be paid annually under the 26th of the King, to the commiſſioners for the extinction of the National Debt from the 5th April, 1803, be veſted in Commiſſioners, to be governed by other regulations.

Reſolved, that it is the opinion of this committee, that the funds under the 26th and 32d of the King ſhould be conſolidated, and be continually laid out at compound intereſt, till the whole National Debt be extinguiſhed.

Reſolved, that it is the opinion of this committee, that the annuities which ſhall expire, ſhall be applicable to the public ſervice, in ſuch manner as Parliament ſhall provide.

The Houſe reſumed, and Mr. Alexander brought up the report, which was read and agreed to, and it was ordered that the Houſe ſhould, on Monday ſe'nnight, again reſolve into a Committee on the ſubject.

PARIS, April 20.

According to letters from Weſel all the Pruſſian regiments in the diſtricts of Silena and Luſace are ordered to be replaced on the war eſtabliſhment.—Similar orders were previouſly iſſued with reſpect to the regiments in garriſon in Polish Pruſſia. All the fortreſſes on the frontier towards Bohemia are to be immediately repaired and furniſhed with palliſades. On the other hand, it is ſaid that a camp will be formed on the left bank of the Rhine about the beginning of May. Every where the Pruſſian recruiting officers augment their corps by their uſual method.—Theſe military preparations give riſe to an infinity of conjectures.

Accounts from Conſtantinople, dated the 11th ult. ſtate, that the Beys of Egypt who had placed themſelves under the protection of the Engliſh, had renounced that protection, and fled to the Upper Provinces. This meaſure is ſtated to have been occaſioned by a communication made to them by the Engliſh General, purſuant to orders from his Government, that he could only protect them in their perſons and property, but could not engage in any ſtep tending to reſtore them to thoſe rights and privileges which they formerly enjoyed, and which were deemed inconſiſtent with the ſovereignty belonging to the Porte.

NEW YORK, May 29.

VERY LATE FROM FRANCE.

This morning arrived the ſhip Sophia, capt. Hand, from Havre-de-Grace, which place ſhe left the firſt inſt. A gentleman who came paſſenger in her has obligingly furniſhed us with the following intelligence:—That the Chief Conſul had added 10,000 men to his guard—that a meſſenger from England had arrived with the ratification of the definitive treaty, which had previouſly received the ſanction of the French government—that Buonaparte had ſolemnly reſtored the ancient eccleſiaſtical Regime—that the Decade had been aboliſhed, and the obſervation of the Sabbath re-eſtabliſhed—that the Chief Conſul, on the 25th of April, had received in the church of Notre Dame, the Sacrament, in the preſence of all the Conſtituted Authorities, the foreign miniſters, and an immenſe crowd of ſpectators—a ſpectacle, that was ſuppoſed to be hardly leſs brilliant and impoſing than when the unfortunate Louis XVI. took the oath of Federation in the Champ de Mars.

AGRICULTURAL.

IT is related, that a certain Chineſe Emperor, when a rich MINE had been diſcovered and opened in his dominions, ordered it to be ſhut; alledging that it would injure the public, by diverting the people from the induſtrious purſuits of huſbandry. This imperial mandate was not ſo chimerical and unreaſonable as moſt people might think it to be. Any thing that tends to a general relaxation of induſtry is a public evil, and, even though it ſhould bring temporary riches, would be ſure to terminate in poverty.

The acquiſition of the Spaniſh mines rendered the Spaniards, firſtly rich, then lazy, and finally poor.

And, if there are now vaſtly rich and extenſive mines (a thing not impoſſible) within the United States, far diſtant be the inauſpicious day that ſhall diſcover them to the inhabitants. The diſcovery of ſuch mines would be a great national calamity, as they would become a ſubſtitute for induſtry, and would tend, firſt to idleneſs, pride and luxury, and ultimately to national poverty and wretchedneſs:—and more particularly, as they would draw off the attention of people from cultivating the ſurface of the earth, which is an infinitely better ſource of national wealth, than digging gold from its bowels.

In ſuch a vaſt agricultural country as is ours, huſbandry ought to be the firſt and principal occupation, which ſhould employ at leaſt nine tenths of its male inhabitants. And men who would be expert and excellent farmers, muſt make this their only calling; for it is a buſineſs that requires ſtudy and forethought, and daily care and attention.

"He that by the plough would thrive,
Himſelf muſt either hold or drive."

FRANKLIN.

Origin of the Grey Mare's being the better Horſe.

I had lately the pleaſure of paſſing a very agreeable evening in a mixed company of both ſexes, where the converſation happening to turn upon the propriety of that power which men uſually arrogate to themſelves of ruling over their wives with deſpotic ſway, a young lady of wit and humour, then preſent replied, "it might poſſibly be ſo ſometimes, but much oftener the grey mare is the better horſe!" and very obligingly entertained the company with the following account of the riſe of that proverbial ſaying, which is made uſe of when a woman governs her huſband.

A gentleman of a certain county in England having married a young lady of conſiderable fortune, and with many other charms, yet finding in a very ſhort time, that ſhe was of a high domineering ſpirit, always contending to be miſtreſs of him & his family, he was reſolved to part with her. Accordingly he went to her father, and told him, he found his daughter of ſuch a temper, and he was ſo heartily tired of her, that if he would take her home again, he would return every penny of her fortune.

The old gentleman having inquired into the cauſe of his complaint, aſked him, "why he ſhould be more diſquieted at it than any other married man, ſince it was the common caſe with them all, and conſequently no more than he ought to have expected when he entered into the marriage ſtate?" The young gentleman deſired to be excuſed, ſhe ſaid he was ſo far from giving his aſſent to this aſſertion, that he thought himſelf more unhappy than any other man, as his wife had a ſpirit no way to be quelled; and as moſt certainly no man who had a ſenſe of right and wrong, could ever ſubmit to be governed by his wife. "Son (ſaid the old man) you are but little acquainted with the world, if you do not know that all women govern their huſbands, though not all, indeed, by the ſame method: however, to end all diſputes between us, I will put what I have ſaid on this proof, if you are willing to try it: I have five horſes in my ſtable; you ſhall harneſs theſe to a cart, in which I ſhall put a baſket containing one hundred eggs; and if, in paſſing through the county, and making a ſtrict inquiry into the truth or falſehood of my aſſertion, and leaving a horſe at the houſe of every man who is maſter of his family himſelf, and an egg only where the wife governs, you will find your eggs gone before your horſes. I hope you will then think your own caſe not uncommon, but will be contented to go home, and look upon your own wife as no worſe than her neighbors. If, on the other hand, your horſes are gone firſt, I will take my daughter home again, and you ſhall keep her fortune."

This propoſal was too advantageous to be rejected; our young married man, therefore, ſet out with great eagerneſs to get rid, as he thought, of his horſes and his wife.

At the firſt houſe he came to, he heard a woman, with a ſhrill and angry voice, call to her huſband to go to the door. Here he left an egg, you may be ſure, without making any further enquiry; at the next he met with ſomething of the ſame kind, and at every houſe, in ſhort, until his eggs were almoſt gone, when he arrived at the ſeat of a gentleman of family and figure in the county: he knocked at the door, and enquiring for the maſter of the houſe, was told by a ſervant, that his maſter was not yet ſtirring, but, if he pleaſed to walk in, his lady was in the parlour. The lady, with great complaiſance, deſired him to ſeat himſelf, and ſaid, if his buſineſs was very urgent, ſhe would wake her huſband to let him know it, but had much rather not diſturb him. "Why, really, madam, (ſaid he) my buſineſs is only to aſk a queſtion, which you can reſolve as well as your huſband, if you will be ingenuous with me. You will, doubtleſs, think it odd, and it may be deemed impolite for any one, much more a ſtranger, to aſk ſuch a queſtion; but as a very conſiderable wager depends upon it, and it may be ſome advantage to yourſelf to declare the truth to me; I hope theſe conſiderations will plead my excuſe. It is, madam, to deſire to be informed, whether you govern your huſband, or he rules over you?"—"Indeed, ſir, (replied the lady,) this queſtion is ſomewhat odd; but, as I think no one ought to be aſhamed of doing their duty, I ſhall make no ſcruple to ſay, that I have been always proud to obey my huſband in all things; but, if a woman's own word is to be ſuſpected in ſuch a caſe, let him anſwer for me, for here he comes."

The gentleman at that moment entering the room, and, after ſome apologies, being made acquainted with the buſineſs, confirmed every word his obedient wife had reported in her own favor; upon which he was invited to chooſe which horſe in the team he liked beſt, and to accept of it as a preſent.

A black gelding ſtruck the fancy of the gentleman moſt; but the lady deſired he would chooſe the grey mare, which ſhe thought would be very fit for her ſide-ſaddle; her huſband gave ſubſtantial reaſons why the black horſe would be moſt uſeful to them; but madam ſtill perſiſted in her claim to the grey mare. "What (ſaid ſhe, and will you not take her then? But I ſay you ſhall; for I am ſure the grey mare is much the better horſe." Well, my dear (replied the huſband,) if it muſt be ſo ..... "You muſt take an egg (replied the gentleman carter,) and I muſt take all my horſes back again, and endeavour to live happy with my wife."

POETRY.

MY NATIVE HOME.

OER breezy hill or woodland glade,
At morning's dawn or cloſing day,
In ſummer's ſtaunting pomp array'd,
Or penſive moonlight's ſilver grey,
The wreath in faſhion's thrall ſhall roam
Who wanders from his native home.

Whilſt at the foot of ſome old tree,
As meditation ſoothes his mind,
Lull'd by the hum of wand'ring bee,
Or ripp'ling ſtream or whiſp'ring wind,
His vagrant fancy ſhall ſtill roam
And lead him to his native home.

Tho' love a fragrant couch may weave,
And round him ſtrap the ſiſtive board;
Still mem'ry oft would turn to grieve
And reaſon ſcorn the ſplendid hoard;
While he, beſt proſpect of his houſe,
Would languiſh for his native home.

To him the ruſhy roof is dear
And ſweetly calm the darkeſt glen!
While pomp and pride and pow'r appear,
At beſt the glitt'ring plagues of men;
Unſought by thoſe who never roam
Forgetful of their native home.

Let me to Summer ſhades retire,
With meditation and the Muſe!
Or round the ſocial Winter fire
The glow of temper'd mirth diffuſe;
The winds may howl and waters foam
I ſtill ſhall bleſs my native home.

And oh! when youth's ecſtatic hour,
And paſſion's glowing morn are paſt;
Should age behold the tempeſt low'r,
And ſorrow blow its keeneſt blaſt;
My ſhade no longer doom'd to roam
Shall find the Grave a PEACEFUL HOME.

AN ACT the better to aſcertain and ſecure the Titles to Lands in this Province. [July 7th, 1801.]

I. WHEREAS a certain Act of this Province paſſed in the thirty-ſeventh year of His Majeſty's reign, entitled "an Act for ſecuring Titles to Lands in this Province," and which Act has been ſince extended by a certain other Act entitled "an Act to continue an Act entitled an Act for ſecuring the Titles to Lands in this Province" will very ſhortly expire; and whereas it is judged expedient to make further proviſion for the aſcertaining the validity of certain claims to lands in caſes in which His Majeſty's letters Patent have not as yet been made out, BE IT ENACTED by the King's Moſt Excellent Majeſty by and with the advice and conſent of the Legiſlative Council and Aſſembly of Upper Canada conſtituted and aſſembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act paſſed in the Parliament of Great Britain entitled

"an Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of His Majesty's Reign entitled "an Act for making more effectual provision for the government of the Province of Quebec in North America and to make further provision for the government of the said Province" and by the authority of the same, That at any time during the space of two years from and after the expiration of the before mentioned Act, it shall and may be lawful to and for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person administering the Government of this Province to issue such and so many Commissions under the Great Seal of this Province for each and every District within the said Province, in such manner and form, and to be directed to such and so many persons as he shall judge proper, of whom His Majesty's Chief Justice of this Province or one of the Justices of the Court of King's Bench shall be one, which said Commissioners or any three of them in cases in which His Majesty's letters Patent have not as yet been made out, shall by and under the authority of such Commission or Commissions, have power to hear and determine in manner hereinafter specified all claims to Lands, or to a lien or liens upon Lands in this Province in which the claim or title of the original nominee or nominees shall be found to have accrued or existed, prior to the passing of this Act and respecting which lands no Report has been made under the said former Acts, whether such claims shall be set up by the original nominee or nominees thereof, or by persons claiming absolute title under such nominee or nominees, or as mortgage creditors of, or under such nominee or nominees; Provided the original nominee or nominees founded his, her, or their claim or claims under the authority of General Haldimand's certificates, Lieutenant Governor Hamilton's certificates, the Surveyor General's Department, Land Board certificates, Magistrates recommendations, Treasury Tickets for Canada Bounty, and Orders in Council, or any other authority in any wise derived from his Majesty.

II. And be it enacted by the authority aforesaid that it shall and may be lawful to and for all and every person or persons setting up such claims as aforesaid, either in person or by agent duly authorized to come before and produce to such Commissioners or any three of them whereof the said Chief Justice or some one of the said Justices of the said Court of King's Bench shall be one, all such documents and evidences as he, she or they may be in possession of, for the purpose of satisfying such Commissioners as aforesaid of the validity of such claim or claims as he, she or they, shall or may set up to any such lands as aforesaid, for which purpose such Commissioners or any one of them, are and is hereby authorized and empowered to administer such oath or oaths either to the party or parties claiming, or to the witness or witnesses appearing in support of such claim or claims, whether the same be between subject and subject, or between the subject and the Crown, as shall be judged proper and expedient; and also by summons under the signature of any one of the said commissioners to require the attendance of all such persons whose evidence may be judged necessary to ascertain the validity of any such claim or claims, or to explain the subject matter thereof, and in such summons also to order the production of all such books, papers and documents as shall be in the custody or power of any such person or persons, whose attendance shall be so required by such summons, in such manner as such commissioner or commissioners signing such summons shall deem expedient; which summons all and every person and persons to whom the same shall be directed, is, and are hereby required to yield obedience to upon being duly served therewith. Provided always nevertheless, and it is hereby declared, that the said commissioners acting under such authority as aforesaid, are hereby authorized and empowered to receive such written or oral testimony as may be produced to them, whether the same be or be not consistent with the rules of evidence laid down or established by the Laws of England, and to give and allow such force and effect to such testimony as justice in each respective case shall in their judgment require.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That after the said commissioners shall in virtue of such commission or commissions, have examined such claim or claims as aforesaid, they shall be at liberty either to reject such claim or claims, or to allow the same as in their judgment, justice and the equity and good conscience of the case may require, without any regard to legal forms or solemnities whatsoever, and to report on the same accordingly, which report shall be final and conclusive, and shall be addressed to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person administering the Government of this Province in Council; and from thenceforth, the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person administering the Government of the Province, shall be at liberty, and he is hereby empowered and authorized to issue his Majesty's Letters Patent for the lands specified in such report, to the party or parties, his, her or their heirs and assigns, in favour of whom such report shall have been made in manner aforesaid. Provided always nevertheless, that in case the said Commissioners or either of them shall, during their sitting, or within fifteen days after they shall have signed said report, and before his Majesty's Letters Patent shall have been issued in pursuance thereof, by representation from any person or persons claiming to be interested therein, be satisfied, or have reason to believe that the report so far as concerns any particular lot or lots of land, has been obtained by surprize, or has been made erroneously, or that another person can shew a preferable claim to such lot or lots of land, and that justice requires that such report should be staid, so far as concerns such lot or lots of land; that then it shall and may be lawful to and for the said commissioners, or any other commissioners who may sit in execution of the said commission, or of any subsequent commission, to rehear such claim, or to let in new claims to such particular lot or lots of land, and upon such rehearing such commissioners shall be at liberty to report on the claims to be thereupon heard, as if no report had before been made, and such commissioners shall also be at liberty, if they shall judge it expedient to justice, to order any of the parties, at whose instance such rehearing was obtained, to pay such sum or sums of money to the party or parties in favor of whom a Report shall have been first made, as they shall see just, to be recovered in like manner as the costs and expences of witnesses are by this Act directed and authorized to be recovered.

IV. Provided nevertheless and be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that the said Commissioners shall not proceed to examine any such claim as aforesaid unless they shall have caused notice in writing of their intention to proceed upon the business of the said Commission to be fixed up in some conspicuous part of the office of the Clerk of the Peace, and at three other the most public places of each District respectively, at least one month before they shall begin to act therein; and also unless a notice specifying such claim or claims and the name or names of the claimant or claimants together with the number of the lot or lots, and of the concession or concessions with the name and names of the township and townships, district and districts, in which the lands so claimed respectively lie or are situated, shall have been fixed up in some conspicuous part of the said office of the Clerk of the Peace at least fifteen days before the same shall come on to be heard.

V. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that in all cases in which, before the Commissioners shall have proceeded to decide upon the right to any particular lot or tract of land, two or more notices by different persons, shall have been fixed up in the office of the Clerk of the Peace, claiming adversely such particular lot or tract of land, it shall and may be lawful to and for such Commissioners to defer or delay the hearing of such adverse claims or either of them, and to give to all any or either of such claimants such further or enlarged time for the production of evidence, and for the decision of such claim or claims as such Commissioners shall deem expedient to justice.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That in all cases in which any claim or claims shall or may be set up before the said Commissioners under any mortgage, or security made, or by writing agreed to be made by such original nominee or nominees as aforesaid, or by any person or persons claiming under such nominee or nominees, the said Commissioners acting under such authority as aforesaid, are, if they shall be satisfied that such claim is well founded, hereby authorized and empowered to report in favor of such mortgage or mortgages, agreement or agreements which report respecting such mortgages or agreements the Register of each County or Riding in which such lands shall be respectively situate, shall, and they are hereby required upon the production of the certificate of the said Commissioners, specifying their allowance of the said mortgage or agreement, to enregister or cause the same to be enregistered in the respective offices, and after such mortgages or agreements shall have been so enregistered accordingly, such registration shall have the same force and effect upon the said lands as the registration would have had if the party had been seized of the legal estate in such lands.

VII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That in case any person or persons who shall appear before the said commissioners to give evidence respecting any such claim or claims as aforesaid, shall wilfully or corruptly forswear him, her, or themselves in the giving such evidence, he, she, and they shall incur the like pains and penalties as would have been incurred upon a conviction for wilful and corrupt perjury in any evidence given in his Majesty's Court of King's Bench in this Province, in any cause there depending.

VIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That in all cases in which witnesses shall have duly appeared to give evidence before such commissioners, either voluntarily or in obedience to such summons as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful to and for the said commissioners to order and direct the party or parties who shall have produced such witness or witnesses, to pay such witness or witnesses for his, her, or their loss of time and expence, such sum or sums of money as such commissioners in their judgment shall deem equitable and just, and which order the party or parties upon whom the same shall be made, is, and he, she, and they is and are hereby required and enjoined to yield obedience to, and such sum or sums of money shall and may be recovered and recoverable under and by authority of this Act, by action or suit in any of his Majesty's Courts of Justice in this Province, due regard being had to their respective jurisdictions.

IX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person administering the Government of this Province for the time being, from time to time during the existence of this Act, by warrant under his hand, to order and direct the Treasurer of the said Province to pay to and for the use of the said commissioners acting in the execution of the said commissions respectively, such reasonable sum or sums of money, as will indemnify the said commissioners respectively against expences to be by them incurred during the sitting of, and in the execution of the said commission.

X. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful to and for the Clerk of the Peace in each and every District who is hereby authorized and empowered to act as clerk of the said commission, to demand and receive of and from the several persons who shall apply to him for any of the purposes of this Act, the following Fees:—

For receiving, fixing up in his office, and noting down for hearing any claim for a grant, and also for making up a report respecting the same, the sum of five shillings.

For receiving and noting down for hearing any caveat, three shillings and nine pence.

For every summons signed by one or more commissioners for the attendance of one or more witnesses, two shillings and six pence.

XI. And be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, That this Act shall be in force for the space of two years from the day of the passing thereof and no longer.

LONDON, April 18.

A trial was made a few days ago of a gun, on a new construction, invented by the Hon. Col. Blaguire; and on Friday various experiments were made in Hyde Park, by the inventor, on this curious piece of ordnance. The following are some of its properties: it measures about a foot in length, and requires only one tenth of the quantity of powder used with heavy ordnance, and one man alone can load and fire it with astonishing quickness; neither sponge, ramrod, nor cartridge being necessary. These are some of the advantages that this instrument of destruction possesses; and it will be found to have many more.

At a time when the army is about to be reduced, it is pleasing to observe that, owing to various public undertakings, there is little danger of the men being without employment. Although others, we understand there is an extensive drainage carrying on in the neighbourhood of Boston, in Lincolnshire, which will afford work at least for 1000 men, for which number utensils are preparing. The labourers to be engaged in this undertaking will not be prevented from attending the harvest, and they will have the advantage of full employment during the winter months, there being steam engines erected for the sole purpose of keeping the works dry. Every proper encouragement will be given to labourers, particularly canal cutters, by application to the directors at Boston.

David Forrester, lately executed for the murder of Captain Pigott, of the Hermione, made the following shocking confession a few minutes previous to his being turned off:—"That he went into the cabin, and forced Captain Pigott overboard through the port while he was alive. He then got on the quarter-deck, and found the First Lieutenant begging for his life, saying he had a wife and three children depending upon him for support; he took hold of him, and assisted in heaving him overboard alive, and declared he did not think the people would have taken his life, had he not first took hold of him. A cry was then heard through the ship, that Lieutenant Douglas could not be found, he took a lantern and candle and went into the gun-room, and found the Lieutenant under the Marine Officer's cabin; he called in the rest of the people, when they dragged him on deck and threw him overboard. He next caught hold of Mr. Smith, midshipman; a scuffle ensued, and finding him likely to get away, he struck him with his tomahawk, and threw him overboard. The general cry next was for putting all the officers to death, that they might not appear as evidence against them, and he seized on the Captain's Clerk, who was immediately put to death."

April 14.—The Mars, of 74, and Impeteux, of 84, by the amazing exertions of the crew, are completely stripped and ready to be paid off, which will take place to-morrow. It was quite laughable to see the jolly tars harness themselves as horses to the carriages appointed to draw the stores to the different depots, while one seaman acted as carter, with a long whip made of spun yarn, and another as a leading carter to what he called the thill-horse. All was fun and jollity, but conducted with the most perfect order and sobriety.

April 25.—"On Easter Monday, the children educated at Christ's Hospital walked as usual to the Mansion House, and from thence to Christ-Church, Newgate-street, in procession, which was attended by the Lord Mayor, the Lady Mayoress, a number of Aldermen and their Ladies, &c.

The city banquet was more elegant than has been given for many years. The Manſion Houſe was honoured at dinner by his Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, accompanied by his Royal Brothers, the Dukes of Clarence and Cumberland. No Chief Magiſtrates of the city of London has received a ſimilar mark of diſtinction from the reigning Sovereign or his immediate ſucceſſor, ſince the year 1761, when his preſent Majeſty dined with Sir Thomas Fludyer, in the day of his inſtallation into office. The dinner and decorations on that occaſion were in the richeſt ſtyle of magnificence, tho' perhaps excelled in point of ſplendor by the ſumptuous feaſt of Monday laſt. The Prince and his Royal Brothers advanced with little or no interruption till they reached St. Clement's Church, when the crowd became rather too attentive in their congratulations. The City Marſhal, with part of his officers, attended at Temple-Bar, to conduct the illuſtrious viſitors to the Manſion Houſe. They were proceeding thro' Fleet-ſtreet, when the populace, about the bottom of Chancery-lane, took the horſes from the carriage, and drew it, amidſt loud and reiterated acclamations, along the ſtreets to the Manſion Houſe, the ſpectators from the windows teſtifying their approbation by various demonſtrations of joy. When the Royal Strangers alighted at the Manſion Houſe, the people were more and more loud in the congratulations, and the Lord Mayor and his attendants gave them a very cordial reception. The Prince was attended by Earls Moira, Harrington, Granard, and Lord Forbes; Hon. T. Erſkine; Sir J. Warren, and J. H. Feathertſtone; Generals Lee and Witham; Colonels Winyard, Spencer, Dalrymple, and Mc. Mahon; T. Tyrwhitt, Eſq; &c. &c.

A band of muſic continued playing during the repaſt. A number of loyal and appropriate toaſts were drank. His Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, after the health of his Majeſty had been given, with three times three, by the Lord Mayor, paid a moſt handſome euſogium to the corporation of the city of London, which was received with the greateſt enthuſiaſm by every perſon preſent. The Prince then gave

The Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, and Proſperity to the City of London.

The band at the end of each toaſt played God ſave the King, Rule Britannia, and Britons ſtrike home.

The dinner was ſerved up in the firſt ſtile, by Meſſrs. Hoffman and Birch, and conſiſted of every delicacy, and a moſt elegant deſert.

The Prince of Wales diſplayed in every circumſtance that affability, politeneſs and elegance of manners, for which he is diſtinguiſhed.

The ball was opened by Miſs Farmer and his Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales. The minuet was admirably performed; and all who know the grace and elegance of his Royal Highneſs muſt admit, that ſuch an exhibition muſt have been uncommonly attractive. Miſs Farmer and the Duke of Cumberland had begun the country dances to the tune of "Sir David Blair," but they had ſcarcely gone down ſix couple, when the crowd became ſo ungovernable, that they were obliged for the time to deſiſt. The Prince of Wales retired between eleven and twelve o'clock, after beſtowing the higheſt encomiums on the handſome reception which he had experienced. His Royal Highneſs took his carriage amidſt the loudeſt acclamation of the multitude.

PLYMOUTH, April 15.

Plymouth and Dock are all alive in the paying off the ſhips, and the embarkation of the French priſoners. A very honorable trait of the true character of a real Britiſh tar occurred in Frankfort-place laſt evening: ſeveral of the French priſoners were permitted to come on ſhore to purchaſe neceſſaries; a ſeaman of the Malta, paid off on Monday laſt, met the party, and recognized a French ſeaman, whoſe life he had ſaved from La Vengeur, which ſunk on the glorious 1ſt of June. Recollecting each other, mutual congratulations took place, and the honeſt Britiſh tar actually treated each French priſoner (twenty in number) with a glaſs of grog, making them drink the King and Conſtitution of Old England, and proſperity to England and France.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, July 10.

On Wedneſday laſt at 12 o'clock, his Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor came in ſtate to the Upper Houſe of Legiſlature, to proroge the two Houſes of Parliament, and being ſeated on the Throne, he commanded, by meſſage through the Gentleman Uſher of the Black Rod, the attendance of the Houſe of Aſſembly, in the Legiſlative Council Chamber, and the Houſe of Aſſembly having attended accordingly, his Excellency was pleaſed to make the following SPEECH to both Houſes of Parliament:—

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legiſlative Council, and Gentlemen of the Houſe of Aſſembly.

I Now cloſe this Seſſion of Parliament, as it is my wiſh, that your Duty to the Public ſhould as little as poſſible interrupt your private concerns.

The Bill which you have paſſed for the better aſcertaining and ſecuring the Title to Lands in this Province, will I hope contribute to place real property therein, on a ſure and permanent foundation, and render the Bounty of the Crown, from which that property was originally derived, highly conducive to the good of the ſubject.

I truſt that the other Bills which you have paſſed, will each of them reſpectively, promote the Object of all Legiſlation, the General Good.

The erecting of a new Diſtrict gives me particular ſatisfaction, being an Indication of the increaſing population of this Province, one of the happy effects of that Plenty and Security, which by the bleſſing of Providence, we at preſent poſſeſs.

I think it proper to inform you that it is my intention to meet you next year during the winter, when you will have an opportunity of reſuming your Labors, at a time more convenient to yourſelves than the preſent, and equally advantageous to the Public.

In the mean while, you will be enabled at your reſpective places of abode, by your example and influence to add force and effect to the Laws already enacted, and by careful obſervation to diſcover what yet remains to be done for the weal—being and proſperity of this Province.

After which his Excellency was pleaſed to give the Royal Aſſent to the following Bills:—

1. An Act the better to aſcertain and ſecure the Title to Lands in this Province.

2. An Act to provide for the Adminiſtration of Juſtice in the Diſtrict of Newcaſtle.

3. An Act to declare and aſcertain the Rates which the Receiver General ſhall take and retain to his own uſe out of the monies paſſing through his hands, which are ſubject to the diſpoſition of the Parliament of this Province.

4. An Act to enable the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon adminiſtering the Government of this Province, to appoint one or more additional port or ports, place or places of entry within this Province, and to appoint one or more Collector or Collectors at the ſame reſpecuvely.

5. An Act for applying a certain ſum of money therein mentioned, to make good certain monies iſſued and advanced by his Majeſty through the Lieutenant Governor, in purſuance of two ſeveral Addreſſes of the Commons Houſe of Aſſembly.

SHERIFF'S OFFICE, June 19, 1802.

to wit. } given, that a General Court of Quarter Seſſions of the Peace will be holden in and for this Diſtrict, on Tueſday the thirteenth day of July now next enſuing, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon, at the Government Buildings in the Town of York; at which time and place all Coroners, Gaolers, High Conſtables, Conſtables, Baiſiffs, and all thoſe otherwiſe concerned, are deſired to be then and there preſent, and to do and perform what to their ſeveral offices in that behalf belong.

ENGLAND.

LONDON, April 30.

THE ILLUMINATION.

The inhabitants of the metropolis had ſo much time to prepare for the illuminations, that they had all the benefit of concert. Illuminations were never more general. The effect was very ſtriking. The ſplendor of the lights, reflected on the perpetual ſtream of curious gazers that rolled on through the ſtreets below, preſented a very animated ſcene. We cannot pretend to deſcribe the effect of this wide extended blaze. The whole firmament was on fire, and by the darkneſs of the night, the ſplendor of the effort to convert night into the brightneſs of day, was the more conſpicuous. The moon and ſtars were happily withdrawn from the competition of art to ouſtrip their glories, and to ſupercede their reign!

Drury-lane Theatre was ſuperb beyond the powers of deſcription. The immenſe ſize of the building, and its towering elevation above all thofe that furrounded it, afforded the proprietors prodigious advantages, which they improved with the greateft fpirit. They may be compared to the diftinguifhed members of the ancient Republics, who at their own expence gave magnificent fhews to their fellow citizens. The inhabitants of Athens or of Rome never received more pleafure from a naumachia or a fight of gladiators, than the populace of London laft night from Drury lane Theatre. During the day the Union Flag was difplayed from the fummit of the building, but towards evening this was replaced by a model of a man of war, fo large that it is a matter of the greateft aftonifhment how they were able to hoift it to fuch a height. Flags and ftreamers floated from her top-maffs. The front in Ruffel-ftreet was illuminated with great tafte. At the top was a Dove, with an olive branch; further down a Crown, with fprigs of laurel, and the letters G. R. and below the word PEACE, in lamps of the greateft brilliancy. It was on the Weft front, however, that pains and expence had been chiefly lavifhed, and to be fure nothing fo grand was ever before feen in London. Five colonades of the Corinthian order rofe from below to the top of the eliptis which forms the box lobby, and feemed to fupport the whole. Between them there were tranfparencies exhibiting Peace, Britannia, Fame, and other appropriate figures. Among them was firft, a very large and beautiful tranfparency of the implements of War. Cannon were feen vomiting forth their deftructive contents, and the dead and the dying appeared at a diftance. The cogtraft thus produced, heightened the effect to a wonderful degree. This was furrounded by a Wheat Sheaf, and the words Peace and Plenty, in chaffers feemingly each three feet long. Olive branches extended a great way on each fide. There was next a circular tranfparency, with the arms and emblems of the United Kingdom. Above this appeared a brilliant Imperial Crown, with the two letters G. R. And at the top of all was an ineftimable fine tranfparent painting of a Dove flying downwards, and bearing an Olive Branch in its mouth. The number of lamps was aftonifhing; they were beautifully variegated and uncommonly vivid. But the chief merit of the decorations was their tafteful arrangement, and of this defcription we can convey no idea. Though the fcale was fo great, a complete fymmetry and proportion were preferved, as if the whole had not exceeded the fize of a picture frame. The moft perfect fimplicity was conjoined with inconceivable magnificence. The fpectators were ftruck with the preparations, but when the lamps were lighted, the Theatre refembled the caftle of a Genius, fuch as we read of in the Thoufand and One.

About ten o'clock the mob, which then filled all the adjoining ftreets, was furprifed with the firing of a fky-rocket from the roof of the Theatre. This was followed by fplendid fire-works, which laited near two hours. They were conducted by a firft rate artift; and from being let off from fuch a ftage the effect was allowed, by all prefent, to be beyond whatever they had before witneffed. At laft the fhip, placed by the ftatue of Apollo, began to open upon another, compofed of combuftible materials. A mock engagement enfued, and the latter blew up, fhewing all the beauties of Chinefe fire. The finale was truly grand.

The crowd certified, by loud and repeated buzzas, their admiration and their gratitude. Their feelings muft have been participated by thoufands at a diftance of feveral miles from the fpot. The illuminations and the fire works would be feen, perhaps, to greater advantage, at Fulham, Wandfworth, Kew, Richmond, and all to weftward of the metropolis.

Mr. Jamifon, a watch-maker, nearly oppofite the Admiralty, had a device which attracted much notice. It was the perfect model of the San Jofef, of 120 guns, with her pendants flying, fo formed by the fkill of the maker, that it feemed to ride at anchor. The veffel rifes and falls, curvets and fwings in the moft complete imitation of a real fhip at fea. The whole is the effect of clock work, and affords a happy fpecimen of the artift's ingenuity and tafte. Around it was a circle of variegated lamps; above, the letters G. R. with a Crown. Below the fhip are the words Britain's glory. At a diftance (in painted perfpective) were repreſentations of two other Britifh fhips; the appearance of the fky being a fine azure blue, the clouds tinted with red, and the waves of the fea a beautiful green, had a very charming effect. A brilliant crown on the top, and the royal initials G. R. on each fide in variegated lamps, finifhed this grand defign.

The Admiralty. At the top a brilliant crown, underneath a radiated fun over an anchor, and a row of lamps on each fide, with ftambeaux extending the whole length of the entrance of the gates.

Mr. Bell's in Dean-ftreet, Soho, repreſented the Triumph of Peace. The allegorical figure of Peace is feated in a golden car, drawn by white oxen, attended by two nymphs, one holding a crown of laurel, and the other a cornucopia, the emblems of honor and plenty. Fame proclaims the joyful news to the world, and is followed by an infant genius, who conducts the oxen with garlands of vines. The car is paffing over pieces of armour, now no longer neceffary. On each fide of the picture are inferted the names (encircled in laurels) of fome of our illuftrious naval and military commanders, the fupporters of the national honor; and above the whole is the medallion of his Majefty, with the infcription, Deus nobis hæc otia fecit. The picture is, we underftand, the production of Mrs. Bell's pencil.

The Bank of England was fuperbly illuminated with about twelve thoufand variegated lamps, and preſented a very brilliant appearance; in the front was a large tranſparency, with a group of figures, with Peace defcending on Britannia, and Induftry and Plenty, with a Lion, and a fmall figure couched at the bottom. The following is the allegory: The tranſparent picture, occupying the fpace between the columns, repreſented Britannia ſeated; her robe of war was caft afide, and her helmet, fhield and cuirafs lay by her, fhewed that the had recently difarmed; fhe was ſaluted by Peace and Minerva, as her counſellors, ſtood near her tribune, while the pyramid immediately behind this group was a type of that ſtability which her government muſt acquire from ſuch an union. Britannia ſtretching out her right hand to receive Induſtry and Genius, while the other holds a cornucopia, the emblem of that abundance which beſt correſponds with the liberality of her views. This allegory exhibited the Britiſh Nation, under the auſpices of Peace, calling into action the corporeal and intellectual energies of the country; a conduct at once moſt worthy of her character, and moſt capable of remedying thoſe evils which are inſeparable from a ſtate of warfare. The head of his Majeſty over all with lamps, was likewiſe exhibited, the whole length of the front ſuſpended on chains.

The beautiful illumination of the Phœnix Fire Office deſerves particular notice; the front was ſet out in three diviſions of emblematical paintings: in the centre compartment Bellona ſtopped in her deſolating courſe by the Goddeſs of Peace, drops the horſes which drew her: blood ſtained car, and turns aſide her face with averſion from the Olive Branch preſented to her. At the top in the centre is placed a brilliant ſtar of the Order of the Garter, Inſcription—Glory to God on high. Another tranſparent picture in the Eaſtern diviſion repreſented the horrors of war, a woman in agony lying on the corpſe of a deceaſed ſoldier: in the back ground, a city and port in Flames, the terrified inhabitants flying in ſeveral directions. Inſcription—War and Deſolation. On the Weſtern ſide Britannia and Peace greeting each other. The diſtant ſcene repreſented the Riſing Sun ſhining over a placid ſea, and brightening a landſcape in which the ploughman is ſeen whiſtling on his way, the emblems of Commerce, Induſtry, and Plenty are ſpread around. A city is rebuilding, emblematical of the renovation of public proſperity. Aloft is a Phœnix, the moſt ancient and celebrated ſymbol of the reviſal and regeneration of all things. Inſcription—Peace and Renovation. The whole was richly ornamented with colored lamps in obeliſks and feſtoons, and produced a fine effect.

Mr. Ford's, Pavement in Moorfield's. A tranſparency of Peace and Plenty, a Dove, deſcending with an Olive Branch under which are the following ſimple rhymes:—

Peace is a welcome friend,
So is Plenty too:
The War is at an end,
That has made thouſands rue!

Sadler's Wells exhibited a very beautiful tranſparency of his Majeſty ſheathing the ſword of war, with the four quarters of the globe paying homage to him. It was very prettily executed and accompanied with a neat profuſion of variegated lamps.

Mr. Turpes, coach-maker, oppoſite Shoreditch church, exhibited a large tranſparency, 24 feet long and 12 high, repreſenting Britannia triumphantly ſeated in a Marine Car, drawn by ſea-horſes; the Britiſh banner floating with the motto, "hail Peace;" a diſtant view of the ſea, with the repreſentation of the battle of the Nile, and the L'Orient on fire, the whole executed in a moſt ſpirited and maſterly manner, in front of which are ſeen boats in motion rowing along, and veſſels paſſing on various tacks.—The motion of the boats, ſhips, and figures exceed deſcription.

There were many private devices, in which taſte as well as humor were ſhewn. Tranſparencies in general fail, as they neceſſarily muſt, amidſt the ſubduing glare of ſurrounding lights. In ſome inſtances, however, they were pregnant with fancy. One of the moſt whimſical was a tranſparent coach, drawn by four horſes; it was an admirable contrivance adapted to the Liverpool Coach, on the top of which it was placed. The tranſparency was as large as the body of the coach, and turned on a pivot, by which it neceſſarily moved round, and ſhewed on every ſide diſtinct devices.

The number of people moving about the ſtreets, muſt have been immenſe; in every quarter they were crowded, and in ſome it was ſcarce poſſible to paſs. We ſhould imagine that there were on the pavement in the courſe of the day 400,000 people. The evening was favorable, and the ſtreets perfectly dry and comfortable to pedeſtrians.

Many of thoſe who went round in carriages would be miſerably diſappointed. In ſeveral places, particularly in Portman Square, carriages were completely wedged in; and we ſhould think that thoſe in the inſide would be compelled to ſit in the ſtreet for ſeveral hours.

NEW YORK, June 9.

Ship William, Capt. Gardiner, in 34 days from London, and 31 from the Downs, arrived at this port yeſterday. Papers by this veſſel to the evening of the 4th of May are received at the office of the Mercantile Advertiſer.

They inform us that the Mondovi brig arrived at Malta from Egypt on the 28th February, with the intelligence of the Mameluke chiefs having retired to Upper Egypt, and declared war againſt the Porte. Several bloody actions had taken place between them and the Grand Vizier, with various ſucceſs. Sir Richard Bickerton was on the point of ſetting ſail from Malta for Alexandria, to endeavour to put an end to theſe hoſtile operations.

A letter from the Hague ſays, that the Engliſh government has ſent orders to the Moluccas to tranſport, before the Britiſh troops evacuate the iſland, all the ſeeds and plants of ſpices to Jamaica and Trinidad. Thus the commerce in ſpices, which the Dutch have hitherto enjoyed excluſively, and which has ſo materially contributed to enrich their merchants, will be now divided with Great Britain.

A converſation of conſiderable importance took place in the Britiſh houſe of commons on the night of Monday the 3d of May. Mr. Windham ſtated his reaſons for giving notice of a motion reſpecting the Definitive Treaty, and entered into a detail of the objections which had been thrown out at different times in both Houſes by gentlemen of his opinion.—Mr. Pitt defended the Definitive Treaty againſt Mr. Windham's attack, but referred the full diſcuſſion of his arguments until the promiſed motion ſhould be made. He ſaid, however, with reſpect to the apprehenſions expreſſed for the ſafety of the Britiſh Eaſt India dominions, in conſequence of the non-renewal of former treaties, that not only no Engliſh member of parliament could find any ſolid ground of objection or uneaſineſs, but that no rival could diſcover a plauſible pretence for cavil on that account.—He defended generally the non-renewal treaties; and contended that the advantage of the omiſſion was as great on the part of England as France. Mr. Windham's notice was of a motion for Tueſday the 18th of May; but Mr. Addington moved, as an amendment, Tueſday the 11th. The reaſon he gave for this was, the neceſſity of terminating the work of peace (already too long ſuſpended) as ſpeedily as poſſible.

The Lord Mayor ſtated, that he had received orders for diſbanding the London Militia; but he had afterwards a converſation with Lord Pelham, who thought they were on a different footing from the other Militia, and might be continued. The order for diſbanding them was recalled.

RELIGION.

'Tis this, my friend, that makes our morning bright
'Tis this that gilds the horror of our night,
When wealth forsakes us and when friends are few,

Disarms affliction or repels its dart;
Within the breast bids purest rapture rise,
Bids smiling confidence forbid her cheerful skies.

FROM A LATE LONDON PAPER.

A very curious ceremony took place a day or two ago in Portland Square. The preparations made at the house of M. Otto for the general illumination, have daily attracted immense crowds to view them. Over his door was put in coloured lamps the word "CONCORD!!!" A party of sailors going by the House, observed the characters, but read the words TONQUERED, upon which they began to make a row, and determined to have an alteration, declaring that the British Navy had never been CONQUERED. M. Otto came out to explain the word, but, nothing would beat it out of the conception of the mob, that the meaning was, that the English are conquered by the French. M. Otto finding his attempts at explanation fruitless, very good naturedly ordered the offensive word to be removed, and that of AMITY substituted in its place.

IMPORTANT IMPROVEMENT.

[From the London Magazine for March.]

The practice of Stereotype printing, lately adopted in Paris by Didot, appears to be one of the most considerable improvements connected with literature, that has been made since the invention of moveable types.—Those who confound the block printing with the solid pages produced in Didot's manner, are mistaken in their notions of its advantages. The solid blocks were carved or cut with great labor in a mass, whereas, Didot's solid pages are cast from solid pages first set up with moveable types, and the moveable types are thus converted to the best use of which they are susceptible. Upon the Stereotype plan, the page is first set up in moveable types, a mould or impression is then taken of the page with any suitable plastic material, and afterwards as many solid pages are cast from the mould as may be wanted. The expence of a solid page does not exceed the resetting it in moveable types, and the obvious advantage lies in the power which they give of taking off as many impressions at any one time as are likely to be sold. Books by this invention will be greatly reduced in value, and those standard works for which there is a constant demand will never be out of print. Didot is enabled, to sell at Paris neat editions of Virgil, Phædrus, Cornelius Nepos, Horace, Sallust, Ovid, the Vicar of Wakefield, the Sentimental Journey, and Lady Montague's Letters, as low as seven pence half penny per copy. Mr. Phillips of St. Paul's church yard, hopes to be able to present the British public, in a short time, with neat and correct editions of the classics, and of many of the best English authors, on terms equally moderate.

[July 7th, 1802.]

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN,

WHEREAS in pursuance of an Address of your Commons House of Assembly to PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of your Province of Upper Canada, bearing date on the sixth day of July in the forty-first year of your Majesty's reign, the sum of seven hundred and fifty pounds has been issued and advanced by your Majesty through your Lieutenant Governor, to the Commissioners nominated and appointed by him your Lieutenant Governor aforesaid, for carrying into effect the intention of your Majesty's said Commons to encourage and promote the culture and exportation of Hemp; And whereas in purſuance of a certain other Addreſs of your ſaid Commons Houſe of Aſſembly to your Majeſty's Lieutenant Governor aforeſaid, bearing the ſame date as the former, the further ſum of eighty-four pounds and eight pence has been iſſued and advanced by your Majeſty through your Lieutenant Governor aforeſaid, to the Clerks of the two Houſes of Parliament, as well in ſatisfaction of certain diſburſements of monies made by them the ſaid Clerks in anſwering and diſcharging of certain contingent expences attending the laſt Seſſion of Parliament as to enable them the ſaid Clerks to provide a ſupply of Stationary for the future purpoſes of the Parliament; May it therefore pleaſe your Majeſty, that it may be enacted, and be it enacted by the King's moſt excellent Majeſty, by and with the advice and conſent of the Legiſlative Council and Aſſembly of the Province of Upper Canada, conſtituted and aſſembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act paſſed in the Parliament of Great Britain, entitled, "an Act to repeal certain parts of an Act paſſed in the fourteenth year of his Majeſty's reign, entitled, "an Act for making more effectual proviſion for the Government of the Province of Quebec in North America, and to make further proviſion for the Government of the ſaid Province," and by the authority of the ſame, That out of the ſurplus of any mond or funds ſubject to the diſpoſition of the Parliament of this Province, and collected under the authority of any Act or Acts thereof, now remaining in the hands of the Receiver General unappropriated, there ſhall be iſſued and applied the ſum of eight hundred and thirty-four pounds and eight pence, to make good the aforeſaid two ſums of money which have ſo as aforeſaid been iſſued and advanced by his Majeſty through his ſaid Lieutenant Governor in purſuance of the aforeſaid two addreſſes.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforeſaid, That the due application of the ſaid ſum of money, purſuant to the directions of this Act, ſhall be accounted for to his Majeſty, his heirs and ſucceſſors, through the Lords Commiſſioners of his Majeſty's Treaſury for the time being, in ſuch manner and form as his Majeſty, his heirs and ſucceſſors ſhall direct.

LATE LONDON ARTICLES.

The following curioſities were landed on Thurſday at the Dock yard, Portſmouth, from a brig lately returned from Egypt. They were ſent home by Lord Elgin, who it is ſaid intends preſenting them to the King.

Cleopatra's Coffin: Head of the Thebean Ram, which is ſaid to be 4000 years old: two Pyramids from Grand Cairo: a ſtatue of Marcus Aurelius, & one of Scipio in white Marble: hand of a figure which is ſaid to be eighty feet high, and a great variety of Egyptian Deities.

Lord Elgin having ſent from Conſtantinople ſeveral articles to Athens; they cauſed diligent ſearch to be made in the Temple of Theſeus, and were ſo fortunate as to find there almoſt all the baſs-reliefs which former'y ornamented the Temple of Minerva. Theſe monuments, a great many inſcriptions, and all the urns capable of being tranſported, have been ſent, by his Lordſhip's order, to England.

A diſcovery of very general importance has been lately made in reſpect to the culture of potatoes: It has been the common practice heretofore to raiſe this nouriſhing article of food from cutting and planting what is termed the eyes of the potatoes; but from ſeveral recent trials, cluſters of potatoes, each weighing from 20 to 22 ounces, have been produced from planting only the ſhoots or ſprouts.

The city of London have lately begun to pull down ſome of their old granaries, in Tooley ſtreet, which have been built upwards of two centuries, as appears from the following inſcription now on a ſtone, on part of the premiſes, "This worke was begunne and finiſhed at the charges of the Bridg Houſe, Sir George Barn then being Lord Maior of the Citi of London, 1587." They were chiefly built of chefnut wood, and notwithſtanding the length of time that has elapſed, ſome of the timbers are now ſo ſound, that a few can hardly penetrate them. About a century ago, theſe granaries were occupied by ſome of the principal companies of the city, for the laudable purpoſe of houſing corn in times of plenty, which, in times of ſcarcity, they retailed out to the poor of their reſpective companies, at reduced prices.

The number of bullocks annually conſumed in London, is eſtimated at 210,000; of ſheep and lambs, 776,000; of calves, 210,000; hogs, 210,000; pigs, 60,000—beſide a variety of other animal food.

A wild rhinoceros was lately killed at the Cape of Good Hope, near Cape Town, whoſe height was ſeven feet ſix inches, and its length from the ſnout to the root of the tail, eleven feet and a half. This animal is ſuppoſed to have been one of the largeſt ever ſeen of its ſpecies.

PARIS, APRIL 10.

"This is in many reſpects a memorable day for France. It is the laſt of the Decade—a puny race, which lived without much notice, and expire without any regret—and to-morrow the Sabbath is to be reinſtalled in all its ancient ſplendour.—This day the ſeveral churches in Paris are to undergo a ſort of demi conſecration, and to-morrow a High Maſs is to be celebrated for the reſtoration of Religion, "under the auſpices of Peace and the Goſpel." The viſit of Cardinal Caprara yeſterday to the Thuilleries, ſeemed to bear the appearance of a triumphal entry. He had the conſular guard, and the carriages of the government. The great croſs was, as formerly, diſplayed upon the grand ſtair caſe, whilſt his Eminence paid his viſit to the Firſt Conſul and to Madam Bonaparte. The ſame cortege accompanied him on his return to his palace.

"Theſe appearances are highly gratifying to the moderate few, and for the moment, they appear to have faſcinated the many. But three days ſince all the world was buſied in feſtling the feſtivities of Longchamps; it is now employed in ſettling the mode of public Culte; and inſtead of getting to the Bois de Boulogne, the queſtion now is about getting to-morrow into the church of Notre Dame.—This religious fervour is, no doubt, highly edifying, and would be productive of the beſt effects, if it could only be made to continue until Eaſter!—Even now the volatile Pariſians mix ſarty with their devotion. They ſay that the purification of the churches this day, is intended to cleanſe them from the mephitic air of Theo-philanthropiſm, and a thouſand witticiſms are directed againſt La Reveilliere Lepaux, the inventor of that ſtill-born worſhip!"

APRIL 12.

"The remaining great bell at Notre-Dame, the other having been broken and melted during the reign of anarchy, is to be heard for the firſt time on Sunday next, after a ſilence of ten years. In all the other churches, the bells are about to be repaired and replaced. The Prieſts, on whoſe countenance exultation is moſt legibly written, are crowding into Paris in every direction, and in ſuch numbers as give Paris much of its former appearance. It was therefore not without reaſon that I made the remark to you ſome time ſince, that with one exception only, every thing here ſeemed to be reſuming rapidly its former place and order."

MAY 3.

"There has been a ſudden and general revolution in the female dreſs. The ladies have all abandoned the long queues or trains to their gowns, of which they were lately ſo fond. They now all wear ſhort round gowns, very richly trimmed with lace; a mode which is found to be more convenient, as well as more becoming than the former.

From the BALANCE.

ON EDUCATION.

THE Romans made it a primary object of attention to educate their children in the principles, ceremonies and practices of their religion; and ſome of their moſt diſtinguiſhed ſtateſmen having declared, that the ſtrength and glory of the commonwealth was owing, in a great meaſure, to this important circumſtance.

A writer of conſiderable note has remarked concerning that celebrated nation, that "they founded their ſyſtem of policy upon the beſt and wiſeſt principle, the fear of the Gods, a firm belief of a divine ſuperintending Providence, and a future ſtate of rewards and puniſhments. Their children were trained up in this belief from tender infancy, which took root and grew up with them, by the influence of an excellent education, where they had the benefit of example as well as precept. Hence we read of no heathen nation in the world, where both the public and private duties of religion were ſo ſtrictly adhered to and ſo ſcrupulouſly obſerved, as among the Romans. They imputed their good or bad ſucceſs to the obſervance of theſe duties, and they received public proſperity or public calamities, as bleſſings conferred, or puniſhments inflicted by their gods. Though the ceremonies of their religion juſtly appear to us, inſtances of the moſt abſurd and moſt extravagant ſuperſtition, yet, as they were eſteemed the moſt eſſential acts of religion by the Romans, they muſt conſequently carry all the force of a religious principle."

"Cicero, the great Roman orator and philoſopher, ſpeaking of his countrymen, ſays, "We neither exceded the Spaniards in number, nor did we excel the Gauls in ſtrength of body, nor the Carthagenians in craft, nor the Greeks in arts and ſciences; but we have indiſputably ſurpaſſed all the nations in the univerſe in piety and attachment to religion, and in the only point that can be called true wiſdom, a thorough conviction that all things here below are directed and governed by divine Providence."—To this principle alone he wiſely attributes the grandeur and good fortune of his country.—From this principle proceeded that reſpect for and ſubmiſſion to their laws; and that temperance, moderation, and contempt for wealth, which are the beſt defence againſt the encroachments of injuſtice and oppreſſion. Hence too aroſe that inextinguiſhable love for their country, which, next to the gods, they looked upon as the chief object of veneration."

The leaders of the French revolution, on the contrary, while abſurdly pretending to imitate the old Romans, built their republic on the rotten foundation of atheiſm. Like the fabled giants of old, they waged war againſt Heaven and attempted to dethrone the Moſt High. They manifeſted an inferal zeal to blot out of the minds of the people all ideas of accountability and a future ſtate of exiſtence; inſomuch that this moſt horrid inſcription was fixed on the gate of a public burying yard, by order of the municipality, "Death is an everlaſting ſleep." An explicit avowal of atheiſm by a member, in preſence of the national aſſembly, was received with ſhouts of applauſe. They even encouraged their children and youth to come forward and deny God, and a deputation of ſchool boys actually went before the national legiſlature, while in ſeſſion, and declared themſelves to be atheiſts; meanwhile the Gallic hall, or rather pandemonium, reſounded with plaudits at this monſtrous declaration from infant lips.

In this reſpect, France ſtands as an awful beacon to warn the world. By means of atheiſtical principles, generally diffuſed among the body of the people, and inſtilled into the minds even of children, that nation has ſunk moſt deeply into the mire of moral turpitude and become familiarized to every ſpecies of atrocious crimes.

Wherever the principles of atheiſm take root, they will inevitably produce "the grapes of Sodom and the cluſters of Gomorrah." They will inevitably tend to looſen the bands of ſociety, to deſtroy all ſocial order, and to engender innumerable deſtructive vices and crimes. Therefore, abſtracted from other infinitely ſolemn and important conſiderations, it is abſolutely neceſſary, in a political view, to educate children in the fear of God, or to give their tender minds a deep impreſſion of right and wrong, and of their accountability to the ſupreme judge, "Who ſeeth in ſecret, and will reward them according to their works."—This is the ground-work of good education.—Building on this rock is the only way to rear children for excellence and uſefulneſs as citizens, and in the various ſocial and domeſtic departments. Virtue, thus founded will ſtand the ſhock of ſtorms and tempeſts; whereas the virtue of an atheiſt is falſe and hollow, and by no means deſerves the name.—It is a painted harlot. Thoſe "ſocuſts from the bottomleſs pit," the French philoſophiſts, while they were ſowing over the world the ſeeds of diſorder and confuſion, loudly extolled virtue and pretended to be her votaries:—but, "by their fruits we know them."

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, July 24.

On Tuesday laſt His Excellency Lieut. Governor Hunter and ſuite embarked on board the Toronto yacht and ſailed for Kingſton on their way to Quebec.—We underſtand His Excellency will return to York in the fall and that it is his intention to winter here.

We have to obſerve to our readers that ſince Peace and Plenty have been reſtored to Europe, a ſcarcity of food for the mind has exiſted.—The London and American prints have for ſome time paſt been remarkably barren, ſcarcely affording any political matter of moment.

Mr. Weekes requeſts that ſuch perſons as have favoured him with the care of their Law buſineſs will not urge him to proceed to Trial therein until a Cauſe in which he is Plaintiff and the Honourable Henry Allcock, Eſquire, one of the Juſtices of the King's Bench is Defendant will have been determined. He is induced to make this requeſt rather from a regard to his Clients' intereſt than to his own benefit.

POETRY.

A SMILE AND A TEAR.

YOU own I'm unpleasant, but tell me I'm wrong,
Then mock I my youth's early fourrows aside,
Muft waken remembrance to joys that are fled,
Now hope is extinguish'd, and paffion is dead :—
I have loft in life's dawn all that fair-fould endear,
And if I am cheerful, I fmile thro' a tear.

My parents tho' humble were happy and good,
We could boaft of one honour, if not of our blood :
My lover, ah! how the faid I fhall I tell,
For his country he fought, for his country he fell ;
He was brave, he was true, to my heart he was dear
His fame claims a fhield, but it fhines thro' a tear.

In vain would I paint my agonized heart,
My parents' fole comforts to him could impart :
They funk o'er the child whom they could not relieve,
And the cold hand of Death left me only to grieve ;
Thus doom'd to fuffer, their affliction draws near,
When you'll neither diftinguifh a fmile nor a tear.

ORIGIN OF THE WORD "GROG."

GENERAL Orders were iffued by Admiral Vernon, that the daily allowance of Rum, which had previously been taken clear, fhould be mixed with water. This falutary innovation was highly offenfive to the failors; and, in their meetgreens, they gave the Admiral the nick-name of Grog, in allufion to a coat that he them wore, made of cloth called grogram. And from hence the word "Grog" has been appropriated to the name for fpirits when they are diluted or mixed with water.

THE following notacious theft was lately practifed in London. A fellow entered a gentleman's houfe in Portland-place, and finding no perfon in the fervant's hall, he took all the great coats, which were nearly new; and threw them over his fhoulders. As he was making his efcape, he was met by the fecond coachman, who enquired what he was going to do with the coats? The fellow quite unembarrafled, replied, "that he was fhing them to clean," as they were fpotted. The coachman, believing this to be the cafe, faid, "ftop a little, and you fhall have mine too," which he accordingly gave him, and fuffered the fellow to depart; nor was it until fome hours after that the theft was difcovered.

MORALIST.

THE force of habit and the extreme danger of fixing any bad habit, particularly that of drunkenneſs, may be aptly illuſtrated by moralizing the following piece of natural hiſtory.

"On the coaſt of Norway is a dreadful whirlpool called by the natives, Maelſtroom, which ſignifies the naval of the ſea. The body of the waters which form this whirlpool is extended in a circle above thirteen miles in circumference. In the midſt of this ſtands a rock, againſt which the tide, in its ebb is daſhed with inconceivable fury when it inſtantly ſwallows up all things which come within the ſphere of its violence.

"No ſkill in the mariner, nor ſtrength of rowing, can work an eſcape. The ſailor at the helm finds the ſhip at firſt go in a current oppoſite to his intentions: his veſſel's motion, though ſlow in the beginning, becomes every moment more rapid; it goes round in circles, ſtill narrower and narrower, till at laſt it is daſhed againſt the rock and entirely diſappears."

And thus it fares with the hapleſs youth that falls under the power of any vicious habit. At firſt he indulges with caution and timidity, and ſtruggles againſt the ſtream of vicious inclinations. But every relapſe carries him further down the current, (the violence of which encreaſes) & brings him nearer to the fatal rock in the midſt of the whirlpool: till, at length ſtupified and ſubdued, he yields without a ſtruggle, and makes ſhipwreck of conſcience, of intereſt of reputation and of every thing that is dear and valuable in the human character.

It ſhould alſo be obſerved, on the other hand, that good habits are powerful as well as bad ones: therefore, no better advice can be given to youth than the following: "chooſe the moſt rational and beſt way of living, and habit will ſoon make it the moſt agreeable."

THE Subſcriber conceives it a duty which he owes to the Ladies and Gentlemen of this Town, as well as to the Public in general, and ſhould conſider himſelf devoid of gratitude were he not thus to tender them his ſincere Thanks for the liberal ſupport he has ſo amply experienced ſince his arrival in York.—He intends leaving this Province by the firſt of September next, and returning the enſuing Spring with an extenſive and well-choſen aſſortment of Merchandize ſuitable to the Market and Seaſon, which he will diſpoſe of at a very low advance; humbly hoping at ſame time that he may again be honor'd with the like cuſtom and ſupport ſo kindly afforded him by a generous public.

Gentlemen wiſhing to order any particular articles from London will pleaſe leave their orders with the Subſcriber, to which due attention ſhall be paid.

FROM THE BALANCE.

IMITATION OF BURNS' ALIZA.

THOUGH doom'd to leave the youth I love,
And bid a distant shore;
Yet constant as the tender dove,
He ever is and shall be more.
To shield thee from impending harm—
From pale-fac'd woe and woe,
My bosom feels the soft alarm
Which souls congenial know

Farewell! farewell! my dearest friend;—
The pulse of love beats high;
On thee my rising hopes depend;
For thee I live I die.
My heart, with tenderness, paints the scene
Which gilds a future day;
When naught but happiness serene
Shall smooth our toilsome way

ORIGINAL ANECDOTE.

YANKEE MANNERS, IN DAYS OF OLD.

About thirty years ago, a man in the town of ——, Massachusetts, endeavoured to push his own election for a member of the General Assembly: but his townsmen were so disgusted at the circumstance of his electioneering for himself, that they almost unanimously denied him their votes, and instead of making him an Assembly man, they appointed him an overseer of swine. Immediatly on his being elected to this unexpected office, he stepped forward in town meeting and addressing his fellow-townsmen in a very handsome manner thanked them for the honor they had done him, and promised to discharge the duties of his office to the best of his abilities. This promise he faithfully performed, insomuch that not a single swine was suffered to run at large in his district, without being well yoked and ringed. At the next election he had policy enough to be passive, when his townsmen of their own accord, set him up as a candidate for the General Assembly, and almost unanimously gave him their votes.

LONDON, May 17.

YESTERDAY we received French Journals of the 11th & 13th inst. It appears from these, that the decree, proposing to elect Bonaparte Chief Consul for life, had been readily adopted by the Councils, and means were taking to obtain the sense of the people upon it, which there can be little doubt will be equally favourable to the ambitious wishes of the Chief Consul. As we remarked on Saturday, but one step more remains to be taken, which is, to settle a new Dynasty in the family of Bonaparte. The re establishment of the Catholic religion, or at least the manner in which it has been established, seems to have occasioned a great degree of discontent. The Jacobins are strongly averse to the measure, and the Catholics dislike the encroachments which have been made on the ancient power of the Pope.—These discontents begin already to shew themselves.—It is stated in some private letters that an attempt was made a few days ago on the life of the Chief Consul, while he attended the parade; and several of the generals, who have expressed themselves too freely with respect to the growing ambition of Bonaparte, have been ordered to reside a considerable distance from Paris. The Chief Consul, for the further security of his person, means to create a new corps, to be called the Sacred Legion, composed of picked and distinguished men. All the private accounts from the French capital certainly concur in stating, that a storm is gathering, which must perhaps very speedily burst.

The French funds have again fallen to 57.

An order of Council, it is said, has actually been given, for prohibiting the importation of any article of French growth or manufacture, except such as have already been ordered for shipping for this country. This order is in consequence of the prohibition of the French government of English manufactures; and we have little doubt will lead to some commercial arrangements which will be beneficial to this country.

The subscription for the erection of a Statue in honor of Mr. Pitt, we have no doubt will extend over the whole country. Every one who is capable of reverencing talents and admiring worth, will be anxious to express their approbation of the man who has saved the country, and its honour and prosperity.

The following are the official details of the important proceedings:

ACTS OF GOVERNMENT.

Extract from the Registers of the deliberations of the Conservative Senate, of the 8th of May, 1802.

Deliberation concerning the re-election of the First Consul of the Republic.

The Senate, consisting of the number of members prescribed by the 90th article of the constitutional act,

Having seen the message of the Consuls of the Republic, transmitted by three orators of the government, relative to the peace between France and England;

After having heard its special committee, charged by its arrete of the 6th inst. to present a report on the testimony of gratitude proper to be given to the First Consul of the Republic:

Considering, that in the circumstances in which the republic is at present placed, it is the duty of the Conservative Senate to employ every means in its power to give to the government that stability which can alone multiply its resources, inspire confidence without, establish credit within, encourage its allies, discourage secret enemies, extinguish the flames of war, ensure the enjoyment of the fruits of peace, and leave to the wisdom of futurity the means of executing all that can be conceived necessary for the happiness of a free people:

Considering, that our Supreme Magistrate, after having so often conducted the republican legions to victory, delivered Italy, triumphed in Europe, Africa, and Asia, and filled the world with his renown, has preserved France from the horrors of anarchy, by which it was menaced, extinguished the revolutionary flame, dispersed factions, put an end to civil discords and religious troubles, added to the benefits of liberty, those of order and security, hastened the progress of science, contoured humanity, and given peace to the continent and the ocean, has the greatest right to the gratitude of his fellow citizens, as well as the admiration of posterity;

That the wish of the tribunate communicated to the Senate in the sitting of this day, may be considered in this instance, as that of the French Nation;

That the Senate cannot express more solemnly to the First Consul, the gratitude of the nation, than in giving him a splendid proof of the confidence with which he has inspired the French people.

Considering lastly, that the second and third Consuls honorably seconded the glorious labour of the First Consul of the Republic;

From all these motives, and sufferings having been collected by secret scrutiny, the senate declares as follows:

ART. 1. The Conservative Senate in the name of the French people, testifies its gratitude to the Consuls of the Republic.

2. The Conservative Senate re-elects Citizen Napoleon Bonaparte, First Consul of the French Republic for ten years immediately following the ten years for which he has been appointed, by the 39th article of the constitution.

3. The present Senatus Consultum shall be transmitted by a message to the Legislative Body, to the Tribunate, and to the Councils of the Republic.

PARIS, May 9.

Bonaparte, first Consul of the Republic, to the Conservative Senate.

SENATORS—The honorable proof of your esteem, contained in your deliberations of the 8th inst. will be always deeply engraved in my heart.

The voices of the people has invested me with supreme authority. I should not think myself assured of your confidence, if the act which retains me in that authority was not still sanctioned by them. For the last three years fortune has smiled upon the republic, but fortune is inconstant, and many men who have basked with its favors, have at last found that they had lived some years too long. The interest of my glory and my happiness seem to fix the period when the peace of the world was proclaimed, as the term of my public life. But the glory & happiness of a citizen ought to give way, when the interest and good wishes of the state rest upon him. You think I owe this new sacrifice to the people; I will make it if the wishes of the people command me to do that which your suffrages have authorised.

(Signed) BONAPARTE.

Decree of the 10th inst.

The conservative Senate taking into consideration, that the resolution of the first Consul is a splendid mark of homage paid to the sovereignty of the people; and that the people consulted on their dearest interests, ought to know no other limits than these interests themselves, decree as follows:

ART. 1. The French people shall be consulted upon this question.

Shall Napolean Bonaparte be Consul for life?

2. Registers shall be open in each Commune, where the Citizens shall be invited to give their votes upon this question.

The other articles prescribe the mode in which the suffrages of the people are to be collected.

VIENNA, May 6.

They write from the frontiers of European Turkey, that the Pacha of Janna has made an irruption into Albina, and has taken possession of that province; he means, it is said, to unite it to his Province, and to form a state independent of the Porte.

NEW YORK, July 3.

Our London papers by the fine fast sailing ship American, arrived last night from Liverpool, are to the 18th May—The most important article is the decree, proposing to elect Bonaparte Consul for life, which had been readily adopted by the Councils, and means taken to obtain the sense of the people upon it.

Whole papers are filled with important debates in the British Parliament, in discussing the Definitive Treaty. The subject of the cession by Spain, of Louisiana to France, was spoken of by the principal speakers.

The following is translated from a handbill, received last evening by the arrival of the ship Herkimer from Havre.

NOTICE.

The Mayor of Havre informs the inhabitants of this city, that the Registers prescribed by the arrete of the Consuls of the 10th inst. to collect the votes of the citizens upon this question, Shall Napolean Bonaparte be Consul for life? are opened at the secretary's office of the subprefecture, at the Registry of all the Tribunals, and at the office of the Notaries.

July 5.

From Captain John Dove of the Brig Hiram, arrived at Philadelphia lazaretto.

I left Guadaloupe on the 17th June. I suppose you must have heard of the fate of this island before now; the blacks have burnt & destroyed all the plantations, only few escaped on Grand Terre. They have even destroyed the coffee and cotton trees, pulled them out of the ground or cut them down. The blacks, when I sailed, had mostly taken to the woods, since the battle of Besnodige; which took place on the 26th May.—It began about 8 in the morning, and continued with constant fire till 5 o'clock in the afternoon; when the whites carried the fort, and took 400 prisoners; about 300 of the blacks escaped out of the fort, and got off to the woods. 400 of the blacks were killed, and about 100 of the whites killed and wounded. The fort of Benbridge is only one mile from Point Petre. The French shot all the black prisoners that were taken at Benbridge, in the public square. General Pelage was second in command in this battle; he is in every battle that is fought against the blacks. All the whites are leaving the island that can get away. The white troops die very fast; the half of the 4414 men that that came out from France were dead or wounded when I sailed.

"Without more force should arrive from France very soon, the blacks will have all the island."

In the name of the French Republic.

PROCLAMATION

Charles Seriziat, General of Brigade, commanding the 1st division of the army, and the arrondissement of La Grande-Terre,

To all the Cultivators of La Grande-Terre.

Men who hold nothing sacred, not being satisfied in their principles of rebellion, with setting on fire the finest districts of Guadaloupe, have landed on the Grande-Terre and done the same mischief.

Already several plantations have been a prey to flames.—At the news of the danger, our troops have marched against these incendiaries: two of their chiefs have met with death; and the greatest part of these banditties having bitten the dust, those that remain have been dispersed.

Troops of cultivators, far from opposing the conflagration, or stopping its progress, have, on the contrary, assisted in it, and rendered themselves guilty of the same crimes.

Others, less guilty, but as dangerous, deceived or seduced by these wicked men, have followed them; they now are sensible of their wrongs, yet dare not abjure their error.

The General commanding the arrondissement of La Grande Terre, wishing to show the kindness which the latter deserve, and the just rigor which the former have to expect, has issued the following arrete, when once acquainted with the principles of the general in chief.

ART. I. There shall be an amnesty for every cultivator absent from his plantation, who will return to it in 24 hours after the present proclamation.

II. A reward of two dollars shall be granted to every cultivator that will bring back a firelock in a good condition, either to the commissary of his district, or the commander of the place.

III. Every chief of cultivators, whose plantation may have been set on fire, and who shall not have made use of every means to oppose the wickedness of the incendiaries, or used his utmost endeavours to stop the progress of the conflagration, shall be punished with death as an accomplice and promoter of the same; therefore he shall be shot on the very spot.

IV. An amnesty, and reward of two hundred dollars shall be granted to every rebel, or other, that will deliver up a chief of the rebellion.

V. The commissaries of government and military commanders are ordered to read the present proclamation in every plantation, before the cultivators assembled, to explain it to them in the most intelligible manner, and to use all necessary measures to ensure its execution.

Given at Head Quarters, in Point-a-Petre, the 23th of Prairial, year 10 of the French Republic.

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, Esquire,

Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada.

WHEREAS His Majesty's faithful Commons of this Province in Parliament assembled did by virtue of a Resolution of their House of Assembly, pray that certain Sums of Money should be applied in such manner as to me should seem meet for the purpose of purchasing and distributing Hemp Seed gratis amongst the Farmers, and also for the paying of Premiums and Bounties to the deserving Cultivators and Exporters of Hemp in this Province. And whereas I thought fit to assent to the prayer of the said Commons. NOW KNOW YE that I PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of this Province, by virtue of the Authority to me vested in me, and the better to regulate the wise and liberal Intentions of the said faithful Commons. GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms at York this Twenty-sixth day of July in the Forty first year of this Majesty's Reign, and in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and one.

RATISBON, April 26.

THE prayer for the French government, appointed by the Concordat, was on Easter Sunday read in the chapel of the French Legate here. It is as follows:—

"O Lord, bless the Republic! bless the Consuls! and hear us when we call upon thee. Glory be to the Father, to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.—We pray thee, Almighty God, that thy servant, our First Consul, Napoleon, who through thy mercy has taken upon him the government of the Republic, may increase in every virtue, and adorned with them avoid all vice, and thus come to thee, who art the way, the truth, and the life, through Jesus Christ our Lord, Amen."

LONDON, May 8.

The Gazette of last night contained an order in Council for taking off all prohibitions on the export of gun-powder, salt petre, or any sort of arms or ammunition; of naval Stores, of lignum vitæ, of copper, staves, bars, rings, sheets or nails—it also contained a proclamation appointing the general Thanksgiving in Scotland on account of the peace to be postponed from the 1st to the 17th June, as the sitting of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland would on the former day, interfere with the celebration.

May 10.

On Saturday we received Paris papers to the date of May the 5th inclusive.—The Spanish fleet, so long imprisoned in Brest harbour, has at length got its discharge, and has proceeded to Cadiz, no doubt greatly improved in naval tactics!

It appears that the Chief Consul has began to exercise his prefidential authority in Italy, by the choice of great officer of state, &c.

A number of respectable persons lately returned from the capital of France, agree in cherishing an opinion, founded upon the observations which they made during their short stay there, that some new and important change in the government of the country is about to take place.—Though pleased with the general conduct of Bonaparte, the people are not satisfied with a constitution which they consider as depending upon the life of an individual; they think something remains to be done, that shall give it a stability as shall defy all future revolutionary movements. They do not express their wishes openly, but they flatter themselves the government understands, and will anticipate them.

The Spaniards, in January last, seized an American privateer and 15 merchant ships belonging to the United States in the river Plata, confiscated the vessels, and threw the crews into gaol, where many of them still remain, in consequence, it is stated, of their having attempted to promote a contraband trade.

The Portuguese have treated the Americans with still less consideration—two of their vessels, the Four Sisters, and Aurora, from New York for Batavia, being short of water, put into Para, in Brazil, and sent their boats on shore for a supply; but immediately after, a considerable number of armed boats came off, seized the vessels, and carried them into port, where they were confiscated, and the crews confined on board a frigate, from which some of them were afterwards sent prisoners to Lisbon, where they were liberated.

The reinforcement of 20,000 men about to sail from France for Saint Domingo, will not repair the losses which the army under Gen. Leclerc must have sustained in battle, independent of the numbers that must have fallen victims to the climate, and the privations which that army is obliged to endure.

The Moniteur contains a decree, directing, that as soon as the flag of the Republic shall be displayed in the islands of Martinique, St. Lucia and Tobago, the fort and town called Royal shall take the name of Port de France; the Fort of Bourbon, that of Fort Desaix; the fort and town of Lucia, called Castres, that of Carenage; and the port and town called Port Louis in Tobago, that of Scarborough.

May 11.

We this morning received Paris papers to the date of May 6, inclusive.—The principal article in which relates to the official information that has been again given to the French public, of the prohibition of English manufactured articles, particularly those of the potteries.

The peace establishment of the army is at length settled. The outline of it is as follows:

1. All third battalions are to be disbanded.

2. All second battalions are also to be disbanded, except the 2d battalion of the 4th, or King's own regiment, and the 2d of the 9th, which are to be kept up for one year longer.

3. The two battalions of the 60th regiment, commanded by the Duke of York, consisting chiefly of foreigners, and always serving abroad, are all to be retained.

4. The regiments of the line to be kept up to the 93d inclusive.

5. No reduction to be made in the number of dragoon regiments: the whole 23 regiments to be kept up (the 18th, in India, being disbanded,) but the effective force of each regiment to be reduced.

6. Of the twelve West India, or black regiments, the six junior corps are to be disbanded.

7. His Royal Highness's Staff is to be kept up to two Lieutenant Generals and five Major Generals for England, and one Lieutenant General and one Major General for Scotland.

8. From 15,000 to 30,000 men, with an appropriate staff, is to be the establishment for Ireland.

9. The second field officers through out the army are to be supernumerary on their own respective corps.

10. The brevet promotion, which is to appear in the Gazette to-morrow, comes down to Baron Hompesch. This takes in Colonel Cartwright, Aid-du-Camp to his Majesty. The new Aid-du-Camp is to be deputy Adjutant Gen. Wynyard.

May 12.

Government have we understand, received the official instrument of the Swedish Government, acceding to the convention lately signed with Russia and Denmark. The best consequences are expected to result from this new compact.

Letters from Alexandria, dated the 5th March, state that our troops there and at Rosetta are in good health. A curious subscription has been entered into by our troops in Egypt: it is to bring away the obelisk, called Cleopatra's Needle. The sum of 2000l. is stated to have been already subscribed for this purpose.

The Calcutta Gazette of the 20th November contains an official account of a gallant action performed by Captain Collier, of his Majesty's sloop Victor, in sinking a French corvette, called La Fleche, of 22 guns and 170 men, in Mahe Road. The Victor had fallen in with La Fleche on the 2d of September, and engaged her; when, finding the contest unequal, the Frenchman endeavoured to escape. By having damaged the sails, &c. of the Victor, she succeeded in getting off; but on the 5th Captain Collier found her moored in the inner harbour. He gallantly attacked her, drove her on coral reef, set her on fire, which being extinguished, she at last fell into deeper water and sunk. She had on board thirty persons sent into banishment for a conspiracy against the life of the Chief Consul.

May 13.

The Duke of Cambridge is preparing for his journey to Hanover. Previous notice has been sent to the Lords of the Regency, to make suitable preparations for his Royal Highness's reception, it being expected that in future he will make that electorate his chief residence.

Since the signing of the ratification of peace, most of the American vessels that have arrived in this country have returned freighted with warlike stores for the northern parts of those states.

In the Tribunate, sitting of Floreal, 16 (May 6,) after a communication of the same kind from the Consuls, Simeon said, "every thing that can be said on this subject has been exhausted, but since government has communicated to us, in a formal manner, the Treaty of Peace concluded with Great Britain, we ought, no doubt, to make a return equally formal. I request that a message may be transmitted to Government, to know—what day it will receive a deputation of fifteen members of the Tribunate to congratulate it on the restoration of peace."

This motion was adopted.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Friday, May 7.

Mr. Nicholls moved, "that an humble address be presented to his Majesty, expressive of the thanks of this house, for his Majesty's having removed the Right Hon. Wm. Pitt from his councils."

The question having been put,

Lord Belgrave rose to give his decided negative to the motion.

The noble Lord having expatiated at great length upon several points, concluded by moving, as an amendment, that all the words of the original motion after the word "that" should be left out, in order to substitute "it is the opinion of this house that, owing to the wisdom, energy, and firmness of the late administration, during the arduous contest in which this country had been engaged, our strength consolidated, and our commerce increased, &c."

At five o'clock the question was put, "That these words stand part of the motion."

On Sir Henry Mildway's motion, "that the Right Hon. William Pitt by his pre-eminent services to the country, has deserved the thanks of this house," a long conversation arose.

Mr. Fox moved, that the names of Lords Grenville, Spencer, Roslyn, and Messrs. Dundas and Windham, should be added to that of Mr. Pitt in this motion, as they were his colleagues in the conduct of the war.

Mr. T. Grenville considered this amendment as not seriously meant as a mark of respect to his Right Hon. relation.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer expressed a wish that the hon. gentleman would withdraw his amendment.

Mr. Fox declined it—stating that inasmuch as the House so warmly approved the war, those men who clung to it with so much fondness, were as well, if not better entitled to the Thanks of the House, than the Right Hon. Gentleman who deserted it.—(A laugh.)

Mr. Fox's amendment was negatived without a division.

Mr. Gray then moved that these words should be added after "the country"—"by which means the present administration has been enabled to procure a safe, honorable, and glorious peace."

Lord Temple immediately expressed his resolution to oppose this amendment.—(A laugh.)—It was negatived without a division.

Sir H. Mildway's motion was then put,

The house went into a committee of supply, when 88,000 men, including marines, were voted for the sea service, from 23d of May to the 24th of June, 152,000l.—167,000l. for their wages & victuals, 234,000l. for wear and tear of the ships; and 22,000l. for ordnance on board the ships.

The Secretary at War, then stated the various reductions which had taken place, and would ensue, by the 24th of June, and moved that 61,776 men be granted for the army for the above period.

Gen. Walpole wished that a part of the cavalry to be released might be kept dismounted.

Mr. Robson objected to the bill, as being too high for a peace establishment.

The following resolutions, after a variety of objections from Mr. Robson, were agreed to. For guards and garrisons, 202,555l. Pay and cloathing for the troops, 23,689l. THE prayer for the French government, appointed by the Concordat, was on Eaſter Sunday read in the chapel of the French Legate here. It is as follows:—

"O Lord, bleſs the Republic! bleſs the Conſuls! and hear us when we call upon thee. Glory be to the Father, to the Son, and to the Holy Ghoſt.—We pray thee, Almighty God, that thy ſervant, our Firſt Conſul, Napoleon, who through thy mercy has taken upon him the government of the Republic, may increaſe in every virtue, and adorned with them avoid all vice, and thus come to thee, who art the way, the truth, and the life, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, Amen."

The Gazette of laſt night contained an order in Council for taking off all prohibitions on the export of gun-powder, ſalt petre, or any ſort of arms or ammunition; of naval ſtores, of lignum vitæ, of copper, ſtaves, bars, rings, ſheets or nails—it alſo contained a proclamation appointing the general Thankſgiving in Scotland on account of the peace to be poſtponed from the 1ſt to the 17th June, as the ſitting of the General Aſſembly of the Church of Scotland would on the former day, interfere with the celebration.

A number of reſpectable perſons lately returned from the capital of France, agree in cheriſhing an opinion, founded upon the obſervations which they made during their ſhort ſtay there, that ſome new and important change in the government of the country is about to take place.—Though pleaſed with the general conduct of Bonaparte, the people are not ſatisfied with a conſtitution which they conſider as depending upon the life of an individual; they think ſomething remains to be done, that ſhall give it ſuch a ſtability as ſhall defy all future revolutionary movements. They do not expreſs their wiſhes openly, but they flatter themſelves the government underſtands, and will anticipate them.

The Spaniards, in January laſt, ſeized an American privateer and 15 merchant ſhips belonging to the United States in the river Plata, confiſcated the veſſels, and threw the crews into gaol, where many of them ſtill remain, in conſequence, it is ſtated, of their having attempted to promote a contraband trade.

The Portugueſe have treated the Americans with ſtill leſs conſideration—two of their veſſels, the Four Siſters, and Aurora, from New York for Batavia, being ſhort of water, put into Para, in Brazil, and ſent their boats on ſhore for a ſupply; but immediately after, a conſiderable number of armed boats came off, ſeized the veſſels, and carried them into port, where they were confiſcated, and the crews confined on board a frigate, from which ſome of them were afterwards ſent priſoners to Liſbon, where they were liberated.

The reinforcement of 10,000 men about to ſail from France for Saint Domingo, will not repair the loſſes which the army under Gen. Leclerc muſt have ſuſtained in battle, independent of the numbers that muſt have fallen victims to the climate, and the privations which that army is obliged to endure.

The peace eſtabliſhment of the army is at length ſettled. The outline of it is as follows:

1. All third battalions are to be diſbanded.

2. All ſecond battalions are alſo to be diſbanded, except the 2d battalion of the 4th, or King's own regiment, and the 2d of the 9th, which are to be kept up for one year longer.

3. The ſeven battalions of the 60th regiment, commanded by the Duke of York, conſiſting chiefly of foreigners, and always ſerving abroad, are all to be retained.

4. The regiments of the line to be kept up to the 93d inclusive.

5. No reduction to be made in the number of dragoon regiments: the whole 23 regiments to be kept up (the 20th, in India, being diſbanded,) but the effective force of each regiment to be reduced.

6. Of the twelve Weſt India, or black regiments, the ſix junior corps are to be diſbanded.

7. His Royal Highneſs's Staff is to be kept up to two Lieutenant Generals and five Major Generals for England, and one Lieutenant General and one Major General for Scotland.

8. From 25,000 to 30,000 men, with an appropriate ſtaff, is to be the eſtabliſhment for Ireland.

9. The ſecond field officers through out the army are to be ſupernumerary on their own reſpective corps.

10. The brevet promotion, which is to appear in the Gazette to-morrow, comes down to Baron Hompeſch. This takes in Colonel Cartwright, Aid-du-Camp to his Majeſty. The new Aid-du-Camp is to be deputy Adjutant Gen. Wynyard.

Diſpatches have been received from Bengal, announcing that the Province of Oude had come under the dominion of the Eaſt India Company, and the brother of Marquis Wellefly is appointed deputy Governor, having under him Meſſrs Matthew Leſlie, and Seton. The Company have granted a penſion to the Nabob. Marquis Wellefly was to depart for England on his return from Lucknow, retaining however his ſituation of Governor of Bengal. Orders have been ſent to his Lordſhip for the immediate reduction of his guard.

The reduction of the army is taking place with the greateſt alacrity. Six regiments are about to depart for Ireland, to replace the ſencible and militia corps who are to be diſbanded.

Mr. Addington, propoſing yeſterday, in the Houſe of Commons, in the Committee of Supply, to vote the ſum of 173,535l. ſterling, for the relief of French emigrants and American Royaliſts, took that opportunity of announcing that every facility was given to the former to return to their country. He added, that the good will of the French government on the one part, in permitting their return, and the diſpoſition of England on the other, in concurring with the ſame object, was the ſtrongeſt proof of the mutual deſire of the two countries to cherish thoſe pacific ſentiments which have ſo happily put an end to the war.

PARIS, May 31.

His Excellency Ghaleb-Effendi Bachmouhaflebe (comptroller-general of the finances) miniſter plenipotentiary and envoy of the Porte near the government of the Republic, left Vienna the beginning of Prairial (about the 25th of May). He is at this moment arrived at Straſburg. The Firſt Conſul had ſent Citizen Dupas, ſuperior adjutant of the Palace of Government to the frontiers to meet that miniſter, and Citizen Dantan, firſt interpreter of the French legation at Conſtantinople.

By virtue of a decree of the Conſuls of the 26th May, the execution of the law which prohibits the exportation of flints is ſuſpended during peace.

The miniſter of the interior has juſt ordered that there ſhall be this year an exhibition of the productions of painters, ſculpters, architects and engravers, which is to continue from the 10th fructidor to 25th Brumaire following (Sept. 2 to Nov. 5) There will be at the ſame time an exhibition of the works intended to celebrate the Treaty of Amiens and the law on the liberty of Worſhip.

LONDON, MAY 27.

Reported attempt on Bonaparte.

A moſt extraordinary attempt has been brought from Calais, by a veſſel which arrived at Dover laſt night. It is, that the life of Bonaparte has been again attempted.—The attempt is ſaid to have been made upon the parade at the Quintidi Review. The conſpirators ſurrounded him and ſtabbed him.—Happily the wound was ſlight; an aid-de-camp however near him, was mortally wounded.

We give this as a rumour, without pledging ourſelves in the ſlighteſt degree for its authenticity. It may only be an echo of a report circulated here ſome days ago, on the authority of ſome private accounts from Paris, which mentioned that a conſpiracy againſt Bonaparte's life had been planned, but had been diſcovered.

From Dover May 25.—"The Rambler, arrived here from Calais laſt night, with 11 gentlemen paſſengers.

"A report is in circulation here by ſome of the above paſſengers, that Bonaparte was ſurrounded on parade by a band of perſons who attempted to ſtab him; he was ſlightly wounded himſelf, and his Secretary mortally wounded. This I mention merely as the report of the moment; not having time as moſt of the paſſengers are on board the veſſel to get farther particulars."

NEW YORK, July 17.

A late Paris paper mentions that advices had been received from Naples, of the whole eaſtern part of Italy being menaced with an alarming ſcarcity, occaſioned by the exceſſive drought which had prevailed there for ſome time paſt.

Mr. Pitt, it is ſaid, under date of 28th May, has declined the honor of a ſtatue, which the merchants of London propoſed erecting.

A ſquadron of Spaniſh men of war was collected at Carthagena, from whence they were to proceed to Naples, under the command of the Prince of Peace, (who hoiſts his flag as Admiral), for the purpoſe of conveying the Princeſs of Naples to Barcelona to be eſpouſed to the Prince of Auſtrias.

His Britannic Majeſty's ſhip Phœnix, captain Halſtead, had been in Cadiz bay, about a fortnight, when the Amelia (which brought the intelligence) ſailed, and the Governor would ſuffer none of her crew to land, except the captain; which he refuſed unleſs permitted to be accompanied by his officers.

About 23 millions of dollars had recently arrived from South America, and 20 millions more was ſoon expected.

July 23. The United States-frigate Eſſex, Capt. Bambridge, arrived at quarantine yeſterday, in 37 days from Gibraltar. Capt. Bainbridge confirms the account of an action which took place lately between an Algerine frigate of 44 guns and a Portugueſe frigate of 36, 15 miles to the ſouthward of Malaga. After a few broadſides the captain of the Portugueſe (a Frenchman) had his thigh ſhot off. The engagement continued an hour, at the end of which time the Algerine ſucceeded in boarding. Twenty men were killed on the part of the Portugueſe; and the captain in a fit of deſperation, blew out his own brains with a piſtol.

ON EDUCATION.

"Delightful taſk! to rear the tender thought,
To teach the young idea how to ſhoot,
To pour the freſh inſtruction o'er the mind,
To breathe the enlivening ſpirit, and to fix
The generous purpoſe in the glowing breaſt."

THOMSON.

DURING the periods of infancy and early childhood, the education of boys is chiefly, while that of girls is almoſt excluſively devolved on the mother. She is their firſt friend, and poſſeſſes their earlieſt love. She diſpenſes their food, dandles them in her arms, and aſſiduouſly guards their waking hours and their ſlumbers; and to her they pour forth their complaints, their wants and their wiſhes—they hang upon her lips for inſtruction, and repay her maternal attentions and careſſes with all the fondneſs of which their little hearts are capable.—No words are ever liſped by the young child with ſuch ſenſations of tenderneſs, as my Mamma.

The father is leſs domeſtic. Worldly cares engroſs his mind: neceſſary cares engroſs his mind: neceſſary buſineſs calls him from home; and the kindneſſes he beſtows on his infant offſpring are more indirect, & therefore leſs obvious and impreſſive. The mother's conſtant preſence and endearing attentions among her ſmall children rivet their hearts to her, more than to any other object: and theſe circumſtances give her peculiar advantages for daily pouring into their minds the precepts of wiſdom—precepts which, coming from her, will ſink ſo deeply that they will never be forgotten. Thoſe firſt impreſſions which a child receives from the mother, are a ſort of indelible characters. They are deeply engraven on the heart, as "with a pen of iron, and with the point of a diamond."

A virtuous and diſcreet mother is therefore a fountain of life to her children. Their hearts are attracted to her as the needle to the magnet. She draws them "with the cords of love." She guides them with the "law of kindneſs." Her precious inſtructions are daily inſtilled into their tender minds, like the morning and evening dews: and in a qualified ſenſe, the moulds and faſhions them into a decent, virtuous, lovely, conduct, as the potter moulds his clay.—Happy are the children who have ſuch a mother! her worth is invaluable; her loſs would be irreparable;

Emilia poſſeſſes both beauty and fortune. Youth ſtill blooms in her countenance. Her manners are eaſy and graceful. She is capable of ſhining at balls and attracting around her a fluttering crowd of admirers. But "well-ordered home" is her delight. She ſoothes the cares and multiplies the comforts of the man to whom ſhe has pledged her vows. The daily care of her little nurſery is her delightful taſk. She is amuſed with their innocent prattle. With ſecret raptures, ſhe marks in them the dawn and progreſs of reaſon, & the ſtill brighter dawn and progreſs of virtue. She guards them with vigilance, and guides them with diſcretion; prudently checks their wayward propenſities, "confirms the generous purpoſe," watches the moſt happy moments for making uſeful impreſſions, gratifies their curioſity, patiently anſwers their queſtions, "teaches the young idea how to ſhoot," and "pours the freſh inſtruction o'er their minds."

Monomina, who had been bright and proſperous days, is left a young widow with three ſmall children. By the premature death of her huſband her worldly proſpects are blaſted and laid in the duſt. Monomina has a heart replete with ſenſibility. The recollection of her irreparable loſs and reverſed circumſtances frequently ſuffuſes her face with with tears. But ſhe does not conſume her time in unavailing woe. The precious intereſts of her babes are entwined with every fibre of her heart: and while ſhe is ſtretching out her widowed arms for their ſuſtenance & ſupport, ſhe is ſtill more ſolicitous to ſow in their tender minds the ſeeds of knowledge and goodneſs, and to enſtamp them with virtuous impreſſions. "He that ſitteth in the heavens" beholds and approves—he will ſucceed the pious endeavors of ſuch a mother.

Is there under heaven a ſight more charming, than that of an intelligent virtuous mother, aſſiduouſly inſtructing her infant offſpring, and uſing her daily endeavors both to inform their minds and to faſhion their hearts aright?—Neither Proſerpine, while gathering flowers in the fields of Enna, nor Eve herſelf, while dreſſing the blooming beds and flowery arbors of Eden, exhibits a portrait ſo intereſting, as that of a diſcreet and good mother, ingrafting in the minds of her children the germ of uſeful knowledge, and leading them in the path of virtue.

She is rearing flowers which will never fade!

A couple of deſperadoes are traverſing the country, and are making dreadful havoc of the property and lives of old and young. They have already ſlain more of the inhabitants than were ſlain in battles and periſhed in priſon-ſhips, during the American war: and, at the ſame time, they have waſted more ſubſtance than would pay the whole national debt. Their ſtrength is invincible. Their method of attack is to ſtrike people on the head, then inſtantly they trip up their heels, pick their pockets, and continue their blows on the head, until they have quite beat out their brains. Though they infeſt public houſes cheifly, they are alſo often found lurking in the cloſets of private houſes, in the work-ſhops of mechanics and in the fields of farmers. In ſome inſtances, whole families have fallen victims to theſe murderers: nay whole towns have been ravaged and ruined by them. One poor man hereabouts, that had formerly been an induſtrious and thriving mechanic, has lately been murdered by them in a manner too ſhocking to relate: and there are ſeveral others in the vicinity, who have been daily attacked by them, robbed of their money, ſmitten on the brain-pan, knocked down, and in all respects so tenderly handled, that an alarming report has succeeded; and they are already brought to death's door. In a word, the country is in danger from a couple of outlandish miscreants who mock at reason, trample upon the precious rights of man, & equally bid defiance both to law and gospel.

The names of these two ruffians are RUM and BRANDY.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, August 22.

On Saturday evening last as the sloop commanded by Captain Grace was leaving Niagara for this Port, a young negroe belonging to said vessel by the name of James M'Quin fell over board, and notwithstanding every possible effort to save him, was unfortunately drowned.

The following most melancholy accident also took place on Thursday night last on Yonge Street:—Two persons, one by the name of Love and the other by the name of Lines had agreed to remain in the woods in order to shoot a bear that had destroyed divers hogs in the neighbourhood; in the course of the night Love, got up and inadvertently went a small distance without informing his companion who was asleep; but making a rustling among the bushes awoke him. Lines taking it to be the bear, immediately called to Love that the bear was near; his unwelcome answer, and observing his blanket in the same place where he had left, concluded he was asleep, fired on the supposed bear, and unfortunately shot his friend thro' the head, who immediately expired.—It appeared that the above persons had always lived on terms of the greatest intimacy.

A jury of inquest was summoned in consequence of this accident, who returned a verdict—"ACCIDENTAL DEATH."

SONNET.

WHEN gentle Eve, fair child of ardent day,
Throws her soft mantle o'er the verdant ground,
How sweet! adown the sloping vale to stray,
While Cynthia sheds her silver radiance round.

How sweet! to hear the plaintive bird of woe
Pour her sad measures thro' the silent grove,
As thro' the air the wakful numbers flow,
Fraught with the melody of mourning love.

How sweet! to mark the fading landscape near,
The lowly cottage and the stately tower!
How sweet! the distant village peal to hear,
Borne on the gale at this soft silent hour.

These are thy charms, fair Evening, may they prove
A balm for grief, an antidote to love?

SCRAPS.

A new species of domestic depredation has recently been discovered in female servants about to be married, cutting open their master' and mistress's best beds, and stealing out a considerable quantity of feathers, in order to make a bridal bed for their own use; this is what these ladies call feathering their own nests.

If it be true that the French have invented vessels to navigate under water, it will be necessary in case of a future war, to furnish our ships with strong nets instead of grappling irons and we shall have this advantage, that our seamen may take prisoners and catch fish at the same time.

ANECDOTE.—The great Lord Mansfield of Westminster-hall, upon a particular occasion in the chancery chamber, when he happened to be pressing his cause. In a few days afterwards he received a letter from a merchant requiring him the man's character; and his lordship's reply was, that he was sober and a good coachman, but he entertained suspicions that he had cheated him. The man came some months afterwards to return thanks to his lordship for procuring him so travelling a place as My Masters," said he, "I was entertained to find I was sober and a good coachman; but as to CHEATING your Lordship he thought the DEVIL HIMSELF could not do it."

THE TEMPLE CLOCK.

Some years ago, a new clock was placed in the Temple-hall; when finished, the clock-maker was desired to wait on the Benchers of the Temple, who would think of a suitable motto to go under the clock.—He applied several times without getting the desired information, as they had not determined on the inscription. Continuing to importune them, he at last came when the old Benchers were met in the Temple-hall, and had just sat down to dinner; the work-man again requested to be informed of the motto—one of the benchers who thought the application ill-timed, and who was fonder of eating and drinking than inventing original motto's, testily replied, "go about your business." The mechanic, taking this for an answer to his question, went home and inserted at the bottom of the clock, "Go about your business," and placed it in the Temple-hall, to the great surprize of the benchers, who upon considering the circumstance, agreed that accident had produced a better motto than any they could think of, and ever since the Temple clock has continued to remind the lawyers and public to go about their business.

SINGULAR PRESENT.

After the celebrated battle of the Nile, fought on the 1st August 1798 the Swiftsure, after the action, was busily employed in getting up pieces of the wreck of l'Orient, amongst the rest, a large part of the main-mast was brought on board. Capt. now Admiral Hallowell, caused a coffin to be made from the wood and iron of this mast, with an inscription on the lid; this he presented to Lord Nelson, who received it as a most valuable acquisition, and actually intends, when his career of terrestrial glory is terminated, to be enclosed in it.

FEMALE SIMPLICITY.

The following curious anecdote has given rise to much pleasantry & amusement in the fashionable circles of Paris:—Three young ladies nearly of the same age, and brought up from their infancy in a boarding school at Paris, had contracted so strong an affection for each other, that they formed the resolution of remaining together for their lives. A very painful idea, however, embittered this happy prospect, and that idea was marriage—which, should their parents insist upon, this contract would inevitably prevent the eternal union they so ardently sighed for. The youngest suggested a remedy, and proposed, that as poligamy was prohibited in France, they should write to the Grand Signior, requesting him to take them all three for his wives. A letter to that effect was accordingly written, and signed by the trio; but being put into the post with the address "To the Grand Turk at Constantinople," it excited suspicion, and was carried to the Minister, who opened and read it, to his great diversion and that of his friends. The anecdote has been productive of many witty epigrams and humourous remarks in Paris, & has been made the subject of a petite piece, which is actually preparing for the theatre Louvois.

The re-eftablifhment of a good underftanding between the two powers has not been effected without difficulty. But the Britifh government have at length contented to reftore the greater part of the Swedifh effects be they captured or only embargoed; and having given aflurances that all points of dilpute fhould be amicably and honorably arranged, the exchange of ratifications took place the 11th of this month.

Before the arrival of the ratification on the part of his Swedifh Majefty, the Englifh government had fent out orders to the Weft Indies to give up the ifland of St. Bartholomews to any agent of the Swedifh government, and alfo to take off the embargo laid on their effects. The fhips Triton and Venus belonging to the Weft India Company, have been liberated previous to the exchange of the ratifications, and reftitution made for the injury they have fuftained. The Treaty of Commerce of 1661 is renewed, fubject however to thofe modifications which the difference of the times have caufed fince its formation. Refpecting the convoy taken in 1798, every hope is entertained, that after the laft anfwer of the Britifh minifter, a frefh inquiry will be made into the fituation of the cafe, altho' the exchange of ratifications may have taken place, and that every point in difpute regarding that fubject, will be amicably fettled between the two Courts.

AGRICULTURAL.

ON HEMP.—From the Quebec Gazette, publifhed by order of the Society.

FARMERS and Cultivators may be aflured, that the growing & dreffing of hemp is not fo difficult as is imagined. The principal part of the labor may be performed by women and young people, at times when little employed, as they will learn by practice and what follows:

Let fmall fpots or patches of ground in or about the farm yard, in the garden, or in the field be dug with the fpade, or very well ploughed, manured, raked an i prepared as if intended for cabbages, onions or tobacco. The hemp-feed may then be town in drills, as garden peas or beans ufually are, or in beds or ridges of about 4 feet wide, leaving intervals or alleys of 2 feet wide between each bed, for the eafe of weeding or pulling the hemp when ripe.

The quantity of feed ufually fown on an acre may be from two to 2½ minots*, and in that proportion according to the extent and richnefs of the fpot employed, obferving that the richer the foil, the more feed is proper, that the hemp may grow thin and tall without branching. Hemp is ripe when its leaves at top of the ftalk become of a pale yellow color: then the male hemp fhould be pulled, and about, three weeks the female. It is the female that bears the feed; and when the feed becomes hard and of a dark brown color, it is ripe, and the female hemp fhould then be cut by the root or pulled. The ftalks of the male hemp, when pulled, are ufually dried in the fun a day or two; then aflorted to their length, then tied in large handfuls, with ties of the fmaller ftalks, in two or three places: thus prepared they are put in a pond where the water runs, or in the edge of a river, with fome weight upon them to keep them under, in order to rot. If the water is warm, as in this country, about the middle or end of Auguft, the time the male hemp is ripe, 4 or 5 days does the bufinefs; if colder, as in September or October, 5 or 10.—When the ftalk or reed breaks eafily, and the bark or hemp peels eafily off from end to end of the ftalk it is rotted. Take it then immediately out of the ftoop, fet the handfulls on end by a fence or wall, loofen the ties to let the hemp dry in the fun until it becomes dry enough, which it will fo as to break as flax is ufually broken, with the hand-break of the country. It will be well to break handfulls of equal length, as the more length and uniformity, the more value.

If the hemp is long, the perfon who breaks it, muft fhift the ends, holding the handful by the middle. When the bark is cleared of the reed, the bufinefs as with flax is done. It is made up in bundles and may be carried to market.

The female hemp when ripe and pulled, and the feed fhaken or beaten from the ftalk with a fmall ftick, or any way you pleafe, is dried, rotted, dried again, and broken as the male: their produce however, fhould be kept feparate, the male being ufually of better color and quality than the female.

Hemp will come to perfection if the feed be fown at any time in the month of May, and to the tenth of June: the fooner however, th better.

Inftead of breaking, as above directed, the bark or hemp may be ftripped or peeled by hand from the reed, beginning at the root end. This is the beft method to obtain without waffe, and of the beft quality, the whole produce of each ftalk: It is much practifed in England, France, Italy Ruffia, &c. and performed by women and young perfons of both fexes in families, and by the deftitute poor in work-houfes & hofpitals.

In Ruffia, Sweden and Livonia, where there is much fnow, they rot the hemp in winter under the fnow. After the firft fall of fnow they fpread the hemp, which has been dried in the fun, or otherwife on the fnow, & leave it there to be covered with other falls of fnow until fpring, when it is ufually found to be fufficiently rotted; then collect it up into handfulls for breaking or ftripping, as has been defcribed, or for baeaking in mills.

Hemp is faid to be good in the field, when from 5 to 7 or 8 feet in length ftanding. It will then drefs from 4 to 6 or 7. A filver color is thought as good as a pale yellow, of which latter color, however, the Ruffia hemp generally is. Strength is attended to more than color:—that which will bear the greateft weight is, of courfe, reckoned the beft, and more efpecially for the purpofes of navigation.

It is known, though not perhaps to every one that cordage, fail cloth and ropes and lines of all fizes, are made of hemp: alfo fheeting and other ftrong linens. Ruffia fheeting is made of hemp, and fo may be table linen and ftrong fhirting. Every part of the hemp has its ufe in thread or tow, and may be difpofed of for money, and to good advantage: These hints are given, and it is hoped will prove sufficient to induce the inhabitants of Lower Canada to make experiments.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, August 28.

It appears by the last American papers received, that the malignant fever which appeared some time ago at Philadelphia has not yet subsided as was lately reported; several new cases have occurred, and the Board of health continue to make the useful reports.—The city of Baltimore also experiences a similar fate.

LINES

ENGRAVED ON THE VAULT AT MOUNT VERNON.

COLUMBIA groans beneath the dreadful wound,
And Europe Echoes to the mournful sound:
The Sons of Freedom shudder at the stroke,
And universal Virtue feels the shock.

The pomp of Heraldry, the boast of Power,
And all that Beauty—all that Wealth e'er gave,
Await alike th'inevitable hour—
The path of Glory leads but to the Grave.

FROM A LONDON PAPER.

There is now a curious trial pending in one of the Courts of France; a lady has instituted a suit against her husband for alimony. The husband admits that he was married to her, but contends that the marriage is not valid, because it was contracted merely as a device to save the life of the lady, who had taken refuge in his house during the sanguinary reign of Robespierre. On the other hand the wife asserts, that the marriage was to all intents and purposes a real one, and that as the gentleman was kind enough to save her life, he can now do no less than maintain her for life.

A few days ago, a Dutch line of battle ſhip anchored at Deal, with French troops on board, (the 7th demi brigade of the line) from the Texel, bound to St. Domingo.—The French officers were received by the officers of the firſt battalion of the 52d regiment, ſtationed there, with every mark of attention and hoſpitality. On Wedneſday they dined together at the regimental meſs, when the following, among many other toaſts, were given:——"The Chief Conſul of France," by the commanding officer. Immediately after which the French commandant gave "the King of Great Britain;" when the fine band of the 52d, ſtruck up the beloved air of "God ſave the King;" and the whole company, as if by a ſudden impulſe, ſtood up. BRITISH HOUSE OF COMMONS, COW POCK.

Ad. BERKELEY ſaid, he would not treſpaſs on the time of the Houſe in adverting to all the particulars contained in the report of the committee on the petition of Doctor Jenner, the meritorious diſcoverer of the Cow Pock, as the report had been for ſome time in the hands of the members. He had to obſerve, that ſome of the firſt medical characters in the country, had been examined, and unequivocally ſtated, that vaccine inoculation was a ſovereign preventative againſt that dreadful malady and ſcourge to the human race, the ſmall pox. Out of the thouſands that were inoculated with the vaccine virus, not one had died, nor did it render the parties incapable of following their ordinary avocations. The reaſon why more medical gentlemen were not called upon, was becauſe thoſe examined were men of indiſputable eminence, who had originally oppoſed the practice, but who were now convinced of its efficacy; and he had no doubt if others had been examined, that they would have borne ſimilar teſtimonies of its virtues. Anonimous letters had been written on the ſubject, but of theſe no attention was taken in the report. Much certainly was due to Dr. Jenner, three fourths of the world paid him homage for the invention, and every unprejudiced mind muſt acknowledge his juſt claims on this country. The diſcovery had this advantage, that the cow-pox was ſo mild in its nature, that the labourer and huſbandman could work as uſual though inoculated, without inconvenience to themſelves, or becoming burthenſome to the pariſh. Nay our ſoldiers and ſailors, in the ſituation he deſcribed, were enabled to give their full aid in accompliſhing thoſe brilliant atchievements which by ſea and land diſtinguiſhed the late war.—The report, he obſerved, ſtated, that Dr. Jenner had loſt an extenſive practice in this country, by his application in carrying into effect his diſcovery, and when he had accompliſhed it, he voluntarily promulgated the ſecret for the benefit of the world. The expence of foreign correſpondence with this gentleman coſt him from twenty-five to thirty ſhillings a day, which to a man of fortune would be deemed conſiderable, but to a man of none, of ſerious conſiderations. He then adverted to the parliamentary gratitudes to Mr. Irvine for the diſcovery of rendering ſalt water freſh, who received five thouſand pounds. To the diſcoverer of the ſtone ſolvent, and to Mr. Harriſon who received twenty thouſand pounds for the diſcovery of his time piece. The number of patients loſt annually in the United Kingdom by the ſmall pox, was eſtimated, he ſaid, at 45,000; taking the number throughout the habitable globe, a victim fell every ſecond of time, to this deſtructive malady. After expreſſing the great obligation that mankind were under to Mr. Jenner, for the diſcovery, he moved,

"That it is the opinion of the Committee that a ſum not exceeding 10,000l. be granted to his Majeſty to be paid as a remuneration to Dr. Edward Jenner, for promoting the diſcovery of the vaccine inoculation, by which mode that dreadful malady the ſmall pox was prevented."

Sir Henry Mildmay after enlarging on the great benefit derived to the world from ſo valuable a diſcovery, moved an amendment, that inſtead of the ſum of 10,000l. the words "Twenty thouſand pounds" ſhould be inſerted, which was alſo ſeconded.

Mr. Windham was ſtrongly in favor of the amendment.

Sir James Erſkine Sinclair made a ſtrong appeal to the feelings of the Houſe in favor of the amendment. From very good authority he was empowered to ſtate, that Dr. Jenner, beſides ſacrificing his local practice which was conſiderable, had ſpent no leſs a ſum than 6000l. in maturing his ſyſtem and bringing it to a ſtate of perfection.

Mr. Courtney obſerved that it had been admitted, even by thoſe who oppoſed the amendment, that 40,000 lives, on an average were ſaved to the country in conſequence of the diſcovery. Now taking the general eſtimate of things, by which in a country like this, every life on an average, was allowed to be worth 5l. per annum, there would accrue to the revenue a ſaving or income of 200,000l. Under theſe circumſtances he thought the inventor entitled to his tythes and therefore ſhould vote the amendment.

The Houſe divided on the queſtion, that the words "ten thouſand pounds" do ſtand part of the motion. The members were—Ayes 59—Noes 56—Majority 3.

FROM LATE LONDON PAPERS.

The following Addreſs has been ſent to the different perſons in Newcaſtle, who have ſhewn reſpect and civility to the Emigrant Clergy. We are induced to give it all the publicity in our power, as containing a juſt commitment to the national character for hoſpitality, and at the ſame time to ſhew the high ſenſe of gratitude felt by the parties for the kindneſs and protection they have experienced during their reſidence in this country:—

"The Addreſs of the French Clergy, reſiding in the North of England, to the Gentlemen of the Committee formed in their favour, at Newcaſtle upon Tyne, 1796, to the Subſcribers, to the Clergy, to the Gentlemen of the Medical Faculty, and to their Benefactors in general.

"Gentlemen,

"We earneſtly implore Heaven to bleſs, with many happy years, your renowned and great King; great in his beneficence to us, great in the love and attachment he has conſtantly ſhewn to his people. We offer, as a tribute juſtly due from us, our moſt profound reſpects to the auguſt ſenate of the nation, whoſe generoſity has been annually renewed in our favour, in an extraordinary, and, we believe, unprecedented manner. We ſincerely wiſh joy and proſperity to the Engliſh in general, who are worthy of our warmeſt eulogiums, as well for their characteriſtic amiableneſs, their frank and generous conduct, as the welcome with which they received us on our arrival. May England hold up to nations the mirror of happineſs, as ſhe has given to the world a model of beneficence.

"Such, Gentlemen, are the ſentiments of all the French Clergy, diſperſed through the different counties of this hoſpitable kingdom; and theſe ſentiments, that gratitude which will ever cleave to their hearts, commands them thus publicly to declare.

"But this general and ſincere declaration of gratitude does not ſatisfy the feelings of us, who have had the good fortune to reſide in the North of this happy empire. When we arrived on your coaſts, you, Gentlemen, looking upon us victims devoted for adhering to our duty, not only graciouſly received us under your protection, but alſo, in the moſt friendly manner, gave us every aſſiſtance. In health, we have been in want of nothing; in ſickneſs, we have experienced the moſt ready aſſiſtance; and that, in general, without expectation, on your part, of any other reward than the conſoling ſatisfaction you felt in prolonging our lives. Nothing has been ſpared on your part to aſſuage the ſorrows of our exile; and what has moſt ſenſibly affected us, we frequently knew not what hand to bleſs for the favours we have received.

"Many, therefore, are our obligations to you; and ſenſible of them, but not able to expreſs them as we with, we hereby preſent you the moſt grateful ſentiments of our hearts. As you have heaped favours upon us without ceaſing, ſo ſhall our gratitude, joined with admiration, continue during the remainder of our lives. We will daily implore the ſupreme Diſpenſer of all things to recompenſe your generoſity, with ſtill more abundant riches; your hoſpitality, and other virtues, with his moſt ſignal favours.

"Receive, then, Gentlemen, theſe lively and ſincere ſentiments, which are preſented to you unanimouſly by "your humble ſervants,

"The French Clergy."

Lusus Naturæ.—Mr. Schwart, Counſellor of Regency to the King of Pruſſia, has publiſhed in a Journal entitled Bremen, commenced ſome months ago at Berlin, the following account of a very curious phenomenon:—"Laſt year a Jew, at Poſen in Poland, exhibited for money a fowl having a human figure. It had been hatched on a farm near Wirzemer, which had been made over to the Jew in payment of a debt. He alledged that there was another perfectly ſimilar of the ſame brood, but that it had died very ſoon after being hatched. The animal which he exhibited, and which I myſelf ſaw, was alive and in very good condition. It had grown to the natural ſize, being more than a year old. The body was covered with feathers of different colours, and the animal reſembled all other fowls, with the exception of head. This was of the uſual ſize, but without feathers, and covered with a bluiſh ſkin. The cavities of the eyes were exactly formed like thoſe of a human being; and were furmounted with two ſmall arches of fine down, forming very regular eye-brows. The upper part of the beak was ſhorter than uſual, its point being obtuſe and the noſtrils placed pretty low, ſo that, though a horny ſubſtance, it completely reſembled a well ſhaped noſe. Below this noſe was a regular mouth with lips, two rows of teeth extremely white, cloſe and pointed, with a full broad tongue, completed this ſingular lusus naturæ.—This reſemblance to the human figure had ſomething diſagreeable and even frightful in its appearance.—It was, however, perfect, and in tracing it the aſſiſtance of the imagination was unneceſſary."

The benevolent intention of government with reſpect to the ſoldiers, who in the late expedition to Egypt have contracted a diſorder which has terminated in a total deſtruction of ſight, was ſtrongly manifeſted on Monday at the board of general officers at Cheſea Hoſpital; 217 blind men were paſſed from different regiments of dragoons and infantry, to whom the following allowance, by way of annuity, is granted: to each ſerjeant, 1s. 6d. per diem; to each corporal 1s. 2d. per diem; and to each drummer and private, 1s. per diem; to continue to be paid by equal half yearly payments for the remainder of their lives; and to be paid them, to ſave trouble and expence, by the collectors of land tax, in their ſeveral pariſhes, to which they are to be removed at the expence of government, either by ſhips or waggons, as the diſtance may be.

A curious correſpondence lately took place in the Paris Journals between M. Bouillé, author of the play of l'Abbé de l'Epée (deaf and dumb) and the repreſentative of the family, which is deſcribed by the poet as depriving the deaf and dumb youth of his rights. It is well known that l'Abbé de l'Epée, from the pureſt motives, ſo patroniſed a youth who was clearly proved to be an impoſtor, and by an ill directed zeal for his pupil, gave infinite trouble to a reſpectable family. M. Cazeaux, the repreſentative of the latter, has repreſented the prejudices and inconveniencies that a popular play might occaſion to his houſe by reviving the paſſions and animoſities which the real proceſs had excited. M. Bouillé therefore, has ſtated that he did not intend that his play ſhould be imagined to patroniſe the cauſe of the Abbé de l'Epée's pupil, or to bring into queſtion even in opinion, a juſt deciſion in favor of Cazeau's family. He has likewiſe taken from the play the ſecond title of "hiſtorical fact."

French agents are at preſent very buſy in the city of London, holding out the advantage of inveſting money in the French funds, which pay 10 per cent and of making other money ſpeculations in France.

The audience in Guildhall was yeſterday (14th June) very noiſy, and interrupted the proceedings of the Court of King's Bench ſeveral times: at length the Chief Juſtice enquired whoſe duty it was to keep ſilence, and being informed it was the Sheriff's, he immediately ſtopped the proceedings in the cauſe, until the under Sheriff made his appearance: His Lordſhip then informed him, that it was fit that they ſhould be able to adminiſter the juſtice of the country without interruption "underſtand, Sir," ſaid he, "that it is your duty to ſee order kept: I therefore fine you £5 for your negligence, and unleſs ſilence be hereafter obſerved, I ſhall have recurrence to the ſame means to enforce your attention to your duty:

Capt: Hood goes out to Trinidad, as one of the Commiſſioners for ſurveying, and dividing the lands of that Iſland: Charles Grant, Eſq: Collector of the Cuſtoms at Martinique, is named likewiſe as one of the Commiſſioners: Lieutenant Colonel Rutherford is appointed Surveyor General:

Preparations are making in the interior paſture countries of Ireland, on a very extenſive ſcale, for carrying on the cheeſe manufacture, it having been found on repeated experiments, that the inferiority of which has been produced of that article in Ireland, compared with others, was not in the leaſt owing either to air or ſoil, but to the careleſs mode of manufacture:

The revenue of the Poſt office in Scotland, for the year ending 5th April, 1802, was £85,791 11 3 This is a ſtriking proof of the immenſe increaſe of our trade and manufactures in that part of the kingdom: It is a fact, that in the year 1728 the London Poſt arrived one day as Edinburgh Poſt arrived one day as Edinburgh with only one ſix penny London letter, and that was addreſſed to the Poſtmaſter General on office buſineſs: The arrival of the Poſt was then only once a fortnight, now it is ſix times a week: The poſt took then ten days in travelling, now it arrives in three:

It is a circumſtance worthy of remark that we had three moons in the month of May, the changes falling on the 2d and 31ſt.

FROM THE BALANCE.

On the Effects of cloſe hot Rooms, &c. from Dr. A. Fothergill's Hints on Animation.

"If a healthy man contaminates a complete gallon of air in a minute merely by repeatedly reſpiring in it, we may eaſily explain why the air of a parlour is ſo conſiderably injured by company ſitting in it, and that of a bed chamber even by a perſon's only ſleeping in it, agreeable to the obſervations of Dr. Prieſtley and Dr. White. Here too we may regret that this unhealthy tendency is not a little increaſed by modern refinement. The mathematical exactneſs with which the doors and windows of elegant houſes are now contrived to ſhut, excludes the neceſſary ingreſs of freſh air. The diminutive ſize of the bed-chamber is another capital error, and this is generally aggravated by the pernicious habit of ſleeping with the curtains cloſe drawn. The air thus confined becomes replete with perſpirable matter, exhaling from the lungs, and all the inviſible ducts of the ſkin, and in this contaminated ſtate is reſpired for ſeveral hours; a circumſtance ſtrangely overlooked in health, and but too much neglected in ſickneſs. In putrid and contagious fevers it renders the room not only offenſive, but highly dangerous to the patient, the practioner, and the attendants. In cloſe crouded rooms, deprived of ventilation, when the air becomes phlogiſticated to a certain degree, the candles grow uncommonly dim, and we begin to feel a diſagreeable ſenſe of oppreſſion, langour, and faintneſs, till freſh air is re-admitted, when theſe ſymptoms preſently vaniſh. But ſhould this be neglected till the air is completely contaminated, fatal conſequence would enſue.

"Flame and all burning bodies contaminate air in the ſame manner as reſpiration.—If a lighted taper is placed under a large glaſs receiver, its light gradually dwindles till at length it expires, rendering the air highly noxious. This ſhews the abſurdity of attempting to purify peſtilential air by lighting up large fires, which, inſtead of correcting its contagious principle, ſerve but to injure its reſpirable quality. Hence alſo appears the glaring impropriety of that profuſion of ſuperfluous fires and candles, which modern luxury has introduced into ball-rooms, aſſemblies, and all places of ſplendid entertainment; ſince theſe, by adding to the impurity of the air already contaminated by reſpiration, cannot but prove very unfriendly to health. This evidently conſpires with other circumſtances in rendering the night air much leſs pure than that of the day."

The foregoing remarks of Dr. Fothergill, (in whoſe opinion moſt late writers on the ſubject have concurred) while they point out the pernicious effects of contaminated air on the health, ſerve alſo to ſhew the neceſſity of properly ventilating large cloſe rooms, intended for great aſſemblages of people, ſuch as playhouſes, maſons lodges, &c. which are neceſſarily much confined, and in which a multiplicity of lights are employed.

A great number of Engliſh now at Paris have been greatly mortified at the late regulation which has been made at the Court of the Thuilleries, by which they are excluded from being introduced to the Firſt Conſul. There is now a ſtanding order that no Engliſh perſon ſhall be preſented to the Firſt Conſul, who has not been previouſly preſented at St. James's. And in conſequence of this order, the Dutcheſs of Cumberland could not be preſented to Madame Bonaparte at the laſt review.

LONDON.

HOUSE OF PEERS,
JUNE 28.

This day, at a quarter before three o'clock, His Majeſty came down to the Houſe of Peers in his Royal Robes. Sir Francis Molyneux, Bart. Gentleman Uſher of the Black Rod, was diſpatched to order the attendance of the Commons, who forthwith, to a conſiderable number, with the Speaker at their head, appeared at the Bar.

The Speaker, on preſenting the conſolidated fund, and the Iriſh imports and exports Bills for His Majeſty's Royal aſſent, delivered the following Addreſs:—

"Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

"It is my duty to preſent to your Majeſty, the Bills for completeing the ſupplies which your Majeſty's faithful Commons have granted for the ſervice of the year.

"With heartfelt gratitude they acknowledge your Majeſty's paternal goodneſs and wiſdom which have already enabled them to make a large reduction of the public burthens, by the termination of a long and eventful war, a war juſt and neceſſary in its origin, conducted with energy, ſuſtained with fortitude, ſignalized by triumphs ſurpaſſing the fame of our anceſtors, and obtained in countries unviſited by their arms, and concluded at length by a peace, which has added new conqueſts to your Crown, and given repoſe and ſafety to theſe its ancient Dominions, whoſe Peers and Commons have now for the ſecond year, the happineſs of being aſſembled in one united Parliament at the foot of your Throne.

"Thus circumſtanced, your Majeſty's faithful Commons not only look forward with a ſanguine hope that they may not ſoon be called to the hard neceſſity of augmenting the public debt by future burthens, but they have deemed it their duty to took back to the debt already incurred; and with the same characteristic spirit which first laid the foundation of an effectual system for the extinction of the national debt, they have proceeded to arrange and settle a plan for accelerating that extinction, by pledging the future application of their growing means to the accomplishment of the same great object.

"At a time when their attention has been directed to these considerations, and when they have also found that taxes of unprecedented weight, though wisely imposed to meet the exigencies of such a war, might nevertheless be now prudently repealed; it has given the highest satisfaction to your Majesty's Commons, to relieve pressing demands which the general difficulties of the times had cast upon the Parliament for the support of your Majesty's Household, and the honor and dignity of your Crown; for this country has not now to learn, that its Monarchy is the best and strongest security for its liberties; and that the splendor of the Throne reflects lustre and dignity upon the whole nation.

"These, Sire, are amongst the memorable events of a session thus far protracted; upon which we reflect with a conscious satisfaction, that to the discharge of great duties we have brought proportionate exertions. And we now indulge the flattering hope that we may safely apply ourselves to your Majesty and congenial to the temper of your people, whose spirit of enterprize in foreign commerce and internal improvement, unexampled in its exertions throughout the war, may now expand itself with redoubled activity, and by providing new sources of strength and wealth for this country, fix the stability of our own power—and at the same time promote the common interests of Europe and of all civilized nations of the world.'

Letters from the North of Germany announce positively, that the Duke of Cambridge will be immediately proclaimed Sovereign of the States of Brunswick and Lunenburgh, and Elector of Hanover.—The King of England, his father, will cede to him all his possessions in Germany. The inhabitants of the Electorate of Hanover applaud this change in their government, which will establish a splendid Court in the city of Hanover. It will not, however, be carried into execution until the affairs of the Germanic Empire shall be entirely decided.

JUNE 29.

His Majesty's most Gracious SPEECH to both Houses of Parliament, delivered yesterday.

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN,

The public business being concluded, I think it proper to close this session of Parliament.

During a long and laborious attendance, you have invariably manifested the just sense you entertain of the great trust committed to your charge. The objects of your deliberations have been unusually numerous and important, and I derive the utmost satisfaction from the conviction that the wisdom of your proceedings will be fully proved by their effects in promoting the best interests of my people throughout every part of my dominions.

GENTLEMEN

OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS,

The ample provision you have made for the various branches of the public service, demands my warmest acknowledgements; and my particular thanks are due to the liberality with which you have shewn in exonerating my civil government and household from the debts with which they were unavoidably burthened.

Whilst I regret the amount of the supplies which circumstances have rendered necessary, it is a relief to me to contemplate the state of our manufactures, commerce and revenue, which afford the most decisive and gratifying proofs of the abundance of our internal resources, and the growing prosperity of the country.

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN,

As I think it expedient that the election of a new Parliament should take place without delay, it is my intention forthwith to give directions for dissolving the present and calling a new Parliament.

In communicating to you this intention, I cannot suppress those sentiments of entire approbation with which I reflect upon every part of your conduct since I first met you in this place. The unexampled difficulties of our situation required the utmost efforts of that wisdom and fortitude which you so eminently displayed in contending with them, and by which they have been so happily surmounted. From your judicious and salutary measures during the last year, my people derived all the relief which could be afforded under one of the severest dispensations of Providence; and it was by the spirit and determination which uniformly animated your councils, aided by the unprecedent exertions of my fleets and armies, and the zealous and cordial co-operation of my people, that I was enabled to prosecute with success, and terminate with honor, the long and arduous contest in which we have been engaged.

The same sense of public duty, the same solicitude for the welfare of your country, will now induce you in your individual characters, to encourage, by all the means in your power, the cultivation and improvement of the advantages of peace.

My endeavours will never be wanting to preserve the blessings by which we are so eminently distinguished, and to prove that the prosperity and happiness of all classes of my faithful subjects are the objects which are always the nearest to my heart.

[Then the Lord Chancellor, by the King's command, prorogued Parliament to the 17th August (instant.)]

BY THE KING.

A Proclamation, for dissolving the present Parliament, and declaring the calling of another.

GEORGE R.

Whereas, we have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Privy Council, to dissolve the present Parliament, which now stands prorogued to Tuesday the seventeenth day of August next: We do for that end, publish this our Royal Proclamation, and do hereby dissolve the said Parliament accordingly. And the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and the Knights, Citizens and Burgesses, and the Commissioners for Shires and Burghs, of the House of Commons, are discharged from their meeting and attendance on Tuesday the said seventeenth day of August next. And we being desirous and resolved, as soon as may be, to meet our people, and to have their advice in Parliament, do hereby make known to all our loving subjects, our Royal will and pleasure to call a new Parliament; and do hereby further declare, that, with the advice of our Privy Council, we have given order that our Chancellor of that part of our United Kingdom called Great Britain, and our Chancellor of Ireland, do, respectively, upon notice thereof, forthwith issue our writs in due form, and according to law, for calling a new Parliament: and we do hereby also, by this our Royal Proclamation under our Great Seal of our United Kingdom, require writs forthwith to be issued accordingly, by our said Chancellors respectively, for causing the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, who are to serve in our said Parliament, to be duly returned to and give their attendance in our said Parliament; which writs are to be returnable on Tuesday the thirty-first day of August next.

Given at our Court at Windsor, the twenty-ninth day of June, one thousand eight hundred and two, in the forty-second year of our reign.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

A letter from Berlin of the 15th, states as follows:—

"We now know to a certainty what States fall to the lot of the Prussian Monarch, as an indemnity for his possessions beyond the Rhine, viz.

1st. "The Bishoprick of Hildesheim, in Lower Saxony, containing about 54 square leagues, with eight cities, (among which are Hildesheim, the population of which amounts to 12,000 souls, Peina and Adield) four borough towns, and 234 villages.—This country, though within the circle of the Hanoverian States, is contiguous to the western boundaries of the Duchy of Halberstatt, belonging to the King of Prussia; the income of it is about 250,000 crowns currency.

2dly. "The Bishoprick of Paderborn, in West Phalia, 54 square leagues, with 23 small cities, one borough town, and 136 villages, 60,000 souls; the income 60,000 rix dollars.

3dly. "A part of the Bishoprick of Munster, including about one third of that Bishoprick, on the right bank of the Rhine, with 40,000 inhabitants.

4thly. "Embsfield, in Thuringia, formerly belonging to the Elector of Mentz, containing forty square leagues, four cities, 162 borough towns and villages, and 24,000 inhabitants; the income is estimated at 300,000 florins.

5thly. "The city of Erfort, with its territory of 16 leagues. Erfort contains 14,000 inhabitants; there are 73 borough towns and villages, and about 41,677 souls.

6thly. "The Imperial city of Goslar, with 6000 inhabitants.

7thly. "The Imperial cities of Mulhausen and Nordhausen; the former of these cities, including its territory, 13,000 and the latter 9000 inhabitants.

"The whole of the indemnities comprehends 200 square leagues, and 600,000 inhabitants; poffession will be taken at the beginning of July, and the inhabitants will then take the oath of allegiance to their new Sovereign."

We hear from Basle, under the date of June 24, that the territory of Vaud is once more the scene of insurrection, and that nothing but the presence of the French troops can preserve the country from being entirely laid waste; the tythes and the feudal rents continue to be the pretexts of these illegal meetings.—Fresh troops are however to be sent to that country, for the purpose of supporting the commissary of government.

Letters from Corfu state, that all nightly meetings are prohibited there, and that every wise precaution is resorted to for the purpose of ensuring peace and good order.

The First Consul went, last Saturday, to see the National Manufactory of Porcelain at Sevres; he remained there near an hour, and examined every thing in detail; his observation on all that he saw were extremely correct, and evinced the great extent of his information with respect to the arts. He appeared highly satisfied to see an establishment which has created a branch of industry in France, that cannot be equalled in any other country in Europe.

In an address to the First Consul, the merchants of Lyons unite with the rest of the commercial interest throughout the country, in demanding that the trade to India should be laid open, and that no priviledged companies may be re-established.

A letter from Ratisbon of the 20th of June, says, "several of the accredited Ministers to the Diet have received from their Courts an intimation, that the arrangements relative to the indemnities are already agreed upon, and that there remains nothing more to be settled upon this subject but a few subordinate points of very little consequence. The most powerful Princes of Germany will immediately take possession of the several States assigned to them, in which the necessary oaths of fidelity are forthwith to be taken.—An Imperial decree is expected to be immediately presented to the Diet, recommending a revocation of the conclusum for nominating an extraordinary deputation of the Empire, which from recent circumstances and events, would be useless and unnecessary; and at the same time announcing to the Assembly of the German States, that the arrangements agreed upon between the governments of France, Russia, Prussia and Austria, and by which the several indemnities have been settled, will shortly be submitted for the approval of the Diet."—La Publicité.

A letter from Munich of the same date, says, "it is undoubtedly true that the plan of indemnities has been communicated to our Elector, who, following the example of other powers, purposes taking immediate possession of the countries which have been allotted to him."

The English, agreeable to the terms of the treaty of Amiens, evacuated Porto Ferrajo (Ile of Elba) in the night of the 20th June, on which occasion some compliments passed between the British & French commanders.

July 1.

M. GARNERIN'S TOUR.

M. Garnerin and Captain Sowden arrived in town from Colchester yesterday morning at three o'clock.—Mr. Garnerin has favoured us with the following particulars of his journey:

M. Garnerin feels that he owes to the public, and to the interest expressed by the great number of persons who went yesterday to the Pantheon to see his balloon on account of his aerial journey. The morning of the 27th (the day of his ascent) appeared to promise weather sufficiently favourable for the ascent, though it was rainy. At eleven o'clock, therefore, he began the chymical operation necessary for the production of the inflammable gas. The balloon filled rapidly, though considerably agitated by the wind. From one o'clock to half past four, the wind continued to encrease, and at length blew so violently, that had he made any previous experiment in this country, he should have yielded to the earnest solicitations of the brilliant and numerous company with which he was honored, and should have deferred his ascent to a period less tempestuous. M. Garnerin, however, though he determined not to disappoint the public expectation himself, felt it to be his duty to press Captain Sowden not, for the sake of curiosity, to expose himself to the perils attendant upon such a journey in such tempestuous weather. The captain, however, resisted all these solicitations, and resolved to accompany him.—From a quarter past four to five some showers of rain fell, which only allayed the fury of the wind for a short time, for after they had ceased it blew with more violence than ever. At five o'clock Messrs. Garnerin and Sowden took their seats, the cords were cut, and the balloon ascended.—Each held a flag of the nation to which he belonged, which he waved to the company present. The balloon first made the tour of the place where the spectators stood, and after being greeted with the loud plaudits and good wishes of every person, ascended majestically and rapidly into the regions of the air. The wind blew from the S. W. the balloon therefore proceeded over St. James's Park, the Thames, and Westminster and Blackfriar's bridges. M. Garnerin then found that the balloon began to descend; he threw out some ballast and it rose immediately with great rapidity, and carried the travellers over the cathedral of Saint Paul's.

During all this time the metropolis was distinctly seen by the aeronauts, whose balloon was equally visible to the inhabitants of the metropolis. When it was over Saint Paul's, M. Garnerin asked captain Sowden how he felt himself? The Captain replied that he was perfectly enchanted with his situation, and with the superb expanse of sky, and with the earth, now fast lessening to the view, and soon to be seen no more.—The temperature of the atmosphere now began to change very sensibly and to be fifteen degrees colder than when they began to ascend. It was extremely cold. The balloon continued rapidly to ascend; was soon above the clouds, and the earth was visible no more. When the travellers were above the clouds, the climate became sensibly milder: the inflammable air began to dilate, and M. Garnerin gave it all possible means of vent proper for their safety. They now dined with good appetites, and very comfortably above the clouds, at an elevation of upwards of 10,000 feet above the earth. During the dessert, M. Garnerin told Captain Sowden that the pleasantest part of their journey was passed, and that they must now prepare for a very disagreeable descent, on account of the continued violence of the wind. About half an hour had elapsed since their ascent.

M. Garnerin now opened the valve, and the balloon descended thro' black and cold clouds; they then descried land again, and also the sea, towards which their course was fast carrying; indeed they were nearly over that arm of it into which the Chelmet empties itself. As soon as they had approached sufficiently near the earth, they threw out their anchor and cable.—When the balloon first touched the ground it rebounded with considerable violence; this rebound was followed by about twenty more violent than the first. The gusts of wind dragged them over fields and hedges, which tore their hands and clothes; their anchor touched the ground several times, but dragged; and it was not till some minutes had elapsed that it took a steady hold, in a thicket near a house. Here they conceived themselves to be released from all peril; but the inhabitants of the house alarmed at the balloon, would not assist them: they actually offered to fire on the adventurous travellers. In the mean time the cable of the anchor broke and they were dragged thro' trees and branches, the balloon being agitated to an extreme degree, and rebounding very violently. At length they were driven against a tree, and Captain Sowden received a severe blow on the back part of the head. The balloon was now torn in the lower part, the cords broke, the boat broke; the travellers laid hold of a tree from which they were torn by the violence of the wind. At last a bound which the balloon made enabled them to jump out. The balloon, abandoned to itself, and much torn, fell about 200 paces further. The place where M. Garnerin and Capt. Sowden landed was on a common, four miles from Colchester, and 60 miles from Ranelah. The time that elapsed from their departure to their landing on the common, was three quarters of an hour. M. Garnerin's hands are much torn, and his legs and thighs considerably bruised. Capt. Sowden is much more hurt. He received a severe blow on the back part of the head, and is much bruised and torn in other parts of his body by the bushes and trees against which they were driven.—M. Garnerin pays the highest tribute to the courage and coolness of his companion, who, after the balloon first rebounded, could several times have jumped out of it with great ease and safety, but he persisted in sharing the fate of his companion, till they were both enabled to land in safety.

NIAGARA, Sept. 11.

The actual discharge of the Volunteers in this garrison did not take place until the 30th, two days after the arrival of the gift regiment. From 9 to this (on the 28th) several gentlemen of this town and vicinity, considering the deserved applause and acknowledgements due from the inhabitants to the neighbourhood of the several military gifts this day, to the officers and men of the corps, convened to unanimously as the little time would permit, and desired Col. M'Donell the following address:

"SIR,

"The magistrates and the principal inhabitants of the District of Niagara, fully sensible of the many advantages that attend a proper understanding between the military and civil parts of society, and having now the prospect of parting with you, and the regiment under your commands, request to say to you, sir, and, with respect, have experienced every satisfaction and comfort that during the last years you have commanded the Royal Canadian Volunteers in Fort George and on Yonge-st.

"We are happy in recollecting that during all that period, no fort of disturbance, that hardly any cause of complaint has occurred between them and the inhabitants; whose persons have been as free from any thing like insolence or insult, as their property has been fair from any fort of depredation. We wish justice to ascribe this to your unremitting care of the subordinate officers and men.

"For these reasons we thus personally request that you will accept of our grateful acknowledgments and that you will have the kindness to communicate such our sentiments, accompanied with our best thanks, to the officers, non-commissioned officers, and to the men of the corps: assure them that they will carry with them our warmest wishes for their happiness and success, in whatever situation they may hereafter be placed: and we shall sincerely pray that health and every other blessing may attend you and them.

We are, &c. &c. &c.

To which the Colonel replied:—

"GENTLEMEN,

"The very flattering mark of your attention, with which you have been pleased to honor me, is altogether as unexpected on my part as it is unmerited.

"I have always conceived it the duty of a commanding officer to employ the authority which our Gracious Sovereign hath committed to him, to the protection of the persons and civil rights of all his fellow subjects within his command. Give me leave, therefore, to say that in all the several duties of the most general nature, the attention of the Commandant of the District at Niagara have given the greatest testimony of their approbation of my conduct: nothing can yield a more pleasing reflection.

"I am about to return to a private station, and cannot help expressing my most hearty wish that she will ever enjoy every blessing which a brave, virtuous and industrious people can confer on a country which is fostered by the liberality and protected by the power of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

"I shall take the earliest opportunity of communicating to the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the second battalion of the Royal Canadian Volunteers, your very favorable sentiments and expressions of their conduct.—I am, &c. &c. &c.

The Sachems, Chiefs and Warriors of the Six Nations inhabiting the Grand River, in the Council held in that town, on the 19th of last month, thus considered their Speech to the Superintendant:

BROTHER,

"We have a few words more to say. We have already mentioned our attachment to our Sovereign and customs: it is our earnest wish to continue in the practice of expressing our gratitude in this way upon every occasion we take that occasion of thanking our friend Col. M'Donell, (whose footsteps, we understand, he intends to leave this place,) for his long friendship for the Six nations, and his ready compliance with all their requests, while in command here. May the Great Spirit remember him in those blessings he shall ever be found by the Six Nations on the Grand River, to be a zealous subscribers to him to him wherever he may be."

Which being communicated to Col. M'Donell, he the next day returned them the following answer:

"Brethren,

"Your address, which prevented me from meeting you yesterday in Council, hinders me also to-day from returning my thanks, as perhaps, for the kindness and kind intentions you were pleased to make of me in your Speech.

"Brethren,

"The affection and esteem which attaches me to your nations, are too firmly rooted in my heart ever to be removed.—Once they were forced in the hour of common danger and extreme distress, and shall accompany me wherefoever I may be."

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, Esquire,

Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada.

WHEREAS His Majesty's faithful Commons of this Province in Parliament assembled did by virtue of a Resolution of their House of Assembly, pray that certain Sums of Money should be applied in such manner as to me should seem meet for the purpose of purchasing and distributing Hemp Seed gratis amongst the Farmers, and, also for the paying of Premiums and Bounties to the deserving Cultivators and Exporters of Hemp in this Province. And whereas I thought fit to assent to the prayer of the said Commons—NOW KNOW YE that I PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of this Province, by virtue of the Authority so vested in me, and the better to effectuate the wise and liberal Intentions of the said faithful Commons—And well knowing the Affinity, Integrity and diligence of the Honorable John M'Gill, Esquire, one of the Legislative and Executive Councils, and of the Honorable David William Smith, Esquire, one of the Executive Council and Speaker of the House of Assembly of this Province, have nominated and appointed the said John M Gill and David William Smith Commissioners for the purpose of purchasing and distributing of Hemp Seed gratis amongst the Farmers, and also for the paying of Premiums and Bounties to the deserving Cultivators and Exporters of Hemp, according to the true intent and meaning of the said Resolution, not doubting but that the encouragement thus liberally held forth by His Majesty's faithful Commons, will effectually promote a measure so agreeable to the wishes of the Mother Country, and so highly conducive to the prosperity of this Province.

GIVEN under my Hand & Seal at Arms at York this Twenty-sixth day of July in the Forty-first year of His Majesty's Reign, and in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and one.

By His Excellency's Command,
Wm. JARVIS, Sec'y.

PORTSMOUTH, June 30.

Last night came up through the Needles, and anchored at Spithead, a two decked ship, with a Rear-Admiral's flag hoisted at the mizen, half mast high; on making her signals, she proved to be the Saturn, of 74 guns, Capt. Brisbane, with the body of Rear Admiral Totty on board, who died on the 2d inst. on his passage to England. He was seized with the fever at Martinique, and sailed from thence on a cruize, with the hopes of recovering from the dreadful malady; but finding the disorder encrease upon him, the ship bore away for England on the 24th May, and he died nine days after.

July 4.

The Saturn, of 74 guns, Captain Brisbane, was last night released from quarantine. At six o'clock this morning, a signal was made for bringing on shore the body of Rear Admiral Totty: before leven the boat that was to convey the body on shore, as well as several more from the men of war at Spithead, were assembled; when the corpse was put into the boat, minute guns were fired from the Saturn, and continued till the body was landed at the Sally-port, where General Whitelocke and Admiral Milbank, as chief mourners, and the Captains and Lieutenants of his Majesty's ships laying at Spithead and in harbour, assembled to attend the solemn procession. The corpse was carried from the Sally port to the Royal Garrison Chapel, by eight Seamen of the Saturn, where prayers were read by the Rev. R. Davis. About half past eight his body was intered, and three vollies fired over it by the troops in the garrison.

LONDON, July 15.

We are happy to state, that in the principal manufacturing towns in Scotland trade is rapidly reviving. The return of peace has happily brought along with it a large increase in the demand for muslin, &c. and with every exertion, it is almoft impoſſible to execute the numerous commiſſions which the great manufacturing houſes have received.

July 16.

Strong jealouſies exiſt between the Dutch and French governments upon the ſubject of commerce.—The Dutch government have informed the French that they ſhall increaſe the duties upon French merchandize, if more favorable meaſures be not adopted with reſpect to the trade between Holland, and Belgium and the Rhine.

Lord Hutchinſon, who has arrived in Dublin, will no doubt be received in the moſt flattering manner. Eminent as his ſervices have been, he is juſtly dear in every part of the United Kingdom; but he cannot fail to be honored with peculiar marks of reſpect and affection from his own countrymen.

Mrs. Lenox, lady to Major Lenox, of Philadelphia, has been preſented to the Queen, by the American Miniſter's lady. Her dreſs, white crape, ſuperbly ornamented with flowers of ſilver ſpangles, and a great diſplay of ſilver taſſels, well arranged. At the ſame time was preſented, by the ſame lady, to the Queen, Miſs Keene, a young lady from America, whoſe lovely countenance, added to an elegant and graceful figure, particularly attracted the notice of all preſent; her dreſs, white crape, richly and elegantly adorned with pearl and golden rules.

HAGUE, July 30.

We have an account from Antwerp, which mentions a ſingular accident that occurred in the Scheld, on Saturday laſt. The Philadelphia, captain Cooper, of 450 tons, of and from Philadelphia, was run aground, either through the negligence or ſtupidity of the pilot, near Bauz, and the greateſt part of the cargo will be loſt. As it happened in a place where the land bank is known to all fiſhermen, and even children, it being particularly marked, and as the accident occurred at five o'clock in the afternoon, with a fair wind, we are full of conjectures that it was done wilfully, and think that the pilot was bribed, in order to circulate an idea that our river is infecure and even dangerous. The pilot made his eſcape, with the captain's conſent; otherwiſe it is more than likely that he would have been killed by the enraged populace. The ſhip was laden with Colonial and Eaſt-India produce. A ſmall part of it has been brought up by two or three lighters, but the reſt is irrecoverable.

Letters from Vienna of the 26th ult. ſtate, that Paſſawan Oglou's rapid progreſs has given riſe to vigorous meaſures on the part of the Auſtrian government. The Court of Ruſſia is expected to concert to the demand made by the Court of Vienna, to march troops for the purpoſe of taking poſſeſſion of Wallachia, in order to appeaſe the troubles, or rather to get footing in European Turkey. Paſſawan has beaten a corps of 3000 Turks near Pietra. He has invited the Bozars who have taken flight, to return to their homes, and pay the contributions, otherwiſe he will pillage and lay waſte all their property. His army has been conſiderably augmented ſince his entrance into Wallachia, by Auſtrian deſerters, Ruſſians, Poles, and Turks. One of his detachments having approached within two leagues of the Auſtrian frontiers, the Imperial government has given orders to ten battalions of troops to cover Tranſylvania; and has declared to the Porte the neceſſity of occupying Wallachia, as a meaſure of ſafety. According to all accounts, the Turkiſh government was never in ſuch a ſtate of decrepitude and weakneſs as at preſent.

HALIFAX, Auguſt 5.

Sunday arrived in his Majeſty's ſhip Cambrian, Capt. Bradley, in 7 weeks from Portſmouth, Vice Admiral Sir Andrew Mitchell, commander of his Majeſty's ſhips in North America.

In the Houſe of Commons, on the 9th June, 70,000 men were voted for the ſea ſervice, for ſeven lunar months, commencing from June 18 1802, including 14000 marines on this occaſion Mr. Addington made the following obſervations:

"The Committee muſt be aware that no opinion could be inferred from the preſent vote, as to the permanent peace eſtabliſhment. So large a proportion of the navy was at preſent employed on foreign ſervice, that it was impoſſible to bring forward any peace eſtabliſhment, he thought that 30,000 would be all that would be neceſſary for the ſea ſervice. He begged the committee however, to underſtand that he did not pledge himſelf upon this ſubject, but ſuch was his opinion of the preſent ſtate of things that he thought 30,000 men would be enough, altho' he would not pledge himſelf to any ſpecific number: he looked forward with confidence to that ſpecific number in the enſuing year.

In the ſame debate the Secretary at War propoſed a reduction of the army, from the 24th June, agreeable to the following ſtatement:

All regiments, corps and companies, except the undermentioned, & 40 independent companies of invalids are to be diſbanded.

The following to remain as a peace eſtabliſhment:—

The two regiments of Life Guards at their preſent ſtrength.

The Royal Horſe Guards, Blues, 9 troops, reduced 22 men per troop.

The 7 regiments of Dragoon Guards, 9 regiments of heavy Dragoons, and 13 regiments of light Dragoons up to the 20th regiment inclaſive, 6 troops each of 75 rank and file per troop.

The three regiments of foot guards ſeven battalions, as at preſent.

All the regiments of foot to the 89th inclaſive, the Royals, and the 9th, have two battalions each, and the 100th regiment, ſix battalions. Each battalion is to conſiſt of ten companies of 75 rank and file each company, or 800 men a battalion, amounting in the whole to 84,602 infantry, and nearly 10,000 cavalry.

To provide for the ſupernumerary Captains now attached to ſeveral of the regiments, who would otherwiſe be put on half pay, or ſeconded on their reſpective corps they are to be poſted to the companies at preſent commanded by the field officers who are not in future to hold companies, with their rank as field officers.

A report having reached us ſome days ago of its being intended to make the Rifle Corps (Manningham's) an additional battalion of the 60th regiment, as ſuch we gave it. The following, however, is the arrangement:—That corps has been placed on the peace eſtabliſhment as a regiment of eighty riflemen per company.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.

The following is an account of the Commerce of England, for the laſt year, ending 18 June:—Exports in Colonial Produce 21,931,000. Britiſh Manufactures, 24,000,000.—Foreign Merchandize, 17,000,000.—Number of Ships employed, 18,858—tonnage 1,431,602.

Captain Gardwin, arrived at Boſton from Amſterdam, informs, that on the 5th July, 3 ſail of Dutch men of war with tranſports and troops were ready in the Texel, bound to the Cape of Good Hope. And that two frigates, with fifteen tranſports and troops were waiting a wind, being bound to the Dutch Colonies in the Weſt Indies.

A London paper of July 17, ſays—a few weeks more of fine weather only are wanting to inſure an abundant harveſt.

Ad. Villaret ſailed from Breſt early in July for Martinique, with two ſhips of the line, frigates, &c. with troops on board.

The Leander Packet ſailed from England, July 12, for New-York and Halifax.

BOSTON, September 1.

Agreeable to the treaty of Amiens the French have evacuated the kingdom of Naples.

The Engliſh papers are almoſt excluſively filled with accounts of a general election then taking place. The parliament was diſſolved the 29th June; and writs for electing a new parliament were immediately iſſued. All the leading men, of both parties, have been re-elected. Mr. Fox and Lord Gardner have been choſen in Weſtminſter.—Mr. Pitt has been returned by the Cambridge Univerſity. Grey, Sheridan, Wyndham, Tarleton, Wilberforce, Tierney, &c. &c. have all been returned.—Meſſrs. Curtis, Coombs, Anderſon and Price, repreſent London. There will not be any material alteration in the ſtrength of parties. Previous to the diſſolution the Parliament was occupied in fixing the peace eſtabliſhments.—The navy has been eſſentially reduced; and of the army 65,184 have been diſbanded; which, with other reductions in the department, Mr. Addington ſtated, would make a ſaving of ſeven millions.—A ſtrong eſtabliſhment was nevertheleſs to be kept up—"to ſhew," as a member expreſſed it, "a bold and ſteady front to the adamantine Republic of France." Commercial arrangements between Great Britain and France were on the tapis; though the merchants of Bourdeaux, Marſeilles and Lyons have remonſtrated againſt them. It had been rumoured, that on the meeting of the new Parliament, Mr. Pitt would reſume the helm, and the French Moniteur ſtyles him the ſkilful financier.

SECOND ÆRIAL EXCURSION.

MR. LOCKER'S ACCOUNT OF THE VOYAGE OF MONDAY.

MR. EDITOR,

Although the world has been already preſented with an account of a late Æriał excurſion, I flatter myſelf ſo much intereſt is ſtill entertained by the public for the ſafety of M. Garnerin, that the following particulars of his ſecond aſcent will prove acceptable to them:—The very unfavorable weather, attended with a heavy gale at South and South-Weſt, induced M. Garnerin to give up his intention of aſcending to diſplay the promiſed experiment of the Parachute. In this event it had been arranged that Mr. Sowden ſhould once more accompany him; but ſome miſunderſtanding having taken place between thoſe gentlemen, and having had ſome previous converſation on the preceeding day with M. Garnerin on the ſubject, I aſcended with him yeſterday afternoon, at ten minutes before five o'clock, according to my watch, from Lord's Cricket-ground. The ſtrong aſſurances of my companion, added to what I had read on the ſcience of æroſtation, and the experience of former æronauts, had ſo fully perſuaded me of my perfect ſecurity, that I enjoyed the wonderful and enchanting proſpect which now preſented itſelf with unmixed pleaſure. Although the denſe ſtate of the atmoſphere obſtructed diſtant objects in ſo great a degree, that our horizon was ſomewhat limited; the unuſual concourſe of ſpectators, which gradually diminiſhed to an undiſtinguiſhed maſs, and the view of great part of the metropolis, together with the ſurrounding country, ſtudded with houſes, and enlivened by the inhabitants moving in every direction, afforded me an entertainment well worth the purchaſe of any ſuppoſed danger. After throwing out ſome part of our baſlaſt, we aſcended very rapidly, and by the intervention of ſome thick clouds (which had much the appearance of a ſea of cotton beneath us, as deſcribed by Mr. Baldwyn, of Cheſter) we entirely loſt ſight of the earth. We moved with much rapidity, although our motion was to me perfectly imperceptible; and at length the clouds diſperſing, we again ſaw the country below us. I attempted in vain to aſcertain our ſituation by calling to my recollection the appearance of the country, which appeared to me more like a proſpect ſeen in a camera, when placed in a very elevated ſituation, than any thing to which I could compare it; I think a map is an incorrect compariſon, as the various objects are not as in nature, delineated with ſufficient minuteneſs to bear with a reſemblance. About this time M. Garnerin looked at his watch, and obſerving we had been five minutes on our voyage, propoſed to deſcend in about the ſame time. The perſual of Mr. Sowden's narrative led me to obſerve, with much attention, the power of hearing noiſes below; neither M. Garnerin nor myſelf could diſtinguiſh ſounds above the elevation of 3 or 4000 feet, though M. Garnerin imagines—a very confuſed ſound, but totally undiſtinguiſhable, may be heard conſiderably higher. We never attained a greater height, this day, by M. Garnerin's computation, than about 1,200 French toiſes, or 7,800 feet, as M. Garnerin being deſirous to return the ſame evening to town, did not chooſe to loſe a favorable opportunity of deſcending. At length we ſaw at a diſtance what proved afterwards to be Epping Foreſt, with a range of diſtant hills beyond, and obſerving an open champaign country, M. Garnerin opened the valve, and we began to deſcend. He directed me to call to ſome perſons employed in a field, as we approached the ground, to take hold of the ropes, which we had thrown out for that purpoſe, and recommended me to hold faſt by the cords, to avoid the ſhock on the balloon's firſt touching the earth. This precaution proved very neceſſary, as the force with which he deſcended was very conſiderable, occaſioned by the force of the wind, rather than by our ſpecific gravity, and the rebound bore us up again with velocity to the height of 150 or 200 feet. In re deſcending, we ſtruck againſt a tree, the ſhock of which gave M. Garnerin a ſevere blow on the back, and he obſerved, that this was the only occaſion, during a period of 12 years, in which he had been in the habit of æroſtation, and the 27th time he had aſcended, that he ever ſuffered ſuch an inconvenience.—Several of the peaſantry being now at hand, we were ſecured from any farther aſcent, and alighted from the car with perfect ſafety. We immediately enquired our ſituation, and found we had fallen into a field of Mr. Owen, at Chingford, in Eſſex, and, referring to our watches, obſerved we had made our voyage exactly in one quarter of an hour.—We diſpatched a meſſenger to Woodford for a poſt-chaiſe, and the inflammable air having evaporated, packed the balloon in the car, and had it conveyed to a ſmall inn at Chingford Green, adjoining which we had deſcended, from whence, after a flight repaſt on ſome proviſions we had brought with us, we ſet off for London, and arrived at M. Garnerin's, in Poland-ſtreet, a quarter after nine in the evening.

Although the mob, which ſurrounded us on our deſcent, were, as uſual, both troubleſome and officiouſly impertinent, we received great attention and aſſiſtance from Mr. Hughes, of the Stamp Office, London, and ſeveral other gentlemen who beheld our arrival. Attention would have been, however, inſured to us, if neceſſary, by the paper put into the hands of M. Garnerin, ſigned by his Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, the Dutcheſs of Devonſhire, Lords Belborough, Cathcart, and other perſons of diſtinction, who witneſſed our aſcenſion at Lord's Cricket-ground. I am, &c.

EXTRACT

From Reverend Dr. Laihrop's Eſſays.

MOST of the evils, which are matters of complaint at the preſent day, are ſuch as are in our own power to remedy. If we would be as virtuous as a people may be, we ſhould be as happy as a people need be.—Virtue would remove many of our grievances, and enable us to bear the reſt. It will be replied, "Virtue generally prevailing, might do great things; but this is not to be expected."—Will you then look for happineſs in ſome other way. You cannot ſucceed, unleſs the courſe of nature and the plan of the ſupreme government ſhould be reverſed."—But will it avail for me ſingly to be virtuous, when I cannot expect the generality will be ſo?"—Make the experiment: perhaps others will be as wiſe as you: your example may poſſibly have ſome influence: at leaſt you may relieve your own mind and lighten your own burdens. If general virtue help ſociety, private virtue will help the individual; and is there not another world, where your virtue will turn to your account, though it ſhould do but little good here.

PRESERVING WATER.

The ſociety for the encouragement of arts, &c. has awarded a gold medal to Gen. Benthan, for a new method of preſerving water perfectly ſweet during long voyages. The experiment was tried on board two ſloops of war, the Arrow and Dart, and appears to have terminated in the moſt ſatisfactory manner. Inſtead of ordinary ſtorage in caſks, ſixteen ranks or caſes adapted to the ſhape of the hold were placed in each veſſel, and filled with about forty tons of water, by means of which the water, occupied much leſs room in the ſhips than it would have done if caſks had been made uſe of. The tanks were made of wood accurately lined with ſheets of tinned copper, all the junctures of which were ſecured by ſolder, ſo that the water was no where in contact with any thing but the ſurface of tin. By way of compariſon about thirty tons of water were ſtowed on board each veſſel, in caſks, as uſual. The water in all the tanks on board one ſhip, and that in thirteen of the tanks on board the other was uniformly found to continue as pure as when it was firſt taken from the ſpring—that which was contained in the other three tanks was more or leſs tainted as that in the caſks was.—After the water had remained on board a ſufficient length of time, it was uſed out and the tanks replenished from time to time; but in ſome of the tanks the water was allowed to continue three years and a half; twenty-five gallons of which, being ſent to the ſociety, was found ſtill to be wholly unaltered. The accounts received this week from the Weſt-Indies, ſtate, that the crops have been ſo very abundant, as to lower the price of ſugar and rum, conſiderably, in all the Iſlands, and ſufficient ſhipping could not be procured to export them.—Price of rum in ſome Iſlands, is only 2s. 1d. this currency.

The Meaſles, which was imported in a brig from New-York ſome time ſince, has committed terrible havoc here, among the young children, particularly the whites, and the diſorder continues as rife as ever. The Small Pox was alſo imported from the ſame place; but none have died of it, as they generally inoculate.

LONDON, July 17.

The French frigate La Juſtice, taken by the Turks at Alexandria, has been fitted out in the moſt magnificent ſtyle, and lies at anchor before one of the palaces of the Sultan in the canal. It is even rumoured that ſhe is about to be reſtored to the French.

The public has for ſome time been acquainted with the loſs of the Prince the extra ſhip which was carried into the Mauritius. The following particulars may be relied on.—She ſailed from Madras in October laſt, with 3000 priſoners on board, under convoy of the Suffolk, of 74 guns, capt. Clarke, commander, who died three weeks after leaving that port. In ten degrees of South latitude, one evening the crew being aloft reefing top-ſails, the priſoners, each having a billet of wood concealed under their jackets, came upon deck, and having diſtributed themſelves according to the previous arrangement of their plot, ſucceeded in ſecuring the ſhip's people without bloodſhed. They got poſſeſſion of the ſignal book, and which is ſingular, remained two days in company of the Suffolk, regularly anſwering ſignals, until they were able to make off undiſcried in a ſquall, and ſafely reached the Mauritius.

A plaintiff and defendam once appealed to Alexander the Great.—"My friends (ſaid he) which ever way I determine, I know one of you will be diſpleaſed with me. It will be better, then, that you conſult God, and your own conſciences, & do what is right."

A certain Sultan hearing that a man of wit was reckoned in perſon like himſelf, was curious to ſee him, and ſent for him to court. Upon his introduction, he ſaid, "I remember your mother well. She was a handſome woman, and uſed to attend the Harams of the Sultan and nobility with rich goods and jewelry, as a brokereſs, reaping much profit from her honorable calling." The wit underſtanding the Sultan's alluſion, replied, "not ſo: my mother was a ſecluded woman, who never left her houſe, and knew nothing of trade; but my father was an eminent deſigner, who was frequently called to the gardens of the Royal and noble Harams, to lay out, flowers, and plant trees."—The Sultan admired his wit, and made him one of his principal courtiers. This anecdote is from the Arabic, and the elegant reader, will, no doubt, conipare it with the ſtory ſo coarſely related by Lewis XIV.

The following curious circumſtance is tranſmitted to us as a fact: A farmer on Thurſday attended at Penzance market, for the third time, with a buſhel of potatoes, for which he could not find a purchaſer. At length, his patience being exhauſted, he ſwore, that rather than carry them back, he would ſell them for a pinch of ſnuff. A perſon preſent immediately accepted the bargain, and received the potatoes. A year ſince, the ſame meaſure of this root was ſold for 26s.

Prince Subow has fought one of his duels at Carlſbad, with M. Giebout: one of the parties is ſaid to have been killed.

The Elector of Mayence is to have Ratiſbon for his reſidence. He will alſo have the biſhoprick of that city, ſeveral ſmall prelatures, and the bailliage Aſchaffenburg, beſides a million and a half of florins annually, from other ſtates of the empire.

A letter from Madras ſays, "his Highneſs Azeemal Dowlah, the nabob of the Carnatic, has ſent home four letters addreſſed to the Chairman of the Eaſt India Company, the Prince of Wales, the Marquis Cornwallis, and Lord Hobart. His highneſs alſo ſhipped two boxes, addreſſed to the King, & one to the Prince of Wales."

Accounts from Dreſden ſtate, that the Count of Saxe is the perſon who has been killed in a duel by Prince Subow.

July 18. Gen. Richepance has tranſmitted another official diſpatch from Guadaloupe, dated the 29th May, in which he gives an account of the complete extinction of the inſurrection in that iſland. After recapitulating all the operations of the expedition under his command to May 25, continues his narrative, from which it appears that this victory was dearly bought on the part of the French. He enters upon a detail of the different actions, and ſtates the reſult of the different operations, that the Blacks were driven in on all ſides to a plantation called Auglemont, where three hundred blew themſelves up in the Manſion houſe, which ſeems to have been one of their depots, and the few that ſurvived the exploſion were put to the ſword. The French troops are ſtated to have loſt on this occaion the advanced poſts of two of their columns. The general in concluding his diſpatch, obſerves, "This laſt affair has deſtroyed the inſurrection in its ſource; the chiefs are dead, & the followers diſarmed, have ſubmitted and reſumed their accuſtomed labors. The white ſoldiers who were unable to quit the iſland, were at the time of our arrival, collected in Fort Charles. The execution of the plan laid for blowing them up, and which was on the point of being carried into effect, failed in conſequence of the promptitude with which our troops purſued the enemy on the evacuation of the fort."

Some accounts reached town laſt night relative to the feſte of the 14th. They agree in ſtating that it was dull, inanimate, and ſcarcely worthy notice. The parade alone was conducted with ſome degree of military pomp, and the number of troops was ſo great, that the cavalry were compelled to remain upon the place de Carouſel, which had been cleared away for the purpoſe, whilſt the infantry filled the ſpace between the Palace and the iron railing which ſeparates the Court yard from the Palace.

The newly incorporated Malmelukes, about 150 in number, richly dreſſed in turkiſh habits, and well mounted, made their firſt public appearance on the parade. Bonaparte ſeemed much pleaſed with them. Deputies from all the corps preſented themſelves, and to many new regiments were given new colors. They were all however, to meet at Verſailles, for the purpoſe of aſſiſting at the grand dinner which the Conſul intended to give them in the great gallery of the palace. Madame Bonaparte returned to Paris from Plombiers on the 12th. The Theatres were all open to the public gratis on the evening preceding the feſtival; and when the accounts came away, preparations were making for a general illumination, and a concert in the garden of the Thuilleries. No tickets were delivered for the gallery of the Palace.

We learn that the Pirate Egee, who ſome time ſince made his eſcape after his capture in the Perſian Gulph, has been retaken in the hill country of Keram, is about to be brought down in Chains to Guzzerat.

The man who was lately bound to keep the peace for threatening to cut off his wife's head, proteſted that he only wiſhed to make her a good woman.

The intelligence from the hop market is of a diſagreeable kind. The plantations in Kent are daily becoming worſe; the vermin have appeared in great numbers; in ſeveral grounds the plants are turning black and in a ſtate of decay. On Thurſday bets were offered at Canterbury againſt 45,000l. old duty. The laſt prices are, bags 3l. 5s. very fine 6l. 10s. ſuperfine Eaſt Kents 7l. 7s.

MADRID, MAY 10.

The following is an extract of a letter, written from the city of Lorca,* by one of its inhabitants, to his friend in this city, in which he gives an account of the dreadful accident which befel that city from the breaking a bank or mound, which was conſtructed a few years ago to contain the rain water for the purpoſe of watering the fields in the neighbourhood of that city. The number drowned by this misfortune amounted to 6000.

"I made known to you, Sir, that on the laſt day of April, (which will be memorable for ages to come) at half paſt three o'clock in the afternoon, a youth ran into my houſe and gave me the lamentable information that the bank had given way—he accompanied theſe expreſſions with ſo many tears and ſuch ſobbing, that he could ſcarcely articulate or I underſtand him. On receiving this fatal notice, I ran with great precipitation into the ſtreet, where I found a general commotion amongſt the people, who were leaving their dwellings to put themſelves in a place of ſafety. I returned to my houſe, and by my cries collected my wife, children and family: they ſaw my trouble; we all ran precipitately to Calvario, to eſcape the great danger which threatened us. We there found a conſiderable number of people filled with trouble and dread, calling upon God and begging for mercy with loud cries and lamentations. I then ſaw vaſt quantities of water deſcending from the hills, which directed itſelf with the greateſt fury imaginable towards San Diego, ſpreading itſelf over all the fields, having its general direction towards the olive trees. I left my family at Calvario, and went to the ſtreet De las Cova, from thence I ſaw the water breaking down the Convent of Mercy; arriving at the Gate of Bordera, the market no longer appeared: I paſſed to the Houſe Me Miralles; they there told me that houſes, families, and every thing elſe had been ſwept away from the Botica to the Quartel on both ſides. The water covered the hills and carried away the whole population on the right of the fountain. Our Corregidor was in the Palace directing aſſiſtance to be given: he was ſurrounded by many people; the Generale was beat, and every thing was done for the tranquility of the people. At this time news was received that at the mill of Beauna-Veita they had found the Lord Counſellor, who had been drowned; immediately orders were given to the people to bring his body; at 12 o'clock at night it was brought to Caſtillo. I repaired to the Gate of St. Gines; I there ſaw that the ſteeple of the Convent of Mercy was threatened with ruin. I repaired to the Gate of John Antonio Albuquerque, where at this ſeaſon his wife and family reſide; they had fled on horſes. Menjoni was commiſſioned to collect the dead bodies in the Ovala.

"At break of day the following morning, we heard nothing but lamentations; ſome looking for their parents, others for their children; women ſeeking for their huſbands, and all trying to unite their families. At the Gate called St. Gines, we can no longer ſee the ſcites where the houſes ſtood; every thing is deſolation from the Convent of Mercy to the Hoſpital of Women: the houſes carried away from the barrier alone are reckoned at 400, and what are left are greatly injured, as the water was in all the ſecond ſtories. The ſacred veſſels of the Convent of Mercy were found at two leagues diſtance; the Church of San Chriſtoval is not much injured, though the water was up to the cornices. San Diego is abandoned, the Saints are all removed; the ſame is the caſe with La Merceu, becauſe mud and traſh are left in them two yards deep. Every thing is taken from the Tower of La Merceu, as it threatened to fall to ruin. Trenches are dug without the town, where they are going to bury the dead, without diſtinction of perſons, and where they are now collecting them in carriages. All the fields and gardens, from the Garden de Garces to the road that paſſes this, have been a river. No inhabitants are left; people, animals, olive trees, gardens, all have periſhed and are ruined. It is fortunate the whole city did not ſuffer the ſame fate; this would have been the caſe if the bank had not given way where it did, and the water taken a direction to the left of San Diego. The Lord Counſellor might have been ſaved, as was the ſon of his aſſiſtant and his ſervant, but he confided in his mules, and periſhed with them and his coachman. People are ſent to Velez to grind grain; we have no longer any mills; of thirteen which we had, only that of Buena-Viſta remains, and that is injured—of oil-mills not one is left; of the greateſt part of Santa Quiteria only the foundations are left.—The rivulets and groves are full of timber and furniture—The books and accounts of Ramon Garces were found at the farm-houſe of Sutullena, and 34,000 reals belonging to him alſo.—As yet I have neither eat nor ſlept: all is confuſion and diſmay; all are weeping over the dreadful accident. At preſent I can ſend you no farther particulars on this ſubject, but I will venture to ſay, that the damage will be much greater when the waters have paſſed twenty leagues, which is the diſtance from hence to the ſea, and when they have encountered Murcia, Orihuela, and other places in their way."

* Lorca is a large city of Spain, in the kingdom of Murcia, ſituated on the river Guadalentin, about 20 miles from Carthagena. Its inhabitants are what are called New Chriſtians, being the deſcendants of the converted Moors. Though this city is large, it has been much to decay, and is thinly inhabited.

SELECTIONS

FROM LATE LONDON PAPERS.

A correſpondent has favored us with the following Anecdote, which occurred to him on reading an account in our paper reſpecting a ſhip found buried twenty feet under ground, in digging for a new ſince-way at Dantzig. It is extracted from Pozzi's Retroſpection:

"About the middle of the twelfth century, notwithſtanding ſuch numbers of people went to the Cruſades; thoſe who were left at home found leiſure to lay the foundations of Fribourg, whilſt Utrecht was ſeen daily encreaſing; Dantzig too muſt have been a place famous for trade, or elſe the ſtory would ſoon fall to the ground (though told prettily enough) concerning a rich widow, who gave the maſter of the ſhip commiſſion to bring her thence the moſt valuable commodity that could be found in that vaſt general mart. Her lover, the Captain, loaded his veſſel with wheat; which the proud dame diſdaining, cauſed it all to be thrown overboard. Heavy judgments (ſay the old books) follow ſuch arrogance and folly; the haven grew flat where they threw out the corn, at Staveren, a little town in Friezeland; and made it dangerous landing for the future. The guilty ſhip funk in its next voyage at Dantzig; and a ſtrange diſorder narrowing the widow's throat, ſhe was ſoon puniſhed by being ſtarved to death."

A letter from Poonah ſtates, that an epidemic diſorder has lately committed great ravages in that city and the adjacent country; but it appears to have been fatal to the natives only, and that Europeans of every deſcription have hitherto eſcaped the calamity.

Accounts from Buſſorah ſtate, that the plague is making a rapid progreſs in the vicinity, in conſequence of which a number of inhabitants had removed to more favorable ſituations.

Rode, the celebrated violin of Paris, though very young, is choſen by Bonaparte as leader of his private band; his ſalary is fixed at ten thouſand livres per annum, about 400 guineas.

St. Germain L'Auxerrois was formerly the pariſh church, which the court when at Paris, attended; but St. Roche is now that of the preſent government. The Conſul Cambaceres, to whom appears to fall particularly an attention to the ceremonies of the church, has lately aſſiſted ſeveral times at maſs, and no longer frequents St. Germain, though his nephew is the curate of it. The Conſular guard eſcorts him to his ſeat, where a fine carpet, and crimſon velvet cuſhion, are placed for him, and where all the honors of the Catholic church, incenſe, holy water, &c. &c. are offered him.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.

Letters are received in town by the ſhip Shepherdeſs from Cape Francois, of ſo late a date as the 27th Auguſt, which mention that all is perfectly tranquil there; that the markets are dull; and that a great mortality prevails amongſt the troops, of whom from 50 to 100 die daily.

Extract of a letter from Cape Francois, Aug. 16.

"The ſequeſtered plantations have not yet been returned to their reſpective owners. It is refuſed fully to reſtore them. General meaſures are expected to be taken when the government ſhall have ſufficient force to command events, viz. When the whole body of troops which is expected will be arrived, viz. By the new general code every proſecution for debts contracted before the 23d September, 1793, of what nature they may be, is ſuſpended till the French government will have pronounced on the reſpective reclamations of the planters, and of the French merchants; till then their intereſts are equally ſuſpended. The diſarming of the blacks ordered thro' all the colony, has been effected without difficulty in many places; but in ſome others, principally in mountainous parts, it has been the cauſe of new inſurrections, and according to their cuſtom the blacks have pillaged, burnt and murdered in ſuch parts. Troops have been ſent againſt them, and have not always been entirely ſucceſsful.

"The negroes, taken in arms, inſtead of being hanged as heretofore receive ſevere whipping and other puniſhments which terrify them more, and cauſe them more readily to ſurrender. But in ſome places they ſtill continue to com mit depredations."

MISCELLANEOUS.

ON INDUSTRY.

"This is a country which affords all the means not only of ſubſiſtence, but of wealth. But means muſt be applied, or the end is not attained. Greater induſtry may be neceſſary here, than in ſome other climates; but this is no unhappineſs. A people that grow rich ſuddenly and without much labour, ſoon become luxurious and effeminate. They preſently ſink again into poverty, or their wealth is confined to a few. They loſe their ſtrength and vigour and the ſpirit of liberty; and fall an eaſy prey to the firſt powerful invader or ambitious uſurper. A habit of induſtry is firſt acquired by neceſſity; and, once acquired, it may continue for a while, after the neceſſity abates, unleſs circumſtances alter too ſuddenly. It ſtrengthens the body, braces the mind and aids other virtues. It gives patience in adverſity, courage in danger and perſeverance in difficulty. No people ever maintained their liberty long after they ceaſed to be induſtrious and became diſſolute and luxurious." (Balance.

From the Balance.

The ſeed of Clover was firſt bro't to England from Brabant in Flanders, ſoon after the concluſion of the horrible civil wars, occaſioned by the rival claims of the houses of York and Lancaster: and the circumstances of its being brought originally from Flanders has given it the name, as well in some parts of this country as in England, of Flanders grass. The introduction and cultivation of this grass in England, so exceedingly altered and improved the face of the country, in a few years, that it was thought to have indemnified the nation, in point of property for the ravages and wastes of the late wars.

The white Clover makes the best of pasture. It nourishes and fattens animals beyond any other grass. It gives a rich and delicious flavour to mutton and to the milk of cows, and produces butter and cheese of the highest excellence. The red Clover, while it is productive in the best of hay for horses, at the same time, enriches the ground. As it is tap-rooted, like the Carot, it draws a portion of its nourishment from a depth below the surface, to which the roots of most other plants do not extend; and after the sward is turned over by the plough, and the roots of this Clover are dissolved, they make a fine manure, and, in a measure, prepare the ground for wheat or almost any other crop.

The tea-plant in China is about five or six feet in height: it grows in valleys and at the bottom of mountains. That which grows in rocky ground is best. Its stem appears dry, its leaves beautifully green, and it bears a flower resembling the wild white rose. The Song-lo tea, or green tea, grows on the same kind of shrub, which is cropped and prevented from rising to its natural height. The Bonea and Souchong teas are most esteemed throughout the Chinese empire; as agreeing better with the stomach, being in their estimation lighter, sweeter and more delicate to the taste than Song-lo, or green tea.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, Oct. 9.

On Thursday last the Honorable Chief Justice KILMSTER and family embarked for Kingston on their way to Quebec—at which place he will in future reside, having been appointed His Majesty's Chief Justice for the province of Lower Canada.

The Honorable Judge ALLCOCK will succeed him as Chief Justice of the Province of Upper Canada.

We understand Mr. Cochrane is appointed Assistant Judge vice the Honorable Judge Allcock promoted as above.

In addition to the 600 highlanders mentioned in our last as having arrived at Quebec, we have to add the number of 427 also arrived at that port on the 5th ult. These people, it is said, are destined for this Province, and will without doubt be a valuable acquisition, as they make excellent farmers.

POETRY.

MUTUAL LOVE.

COULD I fancy that for me
Thou'a transform though could'st spare!
Or, of what I feel for thee,
E'en a thousandth part could'st share;—

When I greet thee, could'st thou deign
One kind look to bid me live;
Or, one kiss return again,
Sweet return for those I give;—

All dissolv'd in tender joy,
High my rapture's heart would beat;
Fondly at thy feet I'd sigh,
Fondly call my bondage sweet!

Dear the change of mutual vows!
Love return'd, new love must claim;—
And the spark, that faintly glows,
Shall burst an ardent flame!

Foreign News.

ADRIANOPLE, June 17.

We experience all the evils of rebellion and military anarchy. Twenty thousand Albanians, under the orders of Hake Pacha, were charged to protect Romelia from the bands of robbers who desolated the country, and from the enterprizes of Guirgi Pacha, whom the Sublime Porte has declared a rebel, and deprived of his dignities; but Hake Pacha, instead of keeping the field with his troops, left them at Adrianople, in inactivity, and neglected to pay them, though he had received large sums for the purpose, and had levied contributions upon all the towns of his Pachalick. This conduct roused the spirit of insubordination in the Albanian garrison, and when they learnt that Hake Pacha was replaced in his government by Omer Pacha, they penetrated by force into the palace of the disgraced commander, and pillaged his treasure and his property.

Omer Pacha, in order to preserve Adrianople from the fresh acts of violence which the Albanians might commit, resolved to send them from the city, after having put their pay in a course of payment; but he had no time to complete this evacuation—Scarcely had he been invested with the government, when he was disgraced like his predecessor, and three thousand Albanians who remained at Adrianople, not relying any longer upon the payment which Omer Pacha had promised them, got possession of his son, and threatened the city with pillage; but were forced at length to retire.

But the removal of the Albanians cannot ensure the safety of Adrianople. They have announced that they will not release Omer's son till they have received their pay—and the unhappy father has already ineffectually delivered up to them all his treasures, without being able to complete the ransom of his son.

The country round Adrianople is now at the mercy of this garrison; they revenge themselves upon the scattered and defenceless inhabitants, for the disappointment they experienced themselves in their designs upon the city.—They communicate their spirit of revolt to the other Albanian troops, to whom the defence of Romelia had been entrusted, and in the midst of these seditious movements, the party of the rebel Guirgi Pacha encreases daily.

This chief is only seven leagues from Adrianople; it is faid that he has already eight thoufand Albanians with him, who, under pretence of arrears of pay being due to them, have formed the plan of attacking this city, if we do not ranfom it by a contribution of eight thoufand purfes. The bands of robbers aflemble again—Adrianople is putting itfelf in a ftate of defence; and the inhabitants are refolved upon a vigorous defence. But if the country be ravaged, if the communications be cut off, if the Porte cannot adopt efficacious meafures for our protection, nor rely upon the fidelity and difcipline of the troops to whom our defence is entrufted, it is difficult for us to look to the future without the deepeft affliction.—(Moniteur.)

We learn from the frontiers of Turkey, that Ariadnople is in the power of the rebels of Romelia, and that 80,000 Janiffaries have been aflembled in haffe at Conftantinople, to oppofe their further progrefs. It is added, that thefe troops committed at Conftantinople, the greateft exceffes, and that every meafure was in conf-quence adopted to accelerate their departure.—(Citoyen Francais, July 24.)

LONDON, July 22—23.

The Emperor of Morocco has declared war againft the United States. A notice to this effect has juft been given by Mr. Irving, the American Conful refident in London, to the Commanders of American veffels. The fhips of the United States bound to the Mediterranean, are directed to rendezvous in the Bay of Cadiz, where a convoy will be furnifhed them from time to time, out of the fquadron of Commodore Morris now upon that ftation.

A private letter from Bombay, by the laft expreis, mentions, that the Difpatch, Captain Hutchinfon, was fafely arrived there with a cargo of fugar, from Cochin China. The Captain ftated, that the King had iffued an Edict, by which free ingrefs into all parts of Cochin China had been granted to all Englifh veffels, with exemption from port charges, and duties of every defcription.

This morning were received Paris papers of the 20th inft. Letters from Brufiels fay, that the Chief Conful is daily expected there. But the time of his departure does not appear to be known in Paris. Touffaint ftill remains on board Le Heros, in Breft harbour.

The Bulletin de Paris contains a letter from Hamburg, which pretends to give the project of a new Conftitution intended to be adopted by the French.—It ftates that France is to be called "the Empire and Republic of the Gauls," and her Chief Magiftrate "the Sublime Prefident of the Empire and Republic;" the Second Conful to be Arch-Chancellor and Vice-Prefident of the Empire; and the Third Conful, Arch Treafurer; that the Confervative Senate, and the Legiflative Body, and Tribunate, are to be abolifhed and replaced by a College of Laws and a Senate, which latter body is to regifter the edicts of the Government, and the acts of the College of Laws. It is however to be obferved, that if any fuch meafure is in agitation, it is rather ftrange that the firft mention of it fhould come from fo diftant a quarter as Hamburg.

July 26.

A confiderable time has elapfed fince we were informed that a French fquadron had failed from one of the ports of Italy, the deftination of which, tho' myfterious, many people conceived was to fome part of the Turkifh dominions. From Paris we have learnt fome very intereffing particulars on this fubject. According to general report, they failed for the purpofe of taking poffeffion of the Morea. The deftination of thefe troops (11,000) is indeed no longer concealed, and fome intelligence of the fuccefs of the expedition is fpeedily expected.

It is faid Lord Caftlereagh will be the ultimate fucceffor of Lord Wellefley; and that his Lordfhip is only lately appointed to the Prefidency of the Board of Controul for the purpofe of preparing himfelf for the Government of Bengal.

Paris Journals to the 24th inft. have come to hand. According to a letter from the French Minifter of the Interior to General Jourdan, and a decree of the Conful, it appears that the fale of Piedmont is decided. The Confuls have refolved to keep it for France, and affign as a motive, that the King of Sardinia, by abdicating the Crown, has difcharged the Piedmontefe from their oath of allegiance!

Touffaint Louverture is arrived at Paris. He is of courfe in a ftate of arreft, and his trial will not be long delayed. Some perfons confign him by anticipation to imprifonment for life in the Temple, but the more prevailing opinion is, that, from prudential motives, he will experience the clemency of the Firft Conful.

According to the laft accounts from Conftantinople, the French Ambaffador Citizen Ruffin, had been invited to frequent confultations with the Divan upon the meafures to be adopted in the prefent perturbed ftate of the Turkifh empire. It is faid, that by an order of Bonaparte, he had difpatched a courier to Paffwan Oglow with propofals of mediation: a number of Paffwan's partizans at Conftantinople, many of them perfons of rank, had been ftrangled.—The Captain Pacha ftill enjoys the higheft favour: and it is intended that he fhall head an army of 80,000 men againft the Pacha of Widdin, fhould he reject the mediation of the French Government.

The diftirbances in Turkey are not the only pretext afforded to the French at this time, for equipping armaments and increafing their military arrangements. The intelligence from Genoa, refpecting the piratical depredations of the Algerines, furnifhes them with fair grounds for another vifit to the coaft of Africa, which may be the more readily embraced, as an eftabliihment at Algiers would be an acquifition of the higheft importance to France, either with a reference to the influence it would give over Tunis and the affiftance it would thus afford to her views on Egypt; or, with a reference to a maritime war with Britain.

July 28.

Yefterday afternoon a deputation from the Turkey Company waited on Lord Hawkefbury, refpecting the prefent ftuation of Turkey. His Lordfhip affured them that Miniflers had no reafon to think that any attempt to violate its integrity would be made on any fide; and as to the fuppofed conceffion which Turkey had made to France, of the free navigation of the Black Sea for a limited period, Government had certainly no knowledge of the circumftance. He added, that if the Porte fhould judge proper to form an arrangement of that nature with the French Republic, the merchants might be affured, that no privilege would be granted to the latter which would not be equally enjoyed by his Majefty's fubjects.

July 29.

The Bank of Amfterdam has aflumed the fyftem upon which its affairs were conducted under the old Government.

The Paris papers received this morning, deny that there was any intention on the part of France to enter into any commercial treaty with this country.

July 31.

At the moment when it was believed the funds would rally, they yefterday experienced a ftill further and a very heavy depreffion. Whether this was the effect of appearances on the continent, we know not, but it was not believed in the city. After the fettling day laft week, many perfons bought in ftock, thinking the price would recover; but finding it unexpectedly, heavy on Tuefday and yefterday, they took the alarm, as if fome caufe exifted, which they knew not, and fold out.—Hence the great fall, Omnium being done at one time at 6 difcount.

Extract of a letter from Gibraltar, dated June 24.

"Sir Robert Barlow, of his Majefty's fhip Triumph, of 74 guns, and a frigate, have failed for Algiers, in conſequence of the Algerines detaining three Engliih veſſels, on pretence of their having uſed falſe Mediterranean paſſes, or old ones, that had been uſed for other veſſels.—The Algerines have condemned the veſſels and cargoes, and told them. We expect Sir Robert will only demand the men from ſlavery. The Algerines lately ſent a frigate and two xebecks down to the back of the rock, with an intention to take a Portugueſe frigate, and a line of battle ſhip, cruizing in the Gut; they only met with the frigate, within our ſight: the two xebecks boarded her, and carried her away to Algiers, after murdering nearly all on board.—We expect they will take ſome more of them ſoon.

June 30.

"An American frigate, commanded by capt. M'Neil, a ſhort time ago fell in with 3 corſairs, belonging to Tunis, in chace of a Venetian veſſel, near Sicily; and capt. M'N. from the ſimilarity of their colors, miſtaking them for Tripolitan veſſels, immediately attacked them; and after a moſt bloody action, in which he loſt a number of officers and men, he ſunk two of the enemy, the third making her eſcape, much ſhattered.—This will inevitably occaſion a rupture between the Dey of Tunis and the Americans."

"Sir James Saumarez, in the Caeſar, arrived here from Minorca, on the 25th inſt. with the Pomone frigate and four tranſports, with Generals Clephan and Moncrief, and having on board the greater part of the troops of the garriſon of Minorca, which we have now entirely evacuated. They all proceed to England the firſt fair wind. General Willot (the ſame who made his eſcape from Cayenne, in company with Pichegru is alſo on board of a tranſport in the bay, in his way to England.

"The Opthalmia is ſtill exceedingly common in the garriſon; and it is now poſitively known to be highly infectious, a number of the recruits from England having caught it ſince their arrival, from having joined thoſe regiments where it was prevalent. One regiment has nearly two hundred men in the hoſpital with the complaint."

Our intelligent correſpondent at Hamburg aſſures us, that the ratification of a new treaty of alliance between Pruſſia and France reached Berlin on the 12th ult. The object of this treaty, he obſerves, is not confined to the buſineſs of indemnities, but embraces many changes which are hereafter to be effected in the political ſtate of Europe, and more immediately in the North & Eaſt of Germany.

We have a letter from Brunſwick, of the 11th, which contains the following paſſages:—"The King of Pruſſia is become an enthuſiaſtic admirer of the political as well as military character of Bonaparte; and has abandoned the wary policy of the Great Frederick, for the purpoſe of ſharing as much as poſſible in the projects of boundleſs ambition, formed by the preſent Ruler of France. Time alone will ſhew how far this connexion may ſerve the intereſts of the Pruſſian Monarchy; not only in regard to Germany, whoſe conſtitution is deſtroyed, but alſo in reference to the Cabinets of Auſtria and Ruſſia, whoſe future ſpeculations will, doubtleſs, find powerful oppoſition in the new engagements which have been formed againſt them at Paris, now the focus of political intrigue. In Pruſſia, the army is the idol of the King, who devotes every conſideration to its improvement; and who thus expends vaſt ſums, ſeverely exacted from the trading part of the community."

August 2.

Letters from Seinitu of the 5th ſtate, that the janiſſaries ſent from Belgrade, againſt Juſſuma Aga, have been beat in a new engagement; they loſt their chief together with baggage and ammunition. The enemy have advanced as far as Jagodina. This ſecond defeat has ſpread great alarm at Belgrade. The janiſſaries ſpeedily formed a new corps to check the progreſs of the enemy. They have made to march, all thoſe in a ſtate fit to bear arms, without diſtinction to age or rank. It is now known with certainty, that Juſſuma Aga, was diſpatched by Paſſwan Oglou, who charged him to take Belgrade, to extend his domains, and enſure his independence. According to a letter from Hermanſtadt, of the 11th of this month, the Prince of Wallachia, has ſet out from Cronſtadt for Schoſſbourg, with a guard of honor. The Porte has propoſed to the Prince of Muldavia to aſſume his place; but it is doubted whether he will accept this offer.

A letter from Cadiz of the 30th of June, ſtates, that their diſputes with the Regency of Algiers are amicably adjuſted—a treaty of peace was ſigned on the 19th inſt. between the two governments—and hopes are entertained that a ſimilar treaty will ſhortly be concluded with the Regency of Tunis.

The preſervation of the commercial and political liberties of Hamburgh, which has been fully confirmed by Syndic Doorman, who has returned thither from Paris, has occaſioned the greateſt joy in that city. Bonaparte in his firſt interview with the Syndic, is ſtated to have behaved with uncommon haughtineſs and rudeneſs, terming Hamburg a neſt of rapine, and the members of its government, pitiful and puſillanimous freebooters.

Two plans are propoſed to recruit the public coffers of France, viz. the ſale of the privilege of killing game, for which ſixty millions are expected; or a paper currency, to be ſupported by the landed intereſt, i. e. by thoſe who purchaſed the national domains.

The Moniteur contains a long article from Genoa, which thoſe who are of a ſuſpicious turn of mind cannot but regard as important. It relates to the captures of veſſels of different nations by the Algerines, and cloſes with the following remark:—"The French government will not permit ſuch inſults to go unpuniſhed; and if other powers ſuffer their flags to be inſulted, & their commerce to be pillaged, the Firſt Conſul will maintain inviolable, in the Mediterranean, the honor of the French flag, and guarantee the ſecurity which he has promiſed to all commercial ſpeculations."

August 5.

Mr. Fiere will be the new Ambaſſador at Madrid; and he ſucceeded at Liſbon by Lord R. Fitzgerald.

The Moniteur of the 31ſt ult. contains a decree for diſtributing all the perſons who have received arms of honor for brilliant actions performed during the late war, into the ſixteen cohorts of the Legion of Honor. Annexed to the Moniteur are ſome ſupplementary ſheets, containing the names and actions of thoſe perſons.

On the 30th June, the Baltic was agitated by a moſt violent ſtorm, in which a Swediſh brig was ſunk and ſix Ruſſian frigates were very much damaged in their rigging.

The Ruſſian fleet, conſiſting of four ſhips of the line and ſeveral frigates, under the command of Admiral Couſchetſchoff, which lay at anchor in the road of Cronſtadt, and was to have ſailed to exerciſe the ſea Cadets, has alſo ſuffered much damage in its rigging & maſts.

An article from the Hague ſtates, that the legiſlative body is convoked for the 2d inſt. for the purpoſe of paſſing an amneſty for all political crimes. It is alſo rumoured that another cauſe for the meeting of this aſſembly is, a demand made by the Portuguese agent to raiſe a loan of 24 millions in Holland for the ſervice of his country.

By accounts from Switzerland of the 4th ult. it appears that a dreadful ſtorm of hail and rain occurred at Lawis; all the vines, corn, and every article in the fields and gardens were deſtroyed. Upwards of 3000 trees, many of which produced chefnuts and almonds, were rooted from the ground. Moſt of the houſes were unroofed.—The ſtorm extended to the Italian Republic, where the damage it occaſioned is inculculable.

Hamburgh, Bremen, Lubeck, Frankfort, and the other free Imperial cities, are to form a department in the Germanic Diet; but are not to have a vote in caſes where the Empire may be engaged in war; as in all wars they are to be conſidered and treated as neutral.

August 7.

The accounts from Vienna mention, that the retreat of the rebel troops into Wallachia was no more than feint, and that they quickly returned and recommenced hoſtilities. One body which had paſſed the Auſtrian frontier of Tranſylvania, was repulſed by the regiment of Spleny. and complaints were tranſmitted to the invoited Pacha of Widden, who denies having given any orders to this purpoſe, and that thoſe troops are not under his orders; finally, he conſents that the Auſtrian Generals ſhall treat ſuch as pals the frontier as banditti, and freebooters.

August 8.

A letter received at Hull from Leghorn, dated July 7, ſtates, that the ſeas in that quarter are ſo infeſted with ſo many Algerine and Turkiſh veſſels, that no veſſels of war with them can navigate.—A number of pirates are likewiſe upon the coaſt, ſuppoſed to be the crews of French privateers. Two Imperial veſſels have been found on the coaſt of Sicily, one near Marſeilles, and ſeveral near Leghorn and Genoa without any perſon on board.

Private letters from Hamburgh ſtate, that a French army of 40,000 men is ordered to the left bank of the Rhine, and will penetrate into Germany, ſhould any party trelpaſs the limits of ſuch countries as have been marked out for indemnities.

The Duke of Modena has at length accepted the Brifgaw in compenſation for loſſes in Italy.

Mr. Archibald Hamilton Rowan, who eſcaped from cuſtody in Ireland, reſides with his family at Altona, and is viſited by all the perſons of conſideration in the neighbourhood.—Sir George Rumbold, our Charge d'Affairs at Hamburgh, is mentioned as being among the number.

Some recent regulations have been adopted at Gibraltar, which impoſe on the inhabitants, who are natives of various countries, faſhions of dreſs; compel thoſe who wear whiſkers to cut them off, with a variety of ſimilar ordinances.

WILMINGTON, Sept. 18.

EARTHQUAKES!

By the brig Hornet, Captain Love, from Cumana, upon the Spaniſh Main. On Saturday the 3d of July, a ſhock of an Earthquake was felt in Cumana, and along the main to Barcelona, La Guira, and the city of Carracas. It happened at midnight, and laſted about twenty-five ſeconds. No other damage was done than cracking the weakeſt of the houſes, and occaſioning a conſiderable alarm—and on Saturday the 14th of Auguſt, between 11 and 12 o'clock A. M. a very remarkably violent ſhock was alſo felt there. Its duration was about twelve ſeconds, but ſo ſevere, that almoſt every houſe in the town was torn to pieces and ruined! A conſiderable number were ſhook down, and ſome perſons killed. The agitation of the ground was ſo violent as to open in ſeveral places, from whence ſprung freſh water. It was very difficult to ſtand without ſupport. A ſhip that was upon the ſtocks was moved ſix inches in an eaſterly direction, and ſeveral houſes were alſo moved from three to ſix feet in the ſame direction. In ſome places the ground ſunk two feet, and in others roſe as much. It was attended, as is generally the caſe, with a diſmal roaring noiſe under ground. The diſtreſs and alarm occaſioned is indeſcribable. The houſes were deſerted, and tents erected in the ſtreets. The damage was eſtimated at two hundred thouſand dollars. The earth continued ſhaking ſlightly at intervals until Tueſday the 17th Auguſt, when we ſailed—and about three hours after we left Cumana, being about five leagues diſtant from it and the neareſt land (of ſoundings) we felt on board a ſudden and ſevere ſhock, which no doubt has completed the deſtruction of the ſhattered houſes in Cumana!—The churches being lofty buildings were all unroofed. According to the cuſtom of Catholic countries, the Holy Virgin was carried thro' the ſtreets, night and day, elegantly dreſſed and illuminated, followed by thousands singing Misericordia (have pity upon us).—Great apprehensions was entertained for the city of Carracas, the buildings there being lofty.—Should the earthquake have happened, as was expected, it muft have been deftroyed.

In December, 1797, Cumana was deftroyed by an earthquake, all the houfes being fhook down.

Algiers has about 50 gun boats, half of the number could be got in order in about a month. They have about 200 fail of coafters with lattine fails, each 20 or 30 tons. There are about 7,000 Turks, about 6,000 half Turks, and with difficulty they could raife 50,000 militia or rabble. This regeneracy has 50 or 60 millions of dollars, and has in chained captivity 1500 Chriftians, and is permitted to be a licenfed plunderer of all Europe.

The London papers received laft night by the arrival of the Two Friends from Plymouth, (Eng.) do not afford any fatisfactory intelligence on the fubject of the commercial treaty, faid to hit on the topic between France and England. They are principally filled with the bufinefs of the election.

A Paris article of Aug. 1, ftates, that "The Conſuls of the French Republic decreed on the 28th ult. that leaf tobacco coming from foreign ports, fhall be placed in the entrepot defignated by the decree of the 18th November laft, and in fhip other magazines at Dunkirk and La Croix Maron.

"Tobacco before being admitted into entrepot, fhall be verified by the certificates of the adminiſtration of cuſtoms, and weighed in their preſence, at the expence of the proprietors."

TRUE BENEVOLENCE.

THE other day ſays Ned to Joe,
(Near Bedlam's cauſeway groping)
Whence'er I hear the cries of woe,
My hand is always open.

I own, ſays Joe, that to the poor
(You prove it every minute)
Your hand is open to be ſure;
But then—there's nothing in it.

FROM THE BALANCE.

EVERY partaker of human nature, which at beſt is weak and unſtable, is deeply intereſted in this ſolemn admonition of an inſpired writer, "Let him that thinketh he ſtandeth, take heed leſt he fall." The moral man is apt to look down with ſcorn upon the culprit, that is overwhelmed with crime and conſequent wretchedneſs. He feels himſelf ſtrongly intrenched in his own virtue; whereas a ſingle conſideration, if duly realiſed, would ſtrake the pillars of his arrogance and ſelf ſufficiency. It is this; no man knows but he himſelf may commit ſome capital crime & make his exit out of the world in the moſt diſgraceful manner. We as little know "what a day may bring forth," in reſpect to to our own morals, as in reſpect to our own lives. Snares and dangers of which we are in no wiſe aware, may beſet our path, or there may be ſome latent weakneſs, ſome ſecret obliquity in the heart, which is never known till the fatal hour of prevailing temptation arrives.

A Dodd, and thouſands of others, who have fallen into the commiſſion of capital crimes, for which they ſuffered an ignominious death, were perhaps, a few years, or even a few weeks or days previous to their fatal elapſe, as little apprehenſive of ſuch a fall or ſuch a diſgraceful exit, as any now are among the children of men.

Therefore, "be not high minded, but fear."—Hate the crime:—Pity the criminal—take heed to thyſelf—

One evening while the Count d'Artois and the Duke de Chartres were playing very deep with General Smith at Paris, a petition was brought up from the widow of a French officer, ſtating her various misfortunes, and praying their relief, a plate was handed round, and each put in one, two or three Louis d'ors a piece: but when it was held to General Smith, who was juſt going to throw for a ſtake of five hundred Louis d'ors, he ſaid, ſtop a moment, if you pleaſe, Sir;—here goes for the widow!"—He threw, was ſucceſsful, and inſtantly ſwept the whole into the plate, and ſent it down to her. The above anecdote is a fact, and therefore deſerves to be recorded in honor of the benevolent Gameſter.

On the 5th inſt May, in digging a new Sluice near the upper end of the Fort-water at Dundas, a Keg was found buried in the ground, at the depth of about 20 feet. She meaſured from them to ſtern, in the inſide, 54 feet; and in breadth amidſt her ſize and was loaden with ſtones, marked H. L. No. V. to XII. ſome apparently intended for the fabrication of Bottles, others finely poliſhed Glaſſes, ſtrongly cemented in brad ſtones for grinding. A few old Pewter Plates alſo found, ſilverleſs, with handle, about ſize for a Thimble, and Bottle from four to ſix inches in length. The Keg was built of oak, her plank about ſix inches broad, full of tree nails, and calkt in a manner to admire her rudder barrik. A letter was found with the Keg, ſtones. Many Roman bones were found in and both ſize and all; and it is ſuppoſed the veſſel has been loſt in ſome conflagation of nature, within the foundation of that city, upwards of 500 years ago as the place had long been built over.—*Lond. LATE LONDON ARTICLES.

Austria begins to hold an important rank among commercial maritime powers, and to take advantage of the ports which she has acquired in the Mediterranean. We learn from Constantinople, that forty Austrian merchant vessels have arrived there, and have given new activity to the commerce of that city. An American company has been established at Trieste, for the purpose of trading to Sierra Leone.—They have just equipped a new vessel of 400 tons, called the Arch Duke Charles.

An article from Rouen, in the last Paris journal, says, "it is but too true that the importation of the productions of our neighbours has proceeded to such an extent as ought to claim the attention of Government. Our manufactures of cloths, hosiery, and particularly printed cottons, are in a languishing state, as all our channels of consumption have been suddenly shut up.—There can be no doubt that the English have profited, and will continue to profit, by the permission of importing into France the printed cottons of Switzerland, to introduce their own manufactures. The shops and warehouses are glutted with these articles; and it is no longer to be wondered at that no orders for assortments are received at the French manufactories.

"The greater part of our calico manufacturers keep their men only that they may not be unemployed; but if the present want of demand continues, they must shut up their workshops by the middle of September.—Such of our hosiers as were resolved to maintain a struggle with foreign manufacturers must also give up the contest; and rather than expose themselves to certain ruin, will become factors for the English."

Letters from Munich, mention a strange discovery which has lately been made in that city:—While a number of workmen were employed in removing the benches and wainscoting of a church belonging to a convent, that had lately been suppressed; one of them, while removing a confessional, fell through a kind of trap, into a subterraneous passage which communicated with a gallery. On examining the latter place, there were found deposited in it, a number of dead bodies, among others, that of a well known officer, who some time back had disappeared, and who was recognized by his button, which had inscribed upon it the number of his regiment. The Electoral government immediately issued an order for apprehending the last superior of the convent, and a special commission has been appointed to inquire into this mysterious business.

An edict of a very extraordinary kind has lately been issued by the Emperor of Germany. It ordains that no merchant who shall become bankrupt shall be allowed to recommence commercial speculations, if it shall be proved that the loss which his creditors have sustained exceeds eleven per cent. What sensations would a similar edict in this country produce?

On Friday a cause was tried in the Court of Common Pleas, in which the celebrated Miss Roberson, of Blackheath was plaintiff, and Mr. Badcock of Paternoster-row, defendant. It was for the profits of two pamphlets, written by the plaintiff, and published by the defendant. The contract by which the defendant was, after paying the printer, &c. to account for the profits, or return of the books. Miss R. not being satisfied with the share of the profits the defendant was willing to pay, brought this action, and recovered 6zl. 4s. 6d.

A gentleman at Mansfield last week undertook for a wager of 50l. to hop 100 yards at 30 hops; he exceeded the distance by three yards at 24 hops. He went at 30 yards the three first hops! It is remarkable that this gentleman is corpulent, and weighs 15 stone.

AUGUST 4.

BALLOON.

The weather, which has hitherto been extremely unfavourable to M. Garnerin's aerial experiments, has at last proved propitious. About five o'clock yesterday, the different avenues to Vauxhall were nearly filled, but the crowd was by no means so great as that which assembled in the neighbourhood of Lord Cricket's ground; and partly from the nature of the place, and partly from the prudent precautions adopted by the proprietors of Vauxhall Gardens, the inconveniencies and accidents which attended M. Garnerin's last ascension, were prevented.

There was no temptation for the crowd to press close to the Gardens, for the height of the trees would in that case have precluded all hope of seeing the balloon till it had attained a considerable elevation. For the same reason, or because the people in the neighbourhood of Vauxhall were not fraudulently disposed, there were scarcely any scaffolds erected. Constables were provided to keep the people out of the adjacent fields, and one large one adjoining to Vauxhall was kept for the company who were in the Gardens, (the luxuriant foliage of which soon intercepted the view of the balloon) to withdraw into, from which they could see it in its progress. In the centre of one of the large walks of the Gardens, a platform was erected about five feet high, on which the balloon was placed, the barrels from which it was filled were placed at some distance from the platform, and the rarified air was conveyed into it through long oil-skin tubes.—The hour at which M. Garnerin was to ascend, was stated in the advertisements to be half past six, but it was nearer seven before the adventurous travellers ascended the platform. They were received with great acclamations. Madame Garnerin and Mr. Glasford having taken their seats in the car, and M. Garnerin having made the signal arrangements, got in also. The persons on the platform then let go, and the balloon rose with the most majestic slowness through the trees, amidst the loudest acclamations. Mr. Glasford and M. Garnerin, waved the flags of England and France; and Madame Garnerin, who appeared not the least alarmed upon the occasion, kissed her hand, and bid the spectators adieu with the greatest gaiety. When the balloon had attained a considerable height, and was apparently over the river, a cat, suspended to a parachute, was dropped from the car. She descended for several yards with great velocity; but the parachute soon expanded, and safe landed in perfect safety between Millbank and Chelsea.

The number of persons in the Gardens, at the time the balloon went off, was supposed to be about 1500.

M. Garnerin hovered for above 20 minutes over St. James' Park. At first, the rapid descent of the balloon, seemed to indicate his intention of descending within the iron railings. In consequence of which, thousands jumped over, which prevented M. Garnerin from executing his amusing project.—However, to gratify the multitude, he waved his flag, and remained for a long time in the same position. The balloon afterwards took a direction towards Tottenham-court road.

The balloon passed over Tottenham-court road about half past seven. It appeared to be descending very rapidly, in consequence of which, an immense crowd of people hastened along the different streets leading to the New Road, with the utmost expedition, regardless of the sultry heat of the evening, expecting the balloon to descend very nearly in that neighbourhood. For about a quarter of an hour it appeared to make little or no progress, which, added to its evident descent, strengthened the general idea of the aerial voyagers finally landing in that part of the town; the crowd increased from all quarters; the New Road and the streets leading to it, were actually impassable; the tops of the adjoining houses, and every spot where it was possible to obtain a sight of the balloon, were crowded to excess. Many had run through the streets for a considerable distance, fully expecting to be repaid for all their exertions, by seeing the descent of the balloon, either in or near the New Road. Disappointment, however, succeeded to all this eagerness of expectation; instead of descending near the New Road, the aerial travellers proceeded in a direction towards Edgeware. Several horsemen galloped on, determined to be in at the descent; but the greater part of the pedestrians slowly measured back their steps, faint and weary with their previous exertions.—The publicans alone, in that neighbourhood, displayed smiling faces, and were highly gratified at the unexpected benefits which they derived from the balloon.

About eight o'clock, M. Garnerin seeing a favorable place, descended, in perfect safety, on one of the Earl of Rosslyn's fields, on the south side of Hampstead. All the three travellers landed in perfect health, highly delighted with their journey; and taking a post-chaise at Hampstead, returned to Vauxhall Gardens about ten o'clock at night, where they received the congratulations of their friends.

A Treaty is said to have been signed at Paris on the 21st May, during the period of the Hereditary Prince of Orange's residence in that capital, in which the King of Prussia renounces formally the guarantee entered into in the year 1788, of the Stadtholdership of the United Provinces, recognizes the Batavian Republic, and promises to send an Ambassador to reside at the Hague.

The Hereditary Prince renounces, in his father's and his own name, all pretensions upon the Batavian Republic; for this renunciation the House of Nassau Orange is to receive the Bishopsick and Abbey of Fulda; the Abbey of Corvey; the Abbey of Weingardten and its dependencies; and the Imperial Towns of Dortmond, in Westphidt, and Yssy and Buckham, in Swabia.

LONDON, August 25.

Private accounts from Paris, talk of a sort of Ostracism, which is to be sanctioned by a Senatus Consultum, which will comprehend all those who have taken part in the troubles of the interior, or in intrigues with the foreign enemy. The incorrigible Royalists will, it is said, be conducted to the frontiers of the Republic; while those who have been active in anarchic (or jacobinical) conspiracies, are to be transported beyond the seas. The list is forming under the eye of the First Consul; he has collected in a book, which he does not show to any person, very detailed accounts of the most marked characters of the Revolution. No one knows who has furnished him with these accounts, but he consults this book every time he has a nomination to make, or a rigorous measure to order.

A division has failed from Toulon against Tunis, with an aid de-camp of the First Consul, who is to demand of the Bey the cause of his violation of the treaty with France, and of his insults to the French flag. The Dey of Algiers will receive next a visit from the French squadron.

The harvest has commenced here under the most auspicious circumstances, and Ceres smiles upon Sussex: the golden grain is falling in all directions, ripe, full and heavy. I am now conversing with a foreign gentleman, just arrived from the banks of the Rhine: he affures me that the corn and vintage in Germany will be more productive this year than it ever was before in his recollection.

The French journals complain much of the latitude of observation in which the English papers indulge themselves with respect to the Consular Government: It is natural enough that they should be displeased with seeing that we can do what they dare not.

A letter from Madras, says—"A most advantageous trade is now carried on with the Moloca Islands: The whole of the gold dust collected in Celebes is given in exchange for the manufactures of England and of British India: This lucrative branch of commerce, which has long been in the hands of the Chinese, is now fallen into the possession of the English."

PARIS, August 21.

A very unexpected event has just taken place. The French government has entered an absolute prohibition of the introduction of English newspapers! It is no longer permitted to any person whatever to receive them. The Commissaries of the Police have made a rigorous search in all the Coffee-Houses and Cabinets de Lecture, and carried off all the papers which they could find.—This measure has been adopted in consequence of the remarks made in your Journals on the article which lately appeared in the Moniteur.

This event has occasioned a strong sensation here. We can now receive the news from England only through the medium of the Hamburgh, Frankfort and Prussian Journals, which are too complaisant to copy any article which may displease the French government.

General Vidal, formerly Chief of Bernadotte's Staff, has been arrested: it is even said that Bernadotte has received orders to quit Paris, or, as it is commonly expressed, he has accepted of a mission to conclude his being disgraced. The government, although it has proclaimed its stability, follows its old career. Its fears are as strong as ever, and in its terrors it spares neither poverty, ignorance, nor weakness. It is not uncommon to see a workman dragged from his work-shop to prison, without being allowed time even to take his coat with him; their wives (who are often comprehended in those cruel arrestations) follow with their frightened children in their arms.

On the fete of the 15th, the people noticed, in a particular manner, the illuminations of the facade of the Magdaleine. It is said that Madame Bonaparte's ladies of honor told her that many persons murmured at the idea of illuminating the very spot where the remains of the unfortunate Louis XVI. repose, in order to celebrate the anniversary of the birth of the man that occupies his place. Madame Bonaparte hastened to inform the Consul, who acknowledging that there was some inconvenance, replied, that it was sufficient for the reflection to have been made by the public, in order not to yield to it, for he could not suffer it to be said that Bonaparte had trembled before the manes of Louis the XVIth.

P. S. I open my letter to say, that Bonaparte has passed a great part of the night in the Conservative Senate. The Pont Neuf, and all the adjoining places are filled with troops. At eleven o'clock this morning, the First Consul returned again to the Senate. Something of the first importance is on the tapis; but the post is going out, and I have not time to add even a conjecture as to its nature.

August 14.

This morning we received Paris papers to the 13th inst. The Moniteur of the 11th, contains an article which may be considered as an official denial of all intention, on the part of France, to become a party to any dismemberment of the Turkish empire; and which also contradicts the reports that have been lately in circulation, of other European powers having formed a project for the partition of that empire—It observes, that this is not the moment, when it can be supposed the First Consul will occupy himself with schemes of aggrandizement and conquest; and that so far from this, all the former relations with the Sublime Porte have been renewed; whilst it must be seen, that it is rather the interest of France that the Ottoman empire should be re-established in all its strength and in all its power.

Another article in the same paper, contradicts a report of a loan transaction having taken place between France and America.

A Hamburgh mail arrived this morning, which brings the important intelligence of a treaty of commerce having been concluded between France and Russia, on the basis of the Convention of neutrality formed between the Northern powers during the late war.

An article from the Hague, contains a supposition, that the Legislative Body will be entirely abrogated, and its functions exercised by eight departmental administrations, the supreme authority to be concentrated in the State directory.

It is also said that Passwan Oglou was formerly a Prussian officer, and was cashiered for having embezzled money destined to pay the troops, in consequence of which he took refuge amongst the Turks, and embraced their religion.—His daughter is, it is said, at present at Settin, and the wife of M. de Schutz, a Privy Councellor; it is also said, that she lately received a letter from him, accompanied by 6000 Imperial crowns, with an invitation to join him. It is added that Passwan has written to the King of Prussia, requesting a passport for his daughter.

With respect to the right of Bonaparte's naming his successor, the debates in the French Council of State, ran very high, when he put la parole, it said, with great mildness and solemnity —"Citizens, I bow to the will of the Council; but the privilege of naming a successor is one of those which most tends to the tranquility of the state, by preventing factions. All I should desire in such a case, is the not being compelled to publish my choice—every one would then be disposed to promote the public welfare, as the factions could make no party. There is no one amongst you, Citizens Counsellors who might not with propriety, suppose yourself my choice, and of course, that in aiming at the general prosperity you might ultimately enjoy personally every thing that would be great and glorious."—These were nearly his words.

Mr. Pitt's beautiful seat at Holwood is shortly to be brought to the hammer unless disposed of by private contract. The sum demanded for it is 36,000l.

The wags of Paris say that the ladies there show every part of their person except their face; while those beauties that used to be covered are displayed, the face is hid by a thick veil. We suppose that these elegantes show so much that they are ashamed to show their faces.

GENOA, July 2.

The intelligence we have received from Algiers for some weeks past, is exceedingly disagreeable. About the beginning of May, the Regency sent out eleven corsairs of different sizes, viz. two frigates, one of 46 guns, and the other of 36; four xebecs, two polacres, two lebooners, and a brig; and it is known that they have already taken nine considerable prizes in the course of six weeks, namely, five Neapolitan vessels, two Spanish; one English; one Genoese, and a Portuguese frigate.

These privateers, have even stopped two French brigs, under a pretext that they were not provided with passports; and it was only after some strong remonstrances that the agent of the Republic was able to obtain their release. There is no doubt that the French government will take some notice of this conduct of the Regency, and demand reparation.

There is reason to believe also, that it will interfere in the affair of the two Neapolitan vessels, because the Republic is immediately interested in the circumstances of their capture. One of them had been dispatched from Corfu, by the French agent in the Republic of the Seven Isles, with a cargo destined for the service of the French army in the Kingdom of Naples. The agent of the Republic at Algiers being informed of the circumstance, which was carefully concealed from him, desired to see the dispatches of which that vessel was the bearer; they were refused to him; and the efforts he made to cause the prize to be given up, were attended with no other success than that of obtaining the liberty of some passengers who were on board. In regard to the Neapolitan Caps, his fate is truly deplorable, and he still groans in the most cruel captivity.

The other Neapolitan vessel, which sailed from Marseilles with a cargo of hemp, was taken in sight of the Hieres Isles; the crew consisted of twenty-one men; one of them, it seems, was drowned in attempting to escape—two succeeded in getting on shore, and gave in their deposition; the other eighteen, were conducted as slaves to Algiers.—The Captain demanded the interference of the French agent, and the affair is now under discussion.

The English prize excited a violent altercation between the Regency and the English Consul.—The Regency pretended that the Admiralty pafs which the captain produced was forged, becaufe the vignette repreſented a veſſel with lattine fails, whereas the veſſel feized was fquare rigged. The Conſul wiſhed to fend notice of the feizure to the Britiſh government; but this was refuſed, and the port was fhut. The affair is fhot decided, and the veſſel is ſtill detained. The Engliſh Conſul remonſtrated with great firmneſs, and threatened hoſtilities if the veſſel be not reſtored with proper indemnities.

Of all the prizes the moſt remarkable is that of the Portuguese frigate la Uppaz, of 44 guns and 350 men, which was captured on the 7th May, at the entrance of the Gut of Gibraltar, by an Algerine frigate of the ſame force and about 450 men. The Portuguese fuffered themſelves to be ſurprized, or at leaſt we muſt believe ſo. The Algerines came upon them with a peak of ſail, fired a few ſhot and then boarded. The Portuguese Captain, the Lieutenant, and 36 men were killed. If they were not deficient in courage they were not deficient in foreſight and ſkill. The reſt of the Portuguese were thrown into the hold ruſhed and loaded with chains. The wounded were ſeven days at ſea without cloaths, without nourifhment, and without having their wounds dreſſed: when they arrived at Algiers, ſeveral of them died in conſequence of their wounds having mortified.

This prize, of which there is no ſimilar example in the annals of Algiers, excited in the city the moſt extravagant enthuſiaſm. The inhabitants of this government has thence encreaſed, and the Europeans can no longer appear in the ſtreets without being expoſed to the inſults of the populace.

We learn, at the ſame time, that an Algerine Rifs had the impudence to ſit vis the Second Officer of a ſmall French veſſel in the harbour of Tunis; and we know that in the diſcuſſions which have taken place on this ſubject between the Regency and the French Agent, the latter complained of the bad faith and vile behaviour of the Vezirlergy. It is even believed that the French government will not ſuffer ſuch inſults to go unpunished; and that if other powers allow their flags to be inſulted, and their veſſels plundered, the Firſt Conſul will inviolably protect in the Mediterranean the honor of the French flag, and maintain that ſecurity which he has promiſed to all commercial ſpeculations.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, Saturday, Oct. 23.

We underſtand His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor has been pleaſed to appoint the ſeventeenth of January next as the day for opening both Houſes of the Legiſlature of this Province for the actual diſpatch of public buſineſs.—Circular letters to that effect, having been tranſmitted to the reſpective Members.

POETRY.

A NEGRO SONG.*

BY THE DUTCHESS OF DEVONSHIRE.

From Mr. Park's Travels in Africa.

THE loud wind roard, the rain fell faſt,
The white man yielded to the blaſt;
He ſat him down beneath our tree,
For weary, ſad and faint was he;
And, ah! no wife or mother's care,
For him, the milk or corn prepare.

CHORUS.

The white man ſhall our pity ſhare;
Alas! no wife or mother's care,
For him, the milk or corn prepare.

The ſtorm is o'er, the tempeſt paſt;
And Mercy's voice has hush'd the blaſt,
The wind is heard in whiſpers low;
The white man far away muſt go,
But ever in his heart will bear
Remembrance of the Negro's care.

CHORUS.

Go, white man, go! but with thee bear
The Negro's wifh, the Negro's prayer;
Remembrance of the Negro's care.

* On the banks of the Niger, Mr. Park found himſelf in want of every thing, without food to eat, or a habitable roof to ſhelter him from the rain. A negro woman returning from her labors in the field, ſaw him weary and dejected under a tree, in the top of which he intended to ſpend the night for fear of the wild beaſts. She conducted him to her hut, ſtopped him with proviſions, and ſpread a mat for him to repoſe on. Then calling the female part of her family, they ſat down to ſpinning cotton, in which they employed themſelves the greateſt part of the night, and lightened their labors with an extempore ſong. The air, ſays Mr. Park, was ſweet and plaintive, and the words literally tranſlated, were theſe: The winds roared, and the rains fell; the poor white man, faint and weary, came and ſat down under our tree. He has no mother to bring milk, no wife to grind his corn. CHORUS: Let us pity the whiteman, no mother has he, &c. &c."

Theſe ſimple and affecting words have been charmingly perſifled, and the ſentiment expanded, by her Grace the Dutcheſs of Devonſhire, and ſet to muſic by Ferrari.

CONJUGAL WIT.

A French Lady writes this letter to her huſband. Si vous ſerés, parcequ je n'ai rien a faire; ſi fais, parcequ je n'ai rien a dire. &c.

"I write to you, becauſe I have nothing to do: I end my letter, becauſe I have nothing to ſay."

ROYAL FAVOR.

A low Frenchman bragged that the King had ſpoken to him. Being aſked what his Majeſty had ſaid, replied, "He bad me ſtand out of the way."

DUTCHESS OF BOLTON.

The Dutcheſs Dowager of Bolton, who was natural daughter to the Duke of Monmouth, uſed to ſtroke George I. by [illegible] make blunders. One of them has been at the play of "Love's Laſt Shift," ſhe called it, La Derniere Chemize de Venus. Another time ſhe pretended to come to Court on a great feaſtival and the King aſking the cauſe, the fact he had been at Mr. Whiſton's, who told her the World would be burnt in three years; and for her part ſhe was determined to go to China.

He is aſſiſted by four inſpectors; two of them being the oldeſt, and the other two the moſt heavily taxed of the citizens, having a right to vote in the Cantonal Aſſembly. The Preſident and four inſpectors appoint the Secretary.

6. The aſſembly of the canton divides itſelf into ſections for performing the operations belonging to it. At the firſt convocation of each aſſembly, its organization and forms of proceeding ſhall be determined by a regulation iſſued by the government.

34. The members of the legiſlative body cannot attend the ſittings of the electoral college to which they belong. All the other public functionaries have a right to attend and to vote.

35. No cantonal aſſembly ſhall proceed to nominate to the places that belong to it in an electoral college until theſe places are reduced to two thirds.

36. The electoral colleges can aſſemble only in conſequence of an act of convocation emanating from the government, and in the places aſſigned to them. They can take cognizance of the ſubjects only for which they are aſſembled, nor can they prolong their ſittings beyond the time fixed by the act of convocation. It is addreſſed to the Senate by a meſſage from the Government, with a copy of the procès verbaux, certifying the depoſit, the identity and entire ſtate.

51. If the Firſt Conſul leaves no preſentation, the Second and Third Conſuls make their preſentations ſeparate. If neither obtains the nomination, they make a third, from which the Senate muſt of neceſſity nominate.

52. In every caſe the preſentations and nomination muſt be completed within 24 hours after the death of the Firſt Conſul.

LONDON, Aug. 10.

A gentleman has handed us the following extract of a letter from Gibraltar, dated June 24 :—" Sir Robert Barlow, in the Triumph of 74 guns, and a frigate have failed for Algiers, in consequence of the Algerines detaining three Englifh veffels, on account of their having either falfe Mediterranean paffes, or old ones that have been ufed for other veffels; they have condemned the veffels and cargoes and fold them. We expect Sir Robert will only demand the men from flavery.

The Algerines fent a frigate and two zebecs down to the back of the rock, with the intention of taking a Portuguefe line of battle fhip, and a frigate that cruife in the Gut; they met with only the frigate within our fight, which the two zebecs boarded and carried into Algiers, after murdering nearly all on board. We expect they will take more of them foon. The Emperor of Morocco, has demanded of the Swedifh and American Confuls, refiding at Tangiers, to order their cruifers to permit his fending corn to the port of Tunis which is blockaded by them; Capt. Truxton, the American commander here, faid his particular orders were not to comply with any fuch requeft; in confequence of this anfwer, the Emperor has ordered the Confuls to quit his dominions: an American frigate has failed to take Mr. James Simpfon, the American Conful, and family on board, and is expected here every hour. It is expected the Moors will fend out fmall cruifers againft the Americans immediately. The Superb, of 74 guns, and the Dragon, are the only fhips remaining here."

Aug. 14. The report of the misunderftanding between the Emp. Alexander & his Swedifh Majefty, in confequence of the treatment faid to be experienced by Count Panin from the latter, appears to deferve no credit. A letter from Stockholm of the 17th ult. ftates, that an interview was fhortly to take place between thefe Monarchs on the frontiers of Sweden.

AUGUST 12.

We learn from Bombay, that quickfilver has been found in a pure ftate at Cottah, in Columbo. A pit has been dug to the depth of fourteen feet, and the quickfilver is found in five different parts of it, at a fmall diftance from each other, in ftrata of earth nearly two feet thick; eight or nine pounds weight have been collected, it appears in fmall globes. We further learn, that orders were iffued at Columbo, prohibiting the cutting of timber in the company's forefts, without authority for that purpofe.

A private letter from Bombay informs us, that upwards of 400,000 lbs. weight of cinnamon were to be fhipped from Columbo this year, the produce of the Candian territories, and that a greater quantity was expected next feafon, in confequence of the prunings, which afford air and fpace to the plants in the Matandhu.

A further proof of the extreme caution ufed by the French government in permitting any direct commercial intercourfe with this country, is afforded by the following fact. The American veffel Sophia, captain Smith, is arrived at Whitby, with which, however, the captain ftates, it is neceffary to clear out for fome neutral port, and to obtain frefh difpatches from thence, as an indifpenfible requifite to the obtaining permiffion to land his cargo.

AUGUST 19.

We have received Paris Journals to the 16th inftant. On the preceding day, Sunday laft, called the day of the Aflumption of the Virgin, a folemn Te Deum was chaunted in the church of Notre Dame of Paris, and in all thofe of the diocefe, to return thanks for the Senatus Confulta of the 12th and 13th of this month. The fame day a folemn fervice for returning thanks was performed in the Temple of the Proteftants at Paris rue Saint Thomas du Louvre, in confequence of the proclamation of the Senatus Confultum, for organizing the Conftitution. Thefe Journals prefent little elfe refpecting France itfelf; but fome of the articles from other countries are intereffing. It appears by the accounts from Switzerland, that in the petty Cantons, inftead of acquiefcence and fubmiffion to the new order of things, a formal infurrection is organizing there againft the central government; and it is very uncertain whether it will be poffible to make them receive the new conftitution. The inftigator of all thefe commotions is the late Landamman Reding. It appears that he has been long laboring on the execution of his vaft plan of a counter-revolution, and for this purpofe has taken advantage of the abfence of the French troops. He began by calling an aflembly of his confidential friends at Gerlau. In this meeting, which took place on the 24th of laft month, it was refolved to convoke, on the 17th of Auguft, the General Aflemblies of the people of the three petty Cantons; to oblige all the public functionaries to refign their places; to induce the old magiftrates of 1798 to refume their functions; to form a confederation between the three Cantons; and to collect all the men capable of bearing arms. At Schwitz, Reding aflured the inhabitants that Bonaparte, whom he chofe to denote by the following words, the Man who makes Europe tremble, had given him his word that the Canton might conftitute itfelf as it pleafed. The re-eftablifhment of the ancient order of things was propofed. Reding was then appointed Landamman, and all the ancient authorities were reftored. In many places the paftoral letter of the Bifhop of Conftance, which declared that there was nothing in the new Conftitution contrary to religion, was torn from the church-doors on which it was placed.

The full powers for the extraordinary deputation of the empire, have been printed and published at Ratifbon.

PLYMOUTH, Aug. 8.

The ftem, ftern, frame and keel of the Union, of 120 guns, are laid down on the fhip from which the Foudroyant of 84 guns was launched fome years fince; her dimenfions and fcantlings will be of the largeft fize of any fhip in the Navy.

WHITEHAVEN, June 22.

A veffel arrived here on Wednefday laft from Strangford, which is well known to have been coafting (chiefly) in this channel, for one hundred and thirty years! She is called the three Sifters, Dormen, mafter; but is better known by the name of the Port-a-Ferry frigate; fhe is of the burthen of thirty-fix tons, at prefent, rigged as a briggantine, but there is a report that the formerly appeared as a fhip! However this may be, it is certain fhe was employed at the fiege of Londonderry, in 1689, and was fucceffful on an emergency, in fupplying the garrifon with provifions. This venerable piece of naval architecture, which from the great improvements made in the courfe of the laft century, is now viewed as a curiofity) is allowed the privilege of ufing any of the public docks at Liverpool, free of all port charges; and this is in confequence of her having been the firft veffel that entered the old dock.

PARIS, AUGUST 14.

Then by the Boulevard of St. Dennis, to the gate of St. Martin, where the fifth proclamation will be made.

Then by the Boulevards of St. Martin and the Temple, to the gate of St. Antoine, where the fixth proclamation will be made.

Then by the Quay of Pelletier, the Bridge of Notre Dame, the ftreet du Petit Pont, and the ftreet Galande, to the Place Manbert, where the eighth proclamation will be made.

Then by the Pont Neuf, the Quay of la Magiftere, and the Ponte au Change, to the Place du Palais de Juftice, where the fifteenth proclamation will be made.

The proceffion will return to the Prefecture of the ftreet La Barillerie, and that of St. Louis.

According to a letter from the Miniftet of the Genetal Police, thofe accufed of emigration who have not received the benefit of the amneffy, cannot quit their habitual refidence without having obtained his fpecial permiffion. Thofe who have been admitted the benefit of the amneffy, may obtain paffports from the proper authorities to travel in the interior; but the miniftet muft be informed of it, as well as the prefect of the department where the parties refide; neither the one nor the other can in any cafe come to Paris without the fpecial authority of the miniftet.

The day after the changes in the Conftitution were made, a man, near the Palais Royal, was felling, as is ufual, a printed copy of the Organic Articles, as they are called; but the poor fellow, probably without any malice, cried out "La Nouvelle Conftitution!" The Conftitution of Bonaparte for two fous! for two fous!" He had not continued his vociferation two minutes before he was feized by two foldiers and conducted to prifon!

The Palace of St. Cloud is now nearly completed; and the Conful would have gone there on the 15th of laft month (Meffidor) had not the bufinefs of the new Conftitution fo occupied his time. It is to be prefumed that he will go there immediately, as he has ordered a poft for letters to be eftablifhed in the Palace for his own particular ufe, fimilar to the one already placed in the Thuilleries. The adminiftrators, or directors of the poft office department, who are not much fatisfied at thefe innovations, folicited that an office might be given them, where the perfons employed might be lodged, and that the expences might be paid by the Conful; he fent for anfwer a negative —and added, that fuch fuppofed charges muft fall upon the poft-office eftablifhment.

Upon a late vifit the Firft Conful made to St. Cloud, the workmen furrounded him, and by obferving, that in fuch weather people were dry, pleaded for fome money. He appeared much offended at this fort of familiarity, and fent them off with haughtinefs, but without a prefent.

LONDON, AUGUST 9.

A letter from captain Simkins, of the fhip Garland, belonging to Poole, bound on a voyage from Newfoundland to Leghorn, to Benjamin Lefter and Co. Efquires, of Poole, fays:—" On the 14th day of June laft, on my paffage in the Weftern Ocean, in lat. 42, 25, long. 32, I fell in with the wreck of a veffel, American built, about 70 tons burthen, with nothing but her bowfprit ftanding; the water over her decks; not a rope or any other thing on her decks but an anchor without a ftock. It being calm, I fent a boat with four hands to examine her, who, in ftriving to get fomething out of the cabin, through the fkylight, found a human body very much disfigured, and part of a trunk, with an Englifh officer's fhort regimental coat, with an epaulette, and the copies of fome letters from the father, brother, and fifters of Captain George Patterfon, of the 6th Weft-India Regiment, dated in the year 1799, from Dean-ftreet, in London. His father's name is Daniel Patterfon, and, I believe, is in the Horfe Guards. The wreck quit, I think, have been on her paffage from the Weft Indies, as her cargo was chiefly cotton, fome of which was working through her hatchways."

Several officers of the garrifon of Breft have been recently immured in the Temple, for having added to their vote of the Confulfhip for life, that Moreau fhould be Bonaparte's fucceffor!

VIENNA, July 24.

We are again greatly alarmed for the life of the Archduke Charles: In the night between the 21ft and 22d inftant, his royal highnefs had another fevere attack of his diforder; & the accounts of his health to-day are very diftreffing. Laft night was a very unquiet one, and there was fcarcely any intermiffion to the epileptic fits. The phyficians are continually with the Archduke.

A company is forming here to carry on a trade in Hungarian wines with London. A capital of 500,000 florins has been already fubfcribed.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.

Dutch papers to the 4th of Auguft received at Boiton, indicate the rapid revival of commercial enterprize in Holland. The famous bank of Amfterdam has been re-eftablifhed on its ancient foundation; & things appear reverting to their former ftate. Expeditions were on the point of failing from the Texel, to occupy the Cape of Good Hope, and the Weft India colonies reftored to Holland by the treaty of Amiens. That deftined to the Weft Indies was to carry 5400 troops, to be diftributed at Surinam, Berbice, Eiffequibo, Demerara, St. Euftatia, Curracoa, and St. Martin.

NEW WAY OF SMUGGLING.

A few days ago, a hearfe drawn by two horfes, ftopped at an inn in Alnwick, without any other attendants than the driver. A perfon more curious than the furrounding fpectators, peeped thro' a crevice of that vehicle of mortality, and difcovered, inftead of a coffin an aflemblage of caflks, firmly packed with ftraw. The difcovery, however, produced only a hearty laugh, at the ingenuity of the deception, and the fmuggler and his cargo departed, without further inveftigation.

A DUEL A-LA-MODE.

Two gentlemen elbowing each other in the pit paffage at Drury-Lane, London, one of them cried, " Death, Sir, who are you that dare to behave fo? Some journeyman filkeut I mouth fuppofe from your breeding."—" Very likely," returned the other with great coolnefs, " and if you will favor me with your name and direction, you fhall have fuch a DRESSING from me to morrow morning as becomes fuch a puppy!"

From this altercation, trifling as it was, and ludicrous as well as trifling, a challenge enfued, and from the challenge a rencountre, which in a few minutes, in perfect conformance with the fafhionable ideas of HONOR, fent one of thofe heroes to feek an abode in another world, and forced the other to court a fanctuary in another country.

A GOOD JOKE.

A few days ago a failor was taken up in Southwark, by a Conftable, galloping thro one of the ftreets, in violation of an ordinance paffed by the Commiffioners. When brought before 'Squire ——— he infifted that the charge made by the Conftable was falfe; that his horfe could not gallop. The Conftable had no evidence to prove the fact. The failor propofed him to mount the horfe and convince himfelf of the truth of what he had afferted.

The Conftable defirous of proving the charge againft the failor, mounted the horfe, and began to whip and fpur; the horfe fprung off, and ran fome diftance before the Conftable could ftop him. A croud by this time had aflembled around the magiftrate's door. The Conftable returned, Jack ftept up and accofted him :—D—n my eyes, Mr. Conſtable, but you have gallopped the horſe thro the ſtreet contrary to law, and here are the witneſſes, (pointing to thoſe around him) who will prove the fact, and I inſiſt on your paying the fine. The magiſtrate was compelled to fulfil his duty, and the poor Conſtable was fined.—Phil. P.

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,

Lieutenant Governor of the ſaid Province of Upper-Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, paſſed in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, at any time during the ſpace of three years from the paſſing thereof, was empowered to iſſue Commiſſions, and the Commiſſioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Caſes in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not iſſued—AND WHEREAS, Commiſſions were accordingly iſſued, and the Commiſſioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon ſome of the Claims that came before them; but many Perſons, during the ſpace of the ſaid three years, neglected to come forward and give the neceſſary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the ſaid Commiſſioners to proſecute ſuch Claims, or came unprepared with the neceſſary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof eſſential to the eſtabliſhment of their ſaid Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Perſon or by Agent, "or to take any proper ſteps for aſcertaining their Titles in manner by the ſaid Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithſtanding ſuch manifeſt inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majeſty's Subjects, the ſaid Act was, by another Statute paſſed in the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but ſuch indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of thoſe for whoſe benefit the Law was paſſed.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majefty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commiffioners named in the feveral Commiffions, iffued under the Authority of the laft mentioned Statute, will, for the purpofe of deciding on all fuch Claims as aforefaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

LONDON, Auguſt 30.

The Firſt Conſul wiſhes that all his troops ſhould ſwim, both infantry and cavalry. In conſequence of which, ſince the commencement of the ſeaſon, the Maſter Swimmers of the School for Swimming have given leſſons in the art to the ſoldiers. Every precaution that art can ſuggeſt, has been taken to enſure the ſafety of the men. But unfortunately the learners are not always able to manage their horſes, ſo that ſcarce a day paſſes without ſome of the men being drowned. The day before yeſterday there were two, and yeſterday there were three drowned. It is ſaid, that on the 23d September, a large body of troops will ſwim acroſs the Seine in the preſence of the Firſt Conſul, in order of battle, with their baggage, &c.

We learn, from our private correſpondent, under date of the 20th inſt. Louis XVIII. who ſtill keeps his court at Warſaw, has refuſed to accept the annual alimony offered him by the Courts of Pruſſia and Ruſſia, from a notion, that if he really conſented to receive ſuch a ſum in the ſhape of a penſion, he would, by ſo doing, forfeit his title of ſucceſſion to the Crown of France.—This unhappy Prince has written letters both to Frederick and Alexander, thanking them for their magnanimous offers; but informing them, that he begged leave to decline any ſtipulated ſum, but would appeal to them on proper occaſions for what little his exigencies might require, in the proud hope of repaying all on the day of his reſtoration.

Letters from Plymouth ſtate, that on Wedneſday laſt, at half tide, an immenſe boar ruſhed through the ſluice of the Pier head, drove all the ſmall craft adrift, and retired as ſuddenly as it ruſhed in, without doing any damage. A ſimilar circumſtance occurred at that port, previous to the Liſbon earthquake, in 1755, and previous to the earthquake at Quito, in South-America, in 1781.

THOMAS PAINE embarked a few days ſince from Havre, for America.

PARIS, Auguſt 26.

On the 18 of July laſt, the Engliſh veſſel the Majeſty, Capt. Noddings, having on board a detachment of 350 troops, was thrown by a tempeſt on the Coaſt of Port Bail, in the department of La Manche, which the darkneſs of the night prevented them from perceiving. Guns of diſtreſs were fired from the veſſel, which being heard by Citizen Germain Goderel, cannonier at Port Bail, he jumped into the water, and having got on board the veſſel by means of a cable, he informed the crew that they were on the Coaſt of France. He then threw himſelf again into the ſea, and regained the ſhore: he returned ſome time afterwards with pilots, by which means the Engliſh veſſel, crew, and ſoldiers, were preſerved.

PHILADELPHIA, October 6.

By Captain M'Allifter, of the ſhip Fanny, who arrived yeſterday from Amſterdam, but laſt in 40 days from Cowes, where he by his great attention, procured papers to the 26th of Auguſt, from which we are enabled to furniſh the following advices—ſix days later than any before received.

ROME, Auguſt 2.

The Barbary corſairs have taken four Neapolitan veſſels off Gaeta, and a Portugueſe ſhip in the neighbourhood of Monte Cicero. The crew of the latter threw themſelves into the ſea, and of forty men, of which it conſiſted, thirty-eight unfortunately periſhed: two only were ſaved, one of whom was a Portugueſe. A Neapolitan polacre was alſo attacked by the ſame corſairs, near Syracuſe, but it came off victorious, and retired to Malta, where it hoiſted Engliſh colours, in order to proceed to Trapania. A Sardinian galley fought and took a Tuniſian galliot with 110 men, and re-captured two Neapolitan polacres which the galliot had taken. All theſe veſſels were conveyed to the Ile de la Madelain.

GENOA, Auguſt 5.

We have juſt received a note of the depredations which the Dey of the Regency of Algiers has been exerciſing for ſix months, upon the different powers of Europe.

It is uſeful to publiſh it; and in reading it we ſhall be leſs aſtoniſhed at the extreme rapacity than at the audacity of this barbarian, who ſeems to think himſelf the ſovereign of the univerſe, becauſe he treats all the other governments as if they were his tributaries.

This note is followed by that of the contributions which he intends to impoſe upon Africa—they relate to the Princes, who are of the ſame religion, and prove, that there is nothing ſacred to this brigand. We may rely upon accuracy of theſe details.

Holland, Sweden and Denmark have made their triennial preſents, the value of which is fixed at 16,500 piaſtres.—But by the chicanery which the agents have experienced, theſe preſents have increaſed for each of theſe powers to a ſum of about 25,000 piaſtres. Total—piaſtres 75,000. Spain had ſent three ſail of the line and two frigates to claim three confiſcated veſſels—The Dey was offended at this meaſure; and Spain, to avoid a war, paid the ſum of —— piaſtres 240,000. This includes the value of the three ſhips given up. A frigate perfectly equipped, is to be ſent to Conſtantinople, by Spain, with warlike ammunition.

The Dey claims of the Engliſh, for ſeveral cargoes confiſcated by the Court of Admiralty, 180,000 piaſtres; and has ſignified, that if it be not paid in four months, he will declare war. He demands of France preſents to the amount of 135,000 piaſtres.

The Dey requires from the Sweditſh agents freſh preſents to the amount of 50,000 piaſtres.

He lately ſent for the Daniſh agent, and demanded 100,000 piaſtres, in four months, beſides a veſſel valued at 12,000.

The Captain of the Portugueſe frigate has thrown 312 men into ſlavery. The Dey has advanced the moſt exaggerated pretenſions.—He demands 200,000 piaſtres for the ranſom of a ſingle individual, the ſon of the Portugueſe Admiral. Suppoſing that the Court of Liſbon obtains the 312 at 2000 piaſtres each, (which we are far from believing) the Regency will obtain 624,000 piaſtres. To this we muſt add the amount of preſents, and the value of the frigate, 70,000,

We muſt alſo add the value of ſeven ſhips taken by the corſairs, and 75 Genoeſe, Neapolitan, and other ſlaves, 3-7,000 piaſtres.

The total of the exactions from Europe is 1,818,500 piaſtres. In Africa he has demanded, beſides the uſual preſents from the Beys of Titeri, Conſtantine and Maſcara, 300,000 piaſtres, and 20,000 to private exactions.

He has ordered the Bey of Conſtantine to march with all his troops againſt Tunis. He has exacted from the Bey of that Regency, a ſum amounting nearly to 700,000 piaſtres—Total in Africa, 1,100,000. The grand total is 2,913,500 piaſtres.

BONAPARTE's PALACE.

Every Muſeum of precious objects and monuments of arts is put in requiſition, for the purpoſe of embelliſhing either internally or externally the Palace of St. Cloud; independent of the many ineſtimable pictures which have been removed from the gallery of Verſeilles, no leſs than one hundred and forty of the fineſt orange trees have been conveyed from the garden; many of which have flouriſhed there ſince the reign of Louis XIV. All the ancient and beautiful furniture, by the name of BOULE, (the perſon who directed or ordered their fabrication) have been alſo ſent to decorate the new reſidence.

LOUISIANA.

A London paper of the 3d of Auguſt, contains the following on the ſubject of Louiſiana.

"We are aſſured that an important document may ſhortly be expected to be publiſhed in the French Journals, reſpecting the ceſſion of the Province of Louiſiana by the Court of Madrid to France. Gen. Bernadotte has received orders to hold himſelf in readineſs to embark with a ſmall army for that country, of which he is appointed Governor and Commander General."

A paper of the 17th ſays—

"Letters from French ſoldiers late-ly embarked at Toulon and Breſt, ſtate, that they are deſtined againſt Algiers.—Troops have alſo been embarked for Louiſiana. Twenty different paragraphs have corroborated this fact."

WONDERFUL CHANGES IN THE HEAVENLY LUMINARIES.

"The ancient Aſtronomers had obſerved a new Star in the heart of the SWAN, which from time to time diſappeared, till in the year 1600, it was equal to a Star of the firſt magnitude; it ſtill greatly diminiſhed, and at length diſappeared. M. CASSINI perceived it in 1669. It increaſed five years ſucceſſively; it then began to decreaſe, and reappeared no more. In 1677, a new Star was obſerved near the head of the Swan. It diſappeared, and became again viſible in 1672. From that period, it was ſeen no more till 1709; and in 1713, it totally diſappeared." The Pleiades, a conſtellation mentioned in the book of Job, once contained Seven Stars. Six only are now perceptible—The ſeventh diſappeared at the ſiege of Troy, about 1200 years before the birth of Chriſt.

What has become of this Star, and of others which have diſappeared?—Have they been utterly extinguiſhed, together with the worlds with which they were ſyſtematically connected?

"The Stars fade away; the Sun himſelf grows dim with age, and Nature ſinks in years."

A COLLEGE ANECDOTE.

DOCTOR BENTLEY, of England, who became famous for his claſſical learning, was very wild and diſſipated in his youth. While he was at the University, he purchaſed and ſent him ſeveral folio volumes, which the young ſpark ſold, and with the money bought a good ſupply of wine. His father, viſiting him ſoon after this tranſaction, aſked him what he had done with thoſe folios which he had ſent him. "Pleaſe, ſir, to ſtep here," ſaid the ſon, "and I will inform you"—then opening a cloſet door, he pointed him to a number of quart bottles filled with wine.—"Your Folios," added the ſon, "I have turned into Quartos; but if you will forgive me this extravagance, it ſhall be the laſt."—And he kept his word.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,

Lieutenant Governor of the ſaid Province of Upper-Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, paſſed in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, at any time during the Space of three years from the paſſing thereof, was empowered to iſſue Commiſſions, and the Commiſſioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Caſes in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not iſſued—AND WHEREAS, Commiſſions were accordingly iſſued, and the Commiſſioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon ſome of the Claims that came before them; but many Perſons, during the ſpace of the ſaid three years, neglected to come forward and give the neceſſary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the ſaid Commiſſioners to proſecute ſuch Claims, or came unprepared with the neceſſary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof eſſential to the eſtabliſhment of their ſaid Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Perſon or by Agent, or to take any proper ſteps for aſcertaining their Titles in manner by the ſaid Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithſtanding ſuch manifeſt inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majeſty's Subjects, the ſaid Act was, by another Statute paſſed in the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but ſuch indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of thoſe for whoſe benefit the Law was paſſed.

AND WHEREAS, in the laſt Seſſion of the Parliament of this Province, the Legiſlature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may aſſert their Claims, in all Caſes where the Faith of Government ſtands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not iſſued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commiſſions were iſſued, and the Commiſſioners duly attended at the reſpective times when the Aſſizes were held for the ſeveral Diſtricts in this Province, but ſome of the Parties, who had given notice of aſſerting Claims, came in the ſame unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; ſo that, if ſuch groſs negligence and inattention is perſevered in, the ſalutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in aſſenting to ſuch repeated extenſions of ſo indulgent a Law, will be altogether diſappointed and fruſtrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commiſſioners named in the ſeveral Commiſſions, iſſued under the Authority of the laſt mentioned Statute, will, for the purpoſe of deciding on all ſuch Claims as aforeſaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home Diſtrict, on the Twenty-Third Day of December next, on the Firſt Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At SANDWICH, for the Weſtern Diſtrict, alſo at the time of the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the ſaid Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Perſons intereſted will give Notice, according to Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have to done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſsly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

Foreign Intelligence.

[By the arrival at New-York of the ſhip Jupiter, from London—Dates to the 5th of September.]

ENGLAND.

LONDON, September 2.

Preparations are making for the evacuation of the Dutch territories by the French troops.

Letters from Hamburgh ſtate, it is a meaſure abſolutely determined on, that the Farmers-General are to be re-eſtabliſhed in France, entirely on the ancient footing. This regulation, it ſeems, is not to be publicly announced till the 1ſt of Vendemaire (September 23).

September 3.

Two mails arrived this morning from Hamburgh, and one from Holland.

The letters by the Dutch mail aſſert, that Auſtria will not relinquiſh any of the diſtricts belonging to Bavaria, on the Inn. The retention or abandonment of thoſe diſtricts does not, however, depend upon the cabinet of Vienna.

Preparations are making for the evacuation of the Dutch territories by the French troops. The ammunition and artillery have already been ſent to the Belgic departments. The troops will begin their march the end of this month.

Letters from Burchareſt ſtate, that ſecurity and tranquility are completely reſtored to that country. The corps which Paſſwan Oglou marched towards the right bank of the Danube, has been repulſed with loſs, by the troops ſent by the Porte to oppoſe him in that direction. Moſt of the Boyards, or Wallachian Noblemen, have returned to Burchareſt, where the new Prince now is.

The Legiſlative Body of the Italian Republic has fixed the peace eſtabliſhment of the army at 65,000 men. The army is to be recruited by means of a military conſcription, comprehending every man in the nation from twenty to twenty-five years of age.

Orders have been iſſued for the marching of a large body of French troops to the Rhine. They will be cantoned along the left bank. Their numbers will be about 30,000.

The French funds continue to droop, the five per cents. were on the 29th ult. at 51 f. The decline of the Republican funds is, we apprehend, to be chiefly attributed to the financial embarraſſments of the government. It is reported that ſuch have been the expences of the expeditions to take poſſeſſion of the ceded iſlands, the ordinary demands of large military eſtabliſhments, and the want of an adminiſtration little diſtinguiſhed for œconomy, that great affairs have been incurred. To alleviate the diſtreſs, and to procure temporary aid, it is ſaid to be in contemplation to raiſe a loan. In a country where, as at preſent in France, there is ſo little confidence, money is ſcarce and dear, ſuch a meaſure muſt fall heavy on the money market. Money now bears an enormous intereſt in France. The beſt bankers' paper is at 9 per cent. inferior claſſes from that to 15.

The Dutch funds continue ſteady.

The ſtoppage of the circulation of the Engliſh papers occaſioned at firſt much converſation in the caffes and reading rooms—thoſe which ought to have arrived by the poſt on the 17th were not ſuffered to reach Paris. However, this ſubject, like moſt others, has had there but an ephemeral exiſtence. The Engliſh papers are not yet allowed to come into circulation.

The following are the particulars of the mode of proceeding againſt the Engliſh Journals. At ten in the morning all the officers of the police ſpread themſelves through the coffee houſes, and the reading rooms of the Palais royal; they inſtantly, and without ſhewing any order, ſeized and carried off all the daily, weekly, and monthly publications they could find, and bore them to the foot of the great ſtaircaſe of the Tribunate, where they were burned in the midſt of a circle formed by the invalids, of whom the guard of that body is compoſed. The following morning the ſame execution was renewed.

Touſſaint Louverture arrived at Dijon on the 22d ult. and left it the ſame day, taking the road to Beſancon. He was accompanied by an aide-de-camp of General Lahorrie, and ſome gendarmes. He had one domeſtic, who was a negro. Touſſaint wore a general's undreſs.

Dreadful Fire.—Yeſterday morning, between twelve and one o'clock, a moſt dreadful fire broke out in the houſe of Mr. Hetheth Davis, oilman, in Leadenhall-ſtreet, nearly oppoſite the India Houſe. On the firſt alarm being made the watchmen belonging to the India Houſe afforded all the aſſiſtance in their power, with the Company's engines; but unfortunately a ſufficient quantity of water could not be procured for two hours, when the conflagration had extended itſelf to the Geneva warehouſe, to Mr. Swift's, trunk-maker, and to Mr. Ward's, the Ship Tavern, which was alſo in flames. The engines belonging to the different fire offices ſoon arrived, but every thing remained inactive from a want of water, as none could be obtained but from the top of the India Houſe, which was played from the parapet. Such was the fury of the flames that very little property could be ſaved which was depoſited in the India Houſe for ſecurity. The premiſes abovementioned, are entirely deſtroyed, and fell in about nine o'clock in the morning, with a tremendous craſh. The firemen and others were extremely active, as ſoon as water was procured, and though ſeveral engines were at work they could not ſuppreſs the flames for ſome hours. The diſtreſs occaſioned by the above calamity is indeſcribable. Some of the houſes adjoining the India Houſe alſo took fire by the burning wood falling on the roofs, and the adjoining premiſes are much damaged.

It is ſaid in a letter from Bruſſels, that Admiral Storey, and the other Dutch officers of the marine now in England, who delivered up the Dutch fleet to this country in 1799, intend to ſurrender themſelves as priſoners, in order that their conduct may be decided upon in Holland by a Council of War.

September 4.

The demonſtrations of Auſtria on the banks of the Inn, have terminated as we predicted. A ſhort paragraph in the Moniteur, of the 31ſt ult. which we received this morning, informs us that France, Ruſſia, Auſtria and Bavaria, are agreed—that the Auſtrians entered Paſſau before they had adopted the plan; but that the Imperial Miniſter has declared that they took poſſeſſion of the place only to maintain the rights of the Biſhops of Paſſau, until the period arrived in which the mediating power of the deputation of the Empire ſhould ſettle the buſineſs. The court of Vienna muſt have been certain that whatever fate was referred for Paſſau, the right of the Biſhop would not be maintained. Auſtria wiſhes to ſecure the town for herſelf, and if ſhe has abandoned her deſigns, it is leſs from inclination than from inability to oppoſe the will of France and Ruſſia.

The plan of indemnities has been preſented by the Ruſſian and French Miniſters to the Diet. The Miniſters of Pruſſia, Bavaria, Wortemberg and Baden, have been eager to decline their acceptance of it.

A letter from Calais, dated 2d of September, 1802, to a commercial houſe in town, contains the following intelligence, which is of importance to the commercial world:—"We haſten to communicate to you that the law allowing tranſit of refined ſugars and coffee in France, has been ſuſpended for the preſent until government ſhall have diſcuſſed and decided upon the general queſtion of tranſit—in conſequence of which, no coffee or ſugars arriving after this day, will be entitled to the privilege of tranſito, but will be ſubject to the home conſumption duties."

PLYMOUTH, September 1.

Sailed at ſix o'clock in the evening, with a fine wind at E. N. E. for the Cape of Good Hope, the Batavian man of war the Bato, of 76 guns, Capt. Chriſ. She takes out all the civil and military officers for that ſettlement. Sailed alſo from Torbay, the Proſperine, Batavian frigate, commodore Blois, with two other frigates, and twenty-one tranſports full of troops, for the Batavian Weſt-Indian ſettlements, ceded at the late peace.

FRANCE.

PARIS, Auguſt 30.

The French funds have fallen, they are at 50 1-4.

Auguſt 31.

The affairs of Germany are on the point of being ſettled. France, Ruſſia, Auſtria, Pruſſia and Bavaria, are agreed. Pruſſia has taken poſſeſſion of the ſtates granted to her by the plan of the two great mediating powers. Auſtria has taken poſſeſſion of Saltzburgh, Berchtolſgaden, Brixen and Trent, which are alſo granted to her by the ſame plan.—Her troops were at Paſſau, before that Court had adopted the ſaid plan; but the Imperial Miniſter has declared, that it took poſſeſſion of it only to maintain the rights of the Biſhop Paſſau, until the period in which the mediating powers of the deputation of the empire ſhould decide.

EXTRACT of a letter from Sergouga Nugur, 25th of February, 1802.

"It is generally to be underſtood, that elephants are not to be met in a wild ſtate on this ſide the Ganges. In our neighbourhood, however, a herd of them has been diſcovered, a male of which, attracted no doubt by the females of our camp, has nightly given us much annoyance, ever ſince we came here. Means were at firſt uſed to decoy it, for it would carry our females, and allow them to ſurround it; but a want of ſkill determined us to deſtroy it. With our artillery, and three ſucceſſive nights a four pounder was diſcharged at him with good aim for this purpoſe. Several grape ſhot hit him, and one round ſhot went through his trunk and right [illegible]; notwithſtanding which he ſtood fronting the gun, and allowed it to advance within ſeven yards of him, when a round ſhot entered his right ſhoulder, and lodged itſelf in his abdomen. Two or more diſcharges of grape were lodged in great part in his head, when he at laſt fell without moving from the ſpot, and at day light (for the third night we had been occupied on this ſervice from 11 till 3 in the morning) we had an opportunity of meaſuring and anatomizing him. His carcaſe was large beyond my conception. His extreme length from the

"The tuſks lie buried, and cannot be touched at preſent; but they were not large. Withal he ſeemed young, and was handſomely proportioned and clear ſkinned beyond any wild elephant, or indeed tame one, I ever ſaw. People who have heard of elephants of 12 and 13 feet high, will think ſmall of this; but on this ſubject there is much deception. Mr. Corſe, who gave into the Royal Society a memoir on the generation and growth of the elephant, mentions, I recollect, that while in Bengal he made it his buſineſs to aſcertain the real ſize of all the large elephants he could hear of, and found only one to meaſure 10 feet 4 inches high."

MADRAS, Feb. 20.

A detachment of the 1ſt battalion of the 15th regiment, lay encamped at a village near Poleveram Hills—On the night of the 28th of December, a Royal Tyger came into the village and ſeized a buffock. After gorging on his prey, he retired to a houſe on the banks of the river, where he took up his quarters.

Lieutenant Stuart being informed of it, went at day light with a Naik's guard to the place, where they ſaw the monſter in the cottage. They mounted on the roof of the adjoining hut, and by removing the thatch of that where he lay, diſturbed him, and he went out. After a few turns, he ſprang at the party and ſcaled on the roof cloſe to them, but an inſtantaneous diſcharge of two or three fire-locks wounded him, and he fell to the ground, but immediately got up and made a ſecond attempt, when finding his efforts ineffectual, he made off under a pandal adjoining the houſe he firſt entered, and could not for ſome time be found.

The bank of the river was very abrupt at this place about 23 feet perpendicular. On the edges grew ſmall buſhes and long graſs, a narrow path led along it that would admit but one perſon at a time; Mr. Stuart took this road, and as he examined the buſhes the ſavage ſprung at him from his concealment, he received him on his bayonet, which entered the tyger's breaſt, but the ſhock was ſo ſtrong as to throw the gentleman backward over the precipice, but fortunately without injury, and the tyger was too much hurt to follow.

Mr. Stuart ſoon recovered, and returned with the Sepoys to the attack, and the monſter was killed.

Nothing but his uncommon firmneſs in oppoſing the attack of the animal ſo intrepidly, and his fall over the precipice, could poſſibly have ſaved him from a terrible death.

PHILADELPHIA, October 18.

By Captain Hardie, from Port Republican, we learn, the negroes have taken up arms again—General Rochambeau has muſtered up all the men he could and marched againſt them—that about the 20th of September, the French had one or two very ſevere bruſhes with the blacks, in the neighbourhood of Petit Guave and Leogan, in which it is ſaid the blacks had 400 killed, notwithſtanding which they keep the town of Port Republican in continual alarm, as they are continually committing depredations in the neighbourhood, and prevent any ſupplies coming into the town from the country.

AGRICULTURAL.

A very important ſecret in agriculture was made known, for the communication of which 200 guineas was previouſly ſubſcribed. It is a preventative for turnips againſt the inſect called fly. "The diſcovery is to ſow 2lb. of radiſh ſeed on every acre of turnip land, with the turnips, which the inventor declares will ſo attract the fly, as to prevent its proving at all injurious to the turnips." [Lond. Pap.

A perſon ſaid to a miſer one day, with whom he was very intimate, "I am now going a journey, give me your ring, which I will keep about me, and whenever I fee it I fhall remember you." He anfwered, " If you want to remember me, whenever you fee your finger naked, always think of me, that you wanted a ring of fuch a man, and he did —not give it."

UPPER-CANADA.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,

Lieutenant Governor of the ſaid Province of Upper-Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, paſſed in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, at any time during the ſpace of three years from the paſſing thereof, was empowered to iſſue Commiſſions, and the Commiſſioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Caſes in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not iſſued—AND WHEREAS, Commiſſions were accordingly iſſued, and the Commiſſioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon ſome of the Claims that came before them; but many Perſons, during the ſpace of the laid three years, neglected to come forward and give the neceſſary notice to inſtitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the ſaid Commiſſioners to proſecute ſuch Claims, or came unprepared with the neceſſary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof eſſential to the eſtabliſhment of their ſaid Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Perſon or by Agent, or to take any proper ſteps for aſcertaining their Titles in manner by the ſaid Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithſtanding ſuch manifeſt inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majeſty's Subjects, the ſaid Act was, by another Statute paſſed in the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but ſuch indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of thoſe for whoſe benefit the Law was paſſed.

AND WHEREAS, in the laſt Seſſion of the Parliament of this Province, the Legiſlature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may aſſert their Claims, in all Caſes where the Faith of Government ſtands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not iſſued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commiſſions were iſſued, and the Commiſſioners duly attended at the reſpective times when the Aſſizes were held for the ſeveral Diſtricts in this Province, but ſome of the Parties, who had given notice of aſſerting Claims, came in the ſame unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all: ſo that, if ſuch groſs negligence and inattention is perſevered in, the ſalutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in aſſenting to ſuch repeated extenſions of ſo indulgent a Law, will be altogether diſappointed and fruſtrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commiſſioners named in the ſeveral Commiſſions, iſſued under the Authority of the laſt mentioned Statute, will, for the purpoſe of deciding on all ſuch Claims as aforeſaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home Diſtrict, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the Firſt Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the Diſtrict of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the Diſtrict of Newcaſtle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland Diſtrict, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the Diſtrict of Johnſtown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eaſtern Diſtrict, on the Firſt Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the Diſtrict of London, at the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Weſtern Diſtrict, alſo at the time of the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the ſaid Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Perſons intereſted will give Notice, according to Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo grotly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

ACTS OF GOVERNMENT.

REPORT made to the FIRT CONSUL, in Senate, by the Miniſter for Exterior Relations, the 20th Fructidor, (7th Sept.) year 10.

The Firſt Conſul having ordered me to render him an account, in Senate, of the differences which have lately happened between the French Republic and the Regency of Algiers, and of the ſucceſs attending the meaſures which have been taken to terminate them, I ought previouſly to recall the ſtate of affairs which preceded them.

From the frontiers of Egypt to the ſtreit of Gibraltar, the north of Africa, is poſſeſſed by a people ſtrangers to the public code of Europe. The principles and manners, which, if we may be allowed the expreſſion, combine the different European powers into one ſociety, which not only prohibit oppreſſion, but enjoin kind reception, protection and aſſiſtance in caſe of danger, to the navigation and commerce of a peaceable people; which reprove every unjuſt aggreſſion; which tarniſhes that valor that is attended with cruelty, and which deſire that the rights of humanity ſhould always remain ſacred: theſe manners are ſtill unkown to the people of thoſe countries.

They acknowledge no other right of nations than the laws of their own police, which, permitting amongſt themſelves individual violences, authorize them with reſpect to foreigners, and even conſecrate them as acts of courage towards enemies. They are ignorant that the law of nations, by its general rules, abolliſhes thoſe general rights, which a people too much inſtated with their local importance, pretend to infer from the licence of their uſages. It is to be believed, for the honor of Europe, that in this reſpect the ſupremacy of the law of nations, aſſigning juſt limits to the toleration of particular legiſlations, ſhall not, henceforward, be contemned, excepting in Africa.

The Regency of Algiers is particularly remarkable for an audacity which certain events muſt have increaſed.

Charles the Vth. turned againſt Africa his victorious arms. He wiſhed to deliver Europe from the incurſions of barbarians, by reducing them to inſignificance; but the event deceived him, and did not anſwer to the grandeur of his preparations.

In later times, Louis XIV. avenged on the Algerines the honor of the French flag. Algiers, by his orders, was bombarded three times in the ſpace of ſix years; but here his vengeance was bounded. The affairs of Europe exacted all his attention. The Algerines, by this circumſtance, however, learned from that period to reſpect France, and the peace, which was concluded in 1689, ſubſiſted above a century, when the inſtances and orders of the Sublime Porte cauſed it in the year 7, to be broken.

Of the enemies which remained to France, when the Firſt Conſul aſſumed the reigns of government, the Regency of Algiers was the leaſt formidable. The Firſt Conſul, anxious to extinguiſh, every where, the calamities of war, apprized that the Dey of Algiers had declared war againſt his inclination, and was deſirous of peace, ſent a negociator to Algiers, preceded by the renown of thoſe exploits of which Italy, Germany, Egypt and Syria had been the theatre; the Firſt Conſul's envoy was received as he ought to have been. Peace was decreed and even proclaimed in the divan. However, a new interpoſition of the Sublime Porte, poſtponed the ſignature. War appeared to recommence, but it was a war without hoſtilities. All the French were permitted freely, to retire from Algiers with all their property, and the Agent of France waited at Alicant for the moment when negociations could be reſumed.

In ſhort, a definitive treaty which aſſures to France all the advantages ſtipulated by the ancient treaties, and which by new ſtipulations, guaranties more explicitly and fully the liberty of French commerce and navigation with Algiers, was ſigned the 7th of laſt Nivoſe.

The general peace was concluded, and commerce began to reſume its accuſtomed routine.

But very ſoon we learned, that Algerine armaments overrun the Mediterranean, defolating the commerce of France, and infeſting its coaſts. Even the flag and territory of the French Republic was not reſpected by the corſairs of the Regency. They carried into Algiers tranſports which ſailed from Toulon deſtined for St. Domingo. They ſeized a Neapolitan veſſel, in the ſeas, and almoſt within the banks of France. An Algerine raid dared, in the road of Tunis, to make a captain of a French merchantman ſubmit to infamous treatment. The barques of the coral company, which agreeably to the terms of the treaty, went to fiſh for coral, were violently driven from the coaſt. The Charge d'Affairs in vain demanded ſatisfaction; they had the preſumption to make him propoſitions injurious to the dignity of the French nation—that France ſhould purchaſe the execution of the treaty.

Informed of theſe aggreſſions, the Firſt Conſul ordered a naval diviſion to ſail for Algiers.

I tranſmit by his orders, the inſtructions to the Charge d'Affairs, the citizen Dubois Thainville, who depoſited himſelf with as much energy and dignity, as he conducted with prudence.

The diviſion commanded by the contre-admiral Leiſſegues, appeared before Algiers the 17th Thermidor, adjutant commandant Huilin, an officer of the palace, was on board, the bearer of a letter from the Firſt Conſul to the Dey.

On the 18th this officer went on ſhore, was received with diſtinction, preſented to the Dey, and delivered the Firſt Conſul's letter, which was conceived in the following terms:—

"BONAPARTE, Firſt Conſul, to the very high and very magnificent Dey of Algiers: whom God preſerve in proſperity and glory!

"I write you this letter direct, becauſe I know that you have miniſters who deceive you, and who induce you to conduct yourſelf in a manner that may bring upon you the greateſt misfortunes.—This letter will be delivered into your own hands by an adjutant of my palace. His purport is to demand from you prompt reparation, and ſuch as I have a right to expect, from the ſentiments you have always entertained for me. A French officer has been beaten in the road of Tunis by one of your officers Rais. The Agent of the Republic has demanded ſatisfaction and could not obtain it. Two brigs of war have been taken by your corſairs, which carried them to Algiers, and have retarded them on their voyage.—A Neapolitan veſſel has been ſeized by your corſairs in the road of Hieres, by which act the French territory has been violated. In ſhort, of the veſſel which was caſt away laſt winter on your coaſt, 150 men are ſtill miſſing, detained in the hands of barbarians. I demand reparation from you for all theſe grievances: and not doubting but that you will take all the meaſures which I ſhould take in ſimilar circumſtances, I diſpatch a veſſel to bring home to France the 150 miſſing men. I beſeech you moreover to miſtruſt thoſe of your miniſters who are enemies to France; you cannot have greater enemies, and if I deſire to live in peace with you, it is eſſential, that you ſhould preſerve the good underſtanding about to be eſtabliſhed, which alone can maintain you in that rank and proſperity you now enjoy: for God has decreed the puniſhment of all thoſe who are unjuſt towards me.

"If you wiſh to live in friendſhip with me, you muſt not expect to treat me as a feeble power; you muſt cauſe the French flag to be reſpected, as likewiſe that of the Italian Republic, which has nominated me its chief, and you muſt make me reparation for all the injuries which I have ſuſtained. This letter being intended for no other purpoſe, I requeſt you to read it yourſelf, with attention, and let me know by return of the officer I ſend you, the reſolution you mean to take."

Whatever were the ſecret intentions of the Dey, he only teſtified the deſire of living in a good underſtanding with the French Republic. "I will always to be," ſays he, "the friend of Bonaparte."

He promiſed and actually gave every ſatisfaction that was demanded.

To render particular homage to the Firſt Conſul, in the perſon of his envoy, he was diſpoſed even to diſpenſe with the ordinary forms, and contrary to the immemorial uſages of the Regency, he received in the moſt magnificent kioſck of his gardens, the officer of the palace, the charge d'affairs of the Republic, the contre-admiral Leiſſegues and his numerous etat major. It was in that place that he delivered to gen. Hullin the anſwer which he had prepared for the Firſt Conſul, in ſubſtance as follows:

"In the name of the only God, the God of mankind, our maſter the illuſtrious and magnificent Lord Muſtapha Pacha, Dey of Algiers, whom God preſerve in glory—

"To our friend Bonaparte, Firſt Conſul of the Republic of France, Preſident of the Italian Republic.

I ſalute you, the peace of God be with you. Henceforth, our friend, I inform you that I have received your letter dated 29th Meſſidor. I have read it; it was delivered to me by the general of your palace, and your (vekil) charge d'affairs, Dubois Thainville. I reply article by article.

1ſt. You complain of rais Ali Tatar, although he is one of my Joldaches. I decreed that he ſhould be put to death. At the inſtant of the execution of his ſentence, your vekil demanded his pardon in your name, as a favor, and for your ſake, I have reprieved him.

2d. You demand from me the Neapolitan polacre, taken, you ſay, under the cannon of France. The particulars of this tranſaction, and reſpective to you, are not correct; but agreeably to your requeſt, I have delivered up eight Chriſtians compoſing its crew; I have furnrendered them to your vekil.

3d. You demand a Neapolitan veſſel, which, it is ſaid ſailed from Corſu with French clearances. No French papers were found on board; but, in conformity to your deſire, I have let the crew at liberty, and have delivered them to your vekil.

"4th. You demanded the puniſhment of the rais who brought into this port two veſſels belonging to the French republic. According to your requeſt I have diſcharged him from my ſervice; but I muſt inform you that my rais know not how to read European characters; they are only acquainted with the uſual paſſports, and for this reaſon, it will be proper that the veſſels of war belonging to the French republic, ſhould make ſome ſignal, whereby they may be known by my corſairs.

5th. You demand 150 men, who you ſay are in my territories: there does not one of them exiſt. It was God's will that they all ſhould periſh, a circumſtance which occaſioned me great pain.

6th. You ſay there are certain perſons who give me counſels that may embroil me with you. Our friendſhip is ſolid and ancient, and all thoſe who ſeek to embroil us, ſhall be diſappointed.

7th. You demand that I ſhall be the friend of the Italian Republic. "I will reſpect its Flag the ſame as yours—as you deſire. Had any one elſe have made a ſimilar requeſt, I would not have granted it for a million of dollars.

8th. You would not give me the 200,000 dollars which I demanded of you, as a recompence for the loſſes which I have ſuſtained for you—Whether you will give them, or will not give them, we will, notwithſtanding always be good friends.

9th. I have terminated with my friend Dubois Thainville, your vekil, every thing reſpecting the coral fiſhery, which your veſſels can immediately reſume. The African Company ſhall enjoy the ſame prerogatives which it formerly enjoyed; I have given orders to the Bey of Conſtantine, to afford it every poſſible protection.

10th. I have ſatisfied you in every reſpect as you have deſired, in whatever you have demanded: in return, you will ſatisfy me, as I have ſatisfied you.

11th. Therefore, I requeſt that you will give orders, that the nations my enemies may not navigate under your flag nor that of the Italian Republic; that there may be no further diſcuſſions between us, as I wiſh always to be friends with you.

12th. I have ordered my Reis to reſpect the French flag at ſea. I will puniſh the firſt who ſhall bring a French veſſel into my ports.

If at any time hereafter any diſcuſſions ſhould be neceſſary between us, write to me direct, and every thing ſhall be amicably arranged.

I ſalute you: may GOD continue you in glory.

Algiers—this 13th of the moon Rabaid-Euel, in the year of the Hegera, 1217."

In concluding this report, I ought to inform the Firſt Conſul, that the Adjutant-Commandant of the palace, Huilin, and the Contre-Admiral Leiſſegues, have fulfilled the commiſſion entruſted to them, with dignity, firmneſs, and circumſpection.

A report prevails that the Ex General La Fayette, has died at one of his eſtates in Brie.

The ſigning of the Treaty of Peace between France and the Porte, was announced the day before yeſterday at the Theatres. At noon, a diſcharge of cannon teſtified the public joy on this happy event.

Accounts from Vienna announce ſeveral changes in the miniſtry, and likewiſe in the other departments of adminiſtration.

The reports from Switzerland are leſs alarming.—A deputy from the leſſer cantons arrived at Berne on the 3d inſt. requeſting from Government a paſſport and a ſafe conduct for ſix deputies, which their cantons propoſe to ſend to Berne. The requeſt was granted.

General Le Clerc has ſent to France an American Tyger. It is his intention to ſend ſome enormous Alligators dried and ſtuffed. One has been taken 29 feet long in the pond of Margoane.—This general has given orders to an officer on a travelling excurſion through South America, to ſend him Vigogna ſheep, llamas, and every other kind of animals, which are not in the National Muſeum. Should any vegetable, mineral or animal productions be found in St. Domingo, which are not in our national collections, Gen. Le Clerc will do all in his power to procute and furnish them.

September 11.

It is announced that Sebastiani chief of brigade is to be sent by government to Algiers. This is the same officer who carried the preliminaries of peace between France and Turkey to Constantinople. His mission to the most formidable and commercial of the barbarian powers, gives room to suspect that government is occupied with plans beneficial not only to France but to all the states bordering on the Mediterranean.

Four persons, one of whom was a woman about 28 years of age, after having been exposed yesterday for four hours at the Palace de Greve, were publicly branded on the right shoulder with the letter F. (Faussaire) counterfeiter. This is the first punishment of the kind that has taken place in France since the abolition of the ancient penal code.

The greatest activity has prevailed at Ostend for a fortnight past, in repairing the dykes and enlarging the basons of that port.

The Vaccine Committee of the Medical Society of Paris has addressed, by the authority of the Minister of the Interior, a letter to all the prefects on the importance of this method of inoculation, and the necessity of practising it in all the departments, where the ignorant alone still oppose its introduction.

General Bernadotte, we understand, arrived at Nancy the 3d instant, at ten o'clock at night.

The Queen of Naples with the princesses, her daughters, and her numerous suite, arrived at Naples the 17th of August.

The preparations making by the court of Spain, for the journey of the royal family, will cost it is said, several millions. Upwards of 400 carriages filled with the paraphernalia of the court, were dispatched from Madrid the beginning of August. The feasts which are to take place at Barcelona, will recall by their taste and magnificence, the sports and tournaments of the ancient Kings of Castile and Leon.

The King of Prussia has promised to establish in his dominions the secularized bishops whose estates have been ceded to him.

HAGUE, Sept. 7.

The collector of the customs has notified the merchants, that Rouen not being one of the ports designated for the entrepot of tobacco, they will not only be refused admittance, but will be liable to seizure, conformably to article II. of the law of the 29th Floreal, year 10. (19th May, 1802.) He accordingly invites them to revoke the orders they may have given for that merchandize, or to alter its destination.

BERNE, August 20.

We hear at this moment that the insurgents have just begun hostilities.—They have taken the post of the Reng, which was occupied by a company of carabiners of the canton de Vaud. The captain and about thirty men have perished in that action. No precise accounts of this unfortunate event have as yet been received; but it appears that this post has suffered itself to be surprized, and that the insurgents have easily rendered themselves masters of it by taking possession of a height that commanded it, and which had been left unguarded.

On hearing the news, Gen. Andermott and the Commissary of Government Keller, gave orders for all the Helvetic forces to advance. They have addressed a last proclamation to the inhabitants of Uzi, Schwitz and Underwalden, summoning them to submit to the government; but things are come to such a pitch, that there is no probability of this summons producing any effect.

RATISBON, August 26.

It is positively known that citizen Laforest is alone, as minister extraordinary of the French republic, to follow the negociations relative to the important affair of the indemnities. Citizen Bacher still continues to remain as chargé d'affaires from France for every thing not connected with the settlement of the indemnities.

The two declarations transmitted the 18th inst. to the directory of the empire by the ministers plenipotentiaries of France and Russia, have yesterday been carried to the diétature and published.

In the conference which took place on the 22d, betwixt the members of the deputation, a difference arose between Hesse Cassel and Wurtemourgh, respecting the priority of vote.

August 28.

The second sitting of the Diet took place on the 26th; the minister of Bohemia, M. de Schrant, gave a very important vote upon the declaration and convention transmitted by the ministers of France and Russia. The following is the substance,

"That the affair of the indemnities being merely an interior concern of the empire, could not be otherwise settled than by the free concurrence and co-operation of its States: that the plan communicated by France and Russia was but a project proposed to the deputation, which the latter could reject, modify or adopt, as it might think proper; that when it related to interests so important as those which now occupy the deputation, no power could prescribe either the steps to be pursued, or, above all a period to its sitting: that however, Bohemia was disposed to do every thing depending on her to accelerate the affair in question.

This declaration of the Court of Vienna, the first that it has published on the subject of the Convention of indemnities, has created a lively sensation amongst the accredited ministers.

A courier from Vienna passed thro' this city the night before last on his way to Paris.

UPPER-CANADA.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, Esquire,

Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper-Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, at any time during the space of three years from the passing thereof, was empowered to issue Commissions, and the Commissioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Cases in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not issued—AND WHEREAS, Commissions were accordingly issued, and the Commissioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon some of the Claims that came before them; but many Persons, during the space of the said three years, neglected to come forward and give the necessary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the said Commissioners to prosecute such Claims, or came unprepared with the necessary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof essential to the establishment of their said Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Person or by Agent, or to take any proper steps for ascertaining their Titles in manner by the said Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithstanding such manifest inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majesty's Subjects, the said Act was by another Statute passed in the Year One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but such indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of those for whose benefit the Law was passed.

AND WHEREAS, in the laſt Seſſion of the Parliament of this Province, the Legiſlature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may aſſert their Claims, in all Caſes where the Faith of Government ſtands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not iſſued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commiſſions were iſſued, and the Commiſſioners duly attended at the reſpective times when the Aſſizes were held for the ſeveral Diſtricts in this Province, but ſome of the Parties, who had given notice of aſſerting Claims, came in the ſame unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; ſo that, if ſuch groſs negligence and inattention is perſevered in, the ſalutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in aſſenting to ſuch repeated extenſions of ſo indulgent a Law, will be altogether diſappointed and fruſtrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commiſſioners named in the ſeveral Commiſſions, iſſued under the Authority of the laſt mentioned Statute, will, for the purpoſe of deciding on all ſuch Claims as aforeſaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

Official note delivered by the Reis Effendi to Alexander Stratton, Eſq. at a conference in his Excellency's Houſe on the canal, of the 29th July, 1802.

It behoves the character of true friendſhip and ſincere regard to promote with cheerfulneſs all ſuch affairs and objects as may be reciprocally uſeful, and many have been long the ſalutary fruits of thoſe ſteady bonds of alliance and perfect good harmony which happily ſubſiſt between the ſublime Porte and the Court of Great Britain: and as permiſſion has heretofore been granted for the Engliſh merchant ſhips to navigate in the Black Sea for the purpoſes of trade, the ſame having been a voluntary trait of his Imperial Majeſty's own gracious heart, as more amply appears by an official note preſented to our friend the Engliſh Miniſter reſiding at the Sublime Porte, dated 3 Gemazial Ahir 1214—this preſent "Takrir" (official note) is iſſued; the Imperial Court hereby engaging that the ſame treatment ſhall be obſerved towards the Engliſh merchant ſhips coming to that ſea, as is offered to the ſhips of powers moſt favored by the Sublime Porte, on the ſcore of that navigation.

The 23d Rebiul Evvel, 1217. (29th July 1802.)

Treaty with France—We learn from unqueſtionable authority that the Treaty is in a very advanced ſtate, and we have the ſatisfaction to believe that it will be brought to a concluſion before the meeting of Parliament. Such is the attention beſtowed upon the ſubject by M. Otto, that ſcarcely a week paſſes without the exchange of ſeveral diſpatches between London and Paris, relative to the articles of the treaty. The anſwers and inſtructions ſent to them are regularly ſubmitted to Lord Hawkeſbury.

MANCHESTER, Sept. 11.

FIRE.

On Tueſday forenoon, there was an alarm of fire in the factory belonging to Meſſrs. Oliphant, in Portland-ſtreet. The moſt immediate aſſiſtance was given—but, notwithſtanding, that part of the building where the fire began (only very lately erected) was ſoon in one flame from the ground to the top, the roof having fallen in, and the ſame of a moſt beautiful day was clouded by this terrific ſight. It was for ſome time hoped, that the other and much larger part of the factory might have been ſaved, and to effect this deſirable object the engines were actively employed; but it was in vain. The flames ſlowly, but effectually, inſinuated themſelves beyond the boundary of the diviſion wall, and in a ſhort time all attempts to extinguiſh them were fruitleſs—every thing was conſumed to the walls, a part of which was obliged to be pulled down in the courſe of the day, from the dangerous ſtate in which they were left. A conſiderable portion of the machinery was taken out in a damaged ſtate.

It is evident from this fatal accident, and the time it happened, that whenever a factory takes fire, and is unchecked only for a ſhort period, the deſtruction of it is certain, hence the very great danger is apparent of their being immediately near dwelling houſes. A houſe formed part of the building of the factory deſtroyed, and it is materially injured; but apparently, in a great meaſure owing to there being timber in the diviſion wall. In ſome factories, we underſtand, there are party walls built of ſuch ſtrength, at certain diſtances, and without any opening thro' them, as in all probability, would bound the ravages of fire. Such, it appears, is the dread of the work people, on the alarm of fire in a factory, that recollection is loſt; for we underſtand there were pipes in all the rooms of the late building, which by turning the cocks belonging to them, would in a few minutes have covered every floor with water. It is alſo a practice to have tubs of water in each room, with blankets ready to immerſe and throw over any part of the works that may take fire.

We have been told of a gentleman who regularly exerciſes his people at appointed poſts, as in caſe of fire, and that he has a bell, which is only uſed on ſuch occaſions. Every precaution is deviſed, we believe, for ſecurity, and it is obviouſly neceſſary.

The fire began in a machine-maker's work ſhop, on the ground floor of the building, and was cauſed by ſome timber being put to the ſtove pipes to dry. The loſs is upwards of twenty thouſand pounds; but we underſtand the property is inſured. Happily there were no lives loſt; but ſeveral perſons were hurt in the courſe of giving aſſiſtance.

PUBLIC OFFICE, SHADWELL.—A few days ſince, the caſe of the Maſe of the veſſel who was ſuppoſed to have deſtroyed himſelf entering the harbour of Baltimore, in America, and the Lady who threw herſelf from on board the ſame veſſel at the ſame time, came on to be inveſtigated at this office, when a few new facts came out. It appeared, the body of Joſeph White was found ſhot through the heart, at the bottom of the ſteerage, about three in the morning; all the crew heard the report of the piſtol, and a moment after ſaw a young and beautiful female paſſenger ruſh up the ſteerage, undreſſed, and threw herſelf into the ſea. The coroner's jury at Baltimore, gave their verdict wilful murder on the body of White, but could not tell by whom. As far as the evidence went, it appeared the ſhip left Cymington Roads, her crew conſiſting of Americans, Germans, and one Engliſhman, forming the complement of the ſhip for navigating her, beſides four paſſengers, three females and a male, all natives of England going to America. The voyage laſted forty-three days.—When in the chops of the Chelapeak, in America, Joſeph White, the firſt mate, during ſupper, went from table upon deck, and ſtruck the officer ſecond to him, whereupon a general confuſion took place on board the veſſel, ſuppoſed to have originated in contending for the favor of the ladies.

LIVERPOOL, September 18.

Particulars of the Explotion of the Powder-Mills at Faverham:—

On Tueſday afternoon, a few minutes after three o'clock, the corning mill, No. I, part of the Royal gun-powder mills, ſituate at out three quarters of a mile North Weſt of the town of Faverſham, blew up, with a moſt tremendous exploſion, and killed ſix men, who were at work therein, and three horſes. The fragments of the building were diſperſed in thoufands of pieces over the adjoining grounds, and the maſſy preſſes and mill timbers ſplintered and diſplaced in ſuch a manner as to preſent a heap of ruins impoſſible for words to deſcribe; but owing to the chofen ſituation of the corning mills, and drying ſtoves, which were removed from the town after the dreadful accident in 1781, and the further judicious precautions of detaching the buildings from each other, raiſing banks of earth between ſome, and ſurrounding others with ſtrong hedges and plantations of wood, the deſtruction has not extended beyond the place where it began.

AMERICAN CONSULATE.

LONDON, Sept. 2, 1802

The Conſul of the United States has the ſatisfaction of announcing to his fellow citizens reſident in Great Britain, that by official diſpatches juſt received from Tangier, he is informed of the re eſtabliſhment of Peace between the United States and his Highneſs the Emperor of Morocco; and that there is no longer any danger to be apprehended from the Moorith cruizers.

(Signed) GEO. WM. ERVING.

Fifteen hundred Poles under the guidance of Koſciuſko, are ſtated to be on the eve of leaving their country, for the purpoſe of forming a colony on the banks of the Suſquehanna.

It appears by a private letter from Paris of a very recent date, that the Chief Conſul is ſeriouſly offended at the late conduct of his repreſentative at the Court of Lifbon. When he was informed that General Lafnes, contrary to received uſages, and in oppoſition to all laws of delicacy, ſuffered ſeveral veſſels laden with merchandize, reputed contraband in Portugal, to come to Lifbon, and unſhuſhingly to have their cargoes diſpoſed of at his own houſe, his indignation became extreme. —Theſe circumſtances Bonaparte learned by diſpatches, which with the utmoſt ſpeed had been tranſmitted to him by the Prince Regent; he in conſequence inſtantly ſent off a meſſenger to meet General Lafnes, with preremptory orders for him not to come to Paris, but to remain at Tarbes in the Upper Pyrenees, where his brother is Preſect; his ſucceſſor at the Court of Lifbon is not yet known.

The advices from Switzerland, of the 2d of September, bring intelligence of a formidable reſiſtance to the new order of things in the Petty Cantons, and a ſtrong diſpoſition to ſecond it in the larger ones. It appears that in the late affairs at Reng, the troops of the Petty Cantons ſurpriſed the garriſon, the advanced guard having been withdrawn, in conſequence of the badneſs of the weather.

We obſerve with concern, that while the produce of France is daily imported into this country, our veſſels continue to be ſeized and condemned upon the ſlighteſt pretences, in the ports of the Republic.

The Fribley, of Sunderland, arrived in Yarmouth Roads from Charante, which ſhe left on the 2d inſtant, with brandies, has brought intelligence of the condemnation of the George of London, captain Y unghan, and of the ſeizure of the Jemis, captain Muckle, at that place. The former had merely a few crates of earthen-ware on board, and the latter ſome ſtockings and waiſtcoat pieces of Britiſh manufacture.

September 15.

This morning we received Paris papers to the 12th inſt.

La Fotet, the French Miniſter Extraordinary at the Diet of Ratiſbon, has returned an anſwer to the Aulic Reſcript, preſented by the Sub-Delegate of Bohemia, in which he merely ſtates the diſpoſition of France and Ruſſia to co-operate in their propoſed plan of indemnities for the tranquility and happineſs of the Empire. An Extraordinary Depu ation held a new ſitting on the 31ſt ult. in which Brandenburg, Bavaria and Heſſe Caſſel, are ſaid to have given their votes. It is reported that a proteſt will be ſigned by the Miniſter of Wurtzbourg againſt the ſyſtem of indemnities, and that it is to be enforced by remonſtrances on the part of the Sub Delegate of Bohemia.

PRINCE HENRY's WILL.

BERLIN, AUGUST 25.

The laſt will of the late Prince Henry of Pruſſia, is now publiſhed, bearing date the 25th Feb. 1802. The following is a copy of it.

"I will die left in the place where I may be, whether in bed or in a chair, till no doubt ſhall remain of my death—but while even uncertainty remains, the drawers and cloſets in the chamber where I perform the laſt act of life, ſhall be ſealed. When it is certain that I am no more, my corpſe ſhall be laid on a ſimple tent bed. I will not trouble my domeſtics to adorn me; and, ſince cuſtom, however, requires it, I will be dreſſed in my oldeſt regimentals; and, ſhould my legs be ſwelled, my boots ſhall be cut open, it does not ſignify, ſo they are only fit for a dead man to wear. Beſides thoſe who place a real intereſt in my lots, no one ſhall be permitted to ſee me. I will not tend to an odious and diſguſting ſpectacle, by being exhibited to the public.

"Count Roeder ſhall announce my deceaſe to the King; at the ſame time telling him, that Count De la Roche Aymon, being charged with my laſt will as to my interment, ſhall afterwards diſcharge a private commiſſion, and deliver him ſomething from me; he ſhall tell him that, according to this will, I am to be interred at Rheinſberg; that that ſame defire ſtood in my teſtament, which I requeſt him to open ſpeedily; that my burial-place was tolerable, and that I made an epitaph upon myſelf, which muſt remain on the ſtone that is to be placed at the vault on the very day of my interment. That I deſire neither flambeaux nor lights around my coffin, it being to be cloſed as ſoon as it ſhall be ready and I put into it, not wiſhing to ſtay a moment longer above the earth, than is neceſſary to aſcertain my death.

"A ſingle perſon ſhall guard my corpſe, to keep the cats and dogs from it. I do not wiſh to torment people after my deceaſe, to ſit up by an inanimate creature; no cords, no fringe, either in or upon my coffin. The day of interment, being fixed, it ſhall have place at noon, if in the winter, if ſummer, at four or five o'clock: without any other pomp, my domeſtics ſhall carry my corpſe down the ſtairs, and through the ſaloon of yellow marble, to the reſidence of my diſſolution, which is not far off: as ſoon as the coffin is put in there, the tomb ſtone, which I have had engraved, ſhall be placed at the entrance by the Architect Reinert; and this having occurred, all is done.—I belong no more then to the kingdom of the living.

"I beſeech the Count De la Roche Aymon to ſummon together the gentlemen who ſhall have attended me to my death, with the Private Secretary Le Beaud, and the Architect Reinert, in an apartment of the Caſtle, after my interment. Firſt, I proteſs my acknowledgements to the Count De la Roche Aymon, for his tender attachment to me all the time I had the happineſs of his company. I requeſt him to tell thoſe gentlemen, that I die grateful; that I pray them to proteſt each other during their lives; this being the greateſt evidence they can give the world that my memory has not eſcaped them.

"I alſo with the Count De la Roche Aymon to call together all my chamberlains, cooks, muſicians and lacqueys, and to have the politeneſs to thank them in my name, for the ſervices which they have rendered me, telling them all, from the firſt to the laſt, that I have made a Will, by which I have bequeathed remembrances in money or effects; that each, when the King has opened it, ſhall know what my friendſhip or gratitude bequeathes; but that it is natural, without diſreſpect to any one, for me to eſtimate thoſe who, in my opinion, have been ſincere and open, and moſt truly attached to me; and therefore, by favoring the one more than the other, I have only followed the impulſe of my heart. That I, moreover, being only able to diſpoſe of a part of my property, have not had it in my power to do more than it will be found I have done: but that I requeſt every one to be ſatisfied; and the property that he got, to conſider as the property I wiſh to all; I dying in the hope, that there can be no greater proof of attachment given to my aſhes, than that no one murmurs at the ſtile or the much of the diſtribution. Moreover, I have recommended thoſe who have ſerved me, to the king and my heirs, not doubting but that act of my laſt teſtament will be executed.

" The ſword which I wore in the ſeven years war, ſhall be delivered to the Count De la Roche ; and I requeſt him after my interment, to repair to the king and to aſſure him of my laſt wiſhes for him and the ſtate ; at the ſame time handing my ſword to him, with the prayer in my name, to have it preſerved in memory of the faithfulneſs with which I have ſerved my country. Thus is the laſt act of my life terminated.—Eternally farewell !"

UPPER-CANADA.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,

Lieutenant Governor of the ſaid Province of Upper-Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, paſſed in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, " An Act for Securing " the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, at any time during the ſpace of three years from the paſſing thereof, was empowered to iſſue Commiſſions, and the Commiſſioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Caſes in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not iſſued—AND WHEREAS, Commiſſions were accordingly iſſued, and the Commiſſioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon ſome of the Claims that came before them ; but many Perſons, during the ſpace of the ſaid three years, neglected to come forward and give the neceſſary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard ; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the ſaid Commiſſioners to proſecute ſuch Claims, or came unprepared with the neceſſary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof eſſential to the eſtabliſhment of their ſaid Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Perſon or by Agent, or to take any proper ſteps for aſcertaining their Titles in manner by the ſaid Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithſtanding ſuch manifeſt inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majeſty's Subjects, the ſaid Act was, by another Statute paſſed in the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years ; but ſuch indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of thoſe for whoſe benefit the Law was paſſed.

AND WHEREAS, in the laſt Seſſion of the Parliament of this Province, the Legiſlature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may aſſert their Claims, in all Caſes where the Faith of Government ſtands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not iſſued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commiſſions were iſſued, and the Commiſſioners duly attended at the reſpective times when the Aſſizes were held for the ſeveral Diſtricts in this Province, but ſome of the Parties, who had given notice of aſſerting Claims, came in the ſame unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; ſo that, if ſuch groſs negligence and inattention is perſevered in, the ſalutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in aſſenting to ſuch repeated extenſions of ſo indulgent a Law, will be altogether diſappointed and fruſtrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commiſſioners named in the ſeveral Commiſſions, iſſued under the Authority of the laſt mentioned Statute, will, for the purpoſe of deciding on all ſuch Claims as aforeſaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home Diſtrict, on the Twenty-Third Day of December next, on the Firſt Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the Diſtrict of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the Diſtrict of Newcaſtle, on the Twenty Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland Diſtrict, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN for the Diſtrict of Johnſtown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eaſtern Diſtrict, on the Firſt Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the Diſtrict of London, at the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Weſtern Diſtrict, alſo at the time of the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the ſaid Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Perſons intereſted will give Notice, according to Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſsly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

EXTRACTS

FROM LONDON PAPERS.

September 17—24.

We underſtand the ſhip owners at Leith, Kirkaldie, Shields, Sunderland, Burlington, Briſtol, and ſome other ports, have determined to co-operate with the ſhip owners in London, in the recent eſtabliſhment of the ſociety of ſhip owners of Great Britain, and it is thought the meaſure will be generally adopted at all the Out Ports.

A letter received from Canton, ſays, "In China, marriage with the poor, is a meaſure of prudence, becauſe the children, particularly the ſons, are bound to maintain their parents. This union, therefore, takes place whenever there is the leaſt proſpect of ſubſiſtence for a future family. Children, however, born without means being had of providing for them, are ſometimes abandoned by the wretched authors of their being. Superſtition comes in aid to reconcile this horrid practice to the mind. The child is conſidered as a holy offering to the ſpirit of the adjoining river, in which the infant is thrown, with a gourd ſuſpended from its neck, to keep it from immediate drowning.—Female infants are for the moſt part choſen, as the leſs evil for this cruel ſacrifice, and a faint hope is generally entertained, that they may yet be ſaved from untimely death. Government appoints perſons to collect theſe miſerable objects, for the purpoſe of providing for ſuch as are found alive, and for burying thoſe who have already expired. The miſſionaries in Pekin, have baptized ſome thouſands, before death has taken place."

We are glad to hear, by a letter received from Bombay, that a conſiderable trade has been opened with Japan, which is ſtated to be the richeſt country in the world, for gold, ſpices, ſilks, ſilver, &c. The Emperor is, fortunately, well-diſpoſed towards the Engliſh; his capitol is at Jeddo, being 9 miles in length, and ſix in breadth, and contains 1,000,000 inhabitants. A fire happened in 1658, which, in the ſpace of forty eight hours, burnt down 100,000 houſes, and in which a vaſt number of inhabitants periſhed. The Emperor's Palace was reduced to aſhes—but the whole is re-built. The Royal Palace is in the middle of the town, and is defended by walls, ditches, towers and baſtions: Where the Emperor reſides, are three towers, nine ſtories high, each covered with plates of gold, and the hall of audience, is ſupported by pillars of maſſy gold. Though much benefit may be derived from a commercial intercourſe with Japan, yet the natives are ſuſpected of jealouſy, which time and a better underſtanding may remove.

LONDON, September 22.

We yeſterday received the Paris Journals of the 20th inſt. They inform us, that the affair of the indemnities ſeems to be definitively concluded, unleſs the Emperor ſhould endeavor by force of arms to procure more favorable terms; a reſolution which the conſtant reinforcement of his army would ſeem to indicate.

The Revolution in Helvetia is daily aſſuming more conſiſtency. The influence of the French party is already greatly diminiſhed; and is likely, by ſome recent events, to be entirely deſtroyed. The Cantons of Glaris and Appenzel, the two diſtricts of Rhodon, a part of the Griſons, and even Zug, as far as the preſence of a battalion of troops of the line permits, have followed the example of the three primitive Cantons. The troops of the Gaulo Helvetic government amount only to 2800 men, and they have not money enough to raiſe or ſupport more. By accounts of the 12th of September, the ſpirit of inſurrection has extended to the Canton of Zurich. The exiſting central government, as it is called, having ſent a battalion of troops of another Canton, having oppoſite opinions, to take poſſeſſion of the town of Zurich, the inhabitants refuſed them admiſſion. Upon their refuſal, General Andermatt ordered that it ſhould be occupied by ſeveral companies of troops of the line. The unexpected arrival of this force produced great agitation among the inhabitants; they collected very tumultuouſly, and as the effervecence ſeemed to be carried to a very high degree, the Municipality, not chooſing to take upon themſelves all the reſponſibility, thought proper to call to their aſſiſtance ſix perſons of the greateſt influence in the town. After due deliberation, it was reſolved to guard againſt all ſurprize by refuſing admiſſion to the troops. The Municipality of Zurich wrote to the Helvetic Commander, that the citizens would guard their own walls, and wiſhed to ſee no more foreign troops among them; that notwithſtanding he would be permitted to enter, on condition that his ſoldiers ſhould be lodged in barracks, guarded by the citizens.—Immediately afterwards, citizens Teiſs and Schmitz left Zurich to have an explanation with the Central Government. That took place on Tueſday.

General Andermatt, informed of theſe movements, left Lucerne on the 12th, with all the troops and artillery in the place. He arrived at night before Zurich; and at half paſt two in the morning cauſed the town to be ſummoned, by the ſound of the trumpet, to open its gates. The commandant of Zurich replied, that he would ſend his requeſt to the Municipality, and would wait their orders. Upon which General Andermatt began to bombard the town with ſhells; he fired 160, beſides ſome four and ſix pound balls.—But his ammunition was ſoon expended, and he had no more than 2000 men. He offered, at nine o'clock, to ſuſpend hoſtilities, provided that the town was put into his hands, until he could receive ulterior orders from his government. In effect, an armiſtice was agreed upon till Saturday, at ſix o'clock in the evening; but the citizens, enraged at the attack made upon them, and encouraged by the bad ſucceſs of the morning attack, (there were none killed or wounded, and the fire occaſioned by the ſhells was ſoon extinguiſhed) refuſed all other arrangement. Their friends from the country were arriving every hour to the ſuccour of Zurich, particularly old General Steiner, who at eighty years of age, entered the city at the head of three hundred men well armed. Such was the ſtate of things on the 12th inſt.

A ſuſpenſion of arms for an unlimited time was agreed upon between the three Cantons and the Central Government. The following are ſaid to be the conditions:

"1. Hoſtilities are not to recommence till after three days reciprocal notice.

"2. The paſſage of merchandize & proviſions ſhall be free during the continuance of the armiſtice.

"3. The reſpective armies ſhall take the poſition they may think proper, it being underſtood that they ſhall not paſs the line they actually occupy."

The Deputies of the three Cantons wiſhed to extend the armiſtice to thoſe of Glaris and Appenzel; but the Helvetian General declared his power did not extend ſo far.

When it is recollected that the people of Switzerland do not take up a cauſe without the moſt mature deliberation, we fee little chance of the ſpeedy re-eſtabliſhment of peace among them. France is obviouſly reduced to the alternative of reſtraining the ancient federative union, under which the country exiſted in perfect ſecurity and happineſs for nearly five centuries, or of marching into the heart of it, and maintaining there an army to enforce the new conſtitution.

HAGUE, Sept. 11.

The French garriſon are to quit us the day after to-morrow, to embark for Louiſiana. They will not be replaced by other troops.

The ſixteen ſhips fitted out from this country, for Greenland, on the whale fishery, are all now returned, having caught, in the whole, 62 fiſh.

There is a ſtrong report at this place of an approaching definitive alliance between France, Pruſſia, and Ruſſia.

TROUBLES IN SWITZERLAND.

BERNE, Sept. 11.

The ſpirit of inſurrection which has already ſeparated from Helvetia the Cantons of Glaris, Schwitz, Uri, Appenzel, and the country of the Griſons, ſpreads more and more. That of Zug is alſo on the point of declaring againſt the government. At Baden, the fermentation daily increaſes. At Zurich, the former chiefs of the canton have deliberated in private aſſemblies, on the admiſſion of a new conſtitution, and have been able to prevent the picked troops of Leman from entering their city. The gates have been ſhut againſt them, and they have been obliged to encamp without the walls. We learn from Arau, that hoſtilities have been commenced in the neighbourhood of that city. A mutual cannonading took place. The troops of the Pais-de-Vaude fired red hot ſhot on the place, which took fire in ſeveral quarters. We expect further details with impatience.—Such is the poſition of Helvetia.

Mr. Otto's plate, pictures, &c. were packing up yeſterday, previous to his departure. M. Otto deſerves much praiſe for the addreſs and decorum with which he has conducted himſelf during his reſidence in England, a period of the greateſt intereſt to the peace and tranquility of both nations. It is believed that he will leave London immediately on the arrival of General Andreoſſi.

DREADFUL FIRE.

SOLINGEN (Germany,) Aug. 27.

Laſt Tueſday was a day of horror, deſvaſtation, and alarm to the town of Tade. In the morning, at nine o'clock, a fire broke out, within the walls of that place, in a brew-houſe, which increaſed with ſuch fury, that in leſs than two hours the whole town conſiſting of 182 houſes, was laid in aſhes. There is ſcarcely a veſtage left of any houſes, except here and there the piece of a wall. The Roman church is ſtanding. The Lutheran church lies in ruins; and the Reformed Church has loſt part of its roof.

It is heart-rending to obſerve the miſery of the poor inhabitants, who could ſcarcely ſave any thing from the flames and are now without food or covering in the orchards and the fields. It falls peculiarly hard on the aged, the infants at the breaſt, the infirm and the ſick; and unleſs ſpeedy aſſiſtance be offered them, they muſt inevitably ſink under the load of their miſeries and wants. Several of the inhabitants periſhed in the flames; among whom was a Calviniſtical Miniſter of the Goſpel, aged 70.

GENOA, Auguſt 14.

A treaty is negociating between our Republic and France, by which the former renounces its ancient pretenſions to the iſland of Corſica and Capraia: the latter receives in return Oneglia and Loano, with their dependencies.

The Firſt Conſul has required our Government to fit out and ſend ſhips of war againſt the African pirates.

THE Subſcriber informs the Public that he has removed to the Houſe lately occupied by ALEXR. M'DONELL, Eſq. Sheriff, which he has fitted up in a convenient manner and opened as a

THE ORACLE.

YORK.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1802.

To the Printer of the UPPER CANADA GAZETTE.

SIR,

I With you would make it generally known, through your uſeful paper, for the ſatisfaction of the public, that Mr. Lafelle, who was ſo very dangerouſly wounded by Mr. Williams at Fort Erie, is ſo far recovered, that he has been permitted to croſs the Lake to viſit his friends at Detroit. It is but juſtice to obſerve, that this very extraordinary cure is principally owing to the ſkill and attention of James Muirhead, Eſq; ſurgeon, of Niagara. When we conſider the nature of the wounds, one of which was five inches deep under the arm, and the other quite through to the lungs, ſo that their action in reſpiration could be diſtinctly perceived, we muſt own the value and merit of the ſurgeon, whoſe ſkillful applications and care contributed ſo much to this cure; much the greateſt that has been effected ſince the province was eſtabliſhed. This praiſe will be more freely given, when we recollect, that on the ſafety of this life depended that of another.

I am, Sir,
your obedient humble ſervant,
JUSTUS.

UPPER-CANADA.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY
PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,
Lieutenant Governor of the ſaid Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, paſſed in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, at any time during the ſpace of three years from the paſſing thereof, was empowered to iſſue Commiſſions, and the Commiſſioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Caſes in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not iſſued—AND WHEREAS, Commiſſions were accordingly iſſued, and the Commiſſioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon ſome of the Claims that came before them; but many Perſons, during the ſpace of the ſaid three years, neglected to come forward and give the neceſſary notice to inſtitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the ſaid Commiſſioners to proſecute

such Claims, or came unprepared with the neceſſary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof eſſential to the eſtabliſhment of their ſaid Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Perſon or by Agent, or to take any proper ſteps for aſcertaining their Titles in manner by the ſaid Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithſtanding ſuch manifeſt inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majeſty's Subjects, the ſaid Act was, by another Statute paſſed in the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but ſuch indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of thoſe for whoſe benefit the Law was paſſed.

AND WHEREAS, in the laſt Seſſion of the Parliament of this Province, the Legiſlature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may aſſert their Claims, in all Caſes where the Faith of Government ſtands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not iſſued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commiſſions were iſſued, and the Commiſſioners duly attended at the reſpective times when the Aſſizes were held for the ſeveral Diſtricts in this Province, but ſome of the Parties who had given notice of aſſerting Claims, came in the ſame unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; ſo that, if ſuch groſs negligence and inattention is perſevered in, the ſalutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in aſſenting to ſuch repeated extenſions of ſo indulgent a Law, will be altogether diſappointed and fruſtrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commiſſioners named in the ſeveral Commiſſions, iſſued under the Authority of the laſt mentioned Statute, will, for the purpoſe of deciding on all ſuch Claims as aforeſaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home Diſtrict, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the Firſt Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the Diſtrict of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the Diſtrict of Newcaſtle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland Diſtrict, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the Diſtrict of Johnſtown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eaſtern Diſtrict, on the Firſt Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the Diſtrict of London, at the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Weſtern Diſtrict, alſo at the time of the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the ſaid Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Perſons intereſted will give Notice, according to Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſsly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

NOTICE TO CLAIMANTS UNDER THE CONVENTION WITH THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

Whereas by the firſt article of the Convention, concluded at London, on the 8th day of January laſt, between his Majeſty and the United States of America, the ſaid United States, in ſatisfaction and diſcharge of the money which they might have been liable to pay, in purſuance of the proviſions of the ſixth article of the Treaty of Amity, Commerce and Navigation, concluded at London, on the 4th day of November, 1794, between his Majeſty and the ſaid United States, (which ſixth article was by the ſaid Convention, declared to be cancelled or annulled, except ſo far as the ſame might relate to the execution of the ſeventh article of the ſaid Treaty) engaged to pay, and his Majeſty engaged to accept, for the uſe of the perſons deſcribed in the ſaid ſixth article, the ſum of ſix hundred thouſand pounds ſterling, payable at the city of Waſhington, in three annual inſtalments, of two hundred thouſand pounds each; and to ſuch perſon and perſons as ſhould be authoriſed by his Majeſty to receive the ſame; the firſt of the ſaid inſtalments to be paid at the expiration of one year, the ſecond at the expiration of two years, and the third and laſt inſtalment at the expiration of three years, next following the exchange of the ratifications of the ſaid Convention: And by the ſecond article of the ſaid Convention, the fourth article of the Definitive Treaty of Peace, concluded at Paris, on the 3d day of September, 1783, between his Majeſty and the ſaid United States, was, ſo far as reſpected its future operation, recognized and confirmed, ſo far as that the creditors therein deſcribed, ſhould thereafter meet with no lawful impediment to the recovery of the full value, in ſterling money, of their bona fide debts.

Letters from Elſineur, ſtate, that the Danes are fortifying the Sound by new batteries, which, when completed, will mount 218 pieces of the heavieſt ordnance.

We are concerned to learn the loſs of the Fortunee frigate off the mouth of the Texel. That ſhip with the Diamond, Capt. Elphinſtone, was employed to convey the Dutch troops from Germany to the Helder. They ſailed from the Downs on Thurſday ſe'nnight and on the following day, off the mouth of the Pexel, experienced a moſt dreadful gale of wind. Both frigates drove over a ſand bank, but the Fortunee unfortunately ſtruck upon another bank, and ſtuck faſt. She is irrecoverably loſt.

We are concerned to ſtate the loſs of his Majeſty's ſhip Le Pomone, of 44 guns, Capt. L. L. Gower, which ſtruck on a rock near Jerſey, and ſoon after ſunk. We are however, happy to add no lives are loſt.

EXTRACTS FROM LONDON PAPERS—SEPTEMBER 17-24.

An Italian Philoſopher has ſtated in a late publication, as the reſult of his obſervations, that lightning never ſtrikes upon the north or north-eaſt of objects. Hence a Pariſian Journaliſt recommends people to take ſhelter in the north ſides of their houſes. We ſhould imagine, however, that if the ſouth-weſt ſide of a man's head were expoſed to lightning, his north-eaſt ſide would not be altogether ſafe!

A remarkable foot-race was run at Newton, in Lancaſhire, laſt week. A man from Saddleworth, in Yorkſhire, and another from Oldam, near Manchester, were the competitors; and the Yorkſhireman ſtaked the other fifty guineas to forty. The diſtance was three times round the Newton courſe, or three miles, which the Yorkſhireman ran in thirteen minutes and fifty ſeconds, having beaten his antagoniſt more than a quarter of a mile. At the concluſion of the race, he offered a conſiderable wager, that he would run round the courſe ten times more, at the ſame rate, which was not accepted. An immenſe concourſe of people were preſent, and bets to the amount of more than 2000l. were depending.

The Glatton is dropped down to St. Helen's. She has 170 female convicts, for Botany Bay, 27 of whom are not 20 years of age!

At the lower parts of a hill ſituated near the city of Catena, in Naples, many fiſſures have been lately perceived, which, more or leſs, emit flames and ſmoke, and ſome diſcharge quantities of lava, which runs into the neighboring valley. The land ſurrounding this hill is barren and ſtony, and incapable of growing vegetables. Phyſicians and Mineralogiſts have been ſent by government to examine the place, who have reported, in the firſt inſtance, that they have found circumſtances ſurpaſſing any thing hitherto met with in their reſearches.

A mine of amber, of the fineſt color, has been diſcovered a few leagues from Laon, in the department of l'Aiſne, in France. The pieces which have hitherto been found, do not preſent, in their interior, any veſtige of plant or inſect; ſeveral have been met with, incruſted with ſulphur of iron. Near the ſame place have alſo been found, ſeveral blocks of wood, almoſt converted into charcoal, ſuppoſed to be parts of trees that have lain in the earth a conſiderable time. Specimens of both have been preſented to the Muſeum of Natural Hiſtory at Paris.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.

In a French journal it is mentioned that on the 16th September, Mr. Fox, and the party at Paris with him affiſted at the extraordinary fitting which took place at the tribunate. A few minutes before the opening of the fitting, citizen Boyer, captain of the guard at the tribune, advanced to Mr. Fox, who was in one of the adjoining rooms, and addreſſed him in the following terms: "I am one, ſir, of 200 French officers, who in the year 3 were priſoners at Porcheſter. We applied to you; you had the generoſity to exert your eloquence in our favour. On a ſudden our chains were broken, and we were almoſt free. This benefit will never be forgotten by my companions in misfortune; but I am at preſent happier than they are, becauſe I am able to declare to you publicly my gratitude. I entreat you to add to it, if it be poſſible, by condeſcending to accept my weak but ſincere expreſſion of it." Mr. Fox appeared to be much affected by this act of gratitude. He replied with a motion of expreſſive modeſty—"Oh, ſir,—yes—I recollect."

FROM PRATT'S GLEANINGS.

SONNET.

AH! why my heart thus nurſe a flame,
Which Reaſon ſhould remove!
Why dwells Remembrance on a name
I dare no longer love!

Yet, oh! the bands affection wove
Were twin'd with ev'ry thought;
While Hope to guard her bloſſoms ſtrove,
Her toiling Sunſhine brought.

And ſtill, though droops the Roſe of Love,
To wiſhing Fancy dear,
Nor can I from this heart remove
The thorn that rankles here.

Fond Memory cheriſhes each faded joy,
And Paſſion ſpares what Reaſon ſhould deſtroy.

It is related of the preſent Emperor of Ruſſia, that on the Chamberlain Wittoffof writing upon him to make a report, reſpecting a new inſtitution for the benefit of the poor, his Majeſty being very buſy, wiſhed to poſtpone it, but aſked what the buſineſs was? "It relates to the poor," replied the Chamberlain. "The affairs of the unfortunate," ſaid the Emperor, "ought to be conſidered before all others, I will attend to it immediately."

A ſea captain having made ſome material blunders in his reckoning, and finding that he could not diſcover the latitude, walked the deck in great deſpondence, wringing his hands, and crying out in a pathetic tone, "Oh! if my dear wife knew where I was."—"By——— (ſaid a ſurly tar) I would much rather, Sir, that you knew yourſelf."

UPPER CANADA.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, Esquire,
Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, at any time during the space of three years from the passing thereof, was empowered to issue Commissions, and the Commissioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Cases in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not issued.—AND WHEREAS, Commissions were accordingly issued, and the Commissioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon some of the Claims that came before them; but many Persons, during the space of the said three years, neglected to come forward and give the necessary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the said Commissioners to prosecute such Claims, or came unprepared with the neceſſary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof eſſential to the eſtabliſhment of their ſaid Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Perſon or by Agent, or to take any proper ſteps for aſcertaining their Titles in manner by the ſaid Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithſtanding ſuch manifeſt inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majeſty's Subjects, the ſaid Act was, by another Statute paſſed in the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but ſuch indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of thoſe for whoſe benefit the Law was paſſed,

AND WHEREAS, in the laſt Seſſion of the Parliament of this Province, the Legiſlature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may aſſert their Claims, in all Caſes where the Faith of Government ſtands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not iſſued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commiſſions were iſſued, and the Commiſſioners duly attended at the reſpective times when the Aſſizes were held for the ſeveral Diſtricts in this Province, but ſome of the Parties, who had given notice of aſſerting Claims, came in the ſame unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; ſo that, if ſuch groſs negligence and inattention is perſevered in, the ſalutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in aſſenting to ſuch repeated extenſions of ſo indulgent a Law, will be altogether diſappointed and fruſtrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commiſſioners named in the ſeveral Commiſſions, iſſued under the Authority of the laſt mentioned Statute, will, for the purpoſe of deciding on all ſuch Claims as aforeſaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home Diſtrict, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the Firſt Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the Diſtrict of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the Diſtrict of Newcaſtle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland Diſtrict, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the Diſtrict of Johnſtown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eaſtern Diſtrict, on the Firſt Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the Diſtrict of London, at the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Weſtern Diſtrict, alſo at the time of the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the ſaid Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Perſons intereſted will give Notice, according to Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſſly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

The King is ſaid to owe his preſent excellent ſtate of health to a material change in his mode of living; for, inſtead of a vegetable diet, and water, he now dines upon fiſh and animal food, with which he takes four glaſſes of port wine. To this change of diet, his Majeſty's phyſicians aſcribe the happy improvement of his ſtrength and ſpirits.

On Saturday diſpatches were received by government from the iſland of Malta. They were brought by the Carriere frigate, captain Maitland, which arrived at Portſmouth on Thurſday night. There are yet no accounts of the iſland being evacuated.

The Druid and Ceres alſo arrived at Portſmouth on Friday, from Jamaica; the former having on board part of the 63d regiment. The Diamond and Alceſte have arrived at the ſame port from the Texel. By theſe diſpatches we learn, that La Fortunee, which ſunk in conſequence of ſtriking on a ſhoal, has been weighed, and is now on her way home, accompanied by La Magicienne.

Captain Whitehead, of the Eagle, revenue cutter, has brought into Newcaſtle a ſmuggling lugger, called the Reſolution of New-York, laden with 740 half anchors of Geneva, off Huntcliff foot, on the Yorkſhire coaſt, on Saturday laſt, and captured after a chaſe of ſix hours, Tynemouth Caſtle then bearing weſt, diſtant 25 miles. She is 76 feet long, and 15 feet 4 inches broad, and is ſuppoſed to have formerly been a privateer.

October 1.

The month of September has been in general remarkably fine and warm all over England, Ireland and Scotland, and its effects, in ripening and getting in the harveſt, have been aſtoniſhing, and call for the gratitude of the people.

GREENOCK, October 1.

The accounts from Switzerland become every day more and more intereſting. A dictator, it is ſaid, is about to be appointed, probably ſome creature of France, who, after bending the people to the yoke of the Great Republic, will confign them to the paternal care of the Chief Conſul.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.

We are indebted to the politeneſs of a reſpectable merchant in this city for a file of the London Morning Chronicle to the night of October inclusive, received this morning by the arrival of the Britiſh Packet, Lord Cheſterfield, in 41 days from Falmouth. We did not get them in time to make many extracts from them for publication this day, and have indeed been able only to look haſtily over the lateſt.—It appears from them that the Emperor ſtill refuſes to agree to the plan of indemnities as propoſed by Ruſſia and France, and that the Firſt Conſul has grown quite impatient at the delay. In order to force the buſineſs to a concluſion of ſome kind, a note in the nature of an ultimatum has been diſpatched from the Bureau of the Miniſter of Foreign Affairs; which if not immediately acceded to, the French Miniſter Laforet, is directed to return home. In that event 30,000 troops are ſaid to be in readineſs to paſs the Rhine to urge the Emperor's compliance by the rhetoric of the ultimatum ratio regum, the bayonet. His Britannic Majeſty has acceded to the plan of indemnities ſo far as reſpects the Houſe of Brunſwick.

The work of a counter revolution in Switzerland appears to be very ſeriouſly progreſſing. The new government has been diſſolved, and the avowed object of its oppoſers is, the reſtoration of the old confederacy. The army conſiſts of 30,000 men and is commanded by Baron D'Erlach and M. D. Wattewille; it has gained an important victory under the walls of Berne, over the army of the government. How far ſucceſs may finally crown their efforts is quite problematical. The Firſt Conſul has interfered in the buſineſs in a pretty imperative manner; his proclamation on the ſubject has, however, been received at Paris with marks of very decided diſapprobation. What effect this may have, or how far the brave ſpirit which has, on former occaſions, ſupported Helvetic liberty, will now animate its followers and guide them to victory, are ſubjects on which we can form no ſatisfactory concluſion. An entire change in the French adminiſtration is about to take place; Lucien Bonaparte is to be miniſter of the marine and war; Joſeph Bonaparte is to be miniſter of the interior and exterior; Talleyrand Perigord is to be made intendant-general of the finances, and Regnier, the grand judge, is to diſcharge the functions of the miniſter of juſtice.

Capt. Allen, arrived here yeſterday from Madeira, informs, that the beginning of September, a Portugueſe ſhip of 44 guns, of the burthen of 1000 tons with 200,000 dollars, and a cargo valued at 90,000l. ſterling, was blown up in the harbour of Madeira—All the crew periſhed except the boatſwain and a boy, who were badly hurt. She belonged to John Crock of Liſbon.

November 27.

ST. DOMINGO.

Capt. Appleton, arrived at Boſton, from Cape Francois, who ſailed from thence Oct. 16, mentions, that the affairs of the French in St. Domingo were in the moſt forlorn ſituation. Port-de-Paix had been burnt, and many whites maſſacred. The ſame fate was impending over Aux-Cayes. Oct. 14, near the Cape, a ſevere action took place between the blacks and the French.—The former were victorious, and took a fort. The evening previous to the engagement 4 negro generals and 2500 black ſoldiers deſerted from Le Clerc. The deſertion of Chriſtophe was expected to follow. A number of Americans, who ſerved, ſome voluntary, others by compulſion, were killed and wounded in this battle. The negroes were conſidered as 15,000 ſtrong; Le Clerck's army was reduced to about 4000. The General, who was without the Cape, doubting his ability to protect the city, ordered the ſick & wounded to be removed, and gave permiſſion for the women and children to depart. The valuable effects were removing on board the fleet. Buſineſs was ſuſpended. The acting American Conſul, Mr. Dodge, had embarked in a veſſel for Portſmouth. American veſſels were embargoed, and ordered off the bar.—Theſe meaſures indicated an expectation of being obliged to abandon the place, Capt. A. adds, that a few hours before he ſailed he was told by the proprietor of the American Coffee-houſe, that it was reported Le Clerc had agreed with the black Commander in Chief, that the French troops ſhou'd leave the iſland in three days—and that an armiſtice had of courſe taken place.

LOSS OF A SPANISH FRIGATE.

On Monday laſt arrived at Boſton, the ſhip Favorite, Captain Pourland, 33 days from Madeira and Teneriffe.—October 24, lat. 36, 44, long. 67, 16, fell in with the Spaniſh frigate Juno, of 34 guns, Don Juan Ignacio Buſtillos, commander, in great diſtreſs, making ſo much water that the greateſt exertions could hardly keep her free.—The Spaniſh captain requeſted captain P. to ſtay by him and aſſiſt in getting the frigate to the neareſt American land, at the ſame time putting on board 3 officers and 4 marines, with proviſions. Capt. P. accompanied the ſhip 3 days—on the fourth, in a very heavy gale from the N. W. he obſerved ſignals of greater diſtreſs and for abandoning the frigate, and run under her lee as near as poſſible. The unfortunate Spaniards waved their handkerchiefs, and ſeemed almoſt in deſpair—and the ſhip roſled as if nearly full of water. At 9 A. M. her main-maſt went over her ſide, and her fore maſt fell alternately from ſide to ſide. Every effort was made to afford her aſſiſtance, but in vain. A log occaſioned captain P. to loſe ſight of her. In half an hour it cleared away, but the ſhip was no more to be ſeen.—Four hundred and thirteen perſons, including ſeveral women and children, were on board. She was bound from Porto Rico to Cadiz, and had 100,000 dollars on board.

FALMOUTH, Oct. 5.

Arrived this day, the Princeſs Amelia Packet, Capt. Stone, with mails from New York and Halifax, in 23 days.

[The following account, taken from the Monthly Magazine, records a ſingular procedure of the French National Convention. It will, we doubt not, be highly intereſting to our curious and learned readers.]

An account of the diſinterments, in the year 1793, of the Kings, Queens, Princes, Princeſſes, and other illuſtrious perſons who had been interred at the Abbey of St. Denis, in France, during a previous period of five hundred years.

On Saturday the 12th October, 1793, the members compoſing the Municipality of Franciade, (formerly St. Denis,) gave the neceſſary orders for carrying into execution the decree of the National Convention, relative to the diſinterment of the coffins depoſited in the Abbey of St. Denais, which were to be ſtripped of the lead which they contained, for the purpoſe of its being manufactured into bullets.

The firſt tomb opened was that of Turenne.* The aſtoniſhment of the workmen and others who preſſed round the ſpot, eager to behold the remains of this great man, was extreme, when upon opening the coffin, Turenne was diſcovered in ſuch a perfect ſtate of preſervation, that not a feature of his countenance was altered. The aſtoniſhed ſpectators admired in theſe cold remains the victor of Turkeim; and forgetting the mortal blow which he received at Saltzbach, every one believed that they ſaw his ſoul again in arms to defend the rights of France. This corpſe, not in the leaſt decayed, was in the ſtate of a mummy, dry, and of a clear brown colour; and perfectly correſponded with the exiſting portraits and medallions of this great warrior.—Upon the ſuggeſtions of ſeveral perſons of diſtinction, who were preſent, this mummy was entruſted to the care of the celebrated Hoff, keeper of the Abbey, who preſerved it in an oak box, and depoſited it in the little veſtry of the church, where he exhibited it to the notice of the curious for more than eight months; after which period it was removed to the Botanical Garden at Paris, on the earneſt requeſt of the learned Profeſſor Deſfontaines, a member of that inſtitution.

On the 24th Germinal, in the year 7, the Executive Directory decreed, that the remains of Turenne ſhould be again removed to the Muſeum of French monuments; and that they ſhould be depoſited in the monument erected in the Elyſian Garden of that eſtabliſhment.

On the firſt of Vendemiaire, in the year 9, conformably to a decree of the Conſuls, the body of Turenne was removed once more, and conveyed with great pomp to the Temple of Mars, formerly the Church of the Invalids, where it was afterwards placed in the interior of the monument, which was originally erected for it in the Abbey of St. Denais; and which had been preſerved from demolition in the Muſeum of French Monuments.

The tomb of the Bourbons was next

* To one ſide of the coffin was affixed a plate of copper, which appeared to be the ſame which had been placed upon the original coffin in which the body of Turenne was incloſed, and upon which was the following inſcription:

"Here lies the body of the moſt ſerene Prince Henry de la Tour d'Auvergne, Marſhal General of the light cavalry of France, Governor of Upper and Lower —, who was killed by a cannon ball the XXVII of July, in the year M, DC, LXXVII."

When the remains of Turenne was removed to the Muſeum of French Monuments, the following inſcription, engraved on a plate of copper, was placed in the inſide of the coffin:

"The remains of Henry de la Tour d'Auvergne, Viſcount Tourenne, killed by a cannon ball, the 27th July, 1675, at the 64 years, near the village of Saltzbach, removed from the Abbey of St. Denais where they had been interred, have been preſerved by the care of Alexandre Lenoir, founder of the Muſeum of French Monuments, executed from hiſtorians, conformably to a decree of the Executive Directory in the fourth year of the Republic one and indiviſible."

opened, on the side of the subterranean chapels; and the workmen began by taking out the coffin of Henry IV. who, according to the plate on his coffin, died in 1610, aged 57 years. The remains of this prince were in such a perfect state of preservation, that his countenance was not in the least changed. He was placed in the coffin of the lower chapels, wrapped in his mantle, which was in equally good preservation. Every one was at liberty to inspect the corpse till Monday the 14th, when it was removed into the choir, and placed on the lowest step of the altar, where it remained till two o'clock in the afternoon, when it was conveyed into the burial ground, called Des Valois, and deposited in a deep grave dug at the lower end of the ground to the right on the north side. This corpse, considered as a dry mummy, had had the skull opened, and the brains taken out; instead of which it contained a quantity of tow, steeped in a liquid essence of aromatics, which still retained its powerful smell, that it was scarcely possible to support it.

"A soldier who was present, inspired by a martial enthusiasm at the moment of opening the coffin, threw himself upon the corpse of the conquetor of the League, and, after a long silence of admiration, drew his sabre, and cut off a long lock from his beard, which was still fresh, exclaiming at the same time, in energetic and truly martial language—"Et moi aussi, je suis soldat Français! Desormais, je n'aurai plus d'autre moustache"—then placing the precious lock upon his upper lip; "Maintenant je vais sur de vaincre les ennemies de la France, et je marche à la victoire."—He immediately retired.

On the same day, the 14th October, the workmen continued their labor, and opened several other coffins of the Bourbons—namely, Louis XIII. who died in 1643, aged 42 years; Louis XIV. who died in 1715, aged 77 years; Marie de Medicis, second wife of Henry IV. who died in 1642, aged 68 years; Anne of Austria, wife of Louis XIII. who died in 1656, aged 64 years; Marie Therese, Infanta of Spain, wife of Louis XIV. who died in 1688, aged 45 years; and Louis the Dauphin, son of Louis XIV. who died in 1711, aged 50 years.

Several of these bodies were very well preserved, particularly that of Louis XIII.—Louis XIV. was also in good preservation; but his skin was as black as ink. The rest were in a state of liquid putrefaction, especially that of the Great Dauphin.

On the 15th of October, twenty-two coffins, also containing remains of the Bourbon family, were opened. These bodies presented nothing remarkable in their appearances, most of them being in a state of putrefaction. A thick and black vapour, attended with an infectious smell, arose from these coffins, which was dispelled by means of burnt vinegar. Several of the workmen were attacked by diarrhea and fever; but without any fatal consequences. Among the bodies disinterred this day, were found, the hearts of Louis the Dauphin, son of Louis XV. who died at Fontainbleau, 20th December, 1766, and of Marie Joseph de Savoie, his wife, who died 13th March, 1767. The hearts were deposited in the cemetry with the other remains of the Bourbons: they were in cases of lead, and of silver, and silver gilt; the latter were delivered to the Municipality, and the former were configned to the commissary of government.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, Esquire,

Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, at any time during the space of three years from the passing thereof, was empowered to issue Commissions, and the Commissioners therein named, were authorised to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Cases in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not issued—AND WHEREAS, Commissions were accordingly issued, and the Commissioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon some of the Claims that came before them ; but many Persons, during the space of the said three years, neglected to come forward and give the necessary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard ; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the said Commissioners, to prosecute such Claims, or came unprepared with the neceſſary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof eſſential to the eſtabliſhment of their ſaid Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Perſon or by Agent, or to take any proper ſteps for aſcertaining their Titles in manner by the ſaid Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithſtanding ſuch manifeſt inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majeſty's Subjects, the ſaid Act was, by another Statute paſſed in the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but ſuch indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of thoſe for whoſe benefit the Law was paſſed.

AND WHEREAS, in the laſt Seſſion of the Parliament of this Province, the Legiſlature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may aſſert their Claims, in all Caſes where the Faith of Government ſtands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not iſſued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commiſſions were iſſued, and the Commiſſioners duly attended at the reſpective times when the Aſſizes were held for the ſeveral Diſtricts in this Province, but ſome of the Parties, who had given notice of aſſerting Claims, came in the ſame unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; ſo that, if ſuch groſs negligence and inattention is perſevered in, the ſalutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in aſſenting to ſuch repeated extenſions of ſo indulgent a Law, will be altogether diſappointed and fruſtrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commiſſioners named in the ſeveral Commiſſions, iſſued under the Authority of the laſt mentioned Statute, will, for the purpoſe of deciding on all ſuch Claims as aforeſaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home Diſtrict, on the Twenty-Third Day of December next, on the Firſt Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the Diſtrict of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the Diſtrict of Newcaſtle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland Diſtrict, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the Diſtrict of Johnſtown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eaſtern Diſtrict, on the Firſt Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the Diſtrict of London, at the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Weſtern Diſtrict, alſo at the time of the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the ſaid Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Perſons intereſted will give Notice, according to Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſſly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

November 13.

LONDON, Oct. 21.

This morning we received Paris journals of the 19th inſt.

The intelligence from Switzerland continues to be very confuſed and contradictory. What is poſitively aſſerted in one quarter, is as poſitively denied in another. But when we conſider that Baſle is in the poſſeſſion of the partizans of the Helvetic government and of the Firſt Conſul, we are inclined to give more credit to the following ſtatements contained in a letter from that place of the 13th inſt. than to any other:

"It is confirmed, that citizen Rapp has not been able to perſuade the Oligarchiſts of Berne to conform to the proclamation of Bonaparte. The definitive anſwer ſent to the Delegate of Bonaparte, has been, 'That the Helvetic Diet of Schwitz would depute two of its members to Paris, to enlighten the mind of the Firſt Conſul.' The Commiſſion of Ten, eſtabliſhed by the government of Berne, has refuſed to diſarm the new Berneſe levies, and to reſtore the Helvetic Senate within the walls of their capital. It was generally aſſerted here yeſterday, that the Berneſe authorities were determined to oppoſe the French troops, if Bonaparte did not modify the diſpoſitions of his proclamation."

An Admiralty expreſs reached Plymouth on Thurſday morning, ordering all the tons of war lying in that port to take in ſtores and proviſions for four months, and prepare immediately for ſea.

L'Avanturiere ſailed with her diſpatches the ſame night.

October 21.

The funds experienced yeſterday a trifling riſe from the price of the preceding day, in conſequence of an application ſent to the Bank from the holders of Omnium, that the directors would delay the final redemption of it until after the Midſummer dividend of next year.

The riſe of the funds was alſo attributed by ſome perſons to the price of French Stocks, which do not appear to have felt the alarm reſulting from the preſent unſettled ſtate of Europe.

Government has received intelligence of very active preparations in the French ports, particularly at Toulon, where the utmoſt diligence is employed to repair the loſſes occaſioned by the victory of Aboukir. It is a faſt, that a greater quantity of naval ſtores of all kinds has been imported into France within the laſt fifteen months from the Baltic, than the amount of the whole ſupply in theſe articles during the 8 preceding years.

We have reaſon to give credit to the report ſome days ſince in circulation, of a compleat union between the Pitts and the Grenvilles, and that the latter are likely to withdraw their hoſtility to the preſent adminiſtrations in the enſuing ſeſſion of parliament. The King's meſſengers have been recently employed in carrying letters backwards and forwards and it is ſaid Lord Grenville has alſo been for a few days at Walmer. We underſtand his Lordſhip was conſulted in the recent change of diſpoſition in our cabinet, in regard to the continent.

It is believed that Malta will at length be ſurrendered to the Emperor of Ruſſia. Certain it is, that it will not be reſtored either to the Knights or to the Neapolitans, which would be in fact throwing the iſland into the hands of France.

PARIS, October 18.

Private letter.—M. Lucien Bonaparte retired to his eſtate at Da Pleſſis, as ſoon as he found that calculations of prudence, or motives of jealouſy, deprived him of the hope of being Firſt Miniſter.

The report of an approaching war increaſes every day, and produces a great ſenſation.—The Conſul has received with much haughtineſs the remonſtrances made by M. de Markow, on the ſubject of his hoſtile plans againſt Switzerland; but this imperious tone may conceal conſiderable irreſolution as to the views of different Powers, and his own perſonal ſituation.

The Conſul anſwered M. de Markow in theſe terms:—"I had rather fall by nobly daring than by an excels of timidity."

The Counſellors of State, Siemme and Bernadotte, continuing to be abſent from the council of ſtate without having functions in the departments in which they reſide, it is reported they are in complete diſgrace, and that they have received orders to ſtay away from Paris till it ſhall be thought proper to recal them.

Orders have been given for repairing the Caſtle of Verſailles. The head quarters of the Legion of Honour will be eſtabliſhed at Fontainbleau.

The burning of the Corn Hall has produced the greateſt conſternation at Paris. There were in this magazine 8000 ſacks of flour, a great part of which is buried beneath the ruins of the dome, which fell in when one-half of the building was untouched. We dare not repeat all the conjectures of the populace reſpecting this event.

The Conſul has had Maſs ſaid every Sunday ſince he has been at St. Cloud, and every time he appoints thoſe who are to accompany him. All ſmile at his devotion, but yet are ſolicitous of the honour. He has not yet dared to render this Maſs quite ſimilar to that of the King, by forming a Chapel Orcheſtra, but this attempt will paſs with others more important which are preparing, in order to realize his pretenſions to Sovereignty and its prerogatives.

Meſſrs. Angereau and Maſſena, ſome days ago, went together to St. Cloud. Bonaparte perceiving them in the circle, approached them with eagerneſs. He took Maſſena apart, and ſpoke to him for ſeveral minutes with much emotion. It is reported that Maſſena will reſume the ſervice, but that Angereau has refuſed, becauſe he could not obtain a Command in Chief.

HAGUE, October 15.

The hiſtory of the pretended conſpiracy againſt the government, appears to have no exiſtence, except in the imagination of ſome weak and timid individuals. We are now aſſured that every thing is arranged to the ſatisfaction of both parties.

DISINTERMENTS,

IN THE YEAR ONE THOUSAND SEVEN HUNDRED AND NINETY-THREE, OF THE KINGS, QUEENS, PRINCES, PRINCESSES,

AND OTHER ILLUSTRIOUS PERSONS,

Who had been interred at the Abbey of St. Dennis, in France, during a previous period of five hundred years.

(CONCLUDED.)

At ſeven o'clock, on the morning of the 16th, the workmen proceeded with the diſinterments in the vaults of the Bourbons. The firſt coffin opened was that of Henriette Marie de France, daughter of Henry IV. and wife of Charles I. King of England, who died 1669, aged 60 years. The ſecond was Henriette Stuart, daughter of Charles I. King of England, and firſt wife of Monſieur, brother of Louis XIV. who died in 1670, at the age of 26 years.

After removing 17 other bodies, about two o'clock in the afternoon, the workmen took up the coffin of Louis XV. who died 10th May, 1774, aged 64 years. It had been placed at the entrance of the vault over the ſteps, in a niche, formed in the thick part of the wall, a little on the right hand of the entrance. This was the preciſe ſpot where was interred the body of the laſt King of France, who died a natural death. The coffin was opened with great caution in the church-yard, upon the ſide of the grave. The body was incloſed in a lead coffin, and wrapped carefully in ſheets and bandages, it was in an entire ſtate, freſh and in good preſervation. The hair was white, the noſe of a violet color, and the hams were as read as thoſe of a new-born infant. This body was not embalmed in the ordinary manner, but floated in a liquid, formed of a ſolution of marine ſalt. It was thrown into the grave upon a bed of quick lime, and a layer of the ſame lime being laid upon it, the hole was filled up with earth.

On the ſame day were diſcovered the remains of Charles V. who died in 1380, aged 42 years; and thoſe of his wife, Jean de Bourbon, who died 1373, aged 42 years. In the coffin of Charles V. was found a crown of ſilver gilt, in excellent preſervation; a hand of juſtice of ſilver, and a ſceptre, about five feet in length, of curious workmanſhip, ſomewhat reſembling the Thyrſus, or javelin of Bacchus entwined with vine-leaves and ivy, as exhibited in Montfaucon, article Sceptres. This curious morceau was in admirable preſervation. In the coffin of the Queen were found part of a crown, her gold ring, ſome remains of bracelets or links of chains, a ſpindle or diſtaff of gilt wood, half rotten, and a pair of ſhoes with ſharp points, which, though partly decayed, ſtill retained viſible marks of the gold and ſilver embroidery with which they had been ornamented.—Nothing worthy of remark was diſcovered among the bodies diſinterred on the 17th or 18th. On the 19th was opened the coffin of Louis VIII. father of St. Louis, who died the 8th November, 1226, aged 40 years. This corpſe was almoſt wholly decayed.—Upon the ſtone cover of the coffin was engraved a Croſs in demi relief. In the coffin were found the decayed remains of a wooden ſceptre, and a diadem or crown, which was nothing more than a band of gold tiſſue with a large ſatin cap. It was in good preſervation. The body had been wrapped in a mantle of gold tiſſue, ſome pieces of which were remaining; and in this cloth it had been buried, ſewed up in very thick leather, which ſtill retained all its elaſticity. This was the only corpſe among thoſe diſinterred at St. Denis, which was found incloſed in leather.—At St. Germaine-des-Prez, a body was diſcovered which had been buried in a ſimilar manner. The cuſtom of ſewing up the dead in leather bags is very ancient. In Colchis, they interred only the females; and they incloſed the men in the hides of bullocks, and ſuſpended them to trees by ſtrong chains.

On the ſame day was diſcovered the entire ſkeleton of Philippe le Bel, who died in 1314, aged 46 years. It was incloſed in a ſtone coffin in the ſhape of a trough. There were found in it a diadem of gold tiſſue, and a ſceptre of copper gilt, about five feet long, and terminated by a bunch of leaves, on which was a bird, alſo of copper, colored after nature, ſuppoſed by its form and color, to repreſent the goldfinch, being a ſtriking reſemblance to that which is given in Montfaucon's Monarchie Francaiſe.

In the evening of the ſame day, by the light of flambeaux, the workmen opened the tomb of King Dagobert, who died in 638.—In a wooden cheſt about two feet long, lined with lead on the inſide, were found the bones of this prince, and thoſe of Nanthilde his wife, who died in 642. The bones of this pair were wrapped in ſilk ſtuff, and ſeparated from each other by a plank placed in the middle of the cheſt. On one ſide of the coffin was a leaden plate with this inſcription:—"Hic jacet corpus Dagoberti."—On the other ſide another leaden plate with this inſcription:—"Hic jacet corpus Nanthildis."

From the 19th to the 25th, incluſive, the workmen continued to open the tombs and coffins depoſited in the Abbey of St. Dennis. In the coffin of Philippe de Valois were found a crown and ſceptre of copper gilt, ſurmounted with a bird, alſo of copper gilt. In the coffin of Charles le Bel were found a crown of ſilver gilt, a ſceptre of copper gilt, ſeven feet in height; a gold ring; part of a hand of juſtice; a walking ſtick of ebony; and a pillow of lead, on which the head of the king was reclined.

The entire ſkeleton of Philippe le Long was diſcovered in a ſtone coffin. He had been interred in his royal robes. His head was covered with a crown of ſilver gilt, enriched with precious ſtones. His robe was ornamented with a claſp of gold in form of a lozenge, and a ſmaller one of ſilver. His hat was of ſatin ſtuff, faſtened with a buckle of ſilver gilt. His ſceptre was of copper gilt.

The laſt tomb opened was that of King John, who died in England in 1364, aged 56 years.

From the NEW YORK MORNING CHRONICLE.

MR. EDITOR,—

IF the obſervations of an odd fellow are not wholly ſuperfluous, I would thank you to ſhove them into a ſpare corner of your paper.

It is a matter of amuſement to an unintereſted ſpectator like myſelf, to obſerve the influence faſhion has on the dreſs and deportment of its votaries, and how very quick they fly from one extreme to the other.

A few years ſince, the rage was—very high crowned hats with very narrow brims, tight neckcloth, tight coat, tight jacket, tight small-clothes; and shoes loaded with enormous silver buckles: the hair crisped, plaited, queued, and powdered in short, an air of the greatest finicalness and tightness diffused over the whole person.

The ladies, with their tresses neatly turned up over an immense cushion; with a yard long, braced up with stays into the smallest compass, and encircled by an enormous hoop: so that the fashionable belle resembled a walking bottle.

Thus dressed, the lady was seen, with the most bewitching langour, reclining on the arm of an extremely attentive beau, who, with a long cane, decorated with an enormous tassel, was carefully employed in removing every stone, stick, or straw, that might impede the progress of his tottering companion, whose high-heeled shoes just brought the points of her toes to the ground.

What an alteration has a few years produced!—We now behold our gentlemen with the most studied carelessness, and almost slovenliness of dress; large hat, large coat, large neckcloth, large pantaloons, large boots, and hair scratched into every careless direction, lounging along the streets in the most apparent listlessness and vacuity of thought, fluring with an unmeaning countenance at every passenger, or leaning upon the arm of some kind fair one for support, with the other hand crammed into his breeches pocket.—Such is the picture of a modern beau: in his dress stuffing himself up to the dimensions of a Hercules, in his manners, affecting the helplessness of an invalid.

The belle who has to undergo the fatigue of dragging along this sluggish animal, has chosen a character the very reverse: emulating in her dress and actions all the airy sprightliness of a sylph, she trips along with the greatest vivacity. Her laughing eye, her countenance enlivened with affability and good humor, inspire with kindred animation every beholder, except the torpid being by her side, who is either affecting the fashionable sang froid, or is wrapt up in profound contemplation of——himself.

Heavens! how changed are the manners since I was young!—then, how delightful to contemplate a ball-room; such bowing, such scraping, such complimenting; nothing but copperplate speeches to be heard on both sides; no walking out in minuet measure; nothing more common than to see half a dozen gentlemen knock their heads together in striving who should first recover a lady's fan or snuff-box that had fallen.

But now, our youths no longer aim at the character of PRETTY GENTLEMAN: their greatest ambition is to be called lazy dogs—careless fellows, &c. &c. Dressed up in the mammoth style, our buck lounters into the ball-room in a surtout, hat under arm, cane in hand—strolls round with the most vacant air; flops abruptly before such lady as he may choose to honour with his attention; entertains her with the common SLANG of the day, collected from the conversation of hostlers, lootmen, porters, &c. until his string of smart sayings is run out, and then lounges off, to entertain some other fair one with the same unintelligible jargon.

Surely, Mr. Editor, puppyism must have arrived to a climax: it must turn—to carry it to a greater extent seems, to me, impossible.

It's well it did not quite speak out,

MISCELLANEOUS PARAGRAPHS

From the Port Folio.

The following anecdote is extracted from a work of Madame Genlis, entitled Souvenirs de Felice:—During the early part of the reign of Louis XV. the young Count de Thiars was at Fontainbleau with the Court; he was lodged in an apartment of the palace under that of Madame de Mailly, who was not at that time the declared mistress of the King; she was not then even suspected of having an intrigue with him. The funnel of the chimney of the Count de Thiars' room opened into that of Madame de Mailly's, so that what was spoken near the fire-place in the lower room could easily be heard in the room above. One night the Count de Thiars was retiring rather late to bed, and going along the corridor, he met the Count de Bully, his brother, who walked with him to his room. It was the latter end of autumn, and the night was cold: the two brothers drew near the fire and began to converse about the King, whose character they treated with the utmost severity. Their conversation was however suddenly interrupted by a dreadful voice, roaring down the chimney, "Hold your tongues, insolent wretches." It was the King's voice. The two brothers remained for some moments silent and motionless; they gave themselves up for lost. When the first moments of surprise and terror were past, they began to consult about the means of securing their safety; at last they agreed that they must wait the event with patience and courage. They went, pale and trembling to the King's Levee next morning, expecting at least to be sent to the Bastile. The King looked at them with great sternness. Before this period the two brothers had been great favourites with the King, from that time till the period of his death, which was thirty years afterwards he never spoke to them, or took the least notice of them: they obtained no favors from the Court, but never experienced any other mark of the King's displeasure.

UPPER CANADA.

Proclamation.

BY THE HONOURABLE PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by an Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Settling the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, at any time during the space of three years from the passing thereof, was empowered to issue Commissions, and the Commissioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Cases in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not issued—AND WHEREAS, Commissions were accordingly issued, and the Commissioners therein named duly attended and proceeded to decide upon some of the Claims that came before them; but many Persons, during the space of the said three years, neglected to prefer their Claims; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the said Commissioners to prosecute such Claims, or come unprepared with the neceſſary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof eſſential to the eſtabliſhment of their ſaid Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Perſon or by Agent, or to take any proper ſteps for aſcertaining their Titles in manner by the ſaid Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithſtanding ſuch manifeſt inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majeſty's Subjects, the ſaid Act was, by another Statute paſſed in the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but ſuch indulgence failed to produce that alſtarity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of thoſe for whoſe benefit the Law was paſſed.

AND WHEREAS, in the laſt Seſſion of the Parliament of this Province, the Legiſlature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may aſſert their Claims, in all Caſes where the Faith of Government ſtands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not iſſued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commiſſions were iſſued, and the Commiſſioners duly attended at the reſpective times when the Aſſizes were held for the ſeveral Diſtricts in this Province, but ſome of the Parties, who had given notice of aſſerting Claims, came in the ſame unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; ſo that, if ſuch groſs negligence and inattention is perſevered in, the ſalutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in aſſenting to ſuch repeated extenſions of ſo indulgent a Law, will be altogether diſappointed and fruſtrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commiſſioners named in the ſeveral Commiſſions iſſued under the Authority of the ſaid mentioned Statute, will, for the purpoſe of deciding on all ſuch Claims as aforeſaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home Diſtrict, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the Firſt Day of February, on the Twenty Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the Diſtrict of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the Diſtrict of Newcaſtle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland Diſtrict, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN for the Diſtrict of Johnſtown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eaſtern Diſtrict, on the Firſt Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the Diſtrict of London, at the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Weſtern Diſtrict, alſo at the time of the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the ſaid Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Perſons intereſted will give Notice, according to Law, in the Office of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſſly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

[The following extract of a letter from a young gentleman of character and intelligence, now travelling in Europe, to his friend in America, has been obligingly put into our hands for publication. Some further communications from the ſame ſource are already in our poſſeſſion, and others are expected. We make no doubt that they will be very acceptable to our readers.]

AMSTERDAM.

"This great city, which is ſometimes called Amſteldam, takes its name from the river Auſtel, which runs thro' it, compreſſed into a canal. There is no tide in the many waters here; a circumſtance which occaſions a hateful ſtench. They count nearly 300,000 inhabitants. The people are even more ſnavith, nigardly, and illiberal, than in the places we have already viſited. I went, between eleven and twelve laſt night, to a ſingular inſtitution.—By an ordinance of the government, there is a number of houſes in this town, to which women, who have no better means, are invited on the terms of a ſupport for life, upon condition that they immure themſelves, and without ſex or reward, retire with any man who requires them. I paid a ſmall ſum for an admiſſion to this meretricious nunnery. Its diſguſting inmates are numbered, and like ſtalled cattle, each one has her allotted place. They were generally ſqualid and ugly, and degrading to their ſex in their perſons, as much as in their ſituations. The room in which they were, was lighted and full. They were dancing minuets and waltzes, ſometimes with each other, and ſometimes with men as lewd as themſelves. When this abominable courſe of life is once entered upon, they are compelled to continue it, and ſeldom, if ever, and then with great difficulty, eſcape from the houſe in which they are confined, but abſolutely wear out in this deteſtable ſervice.

"Laſt night we all went to the Dutch Theatre, prepared to meet ridiculous objects; unfortunately we arrived too late for the Ballet, which is ſaid to be very well. The performance we ſaw was an Opera: the ſinging and acting not deſpicable. The ſubject ſeemed to be the introduction of a Wild Boy into the civilized world, and his inſtinctive admiration of a Female, to whom he was married of courſe.

"The Marine School, which we have viſited this morning, is an eſtabliſhment of more honor, perhaps than ſervice, to this country. There are in it 100 boys, who are inſtructed and practiſed in every thing relating to the government of a ſhip. In the yard there is a veſſel of 170 tons complete: the keel and lower part cut away, ſo as to reſt a flat bottom on the bricks. We ſaw the whole manœuvring, reefing, boiſting, and the Schools for Writing, Aſtronomy, Geometry, and Arithmetic, and the hammocks in which the pupils ſleep. They remain in the School till they are deemed ſea-worthy, 3, 4, 5, or 6 years. They are then drafted into the public or merchants ſervice. The ſhip on which they are exerciſed is a preſent from Mr. H. Hope. The plan was originated in 1781, after the engagement off Dogger Bank, in which you know we were intereſted, from the ſurplus ſubſcriptions for the widows of the killed. This is all very well, but the Engliſh novitiate of actual buffeting by ſea, without any land theory, beyond an acquaintance with Mathematics and Aſtronomy, makes better ſailors.

"The Great Houſe is a noble monument of Dutch induſtry and opulence: it is an immenſe ſtone fabric, erected on 13,000 ſtakes or piles, driven into the marſhy ſoil on which this whole town is built; in and about it there are ſeveral fine ſtatues, particularly an Atlas ſupporting a large Britiſh World. Among the apartments there is one, 120 feet by 58 and 90 feet high, richly decorated, and having in one of the niches a counterpart Atlas to that on the top. We were refuſed admittance to the Court of Juſtice, becauſe the Judges were ſitting—a reaſon rather militating with the nature of a Court.

"We have this inſtant returned from North Holland, where we have been all day. At nine this morning we ſailed in a yacht, in which had been prepared chicken, cheeſe, tongue, claret, beer, excellent Rhenith, and other like particulars. We firſt croſſed the Y, to Sardania, a diſtance of 6 miles.—Sardam was once famous for its ſhipbuilding; but a garden now flouriſhes on the ſcite of the dock yard. The Chaumiet or Cottage, where the Czar Peter lived during his apprenticeſhip, is all this poor village now boaſts worthy the ſtranger's attention. This we went into. It is a ſmall hut, and of wood. From Sardam we ſailed to Buckſboot, from whence we took a carriage to Broeck, a village, inhabited for the moſt part by wealthy men, retired from buſineſs. The houſes are tiled and painted; the ſtreets are of tile and alſo painted; neither horſe nor coach is permitted to enter this little town; it is therefore extremely tranquil and clean. The inhabitants of North Holland are, if poſſible, greater ſticklers for the antiquated than their brothers of the South. Each houſe in Broeck has a garden before it, adorned with pagodas of ſhells and pebbles, and a box, wonderfully well likened, by trimmings, to ſtags, lions, dolphins, cats, and dogs, in different poſtures.—The laſt ſtyle of gardening, the taſty have very much cried down of late years. There is ſaid to be in this village a door in each houſe, that is never opened but on occaſion of a death, when the corpſe is carried through it.—A good memento mori.

Account of a method of preventing the decay of Peach Trees.—By J. ELLIS, of New-Jerſey.

"THE decay of peach trees is owing to a worm, which originates from a large fly, that reſembles the common waſp: this fly perforates the bark, and depoſits an egg in the moiſt or ſappy part of it. The moſt common place of perforation is at the ſurface of the earth, and as ſoon as the worm is able to move, it deſcends into the earth, probably from an inſtinctive effort to avoid the winter's froſt. This may be aſcertained by obſervation; the trait of the worm from the ſeat of the egg being viſible at its beginning, and gradually increaſing, in correſpondence with the increaſing ſize of the worm; its courſe is always downwards. The progreſs of the young worm is extremely ſlow, and if the egg is depoſited at any conſiderable diſtance above the ſurface of the earth, it is long before the worm reaches the ground.—The worms are unable to bear the cold of winter unleſs covered by the earth, and all that are above ground are froſt bitten, are killed.

By this hiſtory of the origin, progreſs and nature of the miſchief, we can explain the effects of any method, which is as follows:—In the ſpring, when the blooſoms are out, clear away the dirt, ſo as to expoſe the root of the tree, to the depth of three inches; ſurround the tree with ſtraw about three feet long, applied lengthwiſe, ſo that it may have a covering one inch thick, which extends to the bottom of the hole, the but ends of the ſtraw reſting upon the ground at the bottom. Bind this ſtraw round the tree with three bands, one near the top, one at the middle, and the other at the ſurface of the earth; then fill up the hole at the root with earth, laid preſs it cloſely round the ſtraw. When the white froſts appear, the ſtraw muſt be removed, and the tree ſhould remain uncovered until the blooſoms put out in the ſpring.

"By this proceſs the fly is prevented from depoſiting its egg within three foot of the root, and although it may place the egg above that diſtance, the worm travels ſo ſlow that it cannot reach the ground before froſt, and therefore is killed before it is able to injure the tree."

"The truth of the principle is proved by the following fact:—I practiſed this method with a large number of peach trees, and they flouriſhed remarkably, without any appearance of injury from the worms, for ſeveral years; I was then induced to diſcontinue the ſtraw with about twenty of them. All thoſe which are without the ſtraw have declined, while the others which have had the ſtraw continue as vigorous as ever."

Mode of breaking Steers to the draft in a few days.

Let the farmer carefully yoke his ſteers in a cloſe yard or ſtable, and not move them till they get ſufficiently accuſtomed to the yoke, ſo that they will eat their food, when yoked; which will be in the courſe of a day. Let them again be yoked the ſecond day, and a pair of gentle horſes or oxen be faſtened before them, in which ſtation let them ſtand, until they become familiar with ſaid horſes or oxen, which will generally be effected in one day, excepting the ſteers ſhould be uncommonly wild, which will occaſion a ſecond day's practice, after the ſame manner; and the next day, the ſteers may be yoked, the horſes or oxen put before them as uſual, and let them be faſtened to a waggon or any other carriage—they, fearing the carriage behind them, and being accuſtomed to the old oxen before, will proceed forward without being whipped or bruiſed. By the above proceſs, the farmer will never fail of ſucceſs in having good working oxen.

DIRECTIONS FOR RESTORING PERSONS WHO ARE SUPPOSED TO BE DEAD, FROM DROWNING.

"Firſt—As ſoon as the body is taken out of the water, it muſt be conveyed, with care and tenderneſs, to a houſe, or any other place, where it can be laid dry and warm, avoiding the uſual deſtructive methods of rolling it on a barrel, or placing it acroſs a log on its belly.

"Secondly—The clothes muſt be immediately ſtripped off, and the body wrapped up in blankets well warmed.—It ſhould be laid on its back, with the head a little raiſed. If the weather be cold, it ſhould be placed near a fire; but if the weather ſhould be warm, it will be ſufficient to place it between two blankets well heated; taking care to prevent the room from being crouded with any perſons who are not neceſſarily employed about the body.

"Thirdly—As ſoon as it can poſſibly be done, a bellows ſhould be applied to one noſtril, while the other noſtril and the mouth are kept cloſed, and the lower end of the prominent part of the windpipe is preſſed backward. The bellows is to be worked in this ſituation, and when the breaſt is ſwelled by it, the bellows muſt ſtop, and the air muſt ſhould preſs the belly upwards to force it out. The bellows ſhould then be applied as before, and the belly ſhould alſo be preſſed upwards; and the proceſs ſhould be repeated from twenty to thirty times in a minute, ſo as to imitate natural breathing as nearly as poſſible. Some volatile ſpirits heated, ſhould be held under the valve of the bellows, while it works. If a bellows cannot be procured, ſome perſon ſhould blow into one of the noſtrils, through a pipe or quill, while the other noſtril and mouth are cloſed as before; or if a pipe or quill be not at hand, he ſhould blow into the mouth, while both noſtrils are cloſed—but whenever a bellows can be procured, it ſhould be preferred, as air forced in by this means, will be much more ſerviceable than air which has been already breathed.

"Fourthly—At the ſame time, the whole body ſhould be rubbed with the hand, or with hot woolen cloths. The rubbing ſhould be moderate, but continued with induſtry a long time, and particularly about the breaſt.

"Fifthly—During this time, a large quantity of aſhes, or ſalt, or ſand, ſhould be heated; and, as ſoon as it is milk-warm, the body ſhould be placed in it. The blowing and rubbing are then to be continued as before, and when the aſhes, ſalt, or ſand are cooled, ſome warmer muſt be added, ſo that the whole may be kept milk-warm.

"Theſe methods ſhould be continued three or four hours—as, in ſeveral inſtances, they have proved ſucceſsful, though no ſigns of life appeared till that time. When the patient is able to ſwallow, he ſhould take ſome wine, or rum and water. Bleeding or purging ought not to be uſed, without conſulting a phyſician, who ſhould be called in as ſoon as poſſible."

Some weeks ago, a gentleman in this city was bitten above the knee by a Spider. This was about day light when he was in bed. He felt a ſmart gentlemen like that of a pin; but did not pay attention to it. In a few minutes, he observed a pain shooting upwards from the Toe, which presently reached the spine, and gradually approached his heart. On turning up the bed-clothes, he perceived the spider.—Fortunately, he sent for a friend, who was acquainted with a cure for the poison. This was PLANTAIN LEAF. As an additional piece of good fortune, his friend knew where a quantity of it was growing. Some leaves were immediately got, and the juice bruised out of them. This was swallowed in mouthfuls. The progress of the poison was stopt, and finally, a cure was effected. The gentleman said, that but for this remedy, he did not think he could have survived an hour longer. Some oil was also poured down his throat, but Plantain leaf had the entire credit of his recovery. He was dreadfully swollened; and it seems almost inconceivable how much the whole mass of his blood had been corrupted by the bite of so small an insect. We had these particulars from the gentleman himself, who called at this office, on some business, a few days afterwards.—Some years ago, a gentleman in this neighbourhood was also bitten above the knee, by one of these venomous creatures, and was almost in danger of loosing his leg. It ought to be a general rule to kill all such vermin, wherever they are within reach.

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE.

The following most singular occurrence comes to us from a quarter perfectly authentic, and still forms the subject of conversation in Brittany.—During the utmost phrenzy of the French Revolution, there was a Curate at Rheims, whose purity and benevolence had so endeared him to people of all descriptions, that in the heighth of their rage and madness, the Septembrizing Committees dared not openly to attack him. Determined therefore on private assassination, they applied to their usual agents, but even their hands, long stained with blood, and hearts accustomed to massacre, turned away with horror from the "deep damnation" of that deed. The good Curate remained for some time protected by his own purity, till three bravoes were brought down from Paris, by whom was arranged the following plan for his destruction:—Two of them were at the dead of night to call up the Holy Man, in order to attend the last moments of a dying penitent. This ruse was to be represented by the third experienced bravo, who, during the exhortations of the Priest, was suddenly and directly to dispatch him.—The arrangement so far succeeded, that the Curate was brought, and the two confederates waited impatiently for the signal, the body of the victim. To their astonishment, however, the object that first presented itself to them was the Curate, who thus his head and said, "Ah! my friends, you applied to me too late; for the poor man is dead, and the corpse is cold already." The ruffians, struck with remorse and terror, fell on their knees, and confessed all their circumstances, imploring his forgiveness. The Curate, who now for the first time obtained a candle from the people of the house, and pulling down the bed clothes, saw a dagger in the hand of the breathless murderer. The whole city of Rheims crowded the next day to be witnesses of this extraordinary interposition, until the Municipality gave orders that the corpse should be taken away. The Curate then finding there was no longer any chance for him, emigrated to England, bringing with him the admiration and regret of every one who knew him.

The person to whom this remarkable story applies is the Abbe C——, whose benevolent foundations at Soissons-town were so highly complimented and applauded some time ago by Monsieur, and the other French Princes at that time in England.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,

Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, at any time during the space of three years from the passing thereof, was empowered to issue Commissions, and the Commissioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Cases in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not issued—AND WHEREAS, Commissions were accordingly issued, and the Commissioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon some of the Claims that came before them; but many Persons, during the space of the said three years, neglected to come forward and give the necessary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the said Commissioners to prosecute such Claims, or came unprepared with the neceſſary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof eſſential to the eſtabliſhment of their ſaid Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Perſon or by Agent, or to take any proper ſteps for aſcertaining their Titles in manner by the ſaid Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithſtanding ſuch manifeſt inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majeſty's Subjects, the ſaid Act was, by another Statute paſſed in the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but ſuch indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of thoſe for whoſe benefit the Law was paſſed.

AND WHEREAS, in the laſt Seſſion of the Parliament of this Province, the Legiſlature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may aſſert their Claims, in all Caſes where the Faith of Government ſtands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not iſſued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commiſſions were iſſued, and the Commiſſioners duly attended at the reſpective times when the Aſſizes were held for the ſeveral Diſtricts in this Province, but ſome of the Parties, who had given notice of aſſerting Claims, came in the ſame unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; ſo that, if ſuch groſs negligence and inattention is perſevered in, the ſalutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in aſſenting to ſuch repeated meaſures of ſo indulgent a Law, will be altogether diſappointed and fruſtrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commiſſioners named in the ſeveral Commiſſions, iſſued under the Authority of the laſt mentioned Statute, will, for the purpoſe of deciding on all ſuch Claims as aforeſaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home Diſtrict, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the Firſt Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the Diſtrict of Nia[illegible] on the Twenty-Fifth Day of Ap[illegible]—1803.

At SANDWICH, for the Weſtern Diſtrict, alſo at the time of the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the ſaid Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Perſons intereſted will give Notice, according to Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have to done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſsly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at York, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

NEW-YORK, December 13.

Letter from St. Domingo.

We learn by Mr. Roſs, who arrived here yeſterday in the brig Olivia from Cape Francois, the following intereſting news from that quarter:

That all the ports on the north ſide of the iſland, except the Cape, had been evacuated by the French troops—and that all the ports on the weſt ſide, except Port-au Prince and St. Mark's, had alſo been evacuated—moſt of the French troops being concentrated at the Cape.

That the Cape was attacked by the brigands on the 14th, and again on the 26th of Oct. when they took poſſeſſion of all the outer forts—and it was ſuppoſed would finally ſucceed in reconquering the iſland.

That General Dellalines was killed on the attack at St. Mark's: and that all the other black Generals had gone over and joined the brigands.

That on the 2d of November General Le Clerc breathed his laſt—the next day his body was embalmed, and put on board the Swiftſure, of 74 guns; and on the 5th ſailed for France, under a moſt tremendous diſcharge of cannon from the ſhips of war in port, conſiſting of two 80 gun ſhips, two 74's, three frigates, two corvettes, and ſeveral others.

That General Rochambeau had ſucceeded Le Clerc; and when the Olivia came out, ſaw a 74 bearing up for the Cape, having the ſucceſſor of General Le Clerc on board; and

That from the 15th to the 29th of October, the ſtench, ariſing from the dead bodies in the harbor of the Cape, was inconceivably great, there having been hundreds of blacks deſtroyed by throwing them into the ſea, from on board of veſſels.

The embargo which had exiſted for a month, was taken off; but there was ſtill a difficulty in getting away; and it was ſuppoſed the embargo would be renewed.—N. Y. G.

December 14.

Yeſterday arrived here the ſchooner Roebuck, Captain Dawſon, in 52 days from Gibraltar. Captain Dawſon informs us, that on the 11th October, a great buſtle took place on board the Engliſh ſquadron at Gibraltar—they were continually employed, day and night, taking in proviſions and water, for a ſix months cruize. When this work of preparation was completed, they ſailed in a great hurry up to the Eaſt, with a ſtrong head wind. This ſquadron conſiſted of ſix 74's and a brig. Their deſtination was unknown.

When Captain Dawſon was coming out, he met an Engliſh cutter with diſpatches, for Gibraltar.

There had not, Capt. D. informs us, been a convoy given to Amer ican veſſels for 12 weeks.

Two Sweediſh veſſels had been taken off Cape Pallas, the laſt of September, by Tripolitan cruizers.

On the 12th of September, the Tripolitans at Gibraltar applied to the Governor, (Prince Edward) for permiſſion to ſtop the United States' frigate Adams from leaving the port, which he refuſed to do, and gave notice of it to Capt. Campbell, who at 6 P. M. that day, got his frigate under way, and has ſince continued cruizing between Gibraltar and Algeziras.

On the 10th of October, the Tripolitans had obtained a paſſport from the Emperor of Morocco, which was ſigned by all the chriſtian Conſuls in his dominions, in order to obtain a releaſe from blockade of the Tripolitan cruizers at Gibraltar. They were preparing for ſea, and it was expected they would not be moleſted by the American ſquadron, on the ground that any hoſtile meaſures on the part of the American ſquadron, would be a cauſe of a declaration of war againſt the United States, by the Emperor of Morocco.

On the 18th of October, an Engliſh cutter, of 14 guns, blew up at Gibraltar, which was cauſed by two boys carelefsly playing with a candle, both of whom unfortunately periſhed.

This information was obtained from an officer of the ſhip Molly, of Philadelphia, condemned by the Spaniſh government.—N. Y. G.

The ſhip Lydia, arrived this morning from Greenock, in 38 days. She brings papers to the 2d of November, the one of this date we have juſt ſeen—It ſtates, that at a Cabinet Council it had been determined, that the Britiſh troops ſhould ſtill keep poſſeſſion of ſuch poſts as by the Treaty of Amiens were to have been given up, and which had not then been evacuated; and that orders for that purpoſe had accordingly been diſpatched.

LONDON, October 29.

Several letters have been received in town from Switzerland, all of which agree in the determination of the brave Swiſs to reſiſt to the laſt extremity.—The letter of the Chief Conſul was received at Berne with ſenſations of the utmoſt horror and indignation. In the audience given to Citizen Rapp, he declared that if the Swiſs did not immediately ſubmit to the will of the Chief Conſul, an army of 30,000 French had orders to march in five days into the country, and to lay Switzerland waſte by fire and ſword. He was referred to the Congreſs at Schwitz, but the Bernoiſe, as far as concerned themſelves, rejected the terms with diſdain.

A meeting of the Cabinet Council having been held on Saturday, a number of reports have in conſequence got into circulation, one of which is, that government has received an anſwer from Paris favourable to the cauſe of Switzerland. Of this, however, we cannot ſpeak with any confidence.

Bills have been poſted in Portſmouth and Gofport, for entering ſeamen for the Penelope and Apollo frigates.

PORTSMOUTH, Oct. 25—Sailed yeſterday, the St. Florenzo frigate, and Racoon brig, for Sea, with ſealed orders—the former ſuppoſed to be for the Weſt Indies, and the latter for the coaſt of Guinea.

GLASGOW, October 28.

A detailed account of Bonaparte's new Plan of Indemnities was received by a Dutch mail which arrived on Monday. By this plan, the Grand Duke of Tuſcany, the Emperor's brother, gains little or nothing more than he had by the former one, and the Stadtholder's portion is diminiſhed.

The Anſwer of the Diet at Schwitz to Bonaparte, in conſequence of his Proclamation of the 30th September, addreſſed to the Swiſs Nation, declares, "that the movements which have taken place in Switzerland, are not the reſult of a ſpirit of party, and that the Swiſs nation has no other object in view than to make uſe of the right which the claims of giving herſelf a central and Cantonal Conſtitution, founded on her poſition and her wants—a ſacred and precious right, which you deſigned yourſelf, to enſure her by the Treaty of Luneville—The Swiſs have nothing more at heart, than to attain a ſtate of repoſe in which, under the ſhield of a mild and juſt government, each inhabitant may enjoy his property and his exiſtence."

Extract of a private letter from Paris, dated September 29.

"Fouche has a very handſome retreat—he gets 50,000 livres a year for life as Senator, and 30,000 livres per ann. as a reward for his paſt ſervices.—There certainly was no miſunderſtanding between him and Bonaparte, only that the latter became every day more jealous of his power and influence.

"I underſtand that the French government intend to preſent a note to the Engliſh government, ſeconded by Ruſſia and Pruſſia, on the liberty of the preſs in England, which, no doubt, will become a ſubject of Parliamentary inveſtigation. I ſhould not at all be ſurprized to ſee Mr. Wyndham and his party in the minority on the ſubject of the liberty of the preſs. I refer you to the Journal des Defenſeurs de la Patrie of the 2d Vendemiaire; there is an article written by Barrere, by order of the government, on the liberty of the preſs in England. This you may conſider as the Avant Courier.

"The day before yeſterday, an act was committed not to be equalled in Conſtantinople or in Tunis, as no doubt the government of theſe protect their own merchants, and give every encouragement to commerce.—A Bank has been eſtabliſhed here ſome time, called the Ecaiſſe du Commerce, which gave great facility to the merchants, being then the only place in all France which would diſcount bills. About twelve months ago Bonaparte wiſhed to unite all the Banks, ſo as to make only one Bank, that is to ſay, that all diſcounts are illegal which are not diſcounted in the National Bank. The above eſtabliſhment refuſed the invitation for a long time, when the day before yeſterday a file of Janiſſaries entered the houſe in Rue Menares, drove the people out, ſhut up the houſe, and took away with them the Ledger and Caſh Book!!!—Not a Journal durſt inſert it.

"On the ſame day, after three o'clock, a file of ſoldiers entered the Exchange, and drove out all the merchants, ſaying, that no buſineſs ſhould be tranſacted there before two or after three."

December 15.

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

Juſt as our paper (Spectator) was going to preſs, we received Greenock papers the 2d ult. inclusive, by the ſhip Lydia, Treadwell. The affairs of Europe are conſtantly aſſuming a more warlike appearance. Every officer on England, on leave of abſence, belonging to the corps at Malta and in Egypt, has been ordered to join his corps without delay. All the packets at Falmouth were under ſailing orders; and the greateſt buſtle and activity proviailed in the different ports. The late hour at which we received the papers, prevents our giving copious extracts this day. The following are the moſt important articles they contain.

LONDON, October 26.

Yeſterday was the day appointed for the reduction of the guards; but the orders to that effect were countermanded; a ſignificant hint of the fears government entertain of a war.

By private letters from Malta, of the 14th ult. we learn that his Majeſty's ſhip Hector arrived there from Corfu, on the 10th ult. having relieved the Agincourt about two months before; that the Ruſſians had arrived at Corfu; that Admiral Sir Richard Bickerton was to hoiſt his flag on board a frigate; that the Braſſen and Pegaſus were ordered for Egypt, and the Cyclops on a cruize after the frigate that was to receive Admiral Sir R. Bickerton's flag; and that upon the arrival of the Liberty brig from England, the ſhips were ordered for ſea at a moment's notice.

The Moniteur has at length broken the ſullen ſilence it has ſo long preſerved upon the affairs of Switzerland: and the firſt uſe it makes of its ſpeech is to inſult the patriots and calumniate their leaders; men, whoſe names are coeval with the rocks of Switzerland, and whoſe anceſtors were the glory and ornament of their country ages before the name of Bonaparte was heard of.

October 29.

We have been informed that every officer whoſe regiment is either in Egypt or Malta, who is in this country on leave of abſence, has been ordered to join his corps with all poſſible ſpeed. Admiral Bickerton has ſailed from Gibraltar for the Mediterranean, and it is believed that the ſhips fitting out at home are deſtined to reinforce him.—This is a very commendable vigilance in the naval department. The French ports are known to be extremely active. At Toulon a ſquadron has been for ſome time fitting out, and troops are ſaid to have been ſhipped from the Iſle of Elbe in tranſports which are to be convoyed by that ſquadron. Where is it going? It has been ſuppoſed to Conſtantinople and the Black Sea; an idle ſuppoſition. Where is the neceſſity of ſending troops or men of war thither?—There is no hoſtile power in that quarter, and no garriſon to receive troops. Intelligence from Paris aſſerts, that every dock is occupied at Breſt, and alſo building on the ſtrand; at Orient eight ſhips of the line are building, and others repairing, at Havre, at Cherbourg, at Bourdeaux, at Marſeilles, the ſame activity prevails. It is added that not a ſingle French ſailor has been diſcharged. The intended journey of the Firſt Conſul is connected with theſe preparations. Undoubtedly the object of the journey muſt be important which takes him from Paris at this time, and in this ſtate of affairs. He will probably viſit all the ports of the weſtern coaſt of France, not only Havre and Cherbourg, but Breſt and Bourdeaux. The knowledge of theſe preparations has given riſe to very warlike rumors at Paris.

On our ſide, the different ports have aſſumed a more active appearance. On Wedneſday orders were received at Plymouth to get the Imogen ready to ſail with all poſſible ſpeed with diſpatches. The Lady Hobart packet ſailed on Tueſday evening from Falmouth with ſealed orders, which are not to be opened till her arrival at Barbadoes. Sealed orders are alſo to be forwarded immediately by the Princeſs Amelia packet, which are to be opened in a certain latitude. So urgent were the directions, that the packets which ſailed on Tueſday put to ſea, though the wind was quite contrary. All the packets at Falmouth are to be got ready to ſail at two hours notice.

A meſſenger ſailed yeſterday from Harwich for Cuxhaven. He is ſuppoſed to be gone to Petersburgh.

We have received further accounts from Gibraltar, and they are interesting.—The men of war, which had been so much damaged by the thunder storm, mentioned in our last letters from that quarter, were repaired with wonderful expedition. The repairs were hardly completed, when they were ordered up the Mediterranean with the utmost haste, in consequence of dispatches to that effect having been received from Admiral Sir Richard Bickerton.

Various opinions are entertained at Gibraltar, respecting the cause of this sudden sailing of the squadron; but the predominating one is, that Sir R.'s squadron thus reinforced, was destined to watch the motions of the French armament at Toulon, which was first assembled under the pretence of attacking Algiers, but which, notwithstanding, the differences between France and that State have been adjusted, appears still to be increasing.

Reinforcements continue to be prepared and forwarded for the Mediterranean. General Oakes is just appointed Commander in Chief of all our troops in that sea, and the Duke of York is busily engaged every day at the Horse Guards.

HALIFAX, November 18.

Yesterday arrived His Majesty's ship Chichester, armed en flute, in 42 days from Martinique. The Chichester was bound to England, with a detachment of His Majesty's 85th Regiment. But it is with much concern we learn, that a distressing fever broke out on the passage, and that Captain Stevens, all the Lieutenants, the Surgeon and his Mate, two Midshipmen, the Boatswain, and 40 Soldiers, have fallen victims to it. The Master with 9 men are ill of the disorder; but 4 past of them are on the recovery. The Chichester, on her arrival, was under the command of the Master's Mate. It is very fortunate for the survivors that they have been able to reach this port, as they had scarcely able hands enough on board to bring the ship to anchor.

Extract of a letter from Boston, dated November 2, 1802.

Died at this place, on the 28th of October last, William Coldwell, in the 108th year of his age—he was a native of England, remembered the Coronation of Queen Ann, served in the British navy upwards of ninety years ago, afterwards became a settler in New-England, and was one of the first adventurers on the Isle of Sable for the relief of the distressed, cast away there, was among the first settlers here in the year 1760, hath left behind him a numerous progeny, upwards of 100 of which (to the degree of Great Grand Children) reside in this place—he generally retained his health and bodily strength to that degree that he could cut wood and walk to his neighbours without a staff till last year, and till his death retained all his mental faculties to a surprising degree, and as he lived the life of a Christian, so as death testified his confidence in a blissful immortality.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, SATURDAY, JANUARY 15, 1803.

At the last Sessions held in Quebec, several Canadians were indicted for riot at Beauport and an affault on the Curate of the parish, occasioned by the latter having suppreſſed the Fete (holiday) by direction of the Bithop—they were severally found guilty and fined 20l. Halifax each, imprisoned for three months, and to give security for their good behaviour during seven years.

A ſerjeant of the 49th was alſo tried for the murder of a ſailor, and acquitted.

We hear that the ſcarlet fever has been felt in Quebec and Mantteal, and that ſeveral people have fallen victims to it.

The moſt ſevere froſt experienced for many years, came ſuddenly on at Quebec about the 10th of laſt month, which laſted a fortnight.—On the 17th the Barometer ſtood at from 16 to 20 below 0. and on the 20th at 22 below 0.

AN HARVEST HYMN.

LORD of the Seaſons, we adore
The boundleſs ſkill and mighty pow'r;
Thy work, in every Seaſon, ſee
What ought to lead our thoughts to thee

In Spring, when earth is cloath'd in green—
In Summer, as thy goodneſs ſeen;
The Harveſt-Month—now ripe for toil
Which has ours ſpeed upon the ſoil.

To thee, we owe our annual bread;
The half ſtrech our tables ſpread—
Thou thy o'n Bleſſings God ſtill imparts
A mother ſtill, a TENDEREST HEART.

And while, O LORD, we eat the bread
With which our baking here are fed,
May we to ſtill better bleſſings look,
Which heal and feed th' immortal mind.

UPPER-CANADA.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,

Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing "the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, at any time during the space of three years from the passing thereof, was empowered to issue Commissions, and the Commissioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Cases in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not issued—AND WHEREAS, Commissions were accordingly issued, and the Commissioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon some of the Claims that came before them; but many Persons, during the space of the said three years, neglected to come forward and give the necessary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the said Commissioners to prosecute such Claims, or came unprepared with the necessary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof essential to the establishment of their said Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Person or by Agent, or to take any proper steps for ascertaining their Titles in manner by the said Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithstanding such manifest inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majesty's Subjects, the said Act was, by another Statute passed in the Year One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but such indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of those for whose benefit the Law was passed.

AND WHEREAS, in the last Session of the Parliament of this Province, the Legislature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may assert their Claims, in all Cases where the Faith of Government stands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not issued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commissions were issued, and the Commissioners duly attended at the respective times when the Assizes were held for the several Districts in this Province, but some of the Parties, who had given notice of asserting Claims, came in the same unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; so that, if such gross negligence and inattention is persevered in, the salutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in assenting to such repeated extensions of so indulgent a Law, will be altogether disappointed and frustrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commissioners named in the several Commissions, issued under the Authority of the last mentioned Statute, will, for the purpose of deciding on all such Claims as aforesaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home District, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the First Day of February, on the Twenty Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the District of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the District of Newcastle, on the Twenty Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland District, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the District of Johnstown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eastern District, on the 21st Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the District of London, at the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Western District, also at the time of the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the said Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Persons interested will give Notice, according to Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the respective Districts—And His Majesty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that such Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commissioners will continue to sit till they shall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Case heard and decided upon; but that after they have so done, such Commissioners, or any other Commissioners, will never more sit again in the execution of the said Commission, and the Parties who shall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have lost all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they so grossly neglected their own Interest, and omitted to avail themselves of that indulgence so repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majesty's Reign.

It establishes, "At Windsor, in the Province of Nova-Scotia, one College, the Mother "of an University, for the education "and instruction of youth and students, in Arts and Faculties, to continue for ever, and to be called "KING'S COLLEGE—by the name and "style of, The Governors, President, and "Fellows of King's College, at Windsor, "in the Province of Nova-Scotia.—The "College to consist of one President, "three or more Fellows and Professors, and twelve or more Scholars; "the Governors named in the Charter, and their Successors, to have "power to frame Statutes, Rules and "Ordinances for the good government of the said College, subject to "the approbation of the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, who is constituted Patron, as the Bishop of Nova-Scotia is appointed Visitor of the "College."

The Charter further ordains, "That "the said College shall be deemed and "taken to be an University, and shall "have and enjoy all such and the like "privileges as are enjoyed by the Universities in the United Kingdom of "Great Britain and Ireland; and that "the Students in the said College "shall have liberty and faculty of taking the degrees of Batchelor, Master "and Doctor, in the several arts and "faculties, at the appointed times."

The Governors have appointed a Committee to frame and digest a body of Statutes, and also to procure, from the British Universities, men of learning, religion, and abilities, to fill the different stations. It is hoped that the whole will be accomplished, and the establishment completed for the admission of Students, in one year or less from the present time.

No Students will be admitted who have not a competent knowledge of the Greek and Latin languages, and it will be required, in particular, that they should be able to construe Virgil and Horace, the Gospels in the Greek Testaments, Homer's Iliad, & Xenophon's Cyropædia, Memorabilia, or some other book of Greek Prose, that they be capable of translating English into Latin, and of making Latin verses.

And, in order to encourage Students throughout his Majesty's dominions in America, to prepare themselves with diligence for entering this College, a certain number of the Scholarships established by Charter, with a suitable stipend, will be conferred on such as shall most distinguish themselves for learning, on the examination for admission, upon the opening of the College; of which public notice will be given.

Meanwhile a Grammar-school, now in a very flourishing condition, is continued within the College, to qualify young persons for entering the University.

The terms are as follows:

Boarding, fuel and candles, in the public Hall, 20l. per annum.
Making beds, and cleaning rooms 2l. per annum.
Tuition 4l. per annum.
Total expence (exclusive of washing) 26l. per annum.
The Students find their own beds, and furniture for their rooms.

 The Printers of Newspapers, in His Majesty's Colonies of North America and the West Indies, are requested to publish the above, for the information of those whom it may concern.

KINGSTON, (Jam.) Oct. 23—Nov. 6.

Extract of a letter from the Bay of Honduras, dated Sept. 14, 1802.

"I am sorry I have but very little to trouble you with worthy your attention, not having been able to explore any distance in this vast continent.—I have been up the river Belize ninety miles, to view our mahogany works. The country is still in the state of nature, only where the mahogany cutters have their works. From what I have observed in regard to soil, and such information as I have gained, it would abound in every necessary for existence—and if allowed to be cultivated, would equal if not exceed our West-India Islands. Owing to the convenience of three different rivers, from the works of which every thing can be conveniently carried down to Belize, coffee, sugar, cotton, &c. would grow most luxuriently if cultivated, with the addition of mahogany, logwood, and fustic.

"Since the late war, the settlers cut wood 250 miles up the river Belize. If this settlement was to be colonized, it might be rendered a valuable one, provided they had the same privileges as the islands.

"I certainly think the Bay more healthy than Jamaica, and it would be still more so if the woods were cleared away; the only inconvenience is from the number of land flies, musquetos, and flies called doctors (I suppose from their bleeding the sufferers), but, as I observed, if the woods were cleared, the number of insects would greatly diminish. Tygers, antelopes, &c. are frequently seen in my path. On my journey up the river, I was agreeably surprized by the sight of the double-headed cabbage tree; I admire the beauties of nature in that tree."

PORTSMOUTH, October 11.

Last night, as the Moon rose, a large black body was discovered on the Goodwin Sands; it was supposed to be a ship with her masts cut away, and several boats launched from this place to her assistance, but on a near approach it was discovered to be a very large whale, which measured eighty feet long and twenty in diameter. The animal was alive a considerable time after it got on shore, and died through its violent exertions to get into the sea. The return of the tide washed it into deep water, and it has not been seen since.

There was launched the beginning of last week at Kingholm, about a mile below Dumfries, a vessel of a new construction, built agreeable to a patent granted to P. Miller, Esq. of Dalswinton. The vessels to be built under this patent are intended for carrying passengers only, and will be named Life Packets, as they cannot sink. They afford much better accommodation than ships of any other construction of the same length can give. They are built entirely of fir wood, and draw very little water. When under sail, they are wrought and kept to windward by means of siders. They are moved through the water in calms and against light winds by wheels; and these wheels are so contrived as to be rigged or unrigged in a short time.

GIBRALTAR, September 23.

On the morning of the 19th, we had a most violent storm of thunder and lightning, which did considerable damage to our squadron in the bay, and which, if it had continued half an hour longer, would most probably have disabled the whole fleet, as none of the ships were provided with chain conductors to guard them from the effects of lightning.

The first ship that was struck was the Gibraltar, of 80 guns, and from the direction which the lightning took, close to the magazine, it seems almost a miracle that it was not blown up.—A tremendous flash of lightning struck the fore-top-gallant mast-head, split the fore-top-mast, and shivered the fore mast into a thousand pieces, driving large splinters as far aft as the quarter-deck. From the fore-mast it passed into the light-room, close to the magazine, shivering the whole of the strong plate glass to pieces; and from thence into the gunner's storeroom, where it completely destroyed several boxes of grape shot, after which, its progress could be traced no further. Fortunately only two men were hurt by the stroke—one of them, however, was severely touched.

A dreadful flash shortly afterwards struck the Active frigate, which split the top gallant mast, and carried away the main top mast, in a most singular manner; several feet of the whole body of the mast completely disappearing; not a vestige of that part of it was to be found after the explosion. The main mast was split in several places, & the ship's butler who was standing near it with his clever in his hand, was killed on the spot, and almost every person on deck was knocked down by the violence of the shock. The lightning was observed to play like a large stream of fire for a short time about the deck, and on disappearing, left a strong sulphurous smell behind.

The Superb and Dragon were also both struck; the former had her main-top-gallant, and also the binnacle on the quarter deck carried away; the latter ship was not injured, though the lightning passed all round the captain's cabin running along the bell-wires.

The Gibraltar and Active have both been obliged to go into the Mole to repair their damages, which is believed will amount to upwards of 3000l.

MAGNETISM.

We recommend the following to the perusal of our Philosophical readers.

We have been favoured by a gentleman of this town with the perusal of a letter from his friend in Glasgow of date August 2d, from which we take the following extract:

"An affair of so much importance to mankind as the following, it were criminal in me to conceal; I therefore request of you to make it as public as possible among your learning and philosophical friends.

"Our mutual friend before his departure last fall for Philadelphia, constructed a machine, apparently simple, but which is infinitely more valuable to navigation than the compass. It was brought to me together with the log-book, by a fellow passenger homewards, who unluckily had paid no attention to the use of the apparatus, which was the more unfortunate, as our friend died within three leagues of land.

"It is a magnetic ball, floating in a basin of quicksilver. The ball is painted all over to keep the quicksilver from penetrating the pores, which might embarrass the revolutions, which costing I dare not destroy to examine the material of the ball; but from its weight it must be metallic, yet it floats high in the fluid. Since he took it from its place, I perceive he has marked it with lines of longitude and latitude, like a geographical sphere. This I presume he has done on his voyage out and, the journal of which he probably left in America. But this which I possess, begins with the exact point of latitude and longitude of Philadelphia, and records the zenith of every day, as accurately as if he had been all along on terra firma. In bed, he told the Captain his distance from the coast of Ireland to a minute, by looking at his machine.

"The properties of magnetism are not yet sufficiently known, and they have heretofore been applied to us only in the form of the needle. But it appears to possess, besides its' polarity, a propensity to retain its native relative position on the earth, that is to say, it turns upon its axis, like the earth one point always pointing at the pole star beyond the line, this point upon the ball is below the horizon, and on the shores of America the longitude line, which now is its meridian, was far down the side. So that if he had sailed round the earth, his little ball would have made a complete revolution upon its axis."

FLORENCE, September 24.

We hear from Naples, that a slight shock of an earthquake was felt there lately; on the preceding evening a smoke arose from Mount Vesuvius.

The apartments on board the Spanish Admiral's ship, which is to convey their Majesties to Spain, is fitted up with the greatest magnificence. The barge in which they are to be conveyed on board, is lined with solid silver gilt.

The Prince of Ruspoli, who has been elected grand master of the order of St. John of Jerusalem, was born at Rome 1734. He went to Malta in 1780, and was appointed to the command of galleys of that order in 1785. Since then he has been travelling through the principal states of Europe. A Courtier has been sent to the Prince, who is supposed to be in Scotland, to inform him of his election.

NEW-YORK, Dec. 7.

FOREIGN NEWS.

We are very much indebted to the courtesy of the gentleman who this morning handed us some London papers, whose dates extend to the Twenty-Third of October—one day later than has been received elsewhere; it is from the last one that the extracts of this evening are taken.

The complexion of European politics seem strongly to confirm the predictions of those, who very early declared, that the peace lately agreed upon would not be permanent. The protracted negociations at Amiens were a certain evidence of stubborn objections on the part of some of the powers to the terms of the Preliminaries. The delay and difficulties that have since occurred in the execution of several articles of the Definitive Treaty, bespeak, in a language not to be misunderstood, that if they are finally complied with, it will not be without the most sullen reluctance.

ENGLAND is sending out clothing and stores for her army at Malta;—the officers belonging to the troops there, and who are absent, are directed immediately to join their regiments in that Island, and the Mediterranean fleet are ordered to rendezvous in the harbor of La Valette. From these measures it is pretty plainly inferable, that the administration have no thought of evacuating that place for the present.—Whether the rumor, very currently in circulation, that the Dey of Algiers has ceded to the French two ports in the neighbourhood of that city, has determined the English to keep possession of Malta as a counterpoise to these new acquisitions of her rival's or whether it is only to be retained as a pledge till the indemnities are finally settled, or whether it is a precautionary measure preceding the renewal of open hostilities, every one will form their own conjectures. Certain it is, that a variety of circumstances tend strongly towards the latter conclusion. The unknown embassy of Mr. Moore—the affairs of Switzerland, in which it is confidently affirmed the English Cabinet have interfered—the cutters which are daily sailing with secret dispatches—the orders given to get the men of war at Plymouth ready for sea; provided with four months stores and provisions—all have an appearance unfriendly to the continuance of peace. Reports are also prevailing that Mr. Pitt is again to return to the administration, under a coalition with the Grenvilles: these are however quite contrary; and we rather incline to the opinion that Mr. Pitt will not resume the Ministerial functions, except in the event of a war. Should that take place, there can be but little doubt that Mr. Pitt would again willingly become the director of the national energies, as it would again afford him the chance of gratifying the favorite wish of his heart—the demolition of the proud overgrowth of France, and the restoration of the Bourbons to the usurped throne of their family.

Some occurrences in the British seem to correspond with the appearances we have noticed in England. The Emperor Alexander does not regard his new Ally Bonaparte with his accustomed complacency; he begins to perceive that the Emperor of Germany is not quite so unreasonable on the subject of the indemnities as he at first apprehended; he has, in fact, lately discovered that there is much force and justice in his pretensions; a change in the Ruffian ministry has accordingly taken place, to facilitate the views of the Emperor. Count Alexander Worontzow, a brother of the Ruffian Ambaffador at London, has been made Grand Chancellor and Principal Director of Foreign Affairs. Since this alteration, the Auftrian Minifter, Count Surau, has received a very marked degree of favor and attention—civilities to which he had not before been accuftomed. The probability, therefore, is, that the Courts of St. James and Petersburgh perfectly underftand each other, and are prepared to act in concert.

Nothing final has yet taken place at Ratifbon. The Batavian mail, which arrived at London on the 22d October, brought the lateft intelligence from that place. By this, it appears that a new plan of indemnities had been offered to the Diet, making feveral territorial arrangements, different from thofe in the old one. Ratifbon and Wetzlaer are to be given up to the Elector of Mentz, and feveral new members are to be added to the College of the Princes. It is alfo ftated that this fettlement will be guaranteed by France, Ruffia and Pruffia, and that it was expected it would be agreed to by his Imperial Majefty.

The Diet at Schwartz have fent a deputation to Bonaparte; their treatment will probably be fimilar to that of Mr. Markow. Submiffion abfolute and unqualified to him who afpires to be the RULER OF EUROPE, will alone gratify his pride and avert his vengeance.

From a Calcutta Paper of July 5.

We are much concerned to ftate, that accounts were received in town laft week, of Capt. Young, late of the veffel called the Onrooft, having been murdered by a Seacunnie on the paffage from Malacca to Madras, whither fhe was bound.—It appears, that the veffel having a confiderable quantity of treafure on board, induced the perpetration of this atrocious act, the Seacunnie hoping to poffefs himfelf of it, and carry the veffel to Pegue, where he expected to efcape with impunity.—Dubious, however, of being able to conduct her thither, the life of the officer was fpared, that he might navigate her to the defired port, which under pretence of doing, he directed her courfe to the Coromandel coaft, and fortunately reached Vizagapatam, where the murderer was fecured, and, no doubt, will meet with the punifhment due to his crime.

Comfortable Conſolation at the Cloſe of Life.

When the brave Sir GEORGE ROOKE was making his will, fome friends who were preſent expreſſed their ſurprize that he had no more to leave:—"Why, (ſaid the worthy man) I do not leave much; but what I do leave was honeſtly acquired, for it never coſt a ſailor a tear, nor my country a farthing."

THE ORACLE.

YORK, SATURDAY, JANUARY 22, 1803.

Tuesday laſt being the anniverſary of her Majeſty's birth day, a Royal Salute was fired from the garriſon, ſucceeded by three vollies of ſmall arms—and general joy ſeemed to pervade all ranks of his Majeſty's ſubjects on the occaſion.

The Lieutenant Governor has been pleaſed to ther to prorogue the Provincial Parliament to Monday the 24th inſt. as may be ſeen by the Proclamation to that effect in the firſt page of this Gazette.

At a Meeting of the Subſcribers to a Fund for erecting a Church, in the Town of York, holden at the Government Buildings, on Saturday, the 8th day of January inſtant.

His Honor the CHIEF JUSTICE, in the Chair;

RESOLVED UNANIMOUSLY, That each ſubſcriber ſhall pay the amount of his ſubſcription by three inſtalments—the firſt being one moiety in one month from this day, the ſecond being a moiety of the reſidue in two months, and the remainder in three months.

RESOLVED UNANIMOUSLY, That Mr. William Allan and Mr. Duncan Cameron, ſhall be Treaſurers, and ſhall receive the amount of the ſaid ſubſcriptions; and that they be jointly and ſeverally anſwerable for all monies paid into their hands upon the receipt of either of them.

RESOLVED UNANIMOUSLY, That his Honor the Chief Juſtice, the Honorable Mr. Ruſſell, the Honorable Captain M'Gill, the Reverend Mr. Stuart, Doctor Mac[illegible], Mr. Cameron, and the two Treaſurers, be a committee of the ſubſcribers, with full power and authority to apply the monies ariſing from ſubſcriptions, to the purpoſe contemplated—Provided nevertheleſs, that if any material difference in opinion ſhould ariſe among them, recort ſhall be had to a meeting of the ſubſcribers to decide.

RESOLVED UNANIMOUSLY, That the Church be built of ſtone, brick, or framed timber, as the committee may judge moſt expedient, due regard being had to the ſuperior advantages of a ſtone or brick building, if not counterbalanced by the additional expence.

RESOLVED UNANIMOUSLY, That eight hundred pounds, of lawful money, be the extent upon which the committee ſhall calculate their plan;—but, in the firſt inſtance, they ſhall not expend beyond the ſum of ſix hundred pounds, (if the amount of the ſums ſubſcribed and paid into the hands of the Treaſurers, together with the monies which may be allowed by the Britiſh government, amount to ſo much) leaving ſo much of the work as can moſt conveniently be diſpenſed with, to be completed by the remaining two hundred pounds—provided, however, that the ſaid ſix hundred pounds be laid out in ſuch manner that Divine Worſhip can be performed with decency, in the Church.

RESOLVED UNANIMOUSLY, That the committee do requeſt the opinion and advice of Mr. Berczy, reſpecting the probable expences which will attend the undertaking, and reſpecting the materials to be preferred; due regard being had to the amount of the fund, as aforeſaid; and that after having obtained his opinion, they do advertiſe their reſolves to receive propoſals conformable thereto.

N. B. The propriety of receiving contributions in labour or materials, is ſuggeſted to the committee.

Secretary to the Meeting.

ZOOLOGY.

It is a curious fact, in the hiſtory of animals, that the naſteſt are the moſt long-lived. A ſwine, which is among the dirteſt of all creatures, will live twenty-five years—whereas a ſheep, which is a very neat animal, will live only ten years.

Thoſe ſpecies of fowls, which are moſt noted for longevity, are ſuch as feed on carrion. The raven and the eagle will live to the age of one hundred years; but a pigeon, which is a bird remarkable for its cleanlineſs and delicacy, will live only eight years. It is a remarkable arrangement in the ſyſtem of nature, that ſome kinds of animals ſhould feed deliciouſly on, and receive ſubſtantial nourithment from ſubſtances, which are both loathſome and poiſonous to others. Carrion is not only delicious to the palates of eagles and ravens, but is to them a moſt wholeſome food; otherwiſe it would not ſuſtain and prolong their lives to the extreme age of an hundred years. UPPER-CANADA.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,

Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, at any time during the space of three years from the passing thereof, was empowered to issue Commissions, and the Commissioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Cases in which the Frith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not issued—AND WHEREAS, Commissions were accordingly issued, and the Commissioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon some of the Claims that came before them; but many Persons, during the space of the said three years, neglected to come forward and give the necessary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the said Commissioners to prosecute such Claims, or came unprepared with the necessary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof essential to the establishment of their said Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Person or by Agent, or to take any proper steps for ascertaining their Titles in manner by the said Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithstanding such manifest inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majesty's Subjects, the said Act was, by another Statute passed in the Year One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but such indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of those for whose benefit the Law was passed.

AND WHEREAS, in the last Session of the Parliament of this Province, the Legislature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may assert their Claims, in all Cases where the Faith of Government stands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not issued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commissions were issued, and the Commissioners duly attended at the respective times when the Assizes were held for the several Districts in this Province, but some of the Parties, who had given notice of asserting Claims, came in the same unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; so that, if such gross negligence and inattention is persevered in, the salutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in assenting to such repeated extensions of so indulgent a Law, will be altogether disappointed and frustrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commissioners named in the several Commissions, issued under the Authority of the last mentioned Statute, will, for the purpose of deciding on all such Claims as aforesaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home District, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the Twenty Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the District of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the District of Newcastle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland District, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the District of Johnstown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eastern District, on the First Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the District of London, at the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Western District, also at the time of the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the said Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Persons interested will give Notice, according to Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the respective Districts—And His Majesty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that such Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commissioners will continue to sit till they shall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Case heard and decided upon; but that, after they have so done, such Commissioners, or any other Commissioners, will never more sit again in the execution of the said Commission, and the Parties who shall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have lost all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they so grossly neglected their own Interest, and omitted to avail themselves of that indulgence so repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majesty's Reign.

From a late London Paper.

COURT OF KING'S BENCH, Oct. 27.

LE MESURIER vs. THOMSON.

This was an act on a policy of insurance on goods on board the President, an American ship from New-York to Gibraltar. The loss was stated to have happened by capture.

Mr. Gibbs said, he appeared for the commissioners of the Victualling Board, on whose account the policy had been effected. About the beginning of the year 1801, a supply of provisions was wanted for our troops stationed at Gibraltar. It was judged better that this should be obtained from America than sent out from England. Accordingly the plaintiff was commissioned to purchase a quantity of flour at New-York, and actually made purchases to the value of 10,000l.—The ship Adventure was chartered to carry it across the Atlantic, and the cargo was insured for 9,300l. The Adventure sailed, was taken as she was entering Gibraltar by several Spanish boats, was carried into Algeziras, and was there condemned as lawful prize. Mr. G. declared himself altogether at a loss to conceive what defence was meant to be set up.—By Admissions it was allowed that the policy was duly effected; that the action might be sustained with regard to interest; that the ship was American built; that she was properly documented as an American; that she sailed, and that she was captured by the Spaniards. The sentence of condemnation was admitted too, and he understood the defence was to be rested upon this: it being stated in the sentence that the ship was condemned for attempting to enter Gibraltar then in a state of blockade. But the underwriters were informed that the Spaniards took all vessels entering Gibraltar with provisions. A notice of this fact was publicly stuck up at Lloyd's. The underwriters were quite aware of the risk they undertook, as the policy was done at eight guineas per cent. whereas upon goods on board a neutral or an ordinary voyage, the premium would not have been more than two or three.—After a great many ingenuous observations, Mr. Gibbs proposed to call witnesses to prove that the underwriters had been informed of the practice of the Spaniards in seizing neutrals carrying provisions into Gibraltar, but Lord Ellenborough was of opinion that such evidence was not to be received. The word American in the policy was no doubt a warranty that the ship not only belonged to America, but would conform herself in every thing to the law of nations, and to the particular treaties between the United States and the King of Spain. He wished very much that it was otherwise, as great injustice would be prevented; but according to established cases, the sentence of the foreign Court of Admiralty was conclusive evidence of what ever it affected. It was impossible to receive parole evidence to explain away a written contract.

Mr. Gibbs contended, that between America and this country, there could be nothing illegal in a contract to supply the English troops at Gibraltar with provisions. There could be nothing illegal, therefore, in a policy of insurance to facilitate the execution of purposes, if a full and fair disclosure was made to the underwriters of the risk that would be run.

Lord Ellenborough afterwards thought, that as the word Gibraltar was in the policy, as well as American, it was not for the underwriters to allege that to go there was unlawful for an American, unless something had taken place subsequently to the date of the policy, rendering that unlawful which was lawful before.

Much curious argumentation took place, but as the point was not decided, we think it better to wait till the cause comes before a higher tribunal.

Mr. Erskine, for the underwriters, said he was ready to allow that the assertion, that Gibraltar was in a state of blockade, was an impudent lie. Still what was affirmed by a foreign court of competent jurisdiction could not be controverted.

It was at last agreed that a special verdict should be found, stating the policy and the sentence of condemnation.

Lord Ellenborough said, that the point would thus be raised very neatly, and that all parole evidence was unnecessary, as well as the treaty now subsisting between Spain and the United States of America.

MR. BARRETT'S BALLOON.

A long letter from Mr. Barrett has been transmitted to the Editors of the London papers, in which, after giving a very minute and detailed account of his operations, subsequent to his arrival at Swanfea, he proceeds thus:

"Accordingly last Friday (the 15th inft.) was the day fixed, and after getting the stage repaired, and all other materials ready, the day before, we commenced filling precisely at a quarter before ten o'clock; and by half past twelve, the balloon was sufficiently inflated barely to carry up my own weight. About this time a cask, which had been just charged with vitriol and water, burst, and let out the materials; this occasioned some delay, as well as a smart breeze, which sprung up from the north-east, occasioned a rent in the lower part of the balloon, owing to the great strain of part of the net across the silk of the machine to keep it steady: we lost a great deal of gas; but soon repaired this trifling accident. From the difficulty of obtaining a sufficient number of casks, we were obliged to empty and again charge the small casks, while our large refrigeratory, consisting of seven tubes and larger casks, were at work. About half past one, I went to my lodgings to get some roast leg of mutton, part of which I secured and put in my pocket handkerchief, in case of defending where no meat was to be had. I returned to the field; but in that space of time, (about fifteen minutes,) could not perceive much alteration in the fize of the balloon. I gave directions for the car to be flung. As our vitriol was all out, and the tubes flaccid, a little before three I got into the car, with fifty pounds ballast, a bottle of brandy, and a pound of leg of mutton, and bread, flags, &c. all of which I threw out before the balloon began to afcend, but the bottle, and that went foon after, to enable me to clear a hedge which the balloon got foul of: the populace then came up & bore me out the balloon upon their shoulders to the extremity of the field, when I found myself rising gradually, and for the first time in my life abandoned to a new element. However, the pleasure I enjoyed in the prospect of the town and its environs, as well as rising amidst the acclamations and applause of near 10,000 people, was but very short lived, for at the moment I was whirling round my cap to take leave of the multitude below me, to my very great mortification and disappointment I found the balloon defending, which it continued to do until it lighted gently by about four fields distance, after which it alternately afcended for the space of a quarter of an hour, carrying me over fields, trees, and hedges, and sometimes skimming a few feet above the surface of the earth. Finding all my endeavours to reafcend ineffectual, I got out of my cradle, and after opening the valve, the balloon, which was now lightened by 250lb. afcended with great velocity; till it appeared no larger than an acorn, taking its course directly over the fea, where it remained stationary, but soon after met with a different current of wind, which brought it within six miles of the place it first afcended from, where it fell gently in the middle of a field, after being up three hours, and all the while in sight.

"The balloon was seized by the country people, and cut through the middle to let me out as they alledged, whom they supposed nearly, or quite dead.

THE ORACLE.

YORK: SATURDAY, JANUARY 29, 1803.

In the absence of the Honorable David William Smith, Esq; the House of Assembly have made choice of Richard Beasley, Esq; as their Speaker, which his Excellency has been pleased to approve.

On Thursday last his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor came in state to the Upper House of Legislature, and opened the Session with the following most gracious SPEECH from the Throne:—

Honorable Gentlemen
Of the Legislative Council, and
Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

YOU see now assembled at a season of the year, when I trust, your attendance upon your public duty will least interfere with your private concerns.

It is highly pleasing to me, that I have to congratulate you, on the termination of hostilities between our mother country and the other belligerent powers of Europe, in announcing to you, that since the last session, I have received official information of the signature of the definitive treaty of peace.

I have also particular satisfaction in notifying to you, the present prospect of an increase in that branch of our Revenue, which arises on the importation of merchandize from the United States into this Province—At the same time, I think it necessary to call your attention to a revision of that law, by which those duties were imposed, fully relying that your wisdom and exertions will be abundantly adequate to the introduction of such further regulations and provisions, as will ensure to the Province those duties, which according to the true spirit and meaning of the law, ought to be yielded.

I am also fully persuaded, that you will find it an object worthy your mature and deliberate consideration, to adopt such amendments in all our other Provincial laws, relating to our internal revenues, as will prove an efficient remedy against evasion and fraud (an evil now existing to too great an extent) and as will effectually enforce, a just and equitable collection of those very light and easy taxes, which have been imposed to meet the public exigencies, and which the resources of His Majesty's subjects of Upper-Canada are fully equal to discharge.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

I have ordered the Public Accounts to be laid before you, and I am persuaded you will bestow upon them that careful attention, which the nature of the subject requires.

Honorable Gentlemen
Of the Legislative Council, and
Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

Since I last met you in this place, I have issued a Proclamation, and caused as general a circulation of it throughout the Province as could be provided, notifying to the public, the times and places, when the Commissioners for ascertaining and securing titles to lands, will attend for the final accomplishment of that business, and I trust that the labors and exertions of those engaged in it, will ultimately secure the King's subjects in indisputable titles to their landed property, an object so truly essential to the interests and happiness of them and their posterity, as to be almost inestimable.

The confidence I have in your wisdom and experience, as well as in your knowledge of the present situation and circumstances of the Province, render it unnecessary, that I should point your attention to the enacting any particular laws in addition to our present code, resting fully assured, that giving energy to the King's government, and passing such statutes as will ultimately promote the happiness and prosperity of His people, will in all your deliberations, be the principal objects ever keps in view, the attainment of which I feel confident will engage your utmost assiduity and exertions.

THE LAWYER AND CLIENT.

TWO Lawyers, when a knotty case was o'er,
Shook hands, and were as good friends as before.
"Say," cries the losing client, "how came you
"To be such friends, who were but yesterday foes?"
"Thou fool!" cry they, "our strife—Lawyers, tho' keen,
Like shears, ne er cut themselves, but what's between."

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,

Lieutenant Governor of the ſaid Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, paſſed in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, at any time during the ſpace of three years from the paſſing thereof, was empowered to iſſue Commiſſions, and the Commiſſioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Caſes in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not iſſued—AND WHEREAS, Commiſſions were accordingly iſſued, and the Commiſſioners therein named duly aſſembled, and proceeded to decide upon ſome of the Claims that came before them; but many Perſons, during the ſpace of the ſaid three years, neglected to come forward and give the neceſſary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the ſaid Commiſſioners to proſecute ſuch Claims, or came unprepared with the neceſſary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof eſſential to the eſtabliſhment of their ſaid Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Perſon or by Agent, or to take any proper ſteps for aſcertaining their Titles in manner by the ſaid Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithſtanding ſuch manifeſt inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majeſty's Subjects, the ſaid Act was, by another Statute paſſed in the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but ſuch indulgence failed to produce the activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of thoſe for whoſe benefit the Law was paſſed.

AND WHEREAS, in the laſt Seſſion of the Parliament of this Province, the Legiſlature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may aſſert their Claims, in all Caſes where the Faith of Government ſtands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not iſſued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commiſſions were iſſued, and the Commiſſioners duly attended at the reſpective times when the Aſſizes were held for the ſeveral Diſtricts in this Province, but ſome of the Parties, who had given notice of aſſerting Claims, came in the ſame unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; ſo that, if ſuch groſs negligence and inattention is perſevered in, the ſalutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in aſſenting to ſuch repeated extenſions of ſo indulgent a Law, will be altogether diſappointed and fruſtrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commiſſioners named in the ſeveral Commiſſions, iſſued under the Authority of the laſt mentioned Statute, will, for the purpoſe of deciding on all ſuch Claims as aforeſaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home Diſtrict, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the Firſt Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the Diſtrict of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the Diſtrict of Newcaſtle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland Diſtrict, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the Diſtrict of Johnſtown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eaſtern Diſtrict, on the Firſt Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the Diſtrict of London, at the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Weſtern Diſtrict, alſo at the time of the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the ſaid Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Perſons intereſted will give Notice, according to Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon, but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſsly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

Lateſt Intelligence.

NORFOLK, Dec. 30.

Since our laſt publication, we were politely handed Glaſgow papers to the 19th of November, received by the General Carleton.

The complexion of affairs in Europe, (which appears very enigmatical) begin to excite much ſpeculation again in the commercial and political world, will be beſt known by a ſcrutiny of the details given in the following columns.

The Corporation of Dublin is purſuing active meaſures for checking rebellion in its ſource. On November 5th, a meeting of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council, was held, to conſider a charge againſt an Alderman for drinking as a toaſt, "James Napper Tandy, General of Division, and ſucceſs to Freedom."—The opinions of the Recorder and Attorney General that the crime was punithable by indictment, were read. The Alderman attended, and offered full ſubmiſſion and ample apology for his rebellious conduct. The matter is not, however, at an end.

LONDON, November 10.

Orders were received at Dover on Tueſday, by the Agent victualler, to diſcharge all extra clerks, laborers, and ſupernumeraries of every deſcription, who were employed in the yard in conſequence of the war, and to reduce the victualling department here, exactly upon the ſcale of the laſt peace eſtabliſhment.

A plan is now under conſideration for the ſpeedy recruitment of the royal navy by means of regiſters, without having recourſe to the invidious and expenſive practice of impreſſing ſeamen.

An oppoſition is talked of to the reelection of Mr. Abbott, as ſpeaker of the Houſe of Commons. Mr. Foſter has been named as a candidate for the Chair, as well as one or two others.

November 13.

Lord Whitworth arrived at Calais on Wedneſday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, where he was received with great diſtinction, as appears by the following letter from Calais, dated Nov. 10—"His Excellency Lord Whitworth arrived this day at three o'clock, after a pleaſant paſſage of four hours and a half. He was received, on his landing, by an immenſe concourſe of people, and with much huzzaing. The guns fired, and flags diſplayed on the church ſteeples, &c.—When his Excellency arrived at the Inn, where a captains guard mounted, he was complimented by the conſtituted authorities, conſiſting of the Mayors, the Commiſſary Gen. Monguard, the Judge de Paix, &c. After them came General Barbalanne, at the head of the officers of the garriſon. After dinner his Excellency and ſuite were formally invited to attend the theatre, in order, as it was ſaid, that the public might have an opportunity of ſeeing what had been ſo long and ſo ardently deſired, an Engliſh Ambaſſador in France. They were received with great enthuſiaſm, "God ſave the King," was ſtruck up and played for a quarter of an hour, but almoſt drowned by the applauſe of the whole houſe, who ſtood up whilſt it was playing in the good old Engliſh faſhion. A grand dinner was given by the Ambaſſador at Deſſin's Hotel, which was provided in a very ſumptuous manner. His Lordſhip proceeds on his route to Paris to-morrow morning, and it is ſaid that an eſcort of dragoons is ordered to attend him the whole of his journey."

Private letters from France contain intelligence of very conſiderable importance indeed!—After the ratification of the treaty of Amiens, Britiſh ſubjects having money in the French funds were of courſe to be paid, and were paid the arrears upon their ſtock which had accrued before the war, and during its continuance. The beginning of this week, however, ſome perſons making the cuſtomary applications to the French bankers, we know not, with certainty, whether to Perregeaux, Rocamier, Sir Robert Smith, or others, are ſaid to have received for anſwer—"that they were ſorry to inform them, that, under the preſent circumſtances and ſituation of the two countries, and as the Britiſh government had not thought proper to execute the whole of the treaty of Amiens on their part, the French government has deemed it neceſſary to iſſue a decree, ordering the payment of theſe arrears to be ſuſpended." Such is the intelligence which has been received. We give it as we received it.—Courier.

A Dutch Mail arrived this morning.

Our private correſpondent informs us, that the Dutch government has conſented to furniſh all the neceſſaries for the embarkation of the 15th and 17th brigades, which were in the pay of Holland, for Louiſiana.

They are to be embarked at Helvoetſluys. The quantity of ammunition, artillery, &c. which they are to carry with them is immenſe. From Helvoetſluys the troops are to proceed to Dunkirk, to join the remainder of the troops. General Victor is expected at the Hague to attend the embarkation.

Much has been ſaid within theſe few days of a final ſettlement having taken place between the Britiſh and French governments reſpecting Malta. It may be ſo, even admitting another ſtatement to be correct, which prevails in the miniſterial circles, namely, that it is finally to remain in the poſſeſſion of Britain. William Eton, Eſq. who arrived in town on Tueſday morning, with diſpatches for government from Malta, is ſaid to be the bearer of moſt important intelligence reſpecting that iſland and Egypt.

Private letters from Alexandria ſtate, that the Mamelukes and the Turks had almoſt daily encounters; and it was ſuppoſed that the Ottoman troops would be driven out of Egypt, excepting ſuch as took refuge in Alexandria, which, in theſe circumſtances, the Britiſh government has not thought it right to evacuate, as it is not able to fulfil the article of the treaty reſpecting the delivering up of that country to the Turks.

The Army.—the following particulars are from a morning paper of rather doubtful authority:—"All the regiments of infantry have orders to complete to their full eſtabliſhment, and to ſelect ſuch officers to recruit as are moſt likely to obtain men. The 61ſt regiment is ordered to Malta, and the 10th to Gibraltar. The 91ſt, 92d, and 93d, ordered to be diſbanded, are ordered to be recruited as faſt as poſſible. Circular letters, under date of Saturday, are iſſued to the colonels of each regiment of militia, to make immediate application for their full proportion of cloathing, and to apply "forthwith," to the Ordnance for any number of arms deficient of the quantity that will be required for the increaſed number of militia."

M. Otto has notified that he takes his departure from England on Monday week.

Circular letters have been ſent from Lord Pelham, Secretary of State, to all the Members of the Houſe of Peers, ſtating, that His Majeſty will go in ſtate on the 24th, to lay before both Houſes of Parliament, in a ſpeech from the Throne, the divers weighty and important affairs which have induced him to call Parliament together.

We have the greateſt ſatisfaction in aſſuring the public, that Mr. Pitt's health has been perfectly re-eſtabliſhed by even the ſhort uſe which he has made of the Bath waters. That great man never was in better health than at the preſent moment, and we have no doubt of ſoon ſeeing his unrivalled talents exerted in Parliament, in ſupport of the cauſe and the intereſts of his country.

NEW-YORK, January 8—12.

The intelligence from Europe, via "Folk, is 8 days later than our former accounts. A private letter from Glaſgow, dated the 17th November, ſtates, "that there were 19 ſail of the line at Toulon ready for ſea, having on board upwards of 20,000 troops, deſtination unknown, in conſequence of which the Britiſh government had ſent an expreſs to Sir R. Bickerton, who is with a ſtrong force off Malta, to keep a cloſe watch on their movements."

An article from Breſt, dated the 29th of October, ſays—"This day entered the harbor, the Romaine and Volontaire frigates, from New York. The former has a great quantity of negroes on board. The Salamander, en flute, has alſo arrived."

NEW PUBLICATION.

A new work has juſt appeared on the Statiſtics (or Political Œconomy) of England. The author has, in particular, collected from details on the hiſtory of its commerce ſince 1697. "Till that period," ſays he, "it is impoſſible for us to know the extent and progreſs of its commerce. At that time, the ſum in circulation was 512,000l. ſterling; a century afterwards, the ſum was reckoned at 11,960,000l. (above twenty times more than it had been before); from 1714 to 1718, its commerce had increaſed 8½ millions; from 1783 to 1798, twenty-two millions; its progreſs ſince has been ſtill more rapid.—Before the reign of George I. they had introduced a ſyſtem of finance that was founded on true principles of public œconomy. In the reign of Queen Elizabeth, the duties which were laid on commerce, were 25 per cent. The annual revenue under William III. was four millions, under Queen Anne, five millions; under George I. ſeven millions and a half; under George II. eleven millions and three quarters; under George III. 66,763,701 pounds ſterling.

During the preſent reign, they have encloſed received 1,804,000 acres of land, an there remains 51,176,643 acres of waſte lands. The preſent population of the three kingdoms, according to a late enumeration, is 15,894,493 ſouls. It has encreaſed during the eighteenth century, five millions. It had encreaſed only four millions and a half during the ſix centuries preceding the laſt."

—DIED—

Lately, at Kentiſh Town, England, aged 48, JOHN LITTLE. Some days previous to his death, his phyſicians perſuaded him to take a little wine, as indiſpenſibly neceſſary to recruit his decayed ſtrength, occaſioned by his miſerable and parſimonious living. Mr. Little, fearful of truſting his ſervants with the key of the wine cellar, inſiſted upon their carrying him down ſtairs to get a ſingle bottle; when the ſudden tranſition from a warm bed to a damp cellar brought on ſuch a fit of apoplexy, as occaſioned his death. On examination, it appeared that he poſſeſſed upwards of 25,000l. in the different funtines; 11,000l. in the 4 per cents. beſides 2,000 per ann. of landed property; which now devolves to a brother, to whom he never afforded the leaſt aſſiſtance, on account of his being married, matrimony being a ſtate in which he himſelf never entered, and for which he always entertained the greateſt deteſtation. He reſided upwards of 40 years in the ſame houſe, one room of which had not been occupied for the ſpace of 14 years: but which on his death was found to contain 173 pair of breeches, with a large proportion of other articles of wearing apparel, all of which were in ſuch a wretched ſtate of decay, that they were ſold to a Jew for a ſingle half guinea.—In the coach houſe were diſcovered, ſecreted in different parts of the building, 180 wigs, which had been bequeathed to him by different relations, and on which he ſet great ſtore.

According to the regiſter of Births and Deaths in the Pruſſian States for the year 1801, the number of Births were 406,650 (including 12,649 ſoldiers' children) which exceeded the number of Deaths by 103,283. The number of Marriages in the ſame year, was 89,309.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1803.

On Wednesday laft the Honorable the Legiſlative Council attended by their Speaker, waited on his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor with its Addreſs, in anſwer to his Excellency's Speech at the opening of the preſent ſeſſion, which is as follows :—

To His Excellency PETER HUNTER Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper-Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in Upper and Lower-Canada, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,—

WE His Majeſty's moſt dutiful Subjects, the Members of the Legiſlative Council of Upper Canada, in Provincial Parliament aſſembled, beg leave to offer your moſt reſpectful thanks for the great attention ſhewn by your Excellency to our private convenience, by calling us together at this leaſt buſy ſeaſon of the year.

We are too ſenſible how very eſſential a ſtate of tranquility is to the proſperity of this Province, not to rejoice with your Excellency at the reſtoration of peace, and to pray moſt ardently for its continuance : And, animated by this hope, we anxiouſly look forward to the happy day, when the abundant products of a moſt fertile ſoil and genial climate, with the conſequent increaſe of commerce, ſhall enable Upper-Canada, through the favor of Providence, to provide for the internal expence of its government by its own reſources.

Your Excellency has made us happy by the information, that our trade with the United States, begins to open a proſpect of that branch of the revenue depending upon it ; and we ſhall not fail to uſe our beſt endeavors, to add ſuch further regulations and proviſions to the laws, by which duties were impoſed on merchandizes imported from thence, as may adhere to the Province every advantage it has a right to expect from them—nor ſhall our efforts be wanting moſt cordially to co-operate with the other branches of the Legiſlature, in adopting ſuch ſuperintendants to all our other Provincial revenue laws, as may moſt effectually guard againſt evaſion and fraud, and effectually enforce a full and due obedience to them.

The meaſures which your Excellency has taken, for notifying to the public the times and places when and where the Commiſſioners for aſcertaining and ſecuring titles to land, will attend for the final accompliſhment of that important buſineſs, ſtrongly evance how much your Excellency has the welfare of this Province at heart, and call for our moſt grateful acknowledgements. And we are happy in the aſſurance your Excellency is pleaſed to expreſs, that the giving energy by the King's government, and promoting the happineſs of His people, will employ our utmoſt aſſiduity and exertions, and be the ultimate object of all our deliberations.

By Order of the Houſe,
(Signed) H. ALLOCK, Speaker.
Legiſlative Council Chamber,
York, January 31ſt, 1803.

To which His Excellency was pleaſed to make the following REPLY :—

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legiſlative Council,

ACCEPT my thanks for this dutiful and loyal addreſs. Your aſſurances of concurrence in every neceſſary meaſure of our having cannot but be highly pleaſing to me ; and I regard your declaration, that the giving energy to His Majeſty's government, and the promotion of the happineſs of His ſubjects, will principally engage your future deliberations, as ſo many proofs of your ſincere attachment to His Majeſty and his family, and of your anxious concern for the welfare of His people.

The Honorable the Houſe of Aſſembly on Saturday 29th Jan. waited on his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor with the following Addreſs in anſwer to his Excellency's Speech at the opening of the Seſſion.

To His Excellency PETER HUNTER Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper-Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,—

WE His Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Commons of the Province of Upper-Canada, in Parliament aſſembled, return you our thanks for your Excellency's Speech, and for your conſideration in calling us together at a ſeaſon of the year, when our attendance upon our public duty is leaſt —— ſave with our private concerns.

We ſincerely rejoice with your Excellency, in the diſſemination of hoſtilities between the other belligerent powers of Europe and our mother country ; and we ſincerely hope, that the treaty of peace, of which your Excellency has had official information, may be a laſting one, by which means, we may continue to enjoy in tranquility the many advantages we poſſeſs under her protection

We are happy to find, that there is a proſpect of an increaſe of our revenue, ariſing on the merchandize imported from the United States into this Province, and knowing its importance, we aſſure your Excellency, that our moſt ſerious attention ſhall not be wanting to reviſe the law by which thoſe duties are impoſed, and that we ſhall endeavor to make ſuch further regulations and proviſions, as will enſure to the Province thoſe duties, which, according to the true ſpirit and meaning of the ſaid law, ought to be yeelded.

We are truly ſenſible that the taxes, impoſed by our other Provincial laws to meet the public exigencies, are light and eaſy on His Majeſty's ſubjects of this Province, and being well convinced that their reſources are fully equal to diſcharge them, our maſture and deliberate conſideration ſhall be beſtowed, in adopting ſuch amendments as will prove an efficient remedy againſt every fraud or evaſion which may exiſt, and as will enforce a juſt and equitable collection of the ſaid taxes.

We ſhall beſtow our moſt careful attention upon the Public Accounts, which your Excellency has been pleaſed to order to be laid before us, having due regard to the nature and importance of the ſubject.

We feel it our duty to thank your Excellency for your ſolicitude for the welfare and happineſs of the King's ſubjects in this Province, and their poſterity, evinced by your iſſuing a Proclamation, which has been ſo generally circulated, by which they have been notified of the times and places where the Commiſſioners for aſcertaining titles to land, will attend for the accelerating the accompliſhment of that buſineſs, which, by the labor and exertions of thoſe engaged in it, will ultimately produce the moſt happy effects in ſecuring to them indiſputable titles to their landed property, an object truly ineſtimable.

The happineſs and proſperity of His Majeſty's ſubjects muſt ever be our principal object in all our deliberations—and we aſſure your Excellency, our exertions ſhall always be uſed in enacting ſuch particular laws, in addition to our preſent code, as the ſituation and circumſtances of the Province render neceſſary, and as will give energy to the government under which we have the happineſs to live, and enjoy ſo many bleſſings.

(Signed) RICHARD BEASLEY, Speaker.
Commons Houſe of Aſſembly,
York, 28th January, 1803.

To which His excellency was pleaſed to return the following ANSWER :—

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Aſſembly.

I thank you for this dutiful and loyal addreſs.—Your congratulations of the termination of hoſtilities in Europe are alſo highly acceptable to me, and your concurrence with my wiſhes for the amendment of our revenue laws, affords me great ſatisfaction.

I feel fully convinced of the ſincerity of your aſſurances, that the giving energy to His Majeſty's government, and the promotion of the happineſs of His ſubjects in this Province, will form the principal objects of your future deliberations.

A moſt diſtreſſing fire broke out in Portſmouth, (N. H.) on the 18th December laſt, by which numbers of families were deprived of their property and houſes, and even of the means of ſupport. It is ſaid about one hundred buildings, in the moſt valuable part of the town, including the Bank and Cuſtom-Houſe, have been conſumed. The loſs which this calamity has occaſioned, is conjectured to be upwards of 500,000 dollars.

Method of recovering the writing upon parchment decayed by time, and of making it legible.—Dip the parchment obliterated by time, into a veſſel of cold water, freſh drawn from the well ; in about a minute take it out, and preſs it between two papers, to prevent its cramping up in drying. As ſoon as it is moderately dry, if it be not legible, repeat the operation two or three times —The ſkin will then reſume its priſtine colour, and appear all alike.

York currency per ann. each including poſtage, may be had of SILVESTER TIFFANY, at Niagara, agent to the editors, by whom, and the publiſher of this paper ſpecimens of each will be ſhewn, & ſubſcriptions taken.

UPPER-CANADA.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,

Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, at any time during the space of three years from the passing thereof, was empowered to issue Commissions, and the Commissioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Cases in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not issued—AND WHEREAS, Commissions were accordingly issued, and the Commissioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon some of the Claims that came before them; but many Persons, during the space of the said three years, neglected to come forward and give the necessary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the said Commissioners to prosecute such Claims, or came unprepared with the necessary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof essential to the establishment of their said Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Person or by Agent, or to take any proper steps for ascertaining their Titles in manner by the said Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithstanding such manifest inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majesty's Subjects, the said Act was, by another Statute passed in the Year One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but such indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of those for whole benefit the Law was passed.

AND WHEREAS, in the last Session of the Parliament of this Province, the Legislature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may assert their Claims, in all Cases where the Faith of Government stands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not issued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commissions were issued, and the Commissioners duly attended at the respective times when the Assizes were held for the several Districts in this Province, but some of the Parties, who had given notice of asserting Claims, came in the same unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; so that, if such gross negligence and inattention is persevered in, the salutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in assenting to such repeated extensions of so indulgent a Law, will be altogether disappointed and frustrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commissioners named in the several Commissions, issued under the Authority of the last mentioned Statute, will, for the purpose of deciding on all such Claims as aforesaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home District, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the First Day of February, on the Twenty Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the District of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the District of Newcastle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland District, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the District of Johnstown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eastern District, on the First Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the District of London, at the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Western District, also at the time of the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the said Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Persons interested will give Notice, according to Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the respective Districts—And His Majesty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that such Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commissioners will continue to sit till they shall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Cale heard and decided upon; but that after they have so done, such Commissioners, or any other Commissioners, will never more sit again in the execution of the said Commission, and the Parties who shall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have lost all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they so grossly neglected their own Interest, and omitted to avail themselves of that indulgence so repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majesty's Reign.

Lateſt Intelligence.

GLASGOW, Nov. 2.

The London papers received this morning, ſtate, that the Cabinet had come to the reſolution of diſpatching orders to every part of the globe, to retain thoſe poſſeſſions which we ceded by the Treaty of Amiens, ſo far as not already given up. How theſe Journaliſts come to know the deciſion of a Cabinet Council, we are yet to learn.

November 3.

We received laſt night French papers to the 31ſt ult. It is with a mixed feeling of ſorrow and indignation that we announce the entrance of the French troops into Switzerland. The courier who carried Colonel Rapp's ſummons to the Diet of Schwitz to diſſolve itſelf, was to allow the Diet only one hour to come to a determination. The Preſident, Reding, returned for anſwer, "that having received the letter at ten o'clock at night, and conſequently too late to convoke the Aſſembly, and that having only one hour given him to reply, he had confined himſelf to acknowledge the receipt of the letter." As ſoon as this leconic anſwer was received at Berne, General Ney's aid-de-camp ſet off for Genoa; and in 24 hours afterwards the General himſelf arrived. On the evening of the 23d a battalion of French troops took poſſeſſion of Berne. A corps of 1600 men had taken poſſeſſion of Baſle two days before. Troops are alſo marching againſt Zurich, and the French army in the Italian Republic has entered the Griſons.

The Diet has ſent couriers to the different cantons to furniſh their contingents with all poſſible ſpeed. Not that Switzerland, unaided by a ſingle power, can expect to reſiſt with ſucceſs, the torrent of French force which will be poured upon her: but it is ſome conſolation to ſee that Liberty can ſtill inſpire her ſons with the gallant determination not to yield without ſtriking one blow for Switzerland.

Amidſt theſe events we are anxious to know what will be the conduct of the Emperor of Germany. He cannot be indifferent to the fate of Switzerland; and the moſt ſhallow politician muſt ſee that he has an intereſt in preventing France from acquiring the abſolute command of that country. We give no credit, therefore, to an article from Vienna, in one of the French papers, which aſſerts that his Imperial Majeſty has prohibited M. de Cobenzel from receiving the letters which the patriot leaders have addreſſed to him, and has expreſſed his perfect ſatisfaction at the reſolution adopted by the Chief Conſul. If this intelligence be true, the ſpirit of Auſtria is indeed broken; and we may truly ſay that ſhe has deſerved her humiliation.

The French funds are 50 8 10.

Downing-ſtreet, Nov. 2.

SIR,

As upon the meeting of Parliament, which is fixed for the 16th of this month, the Houſe of Commons will immediately proceed to the choice of a Speaker, and to the conſideration of other matters of importance, I take the liberty to acquaint you that a full attendance is highly deſirable at the opening of the ſeſſion—I ſhall have the honor to be, &c.

HENRY ADDINGTON.

DOVER, Nov. 5.

P. S. 4 o'clock.—I have this moment quitted the Pier head after ſeeing General Andreoſſi, Monſieur Portalis, his Secretary, and ſuite, landed: they will ſet off for town to-morrow morning.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 14.

Laſt Monday arrived the brig Hannah and Sally, Capt. Sulger, 26 days from Cape Francois. We are obliged to Capt. Sulger, for the annexed information which he politely communicated:—

Capt. Sulger failed on the 16th Nov. but was brought too and detained until the 17th—on the morning of the 18th he heard the firing of guns, which he ſuppoſed to be a feu de joye occaſioned by the arrival of General Rochambeau, with 400 troops from Port Republican.

The inhabitants of the Cape are in the greateſt conſternation, and every hour apprehenſive of an attack from the brigands, whoſe main force under Clervaux and Chriſtophe, occupy a ſituation about twelve miles from the Cape.—Capt. S. confirms the account of the ſurrender of Gonaives, Petit Guave, and Fort Dauphin; and adds, that St. Marks had capitulated. Nothing but a want of ammunition prevents the brigands from renewing their attack upon the Cape; and we are confident, from our information, that freſh ſcenes of horror will ſoon be enacted.

Gen. Leclerc died on the 3d Nov. after an illneſs of five days—His body was embalmed and ſent to France, (by the Swiftſure, 74 gun ſhip) accompanied by Madam Le Clerc, ſiſter to Bonaparte.

AGRICULTURAL.

[From a Scotch Paper.]

We hear that a Mr. Brodie, at Upperkeith, has for ſome time paſt been paying particular attention to the improvement of his ſtock of ſheep, and has brought them to very great perfection. Indeed he has ſpared neither trouble nor expence in procuring principal ſheep from the firſt rate breeders, and has this year made an addition to his ſtock from the celebrated breeders of Meſſrs. M. and G. Culley, Northumberland, of twenty ewes, at one hundred guineas, and at the ſame time hired from them a ram at ſixty guineas for the ſeaſon. He has alſo in his poſſeſſion another ram, which was let for eighty guineas laſt ſeaſon, beſides ſeveral others of fine ſhape, one of which is grandſon to the famous Leiceſterſhire ram, hired to this country at no leſs a ſum than three hundred guineas a ſeaſon.—Our butcher markets have often ſtood indebted to Mr. Brodie, who was the firſt who introduced the feeding of Houſe Lamb.

APPLE TREES.

Account of the new Inſects ſo prejudicial to Apple Trees, and a method of extirpating them.

Within theſe few years, an inſect before unknown in this country has made its appearance in the Britiſh orchards, which, it means are not generally taken to root it out, will in a ſhort period deſtroy every Apple Tree in the kingdom.

It exhibits upon the trees a kind of white efflorescence like what may be ſometimes ſeen on the ſtones in fields; this ſeems, however, to be only the habitation of the inſects, which exiſt in millions wherever they have once lodged themſelves. On bruiſing the efflorescence like matter between the fingers, a deep red-coloured fluid, like blood, is expreſſed, and which probably is of that nature. Already have ſeveral valuable orchards been much injured by this inſect, which corrodes the Apple Trees in ſuch a manner as an laſt completely to deſtroy their organization, and to kill them without the proprietors, many on them at leaſt, once ſuſpecting the cauſe. We hope what we now ſtate will be the means of contributing to making the fact generally known, and of inducing every perſon intereſted to co-operate in rooting them out. We are happy in having it in our power to give them the receipt of a cheap compoſition diſcovered by William Forſyth, Eſq. his Majeſty's Gardner at Kenſington, which has been found effectually to anſwer the purpoſe; it is as follows:—To one hundred gallons of human urine add one buſhel of lime; add cow-dung to bring it to the conſiſtence of paint;—with this compoſition anoint the trees. The preſent is the proper ſeaſon for applying it. If the white efflorescence like ſubſtance in which the inſects are lodged has made its appearance, it ſhould previouſly be bruſhed off.

[Europ. Mag. Aug. 1802.]

MORALS.

There is a Being who fills all ſpace; whoſe goodneſs hovers round to ſmooth the paths which his wiſdom obliges us to tread, and make every pain an avenue to joy. He who proteſts in the careleſs ſlumbers of luxuriant health, will not abandon the couch of agony, nor withdraw from ſinking nature that hand which had poured unnumbered bleſſings on its hour of eaſe. On the ſolitary gloom his interpoſing preſence will pour ineffable brightneſs, and throng the deſolated intellect with delight, of which an idea was never conveyed by ſenſe, nor a glimpſe allowed to fancy in its moſt aſpiring excurſions. This is not the voice of enthuſiaſm—it is the promiſe of Eternal Truth—of God who deſcended as it, this time to leave new aids to labouring reaſon. To withdraw the veil from mortality, and atone for the deficiencies of obedient weakneſs. Man in ſociety was the great object of his care, and the reſtleſſneſs of the ſocial propenſity his ruling ſolicitude. He taught us to intereſt, for general happineſs, not mutual prey; amidſt the ſweets of intercourſe, to ſhun the depravation of nature, and keep ſenſibility alive to miſery as well as joy. In the effuſions of affection to loſe every ſentiment of aſperity—and glide in a reciprocation of beneficence down the ſtream of contemporary beings. In this great ſcene of benignity, he who ſtedfaſtly ſuſtains his part, will feel a ſecret influence aſſiſting his obedience, and, when called forever from the ways of men, is ſure to meet the Comforter in his paſſage.

FRENCH GUYANA.

One of the late Magaſines contains a long article, entitled,

"Obſervations on the new limits of Frenſh Guyana, and on the beſt means of civilizing the Indians of that Colony—by Jean Baptiſte Leblond, an Inhabitant of Cayenne, Correſpondent of the Agricultural Society of the Department of the Seine."

The Government Agent at Cayenne being informed that the French limits were extended to the river Amazon, undertook a journey to Para, to announce to the Portugueſe Government that the Preliminaries of Peace were ſigned, and to aſcertain the advantages which might be derived from the ceded territory. Citizen Leblond was choſen to accompany him in this expedition, for the purpoſe of collecting ſuch information as could be procured relative to the qualities of the ſoil, the natural hiſtory and productions of the country.

The Arouari, the left bank of which forms the French boundary, is a large beautiful river. It falls into the Amazon by two mouths, more than fifteen leagues to the South of Cape North.—The narroweſt mouth, which is the moſt inward with reſpect to the river, is capable of admitting frigates. The left branch is defended by a Portugueſe fort, ſituated on the little iſland which ſeparates them. The Portugueſe Officer who conducted the French travellers, ſtated, that large veſſels could not go up this branch of the river. Under this pretext he made them anchor their ſhips in the current of the river Amazon, which runs very ſtrong, and where they loſt their anchors and cables.—Well informed Portugueſe, however, who were not intereſted in concealing the truth, aſſured them that merchantmen of all ſizes might go up either arm of the Arouari; and that there was an inland communication between it and the Macapa by other rivers and lakes. The ſame thing, indeed, takes place on the French ſide, with reſpect to the river of Mycacare and others. A Portugueſe Officer, who commanded an expedition undertaken againſt the French Settlements ſome years ago, and who took poſſeſſion of the Oyapoc, under the pretence that its right bank was the Portugueſe boundary, declared, that he had penetrated with his detachment from the Arouari, to the Oyapoc, without even coming in ſight of the ſea, or even quitting their canoes. The ſpace included between theſe two rivers is about 70 or 80 leagues.

The valuable productions of this part of America, which the Portuguese produce from the Indians, are collected at the port of Macapa. They are there put on board veſſels belonging to the country, and tranſported to Para, whence they are finally ſhipped for Liſbon.

Citizen Leblond makes ſome intereſting remarks on the ſtate of the Aboriginal Inhabitants of Guyana. It has been ſuppoſed that an example of a people in every reſpect ſuperior to theſe Indians, was ſufficient to civiliſe them. They have been left in the full poſſeſſion of their liberty, becauſe it was thought that our enjoyments, which they ſeemed to deſire, would create new wants, which would induce them to cultivate the ſoil, or reſort to ſome other ſpecies of profitable induſtry.—They have been ſupplied with cattle, inſtruments of agriculture, &c.—but no advantage has reſulted from theſe gifts.

It has not been perceived by thoſe who have wiſhed to civiliſe the Indians of this region, that there is nothing to induce them to alter their preſent mode of life. Every thing they ſee among us announces a ſucceſſion of care and accumulation of labour, from which they are exempt. If, therefore, the queſtion of a change is put to them, they naturally conclude that it is moſt reaſonable we ſhould embrace their manners. Thus the Indians of Guyana, with the exception of ſome of our vices, are nearly in the ſtate in which we found them.

The labourer in huſbandry in France, is obliged to work all the year round to procure food and cloathing, and a ſhelter from the rigor of winter. He is, therefore, under the neceſſity of employing himſelf uſefully; for, if he is idle, he muſt periſh in hunger and miſery.

The Indian of Guyana, on the contrary, has no need of cloathing: of the hardſhips of winter he can form no idea: wandering along the coaſt of the ocean, on the banks of rivers, or in the midſt of immenſe foreſts, which European cultivation has not reached, the pleaſures of the chace or of fiſhing ſupplies him with a ſufficiency of wholeſome food. The only kind of labour to which he ſubmits, is a ſort of amuſement for a fortnight in the fine ſeaſon. During that period, he employs himſelf in clearing and planting a field of Mango, which, with the banana, the ignama, the ſugarcane, the legumes, and fruits, which grow every where almoſt ſpontaneouſly, furniſh him eaſily and abundantly with that bread which coſts us ſo dear.

The author then urges the neceſſity of ſome means being adopted to induce the Indians to labour. He ſays, the example of their idleneſs is extremely injurious with reſpect to the Negroes. Theſe Africans are like them, without cloathing, live on the ſame food, and have the ſame habits; they are, therefore, naturally inclined to do as little work.

In pointing out the means which Citizen Leblond thinks calculated to produce the change he is deſirous of ſeeing brought about, he deſcribes the meaſures which have been adopted for the ſame purpoſe by the Spaniards. The Indians of Spaniſh America are ſubject to an annual capitation-tax of from five to ſeven piaſtres for each man from 18 to 50. This tribute being rigorouſly levied, they are under the neceſſity of performing ſome ſort of labour. To avoid this tribute, to which the Indians in the country only are liable, many reſort to Lima, Cuſco, Quito, Santa Fe, and other towns. There they become ſervants, or learn ſome profeſſion in common with the man of colour and the whites. The author ſays, he has ſeen among them good ſtatuaries, painters, muſicians, merchants, clerks, &c.; but he obſerves, that the Catholic Religion has been the moſt powerful means of civiliſing them. It has overcome their ancient prejudices, almoſt extinguiſhed their language, and ſo changed their ideas and habits, that they are now more Spaniards than Indians, the only remaining diſtinction being a ſhade of colour. The author, therefore, ſtrongly recommends the converſion of the Indians of Guyana, as an object of importance to the French Government. He thinks the influence of religion will be ſufficient, without reſorting to the forced capitation, which would eſtabliſh an odious diſtinction between thoſe exempt from it, and thoſe on whom it might be impoſed.

.....SONNET.....

CHILDHOOD! I love to watch thy cherub ſmile,
Thy ſpring clothe, and thy lively pace,
Anxious the painted infant to beguile,
With fear, hope, tranſport, pictured in thy face.

And if thou ſeeſt a Parent's ſorrowing eye,
Liſping will aſk to kiſs away the pain,
Let fall a trickling tear, thou know'ſt not why,
Then bid thee joyous to thy ſports again.

Ah! who would check the raptures of thy mind
With ſerious warnings of thy future doom;
Round infant brows a wreath of cypreſs bind,
And tear youth's flow'rets in their earlieſt bloom?

Few are the roſes that life's eve adorn,
Noon blights the bud that open'd with the morn.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, Esquire,

Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper-Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, at any time during the space of three years from the passing thereof, was empowered to issue Commissions, and the Commissioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Cases in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not issued—AND WHEREAS, Commissions were accordingly issued, and the Commissioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon some of the Claims that came before them; but many Persons, during the space of the said three years, neglected to come forward and give the necessary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the said Commissioners to prosecute such Claims, or came unprepared with the necessary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof essential to the establishment of their said Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Person or by Agent, or to take any proper steps for ascertaining their Titles in manner by the said Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithstanding such manifest inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majesty's Subjects, the said Act was, by another Statute called in the Year One Thousand Seve ...dred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but such indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of those for whose benefit the Law was passed.

AND WHEREAS, in the last Session of the Parliament of this Province, the Legislature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may assert their Claims, in all Cases where the Faith of Government stands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not issued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commissions were issued, and the Commissioners duly attended at the respective times when the Assizes were held for the several Districts in this Province, but some of the Parties, who had given notice of asserting Claims, came in the same unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all: To this, if such gross negligence and inattention is persevered in, the salutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in affording to such repeated extentions of so indulgent a Law, will be altogether disappointed and frustrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commissioners named in the several Commissions, issued under the Authority of the last mentioned Statute, will, for the purpose of deciding on all such Claims as aforesaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home District, on the Twenty-Third Day of December next, on the First Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the District of Nagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the District of Newcastle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland District, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the District of Johnstown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eastern District, on the First Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the District of London, at the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Western District, also at the time of the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the said Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Persons interested will give Notice, according to Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the respective Districts—And His Majesty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that such Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commissioners will continue to sit till they shall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Case heard and decided upon; but that after they have so done, such Commissioners, or any other Commissioners, will never more sit again in the execution of the said Commission, and the Parties who shall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have lost all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they so grossly neglected their own Interest, and omitted to avail themselves of that indulgence so repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majesty's Reign.

LONDON, NOVEMBER 28.

KING's SPEECH.

PARLIAMENT OF THE UNITED KINGDOMS.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 23.

THIS DAY His Majesty came to the House of Peers, and being in his Royal Robes, seated on the Throne with the usual solemnity, Sir Francis Molyneux, Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, was sent with a Message from his Majesty to the House of Commons, commanding their attendance in the House of Peers. The Commons being come thither accordingly, his Majesty was pleased to make the following most gracious SPEECH:—

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"It is highly gratifying to me to resort to your advice and assistance after the opportunity which has been recently afforded of collecting the sense of my people.

"The internal prosperity of the country has realized our most sanguine hopes. We have experienced the bounty of Divine Providence in the produce of an abundant harvest; the state of the manufactures, commerce and revenue of my United Kingdoms, is nothing without example; and the loyalty and attachment which are manifested to my person and government afford the strongest indications of the just sense that is entertained of the numerous blessings enjoyed under the protection of our happy Constitution.

"In my intercourse with foreign powers, I have been actuated by a sincere disposition for the maintenance of peace; it is, nevertheless, impossible for me to lose sight of that established and wise system of policy, by which the interests of other states are connected with our own; and I cannot, therefore, be indifferent to any material change in their relative condition and strength. My conduct will be invariably regulated by a due consideration of the actual situation of Europe, and by watchful solicitude for the permanent welfare of my people. You will, I am persuaded, agree with me in thinking, that it is incumbent upon us to adopt those means of security which are best calculated to afford the prospect of preserving to my subjects the blessings of peace.

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons,

"I have ordered the estimates for the ensuing year to be laid before you;—and I rely on your zeal and liberality in providing for the various branches of the public service, which, it is a great satisfaction to me to think, may be fully accomplished without any considerable addition to the burthens of my people.

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I contemplate, with the utmost satisfaction, the great and increasing benefits produced by that important measure which has united the interests and consolidated the resources of Great Britain and Ireland. The improvement and extension of these advantages will be objects of your unremitting care and attention. The trade and commerce of my subjects, so essential to the support of public credit, and of our maritime strength, will, I am persuaded, receive from you every possible encouragement; and you will readily lend your assistance in affording, to mercantile transactions in every part of my United Kingdom, all the facility and accommodation that may be consistent with the security of the public revenue.

"To uphold the honor of the country, to encourage its industry, to improve its resources, and to maintain the true principles of the constitution in church and state, are the great and leading duties which you are called upon to discharge. In the performance of them, you may be assured of my uniform and cordial support; it being my most earnest wish to cultivate a perfect harmony and confidence between me and my Parliament, and to promote to the utmost the welfare of my faithful subjects, whose interests and happiness I shall ever consider as inseparable from my own."

LONDON, NOVEMBER 25.

A private letter from Barcelona, speaks in terms of admiration of the entry of their Catholic Majesties into that city. This journey excited the attention of the kingdom, and attracted a vast concourse of people from every part. The King's suite comprised about 4000 persons, and was preceded by 500 light waggons, drawn by mules, carrying their cloathes, &c. The triumphal car, in which the Royal Pair entered the town, was covered with sheets of gold, sustaining at the top a crown of diamonds of immense value. The car was drawn by Knights richly dressed, and followed by the guards splendidly attired. The procession lasted upwards of two hours, and the enthusiasm of the people on the occasion was effective. On the day following, their Majesties went to hear mass, when the crowd was so great, that several persons were crushed to death.—Eight thousand persons dine daily at the King's table, and the expences are discharged in specie. A frigate has been sent round with several millions of piastres for the purpose.

Paris papers, to the date of November 20, inclusive, have been received. The principal article they furnish is, a proclamation by the Gallo-Helvetic Senate, and a curious morceau it is. It serves to explain the policy of the First Consul as effectually as if it had been intended for the purpose.—The citizens of Helvetia are to be required to furnish, by extraordinary contributions, supplies for the maintenance of those troops whom their errors have made to enter their territories. Thus France contrives to maintain large armies at the expence of her neighbours in Holland, Italy and Switzerland; ready at her call to scourge the rest of Europe, whenever the policy of her government may find it to their interest.

BRITISH HOUSE OF COMMONS.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 23.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer said, he was not ignorant, more than other men, of the aggrandizement of France, not of its increasing power; but it must be something more than the argument which he heard to night that should induce him to think that war now would tend to reduce them.—War was a certain evil. Peace was a certain good; and it behoved us to take our chance for its continuance (a cry of hear! hear!)—Gentlemen had dwelt much upon the reduced state of our military and naval strength; but he desired the people to look to the state of the peace establishment in 1784, just after the American war. There they would find that the extent of the present establishment far exceeded it.—At present there was no reduction of the regular infantry, as was usual, after a definitive treaty, save that diminution of the militia which the existing laws required. In the cavalry some reduction certainly had taken place. In 1786, just after all our differences were amalled with Europe and America, our navy consisted of 115 ships of war, now it consists of 207. At the breaking out of this last war, the peace establishment consisted of 15,000 men, but now it comprised 46,000; at that time we had but 23 fail of the line in commission, now we have 55. As to our finances, we find that the amount of British exports in 1801, was 28 millions, whereas in 1802, it amounted to 27,500,000l. and the revenue for one year had increased upwards of 4,400,000l. Of the floating debt, which at the beginning of the year exceeded 38,000,000l. the two first quarters already reduced is to 23 millions; and he had every reasonable hope that, by the year ending the 5th January, 1803, it would be reduced to 14,400,000l. including 3,000,000l. due the bank, 1,500,000l. exchequer bills, and 400,000l. due on navy bills outstanding for the last year.

Thus stating the situation of this country, he had little to fear from the fate of Europe, but whatever might be the fate of Europe, he desired to know how much better Europe would be balanced by a war than it would be by a peace, or whether the dignity of man in any part of the world could be maintained by blood and ruin. He believed not—yet much as he abhorred war, he desired it might be as well known and understood, that sooner than the nation should lose an atom of her number, he would himself resort to the expedient stated by the Hon. Gentleman (Mr. Wyndham). It was the policy of ministers to maintain and uphold, by every possible means, the sources of the national prosperity. They were watchful and prepared to resist every unjust demand. They were determined to preserve peace, whilst it could be done with due respect to the national dignity. A moral revolution had taken place in Europe, the effects of which they could not regret.—They did not mean to hurry the country into war, but should at the same time regard with a careful and vigilant eye, the interest of the nation.

Several other members delivered their opinions, after which the question on the address was put and carried unanimously. Adjourned.

GIBRALTAR, Nov. 5.

His Majesty's Order in Council having directed a quarantine of 14 days on all vessels, ships, goods and merchandize from the ports of Philadelphia and Baltimore, in America, on account of an epidemic fever raging in those places—His Royal Highness the Governor, has ordered such quarantine to be most strictly observed by this port.—No communication is, therefore, to be had with any vessel under quarantine, excepting through the intervention of the Health Officers; and any ship or boat that communicate with a vessel at sea, liable to such quarantine, the same shall, on entering this port, be put under like quarantine as the vessel with which she had communication, would have been liable to.

From the Bombay Courier, July 24.

We have of late had the satisfaction to announce the extirpation of the principal rebels who infested the southern division of the provinces of Malabar; and we are happy to add another instance of similar success, against a notorious offender and partizan of the Pyche Rajah, Elumbalen Cuyyan, whose devastations were chiefly confined, they fear of the Coorga Rajah's people, to the northern district. It appears that his reported offers of money, and a silver hilted sword to the Chieftain of Coorga, created suspicions, and upon being closely interrogated, he declared the object of his million thither, that when his principal the Pyche Rajah, had been driven from his retreat in Chourly by Colonel Stevenson, he was dispatched with about fifty men in search of treasure which had been treacherously carried off by some of his master's followers—the continuance of the army in that part of the country having prevented his rejoining the Rajah, and bearing also of the execution of several of the principal rebel chiefs, he was induced to take refuge in Coorga; the Chieftain of that Rajahdom, however, with that attachment which has ever conspicuously marked his conduct towards the British government, secured and surrendered the offender to our authority—a party had proceeded from Cannanoor to escort the prisoner from the Ghauts.

Thus a series of unsuccessful events, have at length obtained an entire suppression of that rebellious spirit which has so long pervaded the provinces of Malabar, and the happy consequences which the surrender of the daysmen government has promised to this portion of the Company's petition, are now completely secured. This part both proved, and ever would have proved, the hot-bed of rebellion to the disaffected in Malabar—discouraged and unsupported, they now daily fall the unfortunate victims of their misplaced dependence.

FROM DEMARARA.

DECEMBER 2.

"On the 25th ult. His Excellency Governor Meertens and suite, with 1400 troops, arrived here from Holland, and landed yesterday;—the 11th British West India regiment, commanded by Colonel Hyslop, and the Orange troops, having previously embarked.—This morning a salute of 21 guns were fired, and the Rigs changed. Every thing was conducted with great order and regularity. We shall know in a few days the regulations of trade.—Upon the parade to-day six or seven soldiers dropped down, and were carried off the ground, and I am of opinion, that in six months, more than half of them will be dead. To convince you how much the English have enriched this country since they have had it in possession, I can assure you, from correct statements, that the exports from 1796 to 1802, have been 15,600,000 dollars—number of vessels loaded, 1,100; number of slaves imported, 30,453. I inclose you the new regulations of the Governor."

BOSTON, Jan. 29.

The oldest person living, can scarcely recollect a period when this town has been so frequently alarmed by the cry of fire, as it has within these few weeks. About day-light, yesterday morning, unequivocal evidences of an incendiary attempt, were discovered by Mr. John D. Howard, in a shed, improved by Messrs. Starr and Washburn grocers, on a wharf near Parson's. The smoke was seen issuing thro' the crannies, when, on opening the door, a hole filled with combustible materials, consisting of matches, tar'd canvas, and loose pieces of wood, was discovered on fire; which, in five minutes more, would have been communicated to the shed, and its contents. Mr. Howard, with assistance, immediately extinguished the fire. Not a doubt exists in the mind of the numerous citizens who have visited the spot, of its being the attempt of some diabolical incendiary to set fire to that part of the town.
