News from Europe, of high importance, may be hourly expected. A vessel arrived at New-York, from Liverpool, on the 14th November fell in with a British 74, from whence it learned, that a French squadron, with troops, slipped out of Brest harbour in the night of the 5th November, and that the British fleet, of which the 74 was one, were then in search of them. Their destination was thought to be Ireland. It will be recollected, that she left Brest on the 5th November; they stated, that there was an unusual bustle in the harbour of Brest, and it was expected the French would venture out, as they had a great number of transports ready for sea, and it was believed were taking troops on board.—The Admiral had also learnt, that the French Commander had received positive orders to sail. The probability is, that a squadron has sailed, and the armament of the exhibition of Salvation may speedily be looked for.

CAUTION.

ALL persons are hereby forewarned not to trust my Wife MARY CRAMER, on my Account, as I am determined not to pay any Debts of her contracting—the having acted in an imprudent manner.

Proclamation.

PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of His Majesty's Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General commanding His Majesty's forces in the Province of Upper and Lower Canada.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME,—GREETING:

WHEREAS the Lieutenant Governor in Council has granted Leases of several Tracts of Land, part of which was of the Reserves of the Crown, and other part was of the Lands set apart and reserved for the use of a Protestant Clergy, AND WHEREAS, upon such Leases, certain Rents were reserved to his Majesty and made payable by the Lessees, at days limited and particularly specified in each respective Lease, and the rents upon some of such Leases have already accrued due.

And whereas the Sheriffs of the several Districts of this Province have been appointed by the Lieutenant Governor to receive all Rents due or to accrue due on all such Leases, as well on the Crown as the Clergy Reserves.

And whereas in pursuance of the Commands of the Lieutenant Governor, Shedules have been transmitted to the respective Sheriffs of the different Districts of this Province; in which Shedules are particularly set forth the names and descriptions of the Lessees, together with the Concession, Township, County and District in which such Lands so held under such Leases respectively lie and are situate, with a flatement also of the particular Rent reserved on every such Lease, and the days and times on which such Rent already has accrued or will hereafter become due.

NOW THEREFORE be it known to all whom it may concern, That all and every person and persons, now holding any such Lease or Leases as aforesaid, is and are required to make payment of the Rents, reserved and made payable, either on Leases granted of the Reserves of the Crown, or of the Reserves set apart for the use of a Protestant Clergy, to the different Sheriffs of the respective Districts within which all such Lands severally lay or are situate at the times and periods on which such Rents are reserved, in strict conformity with the covenants and stipulations entered into by the said several Lessees with his Majesty, and that in default of such payments being punctually and regularly made, his Majesty's Attorney General will be instructed forthwith to institute proceedings against every such Lessee for enforcing such payment and for resuming the Lands, in respect of which such default shall be made, into the hands of the Crown, such being the conditions upon which the Lands have been demised, and such conditions having been particularly specified in all the Leases which have been granted.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms at York, this fourteenth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, and in the forty-third year of his Majesty's reign.

P. HUNTER, Lt. Govr.

By his Excellency's Command,
WM. JARVIS, Sec'y.

UPPER-CANADA.

PETER HUNTER, Esquire,
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR OF THE PROVINCE OF UPPER CANADA, AND LIEUTENANT GENERAL COMMANDING HIS MAJESTY'S FORCES IN UPPER AND LOWER CANADA, &c. &c.

WHEREAS great prejudice hath arisen to the Inhabitants of the Town and Township of YORK, and of other adjoining Townships, from no place or day having been set apart or appointed for exposing publicly for Sale, Cattle, Sheep, Poultry, and other Provisions, Goods and Merchandize, brought by Merchants, Farmers, and others, for the necessary supply of the said Town of YORK;

AND WHEREAS great benefit and advantage might be derived to the said Inhabitants and others, by establishing a Weekly Market within that Town, at a place and on a day certain for the purpose aforesaid—KNOW ALL MEN, That I, PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province, taking the Premises into consideration, and willing to promote the interest, advantage and accommodation of the Inhabitants of the Town and Township aforesaid, and of others His Majesty's Subjects within the said Province, by and with the advice of the Executive Council thereof, have ordained, erected established and appointed, and do hereby ordain, erect, establish and appoint, A PUBLIC OPEN MARKET, to be held on SATURDAY, in each and every week during the year, within the said Town of YORK: (The first Market to be held therein on SATURDAY, the FIFTH DAY of NOVEMBER next, after the date of these Presents) on a certain piece or plot of Land within that Town, consisting of five Acres and a half, commencing at the South East angle of the said plot, at the corner of Market-Street and New-Street, then North fifteen degrees West five chains seventeen links, more or less, to King's-Street; then along King-Street South seventy-four degrees West nine chains fifty-one links, more or less, to Church-Street; then South fifteen degrees East six chains thirty-four links, more or less, to Market-Street; then along Market-Street North seventy-four degrees East two chains; then North fifty-four degrees East along Market-Street seven chains fifty links, more or less, to the place of beginning—for the purpose of exposing for Sale, CATTLE, SHEEP, POULTRY, and other Provisions, GOODS and MERCHANDIZE, as aforesaid.

GIVEN under my Hand, and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this twenty-sixth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, and in the forty-fourth year of His Majesty's Reign.

[BY AUTHORITY.]

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE FROM THE 24th MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 6. Pa. 11 12. A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in cases where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier so Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other Lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 9. Page 23. Where a Court Martial, either in the cases of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is impowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by such order of his Majesty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 60. Page 144. Persons harbouring, concealing, or assisting Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of Five Pounds, as in former Acts.

Sec. 60. Page 144. The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

Sec. 66. Page 162. This Section has been altered, so as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War-Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY,

During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec. 16. Page 54. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary course of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42d Geo. IIId. chap. 90 § 12, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to sentence Deserters be-longing to such Force (who are not liable by their original engagements to be sent out of Great Britain) to serve in his Majesty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of service.

TO BE SOLD,

THAT highly cultivated Lot belonging to the Subscriber, containing from TEN to TWELVE THOUSAND FRUIT TREES, of all descriptions, suitable to the climate, and which are now in a highly flourishing condition—together with the BUILDINGS thereon, consisting of a Dwelling House, Kitchen, Stable, and Smoke-House.—A liberal credit will be given for two-thirds of the purchase money.—For further particulars, enquire of the Printer, who lives opposite said Lot. WILLIAM BOND.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

LONDON, Nov. 7.

A foreigner, a native of Switzerland, came to London this morning with an offer to Government of several thousand Band of arms, which he has lately brought with him from the Continent, and are now at Harwich, under safe custody, until the determination of Administration be ascertained on the subject.

We hear that since the appointment, that the English cruizers had made numerous captures in the Turkish seas, and that the Austrian, Russian, Spanish and French ministers at Constantinople, had made strong remonstrances on the subject—to these however the Porte has replied, that the captures had been made at too great a distance from the shore to admit of her taking cognizance of them. Our cruizers have been so successful in that direction, that the port of Malta is crowded with their prizes.

CALCUTTA, August 8.

A French squadron had sailed from Pondicherry. Various were the conjectures as to its views and destination at Calcutta.

The English sloop of war Victor, while cruizing on the Malabar coast, the 28th of May, was struck with a most violent shock of lightning; the explosion was equal to the noise of a 32 pounder, which shivered the main top-gallant mast to atoms, the main top-mast was rent from top to bottom, and received other damage; which compelled her to put into Trincomale to repair.

From PORT-ROYAL, (Jam.) Dec. 10.

His Majesty's ships of war Elephant and Bellerophon, arrived from Cape Francois, bringing information that General Rochambeau, on the 26th ult. entered into terms with General Dessalines the Commander of the forces in St. Domingo, who are in opposition to the French Republic, by which he was allowed ten days to retire from Cape Francois with his troops; at the expiration of that period he embarked with his troops on board the frigates and vessels in the harbour, and on leaving port they all furrendered on the 30th ult. to our men of war cruising off Cape Francois, consisting of two frigates and upwards of 26 merchant ships, with 3000 troops on board, and have since safely arrived at Port-Royal as stated below.

The schooner Hiram, Frott, from Cape Francois, with produce; passengers, who had quitted Cape Francois, arrived on Monday.

On Tuesday the following French vessels, from Cape Francois, mentioned below, arrived at Port-Royal, with General Rochambeau and suite, General Boyer, several of the inhabitants of Cape Francois, and the principal part of the Republican army of St. Domingo.

Frigates Surveillant and Vertue, both of 44 guns, and Discovery ship of war.

Ships Havre de Grace, with 350 French soldiers; Endymion, with 180 do.; Louise Cherie, with 199 do.; Le Jeremie, with 200 do.; Bonne Marie, with 195 do.; Nouvelle Sophie with 300 do.; Auguste, with 200 do.; Tridon, with 320 do.; brig St. Nicholas, with 75 do.; and schooner ———, with 80 sundries.

The French ship Reein Air, with troops; the Dutch ship Diana, with 47 French soldiers; the American ship Two Sisters, with French troops and passengers, and the American brig Adventure, with French passengers; all from Cape Francois, detained by our squadron, arrived on Tuesday, also the Spanish schooner Dolores, from Bluefields to Kingston, with dollars, detained by his Majesty's ship Echo; the French privateer schooner Ceres, of four 4 pounders and one 18 pounder, with 66 men, from St. Domingo, out 20 days and had made no capture, taken by the Revenge privateer brigantine; the cutter Sophia, of London, from the River Cambee, with bees-wax, taken by L'Egyptienne French privateer, and re-captured by the Revolutionaire frigate; French schooner La Conveyez, out 18 of Carnation Roads by the boats of his Majesty's ships Elephant and Bellerophon; American brig Tartar, from the Caymanas to this Island, taken by a French privateer, and re-taken by his Majesty's ship Revolutionaire; and French schooner La Maria, prize to the private armed schooner My Flower, of Jamaica, which vessel has also taken two felucca privateers, and affided his Majesty's ship Tartar in cutting out a fabrica in St. Domingo. The 2d Lieutenant of the Tartar was unfortunately killed on this service.

Thursday morning the following French vessels from Cape Francois arrived at Port Royal, prizes to the Squadron:

Ships Eglisie, with 180 French passengers; Jeffine, with 230 French soldiers; 2nd brig Venice, with 226 ditto.

Thursday evening arrived at Port-Royal, his Majesty's ship Le Pique, with the following vessels from Cape St. Nicholas, that place having surrendered on the 5th inst. to the forces in opposition to the French Republic:

American schooner Active, with 180 French soldiers; sloop Sally Wise, with 198 do.; 2nd French schooner Belle Louise, with 200 ditto.

The French schooner La Mariner, from Cape Francois, with Sundries, a prize to his Majesty's ship Libertine, arrived the same evening.

NEW-YORK, December 13.

From Natchez, Dec. 6.

A detachment of artillery (militia) and two companies of infantry sailed this day for New Orleans. The Governor goes to-morrow, escorted by the Adjutant troop of horse.

From New Orleans, Nov. 27.

In my last I hinted my apprehensions of the probability of some difficulties occurring in the way of transferring this country to the United States. Alchough we find by advices from Washington, that the same has already taken place in the government, I have the satisfaction to inform you, that here the idea is now dissipated. The officers or commissioners appointed for the purpose appear perfectly disposed to accommodate the business. General James Wilkinson, one of the American commissioners, arrived in the city on Sunday last the 25th from Pensacola, on his way to Fort Adams, and after having sailed yesterday in company with the Governor, the Marquis de Casa Calvo, M. L'Aufat, and the American landing boats, got over the night into this port. The greatest attention has been received from the Spanish and French commissioners here to room to doubt but that every thing will be satisfactorily arranged.

The General expects to be back here by the 10th of next month; so that we flatter ourselves with the expectation of being enrolled under the American standard before the end of the year.

November 29.

The French prefect takes possession of this place to-morrow. The thing was so unexpectedly announced, that it has thrown the whole town into agitation. Men who at first were signing complimentary addresses to him, have this day refused to subscribe opposite lists under him. Particulars of this occurrence by the next mail.

Another Letter, Nov. 21.

Possession is to be taken of this place to-morrow by the Prefect, who will in the course of a few days deliver it to our commissioners, who, together with the troops may be looked for in 8 or 10 days at furthest. Every thing seems to indicate that matters will be amicably adjusted here.

Extract of a letter to the Editor of the Kentucky Gazette, dated Frankfort, Dec. 3.

"Mr. Magraw arrived here yesterday from New Orleans, which place he left the 5th Nov. Every thing at that time wore a pacific aspect. Great preparations were making for celebrating the taking possession by the Americans, and the Spanish government was making arrangements for the delivery of the province. He met in the Choctaw nation of Indians, a French officer and the American agent, on their way to New Orleans, to deliver and take possession."

Extract of a letter from New Orleans, dated Nov. 29.

"L'Aufat, the French prefect, has determined to take possession of this country to-morrow in the name of the French republic, and continue it under French government until the arrival of the Americans.

"A measure as preparatory to hasten the delivery to the Americans, or to put it out of the power of the Spaniards to delay the delivery in consequence of any information they might receive."

From the New-York Spectator.

DREADFUL PICTURE.

The annexed article, continuing an extract from the Report of the Prefect of the Police at Paris, for the last Republican year, ending September 23, is taken from a late London paper. The assassinat which have attended to the Tyranny since the Revolution, which has plunged that unhappy country into all the horrors of civil war, and which the French people now enjoy, must be attributed to the unmitigated vices of the present "enlightened government of France."—The whole history of that country, previous to the Revolution, does not develope such depravity in the human character. Even in the midst of the vices and good, but deluded by the miscreants who robbed him of his inheritance and of life, had exhibited many of the evils, which former Kings had heaped upon that country.—But this Ready and lofty-minded virtues, aided by the natural benevolence of his disposition, could not fully correct the vices of his people. The blind and deluded populace sighed for a change in the government. Their confidence was "Down with the King" and "Long live Liberty!" In one unhappy moment, the liberties and happiness of France, were levelled with the earth. The wished-for change took place, and behold the miserable result. A Corsican has usurped the Throne of Capetian Tyranny—four millions of people, are made to submit to the will of an obscure Intriguer.—Imbecility have become common.—Murder is encouraged as an amusement.—Discovery daily take place.—Public Papers are regarded with apathy.—Factions have poisoned their chief springs.—Poverty have increased; and, in London.—Children have become garricides.—Profli- tacy are registered on the public records, and government eats the bread of industry.—Such is the present government of the once flourishing People.—Such is France in that country, no longer exists Lavington man and wife—difrust marks every brow, and difcontent usurps the place of happiness. The ferocious who thirsted for power and for gold, no sooner arrived at the summit of their wishes, than they forgot their fair promises to the people—and instead of the free of slavery, which branches were fed to their flesh devouring fruit, they have planted the poisonous tree of despotism!

"In the course of the year, amounting to the re- part, four hundred and ninety men and five hundred and forty-seven women, have committed suicide at Paris; eighty-one men and fix women, ments, have been murdered, of whom fifty-five men and fifty-two women were foreigners, Frenchmen, or have not been owned. Six hundred and forty-four divorces have taken place.—One hundred and fifty-five bankruptcies have been sustained.—Twelve hundred and ten persons have been condemned to the galleys, to the pillory, or to chains.—Fifteen hundred and twenty-six to hard labour, to longer or shorter imprisonment.—Sixty-four have been marked with hot irons.—Among the criminals mentioned, were seven fathers who had poisoned their children; ten husbands who had murdered their wives; six wives who had poisoned their husbands; and fifteen children who had poisoned or otherwise destroyed their parents.

"During the same period, twelve thousand and seventy-fix public women, or street walkers, have been registered, and have paid for the protection of the police.—Fifteen hundred and fifty-two kept or mistresses have married and known at the Prefecture of Police—and three hundred and eight public brothels have been privileged and licenced by the Police or Prefect at Paris.

"Since the war with England, four hundred and seventy-seven gambling houses, six hundred and twenty have been shut up, and the remainders of the Consular Government from the Republican lotteries are three millions (120,000l. ster.) he left the three last six months than the six months preceding. The accounts adds, that the two latter are occasioned by the absence of the English."—London Paper.

THE CORSICAN USURPER, BONAPARTE, SAYS,

"England cannot fight France Single handed."

We have ever maintained, that one Englishman is as qual to three Frenchmen; and it is a fact clearly established by the histories of both countries:—

READ THE FOLLOWING PROOFS—

At the glorious battle of Cressy,

Won the 26th of August, 1346, Philip the French King, had 120,000 men; King Edward only 30,000 only, more than four to one! In this battle, two Kings, the King of Bohemia, and the King of Majorca, the French King's brother, 15 Princes, 1200 Knights, 150 Gentlemen, and 30,000 French soldiers were slain. It took the English army three whole days to bury the Frenchmen they had killed.

The Battle of Poictiers,

Won the 19th of Sept. 1356, John, the French King, had 80,000 men; Edward, the black Prince, only 8000—odds, ten to one; yet with this handful of men, posted among bushes, hedges, ditches and vineyards, did the black Prince, the Lion of Wales, as an historian calls him, so entirely beat the French army, that he took the French king prisoner, and brought him to England; slew 52 of the greatest men in France, 1500 gentlemen, and above 13,000 common men, and all this without the loss of one man of distinction, on the side of the English, and scarce any soldiers.

Eight days together were spent throughout all England, in giving glory and thanks to God.

At the Battle of Agincourt,

Won the 25th of October, 1518, French and English historians agree, that the French army amounted to near 150,000 men; Henry V. had only 9,000—odds more than fifteen to one.

Though the English army was much weakened by famine and disease; yet their spirits were roused to the highest pitch; they wholly disregarded the superiority of mere numbers, and wished only for the opportunity of signalising their courage, and of proving themselves Englishmen. This was evinced in the answer given by David Gam, a Welch Captain, to the King, who had sent him to take a view of the enemy, and bring an account of their numbers. When questioned, the King asked him the question: he replied—

"There were Enough to be killed,
Enough to be taken prisoners,
And Enough to run away."

Which pleased the King mightily.

The French made wondrous merry in their camp, holding themselves sure of the victory; and to fully confident were they in their numbers (like as they are now) that they even played at dice for the English prisoners before they were taken; and on the morning of the engagement, their insolence and presumption rose to such a height, that they sent a Herald to King Henry, to know "what he proposed to give for his ransom?" What answer our noble King gave for his ransom?" What answer our noble King (such a French historian) were slain, except the Duc d'Orleans, who was carried prisoner to England." Yet after all this vain boasting, the brave English Dukes, 82 Earls, ninety Barons, 1500 Knights, and 29,000 privates, taking also 14,000 prisoners.

The Battle of Cressy.

Of Suffolk, four Knights, nine Esquires, and forty Gendarmerie. Such a noble host was to valour God thanks for so signal a victory, and publicly to acknowledge things that it was probable during which all powerful arm.

But it would be endless to recite all the remarkable battles in which, for the most part the English have gloriously borne their crowns in all quarters of the world, for—almost two hundred years, notwithstanding their own civil feuds.

It is time enough, however, to pass over a few entirely without mentioning them; they were fresh difficulties wherein

The Battle of Flodden.

Where the English had yet scarcely left to bend the French were to fight under the Duke of Alençon, and but of these four times their Peers!

The Battle of Agincourt.

Where the enemy lost 30,000 the English only 800 hundred.

The famous Battle of Blenheim,

Where all Marshal Tallard's army was either killed in the action, drowned in the Danube, or taken prisoners, to the amount of 40,000 Frenchmen: the Duke of Marlborough had only 4485 killed.

At the Battle of Blenheim, the Duke left only 2500, and the French 20,000, with all their artillery.

At Oudenarde,

Also, where the French had every advantage of numbers and ground, our men beat them from every post, and in an action which lasted six hours, we had such an entire advantage, that nothing but the darkness of the night, and the weariness of our men in beating them, saved the whole French army from being ruined. The French left at least 20,000. The Duke of Marlborough 3000.

The Battle of Wandale,

Won by Gen. Webb, 1703, was so signal a victory, it must be a little more upon.

The French army amounted to 24,000, with forty pieces of cannon.

Gen. Webb with 5000 horse and foot had not a cannon—odds in numbers four to one.

General Webb killed his men in coppices, which he lined with. The French cannonaded them with 40 pieces of cannon. Gen Webb not having any, made his men lie flat on the ground. As soon as the cannonade was over, and the French advanced, our soldiers sprung up and fired from the coppices, with such a close fire, and with such fuccefs, that the French soon began to run, notwithstanding their great superiority in numbers; leaving between 6x and seven thousand men killed in the field of battle. Gen. Webb had only about 900 killed and wounded.

The glorious Battle of Minden

Was gained by only six English regiments of infantry, the 12th, 20th, 23d, 25th, 37th and 51st, aided by two Hanoverian battalions. This small body, not more than 3000 men, withstood the repeated charges of the whole French army, of one hundred thousand, with a steadineſs and expertneſs in their manœuvres, never exceeded, nor perhaps never equalled. Odds two to one.

They cut to pieces, or entirely routed all the French troops that opposed them, who seemed (as it were) to vanish before English valour and fauity. The French army lost 8—— men killed and comfortable numbers taken. The six English regiments only, 966 killed, wounded, &c.

At Gricbergen,

When the French were preparing to erect batteries in the front of the Marquis of Granby, they were so vigorously charged, notwithstanding their amazing superiority, that they soon gave way and abandoned the field to the conquerors. The French loft upwards of 4000 men. The loss on our part did not exceed 300. Odds thirteen to one. The batteries which have been fought between the English and French since their revolution, fully prove the truth of the saying, that "one Englishman is equal to three Frenchmen." They are to forth in all our memories, it is unnecessary to enumerate them. There is one consent, however, of so extraordinary, and of so very gallant a description and nature, that it cannot be passed over without some notice; not only from its being an instance of the French having been more humbled by the English of the present day, (could that be possible) than they have ever been at any other period of the history of the wars between the two countries; but as it will stand in proof to posterity, that England, in the nineteenth century, gloriously maintained her great, distinguished, heroic pre-eminence and superiority over France, for valorous conduct in every climate.

France, unhappy, wretched France! by her mad and wicked revolution, by the murder of all her best men and citizens, had fallen so low, that she could not produce one, able to cope with England, by land or sea. She has there, therefore, driven into the hard and cruel situation of suffering the Corsican, in the Isle of Corfica, to trample down all her rights, privileges and liberties; to wanton and sport with the lives and happineſs of her whole people; and at length has been compelled to bend beneath the tyrannous weight of (as it may be truly called) his iron yoke. Yet, this Corsican, too daring for France, exhibited nothing but weakneſs itself, when opposed to Sir Sidney Smith, an English naval officer. This English hero, absolutely put a stop to the infamous march of this boasted, boasting, Corsican, Gallic, Mahometan Bonaparte, to Palestine; who was going upon the avowed profane project, and wicked purpoſe of taking poſſeſſion of Jeruſalem, in order to re-

Town of Acre,

Which was wonderfully fortified, and had it only a few months before Bonaparte laid siege to Acre (a fact which the Corsican would have succeeded if not emboldened), in spite of human calculation it seemed utterly impoſſible to withstand such a force; but the English hero, Sir Sidney Smith, prevented him from yielding, and gallantly undertook to repel Bonaparte, his twelve thousand men, and all his artillery! Our countryman was not to be bought with money, nor corrupted by French philoſophy, which had been the main and principal weapons of which the Corſican Mahometan Bonaparte had poſſeſsed of Holland, subdued Malta, and conquered countries of Italy, &c. &c.—Craft and intrigue could here avail him nothing. Military talents were alone to decide the contest. The Corsican Bonaparte surrounded before the English hero, and sunk to very nothingneſs; Sir Sidney Smith, with no army at all, only a part of the fatigued crews (hard worn in long ſervice) of one line of battle ship and a fragle frigate, aided by a few Maltese men, (the number altogether not 2,000, and of English not one half) so kept at bay for 69 days, so harrassed and so beat this boasting Mahometan Bonaparte, at the head of 12,000 men, (and an immense, well formed train of artillery) in twelve different attacks, (one of which this fatigued Mahometan Bonaparte actually made during Lent, which he had himself forbidden the English how to grant him—under the pious pretence of burying the dead—to cover the Corsican's craft, and so little is his faith to be trusted,) that at length the English hero obliged the Corsican to run away, having killed eight of his generals, eighty-five of his officers, and one half of his chosen army. The Corsican Braggadocio was so terrified and furious, upon being thus beaten and disappointed, that, like the fiftrocious self-tyrant, (to whom the Corsican originally owes his being as the modern Tyrant of France) he vented himself in low abuse against the gallant English hero.

Notwithstanding all these facts, the Corsican ufurper endeavours to encourage his hardening, trembling and terrified at croſſing of the ſea and approaching our shore, by affuring them, that we are verily a nation of TRAITORS AND COWARDS!!!—Though he—confeſſed to Lord Whitworth, his own dreadful apprehenſions, "that both he and his army, army after army, would perish in the attempt, for that it was, he knew, "as hundred to one against them."

Bonaparte has, no doubt, ventured to advance this idea, "of the English being a nation of cowards"—(in ſpite of all the proof he has perſonally received to the contrary)—from an anecdote mentioned in the French hiſtory, to the following purport:—

When our Edward the IIId. croſſed the Channel, in 1340, the French attempted to intercept him with a fleet of four hundred ſail; but the King fell upon the French that they ſunk and deſtroyed two hundred and thirty of their ſhips, with thirty thouſand men, moſt of whom were drowned: for no Ile (ſaith the hiſtorian) is able to number a multitude of the Engliſh arrows, great multitudes of them lighted into the ſea and periſhed; the news of which great loſs, the French king's courtiers, being perplexed how to communicate to him, ſir Jeffer took upon him to do it, and going into his preſence, they at firſt uſed many violent exclamations of—Oh! the curſed Engliſh! Paltry Engliſh! Falſe-hearted Engliſh!—Whereupon the king inquired why ſuch cowards, and what they had done? Why replied the jeſter, for not daring to jump into the ſea, as your Majeſty's brave Frenchmen have done.

May ſuch French bravery be always oppoſed by ſuch Engliſh cowardice!

The accounts which you have juſt read are tranſcribed from moſt authentic hiſtories. The expreſſions which they relate did not appear only at four propitious period, but were repeated almoſt uniformly throughout a ſucceſſion of ages. Reſolved that we are the deſcendants of ſuch men, who, on many occaſions, gloriouſly maintained the honor and independence of our common country; that we are called upon to repel the common enemy, with the advantage of numbers on our ſide; for as French valour will have to contend with millions of armed Engliſhmen fighting to periſhing of whatever is valuable, their wives and children—their properties—their liberties—their lives.

NEW-YORK, December 10.

The United Kingdom, unequalled by the threats and preparations of their implacable foe, proudly contemn their strength, and attune as to the idea of any attempt of invasion, at the same time that they neglect no means of defence, and exhibit the appearance of a nation in arms, are actively engaged in feeling out new channels of commerce, to dispose of their manufactures and colonial productions. While thus purfuing the arts of peace amid the din of war,

France, actuated by a thirst for glory and the hopes of plunder, and led on by Bonaparte, has fworn to humble her hated rival or perish in the attempt. But fpares no expence, and appears to think lightly of any facrifice in the profecution of this defign; eager to injure Britain by every method in her power, she has provided an army of forty thousand men for the fubjugation of

Portugal, the government of which, anxious to avert or protract the impending blow, has entered into negociations, in which

Spain takes an active part. From the present difpofition of her Maiters it appears impoffible that the can remain much longer neutral. Her ancient fpirit gone, her councils under the controul of France, her immenfe treafures arrived, urged by Britain to declare her intentions, and preffed by France to enter into the war, her only hopes of peace reft in the refult of her propofals to Ruffia to act as mediator. She, finding it for her intereft to remain neutral during the present war, has hitherto remained friendly to the belligerent powers. At preftnt, however, a coolnefs exifts between her ambaffador, Count Markoff, and the Court of the Thuilleries. Her once formidable rival,

THE ORACLE.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1804.

The following ADDRESSES were prefented to his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor on Thurfday the 9th and Friday the 10th inftant at twelve o'clock, in anfwer to his Excellency's Speech at the opening of the prefent feffion of the Provincial Parliament.

To his Excellency PETER HUNTER

Efquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General commanding his Majefty's Forces within the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

May it pleafe your Excellency,

WE his Majefty's moft dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Legiflative Council of the Province of Upper Canada in Parliament affembled, beg leave to return your Excellency our thanks for your moft gracious Speech.

We participate in your Excellency's concern that hoftilities have again been engaged between our parent Country and the French Republic, and we fhall duly attend to the framing fuch falutary Regulations as may be calculated to protect the King's Government againft Aliens, and to afford to his Majefty's Subjects in this Province, all the internal fecurity which can be derived from timely and well conceived Legislative precaution.

The dangerous ftate of the Public Records and Evidences of Title to all the Landed Property of this Province, from the want of proper places of fecurity for their depofit, deferves the moft ferious attention; and we will moft chearfully concur in making fuch appropriations as may be neceffary for the erection of proper Buildings, in which reafonable fecurity may be afforded to thefe very valuable Documents; being fully fenfible of the irretrievable calamity and evil which would arife to the King's Subjects, if by fire or otherwife, any ferious accident fhould befal thefe Records.

The improvement of the preftnt public Roads, and the opening of new Roads in particular parts of the Province, to which there is as yet very difficult acceft, is a fubject undoubtedly well entitled to attention; and we concur with your Excellency in opinion, that a reafonable part of the public Revenue cannot be better applied than to facilitate the means of communication between the different parts of the Province, and we will give our moft cordial co-operation in fo ufeful a ftep to the increafe of our Commerce, and the advancement of the general profperity of the Province.

We truft that the refult of our deliberations upon thefe and all other topics which may form the fubject matter of our councils and difcuffions, will bear ample teftimony of the unfhaken loyalty and attachment of this Province to his Majefty and his Government, and will be attended with the moft happy and falutary confequences to thefe parts of his Majefty's Dominions, which though far removed from him, we are fenfible are, and have ever been conftant objects of his paternal care and protection.

By Order of the Houfe, (Signed) HENRY ALLCOCK, Speaker.

Legiflative Council Chamber, York, the 3d day of Feb. 1804.

To which his Excellency was pleafed to return the following anfwer:

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legiflative Council,

I THANK you for this dutiful and loyal Addrefs: nuft it is very gratifying to me to receive your aflurances of concurrence in meafures calculated to promote the Happinefs and Profperity of thefe parts of his Majefty's Dominions, and I doubt not but the moft falutary conftquences will be produced by your labors and exertions, and that the fame will evince your attachment to his Majefty and his Government and your anxious anxiety for the welfare of this Province.

To his Excellency PETER HUNTER,

Efquire, Lieutenant Governor of his Majefty's Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding his Majefty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

May it pleafe your Excellency,

WE his Majefty's moft dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Reprefentatives of Upper Canada, in Parliament aflembled, beg leave to return you the thanks of this Houfe for your Excellency's Speech.

We regret that an implacable and an ambitious enemy, has compelled our moft Gracious Sovereign to a renewal of hoftilities, in defence of the fafety of his People and the dignity of his Government; but, relying upon the well known loyalty and valor of his Subjects, and the ftrength of the United Empire, we hope with confidence for a happy termination of the war.

Fully convinced of the good effects to be derived from timely precautions, againft the infidious defigns of hoftile Aliens, and of the indifpenfable neceffity of aiding, by every means in our power, to give energy to his Majefty's Government in this Province, we will ufe no time in taking thefe important objects into our confideration; and will chearfully give our aid, to make fuch Laws as may beft protect the perfons and property of its Inhabitants.

By receiving from your Excellency an account of the Receipt of the Provincial Revenues of the Crown, we fhall be able to deliberate upon fuch appropriations, as may be deemed moft beneficial for the Community.

The importance of providing fafe places of depofit for the Public Records and Evidences of Title to the Landed Property in this Colony, is fully impreffed upon our minds—We are fenfible of the very great injury which would probably enfue from a fire breaking out among the preffes, Archives, and we will readily co-operate with the other branches of the Legiflature, in making fuch provifions as may guard againft every calamity.

We fhall willingly lend every poffible aflifance to facilitate an Intercourfe in this Colony, by meliorating the Roads in the different parts of it.

In the difcharge of our Legiflative duties, we will obferve proper diligence—and we pledge ourfelves, that the fame loyalty and attachment to his Majefty and to his Government which have ever animated us, fhall ftill pervade all our actions,

DONALD M'LEAN, Clk. Aflembly.

Commons Houfe of Aflembly, Thurfday, 9th February, 1804.

To which his Excellency was pleafed to make the following reply:

Gentlemen of the Houfe of Aflembly,

THIS dutiful and loyal Addrefs affords me great fatisfaction, and your aflurances of co-operation in the enacting of Laws calculated to give energy to his Majefty's Government in this Colony are particularly gratifying to me—I confidently rely that your affiduous attention to the various important objects which may occupy your Councils will tend to advance the Profperity and Happinefs of his Majefty's fubjects in this Province, and the teftimony of your zealous and dutiful attachment to his Majefty and our happy Conftitution.

[BY AUTHORITY.]

MUTINY ACT,

AS FORCE FROM THE 24th MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4, Pa. 12-13. A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deſerters to ſerve abroad as Soldiers (a ſervice to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary courſe of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in caſes where Death may be thought too great a puniſhment, to ſentence a Deſerter to Tranſportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the ſentence, a Soldier ſo Tranſported ſhall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majeſty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Tranſported, or without ſome other Lawful cauſe, every ſuch perſon being convicted thereof, in the ordinary courſe of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will ſuffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 5, Page 13. Where a Court Martial, either in the caſes of Deſertion, or of any other Capital Offence, ſhall have given a ſentence of Death, his Majeſty is impowered, if he ſhall think fit, to order that puniſhment to be changed for Tranſportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as his Majeſty ſhall ſeem meet; and the puniſhment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by ſuch order of his Majeſty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Perſons harbouring, concealing, or ſtifling Deſerters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for every offence, inſtead of Five Pounds as formerly.

Sec. 16, Page 11. The right of the Military to apprehend Deſerters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the aſſiſtance of a Civil Officer, is now eſtabliſhed.

This Section has been altered, ſo as to put it out of doubt, that Goalers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final deſtination, are obliged to receive Deſerters into their cuſtody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deſerters are conveyed by virtue of a Magiſtrate's Warrant, or under Military Eſcort, by an Order from the War-Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY,

During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec. 16, Page 14. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary courſe of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 44th Geo. IIId. chap. 90 § 12, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to ſentence Deſerters belonging to thoſe Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be ſent out of Great Britain) to ſerve in his Majeſty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of ſervice.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

LONDON, October 8.

The London Gazette of laſt Saturday contains the promotion of all Lieutenant-Generals in the Britiſh army, to the end of the year 1798, to be Generals; Major-Generals to the end of 1796, to be Lieutenant Generals; Colonels to the end of 1796, to be Lieutenant Generals; Colonels to the end of 1795, to be Colonels; Majors to the end of 1798, to be Lieutenant Colonels; and Captains to the end of 1794, to be Majors.

The army of reſerve is ſaid to be now nearly completed: of ſeveral thouſands which have been ſent to Chatham, all, excepting about one hundred, entered the regular ſervice in the courſe of eight days: of thoſe which were ſent to Plymouth, five hundred have been returned to the counties whence they came, as unfit for the ſervice.

October 20.

The arrangements for the defence of the United Kingdom, are complete. The whole is divided into fifteen diſtricts, called, the London Diſtricts, Southern, Home, South-Inland, South Weſt, Eaſtern, Weſtern, Severn, North Inland, Northern, York, North Weſt, Scotland, Ireland, Jerſey, and Guernſey—All theſe Diſtricts are commanded by General Officers. The Duke of YORK is Commander in Chief. In the Diſtricts the following General Officers have commands, &c.—GENERALS, Earl of Harrington, Dundas, and N. Balfour—LIEUTENANT-GENERALS, Pulteney, Earl of Chatham, Lord Huchinſon, Gwian, Hewitt, Manners, Loftus, Simcoe, England, Duke of Cumberland, Gardner, Dalrymple, Prince William of Gloucester, Vyſe, Lord Cathcart, Tarleton, A. Campbell, and Gordon—MAJOR GENERALS, Burrard, Leſlie, Lennox, Mackenzie, Stewart, Churchill, Moore, Wynyard, Thornhill, Forbes, Cartwright, Whitbeck, Lord Somerſet, Coote, Fitzroy, Beckwith, Luſſlow, Earl of Cavan, Miller, Finch, Hope, Pigot, Garth, Cowell, Grafenour, Calcraft, Brabazon, Morriſon, Beaſon, Burton, Doyle, Erſkine, Marquis of Huntley, Wemyſs, Macdonald, French, Aſgill, Roſs, Campbell, Archer, Barton, Wiedhope, Dunne, Mowbray, Chalmers, and Dorſet—and BRIGADIER GENERALS, Maitland, Campbell, Paiet, Croſe, Affleck, Hope, and Drummond.

In the Iſland of Jerſey, we have 3,199 regulars, beſides militia.

October 26.

Two letters have appeared in the Courier de Londres of laſt night, upon which ſeems to be grounded a report circulated yeſterday morning, that Bonaparte had offered the command of the expedition againſt England to General Moreau, after acknowledging a letter written to him by the late Firſt Conſul to that purport, by General Duroc—General Moreau obſerves in reply, that his opinion reſpecting the projected invaſion was already known; that he had unfortunately declared himſelf againſt ſuch expeditions, eſpecially ſince he had ſeen them swallow up the flower of the French armies, and the remains of a ſhattered navy; beſides, enterprizes of ſuch doubtful iſſue muſt prove fatal to the Government that undertakes them, and to the nation by which they are approved. Such an attempt againſt England, under the preſent circumſtances of the two countries, muſt humble the influence of France on the Continent, and completely ruin her as a maritime power. Gen. Moureau then adduces a variety of other arguments to ſhew the impolicy and futility of the attempt.—General Duroc, in anſwer, informs General Moreau that the Firſt Conſul has ordered him to return the above letter, not willing to keep it as a teſtimony of ſentiments with which he cannot bring himſelf to believe that General Moreau is actuated. He moreover acquaints General Moreau with the orders of the Firſt Conſul, to hold himſelf in readineſs to have a private interview with the Firſt Conſul on the day of the next parade.

November 3.

A conſiderable degree of concern exiſts in the public mind on the eſcape of the Dogger Trouin from our fleet in the Weſt-Indies. Beſides the Regnant, who engaged her, it is believed that two other ſhips of war were in ſight. The ſingle ſhip had likewiſe the good fortune to eſcape from two of our ſhips of the line on the coaſt of Spain. This circumſtance is certainly ſingular, and has ſeldom occurred in our naval hiſtory. Yet we doubt not that ſatisfactory reaſons will be given for the eſcape of theſe ſhips.

Some time ago, we informed our readers, that the number of French ſhips of the line in the outer road at Breſt was ſeven. On Thurſday an account reached us from a moſt reſpectable quarter, which mentioned two. We have reaſon to believe, however, that there was ſome miſtake in the latter ſtatement; if we may credit letters from Breſt, the whole twenty ſeems to have been counted in the account of Wednesday. Thoſe letters, as well as others which accompanied them, were brought by a gentleman who came from France in an open boat. They mention ſome circumſtances which partly ſerve to explain the diſagreement in the accounts reſpecting the number of ſhips at Breſt. The ſhips of the line are generally in the inner harbour, and the number in the outer is often changing. All accounts, however, ſeem to agree that Breſt is the quarter whence we may expect the chief and firſt effort of the enemy, though it is certainly not impoſſible that a blow may be ſtruck from ſome of the ports up the channel.

We may certainly ſoon look for ſome important intelligence. Indeed we have heard from a reſpectable quarter, that the Firſt Conſul has fixed on the 20th of this month to ſay his laſt word. The circumſtance gives a kind of probability to this. It is well known that the Firſt Conſul is extremely ſuperſtitious in the devotion to the fickle goddeſs, and ſeveral particular days on which he has been remarkably lucky. On the 19th of November that he overturned the French Directory, and laid the foundation of his uſurped power.

BONAPARTE's VISION.

ST. CLOUD,

Four o'clock in the morning, Sept. 12.

MY DEAR FRIEND,

I am going to addreſs you on the ſubject of a dream from which, if I may uſe the expreſſion, I am juſt rewaked; a dream which will ſtand in the firſt rank to ſeek repoſe again, and which has left the traces of oppreſſion on my ſpirits.

It is not you whom I need inform, who know completely I have always believed in omens, ſigns, and the doctrine of interpretation. It is a feeling implanted in me before being ſo well acquainted with my opinions on this ſubject, you will not much wonder that what the world conſiders as a mere vision, ſhould make ſuch an impreſſion on my mind.

It is in vain I endeavour to reaſon compoſure; I tremble while I write, and my very ſoul is harrowed up by the recollection of this awful night, but hear, my friend, and judge.

I devoted much time laſt night to the conſideration of our expedition againſt England, and brought with ideas of conqueſt and glory, retired to bed. At firſt I lay a long while in a ſtate of reflection, from a variety of involuntary reflections, which the remembrance of paſt occurrences occaſioned to preſent to my mind; at length, however, I fell aſleep, and imagined myſelf to be in the interior of the ſeveral departments of the Republic, and in the midſt of the acclamations which appeared to be ſuch as accompanied my ſucceſſes. I then recollected the 6th book of Virgil's Æneid. Here I ſaw myſelf at the head of military orders in a ſtate of joy, according to their conduct on earth; with the illuſtrious dead I ſincerely ſympathiſed, and the latter, I ſaw, ſeemed. I imagined myſelf to be ſeeking for the river Lethe; with a draught of which from its ſtream I proceeded to my active life, to obliterate all thoughts, and a conſequent degree of happineſs for the future. In my way I paſſed ſuch a grove as that where Dido was ſeen by Æneas, in his viſit to the lower regions; here I ſaw the ſoul of Louis XVI. by the ſide of Antoinette, at the ſame time, regarding me with an look of reproach, bemoaned with mild pity. The ſight of the King, by whoſe bounty I was educated, and on whole throne I had aſſiſted to place his brother, ſtruck me with a ſenſation however, I did not lack regret, or I ſhould ſoon be left all with inſtant remembrance of the French drought. I paſſed by many more ſpectres, I came into the field where thoſe heroes, who had fought for their country gloriouſly returned; there I ſaw thoſe of all nations mixing in the greateſt diſtinction, and forming themſelves into thoſe warlike exerciſes which had been their pleaſure while living. I was obſerving them for ſome time, when I ſaw a numerous body of Perſians advancing towards me; anger and indignation fired their countenances, and their object appeared to be to drive me from the plain. Judge my feelings, when I recognized them to be thoſe brave Frenchmen whom I embraced at Jaffa and Acre, as ſtrait as they came to me to be an inſeparable ſubſtance like themſelves, were going to drive me from the field; but on a nearer approach, finding me to be ſtill mortal, they rejoiced, ſurrounded me in the moſt affectionate manner, and this place I walked to the ſide of a beautiful river, which I fancied to be the object of my purſuit. I halted on the bank with joy and exultation, and having ſtood a ſhort with the waters before my eyes, was ready to croſs it to my joy; when the form of murdered Coſſiſſini ſtood before me, horror took poſſeſſion of my ſoul and the water left from my hands: after a few moments pauſe he thus addreſſed me:—" Murderer, for ſuch I too well know thee art, and doſt thou think to bury crimes like theſe in deep oblivion? Vain deluſion! but hear from me thy fate—during the ſhort remainder of thy miſerable life thy ſoul ſhall be as continually perſecuted by my mind, as for ages to come, they will be to an executing poſterity; thy career is nearly run, liberty and Republics will ſoon be reſtored to France, and the other countries of Europe, where thou haſt ſpread much miſery and deſolation, will all be free; this and thy downfall will be effected by the manner of a virtuous people, over whom thou haſt by hope to triumph." With theſe words he quickly diſappeared, my ſtrength forſook me, I ſhrieked, and ſtarting from my ſleep, found myſelf in a cold perſpiration.

Accounts from Cattaro ſtate, that the following events had thrown the Court of Peking into great diſorder. A favourite of the Emperor dying, the circumſtances of his death were not publiſhed, on account of the political diſturbances, till the day previous to her interment. In the mean time, according to the preſumption of the Aſtrologers, lightning fell upon the place, and conſumed the coffin and corpſe of the favourite. Half the Audience, the flames extending to the Harem, deſtroyed it, with nearly 200 adjacent houſes; nor were they extinguiſhed till the following day at the hour of the ſecond prayer.—The day of this calamity being a feſtival, little attention was paid to it, but it excited increaſed conſternation from the circumſtance of the Emperor becoming on the morning following ſeriouſly indiſpoſed through grief and anxiety. The Princeſs was interred in ſecret, in a grotto in a mountain, the uſual cemetry of the ladies of the Royal Harem, and the horſes which belonged to her were turned out looſe to range on the mountain, until her ſon, according to cuſtom, becomes of age to claim them. A number of women and eunuchs have received five years wages for attending to live in the tomb of the deceaſed they are to be buried there alſo. The Emperor, at the date of the accounts was ſaid to remain ſeriouſly indiſpoſed.

VIENNA, October 1.

All appearances here indicate a continuation of peace. The Emperor's proclamation of neutrality in every way received with ſatisfaction. The fears for the ſafety of the Venetian territory have ſubſided. Bonaparte having aſſured our Court that no French corps ſhall be ſtationed near Mantua or Verona.

Two Generals, Crump and Roſs, are alſo wounded; the former with a ball in the thigh, the latter with a ball above the ancle.

The Princeſs Auguſta, your Lordſhip will recollect is one of the ſmalleſt cutters under your Lordſhip's command, being about 70 tons.

The ſchooner of Joſeph Thomas, the Maſter, and the crew of this little veſſel, behaved moſt valiant on board their Cutter, and beating off two veſſels of much ſuperior force, merits more than mere thanks; my pen is unable to expreſs.

SIR,—Saturday, September 24th, three boats full manned P. M. I landed at Dover, not being able to get into the Downs this tide. After delivering orders from Lord Keith to his Majeſty's ſhips cruiſing off Helvoetſluys, Texel, and the entrance of the Maeſe, on Tueſday, the 20th inſt. at five P.M. Texel bearing S. W. diſtant 15 leagues, ſaw two ſchooners in the S. W. bearing down towards us, under English colours; got all ready for action, ſuſpecting them to be enemies. At half paſt 6 P.M. they hailed us, and their Captain replied, and hailed Dunglaſs (one being within hail, about what they were) Lieutenant Scott, enſigned, Princeſs Auguſta; the largeſt, which hailed, failing to windward, ſhot her a broadſide, which killed our gunner and boatſwain, and wounded a midſhipman ſlightly in the ſhoulder, who fired the next moment at forty-five minutes paſt nine, A. M. with his officer. We then returned our two broadſides as the largeſt, who mounted twelve guns, and two ſwivels, during the action endeavoured to board us, ſeveral times to windward, which was the larboard ſide. The ſmalleſt, which mounted 8 guns, and had on board 50 men, operable to the number of 70 on deck, which came up under our lee, and gave us his broadſide, which deſtroyed to board us; but after an hour's engagement, their gunner, with the largeſt part of the fire over our decks, ſeveral times by the aſſiſtance of the mate, and exerting myſelf as much as I could there, and but our rigging and hull being much damaged, and having both men killed and three wounded, one of our ſmall number), we were not able to renew the action.

"The whole of yeſterday was employed in all ranks in giving and receiving particulars of the ſcarcity of intelligence brought from France, by various channels. The grand expedition is the pivot upon which every thing turns at preſent.

"Bonaparte, ſurrounded by himſelf ſurrounded by a body guard of 20,000 choſen troops, and from the manner in which we are at preſent living, is perfectly ſafe; and ſhould he not be ſo, a number of reſpectable Commiſſaries, at leaſt 3 of them; three veſſels are contracted about 70 feet long, are to be ſhortly rigged with oars, and carry each a twenty-four pounder in the head of them, with ſwivels, and are manned with 30 artillery men.

"While 25 miles of Breſt, encampments are formed, where every article of proviſion is now reſerved in no leſs than 170,000 troops, who are ſtarved by their officers with the proſpect theme of the plunder of England.

"Twenty two Ships of the line, before the grand parade, and 6 more ſhips of war arrived to be in the line before Breſt on Friday laſt.

PHILADELPHIA, December 27.

A Liverpool paper of November 6, ſays, the Hamburgh mails have reached this country ſince our 15th publication, containing French dates to the 31ſt October. They do not contain any thing very material information as to the ſtate of affairs on the Continent, and nothing new as to the operations of the armament preparing for this country. Indeed when novelty can be expected, when we may daily expect the orders from Lord Keith to his Majeſty's ſhips, and the apparatus of invaſion, is completely concluded yet.

On the 5th November, it was announced in London, that Bonaparte was on the coaſt of France ſuperintending the embarkation of his army.—They remained conſiderable uncertainty. On the 7th, however, it appeared that he was ſtill at Paris, and inſtead of ſhipping Soldiers, was receiving loyal addreſſes.

It was alſo reported on the 8th November, that the Emperor of Ruſſia had ſent a meſſage to diſſuade Bonaparte from the invaſion of England at the inſtance of Bonaparte.

The Britiſh Parliament will further prorogued until the 22d of November.

A fleet of veſſels, conſiſting of thirty-ſix ſhips of the line, were ſeen on the 25th November, in lat. 23 long. 63, the whole appearing to conſiſt of ſail.—Circumſtances make it probable, that theſe veſſels may be thoſe fleet reported to have ſailed from Breſt, on the 8th of November, of which an account was received by the Britiſh frigate Thunderer. If this be the caſe, it is preſumed, they are deſtined againſt ſome of the Britiſh Weſt-India Iſlands.

POETRY.

THE BLESSINGS OF RELIGION.

WRITTEN ABOUT A CENTURY AGO.

CROWNES have their compasse, length of days their date,
Triumphes their tombs, felicitie her fate;
Of more than earth, can earth make souls partaker?
RELIGION MAKES MEN MUCH MORE LIKE THE MAKER.

The inhabitants of a populous town in England have stuck in all the public places to assist the following, printed on a board, in large letters:

"TO THE LADIES.—Genteel women who amuse their idle hours in two rings, frequently throw scraps of linen and cotton of various kinds into the fire. It is requested much humbler, that every lady will reserve these trifles, and direct their maid servants to sell them, because the so doing will prevent 60,000l. being annually exported to foreign countries, for the importation of old rags, to make paper, and which, in consequence, will become cheaper."

ANECDOTES.

PITT, THE FIRST EARL OF CHATHAM.

IT was preparatory to one of the secret expeditions during the war of 1757, that the Minister had given orders to the different presiding officers in the navy, military, and ordnance departments, to prepare a large body of forces, a certain number of ships, and a proportionable quantity of transports, stores, &c. and to have them all in readiness by a given day. To these orders he received an express from each of the officers, declaring the total impossibility of a compliance. Notwithstanding it was a very late hour, he sent immediately for his Secretary, and, after speaking in terms of the highest indignation at the treatment he met with from the ignorance or negligence of his Majesty's servants, he gave him the following commands:—"I desire, Mr. Wood, that you will immediately go to Lord Anson: you need not look for him at the Admiralty; for he is not to be found there: you must pursue him to the Gaming-house, and tell him from me, that if he does not obey the orders of Government, which he has received at my hands, I will assuredly impeach him. Proceed from him to Lord Ligonier, and, though he may be bolstered with harlots, undrawn his curtains, and repeat the same message. Then take your course to Sir Charles Brodrick, and assure him, that, if his Majesty's orders are not obeyed, these shall be the last he will receive from me."—In consequence of this command, Mr. Wood proceeded to White's, and told his errand to the First Lord of the Admiralty, who insisted that the Secretary of State was out of his senses, and that it was impossible to comply with his wishes. "However, added he, as mad-men must be answered, tell him I will do my utmost to satisfy him."—From thence he went to the Commander in Chief of the forces, and delivered the same message. He also told it was an impracticable business; "and the Secretary knows it, added the old Lord, nevertheless he is in the right to make us do what we can: and what it is possible to do, inform him, shall be done."—The Surveyor-General of the Ordnance was next informed of Mr. Pitt's resolution, and after some little conversation, he began to think the orders might be executed within the time limited. In short, the army, navy, ordnance, military stores, &c. the spirit of impossibilities, were ready on the day appointed.

SON NOT OF A JEW.

About thirty years ago, some Jews were executed at Tyburn, for robbing the house of Mr. Hutchings, at Chelsea, and shooting her man servant. Immediately after it became customary with some of the lower order, whenever they met a Jew in the streets, to insult him, by hallooing after him—"Hutchings, Chelsea, Chelsea, &c." which being one day repeated to a Jew, an old cloaths man, he turned round and jocosely answered—"It'll very hard you won't let our people have a little best of de gallows, but vant to keepe all to yourselves."

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER, Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of GREAT BRITAIN and IRELAND, King, Defender of the Faith, &c.

To all our Loving Subjects in our Province of Upper Canada—

GREETING:

KNOW Ye, that We taking into our serious Consideration, the just and necessary War in which we are engaged, and putting our Trust in Almighty God, that He will graciously bless our Arms, have resolved, and do, by and with the Advice of the Executive Council of our said Province, hereby command, that a Day of PUBLIC FASTING and HUMILIATION be observed throughout that Province, on Friday, the Sixteenth Day of March next; that so both We and our People may humble ourselves before God, to obtain Pardon of our Sins, to pray that He may avert those heavy Judgements which we deserve, and to implore his Blessing and Assistance on our Arms, for the restoration of Peace and Prosperity to Us and our Dominions.

AND We do strictly charge and command, that the said Public Fast be reverently and devoutly observed by all our loving Subjects in our said Province of UPPER CANADA, upon pain of such Punishment as We may justly inflict on all such as contemn and neglect the performance of so religious and necessary a Duty.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed:—WITNESS our trusty and well-beloved PETER HUNTER, Esquire, our Lieutenant Governor of our said Province of UPPER CANADA, and Lieutenant General Commanding our Forces in UPPER and LOWER CANADA, at YORK, this Fifteenth Day of February, in the Year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Four, and in the Forty-Fourth Year of our Reign.

WM. JARVIS, SEC'RY.

Proclamation.

PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of His Majesty's Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General commanding His Majesty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME,—GREETING:

WHEREAS the Lieutenant Governor in Council has granted Leases of several Tracts of Land, part of which was of the Reserves of the Crown, and other part was of the Lands set apart and reserved for the use of a Protestant Clergy, AND WHEREAS, upon such Leases, certain Rents were reserved to his Majesty and made payable by the Lessees, at days limited and particularly specified in each respective Lease, and the rents upon some of such Leases have already accrued due.

And whereas the Sheriffs of the several Districts of this Province have been appointed by the Lieutenant Governor to receive all Rents due or to accrue due on all such Leases, as well on the Crown as the Clergy Reserves.

And whereas in pursuance of the Commands of the Lieutenant Governor, Shedules have been transmitted to the respective Sheriffs of the different Districts of this Province; in which Shedules are particularly set forth the names and descriptions of the Lessees, together with the Concession, Township, County and District in which such Lands so held under such Leases respectively lie and are situate, with a statement also of the particular Rent reserved on every such Lease, and the days and times on which such Rent already has accrued or will hereafter become due.

NOW THEREFORE be it known to all whom it may concern, That all and every person and persons, now holding any such Lease or Leases as aforesaid, is and are required to make payment of the Rents, reserved and made payable, either on Leases granted of the Reserves of the Crown, or of the Reserves set apart for the use of a Protestant Clergy, to the different Sheriffs of the respective Districts within which all such Lands severally lay or are situate at the times and periods on which such Rents are reserved, in strict conformity with the covenants and stipulations entered into by the said several Leases with his Majesty, and that in default of such payments being punctually and regularly made, his Majesty's Attorney General will be instructed forthwith to institute proceedings against every such Lessee for enforcing such payment and for resuming the Lands, in respect of which such default shall be made, into the hands of the Crown, such being the conditions upon which the Lands have been demised, and such conditions having been particularly specified in all the Leases which have been granted.

GIVEN, under my Hand and Seal at Arms at York, this fourteenth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, and in the forty-third year of his Majesty's reign.

By his Excellency's Command,
WM. JARVIS, Sec'y.

UPPER CANADA.

PETER HUNTER, Esquire,

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR OF THE PROVINCE OF UPPER CANADA, AND LIEUTENANT GENERAL COMMANDING HIS MAJESTY'S FORCES IN UPPER AND LOWER CANADA, &c. &c.

WHEREAS great prejudice hath arisen to the Inhabitants of the Town and Township of YORK, and of other adjoining Townships, from no place or day having been set apart or appointed for exposing publicly for Sale, Cattle, Sheep, Poultry, and other Provisions, Goods and Merchandize, brought by Merchants, Farmers, and others, for the necessary supply of the said Town of YORK;

AND WHEREAS great benefit and advantage might be derived to the said Inhabitants and others, by establishing a Weekly Market within that Town, at a place and on a day certain for the purpose aforesaid—KNOW ALL MEN, That I, PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province, taking the Premises into consideration, and willing to promote the interest, advantage and accommodation of the Inhabitants of the Town and Township aforesaid, and of others His Majesty's Subjects within the said Province, by and with the advice of the Executive Council thereof, have ordained, erected, established and appointed, and do hereby ordain, erect, establish and appoint, A PUBLIC

OPEN MARKET, to be held on SATURDAY, in each and every week during the year, within the said Town of YORK: (The first Market to be held therein on SATURDAY, the FIFTH DAY of NOVEMBER next, after the date of these Presents) on a certain piece or plot of Land within that Town, consisting of five Acres and a half, commencing at the South-East angle of the said plot, at the corner of Market-street and New street; then North sixteen degrees West five chains seventeen links, more or less, to King's-street; then along King-street South seventy-four degrees West nine chains fifty-one links, more or less, to Church-street; then South sixteen degrees East six chains, thirty-four links, more or less, to Market-street; then along Market-street North seventy-four degrees East two chains; then North fifty-four degrees East along Market-street seven chains fifty links, more or less, to the place of beginning—for the purpose of exposing for Sale, CATTLE, SHEEP, POULTRY, and other Provisions, GOODS and MERCHANDIZE, as aforesaid.

GIVEN under my Hand, and Seal at Arms, at York, this twenty-fifth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, and in the forty fourth year of His Majesty's Reign.

P. HUNTER, Lieut. Gov'r.

By His Excellency's Command,

[BY AUTHORITY.]

MUTINY ACT,

AS FORCED FROM THE 24th MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pa. 12 & 32. A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve abroad as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in cases where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier so Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other Lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 5. Page 13. Where a Court Martial, either in the cases of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is impowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment of the term limited by such order of his Majesty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 60. Page 41. Persons harbouring, concealing, or aiding Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of Five Pounds as formerly.

The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

Sec. 60. Page 41. This Section has been altered, so as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War-Office.

Sec. 18. Page 24. FORFEITURE OF PAY, During Confinement for Criminal Offence.

The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary course of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42nd Geo. IIId. chap. 90, 12, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to sentence Deserters belonging to those Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be sent out of Great Britain) to serve in his Majesty's Regiments without limitation as to the period or place of service.

LONDON, November 14.

A gentleman arrived at Dover on Saturday night in a steered yacht from Calais, states, that previous to his departure, orders had been issued for all Irish prisoners brought into the ports of the Republic, to be immediately set at liberty, and every inducement held out to them to enter the service.

The Duke de Berri, son of Monsieur, next brother to the King of France, died suddenly on Friday afternoon, at his father's house in Baker-street. While he was engaged in the exercise of the small sword, with his fencing-master, he complained of sudden illness, and expired almost instantly.

It is reported, that the French government have ordered several thousand red uniforms to be sent to the troops destined for the invasion of this country, to occasion confusion if a landing should be effected. It is not credited by us on our guard against this stratagem, should it be attempted.

November 15.

Two of the outward bound Portugal fleet, namely, the Forty-Second, from Liverpool for Lisbon; and the Britannia, from Hull to Oporto, are missing, and supposed to be captured.

The last advices from the French coast, state, that several of the tents in the neighbourhood of Boulogne, were blown down, during the last heavy gale.

The bets at Paris are thirty to one, that Bonaparte will not embark. He will, however, at least, sit at the cards, and his departure was said to have been fixed for the 9th of the present month.

The total amount of the prizes captured this war is estimated at 12 millions. Those carried into Liverpool alone, are valued at 2,400,000l.

November 23.

On the 2nd November the King of Great Britain went in state to the House of Lords, where the Commons being first sent for, and assembled, the Imperial Parliament was opened by a Speech from the throne, to the following effect:

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"This Country free and united, and the zeal and unanimity of all ranks, to support the dignity of the Crown and the honour of the British name, by the volunteers—congratulates the hour of the termination of the late sedition in Ireland, and the bringing the leaders to justice."

"His Majesty also congratulates his people on the capture of the colonies of Demerara and Essequibo; and concludes with an assurance, that he occasion should require, share the exertions, and the dangers, of his faithful subjects, in person, in defence of their religion, their constitution, and their laws."

EGYPT.

A Paris paper of November 13, has, under the head of Frankfort, Nov. 8, the following articles:

"They have received at Trieste, circumstantial details of the unhappy situation of Egypt—delivered up to the horrors of civil war, the invasion of an European power, and no intimation of Barbarossa.—The first cause of their evils, is the Grand Vizier, who, in retiring from Egypt, left no different pieces 4 or 5000 troops; under the orders of Taher Bacha. These soldiers are brave and devoted; not having been paid and being menaced with dismandment, they elevated the standard of revolt, massacred the Turks, Jews, and Christians, and uniting with the Mamelukes, they carried successively Cairo, Damietta, Rosetta, Alexandria, and in short all Egypt.

"In all these circumstances which render the situation of this country very miserable, is added the report circulating of an armament preparing by the English at Malta, to re-take Egypt—and their fears are still more excited by the arrival—consul of Alexandria, commander of the Barbarossa.

"The last letters received from Venice, prove that the fears of the inhabitants of Egypt were well founded. According to these letters, they have received intelligence direct an English from Barbary. Malta, appeared before Alexandria on the 23rd, with the consent of the Beys, several thousand troops, which immediately took possession of the forts and works of that place. This news, if confirmed, will be important on more than one account."

DOVER, Nov. 12.

Yesterday afternoon, at 25 minutes after 2, a signal was observed at the South Foreland Light, announcing the appearance of an enemy. At 27 minutes after 4, another signal was made, and the gun-boats sailed, which was soon answered from the several stations on the coast. The people on the heights perceived the Boulogne flotilla in motion, and it was therefore supposed that in the course of the night the enemy would make an attempt to put to sea. This opinion became general; as our squadron was obliged, by the late heavy gales, to quit their former station off the harbour of Boulogne, and was anchored in the Downs. The night passed, however, without any thing of the sort. At M. the Ramillies, of 74 guns, the Leopard, sloop of war, and Archer, Bloodhound, and Fairy, cutters, sailed each on its respective cruize to the westward, which will facilitate their departure to the coast of France.

Not a gun heard this day, or any appearance of enemy observed from full tide to 7 minutes after 4 o'clock P. M.

The present alarming state of affairs, on the coast renders the most active and prompt measures indispensable. It is therefore in contemplation to put all unemployed people, strangers as well as residents, in a state of requisition.—They are to be appointed constables, whose duty it will be to see the late proclamations for ordering the country to take the enemy make good a landing carried into full effect. Such is the unanimity of the people here, that when it was understood that measure was to be adopted immediately, not a single dissentient voice was heard.

DEAL, Nov. 14.

The French soldiers who were captured a few days since, appear in general to be intelligent men; and have been a great deal of service. They state that the great majority of the French troops along the coast and particularly in the neighbourhood of Boulogne, are composed of veterans who served in the last war. The new raised levies, they mention are scattered in the interior of France, or dispatched to the army of Italy, or that on the German frontiers and Hanover.

According to the opinion of the Deal pilots, who are persons much to be attended to on subjects connected with the navigation of this channel, it is quite impossible that the French gun-boats, constructed upon the model of that lately captured, can be their dependance for the protection of their troops in the attempt or debarkation on our coast. Those boats carry a gun of large calibre from 18 to 24 pounders in the bow, and one of 6 to 8 pounders astern. The large gun are so fixed, that they can point the bow no more, it must be obvious against the troops on land; and to point their bow on a beat there is impracticable. The disadvantage of the heavy gun also is, that it makes the boat roll most intolerably, and renders it quite unmanageable in a heavy sea. Before the could be brought to windward, one of our Deal luggers would beat four or five times—for the boatmen say. Besides it is the French boats shall take on board the complement of Soldiers which is said to be assigned to each of the three flats, namely, about 90, my informers think that the guns cannot be managed.

With even three or forty-five which were on board the boat captured, there was scarce room for any person to move. All the French gun-boats are made on the one and size of each, as those of the paper, have ever been stated. The 18-pounder surrounded (which are on board the Deal boats) which are prepared to meet the enemy, are so fixed on a swivel, that they can be brought to bear on any direction, while the guns of the French boats can bear only in one direction.

Thirty-three transports came into the Downs yesterday, and their destination is for Portsmouth, there, as they understand, to take in troops for Portugal.—More transports are hourly expected.

There was no report of an alarm at Dover last night. All the yeomanry and regulars were under arms in consequence of some French sloops being perceived coming out of Boulogne harbour yesterday evening. They made for Calais and were encouraged by our cruizers.

Success of a letter.—Another and immediate bombardment of such of the enemy's ports as have gun-boats collected in them, or in a state of preparation, is now determined on. Boulogne is said to be the principal object of attack. The Leopard of 50 guns, captain Martin, who is appointed commodore of the first squadron destined for it, put now in sight, with the Ambuscade frigate, and making for the Downs. I have talked with an officer belonging to the Leopard, who waits her arrival here, and he has told me that capt. Martin, previous to the sailing of his ship from the Nore, summoned all hands on deck, and in the most impressive and animating terms described to them the importance and difficulties of the expedition in which they were about to be employed; he concluded all with expressing his reliance on their fortitude and valour. This was the crew joined by a prompt and unanimous acclamation of their readiness to meet every possible danger in a cause so glorious. It is understood that this attack will be far more serious than any that have preceded it. Reports say that in the former bombardments our ships have lied at too great a distance from the French coasts materially to injure their harbours, shipping or towns. In order, therefore, to do more execution, in this instance, our cruizers are to lie as close in shore, which of course will expose them to the annoyance of the enemy's batteries—a circumstance which must give considerable anxiety to every Briton who feels solicitous for the preservation of the lives of his countrymen; but no one who duly appreciates their gallantry can feel any fear as to the ultimate issue of the contest. The result will certainly of such importance as to be worthy of great risks, if not of great sacrifices.

So soon as the Leopard reaches the Downs, the is to conduct such vessels as are appointed to accompany her to Dungeness, which is her farthest destination, and the rendezvous of all vessels to be employed in the intended bombardment. If wind and tide should be favorable, it is expected the Leopard, &c. will sail for Dungeness the ensuing night. Among the vessels to be placed under her command are, I understand, the Fairy, 22, Ambuscade, Amethyst, and Fortune frigates; the Harpy, Bloodhound, Ballasik and Archer, gun brigs; Pernon, Locust and Sulphur bombs. A cooling to the foregoing is that no person who professes to be in the secret of the plan of operation it is intended to bombard Boulogne, Calais, Havre, Gravelines and Dieppe, at the same time; but the opinion which seems most probable, is, that they will commence the attack upon Boulogne; and after having accomplished their project, will proceed to the other ports. The probability of this plan arises out of the circumstance that Boulogne is now to be the principal depot of the gun-boats upon that part of the coast.

PLYMOUTH, Nov. 14.

BRISTOL, Nov. 14.

A very hot press of seamen took place on Wednesday at this port, when and since that day several useful hands have been procured for the navy.

MARGATE, Nov. 12.

The high winds which have blown for several days from the S. W. have produced the most melancholy consequences. The boat of the Rover, gun-brig, bringing on shore the captain, surgeon, one midshipman, and manned with seven sailors, on Saturday morning, unfortunately upset. A Margate boat happening to meet with the wreck, picked up four of the men; but Captain Chaffey, the surgeon, midshipman, and three sailors, were unfortunately drowned.

A well Indiaman and another vessel have been lost upon the Goodwin Sands, and we have the misfortune to add, that every soul on board the former perished. A brig from Newcastle, bound to Birchington yesterday morning, but fortunately got off at high water. Another brig is now upon the sands in the Queen's channel, and the Margate boats are gone off to her assistance.

GIBRALTAR, Oct. 15.

The Halcyon sloop of war, despatches to our cruizers in the Mediterranean, and lately arrived from Lord Nelson's fleet, brings an account of two French frigates and two sloops having come out of Toulon, and made Calvi, where they are now blockaded by one of our men of war. The French government ventured to send them out, notwithstanding the great superiority there was of their being captured, in order to get rid of those which were in an open state of mutiny. That such are the disposition of the greatest part of their subjects, particularly in the corrupted departments, we have every reason to believe from the particulars contained in a letter received from Turin, by the last mail. The writer had seen, with his own eyes, seventeen individuals guillotined in two days: and there remained one hundred more in the Bastiles of Piedmont, destined to undergo the same fate. As he writes from one of the departments of the Lord of Liberty, he is cautious not to enter into minute details on the motives of their bloody executions; but from various general hints mentioned in the account, it is highly probable, that they fell victims to the suspicions of their new Governments. So much and such are the blessings of his Consular Majesty, the greater security enjoyed by his subjects, since he has abolished Terrorism.

Oct. 22.—Nine Algerine Corsairs sailed from Algiers, on the 16th of September, on a cruize to the Eastward. The Portuguese line of battle ship Vasco de Gama, appeared off that harbor on the 26th: and, on the following day, four of the Portuguese Officers were received each 1000 Ashinadoes for suspected connection with Moorish women.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 15.

The Danish navy consists at this time of 19 ships of the line, 15 frigates, 8 brigs, 7 cutter, 2 bombs, 1 yacht, and 13 gun boats; in all 58 sail, and 3014 cannons. There are on the stocks 3 ships of the line, 4 frigates, and 1 brig.

November 5.

The English have made in the several ports of the Baltic such considerable purchases of grain that the necessaries of life have risen to an enormous price.

The following details which have been published respecting the Astrakan, upon of Astrakan, comprised in the vast provinces of Russia, and center of the commerce between that state and Persia, by means of the Caspian Sea, in the neighbourhood of which it is situated, give an idea of its importance, and of the prosperity to which it has risen by degrees. It possesses an establishment of silk worms, 24 silk manufactories, 81 cotton manufactories, 5 morocco manufactories, 74 dye-houses, 24 brick kilns, 92 vineyard plots, 212 mills, &c. The commercial houses consist of 1180 Russians, 5 foreigners, 78 Tartars, and 4 Hindoos. Amongst the inhabitants there are 2,188 Persians, Bucharet and Hindoos. The town contains 2000 shops, 6 convents, 37 churches, 4 of which are Armenian, 2 Catholic, 1 Lutheran, 27 Tartarian mosques, and 1 meeting house of Hindoos.

From an English Print of October 29.

DUKE OF CUMBERLAND'S SHARP SHOOTERS.—Saturday this highly respectable and useful Corps were inspected. All was silent, not a word could be heard from the Corps, the command being given by a whistle, so that an enemy must be unconscious of their approach in every thing but the effect of their guns. Having advanced in this way to a considerable distance, they retreated in the same order, at the found of the bugle, firing and falling back. A mode of annoyance was practised, as singular in its appearance as expertly performed! The Corps advanced to certain positions, laid themselves on their bellies, took aim, and discharged their rifles; rolling again upon their backs, at full length to load, and by this means keeping up an incessant and well directed andoyance. After some time spent in this way, the whole Corps, at the found of the whistle, leaped up and fled with the utmost precipitancy; then rallied, and took forth position, and repeated their former movements.

NEW-YORK, January 14.

On Wednesday forenight the brig American, Greenman, arrived at Providence, R. I. in 35 days from Lisbon. Capt. Greenman left Lisbon about the 24th of November. He informs, that an account was published in the Lisbon papers, that a number of French gun boats, with 6000 troops on board having been manœuvring in the mouth of France, were overtaken in a storm by some British Frigates and cutters, when a desperate action took place; many of the gun boats were reported to have been sunk, 4000 troops drowned, and 2000 captured and landed in England. Captain Greenman adds, that bets were depending at Lisbon on the authenticity of this intelligence.

January 30.

Letters from Jamaica state, that a late New-Providence paper, mentions, that General Rochambeau, Commodore Barney, and part of the French St. Domingo army, have been sent to England.

TREMENDOUS INUNDATION.—Letters from Oporto to the 29th November, state, that from the 15th to that period, a continual rain had prevailed, which had so raised the water, as to put the town to great danger of a total deluge. In a few hours the water raised four fathoms. Vessels lying in the harbour, were driven by the force of the element into the streets of the city. Much damage was done to the shipping, &c. and many lives loft in this singular phenomenon.—The ship Prosperity, Jonathan, of Philadelphia, was carried over the walls of the town, and was restored to her moorings with some damage.

From the (New-Orleans) Telegraphe, Dec. 20.

An Account of the taking possession of Louisiana in the name of the United States of America, and of the entrance of the American Troops in New-Orleans, under the command of General Wilkinson.

NEW-ORLEANS, Tuesday,
Dec. 20, 1803.

At seven o'clock in the morning, citizen D'Auffat, Colonial Prefect, and commissary of the French government, arrived, by the beating of the drum, that the militia should assemble at nine o'clock, upon the military square, in order to receive there the American commissioners. At the hour appointed within half a league from the city. This body was drefled in their uniform, were under arms in a moment. At nine o'clock the officers of the staff of both nations, had conferences together, customary on the like solemn ceremonies. At 25 minutes after nine, the report of a gun fired in the American camp, announced that the troops were ready to march. At 30 minutes past eleven, another firing of cannon gave the signal of departure, which took place in good order. The troops in battle array, formed themselves into a column, and marched at the usual pace to the found of martial music, of a band of twelve musicians, playing the tune known under the name of Marche des Carabiniers, and came out of the camp. Having arrived on the road that leads to the city, a band of ten drummers and fifers played the favorite tune of the Marseillaise: Peuple Francais peuple de freres, which was re-echoed by the music. This column was preceded by fourteen dragoons well mounted and drefled in a new handsome red uniform. Four pieces of artillery attended by forty gunners, preceded the first company of infantry, on whose blue colours was this motto: Ne pluribus unum. Another company of infantry, with white colours, on which was written, The United Irishmen, and formed with the first company of one hundred and seventy men, wholly like uniform and good order, preferred a spectacle truly military. This column was followed by twenty-five riflemen in the uniform of Kentucky sharpers. At 45 minutes past eleven, this column arrived in good order at the gate of the city, where it was received by a detachment of the militia grenadiers drefled in the uniform, and in order of battle, to the beating of the drums. At ten minutes past twelve, the army arrived on the military square, where, by turning on the left, they formed their different bodies of militia that were ranged there in the best order.—At ten o'clock General Wilkinson went to the Municipality, a body composed of select citizens, where he was received by the Prefect in the name of the French government.

At 15 minutes past one o'clock, a detachment of 50 men from the American army, went to the house of Mr. Clark, the Conful of the United States, to take thence the American flag, which was brought rolled up about the body of an officer of the detachment. It was then affixed to the halliards of the pavilion-staff, at the top of which the French flag was flying. The officer of the two nations appointed to lower and hoist their respective flags, then exchanged the compliment usual on these occasions, and acquitted themselves very handsomely. At 37 minutes past one, the French flag was brought down to the middle of the staff, and the American flag hoisted up, and remained together for five minutes (this mark is a mark of reciprocal respect)—at length the French flag was entirely brought down, and the American flag hoisted up to the top of the pole. During this ceremony, truly effecting, the American music played the tune Hail Columbia, attended with honors. At two o'clock the French troops came down from the municipal hotel, and went to the prefecture, with the French flag rolled around the body of a French officer, attended with several members of the municipality, militia, several officers of the staff of the American army, many Spanish officers, and a numerous concourse of French citizens and others. Whilst these bodies were paffing in front of the American troops, the music played the tune of Adieu enfans de la patrie.—Thus the United States are now in poffeffion of a country which produces sugar, cotton, indigo, &c. &c.

Picturesque View of London.

The following description of London in a picturesque point of view, from Londonian Believeum, or an Ancient History and Modern Description of London, by James Peter Malcolm, is executed in a neat and interesting manner.

Smoke, so great an enemy to all profpect, is the everlasting companion of this great city; even the smoke of London has a dramatic effect in magnificence.

At times, when the morning is calm, and the wind to the east, rolls the vast volume of sulphur towards each other, columns afcend to a great height, in some parts bearing a blue tinge, in others a dame colour, in the more monstrous and dusky parts of the darker portions of the city, till the black robes require candles. A refident in London cannot form an idea of the grand and gloomy scene; it must be viewed from the various points.

In the spring, before fires are intermitted, during a calm day, Vefuvius itself can fcarcely exceed the display of smoke. It is pleasing to observe the black streams which iffue from the different manufactories; fometimes darting upwards, while every trifling current gives grace to their undulation; at others rolling in low movements, blending with the common air; when the dreary ftation of November arrives, and the atmosphere is dark and damp, a change in the wind produces an effect difmal and depending. The smoke fometimes hangs in the air in black wreaths they assume an electric appearance. When the fun breaks through this veil during the summer, its beams have a wonderful effect on the trees and grass; the green is brightened inconceivably beautiful.

London is not without attraction on a fine evening; chiefly so in the winter, when a strong wind prevails.

It is then that the innumerable lights in the ftreets and streets lend their rays towards heaven; fometimes meeting with the smoke, and fometimes as they are reflected and multiplied, making an arch of fplendor, against which the houfes and fteeples appear in strong outlines. I have found the reflection to powerful as to dazzle my fight, and make the path dark and dangerous. A general illumination occasions great brilliancy.

Let us now view our subject from the surrounding country; and this should be done on a fummer morning, before the industrious inhabitants begin their labours. The most perfect and delightful prospect is from Hampftead Heath, when the wind blows ftrong from the eaft.—Then it is, that the clear bright ftate of ground, broken into a thousand picturesque forms, gives luftre to the prospect; fome of the highest, topped with verdure; and forming as a firft diftance, from which is gradual undulations the fields retire till loft in a misty horizon. Hence, fpread before you, the numberless objects to please the moft difficult. The fubjects of pleasure grounds, under the eye in all directions, contrafting their fawn-coloured fides with the dark-green of woods. Beyond them reposes, in full majefty, the main body, with its mighty waves, whole lofty topography is overlooked by her phalanx of fhipping, crowned with fpires of various sizes and beauty; protected by the whole by a chain of hills.

Much of the external fplendor of London, however, muft have been loft on the fuppreffion of religious houfes. Numerous towers and fpires were deftroyed, and those of the moft remarkable churches. Several attempts to preferve St. John's, Clerkenwell, and St. Auguftine, were without fuccefs.—L. Paper.

THE ORACLE.

YORK:—SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 25.

MARRIED—On Wednesday evening last, by the Rev. George Okill Stuart, Mr. THOMAS MOSLEY, Merchant, to Miss MARY ROSS, daughter of Mr. John Ross—all of this place;

DIED,

In Canton (China), JOHN TUCKER, Grand Hoppo of Canton, (Chief Officer of the Customs). He was poisoned by order of the Emperor, who sent three Mandarins from Pekin for the purpose. The first gave him a poisonous pinch of snuff, the second a pill; and before the third was administered he was a corpse. His punishment was for starving the poor. He took the poison with as much complacency as one friend would take a pinch of snuff from the box of another.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER, Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of GREAT BRITAIN and IRELAND, King, Defender of the Faith:—

To all our Loving Subjects in our Province of Upper Canada—

GREETING:

KNOW Ye, that We taking into our ſerious Conſideration, the juſt and neceſſary War in which we are engaged, and putting our Truſt in Almighty GOD, that He will graciouſly bleſs our Arms, have reſolved, and do, by and with the Advice of the Executive Council of our ſaid Province, hereby command, that a Day of PUBLIC FASTING and HUMILIATION be obſerved throughout that Province, on Friday, the Sixteenth Day of March next; that ſo both We and our People may humble ourſelves before God, to obtain Pardon of our Sins, to pray that He may avert thoſe heavy Judgements which we deſerve, and to implore his Bleſſing and Aſſiſtance on our Arms, for the reſtoration of Peace and Proſperity to Us and our Dominions.

AND We do ſtrictly charge and command, that the ſaid Public Faſt be reverently and devoutly obſerved by all our loving Subjects in our ſaid Province of UPPER CANADA, upon pain of ſuch Puniſhment as We may juſtly inflict on all ſuch as contemn and neglect the performance of ſo religious and neceſſary a Duty.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have cauſed theſe our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our ſaid Province to be hereunto affixed:—WITNESS our truſty and well-beloved PETER HUNTER, Eſquire, our Lieutenant Governor of our ſaid Province of UPPER CANADA, and Lieutenant General Commanding our Forces in UPPER and LOWER CANADA, at YORK, this Fifteenth Day of February, in the Year of our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Four, and in the Forty-Fourth Year of our Reign.

Proclamation.

PETER HUNTER, Eſquire,
Lieutenant Governor of His Majeſty's Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General commanding His Majeſty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME,—GREETING:

WHEREAS the Lieutenant Governor in Council has granted Leaſes of ſeveral Tracts of Land, part of which was of the Reſerves of the Crown, and other part was of the Lands ſet apart and reſerved for the uſe of a Proteſtant Clergy, AND WHEREAS, upon ſuch Leaſes, certain Rents were reſerved to his Majeſty and made payable by the Leſſees, at days limited and particularly ſpecified in each reſpective Leaſe, and the rents upon ſome of ſuch Leaſes have already accrued due.

And whereas the Sheriffs of the ſeveral Diſtricts of this Province have been appointed by the Lieutenant Governor to receive all Rents due or to accrue due on all ſuch Leaſes, as well on the Crown as the Clergy Reſerves.

And whereas in purſuance of the Commands of the Lieutenant Governor, Shedules have been tranſmitted to the reſpective Sheriffs of the different Diſtricts of this Province; in which Shedules are particularly ſet forth the names and deſcriptions of the Leſſees, together with the Conceſſion, Townſhip, County and Diſtrict in which ſuch Lands ſo held under ſuch Leaſes reſpectively lie and are ſituate, with a ſtatement alſo of the particular Rent reſerved on every ſuch Leaſe, and the days and times on which ſuch Rent already has accrued or will hereafter become due.

NOW THEREFORE be it known to all whom it may concern, That all and every perſon and perſons, now holding any ſuch Leaſe or Leaſes as aforeſaid, is and are required to make payment of the Rents, reſerved and made payable, either on Leaſes granted of the Reſerves of the Crown, or of the Reſerves ſet apart for the uſe of a Proteſtant Clergy, to the different Sheriffs of the reſpective Diſtricts within which all ſuch Lands ſeverally lay or are ſituate at the times and periods on which ſuch Rents are reſerved, in ſtrict conformity with the covenants and ſtipulations entered into by the ſaid ſeveral Leſſees with his Majeſty, and that in default of ſuch payments being punctually and regularly made, his Majeſty's Attorney General will be inſtructed forthwith to inſtitute proceedings againſt every ſuch Leſſee for enforcing ſuch payment and for reſuming the Lands, in reſpect of which ſuch default ſhall be made, into the hands of the Crown, ſuch being the conditions upon which the Lands have been deviſed, and ſuch conditions having been particularly ſpecified in all the Leaſes which have been granted.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms at York, this fourteenth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thouſand eight hundred and three, and in the forty-third year of his Majeſty's reign.

UPPER CANADA.

PETER HUNTER, Eſquire,
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR OF THE PROVINCE OF UPPER CANADA, AND LIEUTENANT GENERAL COMMANDING HIS MAJESTY'S FORCES IN UPPER AND LOWER CANADA, &c. &c.

WHEREAS great prejudice hath ariſen to the Inhabitants of the Town and Townſhip of YORK, and of other adjoining Townſhips, from no place or day having been ſet apart or appointed for expoſing publicly for Sale, Cattle, Sheep, Poultry, and other Proviſions, Goods and Merchandize, brought by Merchants, Farmers, and others, for the neceſſary ſupply of the ſaid Town of YORK;

AND WHEREAS great benefit and advantage might be derived to the ſaid Inhabitants and others, by eſtabliſhing a Weekly Market within that Town, at a place and on a day certain for the purpoſe aforeſaid—KNOW ALL MEN, That I, PETER HUNTER, Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of the ſaid Province, taking the Premiſes into conſideration, and willing to promote the intereſt, advantage and accommodation of the Inhabitants of the Town and Townſhip aforeſaid, and of others His Majeſty's Subjects within the ſaid Province, by and with the advice of the Executive Council thereof, have ordained, erected, eſtabliſhed and appointed, and do hereby ordain, erect, eſtabliſh and appoint, A PUBLIC

OPEN MARKET, to be held on SATURDAY, in each and every week during the year, within the said Town of YORK: (The first Market to be held therein on SATURDAY, the FIFTH DAY of NOVEMBER next, after the date of these Presents) on a certain piece or plot of Land within that Town, consisting of five Acres and a half, commencing at the South-East angle of the said plot, at the corner of Market-street and New street, then North sixteen degrees West five chains seventeen links, more or less, to King's-street; then along King-street South seventy-four degrees West nine chains fifty-one links, more or less, to Church-street; then South sixteen degrees East six chains thirty-four links, more or less, to Market-street; then along Market-street North seventy-four degrees East two chains; then North sixty-four degrees East along Market-street seven chains fifty links, more or less, to the place of beginning—for the purpose of exposing for Sale, CATTLE, SHEEP, POULTRY, and other Provisions, GOODS and MERCHANDIZE, as aforesaid.

GIVEN under my Hand, and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this twenty-fifth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, and in the forty fourth year of His Majesty's Reign.

[BY AUTHORITY.]

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE FROM THE 24th MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pa. 11-12. A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve abroad as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in cases where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier so Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other Lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 13. Pa. 12-13. Where a Court Martial, either in the cases of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is impowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as aforesaid, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by such order of his Majesty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Persons harbouring, conceal-
Sec. 600, Page 238. ing, or assisting Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of Five Pounds as in former Acts.

The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to Sec. 60. Page 41. receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

This Section has been altered,
Sec. 60. Page 41. so as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War-Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY,

During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

The Pay of Officers and Men,
Sec. 16. Page 24. convicted in the ordinary course of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42d Geo. III. chap. 90, § 10, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to sentence Deserters belonging to those Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be sent out of Great Britain) to serve in his Majesty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of service.

Latest Intelligence.

LONDON, November 20.

Yesterday letters were received from Oporto, of the date of the 5th inst. which were brought by a private vessel. They state that the ship Liberty of Philadelphia, had arrived there in 38 days, having on board M. de Ceneſin, charged with a number of dispatches from Prince Bonaparte. The American was spoken by one other Cruizer. The captain of which was about to examine the French passenger, when the American declared he was confined to his bed with the yellow fever, on which the British officer desisted.

Letters from Shorncliff Camp, after mentioning the review which took place on Monday last, give us an account of a most important invention, by Major Shrapnel, of the artillery, which was tried on that day. It was that of throwing howitzer shells with musket balls out of 24 pounders, to annoy troops approaching the shore in boats. It answered the most sanguine expectations of every person present. It has the effect of grape shot, afterwards of a shell, and scatters to a great distance. It is the most destructive mode of annoyance that ever was contrived.

Every thing is preparing, we can flatter from the best information, for his Majesty's shooting his standard the moment the alarm is given of an enemy appearing upon the coast. The field equipage of his Majesty is in readineſs, and the necessary arrangements are making in the department of the master of the horse.

Every neceſſary arrangement is taken, for immediately blowing up the chief arch of Colchester bridge, in case of an enemy's approach. Chatham Lines were such an event to take place, would form, no doubt, the principal bulwark of the capital.

November 22.

HIS MAJESTY'S SPEECH TO BOTH HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT.

About 30 o'clock, his Majesty proceeded, in his usual state, to the House of Lords, to open the session, and being seated on the Throne, a message was dispatched to the House of Commons, to intimate his Majesty's presence in the House of Peers, and to require their immediate attendance at the bar of that House. The Commons being come, his Majesty made the following moſt gracious SPEECH:—

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"Since I last met you in parliament it has been my chief object to carry into effect those meaſures which your wiſdom had adopted for the defence of the United Kingdom, and for the vigorous proſecution of the war. In theſe preparations I have been ſeconded by the voluntary exertions of all ranks of my people, in a manner that has, if poſſible, ſtrengthened their claims to my confidence and affection:—They have proved that the menaces of the enemy have only ſerved to rouſe their native and hereditary ſpirit; and that all other conſiderations are loſt in a general deſire to make the moſt efforts and ſacrifices which the honor and ſafety of the kingdom demand at this important and critical conjuncture.

"Though my attention has principally been directed to the great object of internal ſecurity, no opportunity has been loſt of making an impreſſion on the foreign poſſeſſions of the enemy. The iſlands of St. Lucia, of Tobago, of St. Pierre and Miquelon, and the ſettlements of Demerara and Eſſequibo, have ſurrendered to the Britiſh arms. In the conduct of the operations, by which theſe valuable acquiſitions have been made, the utmoſt promptitude and zeal have been diſplayed by the officers employed on thoſe ſervices, and by my forces acting under their command, by ſea and land.

"In Ireland, the leaders, and ſeveral inferior agents, in the late traiterous and atrocious inſurrection, have been brought to juſtice; and public tranquility has experienced no further interruption. I indulge the hope that, ſuch of my deluded ſubjects as have ſwerved from their allegiance are now convinced of their error; and that, having compared the advantages they derive from the protection of a free conſtitution with the condition of thoſe countries which are under the dominion of the French Government, they will cordially and zealouſly concur in reſiſting any attempt that may be made againſt the tranquility and independence of my United Kingdom.

"Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

"I have a perfect reliance on your public ſpirit for making ſuch proviſions as may be neceſſary for the ſervice of the year. The progreſſive improvement of the revenue cannot fail to encourage you to perſevere in the ſyſtem which has been adopted, of defraying the expences of the war, with as little addition as poſſible to the public debt, and to the permanent burthens of the ſtate.

"I lament the heavy preſſure, which, under the preſent circumſtances, muſt unavoidably be experienced by my people: But I am perſuaded that they will meet it with the firmneſs and fortitude which ſo eminently diſtinguiſh their character, under the conviction of the indiſpenſable importance of upholding the dignity, and of promoting effectually for the ſafety of the Empire.

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I have concluded a convention with the King of Sweden, for the purpoſe of adjuſting all the differences which have ariſen on the ſubject of the eleventh article of the treaty of 1661. I have directed that a copy of this convention ſhould be laid before you; and you will, I truſt, be of opinion that the arrangement, which it upholds with mutual rights, is founded on the true principles of reciprocal advantage by which the beſt calculated to maintain and improve the good underſtanding which happily ſubſiſts between the two countries.

"In the proſecution of the conteſt in which we are engaged, it ſhall be, as it has ever been, my firſt object to execute as becomes me, the great truſt committed to my charge.—Embarked with my brave and loyal people in one common cauſe, it is my fixed determination, if the enemy ſhould ariſe, to ſhare their dangers and their exertions and their delivery of our Conſtitution, our Religion, our Laws, and Independence.—To the activity and valour of my fleets and armies to the zeal and unconquerable ſpirit of my faithful ſubjects, I confide the honour of my crown, and all their valuable intereſts which are involved in the iſſue of this momentous conteſt.

"Actuated by theſe ſentiments, and humbly imploring the Bleſſings of Divine Providence, I look forward with a firm conviction, that it will contribute to all juſt expectation, the enemy ſhould elude the vigilance of my numerous fleets and cruizers, and attempt to execute their preſumptuous threat of invading our coaſts, the conſequence will be to them diſcomfiture, confuſion and diſgrace; and that they will not only fruſtrate the glory of ſurmounting perfect diſtruſtful and appalling immediate danger, but the ſolid and permanent advantages of fixing the ſafety and independence of the Kingdoms on the baſis of acknowledged ſtrength, the reſult of its own united energy and reſources."

November 23.

Yeſterday, after the King had declared his aſſent, the Marquiſs of Sligo, in the abſence of Lord Lifford, in a very neat ſpeech, in which he enlarged on the objects mentioned in the ſpeech, moved an addreſs in anſwer. The Earl of Limerick ſeconded the motion.—In the courſe of his remarks, he ſaid, "we (that is one of the ſpeech in which his Majeſty expreſſed a deſire to ſhare in common the dangers of this period, he the enemy elude the vigilance of his fleets and a landing in any force, he expreſſed his confidence that the enemy are to meet the Sovereign from ſuch a declaration—ſuch an event his Majeſty would find means to rouſe grounded by an unquenchable phalanx of his people. He would let them rush with unreſiſtible force to cruſh the invading deſpot, ſurrounded by the ſcum of his ſanguinary mercenaries, ſtained with the blood and gorged with the ſpoils of Europe. Such a day would terminate in the deſtruction of that deſpot—the ſyſtem of French tyranny would be broken—the hopes of Europe once more be revived, and that happy equipoiſe of power for which we fought by ſea and land, which exiſted in the juſt balance of power between the two ſcales in the juſt balance of power between Britain."

The addreſs paſſed unanimouſly.

In the Houſe of Commons, the addreſs was moved by the Hon. Colonel Ashley, ſeconded by Mr. Bastard; and it paſſed unanimouſly. Mr. Whitbread commented on the ſpeech, and the former and expreſſed the moſt unbounded confidence, that the meaſures of the Emperor was accepted by the Corſicans, but that all hope of an accommodation had ceaſed. He added, that the production of the papers on this ſubject was only preceded by temporary diſcuſſions.

November 24.

On the paſſage of the addreſs to his Majeſty, Mr. Windham (a leading member of Mr. Pitt's adminiſtration) ſaid, he was anxious to give full ſcope to the powers of his Majeſty; he preſented againſt the opinion that unanimity in the cauſe of the country is identified with the cauſe of Miniſters: He would not admit that they were never to be thwarted; for though the ſituation of the country was perilous, and terrific as Bonaparte's legions may appear, there was leſs danger to the country from theſe than from our own Miniſter, who, he inſiſted, were unfit for the charge with which they were entruſted.—He, however, paid them ſome compliments on the score of their activity on an occaſion of laſt year; but, as yet, has produced none. In a word, the queſtion of invaſion is exactly in the ſame plight which it was two months ago.

November 28.

Some diſpatches from the Firſt Conſul to General Rochambeau, who commands the remnant of the French force in St. Domingo, has been lately intercepted by one of our cruizers.—In theſe diſpatches Bonaparte is ſaid to have informed Gen. Rochambeau that the French Treaſury was quite inadequate to furniſh him with any further pecuniary ſupplies, and that he muſt therefore endeavour to provide for his army in the colony it was appointed to defend."

The mode of raiſing ſuch proviſion was pointed out to the General; and the advice contained in the diſpatch was, that in order to prevent "noiſy complaints," or "troubleſome claims," at a future period, to any property he might think it neceſſary to appropriate, he ſhould take care to have the proprietors "ſet aſide," that is, murdered!!—The atrocities of former Tyrants, fade before this Maſter Monſter.

Much has been ſaid in the papers for ſeveral days, of miſunderſtandings exiſting between the Britiſh and American governments, reſpecting the interpreſtation of certain articles of the treaty of 1794. That explanations on the ſubject have taken place we know, but confidently state, that no miſunderſtanding whatever is likely to take place on the ſubject. No two countries in the world, at this moment, feel a more natural inclination to remain at peace with each other than Great Britain and America. In regard to the reviſion of the above treaty, which is now on foot, we truſt we ſhall very ſhortly be enabled to give the moſt ſatisfactory information.

HAMBURGH, November 22.

Notwithſtanding the conſent of the Imperial Diet, French demanded of the city, the conſent only given by the Senate at the advice of certain Foreign Miniſters, ſubſiſted on this ſubject, theſe latter have, however, gained the Senate, by the gift of a conſiderable loan, amounting to nine millions of ſrancs—for more particulars ſee than that which, for want of more deſirable information, I ſtated to you in my laſt.

Bernadotte had orders to ſubſiſt his troops, to relieve the urgent wants of the French army in Hanover; and he ſtrictly hinted, that if the demand was not granted, the French army would find means to raiſe the ſum on the ſpot.

Intimidated by this menace, the Senate ſent couriers to Berlin and Vienna, and conſulted, at the ſame time, a general aſſemblage of their Elders and Burgeſſes, in which the majority of votes, eſpecially

England are greatly diminiſhed, by the late ſtorm thrown upon the bottoms of gun-boats, and that the encreaſe of ſhipping, ſeized in conſequence by the government, attention lately beſtowed upon the fleet. Admiral Cornwallis now ſtockades Brest with a ſuperior force, and the numerical fleet cannot venture out in ſafety, but by calculating on the proſpect of a change of wind, or weather, a circumſtance extremely probable, they deter their attempt till that opportunity. Such, however, our fleet to be blown off, the danger is not ſo great as many imagine, and the enemy are expoſed to the moſt imminent hazard. When the Brest fleet eſcaped upon their laſt attempt upon Ireland, we know that they were above a fortnight off the coaſt, and had ſucceeded above ſeven days in Bantry Bay, without an opportunity being offered to them of landing their troops. The chances which were then in our favour we muſt expect now, and as their eſcape would be almoſt inſtantly known, it may be fairly argued that we ſhould come up to them before a ſufficient time to be able to land any conſiderable force there: In this diſcuſſion, attending ſhips of war laden with troops, that they require a great time to land them in Conſtitution Roads, and more difficult winds and tides; a difficulty which we intend to be peculiar to the unfortunate objects, which muſt push to land directly, and depoſit their cargoes without delay.

Altogether, nothing can be more barren than the intelligence of the week. The meeting of Parliament prove ſome variety in the topics of the day; but, as yet, has produced none. In a word, the queſtion of invaſion is exactly in the ſame plight which it was two months ago.

From a late London Paper.

AEROSTATION.—In a late paper we communicated the aſcent in a balloon of a Mr. Roberdin, during which the following remarks were made.

Mr. Roberdin has aſcertained that ſounds may be conveyed upwards to the height of 2,200 feet; which downwards they can be conveyed only half that diſtance.

The ſolar rays collected, when the barometer ſtood at 24 inches in the ſcale of a lens, loſe one third of their intenſity, and when refracted by the priſm, no longer exhibited lively and diſtinct, but dark and confuſed colours. Weights attached to a ſpring balance loſt one half of their gravity. The magnetic virtue he found decreaſe as the ſquare of the diſtance; but at the elevation in queſtion, the needle began again to put itſelf in motion.

When about ſeven thouſand two hundred feet from the earth, he purſued the experiment ſuggeſted by Mr. Hey, four ſmoke of the ſurrounding air along with mercury, and balled itſelf the point where the air and the mercury were united; and when he returned to the earth, he found that the mercury filled the whole tube within a tenth. This important experiment ſeems to prove, that in the upper regions there exiſts nothing of vapours, and of atmoſpheric air.

Mr. Roberdin paſſed between two large clouds, which ſeemed to open to afford a paſſage to the balloon; the form of theſe maſſes of vapour was oblong, and they reſembled rags ſuſpended above the earth.—Their uppermoſt parts did not form in their aggregate a ſmooth ſurface, as appeared to thoſe who viewed them from the earth, but reſembled long pyramids, occaſioned probably by the caloric riſing the maſs in proportion to the denſity of the atmoſphere; they appeared to plunge towards the earth, in conſequence of an optic effect ariſing from the apparent immobility of the balloon, which, however, was at the time moving at the rate of 40 feet per ſecond.

When the thermometer indicated one degree above freezing, and the barometer ſtood at 15 inches, Mr. R. let two pigeons at liberty, and they deſcended with the rapidity of lightning in a plane, ſlightly inclined without moving their wings. When the barometers ſtood at 14 inches, he let off another; but after fluttering with difficulty for a moment, it perched on the net-work, would not quit it. Two butterflies, let go at the ſame time, tried to uſe their wings, but in vain.

Mr. Roberdin is preparing a balloon of between forty and fifty feet diameter, in which he purpoſes to aſcend higher than any Aeronaut has yet ventured (21,000 feet from the earth is the greateſt elevation yet attained), and is meditating a variety of intereſting experiments for further diſcoveries.

An account of the extent, population, commerce and military force of the Auſtrian Monarchy, lately published, preſents the following reſult: The ſurface of the ſtates of Auſtria is eſtimated at 1200 geographical miles, there are 1200 cities, 2000 boroughs and more than 60,000 villages. The population amounts to 25,800,000 inhabitants. Of that number 6 millions 800,000 are Germans; twelve millions 300,000 belong to the Sclavonian nations, inhabitants of Bohemia, Poland, &c. Hungary furniſhes three millions 340,000; the Arbers are Italians, Vaudois, Arnauts, &c. The army on the peace eſtabliſhment is compoſed of 300,000 men. All that conſtituts the military ſtate, including women and children, is computed at 600,000 individuals, 250,000 marks of ſilver are raiſed annually from Hungary; from different provinces 60,000 quintals of copper; from Istria, 25,000 quintals of quickſilver. The value of metals and other unworought minerals is 47,000,000 of florins, from which, however, muſt be deducted

...the extent of all these works, which does not amount to two thirds of that sum. The yearly consumption of merchandize is about twenty-one millions of florins, and the importation amounts to twenty-two millions and a half. 14,000 vessels of all sizes enter the ports of the House of Austria annually; 1200 of them are national. The journal from which we extract these particulars adds, that the Austrian Monarchy can boast of possessing 900 authors, of whom 720 are Germans.

FIGHTING DOG.—Lord Camelford, last week, purchased Mr. Mellish's celebrated fighting dog.—This animal, who is so renowned for his battles at Bonaparte, was originally the property of Aghring Humphreys; he next came into the possession of Aghring Johnson, by whom he was dearly loved and much lamented; his next owner was George Ward, who sold him a few months ago to Mr. Mellish for 20 guineas. His Lordship being fascinated with the bold feats and the spirited demeanour of the animal, proceeded to buy him, and Mr. Mellish consented to sell him in the carcase way. The dog was accordingly put into the scale, after a good hearty dinner of tripe, and was found to weigh forty-two pounds. The price which they agreed upon was two guineas per pound, so that the purchase money amounted to the sum of eighty-four guineas. This was satisfied in the following manner.—A favourite gun, belonging to his Lordship, value forty guineas, and a case of pistols, value 44 guineas. It would have been an insult to this noble animal to have paid the purchase in money, and therefore, he was in a manner exchanged for those warlike articles. He is known by the name of Bracker, has fought 109 battles, and never was beat. A more warlike pedigree, or nobler blood, cannot be boasted by any of the canine race in England. To his other great and good qualities he adds a singular instinct, by which he is enabled to know a man from a coward, and he is as much attached to the former, as he hates the latter. His Lordship is so pleased with his purchase, he declares no money shall part him and his dog.

THE TEAR.

ON beds of snow the moonbeam slept,
And chilly was the midnight gloom,
When, by the damp grave, ELLEN wept:
Sweet maid! it was her lover's tomb.

A warm tear gush'd! the wintry air
Congeal'd it, as it flash'd away:
All night it lay all nice drop there;
At morn, it glitter'd in the ray.

An angel, wandering from the sphere,
Who saw this bright, this lovers gem,
To dew-ey'd Pity brought the tear,
And hung it on her diadem.

THE ORACLE.

YORK—SATURDAY, MARCH 3.

[The following excellent mode of insuring against fire now practised in Germany, and found to be of the greatest utility, was originally extracted from Render's Tour through that country, lately published; and appears to be worthy the attention of the Legislature of this Province.]

PLAN.

Through the whole principality of a German Prince, let it be ever so extensive, all the houses, barns, cottages, stables, and buildings, of every kind, except public edifices, are numbered. Every proprietor delivers a flatement in writing of the value of his houses and moveable effects, in doing which he is allowed to estimate them to any amount he thinks proper—commissioners appointed by the government examine into, and correct those estimates: their decisions is final. Let a cottage be ever so small the proprietor is obliged to insure it with the little property it contains. Every house being thus insured, the insurance money is half yearly called for, and cheerfully paid, as it is only the proportional part of such losses by fire as may actually have happened, generally very trifling; and sometimes when no fire happens, no call is made—losses by fire are thus easily and speedily repaired; should even a fire be considerable, yet as the whole principality bears the loss, the payment is to the bulk of the community, scarcely one shilling per annum.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER, Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of GREAT BRITAIN and IRELAND, King, Defender of the Faith:—

To all our Loving Subjects in our Province of Upper Canada—

GREETING:

KNOW Ye, that We taking into our Royal consideration the just and necessary War in which we are engaged, and putting our Trust in Almighty God, that He will graciously bless our Arms, have resolved, and do, by and with the Advice of the Executive Council of our said Province, hereby command, that a Day of PUBLIC FASTING and HUMILIATION be observed throughout that Province, on Friday, the Sixteenth Day of March next; that so both We and our People may humble ourselves before God, to obtain Pardon of our Sins, to pray that He may avert those heavy Judgements which we deserve, and to implore his Blessing and Assistance on our Arms, for the restoration of Peace and Prosperity to Us and our Dominions.

AND We do strictly charge and command, that the said Public Fast be reverently and devoutly observed by all our loving Subjects in our said Province of UPPER CANADA, upon pain of such Punishment as We may justly inflict on all such as contemn and neglect the performance of so religious and necessary a Duty.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed:—WITNESS our trusty and well-beloved PETER HUNTER, Esquire, our Lieutenant Governor of our said Province of UPPER CANADA, and Lieutenant General Commanding our Forces in UPPER and LOWER CANADA, at YORK, this Fifteenth Day of February, in the Year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Four, and in the Forty-Fourth Year of our Reign.

P. H.

WM. JARVIS, SEC'RY.

Proclamation.

PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of His Majesty's Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General commanding His Majesty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME—GREETING:

WHEREAS the Lieutenant Governor in Council has granted Leases of several Tracts of Land, part of which was of the Reserves of the Crown, and other part was of the Lands set apart and reserved for the use of a Protestant Clergy, AND WHEREAS, upon such Leases, certain Rents were reserved to his Majesty and made payable by the Lessees, at days limited and particularly specified in each respective Lease, and the rents upon some of such Leases have already accrued due.

And whereas the Sheriffs of the several Districts of this Province have been appointed by the Lieutenant Governor to receive all Rents due or to accrue due on all such Leases, as well on the Crown as the Clergy Reserves.

And whereas in pursuance of the Commands of the Lieutenant Governor, Shedules have been transmitted to the respective Sheriffs of the different Districts of this Province; in which Shedules are particularly set forth the names and descriptions of the Lessees, together with the Concession, Township, County and District in which such Lands so held under such Leases respectively lie and are situate, with a statement also of the particular Rent reserved on every such Lease, and the days and times on which such Rent already has accrued or will hereafter become due.

NOW THEREFORE be it known to all whom it may concern, That all and every person and persons, now holding any such Lease or Leases as aforesaid, is and are required to make payment of the Rents, reserved and made payable, either on Leases granted of the Reserves of the Crown, or of the Reserves set apart for the use of a Protestant Clergy, to the different Sheriffs of the respective Districts within which all such Lands severally lay or are situate at the times and periods on which such Rents are reserved, in strict conformity with the covenants and stipulations entered into by the said several Lessees with his Majesty, and that in default of such payments being punctually and regularly made, his Majesty's Attorney General will be instructed forthwith to institute proceedings against every such Lessee for enforcing such payment and for resuming the Lands, in respect of which such default shall be made, into the hands of the Crown; such being the conditions upon which the Lands have been demised, and such conditions having been particularly specified in all the Leases which have been granted.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms at York, this fourteenth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, and in the forty-third year of his Majesty's reign.

P. HUNTER, Lt. Govr.

By his Excellency's Command,
WM. JARVIS, Sec'y.

UPPER CANADA.

PETER HUNTER, Esquire, LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR OF THE PROVINCE OF UPPER CANADA, AND LIEUTENANT GENERAL COMMANDING HIS MAJESTY'S FORCES IN UPPER AND LOWER CANADA, &c. &c.

WHEREAS great prejudice hath arisen to the Inhabitants of the Town and Township of YORK, and of other adjoining Townships, from no place or day having been set apart or appointed for exposing publicly for Sale, Cattle, Sheep, Poultry, and other Provisions, Goods and Merchandize, brought by Merchants, Farmers, and others, for the necessary supply of the said Town of YORK;

AND WHEREAS great benefit and advantage might be derived to the said Inhabitants and others, by establishing a Weekly Market within that Town, at a place and on a day certain for the purpose aforesaid—KNOW ALL MEN, That I, PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province, taking the Premises into consideration, and willing to promote the interest, advantage and accommodation of the Inhabitants of the Town and Township aforesaid, and of others His Majesty's Subjects within the said Province, by and with the advice of the Executive Council thereof, have ordained, erected, established and appointed, and do hereby ordain, erect, establish, and appoint, A PUBLIC

OPEN MARKET, to be held on SATURDAY, in each and every week during the year, within the faid Town of YORK: (The firſt Market to be held therein on SATURDAY, the FIFTH DAY of NOVEMBER next, after the date of theſe Preſents) on a certain piece or plot of Land within that Town, conſiſting of five Acres and a half, commencing at the South Eaſt angle of the ſaid plot, at the corner of Market-ſtreet and New ſtreet, then North ſixteen degrees Weſt five chains ſeventeen links, more or leſs, to King's-ſtreet; then along King-ſtreet South ſeventy-four degrees Weſt nine chains fifty-one links, more or leſs, to Church-ſtreet; then South ſixteen degrees Eaſt ſix chains thirty-four links, more or leſs, to Market-ſtreet; then along Market-ſtreet North ſeventy-four degrees Eaſt two chains; then North ſixty-four degrees Eaſt along Market-ſtreet ſeven chains ſixty links, more or leſs, to the place of beginning—for the purpoſe of expoſing for Sale, CATTLE, SHEEP, POULTRY, and other Proviſions, GOODS and MERCHANDIZE, as aforeſaid.

GIVEN under my Hand, and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this twenty-fifth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thouſand eight hundred and three, and in the forty fourth year of His Majeſty's Reign.

P. HUNTER, Lieut. Gov'r.

By His Excellency's Command,

[BY AUTHORITY.]

MUTINY ACT,

AS FORCE FROM THE 24th MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pa. 11 12. * A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deſerters to ſerve abroad as Soldiers (a ſervice to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary courſe of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in caſes where Death may be thought too great a puniſhment, to ſentence a Deſerter to Tranſportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the ſentence, a Soldier ſo Tranſported ſhall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majeſty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Tranſported, or without ſome other Lawful cauſe, every ſuch perſon being convicted thereof, in the ordinary courſe of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will ſuffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 5. Page 13. Where a Court Martial, either in the caſes of Deſertion, or of any other Capital Offence, ſhall have given a ſentence of Death, his Majeſty is impowered, if he ſhall think fit, to order that puniſhment to be changed for Tranſportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majeſty ſhall ſeem meet; and the puniſhment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by ſuch order of his Majeſty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 609. Page 218. Perſons harbouring, concealing, or aſſiſting Deſerters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, inſtead of Five Pounds as in former Acts.

Sec. 62. Page 114. The right of the Military to apprehend Deſerters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the aſſiſtance of a Civil Officer, is now eſtabliſhed.

Sec. 60. Page 11. This Section has been altered, ſo as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final deſtination, are obliged to receive Deſerters into their cuſtody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deſerters are conveyed by virtue of a Magiſtrate's Warrant, or under Military Eſcort, by an Order from the War-Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY,

During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec. 18. Page 34. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary courſe of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in conſequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42d Geo. IIId. chap. 90 § 12, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to ſentence Deſerters belonging to thoſe Forces (who are not by their original engagements to be ſent out of Great Britain) to ſerve in his Majeſty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of ſervice.

Recent intelligence from Dieppe.

An Engliſh naval officer, lieut. Robert Houlſ, and his lady, arrived here yeſterday evening from Dieppe. They came over in a Danish brig bound home. This gentleman effected his eſcape in a manner that required great dexterity in carrying into execution. For ſome months he has been detained in France as a priſoner of war, but was fortunately in poſſeſſion of an old paſſport, which he obtained previous to the commencement of hoſtilities. This he altered and gave himſelf the title of an American officer, by which means he travelled, after having taken French leave of his old quarters, into Switzerland. On his arrival there, the unconcern'd art of going through Germany, eſpecially at this ſeaſon of the year, induced him to return into France, and, if poſſible, reach ſome part of the coaſt, where he might embark on board a neutral veſſel and get to England. The American paſs was ſo artfully altered, that no ſuſpicion was excited either of the fraud by any of the officials of the ſeveral ſtages throughout the whole of his journey, &c. as a citizen of the United States, he reached Dieppe.

The intelligence brought by this gentleman is extremely intereſting. During his ſtay at Dieppe, he mingled with all claſſes of the people, and being generally received as an American marine officer, he had acceſs to every part of the town and neighbourhood. About ten days ago, he ſaw the laſt ſquadron of armed veſſels equipped at Dieppe, amounting to about eighteen ſail, leave the port, deſtined for Boulogne, and was informed, previous to his departure, of their late arrival. The coaſt, he declares ſwarms with troops, and that in many converſations he had with the officers and private men belonging to different regiments, he obſerved they all entertained a perfect conviction of their being very ſhortly ordered to embark for England. The ſuppoſed American became frequently jocular with them on the ſubject of the invaſion, but in ſeveral inſtances hinted at the diſtinction that muſt await the men employed on ſo dangerous an expedition. Their conſtant anſwer was—"Very well, if 100,000 ſhus forth, France will be juſt where ſhe was, for ſhe can ſend another 100,000, and another after that; but if we get on ſhore in England, we will do the buſineſs!" The indifference expreſſed by theſe people, even at the moment they ſeemed convinced of their being deſtined to certain deſtruction, our informant declares, ſurpaſſed him exceedingly; but ſuch was really the caſe throughout every department of the army he had acceſs to during his ſtay on the coaſt.

This gentleman, who ſeems to have examined the ſituation of affairs on the oppoſite coaſt with a more than ordinary attention, declares, that he is at leaſt convinced of an invaſion from France being attempted very ſhortly, as he can be of any circumſtance that has not already taken place—every man in the French army now on the coaſt expects the Conſular order for embarkation, when the marine officers report the whole of the ſeveral flotillas being in readineſs; but he ſays, it is no ſecret on the oppoſite ſide, that Bonaparte will not command the firſt expedition; for that Maſſena and Berthier are to be the principal officers. If they ſuffer, the Premier Conſul is to try his fortune.

FROM A PARIS PAPER.

ACCOUNT OF A FIRE BALL.

J. C. BIOT, Member of the National Inſtitution, in a letter to the French Miniſter of the Interior, dated July 20, 1803, gives a detailed account of his inquiries, &c. reſpecting a Fire Ball which lately fell in the neighbourhood of Laigle. From this, the following deſcription of the phenomenon is deduced:—

"On Tueſday, April 26, 1803, about one in the afternoon, the weather being ſerene, there was obſerved from Caen, from Amhenet, and the environs of Alençon, Falaiſe, and Verneuil, a fiery globe of a very brilliant ſplendour, which moved in the atmoſphere with great rapidity.

Some moments after there was heard at Laigle, and the environs of that city to the extent of more than thirty leagues in every direction, a violent exploſion, which laſted five or ſix minutes.

At firſt there were three or four reports like thoſe of cannon, followed by a kind of diſcharge which reſembled a ſtring of muſketry; after which there was heard a dreadful rolling like the beating of a drum. The air was calm and the ſky ſerene, except a few clouds, ſuch as are frequently obſerved.

The noiſe proceeded from a ſmall cloud, which had a rectangular form, the largeſt ſide being in a direction from eaſt to weſt. It appeared motionleſs all the time that the phenomenon laſted. But the vapour of which it was compoſed, was projected momentarily from the different ſides by the effect of the ſucceſſive exploſions. This cloud was about half a league to the north north-eaſt of the town of Laigle: it was at a great elevation in the atmoſphere, for the inhabitants of the two hamlets, a league diſtant from each other, ſaw it at the ſame time above their heads. In the whole portion over which this cloud hovered, a hiſſing noiſe like that of a ſtone diſcharged from a ſling was heard, and a multitude of mineral maſſes exactly ſimilar to thoſe diſtinguiſhed by the name of meteoric ſtones, were ſeen to fall at the ſame time.

The diſtrict in which the ſtones fell, forms an elliptical figure of about two leagues and a half in length, and nearly one in breadth, the greateſt dimenſion being in a direction from ſouth-eaſt to north-weſt, forming a declination of about 22 degrees. This direction which the meteors muſt have followed, is exactly that of the magnetic meridian; which is a remarkable circumſtance.

The largeſt of theſe ſtones fell at the ſouth eaſt extremity of the large axis of the ellipſe; the middle fixed one fell in the centre, the ſmalleſt at the other extremity. It thereby appears that the largeſt fell firſt, as might naturally be ſuppoſed.

The largeſt of all thoſe which fell weigh 17½ pounds. The ſmalleſt I law about two grains, which is the thouſandth part of the former.

The number that fell is certainly above two or three thouſand.

In this account I have confined myſelf to a ſimple relation of facts; I have endeavoured to view it in as any other perſon would have done, at the ſame time employed every care to preſent them with exactneſs. I leave to the ſagacity of philoſophy the diſcuſſion of conſequences that may be deduced from them. I ſhall conſider myſelf happy if they and that I have ſucceeded in placing beyond a doubt the moſt aſtoniſhing phenomenon ever obſerved by man.

ON THE INSEPARABLE CONNECTION OF THE AGRICULTURAL AND COMMERCIAL INTERESTS.

NOTHING can be more ſtupid than it would be for the body of farmers to endeavour to cramp and diſcourage navigation and commerce, or for the body of merchants to deſpiſe agriculture; becauſe the fortunes of theſe two claſſes of people are intimately and inſeparably connected. Agriculture is the baſis of commerce, and commerce cheriſhes agriculture—like the fair betchnait, the farmer would have no market for his ſurplage of his produce, and without a market, he would have no encouragement to exert himſelf vigorouſly and extenſively in the line of his buſineſs.

The farmer furniſhes the ſtuff of buſineſs to the merchant and navigator, and theſe take off of the hands of the farmer the ſurpluſſes of his produce, which they convey to diſtant climes: and from thence they bring back to the farmer, at a reaſonable rate of purchaſe, a variety of pleaſure and conveniences unknown to that perfect ſtate of ſociety has rendered neceſſary. That there is between them a conſtant reciprocity of benefits.

Countries, upon whoſe ſhores and in whoſe boſom few or no ſhips unfurl their ſails, impoſe on the riſe of the ground the hard and double neceſſity of ſelling extremely cheap and purchaſing extremely dear.

In Siberia in Ruſſia, according to the late account of Kotzebue, who was baniſhed thither by the Emperor Paul, a loaf of wheat-flour bread weighing ſix pounds, ſells only for two French ſols, yearly equal to three cents; beef and fowl ſell at one ſol and an half, that is a little more than one cent; and butter at between three and four French ſols, that is, from two to three cents a pound. On the other hand, the farmer, in that uncommercial country, has to give a much greater price for his proviſions. A quart of brandy coſts two roubles and an half; ſugar is a rouble a pound—a rouble being the ſame in value as our dollar.

ESSAY ON SPEECH AND THOUGHT.

In a Letter to a Friend.

SIR,—

Speech and Thought are two Siſters: the youngeſt whereof being Speech. She created that the eldeſt might be known. The tongue is that which containeth all the good or evil of man; it is the needle of the great ſhip of the ſoul that muſt ſteer all hearts, the image of our actions, the interpreter of our wills, and the principal key of converſation. He that will now-a-days live in the World, muſt have a veil over his eyes, a key on his ears; a compaſs on his lips—a veil over his eyes, not to ſee; or in ſeeing to diſſemble many things. A key on his ears, to ſhut them againſt the language of evil tongues. A compaſs on his lips, to meaſure and ſquare out all his words with diſcretion.—That which thy tongue would yeſterday repent, let the ſame morrow be thy counſellor to him abſent. The tongue is the mind's Interpreter; the pen is the tongue's ſecretary.

Take heed what, to whom, where, and how thou ſpeakeſt; the tongue is the helm of the body; ſo that, if it be raſh, it muſt needs miſlead the courſe of our whole lives. Whether our idle diſcourſe affect or offend the company, we are reproveable in both theſe effects: for the ſcandal when they are diſtaſted—but much more for the temptation when they are reliſhed. Such a ſpeech as may probably derogate from the fame and good repute of our neighbour, though it be done in ever ſo graceful or facetious a manner, hath ſtill the deformity of ſin, lying under the fineſt coverings any fancy can caſt over it, and conſequently ought not to be admitted into good company upon the recommendation of never ſo handſome a clothier. Let thoſe that are ſo baſhful and cautious in any indecent diſcovery of their bodies, know that the admiſſion of wantonneſs in words, is a deſection of the nakedneſs of their mind, which may prove the far more dangerous temptation. I do not ſay but their honor may be kept alive to this air of idle diſcourſe, but certainly the unwholeſomeneſs thereof endureth but a cruſty conſtitution.—Among ſtones, the Almond-tree is the firſt that bloſſometh, and the firſt that is pinched by the froſt; and amongſt the parts of man, the Tongue firſt of all cometh forth to the field, and is the firſt ſurpriſed in the ſnares of ſin. Intemperance of Speech is an evidently ſtrong and an inſeparable companion of Idleneſs, the gate of flander, and the architect of lying.

Diſcretion of ſpeech is more than eloquence; and to ſpeak agreeable to him with whom we deal, is more than to ſpeak in good words and in good order. A good continued ſpeech, without a good ſpeech of intercourſion, then with flowiers; a good reply, without a good reſpeech, then with hallowiſh—As we ſee in thoſe, thoſe that are weakeſt to the courſe, are numbered as the ſtars. A trembling race is the true herald of a virtuous meaning.

MISCELLANY.

IT appears, at firſt thought, very aſtoniſhing that the Britiſh Iſland, which is only a little ſpeck on the map of the world, ſhould be able to diſplay unrivalled power over the ocean, and to extend its conqueſts to the utmoſt parts of the globe; and at the ſame time, remain unconſidered at home. On due reflection, however, it is evident that the inſular ſituation of Britain, and the ſeamenneſs of its territory, by which it ſeemed to be marked with the original features of imbecility, have, in fact, been the ground-work of its moſt martime ſtrength. Thoſe Iſlanders, having been often invaded by their continental neighbours, created a navy, at firſt, from the principle of neceſſity, and merely for ſelf-defence. By reaſon of the narrow limits of their territory, many of them were induced and even conſtrained to ſeek their livelihood from the water. As they had many hands and but little land, a ſimilar neceſſity ſtimulated their attention to the various branches of manufactures. Manufactures led to foreign commerce; and this demanded an increaſe of ſhipping, as well to guard it, as for tranſportation. At length, there was awakened an ambition to make foreign conqueſts and to rule the Ocean; and the Britons have effected their objects, by means of the advantages ſpring from their inſular ſituation. Begirt by the ſea and ſurrounded with armed ſhips, they can annoy others without being annoyed themſelves. While they carry on war and invade nations abroad, they are impregnable againſt inſultion at home.—Xenophon, who recounts a time when the Iſland of Britain was inhabited by naked ſavages, and long before it was known to the more civiliſed parts of the world, has deſcribed the ſituation, and the advantages reſulting from it, with remarkable exactneſs, in his remarks upon Athens.

"Athens, ſays Xenophon, rules the ſea; but as the country of Attica is joined to the continent, it is ravaged by enemies, when the Athenians are engaged in diſtant expeditions. If the Athenians (continued this ancient writer) inhabited an iſland, and beſides this, enjoyed the empire of the ſea, they would, as long as they were maſters of theſe advantages, be able to annoy others, and at the ſame time be out of all danger of being annoyed themſelves."

AMUSEMENT!

BRUISING MATCH.

Yeſterday Jack O'Donnell, about twenty years of age, and Caleb Baldwin, about thirty-ſix, met purſuant to agreement on Wimpleton common. The ring was formed about one o'clock. The odds at ſetting out were in favour of young O'Donnell, and during the firſt and ſecond rounds he ſupported the hopes of his friends; but after that Caleb threw in a ſtraight forward hit—which for-ward hit ſeemed in each to diſcompoſe the young Champion. He, however, thought that his youth and agility, would ſoon recover the injury he had ſuſtained. The bets then became equal. After that the young lad attempted a trick, and hoped to have been ſucceſsful in giving his antagoniſt a croſs buttock, but Caleb threw in a ſtraight arm and weakened him, by which means he ſoon attacked the young lad at his favourite point, gave him a croſs buttock, and ſmote him on the go. The young lad, however, was not capable of riſking much longer, and ſoon he had got a peeper to the boot. In the firſt round, the conteſt was for 50 guineas a ſide. George Maddox and William Gibbons were ſeconds and bottle holder for Caleb Baldwin; Dan. M'Ever and W. Lenox were for young O'Donnell. The fight laſted only 17 minutes, and there was only one knock-down blow, which was given by Caleb, and which ſent his antagoniſt at leaſt two yards from him.

After the above three were two other battles, occaſioned by diſputes which aroſe on the ground. One particularly ſanguinary, long to be remembered by many, who ſerves the cuſtomers of Beſt-bet's houſe and a ſhoemaker. They fought ſo hard, that at laſt they could only offer a blow; whichever attempted to give it, was ſure to fall firſt himſelf.

Both parties remained inſenſible, and the ring of ſpectators humanely interfered, ſaying, that the men were only falling againſt each other: they thought that it would be very wrong to continue the engagement, as each was only capable of hurting himſelf by the fall—therefore, contrary to the wiſh of both contending parties, they forced it to be drawn battle.

BLOOD HOUND.

The Thraſſton Aſſociation for the proſecution of Felons, and Encouragement of Bloodhounds, trained a blood-hound for the deſtruction of ſheep-ſtealers. To prove the utility of the hound, the 28th ult. was appointed for the purpoſe of exerciſing it. The perſon he was to hunt ſtarted at ten o'clock in the forenoon, in the preſence of a conſiderable concourſe of people, and at eleven the hound was let looſe; when after a chaſe of an hour and a half, notwithſtanding a very indifferent ſcent, the hound found him ſecreted on a tree, at the diſtance of fifteen miles.

GUN POWDER.

The following calculations on the uſe of this moſt important article, are from the pen of an able correſpondent:—"The number of volunteers he takes at 350,000. Thoſe who fire with powder once a week, he reckons at 200,000. Each volunteer in this caſe he ſuppoſes to conſume only three ounces of powder. This, however, gives the enormous amount of 37,500lb. of powder, or nearly 17 tons, conſumed per week.

There is a paſſage in one of the prayers appointed for the late Faſt Day, which beſpeaks the liberality of the age, and does great honour to the Right Reverend compiler. The paſſage to which we allude is in theſe remarkable words:—

"Give us all grace to put away from us all rancour of religious diſſention, that they who agree in the eſſentials of our moſt holy faith, and look for pardon through the merits and interceſſion of the Saviour, may, notwithſtanding their difference upon points of doubtful opinion, and in the forms of EXTERNAL WORSHIP, ſtill be united in the bond of Chriſtian charity, and fulfil the bleſſed Son's commandment of loving one another, &c." THE ORACLE.

YORK:—SATURDAY, MARCH 10.

Yeſterday at one o'clock, his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor came in ſtate to the Upper Houſe of Legiſlature, to Prorogue the two Houſes of Parliament, and being ſeated on the Throne, commanded, by meſſage through the Gentleman Uſher of the Black Rod, the attendance of the Houſe of Aſſembly, in the Legiſlative Council Chamber, and the Houſe of Aſſembly having attended accordingly, his Excellency was pleaſed to give the Royal Aſſent to the following Bills:—

No. 1.—An ACT for the exemplary puniſhment of all and every perſon and perſons who ſhall ſeduce, or attempt to ſeduce, or aid or aſſiſt, or attempt to aid or aſſiſt, any Soldier to deſert his Majeſty's ſervice, or who ſhall harbor, conceal, receive or aſſiſt any Deſerter from ſuch ſervice.

No. 2.—An ACT for the better ſecuring the Province againſt all tedious attempts or deſigns to diſturb the tranquility of this Province.

No. 3.—An ACT to repeal certain parts of an Act paſſed in the thirty-fourth year of his Majeſty's reign, intituled, "An Act to eſtabliſh a ſu-"perior Court of Civil and Criminal Juriſ-"diction, and to regulate the Court of Ap-"peals; and to authoriſe his Majeſty's Court "of King's-Bench in this Province to regu-"late certain fees, coſts and charges therein "mentioned."

No. 4.—An ACT to promulgate the Provincial Statutes and alſo to repeal ſo much of an Act paſſed in the forty-ſixth year of the reign of his preſent Majeſty, as relates to Printing the Journals.

No. 5.—An ACT to explain and amend an Act paſſed in the forty-third year of his Majeſty's reign intituled, "An Act for the better le-"vying of his Majeſty, his heirs and ſuc-"ceſſors, the due collection and receipt of "certain Duties therein mentioned."

No. 6.—An ACT for granting to his Majeſty, a certain ſum of money out of the funds applicable to the uſes of this Province, to defray the expences of amending and repairing the Public Highways and Roads, laying out and opening new Roads, and building Bridges in the ſeveral Diſtricts thereof.

No. 7.—An ACT for granting to his Majeſty, a certain ſum of money for the purpoſes therein mentioned.

No. 8.—An ACT appropriating a certain ſum of money annually, to defray the expences of erecting certain Public Buildings, to and for the uſes of this Province.

No. 9.—An ACT for applying a certain ſum of money therein mentioned, to make good certain monies iſſued and advanced by his Majeſty through the Lieutenant Governor, in purſuance of an Addreſs.

No. 10.—An ACT for granting to his Majeſty, a certain ſum of money for the further encouragement of the growth and cultivation of Hemp within this Province, and the exportation thereof.

No. 11.—An ACT to repeal ſo much of an Act paſſed in the thirty-fourth year of his Majeſty's reign, intituled, "An Act to regulate the cuſ-"tom of permitting Horned Cattle, Horſes, "Sheep and Swine to run at large," as relates to Sheep, and to reſtrain the owners of Rams from permitting them to run at large, during a certain time of the year.

After which his Excellency was pleaſed to make the following Speech to both Houſes of Parliament:—

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legiſlative Council And Gentlemen of the Houſe of Aſſembly,

YOUR zeal for the Public welfare manifeſted by your attention to the various ſubjects which I recommended to your conſideration, and to the other Objects which have occupied your Councils during the preſent Seſſion call for my acknowledgements, and I trust that the wise and salutary Laws, which have resulted from your Labors and Exertions, will afford very considerable satisfaction to all who feel a sincere attachment to His Majesty's Person and Government, and a cordial Solicitude for the increasing prosperity of this Province.

In closing the present Session, which the situation of the Public business now enables me to do, I have to express a confident hope, that prudent and salutary measures will mark the future conduct of those who may be called together in this place for the discharge of their Legislative Functions.—This will not fail to insure the favor of the best of Sovereigns, will establish a claim to the Esteem and Approbation of all whose good opinion merits consideration, and must eventually produce the most beneficial consequences, to these parts of His Majesty's Dominions.

His Excellency was then pleased to prorogue the Provincial Parliament to Monday the 16th day of April next.

PARODY.

Let remember well a Misfortune,
Mr. Cockpit's gloom he mark'd, when late I view'd
Inflation's fatal march made up of daily plain meals,
Cobbling a boot: desponding were his looks,
Promotion long deferr'd had sour'd his phiz.
An empty bottle on a greasy table stood before him,
Wherein small flock a shilling sunk:
Which glimmer'd round a solitary ray;
The pending duel was recall'd to mind with pangs;
Short victuals, and fragment of a pipe.
Hamilton Moore, friend's Lift, with Better'd day's; whilst and taylor's bill not paid,
Made up the scene.
Wishing this misery, to myself I said,
Amidst St. Vincent had a spare commission,
Add wish'd to make a fun of Mutiny happen
Me there might find an equal supply of it.

MR. ST. GEORGE informs his Friends and Customers, that he has received all his GROCERIES, and that they are now ready for him at his Store.

Proclamation.

PETER HUNTER, Esquire,
Lieutenant Governor of His Majesty's Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General commanding His Majesty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME,—GREETING:

WHEREAS the Lieutenant Governor in Council has granted Leases of several Tracts of Land, part of which was of the Reserves of the Crown, and other part was of the Lands set apart and reserved for the use of a Protestant Clergy, AND WHEREAS, upon such Leases, certain Rents were reserved to his Majesty and made payable by the Lessees, at days limited and particularly specified in each respective Lease, and the rents upon some of such Leases have already accrued due.

And whereas the Sheriffs of the several Districts of this Province have been appointed by the Lieutenant Governor to receive all Rents due or to accrue due on all such Leases, as well on the Crown as the Clergy Reserves.

And whereas in pursuance of the Commands of the Lieutenant Governor, Shedules have been transmitted to the respective Sheriffs of the different Districts of this Province; in which Shedules are particularly set forth the names and descriptions of the Lessees, together with the Concession, Township, County and District in which such Lands so held under such Leases respectively lie and are situate, with a statement also of the particular Rent reserved on every such Leafe, and the days and times on which such Rent already has accrued or will hereafter become due.

NOW THEREFORE be it known to all whom it may concern, That all and every person and persons, now holding any such Leafe or Leases as aforesaid, is and are required to make payment of the Rents, reserved and made payable, either on Leases granted of the Reserves of the Crown, or of the Reserves set apart for the use of a Protestant Clergy, to the different Sheriffs of the respective Districts within which all such Lands severally lay or are situate at the times and periods on which such Rents are reserved, in strict conformity with the covenants and stipulations entered into by the said several Lessees with his Majesty, and that in default of such payments being punctually and regularly made, his Majesty's Attorney General will be instructed forthwith to institute proceedings against every such Lessee for enforcing such payment and for resuming the Lands, in respect of which such default shall be made, into the hands of the Crown, such being the conditions upon which the Lands have been demised, and such conditions having been particularly specified in all the Leases which have been granted.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms at York, this fourteenth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, and in the forty-third year of his Majesty's reign.

P. HUNTER, Lt. Govr.

By his Excellency's Command,
WM. JARVIS, Sec'y.

UPPER CANADA.

PETER HUNTER, Esquire,
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR OF THE PROVINCE OF UPPER CANADA, AND LIEUTENANT GENERAL COMMANDING HIS MAJESTY'S FORCES IN UPPER AND LOWER CANADA, &c. &c.

WHEREAS great prejudice hath arisen to the Inhabitants of the Town and Township of YORK, and of other adjoining Townships, from no place or day having been set apart or appointed for exposing publicly for Sale, Cattle, Sheep, Poultry, and other Provisions, Goods and Merchandize, brought by Merchants, Farmers, and others, for the necessary supply of the said Town of YORK;

AND WHEREAS great benefit and advantage might be derived to the said Inhabitants and others, by establishing a Weekly Market within that Town, at a place and on a day certain for the purpose aforesaid—KNOW ALL MEN, That I, PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province, taking the Premises into consideration, and willing to promote the interest, advantage and accommodation of the Inhabitants of the Town and Township aforesaid, and of others His Majesty's Subjects within the said Province, by and with the advice of the Executive Council thereof, have ordained, erected, established and appointed, and do hereby ordain, erect, establish and appoint, A PUBLIC OPEN MARKET, to be held on SATURDAY, in each and every week during the year, within the said Town of YORK: (The first Market to be held therein on SATURDAY, the FIFTH DAY of NOVEMBER next, after the date of these Presents) on a certain piece or plot of Land within that Town, consisting of five Acres and a half, commencing at the South East angle of the said plot, at the corner of Market-street and New street, then North sixteen degrees West five chains seventeen links, more or less, to King's-street; then along King-street South seventy-four degrees West nine chains fifty-one links, more or less, to Church-street; then South sixteen degrees East six chains thirty-four links, more or less, to Market-street; then along Market-street North seventy-four degrees East two chains; then North sixty-four degrees East along Market-street seven chains sixty links, more or less, to the place of beginning—for the purpose of exposing for Sale, CATTLE, SHEEP, POULTRY, and other Provisions, GOODS and MERCHANDIZE, as aforesaid.

GIVEN under my Hand, and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this twenty-fifth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, and in the forty fourth year of His Majesty's Reign.

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE FROM THE 24th MARCH, 1803.

Sec. 4. Pa. 12 12. SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

* A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve abroad as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in cases where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier so Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other Lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 3. Page 13. Where a Court Martial, either in the cases of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is impowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by such order of his Majesty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 6. Page 11. Persons harbouring, concealing, or assisting Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of Five Pounds as in former Acts.

Sec. 60. Page 44. The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

This Section has been altered, so as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places Sec. 62. Page 45. on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War-Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY,

During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec. 16. Page 24. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary course of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42nd Geo. III. chap. 90 § 12, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to sentence Deserters belonging to those Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be sent out of Great Britain) to serve in his Majesty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of service.

TO BE SOLD,

THE House and Lot in King-Street, now occupied by Mr. Thomas Hamilton, Tax-Acceper, for which an indisputable Title will be given, and the terms made as easy as possible to the Purchaser. Application to be made to PATRICK BEALEY at the Gaol. York, Feb. 10, 1804.

PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT OF LOWER CANADA.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER,
Monday, 13th February, 1804.

THIS day His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor went in State to the Legislative Council, and being seated on the Throne with the usual solemnity, the Usher of the Black Rod was sent with a Message from His Excellency to the House of Assembly, signifying his pleasure that they should immediately attend him in the Council Chamber. The Assembly being come thither accordingly, his Excellency was pleased to make the following SPEECH:—

Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

"AT this interesting and important crisis, you must, I am perswaded, with hearts more than commonly anxious to provide for the security, the tranquility, and the happiness of this Province, and under this perswasion, I feel that I have only to point to the measures which I conceive most conducive to that end.

"The alacrity with which you received, in the last Session, the Acts "for establishing regulations respecting Aliens," and "for the better preservation of his Majesty's Government," so strongly shews your sense of the importance of those Acts to the internal security and welfare of the Province, that it will be sufficient for me barely to suggest, that the circumstances of the present time appear still more strongly to demand a continuance of those judicious and salutary provisions.

"Nor after four years experience of its effects, need I, I am perswaded, do more than remind you that the humane and beneficent Act "for the relief of insane persons and for the support of foundlings," will expire with the present Session.

"The repeated occurrence of accidents by fire, and the serious losses consequent upon them, call upon me, in a particular manner, again to direct your attention to this subject, and to express my earnest hope, that the present Session will not pass without such a provision by law as may be of immediate and comprehensible utility.

"The loss of the Prison at Montreal by one of these calamitous accidents, and the difficulty of providing a safe and proper place of confinement for the prisoners, obliged me to lose no time in directing such a reparation of the old Gaol as was necessary to render it secure as a tenant prison.

"An account of the expence incurred upon this occasion, I shall order to be laid before you.

Gentlemen of the Assembly,

"I shall cause Statements of the Provincial Revenue of the Crown for the last year to be laid before you, and also of the Civil expenditure for the same period.

Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

"In proceeding to the consideration of the several subjects to which I have adverted, as well as such others as may also before you in the course of this Session, you will not fail to keep in mind the important advantages which have resulted from the unanimity, as well as from the energy with which the public affairs have been conducted in the Parent State, and you will, I am confident, be zealous of manifesting a like unanimity in the proceedings of this Provincial Parliament.

"I have, indeed, in every Session of the present Parliament, had experience so satisfactory of your dutiful affection to the person of our most gracious King, and your unremitting attention to the interests of his Government, that I do, with the greatest reason, confidently rely upon a continuance of them in the present emjunctures.

"I will do my part.—I earnestly and strongly recommend to you unanimity and vigour in the dispatch of public business, and you will, I am assured, be desirous of shewing to your Sovereign, that your hearty zeal for his Service, and just concern for the security and prosperity of this Province, are incapable of relaxation or decline.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Tuesday, 14th February, 1804.

The Legislative Council, this day, waited on his Excellency with their Address, in answer to the Lieutenant Governor's Speech at the opening of the Session, which is as followeth:—

To his Excellency Sir ROBERT SHORE MILNES, Bart. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

May it please your Excellency,

WE his Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Legislative Council of Lower Canada, in Provincial Parliament assembled, humbly beg leave to offer to your Excellency our warm thanks for your Excellency's Speech from the Throne.

Your Excellency does us but justice in believing that we feel as we ought to do the importance of the present moment, not only to the United Kingdom and its dependencies, but to the whole human race.

But we have no fears for the event: we trust that the virtues of our great and excellent Sovereign will bring down a blessing upon his people, and that the valour, the skill and the discipline of his naval and military forces, seconded by the ardent and unanimous loyalty of his other subjects, will under Divine Providence, enable him to defeat every attempt of our restless and implacable enemy.

In continuing, therefore in this colony the measures which have been taken for the preservation of public tranquility and security, and in adopting with the vigour and unanimity so forcibly recommended by your Excellency such others as may be judged necessary for that purpose we know that we shall obtain your Excellency's approbation; but at the same time we shall be conscious that we shall have discharged but the duty we owe to ourselves; deeply sensible of the happiness we enjoy as a branch of the British empire, and satisfied that in this influence our duty and our interest are the same, we too are anxious to do our parts, and shall feel no common degree of satisfaction in concurring in such further measures as may actively and usefully evince our gratitude for the protection to which we owe an extensive commerce, or daily improving agriculture, and the perfect possession of civil and religious freedom.

To which Address his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor was pleased to make the following Answer:

"GENTLEMEN;

"I heartily thank you for the Address, so expressive of your loyalty to your Sovereign, and of your earnest desire to promote the welfare and happiness of this Province. The confidence you repose in me calls for my warmest acknowledgments."

To his Excellency Sir ROBERT SHORE MILNES, Bart. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

May it please your Excellency,

WE his Majesty's loyal and dutiful subjects, the Representatives of the Commons of Lower Canada, in Provincial Parliament assembled, beg leave to offer to your Excellency our acknowledgments for your gracious Speech to both Houses on the opening of the present Session; and to assure your Excellency that in this interesting and important crisis, we shall with unanimity and zeal use our utmost efforts to provide for the security, the tranquility and the happiness of this Province.

Perfuaded as we are that the acts for establishing regulations respecting aliens, and for the better preservation of his Majesty's government, effectually contribute to the uninterrupted enjoyment of the tranquility, and to the welfare of this Province, your Excellency may rely on our readiness to continue their judicious and salutary provisions.

The beneficial effects which by experience have been found to result from the Act for the relief of insane persons, and for the support of foundlings, purpose on us the duty of renewing so humane and beneficent an act.

The repeated occurrence of accidents by fire, makes us feel with your Excellency the necessity of directing our immediate attention to so important a subject, we have to regret that other matters of first necessity, have hitherto prevented us from attending fully to this object; we assure your Excellency that no time shall now be lost in making those provisions which the exigency of the case appears to require.

The measures adopted by your Excellency in providing a temporary prison at Montreal call for our sincere acknowledgments; We shall provide for the reimbursement of the expences thereby occasioned, and at the same time beg leave to assure you that we shall devote our attention to the means necessary for erecting a sufficient and permanent prison for that District.

The important advantages which have resulted from the unanimity as well as from the energy with which the Public affairs have been conducted in the Parent State, cannot fail to engage us to follow an example so impressive, and which we trust will here be productive of similar effects. We hope therefore your Excellency will be perfuaded that should any difference of opinion arise, it can only be as to the means of giving effect to that zeal by which we are all animated for the support of the Government and the happiness of the Province.

Nothing can be more grateful to Us than the honorable testimony which your Excellency is pleased to bear to our sentiments of Loyalty and attachment to the sacred person of our most gracious Sovereign.

The interests of His Majesty and those of His faithful subjects of this Province We consider as inseparable, and We assure him in the most solemn manner that we are by affection as well as interest wholly devoted to his service.

To which His Excellency was pleased to make the following Reply.

GENTLEMEN,

I return You my warmest thanks for this loyal Address and for the assurance it contains of your hearty desire to purfue such measures as may best support His Majesty's government and which the well being of this Province is so closely connected.

LONDON, NOVEMBER 12.

The Speech of the Duke of CLARENCE to the Tottingham Corps, ought to be written in characters of gold, and published throughout the country — "My friends and neighbours! Wherever our duties call us, I will go with you; fight by your ranks, and never return home without you!"

MISERABLE STATE OF HANOVER.

The following Letter is said to come from good authority:—

"I have learned that the French, on the furrender of Wahmeding, immediately took into employ, and increased the pay of the foregoing attached to the Hanoverian army. Indeed, according to his statement, it is the peculiar study of the French to conciliate all the men of information with whom they meet.—Even those of comparatively inferior talents, who may have any importance or influence in the humbleft villages, they endeavour to attach to them, in order to employ fuch inftruments in reconciling the country to their dominion; but yet it feems they have not fucceeded in obtaining the fupport of any men of eminence in literature, or any poffeffing much perfonal conſequence. And how is it poffible that they could perfuade any perſons who reſpect character, or regard their country, to plead for the ſyſtem which they purſue?

"My informant, who left Hanover only five weeks ago, ſays, that there were then about 20,000 French troops in the Electorate, and that the ravages they committed were intolerable, even to the pooreſt peaſantry. He mentioned ſome inſtances which are fcarcely to be paralleled, even by the conduct of the Spaniards towards the natives of Peru. They went on ſomewhat ſmoothly for a time after they got poſſeſſion of the country; but for a conſiderable time back they levied the moſt exorbitant contributions.

"Murtier obliges the people to advance double pay for his troops. He merely conſults the States as to the beſt means of collecting this tax, one half of which it is ſuppoſed goes into his own private coffers, although he mentions the whole is to be fairly diſtributed among his forces, as a reward for their fatigues. By ſuch means as theſe, Maſſena and other Generals contrived to enrich themſelves in Italy and Germany. Any Hanoverian who ſhould preſume to pay his proportion of the contribution, his property, however poor he may be, is taken and inſtantly ſold.

"The repeated occurrence of accidents by fire, makes us feel with your Excellency the neceſſity of directing our immediate attention to ſo important a ſubject, we have to regret that other matters of firſt neceſſity, have hitherto prevented us from attending fully to this object; we aſſure your Excellency that no time ſhall now be loſt in making thoſe proviſions which the exigency of the caſe appears to require."

FALMOUTH, November 8.

Arrived the Duke of Kent packet, Capt. Dennis, with mails from Jamaica and Cruicked Island; ſailed from Port Royal the 12th of Sept. in company with his Majeſty's ſhip Blanche, of 36 guns; left there La Duguelin, of 74 guns; Creole, of 48; Mignionne, of 24; Lodi, of 20; Delgulle and Vigilante, of 16 each, (French priſes;) on the 22d Sept. ſell in with two ſchooners, having on board a number of white inhabitants from St. Domingo, flying from the iſland, to avoid falling into the hands of the Negroes; they reported that one of our frigates had run aſhore at Cape Francois, and was burnt; crew ſaved.

Alſo arrived laſt night the Mary cutter, Lieutenant Milne, from the ſquadron off Ferrol, having on board Gen. Baird and ſuite, who had on the paſſage from India to England, on board the Perſeverance ſouthwhaler, been captured by a French privateer, and retaken juſt entering the harbour of Corunna, by his Majeſty's ſhip Sirius, of 36 guns, Capt. Prowſe, detached on ſhore by Lord Edward Pellew. The French ſquadron at Ferrol were lying at ſingle anchor, ready for a ſtart. The Mary ſell in with the Channel fleet off Uſhant, conſiſting of 16 ſail of the line.

PLYMOUTH, Nov. 8.

Arrived, richly laden, a Batavian Eaſt Indiaman, from Batavia to Amſterdam, captured in the chops of the Channel by the Sufffiante ſloop of war.

By order of Major General England, orders were iſſued to the Princeſs of Wale's battalion, Lieutenant Col. Hawker, and the 2d battalion of Plymouth Volunteers, Lieut. Col. Langmead, to be called out on permanent pay and duty; but, to make it convenient, one-third of the 2d battalion is only to be called out at a time, for 14 days onecide and gurrilon duty, and ſo one third in ſucceſſion.

Orders were iſſued late laſt night to the cutters and launches of the fleet, by Admiral Sir J. Colpoys, K. B. to be alongſide all the priſon ſhips in Hamoaze at five this morning, to take out all the French and Dutch priſoners, and march them to the interior of the country, ſo as to prevent their eſcape on the coaſt on this part by the enemy; in conſequence of which 300 priſoners were landed at Stoke Paſſage, at 7 A. M. and are now at ten A. M. marching through this town for Beſſed, under a ſtrong eſcort of the 81ſt regiment; three hundred are gone by the way of Taviſtock. It is ſuppoſed the priſon ſhips will be cleared in the courſe of this week.

LAND-TAX.

In the department of the Schelt, (formerly a part of Auſtrian Flanders). This department, in extent, is a 230th part of the republic; it pays a 58th part of the land-tax.—So much for French liberty, and reſpect to grant their lawful ſovereign a moderate tax, to enable him to defend them.

Manche. The land-tax amounts to one half of the net rent.

Rhone. In many of the communes it amounts to two-thirds of the net rent.

Saone (haute). In granting new leaſes, the proprietors of lands are obliged to lower their rents a 4th or a 5th below its amount in 1790.

AGRICULTURE.

Sarre. Agriculture is entirely neglected. For want of markets, the farmers are obliged to ſow no more than ſuffices for their families, and their cattle.

SHEEP.

Seine (inferieure). The number of ſheep is diminiſhed one-third ſince 1790.

WOLVES.

Aiſne. The number of wolves is greatly increaſed.

Cantal. The increaſe of wolves is very alarming.

Levret. Wolves have multiplied to an alarming extent; the damage they commit is incalculable.

Vendee. Wolves attack the cattle, and carry them off even from their ſtalls.

COMMERCE.

Finiſterre. Foreign commerce is annihilated.—Three fourths of the coaſters have been captured or deſtroyed.

Manche. The only remains of our commerce is a few fiſhing-boats, and a few privateers.

Mont Tonnerre. Smuggling is become very injurious to our commerce; the cuſtom-houſe officers are engaged in this traffic.

HOSPITALS.

Bouches du Rhone. All the hoſpitals in this department are in a wretched ſtate.

Creuſe. The ſtate of the hoſpitals is worſe than it was laſt year; they will ſoon ceaſe to exiſt.

Gard. The diſtreſs of the hoſpitals, in this department, is great.

They require, annually,	Livres	230,470
Their revenues amount to	-	98,138
They are in arrear	-	215,931
They have debts	-	1,861,760

Landes. The hoſpitals are threatened with total deſtruction: the ſick can procure neither food nor medicine.

FOUNDLINGS.

Allier. The nurſes have five years wages due them; they will, therefore, receive no more foundlings. Nine tenths are loſt.

Cantal. Extreme penury obliges this department to feed its foundlings with goat's milk. Seven eighths die before they are one year old.

Charante (inferieure). Of two hundred infants received at Saintes, only one has lived.

Creuſe. Twelve or fifteen are ſuckled by two nurſes.

Pyrenees (hautes). Between the years 2 and 9, 3066 infants were received into the hoſpital at Tarbes: there are only 124 alive.

SOLICITATIONS FOR RELIEF.

Gard. The landholders are ruined, and even no longer cultivate their vine-yards. An immenſe number of the labourers are without bread, and are reduced to deſperation.

Nord. The fields have been ſtripped, the proprietors plundered, their houſes burnt; and yet the inexorable collectors of the revenue preſs on receiving the taxes.

PRISONS.

Aveyron. The dungeons at Ville Franche are ſo damp, that ſtraw, placed there, rots immediately. No where are the women ſeparated from the men; or the convicted from thoſe who are ſimply detained.

Bouches du Rhone. When the Rhone is high, the waters filter through the walls, and inundate the cells at Tarraſcon. No one comes out without a rheumatiſm for life.

Manche. The priſon at Mortain has no roof: the court-yard of this priſon is a complete common ſewer.

Meurne. The priſon is in ſuch a ſtate, that the priſoners are threatened with inſtant death by its fall.

Oiſe. A dungeon, 10 feet ſquare, 7 feet high, and 3 feet below the level of the ground, conſtitutes the priſon at Beauvais. The innocent, the accuſed, and convicted, without diſtinction of age or ſex, are all heaped together in this horrid tomb. During the year 9, it has received altogether 2,278 priſoners.

GREAT ROADS.

The roads, in every direction, are impaſſable.—Paſſages. The roads are ſo entirely ruined, that the country people carry off the ſtones to build houſes, or to form incloſures.

Var. The roads are a muddy aſhyſt, which ſometimes ſwallow up carriages, horſes, and drivers.

CROSS-ROADS.

Maine and Loire. The roads are ſo execrable, that ſome communes have no intercourſe with one another.

Nord. So bad that they can hardly be ſaid to exiſt.

CANALS.

Yonne. The canal of Burgundy, which has coſt 16,000,000 (£. 600,000 ſterling) is falling in ruins. The money it coſt will be all thrown away, if the completion is not ſpeedily attended to.

PORTS.

The works at Cherbourg have been neglected, and are in a ſtate of ruin.

PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

Aiſne. All the ſchools have been ſhut: the children are left in a ſtate of idleneſs and vagrancy; they have no idea of a Supreme Being, and no notion of right and wrong.

Forets. 999 perſons, in the country, can ſign their names.

Meuſe (inferieure). It is to be feared that in 15 years not one perſon, in a hundred, will be able to write.

REGISTERS.

Allier. Not only ignorance, but wilful miſtatements are found in the regiſters. To ſave perſons from military conſcription, entries have been made from which it appears that a woman, forty years old, has married thirty-ſix conſcripts; and a mother ſix years old, has been delivered of a ſon.

MESSRS. PRINTERS,

Doubting not your readineſs to give a place to every thing within your power that would tend in the leaſt degree to promote Virtue, or prevent Vice, I have ſent you the following for inſertion; it happened in New York, was there printed and ſold by ſeveral, and was afterwards republiſhed in Europe, from whence it is now copied by one of your friends and conſtituents.

"A Gentleman in the medical line was ſome time ſince requeſted to viſit a patient, and was conducted up three pair of ſtairs into a gloomy, ſhabby, diſagreeable apartment; when he entered the few tew young ſtraws makes ſetting on the ſide of a very poorly furniſhed bed, and without curtains, on appearing he found one of them nearly in the agonies of death; ſupported by the other, who was perſuading her to take a little of bread dip't in ſpirits; but the pale emaciated figure refuſed, ſaying in a feeble languid voice, it would but contribute to prolong her miſery, which the hoped was drawing to an end; and looking at the doctor, ſaid, you have come too late, Sir; I want not your aſſiſtance —and thus addreſſed him—

Oh! could'ſt thou minifter to a mind diſeaſed,
Or ſtop the accuſa and paſſage to remorſe—

Here ſhe fetched a deep ſigh and drop'd upon the bed—every means of relief was afforded, but in vain; for in leſs than two hours ſhe was dead.

In a ſmall box by the ſide of the bed were found ſome papers, by which it appeared that the young woman was of a good family, and had more than an ordinary education—that ſhe had changed her name, and concealed that of her parents, from the pitied; and whole greateſt fault had been too much indulgence and a miſplaced confidence in the prudence of their favourite daughter.

On the back of ſome directions reſpecting her funeral, the following pathetic lines were written; and ſome little money in the box was obliged to have them ingraved on a tombſtone; thus—

Verſes for my Tombſtone, if ever I ſhould have one, by a proſtitute and a penitent.

THE wretched victim of a quick decay
Relies'd from life in humble bed of clay,
The laſt and only reſtige of my worth,
A loſt, love ruin'd Female I repoſe.
From the fad hour I liſtened to his charms
And fell half forc'd, in the deceivers arms,
To that whole world veil hides from every ſight,
Sheltering my ſufferings in this welcome vault.
When pamper'd, ſtarv'd, abandon'd or in drink,
My thoughts were rack'd in ſtriving not to think,
Nor could rejected confidence claim the power
T' improve the reſpite of one ſerious hour.
I durſt not look to what I was before,
My ſoul ſhrunk back, and with'd to be no more!
Of ever-ſtanding, and of touch impure,
Old, e're of age: worn out when ſcarce mature,
Daily debaſ'd to ſtifle my diſtreſs
Of ſore'd enjoyment; in affected luſt!
Cover'd with guilt, infection, debt, and want,
My home a brothel, and the ſtreets my haunt,
Full ſeven long years, of infamy I've paſſed,
And ſondl'd, loath'd and preyed upon mankind;
'Till the full courſe of ſin and vice gone through,
My ſhatter'd fabrick fail'd at twenty-two;
Then death, with every horror in the train
Here cloſed the ſcene of naught but guilt and pain!
Ye fair aſſociates of my opening bloom,
O, come and weep, and profit at my tomb!
Let my ſhort youth, my blighted beauty prove,
The fatal poiſon of unlawful love,
O, think how quick, my ſoul career'd ran,
The dupe of paſſion, vanity and man.
Then ſhun the path where gay deluſions ſhine,
Be yours the leſſon,—and repentance mine.

QUEBEC, February 9.

MARRIED,

On Monday evening, the 6th inſtant, Mr. Benjamin Joſeph Frobiſher, eldeſt ſon of Joſeph Frobiſher, Eſquire, of Montreal, to Miſs Iſabella Grant, 8th daughter to the Hon. John Craigie, and niece to the Right Hon. Sir William Grant, Knt. one of his Majeſty's Privy Counſellors and Maſter of the Rolls.

DIED,

On Monday morning the 6th inſtant, in her 16th year, Miſs Dorothea Iſabella Green, eldeſt daughter of Lieutenant Colonel Green, Civil and Military Secretary to his Excellency Lieutenant General Hunter. She was a young Lady of very uncommon merit, who poſſeſſed, united with every elegant female accompliſhment, a ſweetneſs of diſpoſition, and an affability of manners, which conciliated the warmeſt affections of all who had the pleaſure of her acquaintance. We ſeldom recollect to have witneſſed a more univerſal gloom than that which pervaded the whole ſociety upon this affecting event; and never was the tear of ſenſibility, which appeared ſo generally to every eye on the day of her interment, excited by a more deſerving object.

On Sunday, Feb. 19, aged 67 years, Mrs. Ann Caldwell, the wife of the Hon. Henry Caldwell, Eſquire, Receiver General of this Province, ſiſter of the Lord Biſhop of Oſſory and of the late Baron Hamilton of his Majeſty's Exchequer in Ireland. There have been few who have died ſo deeply regretted by a numerous circle of relations and friends as this lady, whoſe warmeſt affections ſhe conciliated by a conduct eminently diſtinguiſhed through life for all that can raiſe a character in the eſtimation of the world.

WAR-OFFICE, (London) Nov. 9, 1803.

STAFF.—Captain William Samuel Curry, of the 86th foot, to be Deputy Quarter Maſter General to the forces ſerving in both the Canadas, with the rank of Major in the army. Commiſſion dated the 25th Auguſt, 1803.

To the Free and Independent Electors of the Eaſt Riding of York.

GENTLEMEN,

THE period of the natural diſſolution of the preſent Parliament having nearly arrived, I am induced to offer myſelf as a Candidate to repreſent you in the enſuing Parliament.—In thus preſenting myſelf to your notice, I cannot refrain from obſerving, that, I ſtand unconnected with any party, unſupported by any influence, and unambitious of any patronage, other than the Suffrages of thoſe, who conſider the impartial enjoyment of their rights, and the free exerciſe of their privileges as objects not only worthy of the vigilance of the legiſlator, but alſo eſſential to their political ſecurity and to their local proſperity.

The opportunity of addreſſing myſelf to men who may be inclined to think with freedom, and to act with independency, is to me truly deſirable; and the receiving of the countenance and ſupport of thoſe characters, muſt ever leave on my mind impreſſions more than gratifying.

"It would ill accord with my ſentiments to expreſs myſelf in the uſual terms of the zeal and fidelity of an Election Candidate; inaſmuch as that the principle of previous aſſurances has frequently, in the exercite of the functions of the Repreſentative, been either forgotten or occaſionally abandoned: but I hope it will not be conſidered vaunting in me to aſſert, that, that zeal and the fidelity which have manifeſted themſelves in the diſcharge of my duty to my Clients, will not be abated in ſupporting a more important truſt——THE CAUSE OF THE PUBLIC.

I have the honor to be,
Gentlemen,
Your devoted humble Servant,
WM. WEEKS.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER Eſquire,

Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

WHEREAS by a certain Act of the Legiſlature of this Province, paſſed in the forty-fourth year of his Majeſty's reign, intituled, "An Act for granting to his "Majeſty, a certain ſum of money for "the further encouragement of the "growth and cultivation of Hemp "within this Province, and the ex-"portation thereof," it is enacted, That from and out of any fund or funds now remaining, or which may hereafter come, into the hands of the Receiver General, ariſing from and out of the rates and duties already raiſed, levied and collected, or which hereafter may be raiſed, levied and collected to and for the uſes of this Province, there be granted to his Majeſty, his heirs and ſucceſſors, the ſum of one thouſand pounds, to be diſpoſed of, appropriated and laid out as a public ſtock or capital, applicable to the purpoſe of purchaſing Hemp the growth of this Province, and of diſcharging the expences incident to ſuch purchaſes, and the exportation and ſale thereof, in ſuch manner, and under ſuch regulations, as to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government of this Province, by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council thereof, ſhould from time to time ſeem meet; And that it ſhould and may be lawful to and for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council of this Province, to iſſue one or more Proclamation or Proclamations, and therein to name ſuch and ſo many perſons within the Province as to him ſhall ſeem meet, as Commiſſioners for the purchaſing of Merchantable Hemp the growth of this Province, which ſaid Commiſſioners, or any one or more of them, are and is thereby authoriſed and empowered to purchaſe ſuch Hemp at and after the price or rate of forty pounds per ton: AND WHEREAS it is further enacted by the ſaid Act, that after the paſſing of that Act, no perſon or perſons whatſoever, ſhall be intitled to any further Bounty over and beyond the ſaid price or ſum of forty pounds per ton, or to any Premium under any Proclamation or Proclamations, heretofore iſſued by the Lieutenant Governor, for the encouragement of the growth and exportation of Hemp, for or in reſpect of any Hemp for which the ſaid ſum of forty pounds per ton ſhall be paid under the powers thereby given; Nor ſhall any Bounty or Premium be paid or payable for or in reſpect of any Hemp not intended for ſale to ſome one of the Commiſſioners acting in virtue of the powers thereby given, which ſhall not be claimed on or before the thirtieth day of September next, under proper and ſufficient Documents, to be ſo or before that day, preſented to the perſon or perſons duly empowered or authoriſed to allow or pay the ſame: Provided that before the ſaid Commiſſioners to be appointed in virtue of that Act, or any of them, ſhall under the authority thereby given, purchaſe any Hemp from any perſon or perſons whomſoever, ſuch Commiſſioners and each of them are, and is thereby authoriſed and required, to adminiſter to ſuch perſon or perſons offering any ſuch Hemp for ſale, an Oath in the ſaid Act particularly ſet forth, whereby ſuch perſon or perſons, is or are to ſwear that the Hemp which he, ſhe or they had that day offered for ſale to the Commiſſioner appointed by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor for the purchaſe of Hemp, and every part thereof, was raiſed within the Province of Upper Canada by him or them, or by ſome other perſon or perſons (to be named in ſuch oath) and that no Bounty or Premium had been paid or claimed for any part of ſuch Hemp, by any perſon or perſons whomſoever, ſave and except what was included in the ſum or price for which he, ſhe or they had offered to ſell ſuch Hemp to the ſaid Commiſſioner.——Now know all whom it may concern, that I PETER HUNTER Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of the ſaid Province of Upper Canada, well knowing the fidelity, diligence and ability of the Honorable James Baby of Sandwich, the Honorable Richard Cartwright of Kingſton, the Honorable Robert Hamilton of Queenſtown, all Members of the Legiſlative Council of this Province, and William Allan of York in the Home Diſtrict Eſquire, do, by virtue of the power ſo veſted in me as aforeſaid, by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council of this Province, nominate, conſtitute and appoint the ſaid James Baby, Richard Cartwright, Robert Hamilton, and William Allan, to be Commiſſioners for the purchaſing of merchantable Hemp, the growth of the ſaid Province, at and after the price or rate of Forty Pounds Halifax Currency per Ton, which ſaid ſum of Forty Pounds is to be paid by the ſaid Commiſſioners reſpectively, to the party or parties ſelling ſuch Hemp, in Money only, according to the rules, regulations, limitations and reſtrictions in the ſaid in part above recited Act expreſſed and contained, with full power and authority, to do and perform all and each of the matters and things in the ſaid Act authorized or required by them the ſaid Commiſſioners to be done and performed.

Given under my Hand, and Seal at Arms, at York, this Twenty-Third Day of March, in the year of our Lord one thouſand eight hundred and four, and in the forty-fourth year of His Majeſty's Reign.

P. HUNTER, Lt. Gov.

By His Excellency's Command,
Wm. JARVIS, Secy.

AN ACT

For granting to his Majeſty, a certain ſum of money, for the further encouragement of the growth and cultivation of Hemp within this Province, and the exportation thereof.

[Paſſed March 9th, 1804.]

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN,

WHEREAS it would very much encourage and promote the cultivation of Hemp in this Province, if ſome proviſion was made by the Legiſlature for the purchaſe and exportation thereof; in order therefore to make ſuch reſources of the Province more eaſily "your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal ſubjects, the Commons of Upper Canada, in Parliament aſſembled, do moſt humbly beſeech your Majeſty that it be enacted, and be it enacted by the King's moſt excellent Majeſty, by and with the advice and conſent of the Legiſlative Council and Aſſembly of the Province of Upper Canada, conſtituted and aſſembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act paſſed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act paſſed in the fourteenth "year of his Majeſty's reign, intituled, "An Act "for making more effectual proviſion for the govern-"ment of the Province of Quebec, in North "America, and to make further proviſion for the "government of the ſaid Province," and by the authority of the ſame, That from and out of any fund or funds now remaining, or which may hereafter come into the hands of the Receiver General, ariſing from and out of the rates and duties already raiſed, levied

YORK:—PRINTED BY JOHN BENNETT,
BY THE AUTHORITY OF HIS EXCELLENCY PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE, LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

and collected, or which may hereafter be raised, levied and collected, to and for the uses of this Province, there be granted to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, the sum of one thousand pounds, to be disposed of, appropriated and laid out as a public stock or capital, applicable to the purpose of purchasing Hemp, the growth of this Province, and of discharging the expences incident to such purchases and the exportation and sale thereof, in such manner and under such regulations as to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council thereof, shall from time to time seem meet.

II. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That at any time or times from and after the passing of this Act, it shall and may be lawful to and for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, to issue one or more Proclamation or Proclamations, and thereby to notify such and so many persons within the Province as to him shall seem meet, as Commissioners for the purchasing of merchantable Hemp the growth of this Province, which said Commissioners, or any one or more of them, are hereby authorized and empowered to purchase such Hemp, at and after the price or rate of forty pounds per ton.

III. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That from and after the passing of this Act, no person or persons whatsoever shall be entitled to any further bounty over and beyond the said price or sum of forty pounds per ton, or to any premium under any Proclamation or Proclamations heretofore issued by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, for the encouragement of the growth and exportation of Hemp, for or in respect of any Hemp for which the said sum of forty pounds per ton shall be paid under the powers hereby given; nor shall any bounty or premium be paid or payable for or in respect of any Hemp not intended for sale to some one of the Commissioners acting in virtue of the powers hereby given, which shall not be claimed on or before the thirtieth day of September next, under proper and sufficient documents to be on or before that day presented to the person or persons duly empowered or authorized to allow or pay the same, any former law to the contrary notwithstanding. Provided nevertheless, That before the said Commissioners to be appointed in virtue of this Act, or any of them, shall, under the authority hereby given, purchase any Hemp from any person or persons whomsoever, such Commissioners and each of them, are and is hereby authorized and required to administer to the person or persons offering any such Hemp for sale, the following Oath;

"I A. B. do swear, that the Hemp which I have "this day offered for sale to C. D. Commissioner ap-"pointed by his Excellency the Lieutenant Gover-"nor for the purchase of Hemp, and every part "thereof, was raised within the Province of Upper "Canada, by me (or by E. or F.) and that no boun-"ty or premium has been paid or claimed for any "part of such Hemp, by any person or persons what-"soever, (save and except what is included in the "sum or price, for which I have offered to sell such "Hemp to the said Commissioner."

And if any person or persons shall, in taking such Oath, wilfully or corruptly forswear him, her or themselves, such person and persons shall incur all the pains and penalties which by law persons are subject or liable to, for wilful or corrupt perjury in any cafe whatsoever.

IV. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful to and for each and every of the commissioners acting in virtue of the powers hereby given, to demand and receive of and from the person or persons who now is or are authorized or empowered to allow and pay the aforesaid premiums or bounties, under the said Proclamation and Proclamations heretofore issued, the sum of ten pounds per rod for every ton which such Commissioners shall, in virtue of the authority hereby conferred, purchase; and every such sum of ten pounds for each and every ton so purchased by the said Commissioners, or any of them, shall be applied in part of the purpose of this Act, over and beyond the said sum of one thousand pounds herein before granted: And such person or persons so now empowered to allow and pay such bounties or premiums, is and are hereby authorized to pay such Commissioners, or any or either of them, the said sum of ten pounds per ton on such Hemp as aforesaid, until such part of the funds now in their hands, or remaining in the hands of the Receiver General, supplied and applicable to such bounties or premiums, shall, by such payments to the said Commissioners, and to other persons entitled to such bounties or premiums, be wholly exhausted.

V. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful to and for such Commissioners so to be appointed under this Act as aforesaid, or the major part of them, in such manner and by such ways and means, as to them or the major part of them, at any time shall seem meet, to barter and procure such Hemp as shall be purchased according to the provisions of this Act, to be exported and carried beyond sea, into that part of Great Britain called England, and there to be exposed for sale, and sold for such price or prices, sum or sums of money as shall and may be obtained for the same; and such sum or sums of money obtained by such sale or sales, together with such bounties or premiums as shall or can be obtained under any Act or Acts of the British Parliament, or of the Parliament of the United Kingdom, on any such Hemp as aforesaid, after deducting all necessary charges, to pay to the Receiver General as applicable and to be applied to the public uses of this Province, and the support of the Government thereof.

VI. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That the monies hereby granted to his Majesty, shall be paid by the Receiver General, in discharge of such warrant or warrants as shall for the purposes herein before set forth, be from time to time issued by the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, and not otherwise; And the said Receiver General shall account to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, for the same, through the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury for the time being, in such manner and form as his Majesty, his heirs and successors, shall be graciously pleased to direct.

AN ACT

For the exemplary Punishment of all and every person and persons who shall seduce, or attempt to seduce, or aid or assist, or attempt to aid or assist any Soldier to desert his Majesty's service, or who shall harbour, conceal, receive or assist any Deserter from such service.

[Passed March 9th, 1804.]

WHEREAS pernicious practices have for some time past prevailed in this Province, by evil disposed persons disaffected to his Majesty's Government, and particularly to the Military service thereof, in seducing and deluding his Subjects who had engaged themselves as Soldiers in such service, and prevailing on them to desert, and also in harbouring, abetting and concealing such Deserters; for remedy whereof for the future, and for the exemplary punishment of such persons in such cases offending, Be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act "passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, "intituled, "An Act for making more effectual pro-"vision for the government of the Province of Que-"bec, in North America, and to make further pro-"vision for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That from and after the passing of this Act, if any person or persons whomsoever (other than such as are, or shall be entitled as Soldiers) shall, by words or with money, or by any other ways or means whatsoever, directly or indirectly, prevail upon, procure, perfuade, or encourage, or endeavour or attempt to prevail upon, procure, perfuade or encourage any such Soldier or Soldiers to desert or leave his Majesty's service, and shall be thereof lawfully convicted, the Court or Judge before whom such offender shall be so convicted, shall immediately on such conviction, award and adjudge such person and persons so convicted as aforesaid, to be committed to the common Gaol of the District where such offender shall be so tried, there to remain without Bail or Mainprize for the space of six Calendar months; and if upon the circumstances and heinousneſs of the crime, it shall be thought proper and expedient to increase the punishment, such Court or Judge shall also further award and adjudge, that such offender to convicted as aforesaid, shall forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding forty pounds, and if such offender shall not on or before the third day previous to the expiration of such imprisonment as aforesaid pay such fine, then and in such case, the said offender shall be publicly whipped.

II. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That if any person from and after the passing of this Act, shall harbour, conceal, receive or assist any Deserter from his Majesty's service, knowing him to be such, such person so offending, shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds, and if such sum of twenty pounds shall not immediately on such conviction being pronounced, be paid into the Court, the Court or Judge before whom such conviction shall be had, shall forthwith award, order and adjudge such offender to be committed to the common Gaol of the District in which such offender shall be so convicted, there to remain, without Bail or Mainprize for the space of three Calendar months, or until such time, not exceeding three Calendar months, as the said sum of twenty pounds shall be paid.

III. Provided nevertheleſs, That no conviction shall be had or made under the authority of this Act, in any Court or Jurisdiction whatsoever in this Province, save and except by indictment preferred or prefented before a Court, or Judge or Judges sitting in the execution of a Commission of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery; nor shall any profecution be carried on by virtue of this Act, if the same shall not be commenced, within six Calendar months next after the offence shall be charged to have been committed, unleſs the offender shall within the said six months have departed and left the Province, in which case it shall and may be lawful to commence such profecution at any time within six calendar months next after such offender's return into the Province, and to carry the same to conviction; and it is hereby declared, that the issuing any warrant for the apprehending of any person charged with any offence against this Act, by any one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace for this Province, shall be held and deemed to be a commencement of a profecution, within the true meaning of the provisions herein in that respect contained.

IV. And be it Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That in order the more effectually to prevent the escape of any such offender or offenders as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful at any time, from and after the passing of this Act, to and for any one or more of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace, on due proof upon oath being made before him or them, that any person has committed any one of the offences herein before described, to issue his or their warrant or warrants for the apprehension of such offender or offenders, or person or persons charged with such offence, and to cause such offender or offenders, or such person or persons so charged as aforesaid, to be brought before him or them, and upon the examination of such offender or offenders, and hearing the evidence, such Justice or Justices of the Peace shall discharge or commit to Prison, or shall bail such offender or offenders, in like manner as by law any other person or persons charged criminally is or are dealt with; save and except, that if such Justice or Justices shall be satisfied with the evidence against such offender or offenders, such Justice or Justices shall commit such offender or offenders to the common Gaol of the District, or in case there shall be no Gaol in that District, to the next adjoining Gaol of any adjoining District, and such offender and offenders shall remain so committed until his, her or their trial shall be brought on, unleſs such offender or offenders shall, with two good and sufficient sureties, to the satisfaction of the said Justice or Justices, become bound by recognizance to our Sovereign Lord the King, in manner hereafter specified, (that is to say) if the said offender shall be charged with having committed any offence against the provisions in the first Section of this Act contained, then such offender or person so charged, shall become bound in the sum of two hundred pounds, and each of such sureties in the sum of one hundred pounds, and if such offender shall be charged with having committed any offence against the provisions in the second Section of this Act contained, then such offender or person so charged, shall become bound in the sum of forty pounds, and each of such sureties in the sum of twenty pounds, conditioned in each of the said recognizances, for the appearance of such person so charged with any offence against this Act, at the then next Assizes, or Session of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery, to be holden for the District where such offence shall be charged to be committed, or at such other time or times as Assizes or Session of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery, to which the trial of such offender shall for just cause be adjourned.

V. Provided always, and be it further Enacted, That if it shall happen that any conviction under this Act, shall take place in any District where there shall be no common Gaol at the time of such conviction, it shall and may be lawful to and for the Court or Judge before whom such conviction shall be had, to award, order and adjudge, that any such offender or offenders so to be convicted, shall be committed to the common gaol of any adjoining District, in which there shall at that time be a Gaol, and also to order and adjudge, that any further punishment to be inflicted under the authority of this Act, shall be inflicted either in the District where such conviction shall take place, or in the District to the Gaol of which such offender shall be committed, as such Judge or Court shall seem meet: And in case of any commitment by any Justice or Justices of the Peace before trial, or of any commitment by any such Court, or Judge or Judges as aforesaid after conviction, under the authority of this Act given, the Treasurer and Gaoler of the District to the Gaol of which such offender, or person charged with or convicted of any offence against this Act shall be committed, are, and each of them is hereby respectively required, to allow to each person during his or her commitment or confinement thereof, such and the like maintenance and subsistence as is by law allowed to persons in custody under any criminal charge; and the Treasurer of the District from which such offender or person so charged or convicted shall be so sent, shall, and he is hereby required, to reimburse and pay to the Treasurer of the District, in which such person shall have been confined, out of the first monies which shall come to his hands, such sum and sums of money as shall have been so lawfully expended, according to the provisions in that respect herein before contained, for the maintenance and subsistence of any such person or persons as aforesaid.

VI. And be it further Enacted, That in case any such person or persons as aforesaid shall, by virtue of this Act, be committed before trial to any Gaol other than the Gaol of the District in which the offence shall be charged to have been committed, the Sheriff of the District in which such offence shall be charged to have been committed, shall, and he is hereby required and commanded immediately before the Assizes or Session at which any trial for any offence against this Act shall be had, to convey such person so charged from the Gaol in which he or she shall be in custody, to the District where such offence was charged to be committed, and there to keep him or her in safe custody and confinement, and have such person ready to take his or her trial at the Assizes or Session of Oyer and Terminer then next ensuing: And all and every Sheriff and Sheriffs, Constable and Peace Officers of this Province, is and are hereby required and commanded to execute and obey all and every warrant and warrants, order and orders, sentence and sentences which shall be pronounced or issued by any such Court or Judge, Justice or Justices, as are herein before mentioned, for the purpose of carrying the provisions of this Act into execution.

VII. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That all the fines, forfeitures and penalties that shall be incurred under and by virtue of this Act, shall be accounted for to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, to and for the public uses of this Province, through the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury for the time being, in such manner and form as it shall please his Majesty to direct.

☞ THE CHIEF JUSTICE has adjourned the Sittings of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery and of Affize and Nisi Prius for the Home District, until Wednesday the 20th day of June next, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon.

Proclamation.

PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of His Majesty's Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General commanding His Majesty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME,—GREETING:

WHEREAS the Lieutenant Governor in Council has granted Leases of several Tracts of Land, part of which was of the Reserves of the Crown, and other part was of the Lands set apart and referred for the use of a Protestant Clergy, AND WHEREAS, upon such Leases, certain Rents were reserved to his Majesty and made payable by the Lessees, at days limited and particularly specified in each respective Lease, and the rents upon some of such Leases have already accrued due.

And whereas the Sheriffs of the several Districts of this Province have been appointed by the Lieutenant Governor to receive all Rents due or to accrue due on all such Leases, as well on the Crown as the Clergy Reserves.

And whereas in pursuance of the Commands of the Lieutenant Governor, Shedules have been transmitted to the respective Sheriffs of the different Districts of this Province; in which Shedules are particularly set forth the names and descriptions of the Lessees, together with the Concession, Township, County and District in which such Lands so held under such Leases respectively lie and are situate, with a statement also of the particular Rent reserved on every such Lease, and the days and times on which such Rent already has accrued or will hereafter become due.

NOW THEREFORE be it known to all whom it may concern, That all and every person and persons, now holding any such Lease or Leases as aforesaid, is and are required to make payment of the Rents, reserved and made payable, either on Leases granted of the Reserves of the Crown, or on the Reserves set apart for the use of a Protestant Clergy, to the different Sheriffs of the respective Districts within which all such Lands severally lay or are situate at the times and periods on which such Rents are reserved, in strict conformity with the covenants and stipulations entered into by the said several Lessees with his Majesty, and that in default of such payments being punctually and regularly made, his Majesty's Attorney General will be instructed forthwith to institute proceedings against every such Lessee for enforcing such payment and for resuming the Lands, in respect of which such default shall be made, into the hands of the Crown, such being the conditions upon which the Lands have been demised, and such conditions having been particularly specified in all the Leases which have been granted.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms at York, this fourteenth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, and in the forty-third year of his Majesty's reign.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

LONDON, November 26.

The office of Colonel General of the Swiss in France is to be revived, and is expected to be given to Louis Bonaparte, or Sebastiani.

Mr. Demidoff, at Moscow, Counsellor of State, has lately presented the committee of public instruction in Russia, with 300,000 rubles in cash; 3270 peasants; and a collection of books, antiquities, natural curiosities, artificial productions, &c. valued at 250,000 rubles.

The difference which was reported to exist between this country and America, has been amicably settled.

November 29.

Some days ago we mentioned, that the French army on the coast began to murmur against the delay of the intended invasion. A private letter from an officer on board one of the bomb vessels in the Downs, confirms this fact. "The troops about Brest and Morlaix have openly expressed their uneasiness at the expedition against England being so long delayed;" and other letters state, that a continuance of delay may be attended with serious consequences to the First Consul and the present government of France. The privates "suppose the First Consul has relinquished the idea of invading England;" but the sentiments of the officers are directly contradictory to this insinuation; they positively affirm, that England will be invaded as soon as the vessels, now preparing in the several rivers and ports, are finished.

Report has been so various and contradictory respecting Bonaparte's plans of invasion, that we are at last reduced to the necessity of declaring that we can now find no information, and less amusement, in reading the statements presented. It is evident, however, that the First Consul must gratify the wishes of his vast armies, by directing them to new conquests and plunder. Our language, therefore, is of the same tendency with that which we have always so strongly impressed upon the public mind; that is, to keep up and encourage that full-toned spirit which has so happily interposed for the salvation of our religion, our laws, and our liberties.

Sir Edward Pellew's squadron, off Ferrol and Corunna, has not been diminished by the return of the Impetueux and Colossus, of 74 guns each, to Plymouth to refit. They did not quit Sir Edward till two sail of the line had arrived to replace them. They left the squadron on the 15th, all well. The order for all officers to sleep on board their respective ships, has lately been renewed in terms of unusual strictness; the disobedience of which would incur very heavy censure.

The reports on the subject of invasion are as contradictory as ever. Some represent the enemy on the eve of making the attempt which has so long engaged the attention not only of England or France, but of Europe.—Others represent the preparations in Holland particularly as much in arrear as small in amount, and by no means advanced to a state of maturity. It is stated in letters from our squadron on the Dutch coast, that the whole fleet in the Texel consists of the Dogger Bank, of 68 guns, the John de Witt guard ship, one 64 gun frigate, six schooners and a brig. If this statement be correct, the invading expedition from Holland will have but a wretched escort. However, we are inclined to think that the preparations in the Dutch ports are not to be despised.—The Dutch naval force is hid in the interior, and defies the observation of our squadron on the coast. It is by no means fair, therefore, to measure their strength by what they may think proper to expose to view. A great deal of shipping, particularly of that sort on which the First Consul seems inclined to depend in the attempt of invasion, may be assembled at different points by internal communications.

It is obvious that every day now increases the probability of invasion being attempted, if the enemy, as there seems no reason to doubt, are serious in the design. It behoves the government to redouble their vigilance and their precaution with the growing danger.

One hundred thousand seamen were yesterday voted in the House of Commons for the service of the year 1804.

Leave was given, on the motion of Mr. Addington, to bring in a bill for continuing the restriction on payments in specie at the Bank.

Mr. Secretary Yorke gave notice of his intention to move on Friday for leave to bring in two bills to continue the acts for suspending the Habeas Corpus and for the suppression of rebellion in Ireland.

December 2.

Yesterday morning dispatches were received at the Secretary of State's Office from Sir John Borlase Warren, the British Ambassador at the Court of St. Petersburgh. They were brought to Sheerness by the Clyde frigate, which has arrived there with part of the convoy from the Baltic. These dispatches are believed to be of great importance.

In the House of Commons, Nov. 30 the following sums were voted for the Navy service:—

For 100,000 seamen for 13 lunar months,	£2,500,000
For victualling the same,	3,417,000
For wear and tear of ships,	3,900,000
For ordnance of the sea service,	325,000

The detention and imprisonment of Gen. Boyer in Scotland has been mentioned; and also the intention of the French government to treat some important English nobility in a similar manner. Lord Elgin was selected for that purpose, but it is stated that on the interference of Talleyrand, the First Consul had consented to take Sir James Crawford as a hostage instead of his Lordship.

NEW-YORK, Feb. 6.

The British naval force on the Jamaica station, the 1st of January, was, 4 of 74 guns 2 of 40, 5 of 32, 1 of 24, 7 of 18, 3 of 16, 1 of 12, and 1 of 10.

On the 4th January, the Æolus frigate, capt. Evans, arrived at Port Royal, from a cruise, with a Spanish sloop of war, which she fell in with off the coast of St. Domingo. On firing a shot a head to bring her to, the sloop of war returned a broadside, when an engagement commenced, which lasted above four hours. Several men were unfortunately killed, and wounded on board the Æolus; the number on board the Spaniard is, we are informed, 36, among whom were the first captain and the first lieutenant. The mizen and fore mast of the last were all shot away, and considerable injury done to the summer. After undergoing a repair, it is supposed she will be permitted to proceed to La Vera Cruz, for which port and the Havanna she was bound with dispatches from Cortez, whence she sailed in November last. The dispatches were thrown overboard, previously to her colors being struck.

The 12 Judges of England assembled in the Exchequer Chamber, London, on Saturday the 19th November, to hear arguments in support of the objections taken by counsel in the case of ROBERT ASTLETT, who had been convicted of embezzling the property of the Bank of England. The point for discussion was, whether the Exchequer Bills stolen, being invalid in themselves, could be considered as securities and effects of the Bank of England within the statute of the 15th of Geo. II.? The point was most luminously argued by Mr. Erskine & Mr. Garrow, but their Lordships' judgment stands over.

Extract of a letter from London, Nov. 24.

"Our commerce was hardly ever more flourishing, considering the peculiar situation of political affairs. Our expectations of produce are immense, and all the exchanges decidedly in our favour; an evident proof that the threatened invasion has not had the effect of lessening our credit, or destroying confidence. Spain and Portugal have at last, it is reported, succeeded in obtaining from France, a guarantee of their neutrality, in consideration of an enormous yearly subsidy to be paid to the latter."

The late inundation at Madeira, has excited various conjectures as to the cause of it, but by late information from the island it is ascribed to an improvement the governor attempted to make in the rear of the city.—The ground surrounding it being very much broken and intersected by vallies, he concluded to fill them up, and for that purpose ordered dams to be thrown across to retain the earth which descended from the hills—The consequence was, these dams stopped great quantities of water, the weight of which broke the first dam, when the water rushed through the other with irresistible force sweeping every thing into the sea, within its direction—Two hundred houses, supposed one with another not to be less than 50 feet front and nearly contiguous were carried into the ocean, together with every inhabitant in them, so that not a vestige was to be seen after the ruins, either of the buildings or the people? A church, which had stood the storms of 300 years, was carried off in an instant, and what was very singular, the bell-man was ringing at the time in the steeple which remained without injury, though the church was razed to its foundation, of which he was wholly ignorant till he came down from his exalted station.

About ten thousand pipes of wine were carried off or buried to complete by with the rubbish, that none could be found. An English family of twelve were lost in the house and not one of them ever heard of.—The number of lives this fatowful disaster cost the island was not ascertained, but supposed from one to two thousand. Corpses were dug up daily; and it was common to observe ladies of the first character, walking the streets barefoot, in consequence of solemn vows they made to do so for a limited time, if their lives were spared, in token of humiliation. The gentleman who gives the above information, says he found the shore rocky, where he translacted business in houses and ware houses when he was last at Madeira.

To the Free and Independent Electors of the East Riding of York.

GENTLEMEN,

THE period of the natural dissolution of the present Parliament having nearly arrived, I am induced to offer myself as a Candidate to represent you in the ensuing Parliament.—In thus presenting myself to your notice, I cannot refrain from observing, that, I stand unconnected with any party, unsupported by any influence, and unambitious of any patronage, other than the Suffrages of those, who consider the impartial enjoyment of their rights, and the free exercise of their privileges as objects not only worthy of the vigilance of the legislator, but also essential to their political security and to their local prosperity.

The opportunity of addressing myself to men who may be inclined to think with freedom, and to act with independency, is to me truly desirable; and the receiving of the countenance and support of those characters, must ever leave on my mind impressions more than gratifying.

It would ill accord with my sentiments to express myself in the usual terms of the zeal and fidelity of an Election Candidate; in asmuch as that the principle of previous assurances has frequently, in the exercise of the functions of the Representative, been either forgotten or occasionally abandoned; but I hope it will not be considered vaunting in me to assert, that, that zeal and that fidelity which have manifested themselves in the discharge of my duty to my Clients, will not be abated in supporting a more important trust.—THE CAUSE OF THE PUBLIC.

I have the honor to be,
Gentlemen,
Your devoted humble Servant,

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER ESQUIRE,
Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

WHEREAS by a certain Act of the Legislature of this Province, passed in the forty-fourth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act for granting to his "Majesty, a certain sum of money for "the further encouragement of the "growth and cultivation of Hemp "within this Province, and the exportation thereof," it is enacted, That from and out of any fund or funds now remaining, or which may hereafter come, into the hands of the Receiver General, arising from and out of the rates and duties already raised, levied and collected, or which hereafter may be raised, levied and collected to and for the uses of this Province, there be granted to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, the sum of one thousand pounds, to be disposed of, appropriated and laid out as a public stock or capital, applicable to the purpose of purchasing Hemp the growth of this Province, and of discharging the expences incident to such purchases, and the exportation and sale thereof, in such manner, and under such regulations, as to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council thereof, should from time to time seem meet: And that it should and may be lawful to and for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, to issue one or more Proclamation or Proclamations, and therein to name such and so many persons within the Province as to him shall seem meet, as Commissioners for the purchasing of Merchantable Hemp the growth of this Province, which said Commissioners, or any one or more of them, are and is thereby authorized and empowered to purchase such Hemp at and after the price or rate of forty pounds per ton: AND WHEREAS it is further enacted by the said Act, that after the passing of that Act, no person or persons whatsoever, shall be intitled to any further Bounty over and beyond the said price or sum of forty pounds per ton, or to any Premium under any Proclamation or Proclamations, heretofore issued by the Lieutenant Governor, for the encouragement of the growth and exportation of Hemp, for or in respect of any Hemp for which the said sum of forty pounds per ton shall be paid under the powers thereby given; Nor shall any Bounty or Premium be paid or payable for or in respect of any Hemp not intended for sale to some one of the Commissioners acting in virtue of the powers thereby given, which shall not be claimed on or before the thirtieth day of September next, under proper and sufficient documents, to be on or before that day, presented to the person or persons duly empowered or authorized to allow or pay the same: Provided that before the said Commissioners to be appointed in virtue of that Act, or any of them, shall under the authority thereby given, purchase any Hemp from any person or persons whomsoever, such Commissioners and each of them are, and is thereby authorized and required, to administer to such person or persons offering any such Hemp for sale, an Oath in the said Act particularly set forth, whereby such person or persons, is or are to swear that the Hemp which he, she or they had that day offered for sale to the Commissioner appointed by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor for the purchase of Hemp, and every part thereof, was raised within the Province of Upper Canada by him or them, or by some other person or persons (to be named in such oath) and that no Bounty or Premium had been paid or claimed for any part of such Hemp, by any person or persons whomsoever, save and except what was included in the sum or price for which he, she or they had offered to sell such Hemp to the said Commissioner. —Now know all whom it may concern, that I PETER HUNTER Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, well knowing the fidelity, diligence and ability of the Honorable James Baby of Sandwich, the Honorable Richard Cartwright of Kingston, the Honorable Robert Hamilton of Queenstown, all Members of the Legislative Council of this Province, and William Allan of York in the Home District Esquire, do, by virtue of the power so vested in me as aforesaid, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, nominate, constitute and appoint the said James Baby, Richard Cartwright, Robert Hamilton, and William Allan, to be Commissioners for the purchasing of merchantable Hemp, the growth of the said Province, at and after the price or rate of Forty Pounds Halifax Currency per Ton, which said sum of Forty Pounds is to be paid by the said Commissioners respectively, to the party or parties selling such Hemp, in Money only, according to the rules, regulations, limitations and restrictions in the said in part above recited Act expressed and contained, with full power and authority, to do and perform all and each of the matters and things in the said Act authorized or required by them the said Commissioners to be done and performed.

Given under my Hand, and Seal at Arms, at York, this Twenty-Third Day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and four, and in the forty-fourth year of His Majesty's Reign.

P. HUNTER, Lt. Govr.

By His Excellency's Command,
WM. JARVIS, Secy.

AN ACT

For granting to his Majesty, a certain sum of money, for the further encouragement of the growth and cultivation of Hemp within this Province, and the exportation thereof.

[Passed March 9th, 1804.]

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN,

WHEREAS it would very much encourage and promote the cultivation of Hemp in this Province, if some provision was made by the Legislature for the purchase and exportation thereof; in order therefore to make provision for so beneficial an object, as far as the present resources of the Province will admit, We your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Commons of Upper Canada, in Parliament assembled, do most humbly beseech your Majesty that it be enacted, and be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth "year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act "for making more effectual provision for the government "of the Province of Quebec, in North "America, and to make further provision for the "government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That from and out of any fund or funds now remaining, or which may hereafter come into the hands of the Receiver General, arising from and out of the taxes and duties already raised, levied and collected, or which may hereafter be raised, levied and collected, so and for the uses of this Province, there be granted to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, the sum of one thousand pounds, to be disposed of, appropriated and laid out as a public stock or capital, applicable to the purpose of purchasing Hemp, the growth of this Province, and of discharging the expenses incident to such purchases and the exportation and sale thereof, in such manner and under such regulations as to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council thereof, shall from time to time seem meet.

II And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That at any time or times from and after the passing of this Act, it shall and may be lawful to and for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, to issue one or more Proclamation or Proclamations, and thereon to name such and so many persons within the Province as to him shall seem meet, as Commissioners for the purchasing of merchantable Hemp the growth of this Province, which said Commissioners, or any one or more of them, are and is hereby authorized and empowered to purchase such Hemp, at and after the price or rate of forty pounds per ton.

III And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That from and after the passing of this Act, no person or persons whatsoever shall be entitled to any further bounty over and beyond the said price or sum of forty pounds per ton, or to any premium under any Proclamation or Proclamations hereinbefore issued by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, for the encouragement of the growth and exportation of Hemp, for or in respect of any Hemp for which the said sum of forty pounds per ton shall be paid under the powers hereby given: nor shall any bounty or premium be paid or payable for or in respect of any Hemp not intended for sale to some one of the Commissioners acting in virtue of the powers hereby given, which shall not be claimed on or before the fifteenth day of September next, under proper and sufficient documents to be on or before that day presented to the person or persons duly empowered or authorised to allow or pay the same, any former law to the contrary notwithstanding. Provided nevertheless, That before the said Commissioners to be appointed in virtue of this Act, or any of them, shall, under the authority hereby given, purchase any Hemp from any person or persons whomsoever, such Commissioners and each of them, are and is hereby authorised and required to administer to the person or persons offering any such Hemp for sale, the following Oath;

"I A. B. do swear, that the Hemp which I have to this day offered for sale to C. a Commissioner appointed by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor for the purchase of Hemp, and every part thereof, was raised within the Province of Upper Canada, by me (or by E. or F.) and that no bounty or premium has been paid or claimed for any or part of such Hemp, by any person or persons whomsoever, nor will I ever, what is included in the sum or price, for which I have offered to sell such Hemp to the said Commissioner."

And if any person or persons shall, in taking such Oath, wilfully or corruptly forswear him, her or themselves, such person and persons shall incur all the pains and penalties which by law persons are subject or liable to, for wilful or corrupt perjury in any case whatsoever.

IV. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful to and for each and every of the Commissioners acting in virtue of the powers hereby given, to demand and receive of and from the person or persons whosoever is or are authorised or empowered to allow and pay the aforesaid premiums or bounties, under the said Proclamation and Proclamations hereinbefore issued, the sum of ten pounds per ton for every ton which such Commissioners shall, in virtue of the authority hereby conferred, purchase; and every such sum of ten pounds for each and every ton so purchased by the said Commissioners, or any of them, shall be applied to and for the purposes of this Act, over and beyond the said sum of one thousand pounds herein before granted: And such person or persons so now empowered to allow and pay such bounties or premiums, is and are hereby authorized to pay such Commissioners, or any or either of them, the said sum of ten pounds per ton on such Hemp as aforesaid, until such part of the funds now in their hands, or remaining in the hands of the Receiver General, unapplied and applicable to such bounties or premiums, shall, by such payments to the said Commissioners, and to other persons entitled to such bounties or premiums, be wholly exhausted.

V. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful to and for such Commissioners so to be appointed under this Act as aforesaid, or the major part of them, in such manner and by such ways and means, as to them or the major part of them, at any time shall seem meet, to cause and procure such Hemp as shall be purchased according to the provisions of this Act, to be exported and carried beyond sea, into that part of Great Britain called England, and there to be exposed for sale, and sold for such price or prices, sum or sums of money as shall and may be obtained for the same; and such sum or sums of money obtained by such sale or sales, together with such bounties or premiums as shall or can be obtained under any Act or Acts of the British Parliament, or of the Parliament of the United Kingdom, on any such Hemp as aforesaid, after deducting all necessary charges, to pay to the Receiver General as applicable and to be applied to the public uses of this Province, and the support of the Government thereof.

VI. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That the monies hereby granted to his Majesty, shall be paid by the Receiver General, in discharge of such warrant or warrants as shall for the purposes herein before set forth, be from time to time issued by the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province and not otherwise. And the said Receiver General shall account to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, for the same, through the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury for the time being, in such manner and form as his Majesty, his heirs and successors, shall be graciously pleased to direct.

AN ACT

For the exemplary Punishment of all and every person and persons who shall seduce, or attempt to seduce, or aid or assist, or attempt to aid or assist any Soldier to desert his Majesty's service, or who shall harbour, conceal, receive or assist any Deserter from such service.

[Passed March 9th, 1804.]

WHEREAS pernicious practices have for some time past prevailed in this Province, by evil disposed persons disaffected to his Majesty's Government, and particularly to the Military service thereof, in seducing and deluding his Subjects who had engaged themselves as Soldiers in such service, and prevailing on them to desert, and also in harbouring, assisting and concealing such Deserters; for remedy whereof for the future, and for the exemplary punishment of such persons in such cases offending: Be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act "passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, "intituled, "An Act for making more effectual provision for the government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That from and after the passing of this Act, if any person or persons whomsoever (other than such Soldier, or shall be enlisted as Soldiers) shall, by words or with money, or by any other ways or means whatsoever, directly or indirectly, prevail upon, procure, pertuade, or encourage, or endeavour or attempt to prevail upon, procure, pertuade or encourage any such Soldier or Soldiers to defect or leave his Majesty's service, and shall be thereof lawfully convicted, the Court or Judge before whom such offender shall be so convicted, shall immediately on such conviction, award and adjudge such person and persons so convicted as aforesaid, to be committed to the common Gaol of the District where such offender shall be so tried, there to remain without Bail or Mainprize for the space of six Calendar months; and if from the circumstances and heinousness of the crime, it shall be thought proper and expedient to increase the punishment, such Court or Judge shall also further award and adjudge, that such offender so convicted as aforesaid, shall forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding forty pounds, and if such offender shall not on or before the third day previous to the expiration of such imprisonment as aforesaid pay such fine, then and in such case, the said offender shall be publicly whipped.

III. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That if any person from and after the passing of this Act, shall harbour, conceal, receive or assist any Deserter from his Majesty's service, knowing him to be such, such person so offending, shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds, and if such sum of twenty pounds shall not immediately on such conviction being pronounced, be paid into Court, the Court or Judge before whom such conviction shall be had, shall forthwith award, order and adjudge such offender to be committed to the common Gaol of the District in which such offender shall be so convicted, there to remain, without Bail or Mainprize for the space of three Calendar months, or until such time, not exceeding three Calendar months, as the said sum of twenty pounds shall be paid.

III. Provided nevertheless, That no conviction shall be pronounced under the authority of this Act, in any Court or Jurisdiction whatsoever in this Province, save and except by indictment preferred or presented before a Court, or Judge or Judges sitting in the execution of a Commission of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery, nor shall any prosecution be carried on by virtue of this Act, if the same shall not be commenced, within six Calendar months next after the offence shall be charged to have been committed, unless the offender shall within the said six months have departed and left the Province, in which case it shall and may be lawful to commence such prosecution at any time within six calendar months next after such offender's return into the Province, and to carry the same to conviction: But it is hereby declared, that the issuing any warrant for the apprehending of any person charged with any offence against this Act, by any one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace for this Province, shall be held and deemed to be a commencement of a prosecution, within the true meaning of the provisions herein in that respect contained.

IV. And be it Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That in order the more effectually to prevent the escape of any such offender or offenders as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful at any time, from and after the passing of this Act, to and for any one or more of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace, on due proof upon oath being made before him or them, that any person has committed any one of the offences herein before described, to issue his or their warrant or warrants for the apprehension of such offender or offenders, or person or persons charged with such offence, and to cause such offender or offenders, or such person or persons so charged as aforesaid, to be brought before him or them, and upon the examination of such offender or offenders, and hearing the evidence, such Justice or Justices of the Peace shall discharge, commit to Prison, or shall bail such offender or offenders, in like manner as by law any other person or persons charged criminally is or are dealt with; save and except, that if such Justice or Justices shall be satisfied with the evidence against such offender or offenders, such Justice or Justices shall commit such offender or offenders to the common Gaol of the District, or in case there shall be no Gaol in that District, to the common Gaol of any adjoining District, and such offender and offenders shall remain so committed until his, her or their trial shall be brought on, unless such offender or offenders shall, with two good and sufficient sureties, to the satisfaction of the said Justice or Justices, become bound by recognizance to our Sovereign Lord the King, in manner hereafter specified, (that is to say) if the said offender shall be charged with having committed any offence against the provisions in the first Section of this Act contained, then such offender or person so charged, shall become bound in the sum of two hundred pounds, and each of such sureties in the sum of one hundred pounds, and if such offender shall be charged with having committed any offence against the provisions in the second Section of this Act contained, then such offender or person so charged, shall become bound in the sum of forty pounds, and each of such sureties in the sum of twenty pounds, conditioned in each of such recognizances, for the appearance of such person so charged with any offence against this Act, at the then next Assizes, or Session of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery, to be holden for the District where such offence shall be charged to be committed, or at such other or future Assizes or Session of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery, to which the trial of such offender shall for just cause be adjourned.

V. Provided likewise, and be it further Enacted, That if it shall happen that any conviction under this Act, shall take place in any District where there shall be no common Gaol or Gaols, for the due execution of that and such may be lawful to and for the Court or Judge before whom such conviction shall be had, to award, order and adjudge, that any such offender or offenders so to be convicted, shall be committed to the common goal of any adjoining District, in which there shall at that time be a Gaol, and also to order and adjudge, that any further punishment to be inflicted under the authority of this Act, shall be inflicted either in the District where such conviction shall take place, or in the District to the Gaol of which such offender shall be committed, as to such Judge or Court shall seem meet: And in case of any commitment by any Justice or Justices of the Peace before trial, or of any commitment by any such Court, or Judge or Judges as aforesaid after conviction, under the authority of this Act given, the Treasurer and Gaoler of the District to the Gaol of which such offender, or person charged with or convicted of any offence against this Act shall be committed, are, and each of them is hereby respectively required, to allow to each person during his or her commitment or confinement there, such and the like maintenance and subsistence as is by law allowed to persons in custody under any criminal charge; and the Treasurer of the District unto which such offender or person so charged or convicted shall be so sent, shall, and he is hereby required, to reimburse and pay to the Treasurer of the district, in which such person shall have been confined, out of the first monies which shall come to his hands, such sum and sums of money as shall have been so lawfully expended, according to the provisions in that respect herein before contained, for the maintenance and subsistence of any such person or persons as aforesaid.

VI. And be it further Enacted, That in case any such person or persons as aforesaid shall, by virtue of this Act, be committed before trial to any Gaol other than the Gaol of the District in which the offence shall be charged to have been committed, the Sheriff of the District in which such offence shall be charged to have been committed, shall, and he is hereby required and commanded, immediately before the Assizes or Sessions at which any trial for any offence against this Act shall be had, or prosecution shall be charged from the Gaol in which he or she shall be so confined, to the District where such offence was charged to be committed, and there to keep him or her in close custody and confinement, and have such person ready to take his or her trial at the Assizes or Session of Oyer and Terminer then next ensuing: And all and every Sheriff and Sheriffs, Constable and Peace Officers of this Province, is and are hereby required and commanded to execute and obey all and every warrant and warrants, order and orders, sentence and sentences, which shall be pronounced or issued by any such Court or Judge, Justice or Justices, as are herein before mentioned, for the purpose of carrying the provisions of this Act into execution.

VII. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That all the fines, forfeitures and penalties that shall be incurred under and by virtue of this Act shall be accounted for to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, to and through the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury for the time being, in such manner and form as it shall please his Majesty to direct.

☞ THE Chief Justice has adjourned the Sittings of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery and of Assize and Nisi Prius for the Home District, until Wednesday the 20th day of June next, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon.

☞ THE further execution of the Commission for ascertaining Titles to Lands for the Home District, is adjourned to the first day of May and the thirteenth day of June next. And all persons whom it may concern, will take notice, that the Act under which the said Commission is fued, will expire very shortly after the said thirteenth day of June.

Proclamation.

PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of His Majesty's Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General commanding His Majesty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME,—GREETING:

WHEREAS the Lieutenant Governor in Council has granted Leases of several Tracts of Land, part of which was of the Reserves of the Crown, and other part was of the Lands let apart and reserved for the use of a Protestant Clergy, AND WHEREAS, upon such Leases, certain Rents were reserved to his Majesty and made payable by the Lessees, at days limited and particularly specified in each respective Lease, and the rents upon some of such Leases have already accrued due.

And whereas the Sheriffs of the several Districts of this Province have been appointed by the Lieutenant Governor to receive all Rents due or to accrue due on all such Leases, as well on the Crown as the Clergy Reserves.

And whereas in pursuance of the Commands of the Lieutenant Governor, Shedules have been transmitted to the respective Sheriffs of the different Districts of this Province; in which Shedules are particularly set forth the names and descriptions of the Lessees, together with the Concession, Township, County and District in which such Lands so held under such Leases respectively lie and are situate, with a statement also of the particular Rent reserved on every such Leafe, and the days and times on which such Rent already has accrued or will hereafter become due.

NOW THEREFORE be it known to all whom it may concern, That all and every person and persons, now holding any such Leafe or Leases as aforesaid, is and are required to make payment of the Rents, referved and made payable, either on Leases granted of the Reserves of the Crown, or of the Reserves set apart for the use of a Protestant Clergy, to the different Sheriffs of the respective Districts within which all such Lands severally lay or are situate at the times and periods on which such Rents are referved, in strict conformity with the covenants and stipulations entered into by the said several Leffees with his Majesty, and that in default of such payments being punctually and regularly made, his Majesty's Attorney General will be instructed forthwith to institute proceedings against every such Lessee for enforcing such payment and for refuming the Lands, in respect of which such default shall be made, into the hands of the Crown, such being the conditions upon which the Lands have been demised, and such conditions having been particularly specified in all the Leases which have been granted.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms at York, this fourteenth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, and in the forty-third year of his Majesty's reign.

P. HUNTER. Lt. Govr.

By his Excellency's Command,

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

LONDON, Dec. 13.

A considerable advantage has been obtained over the enemy in the East Indian seas, in a manner wholly unexpected by the public.—Immediately after the delivery of the King's message to Parliament, on the subject of the hostility meditated by France, an overland express was sent to Admiral Rainier, which reached him in the short period of 82 days. A French squadron of one ship of the line, and three or four frigates, with several transports, and more than 2000 troops, arrived soon after at Pondicherry, under the command of Admiral Linois. Admiral Rainier had made preparations for receiving this squadron which he turned to be on the voyage, and, when they arrived, the whole were put under detention, to wait the decision of the question pending between England & France. Thus has the entire naval force of the enemy in that sea fallen into British possession, together with a body of troops, and, doubtless, with many other means of exciting the native Princes to hostility against the English.

January 5.

The signal flying at Deal on Tuesday evening, was in consequence of 30 of the enemy's gun boats having come out of Calais.—Our cruizers immediately sailed, and a heavy firing was heard yesterday morning till ten P. M. it then ceased. Soon afterwards a more distant firing was heard. No particulars have yet been received, but we suppose that the firing proceeded from an attack made by our cruizers upon their gun boats in their passage from Calais to Bologne. It is certain that very confident expectations are entertained along our whole line of coast, of an immediate attempt being made by the enemy. Yet, the frosty weather that has just set in, must, we should think, impede all the operations in the Dutch rivers.

Our troops on the coasts of Sussex & Kent are particularly on the alert. We mentioned yesterday that sudden orders had been received at Hailsham Hast and at Lewes, in consequence of which the troops had marched to the coast. In the middle of the night on Tuesday, orders arrived at Brighton for the 4th dragoons to be ready to march by nine o'clock in the morning, the troops accordingly marched to Silver Hill or Pevensey, we have not yet heard. It was rumoured at Brighton, that the cause of the sudden march was not at all connected with any movements made by the enemy.

Our Dover correspondent states, that the wind yesterday was moderate, and perfectly favourable for the enemy to put to sea: which it was expected they would immediately, if they mean to do it at all. It is obvious that Bonaparte will endeavour as much as possible to make the attempt a confentaneous one from the Dutch and French ports, from Holland, and from Brest. The temporary releases of the latter port from a state of blockade, has afforded him an opportunity of sending the Brest fleet to sea; and a report that it had sailed was current last night. We have not however, been able to trace it to any authentic source.

January 9.

The greatest activity prevails at Plymouth to get the ships of war there ready to join Admiral Cornwallis. The Foudroyant and Mars, were ready to sail last Friday night, but the wind was unfair, and on Saturday it was a dead calm. The outward bound West India convoy were spoken last Thursday off the Eddystone.

We have just seen a letter from an English gentleman who has lately made his escape from Fontainbleau, and remained boldly at Paris a fortnight, by means of a national cockade, and a perfect knowledge of the language, from whence he is now returning via Germany. He says, as from the information I was able to collect at Paris, that city is in a great ferment, on account of Bonaparte's measures to gratify his ambition. The conscripts are refractory. The old veterans speak against the expedition, and say, that they would not embark to be butchered. The Consul is not liked; he has thousands of enemies, and I think the opposition will shortly shew itself: murmurs and complaints multiply, and arrestations are very frequent. It is the opinion of the wiser part of the people still, that the expedition will not take place. Nothing is ready, and all that large army on the coast is only placed there to intimidate the English, if I may use the expression. They are still building gunboats at New Brisack on the Rhine, but very slowly.—Portsmouth Pa.

The King of Spain was seized with a fit of apoplexy on the 9th of December, and continued in a dangerous way.

Political Sketch of Europe,

AT THE LAST DATES.

GREAT BRITAIN.

At the last dates, the whole British Empire continued absorbed in warlike preparation. Like the land of Cadmus, "it was bristled with pikes and bayonets, and alive with armed men." The entire force in arms, equipped and accoutred for "the trial of field," was calculated at Half a Million of soldiers. The British King, in a speech, delivered the 22d November last, alluding to this force, says, "the preparations he had ordered, had been seconded by the voluntary exertion of all ranks of people, in a manner which had proved, that the menaces of France had only served to arouse their native and hereditary spirit; and that all other considerations had been lost in a general disposition to make those efforts and sacrifices which the honor and safety of the Kingdom demanded at the all-important and critical conjuncture."—Such was the description of the spirit of the nation given by its Chief Magistrate.

The official return of the Volunteers, which were then accepted, made to the War-Office, the 15th November, gave of Infantry 387,508: of Cavalry 31,600: of Artillery 6,307.—Total 355,309. These, with the Regulars, Army of Reserve, Militia, &c. amount to 500,000 fighting men.—This immense force is regularly organized, and disciplined. We have seen the appointments to the General Staff; it includes one Commander in Chief, (the Duke of York,) four Generals, twenty-one Lieutenant Generals, forty-six Major Generals, and seven Brigadiers.—Among those we find the Earl Moira, Generals Hutchinson, Pulteney, Churchill, Moore, Balfour, Coote, Hope, Erskine, Tarleton, Doyle, and other veterans, distinguished in the annals of warfare. The troops these commanded were daily exercised in all the duties of the field of carnage; and a constant succession was kept up of marching, alarms, reviews, mock fights, &c.—In the districts of London and Westminster alone, no less than 40,000 Volunteers were at the drill every morning; and the returns of one regiment gave 50,077 effective rank and file, in the field. "In the ranks of the Volunteer corps were to be seen Peeresses of the Blood, Peers, and Commoners. Mr. Pitt, the late Prime Minister, is Colonel of the Cinque Port Volunteers; and the celebrated Charles James Fox, a Private in the Chelsea Volunteers. This spirit of Volunteering had risen with the exigencies of the times; and had experienced no abatement at the date of our last accounts. It appeared to form such a bulwark to the Empire, as, under Divine Providence, would not only bid defiance to invasion, but be able to hurl back the vengeance which the French had threatened. Such evidence of the paramount spirit in the Kingdom, may be seen in the fixed determination expressed by the King to his Parliament, to the extent of an invasion, to share in person the exertions and dangers of his people, in defence of the constitution, the religion, laws and independence of the empire. The preparations made for erecting the Royal Standard, and the collection of the King's field-equipage, were indications that he was in earnest.

The regular force of the Kingdom—the Army of Reserve—and the best disciplined of the Militia, were stationed on the coast; which was fortified at all points; while the entrances to all the rivers and inlets were defended by innumerable floating batteries, block ships, and gun-boats.

Besides the above forces, there were many hundred Associations of Men, armed with pikes, to fire in heaps; corps of guides, drivers, sappers, and miners, to conduct detachments through unfrequented passages; to drive off the cattle, to destroy bridges, to blow up roads, and to throw every impediment in the way of an invading foe.

The British naval preparations had not been on a scale equally extensive with those on land. Nevertheless the Fleet was formidable in point of numbers; and without a hyperbole, may be said to command and cover the Ocean. A strong fleet under Admiral Cornwallis, had for months been stationed off Brest.—Lord Keith commanded another fleet in the North Sea, which watched the coast of Holland.—Lord Nelson had a third in the Mediterranean.—Sir Edward Pellew, had a squadron of four sail of the line off Ferrol.—Admiral Montague, with a flying squadron, scoured the coast of France; another squadron was cruising off the coast of Ireland; and the Channel, and parts in the expected track of the invading flotillas, were literally whitened with the canvas of light frigates, corvettes, bomb-ketches, gun-boats, and cutters.

The vigilance of the British Naval Commanders was in full exercise, in watching the coasts of France and Holland; and was continually excited by the manœuvres of the French gun-boats in trips from port to port. These Lilliputian expeditions which, however, make a showy figure in the "Moniteur," and the orders of Admiral Bruix, remind one of Gulliver's rowing his boat in a wooden trough before the King of Brobdinag, for the amusement of the Court.—When Bonaparte was lately on the coast, these expeditions were frequent. Though the whole reliance of the British Cabinet was not on its fleet; the greatest activity prevailed in the Dock-Yards in equipping vessels for sea.—A heavy impress of seamen had been made late in November; and the Parliament had voted 120000 seamen for the service of the year 1804.

Though engaged in defensive measures, the British had not been unmindful of making impressions in foreign parts. The British King announced that his forces had captured St. Lucia, Tonago, St. Pierre, Demarara, and Essequibo; and of the places taken last war, we believe they still retain Pondicherry, in the East-Indies, Goree, on the coast of Africa; and Malta, in the Mediterranean.

Notwithstanding the business of war was the chief pursuit of the nation, the commerce of Great Britain had not experienced any visible diminution; nor had the progress of internal improvement, the liberal arts and sciences, been impeded; and the volunteer scheme had not been permitted to take many manufacturers from their looms or work-shops. The exports of the Kingdom the last year, was greater than in any preceding one.—British manufactures find their way into every quarter of the world—maugre all the measures of Bonaparte, they are smuggled in great quantities into France; and in the German papers we find it a subject of complaint, that all the fairs of the empire were glutted with English goods; which arrives at Venice, Trieste, &c. by the Adriatic.

The revenues of the nation were extremely flourishing; and the system of defraying the expences of the war by taxes without burdening posterity, was adhered to.

The harvest in Great Britain the last year was abundant; but the Ministry, calculating on the clamours which a scarcity, should it prevail, always produces, and which cannot be reasoned with or refuted, have been provident in importing great quantities of grain from Germany and South Prussia. At Dantzic one English house had purchased 1800 loads of wheat.

No precaution appeared to escape the attention of those who directed the affairs of Britain. The French prisoners who had been captured in the numerous prizes which have been taken, had been removed from the coast to the interior of the Kingdom; where, though they were allowed every indulgence which a liberal policy could prescribe, they were narrowly watched—Certain discoveries rendered the precaution highly necessary.

Though menaced by a powerful foe, the British empire still had confidence in its physical powers, wealth, resources, population,† and the union and loyalty of its citizens. That foe sees and feels the omnipotency of that confidence; and in that knowledge we may search for the true cause of the delay of his threatened invasion. In the present days of British prosperity, the never presented so formidable a front to any enemy, as the did at our last dates. The language of the nation to her armed defenders, is forcibly and beautifully displayed in the following address, with which we conclude this sketch.

"SHALL Britain's Genius, 'midst rude War's alarms,
In silence rest, nor call her Son's to Arms?
Shall Britons yield an unrefisting prey,
And own a hale Ufurper's Foreign sway?
No—when ye march to guard your sea-girt shore,
"Return victorious, or return no more."

"Greece, in her Freedom's most propitious hour,
Wag'd impious wars in quest of Spoil or pow'r!
And Rome, thro' many an age, woudily brave,
Fought to oppreſs, and conquer'd to enslave.
E'en the bright wreaths our Edwards, Henries, claim,
Crown'd not the cause of Freedom, but of Fame;
While fond ambition, with misguided zeal,
Sought: England's glory more than England's weal.
But when, of old, to chase a foreign hoft,
The painted guardians of our Albion's coast,
O'er her white cliffs defcending from afar
On Cæsar's legions pour'd the tide of war,
When scythed chariots fwept th' enfanguin'd plain,
Then Barda anraptur'd, fung this patriot ftrain;
"Ye gen'rous Youths, who guard this British shore!
"Return victorious, or return no more."

"Again, Britannia founds her juft alarms,
Nor lures by Int'reft or Ambition's charms;
But prompts to deeds, which fairer trophies yield,
Than gain'd o'er Afric's or Hindoostan's immortal field—
And bids you guard, in free and gallant ſtrife,
All that adorns, improves, or fweetens life.
Your Homes, by faithful Love and Friendſhip bleſt,
Each Pledge of Love now fmiling at the breaſt;
Your Daughters, freſh in bloom, mature in charms,
Doom'd (ſhould he conquer) to the Spoiler's arms;
Your Sons who hear the Tyrant's threats with ſcorn,
The Joys, the Hopes, of Ages yet unborn!
All, all, endear this juſt, this ſacred Cauſe,
Your Sov'reign's Throne—your Freedom, Faith, and Laws!
Champions of Britain's cherish'd Rights ye ſtand,
Protect, preſerve, avenge your Native Land!
For lo! the cries, amidſt the Battle's roar,
"Return victorious, or return no more."

IRELAND.

The ſame ſpirit of warlike preparation prevails equally ſtrong in Ireland, as in England; where, in proportion to their numbers a greater force is in arms. Many of the regular regiments have been ſent there from England; and in the Iriſh ſtaff we find ſome of the moſt active and enterprizing general officers in ſervice.

The traces of the late local inſurrection were daily wearing out.—The executions for treaſon, had become seldom; and the evidences of loyalty were daily increaſing.

NOTE.

† A gentleman recently from England, has put into our hands, a "Cenſus of the population of England, Scotland and Wales," taken in 1801 and 1802. By this it appears, that there were in England, forty counties, 1,538,392 houſes, and 9,164 332 perſons: That in Scotland there were thirty three counties, 394, 93 houſes; and 1,607,760 perſons; and in Wales, twelve counties, 111,564 houſes, and 541,546 perſons.—Total 11,314.138 perſons. The population of Ireland being eſtimated at 4,000,000, add'd to the above, will make the number of perſons in the United Kingdom, amount to fifteen millions, three hundred and fourteen thouſand, one hundred and thirty-eight. The population of England, Scotland and Wales, in 1700, amounted to 6.528,000. In 1750, to 7,870,000; in 1802, to 11,314.138.—Increaſe during the laſt century, 4.791.138, being upwards of two thirds. In the above cenſus, the perſons in the iſlands of Guernſey, Jerſey, Alderney and Sark, the Scilly iſles, and the Iſle of Man were eſtimated at 80,000. The army, including militia 198,351.—The navy, excluding marines 126.279.—Seamen in regiſtered ſhipping 144.558.—Convicts in the hulks 1,410. At the foot of this valuable document, is an exact ſtatement of the population of the principal cities and towns of Great Britain, placed in numerical order, where it amounts to more than 10,000, viz.

GENTLEMEN,

THE period of the natural diſſolution of the preſent Parliament having nearly arrived, I am induced to offer myſelf as a Candidate to repreſent you in the enſuing Parliament.—In thus preſenting myſelf to your notice, I cannot refrain from obſerving, that, I ſtand unconnected with any party, unſupported by any influence, and unambitious of any patronage, other than the Suffrages of thoſe, who conſider the impartial enjoyment of their rights, and the free exerciſe of their privileges as objects, not only worthy of the vigilance of the legiſlator, but alſo eſſential to their political ſecurity and to their local proſperity.

The opportunity of addreſſing myſelf to men who may be inclined to think with freedom, and to act with independency, is to me truly deſirable; and the receiving of the countenance and ſupport of thoſe characters, muſt ever leave on my mind impreſſions more than gratifying.

It would ill accord with my ſentiments to expreſs myſelf in the uſual terms of the zeal and fidelity of an Election Candidate; inaſmuch as that the principle of previous aſſurances has frequently, in the exerciſe of the functions of the Repreſentative, been either forgotten or occaſionally abandoned: but I hope it will not be conſidered vaunting in me to aſſert, that, that zeal and the fidelity which have manifeſted themſelves in the diſcharge of my duty to my Clients, will not be abated in ſupporting a more important truſt——THE CAUSE OF THE PUBLIC.

I have the honor to be,
Gentlemen,
Your devoted humble Servant,

PETER HUNTER Esquire,

Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

WHEREAS by a certain Act of the Legislature of this Province, passed in the forty-fourth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act for granting to his "Majesty, a certain sum of money for "the further encouragement of the "growth and cultivation of Hemp "within this Province, and the ex-"portation thereof," it is enacted, That from and out of any fund or funds now remaining, or which may hereafter come, into the hands of the Receiver General, arising from and out of the rates and duties already raised, levied and collected, or which hereafter may be raised, levied and collected to and for the uses of this Province, there be granted to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, the sum of one thousand pounds, to be disposed of, appropriated and laid out as a public stock or capital, applicable to the purpose of purchasing Hemp the growth of this Province, and of discharging the expences incident to such purchases, and the exportation and sale thereof, in such manner, and under such regulations, as to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council thereof, should from time to time seem meet; And that it should and may be lawful to and for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, to issue one or more Proclamation or Proclamations, and therein to name such and so many persons within the Province as to him shall seem meet, as Commissioners for the purchasing of Merchantable Hemp the growth of this Province, which said Commissioners, or any one or more of them, are and is thereby authorized and empowered to purchase such Hemp at and after the price or rate of forty pounds per ton: And Whereas it is further enacted by the said Act, that after the passing of that Act, no person or persons whatsoever, shall be intitled to any further Bounty over and beyond the said price or sum of forty pounds per ton, or to any Premium under any Proclamation or Proclamations, heretofore issued by the Lieutenant Governor, for the encouragement of the growth and exportation of Hemp, for or in respect of any Hemp for which the said sum of forty pounds per ton shall be paid under the powers thereby given; Nor shall any Bounty or Premium be paid or payable for or in respect of any Hemp not intended for sale to some one of the Commissioners acting in virtue of the powers thereby given, which shall not be claimed on or before the thirtieth day of September next, under proper and sufficient Documents, to be on or before that day, presented to the person or persons duly empowered or authorized to allow or pay the same: Provided that before the said Commissioners to be appointed in virtue of that Act, or any of them, shall under the authority thereby given, purchase any Hemp from any person or persons whomsoever, such Commissioners and each of them are, and is thereby authorized and required, to administer to such person or persons offering any such Hemp for sale, an Oath in the said Act particularly set forth, whereby such person or persons, is or are to swear that the Hemp which he, she or they had that day offered for sale to the Commissioner appointed by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor for the purchase of Hemp, and every part thereof, was raised within the Province of Upper Canada by him or them, or by some other person or persons (to be named in such oath) and that no Bounty or Premium had been paid or claimed for any part of such Hemp, by any person or persons whomsoever, save and except what was included in the sum or price for which he, she or they had offered to sell such Hemp to the said Commissioner.

Now know all whom it may concern, that I PETER HUNTER Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, well knowing the fidelity, diligence and ability of the Honorable James Baby of Sandwich, the Honorable Richard Cartwright of Kingston, the Honorable Robert Hamilton of Queenstown, all Members of the Legislative Council of this Province, and William Allan of York in the Home District Esquire, do, by virtue of the power so vested in me as aforesaid, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, nominate, constitute and appoint the said James Baby, Richard Cartwright, Robert Hamilton, and William Allan, to be Commissioners for the purchasing of merchantable Hemp, the growth of the said Province, at and after the price or rate of Forty Pounds Halifax Currency per Ton, which said sum of Forty Pounds is to be paid by the said Commissioners respectively, to the party or parties selling such Hemp, in Money only, according to the rules, regulations, limitations and restrictions in the said in part above recited Act expressed and contained, with full power and authority, to do and perform all and each of the matters and things in the said Act authorized or required by them the said Commissioners to be done and performed.

Given under my Hand, and Seal at Arms, at York, this Twenty-Third Day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and four, and in the forty-fourth year of His Majesty's Reign.

P. HUNTER, Lt. Govr.

By His Excellency's Command,
Wm. Jarvis, Secy.

AN ACT

For granting to his Majesty, a certain sum of money, for the further encouragement of the growth and cultivation of Hemp within this Province, and the exportation thereof.

[Passed March 9th, 1804.]

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN,

WHEREAS it would very much encourage and promote the cultivation of Hemp in this Province, if some provision was made by the Legislature for the purchase and exportation thereof; in order therefore to make provision for so beneficial an object, so far as the present resources of the Province will admit, We your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Commons of Upper Canada, in Parliament assembled, do most humbly beseech your Majesty that it be enacted, and be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth "year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act "for making more effectual provision for the government of the Province of Quebec, in North "America, and to make further provision for the "government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That from and out of any fund or funds now remaining, or which may hereafter come into the hands of the Receiver General, arising from and out of the rates and duties already raised, levied and collected, or which may hereafter be raised, levied and collected, in and for the use of this Province, there be granted to his Majesty, his heirs and succeſſors, the ſum of one thouſand pounds, to be diſpoſed of, appropriated and laid out as a public ſtock or capital, applicable to the purpoſe of purchaſing Hemp, the growth of this Province, and of diſcharging the expences incident to ſuch purchaſes and the exportation and ſale thereof, in ſuch manner and under ſuch regulations as to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government of this Province, by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council thereof, ſhall from time to time ſeem meet.

II. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That at any time or times from and after the paſſing of this Act, it ſhall and may be lawful to and for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council of this Province, to iſſue one or more Proclamation or Proclamations, and therein to name ſuch and ſo many perſons within the Province as to him ſhall ſeem meet, as Commiſſioners for the purchaſing of merchantable Hemp, the growth of this Province, which ſaid Commiſſioners, or any one or more of them, are and is hereby authoriſed and empowered to purchaſe ſuch Hemp, at and after the price or rate of forty pounds per ton.

III. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That from and after the paſſing of this Act, no perſon or perſons whatſoever ſhall be entitled to any further bounty over and beyond the ſaid price or ſum of forty pounds per ton, or to any premium under any Proclamation or Proclamations heretofore iſſued by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, for the encouragement of the growth and exportation of Hemp, for or in reſpect of any Hemp for which the ſaid ſum of forty pounds per ton ſhall be paid under the powers hereby given; nor ſhall any bounty or premium be paid or payable for or in reſpect of any Hemp not intended for ſale to ſome one of the Commiſſioners acting in virtue of the powers hereby given, which ſhall not be claimed on or before the thirtieth day of September next, under proper and ſufficient documents to be on or before that day prefented to the perſon or perſons duly empowered or authorized to allow or pay the ſame, any law now in the contrary notwithſtanding. Provided nevertheleſs, That before the ſaid Commiſſioners to be appointed in virtue of this Act, or any of them, ſhall, under the authority hereby given, purchaſe any Hemp from any perſon or perſons whomſoever, ſuch Commiſſioners and each of them, are and is hereby authoriſed and required to adminiſter to the perſon or perſons offering any ſuch Hemp for ſale, the following Oath;

"I A. B. do ſwear, that the Hemp which I have "now offered for ſale to C. D. a Commiſſioner "named in the Act entitled, An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act "paſſed in the fourteenth year of his Majeſty's reign, intituled, "An Act for making more effectual provi- "ſion for the government of the Province of Que- "bec, in North America, and to make further pro- "viſion for the government of the ſaid Province," and by the authority of the ſame, That from and after the paſſing of this Act, if any perſon or perſons whomſoever (other than ſuch as are, or ſhall be enliſted as Soldiers) ſhall, by words or with money, or by any other ways or means whatſoever, directly or indirectly, prevail upon, procure, perſuade, or encourage, or endeavour or attempt to prevail upon, procure, perſuade or encourage any Soldier or Soldiers to deſert or leave his Majeſty's ſervice, and ſhall be thereof lawfully convicted, the Court or Judge before whom ſuch offender or ſhall be convicted, ſhall immediately on ſuch conviction, award and adjudge ſuch perſon and perſons to conſtruction as aforeſaid, to be committed to the common Gaol of the Diſtrict where ſuch offender ſhall be to tried, there to remain without Bail or Mainprize for the ſpace of ſix Calendar months; and if from the circumſtances and heinouſneſs of the crime, ſhall be thought proper and expedient to increaſe the punihment, ſuch Court or Judge ſhall alſo further award and adjudge, that ſuch offender to convicted as aforeſaid, ſhall forfeit and pay a ſum not exceeding forty pounds, and if ſuch offender ſhall not on or before the third day previous to the expiration of ſuch imprifonment as aforeſaid pay ſuch fine, then, and in ſuch caſe, the ſaid offender ſhall be publicly whipped.

II. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That if any perſon from and after the paſſing of this Act, ſhall harbour, conceal, receive or aſſiſt any Deſerter from his Majeſty's ſervice, knowing him to be ſuch, ſuch perſon ſo offending, ſhall forfeit the ſum of twenty pounds, and if ſuch ſum of twenty pounds ſhall not immediately on ſuch conviction being pronounced, be paid into Court, the Court or Judge before whom ſuch conviction ſhall be had, ſhall forth with award, order and adjudge ſuch offender to be committed to the common Gaol of the Diſtrict in which ſuch offender ſhall be to convicted, there to remain, without Bail or Mainprize for the ſpace of three Calendar months, or until ſuch ſum, not exceeding three Calendar months, as the ſaid ſum of twenty pounds ſhall be paid.

III. Provided nevertheleſs, That no conviction ſhall be pronounced under the authority of this Act, in any Court or Juriſdiction whatſoever in this Province, ſave and except by indictment preferred or preſented before a Court, or Judge or Judges ſitting in the execution of a Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery; nor ſhall any proſecution be carried on by virtue of this Act, if the ſame ſhall not be commenced, within ſix Calendar months next after the offence ſhall be charged to have been committed, unleſs the offender ſhall within the ſaid ſix months have departed out of the Province, in which caſe it ſhall and may be lawful to commence ſuch proſecution at any time within ſix calendar months next after ſuch offender's return into the Province, and to carry the ſame to conviction. But it is hereby declared, that the iſſuing any warrant for the apprehending of any perſon charged with any offence againſt this Act, by any one of his Majeſty's Juſtices of the Peace for this Province, ſhall be held and deemed to be a commencement of a proſecution, within the true meaning of the proviſions herein in that reſpect contained.

IV. And be it Enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That in order the more effectually to prevent the eſcape of any ſuch offender or offenders as aforeſaid, it ſhall and may be lawful at any time, from and after the paſſing of this Act, to and for any one or more of his Majeſty's Juſtices of the Peace, on the proof upon oath being made before him or them, that any perſon has committed any one of the offences herein before deſcribed, to iſſue his or their warrant or warrants for the apprehenſion of ſuch offender or offenders, or perſon or perſons charged with ſuch offence, and to cauſe ſuch offender or offenders, or ſuch perſon or perſons to charged as aforeſaid, to be brought before him or them, and upon the examination of ſuch offender or offenders, and hearing the evidence, ſuch Juſtice or Juſtices of the Peace ſhall either bail or commit to Priſon, or ſhall Bail ſuch offender or offenders, in like manner as by law any other perſon or perſons charged criminally is or are dealt with; ſave and except, that if ſuch Juſtice or Juſtices ſhall be ſatisfied with the evidence againſt ſuch offender or offenders, ſuch Juſtice or Juſtices ſhall commit ſuch offender or offenders to the common Gaol of the Diſtrict, or in caſe there ſhall be no Gaol in that Diſtrict, to the common Gaol of any adjoining Diſtrict, and ſuch offender and offenders ſhall remain to committed until his, her or their trial ſhall be brought on, unleſs ſuch offender or offenders ſhall, with two good and ſufficient ſureties, to the ſatisfaction of the ſaid Juſtice or Juſtices, become bound by recognizance to our Soveraign Lord the King, in manner hereafter ſpecified, (that is to ſay) if the ſaid offender ſhall be charged with having committed any offence againſt the proviſions in the firſt Section of this Act contained, then ſuch offender or perſon ſo charged, ſhall become bound in the ſum of two hundred pounds, and each of ſuch ſureties in the ſum of one hundred pounds, and if ſuch offender ſhall be charged with having committed any offence againſt the proviſions in the ſecond Section of this Act contained, then ſuch offender or perſon ſo charged, ſhall become bound in the ſum of forty pounds, and each of ſuch ſureties in the ſum of twenty pounds, conditioned in each of ſuch recognizances, for the appearance of ſuch perſon ſo charged with any offence againſt this Act, at the then next Aſſizes, or Seſſion of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery, to be holden for the Diſtrict where ſuch offence ſhall be charged to be committed, or at ſuch other or future Aſſizes or Seſſion of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery, to which the trial of ſuch offender ſhall for juſt cauſe be adjourned.

V. Provided likewiſe, and be it further Enacted, That if it ſhall happen that any offence againſt this Act, ſhall take place in any Diſtrict where there ſhall be no common Gaol at the time of ſuch conviction, it ſhall and may be lawful to and for the Court or Judge before whom ſuch conviction ſhall be had, to award, order and adjudge, that ſuch offender or offenders to to be convicted, ſhall be committed to the common gaol of any adjoining Diſtrict, in which there ſhall at that time be a Gaol, and alſo to order and adjudge, that any further puniſhment to be inflicted under the authority of this Act, ſhall be within the Diſtrict where ſuch conviction ſhall take place, or in the Diſtrict to the Gaol of which ſuch offender ſhall be committed, as to ſuch Judge or Court ſhall ſeem meet: And in caſe of any commitment by any Juſtice or Juſtices of the Peace before trial, or any commitment by any ſuch Court, or Judge or Judges as aforeſaid after conviction, under the authority by this Act given, the Treaſurer and Gaoler of the Diſtrict to the Gaol of which ſuch offender or perſon charged with or convicted of any offence againſt the Act ſhall be committed, are, and each of them is hereby reſpectively required, to allow to each perſon during his or her commitment or confinement there, ſuch and the like maintenance and ſubſiſtence as is by law allowed to perſons in cuſtody under any criminal charge; and the Treaſurer of the Diſtrict from which ſuch offender or perſon ſo charged or convicted ſhall be ſo ſent, ſhall, and he is hereby required, to reimburſe and pay to the Treaſurer of the diſtrict, in which ſuch perſon ſhall have been confined, out of the firſt monies which ſhall come to his hands, ſuch ſum and ſums of money as ſhall have been to lawfully expended, according to the proviſions in that reſpect herein before contained, for the maintenance and ſubſiſtence of any ſuch perſon or perſons as aforeſaid.

VI. And be it further Enacted, That in caſe any ſuch perſon or perſons as aforeſaid ſhall, by virtue of this Act, be committed to the common Gaol other than the Gaol of the Diſtrict in which the offence ſhall be charged to have been committed, the Sheriff of the Diſtrict in which ſuch offence ſhall be charged to have been committed, ſhall, and he is hereby required and commanded, to convey ſuch perſon before the Aſſize, or Seſſion at which any trial for any offence againſt this Act ſhall be had, to convey ſuch perſon to charged from the Gaol in which he or ſhe ſhall be to confined, to the Diſtrict where ſuch offence was charged to be committed, and there to keep him or her in cloſe cuſtody and confinement, and have ſuch perſon ready to take his or her trial at the Aſſizes or Seſſion of Oyer and Terminer then next enſuing: And all and every Sheriff and Gaoler, Conſtable and other Officers of this Province, is and are hereby required and commanded to execute and obey all and every warrant and warrants, order and orders, ſentence and ſentences, which ſhall be pronounced or iſſued by any ſuch Court or Judge, Juſtice or Juſtices as are herein before mentioned, for the purpoſe of carrying the proviſions of this Act into execution.

VII. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That all the fines, forfeitures and penalties that ſhall be incurred under and by virtue of this Act, ſhall be accounted for to his Majeſty, his heirs and ſucceſſors, to and for the public uſes of this Province, through the Lords Commiſſioners of his Majeſty's Treaſury for the time being, in ſuch manner and form as it ſhall pleaſe his Majeſty to direct.

AN ACT

For the exemplary Puniſhment of all and every perſon and perſons who ſhall ſeduce, or attempt to ſeduce, or aid or aſſiſt, or attempt to aid or aſſiſt any Soldier to deſert his Majeſty's ſervice, or who ſhall harbour, conceal, receive or aſſiſt any Deſerter from ſuch ſervice.

[Paſſed March 9th, 1804.]

WHEREAS pernicious practices have for ſome time paſt prevailed in this Province, by evil diſpoſed perſons diſaffected to his Majeſty's Government, and particularly to the Military ſervice thereof, in ſeducing and deſuding his Subjects who had engaged themſelves as Soldiers in ſuch ſervice, and prevailing on them to deſert, and alſo in harbouring, aſſiſting and concealing ſuch Deſerters; for remedy whereof for the future, and for the exemplary puniſhment of ſuch perſons in ſuch caſes offending, Be it enacted by the King's moſt excellent Majeſty, by and with the advice and conſent of the Legiſlative Council and Aſſembly of the Province of Upper Canada, conſtituted and aſſembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act paſſed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act "paſſed in the fourteenth year of his Majeſty's reign, "intituled, "An Act for making more effectual pro- "viſion for the government of the Province of Que- "bec, in North America, and to make further pro- "viſion for the government of the ſaid Province," and by the authority of the ſame, That from and after the paſſing of this Act, if any perſon or perſons whomſoever (other than ſuch as are, or ſhall be enliſted as Soldiers) ſhall, by words or with money, or by any other ways or means whatſoever, directly or indirectly, prevail upon, procure, perſuade, or encourage, or endeavour or attempt to prevail upon, procure, perſuade or encourage any Soldier or Soldiers to deſert or leave his Majeſty's ſervice, and ſhall be thereof lawfully convicted, the Court or Judge before whom ſuch offender or ſhall be convicted, ſhall immediately on ſuch conviction, award and adjudge ſuch perſon and perſons to conſtruction as aforeſaid, to be committed to the common Gaol of the Diſtrict where ſuch offender ſhall be to tried, there to remain without Bail or Mainprize for the ſpace of ſix Calendar months; and if from the circumſtances and heinouſneſs of the crime, ſhall be thought proper and expedient to increaſe the puniſhment, ſuch Court or Judge ſhall alſo further award and adjudge, that ſuch offender to convicted as aforeſaid, ſhall forfeit and pay a ſum not exceeding forty pounds, and if ſuch offender ſhall not on or before the third day previous to the expiration of ſuch imprifonment as aforeſaid pay ſuch fine, then, and in ſuch caſe, the ſaid offender ſhall be publicly whipped.

II. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That if any perſon from and after the paſſing of this Act, ſhall harbour, conceal, receive or aſſiſt any Deſerter from his Majeſty's ſervice, knowing him to be ſuch, ſuch perſon ſo offending, ſhall forfeit the ſum of twenty pounds, and if ſuch ſum of twenty pounds ſhall not immediately on ſuch conviction being pronounced, be paid into Court, the Court or Judge before whom ſuch conviction ſhall be had, ſhall forth with award, order and adjudge ſuch offender to be committed to the common Gaol of the Diſtrict in which ſuch offender ſhall be to convicted, there to remain, without Bail or Mainprize for the ſpace of three Calendar months, or until ſuch ſum, not exceeding three Calendar months, as the ſaid ſum of twenty pounds ſhall be paid.

III. Provided nevertheleſs, That no conviction ſhall be pronounced under the authority of this Act, in any Court or Juriſdiction whatſoever in this Province, ſave and except by indictment preferred or preſented before a Court, or Judge or Judges ſitting in the execution of a Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery; nor ſhall any proſecution be carried on by virtue of this Act, if the ſame ſhall not be commenced, within ſix Calendar months next after the offence ſhall be charged to have been committed, unleſs the offender ſhall within the ſaid ſix months have departed out of the Province, in which caſe it ſhall and may be lawful to commence ſuch proſecution at any time within ſix calendar months next after ſuch offender's return into the Province, and to carry the ſame to conviction. But it is hereby declared, that the iſſuing any warrant for the apprehending of any perſon charged with any offence againſt this Act, by any one of his Majeſty's Juſtices of the Peace for this Province, ſhall be held and deemed to be a commencement of a proſecution, within the true meaning of the proviſions herein in that reſpect contained.

IV. And be it Enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That in order the more effectually to prevent the eſcape of any ſuch offender or offenders as aforeſaid, it ſhall and may be lawful at any time, from and after the paſſing of this Act, to and for any one or more of his Majeſty's Juſtices of the Peace, on the proof upon oath being made before him or them, that any perſon has committed any one of the offences herein before deſcribed, to iſſue his or their warrant or warrants for the apprehenſion of ſuch offender or offenders, or perſon or perſons charged with ſuch offence, and to cauſe ſuch offender or offenders, or ſuch perſon or perſons to charged as aforeſaid, to be brought before him or them, and upon the examination of ſuch offender or offenders, and hearing the evidence, ſuch Juſtice or Juſtices of the Peace ſhall either bail or commit to Priſon, or ſhall Bail ſuch offender or offenders, in like manner as by law any other perſon or perſons charged criminally is or are dealt with; ſave and except, that if ſuch Juſtice or Juſtices ſhall be ſatisfied with the evidence againſt ſuch offender or offenders, ſuch Juſtice or Juſtices ſhall commit ſuch offender or offenders to the common Gaol of the Diſtrict, or in caſe there ſhall be no Gaol in that Diſtrict, to the common Gaol of any adjoining Diſtrict, and ſuch offender and offenders ſhall remain to committed until his, her or their trial ſhall be brought on, unleſs ſuch offender or offenders ſhall, with two good and ſufficient ſureties, to the ſatisfaction of the ſaid Juſtice or Juſtices, become bound by recognizance to our Soveraign Lord the King, in manner hereafter ſpecified, (that is to ſay) if the ſaid offender ſhall be charged with having committed any offence againſt the proviſions in the firſt Section of this Act contained, then ſuch offender or perſon ſo charged, ſhall become bound in the ſum of two hundred pounds, and each of ſuch ſureties in the ſum of one hundred pounds, and if ſuch offender ſhall be charged with having committed any offence againſt the proviſions in the ſecond Section of this Act contained, then ſuch offender or perſon ſo charged, ſhall become bound in the ſum of forty pounds, and each of ſuch ſureties in the ſum of twenty pounds, conditioned in each of ſuch recognizances, for the appearance of ſuch perſon ſo charged with any offence againſt this Act, at the then next Aſſizes, or Seſſion of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery, to be holden for the Diſtrict where ſuch offence ſhall be charged to be committed, or at ſuch other or future Aſſizes or Seſſion of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery, to which the trial of ſuch offender ſhall for juſt cauſe be adjourned.

V. Provided likewiſe, and be it further Enacted, That if it ſhall happen that any offence againſt this Act, ſhall take place in any Diſtrict where there ſhall be no common Gaol at the time of ſuch conviction, it ſhall and may be lawful to and for the Court or Judge before whom ſuch conviction ſhall be had, to award, order and adjudge, that ſuch offender or offenders to to be convicted, ſhall be committed to the common gaol of any adjoining Diſtrict, in which there ſhall at that time be a Gaol, and alſo to order and adjudge, that any further puniſhment to be inflicted under the authority of this Act, ſhall be within the Diſtrict where ſuch conviction ſhall take place, or in the Diſtrict to the Gaol of which ſuch offender ſhall be committed, as to ſuch Judge or Court ſhall ſeem meet: And in caſe of any commitment by any Juſtice or Juſtices of the Peace before trial, or any commitment by any ſuch Court, or Judge or Judges as aforeſaid after conviction, under the authority by this Act given, the Treaſurer and Gaoler of the Diſtrict to the Gaol of which ſuch offender or perſon charged with or convicted of any offence againſt the Act ſhall be committed, are, and each of them is hereby reſpectively required, to allow to each perſon during his or her commitment or confinement there, ſuch and the like maintenance and ſubſiſtence as is by law allowed to perſons in cuſtody under any criminal charge; and the Treaſurer of the Diſtrict from which ſuch offender or perſon ſo charged or convicted ſhall be ſo ſent, ſhall, and he is hereby required, to reimburſe and pay to the Treaſurer of the diſtrict, in which ſuch perſon ſhall have been confined, out of the firſt monies which ſhall come to his hands, ſuch ſum and ſums of money as ſhall have been to lawfully expended, according to the proviſions in that reſpect herein before contained, for the maintenance and ſubſiſtence of any ſuch perſon or perſons as aforeſaid.

VI. And be it further Enacted, That in caſe any ſuch perſon or perſons as aforeſaid ſhall, by virtue of this Act, be committed to the common Gaol other than the Gaol of the Diſtrict in which the offence ſhall be charged to have been committed, the Sheriff of the Diſtrict in which ſuch offence ſhall be charged to have been committed, ſhall, and he is hereby required and commanded, to convey ſuch perſon before the Aſſize, or Seſſion at which any trial for any offence againſt this Act ſhall be had, to convey ſuch perſon to charged from the Gaol in which he or ſhe ſhall be to confined, to the Diſtrict where ſuch offence was charged to be committed, and there to keep him or her in cloſe cuſtody and confinement, and have ſuch perſon ready to take his or her trial at the Aſſizes or Seſſion of Oyer and Terminer then next enſuing: And all and every Sheriff and Gaoler, Conſtable and other Officers of this Province, is and are hereby required and commanded to execute and obey all and every warrant and warrants, order and orders, ſentence and ſentences, which ſhall be pronounced or iſſued by any ſuch Court or Judge, Juſtice or Juſtices as are herein before mentioned, for the purpoſe of carrying the proviſions of this Act into execution.

VII. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That all the fines, forfeitures and penalties that ſhall be incurred under and by virtue of this Act, ſhall be accounted for to his Majeſty, his heirs and ſucceſſors, to and for the public uſes of this Province, through the Lords Commiſſioners of his Majeſty's Treaſury for the time being, in ſuch manner and form as it ſhall pleaſe his Majeſty to direct.

☞ THE Chief Juſtice has adjourned the Sittings of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery and of Aſſize and Niſi Prius for the Home Diſtrict, until Wedneſday the 20th day of June next, at 12 o'clock in the forenoon.

☞ THE further execution of the Commiſſion for aſcertaining Titles to Lands for the Home Diſtrict, is adjourned to the firſt day of May and the thirteenth day of June next. And all perſons whom it may concern, will take notice, that the Act under which the ſaid Commiſſion iſſued, will expire very ſhortly after the ſaid thirteenth day of June.

York, 24th March, 1804.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

WHITEHALL, Jan. 10.

The King has been pleaſed to conſtitute and appoint the Right Hon. John Earl of St. Vincent, Admiral of the White Squadron of his Majeſty's fleet, Lieut. Gen. of the Royal Marine forces, and Knight of the moſt honorable the order of the Bath; Sir Philip Stevens, and Sir Thomas Trowbridge, Baronets; James Adams, John Markham, and John Lemon, Eſquires; and Sir Harry B. Neale, Baronet, to be his Majeſty's Commiſſioners for executing the office of High Admiral of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the dominions, iſlands and territories thereunto belonging.

LONDON, January 26.

A private letter from France relates a circumſtance which, if true, may be productive of conſequences not at the inſtant in the contemplation of the Firſt Conſul. A Ruſſian Nobleman, of high character and connexions, who, upon a tour of ſcientific and philoſophical enquiry, had viſited moſt part of the continent, was recently taken up at Boulogne as a ſpy. With all the tranquility which conſcious innocence may be ſuppoſed to inſpire a great mind, he viewed the acculation and the accuſers, looking with confidence to the juſtice of Bonaparte for liberation and atonement. But he had calculated an a nonentity—the Firſt Conſul, on being apprifed of his arreſt, ordered his execution, which excited at Boulogne equal ſurpriſe and regret; the heroiſm with which the Ruſſian ſubmitted to his fate having created a lively and general intereſt in his favor.

The Britiſh fleet were forced from before Breſt by the ſtorm of Thurſday laſt. On Sunday they were off the Lizard, endeavoring to regain their ſtation.

Ball cartridges are now iſſuing to the volunteers, even in counties ſuppoſed to be little liable to attack.

It is again reported that Ruſſia is arming; but it is laid with a deſign to protect Denmark, if the French aſſail her.

Sir R. Strachan, with a ſquadron, was cruizing off Cadiz on the 3d inſt. ready to take immediate advantage of a rupture with Spain.

The armaments of Auſtria, Pruſſia, and Ruſſia, prove that they are jealous of the power of France. Diſturbances in La Vendee; alarm and diſaffection in the department of Gironde, and the appointment of Murat, the Firſt Conſul's brother, to the ſtation of Governor of Paris, ſhews that diſcontent exiſts and is not partial.

Three French brig gun-boats, fine veſſels, with 50 men each, have been captured and ſent into Portſmouth, they were part of a ſquadron of 10, which ſailed from La Higgue for Boulogne. The others eſcaped. There are 250 ſail at La Hogue, bound to Boulogne.

February 4.

It is a curious and moſt honorable fact, that after the reſt of our Fleet were drove off Breſt by the tremendous gale of the 25th of laſt month, the harbour of Breſt was blockaded for 48 hours by a ſingle Britiſh 74.—The Plantagenet, Capt. De Courcy, was forced by the ſtorm of the 25th to take ſhelter in Penzance Bay; but as ſoon as the weather moderated, ſhe ſailed and reſumed her ſtation off Breſt where ſhe was found by the reſt of the fleet upon their return. The gallant conduct of Captain De Courcy, who with one ſhip blockaded the whole French fleet, was ſo much in the Hibernian ſtyle, that it brings to recollection the exploit of his countryman in America, who having brought in ſome priſoners, and being aſked how he made ſo many? replied, that "by J—s, he ſurrounded them."

February 10.

It is ſaid the militia will ſoon be invited to volunteer their ſervices to a certain extent, for offenſive operations, in the courſe of the ſpring.

The following is an account of the number of officers in the navy:—Admirals 123, Captains 672, Commanders 306, Lieutenants 2447.

Accounts were in the courſe of yeſterday received at the Admiralty from Lord KEITH, reſpecting the blockading ſquadron of Boulogne, as late as Wedneſday laſt. It is ſtated, that the French troops were ſeen embarking, but whether for the purpoſe merely of practice, or of final emarkation, could not of courſe be known. Our ſquadron conſiſted of twenty-ſeven ſail of Men of War of different deſcriptions, and the weather being moderate, they were enabled to ſtand pretty cloſe in.

Private accounts from the weſtern department of France deſcribe that part of the country to be ſtill in a ſtate of conſiderable agitation. In many places the military have been attacked by the peaſants: old animoſities and hatreds have been revived, and have cauſed an open reſiſtance to the execution of the law of military conſcription, not only in the department of Deux Serves, but alſo in La Vendee. Theſe ſcenes have not only ſpread alarm through thoſe countries, but have alſo occaſioned the march of troops and military executions.

February 12.

At Boulogne, it is reported, that an embarkation of the troops had taken place within a few days paſt; but whether for their exercize, as has been the caſe in Holland, or otherwiſe, is not clear.—Both Mr. Yorke and Mr. Addington are ſaid to have expreſſed their conviction this week, that the grand attempt will be made in a very ſhort period of time.

There are alſo accounts from the continent which ſtate, that a body of fifty thouſand French have been ordered to march into the kingdom of Naples, under a pretext that there was an intention to receive an Engliſh force in that quarter.

REAL READINESS.—Every hour, for the laſt ſix months, England has been amuſed with accounts of "the French being quite ready." It may now be aſked—for what? A gentleman who lately left France ſolves this doubt, telling us the French are in the ſtate they mention; the Merchants are all ready—to break. The Peaſants are all ready—to ſtarve. The Sailors are all ready—to leave their ſhips. The Army is nearly ready—to mutiny; and the deſperate Chief Conſul, after all his threats, is ready—to find an excuſe for laying at home.

From the London Courier, Jan. 23.

ITALY, Dec. 25. The American ſhip Philadelphia, Capt. Bainbridge, of 44 guns, which blockaded the harbour of Tripoli, purſuing a Tripolitan xebeck too far, ran aground, and the crew, conſiſting of 350 men, were all made priſoners by the Tripolitans.

PORTSMOUTH, Jan. 31.

This morning arrived three French gun boats (Nos. 45, 47, and 51,) captured laſt night by the Tribune, Capt. Bennet; and the Hydra, Captain Munday. They are remarkably fine brigs, each with three 32 pounders and 50 men on board; ſome of whom are ſoldiers, belonging to the 23d demi-brigade. They are 80 feet long, and 18 wide; draw 6x feet of water forward, and four aft, and are moſt excellent boats, fitted in the completeſt manner with every neceſſary article of ſtores; they are entirely new, and tow upwards of forty ſweeps, and are ſo conſtructed that if run on ſhore they remain perfectly upright, and thus preſent almoſt formidable battery. Each was commanded by an Enſign de Vaiſſeau. Thoſe veſſels ſailed from La Hogue with ten others, for Boulogne, and were captured about ſix leagues from St. Helen's having been blown off the French coaſt. They are ſo every reſpect as capable of continuing at ſea as one of our gun boats, but more adapted for fighting in a ſmooth water. There are one hundred and fifty more of the ſame claſs lying at La Hogue, waiting an opportunity to proceed to Boulogne; and ſhould the weather moderate, they will effect their paſſage in ſpite of our cruizers, which can never annoy them in the manner they could do on ſhore, eſcorted frequently by a body of Dragoons whole purpoſe it is to fire at boats, ſhould they attempt to attack them.

Paris, Sept. 30, 1803. On the 4th inſt. the comedians of the theatre of Amiens, repreſented, at Abbeville, "Ringvic, or the Seigneur of Abbeville," a play founded on an hiſtorical fact which occurred in that city in 1300. The houſe was crowded in every part, and by five o'clock filled with more than 3000 perſons. In the middle of the piece, the ſecond tier of boxes, being too much loaded, fell in with a dreadful crash, on the ſtalls and pit, by which 36 perſons were killed, and 52 dangerouſly wounded.

DOVER, January 6.

The cause of the firing heard off the French coast on Monday evening is now developed. A part of the Corsican's invasion armada is now in sight of the British shore. Capt. Owen, as master of the ceremonies of the narrow channel, has introduced five sail of the advanced guard into the Downs, which appear to be part of the flotilla of twelve sail that were distinguished by Lieutenant Woodcock, at the signal post on East Hill, on Tuesday, as having got out of Calais harbour in the evening of that day, and shaping their course for Boulogne: luckily, however, Captain Owen's vigilant eye descried the hostile movement.

He manned and armed his launch, & succeeded in cutting off the five sail before mentioned. From the best information I can collect, they accord to the following description:

One large schuyt completely fitted for the conveyance of cavalry.

One cutter, with 20 pieces of Rotterdam geneva.

One lugger, with crooks, knees, and other boat timbers, to supply every damage the flotilla might experience; and two other small craft, loaded with sundry stores.

Thirteen soldiers only, I hear, were on board the captured vessels; and seamen sufficient to navigate them.

It is supposed that 50 sail at least were attempting to leave Calais harbour for Boulogne; but seeing the fate of their companions, wisely made a countermand.

To the Free and Independent Electors of the East Riding of York.

GENTLEMEN,

THE period of the natural dissolution of the present Parliament having nearly arrived, I am induced to offer myself as a Candidate to represent you in the ensuing Parliament.—In thus presenting myself to your notice, I cannot refrain from observing, that, I stand unconnected with any party, unsupported by any influence, and unambitious of any patronage, other than the Suffrages of those, who consider the impartial enjoyment of their rights, and the free exercise of their privileges as objects not only worthy of the vigilance of the legislator, but also essential to their political security and to their local prosperity.

The opportunity of addressing myself to men who may be inclined to think with freedom, and to act with independency, is to me truly desirable; and the receiving of the countenance and support of those characters, must ever leave on my mind impressions more than gratifying.

It would ill accord with my sentiments to express myself in the usual terms of the zeal and fidelity of an Election Candidate; inasmuch as that the principle of previous assurances has frequently, in the exercise of the functions of the Representative, been either forgotten or occasionally abandoned: but I hope it will not be engendered vaunting in me to assert, that, that zeal and the fidelity which have manifested themselves in the discharge of my duty to my Clients, will not be abated in supporting a more important trust.—THE CAUSE OF THE PUBLIC.

GEORGE the THIRD by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland KING, Defender of the Faith.

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS, Greeting:

WHereas by our Proclamation, bearing date the ninth day of March last, WE thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to Prorogue our Provincial Parliament until the Sixteenth Day of this present month of April, at which time in our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear; but WE taking into our Royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving Subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you and each of you, that on the twenty-fourth day of May next enfuing, you meet US in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary; Herein fail not.

In testimony whereof WE have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed: Witness our trusty and well beloved PETER HUNTER Esquire, our Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Lieutenant General commanding our Forces in our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at York, this tenth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and four, and in the forty-fourth year of our Reign.

P. H.

WM. JARVIS, Secretary.

PROCLAMATION,

PETER HUNTER Esquire,
Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

WHEREAS by a certain Act of the Legislature of this Province, passed in the forty-fourth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act for granting to his "Majesty, a certain sum of money for "the further encouragement of the "growth and cultivation of Hemp "within this Province, and the exportation thereof," it is enacted, That from and out of any fund or funds now remaining, or which may hereafter come, into the hands of the Receiver General, arising from and out of the rates and duties already raised, levied and collected, or which hereafter may be raised, levied and collected to and for the uses of this Province, there be granted to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, the sum of one thousand pounds, to be disposed of, appropriated and laid out as a public stock or capital, applicable to the purpose of purchasing Hemp the growth of this Province, and of discharging the expences incident to such purchases, and the exportation and sale thereof, in such manner, and under such regulations, as to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council thereof, should from time to time seem meet; And that it should and may be lawful to and for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, to issue one or more Proclamation or Proclamations, and therein to name such and so many persons within the Province as to him shall seem meet, as Commissioners for the purchasing of Merchantable Hemp the growth of this Province, which said Commissioners, or any one or more of them, are and is thereby authorized and empowered to purchase such Hemp at and after the price or rate of forty pounds per ton: AND WHEREAS it is further enacted by the said Act, that after the passing of that Act, no person or persons whatsoever, shall be intitled to any further Bounty over and beyond the said price or sum of forty pounds per ton, or to any Premium under any Proclamation or Proclamations heretofore issued by the Lieutenant Governor, for the encouragement of the growth and exportation of Hemp, for or in respect of any Hemp for which the said sum of forty pounds per ton shall be paid under the powers thereby given; Nor shall any Bounty or Premium be paid or payable for or in respect of any Hemp not intended for sale to some one of the Commissioners acting in virtue of the power thereby given, which shall not be delivered on or before the thirtieth day of September next, under proper certificates, Documents, to be of or before the day, prefented to the person or persons duly empowered or authorized to allow or pay the same: Provided that before the said Commissioners to be appointed in virtue of that Act, or any of them, shall under the authority thereby given, purchase any Hemp from any person or persons whomsoever, such Commissioners and each of them are, and is thereby authorized and required, to administer to such person or persons offering any such Hemp for sale, an Oath in the said Act particularly set forth, whereby such person or persons, is or are to swear that the Hemp which he, she or they had that day offered for sale to the Commissioner appointed by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor for the purchase of Hemp, and every part thereof, was raised within the Province of Upper Canada by him or them, or by some other person or persons (to be named in such oath) and that no Bounty or Premium had been paid or claimed for any part of such Hemp, by any person or persons whomsoever, save and except what was included in the sum or price for which he, she or they had offered to sell such Hemp to the said Commissioner.—Now know all whom it may concern, that I PETER HUNTER Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, well knowing the fidelity, diligence and ability of the Honorable James Baby of Sandwich, the Honorable Richard Cartwright of Kingston, the Honorable Robert Hamilton of Queenstown, all Members of the Legislative Council of this Province, and William Allan of York in the Home District Esq. are, do, by virtue of the power so vested in me as aforesaid, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, nominate, constitute and appoint the said James Baby, Richard Cartwright, Robert Hamilton, and William Allan, to be Commissioners for the purchasing of merchantable Hemp, the growth of the said Province, at and after the price or rate of Forty Pounds Halifax Currency per Ton, which said sum of Forty Pounds is to be paid by the said Commissioners respectively, to the party or parties selling such Hemp, in Money only, according to the rules, regulations, limitations and restrictions in the said in part above recited Act expressed and contained, with full power and authority, to do and perform all and each of the matters and things in the said Act authorized or required by them the said Commissioners to be done and performed.

Given under my Hand, and Seal at Arms, at York, this Twenty-Third Day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and four, and in the forty-fourth year of His Majesty's Reign.

P. HUNTER, Lt. Govr.

By His Excellency's Command,
Wm. Jarvis, Secy.

AN ACT

For granting to his Majesty, a certain sum of money, for the further encouragement of the growth and cultivation of Hemp within this Province, and the exportation thereof.

[Passed March 9th, 1804.]

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN,

WHEREAS it would very much encourage and promote the cultivation of Hemp in this Province, if some provision was made by the Legislature for the purchase and exportation thereof; in order therefore to make provision for so beneficial an object, as far as the pecuniary resources of this Province will admit, We your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Commons of Upper Canada, in Parliament assembled, do most humbly beseech your Majesty that it be enacted, and be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth "year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, 'An Act for making more effectual provision for the government of the Province of Quebec, in North America,' and to make further provision for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That from and out of any fund or funds now remaining, or which may hereafter come into the hands of the Receiver General, arising from and out of the rates and duties already raised, levied and collected, or which may hereafter be raised, levied and collected, to and for the use of this Province, there be granted to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, the sum of one thousand pounds, to be disposed of, appropriated and laid out as a public stock or capital, applicable to the purpose of purchasing Hemp, the growth of this Province, and of discharging the expences incident to such purchase and the exportation and sale thereof, in such manner and under such regulations as to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council thereof, shall from time to time seem meet.

II. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That at any time or times from and after the passing of this Act, it shall and may be lawful to and for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, to issue one or more Proclamation or Proclamations, and thereby to name such and so many person or persons within the Province as to him shall seem meet, as Commissioners for the purchasing of merchantable Hemp the growth of this Province, which said Commissioners, or any one or more of them, are and is hereby authorized and empowered to purchase such Hemp, at and after the price or rate of forty pounds per ton.

III. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That from and after the passing of this Act, no person or persons whatsoever shall be entitled to any further bounty over and beyond the said price or sum of forty pounds per ton, or to any premium under any Proclamation or Proclamations hereinbefore issued by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, for the encouragement of the growth and exportation of Hemp, for or in respect of any Hemp for which the said sum of forty pounds per ton shall be paid under said sum of forty pounds per ton shall be paid under the powers hereby given; nor shall any bounty or premium be paid or payable for or in respect of any premium be paid or payable for or in respect of any Hemp not intended for sale or being one of the Commissioners acting in virtue of the powers hereby given, sufficient acting in virtue of the powers hereby given, which shall not be claimed on or before the thirtieth day of September next, under penalty of the forfeiture of the same, and moreover that day prefixed to disentitle to be on or before that day petitioned to the person or persons duly empowered or authorized the person or persons duly empowered or authorized thereto to pay the same, any thing law to the contrary notwithstanding. Provided nevertheless, That before the said Commissioners to be appointed in virtue of this Act, or any of them, shall, under the authority hereby given, purchase any Hemp from any thereby given, purchase any Hemp from any person or persons whomsoever, such Commissioners person or persons whomsoever, such Commissioners and each of them, are and is hereby authorized and and each of them, are and is hereby authorized and required to administer to the person or persons offering any such Hemp for sale, the following Oath:

"I A. B. do swear, that the Hemp which I have "or I do offered for sale to C. a Commissioner appointed by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor for the purchase of Hemp, and every part thereof, was raised within the Province of Upper "Canada, by me [or by E. or F.] and that no bounty "or premium has been paid or claimed for any part of such Hemp, by any person or persons whomsoever, save and except what is included in the sum or price, for which I have offered to sell such "Hemp to the said Commissioner."

And if any person or persons shall, in taking such Oath, wilfully or corruptly forswear him, her or themselves, such person and persons shall incur all the pains and penalties which by law persons are subject and liable to, for wilful or corrupt perjury in any case whatsoever.

IV. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful to and for each and every such Commissioner acting in virtue of the powers hereby given, to demand and receive of and from the person or persons who now is or are authorized or empowered to allow and pay the aforesaid premiums or bounties, over the said Province, from and from persons hereinbefore ifsued, the sum of ten pounds per ton for every ton which such Commissioners shall, in virtue of the authority hereby conferred, purchase; and every such sum of ten pounds for each and every ton so purchased by the said Commissioners as aforesaid, shall be by them paid over to the said Commissioners, and to other persons entitled to such bounties or premiums, be wholly exhausted.

V. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful to and for such Commissioners to be appointed under this Act as aforesaid, or the major part of them, to such manner and by such ways and means, as to them or the major part of them, at any time shall seem meet, to cause and procure such Hemp as shall be purchased according to the provisions of this Act, to be exported and carried beyond sea, into that part of Great Britain called England, there to be sold for Ready Sale, and laid for such price or prices, sum or sums of money as shall and may be obtained for the same; and such sum or sums of money obtained by such sale or sales, together with such bounties or premiums as shall or may be obtained under any Act or Acts of the British Parliament, or of the Parliament of the United Kingdom, on any such Hemp as aforesaid, after deducting all necessary charges, to pay to the Receiver General as applicable and to be applied to the public uses of this Province, and the support of the Government thereof.

VI. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That the monies hereby granted to his Majesty, shall be paid by the Receiver General, a discharge of such warrant or warrants as shall for the purpose herein before set forth, be from time to time issued by the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, and not otherwise. And that the said Receiver General shall account to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, for the same, through the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury for the time being, in such manner and form as his Majesty, his heirs and successors, shall be graciously pleased to direct.

AN ACT

For the exemplary Punishment of all and every person and persons who shall seduce, or attempt to seduce, or aid or assist, or attempt to aid or assist any Soldier to desert his Majesty's service, or who shall harbour, conceal, receive or assist any Deserter from such service.

[Passed March 9th, 1804.]

WHEREAS pernicious practices have for some time past prevailed in this Province, by evil disposed persons disaffected to his Majesty's Government, and particularly to the Military service thereof, in seducing and debauching his Subjects who had engaged themselves as Soldiers in such service, and prevailing on them to desert, and also in harbouring, assisting and concealing such Deserters; for remedy whereof and the future, and for the exemplary punishment of such persons in such cases offending, be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, 'An Act for making more effectual provision for the government of the Province of Quebec, in North America,' and to make further provision for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That from and after the passing of this Act, if any person or persons whomsoever (other than such as are, or shall be entitled as Soldiers) shall, by words or with money, or by any other ways or means whatsoever, directly or indirectly, prevail or endeavour to persuade, or encourage, or endeavour or attempt to prevail upon, procure, persuade or encourage any such Soldier or Soldiers to desert or leave his Majesty's service, and shall be thereof lawfully convicted, the Court or Judge before whom such offender shall be so convicted, shall immediately on such conviction, award and adjudge such person and persons so convicted as aforesaid, to be committed to the common Goal of the District where such offender shall be so tried, there to remain without Bail or Mainprize for the space of six Calendar months; and if from the circumstances and heinousness of the crime, it shall be thought proper and expedient to increase the punishment, the Court or Judge may add a further award and adjudge, that such offender so convicted as aforesaid, shall forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding forty pounds, and if such offender shall not on or before the third day previous to the expiration of such imprisonment as aforesaid, pay such fine, and in such case, the said offender shall be publicly whipped.

II. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That if any person or persons whomsoever, being of this Act, shall harbour, conceal, receive or assist any Deserter from his Majesty's service, knowing his to be such, such person so offending, shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds, and if such sum of twenty pounds shall not immediately on such conviction being pronounced, be paid into Court, the Court or Judge before whom such conviction shall be had, shall forthwith award, order and adjudge such offender to be committed to the common Goal of the District in which such offender shall be so committed, there to remain, without Bail or Mainprize for the space of three Calendar months, or until such time, not exceeding three Calendar months, as the said sum of twenty pounds shall be paid.

III. Provided nevertheless, That no conviction shall be pronounced under the authority of this Act, by any Court or Jurisdiction whatsoever in this Province, save and except by indictment preferred or presented before a Court, or Judge or Judges sitting in the execution of a Commission of Oyer and Terminer or General Goal Delivery; nor shall any prosecution be carried on by virtue of this Act, if the same shall not be commenced, within the Calendar month next after the offence shall have been or have been committed, unless the offender shall within the said six months have departed and left the Province, in which case it shall and may be lawful to commence such prosecution at anytime within the said six months next after such offender's return into the Province, and to carry the same to conviction: And it is hereby declared, that the issuing any warrant for the apprehending of any person charged with any offence against this Act, by any one of the Justices of the Peace of this Province, shall be held and deemed to be a commencement of a prosecution, within the true meaning of the provisions herein as that respect contained.

IV. And be it Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That in order the more effectually to prevent the escape of any such offender or offenders as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful at any time, from and after the passing of this Act, to and for any one or more of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace, on due proof upon oath being made before him or them, that any person has committed any one of the offences herein before described, to issue his or their warrant or warrants for the apprehension of such offender or offenders, or person or persons charged with such offence, and to cause such offender or offenders, or such person or persons so charged as aforesaid, to be brought before him or them, and upon the examination of such offender or offenders, and hearing the witnesses, such Justice or Justices of the Peace shall discharge or commit to Prison, or shall Bail such offender or offenders, in like manner as by law any other person or persons charged criminally in or are dealt with; Provided always, that if such Justice or Justices shall commit such offender or offenders to the common Goal of the District, such Justice there shall be no Goal in that District, to the common Goal of any adjoining District, and such offender and offenders shall remain so committed until his, her or their trial shall be brought on, unless such offender or offenders shall, with two good and sufficient sureties, to the satisfaction of the said Justice or Justices, become bound by recognizance to our Sovereign Lord the King, in manner hereafter specified, that is to say, the said offender shall be charged with having committed any offence against the provisions in the first Section of this Act contained, then such offender or person so charged, shall become bound in the sum of two hundred pounds, and each of the sureties in the sum of one hundred pounds, and if such offender shall be charged with having committed any offence against the provisions in the second Section of this Act contained, then such offender or person so charged, shall become bound in the sum of forty pounds, and each of such sureties in the sum of twenty pounds, conditioned to reach of such recognizance, for the appearance of such person so charged with any offence against this Act, at the then next Assizes, or Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery, to be holden for the District where such offence shall be charged to be committed, or at such other or future Assizes or Sessions of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery, to which the trial of such offender shall for just cause be adjourned.

V. Provided likewise, and be it further Enacted, That if it shall happen that any conviction under this Act, shall take place in any District where there shall be no common Goal at the time of such conviction, it shall and may be lawful to and for the Court or Judge before whom such conviction shall be had, to award, order and adjudge, that any such offender or offenders so to be convicted, shall be committed to the common goal of any adjoining District, in which there shall at that time be a Goal, and also to order and adjudge, that any further punishment to be inflicted under the authority of this Act, shall be inflicted either in the District where such conviction shall take place, or in the District to the Goal of which such offender shall be committed, as to such Judge or Court shall seem meet: And in case of any commitment by any Justice or Justices of the Peace before trial, or of any commitment by any such Court, or Judge or Judges as aforesaid after conviction, under the authority by this Act given, the Treasurer and Gaoler of the District to the Goal of which such offenders, or person charged with or convicted of any offence against this Act shall be committed, are, and each of them is hereby respectively required, to allow to each person during his or her commitment or confinement there, such and the like maintenance and subsistence as is by law allowed to persons in custody under any criminal charge; and the Treasurer of the District from which such offender or person so charged or convicted shall be so sent, shall, and he is hereby required, to reimburse and pay to the Treasurer of the district, in which such person shall have been confined, out of the first monies which shall come to his hands, such sum and sums of money as shall have been so lawfully expended, according to the provisions in that respect herein before contained, for the maintenance and subsistence of any such person or persons as aforesaid.

VI. And be it further Enacted, That in case any such person or persons as aforesaid shall, by virtue of this Act, be committed before trial to any Goal other than the Goal of the District in which the offence shall be charged to have been committed, the Sheriff of the District in which such offence shall be charged to have been committed, shall, and he is hereby required and commanded, immediately before the Assize, or Session at which any trial for any offence against this Act shall be had, to convey such person to charged to the Goal in which he or she shall be so committed, to the District where such offence was charged to be committed, and there to keep him or her in close custody and confinement, and have such person ready to take his or her trial at the Assizes or Session of Oyer and Terminer then next ensuing: And all and every Sheriff and Sheriffs, Constable and Peace Officers of this Province, is and are hereby required and commanded to execute and obey all and every warrant and warrants order and orders, sentence and sentences, which shall be pronounced or issued by any such Court or Judge, Justice or Justices, as are herein before mentioned, for the purpose of carrying the provisions of this Act into execution.

VII. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That all the fines, forfeitures and penalties that shall be incurred under and by virtue of this Act, shall be accounted for to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, for the public uses of this Province, through the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury for the time being, in such manner and form as it shall please his Majesty to direct.

☞ THE CHIEF JUSTICE has adjourned the Sittings of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery and of Assize and Nisi Prius for the Home District, until Wednesday the 20th day of June next, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon.

GRAND REVIEW,

IN HYDE-PARK.

Yesterday Oct. 26, being the day appointed for all the Volunteer Regiments, East of Temple Bar, to be reviewed by His Majesty, at six o'clock the Horse Guards arrived, in order to keep the ground. About seven o'clock, the Surrey Cavalry appeared, and a part of the Westminster Light Horse, in order to give their aid in keeping certain parts of the ground. At each Gate going into the Park, there were parties, both of the Foot and Horse Guards stationed, in order to prevent any tumult; the Volunteer Cavalry being all on the inside duty; piquets arrived a little after from each regiment, who were stationed on the ground allotted for their respective Corps.

Colonels Steward and Macquarrie were on the ground near an early hour, busily riding from one part of the field to another, arranging the regiments as they appeared. They took their ground in the following order:

Corps.	Commanders.
Loyal London Volun. Cavalry,	Lieut. Col. Anderson.
Hon. Artillery Company,	Col. Paul Le Mesurier,
1st Royal East-India Volunteers,	Col. Sir L. Darrel.
2d ditto, ditto, ditto,	Col. Sir Hugh Inglis.
3d ditto, ditto, ditto,	Col. John Roberts
4th Regt. Loyal London Volun. Infantry,	Lieut. Col. Birch.
1st ditto, ditto, ditto,	Lieut. Col. J. Smith.
2d ditto, ditto, ditto,	Lieut. Col. Kenfington.
4th ditto, ditto, ditto,	Lieut. Col. Price.
5th ditto, ditto, ditto,	Lieut. Col. T. Smith.
6th ditto, ditto, ditto,	Lieut. Col. Wigram.
7th ditto, ditto, ditto,	Lieut. Col. Shaw.
8th ditto, ditto, ditto,	Lieut. Col. Canning.
9th ditto, ditto, ditto,	Lieut. Col. Sir W. Curtis.
10th ditto, ditto, ditto,	Lieut. Col. Combe.
11th ditto, ditto, ditto,	Major Scott.
Bank Regt. Vol. Infantry,	Colonel Manning.
Bank Supplementary do.	Captain B. Long.
1st Regt. Tower Hamlets Infantry,	Lieut. Col. Meiklh.
1st ditto,
Whitechapel Infantry,	Lieut. Col. Craigg.
Mile End ditto,	Major Liptrap.
St. George in the East do.	Major Spidt.
Radcastle ditto,	Major Bowkett.
Shoreditch ditto,	Major Marshall.
Bromley St. Leonard do.	Major Steward.
Bethnal Green ditto,	Major Carrick.
St. Catharine ditto,	Captain Jenkins.

The right of the line began at the Serpentine River along Buckden Hill to the North Wall of the Park; the right centre in a line extending to Cumberland Gate, the left centre parallel with the East Wall of the Park, extending towards the Gravel Pits, and the gate that leads to the Head of the Serpentine River; the left wing to the South Side of the Serpentine River, and parallel to the road leading to Kensington Gardens: the whole circle of three miles.

The morning was very foggy and cold, and the fufiliers who were placed to keep the ground stood shivering.

About eight o'clock, General the Earl of Harrington, who had the command of the line, followed by two of the Light Horse, proceeding to the right to give his further instructions. The near division of the line were commanded as follows:—

Right, - - - -	Major General Burrard.
Right Centre,	Maj. General the Hon. Edw. Smith.
Left Centre, -	Maj. General the Hon. C. Fitzroy.

At nine o'clock the Duke of York, in his regimentals, as commander in Chief, entered the Park at Cumberland-gate, and proceeded to the ground.

About a quarter after nine, the Duke of Clarence, in the uniform of the Spithorpe Corps, and the Duke of Cambridge, in his regimentals, entered by the Piccadilly Gate.

The Duke of Cumberland entered at the same gate, and proceeded direct for Kenfington, where he met Their Majesty's.

Their Highnes, the Princesses and suite, left Kew about a quarter after 9 o'clock, and reached Kenfington a quarter before 10, at the very moment when the Duke of Cumberland arrived.

Eleven minutes before ten o'clock, His Majesty, in his private carriage, entered the Park, escorted by the Duke of Kent, the Duke of Cumbridge, and the Earl of Chesterfield; he alighted at the Light Horse gate, near Kenfington Gardens, and was followed by Her Majesty, Princesses Elizabeth and Augusta, in a open Landau, attended by Princess Sophia and Princess Mary, and two attendants in a private carriage. His Majesty being mounted on his brown coloured Charger, was met, (near Kenfington Garden Gate) by His Highness Prince Adolphus the Duke of York, the Earl of Harrington, General Calvert, Lord Petersham, General Stewart, Lieutenant-Colonel Macquarrie, Gen. Burrard, and General Leslie, with the whole of the Staff Officers, and proceeded immediately across the Serpentine-bridge, and on their entrance near the ring, before the grand falute, they were joined by Monsieur, who was dreffed in green turned up with red; Prince de Conde, in white, turned up with blue; Duke de Berri, in grey turned up with red; the Duke of Bourbon, in white turned up with red; each attended by their several chargers, accompanied by a Ruffian Officer in green and gold. The whole of this cavalcade amounted to nearly 200.

The scene at the entrance into the Park from the Piccadilly gate, though not commanding to extenfive a view of the corps as the other gates, was not less interesting from the immense multitude collected, in hopes of seeing His Majesty enter the Park. Their hopes were gratified by the entry of the Duke of York, accompanied by the Duke of Cambridge, and followed by the Brigade Generals, full a quarter of an hour before His Majesty had entered at Kenfington, and his arrival was announced by a gun; nothing could exceed the confufion and difappointment visible among the crowd, who fled in all directions, and called forth the utmost perfeverance and activity of the Guards to restrain them from breaking the line and proceeding towards the Serpentine, where His Majesty was seen advancing. In a short time, however, they grew reconciled, and wandered away to find more appropriate situations.

The signal-gun for the approach of His Majesty was fired at ten o'clock, which gun was placed about the centre of the Buck Park. It was immediately answered by a Royal Salute of 21 guns from the two field-pieces of the Royal Artillery; and the whole line, which stood two deep, shouldered arms. On the approach of His Majesty, a second gun was fired, on which the whole of the line presented arms; the Officers saluted, the drums beat, and the music of the different regiments played "God Save the King!"

The morning, which had been foggy, now cleared up, and from the height of the Deer Park, the chief part of the whole appeared visible flanked by the Life Guards and other Corps, who were placed to keep the ground. The number of spectators which filled the vast space, and crowded every part that afforded any commanding prospect of the Park, was nearly 100,000, of all ranks and ages.

While the eye was delighted with the variegated prospect on each side of the water; the ear was charmed with the music which refounded from the various Corps.

His Majesty, on horseback, accompanied by the Duke of York and other Generals; the other Royal Dukes following. Then appeared the Queen's landau, accompanied by the Princesses already mentioned; the coach in which the other two Princesses and Lady Cranley were; that in which was Elfi Bey, the Mamaluke chief, accompanied by Colonels Moore & Beresford, and another gentleman, who acted as his interpreter. This made the third carriage, being all that were admitted within the ground. Among those on horseback in the cavalcade, we noticed, besides the Spanish and Portuguese Ambassadors, the Marquis de Lima, Gen. Dumourier, General Pichegru, &c. &c.

Proceeding from the right of the line along to the left, as His Majesty arrived at the right of each Corps, they were commanded successively to remain steady, and carry arms. After His Majesty passed, each Corps supported arms, the Drums beat, and music played. His Majesty, after passing the line, returned and stood in the centre, facing the bridge at the end of the river. A fourth cannon being fired, the whole loaded, and took close order. On the fifth cannon being fired, all the Corps fired by vollies from centre to flank. This was repeated a second and third time, and the whole, considering the extent of the line, was remarkably well performed. After which they half cocked, shut pans, and shouldered arms. In firing, the pieces were presented in the air.

On the eighth gun being fired, the drums beat, and band played, "God save the King," which was joined by three cheers from this vast assemblage, while hats and hands were waving in the air. The ninth gun being fired, the line wheeled into divisions, backwards on their left, each company on its march opened its ranks at fifty paces from his Majesty, and closed after passing, the officers saluting, and colours dropping as they passed, each band playing at the same time. The Commanding Officers, Field Officers, and Adjutants, were mounted. During the chief part of these manœuvres, His Majesty was in close conference with the Duke of York.

The King looked remarkably well, and was very sensibly affected by the lively joy which appeared in the faces of the numerous spectators, who cheered him as he passed.

The whole corps had left the Park about 25 minutes past one o'clock, when the Royal Family followed a ſtill reiterated burſts of applauſe from the immenſe multitude.

The King was dreſſed in a Field Marſhal's uniform, with a cocked hat, no ſaſh, and rode a dark bay horſe, which he frequently paſſed on the neck, as it was ſometimes ſtartled at the acclamations of the people.

The Queen wore a chocolate colour pelice, ſmall black beaver hat, trimmed with blue ribbon, and a veil thrown up at ſtont. She ſtood in the landaret the chief part of the time the Volunteers paſſed.

The Princeſs Auguſta ſat next her; ſhe wore a pelice alſo, and looked remarkably well. The Princeſs Elizabeth and Sophia ſat in the front ſeat; the Princeſs Elizabeth wore a pelice, with orange coloured ribbons, and by ſeveral combinations looked delightfully. The Princeſs Sophia had a long gold chain round her neck, at the end of which was ſuſpended an eye glaſs, which ſhe conſtantly uſed. The Duke of York was in converſation with the Queen, about twenty minutes.—The two Princeſſes, Amelia and Mary, were in a cloſe carriage, accompanied by Lady Cranley; their head dreſſes which were of a whiteiſh colour, were adorned with ribbons.

The Duke of Clarence, who rode by the ſide of the latter carriage, was in cloſe converſation with the Princeſſes, during great part of the review.

All the Royal Dukes, and others who accompanied his Majeſty, were in uniforms.

Eſh Bey's carriage followed, which, as a diſtinguiſhed mark of reſpect to a ſtranger of ſuch eminence, was allowed to traverſe the ground. His three companions were in uniform; Eſh Bey appeared in his own country dreſs, great turbin, &c. &c. He had two footmen in ſcarlet liveries, turned up with green, gold epaulette, plain cocked hats, with red and white plain feathers. The coachman had the ſame, with the exception of the leather.

General Pichegru, who is a fine figure of a man, rode a dark chetnut horſe. He was dreſſed in a green uniform coat, which covered his waiſtcoat, double breaſted, with oval gilt buttons, a gold knot on the right ſhoulder, which reached to his elbow; cocked hat, and red and white feather; a gold laced belt round his middle, and a medal at his buttonhole; ſtraw-coloured leather pantaloons and half boots.

General Dumourier wore a plain blue ſtruck, with two gold epaulets, &c.

Prince of Conde wore a pale drab ſtruck, &c.

When the cavalry paſſed in review, there were two flying caravans paſſing, the firſt containing about 60 diſmounted cavalry, the field pieces of which were drawn by ſix horſes each, ammunition waggon, with four horſes, making in the whole a grand and intereſting ſpectacle.

The Life Guards deſerve very great commendation for their activity and tenderneſs to the multitude.

After the review was over, and the regiments marched off the ground, the Radcliffe Volunteers ſtopped at the Duke of Devonſhire's, and were refreſhed in the yard with bread, cheeſe, cold meat and beer. The Mile End Volunteers, amounting to about 300 in number, under the command of Colonel Liptrap, ſtopped facing Mallard's Hotel in Dover-ſtreet, where they were refreſhed by ſome bread and cheeſe and porter, from the Coach and Horſes, &c. &c.

The morning was rather cold and foggy, ſo that the different piquets who ſtood by the camp colours found their ſituation diſagreeable. The deer were bounding from one end of the deer park to the other, ſtruggling to make their eſcape. Gin and gingerbread, though often in the way, was not ſo acceptable as might have been expected. The vaſt crowd of ſpectators greatly added to the grandeur of the ſcene.

The egreſs of the troops was in this order:—After paſſing his Majeſty, the ſeveral corps on the right, right centre proceeded in quick time to the road leading from the Park-keepers Lodge to Piccadilly Gate.—The ſeveral corps on the left, after paſſing his Majeſty, took a direction towards Stanhope-ſtreet gate, whence they proceeded according to their own convenience, and others retired by the gate at the end of Oxford road.—The Commanding Officer of each corps, after paſſing his Majeſty, gave a field return of their corps to the Adjutant General.

When his Majeſty quitted the ground he returned through Piccadilly Gate into the Green Park, and alighted at Buckingham Houſe, followed by her Majeſty, the Princeſſes, and the Royal Dukes. As he paſſed along, one general exclamation of "God ſave the King!" was echoed from the patriotic avenue he paſſed through; all, even decrepid age, forgot its imbecility, and tottered forward to join the general expreſſions of loyalty and affection.

During this unbounded exultation, however a ſerious and deep gloom overclouded the ſcene from the abſence of the Prince of Wales. The general fear was, that illneſs might have occaſioned it; but we rejoice to aſſure the public, ſuch was not the caſe; for we learn that Colonel Le Meſurier, who commanded the honorable artillery company, of which the Prince is Captain General, in his written return for the King, reported his Royal Highneſs on duty with his regiment, the 10th Dragoons, at Brighton."

In noticing the appearance and ſoldierlike march of the corps who thus diſplayed their patriotiſm and loyalty, all compariſons may be deemed invidious. The whole from the extremity of the Eaſtern part of this honorable aſſemblage, ſeemed animated by one glorious ſentiment. Some foreigners, who witneſſed the egreſs from the Park, by Hyde Park corner, of the honorable artillery company, commanded in the abſence of the Prince, by Mr. Alderman Le Meſurier, expreſſed their aſtoniſhment at their manly and military appearance. They marched with wonderful firmneſs and preciſion, and ſome of the ranks would have reflected honor on the beſt regulars that ever exiſted. It would have been highly gratifying to the Prince of Wales, for whom the corps has the warmeſt attachment, to have witneſſed their conduct and appearance in the field. The Loyal London Volunteer Cavalry deſerve particular praiſe for their very handſome and martial appearance. The Eaſt India Volunteers are a remarkable inſtance of the ſpirit and opulence of a company of merchants, directed towards the vindication of life and liberty. The next in view, according to the military diſplay, were the 10 regiments of Loyal London Volunteer Infantry. The progreſs which they have made in their diſcipline, and the admirable idea which they ſeemingly entertain of the duties of a ſoldier, call forth the utmoſt gratitude of their fellow citizens. All the others, viz. the troops belonging to the Tower Hamlets, Whitechapel, Mile-end, St. George's in the Eaſt, Ratcliffe, Shoreditch, Bromley, St. Leonard, Bethnal Green, St. Catherine's, &c. were emulous of each other in the cauſe in which we were all engaged.

Every encomium is due to the ſeveral corps who kept the ground, viz. the Life Guards, the Surrey Yeomanry, the Weſtminſter Cavalry, and the 18th Light Dragoons, aided by a regiment of Foot Guards. In very few inſtances were they hurth or ſevere in the diſcharge of their duty, yet enforced the greateſt attention to the orders of the day.

Among the various reports of accidents, we have heard that a Life Guard man was thrown from his horſe, which unfortunately trampled on him, and that he was carried off the ground not likely to live. A Serjeant belonging to one of the corps had his arm broke; but from the immenſe crowd of ſpectators, nothing could be conducted with leſs injury or more regularity and decorum. It was reported that a certain military man was taken into cuſtody, on account of uſing ſome inflammatory language, and conveyed to a place of ſecurity till he can be dealt with according to his deſerts. Among the numerous crowd of ſpectators, we were hardly able to diſtinguiſh thoſe of a fashionable deſcription. Thoſe, however, may be noticed—The Dutcheſs of Bolton, and two daughters, Lady Hobart, Counteſs of Harrington and daughters. They left their carriages outſide the gates. No ſervants but thoſe of the Royal Family were admitted within the area formed by the troops, nor any carriages but thoſe belong to foreign Princes or Ambaſſadors. The area formed by the troops was crowded by beauty and faſhion, under the protection of military or naval officers, no other gentlemen being admitted.

All the avenues and ſtreets leading to Hyde-Park, outſide the walls, were guarded by the Life Guards, to prevent carriages dozing their way into the Park, from Cumberland Place, Oxford ſtreet, Hereford ſtreet, Green-ſtreet, Groſvenor-ſtreet, Mount-ſtreet, and Brook ſtreet, who prevented carriages of every deſcription from coming into the Park, or Park-lane. The moſt conſpicuous houſes we noticed, whoſe windows, and the roofs, were crowded, commanding a view of the Park, were the following, viz. the whole of the houſes of St. George's Row leading to Bayswater, the houſes of Sir William Manner's Lady Elſex Keir, Colonel Campbell, Mr. Gardner, Mrs. Mols, Mr. Ford, and Mr. Palmer's, in Oxford ſtreet; the back of Lord Cholmondeley's in Piccadilly. Lord Bathurſt, Earl of Dyſart, Meſſrs. Cockerell and Grauturd, Sir John Smith Burgeſs, and Mr. Drummond; Lord Dudley and Ward, Earl of Scarborough, Earl of Bredalbane, Earl of Roſeberry, Marquis of Wellefley, Sir John Leiceſter, the Baronels of Bath, and the Miſs Abrams, were all crowded with perſons of the firſt diſtinction and faſhion.

☞ THE further execution of the Commiſſion for aſcertaining Titles to Lands for the Home Diſtrict, is adjourned to the firſt day of May and the thirteenth day of June next. And all perſons whom it may concern, will take notice, that the Act under which the ſaid Commiſſion iſſued, will expire very ſhortly after the ſaid thirteenth day of June.

York, 24th March, 1804.

To the Free and Independent Electors of the County of Durham, the Eaſt Riding of the County of York and the County of Simcoe.

GENTLEMEN,

THE Friends of the Honorable DAVID WILLIAM SMITH, beg leave to offer that Gentleman to repreſent you in the enſuing Parliament: his Honor, Integrity and Ability, and the eſſential ſervices which, in different capacities he hath rendered to this Province, are ſo well known and felt, that his friends conſider the mentioning of his name only, to be the moſt powerful ſolicitation which they can uſe on the preſent occaſion, to obtain for him your Favor and Suffrage.

The friends of Mr. Smith conſider it as their duty further to intimate, that from laſt accounts received from him in England, it was his determination to ſet out from that Country, ſo as to arrive here early in the Summer of this preſent year.

York, 7th April, 1804.

To the Free and Independent Electors of the Eaſt Riding of York.

GENTLEMEN,

THE period of the natural diſſolution of the preſent Parliament having nearly arrived, I am induced to offer myſelf as a Candidate to repreſent you in the enſuing Parliament.—In thus preſenting myſelf to your notice, I cannot refrain from obſerving, that, I ſtand unconnected with any party, unſupported by any influence, and unambitious of any patronage, other than the Suffrages of thoſe, who conſider the impartial enjoyment of their rights, and the free exerciſe of their privileges as objects not only worthy of the vigilance of the legiſlator, but alſo eſſential to their political ſecurity and to their local proſperity.

The opportunity of addreſſing myſelf to men who may be inclined to think with freedom, and to act with independency, is to me truly deſirable; and the receiving of the countenance and ſupport of thoſe characters, muſt ever leave on my mind impreſſions more than gratifying.

It would ill accord with my ſentiments to expreſs myſelf in the uſual terms of the zeal and fidelity of an Election Candidate; inaſmuch as that the principle of previous aſſurances has frequently, in the exerciſe of the functions of the Repreſentative, been either forgotten or occaſionally abandoned: but I hope it will not be conſidered taunting in me to aſſert, that, that zeal and the fidelity which have manifeſted themſelves in the diſcharge of my duty to my Clients, will not be abated in ſupporting a more important truſt——THE CAUSE OF THE PUBLIC.

I have the honor to be,
Gentlemen,
Your devoted humble Servant,
WM. WEEKES.

PETER HUNTER
LIEUT. GOVERNOR.

GEORGE the THIRD by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland KING, Defender of the Faith.

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS, Greeting!

WHereas by our Proclamation, bearing date the ninth day of March last, WE thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to Prorogue our Provincial Parliament until the Sixteenth Day of this present month of April, at which time in our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear; but WE taking into our Royal conſideration the eaſe and convenience of our loving Subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforeſaid, hereby convoking, and by theſe preſents enjoining you and each of you, that on the twenty-fourth day of May next enſuing, you meet US in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into conſideration the ſtate and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may ſeem neceſſary: Herein fail not.

In teſtimony whereof WE have cauſed theſe our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our ſaid Province to be hereunto affixed: Witneſs our truſty and well beloved PETER HUNTER Eſquire, our Lieutenant Governor of our ſaid Province, and Lieutenant General commanding our Forces in our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at York, this tenth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thouſand eight hundred and four, and in the forty-fourth year of our Reign.

P. H.

WM. JARVIS, Secretary.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER Esquire,
Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

WHEREAS by a certain Act of the Legiſlature of this Province, paſſed in the forty-fourth year of his Majeſty's reign, intituled, "An Act for granting to his "Majeſty, a certain ſum of money for "the further encouragement of the "growth and cultivation of Hemp "within this Province, and the ex"portation thereof," it is enacted, That from and out of any fund or funds now remaining, or which may hereafter come, into the hands of the Receiver General, ariſing from and out of the rates and duties already raiſed, levied and collected, or which hereafter may be raiſed, levied and collected to and for the uſes of this Province, there be granted to his Majeſty, his heirs and ſucceſſors, the ſum of one thouſand pounds, to be diſpoſed of, appropriated and laid out as a public ſtock or capital, applicable to the purpoſe of purchaſing Hemp the growth of this Province, and of diſcharging the expences incident to ſuch purchaſes, and the exportation and ſale thereof, in ſuch manner, and under ſuch regulations, as to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government of this Province, by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council thereof, ſhould from time to time ſeem meet; And that it ſhould and may be lawful to and for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council of this Province, to iſſue one or more Proclamation or Proclamations, and therein to name ſuch and ſo many perſons within the Province as to him ſhall ſeem meet, as Commiſſioners for the purchaſing of Merchantable Hemp the growth of this Province, which ſaid Commiſſioners, or any one or more of them, are and is thereby authorized and empowered to purchaſe ſuch Hemp at and after the price or rate of forty pounds per ton: AND WHEREAS it is further enacted by the ſaid Act, that after the paſſing of that Act, no perſon or perſons whatſoever, ſhall be intitled to any further Bounty over and beyond the ſaid price or ſum of forty pounds per ton, or to any Premium under any Proclamation or Proclamations, heretofore iſſued by the Lieutenant Governor, for the encouragement of the growth and exportation of Hemp, for or in reſpect of any Hemp for which the ſaid ſum of forty pounds per ton ſhall be paid under the powers thereby given; Nor ſhall any Bounty or Premium be paid or payable for or in reſpect of any Hemp not intended for ſale to ſome one of the Commiſſioners acting in virtue of the powers thereby given, which ſhall not be claimed on or before the thirtieth day of September next, under proper and ſufficient Documents, to be on or before that day, preſented to the perſon or perſons duly empowered or authorized to allow or pay the ſame: Provided that before the ſaid Commiſſioners to be appointed in virtue of that Act, or any of them, ſhall under the authority thereby given, purchaſe any Hemp from any perſon or perſons whomſoever, ſuch Commiſſioners and each of them are, and is thereby authorized and required, to adminiſter to ſuch perſon or perſons offering any ſuch Hemp for ſale, an Oath in the ſaid Act particularly ſet forth, whereby ſuch perſon or perſons, is or are to ſwear that the Hemp which he, ſhe or they had that day offered for ſale to the Commiſſioner appointed by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor for the purchaſe of Hemp, and every part thereof, was raiſed within the Province of Upper Canada by him or them, or by ſome other perſon or perſons (to be named in ſuch oath) and that no Bounty or Premium had been paid or claimed for any part of ſuch Hemp, by any perſon or perſons whomſoever, ſave and except what was included in the ſum or price for which he, ſhe or they had offered to ſell ſuch Hemp to the ſaid Commiſſioner, —Now know all whom it may concern, that I PETER HUNTER Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of the ſaid Province of Upper Canada, well knowing the fidelity, diligence and ability of the Honorable James Baby of Sandwich, the Honorable Richard Cartwright of Kingſton, the Honorable Robert Hamilton of Queenſtown, all Members of the Legiſlative Council of this Province, and William Allan of York in the Home Diſtrict Eſquire, do, by virtue of the power ſo veſted in me as aforesaid, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, nominate, constitute and appoint the said James Baby, Richard Cartwright, Robert Hamilton, and William Allan, to be Commissioners for the purchasing of merchantable Hemp, the growth of the said Province, at and after the price or rate of Forty Pounds Halifax Currency per Ton, which said sum of Forty Pounds is to be paid by the said Commissioners respectively, to the party or parties selling such Hemp, in Money only, according to the rules, regulations, limitations and restrictions in the said in part above recited Act expressed and contained, with full power and authority, to do and perform all and each of the matters and things in the said Act authorized or required by them the said Commissioners to be done and performed.

Given under my Hand, and Seal at Arms, at York, this Twenty-Third Day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and four, and in the forty-fourth year of His Majesty's Reign.

P. HUNTER, Lt. Govr.

By His Excellency's Command,
Wm. Jarvis, Secy.

AN ACT

For granting to his Majesty, a certain sum of money, for the further encouragement of the growth and cultivation of Hemp within this Province, and the exportation thereof.

[Passed March 9th, 1804.]

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN,

WHEREAS it would very much encourage and promote the cultivation of Hemp in this Province, if some provision was made by the Legislature for the purchase and exportation thereof; in order therefore to make provision for so beneficial an object, as far as the present resources of the Province will admit, We your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Commons in Upper Canada, in Parliament assembled, do most humbly beseech your Majesty that it be enacted, and be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth "year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act "for making more effectual provision for the government of the Province of Quebec, in North "America, and to make further provision for the "government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That from and out of any part or funds now remaining, or which may hereafter come into the hands of the Receiver General, arising from and out of the rates and duties already raised, levied and collected, or which may hereafter be raised, levied and collected, to and for the uses of this Province, there be granted to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, the sum of one thousand pounds, to be disposed of, appropriated and laid out as a public stock or capital, applicable to the purpose of purchasing Hemp, the growth of this Province, and of discharging the expences incident to such purchases and the exportation and sale thereof, in such manner and under such regulations as to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council thereof, shall from time to time seem meet.

II. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That at any time or times from and after the passing of this Act, it shall and may be lawful to and for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, to issue one or more Proclamation or Proclamations, and thereby to name such land & money persons within the Province as to him shall seem meet, as Commissioners for the purchasing of merchantable Hemp the growth of this Province, which said Commissioners, or any one or more of them, are and is hereby authorized and empowered to purchase such Hemp, at and after the price or rate of forty pounds per ton.

III. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That from and after the passing of this Act, no person or persons whatsoever shall be entitled to any further bounty over and beyond the said price or sum of forty pounds per ton, or to any premium under any Proclamation or Proclamations heretofore issued by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, for the encouragement of the growth and exportation of Hemp, for or in respect of any Hemp for which the said sum of forty pounds per ton shall be paid under the powers hereby given; nor shall any bounty or premium be paid or payable for or in respect of any Hemp not intended for sale to some one of the Commissioners acting in virtue of the powers hereby given, and which shall not be obtained on or before the thirtieth day of September next, under proper and sufficient documents to be set on or before that day produced to such person or persons duly empowered or authorized to allow or pay the same, any former law to the contrary notwithstanding. Provided nevertheless, That before the said Commissioners to be appointed in virtue of this Act, or any of them, shall, under the authority hereby given, purchase any Hemp for any person or persons whomsoever, such Commissioners and each of them, are and is hereby authorized and required to administer to the person or persons offering any such Hemp for sale, the following Oath:

"I A. B. do swear, that the Hemp which I have "to this day offered for sale to C. a Commissioner ap-"pointed by his Excellency the Lieutenant Gover-"nor for the purchase of Hemp, and every part "thereof, was raised within the Province of Upper "Canada, by me (or by E. or F.) and that no bounty "or premium has been paid or claimed for any "part of such Hemp, by any person or persons whom-"soever, save and except what is included in the "sum or price, for which I have offered to sell such "Hemp to the said Commissioner."

And if any person or persons shall, in taking such Oath, wilfully or corruptly forswear him, her or themselves, such person and persons shall incur all the pains and penalties which by law persons are subject or liable to, for wilful or corrupt perjury in any case whatsoever.

IV. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful to and for each and every of the Commissioners acting in virtue of the powers hereby given, to direct and receive of and from the person or persons who now is or are authorized or empowered to allow and pay the aforesaid premiums or bounties, under the said Proclamation and Proclamations hereinbefore cited the sum of ten pounds for and in every ton which such Commissioners shall, in virtue of the authority hereby conferred, purchase; and every such sum of ten pounds for each and every ton so purchased by the said Commissioners, or any of them, shall be applied to and for the purposes of this Act, and not applied beyond the said sum of one thousand pounds herein before granted; And such person or persons so now empowered to allow and pay such bounties or premiums, to and are hereby authorized to pay such Commissioners or any or either of them, the said sum of ten pounds per ton on such Hemp as aforesaid, until such part of the funds now in their hands, or remaining in the hands of the Receiver General, unapplied and applicable to such bounties or premiums, shall, by such payments to the said Commissioners, and to other persons entitled to such bounties or premiums, be wholly exhausted.

V. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful to and for such Commissioners to be appointed in virtue of this Act as aforesaid, or the major part of them, in such manner and by such ways and means, as to them or the major part of them, at any time shall seem meet, to take and procure such Hemp as shall be purchased according to the provisions of this Act, to be shipped and sent carried beyond the seas, into that part of Great Britain called England, and there to be exposed for sale, and said for such price or prices, sum or sums of money as shall and may be obtained for the same; and such sum or sums of money obtained by such sale or sales, together with such bounties or premiums as shall or can be obtained under any Act or Acts of the British Parliament, or of the Parliament of the United Kingdom, on any such Hemp as aforesaid, after deducting all necessary charges, to be paid to the Receiver General as applicable and to be applied to the public uses of this Province, and the support of the Government thereof.

VI. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That the monies hereby granted to his Majesty, shall be paid by the Receiver General, in discharge of such warrant or warrants as shall for the purposes herein before set forth, be from time to time issued by the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, and not otherwise; And the said Receiver General shall account to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, for the same, through the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury for the time being, in such manner and form as his Majesty, his heirs and successors, shall be graciously pleased to direct.

AN ACT

For the exemplary Punishment of all and every person and persons who shall seduce, or attempt to seduce, or aid or assist, or attempt to aid or assist any Soldier to desert his Majesty's service, or who shall harbour, conceal, receive or assist any Deserter from such service.

[Passed March 9th, 1804.]

WHEREAS pernicious practices have for some time past prevailed in this Province, by evil disposed persons disaffected to his Majesty's Government, and particularly to the Military service thereof, in seducing and debauching his Subjects, who had engaged themselves as Soldiers in such service, and prevailing on them to desert, and also in harbouring, assisting and concealing such Deserters; for remedy whereof for the future, and for the exemplary punishment of such person or persons offending, Be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled as aforesaid, and by the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act "passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, "intituled, "An Act for making more effectual pro-"vision for the government of the Province of Que-"bec, in North America, and to make further pro-"vision for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That from and after the passing of this Act, if any person or persons whomsoever (other than such as are, or shall be enlisted as Soldiers) shall, by words or with money, or by any other ways or means whatsoever, directly or indirectly, prevail upon, procure, persuade or encourage, or endeavour or attempt to prevail upon, procure, persuade or encourage any such Soldier or Soldiers to desert or leave his Majesty's service, and shall be thereof lawfully convicted, the Court or Judge before whom such offender or offenders shall be so convicted, shall immediately on such conviction, award and adjudge such person and persons so convicted as aforesaid, to be committed to the common Gaol of the District where such offender shall be so tried, there to remain without Bail or Mainprize for the space of six Calendar months; and if from the circumstances and heinousness of the crime, it shall be thought proper and expedient to increase the punishment, such Court or Judge shall also further award and adjudge, that such offender to be so convicted, shall forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding forty pounds, and if such offender shall not on or before the third day previous to the expiration of such imprisonment as aforesaid pay such fine, then and in such case, the said offender shall be publicly whipped.

II. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That if any person from and after the passing of this Act, shall harbour, conceal, receive or assist any Deserter from His Majesty's Service, knowing him to be such, such person so offending, shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds, and if such sum of twenty pounds shall not immediately on such conviction being pronounced, be paid into Court, the Court or Judge before whom such conviction shall be had, shall be charged to have been committed, the Sheriff of the District in which such offence shall be charged to have been committed, shall, and he is hereby required and commanded, immediately before the Assize, or Sessions of Gaol Delivery which may next be held in the District in which he or she shall be found, to convey such person from the Gaol in which he or she shall be so confined, to the District where such offence was charged to be committed, and there to keep him or her in close custody and confinement, and have such person ready to take his or her trial at the Assizes or Sessions of Oyer and Terminer then next ensuing: And all and every Sheriff and Sheriffs, Constable and Peace Officers of this Province, is and are hereby required and commanded to execute and obey all and every warrant and warrants, order and orders, sentence and sentences, which shall be pronounced or issued by any such Court or Judge, Justice or Justices, as are herein before mentioned, for the purpose of carrying the provisions of this Act into execution.

III. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That all the fines, forfeitures and penalties that shall be incurred under and by virtue of this Act, shall be accounted for to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, to and for the public uses of this Province, through the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury for the time being, in such manner and form as it shall please his Majesty to direct.

IV. And be it Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That in order the more effectually to prevent the escape of any such offender or offenders as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful at any time, from and after the passing of this Act, on the oath of one or more of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace, or any person upon such being made before him or them, that any person has committed any one of the offences herein before described, to issue his or their warrant or warrants for the apprehension of such offender or offenders, or person or persons charged with such offence, and to cause such offender or offenders, or such person or persons so charged as aforesaid, to be brought before him or them, and upon the examination of such offender or offenders, and hearing the evidence, such Justice or Justices of the Peace shall discharge or commit to Prison, or shall bail such offender or offenders, in like manner as by law any other person or persons charged criminally is or are dealt with; Provided except, that if such Justice or Justices shall be satisfied with the evidence against such offender or offenders, such Justice or Justices shall commit such offender or offenders to the common Gaol of the District, or in case there shall be no Gaol in that District, to the common Gaol of any adjoining District; and such offender and offenders shall remain so committed until such her or their trial shall be brought on, unless such offender or offenders shall, with two good and sufficient sureties to the satisfaction of the said Justice or Justices become bound by recognizance unto the Sovereign Lord the King, in manner hereinafter specified, (that is to say) if the said offender shall be charged with having committed any offence against the provisions in the first Section of this Act contained, then such offender or person so charged, shall become bound in the sum of two hundred pounds, and each of such sureties in the sum of one hundred pounds, and if such offender shall be charged with having committed any offence against the provisions in the second Section of this Act contained, then such offender or person so charged, shall become bound in the sum of forty pounds, and each of such sureties in the sum of twenty pounds, conditioned in each of such recognizances, for the appearance of such person so charged with any offence against this Act, at the then next Assizes, or Sessions of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery, to be holden for the District where such offence shall be charged to be committed, or if such other or further Assizes or Sessions of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery, to which the trial of such offender shall for just cause be adjourned.

V. Provided likewise, and be it further Enacted, That if it shall happen that any conviction under this Act, shall take place in any District where there shall be no common Gaol at the time of such conviction, it shall and may be lawful to and for the Court or Judge before whom such conviction shall be had, to award, order and adjudge, that any such offender or offenders so to be convicted, shall be committed to the common gaol of any adjoining District, in which there shall at that time be a Gaol, and also to order and adjudge, that any further punishment to be inflicted under the authority of this Act, shall be inflicted either in the District where such conviction shall take place, or in the District to the Gaol of which such offender shall be committed, as to such Judge or Court shall seem meet: And in case of any commitment by any Justice or Justices of the Peace before trial, or of any commitment by any such Court, or Judge or Judges as aforesaid after conviction, under the authority by this Act given, the Treasurer and Gaoler of the District to the Gaol of which such offender, or person charged with or convicted of any offence against this Act shall be committed, are, and each of them is hereby respectively required, to allow to each person during his or her commitment or confinement there, such and the like maintenance and subsistence as is by law allowed to persons in custody under any criminal charge; and the Treasurer of the District from which such offender or person so charged or convicted shall be so sent, shall, and he is hereby required, to reimburse and pay to the Treasurer of the district, in which such person shall have been confined, out of the first monies which shall come to his hands, such sum and sums of money as shall have been so lawfully expended, according to the provisions in that respect herein before contained; for the maintenance and subsistence of any such person or persons as aforesaid.

VI. And be it further Enacted, That in case any such person or persons as aforesaid shall, by virtue of this Act, be committed before trial to any Gaol other than the Gaol of the District in which the offence shall be charged to have been committed, the Sheriff of the District in which such offence shall be charged to have been committed, shall, and he is hereby required and commanded, immediately before the Assize, or Sessions of Gaol Delivery next ensuing after such Act shall be had, to convey such person from the Gaol in which he or she shall be so confined, to the District where such offence was charged to be committed, and there to keep him or her in close custody and confinement, and have such person ready to take his or her trial at the Assizes or Sessions of Oyer and Terminer then next ensuing: And all and every Sheriff and Sheriffs, Constable and Peace Officers of this Province, is and are hereby required and commanded to execute and obey all and every warrant and warrants, order and orders, sentence and sentences, which shall be pronounced or issued by any such Court or Judge, Justice or Justices, as are herein before mentioned, for the purpose of carrying the provisions of this Act into execution.

VII. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That all the fines, forfeitures and penalties that shall be incurred under and by virtue of this Act, shall be accounted for to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, to and for the public uses of this Province, through the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury for the time being, in such manner and form as it shall please his Majesty to direct.

Latest Intelligence.

LONDON, February 14.

THE KING.—We are sorry to find that his Majesty was so much indisposed yesterday at the Queen's house, as to require the close attendance of Sir Francis Milman, Dr. Heberden of Pall Mall, and Dr. Dundas, of Richmond, during the day.—The Dukes of Clarence, Kent and Cambridge, went to the Queen's house in the afternoon, where they continued till a very late hour last night; and the Prince of Wales, unable to go out, sent several times to enquire the state of his Majesty's health. In the course of the afternoon great numbers of the nobility left their cards of enquiry; and, with a commendable attention to the public feeling the following Bulletin was issued:

"His Majesty is much indisposed to-day."

February 16.

Yesterday the answer of the enquirers after the Prince of Wales' health, was—

"His Royal Highness is better, but very weak."

The precise nature of his majesty's disorder, not being avowed, is consequently the subject of endless conjecture.

No other bulletin was issued yesterday after the one we laid before our readers, and indeed it is a fixed arrangement, that but one will be issued in the course of every 24 hours. To all enquiries made at St. James' in the course of the evening, and they were extremely numerous, the answer was that his majesty continued the same as in the morning.

We understand, that at the recommendation of the cabinet council, Sir Lucas Pepys and Dr. Reynolds were called in to attend his majesty, and those gentlemen accordingly attended his majesty yesterday, and met Sir Francis Milliman and Dr. Heberden and had a consultation at the Queen's house, and the whole of those gentlemen continued their visits to his majesty during the day.

It was yesterday very generally expected that ministers would last night make some communication to both houses of Parliament respecting the state of his majesty's health, but it is now understood, that ministers, wishing to ascertain the precise nature of his majesty's distemper, and whether it is likely to be of a lingering nature or otherwise, have postponed their communication to Monday or Tuesday next. Mr Fox, Mr. Pitt, and several other distinguished members were present.

His Majesty in the course of yesterday morning enjoyed much refreshing sleep, and was better; and, we understand afterwards partook of some refreshment.

His Majesty's pulse, which we understand was on Thursday night at 110, had yesterday morning subsided, in consequence of the repose which he had enjoyed (the first for several nights,) to 80.

It was in consequence of this change, it is supposed, that no communication was yesterday made to either houses of Parliament, as had been generally and confidently expected.

The Bulletin was not delivered out quite so early this day as yesterday, and the crowd of nobility and gentry, waiting with anxiety at St. James', to learn the state of his Majesty's health, was if possible, greater than on any preceding day since his indisposition.

It must rejoice every loyal heart to be informed that our beloved Sovereign is now considered to be in no danger. We may, therefore, indulge a fond hope that in a few days his majesty will be restored to his wonted health. No language can describe the general joy which was manifested by the anxious enquirers this morning, when the we the following

It is calculated that the enemy's naval equipments at Boulogne will contain upwards of 8,000 men, and it is the opinion of most of the officers of the squadron in the Downs, that the enemy will immediately attempt something, if they ever intend any thing.

The latest accounts from our squadron off Boulogne state, that the Leopard, Immortalite, Squirrel, Locust, Archer, Dutchess of Cumberland, and Griffin cutter, remained at anchor close off Boulogne harbour the whole of Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, and almost all Wednesday.—They observed that the addition of force at Boulogne of late has been very considerable.

There are upwards of 130 sail of brigs, schooners, &c. exclusive of gun-boats, in not less than 800 sail. The principal part have moved up the harbor into the different new basins which have been made.

Feb. 18.—At a late hour last night, we received a variety of extracts from the Paris Journals to the 31st ult. They contain no intelligence of importance. They mention the march of the cavalry from Compeign for Boulogne; and the conviction of a few persons accused of having contrived some curious instrument for the destruction of the First Consul.

For upwards of an hour on Wednesday morning our squadron was recalled off Boulogne. The enemy perceived it, and a fire was lighted on the heights, which was supposed to be a signal for attack. Great bustle was immediately perceived, and the pier head was crowded with soldiers, and others dragged out gun boats to attempt the attack on our squadron, for which they conjectured the circumstances as favourable. A breeze springing up, however, they again returned into harbor.

At break of day on Wednesday last, a prodigious volume of smoke was observed from several parts of the coast for four hours, in the direction of Boulogne, and at intervals the horizon above the place seemed to be entirely illuminated. This phenomenon has given rise to various conjectures, and it is supposed that it was occasioned by a conflagration of the enemy's flotilla, which by some means or other had caught fire.

It is reported, also, that some of the French troops have laid down their arms, and that the utmost disaffection prevails along the whole coast. The poor deluded wretches who compose the French army destined for the expedition against this country, are, it is said, sunk in despondency, and have lost all hope of being able to effect a landing; as they are so closely watched by our blockading squadron, the commanders of which are certainly entitled to the highest praise for their perseverance, having remained at anchor close to Boulogne during the tempestuous weather.

Yesterday morning there was some firing off Calais, and a prize was brought into Dover in the afternoon.

Feb. 20.—Dispatches have, within these few days, been received from Admiral Thornborough's fleet off the Texel. No particular movement had taken place among the Dutch ships in that harbor on the 13th instant, the time the dispatches were dated.

A letter from Folkstone, dated the 17th, says—"Yesterday and to-day have been uncommonly clear, and we have the most distinct view possible of the French coast from Calais to the southward of Boulogne, the whole of which is covered with tents. About two hours since the signal was made for an enemy's fleet steering west; it is a flotilla of gun boats from the northward to Boulogne. We can see our cruisers close in to the French shore attacking them; the whole fleet appears as one continued battery, and in clouds of smoke, and I assure you our vessels are not idle; one in particular, by appearance a large frigate, keeps up a most tremendous fire. Indeed, the whole of them seem very active. The wind it about east half south, and blowing very fresh, so that our cruisers can stand close in shore without much danger. The flotilla, we make little doubt, will be able to get into Boulogne, from the protection afforded them by the batteries, which they keep under cover of as close as possible; but we trust and hope they will not escape altogether with impunity.

"Three o'clock, P. M.—The firing has almost ceased, and our vessels have hauled off from the shore. One gun-boat, a very fine vessel, with troops on board, is taken, and some others dispersed and driven on shore."

BOSTON, March 14.

Late from Europe.—Capt. Gardner, from Amsterdam, which he left the 14th of February, informs, that at the time of his departure, the Dutch were by daily expectation that the English, under Sir Sidney Smith, would make an attempt to burn the shipping in the New Diepe, which consisted of three ships of the line, two frigates, and two sloops, ready for fire; four line of battle ships in ordinary, twenty-five large transports for carrying troops, and a number of Dutch merchantmen. An English fleet of five sail of the line, three frigates, and smaller vessels, were seen every day off the land. In consequence of which the garrisons on the Texel and Helder had been reinforced with 6,000 Dutch troops.

March 24.

Accounts from India state, that the British arms have again been successful in that quarter. They have completely defeated their enemies in the Deccan, taken 90 pieces of cannon, and acquired the subordination Province of the Cuttack.

The British have made good a landing on the Island of Martinique, which they are fortifying, with intent more effectually to blockade that Island.

We learn from Curracoa, that a British squadron of four sail appeared off that Island, and on the Dutch refusing to surrender, between 40 and from hundred men were landed, who took possession of the forces, and, after some slight skirmishing, compelled a body of Dutch and French troops to retire. As the ship leave, the British were firing into the town, and the inhabitants were removing therefrom. The Theseus, of 74, and Blanche, of 36 guns, were of the squadron.

GENTLEMEN,

THE period of the natural dissolution of the present Parliament having nearly arrived. I am induced to offer myself as a Candidate to represent you in the ensuing Parliament.—In thus presenting myself to your notice, I cannot refrain from observing, that, I stand unconnected with any party, unsupported by any influence, and unambitious of any patronage, other than the Suffrages of those, who consider the impartial enjoyment of their rights, and the free exercise of their privileges as objects not only worthy of the vigilance of the legislator, but also essential to their political security and to their local prosperity.

The opportunity of addressing myself to men who may be inclined to think with freedom, and to act with independency, is to me truly desirable; and the receiving of the countenance and support of those characters, must ever leave on my mind impressions more than gratifying.

It would ill accord with my sentiments to express myself in the usual terms of the zeal and fidelity of an Election Candidate; inasmuch as that the principle of previous assurances has frequently, in the exercise of the functions of the Representative, been either forgotten or occasionally abandoned: but I hope it will not be considered vaunting in me to assert, that, that zeal and the fidelity which have manifested themselves in the discharge of my duty to my Clients, will not be abated in supporting a more important trust——THE CAUSE OF THE PUBLIC.

AN ACT

For granting to his Majesty a certain sum of money, out of the funds applicable to the uses of this Province, to defray the expences of amending and repairing the public highways and roads, laying out and opening new roads, and building bridges in the several districts thereof.

[Paſſed 9th March, 1804.]

WHEREAS it would serve much to advance the general prosperity of this Province, if the public highways and roads already laid out in the several districts thereof were amended and repaired, and new and additional roads were laid out and opened in certain parts of the Province, in which at present there is very difficult access, and certain bridges are also become indispensably necessary, the want of which at present much endangers the lives of the King's subjects; And whereas the said highways, roads, and the duty by law required to be performed on the said public highways and roads are altogether inadequate to the several purposes aforesaid, and the imposing additional burthens by law upon the inhabitants for the several purposes aforesaid, would in the present circumstances of the Province be found inconvenient, and the necessary provision can only be made out of the funds of certain duties and rates as are unappropriated; in order therefore to defray the expences aforesaid in the amending and laying out and opening such highways and roads, and making such bridges as aforesaid, May it please your Majesty that it may be enacted, and be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act for making more effectual provision for the government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That from and out of the rates and duties already raised, levied and collected, or hereafter to be raised, levied and collected to and for the uses of this Province, there be granted to His Majesty, his Heirs and Successors, the sum of one thousand pounds, to be issued out of the fund now remaining, or hereafter to come into the Receiver General's hands, unappropriated and arising from such rates and duties as aforesaid, which said sum of one thousand pounds shall be disposed of, appropriated and applied in the repairing of the roads already laid out, and in the laying out and opening new roads, and making bridges in the several districts aforesaid, in such manner and under such regulations as to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, with the advice and consent of the Executive Council thereof, shall from time to time seem meet.

II. And be it also Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That at any time from and after the passing of this Act, it shall and may be lawful to and for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, to issue one or more Proclamation or Proclamations, and therein to point out and direct the particular roads, as well with respect to those already laid out as those necessary to be laid out and opened in all and every the several districts of this Province, and the meets and boundaries thereof respectively, upon which the said sum or one thousand pounds shall be expended, and to the four Commissioners to name such and so many persons as to him shall seem meet, for each and every of the aforesaid districts, as Commissioners for carrying the provisions of this Act into execution, which said Commissioners, from and after the issuing such Proclamation, shall have full power and authority forthwith to proceed to repair and mend, lay out and open such roads, and repair and build such bridges, as in the Proclamation or Proclamations to be issued in virtue of this Act shall be named and specified, as fully to all intents and purposes, if such Commissioners had been in this Act particularly named.

III. Provided always, and be it further Enacted, by the Authority aforesaid, That before any Commissioner shall proceed to carry into execution the several powers and authorities by this Act conferred, he shall take the following Oath:

FORM OF OATH.

"I A. B. do swear that I will faithfully and impartially, to the best of my skill and judgement, perform and carry into execution the several powers and authorities in me vested, in and by a certain Act of the Legislature of this Province, intituled, "An Act for granting to his Majesty a certain sum of money, out of the funds applicable to the uses of this Province, to defray the expences of amending and repairing the public highways and roads, laying out and opening new roads, and building bridges in the several districts thereof," and the Proclamation issued in virtue thereof without favour or affection to any person or persons whomsoever, and will duly and faithfully account for all monies which shall from time to time come into my hands, for the purpose of carrying the provisions of this Act into execution—So help me God."

Which said Oath shall be taken before any one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace in and for the district for which such Commissioner shall be appointed, and a certificate of which Oath the Justice administering the same is hereby required to transmit to the Clerk of the Executive Council of this Province, with all convenient speed, after such Oath shall have been by him administered.

IV. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That the respective Commissioners who shall, under the authority hereby given, be named for the several districts aforesaid, shall, so long as they shall continue Commissioners, have and enjoy exclusively, the right and privilege of laying out and expending such monies as shall from time to time be appropriated by the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, with the advice and consent of the Executive Council thereof, to issue any new or additional Proclamation or Proclamations and thereby to name such other or additional Commissioner or Commissioners as to him shall meet, for all or for any of the districts aforesaid, for carrying the several purposes of this Act into execution; And from and after such new or additional Proclamation shall have so issued, all and every the powers and authority given or conferred by any former Proclamation or Proclamations, shall cease, determine, and be null and void to all intents and purposes, as if the same had never been created or given; and the Commissioners in such new or additional Proclamation or Proclamations named, shall have and be invested with full power and authority to carry the several provisions of this Act into execution, in such and the like manner as the Commissioners in the previous Proclamation named might or could have done, any thing herein before contained to the contrary notwithstanding. Provided also, That nothing herein contained shall repeal or annul, or be held or construed to repeal or annul any of the provisions in any building Act or Acts of the Province contained, for raising or levying the rates thereby imposed, or compelling the labour by such Acts, or any of them, required to be done and performed on any of the public highways and roads comprised in such Acts, or any of them, or to repeal any of the provisions in such respective Acts contained, but all and every such Act and Acts is and are hereby declared to be and continue in full force. Provided also, That nothing in any former law or statute of this Province contained, shall, from and after the passing of this Act, be held or construed to empower or authorise any Magistrate or overseer in any such law or statute mentioned, in any manner to interfere or give any directions touching or concerning any road or highway to be laid out, opened or repaired under or by virtue of this Act; Nevertheless the said Magistrates and overseers, and every of them, is and are hereby authorized to carry into execution all and every such power and authorities as by such laws or Statutes they are invested with, in all cases in which the executing such powers will not impede or interfere with the powers or authorities given in and by this Act and every Proclamation to be issued by virtue thereof.

V. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That from and after the execution of the powers hereby given, all and every the roads in all and every Proclamation and Proclamations to be issued under and by virtue of this Act, shall be held and deemed to be public highways and roads, and shall be subject and liable to all the laws and statutes now in force, or hereafter to be passed and enacted relative to public highways and roads, as fully to all intents and purposes, as any of the present highways and roads are now or shall be made liable and subject thereto.

VI. Provided always, and be it further Enacted, That if any action or suit shall be commenced against any person or persons, for any thing done or acted in purfuance of this Act, then and in every such case, such action or suit shall be commenced or profecuted within three calendar months after the fact committed, and not afterwards, and the defendant or defendants in any such action or suit, shall and may plead the general issue, and give this Act and the special matter in evidence, at any trial to be had thereupon, and that the same was done in purfuance and by the authority of the present Act; and if the same shall appear to have been so done, or if any such action or suit shall be brought after the time limited for bringing the same, then the jury shall find for the defendant or defendants, or if the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall become non-suited, or discontinue his, her or their action after the defendant or defendants shall have appeared, or if judgement on demurrer shall be pronounced, for the defendant or defendants, the defendant or defendants in all and every the fo[illegible] cases aforesaid, shall and may recover treble costs, and have the like remedy for the recovery thereof as defendants are in any other cases by law entitled to.

VII. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That the monies hereby granted to his Majesty, shall be paid by the Receiver General, in discharge of such warrant or warrants as shall for the purposes herein before set forth, be from time to time issued by the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the Government of this Province and not otherwise; and the said Receiver General shall account to his Majesty, his heirs and successors for the same through the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury, for the time being, in such manner and form as his Majesty, his heirs and successors shall be graciously pleased to direct.

AN ACT

For the exemplary Punishment of all and every person and persons who shall seduce, or attempt to seduce, or aid or assist, or attempt to aid or assist any Soldier to desert his Majesty's service, or who shall harbour, conceal, receive or assist any Deserter from such service.

[Paſſed March 9th, 1804.]

WHEREAS pernicious practices have for some time past prevailed in this Province, by evil disposed persons disaffected to his Majesty's Government, and particularly to the Military service thereof, in inducing and debauching his Subjects who had engaged themselves as Soldiers in such service, and prevailing on them to desert, and also in harbouring, assisting and concealing such Deserters; for remedy whereof for the future, and for the exemplary punishment of such persons as such cases offending, Be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act "passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, "intituled, "An Act for making more effectual provision for the government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That from and after the passing of this Act, if any person or persons whomsoever (other than such as are, or shall be enlisted as Soldiers) shall, by words or with money, or by any other ways or means whatsoever, directly or indirectly, prevail upon, procure, perfuade, or encourage, or endeavour or attempt to prevail upon, procure, perfuade or encourage any such Soldier or Soldiers to desert or leave his Majesty's service, and shall be thereof lawfully convicted, the Court or Judge before whom such offender shall be so convicted, shall immediately on such conviction, award and adjudge such person or persons so convicted as aforesaid, to be committed to the common Gaol of the District where such offender shall be so tried, there to remain without Bail or Mainprize for the space of six Calendar months; and if from the circumstances of such offence, it shall be thought proper and expedient to increase the punishment, such Court or Judge shall also further award and adjudge, that such offender so convicted as aforesaid, shall forfeit any sum not exceeding forty pounds, and if such offender shall not on or before the third day previous to the expiration of such imprisonment as aforesaid pay such fine, then and in such case, the said offender shall be publicly whipped.

II. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That if any person from and after the passing of this Act, shall harbour, conceal, receive or affist any Deserter from his Majesty's service, knowing him to be such, such person shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds, and if such sum of twenty pounds shall not immediately on such conviction being pronounced, be paid into Court, the Court or Judge before whom such conviction shall be had, shall forthwith award, order and adjudge such offender to be committed to the common Gaol of the District in which such offender shall be so convicted, there to remain, without Bail or Mainprize for the space of three Calendar months, or until such time, not exceeding three Calendar months, as the said sum of twenty pounds shall be paid.

III. Provided nevertheless, That no conviction shall be pronounced under the authority of this Act, in any Court or Jurisdiction whatsoever in this Province, save and except by indictment preferred or profecuted before a Court, or Judge or Judges sitting in the execution of a Commission of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery; nor shall any profecution be carried on by virtue of this Act, if the same shall not be commenced, within six Calendar months next after the offence shall be charged to have been committed, unless the offender shall within the said six months have departed and left the Province, to which case it shall and may be lawful to commence such profecution at any time within six calendar months next after such offender's return into the Province, and to carry on the same to conviction: But it is hereby declared, that the taking any warrant for the apprehending of any person charged with any offence against this Act, by any one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace for this Province, shall be held and deemed to be a commencement of a profecution, within the true meaning of the provisions herein in that respect contained.

IV. And be it Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That in order the more effectually to prevent the escape of any such offender or offenders as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful at any time, from and after the passing of this Act, to and for any one or more of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace, on due proof upon oath being made before him or them, that any person has committed any one of the offences herein before described, to issue his or their warrant or warrants for the apprehension of such offender or offenders, or person or persons charged with such offence, and to cause such offender or offenders, or such person or persons so charged as aforesaid, to be brought before him or them, and upon the examination of such offender or offenders, and hearing the evidence, such Justice or Justices of the Peace shall discharge or commit to Prison, or shall bail such offender or offenders, in like manner as by law any other person or persons charged criminally is or are dealt with; save and except, that if such Justice or Justices shall be satisfied with the evidence against such offender or offenders, such Justice or Justices shall commit such offender or offenders to the common Gaol of the District, or in case there shall be no Gaol in that District, to the common Gaol of any adjoining District, and such offender and offenders shall remain so committed until his, her or their trial shall be brought on, unless such offender or offenders shall, with two good and sufficient sureties, to the satisfaction of the said Justice or Justices, become bound by recognizance to our Sovereign Lord the King, his successor heir and lawful successors, (that is to say) if the said offender shall be charged with having committed any offence against the provisions in the first Section of this Act contained, then such offender or person so charged, shall become bound in the sum of two hundred pounds, and each of such sureties in the sum of one hundred pounds, and if such offender shall be charged with having committed any offence against the provisions in the second Section of this Act contained, then such offender or person so charged, shall become bound in the sum of twenty pounds, conditioned in each of such recognizances, for the appearance of such person so charged with any offence against this Act, at the then next Assizes, or Sessions of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery, to be holden for the District where such offence shall be charged to be committed, or at such other or future Assizes or Sessions of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery, to which the trial of such offender shall for just cause be adjourned.

V. Provided likewise, and be it further Enacted, That if it shall happen that any conviction under this Act, shall take place in any District where there shall be no common Gaol at the time such conviction is had, it shall and may be lawful to and for the Court or Judge before whom such conviction shall be had, to award, order and adjudge, that any such offender or offenders to be convicted, shall be committed to the common gaol of any adjoining District, in which there shall at that time be a Gaol, and also to order and adjudge, that any further punishment to be inflicted under the authority of this Act, shall be inflicted either in the District where such conviction shall take place, or in the District to the Gaol of which such offender shall be committed, as to such Judge or Court shall seem meet: And in case of any commitment by any Judge or Justices of the Peace before trial, or of any commitment by any such Court, or Judge or Judges, as aforesaid after conviction, under the authority of this Act given, the Treasurer and Gaoler of the District to the Gaol of which such offender, or person charged with or convicted of any offence against this Act shall be committed, are, and each of them is hereby respectively required, to allow to each person during his or her commitment or confinement there, such and the like maintenance and subsistence as is by law allowed to persons in custody under any criminal charge; and the Treasurer of the District from which such offender or person so charged or convicted shall be so sent, shall, and he is hereby required, to reimburse and pay to the Treasurer of the district, in which such person shall have been confined, out of the first monies which shall come to his hands, such sum and sums of money as shall have been so lawfully expended, according to the provisions in that respect herein before contained, for the maintenance and subsistence of any such person or persons as aforesaid.

VI. And be it further Enacted, That in case any such person or persons as aforesaid shall, by virtue of this Act, be committed before trial to any Gaol other than the Gaol of the District in which the offence shall be charged to have been committed, the Sheriff of the District in which such offence shall be charged to have been committed, shall, and he is hereby required and commanded, immediately before the Assize, or Sessions at which any trial for any offence against this Act shall be had, to convey such person so charged from the Gaol in which he or she shall be so confined, to the District where such offence was charged to be committed, and there to keep him or her in close custody and confinement, and have such person ready to take his or her trial at the Assizes or Sessions of Oyer and Terminer then next enfuing: And all and every Sheriff and Sheriffs, Constable and Peace Officers of this Province, to and are hereby required and commanded to execute and obey all and every warrant and warrants, order and orders, sentence and sentences, which shall be pronounced or issued by any such Court or Judge, Justice or Justices, as are herein before mentioned, for the purpose of carrying the provisions of this Act into execution.

VII. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That all the fines, forfeitures and penalties that shall be incurred under and by virtue of this Act, shall be accounted for to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, to and for the public uses of this Province, through the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury for the time being, in such manner and form as it shall please his Majesty to direct.

LONDON, February 27.

The following French Officers belonging to the Army of St. Domingo, arrived on the Revolutionaire frigate, at Portsmouth:

Rochambeau, general in chief; La Poype, general of division; Paget, general of brigade; Boyé, general of brigade; De Rouait, adjutant of the guard of honor; Du Verri, chief of the brigade of La Poype; Felin, chief of the artillery; Meynard, officer of the guard of honor; O'Gorman, adjutant, and aide-de-camp to General Rochambeau; Alexis, secretary and interpreter to ditto; Fontaine, secretary to ditto; Le Clerc, engineer; La Poype, lieutenant, and nephew to general La Poype.

General Rochambeau, and most of the above Officers, are at Elson, a village about two miles from Gosport, where they will remain till the pleasure of Government is known, as to their removal; it is supposed they will be sent to Chesterfield.

Balcon, Adjutant of Command, and Soache, an Officer of rank, were to have come to England in the above ship; but from some cause did not embark. In addition to the above Officers, upwards of 20 more are arrived; among whom are General De Hanno, Commodore Carangel, Colonel Legey, and Colonel Murio.

The Revolutionaire has brought over upwards of 400,000 dollars, the property of different Merchants in the West-Indies. The number of dollars in possession of the Officers, is said to amount to near 100,000 more. During her passage she had very tremendous weather, and was in considerable danger of foundering.

January 27.—The Cumberland, 74, has arrived from off St. Domingo. She has on board two French Generals, several other Officers, and 100,000l. A transport with 300 of the prisoners, has arrived at Portsmouth. The Creole frigate has foundered—crew saved.

From a Boston Paper of April 6.

FROM FRANCE.

Captain Swain, who sailed from Bayonne, (France,) Feb. 29, favored us with the following letter, which he received from his Broker just previous to his sailing:

"General Moreau is arrested; also La Fayette, Latour Maubourg, the Prince of Peace, and several Bishops, Archbishops, and others.—Pichegrue and George were to have assassinated or seized the First Consul.—Moreau was to have assumed the command. But his knavery is discovered.—We are assured Pichegrue is taken.—It is said the gates of the Thuilleries were gained, and powder had been introduced into the gardens in wine casks."

By the above letter it appears a new plot, or pretended plot, has been discovered at Paris. Capt. S. says he understood the discovery and arrests were made about the 22d of February; that an account of them had been published in the newspapers, and that they were subjects of conversation at Bayonne.—Pichegrue and George were in England a short time since. The Prince of Peace, we should presume, had not left Madrid. He may be implicated in the plot. He had not for sometime been a favorite with the French.—It has long been supposed that Moreau was not a stationary character, and his rise or fall has been expected.

THE ORACLE.

YORK:—SATURDAY, APRIL 21.

Letters have been received at Plymouth from Lord Nelson, stating that the French Fleet had escaped from Toulon, and that his Lordship had received early intelligence thereof; and was steering in pursuit of them with all sail set.

A report was prevalent in London, that fifteen of the enemy's gun-boats had been captured by Sir Sidney Smith, and carried into Dover, and thirty more are said to have been destroyed.

Orders have been received by the commanding officer in the Downs for all officers, whether belonging to vessels in actual service on that station, or to those not immediately prepared for sea, to sleep on board their respective ships.—Similar orders are to be strictly enforced at Plymouth, Portsmouth, Chatham and Sheerness.

All the men of war at St. Helen's have been ordered to lie at anchor with springs upon their cables.

LONDON, FEB. 26.

The rumours on Invasion thicken upon us, and have gained strength from last week's report.

His Majesty was fast recovering.

March 3. The Bulletin shewn to the Royal Visitors at St. James's, who were yesterday very numerous, was briefly as follows:—

"Queen's House, March 3.

"His Majesty is going on favourably."

Signed as before.

To this agreeable information we are enabled to add, that reasonable hopes are entertained, that His Majesty will be able to resume the full exercise of his Royal functions in a few days. That is to say, such is the confident report in the Ministerial circles.

☞ THE PRINTER begs leave to inform the Subscribers to The Upper Canada Gazette, that with the present Number will commence the XIVth Volume.

He humbly thanks those Gentlemen who have hitherto favored him with their patronage and support; but the expence attending the undertaking, necessitates him to request all those in arrears for more than six months, to make payment as speedily as possible.—In future, no Advertisements will be inserted in the Gazette but such as shall be previously paid for.

Subscribers in the Country from whom the Printer has agreed to receive Produce in payment, will have the goodness to deposit the same either at Messrs. Schofield and Mosley's or Mr. St. George's Stores.

To the Free and Independent Electors of the County of Durham, the East Riding of the County of York and the County of Simcoe.

GENTLEMEN,

THE Friends of the Honorable DAVID WILLIAM SMITH, beg leave to offer that Gentleman to represent you in the ensuing Parliament: his Honor, Integrity and Ability, and the essential services which, in different capacities he hath rendered to this Province, are so well known and felt, that his friends consider the mentioning of his name only, to be the most powerful solicitation which they can use on the present occasion, to obtain for him your Favor and Suffrage.

The friends of Mr. Smith consider it as their duty further to intimate, that from last accounts received from him in England, it was his determination to set out from that Country, so as to arrive here early in the Summer of this present year.

York, 7th April, 1804.

To the Free and Independent Electors of the East Riding of York.

GENTLEMEN,

THE period of the natural dissolution of the present Parliament having nearly arrived, I am induced to offer myself as a Candidate to represent you in the ensuing Parliament.—In thus presenting myself to your notice, I cannot refrain from observing, that, I stand unconnected with any party, unsupported by any influence, and unambitious of any patronage, other than the Suffrages of those, who consider the impartial enjoyment of their rights, and the free exercise of their privileges as objects not only worthy of the vigilance of the legislator, but also essential to their political security and to their local prosperity.

The opportunity of addressing myself to men who may be inclined to think with freedom, and to act with independency, is to me truly desirable; and the receiving of the countenance and support of those characters, must ever leave on my mind impressions more than gratifying.

It would ill accord with my sentiments to express myself in the usual terms of the zeal and fidelity of an Election Candidate; inasmuch as that the principle of previous assurances has frequently, in the exercise of the functions of the Representative, been either forgotten or occasionally abandoned: but I hope it will not be considered vaunting in me to assert, that, that zeal and the fidelity which have manifested themselves in the discharge of my duty to my Clients, will not be abated in supporting a more important trust.—THE CAUSE OF THE PUBLIC.

I have the honor to be,
Gentlemen,
Your devoted humble Servant,
WM. WEEKES.

PETER HUNTER
LIEUT. GOVERNOR.

GEORGE the THIRD by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland KING, Defender of the Faith.

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS, Greeting:

WHereas by our Proclamation, bearing date the ninth day of March last, WE thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to Prorogue our Provincial Parliament until the Sixteenth Day of this present month of April, at which time in our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear; but WE taking into our Royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving Subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you and each of you, that on the twenty-fourth day of May next enluing, you meet US in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary: Herein fail not.

In testimony whereof WE have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed: Witness our trusty and well beloved PETER HUNTER Esquire, our Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Lieutenant General commanding our Forces in our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at York, this tenth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and four, and in the forty-fourth year of our Reign.

P. H.

WM. JARVIS, Secretary.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER Esquire,
Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

WHEREAS by a certain Act of the Legislature of this Province, passed in the forty-fourth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act for granting to his "Majesty, a certain sum of money for "the further encouragement of the "growth and cultivation of Hemp "within this Province, and the exportation thereof," it is enacted, That from and out of any fund or funds now remaining, or which may hereafter come, into the hands of the Receiver General, arising from and out of the rates and duties already raised, levied and collected, or which hereafter may be raised, levied and collected to and for the uses of this Province, there be granted to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, the sum of one thousand pounds, to be disposed of, appropriated and laid out as a public stock or capital, applicable to the purpose of purchasing Hemp the growth of this Province, and of discharging the expences incident to such purchases, and the exportation and sale thereof, in such manner, and under such regulations, as to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council thereof, should from time to time seem meet; And that it should and may be lawful to and for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, to issue one or more Proclamation or Proclamations, and therein to name such and so many persons within the Province as to him shall seem meet, as Commissioners for the purchasing of Merchantable Hemp the growth of this Province, which said Commissioners, or any one or more of them, are and is thereby authorized and empowered to purchase such Hemp at and after the price or rate of forty pounds per ton: AND WHEREAS it is further enacted by the said Act, that after the passing of that Act, no person or persons whatsoever, shall be intitled to any further Bounty over and beyond the said price or sum of forty pounds per ton, or to any Premium under any Proclamation or Proclamations, heretofore issued by the Lieutenant Governor, for the encouragement of the growth and exportation of Hemp, for or in respect of any Hemp for which the said sum of forty pounds per ton shall be paid under the powers thereby given; Nor shall any Bounty or Premium be paid or payable for or in respect of any Hemp not intended for sale to some one of the Commissioners acting in virtue of the powers thereby given, which shall not be claimed on or before the thirtieth day of September next, under proper and sufficient Documents, to be on or before that day, presented to the person or persons duly empowered or authorized to allow or pay the same: Provided that before the said Commissioners to be appointed in virtue of that Act, or any of them, shall under the authority thereby given, purchase any Hemp from any person or persons whomsoever, such Commissioners and each of them are, and is thereby authorized and required, to administer to such person or persons offering any such Hemp for sale, an Oath in the said Act particularly set forth, whereby such person or persons, is or are to swear that the Hemp which he, she or they had that day offered for sale to the Commissioner appointed by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor for the purchase of Hemp, and every part thereof, was raised within the Province of Upper Canada by him or them, or by some other person or persons (to be named in such oath) and that no Bounty or Premium had been paid or claimed for any part of such Hemp, by any person or persons whomsoever, save and except what was included in the sum or price for which he, she or they had offered to sell such Hemp to the said Commissioner.—Now know all whom it may concern, that I PETER HUNTER Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, well knowing the fidelity, diligence and ability of the Honorable James Baby of Sandwich, the Honorable Richard Cartwright of Kingston, the Honorable Robert Hamilton of Queenstown, all Members of the Legislative Council of this Province, and William Allan of York in the Home District Esquire, do, by virtue of the power so vested in me as aforesaid, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, nominate, constitute and appoint the said James Baby, Richard Cartwright, Robert Hamilton, and William Allan, to be Commissioners for the purchasing of merchantable Hemp, the growth of the said Province, at and after the price or rate of Forty Pounds Halifax Currency per Ton, which said sum of Forty Pounds is to be paid by the said Commissioners respectively, to the party or parties selling such Hemp, in Money only, according to the rules, regulations, limitations and restrictions in the said in part above recited Act expressed and contained, with full power and authority, to do and perform all and each of the matters and things in the said Act authorized or required by them the said Commissioners to be done and performed.

Given under my Hand, and Seal at Arms, at York, this Twenty-Third Day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and four, and in the forty-fourth year of His Majesty's Reign.

P. HUNTER, Lt. Govr.

By His Excellency's Command,
Wm. Jarvis, Secy.

AN ACT

For the exemplary Punishment of all and every person and persons who shall seduce, or attempt to seduce, or aid or assist, or attempt to aid or assist any Soldier to desert his Majesty's service, or who shall harbour, conceal, receive or assist any Deserter from such service.

[Passed March 9th. 1804.]

WHEREAS pernicious practices have for some time past prevailed in this Province, by evil disposed persons disaffected to his Majesty's Government, and particularly to the Military service thereof, in seducing and debauching his Subjects who had engaged themselves as Soldiers in such service, and prevailing on them to desert, and also in harbouring, assisting and concealing such Deserters; for remedy whereof for the future, and for the exemplary punishment of such persons in such cases offending, Be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, continued and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act "passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, "intituled, "An Act for making more effectual provision for the government of the Province of Que"bec, in North America, and to make further pro"vision for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That from and after the passing of this Act, if any person or persons whomsoever (other than such as are, or shall be enlisted as Soldiers) shall, by words or with money, or by any other ways or means whatsoever, directly or indirectly, prevail upon, procure, persuade, or encourage, or endeavour or attempt to prevail upon, procure, persuade or encourage any such Soldier or Soldiers to desert or leave his Majesty's service, and shall be thereof lawfully convicted, the Court or Judge before whom such offender shall be so convicted, shall immediately on such conviction, award and adjudge such person and persons so convicted as aforesaid, to be conveyed to the common Gaol of the District where such offender shall be so tried, there to remain without Bail or Mainprize for the space of six Calendar months; and if from the circumstances and heinousness of the crime, it shall be thought proper and necessary to increase the punishment, such Court or Judge shall also further award and adjudge, that such offender so convicted as aforesaid, shall forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding forty pounds, and if such offender shall not on or before the third day previous to the expiration of such imprisonment as aforesaid pay such fine, then and in such case, the said offender shall be publicly whipped.

II. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That if any person from and after the passing of this Act, shall harbour, conceal, receive or assist any Deserter from his Majesty's service, knowing him to be such, such person so offending, shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds, and if such sum of twenty pounds shall not immediately on such conviction being pronounced, be paid into Court, the Court or Judge before whom such conviction shall be had, shall forthwith award, order and adjudge such offender to be committed to the common Gaol of the District in which such offender shall be so convicted, there to remain, without Bail or Mainprize for the space of three Calendar months, or until such time, not exceeding three Calendar months, as the said sum of twenty pounds shall be paid.

III. Provided nevertheless, That no conviction shall be pronounced under the authority of this Act, in any Court or Jurisdiction whatsoever in this Province, save and except by indictment presented or presented before a Court or Judges or Judges sitting in the execution of a Commission of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery; nor shall any prosecution be carried on by virtue of this Act, if the same shall not be commenced, within six Calendar months next after the offence shall be charged to have been committed, unless the offender shall within the said six months have departed, and left the Province, in which case it shall and may be lawful to commence such prosecution at any time within three Calendar months next after such offender's return into the Province, and to carry on the same to conviction. But it is hereby declared, that the issuing any warrant for apprehending of any person charged with any offence against this Act, by any one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace for this Province, shall be held and deemed to be a commencement of a prosecution within the true meaning of the provisions herein in that respect contained.

IV. And be it Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That in order the more effectually to prevent the escape of any such offender or offenders as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful at any time, from and after the passing of this Act, to and for any one or more of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace, on due proof upon oath being made before him or them, that any person has committed any one of the offences herein before described, to issue his or their warrant or warrants for the apprehension of such offender or offenders, or person or persons charged with such offence, and to cause such offender or offenders, or such person or persons so charged as aforesaid, to be brought before him or them, and upon the examination of such offender or offenders, and hearing the evidence, such Justice or Justices of the Peace shall discharge or commit to Prison, or shall bail such offender or offenders in like manner as by law any other person or persons charged criminally is or are dealt with; save and except, that if such Justice or Justices shall be satisfied with the evidence against such offender or offenders, such Justice or Justices shall commit such offender or offenders to the common Gaol of the District, or in case there shall be no Gaol in that District, to the common Gaol of any adjoining District, and such offender and offenders shall remain so committed until he, her or their trial shall be brought on, unless such offender or offenders shall, with two good and sufficient Sureties, to the satisfaction of the said Justice or Justices, become bound by recognizance to our Sovereign Lord the King, in manner hereinafter specified, (that is to say) if the said offender shall be charged with any felonious offence, then such offender or person so charged, shall become bound in the sum of forty pounds, and each of such Sureties in the sum of one hundred pounds, and if such offender shall be charged with having committed any offence against the provisions in the second Section of this Act contained, then such offender or person so charged, shall become bound in the sum of twenty pounds, and each of such Sureties in the sum of ten pounds, conditioned in each of such recognizances, for the appearance of such person so charged with any offence against this Act, at the then next Assizes, or Sessions of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery, to be holden for the District where such offence shall be charged to be committed, or at such other or future Assizes or Sessions of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery to which the trial of such offender shall for just cause be adjourned.

V. Provided Always, and be it further Enacted, That if it shall happen that any conviction under this Act, shall take place in any District where there shall be no common Gaol at the time of such conviction, it shall and may be lawful to and for the Court, or Judge before whom such conviction shall be had, to award, order and adjudge, that any such offender or offenders to be convicted, shall be committed to the common Gaol of any adjoining District, in which there shall at that time be a Gaol, and also to order and adjudge, that any further punishment to be inflicted under the authority of this Act, shall be inflicted either in the District where such conviction shall take place, or in the District to the Goal of which such offender shall be committed, as to such Judge or Court shall seem meet: And in case of any commitment by any Justice or Justices of the Peace before trial, or of any commitment by any such Court, or Judge or Judges as aforesaid after conviction, under the authority by this Act given, the Treasurer and Gaoler of the District to the Goal of which such offender, or person charged with or convicted of any offence against this Act shall be committed, and each of them is hereby respectively required, to allow to each person during his or her commitment or confinement there, such and the like maintenance and subsistence as is by law allowed to persons in custody under any criminal charge; and the Treasurer of the District from which such offender or person so charged or convicted shall be so sent, shall, and he is hereby required, to reimburse and pay to the Treasurer of the district, in which such person shall have been confined, out of the first monies which shall come to his hands, such sum and sums of money as shall have been so lawfully expended, according to the provisions in that respect herein before contained, for the maintenance and subsistence of any such person or persons as aforesaid.

VI. And be it further Enacted, That in case any such person or persons as aforesaid shall, by virtue of this Act, be committed before trial to any Goal other than the Goal of the District in which the offence shall be charged to have been committed, the Sheriff of the District in which such offence shall be charged to have been committed, shall, and he is hereby required and commanded, immediately before the Assize, or Session at which any trial for any offence against this Act shall be had, to convey such person so charged from the Goal in which he or she shall be so confined, to the District where such offence was charged to be committed, and there to keep him or her in close custody and confinement, and have such person ready to take his or her trial at the Assizes or Session of Oyer and Terminer then next ensuing: And all and every Sheriff and Sheriffs, Constable and Peace Officers of this Province, is and are hereby required and commanded to execute and obey all and every warrant and warrants, order and orders, sentence and sentences, which shall be pronounced or issued by any such Court or Judge, Justice or Justices, as are herein before mentioned, for the purpose of carrying the provisions of this Act into execution.

VII. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That all the fines, forfeitures and penalties that shall be incurred under and by virtue of this Act shall be accounted for to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, to and for the public uses of this Province, through the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury for the time being, in such manner and form as it shall please his Majesty to direct.

An ACT for the better securing this Province against all Seditious attempts or designs to disturb the Tranquility thereof.

[Passed 9th March, 1804.]

WHEREAS it is necessary to protect his Majesty's subjects of this Province from the seditious attempts or designs of evil minded and seditious persons; And whereas much danger may arise to the public tranquility thereof, from the unrestrained resort and residence of such persons therein; Be it therefore enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, continued and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, 'An Act for making more effectual provision for the government of the Province of Quebec, in North America,' and to make further provision for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That from and after the passing of this Act, it shall and may be lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, for the Members of the Legislative and Executive Councils, the Judges of his Majesty's Court of King's Bench for the time being, respectively, or for any person or persons authorized in that behalf, by an instrument under the hand and seal of the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government for the time being, or any one or more of them, jointly or separately, by warrant or warrants under his or their hand and seals, or hands and seals, to arrest any person or persons, not having been an inhabitant or inhabitants of this Province for the space of six months next preceding the date of such warrant or warrants, or not having taken the oath of allegiance to our Sovereign Lord the King, who by words, actions or other behaviour or conduct, hath or have endeavoured, or hath or have given just cause to suspect that he, she or they is or are about to endeavour to alienate the minds of his Majesty's subjects of this Province from his person or government, or in any wise with a seditious intent to disturb the tranquility thereof, to the end that such person or persons shall forthwith be brought before the said person or persons so granting such warrant or warrants against him, her or them, or any other person or persons duly authorized to grant such warrant or warrants by virtue of this Act; And if such person or persons, not being such inhabitant or inhabitants as aforesaid, or not having taken such oath of allegiance, shall not give to the person or persons so granting such warrant or warrants, or so authorized as aforesaid, before whom he, she or they shall be brought, full and complete satisfaction that his, her or their words, actions, conduct or behaviour had no such tendency, or were not intended to promote or encourage disaffection to his Majesty's person or government, it shall and may be lawful for each or any of the said persons so granting such warrant or warrants, or so authorized as aforesaid, and he and they is and are hereby required to deliver an order or orders in writing, to such person or persons, not being such inhabitant or inhabitants as aforesaid, or not having taken such oath of allegiance, requiring of him, her or them to depart this Province within a time to be limited by such order or orders, or if it shall be deemed expedient that he, she or they should be permitted to remain in this Province, to require from him, her or them good and sufficient security to the satisfaction of the person or persons acting under the authority hereby given, for his, her or their good behaviour, during his, her or their continuance therein.

II. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That if any person or persons, not being such inhabitant or inhabitants as aforesaid, or not having taken such oath of allegiance, who by any order or orders so delivered to him, her or them, is or are required to depart this Province within a time limited by that order, should by sickness or other impediment, be prevented from paying due obedience to the same, it shall and may be lawful for the person or persons who hath or have issued such order or orders as aforesaid, or for any other person or persons as aforesaid, authorized by this Act so to do (the person or persons acting under the authority hereby given, being first satisfied that such impediment by sickness or otherwise, ought to be admitted as a reason for such order as aforesaid not having been obeyed) by an indorsement in writing upon the said order or orders, or otherwise in writing, to enlarge the time specified in the said order or orders, from time to time as occasion may require, and if any person or persons so having been required or ordered to quit this Province as aforesaid, and not having obtained an enlargement of such time, in manner herein before specified, shall be found at large therein, or return thereunto after the time limited by any or either of such orders, without licence from the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person administering the Government for the time being, in that behalf, or in case any person or persons who shall have been served with any or either of such order or orders as aforesaid, or who shall have been permitted to remain in this Province upon such security as aforesaid, shall by words, actions or otherwise, endeavour or give just cause to suspect that he, she or they is or are about to endeavour to alienate the minds of his Majesty's subjects of this Province from his Person or Government, or in any wise with a seditious intent, to disturb the tranquility thereof, it shall and may be lawful for any one or more of the said person or persons so authorized by this Act as aforesaid, and he and they is, and are hereby required, by warrant or warrants under his or their hand and seal, or hands and seals, to commit such person or persons so remaining at large, or returning into this Province without such licence aforesaid, or to endeavouring or giving cause to suspect, that he, she or they is or are about to endeavour so to alienate the minds of his Majesty's subjects of this Province, or to any wife, with a seditious intent, to disturb the tranquility thereof, to the common Gaol or to the custody of the Sheriff of the district, in such district as in which there shall be no gaol at that time, there to remain without bail or mainprize, unless delivered therefrom by special order from the Governor, Lieutenant Governor or Person administering the Government for the time being, until he, she or they can be prosecuted for such offence in his Majesty's Court of King's Bench, or of Over and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery in this Province, or under any special commission of Over and Terminer to be issued by the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person administering the Government of this Province for the time being; and if such person or persons, not being such inhabitant or inhabitants as aforesaid, or not having taken such oath of allegiance, shall be duly convicted of any of the offences herein before described, in either of the said Courts respectively, he, she or they shall be adjudged by such Court, forthwith to depart this Province, or to be imprisoned in the common Goal, or be delivered over to the custody of the Sheriff in such districts in which there shall be no gaol at that time, for a time to be limited by such judgement, and at the expiration of that time to depart this Province; and if such person or persons so convicted as aforesaid, shall remain in this Province, or return thereinto after the expiration of the time to be limited by the said judgement, without licence from the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person administering the Government for the time being, in that behalf first had and obtained, such person or persons on being duly convicted of so remaining or returning, before either of the said Courts, shall be deemed guilty of felony, and shall suffer death as a felon, without benefit of Clergy. Provided always, That if in the execution of the powers hereby given, any question shall arise touching or concerning the space of time during which any person or persons shall have been an inhabitant or inhabitants of this Province previous to any warrant or warrants having been issued against him, her or them, or touching or concerning the fact of any person or persons having taken such oath of allegiance, the proof shall, in all such cases, lay on the party or parties against whom any such warrant or warrants shall, in virtue of the powers hereby given, have been granted or issued.

III. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That if any person or persons, at any time, shall be sued or prosecuted for any thing by him or them done, in pursuance, or by colour of this Act, or of any matter or thing therein contained, such action or prosecution shall be commenced within three calendar months next after the offence shall have been committed, and such person or persons may plead the general issue, and give the special matter in evidence for his, her or their defence; and if, upon trial, a verdict shall pass for the defendant or defendants, or the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall become nonsuited, or shall discontinue his, her or their suit or prosecution, or if judgement be given for the defendant or defendants upon demurrer or otherwise, such defendant or defendants shall have treble costs to him or them awarded against the plaintiff or plaintiffs.

An ACT to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the thirty-fourth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act to establish a Superior Court of Civil and Criminal Jurisdiction," and to regulate the Court of Appeal," and to authorize his Majesty's Court of King's Bench in this Province, to regulate certain Fees, Costs and Charges therein mentioned.

[Passed 9th March, 1804.]

WHEREAS the law now in force regulating the fees to be allowed to, and taken by the Clerk of the Crown, Council, Attornies, Sheriffs, and other Officers of his Majesty's said Court of King's Bench in this Province, has been found not well adapted to the present circumstances and situation of this Province, and it has been found expedient that such fees should be regulated by the Court of King's Bench, Be it therefore enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That from and after the first day of the Term of Easter now next ensuing, so much of an Act passed in the thirty fourth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act to establish a Superior Court of Civil and Criminal Jurisdiction, and to regulate the Court of Appeal," as respects the allowance of fees, or wherein or whereby fees are authorized to be taken by, and allowed to certain persons for certain services specified and set forth in the said last recited Act, and in the table of fees thereunto subjoined, shall cease and determine, and shall be, and the same is hereby declared to be repealed.

II. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That from and after the said first day of Easter Term next, it shall and may be lawful to and for the said Court of King's Bench, by order or rule, or orders or rules, to be pronounced by the said Court during the said Term of Easter, or during any subsequent Term or Terms, from time to time to ascertain, determine, declare and adjudge all and singular the fees which shall or may be taken, or be allowed to be taken by any Clerk of the Crown, Council, Attorney, Sheriff, Officer, or other person, for or in respect of any business heretofore done or transacted, or hereafter to be done or transacted in the Court of King's Bench, as well in civil causes and criminal prosecutions, as in all matters and things, causes and proceeding which now are, or shall or may be depending in the said Court which regard the King's revenue, or under any Commission of Over and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery, or under any Special Commission of Over and Terminer, any former law to the contrary notwithstanding.

An ACT to promulgate the Provincial Statutes, and also to repeal so much of an Act passed in the forty-first year of the reign of his present Majesty, as relates to Printing the Journals.

[Passed 9th of March, 1804.]

BE it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act, passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That so much of an Act passed in the forty-first year of the reign of his present Majesty, intituled, "An Act for granting to his Majesty a certain sum of money out of the Provincial Fund, to defray the payment of the Salaries of the Officers of the Legislative Council and House of Assembly, (including the Commissioners to Lower Canada) and to defray the contingent expences thereof, and further to appropriate the supplies and provide for the payment of the same hereafter," as relates to printing and publishing the Journals, shall be, and the same is hereby repealed.

II. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That the sum of three hundred pounds, appropriated in the aforesaid Act for printing the Laws and Journals, shall be expended during the present year, in compiling and printing all the Acts of the several Parliaments of this Province, including those of the present Session, and the said Acts so compiled and printed, shall be received from the Printer by the Clerk of the House of Assembly.

To the Worthy Inhabitants of the East Riding of the County of York, and Counties of Durham and Simcoe.

FRIENDS & FELLOW SUBJECTS,

IN addressing you by Appellations unusual, I believe, on similar occasions, no affectation of singularity has dictated the Innovation; my Terms flow from a more dignified Principle, a purer source of Ideas, from a sentiment of liberal and extensive Affection, which embraces and contemplates not only such of you as by Law are qualified to vote, but also such as a contracted and short sighted Policy has restrained from the immediate enjoyment of that Privilege. Your Interests inseparably the same, and alike dear and interesting to me, have always been equally my case; and your Good Will shall indiscriminately be gratifying, whether accompanied with the Ability of advancing my present Pursuit, or confined to the wishes of my succeeding in it.

The anxious anticipation of Events which has engaged so many Persons into such early struggles to suppliant me, forces me also, to anticipate the Dissolution of Parliament, in declaring my disposition to continue, (if supported by my Friends, at the next General Election,) in that Situation which I have now the honour of filling in Parliament; a Situation, which the great Majority of suffrages which placed me in it, justifies the honest Pride of supposing, was not obtained without Merit, and inspires the rational confidence of presuming, will not be lost without a Fault.

I stoop with Reluctance, Gentlemen, to animadvert upon some puny Fabrications, circulated to mislead your Judgment, and alienate your Favour. It has been said, that I am Canvassing for a Seat elsewhere; No, Gentlemen, the Insinuation, the Pride of Representing a Division of this Province, which, comprehending the Capital, is consequently the Political Head, (as you just now captivated in Quebec) by patriotic Ambition, to suffer the view of it to be interrupted by my Inexperience for a moment, by the prospect of any inferior Representation; be assured, therefore, Gentlemen, that I shall not forsake my present Post, until Your or Life shall have forsaken me.

Another Calumny of a darker hue, has been fabricated. I have been represented as inimical to the repeal of the Provincial Statute which restrains many worthy Persons migrating into this Province from voting at Elections, under a residence of Seven Years: A more insidious, a more barefaced falsehood, never issued from the lips of Malice; for, during every Session of my sitting in Parliament, I have been the warmest, the loudest Advocate for repealing that Statute, and for rendering Taxation and Representation reciprocal.

I shall notice a third expedient, in attempting which, Detraction (by resorting to an Imposture so gross as to carry its own refutation upon the very face of it,) has effectually avowed its own Impotency:—It has been whispered, that I have endeavoured to excite the general Rate of Allotments within the Home District. Wretched misrepresentation! I should have been my own Enemy indeed, if I had lent myself to such a measure. On the contrary, my Maxim has always been, and shall ever continue to be, that to unite of the Public Burthen as possible, should be limited from the shoulders of the Industrious Farmers and Mechanics, upon those of the more opulent Circles of Community. Persons with large Salaries and lucrative Employments: the shallow artifice of these exploded Flies, suggests this natural reflection, that Slander could find no real foundation to build upon, when reduced to the necessity of resorting to Fabrics upon Words.

To conclude, Gentlemen, I have no Interest separate from yours—no Country but that which we inhabit in common.—In all situations, under all circumstances, I have been the Friend of the People, and the Votary of their Rights.—I have never changed with the Times, nor shifted sides with the Occasion, and you may therefore reasonably confide, that I shall always be, Gentlemen, Your Most Devoted,

And Most Attached Servant,
A. MACDONELL.

York, 2d May, 1804.

To the Free and Independent Electors of the County of Durham, the East Riding of the County of York and the County of Simcoe.

GENTLEMEN,

THE Friends of the Honorable DAVID WILLIAM SMITH, beg leave to offer that Gentleman to represent you in the ensuing Parliament. His Honor, Integrity and Ability, and the essential services which, in different capacities he hath rendered to this Province, are so well known and felt, that his friends consider the mentioning of his name only, to be the most powerful solicitation which they can use on the present occasion, to obtain for him your Favor and Suffrage.

The friends of Mr. Smith consider it as their duty further to intimate, that from late accounts received from him in England, it was his determination to set out from that Country, so as to arrive here early in the Summer of this present year.

York, 7th April, 1804.

To the Free and Independent Electors of the [illegible]

GENTLEMEN,

At the period of the natural dissolution of the present Parliament having nearly arrived, I am induced to offer myself as a Candidate to represent you in the ensuing Parliament. In that persuasion I beg to your notice, a house arisen from misfortunes only, I stand unconnected with any party, unsupported by any influence, and unambitious of any patronage, other than the Suffrages of those, who consider the impartial enjoyment of their rights, and the free exercise of their privileges as objects not only worthy of the attendance of their legislator, but also essential to their political security and to their local prosperity.

The opportunity of addressing myself to men, who may be inclined to think with freedom, and to act with independency, is to me truly desirable; and the receiving of the countenance and support of those characters, must ever render to my mind impressions more than gratifying.

It would ill accord with my feelings to be express myself in the usual terms of the zeal and loyalty of an Electoral Candidate; an attack as that the principle of previous assurance has frequently, in the exercise of the functions of the Representative, been either forgotten or occasionally abandoned but I hope it will not be considered surprising in me to assert, that, that zeal and the fidelity which have manifested themselves in the discharge of my duty to my Clients, will not be abated in supporting a more important, and trust.—THE CAUSE OF THE PUBLIC. I hope the latter to be,

Gentlemen, Your devoted humble Servant,
WM WERKES.

LONDON, Feb. 23.

On Saturday accounts were received by Government, of an embargo having been laid in all the ports of France, from which it is inferred, that the enemy means immediately to attempt the invasion. Orders have been sent in consequence to all the Naval stations along the coast.

The following is an official paper published by the Batavian Government, and to the attentive reader, will convey more important information of the state of that unhappy country, than whole volumes filled with the complaints of individuals.

The President and Members of the Departmental Government of Zeland, to General Monnet, exercising the command of Flushing, and the Island of Walcheren.

SIR,

BEFORE we received your letter of the 17th Pluviose, we had already information of the measures you had taken by order of your Government, to seize upon the English merchandize found in the commercial houses and shops within this city; now we have intelligence that the same has also been done at Flushing and Veere. It is impossible to withhold our surprize at the step against the inhabitants of this country which you find yourself authorized to take. We have no room to surmise that the Batavian Government had the smallest intimation of a measure, which is as extraordinary as singular, or that it has been adopted and carried into execution with its previous knowledge, or that it should have co-operated in it. All the lamentable circumstances which strike in succession our country, dear to us, and the inhabitants on this island, whose interests are entrusted to us, affect us in the most sensible manner. However it may be, as to what has passed, and as long as we are ignorant of the motives and the cause of what has passed, we find ourselves compelled from duty and love for our fellow citizens, to consider every thing which has been done, or that may be undertaken against their property and possessions, as an act of arbitrary authority which we solemnly disavow.

We beseech you Sir, by the Liberty of Batavia, acknowledged for more than two centuries, and acquired in battle by our ancestors, at the expence of their valour and their blood, that you will not convert that liberty to a shadow, by persevering farther in the execution of a measure which has been carried to great lengths already, and against which we protest with all our might. If in the mean time against all expectation, you refuse to give ear to this just and well founded protest, we solemnly and energetically implore you, that the goods and property of our fellow citizens, already seized and placed in security, may not be transported elsewhere: at least, that the sacred right of property be so long respected, till both the governments shall have treated and determined as to the destiny of so many inhabitants, whose welfare and existence alone depend on the preservation of their property and possessions.

We have the honor to be, with respect,
President and Members
Of the Departmental Government of Middleburg, } Zealand.

London dates to 9th March.

THE KING.

The daily accounts of the King's indisposition, are, that he was going on in a favorable way. He has been able to put his signature to official papers.

March 7.

An embargo has been laid at the Custom-house upon all vessels bound to any other ports than the undermentioned, viz. Spain and Portugal, Mediterranean, America, Africa, East and West Indies,

March 8.

The embargo which we mentioned yesterday as having been laid on the port of London, extends to all the out ports, except upon the convoys bound down channel.—Various causes have been assigned for this measure, but the real one remains a secret with government. This embargo is not expected to last above ten days.

It is no longer to be doubted that the French fleet have quitted Toulon.

An embargo has been laid at Schiedam on the part of the French government, on all outward bound ships, in order to prevent General Pichegru from escaping.

March 9.

The public curiosity has been excited a little since the news of the recent plot against the Consular Government, to know the result, and to learn whether the intelligence was correct that states Generals Moreau and Pichegru to have been guillotined—Till farther accounts be received from France, the present anxiety cannot be removed; and it must be considerably heightened by accounts received this morning from Deal, which state that

Another Revolution

Has taken place in France inimical to Bonaparte. The news is said to have been brought over by a Royalist General. How far it may be correct, we cannot take upon us to determine; but the thing is far from being improbable. We shall not indulge in conjectures, but content ourselves with subjoining the information that has reached us:

"DEAL, March 8.

"We have just received intelligence of a very important nature, which added to the late news from France, carries with it some degree of probability, especially as great bustle prevails here at present among the shipping in the Downs. A Royal General and his suite attached to the Monarchical Party in France, who was some days ago received on board one of our cruizers from the heights above Dieppe, brings an account that a counter revolution has taken place in that country, prejudicial to the interests of the Corsican Usurper.

"The whole naval department here are in the highest spirits: in consequence of this sudden change of affairs all the ships, cutters and brigs ready for sea in the Downs, have received orders to get under weigh immediately.—Most of them have already sailed. Wind S. E. and by S.

"The firing heard the other day was a salute at Boulogne: but on what occasion we have not yet learnt."

Last night dispatches were sent off express by a messenger from the Admiralty to Plymouth, for Admiral Cornwallis, to be forwarded to him from that place by a fast sailing vessel. An express was likewise sent off to Ireland.

All ships of every description have been ordered to be got ready for service as fast as possible. Every thing seems to shew that some severe expedition is in contemplation.

Last night we received Dutch papers to the 28th ult.—The most important piece of information they contain, is an open acknowledgement by the Merchant, that the Dutch Officers who had been applied to, to take commands in the flotilla of Flushing destined for the invasion of this country, have refused to accept of the appointments. This shews in what a hopeful light they view the whole undertaking.

The Moniteurs are filled chiefly — addresses to the First Consul, to congratulate him on his escape. — No further mention is made of the conspiracy or of the conspirators in the official papers.

Accounts from Vienna of the 9th Feb. state, that the greatest bustle prevails among the Ministers of that Court; that the Troops were in motion, and that every thing indicated an approaching change of affairs.

THE SECRET EXPEDITION.

We announced on Tuesday the preparations which were making for an expedition against Boulogne and some other ports of the enemy. These preparations have been followed by an embargo in our ports, and the execution of a vigorous and decisive measure is at hand.

The plan of the intended expedition originated in Mr. Phillipt, of St. Paul's Church Yard—That Gentleman has, for a considerable time, proposed to government to close up and permanently blockade the ports of the enemy by sinking at their entrances old ships of various burthens, filled with chalk or stones. By varying the number and size of those vessels, and by other contrivances adapted to the circumstances of the enemy's ports he considers it to be in the power of this country to render every harbour of France, Holland and Flanders unnavigable and totally useless.

After mature investigation, the idea has been adopted by Government, and a number of old ships, filled with Maidstone rag-stone, are immediately to be sunk at the entrance of the harbour of Boulogne, so as to render it impossible for vessels to come out which rendezvoused in that port; consequently nothing further will be apprehended from an invasion in that quarter.

The shallow and intricate navigation of the ports of Holland will afterwards be more easily choaked up and ruined, exactly in the same manner, and by chaining numbers of heavy ships together. Mr. Phillips deems it equally practicable to choak up the harbour of Brest, and all the larger ports of France, so that no ship of war can come out or go into them.

AN ACT

For the exemplary Punishment of all and every person and persons who shall seduce, or attempt to seduce, or aid or assist, or attempt to aid or assist any Soldier to desert his Majesty's service, or who shall harbour, conceal, receive or assist any Deserter from such service.

[Passed March 9th, 1804.]

WHEREAS pernicious practices have for some time past prevailed in this Province, by evil disposed persons disaffected to his Majesty's Government, and particularly to the Military service thereof, in seducing and deluding his Subjects who had engaged themselves as Soldiers in such service, and prevailing them to desert, and also in harbouring, assisting and concealing such Deserters; for remedy wherof for the future, and for the exemplary punishment of such persons in such cases offending; BE it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act, passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act for making more effectual provision for the government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That from and after the passing of this Act, if any person or persons whomsoever (other than such as are, or shall be enlisted as Soldiers) shall, by words or with money, or by any other ways or means whatsoever, directly or indirectly, prevail upon, procure, persuade, or encourage, or endeavour or attempt to prevail upon, procure, persuade or encourage any such Soldier or Soldiers to desert or leave his Majesty's service, and shall be thereof lawfully convicted, the Court or Judge before whom such offender shall be so convicted, shall immediately on such conviction, award and adjudge such person and persons so convicted, to the Treasurer and Gaoler of the District common Gaol of the District where such offender shall be so tried, there to remain without Bail or Mainprise for the space of six Calendar months; and if from the circumstances and heinousness of the crime, it shall be thought proper to inflict or continue or increase the punishment, such Court or Judge shall also further award and adjudge, that such offender so convicted as aforesaid, shall forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding forty pounds, and if such offender shall not pay or before the third day next previous to the expiration of such imprisonment as aforesaid pay such fine, then and in such case, the said offender shall be publicly whipped.

II. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That if any person from and after the passing of this Act, shall harbour, conceal, receive or assist any Deserter from his Majesty's service, knowing him to be such, such person so offending, shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds, and if such sum of twenty pounds shall not immediately on such conviction being pronounced, be paid into Court, the Court or Judge before whom such conviction shall be had, shall forth with award, order and adjudge such offender to be committed to the common Gaol of the District in which such offender shall be so convicted, there to remain, without Bail or Mainprise for the space of three Calendar months, or until such time, not exceeding three Calendar months, as the said sum of twenty pounds shall be paid.

III. Provided nevertheless, That no conviction shall be pronounced under the authority of this Act, in any Court or Jurisdiction whatsoever in this Province, save and except by indictment preferred or presented before a Court, or Judge or Judges sitting in the execution of a Commission of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery; nor shall any prosecution be carried on by virtue of this Act, if the same shall not be commenced, within six Calendar months next after the offence shall be charged to have been committed, unless the offender shall within the said six months have departed and left the Province, in which case it shall and may be lawful to commence such prosecution at any time within six calendar months next after such offender's return into the Province, and to carry on the same to conviction: But it is hereby declared, that the issuing any warrant for the apprehending of any person charged with any offence against this Act, by any one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace for this Province, shall be held and deemed to be a commencement of a prosecution within the true meaning of the provisions herein in that respect contained.

IV. And be it Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That in order the more effectually to prevent the escape of any such offender or offenders as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful at any time, from and after the passing of this Act, to and for any one or more of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace, on due proof upon oath being made before him or them, that any person has committed any one of the offences herein before detailed, to issue his or their warrant or warrants for the apprehension of such offender or offenders, or person or persons charged with such offence, and to cause such offender or offenders, or such person or persons so charged as aforesaid, to be brought before him or them, and upon the examination of such offender or offenders, and hearing the evidence, such Justice or Justices of the Peace shall discharge or commit to Prison, or shall bail such offender or offenders, in like manner as by law any other person or persons charged criminally in or are dealt with; save and except, that if such Justice or Justices shall be satisfied with the evidence against such offender or offenders, such Justice or Justices shall commit such offender or offenders to the common Gaol of the District, or in case there shall be no Gaol in that District, to the common Gaol of any adjoining District, and such offender and offenders shall remain so committed, until he, her or their trial shall be brought on, unless such offender or offenders shall, with two good and sufficient sureties, to the satisfaction of the said Justice or Justices, become bound by recognizance to our Sovereign Lord the King, in manner hereinafter specified, (that is to say) if the said offender shall be charged with having committed any offence against the provisions in the first Section of this Act contained, then such offender or person so charged, shall become bound in the sum of two hundred pounds, and each of such sureties in the sum of one hundred pounds, and if such offender shall be charged with having committed any offence against the provisions in the second Section of this Act contained, then such offender or person so charged, shall become bound in the sum of forty pounds, and each of such sureties in the sum of twenty pounds, conditioned in each of such recognizances, for the appearance of such person so charged with any offence against this Act, at the then next Assizes, or Session of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery, to be holden for the District where such offence shall be charged to be committed, or at such other or future Assizes or Sessions of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery, to which the trial of such offender shall for just cause be adjourned.

V. Provided likewise, and be it further Enacted, That if it shall happen that any conviction under this Act, shall take place in any District where there shall be no common Gaol at the time of such conviction, it shall and may be lawful to and for the Court or Judge before whom such conviction shall be had, to award, order and adjudge, that any such offender or offenders so to be convicted, shall be committed to the common gaol of any adjoining District, in which there shall at that time be a Gaol, and also to order and adjudge, that any further punishment to be inflicted under the authority of this Act, shall be inflicted either in the District where such conviction shall take place, or in the District to the Gaol of which such offender shall be committed, as to such Judge or Court shall seem meet: And in case of any commitment by any Justice or Justices of the Peace before trial, or of any commitment by any such Court, or Judge or Judges as aforesaid after conviction, under the authority by this Act given, the Treasurer and Gaoler of the District to the Gaol of which such offender, or person charged with or convicted of any offence against this Act shall be committed, are, and each of them is hereby respectively required, to allow to each person during the time of commitment or confinement to which such and the like maintenance and subsistence as is by law allowed to persons in custody under any criminal charge; and the Treasurer of the District from which such offender or person so charged or convicted shall be so sent to Gaol, shall be is hereby required, to reimburse and pay to the Treasurer of the district, in which such person shall have been confined, out of the first monies which shall come to his hands, such sum and sums of money as shall have been so lawfully expended, according to the provisions in that respect herein before contained, for the maintenance and subsistence of any such person or persons as aforesaid.

VI. And be it further Enacted, That in case any such person or persons as aforesaid shall, by virtue of this Act, be committed before trial to any Gaol other than the Gaol of the District in which the offence shall be charged to have been committed, the Sheriff of the District in which such offence shall be charged to have been committed, shall, and he is hereby required and commanded, immediately before the Assizes or Session at which any trial for any offence against this Act shall be had, to convey such person to charged from the Gaol in which he or she shall be so confined, to the District where such offence was charged to be committed, and there to keep him or her in safe custody and confinement, and have such person ready to take his or her trial at the Assizes or Session of Oyer and Terminer then next ensuing: And all and every Sheriff and Sheriffs, Constable and Peace Officers of this Province, is and are hereby required and commanded to execute and obey all and every warrant and warrants, order and orders, sentence and sentences, which shall be pronounced or issued by any such Court or Judge, Justice or Justices, as are herein before mentioned, for the purpose of carrying the provisions of this Act into execution.

VII. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That all the fines, forfeitures and penalties that shall be incurred under and by virtue of this Act shall be accounted for to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, to and for the public uses of this Province, through the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury for the time being, in such manner and form as it shall please his Majesty to direct.

An ACT to repeal so much of an Act passed in the thirty-fourth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act to restrain the custom of permitting Horned Cattle, Horses, Sheep and Swine to run at large," as relates to Sheep, and to restrain the Owners of Rams from permitting them to run at large during a certain time of the year.

WHEREAS it would tend to improve the breed and increase the number of sheep, if the owners of rams were restrained by Law from permitting them to run at large during a certain time of the year; Be it therefore Enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act, passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That so much of an Act, passed in the thirty-fourth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act to restrain the custom of permitting horned cattle, horses, sheep and swine to run at large," as impowers or authorizes the inhabitant householders, or the greater part of them in every district within this Province in their annual Town Meetings, to alcertain and determine in what manner and at what periods sheep shall be allowed to run at large within their respective Divisions, or to resolve that the same or any part thereof, shall be restrained from so doing, shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

II. And be it further Enacted, That from and after the passing of this Act, it shall not be lawful for any person or persons within this Province, to have any ram or rams going at large within the said Province, from the first day of September until the twentieth day of December in each year, and if any ram or rams belonging to any such person or persons as aforesaid, shall be found going at large as aforesaid, such person or persons shall for every such ram going at large as aforesaid, between the said first day of September and the said twentieth day of December, forfeit and pay the sum of twenty shillings, which shall be recovered in a summary way before any one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace, either upon the confession of the party complained of or upon the oath of one credible witness, which sum, after the party shall be so convicted, shall be levied by distress and sale of the offender's goods and chattels, returning the overplus, if any shall arise upon such sale, to the party complained of, after deducting the said sum of twenty shillings and the charges of the sale.

III. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That one half of the said sum of twenty shillings, shall be paid to the informer, and the other half shall be paid to the Receiver General, to and for the public uses of this Province.

IV. And whereas difficulty may arise in ascertaining to whom any ram or rams which shall be found running at large between the said first day of September and the twentieth day of December, in this present or any subsequent year, may belong, Be it therefore enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful for any person or persons finding such ram or rams at large during the aforesaid time, contrary to the provisions of this Act, to impound such ram or rams in the common pound, or confine such ram or rams in some building within the township, where such ram or rams shall be so found, and to affix notice in writing, under the signature of such person or persons so impounding or confining such ram or rams, on the outside of such pound or building, and also in some other conspicuous place in the said township, (which notice shall be dated on the day on which the same shall be so affixed) of such ram or rams having been found at large contrary to law, and being impounded or confined, either in the common pound or some other building to be described in such notice (as the case may be) and such person or persons shall immediately proceed to bring to conviction such owner or owners; and if the owner or owners of such ram or rams, shall not within seven days after such notice shall be so given, pay the said sum of twenty shillings, together with the pound-keeper's fees, and the costs and charges attending the support and feeding such ram or rams during his or their confinement, (such costs and charges to be alcertained and adjudged by the Magistrate before whom any conviction shall take place by virtue of this Act) it shall and may be lawful to and for the person or persons who shall so have impounded or confined such ram or rams, and who shall have convicted the owner or owners of such ram or rams, of having offended against this Act, to expose such ram or rams to sale, and out of the money arising from such sale, to pay such sum of twenty shillings, together with such costs and charges as aforesaid, in case the proceeds of such sales shall be found sufficient to pay the same, and if more than sufficient, to return the overplus to the owner or owners of such ram or rams, and if such proceeds shall be found insufficient for the purposes aforesaid, then, and in such case, such proceeds shall, in the first place, be applied in payment of the pound-keeper's fees and the costs and charges attending the supporting and feeding such ram or rams, and the remainder to be applied in manner following, viz. one half of such remainder to the informer, and the other half to his Majesty's Receiver General, for the public uses of this Province.

V. And be it further Enacted, That no prosecution shall be carried on under the authority of this Act, unless the same shall be commenced within eight days after any ram or rams shall be found running at large, contrary to the provisions herein contained, nor shall any distress be levied under the authority of this Act, in any case where any ram or rams so impounded or confined as aforesaid, shall have been sold under the provisions herein contained, but the proceeds of such sale or sales only, shall at all times be deemed and considered as liable to satisfy the penalty and all costs by this Act intended to be imposed.

VI. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That all such parts of the forfeitures and penalties as are by this Act directed to be paid to his Majesty's Receiver General, to and for the public uses of this Province, shall be accounted for to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, through the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury, in such manner and form as his Majesty, his heirs or successors shall be graciously pleased to direct.

YORK, May 10th, 1804.

LONDON, March 2.

Dispatches were yesterday received from Lord Nelson, and a rumour was immediately circulated, that his Lordship had overtaken the French fleet and captured four sail of the line. The rumour however is unfounded. The dispatches, it is said, relate merely to the following circumstance:—it may be remembered that some time since the British Consul (John Falcon, Esq.) and the Dey were not on very friendly terms. The misunderstanding had long subsisted, but the breach was much widened by a charge being falsely made against the Consul that he had harbored Moorish women in his house, a usage not allowed by the laws of Mahomet. By French intrigue the women were introduced into the Consul's house during his absence, and therein found by the guards who were sent in search. In consequence of this circumstance, Mr. Falcon was ordered away, and otherwise treated with much indignity. The British Consul immediately wrote home to Government, apprising them of the situation of affairs; in consequence of which they sent instructions to Ld. Nelson to apply to the Dey to get Mr. Falcon reinstated. His Lordship, on receipt of the dispatches, being then off Toulon, proceeded immediately with a part of his squadron to Algiers, and on his arrival sent a polite note, requesting that the Dey would allow him to explain the above business.—The Dey refused. Lord Nelson then said, that if the Dey would not consent to do justice to the British Consul, he must be under the necessity of compelling him by force.—The Dey's answer was, that if Lord Nelson fired a single gun, he would consider it as a declaration of hostilities, and immediately opened the batteries against his ships.—Lord Nelson not having instructions to proceed to extremities, has sent the particulars of the affair to Government, and waits their answer to govern his conduct in this curious affair.

The conduct of the Prince of Wales is extremely exemplary.—His Counsellors are Lord Thurlow, Earl Moira, and Mr. Sheridan.—He gives no opinion whatever, on the Regency which has been talked of.—The Duke of York has visited him; and we can confidently assert, that a cordial reconciliation has taken place between the Royal Brothers.

From the Belfast News-Letter, March 6.

The Thief of Madame Demidoff's Diamonds.

The Russian gentleman, Mr. Demidoff, is one of the richest individuals in the Russian empire; and he, with his lady, has resided at Paris for upwards of two years. He occupies one of the first hotels in that city, and lives in a style little inferior to that of the members of the Consular family.

Every month Mr. and Madame Demidoff give one or more splendid balls, suppers, thés, &c. At one of these balls last month, Madame Demidoff lost a beautiful diadem of Smaragds and other diamonds, worth 300,000 livres, or 12,500l. and by the activity of the police, the thief was discovered to be the young Countess de ——, as handsome in her person, as accomplished in her manners. This Countess had, for some years, been the bosom friend of the rich Princess of C——, who, during her residence at Paris, some time ago, complained almost daily of being robbed, by some unknown person, of fine pearls or jewels of great value. When by the departure of this Princess, the Countess lost one good customer, she pitched upon Madame Demidoff to be another, and insinuated herself so much in her confidence, that she was invited to occupy an apartment in the hotel. Madame Demidoff, in a moment of imprudence, exhibited before the Countess all her jewels, which the latter determined immediately to appropriate to herself, particularly as she, just at that period, had lost a large sum of money in gambling.—The last ball, when every body was occupied in dancing or gambling, the Countess believed it a good opportunity to execute this determination, and therefore went to the bed room where she expected to find nobody; but unfortunately the Governor of Mr. Demidoff's children, instead of sharing in the pleasures of the ball, had retired to this room to read without being disturbed. When the Countess entered she ordered him to leave her alone, as she was rather unwell, and to tell the servants, to prevent her from being disturbed. After this she opened with a false key the jewel box, and took the diadem. The next day a Russian girl, sent by the Empress of Russia to Paris as an apprentice to a milliner, called upon the favorite chamber-maid of Madame Demidoff, who obtained permission to shew her countrywoman her mistress's jewels—When she opened the jewel-box and found the diadem gone, she fainted. Madame Demidoff, certain of the fidelity of her maid, told her husband of her loss, without knowing whom to suspect. After some consultation it was agreed to disclose it to the Prefect of Police, and to ask his advice—During these transactions the Governor had mentioned what had happened in the bed room the night of the ball.

As usual, the Countess paid Madame Demidoff her morning visit, when she informed her of the robbery. The Countess, at this relation was confused, went away, and left an impression in the mind of her friend, that she was the guilty person.

The Prefect of the Police, in the mean time, advised Mr. and Madame Demidoff to invite to dine with them, unknown to every other person in the house, an able Police Commissary, and to order all the servants to be prevented during the dinner. As long as at table, the Commissary never ceased to speak with Madame Demidoff of the theft, but in a joking manner, at the same time fixing his eyes upon every body in the room. When alone with the master and mistress of the house, after the repast was over, he declared to them, that he was convinced in his own mind, of the innocence of all the servants; but, said he, have you no other acquaintance of suspicious character? Madame Demidoff then mentioned, unwillingly, the particulars of the Countess's conduct. Hearing this, the Commissary immediately went into the Countess's apartment, and said, "Madam, I am a Police Commissary, you are a foreigner, accused by Government of keeping up a dangerous correspondence with the enemy. I am ordered to look over your papers."—The Countess, knowing herself innocent of this accusation, gave him, without resistance, the keys of her bureau and drawers.—In her bureau, he found the diamonds of Madame Demidoff's diadem, taken to pieces.—"These," said the Commissary, "are the very diamonds stolen from Madame Demidoff—and you, Countess, must go with me." On hearing this, the Countess took suddenly a small bason away from the bureau, and when asked what it contained, answered, "some secret water for women." "it cannot be a secret from me," returned the Commissary, "I am a married man." The bason that the Countess tried to throw away, contained aquafortis, where she had dissolved the silver in which the diamonds had been set. It contained even, besides this, several unhurt diamonds.

Certain now of his affair, the Commissary put the diamonds in his pocket, and carried the Countess, who avowed the theft, before the Prefecture of the Police; and she is condemned to four hours expolure on the pillory, and to two years imprisonment in la Salperriere, or the Bridewell, where, in 1787, the famous Countess de la Motte was shut up.

The Countess de ——, has a yearly revenue of 30,000 livres, and her jewel-box contained trinkets worth upwards of 150,000 livres.

This lady is not the only victim of the passion for gambling in France; a jeweller's wife lately robbed her husband of 10,000 louis d'ors worth of diamonds, which she lost in gambling, and afterwards poisoned herself when she learned it had ruined her husband. And a banker has, not long ago, to save the honor of his wife, been obliged to pay 200,000 livres, by her forged bills, and loss to gamblers.

MOCHA.

The customs of nations in a state of comparative barbarism, have long been a copious subject for the descriptive ingenuity of travellers, and the avidity with which they are perused proves that they are among the most amusing branches of literature in the form of narrative. Those of Mocha are but little known; and since the time of D'Apies and Niburi, they have undergone so material a change, as to give interest to the following account, which we derive from an officer in the India Company's service, recently from thence:—

The town of Mocha is wretchedly built; the fortifications are contemptible; and the artillery is in the same state of rudeness as their military tactics. It contains the remains of the commerce of the formerly opulent town of Aden, and its trade is principally in coffee, which is amongst the best kinds, and is sold in this country at a very high price.

As this commerce attracts thither a considerable number of European vessels there are certain regulations observed on their arrival, of which the following are the most curious:—On the landing of a Captain, the principal officers of the custom-house, preceded by the factors of the nation to which he belongs, meet and conduct him before the Emir-Bahar, who places him by his side, and lays his right hand upon his heart as a token of salutation. The stranger is then perfumed with incense of benzoin and oil of roses, and afterwards with a sort of aloes wood, the smell of which is exquisitely sweet, and which is so scarce, that it is purchased by its weight in gold. After this ceremony, he is entertained with coffee, which, if an Englishman, he generally finds impossible to drink; for the Arabs neither toast their coffee, nor make the liquor from the grain, but use only the pulp, which we throw away; though they make of it a slight infusion like tea.

He then undergoes a second perfuming, and is conducted to the house of the Governor, on an Arabian charger, elegantly caparisoned, accompanied by a mob, who make the most hideous shouts and yelling. On arriving at the audience-chamber of the Governor, he is obliged to deliver up his sword; but this concession has of late been refused by the British and French Officers. When the Governor points to an arm chair, to direct them to be seated, they not unfrequently consider the motion as an offering of his hand, and some of them seize and give it a hearty squeeze, which produces strong marks of disgust in the troops by which they are surrounded. After a second fumigation, he is at length dismissed, and sent to the factory of his nation. The British interest predominates in this town, as in every other quarter of the globe. Their lodge is a superb building, capable of accommodating the officers of a number of vessels; while that of the French, who are despised by the inhabitants, is a miserable structure, with only a few warehouses attached to it.

The women wear a long veil, through which they see without being seen; the better classes never appear in the streets in the day-time, and when they meet any men in the way, they stand up close against the wall to let them pass. This latter custom is prevalent amongst the women of the Crimea also. London Papers.

HUMAN SACRIFICES.

We have already noticed, with pleasure, that the British Government in India, is actively and successfully engaged in discouraging the inhuman ceremonies amongst the Asiatics, which was wont to utter the cries of a relative, and especially the voluntary immolation of widows on the funeral piles of their husbands. The practice is so grafted on the barbarous superstition of the country, so woven with its religious doctrine, that although the interference of the English has rendered it less frequent, it will probably require a length of time, and strong military execution, wholly to prevent it.

The custom is at present confined to the Brahmins; and when an individual of this cast dies, his principal widow is deprived of her character and cast, and becomes infamous if she refuses to sacrifice herself; and she is further urged to suicide, by an opinion which the priests zealously inculcate, that after they die in this manner, they enjoy the most exquisite happiness. They are, however, sometimes wanting in resolution; and to retain life, submit to the penalties which a barbarous custom has attached to it. In other cases again, a sense of shame, and the upbraidings of their relatives, have induced them to attone for this weakness by deaths of aggravated pain:—one of these instances is mentioned, if we mistake not, by Mr. Hastings, when a woman burnt herself with such horrid, yet heroic deliberation, that she was three days in consuming her legs and arms, &c. before the vital spark was destroyed.

At different places, the manner of performing this horrid ceremony varies. In Bengal the funeral pile of the husband is constructed contiguous to a wall, with space enough for a single person to walk, as it is customary for the widow to walk three times round it previous to the ceremony. A hole is made in the wall at the height of the pile, in which a beam is placed, upwards of twenty feet long, with a rope fixed to its end, for the purpose of making it oscillate.

After the widow has performed her ambulations, and taken off her jewels, which she deliberate, cautioned her companions, she ascends the pile, and falls prostrate, embracing the body of her husband; the beam is then put in motion, and falls so heavily upon her as to break her back, and deprive her of the power of moving. The pile is then set on fire, and martial music, combined with the shouts of the people, completely drown the groans occasioned by her agony, while she is thus, in the most perfect sense of the expression, burned alive.

In Assam, when any of the Rajahs, Magistrates or principal men die, an immense cave is dug for his corpse, and his wives, servants and elephants are likewise entombed for his future state and convenience—provision, lamps, oil, &c. are buried with them; but as these cemeteries are never opened, it has not been ascertained how long the unfortunate women live; but it is probable that the damp, and want of air, shortly terminate their sufferings.

WHY are those eyes bedim'd with tears;
What anxious sorrow bids them flow?
Say, can a friend distress thy fears,
Say, can his verse relieve thy woe?

Ah! no! 'I see thy cause of grief,
Vain, now I hear, the muse's aid—
Vain are my hopes to bring relief,
Or heal the wounds which love has made.

Some son of Mars, by Venus bless'd,
With every grace to win the fair,
With love, has touch'd thy tender breast,
And parting, leaves thee to despair.

Phebus himself, has felt the dart,
From whence thy beauteous eyes o'erflow.
How can he then, his aid impart,
Against that power which rules him too?

Time's leniene hand, shall yet prevail,
To charm the sorrows of thy breast—
And though an hour, a day should fail,
A week shall soothe thy cares to rest.

To the Worthy Inhabitants of the East Riding of the County of York, and Counties of Durham and Simcoe.

FRIENDS & FELLOW SUBJECTS,

IN addressing you by Appellations unusual, I believe, on similar occasions, no affectation of singularity has dictated the Innovation; my Terms flow from a more dignified Principle, a purer source of Ideas, from a sentiment of liberal and extensive Affection, which embraces and contemplates not only such of you as by Law are qualified to vote, but also such as a contracted and short sighted Policy has restrained from the immediate enjoyment of that Privilege. Your Interests inseparably the same, and alike dear and interesting to me, have always been equally my care; and your Good Will shall indiscriminately be gratifying, whether accompanied with the Ability of advancing my present Pursuit, or confined to the wishes of my succeeding in it.

The anxious anticipation of Events which has engaged so many Persons into such early struggles to supplant me, forces me also, to anticipate the Dissolution of Parliament, in declaring my disposition to continue, (if supported by my Friends, at the next General Election,) in that Situation which I have now the honor of filling in Parliament; a Situation, which the great Majority of suffrages which placed me in it, justifies the honest Pride of supposing, was not obtained without Merit, and inspires the rational confidence of presuming, will not be lost without a Fault.

I stoop with Reluctance, Gentlemen, to animadvert upon some puny Fabrications, circulated to mislead your Judgment, and alienate your Favour. It has been said, that I am Canvassing for a Seat elsewhere; No, Gentlemen, the Satisfaction, the Pride of Representing that Division of this Province, which, comprehending the Capital, is consequently the Political Head, is to me, too captivating an Object of Patriotic Ambition, to suffer the view of it to be intercepted in my Imagination for a moment, by the prospect of any inferior Representation; be assured, therefore, Gentlemen, that I shall not forsake my present Post, until You or Life shall have forsaken me.

Another Calumny of a darker hue, has been fabricated. I have been represented as inimical to the repeal of the Provincial Statute which restrains many worthy Persons migrating into this Province from voting at Elections, under a residence of Seven Years: A more infidious, a more barefaced falsehood, never issued from the lips of Malice; for, during every Session of my sitting in Parliament, I have been the warmest, the loudest Advocate for repealing that Statute, and for rendering Taxation and Representation reciprocal.

I shall notice a third expedient, in attempting which, Detraction (by resorting to an Imposture so gross as to carry its own refutation upon the very face of it,) has effectually avowed its own Impotency:—It has been whispered, that I have endeavoured to encrease the general Rate of Assessments within the Home District. Wretched misrepresentation! I should have been my own Enemy indeed, if I had lent myself to such a measure. On the contrary, my Maxim has always been, and shall ever continue to be, that so much of the Public Burthen as possible, should be shifted from the shoulders of the Industrious Farmers and Mechanics, upon those of the more opulent Classes of Community; Persons with large Salaries and lucrative Employments: the shallow artifice of these exploded Fibs, suggests this natural reflection, that Slander could find no real foundation to build upon, when reduced to the necessity of rearing its Fabricks upon Visions.

To conclude, Gentlemen, I have no Interest separate from yours—no Country but that which we inhabit in common.—In all situations, under all circumstances, I have been the Friend of the People, and the Votary of their Rights.—I have never changed with the Times, nor shifted sides with the Occasion, and you may therefore reasonably confide that I shall always be,

Gentlemen, Your Most Devoted,
And Most Attached Servant,
A: MACDONELL.

York, 2d May, 1804.

To the Free and Independent Electors of the East Riding of York.

GENTLEMEN,

THE period of the natural dissolution of the present Parliament having nearly arrived, I am induced to offer myself as a Candidate to represent you in the ensuing Parliament.—In thus presenting myself to your notice, I cannot refrain from observing, that, I stand unconnected with any party, unsupported by any influence, and unambitious of any patronage, other than the Suffrages of those, who consider the impartial enjoyment of their rights, and the free exercise of their privileges as objects not only worthy of the vigilance of the legislator, but also essential to their political security and to their local prosperity.

The opportunity of addressing myself to men who may be inclined to think with freedom, and to act with independency, is to me truly desirable; and the receiving of the countenance and support of those characters, must ever leave on my mind impressions more than gratifying.

It would ill accord with my sentiments to express myself in the usual terms of the zeal and fidelity of an Election Candidate; inasmuch as that the principle of previous assurances has frequently, in the exercise of the functions of the Representative, been either forgotten or occasionally abandoned: but I hope it will not be considered vaunting in me to assert, that, that zeal and the fidelity which have manifested themselves in the discharge of my duty to my Clients, will not be abated in supporting a more important trust.—THE CAUSE OF THE PUBLIC. I have the honor to be,

Gentlemen,
Your devoted humble Servant,

AN ACT

For the exemplary Punishment of all and every person and persons who shall seduce, or attempt to seduce, or aid or assist, or attempt to aid or assist any Soldier to desert his Majesty's service, or who shall harbour, conceal, receive or assist any Deserter from such Service.

[Passed March 9th, 1804]

WHEREAS pernicious practices have for some time past prevailed in this Province, by evil disposed person disaffected to his Majesty's Government, and particularly to the Military service thereof, in seducing and deluding his Subjects who had engaged themselves as Soldiers in such service, and prevailing on them to desert, and also in harbouring, assisting and concealing such Deserters; for remedy whereof for the future, and for the exemplary punishment of such persons in such cases offending, Be it ENACTED by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act "passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, "intituled, "An Act for making more effectual provision for the government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That from and after the passing of this Act, if any person or persons whomsoever (other than such as are, or shall be enrolled as Soldiers) shall, by words or with money, or by any other ways or means whatsoever, directly or indirectly, prevail upon, procure, persuade, encourage, or endeavour or attempt to prevail upon, procure, persuade or encourage any such Soldier or Soldiers to desert or leave his Majesty's service, and shall be thereof lawfully convicted in the Court or Judge before whom such offender or shall be so convicted, shall immediately on such conviction, award and adjudge such person and persons so convicted as aforesaid, to be committed to the common Gaol of the District where such offender shall be so tried, there to remain without Bail or Mainprize for the space of six Calendar months; and if from the circumstances and heinousness of the crime, it shall be thought proper and expedient to increase the punishment, such Court or Judge shall also further award and adjudge, that such offender is so convicted as aforesaid, shall forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding forty pounds, and if such offender shall not on or before the third day previous to the expiration of such imprisonment as aforesaid pay such fine, then and in such case, the said offender shall be publicly whipped.

II. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That if any person from and after the passing of this Act, shall harbour, conceal, receive or assist any Deserter from his Majesty's service, knowing him to be such, such person so offending, shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds, and if such sum of twenty pounds shall not immediately on such conviction being pronounced, be paid into Court, the Court or Judge before whom such conviction shall be had, shall forthwith award, order and adjudge such offender to be committed to the common Gaol of the District in which such offender shall be so convicted, there to remain, without Bail or Mainprize for the space of three Calendar months, or until such time, not exceeding three Calendar months, as the said sum of twenty pounds shall be paid.

III. Provided nevertheless, That no conviction shall be pronounced under the authority of this Act, in any Court or Jurisdiction whatsoever in this Province, save and except by indictment preferred or presented before a Court, of Judge or Judges sitting in the districts of a Commission of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery, nor shall any conviction be carried on by virtue of this Act, if the same shall not be completed, within six Calendar months next after the offence shall be charged to have been committed, unless the offender shall within the said six months have departed and left the Province, in which case it shall and may be lawful to and for the Justices of such Court at any time within the calendar months next after such offender's return into the Province, and to carry on the same to conviction: But it is hereby declared, that the trying any such offender for offending or any person charged with any offence against this Act, by any one of the Majesty's Justices of the Peace for this Province, shall be held and deemed to be a complete discharge of the party so tried from any other or further prosecution for the same offence.

IV. And be it Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That in order the more effectually to prevent the escape of any such offender or offenders as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful at any time, from and after the passing of this Act, to and for any one or more of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace, on due proof upon oath being made before him or them, that any person has committed any one of the offences herein before described, to issue his or their warrant or warrants for the apprehension of such offender or offenders, or person or persons charged with such offence, and to cause such offender or offenders, or such person or persons so charged as aforesaid, to be brought before him or them, and upon the examination of such offender or offenders, and hearing the evidence, such Justice or Justices of the Peace shall discharge or commit to Prison, or shall Bail such offender or offenders, in like manner as by law any other person or persons charged criminally in or are dealt with; save and except, that if such Justice or Justices shall be satisfied with the evidence against such offender or offenders, such Justice or Justices shall commit such offender or offenders to the common Gaol of the District, or in case there shall be no Gaol in that District, to the common Gaol of any adjoining District, and such offender and offenders shall remain so committed until his, her or their trial shall be brought on, unless such offender or offenders shall, with two good and sufficient sureties, to the satisfaction of the said Justice or Justices, become bound by recognizance to our Sovereign Lord the King, in manner hereinafter specified, (that is to say) if the said offender shall be charged with having committed any offence against the provisions in the first Section of this Act contained, then such offender or person so charged, shall become bound in the sum of two hundred pounds, and each of such sureties in the sum of one hundred pounds, and if such offender shall be charged with having committed any offence against the provisions in the second Section of this Act contained, then such offender or person so charged, shall become bound in the sum of forty pounds, and each of such sureties in the sum of one hundred pounds, conditioned in each of such recognizances, for the appearance of such person so charged with any offence against this Act, at the then next Assizes, or Session of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery, to be holden for the District where such offence shall be charged to be committed, or at such other or future Assizes or Session of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery, to which the trial of such offender shall for just cause be adjourned.

V. And be it further Enacted, and be it further Enacted, That if it shall happen that any conviction under this Act, shall take place in any District where there shall be no common Gaol at the time of such conviction, it shall and may be lawful to and for the Court or Judge before whom such conviction shall be had, to award, order and adjudge, that any such offender or offenders so to be convicted, shall be committed to the common gaol of any adjoining District, in which there shall at that time be a Gaol, and also to order and adjudge, that any further punishment to be inflicted under the authority of this Act, shall be inflicted either in the District where such conviction shall take place, or in the District to the Gaol of which such offender shall be committed, as to such Judge or Court shall seem meet: And in case of any commitment by any Justice or Justices of the Peace before trial, or of any commitment by any such Court, or Judge or Judges as aforesaid after conviction, under the authority by this Act given, the Treasurer and Gaoler of the District to the Gaol of which such offender, or person charged with or convicted of any offence against this Act shall be committed, are, and each of them is hereby respectively required, to allow to each person during his or her commitment or confinement there, such and the like maintenance and subsistence as is by law allowed to persons in custody under any criminal charge; and the Treasurer of the District from which such offender or person so charged or convicted shall be so sent, shall, and he is hereby required, to reimburse and pay to the Treasurer of the district, in which such person shall have been confined, out of the first monies which shall come to his hands, such sum and sums of money as shall have been so lawfully expended, according to the provisions in that respect herein before contained, for the maintenance and subsistence of any such person or persons so aforesaid.

VI. And be it further Enacted, That in case any such person or persons as aforesaid shall, by virtue of this Act, be committed before trial to any Gaol other than the Gaol of the District in which the offence shall be charged to have been committed, the Sheriff of the District in which such offence shall be charged to have been committed, shall, and he is hereby required and commanded, immediately before the Assize, or Session at which any trial for any offence against this Act shall be had, to convey such person so charged from the Gaol in which he or she shall be so confined, to the District where such offence was charged to be committed, and there to keep him or her in close custody and confinement, and have such person ready to undergo his or her trial at the Assizes or Session of Oyer and Terminer then next ensuing: And all and every Sheriff and Sheriffs, Constable and Peace Officers of this Province, is and are hereby required and commanded to execute and obey all and every warrant and warrants, orders and orders, sentence and sentences, which shall be pronounced or issued by any such Court or Judge, Justice or Justices, as are herein before mentioned, for the purpose of carrying the provisions of this Act into execution.

VII. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That all the fines, forfeitures and penalties that shall be incurred under and by virtue of this Act shall be accounted for to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, to and for the public uses of this Province, through the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury for the time being, in such manner and form as it shall please his Majesty to direct.

[From London Papers, received by the British Packet Duke of Cumberland, arrived at New-York.]

LONDON, March 10.

The Royal assent was, last night, given by commission, to several bills in the House of Lords.

On this occasion Lord Fitzwilliam expressed some doubts as to the regularity of the proceeding, the necessary information with respect to his Majesty's health not having yet been obtained. The Lord Chancellor, with much apparent agitation, said, he was perfectly aware of the caution and circumspection so grave and important a subject required, and under that impression he assured the Noble Earl, that in venturing to procure the assent of his Majesty to the commission, he had proceeded with fear and trembling.—Not confiding entirely in the reports of the physicians, he had solicited and obtained a personal interview with the Monarch, which had been repeated; and in the course of which he held much conversation with his Majesty relative to the nature of the bills included in the commission; the result of which was, that the whole of them obtained the Royal assent. Of the responsibility attached to his official situation, his Lordship professed himself fully aware, and, feeling the entire force of that responsibility, he had acted upon it on the present occasion.—After this unequivocal assurance of the competency of his Majesty to the exercise of his Kingly functions, no reasonable doubt can be entertained of the favorable progress made by his Majesty.

Saturday afternoon, March 10.—"We continue to entertain a favorable opinion of his Majesty's recovery." [Signed by the four physicians.]

On the 8th of March the Russian Ambassador is said to have waited on Lord Hawkesbury, to know the cause of the embargo; which was explained to his satisfaction.

DOVER, March 9.

The loudest firing heard here this war has prevailed all to day on the French coast. Some of the houses shake with it, and it is not doubted to be chiefly bomb firing. It continues as I write this, but no intelligence relative to it, has arrived. Probably a large squadron of vessels of all descriptions, which went out of the Downs yesterday evening, are engaged with the enemy, and, as the wind is off the French coast and very light, there cannot be a more favourable opportunity for vessels to stand in with the tide. Whether they are trying to sink any vessels or not, this is not a trifling engagement.

FROM A LATE ENGLISH PAPER.

ST. JAMES'S PARK GHOST.

On Sunday, at one o'clock, the Adjutant of the Coldstream regiment, went to the orderly room, at the horse guard, and sent for George Jones, of the 16th company, for the purpose of interrogating him respecting the ghost, as it was said that he was one of the men who had seen it, and had been considerably affected by the sight. The man accordingly attended, and declared his readiness to make oath of the truth of what he had already stated.

The following is a copy of a declaration which he afterwards made and signed before an officer:—

"I do solemnly declare, that whilst on guard at the recruit-house, on or about the 2d instant about half past one o'clock in the morning, I perceived the figure of a woman, without a head, rise from the earth, at the distance of about three feet before me. I was so alarmed at the circumstance, that I had not power to speak to it, which was my with to have done; but I distinctly observed that the figure was dressed in a red striped gown, with red spots between each stripe, and that part of the dress, and figure appeared to me enveloped in a cloud.

"In about the space of two seconds, whilst my eyes were fixed on the object, it vanished from my sight. I was perfectly sober and collected at the time, and being in great trepidation, called to the next sentinel, who met me about half way, and to whom I communicated the strange sight I had seen.

GEORGE JONES,
Of Lieut. Col. Taylor's Company of Coldstream Guards."

"Westminster, Jan. 15, 1804."

In addition to the declaration of Jones, there is another as follows:

"I do hereby declare, that whilst on guard behind the Armoury-House, (to the best of my recollection about three weeks ago) I heard, at twelve o'clock at night, a tremendous noise, which proceeded from the window of an uninhabited house, near to the spot where I was upon duty. At the same time, I heard a voice cry out—'Bring me a light! bring me a light!' The last sentence was uttered in so feeble and so changeable a tone of voice, that I concluded some person was ill, and consequently offered them my assistance to procure a light. I could, however, obtain no answer to my proposal, although I repeated it several times, and as often heard the voice utter the same terms. I endeavoured to see the person who called out, but in vain. On a sudden the violent noise was renewed, which appeared to me to resemble lashes of windows lifted hastily up and down, but then they were moved in such quick succession, and at different parts of the house nearly at the same time, that it seemed impossible to me that one person could accomplish the whole business. I heard several of the regiment say they have heard similar noises and proceedings, but I have never heard the cause accounted for.

(Signed) RICHARD DONKIN,
"15th Company of Coldstream Guards.
"Whitehall, Jan. 15, 1804."

On Monday the above George Jones was brought before Sir Richard Ford, to be interrogated respecting the sight he was supposed to have seen. Previous to his examination, Mr Stafford the Chief Clerk, endeavoured to find out whether imagination had received any impressions from reading any dismal story, or if he had, at the time the phantom appeared to him, suffered the story of the Hammersmith Ghost to dwell on his mind, in order if possible, to ascertain if he had been misled by his fancies. To these questions he answered in the negative.—On being asked respecting the strange object he had seen, he solemnly declared, that he was ready at any time to make oath to what he had stated, and that he firmly believed he had seen a ghost. He detailed every thing in court as near as possible to what is inserted under his own signature.

AN ACT

For the exemplary Punishment of all and every person and persons who shall seduce, or attempt to seduce, or aid or assist, or attempt to aid or assist any Soldier to desert his Majesty's service, or who shall harbour, conceal, receive or assist any Deserter from such service.

[Passed March 9th, 1804.]

WHEREAS pernicious practices have for some time past prevailed in this Province, by evil disposed persons disaffected to his Majesty's Government, and particularly to the Military service thereof, in seducing and deluding his Subjects who had engaged themselves as Soldiers in the said service, and prevailing on them to desert, and also in harbouring, assisting and concealing such Deserters; for remedy whereof for the future, and for the exemplary punishment of such persons in such cases offending, Be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act "passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, "intituled, "An Act for making more effectual pro- "vision for the government of the Province of Que- "bec, in North America, and to make further pro- "vision for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That from and after the passing of this Act, if any person or persons whomsoever (other than such as are, or shall be enlisted as Soldiers) shall, by words or with money, or by any other ways or means whatsoever, directly or indirectly, prevail upon, procure, persuade, or encourage, or endeavour or attempt to prevail upon, procure, persuade or encourage any such Soldier or Soldiers to desert or leave his Majesty's service, and shall be thereof lawfully convicted, the Court or Judge before whom such offender shall be so convicted, shall immediately on such conviction, award and adjudge such person and persons so convicted as aforesaid, to be committed to the common Gaol of the District where such offender shall be so tried, there to remain without Bail or Mainprize for the space of six Calendar months; and if from the circumstances and heinousness of the crime, it shall be thought proper and expedient to increase the punishment, such Court or Judge shall also further award and adjudge, that such offender so convicted as aforesaid, shall forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding forty pounds, and if such offender shall not on or before the third day previous to the expiration of such imprisonment as aforesaid pay such sum, then and in such case, the said offender shall be publicly whipped

II. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That if any person from and after the passing of this Act, shall harbour, conceal, receive or assist any Deserter from his Majesty's service, knowing him to be such, such person so offending, shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds, and if such sum of twenty pounds shall not immediately on such conviction being pronounced, be paid into Court, the Court or Judge before whom such conviction shall be had, shall forthwith award, order and adjudge such offender to be committed to the common Gaol of the District in which such offender shall be so convicted, there to remain, without Bail or Mainprize for the space of three Calendar months, or until such time, not exceeding three Calendar months, as the said sum of twenty pounds shall be paid.

III. Provided nevertheless, That no conviction shall be pronounced under the authority of this Act, in any Court or Jurisdiction within this Province, save and except by indictment preferred or presented before a Court, or Judge or Judges sitting in the execution of a Commission of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery, nor shall any prosecution be carried on by virtue of this Act, if the same shall not be commenced, within six Calendar months next after the offence shall be charged to have been committed, unless the offender shall within the said six months have departed and left the Province, in which case it shall and may be lawful to commence such prosecution at any time within six calendar months next after such offender's return into the Province, and to carry on the same to conviction: But it is hereby declared, that the issuing any warrant for the apprehending of any person charged with any offence against this Act, by any one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace for this Province, shall be held and deemed to be a commencement of a prosecution within the true meaning of the provisions herein in that respect contained.

IV. And be it Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That in order the more effectually to prevent the escape of any such offender or offenders as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful at any time, from and after the passing of this Act, to and for any one or more of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace, on due proof upon oath being made before him or them, that any person has committed any one of the offences herein before described, to issue his or their warrant or warrants for the apprehension of such offender or offenders, or person or persons charged with such offence, and to cause such offender or offenders, or such person or persons so charged as aforesaid, to be brought before him or them, and upon the examination of such offender or offenders, and hearing the evidence, such Justice or Justices of the Peace shall discharge or commit to Prison, or shall Bail such offender or offenders, in like manner as by law any other person or persons charged criminally is or are dealt with; save and except, that if such Justice or Justices shall be satisfied with the evidence against such offender or offenders, such Justice or Justices shall commit such offender or offenders to the common Gaol of the District, or in case there shall be no Gaol in that District, to the common Gaol of any adjoining District, and such offender and offenders shall remain so committed until his, her or their trial shall be brought on, unless such offender or offenders shall, with two good and sufficient sureties, to the satisfaction of the said Justice or Justices, become bound by recognizance to our Sovereign Lord the King, in manner hereinafter specified, (that is to say) if the said offender shall be charged with having committed any offence against the provisions in the first Section of this Act contained, then such offender or person so charged, shall become bound in the sum of forty pounds, and each of such sureties in the sum of twenty pounds, conditioned in each of such recognizances, for the appearance of such person so charged with any offence against this Act, at the then next Assizes, or Session of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery, to be holden for the District where such offence shall be charged to be committed, or at such other or future Assizes or Session of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery, to which the trial of such offender shall for just cause be adjourned.

V. Provided likewise, and be it further Enacted, That if it shall happen that any conviction under this Act, shall take place in any District where there shall be no common Gaol at the time of such conviction, it shall and may be lawful to and for the Court or Judge before whom such conviction shall be had, to award, order and adjudge, that any such offender or offenders so to be convicted, shall be committed to the common gaol of any adjoining District, in which there shall at that time be a Gaol, and also to order and adjudge, that any further punishment to be inflicted under the authority of this Act, shall be inflicted either in the District where such conviction shall take place, or in the District to the Gaol of which such offender shall be committed, as to such Judge or Court shall seem meet: And in case of any commitment by any Justice or Justices of the Peace before trial, or of any commitment by any such Court, or Judge or Judges as aforesaid after conviction, under the authority by this Act given, the Treasurer and Gaoler of the District to the Gaol of which such offender, or person charged with or convicted of any offence against this Act shall be committed, are, and each of them is hereby respectively required, to allow to each person during his or her commitment or confinement there, such and the like maintenance and subsistence as is by law allowed to persons in custody under any criminal charge; and the Treasurer of the District from which such offender or person so charged or convicted shall be so sent, shall, and he is hereby required, to reimburse and pay to the Treasurer of the district, in which such person shall have been confined, out of the first monies which shall come to his hands, such sum and sums of money as shall have been so lawfully expended, according to the provisions in that respect herein before contained, for the maintenance and subsistence of any such person or persons as aforesaid.

VI. And be it further Enacted, That in case any such person or persons as aforesaid shall, by virtue of this Act, be committed before trial to any Gaol other than the Gaol of the District in which the offence shall be charged to have been committed, the Sheriff of the District in which such offence shall be charged to have been committed, shall, and he is hereby required and commanded, immediately before the Assize, or Session at which any trial for any offence against this Act shall be had, to convey such person so charged from the Gaol in which he or she shall be so confined, to the District where such offence was charged to be committed, and there to keep him or her in close custody and confinement, and have such person ready to take his or her trial at the Assizes or Session of Oyer and Terminer then next enduing: And all and every Sheriff and Sheriffs, Constable and Peace Officers of this Province, is and are hereby required and commanded to execute and obey all and every warrant and warrants, order and orders, sentence and sentences, which shall be pronounced or issued by any such Court or Judge, Justice or Justices, as are herein before mentioned, for the purpose of carrying the provisions of this Act into execution.

VII. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That all the fines, forfeitures and penalties that shall be incurred under and by virtue of this Act shall be accounted for to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, to and for the public uses of this Province, through the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury for the time being, in such manner and form as it shall please his Majesty to direct.

Description of a wonderful Cavern in Hungary.

Szelitz is a small village in the Gespannschaft of Abanjvar in Hungary, but remarkable for a wonderful cavern in a mountain in its neighbourhood. The country too is hilly, and abounds too much in woods to produce a great deal of grain. The air is sharp and cold. The aperture of this cavern, which fronts the South, is eighteen fathoms high and eight broad, and consequently wide enough to receive the South wind which generally blows here with great violence.—Its subterraneous passages consist entirely of solid rock, stretching away farther South than has yet been discovered. As far as it is practicable to go, the height is found to be fifty fathoms and the breadth twenty-six. But the most unaccountable singularity in this cavern is, that in the heart of winter the air is warm on the inside; and when the heat of the sun without is scarce supportable, freezing cold within. When the snows melt in spring, the inside of the cave, where its surface is exposed to the South sun, emits a pellucid water, which congeals, immediately as it drops, by the extreme cold. The icicles are of the bigness of a large calk, and spreading into ramifications, form very odd figures. The very water dropping from the icicles on the ground, which is sandy, freezes in an instant. It is observable also, that the greater the heat is without, the more intense is the cold within; and in the dog days all parts are covered with ice. The inhabitants make use of it for cooling the warm springs. They thaw it also and drink the water. In autumn when the nights are cold, and the diurnal heats abate, the ice in the cave begins to dissolve, insomuch that by winter no more ice is to be seen: the cavern then becomes perfectly dry, and has a mild warmth. At this time it is surprising to see the swarms of flies and gnats, as also of bats and owls, and even of hares and foxes, that make this place their winter retreat; till in the beginning of spring again it grows too cold for them. Above the cavern the hill rises to a prodigious height, and on the Southern aspect produces plenty of rich gals.

ON DECORUM OF CHARACTER.

BY THE LATE DR. ENFIELD.

Nothing gives a more lively idea of the graceful and becoming than to see a man acting steadily in character and always consistent with himself. As there is a certain external appearance and manner suitable to every age, profession, and rank in life, so there is a certain propriety in moral conduct which arises from the natural abilities, the temper, the situation, employment, and other circumstances of individuals: and as a careful attention to the one is thought becoming in society, so the uniform observance of the other is essential to moral decorum. When we see a man, at an early period of life, fixing a plan for himself with deliberate judgment and an independent spirit, and, after due consideration of his own dispositions and situation, entering upon and prosecuting this plan, without suffering himself to be diverted from it by influence of fashion or example; when we see such a man persevering in that same character of sobriety, integrity, and steady virtue, through every vicissitude of life, we respect his principles, we admire his firmness of mind, we contemplate his character with a perception of propriety and perfection similar to that with which we survey a noble edifice, formed upon a noble plan and completed by the hand of an able architect. We always mean to express a high degree of respect when we say of a man, in the way of eulogy, that he is a consistent character.

IMPROVEMENT.

A very ingenious young man of the name of Smart, a journeyman taylor, near Tunbridge Well, in England, has invented an infernal machine, which when placed in any point of contact against an invading force is capable of destroying a thousand men a minute. The expence, we are told, will be small when compared with its utility. He has explained to the Duke of Richmond, Lord Lieutenant of the County, the model of this machine, &c. which has met the general approbation of all the Gentlemen Volunteer officers in that neighbourhood; the inventor is a volunteer himself, though a tailor. Should it meet the approbation of the Duke of Richmond, Smart will undertake to conduct it himself into the centre of the enemies legions: the great merit in the construction of this machine is, that he can remain in perfect safety in the centre, while he deals death and destruction to all around him, and he is capable of re-charging it in ten minutes; and it can be moved with one horse, with the greatest facility, at the rate of eight miles an hour.

LINES ON FRIENDSHIP.

BY A LADY.

Friendship, thou pure celestial source
Of bliss the most refin'd;
Thou art the fufferers fweet refource,
To heal the wou-worn mind.
Thy gentle fmiles can footh each care
The forrowing bofom lowers;
Thy hand benignant wipes each tear,
And fhare our heart-felt woes
Souls form'd to feel thy facred flame,
And its endearments prove,
Shall own thy power and bleft thy name,

AN EPITAPH

To the Memory of a well-known and favourite fpotted Dog, named Pompey—belonging to Mr. Benjamin Travers, of Clapton.

Here Pompey lies, Pompey of fpotleffe fame,
Yet fpots he had, and Spot became his name;
Though full of fpots, Spot lived without a fpot,
Ah! who can count fuch fpots in human lot,
His fpots were beauties of a fpotleffe kind,
Spots without fpot on good Spot traced we find;
Of hated Spot, this truth may be relied,
In this fpot, fpotted Spot lies fpotleffe, as he lie'd and died. T. G.

PRIZE POETRY.

Some years fince, a Mr. Dickfon, who was Provoft of Dundee in Scotland, died, and by will left the fum of one guinea, to a perfon to compofe an epitaph upon him; which fum he directed the three executors to pay. The executors, thinking to defraud the poet, agreed to meet and fhare the guinea among them, each contributing a line,

1ft. Here lies Dickfon, provoft of Dundee
2d. Here lies Dickfon, here lies he,

The third was embarraffed for a long time, but unwilling to lofe his fhare of the guinea, vociferoufly bawled

THE ORACLE.

YORK:—SATURDAY, MAY 28.

On Sunday morning the 20th inſtant an inqueſt was held on the body of Donald Cameron, late Ferryman at the Humber, who was found dead the preceding evening at his dwelling near that River.

It appeared in evidence, that the deceaſed had drank to exceſs with a perſon unknown, who has ſince made his eſcape from the conſtables, after having been taken by virtue of a warrant from the Coroner, to give evidence on the part of the Crown.—The jury were of opinion the deceaſed had been robbed by the above mentioned perſon.—Verdict, "died by exceſſive drinking in company with a perſon unknown."

On Tueſday laſt His Excellency Lieut. General Hunter and ſuite ſailed from this town for Kingſton, on their way to Quebec.

☞ THE CHIEF JUSTICE has adjourned the Sittings of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery and of Aſſize and Niſi Prius for the Home Diſtrict, until Wedneſday the 20th day of June next, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon.

☞ THE further execution of the Commiſſion for aſcertaining Titles to Lands for the Home Diſtrict, is adjourned to the twenty-third inſtant and the thirteenth day of June next. And all perſons whom it may concern, will take notice, that the Act under which the ſaid Commiſſion iſſued, will expire very ſhortly after the ſaid thirteenth day of June.

May 19, 1804.

THE Subſcriber thinks it a duty incumbent on him, thus publicly to notify his Friends who wiſhed him to ſtand as a Candidate at the enſuing Election for York and its adjacent Counties—that he declines ſtanding, having ſpecial buſineſs, which cauſes his abſence at the time of Election. He hopes that his Friends will be pleaſed to accept of his grateful acknowledgements for the honor they wiſhed to confer on him.

But as there are ſeveral Candidates who ſolicit the ſuffrages of the Public, they cannot be at a loſs.

He leaves you, Gentlemen, to the freedom of your own will.

He has only to obſerve, that were he preſent at the day of Election, he would give his Vote to the Honorable David William Smith.

I am, GENTLEMEN,
your obedient
and obliged Servant,
R. HENDERSON.

York, 26th May, 1804.

To the Freeholders of the County of Durham, the Eaſt Riding of the County of York, and the County of Simcoe.

WHEREAS his Majeſty's Royal Proclamation hath been iſſued for the purpoſe of calling together a Legiſlative Council and Houſe of Aſſembly for the Province of Upper Canada, and whereas by a certain Act of this Province, paſſed in the fortieth year of his Majeſty's Reign, intituled, "An Act for the more equal Repreſentation of the Commons of this Province in Parliament, and for the better defining the Qualification of Electors," it is declared and appointed, that the County of Durham, the Eaſt Riding of the County of York, and the County of Simcoe, ſhall be Repreſented in the ſaid Houſe of Aſſembly by one Member. And whereas a certain Inſtrument under the Sign Manual, and ſealed with the Seal of his Excellency PETER HUNTER Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor, &c. &c. &c. I have been nominated and appointed Returning Officer of the County of Durham, the Eaſt Riding of the County of York and the County of Simcoe. And whereas by a certain Writ under the Great Seal of Upper Canada by me received, I am thereby directed to cauſe one Knight, girt with a Sword, the moſt fit and diſcreet, to be freely and indifferently choſen to Repreſent the ſaid County, Riding and County in Aſſembly, by thoſe who ſhall be preſent at the day of Election.

Now know ye, that by virtue of the ſaid nomination and appointment, and in obedience to his Majeſty's ſaid Writ, I ſhall attend on Monday, the eleventh day of June next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the Government Buildings, at the Town of York, and proceed to the Election of one Knight to Repreſent the ſaid County, Riding and County in the ſaid Houſe of Aſſembly; and hereof all Freeholders of the ſaid County, Riding and County, are to take notice, and attend accordingly.

WILLIAM ALLAN,
Returning Officer for the County of Durham, the Eaſt Riding of the County of York, and the County of Simcoe.

York, May 15, 1804.

To the Free and Independent Electors of the County of Durham, the Eaſt Riding of the County of York and the County of Simcoe.

GENTLEMEN,

THE Friends of the Honorable DAVID WILLIAM SMITH, beg leave to offer that Gentleman to repreſent you in the enſuing Parliament: his Honor, Integrity and Ability, and the eſſential ſervices which, in different capacities he hath rendered to this Province, are ſo well known and felt, that his friends conſider the mentioning of his name only, to be the moſt powerful ſolicitation which they can uſe on the preſent occaſion, to obtain for him your Favor and Suffrage.

☞ THE FRIENDS of Mr. SMITH have had the pleaſure of receiving a LETTER from him within theſe ten days, wherein he repeats his reſolution of leaving England, ſo as to arrive in this Province early in the Summer of this preſent Year.

AN ACT

For the exemplary Punishment of all and every person and persons who shall seduce, or attempt to seduce, or aid or assist, or attempt to aid or assist any Soldier to desert his Majesty's service, or who shall harbour, conceal, receive or assist any Deserter from such service.

[Passed March 9th, 1804.]

WHEREAS pernicious practices have for some time past prevailed in this Province, by evil disposed persons disaffected to his Majesty's Government, and particularly to the Military service thereof, in seducing and deluding his Subjects who had engaged themselves as Soldiers in the fum of forty pounds, and upon them to desert, and also in harbouring, abetting and concealing such Deserters; for remedy whereof for the future, and for the exemplary punishment of such persons as such cases offending, Be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, conftituted and affembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act paffed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act "paffed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, "intituled, "An Act for making more effectual provifion for the government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provifion for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That from and after the passing of this Act, if any perfon or perfons whomsoever (other than such as are, or shall be enlisted as Soldiers) shall, by words or with money, or by any other ways or means whatsoever, directly or indirectly, prevail upon, procure, perfuade, encourage, or endeavour or attempt to prevail upon, procure, perfuade or encourage any such Soldier or Soldiers, to desert or leave his Majesty's service, and shall be thereof lawfully convicted, the Court or Judge before whom such offender shall be so convicted, shall immediately on such conviction, award and adjudge such perfon or persons fo convicted as aforesaid, to be committed to the common Gaol of the District in which such offender shall be so tried, there to remain without Bail or Mainprize for the space of six Calendar months; and if from the circumftances and heinousness of the crime, it shall be thought proper and expedient to encrease the punishment, such Court or Judge shall also further award and adjudge, that such offender so convicted as aforesaid, shall forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding forty pounds, and if such offender shall not on or before the third day previous to the expiration of such imprisonment as aforesaid pay the same, then and in such case, the said offender shall be publicly whipped

II. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That if any perfon from and after the passing of this Act, shall harbour, conceal, receive or affist any Deserter from his Majesty's service, knowing him to be such, such perfon so offending, shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds, and if such sum of twenty pounds shall not immediately on such conviction being pronounced, be paid into Court, the Court or Judge before whom such conviction shall be had, shall forthwith award, order and adjudge such offender to be committed to the common Gaol of the District in which such offender shall be so convicted, there to remain, without Bail or Mainprize for the space of three Calendar months, or until such time, not exceeding three Calendar months, as the said sum of twenty pounds shall be paid.

III. Provided nevertheless, That no conviction shall be pronounced under the authority of the Act, in any Court or Jurisdiction whatsoever in this Province, save and except by indictment preferred or prefented before a Court, or Judge or Judges sitting in the execution of a Commission of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery, nor shall any profecution be carried on by virtue of this Act, if the same shall not be commenced, within six Calendar months next after the offence shall be charged to have been committed, unless the offender shall, within the said six months have departed and left the Province, in which case it shall and may be lawful to commence such profecution at any time within six calendar months next after such offender's return into the Province, and to carry on the same to conviction: But it is hereby declared, that the issuing any warrant for the apprehending of any perfon charged with any offence against this Act, by any one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace for this Province, shall be held and deemed to be a commencement of a profecution, within the true meaning of the provisions herein for that respect contained.

IV. And be it Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That in order the more effectually to prevent the escape of any such offender or offenders as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful at any time, from and after the passing of this Act, to and for any one or more of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace, on due proof upon oath being made before him or them, that any perfon has committed any one of the offences herein before described, to issue his or their warrant or warrants for the apprehension of such offender or offenders, or perfon or perfons charged with such offence, and to cause such offender or offenders, or such perfon or perfons fo charged as aforesaid, to be brought before him or them, and upon the examination of such offender or offenders, and hearing the evidence, such Justice or Justices of the Peace shall discharge or commit to Prifon, or shall bail such offender or offenders, in like manner as by law any other perfon or perfons charged criminally is or are dealt with; fave and except, that if such Justice or Justices shall be satisfied with the evidence against such offender or offenders, such Justice or Justices shall commit such offender or offenders to the common Gaol of the District, or in case there shall be no Gaol in that District, to the common Gaol of any adjoining District, and such offender and offenders shall remain fo committed until his, her or their trial shall be brought on, unless such offender or offenders shall, with two good and sufficient furetes, to the satisfaction of the said Justice or Justices, become bound by recognizance to our Sovereign Lord the King, in manner hereinafter fpecified, (that is to fay) if the said offender shall be charged with having committed any offence against the provisions in the first Section of this Act contained, then such offender or perfon fo charged, shall become bound in the fum of two hundred pounds, and each of such furetises in the fum of one hundred pounds, and if such offender shall be charged with having committed any offence against the provisions in the second Section of this Act contained, then such offender or perfon fo charged, shall become bound in the fum of forty pounds, and each of such furetises in the fum of twenty pounds, conditioned in each of such recognizances, for the appearance of such perfon fo charged with any offence against this Act, at the then next Affizes, or Seffion of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery, to be holden for the District where such offence shall be charged to be committed, or at such other or future Affizes or Seffion of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery, at which the trial of such offender shall for juft cause be adjourned.

V. Provided likewise and be it further Enacted, That if it shall happen that any conviction under this Act, shall take place in any District where there shall be no common Gaol at the time of such conviction, it shall and may be lawful to and for the Court or Judge before whom such conviction shall be had, to award, order and adjudge, that any such offender or offenders fo to be convicted, shall be committed to the common Gaol of any adjoining District, in which there shall at that time be a Gaol, and also to order and adjudge, that any further punishment to be inflicted under the authority of this Act, shall be inflicted either in the District where such conviction shall take place, or in the District to the Gaol of which such offender shall be committed, as to such Judge or Court shall seem meet; And in case of any commitment by any Justice or Justices of the Peace before trial, or of any commitment by any such Court, or Judge or Judges as aforesaid after conviction, under the authority by this Act given, the Treasurer and Gaoler of the District to the Gaol of which such offender, or perfon charged with or convicted of any offence against this Act shall be committed, are, and each of them is hereby respectively required, to receive such perfon during his or her commitment or confinement there, such and the like maintenance and fubfiftence as is by law allowed to perfons in custody under any criminal charge; and the Treasurer of the District from which such offender or perfon fo charged or convicted shall be so sent, shall, and he is hereby required, to reimburse and pay to the Treasurer of the district, in which such perfon shall have been confined, out of the firft monies which shall come to his hands, fuch sum and sums of money as shall have been so lawfully expended, according to the provisions in that respect herein before contained, for the maintenance and fubfiftence of any such perfon or perfons as aforesaid.

VI. And be it further Enacted, That in case any such perfon or perfons as aforesaid shall, by virtue of this Act, be committed before trial to any Gaol other than the Gaol of the District in which the offence shall be charged to have been committed, the Sheriff of the District in which such offence shall be charged to have been committed, shall, and he is hereby required and commanded, immediately before the Affize, or Seffion at which any trial for any offence against this Act shall be had, to convey such perfon fo charged from the Gaol in which he or she shall be so confined, to the District where such offence was charged to be committed, and safe to keep him or her in close custody and confinement, and have such perfon ready to take his or her trial at the Affizes or Seffion of Oyer and Terminer then next enfuing: And all and every Sheriff and Sheriffs, Conftable and Peace Officers of this Province, is and are hereby required and commanded to execute and obey all and every warrant and warrants, order and orders, sentence and sentences, which shall be pronounced or issued by any such Court or Judge, Justice or Justices, as are herein before mentioned, for the purpose of carrying the provisions of this Act into execution.

VII. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That all the fines, forfeitures and penalties that shall be incurred under and by virtue of this Act shall be accounted for to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, to and for the public uses of this Province, through the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury for the time being, in such manner and form as it shall please his Majesty to direct Maduras, Dec. 3.

On Wednesday last, a royal salute and three volleys of musquetry were fired by the garrison of fort St. George, in honor of the glorious and important victory obtained on the 18 of November, near Callowly in Hindostan, by the army under the personal command of his excellency gen. Lake. The account states, that 172, including officers, were killed, and 952 wounded. Major general Ware's head was carried off by a cannon ball. There were also killed in the battle 277 horses, 154 wounded, and 122 missing.

The British have recently obtained some advantages over the Candians, in the Island of Ceylon.

DUELLING.

London, March 9.

On Wednesday morning Lord Camelford and Mr. Best, a Gentleman of Barbadoes, the former accompanied by the Hon. Mr Devereux, the latter by Mr. Nichell, met in a field at the back of Holland House, on the Uxbridge road, to terminate a dispute which had originated at the Opera, and had been renewed at the Prince of Wales's coffee house. The subject was as follows:—Mrs. Symmons, an abandoned character, who had formerly lived with Mr. B. but had of late been under the protection of Lord C. met the former at the Opera, and wished him to accompany her home, which he refuling he declared the would set Lord C. upon him, and accordingly complained to his Lordship, that Mr. B. who had ong been intimate with him, had spoken difrespectfully of him. Lord C. soon afterwards met Mr. B. at the coffee-houfe, and faid—"I find, Sir, you have spoken of me in the moft unwarrantable terms." Mr. B. replied that he was utterly unconscious of having deserved such a charge "—Lord C. replied, "he was not ignorant of what he had reported to Mrs. S——" and pronounced him "to be a fcoundrel, a liar, and a ruffian." Mr. B. faid, "thefe were epithets which admitted but of one courfe," and a meeting was immediately fettled for the next morning. In the courfe of the evening, Mr B. conveyed to Lord C. the ftrongeft affurances, that the information he had received was unfounded; and that believing he had acted under a falfe impreffion, he would be fatisfied if his Lordship would retract the expreffions he had ufed. This Lord C. refufed to do. They met in the morning at a coffee-houfe in Oxford-ftreet, where Mr. B. again endeavoured to prevail on Lord C. to retract his expreffions, and faid "Camelford, we have been friends, and I know the unfufpecting generofity of your nature. Upon my honour, you have been impofed upon by a ftrumpet. Do not perfift in expreffions under which one of us muft fall." Lord C. anfwered—"Beft, this is child's play—the thing muft go on."

They then proceeded to the ground, and on their way Lord C. repeated to his friend, that he was the aggreffor: that Beft was a man of honor—but that he could not bring himfelf to retract words which he had once uttered.—That Mr. B. and he were the two beft fhots in England, out of them muft fall what-ever might be the iffue of the affair, he begged him to bear teftimony that he acquitted Mr. B of all blame. On reaching the ground, Lord C. ftood and waited for his antagonift, who took his ground, fired, and lodged the contents of his piece in his Lordfhip's body. The ball entered below the ribs on the right fide, and penetrated nearly through the body, receiving directions.—His Lordfhip inftantly fell, and bled freely, when he exclaimed, that Beft muft not go—he muft come up to him. His Lordfhip forced him by the hand, and exclaimed—"Our quarrel is decided Beft, and I am a dead man, but I freely forgive you." Mr. B. expreffed his grief that the quarrel fhould not have been terminated in the firft fire. He then left his friend immediately fet off in a poftchaife and four, and proceeded over Weftminfter-bridge into Kent, whence the Police Officers purfued them, but without effect. Lord C. was conveyed to Devil's Holland Houfe —He has loft the ufe of his lower extremities, the kidneys do not perform their functions, and the ball, which is fuppofed to have lodged in the ureter-ar, is not yet extracted. He was alive on Friday night, but a mortification is hourly expected to take place.

PARIS CONSPIRACY.

The reports on this fubject are numerous.—The report of the capture of Pichegrue is entitled to no credit; nor that of Moreau and Carnot had been implicated in the plot.

Rumours of the new coalition ftill exift—But they are mere rumours.

Gen. Pichegrue certainly was in England three weeks ago.

Accounts via Falmouth ftate, that the French fleet which efcaped from Toulon, during Lord Nelfon's abfence in Algiers, had arrived at Carthagena. It is faid to conift of 14 fail of the line. Sir Edward Pellew, who is off Ferrol, with 7 fail of the line, has received the above intelligence.

Alliance between Great-Britain, Ruffia, and Turkey.

Letters from Ruffia of the 4th inftant, ftate, that the Emperor Alexander expreffed his readinefs to accede to a treaty between Great Britain, Turkey, and Ruffia, for the protection of the Ottoman Empire. The Ruffian Monarch has accordingly fent orders to the fleet in the Black Sea to fet fail immediately, with all the tranfports of troops belonging to it, to the Morea.

March 16.

The fuftom duties have been highly productive in the laft quarter. The excefs of the conftituted fund for that quarter will exceed three millions.

Weft India goods continue much in the fame in price, though loaded with additional duties. Notwithftanding the endeavours of Bonaparte, the demand from the continent continues brifk. The difficulties were confiderable that attended the introduction of Britifh goods and colonial produce into Germany, Holland and France, by the way of Tonningen, Hufum, and Lubec; yet fuch is the activity of Britons, and fo fuperior in quality and lower in price are the Britifh manufactures, that every difficulty has been overcome.

Our trade with Ruffia is ftill great and increafing, and we enjoy the Ruffian carrying trade in preference to all other nations.

The exportation of Britifh manufactures to the Eaft and Weft Indies is very great, and to America they are altonifhingly increafed and increafing. So that our manufactures do not fuffer fo much as might have been expected by the war.

Sheep wool got lower in price laft clip.—Farmers however, were unwilling to fell at reduced prices, and our increafing trade to Ruffia and America, together with new clothing the additional foldiers, failors, militia and volunteers, has created fuch a demand that the manufacturers have been obliged to give the farmers laft year's prices; fo that wool is now as high as ever—Indigoes and dye ftuffs are alfo high.

In confequence of the abundant harveft, proftoons are failing, ofpe tally in the fouth—hops and barley are at very low prices.

Phenomenon.

Several accounts have reached us refpecting the luminous meteor which was feen from all parts of the Metropolis on Sunday night. A correfpondent who faw it from Clapham Common, defcribes it as a large ball of fire emitted from a heavy and thick cloud, in about a fecond it extended in length perpendicularly, exhibiting three diftinct balls, united by a ftream of fire. The effect of that light was fo luminous, that from "darkneſs viſible," inftantaneoufly it appeared as light as day, when the fun is at meridian. To thofe eaft of Temple Bar it appeared to paſs in a S. W. direction and unattended with any noife, though the glow of heat it diffufed was conſiderable, and was felt by all thofe who were in the ſtreets at the time. To thofe weſt of the Metropolis it ſeemed to aſſume an oval form, and to move in a different direction, with a tail like a comet. As far as we collected it was ſeen from a conſiderable diſtance around the metropolis, and many women in Lincoln's-fields, St James's and other ſquares where its effect was the moſt awful fell into ſtrong hyſterics, while many nervous perſons proſtrated themſelves on the pavement, apprehending that "the great globe itſelf" was on the eve of being conſumed. At Richmond a rumbling noiſe was heard in the heavens, during its progreſs, and all who ſaw it deſcribed it as a ſign awful, ſublime, and beautiful in the extreme.

NEW YORK, April 21.

Laft night, by the Fanny, from Greenock, we received London papers to the 15th March. Nothing of moment had tranſpired. The King continued to recover his health. The invaſion had not been attempted. Pichegrue, it was ſtill ſaid, had been arreſted. Moreau was confined in the Temple. A Britiſh expedition had failed for Bologne, and very heavy bring was heard after their arrival. Earl Moſera was to command an expedition againſt Holland. The embargo was taken off. There was no confirmation of the capture of Elſineur by the French.

The following very extraordinary accident happened to the preſent Doctor THORNTON, of London, when he was a lad:—

"During the vacation, being at home with his mother, who for ſeveral months had been confined to her bed, and was attended by Sir Richard Jebb, having a cyster, he was ordered a white emulsion draught; and that being by the servants confused with a phial of corn-distance, employed to receive his mother in her swooning, he in mistake took up this identical bottle, and drank it off immediately, to the amount of two ounces. Startled the fiery ingredient within him, he screamed aloud, "he was burning alive!" burst out of the room, and rushing into the kitchen for water, which he found boiling on the fire, he then seized upon the butter on the shelf, first knocking down the servants who attempted to hold him from leaping up, thinking he was mad, and almost instantly devoured a ball of it. His dying mother, roused by the mournful cry, "I am poisoned!" got out of bed, and coming down stairs, found her son raving and weltering in the blood which he vomited up in torrents; and not conscious of her own ills, tried to soothe those of her son: but sight of every complaint: and though for years before she had laboured in the most dreadful manner under asthma, and a nervous affection, she no longer felt either: and from that time, for upwards of two years, she remained in perfect health. She was bled, at first, night and morning, took nothing by way of food, for three weeks, but linseed oil, being supported wholly by clysters: and by dint of a fine constitution, and a natural cheerfulness of mind, he miraculously escaped, but reduced to a mere shadow.

Bridge Burrows, of the Sussex militia, decided a wager at Brighton, on Wednesday last, which he had made, of a guinea a shot, that he would not miss striking a small apple, which he was to cast from his hand, with his fowling-piece ere it reached the earth; he discharged 24 rounds, the number agreed on, at the little object in the manner specified, of which three only failed in the effect; so that the Ensign's labour to demolish the apple was a clear gain of 13 guineas reward for the excellent skill he had displayed: much money was consequently won and lost on the occasion.

THE Subscriber thinks it a duty incumbent on him, thus publicly to notify his Friends who wished him to stand as a Candidate at the ensuing Election for York and its adjacent Counties—that he declines standing, having special business, which causes his absence at the time of Election. He hopes that his Friends will be pleased to accept of his grateful acknowledgements for the honor they wished to confer on him.

But as there are several Candidates who solicit the suffrages of the Public, they cannot be at a loss.

He leaves you, Gentlemen, to the freedom of your own will.

He has only to observe, that were he present at the day of Election, he would give his Vote to the Honorable David William Smith.

I am, GENTLEMEN,
your obedient
and obliged Servant,
R. HENDERSON.

York, 26th May, 1804.

To the Freeholders of the County of Durham, the East Riding of the County of York, and the County of Simcoe.

WHEREAS his Majesty's Royal Proclamation hath been issued for the purpose of calling together a Legislative Council and House of Assembly for the Province of Upper Canada, and whereas by a certain Act of this Province, passed in the fortieth year of his Majesty's Reign, intituled, "An Act for the more equal Representation of the Commons of this Province in Parliament, and for the better defining the Qualification of Electors," it is declared and appointed, that the County of Durham, the East Riding of the County of York, and the County of Simcoe, shall be Represented in the said House of Assembly by one Member. And whereas a certain Instrument under the Sign Manual, and sealed with the Seal of his Excellency PETER HUNTER Esquire, Lieutenant Governor, &c. &c. &c. I have been nominated and appointed Returning Officer of the County of Durham, the East Riding of the County of York and the County of Simcoe. And whereas by a certain Writ under the Great Seal of Upper Canada by me received, I am thereby directed to cause one Knight, girt with a Sword, the most fit and discreet, to be freely and indifferently chosen to Represent the said County, Riding and County in Assembly, by those who shall be present at the day of Election.

Now know ye, that by virtue of the said nomination and appointment, and in obedience to his Majesty's said Writ, I shall attend on Monday, the eleventh day of June next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the Government Buildings, at the Town of York, and proceed to the Election of one Knight to Represent the said County, Riding and County in the said House of Assembly; and hereof all Freeholders of the said County, Riding and County, are to take notice, and attend accordingly.

WILLIAM ALLAN,
Returning Officer for the County of Durham, the East Riding of the County of York, and the County of Simcoe.

York, May 15, 1804.

To the Free and Independent Electors of the County of Durham, the East Riding of the County of York and the County of Simcoe.

GENTLEMEN,

THE Friends of the Honorable DAVID WILLIAM SMITH, beg leave to offer that Gentleman to represent you in the ensuing Parliament: his Honor, Integrity and Ability, and the essential services which, in different capacities he hath rendered to this Province, are so well known and felt, that his friends consider the mentioning of his name only, to be the most powerful solicitation which they can use on the present occasion, to obtain for him your Favor and Suffrage.

☞ THE FRIENDS of Mr. SMITH have had the pleasure of receiving a LETTER from him within these ten days, wherein he repeats his resolution of leaving England, so as to arrive in this Province early in the Summer of this present Year.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER Esquire,
Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

To all whom it may Concern—GREETING:

WHEREAS by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the forty fourth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act for granting to his Majesty a certain sum of money, out of the funds applicable to the uses of this Province, to defray the expences of amending and repairing the public highways and roads, laying out and opening new roads, and building bridges in the several districts thereof," it was amongst other things enacted, That from and out of the rates and duties then raised, levied and collected, or thereafter to be raised, levied and collected, to and for the uses of this Province, there be granted to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, the sum of one thousand pounds, to be issued out of the fund then remaining, or thereafter to come into the Receiver General's hands, unappropriated and arising from such rates and duties as last aforesaid; which said sum of one thousand pounds shall be disposed of, appropriated and applied in the repairing the roads already laid out, and in the laying out and opening new roads, and making bridges in the several districts aforesaid, in such manner, and under such regulations, as to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, with the advice and consent of the Executive Council thereof, shall from time to time seem meet: AND WHEREAS by the said Act it is further enacted, That at any time from and after the passing of that Act, it shall and may be lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, to issue one or more Proclamation or Proclamations, and thereto to name such and so many persons as to him shall seem meet, for each and every of the aforesaid districts, as Commissioners for carrying the provisions of the said Act into execution:

Now Know Ye That I, PETER HUNTER Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, by virtue of the powers to me vested in me as aforesaid, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council thereof, DO, By this my Proclamation, nominate and appoint

An alliance between Naples and Ruffia is faid to be on the tapis; in conſequence of which the French army in the territory of the former is immediately to evacuate a conſiderable reinforcement.

The Dutch troops in North of Holland are marching towards the Helder, for the purpoſe embarkation in the expedition againſt England, which it is ſaid will be conducted by Bonaparte in perſon.

March 22.

Government, it is ſuppoſed, expect that ſome attempt will be ſpeedily made by the enemy. In the north of England orders have been diſtributed to every houſe keeper ſpecifying the places of rendezvous in the event of an invaſion in that quarter for ſuch inhabitants as may be deſirous of being removed, but who are unable to remove themſelves. Each perſon is to provide himſelf with three days proviſion and utenſils for cooking; beſides which, and beds and blankets no other deſcription of property will be allowed to be put into the carriages appropriated for the removal of the inhabitants.

March 24.

The reſtoration of his Majeſty's health has been officially confirmed by the diſcontinuance of the bulletin.

March 26.

According to report, a Dutch ſquadron of ſix brigs, laden with troops, has put into the Danish harbour of Bergen, and is watched by the Amethyſt frigate, in order to prevent any attack on the north of Scotland. The Danish Government is ſaid to have protected againſt this inſoad on their neutrality.

March 27.

Meſſage from his Majeſty.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer preſented a Meſſage from his Majeſty to the following purport—

"GEORGE R.

"His Majeſty thinks it proper to acquaint the houſe of commons, that the officers, Non-commiſſioned officers, and Privates, of ſeveral regiments of the Militia of Ireland, have made a voluntary tender of their ſervices to any part of Great Britain. His Majeſty has received with ſatisfaction this ſtriking proof of the attachment and zeal diſplayed by his loyal ſubjects, for the general defence and ſecurity of the United Kingdom. Conceiving that this patriotic offer may be attended with the moſt important advantages at the preſent critical juncture of affairs, his Majeſty recommends it to his faithful Commons, to enable him to avail himſelf thereof, and to make proviſion for ſuch regiments as may have occaſion to come into this country, for ſuch a length of time, and to ſuch an extent, as they ſhall think proper and expedient.

The Chancellor of the exchequer moved, that this meſſage be taken into conſideration on Wedneſday next, and ſaid, that on the ſame day his Right Hon. Friend, Mr Secretary Yorke, intended to make a motion for improving the military force of the country.

Our letters from the coaſt confirm what we announced yeſterday, that the enemy's flotilla from Boulogne, had been forced by the violence of the weather to ſeek ſhelter in port. If a new pretty well aſſeſtained that the invaſion muſt be poſtponed in fine weather, the flotilla being unable to ſtand againſt a rough ſea.

The fleet under Lord Nelſon off Toulon, conſiſts of the following ſhips of the line:

Victory	100	Lord	Nelſon.
		Capt.	Murray.
			Sutton.
Canopus	80	——	R. A. Campbell.
Donnegal	80	——	Sir R. Strachan.
Gibraltar	80	——	Ryves.
Kent	74	——	R. A. Bickerton.
Belleiſle	74	——	Hargood.
Excellent	74	——	Sotheren.
Renown	74	——	White.
Superb	74	——	Keats.
Triumph	74	——	Sir R. Barlow, Bt.
Agincourt	64	——	Schomberg.
Monmouth	64	——	Hart
Hindoſtan	50	——	Le Gros.
Brikel	38	——	Clarke!

There are other ſhips in the Mediterranean not included in this liſt We are to add alſo the frigates Seahorſe, Medufa, Active, Amazon, and Diana, of 38 guns each, the Phœbe, of 36 guns, and the Juno of 32 guns. From ſuch a powerful force, wielded by ſuch a commander, we may fairly anticipate the moſt glorious conſequences.

March 29.

A letter from Berlin ſtates, that Bonaparte has demanded ſome ſevere meaſures with regard to Louis the 18th, who reſides at Warſaw—and that the Pruſſian government has refuſed the demand. What it is we know not; but report ſays that Bonaparte has demanded Louis the 18th, as implicated in the late conſpiracy—other reports ſay, that he has only required the inſpection of the papers of the exile monarch, and that he may be confounded ſome Pruſſian forts, until a peace with England.

A letter from an officer, ſtated off Flufhing, ſtates, that that French had embarked their cavalry and horſes, and only waited for a ſpring or calm to elude the vigilance of our cruizers. It is ſaid, the French army of reſerve, ſtationed at St Omers, Arras, Amiens, &c. has received orders to advance to the coaſt.

Yeſterday Mr. Yorke ſtated the outlines of his plan for recruiting the army. Eight new regiments of infantry are to be raiſed—ten battalions added to exiſting regiments, 8000 added to the Guards, and 5000 added to the Cavalry. In all 25,000 men. The recruiting for the army of reſerve is to be ſuſpended; and the bounties for the new levies not to exceed five guineas, exclusive of levy money—He alſo propoſed to bring over to this country 10,000 of the Irish militia, adding at the ſame time a ſimilar number to that force.

An additional foreign force of 8000 men is likewiſe propoſed by Miniſters in addition to a levy now going on in North America and Weſt India poſſeſſions, which is eſtimated at 4000 men.

According to the return of themary up to this time, it appears that we have in commiſſion 100 ſail of the line, 34 of 50 guns, 126 frigates, and 227 ſloops, cutters, gun boats, &c.

The Toulon fleet is ſtated to conſiſt of nine ſail of the line, and eight frigates and corvettes; about two thouſand Genoeſe ſeamen are on board of it.

April 2.

An opinion ſtill appears to prevail, that the enemy meditates an attack upon us in a few days. The laſte of that ſhort period will aſcertain the value of theſe ſpeculations.

On Thurſday a ſignal was flying at Plymouth from eleven o'clock till three in the afternoon, to notify that ſix large enemy's frigates were lying to off the Start Point. This circumſtance occaſioned ſome alarm, and much activity at that port; but the Majeſtic, which arrived in the courſe of the day, had ſeen nothing of them. It is ſaid this ſhip brings an account of the eſcape of ſix frigates from Breſt.

April 5.

Yeſterday diſpatches were received from Lord Nelſon. It is ſaid the French fleet have failed from Toulon for Sicily.

A large quantity of ammunition, camp equipage, &c. have been ſent to the ſea coaſt with articles for the ſupveyance of helpleſs inhabitants, in caſe of invaſion.

General Rochambeau has been refuſed permiſſion to go to France on parole.

The Monarch, with Lord Keith on board, failed laſt night, probably for Boulogne.

The following is the concluding Stanza of a loyal & pathetic Ode, on his Majeſty's happy recovery.

Author of life, of health, of peace,
Hear a nation's grateful voice,
Whoſe hearts made our grief to ceaſe,
Our King's reſtor'd, our hearts rejoice.
Honor, glory, theſe are thine,
Songs of gladneſs, hymns of praiſe;
Fix'd for eternal view thy mercies ſhine,
The firſt, laſt, beſt of all thy wond'rous ways.

CORK, March 25.

Yeſterday, arrived here, in Brauve French ſhip privateer, 16 guns and 110 men, taken after a chaſe of eight hours, by his majeſty's ſhip La Loire, captain Maitland, in lat. 48, long. 12. She had been three weeks from St. Maloes, and had taken nothing. She is a remarkable fine faſt ſailing ſhip, copperd: was formerly the King George Packet, taken on her paſſage from Lisbon to Falmouth.

NEW-YORK, May 12.

A Grenada paper of the 6th ult. mentions, that by Capt. Roe of the American ſchooner Edward, from Barbadoes, they learned that the captures of a French frigate of 36 guns, by an Engliſh ſloop of war of 18, and that ſhe was carried into Barbadoes. Before her capture, the frigate had been engaged for three hours by a ſloop of war, ſaid to be the Oſprey.

THE ORACLE,

YORK—SATURDAY, JUNE 9.

Monday laſt being the anniverſary of his Majeſty's Birth Day, on which his Majeſty attained his 66th year, was obſerved here with the uſual demonſtrations of joy. At noon a Royal Salute was fired from the Garriſon, and reſpected at every ſeventh gun by a volley of ſmall arms from the detachment of the 49th Regiment, drawn up on the occaſion.

By our laſt American papers it appears, that additional arreſts of perſons implicated in the French Conſpiracy, have taken place.

Two French regiments of the line, ſtationed at Rennes, in Britanny, having expreſſed great diſaffection to the Firſt Conſul on the arreſt of General Moreau, were immediately ordered into the interior of the country.

The Americans have ſucceeded in recapturing the Tripolitan frigate of 40 guns, late the U. S. frigate Philadelphia, which was captured ſome time ſince, and refitted for the Engliſhmen. This gallant exploits was performed by Capt. Decatur, in a Ketch of 4 guns and 70 men.

On the 16th January, Capt. Decatur entered the harbour of Tripoli under fire of the batteries, and of the Bashaw's Caſtle, and laid the Ketch along ſide the frigate, boarded, took and ſet fire to her without firing a ſingle gun, ſettling the whole by the ſword, notwithſtanding the guns of the frigate were loaded, and ſhe was full of men within half a muſket ſhot of her. On this occaſion the Americans had only one man wounded. The loſs of the Tripolitans was between 20 and 30 men killed on deck; one large boat ſunk, ſeveral ſome ran below, and repulſed in the flames, but the greater part jumped over board.

The Brest fleet has only a complement of men for eleven ships of the line, but the squadron at Rochefort has its full complement. The transports in the harbor can only carry ten thouland men, but the men of war are fitted out to carry twelve thousand more; and of the 28,000 men under Angereau, only 22,000 had received orders to hold themselves in readiness to embark. The garrison at Brest and its forts amounts to 8000 men, of whom 3000 artillery. On board the squadron at Rochefort are 4000 land troops, and at the ifle of Rhe 3000 more are in readiness to embark.

LONDON, April 2—4.

Military Diffeftion.—A private letter, received from a gentleman refiding at Rennes, in Brittanny, ftates the following particulars—"The commandant of the town having been informed that two regiments of the French line ftationed there, had expreffed great diffatisfaction at the arreft of General Moreau, he ordered them to aflemble upon the Efplanade, where he exhorted them to inform him of the caufe of complaint, and told them, if any man would come forward, and ftate his grievances, they fhould be immediately remedied. One of the grenadiers immediately ftepped from the ranks, and in loud terms informed the commandant, 'that their grievances arofe from the conduct of the Chief Conful, who had caufed their General, Moreau, to be unjuftly arrefted, and had inftituted charges againft him which were completely unfounded; that he (General Moreau) had rendered more fervices to the republic by his retreats, that ever the Chief Conful had done by his victories.' The commandant obferved to him, that it was neceffary, for the fafety of the republic, that traitors fhould be denounced; that whatever fervices Moreau might have rendered, it was evident he had aflociated with a fet of mifcreants, who were determined upon the reftoration of monarchy, and the return of tyranny. He wifhed, however, to know, if they were all of the fame opinion as the grenadier who had ftepped forward? Upon this being made known, the whole of the two regiments to a man ftepped out and feconded their comrade, declaring they were anxious to defend their General (Moreau). The conlequence of this intimation was, the regiments were ordered immediately into the interio. of the country."

Admiral Truget has been appointed Chief Admiral of France, with a falary of 60000 francs per annum.

A port folio belonging to Pichegru, containing the whole plan of the conſpiracy, is ſtated to have been found, and given up to the Miniſter of the Police; and in the apartment where Georges reſided 200,000 pieces of gold have been diſcovered.

The laſt paris papers are wholly ſilent with reſpect to Moreau and Pichegru, and do not afford the ſlighteſt information either upon the ſubject of the conſpiracy, or the period when the perſons implicated in it, are to be brought to trial.

LA PEROUSE.—An account from the Ile of France ſtates, that it was a Portugueſe veſſel that ſaved one of the unfortunate men who accompanied La Peroufe in his voyage. This perſon was found upon an uninhabited iſland and ſaid that his name was Legelet, the Aſtronomer of the expedition. He ſaid, that of the ſquadron, the Frigate D' Aſtrolabe had been ſtranded; that La Boufole had taken on fire from accident, but was prevented from being blown up, and that the wreck had carried M. La Peroufe, and moſt of the Officers and Sailors, to New-Zealand, where they had remained near nine years, in hope that ſome ſhip would come and carry them off. After having waited ſo long in vain, they determined to build a ſhip themſelves, but after cutting down ſome timber, were ſurpriſed by the natives, and every Frenchman was murdered, except Mr. Legelet, who eſcaped in a ſmall boat to the deſerted iſland, where the Portugueſe found him. He was ſo worn out from wants and misfortunes, that he died on the fifth day after he was taken on board. He delivered, however, before his deceaſe, a ſealed parcel, with papers, addreſſed to the "Miniſters of his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty for the Department of the marine and the Colonies." Notwithſtanding what the Portugueſe ſaid, Legelet would not believe that Louis XVI, was murdered, and that France was called a republic.

"The chief of Battalion, Tauvermay, arrived lately from St. Domingo, at Paris. He had been above fifteen months, and was, before his departure, betrothed to a Mademoiſelle De Vernois. At his return, he haſtened to ſee his miſtreſs, and preſſed her to fix the day of their marriage. The Sunday following was agreed on; and his lifter was informed of the day that ſhould make him happy. In one of thoſe unguarded moments, when the moſt prudent may err, Miſs Tauvermay determined to try her brother's love, by giving him reaſon to be jealous of his miſtreſs. She told him, that, as an affectionate ſiſter, ſhe was ſorry to ſee him ſo much attached to a lady, who did not return his love; and, to convince him, ſhe aſked him the next day to be in the Bois de Boulogne, not far from La Bagatelle, and, at five o'clock in the afternoon, he would undoubtedly find Mademoiſelle de Vernois in her uſual evening's walk, accompanied with her uſual evening's companion. With an anxiety of mind eaſily to be imagined, he arrived at the fatal ſpot, where he had not been long before he ſaw his miſtreſs not only arm in arm with a genteel young man, but careſſing him in a manner that would have bewildered an imagination leſs heated than his own. No ſooner had his miſtreſs and her companion paſſed his place of concealment, than he ruſhed forward, and ſhot them both through the head. But what was his ſurpriſe, after this deperate act, to find the ſuppoſed youth whom he had murdered as a rival, was his own ſiſter. He drew his ſword and ſtabbed himſelf to the heart as a puniſhment for his jealouſy and his crime. In his pocket was found a letter addreſſed to his ſiſter, thanking her for her information, and bequeathing her all his property. Tauvernay was 27 years of age, Miſs Tauvernay 21, and Mademoiſelle De Vernois 19."

During the year 1803, in the Ruſſian Empire were born 690,385 male children, and 613,480 girls; 688,374 perſons of both ſexes died during the ſame year, and the births exceed therefore the deaths by 615,497; 299,037 marriages were concluded. Among the deaths are mentioned, 2089 individuals between 90 and 95; 1168 between 95 and 100; 360 between 100 and 105; 66 between 105 and 110; 28 between 110 and 115; 13 between 115 and 120; 7 between 120 and 125; 4 between 125 and 130; and 1 near 140 years of age.

DUBLIN, March 29

Lately the remains of the largeſt perſon ever known in Ireland, at leaſt ſince the days of Phil Macoul, the famous Iriſh giant, were interred in the church-yard of Roſeunallis, in the Queen's county. The coffin, with its contents, weighed fifty-two ſtone, which amounts exactly to ſix hundred. It was borne on a very long bier, by thirty ſtrong men, who were relived at intervals. The name of this extraordinary perſon is ſaid to have been Roger Byrne, who lived at or near Burros, in Offory, and is reported to have died of no other diſeaſe, but a ſuffocation, occaſioned by an extremity of fat that ſtopped the play of the lungs, and put a period to his life, in the 54th year of his age. He was thirteen ſtone heavier than the noted Bright, of Maldon, whoſe waiſtcoat incloſed ſeven large men.—Byrne was a married man, and it is remarkable his widow is a very ſmall woman, by whom he has left four boys.

March 30.

The Northern Monday night, from 11 to 12, it is ſaid has done much miſchief: the waves in the harbour rofe mountain high, and the ſhipping there and in the river were driven from their moorings. Some dead bodies were found near the ſhore on Tueſday morning when the tide was out—no great failors, it is likely, who were waſhed overboard. We have not, however, yet heard of any veſſels being loſt, though there are great apprehenſions for many which are miſſing.

HOLLAND.

Schiedam, Feb. 28.—The violent hail ſtorm accompanied by thunder and vivid lightning, which fell here on the evening of Friday laſt, extended nearly throughout the whole republic. At Lyden, the lightning ſtruck the tower of he great church, juſt under the clock, and let a part of the wood on fire, but it was extinguiſhed by the exertions of the citizens. A ſimilar accident happened to the ſteeple of the great church at Amerſtort, which was not entirely covered till nine o'clock at night, and at firſt ſeemed to threaten deſtruction to the city, the wind blowing freſh, the ſparks were borne down; and nothing but the courage of ſome reſolute individuals ſaved the building. At Gorinchem, the ſtorm diſcharged its utmoſt fury: wind, ſnow, hail, rain, thunder and lightning, contended in the atmoſphere at once; and the latter was rendered more terrible by the mingling of a ſulphurous body of fire, of the bignels of half a ton, againſt the church tower, ſpreading itſelf in numerous ſparks on and over the church tower. Fortunately its force was ſpent againſt the ſtone, or the effects would have been infinitely more dreadful. At Utrecht, this phenomenon excited no leſs apprehenſion: there the ſky became completely cloſed, and the ſucceeding flaſhes of lightning exhibited an univerſal blaze; the claps of thunder were dreadful beyond deſcription. The lightning ſtruck the ſteeple of the Dome church carried off a part of the work which ſupported the clock, and afterwards made its way through the appartment of the perſon inhabiting the Dome, but ſtrange to ſay, without doing any damage. At Loenen the ſteeple alſo caught fire, but was timely extinguiſhed. At Bois le Duc it raged with no leſs violence; near which place a garſon was ſtruck by the lightning, but it damaged only a part of the hair of his head. The ſtorm, with all its concomitants, raged alſo at Rotterdam, but did little damage.

In the Hague the danger was more imminent: at four o'clock in the afternoon, after the ſtorm had commenced there with the ſame violence, and nearly in the ſame manner as in ſeveral other places, the lightning ſtruck the tower of the great church, and ſet fire to the wood work under the clock, burning inwards: the ardour of the inhabitants, however, ſaved that charming town from impending deſtruction, although it was eleven o'clock at night before the flames were entirely extinguiſhed; the danger was conſiderably increaſed by the high wind, which blew the whole time. At Middleburgh, during a violent ſhower of hail and ſnow, the lightning was rendered more terrible by the falling of a great number of the church yard, the ſparks of which flew in all directions: this was immediately ſucceeded by a heavy clap of thunder, of ſhort duration: but this was not all; for an hour afterwards, the ſteeple of the church was obſerved to be on fire, and on further inveſtigation, a beam of the upper ceiling in the tower was diſcovered to be burning: here alſo the inhabitants happily ſucceeded in turning aſide the danger, by the exertions which raiſed obſtacles.

In the Nieuwe Diep the Jan de Witt, a ſhip of war, was ſtruck by the lightning, and ſome damage done to the maſt and rigging: a man man on board was at that time inſtant ſtruck dead.

The dyke at Lidder Poel, near Harlem, has been forced by the water, which is now five feet deep in the low lands where it has penetrated. The damage is computed at 14,000 guilders.

Conſtantinople, Jan. 5.—The following are the particulars of the death of Abdul Wechab. He was aſſaſſinated by Ibadgi Oſman, a Muſſulman of the ſect of Ali, Abdul Wechab had profaned the tomb of Ali, and thus excited the fury of the diſciples of that prophet. Ibadgi Oſman reſolved to avenge the aſhes of Ali, He croſſed the deſart of Arabia on a dromadary, entered the tent of Abdul Wechab while he was at prayers, and plunged a dagger into his breaſt, crying, "Let this avenge the tomb of Ali, for thy profanations." The brother of Abdul Wechab, hearing a noiſe, ran into the tent, where he found his brother bathed in his blood, and the aſſaſſin, who had ſquatted himſelf down, ſaying his prayers, and calmly awaiting death: he attacked him; but Ibadgi Oſman, who was the ſtrongeſt of the two, got up and killed his aſſaſſant with the ſame dagger which was ſtill ſtained with the blood of his brother. The ſoldiers then entered, and cut the aſſaſſin in pieces with their ſabres.

MISCELLANY.

THE UNFEELING FATHER

"DOES nature refuse to plead for me," (said Miranda, kneeling before him) " or does the plead in vain?" " You broke the sacred bonds of nature," said the old man, "when you left a father's fond protection, and a mother's tender care, to pursue the fortune of the only man on earth, whom they detested." " An Heavenly father," exclaimed Miranda, " forgives the sins of his children; and shall an earthly parent deny the charitable boon a repenting child demands of him?" " To that heavenly father," replied he, " I recommend you, my doors are no longer open to receive you; I have made a vow, which shall never be broken. Let the friends of your husband protect his darling——you are mine no more." "But the children, sir.—Alas! what have they done? Leave me to the cruel fate that awaits me; but suffer not them to perish."

" They are none of mine," said the stern parent; " I will never press them in my arms—they shall never sit upon my knees. I will foster no more ingratitude. Let him, who begot them, take the spade and mattock, and get them bread. No office is beneath the affection of a parent, when children have not been ungrateful—I am yours no more.

This was the fatal dialogue between Miranda and her father, in the porch of his house; for she was admitted no further. He shut the door against her; and retired to his chamber. The wind blew, and the rain beat hard, and she dared not encounter the tempest; she remained in the porch—pressed her shivering babes to her bosom, and hoped that the morning's dawn would bring mercy along with it. But when the morning dawned, she was no more! The strangers found her a corpse, and the children weeping beside it.

When Malvolio was called to see the spectacle, he sunk down on the floor.—Life indeed returned, but peace abandoned him forever. He loves the children; but says, Heaven, in all its stores of mercies, has not one for him.

PETER HUNTER Esquire,
Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

WHEREAS by a certain Act of the Legislature of this Province, passed in the forty-fourth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act for granting to his "Majesty, a certain sum of money for "the further encouragement of the "growth and cultivation of Hemp "within this Province, and the exportation thereof," it is enacted, That from and out of any fund or funds now remaining, or which may hereafter come, into the hands of the Receiver General, arising from and out of the rates and duties already raised, levied and collected, or which hereafter may be raised, levied and collected to and for the uses of this Province, there be granted to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, the sum of one thousand pounds, to be disposed of, appropriated and laid out as a public stock or capital, applicable to the purpose of purchasing Hemp the growth of this Province, and of discharging the expences incident to such purchases, and the exportation and sale thereof, in such manner, and under such regulations, as to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council thereof, (should from time to time seem meet; And that it should and may be lawful to and for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, to issue one or more Proclamation or Proclamations, and therein to name such and so many persons within the Province as to him shall seem meet, as Commissioners for the purchasing of Merchantable Hemp the growth of this Province, which said Commissioners, or any one or more of them, are and is thereby authorized and empowered to purchase such Hemp at and after the price or rate of forty pounds per ton: AND WHEREAS it is further enacted by the said Act, that after the passing of that Act, no person or persons whatsoever, shall be intitled to any further Bounty over and beyond the said price or sum of forty pounds per ton, or to any Premium under any Proclamation or Proclamations, heretofore issued by the Lieutenant Governor, for the encouragement of the growth and exportation of Hemp, for or in respect of any Hemp for which the said sum of forty pounds per ton shall be paid under the powers thereby given; Nor shall any Bounty or Premium be paid or payable for or in respect of any Hemp not intended for sale to some one of the Commissioners acting in virtue of the powers thereby given, which shall not be claimed on or before the thirtieth day of September next, under proper and sufficient Documents, to be on or before that day, presented to the person or persons duly empowered or authorized to allow or pay the same: Provided that before the said Commissioners to be appointed in virtue of that Act, or any of them, shall under the authority thereby given, purchase any Hemp from any person or persons whomsoever, such Commissioners and each of them are, and is thereby authorized and required, to administer to such person or persons offering any such Hemp for sale, an Oath in the said Act particularly set forth, whereby such person or persons, is or are to swear that the Hemp which he, she or they had that day offered for sale to the Commissioner appointed by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor for the purchase of Hemp, and every part thereof, was raised within the Province of Upper Canada by him or them, or by some other person or persons (to be named in such oath) and that no Bounty or Premium had been paid or claimed for any part of such Hemp, by any person or persons whomsoever, save and except what was included in the sum or price for which he, she or they had offered to sell such Hemp to the said Commissioner.—Now know all whom it may concern, that I PETER HUNTER Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, well knowing the fidelity, diligence and ability of the Honorable James Baby of Sandwich, the Honorable Richard Cartwright of Kingston, the Honorable Robert Hamilton of Queenstown, all Members of the Legislative Council of this Province, and William Allan of York in the Home District Esquire, do by virtue of the power so vested in me as aforesaid, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, nominate, constitute and appoint the said James Baby, Richard Cartwright, Robert Hamilton, and William Allan, to be Commissioners for the purchasing of merchantable Hemp, the growth of the said Province, at and after the price or rate of Forty Pounds Halifax Currency per Ton, which said sum of Forty Pounds is to be paid by the said Commissioners respectively, to the party or parties selling such Hemp, in Money only, according to the rules, regulations, limitations and restrictions in the said in part above recited Act expressed and contained, with full power and authority, to do and perform all and each of the matters and things in the said Act authorized or required by them the said Commissioners to be done and performed.

Given under my Hand, and Seal at Arms, at York, this Twenty-Third Day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and four, and in the forty-fourth year of His Majesty's Reign.

P. HUNTER, Lt. Govr.

By His Excellency's Command,
Wm. Jarvis, Secy.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER Esquire,
Lieutenant Gover or of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

To all whom it may Concern—GREETING:

Lateſt Intelligence.

LONDON, MARCH 17.

LORD CAMELFORD.

His Lordſhip's coffin was publicly exhibited yeſterday at Mr. Dawes's Upholſterer, in Dean-ſtreet Soho. The number of perſons who went to ſee it amounted to ſeveral hundred. It is very elegant, being lined with white ſatin, and covered with crimſon Genoa velvet. At the top are the arms, ſupporters, creſts, and coronet; and under an inſcription.

By the ſhip Briſtol Trader, at New-York, from Briſtol, London papers have been received to the evening of the 10th ult. inclusive.—The following is a ſummary of the Articles which have been extracted from them.

The late Biſhop of Chalons, aged 70, has been arreſted at Manich, at the inſtance of the French Government. The Marquis de Vaux Borel, and Gen. Melitte, have alſo been thrown into priſon.

The report is revived that Bonaparte has demanded of Denmark the excluſion of Britiſh ſhips from the Baltic and Daniſh Ports.

It was rumoured that the French were about to evacuate Hanover, and that it was to be occupied by Pruſſian troops.

The Britiſh have bombarded Weſte Capelle.

A conſpiracy of the French at Malta againſt the Engliſh has been diſcovered and the ringleaders fecured.

LONDON, APRIL 10.

On Sunday diſpatches were received at Lord Hawkesbury's Office from the Continent, which cauſed a great deal of buſtle among the Miniſters yeſterday, and ſeveral of the Foreign Ambaſſadors had conferences with them. We do not pretend to know the cauſe: but report ſtates, that, among other accounts, a declaration of Bonaparte to the Court of St. Peterſburgh has been received, ſtating, that in caſe any Ruſſian troops from the Baltic ſhould land in Mecklenburgh, Holſtein, or any where elſe upon the German Continent, the French troops would immediately occupy the Hanſe towns; and if any Ruſſian troops from the Black Sea ſhould attempt to land on the Italian Continent, French troops would occupy, not only the city of Naples, but every ſeaport in that kingdom.

Letters from Genoa of the 17th ult. ſtate, that the Toulon fleet was ſtill in port.

At Munich and other places, ſome Emigrants from France have been arreſted, at the inſtance of the French Envoy, Citizen Otto. Among them is the late Biſhop of Chalons, who was arreſted at Munich ſeveral years. He is now upwards of 70; but at the eſtabliſhment of the Concordat he omitted to make in his reſignation.

PARIS, March 23.

The ſentence of death againſt the Duke D'Enghien was carried into execution in the night between the 21ſt and 22d. He was ſhot in the Ditch des Vincennes, about two o'clock in the morning.—The Prince was brought hither from Etrenheim on the evening of the 20th, in a coach with ſix horſes under and eſcort of 30 Gens d'Armes and carried to the Temple, but not impriſoned there; his conſeſſion, on their arrival, finding an order to convey him to the Caſtle of Vincennes. What is termed a military commiſſion, was immediately aſſembled.

The Prince was ſo extremely fatigued with his journey, that he could ſcarcely refrain from deeping, even in this critical moment. He offered to ſpeak with the firſt Conſul, but this could not be permitted. He then collected himſelf, and met death with firmneſs. It is ſaid that he would not ſuffer his eyes to be bound. Several Generals were preſent when he was ſhot.

The General of Brigade Molin, the Preſident of the Military Commiſſion on the Duke d'Enghein, diſtinguiſhed himſelf at the taking of the Baſtile on the 14th of July 1789.

The firſt Conſul is now at Malmaiſon, and only admits, to his preſence ſuch perſons as have to ſpeak with him on buſineſs.

Pichegru will not ſuffer the wounds which he received at the time of his arreſt, to be bound up.

The 5 per cent conſolidate fallen to 52 fr. 90 c.

Some of the perſons implicated in the late conſpiracy have eſcaped into Switzerland, in conſequence of which General Vial has given in a note to the government of Berne.

APRIL 3.

A report has been circulated here for theſe two days paſt with ſome confidence, that the French in Hanover would very ſoon be replaced by Pruſſian troops, and that the Elbe and Weſer would then be immediately declared free.

STOCKHOLM, March 26.

A ſtrong report prevails here that Bonaparte has demanded of the Court of Denmark that the ſound and all Daniſh ports, ſhall be immediately ſhut againſt the Engliſh—and if this be true it is rather expected that the demand will be extended to Sweden.

LETTER FROM MOREAU TO BONAPARTE.

Paris March 9, 1804.

"The letter which we now publiſh, has been circulated all over Paris for this week, and many thouſand copies have been ſent into the Departments. We reprint it, however, that foreigners may read what this moment excites ſo much intereſt in France. It is addreſſed to "Monſieur Bonaparte, the Firſt Conſul, by Citizen Moreau, the Victor of Hohenlinden, now a cloſe Priſoner in the Temple."

"TO MONS. BONAPARTE, FIRST CONSUL

"From the Dungeon of the Temple, Ventoſe 20th Year XII. March 1, 1804.

"SIR,

"Since your ambition requires more victims, ſtrike, but do not calumniate thoſe your butcher. Wade in the blood of innocence, but ſpare honour in taking away life.

"If you expect from me the ſupplicant's petition read no farther; in this dungeon where your tyranny has plunged me. I am more elevated than you upon your uſurped throne. So ſay all juſt men of my contemporaries, and future ages will confirm their ſentences. Sir, on the borders of eternity I call you to an account for your treaſon againſt my country and againſt myſelf. Do you remember our mutual agreement on the 8th November, 1799? Talleyrand, Sieyes, and Le Fevre were preſent.—I promiſed to die by your ſide in the attempt of removing the Directorial tyrants. You ſwore to eſtabliſh a government, not depending upon the life of one individual, nor tyrannical, but firm, ſtable, and liberal, bellowing freedom on French men, and worthy to obtain, by gratitude from foreign nations, that confidence and eſteem which your predeceſſors and yourſelf have commanded by the dread of your bayonets. When I ſhortly afterwards went to head armies—diſorganized and defeated—your laſt words were:—"I know your love of your Country; be victorious, and France ſhall force admiration, even from her rivals and foes, by the liberty ſhe enjoys at home, and by the generoſity of her external negotiations" "

How have you reſpected theſe oaths? In my degraded country, I ſee nothing but cringing ſlaves and proud tyrants; baſe placemen and infamous ſpies. Every where in Europe, from Sicily to Moſcow, yourſelf and your government are alike feared and deteſted. Deny theſe facts if you can! You have long followed the example of Sylla, the tyrant; imitate for a month only, Sylla, the private citizen, and you ſhall be convinced that the complements of Kings and inſlaved princes prove no more the ſtandard of merit in a governor, than the flattery of vile courtiers, or the praiſe of corrupted counſellors.

"But as this will probably be the laſt time that you will hear from me, conſider what I now tell you not as the envious declamation of an impriſoned rival Gen. but as the genuine effuſion of the mind of a dying patriot, who forgives his death and your ingratitude. You pretend that my countrymen are happy, and ſatisfied, with your government. Let it be ſo, though ſlaves can have no opinion, or at leaſt dare not expreſs one. But you are mortal as well as myſelf. If you love Frenchmen, let not their happineſs depend upon your life. You have too much ſenſe not to know that, with you, the Conſulate for life will expire in the Bonaparte family; and other pretenders of other ſyſtems ſhall combat for, adminiſter, or occupy a conſulate throne, of only ſome few years ſtanding. As to your right of appointing a ſucceſſor in your will, remember that Louis XIV. the royal defendant of this Kingdom, was, after a reign of upwards of three ſcore years, not ſufficiently competent to ſet aſide the will of his anceſtors; and that the Duke of Maine was thrown up as a priſoner when he expected to rule as a regent.

"To prevent our children and grandchildren from ſuffering the wretchedneſs of their forefathers, by turns tormented by anarchy, or cruſhed by tyranny; and from witneſſing thoſe ſcenes of horror, terror, and ſcandal, we have ſeen; exceed the legal hour of the throne of France, and have ſeverally his authority I make him a king, but not a deſpot. Such was the plan of Fichegrue, of myſelf, and of Georges; and with this plan your preſervation was accidentally connected, becauſe we wanted your fortune, your talents, and your rank, as well as our own ſervices, to watch the reign of a foreigner who, though miniſtered may have made him prudent, ſufferings liberal and gratitude juſt; may by ſentiments ſo patriotic than himſelf, be tempted to extend his power.

"I defy your Grand Judge and his horde of ſpies, to prove any thing contrary to this aſſertion. My wife, my mother in-law, and my brother, know nothing of this loyal undertaking. I ſhould regard the day of my death with greater ſatisfaction than thoſe of my triumphs, could I but hope that it ſhould make my country flouriſhing, my fellow-citizens free and proſperous, and worthy of liberty and proſperity.

"MOREAU."

FROM LONDON PAPERS.

Extraordinary Caſe.

The following circumſtance is ſo extraordinary, that notwithſtanding it took place ſome time ſince, we think it merits a place here; eſpecially as we can vouch for the truth of it.

A Mr. Thompſon, (familiarly called Johnny Thompſon,) of Sherborne, was, in the paroxyſm of a violent fever, attended by two nurſes; but though raving in delirium, he, about two o'clock one morning, conceived the idea of eſcaping from his attendants; and obſerving them doſe a little, he ſtole ſoftly from his bed, let himſelf out of the houſe without diſturbing any one, ran ſomewhat more that two hundered yards, when he raiſed the cover of a well full twenty-five yards deep, and plunged himſelf to the bottom. The water was ſo high as to require him to elevate himſelf a little on tip-toe to prevent its entering into his mouth, and in that ſituation he remained for three hours, although ſoon miſſed, and the neighbourhood ſearched in vain. About five o'clock, the farmer's ſervant coming to the well to draw water, had lowered the bucket but a few feet, when Johnny cried out—"So, thou meaneſt to daſh my brains out with the bucket, I do ſee." Sure enough, down ran the bucket, and the man ran away trembling to his maſter, and ſolemnly declaring that the devil was in the well, while Johnny received the bucket on his left arm, which was ſeverely bruiſed by it. The maſter dreſſed himſelf immediately, and ran to the ſpot, calling out, "who is in the well?"—"Why, 'tis I," ſaid the poor patient. "I! Lord have mercy upon us! It is the devil ſure enough, Thomas, I do think—ſpeak, in the name of the Father, be you Satan or ghoſt?" ſaid the farmer. "No, I be no Satan, nor no ghoſt: I be honeſt Johnny Thompſon." But though he could anſwer ſo collectedly, they could not prevail on Johnny to get into the bucket, conſequently were obliged to procure a ladder and drag him from the well. He was carried home, and very ſoon fell into a ſound ſleep, from which he awaked perfectly free from fever; recovered his ſtrength very faſt, and is now alive and well.

Britiſh Humane Society.

On Thurſday laſt, Robert Precious, Eſq. preſided at the annual Court of Directors of the Humane Society. The premiums had been paid in 4755 caſes of aquatic ſuffocation, &c. and it is a moſt happy truth, that 2589 children, &c. have been reſtored to their parents and relatives.

A private in the Shropſhire militia, quartered in Denſion-ſtreet, Liverpool, having got a quantity of gun-powder in a glaſs bottle, threw a little from the mouth of it into the fire, with a view of alarming his wife; but the flaſh communicating with the contents of the bottle, the whole exploded, and forcing a part of the glaſs into his breaſt, produced inſtant death.

Of ſixty-two novels now printing at Paris, forty-eight are written by female authors, or by their lovers, under their name.

At the Review of the Prince of Wales' Volunteers lately in the Park, commanded by M. P. Andrews, Eſq. a perſon aſked which was the Colonel; a wag replied, "that Gentleman in the middle, with two Epilogues upon his ſhoulders."

The means employed to prevent the enemy from invading, have much the air of a pariſh job. Their harbours have long been watched and lighted, and now Mr. Addington propoſes to pave them!

Amongſt the French citizens who occupy Hanover are, 66 Actors, 44 Actreſſes, 16 Figurants, and 24 Figurantes, beſides 160 Muſicians.

Rouſſeau, the nephew of the Biſhop of Conſtance, and proprietor of the famous Abbey of Clairveaux, where he has eſtabliſhed a manufactory, ordered all his workmen to the chapel, and treated them with a Te Deum, for the preſervation of the firſt Conſul. During the ſervice, a ſtone fell from the roof, and killed the Clergyman who officiated. As the people are very ſuperſtitious, this has been looked upon as an ill omen.

[Journal du Grenoble.]

The Spaniſh part of St. Domingo, previous to the late war, contained 120,000 inhabitants, of whom 110,000 were free. Laſt year the number of the free people was only 35,000.

On the 14th inſt. a farm in Roxbourgſhire, that had been let 19 years ago, at 250l. a year, was put up to public roup in Edinburgh, and was let for 1010l. per ann. and ſaid not to be over-rented.

Colonel M'Dowel, of Logan, has made a fiſh pond, at Ardwell ſhore, near Portnellock, which is hewn out of a rock, into which the ſea runs during flood-tide, and then ebbs again, ſtill, however, retaining a conſiderable quantity of water, whereby the fiſhes it contains are kept abundantly ſupplied in their proper element. There is a man who attends them regularly with food congenial to their nature and they regularly come to him at a certain place, and receive from his hand ſhell and other fiſh. One of them, is a cod-fiſh, which the man calls by the name of tom. He is ſo familiar that he will ſometimes permit him to ſtroke his head with his hand, in the ſame manner as the tameſt domeſtic animal will allow his maſter; but the leaſt noiſe will cauſe a very rapid and abrupt departure.—Tom has been upwards of two years in this pond.

The following singular circumstance occured on Saturday last night, in the garden of Mr. Marwick, of Littleworth, Suffex:—A hawk pounced on a chicken, about half grown, and while encumbered with his prey, was perceived by the parent cock, who immediately made at the intruder, and by one blow laid him at his feet; the chick was by this time disengaged, and a battle between the hawk and the cock enfued, which ended, after three rounds, in favor of Chanticleer, from whole feet Mr. Marwick (who with two other perfons had witneffed the conteft) took the petty tyrant of the air, with very few remaining fymptoms of life, which he inftantly refigned in his hands.

Admiral Cornwallis.

Commander of the Britifh Fleet of Breft.

IN refpect to perfon, he is of the middle ftze, ftrift a good, with a certain degree of prominence in front, which may be fuppofed to add dignity to a Commander in Chief, and muft be allowed not to be unbecoming in an Officer now in the fixtieth year of his age.

As to talents, his fkill and bravery are undoubted, his knowledge in its particulars of high repute; and a long apprenticefhip, of more than forty years, during which he has had fewer intervals of relaxation on fhore, than perhaps any other Officer of equal rank in the Britifh navy, has enabled him to acquire a degree of profeffional capability, which renders no difficulty unknown, and no fituation unufual to him. In point of habits, he is a referved man; and is fo little defirous of bufile when on fhore, that on its being obferved, during a temporary refidence near Chichefter, that "he muft be very lonely" he replied, "that the cabbage ftocks in his garden were fufficient company for him."

At times he enjoys his glafs freely; but is fo abftemious when on duty, that he has been known for fix months together to drink no more than a couple of glaffes of wine at dinner, after which he carefully abftained from any other refreftment during the fucceeding part of the day.

It has always been ufual for Britifh failors, with that frankneffs fo confpicuous in their characters, to defignate their favorite Commanders by means of fome appofite appellation, originating in fome peculiarity, arifing either out of their perfons or their manners. Accordingly, Bolcawen was familiarly termed two-gored Dick; Pye, to long Pye-Admiral at Portfmouth, was always called Nancy: Earl Howe, whofe very name is ftill adored in the Navy, received the appellation of Black Dick; while Admiral Cornwallis, on account of a certain twirl of his fhaggy and thaggy, added to a ftrong and ruddy countenance, and a wig fomewhat fimilar to that feen in front of a pofticman's carriage is frequently denominated Coachee, and Mr. Whip.

Lateft Intelligence.

LONDON, April 14.

The execution of the Duke of Enghien was as Private, and as ftudioufly concealed, as his condemnation was published with eclat. For twenty-four hours after his murder, petitions for him were preferred by the Duke De Lancourt, and feveral other of his friends, through the means of Madame Bonaparte, as the Firft Conful refided at Malmaifon, where he is vifible to none but his Miniftry, fenators and relations. Even in the Senate, on the 22d, it was propofed by Lanjuinais to advife the Firft Conful to pardon the Duke. It is faid at Paris, that this Senator pointed out in ftrong language the danger of accuftoming Bonaparte to blood in trivial caufes; and faid among other things, "that Nero wept at one time when he was forced to fign his name to a death warrant; but, at another time, accuftomed to the fight of blood, by the advice of depraved counfellors, he murdered his own mother and brother, tutor, his teachers, miniflers, generals, and all clafles of Roman citizens, with the fame indifference as he now ftands burning."

Bonaparte defined General Moreau to be the Perfident of the Military Commiffion, which condemned the Duke, but he denied it. General Hulin was then appointed (the fon of a walhetwoman, and formerly a fervant in the workhoufe of the Court at Verfailles), notorious fince July 1789, in all the dreadful catafrophies of the revolution.—After fentence was paffed, the Duke afked, if he could fee Bonaparte? "Yes" faid Hulin, "if you have any difcoveries to make." "Difcoveries anfwered the Duke, with indignation; "carry me to the place of execution." "That cannot be over," faid Hulin, "before we have reported our fentence to the Firft Conful." "I know the fentence," and waved the Duke, "before; regardful the law of nations, he carried me away from Ettenheim."

From the time of the Duke's arreft, he had never once been permitted to lay down on a bed, to undreft, to fhave, or to change his linen, and his feet were fo fwollen with fatigue that he could hardly ftand. In the dungeon at Vincennes, where he was ftut up, with four gens d'armes, for the fourteen hours he lived after his condemnation, there was neither a bed nor chairs; there was fome ftraw, where he fat down, but he was prevented from a moment's reft, by the noife and queftions of thefe intelligencers, who had orders to prevent his fhutber.—A clergyman was with him for an hour, but was not permitted to fpeak with him, except fo loud as to be heard by the guards.

In the morning before day light, on the 22d, general Murat arrived at Vincennes, efcorted by 50 Mamelukes, and accompanied with 4 Aid de-camps, and Generals Mortier, Hulin, and Louis Bonaparte, who had come on purpofe from the Court. Each Mameluke held a ftandard, and 200 gens d'armes and 800 men of the Italian troop furrounded the caftle, prevented the approach of every one, and guarded all the avenues to that part of the wood about a hundred yards diftance from the caftle, fixed for the place of execution. The Duke being told that his fentence was to be executed, faid, calmly, "I am ready and refigned." When he heard, upon enquiry, that the grenadiers who fhould fhoot him were Italians of Bonaparte's guard, he faid, "Thank God! they are not Frenchmen. I am condemned by a foreigner, and God be praifed, that my executioners are foreigners too. It will be a ftain lefs upon my countrymen." Upon the place of execution, he fifted his hands towards heaven and faid, "my God preferve my King, and deliver my Country from its foreign yoke." Two gens d'armes then wanted to tie an handkerchief over his eyes; but he faid:—"A loyal foldier, who has fo often been expofed to fire and fword, can fee the approach of death with uncovered eyes and without fear." His hat was then taken off—but in looking at the grenadiers, who had already pointed their fufils at him, he faid to Hulin, "Grenadiers, lower your arms, otherwise you will mifs me, or only wound me."—Of the nine grenadiers who fired at him, feven hit him; feven bullets pierced his body. Immediately after his murder, Gen. Murat fent his aid-de-camp to Malmaifon. A fmall coffin, filled with lime, was ready to receive his body, and a grave had been dug in the garden of the caftle, where he was buried.

Such was the end of the Duke of Enghien, butchered in the 32d year of his age, by the barbarous foreign ufurper of the throne of his father. He poffeffed the fincere affection, not only of the royal relatives, but of every Frenchman, who had ferved under him, and of every perfon who knew him. He had not only the efteem, but the friendfhip of the Archduke Charles; who, during feveral campaigns, had been aflifted by his talents, and witneffed his courage. He was as generous, as brave; and in the age of pleafure, deprived himfelf of all enjoyments, to affift his numerous diftreffed countrymen.

Ships are now victualled at Plymouth fufficient to carry 5000 troops. Four fhips en flute are alfo fitting out to carry four black regiments from the Weft to the Eaft Indies.

The crimes of the merchants at Leghorn, Genoa, Civita, Vecchia, Ancone, and other fea-ports on the Mediterranean Adriatic fea, who have lately been tried by French military commiffions and fhot as fpies there, that they had brought up and furnifhed the Engliih cruifers with provifions.

April 14.

Switzerland appears to be on a ftate of confiderable agitation. Some commotions have broken out in the Canton of Zurich, where the people refufed to take the ufual oaths; and accounts from Baile mention that half the inhabitants of that Canton are in a ftate of revolt.

By a neutral veffel that arrived from Holland, we learn that the French have demanded 60 or 70 horfes at Utrecht, which was done in a fummary way, by fending a note to every occupier, fignifying they muft quit poffeffion immediately, leaving the furniture on the premifes, of which they might take an inventory. An encampment of 40,000 men is immediately to take place at Utrecht.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer gave notice that he would bring forward the Budget on Wednefday nen'night.

Our port letters this morning bring no further accounts of the veffels that failed upon the ftone expedition on Thurfday. It was fuppofed they would be funk that night at the mouth of Bovingne harbour.

A letter from Gottenburgh, dated April 7th fays, "The daring fteps the French have taken in arreffing emigrants in Germany have caufed fome fenfation in this country, and the execution of the Duke d'Enghien has excited equal furprife and indignation. Accounts received this morning from Stockholm countenance the expectation that it will not be very long before thofe powers who have been fo very cautious in avoiding the war will take an active part in it. But certainly the movements of Sweden and Denmark muft depend upon thofe of Ruffia.

The fhip Magnificent, an Engliih veffel of 74 guns, ftruck on the Black Rocks, on the 29th ult.—A part of the crew perifhed, a part were faved by the boats, and 70 of them landed on the Ifle Bouquet, where they were made prifoners. Among them are feven officers.

In the debate in the Britifh houfe of commons, on the 26th of February, on the fubject of the Volunteers, Mr. Fox took occafion to notice the remarks of fome of the hon. gentlemen, who fpoke rather contemptuoufly of the fmock fracked force, as they were termed. He recollected, faid he, "that America was victorious over her opponents, not becaufe fhe had a large regular army, but becaufe fhe was an armed country, and the refult of that popular armament was, that two of our beft generals, at the head of fome of the beft troops, were compelled to furrender.—Precifely that kind of force which fo conquered in America, which emancipated Holland, which triumphed in Switzerland, and performed fuch prodigies of valour in La Vende and Ireland, is what I fhould recommend to be reforted to in this country. The misfortune is, with a view to this, that, as I underftand, the volunteers have taken fo many arms, that enough are not left for arming the peafantry: but there are weapons in abundance to be found to fuit them, and they won't require much training. If this plan be not attended to, many parts of this country will, in point of invafion, be left defencelefs; for when a volunteer corps is called into fervices what becomes of the town or village to which it may belong?"

In reply to this pitt of Mr. Fox's fpeech Mr. Pitt obferved. "The right hon. gentleman, and thofe who hold fimilar opinions on this fubject, have endeavored to fatisfy their arguments by what happened in La Vendee and in America. We are told, Sir, that in both thefe cafes it was by the exertions of an armed Peafantry that victory was accomplifhed. It was true, Sir, that the peafantry of La Vendee, headed by fome of the moft able and heroic leaders, whom the world ever faw, maintained a moft glorious ftruggle againft the monfter who tyrannized over France.

But, Sir, it is neceffary for one to call to the recollection of the houfe, the circumftances of that afflicting warfare? It was by encountering every form of mifery and fuffering, it was by fubmitting to every aggravation of cruelty, that thofe brave men was upheld in their refiftance to injuftice and oppreffion. They law around the ravages of fire and of fword. They beheld their abodes confumed, their deareft relatives maffacred, their fondeft hopes deftroyed. Animated by an unaccountable and heroic fpirit, they thought no facrifices too great which were to be the purchafe of that independence which was deareft to their hearts."

....." Nor does it appear to me, that the argument drawn from the hiftory of the American war, is at all more conclufive. It is true that at the commencement of that war, the Americans did employ an irregular force that their final triumph was effected. They had time, from the circumftances in which they were placed, to accuftom thofe troops, at firft raw and inexperienced, to all the varieties of difcipline; and they received our troops, the leffons which afterwards were made the foundation of victory. Befides, Sir, when the fituation of America is confidered, it is impoffible to draw any parrallel applicable to the prefent fituation of this country.

The theatre of war in America, was over an immenfe tract of territory, widely extended, thinly peopled, poffeffing no central point, no place particularly eftablifhed as the feat of government or power, having no vital, and few vulnerable parts. A province might be abandoned in confequence of one fucceffful battle, but no object of importance was obtained. The enemy had only to retire to a diftance, and unmolefted complete their preparations for a renewal of the attack. No victory could ever place under the hands of the conqueror, one tenth, or even one hundreth part of the country. If the Americans was routed, they had only to withdraw to fome of the deferts with which the country abounded, and there wait fix weeks or two months till they had an opportunity of renewing the conteft with every profpect of advantage.

Very different, however, would be the fituation of this country if a landing of the enemy were effected. There are points where a landing might be effected within fixty miles of the metropolis. Every dictate of policy requires that, in fuch a cafe, we fhould be prepared to attack the enemy without a moment's delay—to harrafs not only by irregular troops, but to meet him in front—to hang on his flanks—to fuffer him not to advance even a mile into the country, without encountering all that gallantry, combined with fkill, can oppofe to his progrefs. It does appear to me, therefore, that corps of volunteers in the maritime counties are beft adapted for this fervice."

Tournfort mentions a Venetian conful, who refided at Smyrna, that lived to the age of 118 years, and never drank any thing but water; which is faid to be the univerfal and only liquor of the New Zealanders, who enjoy the moft perfect and uninterrupted health, entirely untainted with difeafe; not a fingle perfon having been feen by Captain Cook that had any bodily complaint; nor, among the numbers that prefented themfelves to that renowned navigator, in a ftate of nudity, was there an individual perceived who had even the ftighteft eruption upon the fkin, or the leaft mark which indicated that any had formerly exifted. It may perhaps be worthy of notice, that two of the moft athletic characters of antiquity, and a modern hero, whofe intrepidity was long the admiration of all Europe, were among the practical advocates of this wholefome element. That water is not an incentive to vice, like many of the liquors now in common ufe, and that its votaries are exempt from the difgrace of inebriety, has been obferved by Shakfpeare: "Honeft water," fays the immortal bard, "is too weak to be a finner; it ne'er left man i'th'mire;" whereas "ftrong drink," Solomon remarks, "is raging; and whofoever is deceived thereby is not wife."

The ancients ufually diluted their wines with a confiderable portion of water; a cuftom that even the "tuneful Telan," of far famed bucchanalian memory, appears to have fanctioned by his own example:

Bring hither, boy, a mighty bowl,
And let me quench my thirfty foul
Fifi two parts water, fill it high,
Add one of wine, for I am dry!
Thus let me limpid ftream allay
The jolly god's too potent fway.

ANACREON.

THE SEASONS.

EVERY feafon of the year, like the life of man, is intermixed, more or leffs, with beauties and deformities; with ftorms and funfhines; with fcenes both delightful and difagreeable. Spring, like youth, is the feafon of animation, fprightlinefs and mufic. Winter, like old age, has more of fears than of hopes, more of pains than of pleafures; its days and nights are tedious and joylefs; its profpects are depreffing and gloomy. In fummer, as in ripening manhood, all is fervid, vigorous and productive. Autumn, like the maturity of man, is tranquil and fedate. It preferits us firft with loaded branches of ripened fruits; and with fading beauties, falling leaves, nipping froffs, plaintive founds, dying infects, prowling tempefts, unmelodious groves, naked hills and pillaged fields. In the fading verdure of the woods; in the decaying, falling leaves of every tree, both the young and the old may view themfelves as in a mirror, and learn their frailty and rapid progrefs to diffolution. But however our bodies fade let our virtues flourifh.

WALKING IN SLEEP.

AMONG the inexplicable phenomena of nature, may be reckoned dreaming and walking in fleep, or the involuntary performance of actions while aftleep, which apparently require volition and reflection.

"I have feen a fonambule (fays Voltaire) but he contented himfelf with rifing, dreffing, bowing and dancing a minuet, which he performed very well. After this, he undreffed, vent to bed again, and continued to sleep.

In the French Encyclopædia is an account still more astonishing. A young collegian rose while asleep, in order to compose a sermon. He wrote it correctly, read it over from beginning to end, or at least appeared to read it, made corrections, erased lines, and substituted others; restored a word forgotten to its place, &c. He composed music, noted it correctly, after having ruled his paper with his cane, and placed the words under the notes without making any mistake.

The Irish angler.—By Peter Pindar.

AN Irishman angling one day in the Liffey,
Which runs down by Dublin great sea-fo fame,
A smart show'r of rain falling, Pat, in a jiffey,
Crept under the arch of a bridge with his line.

Why that's not the place to accomplish your wishes,
Cries Dermot—there devil a bite will you get:
Och bodder! lays Pat, don't you know that the fishes,
Will flock under here to keep out of the wet!

ANECDOTES.

The captain of a vessel lying in the river wishing to give his crew a treat on a rejoicing day, left two guns of Hibernia to take care of the ship, and told them they might have a double allowance of grog, but cautioned them against firing a gun, except there was reason to apprehend some great danger. This they faithfully promised; but after enjoying a hearty dinner, together with the perfumes of the liquor, one of them propoſed to have a ſhot to themſelves; which the other objected to, as it would make a great noiſe, but the moſt fertile in invention ſaid he could prevent that, and immediately placed the iron pot, uſed for cooking, on the mouth of the gun, and ſeating himſelf acroſs it held the pot by the ears, to prevent its flying off! he then requeſted his meſſmate to ſhoot eaſy, but the alarm was heard by the captain and crew, who haſtened on board, and enquired the reaſon of the alarm. "Murphy and I," anſwered Pat, "had a mind to have a bit of a ſhoot to ourſelves." "Where is Murphy?" ſaid the captain. "Where is Murphy!" replied the Iriſhman, ſmiling and ſcratching his head, "didn't you meet him now? faith he's juſt gone a ſhore on the iron pot!"

A BUTCHER's Boy, carrying his Tray on his ſhoulder, accidentally ſtruck it againſt a lady's head, and diſcompoſed her wig. "The dewce take the tray," cried the lady in a paſſion. "Madam," ſaid the lad, gravely, "The dewce cannot take the tray."

General Moreau was not disappointed in his expectations, for in June, 1794, he was promoted to the rank of General in Chief, and conducted the siege Ypres, which he took in 12 days after the opening of the trenches. The garrison, consisting of 6000 men, were made prisoners; and 100 pieces of cannon, and 29 standards, were taken. This event occured on the 29th Prairial, 2d year (17 June, 1794).

In the following August, he took Fort L'Ecluse, containing 152 pieces of artillery. It, however, this young general distinguished himself in a striking manner in all the different commands with which he was invested, in 1794 and 1795; the campaign of 1796 was destined to eclipse all his other atchievements. In June he commanded three columns of the army on the Rhine & Moselle; with one of these he attacked the Fort of Kehl, which soon after surrendered, with the second he crossed the Rhine at Watsteten; and with the third at Selt.

On the 28th of June, the great battle of Kenchen was fought; in which Gen Moreau, after having been joined by his cavalry and artillery, forced the Austrians to retreat in great disorder, with the loss of 12,00 prisoners, ten pieces of cannon, all their artillery, &c. The field of battle was covered with the slain.

July 5th, another general engagement took place between Gen Moreau and the Archduke Charles, when the Austrians were again completely defeated. From this victory he flew to a third, equally glorious, and more profitable to the French republic. Upon the Upper Rhine he forced the Duke of Wirtemburg to solicit a suspension of arms, on conditions which were as once honourable and useful to the republic; and while the army of the Sombre & Meuse were retreating under Jourdan, that of the Rhine and Moselle, under Moreau, was pursuing its victorious career, even to the gates of Ratisbon, thus shaking the German Empire to its centre.

It would occupy too much space in this volume, to be a detail of all those military operations in this campaign, which contributed to crown the brow of Moreau with unfading laurels. The most glorious epoch of his military history was his masterly retreat out of Bavaria, which in the judgment of his most venerated enemies, and of all military men, was far more honourable to his talents, than any victories which he has gained. Like Turenne, Moreau served the interests of his country, more by that retreat than by the most dazzling conquest; and if we account Turenne a consummate General, rather for his having kept in check superior bodies of the enemy, by his well concerted marches, and countermarches, than for any splendid victories obtained by him, we should in like manner attribute to Moreau the character of a great General, for his memorable retreat of 1796.

About the middle of September, affairs began to take an unfavourable turn; and Moreau, still now victorious, was forced to quit his position on the west bank of the Yser. He was pursued by the Austrian General Latour, and on the 29th, the enemy having made themselves masters of the highest part of the mountains of the Black Forrit, and of the rivulets, which running westward to the Rhine, form the only passes whereby an army can descend from their mountains to the Brisgau; Moreau had no other alternative than either to attack the Austrians, in order to obtain the Val d'Enfer, which descends into the Brisgau by the town of Fribourg, or to make his retreat by the territory of Switzerland. Finding himself closely pursued by Latour, Moreau attacked him, but was repulsed with great loss, while, on the other side, the Austrian General Petraich, posted between the sources of the Neckar and the Danube, incessantly harrassed the rear of the French. At this critical moment it was reported and believed that General Moreau was completely furrounded by the Austrians—that they muft capitulate—that no poffible art nor exertion could prevent their total defeat—and that not one of his foldiers would ever reach France to bring the news of the misfortune. Europe, however, foon witneffed the inexhauftible means and refources which are in the power of a truly great General.

Early on the fecond of Oftober the le wing of the army croffed the Danube at Reidlingen, and regaining it at Murderkingen, turned and defeated the corps which General Latour had poffed betwixt the Federfee and the river. The Auftrians then attacked him, in front, and after an action of fix hours, maintained with great obftinacy, he forced Latour to abandon his ground, and retire behind the Rochambach. Thus a retreating army, by the unexpected audacity of its General, took more than 5000 of its purfuers prifoners, together with 20 pieces of cannon.

General Moreau having thus far fucceeded in his defign, recommenced his march by the route of Stockach, and on the 18th Oftober reached Fribourg, and eftablifhed his head quarters at Furg.

Thus retreat will always be a memorable epoch in the annals of the Republic, and the name of Moreau will ftand confpicuous among the Bonaparten, the Turennes, the Marlboro's the Eugenes, the Villa fers, the Fredericks, and others the moft celebrated of modern Generals

We fhall finifh this article by recounting an anecdote, which does not leff honor to the character of Moreau, than his valorous military exploits atchieved within the compafs of fo fhort a period.

His unfortunate and virtuous father, before he was guillotined, made a will, in which he advifed, with paternal affection, that his fon fhould marry a lady whom he named to him. Moreau, like the dutiful fon and able General, quitted the army as foon as its duties would permit, came to Morlaix, fhed tears upon the grave of his father, and married the amiable lady who had been recommended as his father's will; Filial obedience is in common men a duty, in great men heroifm.

An invention, that promifes to be important to fhipping, has lately occupied the attention of the Board at Woolwich, in England. A plan has been preferted by a gentleman well acquainted with the fubject, for throwing a grapple or kedge anchor and hawfer a confiderable diftance off, from the mouth of a 12 pounder. The general opinion of the b ard is, that it will fucceed. The whole apparatus for trying the experiment has been ordered to be got ready, and the effect will fhortly be produced.

London Paper.

The following wholefome advice is copied from the wall of a country inn, where it was inferibed by the hand of a village fchool-maffer.—You will doubtlefs, with me, confider it as worth preferving.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER Esquire,
Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

To all whom it may Concern—GREETING:

WHEREAS by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the forty-fourth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act for granting to his Majesty a certain sum of money, out of the funds applicable to the uses of this Province, to defray the expences of amending and repairing the public highways and roads, laying out and opening new roads, and building bridges in the several districts thereof," it was amongst other things enacted, That from and out of the rates and duties then raised, levied and collected, or thereafter to be raised, levied and collected, to and for the uses of this Province, there be granted to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, the sum of one thousand pounds, to be issued out of the fund then remaining, or thereafter to come into the Receiver General's hands, unappropriated and arising from such rates and duties as last aforesaid; which said sum of one thousand pounds shall be disposed of, appropriated and applied in the repairing the roads already laid out, and in the laying out and opening new roads, and making bridges in the several districts aforesaid, in such manner, and under such regulations, as to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, with the advice and consent of the Executive Council thereof, shall from time to time seem meet: AND WHEREAS by the said Act it is further enacted, That at any time from and after the passing of that Act, it shall and may be lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, to issue one or more Proclamation or Proclamations, and therein to name such and so many persons as to him shall seem meet, for each and every of the aforesaid districts, as Commissioners for carrying the provisions of the said Act into execution:

Now Know Ye, That I, PETER HUNTER Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, by virtue of the powers to me vested in me as aforesaid, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council thereof, DO, by this my Proclamation, nominate and appoint his father lay upon her death bed, being importuned to send to medical assistance, he firmly replied, "Why should I waste my money in wickedly endeavouring to counteract the will of Providence?" Perhaps the dread of expence operated more powerfully upon him than his religious notions. During his infirmities, Lady Tempest accidentally called upon him, and finding him tying up to his neck in an old sack, without even a shirt, remonstrated against the impropriety of such a situation; when he replied, that "Having come into the world without a shirt, he determined to go out of it in the same manner." She then ordered him to have a pillow to rest his head, when he immediately ordered his old servant, Griffiths, to bring him a truss of hay for that purpose. Mr Dancer's house, which is now in the possession of Capt. Holmes, is a most miserable building, and has not been repaired for half a century; though poor in external appearance, it has, however, been recently discovered to be very rich within; Captain Holmes having, at different times, found large bowls filled with guineas and half guineas, and parcels of bank notes stuffed under the covers of old chairs. This singular man died in October 1794. Since his death, large pugs of dollars and shillings have been found in the house. As the dead of night he has been known to go to this place, but for what purpose, even old Griffiths could not tell. It now appears, however, that he used to rob one jug, to add to the hoard, which was, since his death, found buried in the kitchen. [London paper.

"LOSE not the time of your youth, but gather the whole harvest of virtue and knowledge which may be of use to yourself, and comfort to your friends, for the rest of your life. And that this may be the better effected, attend thereunto with patience, and be sure to correct and restrain yourself from anger. Suffer not sorrow to cast you down, but with chearfulness and good courage go on that race you have to run in all sobriety and truth. Be sure, with an hallowed care, to have regard to all of the commandments of God, and give not yourself to neglect them in the least things, lead by degrees you come to forbear them in the greater; for the heart of man is deceitful above all things. And in all your duties and devotions towards God, rather performe them joyfully than positively; for God loves a chearful giver. For your religion let it be directed according to that which still he taught by those which are in God's church the proper teachers thereof, rather than that you ever either fancy one to yourself, or be led by men that are singular in their own opinions, and delight to go out of their own finding out; for you will certainly find falsehood and error in the one, and much unprofitableness and vanity in the other."

PEAR TREES.

Trenton, March 2d, 1804.

FRIEND WILSON,

AS I came from Philadelphia at the commencement of the last sitting of the Legislature, I viewed with sorrow great part of the Pear Trees in sight of the road, injured by the bad luck to destructive to that valuable fruit, and as I have preserved my trees of that kind of fruit from that malady for more than thirty years past, by an accidental discovery, I conceive it my duty to communicate it to the public, through your paper, if you think the relation worth the trouble.

On my plantation was a great number of Pear Trees which were continually blasting, and the limbs dying, until the greatest part were dead or in a state of decay; except one near the house which had from me of different kinds hung on it, such as old Sickles, Sythes, Hoops, &c. which tree kept entirely free from the aforesaid misfortune: this induced me to try others by hanging any iron of a proper form for the purpose, such as nail rods, hoes, shoes, old hoops, or any such as would be most safe from falling, on most of the largest limbs, in such manner as not to bind and injure the tree. Since that was done I have not perceived the blast to injure them, and many trees which were previously all dead except the trunk, or nearly so, are now and have been for more than twenty years past in a flourishing condition. The reason I leave to others; but the fact is so well proved by near or quite thirty years experience, the labor and expence so trifling, that I earnestly recommend it; and am

PATENT HEMP AND FLAX BREAK.

MR. OWEN ROBERTS, of Baltimore, has obtained a patent for the invention of a "Hemp and Flax break," which promises to be of an great utility to the United States, as any machine hitherto invented, on a model so simple. It may be erected at a comparatively trifling expence, and when in complete operation, will clear six or eight thousand weight of Hemp daily, with the assistance of only six hands. No manual labor is necessary, except turning and hitting the Hemp; the rollers and breakers being wrought by a horse, or water, and so constructed, as to work any number, by throwing them out of gear, as occasion may require.

It is hoped that a conviction of the utility of this invention will entitle it to the patronage of every friend to the infant arts and manufactures of his country.

THE BRITISH SAILOR.

BY THE LATE REV. D. CROSSFIELD.

Liquid mountains roll,
Shake from your heads the hoary spray;
Ye cannot daunt the Seaman's soul,
Though danger spreads the pathless way.

Vivid lightnings flash,
Blow tempests, hollow thunders dire,
The Seaman braves the dreadful crash,
Though billows to the clouds aspire.

Rife, pointed rocks, arife,
Affaulted by the foaming surge;
Sailors your Sixty Sides defpife,
When friendship, love, and honour urge.

Roar, thundering cannons, roar,
Death-dealing bullets whistle round;
Let Cowards with themselves no more,
A British Sailor loves the sound.

Lateſt Intelligence.

LONDON, April 7.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, April 16.

Lord Mulgrave called the attention of his Houſe to the charges which had been made againſt this country, by the French, reſpecting the alleged conduct of Mr. DRAKE, his Majeſty's Minister at Munich; and demanded of Miniſters to demonſtrate to the world, that they had not acted in behalf of the aſſaſſin:—that they had not ſanctioned the dagger in the dark; but, on the contrary, conducted their Syſtem of hoſtilities in that fair, open and manly manner, which belongs to legitimate warfare.

Mr. ADDINGTON, Chancellor of the Exchequer, &c. "did feel, that it was the highest obligation, upon the noble Lord, for the opportunity he has given to the public at large, and to this Houſe, has afforded me of then publicly repelling and refuting the moſt baſe and unfounded charge that ever had been brought againſt the government of any civilized country. If we ſay that the hands of Miniſters are tied up from making any ſtatement of the unprovoked inſult and injury which have been offered to us, we will forgive, indulgence will be extended to us by the ſoul and ſenſeleſs calumnies of the moſt wicked and tyrannical government that ever was eſtabliſhed in the annals of civiliſed people. The ſervants of His Majeſty ſpurn at ſuch a charge, and will appeal to their character and their honor, for a refutation of it. With the noble Lord's request, I now deſire with a few conſiderations, and with a few words more, that no falſe Aſſaſſination may have been laid to the British Government, or to any of its reſpected agents, intended with the ſword of its vengeance abroad, intended with the ſword men, therefore in London, whatever the Physicians and Surgeons of Paris may be forced to assert, have no difficulty in declaring openly, unequivocally, and positively, that another man or men of have put Gen. Pichegru to death.

The following is the circular letter of the British Government respecting the correspondence of Mr. Drake, alluded to in yesterday's Mercantile Advertiser :—

LONDON, MAY 5.

CIRCULAR NOTE,

Addressed to the Ministers of Foreign Courts resident at the Court of London.

SIR, Downing street, 30th April, 1804.

The experience which all Europe has had of the conduct of the French government, would have induced his Majesty to pass over in silence, and to treat with contempt all the accusations which that Government might have made against his Majesty's Government, if the very extraordinary and unauthorized replies which several of the Ministers of the Foreign Powers have thought proper to make to a recent communication from the Minister for Foreign Affairs at Paris, had not given to the subject of that communication a greater importance than it would otherwise have possessed.—His Majesty has in consequence, directed me to declare that he hopes he shall not be reduced to the necessity of repelling with merited scorn and indignation 'the atrocious and utterly unfounded calumny, that the Government of his Majesty have been a party to plans of assassination.' An accusation already made with equal falsehood and calumny by the same authority against the Members of his Majesty's Government during the last war—an accusation incompatible with the honor of his Majesty, and the known character of the British nation, and so completely devoid of any shadow of proof, that it may be reasonably presumed to have been brought forward at the present moment, for no other purpose than that of diverting the attention of Europe, from the contemplation of the sanguinary deed which has recently been perpetrated by the direct order of the First Consul in France, in violation of the rights of nations, and in contempt of the most simple laws of humanity and honor.

That his Majesty's government should disregard the feelings of such of the inhabitants of France as are justly discontented with the existing government of that country—that they should refuse to listen to their designs for delivering their country from the degrading yoke of bondage under which it groans, or to give them aid and assistance, as far as those designs are fair and justifiable, would be to refuse fulfilling those duties which every wise and just government owes to itself and to the world in general, under circumstances similar to the present, belligerent powers have an acknowledged right to avail themselves of all discontents that may exist in countries with which they may be at war. The exercise of that right (even if in any degree doubtful) would be fully sanctioned in the present case, not only by the present state of the French nation, but by the conduct of the government of that country, which, since the commencement of the present war, has constantly kept up communications with the disaffected in the territories of his Majesty, particularly in Ireland, and which has assembled at this present moment on the coasts of France a corps of Irish rebels, destined to second them in their designs against that part of the United Kingdom.

Under these circumstances, his Majesty's government would be unjustifiable, if they neglected the right they have to support, as far as is compatible with the principles of the law of nations, which civilized government have hitherto acknowledged, the efforts of such of the inhabitants of France as are hostile to the present government. They earnestly desire, as well as all Europe, to see an ordered things established in that country more compatible with its own happiness, and with the security of the surrounding nations—but if that wish cannot be accomplished, they are fully authorized by the strictest principles of defensive defence, to endeavour to cripple the exertions, to obstruct the operations, and to confound the plans of a government, whose system of warfare, as acknowledged by itself, is not only to distress the commerce, to diminish the power, and to abridge the dominion of its enemy, but also to carry devastation and ruin into the very heart of the British Empire.

In the application of these principles his Majesty has commanded me to declare, besides, that his Government have never authorized a single act which could not stand the test of the strictest principles of justice and of usages recognized and practised in all ages. If any Minister accredited by his Majesty at a foreign court has kept up correspondence with persons resident in France, with a view to obtain information upon the designs of the French Government, or for any other legitimate object, he has done nothing more than what ministers, under similar circumstances, have always been considered as having a right to do with respect to the countries with which their Sovereign was at war, and he has done much less than that which it could be proved the ministers and commercial agents of France have done towards the disaffected in different parts of his Majesty's territories; thus in carrying on such a correspondence, he would not have in any manner violated his public duty. A minister in a foreign country is obliged by the nature of his office and the duties of his situation, to abstain from all communication with the disaffected of the country where he is accredited, as well as from every other act injurious to the interests of that country; but he is not subject to the same restraints, with respect to countries with which his Sovereign is at war. His actions to them may be praiseworthy or blameable, according to the nature of the actions themselves; but they do not constitute any violation of his public character, except in as far as they militate against the country, or the security of the country, where he is accredited.

But of all the Governments which pretend to be civilized governments, that of France is the one which has the least right to appeal to the Law of Nations. With what confidence can it appeal to that Law? a Government which, from the commencement of hostilities, has never ceased to violate it! It promised protection to the British subjects resident in France, and who might be desirous of remaining there after the recal of His Majesty's Ambassador. It revoked that promise without any previous notice—it condemned those same persons to be prisoners of war; and it detains them still in that quality, in contempt of its own engagements, and of the usages universally observed by all civilized nations.—It has applied that new and barbarous law, even to individuals who had the authority and protection of the French Ambassadors and Ministers at Foreign Courts to travel through France on their return to their own country. It commanded the seizure of an English packet-boat in one of the ports of Holland, though its Ambassador in that country had previously engaged to let the packet-boats of the respective countries pass in perfect safety until notice should be given to the contrary. It has detained and condemned in one of the ports of France, a vessel which had been sent thither as a matter of indulgence, in order to carry to France the French governor of one of the different islands which have been conquered by his Majesty's arms.

Its conduct relative to the garrison of St. Lucia has not been less extraordinary; the principal fort of that island had been taken by assault, yet the garrison had been allowed all the privileges of prisoners of war, and had been permitted to return to France, with an understanding that an equal number of English prisoners should be released. Yet, notwithstanding that indulgence on the part of the British commander, to which, by the nature of the case, the French garrison could not have the slightest pretension, not a single prisoner has been restored to this country.

Such have been the proceedings of the French Government towards the power with which it was at war. What has its conduct been to those powers with which it remained at peace? Is there a treaty it has not broken? Is there an adjoining territory whose independence it has not violated? It is for the powers of the Continent to determine how long they will tolerate these unexampled outrages. Yet is it too much to say, that if they do suffer without controul or resistance the continuance of such a course of proceedings on the part of any government whatever, they will soon see an end to that salutary system of public right, in virtue of which the societies of Europe have maintained and enforced for ages, the sacred obligations of humanity and justice. (Signed) HAWKESBURY.

Lady Granville—A dreadful accident happened easly yesterday morning, in Manchester-street. About four o'clock, as the watchman was going his rounds, he discovered some smoak issuing from one of the windows on the second floor of Lady Granville's house. Being alarmed at the circumstance, the man knocked violently at the door. Sometime, however, elapsed, before he succeeded in arousing the servants. On being admitted, the watchman, with others got buckets of water, and proceeded up stairs, where, melancholy to relate, they found Lady Granville lying on the floor burnt to death, and in a manner too shocking to describe. The room was set in flames when they entered; one of the chairs only was consumed, supposed to be that on which her Ladyship sat: a book was found partly destroyed. It is supposed that the unfortunate Lady had been reading in her apartment until that late hour, and, that sleep overpowering her, the candle communicated to her clothes.

GREENOCK, April 18.

An overland dispatch from Bombay is received at the India House, dated 3d December. It contains the official account of the affair in Ceylon; and what is of greater importance, General Lake has pushed his successes on the Upper Ganges with much vigor. A battle was fought on the 18 November at Cassowly, in which the enemy was totally routed; but we are sorry to find with the loss of several valiant officers and brave soldiers on our part. The regiments in India being chiefly Scotch, many persons in this country will have to re-ret the fall of friends. But the most important part of the dispatch is the advice of an armistice being concluded between General Wellesley and Scindia; the particulars of which as well as those of the other events have not yet been published. It seems likely that the Mahrattas would be swayed in this truce by the progress of Gen. Lake; and we are thus happily relieved from all anxiety respecting Gen. Wellesley. We confess, we thought the war on the Upper Ganges at an end after the first action; and that it was not so, appears to have been owing to the dependence of those forces on Scindia's co operation.

SWITZERLAND April 18.

By the Hamburgh mail received yesterday we learn that Switzerland was in a state of insurrection. The absence of the French troops was made the signal for revolt. In the cantons of Berne, Soleure, Argau, Freyburgh, &c. the boldness of the insurgents is astonishing. They every where prevent the people from taking the oath of allegiance to the New Constitution. In the night of the 24th some of the disaffected set fire to the Castle of Widenschweel, on the lake of Zurich: and the last accounts state that the Landemann, unable to resist the torrent, had solicited the return of the French army.

TRINIDAD, May 12.

On Thursday arrived the brig Mary-Ann, from Glasgow and Cork (late of the Cork fleet). The dreadful calamity that has happened to this fleet is of the most distressing nature: We have been favored with the following particulars.

Extract of a letter from a passenger on board of the ship Thomas, of Lancaster, dated at sea, 22d of April—L. 22, long. 32, 30.

"We sailed from Cork, under convoy of the Carysfort and Apollo on the 26th March. The fleet consisted of 69 vessels, including the men of war. We had a fine breeze from the N. E. the first two of three days; the wind then came round to the westward, and on Sunday the 1st April, the day previous to the accident, we had it at S. W by W. We had hitherto steered a much more southerly course than usual, and this wind obliged us either to tack or to make still more so. The reckoning of longitude, this day at noon, differed confiderably some were in 96, 97 from and others as far as 12 odd west longitude. The Carysfort calculated in the latter, but we have not ascertained that of the Apollo, which was the leading ship of the fleet, and made all sail. In the evening we anxiously expected a signal to tack; none however was made, and we of course continued with our starboard tacks on — in the course of the night, the wind increased to a strong gale, and a very heavy swell set in from the westward. Our top sails were handed about three o'clock, the gartels of the main-topsail-yard having first given way—it was owing to this accident that our veffel was saved, for the men fent up to repair the damage, difcovered the breakers on the lee-bow, much sooner than they could be seen from the deck. The ship instantly wore, but in going round she struck by two of the breakers, and did some other damage to the rigging, &c. This was between 3 and 4 o'clock, when it was quite dark, and impossible to difcover the fate of the other ships, except one upon the rocks very near us, and the sea confiantly breaking over her. After we had wore, the Apollo paffed on the opposite tack, a little to the windward of us: she however did not observe our lights or the guns we fired: she stood on till out of sight, and soon afterwards we heard the guns from her, feral moft likely as signals of distress. Our ship now became her difcovered, which was very fortunate for us, as we had only one anchor left, and that, except the forebank, good. We had proceeded some distance from the coast before day light, but to thofe unfkill that were near, a moft dreadful fcene was prefented. Several captains counted 28 veffels on the breakers, and more than 40, not one efcaped unbroached. We find there are 50 miffing ships, including the Apollo. There not being able to get a lift of them, but you will receive inclosed a lift of thofe that are fafed and have joined the fleet, now under convoy of the Carys fort. The breakers were the moft tremendous I have ever feen, and I fear the crews of all the veffels that were on them near the place was every one loft, thank providence. Poor old — in one of the miffing, ships, and in one of them I am told there were on loft three cabin ladies."

Lift of the ships saved.

Alfred, Racoritia, Port, Thetis, Hero, Pomona, Mary-Ann, Duke, Hermes, Liberty, and Diana, from Glasgow.—Loe, Sally, Maxwell, Alchymift, and Royal Edward, from Liverpool.—Loyalty, Briftol, Martha Brae, Simon Taylor, St. Elizabeth, Clarendon, Ann, Roberta, and Sally, from Briftol. Pagan, and Thomas, from Lancaster.—Bess, and Farrio from Dublin—Betty, Ayr—Elizabeth, Boyd, and Garland, from Greenock—Adlove, from Cork—Clamorgan, Mentor, John, and Ann, from London —Lady Twemorne, from White Haven.

We've the pleasure to congratulate the public on the establishment of fignal posts from Fort Abercrombie, on the north shore, to town and on the arrangements of such fignals as will convey in a very short space of time, notice of any number of veffels which may appear in view of this port. The utility of such an establishment is of the moft important nature, and highly characteristic of the perfevering exertions of government for the public welfare.

NEW-YORK, June 16.

The British ships Cambrian, of 44 guns, Capt. BRADLEY, and driver, of 18 carronades, Capt. LYAL, have arrived at New-York from Halifax, and anchored near the two French frigates there. JEROME BONAPARTE, who had embarked, it is faid landed again. The British ship Leander, of 30 guns, was expected at New-York from Halifax.

The British frigate Boston, of 32 guns, Capt. Douglas, arrived at New-York on Monday last. The blockade of the French frigates has commenced. The Boston is faid to have fprung one of her Maffs.

The French frigate La Didon is remarkable for being the fwifteft failing veffel belonging to the Republic.

The British ship Pitt, from Greenock, which arrived here on Sunday, was detained from the Cambrian frigate and a number of hands impressed.

The Pilots who were on board the British frigate Cambrian and sloop of war Driver, received orders yesterday to be in readiness to conduct said vessels out within 24 hours after the sailing of the French frigate Didon and Sybille: in consequence of which they were put on board, and the vessels proceeded for sea without pilots. The wind being sufficiently fair, they probably anchored during the evening at Gedney's Hook: indeed what is very singular, shortly after the Brooklyn ferry went down, the French frigates came up from Staten Island, & anchored near the light—probably with an intention of making their escape through the Sound the first fair wind.

The Driver is ordered on a cruize, leaving the Cambrian of 44s and Boston of 32 guns to watch the movements of the two 44's.

By the Ottawa, which arrived here yesterday from Dublin, we have received the London dates of the 13th May,—which contain London dates to the 27th April; seven days later than before received.

Of the invasion very little was written. It was said, an embargo preparatory to the sailing of the expedition was laid by England, and taken place in all the northern ports of France:—On the other hand it was rumored, that many of the French troops lately on the coast had marched into the interior towards the Rhine and Switzerland.

The prosperous situation in Great-Britain and Ireland to repel invasion had not abated in number or spirit.—

Official accounts has been received of the very brilliant success of the British arms, in India, and of the recapture of Goree, on the coast of Africa.

A very solemn and splendid funeral service had been performed in the Roman Catholic chapel in London, for the repose of the soul of the late Duke of Enghien, murdered by order of Buonaparte. All the emigrant Princes, Nobility, and gentry, in England, were present, excepting the Princes of Condé and the Duke of Bourbon, grandfather and father of the deceased Duke, who were sick. The number of the English nobility and others present, was prodigious, of whom 800 were ladies.

On the night of the 13th ultimo, a fire broke out in a house in Saint John Street, Quebec, occupied by Frederick Diedhart, Hatter. The flames had made such progress before assistance arrived, that it was utterly impossible to save that house, and the roofs of the surrounding houfes being in only combustible them, from the dryness of the weather, soon took fire. The wind, which blew rather briskly in the evening, had fortunately subsided before the breaking out of the fire; so almost a perfect calm, otherwise, according to all probability, a great part of the town would have been destroyed, notwithstanding the laudable exertions of every description of perfons in the city and garrison. Four dwelling houfes, one on each side of the Street; together with several outhouses, have been completely burnt down, and three others much damaged.

The loss of property is not to an extent to be felt as a great public loss; but it is a heavy, very heavy loss, to the individuals more immediately concerned; fome of whom are left without the means of procuring the abfolute necessaries, for loft the comforts of life, at an age when they are, of themselves, no longer able to begin the world anew but in company with fome affiftant.

The following Proclamation was iſſued after the Britiſh had become poſſeſſed of the Dutch ſettlement of Surrinam.

PROCLAMATION.

Whereas the ſettlement of Surrinam and its dependencies, has ſurrendered to the arms of his Britannic Majeſty, and thereby become a colony of the United Kingdom of Great Britain & Ireland, we have judged neceſſary by theſe preſents, to enjoin all the good inhabitants of this place, to conduct themſelves with regularity and tranquility, and as behoves the loyal ſubjects of his ſaid Majeſty.—We do further give them the fulleſt aſſurance, that their profeſſions and property ſhall in every reſpect be ſecure, and protected, for which purposes the ſtricteſt orders have been given to the troops—and that the intereſts of the inhabitants of Surrinam, as his Majeſty's ſubjects, have been particularly recommended to us.

We do alſo make known to all perſons that the government of this colony and its dependencies is to be held by Major General Sir Charles Green, until his Majeſty's pleaſure is known.

GIVEN under our hands at Head Quarters Paramaribo, the 7th May, 1804, and in the 44th year of his Majeſty's Reign.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

Signed, CHARLES GREEN.

Lateſt Intelligence.

LONDON, April 3.

The following farther particulars of the late Action in the Eaſt Indies, is extracted from the Bombay Courier of the 5th of October.

After a merited compliment to the gallant enterprize of General Wellesley and to the steady & perseverering bravery of his troops, the Gazette continues as follows :—

"The whole of Gen. Wellesley's force conſiſted of four battalions of native infantry (one battalion having been left in charge of the baggage at a ſmall village about four miles in the rear,) a ſmall detachment of artillery, four regiments of cavalry, and his Majeſty's 74th and 78th regiments, whilſt the enemy could not have amounted to leſs than 40,000 men, with a well appointed park of artillery of upwards of 90 pieces of cannon. In our laſt Gazette we ſtated that Major General Wellesley's army on the 17th ult. was encamped on the banks of the Cadavery, waiting the arrival of Capt. Hill with ſupplies ; that officer fortunately joined the following day ; when ſoon afterwards the army began their march, the General having obtained information that Scindiah had detached his cavalry towards the Adjunty Paſs, and that he meant to follow immediately with the main body of the army, formed the deſign of ſurpriſing him ; and on the 23d, after a march of ſeventeen miles, they came up with Scindiah's army. When General Wellesley came up with the enemy, he found them encamped in a very ſtrong poſition ; in the front, right, and rear, it was protected by a very deep nullah or ravine. General Wellesley, on obſerving the poſition of the enemy, and depending on the tried valour and diſcipline of his officers and men, inſtantly determined on the attack ; forming his line on the enemy's left ; on which movement Scindiah immediately ſent away his baggage, and prepared to oppoſe the General's attack. The Britiſh line was formed with much judgment in the following order : —The firſt line conſiſted of the picquets, the 1ſt battalion of the 8th regiment, and his Majeſty's 78th regiment. The ſecond line conſiſted of his Majeſty's 74th regiment, the 2d battalion of the 12th regiment, and the 1ſt battalion of the 4th regiment ; and the third line conſiſted of the cavalry. In this order the whole advanced about half paſt two o'clock, and perhaps a leverer battle was never fought in India. General Wellesley's firſt line advancing under a heavy cannonade upon fifteen battalions of infantry, a train of artillery of upwards of 90 guns, exceedingly well ſerved with round and grape, and the whole body of the enemy's cavalry ; but all thoſe were inſufficient to reſiſt the Britiſh troops, who ſoon gained a moſt glorious victory, the enemy leaving them in entire poſſeſſion of the field of battle, and 90 pieces of remarkably fine braſs ordnance of different calibres. It is with concern we ſtate that Lieut. Col. Maxwell fell at the very moment when ſucceſs had attended a moſt ſpirited charge to which he had led the cavalry, leaving behind him a well-earned reputation as a brave and gallant officer, and the ſincere regret of his brethren in arms. The enemy fled with ſuch precipitation, that it is ſuppoſed they did not carry off a ſingle gun. It is ſaid that Scindiah is retreating towards the Adjunty Paſs. Gen. Wellesley, whoſe active ſpirit was conſpicuouſly diſplayed wherever the battle raged, had his horſe ſhot under him during the engagement ; and indeed almoſt every mounted officer in camp loſt one or two horſes. At the period theſe accounts came away, no probable eſtimate could be made of the enemy's loſs, but it muſt have been great indeed, from the charge of our cavalry and infantry, which was executed with wonderful effect."

April 5.

Laſt night ſome further diſpatches were received at the India Houſe from the Governor General of Bengal, brought by the ſhip Union, arrived from that Preſidency. They contain the particulars of the ſucceſſes obtained by Gen. Lake, on the 4th and 11th of September laſt, over the army commanded by Gen. Perron. It appears that the capture of the ſtrong and important fort of Ally Ghur, was effected by aſſault on the 4th of September, after an obſtinate reſiſtance on the part of the garriſon. The attack was led by Col. Monſon, at the head of a detachment of the 76th regiment, and prodigies of valour were diſplayed by our troops in the ſevere conflict that took place. We regret, however, to find that this advantage was not achieved without conſiderable loſs on our part, many valuable Officers and brave men having fallen on the occaſion. Benetrating ſtill farther into the Country, Gen. Lake was, in his turn, attacked on the 11th by a body of the enemy, who had croſſed the Jumna from Delhi, for that purpoſe. The aſſault upon our out-poſts appears to have been made with vigour, under the direction of M. Lewis, a French Officer ; but the enemy were ſoon repulſed with the loſs of between fifty and ſixty pieces of cannon.

The poſſeſſion of Delhi was the immediate fruit of our victory, obtained in the neighbourhood of that place, the enemy having previouſly fled from it. The King of Delhi, formerly called the Great Mogul, and who has ſo long been in a kind of State Captivity by the Mahratta Princes, has very properly been reinſtated, and, at his own deſire, placed under the protection of the Britiſh. General Lake had his firſt audience of his Majeſty on the 16th. He was received on the occaſion by the reſtored Monarch with all poſſible honour, and reſpect, and the whole of his family expreſſed themſelves highly gratified at the happy change that had thus taken place in their fortunes.

April 20.

The French Princes.—His Royal Highneſs Monſieur, brother to the King of France, was the only one of the French Princes who received information by the Hamburgh mail of Tueſday laſt, concerning the melancholy fate of his relative, the late Duke of Enghien.—With agoniſed feel ngs he went in the evening to Wanſtead-houſe to communicate the ſad tidings. He was met at the door by the Duke of Bourbon, who preceiving grief and ſorrow marked on every feature immediately anticipated the cruel fate of his ſon. Without hearing or uttering a word, he locked himſelf up in his ſtudy, and there gave a vent to his ſorrow. His groans and ſobs were heard by thoſe outſide, who in vain implored access, in order to adminiſter conſolation to his afflicted mind.—Monſieur himſelf, though long verſed in misfortune, ſtood in need of friendly ſupport ; but with that laudable reſignation which has always diſtinguiſhed him, and ſumming up reſolution, he entered the apartment of the Prince de Conde, and with apparent compoſure he thus addreſſed him—"You know, my uncle, I have to deplore the murder of a brother, of a ſiſter, of a ſiſter-in-law, and of a nephew." His Royal Highneſs the Prince de Conde, judging what this preface led to, interrupting him, exclaimed—"My grandſon is no more ; I have no more poſterity !" So ſaying, he fell into the arms of the Chevalier de Conti, who attended Monſieur. Half an hour paſſed before he recovered, and burſt into a flood of tears. Upon his recovery, he apologiſed to Monſieur for his weakneſs, aſſuring him they were the firſt tears he had ſhed ſince the murder of Lewis XVI. The Prince, being extremely ill, was put to bed, and Monſieur paſſed the night at Wanſtead houſe in hopes, of ſeeing the Duke of Bourbon, who remained ſhut up in his apartment until ten o'clock on Wedneſday morning ; he then conſented to ſee Monſieur ; but when they met neither could utter a word.

Monſieur parted from him, went in his carriage, and the Duke retired to his chamber, where he remained yeſterday morning inconſolable. The Duke and Prince are attended by a phyſician and a ſurgeon, who do not permit them to ſee each other. Monſieur was rather better on Thurſday, and received the viſits of the Duke of Orleans, of the Duke de Montpenſier, and the Count de Beaujolois. This day the French Princes and thoſe loyal emigrants who have the means of doing ſo, will go in mourning for the Duke of Enghien, this laſt royal victim of the atrocious monſter whom Providence has ſo long ſuffered to chaſtiſe the world ; and next week funeral ſervice will be celebrated in commemoration of the royal martyrdom of his highneſs. Laſt Tueſday, Monſieur received a letter from his Majeſty the King of France, dated Warſaw, March 31ſt.

His Majeſty had then heard of the attempt of the Corſican Uſurper, thro' the medium of emiſſaries at Berlin, but nothing more ; in that letter his majeſty ſays "I have written a long letter to the Duke of Enghien." Strange viciſſitudes of human life !—What a ſhort ſighted mortal is man !—Upon that very day the Duke of Enghien was before the tribunal of blood, convened by a mercileſs Corſican in France, to murder one of its beſt and moſt virtuous princes. Yet the Corſican tyrant lives, and the good people of Paris go as uſual to plays, to balls and to puppet-ſhows !

Solemn ſervice for the late Duke of Enghein.

Yeſterday a ſolemn ſervice, in honour of the late Duke of Enghein, was celebrated at the deſire of his Royal Highneſs Monſieur, brother to the King of France and Navarre, in the Roman Catholic Chapel, King-ſtreet, Portman-ſquare. The Biſhop of Montpellier officiated pontifically, aſſiſted by the venerable Archbiſhop of Narbonne, the Biſhop of Arras, Avranches, Nantz, Angouleme, Noyon, Rhodez, and Uzez. The Abbe de la Tuſſe, Chaplain to his Royal Highneſs, Monſieur, pronounced a brief but beautiful ſermon from the 21ſt and 22d verſes of the 9th chapter of the Firſt Book of the Maccabees.

Et fleverunt eum omnes populus Iſrael, planctu magno, et lugebant dies multos. Et dixerunt quo modo cecidit potens, qui ſalvum faciebat populum Iſrael.

The eloquent preacher, without entering into the particulars of the ſhort but brilliant career of this amiable and much lamented prince, drew tears from every eye, by the unaffected piety of his ſentiments, and his pathetic expreſſion. He confined himſelf to a view of this young hero, as a model of fidelity and devotion to his King, at a time when fidelity was ſo rare in moſt continental countries among ſubjects, and loyalty among princes. He recommended reſignation in ſufferings to the will of God, and confidence in the Divine juſtice, which never fail to avenge the innocent and puniſh the guilty. The preacher frequently burſt into tears, which interrupted his ſpeech. It is impoſſible to deſcribe the ſenſation produced by the following paſſage towards the cloſe of the ſermon :

"Speaking as I am, to Chriſtian Princes, and to Chevaliers always faithful to the religion of their anceſtors, as to the laws of honour, I will only call to your remembrance the laſt words of the hero whoſe untimely end we here deplore !—Oh, my God, preſerve my King and deliver my Country from the yoke of the foreigner !" He then added, "Let us all repeat this prayer to the God of Goodneſs : May the Almighty ſave our virtuous King, and preſerve his Majeſty from thoſe dangers which ſurround him !!! At theſe words the audience were deeply affected and overwhelmed with grief. In this pious and devout circle we obſerved his Royal Highneſs Monſieur, the Duke of Berry, Duke of Orleans, Duke De Montpenſier, Duke De Beaujolois, all the French Nobility, Earl and Counteſs of Kenmare, Dowager Marchioneſs of Donnegal, Lady Charlotte Browne, with a great number of the Engliſh Nobility of both ſexes. The Chapel could not contain one half of the company who preſented themſelves. The prince of Conde and the Duke of Bourbon were not preſent : they are indiſpoſed at Wanſtead Houſe, to which place, we underſtand, her Majeſty and the Royal Dukes frequently ſend to enquire after their health.

April 21.

Stone Expedition.

His Majeſty's ſhip Immortalite, with the ſtone ſhips, bombs and cutters, under the orders of Capt. Owen, ſailed from Dungeneſs on the morning of Thurſday, the 12th inſt. and anchored off Boulogne before the cloſe of the day. On their arrival, Commodore Morris made the ſignal for the boats of the blockading ſquadron (viz. Leopard, Kotyalus, Leda, Beine, Chiffonne, Autumo, Lark and Harpy) to aſſemble on board the Leopard, at 9 P. M. manned and armed. There had been a moderate breeze from E. N. E. all the day, but as the evening approached, it gradually died away, and at midnight it fell calm, nothing therefore could be attempted—the ſhips which had got under weigh were obliged to anchor, and the boats returned on board. Had the breeze continued, every thing would have ſeemed as favourable for the expedition as its projectors could have deſired. The ſpring tide was at its height about one o'clock—the water ſmooth, the night extremely dark, and only ten of the enemy's gun-boats were without the harbour ; but the Boulognese were doubtleſs fully apprized of what was going on, and well prepared for reſiſtance, as we obſerved lights at their numerous batteries long after midnight, and the next morning we diſcovered that they had got out an additional force of ten brigs, and forty-two luggers, making in all ſixty-two ſail, which were moored acroſs the mouth of the harbour in the ſtrongeſt poſition for its defence.

The enemy's coaſt exhibits a moſt intereſting ſcene of buſtle and exertion. They have now 109 veſſels out of Boulogne, and about 30 more lying off Vunmoreaux ; 25 of the former are brigs, yet the foreſt of maſts does not appear to be thinned in the leaſt. The calm continued the whole of yeſterday, and the attempt to ſink the ſtone ſhips muſt now at all events be deferred till the next ſpring tides ; if not altogether abandoned.

The mouth of the harbour of Boulogne is perfectly dry at low water, and the foundation ſo hard that we often obſerve carts and waggons paſſing to and fro, and people walking acroſs it at a conſiderable diſtance from the Pier Head ; of courſe, ſhould the ſtony maſſes be placed there (the wooden caſe of the ſhips ſurrounding them being burnt, as is intended) they would lie expoſed for ſome hours of the day and night, and could be eaſily blown by gun-powder and removed piece by piece, ſo as moſt admirably to aſſiſt in the repair of the Pier Head, and in the conſtruction of a formidable battery hard by at low water, at which the French are at this moment buſily employed.

Should the ſtone ſhips take ground more remote from the entrance of the harbour, it is the opinion of many, that there would yet be ample ſpace for the ſmall claſs of veſſels, which alone can enter this port, to find a ready paſſage at the proper time of tide as uſual, and that artificial rocks would not occaſion them the leaſt hindrance or annoyance.

DUBLIN, April 19.

The exertions of the Ordnance at the Tower is beyond all precedent. A manufactory of ſmall arms has been recently eſtabliſhed there, under the auſpices of Welleſley Pole, which already furniſhes at the rate of above three thouſand per week.

It was mentioned on Tueſday, that it was intended to fortify the Hill of Howth, which is capable of being made impregnable—other fortifications, it is ſaid, are to be erected from the coaſt at Dunleary along the Head of Bray.

A number of tons of dollars have been ſent down to Birmingham by the Canal, to be converted into crown pieces, at leaſt to receive the ſame impreſſions by the machinery of Mr. Boulton. This meaſure will tend to prevent the circulation of counterfeits ; as the effort of Mr. Boulton's machinery cannot be eaſily imitated by any ſecret apparatus ; and as no counterfeits executed abroad will be ſubmitted to the new impreſſion. But we much fear that the ſcarcity of ſilver will not entirely ceaſe, till a happy change in the ſituation of the country ſhall make it eligible to remove the reſtriction by which the bank of England is now prohibited from making its payments in money. It is, indeed true, that the rate at which theſe dollar crowns are to paſs in circulation is ſuch, as to leave ſmall temptation to export or melt them down as bullion.

The Directors of the Eaſt India Company have hired eight extra ſhips, bearing in all, 4638 tons, for the outward voyage of the preſent ſeaſon.

NEW YORK, June 25.

Mr. Finley, paſſenger in the Columbia, from Liſbon, informs, that the King of Naples and family had been ſeized by the French on a ſuſpicion of their having been concerned in the conſpiracy againſt the life of the Firſt Conſul. Mr. Finley had his news from the Imperial Conſul at Liſbon.

FROM THE QUEBEC GAZETTE.

DEMOCRACY AS EXECUTED IN FRANCE.

St. John's, Newfoundland, April 19.

We have been crowded here laſt year with French priſoners to the number of 400, 180 of which were taken from St. Peter's near this iſland, and the reſt from 14 veſſels, prizes to the ſquadron on this ſtation, ſuch as come from St. Domingo and Martinique were very ſa[illegible]. Among the paſſengers from the latter were two clergymen, one a Canon Regular, and the other a Capuchin, 83 years of age ; theſe were of the number of 363 prieſts tranſported to Guiana by the French Directory, on the 30th of March, 1798, of whom 168 died through want, ill uſage and malignity of the climate, in a few months after their arrival. Seventeen, who had ſome money, bribed their guards and made their eſcape in American veſſels, the reſt dragged a miſerable exiſtence on the ſkirts of a wood in a place called Conomama, 30 leagues diſtant from Cayenne, where they had neither drugs nor any kind of medical aſſiſtance, nor even any perſons to attend their ſick, dreſs their victuals or perform the drudgery requiſite for 14 perſons, ſtowed into a narrow hut, (for ſuch was the number in each ward.) Theſe offices of neceſſity and charity they cheerfully performed for each other while able, but when all were ſick in one hut, and none able to aſſiſt the other, you may judge of their unexampled diſtreſs, lying on dunghills, their fleſh a nurſery for maggots, which conſumed them inch by inch, and rendered them ſuch loathſome ſpectacles to the half living clergymen who viſited them from other huts, that they could remain no longer with them than was barely requiſite to adminiſter the comfort of Sacraments to them, and could ſcarcely find a ſound ſpot in their bodies to lay the facred oil on. Their ſcanty allowance of bread was very bad, the water much worſe ; the huts built for them without windows or doors, (to uſe a ſea phraſe) were neither wind nor water tight. They were conſtantly ſtung with venomous flies, ſurrounded with poiſonous inſects and ferocious animals of all kinds, especially with tygers and serpents of a most enormous size, which the soldiers who guarded them prevented from devouring them, and doing them the kindness of putting an end to their sufferings all at once. The dread of these huge serpents and tygers prevented them from going to the brook to wash their tattered linen, and they eat their salt meat (consisting of a half pound per day) raw, rather than run the risk of going to the forest to gather fuel.

At length the soldiers dying almost as fast as the priests, petitioned to be removed from this pestilential spot: this being granted, they were ordered to Syamanary, six leagues distant from their former residence, but on clearer ground, more free from stinging flies and less subject to the haunts of carnivorous animals. Such as were able to walk were compelled to perform the journey by land, and were goaded by the r barbarous drivers to hasten their feeble steps under a scorching sun without any more nourishment than was barely sufficient to keep them alive.—The sick were thrown into boats, and six who were past any hopes of recovery were left behind to the care of two black men, who never reached them even a drop of water during their long agony. Three of them lived fully six days in this deplorable condition. All the rest who arrived at Symanary, were jumbled together, like cattle in a pound, into an old deserted church, where they lay on the bare floor, until new huts were built for them of a worse construction than the former. The leopards of soldiers (to use the words of St. Ignatius) daily vented their spleen by curling, abusing them, and reviling them as the authors of their misfortunes and the causes of their exile into such an unwholesome climate. The only consolation they had was grounded on their strong faith, firm hope and on bearing mass by stealth on Sundays; for the very Reverend Doctor Hollinge, Rector Magnifick of the always famous University of Louvain, in Brabant, brought a Vestment with him; but after his most resigned and exemplary death, his Chalice, being of silver, was broke u and divided among a few of the soldiers.

However some of the ingenious among them contrived afterwards to make one out of an old kettle, and two sergeants disgusted with their own fate and the unheard of severity wherewith the poor priests were treated, permitted one of them to say mass for the rest who were able to crawl to it, without daring to be of the congregation themselves. In short no pen can describe or tongue express the miseries these poor priests underwent, not only here, but also on their passage from Rochfort to Cayenne, for three months, during which time they were crammed, like sheep into a pen between decks, and only allowed three hours per day to take the fresh air; they never received a single line from their friends, and knew not what became of them, or passed in the world no more than if they never belonged to it; 'tis true they well knew this was an oppressive world, for they daily felt the weight of its afflictions, but they likewise hourly sent their pious ejaculations, prayers and affections as messengers before them to announce their arrival to the better. Thus they spent three years and a half in Guiana, until the present government of France (first the intercession of some of their friends) sent a frigate called the Dedaigneuse, for them in the year 1800, which thro' the Governor's implacable hatred to the Christian religion and its ministers, left the most of them behind, under pretence of not being able to collect them from the distant places they were scattered to; and the captain of the frigate was in haste to depart, as he heard there was an English frigate on the coast closely watching him. But as soon as the frigate sailed, the Governor, Victor Hughes, famous for burying thousands alive, when commissary in Guadaloupe, sent them word he soon expected another vessel from France to take them all away; then he kept them between hope and despair of being ever relieved but by death, until the 27th of Oct. 1801, when he ordered them all to Cayenne, and then to Guadaloupe, along with some of his enemies in the most rotten and leaky vessel he could find. In vain did the captain protest against such a crazy tool, go he must, or incur the displeasure of Victor Hughes; he knew the man too well to dispute, and therefore ventured with his convicts, three in number (for no more survived) not for Guadaloupe, but for the next port to them; but they fortunately, by constant pumping, kept her on the water, until in four days time they arrived at Sariaam, which was then subject to the British, who, though they did not permit them to land, sent them a supply of fresh provisions, for such as they brought with them an Englishman would not feed his dog with, condemned their vessel, procured them a sound one, which they drew along-side, and shifted the priests and sailors into, and then steered for Martinique, likewise then under British government; where they got leave to land, and were most humanely and tenderly treated. People of all colours, ranks, sexes and conditions crowded to the wharf, to see the Cayenne convicts; but the bare sight of such miserable, half-starved, moving skeletons, dressed in old canvas jackets and trowsers, covered all over with vermin, unable to walk a step without support, wrung tears of compassion from every eye that beheld them. The English officers sympathized and lifted their hands to heaven in silent astonishment, and then asked was this the work of Robespierre: but on being told that he was dead long before they were transported, declared (tho' bad the French were) they never before thought they were so cruel as to protract pain and anguish to so great a length, and to reduce gentlemen to so deplorable a state for no other crime than being priests. Seven of this holy suffering group died in a few days after they landed, the rest were taken to the Capuchin Convent, where they were washed, perfumed and dressed in their respective Sacerdotal dresses and habits in 24 hours time. In short, the humane government, the clergy, nuns and laity vied with each other to try who would shew the greatest kindness. This short history I have gleaned from the journals of the aforementioned clergymen.

ANECDOTE.

THE celebrated Sir Thomas More was sent Ambassador to the Emperor, by King Henry the VIIIth. The morning he was to have his audience, knowing the power of wine, he ordered his servant to give him a good large glass of sack—and having drank that called for another. The servant, with officious ignorance, would have dissuaded him from it, but in vain. The Ambassador drank off the second, and demanded a third, which he likewise drank off—desisting on the fourth, he was over persuaded by his servant to let it alone—so he went to his audience. But when he returned home, he called for his man, and threatened him with his cane! 'You rogue, said he, what mischief you have done me—I spoke to the emperor, on the insipuration of those three glasses that I drank; he told me I was fit to govern three parts of the world. Now, you dog, if I had drank the fourth glass I should have been fit to govern all the world!'

CHANGE IN THE MINISTRY.

London, May 15.

At the court at the Queen's palace, the 14th of May, 1804, present, the King's most excellent majesty in council.

This day the right hon. George earl of Winchilsea and Northingham, groom of the stool to his majesty, and the right hon. George Tyrone, comptroller of his majesty's household were by his majesty's command, sworn of his majesty's most honorable privy council, and took their respective places at the board accordingly.

His majesty having been pleased to appoint the right honorable Dudley lord Harrowby, and the right honorable John Jeffries earl Camden, two of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, they were this day by his majesty's command, sworn two of his majesty's principal secretaries of state accordingly.

The king has been pleased to constitute and appoint the right hon. William Pitt, George Percy, esq. (commonly called lord Lovaine) James Edward Harris, esq. (commonly called Viscount Fitz Harris,) the right hon. C. Long and the hon. Henry Wellesley, to be commissioners for executing the office of treasurer of his majesty's exchequer.

The king has been pleased to constitute and appoint the Right Hon. Henry Viscount Melville, Sir Philip Stephens, Bart. James Gambier, Esq. Vice Admiral of the Red squadron of his Majesty's fleet; Sir Harry Neale, Bart. Sir John Colpoys, Knight of the most honorable order of the Bath, and Admiral of the Blue squadron of his Majesty's fleet; Philip Patton, Esq. Vice Admiral of the Red squadron of his Majesty's fleet; and William Domett, jun. Esq. to be his Majesty's Commissioners for executing the office of High Admiral of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the dominions, islands, and territories thereunto belonging.

From a London Paper of May 28.

The following important paragraph we copy from the Portsmouth paper. It shews a laudable intensity of vigilance on the part of Government:

"The following order issued to the ships at Spithead this morning is of more serious expectation than any that has been known for these seven years that threatened:—To haste up buoys to the cables; to keep the top gallant yards across; clear for action every evening at sun set; the signal for unmooring to be considered as the signal for action; and to keep in momentary readiness for putting to sea, in that case it may be expected to be engaged with the enemy."

It was yesterday reported in the city that Government had received some indirect overtures from France on the subject of Peace, said to have been made thro' the American Minister at Paris. After the dish big state enquiries, we could not learn that the rumour was deserving of much credit.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER,
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith:—

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Counsellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to the Provincial Parliament at our Town of York, on the tenth day of August next, to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you—

GREETING:

WHereas by our Proclamation bearing date the twenty-seventh day of June last, We thought fit by & with the advice of our Executive Council to prorogue our said Provincial Parliament until the tenth day of this present month of August, at which time in our Town of York you were held and constrained to appear, but we taking into our Royal consideration, the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice and content of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you and each you that on the Seventeenth day of September next ensuing you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our said Province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary. Herein fail not.

IN Testimony whereof, WE have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto Affixed:—WITNESS Our Trusty and Well-Beloved PETER HUNTER Esquire, Our Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Lieutenant General Commanding Our Forces in Our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at YORK, this Third day of August, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Four, and in the Forty-fourth Year of Our Reign.

P. H.

WM. JARVIS, Secretary.

UPPER CANADA.

NOTICE is hereby given that the Commissioners for the Home District, appointed by a certain Statute of the Provincial Legislature, passed during the Session of the present year, intituled, "An Act for granting to His Majesty a certain sum of Money out of the Funds "applicable to the uses of this Province in defray "ing the expences of amending and repairing the Public "Highways and Roads, laying out and opening new "Roads and building Bridges in the several Districts "thereof" are ready to receive Proposals from any Person or Persons disposed to contract for the opening and repairing the Road and building Bridges between the Town of York and the head of BURLINGTON BAY.

Such Proposals must state at what prices the Party desirous of undertaking the aforesaid work, will engage to finish and complete the same, and must consist of the following particulars, viz

At what Price per Mile such Person will open and clear out such part of the Road leading from Lot Street, adjoining the Town of York (beginning at Peter Street) to the Mouth of the Humber, of the width of 33 feet, as shall not be found to stand in need of any causeway.

With the price also per Rod at which such Party will engage to open, clear out, and causeway such other part of the same Road as shall require to be causewayed, and the last mentioned price to include as well the opening and clearing out as the causewaying such Road. The causeway to be 18 feet wide; as also the price at which any Person will engage to build Bridges upon the said Road of the width of eighteen feet.

And the said Commissioners will also receive Proposals from any Person or Persons willing to engage in cut down three Hills at the following Places, viz one at the Sixteen Mile Creek; another between the Sixteen and Twelve Mile Creek, and the third at the Twelve Mile Creek.

And also for repairing in a good and substantial manner, the Bridge at the Outlet of Burlington Bay.

All the before mentioned Work to be completed in a good and substantial manner on or before the last day of October next, and when completed, the Money contracted to be given, will be paid by the Receiver General.

But each party entering into an Engagement for any part of the aforesaid work, will be required to produce two sufficient sureties, to be bound for the performance of the Contract.

The particulars to be delivered in to WILLIAM ALLAN or DUNCAN CAMERON Esquires, of York, or to JAMES RUGGLES or WILLIAM GRAHAM Esquires, of Yonge Street, or to WILLIAM APPLEGARTH Esquire, of Flamborough East, all of whom are Commissioners named for carrying the aforesaid Act into execution.

YORK, 28th July, 1804.

BRITISH VICTORY IN THE EAST.

LONDON, April 16.

The following letter gives some interesting details of the battle of the 23d September, in which Scindia was defeated:

"Camp near Jaffarabad, Sept. 24, 1803

"I have now to relate to you one of the most brilliant and bloody actions perhaps on record. On the 22d a junction was effected with Colonel Stevenson, and the two divisions the next morning moved in different directions to attack the enemy's combined force, which was to have taken place as to-day.—However, yesterday morning, as General Wellesley's division arrived on the ground, intelligence was received that the enemy were within five or six miles, and preparing to move off. In consequence of this intelligence, the General reconnoitered their camp, and determined to attack them without waiting for Colonel Stevenson to come up. The baggage was left behind under the charge of Col. Chamber's battalion. On approaching the enemy, it was found that the information the General had received was erroneous, and that the enemy were not in full camp, but occupied a most favourable and advantageous position—covered by ne[illegible] 50 pieces of artillery, with an army of about forty thousand infantry and thirty-five thousand cavalry. To oppose this we had only about one thousand European and two thousand eight hundred native infantry, with four weak regiments of cavalry, and a few artillery—in all, not more than 5000 men. Still the General placing the most implicit confidence in the skill and bravery of his troops, resolved not to let such an opportunity escape of bringing on a decisive action. The army was accordingly formed in order of battle; the infantry and guns occupied the first line, and the cavalry the second. In this position we advanced upon the enemy, in defiance of the heaviest cannonade imaginable.—But, as our line, particularly the right of it, who were ordered to attack the left wing of the enemy, approached the ranges of batteries, showers of grape and musquetry swept away complete ranks; and taking advantage of this, the flower of their cavalry bore down and overwhelmed our infantry on the right. At this awful and critical moment the whole of our cavalry charged the advancing enemy with such rapidity and execution, that the whole gave way, and fell back in the utmost confusion. This decided the fate of the day, and gave time for the infantry to recover, and they immediately advanced to support their cavalry, when the enemy retreated in all directions, leaving us masters of the field of battle, and 110 pieces of very fine cannon, equal in all respects, if not superior to our own. But we have to regret the loss of a great number of brave men; among them Lieut. Col. Maxwell, of the 19th dragoons, who nobly fell in the act of charging the enemy's guns and infantry, along with Capt. Mackay, Captain Boyle, and Lieut. Bonimi; alſo 6 more wounded—in all ten officers killed and wounded of the cavalry, and upwards of 160 men and 300 horſes. You may form ſome idea of the heat of the action, when I inform you that hardly a cavalry officer was not either killed or wounded himſelf, or had his horſe ſhot under him. The artillery had four officers killed; they were cut down at their guns by Scindia's horſe; and the infantry ſuffered immenſely both in officers and in men. In all, I think, there are 52 officers killed and wounded, and upwards of 2100 men.—The General had two horſes killed under him—one with a cannon ſhot, and another with a pike, and one of his orderlies killed at his ſide. It is univerſally allowed to be one of the ſevereſt actions that ever happened in this or perhaps any other country; and when it is conſidered that the enemy were at leaſt 75,000 ſtrong, with 150 pieces of cannon, and every local advantage, it muſt at leaſt be allowed, that this detachment of not more than 5000 men, have nobly upheld the fame and character of the Britiſh arms. To do the enemy juſtice, it muſt be admitted that the troops in general, but their infantry and artillery in particular, behaved in the moſt gallant manner, and fell in heaps under the infantry cloſe to their guns. The 74th regiment, at the commencement of the action, were about 500 ſtrong—only 83 of which and one ſubaltern, returned to camp unhurt. They have loſt 4 captains and 7 ſubalterns killed, and every other officer wounded, with the exception of Lieutenant Moore. Colonel Wallace commanded a brigade, and Captain Toffrey was acting in a ſtaff ſituation, and fortunately both of them have eſcaped untouched."

April 22.

It ought to be mentioned, that the late Duke d'Enghein is the laſt hope of the illuſtrious Houſe of Conde.—His father and grandfather are both alive, but widowers, and can have little hope of more poſterity. The Duke's life was the ſacrifice of his affection. He was enamored of the Princeſs Clementina de Rohan Rochefort, niece of the Cardinal de Rohan; and his love of her induced him to reſide at Ettenheim. The Princeſs followed her lover to Straſburgh; but has ſince returned.

The Council at which his Majeſty preſided yeſterday ſat till paſt 2 o'clock. Among other buſineſs, his Majeſty ſigned ſeveral Proclamations. Though his Majeſty's health is not fully re-eſtabliſhed, he has not lately ſhewn any ſymptoms of his former malady.

Every good ſubject will feel for the ſituation of his Majeſty. His venerable age, his domeſtic virtues, his zeal for the honor of the country, and the happineſs of the nation; his preſent affliction, and the political ſtorm which he muſt encounter, cannot fail to awaken a lively ſympathy in every Britiſh heart. That he may ſpeedily recover his wonted health and vigor, is the general prayer of his people.

May 5.

In a ſecond edition of the Courier yeſterday, we mentioned that news had been received of 200 of the enemy's flotilla having come out of Boulogne.—Early yeſterday morning they were ſeen from Dover heights, at anchor about two miles from the French ſhore. During the remainder of the day the weather was too thick to ſee them; but a diſtant cannonade was heard ſeveral times; it is probable that the flotilla only came out to manoeuvre, and that they returned into port in the evening.

Severe laws againſt emigration will ſoon be publiſhed in Holland. The richeſt and moſt reſpectable inhabitants particularly at Rotterdam, have emigrated and ſettled themſelves in England, at Antwerp, or at Emden. They carried their fortunes with them in their pocket books.

A letter from Folkſtone, dated Thurſday evening, contains the following information:—

"The report of guns was diſtinctly heard this afternoon from the French coaſt, near Boulogne; and the weather was ſo clear, that we could obſerve three brigs and two lugger rigged veſſels come out of Boulogne harbour, and run along ſhore, as it is ſuppoſed for the purpoſe of getting to ſea. Only one of our ſhips has been ſeen off Boulogne, and ſhe drifted with the tide. The wind has got round to the S. E. to-day, and the convoy under Dungeneſs are obſerved getting under weigh, for the purpoſe of ſailing before dark. For the firſt time this ſeaſon, a great number of lights were deſcried laſt night upon the French coaſt, which it is ſuppoſed ariſes from the French troops having encamped there within this day or two. We cannot otherwiſe account for this circumſtance."

May 6.

Gen. Lake's portion of the booty taken in the pureſt gold, at the ſingle town of Agra, amounts to 36,000l.= Col. St. Leger's to 40,000l. and every captain who ſerved on that day to two thouſand pounds each.

The King of Sweden is ſtated to have been much chagrined by the anſwer of Bonaparte, to a note which he addreſſed to him from Caliruhe on the arreſt of the Duke d'Enghein.

A great number of Italians have been ordered to leave Vienna, in conſequence of application made by the French Miniſter to the Auſtrian cabinet to that effect.

A letter from Middleburg ſtates, that the troops were much harraſſed by the activity of the ſquadron under Sir Sidney Smith, and that they were obliged to reſt by day, being conſtantly under arms at night.

The Firſt Conſul is ſtated to have recently declared in a circle of private friends, that he was glad to find that Moreau is not ſo culpable as it was firſt ſuppoſed.

To countenance the ſhallow tale of Pichegru having been guilty of ſuicide an order has been iſſued, that the priſoners of the Temple ſhall be unremittingly guarded; in the apartments of Moreau, Georges, &c. five gens d'armes are ſtationed night and day. Thuriot, as brother-in-law of the infamous Danton, and a favourite agent of Robiſpierre, is the perſon to whom the examination of priſoners in the Temple is confided.

A letter from Madrid of the 5th April ſays, "we are now fearful that our neutrality will not continue longer, the government having given orders that Britiſh prizes ſhall not be ſold in Spaniſh ports. The Engliſh envoy, Mr. Frere, and conſul general, Mr. Hunter, have received explicit intimation on this ſubject."

INDIA WARFARE.—Extract of a diſpatch from Lieutenant Col. Harcourt, with details of an action, in which the fort of Barabuty was taken by aſſault, Oct. 12.—From a Greenock paper, April 17.

"On the night of the 12th a ſpot was fixed on for a 12 pounder battery, diſtant about 500 yards from the outer gate of the fort. This battery was completed on the night of the 13th, and the 12 pounder placed in it, together with two howitzers and two 6 pounders, the whole of which opened their fire on the morning of the 14th. By eleven o'clock in the forenoon moſt of the defences of the ſouth face of the fort againſt which our fire was directed were taken off, the enemy's guns ſilenced, and every appearance promiſed ſucceſs. Upon which I directed lieutenant colonel Clayton to advance with one 6 pounder, and a party of artillery men, two hundred Europeans from his Majeſty's 22d, and the Madras European regiment, and 400 Seapoys from the 20th Bengal, and the 9th and 19th regiments of Madras native infantry. The party had to paſs over a narrow bridge, and under a heavy but ill directed fire of muſquetry from the fort, to which they were expoſed for forty minutes. They at length ſucceeded in blowing open the wicket (the remaining part of the gate having been fortified with thick maſſes of ſtone.) Having once accompliſhed this the party entered ſingly, and although they met with conſiderable reſiſtance whilſt entering the fort, and paſſing two other gates, the Britiſh troops were ſoon completely victorious.

I cannot too highly praiſe the conduct of Lieut. Col. Clayton, and that of the officers and troops under his command. The whole party manifeſted a degree of perſevering ſteadineſs and bravery that does them infinite honor.

The fort of Barabuty is of conſiderable ſtrength, and with the exception only of the narrow bridge over which our party paſſed, is inacceſſible, as it is ſurrounded by a ditch from 35 to 165 feet broad, and 20 feet deep of water in it.

I am happy to acquaint you that our loſs has not been conſiderable, but I have to report with regret that Capt. Kenny of the 19th regiment of Madras infantry, Capt. Huniſtone of his Majeſty's 22d regiment, and Lieut. Faithful of the Bengal artillery, are wounded, though not dangerouſly; their conduct was highly meritorious, as well as that of every other officer on the ſtorming party.

The loſs of the enemy, within the fort was very conſiderable, and many were drowned in the ditch, when endeavouring to eſcape.

I ſhould not omit mentioning that a ſtand of colours of the enemy was taken by the detachment of his Majeſty's 22d regiment, a ſecond ſtand of colours by the 20th Bengal regiment, a third by the 9th Madras native regiment; and a fourth by the 19th Madras native regiment; and for the diſpoſal of which I hope to be honored with his Excellency's commands."

Official Account of the Capture of Goree.
From the LONDON GAZETTE.

Admiralty Office, April 24.

Copy of a letter from Captain Edward Sterling Dickſon, commander of his Majeſty's ſhip the Inconſtant, to Wm. Marſden, Eſq; dated at Goree, the 15th March, 1804.

SIR,

I have the honor to acquaint you, for the information of my Lords Commiſſioners of the Admiralty, of the arrival of his Majeſty's ſhip under my command, and the veſſels named in the margin,* off the iſland of Goree, on the morning of the 7th March, but conceiving it poſſible that it might be in poſſeſſion of the enemy, (altho' Engliſh colours were hoiſted on the citadel, and centinels clothed in red placed on the different batteries,) I brought too with the convoy, and directed Mr. Charles Pickford my firſt Lieutenant, to proceed on ſhore in the cutter, and if he found it in the hands of the Engliſh, make the ſignal I eſtabliſhed for that purpoſe. At ſun ſet, not any ſignal having been made, nor the appearance of the boat, I came to anchor with the convoy a little out of gun ſhot; and deeming it highly neceſſary to gain information with reſpect to the ſituation of the garriſon, I ordered, at 10 P. M. three boats manned and armed, under the direction of Mr. Runciman, midſhipman, to proceed into the harbour, and cut out any of the veſſels he could find, which he did in a gallant manner, by bringing out a ſhip under a heavy fire from the batteries, which ſunk our cutter and wounded one man. From her I learned, that the French had been in poſſeſſion of Goree ſince the 18th of January, and that they had 300 white and black troops in the garriſon.

On the 8th inſt. at day light, I weighed and ſtood to the weſtward of the iſland to prevent any ſuccours being thrown in by ſea from Senegal; and on the evening of the ſame day, being determined to attack it, having ordered ſcaling ladders to be made for that purpoſe, at 9 P. M. anchored and ordered all the boats of the convoy to be ſent on board the Inconſtant, and after embarking as many troops as they could poſſibly ſtow, I found they would not carry a ſufficient number to promiſe ſucceſs: I therefore poſtponed the attack until the arrival of one of our convoy, which was in ſight, ſtanding into the bay, as her three boats could carry from 30 to 40 more men; at day-light in the morning of the 9th inſt. we were agreeably ſurpriſed by ſeeing the Engliſh colours hoiſted over the French, and ſhortly after I received information from Lieut. Pickford, that the garriſon had capitulated with him; I inſtantly ſtood into the harbour with the convoy, anchored and diſembarked the troops. Conceiving it of importance that his Majeſty's Miniſters ſhould be made acquainted as ſoon as poſſible with the recapture of this iſland, I have purchaſed a ſmall brig, and ſent my firſt Lieutenant, Mr. Charles Pickford, an intelligent and deſerving officer, to England, who will have the honor to preſent my diſpatches; and I beg leave to recommend him in the ſtrongeſt manner to their Lordſhips favour.

I have appointed Captain William Murray, ſenior officer of the troops, to be commandant of Goree, till his Majeſty's pleaſure is known, and Mr. Wm. Arnold, maſter's mate, to be Lieut. of the Inconſtant, vice Pickford, and hope it will meet their Lordſhips approbation.

The moment I can get a ſufficient ſupply of water and proviſions landed, and put the iſland into a proper ſtate of defence, I ſhall proceed, and put their Lordſhips orders into execution.

I cannot conclude my letter without aſſuring their Lordſhips that the greateſt cordiality exiſted between the officers, ſeamen and ſoldiers, and had an attack been found neceſſary, from the handſome manner they volunteered their ſervices, I am perſuaded they would have done honor to their country.

I have the honor to be, &c.

E. S. DICKSON.

Here follows the articles of capitulation, and a liſt of ordnance in the iſland of Goree, when taken poſſeſſion of by the Engliſh, the 11th of March.

* Eagle ſtore ſhip, Hamilton, Venus, Jenny.

British Army.—The additional force of the King's ſervice is to be raiſed by officers of the line, who get a ſtep of permanent rank upon completing their quotas. The proportion of recruits for each rank follows:

A Major for a Lieutenant Colonelcy 82 men; a Captain (having ſerved ſix years as a commiſſioned officer) for a majority 90 men; a Lieutenant (of two years as a commiſſioned officer) for a Captaincy 45 men; an Enſign for a Lieutenancy 10 men. The men are to be raiſed for general and unlimited ſervice. Ten guineas bounty will be allowed to the recruit, the whole of which is to be paid to him in money and neceſſaries; but on no account is any further ſum to be given by the officer recruiting. Two guineas are allowed in addition to the officer for extraodinary expences, and one guinea to the party.

An officer completing his quota within ſix months from the date of his beating orders, will be entitled to a ſtep of rank from that period and in caſe of reduction to half pay. On failure to complete the number required in the ſpecified time, he will revert to his former ſituation in his preſent regiment, allowed at the above rate for the men actually raiſed and approved.

May 13. The French Miniſter at Leghorn, is making extenſive preparations there for the reception of a ſquadron. On board which it is added, ſeveral thouſand troops aſſembling in Etruria, are to embark. The port continued blockaded by ſome Engliſh frigates.

The King of Denmark has ordered a man of War to Algiers, with ſeveral pieces of heavy ordnance from the fortreſs of Cronenburgh, as a preſent to the Dey. The Daniſh marine now comprihes three vice and four rear admirals, 6 comodores, 47 captains, 81 lieutenants, &c.

Bonaparte takes every occaſion to manifeſt his partiality to the Poles, probably with a view to engage them in meaſures hoſtile to the intereſt of the powers who enjoy the ſovereignty of their country.

A ſerious quarrel is ſtated to have taken place between Bonaparte and his brother Lucien: the latter, on retiring to his new eſtates in Italy, has carried with him his gallery of paintings, and every moveable article of value.

Mr. Canning, it is confidently ſtated, will be the new treaſurer of the navy, and Lord Auckland retires from the poſt office, but his ſucceſſor is not yet declared. Lord Charles Somerſet is appointed governor of Jamaica.

We underſtand that Lord Haldwick is to continue, at leaſt for ſome months longer, lord lieutenant of Ireland.

The arrival of ſeveral couriers in Paris from Germany, has haſtened the preparations for the Coronation, which will take place in defiance of the remonſtrance of certain Courts. At the laſt Aſſembly by Madame Bonaparte, her huſband ſaid, loud enough to be heard by all perſons preſent, in addreſſing himſelf to a certain hitherto favorite Ambaſſador, "Pray, Sir, have not the French People the ſame right to give the Supreme Chief what title and prerogatives they think neceſſary for their honor and tranquility, as much as to chuſe freely their own form of government." A bow of ſubmiſſion was the only anſwer to a queſtion purpoſely made, as a command or an explanation to the whole Foreign Diplomatic Corps preſent; of whom ſeveral the next day diſpatched couriers to their reſpective Courts, with this ſophiſtical declamation of the Firſt Conſul.

The Coronation Robes have been embroidered at Lyons, and with their diamonds, are eſtimated at two millions of livres: Gold and Silver Medals to the amount of ten millions of livres, report ſays, are already ſtruck at the mint, and are to be diſtributed on the Coronation day, in all the armies, as well as among the people in all the cities and towns. The Coronation carriage has been made long ago, by Simeon, at Bruſſels, under a pretence that it was intended as a preſent to the Emperor of Ruſſia. The Coronation is to be performed by the Cardinal Archbiſhop of Paris and the Pope's Nuncio, Cardinal Caprara, aſſiſted by three other Revolutionary Cardinals, and twelve Revolutionary Archbiſhops and biſhops; the Pope, on account of his age and infirmities, having been excuſed a journey to France, where his Nuncio has full power to aſſiſt on his part, and give his bleſſing.

Among other appointments in France by the Emperor, in petto, are twenty-four Pages for himſelf and twelve for his Imperial Conſort. They are children of the Members of the Legion of Honor; and when they have attained the age of 16, they will obtain each a company in a regiment of cavalry or dragoons as a retreat. Six Lords in waiting for the Emperor, and four for the Empreſs, are to be taken from among the Members of the Senate, Tribunate and Legiſlative Body. A Civil Liſt of twenty-four millions of livres will be fixed. The houſehold troops are to be augmented to twelve thouſand men of different arms. The palace of Verſailles is to be repaired, with thoſe of Campagne and Fontainbleau, and every ſeaſon the Emperor will change his place of reſidence. The winters will, however, excluſively be paſſed at Paris, St. Cloud and Malmaiſon.

Intelligence is reported to have been received by a foreign ambaſſador, that Bonaparte has been proclaimed Emperor of France in all the ſtreets and public ſquares of Paris. All idea of conſulting the people is laid aſide, the Senatus Conſultus of the Conſervative Senate, and the decree of the Tribunate, are conſidered ſufficient authority to change the French republic into a monarchy; and the elective chief magiſtrate of a commonwealth into the hereditary ſovereign of an empire. It is now reported at Paris that the coronation is to take place next Auguſt, upon Bonaparte's birth day, and to be performed at Aix-la-Chapelle, where Charlemagne was crowned fourteen centuries ago.

A general amneſty is to be proclaimed for all criminals, without exception; the liſt of emigrants to be cloſed for ever, and all proſcribed perſons, with the exception of the Bourbon family, may return to France, and enjoy the rights of ſubjects. A promotion upon a large ſcale is announced; every officer in the army will be advanced a ſtep.

Yeſterday arrived another Gottenburgh mail. It appears to confirm what was exclufively ſtated in this paper, ſome days ſince, reſpecting the deep impreſſion which the murder of the Duke of Enghein has made upon the court of Peterſburgh. As ſoon as the intelligence of this atrocious event reached the capital, the Emperor iſſued orders for a court mourning, and ſuch was the indignation of the people upon that occasion, that the French residents have been constantly insulted whenever they appeared in public. Very considerable bodies of Russian troops have received orders to hold themselves in readiness to march.

CANANDIAGUA, June 12.

At a meeting of the Chiefs of the Seneca Nation of Indians, lately held at Buffaloe, (Genesee County) Pissant, an Indian belonging to said tribe, was accused of being guilty of the practice of Witchcraft. He was tried, condemned to suffer death, and on the 4th inst. was executed.

BOSTON, June 27.

A letter from London, by the Alexander, says, "Notwithstanding the war this country never enjoyed a greater degree of prosperity. It is a fact, the Exchange is in favour of this country, with every quarter of the globe, and the surplus of the revenue of 1804, over that of 1803, is one million four hundred & eighty two thousand pounds Sterling, exclusive of the war taxes which have exceeded those of 1803, almost two millions.—We still continue a nation of armed men.—A change of Ministry is expected soon.—Mr. Pitt and Mr. Fox, are both talked of as Premiers.—If the former, the war will be carried on with increased vigour.—If the latter, he will propose, and likely bring about a peace, through the mediation of Russia."

NEW YORK, July 13.

Died, yesterday afternoon, General Alexander Hamilton, of a wound which he received on the morning of the preceding day, in a duel with Col. Burr. Never was a death more sincerely and justly lamented; and his loss will be sensibly felt throughout the United States.—In him were united the most splendid talents and the strictest political integrity. There was no man more universally beloved by those who knew him, and in whom such unbounded confidence was placed. The circumstances which occasioned the melancholy event of his death, and deprived this country of its first citizen, will no doubt be fairly and fully stated; the public voice demands it; his character will be drawn; and his name go down with the highest honors to all posterity. The General during his short illness, expressed his strong abhorrence of the practice of duelling, and has left in writing (as is said) his testimony against it; he partook of the holy Sacrament; and died in the explicit profession of his belief of the Christian religion, and the declaration that he had "a tender reliance on the mercy of Almighty God, through the merits of the Lord Jesus Christ." The ships in the harbour will show the respect which is due; the merchants are recommended to shut up their stores, and the citizens attend the funeral of one of the greatest and most beloved of men.—[Gaz.

From the GREENOCK ADVERTISER.

THE SOLDIER'S ALPHABET.

A Stands for Attention, the first word he knows,
B And B stands for Bullet, to tickle his toes,
C Stands for a Charge, which the Frenchmen all dread;
And D stands for Discharge, which soon lays them dead.
Next E begins Exile, at which sometimes he stands;
And F bids to Fight, when our enemy lands.
G Stands for General, Grape-shot and Gun,
Which together combin'd must make Bonaparte run.
Then H begins Honor, to soldiers unknown,
And I stands for Justice, which next they revere,
But K bids them Kill, for their country and King,
For whose health each true Briton doth joyfully sing:
L is Love, which the Soldier will oftentimes feel;
And M bids him Mercy, when conqu'ror, to deal.
N Stands for a Nation of Englishmen free;
And O for an Outpost—but ours in the Sea.
Then P Stands for Packet and for Pioneer;
And Q shews our enemies Quailing with fear.
Next R stands for Regiment and Roll of the drums;
And S for Salute when the General comes.
So T both for Touch-hole and Trigger may stand;
And V for the brave Volunteers of this land.
Then W Whisper that war will soon cease,
And X Y and Z, will rejoice at the peace.

THE QUAKER AND CURATE.

AFTER the ceremony of marriage, the Curate demanded a crown as his due.—"How doft thou prove from Scripture," faid the Quaker, "that thou oughteft to have from me fuch a fhare of earthly mammon?"—"Why," replied the Curate, "the perfon you have juft married to, is a woman of a good character; and Solomon, in his proverbs, obferves, that a virtuous woman is a crown to her husband." The Quaker paid the money.—[Bal.

An Engliſh Gentleman has lately been making experiments, in order to aſcertain whether it might be practicable to erect telegraphs to hold correſpondence between Scotland and Ireland, and is ſatisfied that it can be done: and that the beſt adapted places to communicate with each other are Portpatrick and Donaghadee light houſe. He can, with the ſame facility, converſe acroſs the channel by night as by day.

YORK, 28th July, 1804.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER Esquire,
Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

WHEREAS by a certain Act of the Legiſlature of this Province, paſſed in the forty-fourth year of his Majeſty's reign, intituled, "An Act for granting to his "Majeſty, a certain ſum of money for "the further encouragement of the "growth and cultivation of Hemp "within this Province, and the exportation thereof," it is enacted, That from and out of any fund or funds now remaining, or which may hereafter come, into the hands of the Receiver General, ariſing from and out of the rates and duties already raiſed, levied and collected, or which hereafter may be raiſed, levied and collected to and for the uſes of this Province, there be granted to his Majeſty, his heirs and ſucceſſors, the ſum of one thouſand pounds, to be diſpoſed of, appropriated and laid out as a public ſtock or capital, applicable to the purpoſe of purchaſing Hemp the growth of this Province, and of diſcharging the expences incident to ſuch purchaſes, and the exportation and ſale thereof, in ſuch manner, and under ſuch regulations, as to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government of this Province, by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council thereof, ſhould from time to time ſeem meet; And that it ſhould and may be lawful to and for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council of this Province, to iſſue one or more Proclamation or Proclamations, and therein to name ſuch and ſo many perſons within the Province as to him ſhall ſeem meet, as Commiſſioners for the purchaſing of Merchantable Hemp the growth of this Province, which ſaid Commiſſioners, or any one or more of them, are and is thereby authoriſed and empowered to purchaſe ſuch Hemp at and after the price or rate of forty pounds per ton: AND WHEREAS it is further enacted by the ſaid Act, that after the paſſing of that Act, no perſon or perſons whatſoever, ſhall be intitled to any further Bounty over and beyond the ſaid price or ſum of forty pounds per ton, or to any Premium under any Proclamation or Proclamations, heretofore iſſued by the Lieutenant Governor, for the encouragement of the growth and exportation of Hemp, for or in reſpect of any Hemp for which the ſaid ſum of forty pounds per ton ſhall be paid under the powers thereby given; Nor ſhall any Bounty or Premium be paid or payable for or in reſpect of any Hemp not intended for ſale to ſome one of the Commiſſioners acting in virtue of the powers thereby given, which shall not be claimed on or before the thirtieth day of September next, under proper and sufficient Documents, to be on or before that day, presented to the person or persons duly empowered or authorized to allow or pay the same: Provided that before the said Commissioners to be appointed in virtue of that Act, or any of them, shall under the authority thereby given, purchase any Hemp from any person or persons whomsoever, such Commissioners and each of them are, and is thereby authorized and required, to administer to such person or persons offering any such Hemp for sale, an Oath in the said Act particularly set forth, whereby such person or persons, is or are to swear that the Hemp which he, she or they had that day offered for sale to the Commissioner appointed by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor for the purchase of Hemp, and every part thereof, was raised within the Province of Upper Canada by him or them, or by some other person or persons (to be named in such oath) and that no Bounty or Premium had been paid or claimed for any part of such Hemp, by any person or persons whomsoever, save and except what was included in the sum or price for which he, she or they had offered to sell such Hemp to the said Commissioner. —Now know all whom it may concern, that I PETER HUNTER Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, well knowing the fidelity, diligence and ability of the Honorable James Baby of Sandwich, the Honorable Richard Cartwright of Kingston, the Honorable Robert Hamilton of Queenstown, all Members of the Legislative Council of this Province, and William Allan of York in the Home District Esquire, do, by virtue of the power so vested in me as aforesaid, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, nominate, constitute and appoint the said James Baby, Richard Cartwright, Robert Hamilton, and William Allan, to be Commissioners for the purchasing of merchantable Hemp, the growth of the said Province, at and after the price or rate of Forty Pounds Halifax Currency per Ton, which said sum of Forty Pounds is to be paid by the said Commissioners respectively, to the party or parties selling such Hemp, in Money only, according to the rules, regulations, limitations and restrictions in the said in part above recited Act expressed and contained, with full power and authority, to do and perform all and each of the matters and things in the said Act authorized or required by them the said Commissioners to be done and performed.

Given under my Hand, and Seal at Arms, at York, this Twenty-Third Day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and four, and in the forty-fourth year of His Majesty's Reign.

LONDON, April 23.

Pichegru's Captivity.

Private Letter dated Paris, April 8.

"From the day that Pichegru entered [illegible] Temple, he was refused, with [illegible] and to leave this prison but [illegible] or to attend a trial. In his [illegible] before the Police Officers, as in his last before the Criminal Judges, he was always the same; declaring himself guilty of any other crime than that of returning to France, when the First Consul chose to continue his name, though a Republican General, upon the list of Emigrants. He declared himself ignorant of all plots formed to destroy the First Consul; and he asserted that no such existed; because, had the contrary been the case, Bonaparte would long before have ceased to reign and to live. He did not deny that he landed near Dieppe, last January; but said that most of the passengers landed with him were unknown to him, and by him supposed to be emigrants, who, like himself, desired to visit their country, parents and friends. He repeatedly wished to be carried before some tribunal, to have his conduct investigated, and his innocence or guilt proclaimed.

"All those persons who came over with him have been separately interrogated, but not one of them inculpated him: on the contrary, they said that during their passage from England, and after their landing in France, Pichegru hardly spoke a word to any body. Most of them were offered their lives and liberty, if they would discover any thing that could convict Pichegru of having conspired against the Republic; but either they knew nothing, or one man of honor enough not to disclose what had been confided to them. The last prisoner offered his pardon was Major Russillon, a Swiss officer, who, the Grand Judge knew, was the bosom friend of Pichegru—who for two years had lodged with him in the neighbourhood of London, and who left England with him; but this loyal officer, instead of being evidence against Pichegru, deposed, upon oath, "That hardly a day passed in England, when Pichegru did not say, that any person that made France and Europe quiet and happy, was his idol, if either a Louis XVIII. or a Bonaparte."

"On the 4th inst. the Grand Judge, with the Senator Fouche, arrived about eleven o'clock in the morning, in the Temple, and Pichegru was, for the last time carried from his dungeon. The Grand Judge shewing him a pardon, signed en blanche, sealed by the seal of State, and signed by Bonaparte, and Maret, Secretary of State. He offered to deliver it over to him, and to order his release immediately, if he only would sign a declaration, and afterwards appear before the tribunal as evidence, inculpating Moreau in the plot to murder the First Consul, and to restore Louis XVIII. Pichegru answered then, as before, "Carry me, if you choose, to be shot, or to be guillotined: but I shall die, as I have lived, an honest man and a true patriot."

"It was then that his private destruction was determined. His first confinement was in the Abbey Prison, afterwards in La Force; and since the 8th of March, in the Temple. In all these prisons he never was left a moment alone, but chained, hands and feet, except at his meals. Gens d'armes were present day and night, in his dungeon. Knowing, from the moment that he was arrested, that nothing could be proved against him, and fearing that poison might be administered to him, he refused to eat of any dish his jailor did not first taste in his presence. His last supper was a roasted fowl and a sallad, and the jailor eat of both. Before he had done he received a blow over the wound he had in the head from the day of his arrest, which brought him to the ground, and in this position he was strangled—some say, by the First Consul's favourite Mamelukes, Rustan, others by the two Gens d'armes in his dungeon; who, report says, hath both since disappeared. Such was the end of this Republican General, who organized victory in the camp of the French Republicans; who added Brabant and Holland to the conquests of France; and to whose victories France is indebted for having her frontiers extended to the Rhine."

BOSTON, July 13.

LATEST FROM FRANCE.

Extract of a letter from Salem, July 12.

"Capt. Hogin arrived this morning from Rochefort; left there May 16; brought no papers; but reports, that the French soldiers had declared themselves against Bonaparte's being made Emperor, &c. and that Moreau had been set at liberty."

NEW-YORK, July 20.

Letters from Vienna of the 22d of April mentions that the note which the Minister of the Elector of Baden has presented to the Imperial Court, respecting the arrest of the French Emigrants on the Elector's territory, particularly the seizure of the Duke of Enghien, has given occasion to a conference of state, the result of which is not very favourable to the French interest. The Austrian army now consists of 211,988 effective men.

Extract of a letter from New-Orleans, dated June 4.

"You know, I presume, that we claim Mobile as part of the cession from France—Spain objects to this; and, being in power there, exacts from us the ancient duties.—Congress, however, have passed an act for the regulations of this part of the province, as if they were without apprehension that their right to do so would be disputed. —The governor-general, who resides at Pensacola, has seen this act, and it has excited much alarm and ill temper.—I saw, last night, a translation of his letter to Governor Claiborne on the subject, to be forwarded to the President of the United States, in which he assumes a bold tone, and says he views our conduct as a serious violation of the treaty, and of the harmony that ought to subsist between the two governments. He adds, that he shall feel it is duty to resist with force of arms every such violation. He then endeavoured to shew, by a variety of arguments, that we have no right to that country, and hopes the President will be satisfied on the due consideration that (the Governor) is correct in his opinion, and that the President will take measures to abandon a claim so unfounded; but if not, and if the American Government persist in the exercise of legislative and executive controul over that country, however painful the alternative, he shall use the force entrusted to him to repel with arms every such unjust encroachment.

"How this disagreeable business will end I know not. On the truth of the facts you may place the most implicit confidence. The translation of the letter is attested by the interpreter to the government; and I expect will be soon published in your papers from the proper authority."

From Lisbon.—Captain Merrit, arrived at Boston from Lisbon, informs, that the Portugese government had declared war against the Moors; and that a ship of the line had sailed from Lisbon to cruize in Tangier bay.

New French Government.

The particulars of the new arrangement are thus described in a private communication—"The name of the Republic is to be changed into that of Empire: the Republican calender is to be laid aside; the ancient Nobility are to re-assume their former titles; and at Bonaparte's coronation, several hundred Noblemen are to be created. The brothers of the Consul are, with their male children, to be created Archdukes, and all the sisters, Archduchesses.—The heir to the Throne is to be stiled the Imperial Grand Duke, and the titles of Bonaparte are to be His Most Christian Majesty the Emperor of the Gauls. The Throne is to be hereditary in his family, and, in case of failure of issue, he is to have the power of nominating from among his relatives, his immediate successor."—[London Paper.

Jerome Bonaparte.—The youngest, brother of the Emperor of the Gauls, with his lady, intends to take a tour through the Eastern States, visit the falls of Niagara, &c.

INFLUENZA!—A very respectable commercial house in this city, has favored us with the perusal of Liverpool letters of the 21st of May, which states, "the public prints of yesterday, announced, the arrival in London of a Mr. Livingston from France, whose object, it is supposed, is to render overtures of Peace to this country.

"Accounts from the continent, state, that the Emperor of Russia had ordered 200,000 men to march to the frontiers. This movement is attributed to the feeling which had been excited in that Court by the murder of the Duke D'Enghein. The papers of to day are totally silent on the subject, being engrossed with the details of the ceremony of Bonaparte's being crowned Emperor of the Gauls."

—Phil. Gaz.

An extraordinary case in the annals of population deserves to be made public —In the epochy of Tambef in Russia, were born in the year 1803, 26,746 boys, 21,998 girls, together 48 744 children, married 10,82 -ple; died, 20,026 males 9233 females, in all 19,-259; that is, the births exceeds the deaths by 29,485, far more than half.

A famous brigand, called Saint Rochette has lately been arrested in Piedmont. He has been the Chief and Creator of fifteen bands of barbares or robbers in the Alps, of whom 306 have already been executed. He never had any fixed house, but he knew perfectly well the Alps, and all retreats in these mountains, and whenever he went he had the talents to form new bands, and to inspire his fellows with the most violent hatred against the French of whom he acknowledges to have killed, with his own hands, upwards of 200, and that his comrades, during the last war, have, by ambuscades which he had prepared, destroyed upwards of 2500 republicans. The jealousy of one of his mistresses delivered him up at St. Benigno. Memorials concerning many of his transactions were found upon him, and receipts from different priests and friars for 2,560,000 livres, which he has given to churches and convents to have masses and prayers said, for obtaining the assistance of the Virgin Mary in his undertaking.—He had besides upon him a list of thirty persons, whom he intended to dispatch this year as soon as possible, among whom were two Bonapartes, Vice President Melzi, Generals Menou, Murat, St. Cyr, &c. On his way to Turin, he knocked out the brains of a gensdarmes with his hand cuffs, and bit the nose of another, who attempted to tie his hands on his back. He is a very strong man, and his body is covered over with hair like that of a goat.

Among the prisoners condemned and executed lately at Turin, were a son, for poisoning his father and mother; a wife, for poisoning her husband; a married woman, for poisoning three of her children; and a maid servant, for poisoning her master, mistress, two of their children, and two of her fellow servants.

FUNERAL HONORS

of GENERAL HAMILTON.

The Society of the Cincinnati being charged with the direction of the Funeral Ceremonies of its President General, which took place on Saturday last, the 14th inst. at 10 o'clock, commemorative of an event of the deepest national regret, directed the following ORDER OF PROCESSION.

1. The Military Corps, commanded by Colonel Morton.
2. The Society of Cincinnati.
3. Clergy of all denominations.

THE CORPSE.

5. The General's Horse.

21. The President, Professors, and Students of Columbia College.
22. The different Societies, in such order as their respective Presidents may arrange.
23. Citizens in general.

The military corps commanded by Col. Morton being ordered to parade in the Park at 10 o'clock, accompanied with six pieces of artillery, two of which will remain on the ground under the command of Capt. M'Lean, and fire minute guns from the movement of the corps until it enters the church-yard. The 6th regiment, with the colours and music of the several corps, will parade in Robinson street, on the south side, fronting Mr. Church's house —standards and music in front of the centre. The regiment in solemn attitude, resting on arms reversed. On waving the standard of the Cincinnati, shrouded in crape, the regiment will shoulder and receive the corple, proceeding from the house with presented arms the music and colors faluting. On a signal trumpet the regiment will shoulder and the troops in the Park will throw themselves into column, and and occupy the Broadway with the rear of the column covering the head of Robinson street and halt. On signal trumpet, the 6th regiment in Robinson-street will wheel to the right by platoons, and occupy the street in front of the corple, in open column, at half distances of platoons, and, with arms reversed, wait the signal. On signal trumpet, the column will move with colors and music in the centre of the 6th regiment, playing the dead march. Two companies detached from the military in the park will cover the flanks of the corple in single file, with trailed arms, from the rear of the fifth regiment down the line, and take their proper position as the corple enters Broadway.

The column advancing will wheel to the left round the Park, enter Beekman-street, and passing down Pearl-street, will ascend Wall-street to Trinity Church. The leading wing in front will form close column to the right on the church walk, extending to the north corner of Wall-street, and facing to the left hand with ordered arms. The rear wing advancing will form close column to the left, on the church walk, and facing to the right, its rear ending to the south corner of Wall-street, flank with ordered arms. The Hon. Gouverneur Morris from the portico of the church (the corple in front on a bier) will deliver an appropriate address. At the conclusion of which the corple, preceded by the military, and properly attended, will proceed to the vault, where the military ceremonies will be performed under orders of the commandant, which will close the solemnities of the day).

ALBANY, July 20.

The merchants and other citizens of Albany who are desirous of uniting to express their sorrow and regret at the loss our country has suffered in the death of its first citizen ALEXANDER HAMILTON, are requested to meet at the city-hall, at six o'clock this evening.

CITY OF ALBANY,

At a Common Council held in and for the city of Albany, at the city hall of the said city, on the 17th day of July, 1804—

The Common Council having heard with extreme regret of the untimely and afflicting death of M'or General Alexander Hamilton—

Resolved unanimously, That as a tribute of esteem to the memory of that exalted and most worthy men, the members of the Common Council and the officers of this Corporation, will wear a mourning crape on the left arm for the space of six weeks.

Extract from the minutes of the C. Council,
RICHARD LUSH, Cl'k.

At a meeting of the Albany Military Association, at Lewis' City Tavern, on the 17th July, 1804 :—

Lieut. Col. Van Schaick, President.—

The Association convened for the purpose of paying a suitable testimony of respect to the memory of Maj. Gen. Hamilton—in whose death our country has to deplore the loss of a Patriot, a Statesman, and a Soldier; our state a dignified and illustrious Citizen; and genius, honor and humanity, one of their brightest ornaments:

Resolved unanimously, That the Members of this Association wear crape as mourning for Major General Alexander Hamilton, deceased, for the space of six weeks, and also on the first company parade and regimental review.

Extract from the minutes,
JOHN WILLARD, Sec'ry.

At a meeting of the Gentlemen of the Bar of this City,

It was unanimously agreed to wear crape for six weeks, as a testimonial of their veneration and esteem for the talents and virtues of General Hamilton, and of the deep regret with which they deplore his death.

We learn that the Gentlemen of the Bar who were attending the Circuit Court for the county of Columbia, at Claverack, last week, on hearing of the death of Gen. Hamilton, unanimously agreed to wear crape on their left arm for one month, as a tribute of respect to his memory.

In the Philadelphia papers received by Wednesday evening's mail, a number of letters and extracts are published containing a detail, somewhat minute, of the late unfortunate duel between Gen. Hamilton and Col. Burr; and although every thing relating to this affair is extremely interesting; yet this account being anonymous, and having assurances of all the particulars concerning the transaction through the Evening Post, we conclude to wait their arrival, as from local and other advantages, the latter will probably be most correct, and therefore most satisfactory.

DIED, at Montreal on the 6th instant universally lamented, SIMON Mc. TAVISH, Esq. Principal of the North West Company—long known for his enterprising spirit and integrity.

UPPER CANADA.

NOTICE is hereby given that the Commissioners for the Home District, appointed by a certain Statute of the Provincial Legislature, passed during the Session of the present year, intituled, "An Act for granting to His "Majesty a certain sum of Money out of the Funds "applicable to the uses of this Province to defray "the expences of amending and repairing the Public "Highways and Roads, laying out and opening new "Roads and building Bridges in the several Districts "thereof": are ready to receive Proposals from any Person or Persons disposed to contract for the opening and repairing the Road and building Bridges between the Town of York and the head of BURLINGTON BAY.

Such Proposals must state at what prices the Party desirous of undertaking the aforesaid work, will engage to open, clear out, and complete the same, and must consist of the following particulars :—

At what Price per Mile such Person will open and clear out such part of the Road leading from Lot Street, adjoining the Town of York (beginning at Peter Street) to the Mouth of the Humber, of the width of 33 feet, as shall not be found to stand in need of any causeway

With the price also per Rod at which such Party will engage to open, clear out, and causeway such other part of the same Road as shall require to be causewayed, and the last mentioned price to include as well the opening and clearing out as the causewaying such Road. The causeway to be 18 feet wide; as also the price at which any Person will engage to build Bridges upon the said Road of the width of eighteen feet.

And the said Commissioners will also receive Proposals from any Person or Persons willing to engage to cut down three Hills at the following Places, viz. one at the Sixteen Mile Creek, another between the Sixteen and Twelve Mile Creek, and the third at the Twelve Mile Creek.

And also for repairing in a good and substantial manner, the Bridge at the Outlet of Burlington Bay.

All the before mentioned Work to be completed in a good and substantial manner on or before the last day of October next, and when completed, the Money contracted to be given, will be paid by the Receiver General.

But each party entering into an Engagement for any part of the aforesaid work, will be required to produce two sufficient sureties, to be bound for the performance of the Contract.

The particulars to be delivered in to WILLIAM ALLAN or DUNCAN CAMERON Esquires, of York, or to JAMES RUGGLES or WILLIAM GRAHAM Esquires, of Yonge Street, or to WILLIAM APPLEGARTH Esquire, of Flamborough East, all or whom are Commissioners named for carrying the aforesaid Act into execution.

Latest Intelligence.

BOSTON, July 18.

By yesterday's Eastern mail we received the following important foreign news :—

Newburyport, July 16.

Yesterday arrived at this port the ship Aurora, Follansbe, 35 days from Liverpool; by her we have received a London paper of the 5th of June, with two or three of previous dates: On the subject of Bonaparte's assuming a royal title, the London Sun of the first ult. observes :—

"On the 20th ult. Bonaparte was proclaimed Emperor in Paris.—Such is the end of what was called the Republican Constitution of France, which is now represented to have been only an experiment. This experiment, which cost so many hundred thousand lives, and produced scenes of horror unprecedented in the civilized world, has not been found to answer, and France ends exactly where she began—with an Absolute Monarchical Government. It is rather singular that two of Bonaparte's brothers, Lucien and Jerome do not share in the general elevation of their Family: they remain Simple Citizens, and are excluded from the succession to the Empire."

London, May 27.

Most of the Northern Courts have received assurances from Russia, of effectual protection in the event of being attacked by France. The Emperor has issued orders to all his residents in Germany and in Italy directing them to afford assistance and protection to all French emigrants who may be desirous to settle in the Russian territories.

Mr. Drake and family have reached Berlin.

Yesterday we received the following extract of a letter from Paris :—

"Domiciliary visits are now constant in Paris, where every time Bonaparte appears—the paroxisms of the military, who crowd every avenue under the houses and search every closet in them, to be assured that neither arms nor suspected persons are concealed therein; if any owner durst remonstrate against this intrusion, the answer is, de par le Consul, taisez vous!

"The Senate lately assembled at St. Cloud, to deliberate upon the powers to be confided to the New Emperor, and upon various matters connected with his coronation, but it did not form any conclusion on the subject.

"The Imperial Diadem and other regalia of the Corsican adventurer, exceeds in splendour every thing hitherto worn by any monarch; they have been in complete readiness for more than three months.

"Moreau and some others are, it is said, to be pardoned, Napoleon willing, by this act of clemency, to signalize the commencement of his Imperial government. The examinations in the Temple are frequently renewed, and the prisoners, in passing to the Hall, are each attended by two gens d'armes, through two double ranks of dragoons and gens d'armes.

"Part of the army of General Regnier has embarked on board the fleet at Toulon.

"Orders have been issued to the camps along the coast, that no officer or soldier shall, under any circumstance, be more than one day's march from his corps and to hold themselves in readiness for service at an hour's notice."

A letter from Peterburgh of the 25th April says, Count Woronzow, our Minister at the Court of London is recalled, to fill a place in our ministry. The next courier from England is expected to bring an answer, which will be immediately followed by a declaration of war against France. Louis XVIII. will be acknowledged King of France by all the members of the coalition, and all conquests but in his name will be renounced.

The Russian army on the frontiers of Padolia has been considerably reinforced; and on the 7th May, orders were issued to the troops to hold themselves in readiness to march.

By the last accounts from Hamburgh, it was the general opinion there that a Continental War would speedily take place, and that Russia will shortly declare herself. The Russian troops, it is said, are ready to act; and the fleet at Sebastopolis is in a complete state of equipment. A letter from Lemberg also states, that great numbers of Russian troops are assembling on the frontiers of Poland. Other letters say, that two more Russian frigates have passed the Dardanelles for the Seven Islands.

It is said that the views of Mr. Pitt's appointment has created general satisfaction in Ireland amongst the Catholics, who in consequence expect "a speedy redress of their grievances, and emancipation from the bondage of the penal statutes."

June 5.—Capt. Castilla from India, via Egypt and Lisbon, left Lord Nelson, with his fleet off Toulon on the 21st

The French Princes and Princesses are to be addressed by the title of their Imperial Highneſſes; and the ſiſters of the Emperor are to enjoy the ſame dignity. The great officers of the empire are to receive the title of their Serene Highneſs, and they, as well as the Princes, are to be addreſſed "Monſeigneur."

Paris, May 20.

His Imperial Majeſty has nominated to the dignity of Grand Elector, his Imperial Highneſs Prince Joſeph Bonaparte; to that of Conſtable, his Imperial Highneſs Prince Louis Bonaparte; to that of Arch-Chancellor of the Empire, the Conſul Cambaceres; and to that of Arch-Treaſurer, the Conſul Lebrun.

ALBANY, July 26.

According to Bancroft, the average quantity of fine Cochineal annually imported into England, amounts to 3,000 bags, or 600,000lbs. weight—of which about 1200 bags may be conſidered as the annual conſumption of Great Britain. Theſe 1200 bags may be computed to coſt 180,000l. ſterling.

The quantity of Indigo annually exported from St. Domingo alone, for long back as the year 1770, was computed at 2,000,000 of pounds weight.

By an account preſented to the Britiſh Houſe of Commons, it appears that the total nett produce of the Permanent Taxes on the 5th of April, 1803, including the duties on ſugar, malt and tobacco, annually voted, was 28,872,801l 2s. 10d.; and on the 5th of April, 1804, 30,355,644l. 1s. 5d.

Mr. Phillips, Bookſeller, of St. Paul's Church-yard, London, has given the Hon. Bulkrod Waſhington, fifteen hundred guineas for the Engliſh copy right of the life of his illuſtrious Uncle, compiled from his own manuſcripts.

General Hamilton's Funeral.

A Paper thus deſcribes the ſcene during the Proceſſion. "The moment of the movement was deeply impreſſive. Every thing conſpired to ſolemnize the mind. The tolling of the deep-toned bells—the melting melody of the fife and melancholy-inſpiring pace of the proceſſion—the appearance of the noble coffin, with its accompaniments—the ſons of the deceaſed, ſtill of tender age, clad in the veſtments of woe, and ſtudding the tear of anguiſh over the ſad face of a beloved Father—(unhappy youths! who will now be the guide of your growing years, the guardian of your budding virtues!)—theſe with the awe-ſtriking report of the minute guns, to which every heart beat its ſad reſponſe, rendered the whole a ſcene of ſolemn woe. Scarcely a whiſper was to be heard, but tears were ſeen rolling down the cheeks of the aſſembled multitude.—Two hours elapſed before the proceſſion reached the place of interment, owing to the ſlowneſs of the pace, and length of the rout. When the advanced platoon of the military reached the church, the whole column wheeled backwards by ſections from the flanks of platoons, forming a lane, bringing their arms to a reverſed order, and reſting the cheek on the butt of the piece, in the uſual mourning attitude of grief. Through the avenue thus formed, the Corpſe, preceded by the Clergy of different denominations and Society of Cincinnati, and followed by the relations of the deceaſed, and different public bodies, adjourned to the Church, the band, with drums muffled, all the time, playing a penſive, ſolemn air.

On a flage erected in the portico of Trinity Church Mr Gouverneur Morris, having four of General Hamilton's ſons, the eldeſt about fifteen, and the youngeſt ſix years of age, with him, turned and addreſſed to the immenſe concourſe in front, in a pathetic and impreſſive manner, the following extemporary

ADDRESS.

Fellow Citizens!

If on this ſad, this ſolemn occaſion, I ſhould endeavour to move your commiſeration, it would be doing injuſtice to that ſenſibility which has been ſo generally and ſo juſtly manifeſted. Far from attempting to excite your emotions I muſt try to repreſs my own, and yet I fear that inſtead of the language of a public ſpeaker, you will hear only the lamentations of a bewailing friend. But I will ſtruggle with my burſting heart, to pourtray that heroic ſpirit, which has flown to the manſions of bliſs.

Students of Columbia—he was in the ardent purſuit of knowledge in your academic ſhades, when the firſt ſound of the American war called him to the field. A young and unprotected volunteer, ſuch was his zeal and ſo brilliant his ſervice, that we heard his name before we knew his perſon.—It ſeemed as if GOD had called him ſuddenly into exiſtence, that he might aſſiſt to ſave a world!

The penetrating eye of Waſhington ſoon perceived the manly ſpirit which animated his youthful boſom. By that excellent judge of men he was ſelected as an Aid, and thus he became early acquainted with and was a principal actor in the moſt important ſcenes of our Revolution.

At the ſiege of York, he pertinaciouſly inſiſted—and he obtained the command of a Forlorn Hope. He ſtormed the redoubt; but let it be recorded that not one ſingle man of the enemy periſhed. His gallant troops emulating the heroiſm of their chief, checked the uplifted arm, and ſpared a foe no longer reſiſting. Here cloſed his military career.

Shortly after the war, your favour—no, your diſcernment, called him to public office. You ſent him to the Convention at Philadelphia: he there aſſiſted in forming that conſtitution which is now the bond of our union, the ſhield of our defence and the ſource of our proſperity. In ſigning that compact, he expreſſed his apprehenſion that it did not contain ſufficient means of ſtrength for its own preſervation; and that in conſequence we ſhould ſhare the fate of many other republics and paſs through Anarchy to Deſpotiſm. We hoped better things. We confided in the good ſenſe of the American people; and ſhare of us ſtudied in the protecting Providence of the Almighty. On this important ſubject he never concealed his opinion. He diſdained concealment. Knowing the purity of his heart, he bore it as it were in his hand, expoſing to every paſſenger its inmoſt receſſes. This generous indifference to ſuſpicion had him to ſuffer from miſrepreſentation. His ſpeculative opinions were treated as deliberate deſigns; and yet you all know how ſtrenuouſly how unremitting were his efforts to eſtabliſh and to preſerve the conſtitution. If, then, his opinion was wrong, pardon, oh! pardon that ſingle error, in a life devoted to your ſervice.

At the time when our government was organiſed, we were without funds, though not without reſources. To call them into action and eſtabliſh order in the finances, Waſhington ſought for ſplendid talents, for extenſive information, and, above all, he ſought for ſterling, incorruptable integrity—All theſe he found in Hamilton.—The ſyſtem then adopted has been the ſubject of much animadverſion. If it be not without a fault, let it be remembered that nothing human is perfect.—Recollect the circumſtances of the moment—recollect the conflict of opinion—and above all, remember that the miniſter of a republic muſt bend to the will of the people.—The adminiſtration which Waſhington formed, was one of the moſt efficient one of the beſt that any country was ever bleſt with. And the reſult was rapid advance in power and proſperity, of which there is no example in any other age or nation. The part which Hamilton bore is univerſally known.

His unſuſpecting confidence in profeſſions which he believed to be ſincere, led him to truſt too much to the undeſerving. This expoſed him to miſrepreſentation. He felt himſelf obliged to reſign—The care of a riſing family, and the narrowneſs of his fortune, made it a duty to return to his profeſſion for their ſupport. But though he was compelled to abandon public life, never, no, never for a moment, did he abandon the public ſervice. He never loſt ſight of your intereſts—I declare to you, before that God in whoſe preſence we are now to a perſonally aſſembled, that in his moſt private and confidential converſations the ſingle objects of diſcuſſion and conſideration were your freedom and happineſs.

You well remember the ſtate of things which again called forth Waſhington from his retreat to lead your armies. You know that he alſo choſe Hamilton to be his Second in command.—That venerable ſage well knew the dangerous incidents of a military profeſſion, and he felt the hand of time pinching life at its fource and It was probable that he would ſoon be removed from the ſcene, and that his Second would ſucceed to the command. He knew, by experience, the importance of that place—and he thought the ſword of America might ſafely be confided to the hand which now lies cold in that coffin. Oh! my fellow citizens, remember this ſolemn teſtimonial that he was not ambitious. Yet he was charged with ambition; and, wounded by the imputation, when he laid down his command, he declared, in the proud independence of his ſoul, that he never would accept of any office, unleſs in a foreign war he ſhould be called on to expoſe his life in defence of his country. This determination was immoveable. It was his fault that his opinions and his reſolutions could not be changed.—Knowing his own firm purpoſe, he was indignant at the charge that he ſought for place or power. He was ambitious only of glory, but he was deeply ſolicitous for you. For himſelf he feared nothing, but he feared that bad men might, by falſe profeſſions, acquire your confidence and abuſe it to your ruin.

Brethren of the Cincinnati—There lies our chief! Let him ſtill be our model. Like him, after long and faithful public ſervice, let us cheerfully perform the ſocial duties of private life. Oh! he was mild and gentle. In him there was no offence—no guile. His generous hand and heart were open to all.

Gentlemen of the Bar—You have loſt your brighteſt ornament. Cheriſh and imitate his example. While, like him, with juſtifiable, with laudable zeal, you purſue the intereſts of your clients, remember, like him, the eternal principles of juſtice.

Fellow Citizens.—You have long witneſſed his profeſſional conduct, and felt his unrivalled eloquence. You know how well he performed the duties of a citizen—You know that he never courted your favor by adulation or the laceriſne of his own judgment. You have ſeen him contending againſt you, and ſaving your deareſt intereſts, as it were, in ſpite of you ſelves. And you now feel and enjoy the benefits reſulting from the firm energy of his conduct. Bear this teſtimony to the memory of my departed friend. Leave you to proteſt his fame—It is all that I aſk. I will that theſe poor orphan children will inherit from their father.—But my countrymen, that Fame may be a rich treaſure to you alſo. Let it be the teſt by which to examine thoſe who ſolicit your favor. Diſregarding profeſſions, view their conduct, and on a doubtful occaſion, aſk, Would Hamilton have done ſuch a thing?

You all know how he periſhed. On this laſt ſcene, I cannot, I muſt not dwell. It might excite emotions too ſtrong for your better judgment. Suffer not your indignation to lead to any act which might again offend the inſulted majeſty of the laws. On his part, as from his lips, though with my voice—for his voice you will hear no more,—let me entreat you to reſpect yourſelves.

And now ye miniſters of the everlaſting GOD, perform your holy office, and commit theſe aſhes of our departed brother to the boſom of the Grave!

The oration being finiſhed the corpſe was carried to the grave, where the uſual funeral ſervice was performed by the Reverend Biſhop Moore. The troops who had entered the church yard, formed an extenſive hollow ſquare and terminated the ſolemnities with three vollies over the grave.

During the proceſſion there was a regular diſcharge of minute guns from the battery, by a detachment from the regiment of artillery. The diſmaſted merchant veſſels in the harbor wore their colours half maſt both ſlips and the preceding day.

His Britannic Majeſty's ſhip of war Boſton, Capt. Douglas, at anchor within the Hook, appeared in mourning the whole morning, and at ten o'clock ſhe commenced firing minute guns, which were continued forty-eight minutes. His Majeſty's packet Lord Charles Spencer, Capt Cotelworth, alſo was in mourning, and fired an equal number of guns. The French frigates Cybelle and Didon, were alſo put into full mourning both this and the preceding day, with yards peeked; they alſo fired minute guns during the proceſſion. It deſerves alſo to be mentioned, that the French ſurgeons of theſe frigates went out to Mr. Bayard's before his death and offered their ſervices. Theſe affecting marks of attention will be gratefully received by our fellow-citizens, as evidence how highly the deceaſed was reſpected and eſteemed by the French and Engliſh officers.

We have no obſervations to add—The ſcene was enough to merit a monument of marble.

[As we have already given our Readers a detail of the Funeral Obſequies of the late General HAMILTON, and as the talents and integrity of that gentlemen, and the gentleman himſelf were not unknown to a number of characters of reſpectability in this Province, we hope the following correct ſtatement of the unfortunate event, which deprived the United States of their brighteſt genius, may not be deemed unintereſting.]

July 19.

The ſtatement containing the facts that led to the interview between General Hamilton and Col. Burr, publiſhed in the Evening Poſt on Monday laſt, ſtudiouſly avoided mentioning any particulars of what paſſed at the place of meeting. This was dictated by ſuitable conſiderations at the time, and with the intention, that whatever it might be deemed proper to lay before the public, ſhould be made the ſubject of a future communication. The following is therefore now ſubmitted.

In the interviews that have ſince taken place between the gentlemen that were preſent, they have not been able to agree in two important facts that paſſed there—for which reaſon nothing was ſaid on thoſe ſubjects in the paper lately publiſhed as to other particulars in which they were agreed.

Mr. P. expreſſed a confident opinion that General Hamilton did not fire firſt—and that he did not fire at all at Col. Burr. Mr. N. V. ſeemed equally confident in opinion that General H. did fire firſt—and of courſe that it muſt have been at his antagoniſt.

General Hamilton's friend feels it to be a ſacred duty he owes to the memory of that exalted man, to his country, and his friends to publiſh to the world ſuch facts and circumſtances as have produced a deciſive conviction in his own mind, that he cannot have been miſtaken in the belief he has formed on thoſe points—

1ſt. Beſides the teſtimonies of Biſhop Moore, and the paper containing an expreſs declaration, under General Hamilton's own hand, incloſed to his friend in a packet, not to be delivered but in the event of his death, and which have already been publiſhed, General Hamilton informed Mr. P. at leaſt ten days previous to the affair, that he had doubts whether he would not receive and not return Mr. Burr's firſt fire. Mr. P. remonſtrated againſt this determination, and urged many conſiderations againſt it, as dangerous to himſelf and not neceſſary in the particular caſe, when every ground of accommodations, not humiliating, had been propoſed and rejected. He ſaid he would not decide lightly, but take time to deliberate fully. It was incidentally mentioned again at their occaſional ſubſequent converſations, and on the evening preceeding the time of the appointed interview, he informed Mr. P. he had made up his mind not to fire at Col. Burr the firſt time, but to receive his fire, and fire in the air. Mr. P. again urged him upon this ſubject, and repeated his former arguments. His final anſwer was in terms that made an impreſſion on Mr. P's. mind which can never be effaced. "My friend, it is the effect of A RELIGIOUS SCRUPLE, and does not admit of reaſoning; it is uſeleſs to ſay more on the ſubject, as my purpoſe is definitively fixed."

2d. His laſt words before he was wounded afforded a proof that this purpoſe had not changed. When he received his piſtol, after having taken his poſition, he was aſked if he would have the hair ſpring ſet?—His anſwer was, "Not this time."

3d. After he was wounded, and laid in the boat, the firſt words he uttered after recovering the power of ſpeech, were (addreſſing himſelf to a gentleman preſent, who perfectly well remembers it.)

Pendleton knows I did not mean to fire at Col. Burr the firſt time."

4th. This determination had been communicated by Mr. P. to that gentleman that morning, before they left the city.

5th. The piſtol that had been uſed by General Hamilton, laying looſe over the other apparatus in the caſe which was open; after having been ſome time in the boat, one of the boatmen took hold of it to put it into the caſe. General Hamilton obſerving this, ſaid "Take care of that piſtol, it is cocked—It may go off and do miſchief." This is alſo remembered by the gentleman alluded to.

This ſhews that he was not ſenſible of firing at all. If he had fired previous to receiving the wound, he would have remembered it, and therefore have known that the piſtol could not go off; but if afterwards it muſt have been the effect of an involuntary exertion of the muſcles produced by a mortal wound, in which caſe, he could not have been conſcious of having fired.

6th. Mr. P. having ſo ſtrong a conviction that if General Hamilton had fired firſt, it could not have eſcaped his attention, (all his anxiety being alive for the effect of the firſt fire, and having no reaſon to believe the friend of Col. Burr was not ſincere in the contrary opinion) he determined to go to the ſpot where the affair took place, to ſee if he could not diſcover ſome traces of the courſe of the ball from General Hamilton's piſtol. He took a friend with him the day after General Hamilton died, and after ſome examination they fortunately found what they were in ſearch of. They aſcertained that the ball paſſed through the limb of a cedar tree at an elevation of about twelve feet and a half, perpendicularly from the ground, between thirteen and fourteen feet from the mark on which General Hamilton ſtood, and about four feet wide of the direct line between him and Col. Burr, on the right ſide; he having fallen on the left. The part of the limb through which the ball paſſed was cut off and brought to this city, and is now in Mr. Church's poſſeſſion.

No inferences are pointed out as reſulting from theſe facts, nor will any comments be made. They are left to the candid judgment and feelings of the public.

The following paper, in the hand writing of Gen. Hamilton, was incloſed with his will and ſome other papers in a packet addreſſed to one of his executors, which was of courſe not to have been delivered but in caſe of the melancholy event that has happened. As it contains his motives and reflections on the cauſes that have led to this fatal cataſtrophe, it is deemed proper to communicate it to the public.

No. 12.

On my expected interview with Col. Burr, I think it proper to make ſome remarks explanatory of my conduct, motives and views. I was certainly deſirous of avoiding this interview for the moſt cogent reaſons.

1. My religious and moral principles are ſtrongly oppoſed to the practice of duelling, and it would ever give me pain to be obliged to ſhed the blood of a fellow creature in a private combat forbidden by the laws.

2. My wife and children are extremely dear to me, and my life is of the utmoſt importance to them, in various views.

3. I feel a ſenſe of obligation towards my creditors; who in caſe of accident to me, by the forced ſale of my property, may be in ſome degree ſufferers. I did not think myſelf at liberty, as a man of probity, lightly to expoſe them to this hazard.

4. I am conſcious of no ill will to Colonel Burr, diſtinct from political oppoſition, which as I truſt, has proceeded from pure and upright motives.

Laſtly, I ſhall hazard much, and can poſſibly gain nothing, by the iſſue of the interview.

But it was, as I conceive, impoſſible for me to avoid it. There were intrinſic difficulties in the thing, and artificial embarraſſments from the manner of proceeding on the part of Col. Burr.

Intrinſic, becauſe it is not to be denied, that my animadverſions on the political principles, character and views of Col. Burr have been extremely ſevere; and on different occaſions, I, in common with many others, have made very unfavourable criticiſms on particular inſtances of the private conduct of this Gentleman.

In proportion as theſe impreſſions were entertained with ſincerity and uttered with motives and for purpoſes which might appear to me commendable, would be the difficulty (until they could be removed by evidence of their being erroneous,) of explaination or apology. The diſavowal required of me by Col. Burr, in a general and indefinite form, was out of my power, if it had really been proper for me to ſubmit to be ſo queſtioned: I was ſincerely of opinion, that this could not be, and in this opinion, I was confirmed by that of a very moderate and judicious friend whom I conſulted. Beſides that, Col. Burr appeared to me to aſſume in the firſt inſtance, a tone unneceſſarily peremptory and menacing, and in the ſecond, politively offenſive. Yet I wiſhed, as far as might be practicable, to leave a door open to accommodation. This, I think, will be inferred from the written communications made by me and by my direction, and would be confirmed by the converſations between Mr. Van Neſs and myſelf, which aroſe out of the ſubject.

I am not ſure whether, under all the circumſtances, I did not go further in the attempt to accommodate, than a punctilious delicacy will juſtify. If ſo, I hope the motives I have ſtated will excuſe me.

It is not any deſign, by what I have ſaid, to affix my odium on the conduct of Col. Burr, in this caſe—He doubtleſs has heard of animadverſions of mine, which bore very hard upon him; and it is probable that as uſual they were accompanied with ſome falſehoods. He may have ſuppoſed himſelf under a neceſſity of acting as he has done. I hope the grounds of his proceeding have been ſuch as ought to ſatisfy his own conſcience.

I truſt, at the ſame time, that the world will do me the juſtice to believe, that I have not cenſured him on light grounds, nor from unworthy inducements. I certainly have had ſtrong reaſons for what I may have ſaid, though it is poſſible that in ſome particulars, I may have been influenced by miſconſtruction or miſinformation. It is alſo my ardent wiſh that I may have been more miſtaken than I think I have been, and that he, by his future conduct, may ſhow himſelf worthy of all confidence and eſteem, and prove an ornament and bleſſing to the country.

As well becauſe it is poſſible that I may have injured Col. Burr, however convinced myſelf that my opinions and declarations have been well founded, as from my general principles and temper in relation to ſimilar affairs, I have reſolved, if our interview is conducted in the uſual manner, and if it pleaſes God to give me the opportunity, to reſerve and throw away my firſt fire, and I have thoughts even of reſerving my ſecond fire—and thus giving a double opportunity to Col. Burr to peauſe and reflect.

It is not, however, my intention to enter into any explanations on the ground—Apology, from principle I hope rather than pride, is out of the queſtion.

To thoſe, who, with me, abhorring the practice of duelling, may think that I ought on no account to have added to the number of bad examples, anſwer, that my relative ſituation, as well in public as private, enforcing all the conſiderations which conſtitute what men of the world denominate honour, impoſed on me (as I though) a peculiar neceſſity not to decline the call. The ability to be in future uſeful, weather in reſiſting miſchief or effecting good, in thoſe criciſes of our public affairs, which ſeem likely to happen, would probably be inſeparable from a conformity with public prejudice in this particular. A. H.

WILL—In the name of GOD, Amen—

I, ALEXANDER HAMILTON, of the City of New York, Counſellor at Law, do make this my laſt Will and Teſtament, as follows:—

Firſt. I appoint John B. Church, Nicholas Fiſh, and Nathaniel Pendleton, of the city aforeſaid, Eſquires, to be Executors and Truſtees of this my Will, and I deviſe to them, their heirs and aſſigns as joint tenants and not as tenants in common, all my eſtate real and perſonal whatſoever, and wherever, upon truſt at their diſcretion, to ſell and diſpoſe of the ſame, at ſuch time and times, in ſuch manner and upon ſuch terms, as they the ſurvivors and ſurvivor ſhall think fit, and out of the proceeds to pay all the debts which I ſhall owe at the time of my deceaſe; in whole if the fund be ſufficient; proportionably, if it ſhall be inſufficient, and the reſidue, if any there ſhall be, to pay and deliver to my excellent and dear wife Elizabeth Hamilton.

Though if it ſhould pleaſe God to ſpare my life, I may look for a conſiderable ſurplus out of my preſent property; yet if he ſhould call me peedily to the eternal world, a forced sale, as is usual, may possibly render it insufficient to satisfy my debts. I pray God that something may remain for the maintenance and education of my dear wife and children. But should it on the contrary happen, that there is not enough for the payment of my debts, I entreat my dear children, if they or any of them should ever be able, to make up the deficiency. I without hesitation commit to their delicacy a wish which is dictated by my own. Though conscious that I have too far sacrificed the interest of my family to public avocations, and on this account have the less claim to burthen my children, yet I trust in their magnanimity to appreciate as they ought, this my request. In so unfavourable an event of things, the support of their dear mother, with the most respectful and tender attention, is a duty all the sacredness of which they will feel. Probably her own patrimonial resources will preserve her from indigence. But in all situations they are charged to bear in mind that she has been to them the most devoted and best of mothers.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto subscribed my hand the 9th day of July, in the year of our Lord 1804.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON.

Upon opening the General's will, there was found enclosed in it a letter to his wife, written on the 4th inst. in which he tells her, that he had endeavoured, by all possible means to avoid this duel, but that he found it impossible unless by acting in a manner, which would justly forfeit her esteem. That he should certainly fall, and she should receive the letter, after his death. He begs her forgiveness for being the cause of so much pain to her, and earnestly entreats her to bear herself up under that load of grief with which she would be overwhelmed, placing a firm reliance on a kind Providence, who would never desert her.

BOSTON, July 18.

Since our last, the arrival of the ship Vermouth, Capt Rich, from Bourdeaux, has placed in our hands papers of that city, of the 24th May.

The following intelligence, respecting French preparations, &c. is communicated by Capt Cooke, a passenger in the Tamerlane, which arrived on Monday from Amsterdam

Capt C left Boulogne, the 20th of April. At that time there were lying in the harbour, inside the pier heads, 500 gun brigs and schooners: 600 pinaces rowing 32 oars, and carrying 58 men; 300 boys and hatgreaux plats, and several prams. The latter have three keels two decks, and carry twenty 24 pounders and 150 horses. The line of encampment extended from Boulogne three leagues to the southward. It was said to contain 150,000 men, and new recruits were daily arriving. A few days previous to my leaving Boulogne, the Admiral of the fleet and two Generals, were recalled to Paris, and others sent to take their stations. This created considerable alarm, which was heightened by an attempt to fire the fleet in Boulogne bason, on the night of the 13th of April. In consequence of which the city gates were closed, the playhouse doors and public places guarded, and every person in them examined. Those who did not give a good account of themselves were committed to prison. No stranger was allowed to remain more than 24 hours in the city let his business be ever so urgent, it was on the public service. The harbours making at Ambleteuse, Etaplos and Vermarues, employed each two thousand men, every tide, night and day; but were not in a situation to take more than 100 small boats in. There generally lay in good weather before Boulogne and Ambleteuse, 25 or 30 sail of English men of war at anchor. None of the French ships lay in Boulogne Road. Every easterly wind small fleets ventured along shore from the eastward toward Boulogne, but so close to the shore as to be covered by the batteries and flying artillery. Notwithstanding which the enemy frequently succeeded in driving them on shore or into some by port.

In Calais harbour there lay about 70 flat boats, and 40 were building and two prams.

The inhabitants had quartered on them 1000 chasseurs, 500 buzzets and 1500 Italian soldiers, under the command of General Vandam. No stranger was allowed to visit the quays or ramparts fronting the sea. All look outs on private houses were sealed up that no signal might be given to the enemy that lay before the harbour at anchor.

EXTRACT.

The following beautiful poem, selected from the Caledonian Mercury,' is truly characteristic. The spirit of the valorous Scot, and the ease of the Caledonian muse, are visible in every couplet. If the editor is not biassed in judgement by a partiality to the Scotch lyre, the ode may be considered one of the finest effusions its interesting subject has produced.

ODE TO SCOTTISH PATRIOTS.

CALEDONIANS, turn your eyes
Where Gallia's gaudy banner flies,
Hear her cowards tantalize,
And threaten ye with slavery.
Hear their vaunting leader vow,
By all the laurels on his brow,
That he'll make Caledonians bow,
And trample on their liberty!
Patriot Scottish youths, then turn,
See the field of Bannock burn,
Paule o'er mighty Bruce's urn,
And mark "the vale of Ellerslie."
Think on the days when Roman foes,
Pluck'd the ruddy English Rose,
But yielded where the Thistle grows,
And Scotchmen shouted victory.
Think on that immortal day,
"The forest flowers were wed away,"
When purple current drench'd the clay,
And ay'd the hero's cemetry.
Sons of gallant warriors flain!
Undereath your fathers' swars again,
Their spirits linger on the plain,
Where'er you fight for liberty!
Sons of departed warriors, fly
To arms with valour-burning eye,
And swear to conquer or to die,
For King and country gloriously!
Appal'd not in the battle's roar,
Mid blood and anguish, smoke and gore,
When thoulands sink forevermore,
To centeriels eternity!
There, even there, in nature's thrill,
At times, your filial bolom fill,
On thele at home who linger still,
O lometimes dart your memory!
In danger's very darkest hour,
Think on the bloomy wreathed bower,
Where first the rapture filing power
Of beauty's smile enchanted thee.
Think on your sweetheart's sighs and tears,
Your fifters, parents, anxious fears,
On all that locial lire endears,
And all your love to tenderly.
On, Scotchmen! to the combat push!
With all your native valour ruth!
Fight till the heart's red torrent gush
From your laft-living enemy.

TO BE SOLD BY AUCTION.
AT COOPER'S TAVERN IN YORK.

ON Monday the Twentieth Day of AUGUST next, at Eleven o'Clock in the Forenoon, (if not previously disposed of by private Contract) that highly cultivated Lot opposite the Printing Office, containing one Acre, together with a Nursery thereon of about ten thousand Apple, three hundred Peach, and twenty Pear Trees, and an Orchard containing forty-one Apple Trees in for bearing, twenty-seven of which are full of Fruit; thirty Peach and nine Cherry Trees in full Fruit; besides black and red Plumbs, red and white Currants, English Gooseberries, Lilacs, Rose-bushes, &c. &c. also a very rich Kitchen Garden.—The Buildings are, a small two and half Story House, a good Cellary Stable and Smoke-house; on the Lot is a never-failing spring of excellent Water, and a fine Creek running through one corner most part of the year.

The above Premises might be made very commodious or a Gentleman at a small expence; or for a Tanner, Currier, Shoemaker, or Potter, must be allowed the most convenient place in York. A Credit of the Premises (by any person or persons desirous of purchasing the same) will be a sufficient recommendation.

The Nursery is in such a state or forwardness, that if sold in from two to three years (at which time the Apple Trees will be fit to transplant) at the moderate price of one Shilling each, would repay a sum double to that asked for the whole, and leave a further gain to the Purchasers, of the Lot, Buildings, and flourishing Orchard thereon. A good Title to the above, and possession given any time after the first of October next.

Also at the same time and place will be sold, the Right as per Register, to one hundred Acres in front of Lot 64, East side Yonge Street, for which a Deed can be procured at pleasure, and the remainder of the Lot procured for a small Sum. It is an excellent soil for Orchard, Grain and Pasture Land; there is a Field of ten Acres in Fence besides other Clearing. It is a beautiful Situation, having part of the Lake commonly called Bond's Lake, within the said Lot, which affords a great supply of Fish and Fowl. Terms of payment will be made known on the day of Sale. For further particulars enquire of the Subscriber on the former Premises, or the Printer hereof.

WM. JARVIS, Secretary.

UPPER CANADA.

NOTICE is hereby given that the Commissioners for the Home District, appointed by a certain Statute of the Provincial Legislature, passed during the Session of the present year, intituled, "An Act for granting to His "Majesty a certain sum of Money out of the Funds "applicable to the uses of this Province to defray "the expences of amending and repairing the Public "Highways and Roads, laying out and opening new "Roads and building Bridges in the several Districts "thereof" are ready to receive Proposals from any Person or Persons disposed to contract for the opening and repairing the Road and building Bridges between the Town of York and the head of BURLINGTON BAY.

Such Proposals must state at what prices the Party desirous of undertaking the aforesaid work, will engage to finish and complete the same, and must consist of the following particulars:—

At what Price per Mile such Person will open and clear out such part of the Road leading from Lot Street, adjoining the Town of York (beginning at Peter Street) to the Mouth of the Humber, of the width of 33 feet, as shall not be found to stand in need of any causeway.

With the price also per Rod at which such Party will engage to open, clear out, and causeway such other part of the same Road as shall require to be causewayed, and the last mentioned price to include as well the opening and clearing out as the causewaying such Road. The causeway to be 18 feet wide; as also the price at which any Person will engage to build Bridges upon the said Road of the width of eighteen feet.

And the said Commissioners will also receive Proposals from any Person or Persons willing to engage to cut down three Hills at the following Places, viz one on the Sixteen Mile Creek, another between the Sixteen and Twelve Mile Creek, and the third at the Twelve Mile Creek.

And also for repairing in a good and substantial manner, the Bridge at the Outlet of Burlington Bay.

All the before mentioned Work to be completed in a good and substantial manner on or before the last day of October next, and when completed, the Money contracted to be given, will be paid by the Receiver General.

But each party entering into an Engagement for any part of the aforesaid work, will be required to produce two sufficient sureties, to be bound for the performance of the Contract.

The particulars to be delivered in to WILLIAM ALLAN or DUNCAN CAMERON Esquires, of York, or to JAMES RUGGLES or WILLIAM GRAHAM Esquires, of Yonge Street, or to WILLIAM APPLEGARTH Esquire, of Flamborough East, all of whom are Commissioners named for carrying the aforesaid Act into execution.

YORK, 28th July, 1804.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER Esquire,
Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

HOUSE OF COMMONS,

London, April 23d, 1804.

DEFENCE OF THE NATION.

Mr. Fox made his promifed motion on this important bufinefs.—In a very long fpeech he ftated the infufficiency, in his opinion of our prefent means of defence againft the enemy. He recommended the increafe of the regular army, and the eftablifhment of an armed peafantry, artifans, and the general population of the country, for, if the enemy were determined to invade us, he would continue the preparation year after year. He difapproved the conduct of miniflers, and concluded by moving "That it be referred to a Committee of the whole Houfe to revife the feveral bills for the defence of the country, and to confider of fuch further meafures as may be neceffary to make that defence more complete and permanent."

The Chancellor of the Exchequer faid, the Hon. Gentleman had urged one of the moft extraordinary motions, that within his parliamentary experience has ever been fubmitted to the Houfe. The object of it was to appoint a Committee, to revife the acts that have been paffed for the defence of the country, and to confider and provide adequate means for the protection of it in future. He defended, at great length the conduct of Miniflers, and concluded by obferving, that a great ftate neceffity might juftify the appointment of fuch a Committee; but he left it to the wifdom of the Houfe to determine, if any proofs of fuch neceffity have been advanced in fupport of the prefent dangerous and extraordinary meafures.—It is upon thefe grounds, he faid i oppofe the motion of the Hon. Gentleman, and I hope a majority of this Houfe will agree with me in opinion, that no found reafons have been urged to recommend it; that no neceffity has been proved to juftify it, and that as it has been brought forward from motives different from what are profeffed, it is unworthy to be entertained or adopted by the Houfe.

Mr. Pitt, in a very brilliant fpeech, of great length, difapproved of the conduct of Miniflers in the defence of the country, and particulary with regard to drilling of the Volunteer Corps, which he faid had by no means been fufficient to render them fit for actual military fervice. He did not mean to fay, 400,000 volunteers, a ftrong military force, and a well difciplined militia, was not adaquate to the fafety of the country; but what number of that condition, he afked, could be aflembled near any of the points likely to be attacked? At the clofe of the fpeech he recommended a fyftem of fortification, and faid I am convinced, that in no one inftance, in no one branch of defence is the country in that ftate of fecurity with which the Houfe ought to be fatisfied—He concluded by giving his warmeft fupport to Mr. Fox's motion.

Mr. Yorke defended the conduct of Miniflers in ftrong terms. He was willing to fuftain his portion of the cenfure, if any would apply; but he contended that according to his own views the beft attention had been paid to the fecurity of the nation.

Mr. G. Vanfittart faid, he confidered the prefent motion to be an attempt to force the Miniflers out of their places, and was fimilar to that made in the year 1784, which was reprobated by every perfon in the country.

The Attorney General, in a very animated fpeech faid, that if Bonaparte felt any difpofition to infult and attack this country, he knew of nothing fo well calculated to induce him to believe he may do it with impunity, as the language held on that occafion by the Right Hon. Gentleman, (Mr. Fox.) He recapitulated feveral of the ftatements of a public force, in vindication of the vigilance and activity of Miniflers, which he urged were never furpaffed by any Miniflers of this country, at any period of our hiftory.—For the peace which was concluded, he faid every Britifh heart acknowledged gratitude to his majefty's prefent Miniflers, and to them is entirely owing the unanimity of the whole empire in fupport of the prefent war—in unanimity worth all the foldiers that were difbanded at the conclufion of the peace. But the Hon. Gentleman allows no excufe to his majefty's Miniflers, for recommending an unavoidable war, but charges them with involving the country in danger. He concluded by obferving, that it would become the wifdom of the houfe to paufe before they adopted the motion.

Mr. Windham argued in favor of the motion; and Mr. Tierney, in reply, faid he would refift his (Mr. W's) return to power, as a thing that would fpread diftrafs through the country.

On a divifion of the houfe, there appeared, for Mr. Fox's motion 204; againft it 256—Majority 52.

The Houfe adjourned at 4 o'clock on Tuefday morning.

From the N. Y. Daily Advertifer July 26.

Through the politenefs of our commercial friends, who will pleafe accept our grateful acknowledgments, we have received files of Paris papers fo late as the 11th ult. inclufive.—Their contents are extremely intereffing. The trial of Moreau, Georges, and the other confpirators commenced before the court of criminal juftice, on the 28th of May, and after thirteen fittings came to a clofe on the 11th June. We are happy to be able to lay before our readers the refult of thefe moft important judiciary proceedings. "This day, the 21ft Prairial," fays the Journal de commerce of June 11th, "at 3 o'clock in the morning, and after twenty-four hours deliberation, the court of criminal juftice has condemned to the punifhment of death Georges Cadoudal, Bouvet de l'Hozier, Ruffillon, Rochelle, Louis Ducorps, Louis Picot, Lajolais, Michel Roger, Coffor St. Victor, Deville, Armand Gaillard, Joyeux de Villeneuve, Burdun, Lemercier Cadoudal, Merille, Armand Polignac, Charles d'Hozier, Ledan et Riviere.

The following accufed perfons, Victor Moreau, Jules Polignac, Leridan, Rolland and Marie Hilay, declared guilty, have been condemned to two two years imprifonment. Thofe whofe names follow have been acquitted: Coucherry, l'Abbe David, Herve, Rubin Lagrimaudiere, Lenoble, Noel Decorps, Datay, Even, Troche, the father, Troche the fon, Denand and wife Verdet and wife, Spin, Dubuiffon and wife, Caron, Gallais and wife, Mounier and wife. Thefe, with the exception of Verdet, Denand and wife, Dubuiffon and wife have been liberated, who, for contravention of the law have been remitted to the houfe of correction.

The Argus of the 30th May contains a letter of Moreau, addreffed to the (ci-devant) firft conful, written on the 17 Ventofe, about a month after his imprifonment, in which he explains his relations with the unfortunate Pichegru, which, he fays, however imprudent were far from being criminal. He concludes by faying, "I expect your decifion on my fate with the calm of innocence, but not without an apprehenfion of feeing thofe enemies triumph who are always attracted by celebrity."

From NEW-YORK—July 10.

THE fhip Charles & Harriet, capt. Delano, of New Bedford, from Sligo, for this port, with 230 paffengers, arrived here yefterday. They left Sligo on the 15th May, and on coming on the coaft were informed that the Cambrian and Boflon frigates were at or near the harbor of New-York. Capt. D. from motives of humanity, accordingly agreed to come through the Sound; on arriving off Throg's neck, underftanding the quarantine law was in force, and terrified at the apprehenfion of a long detention on board, the paffengers formed a determination to force a landing, and in fpite of the oppofition of the captain and officers effected at Hunt's Point, in Weft Chefter.—Capt. D. on difcovering their intentions, which firft difplayed itfelf in the attempt of feveral to fwim on fhore, armed himfelf and officers, and threatened if they offered to leave the veffel to fire on them; but neither threats or perfuafion had any avail; they gave him to underftand that any act of hoftility on his part would be made at the rifque of his life—that they were determined that no oppofition that he could bring into exercife was adequate to prevent the execution of their defign; having accordingly engaged fuch boats as approached them from the fhore, men, women, and children, to an amount of nearly the whole number made a landing in the courfe of Sunday, and fet off on foot to find their way to the city.

Their departure from hom[illegible] derftood was fomewhat precipitate, many of them belonging to the yeomanry, and volunteer corps, an order for their detention was momently expected, but through great exertions the fhip was enabled to weigh anchor a day or two before the time allotted, and out failing the government cutter, by whom they were purfued for five or fix miles, they made their efcape. Had fhe overtaken them a dreadful carnage muft have enfued, as they were refolved to die before they fuffered themfelves to be taken back; the cutter was armed with a ftrong military force to compel a furrender. They are all remarkably healthy, having had no ficknefs on board fince they left Sligo, and (except a child, who died in a fit,) no death.

NEW YORK. July 30.

The Swedifh fchooner Sufannah capt. Gilway, 10 days from Jeremie, put into Naffau, N P. on the 9th inft. in diftrefs. Capt. G. informs, that four days before he failed, a general maffacre of the whites took place at Jeremie, when upwards of 1000 men, women and children, fell victims to the fanguinary rage of the brigands. The caufe they afligned for this maffacre was, the defertion of a Mr. Reynolds (a white man) an officer in the fervice of the brigands, who went on boards the Britifh frigate Tartar, Capt. Perkins. Information was fent to Gen. Deffalines, and he difpatched an officer with orders to fee a general maffacre executed.

His Imperial Majefty's frigates Didon and Cybele, now at anchor off Port Jay, were yefterday handfomely decorated with the colors of the different nations; and in the morning at noon, and at evening, Royal falutes of 21 guns were fired from each of them, in confequence of Bonaparte's being declared Emperor of the Gauls!

FROM LONDON PAPERS.

IT has been a maxim with all revolutionary rulers in France to invent conſpiracies; traitors themſelves, they ſaw in every oppoſer a rebel againſt their authority, and in every rival a conſpirator againſt their power. When their popularity was decreaſing, or when they apprehended the punifhment due to their crimes; when their deeds of vengeance became abhorred, or when their abſurd ſchemes of external ambition had miſcarried; when defeats had irritated their pride, or factions raged in their armies; when the ſoldiers wanted pay, or the people bread; to ſilence clamor, and to divert the attention of an offended but giddy French public; plots were announced, denounced, and punifhed; priſons filled, ſcaffolds erected, or the wilds of Cayenne peopled with victims. According to Prudhomme and other French writers, during the ten years, from 1789 to 1799, the different Kings of factions in that period, pretend to have diſcovered no leſs than 860 conſpiracies, of which 600 were not real, though they have coſt the lives and liberties of no leſs than one hundred and forty four thouſand perſons, of whom nine thouſand ſix hundred and ſixty ſix women. Poultier, originally a Capuchin friar, whom the revolution converted ſucceſsfully into a ſtrolling player, a regicide, a legiſlator, a general, and an author, acknowledged in his work of On Republican Parties, "that "of thoſe 860 pretended conſpiracies, he had, by the deſire of Mirabeau, Orleans, Briſſot, Danton, Robeſpierre, or Barras, invented ſeven hundred and twenty, and publiſhed them in his daily newſpaper called, L'amie des Loix, as real," he adds ingenuouſly, "That France will ceaſe to be a republic, if ſhe ceaſes to be agitated; and ſecure from preſent dangers, gives the people time to recollect their paſt uninterrupted tranquility; to ſee what they are, and to remember what they were."

FEMALE SWINDLER AT VIENNA.

LAST Autumn a Lady, calling herſelf a Baroneſs, arrived at Vienna, in a brilliant equipage attended by four mens ſervants, and two maids. She took very elegant appartments, which ſhe furniſhed in ſtyle. All her expences were paid in ready money and in gold. She was preſented at Court, and in the firſt circles, as the widow of a Pruſſian Colonel immenſely rich. In November ſhe received a credit from a Banking houſe at Hamburgh, upon one of the firſt Bankers at Vienna, for 50,000 florins. Her expences and inſinuating manners, with a tolerably good perſon, and the character of a widow in affluence, procured her numerous admirers, and a number of ſuitors; amongſt others, ſeveral of the young nobility. She declined, however, all offers of marriage, having determined upon an eternal widowhood, in gratitude for the large fortune left her by her ever regretted huſband.—She went regularly to church and to confeſſion, was irreproachable in her conduct, and chaſte in her manners and converſation. She was looked upon as a model of virtue and religion, and ſome became the envy of her own ſex, by becoming the admirers of the other. She was very charitable to the poor, viſited often the hoſpitals, and ſubſcribed largely to philanthropic inſtitutions. The houſe oppoſite to her apartments belonging to a young man, ſon of a grocer, who had a very high opinion of his own perſon and merit, becauſe his father had left him 300,000 florins. He addreſſed himſelf to one of her ſervants, to have a letter delivered to the Baroneſs with an offer of his hand and fortune, but was repulſed with indignity. For a large preſent the ſame ſervant undertook again, tho' at the riſk of loſing his ſervice, to carry another letter, which met with a leſs ſevere reception. The Baroneſs being ſmitten with the perſon of the young man, whom at laſt ſhe admitted privately into her preſence, and after many prayers, ſighs, tears, and proteſts, ſhe agreed to give him her hand next Eaſter; but having refuſed ſo many great people, the young man was ſaid under ſtrict ſecrecy, and their marriage was to be celebrated at Berlin.

In December laſt ſhe received a letter, importing that her youngeſt ſiſter was promiſed to a Pruſſian Nobleman. She confulted her ſecret lover, whom ſhe had perſuaded to believe that ſhe had a fortune of 200,000 florins in the year, about the preſent ſhe would make her ſiſter on her wedding day, as it was agreed that it could not be of leſs value than 80,000 florins laid out in diamonds; and as ſhe wanted to chooſe the young man was deſired to bring 400,000 worth from his uncle, a jeweller, whom ſhe ſaid ſhe would pay in ready money for what the determined to keep.

The diamonds were brought in the evening, and left for her inſpection, until the next day. But when the young man called at the appointed time the ſervants told their miſtreſs was ill, and could ſee no company before the day after; and when the duped lover came returned, he was informed that the Baroneſs, with one of her female ſervants, had 48 hours before left the houſe; but previouſly wiſhed to declare herſelf if enquired after, as ſhe was going to the Urſuline Convent to make her devotions. She had indeed been there, but ſwindled the ſuperior of a brilliant croix of the greateſt value which the late Empreſs Maria Thereſa had given to the ſtatue of a miraculous virgin, and the Baroneſs had borrowed it as a pattern, as one ſhe intended to give her ſiſter.—She has the ſame day been at her Bankers, and upon preſence of buying jewels for her ſiſter's marriage, had obtained in gold, at 3 bank notes for bills on Hamburgh, 150,000 fl. more than ſhe had credit for. It has ſince been found out that ſhe had played the ſame tricks at Berlin, Dreſden, and at Naples. Couriers have been ſent every where after her, but in vain—the only information obtained is, that a lady nearly anſwering the deſcription, had embarked laſt month at Embden, either for England or for America. It is ſaid, that her defolate and deſerted lover, is now on his way to this country; and if he can find her out, intends to forgive, and marry her. She is about twenty-five years of age, ſpeaks fluently moſt European languages, has a fine taſte for drawing, and plays the piano-forte in exquiſite ſtyle.

FROM A LONDON PAPER OF MAY 13.

Dreadful fire at Bayonne.—Yeſterday we received a letter from Liſbon by the Britannia, Brown, arrived in the Downs from the Tagus, which ſtates the Bayonne has recently been nearly deſtroyed by fire.—The date of this calamity is not mentioned, but our correſpondent gives the following account of it: "the flames were not diſcovered till 6 o'clock in the morning, when they burſt forth with irreſiſtable violence—The large ſtores filled with brandy, tar, &c. preſented one ſheet of fire, aſcending into the air upwards of 200 feet above the buildings—The brandy, tar, oil, &c. formed a ſtream, and running into the Adour, preſented the ſingular and terrible ſpectacle of a river on fire.—The fire continued burning violently for two days, during which many lives, and property to the value of two millions of francs, were loſt.

Inſtead of the form for promulgating laws under the new French Conſtitution, "NAPOLEON, by the grace of God, &c." one of the London papers recommends him to copy ſome of the Engliſh ancient judicial forms, and have it—"Napoleon, by the inſtigation of the devil, and by force and arms Emperor of the French," &c.

Governor WALL.

From Carr's Stranger in France.

As I have alluded to the fate of Governor Wall, I will conclude this chapter by an anecdote of the terror and infatuation of guilt, displayed in the conduct of this wretched man, in the presence of a friend of mine, from whom I received it. A few years before he suffered, fatigued with life, and pursued by poverty, and the frightful remembrance of his offences, then almost forgotten by the world, he left the south of France for Calais, with an intention of passing over to England, to offer himself up to its laws, not without the cherished hope that a lapse of twenty years had swept away all evidence of his guilt.

At the time of his arrival at this port town, the hotel in which madame H. was waiting for a packet to Dover was very crowded—the landlord requested of her, that she would be pleased to permit two gentlemen who were going to England to take some refreshment in her room; these persons proved to be the unfortunate Brooks, a King's messenger charged with important dispatches to his court, and Governor W——. The latter was dressed like a decayed gentleman, and wore about him all the indications of his extreme condition. They had not been seated at the table long, before the latter informed the former, with evident marks of perturbation, that his name was W——,that having been charged in England with offences, which if true subjected him to heavy punishment, he was anxious to place himself at the disposal of its laws, and requested of him, as he was an English messenger, that he would consider him as his prisoner, and take charge of him.

The messenger who was much surprised by the application, told him that he could not, upon such a representation, take him into custody, unless he had an order from the Duke of Portland's office to that effect, and that, in order to obtain it, it would be proper for him to write his name, that it might be compared with his hand writing in the office of the secretary at war, which he offered to carry over with him. Governor W—— still pressed him to take him into custody; the messenger more strongly declined it, by informing him that he was the bearer of dispatches of great importance to his court, that he must immediately cross the channel, and hazard a passage, although the weather looked lowering, in an open boat, as no packets had arrived; and that consequently it was altogether impossible to take him over, but again requested him to write his name, for the purpose already mentioned. The Governor consented; pens and paper were brought; but the hand of the murderer shook so dreadfully, that he could not write it, and in an agony of mind, bordering upon frenzy, he rushed out of the room and immediately left the town.

The messenger entered the boat and set sail; a storm quickly followed; the boat sunk in sight of the pier, and all on board but one of the watermen perished!

THE ORACLE.

YORK:—SATURDAY, AUGUST 25.

On Thursday last arrived here from Quebec Colonel Green Secretary to the Lieutenant Governor.—We understand his Excellency the Lieut. Governor owing to indisposition on the route, was under the necessity of remaining a short time in order to re-establish his health—but may be daily expected.

POETRY.

ODE,

FOR HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY'S BIRTH DAY, 1804.

BY W. J. PYE, ESQ. F. L.

I.

AS the bleft Guardian of the British Ifles,
Immortal Liberty, triumphant ftood,
And view'd her gallant fons with favouring fmiles,
Undaunted heroes of the field or flood;
From Inverary's rocky fhores,
Where loud the Hyperborean billow roars,
To where the furges of the Atlantic wave,
Around Cornubia's weftern borders rave,
While Erin's valiant warriors glow
With kindred fire to crufh the injurious foe,
From her bright lance the flames of vengeance ftream,
And in her eagle eye fhines glory's radiant beam.

II.

Why fink thofe fmiles in forrow's figh;
Why forrow's tears fuffufe that eye?
Alas! while weeping Britain fees
The baleful fiends of pale difeafe
Malignant hovering near her throne,
And threat a Monarch all her own—
No more from Anglia's fertile land,
No more from Caledonia's ftrand,
From Erin's hereby hills no more
The panting legions crowd the fhore:
The buoyant barks, the vaunting hoft
That fwarm on Gallia's hoftile coaft,
The anxious thought no longer fhare,
Loft in a nearer, dearer care,
And Britain breathes alone for GEORGE's life her prayer.

III.

Her prayer is heard—Th' Almighty Power,
Portent to punifh or to fave,
Bids Health refume againft her happier hour:—
And as across the milky wave
The freth'ning breezes fweep the clouds away
That hid awhile the golden orb of day,
So from Hygeia's balmy breath
Fly the dread fhadows of difeafe and death.—
Again the manly breaft beats high,
And flames again the indignant eye,
While from the cottage to throne,
This generous fentiment alone
Lives in each heart with patriot ardor warm,
Points every fword, nerves every Britton's arm,
"Ruth to the field where GEORGE and freedom lead,
"Glory and fame ftrike the warrior's meed,
"Brave in their country's caufe, who conquer or who bleed."

A SINGULAR inftance of love at firft fight occurred lately. A gentleman paffing in his chariot early in the morning, was ftruck with the appearance of a fmart girl, waffhing the fteps of a door way—he ftopped and having entered into five minutes converfation with her perfuaded this Nymph of the Mop to ftep into the carriage with him in her dripping ftate, and the next morning conveyed her in better trim to the church, and married her!

THE Dutchefs of Devonfhire, while waiting in her carriage one day in the ftreets of London, obferved a Duftman, with a fhort pipe in his hand, looking at her. Having gazed a few feconds with intenfenefs, he broke into a fmile, and faid "Lord love your ladyfhip, I wifh you would let me light my pipe at your eyes." Her grace took it in good part, and was fo pleafed with the whimfical frankneſs of the compliment, that when any thing civil is faid to her, fhe often remarks "Very well; but nothing like the Duftman."

A humorous author compares love to the fmall-pox. The longer it is in making its appearance, the more violent is the diforder.

WM. JARVIS, Secretary.

UPPER CANADA.

NOTICE is hereby given that the Commissioners for the Home District, appointed by a certain Statute of the Provincial Legislature, passed during the Session of the present years, intituled, "An Act for granting to His "Majesty a certain sum of Money out of the Funds "applicable to the uses of this Province to defray "the expence of amending and repairing the Public "Highways and Roads, laying out and opening new "Roads and building Bridges in the several Districts "thereof," are ready to receive Proposals from any Person or Persons disposed to contract for the opening and repairing the Road and building Bridges between the Town of York and the head of BURLINGTON BAY.

Such Proposals must state at what prices the Party desirous of undertaking the aforesaid work, will engage to finish and complete the same, and must consist of the following particulars:—

At what Price per Mile such Person will open and clear out such part of the Road leading from Lot Street, adjoining the Town of York (beginning at Potter Street) to the Mouth of the Humber, of the width of 33 feet, as shall not be found to stand in need of any causeway.

With the price also per Rod at which such Party will engage to open, clear out, and causeway such other part of the same Road as shall require to be causewayed, and the last mentioned price to include as well the opening and clearing out as the causewaying such Road. The causeway to be 18 feet wide; as also the price at which any Person will engage to build Bridges upon the said Road of the width of eighteen feet.

And the said Commissioners will also receive Proposals from any Person or Persons willing to engage to cut down three Hills at the following Places, viz one at the Sixteen Mile Creek, another between the Sixteen and Twelve Mile Creek, and the third at the Twelve Mile Creek.

And also for repairing in a good and substantial manner, the Bridge at the Outlet of Burlington Bay.

All the before mentioned Work to be completed in a good and substantial manner on or before the last day of October next, and when completed, the Money contracted to be given, will be paid by the Receiver General.

But each party entering into an Engagement for any part of the aforesaid work, will be required to produce two sufficient sureties, to be bound for the performance of the Contract.

The particulars to be delivered in to WILLIAM ALLAN or DUNCAN CAMERON Esquires, of York, or to JAMES RUGGLES or WILLIAM GRAHAM Esquires, of Yonge Street, or to WILLIAM APPLEGARTH Esquire, of Flamborough East, all of whom are Commissioners named for carrying the aforesaid Act into execution.

YORK, 2810 July, 1804.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER Esquire,
Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

WHEREAS by a certain Act of the Legislature of this Province, passed in the forty-fourth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act for granting to his "Majesty a certain sum of money for "the further encouragement of the "growth and cultivation of Hemp "within this Province, and the exportation thereof," it is enacted, That from and out of any fund or funds now remaining, or which may hereafter come, into the hands of the Receiver General, arising from and out of the rates and duties already raised, levied and collected, or which hereafter may be raised, levied and collected to and for the uses of this Province, there be granted to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, the sum of one thousand pounds, to be disposed of, appropriated and laid out as a public stock or capital, applicable to the purpose of purchasing Hemp the growth of this Province, and of discharging the expences incident to such purchases, and the exportation and sale thereof, in such manner, and under such regulations, as to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council thereof, should from time to time seem meet; And that it should and may be lawful to and for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, to issue one or more Proclamation or Proclamations, and therein to name such and so many persons within the Province as to him shall seem meet, as Commissioners for the purchasing of Merchantable Hemp the growth of this Province, which said Commissioners, or any one or more of them, are and is thereby authorized and empowered to purchase such Hemp at and after the price or rate of forty pounds per ton: AND WHEREAS it is further enacted by the said Act, that after the passing of that Act, no person or persons whatsoever, shall be intitled to any further Bounty over and beyond the said price or sum of forty pounds per ton, or to any Premium under any Proclamation or Proclamations, heretofore issued by the Lieutenant Governor, for the encouragement of the growth and exportation of Hemp, for or in respect of any Hemp for which the said sum of forty pounds per ton shall be paid under the powers thereby given; Nor shall any Bounty or Premium be paid or payable for or in respect of any Hemp not intended for sale to some one of the Commissioners acting in virtue of the powers thereby given, which shall not be claimed on or before the thirtieth day of September next, under proper and sufficient Documents, to be on or before that day, presented to the person or persons duly empowered or authorized to allow or pay the same: Provided that before the said Commissioners to be appointed in virtue of that Act, or any of them, shall under the authority thereby given, purchase any Hemp from any person or persons whomsoever, such Commissioners and each of them are, and is thereby authorized and required, to administer to such person or persons offering any such Hemp for sale, an Oath in the said Act particularly set forth, whereby such person or persons, is or are to swear that the Hemp which he, she or they had that day offered for sale to the Commissioner appointed by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor for the purchase of Hemp, and every part thereof, was raised within the Province of Upper Canada by him or them, or by some other person or persons (to be named in such oath) and that no Bounty or Premium had been paid or claimed for any part of such Hemp, by any person or persons whomsoever, save and except what was included in the sum or price for which he, she or they had offered to sell such Hemp to the said Commissioner.—Now know all whom it may concern, that I PETER HUNTER Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, well knowing the fidelity, diligence and ability of the Honorable James Baby of Sandwich, the Honorable Richard Cartwright of Kingston, the Honorable Robert Hamilton of Queenstown, all Members of the Legislative Council of this Province, and William Allan of York in the Home District Esquire, do, by virtue of the power to vested in me as aforesaid, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, nominate, constitute and appoint the said James Baby, Richard Cartwright, Robert Hamilton, and William Allan, to be Commissioners for the purchasing of merchantable Hemp, the growth of the said Province, at and after the price or rate of Forty Pounds Halifax Currency per Ton, which said sum of Forty Pounds is to be paid by the said Commissioners respectively, to the party or parties selling such Hemp, in Money only, according to the rules, regulations, limitations and restrictions in the said in part above recited Act expressed and contained, with full power and authority, to do and perform all and each of the matters and things in the said Act authorized or required by them the said Commissioners to be done and performed.

Given under my Hand, and Seal at Arms, at York, this Twenty-Third Day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and four, and in the forty-fourth year of His Majesty's Reign.

FEMALE FORTITUDE.

(From Carr's Stranger in France.)

"ONE evening a short period before the family left France, a party of those murderers who were sent for by Robespierre, from the frontiers which divide France from Italy, and who were by that arch fiend employed in all the butcheries and massacres, of Paris entered the peaceful village of la Reia, in search of Monsieur O——. His lady saw them advancing, and anticipating their errand, had just time to give her husband intelligence of their approach, who left his chateau by a back door and secreted himself in the house of a neighbour. Madam O——, with perfect composure, went out to meet them, and received them in the most gracious manner. They fiercely demanded Monsieur O——: she informed them that he had left the country, and after engaging them in conversation, she conducted them to her drawing room, and regaled them with her best wines, and made her servants attend upon them with unusual deference and ceremony.—Their appearance was altogether horrible; they wore leather aprons which were spainkled all over with blood: they had large horse pistols in their belts and a dirk and sabre by their side. Their looks were full of ferocity, and they spoke a harsh, dissonant, Patois language. Over their cups they talked about the bloody business of that day's occupation, in the course of which they drew out their dirks, and wiped from their handles clots of blood and hair. Madame O—— sat with them, undismayed at their frightful deportment. After drinking several bottles of Champaigne and Burgundy, these savages began to grow good-humoured; and seemed to be completely fascinated, by the amiable, unembarrassed, and hospitable behaviour of their fair landlady. After carousing till midnight, they pressed her to retire, observing, that they had been received so handsomely that they were convinced Monsieur O—— had been misrepresented, and was no enemy to the GOOD CAUSE; they added, that they found the wines excellent, and after drinking two or three bottles more they would leave the house, without causing her any reason to regret their admission.

"Madame O——, with all the appearance of perfect tranquility and confidence in their promises, wished her unwelcome visitors a good night, and after visiting her children in their rooms, she threw herself upon her bed, with a loaded pistol in each hand and, overwhelmed with suppressed agony, and agitation, she soundly slept till she was called by her servants, two hours after these wretches had left the house.

"about the same period two of the children of Monsieur O—— were in Paris at school. A rumour had reached him, that the teachers of the seminary in which they were placed had offended the government, and were likely to be butchered, and that the carnage which was expected to take place, might, in its undistinguishing fury, extend to the pupils. Immediately upon receiving this intelligence, Monsieur O—— ordered his carriage, for the purpose of proceeding to town, Madame O—— implored of him to permit her to accompany him; in vain did he beseech her to remain at home; the picture of danger which he painted only rendered her more determined. She mounted the carriage, and seated herself by the side of her husband When they reached Paris, they were stopped in the middle of the street St. Honre, by the massacre of a large number of prisoners, who had just been taken out of a church which had been converted into a prison. Their ears ere pierced with screams. Many of the miserable victims were cut down, clinging to the windows of their carriage. During the dreadful delays which they suffered in passing through this street, Madame O—— discovered no sensations of alarm, but steadfastly fixed her eyes upon the back of the coach box, to avoid as much as possible observing the butcheries which were perpetrating on each side of her.

"Had she been observed to close her eyes, or sit back in the carriage, she would have excited a suspicion, which, no doubt, would have proved fatal to her. At length she reached the school which contained her children, where she found the rumour which they had received was without foundation; she calmly conducted them to the carriage, and during their gloomy return through Paris, betrayed no emotion; but as soon as they had passed the barrier, and were once more in safety upon the road to their peaceful chateau, the exulting mother, in an agony of joy, pressed her children to her bosom, and in a state of mind wrought up to phrenzy, arrived at her own house in convulsions of ghastly laughter.

"Monsieur O——" (from whom Mr. Carr received these relations, at the chateau of the former) "never spoke of this charming woman without exhibiting the strongest emotions of regard. He said, that in sickness she suffered no one to attend upon him but herself; that in all his afflictions she had supported him, and that she mitigated the deep melancholy which the sufferings of his country and his own privations had fixed upon him, by the well timed sallies of her elegant fancy, or by the charms of her various accomplishments.

"I found myself," (adds Mr. Carr, with a compliment that seems very justly due) "a gainer in the article of delight by leaving the gayest metropolis that Europe can present to a traveller, for the sake of visiting such a family."

From Carr's "Stranger in France."

ONE evening as I was passing through the Boulevard Italien, in company with a gentleman from Toulon, we met a tall, dark, hollow-eyed, ferocious looking man, of whom he related the following story:

Immediately after the evacuation of Toulon by the English, all the principal Toulonese citizens were ordered to repair to the maket place—where they were surrounded by a great military force.

This man, who for his offences had been committed to prison, was liberated by the French agents, in consequence of his undertaking to select those of the inhabitants who had, in any manner, favored the capitulation of the town, or who had shown any hospitality to the English, whilst they were in possession of it. The miscreant passed before the citizens, who were drawn out in lines, amounting to near three thousand. Among whom he pointed out about one thousand four hundred persons to the fury of the government; without any evidence, or further examination, they were all immediately adjudged to be shot. For this purpose a suitable number of soldiers were drawn out. The unhappy victims were marched up to their destruction upon the Quay, in sets of three hundred, and butchered.

The carnage was dreadful. In the last of these unfortunate groups, were two gentlemen of great respectability, who received no wound from the fire; but, to preserve themselves, dropped with the rest, and exhibited all the appearance of having participated in the general fate.

This execution took place in the evening—immediately after its close, the soldiers, fatigued and sick with cold blooded slaughter, marched back to their quarters, without examining whether every person upon whom they had fired, had fallen a victim to the murderous bullet. Soon after the soldiers had retired, the women of Toulon, allured by plunder, proceeded to the fatal spot. Mounted upon the bodies of the fallen, they stripped the dead and dying. The night was stormy. The moon, emerging from dark clouds, occasionally shed its pale lustre upon this horrible scene. When the plunderers had abandoned their prey, during an interval of deep darkness, in the dead of the night, when all was silent, unconscious of each other's intentions, the two citizens who had escaped the general carnage, disencumbered themselves from the dead, under whom they were buried—chilled and naked, in an agony of mind not to be described, they, at the same moment, attempted to escape. In their agitation, they turned against each other. Expressions of terror and surprise, dropped from each of them. "Oh! God! it is my father!" said one, "My son, my son, my son!" exclaimed the other, clasping him in his arms. They were father and son, who had thus miraculously escaped, and met in this extraordinary manner.

The person from whom I received this account, informed me, that he knew these gentlemen very well, and that they had been re-settled in Toulon about two years.

The wretch who had thus directed the ruthless vengeance of a revolutionary banditti, against the breasts of his fellow citizens, was, at this time, in Paris soliciting, from the present government, from a total misconception of its nature, those remunerations which had been promised, but never realized by his barbarous employers.

I need scarcely add, that although he had been in the capital several months, he had not been able to gain access to the minister's secretary.

The time of terror was over—the murderer's occupation was gone—the guillotine, with unsatiated hunger, after having gorged the food which was thrown to it, had devoured its feeder.

The Poison Tree of Java.

THE Poison Tree of Java, called in the Malay language Bohun Upas, is a tree which has often been described by naturalists; but its existence has been very generally doubted, and the descriptions given of it, containing much of the marvellous, have been often treated as idle fictions.—N. P. Foersch, however, in an account of it written in Dutch, asserts that it does exist; and tells us, that he once doubted it as much as any person; but, determined not to trust general opinions, he made the most particular inquiries possible; the result of which was, that he found that it was situated in the island of Java, about 27 leagues from Batavia, 14 from Soura Charta, the Emperor's seat, and about 19 from Timkjoe, the residence of the sultan of Java. It is surrounded on all sides by hills and mountains, and the adjacent country for 12 miles round the tree is totally barren. Our author says he has gone all round the spot at about 18 miles from the centre, and on all sides he found the country equally dreary, which he ascribes to its noxious effluvia. The poison procured from it is a gum issuing from between the bark and the tree; and it is brought by malefactors who have been condemned to death, but who are allowed by this alternative to have a chance for their life. an old ecclesiastic, our author informs us, dwelt on the outside of the surrounding hills, whose business it was to prepare the criminals for their fate, if death should be the consequence of their expedition. and indeed so fatal is its effluvia, that he acknowledged that scarcely 2 out of 20 returned from above 700 whom he had dismissed.

Mr. Foersch father tells us, that he has seen several of the criminals who had returned, and who told him, that the tree stands on the borders of a rivulet, is of a middling size, and that five or six young ones of the same kind stands close to it. They could not, however, see any other plant or shrub near it; and the ground of brownish sand, full of stones and dead bodies, and difficult to pass. The Malayans think this tract was thus rendered noxious and uninhabitable by the judgment of God, at Mahomet's desire, on account of the sins of the inhabitants. No animal whatever is ever seen there; and such as get there by any means never return; but have been brought out dead by such of the criminals as have themselves escaped death.

Our author relates a circumstance which happened in the year 1775, to about 400 families (1600 souls,) who refused to pay some duty to the Emperor, and who were in consequence declared rebels and banished: they petitioned for leave to settle in the uncultivated parts round Upas: the consequence of which was, that in less than two months their number was reduced to about 300 souls, who begged to be reconciled to the Emperor and was again received under his protection. Many of these survivors Mr. Foersch saw, and had just the appearance of persons tainted with an infectious disorder.

With the juice of this tree, arrows, lances, and other offensive weapons, are poisoned. With lances thus poisoned, Mr. Foerich observes, that he saw 13 of the Emperor's concubines executed for infidelity to his bed, in Feb. 1776. They were lanced in the middle of their breasts; in five minutes after which they were seized with a tremor and subsultus tendinum, and in 15 minutes they were dead.—Their bodies were full of livid spots, like those of petechiæ, their faces swelled, colour blue, and eyes yellow, &c. Soon after he saw seven Malayans executed in the same way, and saw the same effects follow; on which he resolved to try it on other animals, and found the operation similar on three puppies, a cat, and a fowl none of which survived more than 13 minutes. He also tried its effects internally on a dog seven months old; the animal became delirious, was seized with convulsions, and died in half an hour. From all which our author concludes, that this is the most violent of all vegetable poisons, and that it continues greatly to the unhealthiness of the island in which it grows. By means of it many cruel and treacherous murders are perpetrated. He says, that there exists a sort of cajeupeut on the coast of Macassar, the poison of which, though not near so violent or malignant, operates nearly in the same manner,

To this account our readers will give such a degree of credit as they think is due; it is our business however to add, that it has been controverted in all its parts in a memoir of Lambert Nolit, M. D. fellow of the Batavian Experimental Society at Rotterdam.

A Hindoo Anecdote.

Near the city of Smyrna, a Bramin lately died, and left a wife behind him.

In the countries subject to the authority and government of the Mahomedans, the custom of women committing themselves to the funeral pile with the bodies of their deceased husbands is, if not abolished, at least under very great restrictions; as it is not allowed to be practised but by express permission.

The widow of the Bramin, therefore waited in person on the Governor of the city, and in the most pathetic manner implored his permission for the high honor of burning with the body of her deceased husband, which the Governor peremptorily refused to grant her. Nothing discouraged thereby, she continued her entreaties—prostrating herself on the ground before him, and mingling her tears with the dust.

All entreaties were vain: the Governor remained inflexible. Rage and despair then filled the breast of the beautiful victim—and they broke out in these, and such like exclamations. "Ah miserable me! Why was my mother burnt? my aunt? my two sisters?—ah miserable me! Why am I alone refused the honors of my sex?"

A priest, or Bonze, of the same cast of Hindoos, happened to be present at this interesting scene. He gazed ardently on the young woman; and now and then turning his eyes towards the Governor, silently reproached him for refusing the prayer of the widow's petition. When the Governor took notice of the priest, he exclaimed, "Wretch, is it you who have administered intoxicating herbs, to excite phrenzy—is it owing to your pernicious doctrines, that a custom so shocking to humanity is still in practice?—Go, depart hence and be no more seen."

The Bonze undaunted stood his ground. He assured the Governor that he had never spoken to the woman before him; yet confessed he had prepared many others to undergo the same sacrifice; that it was an act agreeable to their God Brama; and for this reason he begged the Governor in the most respectful manner, to grant her consent; on which the widow redoubled her tears, prayers and entreaties. The Bonze, thus encouraged to go on added, "Sir, great will be her reward, great her recompence for it in the other world! there she will be re joined to her husband by a sacred marriage, and live with him to all eternity."

The widow's fine black eyes instantly received new lustre. She darted a piercing look at the Bonze, expressive of satisfaction, mingled with a portion of terror. "What," exclaimed she, "shall I indeed find my husband in heaven?—How have I been deceived by two old Bonzes!—They never told me this. They knew my husband well. They knew too how he treated me!—Then, Sir, said she, turning round to the Governor, "since the god Brama will re-unite me to my husband, I renounce him and his religion forever, and embrace yours." Then looking at the Bonze, "You may, if you please, when you see my husband, tell him what I have done, and say that I hope to find myself extremely well without him, for he was an old crofs wretch—ſtupid, jealous, and offenſive."

MR. POULSON,

THE following information may perhaps prove of ſervice to ſuch of your readers as have not cool and dry cellars to preſerve their meat and other proviſions, and the hint perhaps offers in opportunity to thoſe, who have leiſure and talents, of improving it to great public advantage.

A joint of meat or any proviſion ſuſpended in a flannel bag will keep ſweet a conſiderable time longer than by any of the modes generally practiſed. The cooler and dryer the meat is when the flannel is put round it the better, and it will occur to any thinking mind that the flannel ſhould be perfectly clean. A flannel bag with a bowl or plate in it is alſo the beſt mode of conveying butter from, or perhaps to market, and if the bowl or plate is made of wood the better.—A ſtronger proof cannot be given of the truth of the above, than that ice wrapped in flannel will keep a conſiderable time, whereas if expoſed to the air or wrapped in linen it will diſſolve almoſt immediately.

An ointment, made of the eſſential Oils of Elder, Carraway, and Roſemary, with Roſe leaves and Cammomile flowers, and rubbed on the pit of the ſtomach at bed time, is ſtated to be an effectual remedy for the Hooping Cough.

Such Propoſals muſt ſtate at what prices the Party deſirous of undertaking the aforeſaid work, will engage to finiſh and complete the ſame, and muſt conſiſt of the following particulars:—

At what Price per Mile ſuch Perſon will open and clear out ſuch part of the Road leading from Lot Street, adjoining the Town of York (beginning at Peter Street) to the Mouth of the Humber, of the width of 33 feet, as ſhall not be found to ſtand in need of any cauſeway.

With the price alſo per Rod at which ſuch Party will engage to open, clear out, and cauſeway ſuch other part of the ſame Road as ſhall require to be cauſewayed, and the laſt mentioned price to include as well the opening and clearing out as the cauſewaying ſuch Road. The cauſeway to be 18 feet wide; as alſo the price at which any Perſon will engage to build Bridges upon the ſaid Road of the width of eighteen feet.

And the ſaid Commiſſioners will alſo receive Propoſals from any Perſon or Perſons willing to engage to cut down three Hills at the following Places, viz one at the Sixteen Mile Creek, another between the Sixteen and Twelve Mile Creek, and the third at the Twelve Mile Creek.

And alſo for repairing in a good and ſubſtantial manner, the Bridge at the Outlet of Burlington Bay.

All the before mentioned Work to be completed in a good and ſubſtantial manner on or before the laſt day of October next, and when completed, the Money contracted to be given, will be paid by the Receiver General.

But each party entering into an Engagement for any part of the aforeſaid work, will be required to produce two ſufficient ſureties, to be bound for the performance of the Contract.

The particulars to be delivered in to WILLIAM ALLAN or DUNCAN CAMERON Eſquires, of York, or to JAMES RUGGLES or WILLIAM GRAHAM Eſquires, of Yonge Street, or to WILLIAM APPLEGARTH Eſquire, of Flamborough Eaſt, all of whom are Commiſſioners named for carrying the aforeſaid Act into execution.

YORK, 28th July, 1804.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER Esquire,
Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

WHEREAS by a certain Act of the Legiſlature of this Province, paſſed in the forty-fourth year of his Majeſty's reign, intituled, "An Act for granting to his "Majeſty, a certain ſum of money for "the further encouragement of the growth and cultivation of Hemp within this Province; and the exportation thereof," it is enacted, That from and out of any fund or funds now remaining, or which may hereafter come, into the hands of the Receiver General, ariſing from and out of the rates and duties already raiſed, levied and collected, or which hereafter may be raiſed, levied and collected to and for the uſes of this Province, there be granted to his Majeſty, his heirs and ſucceſſors, the ſum of one thouſand pounds, to be diſpoſed of, appropriated and laid out as a public ſtock or capital, applicable to the purpoſe of purchaſing Hemp the growth of this Province, and of diſcharging the expences incident to ſuch purchaſes, and the exportation and ſale thereof, in ſuch manner, and under ſuch regulations, as to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government of this Province, by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council thereof, ſhould from time to time ſeem meet; And that it ſhould and may be lawful to and for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council of this Province, to iſſue one or more Proclamation or Proclamations, and therein to name ſuch and ſo many perſons within the Province as to him ſhall ſeem meet, as Commiſſioners for the purchaſing of Merchantable Hemp the growth of this Province, which ſaid Commiſſioners, or any one or more of them, are and is thereby authorized and empowered to purchaſe ſuch Hemp at and after the price or rate of forty pounds per ton: AND WHEREAS it is further enacted by the ſaid Act, that after the paſſing of that Act, no perſon or perſons whatſoever, ſhall be intitled to any further Bounty over and beyond the ſaid price or ſum of forty pounds per ton, or to any Premium under any Proclamation or Proclamations, heretofore iſſued by the Lieutenant Governor, for the encouragement of the growth and exportation of Hemp, for or in reſpect of any Hemp for which the ſaid ſum of forty pounds per ton ſhall be paid under the powers thereby given; Nor ſhall any Bounty or Premium be paid or payable for or in reſpect of any Hemp not intended for ſale to ſome one of the Commiſſioners acting in virtue of the powers thereby given, which shall not be claimed on or before the thirtieth day of September next, under proper and sufficient Documents, to be on or before that day, presented to the person or persons duly empowered or authorized to allow or pay the same: Provided that before the said Commissioners to be appointed in virtue of the said Act, or any of them, shall under the authority thereby given, purchase any Hemp from any person or persons whomsoever, such Commissioners and each of them are, and is thereby authorized and required, to administer to such person or persons offering any such Hemp for sale, an Oath in the said Act particularly set forth, whereby such person or persons, is or are to swear that the Hemp which he, she or they had that day offered for sale to the Commissioner appointed by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor for the purchase of Hemp, and every part thereof, was raised within the Province of Upper Canada by him or them, or by some other person or persons (to be named in such oath) and that no Bounty or Premium had been paid or claimed for any part of such Hemp, by any person or persons whomsoever, save and except what was included in the sum or price for which he, she or they had offered to sell such Hemp to the said Commissioner. —Now know all whom it may concern, that I PETER HUNTER Elquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, well knowing the fidelity, diligence and ability of the Honorable James Baby of Sandwich, the Honorable Richard Cartwright of Kingston, the Honorable Robert Hamilton of Queenstown, all Members of the Legislative Council of this Province, and William Allan of York in the Home District Elquire, do, by virtue of the power so vested in me as aforesaid, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, nominate, constitute and appoint the said James Baby, Richard Cartwright, Robert Hamilton, and William Allan, to be Commissioners for the purchasing of merchantable Hemp, the growth of the said Province, at and after the price or rate of Forty Pounds Halifax Currency per Ton, which said sum of Forty Pounds is to be paid by the said Commissioners respectively, to the party or parties selling such Hemp, in Money only, according to the rules, regulations, limitations and restrictions in the said in part above recited Act expressed and contained, with full power and authority, to do and perform all and each of the matters and things in the said Act authorized or required by them the said Commissioners to be done and performed.

Given under my Hand, and Seal at Arms, at York, this Twenty-Third Day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and four, and in the forty-fourth year of His Majesty's Reign.

P. HUNTER, Lt. Govr.

By His Excellency's Command,
Wm. JARVIS, Secy.

Lateſt Intelligence.

LONDON June 22.

A French ſquadron was ſaid to be at the Brazil, ſuppoſed to conſiſt of thoſe ſhips that ſlipped out of Rochfort.

Another Ruſſian officer arrived in town on Monday. He came through France and Holland, and met Mr. Livingſton at Rotterdam, on his return to Paris on Friday laſt. The veſſel in which he came brought ſome private letters, one of which contains the following extracts of a communication received by a gentleman at Antwerp from his brother at Bologne, who is employed in the armament deſtined for the invaſion of this country:—"All the horſes, forage, and heavy artillery, are embarked. We wait only the arrival of the generals. I ſhall not, therefore write to you from hence: and, probably, I may never behold you more." We ſee no reaſon to doubt the facts here ſtated, nor are they in any reſpect calculated to excite alarm in our mind. —The day on which the enemy ventures to approach our ſhore, will, we are confident, prove a day of glory to Britain.

It was reported yeſterday, we know not upon what authority, that a perſon had arrived from the continent with overtures of peace.

Letters received from the fleet off Breſt, dated the 25th inſt. ſtate they were all well, and the enemy as uſual.

The King has found great benefit from his retreat to Kew, where he paſſes much time in the building, and ornamental arrangements for his new palace.

Bonaparte continues to wear the air of compaſſion towards Moreau; and Grand Judge in "The Firſt Conſul is powerfully affected by thoſe meaſures of rigour which the ſafety of the State have impoſed on him." Whether the continuence of this affectation be favourable ſymptom of the general's fate is however uncertain. It may be intended to prepare the public for his pardon: but it is probable, that the reluctance of the Emperor may be pleaded to prove the juſtice of the ſevereſt ſentence; and the latter deſign is more probable than the former, for the pardon of Moreau would need no apology; but to perſuade the world of the integrity, or humanity, of Bonaparte, many an affectation muſt be practiſed, and hypocriſy more than his own, may be executed in vain.

Te Deum has been ſung in Paris, upon the acceſſion of Napoleon to the empire of the French, and ſome prayers have been puoliſhed upon the occaſion, which add impiety and blaſphemy to the other offences and abſurdities that diſtinguiſhed it.

A letter from Gibraltar, dated the 5th ult. ſtates, that the Engliſh troops have taken poſſeſſion of Naples, but letters from Italy of a more recent date, are completely ſilent upon this ſubject.

From London Papers to June 19.

It is ſaid that the Britiſh have made an attempt to negociate a treaty with Deſſalines, and wiſhed to be put in poſſeſſion of the Mole; but the demands of the Haytian General were ſo exceſſive that the Engliſh would not comply with them.

Prince Eſterhazy, appointed by the Emperor of Germany to congratulate Bonaparte on his acceſſion to the Imperial dignity, has refuſed to accept the appointment, and no other noble man has been nominated in his ſtead.

Accounts from Paris to June 14 ſay, that the Emperor Napolean and his brothers, voted in the Council of State for pardoning all the lately convicted "conſpirators," but that a majority of the members were for their execution; and that Bonaparte left the council with tears in his eyes, at the ill ſucceſs of his merciful effort!

The Emperor of the French was preparing to viſit his ports on the coaſt.

A conſpiracy is ſtated to have been lately diſcovered and fruſtrated, which had for its object the murder of Louis XVIII.

An article from Hamburgh ſtates, that Pruſſia has declared that the Ruſſian demand for ſatisfaction for the violation of the German territory by the arreſt of the Duke d'Enghein, was ſo reaſonable, that he ſhould ſupport it with all his intereſt and power.

The Ruſſian charge des affaires, who was left in Paris after Comte Marcow's recall from that embaſſy, is arrived in London.

The French have ſucceeded in effecting the removal of the late Neapolitan Prime Miniſter, who was friendly to the Britiſh.

A report from Italy mentions that the Porte has conſented that the Britiſh ſhall occupy Egypt during the war.

All the Britiſh ſubjects in the Pope's territory and Leghorn, have been arreſted and imprifoned, under French orders.

Mr. Drake, the late Miniſter at Munich, arrived in England, June 17.

June 17 diſpatches were received in England from Admiral Nelſon. No mention of a battle.

It was whiſpered in England, that ſome diſtinguiſhed perſon was to be impeached.

A brother of Lord Rancleigh, a naval officer, has been condemned to be ſhot for ſtriking his ſuperior officer; but has been recommended to mercy.

London, June 18.

We have authority to contradict the report of Mr. Livingſton having, during his reſidence in London, uttered ſentiments diſreſpectful towards this country.

We have been favoured with the Hamburg Correſpondenten of the 9th inſt. a date one day later than that of the papers received by the laſt mail.—One of its articles dated 'The Hague, June 5,' is ſomewhat curious; it ſtates, that a miniſter has been received there from the Prince of Orange, and that this miniſter, the Baron D'Yoy, was preſent at a grand dinner given by the Pruſſian Ambaſſador to the diplomatic corps, at which dinner Semonville, the French Miniſter, did not appear.

Paris, June 6.

The invaſion of England is to be attempted before the 14th July.

It is reported that Talleyrand is to be appointed Arch Chancellor of State.

GLASGOW, June 23.

Mr. Pitt's defence bill was, on Tueſday without a diviſion read a third time and paſſed.

Extract of a letter received in Greenock, dated on board the Argo, at Spithead, June 17.

"I have now the ſatisfaction to acquaint you of our arrival here, after a round turn of ſix months, laſt from Cadiz, with a freight of 500,000 dollars, on account of merchants in London. You will no doubt be ſurpriſed to hear of Elfi Bey's fate, after all the expence and attention caſt away upon him at home. Having landed himſelf and ſuite, on the 14th February, at Roſetta, mouth of the Nile, to proceed up to Cairo, and in daily expectation of hearing of his arrival there, as alſo, the receipt of the preſents to be ſent hous, we were aſtoniſhed to hear of his going up the Nile, by ſome of the other Beys, (and Albanian ſoldiers lately revolted from the Pacha of Alexandria) and very near loſing his head, but effected his eſcape to an Arab encampment, by ſcattering ſome looſe Jewels that he had about his perſon among the ſoldiers, which took up the Barbarians attention, long enough to ſerve his purpoſe. The laſt intelligence we heard of him, before he failed from Alexandria, was, that five or ſix Beys were in purſuit of him in the deſart, and little hopes entertained of his being able long to conceal himſelf from their ſearch. This circumſtance is leſs to be regretted, as he was very much in the French intereſt, which his people has declared upon oath, ſince made priſoners; whoſe lives have been ſpared, at the particular requeſt of Major Miffet; our Conſul at Cairo, by Oliman Bey, the preſent Chief of the Mamelukes, a man very much in the Britiſh intereſt."

BOSTON, Aug. 4.

Since our laſt we have received from our attentive correſpondents, London papers to June 13, 1804.

The emperor of Ruſſia appears to be preparing either for active war, or for a grand parade, or for the diſcipline of his armies and fleets;—for which of theſe purpoſes the Engliſh editors cannot vouch: they hope however it is for a war againſt France; and think he will not, by remaining at peace, approbate and encourage any military adventurer to ſet up for himſelf, and to dethrone his lawful ſovereign: and that until the ruinous precedent is done away, by the fall of the uſurper, no throne, no power, can reſt in peace or ſafety.

The elevation of Bonaparte to the Imperial dignity has been officially announced to the different courts. The court of Vienna, in all humility, had congratulated him upon his new honors. The Ottoman court is ſaid to have received the information from Bonaparte, "in his own hand writing;" and to have been equally obſequious. What other courts have been admitted to the honor of acknowledging his Imperial majeſty, or as Jefferſon's National Intelligencer ſtyles him, the "Military Deſpot," we have not learnt. Adulation of their Emperor by the conſtituted authorities, and thoſe in office under the government, and bombaſtic parade, and threats to invade England, made the order of the day in France.—There was a ſpirit manifeſt among the people, however, which, if it duſt, would not brook filence and conſent.

Mr. Pitt had introduced his Bill for the more effectual defence of the United kingdom: He propoſes to reduce the militia to its old eſtabliſhment, and to form a great intermediate but limited force, which may ſerve as a ſource for the ſupply and encreaſe of the regular army. Mr. Windham, Mr. Addington, Mr. Fox, and others were oppoſed to it; it however paſſed to a third reading, yeas 219, nays, 169—miniſterial majority 50. The Britiſh Houſe of Commons have limited the continuance of the Slave trade to Jan. 1. 1805. The proſpect of French invaſion had neither increaſed or diminiſhed; but the means and the ſpirit to reſiſt and to chaſtiſe it had evidently increaſed.

The Engliſh papers contain the trials of the perſons implicated in the late conſpiracy againſt the life of Bonaparte —The mode of proceeding will be deemed ſingular, in all countries where juriſprudence is eſtabliſhed upon the principles of equity and juſtice. The only parole evidence adduced, being that of the priſoners themſelves; they all give evidence againſt each other, & furniſh the tribunal with the particulars of their views, their objects and their operations.

Mr. Livingſton had left England for France. His viſit was a ſhort and coolly received one. He had not been invited to Lord Chalmondely's "Woburn ſheep ſhearing."—Some hint that it was neither the "purchaſe of the Florida's" nor "agricultural views," that led him to England; but to converſe with Mr. Fox on political affairs in behalf of Napoleon I. and to inform the Britiſh Government that the Emperor Napoleon would give up his claims to Malta, on condition of his being acknowledged Emperor of the French.

By the Ann, Lord, from Rotterdam, arrived yeſterday, we have received the Leyden Gazette, and New Merchant, into June. The only articles they furniſh are:—"Great numbers of deſerters confined for more or leſs time in different parts of this (Batavia) Republic, having received their pardon on condition of ſerving in the Flotillas, are now on their way to the ſeveral ports, in order to repair on board. Some men, taken by lot from the reſpective companies of the Batavian garriſon lying in the Hague, have marched for a ſimilar deſtination."—On the 30th May, a battalion of Batavian grenadiers and other troops entered Amſterdam, and were quartered on the citizens for one night, next day they marched for Harlem, Alkmar, and the Helder."

Auguſt 8.

By the Charles from London, our files of papers are brought down to the 19th June.

Theſe papers do not afford any news of importance. There were ſome movements "by flood and field" in the North of France and Europe, and ſome ſtir in the leading cabinets; which indicated no ordinary agitation; but they had not, in our view, the dimenſions of immediate war preparations.

The war in India, by which Britain has obtained a vaſt addition of territory and revenue, had terminated.—Peace with the Mahrattas, and the Rajah of Berar was definitively concluded in March laſt.

Auguſt 11.

The French people—if the faction at Paris which directs the deſtinies of the nation can properly be called the people—from tigers appear to have become as tame as lap dogs.—They do not now ſeem able to recollect, that Gen. MOREAU, the idol of the revolution, has been impeached, tried, and impriſoned for the ſelf-ſame act which has immortalized Gen. BUONAPARTE, viz. that of overthrowing a government he diſliked, and governing in its ſtead. But MOREAU is execrated, while BUONAPARTE is ſurfeited with flattery and homage. Such are the weak materials of which the "enlightned People" are made; and they who truſted in them, "ſwim with fins of lead."

How long is the reign of NAPOLEAN I. Emperor of the French, to continue? is a queſtion frequently aſked.—The anſwer is not eaſy; but we ſee nothing in any of our French papers which looks like diſſatisfaction with the new order of things, or, like a loyalty. The incence offered on the throne of BUONAPARTE appears equally as pure as that burnt at the alter of the Bourbons; and the new and gorgeous titles appear to ſet eaſy on the wearers. It is true, the origin of the Imperial Family is obſcure; but hiſtory aſſures us, this circumſtance is no bar to longevity of power, or extent of immortality. "The Parthean kingdom laſted nearly 500 years in the family of Aſcaſes, an obſcure man, whom the troubles of the times threw into the Sovereignty. —A potter's ſon, at Syracuſe, became by chance, its tyrant.—The ſon of a hair-dreſſer, by intrigue and murder, attained the Crown of the Gangarides. —BALA, a petty ſhop keeper, ſucceeded DEMETRIUS on the throne of Syria. —ANTIPATER AMASIS, CODOMANUS, and ARTAXERXES from common ſoldiers, became Sovereigns of Macedon, Egypt and Perſia. We could quote a thouland other inſtances in which fortune ſacrificed hereditary right to her caprice, and in which, as if aſhamed to acknowledge the in prudence of her choice, ſhe perſevered, and gave perpetuity to her error."

Mediterranean News.

By an arrival at Newbury Port from Gibraltar, reports have been received, by letters to the 6th June, and by verbal accounts, that on the 24th May, near the iſland of Corſica, the Engliſh fleet under Lord Nelſon, and the French Toulon fleet had met, engaged, and that the reſult was, the total defeat of the French, with the loſs of eight ſail of the line captured by the Britiſh.—The letter of the 6th ſays, this report was brought to Gibraltar by an American veſſel from Naples, the captain of which made oath to his having ſeen the fleets engaged. It is our duty to ſay, we have received French (Bourdeaux) accounts to the 17th June, and Engliſh (London) to the 19th (about twenty-five days after the battle is ſaid to have been fought) and they do not make any mention of the affair; nor of the ſailing of the French fleet from Toulon, and alſo, that another letter from Gibraltar, of the 6th June, from a very intelligent American, is ſilent on the ſubject. We make no queſtion, that the report circulated at Gibraltar was as we have received it, and we may add, there exiſts no phyſical impoſſibility of its truth. The Newbury Port paper of yeſterday only adds, that by the arrival from Gibraltar, letters were received from the American conſul for the Secretary of State.

NEW-YORK, Aug. 4.

The coroners inqueſt, ſummoned to enquire into the circumſtance of the death of General Hamilton, agreed on Thurſday evening (as we are informed) to the following verdict:—

That Aaron Burr Eſq. Vice Preſident of the United States, is guilty of the murder of Alexander Hamilton: and that William P. Van Neſs Eſq. Attorney at Law, and Nathaniel Pendleton Eſq. Counſellor at Law, were acceſſories thereunto.

The committee of the Engliſh Houſe of Commons appointed to examine the corn laws have reported that no leſs a ſum than thirty millions ſterling has been paid for grain imported into that country during the last thirteen years.

A letter from a gentleman at Sackett's Bay, on Lake Ontario, dated the 10th July, mentions: "That capt. Moore, of a sloop which sailed on the 14th inst. from that place for Kingston, with a load of pot and pearl ashes, the property of Messrs. Browne Howe & co. in a gale of wind struck on Long Point, near Kingston, and having on board a number of passengers, men, women & children, was under the necessity of throwing overboard 48 barrels of ashes, in order to lighten the vessel. She has since arrived at Kingston.

Aug. 13. Messrs. Wharton & Seaman; who came passengers in the ship Protector from Cette, inform us that on their voyage from Leghorn to Marseilles, on the 23d of May, off Toulon, they passed the English & French fleets engaged in action; but that night coming on, they were prevented from knowing the result.

NATIONAL MONUMENT.

THE monument erected at Copenhagen, to the memory of the Danes who fell in the battle of the 2d of April, 1801, consists of an artificial mount, of an oval form, 16 feet high, 18 long & 40 broad, is surrounded by wrought stones, on each of which is the name of an officer who fell in this combat, and the ship on board of which he was killed. At the foot of this mount are planted an equal number of poplars. A path leads to the summit, from which is seen the coast off which the engagement took place. On the side of the monument which fronts the east, is an obelisk of black marble, with this inscription:—"They died for their Country april 2, 1801." and under, "The gratitude of their fellow citizens raised them this monument." On a tablet of white marble, placed on a pedestal, is sculptured a crown of laurel, oak and cyprus, interwined, with these words—"The crown which his country gives never fades on the tomb of the warrior who has died for its sake."

RELIGIOUS MONUMENT.

A Literary society in Germany has proposed to erect a monument to Martin Luther, (the first Protestant Reformer,) in his native country of Mansfield: They applied to the King of Prussia, requesting his sanction for opening a subscription which was granted. They now advertise for contributions, and hope to have the monument ready before the end of the year 1806.

A CORONATION ODE

FOR THE FIRST EMPEROR OF THE GAULS.

Bards! snatch, up your lyres, and attune ev'ry string,
For the wonder of wonders is now on the wing—
Lo! Republican France
Is going to advance
A Cæsarean Consul to be French King!
Hark! Yon gun-powder bust,
That refounds from her walls
Trumpet, drum,
Deaf and dumb,
Blind and lame,
All proclaim—
NAPOLEON the First,
Shall be Emperor of the Gauls.

O Nebuchadnezar!
Alexander and Cæsar!
Caligula! Nero!
And each other Hero,
Who once this planet trod,
But is now a demi-god—
In your Imperial cars
Pray come down from stars,
Likewise ye, who, in regions below,
Do penance for crimes
Committed in p.t times,
Play a truck
On Old Nick—
And appear at this wonderful show!

Laughter roar in the van—
Dancing skip the rear—
Out and in, down the middle—
Strike up! tabor, flute, and fiddle—
A fig for dull Care!
Enjoy the Rights of Man!
Hark! the Herald-bowls—
"Let Frenchmen all be gay
"On this auspicious day,
"That hails Bonaparte first Emp'ror of the Gauls."

Throw open ev'ry gaol—
Let Liberty abound—
Equality prevail,
In substance sense and sound!
From th' Abbaye, Bicetre, Conciergerie,
Set murder, and treason, and robbery free.
Rejoice ye blackguards,
Exult ye pollitroons,
So long as the portlines of Paris renown'd—
Go home and be happy
Your Emperor Nappy,
Is crown'd!

Became a Lord—the Lord knows how—
The force he acted had less fun,
Than that at Paris going on;
For little Barney, made a King,
O'ertops in making every thing
That ever was, or e'er will be,
Ridiculous in mimicry.

PETER HUNTER,
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith:—

To our beloved and faithful Legiſlative Counſellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes of our ſaid Province, to the Provincial Parliament at our Town of York, on the ſeventeenth day of September, to be commenced, held, called and dected, and to every of you—

GREETING:

WHereas by our Proclamation bearing date the third day of Auguſt laſt, We thought fit by & with the advice of our Executive Council to prorogue our ſaid Provincial Parliament until the ſeventeenth day of this preſent month of September, at which time in our Town of York you were held and conſtrained to appear, but we taking into our Royal conſideration, the eaſe and convenience of our loving ſubjects, have thought fit by and with the advice and conſent of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforeſaid, hereby convoking, and by theſe preſents enjoining you and of each you that on the Twenty-fifth day of October next enſuing you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into conſideration the ſtate and welfare of our ſaid Province of Upper Canada, and there to do all ſuch things as ſeem neceſſary. Herein fail not.

IN Teſtimony whereof, WE have cauſed theſe Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our ſaid Province to be hereunto Affixed;—WITNESS Our Truſty and Well-Beloved PETER HUNTER Eſquire, Our Lieutenant Governor of Our ſaid Province, and Lieutenant General Commanding Our Forces in Our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at YORK, this Thirteenth day of September, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Four, and in the Forty-fourth Year of Our Reign.

P. H.

WM. JARVIS, Secretary.

UPPER CANADA.

NOTICE is hereby given that the Commiſſioners for the Home Diſtrict, appointed by a certain Statute of the Provincial Legiſlature, paſſed during the Seſſion of the preſent year, intituled, "An Act for granting to His "Majeſty a certain ſum of Money out of the Funds "applicable to the uſes of this Province for defraying "the expences of erecting and repairing the Public "Highways and Roads, laying out and opening new "Roads and building Bridges in the ſeveral Diſtricts "thereof" are ready to receive Propoſals from any Perſon or Perſons diſpoſed to contract for the erecting and repairing the Road and building Bridges between the Town of York and the head of BURLINGTON BAY.

Such Propoſals muſt ſtate at what prices the Party or Parties diſpoſed of undertaking the aforeſaid work, will engage to finiſh and complete the ſame, and muſt conſiſt of the following particulars:—

At what Price per Mile ſuch Perſon will open and clear out ſuch part of the Road leading from Lot Street, adjoining the Town of York (beginning at Peter Street) to the Mouth of the Humber, of the width of 33 feet, as ſhall not be found to ſtand in need of any cauſeway.

With the price alſo per Rod at which ſuch Party will engage to open, clear out, and cauſeway ſuch other part of the ſame Road as ſhall require to be cauſewayed, and the laſt mentioned price to include as well the opening and clearing out as the cauſewaying ſuch Road. The cauſeway to be 12 feet wide; as alſo the price at which any Perſon will engage to build Bridges upon the ſaid Road of the width of eighteen feet.

And the ſaid Commiſſioners will alſo receive Propoſals from any Perſon or Perſons willing to engage to cut down three Hills at the following Places, viz one at the Sixteen Mile Creek, another between the Sixteen and Twelve Mile Creek, and the third at the Twelve Mile Creek.

And alſo for repairing in a good and ſubſtantial manner, the Bridge at the Outlet of Burlington Bay.

All the before mentioned Work to be completed in a good and ſubſtantial manner on or before the laſt day of October next, and when completed, the Money contracted to be given, will be paid by the Receiver General.

But each party entering into an Engagement for any part of the aforeſaid work, will be required to produce two ſufficient ſureties, to be bound for the performance of the Contract.

The particulars to be delivered in to WILLIAM ALLAN or DUNCAN CAMERON Eſquires, of York, or to JAMES RUGGLES or WILLIAM GRAHAM Eſquires, of Yonge Street, or to WILLIAM APPLEGARTH Eſquire, of Flamborough Eaſt, all of whom are Commiſſioners named for carrying the aforeſaid Act into execution.

YORK, 28th July, 1804.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER Esquire,
Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

WHEREAS by a certain Act of the Legiſlature of this Province, paſſed in the forty-fourth year of his Majeſty's reign, intituled, "An Act for granting to his "Majeſty, a certain ſum of money for "the further encouragement of the "growth and cultivation of Hemp "within this Province, and the exemption thereof," it is enacted, That from and out of any fund or funds now remaining, or which may hereafter come, into the hands of the Receiver General, ariſing from and out of the rates and duties already raiſed, levied and collected, or which hereafter may be raiſed, levied and collected to and for the uſes of this Province, there be granted to his Majeſty, his heirs and ſucceſſors, the ſum of one thouſand pounds, to be diſpoſed of, appropriated and laid out as a public ſtock or capital, applicable to the purpoſe of purchaſing Hemp the growth of this Province, and of diſcharging the expences incident to ſuch purchaſes, and the exportation and ſale thereof, in ſuch manner, and under ſuch regulations, as to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government of this Province, by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council thereof, ſhould from time to time ſeem meet; And that it ſhould and may be lawful to and for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council of this Province, to iſſue one or more Proclamation or Proclamations, and therein to name ſuch and ſo many perſons within the Province as to him ſhall ſeem meet, as Commiſſioners for the purchaſing of Merchantable Hemp the growth of this Province, which ſaid Commiſſioners, or any one or more of them, are and is thereby authorized and empowered to purchaſe ſuch Hemp at and after the price or rate of forty pounds per ton: AND WHEREAS it is further enacted by the ſaid Act, that after the paſſing of that Act, no perſon or perſons whatſoever, ſhall be intitled to any further Bounty over and beyond the ſaid price or ſum of forty pounds per ton, or to any Premium under any Proclamation or Proclamations, heretofore iſſued by the Lieutenant Governor, for the encouragement of the growth and exportation of Hemp, for or in reſpect of any Hemp for which the ſaid ſum of forty pounds per ton ſhall be paid under the powers thereby given; Nor ſhall any Bounty or Premium be paid or payable for or in reſpect of any Hemp not intended for ſale to ſome one of the Commiſſioners acting in virtue of the powers thereby given which shall not be claimed on or before the thirtieth day of September next, under proper and sufficient Documents, to be on or before that day, presented to the person or persons duly empowered or authorized to allow or pay the same: Provided that before the said Commissioners to be appointed in virtue of that Act, or any of them, shall under the authority thereby given, purchase any Hemp from any person or persons whomsoever, such Commissioners and each of them are, and is thereby authorized and required, to administer to such person or persons offering any such Hemp for sale, an Oath in the said Act particularly set forth, whereby such person or persons, is or are to swear that the Hemp which he, she or they had that day offered for sale to the Commissioner appointed by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor for the purchase of Hemp, and every part thereof, was raised within the Province of Upper Canada by him or them, or by some other person or persons (to be named in such oath) and that no Bounty or Premium had been paid or claimed for any part of such Hemp, by any person or persons whomsoever, save and except what was included in the sum or price for which he, she or they had offered to sell such Hemp to the said Commissioner.

—Now know all whom it may concern, that I PETER HUNTER Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, well knowing the fidelity, diligence and ability of the Honorable James Baby of Sandwich, the Honorable Richard Cartwright of Kingston, the Honorable Robert Hamilton of Queenstown, all Members of the Legislative Council of this Province, and William Allan of York in the Home District Esquire, do, by virtue of the power so vested in me as aforesaid, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, nominate, constitute and appoint the said James Baby, Richard Cartwright, Robert Hamilton, and William Allan, to be Commissioners for the purchasing of merchantable Hemp, the growth of the said Province, at and after the price or rate of Forty Pounds Halifax Currency per Ton, which said sum of Forty Pounds is to be paid by the said Commissioners respectively, to the party or parties selling such Hemp, in Money only, according to the rules, regulations, limitations and restrictions in the said in part above recited Act expressed and contained, with full power and authority, to do and perform all and each of the matters and things in the said Act authorized or required by them the said Commissioners to be done and performed.

Given under my Hand, and Seal at Arms, at York, this Twenty-Third Day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and four, and in the forty fourth year of His Majesty's Reign.

Private Correſpondence.

June 13.

"There is this day a very confident expectation that peace will be ſpeedily reſtored. Mr. Pitt on being informed of Bonaparte's pacific diſpoſition, expreſſed his readineſs to attend to any overtures made through a direct and proper channel. As Mr. Livingſton is known to have had inſtructions to ſound our government on a point which muſt be ſo intereſting to the new empire, it is conſidered that direct overtures will immediately be made: and Peace is looked for in conſequence, even though there ſhould be a change in adminiſtration."

LONDON, July 4.

The Subject of the Invaſion Reviewd.

The following is given in a morning paper as an extract of a private letter from Paris, dated June 18.—Bonaparte intends next week to ſet out for the coaſt; and as he is to return before the 14th of July, the common belief here is, that ſhould wind and circumſtances permit, ſomething will be undertaken before that period.

"The day before yeſterday, extra couriers left this city for Holland, Boulogne and Breſt, with orders for our naval commanders to ſeize the firſt opportunity of putting to ſea, and coute qui coute, land in England, as many troops as poſſible, ſo that before the coronation ceremony, an invaſion and victory may be announced.

"Our Breſt fleet is nearly as numerous, and the Texel fleet not much inferior, to the Engliſh blockading fleet. But in our fleets and flotillas, are ſome choſen ſhips, containing picked and deſperate crews, called enfans perdus, who, as an advanced guard, are to try to create confuſion among their enemies, by boarding, &c. and by it, permit the remainder of their fleets and tranſports to eſcape, and to land their troops in England. Every man of their crews, who ſurvives, is to be created a member of the Legion of Honor, and to receive a penſion.

"On board theſe ſhips are, beſides combuſtible matters, of a new compoſition, which are ſaid to be unextinguiſhable.

"According to what I have heard in converſation with the French naval and military officers, the Breſt fleet is intended to invade the weſt; the Texel fleet the eaſt; and the Boulogne flotilla the South of England. As to Ireland, they ſaid, it would fall by itſelf, if they were victorious in Great Britain.

"Theſe particulars are no ſecrets here, but talked of in our firſt and beſt informed ſocieties."

That Bonaparte ſoon will, and muſt attempt an invaſion, appears evident. He has pledged himſelf to France and to the world—and, prepared as he now is, his own troops will regard a longer delay as a defeat. If we are upon our guard, and poſſeſs the ſame ſpirit and patriotiſm which we evinced laſt year, the ſooner we have tried our ſtrength with our irreconcileable foe the better; becauſe we are convinced it will finiſh to his ſhame, and perhaps make the firſt year of his empire the laſt. With all his powerful means, the real and relative ſituation of this extraordinary man is as deſperate as in any former part of his career. A defeat will inevitably be followed, not only by loſs of rank and authority, but that of life itſelf; for he owes every thing to an uninterrupted ſucceſs, and, flattered as his ſoldiers have been, with an eaſy and certain conqueſt, miſfortunes will ſoon annihilate the golden image, which proſperity alone has ſet up:—Pichegrue and Moreau will be remembered, and the univerſe revenged. Beſides, deteſted and feared as Bonparte is, every where upon the Continent, a defeat would be now, as after the battle of Aboukir, a ſignal for a new coalition; and while diſunion, diſaffection, and perhaps civil wars, raged at home, France would experience an invaſion from abroad, and the diſcontented, enſlaved, and oppreſſed Swiſs, Batavians, and Italians, ſeize the firſt opportunity to throw off a yoke, which, notwithſtanding it commands addreſſes and deputations, they wear with ſo much diſguſt.

Private accounts from Paris of the 10th, ſtate, that 900 men of the Imperial Guard, had preceded Bonaparte to the coaſt. They add, that between the 21ſt May and the 7th June, upwards of 200 veſſels, ſome of them with troops, entered Boulogne, from Flushing, Oſtend, Havre, &c.

All our accounts from the continent concur in ſtating, that the long menaced invaſion is on the eve of being attempted. Our letters from Holland during the week, ſtate that the encampment in the neighbourhood of Beverwick, had broken up for the purpoſe of embarkation, and that all the forces in North Holland were moving towards the Helder, for the like purpoſe. The circumſtance however, which more than any other, convinces us that the enemy are about to engage in ſome naval enterprize, is, that the crews of all the French privateers are impreſſed immediately on their return to port, and ſent to man the national marine; ſo general and ſo urgent is the order on this ſubject, that the famous privateer the Blonde, which made greater devaſtation in our commerce, than any other of the enemy's cruizers, has been ſtripped of all her hands; and we learn by a letter which we yeſterday received from the Phoenix frigate, that ſhe is laid up in Paſſage, near Bayonne. There are four other privateers, ſimilarly circumſtanced, at this latter port, and from thence to Bordeaux, upwards of twenty. It is not probable that the government would forgo the advantage reſulting from the active occupation of theſe cruizers, if their ſervices were not required for objects of more importance; or that they would be prematurely taken from a condition, in which they enrich the country as well as themſelves, and and materially embarraſſed our trade.

It is reported that the French troops are about to evacuate Hanover, which is to be occupied by Pruſſian troops till a peace.

There is another report in circulation on the Continent, that Bonaparte has propoſed to Pruſſia and Ruſſia, to petition the Electorate of Hanover and the Hanſe Towns.

The prorogation of Parliament is fixed for to-morrow month, unleſs ſomething new and extraordinary ſhall happen.

His Majeſty has completely recovered his health.

Mr. PITT's SPEECH.

The following is an Analyſis of Mr. Pitt's Speech, on his motion for increaſing the regular Force of Great Britain.

Mr. Pitt, in ſtating to the Britiſh Houſe of Commons his plan for increaſing the Regular Army, obſerved, that it appeared to be the unanimous wiſh of the country, to have ſuch a regular army as would be ſufficient to take advantage of any favourable circumſtances which might occur in the courſe of the war. From which, as well as from various other obſervations that have lately fallen from the Miniſter, it is evident, that the vaſt preparations in England, are making with more extenſive views, than merely thoſe of defence, namely, the emancipation of the oppreſſed nations of Europe from the iron rod of Bonaparte. The preparations will be, to the Continental Powers, a proof of the power and inclination of Britain, to promote their cauſe, will operate as an excitement to their exertions; and will awaken them from that deſpondency which has almoſt ſunk them paſt hope, will reflect a glory on the Britiſh nation, and add a luſtre to the name of Pitt, under whoſe auſpices, in former times, the Britiſh arms were every where triumphant over their enemies; and under which, in late years, the helm of ſtate was ſafely guided through the moſt tempeſtuous political ſtorms that ever agitated civilized nations. From anarchy and confuſion, and from the fangs of a deadly foe, intriguing during the maddeſt times of their revolution with the deluded Correſponding Society in England, the preſent Pitt ſaved the Britiſh nation, now unanimouſly convinced of the perfidious deſigns of every party, which either now reigns, or has reigned in France ever ſince the revolution began. Freed from the alarm of domeſtic commotion, the genius of Pitt, ſupported by a zealous people, may now diſplay itſelf in its own luſtre; may expand its gigantic views for the liberation of the oppreſſed, and may reſtore to enſlaved Europe that repoſe, which it might in vain expect while the uſurper of France ſhall wield the ſceptre of Empire. Mr. Pitt's plan, has for its object, to do away thoſe obſtacles which are in the way of recruiting for the regular army, which in a great meaſure owe their birth to that competition on which now prevails among thoſe who recruit for a more limited deſcription of ſervice: from which competition the bounties are ſo high; to create a new additional force, that may be ſufficient for internal defence, and to render the preſent troops of the line diſpoſable for foreign ſervice, ſhould circumſtances require it. No new call is made on Parliament, the Legiſlature is only required to make good what it has already voted.

There is at preſent a deficiency of the militia of about 7,000 men for England and Wales. The preſent complement ſtands at about 74,000. There is alſo a deficiency of about 9000 of the army of reſerve. It is propoſed that theſe deficiencies ſhall be filled up: that the militia ſhall ſettle to its original complument of 40,000 for England and Wales and 8000 for Scotland; and that the difference between the preſent compliment of the militia, and the original compliment ſhall be transferred, together with the 9,000 deficient of the army of reſerve eſtabliſhment to the new force to be eſtabliſhed. But tho' the militia is to be reduced to its original compliment of 48,000 for Great Britain, yet the vacancies which will continually be happening from the expiration of each man's period of ſervice, are to be filled up as if the compliment continued at 74,000, and the exceſs of 48,000 is to be regularly tranſferred to the line. This ſyſtem, in a ſhort time, will increaſe the new regular force to about 74,000 men, whoſe period of ſervice will be limited to five years; but ſubject to a further call, ſhould the war continue. And this will be a reinforcement of a nature likely to be a perpetual force of recruiting the army of the line. The new men raiſed continually for the militia, will, with the old, have the option of enliſting into the regulars; that is, any individuals of them ſo far as that there ſhall remain 48,000 in the militia. It is ſuppoſed there will be no heſitancy on the part of the men to enter the line

FROM THE FRENCH PAPERS.

PARIS, June 4.

Yeſterday (Sunday) his Serene highneſs the arch-chancellor of the empire, ſubſtitute for his Imperial highneſs the grand elector, preſented, to take the oath, which they did take, between the hands of the emperor, the ſenators Trouchet and Juncourt. His ſerene highneſs the arch chancellor preſented afterwards to take the oath, which they did take to his majeſty in their reſpective qualities:—M. Leclerc, preſect of the department of the Meuſe; M. M. Challet, preſident of the court of criminal juſtice of the department of Seine and Oiſe; Gernulet, attorney-general in the ſame court; and M. Defarars, firſt preſident of the court of appeal at Toulouſe. His imperial highneſs prince Louis, conſtable, alſo took the oath, M. adjutant-commadant Mollard.

Trial of the Conſpirators.

The account given in the Paris papers of the trial of the conſpirators, from the reading of the indictment to the ſpeech of the imperial attorney-general in commencing upon the evidence for the proſecution, is ſhort and unſatisfactory. It does not appear that many witneſſes where heard for the accuſed. The humane and ingenious Abbe Sicard, the inſtructor of the deaf and dumb, had the courage to give evidence in behalf of Gen. Moreau.—He confeſſed that he was acquainted with, and approved of the projet of effecting a reconciliation between Pichegru and Moreau; that the correſpondence conſequent upon that project, contained nothing but juſtifications on the part of one, and aſſurances of friendſhip on the part of the other. The imperial attorney-general was particularly ſevere againſt Moreau; he concluded his ſpeech with demanding that ſentence of death ſhould be paſſed upon all the accuſed perſons except four, Evan, Carran, and Gallais and his wife. After the attorney-general had finiſhed his ſpeech, the court adjourned for two hours, to give time to the counſel for the priſoners to prepare and arrange their defence. It was expected that the counſel for Moreau, the celebrated Chaveau Legarde, we believe, would make a brilliant ſpeech in his defence.

The conſpirators are placed on four benches, which they occupy in the ſame order as when the act of acculation was read to them. Georges occupies the firſt place on the uppermoſt bench.—They are all well dreſſed. They have their eyes conſtantly fixed on the judges, and pay the greateſt attention to the proceedings.

A LETTER

FROM PICHEGRU TO LOUIS XVIII.

To His Moſt Chriſtian Majeſty Louis XVIII. King of France and Navarre.

Paris, Feb. 24.

"Moreau is already in the temple, and a dungeon is there waiting for me. The ſame ſcaffold as the ſame priſon will probably ſoon contain us both, and forever remove two generals whom the foreign uſurper of your majeſty's throne regards as the only rivals of his military fame; whoſe probity is a reproach to his guilt; and who, I am proud to ſay, have ſet him as well as future conquerors, an example of virtue and moderation; who entered the career of danger and glory poor, and who left it pure.

"Sir for the laſt time a faithful ſubject addreſſes his beloved ſovereign.—When the grave is dug, and ready to ſwallow up its victim, all flattery ceaſes, all hypocriſy is laid aſide. Even a villain in that ſituation would act and ſpeak with ſincerity. In a ſhort time, ſir, I muſt be out of the reach of the vengeance of my country's tyrant; and even your Majeſty, my country's lawful king, will not have it in his power either to pardon paſt errors, or reward ſervices performed.

"Sir from what I have read in the hiſtory of former times, and from what I have obſerved of the actions and opinions of my contemporaries, I am firmly convinced, that legal and monarchical government can alone make ſubjects happy, and their ſovereign ſafe. Excuſe, therefore, Sir, the frankneſs of a ſoldier, when he acknowledges, that it was neither as the heir of ſeveral Kings, nor your perſonal talents and virtues, that made me deſire to ſee your majeſty quietly ſeated upon the throne of your anceſtors. No Sir, though I was born in your majeſty's dominions, I was nearer related to my fellow ſubjects then to my prince, and their welfare and the welfare of mankind, has always been regarded by me as ſuperior to all other conſiderations. I would never have been a rebel againſt my king, but I would neither have aſſiſted him to return to power, had not his hereditary rank and ſupremacy been, not only cloſely connected with, but inſeparable from, the comforts and liberty of my countrymen, and from the tranquility of the world.

"Sir, the time cannot be diſtant, when your majeſty will again rule in France. The proſperity and intereſt of all civilized nations demand it. Pleaſe Sir, then to remember the poor relatives of a general, who, like Bonaparte, might have uſurped your majeſty's authority, enriched his family, promoted his accomplices, enſlaved his country, and tyrannized over it, with Europe. Remember him, Sir! he was dutiful when rebellion was faſhionable; he was honeſt when infamy was a recommendation and he was diſintereſted when egoiſm excluded conſanguinity, as well as patriotiſm and loyalty!

"My laſt breath ſhall be a prayer to the Almighty for my king and for my country, &c.

"CHARLES PICHEGRU."

Letters between Madame Bonaparte and Madame Moreau.

In a preceding number we publiſhed a letter from General Moreau to the Firſt Conſul. We are now informed, from good authority, that it was authentic, with the exception that General Moreau, inſtead of acknowledging himſelf guilty of the pretended confpiracy, fays, that had he conſpired with Achegire, Georges, and others, ſuch would have been his plan, &c.

The letters we now lay before the public are known to all Paris, and have been admired even by ſome female citizens, who have not been inactive in our revolution. The one is written by a lady, near 50, ſharing a throne; the other by a young beauty of 22, who has been refuſed ſharing a dungeon with her huſband. We guarantee their authenticity. They want no comments. They ſpeak for themſelves.

"To MADAME MOREAU.

"Paris, March 12, 1804.

"Madame—Though the crimes of your huſband are great, the clemency of the Firſt Conſul is greater; and my friendſhip for you, and my compaſſion for a perſon ſo dear to you, ſurpaſs both. Apprehend, therefore, nothing for General Moreau's life. By the very conſtitution, which he intended to overturn, the Chief Magiſtrate poſſeſſes the power to pardon; and I promiſe you, that it ſhall be employed in this affair.—Do not, however, by any ill-devited indiſcretions of yourſelf and of your friends, aggravate the enormity of your huſband's guilt. They alone can ſhut the door of mercy forever and bring Gen. Moreau to the ſcaffold.

"I ſalute you cordially.

"JOSEPHINE BONAPARTE."

Madame Moreau to Madame Bonaparte.

"Griſbois, March 14, 1804.

"Madame—I cannot be called indiſcreet in ſaying that your aſſertion, that declares my huſband guilty, is raſh, ungenerous and cruel. I do not wiſh to enter into a diſcuſſion unbecoming myſelf and my huſband, who is the criminal, he, who, diſintereſted and without ſtain, has ſerved his country; or he who ſerved France, only to become the tyrant over Frenchmen. He whoſe victories pacified Europe; or the foreigner, who made his victories inſtrument to organize his oppreſſion over France and all nations. He who, in the moſt corrupted country dared to be honeſt, and had the outrageous modeſty to confound himſelf in the crowd after he had reſigned the ſupreme command; or he, who owes every advancement towards authority to ſome new crime, and has, therefore, no other choice left but between power and death, a throne or a ſcaffold. But let General Moreau appear before impartial judges, and not before predicted aſſaſſins! Let him be tried by men, whoſe lives are as pure as his own, and not by perſons accomplices in the atrocities of General Bonaparte, & whoſe paſt crimes anſwer for their preſent obedience, and I promiſe you, that juſtice, in pronouncing his honorable acquittal, will diſpatch an order for the arreſt (un mandat d'arret) of the really culpable of high treaſon againſt France—againſt the world.

"Ceaſe, Madame, to mock humanity, and to inſult my feelings by talking of your huſband's clemency and mercy! Gracious God! how can'ſt Thou ſuffer, without inflicting chaſtiſement, the profanation of theſe words? The clemency, the mercy of that cruel man, who, even in his youth, did the ferocity to inundate the ſtreets and ſquares of Toulon and Paris with the blood of innocent men, women and children! who ordered thoſe ſoldiers, who, in Italy, with their blood, earned his laurels, to be drowned or buried alive! who, in Syria, in the ſame city, poiſoned his wounded companions in arms; and butchered his diſarmed priſoners! who hired an aſſaſſin, to ſtab one rival General, Kleber, in Egypt; and who invents plots, and bribes tribunals to diſhonor or murder in France another rival General, whom he could find no banditti audacious enough to pierce!

"General Bonaparte's reign of crime and terror may be proſperous, but it cannot be long. Succeſs attended Robeſpierre, but in a ſhort time the guillotine puniſhed his barbarity! Providence is always juſt; the fame in 1804 as in 1794. My huſband and myſelf are as reſigned to the will of the Almighty, as we are firm in a belief of an hereafter—terrible for aſſaſſins, poiſoners, atheiſts and tyrants; but conſoling for ſuffering innocence upon earth.

"I ſalute you,

"JULIA MOREAU."

The ſagacity of Ants.

Having a mind to try the ſagacity of thoſe little animals, I ſtopped the holes through which they went for their proviſions in a neighbouring granary, and thereby obliged them to long and tedious journies in order to ſupply their ſtores. At laſt, I ſpread ſeveral handfuls of wheat in a room which joined their abode; but I ſtill found the ants continued going over ſeveral gardens and other large tracts to find out proviſions, and conſtantly brought them home to the ſame place, which plainly ſhewed they had not yet diſcovered the ſupply I intended for them. At laſt, I caught one of the aſſs, and threw her on the wheat I had ſpread; the inſect having been frightened, and finding herſelf at liberty, ran away without laying hold of that opportunity to enrich herſelf; but about three or four minutes afterwards, I was agreeably ſurpiſed to ſee five or ſix hundred of thoſe little animals marching towards the heap of wheat, who all took their loading and then returned home, which evidently proves that the firſt ant had communicated her diſcovery to the others.

THE ORACLE.

YORK—SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15.

We underſtand that the late heavy rains have done material damage to the Roads in different parts of the country, inſomuch as to render them in ſome places totally impaſſable, by ſweeping away the cauſeways and bridges.—At the Creek the water ſubſides by ſuch a height as entirely to overflow the ground occupied by the Indians as an encampment, for the purpoſe of fiſhing, carrying away all before it. The Indians, in the greateſt conſternation, narrowly eſcaped in the night, with their lives, after having loſt their canoes, arms and other property.

Conſiderable damage has alſo been ſuſtained by individuals in many places in loſs of corn, hay, &c. and particularly at and near the River Don, to the breaking of Mill dams.—We are informed that the Humber Mills are entirely deſtroyed.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER,

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith:—

To our beloved and faithful Legiſlative Councillors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes of our ſaid Province, to the Provincial Parliament at our Town of York, on the ſeventeenth day of September, to be commenced, held, called and choſen, and to every of you—

GREETING:

WHereas by our Proclamation bearing date the third day of Auguſt laſt, We thought fit by & with the advice of our Executive Council to prorogue our ſaid Provincial Parliament until the ſeventeenth day of this preſent month of September, at which time in our Town of York you were held and conſtrained to appear, but we taking into our Royal conſideration, the eaſe and convenience of our loving ſubjects, have thought fit by and with the advice and conſent of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforeſaid, hereby convoking, and by theſe preſents enjoining you and of each you that on the Twenty-firſt day of October next enſuing you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into conſideration the ſtate and welfare of our ſaid Province of Upper Canada, and there to do as may ſeem neceſſary. Herein fail not.

IN Teſtimony whereof, WE have cauſed theſe Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our ſaid Province to be hereunto affixed.—WITNESS Our Truſty and Well-beloved PETER HUNTER Eſquire, Our Lieutenant Governor of Our ſaid Province, and Lieutenant General Commanding Our Forces in Our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at YORK, this Thirteenth day of September, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Four, and in the Forty-fourth Year of Our Reign.

PETER.

Lateſt Intelligence.

LONDON, June 28.

There is at length ſome hope, we are gratified to learn, that the fleet of the enemy, after fifteen tedious months of preparation, will venture to ſhew itſelf out of Breſt. In conſequence of the diſpoſition which they have lately manifeſted, orders have been ſent to Plymouth, ſtarting all the men of war in Cawſand Bay immediately to join the Channel Fleet. With this reinforcement of ſix ſail of the line, the gallant Admiral Cornwallis will be nearly equal in point of numbers to the enemy, whom he has ſo long waited to chaſtiſe.

June 29.

The Dutch papers furniſh a moſt ſingular piece of intelligence, to which the public, if not now familiariſed with the charges which the Magic Lanthorn of the Pleach Revolution has already familiariſed to their view, would ſcarcely lend a momentary credit. A new Kingdom, they ſtate, is to ſpring up in Italy. Lucien Bonapaute is to be the Sovereign of that part of Italy not comprehended under Naples, Etruria and Sardinia; for the introduction of the laſt name it is ſomewhat difficult to account. He is alſo to be Grand Duke of Parma, and to hold his reſidence at Rome. The Papal territory is to be converted into a temporal ſtate, and the Pontiff to ſpend the reſt of his days at—his devotions!—This intelligence is ſaid to be confirmed by letters from Rome of the 21ſt inſt.

A letter from an officer on board his Majeſty's ſloop Rattler, dated the 23d inſt. off Oſtend, ſays, "To-day after dinner, we ſaw cloſe in ſhore, ſix ſail of the enemy's ſquadron making their way from Oſtend. We engaged them for nearly three hours, and drove them under the forts. A boy ſeeing a ſhell fall on our main deck from the batteries inſtantly put his hat on it while the fuze was burning furiouſly, took up the hat and ſhell together and threw them overboard before it had time to burſt, by which expedient he muſt have been the means of preſerving many valuable lives, and perhaps, the ſhip; for falling as it did on the main deck, it might, according to the common effect of ſhells, have deſcended to the magazine, which was directly under it."

July 1.

THE KING.—We have extreme ſatisfaction in being able to ſtate that the Phyſicians have announced his Majeſty's entire recovery; and on Wedneſday he held a grand Levee at the Queen's Houſe, which was attended by the Foreign Ambaſſadors, and all the Miniſters of State. Their Majeſties ſtill continue to make daily excurſions in the vicinity of the Metropolis, with much apparent benefit.

The bill for the abolition of ſlavery, which paſſed the Houſe of Commons a few days ſince, has been checked in the Houſe of Lords, by poſtponing its ſecond reading for three months.

Bonaparte, in his late addreſſes to the Continental Sovereigns, calls them all Cousins; but they, we believe, exclaim in return with Father Foigard—" the Devil burn the relationship, Honey."

Extract of a letter from Sidney (Botany Bay) dated April 17.

" Europeans may boast of their reciprocal friendship; but in that particular we far exceed them, for in no country are men more closely linked together.

" Some courts martial have been held here; our criminals will be sent to the mother country."

July 4.

Yesterday Mr. Pitt proposed that the Revenue of the Civil List should be 975,000l. a year; and that 591 803l. should be granted to discharge arrears.

Among the minor articles of French intelligence is a report that the rank of High Admiral of France will be conferred on Jerome Bonaparte, an office for which he enjoys the oldest and most essential qualification, the art of keeping out of the way of the English squadrons!

In consequence of the cessions lately made by the native powers of India, the coast of that country, from Madras to Calcutta, is now completely assured to the Company. The port of Malaffore which is ceded by the last treaty, is that from which the Mahrattas & their allies used to send forth their piratical prows, which at one time did so much mischief to our trade.

DOVER, June 25.

By a person lately returned from Flushing, we learn that a very great slaughter took place on board the enemy's flotilla, that lately engaged Sir Sidney: one of the large prams had above 100 killed, and a very considerable number wounded.

WOBURN SHEEP SHEARING.

The rapid and surprising improvements which have, within a few years past, been made in our domestic animals, and the other branches of rural economy, have, in a great measure, depended on the establishment, within the period, of meetings like this; where animals from different countries, the most excellent of their kind, are brought together; where the gentlemen of landed property, graziers, &c. meet together, and consolidate as it were in one spot, the intelligence and experience of the kingdom, in the arts so essential to the existence of its inhabitants, and to the welfare of the nation.

The Duke of Bedford on Sunday gave a grand dinner at Woburn Abbey, to the Duke of Manchester, Earl of Albemarle, Lord Sheffield (President of the Board of Agriculture,) Lord Ludlow, Sir Harry Featherstone, Sir George Pigot, Sir George Paul, Mr. Charles C. Smith, Mr. M'Ieiy, Mr. Child, Mr. Battine, Mr. Wilbraham, Mr. N. Wilbraham, Mr. Motteaux, Mr. Garrard, Mr. Holland and Mr. Young.

After attending divine service at Woburn church on Sunday, her Grace the Dutchess of Bedford left Woburn to spend the time of the sheep shearing with her noble sister the Dutchess of Manchester, at Kimbolton Castle.

On Monday morning, the 18th June at an early hour the company began to assemble at the Park Farm, in Woburn Park; and about eleven o'clock, his Grace of Bedford, and the several noblemen and gentlemen with him at the Abbey, being arrived, the exhibition of the new Leicester rams, intended to be let on Tuesday evening, commenced in the elegant Shew House, which was erected a few years ago for the purpose of holding these meetings, about three hours, from two till three, and only those under sheep were brought out singly, in succession, and were handled and examined by the breeders and farmers present, and their various merits and defects were freely discussed, the fleece of each sheep being carefully felt for inspection. On the whole, it seemed agreed, that these rams were equal, if not superior, to any of the past shew at Woburn—some of the stock, from a sheep, formerly belonging to Mr. Buckley, were very excellent. This business occupied nearly the whole of the morning, during which other parties were engaged in examining the designs for the intended monument, to the memory of the late Duke which were hung up in the adjoining room. A colossal figure in bronze, nine feet in height, resting the right hand on a plough, as Hope and other figures have frequently been made to do upon an anchor, with four emblematical figures at his feet (the model for casting which is in great forwardness) which is to be erected in Russel-square, on a pedestal of granite, twenty five feet high the whole; the effects of which was shewn by a very good perspective view of the square, with the intended statue in its centre.

On the pedestal, the following inscription is intended:—" To the memory of Francis Duke of Bedford, this statue was erected by public subscription in gratitude of his grace's unwearied endeavours to improve the theory and practice of agriculture." 6000l. have been received by the committee appointed for erecting this statue, and in small sums, a proof of the estimation in which this excellent nobleman was held by many. In the course of the forenoon a party repaired to the Duke's mill, where a steam engine, perhaps the first ever applied to the purposes of agriculture, has lately been erected. Mr. Cartwright, the inventor, attended, and explained the wonderful properties of this machine to the company. Mr. Toller shewed to the wool staplers and graziers of wool, some samples of extraordinary long and fine wool, produced from Spanish sheep, originally from his Majesty's flock, by sheering them only once in two years.—An extraordinary cafe was mentioned, of 24 ewes in Holderness, having this year produced 70 fine lambs, and which was attributed by the narrator, to their having lived luxuriously on green tares.

About three o'clock his grace entertained about 190 persons to dinner in the great hall; his grace was in the chair, supported by the Earl of Upper Offory, Earl of Albemarle, Sir Joseph Banks, Lord Somerville, Lord Sheffield, Mr. Motteaux, &c. And among the company were the Duke of Manchester, Lord Ludlow, Sir Harry Featherstone, Robert Ryng, John Wing, —— Child, W. H. Hanmer, Edward Hanmer, Henry Holland, Arthur Young, George Garrard, Humphry Davy, R. A. Reddal, Messrs C. Buckley, Elman, Webster, Platt, Astley, J. Duckitt, J. P. More, Wm. Runciman, Geo. Tollett, &c. &c.

It was remarked, that not one member of the House of Commons was present. After the cloth was removed, his Grace gave the following toasts:

The King—Success to Agriculture—The Fleece—Good Grazing—The union of Agriculture and Commerce—The Plough—Irrigation—The memory of Mr. Bakewell—The Farming Society of Ireland—Earl of Egremont.

A little before six, the company repaired again to the Park Farm, where four pens of new Leicester sheep were to be sold; after some time spent in examining the sheep, the lots were put up by auction, as is usual (and allowed by law free of duty, in the case of farming stock.) The first five Leicester sheaves produced 13 guineas, the second 12 guineas, the first five Leicester ewes sold for 12 guineas and a half, and the second 9 guineas and a half. This day's meeting, was not so numerously attended as formerly, occasioned partly by an idle rumour that the meeting was put off till Wednesday.

ATTEMPT at NEGOCIATION.

St. Domingo.

We copy the following interesting article from the Englishman, a London paper of June 17.

" A British agent was dispatched from Jamaica to St. Domingo, on the 3d of January, on board of the Tartar frigate, with propofals for a treaty, which had for their basis the original agreement, between Generals Maitland and Toussaint, with a few modifications and extensions favorable to the commerce of St. Domingo. The Tartar touched first at Jeremie, a port on the south side of St. Domingo; but as Dessalines was at Port au Prince, she sailed for that town, and entered the harbor on the 15th. The British agent had the following day an interview with the Governor General, when numerous objections were made by him to the treaty, and amendments and additions were suggested, to which it was impossible to accede, so very extravagant were his demands. Dessalines wished to stipulate for universal commerce, & for freedom of navigation round the island to any distance from the coast his vessels might proceed. He also insisted on being supplied by us with arms and ammunition, and what was most extraordinary with negroes. From terms so excessive as these, no hopes could be entertained of any thing like a satisfactory issue being put to the negociation, and during the space of five days more, whilst the British agent & his colleagues remained at Port au Prince, only another interview took place. Dessalines seized the opportunity of recapitulating a number of old grievances complained of by Toussaint, and tending to shew his doubts of our sincerity. He laid vast stress on the confidence reposed in him by the people of Hayti, and of the dignity and independence of his government, which obliged him to reject the terms we proposed, and to which he could not think of acceding, since the island was open to the commerce of the whole world, France excepted. To a proposition that he should put us in possession of the post of the Mole, during the war only, he answered, that it was altogether impossible, and that he had given orders to destroy all the fortifications on the land side of the town, which had been carried into effect at Port-au-Prince, and was to be done through the whole of St. Domingo. Our Agent returned to Kingston with the proposal of Dessalines in writing, after a solemn promise that an answer should be sent from Governor Nugent, at Jamaica, with all possible dispatch.

" This promise was punctually executed, for the British Agent did not remain quite a week at Kingston, when he embarked in the same frigate for St. Domingo with Governor Nugent's ultimatum. With the exception of some trifling modifications, it differed little from our first proposals. The Governor thought it, however, expedient to send patients to Dessalines and his principal officers, to the value of several hundred pounds, chiefly composed of hats, gold lace, epaulettes, and sabres. On the 10th of February our Agents were landed at Jeremie, but as Dessalines was then at Aux Cayes, no interview took place until his arrival, which was the 25th. Instead of relaxing in the demands he had before made, he renewed all his objections, and even insisted as a preliminary, that we should furnish him with one million pounds of powder, equal to five hundred tons, with fifty thousand muskets and ammunition; fifty thousand sabres for infantry; five thousand for cavalry, and fifty barrels of flints. So extraordinary a proposal was a convincing proof that he had no intention of treating with us; but it was considered the wisest course to assure Dessalines that his demand should be laid before the Governor of Jamaica. The Agents returned to Kingston, and, we understand, that in consequence of Governor Nugent's dispatches, all idea of a treaty with the Republic of Hayti is entirely relinquished.

" We learn from undoubted authority that Dessalines, and the great mass of his officers and army are equally perfidious and brutal: and it is confidently maintained, by those best acquainted with his character, that no treaty made with him or any of them, can be kept sacred. Such a measure would inevitably expose the lives and properties of our merchants to the caprice of those ferocious banditti, who, left to themselves, must fall a prey to each other. They have now an army of nearly twenty thousand men on foot, without any resources for its support. The troops are miserably clothed, receive no pay, and would be thortly without the means of existence, as cultivation is neglected throughout the island, were we to declare the ports in a state of blockade. The actual ration allowed to each black soldier consists of a herring and half a pound of bad bread.—The whole population of St. Domingo is not now 150,000 souls, and of that number not more than 95,000 are effective males. The population, diminishing, it would decrease still more rapidly were they deprived of all external succour. With a people so disproportioned to the standing army, it may be easily conceived to what a miserable state the plantations are reduced. The few which are still worked are cultivated by women, children and old men; and all the sugar works and distilleries, except in a few instances, have been totally destroyed. A quantity of Tafia, sufficient for the consumption of the military only, is not made in the whole island, and not a single pound of sugar is to be obtained. It would seem from the sentiments expressed by Dessalines, during his conferences with our Agents that he intends to make coffee and cotton the chief commodities of the island.

" As the blacks naturally look for another attempt on the part of France, to recover the island, their present system is to destroy all the fortifications around the towns, unless where they protect the entrance of the harbors."

BOSTON, August 17.

We yesterday received Halifax papers to the 28th ult. The Legislature of Nova Scotia was adjourned on the 27th. The following is the Speech of the Governor on the occasion:

Gentlemen of the Council, and
Gentlemen of the Assembly,

The public business being brought to a conclusion, as far as it probably can be: I am happy to have it in my power to give you a recess. I cannot, however, dismiss you without thanking you, for the continuance of the Revenue Laws to the 31st of December, 1805, for the support of his Majesty's Government.

I am very sorry, that a difference of opinion in the two Branches of the Legislature, should have prevented the passing of the Appropriation Bill, usually enacted at the end of the Session; but, I trust, this will not be found a circumstance, from which any great inconvenience will result. Such of the votes for granting money for the services agreed on, as have been sent up by the House, and concurred in by Council, will be paid; as was usually done, previous to the practice in this Province of passing such Bills; and out of the Revenue granted for the support of the Government, and not otherwise appropriated, I shall feel myself justified in paying the Salaries usually granted to the officers of Government, and in discharging the current contingencies of the public Service; amongst which, I shall willingly include the pay of the Members at the rate of TEN SHILLINGS per day; and, such of them as shall apply at the Treasury, will be accordingly paid, on the usual certificates. I have only to recommend to you, the cultivation of peace and good order in your several stations and situations in the province, as the safest and best means of securing and increasing the happiness of the people.

NEW-YORK, August 23

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at Wythe Court House, (Virginia) to his friend in Frederick-Town, dated July 30, 1804.

" We have for 12 days been clouded with a dark smoke, and this day I was informed by a gentleman from Kentucky, that the Clinch mountain had sunk (for many miles) to the depth of 50 feet; after which clouds of smoke issued therefrom, so that the inhabitants at the distance of 20 miles from the place were not able to discover an object at 20 feet distance. This, I suppose, was occasioned by the burning of the stone coal which is in the mountain.

Moreau.—It has been announced in the Paris Moniteur, (the Government paper) that this general has been banished to America—to what part is not suggested. Other papers mention that he left his prison on the 21st June, and proceeded for Perpignan, followed by his escort; and that he is to embark from Spain for America. The General, it is said, has no intimation of the arrangement, and had just furnished his apartments in the Temple.—When he was on his trial, he was treated with much respect. After he delivered his speech before the court, he was loudly applauded by the spectators—and the guards presented arms when he passed. —Several of the conspirators have been pardoned on the supplications of female relations, who prostrated themselves at the feet of the Emperor, and were seconded in their prayers by the Empress Josephine and her daughter.—Palladium.

A private letter from Paris, dated May 22, says—" Besides the known disagreement in our Imperial family, between his Majesty Napoleon and his Brother Citizen Lucien Bonaparte, his Imperial Highness Prince Louis Bonaparte has narrowly escaped an affair of honor with Citizen Beauharnois, brother to her Imperial Highness the Princess Fanny de Beauharnois, consort to Prince Louis. This quarrel originated in the discontent of Citizen Beauharnois, who, though his mother was allotted an Empress, his father decreed an Emperor, his sister made a Princess, and his brother-in-law an Imperial Prince, and a Constable of the Empire, in the same day; he received neither rank nor promotion, but simply an annuity of 100,000 livres (4000 L. sterling) in the month, until he can be better provided for. In the challenge to Prince Louis, Citizen Beauharnois said, that he was a Viscount, when his Imperial Highness was only a Sans-culotte; and that he possessed property to the amount of 60,000 livres in the year, when the whole Imperial Bonaparte Family together did not possess an acre of land, or a cottage.

" Cit. Elahault, son to the guillotined Count de Elahault, aid de camp to his imperial highness Prince Louis, carried this letter to his majesty the Emperor Napoleon, who ordered the field marshal, citizen Murat, to put citizen Beauharnois under arrest; and notwithstanding the interference of her Imperial majesty, Josephine, his mother, he has been exiled, as some say, to the army on the coast; or, as others retend, to join the remainder of the disgraced Bonapartes at Rome.

" We have just received the news by the Telegraphe, that the consuls of the Italian republic has elected our ci-devant first consul, and th' ci-devant president, at present our emperor, or majesty Napoleon, their hereditary king of Lumbardy; and that a deputation has left Milan, and is on its way to Paris with this offer.

" Each field marshal has received from the first consul a present, in ready money, of 300,000 livres (12,500l.) to equip himself. Their regimentals are to be the same as those of the late Marechals de France under the King."

SALEM, August 24.

A gentleman who arrived yesterday in the Lucia, from Calcutta, has favored us with the following summary of intelligence:

" The news of the war in Europe reached Calcutta about the beginning of December; in consequence of which a number of sailors were impressed from the American shipping, for the British ship Caroline, Capt. Page.—A great number of American seamen had deserted their ships in the months of September, October and November, and volunteered on board the Honorable Company's frigate Bombay, Capt. Hayes, where they still are, and probably will be, during the war.

" The Company had concluded a peace with the Mahratta powers. The war was of but short duration, though extremely obstinate on the part of the black Princes—many hard battles were fought, in which the slaughter on both sides was very considerable. In one engagement, Scindiah, the Mahratta Chief, had 90 pieces of artillery. A number of European officers fought under his standard; his soldiers were armed and clothed in a style superior to that of their enemies, and the English troops found them much better skilled in war than at any former period. Several able and distinguished British officers fell in the course of the campaign. By the peace, the Company have gained, as usual, a large accession of territory, besides several strongly fortified towns, and a good share of plunder.

"The event of the war seemed to diffuse a general joy among the inhabitants of Calcutta, both Europeans and natives, and his Excellency the Governor had publicly received a congratulatory address on the subject, from the principal inhabitants of the settlement. About the beginning of March the palace and environs were most superbly illuminated. The names of "Lake and Wellesley" were exhibited in fire works in various positions, and a splendid ball at the Government House closed the festivities of the night. An immense throng of all nations, hues and tongues, surrounded the Palace in every direction. In short, the last assemble was grand and interesting beyond description.

"A rupture between Holkaar, a Mahratta Chief, and the Company, was much expected; and it was also whispered that Pegu would soon fall into the hands of the English. On this subject, however, no furmise could possibly be formed from the Gazettes of Calcutta; as not a syllable appears in them which has not previously undergone examination by the Chief Secretary to Government; who expunges such articles as he thinks proper.

"There had been a number of French privateers from the Isle of France cruising in the Bay of Bengal, several of which had been taken by English cruizers, and sent into Calcutta. They had been at Bencoolen, and destroyed a quantity of pepper, and several vessels in the harbour.

"There had been two embargoes on all shipping at Calcutta, and on the river Hoogly, in consequence of the sailing of the Company's ships for Europe."

This day (says the Boston Centinel of the 15th inst.) his Imperial Majesty, Napoleon, Emperor of the French, enters his 36th year.—He was born at Calvi, in Corsica, August 15, 1762. He is married, but has no issue.

The Emperor of the French has four brothers and four sisters living, and all married.—His eldest brother, M. Lucien Bonaparte, resides in Rome; his second brother, is his Imperial Highness Prince Joseph, Grand Elector; his third brother is his Imperial Highness Prince Louis, Constable of the Empire;—his fourth brother is M. Jerome Bonaparte, now residing in the United States.—His sisters are, Madame Bacchachi, Madame Santa Cruce, Madame Murat, and the Princes Borghese, (if we mistake not) formerly Madame Le Clerc, and lately married to an Italian Prince, nephew to Pope Pius VII.

The Emperor's mother, and uncle, Cardinal Fesch, also reside at Rome. The latter is Minister of France to the Holy See.

HANOVERIAN LOYALTY.

A grand dinner was given at the hotel called the English Club-house, at Hanover, on the 4th of June, in celebration of our Sovereign's birth day.—The populace surrounded the place, & expressed their joy on the occasion by frequent shouts of "God save the King," &c. until at length the French Commandant deemed it expedient to order the garrison under arms, and to disperse the party.

A most extraordinary circumstance, says a late English paper, at present engages the public attention in Cardiff and its vincinity, which will also, we presume, attract the notice of the medical speculatist:—A young woman recently died in child bed at Cadoxtone, near Cardiff, soon after delivery, and the infant pining for that nourishment which nature designed for it, the mother of the deceased, upwards of 70 years of age, put the child to her own breast, from which it soon drew milk, and a copious supply speedily following, she now continues suckling the infant to the admiration and astonishment of the whole neighbourhood.

A few days since two boys set fire to some loose grains laying on a cask of gunpowder in a store at Ashburton, in Devonshire, (England) when the cask immediately exploded, and blew up the store and an adjoining house. The two boys, with a servant in the store, were blown to atoms.

THE late transactions in France are of such a nature as must bring to the recollection of our readers, the very wife questions put by the Governor of Barataria, when speaking of the Kingdom his master had promised him. "When I am made a king," said the wife man, "will my wife be a Queen?" "Yes,"—"and will all our ragged noted ragged boys and girls be Princes and Princesses?" "Yes," was the answer: "I will not believe it," said the new Sovereign; "for if the Almighty were to rain down kingdoms, it would be impossible to convert the wife of Sancho Panza into a Queen.

(London Paper.)

The assumed high sounding and numerous imperialities of the late First Consul, remind us of a person whom Sterne says he once knew, "whose name, names, or nomen multitudinis, was Cæsar Augustus Gustavus Adolphus Mark Anthony Timothy Keeling, dancing master."

THE ORACLE.

YORK:—SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 22.

In our last week's paper, under the Oracle, we mentioned the Humber Mills as being destroyed—we are now happy to have it in our power to contradict that report, and to inform the public that they have sustained little or no injury by the late floods.

WM. JARVIS, Secretary.

UPPER CANADA.

NOTICE is hereby given that the Commissioners for the Home District, appointed by a certain Statute of the Provincial Legislature, passed during the Session of the present year, intituled, "An Act for granting to His "Majesty a certain sum of Money out of the Funds "applicable to the uses of this Province to defray "the expences of amending and repairing the Public "Highways and Roads, laying out and opening new "Roads and building Bridges in the several Districts "thereof" are ready to receive Proposals from any Person or Persons disposed to contract for the opening and repairing the Road and building Bridges between the Town of York and the head of BURLINGTON BAY.

Such Proposals to state at what prices the Party desirous of undertaking the aforesaid work, will engage to finish and complete the same, and must consist of the following particulars to—

At what Price per Mile such Person will open and clear out such part of the Road leading from Lot Street, adjoining the Town of York (beginning at Peter Street) to the Mouth of the Humber, of the width of 33 feet, as shall not be found to stand in need of any causeway.

With the price also per Rod at which such Party will engage to open, clear out, & causeway such other part of the same Road as may require to be causewayed, and the last mentioned price to include as well the opening and clearing out as the causewaying such Road. The causeway to be 18 feet wide; as also the price at which any Person will engage to build Bridges upon the said Road of the width of eighteen feet.

And the said Commissioners will also receive Proposals from any Person or Persons willing to engage to cut down three Hills at the following Places, viz. one at the Sixteen Mile Creek, another between the Sixteen and Twelve Mile Creek, and the third at the Twelve Mile Creek.

And also for repairing in a good and substantial manner, the Bridge at the Outlet of Burlington Bay.

All the before mentioned Work to be completed in a good and substantial manner on or before the 1st day of October next, and when completed, the Money contracted to be given, will be paid by the Receiver General.

But each party entering into an Engagement for any part of the aforesaid work, will be required to produce two sufficient Sureties, to be bound for the performance of the Contract.

The Proposals to be delivered in to WILLIAM ALLAN or DUNCAN CAMERON Esquires, of York, or to JAMES RUGGLES or WILLIAM GRAHAM Esquires, of Yonge Street, or to WILLIAM ALLEGARTH Esquire, of Flamborough East, all of whom are Commissioners named for carrying the aforesaid Act into execution.

YORK, 28th July, 1804.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER Esquire,
Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

WHEREAS by a certain Act of the Legislature of this Province, passed in the forty-fourth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act for granting to his "Majesty, a certain sum of money for "the further encouragement of the "growth and cultivation of Hemp "within this Province, and the exportation thereof," it is enacted, That from and out of any fund or funds now remaining, or which may hereafter come, into the hands of the Receiver General, arising from and out of the rates and duties already raised, levied and collected, or which hereafter may be raised, levied and collected to and for the uses of this Province, there be granted to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, the sum of one thousand pounds, to be disposed of, appropriated and laid out for public purposes of capital, applicable to the purpose of purchasing Hemp the growth of this Province, and of discharging the expences incident to such purchases, and the exportation and sale thereof, in such manner, and under such regulations, as to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council thereof, should from time to time seem meet; And that it should and may be lawful to and for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, to issue one or more Proclamation or Proclamations, and therein to name such and so many persons within the Province as to him shall seem meet, as Commissioners for the purchasing of Merchantable Hemp the growth of this Province, which said Commissioners, or any one or more of them, are and is thereby authorized and empowered to purchase such Hemp at and after the price or rate of forty pounds per ton: AND WHEREAS it is further enacted by the said Act, that after the passing of that Act, no person or persons whatsoever, shall be intitled to any further Bounty over and beyond the said price or sum of forty pounds per ton, or to any Premium under any Proclamation or Proclamations, heretofore issued by the Lieutenant Governor, for the encouragement of the growth and exportation of Hemp, for or in respect of any Hemp for which the said sum of forty pounds per ton shall be paid under the powers thereby given; Nor shall any Bounty or Premium be paid or payable for or in respect of any Hemp not intended for sale to some one of the Commissioners acting in virtue of the powers thereby given, which shall not be claimed on or before the thirtieth day of September next, under proper and sufficient Documents, to be on or before that day, presented to the person or persons duly empowered or authorized to allow or pay the same: Provided that before the said Commissioners to be appointed in virtue of that Act, or any of them, shall under the authority thereby given, purchase any Hemp from any person or persons whomsoever, such Commissioners and each of them are, and is thereby authorized and required, to administer to such person or persons offering any such Hemp for sale, an Oath in the said Act particularly set forth, whereby such person or persons, is or are to swear that the Hemp which he, she or they had that day offered for sale to the Commissioner appointed by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor for the purchase of Hemp, and every part thereof, was raised within the Province of Upper Canada by him or them, or by some other person or persons (to be named in such oath) and that no Bounty or Premium had been paid or claimed for any part of such Hemp, by any person or persons whomsoever, save and except what was included in the sum or price for which he, she or they had offered to sell such Hemp to the said Commissioner.—Now know all whom it may concern, that I PETER HUNTER Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, well knowing the fidelity, diligence and ability of the Honorable James Baby of Sandwich, the Honorable Richard Cartwright of Kingston, the Honorable Robert Hamilton of Queenstown, all Members of the Legislative Council of this Province, and William Allan of York in the Home District Esquire, do, by virtue of the power so vested in me as aforesaid, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, nominate, constitute and appoint the said James Baby, Richard Cartwright, Robert Hamilton, and William Allan, to be Commissioners for the purchasing of merchantable Hemp, the growth of the said Province, at and after the price or rate of Forty Pounds Halifax Currency per Ton, which said sum of Forty Pounds is to be paid by the said Commissioners respectively, to the party or parties selling such Hemp, in Money only, according to the rules, regulations, limitations and restrictions in the said in part above recited Act expressed and contained, with full power and authority, to do and perform all and each of the matters and things in the said Act authorized or required by them the said Commissioners to be done and performed.

Given under my Hand, and Seal at Arms, at York, this Twenty-Third Day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and four, and in the forty-fourth year of His Majesty's Reign.

P. HUNTER, Lt. Govr.

By His Excellency's Command,

Wm. JARVIS, Secy.

FROM LATE LONDON PAPERS.

July 3.

George Von Sucfelon has laid before the Emperor of Russia a plan for enlarging the port of Revel, so as to be able to contain the whole Russian navy; as also for fortifying the entrance of the Gulph of Finland, and the coasts of the large islands of Oosel and Dagho. The Emperor approved this plan and assigned four millions of roubles towards its execution.

The French design to attempt a landing as nearly as possible at the same time on Jersey and Guernsey, and formidable reinforcements had arrived on their coasts from their interior.

The communications between the Court of England and Russia, leave no doubt but they must refer to objects of every general interest to the states of the Continent. It appears that 25 Russian ships full of troops have arrived at Corfu and from authentic advices from Constantinople, and the Black Sea, very large armaments are preparing in the latter place.

According to a letter from Bologna, General Charpentier, Chief of the Italian army, has passed through that city with 200 huffars, on his way to Rome, for the purpose of escorting the Holy Father to France, should his Holiness content to undertake the journey.

SALEM, Aug. 14.

Capt. Mugford, from Marseilles, inform us, that the French fleet in Toulon are 8 sail of the line, very heavy ships, and the English Mediterranean fleet 14 sail. He says the French fleet has not been out, except a short distance round the islands; once they followed an English decoy, of one 74 and a frigate, with whom they exchanged a few shot; but on the English fleet displaying themselves, they retired into port.

It was reported at Nantz, that the punishment to which Gen. Moreau was sentenced, had been so far mitigated, as to limit the duration of his confinement to six months; after which it was expected he would be invested, by his old comrade, the new Emperor, with the chief command of the armies.

PENNSYLVANIA.

PHILADELPHIA, August 18.

By one of the gentlemen who arrived at New York, on Saturday last, in the ship Protector, from Cette, we have been favoured with the following additional information respecting the action between a part of the squadron under the command of Lord Nelson, and a detachment of the French Toulon fleet:—

On the twenty-third of May, three British ships of the line attacked a fort at a small distance from Toulon; this daring conduct induced the French Admiral to detach eight sail of the line and a frigate in pursuit of them. After the British ships had decoyed them fairly out of the port, and had gotten them to a suitable distance from the shore, they engaged the headmost ships of the French fleet, and continued fighting until dusk, when three additional ships, belonging to Lord Nelson's fleet, hove in sight and passed between the shore and the sternmost of the French ships.

In this situation were the two fleets when our informant passed them. The wind was then blowing so hard from off the shore (and continued so for two days) that there was no possibility of the French fleet returning to Toulon. The action commenced about 3 o'clock, P. M. and, it is supposed, that all the ships were engaged in the middle of the night, as very heavy firing was then heard.—The result of this conflict he was unable to learn.

Boston, August 18.

Yesterday we received English papers to 6th July, and London to the 4th, about 14 days the latest. They are quite barren of political intelligence.

The prospect of a Continental Coalition did not brighten. Austria, though she has 300,000 men in readiness to take the field, had declared her determination to maintain her neutral system;—and we see nothing in the conduct of Russia, which looks like preparation for immediate action.—It is true, she was in active negociation with Great Britain and France; and the Emperor had ordered ten sail of the line, and six frigates, with four months provisions, to be equipped to sea; but for what objects can only be conjectured.

In France the hum of invasion had recommenced; and it is a fact, the preparations were greatly advanced since our last accounts, and wore every appearance of sober earnestness. The imperial constitution did not meet with any obstructions in its execution; and the Emperor was equally alert in his reviews and excursions, as the First Consul had been. The Imperial coronation, it was expected, would not take place until September.—Georges, and the other state prisoners, had not been executed; some had been pardoned; but no mention was made of Moreau.

In England things remained tranquil.—Mr. Pitt did not appear to be deterred from his efficient measures, by the opposition he had received. His defence bill passed the house of Lords, by a majority of 85—From it 154. Against it 69. The bill for abolishing the slave trade, has received a go-bye in the house of Lords. The king had perfectly regained his health, and transacted public business as formerly. The difficulties of a Regency had subsided. The forces of the kingdom were daily increasing. On the 1st July, the navy in commission consisted of 104 sail of the line, 25 fifties, &c. 129 frigates, and 309 smaller vessels. Total 567.

The French fleet in Brest harbour, July 1st, comprised 22 sail of the line, and 10 frigates. The British fleet off that port, at the same time, consisted of 35 sail of the line, viz. 1 of 112 guns; 1 of 110 guns; 1 of 100; 1 of 98; 4 of 80; and 19 of 74 guns, under the following flag officers, Admiral Cornwallis, Vice-Admirals Corton, Calder and Cottingwood; and Rear-Admirals Graves, Northesk and Domett.

Aug. 14.——From Holland.

By the arrival of Capt. Appleton, our verbal accounts are to June 20, and we have been favoured with newspapers to the 10th. The expedition against Great Britain, was occasionally the subject of conversation and mirth.—Reports prevailed that a misunderstanding existed between Russia and France, occasioned by the execution of the Duke D'Enghien at Paris; there were also rumours of a pacific nature, which rather evinced the hopes than the knowledge of the people; but it is said they effected the markets. The Dutch were extremely discontented. It was said a spirit of revolt had been manifested at Haerlem, and that in consequence of it, 10,000 French troops had been marched into that city.

From Dutch Papers.

GENOA, May 25.

It is probable that a peace, under the mediation of the English Consul, will shortly be effected between the American States and the Bashaw of Tripoli; as the only remaining object in dispute seems to be the extent of the tribute which the Americans are to pay the Barbary Powers.

LOWER ELBE, June 8.

There is no little impatience expressed here, as to the issue of a very energetic memorial, lately sent from Paris to Petersburgh; and the impression which it has made in the latter city.

AMSTERDAM, June 19.

The celebrated Johnson, whom neither bars nor high walls could hold in the Fleet Prison at London, has just given his prisons at Klausenberg a specimen of his wonderful dexterity. After being confined in prison there ever since May 31, of last year, he a few days since took an opportunity by the forestock and broke through every impediment. [It is said he took passage for Boston.]

FROM SUMATRA.

By capt. Haskell, at Salem, we have intelligence of the English taking possession of the port and town of Muca, (Sumatra) with a force consisting of a ship of 20 guns, one 16, one of 8, one of 6, and one of 4 and between 3 and 400 seapoys, after an action of 6 hours, in which the Malays lost 50 men, and the English 20. This was on the 14th of April.

New and elegant buildings and improvements, increase yearly in this town. It has been computed, by a gentleman of information and judgement, that the bricks laid, and which will be laid, during the spring, summer and autumn of this year, will average more than One million a week.

Among the memorabilia of the present day, is the re-establishment of the celebrated order of the Jesuits, in Rome, and France.

A new Philosophical Journal has been lately established at Madrid the object of which, is, to treat of physical and mathematical sciences, natural history, agriculture, the different branches of literature, and the fine arts.

NEW YORK.

A singular circumstance.—"A pistol loaded, was fired inadvertently against a young woman, in Manchester; the ball struck against her breast, but having a silk handkerchief on, it did her no other injury then producing a violent contusion. This produced the following wager; that a ball would not penetrate a dog if covered with silk handkerchiefs. The trial was made along there, near Liverpool, a few days ago, with success, and although repeated several times, produced no other effect than bruising that part where the ball hit. Singular as this may appear, we are assured by our informant, that it is a fact, and that no ball will penetrate a body clothed with a silk garment."

We have an instance in our own city corroborative of these facts.

About a fortnight ago, several gentlemen went over to Brooklyn to shoot at a mark for a trifling wager. Mr. Sheffelin, Druggist in Pearl street, was one of the company. The parties stood ten paces from the target. Mr. Sheffelin had fired several times with accuracy. He again took his position to fire. His pistol was loaded as usual, and while waiting for the word, hung pendant, with the muzzle below the knee; the ball of course, was not more then twenty inches from the foot. In this position the pistol was accidently fired. The ball struck the top of the foot near the ancle. Surgical aid was obtained. Dr. Burrows was the professional gentleman sent for.

Mr. Sheffelin had on ordinary ribbed white silk stockings. On examining the wound, it was discovered, that although the ball entered the foot about half an inch, not a thread of the stocking was broken! The impetus given to the ball extended the threads where it hit, but the stocking was as wholly unbroken as if the accident had not happened. The part which the ball hit was forced into the foot and made a sort of a bag for it. After separating from the stocking by cutting, the piece (or the bag, if I may so express myself,) and the ball were taken out together. I have now in my possession the part of the stocking which the ball struck, and which any one may see by calling at the office. The circumference of the ball is distinctly marked upon it; but within this there is not the least fracture of the stocking.

In a conversation which I had with Mr. Sheffelin on Saturday last he told me that the pistol, when the accident happened, had the usual charge of powder; he mentioned a middling sized thimble full.

Dr. Burrows has the ball in his possession. The netting and the ribs of the stocking are very distinctly impressed upon it. This is proof to the infallibility of the silk.

PARIS, June 22.

The Speech of Jules Polignac, before the Tribunal made a great impression upon the Judges as well as upon the audience, and has made him the favourite with the Parisians. With a calm and firm voice he said—

"Should my brother Armand be found guilty, and I be declared innocent, I supplicate most earnestly to be permitted to take his place, and die for him; he has a wife; I am unmarried; and, in the present situation of my king, my country, and my family, I have no ties that attach me to life; which, besides, I have not enjoyed long enough to regret much its loss. An unfortunate, but loyal exile from my youth, I have tasted little of existence but its wretchedness, which is now become almost insupportable; and I see no other happiness or glory upon this side of the grave than to be allowed to ascend the same scaffold where the most virtuous of men and of Kings, Louis XVI. had bled. my sentiments are, besides, unalterable, neither to be shaken by terror, nor changed by clemency. No Polignac was never a traitor, either to his God or to his King; and I shall certainly not be the first who dishonours my name. Whether I am to die in an hour, or to live for a century, my constant prayer and wish shall be, that Providence may restore to my country its lawful Sovereign."

During his speech, of which this is only a short sketch, several ladies in the galleries with their tears evinced the interest he inspired. Even the Gens d'armes were moved at seeing his firmness, and hearing his frankness.

LONDON, July 2.

The Court of Cassation, to whose revision the French State Prisoners had referred their sentences, was to declare judgement about the 20th ult.

The colour of the Imperial Mantle, to be worn by Buonaparte on the 14th July, blue with golden stars. It is singular that Buonaparte should have had always a star fixed at the top and bottom of the boxes of the play houses where he went, and in different parts of the palaces he inhabits.—Moos, de Kotzebue, in an interesting work lately published, entitled, "Recollections from Paris in the year 1804," particularly mentions this circumstance as ominous.

The dollars captured on board the French vessels by the Felix schooner, of 14 guns, Lieut. Bourne, were yesterday forwarded to London: We understand the the amount to be 62,229.

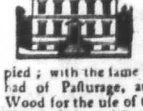
JULY 3, 1804. Dispatches were yesterday received from Sir J. Borlase Warren, at Petersburgh, which are said to be of a very important nature. Whatever may be the result of the communications between the Courts of England and Russia, we can have no doubt but that they must refer to objects of very general interest to the States of the Continent. It is said that 25 Russian ships, full of troops, have arrived at Corfu.

SLAVE TRADE.

H. OF LORDS, JULY 2. The bill from the Commons for abolishing the slave trade, was taken up. His R. Highness the DUKE OF CLARENCE, presented two petitions against the bill. JULY 3.—The Slave Trade Abolition Bill being read, Lord HAWKESBURY moved, that it be read a "second time this day three months." A debate ensued, Lord GRENVILLE advocated the bill; which was opposed by Earl ST VINCENT, and the DUKE of CLARENCE.—The latter maintained, that a property to an immense amount was vested in the trade, and therefore a determination respecting its abolition ought to be coolly considered. He was fully convinced that the abolition was incpedient, and therefore he was in favour of any motion that retarded its progress. The motion to postpone the second reading of the bill for three months, passed without a division.

FRIENDSHIP.

WHAT is friendship? an interchange of affection and services, founded on virtue, and the sympathy of souls. Deprive society of this reciprocal benevolence, and you break every tie, for man depends on man.



At a city feast in London, one of the company was expatiating on the blessings of Providence, "aye," said Alderman C. smacking his lips, "it is a blessed place, sure enough, we get all our turtle from it." [Lond. paper.

A curious cause is likely soon to find its way into the courts. A young gentleman just come of age, calls upon his guardians to put him in possession of a fortune left him in the funds. The guardians demur, on the ground that he was willed the possession of the fortune "when he come to years of discretion; at which from some of his late actions, they mean to contend, he is not yet arrived. [Ibid.

POETRY.

FROM A LATE ENGLISH PAPER.

A BRITON TO BONAPARTE.

RULER of France! while yet the savage bands
Belay their course to England's envied lands;
Ere Rapine spreads her baleful wing, to sweep
The path of robbers o'er the circling deep;—
Pause yet awhile, and listen to the wave
That hawls expectant o'er Invasions grave:
And look where Freedom in the tempest's hour,
Smiles at thy malice, and defies thy power!
Those only hear if the Realm thy menaces raise,
The Slave's false tribute to a Monster's praise,
Those only see it, in fancy's sanguine dream,
Thy legions triumph, and thy standards gleam.
I hear the Death-long, and the spirit cry,
"Ambition troubled! for those hour is nigh!"
I see thy laurels fade, thy glory mourn,
Thy legions vanquish'd, and thy Standards torn:
And hear instead of Conquest's echoing cry,
The last cold shiver, and the pealed sigh!
Then conquer Britons—boldly the blood that flows
In each brave breast, to every patriot glows—
True from your fires, to circling warmth imparts
The pulse of freedom panting in our hearts;
And by those Suns, whose unswerving spirit still Watch from their orbs, the more thy approach to ill—
These guard us chains shall never dare to see
Their lines degenerate, how the neck to thee!
No!—nor when wand'ring in the lonely hour,
Indignant prayers the lowest freedom pour—
They see those fetters, whose steel as ice are dear,
They mark 'mid rosing mail the vengeful spear:
They see their fathers in the shadowy sky,
And swear by them to conquer or to die!
The tides of slaughter on Domingo's shore,
That dy'd to sang their burning beds in gore;
Where carnage, grained in the reeking plain,
Sat like a Moloch-God on heaps of slain;
Teach their low vain thy hostile power must be,
To curb the spirit fighting to be free!
Too certain! the spoiler's work of blood is done,
And worm on Haya lauches a brighter sun;
While Freedom's fire, thrill'd lightly o'er the deep,
Wakes the dorn spirit of revenge to sleep!
The dread that o'er thy couch of anguish hung,
To hear the death-groan upon thy tongue—
Joy'd as thy spirit wing'd its parting flight,
And law those eye-balls fixless with delight;
That head on Haya counts as idle slave,
His hell-born trophies wither in the grave!
Think'st thou vain Tyrant! that my country boasts
No equal warriors to thy vaunted hosts?
Or does thy pride, presumptuous! bid thee fear
No stroke of ruin in BRITANNIA's spear?
Camp with thy thousands—come, thy millions bring,
Those'll find us rallied round our aged King;
Those'll find too late, one thought in England ripe—
SLAVERY is DEATH, and LIBERTY is LIFE!
Pause then, Invader! whilst thou can'st remain
Dolphic Ruler at a servile train;
Stem nip there, amid the cold of night,
Ah seeds that than both honor and the light!
There let Ambition's altar stream with blood,
And patriots fall to swell the gusty flood;
But tempt not Britain, for destruction there,
Awaits to give thy triumphs to despair!
Her guardian Lion rouses to the war,
His roar indignant echoes from afar;
Stern vengeance flashes from his angry eyes,
Like Heaven's dread lightning, as to fight he flies.
And then, when French'd was a foreign land,
Power's bloody keeper quits thy feeble hand;
When Death's cold grasps shall dim thy ecstatic eye,
And Mercy hail thy spirit from her sky;
No mourning friends around thy trophy'd tomb,
Shall bid fresh offerings to thy memory bloom;
But frowning spectres on their clouds shall roll,
And curses be the requiem to thy soul!
While we, who fighting in a nobler cause,
Demand our Country, Liberty and Laws,
Shall first in death our Island-mother's swell,
At confidence whispers we have acted well—
Virtue will mourn where freedom's warriors sleep,
And beauty wander on their tombs to weep;
While the firm pride of every heart shall be,
Our COUNTRY IS, and ever WILL BE FREE!

TO FARMERS.

"A POUND of Turnip seed sown, after harvest, upon an acre of light sandy, or gravelly land, that is poor or worn out by over ploughing, and where manure is wanting (the crop of which being ploughed in, when grown high) will, in two months time, die away and rot, and enrich the land, so as to prove as good a manuring as twenty loads of dung, or more, upon an acre."

A GOOD JOKE.

IN good King Charles's jovial days, when the most extravagant wit, had, like the loyalty of the time, no harm in it, it is recorded, that when a gentleman drank a lady's health as a toast, by doing her still more honor, he frequently threw some part of his dress into the flames. In this proof of veneration to the ladies, his companions were obliged to follow him, by consuming the same article, whatever it might be. One of the friends of Sir Charles Sedley, after dinner at a tavern, perceiving he had a very rich lace cravat on, when he named the lady to whom honor was due, made a sacrifice of his cravat, and Sir Charles and the rest of the company were all obliged to follow his example. Sir Charles bore his loss with great composure, observing that it was a good joke, but that he would have as good a frolic some other time. On a subsequent day the same party being assembled, when Sedley had drank a bumper to the health of some beauty of the day, he called the waiter, and ordering a tooth drawn into the room, whom he had previously stationed for the purpose, made him draw a tooth, which had long plagued him. The rules of good fellowship clearly required that every one of the company should loose a tooth also; but they hoped he would not be so unmerciful as rigidly to enforce the law.—All their remonstrances however were vain, and each of his companions successively, nolta gement, was obliged to put himself into the hands of the operator.

Dissolution of Partnership.

THE Public are hereby respectfully informed, that the Partnership between the Subscribers under the firm of SCHOFIELD & MOSLEY, will be dissolved on the 1st day of December 1804, by mutual consent.—Therefore all persons indebted to the said firm, are requested to make immediate payment, and all those having demands against it are desired to come forward for payment.

The business in future will be conducted by Thomas Mosley in the same Store, and in the same manner as heretofore, where he hopes to merit a continuation of those favors so amply received by SCHOFIELD & MOSLEY.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER,
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith:—

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Councellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to the Provincial Parliament at our Town of York, on the seventeenth day of September, to be commenced, held, called and dieted, and to every of you—

GREETING:

WHereas by our Proclamation bearing date the third day of August last, We thought fit by and with the advice of our Executive Council to prorogue our said Provincial Parliament until the seventeenth day of this present month of September, at which time in our Town of York you were held and constituted to appear, but we taking into our Royal consideration, the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice and consent of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you and each of you that on the Twenty-fifth day of October next ensuing you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our said Province of Upper Canada, and there to do as may seem necessary. Herein fail not.

IN Testimony whereof, WE have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto Affixed.—Witness Our Trusty and Well-Beloved PETER HUNTER Esquire, Our Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Lieutenant General Commanding Our Forces in Our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at YORK, this Thirteenth day of September, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Four, and in the Forty-fourth Year of Our Reign.

WM. JARVIS, Secretary.

UPPER CANADA.

NOTICE is hereby given that the Commissioners for the Home District, appointed by a certain Statute of the Provincial Legislature, passed during the Session of the present year, intituled, "An Act for granting to His "Majesty a certain sum of Money out of the Funds "applicable to the uses of this Province to defray "the expences of amending and repairing the Public "Highways and Roads, laying out and opening new "Roads and building Bridges in the several Districts "thereof," are ready to receive Proposals from any Person or Persons disposed to contract for the opening and repairing the Road and building Bridges between the Town of York and the head of BURLINGTON BAY.

Such Proposals must state at what prices the Party desires of undertaking the aforesaid work, will engage to finish and complete the same, and must consist of the following particulars, to wit:

At what Price per Mile such Person will open and clear out such part of the Road leading from Lot Street, adjoining the Town of York (beginning at Peter Street) to the Mouth of the Humber, of the width of 33 feet, as shall not be found to stand in need of any causeway.

With the price also per Rod at which such Party will engage to open, clear out, and causeway such other part of the same Road as shall require to be causewayed, and the last mentioned price to include as well the opening and clearing out as the causewaying such Road. The causeway to be 18 feet wide; the rate of price at which any Person will engage to build Bridges upon the said Road of the width of eighteen feet.

And the said Commissioners will also receive Proposals from any Person or Persons willing to engage to cut down the three Hills at the following Places, viz. one at the Sixteen Mile Creek, another between the Sixteen and Twelve Mile Creek, and the third at the Twelve Mile Creek.

And also for repairing in a good and substantial manner, the Bridges at the Twelve Mile Creek and Burlington Bay.

All the before mentioned Work to be completed in a good and substantial manner on or before the last day of October next, and when completed, the Money contracted to be given, will be paid by the Receiver General.

But each party entering into an Engagement for any part of the aforesaid work, will be required to produce two sufficient Sureties, to be bound for the performance of the Contract.

The particulars to be delivered in to WILLIAM ALLAN or DUNCAN CAMERON Esquires, of York, or to JAMES RUGGLES or WILLIAM GRAHAM Esquires, of Yonge Street, or to WILLIAM APPLEGARTH Esquire, of Flamborough East, all of whom are Commissioners named for carrying the aforesaid Act into execution.

YORK, 18th July, 1804.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER Esquire,
Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

WHEREAS by a certain Act of the Legislature of this Province, passed in the forty-fourth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act for granting to His "Majesty, a certain sum of money for "the further encouragement of the "growth and cultivation of Hemp "within this Province, and the ex- "portation thereof," it is enacted, That from and out of any fund or funds now remaining, or which may hereafter come, into the hands of the Receiver General, arising from and out of the rates and duties already raised, levied and collected, or which hereafter may be raised, levied and collected to and for the uses of this Province, there be granted to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, the sum of one thousand pounds, to be disposed of, appropriated and laid out as a public stock or capital, applicable to the purpose of purchasing Hemp the growth of this Province, and of discharging the expences incident to such purchases, and the expentation and sale thereof, in such manner, and under such regulations, as to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council thereof, should from time to time seem meet; And that it should and may be lawful to and for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, to issue one or more Proclamation or Proclamations, and therein to name such and so many persons within the Province as to him shall seem meet, as Commissioners for the purchasing of Merchantable Hemp the growth of this Province, which said Commissioners, or any one or more of them, are and is thereby authorized and empowered to purchase such Hemp at and after the price or rate of forty pounds per ton: AND WHEREAS it is further enacted by the said Act, that after the passing of that Act, no person or persons whatsoever, shall be intitled to any further Bounty over and beyond the said price or sum of forty pounds per ton, or to any Premium under any Proclamation or Proclamations, heretofore issued by the Lieutenant Governor,—for the encouragement of the growth and exportation of Hemp, for or in respect of any Hemp for which the said sum of forty pounds per ton shall be paid under the powers thereby given; Nor shall any Bounty or Premium be paid or payable for or in respect of any Hemp not intended for sale to some one of the Commissioners [illegible] in virtue of the powers thereby given, which hall not be claimed on or before the thirtieth day of September next, under proper and fufficient Documents, to be on or before that day, preſented to the perſon or perſons duly empowered or authorized to allow or pay the ſame: Provided that before the ſaid Commiſſioners to be appointed in virtue of that Act, or any of them, ſhall under the authority thereby given, purchaſe any Hemp from any perſon or perſons whomſoever, ſuch Commiſſioners and each of them are, and is thereby authorized and required, to adminiſter to ſuch perſon or perſons offering any ſuch Hemp for ſale, an Oath in the ſaid Act particularly ſet forth, whereby ſuch perſon or perſons, is or are to ſwear that the Hemp which he, ſhe or they had that day offered for ſale to the Commiſſioner appointed by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor for the purchaſe of Hemp, and every part thereof, was raiſed within the Province of Upper Canada by him or them, or by ſome other perſon or perſons (to be named in ſuch oath) and that no Bounty or Premium had been paid or claimed for any part of ſuch Hemp, by any perſon or perſons whomſoever, ſave and except what was included in the ſum or price for which he, ſhe or they had offered to ſell ſuch Hemp to the ſaid Commiſſioner.

—Now know all whom it may concern, that I PETER HUNTER Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of the ſaid Province of Upper Canada, well knowing the fidelity, diligence and ability of the Honorable James Baby of Sandwich, the Honorable Richard Cartwright of Kingſton, the Honorable Robert Hamilton of Queenſtown, all Members of the Legiſlative Council of this Province, and William Allan of York in the Home Diſtrict Eſquire, do, by virtue of the power ſo veſted in me as aforeſaid, by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council of this Province, nominate, conſtitute and appoint the ſaid James Baby, Richard Cartwright, Robert Hamilton, and William Allan, to be Commiſſioners for the purchaſing of merchantable Hemp, the growth of the ſaid Province, at and after the price or rate of Forty Pounds Halifax Currency per Ton, which ſaid ſum of Forty Pounds is to be paid by the ſaid Commiſſioners reſpectively, to the party or parties ſelling ſuch Hemp, in Money only, according to the rules, regulations, limitations and reſtrictions in the ſaid in part above recited Act expreſſed and contained, with full power and authority, to do and perform all and each of the matters and things in the ſaid Act authorized or required by them the ſaid Commiſſioners to be done and performed.

Given under my Hand, and Seal at Arms, at York, this Twenty-Third Day of March, in the year of our Lord one thouſand eight hundred and four, and in the forty-fourth year of His Majeſty's Reign.

P. HUNTER, Lt. Gour.

By His Excellency's Command,

Wm. JARVIS, Secy.

MISCELLANY.

"For lo! the winter is paſt, the rain is over and gone, the flowers appear on the earth, the time of the ſinging of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in the land."

MEN, who have witneſſed the horrors of the tempeſtuous and deformed ſeaſon, which, by its cold, contracts the body, and by its gloom, depreſſes the mind, naturally feel, at the firſt glimpſe of warmth and vegetation, an undeſcribable rapture. Even in the mild climates of the eaſt, in the ſunny gardens of Paleſtine, the flight, the ſhort, and fleeting winter was conſidered an enemy to joy; and Solomon congratulates the arrival of Spring, in a ſtrain of uncommon gaiety. In a tone, ſoft as the ſeaſon, and animated as its pleaſures, he exhorts his 'fair one' to 'riſe,' to 'come away,' and, in the open fields, to hear the wild muſic of nature, and to obſerve her green and tender tribes, burſting from the ſepulchre of cold. This invitation is enforced by a moſt lively deſcription of the landſcape; and the appropriate metaphors, Solomon employs, ſeem inſpired by the very genius of the ſeaſon, and the liquid, and harmonious words he ſelects, are reſponſive to the turtle's notes.

If a native of Jeruſalem could be thus elated, at the ſucceſſion of ſpring, after the mildeſt reign of winter, what muſt be the delight of him, who, under our northern ſkies, beholds, for more than half the year, a waſte of ſnows, hears the midnight howl of the ſtorm, and feels the nitrous needles of a frigid atmoſphere, lacerating every pore?

But ſuppoſitions are ſuperfluous. We need only look at the door of the cottage, or ſtray into the neareſt paſture, to diſcern the operation of ſpring upon the hopes of the huſbandman. Tired of the dull and ſullen company of the auſtere months, and diſguſted with the chimney corner, which denies room and exerciſe to his plough, at the whiſtle of the firſt robin, he flies like 'the roe,' or the young hart of Bether, to furrows and fields. The genial ſun burniſhes his manly cheek, the ſoft and voluptuous air, vivifies his ſturdy limbs, he ſurveys the riſing blade, and anticipates the golden harveſt.

But though Nature, in her various exhibitions of verdure and of flowers, and by her chorus of ſinging birds, ſeems, at firſt view, to have no other object, than to amuſe our ſpecies, as a painter or muſician, yet, on reflection, we ſhall find her both a provident matron, in preparing our nutriment, and a uſeful monitor, urging us to toil. As I am entirely of opinion with that ancient, and, with that poet, who ſaw his duty inſcribed on every leaf, and found a tongue in trees, and books in the running brooks, I think it would not be unprofitable for every man, who looks abroad, to remark that every department, both in the animal and vegetable kingdom, is in action. Thoſe counſels tribes, which, during winter, were laſt locked in the chambers of froſt, are now each moment on the wing, and inceſſantly employed. No pauſe can be diſcerned in Nature's preſent operations, every energy is awake, and even inert matter increaſing. It ſeems, to me, impoſſible that an idler ſhould rove in our mountains, and not be leſſoned into induſtry. In January, when green corn could not wave, and the violet of our vallies was folded, he might argue himſelf into a belief, that, to him, a ſuſpenſion of native powers was alike neceſſary. But in May, there is a million incentives to exertion, and not one reaſonable excuſe for ſupineneſs. Man was deſtined to activity, like the other parts of our ſyſtem, and they call on him to lend a helping hand to their labours. The moſt minute drop of ſap, riſing in its tube, and the embryo germ, burſting from bark, to a contemplative liſtener, appear to ſpeak and upbraid the ſlothful man for not being in uſeful motion like themſelves.

The parallel has been ſo often run between the ſpring time of the year, and the ſpring time of life, that all remarks and doctrines, upon this reſemblance, muſt be of courſe trite and elementary. But, though the theme is by no means novel to my younger readers, I with them to permit me, for once, to forego all attempts at originality, and to add a hundredth remark to the ninety-nine of my predeceſſors. They will gratify the Lay Preacher, if amid their rapid career of thoughtleſſneſs and pleaſure, they will ſtop to make ſome proviſion for the dreary ſeaſon of old age, which will inevitably find, that ſtores of ſome kind are neceſſary. They will, I hope, ſow the ſeeds of wiſdom ſeaſonably, and not, like the fool of Lord Bolingbroke, plant in autumn, and expect to reap in winter.

The following article will operate as a tonic to the drooping mind. "If it were neceſſary to find any new inſtance in ſupport of the precept, that man ſhould never deſpair, the hiſtory of Barthelemy would afford it. After living to the age of forty, amidſt all the conveniencies and luxuries requiſite to one born and educated in the firſt claſs of gentlemen; after a reſidence at the court of London, firſt as Secretary and then as Charge des Affaires for the King of France, he negociated at Baſle the peace with Pruſſia, and was then elevated (if elevation it can be called) to a place in the Directory of the French republic. Amidſt the pomp of this unhappy greatneſs, this miſerable grandeur, he was ſeized on the 4th of September, 1797, by order of his colleagues and others, and on the 8th, was placed in an iron cage on a carriage ſomething reſembling a gun carriage, and was thus removed, with ſeveral other perſons, in ſeventeen days, to Rochefort, paſſing the night in the worſt dungeons of the towns in which they ſtopped.

"The next day, they were forced into the hold of a ſmall veſſel, and, when thirty-ſix hours had elapſed ſince they had eaten or drank, a pail of water was let down amongſt them, accompanied with two of the crew's loaves. Barthelemy, with 3 others, were afterwards placed in a mere dungeon of this hold, infected with exhalations without a hammock to lay their heads upon, though unable to keep themſelves upright. Their food, during a whole voyage, which carried them across the Atlantic, was refuſe biſcuit, with boiled gourganes, or beans, without ſeaſoning, and in ſuch inſufficient quantities, that, at times, when they were not affected with ſickneſs, they felt the moſt excruciating torments from hunger. One of his companions, the unfortunate Deſſonville, uttered ſuch cries of rage, that, ſays Ramel, "we were afraid he would bite us."

"On their arrival at Cayenne, Barthelemy, and his companions were confined in a priſon in the dungeon of Sinamary, each having a hammock to himſelf, but neither table, chair, or any piece of furniture, or utenſil. Their food was prepared by a cook, taken from the houſe of correction, who twenty times threatned to poiſon them, and their bread was often too full of worms and ants to be eaten. Their dens were over-run with ſcorpions, millepedes, rats, muſquitoes, and many other ſpecies of inſects and reptiles, not excepting ſerpents. They were tormented alſo with a ſpecies of bug, called Chicha, which enters the pores of the ſkin, and if not carefully removed, breed there, and deſtroyes the fleſh ſo rapidly, as to render amputation neceſſary. Their whole proſpect, even from the ramparts of the fort, was "a vaſt and impenetrable foreſt. The mournful howlings of tygers, that came within muſket ſhot of the fort, the ſhrill and piercing ſcreams of monkies, the diſcordant notes of parrots and the croaking of venemous toads, of which the foſſes and muddy banks of the river were full, rendered this ſcene a wilderneſs of horror." Here died the brave General Murinais, one of his companions, a man of the moſt accompliſhed character, and of a large fortune, all ſacrificed in a Revolution, which he himſelf had promoted, in its firſt ſtages. Here "Barthelemy, though ſo ſickly, and ſo aging, that even his exiſtence, was a miracle, in the continuance of which he had himſelf believed as little as his proſcribers, poſſeſſed an internal principle of life and a ſtrength of mind, which the calmneſs of his external appearance would ſcarcely have given room to ſuſpect; but which ſhewed itſelf with energy on every occaſion."

In this priſon Francon de Coudray and Laſond, two of the 'deported, were poiſoned. Theſe two victims lay in the ſame room in their hammocks, which were their death-beds, oppoſite to each other. "The cries, their tortures forced from them, re-echoed to our rooms and far beyond them. Nothing could appeaſe their fatal vomiting. Laſond cried out with vehemence; he raiſed his hand towards heaven, and called aloud upon his wife and children.—Their torments continued twenty-five days, at the end of which they expired," and when the others complained to Aime, the commander, who, before the revolution, had been a footman, he told them "they ought to know they were not ſent to Synamary to live to eternity."

The preceding circumſtances are collected from the narrative publiſhed by General Ramel, who was tranſported at the ſame time with Barthelemy, and who with him effected an eſcape, of which an account was publiſhed ſome years ſince. It is ſufficient to the purpoſe of this article to add, that on the 20th of September, 1798, one year from the commencement of this ſeries of ſufferings, Barthelemy entered the Britiſh Channel; that he was protected for ſome time in England; and that after being reſtored to his native country, he is now in one of the beſt ſituations, which it affords, and may thank GOD, that his "principle of life and his ſtrength of mind" never was ſubdued by deſpair.

SYMPATHY BETWEEN THE BREECHES POCKET AND THE ANIMAL SPIRITS.

The following important diſcovery is recommended to the literati in general, but more particularly to the College of Phyſicians: as it may be of the greateſt conſequence to them in their future practice.

You muſt know, then, that a wonderful connection and ſympathy has lately been obſerved between the breeches pocket and the animal ſpirits, which continually riſe or fall as the contents of the former ebb or flow; inſomuch, that, from conſtant obſervation, I could venture to gueſs at a man's current caſh by the degree of vivacity he has diſcovered in his converſation. When his cutaneous reſervoir is flush, the ſpirit too are elate; when that is ſunk and drained, how flat, dull, and inſipid, is every word and action! The very muſcles and features of the face are influenced by this obſcure fund of life and vigour. The heart proves to be only the inert receptacle of the blood, and thoſe groſſer ſpirits which ſerve for the animal function! but the pocket is fraught with thoſe finer and more ſublime ſpirits which conſtitute the wit, and many other diſtinguiſhing characters.

I can tell how a poet's finances ſtand by the very ſubject of his muſe; gloomy elegies, biting ſatires, grave ſoliloquies, and dull tranſlations, are certain indications of the res angusta; as Pindaric odes and pointed epigrams intimate a freſh recruit.—So a grave politician, who frequented a noted coffee houſe, when theſe pocket qualms were on him, uſed to give the moſt melancholy and deplorable account of the ſtate of the nation: the increaſe of taxes, ſhute of the public revenue, the national debt, the decay of trade, and the exceſs of luxury, were the continual topics of his diſcourſe: but when the cold fit of his intermitting diſorder left him, the ſcene was quite altered, and then he was eternally harangu-ing on the power, grandeur, and wealth of the Britiſh nation. In ſhort, this barometer of ſtate always roſe or fell, not as the quick, but current ſilver, contracted or expanded itſelf within its ſecret cell.

Under the influence of the ſame powerful charm, I have remarked a phyſician in the chamber of a wealthy patient, clear up his countenance, and write his recipe with infinite vivacity and good humour; but in the abode of poverty; what a cloud-ed brow, hopeleſs vibration of the head, and languor of the nerves! Like the ſenſitive plant, he ſhrunk from the cold hand of neceſſity. Not that the doctor wanted humanity; but when a patient becomes a mere caput mortuum; and the anima faculi expires, what ſympathizing heart but muſt be ſenſible of ſo dire a change?

It is impoſſible to record a tenth part of the wonderful effect this latent ſource of life and ſpirits has produced on the animal economy. What ſmiles of complacency and cringing adulation to my Lord Bloodrich, who no ſooner turns his back than contempt and deriſion overtakes him! What can this be owing to but the ſecret influence of the divinity, which threw a ſort of awe and veneration about him? What but this magic power could have transformed Ned Traffic into a gentleman, Juſtice Alpaunch into a wit, or Squire Jolter into a man of taſte? What but this could have given poignancy to the moſt inſipid jokes, and weight to the moſt ſuperficial arguments of Alderman Heavyſide? It is this, that with more than tutelary power protects its votaries from inſults & oppreſſions; that ſilences the enraged accuſer. Towns & cities, like Jerico, without any miracle, have fallen flat before it; it has ſtopped the mouths of cannons, and, more ſurpriſing ſtill, of faction and ſlander.

It has made youth and beauty fly into the arms of old age and impotence; given charms to deformity and deteſtation; transformed Hymen into Mammon, and the God of Love into a Satyr. It has built bridges without foundations, libraries without books, hoſpitals without endowments, and churches without benefices.—In ſhort, there is nothing wonderful it has not effected, except making us wiſe, virtuous, and happy.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

PUBLICANS DANCES.

ARCHER V. WELLINGRACE.

This was a qui tam action brough by the plaintiff, who is a common Informer, to recover the penalty of 100l. from the defendant, who is a publican, for having public dances in his house, without a licence from four magistrates, as the act of the 25th of George II. requires.

Mr. Park on behalf of the plaintiff, faid, he could not point out in more forcible language the evils arising from thofe tumultuous receptacles of perfons of all defcriptions, than by reading the preamble of the act, upon which the prefent penalty was fued for. This preamble ftated every kind of immorality and vice as likely to proceed from the temptation fuch houfes held out to the lower claffes to run into expenses they could not afford, and into irregularities that would lead them to ruin.

A great number of witneffes, fummoned on the part of the plaintiff, proved that the defendant was proprietor of the public houfe, called the Coach and Horfes, in Holborn, oppofite the George and Blue Boar; that there were danc'. there every Monday and Friday, when any gentleman could obtain admiffion with a lady, on paying eighteen pence; the money was generally paid to one Clerk, who was door keeper and fiddler. The defendant, who was the landlord, only interfered in felling liquor and refreshments.

The witneffes, who were perfons, that had frequented the houfe for the purpofe of dancing, all agreed that every thing was conducted there with the greateft regularity and decorum, and without any difturbance; but they differed moft materially in this point; the male witneffes all infifted that moft of the women, who frequented the houfe, were immodeft, and that there was but little decency among them. The female witneffes, on the other hand, infifted that they were very modeft and very decent.

Mr. Garrow, on the part of the defendant, endeavoured to fhew that Clerk was a dancing maffer, and that this room was his fchool, but in this attempt he did not fucceed.

Lord Ellenborough told the jury that the fact being clearly proved, that the defendant had, without fuch licence as required by law, eftablifhed public dances in his houfe, he as judge, and they as jurymen were but inftruments of the law, and bound by the law to declare that he had forfeited the penalty, named in the act of parliament, on which this action was brought.—Verdict for the plaintiff.—Damages 10l.

EPIGRAM.

Colonel Purbick O'Blarney, as honeft a rogue,
As ever took fnuff to repel peft or plague,
Having bought a French fnuff-box of papier machee,
Which to open required much pains do you fee!
Always kept a bank fixpence at hand in his pocket,
And call'd it his key, by the which to unlock it,
For by nagging and wedging it under the lid,
He came at his rapper, which was under it hid;
But one day, when he wanted a pinch for a friend,
He fearch'd for his rather but all to no end,
Till at laft 'twixt the pocket and lining he found it,
When in rage he cried "arrah the devil confound it,
"I'll engage you don't ferve me that fame trick again,
"For to make me after thus hunting in vain,"
So, opening the box by the help of the rizzy,
And cramming his nofe till his noddle was dizzy,
He church'd in the coin, and exclaim'd with a fhrug,
While right went the rim down, "fo there you lie fnug,"
And, my hide and feek friend, I beg leave to remind ye
That the next time I want you... I know where to find ye.

YORK, 18th July, 1804.

LONDON, July 16.

The ſtarting ſubject of Invaſion.

We are aſſured, that Gen. Augereau had, on the 23d ult. two long conferences with Bonaparte, previous to his departure for Breſt. At the laſt, Talleyrand, Berthier, and a few Senators and Miniſters of State, moſt in the confidence of the Corſican, were preſent. Augereau is ſaid to have pledged himſelf for the ſucceſs of the landing in this country, provided the plan which he has himſelf projected for effecting the enterprize be adopted without any change or alteration, and Bonaparte is ſtated to have acquieſced in the condition.

We are again threatened with the ſpeedy ſailing of the Breſt fleet, which is ſtated to be completely ready for ſea. The troops in that quarter, deſtined to embark, are ordered to hold themſelves in readineſs; and the Commander in Chief, Augereau, was thoſe days expected from Paris.

Some military movements which have been ſuddenly ordered by Government corroborate the ſtatement we gave yeſterday, that a ſerious attempt is expected to be made immediately by the enemy.—Mr. Addington in the Houſe of Commons laſt night, ſeemed to conſider the peril as impending.

Government ſeems fully impreſſed with the opinion, that the moment draws near when the enemy will hazard the experiment of invaſion. The greateſt activity prevails throughout the country in all our principal points of defence, and troops are in conſtant motion. The brigade of Guards at Colcheſter, and in that quarter, paſſed this morning to paſs the Thames at Graveſend, and we underſtand that an encampment of 20,000 men will be immediately formed at Coxheath, in order to be ready to defend the ſouthern coaſt, or to embark for Ireland, as the exigency of affairs may require.

July 17.

The ſkirmiſhing between the Boulogne flotilla and our cruiſing ſquadron off that port, appears to be almoſt inceſſant. The firing which commenced on Friday has at various intervals been renewed, and yeſterday it was heard at Deal, with an effect that indicated a wider and more ſerious engagement.—Whatever may be the real intentions of the enemy, their boldneſs and ſelf-confidence ſeem at leaſt to increaſe in proportion, perhaps as they feel that they improve in naval ſkill and dexterity, from being thus daily diſciplined to every ſpecies of manœuvre and attack. We are happy to obſerve, that vigilance and exertion on our part are not relaxed, either from contempt of the enemy's inferiority in naval ſkill or force, or from any conviction ariſing from the idea that their reſtleſs ſpirit of enterpriſe, or the more reſtleſs and enterprizing ambition of the upſtart Emperor, may not ſoon prompt them to make the deſperate attempt of invading us. We therefore obſerve with ſatisfaction, that the utmoſt alertneſs and activity prevail along our coaſts, that on the ſlighteſt hoſtile indication, ſignals are immediately made for preparation, and that fuch, under thefe menacing appearances, has been the prudent precaution of Gen. Moor, that on Friday and Saturday he kept the greater part of his troops under arms during the whole night.—Indeed we perfectly agree with Sir W. Pulteney in the few obfervations which he made in laft night's debate on the fubject of the national defence, that the country fhould be continually kept alive to a fenfe of the danger that threatens it:—It is a fpecies of danger with which the public mind fhould allow itfelf to become familiar—it fhould daily excite the fame vividnefs of impreffion as it muft naturally have done on the firft manifeftation of this defperate intention of the enemy. Indeed the minifter himfelf did not hefitate to confefs that he looked upon the danger to be as great and imminent as ever, and that fuch was the perfuafion of his Majefty's Government might eafily be gathered from the meffage previous to the late vote of credit, which declared the expediency of providing for fuch emergencies as may arife, and of taking all fuch meafures as may be neceffary to difappoint and defeat any enterprize or defign of the enemy. Our determination to meet this attack "fingle handed" fhould every day become more fortified, as the hopes of all continental affiftance and co-operation become daily more faint, animated by the proud expectation, that as the difficulty and danger fhall be all our own, fo alfo fhall the glory of our victory.

Difpatches were yefterday received at the Admiralty from Lord Nelfon, which give a very different account of the recent affair before Toulon, to that published by the Commander of the enemy's fleet.

Camp equipage for 15,000 men, it was yefterday reported was about to be fhipped in the river.

July 18.

We have received fome further advices from the coaft, by which we find that the firing in the direction of Boulogne was renewed on Monday morning at an early hour, and continued almoft inceffantly during the whole of the day. By the help of telefcopes, upwards of two hundred of the enemy's veffels were obferved to come out of the harbour, but not beyond the protection of their batteries, while fourteen fail of our fhips of war were feen about four miles from the fhore, rather to the weftward of Boulogne, not having fufficient wind to act, it being calm all day. A convoy of the enemy's craft, confifting of twelve fail of brigs and luggers, went along fhore from Calais to Boulogne, fuppofed to be laden with ftores, and the firing for the moft part proceeded from the batteries protecting them from a few of our cruizers. About a o'clock they reached their deftination, the oppofing veffels not being able to go fufficiently clofe in fhore to intercept them. The enemy's flotilla is now regularly formed in divifions, and were in motion the whole of Monday, practifing a variety of manoeuvres. Our troops on the coaft are conftantly on the alert, and every neceffary precaution is taken to guard againft furprife. Happily the country is now duly aroufed to a fenfe of the danger in which it is menaced; and it is only for Britons to be apprized of the true nature of their fituation, to defeat any attack that may be directed againft their fecurity, their independence, and their happinefs. To danger they will ever oppofe an unfhaken intrepidity, and as freemen, have a proud inheritance to tranfmit to their poftenity, they will prefer glorious death to the degrading bondage of Corfican defpotifm.

By the Dublin mail of the 13th inft. we learn, that the Irifh Government are making the moft active preparations for the prefervation on tranquility. A corps of twelve thoufand men is immediately to be formed on the Curragh of Kildare, and in every direction the troops are kept conftantly on the alert. On the night of the 11th, twenty men were enrolled in the Liberty. They were brought to the Caftle on the following day, and after a fhort examination committed to the county gaol. It is faid, that they are United Iriffmen, and were found fitting as a committee of the Traitorous Affociation; but other accounts ftate them to be merely a committee of journeymen engaged in combination againft their employers. We fincerely hope, that the latter ftatement may prove correct. The Dublin papers mention, that feveral rebellory lawyers had been apprehended, who were fuppofed to have been engaged in much more ferious bufinefs than that of confpiring to raife their wages.

The proteft of Louis XVIII. as inferted in the Moniteur is faid to be a fabrication.

Extract of a letter from Paris, July 5.

The Emperor has decreed new uniforms for the failors compofing the crews of our fleets and flotillas. They are in future to be drefled in blue jackets, in the manner and of the cut of thofe of dragoons; red waiftcoats, with gilt buttons; blue cloth pantaloons for Europe, but blue nankeen for the Eaft and Weft Indies. They are to wear red ftockings of wool in Europe, but of cotton in the other parts of the world. Their fhoes are to be pointed, with round buckles; and their hair to be cropped, without powder. They are to change their fhirts three times in the week, and each failor is to have three fhirts, one white and two coarfe ones. When on fhore, they are to wear fmall cocked hats; but when on board, except the forecaftlemen, the other may wear round hats. Their night caps are to be red, and waffled once in the week. Their neck cloths are to be, for full dreis, of black filk, but otherwife, of cotton, dyed black. Each man is to have two night caps and two neck cloths. Befides a boarding axe, each failor is to be armed with one fhort fword, a dagger and two piftols, fmall enough to be placed in the pockets of their trowfers. Each man is allowed two pipes in the week, and half a pound of tobacco for chewing; and a quarter of a pound for fmoaking, if the commanders think the latter may be permitted without danger. When at anchor, they are to bathe morning and night for half an hour each time; when at fea, they are to wafh their bodies all over twice a week. They are to comb out their hair three times in the week, and to be fhaved once every four days. When in Europe, they are, for exercife, to dance an hour every Sunday; but, when in warm climates, for half an hour every fecond day. They are to avoid fcorbutive complaints, to wafh their mantles twice in the week with vinegar, and once every day with freth water.—Journal de Paris.

Late advices from the Continent.

LONDON, Auguft 7—12.

The Brest Fleet.

The difpatches received yefterday at the Admiralty from Sir Charles Cotton, ftate, that Gantheaume's fquadron was difcovered on the 3d inft at anchor in Camaret Bay, where we underftand the French fhips are protected by fuch formiable batteries, that any attack on them in their actual pofition would be unavailing. Were it not for the vigilant look out which the Fox cutter kept and the continued firing of fignals, Gantheaume would probably have effected his efcape. His fquadron is now found to conffit of nine fail of the line and three frigates, Every fhip which can be fpared will be fent off with all poffible difpatch to reinforce the Grand Fleet, as the late fortie muft neceffarily divide the attention of our veffels, and call for increafed ftrength and exertion.

Notwithftanding we are affured that the fubftance of the difpatches received from Sir Charles Cotton, is fuch as we have ftated, our Plymouth letter of this morning fays, that a cutter arrived at that port on Sunday, has brought intelligence of Gantheaume's return, the preceding day, to his old ftation, in the outer road of Breft.

Although the name of Gantheaume is more known than that of any French Admiral of the preffent day, he has never diftinguifhed himfelf but by his efcape.—On the very day when he paffed the Gut of Gibraltar, the 8th of February, 1801, in effecting his efcape from Breft. Sir Robert Calder failed in purfuit of him from Torbay.

Admiral Cornwallis failed from Spithead yefterday morning in the Glory, of 98 guns, to refume his command on the Breft ftation. Difpatches, received from the Admiralty, at Portfmouth, in the courfe of the morning, were immediately fent after him in the Roe cutter, which overtook the Glory at St. Catherine's Point, as fhe was ftanding down Channel.

Bombardment of Havre.

Difpatches from Captain Oliver, commanding our blockading fquadron off Havre, were laft night received at the Admiralty. They contained intelligence of the renewal of the bombardment of that town and port laft Friday. The houfes and fhipping are ftated to have been conffiderably damaged. During the bombardment, in the courfe of which a great number of fhells were thrown, a diviffon of the enemy's gun-boats ventured out, for the purpofe of annoying our fquadron; but they were very nearly cut off by the skilful manoeuvres of our veffels, and regained, with much difficulty, the the harbour. The particulars of the attack will, it is expected, appear in the Gazette of this evening.

Arrival of the China Fleet.

Notice was received at Lloyd's yefterday, of the fafe arrival of the Leeward Iffand fleet, as well as of the Lifbon fleet and thus in a very great degree, were the fears of the merchants diffipated for the fafety of the homeward bound trade. At no period in the hiftory of Great Britain were fo many, fo valuable, and fo ill protected fleets, expected to arrive at one time, as during the prefent week. The China fleet, the Newfoundland fleet, the Leeward-Iffand fleet, the Jamaica fleet, and the Baltic fleet, where all hourly expected; while an alarm was given of a French fquadron having eluded the vigilance of our blockade at Breft. The loweft eftimate of the value of the homeward bound trade, was between 16 and 17 millions; the bare duties to government were above four millions. It was of courfe to the merchants and underwriters a moft critical moment; and no language can expreis the fatisfaction which was felt in confequence of this intelligence, not only of the fafe arrival of the China and Leeward Iffand trade, but alfo of the French fquadron being fafely cooped up in Camaret Bay. It fpread univerfal joy through the city. No apprehenfion is now entertained for the Jamaica fleet, as by the very favorable wind which has blown for fome days, they may be expected in the courfe of a day or two.'

We yefterday had the fatisfaction of announcing the long expected arrival of the China fleet—they failed from Canton on the 5th February, without convoy, and on the 15th fell in with Admiral Linois, off Poulo Aulo, who engaged them for half an hour and then fheered off.

Britifh Skill and Bravery

Aug. 9—An official account of the engagement, between Admiral Linois' fquadron and the China fleet of merchantmen, is this morning publifhed from the Eaft India Houfe. It is contained in a letter from the company's fhip Earl Camden, of which the following is an extract. "On the 14th Feb. at day break, we faw Poulo Aulo bearing W. S. W. and at 8 o'clock A. M. a fignal was made from one of the fleet, for feeing four ftrange fail in the S. W. Four veffels were immediately fent to examine, and very foon reported by fignal that they were an enemy's fquadron, conffiting of a line of battle fhip, three frigates, and one brig. At four P. M. the look out fhips were recalled, and a line of battle formed in clofe order. As foon as the enemy could fetch in our wake, they put about: we kept on our courfe under an eafy fail; at near funfet they were clofe up with our rear, and I was in momentary expectation of an attack there, and prepared to fupport them; but at the clofe of the day we perceived them haul to windward, laying to. We lay to in line of battle all night, our men at their quarters: at day break on the 13th, we faw the enemy about three miles to windward laying to. We hoifted our colours, offering him battle if he chofe to come down. The enemy's four fhips hoifted French colours, the line of battle fhip carrying a Rear Admiral's flag; the brig was under Batavian colours. At 9 A. M. finding they would not come down, we formed the order of failing, and fheered our courfe under an eafy fail, the enemy then filled their fails, and edged towards us. At 1 P. M. finding they propofed to attack and endeavour to cut off our rear, I made the fignal to tack and bear down upon him, and engage in fucceffion; the Royal George followed, the Ganges next, and then the Earl Camden. This manoeuvre was correctly preformed and we ffood towards him under a prefs of fail: the enemy then formed in a very clofe line, and opned their fire on the headmoft fhip, which was not returned by us, till we approached him nearer. The Royal George bore the brunt of the action, and got as near the enemy as he would permit him; the Ganges and Earl Camden opened their fire as foon as their guns could have effect; but before any other fhips could get into action, the enemy hauled their wind and ffood away to the eaftward under all the fail they could fet. At 2 P. M. I made the fignal for a general chace, and we purfued them till 4 P. M. when fearing a longer purfuit would carry us too far from the mouth of the Straits, and confidering the immenfe property at ftake, I made the fignal to tack, and at 8 P. M. we anchored in a fituation to proceed for the entrance of the Straits, in the morning. As long as we could diftinguifh the enemy, we perceived him fheering to the eaftward, under a full prefs of fail. The Royal George had one man killed and another wounded, many fhot in her hull, and more in her fails, but few fhot touched either the Camden or the Ganges, and the fire of the enemy feemed to be ill directed, his fhot either falling fhort or paffing over us."

Miscellaneous Paragraphs.

The election for Middlefex county has at length terminated in the election of Mr. Mainwaring, by a majority of five votes. No electioneering conteft, fince the exiffence of the Britifh conffitution, has been conducted with more tumult, or has excited to much of the public attention and intereft.—Could we believe the votes polled for Sir Francis Burdett were all or even the touch part of them given by perfons approving the defigns of his faction, the fcale of the conteft would be an object of deep regret, notwithftanding the return of Mr. Mainwaring; but knowing the apparent ftrength of Sir Francis has been obtained by fraudulent means, we neither defpair of the public fpirit, nor feel difmay at the popular clamour.

Lord Duncan.—It is with deep regret that we announce the death of this gallant officer and truly worthy man.—He expired fuddenly on Saturday laft. He clofed a moft honorable life in his 73d year.

Petersburgh, June 8.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER.

"About the beginning of laft winter, the public attention was much engaged by one of the moft attrocious murders I ever heard of. A whole family was found maffacred in their fleep in the fuburbs of Petersburgh; a man and his wife lay in bed with their heads nearly cut off; an under officer lay ftretched on the floor in the fame ftate, near the door was a boy, about twelve, who, probably, having attempted to efcape, was beheaded, and cruelly mangled; in a cradle was found a child, nearly frozen to death; and upon a table in the room were feen a pack of cards, an empty brandy bottle, and a few pieces of copper.

It was about four days after the murder before this difcovery was made, when his Imperial Majefty attended in perfon, and faw the horrid fpectacle, fhovelled into one mafs of ice; he threatened the police with fevere conffequences if the affaffins were not apprehended in 48 hours; gave 200 roubles for the relief of the infant, and promifed 1000 for the difcovery of the offenders.

By the day following 147 perfons were taken up, among whom was the villain who had been guilty of the crime. It appeared he was a carpenter who had worked in the neighbourhood, and having heard that the people poffeffed a trifle of money, went one evening to beg a lodging, when, after having regaled them with brandy, he took an opportunity, when they were all afleep, to treat them as I have related, robbed the houfe of about 200 roubles, fattened the windows, having fixed a padlock on the door, and walked off unnoticed. I was determined to fee the countenance of a man who could be guilty of fuch deliberate villainy; and retained, however uncomfortable I might feel myfelf, to fee him punifhed. On the Saturday morning following, about 9 o'clock I was informed he was on his way to the place of execution. I overtook the procefffon about a mile on this fide—firft came the police maffer, then a poffe of police officers on horfeback, two and two; four ranks of foot foldiers, 12 deep; behind the laft rank was the murderer; on each fide of him marched a foldier with a drawn fabre; in his right and left, twelve with fixed bayonets.

He was a tall, handfome young man, about 26 years of age, about 6 feet high, drefled in a blue coat, like a blue coat boy; he was accompanied by two others, who were to fuffer for forgery, with the executioners carrying the knouts, tied up in canvafs, and about fix ranks of foot foldiers clofed the rear. I walked by his fide nearly half a mile, and examined his phyfiognomy well.—If Lavater had feen him, I think it would have ffaggered him a little; his countenance was open and honeft, nor had he the leaft appearance of wearing to bad a heart. As I found myfelf overcome by the preffure of the crowd, and the heat of the ffens in which I was wrapped up, and the melancholy preparations before me, I puffed through the rabble, and got into a tavern, where after tolling off two glaffes of brandy, and a crufft of bread, I made the beft of my way to the place of execution: they had entered the ring, which was now furrounded by a very great throng, and I fhould certainly have returned as wife as I came, but for meeting a young officer, whofe brother was prefent with his regiment.—"Do you think," fays he, "you can fupport fuch a fight?"—I told him I had refolved I would—fo taking me by the arm, we puffed thro' the crowd, one rank of horfe, and two of foot, and ffood very near the ffake which was prepared for the murderers; the two others were by my fide.

The ffake was a ffrong hook of wood fixed in the ground, with three grooves at the top, and two rings near the bottom; the middle groove was for the neck, and the two others for the arm pits, the rings below to lock round the ancles. About the flakes were laid coarse skins, especially where the knout master trod, upon which lay his whips, marking irons, pincers, &c. An officer then read a paper for the people, signifying that forgery upon the Imperial Bank, being a capital crime, and two of the prisoners being convicted of it, were condemned to receive 11 blows of the knout, to have their nostrils pulled out, and be banished for life to Siberia; the murderer of so many persons to receive 399 blows, to be branded three times in the face, have his nostrils pulled out, and (if then alive) to be banished for life to the mines of Siberia.

The executioner and his assistants, then stripped them, tied his hands across, and led him to the spot. After fixing his ancles, they bent his neck and arms over it, and drew the rope, with which his hands were tied, through a ring on the opposite side, which seemed to stretch all the muscles of the back; he then retired about four or five yards from him, and taking up one of the knouts, worked it with his hands, to give it a proper elasticity: the blow is then given as I have seen an awkward boy try to smack a whip; he walks to the part with four or five steady steps, then taking a spring, strikes a perpendicular stroke, with a heavy loaded cork. They first cut him from the right side of the bottom of the neck to the left arm pit; the effects was visible in a moment, and by the violence of his screams, I suppose the pain was very great; the second was almost half an inch below the first, and so on till 25, when changing the whip, he crossed the former wounds, striking from the left side to the right, afterwards quite perpendicular; they were given with the greatest regularity, between each, one might deliberately count eight, the executioner always walking to and from the stake.

His cries were now so terrible that I was forced to put my fingers in my ears, and turn my back, wishing to make my way out as fast as possible, but it was not without the greatest difficulty I effected it; having seen him receive 125: I walked several times round the ring on the outside, and notwithstanding the different ejaculations, all were quiet and silent, and the crack of the knout was heard to a great distance. After three hundred his voice grew faint, and during the last hundred he shewed no signs of life whatever; the whole of the upper part of the back being beaten to a black mummy, after the last blow the assistants lifted up the face by the hair, and the executioner struck him forcibly three times with an instrument that left the initial of murderer, throwing each time an handful of black dust into the wound; after which at two pulls, he tore the gristle of his nose, and loosened him from the block. It lasted about three quarters of an hour. Most people thought he had been dead some time; however, he made a feeble attempt to get on his feet, and, as I have heard since, is sufficiently recovered to be able to make some reparation to society by working in the iron mines."

Hair changed through Fright.—It is related of a boy, in one of the rudest parts of the country of Clare, in Ireland, that in order to destroy some eagles lodged in a hole 100 feet from the summit of a rock which rose 400 feet perpendicular from the sea, he caused himself to be suspended by a rope, with a scimitar in his hand for his defence, should he meet with an attack from the old ones, which precaution was found necessary; for no sooner had his companions lowered him to the nest, than one of the old eagles made at him with great fury, at which he struck, but unfortunately missing his aim, nearly cut through the rope that supported him. Describing his horrible situation to his comrades, they cautiously and safely drew him up: when they found that his hair, which a quarter of an hour before was a dark auburn, was changed to grey.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER,
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith, &c.

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Councellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to the Provincial Parliament at our Town of York, on the twenty fifth day of October, to be commenced, held, called and chosen, and to every of you—

GREETING:

WHereas by our Proclamation bearing date the thirteenth day of September last, We thought fit by & with the advice of our Executive Council to prorogue our said Provincial Parliament until the twenty-fifth day of this present month of October, at which time in our Town of York you were held and constrained to appear, but we taking into our Royal consideration, the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice and consent of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you and of each you that on the Third day of December next enfuing you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our said Province of Upper Canada, and there to do as may seem necessary. Herein fail not.

IN Testimony whereof, WE have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto Affixed.—WITNESS Our Trusty and Well-Beloved PETER HUNTER Esquire, Our Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Lieutenant General Commanding Our Forces in Our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at YORK, this eighteenth day of October, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Four, and in the Forty-fourth Year of Our Reign.

P. H.

WM. JARVIS, Secretary.

Council Chamber, 18th Oct. 1804.

By his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

ORDERED,

THAT in cases wherein Locations have been made subject to Settling Duties, the parties be relieved from those Settling Duties upon the following conditions, viz.—That each person to whom such indulgence shall be granted, do, during the existence of this Order, pay into the hands of the Receiver General such Fees as would be required for the same quantity of Land under the Table of 6th July, 1804. And that such parties who do not reside in York, be respectively required also, to assign to the Receiver General's Receipt a Power of Attorney, nominating some person resident in York as their Agent, to receive their Deed; which Power is to be lodged with the Surveyor General, previous to his describing the Land, and by him transmitted, with the Description, to the Secretary. But the cases in which the Lands front the Main Road, in which Main Road is intended to be included the principal Road from the Point of Boudette to the Town of Sandwich, and also from the Town of York to Lake Simcoe, are to be considered as excepted out of this Order. And this Regulation is to be regarded as in force only for Twelve Months from the date hereof. JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

UPPER CANADA.

NOTICE is hereby given that the Commissioners for the Home District, appointed by a certain Statute of the Provincial Legislature, passed during the Session of the present year, intituled, "An Act for granting to His "Majesty a certain sum of Money out of the Funds "applicable to the uses of this Province to defray "the [illegible] and of amending and repairing the Public "Highways and Roads, laying out and opening new "Roads and building Bridges in the several Districts "thereof" are ready to receive Proposals from any Person or Persons disposed to contract for the opening and repairing of Roads and building Bridges between the Town of York and the head of BURLINGTON BAY.

Such Proposals must state at what prices the Party undertaking the aforesaid work, will engage to finish and complete the same, and must consist of the following particulars:—

At what Price per Mile such Person will open and clear out such part of the Road leading from Lot Street, adjoining the Town of York (beginning at Peter Street) to the Mouth of the Humber, of the width of 33 feet, as shall not be found to Road in need of any causeway.

With the prices also per Rod at which such Party will engage to open, clear out, and causeway such other part of the same Road as shall require to be causewayed, and the last mentioned price to include as well the clearing and clearing out as the causewaying such Road. The causeway to be 18 feet wide; as also the price at which any Person will engage to build Bridges upon the said Road of the width of eighteen feet.

And the said Commissioners will also receive Proposals from any Person or Persons willing to engage to clear down three Miles at the following Places, viz.—one at the Sixteen Mile Creek, another between the Sixteen and Twelve Mile Creek, and the third at the Twelve Mile Creek.

And also for repairing in a good and substantial manner, the Bridge at the Outlet of Burlington Bay.

All the before mentioned Work to be completed in a good and substantial manner on or before the last day of October next, and when completed, the Money contracted to be given, will be paid by the Receiver General.

But each party entering into an Engagement for any part of this aforesaid work, will be required to produce two sufficient Sureties, to be bound for the performance of the Contract.

The particulars to be delivered in to WILLIAM ALLAN or DUNCAN CAMERON Esquires, of York, or to JAMES RUGGLES or WILLIAM GRAHAM Esquires, of Yonge Street, or to WILLIAM ARMSTRONG Esquire, of Newcastle East, all of whom are Commissioners named for executing the aforesaid Act into execution.

Latest Intelligence.

Paris, July 12.

The unfortunate General Moreau, his brother, the tribune, and their families, are about bidding adieu to France for ever.

At Malmaison, his Majesty the Emperor Napoleon is collecting a museum, to be called Museum Josephine. No less than twenty artists are travelling over all Europe to make purchases and collections worthy of such a place. The sum of 3,000,000 livres (600,000 dollars) is to be expended to perfect it.—This money is to be given from the Emperor's private purse.

BRITISH PARLIAMENT.
House of Commons, July 7.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer delivered the following message:

"G. R.—His Majesty relying on the experienced zeal and affection of his faithful Commons, and considering that it may be of the utmost importance to provide for such emergencies as may arise, is desirous that this House will enable him to take such measures as may be necessary to disappoint or defeat any enterprize or design of his enemies, and as the exigencies of affairs may require."

British Civil List.—Mr. Pitt lately called the attention of the House of Commons, to the embarrassment of the civil list, which he placed under three classes: 1st. The expenses incurred by foreign ministers and ambassadors; 2. By the extra expenses of the household; and 3dly, the extraordinary expenditure for secret service in the present important conjuncture of affairs. The ground for the house to proceed upon was the same on which it acted in 1802, and he would shortly state the exceedings to be at present, accruing since the year above mentioned, 590,000l. In his opinion, there were many of these charges, which, instead of hanging as a burthen on the civil list, should be annually laid before and voted by the parliament. The expence of prosecutions, and many other estimates were liableto very according to circumstances, and could not be foreseen at the time the house might vote the necessary sums for his Majesty's civil list establishment. All these charges he should not at this time propose to transfer, but should confine himself to the amount of about 135,000l. which would exclude the heads of exchequer messengers & various other expences which would be explained in the detail. Gentlemen must know, from their own private affairs, that since the year 1786, when Mr. Burke's bill passed, household expences had increased 60l. per cent. The same augmentation of expence must, of course, take place in the royal as in other families. In some departments the expence of the civil list was much diminished and particularly in that of pensions, for which there was an allowance of 92,000l. & out of which there had been for some years past, a diminution of 12,000l. annually. The excess of the expences for foreign ministers in consequence of the war, and numerous translations connected with it, was in this war, 70,000l. There was also another consideration to which he wished to point the attention of the house, namely, to the illustrious princes of the royal family, towards of whom he had no doubt that every gentleman would think an allowance of 6,000l. a year instead of 4,000l. which they now received would be extremely reasonable. He concluded with observing, that the additional sum to the civil list, which he intended to submit, was sixty thousand pounds a year, and moved in the first instance, that the sum of 591,515l. 13s. 10d. be granted for the payment of the arrears of his Majesty's civil establishment. The motion was opposed by Mr. Banks, on the ground that the clauses of Mr. Burke's bill had never been strictly complied with, and that the increase of arrears in the civil list had, upon an avarage been more than trebled within the last two years; and by Sir F. Burdett, on the principle that at a time when the comforts of the people were diminished by the grievous taxes imposed upon them, those who were in the cause of that diminution, ought to participate in their privations. After a reply from Mr. Pitt, and several observations in support of the measure from Mr. Addington, the motion was agreed to.

TUESDAY, July 5.

Arrived this morning, from Jersey, which island she left yesterday, the William and Mary, Stockham. She touched at Guernsey on her passage, where Admiral Sir James Saumarez's ship was lying, with the King's Fisherboy and Sirius frigate; the latter being lately on a cruize on the coast of France, had stood alone in with the shore, and saw the enemy hoisting their signals. Our gallant tar, whom nothing can resist, rowed athore in their cutter, got on the top of their hill, and, in a most daring manner, brought away the Frenchmen prisoners, with their signals, post and appurtenances, all of which they have delivered to Major Saumarez, at Guernsey.

July 25.

Hostile Indications on the Continent.

Undoubted intelligence is said to have reached our Government, that upon receiving the note respecting the Duke d'Enghein, from the Russian Minister, Bonaparte, in a climax of rage, wrote a note with his own hand to the Emperor of Russia in the most vindictive style. This was instantly dispatched; but after several hours remonstrance from Talleyrand, another courier was dispatched to stop the delivery of this philippic. The messengers reached Petersburg on the same day, but the fiming note arriving first, had been delivered. The Emperor of Russia has ordered copies of it to be sent to every Court in Europe, and it is said to be of a most unique description.

The most likely circumstance to accelerate, a rupture between Russia and France is the formal protestion which, we understand by accounts from Warsaw, of the 5th inst. the Emperor Alexander has recently given to Louis XVIII. A Russian Nobleman is stated to have arrived in that city with a letter written by the Emperor himself, addressed to Louis XVIII King of France and Navarre, and inviting that Prince to fix his residence at Mittau or in any other place in the Russian Empire, where all the honors due to his rank, virtue, and misfortunes, shall be paid to him. At the desire of the Emperor of Russia, Louis XVIII. has made known to all his faithful subjects dispersed and persecuted in different Continental States, that they have a point to rally round in the Russian Empire, where they will be protected, employed, and succoured. According to the same account, two new corps of Emigrants are to be established, and taken into the Russian service, called, "The Royal Legion of Honor," and "Legion of D'Enghein." The former, report says, is to be under the immediate command of Louis XVIII his royal brother and nephews. The command of the latter will be offered to the Prince De Conde and Duke of Bourbon. Should a rupture take place between Russia and France, these Legions are to form the advanced guard of the Russian army, where the Royal Standard of France, the Oriflame, will be erected, which all loyal Frenchmen who can escape the degrading tyranny of the Corsican Adventurer, are ordered to join.

A report was generally circulated yesterday evening, in the city, that a courier had arrived from St. Petersburg with dispatches for our government, announcing, that the Emperor of Russia had declared war against France. In addition to the intolent expressions made use of by Bonaparte in his answer to the Russian remonstrance, it is reported he said, "It was strange that the Emperor of Russia, who was surrounded by the unpunished murderers of his father, should dare charge him with the murder of the Duke D'Enghein."—All this, however, we give merely as report.

We are assured that our government has received from the Swedish minister here, a formal notification on the part of his Sovereign, expressing, in the most energetic language, the determination not to recognize the new title of Emperor of the French, assumed by Bonaparte. A similar communication is also stated to have been made to all foreign courts at which his Swedish Majesty has ambassadors. It is highly probable the cabinet of Stockholm would not have pursued a line of conduct so very bold, unless fully sanctioned by the Emperor Alexander.

Although bonds are held out of the reciprocal esteem and friendship which actuate the Grand Seignor and Emperor of the French, in consequence of the intelligence brought from Constantinople, by the Sieur Laubert, it cannot be concealed, that the influence of Russia is paramount to that of France, in the councils of the Ottoman Porte.

We have received intelligence from France as late as the 24th, and by Dutch papers as late as the 28th. Several ambassadors and ministers from the powers who are in complete subjection to France, have delivered in their new credentials, and acknowledged the Emperor in the name of their respective courts. We scarcely need mention, that these courts are Spain, Holland, Naples, Prussia, Denmark, and some of the petty states of Germany; but Austria, Russia, Sweden, and Portugal, have as yet sent no delegates of submission.

The Emperor of Morocco is preparing an embassy to congratulate his brother Emperor Bonaparte, on his assuming his new title. The Mooriih Ambassador carried several fine Arabian horses to present to Bonaparte, also two very large ostriches which it is supposed will be his acceptable, as they can swallow every thing that is presented to them.

MOREAU.

The Senator Lecterre and St. Sulpice, who both have served under Moreau, negociated between him and Bonaparte, and caused the former, who, since his condemnation, has shewn more character than he had done before, to accept of the offer to go to America, with the value of all his property, and an annuity of 100,000 livres. He declined the place of Governor of the Ile of France, saying, he would never acknowledge Bonaparte as an Emperor or serve under him as such. Madame Moreau, on account of the tender age of her child, was desired to remain in France twelve months longer, but she accompanied her husband, and many think the will embark with him. Her mother remains yet at Paris, employed in disposing of their property. It is said that Bonaparte intends to purchase Moreau's country seat, Grosbois, for his brother Louis. The Tribune Moreau, and all the other members of Moreau's family, will settle in North America. It is even said that several Generals, as Soucham, Macdonald, Lecourbe, and others, intend to join their friend Moreau, in the United States.

FRENCH NAVY.

The French have 36 sail of the line, fully manned, equipped, and ready for sea, viz. twenty-three in Brest—nine in Toulon—and four in Rochefort. The British ships of the line, in commission on the 1st July, 1804, were 100.

August 7—11.

A letter from Berlin of the 28th ult. says, that "with two Russian armies on his extensive northern frontiers, and the French armies on his western and southern, the King of Prussia has declared to the courts of St. Petersburgh and St. Cloud, that his Majesty intends to preserve the strictest neutrality, and therefore will not permit the passage of any troops, artillery or ammunition through his dominions; but regard as an enemy, any power attempting to force such passage.

It is confidentially asserted, that a treaty has been concluded between this country and Russia, and that it was signed by Lord Harrowby and Count Woronzow, on Tuesday last, previous to his Majesty's going down to the House of Lords. We are inclined to think that the article signed was rather a project of a treaty, than a treaty itself.

A Russian galley from Marmoringo, in the Crimea, for Petersburgh, passed the Sound on the 13th of July. She came from Barcelona, and her crew were dressed after the Turkish fashion. This is the first vessel from the Black Sea which has ever passed the Sound.

General Moreau was still at Barcelona in the middle of July, where he had been joined by his Lady.

INVASION, &c.

By a private letter from Paris, of the 7th inst. we learn, that several violent disputions have taken place between Bonaparte and his Ministers and Councellors of the Marine Department, relative to the armament against this country. Gun-boats and other armed vessels, according to this letter, are already built more than sufficient to carry over to England 110,000 men; but the harbours of Boulogne, Ambleteuse and Calais, are not sufficiently large or commodious enough to contain such a number of vessels, and the situation of the other harbours, on account of their distance, is not convenient enough to execute a landing with small craft on such an extensive scale as Bonaparte had determined.—Some damages have been already suffered at Boulogne and Ambleteuse, from these harbours being over crowded with vessels, though several hundred more boats and ships were ordered there before the expedition was to be undertaken. Decres, the Minister of the Marine, has been strongly rebuked for his want of forefight, and has narrowly escaped the Temple.

Notwithstanding that the plan of invasion has been changed, the common opinion, in all well-informed circles at Paris is, that it will be soon attempted. It is reported, that the scheme of last year, to make Guernsey and Jersey a bridge over to England, is now revived, and a camp of 25,000 men is ordered to be formed between St. Maloes and Granville, and a division of the Boulogne flotilla is ordered for these ports, together with 200 gun-boats, constructed to the westward of them, and just finished. It is believed, however, that 80,000 men of the army near Boulogne will, at the same time, make a push to put to sea. It has been calculated, that 40,000 men may easily sail from Boulogne, and be joined by 20,000 men from Ambleteuse, at the same time.

AFEAIR OFF TOULON.

His Majesty's Ship Canopus, off Toulon, May 25.

"Yesterday, in company with the Donegal and Amazon, we were nearly brought to action by a very superior squadron of the enemy, whom Admiral Campbell had been sent by Lord Nelson to reconnoitre. The main body of the fleet remained far out of sight of the land; but the weather was so very fair, that the Rear Admiral was tempted to stand in close, to get a good view of them. As the eastward of the harbour's mouth (in which direction the road is open) on our near approach it fell almost calm, and the gun boats immediately pulled towards us, and commenced firing, when we tacked, but at such a distance that their shot fell short. The Admiral fired in return. A moderate breeze by this time springing up, and the squadron in the harbour were soon under sail after us, and in less than an hour consisted of five sail of the line and three heavy frigates; they appeared determined to make a grand push after us. The frigates and one of the line of battle ships appeared to gain considerably; and the headmost of the former (which was the same fellow the Amazon chased into Hieres Bay, during the winter) opened a distant teasing fire on the Donegal, which was our sternmost ship. This was not to be borne long patiently by Sir Richard Strachan, who, watching his opportunity, luffed up, and gave a broadside, which made the headmost gentry heave their sails aback quicker than ever I saw them perform any manoeuvre.

"The Canopus also threw some shot at the same time, in a very good direction. Although the fire was at such a distance, that I have great doubts whether any shot took effect, yet it evidently served to check the progress of the headmost 74 (supposed to be the Swiftsure,) for notwithstanding she was coming up fast, and with four of her own class at her heels, instead of closing with the Donegal, the moment she came within random shot, she rounded to fire her broadside, by which she lost a great deal of way, though perhaps this was her object. The squadron that was now in pursuit of us, and coming fast up, was so superior as to preclude all chance of doing any thing with them. Admiral Campbell, therefore, made sail, and they continued to follow us for some time under a crowd of canvas, still keeping the advantage of firing; but fearful of being drawn off too far, and decoyed into the jaws of the Vifcounte, by the time they were about five leagues from Toulon, they were recalled by their signal post on the Hill, and all stood in again. This was about three quarters past 3 o'clock P. M. At six we saw our fleet to leeward, and joined them about half past nine. They had heard the fire indistinctly, and the Leviathan was detached towards Toulon, but had not proceeded far on her way before we were perceived returning."

NEW YORK, SEPTEMBER 12.

The French still hold what is called the Spanish part of St. Domingo; with the city of that name; and the port of St. Jago. Gen. Ferrand commands in chief. He has defeated Dessalines (the black General) who lost one Thousand Men. Captain Cassel, an aid-de camp of General Ferrand, has lately arrived in the United States, to demand succors of M. Pichon.

BOSTON, Sept. 17.

By the arrival on Saturday last of the Sally, Capt. Webber, from Liverpool, and the Galen, Capt. Hinchley, from London, we have received English papers to the 31th August, which state, among other articles of local concern, the safe arrival of all the valuable fleets of merchantmen expected in the month of August, among which are the China—the Leeward Island—the Jamaica—the Newfoundland—the Lisbon—and the Baltic fleets. They also announce the prorogation of the British Parliament, by a speech from the throne—of the election of Mr. Manwaring for Middlesex county, in the room of Sir Francis Burdett—of the near escape of the French fleet from Brest—and of the rumor of an alliance offensive and defensive, between Great Britain and Russia.

LONDON.

This metropolis comprehends, besides London, Westminster and Southwark, no less than 45 villages of considerable extent, independent of a vast accession of buildings upon the open fields in the vicinity. Its length is nearly 8 miles, its breadth 3, and its circumference 26: It contains above 8000 streets, lanes, alleys and courts, and more than 65 different squares; its houses, warehouses and other buildings make 162,000, besides 246 churches and chapels, 207 meeting houses for dissenters, 43 chapels for foreigners, and 6 synagogues for the Jews, which in all make 502 places of worship. The number of inhabitants during the sitting of Parliament, is estimated at 1,250,000; among these are found about 50,000 common prostitutes, and no less than 60,000 thieves, coiners, and other bad people of the description. The annual depredations on the public, by this numerous body of pilferers, are estimated at the sum of 2,100,000l. sterling. In this vast city there are, moreover, upwards of 4000 seminaries for education; 8 institutions for promoting morality; 20 institutions for promoting the arts; 122 asylums for the indigent; 17 for the sick and lame; 13 dispensaries; 704 charitable institutions; 56 courts of justice; 7040 professional men connected with the various departments of the law. There are 13,500 vessels trading to the river Thames in the course of a year, and 40,000 waggons going and returning to the metropolis in the same period, including their repeated voyages.

The amount of exports and imports to and from the Thames is estimated at 66 811,932l. sterling annually, and the property floating in this great city every year, is 170,000,000 sterling. These circumstances may be sufficient to convince us of the amazing extent and importance of the capital of the British empire.—Police of the Metropolis.

TRUE HAPPINESS.

TRUE happiness is of a retired nature, and an enemy to pomp and noise; it arises, in the first place, from the enjoyment of one's self, and in the next from the friendship and conversation of a few select companions; love, health and solitude, and naturally haunts groves, and fountains, fields and meadows. In short, it loves every thing it wants within itself, and receives no addition from multitude of witness and spectators. On the contrary, false happiness loves to be in a crowd, and to draw the eyes of the world upon her. She does not receive any satisfaction from the applause which she gives herself, but from the admiration which she raises in others. She is restless in courts and palaces, theatres and assemblies, and has no existence but when she is looked upon.

THE DEVIL AND THE CONSUL.

As the Devil in Paris was taking a walk,
He met Bonaparte, and they had some talk;
What, there, says Satan, pray how do you do?
I'm well cried the Consul, and glad to see you.—
Derry down, down, &c.

What news do you bring from your empire below?
How by Oliver Cromwell I—But carry to low—
I fancy he carries your grandees so great;
For he wears his crown as much splendour and state.
Derry down, &c.

The he often married himself in my cause,
The Britons from him had some excellent laws.
How much below you all his merits must fall,
Who m'd this theophile without laws at all!
Derry down, &c.

Alexander and Cæsar—first heroes in story!
Are jealous, I know, of your deeds and great glory;
The they path'd through the globe all their conquests
And rul'd monarchs on earth, now they're subjects in hell.
Derry down, &c.

Bout religion at Rome, you once made a great pother,
Then pull'd down one Pope, and then set up another:
In Egypt I've heard of your wonderful works,
How Mahomet you worship'd as bombing the Turks.
Derry down, &c.

The deeds you there acted with poison and fire,
In my realms are recorded in letters of fire;
Marino imp in my service but fourth of your name,
And horribly grim when he mentions your name.
Derry down, &c.

You boast much, friend Consul, at Liberty's tree,
And fay that the Dutch and the Swiss are quite free
If such freedom as that to give England you aim,
Try your skill— that the sooner yourself I may claim
Derry down, &c.

When the time shall arrive that's determin'd by fate,
That you quit our mansion your Conductor last;
Fear not—a bold Britain should prove your overthrow,
You shall have a long birth in my kingdom below.
Derry down, &c.

To my dark dominions, soon as you descend,
The damn'd shall rejoice at the sight of their friend;
And I'll give you—as long as with me you reside,
The bottom of corners at the Devil's den side
Derry down, &c.

Pacificus I cried the Consul, and dropped on his knee;
A much easier lodging would fatisfy me:
Hold! hold! Satan cries, such a mighty command,
Shakespeare by the side of his friend Alexander

STANZAS.

[From the Portuguese of Camoens.]

I SAW the virtuous maid consumed
With life's unhumble'd woes:
And he was poor—without a friend—
Profs'd by a thousand foes.
I saw the Fashions' phant'ams move
In gallant trim and gay;
His cruels with Pleasure's placid wave,
His life a summer's day.
And I was caught in Folly's snare,
And join'd her giddy train;
But found her fons the surest care,
And punishment and pain.
There surely is some guiding Pow'r,
Which rightly fullers wrong;
Gives Woe to bloom in little bloss,
But Virtue, late and long.

'LET us not trouble ourselves with wishing that things may be just as we would have them; but be well pleased that they should be just as they are, then we shall live easy.

'CONTENTMENT is the spring of all human enjoyment; it is the only source of happiness—the fountain of uncorrupted bliss. It is not the splendour of wealth, or the possession of riches that makes us happy—it is not the pomp of power, or the display of authority, that gives us enjoyment: but by a quiet resignation to the will of heaven, and in a calm acquiescence in the distribution of its blessings, we find the possession of the truest pleasures, and are led to experience the purest joys.

'Perfection is not to be looked for in a world like this; mankind should therefore be prepared to meet with difficulties and troubles; to encounter the frowns as well as the smiles of fortune; the stings of adversity would then be greatly softened, and the severest trials easily endured. Existence would then become serene and pleasant—be rendered delightful as the dewy fragrance of a summer's morn. The mind prone to activity, would never grow listless or unquiet; but dwelling on the vast variety with which all nature is clothed, would ever find exhaustless sources of gratification and amusement. In whatever direction the eye should chance to rove, we should find our wonder and astonishment as highly excited, as though the wheels of creation were but just commanded to roll on, each beauteous object beginning to rise from chaos and darkness to splendour and light.

DRESS.—'The perfection of dress is to be easy and clean. Nothing can be more ridiculous, than for one to make himself a slave to fine clothes. Such a one, and many such there are, would rather remain as fixt as a statue, from morning till night, than discompose a single hair, or alter the position of a pin. Were we to recommend any particular pattern for dress, it would be that which is worn by the people denominated Friends.—They are always neat, clean, and often elegant: without any thing superfluous. What others lay out upon tawdry laces, ruffles and ribbons, they bestow upon superior cleanliness. Finery is only the affectation of dress, and very often covers a great deal of dirt.'

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER,
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith:—

To our Beloved and faithful Legislative Counsellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to the Provincial Parliament at our Town of York, on the twenty fifth day of October, to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you—

GREETING:

WHereas by our Proclamation bearing date the thirteenth day of September last, We thought fit by & with the advice of our Executive Council to prorogue our said Provincial Parliament until the twenty-fifth day of this present month of October, at which time in our Town of York you were held and constrained to appear, but we taking into our Royal consideration, the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice and content of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you and of each you that on the Third day of December next ensuing you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our said Province of Upper Canada, and there to do as may seem necessary. Herein fail not.

IN Testimony whereof, WE have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto Affixed.—WITNESS Our Trusty and Well-Beloved PETER HUNTER Esquire, Our Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Lieutenant General Commanding Our Forces in Our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at YORK, this eighteenth day of October, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Four, and in the Forty-fourth Year of Our Reign.

P. H.

WM. JARVIS, Secretary.

Council Chamber, 18th Oct. 1804.

By his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

ORDERED,

THAT in cases wherein Locations have been made subject to Settling Duties, the parties be relieved from those Settling Duties upon the following conditions, viz.—That each person to whom such indulgence shall be granted, do, during the existence of this Order, pay into the hands of the Receiver General such Fees as would be required for the same quantity of Land under the Table of 6th July, 1804. And that such parties who do not reside in York, be respectively required also, to annex to the Receiver General's Receipt a Power of Attorney, nominating some person resident in York as their Agent, to receive their Deed; which Power is to be lodged with the Surveyor General, previous to his describing the Land, and by him transmitted, with the Description, to the Secretary. But the cases in which the Lands front the Main Road, in which Main Road is intended to be included the principal Road from the Point of Boudette to the Town of Sandwich, and also from the Town of York to Lake Simcoe, are to be considered as excepted out of this Order. And this Regulation is to be regarded as in force only for Twelve Months from the date hereof. JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

UPPER CANADA.

NOTICE is hereby given that the Commissioners for the Home District, appointed by a certain Statute of the Provincial Legislature, passed during the Session of the present year, intituled, "An Act for granting to His "Majesty a certain sum of Money out of the Funds "applicable to the uses of this Province to defray "the expences of amending and repairing the Public "Highways and Roads, laying out and opening new "Roads and building Bridges in the several Districts "thereof" are ready to receive Proposals from any Person or Persons disposed to contract for the opening and repairing the Road and building Bridges between the Town of York and the head of BURLINGTON BAY.

Such Proposals must state at what prices the Party desirous of undertaking the aforesaid work, will engage to finish and complete the same, and must consist of the following particulars:—

At what Price per Mile such Person will open and clear out such part of the Road leading from Lot Street, adjoining the Town of York (beginning at Peter Street) to the Mouth of the Humber, of the width of 33 feet, as shall not be found to stand in need of any causeway.

With the price also per Rod at which such Party will engage to open, clear out, and causeway such other part of the same Road, as shall require to be causewayed, and the last mentioned price to include as well the opening and clearing out as the causewaying such Road. The causeway to be 28 feet wide; as also the price at which any Person will engage to build Bridges upon the said Road of which of eighteen feet.

And the said Commissioners will also receive Proposals from any Person or Persons willing to undertake to cut down three Hills at the following Places, viz. one at the Sixteen Mile Creek, another between this Sixteen and Twelve Mile Creek, and the third at the Twelve Mile Creek.

And also for repairing in a good and substantial manner, the Bridge at the Outlet of Burlington Bay.

All the before mentioned Work to be completed in a good and substantial manner on or before the last day of October next, and when completed, the Money contracted to be given, will be paid by the Receiver General.

But each party entering into an Engagement for any part of the aforesaid work, will be required to produce two sufficient Sureties, to be bound for the performance of the Contract.

The particulars to be delivered in to WILLIAM ALLAN or DUNCAN CAMERON Esquires, of York, or to JAMES RUGGLES or WILLIAM GRAHAM Esquires, of Kingston, or to WILLIAM APPLEGARTH Esquire, of Pittsburgh, Esqrs. all of whom are Commissioners named for carrying the aforesaid Act into execution.

Agent for Purchases Office,
YORK, 20th October, 1804.

THE detriment that has arisen from the improper Curing and Packing of PORK, heretofore purchased for the use of His Majesty's Forces, and also the irregularity of the Number and Weight of the Pieces contained in the respective Casks of that Pork, render it necessary to notify to such persons who intend in future to supply the same, as follows:—

I. That the Pork so to be purchased, shall be of the best Quality and properly Cured with Rock or St. Ubes Salt, and packed in sound and sufficient Casks.

II. That such Pork shall be warranted to keep sweet and good for Twelve Months after its delivery into the King's Stores.

III. That each Cask shall contain Fifty two Pieces of Four Pounds each, equal to Two Hundred and Eight Pounds nett.

IV. That such Casks so shall be found, when opened for issue, not exactly to correspond with what is above specified, shall be returned, and replaced with an equal quantity of good Pork, cured and packed in manner herein before mentioned.

V. That the future Sale of the above article to Government, will altogether depend upon an exact conformity to what is expressed in this Notice.

Agent for Purchases.

Lateſt Intelligence.

Berlin, June 20.

The moſt melancholy intelligence is continually arriving here of the havock made by the recent inundation in Sileſia, in the Lauſitz, &c. The city of Sagan has been entirely under water, and 50 houſes completely deſtroyed: and in its environs ſeveral houſes, bridges and indeed whole villages, have been carried away by the force of the water; great numbers of ſheep and oxen, and 47 perſons have been drowned. At Chriſtianſtadt the Boder threatened the whole city with deſtruction: every one fled, and the bridges were forced down by the torrent. The inhabitants climbed up the loftieſt trees, in hopes of ſaving their lives; but theſe unable to withſtand the violence of the water, were thrown down, and the unhappy perſons who had taken refuge on their branches and their tops, were precipitated into a watery grave. Similar diſaſters have afflicted ſeveral other places; and even on the mountains the damage has been conſiderable. In South Pruſſia the fatal effects of this inundation has alſo been ſeverely felt. Two whole families in going from one town to another, on a viſit to their relations, were ſurrounded by the waters and drowned.

London, July 15—25.

Government are now building at Newcaſtle, Leith, and ſeveral other private ſhipyards, a number of gun boats, of about two hundred tons burthen, of an eaſy draft of water, to carry 24 to 42 pound carronades: they are to be employed, with ſeveral armed ſhips, on the enemy's coaſt, to prevent that ready and eaſy communication their flotilla have hitherto been allowed: or to aſſiſt in repelling any attempt at invaſion. Great exertions are uſed in the building of the gun boats, ſeveral of which will be ready in a few weeks.

We underſtand that there is no ground for a ſtatement which has appeared in ſeveral papers, that his Majeſty would go down next week in perſon to prorogue the Parliament. Conſiderations of great moment are certainly on the tapis. Earl Moira had a long conference laſt Tueſday with the Lord Chancellor, who left the Court of Chancery on purpoſe, and was cloſetted for nearly an hour in an adjoining room with the Noble Earl.

Every man throughout the kingdom will rejoice to hear that Admiral Cornwallis will return to the Channel fleet in the courſe of a few days.

The Gazette of Saturday evening contains the following appointments:—The Hon. Cecil Jenkinſon to be his Majeſty's Secretary of Legation to the Court of Vienna: the Right Hon. G. Roſe and Lord Charles Henery Somerſett, to be Paymaſters of the Forces: James Duke of Montroſe and Lord Charles Spencer, to the office of Poſtmaſter General: and Lord John Thyne to be one of his Majeſty's Privy Council.

A private letter from Vienna, dated July 6, ſtates as follows:—Every day the French intereſt gains ground: under the name of couriers, and of officers of Bonaparte's guards, new intriguers arrive: provided with plenty of money, diamonds, and other allurements, for the unprincipled, avaricious, and corrupt. Their impudence is as ſurpriſing as their expences are extravagant: and every lover of his country, and of the honor and independence of Germany, trembles when he obſerves their preſence and influence, not only in the anti-chambers of Miniſters, at the Levee of the Emperor, in the boudoirs of female favourites, but in the council room and in the cabinet, they dare, but at the ſame time ſtoop, for every thing: the moſt impertinent and ambitious propoſals are made, and the moſt ſevere repulſe or refuſal are received with a bow only.—They return however, to the charge, and finally carry their point.—This explains her conduct both here, at Ratiſbon and at Paris; and many think that the return of [illegible] can alone ſave us from diſhonor and ruin. Colonizzi here, and Count Cobenzl in France, are both narrow minded and weak ſtateſmen, who regard the preſent as every thing, and futurity nothing.—They think they have gained a great point by procuring Bonaparte's permiſſion for the Archduke Antoine to be coadjutor to the Arch Chancellor elector of Mentz, though they have been unable to obtain for his brother, the Grand Duke of Tuſcany, the indemnity due to him according to the treaty of Luneville. An uſurper, who prevents the execution of ſworn treaties, cares little about reſpecting an agreement which promiſes to make a coadjutor a ſucceſſor: not to mention that this favor, or rather intrigue, is to be the price of an act, by which our good and virtuous Sovereign acknowledges for an equal, a law adventurer, equally ambitious and ferocious, and whoſe atrocities better times would have rewarded with a gibbet inſtead of a throne.—I muſt, however, do the majority of my countrymen juſtice, becauſe they are neither the dupes of Bonaparte's promiſes, nor blinded by the gold his emiſſaries ſquander away."

Auguſt 4.

KING'S SPEECH.

On Tueſday laſt, His Majeſty went to the Houſe of Lords, where, being ſeated on his throne, in the uſual ſtate, and the Members of the Houſe of commons attending at the bar; the Houſe of Lords, the Speaker addreſſed his Majeſty as follows:

"Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

"WE your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Commons of Great-Britain and Ireland, in Parliament aſſembled, approach the foot of your Majeſty's Throne with the ſentiments of unfeigned joy and reverence.

"The Bill which I hold in my hand completes the Supplies for the preſent year. Theſe, Sire, we have appropriated to the further ſupport of your Majeſty's Houſehold, and the honour and dignity of your Crown, to the Naval and Military Defence of the Realm, and to the various ſervices of your extended empire. In providing for theſe grants, large in their amount and commenſurate with the extraordinary demands of the times in which we live, we have nevertheleſs ſteadily perſevered in our former courſe by raiſing a large portion of our ſupplies within the year, and we have now the proud ſatisfaction to ſee that the permanent debt of the State is rapidly diminiſhing, at the ſame time that the growing proſperity of the country has ſtrengthened and multiplied all its reſources. Contemplating the war in which we are engaged, the character and means of our enemy, and the poſſible duration of the conteſt, although we are fearleſs of its iſſue, we have nevertheleſs deemed it our indiſpenſible duty to deliberate with unremitting ſolicitude upon the beſt ſyſtem for our military defence. And the voluntary ſpirit of your people, ſeconding the views of Parliament, has, at the ſame time, animated all ranks of men with an active deſire of attaining to ſuch a ſtate of diſcipline in arms as may enable them ſucceſsfully to co-operate with your Majeſty's regular and veteran forces. Thus formidably armed, and powerfully ſuſtained, we truſt, that, with the bleſſing of God, we ſhall victorioully maintain your Majeſty's Throne, and tranſmit unimpaired to our deſcendants the moſt perfect form of government which the world has ever experienced, for the practical happineſs of mankind: firmly perſuaded that this empire will long outlaſt the ſtorms which have overwhelmed the continent of Europe: and earneſtly hoping that other nations, now fallen, may witneſs the deſtruction of a tyranny founded on fraud and violence, and cemented with innocent blood, and again recover their ancient power and independence, as the beſt guarantees for the future welfare and tranquility of the civilized world.

"The Bill which I have to preſent to your Majeſty is entitled An Act for granting to his Majeſty a certain ſum of money out of the conſolidated fund of Great-Britain, and for applying a certain ſum of money, therein mentioned, for the ſervice of Great Britain for the year 1804, and for further appropriating the ſupplies granted in this ſeſſion of Parliament;—to which your Commons, with all humility, intreat your Majeſty's Royal aſſent."

As ſoon as the Speaker concluded, His Majeſty gave the Royal aſſent to the vote of Credit Bill; and then delivered the following moſt gracious Speech from the Throne:—

"My Lords and gentlemen,

"BEFORE I put an end to the preſent ſeſſion of Parliament, I am deſirous of expreſſing my entire approbation of the zeal and aſſiduity with which you have applied yourſelves to the great objects of public concern which have come under your conſideration. You have wiſely continued to direct your attention to the encouragement and improvement of that reſpectable and powerful Volunteer force, which the ardour and ſpirit of my ſubjects have enabled me to eſtabliſh, to an extent hitherto unexampled.

"You have at the ſame time endeavored to combine an additional eſtabliſhment for our domeſtic defence, with the means of augmenting our regular army, and of maintaining it on ſuch a ſcale as may be proportioned to the circumſtances of the times, and to the rank which this country ought ever to hold among the powers of Europe.

"Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

"You are entitled to my warmeſt acknowledgments for the freſh proof which you have given me of your conſtant and affectionate attachment to my perſon and family, and your regard to the honor and dignity of my crown, by the liberal proviſion which you have made for the payment of the debt of my Civil Liſt revenues, and for furniſhing me with the additional means of defraying the increaſe which has unavoidably taken place in different branches of my expenditure.

"I muſt alſo return you my warmeſt thanks for the extenſive proviſion which you have made for the exigencies of the public ſervice, and eſpecially for the juſt and prudent attention which you have ſhewn to true economy, and to the permanent credit and welfare of the country, by the great exertions you have made for preventing, as far as poſſible, the accumulation of debt, and for raiſing ſo large a proportion of the expences of the war, within the year.

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I have now only to recommend to you to carry into your reſpective counties the ſame zeal for the public intereſt which has guided all your proceedings. It will be your particular duty to inculcate on the minds of all claſſes of my ſubjects, that the preſervation of all that is moſt dear to them requires the continuance of their unremitted exertions for the national defence.

"The preparations which the enemy has long been forming, for the declared purpoſe of invading this kingdom, are daily augmented, and the attempt appears to have been delayed only with the view of procuring additional means for carrying it into execution.

"Relying on the ſkill, valour, and diſcipline of my naval and military force, aided by the volunteer zeal and native courage of my people, I look with confidence to the iſſue of this great conflict, and, I doubt not, that it will terminate under the bleſſing of Providence, not only in repelling the danger of the moment, but in eſtabliſhing in the eyes of foreign nations, the ſecurity of this country on a baſis never to be ſhaken.

"In addition to this firſt and great object, I entertain the animating hope, that the benefits to be derived from our ſucceſsful exertions will not be confined within ourſelves; but that by their example, and their conſequences, they may lead to the re-eſtabliſhment of ſuch a ſyſtem in Europe, as may relieve it from the precarious ſtate to which it is reduced; and finally, raiſe an effectual barrier againſt the unbounded ſchemes of aggrandizement and ambition which threaten every independent nation that yet remains on the continent."

Then the Lord Chancellor, by his Majeſty's command, ſaid,

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"It is his Majeſty's royal will and pleaſure, that this parliament be prorogued to Tueſday, the 4th day of September next, to be then here holden, and this parliament is accordingly prorogued to Tueſday the 4th day of September next."

His Majeſty's health appeared perfectly re-eſtabliſhed: his manner was compoſed and dignified, and his delivery of thoſe paſſages which more immediately relate to the exertions of the country, for the preſervation of its deareſt rights and independence, was marked with peculiar animation and ſenſibility. The Sovereign's eulogy on that great and truly national bulwark, the volunteer force, will, we are confident, prove an additional ſtimulous to our patriot army, and inſpirit them to new efforts in the nobleſt of all cauſes.

Auguſt 11.

The Batavian journals, received to the 3d inſt. communicate a ſtatement generally accredited at Paris, that a note, by way of ultimatum, has been delivered by the Ruſſian Charge d'Affaires, to the Miniſter for Foreign Affairs, demanding the evacuation of Hanover; and acquainting the French government that in caſe of a refuſal, he had been directed by his Sovereign immediately to leave Paris. We are not much inclined to give credit to this ſtatement, but it had the effect of depreciating the funds, which are ſaid to have fallen one per cent. in conſequence of it. On the 30th ult. the French miniſter at the Hague preſented his new credentials, and a proceſſion ſuitable to the parade and oſtentation of the Corſican's new title, took place on the occaſion.

Croſſes, lyres, crowns, and diadems, continue the prevailing ornaments in the head dreſs of a Pariſian elegante.

NEW YORK, September 20.

Jerome Bonaparte.—Among the papers received from our different correſpondents we find one, the New Brunſwick Chronicle, of Sept. 8. which contains the annexed article relative to Jerome Bonaparte and his bride. We have reaſon to think, that, if the letters alluded to are genuine, ſubſequent diſpatches have been received of a much milder tenor, and making the requiſite proviſion for this youthful and intereſting couple.

Halifax, Sept. 8.

"We have been favoured with the peruſal of two French official letters, dated Paris, 30th Germinal, (April 20) —One of them is ſigned "Decres," & addreſſed to Jerome Bonaparte, now in America.—The writer informs Jerome that by order of the Firſt Conſul, his allowances are ſtopped; and intimates Napoleon's higheſt diſpleaſure, at his having remained living in America, and having married without his conſent.—He (Decres) ſays, that the young woman with whom Jerome has connected himſelf, will not be permitted to enter the French territories:—and ſhould ſhe even arrive at any port in France, ſhe will be inſtantly re-ſhipped for the American States.—He is reminded that the Firſt Conſul is not operated upon by the blind affection of a parent; that he will only acknowledge thoſe relations who preſs around him, and aſſiſt in executing his vaſt plans.—The brothers Joſeph, Louis, and Lucien, are ſpoken of with terms of commendation; but, the latter, though eminently uſeful, and poſſeſſed of an independent fortune, yet, having contracted a marriage contrary to the will of the Firſt Conſul, has been baniſhed to Rome.—But you," ſays the writer, "are pointed out as a man without ſpirit, yielding to the tender paſſions; not having added a ſingle leaf to the laurels which crown him, his name, and our colours." He is repeatedly preſſed to return to France in the firſt frigate that may offer; but is often cautioned againſt bringing the young woman with him:—" It would be degrading," ſays Decres, "your perſonal dignity to introduce into this country a woman who ought to be in humiliation, and who will not be received here."

The other letter is from citizen "Denes," directed to citizen Pichon; and is to the ſame effect: the whole of both letters (which are very lengthy) is ſuch as to impreſs the reader, with an idea of the ſupreme inſolence and contempt with which the uſurper looks down on thoſe engaged in the humble walks of life.—They were intercepted on board a veſſel bound from Bourdeaux to New York; and we have not the ſmalleſt doubt of their authenticity.

September 24.

The following particular account of a late dreadful ſtorm at Charleſton, which commenced on the 7th, and ſubſided on the 9th inſt. will be found highly intereſting.

Charleſton (S. C.) Sept. 10.

On Friday night laſt, about 11 o'clock a dreadful gale of wind came on in this harbour, and continued to blow with the moſt extreme violence until Sunday morning, 1 o'clock: the wind was firſt at N. E. and in the courſe of Saturday morning it changed to E. and in the afternoon to S. E. It is impoſſible at this time for us to deſcribe accurately the deſtruction cauſed by this gale; the whole of the wharves from Gadſden's on Cooper river, to the extent of South Bay, have received very conſiderable damage, the heads & tides of moſt of them are waſhed away. Of the veſſels in the harbour, but three or four have eſcaped without injury, ſeveral are totally loſt, and many more are much damaged. At 7 o'clock on Saturday morning, the period of low water, the tide was as high as it generally is at ſpring tides; it appeared that during the preceding ebb but little water had left the rivers; at 12 o'clock it was from two to three feet higher than it has been ſeen for many years, and made a complete breach over the wharves, and drove many ſmall veſſels on them, where they now lie. On General Gadſden's wharf ſeveral ſtores were waſhed or blown down, and their contents of rice and cotton much damaged and ſome loſt. On South Bay the whole of the bulwark made againſt the water is in ruins, and the houſe of Mr. William Veitch, built on made ground, was waſhed down—the new ſtreet made to continue Eaſt Bay to White Point, is greatly damaged, the ſame made breaches through it in many places.—On Blake's wharf a brick building occupied as a ſcale and counting houſe, was beat down by the bowſprit of the ſhip Lydia.

In the city no other damage is done than that many houſes which were covered with ſlate, are in part unroofed, and moſt of the trees in the ſtreets and many fences are blown down. Great apprehenſions were entertained for the ſafety of the families on Sullivan's Iſland, but accounts received from thence yeſterday, were very favorable, not a life was loſt there except a black boy. From 15 to 20 houſes were undermined by the water and waſhed away, the inhabitants of which loſt almoſt every thing that was in them. It is the opinion of ſome gentlemen who were on the iſland, and who came up yeſterday, that if the water had continued to riſe half an hour longer, ſcarcely a houſe would have eſcaped, and many people muſt have periſhed. What have been the conſequences of this gale in the country, we have not learned; but we fear they will be diſtreſſing. On the one hand it is feared that the banks of the river plantations, were not high enough to keep out the tides, and on the other that the violence of the wind has deſtroyed the cotton plants.

There is one circumſtance which took place during this gale, which we think worthy of notice. It was high water at the wharves on Sunday at 12 o'clock, ſoon after the tide began to fall, and at 6 o'clock in the evening had fallen about two feet, it was then expected that the next tide would be higher than the former, as the fall had been to limit; but inſtead of riſing, it continued to fall a little the whole time of the flood, and was not as high at one o'clock on Sunday morning, the time for high water, as it was the day before at 6 o'clock, the time of low water. We ſuppoſe that this phenomenon was owing to the change of the wind from E. to S. E. during that period.

A negro man was killed by the fall of Mr. Veitch's chimney on South Bay, this is the only life loſt in the city, that we have heard of. Moſt of the families reſiding on South Bay, left their dwellings in the courſe of Saturday, expecting that if the gale continued it would be unſafe to remain in houſe.

Many of the coasting craft and wood boats, are drove ashore on the mashes and in the heads of the docks, and are much injured.

The gale was more violent & of much longer continuance, than the one which took place in 1783. From the description of the hurricane in 1752, we believe that to have been the most dreadful, though it is to be feared that the loss of property is now much greater than at any former period.

List of vessels lost and damaged in the gale.

Ship Halcyon, Manly, of Charleston, bound for Bourdeaux, much damaged, and unloading; ship Columbus of Charleston, sunk at the wharf; brig Concord of Providence, Oldrich, sunk at Prioleau's wharf; the has bilged and her stern has parted; English ship Christopher, from Africa, sunk at a wharf; brig Tartar, lately from Africa, gone to pieces; ship Lydia, Heyward, driven high up on Blake's dock; brig Unanimity, Wilson, driven against the Governor's bridge; brig Norfolk, ——, do. do.; schr. Rising Sun, on William's wharf, much damaged; schooner Mary, of Charleston, sunk at Ham's wharf; brig Thomas, Bishop, much injured in her upper works and sheathing.

Schr. Ann Eliza, bound for Nassau, upset in Ashley river; the crew seven in number remained on the bottom all night, and were taken off yesterday morning.

Brig Nancy, Spooner, driven into Dill's creek; brig Venus, of New York, ashore on James's Island; several schooners are also ashore on James's Island; schr. Theoda, Stimpson, from Salem, bilged, a great part of her cargo lost. Besides the foregoing, many are driven and jammed up in the docks, where they received considerable damage in their rigging, spars, and upper works; the ship Middleton, is also aground in a dock.

A Pindaric Ode.

As Joan one eve, according to the plan
Of many an honest spouse,
Trudg'd to a neighbouring house
To fetch away her good old man;
She found him, as the story goes,
Sprawling in the street,
With feet
Inclining, taking comfortable dose,
"What, ballad John!" the dame now cries,
"You drunken beast arise!"
At the well known voice, John op'd his eyes,
But!
As the poet says, their sense were shut!
And thinking 'twas a bed, I wean,
And not the street,
He mumbled out, his teeth between,
"Put, put more clothes upon my feet,
"And take, (the moon shone bright)
"Take, take away the light."

Singular instance of gratitude in a black servant.

Dr. L—Y, a gentleman of the highest respectability for character and fortune, from the persecution of his enemies and delays of law, has been confined to one of our metropolitan prisons for many years, while his fortune was withheld from him until his affairs were terminated. During this distressing procrastination, poverty had laid her last and fatal grasp on his finances, and he was under the necessity of declaring to his servant, that penury compelled them to part, however repugnant to his feelings, for he could no longer keep himself, such were his pecuniary difficulties. Honest Bob, by which name he is distinguished, replied with all the zeal of uncontaminated simplicity, "No, master, we will never part, many years have you kept me and now me will keep you." This honest fellow absolutely went into the surrounding gardens to work, and faithfully brought home his wages every week, by which means he sustained his master and himself, until the decision of one of his actions, by which his master obtained an award of 30,000l. and, to the honor of humanity, immediately settled on his servant for life an annuity of 200l.

MATRIMONY —An extract.

"When kind tumults seize the veins and all the yielding soul is love, "let the aspiring youth "beware" of making promises.

If a smiling season and the glowing cheek of beauty have exposed your heart to the arrows of love, make a truce with Cupid, till you experience the effect of December's chill frosts upon the ardor of your passion.

Spring love often freezes in the winter; and love once congealed, seldom pursues its old channel again.

Early marriages are a public blessing; but unhappy matches a private curse. A man in love is always generous, and a generous person never thinks himself poor.

A young man is too poor to marry till he has the certain means of earning, at least, three times as much in a year as he expends when single. While I am upon the subject of economies, I will suggest an economical, and I think, judicious way of carrying on a courtship: Instead of riding into the adjacent towns, and spending a dollar or two every week or a fortnight, let the young farmer procure a small farm and decent house, free from debt, and the business, though, perhaps, never thought of, is at last, half performed.

It is a light objection that your acquaintance with the sex will be too superficial for a good choice. The roving rake, who tells you he is in pursuit of a good wife, is hunting bad women, leave him to his course, and he will be overtaken by an untimely and inclement winter. Let temperance and industry strew your path, through the season of life, with the flowers of perpetual May.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER,

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR

GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith :—

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Councillors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to the Provincial Parliament at our Town of York, on the twenty-fifth day of October, to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you—

GREETING :

WHEREAS by our Proclamation bearing date the thirteenth day of September last, We thought fit by & with the advice of our Executive Council to prorogue our said Provincial Parliament until the twenty-fifth day of this present month of October, at which time in our Town of York you were held and constrained to appear, but we taking into our Royal consideration, the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice and content of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you and of each you that on the Third day of December next ensuing you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our said Province of Upper Canada, and there to do as may seem necessary. Herein fail not.

IN Testimony whereof, WE have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto Affixed.—WITNESS Our Trusty and Well-Beloved PETER HUNTER Esquire, Our Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Lieutenant General Commanding Our Forces in Our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at YORK, this eighteenth day of October, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Four, and in the Forty-fourth Year of Our Reign.

P. H.

By Command, &c.

Council Chamber, 20th Oct. 1804.

By his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

ORDERED,

THAT in cases wherein Locations have been made subject to Settling Duties, the parties be relieved from such Settling Duties upon the following conditions, viz.—That each person to whom such indulgence shall be granted, do, during the existence of this Order, pay into the hands of the Receiver General such Fees as would be required of the Emigrantry of Lord Dundonald, Table of 6th July, 1804. And that such parties who do not reside in York, be respectively required also, to annex to the Receiver General's Receipt a Power of Attorney, nominating some person resident in York as their Agent, to receive their Deed; which Power is to be lodged with the Surveyor General, previous to his describing the Land, and by him transmitted, with the Description, to the Secretary. But the cases in which the Lands front the Main Road, in which Main Road is intended to be included the principal Road from the Point of Bouderie to the Town of Sandwich, and also from the Town of York to Lake Simcoe, are to be considered as excepted out of this Order. And this Regulation is to be regarded as in force only for Twelve Months from the date hereof. JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

Agent for Purchases Office,

YORK, 20th October, 1804.

THE detriment that has arisen from the improper Curing and Packing of PORK, heretofore purchased for the use of His Majesty's Forces, and also the irregularity of the Number and Weight of the Pieces contained in the respective Casks of that Pork, render it necessary to notify to such persons who intend in future to supply the same, as follows :—

I. That the Pork so to be purchased, shall be of the best Quality and properly Cured with Rock or St. Ubes Salt, and packed in sound and sufficient Casks.

II. That such Pork shall be warranted to keep sweet and good for Twelve Months after its delivery into the King's Stores.

III. That each Cask shall contain Fifty-two Pieces of Four Pounds each, equal to Two Hundred and Eight Pounds nett.

IV. That such Casks as shall be found, when opened for issue, not exactly to correspond with what is above specified, shall be returned, and replaced with an equal quantity of good Pork, cured and packed in manner herein before mentioned.

V. That the future Sale of the above article to Government, will altogether depend upon an exact conformity to what is expressed in this Notice.

JOHN McGILL,
Agent for Purchases.

Latest Intelligence.

LONDON, August 11.

Downing street, August 9.

The King has been pleased to cause it to be signified by the Right Honorable Lord Hawkesbury, his Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, to the Ministers of Neutral Powers residing at this Court, that the necessary measures have been taken by his Majesty's command, for the blockade of the entrance of the ports of Boulogne, St. Valery en Caux, Dieppe, Treport, the Somme, Etaples, Boulogne, Calais, Gravelines, Dunkirk, Newport and Ostend; and that from this time, all the measures authorised by the law of nations, and the respective treaties between his Majesty and the different neutral powers, will be adopted and executed with respect to all vessels which may attempt to violate the said blockade.

August 14.

By accounts received on Saturday, from the squadron under of Sir R. Calder, off Rochefort, it appears that the enemy have five sail of the line and two frigates in readiness for sea. They used uncommon exertions in the equipment of the two 74 gun ships which were lately launched there, and for this purpose have withdrawn the hands from all the small craft. The 100 gun ship which was laid down about three months since, is so forward, that it is supposed she will be launched in the course of the year.

August 15.

The Hamburgh Mail of the 3d inst. has brought the following articles of important intelligence, which we extract from our private correspondence :—

HAMBURGH, August 3.

"In consequence of the refusal made by the Hanseatic cities of Hamburgh, Bremen, and Lubeck, to comply with the new pecuniary exactions of the French Government, Bremen has been invested for several days past by a detachment of the French army in Hanover; and no person is suffered to enter or depart from that city. They have even stopped all the supplies of provision, as the enemy completely blockades the place, it is impossible to ascertain by any direct information, whether they have proceeded to levy by military execution the sums they demand, but a rumour of this nature was in circulation this morning.

"The city of Lubeck persists in its refusal to pay the contribution demanded by the French, who have not yet had recourse to any menace probably from the fear of hastening a rupture with Russia, whose fleet is now riding in the Baltic. The last letters from St. Petersburgh state, that the Emperor Alexander continues to give decided proofs of his determination to espouse the interests of Louis the 18th.

"Intelligence has just been received here, that the navigation for small craft between Hamburgh and Tonningen, will, from this moment be free. In confirmation of this pleasing intelligence, the following diplomatic document is circulated in every part of the city :—

Copy of a letter from Lord Harrowby, his Britannic Majesty's Secretary of State, for the Foreign Department, to P. Colquhoun Graf, Esq.

Downing-street, July 18, 1814.

SIR,

"I have the honor to inform you, that I have paid due attention to the request contained in different letters of Mr. Matthiesen, on the part of the citizens of Hamburgh. That the lighters be permitted to navigate between the rivers Weser and Elbe.

"Orders have accordingly been sent to his Majesty's ships of the blockade to permit the passage of lighters, barges, and other small craft, answering the above description, and carrying unexceptionable goods for neutral account, and to suffer the same to pass without molestation to and fro, along the Danish side of the Elbe, through the Watten, between Tonningen and Hamburgh.

"His Majesty hopes, that his permission will be properly attended to, and not abused, and that no unfair advantages shall be taken of it, by which his Majesty should see himself forced to order the blockade to be resumed with the greatest fruitfulness.

"I have the honor to be, &c.

(Signed) HARROWBY."

"To P. Colquhoun Graf, Esq."

"Since the opening of the navigation between the Weser and Jade, the Danes too, have been permitted to sail, with twenty five of their herring smacks [illegible]

"On the 30th ultimo a his Britannic Majesty's [illegible] gun, of 18 guns, the name of which I do not, however known, arrived at the [illegible] work off Cuxhaven, and sent above a dispatch, which was delivered to a French officer. On Wednesday the sloop still continued on her station, and it does not appear that the answer to the dispatch had then been received. It is supposed that it was forwarded to the head quarters at Hanover, where the French Commander in Chief, Bernadotte, was at that time."

"This morning we received Dutch Journals of the 5th and 7th, and Monitours to the 3d inst.

They furnish the most lying accounts of the late bombardment of the port of Havre, and the gallant attempt made by the boats of the Leda frigate, under the command of Lieutenant Maclean, to carry a bomb vessel into Boulogne roads. We are assured that only an old woman and a girl were killed, and a few houses damaged at Havre, and that fourteen British tars were made prisoners without any resistance, by a French serjeant of carabineers, a tailor, and a few affidants at Boulogne. The Corsican has been several days employed in the harbour and vicinity of the latter place, in superintending the naval armaments and reviewing the troops. He had the satisfaction of seeing three divisions of his grand flotilla, which ventured into the road, pelted by the thirteen of our small ships of war.

A rumour has been prevalent at the Hague, that the Congress of the Court of Vienna will be exerted to effect peace between Great Britain and France. This rumour may be traced more to the eager wishes of the Dutch to have an end put to hostilities than to any authentic intelligence.

The affairs of Egypt still continue in confusion. The Beys having gained another victory, had, according to the last accounts, laid siege to Cairo.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.

A letter from Charleston, dated September 16. says, "business is nearly at an end since the dreadful hurricane upon the 7th inst. which has destroyed all the hopes of the planter and merchant —it is said, and I believe it, that what the caterpiller had left of cotton is totally ruined by the gale—such has been the effect that all the leaves of the live oak and ever green are blighted, and turning yellow—trees and shrubs more tender appear as if a fire had been kindled under them. The cotton being tender is beaten down, all the pods bruised, and of course will rot. The crop of rice is one half lost, and some planters entirely ruined.

"The whales are washed away to low water mark; ships, &c. drove upon, and up into the heads of docks, where they lay shattered, and must be dug out. I never witnessed such a scene. At Savannah they have suffered more in proportion; as the river being narrow, the water run higher by 8 or 10 feet than the usual high tides."

From the Georgia Republican, Sept. 14.

THE STORM.

Accounts continually furnish details of damage and distress occasioned by the late calamity. The plantations in the vicinity have suffered with the severest desolation. The rice, as well as the cotton, is now lost, and scarce a hope of reward for the toils of the season remains. The sufferings of the ensuing winter are expected to be great, in consequence of the destruction it has made.

We have not been able to learn its extent.

From a rough estimate of the damage sustained, we believe it is at least not short of the following, for the city only :—

	Dolls.
Buildings,	100,000
Wharves,	50,000
Goods,	100,000
Shipping,	100,000
Dollars,	350,000

Most people are of opinion that half a million would not make good the sufferers.

Some idea may be formed of the force and violence of the late storm, from the traces it has left at Cockipur. On that island not a vestige of the former buildings is remaining, and the surface is much below its former height.

A cannon, which weighs 4800 lbs. was carried thirty or forty feet from its position. A bar of lead, weighing 300lbs. was carried a hundred feet; cases of cannister shot were carried from 100 to 200 feet; and muskets are scattered all over the island.

We have since out last obtained a more particular account respecting the fate of the soldiers who were at Fort Green. From the account they give of their situation, it is truly distressing. At about ten o'clock on Saturday morning, the water had covered the whole surface of Cockipur Island. The soldiers, three of their wives, with two of their children, and a son of Capt. Nichols, a corporal in the house as the water rose; but this was so extremely rapid, that it was with difficulty they were enabled to get on the roof of the house. Here they continued for some time, and the wind blowing so high, that it was as much as they could do to keep in this situation; add to this, the incessant fall of rain prevented them from seeing twenty yards in any direction; about one o'clock, P. M. the house gave way, and every person on the roof floated with it; not long after the roof parted, and they were all separated, some having hold of part of the roof, others got plank or scantling, which were afloat from a vessel that had previously gone to pieces below them, loaded with lumber; and in this situation, those who were saved (eight in number) drifted on Wilmington Island, after having remained seven hours in the water—during the time they were in the water, the lumber to which they held, sometimes would be carried out of the water some distance by the violence of the wind, and some were very much bruised by pieces falling on them, being previously tossed in this way. The survivors suppose that some of their comrades were killed by blows from pieces of lumber; one of the soldiers by the name of Levy, was drowned in attempting to save the life of Capt. Nichols's son, another was saved by drifting on the top of a tree and came in 24 hours after the rest. Lieutenant Platt, commanding officer of the fort, with five of his men, were saved by a fortunate accident.—Finding it absolutely necessary to have fresh water, went with his boat & hands to procure some on Friday morning, when he came high enough up the river to obtain it, the gale increased so much from N. E. and a strong flood tide, that he was obliged to come to this city, and after that it was impossible for him to return; many of the soldiers who escaped are very much bruised and wounded by nails, splinters, &c.

The men who were lost were, Reuben Armstrong, corporal; William Crafts, musician; Daniel Levy, Thomas Moor, Joseph Whitaker, John Glynn, Samuel M. Williams, privates; John S. Nichols, son of captain Nichols.

A letter from Zante, (the capital of the Island of that name, belonging to the Republic of Seven Islands) dated June 10, 1814, "Earthquakes are very frequent here this year. Santa Maura, (formerly called Leucadia,) and Zante, are particularly subject to them. The latter island appears quite undermined, as the well of pitch and rosin is flowing continually. We experienced a considerable shock on the 7th, at midnight. During a perfect calm and suffocating heat, there arose a terrible blowing noise which lasted two seconds; it was followed by a violent shock, when the houses shook, and beams and ceilings cracked. On the second shock bricks and mortar fell from the ceilings, bolted doors and windows burst open, the bells were set a ringing, and people could not stand upright. This scene of terror lasted from 30 to 40 minutes. Three hours after the 2d earthquake was felt, which, though pretty violent, was less so and of shorter duration than the former. Earthquakes are so frequent here, that they are hardly noticed, unless they are very powerful. Upwards of an hundred have been felt here during 15 months; but there were only four or five of them considerably violent. The present caused a general consternation and called back to our recollection the terrible one of thirteen years ago, when the island appeared ready to be swallowed up; the fortifications and many houses fell to ruins, many lives were lost. This time we got off with only some walls and chimnies thrown down and others cracked. Less violent shocks were felt on the 8th and 9th, which lasted from six to ten seconds, while the heat was increasing.

"A traveller who returned this day from Patrosso, in Morea, brought us some account of this phenomenon. He arrived at Patrosso, 50 hours sail from thence, on the evening of the 7th, but he remained on board of the vessel which cast anchor 1000 paces distant. At midnight, the earthquake was felt, the dreadful effect of which he is not able to describe. It was preceded by a most violent wind and howling noise under ground. The cracking of the houses in the town, the screaming of the inhabitants, the conflict of the elements, the violent agitation of the sea against the vessels which cracked as if beating into a thousand pieces, in short every thing combined to spread terror and dismay. Many people lost their lives, and still more were wounded. The villages along the coast and up the country are nearly destroyed, and we have not yet any exact account how far the destruction extended."

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at Natchez to his friend in Pittsburgh, dated August 15.

"Mr. Kemper, formerly a merchant at Bayon Sara, has lately made an attempt to possess himself of Baton Rouge, having under his command between 40 and 50 men; he marched from the neighbourhood of the line of demarcation between this territory and West Florida, on the 7th inst. On their way they made prisoners of Alcade O'Connops, Pintado the surveyor, and an officer of the militia, and burnt Pintado's house and gin. They arrived on the following morning about day-light, near the fort. The Spanish commandant, apprized of their intentions, had posted a piquet of eighteen or twenty men, who hailed the party as they approached—they immediately answered by a volley from their rifles, which dispersed the Spaniards, two of whom were observed to fall. Kemper returned on the following day with his party, to Bayon Sara, and encamped near the house of a Mr. Cobb.—Col. Fulton was sent after them with a command of 200 men. It was reported yesterday that Fulton was within twelve miles of Kemper's camp, and that the latter was preparing to set out to meet him, determined to give him battle. The whole province of Louisiana from the Belize to Nachitoches, Apelusis, &c. are nearly in a state of rebellion, they are dissatisfied with the present mode of government, and declare they will be a state, enact laws for themselves, appoint their own Governor, &c."

P. S. This moment the mail arrived from New Orleans; Kemper and his party did not stand to fight."

The following extract of a letter to the proprietor of the Alexandria Expositor is from a gentleman of great scientific and mechanical talents, now resident in England. "I saw a letter from Dr. Beleomb of York to a friend of mine, in which he mentioned a letter he had received from Dr. Beddoes on a discovery for the cure of the gout, which has never failed. The discoverer said that no more was to be feared from an attack of the gout than from the common operation of bleeding. The history of the discovery was this, that the discoverer having a kind of a rheumatic gout which withstood all the remedies before known, he despaired of relief from medicine—but being one day, out one day, which in that condition could not be expected to be far, he espied some fruit of which the birds eat freely. As it was not ranked among the Materia Medica, curiosity induced him to taste, and finding though the taste was odd it was not disagreeable, he frequently eat of it, and in consequence, was soon free from his complaint. Having thus experienced the benefit of his discovery, he then began to try its efficacy on others; in this practice he met with the greatest success, so that the fame of this discovery reached the ears of Dr. Beddoes, who willed to have the fact ascertained the expence be what it might. He therefore wrote to the discoverer, offering him a considerable sum therefor, and a promise of strict secrecy. The discoverer wrote to him again that he was agreeable, upon his honor, to discover it to him without reward, hoping for his assistance in procuring either a private subscription or parliamentary reward, and accordingly discovered it to the doctor. It has been given by Dr. Beddoes with the same success. This relation struck me forcibly, and on recollecting some extraordinary cases that I had heard, I conjectured that the fruit must be IVY BERRIES. On my meeting with my medical friend I told him my suspicion. He seemed to join with me in the opinion, but we have as yet had no opportunity to confirm by trial their effects."

In addressing a volunteer corps in Wales some time since, the worthy Clergyman made use of the following language: "But, neighbors, let it not be said that I, the minister of peace, am going out of my province to urge you to deeds of blood; or that, in a spirit of selfishness, I prompt you to dangers which I am unwilling to share with you. No!—those deeds of blood are not of our seeking. If the unbridled ambition of France invade our free soil, we have no choice—we must defend ourselves or perish. The brave seek not blood, but will shed the last drop of their own in the cause of their country. And I pray you to consider me not in the light of one who, urging you to deeds of valor, means himself, on the approach of danger, to retire in safety by favor of your arms: I have no such intention, believe me. My professional engagements forbid me now to take upon me the character and occupation of a soldier; but my profession authorizes me to exhort you to be true to your King, your Country, and your God. When the land is once defiled by the touch of the French footsteps, that difficulty will cease; then it may be my duty to join you; then it will be my glory to fall with you, if fall we must, or to share the honor, happiness, and well assured security, which I trust are in reserve for us. And I urge it as my concluding request to you—to your Commander—however numerous your enrolment (and I hope it will comprise all who have the ability to march) I urge it as my most earnest request, that you will reserve a single musket, and that (if no employ is allotted me wherein I can be more useful to my country) you will allow me to bear it in your ranks." London paper.

LOSS OF THE SPEEDY.

The following is as accurate an account of the loss of the schooner Speedy, in his Majesty's service on L. Ontario, as we have been able to collect :—

The Speedy, Capt. Paxton, left this port on Sunday evening the 9th of October last, with a moderate breeze from the N. W. for Presque Isle, and was detected off that island on the Monday following before dark, where preparations were made for the reception of the passengers; but the wind coming round from the N. E. blew with such violence as to render it impossible for her to enter the harbor, and very shortly after she disappeared. A large fire was then kindled on shore, as a guide to the vessel during the night; but she has not since been seen or heard of, and it is with the most painful sensations, we have to say, we fear is totally lost. Enquiry we understand, has been made at almost every port on the Lake, but without effect; and no intelligence respecting the fate of this unfortunate vessel could be obtained; it is therefore generally concluded that she has either upset or foundered. It is also reported by respectable authority, that several articles, such as the compass box, binnacle, and mast, known to have belonged to this vessel, have been picked up on the opposite side of the Lake.

The passengers on board the ill-fated Speedy, as near as we can recollect, were Mr. Justice Cochrane, Robert I. D. Gray, Esq; Solicitor General, and Member of the House of Assembly, Angus M'Donell, Esq; Advocate, also a Member of the House of Assembly, Mr. Jacob Hertchmer, merchant, Mr. John Stegmann, surveyor, Mr. George Cowan, Indian interpreter, James Ruggles, Esq; Mr. Anderton, Student in the Law, Mr. John Fisk, High Constable, all of this place. The above named gentlemen were proceeding to the District of Newcastle, in order to hold the Circuit, and for the trial of an Indian (also on board the Speedy) indicted for the murder of John Sharp, late of the Queen's Rangers.—It is also reported, but we cannot vouch for its authenticity, that exclusive of the above passengers, there were on board two other persons, one in the service of Mr. Justice Cochrane and the other in that of the Solicitor General, as also two children of parents whose indigent circumstances necessitated them to travel by land.

The crew of the Speedy it is said, consisted of five seamen, (three of whom have left large families) exclusive of Capt: Paxton, who also had a very large family.—The total number of souls on board the Speedy is computed to be about twenty.

A more distressing and melancholy event has not occurred to this place for many years—nor does it often happen that such a number of persons of respectability are collected in the same vessel.—Not less than nine widows and we know not how many children, have to lament the loss of their husbands and fathers, who alas! have, perhaps in the course of few minutes, met with a watery grave!

It is somewhat remarkable, that this is the third or fourth accident of a similar nature within these few years—the cause of which appears worthy the attention and investigation of persons conversant in the art of ship building.

From the NORFOLK HERALD.

Messrs. Printers

In the last Herald is published, a particular account of the loss of the brig Hermes, Capt Thomas Homans, from Madeira bound to Boston, with wine and ballast: viz. that "on Monday, July 22d, they were scudding in a gale, under the forefail, that their tiller broke clear to the rudder head, on which the brig instantly broached to, upset and filled; and that three only of the crew out of eight escaped, after having been 25 days on the quarter deck, without any nourishment except a piece of a hide which they found in the crotch of the quarter deck, & salt water to drink."

Having once been in a similar situation, I think it incumbent on me to relate how we escaped the fate of the Hermes, for the benefit of those who may hereafter find it their interest to pursue some such plan as we adopted. Being on board a vessel loaded with tobacco from this state, bound to Great Britain, on the 23d of January, 1796, in a violent gale of wind, and scudding under a reefed forefail, at 5 P. M. the vessel pooped, shipped a dangerous sea, which broke the tiller off at the mortise. The Captain being on deck cutting the helmsman, immediately after the stroke of the sea, perceived something amiss by the confusion of the man at the wheel, and on turning round his head, saw the tiller lying on the deck, he at the same time found the vessel was flying up in the wind; he instantly called all hands, and at the same time, let go the weather fore brace, flew to the lee one, and with the assistance of those on deck, braced up the fore yard; by this time the people from below were up, and all hands sprung forward and hawled aft the fore-sheet; and as it was a constant practice with this captain to scud with one tack down, the simple manoeuvre above described was all that was necessary to prevent the forefail from being taken aback, and the vessel immediately broaching to.—But after the sheet was aft, the vessel after coming up to the wind, began to fall off as was expected. A purchasing bar being at hand, was hitched to the rudder head, so as to enable us to put the helm a-lee, and lay the vessel too, 'till the carpenter fitted the tiller afresh; and we proceeded on the voyage without experiencing any loss or inconvenience except a detention while the tiller was fitting.

When vessels lose their masts at sea, it is generally owing to their broaching to; when they are upset, it is almost always a consequence of loss of rudder; and when they are never heard of after leaving port, we may reasonably imagine it proceeds from some such cause. It is almost impossible for a vessel to avoid broaching to when deprived of the means of steering, whilst scudding in a heavy gale; but as one vessel at least, has been relieved when suddenly reduced to this melancholy situation, to others after being informed of the means, may also experience the same beneficial effect.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER,
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith &c.

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Counsellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to the Provincial Parliament at our Town of York, on the twenty-fifth day of October, to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you—

GREETING:

WHereas by our Proclamation bearing date the thirteenth day of September last, We thought fit by & with the advice of our Executive Council to prorogue our said Provincial Parliament until the twenty-fifth day of this present month of October, at which time in our Town of York you were held and constrained to appear, but we taking into our Royal consideration, the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice and content of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you and of each you that on the Third day of December next ensuing you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our said Province of Upper Canada, and there to do as may seem necessary. Herein fail not.

IN Testimony whereof, WE have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto Affixed:—WITNESS Our Trusty and Well-Beloved PETER HUNTER Esquire, Our Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Lieutenant General Commanding Our Forces in Our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at YORK, this eighteenth day of October, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Four, and in the Forty-fourth Year of Our Reign.

P. H.

By his Excellency's Command,
WM. JARVIS, Secretary.

Council Chamber, 18th Oct. 1804.

By his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

ORDERED,

THAT in cases wherein Locations have been made subject to Settling Duties, the parties be relieved from those Settling Duties upon the following conditions, viz.—That each person to whom such indulgence shall be granted, do, during the existence of this Order, pay into the hands of the Receiver General such Fees as would be required for the same quantity of Land under the Table of 6th July, 1804. And that such parties who do not reside in York, be respectively required also, to annex to the Receiver General's Receipt a Power of Attorney, nominating some person resident in York as their Agent, to receive their Deed; which Power is to be lodged with the Surveyor General, previous to his describing the Land, and by him transmitted, with the Description, to the Secretary. But the cases in which the Lands front the Main Road, in which Main Road is intended to be included the principal Road from the Point of Boudette to the Town of Sandwich, and also from the Town of York to Lake Simcoe, are to be considered as excepted out of this Order. And this Regulation is to be regarded as in force only for Twelve Months from the date hereof.

JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

Agent for Purchases Office,
YORK, 20th October, 1804.

THE detriment that has arisen from the improper Curing and Packing of PORK, heretofore purchased for the use of His Majesty's Forces, and also the irregularity of the Number and Weight of the Pieces contained in the respective Casks of that Pork, render it necessary to notify to such persons who intend in future to supply the same, as follows:—

I. That the Pork so to be purchased, shall be of the best Quality and properly Cured with Rock or St. Ubes Salt, and packed in sound and sufficient Casks.

II. That such Pork shall be warranted to keep sweet and good for Twelve Months after its delivery into the King's Stores.

III. That each Cask shall contain Fifty-two Pieces of Four Pounds each, equal to Two Hundred and Eight Pounds nett.

IV. That such Casks as shall be found, when opened for issue, not exactly to correspond with what is above specified, shall be returned, and replaced with an equal quantity of good Pork, cured and packed in manner herein before mentioned.

V. That the future Sale of the above article to Government, will altogether depend upon an exact conformity to what is expressed in this Notice.

JOHN M'GILL,
Agent for Purchases.

Clerk of the Peace's Office,
Home District, York, 25th Oct. 1804.

PUBLIC NOTICE.

I Am commanded by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor to signify, "that no Petitions will be received in "future by the Lieut. Governor in "Council, for Lands to such persons "as state themselves to be the Sons of "U. E. Loyalists, unless they respectively shall personally appear before "the Lieut. Governor in Council, and "produce satisfactory proofs of the "truth of such statement.

"This Order is not to extend to the "Daughters of U. E. Loyalists, whose "claims will be received as formerly."

NEW-YORK, October 10.

Translated for the Mercantile Advertiser.

NOMINATION of the EMPEROR of HAYTI, J. J. DESSALINES.

We, Generals of the Army of Hayti, desirous of consecrating by an authentic act the wish of our heart, and to answer to the strongly pronounced will of the people of Hayti:

Persuaded that the supreme authority should be undivided, and that the interest of the country requires the seine of the administration to be placed in the hands of him who unites the confidence, the affections and the love of his fellow citizens:

Well convinced, by cruel experience, and by the history of nations, that a people cannot be properly governed but by one man; and that he only is worthy of the preference who, by his services, his influence, and his talents, has known how to consolidate the edifice of our independence and liberty:

Considering that, after so long a lot ties of misfortunes and of vicissitudes, it is necessary to assure the guaranty and safety of the citizens in a manner durable and irrevocable; and that the most certain method of attaining this object is to bestow upon the only chief capable of representing and governing the nation worthily an august and sacred title which will concentrate in him the forces of the state, will be imposing abroad, and will be the pledge of tranquility and prosperity at home;

Considering that the title of Governor General, heretofore conferred on the Citizen Jean Jacques Dessalines, does not express in a satisfactory manner the general with, as it supposes a secondary power depending upon a foreign authority whose yoke we have shaken off for ever:

Without having any longer regard to the constant and obstinate refusal of Citizen Jean Jacques Dessalines to accept the power which had been delegated to him by the people and the army at the epoch of the declaration of our independence, such refusal being contrary to the interests, the wishes, and the welfare of this country:

We confer upon the said Jean Jacques Dessalines the title of EMPEROR OF HAYTI, and the right of chusing and nominating his successor.

We desire that this free expression of our hearts, already called for by the people, be offered to its sanction with the least delay, and receive its prompt and entire execution by a decree from the Senate which shall be extraordinarily convoked for that purpose.

At Port au Prince, the 25 January, in the year 1804, the first of the Independence of Hayti:

(Signed) VERNET, Minister of finances; CLERVAUX; CHRIST PHE. commandant of the division of the north; PETION; GABARD; and GEFFRARD, Commandant of the division and counsellors of state.

[To these signatures in our French copy, are 258 others, consisting of counsellors of state, staff officers, and the heads of the different departments of government.]

October 15.

By the arrival at this port of the ship Factor, Capt. Caldwell, from Greenock, we have received London papers to the 17th and Greenock to the 21st of August inclusive.

GREENOCK, Aug. 21.

Since our last very little has occurred of material public importance. Invasion continues to be the order of the day on both sides of the channel. The Emperor is embarking and disembarking on the one side; whilst our illustrious commander in chief is equally busy, in reviewing and setting in array, on the other.

It appears that the fleet under Lord Nelson, has been annoying the enemy near Marseilles. The attempt made by them, in their accounts, to disguise the fact, only tends to confirm it. He has also taken possession of the largest of the Hieres islands to the south of Toulon, with 1800 men and 18 pieces of cannon, and established there an hospital for 600 sick sailors. The fleet of Admiral Nelson off Toulon consists of 29 sail.

By the last Hamburgh mail the following statement has been received of the force of the Russian Imperial army:

Exclusive of 72,770 invalids, it consists in the whole of 833,850 men, amongst which 42,919 are artillerymen, 70,664 soldiers in garrison, 219,125 field infantry, 49,738 cavalry, 9,363 foot guards, and 3,316 horse guards.

LONDON, August 16—17.

Dispatches have been received at the Admiralty from Lord Nelson, and numbers of private letters are in town down to the 7th July, which state, that the French fleet are apparently ready for sea.

Dispatches were on Wednesday received at the Admiralty from Sir James Saumarez, at Jersey, which state, that an expectation was daily entertained of an attack from the enemy, several movements having of late been observed to have taken place. Dispatches were also received from Admiral Thornborough, dated off the Texel, the 11th inst.—The enemy remained nearly in the same position as they did when the previous accounts were transmitted.

Dispatches were on Wednesday received from the Brest squadron. The enemy, we learn, are still in the outer harbour watching an opportunity to escape, which, if the elements do not interfere, we trust that the vigilance and seamanship of our squadron will never afford.

Some of our cruizers off the coast of Holland and Flanders last week looked into the Roads of Flushing and Ostend. In the former were thirty four vessels of different descriptions; and in the latter fifty-six were counted, mostly gunboats and cutters, as all the transports had been removed into the canal coming from Bruges, and their number could not therefore be ascertained. Information has been received, that 44 more gun boats and flat bottomed boats, built upon the banks of the Moselle, had descended the Rhine, and were in the waters of Holland, and would probably in a week arrive at Flushing, to be fitted out there. An aid de-camp of Admiral Verhuel had brought orders from Gen. Monnet, commander of the French troops in Zealand, to hasten the departure of all armed vessels through the interior canals of Flanders. All neutral vessels from the Dutch harbours report, that the common opinion in Holland is, that Bonaparte intends to have the expedition undertaken soon; but at the same time, that his officers and men are no more so sanguine in their expectations of an easy conquest of this country, or speak with the same contempt of the nation of shop keepers, as they did last year. Some superior officers, who have dared to remonstrate against a landing of an army embarked in gunboats unprotected by men of war, have been broken by Bonaparte.

The Bengal fleet, consisting of seven ships, and estimated at 2,000,000l. is expected to arrive before the 1st of next month, and no apprehensions are now entertained for their safety.

The Marquis Wellesley has transmitted a notification of his design to quit Bengal early in the ensuing season.

The Court of Directors of the East-India House have voted the following sums to the Captains, officers, and seamen of the China fleet, for their gallant conduct in beating off the French squadron under Admiral Linois:

To Captain Dance, 2000 guineas, and a piece of plate of the value of 200 guineas; Capt. Timens 1000 do. and a piece of plate value 100 do. Captain Moffatt, 500 do. and a piece of plate value 100 do. Capts. Henry, Wilson, Farquharson, Torin, Clarke, Menton, Wordsworth, Kirkpatrick, Hamilton, Farrer, Pendergrass, Brown, Larkins, and Luckner, 500 each, plate 50; chief officers, 150 guineas each; second do. 125; third, fourth, purfers and surgeons 80; fifth, sixth, surgeons mates, boatswains, gunners and carpenters, 50 each; midshipmen, 30; other petty officers, 13; seamen, ordinary seamen, and servants 6.

Lieutenant Fowler, passenger on board the Camden, Capt. Dance, for the services he rendered, 300 guineas for a piece of plate.

The value of the fleet thus saved, on an estimate thus made by the supercargoes, including the private as well as the public investments appears to be 8,000,000l. sterling.

The Court in addition to the above bounty to the officers and crews, have resolved, that the usual gratuity of 30l. and a pension from the Popular Fund, shall be granted to the nearest relative of the seaman who fell in the action with Linois.

Monitieurs to the 4th inst. are received, but they bring very little intelligence.—Bonaparte continued on the coast as late as the 1st inst. reviewing the troops destined for the invasion of this country: he was at Ambleteuse on that day.

It is stated in the Moniteur of the 4th, that Ibrahim Bey, at the head of the Mamelukes, had made himself master of Boualac and old Cairo.

Private letters have been received by the Hamburgh mail, which state, that the French, having failed in their attempts to raise a loan in Bremen, had actually blockaded that city, and had threatened, if the money was not immediately advanced, to raise it by military execution.

It has been the invariable practice of the French since the revolution, to maintain their armies at the expence of other states, and the different governments of France have, when plunder was to be obtained, made very little difference between enemies, neutrals or allies.

Application has also been made to the city of Lubeck for a loan, which has been refused. These outrages of the French must accelerate that confederacy of the Northern Powers of which Bonaparte seems to feel such an apprehension; and the circumstances of Louis XVIII. having left Warsaw, leads us to suppose that the Emperor of Russia will very soon take a decided part against France.

Accounts from Genoa state, that Admiral Nelson has captured and burnt 5 Genoese merchant ships, near Marseilles; and that the largest of the Hieres islands, to the south of Toulon, has been taken. The English have established an hospital there for sick sailors.

The King of Sweden is arrived from Pintz.

Bonaparte is expected at Antwerp.

His Majesty sets out for Weymouth in a few days, at which place he will be attended by the yachts now on the river, and by a frigate or two.

Part of Lord G. L. Gower's baggage, with ten horses and four carriages, was embarked on Monday and sailed on Tuesday for St. Petersburgh from Northfleet, near Gravesend; and on Wednesday next, his Lordship and suite will leave Whitehall for Yarmouth, where the Ambuscade frigate is waiting to receive him. His Lordship will be accompanied by the Hon. Mr. Ponsonby, youngest son of the Earl of Bessborough, with his private Secretary Mr. Stewart, and his public Secretary Mr. Ross, and eleven domestics. The state livery prepared on the occasion is the grandest ever carried out to Russia by any Ambassador.

By the ship Sophrona from Bourdeaux, we have received Paris papers to the 12th August, inclusive. They are filled principally with accounts of the reception of Bonaparte at the different towns on the coast, which he is visiting for the purpose of inspecting the troops composing the army of invasion; and with addresses to the different branches of the Imperial family, conceived in terms of the most servile adulation. Indeed we have discovered very few articles worth translating.

The minister of the interior, Chaptal, has given in his resignation. M. Champagny is appointed his successor; and the papers of his office are in the mean time confided to M. Portalis.

NEW YORK, OCTOBER 19.

The passengers from the ship Iris arrived here yesterday by way of New-London. They left the vessel on Tuesday evening, off Martha's Vineyard, in her way to this port. She sailed from London on the 24th of August, and we have been favoured with papers brought by her of the 22d and 23d. The intermediate dates from the 18th to the 22d being wanting, we are unable to lay before our readers the particulars of a plot which we find has been discovered for taking away the life of Louis XVIII and the principal officers attached to his person.

The Iris, a fortnight ago, spoke the ship Orlando, Marschalk, who sailed from Amsterdam on the 22d for this port; and was informed by captain M. that the Emperor of Russia had declared war against France, and that he had a paper on board containing the official declaration. The Iris fell in with the Orlando a second time on the 14th instant, all well.

The following are the only interesting articles in the papers which have come into our hands.

LONDON, August 22.

Private advices received by the French Journals state, that the Russian squadron, consisting of ten sail of the line and several frigates, had arrived in Copenhagen Roads the beginning of the present month, and landed 10,000 troops. It is added, that another squadron, with 20,000 men, was shortly expected in the same direction; and there is reason to hope, that a very considerable portion of the forces of Russia, both military and naval, will ere long be employed in the great work of restoring those ancient barriers, which Gallic perfidy and aggression have nearly laid in ruins. We view the landing of the Russian force in Denmark, however small, as a circumstance highly auspicious to the common cause, and as the prelude to a powerful confederacy, which is to rescue Europe from its present degraded state. A Russian army marched through Denmark for the North of Germany, and co-operating with the forces of that country and of Sweden, will be the signal for all other Powers of the Continent to assert their rights, and avenge their grievous wrongs; and from these internal efforts, aided by the vigorous external impulse of Great-Britain the most happy result may not unreasonably be expected. All the Powers of the Continent are at length convinced, that it is not by mild or temporizing expedients that the necessary bounds are likely to be set to the ambition and rapacity of France; and that the safety and independence of their several States will be soon still more endangered, if they do not, with becoming spirit, interfere to avert the evil with which they every day become more seriously threatened. Such is the insolence with which the rude Usurper tyrannizes over the neighbouring States, that, according to a private letter from Hamburgh, he caused to be intimated to the Elector of Baden, that the conduct of his son in law, the King of Sweden, in presuming to take notice of the murder of the Duke D'Enghien, was so displeasing to him (the Corsican) that if the elector allowed His Swedish Majesty to remain in his territories, he might expect an immediate visit from 30,000 French troops. The fact sufficiently accounts for the suddenness of His Majesty's departure from Carlsruhe; but from the subsequent conduct of this spirited young Monarch, there is every reason to hope, that his present journey will prove not unbeneficial to the cause of Europe and humanity. The Emperor of Russia lately paid a second visit to his fleet at Cronstadt, when he expressed himself highly gratified with the various naval evolutions performed on the occasion.

In our account of the attempt against the life of Louis XVIII published on Monday, we omitted the following particulars, which appear in the second declaration of Coulon, viz. That two strangers came at one o'clock in the morning, and opened the great door of the house where Coulon lived, by means as he supposed, of a picklock; and that they afterwards endeavoured to pick the lock of the door leading to the staircase; in which, however, they could not succeed, as the key remained in the lock, and Coulon held it fast within-side. He at the same time overheard a person say, "the plan has failed, we must immediately inform Boyer of it and be off." It was observed by another, "mark! had the money been given." They continued to speak still further, but in so low a tone as not to be heard by Coulon.—What their intention was may easily be conjectured. But a review of what followed the detection of the plot, and what to peculiarly marks and characterises the conduct of the Magistrates and Governor of Warsaw, if it gives room but to little surprize, it has abundant, however, in it to excite indignation and contempt. What could be more insultingly disrespectful to the dignity and the situation of Louis XVIII than the hesitation and delay betrayed in the conduct of the President D'Hoym, in returning a proper answer to the letter of His Majesty?

What more shuffling and evasive than the reasons assigned for not immediately securing the persons of the conspirators, or for not appointing a commission to analyse the suspected nature of the parcel. Such a conduct may not be unworthy of men whose honour or conscience place no obstacle to the execution, not only of whatever express orders they may receive, but even of what they may idly surmise to be the secret wish and spirit of the Power from whom they hold their office and authority. Letters received at Hamburgh from Warsaw on the 10th inst. confirm the accounts already received of this atrocious conspiracy, and add, that the French Emissaries involved in it, had effected their escape; they also mention, indeed, that President Hoym, the Governor of Warsaw, and the Prussian City Council, had transmitted a protocol of the whole plot to the Court of Berlin; but what, in the interim, had been the consequence of their first indecision?—We shall take the first opportunity returning to this subject.

We are informed the Kentish coast, that part of our blockading squadron have again been forced to return to Dungeness by unfavourable winds. Several of the enemy's boats came out of Boulogne harbour on Monday evening but soon returned without giving our cruizers an opportunity of sharing in their manœuvres. Upwards of 40 gun vessels of different descriptions have lately arrived at Flushing from the interior of Holland. To man these, a very great press took place at Rotterdam. They are destined to join the flotilla at Ostend. In the Texel, there are six ships of the line, and a proportionate number of frigates and cutters, ready to put to sea at the shortest notice.

August 23.

A plot is said to have been discovered for taking off the King of Sweden by poison in his late journey from Bohemia to Munich: but we have not yet learned the particulars.

Some of our vessels called at Algiers on the 10th ult. where they were well received. The Dey not only behaved with great civility to the officers, but sent with them an Envoy for England, with overtures for settling amicably the differences which have existed between the two Powers ever since the dismissal of Mr. Falcon, the British Consul.

The news of Bonaparte's attempt to poison Louis XVIII caused such indignation at Berlin, that his Minister, La Forest, had been insulted, both in the streets, and in the Theatre, by the public; and whilst at Court, and in the Casino, every Member of the Diplomatic Corps, with the exception of the Italian and Batavian Ministers, shunned him, and avoided speaking to him. This indignation was augmented after the arrival of another courier with information of Bonaparte's Commercial Agent, Boyer's new endeavours either to bribe over with money, or to intimidate by threats, the Frenchman, Coulon, who discovered this base and atrocious plot.

Private letters from Paris, of the 6th, say, that when, after the late trial of Moreau, Georges, and the other pretended conspirators, the Temple was emptied of its prisoners, and considerable repairs were made to lodge conveniently State prisoners of rank and confideration, whom the Parisians believed to be the Kings of Naples and Spain, as being branches of the Bourbon family.

Parliament is further prorogued until the 4th of October.

FROM LATE LONDON PAPERS.

PARIS, July 14.

An inhabitant of Africa has made a very valuable discovery. A plant which grows every where in Europe and Asia, in marshy and damp places, and on the banks of rivers, called by the botanists Butomus Cimbellatus, produces, after a short and easy preparation, flour, of which bread may be made almost as white as wheaten bread. The inventor has sent a simple both of the flour and of the bread to the Minister of the Interior, and in return received from the Emperor a very valuable present.

The army which the Turkish Government means to send against the Rebels in Romelia, will amount to 100,000 men: most of those troops were come from Asia, and have already passed through Constantinople.

The commerce of Spain with the Black Sea increases too surprising ame

...ger, and is very advantageous to the Spanish merchants, whose profits on this trade amount to no less than 200 per cent. This will be the case with our merchants at Marseilles, and in other sea ports of the Mediterranean, when once peace permits these to employ their industry and capitals in what speculations they think proper.

The Emperor has ordered the letters R. F. (Republique Francaise) on the buttons of the troops, to be changed into E. F. (Empire Francois). The expence for the whole army will amount to no more than 600,000 livres, or 25,000l. which the Emperor gives from his private purse.

In honour of the French painter Poussin, called the Raphael of France, the Emperor has ordered not only a medal to be struck, but a statue of marble to be erected on the place near the Museum, in the Louvre.

FRENCH TRIAL.

FROM JOURNAL DES TRIBUNAUX.

JACQUES NOTTIER, an invalid, aged 25, having loft his right leg in the ſervice of the republic, appeared on the 16th Ventoſe, before the criminal tribunal of the department of the Seine, accuſed of having married within the laſt eight months, three different women, Maria Debaud, Maria Bertrand, and Louiſa Perrani, who were all preſent and proved their acts of marriage before the 2d, 4th, and 9th municipalities of Paris. During the trial it came out, that the priſoner had made it for years a regular practice to marry a new wife, wherever he went with his regiment: and to the knowledge of his own brother he had already 14 French wives alive, beſides one Italian, one Swiſs, and two Dutch women who had been married to him in thoſe countries, when in garriſon, or encamped there. Before he was eighteen he had been divorced, according to the laws of the republic, from five wives, not included in the above number, by whom he had ſix children; and the three wives now before the tribunal all declared themſelves to be in a ſtate of pregnancy by him. Being aſked by the public accuſer if he had many children with the other women not preſent, though known to be married to him? he anſwered coolly, "I had at leaſt one with each woman, and I believe that I have as many children alive as I can count years." He offered to give the names and places of reſidence of as many wives as he could remember to have married; —and gave the names of eleven in eleven different departments. To gain time to inquire after theſe women, the commiſſary of government propoſed, and the tribunal conſented, to put off his trial until the 6th of Germinal, on which day, eight of thoſe women, each with a child, came before the tribunal, and identified their faithleſs huſband, who had the impudence to declare, that if he had been Grand Sultan, he ſhould have kept them all with the ſame affection. After a trial of three hours, he was found guilty of Bigamy, and condemned to be puniſhed with a ſorty-eight's impriſonment, and to regard Anna Varois, whom he had married nine years ago, as his only wife. To this he refuſed to aſſent, ſaying, that inſtead of puniſhment, he deſerved a reward; and that many perſons had been made members of the legion of honor for leſs patriotic deeds than his, and that he intended to petition the firſt conſul for obtaining permiſſion to chuſe his own wife from among his own wives.

In the mad-houſe, at Aix-la-Chapelle is an inſane man, whoſe madneſs has been ſubject to ſurpriſing and periodical changes. He has been ſhut up there for fifteen years.—For the three firſt years he never ſpoke a word but was continually ſilent.—During the three following he ſeldom ceaſed to ſpeak either night or day. Afterwards he laughed for three years, and in ſuch a violent manner, that he often fell into convulſions. When this period was over, he began to whiſtle from morning to night, from night to morning, ſo that many perſons apprehended, what want of reſt muſt kill him. I will ſoon be three years ſince he began to cry in ſuch a manner, that he has already loſt the ſight of one eye, and, ſhould he not ſoon leave it off, he muſt probably in a ſhort time be entirely blind. He is thirty five years of age, but looks as if he had paſſed three ſcore and ten. His only food for the laſt fifteen years has been, in every 24 hours two ſlices of bread; and his only drink two glaſſes of water.

PROCLAMATION,

PETER HUNTER,
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith &c.

To our beloved and faithful Legiſlative Councillor of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes of our ſaid Province, to the Provincial Parliament at our Town of York, on the twenty-fifth day of October, to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you—

GREETING:

WHereas by our Proclamation bearing date the thirteenth day of Septem. laſt, We thought fit by & with the advice of our Executive Council to prorogue our ſaid Provincial Parliament until the twenty-fifth day of this preſent month of October, at which time in our Town of York you were held and conſtrained to appear, but we taking into our Royal conſideration, the eaſe and convenience of our loving ſubjects, have thought fit by and with the advice and conſent of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforeſaid, hereby convoking, and by theſe preſents enjoining you and of each you that on the Third day of December next enſuing you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into conſideration the ſtate and welfare of our ſaid Province of Upper Canada, and there to do as may ſeem neceſſary. Herein fail not.

IN Teſtimony whereof, WE have cauſed theſe Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our ſaid Province to be hereunto Affixed:—WITNESS Our Truſty and Well-Beloved PETER HUNTER Eſquire, Our Lieutenant Governor of Our ſaid Province, and Lieutenant General Commanding Our Forces in Our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at YORK, this eighteenth day of October, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Four, and in the Forty-fourth Year of Our Reign.

P. M.

WM. JARVIS, Secretary.

Council Chamber, 18th Oct. 1804.

By his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

ORDERED,

THAT, in caſes wherein Locations have been made ſubject to Settling Duties, the parties be relieved from thoſe Settling Duties upon the following conditions, viz.—That each perſon to whom ſuch indulgence ſhall be granted, do, during the exiſtence of this Order, pay into the hands of the Receiver General ſuch Fees as would be required for the ſame quantity of Land under the Table of 6th July, 1804. And that ſuch parties who do not reſide in York, be reſpectively required alſo, to annex to the Receiver General's Receipt a Power of Attorney, nominating ſome perſon reſident in York as their Agent, to receive their Deed; which Power is to be lodged with the Surveyor General, previous to his deſcribing the Land, and by him tranſmitted, with the Deſcription, to the Secretary. But the caſes in which the Lands front the Main Road, in which Main Road is intended to be included the principal Road from the Point of Boudette to the Town of Sandwich, and alſo from the Town of York to Lake Simcoe, are to be conſidered as excepted out of this Order. And this Regulation is to be regarded as in force only for Twelve Months from the date hereof. JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

Agent for Purchaſes Office,
YORK, 20th October, 1804.

THE detriment that has ariſen from the improper Curing and Packing of PORK, heretofore purchaſed for the uſe of His Majeſty's Forces, and alſo the irregularity of the Number and Weight of the Pieces contained in the reſpective Caſks of that Pork, render it neceſſary to notify to ſuch perſons who intend in future to ſupply the ſame, as follows:—

I. That the Pork ſo to be purchaſed, ſhall be of the beſt Quality and properly Cured with Rock or St. Ubes Salt, and packed in ſound and ſufficient Caſks.

II. That ſuch Pork ſhall be warranted to keep ſweet and good for Twelve Months after its delivery into the King's Stores.

III. That each Caſk ſhall contain Fifty-two Pieces of Four Pounds each, equal to Two Hundred and Eight Pounds nett.

IV. That ſuch Caſks as ſhall be found, when opened for iſſue, not exactly to correſpond with what is above ſpecified, ſhall be returned, and replaced with an equal quantity of good Pork, cured and packed in manner herein before mentioned.

V. That the future Sale of the above article to Government, will altogether depend upon an exact conformity to what is expreſſed in this Notice.

JOHN M'GILL,
Agent for Purchaſes.

Clerk of the Peace's Office,
Home Diſtrict, York, 25th Oct. 1804.

PUBLIC NOTICE.

I Am commanded by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor to ſignify, "that no Petitions will be received in "future by the Lieut. Lateſt Intelligence.

LONDON, Auguſt 22.

Colonel Houghton, who arrived yeſterday afternoon overland from India with diſpatches for governor-----and the company, has brought home the ratification of the treaties concluded by General Wellesley between the Britiſh government and Scindia and the Rajah of Berar. The Hon. Mr. Elphinſtone has been appointed Britiſh reſident at the court of the Rajah of Berar.

Falmouth, Aug. 8.—Sailed the Packet Queen Charlotte, Mudge, for New-York; arrived, the American brig George, Taylor, from St. Andero, and has landed about 40,000 dollars for London. It is juſt reported, that three line of battle ſhips, diſmaſted, have paſſed the harbor to the eaſtward.

NEW YORK, October 18.

By an Antigua paper of the 12th of September, containing an account of damages ſuſtained there in the late hurricane, it appears that upwards of [illegible] vessels were driven ashore in the harbour of St. John's. The Duke of Cumberland Packet foundered at her anchors—and much destruction ashore among the wharves, cranes, stores, &c. The estates in the country, especially those in the mountains, have suffered much. On the morning of the 10th, a severe shock of an earthquake was felt through the island.

Arrived at the Quarantine Ground, schooner Mary, Howell, in 33 days from Cayenne. Passenger in the Mary, Mr. Francis Gelpin, late mate of the brig Charleston Packet. Watson, of New York, whom Capt. Howell took out of the sloop Polly, Buteman, out 31 days from St. Bartholomews for Newburyport, then in lat. 40. Mr. Gelpin has favoured us with the following marine intelligence:—Capt. Howell spoke an English King's brig, with a schooner tender, out 22 days from Barbadoes, short of provisions and water, supplied them with all we could spare. Sept. 16, lat. 39 40, spoke a schooner out 8 days from Boston for Philadelphia. The brig Charleston Packet, Watson, of N. York, was driven on shore in the hurricane of the 4th ult. at St. Bartholomews, and totally lost, together with 53 hhd. 45 of which were Swedes, Prussian and Hamburgh vessels.

BASSETERRE, (St. Kitts) Sept. 7.

We are sorry it is our painful task to lay before our readers an account of a hurricane of considerably longer duration, and nearly as fatal in its effects as the ever memorable one in 1772:—

On Monday last, afternoon, the weather began to assume a very tempestuous aspect, and through the night the wind increased, and blew with great violence from the North and North West accompanied with incessant showers of rain. Tuesday morning held forth no hopes of an intermission, as it had only changed its direction and blew with equal violence from the South West, varying frequently to South. In the early part of the day a schooner belonging to Mr. Chadwick, of St. Bartholomew's, was forced on shore: and between two and three o'clock, the ship Beckford, capt. Dixon, having on board 520 hogsheads of sugar, and about 86 pipes of Madeira, was drove from her anchors and forced on shore near Fort Smith, where the 600a after went to pieces, hardly a vestige of her remaining—providentially Capt. Dixon and his crew got safe on shore, and some part of the wine will be saved. A sloop belonging to Mr. M'Gie soon followed is since entirely destroyed. The American brigs Centre and Ceres, to avoid the impending danger if possible, put to sea about this time, but the former could not afford her escape as she was found on shore, at Salt Ponds, and has since gone to pieces. The approaching night presented a most gloomy appearance to the other ships in the road, as every mark of destruction seemed to await them from the increasing violence of the wind and swell:—they were seen before the evening closed, to labor and pitch very much. About one o'clock that night, one anxiety was kept alive for the fate of the unfortunate persons on board them, as it then blew a perfect hurricane: almost every fence being blown down, several small houses carried away by the torrents of water that rushed down, occasioned by the unceasing deluge of rain, and many other houses entirely stripped.

Wednesday morning it presented a scene of horror to the imagination! that a vessel in the road, and the beach entirely covered with wrecks! The William Pitt, Capt. Abercrombie, a ship loading for London, lay on shore above [illegible]—the Aurora, Thompson, a [illegible] ship, her first voyage [illegible] worth [illegible] sterling, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] life, and muſt excite either our envy or our emulation.

Behold the pleaſing ſcene! the maſter of a family influenced by the ſpirit of religion, walking before his houſe with a perfect heart!—See him aſſiſting with ſoft language of conjugal affection the cares of his partner, and by a thouſand tender offices, endearing himſelf to his little flock! ſee his kindneſs, bear his tenderneſs to his ſervants and behold him ſmile on all around; the mild influence of love run down into every branch, and diffuſe general happineſs.—Here dwells peace and harmony—the hoſpitable doore unfolds its doors, and bids a cheerful welcome to the gentle viſitor, whoſe enlivening converſation adds greatly to the pleaſure of the ſcene—nor does the child of diſtreſs and want ever ſupplicate relief in vain.

Oh, ye celeſtial ſpirits whoſe bland ſmiles,
From Heaven's high azure bearing on mortal life,
Watch guardian care protect the unconſcious child;
Whoſe ſoothing breath diſarms the rage of ſtrife,
Around their ſcented manſion ſoft diffuſe,
The kindeſt bleſſings of etherial love.

The Sum of Religion,

Written by JOHN HALE, Lord Chief Juſtice of England, and was found amongſt his other papers after his decr.

HE that fears the Lord of Heaven and Earth, walks humbly before Him; thankfully lays hold of the meſſage of redemption by JESUS CHRIST, and ſtrives to expreſs his thankfulneſs by the ſincerity of his obedience. He is ſorry with all his ſoul, when he comes ſhort of his duty. He walks watchfully in the denial of himſelf, and holds no confederacy with any luſt of known ſin; if he falls in the leaſt meaſure, he is unſatisfied till he has made his peace by true repentance. He is true to his promiſes, juſt in his dealings, charitable to the poor, ſincere in his devotion. He will not deliberately diſhonour God, although ſecure of impunity. He has his hopes and his converſation in Heaven, and dares not to do any thing unjuſtly, be it ever ſo much to his advantage; and all this, becauſe he ſees Him that is inviſible, and fears Him as well for his goodneſs as his greatneſs. Such a man, whether he be an Epiſcopalian, or a Preſbyterian, an Independant or an Anabaptiſt—whether he wears a ſurplice, or wears none; whether he hears organs, or hears none; whether he kneels at the communion, or for conſcience ſake, ſtands or ſits; he hath the Life of Religion in him; and that life acts in him, and will conform his ſoul to the image of his SAVIOUR, and go along with him to eternity, notwithſtanding his practice, or non practice, of things indifferent. On the other ſide, if a man fears not the eternal GOD, he can commit ſin with preſumption; drink exceſſively, ſwear vainly or falſely, commit adultery, lie, cozen, cheat, break his promiſe, live loofely, though at the ſame time, he may be aſſiduous to practice every ceremony, even to a ſcrupulous exactneſs, or may, perhaps, as ſtubbornly oppoſe them. Though ſuch an one ſhould cry down biſhops or preſbytery; though he ſhould be re-baptiſed every day, or declaim againſt it as hereſy, and through he faſt all the Lent, or faſt out of preſence of avoiding ſuperſtition—yet, notwithſtanding theſe and a thouſand external contentions, or zealous oppoſitions of them, he wants the Life of Religion.

A man of buſineſs in Dublin, finding it impoſſible to get in his book debts, adverſtiſed them to be ſold by auction, pledging himſelf at the ſame time to prove each debt for the purchaſer: the alarm which this excited was ſuch, that in leſs than a week not a ſingle debt was to be found uncroſſed in the books of the adverſtiſer.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER,

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith &c.

To our beloved and faithful Legiſlative Counſellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes of our ſaid Province, to the Provincial Parliament at our Town of York, on the twenty-fifth day of October, to be commenced, held, called and aſſembled, and to every of you—

GREETING:

WHereas by our Proclamation bearing date the thirteenth day of Septem. laſt, We thought fit by & with the advice of our Executive Council to prorogue our ſaid Provincial Parliament until the twenty-fifth day of this preſent month of October, at which time in our Town of York you were held and conſtrained to appear, but we taking into our Royal conſideration, the eaſe and convenience of our loving ſubjects, have thought fit by and with the advice and conſent of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforeſaid, hereby convoking, and by theſe preſents enjoining you and of each you that on the Third day of December next enſuing you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into conſideration the ſtate and welfare of our ſaid Province of Upper Canada, and there to do as may ſeem neceſſary. Herein fail not.

IN Teſtimony whereof, WE have cauſed theſe Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our ſaid Province to be hereunto Affixed.—WITNESS Our Truſty and Well-Beloved PETER HUNTER Eſquire, Our Lieutenant Governor of Our ſaid Province, and Lieutenant General Commanding Our Forces in Our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at YORK, this eighteenth day of October, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Four, and in the Forty-fourth Year of Our Reign.

P. H.

Wm. JARVIS, Secretary.

Council Chamber, 18th Oct. 1804.

By his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

ORDERED,

THAT the Rules wherein Locations have been made ſubject to Settling Duties, ſhall be relieved from thoſe Settling Duties upon the following conditions, viz.—That each perſon to whom ſuch indulgence ſhall be granted, do, during the exiſtence of this Order, pay into the hands of the Receiver General ſuch Fees as would be required for the ſame quantity of Land under the Table of 6th July, 1804. And that ſuch parties who do not reſide in York, be reſpectively required alſo, to apply to the Receiver General's Receipt a Power of Attorney, nominating ſome perſon reſident in York as their Agent, to receive their Deed; which Power is to be lodged with the Surveyor General, previous to his deſcribing the Land, and by him tranſmitted, with the Deſcription, to the Secretary. But the caſes in which the Lands front the Main Road, in which Main Road is intended to be included the principal Road from the Point of Budette to the Town of Sandwich, and alſo from the Town of York to Lake Simcoe, are to be conſidered as excepted out of this Order. And this Regulation is to be regarded as in force only for Twelve Months from the date hereof. JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

CONSTANTIN PLE, July 12.

In the inſurrection which broke out in Aleppo, in Syria, againſt the new Pacha, in conſequence of his burthening the people with oppreſſive exactions, above 2000 perſons loſt their lives; 20,000 Janiſſaries firſt role, and were joined by 60,000 partiſans of the Sheriffs, and entered the caſtle of the Pacha, in which he bravely defended himſelf, but was taken by ſtorm.

CORK, Aug. 24.

Yeſterday his Majeſty's ſhip La Loire, Capt. Maitland, brought into our harbour one of the moſt powerful French privateers, which has been fitted out this war, La Blonde, of Bourdeaux, mounting 30 long 9 pounders, with a crew of 261 men. She ſailed laſt from a Spaniſh port, victualled for 6 months, and had taken nothing this cruize. The Loire chaſed her 40 hours, and engaged her in a running fight for an hour and an half. The Frenchman admits that he had two killed and ſeven wounded, but from the appearance of the decks, his loſs muſt have been very conſiderable. Five men were wounded on board the Loire. The Blonde is the privateer which took the Wolverine ſloop of war, and captured moſt of her convoy coming from Newfoundland.

DOVER, Aug. 26.

This day about noon, the atmoſphere being remarkably clear, we could perceive with the naked eye clouds of ſmoke ariſing from the French coaſt near Boulogne. On looking with glaſſes we could diſcover a French lugger and a gun-boat creeping along ſhore, as if from Calais, on their way to join the Boulogne ſquadron, and two of our gun boats in purſuit, endeavouring to cut them off; but the French veſſels kept well in ſhore under the protection of the batteries, and kept up a tremendous fire along the ſhore for ſeveral miles, the ſmoke aſcending in perpendicular columns from each battery.

Ever ſince the ſquall about a month ago, which wrecked ſeveral French gun boats on the ſhore of Boulogne, and threw their whole armada into confuſion and diſmay, they have ventured out but in ſmall numbers, not more than 30 at a time. This day about 70 or 100 of their veſſels are out ſide the harbour, taking an airing, and our fleet, of about 20 ſhips of war, is watching them cloſe, out of reach of the land batteries, but by all we can learn we have no reaſon to ſuppoſe any important movement is at hand.

LONDON, Auguſt 27.

Lord Keith has returned to the Downs in the Monarch, after having viſited the ſquadron off Boulogne, and made his obſervations upon ſeveral parts of the enemy's coaſt.

The Dutch fleet in the Texel is perfectly prepared to put to ſea, and from ſome demonſtrations that it has lately made, ſuch an attempt was conſidered by the moſt experienced officers in our blockading ſquadron as momentarily likely to take place. The diſpatches which were brought to the admiralty on Saturday, are ſuppoſed to contain important intelligence reſpecting the diſpoſition of the hoſtile fleet in the Texel.

The off-ſhore Breſt ſquadron, under the immediate orders of admiral Cotton conſiſts of the Sun Joſeph and guns. Prince III, Prince George 98, Prince Royal 98, Windsor Castle 98, Dreadnaught 98, Neptune 98, Thunderer 74, and Venerable 74.

Two Hamburgh mails arrived yesterday. They do not confirm the account before received of Russian troops having been landed at Copenhagen. They mention the appearance of a Russian fleet in that quarter, but state there were no troops on board. The fleet consists of nine sail of the line and several frigates.

It seems extremely probable, that Alexander will soon declare openly his intention of resisting by force the ambitious projects of the French ruler, and we may soon expect his fleet to co-operate with ours. Indeed we know that at this moment a great number of water casks are preparing at Deptford, for the Russian ships. At least such is the belief of the officers there respecting their intended use. It was at one time intended to send one hundred of our coopers to prepare the casks in the ports of Russia, the Russian artizans being very defective in this kind of work; but it was afterwards judged better to prepare them here, and keep our workmen at home.

It is also currently reported, that on Saturday orders were sent to Chatham to prepare for victualling a Russian squadron.

Accounts from Germany state, that the Russian Charge d'Affaires, at Paris, M. d'Oubril, has given in a declaration from his Court, insisting on the evacuation of Hanover and the Neapolitan States, and an indemnification for Sardinia &c. This is very probable. These are the points of detail which the Moniteur peevishly alluded to in a late article, as having been brought into discussion by Russia. In the temper which the Emperor of Russia has lately shewn, and on the system which he has seemed to pursue, these points of detail will not be so easily abandoned, or allowed to sleep as they have hitherto been. If they are rejected, as they are likely to be, the Emperor of Russia will make these, and other grounds of complaint against the French Emperor, the subject of a manifesto. It was reported that M. d'Oubril had quitted Paris; but no mention of that fact is made in the latest foreign Journals.

It is stated but with what truth we know not, that the Court of Vienna labours to reconcile the difference between France and Russia. We doubt this, at least it would be very disinterested. Austria, according to the common feelings of States, would not be sorry to see France and Russia mutually weakening and harassing each other, while she herself was repairing her losses, and recruiting her strength.

A letter from Warsaw, of the 7th, at length mentions the plot to assassinate Louis XVIII. and states that his Prussian Majesty has given orders to examine into the affair in the strictest manner.—On the other hand, a letter from Leipsic states, that on a more strict examination the whole has been proved an invention of the billiard table keeper and his wife.

Accounts from Italy of the 9th state, that part of Lord Nelson's squadron was blockading the harbour of Genoa; and that an attempt was to be made to destroy three ships of war, built there for the French.

The report of the capture of one of the Hieres Islands, by Lord Nelson, is not confirmed.

August 28.

A letter from Leipsic, dated Aug. 14, says, "according to the latest accounts from Warsaw, the story of the attempt to poison the Count de Lille and his family, on a more strict examination, proves to be the invention of the billiard table keeper Cordon, with a view to obtain money. He and his wife are arrested; and we shall probably soon learn more of the particulars.

September 12.

It is now pretty accurately ascertained, that Russia, Sweden, and perhaps Denmark, are to enter into an active alliance with us.

Some more Dutch papers to a recent date arrived yesterday afternoon, but their contents are of little or no importance. Admiral Verheul, during his stay in North Holland, engaged 60 additional transports for the expedition against England, the expence of which, he said was to be equally defrayed by France and Holland. He afterwards visited the camp at Zeist, from whence he returned to the Hague with Gen. Marmont; and after having an interview with the Dutch government, sent off an express to Buonaparte. Dispatches arrive almost daily in Holland from France, the subject of which occupies the constant attention of the Batavian Directory.

We learn from the coast that the Monarch man of war is returned to the Downs, with Lords Keith and Melville on board, after having stood over to the French coast, nearly opposite Dungeness. About one hundred of the enemy's flotilla continued on Monday arranged along shore, close under their batteries; but every thing remains perfectly quiet in that direction.

A part of the Russian fleet, consisting of three ships of the line, two frigates, and a cutter, have passed the Sound, supposed to be destined for the Mediterranean: but it is expected to put into some one of our ports for provisions.

A letter from Amsterdam repeats the report of barracks being about to be erected along the French coast; but adds, that the expedition will certainly fail in a very short time.

CHARLESTON, August 11.

With great regret we have to state that one of the most atrocious and premeditated murders was perpetrated in this city yesterday afternoon, on the body of James Shaw, merchant, of this city, by a young man named Richard Dennis, jun. that perhaps has ever been laid before the public.

The circumstances as far as we could recollect them last evening, are as follows:—Richard Dennis, sen. keeps the Caroline coffee-house in Tradd-street, in this city; on Thursday last Mr. Shaw was there, when Dennis made a demand on him for a small reckoning which he said he owed him; Mr. Shaw told him that he had paid it to the barkeeper, that he had discharged; an altercation immediately took place, some blows passed, and Dennis was worsted; this irritated Dennis's son to such a height, that he, though a lad of 18 or 19 years of age, challenged Mr. Shaw, who considering the lad beneath his notice, paid no further attention to the challenge than to give him a kick or two in the market on Friday morning. Mr. Shaw, it is said, had determined to take no further notice of the affair.—Early yesterday morning printed papers signed Richard Dennis, jun. which stated that Mr. Shaw was a poltroon and a coward, were posted up at different corners of the street, which Mr. Shaw pulled down; between two and three o'clock Mr. Shaw dined at an acquaintance's house; he left the table a little before four o'clock and passed down Tradd-street to go to his business at his counting-house; as he turned out of Tradd-street into Bedon's-alley, of which the Coffee-house forms a corner, it is said he was called to through the window; as he turned his face to the window, a pistol was fired and the ball passed directly through his body; he was only able to retreat a few steps, when he fell on a cellar door and died in an instant. Some people who saw Mr. Shaw fall rushed into the house and found that it was young Dennis who had discharged the pistol, he was immediately seized and committed to gaol by Justice Benham. Dennis the elder, was in the house at the time; on examining him a pair of loaded pistols were found in his pockets.—In consequence of this he was committed.

Thus, in an instant, has a worthy and industrious man been torn from society. We believe Mr. Shaw was about 28 or 30 years of age. He was a native of the state of Maryland, and has resided in this state about ten years.

FROM A LONDON PAPER.

AN INSTANCE

OF STRONG SUPERSTITIOUS CREDULITY.

Said to be an Authentic Fact.

A WIDOW lately at Paris, aged about 53, who lodged in a two pair of stairs floor, in the Rue de la Ferronerie, with only a maid servant, was accustomed to spend several hours every day before the altar dedicated to St. Paul in a neighboring church. Some villains observing her extreme bigotry, resolved as she was known to be very rich to share her wealth. One of them, accordingly, took the opportunity to conceal himself behind the altar and, when no person but the old lady was there, in the dusk of the evening, he contrived to throw a letter just before her. She took it up and, not perceiving any one near, supposed it came by a miracle. In this she was the more confirmed, when she saw it signed, Paul the Apostle, expecting the satisfaction he received by her prayers addressed to him, when so many newly canonized saints engrossed the devotion of the world, and robbed the primitive saints of their wonted adoration; and, to shew his regard for the devotee, he promised to come from heaven, with the Angel Gabriel, and sup with her at eight in the evening. It seems scarcely credible that any one could be deceived by so gross a fraud; yet to what length of credulity will not superstition carry a weak mind? The infatuated lady believed the whole; and rose from her knees in transport, to prepare an entertainment for her heavenly guests.

The supper being bespoke, and the side board set out to the best advantage, she thought that her own plate, worth about 400l. did not make so elegant an appearance as might be wished; and therefore sent to her brothers, a Counsellor in the Parliament of Paris, to borrow all his plate. The maid, however, was charged not to disclose the occasion; but only to say that she had company to supper, and would be obliged to him if he would lend her plate for that evening. The Counsellor surprised at the application, well knowing his sister's frugal life, began to suspect that she was enamoured of some fortune hunter, who might marry her; and thus deprive his family of what he expected at his sister's death. He therefore, positively refused to send the plate, unless the maid would tell him what guests were expected. The girl alarmed for her mistress's honor, declared that that pious lady had no thoughts of a husband; but St. Paul having sent her a letter from Heaven, promising that he and the Angel Gabriel would sup with her, she wanted to make the entertainment as elegant a possible.

The Counsellor immediately suspected that some villains had imposed on her; and sending the maid with the plate proceeded directly to the Commissary of the quarter. On the magistrate's going with him to a house adjoining, they saw just before eight o'clock, a tall man, dressed in long vestments with a white beard, and a young man in white with large wings at his shoulders, alight from a hackney coach, and go up to his sister's apartments.

The Commissary immediately ordered twelve of the police Guards to post themselves on the stairs, while he knocked at the door, and desired admittance. The lady replied, that she had company, and could not speak to any one. But the Commissary answered, that he must come in, for that he was St. Peter, and had come to ask St. Paul and the Angel Gabriel how they came out of Heaven without his knowledge. The divine visitors were astonished at this, not expecting any more saints to join them; but the lady overjoyed at having so great an Apostle with her, ran eagerly to the door, when the Commissary, her brother, and the police guards rushed in, presented their muskets, seized her guests and conducted them to prison.

On searching the criminals, two cords, a razor, and a pistol, were found in St. Paul's pocket, and a gag in that of the Angel Gabriel. Three days after, the trial came on; when they pleaded in their defence, that one was a soldier in the French infantry, and the other a barber's apprentice—that they had no other design than to procure a good supper at the widow's expence—that it being carnival time, they borrowed these dresses, and the soldier having picked up the two cords, put them into his pocket—that the razor was that with which he constantly shaved himself—that the pistol was to defend them from any insults to which their strange habits might expose them in going home—and that the barber's apprentice whose master was a tooth drawer, merely had the gag which they sometimes used in their business. These excuses, frivolous as they were, proved of some avail; and as they had manifested no evil design by any overt act, they were both acquitted.

But the Counsellor, who foresaw what might happen, through the defect of evidence, had provided another stroke for them. No sooner, therefore, were they discharged from the civil power, than the apparitor of the Archbishop of Paris immediately seized them and conveyed them to the ecclesiastical prison. In three days more they were tried and convicted of a most scandalous profanation, by assuming to themselves the names, characters, and appearances of a Holy Apostle and a blessed Angel, with intent to deceive a pious and well meaning woman, and to the scandal of religion. They were accordingly condemned to be publicly whipped, burnt on the shoulder with a hot iron, and sent to the gallies for fourteen years.—A sentence which was in a few days faithfully put in execution.

A new Method of Heading Cabbages in the Winter.

Last fall, at the usual time of taking in cabbages, I had a number that were well grown, but which had no appearance of a head. I dug a trench on the southern declivity of a hill, about 18 inches wide and 30 or 40 inches deep, and took 16 cabbages of the above description, and set them out in the bottom of the trench, in their natural position, with the roots well covered with sand: I then filled the mouth with straw on each side of the cabbages, and laid straw over the tops of them to prevent the sand from getting in; then place a rail over the middle of the trench to prevent any pressure on the cabbages, and completed the work by throwing on more straw and forming a ridge of sand over the whole to keep out frost and water. In the latter part of March I opened the trench and took out the cabbages, and found each one with a common sized head, white, solid, and well tasted.

FROM A NEWBURGH PAPER.

The premium of one ton of ground plaister, offered by Richard Trimble, for the best quantity of wheat, over two hundred bushels, has been awarded to Reuben Benard, of Platterkill, who produced two hundred and twenty one bushels and twenty six pounds of wheat clean enough to grind without screening.

Mr. Robertson, of the Galvanic Society at Paris, has communicated to the Emperor of Russia, a method to multiply the breaking up of waste land, by means of a new ingeniously constructed plough, with four shares, which move at once, and a lever determines the depth of the furrows exactly.

Mr. Bartley, of Bath, recommends strongly, potatoes as an excellent food for sheep, superior in almost all respects to turnips.

FROM THE BALANCE.

GRATITUDE.

FAIR Gratitude deserves our praise—
Virtue hidden in our days!
Few know its force, and few practise
That virtue born in yonder skies.
Self is the center where we move—
Our left is all we dearly love!
And yet a kindness we expect
From some we treat with base neglect!
The sentimental mind can tell
The praise that springs from selling well;
But where the selfish passions spring,
The other virtues take the wing!
Kindness to those who've done us good,
Is the thin virtue understood!
Mere fawning words and smooth address,
With which the artful all caress,
Cannot to Gratitude pretend—
As well the knave we might commend.
Give me that true exalted soul,
Whom dirty passions ne'er controul;
In such an one I'm sure to find
A lovely genuine grateful mind.

FROM THE BALANCE.

THE LIMNER.

MR. EDITOR,

YOUR male readers have undoubtedly indulged in much merriment at the expence of the fashionable young lady who last week sat (or rather flood) for her picture. But I will now furnish a counterpart to that picture, which, if I mistake not, will smooth down the countenances of the young men, and turn all their light into shade. For, however ridiculous it may appear in the young ladies to cover their foreheads and eyebrows, and expose their bosoms and that most uncomely part, the nape of the neck—to hide a white and beautiful hand in a glove, and uncover an ugly and dark coloured elbow—to make up the fair part of their dresses so ludicrously as to present to the view the whole shape of their limbs, whilst a superabundance of trail is left behind to sweep the streets—yet a fashionable young gentleman can abide all this, as will appear from the annexed picture.

"Mr. Pallet," said the young man, taking his position on the floor, "I hope you will not flatter my picture—I wish to be painted just as I am."—Indeed, thought I, as I surveyed him from head to foot, you little suspect what a droll picture you will make. Figure to yourself, reader, a thin stripling—but, hold, let me paint, not describe. "Would it not be well to have your hair dressed before I begin," said I—"I am this instant from the barber's," he replied. At this moment I recollected to have heard that the fashion of wearing wigs had just come over from France, and I concluded that the young man had followed this as well as other fashions; but then I supposed the blundering barber had made a whimsical mistake, by placing the wig the wrong side foremost on the block, and beginning at the neck, combing every lock of hair forward. I asked the young man if this was not the case. He replied, with a surly frown, that it was all right. "A true French fashion," said I—"after turning every thing else topsy turvy, it is no wonder their heads are turned."—I confess I did not much regret that his shirt collar (which was starched stiff and reached up to his ears) covered a great part of his face, as it saved me considerable work, although it gave the picture a very uncouth appearance. It was my own fault, that I did not wholly save myself the trouble of painting his hands; for he had them both thrust into his pantaloon pockets, and it was at my request that he withdrew one of them for a copy. Here I had a disagreeable task to perform; for it was necessary either to represent his hand as a perfect claw, or to depart from his directions to paint him as he was. His nails were pared down to the quick at the corners, and left long, sharp and pointed in the middle, I have long observed this ridiculous custom with surprize, as it has neither convenience, cleanliness, nor beauty to recommend it. Nails prepared in this way, might be of great use in scratch fighting, and are therefore more proper for cats or dogs than for tame young men. Short waistcoats have been much ridiculed, but in my opinion, very unjustly. I could shew, had I time, that, exclusive of the saving (which is now all the rage) there are incalculable advantages in short waistcoats. My subject had carried this fashion to the utmost excess. Of course I was not long detained about his vest.—In short, the picture, save only the boots, was soon dispatched. But, the boots—Oh, what a field for black paint. The spindle shanks of the young man, stood in a pair of monstrous large Summerous: and I could comp te them to nothing but pestles in mortars.

Reader, the picture is finished—look at it.

PETER PALLET.

IN a great freshet, a farmer's wife was taken in labor, and no person proper to assist her living nearer than seven miles the good husband rode with the utmost speed to Dr. Rhubarb, whom he begged instantly to go to his wife. The doctor being a known one, declared, though his usual fee was two guineas, at such a distance when no danger appeared; yet now (said he) I must go at the imminent hazard of my life, I shall not budge one foot, unless you agree to give me ten guineas. The farmer in vain remonstrated on his inability to perform such a demand; Rhubarb was inflexible. The honest countryman's love to his Jean rose above every objection, and he at last engaged to raise the money: they got to the farm-house through much difficulty, and in an hour or two the doctor presented the master of the house with a fine boy, and demanded his exorbitant fee: which the farmer immediately gave him and drank each a glass of ale to the boy's welfare.—By this time the flood was greatly increased and real danger threatened the doctor in his return; on which (not being at all acquainted with the way) he entreated the farmer to lose no time in conducting him back. "My friend, (says the farmer) you would not come to help my wife, who was in real distress, unless I promised to give ten; now, when only an imaginary danger was before you; but there is now a real hazard in my venturing to shew you the latest way back; therefore unless you will give me nine guineas for my trouble in conducting you home, you may abide where you are until the next dry season."—All replies were in vain; no art could make any impression on the countryman. Rhubarb was obliged to return nine guineas; the farmer landed him safely among his gallipots, and the honest man got well home again, triumphing over inhumanity and avarice.

At London, in the month of August last, two tradesmen near Blackfriars had a difference respecting a bet, which it was agreed to decide the next day with pistols. They met near the Windmill, below Petty France, where two seconds had the good sense to drop the bullets into the proper place—their own pockets. One of the parties, who was let into the secret, dropped dead on the first fire! His opponent fled on the wings of fear, and next morning was proceeding in a post chaise to depart for Hamburgh or America, when he saw his deceased antagonist very compodedly serving his customers behind his shop-counter!

DIED—In Germany, TAGEA TALGIZA, aged 120: He has buried ten wives; his last, the eleventh, who is now living, is but twenty-six years of age, by her he had 5 children, the youngest is 5 months old; by his other wives he had 31 children, all of whom are living and married. He came to his death by attempting to leap over a gate eight feet high.—London Paper.

The laws are so uncertain in France, that a judge in Thoulouse decides all cases that come before him by a pair of dice; to that a bribe is called a loaded die.

A German Writer says—BONAPARTE'S character is included in the monosyllable self: he is self-conceited, self important, self-created, and self-ish in all his actions.

PETER HUNTER,
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith &c.

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Councellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to the Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, on the third day of December, to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you—

GREETING;

WHereas by our Proclamation bearing date the eighteenth day of October last, We thought fit by & with the advice of our Executive Council to prorogue our said Provincial Parliament until the Third day of this present month of December, at which time in our Town of York you were held and constrained to appear, but we taking into our Royal consideration, the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice and content of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you and each of you that on the tenth day of January next ensuing you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our said Province of Upper Canada, and there to do as may seem necessary. Herein fail not.

IN Testimony whereof, WE have caused these Our Letters to be made Patents, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto Affixed.—WITNESS Our Trusty and Well-Beloved PETER HUNTER Esquire, Our Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Lieutenant General Commanding Our Forces in Our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at YORK, this first day of December, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Four, and in the Forty-fifth Year of Our Reign.

P. H.

WM. JARVIS, Secretary.

Council Chamber, 18th Oct. 1804.

By his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

ORDERED,

THAT in cases wherein Locations have been made subject to Settling Duties, the parties be relieved from those Settling Duties upon the following conditions, viz.—That each person to whom such indulgence shall be granted, do, during the existence of this Order, pay into the hands of the Receiver General such Fees as would be required for the same quantity of Land under the Table of 6th July, 1804. And that such parties who do not reside in York, be respectively required also, to annex to the Receiver General's Receipt a Power of Attorney, nominating some person resident in York as their Agent, to receive their Deed; which Power is to be lodged with the Surveyor General, previous to his describing the Land, and by him transmitted, with the Description, to the Secretary. But the cases in which the Lands front the Main Road, in which Main Road is intended to be included the principal Road from the Point of Burlington to the Town of Sandwich, and also from the Town of York to Lake Simcoe, are to be considered as excepted out of this Order. And this Regulation is to be regarded as in force only for Twelve Months from the date hereof. JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

Latest Intelligence.

LONDON, August 29.

An evening paper says, it is reported in France, that during a violent quarrel between Napoleon and Lucien Bonaparte in March last, the latter not only challenged the former to fight him, but ran upon him with a drawn sword, which obliged him to defend himself by drawing his own. The ringing of a bell caused, however, General Duroc to enter, who disarmed Lucien, and he was put under arrest in Duroc's apartments by his brother, where he remained until his banishment from France. Since that time he has written several letters to the Emperor, threatening to gain over the Bourbons, and to shut them to dethrone an Usurper, who owes every thing, even the Throne, to him, his brother. Some persons even pretend that Lucien Bonaparte has sent proposals to Louis XVIII. but they have met with that contempt they deserve, and remain unanswered. The origin of this fraternal quarrel is said to be Lucien's pretension to be King of Lombardy, at the same time that Napoleon made himself Emperor of the French.

The Russian squadron destined to cruize in the North Seas, it is now said, consists of fourteen sail of the line and two frigates, the whole of which are victualled for four months.

The French fleet in the outer harbour of Brest was, a few days since, plainly distinguished by some of our seamen, to consist of seventeen ships of the line, nine frigates, and eleven smaller vessels. They had troops on board, and were perfectly ready for sea.

The resentment of France against Sweden is occasioned by the conduct of that Prince in the Note which he delivered to the Diet of Ryksdag, and the army, which, to prevent all aggression, he maintains on his frontiers. His promptitude, likewise, to concur with Russia, and fit up the spirit of war in Germany, is another source of jealousy: and many keen shafts are slanged at Sweden for her submission to the Dominion of England on the sea, & some keen reproaches at her pusillanimity when the English fleet was suffered to batter the very walls of Copenhagen. There is, however, one conclusion to be drawn from this paper; Sweden is now an enemy of France from aggression, and Denmark from policy; so that they are both always at the beck of Russia, should the Emperor seriously intend to enter the field with an army.

The King of Russia is inquiring into the plot of Warsaw. Louis XVIII. has taken refuge in the Russian empire.

The public anxiety is chiefly directed to the flotilla of Boulogne. It appears that it has returned to the inner harbour; but an attempt is generally expected.

Government, in the contemplation we suppose, of an immediate attempt on the part of the enemy, have begun to remove the French prisoners from the sea coast. A division of them were landed on Thursday from the prison ships at Plymouth, and sent to Exeter and other places.

September 3.

Bonaparte was at Boulogne on the 27th, and was expected to remain there several days. No mention is made in the Moniteur of the period of his return to Paris, nor of the fate of the expedition.

The details of Bonaparte's movements on the coaft are confined entirely to reviews of the troops, and diftribution of the inſignia of the Legion of Honor.

The weſterly wind which blew on Friday, obliged the French flotilla to return into port, and forced our ſhips to leave the French coaſt.

Diſpatches were yeſterday morning received at the Admiralty from Admiral Louis, at Dungeneſs, dated on Saturday. They ſtate his return to that place late on Friday evening, with ſeveral ſhips under his orders, from off Boulogne. Several of the ſhips have returned to the Downs. The Ardent, of 64 guns, and ſome more veſſels belonging to the blockade ſquadron, were off Dover yeſterday, taking in proviſions and ſtores, preparatory to the reſumption of their ſtation off Boulogne. They were expected to ſail this morning.

Travellers who return from that country, ſtate on the other hand, that the Delta is now entirely occupied by the Mamelukes and that the different roving parties render commerce exceedingly difficult and dangerous.

Paris Journals to the 2d inſtant have come to hand. By theſe we learn, that the Ruſſian Charge d'Affaires quitted Paris on the 31ſt ult. The Journal du Commerce of the 1ſt inſt. ſays, "The Ruſſian Charge d'Affaires quitted Paris yeſterday;" and the Gazette de France of the 31ſt ult. ſays, "the Ruſſian Chargé d'Affaires quitted Paris this day." There ſeems, therefore, to be now little doubt that the two powers are on the eve of an open rupture.

It is remarkable that, while the Moniteur of the 26th ult. affects to look upon the ſailing of the Ruſſian fleet as a mere excurſion of pleaſure, or for the ſake of exerciſing their men, that of the 28th conſiders Ruſſia as making ſerious preparations for war. Sometimes, according to the Paris papers, the Ruſſian fleet has only one month's proviſions on board, and ſometimes it is victualled for two months. They even ſend a ſhip of the line to cruize in the Baltic, merely to give an airing to an Admiral's Lady who happens to be indiſpoſed!—Theſe ridiculous tales evince at once, the dread which the French Government apprehends from allowing the people to be alarmed by finding themſelves involved in a war with Ruſſia, and the low opinion it entertains of their underſtandings which could be impoſed upon by ſuch groſs and palpable abſurdities.

LIVERPOOL, September 12.

Extract of a letter dated Bilboa, 14th Auguſt, 1804, to a merchant in this town.

"There exiſts a kind of revolution in the town of Bilboa, 3000 men are in arms, and have ſeized the Corregidor and ſeveral Spaniſh gentlemen who held places under government, and put them into priſon; to what extent the matter may be carried to is uncertain, but as yet there has not been any blood ſhed."

From late London Papers.

A traveller, under the protection of the Spaniſh Government, has purſued a direction hitherto unattempted. He has gone from Pepayan to Almager, and from thence to Paſto, ſituated at the foot of a capacious vulcano. The narrow paſſes in this diſtrict more reſemble the artificial galleries of a mine, than the ordinary forms preſented by nature. The inhabitants of theſe deſerts live on batatas, a root reſembling in ſubſtance as well as in name, one of the common eſt productions of our gardens. When the produce of theſe is deficient, they are ſupported by the trunk of a little tree, which they call achopalla: "but," ſays the itinerant moraliſt, "this tree being the natural food of the bears of the Andes, the hungry natives often diſpute with theſe animals the prize on which exiſtence depends."

The propoſed Impregnable Battery, is the inveution of Mr. John Gillelpie, a native of Scotland. We underſtand that a meeting was held on Wedneſday with this ingenious perſon, at Mr. Pitt's houſe, at Putney, and that it is intended immediately to carry his project into execution. The Firſt Lord of the Admiralty, Sir Sidney Smith, and ſeveral other perſons, met the inventor at the Chancellor of the Exchequer's on the occaſion; and certain craft in the river were pointed out on which the machinery is to be erected. We believe this ſcheme is brought forward under the particular recommendation of Sir Sidney Smith.

It is very much to be regretted, that however ſucceſsful our ſhips on the French coaſt have been in ſeveral important conteſts, the bravery of our ſeamen and the conduct of their officers, have often been diſappointed in their efforts to attack the foe, by the inſuperable obſtructions the nature of the coaſt preſented to our ſhipping. It is preſumed that this Battery is to be conſtructed upon veſſels drawing very little water, ſo that our mariners, under its protection, may approach the force of the enemy, and ſpread that deſtruction which will utterly defeat the enterprize in which their councils have been ſo long occupied, and to which their armies have been ſo long deſtined.

The battery is ſo contrived as to be bomb proof; and will carry 42 pounders, or pieces of ordnance of any caliber; it moves on an axis to any point of the compaſs with the utmoſt facility, and it is provided with an optical tube, by which the engineer is greatly aſſiſted in the direction of his fire. Such, we underſtand, are the advantages of this diſcovery, and we ſincerely wiſh it may anſwer the repreſentation given of it by thoſe whoſe judgment we have no reaſon to queſtion. While the philoſopher will lament the new expedients for human deſtruction which ingenuity may contrive, the politician will not neglect to avail himſelf of thoſe means of defence which are offered to ſupply the moſt effectual means of public ſecurity.

Letters from Utrecht ſtate, that the camp at Zeyſt has been completely inundated. The troops were obliged to fly in every direction, and all the tents were waſhed away, particularly the beautiful one belonging to General Marmont.

FROM A LONDON PAPER.

Harry Paulet.—Harry Paulet, commonly called Duke of Bolton, King of Vine-ſtreet, and Governor of Lambeth Marſh, a well known public character, died lately in the above neighbourhood, and his remains were attended to the grave by a great number of perſons whom his bounty had made comfortable.

Perſons, the Comedian, ſpeaking of the ſubject of the following particulars frequently declared, with the greateſt gravity, that he would rather expend a crown to hear Harry Paulet relate one of Hawke's battles, then ſit, gratis, by the moſt celebrated orator of the day. There was (ſaid Perſons) a manner in his heart-felt narrations, that was certain to bring his auditors into the very ſcene of action; and when he deſcribed the moment of victory, I have ſeen a dozen laboring men, at the Crown Public houſe, riſe together, and, moved by an inſtantaneous impulſe, give three cheers, while Harry took breath to recite more of his exploits.—This man, whoſe love for his country couldnot be excelled, was in the year 1738, maſter of an Engliſh veſſel in North America, and traded up the river St. Lawrence; but being taken by the enemy, he remained a priſoner under Montcalm, at Quebec, who refuſed to exchange him, on account of his extenſive knowledge of the coaſt, the ſtrength of Quebec and Louiſbourg, with the different foundings. They therefore came to a reſolution to lend him to France to be kept a priſoner during the war, and with ſuch intent he was embarked on board a veſſel ready to ſail with diſpatches to the French Government. Being the only Engliſhman on board Harry was admitted to the cabin, where he took notice one day, that the picket hung in an expoſed ſituation in a canvas bag, for the purpoſe of being thrown overboard on any danger of being taken:—this he marked as the object of a daring enterpriſe; and ſhortly after, in conſequence of the veſſel being obliged to put into Vigo for proviſions and intelligence, he put his deſign into execution. There were two Engliſh men of war laying at anchor, and Mr. Paulet thought this a proper opportunity to make his meditated attempt; he therefore one night, when all but the watch were aſleep, took the packet out of the bag, and having fixed it in his mouth, ſilently let himſelf down to the water, and, to prevent being diſcovered, floated on his back to the bows of one of the Engliſh ſhips, where he ſecured himſelf by the cables, and calling for aſſiſtance, was immediately taken on board with the packet. The capt. charmed with this bold attempt, treated him with great humanity, and gave him a ſuit of ſcarlet clothes trimmed with blue velvet and gold, which he retained to the day of his death. The diſpatches being tranſcribed, proved to be of the utmoſt conſequence to our affairs in North America, and Harry was ſent with a copy of them poſt overland to Liſbon, from whence he was brought to Falmouth in a ſloop of war, and immediately ſet out for London. Upon his arrival in town, he was examined by proper perſons in the Adminiſtration, and rewarded agreeably to the nature of his ſervice; but what is moſt remarkable, an expedition was inſtantly formed upon a review of theſe diſpatches, and our ſucceſſes in North America, under Wolfe and Saunders, are in ſome degree to be attributed to the attachment of Harry Paulet to the intereſt of his country.

For his ſervices the Government rewarded him with the pay of a Lieutenant for life, which, with other advantages, for Harry had ever beenprudent, he was enabled to purchaſe a veſſel: here fame takes ſome liberty with his character, & aſſerts, that he uſed to run to the French coaſt, and now and then take in a cargo of brandy; but, be that as it may, Harry was one morning returning, when the French fleet had ſtole out of Breſt under Conflans, while Admiral Hawke was hid behind a rock off Uſhant to watch the motions of the enemy. Mr. Paulet, loving his country better than his cargo, ſoon ran up to the Britiſh Admiral, and demanding to ſpeak with him, was ordered to make his veſſel faſt and come on board; upon his telling Hawke that he knew of the enemy, the Admiral told him, if he was right, he would make his fortune; but if he had deceived him, by G——d he would hang him up at the yard-arm. The fleet was inſtantly under weigh, and upon Paulet's direction to the maſter, (for he was an excellent pilot) the Britiſh fleet was preſently brought between the enemy and their own coaſt; and now the Admiral ordered Paulet into the veſſel, and made him make the beſt of his way: but Harry begged of the Admiral as he had diſcovered the enemies of his country, that he might be allowed to aſſiſt in beating them.—This requeſt was aſſented to by the Commander; and Paulet had his ſtation aſſigned, at which no man could behave better; and when the battle was over, this true-born Engliſhman was ſent home covered with commendations, and rewarded with that which enabled him to live happy the remainder of his life. Mr. Paulet poſſeſſed a freehold eſtate in Cornhill, London; and reſpecting the good he did with his income, there is not a poor being in the neighbourhood of Pedlar's acre, who does not teſtify with gratitude ſome act of benevolence performed for the alleviation of his poverty, by this humane heroic Engliſhman.

LOYALTY AND COURAGE.

The following report has been made and ſigned by Thomas Aſhley, Conſtable of St. Helier, in the iſland of Jerſey:—

Monday the 4th of this month, being the anniverſary of the birth day of our gracious Sovereign, all the forts in this iſland fired a royal ſalute at noon, by order of his Excellency the Commander in Chief. The cannon in the new fort, on the large hill, were alſo fired. A Corporal of the Invalid Company of Artillery then received the matches, and locked them up in the powder magazine at the top of the hill, which is conſtructed in ſuch a manner as to be bomb proof; it contained 29 barrels of gun-powder, charged bombs, caiſſons, full of cartridges of every kind, and a great quantity of other combuſtibles. The magazine was then ſhut, and the keys carried out of the fort. About ſix in the evening, while the officer on guard was at dinner, with the officers of his regiment, the ſoldiers on guard obſerved ſmoke iſſuing through an air hole at one of the ends of the magazine, and immediately ran from the fort. Mr. P. Lys, the ſignal officer on the hill, ſeeing from the watch-houſe the ſpliters in motion, and hearing them calling out fire, ran out before they had all left off, and approaching the magazine, obſerved the ſmoke iſſuing through the two air holes at the two ends. Having and Thomas Touzel and Edward Touzel, two brothers, and both carpenters employed by him in the town, who had come to aſſiſt him to take down a temporary enſign ſtaff, he ſent to the former to acquaint the Commander in Chief of the danger with which the magazine was threatened, to Capt. Salmon of the artillery, to get the keys. Touzel, before he ſet out, uſed every effort to induce his brother to quit the ſpot. Edward Touzel replied, that he muſt die ſome day, and that he would attempt to ſave the magazine and the town, at the hazard of his life; and ſeeing a ſoldier making his eſcape, he propoſed to him to remain, to aſſiſt in breaking open the magazine; which he refuſed to do. He then propoſed the ſame thing to another ſoldier, named William Pontney, of the light company of the third regiment, who acquieſced, ſaying, that he was ready to die with him, and they ſhook hands. Edward Touzel then took a wooden bar, with which he broke the barrier of the palliſade which ſurrounds the magazine, and finding at hand a kind of axe, he got to the door of the magazine, where he broke alſo two padlocks, and having by theſe means opened the door, he entered, and addreſſing himſelf to Mr. Lys, who was on the outſide, ſaid: "The magazine is on fire, it will blow up. We muſt loſe our lives, but no matter; Huzza for the King! We muſt try to ſave it." With theſe words he rushed into the flames, and ſeizing the matches almoſt burnt out, he threw them by arm fulls to Mr. P. Lys, and W. Ponteney, who had remained without; Mr. Lys, ſeeing a caſk ſtanding on one end, filled with water, in the neighbourhood of the magazine, and having no other veſſel then an earthen pitcher, he and W. Ponteney made uſe of their hats, and this pitcher, to carry water. Edward Touzel, who was ſtill in the magazine, but ſcarcely able to ſee, to encounter of the thick ſmoke which ſurrounded him, obſerving however, ſome ſmoke on fire, he extinguiſhed it with the water which was brought to him. He then called out to Mr. Lys, that he was almoſt ſuffocated and requeſted ſomething to drink.—The fire had ſcorched his hands, and even ſome part of his face. The people now arrived in crowds, bringing with them water, of which he drank. At length the fire was entirely extinguiſhed, by the zeal and intrepidity of Edward Touzel, in particular, and of Mr. P. Lys and W. Pouteney. Capt. Leith, of the firſt regiment, and Mr. Murphy of the ſame regiment, the officer on guard, ſeveral officers of his Majeſty's troops, repaired with ſoldiers to the hill, and employed the greateſt activity to get the magazine entirely emptied, in order to aſcertain whether any ſparks remained in it. Two caiſſons of wood, filled with ammunition, were found attacked by the fire, and one, in particular, in which there were powder horns, tubes, and a tunnel cartridge half burned through. Near this caiſſon ſtood an open barrel of powder, to which the fire had it not been extinguiſhed, muſt inevitably have ſoon communicated. A rammer alſo conſumed, and ſome of the beams which ſupported the roof were on fire. Such was the ſtate of things, when Edward Touzel, Mr. P. Lys, and W. Ponteney diſplayed ſuch heroic courage and bravery, expoſed their lives to the moſt imminent danger, and thereby ſaved the town of St. Heller and its inhabitants from the moſt terrible diſaſter. The conſtable, therefore, finds himſelf impelled, both by duty and inclination, to requeſt all perſons who have property in the town of St. Helier, or its neighbourhood, to meet on ſunday next, the 13th inſt. in the church of St. Helier, at ten in the morning, to take into conſideration the means of teſtifying their gratitude towards theſe three brave and generous men.

A LESSON FOR THE LADIES,

A FRAGMENT.

Deſpair ſat on her eye, which ſhe lifted up towards Heaven, as if accuſing the Great Firſt Cauſe of Juſtice.—I knew her in her infant days, the firſt bluſh of beauty lighted up her cheeks, and white robed innocence led her by the hand. She was then all that the warmeſt fancy could form, or the moſt ardent wiſh expect. But now her beauties were faded in her prime, and ſhe appeared a monument of grief.—With deſperate reſolution ſhe ran towards the banks of the Hudſon and, muſing for a moment in ſilent chilneſs agony, plunged herſelf into the flood—Poor unfortunate maid!—Thy untimely fate ſhall draw many a pearly tear from the brighteſt eye; and while they peruſe thy hapleſs ſtory in the following effuſion of an artleſs muſe, Columbia's fair ſhall learn to deteſt the horrid vice of Gaming.

THE FEMALE GAMESTER.

A TALE FOUNDED ON FACT.

YE Fair! that grace Manhatten's iſle,
O ſhun the GAMING RAGE,
'Twill ſpoil your beauties, ſpoil your ſmile,
And hatten helpleſs age.

'Twill with a tyrant's force, your ſoul
In ſlaviſh bondage keep;
And while on HOYLE your thoughts roll,
The hours will ſwifter fleep.

Wan ers a——but my heart weeps blood
To think upon her fate;
Mar ella, beauteous, wife and good,
But fhort, alas! her date.

A youth for ev'ry virtue fam'd,
For her paffefflon figh'd;
The death warp drawn, the day was nam'd
She was to be his bride.

But ha! before that wifh'd for day,
The lovely artlefs maid
Was by a feoundrel ftropp'd at play,
By knavish art betray'd.

In vain—alarm'd—afraid—confus'd,
She could not long conceal;
The villain too home freedom us'd,
And hard for payment prefs'd.

Her debt became the endleis fource
Of woes that lay upon her;
At length the moft compreff'd by force
To pay—a wash her honour.

A ftranger now to joy or reft,
She fighs, but cannot fpeak;
And while fcorn enguifs her breaft,
Cave pales her damask cheek.

Difpairing then to meet relief,
On Hie no more fhe ftood;
There mad'ning wildly in fpeechlefs grief,
Then plung'd into the flood.

The flood, like faithful friends, the maid
From finking long upbore;
But when it rend'red its friendly aid,
She funk and rofe no more.

THE ORACLE.

YORK—SATURDAY, DECEMBER 1.

It is with the greateft pleafure that we communicate to the public, the fuccefs which has attended the firft efforts in the Cultivation of Hemp by the Farmers of this Province.—The Honorable the Truftees for the Encouragement of Arts, Manufactures and Commerce, have not only fignified their approbation of the induftry and diligence which have been exercifed in the cultivating of that moft valuable article in the two Canadas, but have decreed as an honorable reward and mark of that approbation,

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER,

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith:—

To our beloved and faithful Legiſlative Counſellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes of our ſaid Province, to the Provincial Parliament at our Town of York, the third day of December, to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you.

GREETING.

WHEREAS by our Proclamation bearing date the eighteenth day of October laſt, We thought fit by & with the advice of our Executive Council to prorogue our ſaid Provincial Parliament until the Third day of this preſent month of December, at which time in our Town of York you were duly and conſtitutionally to appear, but we having into our Royal conſideration, the eaſe and convenience of our loving ſubjects, have thought fit by and with the advice and conſent of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforeſaid, hereby convoking, and by theſe preſents enjoining you and each of you that on the tenth day of January next enſuing you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into conſideration the ſtate and welfare of our ſaid Province of Upper Canada, and there to do as may ſeem neceſſary. Herein fail not.

IN Teſtimony whereof, WE have cauſed theſe Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our ſaid Province to be hereunto Affixed:—WITNESS, Our Truſty and Well-Beloved PETER HUNTER Eſquire, Our Lieutenant Governor of Our ſaid Province, and Lieutenant General Commanding Our Forces in Our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at YORK, this firſt day of December, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Four, and in the Forty-fifth Year of Our Reign.

P. H.

WM. JARVIS, Secretary.

Council Chamber, 28th Oct. 1804.

By his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

ORDERED,

THAT in caſes wherein Locations have been made ſubject to Settling Duties, the parties be relieved from thoſe Settling Duties upon the following conditions, viz.—That each perſon to whom ſuch indulgence ſhall be granted, ſhall, during the currency of this Order, pay into the hands of the Receiver General ſuch Fees as would be required for the ſame quantity of Land under the Table of 6th July, 1804. And that ſuch perſons who do not reſide in York, be abſolutely required alſo, to annex to the Receiver General's Receipt a Power of Attorney, nominating ſome perſon reſident in York to their Agent, to receive their Deed; which Power is to be lodged with the Surveyor General, previous to his deſcribing the Land, and by him tranſmitted, with the Deſcription, to the Secretary. But the caſes in which the Lands front the Main Road, in which Main Road is intended to be included the principal Road from the Point of Boudette to the Town of Sandwich, and alſo from the Town of York to Lake Simcoe, are to be conſidered as excepted out of this Order. And this Regulation is to be regarded as in force only for Twelve Months from the date hereof.

Lateſt Intelligence.

Summary of Foreign News, from Dublin papers to the 20th September:—

The report of the Ruſſians having landed in the northern part of Holſtein, and of the French having taken poſſeſſion of the ſouthern part of it, is contradicted.—Neutral European ſhips are ſtill leaving the ports of France in great haſte: the Ruſſians and Swedes in particular, were apprehenſive of being embargoed.——The new title of Emperor of Auſtria, aſſumed by Francis IId. is ſtated to have been recognized by the King of Pruſſia; it is alſo ſaid that the King of Spain intends to follow the fashion and adopt the title of Emperor.——The invaſion is ſtill the ſubject of apprehenſion and conjecture: it is mentioned under a London date of the 16th, that government had received certain information that it would be attempted in a fortnight from that time.——A knowledge of the land and naval force of Ruſſia, Sweden and Denmark muſt at this time be peculiarly intereſting; they are thus ſtated: "The peace eſtabliſhment of Ruſſia comprizes 720,000 men, and 50,000 military ſervants.—She poſſeſſes 40 millions of taxable male peaſants, employed in agriculture, and may increaſe her force to any extent. The Swediſh army conſiſts of 14,000 regular infantry, 8000 cavalry, 25,000 militia infantry, and 12,000 national cavalry. There are 7,500 ſailors in the King's ſervice, and 15,000 more enrolled for the navy: in addition to which 20,000 ſeamen could be drawn from the fiſheries on the coaſt of Sweden and Finland. The Daniſh army, in Denmark and Holſtein, amounts to about 24,000 regular troops and 18,000 militia; and in Norway to about 30,000 regulars and militia.——There are 5000 ſeamen in the royal ſervice, and 30,000 more may be at any time aſſembled from the fiſheries. The merchant ſervice employs 18,000 more, in about 300,000 tons of ſhipping. Ruſſia has in the Baltic 30 ſhips of from 60 to 120 guns, and upwards of 700 gallies, gun boats, and other ſmall armed veſſels. Sweden has a navy of 20 ſhips, carrying from 40 to 74 guns, and nearly 300 gallies. Denmark has 27 ſail of the line, and about 36 floating batteries, gallies, &c."——France lately compriſed in her military eſtabliſhment 568,000 men.——Although nothing farther had tranſpired reſpecting war between Ruſſia and France, it was an event looked to with much certainty. The former power was directing all her attention to her naval and military department, and the next Hamburgh Mail was expected to bring deciſive intelligence on this ſubject.——The Leeward Iſland merchant fleet had arrived in ſafety.——London Stocks, 3 per cent. Gleanings from late London Papers.

Extraordinary Incident.—On Sunday week, in the afternoon, a young lady, handſome in perſon, and of prepoſſeſſing manner, alighted from a ſingle horſe at the King's Arms in Leeds, with a view of ſeeing the ſights. A page was ſent to the door, which he took up with a great deal of conſequence, and begged to be directed to the houſe of a certain exciſe officer, reſident in Leeds. Having received the directions, ſhe requeſted a man to knock at the door, while the flood rather concealed, and, as the man afterwards discovered, with a pistol in her hand. Mr. —— was not at home, but a message was left, requesting he would call at the inn on his return, and orders was given by the lady that he should be shown into her room and told that a Gentleman wanted him.—All this time she kept the pistol, and at intervals betrayed considerable agitation. Mr. —— did not call till the morning, and the innkeeper apprehending mischief, had previously got the pistol into his possession. When the Excise Officer appeared, he was shown into the room where the lady sat, and the fair heroine, as soon as she was able to speak, rated him severely for violating his promises, by marrying another, and that too as Shakspeare says after having given her, "a child for her cradle, without a husband for her bed."

The trembling culprit, half petrified with the storm that his inconstancy raised, endeavoured to palliate his conduct; this only increased the lady's indignation, and at length losing sight of all decorum, she seized the poker, and levelled a tremendous blow at the offender's head: this he had the address to ward off, and the inn-keeper, who was at hand, rushed into the room, and disarmed the fair warrior, and withdrew, taking with him the offensive weapon. Tears and reiterated charges of baseness followed, and the perfidious lover was glad to take an opportunity that the opening of the door presented to make a precipitate retreat.

At the York race in England, a celebrated race of four miles was run by Mr. Thornton against Mr. Flint. More than 100,000 persons attended. The throng was so great that a party of dragoons was ordered out to keep the course clear. Mrs. Thornton appeared on the ground at the appointed time in high spirits, Mr. Flint did not delay his appearance, and they started a little after 4 o'clock. The fens to Sigglesthrop took the lead for upwards of three miles in a very capital style. Mrs. Thornton now made every possible exertion to overtake Mr. Flint, but perceiving that she must inevitably lose, she drew up in a very scientific manner, within about two distances. But at the commencement were 5 and 6 to 4, in favor of the lady, in running the 3 miles 7 to 4 and even 2 to 1 in her favor. Mrs. Thornton, according to the best judges, rode in a superior style. Her dress was a leopard coloured body, with blue sleeves, the rest buff, & a blue cap. Mr. Flint rode in white. The race was run in 9 minutes and 56 seconds. The oldest amateurs of the turf, who were present, acknowledged that Mrs. Thornton displayed a style of horsemanship and elegant seated riding, that was at least equal if not superior, to any thing they had seen from Chifney, Buckle, Shepherd, Gollinson, and other celebrated jockies. Not less than 200,000l. were supposed to be pending on this extraordinary match.

Mrs. Thornton against Mr. Flint.

Thornville Royal, Sept. 2.

Mr. Editor,—Having read in your paper that Mrs. Flint paid me every attention she could for the unfortunate accident of the 8th inst. I request you will publish the following Answers to Questions put to the gentlemen of the turf, for their opinion on a subject which any future match of this kind taking place.

ELEMENT [illegible] Baker, who kindly offered to ride [illegible] with me, on account of the [illegible] accident I met with [illegible] my [illegible] entirely [illegible] and [illegible] my [illegible] my [illegible] my

ney. On the ridges of the roofs are wells to drink out of, and they are bordered with flars. I believe in Heaven and Hell. The inhabitants of the former know no want, and the Houris who attend them, are never afflicted with ſickneſs. The floor of Paradiſe is muſk, the ſtones are ſilver, and the cement gold. The damned are, on the contrary, tormented with fire, and by voracious and poiſonous animals."

NEW-YORK, October 22.

Jerome Bonaparte.—Intereſting and pleaſing intelligence is received by gentlemen from France, reſpecting Jerome Bonaparte, and his lovely bride. It is confidently reported and credited in the firſt circles at Paris, that the Emperor forgives his brother Jerome, and takes the youthful couple into favor. This circumſtance is ſaid to have been effected or aided by a portrait of the lady, which had been tranſmitted to the mother of Bonaparte, and being much celebrated for its beauty, was ſent for by the Empreſs Joſephine.

A Bear Fight.—A Gentleman from Cayuga county, between the Seneca & Cayuga lakes, relates, that a Mr. Waybourne, a farmer in Ovid township, went out one afternoon thro' the woods in ſearch of his horſes, taking with him his rifle, with the only Load of ammunition he had in the houſe. On his return home, about an hour before duſk, he perceived a very large bear croſſing the path: on which he inſtantly fired, and the bear fell, but immediately recovered his legs, made for a deep ravine a ſhort way ahead. Here he tracked him a while by the blood? but night coming on, and expecting to find him there in the morning, he returned home. A little before day-break the next morning, taking a pitchfork and hatchet, and his dog, a boy of ten or eleven years of age, he proceeded to the place in queſt of the animal. The glen, or ravine, into which he had diſappeared the evening before, is eighty or ninety feet from the top of the banks to the bottom of the brook below; down this precipice a ſtream of three or four yards in breadth is precipitated in one unbroken ſheet, and forcing a circular baſon or pool, winds away under thick underwood below.

After reconnoitering every probable place of retreat, he at length diſcovered the bear, who had made his way up the other ſide of the ravine, as far as the rocks would admit him, and ſat under a projecting cliff, ſtedfaſtly eyeing the motions of his enemy.

Waybourne defiring his boy to remain where he was, took the pitchfork, and, deſcending to the bottom, determined to attack him from below.

The bear kept his poſition until he got within ſix or ſeven feet, when, on the inſtant of making a ſtab with the pitchfork, he found himſelf grappled by Bruſh, and both together rolled down towards the pond, at leaſt twenty or twenty-five feet, the bear munching his left arm . . breaſt, and hugging him almoſt to ſuffocation. By great exertion he forced his right arm partly down his throat, and in that manner endeavoured to ſtrangle him, but was once more hurled headlong down through the bushes, a greater diſtance than before, into the water. Mare, finding the bear gaining on him, he made one deſperate effort, and forced his head partly under water, and repeating his exertions, at length weakened the animal ſo much, that calling to his boy, who ſtood on the other ſide, in a ſtate little ſhort of diſtraction for the fate of his father, he ſunk the edge of his hatchet, by repeated blows into his brain.

Waybourne, though a robuſt muſcular man, was with great difficulty able to crawl home, where he lay for upwards of three weeks with his wounds, his arm being maſhed from the ſhoulder to the elbow into the bone, and his breaſt ſeverely mangled. The bear weighed upwards of 420 pounds.

PETER HUNTER,

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith, &c.

To our beloved and faithful Legiſlative Counſellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes of our ſaid Province, to the Provincial Parliament at our Town of York, on the thir[illegible] day of December, to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you—

GREETING!

WHereas by our Proclamation bearing date the eighteenth day of October laſt, We thought fit by & with the advice of our Executive Council to prorogue our ſaid Provincial Parliament until the Third day of this preſent month of December, at which time in our Town of York you were held and conſtrained to appear, but we taking into our Royal conſideration, the eaſe and convenience of our loving ſubjects, have thought fit by and with the advice and conſent of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforeſaid, hereby convoking, and by theſe preſents enjoining you and each of you that on the tenth day of January next enſuing you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into conſideration the ſtate and welfare of our ſaid Province of Upper Canada, and there to do as may ſeem neceſſary. Herein fail not.

IN Teſtimony whereof, WE have cauſed theſe Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our ſaid Province to be hereunto Affixed:—WITNESS Our Truſty and Well-Beloved PETER HUNTER Eſquire, Our Lieutenant Governor of Our ſaid Province, and Lieutenant General Commanding Our Forces in Our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at YORK, this firſt day of December, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Four, and in the Forty-fifth Year of Our Reign.

P. H.

WM. JARVIS, Secretary.

Council Chamber, 18th Oct. 1804.

By his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

ORDERED,

THAT in caſes wherein Locations have been made ſubject to Settling Duties, the parties be relieved from thoſe Settling Duties upon the following conditions, viz.—That each perſon to whom ſuch indulgence ſhall be granted, do, during the exiſtence of this Order, pay into the hands of the Receiver General ſuch Fees as would be required for the ſame quantity of Land under the Table of 6th July, 1804. And that ſuch parties who do not reſide in York, be reſpectively required alſo, to annex to the Receiver General's Receipt a Power of Attorney, nominating ſome perſon reſident in York as their Agent, to receive their Deed; which Power is to be lodged with the Surveyor General, previous to his deſcribing the Land, and by him tranſmitted, with the Deſcription, to the Secretary. But the caſes in which the Lands front the Main Road, in which Main Road is intended to be included the principal Road from the Point of Baudette to the Town of Sandwich, and alſo from the Town of York to Lake Simcoe, are to be conſidered as excepted out of this Order. And this Regulation is to be regarded as in force only for Twelve Months from the date hereof.

FROM A LONDON PAPER.

LORD CAMELFORD.

[WHO FELL IN A DUEL WITH MR. BEST.]

His Lordſhip made his will ſo long ago as the 24th May, 1790. In it, after bequeathing two annuities to Charles Cowper, Eſq. one of 300l. a year for Mr. Cowper's life, and the other of 100l. a year for the lives of two other perſons; to Henry Cowper Eſq. 1000l. and to Lord and Lady Grenville, 300l. each; he leaves all his eſtates to his mother, and after her death to his ſiſter. He ſtates, that the reaſon of his giving his brother and ſiſter ſo ſmall a ſum is, that he deviſed all his real eſtates whatſoever after the death of his mother to his dear ſiſter Lady Grenville. His mother and ſiſter are appointed executors to his will.

The following part is, in the original, in the Teſtators own hand writing.

"I beg Lord Grenville, whoſe repeated acts of kindneſs to me can never be erazed from my memory, and leave ſuch a deep impreſſion on me, not to conceive, that in leaving my property to my ſiſter, independent of him, I have ever had in view the inſuring his kindneſs to her by ſuch a ſtep, my real motive being an act of foreſight to thoſe times, in which from his ſituation and character, he will probably be expoſed to be deprived of every thing in his diſpoſal, although the right of a woman has one chance more of being reſpected, when there can be no doubt but he will be equally a partaker.

Part of the laſt ſheet cut off was done by me, this 16th October, 1801.

CAMELFORD.

I, Thomas Lord Camelford, of the pariſh of Boconnor, in the county of Cornwall, deliver this paper as an explanatory note and codicil to my will. —There are certain ſums of money of mine in the hands of Mr. Follin de la Bumerie, who lives at No. 805 Rue de l'Univerſite, at Paris; with this money he has purchaſed two eſtates, the one in Picardy, the other in Lauſanne; the whole of theſe lands, with what money of mine may be in his hands, I bequeath to the Grenvilles, in the ſame manner as the reſt of my property deſcribed in my will, after a ſettlement ſhall have been made upon him and his wife (that is upon their joint lives) of a ſalary equal to what he at preſent enjoys from me, which I believe is ſome where about two hundred and forty pounds a year: I likewiſe bequeath him 500l. as a proof of my eſteem and reſpect for his talents and integrity.

"I have likewiſe certain ſums of money in the hands of Mr. Nicholſon, ſchool maſter, of Soho ſquare, greateſt part of which is veſted in two ſhips deſtined for the South Sea Fiſhery; theſe I likewiſe bequeath to the Grenvilles, in the ſame way as the other, that is, in the manner deſcribed in my will, fifteen hundred pounds of this money is a loan to Mr. Nicholſon, made on a former occaſion, for the extending of his eſtabliſhment; this money, (namely 1500l.) I bequeath to him as a reward for his private confidential labours in my affairs; but the ſile patent machine will go to the Grenvilles.

"I likewiſe bequeath to my good and good friend and old shipmate Captain ——— a full discharge of all his debts, to be made by my heirs as soon as may be, together with the redemption of his half pay, which I have reason to fear he has sold; and I furthermore bequeath to him, a yearly annuity of 200l. whenever he is not employed on service, on condition that he does not reside in town, or within 100 miles of it.

To my friend Devereux I bequeath my little brown hunter, together with my guns, dogs, and other sporting apparatus, which I think will amuse him, and tend to drive away the recollection of the tedious hours I have made him spend. He will understand what that means, and I beg, that the whole of that business, in every way, may be forgot with me: that is, not mentioned by him. Having now mentioned all those to whom I am bound by sentiments of regret and esteem, I will say a word of perhaps one of the worst men that ever disgraced humanity. I mean ———. He has got the command of a ship of mine called the ——; the particulars of which are in the hands of Mr. Nicholson; part of her is his own, as I allow him to veil somewhat about 500l. in her; the precise sum is mentioned in the paper at Mr. Nicholson's. As there can be no doubt but that he will use every artifice in his power to defraud my heirs, I hereby declare that, except that share in the vessel, I do not owe him, to my knowledge, a single farthing: and I advise them to take the earliest opportunity of recovering their own.

"There are many other matters which, at any other time, I might be inclined to mention; but I will say nothing more at present, than that, in the present contest, I am fully and entirely the agressor, as well in the spirit as in the letter of the word.—Should I, therefore, lose my life in a contest of my own seeking, I must solemnly forbid any of my friends or relations, let them be whatsoever description they may, from instituting any vexatious proceedings against my antagonist; and should, notwithstanding the above declaration on my part the law of the land be put in force against him, I desire that this part of my will may be made known to the King, in order that his royal breast may be moved to extend his mercy towards him. With respect to myself, I have entertained an anxious desire that my remains may be deposited in some region of the earth, distant from the place of nativity, and where the surrounding scenery will smile upon me; others adorn their abode while living, and it is my fancy to adorn mine, when dead; for this purpose, I beseech, most earnestly, that whenever the times will permit, my body may be removed in the cheapest manner to the Island of St. Pierre, in the Lake of Neuve, in Switzerland, there to be deposited in the centre between the three trees that stands on the right of the Pavilion; a bush or some such thing may be planted over me, but without any stone or masonry in any shape or form whatever; and for the permission to have this my last wish carried into execution, I bequeath one thousand pounds to be paid to the Hospital at Berne, to whom the Island belongs. I appoint Devereux my executor for all those things relating to my burial, on which I attach more importance than a sensible man perhaps ought to do. With respect to all my other friends and relations, I beg that they will not mourn on my account, or shew any outward marks of regret for my loss."

"CAMELFORD (L. S.)"
"RICHARD WILSON."

"Put Lord Camelford by his express direction and authority."

Signed by Richard Wilson in the presence of and by the express direction of the within named Thomas Lord Camelford, and sealed, published, and delivered this eighth day of March, one thousand eight hundred and four, by the said Lord Camelford, as an expression of his last will and codicil to his will referred to by him herein; he having written and signed the contents hereof, on the 6th of this inst. (March) on two sheets and a half of paper, and being unable to re-sign the same at this present date, in the presence of us whose names are hereunder written, who, in his presence, and in the presence of each other, have subscribed our names as witnesses, attesting the same.

FROM ENGLISH PAPERS.

LONDON, SEPT.

Love at first sight.—Another lucky wedding took place in the begining of last week. Mr. P. a gentleman in the wine trade, with a fortune of about 8000l. passing along a street in the neighborhood of Oxford road, saw a pretty rustic girl, with ruddy cheeks, and sparkling eyes, whose tout ensemble made so sudden and forcible an impression on his breast, that he instantly requested to see her home. She told him, with a modest blush, he might see her to her aunt's house, to which was then going, and in a few moments they arrived at the door. The moment they were seated, he frankly proposed to the aunt to marry her neice. She, with equal candour, informed him, that the girl was a mere rustic, of low birth and parentage, her father being a cottager at Hirrow, who earned his daily subsistance by the low, but honest, industrious calling of a hedger and ditcher. This frank account made no impression disadvantageous to his lovely Jenny, in the generous mind of Mr. P. who repeated his firm determination, and married her the next day.

Mrs. Aufrere.—At three o'clock on Saturday died, at her house at Chelsea, Mrs. Aufrere, mother-in-law of Lord Yarborough. By the death of this venerable old Lady, his Lordship will come into possession of 50,000l. ready money, and one of the finest collections of paintings in this country. The late Sir Joshua Reynolds frequently said that it contained a great variety of pieces by the first masters of the Italian, Dutch, French, and Flemish schools, than any other private collection in England, and estimated it at 200,000l. value. It is supposed that the deceased, in conformity with her promises frequently repeated, has left besides a legacy of 10,000 to each of his Lordship's six daughters. His Lordship's two sons, it is also supposed, will enjoy 20,000 each, besides the Chelsea estate.

Exposure of Persons found dead.—The establishment of a new Morgue (a place where persons found dead are exposed at Paris) is finished. The inconveniences of the former depot, the reproach of all travellers, have entirely disappeared in the new one, constructed according to the plan of the Prefects of Police, and of the department of the Seine. Three large rooms are now designed for this establishment. The first is destined to exposition, where the corpses will be exposed separately upon black marble tables, and may be seen from the exterior through the windows. The second is consecrated to the opening of these bodies, which are to be dissected, or undergo some operation or verification; and the third is destined for the depot of effects, and of the coffins in which they are to be carried to their burial places. On the first day three rooms were opened, 9 corpses were exposed of persons who had committed suicides either by drowning or shooting themselves. Amongst them was the body of a young girl, not above 16, whose perfect form might rival that of Venus de Medici.—London Paper.

BIRMINGHAM THEATRICALS.
(FROM A CORRESPONDENT.)

I was induced, on Monday night, to visit the Theatre, in consequence of hearing the fame of young Roscius sounded far and near. Mr. HILL, with an eye to the main chance, engaged him to perform the part of Hamlet for his benefit, for which service he gave him 20 guineas. The Theatre was crowded in every part, and hundreds were obliged to retire without seeing him. The receipts amounted to upwards of 240l.

The character of Hamlet is one which calls for the utmost exertions of the performer, and in which it is requisite no mean share of ability should be displayed. I must confess, "seeing what I have seen" in London, and considering the youth of the candidate for fame, I went rather prejudiced; I was too well acquainted with common report, not to know, that it sometimes partook of the traveller's talent and would lie on the wrong side of truth.—How agreeably surprised must I have been to find, that in this instance, he had been too niggard of her praises. I must confess that I was astonished with the young Roscius's performance. He entered fully into the character. His conception of it was beyond what it could be possible to conceive in a boy not yet thirteen years old. He is the child of nature. He plays it from his own judgment, which, astonishing to say, seems already matured. The new beauties he struck out charmed the audience, who testified their sense of his uncommon merits by loud and repeated applause. His figure is very elegant indeed; his attitudes appropriately correct, his voice full and rather powerful possessing a sweetness which is rarely to be met with on the stage. In his performance of the character his nice discrimination was apparent throughout every scene. In that where he discovers the intentions of the Court sycophants Rosencrantz and Guildenstern) he was very great. In the interview with his mother, he touched her soul to the quick. And here in may be necessary, indeed it is an act of public justice, to notice Miss MORTON, who played the Queen mother in such an interesting manner, as failed not, to give it an importance which it never before possessed in the play.—The soliloquys were given with a nice attention to correctness; the expression of countenance which he evinced in giving effect to the meaning of the immortal Bard was such as to entitle him to be considered as a model of perfection. I should fill columns with his praise were I to enter into an analysis of his performance, which, to sum up in the most correct terms, is sufficient to leave criticism far behind.

The young Roscius, whose real name is WILLIAM HENRY WEST BETTY, was born on the 13th of Sept. 1791, at Shrewsbury, of very respectable parents. His general deportment is that of a well educated boy, much used to genteel life. His mother, who is with him here, is an elegant and accomplished woman. His share of the receipts of the house last week was 96 pounds.

NEW-YORK, NOVEMBER 15.

We are indebted to the politeness of Captain Bennett, of the ship Oliver Ellsworth from Liverpool, for a regular series of London papers from the 16th to the 26 of September, inclusive, and Liverpool papers to the 17th. They are ten days later than any advices previously received, and are the latest the vessels brings. It will be perceived, by the extracts we have made (which comprize the marrow of the intelligence) that these papers contain no political event of consequence.

LONDON, September 21.

By the Hamburgh mail we have received a letter from Paris, dated the 5th inst. which states, that the purport of the orders sent by the king of Sweden to his Ambassador there is, that he shall leave that city in six days, and the Swedes residing there in his majesty's service, in the course of fourteen. M. Signeul, the agent-general for trade, will alone remain their to superintend the commercial affairs of Sweden.

Letters from Amsterdam state, that the Russian Legation is expected soon to leave that place. This is a matter of course.

September 22

The brother of the king of France failed on Wednesday last, with a fair wind, for Gottenburgh, under convoy of a gun brig. Previous to his departure he received a letter from his Most Christian Majesty, which is understood to contain an assurance that the Emperor of Russia and the King of Sweden are willing to acknowledge Louis XVIII and his hereditary claims to the throne of France and Navarre, provided England will set them the example.

THOUGHTS OF MODESTY
BOTH IN MEN AND WOMEN.

AN easy an unaffected Modesty is a virtue not only graceful and excellent, but may be reckoned among the most durable beauties; it improves every look and feature, gesture and motion, stones for a mean dress, and sets off the richest with an additional lustre. The standard of beauty varies in proportion to the various opinions of mankind in different countries; but modesty, like light; is the same to all. Beauty, like a flower, is flow in its growth, short in its bloom, and its decay raises in us a sort of ill natured compassion. But modesty, in its dawn has its charms: and, when it has stood all attacks, is entitled to our admiration. Beauty may win the eye, and satisfy the present gust or appetite; but modesty engages the heart; it is the surest proof of good sense, and good sense is the strongest security a fine woman can give of making her admirer happy for life. The attempts made upon the fair to deprive them of this virtue, are a plain demonstration of its superior excellence; for a robber always aims at the most valuable plunder.

With the men modesty gives rise to true bravery and confidence, or at least supposes it. Modesty is slow but sure, and advances in a firm body; whilst Imprudence makes one bold and daring onset, but is easily demolished by breaking the the front.

CONSUMPTION.

Completely to eradicate this disorder, I will not positively say the following remedy is capable of doing; but I will venture to affirm, that a temperate mode of living, (avoiding spirituous liquors wholly); wearing Flannel next the skin; and taking every morning, half a pint of NEW MILK mixed with a wine glass full of the expressed juice of GREEN HORHOUND, the complaint will not only be relieved, but the individual shall procure to himself a length of days beyond what its mildest form could give room to hope for. I am myself, Sir, a living witness of the beneficial effects of this agreeable and, though innocent, yet powerful application. Four weeks use of the horehound and milk relieved the pains of my breast; gave me to breathe deep, long and free; strengthened and harmonized my voice; and restored me to a state of better health than I had enjoyed for many years.

FRENCH PRIVATEERS.

A respectable house in this city received with the Hamburgh Mail of yesterday, information that several stout privateers are fitting out at Bordeaux, Nantes, Marseilles, Antwerp and the Texel, intended during the winter, to injure our trade in the European as well as in the India seas. Six privateers, from 32 to 44 guns, will be ready to sail from Bordeaux before the 1st of October, supposed for the East Indies, and four privateers, of 24 guns, are nearly completed at Nantes, destined, according to report, to reinforce the numerous French pirates, who swarm around our West India settlements. At Marseilles, six other privateers, from 12 to 20 guns, were in the beginning of last month, at anchor near the Chateaue d'If, waiting for an opportunity to steal away for the Levant, whilst another squadron of privateers, under the command of the famous Blackman, are equipping at Antwerp, and in the Dutch ports, intended to pillage our trade in the German Sea, and in the Channel. These particulars are written by an American gentleman now at Hamburgh, and who has lately been travelling in France and Holland.

Private letters from Paris state, that at the Coronation of Bonaparte, as Emperor of the French, a new nobility will be instituted, under the title of Patricians, by a Senatus Consultus, to be proclaimed upon that occasion. This measure will include all persons, with their families and descendants, who within the first ten years of Bonaparte's reign have occupied, or shall occupy, the first and great places of State, such as Field Marshals, Commanders in Chief, Generals of Division, Ministers, Cardinals, Grand Officers of the Legion of Honor, Counsellors of State, Senators, &c.

The Atheniense, which convoy the outward bound China fleet, carried a letter accompanied with suitable presents, from his Majesty to the Emperor of China, which are no doubt intended as the overture for a future embassy to the court of Pekin. Many prejudices, it seems, formerly entertained in that country against the English character, have been removed since the splendid embassy of Lord Macartney, and we have long been the favored nation at Canton. The benefits that would arise to Great Britain, from a commercial treaty with that extensive empire, are incalculable.

A rail way upon a new construction (the rail being inverted, and the rim of the carriage concave to fit it.) has been laid down at Penbryn, Carmarvonshire, two miles and a quarter in length, and divided into five stages. It has three eighths of an inch fall in a yard, with three inches: begun in October, 1800, and finished in July, 1801. On this rail way two horses will draw 24 waggons one stage six times a day, and carry 24 tons each journey, that is 144 tons per day; a quantity which used to employ 144 carts, and 400 horses, so that 40 horses will, by means of this improved rail-way, do the work of 400.

At Wisbech, in Cambridgeshire, there has been a steam engine erected for grinding corn, which possesses the power of 80 horses, and has been finished at the expense of 20,000l.

A block of gypsum has been discovered near Paris, in which was found the Skeleton of an animal never before known.—It was at first thought to be a ram; but it is found to be a species of the rhinoceros.—The committe of the Museum of Natural History at Paris, has committed the examination of this curiosity to Mr Cuvier, who has been enabled to depict the whole osteology of the animal. The principal doubt is, if the lace be supplied with a projecting horn.

A poor man, who had been presented with a pair of elegant morocco slippers, of which he was very vain, walking one winter morning with them on some ice near his door, had an unlucky fall, in the view of a neighbor, who did not stir to his assistance. On complaining of this indifference, the neighbor replied, "why, friend, I thought you were exercising yourself on your slip pers."

A HINT TO FARMERS.

IF by drawing your manure only 100 rods, and ſpreading it four inches thick, on one acre of land, for planting, you can obtain a hundred buſhels of corn per acre, what a pity it is to draw it four hundred rods, and ſcatter it over eight acres, by ſpreading it half an inch thick, and obtaining only forty buſhels of corn per acre, with all the additional fatigue of man and beaſt.

Farmers, conſider which is moſt to your advantage, to economiſe in this line, or continue to work, as it were, at aim's end, by extending your manure too fat and too thin. Certainly the more compact your intereſt is, the eaſier you can govern and fence it.

DAVID BENEDICT.

A NEW invented carriage, called velocifere, drawn by four horſes, paſſed lately through the Elyſian Fields in Paris. It carried no leſs than 35 paſſengers, and will be no longer than 36 hours going from Paris to Lyons, a diſtance of 110 leagues, or 330 Engliſh miles. This curious invention promiſes to be of the greateſt advantage, both for their commercial and military tranſports. The inventor has obtained an Imperial patent.

PETER HUNTER,
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith &c.

To our beloved and faithful Legiſlative Counſellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes of our ſaid Province, to the Provincial Parliament at our Town of York, on the third day of December, to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you—

GREETING:

WHereas by our Proclamation bearing date the eighteenth day of October laſt, We thought fit by & with the advice of our Executive Council to prorogue our ſaid Provincial Parliament until the Third day of this preſent month of December, at which time in our Town of York you were held and conſtrained to appear, but we taking into our Royal conſideration, the eaſe and convenience of our loving ſubjects, have thought fit by and with the advice and conſent of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforeſaid, hereby convoking, and by theſe preſents enjoining you and each of you that on the tenth day of January next enſuing you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, there to take into conſideration the ſtate and welfare of our ſaid Province of Upper Canada, and there to do as may ſeem neceſſary. Herein fail not.

IN Teſtimony whereof, WE have cauſed theſe Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our ſaid Province to be hereunto Affixed.—WITNESS Our Truſty and Well-Beloved PETER HUNTER Eſquire, Our Lieutenant Governor of Our ſaid Province, and Lieutenant General Commanding Our Forces in Our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at YORK, this firſt day of December, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Four, and in the Forty-fifth Year of Our Reign.

P. H.

WM. JARVIS, Secretary.

Council Chamber, 18th Oct. 1804.

By his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

ORDERED,

THAT in caſes wherein Locations have been made ſubject to Settling Duties, the parties be relieved from thoſe Settling Duties upon the following conditions, viz.—That each perſon to whom ſuch indulgence ſhall be granted, do, during the exiſtence of this Order, pay into the hands of the Receiver General ſuch Fees as would be required for the ſame quantity of Land under the Table of 6th July, 1804. And that ſuch parties who do not reſide in York, be reſpectively required alſo, to annex to the Receiver General's Receipt a Power of Attorney, nominating ſome perſon reſident in York as their Agent, to receive their Deed; which Power is to be lodged with the Surveyor General, previous to his deſcribing the Land, and by him tranſmitted, with the Deſcription, to the Secretary. But the caſes in which the Lands front the Main Road, in which Main Road is intended to be included the principal Road from the Point of Boudette to the Town of Sandwich, and alſo from the Town of York to Lake Simcoe, are to be conſidered as excepted out of this Order. And this Regulation is to be regarded as in force only for Twelve Months from the date hereof. JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

STATE PAPER.

Relative to the new aſſumption of title by his Imperial Majeſty Francis II. Emperor of Germany.

Vienna, Auguſt 15.

"His Royal, Imperial, Apoſtolic Majeſty arrived in this city on the 10th inſt. from Baden, to aſſiſt at an extraordinary conference of ſtate, at which were preſent his Royal Highneſs the Archduke Charles, the Archduke Palatine of Hungary, the Chancellor of Hungary, that of Bohemia and Auſtria, that of Tranſylvania, the Vavernicus of Hungary, and the Preſident of the Chamber of Finances and of the Bank.

"In conſequence of the ſupreme determination which has been declared in this council of ſtate, the following Patent is publiſhed:

PATENT.

"We, Francis II. by the Grace of God, elected Emperor of the Romans, always Auguſt, King of Germany, of Hungary, and Bohemia, of Gallicia, Lodomeria, &c.

"Though we have already attained by the Divine will, and by the choice of the Electors of the Roman and Germanic empire, to a dignity which leaves no room to deſire any augmentation of titles and conſideration, it is, however our duty, in our quality of chief of the Auſtrian Houſe and Monarchy, to provide for the maintenance and preſervation of that equality of hereditary titles and dignities with the firſt ſovereigns and powers of Europe, which belongs to the Sovereigns of Auſtria, both on account of the ancient luſtre of their houſe, and in regard to the extent and population of their eſtates, comprehending independent kingdoms and principalities, ſo conſiderable, & which have been ſecured to them by poſſeſſion, agreeably to the right of nations, & by treaties.—To eſtabliſh, in a durable manner, this perfect equality of rank, we have determined, & think ourſelves authoriſed, after the example which has been given us in the preceding century by the imperial court of Ruſſia, and that which is now given to us by the new ſovereign of France, to confer alſo on the houſe of Auſtria, as far as relates to its independent ſtates, the hereditary title of EMPEROR. We have therefore reſolved, after mature reflection, ſolemnly to aſſume and to eſtabliſh, for us and for our ſucceſſors, in the unalterable poſſeſſion of our independent kingdoms and ſtates, the title and dignity of Hereditary Emperor of Auſtria, (as the denomination of our houſe) in ſuch a manner that all our kingdoms, principalities, and provinces ſhall invariably retain the titles, conſtitutions, prerogatives, and relations which they have hitherto enjoyed.

"According to this ſupreme deciſion and declaration, we decree and enact—

"1. That immediately after our title of Elected Emperor of the Romans, ſhall be inſerted that of Hereditary Emperor of Auſtria, after which ſhall follow our other titles of king of Germany, Bohemia, Hungary, &c.—then thoſe of Archduke of Auſtria, Duke of Styria, &c. and thoſe of the other hereditary countries. But as ſince our acceſſion to the throne, there have ſucceſſively taken place, in the poſſeſſions of our houſe, ſeveral changes, which have been confirmed by ſolemn treaties, we at the ſame time make known the undermentioned titles, newly regulated according to the prefent ſtate of things, and our will is, that they be introduced and employed in future.

" II. The title of Imperial Prince and of Imperial Princeſs, ſhall be given and conferred with that of Archduke & Archduchefs, as well as Royal Highneſs, to our deſcendants of both ſexes, and to thofe of our ſucceſſors in the ſovereignty of the houſe of Auſtria.

" III. As all our kingdoms and other poſſeſſions muſt retain, without reſtriction, their preſent denominations and relations, this is underſtood in particular of our kingdom of Hungary, and of the countries which are united to it, and alſo of ſuch of our hereditary ſtates as have hitherto been in immediate relation with the Germanic empire, which ought in future to preſerve the ſame relations with it agreeably to the privileges granted to our houſe by the Emperors our predeceſſors.

" IV. We reſerve to ourſelves the right of determining hereafter the ſolemnities which ſhall take place at our coronation and that of our ſucceſſors as Hereditary Emperor. Thoſe however which were practiſed at our coronation, and at that of our predeceſſors, as King of Hungary and Bohemia, ſhall continue to ſubſiſt in future without any change.

" V. This declaration and ordinance ſhall be publiſhed and carried into execution throughout all our hereditary kingdoms and ſtates, without delay, and in the accuſtomed forms. We have no doubt that our ſtates and ſubjects will receive with gratitude and patriotic intereſt this diſpoſition, the object of which is to maintain the conſideration of the Auſtrian Monarchy.

" Done at Vienna, the 11th Auguſt, 1804."

LONDON September 24.

Two Gottenburgh mails have arrived, which have brought the following very important intelligence:

" GOTTENBURGH Sept. 14.

A war between Sweden & France ſeems unavoidable, for in conſequence of the ſevere obſervations contained in the Monitcur of the 24th ult. upon the King of Sweden's Notes delivered at the Diet of Ratiſbon, the latter has prohibited all French papers from being circulated in Sweden; and by the poſt from Stockholm of the 10th inſt. we learn, that a courier from the King arrived there on Saturday laſt, the 8th inſt. when a Council was immediately ſummoned, at which it was determined to prohibit all the French papers, and to forbid, upon pain of diſmiſſion, all the civil and military officers from holding any communications with the French Charge d'Affaires, who in conſequence left Stockholm on the 10th inſt.

" The reaſon of the above mentioned proceedings ſeems to be ſufficiently explained by a fact ſtated in private letters, received by the laſt Hamburgh mail. Theſe letters ſtate, that Bonaparte's emiſſaries in Sweden are buſily employed in diſtributing tranſlations in the Swediſh language of his late official libel in the Monitcur againſt the king of Sweden."

Orders were received on Friday at Plymouth for all the frigates to get ready for ſea as ſoon as poſſible.

Diſpatches were received on Saturday from our fleet off Breſt, which was left all well laſt Wednesday. The enemy remained at ſingle anchor, but their van diviſion has been lately painted, and the ſhips have had all their yards, tops, and bends newly varniſhed. Several ſmall parties of ſoldiers have deſerted lately in open boats from Breſt, and Camaret Point battery, to the frigates of our in ſhore ſquadron. They ſay, that the troops are diſcontented with their inactivity; but that the fleets in the outer road have troops on board, and have poſitive orders to endeavour to puſh out the firſt opportunity that offers.

A letter from an officer of one of our in-ſhore cruizers off Fluſhing, ſtates, that on Tueſday laſt, at 11 A M. turning up towards Fluſhing, they ſaw ſeventeen ſail of ſchooners and luggers running down under Dutch colours; at 9 A. M. they anchored in Oſtend Roads, from whence they were joined by ten other ſchooners and forty ſail of ſchuyts with troops on board. Seven ſail of ſchooners remained in Oſtend Roads, the reſt ran for Dunkirk harbour, where they judged there might be about one hundred ſail of the ſame ſort of veſſels, and three preams. The cutter boarded three neutral veſſels which came out of Oſtend; they informed him, that there had been an embargo there for two months, but that it was taken off when the flotilla had ſailed, and that only one frigate was left behind at Fluſhing to ſerve as a guard ſhip, &c. all the reſt of the flotilla had ſailed of every deſcription. The troops are repreſented to be diſcontented with their ſtate of inactivity; they had hoped before this to have ſhared the wealth of this "proud iſland of ſhop-keepers."

It is ſuppoſed, from the frequent obſervations which have been made by Lord Keith and Sir Home Popham, on the ſtate of the enemy's fortifications on the oppoſite coaſt, that ſome attempt is to be made to deſtroy the flotillas collected in the harbours of Calais and Boulogne. The latter is ſo perfectly protected by the commanding heights which form the harbour, as to render any enterprize of the kind on the ſea ſide abſolutely impracticable. The ſame advantages ſecure it againſt bombardment.

Extract of a letter from the Mediterranean, brought by the Agincour.—" There are 21 ſail of the line off Toulon, with Lord Neilſon; and the French have 8 ſail of the line, in perfect readineſs for ſea; which occaſionally come out, when our ſhips are at a diſtance off the ſhore. The infirm ſtate of his Lordſhip's health, it is confidently believed in the fleet, will cauſe him to return to England immediately, in the Meduſa frigate, Captain Gorf. The Ruſſians, it is ſuſpected, intend to ſend a force into Naples.—Genoa is ſo cloſely blockaded by the Engliſh, that no veſſel can come out without being captured. We keep a ſhip of the line in Naples Bay to watch the movements of the French, who are not far diſtant from the neighborhood. The ſtraits of Meſſina and that coaſt, are guarded by five frigates, under the command of Captain Calcraft of the Anſon, to prevent the French taking poſſeſſion of Sicily."

According to letters which are ſtated to have been received from our blockading ſquadron off the Texel, the Batavia ſquadron in that port have lately indicated ſomething of a diſpoſition to put to ſea. For nearly ten days all the officers were ſtrictly commanded to ſleep on board their reſpective ſhips, and expected to ſail as ſoon as an opportunity preſented itſelf. The Dutch ſhips were repreſented by the captain of a Ruſſian ſhip, who was ſpoken by our cruizers, as being victualled for ſix months; and hence an idea was entertained they were to proceed on ſome diſtant expedition. The number of ſhips ready for ſea, the ſame captain ſtated, to be ſix ſhips of the line, four frigates, and a few ſmaller veſſels. The land troops on board were not more than 5000 men. Theſe ſtories have, however, been ſo often repeated, that little credit can be attached to them.

A Glaſgow gentleman on his arrival at Frankfort, 18 Sept. 1804, writes home to his correſpondents:—" On my journey through Hanover, I met with ſeveral regiments marching towards the Elbe. As far as I could learn it is ſuppoſed that their intention is to block up the paſſage of the Britiſh goods from Hamburgh and Lubeck, into the interior of Germany, and ſome even go ſo far as to ſay, that they are to take poſſeſſion of Mecklenburg, by which, if they ſucceed, a final ſtop will be put to the expedating of goods from theſe quarters."

September 26.

We become more and more convinced that the invaſion will ſhortly be attempted. Our laſt advices from Breſt left the fleet of 21 ſail of the line in the outer harbour, with orders to ſail the firſt favourable wind.

CRIM CON.

Rev. Charles Maſſey, vs. the Moſt Noble the Marquis of Headfort.

The trial of the action in this caſe came on at the late Aſſizes of Ennis in Ireland, before the Hon. Baron Smith, and a moſt reſpectable jury, of which the two firſt jurors were Sir Edward O'Brien, and Sir Joſeph Peacock, Barts. The action was brought for criminal converſation with the plaintiff's wife, and the damages were laid at 40,000l. After very eloquent ſtatements & ſpeeches to evidence by Meſſrs. Ponſonby, Curran, Hoare & Quin, the proofs were ſummed up by the learned Judge; and the jury, after having retired for about ten minutes, returned a verdict for the plaintiff of 10,000l. damages, and 6d. coſts

The trial laſted twelve hours. The Biſhop of Limerick, Lord Adare, and Col. Prendergaſt Smith, were ſummoned as witneſſes by the Marquis, and attended in court, but were not examined. Mrs. Charles Maſſey, is ſiſter to the Biſhop of Limerick's Lady. The concourſe of people in court was immenſe, yet perfect order was preſerved throughout the whole of the trial. So much curioſity and expectation had this action excited, that beds are ſaid to have been let in the town of Ennis for 20 guineas each during the aſſizes.

MANNERS OF THE CEYLONESE.

From Percival's Account of that Iſland

" The women are not to tall in proportion as the men; they are much fairer, and approach to a yellow or mulatto colour. They continually anoint their bodies with cocoa nut oil; and in particular always keep their hair moiſt with it. Both ſexes are remarkably clean and neat both in their perſons and houſes. In dreſſing their victuals they are ſcrupulouſly nice. They are cautious not even to touch the veſſel out of which they drink with their lips; but (what would ſeem a very awkward method to an European) they hold the veſſel at ſome diſtance over their heads, and literally pour the drink down their throats. It is perhaps from the fear of not doing it with ſufficient dexterity that they never ufe their left hand in preparing their food, or in eating it. While at meals, they ſeldom converſe with each other: they even ſeem to look upon the whole buſineſs of eating as ſomething rather required by neceſſity, than very conſiſtent with decency: while drinking they never turn their faces towards each other.

" In their diet they are exceedingly abſtemious; fruits and rice conſtitute the chief part of their food. In ſome places where fiſh abounds, they make it a portion of their meals, but ſcarcely any where is fleſh in common uſe.

" The Ceyloneſe are courteous and polite in their demeanour, even to a degree far exceeding their civilization. In ſeveral qualities they are greatly ſuperior to all other Indians who have fallen within the ſphere of my obſervation. I have already exempted them from the cenſure of ſtealing and lying, which ſeem to be almoſt inherent in the nature of an Indian. They are mild, and by no means captious or piſſionate in their intercourſe with each other; though when once their anger is roufed, it is proportionably furious & laſting. Their hatred is indeed mortal, and they will frequently deſtroy themſelves to obtain the deſtruction of the deteſted object. One inſtance will ſerve to ſhew the extent to which this paſſion is carried. If a Ceyloneſe cannot obtain money due to him by another, he goes to his debtor, and threatens to kill himſelf if he is not inſtantly paid. This threat, which is ſometimes put into execution, reduces the debtor, if it be in his power, to immediate compliance with the demand; as by their law if any man cauſes the loſs of another man's life, his own is the forfeit. " An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth," is a proverbial expreſſion continually in their mouths.—This is on other occaſions a very common mode of revenge among them; and a Ceyloneſe has often been known to kill himſelf in the company of his enemy, that the latter might ſuffer for it."

SAGACITY OF THE INDIAN RAT

THIS ſagacious animal knowing the enmity the dragon bears him, and knowing alſo the inſufficiency of his own ſtrength to reſiſt him, not only defends himſelf, but conquers his enemy by the following ſtratagem. He makes two entrances to his cave, the one ſmall, and proportioned to the bulk of his own body, the other wider at the ſurface, but which he draws narrower by degrees, until towards the end, it is but juſt wide enough to admit of his paſſing through. The uſe of this place, is as follows, when the little animal finds himſelf purſued by that voracious beaſt, he flies to his cave, which he enters at the wide mouth, not doubting but that the dragon will follow him, who eager for his prey, the large aperture being ſufficiently wide to admit his whole body he plunges in, but as it inſenſibly becomes narrower, the dragon who preſſes violently on, finds himſelf in the end ſo ſtraitened as not to be able to advance nor retreat. The rat as ſoon as he perceives this, failies out of the narrow paſſage, and in the rear of the dragon, entering the wide one, revenges himſelf upon him, much at his leiſure, converting him into a regale for his appetite and food for his reſentment.

THE PRETTY COTTAGER.

AS on a pleaſant hill I ſtood,
A cottage in the vale I view'd,
Where I had never been;
I thither went, as to a town,
'Twas growing late, the ſun was down,
I call'd to be let in.

A young and pretty cottager,
Came tripping, ſinging to the door,
And took it a fool's delight,
While bloſhes heighten'd every grace,
I ſilence broke, I told my caſe,
And begg'd to ſtay all night.

With trembling, accent came reply,
"Your ſuit I'm ſorry to deny,
" But I am quite alone "
I urg'd diſtreſs and innocence,
While ſhe reply'd, " On no pretence!
" You muſt not I pray be gone."

'Twas overcaſt I a lowering ſky!
It rained! the whiſtling winds blew high!
And I to wander went;
When kind compaſſion ſeiz'd her ſoul,
She could not bear me thus to ſtroll,
She call'd and gave conſent.

But me enjoin'd to give a proof,
Of honor, while beneath her roof,
(For virtue ſhe could boaſt);
I vow'd to act the noble part,
Her would have thank'd with all my heart,
But found my heart was loſt.

Her modeſt air, her pretty face,
Her...gods! her every charming grace,
I to the world prefer;
And if ſhe learns to live like me,
My glory day and night ſhall be
The pretty cottager.

SHEEP STEALING.

THE following is related as a fact, as having actually happened ſome years ſince in the ſtate of Connecticut. A man in rather different circumſtances, ſurrounded by a large family being entirely out of meat, had recourſe to his neighbor's (a wealthy farmer) ſheepfold for relief. The neighbor having a large flock of Sheep, did not perceive he had loſt any, until one of the fineſt in the flock, very fat, was miſſing—and counting his ſheep, found he had loſt ſeveral. Unable to account for this extraordinary loſs, he reſolved a few nights after to watch. About midnight he obſerved an uncommon diſturbance among the ſheep, by the appearance of a man dreſſed in diſguiſe. Curioſity, as well to obſerve the conduct of the perſon as to find him out, induced him to lie ſtill. In the flock there was a large ram, with whom, it ſeems, the man was in the habit of converſing as if he had been the actual owner of the ſheep.—" Well, Mr. Ram," ſays the nocturnal ſheep ſtealer, " I am come to buy another ſheep; have you any more to ſell?" Upon which he replied himſelf, as in the perſon of the ram. " Yes, I have ſheep to ſell." By this time, the owner of the ſheep perceived him to be one of his neighbors. " What will you take for that large fat wether?" ſays the purchaſer. " Four dollars," replies Mr. Ram. " That is a high price," ſays the man: " but as you are ſo good as to wait on me for the pay I think I will take him." " Well, Mr. Ram," continues the honeſt ſheep-buyer, " let us ſee how many ſheep I have bought of you." " If I am not miſtaken," ſays Mr. Ram, " this makes the fifth;" and then went on to caſt up the amount of the whole; and after giving Mr. Ram a polite invitation to call on him for his pay, and bidding him a good night, took the wether, and led him home, while the owner lay laughing at the novelty of the ſcene, as highly gratified as if he had received ample pay for the whole.

A few nights afterwards, when he ſuppoſed his neighbor was nearly out of mutton, he caught the old ram, tied a little bag under his neck, and placed a piece of paper between his horns, on which he wrote in large letters, I HAVE COME AFTER MY PAY. Under this line he footed up the amount of the five ſheep exactly as his neighbor had done, as before related: he then took the ram to his neighbour's houſe, where he tied him near his door and then went home.

When the nighbor aroſe in the morning, he was not a little ſurpriſed to find a ſheep tied to his own door; but it is beyond words to expreſs his aſtoniſhment when he found it was the old ram with whom he had lately been deſtroying ſo much in mutton, with his errand on his forehead, and the amount of the five ſheep accurately made out, as he had done a few nights before in the perſon of the Ram. Suffice it to ſay, he obtained the money, and after tying it up nicely in a little bag, and tearing the paper from his horns, let the Ram at liberty, who immediately ran home, jingling his money as if proud of having accompliſhed the object of his errand—to the no ſmall gratification of the owner.

PETER HUNTER,

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith:—

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Councellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to the Provincial Parliament at our Town of York, on the tenth day of January to be commenced, held, called and elected, and to every of you—

GREETING:

WHereas by our Proclamation bearing date the first day of DECEMBER last, We thought fit by and with the advice of our Executive Council to prorogue our said Provincial Parliament until the tenth day of January, one thousand eight hundred & five, at which time in our Town of York you were held and constrained to appear, but we taking into our Royal consideration, the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice and content of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you and each of you that on the first day of February next, which will be in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and five, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, FOR THE ACTUAL DISPATCH OF PUBLIC BUSINESS, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our said Province of Upper Canada, and there to do as may seem necessary. Herein fail not.

IN Testimony whereof, WE have caused these Our Letters to be made Patents, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto Affixed;—WITNESS Our Trusty and Well-Beloved PETER HUNTER Esquire, Our Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Lieutenant General Commanding Our Forces in Our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at YORK, this twenty-eighth day of December, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Four, and in the Forty-fifth Year of Our Reign.

P. H.

WM. JARVIS, Secretary.

Council Chamber, 18th Oct. 1804.

By his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

ORDERED,

THAT in cases wherein Locations have been made subject to Settling Duties, the parties be relieved from those Settling Duties upon the following conditions, viz.—That each person to whom such indulgence shall be granted, do, during the existence of this Order, pay into the hands of the Receiver General such Fees as would be required for the same quantity of Land under the Table of 6th July, 1804. And that such parties who do not reside in York, be respectively required also, to name to the Receiver General's Receipt a Power of Attorney, nominating some person resident in York as their Agent, to receive their Deed; which Power is to be lodged with the Surveyor General, previous to his describing the Land, and by him transmitted, with the Description, to the Secretary. But the rates in which the Lands front the Main Road, to which Main Road is intended to be included, the principal Road from the Point of Boudette to the Town of Sandwich, and also from the Town of York to Lake Simcoe, are to be considered as excepted out of this Order. And this Regulation is to be regarded as in force only for Twelve Months from the date hereof.

Latest Intelligence.

LONDON, AUGUST 20, 1804.

LOUIS XVIII.

Attempt to poison the Bourbon Family.

In what words shall we announce the intelligence we are about to communicate to our readers?—What language can be found adequate to the expressing what every man must feel at the gigantic plan of assassination which has been adopted by BONAPARTE, and by which he has attempted to take off at one stroke by poison the whole of the Royal Family at Warsaw; the mild and virtuous Louis XVIII. and his amiable consort; the gallant Duke d'Angouleme; and the interesting Dutchess, the last child of Louis XVI. the companion of his imprisonment in the temple; the witness of the last sorrows of her murdered parents and her infant brother? [illegible] a subsequent part of our paper, we have given the detail and the Proces Verbal, which has been transmitted to Monsieur, signed by all the officers of the Court of Louis XVIII. The deed was to have been perpetrated by arsenic, introduced into some carrots, which were to have been thrown into one of the utensils used in cooking the French King's dinner. The principal persons concerned were two men sent from France for the express purpose, who endeavoured to corrupt a Frenchman settled at Warsaw, formerly in the service of the Queen's Equerry, who was well acquainted with the persons of his Majesty's household. The Frenchman listened to the offers made him, received the poisoned carrots, and disclosed the horrible plot to his former master.

His Majesty's Ministers immediately made known the affair to the Prussian Governor of the town, to whose fidelity they knew the Proces Verbal was highly interesting by the various reports which were spread every day, of plots to take away the life of the King, at the eve of his departure for Russia. But an after thought of degrading prudence, a disgraceful apprehension of committing the King of Prussia with the French Emperor, deterred the Governor from taking any measures; and Louis the XVIIIth might, for any help that was taken by the Prussian Governor to prevent it, have been assassinated at Warsaw, with the previous knowledge of the Governor that such a diabolical plan was in agitation.—The poisonous preparation, as soon as it was delivered to the King's Ministers, was sealed up by the Archbishop of Rheims and the Count D'Avary, and not opened until several professional men had been assembled. In the heart of one of the carrots was a powder, which upon being analyzed, was found to contain white, yellow and red arsenic. All these particulars were transmitted to the Prussian Governor, and the Chief Magistrate of the police, who both declined interfering, and who would not even order the assassins to be apprehended.

His Majesty, who displayed throughout the whole business the tranquility of conscious rectitude, delayed in consequence of it his departure from Warsaw a few days. He intended to have set out on the 25th ult. but did not set out until the 30th. Before his departure he dispatched an extraordinary Courier to Berlin with a Proces Verbal and a letter to the King of Prussia, complaining not only of the violation of the laws of hospitality, but those of humanity.

Having informed the Prussian Commander of the day of the departure, His Majesty was told, "that it would be more agreeable to his Master, if the Count De Lille (Louis XVIII.) would wait some days until farther instructions could be obtained from Berlin. The King of France then asked, if he had orders to prevent his departure, and demanded to see them, adding, that if none were produced, His Majesty was determined to quit that city immediately, and nothing but open force should prevent him from doing so. A bow was the only answer of the Prussian Commander, and Louis XVIII. left Warsaw on the 30th of last month, at seven o'clock in the morning—The Proces Verbal says, that he was accompanied only by the Duke D'Angouleme. Another account asserts, that he was accompanied by the Queen, the Duke and Dutchess of Angouleme, and all persons attached to him, with the exception of Count de la Chapelle, His Majesty's Minister of the War Department, who remained behind until the answer of the King of Prussia is obtained, and it is known, whether these poisoners, members of Bonaparte's secret police, who hitherto, under the protection of his Commercial Commissary Boyer, continue at large, and are protected in his house, are to enjoy impunity.

Shocked as we are at this new atrocity on the part of the Usurper, we are not surprised. Affairs have taken their expected course. The poisoner of his soldiers at Jaffa, and the assassin of the Duke D'Enghien at Vincennes, must naturally have been expected to have gone on in blood.

Cruor qui fit blood, must be by blood maintained.

How long is the earth to be cursed and burthened with such a Monster?

September 27.

In consequence of a message from Lord Harrowby, his Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, a committee, consisting of the following gentlemen, engaged in the Spanish trade, waited upon his Lordship yesterday.

Mr. Murphy, from the house of Gordon and Murphy.

Mr. Bell, from the house of Reed and Prinson.

Mr. Macdonald, Bitter-square. And Mr. Turnbull, chairman of the committee of Merchants trading to the South of Europe, with some other considerable merchants in the Spanish trade.

Lord Harrowby informed them, that he had desired to see them upon the subject of our relations with Spain, in which they were so materially interested. His Lordship acquainted them, that there were certain negociations, on important points, now pending between Spain and Great Britain, the issue of which was uncertain. Some explanation had also been required, as to the intention with which the armaments now preparing in the ports of Spain were to be fitted out; to which no satisfactory answer had hitherto been received.

His Lordship thought it necessary to make these communications, leaving it to the direction of the gentlemen who were present to adopt that line of conduct for the regulation of their mercantile concerns, which they should think most advisable."

The committee entered into a long discussion with Lord Harrowby upon the subject of the conduct of Spain to this country since the signature of the peace of Amiens. They dwelt more particularly upon the infraction of the 14th article of the definitive treaty of peace, which provides that "all the sequestrations laid on either side upon funds, revenues and credits, of any nature whatsoever they may be, belonging to any of the contracting parties, or to their citizens or subjects, shall be taken off immediately after the signature of the definitive treaty.

"The decision of all claims among the individuals of the respective nations for debts, property, effects, or rights, of any nature whatsoever, which should, according to received usage, and the law of nations, be preferred, at the epoch of peace, shall be referred to the competent tribunals—in all those cases speedy and complete justice shall be done in the countries wherein the claims shall be respectively preferred."

Of this article the committee urged that Spain had been guilty of a direct violation. We are not informed of the answer returned by Lord Harrowby upon this point; but had that been our sole grievance, it might have been inexpedient to have insisted upon the removal of it during the continuance of the war with France. Undoubtedly the great grounds of complaint at present are, the armaments recently ordered in the Spanish ports, upon which no satisfactory explanation has been given—the supplies furnished to France—the treatment of Mr. Frere, and the insulting conduct of the Prince of Peace.—That any satisfactory explanation and apology will be afforded upon any of these points, we (Courier) confess we do not entertain the slightest expectation.—They seem to have been intended and adopted with a view to hostilities with this country. When the Spanish government ordered ships to be armed, they must have been prepared to expect a remonstrance from our court, and to suppose that nothing less would content us than disarming. Now we cannot imagine Spain to be so weak, as to arm, with a determination to disarm, if any dissatisfaction should be expressed on our part.

We have above, stated the result of the interview between Lord Harrowby and the merchants carrying on the trade with Spain. We have now to state further that the merchants have since waited on Chevalier de Anduaga, the Spanish Ambassador, to ascertain as far as could be consistent with propriety, his excellency's sentiments on the impending danger: and particularly to request that he would favor them with an assurance, that ships laden with grain from this country for Spain, would be protected in the same manner as those loaded with wool from Spain were by our cruisers, even in time of war. The conduct of his Excellency eventually proved, that he not only wished to avoid an answer at the time to questions of a public nature, but that he was fearful of saying any thing which might commit his authority, or implicate precipitately in any degree the interests of the two countries. His Excellency, however, went so far as to say, that to start a doubt on the subject, would be to suppose that the Spanish government were about to act on a system diametrically opposite to that principle which had hitherto governed their intercourse with Great-Britain. The merchants then urged the propriety of assurances from Chevalier Anduaga, in his Ambassadorial capacity that no sequestration of property would take place so far as regarded vessels laden with grain for the supply of Spain, and that such vessels would experience the same protection as those now experienced that brought wool from Spain to this country. His Excellency still waved any direct answer or assurance; but when the merchants said that such instructions respecting the wool ships had been issued and sanctioned by the British government, and that they could produce such a paper for the satisfaction of his Excellency, if he pleased, the Chevalier Anduaga at last observed, that if they would favor him with a copy of the document now discribed, he would take the particular case which they represented into consideration.—If however, the Spanish Ambassador has received instructions from his court on this point, it is obvious that he cannot take upon himself to give any pledge—nay more, if the court of Spain itself has not received instructions from St. Cloud, no pledge can be given that may not be forfeited. Even an assurance from the two united would be no security. Do not the just claims of our merchants for property sequestered during the late war, still remain unsatisfied, though stipulated for in the treaty of peace? Can we expect they will be more honorable when the countries shall be again in a state of warfare?

On the subject of the armaments, it is reported that upon a question from our Minister at Madrid, requesting an explanation of their objects and destination, the Spanish Government insolently answered by asking in return, "what was the destination of the Russian naval and military armaments in the Mediterranean?" It is also said, that our Government have received certain information of another treaty concluded between France and Spain, by which the latter stipulates for the active assistance of the Spanish navy, in the prosecution of the war against England," and under arms, in consideration thereof, to acknowledge his Catholic Majesty Emperor of Spain, and to extend his revolutionary empire by the annexation of Portugal. If these reports be founded in fact, we may pity the fate of Spain, but we must take care of ourselves—If true, Spain is completely melted down, and mixed in the revolutionary crucible with France. Their principles and views are one and indivisible, and it is idle, after such proceedings, to talk of the King or Government of Spain. Bonaparte and his portable Cabinet, whether at St. Cloud, at Aix la Chappelle, or at Mentz, are the King and Council of Madrid, equally the masters of the lives and property of the Spaniards, as of the Dutch and the French.

The sailing of the frigates from Plymouth on Saturday and Monday was, we conjecture, with a view to hostilities with Spain. Orders have been sent to Falmouth to countermand till further orders the sailing of the Walsingham packet, which was in course of service with the mail of the 18th. We imagine too that the sailing of the vessels now loading at Hull for Lisbon, Oporto, Cadiz, Bilboa, &c. which were expected to sail from thence on the 14th October, to join the general convoy at Plymouth on the 20th, will be deferred.

Policies were done yesterday to a very large amount, on the immediate probability of a Spanish war. Twenty-five guineas were given for the return of one hundred, if hostilities were commenced between Spain and Great Britain in the course of three months. Yet, amidst these hostile appearances, it is still said that Mr. Welleslay, who has been appointed to succeed Mr. Frere, is continuing his preparations for his mission, and that there is every likelihood of his setting out for that Court in the course of a few days.

ADVERTISEMENT EXTRA.

[The following exquisite satire, on the humbug style of recommending PATENT MEDECINES, is too good a thing to let passmenters the reading of it may give some relief to those afflicted with the gout.]

Essential Tincture of Gridiron;

OTHERWISE CALLED,

NATURE'S GRAND RESTORATIVE.

DR. Simeon Ramrod, by a scrutinous and chemical analization of vegetable substances, has recently discovered that Gridirons contain a subtle invigorating fluid, sympathetically allied to the nervous or magnetic fluid of the human body, which, being skilfully extracted and properly prepared, becomes a specific, mild and infallible remedy for almost every complaint, of mind and body, to which human nature has been subject since the flood. It is found also to have a powerful effect on the brute creation, and on various inanimate substances; to relief against accidents, to be a wonderful quickener of the circulations, and to give renovated strength to all muscular exertions; from which it is found useful to persons travelling by sea or by land, and to those exposed to extraordinary dangers.

To announce the instances in which Ramrod's Tincture of Gridiron has proved beneficial, would be but to give a detail of all the diseases to which men, women and children are subject. The following are but a few out of a thousand and upwards of certificates which have been, or may be procured, as a testimony of its efficacy.

The subscriber has long been afflicted with the tooth-ache, to such a degree that nearly all his teeth had been drawn out; and by an unjust sentence, he also unfortunately, had both his ears cut off. On applying a little of the Tincture of Gridiron to his head, his teeth were restored, and his head was instantly supplied with as fine a pair of ears as he could boast of the day he was born.

JOHN EARWIG.

Not long since, riding on the highway, my horse stumbled and fell, and so lamed himself as to be unable to proceed. I heard of a phial of the Tincture of Gridiron in the neighbourhood, and suddenly found myself at the end of my journey, without further trouble.

JONA SPEEDWELL.

Some time ago my house was very much infested with rats; and, one day, while I sat brooding over my misfortunes, a large number of them suddenly came upon me, and ate me up. I instantly took some of the Tincture of Gridiron, and found myself at ease, and have never been eaten since.

JACK RECOVER.

I was, not long since, subject to extreme fatigue from dancing or other exercise. I took a small quantity of the Tincture of Gridiron, and have been dancing ever since, without the least inconvenience.

SAMUEL RIGADOON.

Riding the other day, I accidentally fell into a ditch, and broke my legs, my arms and my neck. On taking a little of the Tincture of Gridiron, I instantly recovered, and have never been near a ditch since, nor felt a desire to approach one.

TOM TUMBLE.

Walking, not long since, near the machinery of a mill, I was caught and carried between two cog wheels, and every bone in my body broke to pieces. A phial of Ramrod's Tincture of Gridiron being thrown into the mill-pond, I found myself restored, and as whole and sound as a roach.

DICK WHIRLIGIG.

Note.—Gridirons taken in their natural state, and particularly taken whole, are, by skilful chemists, deemed extremely dangerous; but the recent discovery of a mode of preparing the tincture from them, places them in the first rank of valuable plants.

Beware of Counterfeits.

Each bottle is stopped with a gimblet, and sealed with juniper berries, and labelled "Ramrod's Tincture of Gridiron." To be sold (only) by the subscriber, in Frying-pan Alley, at the sign of the Tea-kettle, who always inscribes his own name.

A CASE FOR THE GENTLEMEN OF THE LAW.

WILL WEBSTER, of Stamford, sold as good a cup of ale, as ever mantled in a beer glass. He was bred a baker, and, as in common in the country, he always sold bread; and it was as usual for working people to call for a penny loaf as a penny worth of ale at his house.

A man came one day for six penny loaves.—Webster served him as he sat in the drinking room; and after they had been delivered to him, he said, "Master Webster, take one of your loaves back, I'll have but five, and bring me a penny worth of ale, that will make up the six pence, all the same, you know." The ale was brought him, and he gave a loaf for it, drank it and called for another, and another, and another, until he had exchanged the six loaves for six penny-worth's of ale! then rising up, said, Mary must do with brown bread, which he believed would be quite as good for her health; and was deliberately marching off, when the landlord desired to be paid. "Paid! for what?" said the fellow. "For my bread," answered the landlord. "Your bread—have you not had it again?"—"Why then pay me for the ale," said the publican. "I gave you bread for it," answered the defendant.—"That is true" answered Boniface, "yet somewhat I think I am cheated, but if ever you bother me again, call me cut, that's all—you shall always pay for every thing as I bring it in."

Law Query. Upon what can the landlord bring his action?

Dr. Darwin, who has the happy art of illustrating from the most familiar circumstances in real life the abstract theories of philosophy, has given the following picturesque instances of the use of varying motives to prolong exertion.

A little boy, who was tired of walking, begged his papa to carry him—"Here," says his father, "ride upon my gold-headed cane."—The pleased child, putting it between his legs, galloped away with delight.

Alexander the Great, one day, saw a poor man carrying upon his shoulders a heavy load of fuel for the royal camp—the man tottered under his burden, and was ready to give up the point through fatigue:—"Hold on, my friend, the rest of the way, and carry it to your own tent, for it is yours," said Alexander.

The young lad whose theatrical performance have excited unequalled admiration in Great Britain, has been lately engaged for the Covent Garden Theatre, London, at 50 guineas per night and a free benefit at the end of 12 nights.

A person at Paris was invited by a gentleman to dine with him at eight o'clock. The person replied, he was sorry he could not accept the honour; but he had already accepted an invitation to supper at seven.

NAVAL EXPERTNESS.

The British ship of war Gibraltar, of 80 guns, then under command of Capt. J. F. Ryves, having been ordered to be paid off went into the harbour of Portsmouth on Sunday morning; at 12 o'clock at noon the royal top gallant yards were across; at 8 the same evening the ship was completely unrigged, and all the rigging made up in the lighters along side and all the spars were overboard.

THE ORACLE.

YORK:—SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29.

On Monday night last, between the hours of ten and eleven o'clock, a fire broke out on Mr. Henderson's premises and consumed the malt kiln and part of an adjoining building; but by the timely assistance and activity of the inhabitants and military stationed at the Block House, the flames were soon gotten under so as to prevent their communicating with the dwelling house and other adjoining concerns.—It is supposed to have originated in the drying of malt on the kiln.

Mr. Henderson takes this public manner of expressing his most sincere thanks to the inhabitants of the town of York and to the military stationed at the Block House for their efficient exertions in suppressing the late fire on his premises, as to their extreme activity he (under Providence) owes the preservation of his dwelling house and several other buildings from the ravages of the flames.

Files of London papers, to the 5th September, have been received at Quebec, the prominent contents of which have been anticipated. From theſe it is collected,

That the French as well as Engliſh accounts concurred, that a war between Ruſſia and France was certain. The Moniteur admitting the fact, gave credit to the penetration of the Emperor Napoleon in having foreſeen the event, and under cover of the invaſion of England, of having augmented the financial reſources of France, and progreſſively raiſed its army to an eſtabliſhment equal to the exigencies of a Continental war.—No new taxes, it declared, would be neceſſary, nor any new levies of troops wanted. The events which have led to this hoſtile ſtate of affairs and the negociation of the ſubject, were not known.—But the conduct of France towards Ruſſia and Sweden had been inſolent and haughty. It was highly probable Denmark would make a common cauſe with her neighbors. Certain movements in the North indicated, that a Ruſſian army would be landed in Holſtein, which the Engliſh could readily furniſh with warlike equipments; and towards which point the French were marching a very formidable army. Thoſe therefore, who delight "in tales of warlike note" and the adventures of thoſe who "ſeek the bubble reputation even in the cannon's mouth," will probably ſpeedily be gratified.

Auſtria, Pruſſia, and a majority of the German Electors, it was ſaid, would ſolicit to be leaders; if they could not be admitted as mediators. The junction of Ruſſia in the war, was confidently expected in England, that the principal converſation was about loans and ſubſidies.—And this appeared to be Mr. Pitt's policy to prepare the minds of the people for ample ſubſidies to the Emperor of the North.

GEZZAR PACHA.

The laſt accounts from Conſtantinople bring many particulars reſpecting the preſent ſtate of Egypt and Syria; Gezzar Pacha, whoſe object was to obtain the ſupreme authority in Egypt, was ſucceeded by Ismail Pacha, who acknowledged the ſupremacy of the Porte but at the ſame time endeavouring to eſtabliſh himſelf independent. The particulars which have tranſpired, relative to Gezzar Pacha, will throw ſome light upon the politics of the Porte and its agents.

The real character of Gezzar Pacha, the late tyrant of St. John D'Acre, has never been well known. After a life ſpent in the commiſſion of the moſt horrid cruelties and enormities, for the attainment of the ſupreme authority in a once famous country, this wretch cloſed his days, with the following merciful ſoliloquy, which he uttered a few moments previous to his deceaſe; "I perceive," ſaid he, "that I have but a ſhort time longer to live; what muſt I do with thoſe raſcals in my priſons I have ſtripped them of every thing, what good will it do them to let them looſe again naked into the world? The greateſt part of them were Governors, and men of conſequence in the country, who, if they return to their poſts, will be forced to ruin a great many poor people, in order to replace the ſums I have taken from them; and ſo it is beſt for their own ſakes, and for that of others, that I ſhould diſpatch them. They will then soon be in a place where proper care will be taken of them; a very good place, where they will neither be permitted to moleft any one, nor be themfelves expofed to molefta'ion. Yes—yes—that's beft—difpatch them."

In conlequence of the above order, twenty-three victims, who had formerly enjoyed the higheft ftations in Turkey and Egypt, were charitably thrown en maffe into the lea, as the moft expeditious mode of execution—many others were deftroyed by the bowftring.

The object of Gezzar was to obtain the whole government of Syria and Egypt. At the time of his death, he had united in his own perfon the Pachalick of Serda, Damafcus, and Tripoli, and the nominal Viceroyfhip of Egypt. The Pachalick of Aleppo alone remained for the completion of his defire.

Ifmail Pacha, his fucceffor, accompanied the grand army to Egypt, in the year 1800, and being patronized by the Naplf Pacha, obtained the dignity of Baftaw of Three Tails; after this he was put into poffeffion of the Government of Marath, but did not long hold it owing to his great extortions which furpaffed every thing formerly practifed by Turkifh oppreffion. He was ordered to fuffer capital punifhment, to effect which, the Grand Vizier appointed him to the Government of Suwas, whilft a plan was concerted to way lay him on his road thither, and bring him in chains to the Turkifh camp; the meeting, however, between the affaffins and Ifmail ferved only to eftablifh his reputation for extraordinary courage and fortitude; for he difplayed fuch gallantry and vigour on their attack, that they were obliged to fly. He then flew for protection to Gezzar, and was kindly received by that Chieftain on his complaining that he fuffered from the Grand Vizier perfecution; he followed the fortunes of Gezzar till within a year and half prior to the latter's deceafe when Ifmail loft his favour and was conlequently committed to prifon in Acre, where remained till the day of Gezzar's deceafe. Gezzar, having no children, conlidered Ifmail as a man fit to inherit his wealth and power, as he had been bred up in a rancorous hatred to the Grand Vizier, and in independence of the Porte.

As Gezzar lay on his death bed, he lent for Ifmail Pacha from his confinement, who had fo little expectation of the change of fortune that awaited him that he requefted to be allowed a few moments to prepare himfelf for death. On his being brought into Gezzar's preference, he would have begged for mercy, but Gezzar faid "there I leave you plenty of troops, plenty of money to pay them, and good fortifications to fight in. If you are a man, you will keep them, and my enemies fhall have no reafon to exult in my death."

Immediately on the death of Gezzar, Ifmail leized the reins of Government, and the moft perfect obedience enlued in the neighbouring provinces. He however, declared, that he held the Government only until the will of the Porte fhould be known, and in conlequence, affixed the public leal to the immenfe magazine of treafures left by the deceafed.

When the laft accounts left conftantinople, the captain Baftaw had taken the city of St. Jean D'Acre out of the hands of Ifmail Pacha; the latter, however, was expected fhortly to be reinftated in his authority.

Hurricane.—New particulars have been publifhed concerning the devaftations occafioned in the departments of the Rhine and Mofelle (Coblentz) by the terrible ftorm on the 2d Thermidor. The river Hafe, in 3 hours, rofe 45 feet. This torrent fwallowed up 42 villages. Twenty two leagues of the country (66 miles) are entirely funk under a quantity of ftones from rocks, of which the thicknefs has been calculated to be at leaft 12 feet. The villages have difappeared, and nothing but land, pebbles and ftones, are feen in their place. All this country of twenty two leagues is entirely loft to a griculture. The damage is immenfe, and eftimated at many millions. The Prefect and the Chief Engineer are returned to Coblentz, after the infpection they have made on this unfortunate country.—Some habitations are to be eftablifhed in the vicinity of thofe deftroyed, for the few perfons who have had the good luck to efcape the fury of the torrent. Six Hundred workmen are put in requifition, and will begin to work as foon as the harveft is over.

From a detailed ftatement of the damage done by the flood and hurricane, on the banks of the Aar, in July laft it appears that 65 perfons found their graves in the flood; 17 houfes and 190 ftacks or granaries tumbled down; 20 mills, 8 forges, and 50 bridges were completely fwept away; 498 houfes, 239 out houfes, 8 mills and 1 forge, are fo fhattered, that they muft be rebuilt. There are heaps of ftones and mud left on the furface of the ground, 8, 10, 20 feet high. In fome places mountains were fwept away, and whole villages buried up to the roofs. —Paris paper.

A Roman fepulchre has been difcovered at Afhby Puerorum, in Lincolnfhire. It was found by a laborer cutting a ditch. The top of the ftone cheft lay three feet below the furface of the ground; the lid is fitted neatly to the fides, hanging a little over the edges, fo that when it was removed no dirt of any kind had gained admittance, during a period of nearly a thoufand years. The cheft is of freeftone, of the kind found in abundance on Lincoln Heath. The urn is made of ftrong glafs, well manufactured, but of greenifh hue. The glafs was perfect in all refpects, and the furface was as fmooth as if it had been juft extricated from the fire. This receptacle of the afhes was nearly filled with fmall pieces of bone, many of them, from the effects of ignition, being white through the fubftance of the bone. Among the fragments was difcovered a fmall lacrymatory, which had been broken, from the avarice of the perfon who difcovered this curiofity, who acknowledged that he had examined the contents of the vafe, in order to convert the gold or filver that might be inclofed in it to his own ufe.—London pap.

Atmofpheric Phenomena.—Nothing has excited fo much attention of late among philofophers, as thofe vaft ftony and metallic maffes which are faid to have fallen from the loftier regions of the atmofphere. Thofe who have written on this curious fubject, have had recourfe to electricity to explain the luminous appearance and noife with which thefe meffengers have been attended. Mr. Robertfon, in his aerial excurfion from Hamburgh, has difcovered, that, at a conliderable elevation, neither glafs, fulphur, or wax produce any electrical effect from friction, and he could neither collect the fluid by, on his conductors, or upon his electrometer.—ib.

Depravity in Old Age.—A decrepid man, a tinker, in low circumftances, in the neighbourhood of Spitalfields, fome time ago buried his wife, about a month after which he took home a fecond woman; but his labour not anfwering their expenfes, they feperated, and he took a third, who, like the other two, was fond of the juice of the juniper; the did not live long:—four days after he took a fourth, who was fond of white por, alias gin; promifed to marry her; but after a found fleep forgot his promife, and fell in love with a fifth; the former being jealous of the latter, they fought an obftinate battle. People interpofed and feparated the combatants; the man being the caufe of this ill-recent fcene, he was about to be taken up, but found his fafety in flight. The parifh-officers, however, are in fearch after him, for his immoral conduct, and for being a nuifance to the neighbourhood.

A WHIMSICAL CHARACTER.

The youth of Kentifh Town laugh when Old Nobs is named: their fathers have been ufed to tell them of the man whofe motions were as regular as thofe of the fhadows of the dial, denoting the time without error. From generation to generation, at the certain hour, paffed by the venerable figure; they remembered him labouring the fteep hill in dog days, and running up the afcent in winter; in froft clofe buttoned, and bidding the bleak winds defiance; and in the autumn open to the waift; his hat, wig, and cane, the load of one hand, while the other beat as an oar againft the air, damp, duffy, and bald headed.

His walk was to the fummit of the hill; he reached it in a certain period, as he had (fo he boafted) counted fifty thoufand times how many ftepe carried him through the journey. At Highgate he drank deliberately his fingle bottle; looked down for an hour upon the miferable fcene of fmoak and dirt which he had quitted; and as foon as he had done, moft peaceably returned to it again.

He had by heart every turning of the path; and, without looking down, knew where he was to lift his foot over the rough pebble; he could meafure the ground blindfold; had his eyes been taken from him, you would no more have been able to lead him five ftepe beyond the inn door, than to whip the laborious animal that drew up the water at the inn, thro' one circle more after the bucket reached the furface.

Every body knew old Nobs upon the road, and Nobs knew every body; he returned the civilities of a ftranger; but the oldeft acquaintance could not prevail with him to turn in at his door, or refrefh himfelf; he knew he could go through his walk, and he was not fure he could not add to it: but he would never allow himfelf to drink till he had earned his bottle by the ftipulated labor.

As all the inhabitants of the road were acquainted with the old man, there was not one among them all but loved him. The inoffenfive is the character, with which men paft beft of all through life; and that was his moft eminently. He had his fingularities, but they diverted and it feemed a common lofs when death ftopped his journies.

As he knew every ftep, he knew where every houfe was placed, and if he went by with his eyes fhut, as was often the cafe when the duft offended him, he never miftook the inhabitant. He had his phrafe for every one at the more noted places; and he adapted it to the perfon: nothing in all this gave offence; for it was underftood, and it was meant, only to fay, Nobs is going by you.

Skim was the word as he went paft the dairy, and the rofy milk maids would reply 'Mr. Nobs, a good walk to you.' As he paffed the fhed, in which the taylor laboured, Top* was pronounced with a good natured nod, and the return was, 'Ha old True-Penney!' At the Tall Tree houfe he ftruck upon the dog kennel, and Bow wow called out the lurly inhabitants in anfwer: He took his leave out of the place with the clerk's houfe, and he fung out a good Amen as he paffed by it. It was the only word of two fyllables he employed; but he had always, good man, a refpect for things facred.

Rain could not keep him within doors; but even then he walked to Highgate. He had laid his two chambers into one for this purpofe; and he regularly fet out at his hour for the journey. As he knew how many fteps carried him to the place, he walked backward & forward the length of the double room, untill he had numbered out the quantity, and fo gone through the journey.

You will fay, but he wanted the reliefs at his feveral ftages! Not at all. When he had counted as many fteps as reached the Dairy, he cried Skim! who meafured as many more as brought him to the fhed, he repeated Top! as regularly as if the crofs-legged brotherhood were there to anfwer him; he cried Bow-wow, at the Tall-Tree-Place, and ftapped the table by way of dog kennel; and when he had fung out his amen! he would fhrug up his fhoulders with joy that he approached the end of his journey.

He would turn ftort every imaginary corner; at the bridge he fnuffed up the imaginary hay field; he would lift up his feet higher as he climbed the hill; and a couple of chairs were fet back to back in a corner of the room, over which he clambered once for every ftile in the foot way.

He would puff when he arrived at the ftation of his inn; he would open his bottle; fancy he faw the extended profpect from one of his windows; and when he had refted and refrefhed his hour, he meafured back the defcent and plain, reclimbed every ftile, and paid his ftationary compliments.

You who laugh at the whimfical old fellow, change your merriment to imitation; by fo much exercife taken daily, he kept alive to ninety fix. A father to the afflicted; a patron to the indigent. He was the beft natured man of his time. Cheerful in himfelf he loved to fee cheerfulnefs in others; and what he loved he would purchafe. He would give to the miferable the price you pay a miftrefs, and with their fmiles he bought their prayers. Let the marble hide the duft, this remembrance of the foul will live forever.

Thofe who only faw him, loved the man for his fingularity: thofe who wanted his affiftance, reverenced him for his virtue. In the courfe of fo long a life, no man could fay, he had injured him, even in thought. Upon the income of an inconfiderable place in the revenue, he, during almoft fixty years, diftinguifhed himfelf by the name of Charitable Nob; and, at the end of it, he left his family a little portion. He left them with it, that ineftimable inheritance, the bleffings which flow from heaven upon the children of the merciful.

EFFECT OF PRESSING.

THE following melancholy anecdote, the effect of preffing, was communicated by Mr. B*, proprietor of an ex enfive dock yard.

A young man had ferved an apprenticefhip of leven years to him, during which he had acquitted himfelf very much to his fatisfaction: the young man had formed a tender affection for a moft amiable young woman, of his own age, to whom, at the expiration of his apprenticefhip, he was to be married. The time for their union was appointed, but, unfortunately, the day before it was to take place, preis-warrants were iffued—he was dragged from every thing that was dear to him—hurried on board a tender, and next morning fent to the Nore, without fo much as feeing his intended wife, or any of his relations. After being in the fervice all the war, he was paid off about fix months ago. He came home and married the young woman to whom he was betrothed. He applied to Mr. B. for imployment, who made him his fore man. Mr. B. believed him to be as happy and contented as a human being could be; but, alas! his happinefs was doomed to be of a fhort duration: he was again forced away from his beautiful and amiable wife, already fix months advanced in pregnancy. The privation of her husband had fuch an effect upon her, that fhe mifcarried; and, it grieves me to add, that fhe is now no more. When the death of this amiable young woman was made known to her husband, in a fit of diftraction he ftabbed himfelf to the heart, and thus terminated both his miferies and his life.

FALMOUTH, (Jamaica) Oct. 3.

In the afternoon of Saturday laft, we had here one of the moft awful Thunder ftorms attended with heavy rain and repeated flafhes of lightning, that has been known for many years. About 4 P. M. the lower part of the building, lately erected at a conliderable expence, for the difplaying of fignals, under which, is the Powder Magazine, was ftruck with lightning, which broke the conductor, chattered one of the windows, and knocked down one of the foldiers on guard, who was much injured, and lay a conliderable time fpeechleis. The fpot where the lightning ftruck, is not more than ten or twelve feet from the Magazine, where there is a conliderable quantity of Gun Powder, (report fays) enough to have deftroyed the town of Falmouth and its inhabitants.

The Chief Judge and Minifter of the Police to Mr. Victor Moreau.

Paris, June 21.

"In allowing you, Sir, the liberty to retire to the United States of America, as you have requefted, it is the intention of his Majefty the Emperor, that you are not to return to France without having firft obtained an expreſs permiſſion for that purpofe.

"Mr. Henry, who will deliver you this letter, has inſtructions to bring back an anſwer from you conformable to the intentions of his Majeſty.

(Signed) "REGNIER."

"Barcelona, July 7.

"Sir—My huſband being too much indiſpoſed to be capable of writing, deſires me to inform your Excellency, that Mr. Henry has delivered your letter to him. I muſt add, that it was myſelf only, who requeſted that his Majeſty would allow us to quit our country, as that my huſband did nothing more than to ſubmit to the determination which had been taken reſpecting him; but he was far from expecting that the duration of his exile was to be indefinite.

"As our return to France is made to depend upon the Emperor's pleaſure alone, I am in hopes that it will be much ſooner than I had reaſon to expect, &c."

ENGLAND.

DEAL, October 4.

Attack on the French Gun-Boats at Boulogne.

Several ſhips of war from the Boulogne ſtation have juſt arrived in the Downs, and by them we are happy to learn that the expedition againſt the French gun-boats had completely ſucceeded. There were about two hundred outſide of Boulogne. The night was very dark, and every thing favorable. A new invented machine floated under water, conducted by a ſmall boat on the ſurface: the machine, containing four tons of ſtones and ſeveral barrels of gun-powder was carried, one to one end of the French ſquadron, and the other to the other. Theſe machines exploded after a given time, threw up the ſtones, deſtroyed many of the French boats, and threw the reſt into confuſion. Some fire ſhips were then ſent among them. The land batteries, &c. &c. fired briſkly, but without effect, as the night was dark. The French ſent out boats full of men, but a dreadful havoc was made among all. It is ſaid that upwards of 150 of the enemy's veſſels were deſtroyed, and that none of our men were killed, and few only wounded.

LONDON, October 18.

Advices were received this day, ſtating, that on the 5th inſt. a ſquadron of his Majeſty's frigates, conſiſting of the Indefatigable, the Meduſa, the Amphion and the Lively, fell in with four Spaniſh frigates off St. Mary's, from Rio de la Plata, bound to Cadiz, and loaded with treaſure. As they refuſed the orders which our frigates were under, for detaining all Spaniſh ſhips of war, till a ſatisfactory explanation had been given in regard to the preſent armaments in the ports of Spain, an engagement took place, in which after a few broadſides, one of the Spaniſh fri gates blew up, another with a Rear Admiral's flag ſtruck. Immediately after, the third alſo ſtruck, and the fourth, in endeavouring to make her eſcape, was overtaken by the Lively, and after a ſhort action, ſtruck to her. She proved to be the Fama, of 34 guns, and 300 men, had 22 killed and 30 wounded.—She was commanded by a Commodore.

The Lively arrived yeſterday evening at Portſmouth, with La Fama; the other two, La Medea, and La Clara are hourly expected. The treaſure on board is eſtimated at 20,000,000 of dollars.

Captain Moore, of the Indefatigable, was the commanding officer on this occaſion.

The whole of the crew in the Spaniſh frigate that was blown up, amounting to about 300 men, we are ſorry to ſay, periſhed.

The affairs of Spain, with regard to this country, muſt ſoon take a decided turn. What the exaſperated Emperor may now determine on is difficult to ſay, but he has certainly experienced a woeful diſappointment in loſing the treaſure which he has ſo long been expecting, and after the receipt of which he would in all probability have plunged the unfortunate country in all the miſeries of war.—Notice of this important event was put up at Lloyd's.

October 20.

Admiral Cornwallis is ſtill in Torbay.

According to the laſt accounts from Boulogne no veſſels have ventured to appear outſide the harbour.

Orders have been ſent down to Portſmouth to allow the Spaniſh officers to come on ſhore, and to go to any convenient town, on their parole, but to be at full liberty; the men alſo are not to be conſidered as priſoners of war, but only as detained perſons, and to have the ſame allowances of proviſions and other indulgencies as our own people.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX, November 7.

On Saturday the 3d inſt. at the requeſt of the Lieutenant General, a grand feint took place at Halifax. At 10 minutes before 9 o'clock on that day the alarm ſignal for an enemy was made at York redoubt, and repeated at the different harbour poſts and fort George, when the troops in garriſon were immediately under arms and repaired to their ſeveral alarm poſts. As the ſuppoſed enemy approached, detachments were ſent to attack them, &c. A Halifax paper mentions, that the above feint took place, merely to aſcertain in what time the different corps of militia, &c. in the town and its vicinity, could be brought to aſſiſt his Majeſty's troops in caſe of the actual approach of an enemy. The whole arrangement was effected, and every corps at its reſpective deſtination, and ready for actual ſervice, within one hour after the alarm was given. The Lieutenant Governor, Vice Admiral Mitchell, and Lieutenant General Bowyer, appeared on the parade.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.

Bombardment of Tripoli.

Captain Williams, of the ſchooner Dolphin, arrived here yeſterday morning, in forty-nine days from Leghorn, ſtates that information had been received at that place from Malta, of Commodore Preble having twice bombarded the city of Tripoli; and done conſiderable damage to the town and fortifications; and had alſo deſtroyed or taken one large Xebeck, and three gun-boats which were in the harbour. Our loſs is eſtimated to have been—the commander of one of our gun-boats killed, and two ſailors wounded. Commodore Preble was making preparations for a third attack. This account was bro't to Malta by a gentleman from Tripoli; but nothing is ſaid reſpecting Captain Bainbridge, or his crew. Capt. Williams did not touch at Gibraltar, nor any other place.

Extract of a letter from Mr. Higgins at Malta, to L. L. Cathcart, dated

"Malaga, Sept. 5, 1804.

"Dear Sir,

"I am in receipt of late letters from Commodore Preble off Tripoli; he had then made two attacks upon the Barbarians: in the firſt, by d y, he took 3 of their gun-boats; in the ſecond, by night, he ſunk three more and a large Polacca. He has, I preſume, ere this, made another aſſault, the reſult of which I am hourly expecting to learn. The reinforcement from America has not yet arrived—if they do arrive in time to form a junction with the force under the command of Commodore Preble, before the bad weather commences, I do think the Bathaw will accede to any terms that may be propoſed to him; he has already come down very conſiderably in his demands, relinquiſhing entirely, I believe, his hopes of future Tribute."

NEW-YORK, November 23.

A letter from Waſhington confirms the account heretofore given of Commodore Preble's attack on Tripoli, with the following additional circumſtances

The attacks were made by ſix gun-boats (the frigates not being able to enter the harbour) they were oppoſed by 14 gun boats—in the firſt attack three of the enemy's gun-boats were ſunk—in the ſecond attack, made under cover of the night, a Polacca, and three gun-boats, each carrying 24 pounders, were taken. The Americans loſt 3 officers and 30 ſeamen, killed; and 30 ſeamen wounded. The enemy's loſs in killed and wounded was not aſcertained.

(from the Balance.)

THE EXCHANGE OF TOBACCO FOR WOMEN.

Virginia, ſo named, in honor of Eliſabeth the virgin Queen of England, was the eldeſt ſiſter among the Britiſh American colonies: and ſhe has never been ſcrupulous in claiming, from her younger ſiſters, the full amount of reſpect and homage, that belongs to ſeniority.—The firſt effective ſettlement of this "Ancient Dominion," as Virginia has been called, was in the year 1600; thirteen years before the ſettlement of Plymouth in New England.—The emigrants came over to Virginia, not by pairs, as the creatures went into the ark, but without wives and families; and were mere adventurers in queſt of wealth, who determined, as ſoon as their fortunes ſhould be made, to return to England. As this determination, carried into effect, might have been fatal to the colony, Sir Edwin Sandys, in order to attach the coloniſts to the ſoil, and to prevent their return, adviſed the Proprietors in England to ſend them over a cargo of young women, and to exchange theſe neceſſaries of life for tobacco.—This prudent advice was followed; and accordingly, in the year 1620, ninety girls were ſent to the Virginia planters at one time.—A freight of ſixty more was ſent the next year. A ſpecies of commerce ſo highly advantageous was not declined by the planters. The love of woman, in this inſtance, completely triumphed over ſordid avarice, inſomuch that ſiles of gallant Virginians were to be ſeen, carrying down to the ſhip, with a haſty ſtep, their bundles of tobacco, and, after making the exchange, conducting home their dear ſpouſes. At firſt, the value of a wife was eſtimated at one hundred and twenty pounds of tobacco: but as the ſale of this precious commodity was rapid, the price ſoon roſe to an hundred and fifty pounds.—Indeed it reflects no ſmall degree of honor upon the generoſity and gallantry of the planters, that they ſhould voluntarily give ſuch prices for their wives; eſpecially when it is conſidered that King James of England, who was ſo bitter an enemy to ſmoaking, that with his own royal hand he wrote a book againſt it, had prohibited the Virginians from raiſing tobacco, beyond the annual quantity of one hundred pounds each. Under theſe circumſtances, the purchaſe of a wife muſt have coſt a planter fifty per cent. more than his whole tobacco crop, for a ſingle year.

It would ſeem that ſome of the planters were under the neceſſity of purchaſing their wives on credit; and in order to prevent evaſions of payment which otherwiſe might likely have happened, eſpecially if they found themſelves cheated in their bargains, the general aſſembly enacted, that "the price of a wife ſhould have the preceedence of all other debts, in recovery and payment, becauſe (ſays the aſſembly) of all kinds of merchandize, this was the moſt deſirable." In fact, though bona fide debts have not always been recoverable by law, in Virginia; yet, in this inſtance of "the moſt deſirable kind of merchandize," the legiſlature, much to its honor, ſolemnly ordained that, in caſe of the purchaſe of a wife on credit, the purchaſer ſhould pay the tobacco, even to the laſt ounce, that he had contracted to give for her.

The memory of ſuch a remarkable piece of hiſtory as I have been relating, ought, I think, to be perpetuated by ſome public monument. As wool is the ſtaple of Britain & the prime ſource of its wealth, it has been a cuſtom time out of mind, for the firſt lord of the treaſury to ſit upon a woolſack: and with equal, if not greater propriety, might the ſpeaker of the Virginia aſſembly be ſeated upon a ſack of tobacco; ſeeing this odoriferous plant has not only been the ſtaple of commerce, in the ancient dominion, but alſo the baſis of population.

The following ſtory was related in a Vienna paper of July 1788.

"ACHMET MAROWA was the ſon of an eminent magiſtrate of Belgrade, with great merit and fine accompliſhments. He had long addreſſed Fatima, the only daughter of Haſſan Buglo, a baſhaw in the armies of the Porte, and on the morning of the day on which the ſiege of Belgrade commenced, led, exulting to the altar of Alla, one of the loveliеſt women of the empire. Moſt of the diſtinguiſhed families of the place, on the approach of the imperial troops, retired to Barrowza, and other places further down the Danube; but the nuptials of Achmet and Fatima, and the rapid movement of our forces prevented that otherwiſe fortunate pair, from taking ſhelter in the interior country till the inveſtment of the city was complete.

"On the night of the fourth of June, however, Achmet determined at all hazards to convey his bride from the imminent perils to which ſhe would be expoſed during a ſiege that threatened ſcenes of carnage. He had her dreſſed as a young man of faſhion; and putting himſelf in the habit of a ſlave, left the city at twelve o'clock at night hoping to avoid our guards, and to reach a place of ſafety before the return of the day. Unhappily for the wanderers, they had ſcarce begun their midnight meander, when loud peals of thunder appalled the heart of the diſtreſſed Fatima; torrents of rain ſucceeded, the darkneſs increaſed, the fugitives wandered about bewaildered and forlorn, till upon the gleam of day, they found themſelves ſurrounded by a patrolling party of Hungarian Huſſars, and were hurried to the main guard.

"The prince of Cobourg having notice given him immediately, that a youth of apparent diſtinction, attended by a ſlave, was taken in his camp, ordered them to be kept apart; and if, on examination, any circumſtance occurred that ſhould make them as ſpies, their execution ſhould take place inſtantly. To the interrogations that were put to Fatima, ſhe replied that ſhe was the ſon of a merchant of Belgrade, and attended by a poor domeſtic of her father, and only wiſhed to join her family at a village about ten leagues diſtant. She, however, was ſoon given to underſtand, that the manner of their being taking precluded all apologies from having the effect ſhe wiſhed; and that the rigid uſuages of war allowed her but half an hour to live. She received this dreadful information without manifeſting any perturbation, and only begged that her ſlave might be permitted to carry her friends a few remembrances that ſhe had particularized.

"While ſhe was cloſing this requeſt, ſhe beheld the beloved Achmet, ſurrounded by armed men paſſing the door of the tent ſhe was in. As ſhe had not doubted of his ſafety, from the ſervility of his appearance, ſhe enquired in an agony of agitation what was to be his fate? and was anſwered—"immediate death." At the word death ſhe ſhrieked out, and fell from her ſeat in convulſions. The officers around her flew to her aſſiſtance; and, to give her free reſpiration, unbuttoned her waiſtcoat; when, to their amazements, they found their unhappy priſoner a lady.

"The execution of Achmet was ſuſpended, until the prince of Cobourg could be informed of theſe particulars. The generous chieftain examined each of them apart, and received ſuch information, as convinced him that they were not the inſidious agents he had ſuſpected. The heroic Fatima and her huſband were furniſhed with habits befitting their real ſituation, and before the cloſe of the day, ſafely eſcorted to the village whither their deſpairing friends had retired."

[A late French paper gives the following ſcarcely credible account:]

"A YOUNG man of the neighborhood of Lyons, of the name of Tarare, and who in early life was a waterman, took delight in ſwallowing pebbles; great pieces of raw meat, however filthy; whole baſkets full of fruit; knives, and even living creatures: nothing could induce him to abjure that pernicious habit, which ſoon became natural to him.—At the beginning of the revolutionary war, he enliſted in a battalion of the army ſerving on the Rhine; and he always reſorted to the auſſiae of a military infirmary for the food which ſuited his palate!—He would quarrel with the pigs for their diſguſting meat; he was always running after cats, dogs, and ſerpents, which he devoured alive.—It became neceſſary to drive him away by force from the rooms where the dead bodies were depoſited, and from the place where the blood, drawn from the ſick, was laid by for the aſſemblyon of the ſurgeons.—One day, however, a child of 16 months old was miſſing, and Tarare ran away as ſoon as it was diſcovered; but in the 6th year of the Republic he was admitted into the hoſpital at Verſailles, in the laſt ſtage of a decline, which, he ſaid, proceeded from his having once ſwallowed a ſilver fork!—There did he ſurrender his monſtrous exiſtence!"

LESSON FOR COURTIERS.

AN Indian prince, one day deſirous to try the ſincerity of his courtiers, ordered an infuſion of tobacco to be ſerved up inſtead of coffee. As ſoon as they had taſted it, they looked at each other with amazement and then caſt a timid glance towards their maſter, who took his cup, and praiſed it highly.—"Excellent! excellent!" re echoed the courtiers, and drank their portions to the dregs.—Would all maſters try their courtiers by the ſame teſt, they might poſſibly find them equally falſe and hollow hearted.

A very extraordinary feſtival was celebrated at Breſlaw in Germany, on the 25th of Auguſt, on a ſubject which well deſerves the commemoration of Literature and Liberty. The City Printing Office, belonging to Meſſrs Grafs and Barth, had reached on the above mentioned day the 300th year of its eſtabliſhment; and has beſides been carried on for upwards of two centuries and an half by the ſame family. Such circumſtances loudly call for feſtive celebration; and among other means employed to perpetuate the jubilee a very beautiful medal has been ſtruck whoſe devices are happily appropriate to the occaſion.

EPIGRAM.

"YOUR play went do,"—"went do!" the ſtage cries;
"A want of judgment with the reader lies:
"Sufficient juſtice on this piece he'll do,
"For merits he, had warm'd the laſſening crowd!"
"That may be true," the manager exclaims,
"But juſtice would concern it to the flames."

One way to wipe off a Debt.—A fire happening at a public houſe, one of the crowd requeſted the engineer to play againſt the wainſcot; but being told it was in no danger, "I am ſorry for that," ſaid he, "becauſe I have long ſcore upon it, which I ſhall never be able to pay."

Imperial Literary Anecdote.

Gifford, in the notes to his tranſlation of Juvenal's 7th Satire, which is on the ſubject of the general diſcouragement under which literature laboured at Rome, repeats a very good ſtory told by Macrobius:—

"A Greek poet had preſented Auguſtus Cæſar with many little compliments, in hopes of ſome trifling remuneration. The Emperor who found them worth nothing, took no notice of the poor man; but as he perſiſted in offering his complimentary verſes, compoſed himſelf an epigram in praiſe of the poet; and when he next waited on him with his cuſtomary panegyric, preſented his own to him with amazing gravity. The man took, and read it with apparent ſatisfaction; then putting his hand into his pocket, he deliberately drew out two farthings, and gave them to the Emperor ſaying, "This is not equal to the demands of your ſituation, Sire; but 'tis all I have; If I had more I would give it to you." Auguſtus, who was not an illnatured man, could not ſtand this; he burſt into a fit of laughter, and, as Macrobius ſays, made the poet a handſome preſent."

TO CURE HAMS.

FOR twenty-four hams, take one pound of fine ſalt, three pounds of coarſe brown ſugar, or two pints of molaſſes, and one pound of ſalt-petre pounded fine—mix all theſe together, and rub every ham with this mixture, and pack them down in your caſk; let them remain five or ſix days, then unpack them and thoſe which were on the top, put at the bottom of the caſk, and ſprinkle a little ſalt over them; ſo let them remain for 5 or 6 days, and then make a pickle that will bare an egg, and pour over till it covers them—ſo let the whole remain for one month, and they will be fit to ſmoke.

To the Electors of the County of York, and the East Riding of the County of Durham, &c.

GENTLEMEN,

THE much to be lamented, and truly affecting loss sustained by the Public, in the premature fates of so many valuable Citizens, is a calamity of melancholy magnitude and distressing operation; and is to the interests, as well as to the feelings of this small Community, a wound bordering upon vital; a wound which will long remain unhealed, and a disaster of which the effects will be painfully felt by the Bench, the Bar, Society, the Legislature and the Country.

The severe dispensation holds forth an humiliating picture to human pride, and this affecting lesson to the survivors of those departed Worthies, that neither blooming health, nor blooming prospects, nor the undissembled affection of admiring friends, can avert the awful fate which, He who rules the Winds and Waves, dispenses to Man.

Grief excited by such a cause is surely sacred; for if genial benevolence combined with a brilliant catalogue of practical virtues, be a claim upon the affections of society—Society will surely drop a tributary tear to the memories of so many of its brightest ornaments. However, this consoling hope, this fervid affurance, remains to those whose nearer connection renders the loss more individually affecting: that the Sovereign Disposer of all events, is the Widow's and the Orphan's, the good Man's and the Christian's Friend. Be it the office of active piety to praise that beneficent Being for unnumbered blessings received at his hands, and to convey the sympathetic sigh which friendship heaves at the levelling stroke to his glowing bosom; where may their spirits find a resting place, whom beyond the fairest illusions of hope, are now numbered amongst the dead. Bowing, as we ought, to the will of an overruling Providence, let us, whilst we feel with the tenderness of men, submit with the fortitude of Christians, and suffer the tide of grief which flows for the loss of such precious friends, to subside into a calm of pious resignation.

Gentlemen, the unfortunate event will consequently produce an Election to the vacant seats in the House of Assembly. For that of York, to ably and so honorably filled by my departed friend, I offer myself a Candidate. If I succeed to it, my abilities, however slender, I pledge myself religiously to consecrate to the service of my Country: and may that liberty which is the birthright of Freemen and the gift of our God, be perpetuated by a well disposed People and a well chosen Legislature. I shall be thankful for Support at the day of Election,

I am, Gentlemen,
Yours, &c.

Latest Intelligence.

NEW YORK, December 15.

The following articles, received at Boston, by an arrival from Dublin, tho' not so late as those via Norfolk, will be found new and interesting.

PARIS, Sept. 21.

The Minister of Police has written a long letter to all the Bishops of the French Empire, reproaching many of them for the attachment they betray for the Bourbons. He tells them the affairs of state belong to the nation, and have nothing to do with the church.

The harvest in the Department of Mont Blanc has been entirely ruined by cold weather. There has been snow three times in the year. Many houses have been destroyed by the freshets. Several thousand cattle and above two hundred people have perished; and since the water has lowered, the flesh of the carcases has attracted scores of wolves, who devour the dead and attack the living.

The last stage from Paris, with 8 inside and 10 outside passengers, drawn by 8 horses, was attacked by 50 wolves. They killed 2 horses and 1 postillion, but were driven off by a body of soldiers, who destroyed 16 of them.

LUXEMBOURG, Sept. 15.

This day 47 peasant's houses in the South Mountains were consumed by fire, and a great number of persons, cattle, &c. perished.

LONDON, Sept. 30.

The ensuing month will add upwards of 30 sail of the line to our effective force, together with a proportion of a number of small vessels. Sixty of the latter description were commissioned during the last month, making our marine in commission on Friday as follows:—103 sail of the line, 24 fifties, 135 frigates, 398 sloops, &c.—In all 660.

A packet has just sailed for Spain, carrying a King's messenger, with dispatches for our Charge des Affaires at Madrid, instructing him what explanations to insist on. If the answer is not satisfactory war will follow. But will Spain be so mad as to go to war when afflicted with internal dissentions, pestilence and famine?

The disturbance lately mentioned to have broken out near Bilboa, is represented as having been attended with very serious consequences. The insurgents beat off the King's troops, after killing several of the officers. The killed and wounded of the rebels is stated at 1100. Upwards of 9500 insurgents were under arms.—We have not learned whether order is restored.

It is reported the communication between Holland and England is to be stopped. The last bag of letters to Rotterdam, was seized and conveyed to the French General. It was probably suspected some plot would be discovered.

The French Emperor, it is said, has determined to give orders for the fabrication of all British manufactures and productions in Hanover, Holstein, Oldenburgh, Legborn, and a part of the Neapolitan dominions.

October 4.

The French papers say, that great confidence subsists between the Austrian Government and the British and Russian Ministers at the court of Vienna. They even add that the Russian Minister has had a warm altercation with one of the German Cabinets.

The Emperor of Austria, it is now said, is to have the Bishopric of Passau. The principality of Wurtzburgh is to be exchanged against the possessions of the Teutonic Order; and some of the Imperial Cities are to be disfranchised, and their privileges transferred to the Hanse towns.

It is rumoured, that the Court of St. James declined to acknowledge the new title of the Emperor of Germany, till it had learnt the decision of Russia; that Russia has returned an unsatisfactory answer; and that in consequence the Austrian Ambassadors to London and Petersburgh are to be superceded by Comtes des Affaires.

We understand that all the Swedish subjects in France have been detained, in consequence of the state of affairs between their nation and France.

The King of Sweden is said to have made propositions to our government to enter into an offensive and defensive alliance, promising to augment his army with 20 new regiments.

A private letter from Petersburg, Genoa Angereau has lately been in that capital with O'Connor and Martin, noted Irish Revolutionists, and after many conferences with the war Minister, has departed for Brest. It was conjectured he had received his final instructions, and was to proceed by Gantheaume's fleet on a secret expedition.

Dutch papers mention that Malta is to be given to Russia.

In the new French National Almanac, for 1805, the year is called, the 13th of the Republic and 1st of the Empire.

LONDON, Oct. 13.

The following we understand to be the answer of Lord Nelson to the Lord Mayor of London, to his letter communicating the vote of thanks passed by the corporation of London to the blockading squadron in April last.

Copy of a letter from Lord Nelson to the Lord Mayor.

My Lord

Victory, August 1, 1804.

"This day I am honored with your Lordship's letter of April 9 transmitting me the resolutions of the Corporation of London, thanking me, as commanding the fleet blockading Toulon.

I do assure your Lordship, that there is not a man breathing, who sets a higher value upon the thanks of his fellow citizens of London than myself; but I should feel as much ashamed to receive them for a particular service marked in the resolution, if I felt that I did not come within that line of service, as I should feel hurt at having a great victory passed over without notice.

I beg to inform your Lordships, that the port of Toulon has never been blockaded by me, quite the reverse—every opportunity has been offered the enemy to put to sea; for it is there that we wish to realise the hopes and expectations of our country; and I trust that they will not be disappointed.

Your Lordship will judge of my feelings upon seeing that all the Flag Officers of other fleets, and even some of the captains, have received the thanks of the Corporation of London, whilst the junior Flag Officers of the Mediterranean fleet are entirely omitted. I own it has struck me very forcibly, for where the information of the junior Flag Officers and Captains of other fleets was obtained, the same information could have been given of the flag officers of this fleet and the Captains; and it is my duty to state, that more able and zealous flag officers and Captains do not grace the British navy, that those I have the honor and happiness to command. It likewise appears, my Lord, a most extraordinary circumstance that Rear Admiral Sir Richard Bickerton should have been, as second in command in the Mediterranean fleet, twice called over by the Corporation of London, once after the Egyptian expedition, when the first and third in command were thanked, and now again. Conscientiousness of high desert, instead of neglect, made the Rear Admiral resolve to let the matter rest until he could have an opportunity personally to call upon the Lord Mayor, to account for such an extraordinary omission, I owe it to that excellent officer not to pass it by.

And I do assure your Lordship, that the constant, zealous, and cordial support I have had in my commands, from both Rear Admiral Sir Richard Bickerton, and rear Admiral Campbell, has been such as calls forth all my thanks and approbation. We have shared together the constant attention of being more than 14 months at sea, and are ready to share the dangers and glory of a day of battle; therefore it is impossible that I can ever allow myself to be separated, in thanks, from such supporters.

I have the honor to remain
With the very greatest respect,
Your Lordship's
Most faithful and
Obedient servant,
NELSON & BRONTE.

Extract of a letter from an officer of one of the vessels belonging to one of our squadron in the downs, dated Oct. 5, 1804.

"I arrived here last night from the Boulogne expedition, which has been most of our other expeditions for the month past, has miscarried. You have heard of machines which were to blow up Boney's gun-boats as high as the monument; there was certainly a great deal of ingenuity in contriving the machines, which were of various sizes; they held from 3 to 5 barrels of powder, with a proportion of combustibles lastened together, two feet asunder and in pairs, each of which ignited fire in four directions for ten minutes; some of the machines were built like chests of various depths and breadths, and none less than fifteen feet long, and sharp at each end, like a boat's bow, but with two inch plank, and all copper fastened, sheeted with sheet lead on the inside, and soldered to keep its contents dry. The greatest pains were taken to make them water proof in every part. On each side of these were fixed something like the works of a clock, enclosed in a brass frame or case, which was soldered all round to keep the works in-shue dry; in the inside of the clock work was fixed a small pistol, charged: the clock could be set to any time from one minute to three hours, and when the time was elapsed which it was set to, it snapped and went off like any other pistol; and discharged its contents into the machine where the powder and combustibles were, and blew it up. It was at first intended to have got them hauled along side of the French gun-boats by means of small brass blocks, which were to be screwed on the bow or sue of the gun-boats, by some desperate fellows in the night; a small line was rove through and made fast to the machine by which it was to be hauled alongside of the gun boats. Before you parted with the machine, set it to the time you thought it would require to get alongside, take a peg out which set it agoing like a clock or jack, and then it kept running till its time ran out, then it blew the machine up, the combustibles lighted in the rigging and hung there, where it was impossible to extinguish them until they spent themselves. A number of small boats were burnt, something like a brewer's sledge on which they drag a calk or two of beer, for those who volunteered to fix the blocks to the gun boats, and could see nothing of the boat but the man sitting on it, who had a water proof dress and a cork jacket. But, somehow their hearts failed them, and the idea was given up; we were then to tow the machines as near as we could with safety, then let them go and drift towards the gun-boats, with wind and tide. A hook rope with a float of cork about twelve fathoms long, was fastened to each, to catch the cables and swing alongside of the ship or gun-boats, but by some miscarrige or other not one out of six blew up at all, and those that did were to little purpose, for I really believe we did not destroy one boat. There were three small sloops loaded and charged in the same manner that the machines were; there was only one of the three blew up; all those that did not blow up fell into the hands of the French, who, no doubt, will improve on the plan.

I was in one of our boats with one of those machines, which we dropped within 20 yards of a gunbrig; although they saw us very plain they never offered to fire at us until they saw us cast the machine and about to return, when they gave us a whole broadside of grape and langrage, but by being too near them, it went all over us; they then commenced a tremendous fire of cannon, musquetry and mortars from the beach, which was lined with troops, and the whole coast seemed an entire blaze, yet not a man was hurt as far as I can hear. Lords Melville and Keith were both on board the Monarch."

STATE PAPERS.

Answer of the Sublime Porte to the last Note of the French Ambassador.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 9.

The Sublime Porte has received and considered the Note delivered to it by its friend, the French ambassador. It imports that Napoleon Bonaparte, First Consul, has been appointed Emperor of the French; that this dignity is to be hereditary, and defcends to his legitimate children male and delcendants, and, in failure of them, to the Princes Joseph or Louis Bonaparte, and their legitimate children and heirs. Further, that the Representatives of the French Empire at a foreign courts, as also those of other powers in France, until they shall have received their new credentials, will abstain from all reciprocal official communication, though without neglecting the preffing occurrences of the times, on which they will correfpond in a friendly manner.

The Sublime Porte, according to its usual verity, participates with the most intimate fatisfaction in every increase of the dignities, honor, and glory, of every power with which it his friendly connections. It is consequently notified to the said ambaffador, our friend, that fince the bonds of friendship and concord between these two powers have been renewed, the Sublime Porte has received with the most fincere joy the intelligence of the late occurrences in France, which fince they lay a foundation for the welfare and tranquility of that Empire, must have a beneficial effect on the general tranquility and fecurity. With refpect to the communications, it is admitted that the correfpondence on any bufinefs that may occur fhall be carried on by non-official communications till the neceffary changes fhall be made in the credentials on either fide. The Sublime Porte will always avail itfelf with pleasure of every opportunity ftill more to ftrengthen and confirm the friendfhip fo happily fubfifting between it and France.

From a London Paper of Oct. 3.

Her Royal Highnefs the Princefs of Wales, we are much concerned to ftate, met with a very ferious accident on Friday laft. In the morning fhe paid a vifit in the neighbourhood of Charlton.—When the vifit was over, her R. Highnefs had taken her feat in her carriage, fhe waved her hand to farewell, at which moment the footman who attended the door of the carriage, clofed it with great violence. Unfortunately the fingers of her Royal Highnefs' right hand were caught between the door and the pannel, and mangled in a miferable manner. She gave a moft piercing fhriek, and the ladies whom fhe was in the act of faluting, flew to the carriage. On opening the door, the four fingers were found almoft fevered from the hand in a moft fhocking condition; the nail of one had been torn off, and was found ftucking to the door. Medical affiftance was immediately offered and the hand was dreffed. Her Royal Highnefs has been ever fince in the moft excruciating pain; but we are happy to add, that the furgeons in attendance do not concieve that an amputation of any of the fingers will be neceffary.

NEW-YORK December 17.

War between Great Britain and Spain.—By recent accounts from Havanna, the poffibility of a war between thefe two nations, gains ftrength.—On the 13th ult. the Britifh frigate Mermaid, Capt. Mollies, arrived at Havanna, from Jamaica, with difpatches to the Governor, relative to the conduct of French privateers, towards Britifh veffels taken into the port of Cuba. Two days after, a Britifh government brig arrived at Havanna, in 8 days from Kingfton—fhe had arrived at Kingfton in 32 days from England—of courfe muft have brought us late, probably later accounts than thofe received at this port by the Hasella. This veffel was fent from Kingfton, immediately on her arrival, with difpatches from the Admiral to the commander of the Mermaid, the contents of which were kept fecret. Invitations had been given to all the principal officers at Havanna, to attend a ball, which was to have been given on board the Mermaid, on the evening of the 15th ult. but the arrival of this brig fruftrated the whole—the commander of the frigate, on receiving thefe difpatches, weighed anchor and ftood out to fea; where he continued lying off and on, till the whole of the Britifh merchant fhips in the harbour (one only excepted which had not ballaft on board) joined him—(fome of thefe veffels were partly loaded; others had purchafed cargoes, but not taken them on board—fuch, however, was the import of thefe difpatches, that they immediately left the port, and failed under convoy of the frigate. The brig returned to Jamaica. The gentleman who communicates thefe particulars, informs us, that he converfed with the officers of the frigate, who informed him that fuch were the nature of the difpatches, that prizes would unboubtedly be made of any Spanifh veffels they might fall in with. The brig did not enter the port of Havanna, but fent in her boat. The midfhipman, who was bearer of the difpatches to Captain Hollies, was immediately fhut up in a ftate room by himfelf, that no one might have an opportunity to interrogate him on the fubject of their contents.—Char. Cou.

Captain Aifpurua, from the Havanna, informs, that a Spanifh frigate and feveral merchantmen failed from that port in company for Cadiz, having on board one million and an half of dollars—of which fix hundred thoufand dollars made a part of the cargo of the fhip Cleopatra, from La Vera Cruz. A few days previous to the failing of capt. A. a Britifh difpatch brig arrived off the Havanna, and made fignal to a Britifh frigate, in the harbor, to get immediately under way, and put to fea, which was immediately complied with. She however, returned the next day, and took under convoy all the Britifh veffels then in the harbor. On her return from the difpach brig to port, fhe fpoke the above mentioned fhip Cleopatra, and permitted her to pafs unmolefted; but it is probable with the intention of purfuing her at fea.

Later from Europe.—Captain Tomkins, of the fhip Thomas Wilson, who arrived at Norfolk on the 5th inft. brings London's dates to the 18th of October. The leading articles, furnifhed by this arrival, were publifhed in the Commercial Advertifer of this evening. They will be found unufually intereffting. On a perufal of thefe, it will be found—

That hoftilities between England and Spain have actually commenced, and that three Spanifh frigates, richly laden with the treafures of the South, to the amount of 20,000,000 dollars have been captured, and a fourth deftroyed.

That the Engliih fquadron have made a fuccefsful expedition againft the port of Bologne, in which 150 of the French gun-boats were deftroyed—the remainder much injured, and many of their foldiers killed—

That much difcontent prevailed in the French armies near Brefl, and particularly among the Irifh Guards—

That a revolution in the government of Holland was foon to take place, and probably a monarchy to be eftablifhed on the ruins of that ancient and profperous Republic—

That the mifunderftanding between the Emperor Napoleon and the King of Sweden was afluming a more virulent and decided character; the Minifter of Sweden having, by order of his Majefty, prefented to the French charge d'affaire, at Stockholm, a Note, written, as will be feen, in a ftyle of peculiar firmnefs and fpirit—and

That the Ruffian Charge d'Affairs, after feveral unfuccefsful conferences with the French Miniifter, had at length quitted the territories of France.

Thefe laft circumftances juftify the opinion, that Sweden and Ruffia will foon take an active and refolute part againft the plunderer of Europe.

DECEMBER 18.

Diftreffing Calamity.—Between three and four o'clock this morning, our fellow-citizens were called to witnefs the moft deftructive and alarming conflagration that has afflicted our city for many years. We fhall not attempt an adequate defcription of the awful fcene. The fire commenced in Front ftreet, No. 104, a houfe occupied by Mr. Charles M'Canty, as a retail Grocery. The wind was fo high, and the affiftance rendered on the occafion, as firft, fo feeble, that the flames could not be controlled until they had fpread through both fides of front ftreet, the fouth fide of water ftreet, and on as far eaft as Wall ftreet; and had totally deftroyed every building in their progrefs. Four or five houfes on the eaft fide of Wall-ftreet were likewife confumed. The number of buildings deftroyed is about forty, among which are the old Coffee-Houfe, office of the Morning Chronicle, the new and elegant fire-proof ftores of Meffrs. Bailey and Begert, and many others of very confiderable value. Many of the buildings were infured to a fmall amount; and we are informed that Mr. Daniel Sullivan had lately procured policies of infurance, to the full amount of his Store and Goods, from the London Phoenix Affurance Company.

The lofs of property cannot be ftated with any degree of certainty. It has been eftimated by fome, at one million of dollars, by others at two millions—probably the former is moft correct.

BENJAMIN RIGGS Cabinet maker, an active and diftinguifhed fireman was killed, and 4 black men feverely wounded.

A ftriking occurrence.—Laft Saturday morning a Mr. W——, of this city, left his bofe before his wife, and had breakfaft prepared, and even the tea poured out ready for drinking againft the came down. Juft as they were feated, a rap called him to the door. While he was there, happening to taffe her tea, fhe found it too fweet for her, and therefore exchanged her cup for his, he being in the habit of drinking his tea fweeter than fhe was. He returned, fwallowed the contents of his cup fomewhat haftily, when looking earneftly at the fediment, he turned to her with a face of horror, and aiked if fhe had changed the cup? Being anfwered in the affirmative, then I am gone, faid he, and died in lefs than two hours.—N. Y. E. Poft.

Nov. 24, 1804.

To the Electors of the County of York, and the East Riding of the County of Durham, &c.

GENTLEMEN,

THE much to be lamented, and truly affecting loss sustained by the Public, in the premature fates of so many valuable Citizens, is a calamity of melancholy magnitude and distressing operation; and is to the interests, as well as to the feelings of this small Community, a wound bordering upon vital: a wound which will long remain unhealed, and a diminution of which the effects will be painfully felt by the Bench, the Bar, Society, the Legislature and the Country.

The severe dispensation holds forth an humiliating picture to human pride, and this affecting lesson to the survivors of those departed Worthies, that neither blooming health, nor blooming prospects, nor the undissembled affection of admiring friends, can avert the awful fate which, He who rules the Winds and Waves, dispenses to Man.

Grief excited by such a cause is surely sacred; for if genial benevolence combined with a brilliant catalogue of practical virtues, be a claim upon the affections of society—society will surely drop a tributary tear to the memories of so many of its brightest ornaments. However, this consoling hope, this fervid assurance, remains to those whose nearer connection renders the loss more individually affecting: that the Sovereign Disposer of all events, is the Widow's and the Orphan's; the good Man's and the Christian's friend. Be it the office of active piety to praise that beneficent Being for unnumbered blessings received at his hands, and to convey the sympathetic sigh which friendship heaves at the severing stroke to his glowing bosom; where may their spirits find a resting place, whom beyond the faintest illusions of hope, are now numbered amongst the dead. Bowing, as we ought, to the will of an overruling Providence, let us, whilst we feel with the tenderness of men, submit with the fortitude of Christians, and suffer the tide of grief which flows for the loss of such precious friends, to subside into a calm of pious resignation.

Gentlemen, the unfortunate event will consequently produce an Election to the vacant seats in the House of Assembly. For that of York, to ably and so honorably filled by my departed friend, I offer myself a Candidate. If I succeed to it, my abilities, however slender, I pledge myself religiously to consecrate to the service of my Country: and may that liberty which is the birthright of Freemen and the gift of our God, be perpetuated by a well disposed People and a well chosen Legislature. I shall be thankful for Support at the day of Election,

I am, Gentlemen,
yours, &c.

PROCLAMATION.

PETER HUNTER,
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

GEORGE THE THIRD, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith &c.

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Counsellors of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of our said Province, to the Provincial Parliament at our Town of York, on the tenth day of January, to be commenced, held, called and assembled, and to every of you—

GREETING!

WHereas by our Proclamation bearing date the first day of DECEMBER last, We thought fit by & with the advice of our Executive Council to prorogue our said Provincial Parliament until the tenth day of January, one thousand eight hundred & five, at which time in our Town of York you were held and constrained to appear, but we taking into our Royal consideration, the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice and content of our Executive Council to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you and each of you that on the first day of February next, which will be in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and five, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament in our Town of York, FOR THE ACTUAL DISPATCH OF PUBLIC BUSINESS, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our said Province of Upper Canada, and there to do as may seem necessary. Herein fail not.

IN Testimony whereof, WE have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto Affixed:—WITNESS Our Trusty and Well-Beloved PETER HUNTER Esquire, Our Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Lieutenant General Commanding Our Forces in Our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at YORK, this twenty-eighth day of December, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Four, and in the Forty-fifth Year of Our Reign.

Latest Intelligence.

NEW YORK, December 19.

The Ship Alonzo, captain Gibbs, arrived at this port last evening from London, and furnished the Editor of the Mercantile Advertiser with London papers to the 23d of October inclusive, and Lloyd's Lists of the 19th. The papers are four days later than any advices previously received, but are almost wholly uninteresting. We have selected the principal articles. The captain of the Alonzo informs us that no declaration of war had been issued against Spain at the time of his sailing.

LONDON, October 20.

Notwithstanding what has been said, an embargo may be considered as having actually taken place in Holland. The Alexandrina, and upwards of 20 other vessels which had cleared out for Embden and other ports, are detained in the Texel, on suspicion of being really destined for this country. It was generally supposed that the Emperor would not declare an absolute embargo (the prelude, we conceive, to confiscation) until he had got the ports of Holland filled with vessels; and, therefore, the orders for the present are only to detain such as are suspected until further notice. All vessels arriving in the ports of the Batavian republic are examined by what are called Admiralty ships; and those on board of which English produce is found are detained, and not suffered to land their freight until the Government shall have come to a final determination on the subject. These extraordinary measures were first adopted on the 9th inst. Neutral vessels are allowed to enter the Dutch ports unmolested.

Dispatches, it is said, were sent off from the Admiralty on Thursday evening, to the commanders of our squadrons, with fresh orders in respect to any Spanish ships they may fall in with. They are supposed to be of the same firm nature and decided tenor with the recent proceedings.

October 22.

The solemnities relative to the Hereditary Imperial title of Austria are put off to the 8th of December.

Letters from Trieste and Venice agree in stating that the Adriatic swarms with French privateers, and that no English merchantmen venture to navigate that gulph.

Cardinals Consalvi, Joseph Doria, Dugnani, Fesh, Caselli and Oppizoni, will accompany the Pope to Paris. The regency during his absence, which will probably be for two months, will be administered by Cardinals Antonelli, Braschi, and Anton Doria.

Two out of the four mails which became due yesterday, from Hamburgh, have been received.

The intelligence which they bring, though partially anticipated by the late Dutch papers, is still interesting, inasmuch as it furnishes us with more detailed accounts of what has happened on the Continent.

We are happy in the opportunity of publishing the important note which was delivered by M. D'Oubril, the Russian Charge d'Affaires at Paris, on the 21st of last July, in which the dispute between the two powers is much simplified: they are so specifically stated as to call for specific and categorical answers. They are,

1. The evacuation of the Kingdom of Naples, and an engagement to respect its neutrality, as well for the present as the future.

2. The establishment of a basis for a final adjustment of the affairs of Italy.

3. An indemnification for the King of Sardinia.

4. And lastly, the evacuation of the North of Germany, and an engagement to respect its neutrality for the future.

Such were the points in difference between Russia and France, not one of which, if we except the third, does not contain in itself the seeds and causes of long and inveterate hostility; that is, while the Emperor Alexander and his rival shall hold firm to their purpose.

The Provincial Counsellor, Von Meding, arrived at Hamburgh on the 7th inst. from Hanover. The object of his journey is to demand another loan, on account of the State of Hanover, of a million of French livres. A similar demand will afterwards be made at Lubec.

If a war should ensue between England and Spain, it will be an additional calamity for the city of Hamburgh, which carries on an extensive commerce with Spain.

In the change of the form of the Batavian government, M. Schimmelpenninck will be nominated President for life, and be invested with a power adequate to that high office; a College of Government, consisting of 5 members, will be subordinate to him.

Three hundred French and Batavian armed vessels, that were assembled at Ostend, have already got to Dunkirk under Vice-admiral Verhueil. The whole force will be collected at Boulogne, where the Emperor Napoleon is shortly expected, and great events are looked for from that quarter.

Our government has received proposals from Holland for an exchange of prisoners.

The ships of war fitting out at Cadiz are one of 112, one of 80, and one of 74 guns, which go to Ferrol as soon as they can be got ready.

The Indefatigable and the Amphion have arrived at Plymouth with the remaining two of the Spanish frigates recently captured viz. the Clara and the Medea, of 44 guns each.

Orders have been sent to Portsmouth and Plymouth to convey to the Bank the treasure found on board the Spanish ships there. Several Spanish vessels, surveyed homely have been also detained in our ports. Notwithstanding these circumstances, we retain our opinion, that the subsisting negociation between the two countries will not necessarily terminate in a war; and we confidently assert that it will be at least three weeks before any thing will be decidedly determined upon relative to this important subject.

On the night of the 9th ult. there was a tremendous storm at Archangel, which it is apprehended did much damage to the shipping.

Bank Stock 153 1-2, 3 per cent. consols 57 1-2, consols 57 1-2.

The paper called "The Merchant," in the English language at Rotterdam, is suppressed by order of the French Government.

NEW YORK, December 29.

The ship Two Friends, M'Neil, has arrived at Charleston in 49 days from Liverpool, and brings London news to the 27th of October, inclusive, five days later than any advices previously received.

From the LONDON GAZETTE, Oct. 21.

Indefatigable, Plymouth Sound, Oct. 19, 1804.

I have to inform you of the arrival at this port, of his majesty's ship under my command, with the Amphion, which I thought proper to order to England for the security of the two Spanish frigates, La Medee, and La Clara, which we have brought in with us. We have seen nothing of the Medusa and Lively, with the Spanish Frigate La Fama, since the event of the action, when they parted from us. I enclose a copy of the account delivered to me by the Spanish major of the Squadron, of the treasure and cargo on board the four ships. I have the honour to be, &c.

OCTOBER 23.

The Russian Government has ordered an additional levy for the land force, of one man in five hundred; and every exertion is making to place the Russian navy on a formidable footing.

The Spanish ships in the harbour of Ferrol were, we learn, to have been sent out with troops on board, to aid in quelling the insurrection which had taken place, and which still subsists in the Province of Biscay. Their intention of sailing was communicated to Admiral Cochrane, who commands our squadron off Ferrol, and he, suspecting that the French and Dutch ships might attempt to escape at the same time, that it was just possible the Spanish ships, with troops, might proceed upon some other destination, and with other views than merely carrying troops might go to Bilboa, conceiving also that troops might be sent by land, suggested to the Spanish Commandant the propriety of not attempting to put to sea. The Spaniards, in consequence of this intimation, desisted from their intention, and dismantled their ships, and the troops were sent by land.

OCTOBER 25.

On the 2d inst. the city of Bremen paid their first instalment of 100,000 dollars to the French. It is said to be ascertained that Schiminelpenninck will enter on his office of President of Holland on the 20th inst. with extensive powers and authority, and that he is for this elevation to pay to Bonaparte's family in the course of ten years, fifty millions of florins. Entire new relations with France are to be immediately promulgated.

OCTOBER 26.

Our private letters from the continent state, that Bonaparte is about to raise a contribution, under the name of a loan, from the Elector of Hesse. The Elector has hitherto refused to advance the sum required, which is twelve millions of livres; but he will most probably be forced to comply.

The King of Prussia is making every possible effort to prevent the renewal of the war on the continent. It is not, however, very probable that he will succeed; on the contrary, it is more likely that he will be forced to become a party in it, however disposed he may be to preserve his neutrality.

The accounts of new riots and insurrections in Ireland have been greatly exaggerated; the meeting of a few persons, in a private manner, in Kildare, has been magnified into a flatement of general conspiracy, for which, we can state on unquestionable authority, there is not the slightest foundation.

Of the nature of the points in dispute between Russia and France, and of the demands made by the former, our readers are already informed. It would be difficult, perhaps impossible, to combine in an official expofition of the sentiments and fyftem of any government more dignity with more forbearance, more firmness with more moderation; it would be difficult too, to depict in stronger or more animated colours, ambition, oppression, cruelty, and injustice, as exemplified in the character and conduct of Bonaparte, than is exhibited in the two Notes which M. D'Oubril presented to the French government previously to his departure from Paris.

The following are the charges brought by the Russian government against France.

The violation of the territory of Baden.

The interference in the affairs of other nations, wifhing to take no part in the present troubles.

The refusal of the offer of Russia to mediate between England and France.

The levying contributions on the Hanse Towns, and the menaces thrown out against Denmark.

The persecution of the emigrants in foreign countries.

The seizure of a naturalised Russian at Rome.

The accusations against Russia of protecting conspirators—which France, upon being desired to prove, declined.

The forcing Portugal to pay for her neutrality.

The burthening Naples with the maintenance of French troops.

The treatment of Switzerland and Holland as French provinces.

The seizure of Hanover, in violation of every notion of right and justice.

The possession of Cuxhaven.

The insulting conduct to the Russian Ambassador at the Thuilleries.

The refusal to give a satisfactory explanation with respect to the seizure of the Duke d'Enghien at Ettenheim.

The violation of the solemn pledge to indemnify his Sardinian Majesty.

The innovations introduced into Italy.

The Russian notes touch upon the inhuman and indecent manner in which the French government recurred in one of its answers to the Russian ambassador to the death of the Emperor Paul.

The charge adduced against his Imperial Majesty with respect to the occupying the Seven Islands is most victoriously refuted. The Russian note states "that the Republic, which had been first evacuated by the Russian troops, was occupied by those drawn from the state of Naples, with the consent of the Porte, by the request of the inhabitants, and in consequence of a previous arrangement with France."

We received this morning the Paris papers to the 25th, and the Dutch to the 24th. Bonaparte has deferred his coronation to the 29th of November; the preparations could not be completed by the 9th or the 16th. It remains the day on which it was at first intended that the ceremony should take place. The Legislative Body has been convoked for the 22d of next month, to assist at the coronation, and Bonaparte is to go to Fontainbleau to meet the Pope, and conduct him to Paris.

The Moniteur that announces the postponement of the Imperial coronation at Paris, contains the account of the ceremony to be observed at the thanksgiving at Vienna on the 18th of next month, on account of the accession of his Imperial Majesty to the hereditary Imperial dignity of Austria.

The Dutch papers to the 24th inst. do not furnish us with any intelligence with respect to the intended changes in the Dutch constitution.

OCTOBER 27.

When M. D'Oubril left Mentz on the 3d instant, he presented another Note to Talleyrand, to which no answer was given. We understand it was couched in terms much more energetic and decided than the preceding Notes from the Russian Charge d'Affaires. It was in consequence of an express which had arrived from St. Petersborgh, that M. D'Oubril presented the note, dated the 2d instant; and as the French Minister for Foreign Affaires was not prepared upon the emergency of the moment, to give a satisfactory, or decent evasive answer to it, the representative of the Russian Court took his departure from Mentz, from the Lion's Den, next day.

The following number of troops are now said to be encamped on the continent:—In France 300,000; in Italy 80,000; in Holland 56,000; in Hanover 38,000; in Switzerland 12,000; in Austria and Bohemia 180,000; in Russia and Silesia 210,000; in Bavaria 40,000; in Denmark and Holstein 16,000; in Sweden 18,000; in Russia 190,000; in Servia 30,000; in Turkey 60,000; and what is most surprising, thanks to the moderation and firmness of Napoleon the first! the continent continues in perfect peace.

A cure for sheep biting.

An intelligent farmer in New Jersey seized a dog, which often worried and bit his sheep, tied the jaw of the dog by a tether to the leg of a strong active ram, and placed them on the top of a hill. The ram immediately began to kick and buck the dog, who, after a little leaping attempted to fly. The tether held him so that the ram easily overtook, kicked and bucked him. After a short time the ram, excited to exertion, raced down the hill, and forced the dog after him. When the dog was so punished as not to forget it he is let loose, and would never touch a sheep afterwards.

MR. WEEKES avails himself of this public manner of soliciting the support of the FREE and INDEPENDENT Electors of the East Riding of York and the Counties of Durham and Sussex, at the next election of a Member to represent the Inhabitants of this Circle in Parliament. It is, he trusts, unnecessary for him to express, that, in aspiring to the honor of being one of the Representatives of the People, he bears in mind the importance of that situation, and the necessity of a faithful discharge of its functions. The particular occurrences in public affairs, whether viewed in the enacting of a law, or in enforcing the letter of it, or in the palpable effects of both, or whether developed in the official arrangements of civil departments, carry with them, in every political hemisphere, this monition, that the vigilance of the legislator over the rights and privileges of his Constituents ought to be incessant; and that a due regard to the interests of the People, and a mild and impartial administration of justice, can best promote the prosperity of a State, and perpetuate its establishments—this observation is not merely founded on the dictate of sentiment, but on the written letter of the law inherited in the wisdom of ancient parliaments, and confirmed amidst the contending fashions of later times; for in the great Charter of English liberty it is concisely and emphatically declared that "no freeman shall be arrested, or imprisoned, or dissessed of his tenements, or deprived of his liberties or privileges, or outlawed, or banished, or in any other manner destroyed, except by the judgment of his peers, or the law of the land," and in that second Charter of personal liberty the HABEAS CORPUS Act, it is propitiously provided that "any person who shall send another, prisoner out of the Realm, or beyond the Seas, contrary to the law of the land, shall be disabled from bearing any office, shall incur the penalty of a præmunire and be incapable of receiving the King's pardon; and the party suffering shall also have his private action against the person so committing and all his aiders, advisers and abettors and shall recover treble costs besides his damages, which no jury shall assess at less than five hundred pounds." In these, as well as in many other sets of legislation, are clearly marked the property and independence with which the Representative in former times conducted himself in the service of the Public; but in none more particularly than in those acts which guard against the imposition of aids, taxes, or other charges under the colour of prerogative, in which it is declared that "levying money for or to the use of the Crown by pretence of prerogative without grant of parliament, or for longer time, or in other manner than the same is or shall be so granted, is illegal," and in virtue of which the most invaluable privilege is preserved to the subject, and a barrier erected against the enforcing of contributions either oppressive or unjust. The venerable antiquity of those laws, some of which have withstood the test of several centuries, unaltered and unrepealed, proves their efficacy, and affords this induction that those, who maintain the immunities of the people, do more than render a temporary benefit to their Country, inasmuch as that a security against arbitrary or oppressive measures tends not only to preserve the tranquillity, but also to promote the prosperity of the State, and establishes a monument of worth to the latest posterity. How far it may be laudable at this juncture to emulate the spirit and letter of these acts, in the revision and amendment of provincial laws of no less importance to the people; particularly the act for the qualification of Electors and the Jury Act, and to take a more general view of the management and posture of public affairs, it is not for Mr. WEEKES in the situation of an election Candidate to affirm; but shall he be favored with the efficient support of those who enjoy the freedom of Suffrage, and feel the independence to exercise it, he indulges himself in the hope, that these rights will at least be more generally known, if not more fully asserted.

York, Oct. 20, 1804.

To the Electors of the County of York, and the East Riding of the County of Durham, &c.

GENTLEMEN,

THE much to be lamented, and truly affecting loss sustained by the Public, in the premature fates of so many valuable Citizens, is a calamity of melancholy magnitude and distressing operation; and is to the interests, as well as to the feelings of this small Community, a wound bordering upon vital: a wound which will long remain unhealed, and a disaster of which the effects will be painfully felt by the Bench, the Bar, Society, the Legislature and the Country.

The severe dispensation holds forth the humiliating picture to human pride, and this affecting lesson to the survivors of those departed Worthies, that neither blooming health, nor blooming prospects, nor the undissembled affection of admiring friends, can avert the awful fate which, He who rules the Winds and Waves, dispenses to Man.

Grief excited by such a cause is surely sacred; for if genial benevolence combined with a brilliant catalogue of practical virtues, be a claim upon the affections of society—society will surely drop a tributary tear to the memories of so many of its brightest ornaments. However, this consoling hope, this fervid assurance, remains to those whose nearer connection renders the loss more individually afflicting: that the Sovereign Disposer of all events, is the Widow's and the Orphan's, the good Man's and the Christian's Friend. It is the office of active piety to praise that beneficent Being for unnumbered blessings received at his hands, and to convey the sympathetic sigh which friendship heaves at the severing stroke to his glowing bosom; where may their spirits find a resting place, whom beyond the faintest illusions of hope, are now numbered amongst the dead. Bowing, as we ought, to the will of an overruling Providence, let us, whilst we feel with the tenderness of men, submit with the fortitude of Christians, and suffer the tide of grief which flows for the loss of such precious friends, to subside into a calm of pious resignation.

Gentlemen, the unfortunate event will consequently produce an Election to the vacant seats in the House of Assembly. For that of York, so ably and so honorably filled by my departed Friend, I offer myself a Candidate. If I succeed to it, my abilities, however slender, I pledge myself religiously to consecrate to the service of my Country: and may that liberty which is the birthright of Freemen and the gift of our God, be perpetuated by a well disposed People and a well chosen Legislature. I shall be thankful for Support at the day of Election,

I am, Gentlemen,
yours, &c.
J. CAMERON.

Upper Canada } PETER HUNTER
to wit. } Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada aforesaid, and Judge of the Court of Probate of the said Province under and by virtue of an Act passed by the Legislature of the said Province in the thirty-third year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord George the Third, the now King, intituled an Act to establish a Court of Probate in this Province, and also a Surrogate Court in every District thereof:

To the next of kin of Jesse Laurence late of New York, in the United States of America, Merchant, deceased.

Whereas the said Jesse Laurence on or about the Twenty seventh day of November last departed this life, as it is alledged, intestate; possessed of personal estate of the value of Five Pounds and upwards, which personal estate was in two or more several Districts within this Province at the time of the said Intestate's death.

And whereas under and by virtue of the before mentioned Statute, it of right belongs to the Court of Probate to grant Letters of Administration of such Intestate's goods and chattels, rights and credits; these are therefore to will and require you, the said next of kin, on or before the Sixth day of March next, to appear in the said Court and shew cause, if any you have, why Letters of Administration of all the goods and chattels, rights and credits of the said Jesse Laurence, should not be granted to Chauncey Skinner of Whitby, in the Home District of the said Province, Indian Trader: Hereof fail not. Given under the Seal of the said Court of Probate, this Twentieth day of December, in the forty-fifth year of His said Majesty's reign.

DAVID BURNS, Off. P.

J. WILLCOCKS, Regr. C. P.

PUBLIC Notice is hereby given, that Letters of Administration of the Goods and Chattels, Rights and Credits of the late ANGUS M'DONELL of York, Esquire, deceased, have been duly granted and committed to the Subscriber: He therefore requests all those indebted to the said Estate forthwith to make payment; and those to whom the said Estate may be indebted to produce their respective Accounts.

ALEXANDER M'DONELL,

York, December 6, 1804.

District of London } In the SURRO-
Province of Upper } GATE COURT.
Canada. }

WHEREAS a certain person of the name of JOHN HAY, a native of Scotland, and a Pedlar by avocation, departed this life on the fifteenth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and four, at Charlotteville in the District aforesaid. Not having left any Will or testament, and having died possessed of some personal property, NOTICE is therefore hereby given to those of Kin to the said John Hay, that application has been made, by Petition, to me as Surrogate for the District of London aforesaid, by Robert Henderson and James Rutsell, Freeholders in said District, Friends to the deceased, for leave to Administer the right and credits, goods and chattels of said Robert Hay. Administration will therefore be granted to said Petitioners, unless some of kin should appear at this office, either in person or by Attorney, previous to the term as limited by the Statute.

Done at Charlotteville, this first day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and four.

SAMUEL RYERSE,
Surrogate for the District of London.
